Explains the legal status of news and cigar stands in hotels in regard to the sale of merchandise on Sundays, the following letter has been received by The Advertiser from Rev. W. M. Rochester, general secretary of the Lord's Day Alliance, Toronto. The letter, which is not explanatory, gives a recent legal decision on the matter pronounced by Justice Middleton.

It is as follows:

To the Editor of The Advertiser:
Permit me through your columns to direct attention to a matter of public concern.

It is assumed apparently that hotel stands at which cigars, candy, tobacco, papers, periodicals, etc. are sold may conduct their business as usual on Sunday. This view, however, is not correct.

The view of the law is that such stands to the same legal restraint on Sunday as ordinary merchants handling the same goods. Common sense and the principle of fair dealing would suggest this. The high court of Ontario, however, has made the matter clear from a legal standpoint. The Honorable Justice Middleton, in certain stated cases, declared as follows:

An Innkeeper may think it a matter of convenience to his guests, and a source of profit to himself to become to some extent a merchant.

As Innkeeper, if he is to be subject to the same legal restraint on Sunday as ordinary merchants handling the same goods, common sense and the principle of fair dealing would suggest this. The high court of Ontario, however, has made the matter clear from a legal standpoint. The Honorable Justice Middleton, in certain stated cases, declared as follows:

Myers Gootson and George Ogrodink were fined $500 and costs each after they had been convicted of bootlegging in police court this morning. During their stay here, John Martin and Michael Stogner, Ontario Government special officers, secured five convictions out of six cases brought to court, and secured a warrant for a seventh person, who fled. Gootson intends to appeal the case, R. G. Fisher, his counsel, stated.

Gootson endeavored to prove that he was in Port Stanley on July 7, when he was alleged to have sold a bottle of whiskey to Martin and Stogner. He stated that he, his wife and Mrs. Cohen, a next door neighbor, started for the lake at 1:30 o'clock that day to celebrate Mrs. Cohen's birthday. Gootson stated that he got off the train at St. Thomas to do some business with John Lurback, a junk dealer. Then, after he had had supper with the St. Thomas family, he went back to his home with him and met his wife and neighbor. At 11 o'clock Lurback left him there, and he went back on the train with the others of the party.

Bought Bottle.
Martin and Stogner swore that at 8:00 o'clock on evening of July 7 they went into Gootson's office at 573 Ottawa avenue to buy some tobacco. They asked him for more necessary than the sale of intoxicating drinks. Under the Lord's Day Act of Canada, it is illegal because it cannot be declared to be a work of necessity or mercy such as giving of meals and the like, or providing of accommodation for guests.By your courtesy we invite the attention of all concerned to this matter and respectfully request in the interest of the preservation of our weekly rest day that they comply with the requirements of the law. Very truly yours,
MR. ROCHESTER,
General Secretary.TWO NEW STREET LIGHTS ARE ORDERED

Lighting of Dundas Street East Laid Over at Present.

Following instructions issued by members of No. 1 committee of the city council, City Engineer Brazier has ordered a street light to be placed at the east end of Thompson road, this spot being very dark and dangerous at night, according to motorists who have traveled along the thoroughfare.

Another light being installed at the C. P. R. crossing on Richmond street, a few feet north of Pall Mall street, on the east side of the road. This lamp was ordered on recommendation of Ald. W. A. Wilson, who declares that a railway siding leading across Richmond street, makes this spot a dangerous one without nearby street lighting.

No action will be taken to install street lights on Dundas street east, although the owner of land here, who intends opening a new real estate subdivision has offered to pay the expenses entailed. This is explained by the fact that this portion of Dundas street is now a provincial highway, and the city does not wish to interfere with improvements to it. City Engineer Brazier declares that lights are necessary here. The opposite side of the road is in Middlesex county.

GUNDY TO RETURN.

Toronto, Aug. 19.—Attorney-General Raney denied that there was any intention to supersede Magistrate W. E. Gundy as a result of his recent decision on the right to export liquor to the United States. Mr. Gundy, he said, had been granted leave of absence at his own request. H. T. Willis, K.C., was holding court at Windsor during his absence, but Mr. Gundy would resume his duties on his return.

RUM-RUNNERS' CHALLENGE TO BE ACCEPTED

Liquor On Board Vessels in Detroit River To Be Seized.

Toronto, Aug. 18.—The attorney-general's department will accept the challenge of the rum-runners on the Essex border, it was announced at the Parliament buildings today, after Hon. W. E. Roney received from the Spenceville justice, incorporation under a federal charter will not guarantee the exporting concerns against seizure of liquor shipments which do not go forward in regular carriers. The Ontario department's order to make seizure still stands, and the provincial authorities will welcome reference of the issue to the courts, it is understood.

Will Be Seized.
The department announced that liquor on board vessels in the Detroit River will be seized for assurance from the owners that it has a legal destination. If the court before which the owner and his liquor are brought refuses the attorney-general's department confiscation order on the ground that the goods are for export, then the consignor will be informed his liquor is awaiting him and asked to specify by what carrier it shall be forwarded.

Not Common Carrier.
From the standpoint of the province, the Liquor Export Company will not constitute a common carrier, and the goods must be sent through recognized channels, and, of course, in their passage over the border will be seized by United States customs officers. According to the attorney-general, there is one beer manufacturing concern at least at the border that is playing entirely fair with the department. Since the amendment went through they have shipped only 1,400 cases, and these were consigned to countries where importation is legal.

"The thing we are anxious to prevent," explained Hon. Mr. Roney, "is that the liquor shall not find its way back to Canada."

SHIPMENTS COMMENCE.

MONTREAL, Aug. 18.—Many thousands of gallons of beer began to flow southward from here today as a result of the ruling by Secretary of the United States Treasury Mellon that liquor may now be shipped through the United States from one country to another. The beer had been held up owing to the interpretation of the prohibition law by former United States Attorney-General Palmer, who ruled that shipments from a foreign point of origin by way of the United States to a foreign destination were contrary to the statute. Dispatches from Washington yesterday indicated that the authorities there had decided to at least temporarily suspend the ban. The shipments are intended mainly for the West Indies, the Guianas, Central and South American countries.

ARE NOT SERIOUS.

TORONTO, Aug. 18.—The recent developments on the Essex County frontier have done no more than add "a certain embarrassment" to the enforcement of the liquor laws, according to officials at the parliament buildings. It was stated that examinations of the books of the Walkerville Brewing Company had shown that since the dry law came into force on July 18, the only shipments of beer and liquor which they had made were two consignments addressed respectively to Cuba and Nicaragua.

Government officials maintain that the extent of the beer traffic with the States has been exaggerated, and that the whole situation is now well in hand.

No complications are expected from the decision of the United States to allow the liquor in kind to be shipped through its territory from, say Ontario to British Columbia. The attorney-general's department does not anticipate any short circuiting or boom-crash effects from these shipments.

MAY BE LAID OVER.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 18.—Canadian Press.—Rum-running by automobile across the border between Canada and the United States was given close consideration by the United States Senate today in its debate on the anti-beer bill.

The Stanley amendment—designed to safeguard, through heavy penalties, a man's home and property from illegal search for liquor—was regarded tonight as the greatest stumbling block in the way of the measure's final enactment.

Under this amendment autos could not be searched without a warrant. As the conference committee has shaped the bill, prohibition officers can halt and search automobiles if they have reasonable ground for suspicion, without waiting to get a search warrant.

Protest Amendment.
Wayne R. Wheeler, counsel for the Anti-Saloon League, and other "drys" protested that the amendment would render it utterly impossible to stop liquor coming over the border in floods.

The fight over the amendment became so bitter that prohibition leaders declared that it was more than likely that all beer legislation would go over until fall. The bill prohibits importation of liquor as well as prescribing of beer as medicine.

WILL HOLD SHEFFLER ON SERIOUS CHARGES

Wanted At Chatham For Attempted Murder and Burglary.

CHATHAM, Aug. 18.—Harry John Sheffler, alias Harry Arnold, will be seized by the local police when he steps out of the Pittsburg Penitentiary and arraigned on charges of attempted murder, jail-breaking and burglary, for which he has been wanted here since April, 1915.

Although Sheffler succeeded in eluding capture after he had assaulted a turnkey in the local jail and effected an escape in 1915, it was known by the local police that he had been picked up by United States officials on various charges, and the local police have been waiting for his release from jail to recapture him. A telegram received from Pittsburg by Chief of Police Groves is to the effect that Sheffler is endeavoring to secure his release from the Pittsburg Penitentiary.

The statement issued yesterday quoting the population of this city as shown by the last census to be 12,301, is repudiated today by figures given by the assessors. The assessors show the population to be: 1912, 11,333; 1913, 12,039; 1914, 12,039; 1915, 12,465; 1916, 12,863; 1917, 13,943; 1918, 14,709; 1919, 15,030; 1920, 15,182; and 1921, 15,525.

AN INOPPORTUNE MOMENT.

There is an old saying which contains the advice that one should "never swap horses while crossing a stream," and it is in accordance with this ancient maxim that the Sutherland Commission has reported against the hydro radial scheme. It ought to be clearly observed that there is no condemnation of the electrifying of existing railroads, or the construction of new electric lines on principle, but, to put the matter in a nutshell, the commission, after looking at the matter from every possible angle, and considering it in all its bearings, does not deem it expedient for the scheme to be proceeded with at the present time.

The commission has given two main reasons for this decision: Firstly, that the data submitted is unreliable and unconvincing; and, secondly, that it would be very unwise to proceed with a project of such magnitude and so far-reaching in its effects on the economic conditions of the country, at the very moment that the Government has taken over thousands of miles of steam roads, traversing all parts of the country, and is faced with the formidable task of their re-organization and profitable working.

Surely no government in this wide world is mad enough to stand behind a scheme which will enter into competition with the enterprises which have been taken over for and on behalf of the people without being absolutely certain that the people will not suffer thereby. More than this, it would be folly to make such a momentous plunge without first making sure that it would be of benefit to the country as a whole. There is another venerable axiom which says that we should "look before we leap," and this is exactly what the Ontario Government did in appointing the committee of investigation.

Even those who are most violently opposed to the findings of the Sutherland Commission, and have most bitterly attacked them, are constrained to admit that these decisions were not hastily given, but were only arrived at after every pro and con had been carefully weighed. It has been suggested that there was no intention to carry out the indiscriminate construction of electric railways paralleling the lines of the national steam roads. Indiscriminate construction of any kind of railways is a species of insanity which no one can afford to indulge in these days, and the fact remains that the hydro radial project involves the paralleling of lines in various parts of the country, and this fact alone is sufficient to render any such proposition economically unsound.

The question of the electrification of existing lines, with whatever object in view, is one which is also more wisely left in the lap of the future. The advocates of electrification say that it is bound to come. Well, let it come, but let its coming be on an evolutionary and not on a revolutionary basis. The Government will doubtless have to face this question sooner or later, and as custodians of the national lines it will be for them to say just how far it is expedient to proceed with the transformation, even when the principle of electrification has been approved. This is all to the interest of the country as a whole, and will be carrying out the development of the railroad system in a logical way, with the people of Canada as the deciding factor. In no other way can a satisfactory conclusion be arrived at or lasting results obtained.

Much is being made of the fact that the Sutherland Commission has been somewhat costly, but where hundreds of millions are involved and the credit of the country is at stake, it is surely wise to hasten slowly. "We Build" is a very good slogan, but before building, the foundations must first be made secure.

THE HOUSING QUESTION.

Considerable effort is being exerted by certain individuals, interested apparently in keeping from public knowledge the truth about the evident failure to properly supervise the carrying out by the contractors of the specifications upon which the work of building the 41 houses at Pine Lawn were let. Every possible expedient is being used to discredit the men who in the interest of fair play for the ratepayers of London have urged a proper investigation of the matter.

Attacks have been made upon the honesty of purpose which moved Commissioner D. J. Tallant to raise the question; political aspirations and even worse have been insinuated as the reason back of his complaints. Not only so, but these efforts to divert the attention of the people of London from the real facts have been carried on in face of three reports, all of which confirm the suspicion that all was not well.

The first of these reports, made to the commission by its own chairman, W. J. Cunliffe, was of such a nature as to make Mayor Little comment, following its publication in The Advertiser and Toronto papers, that "falling down" would be the best way to describe the condition of the houses. Using this chance expression, efforts have been made to belittle Mr. Cunliffe's report because it did not show that the houses were actually falling down, and to insinuate wrong motives to the mayor.

The same tactics have been attempted in the case of two later reports, one by the city's own building inspector, A. Piper, and the other by an independent official, Provincial Housing Inspector E. W.

Hammett of Toronto, both of which, despite the fact that for practically three weeks which have elapsed since Mr. Tallant first raised the question, strenuous efforts have been made by the contractors to remedy matters, not only confirm but add to the serious aspect of the report made by Mr. Cunliffe.

Through the columns of our contemporary the citizens of London have been told that The Advertiser and those who have demanded an investigation have started "a campaign of knocking the houses" for some unexplained sinister motive, and that the publicity given to the facts will lead to the possibility of the city losing heavily.

That it were better that the city forfeit ten times any possible loss that might result from a demand for the absolute fulfillment of contracts by the contractors, or anybody else responsible, rather than the individuals who purchase the houses shall find that the $3,700 or $4,700 which they undertake to pay has placed in their hands a building of inferior construction, does not appear to come within the ethics of those who would cover up the facts.

The houses are built; it doesn't matter whether they are up to the standard which the contractors undertook they should be for the price paid or not; get the money, appears to be the slogan. Not a thought is given to the morality of such a deal. Not a thought for the integrity of the city in its business deals. Not a thought for the poor beggar who has saddled himself with a life burden plus the constant expense which a jerry-built house will add to it by the need of constant repairs.

That in no less than ten specific points the contractors have failed to live up to their contracts is declared by Inspector Piper in his report, and confirmed by the report of Provincial Inspector Hammett, with the additional fact that the latter report places the responsibility on the architect employed by the commission. All three of the reports giving specific instances of serious faults in the houses have appeared exclusively in The Advertiser, whose campaign of publicity has been carried on solely in the interest of the city, first, that its fair name be not besmudged, and secondly, in the interest of those who have or may buy the houses.

To this end the demand is made that there be no more dallying with the matter, and that those directly responsible, contractors, architect, or even members of the housing commission, past or present, be required to rectify immediately the faults specified, and that acceptance of the houses or any interim payment due upon them, if such there is, be absolutely withheld by the city until the houses are completed according to plans and specifications in every detail.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

"The windows of heaven" were opened in honor of Dollar Day.

We are told that unemployment is slightly reduced. So are the unemployed.

It seems quite natural for one named de Valera to refer to Englishmen as "foreigners."

The political friends of Premier Meighen are anxiously studying the Pilgrim's Progress.

Hundreds of Englishmen are going to shoot over the Spanish Moors. They must be enthusiastic sports.

The most exciting form of sport in Ontario just now is still-hunting, although the results are generally moonshine.

Provincial road projects calling for federal grants amounting to $7,660,604 are now under way. The most urgently required is the highway to prosperity.

A man's footsteps seven feet apart have been discovered near Simcoe. They are said to be over a plowed field, but the general opinion is that they are over two yards.

Jan Van Albert, the tallest man in the world, has got married at Port Arthur. He is 9 feet 5 inches in height, and his bride is 5 feet 4 inches. In this case, at least, the wife will look up to her husband.

Dr. Samuel Johnson defines a flea as an insect "remarkable for its agility in jumping." If man could jump as far as a flea in proportion to his size it would go a long way towards settling the hydro-radial question.

The party of Essex farmers who went to inspect the Chippewa Canal works combined business with pleasure, and were even more interested in the operations of the corn-borer than they were in those of the rock-drill.

So much has devotion to "My Lady Nicotine" increased in France that there is going up in smoke nine thousand tons of tobacco more than before the war. As this is attributed to the war would it be too much to say that the clouds of battle are issuing from the pipes of peace?

THE HENRY FORD WAY.

[New York World.]

The Ford Motor Company, in a statement filed with the Massachusetts commissioner of corporations, reports total assets of $345,140,557 on April 30, compared with $306,635,109 a year ago. Profits and loss surplus increased from $165,697,132 to $182,877,696 and cash and debts receivable from $92,499,927 to $85,955,165.

This is a curiously prosperous showing for a corporation to make in a year of business depression. How was it done? The Detroit manufacturer, as is well known, is a dreamer and a visionary, but there is nothing very visionary about a $38,000,000 gain in assets in a bad year.

Perhaps Henry Ford has a secret method unknown to other corporation heads, but it would appear on its face to be only the secret of a common sense application of business principles. He was one of the first automobile manufacturers to cut prices, and he made the best of the depression and overcame it. No doubt a manufacturer who can make a profit out of adversity possesses genius.

But the example is there for anyone to emulate. The way to readjust business to the new conditions is to readjust it, and have this thing over. That is the only magic needed.

RAILWAY PROSPERITY.

[New York Times.]

The returns for May indicate an improving prospect that the railways in due time will pass from the decayed estate of those who have seen better days to the vigorous condition of those whose best days lie before them. That is true, although their total operating revenues decreased nearly thirteen millions for the month. But operating expenses decreased nearly forty-nine millions. There are other minor changes, with the result that there is a balance to the good this May of $37,060,654, against a deficit last May of $5,429,769. For the first five months this year similar changes convert a net operating income last year of $26,400,110 into $80,352,121 this year. There is a basis for expecting that the railways' gross earnings this year will double those of 1914 and exceed those of last year. The net is still open to conjecture. It depends upon the reduction of expenses, assisted by the usual larger railway business in the year's harvest months, whatever the course of general trade. There is no hope of higher rates. Some even believe that lower rates would be more profitable. Lower rates would be the natural result of larger traffic, and yet there is need for making reductions cautiously,

LETTERS

TO THE EDITOR OF THE ADVERTISER.

I was interested in the sketch of the opening of the railway to London that appeared in The Advertiser a week ago. As a boy of 10 years I was a member of the band, a glimpse of which appears on the end of the sketch by a brilliant writer-cornet of the station. This was the old Pensioners Band, consisting of discharged soldiers and some of their sons. Some of the members that I recall were: My father, Charles Holland, Jas. McMullen, sexton of St. Paul's Cathedral, and his son, Wm. McMullen, Charles Teale, Mr. Templeton, Mr. Pennycook, Mr. Allen Renshaw and Mr. Simpson. The band was taken to Hamilton to play for a celebration there, at which they also a band from Rochester, N.Y. We also went to St. Thomas by six-horse stage to play for the opening of the new court house.

Re your article on the old streets: I could fill a book with reminiscences of that nature. I dealt with some of these in a paper to the L. and M. Historical Society last year.

JOHN BULL'S WINNING WAYS.

To the Editor of The Advertiser: I read a very timely article in your Saturday issue by a brilliant writer-cornet, entitled "Silent Revolution," and it made me think how British ways can win enemies. Why can't the president of the Irish Republic, who is offered more than the Honors were offered to Gen. Smuts' viewpoint? Surely it is worth trying, and I venture to predict that if he does, the thought of further bloodshed will be banished from his mind. Why can't the Irish be one member of God's honored family?

OTHERS' VIEWS

AN INTERESTING MEMORIAL.

[Kingston Standard.] The contribution of $25,000 by the Hart family to the Jock Hart skating rink, to be erected on the Queen's University grounds in memory of this splendid son of Queen's—this stalwart Canadian and brilliant young captain of industry who was prematurely cut off when he seemed to have so many years of life ahead of him—his memory is as magnificent in its proportions as it is spontaneous and generous in its spirit, and assures beyond all question that the rink will be built forthwith, and that the rink will be one of the finest on the continent. Indeed, so true is this, that already the contract for the structural steel has been let, and the rink itself should be erected and ready for occupancy before the snow flies.

BEATIFIC AUGUST.

[New York Herald.]

More than once these columns have contained severe comment on the conduct of August. We have spoken of it as the month that makes men mad. It has been coupled with February as something that might be dropped from the calendar amid cheers, so far as the climate of the month is concerned. Last year, after a July so pure and sweet that it seemed all too short, August arrived with a crew of malevolent vapors, stifling the city. But now, following a July upon whose red grid the country has brooded, August slips in like a nurse whose cool fingers caress the brow of the fevered. She came with skies full of cold stars, these to be followed by the rain that the earth had licked its lips. And yesterday! Whether the dweller in the brick cliffs of the city or the hitherto weak and morose commuter, yesterday was the day of days, from the cool dawn, when the mercury tube said 56 degrees, to the wonderful noon, clear as the Caribbean sky. If New York were a boom town its board of trade would be proud to prospective residents great news about August temperatures of 60, with brilliant sunshine. But we boast of ports rather than of paradise. It is possible, however, for the citizen to reverse the regular summer mail exchange and to send to vacationists picture postcards of Broadway, with the conventional lines: "We are sleeping under blankets every night; wish you were here." Even if August later stumbles and falls from the righteous path, she will be kindly remembered for her beatific entrance.

THAT UNTIDY PICNIC HABIT.

[Montreal Herald.]

Lovers of nature, those to whom the country and the lakeside are a perpetual delight, are much perturbed over the growing tendency of the folk from the city to leave the world untidier than they found it. It is a good thing for the dwellers in the streets to get out into the country and to the lakes, but why spoil the enjoyment of others by leaving a trail of crumpled paper, empty bottles and derelict cans? It is a case of want of thought for others; failure in consideration, and it is difficult of understanding. Talking to the owner of some land on the lake shore, he complained bitterly of the nuisance. "I am only too glad to see people enjoy themselves, and have always thrown open my land to visitors, but at times I become very discouraged. You've no idea how untidy people are. There's one thing I can say, however, and that is the consideration shown by the ex-service men in this respect is remarkable. Whenever they are members of the picnic parties I can see the difference. They evidently have still got the habit of cleaning up."

There is no doubt a lot in what this gentleman says. It should not, however, be difficult to get people to show a little common sense. Can nothing be done to create a public opinion in the matter? Surely the duties of citizenship, which are many and varied, include the leaving of the landscape free from alien rubbish.

WAR IS FUTILE.

[Manchester Guardian.]

War as a means to anything great, noble, or precious, beyond its own immediate object of escaping violent conquest by others, is as bankrupt before the world as fire or plague. Its casualties to both winner and loser are seen to be not merely losses in life and limb and money, but losses in character, intellect, in every part of civilization. Directed by closer contact of all the de-lusive glamor that sentimentalism has shed about it, war is seen to be nothing less or more than the most horrible and degrading of occasional necessities, and the only way worthy of sane and practical men and women is to make it be never a necessity again.

CRAZE FOR COCKTAILS.

[London Times.]

The mixing of cocktails and the drinking of them is in a more advanced stage in Liverpool than in any other town in England which I have visited since the war. The moment the bars are opened in Liverpool, so also at that very moment do the cocktail drinkers seize their own special cocktail, some times in one hand and sometimes, I am afraid, in two, and drink them down.

From that moment until the bar closes expert mixers in the white robes of their office mix and shake and shake and mix until the bar is closed by order of "D.O.R.A."

Let it be admitted at once that I have never anywhere in this country drunk such tantalizing cocktails, so difficult of analysis or momentarily so pleasing to the palate, as I drank in the Exchange and Adelphi Hotels in Liverpool last week. I knew the names of some of those which I tasted, but there were others, very insidious, cloudy and beautiful, which had no name, and each of which could be made by only one man in Liverpool—perhaps indeed, in the world. Those who de-livered those special drinks had to go to the one mixer who alone knew the secret of them.

Not one of the many mixers that I saw was an amateur. Each took an obvious delight in the mysterious and secret rites of his office, and each, I think, made a nice income out of the names and rewards which delighted people gave to him.

At some of the bars other drinks are drunk, but at some I saw only cocktails consumed. I can say how many customers. Each took an obvious delight in the mysterious and secret rites of his office, and each, I think, made a nice income out of the names and rewards which delighted people gave to him.

Cocktails as made in Liverpool are certainly seductive, and man is always weak. I was, and three days in Liverpool drinking cocktails did not improve my appetite, nor my health. There have been complaints about my liver ever since I returned to London. The host-

ALL DRESSED UP.

Mark Twain said of a certain writer who didn't know how to be simple and directed that when he wanted to say that Mary had known unhappiness "the fact sauntered forth in this nobby outfit." Mary herself was not unlearned in the lore of pain.

We see people who empty the bureau in their persons because that is the only way they can attract attention. The peacock spreads his green and purple plumage because in his tiny head he has room for only one idea—to show off.

And people spread themselves in language the same way. Their talking and their writing are all fuss and feathers.

to hide the want of substance.

Some of the strong and capable people have little to say. They may feel themselves at a disadvantage in a "gabfest" beside the fellow who displays a profusion of beautiful and highly decorative language.

But let them be patient and bide their time; their turn will come. If they can do the work they need not fear those who out-talk them.

Polished and fluent oratory has its own peculiar charm, but guff and flattery won't run down with the crowd in the long run. A manly sincerity counts—not pious drive.

Some people are chiefly clothes. Put them in gymnasium suits and there is little of the man left. Then the man who "struts sitting down" is shorn of his impressiveness.

"If Rooshia would shave," said Mr. Dooley, "we wouldn't be afraid of her." The body is more than raiment, and an idea is more than the language in which it is dressed up.

THE RETURN OF THE PETTICOAT.

Grandmother's hope chest might have contained models that were not dissimilar to these, that are the very last word in evening lingerie, excepting, of course, that in grandmother's girlhood, starch was in much higher standing than it is today! Bouffant skirts naturally press a demand for fuller petticoats, and since many a girl has acquired the bloomer habit and regards petticoats as antiquated, it is quite a radical departure in the mode to find them back in the picture with yards of lace and material used in their making. Radium is a silk that lends itself to the requirements of the modern petticoat. Applies in pastel colorings or of lace, charming scalloped ruffles, fagotting, and the introduction of pleated chiffon or georgette ruffles are some of the trimmings employed. Scalloped, pointed, and battlemented (square-cut edges) ideas are varied in numerous interesting ways, and, of course, two-toned ribbon is added for good measure, and to give is to cover it, and one guesses that the double shoulder straps are not as necessary as they look, for the camisole top will stay in position if they are removed, thanks to the elastic which is encased in the hem. Lingerie of this type should be appreciated by the woman who has neither time nor a personal maid to attend to the ravages resulting from ordinary washing. It is innocent of lace or any trimming which is perishable, and when made of summer silk in fine stripes, such as are used for men's shirts, and still occasionally for blouses, they are practical to a degree. There is, by the way, quite a movement in sympathy with the striped patterns in both silk and voile and chiffon, and when a novelty material, just that touch of daintiness and femininity which makes lingerie the alluring thing it is. With the vogue for black outer things, has come a vogue for something black to be worn beneath. Hence the charming little first Empire chemise with its bold white flowered pattern. Such ultra models make a limited appeal, but it must always be born in mind that it is the line which is of basic importance, and so a dainty trifle like this may be copied in nothing more spectacular than batiste or crepe de chine. It has borrowed its hem line from the dress which

LVI.—We Belong

Eve—sorely against her will—was forced to acquiesce when Julian asked her to come for a ride. She cared for Julian. She must do his bidding. She must play whatever role he chose for her.

Quickly she dressed and found her riding things, muttering little angry imprecations all the while. She didn't look her best this morning—and she knew it. Besides she felt tired and sleepy. Oh, for another hour or two in bed!

But no trace of her chagrin was visible when fifteen minutes later she mounted her horse out in the grounds, assisted by her escort. Her little face—artistically powdered—held two glowing spots of color in each cheek. Love broke down her fences in the most amazing fashion.

"Are—are you—truly—interested in me—Julian?" she stammered, slowing her horse into a walk and gazing into his eyes.

"Of course, I am—you silly little thing!" His gauntleted hand closed over hers. He lowered his voice to a caressing note. "Eve—don't you think that you and I would pull magnificently together?"

The wording of this question savored just a trifle of the unromantic. But Eve heard it very gladly.

She mustn't let him see her feelings. Though her old creed as to having the truth before her never left this crisis. He must be "played" with.

"Other men have asked me the same thing many times!" She tossed her head. "And I don't like your phrase about 'pulling together magnificently'—it sounds too much like a stable!"

Julian regarded her with a tolerant and complacent smile.

"You've fooled me pretty often. Haven't you? But, Eve, you can't fool me."

Before she could prevent him he had swung himself forward in his saddle and had kissed her on the lips.

"You—you mustn't! Julian—have you gone crazy?"

He laughed outright. "You needn't try to humbug me," he cried. "Little philanthropist! You and I belong, that's all! Before a week is over you'll be coming to me and telling me 'so! You know already that it is the truth! You've never felt towards any man the way you've felt to me! I know it!'"

Eve stammered out a protest. But with Julian's curiously magnetic eyes upon her she felt she couldn't say a word. Over this young girl the man seemed to exercise some species of hypnotism.

PLANNING LUNCH.

As a meat lunch. Lunch is also a good meal for the fruit pudding of bread, rice or tapioca, which uses up small portions of canned fruit or preserves that remain from other meals. Likewise with the vegetable, two may often be crammed together, where neither would be enough alone. Indeed, with creamed peas and beans on toast for lunch, one other luncheon standby, as all sorts of good left-overs. Vegetable combinations, omelets give an opportunity to utilize egg or vegetable combinations, must be rather carefully planned: peas and onions, peas and beans, corn and beans, corn and tomatoes, eggs and tomatoes, eggs and onions, combine well, but other mixtures may seem to be just a mess. Vegetable combinations may be topped with a cream or meat stock sauce and bread crumbs.

One should, if possible, omit potatoes from lunch, because it is very likely to be a starch meal anyway, with bread crumbs and cauliflower or tapioca, or the like, and potatoes are superfluous.

All the members of the family can eat such luncheon dishes as these, and with plenty of milk to drink the children will be well fed.

Gynthia Croy's Mail-Box

Who has a darling eye tells downright truths and downright lies.—Lavater.

Another Offer.
Dear Miss Grey and Boxites—I think I have missed some of the letters this summer, but on seeing a letter from Tip in one paper last week I cut it out for reference as I would like the chance of making a block for that quilt. I do seem to have so much family grandchild, but if there is not a great rush for the blocks I will make one. I have plenty of pieces and will try to get plenty of names. Here's hoping we get enough for two quilts.
M. E. W.

Ans.—Thank you, M. E. W., for offering to make a block. It is very good of you, when you are so busy. You wouldn't be very long making it would you, as I am putting your name down as one of the twenty.

To Can Corn.
Clean corn, taking silk off, place in a rack and dip into boiling water five minutes to blanch it. Plunge quickly into cold water. Pack ears into sealers and add one level teaspoon of salt to each quart and sufficient boiled water to fill the jars. Place rubbers and top in position. Put jars into a boiler and boil for three hours. Remove jars, tighten covers. Invert to cool and test joints. Wrap jars in paper and store.

Another Block.
Dear Miss Grey—I noticed in the paper where Tip had given a few suggestions on quilts.

I have a block nearly done which I intend to send in if you will allow me to do so, Miss Grey. I do not understand what she meant by the name. What kind of a name? Any girl's name.

Does it matter what color we use when working it with silkline? I think her idea for the quilt is splendid.

The fund must be growing very fast now, is it not, Miss Grey?

I wish your readers could see my flower garden. It is just lovely now. I have balsams, verbenas, sweet peas, nasturtiums and dahlias.

But my dahlias are not out yet excepting one, and it is white.

I received a letter from one of the Boxites, she did not tell me her pen name, but I hope she will see this and I intend to answer pretty soon.

Well, Miss Grey, I am inclining several crochet patterns for Mail-Box use. I think I had better go before Miss Grey gets the broom.

Yours as ever, A SINGING LARK.
Ans.—Any person of either sex may have their name on your block, providing they pay for the privilege. I do not think it. I think you could use any color of silkline. Thank you, Singing Lark, for the patterns. Am mailing you Tip's address so that you may forward the block to her, but the money is to be sent to the Mail-Box.

Puppy Stories

(by Vincent G. Perry)

THE MISFIT PUP.

Part III.
Now, Betty's puppy, as we have said before, was an extra good Boston terrier, and he was beautifully marked. He had a pretty white stripe down his face and over his muzzle; his four feet were white, and he had the evenest white shirt-front and wide white collar that you can imagine. Right on the top of his neck and in the center of his collar was a dark brindle spot shaped just like a star. That is how his new mistress, Little Dorothy, named him. Star. Strange to say, that was the very name Betty's mother had picked out for him before he had opened his eyes, for Betty was a wise mother and knew just what kind of names her puppies would be sure to get.

Star was very happy in his new home, for although Little Dorothy's father and mother weren't rich like Mr. Jack and Mr. Tom, they were kind and good, and Star soon learned to love them almost as well as he loved Little Dorothy.

Mr. Tom was not nearly so nice a man as Mr. Jack, the owner of Star's mother, and the kennel where Big Jessie had come from. Sometimes he was very kind to Little Dorothy's father, who was his chauffeur. One day Little Dorothy's father came home very sick, and had to go to bed. The doctor came and said he had a fever. How sad that made Little Dorothy and Little Dorothy's mother. Star was sad, too, for it made him sad to see his little mistress unhappy.

Days and weeks and months went by, and still Little Dorothy's father did not get well. All this time Little Dorothy's mother became more and more anxious-looking, and Little Dorothy remained sad, but Star kept on growing and getting more beautiful. One day Mr. Tom came to the house, looking cross.

"If you aren't going to get better you had better move out of this house," so my new chauffeur can move in." Mr. Tom said unkindly. Star didn't just know what it was all about, but Little Dorothy's father looked very grave, and her mother started to cry. Star didn't know he had a temper until then. It flared up all at once and the first thing he knew he was growling at Mr. Tom.

"Get out of here, you mongrel pup!" Mr. Tom said as he aimed his boot at the little dog.

"Lie down, like a good doggie!" Little Dorothy told Star, for she was afraid he would be hurt. Star always obeyed when spoken to.

A few days after that Little Dorothy's father was taken to the hospital, and then some men came and packed up the furniture and things of the house, and the moving began. Little Dorothy's mother had found some room over a store, and it was here they went. Little Dorothy and her mother seemed unhappy in the new place, but Star did not mind it, for he was happy anywhere where his little mistress was.

One day soon after a man came to collect the rent. He was a kind-looking man, and when Little Dorothy's mother didn't have all the rent he was owed, he said, "Well, I'll be a good doggie!"

"What a wonderful puppy," the man cried, as he picked Star up and put him on the table. "That is the best Boston terrier puppy I have ever seen, and I own some prize-winners myself."

"But he's a bulldog," Little Dorothy's mother said, and she told the man Star's history.

"There's some mistake," the man assured her. "This is a real Boston, and worth a great deal of money. Let me enter him in the show for you. You don't need to know his pedigree."

That is how Star was entered for the big dog show. Somehow the news that Star was a good dog had brought new hope to Little Dorothy and her mother. If only he would do well at the show, they thought. (Star's adventures at the dog show will be in tomorrow's paper.) (Copyrighted, British and Colonial Press, Limited.)

THEATRES

AT ALLEN'S.

Enthusiasm on the part of the capacity audience which greeted D. W.

Griffith's film masterpiece, "The Birth of a Nation," at Allen's Theatre, Thursday afternoon, was similar to that manifested by fans in the bleachers during a ninth-inning rally of the home team. As the stirring scenes in this world-famous vehicle were thrown upon the screen, the crowds present cheered vociferously and pandemonium reigned supreme.

"The Birth of a Nation," described by critics at its initial showing as the greatest motion picture ever filmed, has stood the test of time, in proof of this designation. The plot is known to almost everyone as a clean and wholesome one of the highest grade. The small boy whose ambition it has been to see this film, or the desire of the appreciative person, who having viewed

Griffith's masterpiece, longs to see it again, may now be realized, it being the screen attraction at Allen's today and Saturday.

The striking scenes of the civil war, with thousands participating, are cleverly active in this film, which required an enormous expenditure to produce. Adventure, romance, and run-ned patrons are the best evidence of its splendid appeal.

Special music, with score in keeping with the screen plot, adds greatly to the entertainment at Allen's, although at times the cheering and growing up Thursday night almost drowned out the southern melodies and martial airs, played on the pipe organ, equal to a 25-piece band.

"The Birth of a Nation," which placed

D. W. Griffith in the picture rank of the greatest of young men, is welcomed to London by thousands who appreciate the silent art. A pleasing feature is the fact that no increase in prices is in evidence for this attraction. May its long and successful career continue for many years yet.

The more films of similar calibre, if such be possible, will go a long way toward elevating the movies, and obliterating the shadows thrown by many cheap and suggestive vehicles so often foisted upon the public.

AT LOEW'S.

"Once a crook always a crook," may be a rule, but there are many exceptions to it, and Jewel Carmen in "The Silver Lining," a picture that scored a hit at Loew's Theatre Thursday, takes the part of one of these exceptions. She is Angel, a little orphanage girl, who is adopted by confidence workers and brought up to a life of crime. Another inmate of the institution, who has been her childhood enemy, is adopted by wealthy folks.

Later fate throws them together, both fighting for the heart of one man. His love is at first thrown away by Evelyn,

the pampered rich girl, and he meets

Angel, who has designs against him.

She is backed by two crooks, her foster mother and a man she met by chance.

She helps the intended victim with a story of the underworld that he is writing. She finally falls in love with him and after many hard battles against her male accomplice and society generally she wins. Finally she is accepted by society.

Julia Curtis pleased with her interpretations of various characters including each person to some animal. Her singing in different voices was appreciated.

Al Gamble has an act that is bewildering. He and his assistant, with aid of a blackboard, answer mathematical problems with astonishing rapidity and accuracy. They also have a line of patter that puts the fine touch to their turn.

Lockhart and Liddle are real clever tumblers. Their program of stunts includes some tricks that are new to local audience. Bill Parsons in a comedy entitled, "Proposing Bill," and news and educational films conclude the performance.

MAY HAVE ROUNDED UP

ITALIAN MURDER GANG

DETROIT, Aug. 18.—A member of the local detective bureau will be sent to New York, it was announced today, to aid the authorities there in investigation into the activities of a gang alleged to have been responsible for numerous Italian murders in New York,

Detroit and Chicago.

Deputy Chief of Detectives McCarthy said today that the description of two of the seven men held in New York

following a statement by Bartolow Pe-trone, fitted that of two men arrested here during the last two years in connection with the feud slayings.
