Walnuts as Food.
The ancients held the walnut in high esteem. Mortals could and did exist on acorns, but walnuts were so delicious in taste and flavor, so palatable and nutritious, that they were revered as food only for the gods to dine upon. Modern investigation and uses of the walnut to such an extent that it is now regarded not only as a luxury, but as a food of great nutritive value. A chemical analysis of the nut shows that it is six times as nutritious as meat. No vegetable or fruit, with the possible exception of the olive, can be compared with the walnut as a strength-giving and fat-producing food. All nut are possessed of elements of nutrition, but the highest in rank is the walnut - Manchester Guardian.

An "Angelus clock" has just been presented to the Pope. This invention, recently patented by an Englishman, strikes the Angelus at the appointed hours, 6 a. m., midday and 6 p. m. (not at 12 o'clock midnight), and makes the pause for the response. It is an ordinary clock in all other respects. The Angelus adjustment can be fitted to all existing clocks and watches without interfering with the mechanism.

is to be found in the Granite Mountain shaft of the North Butte Mining Company. This shaft is about being completed and will ultimately have a lift of 4,000 feet. The capacity from this point will be 300 tons per hour, while from the 2,000-foot level it will be 300 tons per hour. The hoisting drum is 12 feet in diameter and will be driven by a direct connected electric motor supplied with power from a generator set provided with a 50-ton flywheel. The hoisting motor has a maximum intermittent rating of 4,500-horsepower.

The Norwegian Government has acquired ownership of many of the larger waterpowers in the country and is still engaged in securing possession of others, with the idea of operating all the State railroads from power generated at these points. of electrification has already commenced on the Drammen and Christiania road. The outlay of money for this work is very large, that for the power stations alone amounting to $12,000,000, but it is anticipated that the saving in the operation of the lines will soon justify the expenditure.

The layman watching a tiny hack saw blade working its way through a tough piece of steel or other metal is filled with wonder, for it seems like putting a tiny boy to do the task of a giant. On account of the severity of its service considerable ingenuity has been expended in the improvement of these little blades. The latest idea is that of making a saw which has a soft, flexible back with hard tempered teeth. As a test of the strength of this blade it was found that it would support two men, representing a total weight of 283 pounds, without breaking.

ways the one carrying the largest number of quality birds is the one that shows a return for the work and investment. Lack of knowledge and nerve to properly cull has caused more than one poultry farm to cease operations, and there is no more important essential to success in poultry than that of proper culling the flock at the right time.
The fanciers are the one class of poultry raisers who practice close culling, and in this one can thank the "American Standard of Perfection," the breeder's guide and the fancier's law. This class of breeders knows that all fowls must be up to standard weight, and conform to a certain extent to the standard shape and color, and to accomplish this close culling must be practiced, to enable them to obtain a fair percentage of fowls that they could both show to an advantage and sell. The so-called utility breeder had this same goal, but the large majority ignored it, and retained only fowls that they figured would produce eggs, with the result that in some instances eggs were obtained in goodly numbers, but shape and color, as well as size, was last. Happily there is a class of commercial poultry raisers who did not lose sight of the fact that a standard fowl could produce as well as those not so thoroughly bred, and to these leaders one can look for improved breed work in the future, and it is in this combination flock that will in the end prove the winner.

CHEAPER BREAD

Baking Quality of the Lower Grades of Flour.
(Experimental Farms Note.)
With the ever increasing cost of living, it has become necessary to find corresponding means of saving. The housewife is the person on whom most of the responsibility of economizing rests. The use of some of the cheaper grades of flour, instead of the highly expensive first patent, is another means of saving that may be added to the already long list. During the war, all members of the community were forced to use government standard flour which was of a lower grade than most people had been accustomed to. Nevertheless, most of the bakers succeeded in furnishing bread so good that few people would have considered it distinctly inferior had it not been for the difference in color. Too much attention has, however, always been paid to color in flour and bread. Bread that is really very pale is not so healthful as bread made of a higher grade of flour.

made of somewhat lower grade of flour, and the war-time bread was really superior as a food to the extremely white product in use previously. Lower grades of flour somewhat similar to the government standard flour can always be purchased but are not usually in much demand on account of their inferior color. These second and third grade flours, however, contain a higher percentage of protein and assimilable phosphates. These features are distinctly advantageous.

When the lower grades of flour may require some slight modifications in the baking method in order to produce the best possible bread, these changes are not serious and, as a rule no difficulty whatever will be experienced in handling such flours. When we consider the lower price of the cheaper grades of flour and their high nutritive value, we see two distinct advantages in using them. The claims made for the whitest flours are nearly always much exaggerated and are sometimes quite absurd, and the public would do well to insist on obtaining the really superior materials which are sold as inferior. - P. Russell Cowan, Cerealist.

Poultry World

CLOSE CULLING MEANS SUCCESS

(J. Harry Weisler, in Philadelphia Record.)
This is the time of year when the process of culling the flock throughout the country is in progress, and it is a far more important job than the majority of poultry keepers seem to realize. To properly cull the flock requires nerve, and plenty of it, and the poultry keeper who realizes this, and culls his flock each year close and hard, is the one that will be planning the balance on the proper side of the ledger. Every flock, no matter how skillful the breeder, has its percentage of poor chickens, and the less skillful the poultry keeper is in the art of raising chickens the larger the percentage of poor fowls in the flock will be found. Culling out poultry that has not made the record in its pallet year is not all that is required, but culling the fowls that do not come up to standard requirements as to color applies as well; shape must be figured on, weight also being considered.

Many poultry keepers differ in their methods of culling. The majority of so-called utility poultry keepers retain all pullets for egg production, regardless of color, shape or weight. Another class retains all females hatched, with the exception they must be hatched from eggs of good producing fowls. Then there is a small class of breeders that are careful to retain only pullets that are up to the proper weight. The last and smallest class of cullers are those poultry keepers who cull all from the flock that are not up to standard weight, shape and color to a certain extent, and whose chicks came from known egg producers; these are called combination breeders, who have both good-looking fowls, as well as good layers, and it is this smaller class of breeders that will first reach the top of the ladder of poultry fame and profits.

Utility flocks as run in the past have about come to the ending. In the old days anything that looked like a pullet was retained for egg production, regardless of shape, size or color. To-day, with high feed costs and equipment, the poultry keeper is forced to obtain a fair percentage of eggs or a loss is bound to result, and this means that the utility poultry keeper who hopes to make good must resort to closer culling than has been practiced in the past.

The advantage of proper culling will soon be seen, although it may appear wasteful at first to discard growing pullets and sell them on the open market at a time when prices are generally low. The first culling should be of all males and females that at two or three months are lagging behind the rest of the flock in weight. These chickens will never make good, and it is money saved when they are culled at this time. The second culling can come when the fowls are three and four months. Again the poultry keeper can find a number of birds that are still below the standard weight, off in color and shape, the remaining cockerels that are being retained for future breeders, or sale birds, can now be picked up as to color, shape and weight are concerned. If the poultry keeper has nerve the flock the first year will be culled 50 per cent. But every bird retained will be up to weight, a quick maturing fowl, that will produce eggs a month earlier than those that will take a long time in developing and even when matured will not be up to standard weight. By right culling, which is not now practiced by the majority of commercial poultry keepers, a better flock each year will result. Every poultry keeper knows that the hardest problem on the farm or plant is to each year incubate and breed successfully a new crop of chicks, and it is hard for them to dispose of those that do not attain to the top standard, especially in females, and the result is that year after year they are hatching chicks chicks that cannot help but produce a large number of undersized fowls, no matter how well they are raised and cared for. To a certain extent like begets like, and a fair percentage of good-sized layers cannot be expected when the breeding fowls are not of the proper quality. The successful poultry farm is not al-

PRESENT COST AND SELLING PRICE OF HOGS

When a man states that there is no money in hogs he bases his contention largely on more or less accurate records of feeding costs, and feeding costs only. If the market hog cannot even pay for his feed, what then of interest on investment, labor, risk, losses, marketing expenses, etc., etc.? The feed cost to produce one hundred pounds of pork may be calculated by including the cost of maintenance of the breeding stock, responsible for the market hogs. Applying this method, one hundred pounds of pork would require about 600 pounds of meal. American farm survey figures indicate even a higher meal cost, -615 pounds. Valuing meal and grain at $70.00 per ton which is conservative enough, the herd feeding charges per hundred pounds of pork would amount to $21.00 on the 6 to 1 basis. Even this does not cover all farm costs. Figures available from herds on the Experimental Farm System compare very closely with those obtained in farm survey reports, i.e. that approximately 78 per cent. of the cost of pork production is for feeds and the remaining 22 per cent. to cover farm costs exclusive of shipping charges. To produce Canadian conditions require from 450 to 500 pounds of grain or the equivalent. At $70.00 per ton for meal this would represent a feed cost per cwt. of pork of $16.62 which figure represents only 78 per cent. of the total cost. One hundred per cent. of the feed plus the farm charge would amount to $21.23 per cwt.

The above figure may appear startling. There are hundreds of small feeders who can feed a litter or two of pigs on a much cheaper basis. Otherwise there would be very little pork produced. Why can a few hogs be raised comparatively cheaply on the farm? Simply because of the fact that a considerable proportion of the feed is in the nature of a by-product or perhaps home-grown. Multiply the swine activities on the farm and it is necessary to purchase more meal and grain at market prices. The cost to produce mounts alarmingly. So with the farm flock of poultry.

What shall we feed hogs? Grain, mill feeds and by-product feeds are becoming scarcer than ever. Wheat by-products are practically off the market. The feed markets of the future are most discouraging in prospect. The wholesale price of hogs has not appreciated correspondingly. The man who can feed hogs profitably today must have a comparatively cheap product or by-product to replace meal as largely as possible. Such are scarce. Milk products form the greatest of all. City and hotel refuse is another. Green feed intelligently used, soiled or under the right conditions, pastured, - is a third. Barley is one of the best of Canadian hog feeds - too little appreciated. Elevator screenings, if of standard quality, must be utilized wherever available. The man who is raising young pigs, who plans to feed them almost entirely on a grain ration, who has little or no milk or green feed available, will almost certainly be forced to place a high valuation on manure and experience if he is to get an even break next fall. - G. B. Rothwell, Dominion Animal Husbandman.

Facts - Though Fishy.
The world's annual catch of herring is estimated at 3,000,000,000, or approximately half that number of pounds.

The prolificacy of the procreation of sea creatures may be surprising to many. A herring, for example, delivers an average yield of 30,000 eggs, with a maximum of 65,000. Considering weight, the cod fishery is the most productive in Canada, but the salmon fishery is by far the most valuable from a monetary viewpoint. The standard packing of pickled herring, mackerel, alewives, salmon, etc., is necessary by recent legislation, should increase the price of these articles in foreign markets. A mackerel was recently caught in a trap at West Head, Shelburne County, Nova Scotia, with an elastic band around it. The fish measured about 18 inches, and the band had embedded itself about a quarter of an inch in the flesh.

Earning a Living.
How would you like to be a painter's model? You often see and admire the picture of a child, but have you ever thought how it was painted? An artist must always have a model, who stands in the position wanted, dressed in the very clothes that appear in the picture. And, of course, if the picture is of a child the model has to be a child. Think how trying it must be for a little one to stand or sit in one position, perhaps looking over his shoulder, or holding up his arms, or laughing or crying. Pretty children are always much in request as models, and they can earn quite a nice sum of money. As a rule they like the work, and most of the artists who employ them are very kind and do not keep them too long in any position. It takes a great deal of patience to paint children's portraits, because they are not so well able to keep still as grown-up people.

When The Day Is Over

When the house holds the cares and the worries of everyday life have dragged you down, made you unhappy, and there is nothing in life but headache, backache and worry, turn to the right prescription. One gotten up by Dr. Pierce fifty years ago.

Everything growing out of the ground seems intended for some use in establishing natural conditions. Dr. Pierce, of Buffalo, N. Y., long since found out what is naturally best for women's diseases. He learned it all through treating thousands of cases. The result of his studies was a medicine called Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. This medicine is made of vegetable growths that nature surely intended for backache, headache, weakening pains, irregularities, and for the many disorders common to women in all ages of life.

Orillia, Ont. - "I suffered from a bad case of woman's trouble with backache, nervousness, disordered digestion, irregularity and I had great pain all the time, sometimes I would faint at my work. I had one physician after another but they did me no good. I then took Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription and it fixed me up all right. I look much better and feel fine. I will recommend the 'Prescription' to all suffering as I did."
Mrs. MAYBELLE B. GRATRICH, 115 Albert St.

Write Dr. Pierce's Invalids' Hotel, Buffalo, N. Y., for confidential advice and you will receive the medical attention of a specialist, wholly without fee - no charge whatever.

SUNDAY-SCHOOL LESSON

Lesson XIII., Sept. 26, 1920. Saul, David and Solomon compared. Review. Psalm 72:1-20.

SUMMARY.—Lesson I. Topic: Overthrowing modern idolatry. Place: Hebron, southwest of Jerusalem. The armies of the Israelites and of the Philistines were arrayed against each other. Goliath, of the Philistine army, defied any warrior of Israel for forty days. At last David appeared and succeeded to meet him in battle. He was permitted to do so, and laid Goliath low with his sling and stone.

II. Topic: Friendship: what it is and what it does. Place: Gibeon, four miles north of Jerusalem. David and Jonathan made a solemn covenant to be mutual friends. Jonathan promised to protect David as well as he could, and David pledged to be a friend to him. Jonathan made a plea for David before his father, but it was in vain, so he warned David to flee.

III. Topic: Treatment of wrongdoers. Place: Hebron, fifteen miles southeast of Jerusalem. So eager was Saul to take David's life that he went in search of him with an army. David had already spared Saul's life in the cave of Engedi; and he went into Saul's camp at Hebron, where he could easily have slain him, but he had no desire to do such a thing.

IV. Topic: True success and how to win it. Place: Hebron. Saul and three of his sons, including Jonathan, were slain in battle at Mount Gilboa. David was divinely directed to go to Hebron to be anointed King of Judah. After reigning over this tribe for seven and a half years, he was again anointed, this time being chosen and appointed king over all Israel.

V. Topic: Making religion central. Place: Kirjath-jearim; Jerusalem. The ark of the covenant had been many years at Kirjath-jearim, and David prepared a tabernacle for it in Jerusalem. It was moved on a new cart, when it should have been carried by Levites. Uzzah touched it to steady it, and was stricken dead. It was left in the home of Ober-edom three months, and then was taken to Jerusalem.

VI. Topic: Elements of strength in David's character. Place: Jerusalem. David's reign was characterized by impartial judgment and justice. He had respect for the memory of Saul, his predecessor, and made inquiry to learn whether there were any of his family to whom he might show kindness. He learned of Mephibosheth, Jonathan's son. He restored to him his ancestral possessions.

VII. Topic: Elements of weakness in David's character. Place: Mahanaim, a short distance east of the Jordan. David fell into sin, becoming guilty of adultery and murder, and at the Lord's rebuke by Nathan the prophet thoroughly repented and was restored to the divine favor. Absalom, David's eldest surviving son, plotted against him. In the battle Absalom was slain and David was deeply grieved.

VIII. Topic: Penitential prayer. Place: Probably Jerusalem. (Psa. 51 was doubtless composed by David with reference to his great sin. He calls on the Lord for mercy. He confesses his sins and humbles himself before the Lord.)

IX. Topic: True wisdom and how to get it. Place: Jerusalem; Gibeon. By David's appointment, in the divine order, Solomon became king of Israel before his father's death. He made a sacrifice to the Lord at Gibeon. The Lord appeared to him there in a dream, and asked him what he should give him. Solomon asked that he might have wisdom to rule his people. The Lord was pleased with his choice and gave him wisdom, also riches and honor.

X. Topic: The value of a house of worship. Place: Jerusalem. David had made large preparations for building the house of the Lord, and Solomon carried out the plan fully. It took seven years to complete the temple. At the time appointed for the dedication of the house of the Lord the ark of the covenant was put in the most holy place of the temple.

XI. Topic: Tests of national greatness. Place: Jerusalem. The fame of Solomon as the wise and rich king of Israel far and wide. The queen of Sheba went from the south of Arabia to see Solomon and to learn about his wisdom and greatness. She said that not half had been told her.

XII. Topic: Alcohol—false claims and true charges. Place: Jerusalem. Solomon gave utterance to impressive words on the evils of strong drink. Poverty, wounds, quarrels, sorrow, crime, sickness and senselessness are effects of its use. He warns all against indulging in it.

WHEN BABY IS CROSS

Mothers, when your baby is cross—when he cries a great deal and no amount of attention or petting cheers him—something is the matter. It is not the nature of little ones to be cross and peevish—the well child is a happy child. Give him a dose of Baby's Own Tablets and he will soon be well again. The tablets are a mild but thorough laxative which regulate the bowels and stomach; banish constipation and indigestion; break up colds and simple fevers and relieve the other minor ills of little ones.

ONE OF GILBERT'S SONGS.

In a letter to the New York Tribune, Ernest Hartley gives the text of one of the brightest lyrics ever written by the late Sir W. S. Gilbert, which, he says, was never sung in this country, though part of "Iolanthe," because the music did not receive the same plane as the song.

Plan New Race for Mankind

Scientists are now turning their attention to the breeding of a new type of man. Dr. M. A. Schultz, an Englishman, has already made a start. He has adopted a nucleus of six children, a Swede, an Indian girl, an English boy, a negro girl, a Japanese, and an Eskimo baby. He intends adding to this little family a small German, a Chinese girl, a native Hawaiian boy, a Spanish child and a Porto Rican. According to scientists, these children are to be the forerunners of a perfect race.

CORRESPONDENCE.
 Editor of the Athens Reporter:
 Dear Mr. Editor,—As a tourist in your fair town and an admirer of your many beauty spots, will you allow me the small space to tell of my surprise at the state of darkness in which your streets are by night. Surely your reeve and council have the interest of your town more at heart than to leave your streets in this condition much longer. I trust on my next visit I shall have the pleasure of congratulating you upon your street lighting system.

"IT'S A DIZZY LIFE, BUT AN AIRY ONE," SAYS GIRL WHO TRIED IT.

After finding the bricklaying business too full of ups and downs, this amazing young woman decided to take a shot at iron girdering for a change. She is Miss "Collie" Collier, a reporter for the Chicago Herald-Examiner. Miss Collier, whose bump of curiosity is prodigious, was struck with the idea of experiencing the thrills of being a day laborer. She started in as a bricklayer, just fifteen minutes of which was enough to give her all the knowledge she wanted. She next hit the cement pile, but the men on the job cursed too much. It was at this point that the iron girders on top of the new Sherman hotel building in Chicago attracted her eye. Without any trace of fear, this slip of a girl mounted in the lift and was soon hammering away at rivets 250 feet above terra firma.

By willingness and ability to provide ships, Canada this year has drawn the West Indies closer to herself and to the Empire. She can make preferential trade agreements with other peoples under the British Flag, without arousing international complications.

Canada possesses men with brains who will make these preferential trade agreements. But to make good these trade agreements we must have Canadian Ships.

WHAT A HOUSE POUND.

While making her visiting rounds one morning a nurse of the Muskoka Free Hospital for Consumptives discovered a particularly sad case.

On a dingy street, in a hovel which they called "home" she found a mother dying of consumption.

The house was in a filthy condition, soiled garments, unwashed dishes, and food lay about, even in the bedroom itself there stood a loaf of bread and an uncovered bottle of milk.

Amidst it all two children played, both too young to help or to realize that they would soon be left alone. The mother died before an ambulance could be summoned.

This is but typical of the wastage of consumption; the poor are its especial victims. Too ill to work they are unable to supply even the necessities of life. You will wish to help. This can best be done by assisting our Hospital work.

Former German Army Officer Held for Masquerading as U. S. Lieutenant.

Theodore, Schude, alias Theodore La Grade, formerly German army officer, who is said to have entered this country masquerading as Lieutenant Arthur Kinkaide, of the U. S. army. This photograph of Schude was made in Chicago upon his arrival there in the custody of U. S. Deputy Marshalls. Schude is in Chicago to answer charges of impersonating Lieut. Kinkaide and of having drawn $1,600 of that officer's pay. Schude, it is said, is ready to confess, but denies, however, that he was ever a German spy. He is of German birth, but it is said cannot return to that country as he is under sentence of death there for an alleged murder.

NECESSARIES GROW CHEAPER

Decline in Prices Becomes More Marked.

5 P. C. Drop, Wholesale, in August.

Ottawa, Sept. 1.—Breadwinners, who have been keenly aware of the steady diminution of the purchasing power of the dollar, will be glad to learn that a tendency toward a decline in prices of necessities, disclosed early in the Summer, was maintained and was even more marked in August than the preceding months. Records of the Department of Labor show that the index number of wholesale prices, which stood at 256.6 in May, fell to 349.3 in June, to 346.8 in July and to 330.2 in August. The drop from the July to the August figure was the largest noted in any like period since the Winter months. It represents a decline of approximately five per cent. in wholesale prices. The decrease was due chiefly to low levels in the fruit and vegetable groups, occasioned by the abundant crop, to decreases in prices of grains, cattle, sheep, textiles, hides and leather, in some metals, raw furs, and to slight decreases in other groups.

Prices in some lines of building material showed a decline, and in others an increase. Prices of linseed oil, shellac and turpentine fell considerably, it is reported, but, on the other hand, prices of dairy products, from products, coal, coke and petroleum products, rose.

In spite of the drop in the last month, however, levels of wholesale prices are far above those of 1914, and even above 1919. In August, 1914, the index figure was only 136.3, and in August, 1919, it stood at 301.1. In August retail prices also showed a decline of approximately three per cent., as compared with those of July. The average cost of a weekly family budget of staple foods in some 60 cities in the middle of August, was $16.42, as compared with $18.84 in July. The decrease is attributed to a drop in the price of potatoes, with slight decreases in meats. On the other hand, there were increases in the price of eggs, butter and sugar, coal, wood and coal oil. Again, however, the new level is high, compared with a family budget of $14.43 in August, 1919, and of $7.63 in August, 1915.

The records for September and October will be of interest in view of predictions that the general increases in freight rates, effective from Sept. 13, would tend to arrest the downward movement of prices.

ALLOW GERMANS TO ENTER U.S.

Washington, D. C., Sept. 1.—For the first time since America entered the war, German immigrants are being allowed to enter the United States, it was learned at the Department of Labor to-day. So far, however, this immigration is restricted to Germans who had applied for American citizenship before the war and were detained in Germany at the outbreak of hostilities, and to those who can show "compelling necessity."

BLAME ON FRIENDS

If Hunger Strikers Die, Says Gen. MacCreedy.

Cork, Ireland, Sept. 1.—General Sir Neville MacCreedy, military commander in Ireland, in a telegram sent to Harold Barry, former High Sheriff of Cork, who has been active in the interest of the eleven hunger striking prisoners in the Cork jail, said he regretted Mr. Barry would not attempt to persuade the men to abandon their course of refusing food, and declared that if any of them died of hunger the responsibility would rest largely with those who encouraged them to persist.

BREAK IRISH REBELS SOON

Gov't. to Ask Irish Volunteers Generally

And Curb Republicans Ere Oct. 19.

London, Sept. 1.—Until further notice, "No ship or vessel carrying passengers eastern bound, is to enter the port or harbor of Queenstown," says a notice by the British Admiralty printed in the Official Gazette to-night.

The order, which takes effect forthwith, was issued under the Restoration of Order in Ireland regulations.

London, Sept. 1.—The Sinn Fein Intelligence Department claims that it has learned that the British Military Government, acting in conjunction with certain members of the Cabinet, has decided to break the "Republican" movement in Ireland before Parliament reassembles on Oct. 19, according to the Daily Mail's Dublin correspondent.

"Certainly a pronounced change has occurred in the councils of the high military officers in Dublin," the despatch adds. "Two months ago they were inclined to look kindly upon peace proposals, based on domination Home Rule, and opposed the arming of the Ulster Volunteers. They now approve the latter scheme."

The Daily Mail also reports that it is the intention of the Government to appeal for volunteers to assist in the maintenance of order in Ireland, the call for volunteers not being confined to Ulster.

MANITOBA GAIN.

One-Third Threshed—The Estimated Yield.

Winnipeg, Sept. 1.—Thirty per cent. of the threshing has been completed in Manitoba, with more in the south than the north, according to the estimate of the Provincial Department of Agriculture. Some flax is still uncut, at virtually all other grain is in stack or stock.

Estimated yields per acre for the whole province, according to correspondents, are: Wheat 17 bushels; oats 37; barley 24; flax 11; rye 17.

Thomas Grey, a well digger, of Manitoba, was instantly killed on a farm near that village.

SALMON PACK $12,000,000

Montreal, Sept. 1.—It is estimated that this year's salmon pack will bring the canners about $12,000,000, the largest sum ever realized from any salmon pack in the history of the industry. The sixty-two canneries operating on the coast are now planning to close down for the season. It is stated that they have already sold the estimated pack of 450,000 cases of sockeye at a total price of $7,000,000, and that the cheaper grades will bring another $5,000,000.

SHELL PIERCES 14-INCH ARMOR

Washington, Sept. 1.—On the heels of news that the Navy Department had successfully directed the movements of an 11,000-ton battleship by radio, it was learned to-day that the department has perfected a 16-inch shell which pierced 14-inch plate armor at an angle of ten degrees. The feat was made possible by the invention of an explosive of tremendous energy and by special constrictions of the head of the shell.

POLISH PEACE WAS BUT SHORT

Warsaw, Sept. 1.—The Lithuanians and the Poles are again engaged in hostilities, it is announced in last night's Polish official statement. Fighting has resumed between the two forces in the Suwalki sector, near the German border.

FARM CONDITIONS

Oats Are Turning Out Surprisingly Well.

The following is a summary of the weekly reports made by the Agricultural Representatives to the Department of Agriculture:—

Many farmers are now supplementing pasture with green corn and other feeds.

Hogs are selling in fewer numbers than formerly at from $19 to $20 a cwt.

The marketing of grain is comparatively slow, although Essex reports a considerable quantity of wheat and oats being brought to the elevators. Oats are thrashing out surprisingly large yields in many parts of the Province.

On the other hand, owing to wet weather and shortness of help, a good deal of grain is still lying out in shocks, which is not improving its quality.

Hay is selling at from $15 to $30 a ton.

Neither red clover nor alfalfa is as promising for seed as was expected.

Some farmers in Eastern Ontario are cutting their corn early to avoid frost. Lincoln reports that St. John peaches are finished and that the Crawfords are coming in. While peaches have found a ready sale, plums, pears and melons are slow.

Apple pickers are in greater demand in various parts of the Province than for many years.

The late harvest, the dry and hard condition of the soil in many localities, and fear of the Hessian fly is delaying some of the fall wheat sowing, and there is likely to be a shrinkage in the acreage.

So far a great deal of fall plowing has not been done, and most of it has been shallow. Wentworth reports a considerable disking of stubble ground. Middlesex states that a number of tractors are being used.

A record in laying at an early age has been reached by Eared Rock pullets owned by C. M. Goddard, Marrievale road, Ottawa. These birds started laying at the age of four months and nine days, one day ahead of a record set by birds at the Central Experimental Farm.

SOVIET CHIEFTAIN PLANS REVENGE UPON THE POLES

Copenhagen, Sept. 1.—A despatch to the Berlingske Tidende from Kovno reports the arrival at Lida, Lithuania, of Leon Trotzky, Russian Bolshevik Minister of War. Lida is occupied by Russian troops. Trotzky's stay in Lida, the despatch adds, is not connected with the Russian offensive.

New Red armies are being organized in the Beresina and upper Dnieper River districts, and Trotzky is planning a great winter campaign against the Poles, says a Helsingfors despatch to the Politgen.

It is reported that offensive movements by the Bolsheviks have already begun at some points on the Polish frontier.

POLISH ENVOYS START.

Warsaw, Sept. 1.—The Polish delegation, totalling 160 persons, appointed to conduct peace negotiations with Soviet Russia, left Warsaw on a special train last night for Danzig, where its members will board British torpedo boat destroyers for conveyance to Riga, in which city the conference is to be held.

The delegates took a considerable amount of baggage with them, and carried fur coats, as there appears to be every indication that the conference may continue long into the cold weather.

FAMOUS FRENCH WAR HERO WEDS LOVE OF HIS YOUTH

Pétain, Saviour of Verdun, Realizes His Lifelong Dream.

Paris, Sept. 1.—Marshal Henry Philippe Pétain, commander-in-chief of French armies in France during the latter years of the great war, and the French general work whose work at Verdun made him a national figure, was married to Madame Hardon, on Tuesday morning, says the Petit Parisien. The ceremony was witnessed by General Fayolle, another noted French commander during the war, and Madame Gabriel

Ferrier, widow of the celebrated painter, who was stepfather of the bride. Marshal Pétain and his bride left last evening for the Riviera, where the former owns a small estate.

The marriage is a realization of a lifelong dream of the marshal, who knew the bride when she was a very young girl, long before her first marriage. He always cherished a tender memory of her, and hoped that, some day, circumstances would enable him to marry her.

The bride, according to the Excelsior, is very wealthy.

Newspapers here compliment the marshal on the strategy he used in routing reporters and photographers, not one of whom had an inkling that the wedding was to take place.

ELEPHANT WENT MAD

And Caused Panic at Circus in Salina, Kas.

Salina, Kas., Sept. 1.—"Snyder," a $10,000 trained elephant, owned by a circus showing here, met his death this afternoon at the hands of a firing squad.

Prior to his death he furnished the curious who had travelled to the show grounds to see a performance a tragedy with thrills and fears—"When an Elephant Goes Mad."

Everything was in readiness for the afternoon performance. Under the great white canvas tent flocked the show-goers. "Dad," mother and the children were all there. The ringmaster cracked the whip, and then from a rear tent came a roar. "Snyder" had taken offense at the appearance of a new trainer. He refused to be subdued, and in a few minutes the crowd was thrown into a panic. They surged through the doors and crawled through holes in the side of the tent, while "Snyder" started to play ball with the cages of the wild animals.

A meal of apples and marshmallows mixed with deadly poison only added to his rage. A cage of four lions caught his eye, and with an other roar he seized the cage with his trunk and tossed it thirty feet.

A JEWEL IN THE ROUGH

Gradually for the last six months the lust for gold had been eating into his spirituality and destroying it. You can not serve God and Mammon—had he not entered into the service of Mammon, and been held there by the rich rewards?

He thought of the rich pans he had seen getting out. There was no claim like his in the camp. There was no man more envious or considered more more lucky than he. Yes, Mammon had paid him well in the six months he had served it, showered upon him more than God had done in six-and-twenty years; and here was God's gift, a human soul, a sweet human life, he could save and make his own—and Stephen groaned again, for he felt that the gold was dearer to him. How could he have so changed, he wondered. A year ago he would have laughed at the idea of a million dollars being a bribe for him to sin. He looked into his heart now and found there was nothing there but a passion for gold, gold! It was a yellow rust, that had eaten his Christian's sword.

Then his thoughts strayed to the girl he had just left, and her bright, fresh face seemed to sway before him as he walked. His excited fancy painted it upon the snow-banks at his side. She was so young, she seemed so fresh and lovely, it was impossible to think of her as tainted already with vice and sin. It was only if she were kept in this snow-bound prison, this mournful land of darkness, and suffering, where, as she said, she had no place or aim, that she would fall now far in the distant darkness. He could be her deliverer, her savior, if—

if he could. In the icy cold of that arctic night, great drops of sweat broke out hotly on Stephen's forehead as his brain was wrenched to and fro in the struggle. He tried to bribe even himself, tried to let his thoughts dwell on his passion of the girl, tried to think of the mere human sweetness that would go hand in hand with his victory over evil. If he won that bright, clean soul for God, would he not also win that loved human form for himself? But even the voice of passion was drowned in the clamor of the greater greed.

The next morning, as soon as it was light, Stephen went out to his claims. None of his men had come up to work yet. Stephen stood and looked over the stretch of ground beneath which he believed his fortunes lay. A light covering of snow had fallen on it during the night and lay about a foot deep in one unbroken sheet, not even the mark of a bird's foot disturbed its blank evenness—the claims looked very cold and drear in the dull dusky gray light of the dawn under that leaden sky. But Stephen's heart beat quickly as he gazed upon them. What did it matter that cold, dreary surface, when the gold lay glowing underneath?

Stephen felt as only a man of his sensitive conscience could feel his defeat of the previous night. His heart, all his better nature was crushed under a sickening load of mortification, and he sought desperately to find relief and justification for himself in contemplating the treasure for whose sake he had accepted it. As in other circumstances a man would solace himself for all sacrifices by gazing on the face of a mistress for whom he had relinquished worldly ambitions, and find excuses for himself in her beauty, telling himself a hundred times she was worth it all; so Stephen now gazed upon his claims, for which he had given up his scruples, his conscience, and his God, and tried to hug to himself the comfort that they were worth it. After a few seconds he tramped across the frozen snow to the line marked out by the banks of gravel where they had been at work the previous day.

That evening he could not stay in his cabin; he felt restless and ill at ease. A nervous sense of anxiety hung over him. He seemed to himself to be expecting some misfortune. His nerves, weakened by the lonely life he had been living for the past months, and exhausted by the sleepless hours of the previous night, kept presenting pictures after pictures of possible ills. He looked over both his revolvers for defence if he were attacked that night. Then he drew his fur cap tightly down on his forehead and went out. The stillness of his own cabin and the clamor of his own thoughts were unbearable. The night was still and starlight, the air keen and thin as a knife-blade. Stephen strode along the narrow frosty path, and took the road down into the town. On his way he passed Talbot's cabin. It was lighted up. The little window made a square of yellow light in the darkness; the blind over it was drawn only half-way down. Stephen stooped up over the bank of frosted snow and looked in. The great fire lighted up the whole of the small interior and threw its red light up to the cross logs in the roof. In the centre of the room, at a table, Talbot sat working. There were some sheets of paper before him, and he held a pin in his hand with which he was checking off some figures. His face was turned to the window; it looked pale and tired, but there was a curious expression of extreme tranquillity upon it—a settled, serene peace that struck the onlooker. He sat there working so steadily, motionless, calm as a figure in stone; and poor Stephen, torn in the struggle of his desires, slipping into the cold slough of self-condemnation and burned with the fever of greed, gazed aloud as he stood outside. Then he turned from the window and plunged back through the snow to the path that led to the town. He wanted to see Katrine, and yet he hated the thought of facing her after the parting of last night. What must she think of him? With her quick, mental perceptions she would have seen through and through his miserable mind; seen that the gold had got hold of him, held him now, and that his boasted religion had no power against it. No, he thought, he could not face her—he was still some distance from the town; then as he drew nearer, the unappeasable desire to see her and hear her fresh bright voice came over him. When he reached Good Luck Row he went straight to No. 13. He might have saved himself the trouble of his decisions. Katrine had decided for him whether he should see her that night or not. The window was dark; he tried the door—it was fastened; she was evidently not there. A chill ran over Stephen from head to foot, and then he recognized how much he had really wanted to see her. He stood outside the door a long time; the row was quiet, and there were few passers. He waited, hoping to see her come up each minute; perhaps she had only gone out on some errand; but the minutes passed and he grew cold standing there; still she did not come. At last Stephen moved away from the door and wandered disconsolately down the row. He went on mechanically, not heeding where his footsteps took him, and found suddenly that he had reached the main street down by the river. There was no darkness nor quiet here; all the stores had their windows wide open, and the light from them poured out upon the black, slippery mass of ice and melted snow that lay over the frozen ground. The saloons were in full blast brilliantly lighted and filled with noisy crowds of miners. The dance halls, of which there were some dozen along the street, seemed doing a good business. A shooting gallery that had been fixed up in a tent was not only filled inside, but a crowd of men and some women were gathered round the tent entrance, pushing and pressing each other in their efforts to get in; the glare from the flaming lights inside fell on their faces, and Stephen glanced eagerly over them to see if Katrine was among them. He passed one, disappointed. There was another tent a little further on, where a cheap band was playing, and a board outside announced in pen-and-ink characters the attraction of a "Catherine Wheel Dance." The crowd here was even larger, and lights were fixed outside, flaring merrily in the frosty air. Stephen walked past the stores and warehouses, past the noisy, crowded saloons, past the brilliant dance halls and the variety show tents. It was to him all a hideous, tawdry, glaring mockery of merriment; and on the other side of him was the sullen blackness of the frozen river. He walked on until he had outwalked the town front, outwalked the straggling tents, till he had left the noise, and light, and laughter behind him. When he glanced round he saw he had nothing but the river and a waste of darkness beside him. There was an old log in his path, he got down upon it and looked back to the mist of light that hung over the town, then his gaze wandered back disconsolately and rested on the ice-bound river.

Katrine had passed that day wretchedly, too. She had been doing nothing in one of the saloons through the afternoon, but the old resorts seemed to have lost their charm. The old pleasures had faded and the stimulus would not come back. The cards looked greasy and dirty, and revolted her, and the drink seemed to turn to carbolic in her mouth. She left at last, and went home to her lonely cabin and flung herself down in the dark in the chimney corner and tried to sleep; but her face danced before her, and women with gray hair and wrinkles, with her own face, stared at her from the walls. She was still lying face downward on the skins, half aching now after that long conflict with horrible visions, when a light and very timid tap came on the door outside. She got up and went straight to it; her face was flushed and tear-stained, and her hair ruffled and in disorder, but she never thought to go first to the little square mirror that hung in the corner to improve her appearance before admitting visitors. As she threw open the door, the stream of hot light showed Stephen upon the threshold white as a spectre called almost to death by his vigil at the river, with a strained smile on his lips and a great hunger in his eyes. His conscience reproached him; he knew he had not come bravely, with his hands full of the sacrifice, having conquered himself, and ready to lay down his life for her sake; but like a coward, still in the thrall of his money-lust, he knew all this, and stood timidly as the friendless dogs will gaze through an open half-door, wistfully, expecting to be driven away with blows; but Katrine met him with neither harsh words nor looks, she just simply put out both her warm hands and drew him in over the threshold. The welcome, the smile, the warm touch overcame him. "Katrine," he muttered, suddenly, as she closed the door and barred it, "if I—if I gave-up;" and then the words died, strangled in his throat. Katrine held up her hand. "Don't best to talk about anything like that," she said, gently pushing him down on the chair by the hearth, "till you are warm again. Where have you been freezing yourself like this?" She was busy lighting the lamp and setting her little old blackened coffee-pot over the flame. Stephen told her of his long, lonely tramp by the river, and watched her with keen, sugar eyes as she made the coffee and poured him out a cup. "Now drink it all, quick!" she said, imperatively handing him the boiling mixture, from which the steam came furiously. "It's like the ordinal 'ly fire,' and"

red Stephen, meekly taking the cup. With a heroic effort he swallowed three parts of it, and color began to come back to his face. Katrine observed this, and sat down contentedly on the floor in front of the ambitious fire, that seemed trying to leap up the chimney through the roof. (To be continued.)

Sickly Woman Given Strength, Vigor, Spirits

Many of the woes of womanhood, are due to kidney weakness. At first the back aches. Then pains gather around the hips and lodge right in the small of the back. To stoop or bend seems impossible. Headaches are constant. Unhappy existence. No pleasure in life when the body is overloaded with poisons that the sick kidneys can't filter out. Bright's disease is the next stage, but it can be prevented by using Dr. Hamilton's Pills for Mandrake and Butter-torn. They cure sick kidneys and cure them permanently. When the kidneys work properly pure blood is formed. This means nourishment and strength for the whole body. Back aches and dragging pains are forgotten. Irregularities disappear, vital energy is restored, and happy, robust health is once more established. Dr. Hamilton's Pills for women's ills is the slogan of thousands to-day. Enormous benefit in many ways follow their use, and no woman or girl can use medicine that will do their general health more good. For the sake of your kidneys, for the advancement of your general well-being, you can't improve on Dr. Hamilton's Pills, 25c per box.

The Candidate's Qualifications.

(Compiled after a perusal of the "Lives" of the Presidents.) (New York Life.) He should be born in a log cabin, in the midst of luxury. He should early in life manifest a dominant leadership in boyish games and be of a quiet, studious nature. He should be self-taught, and graduate at the head of his college class. In his early manhood he should not be interested in politics, and should carry his own ward by an overwhelming vote. He should marry early and look around until early middle age before selecting a bride. He should be the uncouth, rugged strength of the backwoods and the acme of many grace and polish. He should be a gentle, lovable book-worm and an enthusiastic traveller to the far ends of the earth. He should shrink from harming a living thing and be a devoted fisherman and big game hunter. His candidacy should be the result of long planning, and he should hurl himself into the race as an "unknown," sprung upon an unsuspecting convention. His "keynote" acceptance speech should be a model of rippling, logical oratory and brilliant verbal pyrotechnics. On election night he should spend the hours of suspense quietly at home, directing in person a large corps of experts at campaign headquarters tabulating the returns.

GETTING OR GIVING

A living wage—a place to serve, battles to fight and victories gained? The chance of a man great things to do— To live and labor through joy and pain? Thank God for the chance the world gives you! What do you get from the world, my friend? What do you give to the world, my friend? A cheery face or a frown and growl? The best that you have or shiftless work? What you can give or what you can get? Erave to suffer—snamed to shirk, Praise God for the service which is your de't!

The world gives back as you give, my friend! A measure of life is large or small. According as you capacity show: Self doth but narrow the life you live. A generous heart will larger grow— What you can receive is all God can give.

THE GIVERS AND THE GIVEN

Which are you, a giver or a given? Do not let "What can I get? what can I get?" ring in your ears too insistently—watch out lest it be the funeral bell of your life, the death knell of your soul. Getting is good if it does not crowd out giving. As long as life is well-balanced, as long as we think of others as well as ourselves, getting is a blessing. We have to get knowledge before we can give it. We have to take in before we can pour out. But we have to do both—the unused water in the pitcher soon grows stagnant. God plans to have no vacuum in the giving life; the helpful tides return to their sources. Let me tell you a little incident. A small manufacturer had a little shop and several workmen. He was a kindly, helpful man. One day a traveller's buggy broke down near his shop. This manufacturer went to the man's assistance, took two of his men from their work, and had his buggy put into travelling condition. To the surprise of the traveller the kindly manufacturer refused to take pay for the work. "No," said he, "this is out of my line. I am only doing it to accommodate you."

Now for the sequel, for gratitude remembers. The traveller was a man of influence. Contract after contract for work he managed to get for that little factory until the kindly, big-hearted manufacturer was almost swamped with work. "Give, and it shall be given unto you." Have you noticed how kindness flows back to you when you give kindness? Have you noticed how kindness joys in your life when you put a song of joy in the heart of another by a sympathetic or an appreciative word? Have you noticed that if you are helpful, and then some time of real need comes to you, there are always helpful hands stretched out to you?

But if you just reach out selfish arms into this old world and try to rather up all the money, and stocks and bonds, and happiness and comfort and luxury or even all the knowledge—just for yourself, you will travel a cold and lonesome road, and you will even cease to be profitable company for yourself. Selfishness is the Unas tree of life beneath which none sit unharmed. Friends are true riches, and "He that hath friends must show himself friendly."

"Count not thyself as poor, when heart of friend Beats with thine own! And thine with his; nor joy nor sorrow comes To thee alone!"

The sunshine, the showers, the dew and the cooling breezes, alike sing: "Give! give!" Only the young folk who are givers will have a song in their hearts. Let it be first of all a song of gratitude to our Father, for we are the almoners of His bounty, and He is ever on the giving hand.

SUN-KISSED FOODS.

Some people say that to be happy one should eat only sun-kissed foods. By sun-kissed they mean all fruits and vegetables that grow above ground. The more these things are dependent upon the rays of the sun for perfection the better effect they will have upon the individual who consumes them. Every man and woman in daily life is sure to need the brightness of the sun in the stomach as well as the heart and home, declare the advocates of the sun-kissed fare, and there is no better way of getting it than through nourishing food. In the sun-kissed diet there is very little meat, though poultry is used frequently and eggs are favored—poultry because it is at its best when the fowls have been reared in the sunshine and open air. Beef and lamb are considered more or less depressing.

Potatoes are carefully shunned, despite their great food value. They are grown in the dark earth, and never see the sun. They are apt to make one dull. Instead of potatoes rice is used freely, boiled, in croquettes or in puddings. Rice is full of nourishment—witness the Japanese nation. Its great merit is attributed to the fact that it is grown in a sunny climate and depends entirely upon the kisses of the sun.

Beets, onions, carrots, turnips and parsnips are entirely eliminated from the diet, as they are grown underground. Instead tomatoes—incused red ones—peas, beans, egg plant, cauliflower and cabbage are recommended, as they possess the warmth and radiant qualities of the sun.

THE TREASURE OF GOOD HEALTH

EASILY MAINTAINED THROUGH THE USE OF DR. WILLIAMS' PINK PILLS.

There is not a nook or corner in Canada, in the cities, the towns, the villages, on the farms and in the mines and lumber camps, where Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have not been used; and from one end of the country to the other they have brought back to bread-winners, their wives and families the splendid treasure of new health and strength.

You have only to ask your neighbors, and they can tell you of some rheumatic or nerve-shattered man, some suffering woman, ailing youth or anaemic girl who owes present health and strength to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. For more than a quarter of a century these pills have been known not only in Canada, but throughout all the world, as a reliable tonic, blood-making medicine.

The wonderful success of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills is due to the fact that they go right to the root of the disease in the blood, and by making the vital fluid rich and red strengthen every organ and every nerve, thus driving out disease and pain, and making weak, dependent people bright, active and strong. Mr. W. T. Johnson, one of the best known and most highly esteemed men in Lunenburg County, N.S., says:—"I am a Provincial Land Surveyor, and am exposed for the greater part of the year to very hard work travelling through the forests by day and camping out by night, and I find the only thing that will keep me up to the mark is Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. When I leave home for a trip in the woods I am as interested in having my supply of pills as provisions, and on such occasions, I take them regularly. The result is I am always fit. I never take cold, and can digest all kinds of food such as we have to put up with hastily cooked in the woods. Having proved the value of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, as a tonic and health builder, I am never without them, and I lose no opportunity in recommending them to weak people whom I meet."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills should be kept in every home, and their occasional use will keep the blood pure and ward off illness. You can get these pills through any medicine dealer, or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

OF COURSE.

Edith—No, I didn't have a very good time. I wanted to talk, but there wasn't a man there. Her Aunt—But there were lots of other girls. Edith—Of course; but that was no satisfaction—they all wanted to talk, too. They say the women are going to introduce pink teas in politics. Afternoon Reception

A charming and altogether brilliant social event was the afternoon reception at the home of Mrs. S. Frederick Newton, on Wednesday afternoon of last week. The day was ideal, bright and balmy, and almost one hundred guests called during the afternoon.

The parsonage had been quite transformed by the profuse decorations and the hostess received many compliments on her color schemes and the several fine effects attained. The guests were met at the door by Little Miss Gwendolyn Newton. In the front parlor (done in rose and white), Mrs. Newton was assisted in receiving by Mrs. Richard G. Latimer, president of the local W.M.S., and by Mrs. Irwin H. Wiltsie, president of the Ladies' Aid Society. Mrs. G. W. Beach and Mrs. (Dr.) Paul in the second parlor (done in deep crimson and green tints), endeavored to see that all were made to feel at home and that there were no lapses in the conversation. Mrs. M. C. Arnold conducted the guests to the tea room, where Mrs. William B. Percival and Mrs. W. L. Johnston poured tea, while Miss Klyne cut the ices. Miss Katy Hinchliffe, assisted by several girls of the Bluebird Mission Circle, all dressed in dainty white gowns. The tea room was decorated with great clumps of sweet peas only, and festoons of green made of asparagus. The tea table was exceedingly dainty and attractive, the refreshments delicious.

During the afternoon Miss Marion Cornell and Miss Carrie Robeson were most generous in furnishing instrumental music. The afternoon was an altogether delightful one.

Athens Village Council

A regular meeting of the Athens village council was held September 10, 1920.

Present, Reeve M. B. Holmes, and Councillors J. H. Mulvena, M. C. Arnold and Geo. Gifford.

Minutes of the last meeting were read and approved.

A by-law to levy and collect rates and to appoint a collector for 1920 was given the several readings necessary and passed.

A rate of thirty mills on the dollar was struck.

B. Culbert was appointed collector at a salary of forty dollars.

Moved by J. H. Mulvena, seconded by M. C. Arnold, that the following accounts be paid: H. Hagerman, $10; W. G. Parish, $17.72; Wm. Allingham, $1.80; Geo. Parcell, $2.50; W. H. Morris, $20.50.—Carried.

Moved by Geo. Gifford, seconded by M. C. Arnold, that S. C. A. Lamb be given power of attorney to sign checks in place of J. P. Lamb, treasurer, against orders issued by the corporation.—Carried.

Athens Village School Fair

The School Fair which was held in the Town Hall on Saturday, September 18th, was a decided success in every way. The display of poultry, vegetables and flowers rivalling many of the larger fairs. The day being fine a number of visitors came in, as well as the parents and friends of the children. Those who were not there certainly missed something, both in the afternoon and evening, when a very excellent concert was given by the school. The assembly room was beautifully decorated with flowers in profusion.

The opening number was the singing of the "Maple Leaf" by the school. The next, "The Teddy Bear Drill," caused much amusement. A duet by Marion and Ross Robinson was much enjoyed. A recitation well rendered by Anna Goodfellow and a pretty little "Daisy Drill" by eight little girls was followed by a duet by the Misses Kathleen Taylor and Mary Duffield. Then came the play, "A Canadian Fairy Tale." Though each and all taking part did credit to their very excellent training, mention must be made of Miss Marion Robinson, who had such a difficult
