Public Notice Regarding Coal.

I am instructed by the Tonnage Committee of the Executive Council to place before the General Public the soft coal situation at the present time and to ask all who are able to do so to co-operate with them in securing sufficient stocks. Coaling steamers are now available, but will not be available later on. Therefore, it is necessary to stock within the period that they are available sufficient coal to carry St. John's over the Winter till the opening of navigation next year.

The Coal Merchants have not sufficient storage capacity to enable this to be done, and the Tonnage Committee appeal to the public to assist in the matter by laying in their Winter supplies as soon as possible. Otherwise there will be a shortage of stocks next Winter. By order of the Tonnage Committee,

July 23 T. A. HALL, Secretary.

A Child of Sorrow.

CHAPTER XXIX.

"That fellow Jake has been seen about the station," said Heroncourt. "Have you seen anything of him?"

"No," said the little man. "He'd take care I didn't do that, sir."

"So I suppose. You don't seem to care much about the society of the other hands, Jones?"

"Well, no, sir; I am fond of a quiet pipe, sir, Jones."

"But they've been quiet enough lately," said Heroncourt, meaningly.

David Jones looked at him as if he understood.

"Yes; I don't know what it means, sir," he said. "They're like school boys, always quietest when they're up to mischief."

"What mischief do you suspect?" asked Heroncourt.

David Jones considered for a moment or two.

"You can never tell, sir, especially when a man like Black Jake's got a hand in it. If they're plotting anything, it's an attack on the house."

He spoke quite calmly, but there was an alert and fearless look in his eyes.

"It would be easy enough, if they agreed among themselves. There would be only four of us at most, sir, you and Gosford and Baxter and myself; though, one or two of the other men might join us—but they'd try it in a body or not at all."

"I hope you're mistaken, Jones," said Heroncourt. "Which is the nearest station?"

"Broseley; a matter of forty or fifty miles. I see what you are thinking, sir; but it wouldn't be any use; we couldn't get help from there; besides if they mean mischief, they wouldn't let us send there; one or two of 'em would be on the messenger's trail, and drop him in his tracks."

"A nice state of things," said Heroncourt. "I thought this sort of thing didn't happen now in Australia."

"And no more it does, sir," said Jones; "but there's black sheep here just as there are black sheep over in England; and where a lot of 'em get together, there's always the chance of trouble. Oh, no, Australia's as well behaved and orderly as any place on the globe; but, as I say—"

He broke off abruptly, for the door of the shed had opened suddenly, and a man had looked out.

"I'll see to them horses in the morning, sir, and let you know after breakfast," said Jones, distinctly, for the benefit of the eavesdropper. "Good-night, sir," he added; and he sauntered away in a leisurely fashion.

Heroncourt went into the house, whistling cheerfully.

"Aren't you going to bed, sir?" said Lucy, with the protective and maternal air which sat so quaintly on her.

"Not for a little while, Lucy," he replied. "I'm going to do some accounts. You might send Baxter to me."

When Baxter came in, Heroncourt kept him in the room, on one pretext and another, until a genuine quiet reigned in the shed, and a snoring sleeper after indicated that the men were asleep; then, in a whisper, Heroncourt told Baxter to get down the guns from the rack and to fetch his and Baxter's revolvers. Baxter, soldier-like, obeyed, and did not seem to think it necessary to ask any questions; and Heroncourt and he examined the weapons with care and attention.

"How much ammunition?" Heroncourt asked, in a whisper.

Baxter told him, and Heroncourt made a mental calculation. There might be sufficient to enable the three men to hold the place for a time; certainly there was enough to enable them to make a fight of it, and to prettily severely punish anyone who might attack them. Noiselessly they replaced the weapons in their rack, and Heroncourt went whistling up to his room; but before he left the room, Baxter had saluted and made a significant gesture towards the guns and the big sheep-skin before the empty fire-place. The gesture meant that he proposed to spend the night on the sheep-skin and keep watch, and Heroncourt assented by a nod of comprehension and approval.

He lay awake most of the night, listening; but the men did not stir, and he fell asleep about dawn. Baxter came up with his shaving-water as usual, and Heroncourt spoke to him as usual, but rather more loudly; but presently he asked a question with his eyebrows.

"I shall be obliged if you will take a little note from me to Mr. Broseley," he said. "You needn't say anything about it to any of the hands here."

"Trouble?" he inquired, in a low voice.

"All quiet, sir," said Baxter; "at least, that is to say, the men were quiet; but I heard someone moving outside—moving quietly. I got my boots off, and I stole out. It was the little man, David Jones, sir. But he is all right, sir. I know an honest man when I see him, and I'd answer for him. He made a motion to me that he was on the lookout, and I slipped in again. But I'm afraid there's some mischief brewing, sir, for I saw one of them sauntering off to the West point as if for a stroll; but I'm about-sure that he's gone to keep a lookout on the road."

"Reinforcements," suggested Heroncourt. "But, no; there are quite enough of them here to settle our little business, and they wouldn't want to increase the share list. I wonder what he was looking for?"

Later in the day he jumped to the right conclusion: he was looking for the men who were coming to pay for the lot of cattle sold by Gosford. They arrived about midday, two sturdy dealers who had made a fortune at their trade. Heroncourt had them into the parlor, and, after lunch, brought out a box in which a few cigars still remained, and made them comfortable.

"What is the last place you visited?" he asked.

"Milda Wolda," said the elder; they were father and son—"old Broseley's place."

"Many hands there?" asked Heroncourt, in a casual way.

"Not many at the house just now, was the reply; "they are most of them out at the farther runs."

"Mr. Broseley there?"

"Not the old man. Mr. Robert was there and his mother; and they'd got two lady visitors, two young ladies from England, regular swells and beauties. I did hear their names but I've forgotten it; two sisters. I've got a bad head for names and yet I could remember any number of figures."

"Are you going back that way?" asked Heroncourt.

"Well, no; not directly. We're going on to a station beyond here; and we might look in at Milda Wolda on our way back. Why do you ask, Mr. Tudor?"

Heroncourt considered for a moment or two. After all, it was better that they should not be going straight back to Milda Wolda, for the gang would suspect that he was sending a message for help or one of warning and would probably stop the two dealers.

"I shall be obliged if you will take a little note from me to Mr. Broseley," he said. "You needn't say anything about it to any of the hands here."

"Trouble?" he inquired, in a low voice.

9th July! Just received a cargo Best Screened North Sydney COAL. Also, Anthracite Coal, Nut size. M. MOREY & CO. Office: Queen Street.

"There may be," replied Heroncourt. "The two men looked at each other, and the younger, with a nod, said: 'If we can be of any use, Mr. Tudor, we will stay.'"

Heroncourt hesitated; but he felt that he had no right to risk the money and the lives of these two men upon whom he had no claim.

"Thanks very much," he said; "but I fancy we can hold our own; but I shall be glad if you will leave my letter at Milda Wolda as you go down; it's better that you should not go straight there."

He went into the shed to see if any one was lurking there and listening, then he came back and wrote this short note:

"Dear Mr. Broseley—I am anticipating trouble with my hands here; and it is just possible that if we bulk them, or if we don't, they may come on to your place; for I am told that once this kind of trouble is started it spreads. Hoping that my fears are groundless,

"I am yours truly, OWEN TUDOR."

CHAPTER XXX. The two men again made offer of their services and quite pressing; but Heroncourt had made up his mind that they should not take the risk, and they started soon afterwards. He sent Gosford a little way with them on the pretence of showing them some cattle, and no attempt was made to intercept them. When they had gone, Heroncourt took the money they had paid him—it was in notes—up to his room and locked it up in the small strong box in which he kept his money and valuables; then, with the box in his hand, he looked round the room in search of a fresh hiding-place.

While he was doing so he was startled by the sound of a gun. He put the box in its old place and ran out of the house and saw David Jones with a smoking gun in his hand. Heroncourt fully expected that the attack had commenced and that he should see a dead man lying within range; but the only dead thing visible was an evil-looking cur. Both women and several of the hands had run out of the house at the sound of the gun, and Heroncourt, genuinely annoyed by the alarm the man had caused, demanded angrily:

"What the devil are you about, Jones?"

The little man touched his hat respectfully.

"Strange dog, sir. Been worrying the sheep for the last two or three days; just spotted him making for the larder, and thought I'd settle him."

"Confound it! couldn't you do it without scaring the women?" said Heroncourt. "Get back to your work."

David Jones touched his hat again. "Hadn't I better bury it, sir?" he said.

"Oh, bury it if you like," said Heroncourt.

"Yes, do your duty by the corpse, David," said one of the men as they moved off, laughing.

David Jones slowly picked up the dog, and as slowly and phlegmatically trudged off with it to the back of the house; but as he did so, he shot a glance, a meaning glance, at Heroncourt, while he said, with his well-feigned fullness:

"Don't seem as if I could do anything right. Seems to me you like to have the sheep worried on this station."

SPLENDID VALOR OF TROOPS.
British Front in France, July 31.—An offensive launched by the British and French against the German lines between the River Lys and Boesinghe at daybreak, has, with few exceptions, accomplished all that had been planned for the first day of the battle, which, in its early stages, gives promise of being the greatest conflict of the war. Roughly speaking, the British penetrated the positions held by Crown Prince Rupprecht of Bavaria between Boesinghe and Warneton, and at the time of filing this despatch were in possession of the first three lines of German trenches at most points throughout this front. Reports received from the French troops which are attacking on a difficult territory between Dixmude and a point near Boesinghe, say they have forced their way across this marsh-studded and partly inundated region and captured the first two lines of German trenches. The casualties of the Entente have been surprisingly light, and the morale of the men continues at the highest pitch. Contact between the British and the French armies has been constant and excellent. Late to-day it was said the Germans began a heavy counter attack at a point where the Allied forces join. The German front line trenches which had been torn to pieces by the preliminary bombardment, offered little resistance, but once the Allies had penetrated beyond them, they met fierce resistance at many points in the direction of Zillebeke. Again a little to the north the British were temporarily held up by a heavy machine gun fire, but only tempo-raly, for the troops charged through a rain of lead and forced the Germans from their positions in hand to hand fighting. Again, at a point which was strongly held in the German line and defended by concrete fortifications, the British were brought to a stand by machine gun fire, but they charged with bayonets and dislodged the Germans. One of the most striking spectacular events of the day's fighting occurred at the so-called Menin tunnel, a great underground fortification, constructed by the Germans on the Menin road, opposite Hooge. The British preliminary bombardment had forced the Germans to hold their front line thinly here, and the British Division which was at attack at dawn lay out all night in shell holes within 25 yards of the Germans, waiting for the signal to advance. When the time arrived for the charge and the British gunners had dropped their fire on the Germans, it was seen the Germans had taken to their heels and were fleeing. The British seeing their prey escape went mad, and charged directly through their own barrage, fortunately without heavy casualties. The tunnel, which was expected to be occupied by several hundred Germans, was found to be held by only 41, the rest having retreated. It was only at the second line that the British met resistance.

Here, after a short hand to hand fight, they forced the Germans to withdraw. No check has yet been made on the number of German prisoners captured, but they are flowing in a steady stream back of the British lines. Many of these captured at the Menin tunnel, and at other points played a prominent part in the opening of the battle, and reports from all sections of the British front say their work was most satisfactory. A large number of these monsters was employed and in many cases pursued their destructive and uncheckable way to a distance far within the German lines. Further information obtained from prisoners concerning the effects of the British preliminary bombardment indicate that the effects of this unparalleled expenditure of ammunition were disastrous in the extreme, both in damage and to the morale of the German troops. Within the past few days six Bavarian divisions were withdrawn and replaced by fresh troops because they were so thoroughly demoralized by the inferno of fire which they had undergone. Photographs taken by aviators back of the German lines show that there was scarcely a square yard of territory along their front which was not devastated by high explosives. It is small wonder, then, that the Germans were holding their front line thinly, and were swept back when finally the time arrived for the Allied infantry to do its work.

GERMANS HAD SECRET INFORMATION.

PETROGRAD, July 31.
The official issued to-day says: According to reports of the secret service agent of the present German offensive was undertaken as a result of detailed testimony concerning the internal conditions of the Russian army which had been placed in the hands of German Chief of Staff, Field Marshal Von Hindenburg. It appears had promised Emperor William that in two months he would put Russia out of action.

EMPEROR WILLIAM ON EASTERN FRONT.

COPENHAGEN, July 31.
A despatch from Berlin says Emperor William left Mitau, twenty-five miles southwest of Riga, Russia, and went down the river to Riga, from where he complimented the troops.

GERMANY ASSUMES EXPENSES.

ZURICH, July 31.
Germany has notified Turkey and Bulgaria that she will assume all expenses incurred by these countries in the campaign of 1917-18.

WHAT PEACE OVERTURES!

COPENHAGEN, July 31.
The semi-official Tremenblatt says it is able to announce that Germany gladly will act upon peace overtures coming by way of Vienna. The Cologne Gazette, a copy of which was received here, reproduces the Tremenblatt's statement.

APPEAL FROM THE OLD GUARD.

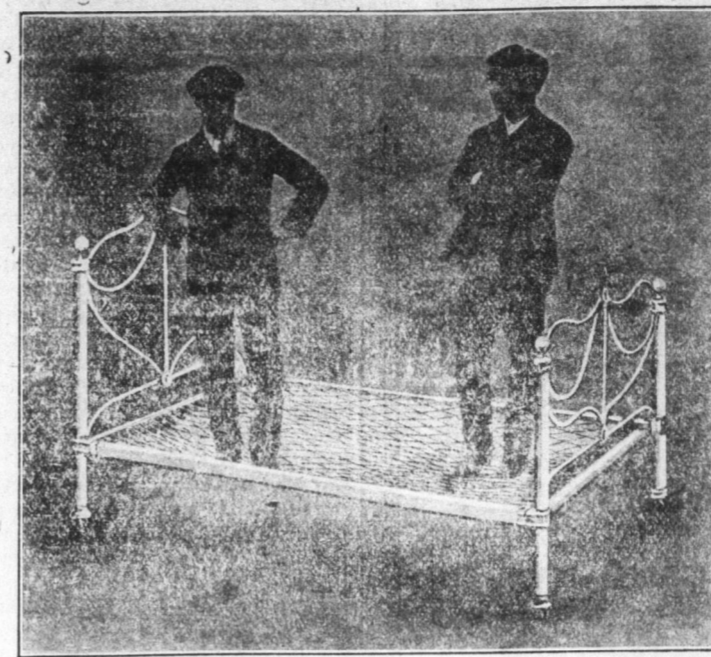

PETROGRAD, July 31.
The old guard of revolutionaries, including George Plekhanoff, Nicholas Tachakovsky, Catherine Breshkovskaya and Vera Assuze, have issued a ringing appeal to all citizens to rally round the provisional Government and save the revolution and country from mortal danger.

Newfoundlanders "Skinned Out" at Montreal.

Evidently conscription, as it applies to Newfoundlanders anyway, is in operation in Canada. About seventy young men principally belonging to St. John's, who left here some months ago for Montreal to work in a munition factory were recently "skinned out." They were confronted with the alternative that they had to enlist or be thrown out of employment. Most of the men, who were married and with families here, chose the alternative of quitting work and returned home by rail and steamer within the past couple of days; a few donned the khaki and several were retained in the factory because they wore badges, showing that they had offered themselves to fight, but had been rejected. It will be remembered that last winter a Canadian representative visited this city and engaged these men, holding out big inducements to them in the way of wages and in addition they were guaranteed constant employment, we understand, in this munition factory. What makes the men who returned home feel keenly about the way they were turned down in the land of the Maple Leaf is that the authorities there seemingly forget—whether purposely or not—to look closer at home for conscript recruits.

TO-NIGHT'S GAME.

To-night's clash between the Red Lions and Wanderers will witness the opening game of the second and last round. Now that the Lions seem to have hit their stride, great things are expected of them, though unfortunately to-night will probably witness the last appearance of Ellis, the Wanderers will have Brown in the box for them, so that an exciting contest is assured. Major Montgomerie and Mr. F. V. Chesman will be umpires. The lineups will likely be:

TUESDAY NIGHT'S GAME.

Those fans who had the misfortune to be absent from Tuesday night's Cubs-Red Lions game lost an interesting exhibition when the Hiltz crew nosed out of it by 9 runs to 7. The clash was one of the quickest on record occupying only 50 minutes. The surprising feature of the game was that the Cubs made their 7 runs in the first inning and failed to score afterwards. At the outset the game looked to be a cinch therefore, and their supporters were quite jubilant. However, the Lions were by no means down-hearted and kept piling up the runs, though Hiltz held them hitless in the first and last innings. The Lions pulled a triple play in the third when with Clouston on third base, Canning on second, and Hall on first, Simms swung up to Hiltz, who fielded to Hiltz, who fielded to Clouston. Hiltz then threw to first heading off Simms, and before he got Hall before he could reach first. Only one other triple play was seen since the inception of the League, the Shamrocks' making it against the B.I.S. in 1912. The duty heavy hitting for the evening was Duggan and Canning's two boppers. A feature of the game was Clouston's magnificent fielding in left field for the Cubs. Mullings' base-stealing in the fourth and Duggan's in the seventh evoked considerable applause. The Clouston's clan had the bases filled in the seventh but their batlers failed in the pinch. The game was plentifully interspersed with errors, and some of those made by the Cubs cost them the game.

KEEPS BABY'S SKIN HEALTHY

WHAT is so beautiful as the soft, rosy, delicate skin of the baby and yet baby's skin is so tender and so easily chafed and irritated that it must have care and consideration. It is a fine habit for mothers to have Dr. Chase's Ointment at hand for use after the bath. By its soothing, healing influence it soon allays the inflammation, brings relief and comfort and prevents the development of eczema, for eczema is the natural result of neglected skin irritation.

Mrs. W. L. Barnes, Timmins, Ont., writes: "I want to tell you about the case of my little boy who had baby eczema when he was three months old. It started on the top of his head, on his forehead and around his ears. The doctors failed to do him any good, so I tried Dr. Chase's Ointment on the recommendation of a friend, and in a month's time the child was entirely free of this disagreeable skin disease. New War Minister.

VISITS REGIMENT.

Hon. J. R. Bennett, Minister of Militia, visited Headquarters yesterday morning and inspected the volunteers. He was received and introduced to the men by Major Montgomerie. The new Minister in a few appropriate words explained his position as regards the Regiment and that from now on he would be in closer touch than ever with its members. He congratulated them on the rapid manner in which they had learned their drill and their splendid appearance. In conclusion he felt sure that as representatives of Britain's Oldest Colony they would uphold the reputation established by the Newfoundland Regiment.

Profits Tax Bill

DEFERRED FOR MODIFICATION.

Tuesday afternoon's session of the House of Assembly was brief and a small amount of business was done. The Judicature, Court Jurisdiction and Cold Storage Bills received their various readings and were sent to the Upper House for concurrence.

The Revenue Bill, in which is embodied the Business Profits Tax Bill, was deferred, the alleged reason for the postponement being to modify some of the unfair clauses contained in the taxation measure before it comes up for discussion.

The Prime Minister was granted leave to introduce a Bill extending the period of the Newfoundland Products' Contract until the war is over.

The House then adjourned until this afternoon when the Business Profits Tax will be aired. This is practically the only matter to occupy the attention of the Lower House and it is understood that the Legislature will be prorogued on Saturday next.

Portia Sails.

The S. S. Portia did not get away for Western ports until 5 o'clock last evening, owing to the large amount of freight offering. The following first class passengers went by her:—

F. Dickenson, Master Hibbs, H. Peach, A. French, J. Winter, J. Flynn, M. Shea, E. Shea, W. Martin, M. Martin, A. Hamlin, J. P. Croft, F. Pike, M. O'Rourke, Masters Harvey (2), R. Parsons, Capt. Hillier, K. Hays, Misses Hibbs, Pratt, Flynn, Bailey, Glynn, Moloy, Primm, Smith, Russell, Woods, Donnell; Mesdames Collins, Somerton, Walsh, Thistle in saloon and 20 in steerage.

The I. W. A. and the Profits' Tax.

St. John's, Nfld., July 31, '17. Editor Evening Telegram.

Dear Sir.—With reference to the twenty-five per cent. tax on profits I am directed to make clear the position of the Newfoundland Industrial Workers' Association. The Association expected that a tax would be levied on excess War Profits, such as was done in Canada, that is, a tax on the difference of the profits made before and since the war began.

As to the present Bill before the Legislature, the main objection of the Association is that the twenty-five per cent. tax will eventually come out of the pockets of the consumer. If this could be guarded against, the Association would have little or no objection to the tax.

The editorial reference in Saturday's issue of your paper does not state the position of the Association exactly.

Yours truly,
MAURICE H. HITCHEN, Secretary.

An Appeal.

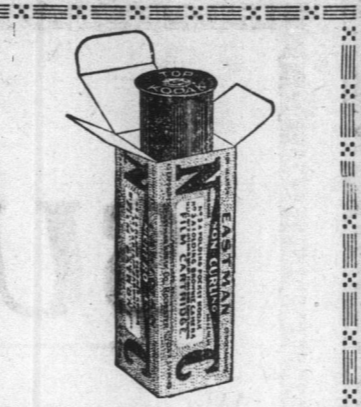

TO HIS HONOR THE MAYOR.

Editor Evening Telegram.

Dear Sir.—I would like to draw the attention of His Honor the Mayor and Councillors to the condition of the sidewalks of New Gower Street, in the hope that an effort be made immediately to improve their condition. This section of the city has a large number of pedestrians daily, in fact it is the most frequented thoroughfare, yet it receives no attention whatever from the Council. Large stones are everywhere projecting two or three inches over the surface, which make it very inconvenient to walk over. If these stones were dug up and the sidewalks graded with crushed stone the public would indeed be thankful. I would invite the Mayor to come up this way for an evening's walk, and feel confident that he will lose no time in conferring a favor on us by having the necessary improvements made. The drains need a thorough flushing for at the present time they are in a desperate condition.

Thanking you in advance for publishing this note, Mr. Editor, and trusting that our energetic Mayor will do his best for us.

I am yours sincerely,
NEW GOWER STREET.

The sympathy of the whole country will go out to the bereaved parents in the loss of their brave sons.

Guarding the Barrier Against Submarines.

British Constantly Patrol Channel's Eastern Entrance, Barred by Sunk Obstructions.

A British Post on the Southeast Coast, June 30 (Correspondence of The Associated Press).—Across the eastern entrance to the English Channel there still stretches the Great Barrier, which is one of the principal defenses of the Allies' vital Channel traffic against the visits of the German submarine.

The "Barrage," they call the barrier in naval phrase, it consists, in general terms, of a series of "obstructions" stretched from huge steel buoys, from shore to shore, twenty-odd miles. Any craft which strikes one of these obstructions straightway explodes a group of mines which spell "Finis" to the intruder.

A whole fleet of naval shipping is constantly engaged in maintaining and patrolling the Great Barrier. Its existence is no secret to the Germans for they are constantly sending over airplanes to chart the buoys and mark any changes that may have been made since their last visit. And changes are constantly being made.

Here and there along the line are secret openings through which naval pilots may guide craft on legitimate errands, but these openings are frequently altered, and not even the German aviators can tell which buoy marks safe passage and which marks destruction. If mine-laying U-boats wish to enter the Channel they must take their chances. They must cross submerged, for the patrol boats are on constant duty, and if they escape the traps while submerged it can only be said that another miracle has happened.

Such miracles seldom happen. Sometimes twice a week, sometimes oftener, explosions are heard at night from the Great Barrier, indicating that "something" has touched off a group of mines. Immediately the patrols hurry off in the direction of the explosion. What they find there is a well kept secret.

Last week the Germans tried a new plan to break the barrier. They sent over three seaplanes with orders to descend low over the Great Barrier, at any risk, and shoot their machine guns into the buoys, thus sinking them and the barrier with them. But the patrol boats were on hand, and two of the three seaplanes never returned to their German home.

The Offensive in Flanders.

The fourth year of the war is ushered in by events which may herald its not far distant end. The statement could be made with complete confidence of the deplorable catastrophe to the Russian western armies had not set the victory clock back again. Even that disaster, great as it is and though treachery and cowardice still threaten the ruin of the new Russia, will not greatly avail Germany at the present hour. She is menaced in the weakest part of her far flung defenses by the enormous weight of British and French, and tempting as the prospect is of cutting the Russian line in half, it is doubtful if she can now spare the men necessary to do so effectively from the support of her vital right flank in Flanders.

The attack does not come as a surprise. It is the continuation of the great victories of Vimy and Messines which opened the way for it. Both Allied and enemy reports have compared us for it, and it is generally recognised now that if Hindenburg is to be driven out of France and Belgium his hold on the Belgian coast must first be loosed. Unless he can retaliate at once and successfully that has already been a great feat in extent. The offensive, though expected, contains one surprise, the presence of the French in great force on the British left. What this means, or why the troops were so shifted, it is not easy to conjecture. Whatever the reason, the French have done almost as brilliant work as the British, more than reaching their objectives and safeguarding the important advance further south. At the extreme southern end of the attack the British are pressing forward from Warneton towards Comines, threatening to cut off the large German army in the angle formed by the Lys River and the Comines Canal. The offensive extends from this point all the way north to Dixmude. There would seem to be no part of the line of outstanding strategic importance comparable to that of the whole line itself. The battle is probably the beginning of a stupendous effort to force back the end of the German defences, their right flank. It is but the beginning, though a most promising one, and we shall no doubt see repeated in Flanders and on a more prodigious scale the struggle of the Somme and Ancre of last year. Even if it lasts as long and proves as bitter as did that campaign, we shall be fortunate if it achieves the same result. For while the German retreat on the Somme, valuable as it was, did little more than reform the line, a similar retirement in Flanders would be a hundred times more important. It would probably be decisive. It would cripple the submarine activities and quite possibly permit a huge rolling up of the whole German line. Such a retirement, at any rate, is the aim the Allies have before them, and there is nothing in the situation to forbid its attainment sooner or later.

The Profits Tax.

It is encouraging to note that the protests against this proposed legislation (coming, be it noted, entirely from outside the House—not a voice has been raised against it in that house of independence and intellect) have been effective at least to hold it in abeyance. While its provisions are being reconsidered we will take occasion to notice a few points which the dispute arising out of it has developed.

We observe that the Herald and Advocate, utterly unable to defend the Bill on its merits and economic principles, endeavour to draw a very scurrilous herring across the trail by representing the whole matter as a question between—of all things!—the rich man and the poor man. The measure, it appears, is a form of the "conscription of wealth" (evidently Newfoundland has its parrots like other places), and hence the objections. And from the Herald it seems that the poor man has freely given his sons while the rich man refuses to give his wealth. As a matter of fact, which the Herald knows perfectly well, there has been absolutely no distinction between rich and poor in respect of men; or if there has been any at all it has been in favour of the rich man. St. John's, the wealthiest part of the island, easily leads the lists of volunteers. As regards money, who have given four fifths of it, one might say nine tenths? The people of St. John's, directly and indirectly, and among them we have only to examine the subscription lists to see what class it is that constitutes the large bulk of generous and ever responsive donors. But of course the whole comparison is invidious and contemptible. It is only made by persons who wish to stir up foolish and bitter discords. It is the result of the stupid and, it must be confessed, all too prevalent habit of opposing and setting in antagonism classes whose interests are not counter but identical. The wealthy man, the "big interests" as the Advocate likes to call them, by their fish from the fishermen and labour on the labourers; the fishermen and labourers depend upon the wealthy men for payment for fish and in wages. If the wealthy man's wealth is taken ruthlessly from him, there is so much less money to pay for fish and to furnish wages. Both are interdependent; what hurts one hurts the other.

But if it is foolish to make the comparison at any time, it is the height of absurdity for the pretended champion of the poor man to use this Act as a handle against the wealthy. The Bill hurts everyone, but it hurts the rich man very little while it deals almost a death blow at the poor man. It does not "conscrip" wealth; it conscripts moderate, well earned incomes, every cent of which is needed. The most cursory examination reveals this. In the first place, the great class making less than $2,000 are, it is true, not directly affected, as the I. W. A. were quick to perceive, they will be hit tremendously hard by the inevitable rise in the cost of things, a rise they cannot possibly afford. Of those who are directly taxed, the smaller man suffers far more in proportion than the bigger. We will put this straight question to the Herald and Advocate: which man will feel the more the loss of one quarter of his income, the man making $2,500, leaving him $1,875, or the man making $10,000, leaving him $7,500? There is not the slightest doubt that it is the former, and that is the simple reason why income and similar taxes are invariably graded (in intemper countries) the tax increasing rapidly as the scale is mounted. In this iniquitous Act the straight 25 per cent. is imposed directly and maintained throughout. In this connection the Star raises a point which is most important. It considers us in error when we state that the tax takes effect on the full net profit, beginning at $2,000, so that the person who makes $2,400 pays more of than he who makes $2,000; its own opinion is that it is only the surplus above that amount that is taxed (in this case $400). We think the Star is quite wrong. The section says, "There shall be paid . . . a tax of 25 per centum of the net profits earned . . . provided that no tax shall be payable on any business the net profits of which during the accounting period do not exceed the sum of two thousand dollars." There is no ambiguity about that: it is quite clear. The $2,000 is simply the starting point. If it was first to be deducted from the profits and the surplus only taxed, the Act would have said so. The result is that an income of $2,000 pays nothing, one of $2,100 pays $525. Can anything be imagined more unjust?

The truth is, the Act has not been studied widely or closely enough. Anyone who will examine it carefully will see the truth of what we have contended and how disproportionate the poor man is taxed by it. Of the thousands of dollars that it would produce a very large portion (we should say some eighty per cent.) would be paid directly or indirectly by what are usually known as the poorer classes. That should be sufficient to arouse the hypothetical expressions of the Herald and Advocate in their behalf.

Anniversary of the Declaration of the Great War.

In common with the Home Government and the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland the Government of this Colony has decided that through the length and breadth of this Island the Anniversary of the Declaration of the Great War shall be commemorated on Saturday, August 4th, at 3.30 p.m. The Magistrate and Justices of the Peace in Newfoundland have been asked to confer with the leading citizens in each settlement, so that simultaneous meetings may be held, as was done last year.

In St. John's the meeting will be held in front of the Colonial Building, on Saturday afternoon at 3.30 o'clock, when addresses will be delivered and a resolution proposed, declaring the indefeasible determination of the people of this Colony to continue to a victorious end the struggle in maintenance of those ideals of liberty and justice, which are the common and sacred cause of the Allies. The presence of the members of the Legislature, the Military, the Police, the Navy, the Clergy and citizens will make this gathering one worthy of remembrance. It is hoped that the "various" business establishments will "close" on this meeting, as was done last year.

Further particulars will be given later.

Trolley Placed on Track

BY BOYS SMASHED TO PIECES.

A serious train tragedy was narrowly averted yesterday afternoon when an incoming train in charge of Conductor Lee, dashed in a terrific trolley near Irvine Station and smashed it to pieces, and only by an apparent miracle did the engine hold the rails. The trolley was left on the rails by two boys who went out by the 8.45 a.m. train and after spending part of the day at Topsail started to walk back to the city. They came across a section-man's trolley lying near the track a short distance this side of Topsail station. They decided to put the machine in action and mounting it on the track they were soon clipping off at fair rate of speed when the whistle of an approaching train was heard in the distance. Realizing the danger of an attack from the rear, they jumped from the car and attempted to get it off the track, but the train came up too quickly and striking the trolley full force divided it in about a hundred pieces. The engineer stopped the train and after examining his engine proceeded citywards. The trolley was taken in charge by the Conductor and handed over to the officers of the law on reaching the city.

This morning they appeared before Mr. Morris, K.C., but were let go on suspended sentence. Mr. Higgins, counsel for the Reid Nhd. Co., stated that his clients were not desirous of having the boys punished and would be satisfied if the section men's car was replaced. The damage done amounted to $700 which was made good by the boys' parents.

"Spot on the Kitten" This Time.

A woman of Colonial Street, who a few years ago created a big sensation in the city and who is known to possess more than ordinary eloquence, had a next door neighbour before court to-day charged with using insulting language towards her. The trouble, it appears, all came about in this way. The defendant had a black kitten which he prized very much and as he missed it for a couple of days, called at the residence of the plaintiff Saturday night last to see if it was there, feeling sure that it was. A flow of choice language was exchanged and the bout ended in Mrs. Eloquence putting Mr. Enquirer hors de combat by the use of a slop bucket. The plaintiff, asked by the lawyer for the defendant as to whether or not it was a "spot on the crackle" that brought the visitor to her house, emphatically replied in the negative and distinctly pointed out that it was a black kitten with a white spot on it. She then went on to detail with all politeness and eloquence the abusive epithets that were used on Saturday night towards her. An independent witness stated that the plaintiff used more bad language than the defendant. Mr. Hutchings, who presided, thought honours were about equally divided and dismissed the case.

Terrible Story of Mad Rout.

LONDON, July 26.—Russia's routed army in Galicia may have lost to the Germans all the wealth of artillery and military supplies which the Allies concentrated for General Brusiloff's great offensive.

Even if Premier Kerensky and his Ministry, armed with unlimited powers, succeeds in stemming the rout, supplies of incalculable value have been lost.

Despatches to-day serve to increase the realization here of the gigantic task undertaken by the new democracy—that of reforming apparently panic-stricken, spy-infested troops with a new spirit that would imbue them to make a stand against the ever-increasing encroachment of the Teutonic armies.

They tell of the wild confusion with which the Russian Eleventh army turned tail and ran, some of its soldiers shooting down their own comrades of the artillery that they might flee on the horses attached to the gun limbers. Big guns were abandoned. Supplies were left where they lay. Stores of ammunition were disregarded.

Through all the story London detects the work of the German secret agents. "Planted" in Russian regiments, the Germans apparently waited until the offensive had attained its height, with a great concentration of forces and supplies, and then acted concertedly, so that the greatest possible booty might fall into the hands of the Germans.

Great fear is felt here to-day for supplies of the Seventh and Eighth Russian armies, also on the Galician front. The panic of fear fostered by German agents apparently had not totally unseated the reason of these troops, but the rate of the German advance has been so rapid that it is doubtful if the two armies can save all their equipment.

One encouraging feature is the loyalty of Russian and Rumanian troops in the Southern Carpathians where they have vigorously attacked the Teutonic forces. The fighting on the far Northern front, around Vinna however, has practically ceased. Petrograd despatches admit the instability of the troops there.

Confidence that Russia's armies will find themselves soon was expressed to-day by M. Goldberg, one of the group of Russian Socialist workmen here to invite British Socialists to a Stockholm conference.

"There has been some mutiny, and there are some unstable elements in the army as well as in the civilian population," he said to the United Press. "However, we have millions of soldiers, and I believe the great majority of these are to be depended upon to defend what the revolution has won."

Your Boys and Girls.

I once saw a young mother take up her baby and run frantically when she heard a child cough with whooping cough. An elderly woman who was sitting near her called out: "Don't run; your baby has got to get it some time and this is as good a time as any."

This seems to be a rather common belief among some mothers, but it is the most absurd one I have ever heard. The idea that the measles common to children such as measles, mumps, whooping cough, etc., are necessary is all wrong. The wise mother guards her child from them all.

Every time your child contracts any kind of a disease the power of resistance is lessened for the next germ that comes his way. Guard against them all, for you are very lucky and fortunate if you escape. I have known of the most serious results from the so-called "necessary" children's diseases.

Whooping cough has turned into pneumonia without much warning and with disastrous results. Measles' most always come first with a cold. A cold usually accompanies this, with watery eyes, and nose. The eruption comes a little later, usually in four days, and consists of small red spots appearing first on the neck, chest and face and slowly spreading over the entire body.

London Daily News: On a section of the line where the British and German trenches were very close there had been skirmishing, and one of our men lay sorely wounded in No-man's Land. His groans made several comrades plead permission to go and bring him in, but the officers in command refused, since it meant certain death to the would-be rescuers. Whilst racking his brain, however, for a means of helping the fallen man, his eye lighted on a stray dog that was accustomed to wander to and fro between our trenches and the enemy's, finding friends apparently, in both. Scribbling a note, "Will you let us fetch our man?" he tied it round the dog's neck and sent him scampering across to the Germans. In a brief while he returned with the reply, "Will allow you five minutes." And the rescue was accomplished.

RUTH CAMERON

The other day, on the trolley, I found myself admiring a man who sat two seats down. He had an aquiline nose, excellent teeth, bright dark eyes, heavy brows and iron grey hair. It is a type I always admire. I felt sorry I couldn't know him. And I wondered how he happened to have married (as he evidently had) the fat commonplace looking woman beside him. And then suddenly I had a revulsion of feeling. Why did I want to meet Iron Grey Hair and a Straight Nose!

"Maybe he's just as commonplace as she is," I reminded myself. "Why on the face of the earth should we base our desire to know people or our interest in them on the fact that their hair or eyes are a certain color, or their noses a certain shape, or their teeth even?"

When you can for a few minutes shake off this delusion of the importance of personal appearance, you are simply astounded at the power anything so unimportant has over almost everyone.

When one thinks how large a part such factors play in the choice of a life partner it fairly appals one.

A Good Figure May Mean Good Health.

Even the power of the form to attract seems more logical and sensible for a good figure may at least mean good health.

But the shape of the features, the color of the eye and of the hair, how can one place such weight on them?

THE DIRECT PRIMARY. The direct primary is a recent invention which makes one man's vote as good as another. It has also raised the price of votes in some states to a point where it costs more to run for Congress than it did to run a ball team in the Federal League.

Before the direct primary came into being, politics in this country was conducted by the caucus or town meeting, by which four men in each township decided who should be elected. This was an ideal arrangement, and a deadly blow at the perpetuity of our institutions was struck when it was laid low. Some of the greatest men we have ever had were elected to office with the aid of the township caucus, and yet it was ruthlessly sidetracked in favor of the direct primary. All those who have noticed that the mental calibre of American officeholders has been raised over 2 per cent. by the direct primary will please hold up their right hands.

These leaders get together before the primary and pick out the candidates. The primary was brought out by a reform politician who had never been able to secure a look-in at a caucus, as he was too well known by the neighbors. Primary elections are usually held in the spring of the year, when the farmer is riding o'er the landscape on a corn planter and is unable to attend. This allows the large-cities to nominate all of the officers, and in the fall the farmer is permitted to vote for them or stay at home and commune with the mechanical corn-husker.

The direct primary has done away entirely with the old-style political boss with the red neck, who has been supplanted by a select circle of political leaders. These leaders get together before the primary and pick out the candidates, so that the people will have nothing to do except vote. The advantages of this system will be readily apparent to any man of unprejudiced view who has never run for office on an independent ticket.

The direct primary ballot is an imitation of a Chinese laundry ticket, which is voted with both eyes shut. As the names of the candidates appear on the ballot in alphabetical order, it is worth more to a candidate to be born with a capital A at the head of his name than to own four or five daily newspapers.

We would all think more of the direct primary if so much of it was not directed by the present incumbents.

Fads and Fashions.

Gray is a favorite shade. Hats are made of chenille. Heels are becoming lower. Every gown should have a sash. Khaki was never so fashionable. Khaki handbags may be looked for. Odd coats are both long and short. Small pins hold veils in place in front.

Jet on serge is the newest trimming. Some of the new coats have crape hems.

Organdy collars are in very bright colors. Sweaters without sleeves are the newest. Autumn hats will have very high crowns.

Sports shoes are white touched with color. Dainty princess slips are made of china silk.

Paris is using red, white and blue in millinery. Velvet coats are promised for the early autumn.

Hats of the beret shape are made of black satin. Pink net frocks are trimmed with coarse ecru lace.

"Colored stationary is much less in use to-day than formerly, although delicate tints may be used. Plain white or pale gray papers are always in good taste," suggested her aunt.

The Gas Range!

The Gas Range means comfort for the housewife; shorter kitchen hours for her, and a cleaner kitchen. It is a great mistake to think that cooking with gas is expensive. Whenever a woman becomes used to gas for cooking, thoughts of a coal or wood stove fill her with gloom. A Gas range is so much easier to operate, so efficient for all kinds of cooking, and so much cleaner, that the idea of going back to the old style methods is decidedly unpleasant. Yet in winter many housewives think they must use a coal or wood stove, because there is no other way of heating the kitchen. THERE IS ANOTHER WAY AND IT IS FAR BETTER THAN THE OLD. RUSSELL—CAMPBELL.

A very pretty wedding took place yesterday at the home of the bride's parents when Jean, youngest daughter of Mr. William Campbell, and Hubert John, only son of Mr. E. Russell, both of this city, were united in the bonds of Holy Matrimony, the officiating clergyman being the Rev. Norman Guy, M.A., assisted by the Rev. E. Pollett Ward, brother-in-law of the bride. The bride, who wore a dress of Ivory satin trimmed with Georgette crepe, and a beautiful embroidered silk net veil, trimmed with orange blossoms, carried a bouquet of white carnations, and looked charming. She was attended by little Miss Constance Ward as flower girl. The bridesmaids were Miss Nettie Russell, sister of the groom; and Miss Emmie Maddick, cousin of the bride. The groom was ably supported by Mr. Alex. M. Campbell, brother of the bride. The groom's present to the bride was a cheque and to the bridesmaids and flower girl a ring pendant and bracelet. The happy couple were the recipients of many valuable presents including several substantial cheques. Following the ceremony a reception was held after which the bridal party drove to Waterford Bridge, the bride and groom continuing on to Holyrood from where they will join to-day's express for Montreal and points in the United States.

Mr. Russell, who is well known to newspaper men as Chief Despatcher of the Reid Nfld. Co., is an obliging and courteous official. The Telegram joins with their numerous friends in wishing Mr. and Mrs. Russell many years of wedded happiness.

Gunner Pike, R.N.R., Writes.

HIS SHIP WAS TORPEDOED. Gunner Reuben Pike, R.N.R., writing to his wife under recent date, states that he is just arrived from sea, after being torpedoed by a German submarine in the Atlantic. "We had it very stormy, but were all saved, after being forty-eight hours in the water, without anything to eat or drink. On leaving the ship we were given only five minutes to get into our boats and row away before she went down." He says he is now "Somewhere in England" taking a special course of training and when finished expects to be sent to Canada. He concludes his letter by saying "we are all on the rush to victory for the honour of the Empire and I sincerely trust that the young men of Newfoundland will not hang back but rally to the flag like our brothers who have fought and died for us to restore an everlasting peace."

Telegraph Appointments.

Mr. A. M. Fraser, chief operator of the Postal Telegraph Cable Office, King's Wharf, has resigned his position in order to accept a more lucrative one with the Commercial Cable Company at Canso, N.S. He is succeeded by Mr. H. F. Wheeler of the East End branch office. The former has for upwards of twenty years been engaged as a telegraph operator, while the latter has been twelve years in the service. Both are expert operators and are to be congratulated on their appointments.

THE BEAUTY OF THE EYES.

No feature of the face is so essential to beauty as the eyes. Many women have been pronounced beautiful when chin, mouth, and nose were actually faulty but so compelling was the beauty of the eyes that minor faults in the face went unnoticed.

No woman on the other hand, can possibly lay claim to beauty if her eyes are not beautiful. The face may be perfect oval, the mouth a rosebud, the complexion like a blush rose, but small, pale, red lidded, eyes will so effectually spoil these good points that their possessor must inevitably be branded 'plain'.

Judicious use of the eye cup will keep overworked eyes from becoming full and red-rimmed. A cloth wrung out of hot water in which bicarbonate of soda has been dissolved and laid over the closed eyes for ten minutes will remove the trace of even a hard crying spell, which, sad to say, every woman indulges herself in once in awhile.

And the Worst is Yet to Come--

America Drafting Youth for Her Armies.

How the System is Worked—Blindfolded Men Draw Lots.

Washington, July 20.—America today drafted her youth for war against Kaiserism. Starting at 9.30 o'clock in this garish chamber, blindfolded men drew the fated capsules bearing draft numbers. Out through the country each number notified a youth of the order in which Uncle Sam wants him to respond to the call to arms. Ten thousand five hundred numbers will be drawn, and it will be night before the last pellet has been culled.

This method was necessitated by a change in plans late yesterday, after several State Boards were found to have blundered in preparing their lists.

The Secretary for War, Mr. Baker, in opening the drawing at 9.30 said: "This is an occasion of great dignity and some solemnity. The young men selected to-day are honoured by the privilege of serving their country."

The Secretary then emphasized the exhaustive plans and efforts of the Government to make the drawing absolutely fair and impartial.

Number 258 was the first placed. Mr. Baker drew this first number, Senator Chamberlain, chairman of the Senate Military Affairs Committee the second, Rep. Dent, chairman of the House Committee, the third and Senator Warren, ranking Republican member of the Senate Military Affairs Committee, the fourth, Rep. Kahn, ranking Republican member of the House Military Affairs Committee the fifth, General Bliss the sixth, Provost-Marshal-General Crowder the seventh, Adjutant-General McCain the eighth.

The draft then formally proceeded after movie machines had been removed. John H. B. Phillips, of Pittsburgh, a Princeton man, was then chosen to be blindfolded and to pluck the black pellets after the officials finished.

A Solemn Scene. It was a solemn scene. Dignified Congress members—only a handful—the Secretary of War, General Crowder, chief of the draft, and his aides, and news men flashing out the numbers were the only witnesses.

General Crowder enforced silence. The drone of announcers, telling off the drawings, was the only sound. Hour after hour the blindfolded men worked. The black paper numbers were drawn from capsules, and the numerals inscribed on a blackboard and on tally sheets, whilst clicking wires outside flashed the tallies over the nation.

How It Works. Here is the way the lottery plan used to-day works.

In each of the 4,557 districts in the country, the men are numbered serially from one to the highest number of cards in this district. A number drawn from the glass globes here establishes the draft order of every man holding that number in every district in the nation. In case the numbers higher than a district contains are drawn, they are disregarded in making up the list in that district. For instance, if 567 were the first capsule pulled out, the man holding 567 in every district having numbers as high as that are drafted, and must report first in their district. Then if 45 is next the men holding 45 in each district would be the second men on the lists. If a high number, such as 9,876 should come third, it would be disregarded by the districts with lower numbers.

At dawn the force of clerks finished numbering 10,500 slips of paper for the new plan. They were carefully recounted and checked several times, and inserted into little gelatine capsules, and checked again. At 9 o'clock the globes were carried to the Senate office building. A huge blackboard with 1,000 squares were erected on one side of the room. As each tiny capsule was pulled out by the blindfolded men, it was handed to an officer. He announced the number in a loud voice. Three checkers entered it upon immense tally sheets. Another chalked it upon the blackboard. As soon as the first thousand numbers were chalked up the blackboard was taken outside and photographed "close up." Thousands of copies of each picture are being made. The indelible and unchangeable records will constitute the lists for the local exemption boards.

Two blindfolded men worked simultaneously drawing and handing to two announcers. Officials estimated it would take nearly twelve hours to complete the drawing.

The first 1,500 numbers drawn, officials said, ought to indicate a good proportion of the order in which the drafted men will be called up for examination in the smaller districts.

Don't forget the Garden Party in aid of the Church of England Orphanage at Gov't House on Aug. 8th. There will be delicious Teas and Ices for sale, and a variety of useful and beautiful articles. Something to suit everyone.—jly30, aug2,4,7

The Best Informed are Optimistic.

LONDON, July 21.—In spite of the tragic statements that are coming from Petrograd, the men who hold the highest official positions in Great Britain, are inclined to look upon the situation with perturbation. There is only one chance left to bring order out of chaos, and that is to drive into the hearts of the Russians appreciation of the dire necessity for saving the fruits of the revolution.

There is no doubt that Germany has the men and the ammunition to drive onward into Russia indefinitely against armies which are completely disorganized, but it is doubtful whether or not Marshal von Hindenburg will see fit to progress to a point where the entire Russian public will be willing to fight. This, it is stated, would mean another Marne for the Germans, with the consequent unification of all of the elements which are now opposed in fact and in principle.

One bright spot appears in the blackness, and that is the action of the Council of Workmen's and Soldiers' Deputies in investing the provisional Government with complete authority to take control of all riotous and treason-making persons and restore order with an iron rule.

If the Germans push their offensive farther, they will not only weaken their position against any army that is really ready to fight, but they will actually have the effect of putting a new heart in all Russia. It will mean an end of Russia's saturnalia of liberty, which can only be halted by the strictest of martial governments.

THE MAN OF THE AGE.

The terrible losses at the front have also clearly exposed Germany's hand in the continued displays of anarchy in Petrograd, which are considered responsible for the reverses. The provisional Government has been thus allowed to point out to the populace that everyone of the anarchists had unlimited funds, and to demand explanation as to the source of these funds. They were undoubtedly supplied by German agents.

If Kerensky, in the double position of commander-in-chief, and premier, carries his country through the present situation, it will make the greatest man of the age. Napoleon never faced a greater crisis and never accepted such a herculean task as confronts the youngest premier in all the Allied countries.

BRITISH OFFICIAL—5,000 PRISONERS TAKEN.

LONDON, Aug. 1. Rain continued to fall all throughout the day. By a successful operation today on our new battlefront our lines were advanced slightly in the neighbourhood of the Zillebeke-Zandvoorde road. On the left flank of our attack our Allies gained further ground on the east bank of the Yser Canal. During the night our new positions east and northeast of Ypres between Westhoek and St. Julien were heavily counter-attacked by strong forces of the enemy. Our troops successfully resisted the enemy's repeated attempts to drive us from important positions on the high ground captured yesterday in this neighbourhood, but under the weight of his assault after stubborn fighting we were compelled to withdraw our advanced troops from the village of St. Julien. Fighting was particularly fierce for the possession of the village of Westhoek, of which we now hold the western outskirts. This afternoon the enemy again attacked in the neighbourhood of the Ypres-Roulers railway and at the second attempt succeeded in entering our advanced positions on a narrow front. Fighting continues. The number of prisoners the British captured in yesterday's operations is known to exceed 5,000, including 95 officers. A few guns and a number of machine guns and trench mortars were also taken, but the exact figures have not yet been ascertained.

GERMANS SUCCESSFUL (1)

BERLIN, Aug. 1. The fighting in Flanders has begun in a way that promised success to the German arms, says to-day's army headquarters statement, and further battles which must be expected are looked forward to with confidence. The Entente attack, it is declared, was intended as an annihilating blow at German submarines. The German counter-attack, which lasted all day yesterday, either drove the attackers out of the fighting zone or back to the foremost crater on the field, the statement adds.

IMPROVEMENT IN WEATHER CONDITIONS.

LONDON, Aug. 1. Telegraphing from the British Army headquarters in France and Belgium this afternoon, the correspondent of Restor's Limited says: The rain having almost ceased, and the sky grown perceptibly lighter, the guns are beginning to bark again—with greater volume.

GERMAN COUNTER ATTACKS FAIL.

LONDON, Aug. 1 (Official). South of the Ypres-Comines Canal British minor operations during the night resulted in an improvement of our new line. Hostile counter-attacks yesterday afternoon and evening against our new positions and LaBassee Ville and immediately north, in the neighbourhood of the Ypres-Roulers railway, another German counter-attack was crushed during the night by our artillery. The weather continues unfavorable for operations.

POSITIONS CONSOLIDATED.

PARIS, Aug. 1 (Official). After our magnificent success yesterday our troops under a torrential rainstorm consolidated the positions which they had captured. The artillery bombardment on our front in the Aisne region was continuous, east of Cerny a vigorous counter attack permitted us to make progress at several points and to take prisoners. On the left bank of the Meuse, in the region between Acoourt and Hill 304, the Germans after artillery preparation which lasted several days, attacked this morning the positions which we had conquered from them on July 17th. The enemy was only able to reach certain advance elements of our first line where he was stopped by our fire. There was nothing to report on the rest of the front.

REPULSE AUSTRIAN ATTACK.

ROME, Aug. 1. Early yesterday morning, the enemy attacked our advanced posts in Chiese Valley, between Falt Promonte and Cima Palone, after intense artillery preparations. He was driven back with severe losses. On the remainder of the front there was the usual artillery activity.

ROUMANIANS CLAIM SUCCESS.

PETROGRAD, Aug. 1. A telegram from Jassy says the Russo-Romanian advances between the Cassen and Futna Valleys have resulted in the enemy losing between July 24th and 28th, 98 guns and about 4,500 prisoners. The enemy front was broken to a depth of between 17 and 20 kilometres.

BERLIN ISSUES OFFICIAL STATEMENT.

BERLIN, Aug. 1. An official statement issued by the Government says: The Times of London, and enemy agencies following it, are spreading reports about a conference alleged to have been held in the presence of the Emperor at Potsdam on July 5, 1914, at which political and military personages in Germany, and Austria-Hungary took part, and at which a plan was proposed to let loose the war. The Wolff Bureau is authorized to declare that the statements with all their details are pure inventions. Neither on the day named nor on any other day in July did such a joint conference occur either with or without participation of the Emperor. This we again declare, that the German Government abstained from any intervention in Serbia, and that the German Government was completely ignorant of the contents of the ultimatum before its despatch. The Times supports its false allegations on statements made by Deputy Cohn in the main committee of the Reichstag. The statement of the Deputy was immediately refuted in committee by the Government as incorrect.

SLIGHT FALLING OFF IN SINKINGS.

LONDON, Aug. 1. Some falling off in the loss of British merchant ships by submarines is noted in the official summary issued to night. Eighteen British ships of more than 1,600 tons were sunk by mines or submarines last week, and three vessels under 1,600 tons were sunk, but no fishing ships were lost. The previous week's losses were 21 over 1,600 tons, 3 under and 1 fishing vessel.

GERMAN FIGURES INACCURATE.

LONDON, Aug. 1. The figures of merchant tonnage sunk by submarines and mines, given by the Germans, are known to be inaccurate, said Andrew Bonar Law, Chancellor of the Exchequer, in the Commons to-day. The Government, however, he said, has no intention at present of changing the form of the weekly statement of shipping losses issued by the Admiralty. The form, he pointed out, had been decided upon by the Cabinet after careful consideration, and had been approved and adopted by Britain's Allies.

GREEKS STARVING.

PARIS, Aug. 1. Forty thousand Greeks have been starved to death in Eastern Macedonia, since the Bulgarian occupation began, according to authentic reports received by the Greek Government, says a Havas despatch from Athens, under Tuesday's date. The Bulgarians, added the correspondent, have carried on a systematic persecution of the Greek element of the population, looking to its extermination. They have inflicted all sorts of privations upon the Greeks, hardening them with military work, and deporting them to Bulgarian localities.

ALLIES WITHDRAW FROM OLD GREECE.

ATHENS, Aug. 1. The withdrawal of Allied forces from old Greece, Thessaly and Epirus in accordance with the decision of the Balkan Conference at Paris, is being rapidly carried out. The last Franco-British troops left the Piraeus to-day.

HIS FIFTIETH MACHINE.

PARIS, Aug. 1. Captain George Guymener, one of France's leading aviators, has brought down his 50th German airplane.

AMERICAN STEAMER SUNK.

LONDON, Aug. 1. The American steamship Montana, 2,730 tons gross, was sunk by a T-boat submarine on July 31st; 22 survivors have been landed.

STRONG ATTACKS BY ENTENTE ALLIES.

BERLIN, July 31. Strong attacks by the Entente Allies have commenced along a wide front from the Yser to Lys in Flanders, says to-day's statement, issued officially by the German staff. The infantry battle in Flanders, the statement adds, is thus opened.

BRITISH-FRENCH NEW DRIVE.

LONDON, July 31. British troops, in conjunction with the French forces on their left, attacked the German positions along a wide front north of the River Lys at 3 o'clock this morning. The Allied troops, according to the British official statement, have captured their first objectives on the whole front, and are reported to be making satisfactory progress at all points. A considerable number of prisoners have been captured by the French and British.

OBJECTIVES GAINED.

British Front in France and Belgium July 21.—A vast British force, augmented by French troops, at dawn to-day launched against the army of Crown Prince Rupprecht of Bavaria, between Dixmude on the north, and Capard, near Warneton, on the south, a terrific offensive, which, according to early reports, had carried the crushing Allies well beyond the shell-battered front line trenches of the Germans throughout this approximately 20 mile front, and in many places had rushed the second line of defences. Both the French and British had achieved all their first objectives, and the artillery was moving forward with schedule precision and to the whole situation was satisfactory in every particular. In numerous places the Entente Allies encountered strong resistance and counter attacks from the desperate Tenthons. Between Dixmude and Bosinge the attacking forces are reported to have secured the two first lines of German trenches after progress fought over the most difficult terrain imaginable, due to marshes. The Germans made a firm stand in an endeavor to stem the onslaught. The British again captured LaBassee Ville on the Franco-Belgian frontier, which a few days ago they had occupied and then relinquished. The Germans made a heavy counter attack here in an endeavor to regain the position, but the British flung them off, and began consolidating the ground won.

BRITISH OFFICIAL REPORT.

LONDON, July 31. The official issued at the British Headquarters in France to-night reports the capture by the Allies of the following villages: LaBassee Ville, Steenraete, Bixchoote, Verlorenhoek, Frezenburg, Saint Julien, Pilkem, Hooge, West-Loek, and Hollebeke, and more than 3,500 prisoners. The operations of the Allied troops began this morning in the neighborhood of Ypres, have been continued with success during the day, despite unfavorable weather. The enemy's positions have been entered and our line has been advanced on a front of over 15 miles from LaBassee Ville on the River Lys to Steenraete on the River Yser. Both of these villages are now in the hands of the Allies. On the extreme left, the French troops, acting in close co-operation with and protecting the left flank of the British forces, captured Steenraete, and penetrated the German defences to a depth of nearly two miles. Having gained their objectives for the day at an early hour, they continued their attack with the greatest gallantry beyond their original objectives, and captured Bixchoote and the enemy's positions to the southeast and west of the village on a front of nearly two and a half miles, including Kerkertert Inn. During the afternoon a hostile counter attack was successfully repulsed. In the centre and on the left centre the British divisions penetrated the enemy's positions to a depth of two miles and secured crossings on the River Steenbeck, which constituted their final objectives. In the course of their attack our troops stormed two powerful defensive systems, carried by assault the villages of Vedlorenhoek, Frezenburg, Saint Julien, and Pilkem and many strongly defended farms, woods and organized localities. Further south in the right centre of our attack, after gaining the whole of their first objectives, which included the village of Hooge and Sanctuary Wood, our troops fought their way forward against very obstinate resistance from the enemy in the difficult country in the neighborhood of the Ypres-Menin road, and carried the village of Westhoek, in the neighborhood where heavy fighting has taken place throughout the day and still continues. We have penetrated the enemy's defences to a depth of about a mile. A number of powerful counter attacks have been successfully repulsed. On the extreme right south of the Zillebeke-Zandvoorde road, our troops gained the whole of their objectives early in the day and captured the villages of LaBassee Ville and Hollebeke. In addition to heavy casualties inflicted on the enemy, more than 3,500 prisoners already have been brought in, but no accurate estimates of our captures can yet be made.

FRENCH OFFICIAL REPORT.

PARIS, July 31. The French to-day, acting in conjunction with the British, were highly successful, according to the official statement issued by the war office to-night. At small loss the French troops carried important German positions and inflicted heavy losses on the enemy. The text of the statement reads: Having crossed the Yser Canal during the night, our troops attacked at 4 o'clock this morning in conjunction with the British armies on their right. Formidable artillery preparation had completely levelled the German organizations and inflicted heavy losses on the defenders. At the end of the morning our troops had carried two enemy positions in their dash and had spontaneously gone beyond the objectives which had been assigned to them. They advanced on the road between Lisere and Dixmude and captured the village of Bixchoote and Kerkertert Inn. Our losses were exceedingly small. We captured important material, and took prisoners which have not yet been counted. The battlefield is covered with German dead, showing the magnitude of the enemy's losses. On the Aisne front the artillery fighting was particularly violent. Reports up to the present concerning the operations carried out south of La Royere emphasize the splendid attitude of our troops. On the entire front of attacks the objectives assigned having been exceeded, we have been able to clear out advance trenches which we found filled up with enemy dead. The number of prisoners taken exceeded up to the present 210. Our losses were slight. About 11 o'clock in the morning the enemy made a counter attack against our trenches west of Epine De Chevreigny, which was repulsed. The Germans, after intense bombardment of our lines, at Cerny and Hurtheise, attacked our positions east of Cerny on a front of about 1,500 metres with three regiments. Our counter attacks, immediately carried out, drove them back and permitted us to advance along the whole front.

ENGINEERS' GREAT WORK.

LONDON, July 31. A Reuter despatch from the British headquarters in France, after describing the victorious advance of the British, says the Yser was crossed in many places and the bringing work was prodigious. One division alone in the course of a single day succeeded in throwing 17 bridges across the river on its front. The accomplishment of the French troops, continues the correspondent, evoked the greatest admiration. They threw 29 bridges across the Yser, pushed on and repeatedly made deep advances.

THE BRITISH-FRENCH ASSAULT.

WASHINGTON, July 31. The British-French assault on the German right flank has made a profound impression here, because in the judgment of many American army officers it is directed at the most vulnerable point on the entire German front. A complete success for the Allies sweeping the German line back from the sea, along the entire Belgian coast, would be an immediate answer to U-boat warfare, as the main North Sea bases for the U-boat's operations would be stamped out. Behind this achievement then would stand the possibility that the entire German line in France would be endangered by a flank attack.

Slav Collapse Apalling Blow.

LONDON, July 26.—An appalling blow is the description of the Russian collapse given in a despatch from Petrograd to The Post. Never in the war has Russia put itself such enormous armies. British and French guns and gunners, flying machines, aviators and British armored cars were added to the unprecedented technical strength of the Russians themselves to make this particular front equal.

The artillery was planned where such admirable neutral prepared positions as amounted to the ideal presented themselves. There were places where the artillery lay in absolutely dead ground not 300 yards from the enemy trenches. Big guns were ideally placed, thanks to the character of the terrain.

Information regarding the guns of the Eleventh army almost staggers belief. It appears that the infantry shot down their own gunners in order to get their horses, or shot down the gun horses in revenge as they retreated, leaving practically all the artillery of the Eleventh army in enemy hands.

As far as the artillery and technical appliances of the Seventh and Eighth armies are concerned, there is also no hope of their being saved. The Germans were already a couple of days ago across the best road on the shortest line of retreat. The rate of the enemy's advance on the western wing has accelerated, and the gun positions are behind the line now occupied by the Germans. It is becoming an exceedingly anxious question whether the Eighth army will succeed in getting away at all, but it is making the best haste eastwards.

A despatch from the Exchange Telegraph Company from Copenhagen says German correspondents in Galicia report that although the German and Austrian troops captured great quantities of munitions, armored cars and wagon-loads of food, the Russians saved their light artillery. Many of the heavy guns captured by the Germans had previously been destroyed.

The correspondents add that the conquered territory is of the greatest importance, the corn in most places being ready for harvesting.

BIG AND LITTLE.

When some big fellow comes along, some man who's won because he's strong, broad-minded folk applaud him; they hail him for the things he's done, rejoice in victories he's won; but ten cent men will prod him. "He's just a mediocre jay, but luck has helped him on his way," the little fellows mutter; "if he had had such luck as ours, they would not strew his path with flowers—we'd see him in the gutter." If you are feeling rather sore because the swashbuckled chap next door goes up, while you are falling, you'll find it wise to wear a grin, and say you hope he'll always win, and wish him pleasant sailing. For if you start to run him down, and make some holes in his renown, good sports will always spurn you; they'll say you are too cheap to train with people who are safe and sane, they'll ostracize and dern you. There is no cheaper trick, my son, than running down the man who's won, with criticism dreary; by doing so you demonstrate that you're a spiteful little skate, and make fair people weary. We can't all scale the heights of fame, but all of us can play the game like sports of nerve and merit; and if we fall down in our plang, and line up with the also-rans, why, we can grin and bear it.
