Queer Bits of Information. Denmark is entirely devoid of mountains.

Greenland was so called when first discovered by an exploring party of hardy ice-handers. The sight of this green oasis amid arctic wastes was the source of much pleasant surprise.

A Calcutta paper tells of a doctor in a Bengal hospital who had a bearskin doormat. In a few days it was plucked entirely bare. Whatever ailments the patients complained of, they regarded a few hairs from the doctor's mat as more curative than the medicines he prescribed.

A somewhat peculiar Japanese industry is the production of ornaments from coal. The miners save the best and hardest pieces of coal, these being cut in many different shapes and mounted in rings, trinkets, chains, the handles of umbrellas and sticks, or other novelties.

The Highest Garden.—Queen Margherita's Alpine garden, which is situated in the highest garden in existence. It is situated near the summit of the Mt. St. Bernard, and during a tour in the Alps was selected by the Queen with a view to the cultivation of Alpine plants and lichens.

Salmon Trout for Africa.—It is proposed to introduce the brown trout, a species found in Great Britain, into some of the Central African rivers, as this fish has invariably proved a very successful colonist. A large number of the rivers in Africa seem to be in a fishless condition, but experiments have proved that trout will thrive in a previously fishless river; so it appears possible that in the future explorers in wild regions of the great Dark Continent will be enabled to breakfast off nicely grilled salmon cutlets before commencing the day's adventures.

Dakota's Wonderful Wells.—East of the Missouri River in South Dakota more than one hundred artesian wells now exist, drawing their water from the supply carried by the underlying sandstone formation, and supposed to come from the Black Hills and the Rocky Mountains. These wells, used mainly for irrigating purposes, are from five hundred to one thousand feet deep, and the pressure of water in the eastern part of the State is sufficient to give a surface flow except on the highest lands.

Japanese Shop Signs.—In Japan the majority of shops dealing in goods from other lands display signs in some foreign language, and many of these are very curious productions. The great idea is to have foreign characters, their correctness or intelligibility being a secondary consideration. The following are specimens of these remarkable notices: "The All Countries Boot and Shoe, Small or Pine Ware"; "Oh! Curious"; "Horse shoe maker instructed by French horse bee"; "Cut Hair Shop"; "If you want sell watch; if you want buy watch, I will sell. Yes, sir, we will, all well. Come to my shop. Watchmaker"; "Hats. Native Country; Automatic of Nansou Marquis"; "The House Built for the maintenance of all and best kinds of hat and caps"; "In the shop, the sign is a red devil."

The Great Wall of China.

The great wall of China was measured in many places by Mr. Uthank, an American engineer, lately engaged on a survey for a Chinese railway. His measurements give the height at eighteen feet and a width on top of fifteen feet. Every few hundred yards there is a tower twenty-four feet square and from twenty to twenty-five feet high. The foundation of the wall is of solid granite. Mr. Uthank brought a brick from the wall, which is supposed to have been made two hundred years before the time of Christ. In building this immense stone fence to keep out the Tartars the builders never attempted to avoid mountains or chasms to save expense. For thirteen hundred miles that wall goes over plain and mountain, and every foot of the foundation is in solid granite, and in some places the wall is built smooth up against the bank of canyons, or precipices, where there is a sheer descent of 1,000 feet. Small streams are arched over, but in the larger streams the wall follows the water's edge, and a tower is built on each side. On the top of the wall are breast-works or defences, facing in and out, so the defending forces can pass from one tower to another without being exposed to the enemy from either side. To calculate the time of building or cost of this wall is beyond human skill. So far as the magnitude of the work is concerned, it surpasses anything in the ancient or modern times of which there is any trace. The pyramids of Egypt are nothing compared to it.

The Crow.

If you never saw a crow about the third week of his existence, you do not know how homely anything can be and live. Its body looks like the big end of a crook-necked squash, and is nearly as destitute of feathers; while its mouth is big enough to swallow another crow twice as large as itself. This ungainly specimen of helplessness is fitted out with a never-failing appetite and keeps its three parents diligently engaged in bringing supplies of fish, flesh, fowl, insects, corn, potatoes and so on. The principal business of the crow at certain seasons of the year is raising corn. This is generally in the spring, soon after it has been planted. A family of crows will sometimes raise all the corn a farmer and his two boys can plant. This of course gives the farmer great satisfaction, as it saves him the trouble of harvesting his crop in the fall. Indeed, he is so well pleased that when he finds a nest of crows, he often decorates his cornfield with them, as people decorate their rooms with crows.

Crows cut their wisdom-teeth early and it is about as easy to get a rich man to head a subscription, as it is to fool a crow.

If you go out with a gun thinking to creep upon one of these bipeds, you are liable to find that instead of making game of the crow, he is making game of you. He has a "no you don't!" expression about him, and although he walks as if he had on new boots and rolls like a young sailor home from his first voyage, he feels as smart as a college student. Nothing suits him better than to poke fun at the big-eyed owl. When one of these slow-going birds attempts to introduce himself to a company of crows, he becomes at once an object of ridicule. The black-coated chaps gather from all quarters and bob bob, at the owl's great eyes, cackle, at his crooked nose and make speeches about the feather-trimmings on his legs and feet. The owl, meanwhile, with undisturbed gravity, looks around unable to understand what the crows are making such a fuss about.

In completion the crow shades on the 15th amendment; the cautious naturalist from whom I am copying this, says, "It is generally black," so we will let it go that way until someone shows us a white one.

In completion the crow shades on the 15th amendment; the cautious naturalist from whom I am copying this, says, "It is generally black," so we will let it go that way until someone shows us a white one. Crows (and not crows alone) are more admired for their glossy, nice fitting garments, than for other qualities, hence a stuffed crow is more desirable than one that is fond of stuffing himself. About election time, crows hold large conventions and are as disorderly as a town meeting, they appear to have no more idea of parliamentary rules than a lot of congressmen. These are the principal facts relating to this somewhat unpopular branch of the Corvus family; should you desire other particulars, we should recommend the study of crow-knowledge.

The Undeserted Village.

(Written for Greetings.) Sweet Pennfield! loveliest village of the plain, Where pop and lager cheered the sorrowing swain, Who after dark his earliest visit paid, And often after dawn his leave delayed; Dear, lovely front gate of innocence and ease, Seat of my youth, when every girl could please, How often have I loitered o'er thy street, To dodge the girl I didn't want to meet. How often have I passed on every charm; The sheltered bar where it was nice and warm, The always falling brook, the played-out mill, The other bar-room on the neighboring hill. The hand-organ that stood beneath the shade, The wicked man that that hand-organ played! How often have I blessed the closing day, When hearts were trumps and my turn came to play; And all the village sports soon after tea, Brought out the pack beneath the spreading tree, When all the face cards in the pack were played, The young chaps cussed the luck, and old chaps prayed; And many a bottle frolicked o'er the ground, And mugs of beer and mugs of ale went round; And still as each repeated bottle tired, Succeeding mugs the nuptial band inspired; The dancing pair, that to the banjo's tune, On the plank sidewalk danced the Juba down; The chap mistrustful of his pilfered ace, The rogue who put the two spot in its place; And tried before our very eyes the Jack to shove; His partners' grin that would that ace remove;— Those were thy charms, sweet Pennfield sports like those. Seldom took place without a broken rose, Sweet was the sound, when oft at evening's close, On yonder roof the tom-cat chorus rose; There as I passed, like feathers of the dove The hair and claws fell softly from above;— The boy responsive to the woodshed switch; The bell-frog hand that warbled in the ditch; The watch-dog's bark that scares the youth away, His true-loves laugh that coaxes him to stay; The servant girl that gabbles in the door, The other chap that swears he'll have his gore;— These all, in sweet confusion, sought the shade, And filled each pause the hand-organ had made. —Oliver Blacksmith.

The Maligned Moose.

The Norte American moose seems to be a paradox among the animals that inhabit this continent. Anatomically it seems to belong to some remote geological age far back as the days of the mammoth and mastodon and the great Irish elk, all of which became extinct before historical times. Its forelegs are so long and its neck so short and stout that a specimen would starve to death if turned into an ordinary cow pasture to get a living. As it is beyond question the largest land animal known to America, and, therefore, seemingly distressed at all times to find food enough to sustain life, the logical inference is that the moose would have starved during the great ice age. But hunters and naturalists who study the habits of wild creatures find moose abundant not in tropical forests, where all vegetation grows rankly, and not in the fertile prairies, where food is luxuriant and abundant, but among the cold and barren hills of the north, where snow covers the ground deeply for half the year, and where the semitropic moose of the summer season becomes a creature which struts the frozen back from hardwood trees with its teeth, and feeding thus survives weeks of zero weather and fierce winter storms, and comes into spring in better condition than his more active deer or caribou. More than this, experience in game protection in Maine for the past 20 years demonstrated that the moose responds far more readily to protective measures than the caribou, and reproduces its kind as rapidly as a deer.

A HUNTER'S OBSERVATION. A number of experienced hunters and woodsmen were discussing the habits of the three large game animals of Maine one evening before the open fire in Luther Gerrish's sporting camp at North Twin, a mile up the railroad from Norcross, in the State of New York, a famous hunter of the Maine woods for more than 60 years, astonished the company by declaring vehemently that no moose was ever known to "tree" a man in the sense which the term is accepted by sportsmen. "In my day," said Mr. York, "I have seen thousands of moose and killed more than a hundred of them. I have followed them day and nights, in summer and winter; I have watched them for days to learn their tricks; I have kept them in fenced inclosures, near my camp for years at a time; I have tamed them and driven them to harness all along the lakes of the West Branch; more than this, I have questioned reliable hunters and woodsmen who were alive and in active business in the woods where moose were as plentiful in Maine as beehives are now; and the result of all my study is that I have never known a person to be treed by a moose or met any reliable person who has ever known a person to be driven up a tree by a moose.

"Beyond question, during the love-making season the bulls act very strangely by rushing about in an aimless manner climbing steep hills, swimming furious streams, and placing themselves in peril of their lives in many ways. While

THEY FOR COMBAT is on an old bull, it will crash through the woods, running its head against boulders and trees and often injuring itself seriously. No doubt, if a man stood in the path of a big bull at such a time he would be humped over and perhaps wounded seriously, but no love-sick moose on such occasions ever stops to note the damage it has done; it continues on its headlong career until exhausted or until the means rival or the object of its affections.

"The stories the guides tell about bull moose driving hunters into trees and standing guard all night, pawing the ground and bellowing with wrath are inventions of nature's fakirs, who strive to awe greenhorns. I am convinced that no moose ever deliberately attack a man, unless wounded to death, when the meekest of creatures become irascible; and whoever relates a tale of a moose driving a man into a tree or under any circumstances is drawing heavily upon his imagination.

"I have seen two bull moose fight until I came within a few rods of them and I watched the conflict for perhaps half an hour before either animal knew of my presence. At other times I have paddled up to a mother moose when she was feeding on the roots of pond lilies with her head under the water, and drawn off a half pint of rich and warm milk without giving her cause for alarm. I have seen moose fight with wolves and bears, and have noticed their extreme solicitude for their young, but I have yet to see a moose that has treed any human being or attempted to.

TREE A HUMAN BEING. "In this connection I wish to say that in my belief there is no efficacy in the much advertised 'moose horn' for calling bull moose to their destruction. The cow moose utters a long and dolorous wail at times, whether the season is that of love making or feeding; I have been close at hand several times when the cows have made such cries, but never saw a bull moose respond, though I have waited for hours. All through the mating season the bull moose are very alert to catch the slightest sound, and as soon as a twig snaps, or an axe handle beats a tattoo on a hollow stub, the bull dashes away in the direction of the sound, giving out his challenges as if envying to combat. "I have used the birch bark horn with success in calling bull moose, but I have been equally fortunate by rapping the butt of my rifle stock against a tree, or breaking dead twigs in a thicket. It is my belief that the dominant passion in the mind of a bull moose in love making time is to meet and vanquish every rival, and that the dolorous cry of the cow neither attracts nor repels the male."

About Pocahontas.

According to an English paper, a Mr. Tucker of Northfleet is the custodian of some alien bones found in an old burial ground at Gravesend, and appears to have "reconstructed" there of those same bones an animal that was extremely rare. "One sincerely trusts there may be no occasion for sickly smiling, after the precedent of the Stanialaus, but the question what bones these are is being discussed with gentle sarcasms. Mr. Tucker is assured by a London phrenologist that the skull is that of an Indian woman, and he feels sure the Indian woman was poor Pocahontas—who died at Gravesend in 1616. But the register of St. George's Church has a record, in that year to the effect that, on May 21, "Rebecca Wrothe, wyff of Thomas Wrothe, gent., a Virginian lady borne, was buried in a chancel." and Canon Gedge, the rector, is living in hopes of a memorial window from the Pocahontas Tercentenary Committee. "Wrothe" stands for "Rolfe," it is said—the Princess's married name; moreover, the old burial ground was never used after 1547. But Mr. Gedge is sweetly reasonable with his rival. "If the age of the bones can be established, and assuming the expert"—the phrenologist—"to be right in his opinion, then the mystery will be ended. For Princess Pocahontas was, of course, the only red woman living in England at the beginning of the seventeenth century." If the age of the bones can be established, quite so. Little points like that make all the difference between a memorial window and a penny gaff.

Lumber Market in Bad Shape.

If the statement of the Maritime Merchant is correct, as that paper's statements usually are, people engaged in the timber trade feel blue at the present moment. Not only in England, but in the United States the market seems to be demoralized, and there is no expectation that the state of affairs will improve for at least six months. Liverpool reports business there difficult and unsatisfactory. The imports of Nova Scotia and New Brunswick deals into Liverpool and Manchester continue to be heavy, and stocks have further increased, and now amount to about 43,000 standards, which is very excessive. Prices have declined, and as the market requires much relief, it is desirable that shipments should be curtailed as much as possible. In birch, however, the situation is a little more encouraging than in spruce and pine. Building operations have been curtailed on the other side, as few new contracts are being entered into, and since winter is coming on, it is impossible that a very heavy demand will be occasioned there for some time to come. Operators will have to reduce their cut the coming winter very much and the expense of operating will be heavy this year on account of high prices of supplies.

Don't Betray Confidences

How few people there are who know how to keep a confidence made to them in the true sense of the word! They frequently forget the fundamental principle of the whole idea, which is this: Have no desire to tell it to another person. So much can be done to betray confidences by a person dropping into hints and innuendoes without once breaking his compact to the letter, but only in the spirit, says "Home Notes." What a valuable point to have in your reputation—that you are a perfectly safe person to whom to intrust a secret! Remember when you are inclined to pass a confidence to a bosom friend, however much she may want to hear it, she will remember the fact against you when she wants to confide in you that, as you are capable of breaking your bond with one friend, so you can do it with another, perhaps herself, next time.

Ottawa, Sept. 16.—(Special).—For several months of the fiscal year ending July 31, the total immigration to Canada was 153,696, compared with 116,392 for the same time last year. This is an increase of 37,304. By ocean ports the immigration was 126,458, an increase of 39,820. From the United States 27,238, a decrease of 2,516. "Let me kiss those tears away!" he begged tenderly. She fell for it, and he was busy for the next 15 minutes. And yet the tears flowed on. "Can nothing stop them?" he asked, breathlessly. "No," she murmured. "It's my fever, you know. But go on with the treatment." —Cleveland Leader.

BRITAIN'S SHIPPING

Increase in the Number of British Seamen.

In two years the number of people engaged in the navigation of ships registered in the United Kingdom has increased by more than 100,000. Last year reached a total of over 170,000. The tonnage in actual employment rose in the same time from 10,375,000 to 11,035,000, and it is satisfactory to know that in the meantime the number of British seamen has more than held its own.

GIRLS SHOULD HAVE NO SECRETS FROM THEIR MOTHERS

"Be kind to thy mother, for when thou wast young, who loved thee as fondly as she?" Most girls learn this little rhyme in youth, but how many remember to act up to it later on in life? And yet it is a girl's duty to be kind to her mother as long as that mother lives, and after a mother is dead, a daughter cannot have a more comforting consolation than the knowledge that she was always kind to the one who simply must have been kind to her in her early years.

A mother is a very precious possession, says Woman's Life; more precious to a girl than a father, for to the one she can go with her troubles and worries, but not to the other.

And yet, strange to say, girls are in the habit of hiding a great deal from their mothers. Now a girl should hide nothing from her mother; she should go to her with everything. It would surprise a large number of girls if they knew how easily a mother can smooth away any little trouble or cross. Her experience enables her to do this for a girl, yet too many girls, in their wisdom, which is but another name for foolishness, believe their mothers to be incapable of helping them. The girl is unkind to her mother who so believes. Of course, it is difficult to get a girl to realize that her mother is a far wiser person than she is herself. In these times too many daughters get the idea into their heads that mothers are old-fashioned, quite behind the times in fact, and are therefore ignorant of up-to-date ways and methods.

Girls who let their thoughts run in such directions have very little mental capacity.

Why won't girls trust their mothers? A number of girls pass through wretched weeks and months by reason of some trifling thing, which they have magnified into huge proportions. If only they had full trust in their mothers the latter could bring sunshine into their lives by just a few words, in all likelihood; but being ignorant of what is troubling a daughter, why, it is quite impossible for a daughter to get aid from her mother.

If a girl is wise she will always take her mother into her confidence, and tell her of every little happening in her life, even to little affairs of the heart, although most girls are averse to telling mothers about love matters. But that is stupid. A mother has been in love herself; she knows what it means; she will always be ready to sympathize with, and, if possible, help a daughter who has any little love affair, and is troubled over it. For a girl cannot have an affair of the heart and not at the same time be troubled about it--doubts may arise; she may wonder if she is doing right to encourage a certain young man's advances. Now, her mother could tell her what to do in a few minutes; a question or two would let a practical mother know what sort of a person the youth was, and if a girl would be doing right to give him her love. Of course it is a delicate matter going to a mother and telling her all about a new found lover, but I find that if a girl cannot tell her mother all about her love affairs there is something wrong. Mother and daughter cannot, under the circumstances, stand toward each other as mother and daughter should.

There are happenings in the life of the ordinary girl which demand the calling in of a confidant. Can a better one be found than a mother? Yet, and it's a strange thing, a girl will confide in anyone almost rather than in her mother, and I am quite sure that many girls have laid up much misery for themselves by going to outsiders for advice when they should have gone straight to their mothers.

Girls should always remember that mother is the one to go to, no matter what happens.

Salt cleanses the palate and furred tongue, and a gargle of salt and water is often efficacious. A pinch of salt on the tongue followed ten minutes after by a drink of cold water often cures a sick headache. Salt hardens the gums, makes the teeth white and sweetens the breath. Salt water and alcohol in solution should be used for rubbing weak ankles. Salt in warm water is useful for bathing tired eyes, will be found very refreshing.

The Eyebrows

To every fifty women who worry themselves over their hair, there is only about one who gives a second thought to her eyebrows; and it is only when she notices how scanty and poor they are, becoming that she begins to wonder at the change in her appearance.

Very few people have perfect eyebrows; some are too thick, others the reverse; while the brows of many meet over the bridge of the nose, giving an expression far from pleasing. Some eyebrows have a way of terminating abruptly, instead of tapering off, and this is by no means attractive, as it imparts a look of hardness to an otherwise pleasant face, and is not quite kind to the owner.

A great deal may be done to improve the eyebrows. In the first place they can be made smooth and fine by the daily use of a tiny brush, and also a fine small comb.

A young friend of mine, who has a pair of eyebrows of which any girl might be proud, possesses and uses these small toilet requisites every day as regularly as she dresses her hair, and I would advise every girl and woman to do likewise.

Occasionally a little vaseline may be applied, and this should be done at night. Those whose brows are very fair will find that the vaseline will slowly but surely darken them. Coconut oil will serve the same purpose, if rubbed into the roots every night.

Some people get into the habit of rubbing their eyebrows in a most unbecoming fashion. It is a very unwise thing to do as it causes the hair to break leaving a somewhat stubbly appearance.

A weak stomach, causing dyspepsia, a weak heart with palpitation or intermittent pulse, always means weak stomach nerves or weak heart nerves. Strengthen these inside or controlling nerves with Dr. Sloop's Restorative and see how quickly these ailments disappear. Dr. Sloop of Racine, Wis. will mail samples free. Write for them. A test will tell. Your health is certainly worth this simple trial. Sold by All Dealers.

An Example of Brevity

A member of the Cleveland bar tells of a country justice in Ohio who was fond of enjoining upon everyone in court the necessity of brevity in offering testimony in ordinary suits, says "Harpers Weekly."

On one occasion this worthy successor of Dogberry was admonishing an old man who appeared as a witness in a trifling case.

"You must not, sir," observed the justice in his most solemn manner, "use so many words. Do you understand?"

"I do, your Honor..."

"Then you must, in the fewest possible words, answer the plain and simple question whether, when you were crossing the street with the child in your arms and the express wagon was trying to pass the carriage, you saw the plaintiff on the right side and the truck on the left, and the express wagon was trying to pass the truck and the express wagon, or whether and when you saw him at all, and whether or not the carriage, truck and carriage, or either, or any two, and which of them respectively or how it was."

Don't Try to Drive Your Husband

The old proverb says: "There are three things that can be managed by coaxing--a kid glove, a fire and a man." Take my advice and never try any other method with a husband. The woman married or single, and who fights for her rights has a hard struggle, often to fail at last; while she who takes them graciously is allowed to walk off freely, if not invited to come back again.

Any married woman gifted with even a small degree of diplomacy may have her own way quite as much, if not more, than is good for her, if only she be careful always to defer to her nominal lord and master and never to allow anyone, himself, least of all, to suspect that she has been able to persuade him that her way is his own. The secret of her power lies in a nutshell--it is the power behind the throne which never asserts itself.

All men have to be ruled; indeed no man will if he knows it. The woman who is truly mistress of her household never fails to set her husband upon a pedestal and insist that all the household shall honor him as lord and master thereof.

Deference to the husband is the drop of oil which keeps the wheels of the domestic machine running smoothly.

Big Victory For Intercolonial

Montreal, Oct. 1.--The arbitrator appointed to settle the difference between the G. T. Railway and the I. C. R. have given out their award. The I. C. R. has a 99 year contract with the G. T. R. giving it running rights over the G. T. from Ste. Rose to Montreal. The I. C. R. claimed that the G. T. in violation of the terms of the contract was shipping traffic obtained on points of the G. T. R. system West of Montreal, and destined for points on the I. C. R., and otherwise than via Montreal. The arbitrator, and hold that the G. T. was guilty of breaking the contract. An according has been ordered to set the damages. The award means a big thing for the I. C. R.

A Plea for Girls

There is nothing better for a girl, sometimes, than a little hearty praise when performing household duties. Many good people whom we know act in a directly opposite manner and think nothing better than fault-finding and blame. We find sore burdens enough, bitterness and pain and hard work enough in our lives to depress us and keep us humble. A hearty word of commendation or even a look of appreciation will brighten the heart and send a girl ahead with new hope and energy and if given in the right way will do no harm. We know of girls who are really heart starved for a little praise and appreciation of the many small deeds they accomplish from day to day, and become wayward and depressed for the lack of appreciation from their parents, who really think they are using their children in a kindly manner.

Discovered

Diogenes, lantern in hand, entered the village drug store.

"Say have you anything that will cure a cold?" he asked.

"No, sir I have not," answered the pharmacist.

"Give me your hand," exclaimed Diogenes, dropping his lantern. "I have at last found an honest man."--Chicago News.

Lemons are often used as a good household medicine. They are undoubtedly excellent for biliousness. Lemons, however, should not be taken in their pure state as their acidity will injure the teeth and the lining of the stomach. The proper way is to take the juice of one lemon in a cup of water without sugar. The best time to take such a dose is before retiring.

SYNOPSIS OF Canadian North-West Homestead Regulations.

Any even numbered section of Dominion Lands in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, excepting 8 and 26, not reserved, may be homesteaded by any person who is the sole head of a family, or any male over 18 years of age, to the extent of one-quarter section of 160 acres, more or less.

Application for entry must be made in person or by the applicant at a Dominion Lands Agency or Sub-agency for the district in which the land is situated. Entry by proxy may, however, be made at an Agency on certain conditions by the father, mother, son, daughter, brother or sister of an intending homesteader.

The homesteader is required to perform the homestead duties under one of the following plans:

(1) At least six months' residence upon and cultivation of the land in each year for three years.

(2) A homesteader may, if he so desires, perform the required residence duties by living on farming land owned solely by him, not less than eighty (80) acres in extent, in the vicinity of his homestead. Joint ownership in land will not meet this requirement.

(3) If the father (or mother, if the latter is deceased) of a homesteader has permanent residence on farming land owned solely by him, not less than eighty (80) acres in extent, in the vicinity of the homestead, or upon a homestead entered for by him in the vicinity, such homesteader may perform his own residence duties by living with the father (or mother).

(4) The term "vicinity" in the two preceding paragraphs is defined as meaning not more than nine miles in a direct line, exclusive of the width of road allowances crossed in the measurement.

(5) A homesteader intending to perform his residence duties in accordance with the above while living with parents or on farming land owned by himself must notify the Agent for the district of such intention.

Six months' notice in writing must be given to the Commissioner of Dominion Lands at Ottawa, of intention to apply for patent.

"BRITANIA RULES THE WAVES."

All Canada has been deeply interested in the trial trip of the Lusitania, in which she demonstrated the fact that she is in a position to wrest the honors from Germany for continuous speed across the Atlantic. We have no doubt but that she will make the trip from Liverpool to Sandy Hook within five days, thus breaking the record.

While private concerns are turning out such magnificent steamships, the British Admiralty is busy constructing six Dreadnaughts, and Britannia's determination to rule the waves was never stronger than at the present time, and British supremacy at sea never greater. The steam turbine while in its infancy, has evidently come to stay. The Gasoline engine is also commanding attention, and the Admiralty is reported to be considering plans for a gasoline battleship with a thirty knot speed.

The "straw" counts, and the New York Evening Post recognizing this, declared that the arrival of the Lusitania in New York harbor should be an occasion of humiliation to all citizens of the United States who desire to see the Stars and Stripes restored to the place it once held among the world's fleets, when it fluttered from clipper ships in every port in the world.

The downfall of United States shipping has been so gradual that it has scarcely been noticed, but it is a downfall, and we naturally look for the cause.

As we can see them, the causes are three-fold—navigation laws which are much against competitive shipping, the increased cost of shipping materials because of the high tariff, and prohibitive duties which shut out imports and also shut in exports. The United States navigation laws were evidently framed on the theory that they would compel ship-owners to build at home.

As for the action of the tariff, an expert pointed out before the Mercantile Marine Commission that there is a difference of about 40 per cent in the cost of ship-building on account of the tariff. It is not only the steel, that forms the hollow of the vessel, that is affected in price, but every conceivable item that goes into a ship.

Without doubt it is Great Britain's free trade policy which makes British supremacy at sea possible, both in mercantile shipping and in naval might. With no burdensome restrictions such as are imposed by the fiscal system of the United States, British ship owners can go ahead with enterprise; they can encourage and develop new inventions, and lead the world in the carrying trade of the sea. At the same time it is the British system of free imports which maintained the advance of Great Britain's immense trade and commerce and makes Great Britain wealthy and able to maintain her naval supremacy.

With its present policy, the United States must continue "humiliated," as she can never expect to compete with Great Britain or even much weaker nations, in this the world's greatest industry.

As never before, the moral issue in the political events of the day, is made predominant as never before. It is character that speaks. There is not a politician today who can escape the question of character. Is he a just and true man? Is he an all the time temperate man? These and similar questions are what men ask about him, quite forestalling the question of party, or even of personal ability. Nor can we doubt that the parties of the day are themselves tried by the same measure. It is not enough that a party calls itself the party of the laboring man, or the protector of the people's interests and rights; the question remains whether it carries out its profession, lives up to its principles. There never was a day when men commonly gave less faith to mere professions of politicians, or parties, and asked more directly for the evidence of actual conduct.

Men, ambitious men, are talking. Yes; that's easy. The North Pole would have been discovered years ago, if explorers were not so anxious to get back home again in order to talk in public and private. It is feared today that some would-be political explorers are more anxious to talk about their work, and an-tipaciate the honor of it, than laboriously to do it.

From East to West political leaders have gone on their uncertain mission, reminding us of the old hunter who went bear hunting, and returning after a little without the bear explained that after following the trail for a time found it getting altogether too fresh. He who enters upon such a moral issue, will surely find it leading him face to face with most serious issues, and calling for all the manhood there is in him.

Thomas Carlyle said: "Man is born to expand every particle of strength which God Almighty has given him in doing the work he finds he is fit for; to stand up to it to the last breath of life, and do his best." Not all who are ambitious to bar political honors are fit for it, either as far as character or ability are concerned. If the constituency or community is to be represented, let the man selected represent the community.

BY THE WAY

Don't go out without your umbrella.

We are having the parade—Circus later.

We all continue to rise to the humor of the occasion.

When we have a show, don't make it a spectacle.

These terrific Oct. gales have played havoc with the autumn foliage.

Flour is away up and still rising. That means continued prosperity—consoling.

Half a crop of potatoes, and inferior in quality. Rain and rot are great automatic boosters of prices.

Our local weather prophetes have been kept busy this season, but even at short periods of speculation they have not been accurate.

The people do not appear to appreciate the need of their co-operation in order to obtain the best results in street improvements.

One of the most violent diseases while it has its run is love, but it is certainly astonishing how quickly a man or woman will recover from what was apparently a fatal attack.

There is no good reason why any organized board of charity, should direct its energies to attacking each other, when there is so much to do in ministering to the poor in one way and another.

Some young men in town are agitating for more street lamps in the suburbs. It is hard to understand this, as on some particular occasions the twinkling stars are brilliant enough. Familiarity with the country roads will obviate the necessity of more lights.

All the papers contain accounts of disasters to shipping during the big storm. We have not noticed that anything of this kind occurred in L'Etang harbor, or properly speaking, "Canada's Winter Port on the Sea." Shipping suffered in some other "winter ports."

The Union Correspondent of the Calais Advertiser in writing of political doings has this to say:—"The electors claim—and justly—that St. Stephen has no right to three representatives. True, Mr. Clark claims to represent St. George and Mr. Grimmer, Milltown, but this is all poppycock, let Milltown and St. George represent themselves. It is an impeachment on the intelligence of those two towns to say they have nobody fit to represent them. They have."

St. George always sent the best available material—candidates of the Whole people. The situation at present serves to illustrate how beautifully the rule or ruin policy can be carried out. A good many unlooked for things may happen in the next few months, but don't find fault if we lack in true hysterical fervor.

WILSON'S BEACH

Mrs. Ethelbert Savage and Miss Vivian Newman returned from a short visit to Fredericton and St. John last Wednesday.

Geo. Fairweather, St. John, is visiting his friend Arthur Calder.

The storm of last Tuesday was very severe. A great many trees were blown across the road.

Not much damage done to property in this place, excepting the chimneys on Mr. Einos' house were blown down.

Walter Henderson, Gloucester, is visiting his cousin, Alva Brown.

Mrs. J. W. Mathews and son Waldo, who have been visiting in St. John, returned to their home last Friday.

Simon Cook and his son, Thaddeus, spent Sunday in Pembroke, Me.

Mr. Fleming was in this place last week.

Miss Beckett, Woodstock, is visiting the Misses Mitchell.

Harry Tinker and Eddie Jackson, two of our popular young men, are planning to start for Vancouver this month. We are sorry to lose our boys but wish them all success.

Harold Mathews has the lumber ready to start his new house, which will be commenced soon.

Overcoats Par Excellence

It's quite an art to make an overcoat as it should be made. To have it stylish and at the same time to have it so well proportioned and at the same time to have it so well proportioned and the weight so evenly distributed that it will fit well and feel warm and comfortable without being burdensome.

For many years the makers of "BROADWAY" Clothing have excelled in this art of overcoat making and each season their garments have shown notable improvement. This year's overcoats are as near perfection as it is humanly possible for the best skill and eyes to make them. That's why we argue to get your Overcoat here.

You'll get Style
You'll get Comfort
You'll get Service
You'll save Money

It is simply a matter of pleasing your individual taste and meeting your idea of expenditure—for no matter what you select or what you pay you can't go wrong here. You're bound to get a satisfactory coat and you'll be sure to save from 25 to 30 per cent. of what you'd have to pay for as good a coat anywhere else.

LOCAL AND SPECIAL

H. McGrattan & Son's new ad. appears in this issue.

As a result of so much rain the river has the appearance of a spring freshet.

Smelts are being supplied the town by N. S. fishermen, who are making some fairly good catches in the river.

Geo. McCormick has been kept busy repairing the telephone lines, which suffered considerably from the last storm.

The telephone and telegraph service which received a shaking up during Tuesday's storm, was soon put in working order again by a competent staff of workmen.

The new paving on Main St. has been torn up in some places by heavy teams driving over it. A little care would avoid this and save the town considerable expense.

It has been suggested that the town purchase a horse for its own use. It could be used on the streets, both summer and winter and many other purposes. This suggestion would seem worth consideration.

Many of the granite firms are having a rash of work, which is unusual at this season. If orders continue coming in, there is every prospect of the mills running through the winter, without the usual shut down.

Owing to gravel on the rails, the granite train at Dyers was switched off the track Thursday the regular train could not get through and the passengers spent the night at Dyers. The track was cleared during the night and trains were running on time Friday.

There is no good reason why Penfield should not have a fair, and the people realizing this have decided on Oct. 17th as the day when this spectacular event will take place. Several years ago this was considered a very important event, and crowds attended from all parts of the country. Owing to lack of interest the officials did not deem it wise to continue, but interest has been revived, and while the notice is short, and it is perhaps late in the season, it is expected that the attendance will be large.

What might have been a fatal accident occurred on Thursday at Digbyquash. While driving along in his peddling wagon, Jas. McGarrigle was in an unaccountable way, thrown out, and rendered insensible. He was found lying in the road by a man driving along, who got assistance and had him removed to town, where on arrival Dr. Taylor was called, and dressed the injuries which were very painful. One ear was almost severed, and an ugly gash was found on the head, besides injuries to the breast and leg. Mr. McGarrigle was taken to his home at Utopia, next day, where at last accounts he was as comfortable as possible under the circumstances. His recovery will necessarily be slow.

The Government of Ontario, which has for some time prohibited the exporting from the province of pulp wood cut on crown lands until it was manufactured into paper pulp, will henceforth insert into all leases a clause prohibiting the export of pulp before it is made into paper. The same clause will be inserted in the present leases as soon as their time expires. The American who desires to make paper out of Ontario wood will have to erect his mills in that province and employ residents of Canada in its manufacture. This should tend to check the exodus of Ontario workmen, and if applied in the other provinces would go a long way towards equalizing our population with that of the United States.

The stone work at the lower bridge has been completed and most of the workmen have returned to their homes. As stated in our last issue, the work looks good, and will undoubtedly come up to the requirements of the government. It was the intention of the contractors to tear the old bridge down at once, but owing to the efforts of Mr. N. Heating and Mr. H. V. Dewar, the structure was allowed to remain—to be used by foot passengers—until the arrival of the new bridge. As a large number of the residents on the other side, as well as the workmen living on this side, would be put to great inconvenience by taking the bridge away, the government readily consented to allow it to remain, until the new structure is ready to be put on the piers, built to receive it.

Try the "hot dogs" at A. G. Brown's.

The young daughter of Mr. Archibald Warren is seriously ill.

Colin McVicar, who was so seriously injured, is slowly recovering.

Mr. Ira McConnell has bought the Leonard weir, one of the best weirs in L'Etang.

It is rumored the present keeper of Pea Point Light will resign, and that Chas. Cross of Beaver Harbor will succeed him.

Mr. W. Berry, government surveyor, was in town Tuesday. He is going over some of the crown lands with Mr. C. Fuller.

You should see the swell line of new Broadway Coats at Jas. O'Neill's. They are certainly natty.

Tuesday last while fishing at Digbyquash, C. Lord of Deer Island suddenly expired. His body was removed to his home the same day.

Broadway Clothes fit better, look better and wear better than anything you can get at the price. See the new suits and Overcoats at Jas. O'Neill's.

The great and only Sam Hughes has been saying that Mr. Borden is too modest. As Sir Hibbert Tupper also claims to be modest, the reversion to the leadership would seem to rest between Sam himself and Mr. Fowler.—Montreal Herald.

At Halifax this morning the death took place of Mrs. Mary Jane Fletcher, and mother of the wife of Mr. Justice Longley. Rev. W. R. Fletcher, a son, is pastor of the Charlotte street Baptist church, Carleton. Another son, Frederick, lives in St. John.

On complaint of Mrs. Dora Michaelson four young men of Beaver Harbor, were up before Justice McLaughlin, Saturday, on the charge of breaking windows, annoying Mrs. Michaelson and disturbing the peace generally. After hearing the evidence the Magistrate imposed a fine of $5.00 each and costs on three of the youthful culprits, the other escaping with a fine of $3.00. His Honor addressed the young men, and advised them to discontinue annoying quiet and respectable people, and if brought before him again he would impose jail sentences.

The first bridge (lower) was built about the year 1817 by Dominicus Milliken and was of a design of those days known as "on hands." This structure stood until 1847 when it was replaced by an X work truss bridge, built by Benjamin Williams. In 1872, Angus Fisher, built the present wooden bridge, which is about to be replaced by one of iron and steel. While we have at the present time engineers and builders, all graduates of colleges and technical schools, it is very doubtful that they could, with the same facilities, put together the structures that were around the falls in the old days. Those who remember the sluice that wound its way round the steep hills, and carried lumber to the "salt water" speak of the work as a feat in engineering, and as one old resident remarked, "Those were the good old days when the bridges and sluices were made of pine timber and put together to stay."

LETETE.

Capt. Levi Simpson and wife of Boston, Mass., who have been visiting here, returned home last week.

Harris McNichol and William McMahon went to Danforth, Me. a few days ago to work there this coming winter.

A successful pie-social and ice cream sale was held here in the old church on Sat. night last.

MASCARENE

Mrs. Edwards of St. John, arrived here Friday and expects to remain two weeks. She is the guest of Mrs. Arthur Henderson.

Mr. Colin McVicar who was seriously injured by the falling of some staging while repairing his weir last week is slowly improving and may be confined to his home for several weeks.

Kinsman Stewart who is working at Lubec, spent Sunday at his home and returned to his work again on Monday.

Mr. John Stewart, sup. of roads, has been busy since the recent storm of last Tuesday repairing washouts, and cutting fallen trees out of the roads. He will start this morning to make repairs on the St. John road.

The dark cloudy weather still prevails making it bad for the gathering in of the crops.

TOWN COUNCIL

The town council met in regular session Monday evening. Mayor Lawrence occupied the chair—Ald. Bogue, Murphy, Gilmor, Dewar, Craig and Goodill present. Minutes of last regular and two special meetings read and approved.

A short discussion was held over the question of where the sewer should cross on Main street. It was finally disposed of by Ald. Dewar making a motion "That the Street Com. be empowered to put a pipe across the street where they think it necessary." A petition, from the residents of Main St., asked that a sewer be laid along that street. It was moved by Ald. Dewar that the prayer of the petition be granted—sewer commencing near Boyd's Hotel. On motion of Ald. Craig it was carried that a sewer be put up Postage St.

Town Marshall's report for Sept. showed collections as follows:—

H. Price Webber, License	$12.00
Rupert Robinson	5.00
Dog Taxes	14.00
Fines	3.00
Wharfage	$6.67

Report received and filed.

The Street Com. presented a report showing those who had connected with sewers on Clinch and Carleton streets. A motion was carried that bills be sent all those who had not paid for such connections. A number of bills were presented, and after being referred to finance Com. were ordered to be paid.

The Mayor said that the Contractor for the town building had suggested some changes in the construction of the doors. Ald. Goodill moved that the architect be consulted, and if he thought changes necessary, he could recommend same. Carried.

Moved by Ald. Gilmor that the town treasurer be instructed to pay the contractor, on town hall, the sum of five hundred dollars, on instructions from the Bldg. Com., as according to contract the building must be boarded in before payment is made.

Motions that salaries of the Marshall and Town Clerk be paid were carried.

Ald. Bogue spoke on dog licenses, and thought it a hardship that persons on the outskirts of the town, who were really benefited by having a dog, should pay a tax on the animal, and suggested that some relief be granted in certain cases.

Ald. Goodill had a dog—a good one—which he considered a very useful piece of household furniture—he strongly objected to paying taxes on said dog, but would bow to the law. No action taken. Meeting adjourned.

Make Money Honestly.

This has been a great year for landing, so called great men behind prison bars. Mayors of metropolitan cities, supervisors, bank presidents, cashiers and even senators, are today wearing prison garbs, who one year ago, were leaders of men. A desire for wealth is commendable. No young man should allow himself to be discouraged nor his ambition to be dampened by the present common outcry against wealth. The opportunities which riches afford the possessor for doing good in this country are so numerous and ample that wealth, properly used, may be the means of making up the most admirable characters, while those who are inclined to depart from the path of rectitude would do so as quickly in one condition as in another. To save money and amass a fortune, if done with a proper motive, is not only a laudable ambition, but a duty. It is a duty to one's self, one's family and the community in which one lives. It is providing for old age, for calamity in business or sickness, for the means of helping the poor and relieving the oppressed. There can be no better instruction given a young man than that which impresses a true appreciation of the worth of money. Such an early impression would have saved many a man and many a family from serious misfortune, discomfort, unhappiness and even crime. The making of money and saving of money, as distinguished from the miserly love of money which is said to be the root of all evil, should be the aim of all young men who start out in life for themselves. They include habits of industry that lead to contentment and often ward off dissipation, want and future misery. It was not the gathering in of wealth that has sent so many leading men to prison, it was the unlawful manner in which they endeavored to reap their harvest. All the wealth a young man can honestly accumulate will do him more good than harm.

BEAUTIFUL THOUGHTS.

Talk hopefully to your children of life and its possibilities; you have no right to depress them because you have suffered.
Nature bids me love myself, and hate all that hurts me; reason bids me love my friend, and hate those that envy me; religion bids me love all and hate none, and overcome evil with good.
Be active in many ways. Be a sower of good seed, a distributor of good things, but look within thine own spirit for refreshment and joy. Unless all is well there, an applauding universe would be of no help to thee.
He that gives good advice builds with one hand; he that gives good counsel and example builds with the other; but he that gives good admonition and bad example builds with one hand and pulls down with the other.
He that is wise will have somewhere in his heart a gratitude to God for the times when he was given the advantage of his failures. He who trusts God will remember this, and take heart in the day of his failures.
It is while you are patiently toiling at the little tasks of life that the meaning and shape of the great whole of life dawns upon you. It is while you are resisting little temptations that you are growing stronger.
Do not think you can do anything worth doing in a fit of enthusiasm, but train yourself carefully to any work that you are called on to do, and think nothing too small to do carefully, or for which to train carefully, that is for the good of your fellow-creatures.
Great men stand like solitary towers in the city of God, and secret passages running deep beneath external nature give their thoughts intercourse with higher intelligences, which strengthens and consoles them, and of which the laborers on the surface do not even dream.
Try so to live in the light of God's love that it becomes a second nature to you; tolerate nothing adverse to it, but continually be striving to please him in all things; take all that he sends patiently; resolve firmly never to commit the smallest deliberate fault, and if unhappily you are overtaken by any sin, humble yourself and rise up speedily.
What a comfort is woman? No presence but hers can so win a man from his sorrow, make placed the knit brow and weather the stern lips into a smile. The soldier becomes a lightsome boy at her feet; the anxious statesman smiles himself back to the free-hearted youth beside her; and the still and shaded countenance of care brightens beneath her influence, as the closed flower blooms in the sunshine.

A Trio of Fighters.

Jeffries, Gans and Attell. When they have retired from the ring it will be a long time before a trio will be seen to equal them. At the present period there does not seem to be a man within halting distance of any of the three. Not even a suspicion. They each represent a class in themselves. It would not be putting it too strong to say that the Burlank farmer could lay his pitchfork down and stop any two of the present day heavies in the same ring.
When one thinks a little and recalls the fact that Gans hung a K. O. on Mike Twin Sullivan, did the same thing to Dal Hawkins twice, and made Joe Walcott lurch up at San Francisco three years ago, it is plainly evident that none of the present light weights have any business with him. Britt made a little ripple when he outpointed Nelson recently, but when Gans tied a can on him last week the light weight horizon became smooth again.
As for Attell, well, its doubtful if his equal will ever exist. He is certainly the pugilistic martyr of the age. He has been the one stumbling block to Jimmy Walsh, the bantam weight champion.
While Walsh could possibly go through the rest of the feather weights in the country, he has never been able to go much of anything with the Californian Hebrew, owing principally to the latter's remarkable reach. Attell's extraordinary length of arm has worked havoc with men like Bobby Ryan, who was the white welter weight champion; Battling Nelson, Herrera, Kid Herman and Kid Goodman.

So long as his fishing pole reach apparatus does not become impaired his mortgage on the feather weight title will remain secure for some time to come. The only candidate in sight that might be expected to give him an argument is Jim Driscoll, who lowered Joe Bowker's colors last spring in London. The boy from across the pond evidently appreciates the job, as he insists on a mere $1,500 for the personal expenses before talking about the size of the purse.

Chapped Hands and How to Prevent Them
Chapped hands are very painful and uncomfortable things, and more often than they are caused by the hands being insufficiently dried after washing, or by the towel that is used being damp, and still more often by the water being hard or else used too hot. Too much stress cannot be possibly laid on the necessity of always having the water soft. A pinch of borax in the water jug will easily and quickly achieve this result.
Now having seen that the water is soft and neither too hot, nor too cold, but just pleasantly warm, a very good soap should be used, and when drying the hands take each finger separately and dry, as it is just between the fingers where the skin is very apt not to be dried sufficiently; then if they are rubbed over once or twice a day with a piece of lemon and a little cold cream or mutton tallow rubbed into them, say twice a week before going to bed, there will be little fear of the skin becoming chapped or sore. Another precaution that must be taken is not to sit too near the fire; this heat at all times makes the skin very rough, and is particularly injurious in frosty weather; it makes the skin very tender, and so it falls a victim to Jask Frost.

The hands should not be washed more often than is necessary, as the less often they are in the water the less probability there will be of their being left in a damp condition; and if gloves are worn as much as possible in the house, as well as out of doors, the skin will not become soiled so easily, therefore there will be no occasion for the constant washing. If they become rather hot, sticky, and uncomfortable, it is a good thing to wipe them over with a soft handkerchief, damped with eau de cologne. The palm of the hands should be rubbed very briskly with this eau de cologne, which can be diluted with water, if preferred.

The Circuit Court in and for the County of Charlotte was opened at 12 o'clock noon on the 8th inst. Mr. Justice Landry presiding. There being no criminal business to come before the Court, the Sheriff presented his Honor with a pair of white gloves. Judge Landry, in his address to the Grand Jury alluded to the hardship of the Grand Jurors coming to Court often in inclement weather and frequently when there was no criminal business before the Court, and at their own expense. At his last circuit in Kent County at his suggestion the Grand Jury made a presentation to the Court to be laid before the proper authorities suggesting that Grand Jurors be not summoned to attend Court when there was no Criminal business before it.

He suggested that the Grand Jury make a presentation of this nature to the Court if they felt so disposed. The Grand Jury retired to their own quarters and when they returned made a presentation to the Court in favor of paying Grand Jurors the same as the Foresters, and the Judge thanked them saying that their recommendation would be presented to the proper authorities.

There were two civil Jury causes before the Court: McGraw vs Fisk, MacDonnell for plaintiff and N. M. Hill for defendant; and Kenen vs Hill, MacDonnell for plaintiff and Harry McLeod defendant. Verdict for defendants in both cases.

LORD'S COVE.

The funeral of Mr. Claude Lord took place here Wed. 16th. Mr. Lord died suddenly while in his boat at Digdegash. He was a member of the Foresters, Orangemen, and of the Free Mason Lodges.

The str. Viking is again taking passengers, having secured the services of Mr. Halvin as engineer.

The people of Lord's Cove are pleased to have their pastor, Mr. McQuerry back with them again. Mr. McQuerry has been in Nova Scotia for about a month. He went there to attend the annual meeting of the Christian Church in the Maritime Provinces. The annual meeting was held at Digby. It is expected that it will be held at Lord's Cove next year.

The school house at Lord's Cove has an entire set of new furniture. The desks are of modern style, manufactured by the Canadian School Furniture Co., and having noiseless ball-bearing seat hinges.

The school house at Lord's Cove has a fine situation with pleasant surroundings and the new furniture has in no small degree added to the appearance and comfort of those who attend. The trustees and ratepayers, certainly deserve credit for the interest which they have shown in this important matter. The new furniture was added while the teacher, Clifton Lambert, was attending the Teacher's Institute.

A number of the residents here, claim that the gale of Tuesday 15th was more severe than any which we have had for many years. Many of the battens from here, who were away looking for herring, found it difficult to keep their boats from drifting, even after they had put out three or four anchors.

Mr. King Simpson is at St. Stephen, working in Gannon's Candy Factory, where he will probably spend the winter. Miss Emily Simpson is visiting friends at Chocolate Cove.

The community is pleased to have Miss Blanche Stewart with them again. She has been to Boston for the last two or three years working at the dress making trade. She is now home on a visit.

Mrs. Lavinia Lambert has returned home from Grand Manan, where she has been visiting her daughter and son, during the last month.

Miss Pearl Lambert has returned home from Eastport where she has been at work for some time.

Mr. Fred Richardson is recovering slowly from an attack of typhoid fever.

Mr. Emery Lambert has returned from his trip to Montreal.

The result of the recent Councilor's Election shows that the people of West Isles still wish to retain Mr. Jas. Ward, and Mr. E. Edwin McNeil, as their representatives.

Miss Flora Leonard is recovering slowly after her long illness.
