THERE are in Watford a number of small boys who are poisoning themselves by that curse, cigarettes. Any evening, boys may be seen with them, and it is safe in saying their parents know nothing of it. To the growing boy, there is nothing more dangerous than a cigarette. It stunts the growth, impairs the intellect, besides inflicting on the youth a habit that it may take years to break.

DURING the quarter ending June 1st seventeen convictions were made by Justices of the Peace, (not Police Magistrates) in Lambton. Thirteen of the convictions were for violations of the Liquor License Act, mostly in Theford and Watford. The fines imposed amounted to a total of $169.

IT is stated on good authority that arrangements have been practically completed whereby the Galt Reporter will take over the Galt Reformer and amalgamate the two newspapers into one. The great increase in the cost of printers' stock and machinery of late has resulted in the amalgamation of many papers, where there were two in one-paper towns, and the elimination of papers in small places where there was not enough business to keep them alive. The cost of living and the cost of paper has run a neck and neck race for some time.

A HARDWARE merchant went home one night and a new silver percolator was on the table. He asked his wife where she got it and she said: "Why, dear, I selected it out of Smith's catalogue and it only cost me $4.25, and the express." Of course the husband was mad in a moment, and said: "Why in the deuce didn't you tell me you wanted the thing? I have lots of them in my store and they only cost me $3. Then the wife handed him one like this: "Well, John, if you would advertise the goods, stating the price, so the people would know you wanted to sell them, maybe the people wouldn't send away for so much stuff."

Brandon—Clark.

An elaborate wedding took place at noon Monday at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Jos. Clark, Cedar Springs, near Blenheim, when their youngest daughter, Anna Irene, was married to Dr. Thomas Alexander Brandon, of Watford. The ceremony took place on the lawn. Rev. Dr. Battisby officiating. The wedding march was played by the bride's cousin, Miss Ruth McDowell, and during the signing of the register another cousin, Miss Alice McPherson, sang beautifully "Because." After the ceremony a dainty wedding breakfast was served. Dr. and Mrs. Brandon left in the afternoon on a wedding trip, and on their return will reside in the doctor's new house on Main street.

BASEBALL.

Strathroy vs. Watford.

The baseball team went down to Strathroy last Thursday evening to fill an engagement with Pat Jay's Shamrocks, but as the boys were somewhat weakened from the game the day before, the Shamrocks had little difficulty in winning. A good game may be looked for when the return match is played here.

On Tuesday evening the Junior team of Strathroy played a friendly game with the Watford Juniors. The locals easily disposed of the Strathroy boys as the score shows:

Bloomer Girls vs. Watford.

A nice sized crowd turned out Wednesday afternoon to see the Star Bloomer Baseball team of New York and the locals perform. The girls assisted by four men who were almost a team themselves, but the 1st and 2nd bases were well looked after by two of the girls who were certainly good. The game just got nicely started when a windstorm followed by a heavy downpour of rain made everyone run for the grand stand and a good afternoon sport was spoiled. Only four innings were played and the score stood 5-0 in favor of the girls.

A very pleasant evening was spent on Thursday, June 27th, at the home of Mr. Edward Reader, con. 4, the occasion being a presentation by the pupils of S.S. No. 18, to their teacher, Miss Gladys Shrapnell, who has tendered her resignation after having taught their school during the past three years. About a hundred, young and grown-ups assembled at his fine residence and spent the evening very pleasantly in games, music and social chat. A dainty lunch consisting of cake, strawberries and cream was served on the lawn. The principal item on the program was the presentation by the pupils of a silver fern-plot and box of stationery, accompanied by a nicely worded address. Miss Shrapnell responded in a few well-chosen words, thanking all for their many kindnesses during her stay among them. The address, which follows, was read by Annie Colhoun, the presentation being made by Lulu Oake and Vera Leitch.

Miss G. Shrapnell.

Dear Teacher—

We, your pupils and friends, take great pleasure in presenting to you this token, as an evidence of our friendship and love.

We are sorry you are about to leave us and take this opportunity to thank you for your unceasing efforts in our behalf.

We pupils know that we have often tried your patience sorely, but we hope you will forget those times and only remember the pleasures of teaching which must exist for the earnest teacher—such as you have proved yourself to be.

When in future days you look upon this memento, let it be a pleasant token of love and gratitude of your former pupils and many friends in S.S. No. 18, Brooke. Wishing you every success in the future—Signed on behalf of the school,

MARGARET CAMPBELL,
LILY ORMEROD,
VERA LEITCH,
ANNIE COLHOUN.

NOTE AND COMMENT.

With all the faults in the Canadian system of Government, we have not reached the stage where men of the same or different parties fight and curse in their convention hall.

Orillia's daylight savings by-law which came into operation a couple of weeks ago is proving a great success and very popular. Most all business and residence clocks have been changed so that they now show seven o'clock for instance when it is only six o'clock at other places. All the big factories have adopted the local time.

The Department of Agriculture and the Ontario Fruit Growers' Association have arranged to conduct an orchard competition this year. For the purpose the province has been divided into six districts, in each of which prizes will be given, ranging from $15 to $75, according to the acreage. The Western Ontario districts are: No. 3—Niagara, comprising Lincoln and Wentworth. No. 4—Lake Erie, comprising Essex, Kent, Elgin, Haldimand, Welland, Brant, Oxford, Middlesex. No. 5—Huron and Georgian Bay, comprising Lambton, Huron, Bruce, Grey and Simcoe. The competition will be limited to apples in all but the Niagara district, where grapes and other fruits will be included.

BREAKFAST BACON.

No Need to Serve it Always in the Same Old Way.

There is a proper and an improper way to cook bacon. One unfortunately sees too much of the latter. Baked on a rack or a broiler it is considered more wholesome than when it is fried, but much of the trouble with fried bacon lies not in the fact that it is fried, but rather in the way it is fried. It is too often sent to the table either half cooked and floating in grease or else it is dried up and half burned.

To fry bacon ideally it should, after it has been cut into thin slices, be placed on ice to become thoroughly chilled. The pan must be very hot, so that the bacon curls into little rolls as soon as the pan is shaken. Fry it thoroughly, but not long enough to harden it.

Bacon baked as follows is free from grease: Cut it into thin slices and place them on a rack such as is used for roasting meat or upon a gridiron placed over a dripping pan. Have the oven very hot and let the slices remain in it until they are crisp and brown.

The following is a unique way of broiling bacon. Cut it into thin slices as usual, place cracked ice over them and let them stand in this way until they are chilled. After broiling the slices on one side place them again on the ice. In a moment or two put back on the fire and broil them on the other side until done. The sudden change of temperature is believed to improve bacon.

There are many nice ways of serving bacon as a breakfast dish. Tomatoes fried with bacon are a favorite dish in many English households. Cut the tomatoes in slices, season with salt and pepper and, if preferred, dip in egg and breadcrumbs before frying.

Fried bacon with cream gravy makes a nice breakfast dish in spring with corn bread. After cooking the bacon free it from superfluous grease. Add a little flour and milk to the drippings that remain, cook the sauce on top of the stove and pour it over the bacon.

Puffed Panniers Like Window Shades. Like the window shades seen in the fashionable shops on Fifth avenue, New York, or the Rue de la Paix, Paris.

FROCK OF GREEN TAFFETA.

is, is this much puffed overskirt. On a short stout woman the effect would be unfortunate, but when there is height enough to give long lines the new drape is rather smart. This frock is made of green shot taffeta, with black velvet trimming. The bodice is of chantly draped over white chiffon.

Wind Shields For Candles.

For lighting country homes the use of candles is becoming more and more popular, especially when the environment is in keeping and quaint old mahogany is employed as a background. But to use candles with comfort the glass wind guards are necessary; otherwise one is constantly tormented by the fear of their going out with the lightest draft.

The wind shields, which look like very large lamp chimneys, stand over the candle on the table or mantel and make it possible to use this picturesque means of illumination without a flicker of the light they give. They are at least a foot and a half in height and are not to be confused with the short chimney or globe which fits on to some candlesticks just where the candle joins the socket. The glass may be either plain or etched.

To Speed the Parting Bride.

Those who still cling to the time honored custom of throwing rice after the bride may fancy the idea of having the rice provided for them in tiny paper slippers and passed on a silver salver after the bride has retired to make ready for her wedding journey. This is a new idea and quite novel and pretty. One that is still newer is to have the forist provide a supply of flower petals to toss after the departing bride, and an idea borrowed from the English is to cast after her tiny silver paper horseshoes.

The Guest Room Slats.

One of the greatest conveniences which a hostess can devise for her guests is a clearly written card set on the bedroom writing table detailing the hours of meals, the times of incoming and outgoing posts, the principal trains and other useful information.

It was some one's clever idea to provide a small china slate in each room on which might be written instructions for the housemaid. It is often difficult to find her during the day in order to ask for the hot bottle, the glass of warm milk, the necessary help when dressing for dinner or other needs that may be required and to ring for her often is not desirable.

Bathing Suit For the Tot.

The little one who is constantly in and out of the water will be less likely to catch cold in a bathing suit that has a fair percentage of wool in its weave.

WOOLEN BATHING SUIT.

Tog out the wee lass or laddie in a wool bathing suit when the beach is reached and keep the dainty frock fresh for the homeward trip.

The Finger Bowl.

The finger bowl usually terminates a dinner. It should be half filled with water and set upon a plate holding a small dolly. A dainty touch is given to the bowl by placing upon the surface of the water the leaf of some fragrant plant or a delicate flower. The finger bowl should be used only to wet the tips of the fingers and not for the purpose of taking a hand bath. After the soil of food has been rinsed from the fingers wipe them upon the napkin.

The Middlesex County Council has made a grant to each of the Agricultural Societies in the County of $50.

Haynes' heading-mill, situated between the grist-mill opposite the M. C. R. station at Bridgeton, was burned to the ground Wednesday evening. The fire, which was first noticed at 4.45 p.m., broke out in the drying-kiln.

WATFORD merchants have the goods and meet all price competition.

Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

EATING VEGETABLES.

A Few Valuable Points on a Subject of General Interest.

Vegetables form a large part of the diet of every civilized nation. What would the Irish do without their potatoes, or the Chinese and Japanese without their rice? Fresh vegetables are very necessary if health is to be maintained; and sailors who go on long journeys require a certain amount of fresh green food and fruit otherwise they develop a disease known as "scurvy."
 For long the origin of this malady remained unknown, but it has since been proved that it is due to the absence of these fresh green vegetable foods. So, in winter time especially, we are apt to suffer from a deficiency of these foods, and care should be taken to obtain a certain amount of them every day.
 A few vegetables are good eaten raw, but the bulk of them undoubtedly should be cooked, to a greater or lesser extent. The cabbage is an example of the former. It is a very healthful article of diet, and contains various "organic salts" which are highly beneficial.
 When cabbage is cooked much of this nutriment is lost—boiled out into the water in which the vegetable is cooked, and only the "skeleton," so to say, is left. Cooking seems to destroy the life-giving properties—the vitality—of many foods. If cooked, vegetables should be placed in fast-boiling water—first of all—as this tends to shrivel up the outer coating of the vegetable and keep the juices in the tender inside portions—instead of allowing them to boil out into the water so completely.
 All vegetables contain various valuable organic salts, without which life would be impossible.
 Vegetarians, or those who never eat meat, depend for their muscle-forming elements largely upon the bean, pea and lentil family, which form "the beefsteak of the vegetarians."
 But one of the most valuable properties of these foods is the fact that they contain a very large quantity of heat and energy-giving material. The meats contain little of this, and most of the other vegetables are also lacking in these "carbohydrates."
 The cabbage family, comprising the cabbage, cauliflower, broccoli, spinach and other greens, are especially good for persons suffering from skin diseases of all kinds; also for those having anaemia, scrofula, gout and rheumatism. All such greens should be eaten with caution, and thoroughly chewed or "masticated" before they are swallowed.
 Many persons find vegetables hard to digest. If so, they should eat them sparingly.
 Asparagus is by many considered a great delicacy and is certainly one of the choicest of all vegetables. It is considered to be especially good for nervous complaints and for diseases of the heart, including palpitation.
 Onions are noted for the large percentage of valuable salts they contain. They are especially good for kidney troubles—including gravel. They act also as good stimulants, tonics and laxatives.

The Word "Scat."
 It seems to be generally understood that there is no word of its letters that can be said quicker than "scat." But just how long it takes to pronounce it is a question for modern experimental psychology.
 If you were a student in the psychological laboratory at a university you could determine that. The chronoscope, an instrument which measures time in thousandths of a second, tells the time exactly. Still, a quick-tongued man could probably read a book through while a stammering man said "scat." Furthermore, to know how long it takes to say "scat" is not so very important anyhow.

Mountain Tobacco.
 In Switzerland a weed called mountain tobacco is smoked in great quantities. It is powdered before using and causes the smoker to become a mental and physical wreck. The natives of South Africa are peculiarly affected by smoking the dried leaves of the camphor plant. The smoker trembles with fright at nothing, weeps bitterly and uses all sorts of words which do not in the least express his meaning. The wild dagga, another South African plant, poisons slowly any one using it.

The Lawyer's Fee.
 "Yes," said the first burglar disgustedly, "I cracked a lawyer's house the other night, and the lawyer was there with a gun all ready for me. He advised me to get out."
 "You got off easy," replied the other.
 "Not much I didn't! He charged me $25 for the advice."

The Facetious Operator.
 "I say, mister," said the cadaverous man entering the telegraph office, "could you trust me for a telegram I want to send my wife? I'll pay you to-morrow."
 "Sorry, sir," said the operator, "but we are terribly rushed these days, and there isn't a tick in the office that isn't working overtime as it is."
Telepathy.
 "I suppose," said the physician, smiling and trying to appear witty

The gipsy lady with the pathetic tale and the basket of lace which is supposed to be the real thing and isn't struck Parkhill on Saturday. She made an attempt to exhibit her wares at the Women's Institute, but the members were informed of the real value of her laces and warned against her, so she departed without making any sales there. Despite the fact that her fraudulent methods were exposed recently in many papers, she made extensive sales in Parkhill. The lace which she sells for real lace is cotton, slightly starched. It retails at any store for 5c per yard while she gaily gathers in 25c for the same thing. Read the papers, buy at home and save money.

THE JAPANESE SASH.

A Quaint Accessory That is in the Height of Style.

Wear a Japanese sash, or obi, with your simple little evening frock if you happen to be slender and willowy and girlish. It is the quaintest accessory imaginable, and you may short time for yourself in a very short time. First you catch your hare. That is to say, you buy three yards of thirty inch wide silk of an expensive a sort as you can afford, and you stay both edges with baby ribbon of a matching shade. That will prevent the silk length from sagging at either side while you are making a band by plaiting in one end, drawing it about your waist in soft, deep folds and, having measured the exact length required, plaited it across at that end. After that—without cutting the silk—you divide the remainder of the length into three even strips and make them into as many long loops. Two of these loops must extend oppositely from each other, running from a common knot, and from beneath that knot must fall the third loop. When the sash has been adjusted to the figure the two loops horizontally crossing the center of the back and the single long loop falling over the hips will form a silk butterfly, and that is what the obi is supposed to represent.

Fruits and Flowers Molded in Gelatin.
 Fruits, flowers, raisins and citron can be molded in gelatin with a little experimenting. To do this put a layer of gelatin in the mold first and let it harden. Then arrange the fruits, rose petals or other decoration. Pour a layer of gelatin carefully over this, not disturbing the fruits. When this layer is set fill the mold. Angella, which comes in long green sticks, is used for leaves of flowers. Candied cherries, almonds and other nuts are also used in making designs. The Italians cut gelatin into stars and different shapes, molding it in another gelatin. If plain gelatin is molded with a tube in the center it gives a clearer and more transparent look. The center may be filled with whipped cream or fruits. The list of favors to be given gelatin is almost endless—fruits, chocolate, coffee, wine, lemon, orange, and so on.

Famous Recipe For Asparagus Sauce.
 A famous cook gives the following recipe for an asparagus sauce in which a variety of seasonings are used: Put two tablespoonfuls of butter in a saucepan, stir in two tablespoonfuls of flour and gradually add a pint of white stock. Stir the sauce thoroughly while adding the stock to prevent lumps from forming. Then add a seasoning of salt and pepper, a slice of onion, a little slice of carrot, a bay leaf, a tiny bit of mace and a sprig of parsley. Let the sauce simmer for twenty minutes, then strain it and add enough tips to give a nice color and flavor to the sauce. Sometimes the tips are mashed and strained, but the mashing and straining make extra work.

Lost His Hair, Beard and Mustache
Terrible Plight of a Pennsylvania Man
 Reported by a Prominent Citizen:

"About two years ago my hair, beard and mustache started to come out in spots. These spots were entirely bare of hair.
 Seeing PARISIAN SAGE advertised, I purchased four bottles and after using two of the bottles, the hair came in until now I had as good a head of hair as I had before this trouble started.
 I can truthfully recommend this preparation to any one for what it is recommended for. Sam Galder, Jamison City, Col. Co., Pa. Oct. 11, 1911."
 Please bear in mind that PARISIAN SAGE is not guaranteed to grow hair on bald heads.
 In Mr. Galder's case the hair root was not dead and there is no good reason why PARISIAN SAGE should not do just what he writes it did.
 "The next time Mr. Galder came into my store after purchasing the PARISIAN SAGE," writes the druggist who sold him, "his appearance was so changed I did not know him."
 PARISIAN SAGE is without doubt the most efficient hair grower, beautifier and drandurf cure in the world, and people who are wasting time with ordinary commercial tonics should wake up.
 PARISIAN SAGE will banish dandruff, stop falling hair and itching scalp; will put life, lustre and beauty into faded hair, or money back. It is a most delightful and refreshing tonic for men, women and children. Large bottle 50 cents at T. B. Taylor & Son and druggists the country over.

Guide-Advocate

HARRIS & CO. PROPRIETORS

WATFORD, JULY 12, 1912.

From Old Subscribers.

Thos. Shirley, Vancouver: The Watford boys here are all doing well. Good weather. City doing well, skyscrapers going up in all directions. For 32 years I have been a subscriber of Guide-Advocate and the news is as fresh as ever.

G. R. Baird, Humbolt, Sask.:—I enclose money order for $1.00 in payment of my subscription for another year. It is always good to get the news from home. We have had an ideal summer here and everything points to a very big crop. We have had wet weather for a few days and got an end of the big storm that struck Regina but it did not do any serious damage. Old timers say that things have never looked better in this section. Wishing the Guide continued success.

In a letter to the Editor, G. C. Kilpatrick says:—Mother and myself left Hamilton on April 15th on a tour of Western Canada. We spent a couple of weeks visiting friends and relatives in Moosemin, Sask., New Westminster B.C. and Vancouver, finally landing in Victoria about May 5th. Everything in this part of the world is on the boom and all hopes are directed to a grand increase in 1915 when the Panama Canal is completed. I have invested in a two story house out here, paying $4700 for it. In two weeks time the car line accidentally ran up past it and the present value rests at $5500, so you see there is some money in taking chances. I am at present in with Real Estate firm as this is the best paying business here at present.

Another bereavement in the same family, which makes it the sixth in ten months, occurred Sunday in Alvinston, when Martha Gough daughter of Nelson Gough, and wife of William Waggood, died, aged 22 years. Besides her husband and father, she leaves three sisters and three brothers.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Thomas celebrated the 50th anniversary of their wedding day with a family reunion at their home near Florence on June 27. At seven o'clock about thirty guests sat down to a wedding supper on the lawn under a green bower, prettily decorated with Chinese lanterns and Union Jacks.

A valuable horse belonging to Geo. Smith, Widder, fell into a cistern the other evening. Through the use of the telephone neighbors were on the scene in a short time, and the animal was rescued uninjured. Another instance of the value of the telephone, as one neighbor put it, He saved enough that day to pay for a telephone all his life.

With one or two exceptions the local papers of Essex and Kent counties were loud in their denunciation of the stand taken by the Methodist conference in regard to growing tobacco. They say that to be consistent that body should also put the barn on corn, wheat, rye, and other farm produce, all of which is used in the manufacture of intoxicants.

Two Turks, disguised as clergymen, were caught by the Sarnia police Saturday attempting to nupt the local clergy on a religious book deal. The men, who talk broken English, state that they are getting up a new Bible and always asked for financial help. Many clergymen in Western Ontario towns are mourning the loss of money to the frauds.

DARK ROOM TESTING

Every child on reaching the age of seven years should have the eyes examined. Many children have defective vision, and it often happens that one eye only is affected. This throws all the work on the better eye while the other through disuse frequently loses its function entirely. With proper lense correction this trouble will be wholly overcome. If accompanied by parents we will be glad to examine children's eyes free of charge.

EMF Studebaker FLANDERS

A Real Car at a Low Price

The Studebaker-Flanders "20" is first of all a sturdy, handsome car. Your natural pride and the judgement of your neighbors are satisfied.
 But deeper than appearance—the design, in construction, down into the detail of every cotter pin and lock nut, the Studebaker-Flanders "20" is a splendid automobile. By changing the transmission or using only the sheer necessities of automobile manufacture, we could considerably cheapen it. But then it wouldn't deserve the Studebaker name. Remember that for 60 years the name "Studebaker" has stood for the best that can be built. There are no hidden weaknesses in the Studebaker-Flanders "20." It is all good, a true Studebaker car.

SUFFERED FROM VIOLENT CATHARTICS

The Warning of Mr. Geo. C. Fox Is One That Should Be Heeded by All.

Few men on the road are better known than genial George Fox, whose friends throughout the West are legion in the following letter he expresses gratitude for signal services rendered by Dr. Hamilton's Pills. He goes on to say: "Until I used Dr. Hamilton's Pills and experienced their wonderful mildness and curative power, I estimated the value of every pill by its activity. Talking about this to a well-known physician I met on the train the other day, he explained there are different kinds of drugs that act upon the bowels, the most active being known as drastic. Except in extreme cases where the life of the patient depends upon speedy evacuation of the bowels, pills should never be drastic. Purgatives cause catarrh of the bowels and inflammation; their dose must be increased, causing even more harm. With such a clear explanation I could see why Dr. Hamilton's Pills are curative and not irritating, why they are mild, yet most searching. "From my experience I recommend everyone that takes pills to give up the old-fashioned harsh, purging pill, and, instead, to use Dr. Hamilton's. They cure headache, biliousness, constipation, bad stomach, and keep the system in perfect condition." Refuse any substitute for Dr. Hamilton's Pills; sold for 25c. all dealers, or The Catarrhzone Co., Kingston, Ont.

Fate In the Desert

It Proved Itself a Kindly One

By CLARISSA MACKIE

After hours of thundering over the gray prairies without a stop the long train suddenly slowed down and came to a puffing standstill. The front door of the coach was opened as the brakeman thrust in his head and yelled something that sounded like "Pollock!"

Pollock was Agatha Waite's station, and without further inquiry she grasped her small leather satchel and left the train. Several of the passengers looked curiously after her tall, graceful form in its well fitting traveling coat, her golden hair crowned by a most becoming little hat. Quite unastished Agatha reached the ground, stared about her doubtfully as there came the warning sound of "Board!" from the front of the train. Then the train moved on, leaving her standing there, waiting to cross the tracks to reach the station that must be on the other side of the train and where Linda Cowley's husband was probably waiting for her with the buckboard and team of grays that they had written about.

But there was no station there—that is, not enough of a station to be dignified by such a name. There was a tiny building set in the sagebrush beside the track, and a sun dried individual was rolling up a little signal flag. He stared curiously at the modishly attired young woman, who was watching the smoke of the departing train with dismay.

"I hope I haven't made a mistake," she called to the man as she crossed the tracks.

"Depends upon where you think you're at," he smiled grimly.

"Isn't this station Pollock?"

"Pollock! Not by thirty miles, ma'am. This is Hotbox. It's a flag station."

"I thought he said Pollock," admitted Agatha, genuinely frightened at her dilemma. "Aren't there any houses or hotels around here?"

"Not within fifteen miles. There ain't another train, neither, till tomorrow morning."

"What can I do?" demanded Agatha.

"Why, I dunno, ma'am. I come down here to stop the train so Hen Larrabee could get aboard and go to Pollock, but I've got a wagon here; I can drive you as far as I go."

"Is it anywhere near a house?" Agatha was almost tearful.

"Of course it is, but you wouldn't want to stop there, ma'am. We only keep bachelor quarters."

"Of course not," agreed Agatha hastily. "But there must be some place where there's a woman?"

"Over to Piedmont ranch—why, you are fixed all right, ma'am! There's Jim, now!" He put his hands to his lips and vigorously shouted to the man who was driving in a buckboard a short distance away. Horse and rider were the only living things in the expanse of gray sagebrush that melted into a gray horizon.

The vehicle turned from its direct course and came toward them. Agatha saw that the driver was a large, lean, bronzed individual, young and far from ill looking. Under the broad brim of his hat she caught a glimpse of dark blue eyes before they were turned questioningly on the flagman.

"You want me, Irvin's?" he drawled.

"Yep. This here lady got off the train here by mistake. Thought they called 'Pollock' instead of 'Hotbox.' There ain't another train till tomorrow; can't you put her up over to your place?"

"Certainly," said the stranger quickly, and he jumped down from his seat and gave Agatha a hand. In the other hand he held his hat, thus baring a mop of chestnut hair. "My mother will be very glad to welcome you," he said rather shyly as they drove off.

"Thank you," replied Agatha gravely.

Agatha Waite believed she had had her share of trouble when she had lost both parents in early girlhood. She had been brought up in the home of an ambitious aunt, who had planned a brilliant marriage for her rich and beautiful niece, but somehow Agatha did not want to make a brilliant marriage. What she had always wanted was a place she could call home, a spot that would shelter her as a beloved occupant because she was herself, not because she was rich. To Agatha love and marriage meant the foundation of a real home. Her aunt's house had been merely a gathering place for fashionable people, and Agatha was weary of it all.

That was one reason she had left New York and was on her way to the home of an old college friend, a classmate who had married a ranchman and settled in a wilderness of the west whose nearest railroad station was at Pollock. Agatha's mistake in getting off at the flag station was an unlooked for adventure in the monotony of her journey.

Another reason for her departure into the wilderness was that a year before Agatha Waite had met a man who loved her and who possessed all the qualities of mind and heart that she begged for time to consider. This he granted reluctantly and, as it proved, fatally for their little romance. Agatha's aunt had overheard a bit of Jim Fenton's confession and was prepared to tell him a few minutes later, when she found him moodily alone, that Agatha's heart and hand were already disposed of. Angered at Agatha's apparent deception, Fenton had flung himself away and betaken himself to his home in Chicago without one word of explanation between them.

So here was Agatha Waite riding over an unknown prairie in the most unexpected manner. Surely her new existence was beginning with adventures.

What made it more of a real adventure and indeed lifted it into the realms of actual romance was the fact that the large, lean, brown man with the sparkling blue eyes was none other than Jim Fenton himself.

What was he doing here in the far west? He had spoken of his mother—was it his mother that she was to meet in a short time, the mother of whom he had spoken so often in those brief blissful days of wooing, when she had not realized it was love that was at last creating a new world for her? His sudden disappearance the day after his declaration of love was a horrible mystery to her. She shuddered now whenever she thought of the days and nights of agony that followed. She had herself well in hand now, she told herself rather triumphantly. She could treat him as distantly and coldly as a stranger, as his conduct deserved. Nevertheless she wondered what had made the lines of suffering about his lips. They had not been there before.

Suddenly he spoke, and his voice smote the heavy silence like a deep toned bell:

"We sha'n't get home till just after sunset."

"Yes," she returned in a strained voice.

"I suppose—I suppose Sir Robert will be anxious about your absence. If you like, I can drive over to the telegraph office at Piedmont and send a message for you." His calm, even tones did not falter as he thus acknowledged their former acquaintance.

Agatha, whose eyes had been fixed on the sun dropping behind a bank of blue black clouds, turned toward him and spoke with genuine surprise.

"Sir Robert?" she repeated haughtily.

"I understood your aunt, Mrs. Morgan Waite, to say that—that you were to marry the Englishman," said Fenton slowly. "Perhaps I am premature in assuming that it has already happened."

"You are premature indeed." Agatha's voice shook with realization of what had happened to blight her romance. "I have never entertained the idea of marrying Sir Robert—or any one." She looked away with quivering lips. The sun had set now and the prairie was dimming with an early twilight. Away in the distance twinkled the lights of a ranchhouse. They neared it rapidly as the man sank into silence.

At last he spoke again, this time sternly.

"Then your aunt—lied to me?" he asked.

"Yes," returned Agatha, with stiff lips.

"And I—you—Agatha; what have you thought of me to leave you without explanation?"

"What could I think?" pleaded Agatha, conscious that his hand was covering both of hers.

He uttered an exclamation of pity. "Please tell me if you will, how you came to be here?" he asked after awhile.

She told him in a few words. In return he said that he had long owned this ranch and feeling the desire for change for his mother and himself he had brought her out here where the free, open life was doing wonders for her frail health.

"It wasn't mere accident that set you down in the desert here for me to come along and pick you up—me out of all the whole world, Agatha, darling! It is God's will that we two should meet again and be happy. Say it is!" His arm had stolen about her and her tender lips were upturned to meet his.

Their kiss was the answer.

INSECT STINGS AND SUMMER SORES.

Insect bites and stings, blistered feet and sunburn! These three things, or any one of them, may spoil some days of your vacation, or make your work a bore! Zam-Buk is the remedy you need! It takes the "burn" out of these red, inflamed patches where the sun has got home on you; it eases bad mosquito bites, and soothes and heals blistered feet and hands.

In the hot weather young babies suffer greatly from heat spots and chafed places. Here, again, Zam-Buk will give almost instant ease! Mothers should always keep Zam-Buk handy, and should use Zam-Buk Soap for baby's bath.

For cuts, burns, and more serious skin diseases, such as eczema, blood-poisoning, etc., and for piles, Zam-Buk is absolutely without an equal. All druggists and stores soc. box or Zam-Buk Co., Toronto.

Everything in Live Stock.

As a live stock show, the Canadian National Exhibition in 1911 surpassed itself. Every stable and pen on the grounds was full to overflowing, and it was necessary to erect tents for the overflow. This year applications for stables are already being received at the Exhibition office, and it goes without saying that the display will only be limited by the accommodation.

A CLEAR HEALTHY SKIN.—Eruptions of the skin and the blotches which blemish beauty are the result of impure blood caused by unhealthy action of the liver and kidneys. In correcting this unhealthy action and restoring the organs to their normal condition, Parmelee's Vegetable Pills will at the same time cleanse the blood, and the blotches and eruptions will disappear without leaving any trace.

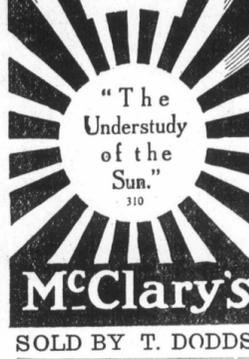

Arthur Lindsay, youngest son of Mrs. W. B. Lindsay, Strathroy, is one of this year's graduates of the Royal Military College, Kingston. Mr. Lindsay very creditably completed a five-year course, doing the work in four years.

Some high scores were made at the ranges at Goderich. Col. Sergt. Reid, of "A" Co. of the 27th, made a perfect score, and Sergt. F. Bowers, of "A" Co., of the 30th, duplicated the performance. Sergt. Salisbury, of the 27th, secured 68 out of 70, and Sergt. Newell, of "F" Co. of the 27th, made 69.

These two desirable qualifications, pleasant to the taste and at the same time effectual, are to be found in Mother Graves' Worm Exterminator. Children like it.

When You Think

Of the pain which many women experience with every month it makes the gentleness and kindness always associated with womanhood seem to be almost a miracle. While in general no woman rebels against what she regards as a natural necessity there is no woman who would not gladly be free from this recurring period of pain.

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription makes weak women strong and sick women well, and gives them freedom from pain. It establishes regularity, subdues inflammation, heals ulceration and cures female weakness.

Sick women are invited to consult us by letter, free. All correspondence strictly private and sacredly confidential. Write without fear and without fee to World's Dispensary Medical Association, R. V. Pierce, M. D., President, Buffalo, N. Y.

An Unexplained Affair

Only Two Persons Understood It

By F. A. MITCHEL

Silas Barker was a bachelor farmer of thirty-five, in good health, prosperous and steadily growing rich. One who saw him and remarked upon his condition would not dream that there was anything in the world he wanted unless it was a wife.

There was a jog in Mr. Barker's farm that made it look something like a pie, with one piece cut out of it. This piece was owned by Miss Clementine Wilson, a maiden lady a year or two older or a year or two younger—the women of the locality all claimed that she was older—who lived alone, just as Silas did, and every one said what a sensible thing it would be for Silas to marry her and complete the circular outline of his farm.

One day Miss Wilson received a call from a real estate agent, who asked if she would care to sell her property, adding that if she did he thought he had a purchaser for it. Miss Wilson told him that she had never considered selling it, but she would think the matter over and if she came to a conclusion to part with it she would let him know. The agent left his card with his address on it and departed.

A few days later she wrote a note to Mr. Barker in which she told him that she had been approached with a view to the purchase of her property and since she supposed that if it changed hands it should be a part of his farm she thought it proper to notify him before taking any action in the matter. To this note she received a reply stating that he had as much land already as he had ready capital to work and did not care to purchase any more. However, he thanked her for notifying him.

Here the matter ended for the time being except that Miss Wilson wrote to the agent to ask what price would be offered for her property and received a reply that he could get for it what she considered about half its value. To the offer she made no reply.

Though Silas and Clementine had been neighbors for years, they had had nothing more than a speaking acquaintance. One day some time after Clementine had been approached with reference to the purchase of her property when coming from the postoffice she met Silas on the road. He stopped to reiterate his thanks for her notification and to explain why he wouldn't care to buy her farm. He would have to enlarge his buildings, buy new implements, and all that.

"By the bye, Miss Wilson," he said, "I find it kind of lonesome evenings at home, and I've often thought I'd like to come down to your place and visit for awhile."

A light of mingled pride and pleasure came into the woman's eye at this expressed wish of one she had always considered her superior. She replied that she was always at home evenings and would be glad to see him any time he chose to drop in. He called the next week, and the day after the farmers' wives and daughters round about were passing the news that Silas Barker was going to marry Clementine Wilson and unite the two farms.

Nor was it long before appearances seemed to justify the report. Miss Wilson began to "spruce up." Instead of being the worst dressed woman in the county she became the best dressed. Watchers averred that Silas spent two evenings a week with her. On Sunday afternoons he drove her out in his new sidebar buggy with red wheels. Persons began to say that the day was set for the wedding when suddenly the affair was off.

No one dared ask Silas what had come between the two, and as for Clementine she wouldn't tell. But it leaked out that Clementine's farm had something to do with the matter. This was puzzling, because it was supposed that adding her farm to Barker's was an element of strength in the matter. Then an uncle of Clementine's who was her financial adviser let it all out.

"Si Barker," he said, "is the meanest man out of jail. What he was after was Clem's farm. He sent a real estate agent to buy it for a song. Clem wrote Barker about the offer, knowing that if the property passed out of her hands it ought to pass into Barker's. He said he didn't want it. The reason he did this was thinkin' if he bought it from her direct he'd have to pay a fair price for it. When the scheme failed he set in to court her. The matter went so far that the day was set for the wedding. Then Clem found that he wanted her to deed her farm to him in consideration of a money payment of $50 an acre when she could get a hundred for it by lettin' it be known that it was for sale. He said that since the property was to be united that was the legal way to do it. Clem saw his game and broke it all off."

While previous to this denouncement Silas Barker had stood well in the community, after it he lost caste with his neighbors. Some who had suffered by certain underhanded schemes of his, while outwardly they treated him as before, inwardly knit their brows and drew down the corners of their mouths when they saw him coming. But this in no way interfered with his prosperity. Barker's credit was A1 at his bank. He was always ready to protect his crops in case of unfavorable weather and always got the best prices for his products.

"It's a mistake," said Deacon Hargreaves, "to say that honesty's the best policy in business. That might have been so once, but now it is different. But it's never different so far as conscience and comfort are concerned, and in that respect dishonesty doesn't pay either in the long run or the short run."

There was bitterness between the two so called lovers. And yet no one knew how much of love and how much of interest lay between them, though it was generally supposed that what there was of tender feeling was all on the side of the lady. And yet some who knew Barker best—or thought they did—declared that he was much "cut up" at the outcome of the affair. Most of the women condemned his action with indignation, but there were those who said that Clem Wilson was a fool to reject the only offer she had ever had or was ever likely to receive; that Barker was only providing for future emergencies in legally making the property one before the marriage. But the fact that the consideration was not $1, the amount stipulated in formal documents, indicated that Barker never had such an intention, but did intend the courtship simply as a means of buying the Wilson farm for half its value.

While Barker never spoke of the matter between himself and Miss Wilson, he gave every indication of bitterness toward her. As to Clementine, she had lived before her engagement a patient, plodding life, and after her disappointment she resumed it. When the finer clothes she had put on during the courtship were worn out she did not replace them. If she met her ex-lover on the road she spoke to him as pleasantly as before her discovery of his game to secure her property.

At one time a rumor was started that the matter was about to be patched up between the two, but it could never be traced to any reliable foundation, and, since a statement was coupled with it that Barker was the one who wished the reconciliation, no one believed it from the first. At any rate, the rumor was never confirmed by any change in the treatment of the parties of each other.

One day the doctor was called in to see Barker and when he left the house told those who asked about his patient that he had typhoid fever. The doctor went every day to see the invalid and finally let it be known that Barker was a very sick man.

One thing was noticed during the illness that was much talked about. Clementine Wilson was seen standing at the door of the Barker farmhouse with a bowl of soup in her hands. Some one came to the door; Clementine said something; the person disappeared, and returned. Then Clementine went away with the soup.

It was surmised that an offering had been refused, and whatever sympathy had arisen for the sick man was blighted by his inhuman treatment of the woman he had been engaged to marry. Some of the women offered Miss Wilson their sympathy, at the same time animadverting upon her former lover's cruel act. But Clementine refused to listen to them.

One morning there was crape on the door of the Barker farmhouse. Tongues began to wag as to what would become of the property he had acquired, he having none but distant relatives. Every one thought of Miss Wilson and what had slipped through her fingers.

"She ought to have sold him her property for nothing," said some. "She'd have it all back now."

"She wouldn't any such thing," said another. "He never had any idea of marrying her."

"Wonder if she'll go to the funeral?" "I should think she would. There oughtn't to be any hard feeling after death."

"I should think she wouldn't. What business has she at the funeral of a man that treated her as he did?" And so the gossip went on. Clementine gave out the first bit of information she had to give. She would not attend the funeral because she did not wish to be remarked upon and because Mr. Barker's death ended the saddest affair of her life, and she did not think she had the fortitude to stand being present at his funeral.

So the funeral took place without any one being present who was or ever had been nearly connected with the deceased. The next day a lawyer sent Clementine a notice that the will would be opened at a certain date, and she was invited to be present.

Whatever were her feelings at this information she kept them to herself. She went to the appointed place—the Barker farmhouse—and found there two or three distant connections of the deceased. The will was opened and read as follows:

I bequeath all my property, real and personal, to Clementine Wilson.

When it was known that the jilted woman had received some $100,000 from the man who had jilted her the previous wagging of tongues compared with that which followed was like a tinkle of bells beside the din of battle.

What did it all mean? No one except Clementine Wilson knew, and she never told. But we do know that the human heart gives us some inscrutable mysteries; that side by side with the most contemptible, manness lies the deepest, the most enduring love. And usually those who feel deepest are most prone to hide their affairs and their feelings. No one can contemplate what is plainly indicated by Barker's action without making an inference that his nature and his habit of life cost him a happiness he ardently desired.
