At Parting.

The night is silent, lone, and here beside thee, Holding the hand that I so fondly hold,
I feel an ill: how shall I say farewell?
No words have we, and yet the summer weather, Lolling the garden, gathers us together,
And sings to us with words and smiles.
Was there a time before that time, I wonder,
When something flashed and rent the veil around me,
And I saw thee, and the Truth, I'll give
And thou, because thou art the Truth, I'll give Thee.
No longer withstanding to believe thee,
Though I fast sent up a sorrowful prayer,
How long the way thou sayest out, but only
That I must tread it lonely and alone, Unabating with my spirit, and don't Wish to see thee, I'm sure to see thee,
In my heart, the next time I see thee.
Nothing I ask, how may the Truth be known?
I have thee, yet by thee I'm still surrounded.
The sea's voice sounds about the farthest shore,
The moonlight deepens, love, and grows to gold.
And thou and I in it are strangely hidden—Ah, holy, holy moment of farewell!
—George Herbert Clarke, in the September Canadian Magazine.

Granny Grimthorpe.

By Mrs. Conyssa Carr.
She is eighty years old.
Her aged face is wrinkled and furrowed into manifold ridges and creases, like the ridges and creases seaming the mountains that surround her humble home. Her little gray eyes are lustre less in them, and her toothless mouth is but a slight indentation on a great ruined surface of ancient rock.

Not beautiful, but she is like a wonderful grotesque by an Old Master. Every wrinkle has a meaning, and they are all words in a long, wonderful tale of a long, patient life, which they,
and they only, will ever tell.

She loves flowers. Her garden is the sight and pride of the village. It stands hard on the highroad, shaded by a tree not a shrub between that and the low stone cottage in its small midst; and every wayfarer casts and does, stop to note it and to praise.
A delicate scarlet troseolus, anemone in southern English gardens, covers the gray walls of the house, and a handsome lilac clematis twines luxuriantly about its hooded porch.

A blaze of red begonia and gladiolus tries to rival the hollyhock and sunflower into the shade beneath her window, while the choicer sorts of crocus, pansy, geranium, and fuchsia fill the tiny border around her tiny lawn, and a rare lily blooms in a pot at her threshold.

"Mind ye'll spoil the flowers," were the first words she said to me, and she said that about a week ago.
I had come, begging to be admitted into this dainty sanctuary, but I've little believe that my unlucky easel, resting against a bank of tall thyme beside her gate, nearly lost me my chance.

I never forgot that first reproof; I wanted to forget it; the love of the rough, sun-dried creature for these tender blossoms was a thing to abide in the memory and to constrain respect.

I can see her yet—her tall, tough old body bent double over a drooping plant with a gentleness such as one could not easily fancy her bestowing upon any human creature; her old chin with white hair, and her mischievous eyes were so dark and so appealing; and her face of so perfect oval; these looked pitifully, for I saw, as she came nearer, that the eyes were weary, low, and wistful, and that the long lines dragged painfully.

She came close to me, and, kneeling at my feet, displayed a few tremuling petals, wares from the pack, which she brought from her back; then, as if still to hide her not, timidly, tenderly, she untied the old crimson shawl and disclosed a babe cradled warm against her breast.

"Won't you buy a bit of lace, dear lady?" said she. "The baby is scarce a month old and I need food badly." Whatever her reason for need, the need was evident. Who could have helped my heart?

"Where are you going?" I asked, taking up my purse. "You don't look good."
"I'm going to jelly town," said she.
"I've a relative there, if she be alive still. But it is a long way yet." The tears came into her eyes and she bent her head, displaying her face with trembling fingers.

I had just thrown a collar, when a wrathful figure, terrible as the incarnation of justice, darkened the threshold under the falling clematis.

"Away with you!" it cried, almost inarticulate with indignation. "How dare ye come into my garden; and begging, I'll be bound."
The girl sprang to her feet; her lip trembled.

"I'm in a hurry!" muttered she, fiercely. "And it's not your money I'm taking, anyway."
She wrapped her babe softly to her again, nothing in her stirring gently; then she stooped, and holding out the lace to me, began to pack her wares.

I put a piece of silver—double the price—into her hand. "There, I wish you good night, and to confess my weakness and get yourself a bed and a supper."
She looked up at me half dazed, and whispered gratefully:
"Oh, thank you, my lady! I might have had to pledge my wedding-ring."

Baby's Terrible Eczema.

Hands Tied to Prevent Scratching.
Five Doctors Failed to Relieve, but Zam-Buk Worked a Cure.
Mrs. Chas. Levere, of Prescott, North Channel, Ont., tells how Zam-Buk cured her baby. She says:—
"My baby's head and face was one complete mass of sores. The itching and irritation were so serious that at one time we feared her ears would be eaten off with the disease.
We had to keep her hands tied for days to prevent her scratching and scratching the sores. Doctor after doctor treated her in vain until we had had five doctors. They all agreed it was a frightful case of eczema, but none of them did any permanent good.
As a last resource we were advised to try Zam-Buk. The first box did so much good that we felt sure we were at last working in the right direction. We persevered with the treatment until we had used thirteen boxes, and at the end of that time, I am glad to say Zam-Buk had effected a complete cure."
Mrs. Holmes, of 30 Guise street, Hamilton, is quite as eloquent in her praise. She says:—"Zam-Buk cured my boy of boils and eruptions when he was so bad that he has been unable to mix with other children. Zam-Buk is a wonderful preparation, and mothers throughout the land should always keep it handy."
For eczema, eruptions, rashes, tetter, itch, ringworm, and similar skin diseases, Zam-Buk is without equal.
It also cures cuts, burns, scalds, piles, abscesses, chronic sores, blood poisoning. All druggists and stores at 50 cents a box, or post free for price from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto. Refuse imitations.

The Way He Scored.

Sir Charles Todd was for many years at the head of the Adelaide observatory and was the chief of the South Australian weather bureau.
Once when visiting one of the smaller towns of the colony he called on a man who had gained a local reputation as a weather prophet. Without disclosing his identity Sir Charles said to him:

"I dabble a little in weather predicting myself. Would you mind telling me how you arrive at your conclusions?"
"Oh, that's easy enough," was the reply. "There's an old cove in Adelaide called Todd who puts in the going, but he thinks the weather's going to be, and I always put just the opposite to what he says, and that's the way I score."

time they lived at Selby before the old man died. But never a thought for her eternal soul. And a rare, masterful maid that needed the contrite spirit.

"A light broke in upon me.
And she is dead!" I asked.
"Maybe! But past everything for long ago, anyway. She took up with a playacting chap that came to the town, and nothing would serve but she must wed him. The old folks never forgave her. Old Benjamin was a hard man, I'll allow. He forbade the old wife to read so much as a letter from her, and when the child was born—"

"There was a child?" I put in, remembering the photograph on the chimney-piece.
"Aye, a little lass, I've heard. But 'tis said old Grimthorpe would not even look at its picture, poor mite, and aid 'twas a sprig of evil. He was an rare, masterful man himself, and his darter took after him. He died soon after she ran away, and when her son was wed granny came here to get her living with lettin'. She did ought to need it, but she is a proud body, and she was better pleased to be where some knew the child that she held had disgraced her."

"He put his pipe back into his mouth, puffing fiercely as though half ashamed of his conduct; then with a curse and he left me.
I stood a moment, wondering, remembering, and understanding slowly.
Then I hastened homeward. I no longer blushed for my landlady. I blushed for myself.

The wicket gate was barred when I reached it, and I was conscious of a passing but genuine fear lest I should have so fallen into disgrace as to be locked out for the night. But it occurred to me that there was a back way to the cottage, and I betook myself to a gap which I had noticed in the hedge opposite the cow-house. I crept through it. I saw that there was a feeble light burning in the barn, and, as I was lighting at the cause, I saw a tall, bent figure stumble along the uneven ground by the wall with something in its hand. I looked and sure enough it was Granny Grimthorpe. I looked again, and even in the darkness that had now descended I made out the 'something' to be a steaming bowl.

is used in connection with Chamberlain's means that it never fails to cure diaris pleasant to take and equally valuable for children and adults. Sold by Rand's

THE ACADIAN.

WOLFVILLE, N. S., SEPT. 16, 1910

Since Father Vaughan, the great London pulpit orator, and Jesuit priest, made his great onslaught upon Protestantism at Montreal last week, there are people who fear for the future of Protestantism in Canada. They imagine they see a foe with the "boot" and other implements of torture, whose aim would be the overthrow of the faith in this country, and they are making a call to arms to repel the invader.

Neither in Canada, nor anywhere else, can Protestantism be in any real danger so long as it remains true to itself. The foes that it has caused to dread most are not those without but those within.

No man can have an enemy more to be feared than his own untrue self, and no cause can stand in greater danger than that one which numbers among its followers a greater percentage of "nominals" than of "actives." If the people who are doing so much shouting just now, would occupy themselves day by day in practical demonstrations of the vital principles which are the foundation-work of Protestantism, it is unlikely that they would ever have cause for trembling.

It so happens that the administrator of the Dominion government at Ottawa during the absence of Earl Grey, is Judge Groulx, a Roman Catholic, and as such he presented his homage to the Papal representative to the ecclesiastical congress. It would have been more diplomatic had the administrator eliminated his official title while presenting his homage, though after all the use of the title in this instance means much less than nothing.

It is claimed and said that Earl Grey's absence from Ottawa at this particular time was arranged so as to avoid friction touching the character of any official recognition of Cardinal Vanuelli, the Pope's representative, the Hudson Bay trip being speedily arranged. Father Vaughan said, referring to "the battle for the possession of the world," "It will soon be narrowed to the Roman Catholic church and the destructive forces of agnosticism, Protestantism, is disappearing." At first sight we would say that this was about as near the truth as a Jesuit priest could get, providing he, in his bigotry, imagined his church would benefit by the saying, but it is upon the reflection will be upon the reverend father, not upon Protestantism. On the other hand, if what he says is correct, he should be thanked for his plainness of speech.

A fair audience greeted the musical presentation which was given on Friday evening last in the Presbyterian church, but certainly a very much larger one would have been amply repaid. Wolfville has had so many take concerts of music that she is getting somewhat cautious.

Mrs. Smith (nee Miss Annie Murray) sang most effectively and will always be most popular with an audience in her home town. Mr. Clark has a most magnificent voice and will be better patronized when next he sings in Wolfville. Professor Pigott is a genuine interpretative artist with a remarkable sense of the emotional of the text. He understands precisely when the music of a song is spiritually wedded to the text in an indissoluble union. On Friday night the professor was in excellent voice and highly appreciated by those present. Mr. Hestey presided at the organ most admirably and his selections were greatly appreciated. The following is the programme:

- PART I.
1. Organ Solo, Allegro, from Sonata No. 1 Mendelssohn
 2. Solo, Lord God of Abraham (Hilsh) Mendelssohn
 3. Solo, These are they (Holy City) Gaul
 4. Solo, Oh Jesus thou art standing (Giebel)
 5. Solo, Oh Canada Richardson
- PART II.
1. Organ Solo, Allegretto Grazioso Tours
 2. Solo, One sweetly solemn thought (Amundsen)
 3. Solo, Beloved, it is morn (Aylward)
 4. Solo, The Outcast (Judh)
 5. Organ Solo, Grand Choeur Dubois

Mt. Allison Concert.

The Mt. Allison concert given in Kentville some weeks ago was so well appreciated by the public, that by the request of many, the officials have decided to have it repeated in the Methodist church there on Monday evening next with several important additions and changes. Among those who will take part are Miss Dorothea Welch of Halifax, teacher violin and harp, Miss Barbara Gales, organist, Miss Flossie Palmster, soprano; Miss Edith Woodman, piano; Mr. Earl Spier, baritone; Alfred Marsh, tenor; and male quartet. The orchestra of 25th Regiment Band, now at Alberton is expected to take part.

The Bi-Centenary Visitors at Grand Pre.

The visit of the Bi-Centenary delegates to Grand Pre, which had been arranged for by Rev. R. P. Dixon some months ago and anticipated with much interest by his parishioners, took place last Friday. A special train carrying the distinguished visitors started from Halifax at 8.30 for Annapolis Royal, reaching Grand Pre somewhat behind its time. The train drew up at the style opening into the Memorial Park and was there met by the rector of the parish of Horton and Rev. T. C. Mellor, Rector of Cornwallis. Among those alighting from the train were the Bishops of London, Nova Scotia, Glasgow, Ontario and Toronto. Revs. Mr. McComas, rector of Annapolis, Maryland, J. Loucks, Ottawa; Gillson, London Archdeacon; Pentreath, Vancouver, B. C.; F. G. Scott, Quebec; Archdeacon Armitage, Halifax, and many others. The rector was accompanied at the entrance to the grounds by Mayor Harvey, Rev. Dr. Cutten and J. F. Herbin, the trustees of the park, Warden Creighton and Messrs. E. W. Starr, H. Dalmaine and E. Watson, vestrymen, Hon. Chief Justice Townshend, Sir Robt. Weatherle, Dr. Johnson, Rev. R. D. Webber, Brod. Halsey, and others. The boys of Acadia Villa school marched down under the command of the principal Mr. P. A. Douglas and acted as a guard of honor. They made a most creditable appearance.

After a few necessarily hurried introductions, as the time was strictly limited, a move was made to the grounds. On arrival there a short address of welcome was read by the rector. Then the following by Miss Olga Trenholm, teacher of the Grand Pre school:

To the Rev. the Lord Bishop of London, I say, "We have heard of thee by the hearing of the ear but now our eyes see thee. We are glad, we greet you and your co-delegates on coming to Grand Pre, whose meadows and mountains and basin and rivers and homes are around you. We welcome you to this spot so much talked of because of your mission, because you belong to a church which has done and is doing so much good in the world, because many of you belong to the mother land under whose loving care we live in peace, none daring to make us afraid, because others of you come to us from different parts of this Canada of ours. We especially welcome you, My Lord, because we know that you love us children with a great, deep love. We try as children to do our very best to help the older ones of this place to do their best. We learn songs to encourage them. We come from school with hearts brimful of love for our king and our own country, for the boys and girls of England, Scotland and Ireland, Australia and Africa and India and the legends of the ocean, over all of whom floats one flag—the flag, and we tell our home folks what we have learned of our British Empire and of those who speak our language under other flags. We try to keep them from holding narrow views, from being interested only in our apples and our crops, and our near by friends. And it is not hard work either, for they respond nobly, having learned, before us, to love their king and country. We know that your Lordship will cheer us on in this work and we wish you God speed in the work which brings you here, to an Indian in an Indian's union. On Friday night the professor was in excellent voice and highly appreciated by those present. Mr. Hestey presided at the organ most admirably and his selections were greatly appreciated. The following is the programme:

Mr. Herbin then read a most interesting historical paper which was short, concise and of high literary merit. As it has appeared in full in all the daily papers we need not reproduce it here. After Mr. Herbin's paper a very pretty and touching incident took place. Little Marian Crane stepped forward and presented the Bishop of London with a bouquet of flowers with the words "From the children of Grand Pre to the children of Glasgow." Another bouquet was presented by Alice Rose to the Bishop of Glasgow. Both the bishops were deeply impressed and blessed the little girls. The Grand Pre school, which had accompanied their teacher then sang a verse of the "Maple Leaf." Then followed a few kindly words

St. Vitus Dance.

A STRIKING EXAMPLE OF ITS CURE BY THE TONIC TREATMENT.

St. Vitus dance is the commonest form of nervous trouble which afflicts children, because of the great demands made on the body by growth and development, and there is the added strain caused by study. It is when these demands become so great that they impoverish the blood, and the nerves fail to receive their full supply of nourishment, that the nervous debility which leads to St. Vitus dance. The remarkable success of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills in curing St. Vitus dance should lead parents to give their children this great blood building medicine at the first signs of the approach of the disease. Pale, listlessness, inattention, restlessness and irritability are all symptoms which clearly show that the blood is becoming impoverished, and we feared that we would lose her. As Dr. Williams' Pink Pills had cured her only sister of anemia I decided to try them again. After the use of a few boxes, to our great joy, we found they were helping her and in the course of a few weeks more her power at speech fully returned, and she could walk and go about as well as any child, and she has been well and happily since. When Hester comes to any one of our family now, we never send a doctor, but simply use Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and they never disappoint us. Sold by all medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box or six boxes for $1.50. From The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

It is to be noted that the foregoing records are all 70 and upwards and are well marked in English are not easily won at the provincial examinations, nor indeed in any subject. Only those who are very well prepared can make high standing.

An inspection of the foregoing table will reveal that high marks in mathematics are numerous. Eleven of these records lie between 80 and 90, while eight lie between 90 and 100.

The twenty-four who passed wrote on Algebra, and fifteen made records ranging between 70 and 96. Eleven wrote on Geometry and eight made records ranging from 76 to 98.

The results of the provincial examinations this year again go to prove the thoroughness and high quality of the work done in Wolfville High School. It is a good place to send your boys and girls.

England is about to make a start with a practical domestic training course. A school is to be opened in Brighton this month with eighty pupils. The school will take the form of a large boarding house, in which the pupils will carry on, under supervision, all the usual household work of such a place. The plan has been tried at Karlsruhe, to Germany, for some years with success. The course there for the domestic servants-in-training is one year, of which three months are devoted to cooking. The girls in training have been, usually, from 15 to 19 years of age. They paid about 50s for the course. At another German school, in Hesse, the girls are taken out marketing, and taught to buy with judgment. All this means to belong, as logically in a general scheme of technical education on any other matter included in it. Practical education in economical use of food supplies would be worth much to future housekeepers and their husbands and employees.

What Do You Know About It?

That's what a customer asked me recently about a patent medicine I had sold for years, and I was forced to admit that in reality I knew nothing more than what appeared on the label, wrapper and advertising. Some of the claims made were so extravagant that of course I could not take them seriously, but concluded I had better find a line of remedies I did know something about.

A Nova Scotia Hero.

In the early fifties a letter was received from this side of the Atlantic from a scientific gentleman then in Persia, describing some discoveries which had been made by a board of commissioners who were engaged under the mediation of England and Russia in running and making the boundary line between Persia and Turkey.

The deeply interesting features connected with their discoveries was that Colonel Williams, a native of Nova Scotia—afterwards Sir Fenwick Williams, the hero of Kara—was the commissioner representing England who directed the prosecution of the work. It was the good fortune, then of one of our fellow countrymen to bring to light the remains of the ancient palace of Shushan, mentioned in the sacred book of Esther and Daniel, the prophet. The locality answered to the received tradition of its position, and the internal evidence arising from its correspondence with the description of the place recorded in sacred history, amounted to demonstration.

The reader is invited to turn to the book of Esther, and there he will read of the royal feasts which were made by king Ahasuerus—a king who reigned from India even to Ekshippia. At one of these feasts he, in an especial manner, showed the riches of his glorious kingdom. All the people that were present in Shushan the palace, both great and small, participated. It continued for seven days in the court of the garden of the king's palace, where with white, green, and blue hangings, laced with cords of fine linen and purple to silver rings and pillars of marble; the beds were of gold and silver upon a pavement of red, and blue, and white, and black marble.

The pavement still exists, and as described by Colonel Williams, corresponds to the description given thus in the sacred history. And in the marble columns, delapidated ruins, the sculpture and remaining marks of greatness and glory that were scattered around, our fellow-countryman—of whose acquaintance quite a number of our citizens, enjoyed—read the exact truth of the record made by the sacred penman.

It may be further explained in reference to this particular discovery that not far from the palace stands a tomb. On it is sculptured the figure of a man bound hand and foot, with a large lion in the act of springing up on him to devour him. No history could speak more graphically of Daniel in the lions den. The commissioners had with them a most able corps of engineers and scientific men. The Persian arrow heads were found upon the palace and tomb. Glass bottles elegant as those placed upon the tomb tablets of the ladies of our day were discovered, with other indications of art and refinement which bore out the statements of the Bible. Thus, nearly twenty-five hundred years after the historians of Esther and Daniel made their records, their histories were verified by the peaceful movements of the nations of our day—and the chief of the discoverers was a native of Nova Scotia.

It is surely an interesting fact that the "hero of Kara" stood on the very spot in the palace yard in Shushan where Ahasuerus had prepared a scaffold fifty cubits high on which to hang Mordecai, and from which the hither despised Mordecai, after Haman himself was hanged, went out from the presence of the king in royal apparel clad in white, and with a great crown of gold, and with a garment of fine linen and purple.

"What kind of ducks are these?" asked the visitor in the ornithological department at the museum. "Labrador," said the attendant. "We paid $1,000 for those two specimens."

"Gosh," exclaimed the visitor, turning to his wife, "the says they paid $1,000 for 'em! I've bought finer ducks for half a dollar many a time. What have you got 'em in that glass case for?" he inquired addressing the guide again.

"Because they are about the most notable exhibit we have. Those birds were shot in 1856. Labrador ducks are now extinct."

"He says," exclaimed the visitor, turning to his wife once more, "they keep 'em in that glass case because they haven't a pleasant odor. And I don't wonder at it. They were shot in 1856."

OPERATION HER ONLY CHANCE

Was Cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Lindsay, Ont.—"I think it is no more than right for me to thank Mrs. Pinkham for what her kind advice and Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me. When I wrote to her some time ago I was a very sick woman, suffering from female troubles. I had inflammation of the female organs, and could not stand or walk any distance. At last I was confined to my bed and the doctor said I would have to go through an operation, but this I refused to do. A friend advised me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and now, after using three bottles of it, I feel like a new woman. I feel better, my appetite is improved, my bowels are regular, my nerves are strong, and I can now go about my usual duties. I feel like a new woman.
