Indigestion Resulted From an Inactive Liver

The Bowels Became Constipated and the Whole Digestive System Upset.

With many people constipation becomes a habit. And it is a dangerous habit which is certain sooner or later to cause serious disease.

"Daily movement of the bowels" is the first and most important rule of health. When the liver becomes torpid the flow of bile into the intestines is stopped and the bowels become constipated. But you can readily overcome this condition by using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. There is no treatment obtainable which so promptly awakens the activity of the liver and bowels and thereby corrects derangements of the digestive system.

Mrs. Herbert Doherty of Beaver Brook, Albert Co., N.B., writes: "I can truthfully say that Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills are a great medicine for constipation. I have suffered from constipation ever since I can remember, but got to using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills and was so benefited that I began to study this remedy. I found that the indigestion resulted from a bad case of inactive liver, and as soon as I got the liver working right I didn't have any stomach trouble or indigestion. I cannot praise this medicine too highly, and would advise anyone suffering from indigestion or constipation to use Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. My husband also claims that these pills have done him more good than any medicine he ever used. You are at liberty to use this letter."

Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills positively relieve and cure torpid liver, constipation, biliousness, indigestion, headache and kidney disease. Put it to the test. One pill a dose, 25 cents a box, all dealers, or Edmondson, Bates & Co., Ltd., Toronto.

CHAPTER XVII. Eve's Daughter.

As is usual with men—and artists especially—when they are happy, he sat up late that night smoking, and thinking and dreaming of Norah, but in the morning he started for the early train.

He had got within sight of the station, and was feeling for his watch when he found that he had left it behind him. In changing his everyday waistcoat for one more presentable and less paint-stained, he had taken out his watch and a ring, and placed them on the mantel-shelf of the sitting-room that "he might not forget" them, with the usual result.

As he remembered that now and again chance wayfarers dropping in at the inn sometimes made their way, by mistake, into the little room, he felt annoyed with himself, and half stopped, wondering whether he should have time to run back.

At that moment a pink dress fitted out of one of the cottages opposite which he was standing, and Becca South tripped past, throwing him a smile.

It occurred to him that he would send a word of caution to Mrs. Brown about the watch, and he called to Becca.

She stopped, and came back and looked up at him sideways.

"Did you call, sir?"

"Yes," he said, hurriedly, for he fancied he heard the train. "Look here, Becca, I've left my watch on the mantel-shelf at the inn. Are you going that way?"

She nodded, still eying him like a Jackdaw.

"Yes, I'm going up to the Court, past the inn."

"Well, then," he said, "will you be so kind as to go in and ask Mrs. Brown to take the watch upstairs to my bedroom? Some one may come in—you understand?"

"Yes, I know," she assented, with a nod. "I'll do it."

"Thank you, Becca," he said. "I seem doomed to give you trouble. And he laid his hand on her shoulder and smiled at her gratefully. "By Jove, there's the train," he exclaimed on the same breath, and started off at a run.

Becca went down the road, and entered the bar of the inn—if anything so unlike an ordinary bar can be so called—but it was empty, and she was about to call Mrs. Brown, when she closed her lips suddenly, and on tiptoe approached the small passage that led to the sitting-room.

Neither Mrs. Brown nor the servant was in sight, and Becca's black eyes flashed through the open door all over the room. Its artistic litter was something novel to her, and excited her curiosity, and, after a moment or two of listening, she stole inside.

She fitted to and fro, more like a Jackdaw than ever, casting swift glances at the sketches and canvases, and turning over the books and knick-knacks which were strewn about the room; then she went to the mantel-piece.

The watch was there, and she took it up and looked at it. As she did so the chain dragged down the ring, which, after the manner of rings rolled across the room.

Away went Becca in pursuit, and after a short search, she found it under the sofa.

It was a plain band of gold, with the initials C.B. on it, which Cyril had in a moment of preoccupation scratched upon it with his penknife.

Becca turned it over and looked at it, then she tried it on one finger after another until she found that it fitted the little one, and then held up her hands and gazed at it admiringly, thinking how nicely it showed off her slim hand.

Eve like, she passed from the admiring to the covetous mood.

He had said nothing about a ring; perhaps he had forgotten all about it, and if—if she should keep it, he would conclude that he had lost it. It was a beautiful ring, but, no doubt, a gentleman like Mr. Burne did not set much value on it.

While she was looking and longing and hesitating, Fate lent the evil one its aid, just as it had done in the matter of Catherine's photograph. Becca heard Mrs. Brown's voice in the kitchen. She started up and tried to pull the ring off her finger, but it stuck fast. In a spasm of terror, lest she should be discovered in the room, she darted through the passage into the bar, waited a moment, then, still tugging at the ring under her apron, passed into the road. Before she had gone twenty yards, the ring came off, and with a feeling of relief, she turned, intending to replace it. But as she neared the door, she stopped and hesitated. After all, the worst was over. She had taken the ring, and she might just as well keep it.

She slipped it into her pocket and began to sing, and, still singing, stopped a few paces from the inn door. Then she called out "Mrs. Brown!" and after a moment or two the landlady came into the bar. Becca walked toward the door as if she had only that second arrived.

"Oh, Mrs. Brown," she said, "Mr. Burne asked me to come and tell you to take his watch upstairs. I forgot whether he said he'd left it on the mantelshelf or on the table, but he said in the sitting-room."

"Dear me, yes," said Mrs. Brown. "That's just like him; he's so careless and forgetful. Some of these days he'll lose something, and honest folk will get the blame. But there, he's an artist gentleman, and what can you expect?" she added, raising her voice as she went into the sitting-room.

"Is it there all right?" cried Becca, in her clear treble.

"Yes, all right, and thank you, Becca South!" called back Mrs. Brown, and Becca went on her way singing like the innocent, light-hearted girl she was.

CHAPTER XVII. An Astonishing Declaration.

CYRIL did not buy a paper, but sat in the corner of the carriage by the open window and thought of Norah, and his reverie was so pleasant and engrossing that he started with surprise when the train arrived at Paddington.

He was in so great a hurry to get his business done and return to Santleigh—and Norah—that he did not get on an omnibus, as a poor artist should, but called a cab.

Jack Wesley's chambers were in Winchester Street, Strand, and the first thing Cyril saw, as the cab stopped, was his friend's head at the open window. He waved Jack a greeting, and stood at the door of the chambers with outstretched hand.

"Behold he cometh, clothed in his right mind!" he said, cynically, but with a pleasant smile.

Cyril wrung his hand and looked into the grave, earnest eyes affectionately.

"Yes, dear old Jack, I've come," he said.

"And in such haste that you hired a chariot. Was it the burning desire to reach me, or have you discovered a gold mine in Santleigh?" and he went back to his writing table, but sat astride his chair, and leaning his elbows on the back looked up at Cyril with a smile.

Cyril's face flushed, and a glad light flashed into his eyes.

"Yes, Jack," he said, "and something even better than that!"

"Oh!" The monosyllable dropped like a stone. "Indeed! Then you might have spared yourself the trouble of rushing up on the small and contemptible bit of business I've got for you."

Cyril laughed.

"Dear old Jack!" he said, laying his hand on the broad shoulder and shaking him. "How I've missed that cynical voice of yours! Why, it seems ages since we parted, instead of days—ages!" His voice softened. "But tell me all about it; what's the row, old fellow?"

Jack balanced his chair and stretched to the table for a letter.

"Here's a note from Moses; he'll buy the other picture, 'The Silver Stream.'"

"No!" exclaimed Cyril.

"Yes; and give you what you ask, but on conditions."

"Oh!"

Jack smiled.

"Oh they are not hard ones. It seems that Lord Newall has taken a fancy to it."

Cyril opened his eyes and nodded. Lord Newall was a well-known patron and other workers who must have enduring strength, take to build up and keep up their health. Surely it will do as much for you, but insist on SCOTT'S.

of art, and his approval set the sign manual upon a picture, and the painter who obtained his lordship's good word might regard himself as made; the public in all things artistic is like a flock of sheep, and must have its bell-wether. Lord Newall had but to get the lead, and the sheep followed.

"By Jove!" muttered Cyril. "So Lord Newall fancied 'The Silver Stream.' Well, I thought there might be something in it."

Jack Wesley smiled.

"Very nicely put. Go to, young man; your modesty is thrown away in this shop! Yes, he has bought the picture on condition that you paint another for him."

Cyril started and laughed.

"If every one made that condition, Jack, I should be a millionaire."

Jack nodded.

"Yes, it sounds rather insane, doesn't it? But there's reason in his madness. He wants you to paint a bit of the seashore outside his place in Brittany."

"In Brittany?" echoed Cyril, and his face fell.

"Jack looked hard at him.

"What is your objection to Brittany, my friend?" he asked.

"That it's not in England," replied Cyril, thoughtfully.

"That's more Brittany's misfortune than its fault, and you can scarcely expect Lord Newall to move it over here; or do you expect it?"

Cyril sat astride a chair in front of Jack's, and leaned his chin on his arms.

"In Brittany," he repeated. "How long will it take me?"

"Not being an artist—thank merciful Heaven!—can't say," replied Jack. "What on earth can it matter to you how long it takes you?"

"It does matter," said Cyril, gravely.

Jack Wesley shrugged his shoulders.

"When Fortune came and smiled, he said 'Begone, you hag, begone.'"

Cyril rose and began to pace the room. To leave Santleigh and go to Brittany; to leave Norah for weeks, perhaps months!

Jack Wesley watched him gravely.

"What ails you, man?" he said. "But hear me out. It is not only the money—and I suppose that is not wholly a matter of indifference to you?"

Cyril stopped a moment to murmur, "Don't be angry with me, Jack!" and resumed his pacing.

"I'm not angry; only surprised. I thought you would fling up your hat, order round champagne, and behave yourself in your usual imbecile fashion when luck comes your way. But to proceed. It is not only the money, though that is a fair sum enough, but there is something else hanging to it; the something you and I are always clamoring and whining for—Fame."

In The Stakehold Inferno Are the Unsung Heroes of The Ragin' Main.

In the glamour and glory of a sea fight there are few who give a thought to the unseen heroes of the stakehold—the men who toil in an inferno, a smoke and heat and fire, while the guns thunder about their heads; or whose unrelenting toil the safety and success of our warships so largely depend; and who share none of the excitement and reap none of the rewards of battle, while cheerfully facing its deadliest perils.

Such unstoried heroes are the men of the "Black Gang"—the men who, deep down in the bowels of our ships of war, keep the furnaces at white heat to extract the "last ounce" of speed—a speed on which many hundreds of lives may hang.

Nowhere in the world will you see such strenuous labour under such almost inhuman conditions, and nowhere will you see a more courageous devotion to duty.

He Has No Chance.

The ship may be sinking, the inferno rushing water swirling knee-deep over the plates on which the stoker is standing; but no thought of the boat and no escape for his life is for him. He must stick to the post till the last fire is drawn; and if he has time to race up the escape-ladder to the board deck, well and good. If not—and the odds are all against him—he goes down, a "mute, inglorious" hero, to his death. It is all "part of the day's work," and he gives no thought to the price he may have to pay.

Let us take a peep at the "Black Gang" at their work, while the guns roar and the shells shriek above.

As we enter the stakehold the heat blasts from the furnace-mouths scorch our eyes and sear our lungs with every gasping breath we draw. Life seems impossible in such an atmosphere.

Along one side of the narrow chamber, lofty and dim, are ranged the boilers, some fifty in number, quivering with the power that is in them, and rocking backward and forward with the heave of the ship. And opposite the boilers stand the stokers—figures carved in jet and polished with the sweat which streams from every pore; clad only in trousers that have once been white, with a filthy and steaming "sweat-rag" knotted loosely round their necks.

Sometimes He Faints.

As the door of the furnace opens the white, harsh glare strikes the dripping bodies, and throws up every tense muscle in vivid relief. As they thrust and strain at their unwieldy tools you see the shivering shadows which tell of live muscles swelling and knotting; till it seems they must burst through their sheaths of skin.

Gathering up a shovelful of coals, each man propels it with a quick-for-

Below, There!

In The Stakehold Inferno Are the Unsung Heroes of The Fighting Main.

In the glamour and glory of a sea fight there are few who give a thought to the unseen heroes of the stakehold—the men who toll in an inferno, all smoke and heat and fire, while the guns thunder about their heads; on whose unrelenting toil the safety and success of our warships so largely depend; and who share none of the excitement and reap none of the rewards of battle, while cheerfully facing its deadliest perils.

Such unstoried heroes are the members of the "Black Gang"—the men who, deep down in the bowels of our ships of war, keep the furnaces at white heat to extract the "last ounce" of speed—a speed on which many hundreds of lives may hang.

Nowhere in the world will you see such strenuous labour under such almost inhuman conditions, and nowhere will you see a more courageous devotion to duty.

He Has No Chance.

The ship may be sinking, the rushing water swirling knee-deep over the plates on which the stoker is standing; but no thought of the boats and no escape for his life is for him. He must stick to the post till the last fire is drawn; and if he has time to race up the escape-ladder to the boat-deck, well and good. If not—and the odds are all against him—he goes down, a "mute, inglorious" hero, to his death. It is all "part of the day's work," and he gives no thought to the price he may have to pay.

Let us take a peep at the "Black Gang" at their work, while the guns roar and the shells shriek above.

As we enter the stakehold the hot blasts from the furnace-mouths scorch our eyes and sear our lungs with every gasping breath we draw. Life seems impossible in such an atmosphere.

Along one side of the narrow chamber, lofty and dim, are ranged the boilers, some fifty in number, quivering with the power that is in them, and rocking backward and forward with the heave of the ship. And opposite the boilers stand the stokers—figures carved in jet and polished with the sweat which streams from every pore; clad only in trousers that have once been white, with a filthy and steaming "sweet-rag" knotted loosely round their necks.

Sometimes He Faints.

As the door of the furnace opens the white, harsh glare strikes the dripping bodies, and throws up every tense muscle in vivid relief. As they thrust and strain at their unyielding tools you see the shifting shadows which tell of live muscles swelling and knotting, till it seems they must burst through their sheath of skin.

Gathering up a shovelful of coals, each man propels it with a quick-for-

Eat Big Meals! No Sour, Acid Stomach, Indigestion or Gas

"Pape's Diapepsin" is quickest, surest stomach relief known—Try It!

Time it! Pape's Diapepsin will digest anything you eat and overcome a sour, gassy or out-of-order stomach almost within five minutes. If your meals don't fit comfortably, or what you eat lies like a lump of lead in your stomach, or if you have heartburn, that is a sign of indigestion.

Get from your pharmacist a fifty-cent case of Pape's Diapepsin and take a dose just as soon as you can. There will be no sour risings, no belching of undigested food, mixed with acid, no stomach gas or heartburn, flatness or heavy feeling in the stomach, debilitating headaches, dizziness or intestinal griping. This will all go, and, besides, there will be no sour food left over in the stomach to poison your breath with nauseous odors.

Pape's Diapepsin is a certain cure for out-of-order stomachs, because it takes hold of your food and digests it just the same as if your stomach wasn't there.

Relief in five minutes from all stomach misery is waiting for you at any drug store.

These large fifty-cent cases contain enough "Pape's Diapepsin" to keep the entire family free from stomach disorders and indigestion for many months. It belongs in your home.

ward thrust of the body into the white-hot heart of the furnace, and, with a dexterous turn of the wrist, spreads it evenly over the fire. Then, quick as the eye can follow, another shovelful follows, and another, as if life itself hung on the breathless swiftness of the sequence.

Thus, in fierce, unceasing labour, "stoking up," and "cleaning his fire" by the dexterous use of his "slice"—a work even more exhausting—the stoker toils four long hours, until, limp as a rag and staggering with fatigue, he is entitled a spell of rest. If he faints during his labour he is carried into a corner by his mates.

But He Keeps Smiling! "Go off watch?" Not he! He's as good a man as any. He never knows when he is beaten.

Not are stamina and brute force all that are demanded of the stoker. He requires skill, which only years of experience can give him. He must know the idiosyncrasies of the boilers—how to coax this one and to stimulate that—for they vary in character and moods as much as humans. He must also have a keen and constant eye on the gauge-glasses, to see that the bubbling heads never go above or below a certain level.

But through all his fierce toil and its perils the stoker keeps a smiling face, and no man in the Navy carries a stouter heart or a finer sense of duty.

The Great Anarchist.

There are few rewards for him, and not too much pay. But he serves his King and country cheerfully, with no thought of applause or glory. —Answer.

The weighty speech made recently by Viscount Grey, in the presence of all the Allied representatives, deserves the attention of belligerents and neutrals alike. Slowly and gravely delivered, without the slightest attempt at rhetorical effect, it proceeded manifestly from the speaker's deep conviction, and represented his personal feeling as well as the settled purpose of the British and Allied Governments. Lord Grey has sometimes been thought less bellicose at heart than some of his colleagues. His frequent public declarations that war might have been averted by a European Conference in July, 1914, have seemed reluctantly to recognize the real character of German policy. Unquestionably the outbreak of war meant to him, personally, the collapse of the whole conception of diplomacy that had inspired his action up to August, 1914. He had hoped against hope, and had sometimes seemed even disposed to close his eyes to patent facts rather than admit that Germany was preparing in cold blood a murderous assault upon European civilization. Now he sees that all efforts to avoid war in July, 1914, failed "because you cannot have peace without good-will, and because in Berlin there was the will to war and not the will to peace." Common form though it be, after more than two years of war, such a statement is valuable at a moment when Germany is striving sanctimoniously to presume upon the forgetfulness of the world and to persuade it that she is fighting for dear life against a host of aggressors, and needs only guarantees against a renewal of their attack. The Foreign Secretary did well to recall the antecedents of the war, and to prove once again that it is precisely because war was not forced upon Germany, but forced by Germany upon Europe, that it is the Allies who must have the guarantees for future peace.

A new and significant feature of the speech was the advice given to neutrals. Germany, he declared, had been "the great anarchist," who had plunged Europe into a "greater and more terrible anarchy than any individual anarchist ever dreamt of." To a correspondent who had asked what neutrals could do, he had written that their best work for the moment would be "to work up opinion on such an agreement between nations as will prevent a war like this from happening again." And he was very explicit upon two essential points. Any organization of neutrals such as is contemplated by a league of distinguished people in the United States, under the leadership, we believe, of ex-President Taft, must have the object, not of interfering between the present belligerents, but of getting ready for some international association which shall do its part in making peace secure

Incandescent Gas Lighting.

Possibly, the feature of incandescent gas lighting most frequently noted by casual observers is the great ease with which tasks, ordinarily arduous under artificial light may be performed under the Welsbach gas mantle. The light has a peculiarly "soft" quality, difficult to describe, but which is readily recognized by those who have had experience with the gas mantle lamp.

In its general effect upon bodily health and comfort, the use of incandescent gas lighting is decidedly favorable. The currents of air set up by the burning gas improves ventilation, tending to expel the air vitiated by respiration and new in fresh air to replace it. Harmful or dangerous disease germs are instantly destroyed in the flame. The extent to which this effect takes place may be verified by placing a gas lamp close to a ceiling without any provision for interfering with the up-rushing air currents. The charred particles which collect immediately above the lamp are the remains of dust particles which before passing through the flames were laden with germs and microbes. Actual experiments have shown that the burning of gas lamps in rooms previously containing bacteria, resulted in absolute sterilization of the air.

Contrary to the popular notion the temperature of rooms lighted by incandescent gas lamps is seldom markedly greater than under incandescent electric light, even under unfavorable conditions of ventilation, while in rooms provided with the ventilating facilities required by the demands of hygiene, the temperature in gas-lighted rooms is frequently lower.

when this war is over. "We are all in favor" of such an endeavor, we added, but we wish to ask neutrals who may make any demand on us for such a thing—"will you play up when the time comes?" In other words, any organization for the future security of peace must provide an effective sanction for its efforts, and the parties to it must be prepared to employ force for the vindication of right. Neutrals, Lord Grey suggested, should see that something were done to lay down rules which would make sure that any nation which departed from them would be regarded and treated as an enemy of the human race. It follows that they have an imperative claim upon the sympathy and help of all neutrals, and that neutrals will not and cannot be allowed to mediate or otherwise interfere between them and the "great anarchist" whom they are leagued to bring to justice.—London Times.

REPAIRING SUMMER RAVAGES.

When you come home from the summer's outing, look out for your complexion, and as quickly as possible, repair the ravages of the sun and wind.

Cold water should never be used on a sunburned complexion. Wash the face in warm water instead. Then sponge with a simple mixture of rain water, lavender and benzoin. The proportions are three of water, one of simple tincture of benzoin and two of lavender water. Cucumber milk is cooling for the sunburned face. Take an ounce of fresh cucumber juice and three ounces of fresh milk. Scald, skim and use. Massage this well into the face after washing. Then wipe the face with a soft towel.

The woman who freckles easily should protect her skin by rubbing a little non-greasy cream once or twice a day and giving it a light dusting of powder after the cream has been well rubbed into the pores. Buttermilk is invaluable for washing the freckled face, and its regular use will entirely remove freckles and prevent them from re-appearing. It is always a mistake to put off the removal of freckles until the end of summer, as the longer they are allowed to remain the more trouble they give when the task of removing them is undertaken.

It is best to start removing them as soon as they are noticed and then to take precautions to prevent them from forming again. The following lotion is excellent for removing light freckles. Four ounces lemon juice, two ounces glycerine, one ounce rose water. Apply to the face several times daily and allow it to dry on the skin.

Serge is ever ready to the woman who needs a practical frock, and it is always in fashion.

There are chic coats of fur, straight in the line, reaching a little below the hips.

The correct riding shirt is made almost like a man's, and of hannel, silk, cheviot or linen.

A charming coat dress of blue serge has curlicues embroidered almost all over in green silk.

Expensive Smokes.

(From the Philadelphia Ledger.)

They found among the effects left by Elmer Morgan eight thousand dollars' worth of cigars. I held in my hand a few days ago two boxes of his favorite brands. His after-dinner smokes cost a dollar and a quarter each. A representative of the Cuban factory which makes them tells me that Morgan ordered usually five or six thousand at a clip. There are only two men in Cuba who can make that cigar, and nearly all of them are produced by one man," said this Cuban producer. "We pay him forty cents to make each cigar and he can roll about forty-five of them in one day." The king of Wall Street smoked a bit better cigar than does the Emperor William of Germany. The Kaiser's cigar, made by the same factory in Cuba, is worth ninety cents.

IN OUR great-grandfathers' time many New England families had a cask of rum in the cellar.

It was freely offered to guests (except children) and freely partaken of, even as tea and coffee are today.

This old-time custom gradually passed out of existence, for our forefathers recognized it was harmful.

Another old-time custom—tea and coffee drinking—is slowly passing in the same fashion and for the same reason.

The abandonment of tea and coffee drinking is made easy nowadays by the use of Instant Postum, the pure cereal beverage with a delightful, snappy taste.

Unlike tea or coffee, this delicious table drink contains no "caffeine" or other harmful substance.

Postum is now used daily in tens of thousands of the best of Canadian homes where reason rules and health is valued.

Monastir and Roumania.

It is rarely that the news contains at the same time cause for satisfaction and for apprehension as it does this morning, leaving it undecided how far the good and the bad neutralise or outweigh one another.

Turning, however, to this morning's news of Roumania, we have much to think seriously about. From Orsova to Craiova runs a most important railway line (vital arteries railway lines are nowadays) through the heart of Wallachia. The Germans claim to have reached it and the news lately received lends colour to their claims.

He is a wise man, however, who has breadth enough of view and sufficient foresight accurately to appraise such a situation as this. Comparing the two campaigns, while we see in the taking of Monastir the first invaluable step in what may well be the deciding operations of the whole war, we are forced to admit that the success of the enemy is of even more strategic value, it is a more present danger and it is far more capable of a concentrated pursuit to the end.

Alleged Smuggling. We hear that it is the intention of the Customs authorities to institute legal proceedings against a well-known shopkeeper on Water Street. PORTUGUESE PROGRESS IN EAST AFRICA.

CAPE TOWN, To-day. An official statement issued to-day from Lourenco Marques in Portuguese East Africa, says: A Portuguese column in Massai District occupied Linda on Sunday; another column reached Moama beyond the river Rovuma and received homage from numerous natives, headmen of the German East African colony. Linda is a seaport in German East Africa on the India, sixty miles north of the frontier of Portuguese East Africa.

HOPE ABANDONED.

LONDON, To-day. The American steamer Ad Davidson is removed from the overdue list. The underwriters refuse to quote rates for reinsurance. The Davidson, which left Montreal on Oct. 4 for Havre, has been on the overdue list for some time.

FRENCH AND BELGIAN REPORTS.

PARIS, To-day. A bulletin issued by the war office to-night reads: Except for violent bombardment of the region around Douanmont there is nothing to report on the whole front. A Belgian communication says: Spirited fighting occurred in the regions of Steenstraete and Boesinghe. There was less artillery activity to-day.

ASKS LAWYERS TO DEFINE LAW AND RIGHT.

NEW YORK, To-day. An appeal to the bar of the United States, the great neutral nation, to aid in defining international law and right in such terms that world peace might be maintained, was made by Sir Robert Borden, Premier of Canada, in an address at a luncheon given in his honor at the Lawyers' Club here to-day. The peace which the Entente Allies seek, Sir Robert added, departing from his prepared speech, is an abiding one and not an inconclusive one. The Club elected the Premier an honorary life member.

ASKS GREEKS TO GIVE UP ARMS.

ATHENS, To-day. Vice Admiral Fournet, Commander of the Anglo-French fleet in the Mediterranean, last night presented to the Greek Government a note demanding the surrender to the Entente Allies of all the arms, munitions and artillery of the Greek army with the exception of some 50,000 rifles now in actual use by the forces remaining after the last step in demobilization.

GREAT SERBIAN VICTORY.

LONDON, To-day. A Reuter despatch from Salonika says: On Saturday the Serbian troops gained fresh victories in the Cerna region, the German-Bulgar forces making a disorderly retreat in the direction of Prilep, north of Monastir. The Serbians, the despatch adds, took a great number of prisoners and trophies and captured the villages of Grushtko, Brnik and Yarashok and Hill 1273. The pursuit continues. Great fires are visible in Monastir where violent explosions were heard. The Allied troops to-day, Sunday, entered Monastir.

MORE SHIPPING LOSSES.

LONDON, To-day. Lloyds Shipping Agency to-day reported the sinking of two British steamships the Lady Carrington and Vasco, and the Portuguese steamer Sannicola. The Lady Carrington is registered at 3,920 tons gross, the Vasco at 1,914 tons gross.

WAR SUMMARY.

LONDON, To-day. After having been for months men without a country, the Serbians are again established in their capital on native soil. Monastir, for which the Entente Allies have been struggling since the advance from their base at Salonika began, has been evacuated by the German and Bulgarian forces and occupied by the French and a considerable number of Serbians. The French and Serbians having captured the crest of the Hills partially surrounding the valley of the town, the Germans found their position untenable and withdrew, according to Berlin, to new positions to the north of Monastir. Unofficial advice from Salonika says the temporary capital of Serbia will be immediately established at Monastir. With the reoccupation of Monastir and the railway line from the Entente Allied base at Salonika, now in the Entente hands to the east and southeast of Monastir, the French and Serbian troops continue to make gains in the Cerna River region against the Teutonic Allies, having captured several other towns in this region. On the Transylvanian front, the Austro-Germans at almost all points continue to make progress against the Russian and Rumanian forces or to hold them back without gains when they attack. The latest report from Berlin says the Teutonic Allies have forced the narrow mountain passes leading to Wallachia Plain in Rumania and on the Danube front near the junction of Hungary, Serbia and Rumania have reached Orsova, on the Craiova railway. Bucharest reports a Rumanian advance in the region of Dragoslavele. From Nov. 1st to 18th the Austro-Germans are said to have made prisoners 189 officers and 19,338 men, and to have captured twenty-six guns, seventy-two machine guns and seventeen ammunition cars. Lively infantry artillery actions are taking place in the Dobruja region near Sillistria on the eastern bank of the Danube, about forty miles southwest of the Tchernavda-Constanza railway. Bad weather hampering operations on the western front in France, but the British nevertheless, have taken twenty additional German officers and 752 men, prisoners in the Ancre sector, making their aggregate of prisoners since Nov. 15th 6,962. Berlin says that in Saturday's fighting, which was over a front of seven and a half miles, the British met with sanguinary reverses, except for insignificant gains southwest of Sorre and near Grandcourt. A French attack south of Sully-Sallisset met with a similar repulse. Attacks were made by the Austrians in the Adige Valley and Upper But regions, in the latter of which the Austrians and Italians fought hand-to-hand and the Italians were victorious, according to the Rome war office.

ITALIAN STEAMER SUNK.

LONDON, To-day. Lloyds reports the Italian steamship Lolia, 2,987 tons gross, has been sunk.

RUSSIAN CASUALTIES.

BERLIN, To-day. According to the central identification office at Kiev, Russia, says the Overseas News Agency, the number of Russian casualties since June, 1916, have reached 100,621 officers and 2,027,853 men.

LADY AVIATOR BEATS ALL RECORDS.

BINGHAMTON, N.Y., To-day. Attempting a non-stop flight from Chicago to New York, Miss Ruth Law beheld the wheel of a Curtiss biplane of the military scout type, shattered all the American long distance aviation records for a single flight to-day, when she flew from Chicago to Honeoye, N.Y., a distance of about 600 miles, bettering the record made by Victor Carlstrom on Nov. 2 by about 100 miles. Previous to to-day's flight Miss Law never before made a single flight of longer than 25 miles.

DOMINION-WIDE PROHIBITION.

TORONTO, To-day. All the Canadian provinces were represented at a mass meeting in favor of Dominion-wide prohibition held this afternoon at Massey Hall, Toronto. The speakers pointed out that in every province but Quebec there was a measure operative or pending for the removal of the old time conditions. The Quebec representative prophesied that within three years Quebec, including Montreal, would be dry.

RAILWAY HORROR IN AMERICA.

LAREDO, Texas, To-day. A hundred and fifty-nine persons were killed, and many more or less seriously injured in a railroad wreck on the Inter-Oceanic line from Vera Cruz between Dehesa and San Miguel near Jalapa on November 12th, according to reports received here to-day. According to information all but one of the five cars of the train left the track and rolled over the cliff. The passengers were literally ground to pieces.

FOOD CONTROL WELCOMED IN ENGLAND.

LONDON, To-day. No other Government action in Britain during the war has commanded such immediate, almost unanimous support as the decision to control food supplies. Virtually the entire press welcomes the scheme. Almost the only criticism expressed is that the authorities should have taken charge of the nation's food supplies long ago. The most probable appointment to the position of food controller is considered to be that of Sir George Sclater-Boyle, President of the London Corn Trade Association, and during the war the Government's chief advisor on corn supplies, or Baron Devonport, Chairman of the port of London, who is an all round expert in shipping and food supplies questions.

SATISFACTION OVER MONASTIR.

LONDON, To-day. The fall of Monastir on the anniversary of its capture by the Serbians from the Turks in 1912, is hailed by the Morning newspapers as being of considerable political and military importance. It is argued that as the Bulgarians' main object in entering the Balkans was the possession of Macedonia, the loss of the Macedonian capital must bring an acute sense of failure both to Bulgarian politicians and military officers. On the other hand it is contended that the capture of the town will greatly encourage the Serbs, whose recent capture of Kalamak Mountain prepared the way for the city's fall. The recapture of Monastir has been expected here, but it came sooner than had been anticipated with almost dramatic suddenness.

ROMANIA'S SITUATION.

LONDON, To-day. Military experts in the morning newspapers to-day call attention to the seriousness of the situation in Rumania, where the Germans and Austrians report they have reached the railway which runs from the Danube to Craiova, a point which threatens to flank the Rumanian army south of the Vulcan Pass. The Daily Mail says the enemy claims to have attained his first objective, namely an advance on the Rumanian plain. His new position endangers the Rumanian flank and may cause a rapid retirement. This news is grave, as the presence of the enemy on the railway south of Orsova is a precursor and it will be lucky if it extricates itself without loss. The new advance does not aim directly at Bucharest but gives the Germans an excellent base from which to do so.

WOULD HAVE NO GERMAN MUSIC.

ROME, To-day. An attempt to introduce some of Wagner's music into a concert conducted by Toscanini resulted in an uproar which brought the performance to a premature conclusion. The orchestra had commenced the funeral march from Gotterdammerung when there were loud shouts of "It is for the victims of the Padua." A storm of imprecations against Wagner and Germany came from all parts of the great auditorium and the concert had to be abandoned. An Austrian aviator bombarded Padua on Nov. 11 and, according to news despatches, killed 22 persons and injured about twice that number. All the dead were said to be non-combatants and most of them women and children.

Body of Seaman and Gunner Cummings

RECOVERED THIS MORNING.

The body of seaman John Cummings, R.N., who was engaged as a gunner on the s.s. Nascope, was taken from the waters of the harbor at A. J. Harvey & Co.'s dock at 11.30 a.m. to-day. The deceased seaman was 30 years of age, belonged to the Old Country and joined the Nascope last year before she went to the White Sea. On Wednesday night last, Gunner Cummings left the ship between 6 and 8 o'clock to come ashore. Not returning on board that night or the next morning, anxiety was expressed for him. Meanwhile his man-o-war cap was found on Harvey's pier, near which the Nascope was then and is now lying. This aroused suspicion and several police officers were engaged dragging the bottom the following day, but without success. Then it was reported that the unfortunate man's cap was seen to blow from his head and that he never went after it. Consequently the theory that he had fallen overboard was abandoned. Up to this morning the seaman had not been reported on board since Wednesday last and the police, after diligent search of the town, could not locate him. "Head" Dawe, who is known to be always right, expressed the conviction that Cummings was not in the land of the living, so arming himself with a jigger, accompanied by Constable Emberley, he proceeded to Harvey's pier and after dragging the bottom for about an hour raised to the surface the body of the missing seaman. The corpse was at once wrapped in a sail and conveyed to the morgue where a post mortem will be held on it this afternoon.

At the Kirk.

Mr. McKay preached his last sermon at the Kirk yesterday. His discourses both morning and evening were ones of good and helpful words to all. Mr. McKay has officiated for some time, filling the vacancy through the Rev. Mr. Sutherland resigning. We assure him that we have appreciated the valuable services he has so freely given us, and in expressing our thanks we hope to see him again. He has made many friends who will follow his career with interest. We hope to have our pulpit supplied next Sunday by Dr. Dickie, who is the father of our future minister. Word has been received from Rev. Gordon Dickie saying he preaches his farewell sermon at St. Stephen's to-day (Sunday) and will leave almost immediately for here, but may remain a day or two in Sydney. He will, however, be here next week. Mr. Ross of Fort Massey will preside at the induction and will address the congregation. Dr. A. B. Dickie will preach and Mr. Coffin will address the minister on Sunday, Dec. 3rd. Mr. Ross will preach at the morning service, introducing the minister.

Rev. Dr. Bond at Wesley Church

A PATRIOTIC SOLDIER'S SERMON.

At Wesley Church to the members of the volunteers who are Methodists Rev. Dr. Bond preached from the words in Paul's second Epistle to Timothy 2nd chap. part of fourth verse: "That it may please him who hath called him, to be a soldier." After referring to the qualifications and duties of a good soldier who gives up himself to his King and country, he drew the lesson of being a good soldier who can endure hardships and be a faithful servant of King Jesus. He paid a high tribute to the splendid men coming in from some of our outposts, and speaking of one who had recently returned from Gallipoli and France, home for rest after being wounded and in hospital, in reply to the Rev. Doctor's cheery words, "I see you have been through it" as he pointed to the gold points on his sleeve cuff. "Yes, sir," was the reply, "but I will soon be all right and get back again. Everybody is very kind to us, you must not be too kind as we have to face the hardships of trenches." "Yes, my brave fellow," replied Dr. Bond, "you should have more rest, and some of those walking around our streets and in easy jobs ought to go in your place." In strong argument and thrilling appeal he emphasized the words, fitness and duty. The Doctor said when informed that the boys in khaki would be present, decided at short notice to use a sermon he had. It was an address delivered in part to the men of the Artillery on leaving Halifax two years ago when attending his church in Halifax.

Live Folks and Dead Folks

By RUTH CAMERON.

RUTH CAMERON

It is Stevenson, isn't it, who felicitously speaks of people whose entrance into a room makes one feel as if another camp had been lighted?

There are also people who sometimes come into my life who make me feel as if a window had been opened, letting in lots of fresh air and give me a clearer and better outlook on the world.

That's what I mean by "live folks."

People who chloroform the spirit of conversation.

And the people who never have that effect, who make the atmosphere a little stiffer than it already is, who chloroform the spirit of conversation by their presence, whose departure gives one the sense of a weight lifted, I call the dead folks.

All Gail is divided into three parts. All people are divided into three divisions, live folks, dead folks and the folks between.

Most of us, of course, belong to the latter class.

My shampooist came to see me the other morning. One of my house-mates came into the room during the shampooing. In three minutes we were engaged in an animated conversation. Now this housemate had been in a low state of mind, and had depressed us all by his lack-luster manner the last few days. Before the conversation was over he became another man.

"You Are a Vitalizing Person."

"Well, Miss Wheeler," he said, "you certainly are a vitalizing person."

And that is just what she is. And that also is why she soon becomes a welcomed friend in every family which she first enters as the shampoo lady.

Everybody loves the live folks; everybody is galvanized by them into the world more interesting after contact with them.

Whether one can raise one's self from the neutral class to the class of live folks is a question which naturally presents itself.

It is difficult to answer, isn't it? What Makes Live People Live?

In the first place it is so hard to tell what makes live people live.

It isn't physical vitality. I have known people in perfect health who were as dead as door-nails, as far as any vitalizing influence on others was concerned.

And it isn't mere sprightliness of manner; that's the base counterfeit of real aliveness.

Now you all have live folks and dead folks in your circle of acquaintance.

So maybe somebody can help me find out what this elusive quality is, and whether it can be cultivated or is just a gift.

The Somme and Verdun

(Boston Transcript.)

The German attempt to minimize the Allied successes on the Somme does not harmonize very well with the peasants of reaping that were sent up by the German Emperor and people when the Crown Prince captured the outskirts at Verdun. The whole nation uttered a great cry of rejoicing then, and prepared themselves to shout "On to Paris!" If the Germans capture of Douaumont and Vaux was a great German victory, the French recapture of the same places is a great German defeat, and the Allied advances on the Somme are equally a great victory for the Allies.

As a matter of fact the Allied successes at Comblès, Thiéval and elsewhere on the Somme are of much more importance than the German gains before Verdun early in the year, for three reasons. The first and most important reason is that Thiéval and Comblès represented a main and vital line of defence, upon the maintenance of which the hopes of the German campaign were staked. It was here that he had constructed their deepest dugouts and established themselves to stay. This was not truly the case at Verdun. The French had no vital thing staked on the outer forts of Verdun, or even on Verdun itself. Their line would have been shortened and in certain tactical senses bettered by a withdrawal from Verdun to the next line. But they held Verdun for all that for sentimental reasons. The Crown Prince could not get it. The French did better than their need called on them to do. But at Comblès and Thiéval the Germans lost the thing which they needed.

The second reason why the loss of the German first line of defences on the Somme is more serious than the French loss of the outer works at Verdun is that the Allied success was obtained by a new use of offensive means—by new artillery, by a new and intensive employment of it, and by a new disposition of a new army of men. For all of this the Germans have not shown themselves to be prepared. The Verdun fighting was on the old lines, and according to a system by which either side might make certain gains by paying enough for them in men and munitions. It was in reality a system of sanguinary exchanges. What was lost this month might be regained next month. We may say that the recapture of Douaumont and of Vaux was conducted very much on this plan of give and take. But the Allied advance on the Somme has been conducted on another plan, and no return wave on the part of the Germans appears to be possible. The swamping seems to be over. It is an apparent demonstration of superiority in material and in reserves on the part of the British and French; and if that superiority is maintained, the tide must turn permanently against the Germans.

Again, the Allied successes both on the Somme and in front of Verdun have the effect to lengthen the Germans' line and complicate their defence, whereas even if the French had been driven out of Verdun their line would have been shortened and their defence simplified. The Allies are apparently driving a series of wedges into the German defences, and zig-zagging their line. The result, in the long run, must be unfavorable, and must prove that the Allies have obtained a serious advantage.

The Germans, in belittling the Allies' Somme advances, are but wishing to keep up their courage.

The Real Friend in a Large Bottle.

The greatest friend to sick people is the one that helps them toward health. But nearly every human friend had heretofore suggested a different means of regaining lost health due to nervousness, overwork, debility and worry. Now there are dozens of friends right here in your own town who will agree that the best friend to their health is Zestol—the health tonic and delicious tonic wine. A short two weeks of faithful trial will put you fair and square upon the path of bounding health. No man who is so absolutely that if you cannot report real progress at the end of that time we will refund the purchase price. You who suffer and suffer and suffer should not delay beyond to-day. FARM CHAMPIONS.

WALT MASON

The wrestlers and the fighters, baseball heroes, too, are boomed by sporting writers, the whole long, low, low months through. But they are sordid suckers, who for the boodle play; I sing the champion shuckers, who load a day! When corn is ripe and yellow, and keen the autumn air, the active farmer fellow goes forth to hush his share. If he shucks bushels eight, between the dawn and dusk, he's made a record weighty, and he can surely hush. His fame goes down to zero, and he must bow before the shining cornfield hero with forty bushels more! I've seen the champion shucker, who won a township fame, in his best bib and tucker, enjoying men's acclamation. He has no use for medals, no loving cups he needs, and he puts on soft pedals when talking of his deeds. No sporting scribe endorses, and no promoter knows this gent who drives his horses down the long corn rows, and beats the rival shuckers because he likes to win—they boost the prize ring muckers, who reek of dope and gin.

YOUR BOYS AND GIRLS.

Before her baby comes the expectant mother should be sure to cultivate serenity, happiness and contentment, reading books and other writings conducive to contentment. Next, she should pay attention to her bodily comfort. She should live in the open air as much as possible; she should take a nap every afternoon and sleep nine or ten hours each night; she may do any work or take any exercise that does not strain or jar her, but she should guard against stooping and reaching. She should keep her system in healthy, active condition by drinking much water and eating good ripe fruit. She should eat plentifully of green vegetables. She should bathe daily in warm, not hot water, preferably at night, for the bath is relaxing and quieting.

PARIS, Nov. 19.
South of the Somme an attempt by the Germans to gain our trenches east of Berry was repulsed by our barrier fire and grenades. Intermittent cannonade occurred on the rest of the front. On the night of Nov. 16 and 17 one of our aerial squadrons dropped 257 shells on an enemy aviation field at Gelancourt-Oise and Griselles-Aisne. Twenty-two airplanes of the British Maritime Aviation Service set out on Nov. 17 at daylight to bombard the electricity plants and naval workshops at Ostend. They dropped 130 bombs many of which reached their objectives. Another bombardment was carried out by seaplanes on Melve and Zeebrugge. All the machines returned.

A New Blood Food Has Been Discovered That Works Wonders

SAID TO PUT NEW LIFE INTO PEOPLE THAT ARE RUNDOWN.

For years doctors have been searching for a combination that would enable them to inject into thin blood the elements it lacked. This can now be done, and any weak-blooded person can quickly be made strong and well.

Already a small army of ailing people has proved the merit of taking after each meal with a sip or two of water, two chocolate-coated Ferrozone Tablets. This is easily done, and even one week's use of this wonderful blood-food will prove how nourishing and strengthening and flesh-building the treatment is.

Just think of it—Ferrozone uplifts the entire nervous system, removes the blood, makes it rich and—gives the sort of aid that's needed in throwing off weakness and languor.

Tens of thousands enjoy the advantages of renewed health through Ferrozone;—if you will only use it, you'll surely grow strong too; its beneficial action is noticed even in a week. You see it goes right to work, removes the causes of the trouble and then quickly makes a cure.

For those who sleep poorly and have nervous apprehensions, Ferrozone is a boon; it is a specialist in such cases.

Where there is paleness, poor appetite and languor, Ferrozone makes the patient feel like new in a few days.

In tiredness, nerve exhaustion, spring fever and debility, the power of Ferrozone is known from coast to coast and universally used with grand results.

Let Ferrozone build you up, let it win you back to robust health,—it will do so quickly if you give it the chance. Sold by all dealers. 50c. per box or six boxes for $2.50. Remember the name Ferrozone.

In the Cerna bend the Serbs repulsed a new Bulgarian counter-attack on Hill 1212, the enemy rolling back in disorder toward the north pursued by our artillery, who have reached the top of Hill 1378. In the region south of Monastir the French and Russians made new progress in the direction of Holoven. The English Aviation Corps bombarded enemy camps and bivouacs at Novak and Monastir, and the troops of the Army at last entered Monastir at 5 o'clock this a.m., the date of the anniversary of the taking of the town by the Serbians in 1912.

NEW FOOD REGULATIONS.

LONDON, Nov. 19.
The official Gazette publishes an Order in Council providing new food regulations which follow those which Walter Runciman, President of the Board of Trade announced in the Commons several days ago would probably be put into effect. An important provision is one empowering the Board of Trade to requisition stocks of food on such terms as the Board of Trade may direct. The amount of compensation payable in default of agreement is to be determined by a single arbitrator who must take into consideration the cost of production and reasonable profit, but without necessarily considering the market price. The provisions of the regulations give the Board very wide powers, even authorizing the Board to delegate its powers with respect to any particular article of Commerce to any other government department.

GERMAN ATTEMPT FAIL.

Brakesman Harry Cranford Killed

AT WHITBOURNE.

About 5 o'clock Saturday afternoon Brakesman Harry Cranford was crushed to death when he accidentally got caught between two freight cars at Whitbourne. It happened that the deceased, who for several years had been employed in the Reid Mill Co.'s train service, was in the act of adjusting a coupling and did not notice the approaching car that was to be connected with the one he was working on, and before he had time to jump clear his body was caught and crushed between the cars. The engineer, firemen and others were quickly on the scene and picking up poor Cranford brought him to the station at the place mentioned, where, as far as possible was done to relieve the pain, but without avail, for twenty minutes after the accidental death came.

The late Harry Cranford was well known to railway men and the general public as a most obliging co-worker and official. About three weeks ago the deceased was married, and left to mourn are a young widow, father and mother, two brothers and one sister to whom the Telegram extends sincere sympathy.

An inquiry as to the exact cause of death will be held shortly.

Well Barred Out

(From the Ottawa Journal.)

Exclusion of the Hearst yellow journals from the Canadian mails is a step on which the Dominion Government ought to be congratulated, not so much because these newspapers are "yellow," as because they are liars. The mischief that sort of newspaper does is often serious, because when one of them distorts the truth, it necessarily deceives a certain proportion of people for the reason that no other kind of newspaper wants to advertise yellow journals by arguing with them to show that they are in the wrong. The Hearst newspapers from the beginning of the war have been venomously antagonistic to Britain. They have sneered at British motives, belittled British effort, misrepresented British aims, lied about British fighting and lost no opportunity of trying to stir up trouble for Britain in the United States. And this campaign of malice went largely unquestioned both in the United States and this country because as already said, decent newspapers don't want to advertise Hearst journals by giving them free publicity, even in the line of exposing their dishonesty. It is mostly an unthinking constituency in the United States which reads the Hearst papers, and which has been reading them to some little extent in Canada. All the more reason, so far as Canada is concerned, why these newspapers should not get in here at all. They are desirable neither for their alleged facts nor for any idea they can furnish as to what decent people in the United States may be thinking.

PAINS IN SIDE AND BACK

How Mrs. Kelly Suffered and How She was Cured.

Burlington, Wis.—"I was very irregular, and had pains in my side and back, but after taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Tablets and using two bottles of the Sensitive Wash I am fully convinced that I am entirely cured of these troubles, and feel better all over. I know your remedies have done me worlds of good and I hope every suffering woman will give them a trial."—Mrs. ANNA KELLY, 710 Chestnut Street, Burlington, Wis.

The many convincing testimonials constantly published in the newspapers ought to be proof enough to women who suffer from those distressing ills peculiar to their sex that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is the medicine they need.

This good old root and herb remedy has proved unequalled for these dreadful ills; it contains what is needed to restore woman's health and strength.

Household Notes.

Canned and prepared fruit keep best in the lighter and drier rooms. The antiseptic properties of light are as valuable in this instance as in most others.

Medicine may be given to a baby by means of a rubber nipple. Let the baby take it as if it were on a bottle. Then pour the medicine into the open end.

Try cleaning up the house on Monday instead of Saturday, and see if it does not stay tidy longer. Husband and children are usually at home on Saturday.

Put a strip of adhesive plaster with the owner's name on it in each pair of rubbers and each umbrella. With children especially this saves a great deal of trouble.

It is a refreshing thing in the life of a woman who has much housework to do to learn a bit of poetry, while she is washing the dishes or pinning some good picture from a magazine upon the wall.

I happened to be in the pine country not long ago, and walked out to the Little house. It was quite deserted, a lizard lay warming himself on the doorstep and a covey of quail were feeding under the great spruces. The ground was covered with large fallen leaves; some straggling yellow chrysanthemums nodded at the window where Barbara used to read, and I noticed that a pane of it was broken. But after I had sat a while on one of the arbor benches and listened to the humming of David's bees, my thoughts was of how sweetly the place lay in the October sun.

When tired of all other ways of using cold roast beef, try slicing and covering with tomato sauce, then baking in a hot oven long enough to have the tomato flavor soak through the meat.

A piece of rubber sheeting slipped inside a case of prettily embroidered pique is a very convenient thing to have spread upon the lap when one wishes to hold a baby.

Don't Neglect Your Cough.

A little cold may not seem a dangerous thing—you may feel inclined to let it go on hoping that to-morrow it will be better—but can you afford to take chances? Just as the little insignificant acorn grows if let alone, to the mighty giant oak, that cough if not stopped may grow to a very serious illness. When a Cough starts there's no telling where it will end. You know no doubt, of cases right among people you have known, where serious complications and fatal illness have had their start from a neglected cough or cold. "Don't neglect your cough." Stafford's Phorotone Cough and Cold Cure is what you should take. For sale at Stafford's Drug Store, Theatre Hill, and Stafford's Pharmacy, Duckworth Street. Price 25c., postage 5c. extra.

Laying of Corner Stone

OF NEW CHURCH IN HOLLESTOWN BY HIS GRACE ARCHBISHOP ROCHE—A MEMORABLE EVENT.

The important event of the laying of the corner stone of the new St. Joseph's Church, took place yesterday afternoon. Eager anticipation reached its full height, as the weeks and days passed by, and, from all sides good wishes and the kindest good feeling were abundantly manifested. This would be expected from the parishioners of St. Joseph's, but the Cathedral and St. Patrick's parishes seemed to outvie each other in helping to make the ceremony of the laying of the corner stone such a decided success. Nor was this happy feeling confined to the Catholics of the above named parishes, but from other denominations nothing but the sincerest expressions for the welfare and success of the undertaking were heard, and many a heartfelt "God speed your good work" was spoken by them. May this happy and united comradeship be the harbinger of brighter and happier days for the people who dwell in the city that nestles under the shadow of "Dear Old Southside Hill." The morning seemed to augur well for a fine day, but, alas! the weather-god, early before noon, gave ample evidence by change of wind, that our fondest hopes were to be cast aside, and that the early morning sunshine did not herald a continuance of the promise it foreshadowed, but rather the cold air told us, unmistakably, that the best of the day was over and done. His Grace Archbishop Roche arrived at the church punctually at the appointed hour, accompanied by Right Rev. Mgr. McDermott, Rev. Dr. Greene, and some of the others of the clergy. They were met at the entrance of the church by Rev. Dr. Michin, the highly esteemed Pastor of St. Joseph's, and immediately proceeded to the site of the function of the day's festivities, preceded by the officers and members of Saint Joseph's Institute wearing their handsome scarfs and badges. The presidents of the city societies were present on the platform during the ceremony. The grounds surrounding the site of the new church were crowded by an anxious throng an hour previous to that appointed for the ceremony, and in their eagerness and anxiety to take part were not to be put aside from their set purpose by the drizzling sleet that was falling. Quidi Road, leading to the grounds, was likewise crowded by people. The committee in charge had the grounds surrounding the site of the church festooned with flags and streamers of bunting where flying to the wind, across the streets approaching the scene of the day's festivities. After the Archbishop and clergy left the platform, they walked to the church, and the Archbishop ascended the altar and delivered a sermon which will be long remembered. He delivered a full explanation of the ceremony just concluded, and explained how "zealously the Church guards the house of God, how she is to make it a house of prayer, and a fitting house for the King of Kings. His Grace then spoke historically of the earlier days of Catholicity in St. John's, bringing before us in a kaleidoscopic manner,—in language so beautiful and simple that all present could understand—the days of the Old Chapel, the erection of the Cathedral, the erection of St. Patrick's at the West End, and now the commencement of the building of St. Joseph's. He referred to the great work performed by those "whose place, alas, knows them no more." He also spoke of the great bishops and priests of the earlier days, their heroic labours, their self-sacrificing zeal in the discharge of their duties, and the happy "God be good to them" that is uttered at the mention of their names. His Grace congratulated the saintly and holy Pastor of St. Joseph's on his zeal, his earnestness and sincerity of purpose, and his faithful discharge of the duties that the Church expects from her appointed pastors. He also congratulated the people on having such a pastor, and, he might add, he congratulated the pastor on having such a devoted people as the parishioners of St. Joseph's, because, when he, the Archbishop, decided on building the new church they worked heroically and energetically to help on the good cause, and I trust, concluded His Grace, at no distant date the fondest hopes of the Archbishop, the Pastor and people will be realized. Benediction of the Most Blessed Sacrament was given by His Grace, and thus ended the ceremonies of this joyous and happy day for the pastor and people of St. Joseph's.—Com.

TWENTY-FIFTH ANNIVERSARY IN NEWFOUNDLAND.

The Church Lads Brigade celebrated the 25th anniversary of the formation of the Corps in Newfoundland by attending a celebration of Holy Communion at St. Thomas's Church at 8 o'clock yesterday morning. The officiating clergyman was the Rev. Dr. Jones, Chaplain, and a large number of the lads attended.

At 3 p.m. the Battalion under Major Goodridge and headed by the band held a Church parade and again attended service at the old military church. There was a large turnout of Old Comrades including many returned soldiers and sailors together with over 200 of the lads marched to the Church via Harvey and Military Roads. Rev. H. Uphill, Battalion Chaplain, preached an instructive and impressive address, reviewing the history of the C. L. B. in Newfoundland for the past quarter of a century. During the service the music for the hymns was supplied by the band which also rendered several patriotic airs to and from the Church. Owing to the unfavourable weather the parade through the city had to be abandoned. On returning to the Armoury the lads were addressed by Major Goodridge who expressed the regrets of Lt-Col. Rendell on not being able to take part in the parade.

Corporal Hennebury Writes.

Corporal Ewen S. Hennebury, of "Ours," writing to his father, G. McF. Hennebury, of this staff, by last mail, says in part:—

"I was wounded on the 12th of October, getting hit in the big push. We went over the top at 2.05 p.m. and I was knocked out about 2.45 p.m. I managed to get into a shell-hole and remained there until late that night when I was picked up by one of our boys and brought in. I had my left leg broken. I don't think that we suffered as much as on July 1st, but on the contrary gained what we went after and that was the German first line of trenches. The boys who got in the German trench held it and did the work of another Regiment which was on our left. I think now that I will be in Hospital for some months, but I also think that they will save my leg and when I do get better I must try to get home for a few months before going to the front again. I only know of one of our boys missing in the July drive, that was taken prisoner, and he has been since reported to have died of wounds. I was speaking to Alex. (his younger brother) the night before the charge and he was O.K. I'll never forget his words when I wished him good-bye. He said: 'Never mind, boy, if you've got to die, die with a good heart and go right to it.' It's hard when we are together and one doesn't know when the other falls, but never mind, we'll be all home some day, please God."

Corporal Hennebury concludes by asking to be remembered to all his friends and says he is as well as can be expected after coming through three campaigns.

Who Posted This Package.

The general public have but a faint idea of the vast volume of business that is being daily transacted at the G. P. O., at this period of the year. Hundreds of thousands of letters, papers and parcels are received and despatched in a very satisfactory manner, considering the many difficulties under which the officials have to work. While the Post Office, like any other business, is liable to make mistakes, it has been proven that out of every ten complaints made re the non-delivery of letters, parcels, etc., eight are accounted for in the following manner:—insufficiently addressed, wrongly addressed, no address, short of postage, overweight, and various other reasons. An instance of the first-mentioned complaint was brought to our notice on Saturday afternoon when a package was received through the mail, intended for a Sapper with the C. E. F. now in France. It was addressed as follows:—
Sapper R. K.
1st Tunneling Co.,

France.

The parcel contains 1 pair of gray socks, 1 pair gray mitts and some chewing gum. The Postmaster General is holding the package and would be obliged if the sender would communicate with him forwarding the full address.
