Christmas. BY PHEBE CARY. O Time by holy prophets long foretold, Time waited for by saints in days of old,

O sweet, auspicious morn When Christ, the Lord was born! Again the fixed changes of the year Have brought that season to the world most dear.

When angels, all aflame, Bringing good tidings came. Again we think of her, the meek, the mild, The dove-eyed mother of the holy child,

The chosen, and the best, Among all women blest. We think about the shepherds, who dismayed, Fell on their faces, trembling and afraid, Until they heard the cry,

Glory to God on high. And we remember those who from afar Followed the changing glory of the star

To where its light was shed Upon the sacred head ; And how each trembling, awe-struck worshipper

And spread them on the ground In reverence profound.

We think what joy it would have been to share In their high privilege who came to bear Sweet spice and costly gem To Christ, in Bethlehem.

And in that thought we half forget that He Is wheresoe'er we seek him earnestly; Still filling every place With sweet abounding grace

And though in garments of the flesh, as then No more he walks this sinful earth with men, The poor, to him most dear, Are always with us here.

And He saith, Inasmuch as ye shall take Good to these little ones for my dear sake, In that same measure ye Have brought it unto me.

Therefore, O men in prosperons homes who live Having all blessings earthly wealth can give Remember their sad doom For whom there is no room-

No room in any home, in any bed, And spare from treasures great To help their low estate.

Mothers, whose sons fill all your homes with Think of the sons that once made homes a bright.

Now laid in sleep profound On some sad battle-ground! And into darkened dwellings come with cheer

With pitving hand to wipe the falling tear. Comfort for Christ's dear sake

Think of the child who stands To-day with empty hands!

Go fill them up, and you will also fill Their empty hearts, that be so cold and still, And brighten longing eyes With grateful, glad surprise.

May all who have, at this blest season seek The precious little ones, the poor and weak, In joyful, sweet accord, Thus lending to the Lord.

Yes, Crucified Redeemer, who didst give Thy toil, thy tears, thy life, that we might live, Thy spirit grant that we May live one day for Thee!

Children learn to read by being in the presence of books. The love of knowledge comes with reading, and grows upon it. And the love of knowledge in a young mind is almost a warrant against the in-

Holland is one of the queerest countries under the sun. It should be called Odd-land or contrary-land, for in nearly every thing it is different from other parts of the world. In the first place a large portion of the country is lower than the level of the sea. Great dykes, or bulwarks, have been erected at a heavy cost of money and labour to keep the ocean where it belongs. On certain parts of the coast it sometimes leans with all its weight against the land, and it is as much as the poor country can do to stand the pressure. Sometimes the dykes give way, or spring a leak, and the most disastrous results ensue. They are high and wide, and the tops of some of them are covered with buildings and trees. They have even fine public roads upon them, from which horses may look down upon wayside cottages. Often the keels of floating ships are higher than the roofs of the dwellings. The stork, clattering to her young on the honsepeak, may feel that her nest is lifted far out of danger, but the croaking frog in neighbouring bulrushes is nearer the stars than she

Old Santa Claus ceases to urge along. His fleet-footed steeds with voice and thong. Well laden with treasures from store and shop, He hitches his team to the chimney top.

As merry as he when the sun goes down.

At midnight, when childhood in slumber seems To gather sweet flowers from the land of dreams Then on to the roof of the house he'll hop. And slyly descend from the chimney top. O, Santa Claus, &c.

On tiptoe he stands on the peaceful spot. Where childhood reposes in crib or cot; He fills up the stocking, he crams the sock, With candies and toys for the household flock. O. Santa Claus, &c.

His favors all scattered, he hastens back, The way that he came, -up the sooty track ; And never his mission of love shall stop, While there is a house with a chimney top. O. Santa Claus, &c.

Now busy as bees in their honied hives. The little folks gather when morn arrives, The merry eye sparkles, the sweet voice rings, As stockings are searched for the wond'rous things.

O, Santa Claus, &c.

They wonder, when bringing his dainty freight, He never comes in by the door or gate ; And hope he will never be forced to stop. And die in the smoke of the chimney top. O, Santa Claus, &c.

Another great superiority of Radway's Pills over all other pills in general use, is the fact of their wonderful medicinal strength, being highly concentrated. One to six of these pills will act more thoroughly, and cleanse the alimentary canal, without producing oramps, spasms, piles, tenesmus, etc., than any other Pills or Purp. Medicine in use.

THE GREAT WANT SUPPLIED. It is a well known fact that Physicians have long sought to discover a vegetable purgative as a substitute for Calomel, and Christmas morning dawned clear and bright.
