THE AROUGO DESCRIPTION AND

THE STILL SMALL VOICE.

Prof. tired little Frank! He had gazed at that stereotyped efreet panorama till his eyelids were drooping with wearings: omnibuses, carts, cats, wheelbarrows, men, women, horees, and children; the same old story. There is a little beggar-boy driving hoop. Franky never drives hoop—no, he is dressed too nicely for that. Once in a while he takes the air; but John the serving man, or Mary the nurse, holds his hand very tightly, lest he should soil his embroidered thock. Now little Frank changes from one loot to the other, and then he cresps up to his young mamma, who lies half buried in those attin cushions, reading the last new novel; and lays his hand on her soft curls; but she shakes him off with an impatient "Don't Franky!" and he creeps back again to the window.

There winds a funeral slowly past. How sad the mourners look clad in sable, with their handkerchiefs to their eyes! It is a child's funeral, too; for there is no hearse, and the black pall fouts from the first carriage window like a signal of distress. A sudden thought strikes Franky; the tears apring to his syes, and, creeping again to his mother's side, he says, "Mamma, must I die, too!"

The young mother cays abstractedly, without raising her blue eyes from the novelshe is reading, "What did you say, Frank!"

"Mamma, must I die, too!"

"Yos—no! What an odd question! Pull the bell, Charley. Here, John, take Frank up stairs to the nursery, and coax Brune along to play tricks for him;" and Frank's mamma settles herself down again upon her luxurious cushions.

mamma settles herself down again upon her luxurious cushions.

The room is very quiet now that Franky is banished; nobody is in it but herself and the canary. Her position is quite easy; her favorite book between her fingers; why not yield herself again to the author's witching spell! Why do the speda, "Must Idio, too!" stare at her from every page? They were but a child's words. She is childish to heed them; and she rises, lays aside the book, and sweeps her white hand across her harp-strings, while her rich voice floats musically upon the air. One stanza only she sings, then her hands fall by her side; for still that little, plaintive voice keeps ringing in her ear, "Must I die, too, mamma!" Death!—why, it is a thing she has never thought of; and she walks up to the long mirror. Death for her, with that beaming eye, and scarlet lip, and rosy check and sunny trees, and rounded limb; and springing step! Death for her, with broad lands; and 'full coffers, and the world of fushion at her feet! Death for her, with the love of that princely husband, who covets even the kies of the breeze us it fans her white hrow! Darkness, decay—ollivion! (No, not oblivion! There is a future, but she has never looked into it.)

There is a future, but she has never looked into it.)

"Well, which is it, my pet, the opera, the concert, or Madamie B's soirce? I am yours to command."

"Neither, I believe Walter. I am out of tune to-night; or, as Madamie B. would say, 'Vapourish;' so I shall inflict myself on nobody; but—"

"Oh, I beg your pardon, Mrs. Rose; I am fond of a merry face, too. Smile, now, or I'm off to the club, or the billiard-room; or, as husbands say when they are 'hard up' for an excuse. I have 'a business engagement.' What! a tear? What grief can you have, little Rose?"

"Tou know, Walter, what a strange child our Frank is. Well, he asked me such an odd, old-fishioned question today, "Must I die, too mamma?" in that little flute-like voice of his, and it set me thinking; that's all. I can't rid myself of it, and, dear Walter," said she, laying her tearful cheek upon his shoulder, "I don't know that I ought to try."

"Oh, nonesnes, Rose!" said the gay husband, "don't turn Methodist, if you love me. Aunt Charity has religion enough for the whole nation. You can't ask her which way the wind is, but you have a description of canaan. Religion is well enough for priests—it is their stock in trade; well enough for children and old people; well enough for ancient virgins, who like vestry meetings to pass away a long evening; but for you, Rose, the very queen of love and beauty, in the first flush of youth and health—pehaw? Call Camille to arrange your hair, and let's to the opera. Time enough my pet to think of religion, when you see your first gry hair."

Say you so, man of the sinewy limb and flashing eye!

my pet to tank of rengion, when you see your ares grey hair."

Say you so, man of the sinewy limb and flashing eye! See! up Calvary's rugged steep a stender form bends wearily beneath its heavy cross! That sinless side, those hands, those feet are pierced for you. Tortured, athirst, faint, agonised—the dark cloud hiding the Father's face—that mournful wail rings out on the still air, "My God! my God! why hast then forsaken me!"

The dregs of life, our offering for all this priceless love O sinless Son of God! The palasied hand, and clouded brain, and stammering tongue, and leaden foot of age, thy trophies! God forbid! And yet, alas! amid dance, and song, and revel, that "still, small voice" was fusibed. The winged hours, mis-pent and wasted, flew quickly past. No tear of repentance full; no suppliant knee was bent; no household altar flams cent up its grateful incomes. altar flame sent up its grateful in Joy to thee, young mother! From that little grave, so tear-bedowed, the flower of repentance springs at last. No tares shall choke it; no blight or mildew blast it! God's smile shall be its sunshine, and heaven thy reward.

"Father is coming!" and little round faces grow long, and merry voices are hushed, and toys are hustled into the closet; and mamma glances nervously at the door; and haby is bribed with a lump of sugar to keep the peace; and father's business face relaxes not a muscle; and the little group huddle like thind sheep in a corner, and tea is despatched as silently as if speaking were prohibited by the statute-book; and the children creep like culprits to bed, marvelling that baby dare crow so loud now that "Father has come."

"Father is coming!" and bright eyes sparkle for joy, and tiny, feet dance with glee, and cager faces press against the window-pane; and a bevy of rosy lips claim kisses at the door; and picture-books lie surebuked on the table; and tops, and balls, and dolls, and kites, are discussed; and little Susy lays her soft check against the paternal whiskers with the most fearless "abandon;" and Charloy gets a lovepat for his "medat;" and amma's face grows radient; and the evening paper is read, not silently, but aloud; and tas, and tonst, and time vanish with equal celerity, for jubiles has arrived, and "Father has come!" said to be a state of the complete of the complet

THE WIDOWS TRIALS.

The funeral was over, and Janie Grey came back to her desolate home. There were the useles drugs, the tempting fraits and flowers, which came all too late for sinking the sufficer. Wherever her eye fall, there was some and reminiscence to torture her. They homes, whose threshold death's shad what as over darkened, to offer consolation. All the usual phrases of stareotyped condolence his fallow upon her ear; and now they had all gone, and the world would move on just the same that there was one more broken heart in it. She must bear her weary weight of won alone. She knew that her attar had set. Earth, see, and sky had no heastly now, since the eye that worshipped them with her was closed and rayless.

"Whom the Lord loveth, he chasteneth" said Uncle John, joining the tipe of the fingers of either hand, and settling himself in a vestry attitude, to say his lesson. "Afflictions come not out of the ground. Man is cut down like a flower, God is the God of the widow and the fatheriess. I suppose you find it so "said he, looking into the widow" face.

"I can scarcely tell," said Jamie. "This was a lightning flash from a sunmer-cloud. My eyes are blinded; I cannot see the bow of promise."

"Wrong—all wrong," said Uncle John. "The Lord gave, and the Lord has taken away. You ought to be resigned. I'm afraid you don't enjoy religion. Afflictions are mercies in disguise. I'll lend you this volume of 'Dewdrops' to read. You must get submissive, somehow, or you will have some other trouble sent upon you. Good morning."

Uncle John was a rigid sectarian, of the bluest school of divinity; enjoyed an immense reputation for sanctity, than which nothing was dearer to him save the contents of his pocket-book. It was his glory to be the Alpha is Omega of parish gatherings and committees; to be common of the proper of sending tracts to Kangaroo Islands; to be present at the laying of cornerstones for embryo churches; to shine conspicuously at ordinations, donation, visits, Sabbath-school celebrations, colporteur meetings—in short, anything that smacked of a church-steeple, or added one inch to the length and breadth of the rhand in the pocket.

"I came to ask," sa finished the sentence with sobs: the contrast between the sunny past and the gloomy present was too strong for her troubled heart.

Now, if there was anything Uncle John mortally bated, it was to see a woman cry. In all such cases he irritated the victim till she took a speedy and frenzied leave. So he remarked again that "Mr. May was extravagant, else there would have been something left. He was sorry he was dead; but that was a thing he wan't to blame lor, and he didn't know any reason why he should be bothered about it. The world was full of widows: they all went to work, he supposed, and took care of themselves."

If you will tell me whether you can employ me to write for you," said the widow, "I will not trouble you longer."

'I have plenty who will write for nothing," said the old man. "Market is overstocked with that sort of thing. Can't afford to pay contributors, 'specially new beginners. Don't think you have any talent that way, either. Better take in sewing, or something," said he, taking out his watch, by way of a reminder that she had better be going.

The young widow could scarcely see her way out through her fast falling tears. It was her first bitter lesson in the world's selfishness. She, whose tender feet had been so love-guided, to walk life's thorny path alone; she, for whom no gift was rich, or rare, or costly enough—she, who had leaned so trustingly on the dear arm now so poweriess to shield her—she, to whom love was life, breath, being, to meet only carcless glances; nay, more, harsh and taunting words? Oh, where should that stricken heart find rest this side heaven!

Yet she might not yield to despair; there was a little, innocent, helpless one for whom she must live on, and toil, and struggle. Was the world' all darkness! Bent every knee at Mammon's shrine? Beat every human heart only for its own joys and sorrows?

Days and months rolled on. Uncle John said his prayers, innocent, helpless one for whom she must live on, and toil, and struggle. Was the world all darkness! Bent every knee at Mammon's shrine! Beat every human heart only for its own joys and sorrows!

Days and months rolled on. Uncle John said his prayers, and went to church, and counted over his dear bank-bills; and the widow satup till the stars grew pale, and bent wearily over long pages of manuscript; and little Radolph lay with his rosy cheek nestled to the pillow, chrushing his bright ringlets, all unconcious of the weary vigil the young young mother was keeping. And now it was New Year's night; and, as she laid aside her pen, memory called her hack to rich, sunny days—to a luxurious home. Again she was leaning on that broad, true breast. Troops of friends were about them. Oh, where were they now! Then she looked upon her small, plainly-furnished, room, so unattractive to the eyo of taste and refinement; then it fell upon her child, too young to remember that father, whose last act was to kiss his baby brow.

Still the child slumbered on, his red lips parted with a smile; and, for the first time, she noted the little stocking, yet warm from the diuspled foot, hung close by the pillow, with childhood's beautiful trust in angel hands to fill it; and, covering her face with her hands, she wept aloud, that this simple luxury must be denied a mother's heart. Then, extinguishing her small lamp, she laid her tearful cheek against the rosy little sleeper, with that instinctive yearning for sympathy which only the wretched know. In alumber there is, at least, for getfulness. Kind angels whisper hops in dreams. The golden light of New Year's morning streamed through his the partially-opened shatters upon the curly head that already nestled anneally on its pillow. The blue eyes opened showly, like violets kissed by the sun, and the little hand was out-stretched to grasp the empty stocking. His lip quivered and tears of disappointment forced themselves through his tiny lingers; while his mother rose, and and unrefreshed,

THE ARCTIC REGIONS.

According to the despatches of Captain McClure, the chances are that Sir John Franklin did not perish by starvation in the Arctic regions, for game is said to be quite abundant there. Figs.—A fire broke out on the night of the 19th instant, at Mr Graner's Cloth Mill, Cove Head, which burnt down the Fulling Mill. We regret to learn, that two fallers were consumed, together with other valuable machinery. The fire originated from a stove-pipe, placed in a horizontal position, which, as is supposed, had separated at the joints by the jar of the two Fulling Mills then at work.

All the clothe was removed to a place of comparative safety before the arrival of the neighbours, by whose extraordinary exertions, the progress of the fire was arrested, then rapidly spreading towards the dressing mill and press room. The latter suffered only a slight injury.—Ist.

We were visited last night by one of the most terrific storms of wind and rain, from the S. E., that has ever been experienced in this town. We fear that we shall hear of much damage being done throughout the country. The roof on the North side of the Episcopal Church of St. Paul, in Charlottetown, was completely torn off and thrown to the ground; the wind having got under the cave, and from thence along the roof. The interior of the Church has suffered no great injury, and a large body of workmin are engaged in repairing the damage to the roof and in preparing the Church for the services of the morrow. Several chimneys have been blown down, and fences prostrated.

We are requested to state, that the injury done to the roof of St. Paul's Church, in this town, by the gale hast night, will not prevent the performance of Divine Service therein as usual, to-morrow, the 25th instant.

Indeed, very few are the discusses in which a Purgative Meditonie is not more of less required, and unsteh siek-ness and entifering night be, proventeds, if a harm-less but effectual Cathartie were more freely insed. No person can feel well while is contive habit of body prevails; besides it soon generates-aericals and often fastal discusses, which might have been avoided by the timely and judicious use of a good-purgative. This is alike true of Colds, Feverish symptoms, and Billious derangements. They all tend to become or by the timely and judicious sac-of a good purgative. This is alike true of Colds, Feverish symptoms, and Bilious derangements. They all tend to become or produce the deep seated and formidable distensives which load the hearses all over the land. Hence a reliable family physic is of the first importance to the public health, and this Pill has been perfected with consummate skill to meet that demand. An extensive trial of its virtues by Physicians, Profesors, and Patients, has shown results surpassing anything hitherto known of any medidine. Cures have been effected beyond belief, were they not substantiated by persons of such exalted, position and character as to forbid the suspicion of unpiruth. Among the eminent gentlemen to whom we are allowed to refer for these facts, are Phin. VALENTINE MOTT, the distinguished Surgeon of New York City.

This system of composition for modicines has been found in the Cherry Pectoral and Pills both, to produce a more efficient remedy than had hitherto been obtained by any process. The reason in perfectly obvious. While by the old middle of confliction, every medicine is burdened with more or less of activations and sinjurious qualities; by this, each individual virtue only that is, desired, for the, curative effect is present. All the inert and objectious qualities of each substance comployed in the Pills as surely more powerful antidote to disease than any other modicine known to the world.
