WHEN LOVE Came Too Late.

CHAPTER XXXVII.
Conclusion.
The squire started and stared at him.
"At—the Grange?" he faltered.
Clydesfold nodded, and drew the old man's arm within his. "Yes; I have already written instructions to my solicitor to secure the place. And"—he added, slowly and distinctly, for the squire had begun to wince and draw his arm away as if he feared Clydesfold was going to offer to give it back to him—"and I am not going to part with it. I always liked it. I have learned to love and covet it. You don't mind my buying it, do you, sir? I shall treat it reverently, be sure."
"No, no, no!" said the squire, the tears starting to his eyes. "I would rather you had the old place than any man in the world. If you had been my son—" He stopped. "We shan't keep you waiting long, Clydesfold," he said.
"Don't, please," said Lord Clydesfold, quite calmly. "The sooner you go the better I shall be pleased, for you see, I want to do it up, and—and take her away at once, sir!" he broke off, rather inconsequently. "Come inside and let us talk over your plans. I wish—the color rose to his face—" wish I were going with you."
The squire returned to the Grange in about an hour.
"My dear, could you guess who has bought the old place?" he said.
"Yes; Lord Clydesfold," she replied, with her eyes flashing. "And—and—oh, papa, papa," and she burst into tears, "you would not take it from him!"
The squire soothed her.
"My dear, he hasn't offered it to me," he retorted, rather dryly. "He intends living here himself."
She stared and wiped her eyes.
"And when can we go?" she demanded, restlessly.
"Very soon," he said. "But not too soon for the new owner, it seems."
"Oh!"
"Yes, he wants us gone at once. Wants to do it up."
"Oh!"
"Yes and we'll go to Paris, I think, dear."
"So he has sent us to Paris, has he?" she said. "One would think we were his bond slaves."
"We are—in gratitude," he said, gently.
She melted in a moment.
"I'll go and tell Beesie," she said, meekly.
In two days they started. All the preparations, those pertaining to business, had been made by Lord Clydesfold. He also saw to every little detail of their journey; engaged a special Pullman, took their Channel tickets, ordered rooms at one of the

HUSBAND SAVED HIS WIFE

Stopped Most Terrible Suffering by Getting Her Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Denison, Texas.—"After my little girl was born two years ago I began suffering with female trouble and could hardly do my work. I was very nervous but just kept dragging on until last summer when I got where I could not do my work. I would have a chill every day and hot flashes and dizzy spells and my head would almost burst. I got where I was almost a walking skeleton and life was a burden to me until one day my husband's step-sister told my husband if he did not do something for me I would not last long and told him to get your medicine. So he got Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for me, and after taking the first three doses I began to improve. I continued its use, and I have never had any female trouble since. I feel that I owe my life to you and your remedies. They did for me what doctors could not do and I will always praise it wherever I go."—Mrs. G. O. LOWEY, 419 W. Monterey Street, Denison, Texas.
If you are suffering from any form of female ill, get a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and commence the treatment without delay.

inexpensive hotels in Paris—but did not go near her.

The squire had bid him a good-bye which was as affectionate as that of a father to his best-beloved son, and as Clydesfold held the old man's hands the squire said:

"I'm to say good-bye to Olivia for you?"

"No," he said; "she will take my heart, my every thought with her; she has no need of a good-bye. I have no message for her. I want her to forget; and the sight of me, a word from me, would cause her to remember."

"I understand. God bless you, my boy!" murmured the old man.

In a few days it was publicly known that the squire had been "sold up," and that Lord Clydesfold had bought house and lands, horses and cattle, every stick and stone.

Two days afterward, twenty or thirty men, carrying pick-axes and spades, were seen to tramp up to the avenue, and, to the amusement of all, they were seen to set to work cutting a new road. But everybody understood Lord Clydesfold's intentions when it was observed that the new road diverged as far as possible from the old one, and his object was made still clearer when an army of men fell to work with Portland cement, and altered the Maples from red to white. And when they had finished, the villagers were startled by seeing, in neatly carved letters, "Hospital for Convalescent Children" along its front.
The Grange, too, was redecorated, and, though not altered in character, still very much brightened and lightened.
All this took time, and Lord Clydesfold never left the place for a day, but superintended the whole with as much—probably more—energy than if he had been a clerk of the works.

He and Bertie were constantly together, and Clydesfold almost lived at the Carfields'.
At last he had accomplished all he had planned, and one day he remarked quite casually at breakfast:

"I think of running over to Paris to-morrow."

Bertie and Lord Carfield exchanged glances.
"Very well," said the latter. "Early train?"

"Thanks, yes; pass the marmalade, Bertie."

That was all; but as he got into the dogcart on the morrow, Bertie held his hand and pressed it.
"Good luck, dear old boy," he whispered; and Lord Clydesfold returned the pressure without a word.

He had received news of her almost daily, sometimes from the squire, sometimes from Beesie, and not seldom from the Paris society papers.

For, though they had striven to live in as much seclusion as is possible in the gay city, friends had hunted them up and had insisted upon Olivia going out a little. She withstood all entreaties for some time, but yielded at last; and the Parisians, who are always ready to acknowledge and welcome beauty and grace—even English, which are supposed to be non-existent!—made what Aunt Amelia called "a fuss" over her.

OR,
TRUE LOVE'S PASSION.

CHAPTER I.
The Dread Messenger.

"Oh, yes, very, sir," replied Mrs. Jordan, promptly. "I say she is like a bird about the house, and it's the stopping of her singing and her bright laugh that has made the place seem so dull lately."

"Just so. Ah, yes—ahem," said the lawyer. "Now will you tell me, ma'am—I'm afraid you'll think me very inquisitive—but have you ever heard the young lady or Mrs. Hayes speak of me?"

Mrs. Jordan considered the question.

"No, sir," she replied; "I think not."

"Not once, eh? Not just mentioned the name? Petherick & Gregson, of Gray's Inn?"

Mrs. Jordan shook her head.

"I never heard your name mentioned, sir," she said.

He pondered a moment.

"Does Miss Frere see much company, ma'am? Young people are like monkeys—gregarious and fond of chatter, and—and so on."

Mrs. Jordan, though rather resenting the comparison of her beautiful Miss Nora to a monkey, smiled.

"Not much, sir. This is a very quiet place, you see. Sometimes the rector's daughter and sometimes the squire's lady call, and Miss Nora goes up to the rectory or the Manor House to tea, but that is all."

Again the old lawyer looked rather relieved.

"Very good, ma'am," he said. "And now," he glanced through the open window, "I wonder how long Miss Frere will be?"

It was evident that he had asked all the questions and got all the information he wanted, and, lawyer-like, was anxious to get through with the remainder of his business.

Mrs. Jordan rose.

"Not long, I hope, sir," she said. "Meanwhile I will get you some tea—or perhaps a glass of wine?"

Mr. Petherick, whose collar was a somewhat famous one, shuddered slightly at the vision of a cheap sherry or a blacking-hued port, and replied, briskly:

"Oh, tea, ma'am, tea, thank you very much," and Mrs. Jordan went in search of the single servant.

At that moment a slim figure in a white dress was coming with a quick, springing step up the path on the edge of the cliff. She was dressed in a white frock, simply and plainly made, with a black sash and a little knot of black on the shoulder, and wore a straw hat that, plain though it was, like her dress, and somewhat tanned by the sun, sat upon her head as gracefully as the dress sat upon her figure.

Within a couple of hundred yards of the cottage she stopped, and leaning upon the rail on the very verge of the cliff, looked out to sea, as she had done times out of number, at that very spot, for sixteen years.

The face was thoughtful rather than sad, for grief and youth are soon divorced, and once or twice a smile curved her lips at the antics of the gulls which wheeled screeching below her. And yet, though she smiled, she was thinking of the dead woman who had been so devoted a servant, so tender a second mother to her—and thinking also of her own lonely lot.

Thinking, too, of the letter which she posted, and wondering who the Earl of Arrowdale might be, and why Catherine had written to him. The dying woman had hinted, in broken sentences, of something which she might tell Nora; had this something any connection with the earl?

The question rose in a vague form only, and with little of earnestness in it, for her life had been so uneventful, so changeless, that she was not on the lookout for surprises or mysteries, as persons with more active lives are wont to be.

For sixteen years she had lived in the little cottage on the cliff, content with her quiet life, happy in the beauty of the place, serene in the protection of the devoted Catherine, and for herself "in maiden meditation fancy-free."

Life was still a sealed book to her, and she was scarcely ever curious about it.

After a time she left the gulls, and reaching the cottage, passed through the tiny hall and entered the parlor.

Mr. Petherick had been standing looking at one of the etchings, and swinging round as she entered, uttered an involuntary exclamation of surprise and admiration.

Even to the dry, matter-of-fact old lawyer, she seemed rather an ethereal vision there in the sunshine than flesh and blood, and he stared at the lovely, oval face, with its dark eyes and sweeping lashes, the wealth of auburn—red gold—hair, and the slim, girlish figure with its graceful outlines, in speechless astonishment.

A faint blush rose to Nora's face, though the dark eyes rested on him with "maiden serenity," and she was the first to speak.

"I beg your pardon," she said.

And "Great Heaven, what a sweet voice!" flashed through the old man's mind.

1422-A PRACTICAL CONVENIENT MODEL.

Ladies' House Dress with Long or Short Sleeve.

For utility, comfort and convenience this design has much to commend it. It closes in coat style, with the centre and fronts overlapping. This assures easy and practical adjustment. An ample pocket is arranged over the side front. The waist is finished with a neat collar, and with cuffs for sleeve in short length. The long sleeve is dart fitted. The dart fulness may be cut away and the opening thus made, be finished with a facing and underlap of buttons and buttonholes or other fasteners; then the sleeve may be turned back over the arm when desired. The pattern is good for gingham, percale, lawn, seersucker, solitaires, madras, dimity, drill or linen. It is cut in 7 sizes: 32, 34, 36, 38, 40, 42 and 44 inches bust measure. It requires 5 1/2 yards of 36 inch material for a 36 inch size.
A pattern of this illustration mailed to any address on receipt of 10c. in silver or stamps.

A SIMPLE BUT PRACTICAL COMBINATION.

Waist 1817. Skirt 1818—Comprising Ladies' Shirtwaist Pattern 1817, and Ladies' Three-Piece Skirt Pattern 1818.

In cheviot, voile, gabardine, broadcloth, velvet and taffeta, this will make a lovely business suit, and be just as available for home or calling. The Waist Pattern is cut in 8 sizes: 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46 and 48 inches bust measure. The Skirt Pattern is cut in 8 sizes: 28, 24, 26, 28, 30, 32, 34 and 36 inches waist measure. The skirt measures 3 1/2 yards at the foot, will require 5 1/2 yards of 44-inch material for its development. The waist will require 5 1/2 yards of 44-inch material for a medium size. To make and combine skirt and waist of one material will require 5 1/2 yards of 44-inch material for a medium size.
This illustration calls for TWO separate patterns, which will be mailed to any address on receipt of 10 cents FOR EACH pattern in silver or stamps.

Distinguished Service

Merit alone lifts a man out of the rank and file and honors him with distinction. Merit is not born of luck, it comes from persistence in striving to excel.

Merit alone has placed the General above all other brands of roll roofings and earned for CERTAIN-TEED Roofing the mark of distinguished service.

Certain-teed Roofing

gives distinguished service because it is made from the best quality roofing felt, which is thoroughly saturated with a blend of soft asphalt prepared by the General's Board of expert chemists. This soft saturation is pre-vented from drying out, because it is covered with a harder blend of asphalt, thus making a roof durable and positively impervious to the elements—a distinctive roofing that gives distinguished service.

CERTAIN-TEED is made in rolls; also in slate surfaced shingles. There is a type of CERTAIN-TEED Roofing for every kind of building, with flat or pitched roof, from the largest city-scraper to the smallest residence or out building.

CERTAIN-TEED is sold by responsible dealers all over the world, at reasonable prices. Investigate it before you decide on any type of roof.

Skeleton, Dressed, Gives Clue to Two Murders.

A grimly witness stood before detectives of the 7th Branch Bureau yesterday. A dead man's clothes hid the bare bones of his ribs and legs. A dead man's hat was perched upon the bareless head.

Friends of a man who disappeared long since filed past the shape in the loosely hung clothing and the horribly jaunty hat. The skeleton smiled at them impartially, but they did not smile back. Instead they looked once and then hurried from the room, crossing themselves and muttering in Italian.

But before the police stripped the clothes from the gruesome shape and looked it up it had told them the story of an old murder, whose secret had lain hidden until yesterday, eight feet below the surface of a lot at Powell street and Hagerman avenue—a lot which dwellers in Canarsie are beginning to call "the skeleton farm."

Exhibit Leads to Arrest.

For an hour the skeleton held its ghastly reception before Captain Carey of the 7th Branch Bureau, believed that he had sufficient evidence to arrest Giovanni Romana, of 146 Cackman street, Brooklyn. Last night the police were trying to make him tell why two skeletons, each with its skull battered in, have been dug out of the "skeleton farm" in the last two weeks. Romana was arrested on two charges of homicide and will be arraigned to-day.

The bones are now believed to be all that is left of Rosario Passerello, who lived at 2290 Atlantic avenue, Brooklyn, and Dominic La Rosa, who dwelt in a tenement somewhere on Pacific street. One skeleton, tricked out in the clothes of Passerello, gave the police this information.

Passerello disappeared from his home on Nov. 16, 1914. Three men came to the door that evening and he went out with them. He never returned. The case was reported to the police, who were unable to find a trace of him.

On Saturday men working in the excavation at Powell street and Hagerman avenue dug up a barrel containing the second skeleton, the first having been found some weeks ago. A check in the pocket of the moldering cloak in which it was wrapped bore Passerello's name. Captain Carey conferred with Lieut. Grant Williams, of the Bureau of Unidentified Dead, and they, with the help of Dr. Pecchini, of the Standard Testing Laboratory of the Board of Estimates, clothed the bones in a suit which had belonged to the missing man. Wires bound the joints so that the thing would stand.

On Friday Monachino, Passerello's cousin, was the first to be confronted by the figure. He turned several shades lighter and backed out of the room declaring that he could not stay in such company. Then Mrs. Maria Telo, another cousin, was brought face to face with it.

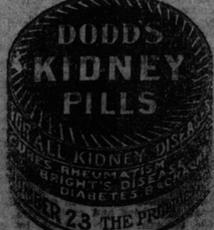

She looked solemnly at the skeleton for a moment. Then she said, slowly: "It is Rosario. The hat, the shape of the head, the shoulders—it is all him. It is my cousin."

Then, watching the skull, with its fixed grin, she told the rest of the story. La Rosa and Passerello had once been friendly with Romana. They had quarrelled. A little later La Rosa had been shot in the back. Italians suspected that Romana had done it, but following their custom, they did not impart their suspicions to the police. La Rosa recovered from the wound and then disappeared. Soon thereafter Passerello went off with the three men, and never returned.

She whispered other information to the police. When she had finished she broke down and had to be led out. The police then took down their giant witness, put him away and arrested Romana for his murder.

English and Germans Hate.

Comments of a London Editor on the New York Tribune's Estimate of the Character and Quality of the Two Kinds—A Clear Statement of the Englishman's Way of Thinking.

(Morning Post, London.)

We republish in another column an extremely interesting article which appeared a little while back in the New York Tribune (August 9, 1916). It is a critical estimate of the character and quality of British and German "hate" respectively—an estimate provoked by certain recent utterances of Professor Muensterberg, of Harvard, the leading exponent of Germanism in the United States. The Professor has been moved to suggest, as a vision of the future, an alliance between the United States, Germany and Great Britain "as one of the logical and necessary consequences of the present deplorable conflict," and no doubt he intends the proposal as a high compliment to this country, and we are only surprised that it did not occur to Professor Kuno Meyer, let us say, to endorse this offer of future friendship with his own trusty right hand. Such is the curious mentality of the German—it seems to him that all that has happened during these last two years is merely something that can be wiped from memory by an offer to shake hands. That he should have reached the stage already when his impulse is to let bygones be bygones is extremely instructive. It manifests a severe chastening of the Teutonic mood. Thor's hammer is exchanged for Lok's gulle—why? Is it that "our old German God" has failed his devotees? Is he, like Baal, when the priests cried unto him to produce fire from heaven, sleeping or perambulating on a journey? But a few months ago the German press and the German professors were still proclaiming the imminent overthrow of England and her Allies and the ruthless imposition of the German will to conquer on the whole civilized world. Toward this country implacable enmity was still breathed, and to America insolent warnings were given to take heed to her ways lest a worse thing should befall her. Now, suddenly, the British and American nations are invited to ignore all these threatenings and to contemplate the prospect of a friendly alliance with the people who so recently uttered them. Discussing this suggestion, The Tribune points out very shrewdly that Professor Muensterberg does not seem to understand the mood of the British people. He fails to realize the effect which has been produced by his countrymen's methods of making war, and how entirely negligible beside the frothy demonstrations of German "hate" is the silent but deep-seated loathing of the British nation. As The Tribune says, this feeling among us has not been inflamed by professorial campaigns, by organized press incitements, by "hymns of hate" and such like stimulants. It has grown up spontaneously under the influence of events. It has grown slowly, but now it has overrun the land. It is deep and strong as an instinct, and is, except by slow time, ineradicable.

Our American critic perceives very clearly what is so completely hidden from German eyes—that generations must pass before the very name or German ceases to be in this country anything but a byword of reproach and disgust. That we are glad to think, is profoundly true, and we are glad also to recognize that the British character is so well understood, at any rate by our American cousins. "To-day the German is for the Englishman," writes this "clear-sighted" American observer, "the man who abuses women and children on land and murders them on water. He is the man who brutally maltreats British wounded prisoners. He is the author of the Zeppelin raids, and he is the criminal who employs the submarine for assassination, not for war. Above all, and this is comprehensive, he is not a 'clean' fighter; he doesn't 'play the game'; he recognizes no rules of 'humanity, of law, of sport.' An Englishman could hardly have stated his own case better. The German is exactly all that and a little more, and to condone his crimes—even to think of it—would be a crime almost as great; a betrayal of the very standards of honor and decency that the German has already outaged so shamelessly.

The antagonisms of war in themselves need create no impassable gulf between the opposites. On the contrary, they may resolve themselves into stronger friendships founded on mutual understanding and respect. Our age-long wars with France have left no bitterness; our fierce rivalry with the Dutch has subsided into perfect good will. But the memories that this war with Germany will leave behind are not memories of honest blows given and taken, but of actions that have disgraced humanity and befouled the very fountains of chivalry—actions possible only to those with whom honour is but a name and to whom the only operative restraint on ill deeds is fear. As the writer in The Tribune truly points out, no nation can do such things and escape the consequences—"consequences which will not be abolished by a treaty of peace, liquidated by victory, or settled by an indemnity." He adds that "those who know the Englishman best are at times a little awed by the revelation of the effect upon him of two years of wartime relations with his German neighbor." It is gratifying to know that in America things are seen so clearly; and the time shall yet come when even the German intelligence will also awake to the facts. We could not forget if we would; we would not forget if we could. The sentiment of heartfelt passionate detestation for the German and all his works throbs through every fibre of our national life. It knows no limitation of class or locality; it is universal, it is overwhelming; and no minister who valued his career and reputation at anything more than contempt would dare to disregard the portent. For us, at least, and probably for our Allies as well, Germany is henceforth excommunicated from the comity of nations, she is the leper of Europe, whom it is a deadly contamination to approach; a leper infected by the foulness of her own soul. And Professor Muensterberg dares to talk about an Anglo-German-American alliance! The most effective commentary on that revolting proposal is made by the New York Tribune when it dryly observes: "At all events, let us hope that the United States will not become the ally of Germany before Great Britain does."

Get Off the Stills.

Philadelphia Ledger.—On two previous occasions Frank A. Vanderlip called the turn exactly on our country's immediate financial future. He sounded a warning of the coming crash in the autumn of 1902, and he repeated his work of prophet prior to the panic of 1907. What Mr. Vanderlip strongly urges all business to do now is to prepare for getting down off its stills. Assuredly it cannot remain up where it is now. It is equally certain that the end of the war will bring a sudden and terrific reversal in our industrial affairs. Gold will rush back to Europe by the tens of millions. Our exports will drop, our imports increase, prices of materials and labor will fall, and demand for manufactured articles in the United States dwindle, because Europe will stop its unparalleled buying.

RUB ON NERVILINE.

Cold has a vicious way of finding out aching muscles or weak joints. How often pain settles in the back, causing inflammation and excruciating soreness. Stiffness and aching all over follows.

An application of Nerviline at the start gives immediate relief and prevents worse trouble.

When the pain is very acute, Nerviline has a chance to show its wonderful penetrating and pain-subduing power. It strikes in deeply, and its strike-in-deep quality proves its superiority to feebler remedies. Then this goodness is magnified by its strength, easily five times greater than most liniments.

Surely so powerful and curative a liniment as Nerviline offers perfect security against pain.

Nerviline is the only guaranteed pain remedy sold in Canada. Forty years of success in many countries warrants its manufacturers saying, "If it does not relieve, get your money back."

No curable pain, not even neuralgia, lumbago, sciatica or rheumatism can resist the magic power of Nerviline. Try it to-day. Rub it on your tired back, let it ease your sore muscles, let it take the swelling and stiffness out of your joints. It's a marvel—thousands say so that use Nerviline.

The large 50c family size bottle of Nerviline is more economical than the 25c trial size. Buy the larger size to-day. Sold by dealers everywhere.

East and West.

Perhaps the most popular question of the day, after the one "When will the war end?" is its companion "Where?" It is rather an absurd question, even when it is more exactly stated as the particular area or front where the coup de grace will be administered and Germany's last resistance broken. It is impossible to answer it, because it is impossible to put it fairly. The war may well end, in this sense, in the West, but the major victories that make it possible to answer it, are in the East; or vice versa. The probability is that it will end on all sides, just as it is being won, in reality, on all sides. But without looking to the end, it is not difficult to mark a distinct movement to and fro of the large tides of battle. It tides can ever be supposed to move in this way.

Beyond all doubt, there is such a movement now. It is from West to East, and it so moves, as it has always done, at the choice of the Central Powers. The reason, however, is by no means the same now as it has been: it is far more satisfying to the Allies. For two reasons at least, which are cumulative, Germany will fight more and more in the Eastern Theatre, so far as she may be allowed to because she sees the impossibility of holding her western conquests and because she knows the imperative need of holding the eastern ones. She has to make a decision, and makes the only one possible under the circumstances.

She is not able to do this, however, altogether of her own sweet will, and the effect of her decision is a little peculiar. The Allies have undeniable mastery in France, while the enemy seems for the moment to have the upper hand on the other side. The essential difference is that the Allies aim at adding to the conquests they have made since June, while the Germans can only hope to make their own more secure, always excepting what they can do to Roumania. Now this is not to Germany's liking. It will profit her nothing if she cleans up Roumania at the cost of being herself cleared out of France and Belgium. It is therefore most improbable that she is denouing her lines in the West to any serious extent in order to feed her lines in the East. The consequences would be too rapid and too disastrous. She must be drawing her undoubted reinforcements from another source. What is it? Hardly her Russian and Gallian fronts, the latter of which at least has itself been greatly strengthened. No doubt the higher commands of the Allies know what it is, for the movements of all enemy units are closely followed, but even they might be a little misled by the reconstruction and re-naming of different corps. But however it may be done, there is little doubt that Germany in one way and another is drawing largely upon her reserves, those bodies of men which are reserves in the true sense. She is collecting what troops she can possibly spare from the defence of her lines on the Somme to make Lemberg and Koval impregnable while she endeavours to crush Roumania.

In a sense, therefore, the position at present resolves itself into a sort of race between Falkenhayn and Mackensen on the one hand and Joffre on the other. We say at present, for Germany no doubt has her eye upon the approach of winter, when peace parleys will be going on and the attack in the West will lose its sting or be suspended altogether. The idea may be good, the best, at any rate, in a desperate situation. What Germany looks for in the spring is another matter. If she can achieve a smashing victory in the East before winter descends and yet hold her West front, her position will be materially improved; but neither feat is a certainty and both hopes may be disappointed. If Russia stands firm behind Roumania and the weather favours Joffre and Haig, the present demonstration by the enemy may have in it the germs of a greater disaster than any with which it temporarily threatens the Allies.

Here and There.

POSTED LETTERS.—Two letters picked up Saturday morning on Casey Street by Mr. Michael Sutton and addressed to Miss Florence Day and Mr. Alick Wadden, Champneys West, Trinity, were posted at G. P. O.

POLICE COURT.—(Before Mr. Morris, K.C.)—Three ordinary drunks were each fined $1 or 3 days, and three boys for loose and disorderly conduct and without homes were sent to Orphanages.

DISCHARGED FROM HOSPITAL.—Mr. Calvert C. Pratt, of Smith C. Ltd., received a message from his brother, Corporal Arthur M. Pratt, 1st Nfld. Regiment, stating that he was discharged from hospital and was feeling well. The message was sent from Edinburgh where he was spending a ten days' furlough. Corp. Pratt took part in the big drive on July 1st and was wounded in both legs, and on reaching England was twice operated on, having several pieces of bone removed from his legs. It will be quite a while before he will be fit for service, but his many friends in St. John's will be pleased to hear that he is on the road to recovery. "Art" as he is more commonly known to the boys was previous to the war travelling salesman for the Direct Agencies.

Back From the North.

The s.s. Prospero, Capt. A. Keen, arrived back from the northward last night, having been as far as Battle Hr. The weather was calm, though cold during the trip. She brought a full cargo of dry codfish for transhipment and the following saloon passengers: G. P. Fye, L. Pilgrim, G. Deckers, A. Simms, R. Ollerhead, E. Strangemore, C. Deckers, D. Noah, R. Scott, D. Boyles, E. Humby, W. Jackman, Rev. Francis T. Downer, C. House, M. Barbour, Rev. Parsons, D. Grant, A. Burrey, H. Baskins, J. Gardiner, Misses G. P. Fye, Elliott, Layman, Hyde, Winsor; Mesdames Fye, Breaker, Sutton, Stone and 73 steerage.

FISHERY OVER.

The fishery along the French Shore is over for this season, and on the whole was not bad. A large contingent who fished at Grois Islands and with success came home on the Prospero. South of Fogo there is a little doing when weather conditions are civil enough to allow boats to get on the grounds.

SHIP IN TROUBLE.

Owing to an inadvertence which could not be avoided, the Prospero interfered with the obstruction at the entrance to our harbor last night. The bowsprit of the ship suffered slightly, but the damage done practically amounted to nothing.

Gave Life For Cause.

Sir Victor Horsley Worked Hard for Soldiers in Mesopotamia.

Of Sir Victor Horsley, who died in July from heat stroke while serving as a consultant with the forces in Mesopotamia, The Times says: Sir Victor volunteered for service in Mesopotamia last March, after he became aware of the bad conditions prevailing. His patriotic and unselfish offer was accepted, and he left at once for India, from which country he went to the scene of operations. At first he was stationed at the base at Basra, but within a short period he passed up to Amara, where, it is stated, his death took place.

All those who were privileged to know the late surgeon will feel that this last sacrifice for his country was but the consummation of a life full of sacrifice and generous patriotism. Sir Victor did not consider his years when the chance of being useful offered itself, and the welfare of our soldiers was his first anxiety. Very early in the war he was in France on behalf of the British Red Cross Society, and later, on being gazetted Colonel, he was sent to Egypt as a consultant by Sir Alfred Keogh. He had served also in the Boer War.

Sir Victor Horsley was not only a very distinguished surgeon; he was a pioneer in the field of scientific medicine, one of those rare men who seek out new paths into the unknown, and lay their foundations on which all those who follow after must build. His work on the surgery of the brain belongs to this category, as also does the experimental study of the ductless glands, which he carried out with so great eagerness and enthusiasm. In 1884, for example, he proved by experiment that the disease myxoedema was caused by absence of the thyroid gland. It was his generous custom to invite other workers to his laboratory and to place his resources at their disposal; he would carry out all the delicate manipulations necessary at the request of any colleague, and would then resign to that colleague all the credit of his work accomplished. Supreme in his own sphere, Sir Victor took an active interest in social questions. His abhorrence of alcohol and his efforts to restrict the sale and use of it are well known. Not less well known at the time was his championship of the woman suffrage movement. He contested the University of London as a Liberal, and, was prospective candidate for Market Harborough on temperance and woman suffrage lines, though on these grounds he was afterwards refused the support of the officials. He was Vice-Chairman of the London County Council Sub-committee of Inquiry into the Medical Inspection and Treatment of School Children, and also Vice-President of the English League for the Taxation of Land Values. His strong personality and unyielding adherence to his convictions frequently brought him into collision with his opponents, but none ever denied to him the respect and honor. Honors were showered on him by almost every university and learned society in the world.

Zeppelin Raids

Do Not Pay.

New York Sun.—The Zeppelin raid has become a spectacle which the people, indifferent to the risk they expose themselves to, turn out to see. So from any point of view those vicious enterprises are an absolute failure. That they stimulate recruiting has been proved over and over again. But what of the attrition in crews and ships that has now become a feature of many of the raids? The Germans have been industriously building Zeppelins at great expense, but they cannot afford to lose an airship a week-four have been destroyed in as many weeks. No longer can the efficiency of the London defences in high angle guns and scouting aeroplanes be doubted. Zeppelin service has become unexpectedly deadly, and the danger is one that the bravest men recoil from. If the capital is not vulnerable, it would seem hardly worth while to keep up the fiction that something of military value was being accomplished on English soil by the air raiders.

Germans Are Not Good Losers.

Glasgow Herald.—We are quite prepared to see Germany collapse with startling rapidity, for Germany has not been declared against her. We have had no experience of how nations organized for war to the last man will behave under the stress of an unrelenting defeat and the economic straits induced by isolation. But it is conceivable that the distracted proletariat may react not to the "more" sensation of its rulers and philosophers, but may yield to the clamorings of its wants and its yearnings for peace. The German has never been what is colloquially called "a good loser."

Serious Accident

At Cranford's Saw Mill, Near Tickle Harbor—Man Now in Hospital.

About 9.30 Saturday morning while working at Cranford's saw mill, about eight miles east of Tickle Harbor, a man named Cranford, brother of the owner of the mill, met with a serious accident resulting in the loss of his right arm. It happened that Cranford, who is an experienced mill hand, was feeding logs to the big saw which has a diameter of some feet, when he received a severe blow from a large log and knocked several feet in the air, and in descending, his right arm fell across the saw which was revolving at a tremendous speed and which cut the limb about three inches below the shoulder. The man cry for help was heard by the men working at the mill who rushed to his assistance and did everything possible to stop the flow of blood. Binding up the wound they brought the sufferer to the side of the railway track where he was placed on board the incoming express and received further attention from Dr. Chisholm, who complimented the mill hands on the excellent manner in which they had handled so difficult a case. It appears that the unfortunate man held on too long to the lever that controls the rotary over which the logs must pass, thus allowing the machinery time to concentrate its power on one particular spot, which resulted in the accident. On arrival of the express about 2.30 in the afternoon the sufferer was removed to the General Hospital and was immediately taken to the operating department where the limb was amputated. On inquiry at the institution to-day we learn the patient is doing well.

LONDON REVIEW.

LONDON, Oct. 15.—Although the Roumanians continue to advance in the east Transylvania, they are back before the Austro-Germans this region all along the battle line. The height of the mountains in the vicinity of Orsova on the Danube, they not alone are giving their adversaries but at several points by violent counter attacks they have gained an advantage over the Austro-Germans. The Roumanian forces in the Carpathian mountains on the northwest of the Danube, they have been repulsed. To the north of Korynth the Roumanians have been repulsed. Success also obtained by the Roumanians on the Oltuz and Jull Valleys, where they not alone are giving their adversaries but at several points by violent counter attacks they have gained an advantage over the Austro-Germans. LONDON REVIEW.

LONDON, To-day.
Although the Roumanians in north-east Transylvania continue to fall back before the Austro-Germans from this region all along the battle line, in the vicinity of Orsova on the Danube, they not alone are giving battle to their adversaries but at several points by violent counter attacks they have gained an advantage over them. Bucharest admits the retirement of the Roumanian forces in the Kalmian mountains on the northwest front, but says that further south the infantry of the Teutonic Allies were put to flight by their artillery fire. Successes were also obtained by the Roumanians in the Oltuz and Jull Valleys, where violent attacks were repulsed with casualties. On both sides of the Szneduk Pass the Roumanians continue on the offensive, but Berlin says their attacks have been repulsed. To the north of this region in the Carpathian mountains, the Austro-Germans have recaptured the height of Sineretes. In Volynia, violent fighting has again broken out here; both the Russians and Teutonic Allies claim successes for their forces. Petrograd says that north of Korychik the Russians captured a German trench, inflicting heavy casualties on their opponents. Berlin says Russian attacks were repulsed at the Skokhod. In Macedonia that the British north of Thiepval have gained a firm hold on the German trenches and that the French south of the Somme have won a footing in the sugar refinery at Government. The French in Saturday's fighting in the Ablancourt-Rolley sector made 1,100 German prisoners. In Macedonia the Serbian troops made a further advance along the left bank of the Cerna River, while the French have cut the railway line south of Seres. The fighting throughout the region consists mainly of artillery duels, only isolated infantry attacks having been reported. Still further gains for the Italians against the Austrians in the Carso region of the Austro-Italian theatre are recorded by Rome. The convoking of the Greek Chamber of Deputies, which was to have taken place on Saturday, has been postponed for a month by a decree of King Constantine.

How They Choked
Off the Graft

The British Administration in power when the war began was probably the ablest aggregation of public men who ever held the reins of government in Britain, and when it was deemed wise to construct a coalition, the newly reconstructed cabinet followed out the principles laid down by the preceding body. One of the first things which required attention was the forestalling and choking off of the grafter, the wretch who planned on becoming a multimillionaire out of his country's extremity. England found herself at war and had to organize to do her part in the colossal conflict which her leaders saw were before them. The first thing was to steady the money market affected by the panic of the opening weeks. This was done without delay and there has been no trouble since. The next thing was to keep food prices within bounds and throttle the rascally speculator. Sugar was found to be short and of course the supply could no longer be bought as usual from Germany. The exploiter had already begun his work, when the government stepped in full authority, and bought from every available source at a strictly regulated price nearly ninety million dollars worth of this article and made contracts extending over a lengthy period. The people were assured a supply of sugar at a fair price and the exploiter was put out of business. The great question was then taken up: England depends for her supply largely on imported chilled or frozen meat, and the exporters of Argentina, Uruguay, Australia, New Zealand and elsewhere prepared for a tremendous harvest. The Government calmly took over all steamers with refrigerating space and said to the exporters, "We control the transportation system. Make your prices right and we carry your goods; otherwise—The prices were made right, the trade proceeded without a hitch, and the British people were supplied with meat at a reasonable rate, while army beef was secured at twelve cents a pound.

In a somewhat similar manner the wheat trade was controlled, and the Government by the payment of commissions has taken over the fisheries. The production and distribution of coal has also been taken under Government control, the regulation in this case being a matter of tremendous difficulty. Then, perhaps, the greatest stroke of all was the nationalization of the railways and taking over the docks. This enabled the authorities to regulate the three duties of carrying troops, carrying military supplies, and lastly, the supplies and the protection of the nation at large. The right of the individual owner to become a millionaire was forced to give way to the right of the nation to exist and fight the enemy, and the Government arrangements have even prevented the private maker of war munitions from bleeding the country white, as has been the case in some parts of the Empire.—Recorder.

The Derivation of "Tanks."

London Times: Seeing how much has been written about the deeds of the new British armored cars, it is curious that nobody has bothered to discover how they came by their singular name of "tanks." The explanation is quite simple. When it was decided to give the invention a trial, it was essential to keep the matter secret. But the Department of the Ministry of Munitions to which the building of the cars was entrusted had to have a name of some sort, and it was given the first that came to mind. It was called the "Tanks Department," and none but the few in the secret was any the wiser. And so, naturally, the creations of the Department were called "tanks."

MAURICE COSTELLO IN GREAT PICTURE.
One of the most impressive stories ever shown at the Nickel Theatre will be exhibited to-day. It is entitled, "The Man Who Couldn't Beat God," and Maurice Costello, the popular actor, plays the leading role. The story is one of a man who commits a great crime—murder, and believe he can blot the thoughts of it from his mind. He tries in every conceivable way and how far he succeeds the picture shows. This film is now in demand in all the large cities of the States and Canada and no doubt it will attract many patrons here. The acting is of the finest quality, as several of the best artists of the Vitagraph Co. are in the cast.

Merely Conversational
Irving Bacheller, the American novelist, was on a tramping tour through New England. He discovered a chin-bearded patriarch on a roadside rock.

"Fine corn," said Mr. Bacheller, tentatively, using a hillside filled with straggling stalks as a means of breaking the conversational ice.

"Best in Massachusetts," said the sifter.
"How do you plough that field?" asked Mr. Bacheller. "It is so very steep."
"Don't plough it," said the sifter. "When the spring thaws come, the rocks rolling down hill tear it up so that we can plant corn."

Paying Debts With Money.

By RUTH CAMERON.

Money is a wonderful thing. It is a thing that sometimes a fearful-thing. There are many fine things that you can do with it. Money and some things not so fine that money can do with you. The right kind of people often do much good with money, but it takes a strong character to have a great deal of power without being hurt by it. Once upon a time I knew a dear lady who was much beloved by many people. She was always interested in other people's interests, and she was always eager to do gracious things for others. Her means were limited so she could not give away a great deal of money, but she gave generously of what she had, and in addition of self and service.

She was still generous—With Money. Gradually the wheel of fortune turned and lifted this woman into a position of comfort if not of affluence. And she was still generous with money. She was constantly giving handsome gifts to her friends. But imperceptibly, gradually—as all changes in fiber take place—she became less generous with her gifts of self and service. She didn't trouble to be interested in other people's interests, she didn't put herself out to perform little services. She lost the keen sympathies of her humbler days. In short, she tried to pay all her debts of friendship and service with money.

You Can't Pay All Your Debts With Money. And you can't do that without hurting yourself and your friendships.

In a time of bereavement, a certain friend did much for her. She said, "I will never forget it." Yet when the other woman had a great grief to face, what did she do? She sent her handsome flowers, but she didn't go near her because, "I never know what to say." She Thought She Was Being Generous. Again she had a friend who had a rather humble little home in a somewhat out-of-the-way place. She entertained this friend at her own home, at restaurants and at the theater. When the friend offered what she could afford in return, the hospitality of her own little home, this woman would not accept it. "You live so far away," she would say, "Come to dinner and the theater with us."

She thought she was being very generous. She did not realize that by refusing to accept the other hospitality she was spoiling her friendship. You can't truly pay all your debts with money. Beware how you try to!

Everyday Etiquette. "Does an invitation to a church or home wedding where no reception follows and my acquaintance with the bride has been short, require a gift," asked Olive. "No a present is not necessary. Wedding gifts are never obligatory in any case, only customary, and in your case they are not even customary," replied her mother.

Redmond's Speech.

Marks New Stage in Irish War History. The Montreal Star Office, 17 Cockspur Street, London, Oct. 7.—Mr. Redmond's speech in Waterford last night is likely to mark another stage in Ireland's somewhat melancholy war history. Will he line up with Sir Edward Carson and accept conscription for Ireland? That is most unlikely, but it has been publicly announced that three Irish divisions at the front need men to fill up the gaps caused by their heroism in the face of the enemy of Ulstermen and Nationalists alike. It is also said that there are 200,000 available men in Ireland—Lord Wimborne says 100,000—but at the present rate of recruiting it will take five years to bring these to the colors.

The Nationalist objections to conscription, as expressed by Devlin Dillon in the Freeman's Journal, and other spokesmen, are as strong as ever. Many resolutions denouncing it have been passed at Irish Nation League meetings in various parts of the country, yet men must be recruited. Irish regiments are now being partly regilded with English and Scottish recruits. The only immediate alternative to conscription seems to be a new recruiting campaign backed by Redmond and other leading Irishmen, based on the splendid deeds of Irish fighters at the front.

An Irishman writing in the Times says that Ireland generally has already done quite as well—and perhaps better—than Canada, in recruiting. WINDERMERE.

This is a Time For Action On Part of America

And Not 'Weasel Words,' Says N. Y. Herald.

New York, Oct. 10.—The New York Herald this morning in its leading editorial, under the caption, "This is a time for action not for 'weasel words,'" says, "Even the most pusillanimous pacifist cannot find excuse for delay on the part of the government of the United States in bringing Prussianism to an immediate account for the sinking of the Red Cross liner Stephano, plying between St. John's and New York. We are all Americans on this side of the Atlantic. The Stephano was engaged in peaceful commerce between two American ports. Her international status was just as clearly that of an American vessel engaged in American coastwise trade as if she were of American registry and flew the flag of the United States."

"She bore no relation to the conflict in Europe. The lives of Americans were placed in jeopardy by the crime of this agent of Prussian 'rightfulness.' This is American territory—and this north American continent—and, thank

A Comparison.

An official report comparing British with German agriculture, published by the British Government, shows that on each hundred acres—
1. The British farmer feeds from 45 to 50 persons, the German farmer feeds from 70 to 75.
2. The British farmer grows 11 tons of grain, the German farmer grows 33 tons.
3. The British farmer grows 11 tons of potatoes, the German farmer grows 55 tons.
4. The British farmer grows 4 tons of meat, the German farmer produces 4 1/2 tons.
5. The British farmer produces 17 1/2 tons of milk, the German farmer produces 28 tons.
6. The British farmer produces a negligible quantity of sugar, the German farmer produces 3 1/2 tons.
It is further stated in the report that the soil and climatic conditions in Germany are inferior to those in England.

GHOSTS.

Often when I cannot sleep, in my dark and quiet room, ugly phantoms round me creep, grinning at me in the gloom. Oft they come in grisly bands, to my sorrow and my shame, beckoning with fleshless hand, clanking chains and breathing flame. Many sinful things I've done, in the days that are gone by; that advantage might be won, I have sprung the vicious lie. Adding to this wad of mine, I've been tricky, mean and low, and I skinned a learned divine in a horse trade, long ago. In my scheming for the kale, at no trifles would I stop; when I had some spuds for sale, all the biggest were on top. I've committed many crimes; I confess it, now I'm gray; I have voted seven times on the same election day. And when sleep from me recedes, and I lie in bed awake, ghosts of all these evil deeds come and fill me with an ache. Man of his achievements boasts, of the "killings" he has made; but he can't escape the ghosts—spectres which are never laid.

A SUGGESTION TO NEUTRALS.
LONDON, Oct. 14. Neutral nations are offered the suggestion that they use the German ships interned in their ports to compensate them for submarine losses by the shipping correspondent of the Times. Discussing the world shortage in tonnage, the correspondent says: In view of the continued war ton destruction of neutral shipping British owners are wondering how much longer neutral countries are going to allow German vessels to idle in their ports. After stating that there are ninety German ships in Chilean harbors, the correspondent continued: While like all neutrals she is suffering from lack of tonnage, therefore, in view of British shipping, Chile, if she will not use the ships to export her produce to Europe, will be asked to lease them, which will indemnify her for loss of port and harbor charges.

A SUCCESSFUL RAID.
LONDON, Oct. 15. A successful raid has been made on the Mauser works at Oberndorf and a large number of British and French naval aeroplanes dropped explosives on rifle works in Wurtemberg. The French aeroplanes dropped tons of explosives. Six German aeroplanes were brought down. The British aeroplanes failed to return according to British and French reports.

BRITISH GAINS.
LONDON, Oct. 15 (Official). Further reports show that enterprises undertaken yesterday in the neighborhood of St. Redoubt were highly successful. North of St. Redoubt two lines of enemy communication trenches were cleared for a distance of nearly 200 yards. Nearly 300 prisoners were taken in the course of these operations, which were carried out by a single company of Schwaben redoubt our gains were greater and our line advanced northwest of the redoubt. Huge losses were inflicted on the enemy. Total prisoners taken in both sections, including those reported last night, is 2 officers and 303 of all ranks. During the night the enemy trenches were brought down north of Festubert. North of Neuve Chapelle a number of prisoners were taken. Considerable damage was done to enemy defences.

FRENCH SUCCESS.
PARIS, Oct. 15 (Official). South of the Somme we made attacks, which succeeded in driving one on Santerres, which put us in possession of the German line of front of more than 200 metres. The other placed us in possession of the hamlet of Cenermont and a refinery, 200 metres N.E. of Hamblecourt. We took a large number of prisoners. Up to the present 8,000 unwounded prisoners, including seventeen officers, have been sent back.

FRENCH OFFICIAL.
PARIS, Oct. 15 (Official). An official issued this afternoon by the French war department says: Last night south of the River Somme the enemy attempted several attacks against the positions which we had taken possession of in the course of the day. The fire of our batteries dispersed some before they could reach our lines. All the other were broken up by our infantry, which maintained and consolidated its gains.

Incandescent Gas Lighting.

Possibly, the feature of incandescent gas lighting most frequently noted by casual observers is the great ease with which tasks, ordinarily arduous under artificial light may be performed under the Weisbach gas mantle. The light has a peculiarly "soft" quality, difficult to describe, but which is readily recognized by those who have had experience with the gas mantle lamp.

In its general effect upon bodily health and comfort, the use of incandescent gas lighting is decidedly favorable. The currents of air set up by the burning gas improve ventilation, tending to expel the air vitiated by respiration and draw in fresh air to replace it. Harmful or dangerous disease germs are instantly destroyed in the flame. The extent to which this effect takes place may be verified by placing a gas lamp close to a ceiling without any provision for interfering with the up-rushing air currents. The charred particles which collect immediately above the lamp are the remains of dust particles which, before passing through the flames were laden with germs and microbes. Actual experiments have shown that the burning of gas lamps in rooms previously containing bacteria, resulted in absolute sterilization of the air.

Contrary to the popular notion the temperature of rooms lighted by incandescent gas lamps is seldom markedly greater than under incandescent electric light, even under unfavorable conditions of ventilation, while in rooms provided with the ventilating facilities required by the demands of hygiene, the temperature in gas-lighted rooms is frequently lower.

several important orders. He was finally denounced by a Serbian who had known him in New York, and who said he was acting for Gottwik, Schetfer and Co., a New York firm with German affiliations.

GREEK CHAMBERS POSTPONED.

ATHENS, Oct. 15. King Constantine to-day signed a decree, postponing for one month the meeting of the Greek Chambers, which, according to Constantinople, was to be held to-day.

GERMANS DELIVER STRONG ATTACK.

PARIS, Oct. 15. The Germans delivered a strong attack last night on Ablaincourt, south of the River Somme, and reoccupied part of the village, as well as trenches northeast of it. This was officially announced here to-day. The French immediately launched a counter-attack. North of the Somme the French made progress on Malassia ridge, north of Boucahvesnes.

HAND-TO-HAND FIGHTING.

BERLIN, Oct. 15. British attacks on the Somme front north of Thiépy led to a hand-to-hand fight in the German lines. At one point the invaders obtained a foothold, says an official issued to-day. South of the River Somme, the statement adds, French troops obtained a foothold in the village and sugar factory of Cenermont.

GERMAN SUCCESS.

BERLIN, Oct. 15. A battle between French and German troops for the French town of Ablaincourt, south of the River Somme, has been revived with German success, says an official to-day. The Germans have gained a portion of Ambos Wood and have taken 400 prisoners.

ALLIED AIR RAIDS.

BERLIN, Oct. 15. Details of operations of the Entente air squadrons in their raids in Southern Germany on Thursday are given in reports issued to-day by the war office. These attacks are declared to have been carried out by from forty to fifty machines, but it is asserted that no military damage was done at all. Seven persons killed, and more than a score injured were the casualties, says the statement.

RUSSIANS STORM TRENCHES.

PETROGRAD, Oct. 15 (Official). Russian troops after a stubborn battle north of Korytniza, in Volhynia, stormed the German trenches. Counter attacks were repulsed with heavy losses. Two machine guns were captured and a number of prisoners taken. The German counter attack, which was repulsed with heavy losses.

TURKISH TRANSPORT CAPTURED.

PETROGRAD, Oct. 15. The Russian submarine Tula, on Oct. 12th, after an engagement near the Bosphorus, captured the Turkish six thousand ton transport war transport Rodisto, says to-day's Russian official. The transport was commanded by a German officer and taken to Sebastopol.

SUCCESSFUL PATROL OPERATIONS.

PETROGRAD, Oct. 15. Successful patrol operations along the Stokhod, further north in Volhynia, are reported in to-day's war office statement. Numerous hostile trenches were occupied as the result of this outpost fighting, says the statement.

ITALIAN OFFICIAL.

ROME, Oct. 15 (Official). There were artillery duels in several areas. Enemy artillery was very active in Upper But Valley, southeast of Gorizia. Troops have extended British occupation on Seber ridge; some prisoners were taken, as well as large quantities of arms and ammunition, which were abandoned by the enemy.

BRITISH AND BULGARIAN CLASH.

SALONIKA, Oct. 15. British patrols yesterday came in contact with Bulgarian forces on the railway south of Seres in Greek Macedonia, says an official. Seres station and Barkli Jama have been shelled by our artillery. On the railway south of Seres our patrols came in contact with hostile forces. On the Dolran front enemy communications everywhere were shelled. During the night of Oct. 13th several encounters between patrolling detachments occurred. Bombardment continues heavy on both sides.

FERDINAND TAKES COMMAND.

BUCHAREST, Oct. 15. King Ferdinand, of Roumania, announced to-day that he would personally take supreme command of the Russo-Roumanian armies. Considerable Russian reinforcements are expected in Roumania.

ALONG THE SERBIAN FRONT.

LONDON, Oct. 15. Serious fighting occurred on Saturday along the entire Serbian front, according to a Reuter despatch from Salonika. The Bulgars were expelled from some of their trenches on the left bank of the Cerna. Bulgar counter-attacks were repulsed.

CONSTANTINE'S DECISION.

ATHENS, Oct. 14 (Delayed). King Constantine has decided to turn the men of the navy into an army corps, with the officers and crews of the ships which were delivered over to the Entente Allies. They are being formed into a regiment.

MORE STEAMERS SUNK.

LONDON, Oct. 15. The sinking of the British steamer Gardepe is announced by Lloyds. Twelve members of the crew landed, thirteen are missing. She was of 1,363 tons, and last reported as having sailed from Fraserburg, Scotland, on Aug. 22nd for Archangel. Lloyds announce the sinking of the Russian steamer Morcator. She was 1,616 tons gross, and sailed from Buenos Ayres on Aug. 8th for Dunkirk. She was last reported leaving St. Vincent, Cape Verde Islands, Sept. 19th.

REPORT CONTRADICTED.

BOSTON, Oct. 15. At 10 a.m. the Charlestown radio station contradicted a report that a German submarine was chasing an unknown Dutch liner off the Massachusetts coast radio station. They declared that they had absolutely nothing to say.

FRENCH CRUISERS REPORTED SUNK.

BERLIN, Oct. 15. The small French cruiser Rigel, built as a submarine destroyer, was sunk in the Mediterranean on October 2nd by two torpedoes fired by a German submarine. It is officially announced to-day. A German submarine adds, sank the French auxiliary cruiser Gallia, with Serbian-French troops aboard, bound for Salonika. About 1,000 were drowned.

U-BOAT SIGHTED.

NEW YORK, Oct. 15. The nationality of the U-boat was not identified. The Bovic in fear of attack because of being a freight ship, put on full speed and turned directly west. At the time that she passed out of sight of the other two vessels the Danish boat still seemed to be endeavoring to escape from a submarine. The weather was clear and the Helligolar was between two and three miles distance at the moment she was first observed with the submarine about one mile to the Dane's stern. This was about 8:30 a.m. when the Bovic was approached. The Helligolar left here on Thursday for Copenhagen and other Scandinavian ports, carrying 336 passengers in first class, 37 in second class and stowage passengers. A great many of them in the cabin are Americans. At the time she was sighted by the Bovic the Dane was flying no flag, but she was distinguished by her name and the Danish flag painted along her sides.

THE STEPHANO.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 15. The British steamer Stephano, sunk by the German submarine U-53 off the New England coast last Sunday, was fired on without warning, her captain reported in an affidavit received today by the State Department. Capt. Smith declared that three shots were fired, the first of which hit the ship's bow. No evidence corroborating the statement has been received by the State Department, and action will probably not be taken until the U-53 had time to reach home.

ACQUIRE CONTROL.

LONDON, Oct. 15. An official announcement is made that the Ellerman Line has acquired control of the Hull firm of Thomas Wilson & Co.

CAPTURED AND SHOT.

MEXICO CITY, Oct. 15. General Emilio Orozco, of the Zapata forces, who has caused much trouble in the State of Mexico, was captured in the hills with twelve of his men. They were summarily shot.

TAKEN OVER BY THE FRENCH.

ATHENS, Oct. 15. Control of the port of Piraeus, a seaport near Athens, has been taken over by the French. No manifests from this port will hereafter be valid without visa by the Allies.

ARMED MERCHANTMEN.

BOSTON, Oct. 15. The second armed merchant steamer to reach port this year arrived early to-day when the Leyland liner Cambrian, with four-inch guns mounted on the after deck, came in from London. The gun, which was installed for protection against submarines, was manned by members of the crew. On the way across barrels, thrown overboard, were used as targets for practice. Members of the crew said that two weeks ago they saw a Zeppelin brought down in flames over Boston.

THE HARMONY OFF.

The S. S. Harmony sailed for the Moravian settlements along the Labrador coast on Saturday.

SUNDAY SCHOOL ANNIVERSARY SERVICES.

Yesterday was "Rally Day" at Queen's Road Church, when the postponed Sunday School anniversary services were held. At the morning service the preacher was Rev. D. B. Hemmon, of Gower Street Church, who, taking as the basis of his remarks Ephesians 6th chapter, delivered a most instructive address on the duties of all young soldiers of the King of Kings. In his remarks the preacher requested the congregation to consider themselves for the time being as boys and girls again; and by relating incidents relative of resistance to temptation—some of them local—which had come under his own observation, deeply impressed his hearers with the obvious fact that the only true safeguards in the battle of life, as set forth by the great apostle are the Shield of Faith, the Helmet of Salvation and the Sword of the Spirit, which is the Word of God.

In the afternoon an open session of the Sunday School was held in the Lecture Hall, at which there was a large gathering of scholars, their parents and friends. Mr. H. E. Cowan, Past Superintendent of the school, presided and in his opening remarks gladly welcomed, on behalf of the school, Rev. Dr. Bond of Cochrane St. Centennial Methodist Church, who was to address the meeting. A splendid programme of solos, duets and recitations were then gone through, in which the scholars of the various classes, from the tiny tot upward, took part; all the performers acquitting themselves in a manner which reflected credit alike on themselves and their teachers.

Rev. Dr. Bond's address was listened to with rapt attention by all present. The reverent gentleman started in by saying that half a century ago he remembered being present—then a boy himself—at old Gower Street Sunday School when a former Congregational minister, Rev. Thos. Hall, had taught some of the boys of that school that well known hymn, "Jesus loves me," etc. Dr. Bond requested his audience to join in singing the hymn through, which was heartily done by all present, and afterwards the rev. gentleman sang the choros in Chinese, as he had heard it some 9 years ago sung in China by both young and old. Turning from old memories to present day affairs Dr. Bond related the touching incident of the brave gunner boy, Cornwall, of H. M. S. Chester, who at the Jutland sea battle, although mortally wounded early in the action, remained at the post of duty till the last, proving faithful even unto death and earning the plaudits of the entire British nation for his heroism. It is incidents of this nature, said Dr. Bond, that sends a thrill through the nation; and in closing a masterly address the rev. gentleman wished the school every success and strongly urged fidelity in the ranks of scholars and teachers.

At the evening service the pastor of the church, Rev. W. H. Thomas, delivered an eloquent discourse on the subject of "Contentment as illustrated in the life of the Shunamite Woman," taking for his text 2nd Kings, 4th chap. ver. 13—"I dwell among my own people." The collection taken up at all the services was for the Sunday School Fund and was a fairly liberal one. J. A. C.

Zeppelin Broke in Two As it Fell.

Spectators Saw Blazing Shapes of Men Dropping From Gondolas.

London, October 2.—For the second time within a calendar month people at Potter's Bar have seen a Zeppelin brought down almost at their very doors. Just four weeks ago a German airship came to ruin at Cuffley, which is only about three miles from Potter's Bar. This second visitation, therefore, was not so much a surprise as the first. A man living near Potter's Bar, who watched the coming of the raider from the northeast, gave the following account of its arrival:

"What struck me most about it was the evident uncertainty of the crew as to where they were or where they wanted to go. They stopped; they turned this way and that; they manoeuvred in every direction in order to avoid the searchlights which were darting about all around them—but all to no purpose. The way in which the great beams of light followed the airship in all its desperate efforts to escape was really wonderful.

"A few moments afterwards the guns began to shell the Zeppelin. They burst all around it, some of them so near that it seemed as though hits had been scored. Then in a moment a bright light burst out in the body of the airship, and in another moment she was a mass of flames from end to end. She seemed to turn over on her side and then gradually sink to the earth. While coming down she broke in halves and during the descent threw huge bunches of some flaming material."

"Upended Like a Duck in a Pond."

Another resident of Potter's Bar, who watched the airship through powerful field glasses for eighteen minutes before it fell to the earth, said: "It was about 11:45 p.m. when I first saw the searchlights pick the raider out. Aeroplanes were humming and climbing in the air, and once I saw them thrown in sharp relief by the sweeping searchlights. Then a tongue of flame ran the whole length of the Zeppelin. The raider upended like a duck in a pond. I distinctly saw the engine in the rear gondola come sliding out of its framework, strike against the fore gondola, and fall to the ground.

"The Zeppelin was now a vertical blaze, with a flare of some 200 feet blazing above the extreme limit of the framework. As the airship began to drop she left a fire-trail behind, and I saw the circling aeroplanes alighted in the red glare. Her fall, gradual at first, took the form of a series of jerks; but she finished the last 2,000 feet quickly, 'little' explosions coming from her all the time. Out of the remaining gondola spurts of flame came, and, with the aid of my glasses, I made out these to be either the falling or jumping shapes of men. For the greater part of her descent the Zeppelin was a vertical cage of flame, but before the climax came she began to split almost amidships."

Timely Warning.

Following on the new regulations respecting the lights of the city after sunset and before sunrise we would strongly recommend that parents and guardians keep children off the public streets at night time, helping thereby to minimize accident. How essential this step is was evident last night at a fire on the King's Bridge Road. Boys occupied the middle of the road as well as the fire companies and the wonder is that some one was not killed. We would also suggest in the public interest that infants and afflicted people remain indoors as much as possible when nightfall comes.

C. M. B. C.

The C. M. B. C. held their first meeting for the fall and winter sessions in the Synod Building yesterday afternoon. Rev. J. Brinton, Spiritual Director, presided, and some seventy members were present. The Chairman in extending a warm welcome to the members hoped the sessions would be as successful as previously. In referring to the great struggle now going on in Europe the Chairman paid a tribute to the memory of four class members who have made the supreme sacrifice. Their names are:—Lieut. W. Ryall, who was formerly in the band; Private Herman Noseworthy, one of the readers; Q. M. Sgt. W. Miles and Pte. Alf. Reid. The Chairman chose as his subject "The Road to Faith" and was listened to with deep interest by the large number present.

A new organ has been placed in the class room, and has added greatly to the musical portion of the meetings.

What About Badges

For Rejected Naval Volunteers?
 Several young men from the outports, who have been refused admission to the Royal Navy owing to illness or physical defects, have made application on board H. M. S. Briton for a similar badge to that awarded rejected volunteers for the army, but were politely informed by the officers that it was not in their power to grant such request. However, each brave lad that offers his service and is rejected is given a certificate, showing that he was willing to fight for King and country. Surely the men of the senior service are entitled to the same privileges as those allowed the Army.

Your Boys and Girls.

Much of the demoralization arising in family life at meal time is caused by either the irregular coming and going of school children or the absence of this part of the family at the luncheon hour. The hastening away in the morning without time or care to appreciate a well prepared breakfast is an equal source of evil, but lies in the hands of the homemaker alone to control.

Perhaps in this, as well as in other much talked of school reforms, the parents are chiefly to blame for not asking the assistance of school boards in this important matter. It is highly probable that if the subject of school lunches were brought practically to the notice of those in authority, something effective and systematic would be done. A request, even from each parent, interested, sent directly to the central authorities, might work wonderful changes.

New Church Contract Awarded.

We understand that the contract for the building of the new church, St. Joseph's Parish, Hoylesdown, has been awarded to Mr. J. Pidgeon, carpenter, and Messrs. W. Murphy and N. Coady, masons. Building operations will commence right away. At an early date the foundation stone will be laid by His Grace Archbishop Roche.

Don't Neglect Your Cough.

A little cold may not seem a dangerous thing—you may feel inclined to let it go on hoping that to-morrow it will be better—but can you afford to take chances? Just as the little insignificant acorn grows if let alone to the mighty giant oak, that cough if not stopped may grow to a very serious illness. When a cough starts there's no telling where it will end. You know no doubt, of cases right among people you have known, where serious complications and fatal illness have had their start from a neglected cough or cold. "Don't neglect your cough." SCARCITY OF TWENTY AND FIFTY CENT PIECES.—On Saturday several large business establishments were greatly inconvenienced by not being able to obtain 20 and 50 cent pieces from the banks, and as a consequence one large manufacturing concern who pay their employees every Saturday afternoon, had to dole out over two hundred dollars in 10 cent pieces. The scarcity of these coins at this season of the year is to be regretted, as with so many outport fishermen here disposing of their summer's catch and purchasing their winter's supply, the inconvenience of having to receive their change in so small a coinage is very great.

Tragic Deaths Yesterday Afternoon

TWO BOYS DROWNED AT SOUTH SIDE BATTERY.

The community was startled yesterday afternoon on learning that two school boys had lost their lives by drowning at the South Side Battery, Fort Amherst Lighthouse. The names are Gerald Moore, aged 13, son of Mr. Joseph Moore, baker with the Reid-Newsfoundland Company, and Frank Murphy, aged 14, son of Mr. Edward Murphy, of the Wool Factory. The two victims and a brother of Murphy left their homes on Hamilton Street in buoyant spirits at two o'clock just after dinner, and in company with a number of their associates proceeded to the Battery to take in some of the unusual sights in evidence in that vicinity lately. Being more curious than the others, Gerald Moore and Frank Murphy moved closer to the water's edge to watch a schooner entering port. There was a particularly high sea running near the Lighthouse yesterday. In fact ordinarily there is a heavy underground sea there, known as the "breakers." With their attention centred on something else, as already stated, the boys were seated on a rock. Suddenly about 3.30 p.m. a huge comb swept in over the air and the receding wave carried the children into the relentless ocean below. They sank almost immediately and were never seen afterwards. Their companions, as well as a man named S. Merrille saw the unfortunate happening but were powerless to render assistance. A few minutes after the Police Station was communicated with by telephone from Fort Amherst. The tug Ingraham arrived, having on board a posse of police officers supplied with jiggers and hoses to make search for the bodies. However, the search was futile, as after dragging the bottom for over two hours the bodies were not recovered and the Ingraham returned to port.

That portion of the harbour is now historic for drowning accidents and a noteworthy circumstance is that bodies were never recovered out of the "breakers." Six years ago a boy named Murphy, of Georgetown lost his life by being swept away while standing on the same rock. Similarly a young man named Cooper was drowned many years previous. Yesterday's tragedy has caused widespread sympathy which will go out to the sorrowing families and in which the Telegram joins.

Dr. Bond at Cochrane St. Church.

"Why Does Not God End the War?"
 The usual Sabbath services were held in the Cochrane St. Centennial Church yesterday. The Rev. N. M. Gray, M.A., before taking up his text "For me to live is Christ," from which a timely and profitable exhortation was given addressed the boys and girls present on what a chart stands for and how it marks off the rocks and shoals. The rocks of profanity, Sabbath desecration, bad books and bad habits were dealt with and all were urged to conform their lives with the principles laid down in the best chart that of the Bible.

As was anticipated, the evening service was very largely attended, the Pastor, the Rev. Dr. Bond, being the preacher. "Why Does Not God End the War?" based on the words of Habakkuk, "Oh Lord how long shall I cry and Thou wilt not hear." The Doctor referred in touching language to the war raging at the present time with its awful loss of life, sacrifice and suffering. God's chastisements are abroad in the earth and nations as well as peoples must bow in humble humiliation and submit to God's laws and Divine plans. God must vindicate His own high purposes and the extension of His kingdom. Look what the war has already done for Russia, France and our own Empire to uplift men by the suppression of the liquor traffic, an evil that has done infinitely more harm than anything else on the face of the globe. Class distinctions are being done away with, the rich man's son as well as that of the poor man's are found shoulder to shoulder in the trenches as well as on the field of battle. The Doctor is a pleasing speaker and rivets the attention of his hearers from start to finish. The sermon was given the closest attention and was probably one of the ablest and most convincing sermons delivered by the rev. gentleman.

CITIZENS' COMMITTEE.—The Citizens' Committee will meet at the Board of Trade Rooms sharp at 8 o'clock to-night. We understand some very important business will come up for discussion.

London, Oct. 9.—The Chronicle, the only Monday morning paper to comment editorially on the exploit of the German U-53 expresses the hope that the United States Government will reconsider the announced attitude toward belligerent submarines because "if Germany is allowed to wage such a war off the United States coast we must take counter-measures."

Referring to the peace dispatches the U-boat is believed to have brought the paper adds: "It is palpable that American peace intervention at this stage is not in Allied interest. #### Says Neutrality Violated.

New York, Oct. 9.—Following are some of the editorial opinions published in New York and elsewhere on the new German submarine warfare on the American side of the Atlantic:

The New York Herald—

"A virtual blockade of New York and other American ports has been created by the appearance of the Prussian submarine U-53 and its destruction of shipping in American waters.

There can be no avoiding the issue raised by these acts. It is not whether in individual cases there has been technical adherence to a policy of warning. It is that submarine operations in the lanes of sea travel leading immediately to American ports cannot be, must not be tolerated.

Local Druggists Repair What Famous Surgeons Cannot Touch

Shattered nerves are beyond the reach of the Surgeon's knife. What will repair them? Dozens of people right here in your home town will bear testimony to this fact that Zoetic—the health tonic—has set them on their feet again. This famous combination of glycer-phosphates—the actual element of the human body—Cod Liver Oil and delicious tonic wine, supply the very elements that worn out nerves require. In a quiet way the action of Zoetic is truly marvellous. Without a trace of narcotic it induces sound sleep. And following that, better and better digestion. And following that a final and complete rebuilding of the nervous system drained of vitality. Two weeks' faithful use of it will convince you. Because you have been so often misled, expecting much and receiving little, we offer outright to refund the purchase price of Zoetic if at the end of two weeks you cannot report real progress toward better health. Start trying it to-day. Sold by T. McMurdo & Co., Sole Distributing Agents for Newfoundland.

United States has been grossly violated by the coming of the U-53 into the American port to acquire information concerning the whereabouts of vessels at sea and her prompt departure from that port upon her mission of destruction.

"The protection of this and other American ports against this Prussian blockade is another and much more vital thing. This cannot wait. It is the highest duty of the Government of the United States to go to any length that may be necessary to put an end to this Prussian warfare in American waters, and without a day's delay."

The New York Times:

"The waters where this most unwelcome visitor is prowling and destroying are the highways to our chief ports.

"Through them pass ships carrying a great part of our commerce and substantially all the American passengers who cross the seas.

"One rash act, a single mistake, on the part of the U-boat commander, causing the loss of even one American life, would provoke instant action by the American Government. Thereafter despatches to Ambassador von Bernstorff could be handed to him in Berlin, and relations between the two Governments would be at an end.

"This submarine has begun a wholesale indiscriminate foray against our commerce. It appears to be almost certain that she has already sunk vessels in disregard of law."

The New York World:

"The U-53 showed yesterday that she is instructed to pass under the American flag. But if a mistake should be made in the case of an American ship, or if American citizens lose their lives under the flags of belligerent ships destroyed, questions will arise for the United States Government which Germany's note never sufficiently covered."

Typical German View.

"Although maintaining in port the silence of a sphynx, Lieut. Captain Rose was not many hours out of American territorial waters before he availed himself of the opportunity of answering collectively all questions as to his mission on this side of the Atlantic.

"They were simple, indeed, who thought that the German Government was paying postage on routine correspondence with submarines of the latest and most extensive type. They know now that it was not.

"Yesterday morning's bag for the U-53, off Nantucket, was the British ship Westpoint, 2,412 tons gross; the British ship Strathdene, the steamer Stephano of the Red Cross Line, and some other vessels.

"It was clean work, according to all reports to hand, without loss of life, and unattended by any of those invasions of our neutral rights which have so often attached to the operations of British warships on our coasts. This is a beginning creditable alike to the officers and men of the U-53 and the service which they ornament."

What We Owe to Russia

Speaking of Russia Mr. Winston Churchill says: "We have many Allies. Many States, great and small, are banded together with us to see this thing through to the end, and it were ungracious to draw comparisons between them. But this I can say with your agreement and approval on an occasion like this, that there is no Power fighting on our side to whom we feel a deeper debt of gratitude than to the great Empire of Russia, because Russia has faced and overcome difficulties more cruel and losses more serious than any of the other great combatants, and it is to General Brusiloff, with his gallant army, that we owe that signal succession of triumphs which in the last three months have shaken the Austrian Empire to its foundation and transformed to our advantage the whole aspect and situation of the war."

AUTUMN.

Autumn is that season of the year when the window screens come off and the six-ply union suit comes on. About this time every year we have a spell of autumn weather, when it becomes necessary to think deeply upon some disagreeable subject, like hard coal or house cleaning. It is a rude shock to a man who has succeeded in saving enough money out of a summer's slavery to buy oversized non-skid tires and then find that autumn catches him without anything in the coal-bin but currents of air and a shovel.

Autumn is a delightful season of the year, however, as it paints the fading leaf a golden hue and deposits it in large, knotted clusters in the caves trough, where nobody but a steeplejack can get at it. The autumn leaf is a beautiful sight, but when one thinks of the thousands of cisterns and waterpots which are choked by it every fall and have to be cleaned out by some human fly, his admiration for the same falls quite a few feet.

Autumn is welcomed by the automobile enthusiast, as the roads are not so uneasy as they are in the spring. By the time autumn arrives nine-tenths of our country roads are covered with a velvety carpet of domestic dust, which conceals the ninelth thank-you-ma'am from public view and breaks more semi-elliptic rear springs than driving into an open drawbridge. Two of the most pleasant features of autumn are the total absence of mud and the noiseless withdrawal of the hay-fever germ, which is succeeded by the earnest and industrious grip microbe.

Stripling Piper's Heroism

Led Black Watch in Battle—Played in Clouds of Smoke and Shrapnel Till Victory Came—Then, Dying, Intoned Requiem of Dead.

Philadelphia, Oct. 9.—It was in the wards of an Edinburgh hospital that I heard a wonderful story of human bravery. It was told me by a wounded private in the famous Black Watch Regiment—that regiment which for centuries has been one of Britain's bulwarks, writes Ellen Adair in the Evening Ledger.

"It's the tale of a little piper chap," he said, "who did one of the finest deeds I ever witnessed."

From beneath his pillow he drew out a photograph of a football team. "Before the war I was a 'professional' football player," he said, "and so was the piper. Here he is in the corner of the group."

"One day the doctors told him he wasn't strong enough to continue. So he had to give it up. When war broke out he tried to enlist. But they wouldn't pass him. He tried fifteen times. And then they let him in—but only as a piper.

"We met out at Flanders—the little piper chap and I. It was the day before a great charge. We had a game of football—the Black Watch and the Seaforth Highlanders. The Black Watch won.

"Next morning, just at dawn, we were given the order to charge. Before us lay a village, a mere huddle of wreckage, for our artillery had played havoc with the little place. Our orders were to take it at the point of the bayonet.

"We 'drubbed' a football right across No Man's Land up to the danger point. You may think that curious—playing a game right in the face of death—but it's a glorious way to charge!

"A hail of bullets greeted us. Bombs and rifle fire thinned our ranks. But we pressed on. The village was a wreckage, it's true, but wreckage makes as good defence work as houses. Each broken building was a fortress, a machine gun citadel.

"In the midst of all the uproar I suddenly heard the sound of pipes. It was the mad, merry skirl of the Scottish air, 'The Dell Among the Excisemen.' I started around, and there was the little piper chap, marching up down the wrecked street, with his pipes in full blast. How he got there Heaven alone knows.

"At times he completely vanished in a swirl of belching smoke. But when it cleared there he was again, playing his pipes as joyously as if for pennies at a fair—a solitary and splendid target for German guns. Myself, I wouldn't have done it for a thousand pounds!

"His gallant Scottish tunes did wonders in cheering us on. When he played 'MacGregor's Gathering' we charged one fortress five times over without pause.

"It was after a sudden cloud of smoke had cleared away that I saw the little piper was staggering as he walked. A bullet had got him in the side. But his music was as clear and loud as before.

shock was in store for me. For, pipes still in full blast and playing as merrily as before, he was half lying against a broken building, and one of his legs had been shot away.

"It was only when the village was completely cleared of the enemy, and victory was ours, that the music of the pipes changed. The stirring battle-march gave way to an old, heart-rending Highland lament. Through that quiet street rang the strains of 'The Land o' the Leal.' The first verse ended suddenly. And the little piper dropped his pipes, slipped over sideways, and lay very still. His fight was over, and he had joined his friends."

Sleepless Nights Overcome By Safe Method.

SUGGESTIONS GIVEN WHEREBY INSOMNIA CAN BE SAFELY AND QUICKLY CURED.

Worry, overwork, overstudy and indigestion cause insomnia. Healthy, natural sleep can't be produced by drugs.

First, the blood circulation must be improved. Congestion of blood in the head must be removed.

Irritation in the brain must be removed. It's because Ferrozone equalizes circulation, because it soothes the irritation, because it removes congestion that it does cure insomnia.

For building blood and nerve, for instilling force and life into over-worked organs, for establishing strength and vitality, where can you find anything so efficient as Ferrozone?

Remember, sleep is just as important as food. You must sleep or break down, but if you'll use Ferrozone and thereby remove the conditions which now keep you from sleep, you'll get well quickly.

Ferrozone is not a narcotic, not a dope; it is a health-giving tonic that any child or delicate woman can use. Absolutely safe in Ferrozone.

Take it for a month, take it for a year—no harm, but immeasurable good will result.

To sleep well, look well, feel well, to be free from depression, nervousness or blues—use Ferrozone. It's a food tonic, a healer to the weary and wretched, a boon to the sleepless—sold in 50c. boxes, six for $2.50, at all dealers, or direct from The Catarrh-ozone Co., Kingston, Ont.

Nervous Passerby.

Sparks were seen issuing from the house of a family named Martin, on King's Bridge Road last night and fearing an outbreak of fire, as there was a high wind raging, some one sent in an alarm from box 116, bringing out the Central and Eastern Companies. Their services were not necessary. No damage was done.

RAILWAY TIME TABLE CHANGED.—The Trampusay train, which for the past six months has arrived in the city at 9.30 a.m. and departed at 5 p.m., will go back to the old schedule, and commencing this afternoon will leave St. John's at 5.30 p.m. and returning will arrive at 11.30 a.m.

CORSETS!

That new gown will never have the appearance you so much desire if you risk putting it on over an ill-fitting corset.

Good Corsets are constantly being designed to conform to the latest demands of Fashion. They are the foundation for all new Styles in Dress, and will supply the pose-demanded, only when you wear the proper model suited to your own individual figure. This is where most people fail to acquire the proper carriage so much sought after by all well-dressed women.

The following Celebrated makes now in stock
D. & A., LaDIVA and P. C.
