The copy filmed here has been reproduced thanks to the generosity of:

Library of the Public
Archives of Canada

The images appearing here are the best quality possible considering the condition and legibility of the original copy and in keeping with the filming contract specifications.

Original copies in printed paper covers are filmed beginning with the front cover and ending on the last page with a printed or illustrated impression, or the back cover when appropriate. All other original copies are filmed beginning on the first page with a printed or illustrated impression, and ending on the last page with a printed or illustrated impression.

The last recorded frame on each microfiche shall contain the symbol ➡ (meaning "CONTINUED"), or the symbol ▼ (meaning "END"), whichever applies.

Maps, plates, charts, etc., may be filmed at different reduction ratios. Those too large to be entirely included in one exposure are filmed beginning in the upper left hand corner, left to right and top to bottom, as many frames as required. The following diagrams illustrate the method:

L'exemplaire filmé fut reproduit grâce à la générosité de:

La bibliothèque des Archives
publiques du Canada

Les images suivantes ont été reproduites avec le plus grand soin, compte tenu de la condition et de la netteté de l'exemplaire filmé, et en conformité avec les conditions du contrat de filmage.

Les exemplaires originaux dont la couverture en papier est imprimée sont filmés en commençant par le premier plat et en terminant soit par la dernière page qui comporte une empreinte d'impression ou d'illustration, soit par le second plat, selon le cas. Tous les autres exemplaires originaux sont filmés en commençant par la première page qui comporte une empreinte d'impression ou d'illustration et en terminant par la dernière page qui comporte une telle empreinte.

Un des symboles suivants apparaîtra sur la dernière image de chaque microfiche, selon le cas: le symbole ➡ signifie "A SUIVRE", le symbole ▼ signifie "FIN".

Les cartes, planches, tableaux, etc., peuvent être filmés à des taux de réduction différents. Lorsque le document est trop grand pour être reproduit en un seul cliché, il est filmé à partir de l'angle supérieur gauche, de gauche à droite, et de haut en bas, en prenant le nombre d'images nécessaire. Les diagrammes suivants illustrent la méthode.

TO THE LORD BISHOP OF TORONTO, THE LORD
BISHOP OF HURON, AND THE CORPORATION OF TRINITY COLLEGE.

TORONTO, NOV. 17TH, 1860.

MY LORDS AND GENTLEMEN,

I trust that you will admit I have been sufficiently punished for my temerity, in presuming to enter on a controversy which was in able hands. Whether my indiscretion deserved censure or not I do not intend to question. My present purpose is, 1st, to show that I stand condemned for holding erroneous opinions; 2nd, condemned because that those opinions are directly opposed to the teaching of the College, and therefore of the Church; 3rd, that I have been condemned unheard, and that neither my opinions nor my written statements have been examined nor compared with those enunciated by the Provost of Trinity College.

On Thursday, the 15th November, I saw in the morning issue of the Globe, a commentary on a pamphlet letter addressed to the Bishop of Huron by me, and which had been withdrawn from circulation. The moment I saw the letter in question I wrote to the editor, explaining that the pamphlet letter had been suppressed, and gave the strongest assurance that it was not written under the sanction of the College; this was withdrawn by a friend until evening. I fully expected and was prepared to receive a summons from the Provost to wait upon him, and I left town as late in the day as I could, hoping that I might have an opportunity of showing to the authorities that no time was lost in taking the blame on myself. No message was sent to me; no intimation whatever was given that any immediate action on the matter was to be taken. I am informed that after the business of Convocation was over, the Rev. Provost assembled a meeting of the Corporation, and forthwith proceeded to impugn my conduct with reference to the pamphlet, and endeavoured to urge on the Corporation the necessity of immediate action, denouncing my doctrinal statements as hostile to the interests of the College and directly at variance with his own. A Committee was appointed, and they met on the following day. In the morning, at an interview with two of the gentlemen composing that committee, and to whom I am under deep obligation, I was informed that the Corporation had "unanimously disavowed and repudiated doctrinal statements put forth by me." I accordingly placed in the hands of the gentlemen above referred to the following communication, in place of the one first sent to the Globe, and which was submitted at half-past five o'clock to the deputation from the Corporation authorised to receive from me an exoneration of the College from any connection at all with my writings:—

"(To the Editor of the Globe.)"

"SIR,—I beg leave to contradict an error into which your correspondent 'A Protestant Churchman' has fallen, in alluding in his letter in your issue of yesterday to a 'pamphlet letter to the Bishop of Huron,' circulated by me. Such a letter I admit I wrote, but its circulation on consideration I suppressed, beyond a few copies which I gave to private friends, through the indiscretion of one of whom it can alone have got into the hands of your correspondent.

"With regard at the same time to the views it contains, I am alone responsible for them. I wrote as a private member of the Church, not as a professor of the College ; and whether they are the views of Trinity College or not, you may infer from the following letter to the authorities, which I will thank you to insert.

" I am, Sir,

" Your obedient servant,

" JAMES BOVELL."

" Toronto, 16th Nov., 1860.

" To the Reverend the Provost of Trinity College, Toronto :

" REV. SIR,—I regret to learn that the Corporation of Trinity College, at their meeting yesterday, were unanimous in disavowing their agreement with doctrinal views put forth by me in a pamphlet addressed to the Bishop of Huron, but which I afterwards suppressed—as well as repudiating them as the teaching of Trinity College.

" As they are nevertheless my own convictions, and conscientiously holding them as true, I cannot retract or depart from them ; and I feel that I have only one course left me, viz., to place in the hands of the College my resignation of the Professor's chair, which I have hitherto held. I will only add that, in taking this step, I am severing a connexion dearer to me almost than life itself.

" I have the honour to be,

" Reverend Sir,

" Your obedient servant,

" JAMES BOVELL."

My resignation was accepted by the deputation ; and thus I am placed under the very grave charge of uttering false doctrine. And if this be so, I am indeed guilty of having injured an institution which I ought to have defended, and have become a stone of stumbling and an offence to my fellow men.

The documents were approved by the deputation, and sent to the Globe at a late hour for publication. I gave the letter of resignation on the grounds that, "the Corporation of Trinity College were unanimous in disavowing their agreement with doctrinal views put forth by me."

My Lords, I believe that in the annals even of religious controversy, it would be difficult to find a case where a man was condemned for his opinions, not only unheard—not only when he was not present to defend himself, but even when the very document on which he is condemned was not placed before the tribunal before whom he was arraigned, nor compared with that from which it was professed that it differed: and yet, my Lords, by such an assembly as the solemn convocation of a University in Council, I am branded before the world and the Church, as a professor of false doctrine, upon the mere extract from a newspaper. I appeal, my Lords, from this injustice.

If the Corporation had in place of repudiating and disavowing my doctrinal statements, directly deprived me of my professorship for presuming to step into a controversy conducted by such exalted dignitaries as the Lord Bishop of Huron and the Provost, the public would have laughed at me and returned the verdict of "served him right." But what has been done?—that which now drives me to defend "doctrinal statements" which the Council have sanctioned and avowed in the Provost's letters.

And now I pass on to the averment of the Provost, that there is such a difference between the doctrinal statements which I have put forth, and those also put forth by the sanction and under the full authority of the College, that it was necessary publicly to repudiate mine. A close examination of the opinions which were advanced in the "letter" would have convinced the Provost, and have satisfied the Corporation that those opinions were not only not contrary to the doctrines of the Church of England, but were such as no Christian would say placed in jeopardy the soul of him who holds them.

Omitting the personal allusions to the Bishop of Huron, which I very much regret having used, and which were not intended as mere angry invective, I extract from the suppressed letter the condemned doctrinal opinions, as well as statements which were in that letter, and to one of which the Provost properly objects, and was an accidental error on my part.

THE EUCHARIST.

"The Church Catechism teaches us that in a sacrament "there is the outward and visible sign of an inward and spiritual grace given unto us." In baptism the water and Christ's words of consecration are the outward sign and the inward grace, the Holy Spirit; and in the Holy Eucharist, the bread and wine, and the words of institution, are the outward signs; and the OBJECTIVE and therefore spiritual and real presence of Christ according to His own promise and word given to us is the inward thing signified. Now we will take the latter sacrament for explanation,—first:

"In construing the meaning of the words of our Lord, the papist declares that they are to be taken in their plain and literal sense, and that therefore there is in the blessed sacrament a material change into the carnal body and blood of Christ.

"The Catholic Church, when primitive and pure, as when reformed and purified at the Reformation, says that the words of Christ are Spirit and are to be understood as spirit, wherefore it is taught that there is such a reordering of the elements by "the Word" as makes them efficacious to convey to us after a spiritual and heavenly manner the body and blood of Christ; for says Dr. Pusey, (pray, my Lord, do not start at the name, for his work is a glorious refutation of Romish error, and will be a standard work for our Church,) neither re-order nor re-fashion, in their etymology or their usage, express or imply any change of the substance, but the contrary, to re-order, re-fashion, expresses a re-arrangement of that which is; an ordering for some other end, which is exactly our belief of the consecrated elements, as the outward visible signs of the inward substance." Thus as the bread and wine by God's appointment are made ordinarily to nourish the carnal body, so the word of the same God may make them also the means of conveying the divine energy to the spiritual man—even the energy FROM CHRIST'S GLORIFIED BODY FROM BEFORE THE HEAVENLY ALTAR. Whoso eateth this bread and drinketh this cup worthily, doth really receive Christ. The wicked receive Him not, they drive Him away, reject Him, and receive that which was an instrument of good to their condemnation. Virtue goes not out for them; the multitude pressed upon Him insomuch that they marvelled, the woman only was healed; and he doth know whom he healeth. Our Lord's body is now in heaven, a glorified body; a glorified humanity; it is there before the Father's throne pleading and interceding for lost men—there is the only real propitiatory sacrifice that was ever offered. The REPRESENTATIVE SACRIFICE of Him here on earth is to set forth his death, that like as they of old did lay their hands on the representative victim to be slain, so we representing IN MEMORIAL the slain Christ before the Father, may receive and eat Christ crucified, for the bread and wine after consecration are so re-ordered to a new use, that they become instruments whereby FROM HEAVEN IS SENT into the soul of the penitent receiver, the energy, the divine life, the glorified humanity, the body and blood of Christ, the life of Christ, like rays from the great sun of heaven, to warm and vivify the life of the soul.* It is possible to convey to the mind some definite conception of the doctrine of "the real presence" by viewing it as the Fathers, did as "Objective"; to be "the perception of an existing thing." To illustrate,—Greek philosophy, no less than Greek art, was eminently objective: now what is the objective theory, but the tendency to form our conceptions into perceptions; to project our ideas out of us, and then to look at them as images or as entities; carry this into the domain of "faith," let our conceptions of Christ be perceptions, and do we not then that which St. Paul requires, "apprehend Christ," or rather "discern the Lord's body." Jesus is the sole object in the sacrament; the eye of faith rests upon, the hand of faith reaches unto Him.

"Again, let us look to the meaning of the term objective,—relating to the object; contained in the object; extrinsic;—relating to the object of thought, and not to the thinker; opposed to, subjective: having the quality of coming in the way; as "objective certainty;" i. e. certainty in outward things, in distinction from subjective certainty, which lies in the mind itself. Objective certainty is when the proposition is certainly true in itself, and subjective when we are certain of the truth of it. The one is in things, the other is in our minds. Objective is now used to describe the absolute independent state of a thing; but by the elder metaphysicians to the aspect of things, as "objects of sense or understanding."

In such sense, the penitent Christian realizes with the eye of faith, "the object" of the blessed sacrament to him, not as a mere carnal, but as "a spiritual being," the body and blood of Christ are before him: in the ribaldry and blasphemy that swell up from the deriding crowd surrounding the cross, he hears but the echo of the tumult of his own sins, in the agony and out-poured blood, the redemption, the only atonement for his sins. TIME and SPACE are not—the spiritual man sees Christ crucified, he feels the effect of that heavenly, holy presence, sacrificed and before the Father, which teaches him to exclaim, "truly this is the Son of God."

"We openly differ from the Roman Catholic Church, in that we receive the doctrine of the Eucharist as declared out of Scripture, to be the memorial of THE SACRIFICE of the death of Christ, and not only the memorial of the death of Christ, we accept it as the Saviour instituted it, as a MEMORIAL OR REPRESENTATIVE SACRIFICE, and not a PROPITIATORY SACRIFICE. We commemorate that which Christ did when He made the OBLATION of HIMSELF on that night on which he was betrayed, when "he took bread and brake it, and gave to His disciples, saying take eat, this is My body," and we include and look with agony and grief on the awful guilt and sin with which we nailed him to the cross: for the slaying of the sacrifice was the bloody wicked work of Satan and a sin-cursed race. We thus from Scripture prove that there is a commemorative sacrifice of the death of Christ, in direct contradistinction to the "Propitiatory sacrifice of the Papist." If the day should ever come when we may not declare these truths, woe be to the Church.

Yet, it is not only at that most awful moment when we receive the outward elements, that we alone realize the presence of the Saviour, it is not only then, that faith brings to us the substance of things hoped for, it is in the whole celebration of that sublime sacrifice of praise and thanksgiving, when in one great and glorious act of adoration—which even in this world of trial the soul enters on—we bow before the Lamb that was slain.—*See Rev. Chap. v. 6. to 14 v.

It was given to St. John to see with illumined vision somewhat of the adoration given to the Lamb of God. “And I beheld, and, lo, in the midst of the throne and of the four beasts, and in the midst of the elders, stood a Lamb as it had been slain, having seven horns and seven eyes, which are the seven Spirits of God sent forth into all the earth.”

And he came and took the book out of the hand of him that sat upon the throne. And when he had taken the book, the four beasts and four and twenty elders fell down before the lamb, having every one of them harps, and golden vials full of odours, which are the prayers of the saints.

And they sung a new song, saying, Thou art worthy to take the book, and to open the seals thereof: for Thou wast slain, and hast redeemed us to God by thy blood out of every kindred, and tongue, and people, and nation; and hast made us unto our God kings and priests, and we shall reign on the earth.

And I beheld, and I heard the voice of many angels round about the throne and the beasts and the elders: and the number of them was ten thousand times ten thousand, and thousands of thousands; saying with a loud voice, worthy is the Lamb that was slain to receive power, and riches, and strength, and honour, and glory and blessing.

And every creature which is in heaven, and on the earth, and such as are in the sea, and all that are in them, heard I saying, blessing, and honour, and glory, and power, be unto him that sitteth upon the throne, and unto the Lamb for ever and ever.

* This paragraph I add: it was not in the printed letter.

And the four beasts said amen, and the four and twenty elders fell down and worshipped him that liveth for ever and ever."

Is the heart of the faithful servant of Christ never elevated, by that Spirit which alone teaches aright, to enjoy with wrapt delight some dim and distant glimpse it may be, even of that intensefied glory and worship which was given to the Lamb that was slain?

God is a Spirit, and they that worship Him must worship Him in spirit and in truth, "for our conversation is in heaven." Every act of true devotion, every truthful efficacious prayer, every act of true reverence, must be done in spirit and in truth. No man, I care not what his religious sentiments, enters even God's house without feeling in some measure subdued: in spirit he feels that he is more immediately before that unseen Presence "that dwelleth not in temples made by hands," but yet who hath set his name there in the place where his honour dwelleth, and is present when two or three are gathered together in his name; and can it be supposed that any serious Christian would hold a lower estimate of that most real and sublime act of spiritual worship of praise, and thanksgiving, which comprehends a no less mysterious and awe-striking reality, than the communion with Christ—the being made one with Him! Cold and dead must that heart be, which in any sense can look upon such a service as this with fleshly sight. The true, faithful, penitent, contrite, spirit-taught sinner, can only with the eye of vivid faith "discern the Lord's body." Since by the special appointment of my God these representatives of Him, the elements, even the oblation, are brought in for His church, and among the rest for me. I must mind what Israel did when the cloud filled the tabernacle. I will not fail to worship God as soon as these sacraments, and "Gospel clouds" appear in the sanctuary. Neither the ark, nor any clouds, were ever adored in Israel;

but sure it is, the ark was considered quite otherwise than an ordinary chest, and the cloud than a vapour, as soon as God had hallowed them to be the signs of His presence. Therefore, as the former people did never see the Temple or the cloud, but that presently at that sight they used to throw themselves on their faces, so I will never behold these surer and better sacraments of the glorious mercies of God, but as soon as I see them used in His Church to that holy purpose that Christ has consecrated them to, I will not fail to realize my Saviour whom these sacraments do represent. Such is the language of one of England's great divines. May such a spirit of fervent contemplation ever be vouchsafed to me and every Christian brother.

Now it will be seen by reference to the language employed that it is distinctly held "that the words of Christ ARE SPIRIT and are to be understood AS SPIRIT, that the Eucharist is therefore a spiritual not carnal service, and that the elements are not changed but set apart for a new use without ANY CHANGE OF SUBSTANCE, that our Lord's body is now in heaven, a glorified body, a glorified humanity; it is there before the Father's throne pleading for lost men,—THERE is the ONLY REAL propitiatory sacrifice of Him that was ever offered, and that the faithful receiver doth receive when he takes that bread and that wine—not in them, not under them but by them—not from the earthly altar, not from the bread, not from the cup, but FROM HEAVEN is sent into the soul of the faithful receiver, the energy, the divine life, the glorified humanity, the body and blood of Christ, the life of Christ, like rays from the great sun of heaven to warm and vivify the life of the soul," such my Lords are some of the doctrinal statements unanimously condemned by the College Corporation.

I now turn to the authorised statements of the College as set forth by the Provost in his larger letter to the Lord Bishop of Toronto; section vi. is entitled "Participation in the glorified humanity of our Lord by means of the sacrament of the Lord's Supper." Here in capital letters bold and clear it is stated that we have a participation in the glorified humanity of our Lord BY MEANS of the sacrament of the Lord's Supper and it is said that for the sake of the College, for the sake of truth, &c. I proceed to shew that Mr. Proctor's doctrine is the doctrine of our great divines, that they regard the "glorified humanity" of our Lord as the source from which all grace is immediately derived to man, and worthy participation of the Lord's Supper as the appointed means of communion with that humanity. The Provost then quotes and says :

The following extracts from Bishop Ridley go more expressly to show that the Humanity of our Lord is participated by means of the Holy Communion :

"Now then you will say, what kind of presence do they grant, and what do they deny? Briefly, they deny the presence of Christ's body in the natural substance of his human and assumed nature, and grant the presence of the same by grace; that is, they affirm and say, that the substance of the natural body and blood of Christ is only remaining in heaven, and so shall be unto the latter day, when he shall come again in glory, accompanied with the angels in heaven, to judge both the quick and the dead. And the same natural substance of the very body and blood of Christ, because it is united in the divine nature in Christ, the second person of the Trinity, therefore it hath not only life in itself, but is also able to give, and doth give life unto so many as be, or shall be partakers thereof; that is, that to all who do believe on His name, which are not born of blood, as St. John saith, or of the will of the flesh, or of the will of man, but are born of God, though the self-same substance abide still in heaven, and they, for the time of their pilgrimage, dwell here upon earth; by grace (I say) that is, by the gift of this life (mentioned in John) and the properties of the same meet for our pilgrimage here upon earth, the same body of Christ is here present with us. Even as, for example, we say the same sun, which, in substance, never removeth his place out of the heavens, is yet present here by his beams, light, and natural influence where it shineth upon the earth. For God's word and his sacraments be, as it were, the beams of Christ, which is Sol Justice, the sun of righteousness.

Bp. Ridley's Treatise against Transubstantiation. Works, Parker's Society, page 13.

"Of Christ's real presence there may be a double understanding. If you take the real presence of Christ according to the real and corporal substance which he took of the Virgin, that presence being in heaven, cannot be on earth also. But if you mean a real presence, 'secundum rem aliquam quæ ad corpus Christi pertinet,' i. e., according to something that appertaineth to Christ's body, certes the ascension and abiding in heaven are no let at all to that presence, wherefore Christ's body, after that sort, is here present to us in the Lord's supper; by grace, I say, as Epiphanius speaketh it."

Ridley's view seems to be fully borne out by the following statement of Calvin:

"Another disputed point relates to the term 'spiritually,' from which many shrink, because they conceive that it denotes something imaginary and unreal. It is consequently necessary here also to have recourse to a definition. Spiritual eating then is opposed to carnal, by which some imagine that the very substance of Christ is transfused into us, just as bread is eaten. On the contrary, the body of Christ is said to be given to us in the supper spiritually, because the secret energy of the Holy Spirit occasions that things, which are locally distant, are united with each other, and accordingly that life penetrates from heaven to us from the flesh of Christ; which power and capacity of vivifying might not unsuitably be styled something derived (abstractum) from the substance, provided that this be soundly and aptly understood, that is to say, that the body of Christ remains in heaven, and yet life from its substance flows forth and reaches unto us who are pilgrims upon earth."

Joan. Calvin. De vera participatione Christi in Cæna. Opera, vol VIII., p. 744, Amstelodami, 1857.

These authorities appear to me fully to establish the soundness of the doctrine against which exception has been taken, at least if Mr. Procter's language is to be interpreted in the sense, which I should suppose that every intelligent reader would attach to it, and which I am satisfied that he intended it to bear. Before the charge, or rather the insinuation, of the Bishop of Huron, I should have thought it quite unnecessary to explain to any one that I do not understand, by the "glorified humanity" of our Lord, any thing which can be orally received."—Provost Whitaker.

I most cordially accept this, and any candid mind will on reviewing the doctrinal statements in the "condemned letter" find that no countenance is given to any "LOCAL presence," which I believe the Provost thought I held, no where is it stated, that the body and blood of the Saviour is derived FROM the bread and wine, but FROM THE GLORIFIED HUMANITY now in Heaven, and derived thence, to the faithful receiver, when in obedience to Christ's command he doth take, eat, of that bread, and drink of that cup, for then we spiritually eat the flesh of Christ and drink His blood.

Still further, in support of his opinions the following appears in the Provost's letter:

"This day verbum caro factum est, 'The word was made flesh,' and so must be 'apprehended' in both. But specially in His flesh as this day giveth it, as this day would have us. 'Now the bread which we break, is it not the partaking of the body, of the flesh, of Jesus Christ?' It is surely, and by it and by nothing more are we made partakers of this blessed union. A little before He said, 'Because the children were partakers of flesh and blood, He also would take part with them'—may not we say the same? Because he hath so done, taken our's of us, we also ensuing his steps will participate with Him and with His flesh which He hath taken of us. It is most kindly to take part with Him in that which he took part in with us, and that, to no other end, but that He might make the receiving of it by us a means whereby He might 'dwell in us, and we in him;' He taking our flesh, and we receiving His Spirit; by His flesh which He took of us receiving His Spirit which He imparteth to us; that, as he

by ours became 'consors humanæ naturæ,' so we by Him might become consortes Divinæ naturæ, 'partakers of the Divine nature.' "

Bishop Andrewes' Sermons. 1st Sermon on the Nativity. vol. I., p. 16. Oxford.

And again,

Nor may we, by broken inductions, gathered from the effects or efficacy of natural bodies, or created substances upon other bodies, take us to limit or bound the efficacy of Christ's body upon the bodies or souls which he hath taken to his protection. We may not collect, that Christ's body, because comprehended within the heavens, can exercise no real operation upon our bodies or souls here on earth; or that the live influence of his glorified human nature may not be diffused through the world as he shall be pleased to dispense it, or to sow the seeds of life issuing from it, sometimes here, sometimes there.

"This real, though virtual influence of Christ's human nature, is haply that which the Lutherans call the real ubiquitary presence of Christ's body. Luther himself never denied Christ's very body or human nature to be comprehended within the heavens; and yet he affirmed it to be 'present with us in such a manner, as the sound is present with us which is really made or caused a great way from us.' And we may not deny this real influence or virtual presence of Christ to be in a manner infinite; or at least to extend itself to all created substances that are capable of it, in what created distance soever they be from his body, whose residence we believe to be in the highest heavens at the right hand of God.

* * * * *

"The only sure anchor of all our hopes for a joyful resurrection unto the life of glory, is the mystical union which must be wrought here on earth betwixt Christ's human nature glorified, and our mortal or dissoluble nature. The divine nature indeed is the prime fountain of life to all, but though inexhaustible in itself, yet a fountain whereof we cannot drink, save as it is derived unto us through the human nature of Christ."

Jackson's Works, vol. X., pp. 34-36, Oxford, 1844.

In letter No. 1, by the Provost, is this quotation from Archbishop Usher,

"Yet was it fit also, that this head should be of the same nature with the body which is knit unto it; and therefore that He should so be God, as that He might partake of our flesh likewise. 'For we are members of His body,' saith the same Apostle, 'of His flesh, and of His bones.' And, 'except ye eat the flesh of the Son of man,' saith our Saviour Himself, 'and drink His blood, ye have no life in you.' 'He that eateth My flesh, and drinketh My blood, dwelleth in Me, and I in him.' Declaring thereby, first, that by His mystical and supernatural union, we are as truly conjoined with Him, as the meat and drink we take is with us, when by the ordinary work of nature it is converted into our own substance; secondly, that this conjunction is immediately made with his human nature."—Usher's Works, vol. IV., p. 608,—(see also page 617.)

"Inasmuch as we doubt not at all that (his body) agreeably to the invariable condition of a human body, is limited, and is contained in heaven, whither it was once for all received, until it return to judgment; even so to draw it back again under these perishable elements, or to imagine that it is everywhere present, we hold to be absolutely unlawful. Nor is there indeed any need of this, in order to our enjoying participation of him, since the Lord bestows upon us through his spirit this benefit, that we should be made one with himself, in body, soul, and spirit. The bond, then, of this union is the spirit of Christ, by whose tie we are connected; and which is a kind of conduit through which whatsoever Christ himself both is and has is derived to us. For if we see the sun, darting forth to the earth with his rays, transmit in a manner his substance to it to generate, cherish, and invigorate its products; why should the irradiation of the spirit of Christ be less effectual to transmit to us the communion of his flesh and blood? Wherefore the scripture, where it speaks of our participation with Christ, refers its whole efficacy to the spirit. One passage will suffice for many. For St. Paul, in the 8th chapter to the Romans, says that Christ dwells in us no otherwise than by his spirit, by which statement however he does not set aside that communion of his flesh and blood of which we are now speaking, but teaches us that it is effected by the spirit alone that we should possess Christ in his entirety and have him remaining in us."

Joan Calvin. Institutionum Liber IV., cap. XVII., 11, 12. Opera, vol. IX., pp. 367-8, Amstelodami, 1667.

I never read this opinion of Calvin's until it appeared in the "approved letter:" the ideas and phraseology are so close to those employed in the "condemned letter" that it might have led to the inference that they were borrowed.

Here are five extracts from the Provost's own letter. Now comparing the doctrinal statements above sanctioned by the Corporation, and used by the learned author in support of his teaching, with the views unanimously disavowed and repudiated by them as appearing in my letter, it is left to some abler mind than mine to tell wherein I differ from the teaching authorised by the college, and I will add, sanctioned by an array of English divines, dating from the time of the Reformation to the present hour: nor do I think that anything which I have recorded in the letter justifies the Vice-Provost in addressing the students with the remarks.

"I must add that the satisfaction is very greatly increased by the discretion which you have shown in your choice of the manner of your support. You have, I think, most wisely and most properly confined yourselves to mere matters of fact; you have not ventured into the arena of polemical divinity. The reason, I take, of your abstaining from so rash a step is that you have learned enough of such matters to know the danger of it. You know how delicate a matter a theological discussion is to deal with. You know how the utterance of a very few words on such solemn matters—words of which the writer may not be able to see the force—may carry a man, and those for whom he is arguing, completely over from one school of doctrine to another; a danger of which we have had a very painful illustration in a case which has, I fear, ended in a loss to the College, which we cannot but look upon as the most deplorable result of this unhappy controversy."

These remarks made public on the 22nd Nov. are quite characteristic of the treatment which has been meted out to one, who was but lately a Professor in Trinity College, but who is now considered guilty of rashness, and pronounced before the whole class of graduates as not capable of understanding the force of his own words. Christian forbearance would have suggested that "A soft answer turneth away wrath, but grievous words stir up anger." Proverbs, cap. xv. 6.

In Prof. Irving's address, I am made to appear in the most unfavourable light. Dr. Pusey and Arch-Deacon Denison are prominently named, in order to show that if not worse than them, at all events I am in the same boat with them. With many others, I venerate the first named Divine for that instruction on the doctrine of the incarnation and atonement which has been to me a source of unspeakable delight and consolation, and I am not ashamed to confess that his arguments against the dogmas of transubstantiation, and consubstantiation, opened my eyes to the truth, and settled me firm in the faith, as held by the Church of England. Towards Arch-deacon Denison I have not the same affectionate regard, because I am not well acquainted with his writings, nor do I hold his views with reference to the relation which the wicked have towards the blessed Sacrament, since they do not seem to be consonant with those of Scripture or any number of the Divines of our Church—so far therefore from being at all terrified at being supposed to draw water from the fountain which Dr. Pusey has opened; I am as ready to confess my obligations to him, as either the Provost or Prof. Irving are now, to John Calvin. The tendency of the present day, is to trust too exclusively to party leaders, and not to accept aids to truth which are not fashioned after a certain pattern; Fenelon and Calvin, Wesley and Pusey may each have something to say, and are messengers to present to us truth in some peculiar aspect. But while I openly profess to have derived convictions from Dr. Pusey, neither the Vice-Provost nor any one else has the right deliberately to hand me over body and soul to a particular Appollos without having the candour to show the plain simple grounds on which he does so. I feel thankful that the graduates and undergraduates in their address, did not adopt the manner of defence which the Vice-Provost assumed—that they had the justice not to prejudice my cause—and that “in a delicate matter” they have escaped the rash use of words “of which they may not have felt the full force.”

With the view still further to remove from the mind of the Provost and Corporation the impression that has been made by the Vice-Provost that I belong to another school, in the words of the author of that excellent work, “The Second Adam,” I will confess that, the second Adam must not only atone for the guilt, He must also be a fountain of healing to His brethren, as His prototype was a fountain of corruption. How was this to be, seeing the second Adam was born when the earth was peopled with myriads of a sinful race?

It could not be in the way of nature, seeing that mankind, by the very condition of their being could have but one origin; they could only spring from one man, because that God originally created but one, and having derived their being from this one, they could not be born by way of nature from another. If in this respect, Jesus Christ, the second Adam, was to answer the first (i. e., if He was to be an Adam at all,) if His undefiled human nature was to be to mankind, or any part of them, a principle of life counteracting the death received from the human nature of the first Adam, this could not be in the way of nature; it must be effected supernaturally. If this was to be, the nature of the Lord Jesus must be made so that it could be imparted to, and diffused amongst, His brethren, and means must also be taken to diffuse it.

That Christ's nature was so constituted (after his resurrection at least) that it could be imparted is expressly asserted in 1 Cor. xv. 45: “The first Adam was made a living soul, the last Adam was made a quickening (i. e., a life-imparting spirit." His body received by God's almighty power, not only the properties of a spirit, but that His very body became life-diffusing as well—"there is a natural body, and there is a spiritual body," for says Hooker,* "doth any man doubt but that even from the flesh of Christ our very bodies do receive that life which shall make them glorious at the latter day, and for which they are already accounted parts of His blessed body. Our corruptible bodies could never bear the life they shall live, were it not that here they are joined with His body which is incorruptible, and that His (body) is in ours as a cause of immortality, a cause by removing through the death and merit of His own flesh, that which hindered the life of ours. Yet the mixture of His flesh with ours through mystical conjunction, as the Fathers say, receive from that vital efficacy which we know to be in His; and from bodily mixtures they borrow divers similitudes rather to declare the TRUTH than the manner of coherence between His sacred body and the sanctified body of saints."

BAPTISM.

The doctrinal statement with reference to this Sacrament in "the condemned letter" is as follows:—

WITH REFERENCE TO THE OTHER GREAT SACRAMENT—BAPTISM—Using the authority of Saint Paul, he says that the invisible things of creation are plainly seen from the things that are, &c., so be it. The seed of the wild plant is even the seed of a cursed tree; so long as it remains in the forest or in the uncultivated field it retains its wild nature, but transplanted into the garden, or brought into cultivation under the influence of man's improving power, it is then put into a new state, and surrounded by those external influences which are capable to effect progressive improvement, it becomes a new thing, it has a useful and vigorous life. Are we worse than plants—less cared for than the lilies of the field? God forbid! The child that is baptised, is baptised into Christ's death; is buried with him; by baptism is planted in the garden of Christ's nature, his agony and death, that like as Christ was raised from the dead, so it also may rise to new life in Christ. Adam's guilt is put away and Christ's righteousness and nature is imparted, and in the soul of the receiver is implanted a capacity to live the life of Christ. Predestinated and fore-known, the baptised is called to Christ; God's preventing grace is given, and he is required to fight manfully that he may make his calling and election sure.

It is not the question whether the doctrine of baptismal regeneration is found in the fore-front of scripture or not; the question is, "does the Church of England in her service book, and in her prayers, speak of and teach the doctrine?" We answer that the Prayer Book is full of the doctrine, it is openly taught, not only in the baptismal service, but it is set forth in the collects and in the homilies; it is breathed out in the Church's fervent prayers. Indeed no honest man can say that the doctrine is not most glaringly set forth in the Prayer Book. Let us then see what this horrible term is, this "regeneration" so stoutly called in question. It would appear that the whole difficulty arises from confusing the two terms "regeneration" and "renewal;" terms and states which by the Prayer Book are kept perfectly distinct. In an admirable essay on the sacrament of Baptism, the author, who is delivering the doctrine from Scripture and the prayer Book, thus speaks:

C. If God tells us any thing plainly and distinctly, we must take good heed that we do not fritter away the meaning of what He says, by applying to it such terms as metaphorical, hypothetical, figurative, &c.

Here are the passages:—

- I. St. John's Gospel iii. 3-5. "Except a man be born again, he cannot see the kingdom of God. Nicodemus saith unto Him, How can a man be born when he is old? can he enter the second time into his mother's womb, and be born? Jesus answered, Verily, verily, I say unto thee, except a man be born of water and of the Spirit, he cannot enter into the kingdom of God."
- II. St. Matthew xxviii. 19, 20. "Go ye, therefore, and teach all nations, baptising them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost: teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you: and, lo, I am with you alway, even unto the end of the world."
- III. St. Mark xvi. 16. "He that believeth and is baptised shall be saved; but he that believeth not shall be damned."
- IV. Acts ii. 37-39. "Men and brethren, what shall we do? Then Peter said unto them, Repent, and be baptised every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost. For the promise is unto you and to your children," &c.
- V. Acts xxii. 10 and 16, "And I said, what shall I do, Lord? And the Lord said unto me, Arise, and go unto Damascus; and there it shall be told thee of all things which are appointed for thee to do. And now, why tarriest thou? arise and be baptised, and wash away thy sins, calling on the name of the Lord."
- VI. Romans vi. 1, 2, 3, 4. "What shall we say then? Shall we continue in sin, that grace may abound? God forbid. How shall we, that are dead to sin, live any longer therein? Know ye not, that so many of us as were baptised, were baptised into His death? Therefore we are buried with Him by baptism into death; that like as Christ was raised up from the dead by the glory of the Father, even so we also should walk in newness of life."
- VII. Colossians ii. 12, 13. "Buried with Him in baptism wherein also ye are risen with Him through the faith of the operation of God, who hath raised Him from the dead. And you, being dead in your sins, and the uncircumcision of your flesh, hath He quickened together with Him, having forgiven you all trespasses." iii. 1.—"If ye then be risen with Christ, seek those things which are above, where Christ sitteth on the right hand of God, set your affection on things above, not on things on the earth. For ye are dead, and your life is hid with Christ in God."

- VIII. Ephesians v. 25, 26. "Husbands, love your wives, even as Christ also loved the Church, and gave Himself for it, that He might sanctify and cleanse it with the washing of water by the word."
- IX. Titus iii. 5. "Not by works of righteousness which we have done, but according to His mercy He saved us, by the washing of regeneration, and renewing of the Holy Ghost."
- X. Galatians iii. 26, 27. "For ye are all the children of God by faith in Christ Jesus. For as many of you as have been baptised into Christ have put on Christ."
- XI. Hebrews x. 21, 22. "Having an High-Priest over the house of God; let us draw near with a true heart, in full assurance of faith, having our hearts sprinkled from an evil conscience, and our bodies washed with pure water."
- XII. 1 St. Peter iii. 21. "The like figure whereunto, even Baptism doth also now save us (not the putting away of the filth of the flesh, but the answer of a good conscience toward God) by the resurrection of Jesus Christ."
- XIII. 1 Corinthians x. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 11. "Moreover, brethren, I would not that ye should be ignorant, how that all our fathers were under the cloud, and all passed through the sea; and were all baptised unto Moses in the cloud and in the sea; and did all eat the same spiritual meat; and did all drink the same spiritual drink; for they drank of that spiritual rock that followed them; and that rock was Christ," &c. "Now all these things happened unto them for ensamples; and they are written for our admonition, upon whom the ends of the world are come."

XIV. 1 Corinthians xii. 12, 13, 27. "For as the body is one, and hath many members, and all the members of that one body, being many, are one body: so also is Christ. For by one Spirit we are all baptised into one body, whether we be Jews or Gentiles, whether we be bond or free; and have been all made to drink into one Spirit. . . . Now ye are the body of Christ and members in particular."

Here are the fourteen passages in which salvation and remission of sins, union with Christ, and being brought into Christ's body are connected with baptism; I might have added several more, but I was desirous to confine myself to passages containing a direct allusion to the sacrament.

D. I allow that many of these passages seem to favour the doctrine you draw from them; respecting some, however, I am not able to see in what way you make them support your view. I grant that the greater part do connect salvation in some way or other with baptism; still, two objections occur to my mind respecting them: one is, that a number of other passages may be brought of a contrary tendency; the other, that they refer to the baptism of adults, believing Christians of mature age, and not to that of infants.

C. As to your first objection. To do away with the force of what our Lord says to Nicodemus respecting baptism, one must be expressly told that, in spite of our Lord's own words, a man need not be "born of water and of the Spirit" to enter the kingdom of God. Again, with reference to Acts xxii. 16, if we could find it any where asserted that St. Paul was cleansed from his sins before his baptism—when he first repented or prayed, for instance—then we might say that one passage was neutralized by another; but which, I ask, should we then be called upon to believe? And so with respect to Romans vi. 1-4. If in another passage of that epistle we found that not all the Romans who had been baptised had been "buried with Christ" in baptism,—that not so many of them as had been baptised into Jesus Christ had been baptised into his death," and consequently "buried with Him by baptism into death, that like as he was raised from the dead by the glory of the Father, even so they also should walk in newness of life,"—but only a part of them, who lived answerably to their Christian profession, had been so co-buried and co-raised with Him ; then there would be a real contradiction in the Apostle's words. But mark what would be the consequence : St. Paul is urging against the abuse of God's grace, and he uses an argument that reaches all to whom he addresses himself. All were in his view buried with Christ in baptism, i. e., baptism communicated to all a real interest in Christ's death, made them partakers of it, in order that all the baptised might "walk in newness of life." If only a part of them had been buried with Christ in their baptism, the great all to live holy lives, while the Apostle urges from the fact of each one's baptism being a burial with Christ unto death, would not be applicable to all. The men who were inclined to abuse God's grace by continuing in sin that grace might abound, would say, "This does not apply to us. Baptism in our case was only a form. It conveyed no grace for which we are responsible. We may now live on according to the dictates of our natural hearts, until we receive some future baptism of the Spirit to give us a saving interest in Christ."

D. Do not think I would willingly disparage any one passage of God's Word ; but I am not convinced that all these passages refer to the outward rite of baptism. May not some of them allude to a baptism of the Spirit independent of the application of water ?

C. Let us take the first of these passages ; our Lord's words to Nicodemus : "Except a man be born of water and of the Spirit, he cannot enter into the kingdom of God." If our Lord here does not allude to baptism by water, to what can He possibly allude ? He cannot surely intend to mislead His Church by connecting the new birth, i. e., if God does not make it his instrument for conveying the grace of regeneration. If the passage alludes to spiritual conversion at some period of life when the reasoning powers are fully developed, some change of hopes, views, affections, and desires, (which in modern phrase is called regeneration.) why does our Lord mention water at all ? for, according to your view of these matters, water as an outward sign, is no means in affecting this ; and mark, too, what is most important, that the mention of water occurs in the second answer of our Lord to Nicodemus, not in the first. Our Lord first answered Nicodemus by saying, "Except a man be born again, he cannot see the kingdom of God ;" and when Nicodemus asks for an explanation, in the words, "How can a man be born when he is old?" our Lord then answered, "Except a man be born of water, and of the Spirit, he cannot enter the kingdom of God." He explains being "born again," by the phrase "being born of water and of the Spirit." If the order had been inverted,—if our Lord had said in the first instance, "Except a man be born of the water, and of the Spirit, he cannot enter into the kingdom of God," and, on Nicodemus asking for an explanation, He had said, "except a man be born again," omitting all mention of water,—in that case it might be said that our Lord intended to qualify his previous assertion, so as to make the outward sign, in all cases, not necessary to the new birth. But the passage in the Word of God is exactly the contrary, and leads us to a conclusion from which we cannot possibly escape.

D. But does it follow from our Lord's words that the birth of water and of the Spirit must take place at the same time—the time of Baptism? May not a man be born of "water" at one time, and of the "Spirit" at some subsequent period?

C. Impossible. Being born is a single definite act, taking place at one time. And as our Lord explains being "born again," by being "born of water and of the Spirit," if He means one thing by the first expression "being born again," He must mean but one thing by the second expression, "being born of water and of the Spirit." And again, I may ask, if such is His meaning—that a man may be born of water at one time and of the Spirit at another—why should He mention the birth of water at all? If it is so insignificant in itself, and, according to your principles, so utterly unconnected with any spiritual change, what reason can we assign for his mentioning it in the same breath with that spiritual change of feelings, affections, hopes, and desires, in fact, of the whole inner man, which you denominate regeneration?

D. There is yet another passage, 1 Corinthians x. 1, 2, 3, 4, &c. What doctrine respecting baptism do you gather from this?

C. The same that I gather from half the others; that it is a present deliverance from the guilt of sin, and an entrance into a state of salvation, which salvation, however, is to be "worked out with fear and trembling," or we shall not finally enjoy that eternal salvation, for the attainment of which we have been already saved at our entrance into the Church of Christ. St. Paul saw with sorrow that many among the Corinthians were not walking worthy of their vocation; they trusted that, having been once washed from sin, and engrafted into Christ, they would be finally saved without strenuous efforts on their part. He writes to disabuse them of so gross an error. At the end of the preceding chapter, the ninth, he tells them, that so far from feeling sure of his own salvation, he kept under his body, and brought it into subjection, lest, having preached to others, he himself should become a cast-away. He then proceeds (in the tenth chapter) to stir up the Corinthian Christians to wholesome fear respecting themselves. He does this by bringing before them the example of the deliverance of the children of Israel out of Egypt, the greater part of whom, so delivered, perished, through their own repeated sin, before they arrived at the promised land. St. Jude, in his epistle, in a similar passage, applies the word "saved" to the deliverance of the Israelites: "I will therefore put you in remembrance, though ye once knew this, now that the Lord, having saved the people out of the land of Egypt, afterwards destroyed them that believed not." Both Apostles, then, bring before their converts the example of a multitude of persons whom God saved, and yet they finally attained not the end for which He saved them. He saved them from Egyptian bondage, from Pharaoh and his host, and brought them into the wilderness, for the very purpose of giving them the promised land; but, in the words of the Psalmist, "they thought scorn of that pleasant land, and gave no credence unto His word." The Apostle would warn the Corinthians by their example; but how is he to do this? The salvation of the Israelites was a salvation from slavery in brick-kilns, from a bondage of the outward man; the salvation of the Corinthians was, on the contrary, of a spiritual nature, altogether from spiritual foes, from the guilt and punishment of sin. How then can St. Paul show any likeness between these two salvations, so as to make the one a figure or type of the other, and thus induce his Corinthian converts to "take heed" after the example of the Israelites? One being, so to speak, a salvation in the visible; the other in the invisible world. He does so in this way. You observe how he uses the word all—"all our fathers,"—"all passed through the sea,"—"all were baptised." Now between all the Israelites and all the Corinthian Christians there was but one point of resemblance, and that we may call a sacramental one. Every Israelite, without exception, was baptised to Moses in the Red Sea; every Corinthian Christian was baptised into Christ. St. Paul seizes on this one resemblance for his purpose. The baptism of the Israelites in the Red Sea was their salvation; it was the thing by which, and the moment at which, they were saved from Pharaoh; and all, without exception, who partook of the Red Sea baptism were thus saved—those who perished in the wilderness equally partook of the salvation with those few who resisted the temptations of the wilderness, passed Jordan, and entered into rest. The baptism of the Corinthians must have been to each one of them a corresponding salvation, a salvation answering to the different dispensation under which they lived, or St. Paul could not have brought the whole body of the Israelites as an example to the whole body of the Corinthian Church. If the Corinthians had not all been brought into a real state of salvation at their baptism, how could any comparison be instituted between them and a body of men, all of whom had, at their baptism, been so signally delivered from bondage and death, and translated into liberty?"

Is the baptism of John still continued in the Church, or has it been supplanted by the baptism wherewith Christ was baptised? For John testifieth that in the latter baptism, "he that sent me to baptise with water, the same said unto me, Upon whom thou shalt see the Spirit descending and remaining upon Him, the same is He which baptiseth with the Holy Ghost."

Again :

Does not this show us, that if we deprive the sacrament of what God has joined to it, viz., its saving grace, we deprive ourselves of the power of making use of it as a motive to holiness; and that if we restrict the reception of grace to those who afterwards improve that grace, we are utterly unable to apply the sacrament, as a motive to holiness, to those to whom the apostle applied it, that is, to those who most needed it—to men who, so far from improving grace given, were tampering with idolatry, and defiling their bodies with gross sin? Such as these St. Paul was alluding to when he wrote this part of the epistle, for he had said a little before to these same persons, "Flee fornication," (chap. vi. 18,) and in the fourteenth verse of this chapter, "Flee from idolatry," and both on the same ground, that they had been made "the body of Christ." (Chap. x, 17.) If the baptism of such as these had been of no present efficacy, as some would assert, because they afterwards showed themselves to be unstable, or sensual, how could the Apostle have made the use of it he did? His argument for present holiness because of past deliverance, AND THE RESPONSIBILITY THEREBY INCURRED, would fall to the ground, and be utterly inapplicable to the case of the very individuals for whose especial warning he was writing at the time.

Surely it cannot "be dangerous in the extreme" to hold this doctrine. So soon as the priest has washed the child by command of Christ, in the "laver of regeneration," in the sanctified water, i. e., water set apart as the outward visible sign of the inward spiritual grace "given unto us,"* so soon as this is done, he is directed by the rubric of the church to address the congregation in the following words:—"Seeing now dearly beloved brethren that this child IS regenerate, and grafted into the body of Christ's Church, let us give thanks to Almighty God for THESE BENEFITS; and with one accord make our prayers unto him, that this child may lead the rest of this life according to his beginning." What benefits? Is it not put in a state of salvation? Is Adam's guilt and merited death, his sin not washed away? In the collect for Christmas day we say; "Almighty God, who hast given us thy only begotten Son, to take our nature upon Him, and as at this time to be born of a pure virgin : Grant that we being regenerate, and made thy children by adoption and grace, may daily be renewed by Thy Holy Spirit ; through the same, our Lord Jesus Christ, who liveth and reigneth with Thee and the same Spirit, ever one God, world without end. Amen." In this sublime prayer, both regeneration and renewal are spoken of as distinct things ; and in the collect for Easter Eve : " Grant, O Lord, that as we are baptized into the death of Thy blessed Son, our Saviour Jesus Christ, so by continual mortifying our corrupt affections, we may be buried with Him ; and that through the grave and gate of death, we may pass to our joyful resurrection ; for His merits who died, and was buried, and rose again for us, Thy Son Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen."

* "Sanctify this water to the mystical washing away of sin.—Baptismal Serv. I add this note as showing that I could use no other term to express what the Prayer Book declares.

Under the teaching of St. Paul, the Church thus confidently appeals to us as being in a most responsible state, predestinated to salvation by a union with Christ, and furnished with the capacity by that union, (effected in baptism,) we are guilty before God of our own souls. We have resisted Him if so be we fall, and have driven Him away from our souls and bodies.—" Arise and go down to the potter's house, and there I will cause thee to hear My words. Then I went down to the Potter's house, and behold He wrought a work on the wheels, and the vessel that He made of clay was marred in the hand of the potter ; so He made it again another vessel, as seemed good to the potter to make it" and are not we marred vessels ? were we not in Adam sadly marred ? are we not in baptism again made other vessels as seemeth good to our Potter, Christ and the Spirit, to make us ? The free grace of God thus given to us, not for any merits of our own, —for of His own free will begat he us—James, chap. i., v. 8, enables each one who has received the gift, "daily to advance in godliness:" but "if it do evil in My sight, that it obey not my voice, (implying that there is the power to obey,) then will I repent of the good wherewith I said I would benefit them."—Is. chap. xviii. The baptised man taught to know that the Holy Spirit has implanted in him a capacity to live in Christ, and Christ promising to feed him with His life-giving body and blood, and daily to renew him by the Holy Spirit, rises refreshed and strengthened from every act of obedience, he knows and feels the awful responsibility that is on him, and dreads to pollute the garment of Christ, which has been put upon him; but if he neglect all these, and cast away the gift of God, he is as Judas or they of Sodom.

REMISSION OF SINS IN BAPTISM.

We are brought under covenant with Christ by Baptism.—
On His part he puts away Adam's sin, which we by nature inherit, and plants us into His death, giving us the capacity to grow unto His likeness. If we live according to His Spirit, we are receivers of the reward of that clause of the covenant which is of mercy.

If we do evil, and repent not of that evil, we fall under the clause which declares to us our damnation—He will certainly perform His promise—so in the language of the creed,

"I believe one baptism for the remission of sins."

"What sparkles in that lucid flood
Is water, by gross mortals ey'd,
But seen by Faith, 'tis blood
Out of a dear Friend's side.

A few calm words of faith and prayer,
A few bright drops of holy dew
Shall work a wonder there,
Earth's charmers never knew."

THE VIRGIN.

With reference to the position which the ever Blessed Virgin holds in the Church's affections. Throughout the whole subject she is put on a level with and compared to

Miriam, in no one sentence is she described as being entitled to more than our human affection and respect, and because a universal tradition which assigns to her perpetual Virginity, is made known to students, an opinion which Cranmer said was only rejected by "heretics," forthwith your Lordship discovers the heresy of Maryolatry.

INTERMEDIATE STATE.

I had not in my "condemned letter" said a word about the intermediate state. I believe it. The doctrine is consistent with God's justice and with His mercy—It is not the Romish idea of Purgatory; "This day shalt thou be with me in Paradise" was the language of Him of whom St. Peter says—(1. Peter iii. v. 18.,) "For Christ also hath once suffered for sin, the just for the unjust; that he might bring us to God, being put to death in the flesh, but quickened by the Spirit, by which also he went and preached unto the spirits in prison," and who after his resurrection said, (John:20 xvii,) "touch me not, for I am not yet ascended unto my Father, but go to my brethren and say unto them, I ascend unto my Father, and your Father, and to my God and your God." Acts ii. 33-35, "Therefore being by the right hand of God exalted, and having received of the Father the promise of the Holy Ghost, he hath shed forth this which ye now see and hear, FOR DAVID IS NOT ASCENDED INTO THE HEAVENS: but he himself saith, the Lord said unto my Lord sit thou on my right hand, until I make thine enemies thy footstool. Luke xvi. 31.—"As touching the resurrection of the dead, have ye not read that which was spoken unto you by God, saying I am the God of Abraham, and the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob; God is not the God of the dead, but of the LIVING. "Christ said unto her, Talitha cumi, damsel, arise; AND HER SPIRIT CAME AGAIN."

That the immortal spirit of man does lie sleeping in the grave I cannot believe, it is contrary to my reason to think so, and that God takes the departed spirit to the heaven of heavens—the special presence of the “I Am,” or sends it to hell directly, to bring it back to judgment is alike contrary to his goodness, and his justice. As the soul departs, so shall it be at the judgment day, we are to be judged by deeds done in the body, and rewarded for deeds done in the body, so neither prayers for the dead, nor prayers of the condemned, could they make such for themselves, will avail.

“Fear not them which kill the body, but cannot kill the soul;” and lastly Pearson says, “the soul of man, which while he lived gave life to the body, and was the fountain of all vital actions, in that separate existence after death, must not be conceived to sleep, or be bereft or stript of all vital actions, but still to exercise the powers of the understanding and of willing, and to be subject to the affections of joy and sorrow,” upon which is grounded the different condition and estate of the souls of men during that time of separation, some of them by the mercy of God being placed in peace and rest, in joy and happiness; others by the same justice of the same God, left to sorrow, pains, and misery.”

But “Who knoweth the spirit of man that goeth upward,” for says Pearson, “at the death of man nothing falleth but his body.” Man’s nature is compound, we are body, soul, and spirit, and St. Paul was willing to depart and be with Christ; he was willing rather to travel and be absent from the body, and to be present and at home with the Lord. We know that nothing imperfect can enter in the immediate presence of Jehovah, and altho’ blessed spirits may not enter into that perfect bliss (for the consummation of which we pray) which is to be their portion hereafter, i. e., after the final judgment, yet it is dishonouring to God, and a violation of our sense of His absolute perfection, to suppose that those happy ones are not enjoying, and delighted by, the presence of the Lamb. Christ has under the veil of the flesh shown himself to us, and shall he not show himself to His redeemed ones, altho' they be not in the heaven of heavens.

It is the general judgment of the Church, that the soul of Jesus, contradistinguished from his body, after separation from the flesh, was really and truly carried into those parts below, where the souls of men departed were detained. There is nothing which the Fathers agree in more than this, a real descent of the soul of Christ into the habitation of the souls of the departed. It is a fearful thing to lead men to think that the spiritual body is capable of even temporary destruction; the next easy step is a denial of immortality. Charged publicly with holding a belief in the intermediate state as if they were false, I close with the remark that,— “Formerly all persons who rejected, or sought to invalidate the statements of our sacred writers, used to profess themselves opponents of Christianity. But in these days the same arguments—such as these are—are brought forward by persons professing themselves Christians, and proclaiming their high veneration for the Gospel. It is as if the assailants of some fortress should assume the garb of its defenders, and thus obtain admission within its walls, that they might batter them the more easily from without.”—Whately, p. 72; Evil Angels.

There is one point in the pamphlet to which the Rev. Provost very justly takes exception, the term “fourth”—this is an error; the Church of England I know does not acknowledge the fourth century, as constituting the close of that period of doctrinal purity to which she has ever appealed in controversy. I had in my mind Blunt’s excellent and very able writings, and without taking the trouble to refer to him, I used the word “fourth” instead of third—all I meant was that the Church does acknowledge certain Councils as œcumenical, and to those only have I, or had I, any reference, and to those did the Reformers appeal, and to whatever source they appealed I am satisfied.

In the letter I say "I was trained to believe that in the Reformers, in the early English divines, and in the Fathers of the church of the first four centuries, I have safe guides to the truth." And in a second place I say the articles and canons of our Church refer for interpretation to the Church of the first four centuries, and to her own standard divines. We believe the Reformation to have secured for us a full recognition of divine truth, of holy doctrine therefore, and needs no new Cranmers, or Ridleys, or Latimers to "develope new ideas." I should have thought my bitterest opponent incapable of so perverting my opinions, as to seize upon the term "fourth" as a frightful error.

To convince the Corporation that the employment of the term "fourth century" was a clerical error. I here direct their attention to the language employed, first,—

"We believe the Reformation to have secured for us a full recognition of divine truth, of holy doctrine therefore, and needs no new Cranmers, or Ridleys, or Latimers to 'develope new ideas.' "

And again.

"It is to the doctrine contained in the Prayer Book that we must appeal in settlement of controversy; and by that book, sealed with the blood of martyrs and full of truth, we must, as English Churchmen, stand or fall."

These avowals are on the very page on which the "fourth century" is named, and yet, as I learn, the Provost charged me with holding a belief in the efficacy of prayers for the dead.

ABSOLUTION.

The Bishop of Huron, I know, does not deny the power of Ministerial Absolution as a gift to the Church, but he dreads both the use and abuse of it, so must every man, but let people understand what its use is as well as its abuse.

The Church, obeying the express command of our Saviour to His Apostles, offers to receive, through discreet and duly ordained Ministers, those whose consciences by sin are so disquieted that they cannot apply to themselves the atonement of Christ, that by Godly conversation in God's scriptures, and by having the mercy of God pointed out, by His own appointed officer, and discovering to them their repentance, God's forgiveness of sin may be proclaimed. Salvation is offered, it is forced on none. So with absolution, and the duty of confession; it is to be the voluntary act of the repentant sinner only. Now, is confession not a much more common practice than is generally supposed? only it is used under another name. Is it not a fact that many persons do go to their clergy, when in distress and suffering from sin? do they not express contrition and sorrow for their evil lives? does he not apply to their cases the healing balm of God's Word, and boldly declare to them God's pardon? Is not this done constantly in the case of prisoners, and persons caught and convicted of crime, and who become penitent? Yet because the Church of Rome has abused the service of confession, must every one not of Rome discard its benefits? The voice of an accusing conscience must have vent, and so long as a good God has endowed us with a power of sympathy, which is "brotherly love," so long will we look for a bosom into which, even here on earth, we may pour our griefs, our trials, our struggles, our sorrows, our weakness, our wickedness. Jesus Christ has told His people to confess their sins one to another, and left with His Apostles power to convey to His church, of which they were the foundation stones, and to their successors, the declaration of forgiveness of sin to the penitent—and as long as the Holy Catholic and Apostolic Church lasts, His command must remain:—"Whosoever sins ye remit, they are remitted unto them, and whosoever sins ye retain they are retained." These are not man's words, they are the words of Him who is High Priest and King over His Church—who once had power on earth to forgive sins, and never abrogated that power, but left it to be exercised for Himself by His duly appointed Priesthood.

The Church of England receives every doctrine detailed in the sacred Scriptures. She, therefore, accepts that solemn trust reposed in her by the Saviour Himself. To declare and pronounce to HIS PEOPLE BEING PENITENT, the absolution and remission of their sins. In obeying this injunction, the Church openly in the congregation declares the message, to the end that all may be moved to repentance, and she has made ample provision for the reception of those who desire to have absolution pronounced for them, when sin so oppresses them that they need be confirmed in their hopes of forgiveness by an assurance from a servant of the Most High, that such is commanded.

In the first place, she has prefixed a rubric to the Communion Service, requiring those who intend to go to the sacred feast, to signify their intention to the Priest some time before. Now this is required for many excellent reasons, and among these reasons we may mention: 1st, That the Clergyman may have an opportunity of knowing something of the communicant, and the communicant may have an opportunity of speaking soberly and religiously of his preparation for so awful a service. This watchfulness is necessary, since among the essential acts which the Christian is called upon especially to exhibit, is charity in its scriptural sense: and if the Minister finds this wanting, he is in duty bound to reason with and convince the offender, if such should come to him. In the same manner, he would have the opportunity of dealing with sins deep and fatal. The Anglican Church, therefore, contemplates in all that she does, the admission of the penitent to all the privileges of the Gospel of Christ, or his re-admission into that body of which our Lord is Head. Such intercourse as this, kept up between pastor and flock, would not only tend to the comfort of all true Christians, but would largely increase the number of Christ's disciples, and restore again that wholesome discipline, the want of which has brought such scandal on the Church. How many doubts, how many falterings and backslidings would be prevented, if the intending communicant, or the newly confirmed, would obey the law of their church, by signifying to their pastor, or "some other discreet minister," their intention to wait on the Lord's altar, so that by counsel and advice, and the necessary, ministration of God's word, they may receive the benefit of absolution, their sins forgiven by God, by his declaring, if their repentance is hearty and sincere, and they be desirous to receive the Seal of their forgiveness, the partaking of the Body and Blood of Christ. All this is very different from the Roman confessional, and from the assumed judicial deliverance from the sin by that Church. In all her services, the necessity of repentance and a life of penitence, if life be granted, is set forth as the essential voluntary act and necessity of the applicant for pardon—and no where does the scripture enforce the impenitent—"We persuade," says the apostle.

The use of words under different senses, renders it difficult to convey a truth to those who may be strongly prejudiced against one of the senses in which they have been used. It is so with the terms "confession" and "absolution." Many can only think of them from a Roman point of view. But, is it not clear that we must necessarily confess our sins whenever we engage in serious conversation with, and seek the counsel of, our pastor? and is not he authorised to declare and pronounce God's pardon to us, we being penitent, and to admit us to communion with Christ, upon no other terms than those of hearty, honest, deep-rooted sorrow for the whole body of sin?

It is quite clear both from the Acts of the Holy Apostles as well as from the Epistles, that private admonition was employed in the first case with offenders, in the second, the open rebuke and expulsion of those who scandalized the religion of Jesus. Indeed, from the nature of our Holy Gospel union, it must be so; for we are BRETHREN—A BROTHERHOOD in Christ—one family one body—and each one a member. Christ's servants and ministers are then not over us as lords, but as elder brothers, sent to warn men every where to repent,—sent, as Christ Himself was sent, to give deliverance to the captive, and to heal—not the hard, but the broken and contrite heart. “As my Father hath sent me, so send I you.” Again, “Lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the world.” If this promise be true, how is Christ to be with us on whom the ends of the world have come, unless he be essentially present in all the offices of His Church. The Son of Man claimed power on earth to forgive sins; that power He has left with his own servants, to be exercised for Him, and that the power was meant to be effectual, we may be sure for the words are His own. Our Lord designed His Apostles to know the sheep, they were not to be strangers to each other,—when, therefore, it is said that the Apostles only excluded from communion the gross sinner, the statement is untrue, and introduces to us a sad Roman error, the making a distinction between sins which should not be made. Multitude of sins may eat up the soul, and yet to the eye of the world that soul may seem right. Many sin through ignorance, many foolishly, many through carelessness,—to many, very many such it is an untold blessing if they may but ask counsel and guidance: and how many young persons, in this age of laxity and disregard for authority, look back with thankfulness to the saving consolation which had been administered to them by the minister of Christ. We believe that holy men of old never would have acted and written as they have done, unless they felt very strongly the great benefit of mutual confession of their sinfulness, and that this severe humiliation is sometimes necessary for the burdened and oppressed soul.

The Church of England does not enjoin private confession on her children as an essential act; she urges it on those whose consciences are so sorely smitten that they cannot apply to themselves God's mercy to sinners, and she allows it to those who are in doubt and fear. And how does she require them to seek the counsel and advice of the discreet and able minister? Not by any means after the manner of the Romish confessional. In such case the sinner is catechised as to the manner and form, and mode of each sin, and the very minutest detail is to be given to the confessor. But this is not required by scripture nor by the Church. Let us take that case which the opposers of confession are fond of adducing, as most calculated to arouse the feeling of disgust against confession at all or in any shape. the case of adultery. The sinner discovers, or is brought to discover the alarming condition of her soul: remorse and an awakened conscience throw her into a tempest of affliction, and fill her with doubts and fears. She goes, or is persuaded to go, to a clergyman. How is she to be received? Is the clergyman to seat her down, and commence a series of interrogatories as to each act of sin that the terror-stricken creature has committed? No! It is enough,—and scripture demands no more,—for the penitent to acknowledge in plain but general and emphatic terms, her frightful guilt: "I am miserable!—I feel I am an outcast! I have committed every abomination before God and man; my life hitherto has been wasted in riotous living: adultery, fornication, revelling, drunkenness, have been my continued course. How can pardon be extended to such a sinner?"

This open, honest confession, with an open evidence of contrition and sorrow, surely, is what the law requires—and it is enough; and the “discreet and learned minister” does so act, and should so act, with sin and towards sinners, wherever he encounters them, as to draw out penitence with as little of the filth of sin: and now by the healing application of the Word, and good advice, and fatherly help, the way is open for the returning prodigal, to the admission to those blessed privileges which is afforded by being restored to communion with Christ and his Church. The Roman confessional is not the only mode of access to God’s ministers: we believe it to be an unscriptural one. But no sane man would refuse to acknowledge his faults to his pastor, or refuse to receive most thankfully what God has ordered him as His minister to pronounce, and declare “His remission of the sins of the sincere penitent.” This being done, reconciliation with God is positively assured to the true and hearty penitent; his pardon is sealed, even here on earth, by his partaking of the body and blood of Christ, or on his earnest and hearty desire so to receive Christ. We say again, would that a closer and more frequent intercourse existed between pastor and people than now exists, and that they sought each other’s society more than they do, and talked more to each other of Christ and His kingdom. We would further remark that the law of God makes no difference in sin, so that when confession is made with a view to absolution and full reconciliation with God, it is idle to talk of forgiveness for this or that sin. It is quite true that in some cases restitution has to be made and the pardon of those we have wronged has to be sought; but absolution or reconciliation, to be truly effectual, is to be the absolution of the penitent from his sins,—this is particularly the case with the sick person who, according to the rubric, should be moved to make acknowledgment of his sins, with a view, no doubt, to humility and confession of his faith only in Christ Jesus our Lord, preparatory to the declaration of forgiveness of sins, and the application of the declaration to his own case. The same language is contained in the rubric with reference to prisoners in the Irish Prayer Book, where a special form is provided admirably adapted to their wants. In the Anglican Church, therefore, the absolution of sins on confession of Christ is a gift of power left by our Lord to His Church to be used only by, and useful only to, the truly penitent—so that there is no room for cavil or doubt.—Every being, in the day of his sad trial, can answer to his own conscience whether he is really and heartily sorry for his guilt, and can therefore find an answer in his own conscience, believing Christ's promise true, whether God's minister has effectually declared and pronounced His forgiveness, so that at the grave and gate of death, he may be assured that mercy awaits him on his entering on that rest from which there is no return.

The following testimony of English divines is enough to prove that confession is proper to the truly penitent :

ARCHBISHOP CRANMER.

God dothe not speak to us with a voyce sounding out of heaven. But He hath given the kayes of the kingdom of heaven and the authority to forgyve synne to the ministers of the church. Wherefore, let him that is a sinner go to one of them ; let him acknowledge and confess his synne, and pray him that according to God's commandment, he will give him absolution and comfort him with the word of grace and forgiveness of his synnes. And when the minister does so I ought steadfastly to believe that my synnes are truly forgiven in heaven.—Art. 8, Cranmer's Works, t. iv., p. 281, 3 ed.

BISHOP LATIMER.

But to speak of right and true confession, I would to God it were kept in England; for it is a good thing. That those who found themselves grieved in conscience, might go to a learned man and there fetch of him comfort of the word of God, and so come to a quiet conscience, which is better and more to be regarded than all the riches of the world.—Sermon, 3rd Sunday after Epiph.

Auricular confession was instituted only that people might give an account of their faith, and from their hearts confess an earnest desire to receive the holy sacrament. We force no man thereunto. Christ gave the keys to the Church for comfort, and commanded His servants to deal therewith according to His direction, to bind the impenitent and to absolve them that repenting acknowledge and confess their sins, are heartily sorry for them, and believe that God forgives them for Christ's sake.—Luther's Table-Talk.

BISHOP RIDLEY.

Confession unto the minister which is able to instruct, correct, and inform the weak, wounded and ignorant conscience, indeed, I ever thought ought to do much good to Christ's congregation,—and so, I assure you, I think to this day.—Eccl. Biog., vol. iii., p. 67.

BISHOP JEWELL.

Touching the third—private confession—if it be discreetly used, without superstition or other ill, it is not in any wise by us reproved. The abuses and errors set apart, we do no more mislike a private confession than a private sermon.—Defence of The Apology of the Church of England, ch. vi., div., i., ii.

HOOKE.

For private confession and absolution, it standeth thus with us: that the priest's power to absolve is publicly taught and professed; and the Church not deemed to have authority either of abridging or enlarging the use and exercise of that power.—Eccl. Pol., vol. v., 4, 15.

BISHOP JEREMY TAYLOR.

In all which circumstances, because we may be very much helped, if we take in the assistance of a spiritual guide: therefore, the Church of God in all ages hath commanded, and in most cases enjoined, that we confess our sins, and discover the state and condition of our souls to such a person as we, or our superiors judge fit to help us in such needs.—Holy Living, ch. iv.

Confess your sins often, hear the word of God, make religion the business of your life, your study and chiefest care; and be sure that in all things a spiritual guide takes you in hand.—Golden Grove Agenda, No. 32.

Again:—That besides the examination of your conscience—which may be done in secret between God and your soul,—there is great use in holy confession; which, though it be not generally in all cases, and peremptorily commanded,—as if without it no salvation could possibly be had,—yet you are advised by the Church under whose discipline you live, that before you are to receive the Holy Communion, or when you are visited with any dangerous sickness, if you find any one particular sin or more that lies heavy upon you, to disburden yourself of it into the bosom of your confessor; who not only stands between God and you to pray for you: but hath the power of the keys committed to him, upon your true repentance, to absolve you in Christ's name from these sins which you have confessed unto him.

Again:—Having made choice of such a confessor who is every way qualified that you may trust your soul with him, you are advised plainly and sincerely to open your heart to him. * * * * That for the frequency of doing this you are to consult with your own necessities.

BISHOP OVERALL.

Confession of sins must necessarily be made to them, to whom the dispensation of the mysteries of God is committed. For so they which in former days repented amongst the saints are said to have done.

ST. PAUL.

Brethren, if a man be overtaken in a fault, ye who are spiritual restore such an one in the spirit of meekness; considering thyself, lest thou also be tempted. Bear ye one another's burdens and so fulfil the law of Christ.

Wherefore comfort yourselves together and edify one another, even as also ye do. And we beseech you, brethren, to know them which labour among you, and are over you in the Lord, and admonish you;

And to esteem them very highly in love ; for their works' sake. * * * *

We exhort you, brethren, warn them that are unruly, comfort the feeble-minded, be patient toward all men. Obey them who have the rule over you and submit yourselves ; for they watch for your souls as they that must give account.

ST. JAMES.

Is any sick among you ? Let him call for the elders of the church : and let them pray over him anointing him with oil in the name of the Lord ;

And the prayer of faith shall save the sick, and the Lord shall raise him up : and if he have committed sins, they shall be forgiven him.

Confess your faults one to another, and pray for one another, that ye may be healed ; the fervent prayer of a righteous man availeth much.

THE LORD JESUS.

Then said Jesus unto them again, Peace be unto you ; as My Father hath sent Me even so send I you. And when He had said this, He breathed on them, and said,

Receive ye the Holy Ghost ;

Whosoever sins ye remit, they are remitted unto them ; and whosoever sins ye retain they are retained.

Simon Peter answered and said, Thou art the Christ, the son of the living God.

I say unto thee, thou art Peter, and upon this rock I will build my church : and the gates of Hell shall not prevail against it. And I will give unto thee the keys of the Kingdom of Heaven, and whatsoever thou shalt bind on earth shall be bound in heaven : and whatsoever thou shalt loose on earth, shall be loosed in heaven.

Jesus spake unto them, saying, All power is given unto me in heaven and in earth. * * *

Teaching them to observe ALL things whatsoever I have commanded you ; and lo ! I am with you always even unto the end of the world.—Holy Bible—The Word of God.

If then it be true that the Lord Jesus sent His Apostles and servants, as His Father had sent Him, we must discover in what way and for what he was sent.

And when He saw their faith, He said unto him, Man, thy sins are forgiven thee. And the Scribes and Pharisees began to reason, saying, Who is this which speaketh blasphemies: who can forgive sins but God alone? But when Jesus perceived their thoughts he answering said unto them, What reason ye in your hearts? Whether is it easier to say, Thy sins be forgiven thee! or to say, Rise up and walk? But that ye may know that the Son of Man hath power on earth to forgive sins,—He said unto the sick of the palsy, Arise, and take up thy couch, and go into thine house.

Verily, verily, I say unto you, he that receiveth whomsoever I send receiveth Me; and he that receiveth Me receiveth him that sent Me. * * * As Thou hast sent Me into the world even so also have I sent them into the world.

Neither pray I for these alone, but for them also which shall believe on me, through their word: that they all may be one; as Thou, Father, art in me; and I in Thee, that they also may be one in Us; that the world may believe that Thou hast sent Me. And the glory which Thou gavest Me, I have given them, that they may be one even as we are one. * * *

Isaiah, chap. lxi., v. 6.—Ye shall be named the Priests of the Lord. Men shall call you the ministers of our God.

Chap. lxvi., v. 21.—And I will also take them for Priests and for Levites, saith the Lord. For as the new heavens and the new earth which I will make, shall remain before me, so shall your seed and your name remain.

This was fulfilled by our Lord, when he named and called His Apostles, and on leaving them said, “Behold, I send the promise of My Father upon you: but tarry ye in the city of Jerusalem, until ye be endued with power from on high.” Previous to this, before His sacrifice, He had commissioned them, and in the person of St. Peter, endued them with authority: “Thou art Peter, and upon this rock I will build my church, and the gates of Hell shall not prevail against it. And I will give unto thee the keys of the Kingdom of Heaven: and whatsoever thou shalt bind on earth shall be bound in heaven: and whatsoever thou shalt loose on earth shall be loosed in heaven.” Again, in chap. xviii., v. 15: “Moreover, if thy brother shall trespass against thee, go and tell him his fault between him and thee alone: if he shall hear thee, then thou hast gained thy brother. But if he will not hear thee, then take with thee one or two more, that in the mouth of two or three witnesses, every word may be established. And if he shall neglect to hear them, tell it unto the church : but if he neglect to hear the church, let him be unto thee as an heathen man and a publican. Verily I say unto you, whatsoever ye shall bind on earth shall be bound in heaven : and whatsoever ye shall loose on earth shall be loosed in heaven."

Again, the third time : "The same day, at evening, being the first day of the week, when the doors were shut, when the disciples were assembled for fear of the Jews, came Jesus, and stood in the midst, and said unto them, Peace be unto you. And when He had said so He showed them His hands and His side. Then were the disciples glad when they saw the Lord. Then said Jesus to them again, Peace be unto you : as My Father hath sent Me, so send I you. And when He had said this, He breathed on them, and said unto them, Receive ye the Holy Ghost : whosoever sins ye remit they are remitted unto them ; and whosoever sins ye retain they are retained."

In obedience to our Lord's commands, the disciples tarry at Jerusalem, "and when they were come in, they went up into an upper room, where abode both Peter and James, and John and Andrew, Philip and Thomas, Bartholomew, and Mathew, James the son of Alphaeus, and Simon Zelotes, and Judas the brother of James. These all continued with one accord in prayer and supplication, with the women and Mary the mother of Jesus, and with His brethren. And in those days, Peter stood up in the midst of the disciples, and said, Men and brethren, this scripture must needs have been fulfilled, which the Holy Ghost, by the mouth of David, spake before, concerning Judas, who was guide to them that took Jesus. For he was numbered with us, and had obtained part of this ministry. . . . Wherefore of these men which have companied with us all the time that the Lord Jesus was in and out among us, beginning with the baptism of John unto the same day that he was taken up from us, must one be ordained to be a witness with us of His resurrection—and they gave forth their lots, after prayer, and the lot fell upon Matthias. And when the day of Pentecost was come, they were all with one accord in one place, and suddenly there came a sound from heaven, as of a rushing, mighty wind, and it filled all the house where they were sitting, and there appeared unto them cloven tongues as of fire, and it sat on each of them : and they were all filled with the Holy Ghost, and began to speak with tongues as the Spirit gave them utterance." A like visible call to apostleship was given to St. Paul. The whole world, therefore, is positively assured that the foundation stones of the Church and its called ministry are surely established, and from these Apostles up to the present hour, an unbroken ministry has been preserved. From this time, (i. e. from the Apostles,) the visible calling and sealing of the Christian priesthood has been by the laying on of hands and prayer. It is interesting to trace the continuance of the office briefly through the writings of the New Testament. Thus we will first take the commission of St. Paul, and then His own to Titus and to Timothy.

COMMISSION TO ST. PAUL.

"I heard a voice speak unto me and saying in the Hebrew tongue, Saul, Saul, why persecutest thou Me? It is hard for thee to kick against the pricks. And I said, who art Thou, Lord? and He said, I am Jesus whom thou persecutest. But rise and stand upon thy feet : for I have appeared unto thee for this purpose, to make thee a minister and a witness both of these things which thou hast seen, and of those things in the which I will appear unto thee : delivering thee from the people and from the Gentiles unto whom now I send thee to open their eyes, and to turn them from darkness to light, and from the power of Satan unto God, THAT THEY MAY RECEIVE FORGIVENESS OF SINS and INHERITANCE among them which are sanctified by faith which is in Me."

St. Luke, chap. xxiv., v. 47 : "Thus it behoved Christ to suffer and to rise from the dead the third day ; and that repentance and remission of sins should be preached in His name."

St. Luke, chap. xxii., v. 29. ; "And I appoint unto you a kingdom, as My Father has appointed unto Me, that ye may EAT and DRINK at MY TABLE in My kingdom, and sit on thrones judging the twelve tribes of Israel."

St. Paul to Timothy, chap. 1 : "This charge I commit unto thee, son Timothy, according to the prophecies which went before on thee, that thou by them might war a good warfare ; holding faith and a good conscience ; which some having put away concerning faith have made shipwreck : of whom is Hymenæus and Alexander ; WHOM I HAVE DELIVERED UNTO SATAN that they may learn not to blaspheme."

St. Paul, in his Second Epistle to Timothy says, " Wherefore, I put thee in remembrance that thou stir up the GIFT OF GOD, which is in thee by the putting on of my hands, for God has not given us the spirit of fear ; but of POWER and of LOVE, and of a sound mind. Hold fast the form of sound words which thou has heard of me, in faith and love which is in Christ Jesus. THAT GOOD THING WHICH WAS COMMITTED UNTO THEE KEEP, by the Holy Ghost who dwelleth in us."

St. Peter to the Presbyters, says, " Feed the flock of God, which is among you, taking the oversight thereof, not by constraint but willingly ; not for filthy lucre, but of a ready mind ; neither as lords of God's heritage, but being ensamples to the flock. Likewise ye younger, submit yourselves unto the elder Yea, all of you be subject one to another, and be clothed with humility."

St. Paul to Timothy, chap. iv. : " I charge thee, therefore, before God and the Lord Jesus Christ, who shall judge the quick and the dead, at His appearing and His kingdom ; preach the word ; be instant in season, out of season, reprove, rebuke, exhort with all long suffering and doctrine."

St. Paul to Titus, saith, " These things speak and exhort, and rebuke with all authority. Let no man despise thee."

Again, " A man that is an heretic, after the first and second admonition, reject ; knowing that he that is such subverted and sinneth being condemned of himself."

St. Peter's First General Epistle, chap. ii., v. 5 : Ye also, as lively stones, are built up a spiritual house, an holy priesthood, to offer up spiritual sacrifices, acceptable to God by Jesus Christ."

The call to the Gentile world is exactly the same in terms as that of the Jews. Speaking unto Moses, the Lord said,— " And ye shall be unto me a kingdom of priests and an holy nation ;" Exodus, chap. xix., v. 6. ; and inasmuch as the people had to make offerings to God, so was there a special priesthood set apart to present them : exactly so under the Christian Church, there are people still to make offerings to God, and He has left His representative priesthood to present them reverently and humbly before Him. " Wherefore, if thou bring thy gift to the altar and there rememberest that thy brother hath ought against thee ; leave there thy gift before the altar, and go thy way : first be reconciled to thy brother, and then come and offer thy gift."

The office of priesthood in the Church is not done away.—It is only a changed priesthood, and our Lord Jesus Christ himself constantly proclaimed His mission to be a mission of reconciliation ; and commanded repentance and remission of sins, to be every where proclaimed by His own representative priesthood ; and as we have seen, He thrice commissioned His Apostles to administer absolution to penitents, and to bind the impenitents,—once, before His death,—a second time in the person of St. Peter, again before his ascension. And St. Paul, who did bind, as we have seen, Hymenæus. Now, if rightly considered, this gift of our Lord to His Church is one of the most charitable, considerate, loving acts which the all-holy, blessed Jesus ever gave to mortal man, after the gift of Himself, of which this is a part. A miserable sinner, bowed down with grief for a load of sins unbearable, prostrate, contrite, broken in spirit, I go to the foot-stool of my Lord, and in bitterness of soul confess my wickedness, and am heartily sorry for my sin. I am repentant, I feel it, and know in my heart my sorrow. Is it no sweet consolation to me, or to him about to leave the world, well nigh crushed down with shame, to hear an authorised minister of Christ say,—“In the name of Jesus Christ, thy sins are forgiven thee?” The words are Christ’s, not the minister’s: he is ordered to come to me, ministering in Christ’s stead, and say, “Thy sins are forgiven thee,” upon plain unmistakeable conditions, unfeigned repentance and faith in Christ, as alone able and willing to save sinners ; the only atonement for sin. Yes, truly, under such circumstances, the Son of Man even now on earth doth forgive sins. Our Lord, commiserating the weakness of man, left authority with those who minister in His stead, to declare and pronounce (to His people being penitent) the absolution and remission of their sins.

INTERCESSION OF SAINTS.

No one pretends that it is necessary to salvation to believe that the spirits of the just, the saints departed, offer up prayers for the individual members of the Church of the Redeemer. It is an opinion which has ever found advocates amongst those who believe in the indestructibility of the human soul, and its immortality therefore. If we are not so utterly changed when separate from the human body, if our life here be a continuance of the same life in eternity, it may be supposed that our best and holiest affections will be intensified, and our love for Christ and desire for the consummation of His kingdom, worthy of the occupation of blessed spirits. At all events, Pearson says, "The saints of God, in the living Church of Christ, are in communion with all the saints departed out of this life and admitted to the presence of God. Jerusalem sometimes is taken for the church on earth,—sometimes for that part of the church which is in heaven, to shew that as both are represented by one, so both are but one city of God. . . .

"This communion of the saints in heaven and earth, upon the mystical union of Christ, their head, being fundamental and internal, what acts or external operations it produceth are not so certain. That we communicate with them in hope of that happiness which they actually enjoy is evident; that we have the Spirit of God given us as an earnest, and so a part of their felicity is certain. But what they do in relation to us on earth particularly considered, is what we ought to perform in reference to them in heaven, beside a reverential respect and study of imitation, is not revealed to us in the Scriptures—no greater enlargement of the communion is made as to the saints in heaven, than the society of hope, esteem and imitation on our side,—OF DESIRES AND SUPPLICATIONS ON THEIR SIDE."

My Lords and Gentlemen, it is evident from the constitution of our holy branch of the Church that she has fully realized the fact, that the nature of man is so fashioned, that the various avenues to his soul—the external senses and internal emotions—must receive recognition, and hence with "uniform prayer," she permits variety in the external mode of expressing that prayer: from the splendour of the cathedral to the log-built church in our backwoods, the external symbols of the same religion are variously expressed. Would to God that this spirit actuated us in our dealings with each other, we should then cease in bitterness of spirit to call each other Puseyite or Calvinist.

It surely is not safe ground to explain away entirely the most solemn words and acts of the Holy One. His whole life in the flesh was engaged in doing His Father's will, no in thinking it, and He has promised to reveal that will to those who do it. Throughout the whole sacred Scriptures, the Incarnation and Atonement are set forth to quicken our sense of the utter depravity of the human race; the life, the character, the suffering, the death of the Second Adam are there, to convince us that in Him, through the Spirit, is the restoration and reconstruction of lost man. As in Adam—not by Adam—all die; even so in Christ shall all be made alive, so that they may live in and for Christ. The union with Adam no man professing to believe Scripture, doubts; unfortunately, many Naamans are to be found, who prefer the rivers of Damascus to all the waters of Jordan. The philosophic schools seize upon this weakness of our nature to dilute the meaning of the reality of our union with Christ, and cheat the credulous fancy with abstractions which are opium to the soul—the denial of the restoration of our human nature by the imparting of Christ's nature to us, is not only destroying a belief in the necessity for the Incarnation and atonement, but also leads to the rejection of that other revealed truth, that in Adam all die.

In the Church, the declension of a living faith yields up the belief in the regeneration of each individual man in Christ, and obscures the doctrine of an equally necessary condition—the daily renewal by the Spirit, thus robbing Christ of His honour, in the participation of our restoration, and dishonouring the Holy Spirit, under the false notion of magnifying his office.

The doctrine is closely allied to, and is an exaggeration of a philosophic speculation, which has been met by Mr. Mansel's arguments, against an irrational conception of an abstract humanity—which subordinates the individual to the universal, the person to the species. If there is one dream, he says, of a godless philosophy, to which, beyond all others, every moment of our consciousness gives the lie, it is that which subordinates the individual to the universal, which deifies kinds and realises classification, which sees Being in generalisation and Appearance in limitation; which regards the living and conscious man as a wave on the ocean of the unconscious infinite, his life a momentary tossing to and fro on the shifting tide, his destiny to be swallowed up in the formless and boundless universe.

Yes, there is and must be a sense in which we must admit the existence of human nature as the common property, a sense in which that human nature was depraved in all, as it has been re-constructed for all. We desire to shew that the inheritance of the flesh and inner nature is by continuous descent, by direct, unbroken, lineal progression, and in like manner the reconstruction of that nature; and so it comes to pass that, in the personality of Christ—the new Adam—we have that rock which contains the living water; the stream of life flowing only for those who, having been grafted into His body, readily and heartily receive Him as their only source of life. Humanity is drawn into Himself, that it may flow out again purified and cleansed for the in-dwelling of the Spirit of God; but inasmuch as the Second Man reclaims human nature through the sacrifice of Himself, it is by Sacramental union that we receive the gift of a regenerated nature, and are preserved by His strength imparted to us from lapsing into eternal death. If we accept the doctrine which plainly intimates that the human soul, or the spiritual man, being one and the same, has been clothed upon by different kinds of human flesh; then we cannot understand the doctrine of a fallen humanity, or the relationship which runs through the family as human beings; but, on the contrary, the personality of each man being established, and his human origin being traced from one even as himself, we can understand how there is a common humanity through which all are bound together, and all reclaimed through the God-Man.

My Lords, I cannot understand the object and intention of that system of religious instruction which seems to teach that one portion of our religious life and duty is spiritual and real, and another portion carnal and less real. "My kingdom is not of this world;" is engraved over the door-way to every Christian fane, and no man may enter as a true servant of this kingdom, but through that door which is alone the Way, the Truth, and the Life. We must be partakers not only of the ideal pattern of Christ, but there must be a real entrance into spiritual union with Christ, for we are partakers of His body, His flesh and His bones.

In wonderful condescension to our weak natures he hath not left us without witnesses of His love. He has instituted and appointed seals to His new covenant, and with and by these, are we, if led and taught by God's Spirit, perfectly assured of our true and complete, real and not ideal, union with Christ. For more than six thousand years the many coloured Bow has ever and again drawn, in harmoniously blended rays, the sure promise of the great I AM across the blue vault of heaven; shall we in eighteen hundred and sixty years forget the sure and certain seals of a greater redemption, salvation from a greater flood, even the flood of the waters of iniquity? Surely neither the Lord Bishop of Huron nor those that are in agreement with him, are uncharitable enough to suppose, that because we hold what we believe to be most certain truths of the reality of Christ's work, that therefore we are not enlightened by God's Spirit, and are unfit to remain in the Church of England?

My, Lords, it has been the fault of the Church of England that she has driven men from her fold, whom by kindness she might have retained. John Wesley, and then his followers, were persecuted by the fire of galling controversy, until no place was found for them; and yet Wesley awakened the world from a sleep that had well nigh passed into the stupor of death. Again watchmen on the towers are sounding the alarm, and with trumpet tongues are calling men every where to repent; the blast is shrill and clear, and awakens the dreamy world: again God is holding a controversy with his people: let each man burnish his armour, and although in the sudden awakening friends may seem to stand opposed as foes, yet the sound of "The uniting voice" shall be heard soft and clear above the din of strife, and the bright glow of His cross in the heaven of His kingdom, shall rally His own to the standard of peace. Let those who earnestly desire to realise that union with the adorable Jesus, which the word of God so diligently inculcates, cease to preach and to teach mere SUBJECTIVE ideas with reference to these holy mysteries, the Sacraments, for until men grasp by the power of a LIVING Faith, the knowledge of the fact that the Holy Spirit does now exercise His Personal influence on them; and that Christ is still redeeming His people—that there is a real active spiritual work going on, we shall never believe St. Paul, when he says, "But you are come unto Sion, and unto THE CITY OF THE LIVING GOD, THE HEAVENLY JERUSALEM, and to an innumerable company of angels," to the general assembly, and church of the first-born, which are written in heaven, and to God the judge of all, and to spirits of just men made perfect, and to Jesus the Mediator of the new covenant, and to the blood of "Sprinkling that speaketh better things than that of Abel." For we are His workmanship, CREATED in Christ Jesus unto good works, which God hath before ordained that we should walk in them. * * *

But now in Christ Jesus ye who sometimes were far off are made nigh by the blood of Christ:" thus testifying to the truth of that which was spoken by Isaiah: "The labour of Egypt, and the merchandise of Ethiopia and of the Sabeans, men of stature, shall come over unto thee, and they shall be thine; they shall come after thee—in chains shall they come over, and they shall fall down unto thee, they shall make supplication unto thee saying, Surely, God is in thee, and there is none else, there is no God. Verily thou art a God, that hidest thyself, O God of Israel, the Saviour.”—Isaiah, c. xlv. v. 14 to 15.

Lastly, in the whole of this discussion, if there is one thing more than another that is desirable to be avoided, it is any explanation of the mode how the body and blood of the Redeemer are verily and indeed taken. By Divine appointment bread and wine are the Christian oblation, and conjoined on the part of the faithful receiver with true repentance, prayer, praise, and thanksgiving, this incense completes the sacrifice by which we show forth the Lord's death. How by this service he gives himself to us, we know not now. After his resurrection His wounded body was shewn to His disciples, and first to her from whom His adorable peace-giving voice drew forth the answer, Rabboni! and, (possessing power over all things, and triumphing over all material things,) the same day at evening, being the first day of the week, when the doors were shut where the disciples were assembled, came Jesus and stood in the midst, and saith unto them, peace be unto you—three times supernatural power took him into the bodily presence of His disciples. We know not how Jesus did this, but we know that he did it, and that in the same body he ascended. With Thomas, our eyes being opened by faith, when seeking Him at His altar, may each have grace to exclaim, “My Lord, and my God,” for the same Jesus that took bread and brake it, and gave to His disciples, saying, take, eat, this is My Body, is the very Jesus who now in the same Body says exactly, and does exactly the same for each one of us. In whatsoever supernatural manner He gave His human nature to His Apostles, I must believe that in the same manner He gives Himself to us even at this day.

If "by an act of rashness," I have inflicted injury on the College, and widened a breach in the church which all should try to close, I do most bitterly regret it, and if in this unburdening of my soul I have let loose thoughts and feelings which are more fitly poured out in the secret of the closet, I am only actuated by the desire to make reparation for an error and to seek from your Lordships a withdrawal of that displeasure which I have unfortunately incurred. I do not desire to be misunderstood; the events of the past week have been too severe in their effects to enable me under present circumstances, (even if I could suppose it possible on your Lordships' part) to resume active duty in any of the Church's institutions in this Province—I am not therefore seeking for restoration to office, but I do desire to make it plain to the church, and I will add to the Bishop of Huron and his Diocese, that I am not tainted with Romanism, and to convince the corporation of Trinity College, and the Provost, that misled by a partial publication of my sentiments, friends aided in my condemnation upon imperfect grounds. I am aware that the Provost does not recognise Dr. Pusey as a guide in his teaching, and my having made a quotation from a work by this author—written, however, expressly against the Roman views of the Sacrament, might have appeared to identify the Provost's opinions with Dr. Pusey's views in general. I quoted the paragraph on the use of the word "re-order," expressly to disprove the notion of ELEMENTAL change, and in subsequent explanations most unmistakeably as I have shewn, I accepted the scriptural teaching of a spiritual, but no less Real Presence, in contradistinction to the carnal and therefore Roman interpretation.
