KING GEORGE THE FIFTH SEAMEN'S INSTITUTE.

SWIMMING POOL RE-OPEN MARCH 1st, 1922.

The instinctive desire for cleanliness, says Lotze, marks the beginning of a culture; at any rate it indicates a fortunate tendency in that direction. Filth is unendurable in the eyes of those civilized peoples alone who prize, in the case of their bodies, the same degree of purity which they impart to their enterprises and their personal environment.

To-day the Seamen's Institute affords abundant opportunity to enjoy the advantage of the bath not only as a means of cleansing the body but also as a tonic and the promoter of a healthy skin—"the finest undergarment ever invented."

The Pool has been redecorated, recleaned, and new Shower Baths installed. Inspection invited.

Open daily except Sundays from 9 a.m. till 10.30 p.m.

ROYAL YEAST CAKES

Canadian Made

A fresh, rosy complexion indicates perfect health. To secure this in most cases all that is necessary is to take one to three Royal Yeast Cakes a day for a few weeks.

Royal Yeast is a food. It supplies the water soluble vitamins which the diet may lack. Scientists tell us that this vitamin is essential to good health. Royal Yeast is highly beneficial in many cases in which the system seems to be run down. The yeast cakes simply add to the diet. It is a food - not a medicine.

Dissolve a Royal Yeast Cake in fruit juices or mix it with cereal and milk, and take it at meal time. The chances are in a few weeks the complexion will be clear. For children reduce the amount to one-half or one-quarter of a cake with each meal.

Send name and address for free booklet "Royal Yeast Cakes for Better Health."

Sweet Eva!

CHAPTER XL

"I leave England in a fortnight. I am sorry to have to ask anything of you, but it would be kind, for my mother's sake, if you will come down to Apsley until I go. I am staying to-night in town, and will call round in the morning. There is a train down at eleven. As far as I am concerned you will be as free at the Highway House as you have been during the last ten days." PHILIP WINTERDICK.

Eva laughed. She had laughed before she was aware of it, and she looked round the silent room with frightened eyes, almost as if she suspected that the discordant laughter had not been her own.

She tore the note into tiny pieces and threw them into the grate. As free down there as she had been here! He had been thinking of Calligan when he wrote that, she supposed.

She began to undress. She felt curiously detached and uninterested. She wondered where Philip was, and if Faulkner had known all along that though her husband was staying in London, she had not seen him.

She left her pretty frock lying on the floor where it had fallen from her shoulders and crept into bed. She lay awake, staring into the darkness. Did she mean to go? She hardly knew. She felt as if she stood between two forces—one commanding and the other prodding, between Philip, in whose brief words she had read a command, and Calligan, who had pleaded with her and made her promise.

The Influence of Virol on Development.

BABY KEN.

'Bright as a Sunbeam,' Thanks to Virol.

Lamerton, Tavistock.

Dear Sir,
Here is a photo of Baby Ken—as hard as nails and bright as a sunbeam. He is 8 months old, and weighs 21 lb.

He has been a 'Virol Baby' from the age of 10 weeks, before which he was very small and thin and could never be satisfied. I usually tell his many admirers that he is a 'Virol Baby.'

Yours gratefully,
(Signed) (Mrs.) L. A. T.

VIROL

Virol Ltd., 189-190, Old St., London, E.C.1, S.E.1.

only she knew there were no tears to come.

She kissed him apathetically.

"Why are you ashamed of me?" she asked dully.

But there was no time for him to answer; the train had started.

She sat in the corner, hardly moving till she reached Apsley. Would Philip be at the station to meet her? It seemed improbable; she did not even trouble to look for him as she left the platform.

But he was there, at the wheel of the little two-seater looking towards her.

His eyes, hard and accusing, met hers, and she felt an insane desire to laugh.

"She had actually thought she could make this man jealous—this cold, indifferent man who was her husband!"

"You were very sure 'I should come,'" she said.

There was no attempt at any other greeting. She got in beside him and he started away.

It was the same car in which he had driven her the night of the dinner party, the night when she had kissed him—the night she had her one golden hour.

The words of the song slipped again into her memory—

"Though all the skies are clouded,
Though all the portents lour,
Somewhere, to someone, this is the golden hour."

Unconsciously she found herself saying them aloud. Philip stared at her.

"What did you say?" he asked. She started violently.

"I didn't say anything—I was just thinking."

"Thinking aloud?" he asked cynically.

She did not answer. He kept his eyes fixed on her. Suddenly, "What's the matter?" he asked, abruptly. "Are you ill?"

Her eyes had closed, and she swayed a little.

She forced herself to look at him; she had the feeling of having been roughly roused from sleep.

"No—I'm quite well. Tired, that's all."

"Too many late nights," he said, unemotionally.

They went some way in silence.

"I suppose I ought to tell you," Philip said then, "that people have been talking down here—about us! Otherwise I should not have asked you to come until I had gone. But my mother—"

She broke in wildly.

"You need not blame your mother—I don't imagine it's her fault that you married me."

Philip bit his lip.

"Very well—we won't argue about it. I shall be gone in a fortnight, and then, of course, you will be free to do as you like."

"Thank you." It was difficult to keep her thoughts from wandering; sometimes his voice seemed such a long way off, and then suddenly it would almost seem as if he were shouting in her ear.

From Wealth to Penury.

On February 28, 1730, there died in a small private nunnery in Dublin one who had been mistress of Dublin Castle, where she had received a monarch as her guest. This was the lady once celebrated as "La Belle Jennings," and latterly the wife of the Duke of Tyrconnel, who so nearly recovered Ireland for King James II. Soon after the Restoration she appeared as maid of honour to the then Duchess of York—mother of Queen Mary II, and Anne—while in that position was noted for a propriety of demeanour absolutely unique at that period. As the wife of the Duke of Tyrconnel during his reign at Dublin 1689-90, she was as notable for her dignified conduct as she had formerly been for her puritanical behaviour while surrounded by the gaudies of Charles's court. After the memorable and fatal battle of the Boyne, when the king and the duke fled to Dublin, she ministered all her household in state and welcomed the travel-stained and mud-bespattered fugitives with all the splendour of royal etiquette. Advancing to the king as he entered the Great Hall, she fell on her knees, and after congratulating him upon his safety, begged him to attend the banquet she had prepared. The unhappy James answered sadly that he had but little stomach for supper considering the sorry breakfast he had made that morning. The duchess persisted in forcing them to eat, and in spite of her anxiety, showed such spirit and courage that the fugitives were roused to emulation. After her husband's death the duchess was left almost penniless, and being also friendless she was forced to seek refuge with a band of noble Irishwomen, where she died in an obscure and miserable manner—a very bitter contrast to the brilliancy of her early days.

Who Lives Highest?

What is the greatest height at which people live on the earth?

There is, it seems, a shepherd living with his family in the Andes at a height of 17,000 feet, and this has been claimed to be a record, that is, for permanent habitation.

When it comes to a question of a temporary abode, however, this altitude, great as it is, is easily beaten, for on one of the Himalayan passes, 18,400 feet high, a small band of hardy men live during the summer.

The men, numbering less than half a dozen, are Tibetan Custom House officers, and are specially selected for their powers of endurance, as one would expect them to be, in order to exist even for a few weeks in air which must contain so very much less oxygen than there is at sea-level.

From such an elevated pass these men must have a magnificent view of the great Tibetan plateau, the inhabitants of which themselves seem to live constantly at heights of 15,000 or more feet.

It would be interesting to know at what height human beings could accustom themselves to live. There is no reason to suppose that 18,400 feet is the limit.

A Stitch in Time

Quick action is the only hope when kidney disease appears.

There is a whole train of dreadfully painful and fatal ailments which soon follow any neglect to get the kidneys right. Among others are rheumatism, lumbago, Bright's disease, hardening of the arteries and high blood pressure.

In Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills you will find a treatment which is both quick and thorough.

Mr. C. E. Rayms, Lindale, Alta., writes:—

"I was a great sufferer from kidney disease and lame back for more than a year. A friend of mine one day said to me of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, and seeing some in a box I tried them. After I had taken one box I felt better, so I continued until I had used five boxes. By this time I felt as well and strong as ever, and am glad to recommend Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills to anyone suffering as I did."

Echo of Halifax Disaster.

The report of the loss of the Norwegian steamer "Guvernoren," formerly the "Imo," recalls to mind the terrible disaster which overtook the city of Halifax, N.S., on 6th December, 1917, for it was caused by the collision between the French munition ship "Mont Blanc," and the Norwegian "Imo." The latter vessel has had a very varied career, having been built by Harland and Wolff at Belfast, in 1899, as the "Runic" for the White

Didn't Want to Spoil Vacation.

Thomson came back to the office looking very brown. He had taken two weeks' vacation directly after Easter and he had been able to add several days to his rest period. To the amazement of his boss, however, he asked for a few extra days off. "Why, you've only just had your vacation!" ejaculated the amazed employer. "What do you want the extra days for?" "I want to get married," "Why didn't you get married during your vacation?" the boss inquired. "I didn't want to spoil my vacation," that way," replied Thomson.

Wall Street Watching John Bull.

The Wall Street Journal, in an article dealing with the rise in the value of the pound sterling says that the opinion is held among New York bankers that foreign exchange is pronounced judgment on the foreign policies adopted by this country. They prophesy that Britain will obtain, before many months have passed, a predominant hold on international trade. According to the Wall Street Journal these bankers believe that Britain will not only pay her debts, but cancel those due from her Allies, and also forego her 22 per cent. of Ger-

NEARLY LOST HER LIFE NURSING DYING MOTHER

"For six months I had to devote all my spare time to nursing my mother who was slowly dying of an incurable disease. Not being well-off we couldn't afford the services of a nurse, so I had to be with her day and night.

She was a large woman and it took all my strength to lift her. Realizing that she had not long to live, she naturally wanted me with her all the time and any spare time which I could snatch from my household I gave to her. Four months ago she died and an hour after the funeral I went into a dead faint. The loss of sleep, the worry and the extra day and night work had finally been more than I could stand. They put me to bed. I contracted a high fever and was delirious for some days. Nor a while my doctor gave up all hopes of saving my life. However, I did succeed in pulling through but the strain and the illness had shattered my nerves. Worry and trouble had left me a physical wreck. I was so weak I couldn't lift my hands to my mouth. For two weeks I had to be fed. I gradually got a little stronger but not strong enough to get out of bed. It was determined that I would not give up. Finally one day a friend suggested trying Carnal. I was so anxious to get strong that I was willing to try anything. I never would have believed that any preparation would have made such a change in so short a time as Carnal did with me. To-day, thanks to Carnal, I feel fine—in fact I never felt better."

Mrs. S. of Hamilton.

Carnal is sold by your druggist, and if you can conscientiously say, after you have tried it, that it hasn't done you any good, return the empty bottle to him and he will refund your money. 9-122

The official report says one of the motor cars, in the course of side de camps proceeding to the place, was hit by a small stone which made a dent in the door. It was thought the missile was a stone thrown or kicked up by the wheels of the car. It was certainly not a bullet, but in view of the mischief the incident was reported to the police. He was present at the execution of Edward Parsons on January 13 last, and immediately after the man was pronounced dead removed the glands from his body. It was one day last week when the surgeon reappeared at Sing Sing and performed the second part of the operation. There has not yet been time for Hauser's condition to reveal the success or failure of the experiment.

Reduce the Cost of Living

MR. GOSLING SHOWS HOW IT CAN BE DONE.

Editor Evening Telegram.

Dear Sir:—If the ordinary commercial man were asked what has caused the present depressed condition of our trade, he would reply that it was the Coaker Regulations. In my opinion such is not the case. The decline in the price of Codfish was certain to occur under any circumstances. The folly of the Coaker Regulations was in supposing that prices could be controlled by the decree of the seller alone, without reference to the buyer, or to possible competitors. The result of this uneconomic endeavour was to aggravate the situation and precipitate the crisis. It is as foolish to blame Mr. Coaker for the decline in the price of fish, as it is to praise him for the rapidly falling price, almost unimportant, from 1886 to 1919. If we could be sure that our legislators had learned the simple lesson that economic laws cannot be set aside by legislation, it would be something gained, but our subsequent history does not confirm that hope. Last year the Government found themselves faced with certain definite losses which had to be met, and certain increased expenditures such as the Railway Operation Grant and the Relief of Unemployment, for which funds had to be provided. Apparently the only method which could be devised of meeting the situation was that of increasing the taxes, and first 25% was added to the existing-duty, and then a Sales Tax of 5% ad. val. The total effect of these additions was approximately an average increase of 60% in the duties. No reduction in expenditure was attempted except that of cutting the pay of civil servants 25%.

THE SITUATION IN DETAIL.

Let us examine the situation more in detail. First to the Fisheries. After several years of unprecedented prosperity, shared equally by fishermen and merchants, we met reverses. The merchants paid too much for fish in 1920, and were forced by regulation to ask too much from the foreign consumer, who stopped buying, and we lost first our customers and then our money. Because the merchants had made such heavy losses, and because the cost of catching fish had been so greatly increased by the increased duties, the issue of fishery supplies in the Spring of 1921 was greatly reduced. The Government again intervened, and guaranteed supplies to the extent of about $500,000, half of which, it is said, has been lost. If the Government repeats this mode of procedure in 1922, and again endeavours to pay its losses by increasing taxation, the cost of catching fish will again be increased, and nobody will be able to make a living at it. I have asked a good many people what they thought was the result of last season's business, and the replies are to the effect that the more fortunate merchant may break even, the less fortunate will make losses. Only the most successful fisherman has paid his account, and for all there has been a very serious reduction in the standard of living. Only the bare necessities of life have been procurable while vessels, motor boats, houses and clothing have all deteriorated.

DESTROYING SELF-RELIANCE.

As it is with the Fishery, so it is with the Pulp Mills at Grand Falls, with the Bell Island Iron Mines, and with practically every industry in the Island. The value of the article produced has declined, while the cost of producing it has either not declined or been advanced, because labour could not decline, owing to the increased duties. The result of this general cessation of employment is that the Government has been forced again to provide work, which is either flagrantly uneconomic, such as snow shovelling, or partially uneconomic, such as the making of roads-de-luxe, the cutting of pit-props and pulp-wood, upon which latter I have little doubt that heavy losses will be made. There is also the certainty that, as with every undertaking of the sort by a government, many are being given relief work who do not actually require it. But the crowning evil of this policy is the effect upon the individual. Every effort of the Government to find work, every purchase of fish or pulp wood, every guarantee of Fishery Supplies or Humber Propositions, in short, everything which causes the individual to look to the State for his support, destroys his self-reliance, cripples his initiative, and makes him a parasite upon the body politic. If the policy of supplying for the Fisheries and giving unproductive labour to the unemployed, continues, followed by an increase of taxation to pay the losses inevitably incurred, it follows as the night the day, that in the end, we will all be working on the roads, and there will be no one left to pay the taxes by honest productive toil.

MUST BREAK THE VICIOUS CIRCLE.

We have got ourselves imprisoned in a vicious circle, and we must break out of it. Evidently we cannot continue as we have been doing the past two years. Unless a miracle happens to us, our whole industrial life will be strangled. I can see only one remedy for our troubles. It is one that will take great courage on the part of our legislators, and it will require the united efforts of both Government and Opposition to carry it out. The cost of living must be reduced until our fishermen can afford to catch fish and sell it at a low price; until our paper-makers can reduce their wages, and paper can be made in competition with Scandinavian countries; until our miners can work for a wage which will permit ore to be sold, and iron and steel to be manufactured at a profit; and so on through our whole industrial life. I therefore suggest that all super-taxes and sales tax shall be removed, leaving the tariff practically as it was in 1915-16. I mention this date because I find that the index number of prices for December 1921 was on a parity with that of early 1916, and also, as was to be expected, because the price of our main staple was the same in those years as it is now. The wheels of our trade have been gradually rusting up and stopping. They must be made to revolve again. People talk of a Commission on Tariff Revision. I see no necessity for any Commission, as the revision which is necessary can be done with a stroke of the pen.

GIVE BOTH A CHANCE.

But it will be said, how are we going to meet our expenses? I am convinced that taxation has reached a point where it ceases to be remunerative and that probably as large, if not a larger revenue will be obtained from a reduced tariff. Further, what avails it to add a million dollars to our revenue, if we have to spend a million dollars to support our people? I have said above that the price of Fishery Produce is approximately the same as in 1916, and also that the price of commodities generally is the same as in that year. It is presumably that our fishermen were able to make a living in 1916, or in other words, were able to exchange their fish for sufficient goods to supply their needs and a little over. It stands to reason that with 60% added to the taxes, they cannot now make such an advantageous deal, and must be dropping back. Give the merchants a chance and give the people a chance. Stop all government expenditures work at Government expense, and let us see if we cannot work out our own salvation.

CUT DOWN EXPENSES.

But the Government has another duty to perform. Expenses must be cut down, and as Governments are notoriously weak when it comes to reducing expenditure, I think a Commission might very well be appointed for this purpose. Such a Commission should be composed equally of Government and Opposition members, as both are to blame for wasting the country's monies, and both should share in the responsibility for the reductions which must be made. Mr. Harold Cox, the well known economist, writing in the "Times" January 28th, says:—

"It is notorious that the amount of 'frank' connection with the unemployment dole is now immense. Yet 'as far as can be gathered there is no regular method followed by the Ministry of Labour for checking this 'fraud. Meanwhile, the dole notorious-ly has the effect of encouraging both 'men and women to refuse work that 'is offered them. This illustration is 'typical of the mentality of a large number of politicians who are now 'governing the country. They are out 'to win votes at any cost, and they 'think they can better accomplish that 'object by bribing the less prosperous 'electors with the money of the tax- 'payer, than by instituting a system 'of sound finance which in time would 'enable the prosperity of the whole

Here in sunny rooms the tomatoes are cooked with fragrant spices, onions, sugar and the best vinegar—cooked for hours until all the flavors are blended through and through.

Now the sauce is ready to give an appetizing relish to your steaks and chops, or a new piquancy to the meat gravy you serve with your roasts.

Your grocer has, or can get you, Libby's Catchup or Chili Sauce. Use it with your cold meat teas and note how quickly the second helping is necessary.

The delightful flavor of Libby's Beans is due largely to the wonderful Sauce prepared by the skilled chefs. Have you tried them?

Obvious Discrimination.

According to a message received from Dr. W. E. Jones, Avondale, Member of the House of Assembly for the District of Harbor Main, and published in yesterday's Telegram, desperate conditions exist amongst the unemployed in that section. Lawlessness apparently is rife and one store has been broken into, presumably by a mob, and provisions taken therefrom. It is rather strange that no mention of this occurrence was made by the authorities to any newspaper in the city. Daily the reporters visit the departmental offices in their search for news, but none bearing on the looting at, or near, Avondale was communicated. With Dr. Jones' own statements in support, we cannot for one moment believe that either the Department of the Colonial Secretary or that of Justice was not notified officially by the Magistrate or police officer doing duty in the locality where the store was entered. Yet not a word leaked out. There is no ambiguity about the charges made by Dr. Jones. They are clear cut and comprehensible to all. Conditions of unemployed in parts of Harbor Main District are becoming desperate. A store has been broken into and provisions taken. What a commentary on the state of local affairs under the present regime. Hungry fathers break the law in order that their hungry families may have a little sustenance. No work, no food. Is it any wonder that the hardy men of Hr. Main have taken the law into their own hands. A starving man does not stop to argue. A hundred starving men without food in their homes, or the wherewithal to purchase it, are not going to discuss the ethics of their action if they have made up their minds to break into a store in order to procure something to eat. That has been done, and who can blame those men driven to such an extreme course by the pangs of hunger and the suffering, from the same cause of their wives and children.

Rather blame the Government under whose unwise and injudicious administration such occurrences have come to pass. Aye blame them for discriminating against the district which turned their candidates down in 1919 and again in 1921. Accuse them openly and straightly of refusing that assistance to Hr. Main which they gave other districts. Charge them with turning a deaf ear to the appeals made by the representative, and refusing him even the courtesy of a reply. That is just what Dr. Jones has done in his telegraphed message already referred to. He does not mince his words. Little relief work has been given in Harbor Main. In other districts it has been given out in galore. A request to have timber cut locally for repairs to district wharves and breakwaters was ignored. A recommendation to put men at work snow shovelling was not considered worth a reply. Passes for Bell Island, where a number of men could have secured half-time work were refused. In any case they were not sent on application. What was the idea of the Government? Had they bitter thoughts of Harbor Main, and because of the sturdy independence of its electors, decided to make them suffer for political contumacy? If that is the case, then the sooner the country is rid of such microscopic minds the better. No Government of strength or weakness should penalize a single district, under the circumstances already related, because of its political creed. Such an action is more than contemptible. It is an exhibition of a spirit of revenge which should not be tolerated in this modern age, and is further proof of the irreconcilable attitude of the Government toward the men who would neither be coerced nor stampeded into voting for its candidates in the bye-election of 1921. It shows also a spirit of personal animosity directed toward the only member for the district, since death removed Capt. John Lewis. It is poor business for a Government to be churlish and petty. In the case outlined by the message of Dr. Jones, our rulers have been not only churlish and petty, but invidious toward Harbor Main. To repeat the concluding words of the message: "How long does the Government expect the people to stand for it?"

The Political Situation.

MANY RUMOURS CURRENT.
The general impression about town to-day was that the House would meet on March 8th for the dispatch of business. This naturally gave rise to further rumours with respect to what is likely to happen when the House does open. That all is not well with the Government is obvious. The stand that the Prime Minister took in connection with the Humber guarantee established a wide breach between him and the Coaker-Warren party are in favour of the guarantee, while it is understood that Mr. Warren is favourable to Reid interests. The Prime Minister is, however, faced with a difficult situation. Unless, as is most unlikely, he can effect an alliance with the Opposition, his only alternative, if he still refuses to give in to Mr. Coaker, is to bring on a general election and take his chances at the polls. It is possible that he might obtain the support of certain individual members of the Opposition, but not enough to give him a working majority. Several rumours are abroad in connection with the leadership of the Opposition. None of these can be relied upon and the only course left is to follow Mr. Asquith's advice, and "Wait and See."

Shrove Tuesday.

To-day, being that before Ash Wednesday, is called Shrove Tuesday in the English Church from the custom which enjoined confession of sins and shriving immediately before the Lenten fast. It was an ancient custom that, after confession and absolution on this particular Tuesday, the people should eat pancakes. Pancake parties still continue to be held all over Newfoundland, and there is not a house in the whole country where pancakes are not prepared for the evening meal. Thus is the ancient custom kept up and the day commemorated.

Twenty Years Ago To-Day.

(Evening Telegram, Feb. 28th, 1902.)
The Newfoundland French Treaties Act, the Second reading of which was moved in the House of Assembly by the Premier, Sir Robert Bond, was committed.
The Newfoundland hockey team crossed by the S.S. Bruce on the way home. In the final game of the tour Sydney beat the home team by 14 goals to 2.
Marconi contracted with the Canadian Government to transmit transatlantic commercial messages at 10 cents per word.
Lords Milner and Kitchener were given a free hand to accept modified surrender terms in the case of Beer Leaders.
The Newspaper Collectors Club of Canada requested copies of all newspapers magazines and reviews in Newfoundland be sent to the Club for incorporation in an exhibition of the Empire publications which it was proposed to hold at Ottawa.

Memorial Sports Committee.

NO ENTRIES AFTER NOON WEDNESDAY.
The final decision of the Memorial Sports Committee is that no entries for the various events will be received after noon on Wednesday. Notice of this decision should be taken by intending competitors. On Wednesday afternoon the Programme Committee will meet for the purpose of drawing for numbers and positions of the contestants. A general meeting of the Committee was held yesterday afternoon at the Green Lantern. There was a fairly large attendance. The reports of the sub-committees were received and proved highly satisfactory. A ladies' hockey match cannot be arranged, and it is proposed to have a game between the Felidians, League champions for 1922, and a team picked from the other league teams. This should be a great drawing card. The souvenir programme should prove a great success. All the advertising space has already been taken up. These programmes will be sold by a number of young ladies on the night of the Sports.

Old Collegians Meet.

SPORTING MATTERS DISCUSSED.
The Old Collegians held a very enthusiastic meeting last night in the Institute Rooms of the Methodist College. Mr. C. F. Ayre presided. In his opening remarks the chairman said that the Council had organized a coaching committee for the hockey team. He also said that it was proposed to institute an "Art Gallery" to contain photographs of the various college teams, and all possible photographs of representative Collegians. The meeting decided to form a membership campaign committee for the purpose of increasing the membership of the Association. It was also decided to form a Tennis Club in connection with the Ayre Athletic grounds and Messrs. W. Tucker and Joseph Peters were appointed as a committee to organize the Club and to order the material. The meeting adjourned at 10 o'clock.

St. Mary's Helpers.

A delightful concert, under the auspices of the St. Mary's Helpers, was held in the Parish Hall last night. Every seat was occupied and the continuous applause and many encores proved that the performers had amply satisfied the large audience. There was a literal feast of song, recitation and instrumental music for two hours. During an interval candy and drinks were sold by girls of St. Mary's congregation. Songs were rendered by Mesdames Christian and Garland, Misses Redstone, Ina Chafe, Calk, Messrs. Courtney, Dobbin, Neary, Canning, Lawrence, Chaplin, Macklin, Bears and Lloyd; violin selection by Mrs. Dunfield; recitations by Messrs. Gushue and Colton; pianoforte selections by Messrs. Christian and Lloyd.
At the conclusion of the programme the Rector thanked the performers on behalf of the St. Mary's Helpers and took occasion to remark on the characteristic willingness of St. John's performers, to assist at concerts, etc., whenever asked to do so—a statement which evoked applause. The singing of the National Anthem terminated one of the most pleasant evenings ever spent in St. Mary's Hall.

McMurdo's Store News.

TUESDAY, Feb. 28.
As a liniment for general purposes one which can be depended upon to perform all that is to be expected of a liniment of its kind, we strongly recommend Camomile Cam Liniment. The formula is a good and tried one, and this liniment has now been before the public for some years, and grows in popularity yearly. For pains, muscular cramps, and as an external remedy in coughs, colds and bronchitis, etc., it has no superior. Price 15c. a bottle.

Latest From Prospero.

A message was received yesterday from Capt. Field of S.S. Prospero, which is jammed at Green Harbor, Exploits, stating that the whole bay is a mass of ice. There is a sufficient stock of provisions on the ships to keep those on board, going for some time. The great difficulty is coal, and attempts are now being made to get a supply out to the jammed steamer. The two passengers, Messrs. Coyle and Tomesman are still on board as are all but five members of the crew. An occasional mail is received.

Weather and Ice Conditions.

Seal Cove—Wind S.E., with snow; ice moving off; a few seals seen.
Newtown—South winds, mid; Cape Freels reports jam of ice.
Fogo—Wind S.S.W., thick weather; bay full ice.
The Cove—Wind westerly, fine and moderately cold; no ice in bay.
Little Bay Islands—Light S.E. wind with snow; bay full ice.

Princess Mary Married.

BRILLIANT SCENE AT WESTMINSTER ABBEY.
LONDON, Feb. 28.
Princess Mary, only daughter of King George and Queen Mary, was married to-day to Viscount Lascelles, with all the pomp and dignity befitting a Royal wedding. The ceremony began in Westminster Abbey at 11.30 o'clock, and soon thereafter the couple were pronounced man and wife, while the chimes of Westminster rang out a happy message, and vast crowds gave tumultuous greetings. The scene of the ceremony within the historic walls of the Abbey was one of impressive grandeur, with the King and Queen and the entire Royal Household participating, and with all ranks represented in the brilliant assemblage, while outside the Abbey enthusiastic popular homage was given the bridal pair.

Man Found Unconscious.

AFTER A NIGHT'S EXPOSURE.
As a result of a night's exposure with the thermometer 13 below zero, a well known resident of Cochrane Pond Road, Mr. George Ingerman, now lies at the point of death at his son's residence, Topsail Road. It appears that the old gentleman, who is over 75 years of age, left town late Saturday evening, and after getting well on the way towards home, his horse getting off the road became bogged. The driver unhitched the animal which being freed, found his way to the stable. It being very dark Mr. Ingerman was unable to find the road and beaming exhausted laid down in Glendinning's field, near Mount Pearl. There he laid all night in the piercing cold, and on Sunday morning at 8 o'clock search parties discovered him in an unconscious condition. His feet were frozen, but his hands and face escaped. He was removed immediately to his son's residence where a doctor was called. Restoratives were applied, but up to this forenoon the unfortunate man had not regained consciousness.

Horsemen's Association Meeting.

RACES POSTPONED.
The Newfoundland Horsemen's Association held a largely attended meeting yesterday afternoon in the Board of Trade Rooms, when matters in connection with the annual meet were discussed. The proposal to race on Wednesday, March 1, was held in abeyance, pending a final report from the ice committee. The latter visited the course this morning and reported that conditions were unsuitable for racing, there being about 3 inches of snow on the track. Consequently the races will not take place to-morrow. The Association has decided not to rush the race until conditions are suitable as last year had the meet been postponed for the following Wednesday from that on which it took place, there would have been an ideal track. This morning whilst practicing on the course a pacer owned by a member of the Association had a nasty spill owing to snow clogging the animals' hoofs. Fortunately the accident was not attended with serious results. The best ice conditions are usually during the second and third weeks of March and it is hoped that this year will prove no exception. The Association has hopes that there is plenty of time yet to have the Horsemen's Day.

Railway Notes.

The main line is now working well but the branch lines are not yet in operation.
Yesterday's outgoing train left Notre Dame Junction at 11 a.m. and should arrive at Millertown to-night.
The Brigus line will be completely cleared to-morrow. A large number of men are employed on this section, where heavy ice and snow covered over the rails. The Placentia branch line should be in operation to-morrow.
A train left for Whitbourne at 8.45 a.m. and will return this afternoon.
The weather along the line is fairly fine. S.E. winds with snow prevail.

Portia Icebound.

After several attempts to get around Cape St. Mary's, S.S. Portia has been compelled to put back to Buriu where she must stay until the ice moves off. In the meantime the prevailing S.E. wind continues, Buriu Harbor may be blocked with ice, in which case the ship will be held there indefinitely. The Portia was bound for this port from the Western Coastal Service.

Rotary Luncheon.

BOYS' WORK DISCUSSED.
Rotarian Gerald Harvey was chairman and also the principal speaker at to-day's luncheon of the Rotary Club. His address was on "Boys' Work as viewed by the Boys' Work Committee." Mr. Harvey gave a very interesting talk in the course of which he referred to the possibilities and results which might accrue from a survey of the boy life of this city. With reference to a boy life survey, the following extract from "The Presbyterian Witness" is of interest:—
"An interesting survey has been made of the boys of Toronto by the Boy Life Council which represents the Churches, the Rotary Club and other interested agencies. The survey covers practically all the boys between 10 and 18 attending public, separate and secondary schools and some employed boys. A full survey of the latter class is under way. The survey covered 16,336 boys, of whom 12,314 are Protestants. Of the latter number, 11,210, or the extraordinary ratio of 91 per cent., claim to attend Sunday School. The Baptists lead, with 35 per cent.; Methodists, 22.6; Presbyterians, 21.1; and Anglicans, 18.3. Of the 2,012 Catholic boys surveyed, 97.6 attend Sunday School, while of the 1,733 Hebrews surveyed only 29.9 claim to be receiving religious instruction. More than half of the total number surveyed belong to various organizations and clubs, such as Trail Rangers and Taxis groups, Boy Scouts, Y. M. C. A., etc. The Presbyterian figures in the survey are, on the whole, encouraging. Of the 3,232 reported, 2,945 entered as Sunday School scholars, 413 belong to the Y. M. C. A., 372 are Trail Rangers and 321 Boy Scouts. Practically half of the total number surveyed are members of church or other clubs or organizations. The result of the survey of the employed boys, now under way, will be awaited with interest."

Music Lovers Hear Another Treat.

RUTH CHASE AND GEORGE DALE DELIGHT PATRONS.
Another delightful musical treat was heard at the Nickel last night. Miss Ruth Chase, the popular Soprano, rendered "Land of Sky-Blue Water," and "My Heart At Thy Voice." Mr. George Dale sang "Snow Breasted Pearl" and "Wandering Minstrel." The latter selection is from the opera Mikado. The outstanding feature of this vocal programme was, however, the duet "Sunrise and You," which was rendered by Miss Chase and Mr. Dale, accompanied by Professor McCarthy at the piano. This number was enthusiastically received. The programme was well-balanced by a splendid photoplay of extraordinary interest, entitled "The Penalty" featuring the well known character artist Lon Chaney. "The Penalty" is taken from the well known story by Gouverneur Morris which ran in the Cosmopolitan Magazine and is a high-class melodrama, yet it seems to hit the spot as far as theatre patrons are concerned. One of the striking things about the picture is the remarkable characterization given by Lon Chaney. Rarely has the screen seen a better piece of acting. The photography is excellent, the settings splendid; every character represented is worthy of praise.

AN APOLOGY FOR AN OMISSION.
To the Editor of the Telegram.
Sir—It has been shown me how did yesterday fall to dispatch my journal to your Sheet which grieves me sorely. I tender to you, Sir, my deep Regret and do assure you that shall not allow it to occur another time. Herewith, I send you my journal of the Saturday of last night, and I hope, Sir, that in our Goodness, you and your Readers will pardon my momentary Forgetfulness.
With best Wishes for the Success of your Sheet,
I sign myself, Sir,
Your Humble,
most respectful Servant,
SAMUEL PEPPYS.

THE JOURNAL.

February 25.—To wait upon the Prime Minister and to ask his mind on certain matters. I learn to-day how the mounted police will be revived, and a good thing seeing how they will help greatly to control the motor traffic. Comes news also of the Government taking over the Railway, and Mr. Morgan, that was manager, to be their advisor. To the Police Court where I did meet Superintendent O'Neil who tells me how he did learn first of his promotion in this, my journal. At night to the Club and to play at Bridge, but the cards will not come my way, a thing which did mightily displease me. Anon, home and to bed.

February 26th (Lord's Day).

Up and to walk, but the air cold and my ears again frozen, so I soon return home. The air coach did to-day fly to Botwood.
February 27.—Up and put on my grey stuff suit, being a mild day. So to Water Street and see a great crowd of women outside a certain shop, and learn how there is a fire sale and they try to secure bargains. But Lord, how the women did fight to gain an entrance, and they more mad for a bargain than is a man for a cigarette. I did have some discourse with Sir R. Squires, and would hear news of the loan which it is the common talk that he makes, but he will say naught of it, nor yet will he deny it. I to the Police Court, and have discourse with Head Constable O'phant, that retires to-morrow from the watch, and a pleasant, courteous man he always was, and will be missed greatly. To the Board of Trade, where Briggs tells me of a certain sea captain that did make a wager of a new hat with a well known merchant, and the subject, that the Hawk did arrive in this port before the Mastiff. And the captain wins the wager, whereat the merchant takes him to the Royal Stores and gives him his choice of a hat. To my chirurgeon and he gives me a physick to take, which I like not. I met Mr. Johnson, the parson, who gives me news of the girl that did cause trouble at the Industrial Home, and how a doctor will examine her about her mind. Out at night and to play at cards. So home and to bed.

Your Heart Tablets and Powders are a wonderful medicine, and I wish all to know what they have done for me. Before I commenced their use I could not lie on my left side at all nights, and had such a choking sensation in my throat that I could hardly breathe. I would have to sit up in bed nights my heart would beat so hard, and my left arm and side pained me very badly. My heart would also flutter terribly when I would go upstairs, and I would have smothering spells. I have felt none of these symptoms since using two boxes of your Tablets, and can lie on my left side with ease. Please accept my gratitude for ever offering so good a medicine.

The Passing of Sail.

Gasoline Power Replaces Canvas.

The epic contest staged off Halifax last fall between the Gloucester fishing schooner Elise and the Lunenburg schooner Bluenose embodied something more than the friendly rivalry for sailing supremacy between the fishing fleets of Canada and the United States. But amid the excitement and the cheers and admiration of spectators for the white-winged racers of the wind, there were a few who saw in the ocean race the last stand of sail against the encroachments of mechanical power. These few were old saltmen—men who loved tall-sparred ships and spreading canvas—men whose memories took them back to other days when the square-rigged clippers reached the acme of perfection in speed and beauty in the vain effort to stem the tide of steam. Viewing the racing fishermen, these old-timers sighed, for they felt it was the beginning of the end.

From the days of the Vikings to the era of clipper ships—Lightning, Flying Cloud, Red Jacket, Thermopylae, and Cutty Sark—fastest of canvas-driven hulls—centuries have passed, but steam swept the wind-jammers off the seas in less than eighty years. The advance of steam power in the maritime marine was rapid and irresistible; the adoption of motor propulsion in the fishing fleets is just as sure.

Less than twenty years ago we could peep from our window in some fishing port along these coasts and see the fleets slipping quietly out of the harbor for the fishing grounds just before the dawn. With sails billowing in the fresh morning breeze, they glided silently along with but the creak of a straining boom and the rattle of sheet-blocks to tell of their venturing forth. Daily, weather permitting, the white-sailed armada slipped out and in and one was scarce aware of their comings and goings. These were the days when artists revelled in such sights; when the galleries were full of "marines" and the fishing fleets afforded rare material for the play of shadows in calm waters or the lift of white sails against blue, cloud-flecked skies; when writers told of skills and smacks plunging home close-reefed or full-sailed with clear-eyed fishing skippers twirling their wheels and squinting to windward, or dilated upon the sudden squalls which called for heroic efforts to prevent being jammed down or cast away on a dread lee shore. And around the wharves of a summer's afternoon one entered an atmosphere of Norway tar, of hemp and masts, of canvas and marine-spike seamanship, of needles and palms, of blocks and booms, and language full-blooded nautical in "beating to windward," "giving her the sheet" and "snugging her down."

But in these modern days one may sleep in the same old sea-port house and be rudely awakened at an early hour by the roaring of un-muffled exhausts—a drum-fire of thunderous sound magnified by the echoing wharves and harbor buildings. A glance from the window will reveal the fleet plunging-out to the grounds in the teeth of a "dead muzzler"—a flotilla of lean rakish craft, mastless and yawning out to sea, the talk of the fishermen is mechanically flavored and impregnated with "timers and magnetos," "spark plugs and batteries," "revolutions and cup-grease," "lubricants and piston rings." Their very oilskins are stained with grease and oil and in their hands one sees the motor-wrench and the squirt-gun rather than the marine-spike and palm of other days. "Good-bye, Romance!" one murmurs regretfully and to an old-timer, lazily smoking his pipe over a spill, we turn for sympathy. "The sailing days" he grumbles between the puffing. "They was alright in their way, but these here things—" he indicates the mastless motor boats—"are a dang sight better'n any of 'em."

This hereby left us speechless. Had our man been one of the modern school his opinion would have been acceptable, but the very appearance of him was trade-marked "raised in sail." Those faded blue eyes encircled by a net-work of wrinkles were of the man who habitually glanced to windward for weather and wind; his calloused hands were more fitted for hauling on hal-lard and sheet and his fingers for hooking into rebellious canvas. "Ye see, Mister," he vouchsafed kindly, "the motor engine has made work a lot easier for us fishermen. We can make for the grounds in calms and head winds. In the sail-boat we had to pull an oar or wait for a breeze or beat to windward. The engine has done away with all the hard work of a sail boat and we don't have to care a cuss whether it's calm or blowin'—we kin-

Opposes Medical Ethics.

(New York Times.)
Health Commissioner Royal S. Copeland, condemning the "code of ethics" of the medical profession, recently said that publicly, if properly given, "would wipe disease off the face of the earth."
Speaking at the bi-weekly luncheon of the Advertising Club at 46 East Twenty-fifth Street, Dr. Copeland said that sometimes he "thanks God that he is not a member of the Academy of Medicine." Inasmuch as he would then have to remain silent about disease and its cure.
As soon as the public, through the newspapers, had learned of Dr. Lorenz's arrival and the fact that he could cure paralysis, 35,000 persons flocked to him, said Dr. Copeland, to receive his counsel and treatment. There were other surgeons in New York just as capable as the Viennese physician, but they never made known to the public that they could cure paralysis, and so the people remained in ignorance, the Health Commissioner said.
"There is something wrong with the system that makes it impossible for the sick or crippled person to know that he can be healed. And the fault is with the medical profession, which has been unwilling to advertise what it can do."
"Dr. Lorenz did not bring with him any greater ability than at least twenty surgeons in this city possess. It was because our doctors or our methods did not bring home to the people what can be done that we went to the distinguished foreigner to hear what he could tell us."
"Here we come to the problem of advertising," he said. "The medical profession, through the ages, has chosen to make itself a secret thing. The doctor has been looked upon as a sort of a miracle man. He has hidden his wisdom behind a veil of silence. An air of mystery has surrounded the profession and we have developed a code of ethics. This, I believe, is the most antiquated, moss covered and germ laden institution in the world!"
He said that if the public were given more information about cancer the disease would never reach the cancerous stage. A woman who has a tumor, he said, usually keeps the fact hidden until it develops into a cancer, when it is too late. Any cancer, said Commissioner Copeland, is curable in the beginning. The public must be taught that, he said.
Commissioner Copeland in referring to accident and health hazards in industry asserted that "a man who works with his hands should have just as much chance for long life as John D. Rockefeller."

Wonders of the Deepest Seas.

Over a hundred million miles in extent, or more than half of the earth's surface, the deep-sea bed is one of the places in the world which human life has never reached, for away down there it would be crushed out of existence.
The average depth of the ocean is two and a half miles. In places there are "deeps" which are over six miles below the surface, and would completely swallow Mount Everest, the world's highest mountain.
There is an enormous pressure from the weight of water at these depths. The deeper one goes the greater is the pressure. At 2,500 fathoms it is two and a half tons on the square inch, or twenty-five times greater than the pressure exerted by the steam on the piston of our best railway locomotives.
Six Miles Down.
How great this pressure is may be judged better by the fact that if a ship's hawser is sunk to a considerable depth it is squeezed to less than the diameter of one's wrist, while if a piece of wood is weighted and sunk to the same depth it is so much compressed that it will no longer float when brought to the surface again.
Up to the nineteenth century comparatively nothing was known about the ocean-bed. In 1850 Edward Forbes, a great British naturalist, declared his belief that there were no living animals below 300 fathoms—that is, 600 yards.
Since then it has been discovered that there is life far deeper—life has been found over three miles down! The general reason why the pressure is not felt by deep-sea creatures is that the bodies and tissues are permeated by the water.
The discovery that there was life was made as the result of an accident. A submarine cable broke, and when the ends were brought up they were found encrusted with several different kinds of creatures.
The sequel to this find was that an expedition was sent out on the Challenger to investigate. This was done during the year 1872 and 1876, and it was by the records of that work that many of the mysteries of the deepest seas were solved.
Science now declares that there are no depth-limits to life. There are more animals at the more moderate depths, but whereas the long arm of the dredge has reached it has brought up living creatures.
But what is the sea-bed like? It is probably the most monotonous place imaginable. There is no scenery, but a succession of dreary undulations like sand-dunes. There are no plants; what the animals eat on may be dead vegetable matter washed from the coast belts, or dead animal matter that has sunk from the surface.
Falling Upwards.
As well as being most monotonous, the sea-bed is very cold, absolutely soundless and dark—eternal winter, eternal night, and eternal silence.
It is cold because the sun's heat is practically lost at about 150 fathoms, and there is always cold water coming from the Poles. Rays of light reach a depth of 500 fathoms, but it is nearly dark at 250 fathoms. There are faint gleams of phosphorescent light, but these are negligible, and only accentuate the gloom. It is said there is a deep-sea fish which has luminous plates just under its eyes, one red and one green, and by turning these on it is aided in its search for prey!
Perhaps the greatest puzzle of the deeps is that, because of the pressure, deep-sea creatures are liable to the identical to which no other animal in the world is liable—that of tumbling up!
Most fishes, writes Professor J. Arthur Thomson in "The Haunts of Life" (Melrose), have a bladder containing gas which enables the fish to accommodate itself to various depths. But if the change takes place too quickly the fish is liable to come to the surface, usually dead, with its body greatly distended and sometimes split open.

Hard Times and Fires.

INSURANCE COMPANIES FIND THAT MORAL HAZARD IS SERIOUS.

Would this ever have occurred to you? Fire insurance people know in advance the lines of business in which there are to be an excessive number of failures. How? Their records show that, when things are moving towards disaster in any line of business, the number of fires in that particular line increases inordinately. A Hartford fire insurance official tells me that their records on this score are tremendously interesting. They watch most keenly daily records of fires, classify and tabulate them carefully analyze them thoroughly and learn a lot from them.
Fire losses in New York last year reached $40,000,000, against $25,000,000 in 1920 and a good deal less in 1919. The losses are amounting to new maximum figures every day. The records clearly reveal that when prices of all merchandise were advancing, fires were few. Since prices began to fall, fires, like failures, have multiplied.
"We sometimes boast of how far our business morals have been raised above former standards," comments B. C. Forbes in Forbes magazine, "but evidently the millennium is not yet with us."

Rushing to Invest.

Money is cheap in England, writes the Financial Editor of the Montreal Standard, and people are rushing to invest in sound stocks, says a London report. The Lanarkshire County Council tried to borrow £2,500,000 at 5 1/2 per cent, and in two hours it was offered £40,000,000. Bristol needed £1,000,000, and was offered £14,000,000. Since the New Year opened there have been new issues of capital totalling nearly £12,000,000 in nominal value. Every issue was oversubscribed, and it is estimated that at least £80,000,000 altogether was offered to the would-be borrowers. All the fortunate members of the Stock Exchange who shared in the undersubscribing of these issues are walking about with pleased smiles on their faces, for between them they have shared more than £150,000 for doing nothing but take the risk of having to subscribe for the stock they underwrote. The report says that the main cause of the heavy subscriptions is the fact that money is cheap. Trade and industry are not using their

No Synthetic Gold.

Production Expense Would Make Commercial Use Impossible.
In answer to press reports that synthetic gold has been discovered, the States Geological Survey has announced that the effect of the discovery of utility of gold as a measure of value and a basis of currency.
While modern chemistry has shown that some of the supposed elements are really compounds that might be divided into simpler substances, special chemical processes, though it is unsafe to state positively, it is possible, yet if any process were found it would very probably be unproductive and difficult to obtain the product will be more expensive than the natural metal.

Would Get Down Price.

Halifax city council has voted against the city's taking over the St. Margaret's Bay hydro power by the latest contract offered by the Hydro Commission. A resolution was passed to offer the power commission to buy from 18,000,000 to 20,000,000 k.w.h. of power per year at not more than one cent per k.w.h.
In Rome a convention is to be held shortly to reform the calendar. Quite right, and above all things let something be devised to stop the speed limit of the darned thing when a note is in the offing.

Wonders of the Deepest Seas.

Over a hundred million miles in extent, or more than half of the earth's surface, the deep-sea bed is one of the places in the world which human life has never reached, for away down there it would be crushed out of existence.
The average depth of the ocean is two and a half miles. In places there are "deeps" which are over six miles below the surface, and would completely swallow Mount Everest, the world's highest mountain.
There is an enormous pressure from the weight of water at these depths. The deeper one goes the greater is the pressure. At 2,500 fathoms it is two and a half tons on the square inch, or twenty-five times greater than the pressure exerted by the steam on the piston of our best railway locomotives.
Six Miles Down.
How great this pressure is may be judged better by the fact that if a ship's hawser is sunk to a considerable depth it is squeezed to less than the diameter of one's wrist, while if a piece of wood is weighted and sunk to the same depth it is so much compressed that it will no longer float when brought to the surface again.
Up to the nineteenth century comparatively nothing was known about the ocean-bed. In 1850 Edward Forbes, a great British naturalist, declared his belief that there were no living animals below 300 fathoms—that is, 600 yards.
Since then it has been discovered that there is life far deeper—life has been found over three miles down! The general reason why the pressure is not felt by deep-sea creatures is that the bodies and tissues are permeated by the water.
The discovery that there was life was made as the result of an accident. A submarine cable broke, and when the ends were brought up they were found encrusted with several different kinds of creatures.
The sequel to this find was that an expedition was sent out on the Challenger to investigate. This was done during the year 1872 and 1876, and it was by the records of that work that many of the mysteries of the deepest seas were solved.
Science now declares that there are no depth-limits to life. There are more animals at the more moderate depths, but whereas the long arm of the dredge has reached it has brought up living creatures.
But what is the sea-bed like? It is probably the most monotonous place imaginable. There is no scenery, but a succession of dreary undulations like sand-dunes. There are no plants; what the animals eat on may be dead vegetable matter washed from the coast belts, or dead animal matter that has sunk from the surface.
Falling Upwards.
As well as being most monotonous, the sea-bed is very cold, absolutely soundless and dark—eternal winter, eternal night, and eternal silence.
It is cold because the sun's heat is practically lost at about 150 fathoms, and there is always cold water coming from the Poles. Rays of light reach a depth of 500 fathoms, but it is nearly dark at 250 fathoms. There are faint gleams of phosphorescent light, but these are negligible, and only accentuate the gloom. It is said there is a deep-sea fish which has luminous plates just under its eyes, one red and one green, and by turning these on it is aided in its search for prey!
Perhaps the greatest puzzle of the deeps is that, because of the pressure, deep-sea creatures are liable to the identical to which no other animal in the world is liable—that of tumbling up!
Most fishes, writes Professor J. Arthur Thomson in "The Haunts of Life" (Melrose), have a bladder containing gas which enables the fish to accommodate itself to various depths. But if the change takes place too quickly the fish is liable to come to the surface, usually dead, with its body greatly distended and sometimes split open.

THE WOMAN WHO KNOWS.

"How in a woman should know about her husband's business?"

"Is it right for a man to keep his wife in complete ignorance of the details of the business and the size of his income?"

There is something wrong with the wife who can't know about her husband's business to listen to him and to be of some service now and then.

There is a Letter Friend who writes that she did not add to her husband's business, but she was a help to him in other ways.

There are wives who don't know how to make a husband's business prosper.

The wife who tells her husband that every increase of income means just that much more for her to spend, for keeping his income a secret from his wife. Nor can one understand the husband who has an intelligent business and does not make a true helpmate of her by letting her understand enough about his business to be able to have some share in this, the dominant interest of his life.

More Truly Married.

Such natural understanding is a powerful bond between them. It makes them more truly married. It gives the wife something to think about outside the four walls of home, it makes her understand that which is so difficult for many women to understand—how hard money is to get. It puts her in a position to be an intelligent intermediary in case of her husband's serious illness. It makes it possible for her to know just where she stands in case of his death—and perhaps to protect her own interest in such a contingency.

'T WAS EVER THUS.

I wear my silk shirts and scarves, and shoes that cost twelve bones, and somewhere some poor fellow starves, and sends up anguished groans. I eat long strips of costly pie, and drink imported tea; and hungry reubens amble by, and doublets snarl at me. I ride around in my sedan, whose price was pretty steep, and pass some sore and needy man who has no place to sleep. Oh, is it right and is it just for me to ride in state, while, blinded by my smoke and dust, toils on some hapless skates? Am I a sinner when I eat, or buy a gorgeous lid, or clothe my large but shapely feet in kangaroo or kid? Would there be less of poverty, of sorrow and despair, if I should from the fishpots fee and fill a hermit's lid? I doubt it much; the wall of woe would rise from people piled, if I should let my whiskers grow and in the woods run wild. If I quit buying shirts and hats, with my spare chicken-feed, some girls in crowded city flats might lose the jobs they need. The boss would say, "There's been a slump in spangled shirts and socks, and so I show you to the dump, and say, 'you no more rocks?' It's hard to know just what to do; in this cheap vale of tears; the thing that looks all right to you, to me a frost appears.

They were as near to us as, say, planet Jupiter, or Venus, or even they were merely millions of miles away instead of billions, then we would very quickly see a change in the stars, even from one night to the next.

It is however, though an average star would cover the distance from earth to Britain—about fifty miles in a half second, none has been observed to have moved during the past 5,000 years or in all that time the forms of the groups have remained unchanged to casual observer.

A World Hike.

OUR POET TRAVELS ROUND THE WORLD.

The Telegram poet has had a dream. After eating an extraordinarily heavy supper, he went to bed, thinking of the two people who recently visited St. John's, claiming they were walking round the world, and the dream which resulted from this strange mixture of food and thought is related in the ballad which we publish below. After reading it, we were under the impression that our postmaster had a nightmare, but he will call it a dream, especially when spring is approaching. Here is the terrible fellow's own story.—Editor.

MY WORLD HIKE.

I've often thought that I would like around the good old world to hike And as the thought preceded the act I've made it an accomplished fact. I put on all my oldest clothes, And hob-nailed boots, though goodness knows, 'Tis hard enough in them to walk But I am not the one to balk At trifles such as that. Oh no. I was determined that I'd go. And being ready, off I went Nor with me took a single cent. I mapped no plan of campaign out. All that I knew was right about 'The world I'd walk, and naught would serve

To make me from my purpose swerve. So on the road to Port aux Basques I swung along. A dreadful task Before me lay. But what cared I, Determined full, to do or die. I walked to Whitbourne. There I struck A freight train. Hiding in a truck I finished off the walk in state And felt inclined to celebrate. It was not very long erewhile I'd stowed away upon the Kyle And though she rolled, I was not sick. From Louisburg I rushed away And bithely wandered on my way Through Canada, until I'd come Unto the land of chewing gum. And meeting there a journalist I said I was a socialist. Who was upon a walking tour. He spread the story on page four And I was asked to go and eat With all the great New York elite. And ere I went they left me cold By giving me a purse of gold. This helped me greatly on my way To England, where I did not stay. But swam across the English Channel A deed which will my name empanel 'Upon the glorious shrine of fame.

At last, unto fair France I came. But there my "oui" and "parlez vous" Would not pass as it used to do. When I was out in Newfoundland. The Frenchies could not understand. While as to eating frogs, Oh dear. It was a thing I could not bear. And so I wandered into Spain And for a time I did remain And made my empty purse quite full of ring.

By standing, even in a bull ring. For though I'd never tried before I made good as a matador. My wanderings took me next to Russia. For I did not stop long in Prussia.

CLINCHING THE BOLT.

It needed just an extra turn to make the bolt secure. A few more minutes on the job and then the work was sure; But he begrudged the extra turn, and when the task was through, The man was back for more repairs in just a day or two.

And when I went to Petrograd They told me I was quite a lad By dear old Trotsky I was kissed And made a blighted Bolshevik. He gave me vodka, called me brother. (Then asked me if I'd have another.) But though quite kind, I had to leave them For fear they'd find I did deceive them And so to Turkey I went straight. By dear old Trotsky I was kissed And entered through the Golden Gate. I tried quite hard to see a harem. But they would not let me go near 'em So dressed as a Mohammedan My way to Mecca I began. And there the prophet's tomb I spied I spent an hour or two in Aden Winking at every native maiden And then proceeded on my way Landing quite safely at Bombay. Of course, when once in Hindustan I had to meet the Agi Khan And also visiting Baroda. The Gaskway gave me ice cream soda. I went to Delhi, there to see The Prince of Wales received with glee. And then proceeded to Tibet A place I had not called at yet. At Lhasa (sounds like melodrama.) I was received by the Grand Lama And received a most polite salute. He sent his generalissimo In chase of me. I lost no time In leaving that unpleasant clime. My travel took me next to China A place enough to undermine a Very hardy constitution. (They're over fond of execution.) And so when safely in Hong Kong I felt like breaking into song. Next, on a dirty Chinese junk To far Japan I called on Rajah. And there had tea with the Mikado Who told me I was quite a lad-o. At last I tore myself away From him and south did wend my way. Breaking the Journey at Sarawak The land of the ferocious Dyak. I walked on next to Caracas, Lama And at the country had a look. Ere sailing on the good ship Lascar I next went on to Ethiopia And drank tea from a coracopia With the fair Empress of that land Who offered me her dusky hand In marriage if I felt inclined. I said that if she did not mind I'd rather not accept, and fled For fear she would cut off my head. I walked across the great Sahara As lightly dressed as Theba Bara In her pictures, and over due At last arrived at Timbuctoo. From there I wandered down to Free-town Which as you know is a large sea town. And there took ship for Santiago And had a short stay with the Dago. I walked on next to Caracas, Lama Made eyes at many a dark haired lass And so through Mexico I went And reached New York without a cent. I found my journalistic friend Who made my very eyes extend By saying if you want a drink All you need to do is tip the wink. I lost no time you may be sure And soon reclined upon the floor. And when I woke I was in bed At home, and with a bursting head. And oh my hat, I did blaspheme. The whole dashed thing had been a dream.

Montreal in Fear of White Slavers.

A veritable "reign of terror" is alarming Montreal's east end citizens, owing to the ever increasing boldness of white slavers, who are daily making persistent efforts to entice young girls to leave their homes for a life of immorality. Parents who are compelled to leave their daughters alone do so with the greatest reluctance, for scores of instances of strange men entering homes in which attractive girls reside with their obscene offers have been reported. In some cases, it is said, they attempt to literally kidnap their intended victims. The Committee of Sixteen, a Protestant organization appointed to cope with white slave activities, has solicited the aid of the police, who are now making an investigation. The committee has received many frantic appeals from distracted parents who believe their daughters are in danger.

What is Your Verdict!

Is it not safe to assume that the Ford Motor Company of Canada, Limited, who manufacture in their own huge perfectly equipped plant practically every part of the Ford car, are the people best qualified to make replacement parts at the lowest price compatible with the high quality which must be maintained?

Manufacturers of spurious parts, operating as they do on a small scale with limited capital and inadequate equipment, cannot possibly make parts of the same quality or accuracy at anywhere near the low price you have to pay for Genuine Ford Parts. Yet you are asked to believe that these spurious parts not only equal Genuine Ford Parts in quality but can be produced to sell for less!

We rest our case here. The verdict we leave to you.

COMBINATIONS OF COURT CARDS.

Four Aces.—When these fall together they imply danger, financial loss, separation from friends, love troubles. The evil is mitigated in proportion to the number of them that are reversed.
Three Aces.—Passing troubles relieved by good news, faithfulness of a lover. If reversed, they mean foolish excess.
Two Aces.—These mean union: if Hearts and Clubs, it will be for good; if Diamonds and Spades, for evil, probably the outcome of jealousy. If reversed, the object of the union will fail.
Four Kings.—Honours, preferment, good appointments. If reversed, the good things will be of less value, but will arrive earlier.
Three Kings.—Serious matters will be taken in hand with the best result, unless any of the three cards be reversed, when it will be doubtful.

Two Queens.—Interchanged, secrets betrayed, a meeting between friends. When both are reversed, there will be suffering for the inquirer resulting from his own acts. Only one reversed, means rivalry.
Four Knaves.—Jolly conviviality. Any of them reversed lessens the evil.
Three Knaves.—Worries and vexations from acquaintances, slander calling the inquirer's honour in question. If reversed, it foretells a passage of arms with a social inferior.
Two Knaves.—Loss of goods. If both are reversed, the trouble is imminent; if one only, it is near.
COMBINATIONS OF PLAIN CARDS.
Four Tens.—Good fortune, success. The more there are reversed, the greater number of obstacles in the way.
Three Tens.—Ruin brought about by lawsuits. When reversed, the evil is decreased.
Two Tens.—Unexpected luck, which may be connected with a change of occupation. If one be reversed, it will come soon; if both are reversed, it is distant.

Three Nines.—Health, wealth and happiness. If reversed, it means financial difficulties caused by imprudence.
Two Nines.—Prosperity and contentment accompanied by business matters. If reversed, small worries.

Fortunes in Smoke.

Have you ever realized the enormous amount of tobacco a single person will smoke in the course of a lifetime? Taking as an average fifteen cigarettes a day in fifty years, a smoker will consume 274,000—that is, well over a quarter of a million.
Now, a cigarette is roughly 2 1/4 in. long, and if we allow as the portion actually smoked, say, an even 2 1/2 in. of each of these, and place them end to end, thus making one cigarette, this would measure a little over ten miles in length.
The total cost of this tremendous cigarette, reckoning at ten of the ordinary size for sixpence, amounts to £670.
This means that if a non-smoker put away all the cash he saved by not smoking, by the time he was drawing his old-age pension he would be in a position to purchase a comfortable house or a nice motor-car.
A pipe smoker is, on the whole, a little more moderate than his cigarette-smoking brother; but if we delivered to him a quarter of a ton of tobacco at the commencement of his fifty years of smoking life, and he puffed away at the rate of half an ounce a day, we should find he had just about exhausted his stock at the end of that period, and the cash expended in the process at, say, one shilling per ounce, would be about £450.

Speaking 300 Languages

Three hundred languages and dialects. That is the latest record in the mastery of languages, and it is claimed by a woman.
Miss Werner—the lady in question—is a Fellow of Newnham College, Cambridge, and Professor of Swahili at the East African language—of the School of Oriental Studies, London. She is the foremost living authority on African languages. In addition, she converses fluently in French, German, Italian, and Dutch, and is able to read Spanish, Portuguese, and Swedish.
She considers Zulu to be the most difficult of any language to master—consisting, as it does, of a riot of cluckings, clicks, poptings and hissing. One commonly used Zulu word has three separate "kiss" sounds in it. Another, when uttered, resembles the consecutive uncorking of four champagne bottles—a series of pops followed by hissing noises.
Next to Miss Werner as a master of languages comes Mr. Jeremiah Curtin, the translator of "Que Vadis," who died in 1906. His record was seventy different speeches and dialects.

The Passion Play at Oberammergau.

The Passion Play of 1922, in common with its nearer predecessors, will be seen to follow many well-known paintings of the scenes portrayed; some of the episodes, indeed, are but momentary pictures. The action is in eighteen scenes from the New Testament narrative, interspersed and illustrated with some twenty-five tableaux from the Old Testament; thus, Cain is the prototype for Judas, Isaac for the cross-bearer, Joseph sold by his brethren for Jesus betrayed for thirty pieces of silver, the feeding of Israel with manna from heaven for the Last Supper.
A chorus sings before each important scene the substance of what is to follow. The three-minute tableaux engage 400 or more persons in rapidly forming groups, with often 100 serious children who stand motionless as their elders, as those have testified who watched them through a field glass. The scenes are made vivid as on no other "stage" in the world through the fact that they take place under the open sky, as if in actual life. As Stoddard wrote "The lights and shadows of the clouds fell on the form suspended on the cross. The breeze stirred the mantle of the weeping mother. The birds flew above, singing joyously, much as they did perhaps on Calvary."
In the land of "Verboten," no dancing is permitted by the village during the Summer of the play. The entire population gives its time to caring for Oberammergau's guests. The 276 houses offer hospitality to the extent, as officially stated, of 3,200 beds, 300 sofas, 1,500 clean straw mattresses on floors, while peasant pilgrims from near by often bring their own, and rich folk from afar speed away to the cities at twilight after witnessing the play, "It is to be feared," wrote a British visitor to the play as long ago as 1880, "that the concourse of fashionable visitors who now flock to the performance will gradually have the effect of impairing its genuineness and simplicity."
That has not, according to other observers, been the result thus far. The town still is obscure, buried in its own humble and unheralded affairs from one decade to another. It only shows briefly: "Road forks right to Oberammergau, 2,750 feet above sea; celebrated for the Passion Play performed here every tenth year (next in—); wood and ivory carving the chief occupations of the inhabitants." The adjacent mountain is referred to as "the Kofel, 4,405 feet, a fatiguing climb," while the Ammer Valley below Murnau, noting the new electric railway, is referred to as "monotonous" though visitors agree the upper valley's background of hills is superb.
The festival once recently brought $250,000 to Oberammergau, half of which went to pay for building the great wooden theatre, staging the play and buying materials for costumes, designed and made by the artists to work themselves. Part of the money later was voted for village improvements, for church and poor funds and for nominal pay of the 700 actors, stagehands, firemen and others. "Christus" Lang received $200 for his Summer of twenty weeks in the chief role. The highest paid man in the coming festival will get $400 "as the mark stood before the recent tumble"—N.Y. Times.

Vaudeville and Pictures at the Crescent.

EDDIE MCGINLEY PRESENTS GOOD VARIETY ACT.

The large numbers who wended their way to the Crescent Theatre last night were certainly not disappointed as they got all the humor and amusement they were looking for. Eddie McGinley, the popular comedian was in good trim, and had them all rocking with laughter with his splendid variety of comic turns. He specializes in characteristic comic diversity as was clearly proven by last night's programme. Eddie opened up with a catchy ballad, entitled "My Little Bimble," which was followed by comic songs and jokes. His recitation on the "Halfway Air Mail" was a regular corker and caused roars of laughter. This is one of Eddie's own compositions and is worthy of much praise. The closing number was a very funny parody on "Marie," entitled "Flat Island Moonshine." The above bill will be repeated to-night.

The Anglo-Irish Peace Negotiations.

By W. J. BROWNE, B.A., B.A.Sc., Rhodes Scholar, Oxford.

It is not that the Treaty of London, which was signed by the representatives of Ireland in the early morning of August 6th is a final settlement of the century-old feud between the two peoples. It is to be said of the question which has dominated the political life of the island for the past two years? To the Anglo-Irish peace negotiations, which were held in London in November, 1921, and which resulted in the signing of the Treaty of London, is due the credit of having opened a new chapter in the history of the island. It is a chapter which, if it is to be a permanent one, will be a chapter of peace and prosperity for the island.

The Anglo-Irish peace negotiations were held in London in November, 1921, and resulted in the signing of the Treaty of London. The negotiations were held between the representatives of the British Government and the representatives of the Irish people. The negotiations were held in a spirit of good faith and resulted in the signing of a treaty which is a landmark in the history of the island.

place. Whenever these men were caught they would be shot at sight. Men not soldiers in the I.R.A. were on the list, the most conspicuous examples being the late Mayor of Limerick O'Callaghan and his predecessor, Clancy—both of whom were murdered the same night.

HAD OPPOSITE EFFECT.

By this rude method, which, in its details, was often of a very revolting character, the British forces tried to cow the I.R.A. into surrender. But as usually happens, they only had the opposite effect. The numbers by the I.R.A. increased in audacity and dimensions just as the terror grew. In the last days of the fighting roads were being mined all over the country so that it was never safe, night or day, for the Crown forces to pass. How much sooner Peace would have come had the mediatory efforts of Archbishop Clune of Australia been successful we cannot say; but certainly, a truce could have been arranged in December, 1920 on exactly the same terms as those agreed upon in July, 1921. For some reason he failed, and it is hard to say why the British Government reversed their attitude later.

The first sign of the change came with the sudden resignation of Mr. Bonar Law. Was this premeditated? It looks as if it were, for, more than any one else had pledged himself to protect Ulster. The Partition Act had become law so that his work, like that of Lord Carson, would be technically regarded as completed. On June 22, 1921, King George went to open the Northern Parliament in Belfast. In his Speech from the Throne for which his Cabinet Ministers took responsibility he appealed to Irishmen "to forgive and forget." Two days later, "ere the echo of the King's words could die," Mr. Lloyd George sent letters of invitation to Mr. De Valera, "the chosen leader of the great majority in Southern Ireland, and to Sir James Craig, the Premier of Northern Ireland," to attend a joint conference in London "to explore to the utmost the possibility of a settlement." Before definitely accepting Mr. De Valera invited the representatives of the Unionists, including the Northern Premier to a preliminary conference in Dublin. (This must not be confused with the mysterious visit of Sir James Craig to Dublin in June). Sir James Craig said it was impossible for him to arrange any meeting, adding that he had already accepted the Prime Minister's invitation to London. However, Mr. De Valera met four Southern Unionists—Lord Midleton, Sir Maurice Dockrell, Sir Robert Woods, and Mr. Andrew Jamson, and it was this conference which eventually arranged the truce. On July 8, Mr. De Valera wrote Mr. Lloyd George that he was ready "to meet and discuss with you on what bases such a conference as that proposed can reasonably hope to achieve the object desired."

RELEASED TO ATTEND.

At the time the purporters were used there were thirty-two Republican members in jail, whilst the others had high prices upon their heads. The Prime Minister in his letter had said that Mr. De Valera could bring with him any of his colleagues. Mr. Griffith and Mr. Barton were released and went to London with the President, and Count Plunkett and Austin Stack. A day or two later they were joined by Desmond Fitzgerald who was released from solitary confinement in the Curragh Internment Camp to take part in the diplomatic struggle. It has been stated in America that Mr. Austin Stack, who is the son of an old Fenian and famous for his having been in command of the Tralee Volunteers when Sir Roger Casement was captured there in 1916, returned home after one day because he thought the affair would end in something less than a Republic. If he did, he never said so publicly and he worked as Minister of Home Affairs up to the ratification of the Treaty. I was on the Euston platform in London the day the delegates arrived, and I shall never forget it. Thousands of the London Irish swarmed around Mr. De Valera and the other members of the unfortunate party in that untidy but enthusiastic fashion so characteristic of the Irish abroad. Only with the aid of many burly policemen could any of them get through the crowd. They became separated so that Mr. De Valera who had gained his car had to wait in a sea of photographers and ardent supporters who sought to shake his hand. He looked pale and weary—wearer than I've ever seen him. It was a hot afternoon and his hair hung clumily over his forehead.

Undergoes Annual Clean-Up.

Upon the arrival of the S.S. Portia the ship will go into dock for the annual overhauling. In the meantime it is understood that the S.S. Malakoff will take up the service as far west as Argentina, whilst the remainder of the coast will be looked after by the S.S. Meigle. The Portia will be thoroughly overhauled whilst on dock. Her passenger accommodation will also be painted and otherwise improved. The work will occupy about a month.

Dear Sir,—We beg to enclose Cheque for one hundred dollars ($100.00) as a donation to the policemen and firemen, who, under your direction so ably assisted in extinguishing the fire which started Sunday morning, February 21st, next door to our premises and which caused a large amount of damage to our building and stock and the surrounding property; but for them the damage would have been much greater. Also we wish to thank the police who watched the damaged property night and day in a very able manner and were very attentive to their duties. We leave the distribution of the money to yourself. We are, Yours sincerely,

Job and John MacFarlane play off to-night to decide the 5th play in the last round. They will be tested by the famous "outwick" shot. This afternoon and night the Jubilee Medal Fests game open to all, will be played. On Friday night the game of the season Natives vs. All-Comers will be played from 7.30, fifteen heads.

LAST LEAGUE GAME.

TERRAS DEFEAT SAINTS.

The Terra Novas defeated the Saints last night in the final game of the League Hockey Series. The score was 5 goals to 2. Very little enthusiasm was displayed over the game, which was only a fair exhibition. Bob Stiek did not turn out for the Terras. The Saints did not show any approach to the form exhibited by them when they played the Feldians. An improvement will probably be seen in the Tie-Cup Games. The Feldians have this year gone through the season unbeaten. The standing of the teams is as follows:

Goals	P	W	L	F	A	Pts
Feldians	6	6	0	42	25	12
Saints	6	2	4	19	29	4
St. Bon's	6	2	4	30	31	4
Terra Novas	6	2	4	26	32	4

SPLENDID COSTUMES AT PARADE RINK.

About 900 masqueraders attended the Carnival held last night at the Parade Rink in aid of the funds of the Dorcas and St. Vincent de Paul Societies. Some of the costumes were exceedingly novel and it was a difficult task to select the best. The prize winners were:

Ladies—1st prize, "Eria." Miss Gertrude Jackson; 2nd prize, "Princess Mary," Mrs. Louise Norman.

Gents—1st prize, "For Sale, H.M.S. Briton, Britain Rules the Waves, Shall She Rule the Mis-behaved Reformatory," won by J. Conway; 2nd prize, "Nid. Flour Mill," won by Mr. L. Norman.

Mr. Conway donated his prize to the general funds. Messrs. W. A. McKay and M. Davidson were the judges.
