idly falling from its pedestal, or, to wife find the necessities of life gradually lowered in prices until they approach, or perhaps rival the cheap levels of a few years ago? This is the question which is engaging the attention of economists at the present time. In striking the basis for the cost of living, economists have adopted, what is known as the "index number" on which they base their computations. This index number is the average cost of a large group of commodities during a stated period which varies in different countries, but generally represents a decade, and in Canada is taken as 1890 to 1899. The relations to the present average price of some group, therefore, supplies a ready means of determining the advances which have courred since that time.

Mr. Langam explained this peculiar argument by expounding to the court the different conditions under a Canadian and western, or amortical classification. On the American classification. On the American side the carload minimum ranges from 30,000 to 35,000 pounds, while on the Canadian side it is 24,000. Under the American classification similarity in the quality and efficiency in the quantity of commodities are insisted upon, before the carload rate can be obtained by shippers. On the Canadian side mixing is permitted. The American companies, therefore, do a greater and more profitable business in less than carload lots, where the rate is higher.

One could only say that if ordinary in the quality and efficiency in the quality and efficiency in the quality and efficiency in the quality of commodities are insisted upon, before the carload rate can be obtained by shippers. On the Canadian side it is 24,000.

To the already imposing array of counsel and experts, a new figure has been added in the person of Jean Paul Muller, late expert of the interstate commerce commission, and now chartered accountant at Washington. He is the expert employed to prepare the case of government counsel, and his brief consists of six thick volumes, four of which are now ready, but two of which are still in the hands of the printers. Mr. Muller, who, by the way, is not a practical railroad man, but who appears to possess a tremendous propensity for mathematics, and thorough knowledge of the theory of rate-making, has examined the boo of the company, and finds that the the rates charged by the C. Walter Scott. You can scarcely walk along Fleet street nowadays without meeting a literary or journalistic knight, but that a scribbling fellow should gain the coveted honor of a baronetey is a rare enough event to be sensational. The joke of it is that this new recruit to the aristocracy is the most modest of mcn. and the very last whom one could suspect of having made any effort himself to gain the decoration. Ralph Connor has told how he was once invited to a reception at Free Sf. George's, Edinburgh, which was given by the young people of the church in honor of the rising novelist. Coming in late the Canadian met Henry Drummond. "Have you seen Barrie?" asked Drummond. "No, I should like to see him," was the reply. "Well." said Drummond. Smiling. "look round till you find a hole, look down in the hole and you will see Barrie." Ralph Connor found Barrie later in a quiet corner, evidently looking for his hole, and somewhat distressed at not finding it.

Again We Make the Popular Announcement of Another

Hoosier Model Kitchen Club

Being the Second---and Last---of the 1913 Series

This should be a time for jubilation, a time for joyful congratulation among the housekeepers of 'Toronto. Monday we open this well known plan for the easy purchase of a "Hoosier" Kitchen Cabinet, which combines the most liberal arrangement for payment, and the most generous free gift of supplies anyone could wish for. This year's selling plan originally called for the formation of two clubs of 300 each—one in April, the other in June. The hist club—which will be very well remembered by so many—had to be closed in six and a half days, although 12 days were allotted to the sale, with many persons still eager to join. But being restricted to 300 cabinets, we were reluctantly compelled to disappoint those who came after the club was completed.

This Club Open to 500 Members

By exerting every influence with the Hoosier Company we have succeeded in securing enough cabinets to bring the number for this club sale up to 500. This will ensure our pleasing a great many more than before, but does not guarantee against disappointment for those who put off joining till the last moment.

Two weeks only are given over to the Club Sale---no longer. If the 500 Memberships are completed before that time the Club automatically closes

Those who want to come in on this easy-way-to-get-one plan should enroll early. There is no formality or red tape whatsoever about joining the Club. The "Hoosier" Cabinet is priced for the sale at $35.00. A payment of $1.00 down and agreement to pay $100 per week until Cabinet is paid for covers every requirement. The Cabinet will be delivered to your home as soon as the first payment is made, and you can begin to enjoy its comfort and help right away.

It is the most perfect and popular cabinet in the world. All other makers of kitchen cabinets have attempted to imitate it, but, of course, as the most of the special features are patented and controlled by the Hoosier Company, it is impossible for other cabinets to even approximate it in any particular. The "Hoosier" so far outpoints every other kitchen cabinet that no one wants the other kind at all. It combines every good point that tends to save time, labor and materials in kitchen work. Some of the "Hoosier" patented features are: The sanitary self-cleaning metal flour bin, with sifter attached; a self-feeding metal sugar bin, 10 crystal glass air-tight jars for spices, large glass tea and coffee air-tight jars and aluminum covered work table, size 40 x 39 inches, a metal bread and cake box, a daily reminder and want list, as well as plate racks, cupboards, sliding shelves, etc., etc. A most complete kitchen cabinet in every way.

All These Best Grade Baking Supplies are Free with Cabinet

No introduction is needed by the homekeepers of Canada to these sterling food products. In keeping with the good name of the "Hoosier" Cabinet, we have selected only the best brands of baking supplies and kitchen needs to go with the cabinet sold on the club plan. Just scan this list of good things:-

1 tin Magic Baking Powder 1 pkg. Tillson's Oats 1 pkg. Magic Baking Soda 1 pkg. Weston's Biscuits 1 pkg. Cowan's Icing 1 pkg. Cobra Polishes

1 tin Cowan's Cocoa 1 pkg. Imperial Desert Jelly 1 pkg. Malagama Tea 1 pkg. Gillett's Lye 1 bag Rainbow Flour 1 tin Malagama Coffee 1 btl. Horse Radish Sauce

The Entire Outfit Goes FREE to Each One Who Joins the Club

And This is All it Costs You to Join

The insignificant outlay that Club purchasers are asked to make is too simple to hesitate about. The only requirement to bring a "Hoosier Special" Kitchen Cabinet to your home at once is to merely pay us

1 Magic Cook Book

One Dollar Down Now

afterwards you can settle the balance of purchase price by paying one dollar per week, while you are enjoying the use of this wonderful cabinet—all the time saving yourself loads of unnecessary steps and exertion as well as saving much of the usual waste of baking materials and keeping a neat, orderly kitchen.

Important Reasons for Joining the Club Monday:---

You can put off until later, but every day you wait you lose. You lose the time a "Hoosier" Kitchen Cabinet will save you; you take hundreds of steps a "Hoosier" Cabinet will save; you lose the space a "Hoosier" Cabinet will save; you lose the pleasure in your kitchen work that a "Hoosier" Cabinet will give. Have your Cabinet in your home working for you now when Therefore, Join Monday the real hot weather has begun.

Residents at a distance from Toronto, who can satisfy us as to their financial responsibility, are eligible to enter this Club. Send for particulars of the plan as applied to out-of-town folks. Write for Model Kitchen Book.

LONDON, Junc 19.—The matrimonial differences of the Duke and Duchess of Westminster are proving much more serious than at first supposed and a divorce is now considered unavoidable and imminent

The first initination the public had of any difference between the richest duke in England—sometimes called the Astor of London because he owns more than half the property in the district of Westminster—and his wife was recently, when she attended a select function given by the king and queen at Buckingham Palace but at which the duke did not appear.

The duchess attended the dance in the Westminster state carriage but when she returned to Grosvener house she found the doors of her own home barred against her, the duke having given orders to the servants in her absence that she should not be admitted.

All this was recounted at the time and the reason given was that the duke had not been invited to the solree by the royal couple, the Queen having purposely excluded him to show her disapproval of married men, even dukes, who were notoriously unfaithful to their marriage vows.

OTTAWA, June 21.—(Special)—The prospective bye-elections in Ontario are seldom mentioned in political circles here, except South Bruce, where Mr. J. J. Donnelly, the sitting member, was elevated to the senate. It is understood that Mr. H. Cargill, sr., will be the Conservative candidate, and the Liberals already have their man in the field.

It is no secret here that the appointment of Mr. Donnelly to the senate was urged by the Cargill-Southam families, in order to facilitate young Mr. Cargill's entry into public life. It will be recalled that South Bruce, created on its present lines in 1903, was, for a short time, represented by Mr. Henry Cargill, sr., who died suddenly in the house of commons in 1901. FATHER AND SONS ECONOMIZE

We Are the World's Tailors for the Male Portion of the Family. Economy and Style Here

It is the head of the family that should set the example in everything. If the old man doesn't exercise a little sensible economy, we don't see how the balance of the family can be expected to. And can you fancy any better line upon which to begin than CLOTHES?

We don't care what size, or weight, or build the head of the family is, or what age he is, we can tog him out in a suit of clothes for fifteen dollars. A suit that will set the neighbors agape with envy.

We don't care how particular the head of the family may be as to fit and finish of the garments he wears, we can give him a suit of clothes, better than which he has never worn in his life.

We call ourselves tailors to the young man, but as the young man is always the concentrated essence of exactness in everything pertaining to the clothes he wears, we should hold some attraction for the man who has crossed "the meridian."

Economy begins right with yourself, and it can't begin too soon. The Scotland Woolen Mills Company stands for everything economical and good in modern tailoring.

of heroism that will always live in Canadian history, the accomplishment of which made possible a great Canadian victory which had its effects upon the issue of the war of 1812-14.

On June 23, 1813, Laura Secord, daughter of a United Empire Loyalist, and wife of a Canadian militiaman, who had been wounded at Queenston Heights, accidentally overheard a conversation between some American officers who had taken up their supressers. cers who had taken up their quarters in her home at Queenston, the purport of which led her to believe that the Americans were about to attack and defeat the small British force commanded by Lieut, Fitzgibbon, at De Cew's Falls.

Leaving the house, ostensibly for the purpose of milking hexcow and driving the animal before her in a manner that gave the American soldiers the idea that she was unable to catch it, she managed to pass the American pickets unmolested. Once outside the American lines, she dashed into the woods and walked 20 miles by a circuitous, difficult and perilous route, thru forests and swamps to Fitzgibbon's camp. As the result of her heroic deed, Fitzgibbon, on the following day, with less than 50 men of H. M. 49th Regiment, about 15 militiamen and a small force of Six, Nation and other Indians under Capts. W. Johnson Kerrand Dominique Ducharme, surprised and attacked the enemy at Beaver Dams, and after a short engagement, captured Col. Boerstler of the U. S. army, his entire force of 542 men and two field pieces.

This was undoubtedly one of the most remarkable victories in our annals, and a victory, too, that helped to rid Upper Canada of the invaders and maintain this country as a British land.

At the time of her act of herbism Laufa Secord was a woman of 38, the mother of five children. She was a fine, tall, strong woman and she lived to the old age of 93.

Other acts of bravery are attributed to her, including that of saying her was a sine, tall, strong woman and a second work at the celebrate of the war of 1812-14.

Other acts of bravery are attributed to her, including that of saving her husband's life, for ofter he lay wounded, it is on record, that he would have been clubbed to death by the enemy had not his wife came to his assistance.

A monument has been erected on Lundy's Lane in memory of this heroine, on which the following inscription is placed:

"To perpetuate the name and fame of Laura Secord, who, on the 23rd of June, 1813, with less than 50 men of His Majesty's 49th Regiment, about 15 militiamen, and a similar force of Six Nation and other Indians, under Capts. William Johnson Kerr and Dominique Ducharme, to surprise and attack the enemy at Beechwood (or Beaver Dams), and, after a short engagement to capture Col. Boerstler of the U. S. army, and his entire force of 542 men, with two field pieces. This monument, erected by the Ontario Historical Society from contributions of schools, societies, Her Majesty's 49th Regiment, other militia organizations and private individuals, was unveiled June 22nd, 1901."

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., June 21.

The American Medical Association's convention, which closed yesterday, was marked by a discussion of plans for a nation-wide organization and movement to combat cancer. Dr. J. Bloodgood, of Johns Hopkins University, Baltimore, outlined the movement, which was recently started in New York. Dr. Bloodgood explained the nature of the American Society for the Prevention of Cancer, which will be launched formally in New York Monday night.

The organization was endorsed in addresses by several surgeons. The house of delegates had previously adopted a resolution pledging the support of the American Medical Association to the movement. "This movement found its inception in New York a short time ago, when a committee of laymen and women undertook what is to be a nation men undertook what is one a harden wide propaganda of education and research, with regard to the question of cancer," said Dr. Bloodgood, before the surgery section. "This society is to deal with the question of the product of the cancer on a broader basis than in the past Each medical society in the country has been approached on the matter and has endorsed it."

FOUR TONS OF GOLD AND SILVER PLATE

VANCOUVER, June 21.—(Special.) French Nation Send Huge Quantity of Plate For State Banquet to Be Given by President.

> LONDON, June 21 .- Four tons of priceless gold and silver plate, china and glassware, the property of the French nation, arrived in London last night, in readines for the state banquet, at which the French president is to entertain the King and Queen at the French embassy, on Wednesday evening next, during his state visit to England.

No fewer than 115 cases were required to contain this valuable property, and these were packed in four patent sling wagons, in which they traveled from Paris. A number of French and English detectives accompanied the wagons, and at Charing Cross, when the cases were unloaded to remove the the embess? for removal to the embassy, a large staff of station police, as well as Officers from Scotland Yard and Bow street, were on duty. By special arrangement, the cases were passed by the customs authorities unchecked, the initials of the republic, "R. F.," marked in white chalk on each of the wagons, being a sufflcient passport.

A sealed padlock was found to be missing from one of the cases, when it was being unloaded, and the case appeared as if it had been tampered with. Anxiety was allayed, however, by the contents of the box being at once checked and found to tally with the register of the contents. The padlock was not found, despite a vigorous search. Among the cases were several containing wines and liqueurs of the finest vintage from the presidential cellars.

WORLD ATTITUDE IS ONE OF CAUTION

But Expectation For Acute Money Stringency in Fall May Have Been Over-Anticipated.

NEW YORK, June 21.—(Special.)—The London correspondent of The Evening Post cables as follows:

The conspicuous fact in the situation, as the half year approaches its end, is the world wide attitude of caution.

This is especially true of London, where by a curious contradiction, expectation is now so unanimous of acute money stringency in the autumn as almost to suggest to some minds that it will not occur at all.

After the July settlements are over money rates should temporarily ease, especially at Berlin, where there will doubtless be much talk about actually easy money and a satisfactory position.

It is impossible to forget, however. Berlin's chronic condition of dependence on other markets, and its repeated borrowing from New York and London, before the end of other previous quarters, at rates as high as 6 and 7 per cent. nor can the recent senational failure of the Imperial and Prussian loans be without its effect on the Berlin situation.

So far as regards the midsummer and autumn requirements of your money market, London is fully prepared to lend to the United States the usual amount which it advances to move the crops. But difficulty may arise thru nervous mistrust as to whether the money is not desired for speculative purposes.

The tendency, therefore, will be to investigate scrupulously the genuineness of the requisitions rather than to refuse accommodation.

The recovery on the New York Stock Exchange, since the culmination of the break last week, is naturally welcome to our markets, but its contenning American finance. The release of our own financial markets into depression, during last half of this week, was partly due to the approach of the mid year readiustments, which will for the time increase the money market's stringency and necessitate large sales of stocks against options maturing at the end of the present month.

The immediate outlook therefore, favors continued depression on the stock

Unusually thick surface tread—as much genuine rubber in the surface of tire as in the centre tread above it—this considerably multiplies the life of Independent Tires.

Cushion of thick, highest quality red rubber between fabric and body of tire-gives additional springiness and resiliency, lengthening life of tire and car. Toughness and heat resistance of this red rubber cushion prevents the separation between fabric and the rubber body of tire which shortens life of ordinary tires. We are the originators and exclusive users of this red rubber cushion, which adds at least 25 per cent. to the life of the Independent Tire.

The first time the writer saw Sir liliam Macdonald was some half sen years ago following the burning the Medical and Science Buildings McGill. I had known that Sip William declared wer back of McGilli and when the cence building fire took place a few safter the burning of the medical dool. I went to him to get a story earding the future plans of the detoyed institutions.

A big donation to our cause." Many have gone to him, but there is no record of any ever having received a cent. Outside of his connection with McGilli and his donations to what may be called "feeders" to the university, Sir William gives nothing. His name never appears on subscription lists to charitable or philanthropic causes; he does not dissipate his time or energies by being a director of many companies; he has no hobbies or any little weaknesses. ed institutions.

I expected to see him housed in an elaborate office building, with a magnificent suite of character in Canada. By sheer hard work, coupled with keen foresight and good judgment, he has built up the biggest business of its kind on the rooms and as difficult to interview as would be the Czar. Instead of that, continent, and has made himself one of the richest, if not the richest man in the control of that it describes the control of the Canada. How He Got His Start.

Sit William Macdonald is in many ways the most unique man in Canadian industrial life today. Born in Prince Edward Island in 1331. Sir William is now in his 83rd year. He is the son of the late Hon. Donald Macdonald member of the Legislative Council of Prince Edward Island. Sir William got his start in the tobacco business at the time of the American Civil War. With the shrewd Scottish foresight which he sulways charactercoupe. Until a year or two ago, when the building he occupied for a half century, was sold, and he was forced to move, he had no telephone or typewriters in his office; he had no modern filling devices, or any of the other requisites demonded by the other requisites demanded by modern business establishment. WEEKLY REVIEW OF REALTY MARKET: BETTER LOT SALE

Demand For Costly Residences Features the Situation-Improved Feeling Prevails.

Featured by an unfillable demand for large residences, the real estate market is moving along with summer inertia. Big deals, central or farm, are not being started, and those on seem to be eking out an interminable existence. The one bright part of the real estate agent's life is this enquiry after high-priced houses and the steady stream of dwelling sales of all classes. EXPERIENCE IS A REAL ESTATE NEED Miscalculations of a Builder Prove Mistakes of Judgment Are Costly.

It is an elementary rule that the most important factor in any business venture is experience. Often shrewd business men, successful in their own business, are prone to forget that in a different field they are novices. This is peculiarly true in real estate, where fortunes may be lost on a sincle mistake of judgment.

A builder, who has been successful in erecting and disposine of some apartment houses, made up his mind to erect a lift building in a favorable spot in the uptown loft zone section.

In October or November, when his building was half completed, brokers besieved him with favorable offers. The renting men advised the builder that these offers compared advantageously with the prevailing values in the neighborhood, that inasmuch as his building would not be completed before February, the inducement of a few months' free rent was lacking. He was told that when the renting season drew to a close he could not hope to command the same rentals as most of the dosimble tenants leased space months in advance.

He paid little attention to these men who were in a position to understand conditions. As the days advanced he found fewer applicants for space. One month heave the conditions as the days advanced he found fewer applicants for space. One month heave the fact that his building was almost entirely unfilled. PLAN YOUR OWN APARTMENT SUITE

It Has Come to This in New York Where Long Term Lessees Arrange Floor Plans.

Competition among builders of high-class apartments in New York has made it possible for a long-term lessee to ar-range the floor plan of his apartment to suit his own taste and convenience. This has been done in several of the big apart-ment houses along Park and Firth ave-nues and on the upper west side, where rents range from $5000 to $30,000 a year. Features of construction tending to greater conveniences in living and ele-gance in appointment have been sought eagerly by builders of these magnificent structures, and no expense is spared to eagerly by builders of these magnificent structures, and no expense is spared to meet every need and desire of the occu-

"Park avenue however by reason of its cuiet and refinement, has hardly suffered by comparison. Madison and Lexington avenues have been handicapped by the presence of car lines and building restrictions imposed by the width of the streets, and are likely to be lined with shops and stores to an extent which will discourage the construction of houses of the very highest type. Madison and Lexington avenues, however, will almost certainly benefit by the enhancement in value incident to the completion of the new Lexington avenue subway.

Beas No III Will.

"I feel strongly the somewhat unfair attack which was made on me by the press, which characterized me as the black sheep of my family. I have my papers which show that I am duly registered in the embassy at Mexico City in the year 1200, and also that for a period of ten years I was absent from the republic only seven months and eight days. I trust that this explanation will end the matter. I have many good friends in this great country, and I do not wish them to have a wrong opinion. Hence my very careful and lengthy statement. Bears No III Will. wrong opinion. Hence my very careful and lengthy statement in regard to this matter.

Where Will The Workman Build His Home?

There are almost no more low-price properties left near the City of Toronto where a thrifty workingman who wants to build his own home can afford to buy a lot. There is no reason why a workingman should pay rent when he can build a home in his spare time in the Summer and have it ready for occupation by Fall.

HALF HOLIDAY ON SATURDAY

"Everyone Must Be Pleased With His Work," Said Old Law, "Consequently No One Must Overwork,"

The Saturday half holiday is customarily regarded as a modern innovation. Ask any old person and he will tell you that he can remember when all laborers worked on the seventh day of the week, just as on every other dayfrom the blowing of the whistle at 7 o'clock in the morning until 6 o'clock, or later, in the evening. The shortening of the regular working day to eight hours, with freedom on Saturday after

MRS. WALDORF ASTOR A NERVOUS BREAKDOWN

LONDON, June 21.—Friends of Mrs. Waldorf Astor, who was one of the beautiful Langhorne sisters of Virginia, are very much exercised over her health. Mrs. Astor has retired to her country home at Rest Harrow, the victim of a nervous break down and will be unable to take part in the season's galeties. While her physicians say there is nothing seriously the matter with her, they have ordered a complete rest. Those who are in the confidence of Mrs. Astor say that she seriously undermined her constitution while helping her husband in his campaign for parliament.

By doing this it was believed the king could protect his own interests, in addition to those of the people against unscrupulous employers. An English statute, made by Henry IV. in the early part of the fifteenth century fixed the legal hours of the country laborers from five in the morning until 7 in the evening from March until Sen-7 in the evening from March until September; but, from September until the following March they were only to work from "the springing of the day until the night of the same day." They were always to have half an hour for breakfast and an hour and a half for dinner, with the privilege of a van from Mey fast and an nour and a nan, for May with the privilege of a nap, from May until August; and were to work on Sat-urdays only until 12 noon. using the garden as a recruiting station. Some forlorn pussy, who found this royal haven, must have passed the good word along, for cats of all sizes and description, and some which could not be described, have taken up a hegira to the palace garden.

There is no telling where all this would have ended had not Queen Mary, the other day, tripped several times over the bewildered felines. She has ordered their deportation, and Princess Mary is in tears.

The shops on Sundays and holidays was forbidden.

The old law also explicitly stated that work after Saturday at noon was to be strictly prohibited, and that "a pair of stocks be in every town," that employers who worked their people overtime might be thrust into them. Because there was a Saturday half holiday, however, it must not be thought that this afternoon was given for recreation. Indeed not—it was bathing time for the greater part of the community.

Most barbarians, judged by modern standards, were anything but cleanly in their personal habits. In England France and Germany bathing was an alliost unknown custom until after the Crusades. CROP PROSPECTS THE PARAMOUNT INFLUENCE IN STOCK MARKETS

Much Will Depend on Developments in Next Month—Wall Street Fears Further Reaction in Business Activity—Financial Outlook.

Hudson's weekly letter to Erickson, replans & Co. is as follows:

NEW YORK, June 20.—The crops are new paramount as influencing actors, both in the markets and a business. Rarely has it been so miortant that the crops should turn but well. Business sentiment demands hat sothing should occur which will cause a chill. Trade has been slowing down moderately, but not before yellowing and about a postably not all. With fair crops, reaction in trade would perhaps not go much further. President Wilson is reported as anxious to get a currency measure thru promptly, so as to off-set any possible misfortune, arising either from the crops, monetary train, or other sources. The currency measure, as announced, leaves considerable to be desired. Brakers, for obvious reasons, are not criticising it. The omission of bankers from the crops, monetary train, or other sources. BUYING STOCKS AT BARGAIN DAY PRICES

During Periods of Depression.

It is hoped that good regults will come from the recent deliberations with a mount of stock which has been bid, to stay sold, at the recently low rices. The evaporation of stock from Yall street is more or less constant; uying for investment purposes is going on thru bull markets and bear markets, with an increase occurring one times when prices are rising and at other times when prices are rising and at other times when they are falling. Wall street's habit is to think of a distribution of stocks chiefly by means of a bull market, and it constantly talks of the necessity of putting stocks up it, price to sell them sale of stocks does take place in a bull market, but people then usually any to sell again, and stocks sold do not stay sold, it is in a decling market, set that more stocks are actually distributed away from Wall street to stay, way, than ever in a bull market. People then buy them to keep.

The number of investors in the stocks of American corporations is greater today than at any previous lime in history. For years past the public has kept away from speculaion; but it has bought stocks outright, and in its present frame of mind is determined to stick to that course hereafter. But will it? Probably not. Iluman nature is still the same; and speculative opportunities always extite the speculative propensity. "Betcher ten to one Chapler is elected," said Gates one day to the group around a Waldorf ticker. "I'll take $100,000 of that, John," said a prominent speculator and mining man, who was a crony of thirty years standing of Gates', and who is still living. Gates held his ground, and the wager stood. He was in line to make $100,000 or lose $1,000,000.

On the morning of the election the mining man called on Gates. "John," he said, "I think you're going to lose that bet. Now, I'll tell you what I'll do. I don't want to make a million out of you, so I'll let it stand $10,000 to $100,000." Next day Gates promptly drew his check for $100,000 and handed it to his friend.

The extraordinary commercial growth of the United States which has given of the United States which has given New York this position can be understood easily by glancing back fifty years. In 1862, the imports of the whole nation were $189,356,677, or $5.79 per capita, as against $16.94 per capita in 1912. The total experts both domestic and foreign for 1862 were $190,670,-501, or a per capita of $5.83 as compared with a per capita of $22.41 in 1912. It will thus be seen that the commerce of the entire United States fifty years ago, was less than one-fourth of the commerce of the single Port of New York, in the year 1912.

The bank as established will be governed by a board of nine directors, only three of whom of nine directors, only three of whom will be connected with the national 15.00 banks and all the federal reserve banks 1,238.00 thrugut will be under the direct control of a central board of seven, con sisting of the secretary of the trea sury, the secretary of agriculture, the comptroller of the currency and four others to be named by the president, and confirmed by the senate. Drastic powers of inspection over the federal reserve banks will be exercised by the central board, and the federal reserve banks in turn will have sweeping powers of inspection and inquisition over the national banks. Expanding the Currency.

More interesting to the public than any other feature is the machinery provided for expanding the currency of the country in times of stress. The great defect of the American currency system since the civil war has been 203.75 its rigidity; it has had no capacity t 2,550.00 expand and contract with the seasons 350.00 the movement of crops and so forth. To 375.00 find a remedy was difficult. For reasons the Democratic party at least could not create a "United States Bank" like the Bank of England or the Bank of France; neither was it possible to import the Scotch or Canadian banking systems, because the people here are determined that their government and not the banks must control their cur-rency; again it was agreed that the present makeshift system of the government depositing money and buying bonds to relieve the market would have to be abandoned, especially as it only benefited New York.

Half a Billion Issue. The plan worked out by Presiden Wilson and his advisers retains the issue of currency in the hands of the government, but provides for its expanding to meet the demands of country and guards against its being will be issued thru the federal reserve banks upon a deposit of prime com-

A Favorable Factor.

The decision of Germany and France to discourage as far as possible new bond issues, particularly of other countries, should have a good effect in the money market. The refusal of France to lend to Bulgaria and Servia, until they have settled their differences, will be productive of good. A definite ending of the Balkan trouble would bring out much of the hoarded money, which at present is in hiding.

The change of government was brought about by the defeat of the Labor party, which had been in power since 1910, by the Liberals, who, however, received only a slight majority at the recent general elections, which were fiercely contested.

BUYING IS LIMITED

At such times as the present, when the buying is limited the cautious invesses his opportunity to pick up mining issues. Just as soon as the demand increprices will rise, and shares bought new will be available for sale at a profit. Extended the price down for the purpose of accumulation, it is very doubtful when PETERSON LAKE would be offered at 23 ½. These shares should be bought held. Act promptly and investigate. One Hundred Dollars, by itself, will not buy much, as a rule, in the way of an investment, but One Hundred Dollars from three hundred different people will enable you to participate in the big investments, share and share

Now, then, our proposition is simply this:

You buy the land in acres; we subdivide and sell the land in lets, as your agents, on commission. Acre price for forty acres is thirty thousand. Lot price is one hundred and thirty-five thousand dollars. Shares are one hundred dollars each. When syndicate is complete, we have practically three hundred shareholders as sub-agents, helping to boost and sell our lots. All moneys are payable to prominent trustees until property is absolutely paid for, and a good and absolute title to the land is given to shareholders, which is their security. Dividends payable every three months. Should pay at least two hundred and twenty-six per cent, and principal back within a year. You appoint your own accountant to audit books and pay dividends as lots are sold. Not mere than five shares allowed to one person. Further details can be obtained by writing ership of a progressive president. The Democratic senators and representatives on the whole are giving him goed support and many of the Republican members are beginning to feel restless under their party's stand-pat yoke. Annow the supreme court has climbed into the band wagon. A few years ago a big corporation never felt entirely at ease till it arrived at the dear of the supreme court room; to-day the big corporations are being dear of the supreme court room; today the big corporations are being dragged to the capitol by the various

The Post, for many years, has been regarded as the daily society organ, and the price is said to be

Si,250,000.

The Morning Post was the property of Lord Glensk, until he died four years ago. He left it to his daughter, Lady Bathurst, from whom Mrs. Astor bought it. It has long been sought after by various newspaper kings, among them Lord Northcliffe.

When, several years ago, Lord Northcliffe got a controlling interest in The Times, he made a splendid offer to Lord Glensk, it is said, for The Post.

Somehow or other, Walter and other chief owners of the paper eluded a personal interview. At last Mr. Astor wrote, making a definite offer of $5,000,000 for the exclusive

LONDON, June 21.—There is a good as Lord Grimthorpe, he joined the axiom for politicians: "When attacked, smile, and keep on smiling." You will find no more radiant man in the house of commons today than Colonel John Seely, minister for war. This is partly due to sunburn, for he has the complexion of a red Indian. It is the complexion of a red Indian.

Mars. Astor bought it. It has long been sought after by various newspaper kings, among them Lord Northcliffe.

By the next post he received the astonishing reply that The Times was not for sale, but the owners were ready to make an exceptional sacrifice and let him have it for $20,000,000.

As a matter of fact, it was not possible to sell The Times, as the different columns were owned by different persons. This was only overcome some years later, when the concern was formed into a company.

Mr. Astor, determined not to be flouted, offered and obtained The Pail Mall Gazette for whitch he paid the John Seely, minister for war. Phis is partly due to sunburn, for he has the complexion of a red Indian. It is chiefly due to the fact that a lot of Liberals want him to be ousted from the cabinet, and he does not intend to go. He is suspected of being too much of an imperialist for a Radical minister. They would like Mr. John Burns to be at the head of the army.

Many peaceful gentlemen who sit behind the treasury bench and are fond of Germany, are remembering that the two political chiefs of our war services, the navy and the army, were reared in the Conservative camp. Mr. Churchill and Col. Seely, were soldiers and Conservative M. P.'s before they joined the Liberal party. It is thought they have not quite cast the opinions of their political youth, and that they still beglieve in the efficacy of warships and big guns to settle international disputes. The olive branch brigade, led by Sir William Byles, are shocked when they think that both the war minister and the first lord of the admiralty should have come out of Tory nests.

Connaught Park Meeting

The Connaught Park meeting, which closed Saturday at Otta-wa, was successful in every rewhich closed Saturday at Ottawa, was successful in every respect. The weather was favorable thruout the seven days of the meeting and the racing was first-class in every particular. The plant is one of the finest on the continent, and no inaugural meeting was ever held over a better track. It is too bad, however, that the leading owners did not send their best horses to take part in the racing, as there was an absence of really high-class horses, both in the open events and in races for Canadian-bred and Canadianowned horses. Some of the owners were afraid of the new track, but there was really no grounds for their fears.

The success of the opening meeting has been most encouraging to the directors of the Connaught Park Jockey Club, who, to show their appreciation of the patronage, will add to the value of future events to be decided at the new track.

A comparison of the Toronto baseball team's record with that of last year shows a marked deterioration all round. On June 21, 1912, the Leafs occupied fifting position in the league, with a total of 27 games won and 26 lost, a little better than an even percentage, while from that time forward they steadily improved their position. This year they are in last place, with 22 games won and 35 lost.

The batting is not up to last year, the heavy hitters of a year ago not doing a fallen off, both in number of hits and in long-distance slugging. He has but one have two each. The team batting is .240, while they have stolen 41 bases, Fitzpatrick and Bradley are close to it.

Two of the Leafs—Northen and Shultz—are in the .300 list, while Fitzpatrick and Bradley are close to it.

The pitchers are all very low in the percentages, Lush leading with .231.

However, it is the lack of speed exhibited by the team as a whole on the bases, more than the falling off in the batting, that must be held accountable for the difference in the standing.

The batting averages are:

ST. The suspension is indefinite. The hundred-dollar bill offered by a fan for continuous good conduct, one-half of which Zimmerman held, will now also be but a vanished dream.

The singles match between R. B. Powell, the Canadian captain, and V. R. Gauntlett of South Africa, was abandoned.

HAL CHASE BRILLIANT PLAYER OTHERWISE COMPLETE FAILURE

Famous First-Sacker Could Not Stand Success-Frank Chance Had to Let Him go -Now on the Toboggan.

NEW YORK, June 21.—The passing of Hal Chase from New York should furnish a very striking object lesson to the profession of organized baseball. It should impress upon the playing fraternity the value of sincerity of pur-Chase left New York without one regret from fandom. It is true that he has made friends here during his eight years of service. But not the stoutest of these would attempt to argue tha of these would attempt to argue that his departure was a mistake on the part of Frank Chance. The enemies that Chase has made since the beginning of the season—and they are legion—exulted in his downfall. They were out (it is to be regretted), to jeer at the fallen idol of his local popularity. These loyal few who tried to encourage Chase when he made his first appearance with the White Sox in this city did so fully convinced that Prince Hal had absolutely outlived his usefulness as a New York asset.

Few there are who heartily wish Chase ill in his new sphere. There have been too few ball players of his have been too few ball players of his calibre. Never again, perhaps, may there ever be such a brilliant first there ever be such a brilliant first baseman, as this native son, when he was in his prime. Chase was the quickest man mentally and physically, that ever doined a spiked shoe. He had as great prospects as Ty Cobb or Joe Jackson. But he was cursed with too much temperament. He simply would not or could not remain steadfast in the purpose to give his club fast in the purpose to give his club and his manager the best services at his command. For brief periods he would outshine the brilliant Cobb or the serious Jackson, then he would lose interest apparently and slump off into medicertive.

New York fandom is imbued with New York fandom is imbued with the impression that Chase "laid down" on Frank Chance. His work with the White Sox in this city went far to explode that theory. It is reasonable to suppose that he did his very best against the club which to his mind humiliated him. If the best he showed here is the best that is lifet in him Hal may have been wrongly judged. The secret lies in the fact that he has gone back; gone back so far that he gone back; gone back so far that he is but a shadow of his old self. And if this is really so Hal Chase has overlooked the golden opportunity of shap-ing the most notable career of diamond

Be that as it may, the truth remains that Chase never did himself mains that Chase never did himself justice, even when he was New York's popular idol. He was not always true to his employer, to his club, or to himself. His whole career has been blighted by acts of disloyalty. In 1908, when the team was a hopeless tail-ender, and most needed him, he jumped his contract and went to the coast, to play outlaw baseball. He was prompted to this action because Elberfeld, a personal enemy, was selected as manager to succeed Clark Griffith. That was the first intimation Chase gave of managerial ambition. Later, at the expense of George Stallings—who proved his worth, despite the ob-

Because he refused to take himself or his duties seriously. Chase passed up the opportunity of a lifetime. Integrity at that time might have spelled for Hal the success of a McGraw or Chance-

McGraw or Chance.

Doubtless the fault does not lie entirely at Chase's door. He came into the league a mere boy, and at the same time the most remarkable performer time the most remarkable performer ever seen on a diamond. So great was his natural proclivities, that he was the superior of all rivals the moment he made his debut. For him, there had been no painful struggles thruthe minors. He was the greatest living genius of his craft, and, as such, commanded the admiration of all managers and veterans grown gray in harness. The adulation of New York's millions, the loud acclaims of every city he visited, no doubt turned the head of the youth. Everywhere he went he was made so much of, that it was but natural for him soon to regard himself as a being soon to regard himself as a being of superior clay.

New York spoiled Chase. Unfortunately for him, the hero worshippers who surrounded him, embraced one fan who had more money than common acts. Africa in the elimination round for the selection of a challenger for the Dwight F. Davis lawn tennis trophy when B. F. Schwengers of British Columbia beat R. F. cause he was the exceptional asset. He drew many additional thousands of dollars into the gate wherever he went. Ban Johnson did not want him "black-listed"; it would have been a serious blow to his American league. And when Ban was willing to resort to subterfuge in order to have this eccentric first baseman restored to good standing, why should Frank Farrell, more directly concerned, stand in the way? Farrell him-self would never have sought out Chase. He declared himself emphatically on that point at the time of Hal's desertion. Now, when even the national commission put its seal upon the malcon-tent, as someone beyond the pale of organized baseball law, should Chase be blamed for subsequent develop-ments? Hardly. That of itself made him more powerful than any manager Frank Farrell ever engaged, until Frank Chance hove in view. The peer less leader simply would not stand for Hal's indifference. He had to go. And I guess no one was more surprised than Chase when notified of his release to Chicago. The beginning of the end of Chase came in Bermuda, during the training season. Hal's ankle was badly sprained in a practice game. That same day he was out riding a bi-cycle, in the teeth of the trainer's orders to remain in bed. That same night he rode the bicycle again, fell sion that reforms are needed in the manner of conducting the sport in this state. A big mistake was made in the first place by ex-Governor Dix in placing men of no experience in professional boxing on the commission. The law has many provisions which require the knowledge of men who have been allied with professional sports to determine and enforce. However, Mr. O'Neil's tardy announcement that reforms are necessary should cause us to rejoice in the knowledge that at least one member of the commission has at last begun to sit up and take notice of the needs of the sport. A rule authorizing decisions will help largely to renew popular interest; it is up to the match-makers to do the rest.

about his dealings with world-famous colored heavyweights when in San Francisco recently.

A great deal of what "Mac" had to relate brought very little of pleasant recollection to him, but there were a few incidents of his business connections with the "darkles" which caused the Antipodean showman to grin broadly.

When McIntosh, who was in London at the time, first conceived the idea of taking Jack Johnson to Australia to box Tommy Burns for the world's championehip, it did not take the promoter long to discern that he had a hard task on his hands.

Johnson, who was spending his time filttling between London and Paris, was eager enough in a way to have a try at the championship, but he hated to leave the fleshpots of England and the wine cups of gay Paree.

E He was brought to the point of signing contracts and articles several times but he always contrived to delay matters and finally McIntosh had serious thoughts of abandoning his project.

One particular day matters looked far more favorable. McIntosh had placed things in such a light that Johnson seemed ready to sign up and the pair jumped into a cab and started for the office of McIntosh's lawyer where Having in view the stubbernness displayed by managers, Joe Levy and Billy Nolan, when the weights for the "heavy lightweight" contest between Joe Rivers and Willie Ritchie were being fixed, fear is expressed by sundry sporting men that something may yet go wrong with the Fourth of July match.

There is really no cause for uneasiness. Very often when the rival managers seem flying at each other's throats, a perfect understanding exists and everything has been mapped out beforehand.

Depend on it, if anything goes wreng with the Ritchie-Rivers bout, it won't be caused by a squabble between manstep softly to avoid any causes to in-terfere with the growth of public interest and affect the advance sales,

Whisky YEARS OLD. TORONTO SUNDAY MORNING JUNE 22 1913

PRICE FIVE CENTS

It's a funny thing how particular we are about the tackle as we get up in years and how little difference it seems to make in the catch, compared to the old days when we skipped the morning chores and grabbed any old fishin' pole at dawn.

The flight of years but deepens the enchantment of those early days and no matter how good the sport in our maturer years we will never experience the same electric thrill that heralded the landing of our first big trout.

Here's a few verses from an old angler's song that seem as fresh as ever:

"As inward love breeds outward talk
The hound some praise and some the hawk;
Some, better pleas'd with private sport,
Use tennis, some a mistress court.

But these delights I neither wish, Nor envy while I freely fish.

"Who hunts doth oft in danger ride,
Who hawks lures oft both far and
Who uses game shall often prove
A loser; but who falls in love
Is fetter'd in fond aunid's spare

Is fetter'd in fond cupid's snare, My angle breeds me no such care.

"Of recreation there is none so Free as fishing' is alone,

All other pastimes do no less
Than mind and body both possess;
My hand alone my work can do,

So I can fish and study too." Quaint old Izaak Walton, the London haberdasher, whose love of fishing and of nature made his Complete Angler one of the classics of English literature, described the sport as the contemplative man's recreation. As if that were not enough of itself to commend his dissertation on the gentle art he adorned the title page of his first edition with part of that verse of the New Testament which reads-"Simon Peter saith unto them, I go a fishing. They say unto him, we also go with thee." The verse was apt for Walton's first chapter opens with a charming sense of natural beauty. Walking up Highgate Hill he, in the character of Piscator meets with Venator a young huntsman and Auceps, a devotee of the old-time sport of hawking.

As they travel together they fall to discussing the merits of their several pastimes. In this Piscator easily prevails over Venator but cannot wean Auceps from his special diversion.

When he leaves, the old fisherman and his new disciple continue their walk and Piscator undertakes to introduce Venator into all the mysteries and delights of the angling art. In chapter after chapter the reader wanders with them beside rippling rivers and still streams learning much of the curious speculations regarding natural life which passed for knowledge in Walton's day and obtaining information on the subject of seventeenth century cookery. We stop with them at the oldtime inns, at the flower covered cottages and listen to the songs of the dairymaids and the tender counsel of the elder of the two friends. Over all the book there lingers a spirit of serenity an appreciation of the beauties of the country and a simple piety that refreshes the mind and purifies the heart.

In Walton's time little was heard of the humanitarian ideas that are common enough today. In one chapter he is telling his pupil how to bait a hook with a live frog and says—"Handle your frog gently as if you loved him." This raised the ire of Lord Byron who in a stanza of Don Juan, says:—

"That quaint, old, cruel, coxcomb in his gullet"
Should have a hook and a small trout to pull it."

Dr. Sam Johnson, in his dictatorial way dismissed angling as nothing but a worm at one end of the line and a fool at the other. But he was a city man like Charles Lamb-never happy unless in and about Fleet street and The Strand. But he who prefers to be penned in city streets and lanes knows nothing of the delight that comes to the angler who spends his day and sometimes his night on rivers and streams. And these are all so different for every country, in Britain even every county has an individuality of its own. The brawling, rushing rivers of Scotland, the quiet pellucid streams of the chalk district of England, the sluggish waters of the Midlands all have their peculiar charm to the angler and the nature lover. So Canada has her own individuality. and the wide range of her Dominion presents greater contrasts. But wherever there are streams and brooks, the Heaven above and earth glories around there will be found the disciples of Izaak Walton.

The Pullman Car Iniquity

In Pearson's Magazine for July Charles Edward Russell delivers a slashing attack on the Pullman Car Company, the character of the cars and its fictitious capitalization. Certainly he does not spare this company which started as the Pullman Palace Car Company in 1867 with a capital of $100,000 for the purpose of operating cars with collapsible seats. This idea was not due to the founder, George F. Pullman, who "never invented the sleeping car nor the berth in it nor anything else and of course he never created anything." Credit for collapsing two car seats into a couch really belongs to a poor carpenter in Chicago who, equally of course, died penniless and unknown. Pullman, however, surmised that the idea could be exploited and succeeded so well that out of the original investment "and out of what Mr. Adams calls the 'cynical tolerance of this public' has grown a corporation with $120,000,000 of capital, that has made more money on a smaller service rendered and more money on a smaller risk and a smaller original capital than any other corporation that ever existed."

Regarding the Pullman sleeping car system Mr. Russell has nothing but unqualified condemnation. He opens his article by relating an incident occurring in his own experience one night in July, 1912, when "coming out of Oakland, California, on the Oregon Express, a far-famed triumph of railroad luxury and speed that on down grades sometimes attains to a velocity of almost a mile in three minutes." On the train was a young Englishman and his sister who that night received their initiation into the mysteries and barbarities of the Pullman sleeper very much to their personal discomfort and dissatisfaction. Mr. Russell proceeds-"As a rule nothing else observed of us by our visitor from abroad creates such an unfavorable impression, even our most sympathetic critic cannot overlook such a significance. Let's be frank and own this disgraceful fact. It is not merely that the American sleeping car is uncomfortable and extortionate; it is so indecent, primitive, rural and jay that our mere tolerance of a device involving such publicities and promiscuities is a reflection upon our place among the civilized nations."

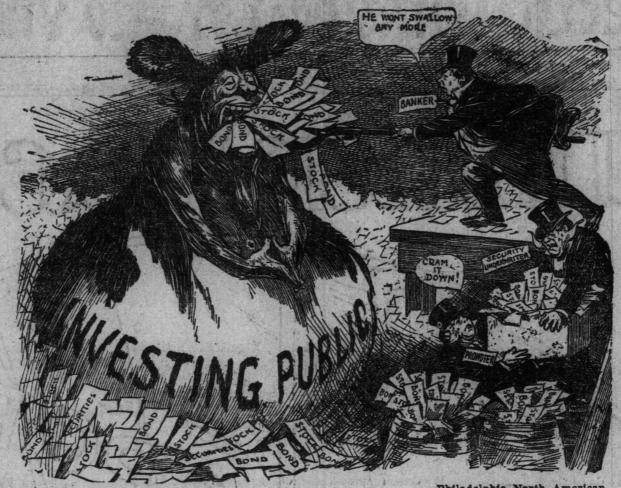

"Nowhere else." continues Mr. Russell, "in the world is woman compelled to retire with no more privacy than the shelter of the same curtain that also conceals a man, most often a stranger to her. Nowhere else is she expected to parade halfclad before a car-full of men as she struggles to get to a dressing-room overcrowded and filthy. The whole thing is an abomination. It is as much a monstrous parody upon comfort as it is upon the basic requirements of civilized life." Indeed except for some trumpery decorations the American sleeping car of to-day is just the "primitive and wretched makeshift" it was when first devised fifty years ago. Instead of sitting out the weary nights hours a crude device enabled passengers to recline. Then and for many years afterwards nobody undressed in a sleeping car berth. Passengers merely reclined there instead of sitting up. Now in the twentieth century the people of this continent are condemned to suffer the abomination of a Pullman sleeping car when other nations have cars that provide not only comfort but privacy and decency.

One of the companies absorbed by the Pullman company during its career of melon cutting and stock watering was the Mann Boudoir Car Company which, says Mr. Russell, "operated the only sane and reasonable sleeping car that had ever been used on American railroads." It provided closed compartments instead of open berths and its introduction seriously threatened the Pullman supremacy. With the consolidation of the two companies the Mann cars were withdrawn and were not long afterwards bought by the government of New South Wales for its state-owned railroads. There were not enough of them and its agents also bought several of the regular Pullman cars. These latter the Australian public refused to tolerate and they had to be withdrawn and rebuilt after the Mann pattern. "And today an American traveling in Australia may ride in the comfortable and convenient sleepers that were built in his own country and shipped hence because they threatened to interfere with the graft of the Pullman company and its great dividends paid on watered stocks."

By 1875 the Pullman company had increased its capital stock to $5,938,200 on which 8 per cent. dividends were being made. This had been done while redeeming from earnings bonds amounting in all to $870,000 and piling up an annual surplus. In 1881 a new stock issue of $2,000,000 was made to the stockholders at par, the market price being 145 while the dividend that year was 91/2 per cent. Other issues under similar conditions were made in 1886 and 1887 and in 1889 when all the other sleeping car companies, except the Wagner (Vanderbilt concern) were taken over, an issue of $5,000,000 of new stock was made at par the market price being 200. In all these have its way to any greater extent than the years the company was paying dividends of from 8 to 91/2 per cent. In 1891 another $5,000,000 was issued at par, market price 196 and in 1893 $6,000,000, market price 200. Again in 1898 the company declared a cash dividend of 20 per cent. out of surplus in addition to the regular dividend of 8 per cent. and then a stock dividend of 50 per cent. bringing the capital stock up to $54,000,000.

In 1899 the consolidation with the Wagner company brought the Pullman capital up to $74,000,000 and a further stock dividend of 36 per cent. out of surplus profits watered the stock by $26,000,000 to $100,000,000. "On this capitalization, about three fourths of which was purely water, the company continued to pay 8 per cent. dividends and to accumulate a sur- in order that they may study the problems of plus as before. If one man had owned the entire concern from the beginning his annual income from it would now be greater than all the money he ever invested in it." Not content with this on March 21, 1910 a new stock dividend of 20 per cent. was announced to take up the accumulated surplus, and that in addi- he has encountered and will give him a better tion to the usual cash dividend, bringing the capitalization to chance to cope successfully with the opposi-$120,000,000 "and it may be doubted if as much as $20,000,000 tion that has made itself felt in the city counof this represented anything but water." It is not surprising cil when he has lifted the reform standard for to have Mr. Russell declare that "no other such gouging, profit- civic betterment. making, money-grabbing, institution exists in all this world.

SHIFTING THE CENTER

The indications are that the west will gain rapidly in influence upon the politics of the Dominion. No single province is ever likely to equal Ontario in wealth and population but it is quite likely that in time a majority of the members of the house of commons will be elected from west of Lake Superior. Ontario, New Brunswick, Nova Scotia and Prince Edward Island will have between them nine seats less in the next house than in the present while the west will return 57 members as against 25 returned at the general elections of 1904.

It is misleading to speak of the great population east of the Mississippi as compared. with the population west of the Mississippi in the United States as foreshadowing like conditions in Canada east and west of the Great Lakes. The eastern states have many advantages not possessed by our maritime provinces while on the other hand many of the far western states are incapable of supporting any-

That got all the revolutionary forces in belief.

Saturday Night is bothered about the meaning of Sannyasi. Well, a Sannyasi is to the Hindu what an Arhat is to the Buddhist, or a Saint to the Christian. As Saturday Night eptity observes, "it would appear that the physical and spiritual development of a Saint involves certain pressures experience about physical and spiritual development of a Saint involves certain practices abhorent to healthy civilizations." Perhaps I had better say that this is sarcasm. It was Dr. Magee, the Archbishop of York, who declared that any nation which tried to put the Sermon on the Mount in practice would not last six months. One really funny idiocy Saturday Night fell into was to have Leadbeater figuring in a scandal at Point Lome ring in a scandal at Point Lome-evidently Loma is meant. The chief plot play at the Colonial Theatre, West Queen street, was one in two parts, entitled "In the Claws

As the title implies, the story deals with a crok who gets his living by his wits. He undertakes to introduce a poor nobleman to a rich girl, on condition that he pays him $10,000 on the day her father dies, and an agreement is signed to that effect. The marriage is arranged, and, while on the honeymoon trip, the crook gets into the old man's house and poisons him with a needle concealed in his chair. After a time, the husband is reminded of his agreement, and is told that unless the money is paid with-in twelve hours, his wife will share the fate of her father. The man, who is now really in love with his wife, seeks to get time in which to obtain the money, but this is refused; but at the point of the revolver, he gets possession of the agreement, only, however, to become a prisoner in the hands of the thief's associates. To get out of his prison and save his wife, he burns the rope man, who seeks to destroy the happiness of a young married couple. His plot, however, is discovered, and the revenge of the couple makes the play extremely amusing.

Another comedy is "Clancy, the Artist's Model." Clancy is pressed into the service of an artist, as his model for his painting of an Indian on the warpath. While posing, he discovers a bottle of whisky, which he partakes of too freely, finally chasing the artist from the room for protection. Clancy then proceeds down stairs and scares a soldier with his sweetheart. The soldier seeks protection in the artist's studio, only to be again overtaken by the drunken Clancy. He is forced to change clothes, and the soldier is arrested, while Clancy meets with the same treatment for being drunk while wearing soldier's uniform "On Cuban Soil" is another splen did story in two parts, and deals with the Spanish-American war in Cuba, and shows the heroism of two young Americans in their attempt to save their flag from the hands of a jealous Spanish spy. "Battle of Bloody Ford" to Be Given at Rosedale Theatre This Week.

A splendid program was again furnished by the management of the U-Kum Theatre, Coliege street, and it is small wonder that seats are hard to get at any time.

The chief feature of an exceptionally fine set of pictures was "The Diamond Miniature," a comedy-drama dealing with the theft of a minute photo frame. A gentleman who is desirous of marrying a girl in high society endeavors to join the "Boosters' Club," whose motto it is to help all its members in their love affairs. One of the conditions of joining the secret society is that the nominee must obtain possession of something which is well guarded and on this occasion the man is told to get a miniature photograph fram studded with diamonds, which is kept under lock and key in his sweetheart's father's room. In order to make the job more difficult a detective is notified that the attempt will be made, and it is from then a fight of wits between the detective and lover. During the progress of a garden party the detective traces the lover to a room, the amateur thief hides behind some curtains and the detective waits for him. The thief then thinks of a brilliant idea of outwitting his enemy and places a balloon in the shape of a man in his place, and then proceeds with his business. Meanwhile the detective

QUITS GOVERNMENT JOB TO JOIN FILM COMPANY

Mr. L. S. Williams, for twenty-three years photographic expert of the United States Department of Agriculture in Washington, D.C., recently accepted an offer from the Universal Film Manufacturing Company to act as head of its new education department.

Mr. Williams has been with the department which he has just left, ever since its inception in 1890. His latest duties have been as chief of the division of illustrations and photography, a position that has given him superb appreciation of the powerful educa-tional and civilizing influence of the motion picture. Mr. Williams will con-tinue to make his headquarters in Washington, where he is assured the fullest co-operation of the United States Government in his new work which will carry education to the masses in the most attractive form. The Universal is arranging to release at an early date a series of films deal-ing with the manifold activities of the government. Couldn't Lose Tie Presented by Wife

The program at the Garden Theatre during the past week was up to the usual standard of this house. The place is packed night after night. The orchestra is one of the chief features, rendering some appropriate music, such as "Silver Threads Among the Gold." when an old lady is shown, and this helps the plays to a considerable extent

"Newcomb's Necktie" is an extreme ly funny story of a man who receives a gift of a necktie from his wife. The pattern is a trifle loud and causes merriment to his friends and disgust to himself. He tries to lose it in every way only to have it returned to him. He at last gets a loafer to steal it and his grief on reaching home was only consoled when a child buys a tie of the same pattern.

A drama of deep pathos is "Olaf, An Atom," and tells of a man with no ambition in life who tramps the country after the death of his wife. discovers a plot against a homesteader and warns him. In order to further help him he cuts the tires of the auto in which the men are traveling and allows the homesteader to get his titles filed before the plotters can harm him. In the extreme pleasure of the home-steader and his wife Olaf is forgotten and again becomes an atom.

One of the most beautiful series of views is that showing Manila and the scenes from the Bridge of Spain at sunset were extremely peautiful.

The chief item of the program, however, was "The Tragedy of the Eagle Mine," and told of a white man who married an Indian girl out of gratitude. A child is born to them, and the man then receives a call from his mother and he takes his child with him, leaving the poor Indian girl to wander the world alone. The years pass on and the boy gets married and with his wife he returns to his father's mine, but the work is too much for him and he sends for his father.
On the old man arriving he is immediately recognized by his wife and her brother, but he refuses to acknowledge her. Her brother then swears to be avenged, and while the whole company are inspecting the mine he blows it up and the boy is the only one saved, and is nursed back to health by his mother.

night; a never-ending caravan. Ploughing thru mud and water that was up to their hubs in many places, they never faltered or turned back. If bridges were out they went around. Darkness did not stop them. Neither hunger nor weariness caused them to tarry in their errands of mercy. They were as irresistible as the flood itself.

System of Operation.

System of Operations were quickly established, and from these the operations of all machines were under the word of the state, and covered the whole distance in an automobile. Secretary of War Garrison, sent by President Wilson from Washington, wound that trains would not carry him beyond Cincinnati, and so made the trip to Dayton in an automobile and the trip to Dayton in an automobile.

In Dayton two central stations were quickly established, and from these the operations of all machines were directed. On the east side of the

There was no means of communication, except by convice and no means of conveying. courier, and no means of conveying the couriers except by automobile. dropping a soldier at one corner and picking up one at the next. And following the lighter cars came the trucks, maybe carrying a hundred militiamen; maybe loaded down with a cargo of food supplies, maybe with barrels of lime for disinfecting purposes. They were street cars trains.

When Major Thomas L. Rhoads arrived from Washington to take charge of the sanitation work, the first thing he asked for was an automobile, and helpless survivors.

With muscles and tendons that knew no weariness they skirted the edge of angry rivers on whose raging crests wooden bridges bobbed like corks, until they gained a stouter crossing that had breasted the torpent's onrush, and then went tearing the first food supplies from out of two minutes later he was making a preliminary survey of the flood; trucks from Springfield, Kenia, Richmond, Ind., and other neighboring of the towns. A Right Established right to rank as one of the greatest agencies of progress and civilization. Every doubt that was ever expressed and every question that was ever asked as to the probability of the automobile finding a place among modern man's absolute necessities was answered a dozen times over in this answered a dozen times over in this flood. Here arose a great human need, and the motor car was present to answer it as nothing else could have done. In the absence of this great addition to improved machinery the cries of imperied thousands would have been lifted in vain, and countless lives that were saved would have been numbered among the dead. Every man who has contributed to whatever form, ought to take great pride in this knowledge; ought to feel that he added his share to those causes that are constantly uniting to make this a better world, and ours find an enduring reward in the sure knowledge that they gave something of real and lasting value to the world, and that they truly served their fellow men of this generation, and of count-

Some were sent by train, and others, impatient at the prospect of delay, started across country. A Fuel Economizer.

From time to time we hear of motorists who have gotten wonderful increase in power and reductions in consumption of gasoline by doctoring their fuel with various chemicals. Picric acid has been mentioned, but science here steps in and says that the only possible result of the use of this medium would be a choked jet and corroded carburater. Now, however, comes an English motorist with the statement in our contemporary The Motor, that he has achieved some very remarkable results by using comphor in his gasoline. He says in part:

ing camphor in his gasoline. He says in part:

"I have been using camphor in my gasoline for the last five months in the proportion of 1 oz of camphor to five gallons of gasoline. My experience is as follows: My engine, which was very difficult to start, now starts very easily. I can now go up hills on top speed which I could not do previously to using camphor, and, moreover. I find that I do not use so much petrol for a given mileage. These are the main points of my experience with the use of camphor: Last week I stopped using the camphor to see what difference it would make, and I what difference it would make, and I was very glad to use the camphor again, as I found we did not travel nearly so well, and the engine was so much more difficult to start.

ordinary tires. The Air-Bag Cure which, we believe, is used only by us adds 50 cents per tire to our costs. But it adds a strength that we could not get by old curing methods.

Each Tire is wrapped with cotton and inflated during the cure. This stretches the fabric to the exact size and shape it will assume in service. While the fabric is being stretched to the limit the rubber sets "at normal."

When this tire is inflated in actual use it meets with no new strains. The air pressure is equally distributed. It cannot find a weak spot.

And note this. The rubber is not stretched. That is why Goodyear Tires are so lively.

Note this also. The Goodyear process gives the thick tread the proper tough-ness without overcuring the thin side

Now remember. No-Rim-Cut Tires saved the waste of rim-cutting. Also, they provided for overloading, and thus added, on the average, 25 per cent. extra mileage. Goodyear Building and Curing methods add extra miles to this extra-mileage tire.

The result is, over 2,000,000 No Rim-Cut Tires have been sold to Canadian and American Car Owners. Why not follow the lead of these men? Why not get the Goodyear mileage?

Dear Sir: The enclosed clipping is from your last Sunday World, and seems to be the press opinion regarding the hill climb in Hamilton on the 24th of May. The Hamilton papers protest the car after the event.

The committee of the Hamilton Automobile Club debated for some little time as to whether they would allow their original ruling to this protest stand. They finally concluded that they would do so, and they would also award a special prize, equal in value and appearance to the original trophy, to the Pope-Hartford, and, further, that they would advise the protestee that, in awarding him the trophy in answer to his protest, they did so with the request that it be not used for advertising purposes in any way.

A good many were not aware that the fifteen-mile limit applied to towns and villages as well as to cities. The real cause of trou-ble, however, is due to the absence of signs showing the village limits. The league is going to see that signs are erected showing where village begins and ends, in order that motorists may of the roads of the middle west, Eldon Rookledge and William West, driving R-C-H car Number Two, arrived in Toronto last week, drawing near the finish of their transcontinental trip from Los Angeles to New York. The car attracted no end of attention on its progress through the city and wherever stops were made, blocked traffic by the crowds that surrounded it.

The tourists have had a novel trip from the coast. Only one night until Kansas City was reached did they sleep in a hotel. A complete camping outfit was carried and headquarters were made wherever darkness overtook them.

No effort to make time was made, the round about route taking them through Mexico before reaching Kansas City. From Kansas City they came east via St. Louis to Indianapolis in time for the big race Memorial Day and from there going to Chicago before pointing for Detroit, and then on across Canada

Heretofore, it has been the usual custom to refrain from transcontinental touring until late in the summer because of the improvement in road conditions. The trip is being made under unique conditions. The car used is privately owned, having been recently purchased by Mr. Rookledge. It is the second car turned out of the R-C-H plant, having been completed in November, 1911. It was then shipped to the coast as a demonstrator and in this service covered practically all of Southern California, and before leaving on the transcontinental trip had a total register of over 35,000 miles to its credit. For the past six months the car has been kept going in racing events, being the same R-C-H machine which won a special trophy for its splendid work in the road race which opened the new Owensmouth course two months ago. This is believed to be the first time that a car which has taken part in such racing events has been carried up to go through so strenuous a reliability test as that of crossing the continent. The car was left in racing trim for the journey across the continent with the addition of a huge baggage box on the rear which with supplies and passengers brought the total weight of the car up to 2950 pounds on the road.

No accident or mishap of any kind occurred to may the pleasure of the trip. The car came through desert sands and across mountains without any trouble beyond punctures, a performance which speaks volumes for its sturdiness.

first race meet on June 14 was a huge s uccess. A crowd of about 6000 turned out and were well rewarded in the thrills and spills which kept one's blood coursing thruout the afternoon. Harold Cole again showed superior courage in defeating Joe Baribeau in the first and last professional races. Joe's machine was easily the fastest, but Cole took chances, and the result was an even draw for each of these game boys. Cole's control on sharp turns is simply marvelous, and viewed from close quarters his work on the west turn of the track would have quickened the pulse of a stone man. His victory in the fifteen-mile event, when he broke the record by five and two-fifth seconds, brought the entire stand to its feet in wild cheering. Wilmer Duff, the "dark horse" amateur rider of the race meet last Saturday was such a success. In fact, the increase in membership, along with future prospects, will 'necessitate larger club quarters, and a committee was appointed to make enquiries as to a suitable hall further up-town. Herb Hodgkinson and Clif. Olmstead, the newly-elected president and secretary, occupied their new offices. A membership campaign was launched, and suitable rewards will be given to the boys who bring in the greatest number of new members. Myles ard Scott were game alright, but Duff always had a little speed left, and carried off the honors in all four amateur events. Ernie Montosh would make somebody hustle if he had a special machine like Cole and Baribeau, and Duff also looks like a coming "pro." from the way he negotiates the local track. Altogether Toronto's speed boys are hard to beat and altho many Yankee cracks have been brought over to try and defeat them none have managed to do so conclusively as yet.

Pavlowa to Give Special Performances

Sussian Dancer Yields to Requests to Appear Before Student Bodies.

Paviowa may give a series of special erformances at universities in this ing here again many women's colleges and co-educational universities have asked Mr. Max Rabinoff, managing director of her American tour, that she visit them for performances for the faculty and student bodies.

But owing to the nature of Pavlowa's American tour, it was thought impossible for her to pay these visits. A few days ago, however, Prof. Lincoln Hutchinson of the University of Cali-Hutchinson of the University of California met Pavlowa in London by appointment, and asked her to appear in the open air Greek theatre at Berkeley. She cabled her managers, asking if it could be arranged, and expressing a wish to give performances at colleges whenever possible. Accordingly plans are now being made to add a few week's to I'avlowa's stay in this country to enable her to appear at certain universities that have requested it.

LONDON, June 21.—How shall Great Britain deal with the militant suffragettes? That is the question that is perplexing Premier Asquith: Home Secretary McKenna, the Right Hon David Lloyd George, chancellor of the exchequer, and innumerable other 'right honorables" who occupy posttions of public responsibility. There is too; altho they aren't quick to admit it. The question is: What next? That is just it. What will be the next move by the militants? At just what moment may the right nonorable home secretary expect to David Lloyd George, find himself surrounded by a mob of the "mad women," as the English call them, clamoring for his life, or clamoring for the ballot, or both?

Tense Situation. The situation is becoming tense. In fact, it is becoming tenser every moment. Something is going to break soon; and, as evidence of the well-foundedness of that belief, English-men point to the sacrifice of Emily Davison, the militant, who gave her life to ruin Derby Day. Derby Day, it may be mentioned, is sacred with Englishmen. "Deucedly bad form, don't-y'-know, for a bally suffragette to seize the King's horse. Er-rather extreme, one might call it. One wouldn't mind a bit of spoofing, yknow; but when they interfere with the spectacle of Derby Day, by Jove, it's going a bit too far. They jolly well deserve to be taken into custody, and be fed with a bally pipe fown their throats. This thing really must be stopped, y'know." An American journalist, on a visit to London, suggested that the suf-

What France Would Do. An English writer, in a prominent magazine, asserts that, if Christabel ankhurst were French, she would be either in prison or in the Argentine Republic, "for the French authorities would certainly not have considered her case with kid gloves. If Christabel were French," went on this writer, in an effort to tell what the French would do with the mili-tants, "the authorities would ask for her extradition on the ground that she had incited to various breakages of the law, to arson, and other attacks upon property, which are no less criminal than picking a pocket or stealing the silver, when the but-ers back is turned. Under existing conditions, the will of the people gets as little attention paid to it as in the old pre-reform days. Scotland is now beginning to feel, in all its intensity, the evils of centralization. Readers of De Tocque-ville will remember how clearly he traces the evils which brought about the decay of France to centralization. The provinces were neglected, agri-culture was ruined, and as a result, wholesale misery so inflammable that it only needed the revolutionary spark

On the other hand, in the decade 1900-1910 the number of If Scotland had control of her affairs, in her own parliament, long years ago, the land monopoly would have been broken up. Thanks to the union, Scottish land owners got the support of their English brethren, and t is only now that land reform, in the same in this as in the preceding decade. In 1910 the pure Caucasian element numbered 44.048, constituting the shaps of the Small Holdings Act, is in operation. Meanwhile, every week thousands of sturdy Scots are leav-ing their native land for the colonies and America, while thousands of acres are reserved for the pleasures of the idle rich. The simple truth is, the abolution the old parliament completely of the old parliament completely checked the rapid strides which Scotland was making in civilization. For evidence of this, I refer to the testimony of Alison, the Tory historian, already referred to. In November, Hawaiians; and 3.7 per cent were of 1834, the famous historian contribut-ed an article to Blackwood's Magato 44 years, inclusive—decreased in number from 72,596 in 1900 to 70,962 in 1910. Democratic Progress Checked. A recent writer, who has gone in-to the subject in detail, points out that practically all that England got after the terrific struggle by the great reform bill of 1832, the old Scottish thought. As the manifesto of the parliament had secured quietly, with-Scottish national committee puts it: out agitation or bloodshed, on their own initiative, two or three cen-turies earlier. For instance, in 1448 an act was passed for the protec of the cultivators of the soil. In 1579 was established an excellent poor law system; in 1696, or 174 years before the English act, Scotland passed its amous system of universal education In 1696 Scotland founded its system of banking, which stood well the test ish criminal code was savage in its severity, containing over one hundred crimes punishable by death; the dred crimes punishable by death; the Scottish code, before the union, contained but twenty. Finally, not to make the list too long, the boasted English Habeas Corpus Act of 1697, second only in importance to Magna Charta, cannot be compared with the Scottish act, which preceded it by a whole century." it by a whole century."

By the union, Scotiand's democratic rogress was suddenly checked, and the path of freedom blocked, espe-cially by the house of lords. Had Scotland retained its own parliament, even supposing a federal, instead of an incorporating union had taken place, the franchise would probably have been extended before 1832, owing to the more advanced political thought of Scotland. With the rise of industries, the new burghs would have sent representatives to parliament. Meanresentatives to parliament. Mean-while, the power of the nobles in parliament would have declined, inasmuch as there was no house of lords, with its perpetual power of vetoing legislation. In that case, for example, the final word in the Scottish land question would have been said, not by an English house of lords, but by progressive members of a Scottish parliament. Now, as a result of the union being incorporating instead of federal, Scotland is ruled by a bureaucracy. From every point of view, historically and politically, the case of Scottish home rule is of the strong-

Makers of Modern Germany

By Gilbert Dresigner.

LONDON, June 21.—"As managing director of Germany, Limited, Emperor William has been called upon to play a heavy role, and has played it with William has been called upon to play a heavy role, and has played it with eminent success," says Mr. Wile. "But Germany's development has not been a one-man show. There have been many makers of modern Germany."

Inevitably, the first of those nation-makers we come to is Admiral Von Tirpitz, the real creator of the Kaiser's fact. And next on the list is Herry fleet. And, next on the list, is Herr Alfred Ballin, the director-general of the Hamburg-American line, who has done for the German mercantile manine what Von Tirpitz has done for the German fleet.

For fifteen years, without a break, "Tirpitz the Eternal" has been at the head of the German admiralty. "A commoner by birth, with little at his back. except indomitable energy, will, and ambition, Von Tirpitz has advanced, thru sheer force of ability and zeal, from a naval cadetship to the supreme direction of the empire's sea forces. He is the world's only minister of morine who minister of marine who incorporates the ware combination of seamanship executive talent, and statesmanship. In the autumn of 1899 came the historic Bunderscrat incident. The seizure of the German mail-packet by an English man-of-war was exploited with Napoleonic skill, as an ocular demonstration of the constant danger confronting the unprotected German merchant flag. The naval law of 1900 was born in Von Tirpitz's brain, amid a wave of patriotic fervor, which the Bunderscrat affair sent rolling across the fatherland." Such is the contri-bution to the making of Germany by Grand-Admiral Alfred Von Tirpitz, secretary of state for the importal secretary of state for the imperial Maker of Mercantile Marine. Now we come to the maker of Ger-many's mercantile marine, Albert Balmany's mercantile marine, Albert Ballin, the head of "Hapag," as the Hamburg-American line is called for short. He is a Hamburg Jew, who has renounced titles, honors, and office, and even the cabinet rank, which his bank is not interested.

Another personality in the economic development of Germany is Herr Emil Rathenau, the head of the "A E. G.," the initials of the German name of the General Electric Company, whose enterprises are scattered

WHAT MORNING PAPER DO YOU READ?

VERY MAN AND WOMAN should read a morning newspaper. The first thing a man should do after eating his breakfast is to kiss his wife good bye and go to work. If he has time before going to the office or factory to read a morning newspaper, he should read one. If he is not married, he will have no wife to kiss, and will have more time to read a newspaper. If he doesn't work, he will have all the more time for reading. It is absolutely necessary these days for every man to read a morning newspaper. The World's events come in such rapid succession that if a man misses his morning paper he is behind the times.

VERY WOMAN also should read a morning newspaper. She also wants to keep in touch with all the news of the day. She wants to be able to talk them over with her husband or her friends. She should keep in touch with what the women of the world are doing. Some morning newspapers have a department especially for news of interest to women, written by women who know what women want to read.

VERY BOY AND GIRL should read a morning newspaper before going to school every day. By so doing the scholars in the schools of the country keep in touch with all the happenings of the world. This is a great aid and stimulus to study. A morning paper should be studied as carefully as the school books.

ECHOES FROM THE TRAGIC DERBY SUSTAIN RULING OF STEWARDS

first past the post in the greatest stayer over a longer distance than trace in the world was disqualified Derby course, I am very doubtful.

"I went into the curtained rec large sums of money were paid out before the victory of Craganour was declared void; the point is, and it is the stewards, Lord Rosebery, Lord Wolverton, and Major Bustace Loder, who are the custodians of racing, saw, as everybody saw, that there had been a grave and obvious infringement of the rules, and they were bound to act. In the exeltement of it all, people were heard to declare that the disqualification of Craganour should not have been, behad never been, and should never be ernment of all races; we may not differentiate between the Derby or races for platers. I am with the stewards entirely, as every sportsman is bound to be, whether he was present at Epson of reads the official reasons for the disqualification as set out in som To Mr. Bower Ismay, a rare sportsman, indeed, the disqualification Craganour must be a tremendous blow, and everybody will sympathize with him. To apparently win a Derby, and then, thru a chapter of accidents be deprived of the honor, is a dreadbe deprived of the honor, is a dread-ful experience. But, from the point of cerned most, the student of racing, mitted to say now that Craganour is the champion 3-year-old, as his form certainly suggests he is. The race can prove nothing: It can only set up opinions of the most divergent kind-Personally, I hold to the belief that Craganour justified favoritism; he ran a gallant race, as became a gallant and stout-hearted horse; but there are these who are strongly of opinion that had not the crucial part of the race developed into a series of bumps, Shogun would have won. In dis-criminating between one and the other it is impossible to be dogmatic. One may only say that Shogun was a decidedly unlucky horse: first, because in; and most important of all, he was bumped, and bumped badly, an experience which the stewards found Comet and Aboyeur to have suffered also.

Louvois, as expected by his owner, and, indeed, by everybody else, did vastly better than in the Newmarket Stakes. He reproduced, in fact, ket Stakes. He reproduced in fact, something of his Guineas form. It certainly must be remembered that he was only beaten a neck for second place; tho, I daresay, a point will be made of the fact that he was fortunate to escape the round of collisions. As for Nimbus, he ran just respectably, that is all; and I suspect cumstances. So well was his mount traveling from the moment of leaving Tattenham Corner that he looked uppeculiar to our sex. You can continue treatment at flome at a cost of only about 12 cents a week. My book, "Woman's Own Medical Adviser," also sent free on request. Write today. Address Mrs. M. Summers, Box H. S65.

Some little time before the Hawthorn worked a mile in on 1.43 3-5, full of run, and in such an casy manner, that the Kentucky experts could not figure how any of the other 3-year-olds could possibly their beat him, and just when he looked all over a prospective winner, he was seized with an attack of influenza, which necessitated withdrawing him from the big race. Hawthorn's ailment kept him out of training for some time, but it is pleasing to know that the horse is again in perfect health and training satisfactor. ily. in connection with Hawthorn, the following, which was the opinion of a noted turfman, expressed some little time previous to the running of the Kentucky Derby, will be found interesting at the present ime

"Hawthorn, favorite for the thirtyninth Kentucky Derby, to be decided at Churchill Downs on May 10, is the most phenomenal race horse have seen in years. He is, in my opinion, the most promising Derby candidate since the days of Ben Eder, Prince Lief, and Ben Brush, previous winners of the Kentucky out noticing it. He is tremendously racer in years, and weighs close to 1100 son of Hastings would simply lose a horse like Worth, which won the

Continuing his comment upon Hawthorn, some of the other candidates,

> "Upon my arrival from New York, I journeyed out to Churchill Downs to see Hawthorn. While abroad sevthe horse and naturally I was anxious to see how he had developed as a 3-year-old. I have told you that Hawthorn is phenomenal, and by this is meant I do not believe there is a racier looking thorobred on either side of the Atlantic than the champion youngster of last season. "Hawthorn is the legitimate top choice for the Derby. If he is defeated in that race, I shall be amazed. However, this praise of Hawthorn must not create the impression that other horses in the Derby. thorn must not create the Derby are that other horses in the Derby are lacking in class. It is a story as old as racing itself, that frequently the unexpected occurs, and the favorite succumbs for one reason or another.

Arthur G. Bedford, of Chatham, Arthur G. In front, when the 2-year-olds Meissen and Dark Rosaleen ran first and second in the same race at Connaught It surely cannot be that interested rsemen think it impossible to have their horses fit to race before August, for those who entertain opinions along this line have only to look at tario horseman, now in western Can-ada, the local stallion, Grand Opera, the racing map of this country, where prominent meetings begin the latter part of May, and the horses taking that reduced his record to 2.141/4 at Regina, during the week past, will part therein, race right thru the sea-son; many of them until snow files. close his western tour with an average of 1000 per cent. In other words, It is only necessary to refer the sensational and fast race the first Smith & Proctor's orack pacer will not week in this month at Prince Albert, Sask., where Doctor B. P. paced three heats in 2.08%, 2.08%, 2.09%, for proof that horses can be fitted for early racing with no bad effects, for the same horse paced in 2.10% the very next week at Saskatoon, over a track that is considered at least two seconds slower than the one at Prince

We also have the case of the local stallion, Grand Opera, that Al Proctor is racing with so much success in western Canada. This horse has already won three stake races of a net value of $1200, reducing his record to 2.14%, at Regina last week.
Last year this pacer was raced on the Grand Circuit, and underwent a course of training which lasted until the latter part of July, before he was able to start; not that he was not fit to race earlier, but because there were no race on the cause there were no races on the big tracks until then. This year, if he meets with no accident, the horse will have won several thousand do!lars in stakes and purses during the same period that he was in training last year. There is not the slightest doubt that the people generally would patronize race meetings in larger numbers in June than in the hot months of July and August, and why not take advantage of that favorable month for racing? If 3 vorable month for racing? If 3-year-old thorobreds can be put in condition to run a mile and a quar-ter in 2.08 4-5 and 2.09 1-5 at Woodbine Park on May 24, surely aged trotters and pacers do not re-quire more time for training. quire more time for training. Verily, the Grand Circuit loses valuable time when the month of June is let slip by, without some of the members holding meetings.

The Cleveland Meeting Earlier. This year, the Forest City I. Stock and Fair Company, that responsible for Grand Circuit racing at North Randall (the Cleveland meeting), took July 7-12 as the dates for that meeting, which appears to be a step in the right direction, but in doing so the following announcement or apology to horsemen, was made in their entry form: "In order to aid the other western members of the Grand Circuit to so select their dates as to avoid conflict with strong local counter-attractions, the Forest City Live Stock and Fair Company agreed to open the

Church Tribunal Harsh to Princess

Former Anna Gould Accused of Making Misstatements to Divorce Judge.

ROME, June 21.-In its recent cision in granting an annulment of the religious marriage of Count Boni De Castellane and the former Anna Gould, the Rota tribunal dealt very severely with the American woman. In fact, its criticisms were so harsh that a number of local newspapers have protested in her behalf.

With an utter lack of chivalry, the Rota tribunal accused Anna Gould, among other things, of making five mis-statements before the judge, who tried the divorce suit in Paris; and that one of these was concerning her age. The tribunal asserts that at the time of this hearing, she affirmed that she was scarcely 15 years old she married De Castellane, whereas, the tribunal says, it has been shown that she was at least of age.

The Rome press points out that, while no lay judge would ever regard as a perjurer, a woman who, on the witness stand, endeavored to conceal her true age, the prelates, who ought to know something about human nature, unchivalrously call a spade a

The Montessori Method

Children Spontaneously Break Into Reading and Writing After Six Weeks Instruction.

No modern development in education has attracted greater attention than that devised by Dr. Montessori, an italian lady. She claims to have discovered a process by which children spontaneously break forth into reading and writing—an "explosion into writing," as Montessori graphically puts it. That children, under this method, of only four or five years of age, learn in six weeks to write words and compose sentences is explained to be the least part of this achievement. The significant fact is that these things are done spontaneously, from an impulse nificant fact is that these things are done spontaneously, from an impulse within the child himself, which leads him of his own accord to make use of a new medium of expression. The following article from The London Daily News, describes the success of the first Montessori school opened in London and indicates to some extent the nature of the methods employed.

The "shining morning faces" of the children who attend the Montesori school in an old gray building in a leafy byway of Westminster are a revelation of what the faces of school children should be. They are alight with expectancy; it is manifest that the little ones expect anything but a dreary and remotorous morning as they come into monotonous morning as they come into their classroom. Each child seems to be wondering what new and delightful surprise has been prepared.

Miss Hilda Croft, who, in conjunc-tion with Miss Richardson, has opened e school, has just returned from ome, where she studied under Dr ontessori. She has obtained Dr ontessori's teaching diploma. "What are you going to do today?" Miss Croft asks each little one who comes Croft asks each little one who comes into school. There are flowers to arrange, and there is a cupboard full of colored blocks, carded silks, little wooden cylindrical bottles, and colored crayons to occupy young brains and hands. Pedagogic geniuses call them "the didactic apparatus"; but that does not matter to the children, who discover in them the most tantalizing and fascinating toys.

The schoolroom is furnished with quaint simplicity. It only contains small white tables and chairs, cupboards that little people can reach, and very small chintz-covered stools, such as one might imagine Miss Muffet once sat upon. A dressing-room that opens off the big room has a miniature washstand with a blue basin and jug on it, and there are shelves on which the children know they must put their hats and shoes in neat rows.

Calm After the Storm. Two little girls in blue cotton frocks were the first to arrive at school yesterday when a Daily News represen-tative was present. One with a hot-weather wisp of hair tied back on her brown neck was engaged in a heated altercation with her French nurse. The trouble was evidently intimately con-nected with the washing of a small, nected with the washing of a small, smudgy, brown face. "I am not pleased with you. I am not. You have ugly face—dirty so," the nurse cried, indignantly. The brown face was very sullen. But at being told that it was ugly, Betty wept tempestuously.

A few moments' later, at her teacher's gentle suggestion, she went into the little dressing room to wash all traces of tears away. She poured water from the blue jug that was not water from the blue jug that was not too heavy for her to lift, and waited on herself entirely. Methodically, she re arranged the washstand and returned to the class-room, where she eagerly set to work to sort flowers and put them in different vases. A golden-haired mite of three, busy with the flowers, too, counted the pink and white picotees she was setting, with infinite pains, in a blue Chinese jar. The Montessori teacher, hovering near the group from time to time, was asked if she thought the pink picotees were prettler in vases by themselves or mixed with the white ones. When a vase was filled with flowers to the aesthetic satisfaction of small operators it was very carefully lifted and carried to one of the little white tables and deliberately set there.

The teacher drew the children's at

A Lesson in Patience.
Betty of tears became the most eager, intent and energetic of the flower workers. She went hither and thither after all the vases were full, dusting, cleaning away stems and fallen petals, not a shadow on her keen little face. She flew to a stranger in the schoolroom with two or three flowers that remained. "You may have these," she said, "we've got too many for the vases." "And even if we had not, I think we could spare to give away don't you?" some to give away, don't you?" asked her teacher smiling. Molly, a little late comer, in a pink cotton frock, had her first lesson as she took off her boots. "Shall I put on her elippers?" osked the maid who had brought her. "No, thank you." Miss Croft replied. Molly looked aggrieved. As she struggled with the knot of her lace she remarked plaintively, "I can't undo it when its flat"! "Why, this is the best way to try." Miss Creft said, demonstrating on the obstreperous laces how a child might be structured. laces how a child might learn to use her fingers deftly. The exercise was tried again. With utmost simplicity the lesson in patlence and self-help was given, and the little one went happily into the schoolroom. She went straight to the cupboard, contemplated the contents serlously for a moment, and then took out a box of crayons. She was given her drawing-book, and sat down at a little table to outline shapes, cut in metal with coloured chalks. She sat drawing Intently while the othed children were spreading a tiny table for lunch.

Evolution of Writing. Molly was interested only in outlin-ing the metal shapes with blue chalk removing the metal and filling the spaces between the outlines with chalk of another color; unconscious, naturally, that the exercise was a preliminary to writing—that the unformed muscle; of her hand, by drawing against the metal, were being developed, so that they would be able to control and hold a pen or pencil steadily.

My chum and I sat on the floor. I was searching the sky, my memory, my vacation, my own head, which contains some astonishing things, but is sometimes woefully blank, for ideas. My chum's brown-goldy-brown-head was bended over a gown of her own manufacture that billowed and puffed like cream over her lap and on to the floor. BERNHARDT BITTERLY DENOUNCES GERMAN PRINCE'S WARLIKE WRITINGS

Says it is a Horrible Prospect That the Man Who Wrote Preface to "Germany Under Arms" May One Day Rule -War a Terrible, Hateful Thing.

By Madame Sarah Bernhardt.

(Editor's Note.—This article, from the pen of Madame Sarah Bernhardt, is inspired by the preface written by the crown prince of Germany to a book entitled "Germany Under Arms," which justifies his country's expenditures for armament and poncy of preparedness for war. The crown prince's introduction, in substance, held that so long as civilization endures, might must be the deciding factor in all great international differences. Madame Bernhardt takes sharp issue with this attitude.)

A numbelievable, monstrous insane fact has come to pass.

In Germany there has been published a book with the title: "Germany Under Arms," and it is the crown prince who has written the pre-

A PHOTOGRAPHIC FAKIR

A photographer has been going about the city soliciting work such as making pictures of babies and children, and an extra inducement is offered by the promise that the pictures will appear in The Sunday World. A number of people who have paid for these pictures have enquired of this paper when they will appear. This man is a fraud. The World sends no one out soliciting work of this kind and money requested on the strength of such representation should not be paid. More than once we have called attention to the practise of peripatetic photographers using the name of The Sunday World to secure business. The public should be on guard against these fakirs.

LITERATURE SCIENCE EDUCATION DONALD GIFRE

Henry Sydnor Harrison gained much favor from discerning readers of fiction a couple of years ago by the publication of "Queed." That book a first one by a young writer, deserved its success chiefly because of its marked, matter-of-fact, everyday realism, and its clever portrayal of an eccentric character. The present novel. "V. V.'s Eyes." is in a sense the description of a type of character just the opposite of Queed. In Queed we had the quint-essence of egotism not perhaps, what we ordinarily mean by egotism, because Queed was not exactly overwhelmed with his own importance, and yet he was entirely seif-sufficient. His self-sufficiency made him also selfish—he recognized nothing as of any value, but his own gigantic plans. Of course he changed somewhat later on in the story, but his success even then was due to his absorbing self-sufficiency. Now, the hero of this book, Dr. Vivian, is wholly absorbed, not in himself, but in others. tion a couple of years ago by the pub-in the interests of his friends—and his friends are the poor, the needy, or the person in trouble.

Lest anyone who has already read "Queed" may feel that the opening of "V. V.'s Eyes" is somewhat slow, that it takes some time to get under way, let me say that it is well worth while to take the time, and that you will be glad to become better acquainted with the lame, earnest, thin-faced, carelessly-dressed charity doctor. Mr. Harrison has developed a mannerism carelessly-dressed charity doctor. Mr. Harrison has developed a mannerism of style and structure that makes his narrative flow at times not too coherently or too smoothly, but in spite of that he has really repeated his former success. And he has done it by giving us a stary with much the same background and atmosphere, but yet entirely different.

Here's our introductory picture of the hero: "Rather long face he had, sensitive about the mouth, lucid about the gaze, and hair of a tan shade which waved a little no matter how crisply cut. The faded gray suit he wore contrasted unfavorably with his friend's new brown; on the other hand, his movements were the state of the contrasted unfavorably with his movements. his movements were not devoid of a certain lank grace such as the gods have denied to rotundity."

The friend was Labor Commissioner

They may be considered as standing contrasts, unscrupulous selfishness as opposed to investigate ishness as opposed to impractical

One of the skilfu' contrivings of the novelist (and also of the dramatist), that I have noted before in reviewing is the insertion of some apparently trivial incident or circumstance upon which the entire structure of the story may afterwards depend. When Sam O'Neill, the labor commissioner, re-marks in a semewhat humorous tone: "Saw your gay young friend Dalhousie Had a pretty nice little the slightest idea of the import of his remarks. "ABSENT"

By A. R. MacDONALD

Soft gray light on a summer sea, A glow of pink in the west;

Sad waves lapping the silver shore,

While I hold you to my breast.

Sad was the sea, and sad my heart,

Dear love, on that summer day, When you and I with anguished cry

Bade a fond farewell for aye.

Till I think I hear you cry.

As it tells its love to the shore.

But, alas! You come no more.

And I call my answer to the void;

The dear pines still bend o'er the beach, And oft as I wander by,

I hear your voice in the whispering sea,

He had taken the precaution of writing a leading article in the train for next day's paper, which he hoped would satisfy the occasion. And he would like to go home to bed.

The leading article was written in pencil, on both sides of the two fly leaves, yellow glazed, of a pocket edition of Horace, there and then torn out. The writing was minute, and most legible—apparently.

I received the visitor with the dignity becoming to a youngster of twenty, appointed but a few hours earlier to the position of sub-editorin-charge of the "Nottingham Daily Journal," then proudly the oldest provincial daily paper. I had lied a little about my age. I had mustered up courage to ask two pounds a week!

The senior proprietor said. "H'm! Yes! We pay monthly. That will be eight pounds a month."

I learned in due course, that Barrie had asked three pounds a week, which had been accepted with "H'm! Yes! That will be twelve pounds a month."

His Meagre Salary.

Barrie was a spendthrift in generosity. But he never forgave this ingenious reduction of a suggested three pounds per week to an actual two pounds fifteen and fourpence per week. The proprietors of The Nottingham Daily Journal were extremely rich, and grimly watched their paper die without making any effort to save it. My own instructions had been to assume my position and responsibility at four o'clock on Sunday afternoon. The key of the vast building, containing thousands of pounds' worth of machinery, was left for me, under the front door mat!

"When a Man's Single," entered the room.

"Good evening," said he, "I'm the foreman printer. I pretty well run this place. I've been nere man and boy, thirty-nine years; and I've seen thirty-seven young fellows in that chair." He was as good as his word.

He had two names for copy. There was "noos," to which he attached importance according to its local application. To be sure, he could cite Macaulay for a precedent. And there was literary matter, which he called "tripe."

Barrie's work was acutely literary, and suffered always. He, a sensitive creature, endured agony. Our autocrat had a soit place, but Barrie refused to negotiate it. For myself, I once procured the insertion of an important speech on Protection, by Henry Chaplin, by making it the introduction to the Mansfield Flower Show. So it became "preference copy!"

Boston Opera Company Looms Large in Exhibit of Theatrical Decorations.

The exhibit of sketches and models executed by Joseph Urban of the Boston Opera Company, is decidedly to the fore at the Exposition de l'Art de la Decoration Theatrale, which opened at the Palais-Royal last month. The work stands side by side with that of such stands side by side with that of such noted artists as Gordon Craig, Max Reinhart, Leon Bakst, and the drawings of Amable and Cioccari, who for several years have designed the productions of Mme. Bernhardt; of Luis Muriel, the foremost representative of the Spanish school, and of Visconti, whose settings at the Monte Carlo opers are among the most heart full stands. whose settings at the Monte Carlo opera are among the most beautiful on the European stage. The scenes Mr. Urban has on view are those designed for "Les Contes d'Hoffmann," "Louise," "Don Giovanni," "The Secret of Suzanne," "Pelleas et Melisande," "Tristan und Isolde" and "The Jewels of the Madonna." Another interesting feature of the exhibit is a model of the stage of the Boston Opera House, with stage of the Boston Opera House, with all the accessories necessary for a fin-ished stage picture. On this miniature stage is placed Mr. Urban's model for the tower scene from "Palleas et Melis-ande." Mr. Urban is now engaged in planning the settings for "Die Meister-singer," "Le Jongieur de Notre Dame" and "Lohengrin."

Country Spends Three Times as Much For Music as it Does For its Army and Navy.

At the convention of music teachers at Saratoga, John C. Freund, editor of Musical America, made the startling announcement that the United States Music of Kaffirs spends six hundred millions a year for music-three times as much as is spent on its army and navy. Mr. Freund arrives at his conclusion from the following figures: Opera, $8,000,000; concerts of all kinds, $30,000,000; church music, $55,000,000; about $30,000,000 for theatre orchestras; $35,000,000 for mili

Freighting His Own Fuel.

Two Irishmen were crossing the ocean on the way to America. On the voyage Pat died. Preparations were made for the burial at sea, but the lead weights customarily used in such cases were lost, and chunks of coal were substituted. Everything was finally ready for the last rites, and long and earnestly did Michael look at his friend. Finally he blurted out, sorrowfully:

The "Fete at Versailles," held at the Albert Hall in aid of the Soldiers' and Sailors' Help Society. was the scene in which the reveliers found themselves, and there were brilliant spectacles, merry dancers, and dainty music beyond the magic door that led to the past.

The Albert Hall was transformed into a Louis XIV. palace of white and gold, with blue silken banners and the Fleur-de-lys. Orenge trees with their golden fruit—a favorite decoration in the brilliant old days at Versailles—stood around the bailroom.

The lights shone down on a scene in which silks and lovels and old in the world silks and lovels and old in the world silks and lovels.

The court of Bradengurg followed the Count Blucher von Waldstadt as "the Great Elector," and the Countess a bain consort. To the air of a North German war song, and headed by a banner bearing a red eagle on a silver field, the Elector and his group passed round the hall bowing before the French court, and taking up a position at the side. Here, as in all other courts, the characters and costumes were of the period of Louis XIV.

Denmark and Norway came next, the Countes a the came to do him homage.

The Court of England, the honored guest, brought up the rear, and took its place on the dais of France. Notable figures that followed a banner bearing the arms of Charles I. were the Countess of Maich (Catherine of Braganza), the Marchicness of Linlithgow (as the Duchess of Richmond), Capatian Harry Lindsay (Charles II.), Lord Althrop (as Sir Christopher Wren), and Major Bradford Atkinson (as Samuel Pepys).

Another very pretty idea is to work this with fluffy silk on silk rep. Use a cream tint, making the flowers in white and aster blue. There is a blue known as phenol blue which is quite showy in loop-stitch embroidery. It is a modest color, which shows to splendid advantage on non-washable pieces.

splendid advantage on non-washable pieces.

The floral parts are quite handsome when used as a sort of applique on wash fabrics.

This is done with two strands of floss, held in place with one strand sewed at the back.

It washes beautifully, and when laundered on the back, the flower has a bold design similar to fine machine work. To Transfer.

Put a cake of soap in a pint of hot water, stir vigorously; remove soap. Saturate the design with the mixture, then remove the excess moisture. Place the fabric to which the design is to be transferred on a surface and lay the design face down on the material. Cover with a dry sheet of thick paper and with the bowl of a table-spoon rub hard till the design is transferred, being careful to rub from rather than toward you. Do not wet, the material or rub the face of the design with damp fingers. To remove the design after the article is complete wash in warm water with soap.

Ways of Cooking Sure To Please. With gardens and markets soon to overflow with succulent peas, housewives will be glad to have at hand these peas recipes from The Woman's spoonful of salt and a sprig of mint.

Magazine. Cream of Pea Soup-Shell the peas, cover a pint of them with water, cook until tender and season with one teaspoonful of salt and a sprig of mint.

Remove one half of the peas and press thru a sieve. Cook thoroly two tablespoonful of butter which have been blended in one quart of hot milk. Then add the pressed peas and the water in which the peas were cooked. Just before serving add one cupful of whipped cream and the whole peas.

Peas in Croustades—Cook the peas until tender. Season with salt, pepper, a tablespoonful of butter, the beaten yolks of two eggs and a cupful of milk. The peas either may be drained before the seasoning is added or cooked down well and then thickened with a little flour and water. Have ready slices of bread one and one-half inches thick, from which the crusts have been removed. They should be cut square or oblong. Scoop out the inside, leaving a bottom and wall about a quarter of an inch thick, Brush with melted butter and brown lightly in the oven. Pour the hot peas into these croustades and serve at once.

Pea Salad—Cook the peas until tend-the hot peas into these croustades and serve at once.

Pea Salad—Cook the peas until tender; season with salt and pepper. When cold, drain and mix with an equal quantity of peanuts, which have been shelled, skinned and ground fine. Add a little mine of sour pickle and enough good salad dressing to moisten. Chill and serve on crisp lettuce leaves. Chinese Ragout—Chop two cupfuls of cold, cooked mutton; add one cupful of water, two lablespoonfuls of butter, one cupful of peas, one chopped onion and salt and pepper to taste. Cook slowly one hour. Serve in a border of nicely cooked rice.

Baked Peas—Boil the peas until quite soft. While ording add a little granulated sugar. Drain off the water; rub thru a colander; mash to a paste; season with salt and pepper and two tablespoonful each of butter and flour; add this to the peas, with four cupfuls of hot milk and beat smooth; then add the beaten yolks of three eggs, and lastly the whites of the eggs beaten to a stiff froth. Beat thoroly, turn into a well-greased pudding dish and bake nearly an hour.

A few minced dates added to fudge as it comes from the stove will make a novel and dainty confection.

Make a cupful of cream sauce and to it add a little onion juice and two tablespoonfuls of chopped red or green pepper. Cook for at least ten minutes. Add to this one and a half cupfuls of flaked finnan haddie, and again bring to the boiling point; this is most easily done in a double boiler. Make a border of boiled or steamed rice on a platter and fill the centre with the fish
