Outgoing councillors dismissed...

By Gordon Loane
Brunswickan News

A report prepared for the UNB Student Union shows eight councillors missed six or more meetings during the academic year, constituting grounds for automatic dismissal unless compelling reasons are given.

Arts reps Michelle Hicks and Tricia Sheppard, Business rep Mike Wallace, Education reps Suzanne McLean and Todd Muscroft, Engineering rep Daryl Armstrong, Nursing rep Bernie Boucher and Student-at-Large Trevor Brown were all implicated in the report, released on the last day of their terms.

Councillor Trevor Brown acknowledged that he hasn't attended enough meetings this year but suggested the matter could have been handled in a different manner.

"I think this method shows a lack of compassion and class," said Brown before leaving the meeting.

SU President Paul Estabrooks, without citing reasons, moved a motion to reinstate councillors Armstrong, Sheppard, Brown and Wallace.

After little debate, Estabrooks' motion was carried.

Then, VPs FitzPatrick and Alward asked council to reinstate Boucher and Muscroft.

"Boucher has duties at the Children's Hospital and Muscroft spent first term practice teaching out of Fredericton," said FitzPatrick.

Council unanimously voted to reinstate both with two abstentions. Councillors MacLean and Hicks were not reinstated and will be notified.

Engineers experiment with kids...

By Amber McCully
Brunswickan News

Granted, the title sounds horrific, but according to David Flook, a Student Council rep from Engineering, there's no need for dismay.

The posters seen scattered around Head Hall were advertising an annual trip made by volunteers to visit children at St. Dunstan's School.

From March 13 to March 30, about a dozen UNB students demonstrated some common experiments at the school during pre-arranged time periods.

Flook said that their purpose was to "show a wide range of things" and "open imaginations."

According to Flook, last year was the first time that such a thing has been done. The program, designed primarily to put an end to the science/engineering stereotype, went well, Flook said.

Pub woes continue...

By Gordon Loane
Brunswickan News

Losses continue to mount at the UNB SU owned and operated pub "The Cellar." Financial figures released at Council this week show "The Cellar" had an operating deficit of $493.51 in February.

The total operating deficit this year now stands at $26,199.60 with March and April results still to come.

SU President Paul Estabrooks is still confident that the pub has turned the corner.

"March sales were higher than anticipated and food sales in the pub have increased," he told Student Council this week.

"Our base of clients is continuing to broaden," he asserted.

Estabrooks said the pub will not need any more money from the SU to continue operations this school year.

In its 1995-96 fiscal year which begins May 1st, Council has approved a $14,000 budget for the pub to cover certain overhead expenses during the Summer.

Still no disability policy...

Brunswickan News

The Fredericton Senate has again tabled adoption of a Disability Policy that was ratified by Saint John in 1993. A proposed change to the calendar statement on medical handicaps was sent back to be reviewed by lawyers after concerns were raised as to the wording of the policy.

Phil Wright, a UNB professor, was one of those who felt that the wording of the policy was too harsh. He suggested that the terminology be made more friendly.

The new clause, proposed by the Senate Committee on Student Standings and Promotions, reads as follows:

"The student is required to provide to the University recommendations from relevant professionals as to what considerations are necessary to achieve course and examination completion. The University will, at its discretion, react to such recommendations only if its resources permit."

In a letter requesting the reconsideration of the policy, Grace Getty of the Senate Student Services Committee, encouraged the adoption of the statement "The University of New Brunswick is committed to equitable treatment of students with disabilities."

Still no word on tuition hikes...

By Gordon Loane
Brunswickan News

UNB's Board of Governors will set tuition and residence fees for next fall at a meeting scheduled next Thursday, April 13th according to James O'Sullivan, Vice-President Finance and Administration.

"Until that time I'm not in a position to make any announcement," said O'Sullivan.

O'Sullivan has already indicated that tuition will rise at UNB next fall. But by how much is still an administration secret.

O'Sullivan also refused to be pinned down when asked whether residence fees would rise.

VP Academic candidates speak

By Mary Rogal-Black
Brunswickan News

Lou Visentin covered some ground this week in dispelling the 'cloud' that hung over his candidacy for the position of VP Academic.

Following a prepared talk for an audience of approximately one hundred members of the university community, Visentin turned to the issue of bad press he has received during his term as VP Academic at Mount Allison University.

Visentin cited polarity at Mount A, and said that he stepped into a campus in which people were already divided.

"I'm at an institution which has a long history of conflict," said Visentin.

Several members of the audience questioned Visentin in an effort to achieve some understanding of his role in the conflicts at Mount Allison, and Visentin responded by suggesting that the environment at UNB would be different.

"UNB is a model of collegiality," said Visentin. "Frankly, that's why I wanted to work here."

VP University Affairs Pat FitzPatrick sits on the hiring committee for the VP Academic. While FitzPatrick had some concerns about the candidate, he said he was impressed with Visentin.

"I found his presentation to the student groups to be honest, forthcoming and certainly not without promise," said FitzPatrick.

A decision on the appointment is expected shortly.

Brunswickan News

Ed Biden told an audience of faculty and students that he envisions the role of VP Academic as one in which he could build a healthy environment for consensus.

At the same time, Biden said that he would not shy away from decision making.

"I intend to look you in the eye and put it in a proper context," he emphasized.

Biden indicated that he would begin a review of 1995's five-year strategic plan almost immediately if selected, "to give us a sense of where we are, where we are going, and how each department and faculty member fits into the strategic plan."

He also stressed the importance of consulting all members of the constituency, including staff, faculty, funding sources, and students.

"Students have a well thought out agenda to put on the table," he said, "and it's important to listen to them."

When questioned about improving the quality of teaching at UNB, Biden said that many of the senior faculty value teaching and take on large, introductory classes.

Biden has been at UNB since 1987, coming from a position in the administration of Children's Hospital in San Diego, California. He has been director of UNB's Biomedical Engineering Research Institute for the past five years.

During that time, he has raised about $1 million in external funding for the institute from external sources and funding programs.

"I have had to bring money through the door to meet the payroll," he said.

Evictions justified says Skidmore

By Greg Moore
Brunswickan News

According to Dean of Residence James Skidmore, three students evicted from Neville House last week could not be trusted to go on living in residence.

The three residents were asked to leave the residence community last week and barred from entering residence property.

Michael Deagle, one of the three who faced eviction and fines after receiving a warning for attempting to throw a friend out of the residence window and subsequently smashing beer bottles, said last week that they were "sort of set up and watched more heavily," and that the charges against them were "just an excuse to get rid of us."

The three had been required to submit a 'performance bond' which stipulated that they must not engage in "violent, aggressive, or disruptive behaviour."

"We don't ask anything of them that isn't expected of everyone," Skidmore said, noting that the rules are part of the contract that residents enter into when they join the residence community and that the performance bond is just an "incredibly clear warning."

According to Dean Skidmore, the three had been drinking and decided to dangle a fellow resident out of a second floor window. This episode, which resulted in one student being slightly injured, led to the drafting of the performance bond.

The object of the bond is, Skidmore says, "to give them a second chance to prove that they want to be part of the residence community."

He explained that a number of similar arrangements have been made with other residents and this is the only one that has been broken.

The events that led to final eviction took place on the weekend of March 25th. According to Dean Skidmore, the three were "sort of rowdy that week-end" and "displayed disrespect" toward the proctor on the floor to the extent that the proctor was forced to spend the night at a hotel for fear of his safety.

Drinking and smashing beer bottles in their room, one of the residents was cut in the face and needed stitches.

"I don't believe that they were just throwing bottles into a garbage can," said Skidmore.

Regardless, Skidmore said that the actions of the three residents were "violent, aggressive, and disruptive" and that they were in violation of the performance bond.

Of the proctor's response to the disturbance, Skidmore expressed a desire to dispel allegations that proctor Shawn Hickey was acting as a "loose cannon."

"Shawn is a very good proctor," he said, adding that he "exercises very sound judgment."

The three were told Monday that they had two hours to move out and that the university would pay for three nights at a hotel while they searched for new accommodation. Skidmore said that this was necessary to protect the other residents.

Apparently stung by conjectures that he is an authoritarian who enjoys throwing students out of residence, Skidmore said that he felt badly for the evicted students.

"But we have to protect the whole community," he said.

Skidmore added that he had frequent contact with one of the three who was a member of the house committee and that he "is a nice guy."

"These people just have no concept of how to live in a community," he said. "Think of the other people that live there."

The three had complained that they had insufficient funds for food and transportation last week, since the refund cheques were not issued until Friday. Skidmore said the situation was regrettable but the cheques were issued as quickly as possible. The Business Office normally only issues cheques on Fridays.

Skidmore indicated that he would "look into that to see if we could write them a hundred dollar cheque right away," in future cases.

"I don't want people not to eat," he said. "We didn't time it," Skidmore explained further, "they did."

Native studies class reacts to racism

By Mary Rogal-Black
Brunswickan News

"Go to work and pay taxes!!!" This message was printed across the bottom of a poster in Marshall D'Avery Hall, announcing a meeting of the Student Heritage Council.

When lecturer David Perley saw the graffiti, he took the poster to his native studies class.

The students in Perley's class decided to react, and today the results of three weeks of work come alive with RACE Day.

RACE is an acronym developed by the class. It stands for Respect Aboriginal Cultures Everywhere.

Perley said he and his students have organized RACE Day as a class project to address the perception that First Nations people are "parasites".

Santo DiPietro is enrolled in the Bridging Year program this year, and is planning to attend the Education program next year.

"As a class, we were moved to respond to the misconceptions that the racist graffiti detailed," DiPietro explained.

Phyllis Wood said she has encountered racism in the community. Wood recounted a conversation she had with a woman in the hospital.

"I don't think she knew I was a native. She said she didn't think it was fair that Indians get their education paid for," said Wood, a Bridging Year student who plans to take Office Management next year.

"I said white people came and took the

Wood went on to point out that given the chance, First Nations people would rather get out and get an education than be on welfare.

The students hope to present an alternative view to racist myths through their project.

Plans for RACE day include a series of speakers who will give talks on subjects including Spirituality, Hunting and Fishing Rights, and Land Claims and Self-Government.

"It will be an informal day filled with sharing and celebration," said DiPietro.

"There will be a presentation on the contributions that First Nations people have provided Maritime Society," he added.

Some members of the class have been working on research projects, looking at some of the misconceptions about native people. Greg Gruben, one of the class participants, studied the issue of unemployment and welfare among First Nations people.

"We face the same problems as other Canadians," said Gruben. "On top of that we deal with prejudice, racism."

"The system is saying, 'we'll keep you dependent,'" added Perley.

The day will begin at 9:00 a.m. with an opening ceremony featuring The Muskrat Singers, and close in the afternoon with a feast in the cafeteria at Marshall D'Avery Hall.

Donations to help fund RACE Day have been received from the Oromocto First Nations, Kingsclear First Nations, and from the UNB Student Union.

This will be the first RACE Day, but Perley said he hopes it will not be the last.

"I'd like to see these issues addressed on an ongoing basis," he said. "I feel there are too many misconceptions that need to be addressed."

MICHAEL EDWARDS

SO LONG, FAREWELL, GOODBYE (AND ALL THAT JAZZ...)

It was just going to be an enormous number of short reviews to end off the year as there has been a whole bunch of records coming out in the past while. But I couldn't do it. Two of those records deserved slightly more extensive coverage, simply because they are among the best I have heard in ages. Namely Elastica and Nectarine No. 9.

I finally get to do my full-blown gush about Elastica at long last this week, and I am very happy about that. It feels like geological ages have passed since the hype about this bunch first started in the UK music press. And the most amazing thing is that they have managed to conserve the level of energy that they had in the early days and put out a debut album that is quite spectacular (except maybe for the rather boring title of Elastica). They have become quite notorious for their delicious plagiarism, one case with Wire has already been settled out of court, and they make no attempt to disguise it either. And why hide it anyway - is there anything wrong with wearing your influences on your sleeve? They have the good sense to steal from the very rich in ideas such as the aforementioned Wire, the Stranglers, and numerous other new wave bands. New wave? Yup, I'm afraid that they are new wave, and none of that new-wave-of-new-wave rubbish either. The songs all get to the point very quickly - verse, chorus and that's about it. Nothing unnecessary at all. And one thing that I like an awful lot is that no song fades out - they all just come to an end when they have said all they have to. Only 'Never Here' (their epic) clocks in at over four, and it does stand out as a highlight but not because the other songs don't have time to develop their ideas fully. Instead, it's just because it's a damned good song. They are all damned good songs. And after sixteen of them, in a succinct forty minutes, it's all over. A hell of a ride though. A magnificent debut, and for once you can believe the hype.

Another record that dearly deserves your attention is Niagara Falls by Scotland's Nectarine No. 9. They are a band that I have been following closely over the past eighteen months as the founding member, Davey Henderson, is one of Scotland's most entertaining songwriters. Their four releases so far have all been on the legendary Postcard Recordings Of Scotland, and so it has been an import only scenario so far. But worry no more as Quebec's Shake The Record Label have just licensed this compilation so that Nectarine No. 9 can finally reach a wider audience. If you have been reading my column over the past while, you will probably have a good idea of what they sound like. If you have forgotten (or are a newcomer...) I shall refresh your memory. Mr. Henderson writes pop songs. But not normal pop songs; he never has. Instead he writes pop songs with ragged edges that grate and grab at your psyche until they have gotten right into your head. They get under your skin by the most direct route - by tearing at your flesh and entering through your open wounds while you are trying to nurse them. Both fuzzy, distorted guitars and pure angelic guitars form the backdrop to the whole thing, and also the occasional sample and keyboard. That makes it sound a little on the violent side - it's not. It's all very subtle; his songs are almost gentle and some could be mistaken as tender if you were not paying attention. Subliminal and sublime. Completely unique and utterly indispensable. (Shake The Record Label, 598 Victoria, C.P. 36587, St-Lambert, Quebec, J4P 3S8)

And as for the rest? Well, I thought I should take a leaf out of Elastica's book and get straight to the point, and cut through the usual bullshit. So here to both enlighten and entertain you is a quick guide to some of the latest releases...
P.J. Harvey - To Bring You My Love: Imagine, if you can, that Nick Cave and Diamanda Galas had a child. And that child, Polly, has just released her best album to date full of dark, disturbing songs that both enthrall and frighten. You must own this album which will be in the top five for 1995, make no mistake. Various Artists - Sloubrev/Percolator: Rather insipid pair of compilations from Nettwerk that rely too heavily on well-known names instead of decent songs. Lots of old stuff, and the new remixes suck. Morrissey - World Of Morrissey: A compilation of recent tracks. Not as good as The Smiths.

Various Artists - Muriel's Wedding: The Australian obsession with Abba continues on this film soundtrack a la Priscilla, Queen Of The Desert. Wonderfully cheesy, and a surprising amount of fun.

The Rankin Family - Grey Dusk Of Eve: A new EP which isn't as bad as expected. The presence of some members of The Hothouse Flowers on the title track helps to reduce the normal level of Rankin squeakiness. Smudge - Hot Smoke And Sassafras: Eight more songs from the Australian link to the Lemonheads. Unfortunately its not as tuneful as that, but still some decent songs. Well, two at least.

Ciccone Youth - The Whitey Album: Sonic Youth in their Madonna-worshipping days. Three fun cover versions, the highlight of which is a funky version of 'Into The Groove'. Lots of unnecessary noise too, but that's typical for the Sonics. Gene - Gene: Very originally titled EP of early singles from another next big thing from UK. A dead ringer for the Smiths in most places, which is hardly a bad thing. I really look forward to the album. The Tea Party - The Edges Of Twilight: More from the band that seems to want so bad to be Led Zeppelin fronted by Jim Morrison. Very predictable and sounds just like the last one. Sad.

Traci Lords - 1000 Fires: First album from a woman best known for her previous work in the film industry (ahem). Your normal run-of-the-mill dance music (aided by members of Jesus Jones and the Thompson Twins) plus a disturbing autobiographical track. Not as bad as I thought it would be.

Various Artists - Word Up: Collection of spoken word pieces from series featured on Much Music. Some work, some don't. A chore to listen to in one sitting though. The Who - Live At Leeds: Simply one of the best live albums ever released, and now it has eight more songs added. Loud and raw, it will hopefully give The Who their rightful place in rock history. Recommended.

Radiohead - The Bends: This band will no longer be known as the one that did that Creep song. A quite incredible album that sounds an awful lot like U2 in places, but yet a lot more engaging. One of the year's best, and simply essential.

Fun ^ da ^ mental - Seize The Time: Very political agit-pop that claims to contain the truth. It does too, documenting racial inequalities in the UK from the viewpoint of the persecuted. Rap with a new perspective. Gavin Bryars - The Sinking Of The Titanic: Concept piece from one of the more interesting people working in music today. Very classical sounding with its strings and boys' choir - as soothing as such a mournful piece can be. Underworld - Dubnobasswithmyheadman:

Quite simply the best dance album to come out in the past twelve months, although it seems unfair to call it that. Eerie songs that weave their way into your brain, becoming part of you. Search high and low for this one. Chris Connelly - Shipwreck: Shock!! Member of Revolting Cocks releases thoughtful album!! Almost reminiscent of David Sylvain or David Bowie in places, this is a delightful record that will probably sink without a trace. Sigh.

Love Battery - Straight Freak Ticket: Remarkably good album for a Seattle band. Two nice guitars that twist around each other, and vocal harmonies that will take you back to the late sixties. Except a bit louder. Its like grunge never happened.

Catherine - Sorry: This is quite simply some fine indie pop - fuzzy guitars, and vocals high up in the mix. Bonus points for the Bee Gees cover, but points off for a twelve minute song.

Royal Trux - Thank You: Indie stalwarts nearly lose their credibility for signing with a major label. They move much closer to the Rolling Stones this time, and very nearly blow it. The jury is still out.

The Beautiful South - Carry On Up The Pop Charts: Collection of wonderful, witty pop songs by a band that never seem to have had any fame outside the UK (just like their predecessors, the Housemartins). The perfect place to find out just what you have been missing out on.

Die Cheertleader - Son Of Filth: What you would expect from a band both recommended and produced by Henry Rollins - loud guitars and powerful female vocals with lyrics that seem to make sense. A good judgement call by Hank.

Red House Painters - Ocean Beach: San Francisco's most miserable band are back, and they are just a bit cheerier this time round. Beautiful music, sparse arrangements, heartfelt lyrics and even some short songs. Mark Kozalek's songwriting goes from strength to strength. This could almost be their pop album if it wasn't for the epic 'Drop'. Nevertheless, well worth your attention.

Echobelly - Insomniac: I never did get the album, but this EP will do nicely in the meantime. Wonderful indie pop that almost sounds like The Smiths fronted by Debbie Harry. And an added bonus of two BBC session tracks that are better than the album versions. Bliss.

Jason & The Scorchers - A Blazing Grace: Country music with a punkish twist, and a spot of hillbilly for good measure. Throw in a couple of cover versions, the requisite ballads and you have a half decent album for the first few listens anyway.

Various Artists - A Week Or Two In The Real World: A very eclectic compilation on Peter Gabriel's label that features such highlights as Van Morrison singing with the Holme Brothers, the first new track by Kurt Wallinger in what seems like ages and a healthy dose of world music. A good starting point for exploring alien cultures.

Cold Water Flat - Cold Water Flat: The first release on the newly formed Fort Apache label is well worth salivating over. The music is loud, but yet the lyrics tell a different story of pain and regret. Unlike anything else out there, it's a very hypnotic, intoxicating blend and another recommended purchase.

Bootsauce - Bootsauce: Their fourth album is very probably their best one, but they thankfully don't forget their sense of humour. Guitars sound funkier than ever, and even the more disturbing songs have a singalong quality. Fun in its own peculiar way.

Pluto - Failure: A seven inch taster from their new album. It's their usual fuzzy guitar pop, backed with one of the most perfect Beatles impressions I have ever heard. I can't wait for the album to finally turn up.

Various Artists - North: It would appear that the only thing worse than seeing that terrible movie is listening to the soundtrack. I feel dirty just listening to it, excuse me while I go shower.

Grip Inc. - Power Of Inner Strength: These guys are probably at the pinnacle of German death metal. But when my ears bleed, I like it to be an almost pleasurable experience. Loud and boring.

Zumpano - Look What The Rookie Did: Zombies wannabes from Vancouver release a very nice album full of sugary melodies. So sweet it almost runs out of your speakers like molasses, but still rather endearing.

And there we have it. The end of another year. I shall bid you all a very fond farewell, and leave you with some recommendations of five albums (in addition to this week's picks) that you should all have in your music collection. I'll be round to check in a week or so...

In no particular order we have Portishead - Dummy; Oasis - Definitely Maybe; Pulp - His N' Hers; Jeff Buckley - Grace and Velvet Crush - Teenage Symphonies To God. Enjoy, and in the words of the great Abba, thank you for the music.

ARTS & ENTERTAINMENT

Our Bread 'N Crack Revue

By LAMEY FORKBENT
Telecrap Urinal

This year's Bread 'N Crack Revue was slightly disappointing according to a number of Entertainment reviewers, who turned out to view the production. The MC's lagged, the dancers sagged and the entire production, save for a few worthwhile souls, should have been bagged. As a result, the University of New Brunswick, Fredericton Stupor Union has announced that they will be a part of the events at next year's Bread 'N Crack Revue '96. When asked why they (the Stupor Union executives) were doing it, Stupor Union President Callme Lambchop stated, "We examined the situation, and concluded that what the event needed, was more "entertaining" productions. More laughs, witty repartees and snappy one-liners from the crowd; a vaudeville style that we think we can provide." A member of the Stupor Union council, who wished to remain anonymous, included, "Besides, its not like being laughed at and pummelled by a barrage of one-liners and jokes is a new thing for the Stupor Union. it happens all the time!" Commenting on the possible line-up for the next Bread 'N Crack Revue, VP External Affairs, Plaid FizzCatick was slightly hesitant with revealing too much, but said, "...well, VP Student Services Twist Gravyton, VP University Affairs Nay-he Basket and VP Finance and Administration Shandelier Caulker will be doing a line-dance thingamabobber. Callme, I think, is going to do stand-up, and I'm going to sing!" This was said with a cheerful sort of fatalism, much to the regret of this writer.

The Telecrap Urinal entertainment staff are anticipating the next Bread 'N Crack Revue; it's slightly more entertaining than the Saint John Council sessions.

How the ballet looked from the inside. (We were told)

ROYAL PRANCERS NOT TO BE MISSED!

BARRY LOSS

As a reviewer, I always look forward to getting the best seats in the house for the shows I am sent to evaluate. So when the Royal Prancers Ballet headed to town, I was very excited about my front row tickets. Excited until they were taken away to be given to some "much more important" person from a "much more important" branch of the media. But was I downhearted? Well, a little but I was determined that it wasn't going to stop me from giving the review of my lifetime.

As I took my seat (a sturdy cardboard box) outside the stage door, I could hear the faint murmur of the crowd inside the nice warm theatre - it is at times like that that I really curse the Canadian winter! After what seemed like an eternity, the orchestra struck up the first notes of some tune. I wasn't quite sure which one as there was no usher handing me a programme as I took my seat. But I think that it may have been Tchaikovsky. Or someone like that. The dancers must have been at their most graceful during this dance as I could hardly hear their delicate little feet against the stage. But in the next piece, the dull thuds were much more evident so it must have a bit more lively. And as the evening progressed, I could almost hear the exhausted breathing of the dancers above the sound of my own shivers. They really did give it their all! I would have applauded all night, except by that time I could hardly feel my hands.

It was a wonderful evening of dance; one that could have only been improved by actually being in the theatre. My thanks must go out to the EN-rage people for making this evening possible.

TRAVEL

Canada - it's not just for Americans anymore

This year, why go to all that bother of waiting at the border just to get there and drink that nasty, watered-down beer? Instead, stay in Canada and discover what this fine country we call home has to offer.

So let me take you on a quick tour of the provinces and territories to give you a taste of what Canada may hold in store for your summer vacation:

NEWFOUNDLAND

Welcome to God's Country! A province so special, it needs its own time zone. Newfoundland isn't just about fishing and drinking - it has so much more than that.

Let's start off in St. John's where there are pubs at every corner. So many pubs! Lots of them. You wouldn't believe how many pubs there are. I mean, they are everywhere. Tons of the things. Wherever you look, there's a pub. So you can expect to have a drink or two!

Just don't expect to see any cod these days. But you can help out all those poor fishermen out by asking them to take you out for a day trip in their little boats. We wouldn't want them to go to idle, would we?

PRINCE EDWARD ISLAND
Welcome to God's Country!

Nothing says more about Prince Edward Island than that dear little girl, Anne of Green Gables. Her sweet face can be seen almost everywhere you look, and I for one NEVER get tired of it.

Cavendish itself is the home of Anne; in and around there, you will be able to find all manner of 'Anne' attractions such as her house, Green Gables Post Office, and Matthew's Pizza Parlour. Not to mention all those mini golf courses!!

But if you are not the type that likes to read children's books, there are always those lovely beaches which are never too busy - you can always find a quiet spot away from everyone else for some special time on your own.

And oh! Those mini golf courses.

NOVA SCOTIA

Welcome to God's Country! 'New Scotland' is the literal translation of Nova Scotia, and that is quite fitting as so many people down there think that they actually are Scottish.

If you like your fruit big, then this is the place for you! See the biggest strawberries and blueberries you've ever seen in your life. It's just a pity you can't eat them!

Make your way to Halifax and see the famous boat Bluenose. What can I say? It's big and blue, but it doesn't have a nose though! And then you can try some of the many restaurants in town - have yourself a lobster or two, and at such reasonable prices!

NEW BRUNSWICK
Welcome to God's Country!
There is no better place in New Brunswick to start your exploring than our very own Saint John - the home of the highest tides in the world. And what about that great attraction the Reversing Sewer where you can see the floating debris change direction four times a day!

Up in the capital city Fredericton, there isn't nearly so much to do, but it deserves a mention simply because of its fine student publication, The Brunswickian which must rank among the best in Canada.

Are you a chocolate lover? Then get yourself down to St. Stephen for the ChocolateFest at the Ganong Chocolate Factory. Even if you don't like to eat the stuff, you can have hours of fun watching people eat their own body weight in chocolate and then run off into the bushes to purge their sorry, glutinous selves.

At St. Andrews you can smell the sea air, and also all that fish being washed up on shore thanks to the level of pollution that comes from living so close to Saint John.

Moncton is hardly worth talking about.

QUEBEC

Welcome to God's Country! You really should try to visit Quebec before they set up passport control at the border. After all, it is one of the most beautiful parts of Canada, and let's keep it that way!

In Montreal you can buy some of the best bagels you will ever taste in your life, and you don't have to pay those horrid market prices either! And then there is that wonderful smoked meat which is one of the healthiest things that nature has to offer. Don't miss it!

And for hockey fans, a visit to see either Quebec's or Montreal's fine NHL team mustn't be passed up on. It'll make you forget all about the Ottawa Senators!

ONTARIO

WELCOME TO GOD'S COUNTRY!

Ontario is the home of our capital city and also our parliament; something that makes it extra special.

First stop Toronto where you can hopefully go and see the great Toronto Blue Jays playing baseball (if that horrid strike ever comes to an end!) in the majestic Skydome.

Do you like nickel? If you do then Sudbury is the place for you! They have a huge one there next to their mines. And thanks to all those heavy metals in the soil, you'll be lucky to see a tree in miles. Bring along a silver suit, a camera and take some shots of you on the 'Moon' to fool all your friends!

MANITOBA

Welcome to God's Country! Lake Manitoba boasts some glorious beaches, golf courses and also one of the largest Icelandic communities outside Iceland. Bring along a puffin or two for a barbecue you'll never forget!

And if you want to see some of those famous Manitoba buffalo then keep your eyes peeled and your camera ready. After all, they don't come along that often. More frequent visitors are the mosquitos, who love to swarm around the magnificent cities. Buzz, buzz!

SASKATCHEWAN

Welcome to God's Country! Do you like your country flat? You've come to the right place! And you like wheat too? Congratulations as you've come to the Promised Land. Nirvana even (but without the loud guitars).

Yup, its real flat out here. More flat than you could ever imagine. If you think that it's flat where you are, you ain't seen nothing yet! This makes Saskatchewan the ideal place for a bicycle holiday - none of those nasty uphill hikes to make!

ALBERTA

Welcome to God's Country! Why not stop off in Calgary, home of the famous stampede. Not that they really have a stampede through the city anymore - they stopped that back in 1992. Instead it's a much more civilised event with more cowboys than you could ever imagine. Even if you are a big fan of westerns, you will never have seen so many cowboys. Everywhere you look it's cowboys. Bring your lasso!

And why not go and see a glacier or two. Big, cold rivers of ice. And who knows, if you are lucky then you may see a creature or two embedded in the ice. Mammoth steaks all round!!

BRITISH COLUMBIA

Welcome to God's Country! If you like to ski then this is the place to come to. If it doesn't rain too much. But even if it does, a bit of rain has never hurt anyone! So grab your skis and head downhill towards Vancouver, that Mecca of the West.

Vancouver is the place to get the best pizza in Canada, but make sure you don't go to the restaurant that had the rats! Keep an eye on the local paper for this! And what about some sport? Come 1997 there will be a basketball team to go and watch too. Won't that be exciting?

THE REST

Most of the rest is pretty inhospitable. So you'll probably want to keep away from here. After all, there are so many other lovely places to go to. Like our very own Saint John!

And there you have it - a quick guided tour through our fair land. And I'm sure you'll all join me in a rousing chorus of 'Oh Canada' in celebration of our home and native land!

WE THANK all of our university student customers!

BEST OF LUCK on exams and for the summer!

DEAR SLAPPY

Engineer has social skills deficits

Dear Slappy: Help! I am a mechanical engineer, and I can't seem to be able to make friends easily. I try to be social and be nice to people, but nothing seems to work. When I try to meet a woman at the Piller Pub, I can't wait to impress her with my intelligence. Yet, nothing I do seems to work out right; when I try to impress her with my mechanical tools, she gets bored. She (and some other people) say that I lack social skills. What can be done about this? - Out-of-gear Engineer

Dear O.O.G.E.: Well, perhaps you should trade in that iron ring for a dictionary (or at least a spell checker); I've never seen more atrocious spelling in my life! Now...as to your problem. Sadly your case seems to be all too common with the rest of the engineer breed. I suggest you join the Engineer Support Group for the Socially Challenged, headed by the UNB Arts Department's Psychology faculty. Maybe your problem is due to your relationships with machines, instead of with people. It may be a good idea to get away from that gear stick, dual accelerator engine and get into the swing of things on campus.

Dear Slappy: I am a well respected member of the Stupid Union executive, and I get along well with the rest of my fellow Stupid Unioners. The problem is that I have a secret that I hope no one finds out. You see, I'm a nymphomaniac with an uncontrollable urge to grab men off the street, drag them to the nearest phone booth, rip off their clothes, smear them with kumquat jelly, and make mad passionate love to them to the tunes of Barry Manilow. I want to get rid of this little "problem", but don't know how to go about seeking help. Please Slappy, I respect your advice. How can I live a normal life without other people finding out about this? - Natty "Sexpress Yourself" FitzPatty

Dear Sex: Ummm...where...I mean what are you doing right now with this problem? There...uh...appears to be some...errrr...negative feelings in terms of your...uhhh...situation. The sexual part seems rather...okay, but the phone booth scenario is problematic. Think of the cramped space, not to mention the lack of...well, privacy! And this kumquat jelly thing, what the hell is a kumquat? Has anyone even seen this thing? And anyway, why can't you just use chocolate sauce like everyone else. Finally, two words... "Barry Manilow?" Why not Enigma, or even the 1812 Overture? Or maybe those cannons might go off a bit early if you know what I mean. Try the counselling services on campus; in the meantime, is the number 27 or 24 on your address?

Dear Slappy: After years of searching, I've finally found my soulmate. We met at the So-Shall Club last Friday night, and it was love at first sight! We sat at a table, while hordes of other soulsearchers wandered aimlessly around us. After dancing and countless numbers of brews, we ended up at my place. When I woke up the next day, she was gone! I don't know where she lives, or what her phone number is, but I do know her first name was Wendy. I would really appreciate any help you can give. - Sole Finder

Dear Sole: Soooo...you're the guy who Wendy met at the So-Shall Club. Well, well, quite the interesting night, eh? You might as well know that she happens to be my sister...touch her again, and I'll break your fucking legs. And I'm not kidding around either. I mean it. And I know where you live because you were stupid enough to put your address at the end of your letter. So watch your back!

DISASTRO ADVICE

Born on April - The exam that you thought wasn't until 1:30 p.m. actually was set for 9:30 a.m. Think twice before you buy that lime green spandex body suit; contrary to popular belief, you really didn't exercise much over the Winter.

Aries (March 21-April 19) Just when you thought your papers were over, you suddenly reread the syllabus and discover yet another paper due yesterday. Good luck on your date to night - bring a book; he/she took lessons from Newt Gingrich.

Taurus (April 20-May 20) A manicure and lobotomy seem to be a good idea right now. A pleasure trip during Easter weekend ends in you being hospitalized for three months with a herniated disc, trying to impress members of the opposite/same sex with your skill on the mechanical bull.

Gemini (May 21-June 21) Your previous machismo/machisma (female version of the former) attitude takes a plunge, as the deviant half of your personality asserts itself and dresses you in drag. Funny enough, no one notices the difference, and people actually tell you you look good. Your pet aardvark passed away due to ingesting too many roaches from your apartment.

Cancer (June 22-July 22) It is not a good ass day for you. Beware of falling student union councillors. The letter to the editor you wrote last week results in a major libel suit that you can't win. Your boy-/girlfriend dumps you for a cultist from Reno.

Leo (July 23-Aug 22) You really need to get out more often. Why not try the psychic hotline to find out what you can do about the situation with your B. O. Your strictly traditional, by-the-book (i.e. Bible) parents' surprise visit will leave you in an uncomfortable position, as the guy/gal you picked up last night, walks out of your bedroom with nothing on.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Your amorous nature results in contracting a weird virus that knocks out your sex drive, despite Spring Fever. Your significant other is not amused about this, and decides to join a convent/monastery. Who the hell are you kidding with that story about the "one who got away" at the Chestnut; it was really one of the Gemini people (see Gemini).

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) The balance of the cosmos are aligned against you on this inauspicious day...may as well surrender unconditionally and stay in bed. Travel to exotic lands will result in exotic illnesses. Curb a tendency to surrender to Tourette's Syndrome, while in church.

Scorpio (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) A dark shadow looms over you this day; your rent check bounced. Your photo in Viewpoint at the Brunswickan, results in someone with whom you had a fling with years ago (and don't want to meet again) contacting you and saying that they are on their way to your place right now.

Sagittarius (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) The target of your affections happens to be one of the Gemini people (see Gemini). Chance encounter with a telephone pole leaves you with amnesia; your roommates take advantage of the situation and scarf some stuff from your room. The term "couch potato" is appropriate right now; the cholesterol level you ingested from Beaver foods makes Roseanne Barr look like Heather Locklear.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan 19) A chance stop at X-citement Video, yields some embarrassing results; your boy-/girlfriend videotaped your last night together, and is raking in millions. Expect changes in your life, as the pregnancy test that you took/your significant other took, tests positive and you had not had sex in seven months. Set your priorities straight - study or drink...study or drink...stubby...or drimp...stubby or dri...HIC.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Hot water seems to be the order for the day, as the O. J. trials present some hard evidence that implicates you. The "Juice" is pleased that the spotlight is not on him anymore, and sends some goons to "convince" you that you are the one that the police are looking for. Meanwhile, the homebrew that you were making turns bad; pity you drank it, but at least it got you sympathy...as well as a major hospital bill.

Pisces (Feb. 20-March 20) Your paper on the Canada-Spain turbot affair, leads to a government official manipulating you to take a position on a "special" committee. You swallow it hook-line-and-sinker. You then become the scapegoat for the whole sordid affair, and millions of people burn you in effigy. On a local note, your professor thinks that you plagiarized the entire mess, and fails you.

WHERE'S THE WORD?

By GO WHEELIT

HOW TO PLAY: There are supposedly a whole bunch of words hidden in that square mess of letters below. What? You don't believe me? Really, they are. What does a boy have to do to convince some people. Anyway, there are a whole bunch of words down there, and you have to find them. They go in every possible direction, even backwards. Bet you never saw that one coming. So you are supposed to circle the letters in the words (we've shown you one down below in case you are some sort of winkle...), and then at the end of it all the letters that are left will form a word. To help you out, there is a clue down below, and we even tell you how many letters because deep down we are nice people. Really, we are. Even that Carla woman (despite what you may have heard - that's all lies. Lies I tell you).

Roller Derby skaters end strike

Replacements return to day jobs in engineering and finance

Lazy Bastards Press

NEWARK - After a hiatus of 237 days the roller derby strike is over. Player representative Gonad Fear announced yesterday that in a unanimous vote 57% of the players have agreed to accept the owner's offer of recognition of the union in return for the players dropping their demand for pay equal to that received by American Gladiators.

This was heralded as a major victory by owner representative Tub Stealit. "The players have to realize that with the added competition from American Gladiators and Knights and Warriors, we can no longer afford to pay the huge salaries that roller derbies have been making. The loss in television revenues alone has forced several of our owners into near bankruptcy."

At last notice, the Montreal Expose, Milwaukee Stewers, Pittsburgh Pyres, and Minnesota Twines are reporting financial difficulties. However, they have yet to respond to the players' request that they open their books for public scrutiny.

The players union has repeatedly claimed that no such financial problems exist. "The owners have shown that they are unwilling to bargain in good faith," said Fear from his car phone in Acapulco. "While the skaters are literally being forced to beg for a living, the owners are living high on the hog. Their refusal to open their books merely proves that they have actually been making money."

During the strike, star San Francisco Defiant point man Barely Bondable was given permission by a California judge to skip his alimony payments. Bondable has become poverty stricken since the strike put an end to his $30,000/week cheques. "I'm completely unable to pay my alimony under the present conditions," said Bondable when interviewed as he left his Porsche. "I've got an expensive lifestyle that I've got to maintain if I want to maintain my position as the single most spoiled athlete in the universe." Details of Bondable's contract reveal that he has a clause which states that on all road trips he is to have his own private suite complete with massage attendants.

Roller derby fans throughout North America have expressed disgust with both the owners and skaters over the labor dispute. Many fans questioned whether they would return to roller derby once the strike reached its conclusion. "I really just don't care any more," said long time Aureoles fan Mary Chamberlain. "I've been to just about every Aureoles event that Baltimore has ever had, but d it, I'm fed up. Maybe I'll just start watching the Gladiators. At least you know that they're going to give 100% every time and not be worrying about what their agent thinks."

The real losers in the strike have proven to be the replacement roller derby skaters. With the settlement, the start of the season has been pushed back by three hours, allowing the real skaters plenty of time to get in good roller derby condition. The replacement skaters, who had been signed with the promise that although they would have to go without pay throughout spring training, they would also be able to fulfill their dreams of becoming a professional roller derby skater. Wane Grateski was particularly distraught. "I've been dreaming of a career in roller derby ever since my own career started going down the tubes five years ago. I figure that if I could dominate my sport to the degree that I did before I got married, then it should be no problem to cross over to a sport that takes less of a toll on my body." Grateski, of course, is a highly overrated member of the Los Angeles Kinks organization.

With the start of a new season, the Toronto Blue Gaze will be once again defending their title as world champions. The Blue Gaze had a poor season prior to last season's strike, but Canadian fans had been rewarded by an excellent performance by roller derby's most embarrassing team: the Montreal Expose.

The Expose have proven to be an embarrassment to the roller derby owners' claim that small market teams are unable to compete against the big cities. The Expose, competing in the league's second smallest market, managed to have the best fatality and injury record in all of roller derby en route to what seemed to be their first post season appearance since 1981.

Major League Roller Derby is hoping that the inroads that have been made by American Gladiators will not translate to 1995. Gladiators President Tim Bjorn is confident that the Gladiators will be able to maintain their popularity. "We've got the best athletes that money can buy. All of our gladiators can press 93 pounds and have a vertical of 9.3 inches." The Gladiators, of course, instead of having evenly balanced squads, field teams of nine men and three women.

The first game of the upcoming season will be played two weeks from the day after yesterday, with the Cincinnati Dreads hosting the Chicago Pubs for their traditional season opener. The Dreads are considered to be one of the best roller derby teams in the sport today, but are expected to face tough competition from the Atlanta Bravados.

Dreads Coaching Switch

Ex Canuckian switches to field hockey

By KNEEL HEDGE
Telecrap Urinal

FREDERICTON - The UNB Varsity Dreads field hockey team got a surprise when they discovered the identity of their head coach for the 95/96 season. Granny Grunt, the ex Montreal Canuckian player and head coach of the UNB hockey team this season takes over from Donner Antlerstream when she and her husband head off to spend next year going bush in upstate New York.

Head of the athletic department Tim Bjorn justified his decision in an interview shortly after the announcement.

"Granny did an incredible job this year. He managed to keep the team motivated through the tough regular season and I think our record shows this. While many blame him for the 9-3 loss to the Atlantic Bible College Pussy Cats in the playoffs I think that this is a little unfair. In the playoffs it is the players that need to step up, both physically and mentally and I don't see how we can blame Granny for their inability to do this."

Bjorn then turned his eyes toward the field hockey program for 95/96. "Next year will be an even tougher year for Granny. Keeping the girls motivated through the regular season will be a difficult job, especially considering that they play the same two teams week in, week out. There is so little to play for except a bye in the first round of the playoffs."

How has Granny Grunt reacted to his appointment? Speaking yesterday from his luxurious north side apartment he gave freely of his opinions.

"Well, I was honoured to be considered for the job. Obviously, it is one of the most prestigious at UNB and I'm pleased they think I could do a good job."

Grunt is confident that he will not be a figurehead, employed solely for his local rapport to boost attendances.

"Not at all. I believe that the skills I've learned on and off the ice over the years will contribute greatly to the hockey program. I believe the girls should be using a more physical style. I think we are too offensively minded and I hope to get my assistants to work on some forechecking during the practices."

The change in jobs will dramatically affect Grunt's life. "I'm looking forward to spending more time with the family. With so many games this year, I found I was having trouble spending enough time with the kids, J. Bean, J. Walker and Granny Jr and of course our pet wild turkey. I've no idea how Wayne Heater managed to get through the year, having to attend all those mid-week practices too."

Grunt is confident that his physical approach will pay dividends to his new recruits. "As I said before, we're aiming for a more physical team this year. To move towards this I've managed to secure a couple of new recruits to bulk up the defence, Tonya Shoop and Wendy Simpkins. However, I also recognize the need for fast breaks out of defense and I really like the look of the front line that comes with the arrival of the twins Taby & Lucy Nail'er and Dede Corme. The toughest job was finding a replacement for the standout Chris Tompsun, Frannie LaBlanket."

These recruits have led to a lucrative sponsorship deal for the V-Dreads. "That's correct. Having heard of our new recruits, duB fLite has expressed an interest in sponsoring the team next season."

It's certainly good to see such an enthusiastic new coach for a program that seemed to be going stale under its previous minder. After all, what's the point in playing against the best in Canada if you can't compete.

McBane Bros. in the Fryer

Lazy Bastards Press

FLORENCEVILLE - The McBane Brothers have determined a method for deciding who gets the family fortune: Hot Oil Wrestling. Hairyson challenged his brother by saying that "You suck!" Wallet replied with, "Ya, well your momma!" and something about 250 pounds of cream of wheat, a dwarf pony and a small army of mercenaries.

The bout will take place at either the Florenceville Civic Centre, or a clearing beside the Trans Canada Highway. The McBanes are reportedly shipping in 7 tons of hot oil from their french fry plant via an Irbing tanker that sets sail for the Saint John River tomorrow. Tickets go on sale yesterday at $250.00 for the bleachers and $5.00 for front row seats, as rumor has it the brothers will wrestle with sequined jump suits, strip down to tiger stripe thongs and whip each other.

Saint John Frames bought by Gone Fairy

Grates to stock team with red meat eaters

By BRADY BUNCH
Telecrap Urinal

TORONTO - In a surprise move yesterday, hockey novelty Gone Fairy purchased the St John Frames for an estimated $8-million.

In a hastily organized press conference at Toronto's most pristine erotic fantasy club, Runway 66, Fairy disclosed the motivation behind the move. "Can you believe my restaurant empire has gone down the drain? Too many food poisoning lawsuits and that franchise in Fredericton had less business than my operation in Sweden. White collars don't have any class or taste."

"I decided to shop for an all-Canadian hockey team to pay off my legal fees. A team with heart and courage. The DOA Murder Squad rejected my offer so I approached the Frames."

The deal was finalized yesterday. Fairy has already fired head coach Dob Franceen and his staff, and released several non-Canadian players. Former Montreal Canuckian and Boston Booser Kristi Nihilist will replace Franceen as head coach. Nihilist and assistant Gory Sloberson combined for a total of 4794 penalty minutes during their NHL careers.

"Hey, its no secret that I'm trying to steer this team in a certain direction. I just want my boys to play solid Canadian hockey. We won't win another game this year, but you can bet we'll fill the stands every night."

Saint John native Randy 'Sinbin' Bozo will play on a checking line with recently demoted Brawny Firm and newly acquired Lacy Simone. Coach Nihilist conceded "I'll be playing this line against Obeg Petrovitchskianov and that Russian schmuck Valium Buryovskivitch. He's a pretty boy and we don't like pretty boys. Should be quite a match-up."

Fairy also revealed the new team uniform which will make it's debut tonight. The team color will be black while the logo features a representation of Fairy's dog Brew crapping on a mosaic of European flags.

The crest is a tribute of sorts to the famed hound, who was bludgeoned to death accidentally by Fairy's close friend Fawn Kord-Dick just minutes before Kord-Dick overdozed on a mixture of steroids and cocaine.

The new ownership has already begun paying dividends. The St. John Police Force has hired and trained a SWAT team of twelve officers to deal with crowd and player control while the Frames have added seven medics to their medical staff.

The Frames first home game will be this Monday night against the Cape Breton Strikers. The first 1500 fans will receive a complimentary cricket bat and coupons good for 5 beers from the concession stand. Should be interesting.

Druggie faces ex-con

Lazy Bastards Press

LAS VEGAS - Canadian rowing sensation, Silky Layman, has announced her intention to fight Mickey Titlest for the W.B.A., W.B.O., I.B.C., I.B.F., I.H.A.V.E.B.O., and I.G.P.A.B.O.Y.B. (I'm Gonna Put A Beatin' On You Boy) boxing titles.

Layman, who was recently stripped of a gold medal for drug use, stated that her plans do not reflect that of other athletes switching sports. "I did it because the two greatest athletes in the world, Michael Jordan and Lawrence Taylor, told me that money is . . . I mean isn't everything and that I should do what I believe in." When asked why she choose boxing and Mickey Titlest, she commented, "I didn't want to but I thought Titlest would enjoy being beat up by a woman for once, since he was in prison for three years."

NO ONE IN LYNCHBURG knew why Jack Daniel missed work that spring day in 1904.

No one except his nephew Lem Motlow, who was sworn to silence. You see, Mr. Jack was bound for St. Louis and the World's Fair, where his whiskey could be judged against the world's finest. As it happened, Jack Daniel returned to Lynchburg with a lot less scenery - and a gold medal in his hand. A sip, we believe, will confirm the Fair's judges knew their whiskey.
