

Disabled Canadian Soldiers

What Is Being Done to Restore Their Ability

The Military Hospital Commission at Ottawa states that 2,981 soldiers were under its care at the beginning of this month. Of these, 426 were at Sanatoria for tuberculosis and 1,516 at Convalescent Hospitals, 682 of the latter being out-patients—while 39 members of the force were in asylum for the insane. Of the 426 cases of tuberculosis and 1,516 at Convalescent Hospitals, 682 of the latter being out-patients—while 39 members of the force were in asylum for the insane.

According to a statement prepared by the Militia Department up to October 5, 1916, the number of soldiers sent back to Canada because of medical unfitness was 6,208. Of these, 961 were suffering from wounds, shell shock or the effect of gas; 712 were insane; 245 were afflicted with tuberculosis; while the remainder, 4,880, were suffering from other diseases and disabilities.

All Canadians ought to know what is being done by the Military Hospital Commission, acting on behalf of the whole body of citizens for the restoration of their wounded defenders to a position of self-support and independence.

Every disabled soldier is medically examined on arriving at Quebec. If he is no longer in need of hospital treatment he is sent home free of expense and discharged with a pension or gratuity according to the extent of his disability.

If he needs further treatment he is taken to the hospital or sanatorium where the treatment most suitable to his case is available, and if possible, to the institution nearest his home.

Men who cannot resume their former work on discharge from hospital are advised and enabled to take special training for new occupations. This is provided free of cost; and while the men are being trained the Dominion Government maintains them and their families.

Men needing artificial limbs are taken to Toronto, where these limbs are made and supplied without charge. Men with serious nerve disorders are treated specially in the Ontario Military Hospital at Cobourg. Each Provincial Government has appointed a Commission to help discharged men in securing steady and remunerative work. The Dominion Government and other authorities and employers, systematically give preference to returned soldiers when filling vacant positions.

The public can and should co-operate heartily in this urgently necessary work, by encouraging the men to take fullest advantage of the curative and educational opportunities given them, and afterwards by seeing that they get work. Local committees have been formed for this purpose in many towns but much more has to be done in this way.

The treatment most carefully carried out in accordance with the latest discoveries and the proved results of medical experience includes many forms of strengthening exercises, often requiring special and costly apparatus; the scientific use of electricity, massage, and continuous baths for affected limb with wise dieting and fresh air as a matter of course.

Occupation is often as necessary and beneficial as rest itself, in its curative and strengthening effect on body and mind. Classes are therefore held at the hospitals for instruction and practice in many arts and industries, such as carpentry and woodcarving, metal and leather working, typewriting and book-keeping, mechanical drawing and elementary engineering, gardening, bee-keeping and poultry raising.

These all help to increase the capacity of the patients, and to lessen the effect of any injury they have received, by getting them into practice for such industries as they can profitably undertake. The medical and educational officers try first to discover what each man is most likely to succeed at, and then fit him for it as thoroughly as possible.

It has been wisely decided that no man shall forfeit any part of his pension on account of his industry and enterprise in improving his own financial position.

CENSORSHIP OF PRINTED MATTER

Regulations have been issued in the United Kingdom relative to the despatch of printed matter from that country, these regulations having been designed to prevent the despatch of secret messages to enemy aliens under cover of printed papers and not for the purpose of detaining information openly published in the United Kingdom.

The Authorities feared that newspapers, etc., might be used by persons in the United Kingdom as a means of concealment for information which they may desire to communicate to the enemy.

These regulations, which are now in effect, apply to printed matter despatched from the United Kingdom to:

- (a)—All European countries except France, Russia, Italy and the part of Belgium not occupied by Germany;
- (b)—All parts of Africa and America except British, French, Italian or Belgian possessions;
- (c)—British and allied subjects interned in enemy countries.

These regulations contain the following provisions:

(1)—Printed matter, i.e., newspapers, magazines, books and other printed publications (other than trade circulars) will not be sent forward unless posted direct from the office of publishers, or news agents who have obtained permission from the War Office for this purpose.

Persons desiring to send printed matter should, therefore, give their orders for execution to publishers or news agents who have obtained such permission.

(2)—Publishers or news agents who desire to obtain permission to despatch printed matter, and who have not already obtained it under the existing regulations, should communicate with the War Office, stating whether they have existing orders for the despatch of printed matter to the countries concerned and the average quantity which they expect weekly under these orders.

(3)—Second-hand books despatched by dealers through the post are excluded from the scope of the regulations. They should be despatched in the ordinary way, even by firms who are in possession of a general permit, the name and address of the despatching firm being clearly given upon the cover of each packet. Such packets are subject to delay at the discretion of the Censor. Second-hand books despatched by persons other than dealers will not be forwarded.

(4)—Printed publications addressed to British subjects, interned in neutral countries are excluded from the scope of regulations. Such publications can, however, only be sent by printed papers post.

(5)—From the 1st July stamp collections, sheets or cards of stamps, stampy samples, etc., will not be forwarded to foreign countries (with the exceptions above indicated) unless despatched by dealers who have obtained permission from the War Office.

In connection with the above quoted regulations in effect in the United Kingdom, it is not proposed by His Majesty's Government to interfere in any way with books, magazines, etc., sent from Canada to Canadian Prisoners of war in Germany.

The attention of His Majesty's Consul General at Rotterdam, Holland, has been drawn to certain rumors regarding the treatment meted out to British escaped Prisoners of War from Germany at his Consulate General in comparison to that meted out to similar prisoners of French and Russian nationality by their respective Consuls.

The Consul General has endeavored to trace these rumors to their source and thinks that in view of the fact that of the last four British prisoners who escaped three were Canadians, it would seem fairly evident that this was a rumor engineered by the Germans with a view, if possible, of spreading dissatisfaction in the Dominion.

He thinks that under the circumstances it might be desirable to have the facts published in the press in order to counteract in advance any possible German lies which may be spread later on through Wolf or similar agencies.

Mr. Maxse, the Consul General, explains that British prisoners of war arriving in Holland are invariably treated with the very utmost kindness and consideration by the Dutch frontier authorities, both military and civil. They are sent down to the Consulate General in charge of a Dutch Marechausse (gendarme). On arrival at the Consulate General they are supplied with every reasonable comfort. They receive new clothing, underclothing, boots, etc., if required. They are given room in the Seamen's Home and plenty of good nourishing food. Tobacco, etc., and pocket money is also given them. Their treatment at the home is assimilated to that of the interned members of the British Naval Brigade who are now living there and working at the Consulate General.

The Consulate General and all the members of his staff, including the Dutch officials and clerks, are most sympathetic in their treatment of these men, and endeavour by all means in their power to render their stay at Rotterdam pleasant and comfortable. They are invariably shipped over to the United Kingdom on the first opportunity and always in British boats if such are available.

About thirty escaped British prisoners of war have passed through the office of the Consul General at Rotterdam during the progress of hostilities, and in every case they have seemed most grateful for the attention and care bestowed upon them. Statements originated probably by the enemy propagandists, have been widely circulated in the United States, and republished by certain papers in Canada, stating that under the conscription law of the United Kingdom, refugees from Poland and Russia, residing in England and Scotland who refuse to enlist, are liable to be deported.

A TALK ON RHEUMATISM

Telling How to Actually Cure This Common and Painful Malady

This article is for the man or woman who suffers from rheumatism who wants to be cured. The most the rheumatic sufferer can hope for in rubbing something on the tender, aching joint, is a little relief. No lotion or ointment ever did or can make a cure. The rheumatic poison is rooted in the blood. Therefore rheumatism can only be cured when this poisonous acid is driven out of the blood. Any doctor will tell you this is true. If you want something that will go right to the root of the trouble in the blood take Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. They make new, rich blood which drives out the poisonous acid and cures rheumatism to stay cured. The truth of these statements has been proved in thousands of cases throughout Canada, and the following cure is a striking instance. Mr. Henry Smith, S.T. Jerome, Que., says: "For upwards of a year I was a victim of rheumatism in a most painful form. The trouble was located in my legs and for a long time I was so bad that I could not walk. The suffering which I endured can only be imagined by those who have been similarly afflicted. Doctors' treatment did not help me and then I began trying other remedies, but with no better results. Finally I was advised to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and although I had begun to lose faith in medicine, I finally decided to give the pills a trial. I am very grateful now that I did so, for after taking eight boxes of the pills the trouble completely disappeared. I was free from pain and could walk as well as ever I did in my life. I have since taken the pills occasionally as a precautionary measure, and I cannot speak too highly in their favor." Dr. Williams' Pink Pills cure all the troubles due to weak, watery blood or broken down nerves. You can get these pills through any dealer in medicine or by mail postpaid, at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

EXIT CANADA'S "WAR LORD"

With his patience and forbearance exhausted by the insufferable egotism and willfulness exhibited with particular offensiveness during the last few months by Sir Sam Hughes, minister of Militia, Sir Robert Borden has at last been forced to take the only step which could relieve the country of his burdensome war lord.

"The retirement of Sir Sam Hughes is in part the outcome of the establishment of the ministry of overseas forces, and in part is due to the assumption by Sir Sam of powers which in the judgment of the prime minister, can be exercised only by the government as a whole."

Of the two reasons given for the decision to deprive Sir Sam of the authority which he has wielded in such high-handed fashion, there can be no doubt that Sir Sam's penchant for doing things "off his own bat" without showing proper consideration for the opinions of the prime minister, or the government as a whole, is the immediate cause of his being asked to surrender his portfolio.

Naturally, opinion will differ as to the wisdom, propriety and political expediency of Sir Robert's action in dismissing his minister of Militia and Defense. From whatever standpoint the matter may be viewed there seems to be no sound reason for blaming the premier for the step he has taken. While it can not be denied that General Hughes has justly commended himself to many people of both political parties by his energy, forcefulness, independence and sublime self confidence, it also indicates that these same qualities have led him into assuming an attitude of rather contemptuous superiority towards the government of which he was a member.

Sir Sam prided himself upon his efficiency and capacity in matters military but it is quite safe to say that another man will be found who will be at least as capable as Sir Sam for the job now made vacant, and one who will be less likely to render himself as offensive to the people of Canada, the Federal Government and the Imperial authorities at the ex-minister of Militia and Defense has rendered himself by his swash-buckling at home and abroad.

"AGAIN THE SOLDIERS?"

Newcastle's "Independent newspaper" has come out "agin the government" of New Brunswick on account of its Farm Settlement scheme which is designed to place returned soldiers and other qualified persons who desire to take up agriculture for a living, upon crown lands in the province which are now lying vacant and undeveloped.

The "Independent newspaper" friend's attitude that can be gleaned from its vague vapourings is the allegation that young men who desire to occupy crown lands in the province for agricultural purposes, have been denied the opportunity of doing so.

It is a very safe guess that our "Independent" contemporary is, opposed to the work of the provincial Farm Settlement Board simply and solely because it is "agin the government" which has brought that Board into existence.

THE HIGH COST OF LIVING

The less they know about a subject, the more some people delight in talking about it. Comes last week a self styled "Independent newspaper" which the Chatham World is pleased to designate as "an alleged newspaper" with an insistent demand that the Dominion Government forthwith solve the present pressing problem of the high cost of living.

Students of economics know that relatively the cost of living is always high for most people. Such students also know that political parties, but political and economic systems are the cause of that condition. No political party could now if it would, take the steps necessary to bring about a change in political and economic systems which might conceivably be beneficial in its results all round.

The Chatham World at last makes the liquor traffic situation in Chatham perfectly clear. So long as the non-enforcement of the law will put $3000 or $4000 a year into the town's coffers, the people are satisfied with "a sort of non-legal license system" which permits the unrestricted sale of liquor in open violation of the law. In other words for a bribe of $3000 or $4000 a year the people of Chatham are willing to condone illegal liquor selling.

Alonso J. Whiteman, known as the "Prince of Rogues," is again behind lock and key. The use of the mails in an attempt to defraud the Amelia State Bank of Amelia, Ohio is the charge lodged against him.

The police believe they have evidence sufficient to keep him behind the bars for a long time to come. But they have thought the same thing many a time and this kind of confidence men has made good his escape either from the meshes of the law or from the hands of the officers. He is both wily and desperate when brought to bay, and stops at nothing.

Whiteman, a college graduate of excellent family and at one time a man of wealth; has for years been rated as one of the cleverest crooks that ever defrauded bankers' funds for the safety of their money. The Pinkertons wrote a book about him. He has been arrested time after time in various cities throughout the country. Generally he has come out successful in his little with the law.

Whiteman is about 55 years old. He was born in Danville, N.Y. where his father was one of the leading men of the town, being president of two banks and the owner of several large factories. The son graduated from Hamilton College in 1881 and then entered Columbia University, from which institution he was graduated with honors. After being admitted to the bar he went to Duluth, where his father owned large property interests, and rapidly made friend s.

Then came the turning point in his picturesque career. After his wife secured a separation, Whiteman rapidly plunged into a fast life, flinging away his money recklessly and engaging in several very questionable deals. He started to frequent race tracks—not to wager on horses, but with the deliberate intention of swindling the bookmakers—and while engaged in this work got in with a set of forgers and check-raisers who were engaged in the manufacture of counterfeit pool tickets. Within a few months his legal knowledge and activity made him the leader of this gang, and although still possessed of a large sum of money he showed no hesitation in swindling bankers as well as bookmakers. Within a few years his name was a familiar one to the police throughout America and Europe.

Whiteman has been arrested more than 100 times in the past twenty-five years, has been indicted probably fifty times and convicted twenty times, with penalties totalling to more than fifty years in the penitentiary, and during all this time he has served but two short sentences, one in Chicago and one in New York State.

The man has raised hundreds of checks from insignificant to large amounts, but has never yet been known by the police to attempt to cash any check or draft himself, always employing for this purpose a man who had no previous criminal record. He is temperate as to liquor, a constant reader of the best books, and carries on his criminal work with utter disregard of consequences, believing himself to be practically immune from punishment. He is a churchgoer, and has been known to attend services while the police of the city he was in at the time were searching for him high and low. Once after a conviction in Birmingham, N.Y., he appealed to the courts to suspend sentence, announcing that he was about to begin a series of evangelical services that the passing of the particular check for which he had then been arrested was an act of judgment, and that if he were locked up his Christian work would be seriously interfered with. The court suspended sentence, and White man actually did start in on an evangelical tour in various small towns of New York State and converted a number of people. It was proved afterward that in the middle of this work he got away with the bank account of a Presbyterian church, amounting to over $4,000.

Before the war a row cost sixty dollars. This means expensive shoes—the same quality as before with but two fast approaches. Table that formerly paid. HOW JOS. RAMSAY WAS KILLED

In the following letter from Major Randolph Crocker to the widow of the late Bomb Joseph George Ramsey is told how her husband met his death on the battle fields of France: 6th Canadian Brigade, C.F.A. Can. Expeditionary Force, A. My dear Mrs. Ramsey: Before this you have doubtless heard from Ottawa concerning your husband's death. I know how anxious you must be for any news concerning him so will endeavor to give you all the particulars I can. It was about 7.15 p. m. on Sept 22 when he and one of his comrades were a short distance from the battery, collecting material from a once German dug-out, with which to build a new position for ourselves, that a shrapnel shell burst directly behind them, killing both instantly. Death came quickly and painlessly and neither body was at all disfigured.

He was buried the following morning in a very nice military cemetery, some distance behind the firing line. One of our Canadian Roman Catholic clergymen officiated at the service and the grave will be marked with a cross, bearing the name and number of your late husband. On behalf of myself, officers and men I wish to convey to you our deep sympathy. It seems so little to do.

Your husband was loved by us all and I cannot tell you how his death and that of his comrade has upset us. He possessed the most genial disposition of any person I have ever met and was at all times, willing and ready to do all in his power to further the cause for which we are all working.

If at any time I can be of any service to you, please do not hesitate to communicate with me. The few personal effects will be forwarded to you through the usual and proper channels.

Yours sincerely, RANDOLPH CROCKER, Major, 28th Battery, C.F.A.

"Divorce?—me!—that's good," laughed Mallory at the vision of it. Then a sudden idea struck him. It took no great genius to see that Mr. Baumann was not a clergyman, but there were other marriages to be had. "You don't perform marriages, do you?" he asked.

Mr. Baumann drew himself up: "Who says I don't? Ain't a justice of the peace?"

Mallory put out his hand in welcome; then a new anxiety chilled him. He had a license for Chicago, but Chicago was far away. "Do I need a license in Reno?"

"Why shouldn't you?" said Mr. Baumann. "Don't all sorts of things go to have a license in Nevada, saloons, husbands, dogs—"

"How could I get one?" Mallory asked as he went on dressing. "Ain't I got a few vitts?"

"You want to get a new re-marriage license?"

"Re-marriage?—huh!" he looked round, and, seeing that no one else was near, "I haven't taken the first step yet."

Mr. Baumann leveled his hands in one another: "A betcher? Ah, I see you want to marry a nice divorcee lady in Reno?"

"She isn't in Reno and she has never been married, either."

"This simple statement seemed to astound Mr. Baumann: "A betcher! marry a maiden—in Reno!—oh, oh, oh! It hasn't been done yet, but it might be."

Mallory looked him over and a twinge of distaste disturbed him: "You furnish the license, but—ah—"

—is there any chance of a clergyman—a Christian clergyman—being at the station?"

"Vy do you want it a clergyman? Can't I do it just as good? Or a nice fat alderman I can get you?"

Mallory pondered: "I don't think she'd like anything but a clergyman."

"Vell," Baumann confessed, "a lady is liable to be particular about her first marriage. Anyway I sell you do license."

"All right."

Mr. Baumann whipped out a portfolio full of documents, and as he searched them, philosophized: "A man ought always to carry a good marriage license. It might be he should need it in a hurry." He took a large iron stamp from his side-pocket and stamped the paper and then, with fountain pen poised, pleaded: "Vat is the names, please?"

"Not so loud!" Mallory whispered. Baumann put his finger to his nose, wisely: "I see, it is a confidential marriage. Sit down once."

When he had asked Mallory the necessary questions and taken his fee, he passed over the document by which the sovereign state of Nevada graciously permitted two souls to be made more or less one in the eyes of the law.

"Here you are," said Mr. Baumann. "Vy dat you can get married anywhere in Nevada."

Mallory realized that Nevada would be a thing of the past in a few hours more and he asked:

"It's no good in California?"

"Himmel, no. In California you bot' gotta go and be examined."

"Examined?" Mallory gasped, in dire alarm.

"Vit questions, personally," Mr. Baumann hastened to explain.

"Oh!"

"In Nevada," Baumann insinuated, "I hope I could marry you myself—now, right here."

"Could you marry us in this smoking room?"

"In a cattle car, if you want it."

"It's not a bad idea," said Mallory. "I'll let you know."

Seeing Mallory coming down the aisle, he hastened to her, and begged her good-morning with a new confidence.

Dr. and Mrs. Temple, who had returned to their berth, witnessed this greeting with amusement. After the quarrel of the night before surely some explanation should have been overheard, but the puzzling Mallorys flew to each other's arms without a moment's delay. The mystery was exciting the passengers to such a point that they were vowing to ask a few questions point blank. Nobody had quite dared to approach either of them, but frank curiosity was preferable to nervous prostration, and the secret could not be kept much longer. Fellow-passengers have some rights. Not even a stranger can be permitted to outrage their curiosity with impunity forever.

Seeing them together, Mrs. Temple watched the embrace with her ally's renewal of joy that the last night's quarrel had not proved fatal. She nudged her husband:

"See, they're making up again."

Dr. Temple was moved to a violent outburst for him: "Well, that the darnedest bride couple—I only said darn, my dear."

He was still more startled when Mr. Baumann, cruising along the aisle, bent over to murmur: "Can I fix you a nice divorce?"

Dr. Temple rose in such an attitude of horror as he assumed in the pulpit when denouncing the greatest curse of society, and Mr. Baumann retired. As he passed Mallory he cast an appreciative glance at Marjorie and, tapping Mallory's shoulder, whispered: "No wonder you want a marriage license. I'll be in the next car, should you need me." Then he went on his route.

Marjorie stared after him in wonder and asked: "What did not please me by what he said?"

"It's all right, Marjorie," Mallory explained in the highest cheer: "We can get married right away."

Marjorie declined to get her hopes up again: "You're always saying that."

"But here's the license—see?"

"What good is that?" she said; "it's no preacher on board."

"But that man is a justice of the peace and he'll marry us."

Marjorie stared at him incredulously: "That creature!—before all these passengers?"

"We'll go into the smoking room."

Marjorie leaped to her feet, aghast: "Elope two thousand miles to be married in a smoking room by a Yiddish drummer! Harry Mallory, you're crazy."

Put just that way, the proposition did not look so alluring as at first. He sank back with a sigh: "I guess I am. I resign."

He was as weary of being "felled again" as the villain of a cheap melodrama. The two lovers sat in a twilight of deep melancholy, till Marjorie's mind dug up a new source of alarm:

"Harry, I've just thought of something terrible."

"Let's have it," he sighed, dreadingly. "We reach San Francisco at midnight and you sail at daybreak. What becomes of me?"

Mallory had no answer to this problem, except a grim: "I'll net desert you."

"But we'll have no time to get married."

"Then," he declared with iron resolve, "then I'll resign from the army."

Marjorie stared at him with awe. He was too wonderful, so heroic. "But what will the country do without you?"

"It will have to get along the best it can," he answered with finality. "You think I'd give you up?"

But this was too much to ask. In the presence of a ruined career and a hero's army, Marjorie felt that her own scruples were too petty to count. She could be heroic, too.

"No," she said, in a deep, low tone. "No, we'll get married in the smoking room. Go call your drummer!"

This opened the clouds and led in the sun again with such a radiant blaze that Mallory hesitated no longer. "Fine!" he cried, and leaped to his feet, only to be detained again by Marjorie's clutch:

"But first, what about that bracelet?"

"She's got it," Mallory groaned, slumping from the heights again.

"Do you mean to say she's still wearing it?"

"How was I to get it?"

"Couldn't you have slipped into her car last night and stolen it?"

"Good Lord, I shouldn't think you'd want me to go—why, Marjorie—I'd be arrested!"

Marjorie set her jaw hard: "Well, you get that bracelet, or you don't get me." And then her smouldering jealousy and grief took a less hateful tone: "Oh, Harry! she wailed, 'I'm so lonely and so helpless and so far from home.'"

"But I'm here," he urged.

"You're farther away than anybody," she whimpered, huddling close to him.

"Poor little thing," he murmured, soothing her with voice and kiss and caress.

"Put your arm round me," she cooed, like a mourning dove, "I don't care if everybody is looking. Oh, I'm so lonely."

"I'm just as lonely as you are," he pleaded, trying to creep into the company of her misery.

"Please marry me soon," she implored, "won't you, please?"

"I'll marry you this minute if you'd say the word," he whispered.

"I'll say it if you don't get that bracelet," she sobbed, like a tired child. "I should think you would understand my feelings. That awful person is wearing your bracelet and I have only your ring, and her bracelet is ten times as big as my ring, boo-boo-boo!"

"I'll get that bracelet if I have to chop her arm off," Mallory vowed. The sob stopped short, as Marjorie looked up to ask: "Have you got your sword with you?"

"It's in my trunk," he said, "but I'll manage."

"Now you're speaking like a soldier," Marjorie exclaimed, "my brave, noble, beautiful, fearless husband, I'll tell you! That creature will pass through this car on her way to breakfast. You grab her and take the bracelet away from her."

"I grab her, eh?" he stammered, his heroism wavering a trifle.

"Yes, just grab her."

"Suppose she hasn't the bracelet on?" he mused.

"Grab her anyway," Marjorie answered, fiercely. "Besides, I've no doubt it's wished on. He said nothing. 'You did wish it on, didn't you?'"

"No wonder you want a marriage license. I'll be in the next car, should you need me." Then he went on his route.

But even as his hand was about to let go, he tightened his clutch again, and pondered: "It seems a shame to waste it."

"I thought so," said Mrs. Jimmie, drooping perceptibly. Her husband began to feel that, after all, she cared what became of him.

"I'll tell you," he said, "I'll give it to old Doc Temple. He takes his straight."

"Fine!"

He turned towards the seat where the clergyman and his wife were sitting, oblivious of the drama of reconciliation playing so close at hand.

Little Jimmie paused, crossed the flask, and kissed it. "Good-bye, old playmate!" Then, tossing his head with bravado, he reached out and touched the clergyman's shoulder. Dr. Temple turned and rose with a questioning look. Wellington put the flask in his hand and chuckled: "Merry Christmas!"

"But, my good man—" the preacher objected, finding in his hand a donation as welcome and as widely as a strange baby. Wellington winked: "It may come in handy for your patients."

And now, struck with a sudden idea, Mrs. Wellington spoke: "Oh, Mr. Temple, I promise you I'll never smoke another cigar."

"Yes, my dear," said the little old lady, rising. Mrs. Wellington placed in her hand a small portfolio and laughed: "Happy New Year!"

Mrs. Temple stared at her gift and gasped: "Great heavens! Your cigars?"

"They'll be such a consolation," Mrs. Wellington explained, "while the doctor is out with his patients."

Dr. Temple and Mrs. Temple looked at each other in dismay, then at the flask and the cigars, then at the Wellingtons, then they stammered: "Thank you so much," and sank back.

Wellington stared at his wife: "Loretta, are you sincere?"

"I'll never smoke another cigar," she vowed, and, twisting her arm from his grasp, confronted him with bewildered Marjorie. Mallory cast toward Marjorie a look of surrender and despair. Marjorie laid her hand on his forehead and in pantomime suggested that Mallory should throttle Kathleen, as he had promised.

But Mallory was incapable of further violence; and when Kathleen, with all her coquetry, bent down and murmured: "You are a very naughty boy, but come to breakfast, we'll talk it over," he was so added that he answered: "Thanks, but I never eat breakfast."

CHAPTER XXXVII.

Down Brakes!

Just as Kathleen swung her head in baffled vexation, and Mallory started to sink back to Marjorie, with another defeat, there came an abrupt stoppage of the train. The engine had reached down and laid violent hold on the Trans-American in full career.

Its smooth, swift flight became suddenly a jumble of jarr shivers and thuds that Mallory cried: "We're off the track!"

He was sent toppling down the aisle like a bolster hurled through the car. He brought up with a sickening slam across the seat, and Marjorie, who had been jounced back with a breath-taking slam. And then Kathleen came flying backwards and landed in a heap on both of them.

Several of the other passengers were hurled in another direction, and they were shot and scattered all over the car as if a great chain of human beads had burst.

Women screamed, men yelled, and then while they were still struggling against the platform and entering the train-stopping excitement of the day before and called out:

"Has Mrs. Mallory lost that pup again?"

Everybody laughed uproariously at this. People will laugh at anything or nothing when they have been frightened almost to death and suddenly relieved of anxiety.

Everybody was cracking a joke at Marjorie's expense. Everybody felt a good-natured grudge against her for being such a mystery. The car was ringing with hilarity, when the porter came stumbling in and passed at the door, with eyes all white, hands waving frantically, and lips flapping like fish flannel, in a vain effort to speak.

The passengers stopped laughing at Marjorie, to laugh at the porter. Ashton sang out:

"What's the matter with you, porter? Are you trying to crawl?"

Everybody roared at this, till the porter finally managed to articulate: "T-t-train rob-rob-robbers!"

Clence shut down as if the whole crowd had been smitten with paralysis. From somewhere outside and ahead came a pop-popping as of fire-crackers. Everybody thought, "Revolvers!" The reports were mingled with barbaric yells that turned the marrow in every bone to snow.

These regions are full of historic terrors. All along the Nevada route the conductor, the brakeman and old travelers had pointed out scene after scene where the Indians had slaked the thirst of the arid land with white man's blood. Ashton, who had traveled himself so many times, had made himself fascinatingly horrifying by evening before and ruined several breakfasts that morning in the dining-car, by regaling the passengers with stories of pioneer ordeals, men and women massacred in burning wagons, or dragged away to Sandbar cruelty and obscene torture, staked out supine on burning wastes with eyelids out of, bound down within reach of rattlesnakes, subjected to every misery that human cruelty could inflict.

He tried to lay hold of it, but Kathleen giggled coyly: "It's just an excuse to hold my hand. She swung her arm over the back of the seat, coquettishly, and Marjorie made a desperate lunge at it, but missed, since Kathleen, finding that Mallory did not pursue the fugitive hand, brought it back at once and yielded it up."

CHAPTER XXXVIII.

Hands Up!

All this time Lieutenant Mallory had been thinking as hard as an officer in an ambulance. His harrowing experiences and incessant defeats of the past days had unnerved him and shattered his self-confidence. He was not afraid, but intensely disgusted. He sat absent-mindedly getting Marjorie on the back and repeating:

"Don't worry, honey; they're not going to hurt anybody. They don't want anything but our money. Don't worry, I won't let 'em hurt you."

But he could not shake off a sense of nausea. He felt himself a representative of the military prowess of the country, and here he was as helpless as a man on parole.

The fact that Mallory was a soldier occurred to a number of the passengers simultaneously. They had been trained by early studies in those beautiful works of fiction, the school histories of the United States, and by many Fourth of July, to believe that the American soldier in an invincible being, who has never been defeated and never known fear.

They surged up to Mallory in a wave of hope. Dr. Temple, being nearest, spoke first. Having learned by experience that his own prayers were not always answered as he wished, he had an impulse to try some weapon he had never used.

"Young man," he pleaded across the back of a seat, "will you kindly lend me a gun?"

Mallory answered sullenly: "Mine is in my trunk on the train ahead, damn it. If I had it I'd have a lot of fun."

Mrs. Whitcomb had an inspiration. She ran to her berth, and came back with a tiny silver-plated revolver.

Ashton had brought his fellow passengers to a state of ecstatic excitement, and, like many a reciter of lurid stories at night, had tuned his own nerves to high tension.

The violent stopping of the train, the heart-shaking yells and shots outside, found the passengers already apt to respond without delay to the appeals of fright. After the first flush of dread, came the reaction to panic.

Each passenger showed his own panic in his own way. Ashton whirled round and round, like a horse with the blind staggers, then leaped down the aisle, knocking aside men and women. He climbed on a seat, pulled down an upper berth, and scrambling into it, tried to shut it on himself.

Mrs. Whitcomb was so frightened that she assailed Ashton with fury and, seizing his feet, dragged him back into the aisle, demanding that he protect her and save her for Sammy's sake.

Mrs. Fosdick, rushing out of her stateroom and not finding her husband's eyes, laid hold of Jimmie Wellington and ordered him to go to the rescue of her spouse. Mrs. Wellington tore her hands loose, crying: "Let him go, madam. He has a wife of his own to defend."

Jimmie was trying to pour out dying messages, and only stopping, forgetting that he had put his watch in his mouth to hide it, though its chain was still attached to his waistcoat.

Anne Gattie, who has been much abused by Chinese atrocities to misanthropies, gave herself up to death, yet rejoiced greatly that she had provided a timely man to lean on and should not have to enter Paradise a spinster, providing she could manage to convert Ira in the next few seconds, before it was everlastingly too late. She was begging her first heaven to join her in a gospel hymn. But Ira was roaring curses like a pirate captain in a hurricane, and swearing that the villains should not rob him of his bride.

Mrs. Temple wrung her twitching hands and tried to drag her husband to his knees, crying:

"Oh, Walter, Walter, won't you please say a prayer—a good strong prayer?"

But the preacher was so confused that he answered: "What's the use of prayer in an emergency like this?"

"Walter!" she shrieked. "I'm on my vacation, you know," he stammered.

Marjorie was trying at the same time to compel Mallory to crawl under a seat and to find a place to hide Snootleums, whom she was warning not to say a word. Snootleums, understanding only that he must stay in his basket and refused to offer his services and his attentions.

Suddenly Marjorie realized that Kathleen was trying to faint in Mallory's arms, and forgot everything else in a determined effort to prevent her.

After the first blood-sweat of abject fright had begun to cool, the passengers came to realize that the invaders were not after lives, but loot. Then came a panic of miserly effort to conceal treasure.

Kathleen, finding herself banished from Mallory's protection, ran to Mrs. Whitcomb, who had given Ashton up as a hopeless task.

"What shall we do, oh, what, oh, what shall we do, dear Mrs. Wellington?" she cried.

"Don't you dare call me Mrs. Wellington!" Mrs. Whitcomb screamed; then she began to flutter. "But we'd better hide what we can. I hope the rah-robbers are gentlemen."

She pushed a diamond locket containing a small portrait of Sammy in to her back hair, leaving part of the chain dangling. Then she tried to stuff a large handbag into her stocking.

Mrs. Fosdick found her husband at last, for he made a wild dash for her side, embraced her, called her his wife and defied all the powers of Nevada to tear them apart. He had a brilliant idea. In order to save his fat wallet from capture, he tossed it through an open window. It fell at the feet of one of the robbers as he ran along the side of the car, choosing at such heads as were put out of windows. He picked it up and dropped it into the feed-bag he had swung at his side. Then running on, he clamored over the brass rail of the observation platform and entered the engine, driving the conductor ahead of him, forged his way aft from the front, while a third masquerader aligned the engineer, the fireman, the brakeman and the baggage-men.

But he could not shake off a sense of nausea. He felt himself a representative of the military prowess of the country, and here he was as helpless as a man on parole.

The fact that Mallory was a soldier occurred to a number of the passengers simultaneously. They had been trained by early studies in those beautiful works of fiction, the school histories of the United States, and by many Fourth of July, to believe that the American soldier in an invincible being, who has never been defeated and never known fear.

They surged up to Mallory in a wave of hope. Dr. Temple, being nearest, spoke first. Having learned by experience that his own prayers were not always answered as he wished, he had an impulse to try some weapon he had never used.

"Young man," he pleaded across the back of a seat, "will you kindly lend me a gun?"

Ashton had brought his fellow passengers to a state of ecstatic excitement, and, like many a reciter of lurid stories at night, had tuned his own nerves to high tension.

The violent stopping of the train, the heart-shaking yells and shots outside, found the passengers already apt to respond without delay to the appeals of fright. After the first flush of dread, came the reaction to panic.

Each passenger showed his own panic in his own way. Ashton whirled round and round, like a horse with the blind staggers, then leaped down the aisle, knocking aside men and women. He climbed on a seat, pulled down an upper berth, and scrambling into it, tried to shut it on himself.

Mrs. Whitcomb was so frightened that she assailed Ashton with fury and, seizing his feet, dragged him back into the aisle, demanding that he protect her and save her for Sammy's sake.

Mrs. Fosdick, rushing out of her stateroom and not finding her husband's eyes, laid hold of Jimmie Wellington and ordered him to go to the rescue of her spouse. Mrs. Wellington tore her hands loose, crying: "Let him go, madam. He has a wife of his own to defend."

Jimmie was trying to pour out dying messages, and only stopping, forgetting that he had put his watch in his mouth to hide it, though its chain was still attached to his waistcoat.

Anne Gattie, who has been much abused by Chinese atrocities to misanthropies, gave herself up to death, yet rejoiced greatly that she had provided a timely man to lean on and should not have to enter Paradise a spinster, providing she could manage to convert Ira in the next few seconds, before it was everlastingly too late. She was begging her first heaven to join her in a gospel hymn. But Ira was roaring curses like a pirate captain in a hurricane, and swearing that the villains should not rob him of his bride.

Mrs. Temple wrung her twitching hands and tried to drag her husband to his knees, crying:

"Oh, Walter, Walter, won't you please say a prayer—a good strong prayer?"

But the preacher was so confused that he answered: "What's the use of prayer in an emergency like this?"

"Walter!" she shrieked. "I'm on my vacation, you know," he stammered.

Marjorie was trying at the same time to compel Mallory to crawl under a seat and to find a place to hide Snootleums, whom she was warning not to say a word. Snootleums, understanding only that he must stay in his basket and refused to offer his services and his attentions.

WHITE SWEATERS SOLD WELL
In advertising ladies white sweaters in the Union Advocate last week, R. M. Fadel & Co. made a big hit, according to Mr. Fadel's statement. The demand for the garments was surprisingly brisk and the sale greatly exceeded Mr. Fadel's expectations. The sweaters at the price at which they were offered were undoubtedly a big bargain, and the quality of the garments was especially attractive to ladies. A pure wool sweater at $2.48 these days when the price is steadily going up is a rare bargain, and those who secured these beautiful garments have good reason to consider themselves lucky.

A short program of recitations and dialogues was also carried out by the pupils. One of the features of the evening was the fortune telling by a Hallowe'en witch who had come to earth. The proceeds of her business increased the funds by some few dollars.

MILLERTON SCHOOL ENTERTAINMENT
In response to the appeal from the Government on behalf of the destitute children of Belgium, the pupils of the Millerton school anticipated Children's Day by holding a social evening on Friday, October 27th. Millerton upheld its old reputation by being able to furnish a well filled hall on short notice. Everyone confessed to having passed an enjoyable evening. A "tulip bed" was the chief source of amusement, besides this, there was a "cobweb" in which many young men and maidens were ensnared. A short musical program was rehearsed by the children of the primary department, one of the most interesting parts being "Flag of Britain" sung by the children arranged in order on the stage while one child stood out in front and waved the Imperial Union. Music was furnished by Count Vanderbeck on the guitar, Miss Grace Russell on the violin, and Miss Florence Lyon, organist.
Tea was made and lunches served about 9.30, after which several very excellent cakes were sold at auction. Mr. George Ite ably performing the part of the auctioneer. The proceeds realized were $52.86, which with expenses deducted would leave about $43.00 to be applied to the Relief Fund.
