It's You

If you want to live in the kind of a town
That's the kind of a town you like,
You don't have to slip your clothes in a grip
And start on a long, long hike.
You'll only find what you've left behind,
For there's nothing that's really new;
It's a knock at yourself if you knock your town
For it isn't your town—IT'S YOU.
Real towns are not made by men afraid
Lest somebody else gets ahead;
If everyone works, and nobody shirks,
You can raise a town from the dead.

High School Literary

The last meeting of the High School Literary Society was held on Monday afternoon, February 25th. The meeting was opened by singing O' Canada. The minutes were then read by the secretary, N. Green. Miss Flumerfelt was appointed critic. The programme was given by the Second Form. Two very delightful choruses were given, one by the boys, the other by the girls. The Misses Mabel McCartney and Zeta Bogle favored the society with a piano duet. Mr. Ralph Sherwood gave a speech on "Why we should help the Literary." Miss Ruth Newell gave a reading. Mr. Gould and Miss Mary Smith gave a delightful piano duet. The Sun-Dial was read by Miss Irene Millar. This as usual was very interesting and humorous. Miss A. Forbes then gave a very helpful talk. A very enjoyable skit was given by Miss Olive Sinclair and Mr. James Goodbrand. The critics remarks were then given by Miss Flumerfelt, and the meeting closed by singing the National Anthem.

The next meeting of the society will be held on Thursday evening, March 13th at 8 o'clock. The programme will be given by ex-pupils.

CARD OF THANKS

Mr. Chas. Griffin wishes to thank the King's Daughters, and many friends for their kindness during his recent illness.

Locals

Mr. Chas. Griffin, who underwent an operation at the Hamilton Hospital about three weeks ago, returned to his home here this week.

Mr. Blake Binkley has purchased a chicken ranch in California and intends moving there in a few weeks. He is having an auction sale of his household goods among which are a number of pieces of antique furniture, Ford coupe and many other articles of exceptional value.

Rev. C. S. Jones happened with a serious accident on Saturday when the axe he was using caught on a clothes line and rebounded striking him on the forehead, inflicting an ugly gash which required several stitches. It was with great difficulty Mr. Jones dispensed sacrament to his congregation on Sunday.

The regular monthly meeting of the Women's Institute was held in the Community Hall on Wednesday afternoon. A goodly number of the members were present despite the unfavorable condition of the country roads. The President occupied the chair and after the opening exercises and the business was dispensed with Miss Dorothy Burns favored with a solo. Then Miss Margaret Sinclair gave a splendid talk on "Canadian Literature" in which she outlined the different periods of Canadian poetry and prose and also briefly discussed some of the most prominent authors and their works. Mrs. Palmer sang two solos in her usual pleasing manner, after which Mr. Torrance gave an address on "Points in Banking". He stressed the importance of saving small sums of money regularly out of one's income, which in time would amount to something worth while. After a brief discussion of plans for the May meeting at which a "Dress Parade" will be featured, the meeting closed with the National Anthem.

Early School Days in Waterdown

Amusing Incident of Teacher Smoking Out Scholars

Mr. R. Patton of Hamilton relates an amusing incident which occurred at the Waterdown school nearly ninety years ago in which the master of the school outwitted the scholars who played a trick on him. The teacher was the father of the late Rev. W. S. Griffin, D. D., and grandfather of the late Dr. H. S. Griffin of Hamilton.

Mr. Patton says:
When I was a boy in my father's house at Carlisle many years ago, Mrs. Abrey told a school story: Time about ninety years ago, nearing the Christmas holidays. The school house was situated on Dundas street near to where W. H. Crooker afterwards built his house. It was a very well built frame structure about 20x30 feet, ceiling about 10 feet high, two windows on each side and two windows and entrance door at the front. It stood on posts about a foot from the ground and not closed in. The writer remembers the old school house. The custom in those days was that the scholars were to shut the master out of the school on the afternoon of the last day of school. Ebenezer Griffin, the teacher, in anticipation of what was to happen put gimlet holes in the lower sash at the meeting rails and inserted a nail; the upper sash being stationary, also put an outside fastening on the door and put a ladder under the house. Next day when noon came Mr. Griffin went to dinner as usual. Returning at one o'clock, he found the door fast on the inside and the scholars cheering him. He begged of them to let him in, but they only laughed the more, so Mr. Griffin took out the ladder and went up on the roof and placed a small board on the chimney. There being a fire in the stove Mr. Griffin was master of the situation. The smoke soon filled the room and the situation was reversed. The scholars tried to open the door and then the windows without results, and soon as Mr. Griffin had smoked them some, he opened the door, having had the second laugh which, of course, he greatly enjoyed much to the chagrin of the scholars.

Such was Waterdown school in olden times, but schools and other things have greatly changed of late years.

"When Hearts Command"

By ELIZABETH YORK MILLER

"When hearts command, From minds the ogeest counsellings depart."

When her sweetheart had gone Alice asked:

"Mumsey, have I ever heard of Uncle John?"
Mrs. Carnay was very busy setting the room to rights for the night. Sometimes she gave an impression of being a rather fussy little woman. She opened the windows to the balcony and carried out a couple of vases of flowers.

"What's that?" she asked over her shoulder.

Alice varied the form of her question. "I don't seem ever to have heard of Uncle John," she said.

"Perhaps not," her mother agreed. "As a family we've never clung together very much."

"But how did he find out where we were?"

"Oh, he saw your cousin Christopher recently," Mrs. Carnay replied. "And Christopher happened to mention that we were on the Italian Riviera. He's coming by the train de luxe. That gets in a little earlier than the one we came by."

"Do you really want to meet him alone?" Alice asked. "Or is it that you just don't want Philip? Because I could come with you. Philip would understand—"

"Oh, no, dear—I'd much rather meet him alone," Mrs. Carnay replied. "As I said, he's been ill—in a nursing home, Christopher said—and he's bound to be a bit odd and cranky. Of course, he may not want to stop over here—"

"I should like to see him," Alice mused a little wistfully. "I don't mind a bit how cranky he is. It was so nice meeting Mr. Gaunt, mumsey. Dear me, it does seem as though Bordighera is full of people we—we know and like. There's Philip and Mr. Gaunt, and now your brother's coming. I rather love it, mumsey. It's so nice to have friends and—and people one truly cares for."

Mrs. Carnay set out the last of the flower jars and took an opportunity to inspect the night before coming in. She didn't want Alice to see there were tears in her eyes. Poor Alice! Yes, it had been a lonely life for a young girl. But now Alice was going to be married and all that would be changed.

"You liked Mr. Gaunt?" Jean called out from the balcony.

"I simply adored him," Alice replied. "Mumsey, you won't be angry if I say something?"

"Good gracious, no! But I think I know what it is." She laughed unsteadily. "You're going to say that dear old Hector Gaunt is in love with me—or was."

"Yes, he is, mumsey—but I was going to say worse than that. Perhaps you will be angry. I think you're just a wee bit in love with him."

Mrs. Carnay laughed again: a little too boisterously this time. "How ridiculous you are, my pet! Just because you're in love yourself you imagine . . . She broke off short and added soberly, "Well, it's true enough. I was in love with him years ago."

"And then you met poor daddy and got over caring for Mr. Gaunt?" Alice sighed.

"Something like that," said her mother.

Here was Alice again trying to lead her out of her depth, but she resisted stubbornly.

"I suppose he's a widower," Alice mused. "He doesn't look like an old bachelor."

"I believe he is a widower," Jean agreed, adding with grim humor—"if his wife is dead."

"Was she living when you first met him?"

(Oh, Alice, what a tiresome young woman you are!)

"Yes, she was."

"Living with him here? Did you know her?"

"No—I never saw her. They had separated, I believe."

"And he couldn't marry you because he already had a wife? I don't know what I should do if I suddenly learned that Philip was married."

"How did you know I—I learned suddenly that Mr. Gaunt was married?"

In spite of her best efforts to resist, poor Mrs. Carnay had been led out to sea again and was floundering heavily.

"But it must have been that way," Alice said quietly. "Otherwise, he would never have given you up—or you, him. I think it was a mistake, mumsey. You oughtn't to have married daddy when you and Mr. Gaunt cared so much for each other."

"Really!" Jean gasped. "I don't think I understand the girl of today. Where do you get such curious ideas, Alice?"

"But, mumsey dear, it's just common sense. However, I don't suppose I should have been here if you hadn't married daddy, and I'm glad I'm here."

Mrs. Carnay sighed deeply, and it was a sigh of relief. Thank heaven, Alice's deadly line of deduction had ended short of the whole truth. Yet it seemed to Mrs. Carnay, now, that her sacrifice had been in vain. Perhaps Alice wouldn't have minded being the acknowledged child of Hector Augustus Gaunt. Truly the modern girl was a strange creature.

But one could not alter the matter now.

Jean Carnay slept better that night than she had expected. Little things could excite and fluster her, but she had always managed to meet a crisis with calm dignity. As Hugo's train was due somewhere around noon she decided to go early to Ventimiglia and spare herself an unprofitable morning hanging around with nothing much to do but watch the clock. Besides, she wanted to get away from Alice's searching questions.

No, she said, she and "Uncle John" wouldn't be back for lunch. There was always the chance that he might not wish to alter his plans, in which case they would have to lunch in Ventimiglia, so it was better to arrange it that way, anyway.

So with a slightly guilty feeling the little woman watched her opportunity and slipped away while Alice and Philip had, so to speak, turned their backs for a moment. She walked halfway down the Strada Romana before taking a turning towards the sea, boarding the tram on the outskirts of the town instead of, as was usual, in front of the English Stores, and by this ruse unwittingly dodged for a second time a meeting with a woman the sight of whom would have changed every plan she had made, and sent her flying to the very ends of the earth. As Mrs. Carnay hurried along the Strada Romana, up the Rue Regina Elena came Carrie Egan's monstrous car with its owner at the wheel. They missed each other by a matter of seconds, and while in the flash past Mrs. Egan might neither have seen nor recognized Mrs. Carnay, the latter would certainly have noticed the striking-looking woman whom Hugo Smarle had widowed.

CHAPTER XI.

During the long period of her supposed widowhood Mrs. Carnay had scarcely ever been conscious of loneliness. She had had Alice, and her own childhood having been a solitary one, the constant companionship of this much-loved daughter more than sufficed. Alice had filled every nook and cranny of Jean's life. For years the girl had scarcely worn a garment which the mother's loving fingers had not fashioned. Generally they had roomed together, often sharing the same bed. Alice had attended day schools, picking up a good education but precariously, and always it was her mother who had seen her safely to the school or convent door and called for her when the session was over.

As Jean passed to and fro on the platform in the great dingy station waiting for Hugo Smarle's train she suddenly realized that soon her happy life with Alice would be over for ever. Then she would be alone. Of course it was natural for Alice to marry, she told herself, and she ought to be ashamed to feel badly about it. Nevertheless, her eyes smarted a little. They would probably go to England—Alice and she—as soon as she had settled with Hugo about his own future, and no doubt Dr. Ardeyne would like the marriage to take place quite soon. June? Perhaps that would be a bit too soon. Alice had a few hundred pounds of her own. They would have to spend her little inheritance on the trousseau and wedding. Such things, however simple, cost money. It would be a quiet wedding, oh, very quiet indeed, but they must ask the Christopher Smarles. Would the name of "Smarle" convey anything to Dr. Ardeyne?

And now, led by a puff of grey smoke and a hiss of escaping steam, the weary train de luxe drew in—on the furthest line, of course—and the few remaining passengers began to clamber down from the high carriages. Here and there a porter appeared, somewhat reluctantly. One of them stuffed a piece of bread into his pocket as he crossed the lines. It was the luncheon hour, and Ventimiglia would appear to be the one terminus at which the arrival of a train created little or no excitement.

Jean Carnay had on white suede shoes and just for a moment she hesitated to follow the porters. Her eyes searched anxiously. Perhaps Hugo had not come. No—there he was! Yet . . . could that poor, shriveled-looking little man be Hugo? Yes, it was Hugo—as white as a badger, thin, his moustache white and closely clipped, nervously adjusting his eyeglasses with a gesture so familiar that it brought back the past as though yesterday. His hat looked queer, perched up like that. Ridiculous, but pathetic, too. And that funny little dolman coat of faded, shrunken tweed, the cape sleeves flapping about his wrists as he gathered up two bulging pieces of hand luggage. All—all were familiar.

Mutton and Macaroni.

When the cold mutton has lasted so long that the housewife dreads putting it again before her family, let her try it under this guise. Cut the cold meat into cubes. To two cups of meat have one cup of cooked macaroni, two cups of tomato sauce, one cup of cracker crumbs, two tablespoonsful of butter, salt and pepper. In a well buttered enamelled ware bake dish put a layer of macaroni, bread crumbs and tomato sauce, then a layer of mutton with bits of butter, pepper and salt. Alternate until the pan is filled. Sprinkle bread crumbs on top with enough extra butter to brown them. Serve in the dish in which it is cooked.

A very curious monument is that set up at a place called Swanage, in the County of Dorset, England. This consists of a huge stone globe of the world, measuring ten feet in diameter and having a weight of forty tons. On its surface the outlines of the continents and oceans are shown, the latter in light relief. Carved into the stone are lines representing the meridians of longitude, the parallels of latitude, the tropics of Cancer and Capricorn, the equator and the Arctic and Ant-

Mr. Boggs, the butcher, was a jovial soul. As he was cutting up an order of lamb chops for a lady customer the lady asked curiously: "Mr. Boggs, what led you to choose your present occupation?"
"Well, I don't really know, ma'am," said Boggs thoughtfully. "Maybe it was because I have always been fond of animals."

EFFICIENT FARMING

MY EXPERIENCE WITH TILE.

A few seasons ago I handled a farm where the land was of good quality and reasonably fertile. No man will be able to produce maximum crops on that farm until the owner is willing to put a few hundred dollars in the farm in the way of proper drainage. The owner is cheating himself out of the full benefit of his farm year after year, while a tiling system would pay for itself in one or two seasons. No one can get anything out of his farm if he isn't willing to put something in. Halfway methods in tile drainage will get halfway results. It does not cost any more in proportion to tile the farm thoroughly at one time. Proper drainage keeps the soil loose and conserves fertility, makes it possible to get the ground in shape for seeding at the proper time, causes it to warm up earlier in the spring, thus lessening the danger of early and late late frosts, and stimulates plant growth. These advantages will be realized each season. When the season is cold and backward during the early spring, I have found the advantage of tile drainage even more noticeable.

With our rather heavy black level soil, which has a tendency to hold water for long periods during wet weather, we have to drain at least every two rods to get uniform results. On more rolling or gravelly land it is not necessary to drain quite this close.

Tile should be deep enough that it will not be disturbed by the deepest plowing. It is better if the drains have sufficient fall to carry the water out rapidly, as they will drain the soil quicker, and the force of the water will carry away sediment, keeping the tile clean. Owing to too much or too little fall it is sometimes necessary to lay the head of the drain rather shallow. It is not always possible to get below the frost line. For this reason we have found cement tile preferable to clay, despite the slight extra cost, as they are not injured by the action of frost.

The old method of digging the trench and leveling and laying tile was a slow, back-breaking, and expensive task when elbow grease was the motive power used to get the work done. We find that a machine ditcher does as good or better work, and is less expensive and less disagreeable than the old method. The machine can work better in dry weather than in wet, as the leveling is done by survey instead of by water. A competent operator should be in charge of the machine, and the owner of the farm should inspect frequently. A very slight mistake may make an entire drain worthless.

What is the use of paying high taxes and making other improvements on land that will not produce good crops owing to lack of drainage? This is about the only improvement on the farm that is permanent. We have to paint, build fences, buy new machinery, build new buildings, restore the fertility of the soil, and do other things of like nature several times in the course of a natural lifetime. The farm, once properly drained, is drained to stay, and the work that has been done goes on making money for its owner day and night, and will do so for future generations with little attention, if the work is done properly.—D. P.

The Dairy

To get the maximum production it will be necessary to provide feeding-stuffs that have a high per cent. of protein. I have found that by grinding barley, oats and wheat, equal parts by weight, and feeding one pound of grain per day for every four pounds of milk produced, I get a good liberal flow of milk and by feeding all the alfalfa hay the cows will eat, the ration is a fairly well balanced one.

However, to make the cows produce to their capacity one can undoubtedly get an increased yield by adding two pounds of cottonseed or oil meal per day. One can stimulate many cows to still further increased production by feeding more of the high concentrates, cottonseed or oil meal. But this increase should be carefully done by adding no more than a half-pound extra per day and carefully watching each cow to make sure that the concentrates are not bringing on an unfavorable reaction.

Selection of Seed Improvement.

Different selections of seed of various classes of grain have been carefully tested at the Ontario Agricultural College for from six to nine years. The average results show that even one year's selection of seed grain has a marked influence on the resulting crop. In every instance, the large plump seed gave a greater yield of grain per acre than medium sized, small plump, shrunken or broken seed. In the average of the six classes of grain, the large plump surpassed the small plump in yield of grain per acre by 19 per cent., and in the average of the three classes of grain, the plump seed gave a yield over the shrunken seed of 20 per cent. It should be understood that equal numbers of seed were used in this experiment. The results throughout show that a large plump seed will produce a larger, more vigorous and more productive plant than is produced from a small plump or from a shrunken seed.

Sewing Grain Sacks.

A bodkin or needle suitable for use with string or twine can be readily made from one of the openers that are used to open tin containers. The wire opened is straightened out and the ends rounded up with a file or on the grindstone that they may pass freely through the open weave of the sacking. This simple modification is so easy that a few of the openers can be put aside until such time as the bodkins are needed, when one or more may be straightened up and pointed for use. This is a simple detail. However, it is most necessary when sewing the sacks, and is a hint worth remembering for this need.

If a ewe loses a lamb, use her for a nurse in raising the orphan lamb.

Sheep Notes

A great deal of success in raising early lambs lies with the care and feeding of the ewes during the time just previous to and just after the lambs are born. A sheep is not a difficult animal to raise or feed when the proper management is followed, in fact, I know of no animal that requires so little attention for the net return received for both the feed and labor put into it.

One practice we have always tried to follow with the breeding ewes was to provide them with pastured all through the winter. They do not do so well when kept housed all winter. They require plenty of exercise in the open to properly develop the fetus, but we always provide shelter for them during rainy and snowy weather or extremely severe cold. That is just as essential as keeping them out in the open in good weather, for if the fleeces get very wet and they are then housed they take very heavy colds from which they do not quickly recover.

If the stalk pasture is good they require little else except plenty of salt and perhaps some clover hay. We feed very little if any corn, because it produces excessive fat, limiting any grain feeding to oats. Ewes in thin flesh, however, need some corn or sufficient other grain to put them in good flesh, and plenty of clover hay. Sheaf oats is an excellent winter feed for sheep.

Two or three weeks before the lambs are due to arrive we like to give a good feed of oats to the ewes each day so that they will provide plenty of milk for the new-born lambs which, if they happen to be twins or triplets, will demand a great deal of milk to start them off right. We have never found any feed that would answer this purpose so well as oats, because of their combined bulkiness and protein content. Then they also help to develop a strong lamb which will require little close attention after it has received its fifth or sixth meal. I would rather feed corn after the lambs arrive than before, though if too much is fed it has a tendency to make them lose their wool.

A Place for Grain Bags.

One of the big expense items of the farm is the replacing of grain bags destroyed by mice and rats. Many farmers have no regular place for their grain bags; they are lying around here and there, and usually when wanted are found to have holes made by mice and rats in trying to get at the few pieces of grain left in them.

Have a place for your grain bags and keep them there; you will then know where to find them and will also know they will be in good condition to use.

Make a box about three feet each dimension. Put a partition in it so there will be a place for the best bags and one for the others that are not so good. This saves much time in sorting when wanted for use. Quite often you can get from the junk dealer a piece of screen or woven wire cloth that has been used in an old grain separator. This is usually heavy metal with small, round-hole perforation, or heavy wire woven together, but with small enough openings so mice cannot get through. Put one piece on each of the two sides or ends of the box; this will let air circulate and keep the bags from molding or rotting. Make the box of inch boards; also make it tight, so that no mice or rats can enter. Put on hinges and a rasp hook to the cover.

A Protected Ax Handle.

How many of us have had the experience of breaking or splitting our ax handle when chopping a limb or splitting a block of wood?

Here is a plan I use; and I find that it lengthens the life of a handle several times. Get a spool of copper wire, twenty-gauge preferably, and wind eight or ten inches of the handle next to the ax tightly with it, as that is where most ax handles are broken. Drive a small nail in the handle, the distance you wish to wrap it, to a depth of half an inch, then withdraw the nail and cut off half an inch of the nail. Now put the end of the wire in the nail hole and drive the piece of nail in flush with the handle. Wrap the wire tight and close toward the ax, first having made a hole clear through the handle close to the ax. When the wire reaches the hole cut it off long enough to put the end through the hole.

Frozen Ground Pipes.

To thaw water pipes in frozen earth, dig off a few inches of dirt and pour in unslaked lime. Pour over some water and cover immediately with canvas or bricks or stone to keep out the wind. In the morning the ground will be thawed for two feet.

Invest in a few smiles daily and you will always have interest in return.

Dave's Hired Men

BY J. E. RUSSELL.

"How is it, Dave, that you never seem to have any trouble with your hired men?" inquired a city cousin who had driven out to the farm for the day. "There is your neighbor, Tom, down the road. I was chatting with him this morning, and he was in a terrible grouch about the hired help question. He says he has had four different men this season. They stay a month or so and off they go. You've had the same man for two or three years, and as long as I have known you, I've never heard you complain about your help. How do you explain it?"

"Why, I don't know," said Dave. "Of course there are all sorts of hired men. You spoke of my neighbor. He has had men around for weeks that I wouldn't have let them sleep in a bed in my home unless their clothes had been fumigated, and they had had a bath. I've always been particular about the men I hired. I like best to get some young fellow I've known for years and his folks before him. I don't want any chap around who hasn't good principles, not only because of my children, but for the sake of the cows and pigs. I saw one of Tom's hired men pounding a cow with a fork handle a while ago. That fellow couldn't come here."

"How about wages?" inquired his cousin.

"Well, answered Dave, "wages are pretty high, of course, but I've always calculated to pay my men good wages. When it comes to a show-down, what is $5 or $10 a month extra on a hired man's wages? If a man thinks he is underpaid, he can easily shirk enough to more than equal the extra money he thinks he ought to have. It is a great thing to have a hired man feel he is doing well, and that he has a good place. He'll be extra careful not to do anything which might make him lose his job."

"I notice that you take your hired man in as one of the family," remarked the cousin.

"Yes, I do," resumed Dave. "I remember that when I was eighteen I left home to work out. Well, sir, I had a pretty tough nine months from the first of April to the last of December, but I stuck it out. They gave me the poorest room in the house, a little seven by eight cubby-hole, where I couldn't stand up straight even on the high side without bumping the ceiling. It was boiling hot in summer and freezing cold in winter. The bed was hard. The quilts were ragged and none too clean. The family gave me to understand that my room was better than my company about the house, and I hardly knew what to do evenings. I ate with the family unless there was company, and then they didn't call me to supper until the others had eaten. I had to take what was left, and sometimes it was pretty slim pickings. They never asked me to go anywhere with them. Sunday they generally went off visiting and left me to look after things.

"I made up my mind that if I ever had a farm of my own and kept a hired man, I'd treat him as I'd like to be treated. My hired man has as comfortable a bedroom as there is in the house. He sits at the table with us, company or no company. I get up just as early as he does and work just as late. When night comes, we make him at home in the sitting-room with papers, books and games. The man I have now has a good voice, and we generally have a sing once or twice a week. I always go to church Sundays, and the hired man goes with us and sits in our pew. If there is a Sunday School picnic or a community party, we all go together. My man plays first base on the neighborhood ball team, and I try to get the work caught up so he can get away for a game Saturday afternoon. Sometimes, instead of going to town myself, I send him off with the folks after an early supper, and tell them to stay down at night to the movies and that I will do the milking."

"I get you, Dave," said his cousin, as the farmer paused. "I believe the main reason you don't have any hired help problem is just because you remember that hired men are human beings."

MAKING A START WITH ASPARAGUS

Asparagus is unquestionably the most important of our edible stemmed plants. It is one of the hardiest vegetables, and although the initial preparation of the bed requires to be thoroughly and carefully carried out, yet, when properly made, it may last a lifetime, always provided that due attention be devoted to it, so that noxious weeds will never be allowed to take up their habitation among the roots.

The gardener will be well repaid for keeping the bed scrupulously clean and free from weeds at all times. This necessitates occasional cultivation during the summer months, though cultivation may be dispensed with by giving the bed a good mulch of manure immediately cutting is finished for the season. After the tops have been cut down in the fall the mulch can be worked into the soil between the rows; or this may be done early in spring.

Asparagus can be successfully grown in almost any soil, provided the preparation of the bed is given proper attention. First-class "grass" is cut from quite light sandy soils, as also from land that is very heavy, though the most suitable medium is a good friable loam having a porous sub-soil; a wet retentive soil from which water is slow in getting away should be avoided unless it be first drained.

PREPARING THE BED.

Instead of beginning with seed, the amateur will be well advised to purchase one or two year old roots, though even then it is not advisable to cut from the bed until the third spring from planting, and only for a limited period then.

It is always well to have the bed prepared in the fall, when a three-inch layer of fresh manure or its equivalent in leafy mold is spaded or plowed in very deeply, and a dressing of lime and wood ashes put on. The surface is then left rough over winter. When the ground has dried off in the spring the furrows are drawn out and good plump roots are then planted.

When the ground has to be prepared in the spring well-rotted manure should be used. The rows should be at least three feet apart; four feet is better. The soil must be thoroughly pulverized, adding coarse bone meal after the manure has been turned under. The coarse bone meal may be applied directly in the broad furrow which will be made, using a large handful to each yard of furrow and touching it into the soil with the rake. Furrows are drawn out with the plow or spade, eight inches deep, three to four feet apart and nine to twelve inches wide. The roots are set eighteen inches apart. Make sure that the crown of the roots is in the centre of the furrow. When in position the roots are covered with two inches of fine soil, made firm so that it will not dry out quickly. The furrow is gradually filled up as the season advances and should be quite level by late summer. The reason we cover the roots so lightly to begin with is to give them a chance to become somewhat established before they are buried deeply. Cultivation is then started as soon as the spikes appear.

The beds should be so rich in plant food that growth will be steady, but if the tops at any time appear to be checked a light application of nitrate of soda will be beneficial. It should be given preferably in showery weather or following a rain; never apply it when the ground is dust dry unless it be followed with a copious watering.

Do not cut down the tops until after the berries are red in the fall or the foliage has turned brown. Should insects or disease be suspected the tops should be burned.

The bed is now dressed with partly decayed manure, which in the spring is dug in between the rows. The plants should be allowed two years to become established before any shoots are cut, and all cutting should cease around the end of June. Late cutting weakens the growth of the plants. Beds in bearing will be greatly assisted by applying a little nitrate of soda during the cutting season.

When cutting is over for the season the entire bed, without regard to the rows, should have a thorough cultivating to a depth of three inches. Then mulch with manure, and there will be little further trouble from weeds.

Live Stock Sales and Prices.

From January 1 to 24 inclusive the sales of cattle at the five leading markets of the country, according to Dominion Live Stock reports, were 47,207 compared with 46,416 in the same period last year, of calves 7,362 compared with 6,827, of hogs 88,431 compared with 91,043, and of sheep 20,985 compared with 25,662. A decrease is indicated in every instance excepting of sales of cattle and calves, of which there is a slight increase. Of hogs and sheep there is a noticeable decrease both in sales and billings through. Top prices for butcher steers at Toronto and Montreal were 50c better, and calves 50c and a dollar up, for the week ending January 24 this year compared with the corresponding date last year. Select bacon hogs showed an improvement over the previous week. Lambs were the same at all markets excepting at Toronto, where there was a rise of $1.50.

Dominion News in Brief

Nelson, B.C.—Production of fruit and vegetables in the interior of British Columbia last season totalled 5,000 cars, of which all but 15 per cent. had been disposed of at the end of 1923. Prices ranged low, but generally in keeping with the prices of other agricultural products.

Vancouver, B.C.—This port has passed in actual shipments of grain to date this season the entire crop movement of the previous season over the western route. About 20,000,000 bushels of grain have been moved so far this crop year, as compared with 19,200,000 for the whole of the previous season. About 17,000,000 bushels of grain are booked for February, the heaviest demand that has ever been made on the elevator.

Lethbridge, Alta.—Shipments of wheat from Southern Alberta this year have been unusually heavy. The record so far appears to be held by Vulcan, from which point, up to the middle of January, 1,700,000 bushels of grain, of which 1,500,000 bushels of wheat, had been shipped. Other points having shipments of over a million bushels were: Barons, Champlon and Blackie, Claresholm, and Granum and Woodside.

Viscount, Sask.—A movement is under way for the placing of about one hundred new settlers in the Viscount district at the beginning of spring. About a dozen of these will come from Manitoba and Ontario, and the remainder from Germany and the Scandinavian countries.

Brandon, Man.—The erection of a large pathological laboratory either at Brandon, or Morden, Man., to consolidate all activities in the combating of wheat rust, has been decided on by the Dominion Government, department of agriculture.

North Bay, Ont.—The gold mines of Northern Ontario broke all previous records in the month of January, when they produced approximately $2,100,000 based on preliminary reports obtained from the mines. Lachute, Que.—During the past year the Argenteuil Wool Growers' Association marketed nearly 7,000 pounds of wool, for which an average price of 26 cents a pound was received. The net proceeds to members was $500 over local prices.

U.S. REDUCES IMMIGRATION QUOTA

Result May be That Canada Will Get More Picked Settlers.

Ottawa, March 2.—Canadian immigration authorities are much interested in the announcement from Washington of the immigration restriction amendment bill that has just passed the Senate by a substantial majority. It provides for a reduction from three to two per cent. in the quota of alien immigrants that may be admitted during the course of a year under the law as it now stands. It should also be explained that the percentage is based on the number of persons from any given country who were residing in the Republic at the time when the 1910 census was taken.

The present law, which will expire on June 30 next, was an emergency measure designed to check the great flood of immigrants who were preparing to come to that country at the close of the war. The law now being drawn up is designed to lay down a permanent immigration policy. The law, as it now exists, permits the following numbers to come in from the three principal countries of Southern and Eastern Europe: Italy, 42,057; Russia, 21,613; Poland, 21,076.

By adopting as the quota 2 per cent. of these here in 1910 the numbers coming in from these countries will be reduced to: Italy, 28,000; Russia, 14,500; Poland, 14,000.

The actual number from these countries will probably be considerably increased by a clause which permits near relatives—"wives, husbands, fathers, mothers, unmarried minor brothers and sisters, and unmarried orphan nephews and nieces"—to come in, in addition to the quotas enumerated above.

While the new law, if passed, will reduce the number from Southern and Eastern Europe, as shown in the figures above, it will also reduce the numbers coming from Great Britain and other Western European countries. The number permitted to come in from these countries under the present law is as follows: Great Britain, 77,342; Germany, 67,607; Sweden, 20,042; Norway, 12,202.

The numbers who will be able to come in from these countries under the proposed law admitting a quota of 2 per cent. based on 1910 will be: Great Britain, 52,000; Germany, 45,000; Sweden, 13,500; Norway, 4,200.

In these latter countries, also, the numbers permitted to come in will be increased by the clause providing for relatives of those already here.

It is not, of course, certain that the law will be amended exactly on this basis, for a strong effort is being made to have the 2 per cent. quota based on the census of 1890, rather than on that of 1910, the idea being to reduce still further the percentage of immigrants from Southern and Eastern Europe.

Canada is vitally interested, for in the proportion as the restrictions are made severe in the United States her chances of getting picked settlers will be improved.

Father Introduced Into House by Two Sons

London, March 2.—The unique spectacle of a father being introduced into the House of Commons by his two sons will be witnessed to-morrow, when Rt. Hon. Arthur Henderson takes his seat as the member for Burnley, to which he was elected on Friday.

The voice of inspiration is hard to hear from the depths of an easy chair.

Miss Dorothy Jewson, Labor M.P. for Norwich, created a ripple of surprise by carrying a shopping bag when she signed the rolls as the first woman to take the oath of parliament this year.

BRITISH AMBASSADOR TAKES UP U.S. POST

Sir Esme Howard Discusses British-United States Relations.

A despatch from Washington says:—Sir Esme Howard, the new British Ambassador, spent Friday, his first day in Washington, getting acquainted with his staff and receiving a few visitors.

"I have returned to Washington with real pleasure," he said, "since I have never forgotten the hospitality and kindness I met with during my previous visits."

Speaking of Anglo-United States relations, he said: "A good understanding and friendship between the two countries has always seemed to me essential for world peace. In this it may be said that everyone in England, from the King to his humblest subject, is agreed. The relations between the two countries never have been more cordial and all serious questions which might have caused differences of opinion appear to have been practically eliminated owing to the good will and desire for mutual understanding shown by both sides."

Smallpox Epidemic at Windsor Matter of Concern

Windsor, Ont., March 2.—Seven persons have died, two are very low, and 60 cases are under supervision of the Windsor Board of Health as a result of the smallpox epidemic, which reached a new high level in Windsor and vicinity during the past 48 hours. The death list now totals 15 persons. Three persons died to-day from the disease. The victims are: Mrs. John Shaw, 50 years old, of Amherstburg; Mrs. Ida Cox, 35 years old, of Amherstburg, and Mrs. Virginia McLean, 211 Windsor Ave., Windsor.

The worst cases are hemorrhagic, and die in three to six days. These are hard to diagnose. Some resemble scarlet fever or erysipelas, others measles, and still others a mixture of the foregoing. Many of the cases do not develop the ordinary smallpox rash. The situation at Windsor is well in hand but in view of the unusual nature of the cases, health officers elsewhere are advised to be on the alert for the unusual.

PARLIAMENT OPENS WITH CEREMONIAL

His Excellency the Governor-General Announces Third Session of 14th House.

A despatch from Ottawa says:—Guns boomed and all the ceremonial that reached back to the early days in the history of England marked the formal opening of the third session of the fourteenth Parliament of Canada, by His Excellency the Governor-General, Baron Byng of Vimy on February 28th.

The scene was staged in a brilliant and, for the time of the year, an appropriate setting. Snow flurries lent their added touch of winter as His Excellency arrived accompanied by a mounted escort from the Princess Louise Dragoon Guards, and within the Parliament Buildings themselves there were new touches of ceremonial and display.

The speakers, both of the House and the Senate, wore knee breeches, silk stockings and buckled shoes in reminiscence of Westminster, although minus the wig. A new canopy of gold and maroon lent added color to the Senate Chamber, already gorgeous with its red and gold, its brilliant military and official uniforms, its display of dresses, and the sharp, contrasting red and ermine of judges of the Supreme Court. In the Commons Chamber an old familiar note was lacking in the uniforms of the pages. The semi-evening dress which they have been accustomed to wear has given place to a new tightly-fitting uniform of black edged with green.

For the Boys and Girls

THE BOY AND HIS FATHER.

The blessed influence of a mother in a boy's life has been proclaimed in song and story, and rightfully so, and still a boy without a father is indeed a handicapped youth, for no one, not even a devoted, loving, self-sacrificing mother, can fill that place that alone is father's. True it is that from merest infancy mother supplies the most intimate needs—patches torn breeches, sews on millions of buttons and washes and cleans and cooks endlessly, not forgetting either the hundreds of bandaged fingers and soothed blisters and the gallons of peppermint tea gladly made to soothe certain aching cavities when green apples or too much watermelon or pie insisted upon cause a disturbance. Tender indeed are the sainted memories of a thousand loving acts by mother. But how about dad? He is entitled, too, to a very much larger appreciation from the boys of the land than he gets.

How about the long years of endless toil, in shop and office and factory, in order to supply the wherewithal to keep vigorous, thoughtless, carefree boys in corduroy pants and shoes—and plenty of beans and flour and jelly and an occasional "drumstick" in the pantry, so that long, lanky, hungry, fast-growing boys may have the necessities to build themselves into strong, self-reliant men? How about the undoubted sacrifices made so that thousands of boys may remain in school, gaining an equipment to make their lot easier than their father's has been? How about the planning and extra effort so that every now and again there might be a little trip or journey or a special experience for the boy? How about the money, scraped up from dear knows where, for music lessons and tools and pups and catcher's mitts; money that ought to have gone into a new hat or a fresh necktie to make dad a little more presentable when company came. Yet he never complains, for it is all for the boy—the pride of his heart—his son and heir.

How about the tremendous efforts to provide life insurance and make a home and in numerous other ways to provide definitely for a boy's future, if, perchance, accident or death overtakes him before the boy is ready to stand on his own feet and meet the world?

His concern is evidenced by the earnest chats and careful explanation and helpful advice that every Dad constantly seeks to give on every conceivable subject, in order to steer impetuous, headstrong, cocksure lads clear of many pitfalls that somehow get in every boy's way and that no one understands quite so well as does a real dad.

Beyond any shadow of a doubt, every boy whose dad is even half a man owes that dad a great debt that he can only repay to society at large in one way; by being a genuine dad to his own lad.

The great pity of it all lies in the fact that most boys never do really appreciate their dads until they are gone—often in fact until they have boys of their own to perplex them and to harass them and to cause them to look backward through the years to boyhood again and it is then that all that dad meant in their growing lives dawns upon them and they yearn for some way in which to fling back the past and tell the dad that is no more just what they really think of him now.

"I know just what my father was to me—
And is unto this day;
And so unto my boy would I as truly be
And in the selfsame way.
I honored, loved, respected him and he Gave me his love as pay!
I pass it on unto that boy of mine
And hope and dream and pray
I may so live that he may know and find
True things of life and may
Honor and love, respect, obey

His father in a better, nobler way
Than I did mine."

QUEEN'S DOLL HOUSE MINUTELY EQUIPPED

DINING-ROOM IS FORTY-TWO INCHES LONG.

Electric Lights, Elevator, Golf Kit, Garage and Miniature Automobiles.

How golf came to be dignified with the sobriquet 'royal and ancient game' may be revealed in a tiny volume prepared by Lady Maud Warrender, after weeks of laborious research among records in the British Museum. This book is to accompany a complete athletic equipment in miniature given by her for Queen Mary's doll's house. The sporting impedimenta include a golf bag, a whole set of Lilliputian "shooting irons," drivers and balls, which, even if much smaller than the new 1.52s proposed by American devotees of the game, have been made strictly to scale.

It is understood there have been no little rivalry and many disagreements among distinguished Scottish exponents of the pill swatting pastime as to the models of clubs to be included in the kit. Lady Maud's book will trace through the centuries the preferences of kings and queens in sports, but golf will be found to have had the most royal disciples.

To be on Exhibition.

The house itself, a five-story affair fit for a queen of fairyland, is to be presented to Queen Mary by hundreds of the most eminent British architects, artists and craftsmen, who have been at work on its construction, decoration and furnishing for more than two years. It will be on display at the British Empire Exhibition at Wembley Park during the coming summer, and probably will prove one of the main attractions, doubtless finding its way eventually into the British Museum for the benefit of future generations as a model of all that is worth while in present day taste, for it is perfect and historically accurate to the last detail.

Such care has been taken in this effort to encompass within a structure that towers eight feet high all which could be desired by the most exacting that scores of controversies have been waged over the questions involving a thirty-second of an inch in the width of a picture frame, the binding of a book not as large as a fingernail or the taste in a rug—the differentiation in each case being negligible to all but the most expert eyes.

Sir Edwin Lutyens, who had an important part in laying out the new Indian Capitol at Delhi, and designed the Cenotaph in Whitehall, planned this unique palace of Lilliput. Sir David Murray, president of the Royal Institute of Painters, was responsible for its decoration. Sir David found some of the friezes and mural paintings out of harmony and scale with their surroundings, and prevailed upon his brother artists to re-execute these works.

In the Dining Room.

A description of the dining room gives some idea of the care taken in every particular of the house's appointments. The room itself is forty-two and one-half inches high. The dining table, completely equipped with linen, glass and plate—even diminutive saltcellars—as if guests were expected to arrive momentarily, is no more than two and one-half inches high, and the backs of the chairs are scarcely half an inch higher. Over the mantel is a portrait of the Prince of Wales in the hunting field, less than half the size of a postage stamp—the work of A. J. Munnings, A.R.A. Elsewhere are portraits of King Edward III, and King James V. of Scotland, by Sir William Leighton, R.A.R.I. The ceiling, of rare artistic excellence, is by Gerald Moira, R. W. S.

Among notable features of the miniature mansion are a marble staircase, a button electric lift that runs from cellar to garret at the press of a button, a bath with running hot and cold water, a completely equipped kitchen, a library to which nearly 200 noted British authors have contributed hand written volumes—reduced by a photographic process to a proper size—a garage with five perfect automobiles by the best British makers and a complete electric lighting installation, with lamb bulbs scarcely a quarter of an inch in diameter.

A Well Stocked Cellar.

In the cellar will be found a stock of rare vintages—miniature bottles which actually contain a half-thimbleful of the wines described on their "aged" labels—the flacons themselves covered with cobwebs to attest the antiquity of the contents. There is, of course, a garden, the planting of which was done with care and where two or three baby snails will be turned loose to roam about its narrow confines.

What the house would have cost had the services of those who had a part in its preparation been paid for at the market price might be roughly estimated from the fact that a tiny volume written for the library by Rudyard Kipling, on being borrowed for reproduction, was insured for £500.

On the shelves are books penned by Sir James Barrie, Arnold Bennett, W. J. Locke, Joseph Conrad, Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, John Drinkwater and scores of others of comparable repute. In the library may also be found diminutive photographic reproductions of "Who's Who," the "A. B. C." time tables of English railways, and many other standard reference books—besides a complete dictionary. And, of course, there is a writing desk with stationery duly engraved and a book of specially printed postage stamps.

In fine, all the doll's house needs is persons to people it. They would find nothing lacking.

Was Swift All Right.

"When you called him up and invited him to dinner was he swift to hear?"
"You bet he was swift to here—arrived in ten minutes!"

The best source of protein for children is milk.

In the whole realm of nature there is found an unanswerable instinct.

A March-Hare Party.

Who does not remember that most famous of all tea parties at which Alice in Wonderland "poured" for the Mad March Hare, the Dormouse and the Hatter? You can entertain your friends in the windy month with a March-Hare party. As invitations use cards shaped like high silk hats with one or the other of the following verses on them:

The March Hare with me
Invites you to be
A guest at my house for a
Wee cup of tea.

The March Hare, the Dormouse,
The Hatter with me
Do hope you will join us
On Wednesday for tea.

Jane Doe

March 7, 1924.

So far as possible throw the rooms, which should be decorated with pussy-willows, into a state of confusion—chairs upside down, pictures awry and furniture misplaced. Provide the guests with paper hats; the Hatter, you know, always his hat.

Ask the guests to draw a Mad March Hare with colored crayons and give a woolly or a chocolate rabbit to the person whose work is pronounced best. Old-fashioned games are well suited to a party of this kind: Going to Jerusalem, Stage Coach, Drop the Handkerchief, Pass in the Corner and Who's Got the Button. You can arrange charades, conundrums and recitations based on the names and incidents in Alice in Wonderland.

The "tea" can be any beverage served in tea cups and poured from a teapot. Welsh rabbit, ginger ale, sandwiches, cookies and ginger cakes cut in the form of a hare or of a silk hat make a good menu. Use daffodils for the table decoration and carry out the yellow color scheme in all the rooms. Narrow yellow ribbons should lead from the centrepiece to each place; a card with a conundrum on it may be attached to the end of each ribbon and held down with a chocolate rabbit. The chocolate rabbits form the honcho course; while the guests are eating them the conundrums may be read.

Between courses, as in the story, have the guests change places at the table, carrying their water glasses and napkins with them. Place cards may be paper rabbits or other Wonderland figures painted in water colors, or the name of each guest may be written on a tiny looking-glass. When the last course is reached give each guest a certain number of beans or small candies to serve as money. Then have some one auction off a pile of packages wrapped so as to be very different in appearance and bearing mysterious titles. A package marked "the most important part of a dog" contains a piece of bark. "The light of other days" is some burnt matches. "A taste of the sea" is a lump of salt. Let no one open a package until all the packages have been disposed of.

Marconi, the inventor, says that he has perfected a method by which he can send radio messages as a beam, projected in any desired direction. Moreover, the new form of transmission requires only a small part of the electrical energy needed to broadcast throughout a circle the radius of which is the same length as the beam.

Scouting Comes to Molokai.

Scouting has come to Molokai, lonely Isle in the Pacific Ocean, and home for incurable lepers, whence the patients never return. Six members of Troop 12, Kailhi Leper Receiving Station, Honolulu, recently made the journey. "The boys went willingly," runs a report, "knowing that their going was probably the only way Scouting would ever get started in the rock-bound settlement. Members of Troop 12 performed their last Good Turns for their departing comrades by packing their clothes."

The Parting.

The Honolulu Advertiser tells the story: "Boy Scouts troops, like many other organizations, business and otherwise, and most every member of the human family, young and old alike, do have ups and downs, and the downs help us generally to a better understanding and appreciation of the hilltop experiences. With this thought in mind and also with the words of the poet ringing in our ears, 'And to grow means often to suffer, but whatever is, is best,' we feel most keenly the blow that has been dealt, or rather series of them, during the past week, to the Maurice Detches Troop 12 of Honolulu. We understood there was some possibility of the troop losing one or possibly two of the Scouts in a proposed shipment to Molokai, but when the same did take place, it was not one or two, but five of the leading Scouts and the Assistant Scoutmaster who went.

A Lepus Hero.

"Then to cap the climax one of the very first Scouts to join the troop and among the first to become a first-class Scout in the troop, has passed away. In the passing of Scout Alex Auld we have joy in the knowledge that, handicapped with the constant suffering of an incurable disease, he faced the inevitable without so much as a whimper, and though but 16 years of age he suffered untold agonies with a smile and never once lost his nerve."

Another Farewell.

On the day of the funeral, Scoutmaster Frank Kaihenu called the troop together for a special meeting, and after the usual opening ceremony, Troop Scribe Dawson called the roll. The last name to be called was that of Alex Auld—Scout Auld for the second, and then for the last time. Whereupon a brother Scout saluted and said, "Scoutmaster, our brother Scout Alex Auld will meet with us no more, for he has gone to dwell with the chief Scoutmaster of all good Scouts." The Scribe was then ordered to remove the name of Alex Auld from the active troop roster and to place the name on the honor roll of the troop, and then with bowed head Scoutmaster Kaihenu delivered the following prayer: "And now, Good and Great Scoutmaster of all good Scouts, we, the brother Scouts of Alex Auld, while heavy-hearted because of his passing, take courage in the knowledge that he is now a member of your great troop, where dust and decay are unknown and where we hope to join him when we answer the final roll call."

Sing That Cold Away.

Singing is one of the best preventives of a cold.

The common cold, as most people are aware, is an inflammatory condition of the lining of the upper respiratory passages. Though disease germs are probably always the cause, the way for these is opened by the inhalation of irritant particles of dust and cold air.

Singing, besides giving proper control of the breathing, teaches us to expand our lungs fully, thus providing valuable and healthy exercise for the whole respiratory machine. It inculcates the habit of breathing rhythmically through the nose, and so ensures thorough warming and filtering of the air before it reaches the respiratory passages.

By teaching us to breathe properly and by producing in us a sense of joy and well-being, singing tends to increase our resistance against infections of all kinds. It promotes the digestion and assimilation of our food, and thus builds up substantial reserves.

Singing is, above all, the language of the emotions, and is probably far older than articulate language. It thus provides us with the means of relieving our feelings, and the consequent effect on our health is astounding.

Lastly, by calling up the nobler and pleasanter emotions, it tends to drive away care and anxiety, which owing to the subtle bio-chemical changes they cause in our blood, render us more likely to catch cold.

Remember a hot dish for the children's lunch.

72 Years Old, But Actively On Job

Railroad Man Attributes Good Health and Strength to Tanlac.

Seventy-two years of age, but still in possession of the priceless boon of good health and actively on the job with the Central Vermont Railroad, where he has worked for 40 years, is the remarkable record of H. H. Moore, 24 Messenger St., Albans, Vt., who attributes his present health and strength to the use of TANLAC.

"I have never in my life seen the equal of TANLAC," said Mr. Moore recently. "After spending a lot of money on things that proved worthless for stomach trouble of the most obstinate kind, TANLAC made me feel like an entirely different man. For nearly two years I had been gradually getting worse, and my strength and vitality had got so low it was hard for me to attend to my duties. Indigestion, constipation, and nervousness made life miserable before I found TANLAC, but now my health is normal and I feel happy as I work. I shall always be grateful to TANLAC."

TANLAC is for sale by all good druggists. Accept no substitute. Over 40 million bottles sold.

Take Tanlac Vegetable Pills.

New Record Set by Sun Life of Canada.

Evidence of widespread prosperity is afforded by the statement published by the Sun Life Assurance Company of Canada covering its transactions for the year 1923. This Company, which is international in its character, operating in over fifty countries, reports substantial advances in all departments.

Of particular public interest is the fact that no fewer than 318,443 policyholders are assured under ordinary contracts issued by the Company, while in addition 22,781 employees of a great diversity of industries are protected under Group Insurance policies.

The business in force at December 31st last reached the tremendous total of $703,765,243, showing an increase for the year of $72,360,373. The new business written during the year amounted to $119,804,657, the policies actually issued and paid for being 35,975, for a total of $107,391,256. During the year the payments to policyholders and their beneficiaries in respect to Death Claims, Matured Endowments, Profits, etc., amounted to $22,145,979, bringing the total so paid since the organization of the Company to $151,916,489. This amount exceeds the total business in force with the Company fourteen years ago, and affords stirring testimony to the degree in which its function is being fulfilled.

Profits paid or allotted to policyholders reached the amount of $4,417,968. After setting aside $3,500,000 for unforeseen contingencies, the net surplus over all liabilities and capital stock advanced by $3,603,447 to $17,872,868.

The record is one in which the Directors of the Company express their own satisfaction—a sentiment which will be widely shared. It is interesting to note that the Company, in order to facilitate the constant quest for new business, and to maintain the high standard of service to which they have accustomed their policyholders, have established a number of new divisions during the past year, and have further developments of a similar character in contemplation.

EASY TRICKS No. 322 False Magic

For the amateur trickster, practical jokes are very useful. They enable him to effectively turn the subject when some inquisitive spectator wants to know the secret of one of his pet tricks. They are useful in silencing that annoying individual who is only too ready to tell how every trick is done.

A good stunt is to tell a spectator that if he will clasp his hands according to your directions and will utter certain magical words he will be unable to leave the room without unclasping his hands. This is done by causing the victim to clasp his hands around a piano leg.

Another stunt is to ask a spectator to select any card he likes from the pack. Make the selection of it as complicated as possible and add all of the details possible. Put the victim to a lot of trouble, making notes, counting cards, etc. When the victim has paid for exposing your pet trick, say to him:

"What card did you select?"
He will give the name of the card and you will say, solemnly: "That is correct."
Then go on with another trick hoping that the victim will not resent the practical joke too much.

(Clip this out and paste it, with other of the series, in a scrapbook.)

THE REASON FOR ALUMINUM.

Because tea deteriorates very rapidly if exposed to air many tests and experiments have been made to find an efficient means of packing it so as to preserve the flavor. The "SALADA" Tea Company first used lead packages but some years ago adopted aluminum foil, aluminum being more durable and lighter than lead, besides, of course, being absolutely sanitary and air-tight. This method of packing is admitted to be the most effective known to preserve the flavor of tea. All "SALADA" is sold in air-tight aluminum packages.

Try every day to consider a masterpiece—a picture, a musical composition, a poem or some bit of good prose literature. Constant association with masterpieces makes for intellectual elevation and leaves little room for cheapness either of thought or of speech.

No remedy can cure all ailments of the human body, but an immense number of people suffer from aches, pains and disease symptoms when their real trouble is lack of iron in the blood. It is the iron in your blood that enables you to get the nourishment out of your food. Without iron your food merely passes through you without doing you any good; you don't get the strength out of it. There is one universally known tonic that has helped thousands because it contains iron like the iron in fresh vegetables and like the iron in your blood.

NUXATED IRON

is an eminent physician's best blood prescription, standardized. It is recommended for all anemic and run-down conditions. It has helped thousands of others. It should help you. Ask for it at any drug store.

MOTHER OF TWIN BOYS

Tells How Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Relieved Her of Inflammation and Great Weakness

West St. John, N. B.—"I was in a general run-down condition following the birth of my twin boys. I had a great deal of inflammation, with pains and weakness. Finally my doctor recommended Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. He said that your medicine would be the only thing to build me up. I am sure he is right, for I am feeling much better and am gaining in weight, having gone down to ninety-three pounds. I was in bed for over a month, but am up again now. I have recommended the Vegetable Compound to my friends and give you permission to use my letter."—Mrs. ELMER A. RITCHIE, 82 Rodney St., West St. John, N. B.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is a splendid medicine for such conditions. It has in many cases relieved those symptoms by removing the cause of them. Mrs. Ritchie's experience is but one of many.
