

A deep silence has settled on the wood. Across the hill a grey grouse is drumming on the grey trunk of a fallen tree. The grey squirrel is gathering nuts for the winter. The young deer has changed his summer coat for one of a more sombre hue; red brown to match the autumn leaves. Now the leaves are falling, unveiling the forest and opening long avenues through which we get glimpses of jumping deer.

DIVER LOCATES SUNKEN STEAMER IN SAN FRANCISCO HARBOR

Steamer Which Sank in 1901, Causing Heavy Loss of Life, Also $2,000,000 of Bullion, Believed to Have Been Found by Diver While Making Test.

[Canadian Press Despatch.] SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 18.—What may be the wreck of the Steamship City of Rio de Janeiro, which was sunk inside the entrance to the Golden Gate, February 22, 1901, with a loss of 122 lives and a million valued at $2,000,000, was located yesterday by Herman Stelzner, a diver, who made the descent in 128 feet of water in a diving device which he invented. Incidentally Stelzner set a new mark for divers in his descent of 128 feet. The previous greatest depth attained is said to be 92 feet.

In describing his descent, Stelzner said: "The tide was ebbing fast on the surface, but below there seemed to be the centre of an eddy where the water was practically still. The ship must have been carried inward until it reached the eddy and has remained there ever since." The vessel is supposed to have torn her bottom out on the Mile Rock before the night was built there. Stelzner leaves to-day for Japan, where he has a contract to search for lost vessels, but a San Francisco man who has bought the new diving device will continue to seek the treasure in the wreck.

Memorial To The Battle Of Nations

Conflict Ended Just One Hundred Years Ago—Memorable Scenes at the Function.

LEIPZIG, Saxony, Oct. 18.—A stirring note of patriotism was sounded here to-day when a number of people from all parts of Germany, Austria, Russia, Sweden and many foreign countries gathered for the dedication of the memorial of the "battle of nations," which ended just 100 years ago in a victory for the allies over the French and resulted in the emancipation of Germany.

Saxony, to whose efforts the construction of the monument was due. Standing near him were a number of foreign princes representing the rulers of the countries whose troops had formed part of the victorious allied army. They included the Archduke Francis Ferdinand of Austria, the Grand Duke Cyril of Russia and Prince William of Sweden.

One of the most striking features of the day's exercises was the arrival of the last runners in a series of relays bearing banners and greetings from every quarter of the German Empire, also from Washington and from Brazil, which they presented to the King of Saxony, who dedicated the monument.

The weather was very fine and favorable for the carrying out of the long program of festivities, which comprised services at the Austrian memorial to the commander of the allied army, Field Marshal Prince Karl Philipp von Schwarzenberg, and a Te Deum at the Russian memorial church, to which the bodies of the Russian dead were transferred from the battlefield.

INSURGENTS ARE OUSTED

By a Trick on the Part of the Federals in Mexico.

[Canadian Press Despatch.] DUGLAS, Ariz., Oct. 18.—General Pedro Ojeda of the federals, by a trick, has succeeded in ousting insurgents from the vicinity of Guaymas, according to a version of recent fighting which reached the city last night. It was reported that the rebels have been driven from Guaymas, a suburb of the gulphort. The government forces, it was reported, had left Guaymas by boat to the assistance of Mazatlan. Under cover of darkness the federals retook and made a night attack on insurgent positions.

As To Mixed Marriages

[Canadian Press Despatch.] MONTREAL, Oct. 18.—News from Rome announces that the holy see of which His Holiness, the pope is prefect, has ordered all over the world an investigation on mixed marriages by requesting the opinion of all the bishops of the world on favoring such marriages in certain countries. An affirmative answer from all the hierarchy of Canada would mean the abolition of the famous ne temere decree. The inquiry is ordered in a letter signed by Cardinal Rampolla in which the following questions are asked:

- 1. What was, ten years ago, and what is to-day in your diocese, the number of Catholics, non-Catholics and non-baptized?
- 2. What is the average number of mixed marriages, which have been contracted or attempted in the last ten years with or without dispensation?
- 3. Have the precautions such as prescribed been omitted or refused, and in how many cases?
- 4. In other cases what results have such precautions brought, the one concerning the education of all the children in the Catholic religion especially?
- 5. Finally what rites, especially af-

CONVENTION OF TEACHERS CLOSED

Suggested That Only One Mark be Deducted for Mis-spelled Words.

The annual convention of the Brant County and City of Brantford Teachers' Institutes closed with a session held yesterday afternoon. The convention was held in the new Y. M. C. A. building.

Mr. B. T. Dickson, Paris, delegate to the last session of the Ontario Educational Association, gave a very interesting report. A resolution was passed that the Educational Department be petitioned to allow only one mark to be deducted for each mis-spelled word at the Entrance Examination. At the present time two marks are deducted. The marks deducted because of mis-spelled words is often the cause of pupils falling.

At a special meeting of the public school board held last night, the board decided to have a school erected on the corner of Marlborough and Rawdon streets. The school will contain 20 rooms, and will cost between $38,000 and $40,000. Taylor & Bodley, architects, were authorized to prepare plans. The school is very badly needed, and in order to get the work under way early next Spring, the foundation will be put in this fall.

The school when erected will, to a degree, relieve the present congested condition prevailing in the public schools of the city. The building will be a very fine structure and will be a great improvement to a fast growing section of the city.

Those present at the meeting were: Dr. Ballachey, Ashton, Watson, Inspector Kilmer, and Messrs A. K. Bunnell, Arthur Goodbeck, D. Lyle, Harvey Clement and M. E. B. Curcliffe. Taylor and Bodley will no doubt do good work, as Mr. Taylor in particular, has had much experience in the construction of schools.

THE BRITISH PRESS AND THE AIRSHIP DISASTER

LONDON, Oct. 18.—The explosion of the great Zeppelin airship near Berlin yesterday, has called forth from practically all of the London newspapers sympathetic comment, together with the prediction that the disaster may terminate aerostatic experiments with craft of this type. The Times pays a tribute to the Germans by saying: "Nothing reveals more admirably the stuff of which the Germans are made than the manner in which they have borne the long series of accidents which have attended their efforts to conquer the air."

C. P. R. Offices Ordered Closed

[Canadian Press Despatch.] VIENNA, Oct. 18.—The police to-day closed the offices of the Canadian Pacific Railway Company in this city and throughout Austria, after impounding all the books and correspondence. This action was taken as a sequel to the arrest on Thursday of Samuel Altman, the company's agent, in connection with a charge that he had assisted Austrians to evade their military service by emigrating to Canada without passports.

THE NEW PUBLIC SCHOOL BUILDING

THE FAMOUS CHAPEL CAR

Arrives in Boston Where Big Catholic Missionary Congress Opens.

[Canadian Press Despatch.] BOSTON, Oct. 18.—The famous chapel car "St. Peter," attached to a regular train from Washington, brought to Boston to-day Archbishop Bonzano, papal delegate to the United States and special pontifical delegate to the Catholic missionary congress which opens to-morrow. The chapel car, part of which is fitted up for religious services, and the other part for living quarters, is used by the Catholic church extension society for holding services in places where there are no churches.

Many of the 200 clerical delegates and 1500 lay delegates arrived during the day from all parts of the country. The object of the congress is to study missionary conditions in this country and elsewhere and to make plans for carrying on the work of the church extension society with improved methods.

BITTER FEELING OVER NEW SHIPPING LAW

LONDON, Oct. 18.—Ship owners in London and authorities on international shipping law interviewed yesterday spoke in the strongest terms against the United States seaman's bill. "Ship owners generally," the Morning Post says, "have no doubt that the aim of the measure is to enable men to desert freely and so induce them to join the United States mercantile marine."

"It is no use pretending that it is anything else," said an authority on shipping regulations. "For a long time crimps in America have had too much their own way, and now this measure comes at a time when ship owners are anxious that American legislation should do something to stop desertion, which is already far too prevalent at American ports."

"I call this measure an act of international dishonesty." If every country did what the United States proposes—that is, break a contract between the owners of a ship and the crew as soon as she enters an American port—we should be plunged in a state of anarchy.

On the other hand, Havelock Wilson, President of the National Sailors' and Firemen's Union, defended the provisions of the bill, which proposes to abolish the arrest of seamen for desertion. His title for the measure was "the right to quit bill."

INCREASED SALARIES

EDMONTON, Alb., Oct. 18.—The legislature was in committee of supply on the estimates yesterday. The salary of the Premier has been increased $100 and of each of the cabinet ministers $1,000, as well as that of the leader of the Opposition. Including a seasonal indemnity of $1,500, the premier will now get $1,000 per year, other ministers $6,000 and the leader of the opposition $4,000. Last evening the Speaker and Mrs. Fisher held the annual reception in the legislative hall.

MRS. EMILINE PANKHURST TO BE SENT BACK TO FRANCE

She is Held Pending an Examination by a Special Board of Enquiry—Some Features of an Interesting Event of Woman Suffrage.

[Canadian Press Despatch.] NEW YORK, Oct. 18.—Mrs. Emeline Pankhurst, the English militant suffragette leader, who arrived here to-day for a lecture tour, was ordered deported by the immigration authorities within a little less than three hours after the vessel upon which she came had docked. The special board of enquiry into her case voted not to admit her to the country under bond, but to send her back to France forthwith.

Later, Mrs. Pankhurst, the militant suffragette leader, upon landing in America to-day was taken to Ellis Island to appear before a special board of enquiry which will ascertain whether her conviction in England was for a crime involving moral turpitude. Whether Mrs. Pankhurst would be allowed to remain in this country depended upon the finding of the board.

NEW YORK, Oct. 18.—Mrs. Emeline Pankhurst, English militant suffragette leader, arriving in New York to-day, was denied admission to the country until a special board of enquiry could determine whether her prison record in England was such that she should be excluded from the United States.

Mrs. Pankhurst was detained aboard the liner Provence when it docked. A special tug was commissioned to take her to Ellis Island. She was placed aboard and taken to the Immigration Station there. A special board of inquiry, it was announced would convene speedily and render a verdict some time to-day, if possible. This board set itself to determine if Mrs. Pankhurst's conviction in England was for a crime involving moral turpitude. If so she would come within the class excluded by the Immigration Act. If not, the act does not apply. To inspectors who questioned her aboard the Provence, Mrs. Pankhurst asserted that her conviction was for a political offence and that it was generally understood that her sentence had expired when she left England for France, although she had not been so notified formally.

For a quarter of an hour, the militant leader was questioned by immigration inspectors in the White and Gold Music Room of the liner. A curious crowd of passengers, eager to learn the disposition of the case, trooped in through the doors and pressed the two-story newspaper reporters forward till they surrounded the little group. Rheta Child Dorr, Mrs. Pankhurst's travelling companion, sought to sit beside the militant leader during the hearing, but this the inspectors would not permit, examining Mrs. Pankhurst alone.

"I am not coming to America to tell American women how to get the vote," Mrs. Pankhurst announced when the inspectors had left her. They appear to be abundantly able to manage their own campaign. Their cause has been remarkable and they need no foreign leadership.

There was no touch of militancy about Mrs. Pankhurst's face or figure as she chatted with the newspapermen. She was dressed in a grey suit, a blue hat that bore but a single ostrich tuce of black and was half-hidden in a blue veil, and wore a seal skin coat that touched the floor when she walked. Her fast greying hair belied the youth that seemed stamped on her features. She was almost recovered she said, from the illness caused by the forcible feeding in Holloway jail. But she was willing to live her harrowing experiences all over again a dozen times, if needed, "for the cause."

"Would I see it through?" she repeated in indignant answer to a question of a reporter. "Why, of course I would. I would die, if I had to, for the cause. And there are dozens, yes, hundreds of women in England who would do the same thing. I don't set myself up as different from any other woman, or better than any other woman."

"We are having a revolution in England, just as you people of America had a revolution when you wanted your freedom when you were taxed without representation. We English women are fighting for our freedom. Just as you won yours, so will we win ours. You fought against George III, we are fighting against King George. We are fighting against King Asquith for he is the

SETTLEMENT NEAR AT HAND

Latest Conditions Regarding Home Rule and The Ulstermen.

[Canadian Press Despatch.] MONTREAL, Oct. 17.—Windsore cables The Star as follows: LONDON, Oct. 18.—Yesterday's Cabinet Council closes a remarkable series of three meetings, at which the ministerial position was carefully reviewed, resulting in a policy decided upon as regards Ireland.

It may be summed up in Mr. Asquith's own dictum, "Wait and see." The Churchill-Smith suggestion for the elimination of the Orange sections of Ulster from the Home Rule bill was not finally rejected. Indeed, Mr. Birrell and Sir Rufus Isaacs have gone to Dublin to examine minutely whether the difficulties of this solution are as insurmountable as Mr. Redmond's speech suggests. In any case the ministers are united in the maintenance of the principle of the creation of an Irish Parliament, with a fully responsible executive. They are united also in reliance on the Parliament Act as insuring fulfilment of that principle, while leaving the door fully open next session for opposition proposals while the bill is before Parliament for the third and last time.

Then a Conference. The proposal for the elimination of Ulster proved impossible, the government would be "ready to assemble for a conference on the basis of constructive suggestions of the Unionists themselves, made when the bill was before Parliament last session. Then a Conference.

FIRST PHOTOGRAPH OF THE LATEST TRAGEDY OF THE SEA, THE BURNING OF THE VOLTURNO

The first photograph showing the terrible mid-ocean tragedy, the burning of the steamship Voltorno, is shown above. Standing near by will be seen the Carmanis and other vessels which responded to the wireless call for help but which were powerless to render assistance until the high seas and storm abated. One hundred and thirty-six of the Voltorno's passengers and crew are known to have lost their lives. The remaining 400 were rescued by the steamships which responded to the Voltorno's wireless calls, and brought by them to various ports to a haven of safety.

With the waning of summer, our thoughts turn to the joys of the firelight, the cosy tea table near the hearth. The coming home of members of the family or friends, to join the family circle for Thanksgiving, the exchange of news and views, what is going on at College at school—and what is doing in the old town? Many sunny glints appear in the picture of life, as well as the shadow of grief, and we try to get close to the helpful sunny path, and say we not forget the many thanks we owe to the Giver of it all.

Although the day was grey, with occasional showers, it did not prevent Mrs. Van Norman, tea at the Golf and Country Club, Saturday, from being well attended. The hostess, in a most becoming frock of green silk, had a kind welcome for everyone. The cheerful log fire, the pretty, flower-laden tables, centred with purple and yellow wild flowers, made attractive floral tones that were most pleasing. Groups here and there in cosy converse—and the most present added to the interest. "Look at the sunset" from a voice. And one's gaze was riveted on the going to rest in a riot of gorgeous color of Mr. Sunshine. Mrs. A. J. Wilkes and Mrs. Montzambert were the tea and coffee rosters, assisted by Mesdames E. D. Rich Men Insure Insured for $412,403.

The largest life insurance claim paid in 1912 on this continent was $412,403, on the life of Charles Silverstein of New Ulm, Minn., and the second was $350,000 on the life of T. T. Reid of Montclair, N.J.

The largest in Canada was $141,750 to the beneficiary of Benjamin F. Pearson of Halifax, and the second, $133,333 on the life of Frederick W. Thompson of Montreal. The payment of $80,012 on Charles M. Hays was third.

The above extract is from a recent issue of a Toronto paper. All those men knew the value of life insurance, and availed themselves of its benefits—and what is true of them is true of almost every successful business man.

Since you must realize the necessity of making provision for your old age, if you live, or for your family in the event of your early death, can you do better than follow the example of such shrewd, prosperous men?

Our booklet, "A Few Facts," explains why you should place your insurance with The Imperial Life. Write for a copy today—it is very interesting and it's free.

"PETTY POLITICS"

Under the above heading the Expositor, in a leading editorial, makes a bitter attack upon Ald. Spence. For some reason that gentleman has earned the dislike of that organ, probably because of his political activities.

With our large-minded cotem, everything Grit is lovely and holy, and everything Tory is of the earth, earthy, and should be taboo.

The gravamen of the charge (if such a designation can be used with reference to such petty vindictiveness) is that at the laying of the corner stone of the new public building Ald. Spence saw to it that he superseded Mayor Hartman and, in the language of the vulgar, put the nose of his Worship out of joint.

It will be noticed that the organ in seeking to decry politics in connection with such an event, itself drags them in for the purpose of attacking Mr. Spence. That is a characteristic dodge upon its part.

As a matter of fact, from first to last—and very properly so, too—those having matters in hand carefully eliminated the party element as such. They felt that all classes were interested in the affair, and acted accordingly.

It has remained for the Expositor to attempt to stir up bitter feeling in connection with a ceremony which is admitted on all hands to have been quite general and cordial.

OFF TO A BAD START

Says the Montreal Herald (Independent Liberal): If the bye-election in Chateauguy illustrates anything, it is that the Liberal party is rapidly drifting out of touch with the electorate. It was to a great degree, the politicians' fight and, as such, largely confined to local issues.

Of the three vacancies which remain to be filled before the House meets there is little chance of the Liberals being able to capture two. South Lanark and East Middlesex are what is known in the parlance of politics as "Tory hives."

Notes and Comments: Don't gobble too much of the gobbler. Capt. Inch has proved himself to be a man—every inch of him.

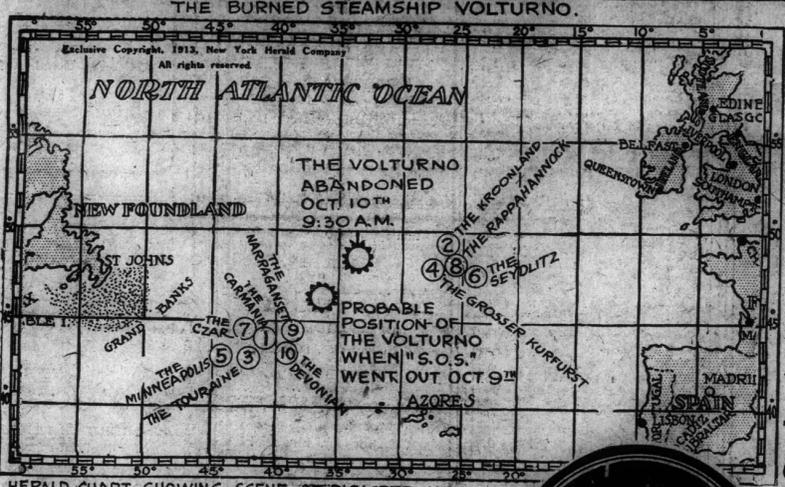

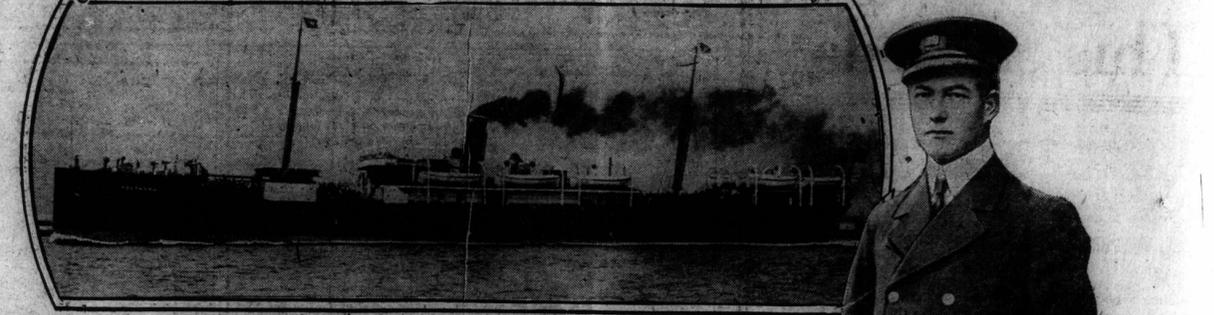

Without much doubt, the latest Zeppelin airship horror will lead to the abandonment of the construction of such craft. They are more dangerous than getting into war itself.

George Smith has been sentenced to fourteen years in St. Thomas for having five wives. He evidently didn't think there were enough of that name already on this mundane sphere.

It remained for the local Grit organ to try and make political capital out of a public event when no one else was small enough to think of any such thing.

Brant County teachers want the penalty lessened at examinations for words incorrectly spelled. This would seem to be a mistake, for there is altogether too much loose orthography as matters at present stand.

MRS. PANKHURST IS DETAINED

"I do not think I should be denied admittance to your country. I don't think I will be. I am willing to trust to the sense of justice of the American people."

Mrs. Pankhurst was questioned closely about her departure from England. She told immigration officers she thought she would not be arrested if she should return here.

"I was at liberty under license," she explained. "My license had expired and I was, of course, subject to arrest at any time. Notwithstanding I addressed the International Medical Congress, after the expiration of my license and was not molested. Inasmuch as I had been arrested for addressing public gatherings previously, I should think that if I had been wanted, I would have been arrested while addressing this meeting."

Further, announced publicly that I expected to leave England. Many persons saw me leave. No attempt was made to prevent my departure. Does that look as if the authorities wanted me? It supports my claim that they did not want me."

"The cat and mouse act" Mrs. Pankhurst characterized as torture. "It is well known," she said, "You know how a cat plays with a mouse. It will let the mouse run a short distance and when it thinks it is free, the cat will catch it. That is what the authorities are doing in England with the suffragettes."

Acting under orders from Washington the special board of inquiry speeded the hearing. At the detention station Mrs. Pankhurst was lodged for a few minutes in the room which Cipriano Castro occupied while at Ellis Island. Then she was taken before the board.

Miss Wickham and three other women who accompanied Mrs. Pankhurst to Ellis Island were allowed to converse with her and her counsel in her room. They were not permitted to accompany her before the board, however, nor was her lawyer.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 18.—Commissioner General Caminetti thought it possible the Pankhurst case might reach his bureau to-day in the event of prompt action by the special board. The board, it is pointed out, has ample authority to permit Mrs. Pankhurst to land without reference to the case to the Washington authorities. If the board should order her deported the case immediately would be appealed to Commissioner Caminetti and Acting Secretary Post. Their action would be final.

No intimation of the action to be taken by them in the event of the reference of the case to Washington is given here.

Obituary

Henry Book

The death occurred this morning at his late residence, 39 Cayuga street, of Henry Book, a life-long resident of Brantford and Brant County. The deceased was 71 years of age, and leaves to mourn his loss a widow and one son, Elmer of Pinecliffe, Colorado, and two daughters, Mrs. Thompson Paterson, of Hamilton and Mrs. Frank Miller, Jerseyville, and a large number of friends. The funeral will take place on Monday to Mount Hope cemetery.

Mrs. Thomas Spencer It is with sincere regret that The Courier records the death of Elizabeth Jackson, widow of the late Thomas Spencer, which occurred at the home of her daughter, Mrs. S. Tapscott, on Thursday evening, Oct. 16th. Mrs. Spencer was in her 88th year, and had been a resident of this city for 65 years. Her husband preceded her death by thirty-eight years ago. She leaves to mourn her loss one son, Hugh, of Cleveland, and three daughters, Mrs. S. Tapscott, Mrs. Thomas Large, and Miss Nonie Spencer, also one brother, Mr. Jos. Jackson of Toronto. The deceased was one of the oldest members of the First Baptist church. The funeral which will be private, will take place on Sunday afternoon.

Home Again. Rev. Mr. Saunders of St. John's church, has returned from a trip to the west and will occupy his pulpit to-morrow.

Courier Cup. The semi-final game in the Courier Cup series is being played at the Agricultural Park between the All Scots and the Cockshutt, United.

Fire of Peculiar Origin The southern portion of the Brantford Carriage Co. plant was the scene about 8.30 this morning of a small blaze of peculiar origin. In the section of the building where the fire occurred there is no basement, and it was under the floor where the fire originated. It is supposed that the fire originated from some person tossing a match, cigarette or cigar butt through an air shaft in the wall. The employee was in a room and the fire was out when the fire department arrived.

City News Items

Not Here Yet. The plans for the Dragons' armory have not been received from Ottawa yet.

Good Time. The dance given in the Hurley hall last night by Mr. Bert Watson was well attended, and a very enjoyable evening was spent.

Valuable Bird. A C. Douglas of Mount Pleasant recently purchased a valuable cock bird from a well-known chicken breeder in New York, paying over $40 for it.

Geographical Error. C. S. Cobb, architect, of Toronto, has written the city clerk requesting to be allowed to draw plans for the new "Eastwood" school, wherever that is. Probably he means the East Ward.

Completed Arrangements. The committee in charge of the Casino dance on Thursdays have made complete arrangements for the same, and those who attend are assured of a real jolly time.

Held Rehearsal. The degree team of Brant Enfranchisement No. 4, I.O.O.F., held a well-attended rehearsal last night in preparation for their visit to Ingersoll on the 25th inst., where they will confer the Golden Rule degree.

Manoeuvres. It is expected there will be a large turnout of the members of the local regiment at the Thanksgiving Day manoeuvres to be held this year near St. Catharines. A bountiful lunch will be served the men on their return from the field, it being supplied by Quartermaster, Capt. Ward and Co. Serg. Chas. Taylor. "Hot Dogs," hot coffee, an abundant supply of French rolls, are among the good things to be served.

The Lady Golf Championship

(Canadian Press Despatch) WILMINGTON, Del., Oct. 18.—The gallery, the largest of the week, was on hand early to-day to follow Miss Gladys Ravenscroft of Bromborough Club, England, a former British title-holder, and Miss Marion Hollins of the Westbrook Club, the metropolitan champion, in their final match for the women's national golf championship. The weather was warm and cloudy, with a possibility of showers before the day was over. Both Miss Ravenscroft and Miss Hollins were in fine fettle for the supreme effort. Later—Miss Ravenscroft was 1 up at the end of first nine holes.

SLEEPY-TIME TALES FOR THE LITTLEST ONES

When Vickie Had the Surprise of His Life

If you think that little dog across the street is cunning, Dorothy," said Mamma, as she drew up a chair beside the bed to tell the usual sleepy-time story, "you should have seen one I had when I was a little girl.

"His name was Victor, though of course we all called him Vickie. He was a perfect ball of white and, oh, so cute and darling and clean! Always in the summer, I remember, we used to have his long, curly, fluffy hair clipped close all over—except a great bang of which was left hanging down over his shining, little black eyes to protect them from the glare of the sun.

"Nothing seemed to delight him more than, when we were out riding one evening, to lean far out the side of the carriage and bark just as loudly and fiercely as ever he could as the dogs we passed—even the biggest of them. And when they would come dashing along after the carriage, Vickie would bark all the louder, and most anyone would think him a dreadfully ferocious dog. Of course, he was perfectly safe in the carriage—and we sometimes thought he knew it, for he would never bark while passing another dog when we were walking.

"One summer, Sister Florence and I went up to Uncle Arthur's farm to spend a week or two. We took Vickie with us. And he enjoyed the country and all the strange animals and flowers and birds just as much as we did.

"Uncle Arthur had three dogs of his own, for people who live in the country always have them. One was a great big, black dog, another a rat-tatt, bow-legged bull dog and the third a beautiful silky-haired collie. Strange to say, Vickie seemed to make friends with all three of them. At first, he was very quiet and well-behaved—and scared of them, too, for when he saw one of them coming up on the porch he would jump up on the lap of the very nearest person.

"But after a while, when he saw that they had no intention of harming him, he became bolder; and it was not many days before he was playing around the yard with them and dashing across fields and through the cool, green woods, barking and yelping and scampering along as though he were indeed just as much a real dog as they.

"Now Uncle Arthur also had two little kittens. One was pure white and the other as black as your stocking, with a white star right in the middle of his forehead. Uncle Arthur hadn't had them so very long, but his dogs had become thoroughly accustomed to them and never chased them or barked at them, much less trying to bite them.

"But not Vickie. Oh, no, Mr. Smarty Vickie had no sooner set eyes on them one day, when he sidled up to steal into the kitchen unobserved, than he set up a most terrific barking. Why, you would have imagined there was a great fierce watch-dog and there were burglars attempting to break in and carry off the entire house.

"I rushed into the kitchen to see what in the world was the matter with Vickie. And there I found him, his feet spread out, his cunning little bang hanging down over his eyes and his cute little tail wagging and wagging for all the world like a limber switch when you're holding it by one end and shaking kittens—Blackie and Whitey—well, he had them crowded back into a corner, their little backs arched up until it seemed they would surely break, every hair of them standing right up on end and the most frightened, pitiable look on their tiny little faces you ever saw.

"I grabbed him up and ran out on the front porch with him. I didn't spank him; but I did try to tell him what a bad little doggie he had been and I asked him how he would feel if Uncle Arthur's big dogs drove him into a corner and barked and jumped at him!

"He wagged his little head and stuck out his little tongue, trying to lick my cheek as much as to say, 'But they're only cats, you see—and it's such fun to make out you're going to eat them up!'

"Indeed, on second thought, I am quite certain Vickie didn't understand me, or, if he did, it went in one of his cunning little perked-up ears and out the other. For the very next

Tales of the Red Lot Team

BACKING UP THE PLAY

IN baseball, the game isn't won until the last man is out, which is merely another way of saying that to win at the great American game every player has to be "on his toes" all the time and ready and waiting for any break of luck—good or bad—that comes along.

And always—from the "hush league" clear up the ladder to the two major ones—the unexpected is always happening. Really, as some one high in baseball has said, it's the chap who is always prepared for the unexpected and anticipating "what might happen" who shines as a star on the diamond.

Only the day before yesterday the crack Red Lot Team had an illustration of the truth of the fact—and won a game thereby. "Swifty" was the sterling left-fielder of theirs, was the lad who "pulled the play." But then, you remember, "Swifty" is always "on his toes" in every game he goes into.

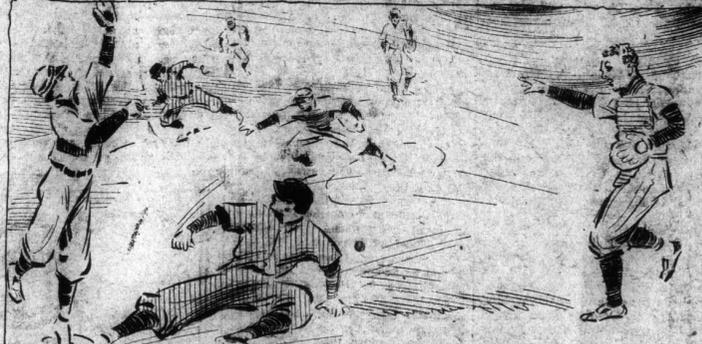

And yet, under the circumstances, like a flea in a skillet and shouting defiance in his shrill, piping voice.

Even "Fatsy" Henry, the good-natured, laughing first-baseman, was mad as a hornet and grimly watching the catcher, his hair had surely turned two-shades redder than it usually was and every freckle on his round, aggressive face was standing out like a full-moon.

"Smoke-Ball" swallowed hard and stared long and hard at the Tarrytown runner on third. It was quite evident he was sparring for time—said when "Smoke-Ball" did that you might well be certain he was a little bit wrought up. Suddenly he turned and, almost without looking, it seemed, shot the ball straight over the plate.

"Strike one!" yelled the Umpire. Al Heintzeman wasn't exactly prepared for it and his face showed his surprise plainly.

The next was a "ball"; he next "struck" and the one after that a many a good ball player might have been top lazy or too unprepared to be Johnny-on-the-spot. When the unexpected came, as it did in the ninth inning of the Red Lot's game with the Tarrytown Tigers.

The score stood—Red Lots, 7; Tarrytown, 6. But the Tigers had a runner on third base and only one man out. Moreover, the game being played on the Tarrytown field, the Red Lots had already had their "last play" single run would tie the score and two would win the game. It was a tight finish.

"This looked bad indeed for the Red Lots. Why, just think, a lonly to the outfield, even though caught, would make but the second out and with comparative ease for the difficult feat, you know, to nail the runner at the plate when he starts for home the second the ball hits the catcher's glove.

"All Tarrytown was out to see the game. And all Tarrytown went roaring, tearing crazy as Al Heintzeman, their star catcher and slugger, stepped to the plate. Already they could see the ball streaking into safe territory and Gus Smith, scooting for home" with the run that would knot the score.

Every last rooster was yelling like a madman and shouting divers threats and jeers at "Smoke-Ball" Thompson, the star pitcher of the Red Lots, as he stood in the box and prepared to hurl the ball.

Needless to state, the entire Red Lot infield was "playing in close." The runner must be headed off at the plate. That was the crucial thing. Once get him out—and well, it's a long, long way from first clear around to the plate, you know, especially with "two down."

Now, if you imagine that infield was cool as a cucumber and not in the least nervous or shaky, you are very much mistaken. "Wouldn't you be much of 'up in the air' in a pinch like that?"

Bob Ellis, the guardian of the third-base sack, was trying his best to balance himself "on his toes," hands on knees, and not look worried.

"Bud" Allison, the Red Lot captain and short-stop, impatiently dug at the turf with the toe of his right foot as he called out words of encouragement to his men.

"Little Ned Williams, the Red Lot second-baseman, was hopping around his breath to see Gus Smith come in, feet first, with the tying run.

Gus was off with the crack of the bat. But that ball was traveling like an express train and it took a lucky bound right into "Bud" Allison's hat, which extended glove and stuck there as a flash "Bud" hurried the spheroid to "Rip" Dugan at the plate. Almost simultaneously with the thrust of the ball in "Bud's" glove, Gus realized he couldn't make it. So he dug his spikes into the dirt, stopped short and turned and started back for third.

"Rip" Dugan, the Red Lot catcher, closed in on him, down the base-line, his arm drawn back full all ready to hurl the "pelle." "Smoke-Ball" of course, came in to "cover" the home-plate, while Bob Ellis stood ready and waiting on the third-base sack.

And "Swifty" Miller? Well, here's where he comes in!

If there was one thing Capt "Bud" had drilled into his players it was the fact that he drilled into every play. If a first-baseman, for example, throws to second, it's the duty of the left or the center-fielder to run in and back up the second-baseman. Or if a fielder throws to the plate, after catching a long fly, to nail a runner, it's up to the pitcher to run in and back up the catcher. An over-throw, tossed in that play, for Bob being needed on that play, for Bob was on third and "Bud" was already hurrying over to back him up. But "Swifty," you see, had his heart in the game. So he came tearing in from leftfield to back up the play.

And it was well he did!

"Rip" had seen, after a few steps, that he was not fast enough to "run down" Gus before he reached third again; so, still running, he hurled the ball to the waiting Bob. Only—he tossed it way over the third-baseman's head, over Bob's head, over "Bud's" back, up, could reach it!

The crowd gave voice to a mighty roar and Gus, who had slid for the base, wheeled and—there he was—the ball, did his best to scramble to his feet again in a jiffy.

Now, while the play had been going on along the third-base line, Al

Queer Farm Products

JUST about now a good many children are enjoying a vacation in the country. Perhaps you are one of them. If so, you are looking forward to feeding the chickens and the ducks, watching the "hired man" milk the cow, and taking the picking of luscious fruit right off the trees in the orchard and—the entire farm with all its myriad unfoldings of Nature are to be your playground.

But what would you think if you were going to a farm where there are no chickens, no cows, no fruit and crops of the sort you always find in the country? Strange as it may seem, there are farms in this wonderful land of ours that are quite different from the ones you have seen or, may be, even heard about. They might almost be called freak farms—for the things grown and raised upon them are certainly different from the general run of farm products.

To begin with, there are a number of farms in different parts of the United States where they raise frogs—and only frogs. Uncle Sam himself has experimented in this product and demonstrated that it is profitable; and up in Pennsylvania there is one that covers nearly ten acres of land. Frog legs, you remember, are considered very choice eating—some people think they are better than chicken—and not all the people who like them live in France, as so many are inclined to believe.

Out near Los Angeles, California, there is a farmer who ever heard of—well, yes, slimy, squishy-looking frog legs, you remember, are considered very choice eating—some people think they are better than chicken—and not all the people who like them live in France, as so many are inclined to believe.

Trolleys Kill Tortoises

HOW would you never imagine, would you, that the various trolley lines all over the country are gradually getting off all the tortoises? But they are, according to the statement of a conductor who has worked on suburban lines in many parts of the country.

"You see," he explained, "the tortoise is a great traveler. As soon as he comes to an obstruction in his path, he first thought is to dig a way under it, instead of climbing over it. So when he comes to the trolley tracks, ballasted as they are with loose stones, he proceeds to make his way under the iron rails, pushing aside the stones, leisurely.

"All too frequently, just about the time he has gotten well under the rail, along comes a car. The wheels press smash his beautiful tortoise-shell back for him, leaving him to die a lingering death. You may be surprised, but I have counted as many as a half-dozen of them so killed in a single day on my line."

THE PIRATE CREW

WHAT'S this? A band of pirates
Upon our peaceful shore?
Wild, reckless-looking fellows
And all a-thirst for gore.

"Ah!" I hear their leader
Address one in their power,
"Said I, not coward traitor,
That ye should sue the hour?"

"Ho men, bring me your timber
And rig it on this bank!

The sea rolls deep beneath him,
The dog shall walk the plank!"

They seize the struggling victim
And drag him to the brink,
Blindfolded out he fetters
And falls—three feet I think.

With folded arms looks on,
"Thus ever perish traitors,"
He says, and they are gone.

Paris News

PARIS, Oct. 17.—A painful sensation was caused this morning by the announcement that Charles Tellier, the inventor of the cold storage process which first enabled American packers to export meat, is dying in a destitute condition at the age of 86. The report was found to be true, but Mr. Tellier's misery is due to his own fault.

The International Cold Storage Association recently raised $30,000 for the benefit of Mr. Tellier. One half of this was subscribed in Argentina; but the money has not yet reached Paris. Mr. Tellier refused to accept a pension from the other half, saying that he was still able to earn his living and preferred to leave the money to his son. The company for which Mr. Tellier worked recently failed, and the Cold Storage Association wrote him a letter containing an offer of money. No reply was received and the association sent $200 this morning by the doctor who is attending Mr. Tellier.

On the other hand the Paris Midi says the secretary of the Cold Storage Association wrote to Mr. Tellier yesterday to the effect that its book-keeper had embezzled the subscription for his benefit and fled. The secretary said he hoped to send some money before the end of the month. The paper adds that Mr. Tellier would have died of hunger last week only for the congerie, whose husband is a postman and withdrew $20 from the savings bank to help him. Tellier's son, who is 22 years of age, is delicate and unable to work regularly. Tellier's constant dread is as to what will happen to his son after his (the father's) death.

Lajoie and Wagner, Two Idols of Fans

Have Been Playing for Years But are Now on the Decline.

They are going back. Those two sterling athletes who were heroes to thousands of battles, and were picked as the greatest players in their respective positions for years past, have at last heeded the call of Father Time, and no one can escape his wrath. Last year Old Cy Young, peer of all pitchers, went into the discard, and it was only last week that the baseball world was stunned at the announcement that "Honus" Wagner, Pittsburgh's shortstop, and Larry Lajoie, considered by many the greatest of all second-sackers, were at the end of their string. It was said that Lajoie was to be used as a pinch hitter, while Wagner will retire at the end of the season. Lajoie and Wagner. It was only a few years ago that the mere mention of their names sent chills up and down the backs of the greatest pitchers in either league. They were cheered by thousands and looked upon as the last word in baseball. To think of them passing from the national game is about on a par with the announcement that the American and National Leagues were to throw up the sponge—only the former appears to be true.

Season after season passed and young phenoms came heralded as sluggers of renown, but the end of the season always found the same two heading the big league averages. Youngsters came, were heroes for a night, and passed, but Lajoie and Wagner went on, and to man it appeared forever. They are going now, boys, but two such noted characters will never again be known in the baseball world. Born in Woonsocket, R. I., September 3, 1875, Lajoie played his first professional engagement with the Fall River team in 1896. From there he went to Philadelphia and there he remained until 1901, when he joined the Cleveland Naps. He has been with the Forest City club ever since and has batted under 300 only twice during his career. As a second baseman he ranked on top. Wagner was born in Carnegie, Pa., February 24, 1874, and his first baseball work was with Steubenville team in 1895. In 1899 he was with Louisville and when that franchise was taken over by Pittsburgh Wagner went along. Since that time he has been the mainstay of the Pirate team and during all this time he has yet to rank under 300 as a batter. As to his fielding, little need be said about Honus Wagner, the greatest of all shortstops.

JOHN BURN'S BOYS MADE A GOOD SHOW

Poor Law School Lads Held Their Own at Cricket With St. Pauls Aristocrats.

LONDON, Oct. 18.—More than a year ago Mr. John Burns, in the House of Commons, challenged Eton's second eleven to play the Poplar Poor Law cricket eleven. On Saturday the challenge was taken up by a St. Paul's eleven, and though Mr. Burns did not turn up to umpire and to encourage his champions a good game resulted in a win for the public school, with honors divided.

Says the Express:—"Eton need not have feared to play. They would have sacrificed neither dignity nor victory. But the match neither proves nor disproves Mr. Burns' confidence in the physical fitness of Poor Law boys. Cricket is an incalculable game, and any side—as witness the counties—is dependent from year to year on the variations of talent. What is important is the spirit in which the game is played, and anything which fosters the true spirit, one of good comradeship, good temper and keenness for the side, is all to the good. In that sense we welcome Saturday's match and hope there may be more of them."

The Banstead Poor Law boys are all under fifteen, and the St. Paul's eleven were head and shoulders taller. Mr. Burns' proteges, however, put up a good fight. Batting first, they scored 29, and St. Paul's had lost seven wickets before passing this score.

Harold McCormick, the famous pinch hitter of the Giants, has been appointed manager of the Chattanooga team of the Southern League. Wittke, the Giants left-handed pitcher, who was offered to the Leafs two months ago, declined the management of the Mobile Southern League club.

ASPIRANTS FOR WOMEN'S GOLF CHAMPIONSHIP OF UNITED STATES.

MISS FLORENCE L. HARVEY, MISS GLADYS RAVENSCROFT, MISS MURIEL DODD

The medal for the qualifying round of the National Women's Golf Championship was won at the Wilmington (Del.) Country Club. Miss Gladys Ravenscroft, of Brombrough, England, holder of the British women's golf title in 1912, was the star. Miss Harriet Curtis, of Essex county, Manchester, Mass., and Miss Muriel Dodd, of Moreton, England, tied for second place at ninety-one. Miss Dodd is the present holder of both the British and Canadian championships. Miss Curtis was American title holder in 1906 and runner up a year later to her sister, Miss Margaret Curtis, in whose keeping the title has been for the last two years. Miss Florence L. Harvey, of Hamilton, Canada, qualified.

MANAGER DUNN SELLS BERGEN AND MAISEL

BALTIMORE, Md., Oct. 17.—The sale of Catcher William Bergen and Outfielder George Maisel to the Seranton club of the New York State League, was announced yesterday by Manager Jack Dunn of the local International League team. Bergen was formerly with the Brooklyn National League team. Maisel is a brother of Fritz Maisel, who went to the New York Americans from the Baltimore team this season.

President McCaffery of the Toronto club, motored back from the world's series in New York in his new car. When the Toronto team goes to Marlin, Texas, next season to train with the Giants, they will be jumping practically from Canada to Mexico. Some jump!

BOSTON'S INFIELD OF 1897 THE BEST

Dan. Brouthers Says Tenny, Lowe, Long and Collins Were the Best Ever.

(By Grantland Rice.)
 In the midst of a rapid midsummer pennant discussion, two experts suddenly switched into a heated argument as to which was the greatest infield that ever played—the Chicago Cubs with Chance, Evers, Tinker and Steinfield, or Mack's Athletics with McInnis, Collins, Barry and Baker. The rebuttal was finally put up by us, and we in turn passed it along to Dan Brouthers, who has been a good bit closer to ringside and who should know.

Daniel has been on some fair infields himself. He hit .419 for the old Detroit clan of 1887, with a quartette embracing Brouthers, Richardson, Rowe and White. He hit .344 for the Baltimore infield of 1891, which embraced Brouthers, Reitz, Jennings and McGraw. He has played on the best and has seen the others pass in parade before him year after year.

"This is the one greatest infield of the game—the best combinations of batting and fielding power, brains, speed and smoothness. It had them all beaten, and I doubt if its equal will ever be gathered together again. There wasn't an angle of the game at which they were not stars. All batted above .315, with fielding averages around .950. They worked without a slip—without a break—and in all the time that I watched them play I never saw even a touch of bonehead work. There was no angle of the game at which all four were not stars. They must have had no more power than the Athletics' four, and but little more smoothness than the Cubs, but in the combination of all things that go to make up a perfect infield machine they must be set on tin front of the others with something to spare. Tenny, Lowe, Long and Collins—ask anyone who saw this four in their prime whether or not I'm right."

GOLF FINAL TODAY AT WILMINGTON

Miss Ravenscroft of England vs. Miss Holling of New York.

WILMINGTON, Del., Oct. 18.—Miss Gladys Ravenscroft of England, former British titleholder, and Miss Marion Holling, New York, Metropolitan champion, won their matches yesterday in the semi-final round for the women's national golf championship at Wilmington Country club, and will meet to-day in the final for the American title. The match between Miss Dodd and Miss Ravenscroft was a surprise and a disappointment, the holder of the British and Canadian championships going to pieces and losing to Miss Ravenscroft by 8 up to 7 to play, Miss Dodd did not win a single hole.

The other match between Miss Hollins and Miss Harriet Curtis of Boston, former American champion, was one of the most even matches ever played in a semi-final round for the American championship. It was nip and tuck, hole for hole, and almost stroke for stroke until the 20th hole, when the Metropolitan champion earned the right to go into the final against Miss Ravenscroft to-day.

MONTREAL SOLD A PITCHER
 MONTREAL, Oct. 18.—Couchman, a spinnball pitcher, drafted by Montreal from Davenport, was yesterday sold to Cincinnati. He was part of the price paid for McGraynor, bought outright by Montreal from Cincinnati.

Liners.
 McGraw will send Pitcher Goulaht, with Toronto this season, to the Memphis team to be transformed into an outfielder.

The city of Bogalusa, which is in Louisiana, wanted the Leafs to train there next season, but President McCaffery had already closed with the Giants for Marlin Springs, Texas, when the invitation from Bogalusa was received.

Open Meeting Of The Brant Historical Society

Mrs. Brown Reads an Interesting Paper With Regard to Tecumseh—Material for Life of Joseph Brant at Ottawa.

The opening meeting of the Historical Society was held in the chambers of His Honor Judge Hardy, Thursday evening.

Communications received during the summer were read and reports of work done were given.

A letter to His Honor, was read from the Hon. Dr. Roche, regarding material for the "Life of Joseph Brant." The letter stated that much valuable material could be secured at Ottawa and that it would be a task too great to be accomplished except through an agent well equipped for such research work, who could spend at least three months in the Archives Building alone. If an agent is appointed by the Brant Historical Society to examine the records the archivist will render all assistance possible.

Mrs. Brown reported having received five valuable volumes later from Ottawa, being a synopsis of the matter there. By means of these the work may be accomplished in a week for ten days at Ottawa. A proper person will be sent later.

Mrs. Brown also reported having visited the Archives reference library in Toronto twice during the summer and the Reserve many times; had received five volumes of the work from the Provincial officials and one valuable volume, the MSS. copy of Sir Wm. P. A. Miller, from the Albany State Library.

Mr. Passmore read a communication stating that the annual grant had been passed, also a letter requesting his presence at a council meeting of the O. H. S. in Toronto Oct. 27th.

A letter was read from the Provincial Archaeological Society, requesting the Society to prepare a chart of Brant County, working upon it all the old Indian burial places. The chart is being prepared.

The Historian's report on Tecumseh was read and adopted.

A report was brought in, that through the efforts of Mr. Richard Sanderson, Mr. Fisher and Mr. Brown, who have been able to assist by Mr. Stroud of Paris, and Mr. Burt of St. George, all of the Wardens pictures since Brant had been made a County in 1859-63, had been secured.

The Secretary was instructed to return the thanks of the Society to these gentlemen for their successful efforts in securing the pictures. The pictures will be photographed and grouped and presented to the County to be hung in the Council Chambers. The matter was left with the committee, Major H. Leonard and His Honor, Judge Hardy, to consult with those interested, and complete the work.

Major Leonard reported having received an oil painting of Mr. S. G. Reed, Ex-Mayor of the city and also one from Mayor Hartman. The gifts were gratefully acknowledged. In other cities, where the Mayors pictures have been secured, the pictures will be hung separately. An effort will be made to secure all the pictures of the past Mayors of Brantford.

Major Leonard and Major Gordon Smith were appointed representatives of the Society to the Park Board for the beautification of the city.

A very old historical letter received from Mr. Henwood was acknowledged. Extracts from this letter will be published later. The Society is anxious to secure any historical letters for publication.

Major Smith made an interesting report on material for the Society. The Picture Committee reported having secured over sixty historical pictures during the summer.

Report on Tecumseh.

Mr. Douglas, ex-warden of the City of Brant, that he had met, quite frequently, a very old Indian in Caledonia, who claimed to know where Tecumseh was buried, he is a nephew of Tecumseh and told Mr. Douglas further said that he had done business with him and had found him honest and he seemed disposed to believe that there was truth in the man's claims. On the strength of this I resolved to investigate the matter. He lives on the Reserve, fifteen miles from Brantford.

Accompanied by Mr. Brown I visited his home and interviewed him. We made further enquiries regarding him from many on the Reserve and then returned home. There is little reliable published information regarding Tecumseh. What little could be found, I read and weighed what the man had asserted, and then visited him the second time and with his report to the Society that inferior as he relates regarding his own life and regarding the relationship of his father to Tecumseh, I believe that the historical events which are available will prove his statements to be true, and since he has been a resident of Brant County for ninety-seven (97) years, if his statements are true, that it becomes the duty of the society to assert his claims.

Without going into any historical details at the present time, the general reasons for believing his assertions to be true are: He was sexton of St. Luke's Church for twelve years and holds a certificate of character from the Rev. Mr. Strong for being "an honest and industrious man," also from the Rev. Mr. Barefoot. He is quick, sharp and shrewd and when aroused displays all the Shawnee fierceness, otherwise he is gentle, kind and hospitable and although unkempt one is conscious of an innate courage and courtesy, which bespeaks the man. He has an air of truth and sincerity about him which makes one believe, and so conscious is he of the truth of his own story that he thinks the world will believe it simply because he asserts it. A nature like this seldom deceives.

Historically speaking, the man can neither read nor write. He was unaware that any or many have claimed a knowledge of Tecumseh's burial place. He knows little if anything of the published statements regarding Tecumseh. Then it would be an impossibility for the man to know what he does know unless he knew it from actual parts in real life. He speaks only of what he knows to be true.

Regarding his own life, his documents, the records in the Indian department, which I received last summer and information received from several very old Indians since interviewing him have proven his every assertion to be true.

Regarding his father's relationship to Tecumseh, we have learned in "The Life of Brant" how difficult it is to trace the ancestry of the red man. It is more difficult to trace the ancestry of the Shawnee than the Six Nations Indian. They have less, if assume a false relationship when men were living who knew General Tecumseh well.

On my second visit, one fact alone which he revealed (had there not been so many stories told of Tecumseh which have made all people skeptical). This fact alone would be considered sufficient proof of the relationship of his father to Tecumseh.

As to his claims regarding a knowledge of Tecumseh's burial place. He asserts, for certain stated reasons, his father fled to Canada before Tecumseh crossed the border. His father joined the John Brant and Colonel Norton troops, and later when Tecumseh crossed he joined his army and was in the battle when Tecumseh fell. The Tecumsehs then owned all the land in the vicinity of the Rond Eau. His father's mother returned to the battle field that night found Tecumseh by the side of a mulberry tree and carried him by night many miles to the place where he is buried. His father when a very old man, over 100, in 1855, after exacting a promise of secrecy from him, took him to the grave. In 1858, he took his one sister and brother, who were living here in Brantford at the time, to see the grave (his sister was living with Mrs. Alger at the time, and later with Mrs. David Hart). Since 1858 he has not visited the grave. Judging from the locality in which he says he was buried, I would rather incline to think that the place would now be built over, and if so, there would be no way to prove his claim. It would have to be a matter of belief or disbelief, and since so many stories have been told regarding Tecumseh's burial place, I would recommend the secretary not to assert his claim to this knowledge. At the same time it would be open to the secretary to offer to pay his way, for he himself, to go to the grave to learn if it could be found. If not, the truth of his story must rest with his father's relationship to Tecumseh and his being in the battalion when Tecumseh fell. If these statements are true then no statement of Indian history will divulge his burial place. It is a well known fact that Indians never leave their dead upon the battle field if it be possible at all to secure their bodies, and they never bury upon the battle field, at least not the Shawnee or Iroquois.

Burial and condolences are religious rites, with them and no greater offence can be given the Indian than to proceed with any task or work until these rites are performed. Sir Wm Johnston, who, perhaps knew the Indian best of all white men, was often in critical times put to sore trial over this characteristic of the Indian. If Tecumseh's brother and his mother were near at the time of the battle, then they buried him. Time will establish this truth.

When asked why his father kept it secret and enacted a promise from him to do so, he replied with all the Shawnee fierceness in him: "Because of the way the British (Practor) had treated Tecumseh."

He expressed a strong desire to go to Thamesville to see the site of the monument. "If I don't go the Tecumseh family will not be represented," he said.

I have made arrangements to have his deposition taken before a Justice of the Peace, as soon as he can come to town. Some statements he has made, of records, have been made of the events, may be proved by records in the Pennsylvania archives or war department library at Washington. This will necessitate research work. When his deposition and these records are secured his statements will be published as soon as possible in order to give any responsible person or persons who may be in a position to know the truth, an opportunity to dispute his claims or disprove his assertions, while the man is here to speak for himself.

inside History of the Methods Employed in Criminal Investigation Embracing True Narratives of Interesting Cases by a former Operative of the William J. Burns Detective Agency.

DAVID CORNELL

7—Wheels Within Wheels NIPPING A NEW YORK BLACKHAND CONSPIRACY IN THE BUD

(Copyright, 1912, by International Press Bureau.) Editor's Note: In order that no annoyance may accrue through the publication of these narratives to persons involved therein, their names and places have in many instances been substituted for the real ones.

Pasquale Leoni came near to being one of the smoothest blackhand chieftains in this country. But not quite. He failed at the very outset of what would have been, had it succeeded in getting started, one of the most successful blackmailing and robbing enterprises that ever emanated from the evil minds of the Italian Black Hand men who live by terrorizing their fellow countrymen in American cities.

Leoni ran a little private bank for the accommodation of his own countrymen in Elizabeth street, in the lower Italian quarter of New York City. He made no pretense of doing a big business, nor of securing his depositors and patrons against loss by any great capital of his own. He had started in as a steamship agent, selling tickets for a couple of the lines that make a specialty of carrying the cheaper class of passenger trade between New York and the Mediterranean ports. That was ten years before the events here to be related ever began.

From a seller of steamship tickets Leoni began to branch out, and soon he was running a little Italian employment agency in conjunction with his original business. He satisfied everybody concerned with his dealings in this, and soon the Italian emigrants who had found work through his office began to call on him for the purpose of conveying safely to the loved ones back in Italy part of the funds earned by the newcomers in America.

The private bank was the next step. The newly arrived Italians were loathe to trust their hard-earned money with any set of strange bankers in this strange land—Leoni was one of them, a son of their own beloved Italy. He had welcomed them upon their arrival on Ellis Island, he had brought them to the land and found them rooms in the crowded quarters of the east side. Work they had secured through him, and their steps in the new land had been generally guided by his advice. That more natural than that they should turn to him when they began to accumulate little sums of money which they wished to save?

Leoni took care of their money with satisfaction to them, and considerable profit to himself. His power and influence, and the prosperity of his little private bank—so private that the state bank examiners had to do with it—grew until in 1911 he had on deposit in his fourth street office over $150,000 and in his care by his trusting customers. He never heard of Leoni until he came to the office of the Burns Detective Agency and asked for protection against the Black Hand—the man who is after me," he said. "I have threatened me. Me, Pasquale Leoni, whom all good Italians in these days had have threatened. They shall take my life or I am worth them $25,000."

"How did you have the nerve to come here about this?" asked the office manager. You know Italians usually are afraid to speak even to their wives about communications of this sort.

"To the police I would not go," said Leoni. "But you I think I can trust. Anyhow, I will die before I give up this money. I want you to protect me by finding the writer of this letter and putting him in jail. I have heard that you do such things very well."

The office manager turned to me. "Want to take the case, Cornell?" he asked. "We don't usually touch anything of this sort."

"Certainly," I said. "It's all part of the game to me."

Leoni and I got together then. I took the letter and examined it carefully. It was in a fairly good handwriting and carefully punctuated and phrased. Apparently it was the work of an educated man.

I reasoned that this letter probably was the work of one of the men whom Leoni had had dealings with in one way or another. Probably somebody who had deposited money with him and who knew how prosperous the private banker was becoming.

"That's a funny looking case to me," I said. "It looks too easy to be true."

"I told him what I had found, and what my theory shaped up like."

"Oh, drop it if you want to," he said. "I don't think we care to be mixed up in that sort of a mess. Do just as you please about it."

"I had already made a start on the case and had discovered what I was inclined to believe was a striking clue. The attraction of the man-hunt had me, and I said:

"That didn't sound good to me. Under the microscope the letter failed to show any of the dust or dirt that would have adhered to it if it had been carried unenclosed and without a cover, pushed under the door of an Elizabeth street store. The letter was crisp and clean, as if it had been taken from an envelope that had sheltered it in its travels until very recently."

"This is the only letter of this sort you have?" I asked.

"No, no," he laughed. "There were others. I tore them up. I paid no attention to them until this one came. It names a time when I must have the money ready. That is why I came here."

"Were the letters all in this handwriting?" I asked.

"He was a little slow in answering. 'Yes,' he said, finally. 'Yes, all the same handwriting.'"

"All right," I said. "Let's go down to your office."

"It would not do for me to be seen with you," he protested. "The society has eyes everywhere. If you come to Elizabeth street with me its eyes will see and they will get suspicious. Then they will kill me as a warning for others to be careful."

"All right," said I. "When can I come to see you?"

"You want to see me in the office?" "Yes, in your office."

"That is absolutely necessary."

"Yes," he said. "It's necessary."

"All right, all right," he said. "Come tonight then, at ten. The street will be crowded to get to what you can slip in without being noticed."

I put on some old clothes that night and slouched through the crowds in Elizabeth street until I reached Leoni's store. I went in, pretending to have some business at the banking window, and when to one was looking I slipped back into the office.

"I want to take a look at your books first of all," I said.

"He was puzzled, but he turned over to his books. He had kept the signatures of his depositors in a single big book, and this was what I looked over most carefully."

I found what I had hoped to find. About a year before one "Ignacio Martinez" had written his name and his address, "Whitesh, Wis." Leoni's signature book in the same fine Italian hand that had written the threatening letter. There was no mistaking it. The writing was too distinctive to be confused.

"I was on the point of telling Leoni what I had found, but on second thought I reasoned: 'Here is an excitable Italian, half crazed with fear, and if I tell him what I think I have found he'll go up in the air, and if he doesn't plot to take his private vengeance he's almost sure to let someone know what he's been told.' So I said nothing, but looked through the book without comment. After a short time I left Leoni, telling him I'd call him up in a day or two."

"Do you think you can catch them?" "Certainly," I said. "It's all part of the game to me."

"I don't know," I said. "It's pretty hard for an American to get onto the crooked ways of these fellows, but we've never failed on a case yet."

"Ah," he said. "But you never had a case like this?"

"No," he said. "That's true, too."

When I got back to the office the manager said: "Well, how do you like Black Handing as far as you've gone?"

"That's a funny looking case to me," I said. "It looks too easy to be true."

"I told him what I had found, and what my theory shaped up like."

"Oh, drop it if you want to," he said. "I don't think we care to be mixed up in that sort of a mess. Do just as you please about it."

Leoni jumped up with a gun in his hand.

I never watched anybody closer in all my life than I did Leoni while I was telling him this. No Anglo-Saxon could have hidden what was going on in his mind the way that this Italian did. His expression was one of surprise, only surprise, that I should mention such a thing.

"How horrible!" he said. "How disgusting!"

He did it so well that he fooled me. I said to myself: "You big fool! You guessed wrong, absolutely wrong."

I went back to the office and began to write up my reports, trying to find a flaw in the theory I had worked out. Since I had been up against Leoni and had played my big card and had brought anything out I felt that my theory must be wrong. His expression absolutely had convinced me. But as I wrote and rewrote the record of my doings since Leoni had applied at the office for a man, I couldn't see where in the world I had fallen down. It was a good deal at all times I had worked up a case that pointed straight to the end I had worked toward. If it didn't point that way—

I had to believe that I had fallen so completely."

Canino had sold Martina tickets over the old Italia-Mediterranean line. Our men had been watching the docks and boats of that company closer than any other. Nobody approaching Martina's description had sailed on the line. The second day that I was in New York the report came that the line wouldn't have another boat for two weeks, and that no reservations on that boat had been made from Whitesh, Wisconsin. There had been no reservation from Whitesh for two months.

"Stupid," said the agency superintendent. "Your man got away on some other line. I told you that you'd better let that Black Hand stuff alone."

But I had my own private hunch, in spite of the innocent expression on Leoni's face. I made myself a mental note that Martina hadn't left this country, and that I knew just where to find him—in time.

It took some time. To make a long story short, I went to the tenement directly opposite Leoni's office in Elizabeth street and rented the two front rooms on the third floor. I was dressed in the clothes of the average Italian laborer, and while I was a little too tall for a fair specimen, a pair of gold rings in my ears helped out the deception. I explained to the woman who rented the rooms that I was out of work and that I probably would be at home a lot during the daytime.

I was. Both daytime and night. There wasn't an hour in the twenty-four that I, of Cliffer, who came over to help me, didn't have an eye glued to the window that covered Leoni's front door. He had no back door or anybody would have covered that too.

It took just ten days to clear the thing up. It was about 3 in the morning. I was watching and the street was dark. Along came a man in a blackintosh and knocked at Leoni's door. The door opened instantly and the man went inside. In about half an hour he came out, looked up and down the street, and hurried in the direction of Third street, toward the subway. He thought he had hidden his tracks but I rode up to Harlem in the subway with him just the same.

He got on at 125th street. I reported him, and under the light of the street seller's window I saw his face.

FAREWELL AT THE STATION

Affecting Interview That Seemingly Is One of the Follies of Femininity.

Have you ever been met by an old friend at a railroad station where you had stood only a few moments? I have. She comes down for a glimpse of me; god of her, too! We have not met for years, and it will be years before we can meet again. It is almost like those final last moments of life. I stand on the car platform and wave, and she dashes out of the crowd. "Oh, there you are! Well—how are you? Come over here where we can talk—Why— you're looking well—yes, I am, too."

only I've been having a horrid time with the dentist." (Pause) "Are you having a pleasant journey?—Yes, of course, those vestibule trains are always deliciously close. I've been in a hot car, too—I thought I'd never get here. The cars were blocked—you know I'm traveling in the vestibule again—they're always so." (Pause) "How's Alice?—That's nice. And how's Robert?—Yes, you wrote me about his eyes. What a good looking hat you have! I had to come down to this old thing, but my new eyes didn't come home—she promised, too—and I just had to see you. Did look at those two over there! How can people do such things on a public platform, do you see? I'll move around—you can't look—Why, it isn't time yet is it? Oh, dear! And we haven't really begun to talk. Well, stand on the step and then you won't get left—Yes, I'll write. So glad to have news you. Going to be gone all winter?—Oh, yes, I remember, you wrote me. Well, good-bye, good-bye!"—Rebecca Atlantic.

They comprise seven brothers and, always, all of whom are receiving old-age pensions. The eldest of the seven is eighty and the youngest seventy-one. Their united ages total 680 years.

THANKSGIVING DAY

THANKSGIVING IN THE WOODS

URRANTIES need not think they are the only persons who have a good time on Thanksgiving day, for if they could but peep into the activities of the people on the farms and see how they observe the holiday it would not be surprising if just a tinge of envy should be discerned.

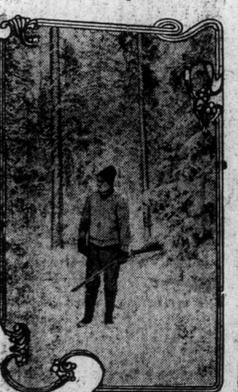

Thanksgiving day on the farm is a day of festivity and jollification. It is a genuine product of enjoyment, dependent upon conditions of the weather and upon the natural facilities provided for enjoyment, and it is entirely unadulterated with the more modern and perhaps superficial (at least from a ruralite's viewpoint) contrivances for entertainment which the city affords.

Probably the majority of the men who on the farm are engaged in the hunt are to be seen on Thanksgiving day. The instinct to go out on Thanksgiving morning and shoot a turkey for the holiday feast is still quite strong in the average ruralite, although the birds have become few in number.

But the larder of the proud farm family is generally well filled, and perhaps less thought is directed to the Thanksgiving dinner as to the manner of sport and entertainment that can be obtained out of the day. Fowls of some kind are always to be found in abundance about the barnyard, and the preparations for the dinner require but little time once when a decision is made as to what the menu shall consist of.

So thoughts turn to the field and forest for a day's hunting. And it seems to be about the only day in the year when nearly every man and boy old enough to handle a gun goes hunting. The farmer will let the hunters from the city bang about all over his farm during the early part of the season, when game is plenty—if it ever is—but he will keep right ahead husking his corn, baling his hay, hauling in pumpkins, etc., until Thanksgiving day comes around. Then he gets the hunting fever.

There is no work done on Thanksgiving. It would be almost a heathenish act not to "take the day off" no matter how urgent the farm work may be. If there is snow on Thanksgiving it is a regular day in paradise for the men and boys, for then it is quite an easy matter to track Mr. Bunny to his hiding place and chase him out to become a target for the hunters. The rabbit being about the only kind of game that cannot be exterminated, but sticks like the faithful dog wherever space is cleared away for a home in the forest, it is the most common game that is hunted on Thanksgiving. Although there is often about one hunter for every rabbit, this does not seem materially to diminish the sport, for after the day is over those who are short in their living of game take consolation in the fact that they "had a good time anyway."

Aside from rabbit hunting, there is other game to be found in most country districts, such as pheasants and quail. But whether all this game has been killed earlier in the season by professional hunters makes little difference to the people in the country, for they will have their annual hunt on Thanksgiving day at any rate. It is an annual custom with them, and the woods and fields constitute a sort of Mecca to which they make their visits as regularly as the holiday comes.

THANKSGIVING THOUGHTS.

Most newspaper men will admit that besides furnishing good stories for the front page around Thanksgiving the turkey also makes good inside matter.

Those who knifed Caesar claimed they loved him. The turkey is a bird Caesar in that these who knifed him are apt to be the first to eat him.

Americans are born parliamentarians. Even at dinner on Thanksgiving day somebody will take the chair, and then the cook will move that the turkey be laid on the table.

"De mortuis nil nisi bonum" is Latin that at this season may be translated, "Of the dead say nothing but good in the presence of their bones."

A THANKSGIVING COUP.

How Pugsley Repelled Advance of His Mother-in-law.

"Perhaps General Grant was more actively inhospitable than I am, and possibly G. Washington shrank from the duties of host with greater awe," said Pugsley, with a self-congratulatory grin, "but I can boast some victories in that line myself."

"You see," he continued, "my wife decided that it was up to us to have the family for Thanksgiving dinner this year. Did I oppose the appalling proposition? I did not. Did I comfort and encourage her in her nefarious scheme to introduce discord and strife into the bosom of my home? I did. What's the use of war when diplomacy will land a solar plexus?"

"I aided and abetted her with the utmost enthusiasm and liberality. Do she think a fifteen pound turkey would do? I insisted upon a thirty pounder. Did she calculate that two chickens would make enough salad? I decided that six were barely sufficient. Did she figure on a gallon of ice cream? I wouldn't be content with less than double that quantity, and so on all through the menu. Wherever she insisted upon spending a dollar I immediately insisted upon spending at least two.

"Of course she knows all about my affairs, and I could see that she was getting uneasy and frightened as she saw how lavish and extravagant I was determined to be. So I promptly boosted my reckless prodigality several notches higher. Still she didn't back down. It was getting pretty near time to do the inviting, and I was desperate."

"So I told her to run into the city and pick out fresh paper for the hall and dining room. That pretty nearly brought her down, but still she wavered, probably on account of wanting them so badly. So I added that while she was at it she should get a new carpet for the parlor and a new set of dishes and see the forist about sending some men out to decorate."

"That fetched her, though it was pitiful to see that heroic woman's struggle between what she knew was her duty and her desires. But she knew that our mortgage was getting clamorous, and she told me so. I was firm. I told her that if we were going to do it at all we couldn't let the family go away saying how shabby we were and what a failure I must be."

"That settled it. The family did not visit us at the glad Thanksgiving time, and we ate in peace."

"No; maybe I couldn't win the heavyweight championship or capture the city of New York single handed, but I can keep the invader out of my humble domicile all right."

A Thanksgiving Centerpiece.

Try to have your Thanksgiving table and everything that is served look attractive, even if the bill of fare is to be simple, and try to have something new this year. If you can take time to arrange a centerpiece it will pay you. A flat oval basket resting upon a high wire frame is filled with moss. The frame being concealed by wild grape vines. Golden pears and pink and white grapes are piled high in the basket and fine clusters of grapes wired to each end. At the base purple pink and white grapes are heaped on a mass of leaves.

Thanksgiving Morning.

Thursday morning the household ought to sleep and rest a little longer than usual—it helps on the general feeling of holiday. The breakfast ought to be festive in some degree, though in no way rival the dinner. The chicken can be fried, while the potatoes, baked and if raised biscuit were not started last night, a johnnycake is next best, and this is just the thing.

The Bless of Ignorance.

I watch the farmer's axe and block. The while you little reek. You're called upon, my boy. You'll get it in the neck.

Thanks-giving Day

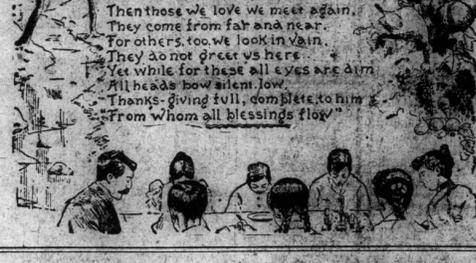

The days are gray and chill and cold. The wind goes whistling shrill. The slight snow in the hollows hold. The rabbits footprints still.

Above the boughs are brown and bare. Below the flowers are dead. The songsters of the summer fair. To summer skies have fled.

But yet November, month of storm. You have one golden day. That cheers the heart, and keeps it warm. Although your skies are gray. The Harvest Home of all the year. When all the barns are stored. In earths increase doth still appear. The bounty of the Lord.

Then those we love we meet again. They come from far and near. For others, too, we look in vain. For they are not here.

Yet while for that all eyes are dim. All heads bow a low. Thanks-giving full, complete to him. From whom all blessings flow.

THE HARVEST HOME.

An Old English Festival Akin to Thanksgiving—Bringing Home the Corn.

Thanksgiving day has an easily traceable connection with other and older institutions, and the original part of it is its independent source on these shores. Among a primitive people, which depended chiefly on its harvests for its means of life, it was almost sure to arise, and with that condition something of the sort almost always has risen.

Hence our Thanksgiving is an independent thing, and yet has relations. Its history is so short that it can be traced much more easily than is usual in such cases. Days of thanksgiving were appointed in the early years at various times and for various reasons. An abundant harvest was the most common one. A thanksgiving then came to be appointed regularly each autumn, and the custom gradually extended and became more and more firmly established.

All over the world, and in all times, it has been found that men to whom a fruitful harvest was the greatest blessing of the year have been inclined to express their gratitude to the giver of it in some special manner. When the character of the people was not so austere as that of the early English, they would take on so serious a form, and sometimes lapses of years probably caused the deeply religious element in thought to be forgotten altogether, while the feast and the frolic were all that occupied the minds of the harvesters. Perhaps many may have had some pleasant memory of the Harvest Home of old England, and whether they did or not, it may be appropriately recalled now.

There were many names for this simple bit of rejoicing. Harvest Home was the most common and best recognized. Among the others were Feast of Ingathering, Harvest Supper, Moll Supper, Kern Supper, and Corn Supper. One of them is so pretty and full of meaning as Thanksgiving.

Harvest Home was a most joyful occasion and the result of a natural pouring of gladness from grateful hearts. In its primitive form it marked the end of the harvest, and the bringing home in triumph of the last load of grain was a part of its formal celebration. In England the cart in which the load was brought was called a hock cart, and it was accompanied by a figure made of a sheaf of corn gayly dressed and adorned. Some have thought that this particular custom dated back to heathen times, and that the figure represented Ceres. A piper and a laborer went in front, and the cart was surrounded by the laughing and cheering reapers and children.

Somewhere on the road at times a neighbor with a taste for ancient practical jokes would lie in wait to throw pails of water on the cart, as it passed. This was a quite legitimate recreation, and those on or about the cart had to look out for the dryness of their own clothes and skins. When the last load was finally housed, the farmer would give a great supper to all who had been employed in any way about the harvest, and he himself, with his whole family, joined in it with the laborers so that the occasion was one of those which united from time to time all classes of an equal way.

AN UNADULTERATED THANKSGIVING DINNER

MR. SLIVERS presented himself at the Kranke home at half past 1 o'clock in the afternoon of Thanksgiving day so hungry that while he sat in the front room and talked blithely to his esteemed host he felt it would be only by the most heroic self-restraint that he would refrain from leaping at the bright gilded cage that swung in the window and swallowing the canary bird, feathers and all, without salt or pepper.

This savage attitude of Mr. Slivers was due to the fact that he had gone into rigorous training for the turkey barbecue at Mr. Kranke's.

"You come from out of doors," observed Mr. Kranke, "probably rode on the street cars—great carriers of disease, street cars. But never mind. Sit here for awhile. The atmosphere is well filled with formaldehyde, which I am vaporizing over the lamp, and any disease germs you may happen to have about you will be destroyed."

Mrs. Kranke and her daughter gazed in softly and shook hands with Mr. Slivers in the same enthusiastic manner in which they might be expected to pick up a deceased catfish by the tail.

"Don't be afraid to eat heartily," said Mr. Kranke genially. "You'll not get typhoid fever, by eating these oysters, as I know you fear, although you were too well bred to say so. These oysters are not taken from ocean water filled with germs from the cities. In fact, they are not oysters at all. They are made from oyster plants raised on my father's farm down in the country."

Next came the soup. No deadly hint of ptomaine poisoning lurked in that "I don't understand the blessedness of giving."

"There are some older people who don't understand," said her husband wearily. "Look at our neighbor next door. Never a penny does he give for the poor, and he has riches that he can't count."

But the old gentleman across the way was not worrying about the opinion of his neighbors.

"Mary," he said to his cook the night before Thanksgiving, "cook me an old-fashioned dinner tomorrow, turkey and all the fixings."

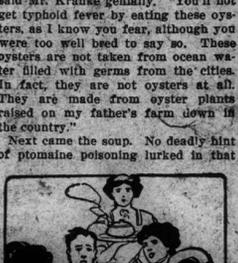

But fate had decreed that no turkey and fixings should be served in the house of the rich old gentleman, for Thanksgiving morning he suffered an attack of gout that kept him tied to his bed, with strict orders from the doctor as to diet. No orders, however, having been given the cook, she proceeded to cook the dinner.

The aroma of it came up the stairway and tickled the nostrils of the rich old gentleman.

"Just my 'n' just," he gumbled, "not to be able to eat it, and he sat up in bed to ring his little bell and to order all the doors shut to keep out the tantalizing smell."

The movement brought his eyes on a level with the window, and he looked straight across into the dining room of the minister's little flat.

"By the gods," murmured the old man, "it's eggs—scrambled eggs—and on Thanksgiving, I why in the name of all that's appetizing don't they have turkey?"

He rang his bell sharply. "Send the cook," was his peremptory order, and when the cook came he asked:

"Is dinner red yet?"

"Yes, sir."

"Then carry it across the way, every bit of it."

A few minutes later a procession filed into the parson's flat.

"It's from the gentleman across the way," the cook explained tactfully as she stood in the hall. "He is ill, and there is no one to eat the dinner, and he thought you wouldn't mind."

There was really never such a dinner. The turkey was delicious, the pie perfect, and the little Keans brimmed over with happiness. But there was a deeper happiness than the mere joy of good eating in the heart of the Rev. Bobbie when, after a call next door, he came to his wife.

"I have found a good neighbor," he said, "an old gentleman with a crusty manner and a heart of gold, and that's the best of my Thanksgiving; sweet heart"—Temple Bailey in Omaha World-Herald.

THANKSGIVING IN THE HOUSE. NEXT DOOR

"THINK," said the minister's little wife, "of eating eggs for a Thanksgiving dinner?"

The Rev. Robert Keas smiled down into her wistful eyes. "It is strange," her husband answered, "that somebody hasn't invited us to dinner."

"Well, of course they don't dream how hard up we are," Mrs. Keas murmured, "and each one thinks the other has asked us."

In the days that followed no one would have imagined that the mind of the trim and smiling little minister's wife was constantly distracted by the problem of feeding four hungry people on a few dollars.

"I can't have turkey," said little Mrs. Keas stoutly, "and that settles it."

But it was harder to deny the "ridiculous," the little mother said, "we can't have a feast this year. But we are going to be thankful just the same."

The children looked at her seriously. "I don't see anything to be thankful for," said Dudley, the big boy of twelve. "What can the Lord expect if he doesn't give us a turkey?"

"Oh, my dear!" was his mother's shocked reproof. But little Marion piped up, "I'm just going to be thankful and thankful and thankful and ask the Lord to send us the turkey anyhow."

Mrs. Keas told her husband of the comments. "Poor dears," she sighed; "they don't understand the blessedness of giving."

"There are some older people who don't understand," said her husband wearily. "Look at our neighbor next door. Never a penny does he give for the poor, and he has riches that he can't count."

WALKERSON OBT., May 9th, 1911. "I have been in Walkerton in business for a good many years and many of my townsmen know that my health, for long periods was precarious. My trouble was extreme Nervousness, brought on by indigestion and Dyspepsia, from which I suffered in the most severe form. It was so bad that I could not sleep before about four in the morning. I noticed one of your published testimonials of how someone had used 'Fruit-a-tives' for similar trouble and asked Mr. Hunter, my druggist, his opinion on the matter and he advised their use. I immediately procured several boxes and I am pleased to say that I now enjoy splendid health and could not possibly feel better. I can eat with every degree of satisfaction and sleep without an effort. I strongly advise anyone suffering from like complaints, to commence using 'Fruit-a-tives'. ALEX. CHAPTER I

It was shortly after 9 o'clock when a brisk young man, out of a taxicab into the street of Broad street, for by a huge negro bearing a suitcase, he found the offices of Galleon & Co., one of the fortunate firms which, entrenched by own natural conservatism, refused to move when the curb came.

"Mr. Galleon?" inquired the corner.

"Upon what business, please?"

"I only care to talk to Mr. Galleon."

The old man arose with a slight testing frown, asked for a card, took it into an inner room.

Henry Galleon was about the age as his secretary, but he was His face and his bald head were with a baby's plumpness, his will glistened like silk, and the brightness of his eyes was almost infantile.

"Phillip Kelvin?" he said.

"Phillip Kelvin? I never heard of 'his' name," replied the secretary. "He's a very capable looking man and by no means a New York I should think. He has a tremulous large nose with him, the one I ever saw. The negro is a big suit case."

Henry Galleon pondered that quietly. Fanatics with bomb menaced the Wall street district, and they might come in any "find out his business. Mess was the sane conclusion."

"I did ask, but he insisted on you personally."

Galleon frowned. "If he can't plainly see to you, let him go. I am authorized to transact all my business in my name."

Messmer went out with that sneer, though he softened it some. Young Kelvin had evidently expressed an answer, for he smiled.

"Here, Sam," he directed, "please see to this desk."

Messmer frowned as the suit was slammed upon the top of a pile of papers, but he waited with curiosity while young Kelvin unceremoniously threw a bundle of surprising contents of that untidy bit of baggage.

"These," said young Kelvin, "are my letters about them and that I will not any one but himself."

"Yes, sir," said Messmer, with pleasing alacrity. "Yes, sir; yes, he was positively white and

"That is very simple," replied Kelvin, with a smile. "From perfectly authentic sources I secured a list of all the board of trade members in New York who do absolutely no bucketing..."

"Money," expostulated Mr. Galleon. "Money, sir, money," repeated Messenger, "paper money, all of high denomination—solid packages of bills!"

"Of course, Mr. Kelvin. It is none of my affair," he began hesitatingly, "but it is positively criminal of you to be carrying that enormous amount of currency about with you."

"I have deposit boxes in the best vaults in town." "The I must insist that you keep this cash under your own lock and key."

"Only more so," returned Rensselaer. "Out there he was bullheaded about everything he started after—little things or big ones. If he once set his head to get something or to do something even the boss wouldn't..."

"Lucy hasn't forgotten you, Sam," too, he read with a frown, but it was one surprise. A ring of the telephone interrupted his musing.

"I have some friends over in New Jersey that I can use as a cover story," replied Phillip, "and I thought you might sacrifice yourself enough to run over with me. I understand it's only an hour and a half if you take the tunnel."

"Yes, sah," replied Sam, looking briefly from the suit case between his feet and immediately concentrating his gaze upon his superior.

"Not quite," dissented Kelvin with a smile, then turned again to study the changes time had wrought. "It is marvelous," he presently resumed, talking more to himself than to the negro.

"They've been fairly happy years for both of us, Sam," said Phillip, "but now we really begin to live." He nudged a weary longer, then going back to his original subject, added, with a careless smile, "It is strange to me that, with all these advancements in science, business and politics have not advanced one whit, except along the line of their logical ends."

CHAPTER II. ARRIVED at Phillip's apartments in the Esplanade, Sam hurried into an inner room. Methodically he took cushions from the couch and pillows from the bed and piled them in a corner; then he sat down against them with the suit case between his knees.

"I don't think so," replied Rensselaer, with a chuckle. "As I remember him he had too much health, if anything, but that was about all he possessed."

"I didn't know he had any," returned Rensselaer in surprise. Galleon with his thumb fluttered the edges of the packages of money.

Wolsey and Haldane, (London Chronicle).

Since Cardinal Wolsey left England to visit the field of the Cloth of Gold, said Lord Haldane to his New York interviewers, "I am the first Chancellor to leave England," and he might have elaborated the comparison by showing how different were the conditions of travel then and now. The Lord Chancellor was accompanied only by his sister, and private secretary, whereas Wolsey's retinue consisted of 12 chaplains, 50 knights, 38 servants, and 150 dogs. The channel crossing was in a two-decker, of 72 guns, and a tonnage of about 1000. It took an army of reporters to find Lord Haldane in the Lusitania.

GRAND TRUNK HOTELS

"The Fort Garry," Winnipeg's new mammoth hotel, built by the Grand Trunk Railway, is rapidly nearing completion and it is expected that it will be opened on or about December 1st next. The power plant of the hotel has been started and the work of furnishing is being carried on night and day.

A feature of this hotel is the Green House on the roof 14 stories above the ground, which is now growing special flowers, which will grace the dining room tables at the opening of the hotel as well as supply the dining rooms regularly with fresh cut flowers.

"The Macdonald" at Edmonton, another of the chain of Grand Trunk hotels is progressing favorably, the steel work on this building being up to the roof while the stone work is up 7 floors, and it is anticipated by the contractors that the building will be ready in this fall. It is not expected, however, that the hotel will be open until the fall of next year.

"The Qu'Appelle" at Regina, is also under way, and the entire space to be occupied by this hotel has been excavated and the foundation is now being put on so that the steel work can be commenced this fall.

"The Prince Rupert" at Prince Rupert, B. C., another of the Grand Trunk Pacific hotels, is also under way, and the ground is being cleared for the construction of what will be the finest hotel on the Pacific Coast. The high standard that surrounds the "Chateau Laurier" at Ottawa, the first of the Grand Trunk chain of hotels, will be followed throughout in the complete chain that is now being built across the Continent.

ERRORS OF DEATH-BED REPENTANCE

Sins of a Lifetime Cannot Be Got Rid of by a Prayer.

A MUCH MISUNDERSTOOD TEXT

It Has Encouraged Sinners to Continue in Sin—It Is Folly to Think That the Murdered Sinner Goes to Eternal Torment, Whilst the Murderer, Because of a Death-Bed Prayer, Is Called to Heavenly Glory—A Misreading of the Bible Leads to Error—In Conjunction With Other Errors.

Brooklyn, N. Y., October 12.—The following address was given at the meeting for his text, "Jesus' words to the dying thief," "Verily I say unto thee, this day shalt thou be with Me in Paradise." (Luke 23:43). He declared that the words of the Master's words had been as has this text, a misunderstanding produced so terribly a fruitage of sin.

The influence of the text, the Pastor declared, had been greatly increased by the misreading of the text, the dying sinner passes into everlasting torture. Those under the spell of this false doctrine cannot be reproved for wishing to escape from it; they are lying in wait. As the drawing man grasps at a straw, so those who hope for their dead are being held up by this error, and at the narrative of the thief, and hope that their departed loved ones are in Paradise.

Well do I remember conducting a funeral service which was interrupted by the wails of the widow. The husband had been shot by an assassin's bullet in a distant mining region. He had died not being a member of a church, and by no means a saint. The poor widow's wails, I afterward learned, were caused by the thought that not having had a moment's warning, the murdered man had failed to say "God forgive me," and thus to gain Paradise.

Who can blame the poor woman for her grief? Had she been told, as I think by the Bible, that the Lord would forgive me, and thus to gain Paradise.

Let me be misunderstood. I would not say that a death-bed repentance, or a last prayer, would save a sinner from the consequences of his sins. There are no such things as death-bed repentance, or a last prayer, which will save a sinner from the consequences of his sins.

But there will be a difference between the conditions of the two thieves. Both will be in Paradise; for the one who had been a sinner, the hardened thief may have had a less favorable birth, or a less favorable environment in life. Only the Lord, in His wisdom, is able to know how much excuse should be made for him, and how much penalty should attach to him.

The sinner's heart is much more favorably conditioned, not merely because he spoke some kindly words to the Master in his hour of need, but especially because those words indicated that his heart was in a more just and tender condition. Additionally we are to remember that the sinner had especially promised that he would do good to himself, or any of his followers, should receive a special reward. Any such promise of kindness would imply a condition of better character from the Kingdom; hence the promise of a special blessing for such good deeds is based on the recognition of principle and character.

It seems difficult to many to think of God's having a provision for the majority of our race in the future. Somehow, the majority of us are fixed at death. The only text ever quoted in support of this thought is a statement of the Bible, that the Sodomites will be there, as well as the people to whom He preached. And significantly He stated that it would be more tolerable for Sodom and Gomorrah in the Day of Judgment than for Chorazin, Bethsaida and Capernaum; for if the Sodomites had been privileged to enjoy the preaching of Jesus they would have repented in sackcloth and ashes.

From the Master's words we thus perceive how serious might be our judgments of the hearts of men. The people of Bethsaida, Chorazin and Capernaum were regular attendants of His synagogue, devout people, having a form of godliness, but knowing little or nothing of His power. They will have an opportunity also during the thousand-year Judgment Day of Messiah's Kingdom. If they will they may then learn the lessons necessary and eventually attain everlasting life. But because of their greater privileges, the blessings they will enjoy in the future will be correspondingly curtailed; and it will be more tolerable for Sodom than for them.

It remains for the faithful men to utter the remark day in, and day out, of "Well-and-truly said."

from some proper penitence for their sins—sickness, sorrow, pain. Nor is the forgiveness of sins in this life age meant that no stripes will be put upon the transgressors. Jesus distinctly tells us, "respecting that future age, that those who have sinned against knowledge, light, will be punished with many stripes, while those who have sinned with less light, will be punished with fewer stripes." (Luke 12:48).

Take for example the son of the widow of Naim, or others of those awakened by the Lord. We know little respecting their relationship to God. This widow's son, who had been a good man or a wicked man, but the fact that he had been awakened from the sleep of death by the Master would certainly work up in the Master toward him afterward in the matter of forgiving sins for which he might repent.

God's entire object in providing the Kingdom of Messiah and in restraining Satan and causing the knowledge of God's glory to fill the earth is to give mankind a better opportunity than is now generally enjoyed for repentance and reconciliation with Himself. Now, only the favored few can save their souls, and understand. Then, all, from the least to the greatest, shall be brought to a knowledge of the Lord and His goodness, and unto Him will be said, "every knee shall bow and every tongue confess."

Now we see by the light of the Bible that good and bad, civilized and heathen, all go, at death, to the Bible-hell-to Sheol, Hades, the tomb. Now we see that all are waiting for the glorious Morning, to be ushered in by the Second Coming of Jesus. Now we see that only the few have yet had the light and blessing which determine their everlasting destiny; that the overwhelming majority of us, by the Second Coming of Jesus, will be associated with Jesus as spirit beings in the Kingdom, while the favored few of previous times will be associated with the same Kingdom as its earthly representatives. In their cases only will the Divine judgment have been settled.

The remainder of mankind, dying in more or less ignorance of God and His terms of acceptance of sinners, are to have their judgment, or trial, during the thousand-year Judgment Day of Messiah's Kingdom. The willing and obedient shall be blessed and enter into eternal life. The disobedient, willful sinner will die the Second Death.

Jesus, in speaking of that coming Judgment Day of the world, declared that the Sodomites will be there, as well as the people to whom He preached. And significantly He stated that it would be more tolerable for Sodom and Gomorrah in the Day of Judgment than for Chorazin, Bethsaida and Capernaum; for if the Sodomites had been privileged to enjoy the preaching of Jesus they would have repented in sackcloth and ashes.

THANKSGIVING

OLD and NEW

By Donald G. French.

THANKSGIVING Day as celebrated thruout Canada partakes largely of the nature of a harvest-home festival, and it is, no doubt, to the influence of that time-honored institution in the Old Land that we may attribute the establishment here of this annual national observance. Historically, however, we may trace it back to the Pilgrim Fathers who settled in the New England States in 1620, and many of whose descendants came later to Canada, after the Revolutionary war and were known as the United Empire Loyalists.

Turkeys and Thanksgiving are always closely associated but the reason is not generally known or thought of. For the explanation we must go back to the founding of the day in America. It was after the first ingathering of the harvest by the Pilgrim Fathers in their home in the New World. And it should be noted that the harvest had not been a particularly abundant one, and, further, that the day was set apart to consider not only the immediate mercies as represented by the harvest, but the blessings of providence extended to them thruout the year. Four men sent out by Governor Bradford to shoot wild fowl, that the colony "after a more special manner rejoice together". And because the wild turkey, no doubt, garnished the feast at the first Thanksgiving dinner, his domesticated relative now holds the place of honor on many Thanksgiving tables.

FOR many years the autumnal "feast of ingathering" was merely an occasional festival, as unexpected prosperity or unhoped for aid in adversity moved the Pilgrim Fathers to a special act of praise. During the Revolutionary war the feast became a national one in the States and was observed annually, but after 1784 when a general thanksgiving for peace was held, it lost its national character, and except on a few specially proclaimed occasions was observed only in the New England States until 1863. In 1863 and 1864, during the Civil War, President Lincoln issued proclamations recommending annual thanksgiving, and since that time a day of thanksgiving has been regularly proclaimed every year thruout the United States.

FOLLOWING the custom of their New England relatives the people of Halifax in 1763 proclaimed a day of Thanksgiving for the conclusion of the peace that gave Canada to Great Britain. Thruout the colonies of British North America days of Thanksgiving were frequently proclaimed, but these were on special occasions and not as an annual observance. The first Thanksgiving Day in Lower Canada was proclaimed on the 22nd of December, 1758, and observed on the 10th of January, 1759, "in signal victory over our enemy and for the manifold and inestimable blessings which our Kingdoms and Provinces have received and daily continue to receive." The first proclamation of a day of Thanksgiving in Upper Canada appears to be dated the 17th of May, 1816, and was observed on the 18th of June, 1816, for the end of the war between Great Britain and France. After Confederation the first proclamation was issued on the 1st of March, 1872, for the restoration of the health of the Prince of Wales. The first of the annual Thanksgiving Days, which are now observed, was proclaimed on the 9th of October, 1879, and observed on the 6th of November, 1879. Since that time proclamations have been issued every year. For some time the date was made to correspond with that observed in the United States, but it was generally felt that this was too late in the year to serve the purpose of a harvest festival and also that it fell too near the celebration of Christmas. It was, therefore, put back to October, being observed usually on a Thursday. Representations made by commercial travelers resulted in the government's selection of Monday to enable the commercial men to spend the holiday at home as well as to allow many city folk to eat Thanksgiving turkey at the old homestead. The turkeys are now warned to be ready for the third Monday in October.

ALONG the Pilgrim Fathers, Thanksgiving day was primarily a religious function. It was a feast day, not for the sake of feasting, but for the purpose of and "to thank". Religious exercises were the important feature of the day. As the observance continued, other characteristics were added so that the day as now observed in Canada has a three-fold aspect. The festival side which is not so pronounced here as across the line, combines with its religious and social functions. Our churches at least some of them, provide for the proper observance of the day with religious exercises for those who desire to attend.

THE annual Thanksgiving shooting match which was the "regular thing" in almost every Canadian community a couple of decades ago may be the natural consequence of Governor Bradford's "sending four men out to shoot fowl", or it may have been simply the result of the desire and the opportunity. Small game was then still fairly plentiful in most portions of the country and one form taken by the shooting match was choosing of sides under captains, points being given for the different kinds of game. The shooting period began a week or ten days before Thanksgiving evening when the side tally of results on Thanksgiving evening was made, the side making the least number of points put up the expense of an oyster supper or some similar entertainment, which was followed by dancing or games.

Where small game was not plentiful enough for this kind of a match, or the boys were not prepared to give more than one day to leisure, target-shooting took the place of hunting game, and ducks, geese or turkeys were given as prizes. This was individual rather than team shooting, for each contestant paid his fee in the competition for each bird, and the best shot took the feathered prize.

Quite common, too, some few years ago, altho reputed to be "against the law" was the Thanksgiving Eve raffle. Such an occasion was about the only one upon which you saw members of a strict Canadian community handling the dice-box. For ten or fifteen cents a throw you had the chance of winning a goose, duck or turkey for tomorrow's Thanksgiving dinner. The raffle quite customarily was followed by a dance or entertainment of some kind so that the ladies might share in the evening's enjoyment.

Thanksgiving shooting matches of the olden kind, and Thanksgiving raffles are pretty much things of the past and have been replaced, especially in the larger towns and cities by the Thanksgiving football game. The shooting match, if there is one, resolves itself into the hunting festival that lurks in the breast of man shows itself in the Thanksgiving Day croquet of the small boy and the growing youth to the highroads and woodlands armed with all classes of weapons from the death-dealing catapult to the latest make of rifle.

FOR what, as a nation, should Canada be thankful in this year nineteen hundred and thirteen? If we consider only material prosperity, there is much to be thankful for—an abundant harvest, in practically every part of the land; increased returns from many other branches of national resources; a steady advance in the opening up of our newer lands; a buoyant confident hope in the future of our country. It is true that the year has, in some respects, been one of adversity, but the adverse conditions should have the ultimate effect of bringing about a saner, more careful and more certain national growth.

This year there has been much preliminary celebrating of the "Hundred Years of Peace" between Canada and the neighboring republic. While other countries in America and in Europe are being devastated by the horrible agencies of war, it behooves us to be grateful that we are so far removed from even the probability of such dread occurrences.

Let us be thankful, too, for what progress Canada has made during the year in other than mere material affairs.

There are Canadians, few it may seem, but possibly as many in proportion to the general population, as any other country has, who are "following the gleam" of a spiritual vision in the fields of art, literature and science, and accomplishing what is more lasting than the production of money-making things—they are making permanent the world of ideas and knowledge as a heritage for future Canadians.

It has been a goodly year in a goodly country. Be thankful that you are a Canadian!

COMPANY TO RE

A fierce and costly fire in Brantford early on Sunday.

The establishment of T Limited, hide, wool and leather, was the scene of the conflagration. The premises were on the south side of the street. The blaze must have been in some time before it was discovered. Then someone, unknown, rang an alarm from box 62, at the corner of King and Colborne Street. The contents largely wool and greases, contributed a fire and when the brigade arrived and quick run, they were confronted by a roaring mass of flames from the end of the structure to the street.

It was one of the hottest ever recorded in the city. Members of the department just about roasted. As usual, ever, under the able direction of Chief Lewis, they tackled with their accustomed vim and vigor.

The brigade had six steam engines, reinforced by one from Scarfe factory and another from Harris factory. This made a number and they needed it. The fight was kept up until a fore absolute control was secured that time buildings and contents either been destroyed or else damaged.

Scarfe Factory Saved
One of the main portions of work was to save the Scarfe factory which adjoins. For a time it was momentarily feared the inflammable contents of the building would ignite but by water playing between the further disaster was avoided those who saw the brigade will agree that they never did or more disagreeable work.
