RUSHING THROUGH EDUCATION BILL

Bannerman to Bring the Closures Into Play.

EXPECTED BATTLE WITH LORDS

Now Upper House May Dodge the Issue—Mr. Birrell Made Some Concessions.

London, June 18.—The prospects of the education bill improved materially last week. For one thing, the Government has decided to fix a time limit, and on Monday a closure resolution will be introduced whereby the bill will be ready to go to the House of Lords during the third week of July, three weeks before the usual close of the session.

It adds a touch of excitement to the progress of the bill to know that the House of Lords may be expected. The rejection of the bill would mean a controversy that would sterilize the probable autumn session, but less important politicians remember that the bill is a safe ground for an appeal by the Lords to the vested interests of conservatism.

The education bill was also advanced by an undertaking given by Mr. Birrell. Clauses three and four provide for facilities for religious teaching in denominational schools taken over by the local authorities, but it appeared that it only needed a refusal to take over to make these clauses a dead letter. Mr. Birrell has promised to make provision for an appeal to the board of education in all cases of refusal to take over, adding an appeal in case of a refusal by any denomination to transfer. Thus we have had the "transfer" of those persons who called "transfer" asking for a guarantee that transfer shall take place.

Mr. Birrell's concession already has caused the Irish members to cease voting against the clause. There is a belief that the control of our national art collections is at last nearer to a change. The appointment of Mr. Maccoll to be keeper of the Tate Gallery is in its way a sensation, for he led the attack on the purchase system of official control, but it is hard to think that he would have taken the post unless he had known of a better control to come, possibly even of the creation of a fine arts department.

Mr. David Hogarth, who went out five years ago by the British Museum to Ephesus to make further excavations of the great temple of Diana, is back in England and will soon publish the results of his labors. The former excavations were inadequate. He has gone deeper and found at least two more primitive cults of Artemis. He is doing Ephesus what has been done for Crete.

DON'T SELL, SAYS CITY SOLICITOR

Advises Against Disposing of a Part of the Park Avenue Boulevard.

City Solicitor Meredith has sent a communication to the council, which practically settles the matter of selling a part of the boulevard on the west side of Park avenue, between Princess and Central avenues, to John Christie and others.

Mr. Meredith is against the city establishing a precedent for the sale of any portion of wide streets. He points out that if the street is narrowed, property owners to the south may have a claim for damages against the city, as the view to the north would be shut off.

Then, again, if a precedent is established, the council may expect to have people in all parts of the city looking to buy boulevards, and the council cannot very well make fish of one and flesh of the other.

The city must remember, Mr. Meredith points out, that while it may have the power to sell, it has not the power to compel everybody to buy, and the result of a sale of any one boulevard can only result in a street being maintained in unequal widths.

On the whole, he considers it inadvisable to sell any part of the boulevard of any street in the city.

SYSONBY IS DEAD.

New York, June 18.—Sysonby, considered by race-horse men to be the greatest thoroughbred ever uncovered in this country, is dead.

Mr. Keene repeatedly told his friends tonight that he would not have part with Sysonby for any money consideration. He had many offers, the last being that of Reed-Walker, the wealthy English horseman, whose trainer offered 40,000 guineas (over $200,000) for Sysonby last winter. He was insured for $100,000.

Sysonby was the son of the great English sire, Melton. The latter was bred to Optimo, a brood mare by Orme. Mr. Keene bought the mare when she was in foal and brought her to this country, and placed her on his Castleton stud, near Lexington, Ky.

ANARCHY SPREADS IN CZAR'S EMPIRE

Robbery, Murder and Pillage on All Sides.

DOUMA WITH REVOLUTIONISTS

Even the Conservative Constitutional Democrats Now Leaning Toward Armed Revolt.

St. Petersburg, June 18.—The Constitutional Democrats seem almost ready to throw in their lot with the revolutionists. The popular agitation is so great that a caucus lasting three mornings the question of changing the party's tactics and abandoning any further attempt to postpone an open rupture with the Government was seriously debated.

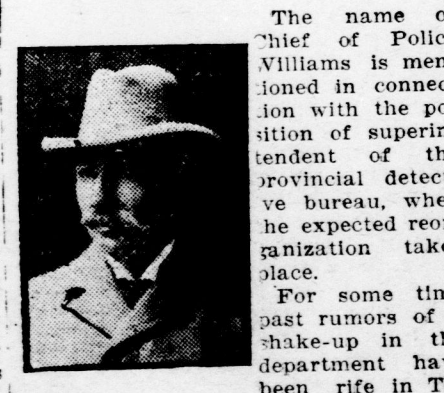

MM. Reditcheff and Naboukoff, leaders of the Constitutional Democrats in the Lower House, led the radical wing, urging the absolute necessity of keeping pace with the revolutionist movement, and insisting that unless they moved forward to battle immediately, they would be overwhelmed and left stranded. Prof. Mitukoff, M. Vinaver and others counseled action, saying it was not yet time to bend to the storm, but the radicals were in the majority. The Novoe Vremya today says that the Constitutional Democrats have actually resolved to break with the Government within a few days, but M. Struve, editor of the Obyedyneniye, informed the Associated Press that no decision had been taken. He admitted, however, that the leaders' plans were secret. Many of the Liberals fear a rupture, and regard the contemplated step as a grave error, claiming that the Constitutional Democrats cannot hope to keep step with the advanced radicals.

The radicals at a meeting held in the suburbs of St. Petersburg last night not only condemned the Lower House of Parliament, and characterized the Constitutional Democrats as traitors, but even denounced the Group of Toli. M. Alladin was hissed because he tried to explain the absurdity of the contention that the House must demand that the Emperor summon a constitutional assembly. The meeting refused to listen to his statement that the Government could not be asked to sign its own death warrant. Constituent assemblies, he said, were constituted, and not summoned by the Government. The orators at the meetings glorified the coming dictatorship of the proletariat, and cheered the cries of "Down with the Government!"

LONDON'S CHIEF FOR A BIG JOB

Name Mentioned in Connection With Superintendency of Provincial Bureau.

Chief of Police Williams is mentioned in connection with the position of superintendency of the provincial detective bureau, when he expected resignation takes place.

For some time past rumors of a shake-up in the department have been rife in London. The name of London's chief is prominently mentioned in connection with the position of superintendency of the provincial detective bureau, when he expected resignation takes place.

Chief Williams was appointed in 1877 and has been at the head of the local police force ever since. As a disciplinarian he has few equals, and under him the force has been a terror to evildoers. Crooks who have landed in London with the intention of going after easy pickings have invariably been landed behind the bars, until today the fame of the department has such an influence on the gentry that they give the city a wide berth. Even at race meets and fair time, crooks do not pitch their tents in London. Chief Williams is undoubtedly well fitted for the position the Government may choose to offer him.

COLLISION OFF LEXINGTON.

Sarnia, Ont., June 18.—The steamer Saturn bound down collided with the Canadian schooner Ontario, off Lexington, Mich., on Sunday, during a heavy fog. The Ontario lost her bowsprit and jibboom and some planking forward. The damage to the Saturn was light. The Ontario was towed to Port Huron by the Saturn for repairs.

SHE FELL ON HIS NECK.

New York, June 18.—James Condem, 25 years of age, of Summit, N. J., died yesterday in All Souls' Hospital, at Morris town from a broken neck, after three weeks of treatment in which every recourse of modern surgery was exhausted.

Condem called on a young woman in Summit three weeks ago yesterday. The young woman, who weighs upward of 250 pounds, was dressing, and he sat down on the stairs in the hallway to wait.

The young woman tripped near the top and fell squarely on Condem, who was picked up unconscious and taken to his home, where physicians found his neck had been broken.

It was decided last Friday to take him to the hospital for an operation. Saturday it was discovered that his spinal cord had been injured and the surgeons were unable to save his life. The young woman is prostrated from grief.

WINDSOR HAS NASTY EARLY MORNING BLAZE

Fire in the Curry Building Does Damage to Extent of $1,000.

Windsor, June 18.—Fire broke out in the hallway of the Curry block, Ouellette avenue, about 8 o'clock this morning, doing over $1,000 damage to the building.

These occupants suffered considerable loss, mostly by water: J. A. Diebel, drygoods; Bradley Bros., jewelers; Meadows & Walker, confectioners; Wm. Harvey, tailor; Abel Ashley, jeweler; G. English & Co., tobacconists. Losses covered by insurance. Cause of fire unknown.

AN AEROBATIC AUTO

Runs Away With Occupants and Somersaults Them to Safety.

Chicago, June 18.—A runaway automobile, containing J. B. Lovett, of Racine, Wis., and his three daughters, yesterday dashed backward down one of the hills north of Glenview, crashed through the guard rails of a rustic bridge, and fell twenty feet to the bottom of a ravine. As the machine plunged off the bridge it turned over, throwing the terrified occupants to the ground, while the momentum of its great weight caused it to shoot over a fence and into a ditch. This undoubtedly saved their lives, but their escape with only slight bruises and cuts was remarkable.

THE RIGHT TO REGULATE

Express Companies Say Parliament Cannot Control Rates.

[Special to The Advertiser.] Ottawa, June 18.—The special committee on railway legislation took up Mr. Alcorn's bill this morning. It proposes to place the control of express rates under the railway commission. Mr. C. H. Chrysler, of Ottawa, representing the Dominion Express Company, and the Canadian Express Company, contended that the Dominion Parliament had no jurisdiction to deal with the matter as proposed by the bill. The British North America act gave Parliament power to regulate the work or undertaking of a company, but not a company itself. The right to incorporate did not necessarily carry with it the right to regulate. Mr. Alcorn's bill undertook to regulate the business of the express companies, and not their works or undertakings.

SBARRETTI OFFICIATED

Carried the Host in Corpus Christi Procession at Montreal.

Montreal, June 18.—Monsieur Sbarretti, papal delegate, carried the host yesterday in the annual Fete Dieu procession, which was one of the most imposing spectacles of religious fervor ever seen in Montreal. Thousands joined in the procession, and among them very many well-known citizens.

The Fete Dieu procession is the most pretentious of many religious festivals in the Province of Quebec, and as the weather was favorable the occasion was doubly noteworthy. All along the route flags, banners and evergreens were displayed in much profusion. Great crowds turned out, and as Monsieur Sbarretti passed along, bearing the host, it was an impressive sight to see the ranks of onlookers broken by the faithful as they knelt in the street out of reverence for the sacred emblem.

OKLAHOMA STATE NOW

President Signs Measure Adding Territory to the Union.

Washington, D. C., June 18.—Another star was added to the Union on Saturday, when President Roosevelt signed the bill admitting Oklahoma and the Indian Territory as one State. The measure also provides that Arizona and New Mexico may be admitted to statehood as the State of Arizona, provided the people of the territories vote in favor of the admission on the terms submitted by Congress. The President signed the bill with two pens. He wrote the word "Theodore" with a gold pen provided by citizens of Arizona, and the word "Roosevelt" with a pen made from an eagle's quill, handed to him by a member of the Oklahoma delegation. Mr. Roosevelt congratulated the people on the outcome of the statehood legislation, and there was hand-shaking all around.

JAPANESE ROUT KOREAN REBELS

Carry a Fortified City in Dashing Fashion.

LAY A FULL SIEGE TO IT

The Action Taken Without Consulting Korea, Thus Establishing Suzerainty.

Victoria, B. C., June 18.—The steamer Tartar, which arrived yesterday from Japan, brought further advice of the insurrection in Korea. At Hongju, a force of Japanese with artillery blew up the city gate and rushed into the city. Five hundred rebels occupying the place were defeated, and Mingyong, the leader, was killed, with many others.

The Japanese took advantage of the failure of the Korean troops to cope with the insurrection to strengthen their political position in Korea. Japanese papers urged a resident general to Korea regarding the outbreak, but to dispatch troops without consideration of the Korean Government.

This was done, and two companies of infantry, with some cavalry and artillery, left Seoul on May 27. They arrived at Hongju three days later, being delayed a day by heavy downpours of rain and flooded rivers and reinforced the two companies which were already outside the wall. Nearby villages were occupied and Hongju thoroughly invested before the attack on the city commenced with a bombardment. The insurgents replying with a rifle fire from the walls. The Koreans, who were armed with matchlocks, rushed the city with shouts of "Ban-zai!"

The defeat of the rebels was complete. A number secured and made their way south to join the rebel force, which was much stronger at Kangkyong, where the Japanese settlement had been looted and a number of Japanese killed.

The rebellion was widespread, affecting several provinces and sporadic outbreaks were reported both north and south. On the Yalu the Japanese timber companies had been attacked, and driven away by Koreans with rifles, and the rafts that were floating down the river for the military were destroyed. Two gendarmes fell in with forty rebels at Pukkok, while the rebels were eating, and notwithstanding the immense odds, the gendarmes opened fire, and the rebels, armed with matchlocks, returned the fire, but could not cope with the two gendarmes lying behind rocks with magazine rifles. The rebels finally fled, leaving eleven matchlocks for the doughty gendarmes.

THE TORONTO CONFERENCE

Temperance Committee Would Have Hotelmen Licensed for Tobacco.

Toronto, Ont., June 18.—The report of the temperance committee was presented at the meeting of the Toronto Methodist Conference this morning. One clause in it, to the effect that liquor license holders should be required also to take out licenses for sale of cigars, tobacco and cigarettes, evoked considerable discussion, and was finally referred back. It was argued that the fine, and that it was hardly fair to class grocers with liquor dealers. There was some discussion regarding salaries paid missionaries, but nothing was done.

ONE HUNDRED KILLED.

Vladivostok, June 17.—A passenger train was derailed at Progranitschna station on the Chinese Eastern Railway today, and 100 persons were killed or injured.

INTERNATIONAL PHASE TO KIDNAPPING CASE

Colorado Refused to Deliver Two Montreal Girls to Their Father.

Boston, June 18.—An international phase has developed in the case of the Sully children, of Malden, who were taken to Denver by their aunt, Mrs. Bella Fenwick.

Through the efforts of Sir Mortimer Durand, British ambassador at Washington, and Capt. W. W. Wyndham, British consul here, papers have been obtained from the British Government calling for the arrest of Mrs. Fenwick on the charge of having kidnapped Kelta Sully from Malden on Feb. 14, and Mabel Sully from Montreal, Que., last year. When it was found that Mrs. Fenwick was keeping a lodging-house in Denver, Gov. Gould issued requisition papers, and an inspector and John H. Sully, a traveling salesman, and father of the children, went to Denver to bring them back. Gov. McDonald of Colorado refused to honor the Massachusetts papers. The only remaining course for the father was to appeal to the British Government, of which he is a subject. Massachusetts gets officials received word yesterday that the United States officers will be given the papers and ordered to serve them on Mrs. Fenwick in Denver. If the service is successful, Mrs. Fenwick and two children will be taken to Montreal.

BATTLESHIPS COLLIDE; THE RAMILIES INJURED

Big British Fighting Machines in Trouble During Maneuvers.

London, June 18.—The British battleship Ramilies was assisted back to Sheerness today, having been in collision in the channel with the battleship Resolution. The latter was not damaged, but the former must be docked for necessary repairs, principally to her propeller. So far as known the Ramilies is the only big ship crippled by collision during the week's maneuvers. Two of the torpedo craft have been in collision or aground and some machinery defects have developed, but very few compared with former maneuvers.

SLASHES WOMAN'S HEAD TO GET HER EAR RINGS

Bold Attack by Brigand in Street Nearly Ends in Lynching.

New York, June 18.—The attempt of an Italian brigand to rob a woman of a pair of diamond earrings nearly cost two lives early today. The would-be robber's victim was terribly cut about the face and head by a knife with which the thief attempted to cut out the jewels from the woman's ears, and scarcely five minutes later the robber himself and a policeman who had arrested him were fighting for his life against a crowd of hundreds of Hibernians, who sought to avenge the assault. The robber was kicked and stoned and repeatedly knocked down before the policeman succeeded in safely landing him in jail.

BIG GALE IN THE EAST

Sweeps Coasts of Newfoundland and Places Shipping in Peril.

St. Johns, Nfld., June 18.—A furious gale has been raging along the Newfoundland coast during the past forty-eight hours, causing serious damage to shipping. Two vessels with fourteen men on board have been blown out to sea. Tugs have been sent in quest of them. Several vessels have been driven ashore. An enormous amount of fishing gear has been destroyed. It is feared the gale has wrought havoc among the traveling fleet off the Grand Banks. News from the fleet cannot be received until next week.

INTO EVANGELICAL SYNOD

Reception of the Newly-Formed London Church Is Agreed To.

At the second day's proceedings of the New York district conference, in session at St. Paul's Evangelical Church, Neustadt, Ont., the report of the home mission board was made by Rev. C. G. Haas, pastor of St. Paul's. Rev. C. G. Haas, pastor of St. Paul's, United Evangelical Church, Buffalo, N. Y., St. Paul's United Evangelical Church, London, Ont., was organized July 9, 1905, by Rev. F. W. A. Elernmann. The mission board reported concerning this newest field in most enthusiastic manner.

The committee which examined the application of St. Paul's United Evangelical Church, in this city, reported favorably, through its chairman, Rev. A. G. G. The report was adopted unanimously. All that is necessary now to make the London church a member in good standing is the delivery of the charges by the president to the congregation, which is represented by Mr. G. Pavlitzki, as delegated. In due time a regular service will be held at the church in London by the president or his representative solemnly receiving the church into the synod.

STRUCK A MINE.

Tokio, June 18.—The Japanese transport Toyotomi struck a mine on Thursday evening when 24 miles off Joshin, Korea, and sank immediately. Fifty of her crew are missing.

WINDSOR FIRED.

Detroit, June 18.—The announcement that Windsor had taken the blue ribbon date for its harness meeting came as a surprise to the managers of the Michigan Short Saddle Circuit, to which the Windsor Club belongs, and at a hastily called meeting of the circuit managers at Bay City yesterday, Windsor was "fired" out of the circuit, and its place was given to Caro, Mich.

City Wants Kettle Creek Bridge Put in Good Repair

One Abutment Is Bad—Expert To Be Employed by L. and P. S. R. Board.

The London and Port Stanley Railway board met on Saturday evening, and after discussing the safety of the bridges for about two hours, decided to notify the lessees, the Lake Erie and Detroit River Railway Company, to repair the north abutment of the Kettle Creek bridge at once.

The lessees will also be notified to warn those to whom the line has been sublet to not run cars or locomotives over the bridges of a greater weight than the strain sheets of the structures show they will stand.

Superintendent Moore, of the water-works, was empowered to engage Mr. Conner, a bridge expert, of Toronto, to go over the bridges, and make an extended report to the board on the safety of the line for passenger and freight traffic.

Safe for Light Business.

From the report made to the board on Saturday night by Engineer Moore, it appears that if the abutment of the Kettle Creek bridge is put in repair, the structure will be strong enough to carry the weights which they were built to carry nearly thirty years ago, but they are not capable, according to the strain sheet made up from the original plans, of carrying the heavy rolling stock of today.

A car weighing 40 tons may pass in safety over the bridges at the Thames and Kettle Creek, but not long ago the Michigan Central hauled a carload of brick over the line, the way bill of which is in the possession of the city, and which showed that the loaded car weighed about 70 tons.

The brick was for street crossings, and was consigned to the city, so the board has absolute proof on this point.

Employ an Expert.

Ald. Gillean strove hard to have the expert appointed. He was backed up by City Solicitor Meredith and the mayor.

ENA SUFFERS NERVOUS COLLAPSE

Dreadful Scenes Following Bomb Throwing Make the Young Queen Ill.

London, June 18.—According to news given out by a member of the royal family the Queen of Spain is in a state of complete nervous breakdown. Immediately after the bomb-throwing, on her return to the palace, she had an attack of hysterics, which apparently relieved her.

After that the young Queen braced up wonderfully and met all the strain of the following week with courage. She looked so animated that it was hoped she had gotten over the shock of the terrible sights which met her eyes when she issued from the wrecked coach and stepped into pools of blood.

But the moment the strain of constant entertainment and attending the thousand and one functions of the wedding festivities was removed she gave way completely to nervous prostration, and little wonder.

That is the reason why, although it is against the absurd etiquette of the Spanish court, the youthful royal couple have gone to the palace of Hildesheim, on the slopes of the Guadarrama. According to a letter sent to a friend, as soon as he is able the King of Spain proposes to embark on his new yacht, the Victoria, and make a long cruise.

One of the first points at which he will stop will be Cowes, and that is timed for the period of the famous Cowes week.

COBALT FIRE THREATENED

But New Fire Engine Performed Wonders—Another Rich Strike.

Cobalt, June 18.—Another of the strikingly rich finds that make Cobalt famous was made today at the McKinley & Darragh Mine, now owned by Chapin & Co.

E. C. Kingsford reports a discovery there of an 18-inch vein of argenteite. This means practically 30 per cent silver. Like other veins of this property, this argenteite find runs right down into the lake.

The new Waterous fire engine paid for itself Friday. A forest fire started outside the town about half a mile. High winds were prevailing and the fire soon reached the outskirts. On the hill to the west of the town the firefighters met and conquered the flames. With 1,000 feet of hose running up the hill all the way to the height of 60 feet, with a 1-inch nozzle, a strong stream of water was thrown 100 feet. The town is now surrounded by clearings, and the summer's danger of fire from the outside is practically wiped out.

ACTOR LYONS DEAD.

New York, N. Y., June 18.—Edmund Lyons, a veteran of the stage and a noted representative of the old school of acting, died in the New York Hospital after a brief illness. He was 61 years of age. Mr. Lyons' best character acting of recent years was as Nero in "Quo Vadis."

FARE REDUCTION AMOUNTS TO CENT

Springbank Agreement Does Not Mean Much for the Public After All.

The agreement made by the water commissioners with the London Street Railway Company doesn't appear to the majority of citizens as a very good one for the public.

People are beginning to figure out just what the reduction in fares means, and they find that it amounts to about a cent off the increased fare put into force by the company the 1st of May.

Under the increased fare the people were compelled to pay something under twelve cents for a return ride to Springbank. Now they pay a little less than eleven cents for the trip.

But they are now to be taxed a higher price for theater seats than formerly, and the theater is to be covered.

The company has also secured rights in regard to the placing of amusements down the river for which the commissioners might have secured thousands of dollars.

Had former commissioners cared to do so they might have had a percentage on all such amusements as the company has now the right to install for its own benefit. But commissions of the past steadfastly refused to turn the park into a midway.

Around the city hall Manager King, of the street railway, is regarded as a very shrewd man. He cut about a cent off the Springbank fare and secured concessions from the city which mean thousands of dollars annually to the company.

CASTRO GOES BACK

Will Resume the Presidency of Venezuela on July 5.

Washington, June 18.—President Castro will resume the presidency of Venezuela July 5.

The state department today received a dispatch by way of Willemstad announcing that on June 11 President Castro declared his intention to Vice-President Gomez and a delegation that visited him at La Victoria and requested him to resume the presidency.

DEAF MUTES CONVENE.

Bellevue, Ont., June 18.—Two hundred members of the Ontario Deaf Mutes Association are now in session at the institution in this city. This is the tenth biennial convention of the association. A pleasing feature on Saturday night was the presentation of an address and gold-headed cane to Mr. R. Mathieson, honorary president of the association, and principal of the institution, and an address and gold watch to Mr. Wm. Morse, secretary of the association. Religious services in the sign language were held yesterday.

STUCK IN HIS THROAT.

Kington, June 17.—John Kane, a sailor, about 60 years of age, was choked to death in Walker's restaurant, Princess street, on Saturday evening. A piece of meat got stuck in his throat, and before medical assistance could be summoned he was dead.

INFLUENCE AND NEEDS OF QUEEN'S PRESENTED BY PRINCIPAL GORDON

Powerful Appeal to Presbyterians for Co-operation in Institution's Work.

With London Presbyterians yesterday was Queen's University Day, services being given over to addresses on the influence and needs of the university by Principal Gordon, Dr. Dyde and the Rev. Robert Laird, financial agent of the Queen's endowment fund. Principal Gordon's address, delivered in the First Presbyterian Church, was especially powerful and telling.

Taking as his text Proverbs 4th, chapter and 7th verse, "He went on to make a strong plea for education, and the attainment of knowledge. He brought out among others the following points:

All the books of the Bible, and all the writings of the best writers, address the acquisition of learning. The Bible tells that it is more to be sought after than riches. It would seem as if money is the most to be sought of all things, and yet it does not take many words to show that material wealth does not amount to anything compared with knowledge. Outward possessions fail to satisfy the longings of the soul of man make in the image of God. A man's life consists in the abundance of what he possesses but in the abundance of what and the newspapers has a great deal of to do in molding the thoughts of the country.

Dr. Gordon then gave a brief history of Queen's University, and went on to point out that the work of Queen's University is as much a national as a church work. A great many of the students who attend Queen's are not Presbyterians. Men for many different walks in life are being educated there. The church is corporate with Queen's University, therefore the church must support the university. Half a million dollars is needed to meet the requirements caused by the increasing membership, which the last twelve years has more than doubled. The staff will need to be increased and a great many improvements made for the accommodation of the ever increasing number of students.

The Queen's University has two claims for support, first, on the church ground, and second, on the national ground. Queen's is a most powerful agency in the hands of the Presbyterian Church for affecting the young life of our country. In fact it is the most powerful tool the church has got. Then from the national standpoint we find that about one-third of the school inspectors of Ontario are graduates of Queen's University, and between one-third and one-fourth of our high schools are helped build up their country. On the walls of Queen's convocation hall are brass tablets recording the devotion and sacrifice of it may be 100 or 500 or 5,000 benefactors who did what they could to support the college. No institution worthy to be perpetuated is built of stone and mortar, but of human lives. It is fitting that we should do our share in order that the young men and women of Canada may grow up to be an intelligent and God-fearing people, and that our young nation may take an honorable part at the council board of the nations of the earth.

Queen's Claims.

Yesterday morning Rev. Robert Laird, financial agent of Queen's endowment fund, preached in St. Andrew's Church and presented the claims of the university to the congregation. He pointed out the vital importance of the union of educational and religious forces in the making of the nation, and outlined the grounds on which the church was undertaking this movement in connection with Queen's. She had always been very closely connected with the Presbyterian Church, but during the latter years of her history had become so national in spirit and work that a movement was set on foot to make her quite independent of the church. But it was not an easy thing to separate institutions that had grown up in such vital union, and a strong conviction asserted itself that the church would lose in real power for serving the nation if she surrendered her interest in Queen's. After careful deliberation, the trustees agreed to the earnest request of the church, and a large committee was appointed by the General Assembly to secure an additional endowment of $500,000. The report of that Queen's is doing. She occupies a large and growing place in the academic and professional life of the country. In addition to the large number of clergy-men, doctors, engineers, lawyers, journalists, commercial men, and others trained here, one-third of the public school inspectors and nearly one-fourth of the high school teachers of Ontario are among her graduates. Queen's has done more than any other Canadian university to assist by extramural courses those who could not personally attend classes, and is endeavoring to aid the rural schools by summer courses intended specially for teachers. The university is accommodated in seven handsome buildings, which form an imposing quadrangle. They are the old arts buildings, now the theological hall, including also the library and convocation hall, the medical building, the Carruthers science hall, the Kingston arts building, the Ontario building erected by the Ontario Government for physics, mineralogy and geology; Fleming hall for engineering, and Grant hall, the new convocation hall erected last year by a memorial to their late loved and revered principal. Besides these there are two smaller buildings used for mechanical and mining laboratories and a group of residences for professors.

Altogether Queen's is splendidly furnished with buildings, students and teachers for doing high service. The fine old city of Kingston forms an ideal seat for a university. Living is not so expensive as in the larger centers of population, and in a greater degree than any other Queen's may be called the university of the people, for the fees are moderate, and the poor man's son is not debarred from a university training by high fees or heavy bills. Indeed, a student can, through a season in arts comfortably for $150 and in science for less than $200.

The Revenue.

The revenue of the university is derived from endowment, which has been continued at different times, class fees, and from congregational contributions which are devoted to the theological department. None of the university revenue is expended on the schools of mining or of medicine. The endowment amounted to nearly $200,000 in the year last year, including $21,000 in fees, amounted to $57,675. There is no class fee in the theological department.

But expansion is the order of the day, and to strengthen her teaching and to satisfy the demands of modern education, the endowments must be immediately and generously increased.

It is the aim of Queen's to be a well-equipped, liberal, progressive and distinctly Christian university, free from the spirit of sectarianism, and seeking to cultivate and unite what is best in all departments of knowledge and inquiry.

No money given for higher education has ever been administered more economically or effectively than that bestowed upon Queen's by its benefactors.

No Canadian University provides an education at smaller financial outlay than Queen's, and no city affords better conditions for student life than Kingston.

No more powerful educational agency can be used for influencing the young life of the country than this institution.

So, not only to the Presbyterian Church that has conceived a new love for the university that she called into life, but all the graduates of Queen's and all friends of higher education, an appeal is made for generous gifts.

THE CHURCHES.

The Presbyterian Council holds a meeting in the First Presbyterian Church at 8 o'clock this evening.

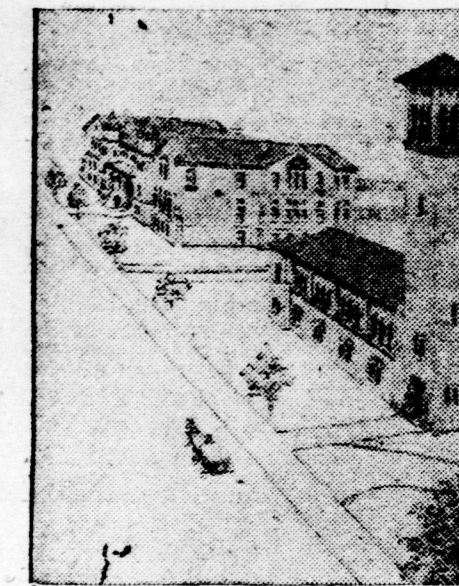

The Sunday school of St. James' Church, South London, will hold its picnic on July 5 to Port Stanley.

"Observance of the Lord's Day" was the topic dealt with by the preachers in local Anglican churches yesterday morning.

Memorial services for the late Mr. Thomas McCormick will be held in the

he is. A man should store up treasures which he can take with him wherever he goes. If a man gets wisdom it becomes so knit into his being that it endures.

God's Thought.

We should get wisdom because it brings us in touch with God. Matter always has upon it the stamp of reason. God's thought is written upon it because of the reason and thought within us we can read God's workings in nature. A great astronomer once said that in studying the heavens he was thinking God's thoughts after him. The buildings we see in a city are not merely stone and lime, they are the result of the thoughts of the architects who designed them and the ideas of the possessors. And so with nature; it reveals to us through our understanding, the thoughts, purpose and wisdom of God.

The same in history. If we could but see it, all history reveals God to us. When he counsels us to acquire wisdom, it is because he wishes us to get in touch with him through all nature around us.

Wisdom implies character and conduct as well as to get into touch with God—thinking God's thoughts after him. By copying the actions and thoughts of another we get into the closest possible touch and fellowship with that person.

Aims of Queen's.

Speaking of Queen's University the preacher pointed out that the foregoing thoughts are as nearly as possible the aim of Queen's. What applies to the individual applies to the church. Those who were present at the recent meeting of the General Assembly, and heard the reports from the different branches of the work, got some idea of the widespread and varied fields over which the duties of the church extend. Among other fields of the work was the educational, and Queen's University is of special interest to the Presbyterian Church.

Few people really realize the value of universities, as the bulk of the people only receive a public school education, while a few attend high schools, and a very small proportion attend university. But the university has a far greater direct influence on the community at large than is often imagined. First, we have our high school teachers educated in the universities; they go to teach our public school teachers, and our public school teachers have the instruction of the children, and in this way the university has a tremendous power in the education of our land. Then, besides the teachers, a great many in all branches of life are receiving university education, the majority of the newspaper men at the present time are receiving university education, school teachers are graduates of Queen's. It is impossible to center all the education in one place. We find that the histories of both Scotland and Germany show the tremendous advantage of having educational centers at different places throughout the country instead of having all the education at one center. It has been said that if the nineteenth century belonged to the United States, the twentieth century belongs to Canada. The same development which has taken place in Canada, if we have great natural riches and wealth, we must have intellectual, spiritual and moral development in order to have the strength to carry rightfully the increased riches and responsibility placed upon us. The only way to obtain this intellectual, spiritual and moral development is through an educational system, from the kindergarten upwards.

Dr. Dyde's Address.

In Knox Church yesterday morning, Dr. Dyde, of Queen's University, preached on "Education and Life." After some explanatory remarks, he noticed two lines in particular in which education of the right kind enriches life. 1. It gives us a knowledge of the world we live in. Science was simply careful observation, and by means of science we come to know the world. Nature is a varied revelation of the mind of its author. "The flower in the crannied wall," says Tennyson, "tells us of God and man"; the world of nature, says Goethe, is the visible garment of God, and Holy Writ informs us that the heavens declare the glory of God and earth sheweth forth his handiwork. There is no antagonism between science and theology; all the "ologies" (which should be called "logics") not "logistics" lead up to the crowning "logic" or clear thought of God, that is, "theology." In Queen's University this position was accorded theology amongst the sciences, to the great advantage of both "arts" and "science." Theology becoming more thorough and arts more practical. 2. Education gives a knowledge of human life. The past with its great thoughts, is not dead, but alive, and we should saturate our minds with its ideals. Their history, and in that way established themselves on the earth, as more powerful nations had failed to do. They knew what their fathers had achieved, and were determined not to fail behind. Each new became a giant in strength, because he had Abraham, Isaac, Jacob and Moses behind him. All these illustrious names were on his family tree. We, too, have a noble past. The English have no mean record, proving by their past that prosperity is consistent with godliness, and the Scotch have made their mark in history by their zeal for knowledge; a school in every parish and a college in every considerable city was their ideal. Our fathers in our own land, when clearing the farm and building the house, did not forget the church and school, determined to give their children a good start in life. We in turn dare not sell our heritage for material goods. We must build our path in the long fence of truth, and make it possible for our children to call us blessed. Our colleges have had their share of devoted men. Sir William Dawson, of Montreal; Sir Andrew Wilson, of Toronto, and such men as Prof. Mackenzie and Principal Grant, of Queen's, who gave their lives for the institutions committee at the meeting of the assembly in this city last week showed that of this amount $237,000 had been subscribed. A large part of Western Ontario has as yet been untouched. Interest in Queen's is growing here, for last year 200 of her students were from that section of Ontario which lies west of Toronto. It is confidently hoped that the people of London will make a generous response to the needs of an institution that is doing work of such high quality and widespread influence as Queen's.

A Sketch of Queen's.

While her development was slow at first she has lately advanced by leaps and bounds. The university was established by royal charter in 1827, but it is a far cry from the little frame building, where Rev. Dr. Liddell, in 1842, taught ten students to the present magnificent structures where 1,042 students were registered last session and guided by a staff of nearly 80 professors and instructors. These teachers have brought distinction to the university by their talents, their unswerving loyalty and their steadfast aim to develop character as well as intellect. The students and graduates have always had a singular attachment to their Alma Mater, and their rapid increase of late makes it conspicuously plain that the people of Canada appreciate the work that Queen's is doing for higher education. The men who molded the earlier and later years of her history have given to us a broad and national spirit. The church, herself becoming broader and more national in aim, is anxious to maintain her connection with so vital an institution. At the same time she has shown no inclination to narrow the scope of the university's work, has considered it unnecessary to appoint directly to the board of trustees and has sought to continue its non-sectarian spirit by widening the character of the board and giving larger representation to the graduates. This liberal spirit is characteristic of the university. Testimony to it is borne by the fact that more than half the students in attendance belong to other religious denominations than the Presbyterian. Further, the city of Kingston, though the seat of a Roman Catholic archbishop and an Anglican bishop, a few years ago, by general vote to the ratepayers, gave $50,000 to erect a new arts building. This is an instance of municipal interest in a university unparalleled in Canadian history.

But there are other substantial evidences of the public service that

The Epworth League of Askin Street Methodist Church will hold their annual picnic on Thursday. The league of the First Methodist Church are having their outing at Springbank today.

The pastor of Talbot Street Baptist Church, Rev. J. J. Ross, began last evening a series of short sermons on the "Infancy of Jesus." The discourses will be made short to suit the warm summer evenings.

Rev. Hyson Hague, of Memorial Church, made a touching reference yesterday in his morning sermon to the late G. F. Jewell. Mr. Hague gave a brief sketch of Mr. Jewell's career as a Christian worker and a much-esteemed citizen.

Yesterday was "Flower Day" in the First Methodist Church, and flowers were seen everywhere. The church was beautifully decorated, and the beautiful cross of daisies graced the pulpit. Pastor, Rev. J. H. Graham, preached in the morning on "The Message of the Flowers." In the afternoon the regular Sunday school service was varied, the choir of Sunday school pupils under the direction of Mr. Tanner, rendering several numbers.

A BAPTIST VIEW OF CHURCH UNION

Spiritual Life Is the Great Essential—The Churches of Apostolic Days.

In outlining "A Baptist View of Church Union," last evening, Rev. T. T. Shields, pastor of the Adelaide Street Church, took his text from Ephesians, I, 22-23: "And gave him to be head over all things to the church, which is his body, the fullness of him that filleth all in all." Mr. Shields began by referring to the action of the Presbyterian General Assembly in regard to the question of church union, and spoke of the spirit of Christian charity shown by Presbyterian advocates of union—a spirit probably shared by Congregationalists and Methodists. He wished it clearly understood that in what he might say on the subject he was discussing principles—not denominational personalities.

"Baptists," said the preacher, "profess to love truth, and lovers of truth have everything to gain and nothing to lose by the most searching inquiry as to the Scriptural authority for their positions." He hoped therefore that every Baptist would cordially welcome the overtures of the Presbyterian brethren.

Taking the ground that the Bible must be the supreme arbiter in all matters of faith and practice, the preacher dealt with the question, "What is a church?" In one sense, as the term is used in the New Testament, there is only one church—the body of God's elect believers, "the general assembly and church of the first-born, which are written in heaven—the church invisible." It was for this church Christ prayed that all might be one. "It is plainly impossible," said the preacher, "that every living member of the spiritual church of Christ, of all languages and climes, should be included in one great visible organization; and if it was for organic union that Christ prayed, his prayer cannot be answered this side of the millennium."

The word "church" is also used to describe the local assemblies of believers, and a collection of local assemblies are never designated in the New Testament by the singular, "church," but always as "churches." Paul spoke of having "the care of all the churches." There was no great organization, known as one church in apostolic days.

In those days, too, there was a factor not present today—the personal authority of the apostles themselves, a supreme court which settled all disputes. In these days the Roman and Anglican Churches seek to supply this lack by the episcopacy. The Pope assumes the place of Peter, and the Anglican bishop claims the right to exercise apostolic authority. The Methodist Church, too, is episcopalian in practice, if not in name. Presbyterian churches enjoy an ample measure of autonomy, while the polity of the Congregational, Baptist and Disciple Churches is democratic, recognizing the principle that "One is your Master, even Christ, and all ye are brethren."

The Baptists claim to have apostolic authority to direct their affairs, as truly as had the church at Jerusalem. That authority is the canon of the New Testament Scripture.

But only spiritual congregations will yield obedience to Scriptural authority. When spiritual life declines, the church withers. If you do find a way of keeping a congregation together, called a church, when there is no spiritual life, you are only wiring a skeleton or embalming a dead body. All this leads us to insist that whatever the relation of one congregation to another, each church should be composed of regenerate members only. This being the case, it is difficult to see how a congregation making this a cardinal principle could form part of an organization made up of other congregations where this principle does not exist. It would seem that not uniformity, but spiritual unity is the essential thing. That it is written in the constitution of the New Testament church, as being true of every member and every local assembly. "If a man abide not in me, he is cast forth as a branch that is withered, and men gather them, and cast them into the fire, and they are burned." The world has no use, and God has no use, for a church that has a name to live and is dead. When the light goes out the candlestick should be removed.

Mr. Shields will take up this subject again.

At the morning service in Adelaide Street Church yesterday, Miss Bessie Moore sang an alto solo, "But the Lord Is Mindful of His Own," from Mendelssohn's "St. Paul." At the evening service Mr. W. Coleman (bass) sang Liddell's "Abide With Me." Both solos were much appreciated.

YOUNG GREY WEDS.

London, June 18.—Two of England's leading families were united on Saturday afternoon by the marriage at St. Margaret's Church, Westminster, of Viscount Hawick, eldest son of Earl Grey, Governor-General of Canada, to Lady Mabel Palmer, only daughter of the Earl of Selbourn, high commissioner for South Africa.

WESTERN MASONS ELECT.

Winnipeg, June 18.—Grand Lodge, A. F. and A. M., Manitoba and Saskatchewan, concluded their annual communication on Friday night.

The officers elected are: Grand master, John McKechnie, Winnipeg; deputy grand master, James Scroggie, Winnipeg; grand treasurer, H. Webb, Winnipeg; grand secretary, James A. Ovas, Winnipeg; grand chaplain, A. H. Smith, Mooseport; grand chaplain, Rev. J. L. Gordon, Winnipeg; director of ceremonies, R. W. Neil, Stonewall.

The rumors of friction between the brethren in the two Provinces are altogether unfounded. The Masons of Saskatchewan will undoubtedly organize a separate grand lodge for that Province, following the example of Alberta, but in such event they will have the cordial support and assistance of the senior organization in Manitoba. They were well represented at the grand lodge just closed.

THE UNSPEAKABLE TURK
Abuse, Torture, Even Murder of Christians, Continue Unabated.

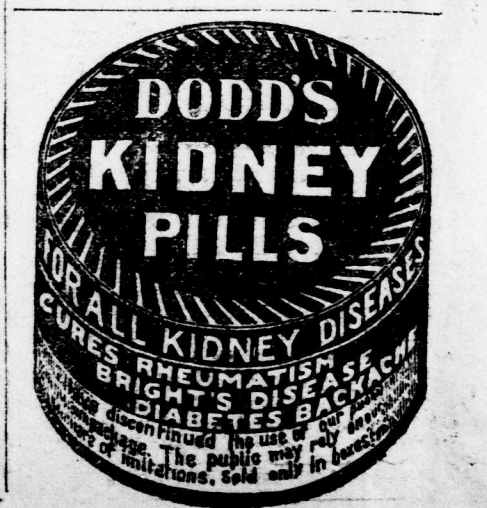

Boston, Mass., June 17.—Conditions in Turkey are described as worse than ever in a letter just received at the Christian Endeavor headquarters here from Rev. Francis E. Clark, president of the United Society of Christian Endeavor. Dr. Clark writes:

"Thirteen years ago I was in Turkey. Things were bad enough then, but they are worse now, more oppressive, reactionary and archaic. If I should tell all I have heard from reliable sources, it would make my readers' blood boil. Cruelties, tortures, secret assassinations of Armenians and other Christians are the horrible facts of the present year and month.

"Our own missions and schools are in a more perilous condition than ever and since our American fleet was withdrawn from Smyrna with only the verbal assurances of the Porte that our schools and churches would have as many privileges as those of other nations, these assurances have been utterly repudiated."

LAUNCH EXPLODES.

Toronto, Ont., June 18.—The gasoline launch Lady Grey, owned by Mr. Larkin, of Parkdale, just built at a cost of $1,000, and one of the prettiest craft of Toronto's motor boat fleet, blew up on the bay opposite the canoe club and was completely destroyed. No lives were lost. It is supposed that the explosion was caused by corroded pipes.

Learn to Use the Want Ads

Through the medium of a want ad. you can buy, sell or exchange any commodity in the world.

The little classified ads. are read and reread by people in all walks of life.

They pave the way for employment of labor and help, and bring together the employer and employee—in fact, they are indispensable to both.

In the business world the want ad. occupies a significant position. It is used in buying and selling commodities of all kinds, and carries a constant market for business opportunities. It is used extensively in all business channels because it brings quick and effective results.

The housewife looks to the want ad. for many of her household necessities. In the want column she secures her help, whether it be a washerwoman or a servant. The want ad. sells pieces of furniture or any dispensable article which may be in demand by some one else.

Thus the want ad. occupies a field which, while distinctively its own, facilitates a rapid, effective and economic transaction of business.

The more you use them the more you will profit.

LONDON, MONDAY, JUNE 18.

SCANDALS PETER OUT.

The session at Ottawa is drawing to an end without the disclosures which the Opposition led its friends to expect.

The so-called Arctic "scandal" has collapsed, and the majority of the Conservative members of the investigating committee have so lost interest in it that they failed to attend the last sitting. Many Liberals, as well as Conservatives, at first thought there might be some excuse for the hue and cry over this affair. The itemized list of supplies for the expedition was rather impressive at first glance, and gave some color to the charges of extravagance and graft. The Government very properly invited a parliamentary inquiry. Numerous witnesses were freely cross-examined by the Opposition members, and the evidence proved beyond cavil that the expedition had been honestly and properly conducted. The Arctic was provisioned for three years to forestall any emergency, and returned from the north with a large proportion of her original supplies. It was shown also that the prices paid for these were ordinary market rates.

The members of the Opposition were probably deceived by stories told by dissatisfied members of the crew. One of these, who had been fined for drunkenness, informed them before the inquiry, that some of the steamer's supplies had been exchanged for furs, which had been transhipped to the steamer Neptune. The inference was that the heads of the expedition had been appropriating furs paid for with Government stores. Major Moodie, the commander, disposed of this story by showing that the furs had been brought back by the Arctic and placed in the Mounted Police storehouse at Ottawa. These furs were shipped by returning members of the Mounted Police force at Hullerton, and had nothing to do with the Arctic expedition.

The North Atlantic Trading Company "scandal" also proved to be a chimera. Mr. Foster and some of his colleagues insinuated, if they did not openly charge, that Mr. Sifton and Mr. Preston had a financial interest in the contract between the company and the department of the interior, and it was even alleged that Mr. Preston and the company were one and the same. Mr. Sifton and Mr. Preston gave these accusations the most absolute denial. Sir Wilfrid Laurier confuted the Opposition by offering to furnish, in confidence, the names of the shareholders, who were reputable business firms in Germany, Belgium and Russia. Lord Strathcona also approved the contract, and declared that the shareholders of the company must be protected in the privacy which was necessary owing to the continental laws against emigration agencies.

The session closes with no cloud on the Government's record, and with fresh proofs that its administration of affairs has been clean and progressive.

MARVELOUS SUCCESS OF THE PAROLE SYSTEM.

The discussion in Parliament of the case of Bothier, who was recently released from the British Columbia penitentiary by the order of the Governor-General, has done some good. It has demonstrated, in spite of adverse criticisms by some not well-informed members, that the parole system set on foot by the late Hon. David Mills, and carefully administered by him and his successors in the office of minister of justice, has been a marvelous success.

There has been much censure of the action of Hon. Charles Fitzpatrick (now chief justice of Canada) in recommending to his excellency the release of Bothier. Though the reasons for that course, in accordance with the well understood usage in both Canada and the motherland, cannot be ascertained, we must assume that the minister reached the conclusion that the ends of justice had been served by the two years' incarceration of the prisoner. The fact is not officially admitted, but Mr. Macpherson, M. P. for the city of Vancouver, asserts that the case for the prisoner was engineered by Sir Charles Hibbert Tupper, himself an ex-minister of justice, and that he undertook all the preliminary work necessary to having the matter taken up by the late minister of justice. It has also been brought out that this man was a foreigner; that he had only lived three years in Canada, and that so soon as he got his personal belongings together he quit the country. If these are the facts, heinous though the offense of this man was, we are inclined to agree with the present minister of justice that the country is well rid of him. We have enough of wrongdoers of our own, and if any reasonable means can be employed to hasten the begonia of foreigners who take unlimited license to break our laws, no reasonable person ought to object.

Mr. Bergeron, M. P., took occasion to assert that "there has been of late considerable abuse of the pardoning power or in commuting sentences. 'I need not,' he said, 'recall the case of Shortis, which was a very flagrant and sad one. The fact that the cabinet could not come to an understanding and that the final decision should have been left to the Governor-General personally, and that a man who had shot three men should not have been hanged, but had his sentence commuted to imprisonment for life, certainly shocked the people and lowered exceedingly their respect for the administration of justice. It was a very bad lesson to all classes.' The decision in the Shortis case is not 'of late.' It was given when Sir Charles Hibbert Tupper was minister of justice, and the failure of justice at that time was recognized by every constitutional authority that the failure of the Bowell Government to give united advice to the Governor-General, as the constitution calls for in all murder cases, should have resulted in their resignation. But it must be remembered that this Shortis case stands out as the one great blot in the exercise of the prerogative of pardon in the last quarter of a century, and that no one has ever had the temerity to charge to their faces that similar abuses have existed in the administration of the law under governments in which Sir Oliver Mowat, Hon. David Mills, Hon. Charles Fitzpatrick and Hon. A. B. Aylesworth have been ministers of justice. As to the general effectiveness of the ticket-of-leave system, Mr. Bergeron's professed astonishment at the number of persons who had to go back to the penitentiary 'for having failed to keep their parole' has absolutely no warrant. We have the official records in the recently-issued report of the Minister of Justice before us, and they do not in any respect bear out the assertion of Mr. Bergeron. The system was inaugurated in 1893, and up to June, 1905, when the last return was made up, the total number of convicts paroled was 1,082. Of these, 75 had their licenses canceled for non-compliance with the conditions. They were not guilty of any crime; but they either failed to report regularly to the authorities; they left for the United States, or they were found in bad company, etc.

What is most significant, as meeting most effectively the criticism of Mr. Bergeron, and as proving the carefulness with which the system has been carried out by the respective ministers of justice, is the fact that of these 1,082 paroled prisoners, but 24 forfeited their licenses by subsequent convictions. What better vindication of the parole system, as carried out under the Canadian Minister of Justice, could there be than these official returns?

The Dominion parole officer has properly called attention to the fact that in comparison with neighboring states, where the parole system is in force, Canada makes an excellent showing. From April 1, 1897, to April 1, 1904, 909 men were released from the states prison in Michigan. Twenty per cent proved delinquent, and of this number 99 were returned to prison for crimes committed while on parole. In the like period, 1,611 men were released on parole from the Indiana Reformatory. Of these, 348, or over 23 per cent failed to comply with the conditions, and the majority, having committed offenses, were returned to the institution. Canada's record, as we have shown, is much better.

Would it not be well for public men not lightly to make charges or wrongful deductions as to the operation of the parole system? A minister of justice can be left to take care of himself when his motives are assailed, but the system of parole, and the results accruing, cannot be brought into dispute without injuring what every modern criminologist of note regards as a most effective aid to the reclamation of wrongdoers. Those who are devoted to the work of helping unfortunate men and women to get a new start in life, after undergoing imprisonment, find it a hard enough task without the handicap of unfounded statements as to the effects of the system. If politicians cannot, or will not, lend a helping hand, they should at least refrain from doing or saying anything that would make the work of finding employment for paroled persons more difficult than it too often is.

Chicago sausage will not regain public confidence until every link can show a registered pedigree.

The registrar of deeds for East Northumberland has been dismissed, and replaced by a nephew of Dr. Wilboughby. The doctor failed to get a portfolio, and probably thinks that something is owing the family.

The Toronto News declares that Mr. Sifton is a statesman of the first rank, but is too careless of what his enemies say about him. This indifference is one of the qualities of a big man.

Mr. Elson has been jeered at by our local evening contemporary, for raising so trivial a question in the House—London Free Press.

This refers to the potato incident. It was Mr. Elson's duty to point out what he believed to be extravagance, and no one reproaches him for that. But if he had refrained from "raising a storm"—we quote the Free Press—before the Government had made inquiry, he would have spared himself a large dish of crow. Scandal-mongering has become too much a habit in the Opposition ranks.

THE FIRST LINE OF DEFENSE.

[Montreal Gazette.]

There are 325 warships manned by 63,000 men taking part in the British naval maneuvers of the present year. The scheme includes the conveying of merchant vessels, the protection of the coasts and the keeping open of the ports of the United Kingdom. Nothing on so large a scale has been attempted before in the history of the world's navies. There are men who know and can conceive big things in control of the first and greatest line of Great Britain's defense.

A DISAPPOINTING THING.

[Hamilton Times.]

The Tories discovered that their North Atlantic Trading Company was not a scandal de facto, but only de jure. So they dropped it like a hot potato.

LAST CHANCE.

[London Telegraph.]

An iron-monger in a small country town recently posted the following announcement in front of his shop: "The reason why I have hitherto been able to sell my goods so much cheaper than anybody else is because I am a bachelor and do not need to make a profit for the maintenance of wife and children. It is now my duty to inform the public that this advantage will be shortly withdrawn from them, as I am about to be married. They will, therefore, do well to make their purchases at once at the old rate."

SURE GUIDE TO HAPPINESS.

[Philadelphia Ledger.]

Addison, in one of his "Sir Roger De Coverley" sketches, says: "A man's first care should be to avoid the reproaches of his own heart; his next to escape the censures of the world; if the last interferes with the former it ought to be entirely neglected." If we may judge from experience and from the sighs and sobs around us, this is scarcely the principle which directs the conduct of many of us. And yet there is an immense amount of practical common-sense wisdom in Addison's dictum, for in avoiding the reproaches of his own heart, a man is taking the surest step toward the highest good—happiness.

EGG AND BOTTLE.

[From the Hartford Times.]

Take a boiled egg, remove the shell, have a bottle with a large neck; add a piece of paper to the neck and light it. When in blaze put the egg in the point down, and the heat will pull the egg with great force inside. Now put again a blazed paper in the bottle and manage to have the egg in the neck point up and the heat will push out the egg with an explosion.

ELLEN TERRY'S JUBILEE.

[Montreal Witness.]

The demonstration to Miss Ellen Terry, the famous English actress, was only remarkable in that it was larger than many similar demonstrations of which English actors and actresses and singers have been the objects. Sir Henry Irving was given a similar ovation some years ago, as was Miss Nelly Warren, a burlesque actress; while Dan Leno, a music hall singer, who died under pathetic circumstances, was followed to the grave by sorrowing thousands. All this shows that whatever is to be said against the drama as it is, it is a tremendous power, and not a lessening one, and that if possible it ought to be used for good. This Ellen Terry, collaborating with Irving, tried in her way to do. Her work did not appeal to the frivolous. It was always seriously meant and was founded upon the classics of such authors as Shakespeare, Goethe, Goldsmith, Lytton, Tennyson and others. But it was all the more the more of a fascination for man from his cave days. As many love music and disregard the sounds of the winds and waters; and as many love paintings and take little account of the living palpitating panorama of nature around them, so the real story of human life, with its many variants, is found wearisome or is neglected by the many who find delight in the "hour's traffic on the stage." Shakespeare tells us that "all the world's a stage, and all the men and women merely players," yet while the problems of the real world, other than those which are merely personal, may concern the philosopher and philanthropist to an extreme degree, the instinct of man is to desire to view the stage through the medium of the novel or the play. Much has already been done to render this novel subservient to high purposes, but the stage seems to have more of the old Adam to be overcome.

THE THRIFTY FRENCH PEASANT

[From the New York World.]

Nothing else has so impressed John D. Rockefeller during his stay in France as the thrift and industry of the people. "There is no waste," he says with admiration, "in farm or field; there is no waste in the kitchen." To the mind of the world's greatest business man and money-maker this habit of saving and freedom from extravagance is the surest road to national self-respect and material prosperity. It has been his own chosen path. There is no waste in the Standard Oil Company.

Mr. Rockefeller put his finger at once upon a source of France's strength. Ever since the beginning of the French revolution foreigners and even Frenchmen, from Burke down to the enemies of present-day Radicalism, have been confidently predicting that France was on the high road to ruin. Its people were vain, fickle, emotional, inconstant. They loved show and glory, but veered from one extreme to the other like weathercocks. Kings have gone, and empires have crashed in the dust, fashions in republics changed, but the French peasant has gone on steadfastly tilling the soil with a passionate love of production. The revolution made him a landowner, and no shift of governments or changes of industrial conditions has weakened him away from the land. He has worked for posterity as loyally as ever aristocrat guarded his title for his heirs.

There seems to be no bottom to the peasant's woolen stocking. When the country lay crushed after Sedan and the fall of the $1,000,000,000 indemnity was paid more than a year earlier than Bismarck required. The cost of the war, of the German occupation, of the Commune, to say nothing of the loss of two rich provinces, and the losses of commerce, industry and agriculture by the stoppage of work, was estimated at $2,500,000,000 more, yet France recovered its old vigor and productivity with a rapidity that amazed all Europe. Its internal development has gone on almost unchecked, in spite of excessive taxes and huge armaments. Out of the people's savings, the Panama Canal bubble was financed and Russia has been saved from bankruptcy that has been always imminent.

Over one-half of the voters in France are agriculturists, and 70 per cent of them are landowners. Three-fourths of the landowners are small peasant owners. The cultivation of the soil is intensive. Every inch of land, as Mr. Rockefeller remarks, is made to bear cereals or fruit or vegetables or marketable flowers. And the rule of life is that something must be left over for another year after the expenses of living are met. It is a system of frugality that Americans have not yet learned, perhaps because they have not yet had to buy one that excites their admiration as a national virtue, because it means real independence and an assurance against the future.

PETER STERLING WINS FRONTIER

Brown's Horse Easy Winner of the Feature Event at Windsor's Opening.

Windsor, Ont., June 16.—The easiest kind of a victory was that scored by Peter Sterling, who, as per Sterling, in the Frontier Stakes, the big race of the opening day of the summer meeting at Windsor this afternoon. Peter Sterling's stable mate, the filly Ohlyesa, coupled in the betting with the colt at 7 to 10, was just as easily the best of the other four which sought the prize. She was cut out by Henry Watterson rounding the stretch turn, but, despite the interference, came on again in the last sixteenth and, under a drive, beat the filly Ohlyesa a length for the place. The latter finished three lengths in front of Shine On, who was disqualified for the foul. Crowshade was never a contender, had no speed at all and was beaten off 100 lengths. Peter Sterling, the winner, was rated along in third place until the turn into the stretch, when Kuntz gave him his head and he romped over his field.

Jockey Treubel, who came on from Kenilworth, especially to ride Henry Watterson, J. S. Hagkita's colt, because of his foul tactics, goes back to Buffalo with a $100 fine hanging over him.

Jockey Phillips was also plastered $25 and five days on the ground for striking Swain with his whip in the second race. B. Davis caught $25 for cutting across his field with Bon Mot. The opening of the Windsor meeting was most auspicious, nearly 5,000 people being in attendance, despite the threatening weather. Friday night's rain had no effect on the track and the six events were all run in fairly good time. A lavish use of paint and many structural improvements by the Highland Park Jockey Club, the new lessee, have made the Windsor property a very smart little racing plant, and the indications are that the present meeting will be the most successful ever held at Windsor.

Charles F. Price is officiating as presiding judge, while John Morley acted as associate today, pending the arrival of Francis Nelson from Hamilton. Dick Dwyer is starting. Results: First race, four furlongs, purse $350—Jerry Sharp, 107 (P. Phillips), even and out, first, by a length; Tom Gilroy, 112 (W. Fisher), 10 to 1, and 2 to 1, second, by three lengths; Dick Shoreley, 103 (Young), 12 to 1, third. Time, 1:41.5. Beside, Louisanne and Pinaford finished as named.

Second race, six furlongs, purse $350—La Pucelle, 100 (W. Fisher), even and out, first, by four lengths; Foxmeade, 107 (B. Davis), 5 to 1, and 2 to 1, second, by a nose; Sunny Brook, 114 (Stone), 30 to 1, third. Time, 1:12.5. Lady Henrietta, Nat. B.

LACROSSE. MONTREAL SECONDS BEATEN. Montreal, June 17.—The Second Montrealers met the Quebecs on the Montreal grounds before the big match and were defeated by 1 to 0, but only goals being scored in the first quarter by McCormick, of Quebec, in about ten minutes. There were about eight more minutes to play when the intermediates were turned off the field to make room for the seniors, and Quebec declined the finish the match after the big game was over. Montreal not putting in any protest because the ordering off was done on their grounds.

CRICKET. OTTAWA WON. Ottawa, June 17.—In a one-daying game here Saturday, the Ottawa Cricket Club defeated the Montreal team 156 to 105.

BELMERE WINS BROOKLYN DERBY

Buffalo Derby Winner Proves Himself To Be a Stake Horse.

New York, June 16.—On a track deep in mud and to his liking, Belmere, winner of the Buffalo Derby, today added another race to his credit by easily winning the Brooklyn Derby of $10,000 at Gravesend.

Owing to the bad condition of the track, James Brady withdrew his $40,000 colt, Accountant, and Ironsides also was scratched, while King Henry was added. The Quail opened a 9 to 20 favorite, but gradually went back, owing to the heavy play on Belmere who was pounded down from 5 to 1 at the opening to 9 to 5 at the close. King Henry was held at 8 to 1.

The start was good and O'Neill sent Belmere into the lead, followed by The Quail and King Henry. Passing the stand the first time, Belmere was leading by one length. At the end of six furlongs O'Neill gave Belmere a breathing spell and The Quail closed up a little, but at the end of the mile Belmere increased his lead to two lengths. From there to the finish he rapidly went away from his field and won easily up by 25 lengths. The Quail stopped badly after racing a mile, but was second, twenty lengths before King Henry. The mile and a half was run in 2:37.

By his victory today in the $10,000 Tremont Stakes, Water Pearl showed that probably he is the best 2-year-old of the year.

The son of Watercress-Pearl V. picked up 123 pounds and, conceding fourteen pounds, to his field, won easily. He was a heavily played favorite at 7 to 10. Saracinesca and Golf Ball cut a fast pace for three-eighths of a mile, when J. Jones, of Water Pearl, who had been running third position, sent the favorite up to the leaders. In a few strides he was in front and never afterward was threatened, winning by two lengths Saracinesca was second, three-quarters of a length before Golf Ball.

Coy Maid, the outsider in the starting, won the Marlborough Handicap.

Artful, Burgomaster and Tanya have all been declared out of their stake engagements at Sheephead Bay.

BLUE RIBBON MEET OFF

Detroit, June 16.—Windsor, Ont., is taken the dates for the Blue Ribbon trotting meeting at Grosse Pointe, abandoned because of the prohibition of pool selling. The Windsor meet will open July 23 and last five days. The Windsor meeting will witness the first clash of the Canadian and Michigan circuit campaigners with the and circuit horses which have been sitting at Cleveland, Libertyville, Inola, and here.

TANGLED THREADS

CHAPTER XXIV.

"Yes, Mary, I will help you—I will befriend you all that lies within my power. I will do my utmost toward righting the wrong that has been done you," Helen replied, with a heartiness which showed that she was making no light promise.

"How good you are!" cried the grateful girl, her tears streaming afresh. "Oh, I hope your heart will not be broken—your life spoiled—by giving up Hubert to me! Do—do you love him so very much?"

Helen smiled wearily at the question.

If Mary could have known, she thought, what a revelation of feeling had swept over her upon learning her sad story, how glad she was to be released from the unequalled union that had been so nearly consummated, what an escape she regarded it, she would not have imagined that she was making very much of a sacrifice for her.

Nevertheless, if she had loved him with all her heart, her decision would have been the same; she never could have married him, after learning of the wrong of which he had been guilty.

And yet her very last support seemed to have been wrenched from beneath her by this unexpected change in her plans. However, she would not allow herself to dwell upon the matter at that time; she must settle with Hubert first, then face her own future with what courage she could.

"No, Mary," she returned, "my heart will not be broken, nor my life spoiled, and I am going to tell you just the truth about the matter, so that your mind may be set at rest upon that point. My mother has been very ill for a long time, and, besides, during the last year we have lost all the property we had. Through all our trouble, Hubert Allen has been very kind to us—like a devoted son and brother. I do not know just how far he may have been influenced in this by the plot which the letter and telegram have revealed and his love of money. He has professed to want to marry me for a long time, but now I can see that he and Mr. Lancaster had planned it all out before he ever spoke of marriage to me. I imagine he must have been heavily bribed, for the man is said to be very rich, and, of course, I can understand it must have been a great temptation to him; and yet, he has been so good to us—so helpful and faithful. I cannot believe him wholly depraved, in spite of his great and deliberate wrong against you. I do not love—I never have loved—Hubert as a wife should love her husband, and, knowing this, I rejected his proposals until almost our last dollar was gone—until a week ago this morning, when he insisted that something decisive must be done for my mother, who seemed to be failing every hour, and the doctor having said that she would surely die if she remained in the city, we arranged that we would be married today, and go immediately into the country."

"Oh! And you cannot go now?" exclaimed Mary in a tone of dismay; "must you give it up, if—if you do not marry Hubert?"

Helen's face grew very white and sad as she replied:

"I—I do not know; but we will not talk of that now. I believe that God will take care of us in his own way, and we shall have to leave all with him."

She had scarcely uttered the words when a wave of peace and trust seemed to sweep over her troubled heart, and leave behind it "a great calm."

"Now you will understand," she resumed, after a moment, "why my heart will neither be broken nor my life spoiled. I know that I should have consented to marry Hubert, and I believe you were sent to save me from a future of great unhappiness."

"Thank you—oh, thank you, Miss Seymour! You have done more for me than I can tell you," said her companion, breathing a long sigh of relief.

"Now, I am going to ask you to let me keep both this letter and the telegram," Helen said, glancing at the papers which she had laid upon the bed; "they certainly concern me more than anyone else, and there may come a time when I shall need them to prove that I have been true; for—Mary, a terrible wrong has been done me, also. That man—Mr. Lancaster—has plotted this to separate me from some one for whom I do care a great deal."

"Oh, Miss Seymour! Is that so?" cried Mary, her face lighting suddenly, for the confession proved to her beyond a doubt that Helen did not love Hubert, and that she really would enter heartily into the plan of trying to influence him to do right by her.

"Yes; but, of course, you understand, I tell you this in confidence. I do not wish you to speak of it to any one—I simply wanted you to know just where I stand."

"I will never betray your confidence, Miss Seymour," said the girl gravely; "and I thank you for it. You shall have the letter and telegram—I am very glad to give them to you," she concluded, as she pushed them toward Helen, who gathered them up, and, crossing into the room, locked them within her desk.

"Now, I shall have to ask you to excuse me for a few moments," she observed, as she turned back to her guest; "I want to see if mamma is awake, and, if so, prepare her for the change in our plans."

"Perhaps I had better go now," said Mary, starting to her feet, and searching Helen's pale face with sympathetic eyes.

"No, indeed; I wish you to remain here," Helen gravely returned. "I have a special reason; the baby is still asleep, and comfortable, and I am sure, you have nothing important to call you away."

"No, except that I have to find cheaper lodgings, for Hubert told me last night that he could not let me have as much money hereafter as he had been giving me," said the girl, a look of anxiety sweeping over her face.

She felt ashamed and degraded, in view of the fact that she had even consented to profit by money which rightly belonged to this poor girl and her child. She was profoundly grateful to her for having come to her before it was too late to rectify what would have been a lifelong mistake.

"Well," she said kindly, "you need not look for lodgings today; you shall remain here, and be my guest until Monday, for I want to see if some permanent and more desirable arrangement cannot be made for you."

"How can I ever thank you for being so good to me?" sobbed Mary in a transport of gratitude. "I did not expect you would be so kind—I did not look for anything like this: most young people would have taunted me with—

with my sorrow, and felt that they were polluted by my presence."

"You poor child! Truly, I have only the tenderest sympathy for you," said Helen, laying a gentle hand upon her shoulder. "And I feel that you are not half so guilty of the wrong that has been done this dear little one as the man who has refused to bestow a father's care and protection upon it. What a pretty baby she is!" she added, bending over the small sleeper, and caressingly touching the rings of brown hair that encircled its forehead; "what have you named her?"

"Oh, Miss Seymour, I haven't had the heart to give her a name yet; she is simply 'baby' to me until—I can be sure what her name is to be," the young mother responded, with trembling lips, but with a world of love in her sad eyes that rested upon the pretty pink-and-white face.

"Well, take off your hat, dear; you shall stay with us for a day or two; and now I must go to my mother," Helen hastily observed, as, glancing at the clock, she saw that it was 20 minutes to 12, and knew that Hubert and the clergyman would soon make their appearance.

She hurriedly left the room, and hastened to the parlor, where she found Mrs. Seymour still sleeping.

Going to her side, she laid her hand softly against her cheek.

The woman stirred, and smiled, even before she unclosed her eyes, for she instantly recognized the familiar touch.

"Why, I have been asleep, haven't I?" she exclaimed in surprise. "Have they come? Is it time? Oh, how pretty you look, Helen, in this white serge! It is very becoming to you, and fits you nicely."

She sat erect, and seemed to be greatly refreshed by her nap, while her glasses roved, with fond admiration, over the white-clad, graceful figure by her side, and without suspecting to serve Helen's unusual gravity and the look of high resolve on her pale face.

"No, dearest, they have not come yet; it lacks a quarter of an hour of being twelve," Helen calmly replied, although her heart was beating heavily with dread, in view of what she had to tell her mother. "And, mamma," she went on, kneeling beside her, and slipping her arms around her neck, "could it be such a very great disappointment to you if—if we could not go into the country today?"

"Why, Helen, what do you mean?" exclaimed the woman in a startled tone, and suddenly becoming conscious that something had gone wrong. "How pale you are—how strangely your voice sounds! Has anything happened?"

"Do not be alarmed, mamma, dear," was the fond response; "I have some news for you; but, in spite of the disappointing fact that we shall have to postpone our trip to Yorkville for awhile, I believe it is good news—at least, for me. Now, listen, and please do not interrupt, for I must tell you everything, before Hubert comes."

Then, with her arms still enfolding her, she related, as briefly as possible, Mary Wadleigh's pathetic story, but did not mention either the letter or telegram.

Somehow, she shrank from mentioning Hubert's name before her mother, and from allowing her to know of this additional wrong that had been perpetrated against her and her child by the man who, years ago, had so wronged her.

She merely stated, in a casual way, to account for the girl's presence, that she had found out, in some way, Hubert's intentions, and so had come there to plead her cause.

"Why, why, Helen! I never heard of anything more disgraceful in my life!" exclaimed Mrs. Seymour, in great excitement and indignation, when she concluded. "I can hardly credit the story! Hubert has never seemed like one so devoid of principle! He has been so good to us, so invariably kind and considerate—so thoughtful of our comfort, and forgetful of his own. Are you sure that this girl has not been imposing upon you?"

"Yes, mamma, I am sure," Helen returned, with quiet positiveness; "she has told me the truth, about Hubert, you know, which proves her story to be true, and which she could have known nothing about if she were an impostor. I am convinced that she is a dear, sweet, honest little woman, in spite of her one mistake, and you will feel the same, too, after you have seen and talked with her."

"Oh, this is dreadful! I do not know what to say—what to think!" exclaimed Mrs. Seymour, in deep distress, for she had trusted the young man fully, and it was a terrible blow to find that she had been so deceived—her confidence so misplaced.

"Dearest, I am sorry for only one thing—excepting, of course, the fact that he has been guilty of such wrong—and that is, the disappointment to you—the impossibility, apparently, of carrying out our plans," said the heavy-hearted girl, as she pressed her tremulous lips against the thin cheek nearest her. "I have not a single regret, as far as an, personal concern is concerned; I am, in fact, most thankful that I am once more free, for, of course, I could never marry Hubert after this."

"Of course not," was the indignant protest. "Why, I would rather die a thousand deaths than see you the wife of such a man! You do seem to be glad of the release, Helen," she added, bending a searching look upon the fair, sweet face resting against her shoulder. "Then—you did not love him, after all!"

"No, mamma—"

"And you were going to marry him simply to—to try to save me?" and the woman's voice broke, ending in an uncontrollable sob.

"Mamma, don't! You are all that I have in the world to live for, and I could sacrifice anything—everything—to keep you with me," Helen pleaded in self-defense, as she strained her emaciated form convulsively to her. Then she added in an almost defiant tone: "But I will save you, even yet. Hark! She suddenly interposed, and sitting erect; 'there is the bell—they have come!'"

"Let them come," said Mrs. Seymour, with sternly compressed lips. "I am ready for them, and Hubert will soon learn what I think of him!"

"Mamma," Helen gravely observed, and laying an impressive hand upon her shoulder, "I shall bring the clergyman here, for you to entertain—only please do not say anything to him about this until I return—while I have a talk with Hubert first. I have something very important to say to him, aside from the question of his hypocrisy toward us; you can guess, perhaps, what I intend to make him do, if I can."

"Helen! You are going to make him consent—you mean to—"

"Yes—yes; but I must go," and, springing to her feet, the girl bounded to the tube in the hall.

"Who is it, please?" she questioned, but with a sense of suffocation from the rapid beating of her heart, for she shrank from the denouement which she knew must come.

"It is I—Hubert," came the reply from below.

"Come up," she returned, pressing the button; then, opened the hall door, and stood awaiting, while, as he cold, the appearance of the ascending visitors, for she had caught the sound of other footsteps besides those of the unsuspecting young man, who was running lightly up the stairs, smiles of hope and triumph wreathing his lips.

Presently Hubert sprang upon the landing, and behind him followed the more sedate figure of the clergyman.

He came eagerly forward, his whole face beaming with joyous anticipation, and put out both hands to Helen; for, in spite of the almost severe simplicity of her attire, she had never looked more lovely to him.

But she drew back, grave and unresponsive, and, though a trifle wounded by her coldness, he innocently attributed her manner to her shyness in the presence of a stranger.

Yet, a second glance at her frozen face and averted eyes smote him with a sudden sense of dread of he knew not what.

But he stepped one side, to allow his companion to enter before him, saying, as he did so:

"Miss Seymour, allow me to present Rev. Mr. Hervey to you."

Helen gave the gentleman her hand with a quiet "Good morning, sir," then added courteously:

"Will you allow me to take you to mamma for a few moments, Mr. Hervey, while I speak with Mr. Allen?"

The clergyman affably signified his willingness to accede to her request, whereupon she led the way to the parlor, presented him to her mother, then excused herself, and returned to Hubert, who had remained standing in the hall, where he was vaguely wondering what Helen could wish to say to him.

He had intended getting there somewhat earlier, but he had been obliged to wait a little for Mr. Hervey, who had been delayed by another couple, who had come to be married, and he had become a trifle nervous and impatient, in view of the delay, and was now very eager to have the ceremony that would make Helen irrevocably his over with as soon as possible.

"Helen," he began eagerly, as she came to his side, "how love—"

"Come in here, please," she interposed, with a shiver of repugnance at the compliment he had half voiced.

She laid her hand upon the knob of her chamber door as she spoke, swung it open, and motioned him to enter, which he did, mechanically, with her eyes fastened upon her, and wondering more and more at the strangeness of her manner.

You May Be Sick Tonight

Without a moment's warning pain springs upon us. At the outset it is instantly cured by Nervine. Surprising what fifteen drops of this marvelous medicine will do. Nervine is no less certain than the wonderful effect when taken internally. Of course, Nervine is powerful, or it could not be so penetrating. But not irritating or caustic, because your infant could well and even gratefully take it. There are other pain remedies, but when you use Nervine you see the difference. That difference is this, others relieve, but Nervine does cure sprains, strains, swellings, earache, toothache, neuralgia, lumbago and all other muscular pains. Large bottles for 25c at all dealers.

NOTABLE REUNION;
THE "VAIL PICNIC"

Annual Gathering at the Home of a Much-Esteemed Delaware Family.

Under the most favorable weather conditions, the 29th annual "Vail Picnic," a yearly reunion of the Vail family and invited friends, was held on June 14 on the beautiful grounds of Mr. Lewis Vail, Delaware Township. Early in the afternoon, relatives and friends from far and near gathered at Mr. Vail's home. While the older people spent the time in conversation and in renewing old acquaintances and memories, the younger people indulged in games and other amusements. A game of baseball was played, each team consisting of members of both sexes. The chief features of the game were the good plays made by the Misses Warwick, of London, and Mr. Jack McDonald's star pitching.

Two interesting incidents of the day's doings were the voting contests. The first was to decide who was more popular, a married or a single lady. Mrs. S. Sutherland was chosen to represent the former, and Miss Ida Warwick represented the latter. When the poll was counted the vote stood even, so each received a prize, and the question was left to be settled at a later date.

The second contest was to decide who was most popular, a married or an unmarried gentleman. Mr. S. Sutherland was chosen to represent the married, and Mr. Jack McDonald to represent the bachelors. The voting resulted in an overwhelming majority in favor of the unmarried candidate. Mr. McDonald was then called to the platform and was presented with a necktie of the latest and most approved style. All agreed it was the most becoming tie he had ever worn and wondered he hadn't taken a fancy to try such a one before. After the presentation the recipient was called upon to make a speech. Being of a retiring disposition Mr. McDonald was unwilling to do so, but finally being prevailed upon, came forward, and in a few well-chosen words thanked the assembly for their hearty expression of their favorable opinion of him.

An incident of interest to both old and young was the guessing contest. The object was to guess the combined ages of four of the oldest of the Vail family present. Mrs. Hannah Vail, of Delaware; Mrs. Ellen Vail, of Delaware; Mrs. N. D. Mr. Geo. Vail, of Marlette, Mich., and Mr. John J. Vail, of Newbury, constituted the four. Their combined ages aggregated 331 years 6 months. The nearest guess was 332 years. A prize was given for the nearest guess. These four had their photos taken in a group. The Chippewa Indian Band was present and all enjoyed the day.

At about 5:30 p.m. the guests sat down to a bountiful supper spread on tables under the trees in the orchard. Although the attendance was not as large as it has been on some previous years, all spent the evening pleasantly, and departed to their several homes, to look forward with pleasant anticipations to the next annual gathering.

BAD MEAT FROM U. S.

Refused Entry Into Germany, Attempt Was Made to Smuggle.

Berlin, June 18.—Lieut. von Podbielski, minister of agriculture, was interviewed today on the occasion of the opening of the Agricultural Cattle Exhibition in Berlin with regard to the meat-packing scandal in the United States. He said the Government was fully aware of the state of things in Chicago, but could not make its knowledge public. All it could do was to take measures to protect the population in its charge. The Government knew, for example, that thousands of animals were already dead before they were brought to the slaughter-houses. For the inspection of 10,000 swine daily there were only three veterinarians in Chicago, while in Prussia an inspector was sent to examine more than twenty daily. A large steamer recently arrived at Emden with meat, the whole of which had to be refused entry. The result was an attempt to smuggle it over by way of Denmark.

In the course of his speech in opening the exhibition the minister claimed that a new era of prosperity for German farmers was dawning, now that the recently-made commercial treaties were in operation.

FELLAHEEN RESTLESS

Egyptian Natives May Rise Against British Government.

London, June 17.—No trustworthy report of the attack on British officers at a village near Tantah, Egypt, has yet been received. The explanation at present suggested is that the natives thought that the Englishmen had set fire to a neighboring village which was burned at the time. The affair has created a feeling of great uneasiness. Though little public reference has been made of the fact, it is well known that there is a feeling of great unrest among the natives of Egypt. When the Tabah-Akhabah dispute between Great Britain and the Sultan of Turkey was acute, reference was made in these dispatches to the activity of Turkish propagandists. Since the beginning of the year they have met with no small measure of success, and though the Sultan as usual was forced to climb down, he has not altogether failed in his attack on British prestige in Egypt.

The latest advices from Egypt state that the unimproved natives believe that the Sultan emerged victorious from the dispute, and they have high hopes that before long they will be freed of all foreign control. In the country villages and districts the attitude of the natives is very noticeable. Obsequious severity has given place to a sullen, unfriendly demeanor. Even servants have been known to say to their masters: "It is your time today, but ours will come tomorrow, perhaps."

Are You Often Bilious?

Read This and Learn How to Prevent Attacks.

Biliousness is merely a term applied to a condition that exists when the body is overloaded with bile.

The complexion turns yellow, eyes look dull, pimples, itching and eczema, break out, headaches are ever present.

Biliousness has two great causes, constipation and defective liver action. When Dr. Hamilton's Pills are taken they not only correct the bowels, but act directly on the liver, regulating its bile secretion.

Unlike ordinary medicines which purge and give temporary relief, Dr. Hamilton's Pills remove the condition which causes biliousness; thus permanent cures are effected.

Dr. Hamilton's Pills do cure biliousness and liver ills under all circumstances.

We prove this by the statement of Mr. Fenwick Luddington, of New Harbord, N. S., who writes: "Three months ago I had no expectation of ever getting free from periodical bilious attacks. They were preceded by dizziness and headache, and if I stooped over my head would swim and a nauseous feeling crept into my stomach."

Dr. Hamilton's Pills fixed up my liver, drove all the bile out of my system, made me a well man in a few months. Today I enjoy a good appetite, excellent digestion, and the best of health. Dr. Hamilton's Pills did it all."

Get Dr. Hamilton's Pills today. Sold by all dealers; 25c per box, or five boxes for $1.25. By mail from N. C. Foss & Co., Montreal, Conn., U. S. A., and London, Ont.

The First Need of a cook in order to insure good bread and pastry on baking day is a good flour, and one which is uniform. A brand which varies in quality and strength, and requires different methods of using every time, is a source of worry to any cook and the cause of much spoiled bread and pastry.

Five Roses Flour

is made by a process which insures every barrel and bag of flour which leaves the mills being of a uniform strength, quality and color. Therefore, when once a cook learns to use "Five Roses" she will find that the "Five Roses" way of baking will give the same uniform results—the best—every baking day.

FORTUNES REWARD OF BOTH

Romantic Careers in the Diamond Fields of Cape Colony.

Washington, June 17.—"The two great men of South Africa," said Gardner F. Williams the other day, "were Cecil Rhodes and Barney Barnato. Both were strong characters and had marked individuality. Both became immensely rich and both exercised a powerful influence upon the development of that section of the world."

In July, 1873, a young Hebrew, Barnett Isaacs, took passage from England to Cape Town at the call of his brother from the new diamond fields. His grandfather was a learned and honored rabbi, and the good standing of his family was marked by the marriage of his father, Isaac Isaacs, to a relative of Sir George Jessel, master of the rolls. But the son of the rabbi was only a small, plodding, frugal shopkeeper in London. His sons, Henry and Barnett, were trained in the excellent Hebrew Free School in Spitalfields, but both boys left school at the age of 14 to help their father in his shop. Henry was drawn early in the current of the early rush to the diamond fields in 1871, and had such success as a "kopje walloper" that he wrote home to urge his brother to join him. To the restless spirit and purely speculative nature of Barney Isaacs there was a magnetic attraction in such a field with its gleaming and novel opportunities. With instant decision he took the steamer for Cape Town and made the tiresome trip overland and by rail to Kimberley, with a falling pluck and good temper.

"He was only twenty years old, and outwardly no more than a light-hearted boy, bubbling over with high spirits and comical conceits. One could scarcely cast him in any sort of any place on earth where his nimble wits would not gain him a living. But his incessant activity was fatally wearing. He could not dawdle. For many years his extraordinary vitality and endurance kept him running. He had the precise faculty of dropping off to sleep at any moment of relaxation and awakening after slumbering a few minutes. Nevertheless, no creature of flesh and blood could endure the strain which he bore and recklessly courted. Some day such a bundle of quivering nerves must snap; either life or brain must go," said one of his closest friends, and ultimately the brain did go. He committed suicide by leaping overboard from a steamer, en route from London to Cape Town.

"His brother Henry had fancied and taken the name of Barnato as a professional shift from his own family name when he came to the diamond fields and tried his luck as a conjurer and vaudeville performer. Henry soon after turned his hand to the more profitable business of a diamond trader, but his stage name stuck to him, and passed naturally to his younger brother, who accepted it with easy indifference. So young Barnett Isaacs became familiarly known as 'Barney Barnato' and for the first year of two of his life on the diamond fields floated along the current as Barney Barnato's brother. He had money enough to buy 60 boxes of cigars after paying his way to Kimberley. With this working capital he went into partnership with Louis Cohen, another newcomer. The young partners, Barnato and Cohen, worked hard, early and late.

"Barnato's keen eye gained a valuable business connection in a way that suggests Sherlock Holmes. One of the most successful 'kopje wallopers' (a name given to men who visited the various miners' pits for the purpose of buying diamonds), made regular rounds through the diamond fields on an old, lame, yellow pony, calling on men who had the best bargains in diamonds to offer. Cohen and Barnato tried repeatedly to follow him, but his track was soon lost in the labyrinth of tents, huts, and sand heaps. However, Barnato was able to see that the trader's pony had a habit of stopping at places where the best bargains were made, and when the broken-down beast was offered for sale one day by its owner, Barnato snapped at the chance to buy him for £27 10s—an enormous price for the old pony as a steed, but a great bargain for the keen diamond broker, for the walloper's business went with his pony, as he afterward saw to his chagrin.

"Soon Barnato became known as a 'wallowing walloper,' and in the third year of his push into the field he was able to crown his ambition by the purchase of a block of four claims in one of the best-paying sections of the Kimberley mine. His savings were then about £2,000, and he put nearly every penny he was worth into those purchases. With the help of this great

Superstitions on Skin Diseases

Of all superstitions probably the most foolish is the idea that when a rash or sore on the skin is healed and cured by means of external applications it will "strike in" and do further harm.

No reputable physician will give any countenance to such a notion. Skin diseases of every form, and especially eczema, salt rheum, psoriasis, scald head, and all diseases which cause great suffering from itching are promptly relieved and certainly cured by Dr. Chase's Ointment.

Whether for babies, children or adults, this great ointment can be used with perfect safety on the most delicate skin, and will leave the skin soft, smooth and natural.

The soothing, healing, antiseptic influence of Dr. Chase's Ointment places it without a rival as a cure for skin irritations and eruptions; 50 cents a box, at all dealers, or Edmondson, Bates & Co., Toronto.

investment he came swiftly into prominence. Entering into partnership with his brother, he established the firm of Barnato Bros. in 1880, as London and Kimberley diamond dealers and brokers in mining properties, and crowned a further ambition by combining his own claims with adjoining holdings in his first mining stock organization, "The Barnato Diamond Mining Company." It was at this stage of his fortunes that he came into keen rivalry with the only competitor that could make successful headway against him, Cecil John Rhodes.

There was a singular likeness in some respects in the careers, conceptions and calculations of these extraordinary men, although they were so markedly dissimilar in personal appearance and temperament. Cecil John Rhodes was the fifth son of a Hertfordshire clergyman, and came to South Africa as a sickly boy of 17, in the first flush of the diamond fever, to join his eldest brother Herbert on a small cotton plantation in Natal. Herbert Rhodes, leaving his brother in charge of the plantation, joined the great rush to the new diamond fields. Cecil Rhodes followed a few months later, and arrived in 1870.

"So, unknown to each other, and blind to their future clash and union, Cecil John Rhodes, the clergyman's son, and Barney Barnato, the London shopkeeper, started abreast in the race for fortune on the same track. An ordinary observer of the two young men would probably have picked Barnato as the winner on such a track as the new diamond fields. Externally, the two young men could scarcely be more unlike than the little chunky, bullet-headed, hand in pocket, mercurial Hebrew, taking a hand in current sports or traffic, and the tall, thoughtful young over-seer, sitting on a bucket, deaf to the chatter and rattle about him, and fixing his blue eyes intently on his work, or on the fever of his brain. Yet both were alike in their expanding ambition, their power to grapple and control in their disquieting ways the opportunities about them. Both had keen foresight and extraordinary comprehension of great undertakings.

"It hardly just to credit Rhodes and Barney Barnato with an equal perception of the imperial call for the union of the diamond interests in the diamond mines. Each reached the conclusion that the mines divided into small holdings, which were controlled by men alien to one another. Rhodes' interests were mostly in the Beers mine, and Barney's largely in the Kimberley mine. For nearly six years Rhodes concentrated his efforts in the diamond fields toward obtaining complete control of the development and output of the great diamond-producing mines of South Africa. "Barney Barnato's fate was pathetic," said Mr. Williams. "You remember he jumped overboard from a steamer on his journey from London to South Africa in June, 1887. His race with Cecil was a desperate close to a phenomenal career. It is sad to recall how his brilliant and versatile mind gave under the enormous strain brought upon himself by his numerous and varied enterprises in which he was engaged."

DEPEW DRESSES HIMSELF

Muldoon Would Have No Valets Around His Establishment.

New York, June 17.—United States Senator Chauncey M. Depew and Reginald De Koven, the celebrated composer, are among the guests in "Prof. Billy" Muldoon's institution in White Plains. Both men are undergoing severe courses of physical treatment. Senator Depew is leading the more "simple life" on the farm. He was made to understand at the outset that Muldoon was boss, and that a millionaire in the sight of the big, established wrestler and present renovator of worn-out bodies than anybody else.

A valet and a handy man, who composed the Depew entourage, were given the high sign and told to hasten away. "But he can't address himself," protested the valet, agitated. "Well, we can teach him to do that," too," placidly retorted Muldoon. So the senator has been buttoning his own collars and lacing his shoes without assistance.

Since he went to White Plains the senator has been living by the clock and Muldoon. Muldoon has sent him to bed at 9 o'clock whether he wanted to or not, and routed him out promptly at 6. He has taken him on a horse and made him ride at a trot for miles, given him ice-cold shower baths, and mercilessly put him through a course of sprouts with dumb-bells, weights and a medicine ball.

The senator hasn't liked it much, but he has improved greatly. Those who have seen him say that his attire is scandalously informal for a senator, consisting of not too immaculate duck trousers, a faded sweater, loaned by Muldoon, a Panama hat that is frayed out along the edges, and shabby shoes.

Referring today to her husband's illness, Mrs. De Koven said it was "overdose of fat," which corresponds to Mr. Muldoon's description, "neurasthenia."

Reginald De Koven is one of the best known of American composers. As a writer of lyrical songs, of religious music, and of the scores of more than a dozen comic operas, Mr. De Koven has now international reputation.

Mr. De Koven was but little known when in 1884 he married Miss Anna Farwell, the daughter of the late Chas. B. Farwell, a very wealthy man of Chicago and United States senator from Illinois.

According to statistics of Alpine accidents, during 1905 the number of English who have lost their lives by foolishness on the Alps is surpassed by several other nations. The total number of accidents was 165, of which no fewer than 85 were fatal, and of these the greater number of accidents happened to Swiss and German climbers.

The name of Dr. Richard Garnett, who lived in London the other day, will ever be associated with the great work of cataloguing the vast library of the British Museum. The treasury agreed to set aside $50,000 a year for the purpose, and the work of editing the new catalogue was handed over to him. By 1899 the press was working and ten years later the task was completed. The catalogue of today contains of 300 volumes in all, and contains nearly 4,000,000 entries, including the cross references. Nearly 60,000 fresh entries are added each year.

DAYLIGHT GHOST PLAYS ODD PRANKS

Mysterious Occurrences on An English Farm—Bolted Doors Opened.

London, June 17.—Strange, unaccountable things are befalling the neighborhood of Lamberhurst, Kent. The villagers, who in the midst of their laughter exhibit unmistakable symptoms of fears, are convinced that they are sheltering one of the most enterprising, audacious and mysterious "ghosts" recorded in the annals of the unseen.

"If 'ghost' it be—and the word of the persons chiefly concerned can only be accepted on this point—the visitant has displayed the greatest discrimination in the choice of its field of operations. Lamberhurst is an old-time cluster of cottages, Elizabethan for the most part, lying midway between Horsmonden and Goudhurst. Two miles further on is the Furnace Mill, owned by J. C. Playfoot, a well-to-do farmer and hopgrower. Here the 'ghost' has established its headquarters.

Furnace Mill lies in a wooded hollow, a quarter of a mile from the road. It is flanked by a darksome lake, in which the tall elms that fringe its east shadowy reflections. The trickling of a cascade and calls of bird to bird are the only sounds that disturb the silence. No other dwelling is visible.

Locks and Bolts of No Avail. Mr. Playfoot, a matter-of-fact, businesslike man, recounted with some reluctance his weird experiences: "Whatever the thing may be," he said, "is playing the very mischief with my place, it operates only in the daytime and under the very noses of myself and other members of the family who are looking out for it."

"It is important to know that I have discharged anyone that this place can only be reached by a private road, the approach of any stranger would be disputed by two watchdogs that would not stand on any ceremony, and that I carry in my own pockets the keys of the mill, stables, hayrooms and other buildings."

"Despite all these precautions, locked and bolted doors swing open, the horses are changed from stable to stable, are sometimes turned round in their stalls so that their backs are against the mangers, and are often seen to run shivering and startled from their stables into the road."

"Bales of hay are cut and scattered about the hayrooms, the contents of sacks in the drying room are emptied and changed about, while in the tool-house barrels of lime weighing hundreds of pounds are hung down a flight of stairs. These and many other strange things happen in rooms that are locked, barred and bolted, while people watch and listen outside, and the keys are in my pockets. Nobody or nothing is ever seen or heard."

Boy's Adventure. Then Mr. Playfoot detailed what was perhaps the strangest "manifestation" of all. "About noon a few days ago," he said, "in the presence of my son I locked and bolted every building on the premises and went into the mill-house for dinner. Suddenly I heard a startled cry from the lad, and rushing into the yard, saw the door of the dry-room, only about ten yards away, wide open. Within the room I heard the shouts of the lad, but before I could reach him the door silently closed. I seized the handle. The door was locked! My son was a prisoner inside. The key of the room was in my pocket. I unlocked the door and found the room empty. Nobody was there except my son, standing on the stairs frightened and pale."

Young Playfoot, a bright lad about 15 years of age, corroborated this strange story. "As soon as I had entered the room," he added, "I saw the door closed and the lock creaks. The latch rattled and the door opened, but although I stood only a foot or two away, neither the latch nor the lock made the least sound."

A strong-man feat performed by the "ghost" was the overturning of a large waterbutt. One morning, according to Mr. Playfoot, as he was working near one of the stables the butt was jerked off. He substituted a bolt. Shortly afterwards he found that the bolt had been removed and the lock neatly restored to its place. "And yet I saw nothing," he said.

Mr. Playfoot conducted the reporter who interviewed him to one of the stables. The double doors were locked and bolted, and the entrance was spanned by a stout timber bar secured by a hidden fastening designed by the "whisper in the hope of circumventing the 'ghost.' In the stable was a gray mare."

"Now such strange things had happened to this horse," he said, "that one day I decided to watch the stable closely. I made everything secure and put the keys in my pockets. Presently I crossed over from where I was looking, and unlocking the stable door, found the horse in an adjoining hayroom, which was padlocked."

"How the horse got there—how it got through a communicating door to pass—how it got up the steps—all these things are beyond me. If they had been done by human agency (and I hesitate to believe in 'ghosts'), I must have seen or heard something, for I was only a yard or two away. In order to surmount the stamp of the horse's hoofs on the wooden floor of the hayroom would have reached me. Besides, although the doors must have been unlocked and relocked, I had all the keys in my pockets. It is impossible that there can be duplicates."

The police have attempted to investigate the circumstances, but without any result. They are as mystified as Mr. Playfoot. Meanwhile, the scathing like alarm exists among the scathing inhabitants of Lamberhurst, Horsmonden and Goudhurst, and they hope that the "ghost," as they firmly believe it to be, will confine its operations to Furnace Mill.

TWO THOUSAND MEN LOOK FOR WIVES

The Yearly Marriage Mart in a Belgian Village—Are Welcomed by Women.

Brussels, June 17.—Two thousand bachelors from all parts of Belgium, many from France and some from Germany, swept down on the village of Ecaussinnes-Lalaing today to find brides.

It was the fourth yearly marriage mart as established by the maids of Ecaussinnes, and as there are only 97 marriageable young ladies in the quaint little place, the supply of matrimonial partners fell deplorably short of the demand. All the same, the proceedings were a great success.

The men began to arrive early in the morning, but it was toward noon before trainloads of them appeared. There were all sorts and conditions of men. One man of 72 had traveled all the way from Luxembourg to find a wife to whom he promised a dowry that would place her beyond want. There were tradesmen, clerks, mechanics, miners, laborers—indeed, no branch of trade appeared to be unrepresented.

Gay banners of welcome, triumphal arches with mottoes of encouragement for prospective husbands, figures of Cupid, and hearts pierced by arrows were to be seen everywhere; but the young ladies' proposal to name the main streets "Place des Fiancailles," "Place Conjugale," and "Place de la Concorde."

At noon the bachelors were formally welcomed at the gates of the village by the spinster committee. Last year's president and several members of the committee are now married as the result of the festivities twelve months ago, and others had been elected in their place.

All marched to the "Grande Place," where there was an open-air concert. The bands played nothing but nuptial marches and love songs. At the close an adjournment was made to the town hall, where tables which stood bowls of pink roses with such mottoes as "Hope On," "Love," "Be Trusting," and "Have Faith."

A vacant chair was left beside each girl, and at a given signal the men which was widely applauded. Dancing in the open air ended the programme of the festivities.

Hundreds of letters, many of them very amusing, were received this year from intending husbands. A railway official from Paris anxiously inquired whether in the event of not finding a girl to his taste, he could refuse to marry and would be allowed to leave quietly.

Some bachelors from Gilly, (France), explained that they were young, good looking and earning $60 a month, and were anxious to find wives from Ecaussinnes, where the girls are known for their good looks and quiet domestic life.

Not Worth the Living Sorry Condition of Many in London Today

Those who never have any stomach troubles and whose digestion is like that of an ostrich cannot possibly understand the sorry condition of many in London today.

Life does not seem worth the living; they bear up with nervous irritation, sleeplessness, pain and misery in the stomach, headaches, backaches, and have a constant fear that what they eat is going to disagree with them and cause still greater distress. While persons with a weakened stomach should have sympathy, it is much better to point out the way to cure their physical troubles and make it possible for them to once more enjoy life without thought or care as to what may be eaten.

In M-o-n-a there is a remedy that restores the lost functions of the digestive system, revives flagging nutrition, and aids in the assimilation of food. This remedy soothes and heals the irritated and inflamed walls of the stomach, strengthens the nerve centers of the digestive system, and makes a permanent and positive cure in all forms of stomach trouble, excepting cancer.

M-o-n-a costs but 50c a box. If you cannot obtain M-o-n-a of your druggist, it will be sent by mail, postpaid, on receipt of price. Write us for advice on your case from a leading stomach specialist, which will be sent free. The R. T. Booth Company, Ithaca, N. Y.

When You have a Bad Breath

Food does not tickle them enough to make them act. That's Constipation! Castor Oil, or "Physic" will help to slide out one load of trouble, but they can't help the Cause.

In fact, they weaken the Bowel-Muscles more than ever by slackening them, and by doing work for them which they should do for themselves. When your Arm-Muscles grow flabby they need Exercise, to strengthen them—not a sling to support them.

When your Bowel-Muscles grow flabby they need Exercise to strengthen them—not "Physic" to pamper them. Then carry the little ten-cent "Vest Pocket" box constantly with you, and take a Cascaret whenever you suspect you need it.

One Cascaret at a time will promptly cleanse a foul Breath, or Coated Tongue, thus proving clearly its ready, steady, sure, but mild and effective action.

A thousand dollars a year spent in amusements could not buy for you half so much hearty Happiness, solid Comfort, Cheerful Temper and Health Insurance as that little ten-cent "Vest Pocket" Box of Cascarets will bring you.

All Druggists sell them—over ten million boxes a year, for six years past. Be very careful to get the genuine, made only by the Sterling Remedy Company, and never sold in bulk. Every tablet stamped "CCC."

A sample and the famous booklet, "Course of Constipation," Free for the asking. Address Sterling Remedy Company, Chicago or New York.

BRIDGE QUESTION NOW TO THE FORE

City Is Wondering What Grand Trunk Will Do With the Cove Structure.

What does the Grand Trunk Railway intend to do with the cove bridge? This is the question which is agitating the city just now, and which marks the first time that the Grand Trunk shoe has begun to pinch the London foot.

West of the city the company has been elevating its tracks, until now it is ready to settle with the cove bridge question.

And now the city is asking the question, What will the Grand Trunk do? The company may very easily place a 20-foot trestle on top of the present bridge level to carry its tracks at the new grade, but this would mean that the objectionable abutments in the channel of the river will be allowed to remain.

And if the abutments remain, the same old difficulty in regard to the jamming of the ice in the river in springtime will be continued.

When the city and company were negotiating, the Grand Trunk agreed to remove the abutments, and put in a span which would allow the river a free channel, thus avoiding the ice blockades. But is the company going to the expense now that the negotiations are off for the present?

At the city hall the fear is expressed that the old bridge will be allowed to remain.

Mayor Judd takes no stock in the oft-repeated rumor that the company will permit to elevate its tracks in London and make the city pay a portion of the cost.

His worship states that the railway commission, even though it so desired, which is not at all likely, has not the power to touch any of London's streets to benefit the Grand Trunk or any other company.

Thus the commission could not close William street, or allow an abutment of the company's to stand a foot on the street.

Neither has the commission the power to levy an assessment on the city for something which cannot be called anything but a partial elevation of the tracks in the city.

"We have nothing to fear in this regard," his worship concluded. The old car shops bogey is being raised again in some quarters, some people professing to believe that if the city and company cannot come to terms here some ten years ago, to terms the company will remove the car shops.

It is the opinion at the city hall that the shops cannot be removed, because of the fact that the city gave the company the sum of $100,000 to bring them here some ten years ago. And further, it is argued that the city and the company will likely come to an agreement before the next municipal election, when a vote of the city on the question of an assessment for the Grand Trunk will come up.

McLACHLAN—RROOKS

Wedding of Two Young Londoners in the Windy City.

A quiet but interesting nuptial event took place on Saturday afternoon at 5 o'clock, at the residence of the bride's brother, Mr. Harry Brooks, Union avenue, Chicago, when Miss E. McLachlan, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edwin James McLachlan, of Chicago, formerly of London, were united in marriage by the Rev. W. H. Tomlin, of St. Bartholomew's Church.

The bride, who was unattended, was becomingly arrayed in cream and pink tulle, with trimmings of embroidered chiffon and gold braid, and carried a shower bouquet of white roses.

After the ceremony a dainty luncheon was partaken of, and Mrs. McLachlan will reside on Monroe street, Chicago, where they will be at home after June 25.

HAD A FAST RUN

A. O. F. Excursionists Brought Home in Quick Time.

The C. P. R. gave the A. O. F. excursionists an exceptionally fast run on the return trip from Detroit on Saturday night.

The train, which comprised four cars, was hauled by Engine 203, Engineer Wm. Kerr, and Fireman J. Rodgers. The run from Windsor to London was made in 2 hours and 40 minutes, but as five full stops were made, the actual running time was about 2 hours and 5 minutes, or 53 miles an hour.

The train was in charge of Conductor G. Croteau, and the A. O. F. excursionists were more than pleased with the run.

HOW TO CLEANSE THE SYSTEM—Farnell's Vegetable Pills are the result of scientific study of the effects of extracts of certain roots and herbs upon the digestive organs. Their use has been demonstrated in many instances that they regulate the action of the liver and the kidneys, purify the blood and carry off all morbid accumulations from the system. They are a safe and effective, and their action is mild and beneficial.

In Japan fish have to be sold alive, and they are hawked through the streets in tanks.

PORTION OF WALK WAS TORN UP

Was Being Laid Without Gravel Foundation, and Engineer Got Wise.

Ald. Saunders located a case of "sighting the job" on a sidewalk on Cheapside street today, and as a result a portion of the walk was torn up for a block at the expense of the contractor, William Anthistle.

Sunday afternoon the alderman was walking in the north end when he was approached by a citizen who informed him that a strip of the walk was being put down without any gravel under it. The alderman visited the block mentioned on Cheapside street, and there he found that a strip of six inches for the entire length of the block was being laid without a foundation.

It seems that the subcontractor, named Hill, had excavated for the sidewalk only to a width of 4 feet 6 inches, whereas it should have been a five-foot walk. When the inspector came along he ordered the walk be laid the full width, and Hill dug out the extra six inches. It was after this that the mischief was done. The cement men came along and they simply spread the cement over the entire surface, without regard to where there was no foundation, as no gravel had been put in where the extra six inches had been dug.

Ald. Saunders notified the engineer's department, and Mr. Graydon at once ordered the walk to be torn up and rebuilt.

Why the two inspectors employed by the city did not notice the way the job was being sighted, is a mystery to everybody.

Ald. Went went up with Ald. Saunders to Cheapside street, and a rather warm argument ensued between one of the aldermen and one of the inspectors. The latter was very wrath when the alderman criticized him, and he offered to quit at once if his inspection did not suit. Inspectors being very scarce just now, nobody was discharged.

ALL GED SILK THEF IN COURT

Gave Fake Reason for Getting Tickets Changed After the Alleged Theft Here.

Joseph Greenbaum, the alleged thief, who was arrested at Windsor some time ago and brought back to this city to stand trial on a charge of stealing silk from R. C. Struthers & Co., appeared in the dock at the police court this morning for a preliminary hearing. Greenbaum waived election for the present.

Detective Eggleston was in Windsor on Saturday securing witnesses for the prosecution, and today some of them did not appear, so after hearing three witnesses, the case was adjourned until Friday.

The first witness called was Charles Meager, of the Canadian express office at Windsor. He told of Greenbaum coming to the office, at 5 o'clock on the evening of June 1, wanting to ship a valise to Niagara Falls, and telling him (Meager) that it was at the G. T. R. station. Greenbaum gave him the check and the address to which he wanted the valise shipped. Not long after the prisoner left the office P. C. Sergeant Nash came in and requested him not to forward the valise. When cross-examined by Mr. E. Meredith, who appeared for the prisoner, witness said that to the best of his knowledge the prisoner was the man who entered his office and wanted the valise shipped. He said that the first he saw of the valise was when it was in the hands of the police force, was then called. He told of receiving a message from Chief of Police Williams, of this city, requesting him to take possession of a piece of baggage and giving him the number of the check. He accordingly went to the G. T. R. station where he found the valise. He accordingly placed it in possession of the customs officer for safe-keeping, and requested that if anyone should call for it the police should be notified. Before long Nash received a message saying that an express man had called for the valise. He hurried to the station, and the express man pointed out the prisoner as the man to whom the valise belonged. Nash followed the prisoner down to the ferry, and arrested him while on the way across the river. Sergeant Nash identified the valise produced in court as the one he had seized, and he also identified the silk as those he had seen when he examined the valise. Besides the silks and the two bags, was found a bill head, with "Joseph Greenbaum, jobber and general merchant, 926 North Marshall street, Philadelphia," printed upon it.

When cross-examined by Mr. Meredith, Nash admitted that the boat was near the American shore when he arrested the prisoner.

Chief of Police Maines, of Port Huron, was called. He told of receiving a message from the police of this city to be on the lookout for a man and woman who would arrive from London about 9 o'clock, and to search them and their baggage for some silk. Accordingly he went to meet the train, and found the prisoner and a woman sitting one on either side of the car. He searched them and found none of the goods described, although the woman had in her possession a bag containing a valuable lacework dress. He did not find any baggage checks on them, and they insisted that they had no baggage. He questioned the prisoner and he said that he was on the way from Tonawanda to Chicago where he intended to start in business. When asked why he had come to Windsor and then had them changed, he said that he had come to Port Huron, Greenbaum said that after getting the tickets he found that it was shorter by way of Port Huron to Chicago, than by way of Windsor. Finding none of the goods he allowed the prisoners to go.

The case was adjourned until Friday, when the rest of the witnesses will be heard.

GOES TO CORK

Col. Culver, U. S. consul in this city, for several years past, has been notified of his appointment as consul at Cork, Ireland.

The London consulate is to be closed on June 30, and Col. Culver will likely leave for Ireland in a month—possibly not for two months.

FOUR WERE CONVICTED

Result of the Crown's Work at the June Sessions.

At the recent June sessions, nine criminal cases were disposed of. Four convictions were secured, four of the accused were acquitted, and one case resulted in a disagreement of the jury. The list was:

King vs. K. Denley, H. Denley and Westcott—Acquittal, no evidence being offered.

King vs. Johnston Peters and John Alexander—Guilty of receiving stolen goods.

King vs. E. McGarvey—Guilty of stealing from W. T. Dunn.

King vs. E. McGarvey—Guilty of stealing from E. C. Wright & Co.

King vs. Lortie and Brophy—Stealing from Silas Chatham.

King vs. Garner Westfold—Stealing watches. Not guilty.

King vs. Thomas Tuill—Assault on do.

Dyspepsia

Don't think you can cure your dyspepsia in any other way than by strengthening and toning your stomach.

That is what is incapable of performing its functions, probably because you have imposed upon it in one way or another over and over again.

You should take Hood's Sarsaparilla. It strengthens and tones the stomach, and permanently cures dyspepsia and all stomach troubles. Accept no substitute.

Baking Powder Proof

It is an easy matter to determine the relative merits of baking powders by testing them yourself. When baking with Strong's Baking Powder in half the baking, and mark it so that you can identify it afterwards. Do the same with the other powder, and in the other half, and notice the results. If you don't think Strong's Baking Powder the best now, you will have no doubt of it after putting it to a practical test. Besides, it only costs half as much as any other pure powder costs, 25c pound.

grievous bodily harm—Disagreement of jury.

King vs. Thomas W. Jones—House-breaking. Not guilty; alibi proven.

GARDENERS IN COURT

One Charges the Other With Grossly Insulting Language.

Robert Cartledge, a young market gardener, of the Hamilton road, was charged before Judge Chittick this morning by his neighbor, Geo. Rawlings, with using grossly insulting language.

The two families have not been on the best of terms of late. Rawlings swore that early on Thursday morning last, while the dew was wet due, Cartledge passed Rawlings' house, and gave Rawlings a deaf and dumb salutation that Rawlings did not like. The latter offered to hand Cartledge a few, but the latter made a few highly-odorous remarks, and he was summoned. Cartledge acknowledged the deaf and dumb play, but denied the loud language.

Judgment was reserved until Wednesday morning.

'FRISCO SAILORS IN FATAL FIGHT

Lockout of Union Tars Starts Deadly Shooting Affray at the Golden Gate.

San Francisco, June 18.—As the result of the lockout and the trouble existing between the shipowners and union sailors in this port, one union sailor was shot and killed, and three were wounded last night. The dead man is Andrew Kellner.

The shooting occurred when a launch occupied by about fifteen union sailors was fired on from the schooner National City as it lay near the Union Iron works.

According to the men who were in the launch, several volleys were fired at them without warning when they were within a few feet of the schooner. It is said that it was the intention of the union sailors to make an attempt to have the non-union crew of the National City desert the vessel which was scheduled to sail on June 18.

As a part of the plan to carry out the lockout, a launch was engaged and filled with volunteers from the Sailors' Union. The trip was made with the utmost secrecy, but it is evident that the sailors on the National City were expecting a visit.

SALE OF THE RIGHT STUFF

Good Samaritan Act of Two Young Ladies in Railway Depot.

It happened in the Brush Street Depot, Detroit, Saturday night. A large number of excursionists were there, waiting for the return train to London.

Mrs. Topp (colored), of 60 William street, this city, was sitting in the waiting-room tired out after her holiday in the City of the Straits. All at once she became aware of the fact that a purse was not in its accustomed place.

It contained every cent of her money, London, several bills and some silver. When it dawned upon Mrs. Topp that she was in a strange city without a cent and no ticket to get home she was greatly excited. Then there ensued a scene of activity, searching for the missing purse, which attracted the attention of everyone in the waiting-room. The purse could not be found.

Mrs. Topp then remembered the hurried exit of two small boys who had been sitting next to her. One of them had stooped down and picked something off the floor, after which they disappeared.

Many people essayed a line of little consolation which, of course, was unavailing.

Presently two stylishly-dressed young ladies appeared upon the scene. They were Miss H. Pulver, of Detroit, and Miss Mabel English, of Windsor, and they showed themselves to be the made of the right stuff.

When they learned of Mrs. Topp's predicament, there was something doing right away. They saw what they considered their plain duty and they set about to perform it. Without a moment's hesitation the two began taking up a collection from the other passengers.

The first drew forth some silver from their own purses and then they called for contributions from the crowd. Everybody came up, some with dimes and many with quarters. The girls wended their way throughout the station calling on everyone. Men especially were liberal givers.

The earnest pleas of the two pretty girls hypnotized the crowd, and soon they had procured a ticket to London. Returning to Mrs. Topp they handed over to her the railroad ticket and also a handful of silver, which was left over from the payment of the fare to London.

Mrs. Topp was overjoyed to overcome the kindness of all these English and French, throughout the greater part of May. There have also been brief spells of remarkably low temperature in parts of Italy and Spain.

THE EUROPEAN CROPS

Unseasonably Cold Weather Throughout Great Britain and France.

Washington, June 18.—The European crop situation is told in the following June summary of conditions abroad issued by the department of agriculture: Unseasonably cold, gloomy weather has prevailed in Northwestern Europe, especially in Great Britain and France, throughout the greater part of May. There have also been brief spells of remarkably low temperature in parts of Italy and Spain.

SEDDON'S FUNERAL.

Wellington, N. Z., June 17.—The steamer Ovestry Grange, bearing the body of the late Premier Seddon, who died on board the vessel, shortly after it left Sydney, June 10, for New Zealand, arrived here at 11 o'clock Saturday night. Despite the lateness of the hour, thousands of persons were at the wharf and witnessed the landing of the casket.

Today the body is lying in state in the Government building.

The funeral will take place here next Thursday.

INCREASE FOR STREET RAILWAY MEN.

Ottawa, June 18.—Commencing this month, a new schedule of wages has gone into effect for the motormen and conductors of the Ottawa Electric Railway, giving the men an increase of 1 cent per hour.

The new schedule is 10 1/2 cents per hour for the first year, with 15 1/2 cents for Sunday work; 17 1/2 cents and 19 1/2 cents per hour for second year; men, and 15 1/2 and 20 1/2 cents for those in the service over two years.

For men employed on snow sweepers, pavers, etc., it will be 19 1/2 cents per hour for day work and 21 1/2 cents for night work.

One year ago the company made an increase of 1 cent per hour. This new advance has caused general satisfaction among the men.

NATAL REBELS SCATTERED.

Durban, Natal, June 17.—Two of Chief Sigamanda's sons have surrendered to the Natalian forces, and nearly all of Bambata's followers were killed in the recent fighting.

Colonel MacKenzie, of the Natalian contingent, has given the rebels, who are leaderless and scattered far and wide, until June 19, to surrender, saying that otherwise they will be shot if captured.

Redeeming the Coupons

The big announcement of Bode's "Mental Pepin" free distribution that appeared on Saturday interested every newspaper reader in London. These coupons are appearing daily up to the end of the present week, and by cutting them out one may go to any store in London where gum is sold, and receive a package of this valuable product absolutely free. Already the stores are beginning to feel the effect of it, and the result will undoubtedly be a widespread and permanent demand for this article.

LONDON AND DISTRICT

—Miss Edythe Fewings, of St. Thomas, is visiting with Mrs. E. R. Older, London South, for a few days.

—A broken trolley wire at the corner of Dundas and Waterloo streets blocked four or five lines of cars for half an hour Saturday night.

—Capt. Burton De Forest Grant, of Goderich, Ont., who is ill with acute bronchitis at St. Luke's Hospital, Ottawa, is convalescing, but he will not be able to join his regiment at the London camp this year.

—American dispatches announce that Col. Culver, United States consul here, will likely be appointed to the United States consulate at Cork, Ireland. The colonel has as yet received nothing official on the subject.

—Miss Jean Woolverton, one of the vocal graduates of Harding Hall, and pupil of Mr. J. W. Fetherston, sang Brigs' "Hold Thou My Hand," in the Wellington Street Methodist Church last evening very sweetly and expressively.

—The telephone long distance line from London to Thorndale has been supplemented by a toll office at Ballymore, just completed by the Bell Telephone Company. The rate for a three-minute conversation from Ballymore to London is 10 cents, and from Thorndale to Ballymore 15 cents.

—The Bell Telephone Company of Canada has opened a toll office at Glanworth, Ont., on its long distance line from London to St. Thomas. From Glanworth to London the rate for a three-minute conversation is 10 cents, and from Glanworth to St. Thomas 15 cents.

—Harding Hall students have invariably presented an interesting closing programme. This year there are between fifteen and twenty candidates for graduation at the college and Central Conservatory. His Worship Mayor Judd will present the diplomas at the commencement in the Auditorium, on Thursday evening.

SUNDAY FIRE ALARM.

A pair of curtains caught fire at the residence of Ellis Perry, 428 Simcoe street, Sunday morning, and the firemen were called. Other than the loss of the curtains, there was no damage.

FORESTERS AT CHURCH.

Representatives of all the lodges of the I. O. F. in this city to the number of about 35, went to Lambeth yesterday afternoon and took part in the services of a special Foresters' Sunday in the Lambeth Methodist Church. The sermon was preached by Rev. Alfred Brown, of Akin Street Methodist Church, who took as his text, "Bear Ye One Another's Burdens."

THURLOW-TUCKER.

The residence of Mrs. Mary Tucker, 899 Grey street, was on Saturday the scene of a pretty June wedding, when her daughter, Miss Kittie, was united in marriage to Mr. Emmerson A. Thurlow, of Chatham. Rev. R. S. Howard, of Christ Church, officiated. Mr. and Mrs. Thurlow left in the morning for points east and on their return will reside in Chatham.

BELTZ

jured Friday afternoon while driving through the village. He was seated on a high box on top of a loaded rig, and, when crossing the tracks of the Southwestern Traction Company, lost his balance and went over with the box. He fell with his back on the tracks, and though no bones were broken, was badly hurt.

PRESENTED WITH A PIPE.

W. H. Greenwood, who was recently appointed to the managing editorship of the London Free Press, was presented with a pipe by the mechanical staff of the Free Press on Saturday morning. Several speeches were made, testifying to the esteem in which he had been held by the staff. Mr. Greenwood made a suitable reply.

DEATH OF S. MASON.

The death of Samuel Mason took place on Saturday at the family residence, 482 Simcoe street. Deceased had been a resident of this city for the last sixteen years, having moved here from Port Stanley, and was well known throughout Elgin County. He is survived by his wife, one son and one daughter—Alexander, of Chapeau, and Mrs. Charles Finchamp, of this city. OFFICERS FOR THE "Y.S."

At the monthly meeting of the Y. W. C. A. board of directors, a letter from Mrs. Sheffield was read, thanking the board for the beautiful gift presented to her of the removal from London. The following were elected officers for the coming year: Honorary president, Mrs. Jewell; president, Miss Fraser; first vice-president, Miss Jennie Moore; secretary, Miss Little; treasurer, Miss E. Davis.

WAS NEARLY RUN OVER.

What might have proved a serious accident ended very fortunately for Mr. Byron C. Simmons, of Brighton street. On Saturday afternoon he drove to Langarth street to have tea with friends there, and tied his horse in the back yard. The animal became tangled in its tether, broke the post and ran away. In endeavoring to stop it Mr. Simmons had a very narrow escape from being run over. After running to King and Richmond streets the horse was caught and taken to its stable, when it was found to have a bad cut on the left fore leg and bad bruises on the hind leg.

A SUDDEN SUMMONS

Richmond Street Lady Dies on Her Return from Shopping.

The death of Mrs. Ann Tibbs, wife of Mr. Henry Tibbs, of 178 Richmond street, took place very suddenly on Saturday night. Deceased had been doing some shopping, and about 11 o'clock she returned home. After talking to those in the house for some time, Mrs. Tibbs was preparing to retire, when suddenly she became faint. She started for a neighbor's house, a few doors distant, but before she could reach the house she fell. Dr. Teasdale was summoned, but the unfortunate lady passed away before his arrival. Death is thought to have been due to heart failure. The funeral will take place on Tuesday afternoon to Woodland Cemetery.

CANADIAN FIRM FIRST

Nordheimer's, Limited, Meet With Success With One-Price System.

Nordheimer's, Limited, have proved their ability to introduce a one-price system in piano-selling and make it a success. This is an innovation in America, at least, and was considered by many as doubtful when undertaken a year or so ago. But the readiness with which the Canadian people recognized the fairness of the method, and the immense sales that have followed, show that it certainly will be no failure. Of course, the direct selling from the factory through staff members is only made it possible for the firm to give greater piano value for the money than companies doing business through commission agents or local dealers.

The numerous sales and the ever-increasing popularity are no doubt also due to the superiority of tone to be found in the Nordheimer piano. Years of trial have shown that the wonderful Nordheimer tone never fails. It is a joy almost forever.

Lovers of music thoroughly appreciate its beauties, and during the present month especially numerous sales are reported from every place in Canada, the Nordheimer taking a suitable and a favorite form of wedding gift.

CORPUS CHRISTI IN CATHOLIC CHURCHES

First Communion Administered to Large Classes in St. Peter's Cathedral and St. Mary's.

The feast of Corpus Christi was celebrated in the Catholic Churches of the city yesterday, the event being marked by services of an especially impressive character in the Cathedral and St. Mary's Church.

In St. Peter's.

In St. Peter's Cathedral Sunday morning at 8:30, 40 girls and 40 boys made their first communion. The girls were all dressed in white and wore white veils, while the boys were clothed in black, and wore white ribbons on their arms.

They were in charge of priests and nuns, and as they marched into the church they sang appropriate hymns.

Mass at 10:30 was celebrated by Rev. Father McConnell, assisted by Father O'Neil, as deacon, and Father White as subdeacon.

At the close, the blessed sacrament was carried in procession around the church and grounds. In the procession were the priests and acolytes, the children who had made their first communion, the members of the different Catholic societies and many of the congregation.

In the afternoon the communion class met in the church and renewed their baptismal vows, after which they were enrolled in the scapular.

Congregational singing was a feature of the services in St. Peter's yesterday.

In St. Mary's.

In St. Mary's Church at 9 o'clock, 39 children—15 girls and 24 boys—made their first communion. Mass was celebrated by Rev. Father Tobin, who also administered communion to the class.

At 10:30 mass was celebrated by Father McKee, and at the close the blessed sacrament was carried in procession around the church followed by a number of acolytes and the communion class.

The sacrament was exposed on the altar all day, and many visitations were made by the members of the congregation. In the evening there was congregational singing, followed by the benediction.

AN APPRECIATED LEADER

Presentation by Congregation of Zion Methodist Church.

The congregation of Zion Methodist Church (Siloma Circuit) the other evening presented Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Harding, of Thorndale, with an address and a pair of hand-carved oak chairs. The presentation took place at Mr. Harding's residence. About 50 of the congregation were present, and the chair was occupied by Mr. T. J. Gust. The address was read by Mr. George Fitzgerald, and Mr. George Carie made the presentation.

Mr. Harding has been a choir leader in Zion Church for some time, and the congregation took this means of showing their appreciation of his untiring efforts in behalf of the choir.

COUNCIL OF WOMEN; PAST YEAR'S WORK

Other Societies Benefitted—A Tribute to Mr. Jewell—Officers Chosen.

The annual meeting of the London Local Council of Women was held on Friday afternoon and evening in the Y. M. C. A. parlors, with a good representation of officers and members at both sessions.

The annual reports of the officers showed that many questions of great interest and public utility had been discussed and considerable progress made in dealing with them. The reports of the affiliated societies were of more than usual interest, all showing good work done in their respective circles, and several of them bore valuable testimony to the great assistance the council had been to them by giving information and arousing interest in the work of the different organizations.

Special reference was made to the success of the effort to obtain a Victorian Order nurse for the city, and to the value of her services. Two hundred and eighty-one visits had been paid since February.

The council has long been working towards the better protection of feeble-minded women, and as a result, Dr. Helen McMurphy, of Toronto, has been appointed by the Provincial Government to take a census of such persons, with a view to assisting the Government to come to a conclusion as to the best method of dealing with them.

Attention was drawn to certain articles appearing in our daily papers, the council heartily endorsing them. The Free Press advocated the better protection of feeble-minded women, and the food exposed for sale, a question which the council brought before the health authorities early in 1902, and The Advertiser urged the necessity of some provision for suitable bathing and swimming places for children and others.

It was decided to offer two prizes for the best work in domestic science in any of the city schools. One public school has during the year obtained the privilege of lessons, and it is hoped that before the year closes there may be others to compete with the girls of the Collegiate Institute.

The business to come before the annual meeting of the National Council, which will be held in Hamilton in October, was considered. The programme for this meeting is most interesting and varied in its character.

Resolutions of sympathy were passed to those who have been bereaved by the deaths of the late Thomas McCorkick and George F. Jewell, special reference being made to their many acts of benevolence and ready assistance in all charitable undertakings.

The election of officers resulted as follows: Honorary presidents, Mesdames Moore, Sage and Crowther; president, Mrs. Boomer; vice-presidents, Mesdames Murray, Moorhouse, McMechan, Wood, George Marshall, E. Leonard, J. Cameron; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Yarker; recording secretary, Mrs. Gahan; treasurer, Miss McNamara.

RATE WAR NOT EVEN RUMORED

Pere Marquette Officials Say No Fight on With Traction—That Bridge Scare.

The rumor which has been given currency to the effect that a rate war between the Pere Marquette Railway and the Southwestern Traction Company, as the result of the fares put in to force between St. Thomas and London by the latter road, is laughed at by the P. M. officials.

"We never take any notice of the electrical roads," an official high up in the passenger department said to The Advertiser today. "A rate war is not even at the rumor stage. We know nothing of it."

"Our fare to St. Thomas now is 45 cents, with a return fare of 75 cents, and these fares will stand. But as in former years, the Saturday to Monday, or week-end excursions, will continue. The fare for these trips is a one-way fare, plus ten cents, except to Port Stanley. This fare will remain the same as formerly, 70 cents."

A Matter of Business.

"In improving our service on the L. and P. S. R., we have not been actuated by desire to beat the Pere Marquette. We are simply following business methods, and are trying to give people the best possible service, so that we may make money out of the road."

"Until the 25th of this month, when our summer schedule goes into effect, we will continue to follow the same plan."

HERE'S YOUR CAR FOR THE PICNIC

Time-Table and Sports of the Big School Children's Outing to Springbank.

Preparations for the school children's picnic at Springbank on Wednesday next are going merrily on.

The sports committee have completed the sports programme. There will be events for youngsters of all ages, and there will be amusements to please all.

Music will be plentiful, and everything that can add to the joy and comfort of the parents and children is being looked after by the committees in charge.

It is announced that Mrs. Leonard, regent of the local branch of the Daughters of the Empire, will present the Ross rifle, which was given by the order, and which was won by Sergt. McBride, some time ago. At the time of the sergeant's success, the rifle had not arrived, but now its presentation will be made a feature of the big picnic.

There will be a game of baseball between the teachers of the Collegiate Institute and those of the public schools. That this match will be a good one goes without saying, for the teachers are actuated by a deadly rivalry to smite each other from a baseball standpoint.

Time-Table.
