A Child of Sorrow.

CHAPTER XIII.

"I don't know," she said, quite frankly. "The face in the portrait is so-careless and light-hearted; you are graver now and more thoughtful."

"Ah, yes," he said; "I was just a young man-about-town when that was painted; and a happy-go-lucky beggar with nothing to worry me but debts and duns; it didn't matter what became of me, and I knew it and didn't care; but that beast of a horse killed Harold and changed all things for me. While he was alive it wasn't of any consequence what I did or where I went or what became of me; but now—"

A huge deer-hound, who had heard his master's voice, came into the hall and bounded up to him with a mixture of doggie delight and aristocratic dignity.

"Down Graf!" said Heroncourt. "You are not afraid of dogs? He is quite quiet—at least, generally."

"Afraid!" echoed Maida, turning her eyes upon him with surprise. "What a lovely creature!" she knelt beside the dog and put her white arms round his neck, and turned his face toward her. The noble beast reluctantly allowed his head to be moved, but his eyes still clung to his master's face for a moment or two; then he looked into the beautiful face so near his own, and, after a moment of solemn regard, he put his nose against her cheek. She took the splendid head between her soft palms and kissed him on the forehead, and Graf slowly wagged his tail, but looked up at his master apologetically, as if he were saying, "Sorry, sir, but you see it's a lady, and one has to let them do as they like; besides, she's the right sort."

"I found him on a hill-side in Sutherlandshire, one autumn night. I'd lost my way, fortunately for Graf, for he had been wounded by a stag, and was lying down as if he had thrown up the sponge. I managed to bind up his wound and got him home; it was rather a big order, for he's pretty heavy—too heavy, any way, to put in your pocket."

"You carried him?" said Maida. "No wonder that he loves you. Dogs never forget."

"Oh, he's all right," said Heroncourt. "We are quite pals. It hurt me to leave him with Lord Raymond, although he makes almost as big a fool of himself over the dog as I do; but I had no place for him in London, and, if I had had, he would have been unhappy and got into trouble, perhaps. We were very glad to see each other when I came back, and I shall feel parting from him again pretty badly when Lord Raymond returns."

"Poor dog!" said Maida. "You are not going to remain at the Court, then, Lord Heroncourt?"

"No; I wish I were," replied Heroncourt, with a shrug of his shoulders. "Can't afford it; too poor; obliged to let it. I'm only here owing to Lord Raymond's kindness—but I daresay you have heard that, anyway, I don't want to bore you with my personal affairs. There is a large picture in the gallery—one of Lord Leighton's—the best, they say—he went on reluctantly, for she made an exquisite picture as she knelt beside the dog, pressing its head to her bosom; indeed, she made a more exquisite picture than he possessed."

"Let us go and see it," she said. "May he come?"

"Oh, he'll come fast enough," answered Heroncourt; "he walks all over the house as if it belonged to him. Mind he does not tear your lace," for the dog had put up one paw in a caressing fashion.

"Oh, I don't care," she said, with a note of girlish gladness. "He is welcome to tear every bit of it for being so good and sweet to me."

Heroncourt looked down at the dog; then, fearful lest he should indeed tear the beautiful frock, motioned him away with a slight movement of his hand which Graf instantly obeyed, but with an apologetic glance of his great, soft eyes at Maida.

Heroncourt led the way up the broad stairs with their massive balustrade and carved side-panelling, above which were pictures—every one a gem, some priceless—to where Leighton's picture took up a large portion of the wall of the gallery. Beside it stood a magnificent organ; and, after glancing at the picture, Maida's eyes went wistfully to the organ.

"Why, it's large enough for a church," she said. "We have one at the Towers—a gaudy thing with no music in its soul."

"This is all right, I think," he said. "Will you try it?"

He turned on the electricity which lit the lamps at the keyboard and worked the bellows; but Maida shook her head timidly.

"The others—it will disturb them," she said.

He had forgotten the others, had forgotten everything excepting the girl beside him.

"Good heavens, why should it?" he said. "Pray try it. If you knew how passionately fond I am of music—though of course that is no reason why you should play," he added, with a humility quite novel to him.

"Oh, but yes," she said, with a frankness and candour which helped to make up her charm for him. "You forget that you've been taking so much trouble to interest and amuse me. I will play it, if you wish it."

She sat down and began, and Heroncourt drew back in the shadow, so that he might watch her face without her knowing it.

She played very softly, so that she could speak through the music.

"I had some lessons from a man in London, but I could not afford to go on with them, and I could not practise because we were too poor to buy anything better than a cheap harmonium with mock stops; and that would have been too hateful. It is a beautiful organ."

She was playing Chopin's "Funeral March," the march which has in it so much of the subtle joy of life as well as the subtle peace of death; and Heroncourt, to whom music was a passion, thrilled and began actually to tremble. Divine music and divine girlhood; a double feast—think of it!

When she had finished, he said, almost harshly:

"Go on, please."

"Oh, must I?" she murmured.

"The others—"

of his hand, and she glided into a thing of Grieg's. Neither of them was conscious that the others had left the drawing-room, drawn by the exquisite music, and that some were coming softly up the stairs, while the rest were standing in the hall, looking up in rapt silence and admiration.

"Oh, beautiful!" he breathed, as the last note died away, and he came out of the shadow and looked at her with his heart in his eyes and his lips set tightly, with his brows drawn in the frown which darkens a man's face when he is deeply moved. She had lost herself and had forgotten his presence, and she raised her face with a little, startled air.

"Beautiful, indeed!" echoed Lord Walmington, from the stairs, and there was a subdued chorus of gratitude from the others.

Maida rose and turned quickly, with her hands resting on the edge of the key-board behind her, a sudden flush rising to her face, her eyes shining with a startled look through the long, dark lashes. She made so exquisite a picture, set in the soft halo of the electric light, that her unsuspected audience almost gaped at her.

Lady Glassbury saw Maida's confusion and that she was embarrassed by the conspicuous position in which her own great musical gift and Heroncourt's attentions had placed her, and with infinite tact ran up the stairs to her.

"Don't go yet!" she said in a casual way. "Please play something else for us," and she glanced at Heroncourt, who went down the stairs and joined Carrie and her father, the latter standing looking as if he did not know whether to be pleased and flattered or not by the sensation his elder daughter had caused; but there was no uncertainty about Carrie.

"Doesn't she play superbly?" she said, taking Heroncourt's arm with girlish enthusiasm and looking up at him with her greenish-grey eyes sparkling. "But I can't think how you managed to get her to play; she's so shy—that sounds funny, seeing that she used to be a professional—ugh! I mustn't let father hear!—but she says it is ever so much harder to play to a few, especially when you know them."

He nodded.

"I think I understand," he said. "It was very kind of your sister to consent; but I worried her into it."

"Did you?" said Carrie, smiling. "How little you know Maida! Why, wild horses wouldn't worry her into anything."

"Then it's all the kinder of her, and I'm all the more grateful," he said. "Do you play billiards, Miss Carrie?"

"Now, how should I?" she responded. "Did there seem room for a billiard-table at Coleridge Street? Is there one here—but of course there is."

"We will make up a pool. Come along! I'll give you your first lesson," he said in quite a new tone, an almost boyish one; and, tucking her arm in his, he led the way to the billiard-room, calling out over his shoulder: "Who's for pool?"

For the rest of the evening he almost devoted himself to Carrie, who, under his skilful tuition, soon picked up the way of holding her cue, and to her great delight and pride presently succeeded in potting a ball. It was quite a merry party, the merriest that had met at the Court for a long time; and Maida, coming with her father to the door to say that their carriage had arrived, found Carrie the laughing centre of a laughing and admiring group, not the least merry being Heroncourt himself.

"Going already?" he said, wistfully. "Why, we are just beginning the evening!"

"Must we really go? Oh, I have enjoyed myself so much! And what a lovely game pool is!"

"Billiards is better," he said. "You must let me give you some lessons."

"Yes, you'll make a splendid player," said Lord Walmington. "You must be so good as to come over and play with us."

"Don't you; you stick to this table!" cried Lord Glassbury. "It's far better than Lord Walmington's."

Heroncourt took Carrie—not Maida—to their carriage; but as he closed the door he looked at her rather intently.

"Thank you," he said. "You have been very kind to us to-night, Miss Carrington. Good-night, Miss Carrie; you won't forget that stroke I showed you?"

"Oh, no; I shall dream of it—dream of everything!" she responded, eagerly.

Then, as the carriage started, she leaned forward and waved her hand to him, her face wreathed in smiles.

"Oh, hasn't it been delightful, too delightful to be real!" she said, sinking back with a long sigh. "Isn't it a lovely, grand place, and aren't they delicious people? Maida, I know now why most persons are snobs. If I to want to know people like that makes one a snob, why, I'm one myself from to-night! Think of it! They are really grand folk, the swellest of the swells, and yet they are so simple and natural—and—oh, I want a word to describe them! They're ever so much less stiff than middle-class people. Did you see Lord Glassbury reach over the table and knock the things down, and not care a bit; and Lord Walmington ate his apple with a knife as if he didn't know any better? And how they laughed and joked in the billiard-room just like—just like a lot of city clerks enjoying themselves—only city clerks wouldn't think it proper to be noisy! And Lord Heroncourt—oh, Maida, I've fallen in love with him!"

"How nice for Lord Heroncourt!" said Mr. Spinner, with a grin.

"Yes, I'm sped, as Mercutio—like Elaine—pine away and die. He's too noble and great and sweet for words. Do you think there would be any chance for me if I were five years older, Maida? Oh, and I was so glad of being a kid, until to-night! No wonder they are all so fond and proud of him. Did you see how Lady Glassbury looked at him from time to time, and how she turned to him and listened when he spoke, and how the rest asked his opinion and seemed to treat him as if he were a kind of chief?"

Telegram Fashion Plates.

The Home Dressmaker should keep a Catalogue Scrap Book of our Fashion Plates. These will be found very useful to refer to from time to time.

A PRETTY "PARTY" OR "BEST" DRESS.

2080—One could make this of dimity or dotted Swiss, of lawn or batiste. It is also nice for crepe and albatross, chaille and lawn. In wash silk, with a finish of smocking, it will be very pleasing. The lines are simple and very little trimming will be required. Lace edging and insertion, or bands of embroidery would make a pretty finish. Flouncing or bordered goods could be used for this model.

The Pattern is cut in 4 sizes: 1, 2, 3 and 4 years. It requires 2 1/2 yards of 27-inch material for a 4-year size.

A pattern of this illustration mailed to any address on receipt of 10 cents in silver or stamps.

A PRACTICAL, CONVENIENT MODEL.

1425—Ladies' House Dress, with Long or Short Sleeve.

For utility, comfort and convenience, this design has much to commend it. It closes in coat style, with the centre fronts overlapping. This assures easy and practical adjustment. An ample pocket is arranged over the side front. The waist is finished with a neat collar, and with cuffs for sleeve in short length. The long sleeve is dart fitted. The dart fulness may be cut away and the opening, thus made, be finished with a facing and underlap for buttons and buttonholes or other fasteners; then the sleeve may be turned back over the arm when desired. The Pattern is good for gingham, percale, lawn, seersucker, soisette, madras, dimity, drill or linen. It is cut in 7 sizes: 22, 24, 26, 28, 30, 32 and 34 inches bust measure. It requires 6 1/2 yards of 36-inch material for a 36-inch size.

A pattern of this illustration mailed to any address on receipt of 10 cents in silver or stamps.

CANADIANS CAPTURE GERMAN LINE TRENCHES.

Canadian Headquarters in France, via London, June 25.—In a difficult advance towards Lens, and amid a confused tangle of wrecked mines, partially destroyed miners' houses, railway embankments and the flooded ground of the Souchez valley, a valuable bit of enemy front line trench, extending over four hundred yards north of the river east of Bois-de-Riamont, was captured during the night by the Canadians and was firmly incorporated. The task set for the Canadians was the capture of enemy outposts to the southwest of Reservoir Hill. An attack on this outpost evidently was expected, the enemy abandoning the ground upon which machine gun fire was immediately turned by the Germans located on a hill. This was followed by artillery fire which continued during the night, and was severe in the vicinity of the Lens electric station. The enemy's dugouts were searched but found to be empty. Several raids last night between Lens and La Bassée showed the German trenches lightly held and little resistance was offered to the raiders. In a recent cable on the part taken by the Canadians in the work preparatory to the capture of Messines Ridge, mention should have been made of the work of the tunnelling companies from the Dominion. During many weary months while the Canadians above ground in the Ypres salient bore with fortitude the constant fire from the enemy's guns behind the ridge, Canadian miners far under ground were driving mine shafts for the enemy's destruction.

VENIZELOS TO FORM MINISTRY.

ATHENS, June 25. M. Jannart, Diplomatic Representative of the Allies in Greece, and Premier Zaimis, had a long conversation with the King at the Palace yesterday. It is reported the Cabinet has resigned and that M. Venizelos has been asked to form a new ministry.

GERMAN SUB. REPORTED SUNK.

AN ATLANTIC PORT, June 25. The officers of a British steamer which arrived to-day reported having sunk a German submarine boat. The vessel sent a shell into the U-boat's magazine, causing an explosion which parted the under-sea boat about midships and each end sank separately. The British ship was uninjured. The submarine was five miles distant and was running away after having attacked the ship nearly four hundred miles off the coast of Ireland.

THE AMERICAN ARMY.

WASHINGTON, June 25. More than half a million of men have volunteered in the American Army and Navy during the period of less than three months that have elapsed since war was declared to exist. The Army, Navy and National Guard represented an aggregate strength of little more than 300,000 men when the war resolution was adopted. Today between 700,000 and 800,000 are enrolled in the various branches of the fighting service and the great majority of them are armed, equipped and under training. They will be joined at the end of the summer by nearly a million men selected for the National Army from millions registered for the war during June.

SINN FEINERS ACTIVE.

CORK, June 25. Machine guns were used on Sinn Feiners in a disturbance here yesterday morning. They were brought into action after the police with clubs had failed to restore order. The soldiers cordoned various points while the police chased rioters to side streets. After having borne much stoning the police ordered that guns be fired on the disturbers. One rioter was killed, another seriously wounded, while a dozen were treated in hospitals for bayonet and other wounds. The riot was eventually quelled without the troops coming into action.

BRITISH OFFICIAL.

LONDON, June 25. The official from the British headquarters in France reads: Our successful attack last night southwest of Lens was followed up during the day on both banks of the Souchez River. Substantial progress was made by our troops in this area on a front of about one and one-half miles. A raid attempted by the enemy last night, southeast of Ypres, was completely repulsed by our machine gun fire. There was heavy fighting in the air yesterday. Five German airplanes were brought down by our machines, five others were driven down out of control. Another hostile machine was shot down by our anti-aircraft guns. Five of ours are missing.

CREW OF FIFTY MISSING.

Base of American Flotilla in British Waters, June 25.—One of the American destroyers' patrol flotilla reported this morning she was unable to find any trace of fifty members of the crew of a British ship which was being attacked by a submarine when the American craft snatched the Britisher's wireless call from the air. "Submarine shelling us" was the first message the destroyer picked up. The position showed the Britisher was 90 miles away, which meant a run of five hours through a high sea for the destroyer. The American craft was just getting under full speed when her wireless sounded a second and final message which read, "Abandoning ship." Only floating wreckage greeted the American bluejackets when they reached the scene, but they patrolled the vicinity for two days in the hope of finding some survivors. Owing to the high sea, it seems doubtful if any of the sunken ship's crew were picked up by passing ships.

TROUBLE IN RUSSIAN NAVY.

PETROGRAD, June 25. Admiral Koltchak, who was removed from the command of the Black Sea Fleet by the mutiny of his men, declares the outbreak, which is now at an end, was fomented by delegates from the Baltic fleet. At a meeting attended by 13,000 soldiers, it was resolved to arrest and search all officers of the fleet, including the Admiral and his chief of staff, on the ground that they were propagating a counter-revolution. The crew of the flagship demanded that Admiral Koltchak surrender his sword. He refused, and said, "The Japanese left me this sword when we evacuated Port Arthur. I won this sword in the Japanese war, and will not give it up. He threw the sword into the sea. The mutineers sent a wireless to all ships to disarm officers. Admiral Koltchak sent wireless instructions to the officers not to resist, so that bloodshed might be avoided. It was finally decided not to arrest the officers, although the men insisted that Admiral Koltchak resign his command.

DISCUSSING WAR PRISONERS.

THE HAGUE, June 25. A British Commission, headed by Lord Newton, has arrived here to discuss with German delegates, headed by General Friedrich, the question of war prisoners of both countries. The prisoners' camps, reprisals and matters connected with the exchange of interned prisoners over military age and disabled prisoners will be considered. The Netherlands Government will be represented by Baron von Vredendyck.

ARGENTINE STEAMER TORPEDOED.

BUENOS AIRES, June 25. The Argentine steamer, Toro, has been torpedoed off Gibraltar. The Foreign Minister sent a message to the Legation at Madrid to institute an inquiry into the matter.

JONNART ARBITRATOR.

regiments as early as the spring of 1915 had to be decimated because of their conduct in the face of the enemy. The Royal Bohemian Body Guard Regiment was permanently disbanded at that time, and its colors sent to the arsenal at Vienna. It was about this time that a correspondent saw a naive letter from a Bohemian prisoner in Serbia, advising his comrades not to desert while in Serbia, as conditions of residence there were too unpleasant.

KING CONSTANTINE BUYS HOME.

AMSTERDAM, June 25. Former King Constantine, of Greece, has, according to the Berlin Lokai Anzeiger, bought a magnificent chateau at Chartreuse near Thun, Switzerland, belonging to German Baron von Goedlitz.

BRITISH TITLES.

LONDON, June 25. The Times learns that in view of the recent decision of King George that these Princes of his family who are his subjects and bear German names and titles should relinquish them, the Duke of Teck takes the title of Marquis of Cambridge, and Prince Alexander of Pattenburg becomes the Marquis of Carisbrook.

DISCUSSING WAR PRISONERS.

THE HAGUE, June 25. A British Commission, headed by Lord Newton, has arrived here to discuss with German delegates, headed by General Friedrich, the question of war prisoners of both countries. The prisoners' camps, reprisals and matters connected with the exchange of interned prisoners over military age and disabled prisoners will be considered. ### ARGENTINE STEAMER TORPEDOED.

BUENOS AIRES, June 25. The Argentine steamer, Toro, has been torpedoed off Gibraltar. The Foreign Minister sent a message to the Legation at Madrid to institute an inquiry into the matter.

JONNART ARBITRATOR.

ATHENS, June 25. M. Jannart Diplomatic representative of the Allied Governments has been called to act as arbitrator in the differences between the Zaimis ministry and the Government of former Premier Venizelos at Salonika. Whether the Zaimis cabinet will resign depends upon Jannart's decision. In case of its resignation probably the Venizelos party will assume power immediately in order to nip in the bud any reactionary movement.

WANTS AUTONOMY.

TIFLES, June 25. At a Congress of Georgian National Democrats a resolution has been adopted in favor of the autonomy of Georgia. Georgia is a district of trans-Caucasian Russia. The Georgians forming about half the population number more than a million divided into various tribes.

DUMA TO BE DISSOLVED.

PETROGRAD, June 25. Premier Iroff has written to Rodzianko, President of the Duma requesting him to evacuate as soon as possible the Lauride Palace which has been used for public business since the revolution with a view of making the necessary preparations in connection with the Constituent Assembly which is to decide on the future form of Government. Rodzianko agreed on the condition that the Soldiers' and Workmen's Delegates previously removed from the palace. He asked references to the Marc Palace documents relating to the Duma. According to a newspaper report the Government has decided to issue a decree dissolving the Duma. The palace of the former Dowager Empress will be given over to the Ministry of Supplies.

ARTILLERY FIGHTING.

PARIS, June 25. Sharp artillery fighting was in progress continuously during the night near Froidmont Farm and Chevroux, says to-day's official statement.

WOMEN AND POTATOES.

LONDON, June 25. A despatch to the Times from Amsterdam reports that a crowd of women stormed a dozen barges in the inner harbor of Rotterdam Saturday and seized about a ton of potatoes destined for England. The barges, which were loaded with 11,000 tons of potatoes, were then removed to the outer harbor and guarded by police. The trouble whereof the foregoing is a mere incident, has arisen, according to a correspondent between Holland and England and Germany. Germany last week demanded a consignment of new potatoes in return for German exports of coal to Holland. Before a consignment could be made 11,000 tons of old potatoes had to be shipped to England under contract. The people of Rotterdam who are themselves insufficiently supplied, learning that these potatoes were awaiting shipment, raided the barges. Meanwhile the Germans are threatening to seize the coal supply unless the potatoes are sent. The correspondent says if the Dutch yield to the German pressure and send these potatoes to Germany they will break their agreement with England and endanger their supply of grain from America, which might prove as serious a loss as German coal.

AMERICAN VERSION.

WASHINGTON, June 25. The secret history of the events leading up to the break with Germany by the United States is contained in a "Red, White, and Blue Book" which has been issued by the Government. Though put out by the National Press Bureau, "How the war came to America," is believed to have been prepared under the direction of the President and many passages appeared to be from his pen.

Still Wasting Time.

When the Canadian and Newfoundland Parliaments assembled this year within a short interval of the conditions under which they met was noticed not only here but in some parts of the Dominion. Both countries faced an election in the ordinary course of events; both countries, our friends in the Opposition to the contrary notwithstanding, saw that events themselves were far from ordinary and that elections were quite unnecessary; both countries had the voluntary system of recruiting "in extreme" and realize that a radical change of method is imperative; and there are other minor parallels to be seen in the two political situations. But the general parallel is now breaking sharply away into divergence. Conscription is the great issue in Canada and the question of an election depends almost wholly upon it. To Canada's everlasting credit the outcome of the struggle is already plain. She possesses politicians who rank their politics below her interest. Many of the foremost Liberals already proclaim their support of the Military Service Bill and their number will be increased. There will be no referendum, with its tedious delay—an armistice with Germany while the delay lasts. The Bill will be carried, possibly with amendments and additions, and the likelihood of an election daily diminishes.

The Passing of the Rt. Rev. Mgr. Veitch.

After a severe illness, the venerable Right Reverend Monsignor Veitch, P.P., Conception Harbor, and senior Priest of the Diocese of St. John's, entered into his eternal rest last night, and it is with profound regret that we record his passing. Monsignor Veitch was an ideal priest and a typical Soggarth Aroon, and was well known and esteemed by all classes and creeds. His loss will be keenly felt. Born at Holyrood in 1848, he entered the Priesthood at the age of 29 and was ordained at Rome. On his return to Newfoundland, Conception was the first parish he labored in. Then he was transferred to King's Cove and later to Bonavista, where the reverend priest worked for over 20 years and many of the present inhabitants of those northern places can recall the hardships and inconveniences of travel in those days. The good priest was blessed with a strong physique, joined to an earnest desire to carry out the sacred duties of his office. He was appointed to the Parish of Conception Harbor by the late Bishop McDonald and consequently had greater scope for his activities. At all times the welfare of his people was uppermost in his mind and this characteristic naturally endeared him to his parishioners. Mgr. Veitch bore with dignity and honor to himself and the Church the position which dignitarily was conferred on him on the recommendation of the late Bishop McDonald. A distinguished scholar and an eloquent preacher, a wise counsellor and a true friend was Mgr. Veitch, who had a strong character and an engaging personality. Withal he was gentle, kind and considerate and preferred the simple life of the Parish Priest to a more elevated post. The many erections and improvements of churches and school buildings in the outports where he laboured are lasting memorials how well and how nobly his work was done. Conception Harbor and the diocese of St. John's will mourn with bitter sorrow the loss of their spiritual guide. The funeral obsequies will take place at Conception Harbor to-morrow.

Citizens' Committee

DISCUSS IMPORTANT MATTER. A special meeting of the Citizens' Committee was held in the Board of Trade Rooms last night and was largely attended. The chief business of the evening was the discussion of a letter from thirty-five citizens who reside on the LeMarchant Road between Springdale and Hamilton Streets, who strongly protest against the action of the St. John's Municipal Council in changing the name of that part of the street. Section 128 of the new Municipal Bill reads:—"It shall be lawful for the Council to name any new street or to change the name of any street when the same shall be deemed advisable," etc. After much discussion the section was amended, and in future the Committee recommends that notice shall be given and the taxpayers shall have the right to appeal to the Council and from the Council to the Governor in Council, whose decision shall be final.

Letters were read from the Premier and Mr. W. J. Higgins, Secretary of the Legislative Joint Select Committee, re the Report on the Municipal Bill, which will be published later.

In connection with the rumored manner in which the Legislature is to deal with the Bill it was decided that providing anything of such a nature should be brought before the Legislature the Committee will meet and decide its attitude as to the same.

Private Kelly Heard From.

Private No. 188 J. J. Kelly, who is one of the lucky members of the Newfoundland Regiment, writing home from France under recent date, to his friends in the city, said he was just out of the trenches for a rest and was feeling well and fit. Pte. Kelly, as his Regimental number indicates, left here with the First Contingent, more historically known as the "Blue Puttees." Fortunately he survived the heavy fighting that he took part in. He writes a very cheery letter and states he would like to pay a visit to his native St. John's. He also intimates that he misses the genial faces of his former associates (meaning those of the First Contingent). Pte. Kelly, who lived with Mr. and Mrs. Yebo on Cabot Street, wishes to be remembered to his friends here.

A Captain's Reply.

London Daily Chronicle: John Bright showed a strict regard for accuracy when he ended a controversial letter "I am, Sir, with whatever respect is due to you." On the other hand, the Admiralty used to make an habitual display of insincerity, all letters from the Lords Commissioners to naval officers—even letters of reproof—being signed "Your affectionate friends."

Their Old Clothes.

By RUTH CAMERON.

RUTH CAMERON

Is there any place left where one can wear out one's old clothes? There was a time—and not so many years ago—when one wore out one's old clothes camping, or on the summer vacation, or working in the garden. Now there are special outfits for gardening, and as for the summer vacation or the camping trip, well—here's what a friend of mine told me her women companions on a recent camping trip wore.

On A Fishing And Camping Trip.
In the first place they had sport skirts, instead of the old skirts we used to put aside for such expeditions.

Then, instead of the old waists that used to be saved for such occasions, or the inexpensive middies that later took their place, they had the daintiest of smocks.
One woman had a silk sweater (a dark one bought specially for camping, she already had a rose colored one for dress-up), another had the latest in white sport sweaters.

The Original Sport Hat.
For hats they had, of course, the ubiquitous sport hat. "Did any article of dress ever develop from such small beginnings to such lengths of costliness as the sport hat? Do you remember the granddaddy of all sport hats? It was a little white duck hat. It cost, I think, a quarter, or at the most, fifty cents. At first it was only plain white, then it began to be made of different colors or to have some kind of scarf about it. I remember a few years ago paying a dollar and seventy-five cents for a sport hat and justifying myself in such extravagance by thinking that I should wear it several years. And look at the sport hats of to-day and what we pay for them. A working girl whom I know bought one recently for nine dollars, about half her salary. Another woman had a very simple little white sport hat with not a single ornament—it cost eighteen dollars and a half.

Silk Petticoats And Silk Stockings.
To return to the camping party—the women wore silk petticoats under their sport silks and silk stockings. Go to any simple middleclass summer place and where once you saw old clothes or inexpensive middies, khaki skirts, duck hats, etc., you will see a repetition of what I have described.

I should really like to see the sport clothes of 1927.

Everyday Etiquette.
"How shall I introduce a lady and gentleman? Whose name shall I mention first and should I ask if they wish to meet?" inquired Grace.
"There should be no reason why friends of years should not meet," said her aunt.
"When introducing a lady and gentleman, always remember to present the man to the lady. You may say, 'Miss Smith may I introduce Mr. Blank?' or 'Miss Smith, this is my friend, Mr. Blank.'"

THE FIRE ESCAPE.
The fire escape is a neat, cast-iron substitute for cremation which is designed to stimulate the sale of cork legs. Thousands of excited, night-robed hotel guests have started from the upper deck of a long, spiral fire escape and reached the bottom in perfect safety, only to be greeted by a twenty-two foot drop to the pavement, and a compound fracture of the left hip. For this reason, hotel guests prefer to dive from the seventh floor into a bed quilted with take their chances with the rebound.
For some reason which no one has ever been able to discover, the hotel management always locates the fire escape on the side of the hotel which will not be reached by the flames until the following afternoon. This causes guests who have no sense of direction to gallop wildly through the corridors and run into several blind alleys before becoming discouraged and dropping head first out of a window. It will never be really safe to travel in this country until hotel keepers are obliged to furnish a blue print and a rustic guide to guests who take the linen chute into the basement for the fire escape.

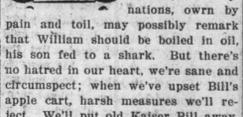

A blue print and a guide to the fire escape.
In some of our larger cities, during the heated term, the fire escape is utilized to good advantage as a sleeping porch. It is a weird sight to see a large, semi-parched family tossing restlessly on the bosom of a fire escape which has been storing up heat for two weeks, and right after supper begins to let go of it at the rate of 4,200 kilowatts per minute. Some people also hang the Monday wash on the fire escape, where it can be clearly seen from the windows of an elevated train, and adds a touch of romantic interest to the scenery.

The most popular and effective fire escape now in use is the church, which sometimes fails to furnish an easy exit, and has to be supplemented by the death-bed repentance. One of the most painful spectacles in this life is that of an old man who climbed out on the fire escape of church membership, and then discovered that he couldn't proceed any farther without paying an outlawed grocery bill. The church member who has no use for the church, except as a cushioned elevator to the celestial city, usually finds out sooner or later that he is climbing in the wrong direction.

NO HATRED.

Although we'd can that Kaiser skate, and beef the kron prinz chap, we chant no bitter hymn of hate, as we go forth to scrap. When we have polished off the mand; we'll calmly put away the gun in our un-nations, worn by pain and toil, may possibly remark that William should be boiled in oil, his son fed to a shark. But there's no hatred in our heart, we're sane and circumspect; when we've upset Bill's apple cart, harsh measures we'll reject. We'll put old Kaiser Bill away, where he can do no harm, and set the kron prinz pitching hay on some sequestered farm. For Hindenburg a lonely rock, an island bleak and bare, where gulls around his head will lock, and lay eggs in his hair. We wish to see the German state once more a happy land, and we shall sing no hymn of hate, when old Bill is canned. But she must still be bounded down till Bill no more shall own his ermine, scepter, sword and crown, his scrotula and throne. Pop Hindenburg in jail, or (though we sing a hymn of hate) our work will not wait!

The Gas Range!
The Gas Range means comfort for the housewife; shorter kitchen hours for her, and a cleaner kitchen. It is a great mistake to think that cooking with gas is expensive.
Whenever a woman becomes used to gas for cooking, thoughts of a coal or wood stove fill her with gloom. A Gas range is so much easier to operate, and so much cleaner, that the idea of going back to the old style methods is decidedly unpleasant. Yet in winter many housewives think they must use a coal or wood stove, because there is no other way of heating the kitchen. THERE IS ANOTHER WAY AND IT IS FAR BETTER THAN THE OLD. Letter To the Premier.

The following letter to the Premier has been forwarded us by the Industrial Workers' Association, and is published at their request:

The Right Honourable the Prime Minister of Newfoundland:

Dear Sir,—
You are already in receipt of a set of Resolutions on the subject of Food Control passed on the 16th instant at a public meeting of the working classes of St. John's. At that meeting a Committee was appointed which has to-night reported to a public meeting held under the auspices of the Newfoundland Industrial Workers' Association. That Committee has prepared a draft letter setting forth in greater detail than the Resolutions the reasons why they were agreed to. This letter has been read to and approved of by the meeting held to-night.

You have doubtless seen copies of certain Resolutions on the subject of Food Prices adopted by a number of Importers, Dealers, and Retailers of Flour. We note their willingness to co-operate with any Board of Control appointed by the Government. We desire, however, to point out that the recommendation of these parties that they control one-half the membership of said Board is manifestly unfair to the community generally, and practically amounts to an insult to the intelligence and fair-mindedness of the working classes.

We are not asking you, Sir, and your colleagues on the Executive Council to take from any man what the country has always been willing to allow him, namely, a fair and reasonable return on his investment. We are ready to admit that some Importers and Distributors have made and are making a fair and reasonable profit. It would be folly, however, to say that all have been content with this. We learn that the Honourable Executive Council has been officially informed by a Royal Commission that profits have been made on flour totaling in some cases as high as five dollars per barrel; yet before the war these same Importers and Distributors were in receipt of a total profit of about seventy-five cents per barrel. We are aware that this statement has been contradicted by the persons who signed the Resolutions of the Flour Dealers, but we may well be excused if we prefer to believe the judicial finding of a Royal Commission to the denial of interested parties unsupported by a tittle of evidence. If the control of the necessities of life in some cases (according to the Royal Commission), in profits ranging as high as six times the normal profit, it is time that such control should cease. We recommend the appointment of a Board of Food Control, and we desire that such Board shall not itself be controlled by persons on some of whom suspicion rests of having pocketed profits which, in our opinion, amount to what is known as legalized robbery.

We are willing that the twenty signatories of the Flour Dealers' Resolutions should have representation on the Board of Food Control; but we suggest to them that they cast forth from among them, as lepers and pariahs, any individuals who stand convicted, by a legally constituted Court of Inquiry, of the crime of extortion. At a time when all classes are bearing the burden placed on them by this great and terrible war, while blood and treasure are being freely spent that men may live in peace and freedom, at such a time certain persons have been so unparliamentary as to add greatly to that burden and take out of the mouths of mothers and children the very bread to secure which our soldiers and sailors suffer and die.

The Flour Dealers may rest assured, in the event of the majority of the Board of Control consisting of persons in sympathy with the working classes, that their suggestions will receive full and careful consideration, and that nothing will be done to take from them their legitimate profits or to cause such disorganization of trade as would result finally in loss to the community.

If a jury of common men may hear evidence and decide upon the lives, liberty and property of their fellow-men, surely the common people have intelligence enough to judge as to what constitutes a fair and reasonable profit. By the judgment of the common people of this country, who far outnumber the Importers and those whom they represent, you, Sir, and your colleagues have been placed in the high position you hold. You, Sir, and your colleagues would be the last of all people to admit that that judgment was ill-exercised. If the common people can judge of matters of so great importance, surely they can be trusted to judge, with all the facts before them, whether the commerce of this country is being properly conducted or no.

It is not with a desire to dictate to the official advisers of His Majesty the King that we approach you. Our wish is only to ask you to lay before the King's representatives a statement of what we are anxious should be done. We stand for no political party; our membership includes men of all parties. We represent no particular religious denomination; we question no man's faith who joins us. As in our daily tasks we work beside men who adhere to different religions and party politics, so, in our common work for improving the lot of the workers, we put aside all these differences and speak as one. We have no desire to embarrass the Government. How could we, when so many of our brothers are its supporters?

Are You Acquainted with this Salt?

We wish rather to strengthen its hands, should it determine to do right. We believe in speaking man-fashion—face to face. If we criticize, we do so openly. If we approve, no political considerations will keep us from saying so.

The meeting consisted of industrial workers, office hands, shop and store clerks, tradesmen, mechanics and laborers, fishermen, miners, farmers and other producers, by a standing vote decided to pass the Resolutions which we have forwarded to you. Briefly these call for the appointment of a Board of Food Control, and that two-thirds of that Board shall consist of members of industrial organizations.

Yours truly,
MAURICE H. HITCHEN,
Secretary N. I. W. A.
St. John's, June 22nd, 1917.

Little Boy Had Eczema

On Face and Hands—Local Doctors Treated Him in Vain—How Cure Was Finally Effected.

Trenton, Ont., June 26th.—This letter will interest all mothers of young children, because it tells of the best medicines obtainable of overcoming the annoying and torturing skin troubles which come to so many children. Mrs. Waldron had several doctors treating her boy for eczema, but all in vain. Finally she heard about Dr. Chase's Ointment and her letter tells of the wonderful results obtained by the use of this soothing, healing ointment.

Mrs. Samuel Waldron, George street, Trenton, Ont., writes: "About four years ago, my little boy had a rash on his face and hands which the doctor called Eczema. He gave us a wash for it, and some ointment, which we used, but without benefit. I think we tried all the doctors here. Finally we tried Dr. Chase's Ointment, and gave it a good trial. We could see that it was gradually healing. At first it appeared to burn the skin, then this skin would peel up, finally he got rid of it entirely. During the winters of the next two years we noticed a symptom of the disease under the skin. Each time we used more Dr. Chase's Ointment, curing it both times. For the last two years he has not had any return symptoms at all, so we think that he is now entirely cured."

The Tornado's Freak.

(Mattoon, Ill. Dispatch, to the St. Paul Dispatch.)

The tornado's visit to Mattoon offered many instances of "tornado freaks." Mrs. Mary P. Kemper heard the roar of the approaching whirlwind, and stepped to the door to see what it was. Her two children cowered against her in terror. The next moment her home was lifted from over her, while she and the children were left unharmed on the floor.

A horse and a cow were grazing in Joseph Abel's yard. The storm picked them up and carried them a quarter of a mile out on the prairie where they were set down easily, and resumed their grazing. Abel's home was picked up from about him, leaving him unharmed, while a baby was carried out into the orchard, where she was found unharmed. As D. S. May, his wife and three children knelt in prayer their house fell about them. They were uninjured.

Mrs. J. N. Sexton was watching the storm when her brick house fell about her, burying her in bricks up to her neck. She received only a few slight scratches.

When J. L. Follwell saw the storm coming he ran out to the street, caught up his two small sons and started for the house with them. The storm picked them up, carried them about twenty-five feet in the air, and then set them easily upon the porch, a moment later returning to pick them up again and as gently to carry them back to the street while the house fell in ruins. None were injured.

Milk is such a perfect food for children that it is a pity when the desired quantity cannot be taken easily and relished. For the average child past the third year, a quart of milk a day is the allowance advised by most authorities on children's diet, this quantity to include not only the milk which the child actually drinks, but also that used in preparing foods and served with cereals and other food.

When a child shows a disinclination for milk as a beverage it requires some little ingenuity to plan his food to include the daily quart. If a cup of milk is the only between meal food ever allowed, and that only once a day, either between breakfast and dinner or dinner and supper, the probabilities are that it will be welcome, especially if two finger strips of oatmeal bread are laid across the top of the glass. If it can be looked upon as a treat it will be enjoyed accordingly. Another method of teaching the child to drink milk is to serve the cup of milk at the beginning of the meal, with the understanding that other food will follow when this is disposed of. It is easy for a child to form habits of eating that any inclination to neglect his milk should be checked in the beginning.

YOUR COMPLEXION.
Every woman owes it to herself, her family, and her friends and all the world at large, to be as beautiful as she can. If she will spend half the time studying how she can make herself attractive as she does simply wishing she were a famous beauty, the result will be found most gratifying.

As the face is the most noticeable feature, it should receive the most attention. And while I mean complexion, features and expression, when I speak of the face, it is too big a subject to treat all at once, so this talk is all about the complexion.

If you are troubled with pimples or a muddy complexion, you must look within for the cause. Regulation of the bowels frequently corrects complexion ills. In washing the face use the best soap. Oatmeal is valuable as a cleansing agent, and it also whitens the skin. Use hot water and wash carefully, removing the dirt from every pore. Remove all traces of soap. Dash on cold water to close the pores and stimulate the skin. Then use cold cream.

Don't buy something any druggist tells you is the best because he makes the most profit on that kind. Don't use a cream because someone else uses it. Find out what cream suits your skin and continue its use. You yourself can do much toward acquiring the acme of beauty which Nature seemingly left undone.

Household Notes.

A spoonful means that the flour, etc., should lie as much above the edge of the spoon as the bowl lies below it.

Wet tea or coffee stains on table linen with sweet milk and then plunge them into the suds ready for washing.

To keep the water in a new cistern fresh, coat the inside of the cistern with "water glass," which can be bought at the druggist's and put on like paint.

If there are a few mashed potatoes left over, they will do very well added to fresh mashed potatoes; simply stir them in while the potatoes are very hot.

Sugar gingerbread is lighter and more suitable for a hot weather sweet than the usual kind made with molasses.

A paste of minced raisins and figs, with a dash of lemon juice, makes an excellent filling for sandwiches.

The less furniture in a room the cooler it looks—but the windows must be well shaded and well opened to complete the effect.
