BAY ROBERTS, NFLD., FRIDAY, JULY 24, 1914.

80 CENTS A YEAR, IN ADVANCE

Thanks Orange Brethren

(Editor the Guardian). Dear Sir,-Please allow me space in your valued paper to express thanks to the brethren of Bay Roberts who so kindly came over to help us celebrate the 12th of July. We will always regard them as true Orangemen. A man's loyalty is shown by his sacrifice, and I am sure cur brethren from Bay Roberts did this. We also wish to thank all other brethren and the Topsail Band for rendering the musical selections so well.

This is my first time writing to your paper, but I asure you it will not be the last. You will get a little news from Wabana every now and again. The comrades of Bell Island were glad to see their old friend and brother, Adjt. Higdon, again. Bay Roberts seems to ee with him, for he is just as fat and jolly as ever.

Wishing your paper every success, I remain yours truly,
RICHARD BUGDEN. Wabana Mines, July 17, 1914.

The funeral took place on Sunday, 12th inst., and was largely attended, her body being taken to St.
Mark's Church where an instructive sermon was proched by Rev.
Frank Severa, the text being 1 Timothy 2: 15. After the sermon the mourners retrieed their steps back to the Church of England cemetery where interment took place. To the mourners and little orphan children we extend our sincerest sympathy.

Christian Socialism To-day

By R. H. MERCER.

(Concluded.) It may be further shown that Soialism, so-called, may exist and be propagated without any effort on the part of its exponents to recognize Christianity at all. The instinctive philosophy of the people is faith in God, an universal, moral intuition; but issues, in many instances in grotesque expressions. Sometimes these is a sheer disappointment with the Social effectiveness of the Christian Church such as forced one of the most judicious labor leaders in England to say, that he saw no place for religion in the workingman's programme.

'Sometimes, again, there is a genuine reproduction of Christian principles of conduct, without any tormal recognition of the Christian Church, as in the extraordinary growth of the co-operative system in Great Britain when, further, we turn to the more radical expressions of Social discontent, the as opposite as the graves of Scott and comes even less friendly.'

Means The End of The Army

If Attempt is made to use it Against Ulstermen, Says Lord Roberts.

London, July 6.—The House of Lords passed the Amending Bill to the Home Rule law on its second reading tonight by a vote of 273 to 10. This action was expected, as it was announced by the Opposition a few days ago that the passage of the Amending Bill on its cond reading would not be opposed because the Government had promised to consider some amendments to the ment of Ulster during the period for which it is to be excluded from the operations of the Home Rule law and the kind of government which would follow his period. Several Unionists made speeches before the passage of the bill. Lord Milner advocated a referendum on Home Rule or a general election to ascertaln the wishes of the people. He said, among other things:

'The coercion of Ulster is a horrible idea. The British Empire will not for

Lord Roberts' Warning

Field Marshall Lord Roberts expressed what he termed 'the deepest anxiety in regard to the effect the crisis in Ireland is bound to have on the army unless a peaceful solution of the present trouble is found.' He urged the necessity of excluding part of Ireland from the workings of the Home Rule measure, or otherwise, he declared, the enforcement of the law was certain to meet with armed resistance. He continued: 'It is that contingency of a revolt against the threatened imposition of a Home Rule Government upon Ulster, followed by an attempt to use the army to enforce it. that fills me with dismay. I am more certain than ever that such a sequence of events would maan the utter destruction of the army. In plain language the position is this: The army has for the first time in the memory of anyone living indicated an certain stated circumstances.' Lord Roberts scoffed at the idea that the army was in a political con-spiracy with the Unionists, and said: 'We are faced with a clash on principles, which raises the subject far beyond the realms of ordinary poliunwillingness to obey an order under

The Field Marshall pointed out that discipline was an artificial bond, and said: 'If you penetrate deep enough the depths of human nature you will unfailingly reach in each of us a stratum which is impervious to discipline or any influence from without. This is conscience, an innate sense of right or wrong, which neither reason nor man-made laws can effect. The nor man-made laws can effect. The army refuses to shoot men whose only erime is their unconquerable determination to resist their forcible exclusion from a community which they respect and trust.'

give careful attention to amendments the death penalty was the murder of nish Shopkeepers with newspaper rantee Ireland and this country against bank. the emergency of civil conflict?

To this there was no reply. The official amendments handed in by the Opposition make the exclusion of Ulster absolute. They transfer that province to the jurisdiction of a Secretary of State, who will sit in the Imperial Parliament. He will only have Amending Bill in regard to the govern the power to deal with the administration of the province by order-in-Council, which will require the sanction of the British Parliament.

Cat Mothers Chickens

A cat may seem the last creature on earth that would mother a broad of unfortunate chicks, but recently a cat in Massachusetts adopted a brood of thirty downy chicks as a substitute for a litter of kittens that were taken way from her. This cat; uncatlike as it may seem, lets the chicks snuggle in her fur, washes them as though they were kittens and protects them from other cats.

Care of Paint Brushes

When laying aside paint-brushes, he usual custom is to place them in water and then forget all about them until needed again, with the result that the water usually is found more or less evaporated and the brushes hardened. If a quantity of oil is poured on the water, it will prevent this evaporation and keep the brushes in good shape.

More Steel Steamers

We learn from reliable authority to day, that there is going to be an increase in the number of the steel sealing steamers to prosecute the voyage next spring. Messrs. Murray & Crawford, for whom Messrs. Baine Johnstone & Co. are agents in this country are, we understand, to have two new steamers, to be about the size of the Adventure. The keels of these two boats are to be laid in a few days so we learn, and the work of construction will be pushed ahead, so as to have them ready to launch by the close of the year. The boats will be built as strongly as possible, to properly fit them for their work.—Trade Review.
