LORD MORDEN'S DAUGHTER
— OR —
THE TRAGEDY OF THE CEDARS.

CHAPTER XXVII

After threading his way through its intricate mazes for some twenty yards he saw Dora standing on the lawn, the sunshine falling upon her dainty form and burning her hair with shimmering gold.

"I am here, sweetheart!" he said.

"Oh, you darling! How did you know that I wanted you?" cried Dora.

"Do you not always want me? I heard your love note, and I have responded. I wish that Fairfax would go home, so that I should have my little wife all to myself. I have left him in the conservatory, and must go back to him soon."

He put one arm about Dora's slender waist, and together they strolled through the sweet gardens, to the miniature forest beyond, and gazed upon the shining water of the Thames.

"Your friend, Mr. Fairfax, is a genius, is he not, Edmund? And I have heard that you are always strange people," Dora observed.

"He is a brilliant fellow," Edmund replied, "and was once the gayest of the gay."

"What is the story that he referred to, dear—the story that you were to tell me?"

"I did not intend to mention it for a long time—I am not sure that I ought to do so now, but if you insist, Dora—"

"Insist!" she smiled, fondly. "I insist upon nothing but that you love me forever as you do now, and do not go to the city to-day. It would be cruel for us to part on our wedding day."

"I promise," laughed Edmund, "for I have already discovered that it would be impossible to tear myself away. I will get rid of Fairfax—I will make use of him by sending a message to his club to explain my absence to Rogers, and a gentleman named Hassard. And when he is gone, we will spend a happy, happy day together."

"I am so glad," whispered the girl, "for I have read somewhere in some book of old folklore that it is bad luck to part on the wedding day, if only for an hour! And, darling, I shall not feel quite happy—quite sure of you until Mr. Fairfax has gone back to London."

"Poor Fred," murmured Locksley. "I think that if his fate had befallen me, I should have died. Dora, I will tell you why my friend is so strange to-day, and then you will pity him as I do. My wonder is that he came—that he could bear the torture of lacerating a wound that may never heal. I have not told you from whom I bought this place. It was Fred Fairfax. I have not told you why he sold it. It is because he has been wronged by a heartless woman. 'The Myrtles' was to have been their future home, but she died or deserted him on their wedding eve. He has not told me much of his trouble, but I have gathered sufficient to know that he loved a creature who was unworthy of him. This will explain his emotion when he referred to our future—this will explain why he broke down, for the bitter past must be ever present among associations which once held point where yours was stopped, is fully discussed and adjudicated, and a precedent is established in English law. The minister had not pronounced the benediction, had not proclaimed you man and wife when the ceremony was broken in upon by people armed with legal authority. I will not be positive, but I feel that I am on safe ground, and you must go back to the city with me, and wait in my chamber while I read up."

"Great Heaven! this is almost too much for me!" groaned Locksley. "How am I to tell Dora—my poor, little Dora?"

"Say nothing at present. If I am wrong, there is an end of the matter. If I am right, you must go through the ceremony again."

For five—ten minutes Locksley was dazed, blinded with grief and disappointment.

"It shall be as you say, Fairfax," he said, at last.

He seemed to have aged years in a few short minutes.

"Then let us go at once, old man," the barrister urged. "Tell your wife that I am ill—or anything you please. I cannot bear to face her. Tell her that I am not able to travel alone, and if things turn out badly—if the worst comes to the worst, you must be married again."

"And in the meantime?" groaned Locksley. "And in the meantime? Suppose that there has been no marriage, and this scoundrel Marlowe becomes aware of it?"

"He will not find it out all at once," replied Fairfax. "His efforts, if he continues to annoy you, will be confined to setting the marriage aside. He will be unable to obtain a hearing before Miss Deane is of age, and will consequently fail. Haste, there's a good fellow, or we shall not get through with the business to-day."

Locksley tottered from the room.

CHAPTER XXVIII

He was surprised how bravely Dora heard his excuses, and while he talked of the sudden illness of his barrister friend, his heart was dead and cold within him.

"It is too bad," said Dora, biting her lip hard, and hastily brushing away a tear; "but I will not add to your disappointment, darling, by worrying you. You will come home soon, will you not?"

"Yes, yes! Oh, my love, what a world of doubts and sorrows this is!" He snatched her to his breast, half-ashamed of his own weakness, and pressed kisses on her lips and cheek.

"I shall watch for you from this window," she told him. "I do not believe that I shall leave it until you come back. Do you see what a beautiful view it has of the drive? You will not be gone long, dear?"

"No, I will not be gone long, though it will be dark before I return; so that it will not be wise of you to tire yourself by waiting fruitlessly here."

"Still, here I shall be, Edmund, and my thoughts will be ever with you."

He laughed constrainedly, saying: "Then I will tap the window when I pass!"

The cab, which Fairfax had not permitted to go away, drove up to the door, and Locksley knew that it was madness to delay longer.

"Good-by, sweetheart," he whispered again. "In life and death you are first in my heart—remember!"

It was a strange speech to make, and Dora was startled by his white face, his earnest tones.

"In life and death!" she repeated simply.

He strode from the room and sprang into the cab, where Fairfax was waiting for him.

The barrister doffed his hat to Dora, and the hansom drove away.

Once only did Edmund look back, and it was to see a picture that he never forgot—a picture that was photographed on his heart forever. Dora was standing at the open window in the library, her fair face seeming almost ethereal in its loveliness, and she was waving him farewell.

Agreeing sob escaped him.

"Fairfax," he said, "I feel as though we had parted forever—as though a great veil rolled between us!"

"You are depressed, old fellow. Things are not so bad as they seem. It is only the dark cloud before long days of sunshine."

For a little while they rode in silence; then Locksley asked: (To be continued.)

Are Our Heads Altering?

Edinburgh heads are not as big as those belonging to people who came from Aberdeen.

The fact is that there is no relation between the size of the head and the cleverness of its owner. It is true that Robert Burns had an immense head. It measured 22½ in. in circumference and he took an 8½ hat. But the head of his famous contemporary, Sir Walter Scott, measured 21 in. less, and he wore a 6½ hat, which is about the average size worn to-day.

The great naturalist, Cuvier, had a huge head, and his brain weighed 64½ ounces, or at least twelve ounces above the average. On the other hand, (the French statesmen) had small heads, and brains in proportion to their size.

But if the size of the human head is not increasing, its shape is certainly altering, and for this statement we have the authority of such men as Sir Arthur Keith and Professor Otis Mason. In the skulls of our remote ancestors we find that the forehead sloped backward. That form of head is becoming rare—at least among the white races. The long head is becoming more usual among white races, whereas the typical skull among the yellow peoples is round.

Usually yellow races have smaller heads than white, and Dr. Joseph Sims, an authority on the subject, states that, as a general rule, people who live in cold climates have larger heads and heavier brains than those who reside in the warmer parts of the earth.

If the size of the head increased in proportion to increased brain power, man of the future would be like "Tom Noddy"—"all head and no body." What will happen—what is actually happening—is an improvement in the shape of the head and a thickening of the brain cortex. Both brain and spinal cord are bound to develop.

Taking the height of a man as 5ft. 7in., if he is well proportioned the length of his head should be 2in.; in other words, his height should be seven and a half times the length of his head. Lord Balfour, among living men, coincides absolutely with this standard.

Children's bodies are very different. For in the baby the head is one-fourth of its entire stature. But the head grows only half as fast as the remainder of its body. The trunk becomes three times and the legs five times their length at birth.

Take special care of your boy baby

Boy babies are often more delicate than girls. If you have a little son you will, therefore, want to take extra care of him. Watch his diet; for most of the ailments of babyhood are traceable to incorrect feeding.

VIROL will nourish his little body, build strong bones and white teeth, make healthy blood and firm flesh, and thus see him safely through the critical years of infancy.

Many a strong man to-day has to thank a childhood diet of VIROL for the splendid constitution that has remained with him throughout his life.

What the Germans Missed

Gas that kills human beings yet leaves houseflies unharmed nearly caused the death recently of Prof. H. Maxwell Lefroy, at the Imperial College of Science, South Kensington.

He was experimenting with a deadly, odorless gas called Lewisite, which would have been used against the Germans had the war not ended. Engrossed in studying the flies which were still flying about merrily, Prof. Lefroy forgot that he, too, was exposed to the deadly vapour. After ten minutes he just managed to struggle out of the death chamber, and was eventually revived with oxygen.

Premier Massey of New Zealand Passes Away

Per Cent. of Belgian Miners Threaten to Strike—Mississippi Boat Overturns and Carries 21 to Death—Sleeping Sick in England Mystifies the Doctors.

NEW ZEALAND PREMIER DEAD.
WELLINGTON, May 9. Premier W. F. Massey, Premier of New Zealand, died here to-day after a long illness.

THREATEN STRIKE.
BRUSSELS, May 9. Three per cent. of the 51,000 miners in Belgium to-day voted to accept a proposal to accept five per cent. reduction in wages provided the percentage per cent reduction for June.

STEAMER OVERTURNED.
MEMPHIS, Tenn., May 9. A steamer carrying 21 persons is known to have overturned in the Mississippi River. It was carrying 21 persons on board.

WOMEN AND THE LEAGUE.
WASHINGTON, May 9. A formal resolution urging the constituent members to use all their influence to procure a speedy inclusion of all nations into the League of Nations was adopted to-day by the international Council of Women in session here. There was no debate but a German delegate presented a statement declaring she and her colleagues in Council would work for co-operation with the League.

LIBERAL CANDIDATES.
ANTIGONISH, May 9. Hon. Wm. Chisholm, Minister of Public Works and Mines in the Nova Scotia Government, and Dr. D. N. John McLean, were chosen as Liberal candidates in the forthcoming elections at the convention held here yesterday.

BAD WEATHER DELAYS FLIGHT.
OSLO, May 9. Unfavourable weather continued to-day and the Amundsen air flight to the North Pole will not hop off from Spitzbergen until fair conditions prevail, it was announced here.

MONCTON MAN CHARGED WITH MURDER.
ST. GEORGE, N.B., May 9. Alfred Arsenault, of Moncton, was indicted yesterday for the murder of Alpheus Henselpecker, aged 70, store keeper on the main road at Bethel, five miles from here, who was found in his yard with his head crushed last Friday.

ELECTION IN SASKATCHEWAN.
REGINA, Sask., May 10. Writs for a general election in Saskatchewan were issued here late Saturday. The election will be held June 2nd. The Liberal Government of Hon. C. A. Dunning, came into being on April 6th, 1922, following the resignation of Hon. W. Martin, who had been Premier of Saskatchewan since Oct. 20th, 1916. Mr. Dunning was Provincial Secretary in the Martin Administration. Mr. Dunning headed the 5th Legislature of the Province of which four sessions were held. The standing of the various parties is given officially on May 1st, 1924, was Government 45; Independents, 14; Independent Conservative, 1; Conservative, 1; Labor, 1; Vacant, 1; Total, 63. The last general election in Saskatchewan was held on June 6th, 1912.

LORD MILNER A VICTIM OF SLEEPING SICKNESS.
LONDON, May 10. The doctors are unable to explain the sudden appearance of an epidemic of sleeping sickness in Great Britain which is reported to have attacked several hundreds of persons throughout the country. The epidemic thus far has caused no fatalities. The doctors are inclined to believe that the epidemic is either a mild form of a variation of the disease. One victim is Lord Milner and another, the Lord Provost of Edinburgh. Lord Milner's condition to-day was serious.

NOTHING TO INDICATE AN END TO THE STRIKE.
SYDNEY, N.S., May 9. Peace prevails throughout the Nova Scotia coal fields. The picketing of some of the mines, which was the feature of the last few days of the nine weeks old strike of the British Empire Steel Corporation's twelve thousand coal miners, was very little in evidence to-day. Circulation was given a rumor to the effect that the Nova Scotia Government was about to arrange a re-opening of the collieries with a continuance of the 1924 scale of wages, but Premier Armstrong questioned at Halifax as to the truth of the report, said that there was no foundation for it, and that no such action was being contemplated by the Government. He had nothing to say regarding the progress of the struggle nor would he comment upon the situation to-night.

THE DEAN'S TWO OBJECTIONS.
NEW YORK, May 10. The Very Rev. W. R. Inge, Dean of St. Paul's Cathedral, in London, sailing on the Samaria to-day, after a three weeks' lecture tour in the United States, said the most objectionable thing he had met was the custom of referring to him as the "Gloomy Dean." He said he had survived prohibition three weeks, but would be glad to get back to his "cellar."

WAB ON ICEBERGS.
HALIFAX, N.S., May 10. The United States steamer Tampa, arriving here to-day, reported having sunk by shell fire several huge icebergs on the grand banks of Newfoundland, while patrolling the North Atlantic shipping lanes, from which task it was relieved by the Modoc, of the same service, a few days ago. Officers of the Tampa reported much fog, numerous bergs and ice on the banks, but generally smooth seas.

FAILS TO BEAT EXPRESS.
BERLIN, May 10. Eleven persons were killed to-day when a Frankfurt-Basel express train struck a motor bus at a grade crossing at Rothmaisch in Baden. There were 25 passengers on the motor bus and in addition to those killed, several were badly injured.

REPARATIONS PAYMENTS.
BERLIN, May 10. Great Britain received 25,000,000 marks on reparations account from Germany, under the Dawes plan, during April, according to the report of Seymour Parker Gilbert, Agent General for reparations. France's share was 32,000,000 marks. Since Sept. 1, COLLISION ENQUIRY ENDED.

HALIFAX, May 9. The inquiry into the collision between the coal steamer Clackamas and the tern schooner Cape d'Or, off Cape LeHarve last Thursday week with the loss of the schooner and four of her crew, was ended yesterday before Wreck Commissioner DeMera, of Ottawa, who reserved his decision.

and for some time she was quite ignorant of his title.

They took to each other, too. They had mutual friends and both were keen on dancing, tennis and riding. They became engaged and then Cardigan feared what his family would say. There was no reason why he should not marry Miss Salter, but he was still only an undergraduate. So last July when the Oxford vacation began they went to a registry office in Isleworth town, near Richmond, and were quietly married in the presence of two of the bride's friends. For a time they did not live together and the Earl continued his Oxford course without any one suspecting he was a married man.

The story came out this week and the Earl's family were informed. The only objection they could raise was that at the civil ceremony the bridegroom gave his age as 21, the same as the bride's, though he is a few months younger. Legally the misstatement made no difference, but it was thought better to have a religious ceremony, and this took place yesterday.

The Second Marriage.
This time it was fully recognized by the presence of the bridegroom's father and mother, the Marquis and Marchioness of Allesbury, with the private chaplain of the Marquis as one of the officiating clergy. A large crowd gathered for the ceremony at St. Mark's Church, South Audley St., to see the romantic couple, but they found the doors locked as soon as the bridegroom entered and a strong force of police to keep them away.

The bride had arrived in a biscuit colored costume, and after a short interval a biscuit clad lady emerged from the church on the arm of a tall and embarrassed young man. Cheers rang out and the crowd surged forward and hats were waved.

But ten minutes later down a narrow passage from the back door of the church another biscuit gowned damsel and a young man hurried. Very pleased with himself he looked as he halted a passing taxicab he cried, "It's all right, dear; we have tricked them fairly."

See Miracle in Film Set

A miracle was performed before the eyes of the players during the making of the scenes for Rafael Sabatini's famous love story, "Captain Blood," which will be shown at the Star Theatre on Monday and Tuesday. One of the big negroes who act as a body-guard for Col. Bishop, a role assumed by Wilfrid North, turned from jet black into a glistening, sparkling white under the direct rays of the sun. No one was more surprised at the transformation than the negro himself. He looked himself over from head to foot, speechless, frightened, amazed.

"Ah say, what am happened to me?" he inquired. "Am dis mah' own self, or is ah somebody else?"

An investigation disclosed the fact that the negro has a strong desire to become a champion prizefighter. It doesn't make any difference whom he fights, when or where; he loves to fight.

As his nearly nude guard costume was composed mainly of liberal coatings of dense black grease paint smeared over his entire body he decided to toughen his hide by using a mixture of salt in the grease paint. The actor was afraid the grease paint would soften his skin and make him unfit for the ring. Evidently his fear was very great for he used so much salt that when the paint dried in the heat of the sun, the salt crystallized and the negro like Lot's wife turned into a pillar of salt.

BUICK BEAUTY

When you ultimately own a Buick, you will appreciate its beauty even more than you do now.

Now, when you see one parked in front of some fine home or passing on the highway, you see only one of the many features which have made Buick the most widely owned of quality motor cars.

A Buick owner knows that the outward beauty of this famous motor car, pleasing as it is, is only the visible evidence of inner beauty and perfection.

He has an engine with an extra reserve of power, the famous Valve-in-Head. His car understands its steering wheel more readily than any car he has driven. The mechanical 4-wheel brakes stop it firmly and safely. No car is built more reliable, more staunch, or more sure of itself. Nor is there another that is serviced so carefully or so nationally.

There are more than a million of these Buick owners. There would not be, if Buick had not, through many years, produced motor cars of superior performance and uniform excellence. Buicks are beautiful in every sense in which the term "beauty" ever is used.

New Shell is Invented for British Navy

London, May 2.—(British United Press)—The new armour piercing shell of sixteen-inch calibre, invented by Sir Robert Hadfield, of Sheffield, is regarded as one of the most important developments of the art and science of warfare since the armistice.

One of the tragic discoveries of the battle of Jutland was that the British shells could not pierce the armour plating of the German battleships. It was for some time thought that this was due to some defect in the fuses but it has since been made abundantly clear that it was due to poor penetrating power of the shell itself.

In the Hadfield shell, penetration takes place before explosion with the result that the explosion is now able to take place in the magazine of enemy ships. This discovery, however, has drawn fresh attention to the relentless but quiet competition that is going on among the nations in competitive naval armaments. The work is being done steadily but the activities of each power are known to the agents of the others. For it is known that France has developed a new type of cruiser-destroyer which will be capable of running down and sinking with ease the ten thousand ton cruisers that are now being built in America, Japan and Britain. Japan has retaliated with a new type of cruiser which too fighting power and speed is more formidable than any modern cruiser afloat of corresponding tonnage.

The experts point out that this construction and developments have reduced the fighting value of most of the British cruisers while some politicians are demanding a new naval conference to control this new race in armaments, fearing it may lead to another war. The British navy is determined to keep well ahead of its rivals.

Meanwhile the air experts place their faith in the defence of the Empire by air and it seems inevitable that the issue of airships versus battleships will have to be fought out and discussed with the same intensity as in the recent American controversy.

At present the air service is the Cinderella of the defence services and its importance is not yet fully realized.

Frogs and Snails French Delicacies

BRITISH RESIDENTS IN FRANCE OFTEN GET MARKED LIKING FOR THESE.

Frogs and snails, the two items of French cooking which are so often looked upon with suspicion by British visitors to France, are now at their best. British residents in France often acquire a marked liking for these delicacies, and I have many friends whose first request when they return to Paris on a visit is to be told where they can get a good dish of snails or of frogs.

The edible frog as prepared for cooking is a most tasty-looking morsel, and few people on seeing half a dozen of them neatly skewered together would guess their origin. Only edible frogs of an adult age are chosen from specially preserved ponds, mainly in the Normandy country. They are carefully skinned and prepared, only the hind legs being retained. Either fried in butter or cooked in a white sauce, they taste like the finest breast of chicken and have not the faintest fishy flavor.

The preparation of snails, the consumption of which in Paris alone reaches over ten millions a year, is a long task. There are two varieties, the big white snail, known as the Burgundy or vine snail—which was introduced to France by the Romans who considered it a delicacy reserved for the very rich—and the small common or garden snail. The big white snail is still comparatively dear, costing about 2s. a dozen, while the garden snail is sold at less than half that price.

The snails, once they have been collected, are left for ten days or so to starve, and they are then most carefully washed. The snail is taken from the shell, cleaned, and replaced in the shell with the butter sauce which gives it the unique flavor. This sauce is made of pure melted butter, with which is incorporated a small amount of garlic, chopped parsley, and other tasty herbs.

There are at present only four tunes, or pieces of music, at the first notes of which every Briton stands bareheaded in token of respect, although Scotchmen are agitating for a fifth. It goes without saying that the first is the National Anthem.

Then for more than a century and a half it has been an unwritten rule at performances of Handel's "Messiah" for the audience to rise to its feet at the first strains of "The Hallelujah Chorus" and remain standing till the last note.

The Funeral of Napoleon

(Dec. 15th, 1840.)

Upon the banks of Seine, the sun began, His slow, unyielding course had begun, And o'er the Imperial City shone Casts far his radiance as he moved high. Yet a strange stillness brooded over the air— Presaging—sign, most ominous—drear, And hark! the sudden clang of the tolling-bell! The tower of Notre Dame gives a knell! And from the mouth of guns the answering boom Announce the victor's passage to the tomb. Hark! o'er the unwonted alleys echoed round, Comes as of an advancing host, the sound! Like to the tempest muttering in the west, Ere 'gainst St. Helen's coast the froth, When on it comes again with the pace, With foaming lip and trembling face; Then forth the mighty host, the steaming train— they pour, From the high Arch of Nemesis, To the famed warrior's rest where he lies o'er. See the vast moving concourse bright o'erhead, Standards on standards to the sky are spread! And faded banners, drooping in the air, Showed dark and stained, like banners weeping there Colors that over fields of strife have waved adieu.

Lo! eagle-crowned and garlanded, the car, Moves stately with the banners of war! Midst waving plumes of chivalry it goes, To the great shrine where the dead repose, While riderless, and age-worn, there A charger follows sad the victor's bier, Which proudly once to war his horse bore, Now follows him to mourn, his fate o'er.

Far from the tomb, mid the sparkling foam, For one more grand the hero comes home. Lo, he hath left lone vale and forest tree, To sleep in France mid many a chivalry— In wondrous tomb with vaulted arches there, A gallant fellowship in death share.

Room shrine of victors! For the make way! 'Tis he! ye spectators! and he obeys— 'Tis he, the mightiest chieftain of an age of war, 'Tis he, who rests among you from his car, Now sturdy veterans with banners here, To see the grave close round their gather near: Survivors they of other days of strife, When the great Eagle's flight was wild and far,— Who marked how once earth's fiercest monarchs shook At his dread stormy voice and look— Brave men who panted in the strife, On Rodrigo's red ridge when the war was rife— Men who beheld dark Egypt's And, marvelling at Time's therein hid, Whilst scanning all from base to nacle, Heard, thundering loud, a voice— natural— Men!—from yon pyramid's peak, Four thousand ages mark the height, you fight— Let-Marchant Road the Band on that day; also was the Band discoursed in robes. Before the Armory, Lieutenant Alexander, Band, officers and the Bandmaster, in appreciation of the services in the Band, the Bandmaster for himself replied in a few words, stating what he had done what he could do for the Band. Christening Countess

There is an interesting legend concerning the manner in which the Countess got its name. Spanish soldiers were the first, so far as is known, to visit the American shores in the country's disappointing. The soldiers were heard by the natives, the frequent use of the expression "it is better" meaning "it is better" noted that after giving expression to their dissatisfaction they departed to another place!

When the French expedition arrived on the scene, the natives gathered on the shore and yodelled "nada," hoping to drive them away. French took this to be the name of the country, and they called it nada.

The Spaniards also named the meaning Land of Flowers, and the name, so called because of the resemblance to Venice.

C. L. B. Cadets

The First Newfoundland Regiment, which was formed in 1862, is the oldest of the British Empire. It was first raised in 1862, and has since that time been distinguished by its gallantry and devotion to duty.

The C. L. B. Cadets, a branch of the First Newfoundland Regiment, were formed in 1914. They are a corps of young men, aged from 15 to 21, who are trained in the same manner as the regular soldiers of the regiment.

piece of wood being found in the key-hole of a lock for the purpose of blocking it. A tuner declared that the man who made it must have been a carver. A carver then recognized the marks of an instrument only used for making book-trees.

The householder then remembered that a former servant had been a book-tree maker. So the thief was tracked down, and similarly, when a body was found in a sack, an expert declared that the sack had been sewn up by a woman and tied up by a man. Moreover, owing to the nature of the knots, the man was a weaver. As, indeed, he proved to be.

Bloodstains speak. They can tell whether they be human or animal, whether they come of veins or arteries. Their shape will show whether they fell from a person who is stationary or in motion.

In pursuing your inquiries a microscope is often invaluable. Some person had entered a hopfield on the eve of the harvest and cut down and destroyed a large number of vines. On the man who was detained on suspicion was found a carved gardener's knife—it could have done the job easily. But the blade was clean—it had been recently sharpened. Not satisfied, the examiner drew the rivets which held the blade to the handle, and there, at the very base of the blade, he could detect with the microscope a number of tiny spurs which are so characteristic of the hop. They helped to convict the offender.

Feathered Lightning Flashes

BIRDS THAT FLY THREE MILES A MINUTE.

Naturalists travelling in a motor-car had an opportunity recently of making observations of the speed of wild birds in flight. When going down a narrow lane a bird came out of the hedge and flew along in line with the car. It was identified as a willow-warbler, and the speedometer of the car registered 23 1/2 miles an hour.

Hedge-sparrows kept ahead of the car for 200 yards and maintained a speed of 24 miles an hour, but were caught up and passed when the speedometer needle touched 29. A young cock blackbird was overtaken at 13 miles an hour, but a cuckoo flew at a speed of 23 miles an hour for nearly a quarter of a mile. Driving along a straight road at dusk a little owl flew straight in front of the car in the glaring light of the lamps. It easily outdistanced the machine and was probably flying at a rate of almost a mile per minute.

Leaving Aeroplanes Behind. The ceaseless activity of birds and the enormous energy used in flight causes them to have very high temperatures. It rises sometimes to 112 degrees F., over 13 degrees higher than man's. A bird's heart often beats at the rate of 120 a minute when the bird is at rest, and the movement is much more rapid when the bird is in flight. The muscles of flight of these feathered lightning flashes commonly weigh a sixth, and in a pigeon about a half of the weight of the whole bird.

One of the fastest birds known is the swift. An observer in Assam reported recently that some of these birds flew from his bungalow to the ridge of a hill, exactly two miles away, in 36.42 seconds. The swifts must have flown at a speed of 200 miles per hour, which is faster than most aeroplane pilots have ever travelled.

Just Folks.

By EDGAR GUEST.

It is my weakness she most regrets: I am too fond of pipes and cigarettes, Too fond of golf, too fond of books, which I Am tempted oft beyond my purse to buy.

And yet her smiles of tolerance infer Such loves as these increase my love of her.

"I am too fond of pictures," she exclaims, My money flies for canvases and frames. That which she needs I stubbornly deny.

But all some artist offers I will buy! To many a new found treasure she has said: "I'd like the butter thicker on my bread."

She tells our neighbors curious tales of me As if 'twere strange that such a fool could be. She meets the smiling book man at the door

And mutters: "Mercy! Has he purchased more?" She sees me handing over some antique

And knows the man has struck me where I'm weak.

Sometimes she scolds, but never in her tone The touch of downright harshness have I known: Despite these loves and follies I possess,

My love for her has never grown the less. "If he must be a fool," she whispers low, "I'd rather books and pictures make him so."

The C. Battery

EDITED BY JOHN M. CLAYTON.

If a higher plate voltage than 45 volts is used on the UV-199 or UVJ-201-A tubes serious distortion is likely to be present when using these tubes as audio-frequency amplifiers. In addition the B battery consumption will be much higher than normal and the B battery life will be greatly shortened. Also the life of the filament in the tubes will be materially reduced.

In a multi-stage audio-frequency transformer it is desirable to use different plate voltages on the tubes in the different stages. In the first stage, if we use 40 volts, say, the second stage will require 80 or higher. This also requires a different C battery voltage for each stage. From our diagram above you will note the method used in connecting the C battery to the grids of the audio tubes. A tap is taken off at the required voltage for the first tube and the whole C battery is used on the last tube. Note that the positive terminal of the C battery connects directly to the negative terminal of the A battery and not to the tube socket terminal.

When using plate voltage of anything up to 45 volts no C battery is required as the necessary grid potential is obtained through the voltage drop across the rheostat. Plate voltage from 45 to 60 require C battery

The Toll of the Car

Motor cars in the United States during nineteen hundred and twenty-four caused the deaths of 19,000 persons, and inflicted injuries upon 450,000. Among those who were killed were 5,700 children.

Whittaker states that the number of deaths in the American Army during the Great War owing either to enemy action or to disease amounted to 77,459, while the casualties totalled 214,378.

The figures, which are official, make the horrors of war pale into insignificance against the ghastly toll taken by the motor car, and yet we hear of nothing corresponding to a League of Nations, or disarmament conferences, or security pacts by which this menace might be checked.

In many places, it is true, Safety First Leagues have been organized, but there has been no general movement to find a solution to a problem which daily grows more serious. If there was an epidemic in a country which took a daily toll of fifty-two lives, and prostrated more than twelve hundred others, there would be such an outcry that the authorities would be compelled to take drastic action to check it, but the motor car rolls quietly on unmolested and the protests of the relatives of its victims fall for the most part on deaf ears.

Recently a complete revision of our traffic regulations was made, and stiff penalties were laid down in order to make them respected. At the same time the hazard has been considerably increased by legalizing a higher rate of speed. The number of cars is also increasing, and with the improvements in the roads it is certain that this number will be further augmented in a short time.

The laws laid down are excellent, but in order that they should be effective, it is necessary for everyone to be thoroughly familiar with them, and what is even more important, that everyone should be carefully instructed in the best methods of guarding against accidents. Recently we issued a warning to pedestrians, and suggested that in the schools in particular the rules of "Safety First" should be impressed on the children. The sooner such a campaign is started the better.

Accidents are certain to occur, and it is only by taking every precaution to guard against them that there is any hope of keeping the number as low as possible.

YESTERDAY'S TOLL. NEW YORK, May 11. Two boys and one girl were killed, and six women and seven men injured by vehicles yesterday on the eve of New York City's annual Safety Day, which is to be celebrated by a parade of 1000 persons. To-day, two taxi cab chauffeurs were arrested on technical charges of homicide.

AT THE R.C. CATHEDRAL.—Rev. M. J. Kennedy officiated at Vespers at the R.C. Cathedral yesterday. The pulpit was occupied by Rev. Fr. Miller, who took his text from the gospel of the day and delivered a powerful discourse on mortal sin.

PEPPYS BEHIND THE SCENES

May 9th.—To Water Street, and meeting Squibbs, he do tell me how he is not now on speaking terms with his wife. But Lord, when I did congratulate him, saying how it must be very quiet about his house now, he did reply, "indeed, no, for if I be not on speaking terms with the wretch, I am still on listening terms." I do learn this day, how the test made of the new propeller for ships which is the invention of Mr. Pike, is highly successful, being that more than an extra knot of speed is gotten out of the steamer Home, on which the propeller is tried. It is like, on this account, that the new propeller will be fitted to other ships. Out about the setting of divers bills from last month, which do by their payment, leave me easier in mind, if much lighter in pocket. But I am now determined that I shall make no more accounts, but rather will pay for what I buy in cash, since I will then know how I do stand, where now, what with my wife's bills to come in, I know not whether I am solvent. This night to the Star playhouse, to see Jackie Cogan, whom I had not seen before, and is indeed, a mighty clever ladd, if he be not spoiled by too much success in his youth.

May 10th (Lord's Day).—This day, my betimes, my wife and I, and to the Church of St. Mary's, on the Southside, where Mr. Uphill preaches a good sermon. This afternoon, going abroad in our motor coach, an nigh choked with the dust which is as bad as I have seen it in the driest time of the year. My wife talks of divers things she would buy for me, and I was on the point of permitting her to buy them when we did enter a puncture, and do spoil my good humor in the fixing of it. My wife, calling me an ill-tempered brute, I did speak no other word to her for the day, and so home in silence, and I do leave the wretch there to her own devices, while I go abroad to the Club.

Mr. F. J. Wornell accountant of the St. John's Branch of the Bank of Nova Scotia, severed his connection with that institution on Saturday last, and takes over to-day the duties of Office Manager for the Newfoundland agency of the Confederation Life Association.

Mr. L. C. Outerbridge, Chairman of the Newfoundland Committee of the Empire Exhibition received the following cable on Saturday from the High Commissioner at London:—(COPV)

LONDON, May 9th, 1925. Leonard Outerbridge, St. John's, Newfoundland. New Wembley opened to-day amid scenes of great enthusiasm. The huge stadium was crowded with visitors from all parts of the Empire. Fine weather, brilliant uniforms and costumes, all combined to make a most gorgeous spectacle. The opening ceremony was performed by His Majesty the King, who, with Queen Mary and surrounded by all the pagantry of the navy, military and air forces, received a great ovation on their arrival. The programme of events included a feast of song and music provided by London choirs and massed bands of the Brigade of Guards. The vast audience, much impressed by the solemn grandeur of the proceedings, joined in singing "Fight the Good Fight," "Land of Hope and Glory," "Rule Britannia," with inspiring fervour. The new Wembley has been launched with great hopes for successful results. Benefiting by last year's experience, marked improvements have been made: in fact the whole production is superior. Newfoundland visitors were all at the opening ceremony. It is freely admitted that our pavilion is much improved from last year, with several new features, including large display of fish, model of Corner Brook, a large number of furs, and many new pictures illustrating our industrial progress. The exhibition was described to-day as the University of the Empire. The following is a quotation from the King's speech: "To seek knowledge, more knowledge, and again more knowledge of the great heritage which has been entrusted to us is the soundest imperial policy. I recognize the British Empire—Exhibition as a successful instrument of that policy."

I recognize the British Empire—Exhibition as a successful instrument of that policy."

LONDON, May 9th, 1925. Leonard Outerbridge, St. John's, Newfoundland. New Wembley opened to-day amid scenes of great enthusiasm. The huge stadium was crowded with visitors from all parts of the Empire. Fine weather, brilliant uniforms and costumes, all combined to make a most gorgeous spectacle. The opening ceremony was performed by His Majesty the King, who, with Queen Mary and surrounded by all the pagantry of the navy, military and air forces, received a great ovation on their arrival. The programme of events included a feast of song and music provided by London choirs and massed bands of the Brigade of Guards. The vast audience, much impressed by the solemn grandeur of the proceedings, joined in singing "Fight the Good Fight," "Land of Hope and Glory," "Rule Britannia," with inspiring fervour. The new Wembley has been launched with great hopes for successful results. Benefiting by last year's experience, marked improvements have been made: in fact the whole production is superior. Newfoundland visitors were all at the opening ceremony. It is freely admitted that our pavilion is much improved from last year, with several new features, including large display of fish, model of Corner Brook, a large number of furs, and many new pictures illustrating our industrial progress. The exhibition was described to-day as the University of the Empire. The following is a quotation from the King's speech: "To seek knowledge, more knowledge, and again more knowledge of the great heritage which has been entrusted to us is the soundest imperial policy. I recognize the British Empire—Exhibition as a successful instrument of that policy."

TO-DAY'S MESSAGES.

EXPEDITION POSTPONED FOR 3 WEEKS. OSLO, May 11. Despatches from Spitzbergen confirm that Captain Amundsen and his companions have been forced to postpone the start of their attempted flight to the North Pole for three weeks because of unfavorable ice conditions and wintry weather.

THE LAST OF THE WARTIME PREMIERS. WELLINGTON, N.Z., May 11. The late Mr. Massey was the last of the wartime Premiers. He became head of the Dominion Government in 1912, and despite the war and post-war changes, which one by one put the older premier leaders out of power, he remained. He was a fervent imperialist, and five times visited Great Britain to attend Imperial Conferences. He visited the American Continent several times, the last occasion being in 1923. Emigrating from an Irish farm, where he was born 49 years ago, he came to New Zealand at the age of 14 and became a farmer. He was elected to House of Commons as a farmer representative in 1914. Throughout his political career he was an ardent Conservative and was anti-socialist.

EXTENSIVE OPERATIONS IN MOROCCO. PARIS, May 11. French reinforcements from Algeria, which now have in great part arrived in Northern Morocco, are being sent to strategic points along the front. At the same time operations continue with the object of relieving the French outposts still surrounded by Abdel Krim's Rifian warriors. It is believed that the French will need 100,000 troops to drive the invaders out and complete the pacification of the French zone. The French forces now there number nearly 70,000.

HINDENBURG'S DAY. BERLIN, May 11. To-day was Von Hindenburg's day, the day of the Field Marshal's entry into the capital as President elect of the German Reich. The police made elaborate precautions against trouble.

LIQUOR RAID CAUSES DISTURBANCE. JOHANNESBURG, May 11. One native was killed and one hundred were arrested as an outcome of an attack upon a native detestable to-day while making a liquor raid. Seven hundred natives participated in the attack.

THE PRINCE TAKES A REST. COLESBURG, Union of South Africa, May 11. The Prince of Wales, who has crossed Cape Colony from Cape Town, in the past week, left the Royal train at Colesburg Junction at 9 o'clock last night for Sir Abner Bailey's farm near here, where he will take a three days' rest.

FREIGHTER ON FIRE ON FLORIDA COAST. JACKSONVILLE, Fla., May 11. The Cluie, a freighter, which is anchored off Cape Canaveral, 130 miles south of here, with a fire in her hold, the Line's agent was advised last night by radio that the vessel is on fire. The cause of the fire is not known.

SETTLING INDUSTRIAL PROBLEMS OVER THE DINNER TABLE. LONDON, May 11. Forestalling industrial strikes over the dinner table at 10 Downing Street recently has been the feature of Premier Baldwin's "Peace Industry" policy, under which he invites various Labor leaders individually to meet him with Sir Herbert Rensmay, Steel-Maitland, Minister of Labor, and talk over the conditions in the particular industry they represent. So far he has entertained Ernest Bevin, Secretary of the Transport and General Workers' Union; H. Pootman, Secretary of the Cotton Spinners and Weavers' Union; J. Brumley, M. P., Secretary of the Locomotive Engineers and Firemen. Other leaders have been invited and will meet the Premier in the near future.

Flags Being Distributed With Despatch

The work of discharging the cargo of flags from the steamer Lord Londonderry, at the Dry Dock pier, is progressing favorably, and since Saturday upwards of twenty car loads have been sent out over the railway and distributed as far as Seal Cove. The flags are being discharged from the ship's four hatches, three rails to a sling, at the rate of about 500 tons per day. Re-railing of the road will commence within a few days.

Flag of New Republic

S.S. Kangaras, which arrived in port on Friday with a load of salt to Job Bros., flies the flag of Lithuania, the new Republic bordering on the Baltic Sea. Lithuania was carved out of Russia and Germany about two years ago, and this is the first time the Republic's flag has appeared in port. The Kangaras is a new ship and hails from Riga.

The Temple of Venus. AT THE MAJESTIC. The Temple of Venus, the William special production, which is book- to-night at the Majestic Theatre, is a veritable beauty-show. Aside from such alluring specimens of femininity as Phyllis Haver and the twenty-four additional characters that lend beauty to the scenes and bathing scenes, there is a member of the cast whose attractiveness stands in a class by itself. This person is Mary Philbin who is the character of Moria, the daughter of the Dean. The story of Miss Philbin's rapid rise to a prominent position among the players illustrates that the old adage about a round peg's failure to square a hole is still true today. Her youth and good looks as her principal stock in trade, it was Miss Philbin's ambition to be numbered among the queens of the screen whose grace and graceful animation bring world to their feet. For first she would to shine alone in these lines registered in nothing but discouragement. Her failure to register light-heartedness and the joy of life so stunted and her hope that she could not keep her own self and her face became a permanent mirror of her soul. She led to Miss Philbin being engaged for an emotional role, which she played so well that she was offered the leading part in a picture that proved a big Broadway success, due only to the splendid acting of the young actress. As Moria in "The Temple of Venus" she has another excellent opportunity to play upon the hearts of an audience. It will be seen by the advertisement, Adams & Cheney have a splendor of music for the benefit of the night, most of the numbers by special request: 1. Rigoletto (Verdi); 2. Billad, "Ten Years From Now," (Ball); 3. Medley from "Rose-Marie," (Lust); 4. Second Hungarian Rhapsody; 5. "The Only, Only One," and other requests.

Hymeneal. ZITMAN-HEFFERTON. On St. George's Day, April 23rd, a very pretty wedding was solemnized at Grace Episcopal Church, Detroit, Mich., U.S.A., the contracting parties being Miss Marjorie, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Zitman of Halifax, N.S., and Mr. Morley Hefferton, formerly of Newtown, B. Bay, Nfld., but resident for the past 4 years in Detroit. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. B. W. Pullinger. The bride was attended by Miss Bertha Masservey, while the groom was assisted by Mr. Ralph Fall, uncle of the bride, both of whom were former residents of St. George's Nfld. Unfortunately, a brother of the groom, Mr. Conrad Hefferton was unable to be present as for some little time he has been undergoing treatment in "Edward Hynes, Jr." Hospital, Maywood, Cal., for a rather serious malady. We wish him speedy recovery. The bride was most becomingly dressed in a blue costume, hat and shoes to match and carried a bunch of carnations. After the ceremony they motored to the home of the bride, where the wedding repast was held, at which forty guests, many of them Newfoundlanders were present and many were the reminiscences of wedding customs in old Terra Nova. The presents received were many and valuable, testifying to the esteem in which the parties were held. The groom's present to the bride was a beautiful set of pearls. The newly wedded pair have moved outside of city limits for the summer months and have taken up residence in Brightmore, a suburb of Detroit. To them both we wish that the conjugal bliss of matrimonial bonds may ever overtop the troubles, and that their way may be paved with the happiness that should ever follow from the union in hymen's silken bonds.—COR.

STERN TESTS TO ENSURE OUR SAFETY.

A recent express train wreck is believed to have been caused by the failure of one of the wheels of the locomotive. In order to make sure that here shall never again be a similar accident, each locomotive tyre is tested by dropping upon it a weight of a ton from heights of ten to twenty-five feet. Any tyre that fails to withstand this tremendous test is discarded.

The safety of British railways, so far as passengers are concerned, is the envy of the rest of the world. Every length of rail, every iron and steel girder used in construction is thoroughly tested before leaving the shop. No bridge or viaduct is opened to traffic until the authorities are satisfied that it will withstand at least double the strain which is ever likely to be put upon it. Bridges must be built able to withstand a wind pressure of 56 lbs. to the square foot, and for this purpose a huge load, such as three big locomotives drawing boiler trucks or travelling cranes, is driven on to the new bridge and brought to rest.

A Giant Cable.

Buffers are among the articles on which an immense amount of care and ingenuity is expended. In process of construction a certain number are always broken up, and the steel of which they are made is tested by special inspectors. No steel is used in buffer-making unless it will stand a tensile strain of about thirty tons to the square inch. Very special care is taken in making the buffer springs. In the building of passenger liners similar care is taken with all the metal used, but there is no matter connected with shipbuilding where the tests are more severe than those used in the forging of a cable. The writer was allowed to be present at the testing of a newly-made cable for a huge liner. Some idea of its size may be gained from the fact that each link was 22 1/2 inches in length and weighed 160 pounds.

Testing Bayonet Blades.

The cable was tested by hydraulic pressure, and all the people in the building were ordered under cover before the test began. The tension applied was about 370 tons, and the cable, though it creaked and groaned in the strangest way, showed no signs of breaking.

The tests applied to Army weapons are very severe. All rifles and guns are required to pass certain tests before they are issued, but it is the British bayonet which has to go through the stiffest trial of all before it is passed for use. The blade of a bayonet is forged from the finest steel obtainable, and after being hardened and tempered goes to the testing machine, a curved block with a hole at one end, and provided with a wire guard to protect the workman.

The point of the blade is placed in the hole and the blade is bent to the curvature of the block. If it is to pass the viewer it must spring back perfectly straight. It is a testimonial to the good work put into bayonets that very few fail to pass the test, and that

WALT MASON.

When but a child I read a tale about a youth named Pete, who helped a woman, old and frail, across a crowded street; he saw her safely to her door, since she was weak and lame, and there she thanked him o'er and o'er and asked him for his name. The days and weeks went by with speed, as days and weeks will go, and Pete forgot his kindly deed, while rustling for the dough. It was his nature thus to aid the helpless and the old, and in such games he never played for gratitude or gold. Imagine, then, the youth's surprise, when lawyers Jinx & Jones, informed him, envy in their eyes, he'd drawn a million bones. The dame he helped, the good old soul, was dead and buried now, and she had willed to him a roll that well might choke a cow. And I resolved to lie in wait for some poor feeble dame, and nobly help her to her gate, and there no guerdon claim. If one old lady left a word to such a boob as Pete, I, too, would look for dimes abroad and help them cross the street. And when at last I got in touch with such a stricken frau, she soaked me roundly with her crutch, and raised an awful row. I tell this tale with dreary ache, and moralists rejoin: "This Pete was good for goodness' sake, and you were good for coin."

Sir Izaak Knew Fish Psychology

Isaak Walton, the genial soul who angled throughout the purling brooks of Merrie England more than 300 years ago, did more for the sport than merely write a book about it.

Isaak invented fly-casting, stirred up a rumpus about the pollution of streams, made his own artificial bait and actually caught fish.

He had the edge on his contemporary fish fans, according to O. L. Weber, of Stevens Point, Wis., a delegate of the Iszaak Walton League of America, which convened in Chicago recently. His contemporaries might have been just as canny about snaring the wily trout as he, but he was the first to write on the subject, and hence gets all the credit.

"The psychology of the fish hasn't changed a great deal since Iszaak's day," declared Mr. Weber. "Where he might have had a dozen kinds of fly, the modern fisherman has a couple of hundred."

"But the fish's preference for an insect that lights on the water and shows a few signs of life is the same to-day of bugs that light on the water and die, waiting for the one that appears living, that's why he makes an energetic attempt to gobble the attractive bait of silk and steel that flaps tantalizingly about his nose."

The "Cockman," the "Royal Cockman" and the "Black Gnat" flies that Iszaak used and immortalized are in very good standing to-day with the fisherman, said the man from Wisconsin.

The barbless hook, in the opinion of Mr. Weber, is becoming a most popular device with the more sporting element in angling, as it gives the fish more of a chance against the human. Also it helps to conserve the smaller fish, he added.

Little Jack Rabbit

by David Cory

Don't you think an empty house is a lonely place? What a disappointment when you don't see Mother's face.

Yes, that's just what the little rabbit felt on opening the kitchen door and finding that Lady Love, his pretty little bunny mother, was not at home.

"Where can she be?" he asked the Yellow Dog Tramp, who stood patiently outside on the back porch, wagging his long, thin tail in a friendly manner.

"Maybe she is calling on Cousin Cotton-tail," he answered. "And perhaps she has left a note for you." "So she has," all of a sudden shouted the bunny boy, sipping a piece of paper on the red table cloth, and unfolding it, he read aloud:

"I'll be home in time for tea. Just be good and wait for me."

"I wonder if she'd mind my giving the Elephant a piece of angel cake," he asked himself, remembering that his big circus friend was waiting on the Sunny Meadow, as I mentioned in the last story. Opening the cake box, the bunny boy took out the cake and cutting off three big pieces, hopped out on the back porch.

"Let's go back to the circus Elephant and have a feast," he laughed, and with a hop-teedy off the porch, he hopped down the winding path through the bushes, followed by the Yellow Dog Tramp.

Patiently waiting outside the fence, the Circus Elephant was willing away the time playing mumble peg. Dear me, boys and girls, how well he could toss the big jack-knife with the little finger on the end of his big trunk. However, on seeing the angel cake, he tested the knife and, slipping it in his waistcoat pocket, exclaimed:

"Now I'm ready for a feast. Quite a treat for man or beast."

Lady Love knows how to bake Most delicious Angel Cake!

But, goodness, gracious me! His piece was only a mouthful—not even that! So taking out his jack-knife, he commenced again to play mumble peg. My, how the little rabbit laughed when the big beast held on to his ear and pitched the knife over his elbow. But the Yellow Dog Tramp only smiled—a sort of a sad kind of a smile, for it brought to mind the happy days when he was a boy down on the farm.

"I'll be home in time for tea."

By and by, when the little rabbit had nibbled up all the cake, he asked the Circus Elephant to teach him Mumble Peg.

"Sit down by me," agreed the big kind animal. "Have you a little pen-knife? This jack-knife of mine is too big for you. If it slipped, it might cut your ear in two."

Opening his knapsack, the bunny boy took out the little knife which Lady Love had given him for his birthday. Just then the Yellow Dog Tramp began to bark, and in the next story you shall hear what happened after that.

JAMES CARTER.
At the advanced age of 97 years, James Carter, late Sheriff, passed into rest at Balsam House yesterday morning. For the past three or four years he had lived in complete retirement; but up to that time he was remarkably active and possessed of a vigor unusual for one of such great age.

The late James Carter was the son of Robert Carter and Elizabeth Howe, his wife. Robert Carter and William Carter were brothers. William was Judge of the Vice Admiralty Court at Ferryland and was the father of Peter Weston, Robert Carter, B.M., Arthur Carter and Catherine Carter. The late Sheriff was born in Ferryland where his father conducted an extensive business. He was educated in Ferryland and married his second cousin, Harriet Carter, who was a sister of the late T. S. Carter of Ferryland and daughter of Arthur O'Brien Carter. Mrs. Carter passed away about 39 years ago, and there were no children. For forty two years the late James Carter held the position of sheriff, first for the Southern District, and later for the whole Island. He retired in 1917. After passing the seventieth milestone Mr. Carter took a trip to the East, visiting China and Japan, and on his return published an interesting story of his travels under the title "In the Wake of the Setting Sun."

The funeral takes place to-morrow from Balsam Place, at 2.45 p.m.

MRS. STEPHEN HAWKINS.
(H. F. SHORTIS.)

With regret we record the death of Mrs. Emily Beaton Hawkins, relict of the late Captain Stephen Hawkins, of Harbor Grace, and daughter of Charles Rendell, a native of Yerville, Somerset, England, who died in Heart's Content 68 years ago. The deceased was a sister of the late Charles Rendell, J. P., that sturdy patriot and consistent supporter of the great Liberal Chieftain, Sir W. W. Whiteway during his political career. The husband of the deceased lady passed away about 22 years ago. He was one of our most enterprising and successful Labrador planters, and for years conducted an extensive business at Dead Island, Labrador, and was master of the schooners Zebra and Garfield. He also prosecuted the Bank fishery in the schooner Effie, out of the great firm of John Munn & Co.'s employ, and held a certificate as master mariner in the foreign service.

No wife or mother could be more faithful and devoted than she to her husband and children, and as a friend and neighbor she fulfilled every duty, neglecting no call for counsel or aid where she could render assistance. Her death is a bereavement to many more than members of her own family. All that filial affection could suggest to lessen her sufferings was done by her devoted children, who spared nothing to add to her comfort. Peacefully and prayerfully she awaited her last moments. She was a woman of high character, and of a remarkably sweet disposition. Looking with kindly spirit upon all, devoted to those nearest to her, she won the respect and love of many. Her regard for truth and her strong sense of duty were unswerving. She will always be remembered as one who was essentially pure of heart, and who had strength to ignore petty things that distract us from right living. Left to mourn are two sons, E. Hawkins, the trusted employe of Harvey & Co.'s for the past quarter of a century; Frank R. Hawkins, of Brocton, Mass., U.S.A., and one daughter, Mrs. John Weir of Waterford Bridge, city; also many relatives and hosts of friends. The body was conveyed to Harbor Grace by this morning's train. On arrival there funeral service will be held in Christ Church, interment will take place in the family plot in the C. of E. cemetery, and thus will be laid to rest with the mortal remains of her late husband children all that is mortal of a truly good woman to await a glorious resurrection. Mrs. Hawkins was in her 73rd year.

Given a Surprise Party

Miss Gertrude Thorne, Graduate Nurse of Long Island Hospital, New York, leaves by S.S. Rosalind on Wednesday next to take up her duties as head of the operating room at that Hospital. Miss Thorne has had a real rest since last fall, spending quite a time with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Thorne, Bonavista. Before leaving Bonavista last week, she was given a surprise party by quite a number of her young friends and presented with a beautiful present, and an address in verse, composed by the talented Dr. Rutherford. She very gratefully thanked them one and all for the unexpected pleasure they gave her. The many friends of Miss Thorne wish her every success.

THE ORIGINALS IN "STEPPING OUT."

For the first time in the history of St. John's theatrom, "The Originals," that brilliant group of Canadian entertainers, who have with them many of the Original Dumbells, will be in town next week at the Nickel Theatre for the entire week with their latest and biggest fun show "Stepping Out," headed by those ever popular favorites, Gene Pearson "The Male Galli Curci," and Bob Anderson, Canada's cleverest character comedian, a native of Lancashire, with Alan Murray; Leonard Young (The Duchess), Bertram Langley, Jerry Brayford, etc. The Company, as before, is under the management of Percy Campbell, and directed by Leonard Young.

"Stepping Out" opens up with a reunion of the Officers of the 4th Battery, from the time Bob Anderson enters as John Willis Shuffbottom, the piece is one continuous roar. Gene Pearson plays the role of Madams Helena, an Opera Singer, and is the most convincing Operatic star we have seen for many a long day, "Her" singing of "Love Will Come Back" is a treat; and his gown a delight to the eye. There are two acts and four scenes in "Stepping out," all of them uniformly clever and suitably staged and lighted.

Till "The Originals" come again with their performance of "Stepping Out" will be remembered by all who witness it as a scream from start to finish. To let the audience get a fresh hold on the shaking sides, a few serious numbers such as the "Soldier's Monument" and two or three musical classics are brought into the programme for diversion, but for the most part the dozen performers, comedians all, are merciless. Seats are now selling at the Nickel Box Office.

Immense Programme at the Nickel To-Day

NOTED TENOR IN NEW SELECTIONS AND GREAT METRO FILM.

To-day's programme at the popular Nickel Theatre is one of exceptional interest and includes two great attractions, namely Adrian DaSilva the celebrated Tenor soloist in new songs and the big Metro special, entitled "The Confessions of a Queen" starring Alice Terry and Lewis Stone. Mr. DaSilva has already made numerous friends by his brilliant voice and since his opening night has pleased even the most fastidious musical taste. In brief the story of "The Confessions of a Queen" is as follows:

The king of Illyria is persuaded to marry a neighboring princess who requests that he leave her on her wedding night. He consents and she sees him in the arms of Sephora, his favorite, and becomes disgusted with him. A revolution occurs and the king is willing to abdicate, but the queen demands the crown as her son's birthright. The royal party escape to Paris and become more friendly, but the queen still distrusts his easy-going love. A delegation arrives to invite the king to return as the revolution has been overthrown. He disgusts them by appearing intoxicated and abdicates in favor of his son who becomes king. He informs the queen that he has always loved her and did this for her sake and will arrange for a divorce. Though warned that Sephora is in league with the revolutionists he goes to her and she tries to poison him. The queen learns of this and appears just in time, informing the revolutionists that the king has abdicated and that she will stick to him.

Arlie Marks Co. in Social Drama To-Night

"WHY FATHER LEFT HOME" AN ELABORATE PRODUCTION.

The week opening attraction by the Arlie Marks Players in the Casino Theatre is the popular social-dramatic success entitled "Why Father Left Home" and is elaborately staged, starting the popular Arlie Marks in the role of Eva King, the fascinating but spendthrift daughter of a wealthy business man. The story is both interesting and humorous. In brief the story is as follows:—Eva King has a hard time spending the money of her millionaire father, who, coming home after a trying day, is disgusted with the social parasites in his home. The opportune arrival of Adam Smith, father's live-wire South American salesman, played by Paul Brady, causes father to change places with him, leaving Adam in charge of the family. By saying that the millionaire has been ruined Adam gets rid of fortune hunters for Eva's hand, makes all the family go to work and they get to like it. The sudden return of father upsets the whole scheme, but in the meantime things work speedily and what follows will be seen when you witness this high class attraction to-night.

On Saturday afternoon last, the children were treated to one of the greatest feasts of entertainment of the entire season. Extra attractions were put on for their benefit including a song and dance by Ronnie Allison, the charming Scotch sourette. Ronnie is all at home and is not troubled in the least with stage-fright. The reception given him was indeed unanimous. On Wednesday and Saturday of this week, special matinees will be held for which the usual matinee prices will prevail.

THAT DEADLY COMPETITION.

How women do love to outdo each other! I'll wager there isn't a woman who sends this Chat who can't give evidence of a club of some sort to which she belongs where they started out at its formation to serve very simple refreshments and after a year or so were serving almost full course dinners! And all because some woman to "show off" served a little more elaborate tea she couldn't suffer by comparison and so followed suit, and the next one after her added one or two more good things just to show she wasn't to be outdone and so on and so on!

The Game Of Follow The Leader.

There is an amusing story of a certain popular authoress based on this theme. A rich woman moves to an up and coming little town where the game of "follow the leader" is played to the limit. They take her up and make her the leader of course, and although her extremely simple manner of entertaining is a shock and a surprise to them, they decide it must be the latest style and they all go in for simplicity. Everyone is ever so much happier. It means much less work and expense and keeping up of pretences and straining after effects. Especially I remember how glad the women were to discard their white kid gloves when they found that the rich Mrs. B— didn't wear them. And then it is discovered that she really isn't rich at all, that her simple life is a necessity instead of an affectation and her leadership suddenly ceases! Society hastily returns to the regime of the "groaning board" and the ladies get out their white gloves and gasp!

It is a clever satire on the love of display.

She Got Her Comeuppance.

I heard of an incident of quite a different sort the other day in which a woman who was determined to outdo, got her "comeuppance."

She belonged to a club of young married people who met once a month for a simple supper and a game of cards. Most of them were extremely practical and sensible young matrons who were determined not to have the club spoiled by letting it get out of bounds. So it was agreed at the outset to limit the menu to certain specified courses. Everyone agreed, that is, except Anne, and her objections were over-ruled for everyone knew how Anne loved to outdo.

"She'll get around it somehow, you see if she doesn't," someone prophesied. And sure enough, when they met at Anne's house, in addition to the stipulated menu there was a big chocolate marshmallow cake on the table.

"This cake doesn't count," Anne explained lightly, "because mother made it as her contribution."

No One Has Tried To Outdo Again.

Ingenious, but it would never do to let her get away with it. What to do? And then one of the girls had an inspiration. "It looks delicious," she said as Anne cut the cake, "but I won't have any, thank you."

And one after another the members politely but firmly refused to take any cake. Anne was scarlet with embarrassment, but the tacit rebuke saved the day and there has never been any attempt at outdoing in that club since.

Not everyone has the courage to carry through a thing like that but if only each hostess would have the good sense to let her own strength and convenience be the standard of her hospitality rather than attempting to ape or outdo someone else, how much simpler and easier our social problems would be.

Home Makes

Successful Spin

WITH NEW PROPELLER.

The new type of six-blade propeller, recently invented by R. G. Pike, local engineer, was given a trial on the S.S. Home, Saturday afternoon, and although the conditions were none too favourable for so important a test, the results obtained proved very satisfactory. Capt. M. G. Dalton, Ship's Husband, Nfld. Government Railway, took charge of the ship, and had all arrangements effectively made to carry it out. The ship left port at 2.30 p.m., with a company on board consisting of Capt. W. C. Winsor, Minister of Marine and Fisheries; Mr. C. E. Russell, Minister of Public Works; Capt. English, Harbor Master; Mr. R. G. Pike, the inventor of the propeller; Supt. Pollock, Mr. James McFarlane, President of Marine Engineers' Association; Mr. Edward Roper, Watchmaker (the official timekeeper); besides some twenty citizens. The decision was to carry the test out over the stretch of water lying between

Cape Spear and Bay Bulls, a distance of 14 1/2 miles, the same course as covered by the ship with the old four-blade propeller last year. This was for the purpose of making a comparison of the present spin and the one previous. By the time the ship had proceeded outside the Narrows, George Pike, the Chief Engineer, had everything well under way in the engine-room, while three firemen were kept busy coaling to keep steam to the boiler, which registered 150 pounds, or 15 pounds less than its full capacity. The ship made excellent headway, with everything working well, whilst little or no vibration was felt from the propeller either on the after part of the ship or in the engine room. The ship drove into head seas, with the wind from the W.S.W., and although the conditions were much more favorable on a previous trial, with the old propeller, she reached Bay Bulls in the splendid time of 1 hour, 22 minutes and 30 seconds, or two minutes behind the time made previously. Upon the ship being turned about and the course shaped for the return run, she travelled quicker, averaging 11 knots, and there was much speculation by those on board as to what she was really capable of doing. The last leg of the course was covered in 1 hour, 15 minutes and 14 seconds, which proved to be a splendid showing. After the times had been compared, it showed that the former trial speed of the ship had been beaten by over 5 minutes. The test proved even more successful than anticipated, the ship making 11.2 knots as compared with 10 on the old propeller blade, or a gain of 1 1/5 knots. The amount of coal consumed was 360 lbs. less than under previous conditions. It was estimated that the use of the new propeller on the bay boats, while giving them an increased speed, would result in the saving of coal to the amount of $40,000 a year. On the whole the test was a very successful one and to Mr. Pike, the inventor, every congratulation is due. On the return run the distance from Cape Spear to the Narrows was covered in 19 minutes. Port was reached at 6.30 p.m., after what proved to be an interesting and enjoyable four-hour cruise for all on board. The entire company spoke in glowing terms of the splendid results obtained and heartily congratulate Mr. Pike on his invention. The Home will take up her former route on the West Coast, in a few days and further results of the ship's progress, with the "Pike" propeller, will be awaited with interest.

New Schr. Launched at Little Bay Island

The new schooner which was built during the past winter at the dockyards of James Strong, Ltd., at Little Bay Island, was successfully launched on Saturday last. We learn from several men, who are now in the city, that this vessel is a splendid piece of workmanship, and is about 340 tons gross tonnage and is built of B. C. fir. As the vessel glided off the stocks she was christened "James Strong," thus bearing the name of the President of the Company.

FOOTBALL PRACTICE.

Guard footballers will hold their practice on the Ayre Athletic grounds at 7 o'clock to-night. Spectators are requested to meet at the west end of the field.

ALL MEETING B.L.S. ATHLETIC ASSOCIATION.

Annual meeting of the B. L. S. Athletic Association was held at the gymnasium, yesterday morning, and was very satisfactory. The reports for the year were very satisfactory. The senior football team had a record of 10 wins, 1 draw, and 1 loss in the games, as did the women. In the Regatta, the Junior team won the Football race. The team had been successful in several of the championships. Several were made to the successful teams. This year the teams will be in the field and it is hoped forward strong aggregations. Practice will begin Monday. The election of officers was as follows:—

Chairman—Hon. W. J. Higgins.
President—E. J. Phalen.
Secretary—Gordon Halley.
Treasurer—Alan Doyle.
Manager—H. J. Buckingham.

ATHLETE DROPS DEAD.

ANTONIO, May 4.—Darcy S. Smith, Toronto's best all round athlete, died Saturday from heart trouble, caused by privations suffered in camps in Germany during the war. Smith was prominent in many branches of sport, being a star in baseball, rugby and rowing.

HEAVYWEIGHT.

BRALO N. T., May 4.—Jimmy Macdonald, entered the heavyweights here to-night, knocking out MacDonald, of Butte, Monday in the third round of a scheduled six-round bout. Slattery scored three knock-downs before the knockout. The weights were: Slattery, 164 1-2; MacDonald 177.

VILLA TO RETURN TO THE U.S. ON JUNE 1.

World's Flyweight Champion Is Booked For Fight In California And May Meet Rosenberg.

NEW YORK, May 5.—Pancho Villa, and his flyweight title, will be back in the United States about June 1, but New York's chances for getting a glimpse of this crown early in the summer are very slight, for Villa is planning to stay on the Pacific Coast so that his entrance into Manhattan will not be made until July or August at the earliest. On May 7 Villa will board the S.S. President Jefferson.

which will deposit him in Seattle early in June.

The offers which crop in the meantime will govern his plans to a large extent, but the present programme which has been mapped out calls for several fights in California before he turns his ship in this direction. Villa always has been one of the best drawing cards in the game, but his absence evidently has caused the local promoters to overlook him when making up their programmes.

"There seems to be very little in view for Pancho this summer," said Frank Churchill, his manager, yesterday. "I have had several propositions on a match with Charley Phil Rosenberg, but so far no promoter has offered what I think Villa should draw down. I positively will not consider any short end, such as challengers have been getting in recent bouts, and unless I can get almost an even break on the money with Rosenberg there is not a chance of the match going through."

"Villa is a champion the same as Rosenberg and although his crown will not be hanging in the balance, I feel sure he will be just as important a factor at the gate as the bantam-weight champion.

BERLENBACH WOULD BATTLE DEMPSEY.

Middleweight Star Believes He Has The Punch To Knockout World's Greatest Hitter.

NEW YORK, May 2.—Paul Berlenbach would like to get a shot at Jack Dempsey and the heavyweight title. The Astoria slugger told Tex Rickard about his ambition yesterday afternoon. And don't think for a minute that Tex laughed at Paul. Rickard just tapped away with his ever present cigar, puffed on his ever present cigar and allowed as how the time might come when such a match would be feasible.

Rickard was talking over the cat-in-the-hat business in Texas with Jim Tarver, the 460-pound Texas who earns his bread and butter in the circus side show, when Berlenbach wandered in the room where the freaks were confined to see about getting some ring-side seats for the circus.

"Do you think you could knock this fellow out, Paul, said Tex, referring to the giant.

"I can knock out any man in the world, and that goes for Jack Dempsey the same as any one else," came back Paul.

This warlike speech caused the giant to remember that he had to make a telephone call. Tarver tried to squeeze himself into a nearby booth but could not make it, even after removing his five gallon hat. The giant stands eight feet four inches.

After Berlenbach had faded out of sight, Tarver came back and wanted to know who the belligerent person was.

"That's Paul Berlenbach, the fighter," explained Tex. "He hits as hard as a broncho kicks. He wouldn't be able to hit you on the chin, but he sure would play hob with your stomach if he ever let one go at you."

"Some of you newspaper fellows don't seem to think so much of Berlenbach's fighting ability," went on Rickard, turning to the writer. "I think he is one of the best we have. I spotted Paul when he first came along and I've watched him closely every chance I got. I think he is a possible heavyweight champion. He can hit and he is learning more about the game every day. Maybe some day you'll have cause to remember the time you heard him say he could knock out Dempsey or any other man. I know Delaney knocked Paul out, but Paul was just a beginner then. Delaney won't find it so easy to turn the trick a second time."

Berlenbach's remark meant wanting to take a poke at Dempsey shows how boxers change after they have been in the business for a year or two. When Paul became the talk of the town because of his string of knock-outs winter before last it was next to impossible to drag a word out of him. The so-called Assassin would shut up as tight as a clam the moment anybody who looked like a newspaper man hove in sight. Now he can hold his own with any one in a gabbing contest.

Prize Day

ST. THOMAS'S SUNDAY SCHOOL.

Yesterday afternoon at Canon Wood Hall the prizes were distributed to the scholars of St. Thomas's Church Sunday School. Due to a variety of impediments, the distribution had been somewhat unduly delayed, but this fact in no way detracted from the enthusiasm and interest of the large gathering present, and it was noted that a greater number of visitors than usual attended. The whole programme was well arranged and carried out, and the singing of the children was the subject of general praise. A feature of the latter were the solos of Ruth Collier and Hubert Clark, who with their associates of the kindergarten class, did wonderfully well. The prizes were distributed by Mrs. J. B. Elliott, wife of the Rector, and this was performed with the grace and skill of an active worker for the Sunday Schools. Mrs. Elliott's short and inspiring address will not soon fade from the memory of the attentive listeners. A brief address from H. W. LeMessurier, C.M.G., a former Superintendent, was also much appreciated, and his assurance of continuing interest in the work of the schools made everybody happy. Appended is the list of prizewinners:—

Why, of Course

If you want GOOD Clothes go to a GOOD Tailor. There is where you get good material, good fit and Clothes that look as if they were made for YOU, and not for the other fellow.
The Ready-to-Wear! Yes, of course. They were made for the one who buys them, very seldom for the one who fits them.
But be careful and go to a good tailor. It's cheaper and better.
SPURRELL'S are good, reliable tailors, and you make no mistake in going there.
