THE HAND UPON THE WALL.

By B. B. LYND, PORT CREDIT, ONT.

The following parody of "Belshazzar's Feast," which has been sung to the music in Sam. Jones' "Great Awakening," page 125, has a strong temperance sentiment pervading it. Speaking of the liquor business, the author says: "I hate the traffic so much that I will never get tired striking it. . . . Although I was born in an hotel and raised in a barroom I was born to fight this traffic, and while God permits me to inhale the sweet breath of life I will be found in the front ranks of His battle against rum. By God's shield I was kept from ever tasting liquor." The intention is to have the Temperance Glee Clubs sing it as a campaign song at the various meetings throughout the county:

On the Nineteenth of April you are called upon to vote For the welfare of your country, and don't forget to note That your act will be measured in that legal voters' hall For the good you do your brother, by the Hand upon the wall.

CHORUS IN SAM JONES' BOOK.
By the Hand of God on the wall,
By the Hand of God on the wall,
Shall our record be found wanting,
Or shall it be found trusting, While that Hand is writing on the wall.

For your weak-hearted brother, who yet reels beneath the rum, Let your conscience tell you plainly, in the days the afe to come,
That you did all you could while you voted in that hall To reclaim your fallen brother, for the Hand upon the wall.—Chor.

Let your faith, love and courage ever prompt you to be right, And the spirit which God gave you will still increase your might,
Then your homes in this county, by your voting in that hall Will ever give you pleasure, by the Hand upon the wall.—Chor.

Yes, our votes are recorded, by the Hand that's writing now, Then do give your vote to Jesus, and He'll surely crown your brow, For the day is approaching, it must come to one and all,
When the voters coming action will be written on the wall.—Chor.

Then be sure and vote rightly, and you'll never rue the day,
That you sought to please your Maker, in the good old-fashioned way, Then you'll read out the writing in Eternal Palace Hall,
"Well done, good and faithful servant," by the Hand upon the wall.—Chor.

By your faith in your Maker, to reward you when you're right, You will surely do your duty, and will vote for Him at sight,
You will vote for your brother, ere you see your brother fall,
And your verdict will be happy, by the Hand upon the wall.—Chor.

When you vote on that question, don't forget to keep in view That your children now are growing, and are taking stock from you, Do not vote what you make them, and for fear that they should Do not vote in opposition to the Hand upon the wall.—Chor.

If you vote for the liquor, who will fill the drunkard's tank?
As the victim of the present, surely makes tomorrow's blank, They will come from your children, and you cannot stem the call,
For you voted approbation, said the Hand upon the wall.—Chor.

Now I know that your children you do love much more than gold,
And you never will be happy, if you see them worse than sold, Then be sure while you're voting, you give pleasure in God's Hall, And you'll miss the indignation of the Hand upon the wall.—Chor.

On the day of election, you should ever try to do All you can for those afflicted, as your Saviour did for you, Then in time when you need it, from the Righteous Palace Hall, You will be blessed with mercy, by the Hand upon the wall.—Chor.

Then be men like old Daniel, who did always trust his God,
And you never will be sorry that on liquor's curse you trod, Then in days that are coming, you can hope and pray for all,
As you look for your salvation to the Hand upon the wall.—Chor.

LATEST FASHIONS.

What to Wear, and How to Wear it Properly.

The Latest Cleanings from the Fashionable World—New Tints and Shadings, and Old Styles that Continue to Hold Place in the Inner Circle.

There is no more elegant or comfortable toilet for a matron than a tea-gown in princess style, made of real Spanish or Chantilly lace, and trimmed with handsome jet ornaments. Gowns in this style are more elegant and effective made up over black moiré than those that the silk slip is gayly colored.

Many new English serges, camel's hair goods, cashmere, and vigognes are shown, with stripes, checks, plaids, and odd borderings en suite, yet while this is the case, it does not follow that either style is used by itself, for there are many novel, handsome gowns made wholly of either plain or figured material according to fancy, and the letter of the fashionable law is equally fulfilled. A large number of the imported tailor costumes have a wrap to match these, grading from a stylish English "overall" of Queen's Tweed with turban or jockey hood attached.

The exhibition of models for spring wraps is extremely varied, and although it is almost impossible to find any special shapes that are strikingly novel in style, the rich and uncommon fabrics and garnitures which form them render them very attractive. The short wrap with a velvet back and sling-sleeve made of mahogany, terracotta, moss, olive, laurel green or black velvet, and lined with shot silk, is a favorite dress wrap. The "Hyde Park" coat is another popular style. This moulds the figure like a glove, is trimmed with silk braid work or galloon, and opens over a primrose-yellow silk vest.

In natty spring and summer fashions a host of details are borrowed from gentlemen's dress. There are narrow and flowing crests, both plain and colored; pleated shirt-fronts, tiny jewelled studs, scarf-pins, and linked buttons for throat and sleeves, with a close high craze. A lace frill, very closely gathered, is worn, this copied from the masculine toilet of a former epoch.

Although there are no decided deviations in the main lines upon which fashion is moving, there is an endless series of innovations in minor characteristics.
Taking the single item of the corsage, the styles are legion. Very often they are most effectively made of fragments put together with such picturesque effect that they outvie many a richer style made of a single material. When two or three fabrics combine to form a single corsage, the lining of the waistcoat is cut to begin with. This buttons snugly up the back, and upon the front of this is mounted, for instance, plain velvet pieces that point like a girle in the immediate front. At each side of this piece are set silk-lined revers, or lapsels of material of which the corsage is composed. Next to these come two more revers of plain silk or velvet again. All these revers narrow to an inch and a half as they reach the neck.

Gradually we are returning to larger shapes in hats, and low crowns and wide brims are once again distinguishing features in millinery. It has now become quite a fashion to turn the natty sailor hat up at one side or in the back, instead of leaving it straight all around.
The sailor hat is still very popular, both in London and Paris, and among important models appears with an unusually wide brim. Many of these brims are covered on the under side with a braid in contrast to the one outside, this is designed to represent, and thus dispense with, a silk or velvet facing.

Crushed strawberry is a color that is designed to be as popular as it was two years ago, when it was the rage. This shade will appear in costumes as warmer weather advances. Very lovely and delicate tints are shown in silky India cashmere, silk-warp Henrietta cloth, and faillie Francaise. Primrose yellow is another color which is to rage. A charing gown made in simple but exquisite fashion in this shade, a creamy yellow, shows a full shirred bodice gathered into a pearl-embroidered neck-band, a wide sharply pointed. Swiss girle marking the waist. This is not extravagant, but formed of the material—bodice and skirt being one—and deftly shaped by means of French smocking or honey combing.
This is very cleverly done, for below the belt the material falls again in exquisite folds. The sleeves of the gown are set in very full at the armholes, and again shirred below the elbow. Half of the very deep turn-back cuff is smocked, the upper portion a flat band, covered with pearl embroidery matching the collar decoration.

The figured linen, batiste, and cambric skirt-waists were last year, or those box-pleated, and made of plain linen or cambric, finished with braid-stitching at all the edges, will again be seen next season under a variety of names. This is a great, dainty and stylish fashion for neglige toilets for the morning, and therefore likely to survive until the autumn. Smocking will be used in their construction—either there will be a smocked yoke, the fulness below gathered into a narrow waist-band, or otherwise the upper portion of the bodice will be full and unshirred, and a smocked Swiss band will define the waist. Roman-and cream—white flannel will also be used for Garibaldi and smocked waists, these adapted especially for the chilly days that invariably appear in midsummer.

GEN. ADAM BADEAU.

THE MAN WHO CLAIMS JOINT AU-THORITY WITH GEN. GRANT.

How He Had a Medal Struck Off Which the Hero of Appomattox Would Not Wear—What Badeau Has Been Doing the Past Winter—His Peculiarities.

When Gen. Ulysses S. Grant finally decided to make a tour of the world, Gen.
Adam Badeau, whom Grant loved as a younger brother, thought it would be a good plan to have a big medal struck off for Grant to wear on a ribbon around his neck. Badeau's idea was that Grant would not be properly appreciated among the kings, princes and lordlings of the old world unless he wore a gorgeous decoration of some kind. The matter was suggested to Grant. He was a very busy man during the closing days of his administration, and like thousands of other busy men, he acquiesced in Badeau's proposition to get rid of him, without giving the subject the slightest thought.
Badeau went to a big jewelry house and had a medal as big as a trade dollar struck off. It was stamped with saphires and other precious stones, and was inscribed with Grant's name, his titles, and gave the dates of many of his victories.
Badeau took it to Grant. He was in great glia. Grant looked at it for a moment, lit a fresh cigar, put on his glasses for a few moments, and finally said, "Yes, Badeau, it looks very fine."

"It will cause people who don't understand your position in America to respect you, and pay you the deference due you," said Grant leisurely, as he took his cigar from his mouth, "you may have it. Wear it on your trip abroad, and I shall stay at home. Take it away, Badeau.
It's yours. Give it to you. I wouldn't have it around my neck if I were paid $1,000 a minute."

And the old general stuck to his word.
Badeau occasionally wore it, and the medal is now in his possession, together with scores of other articles that the hero of Appomattox gave him.
Badeau's suit against the Grant family and the resultant correspondence have stirred up a veritable bonfire of news.
Badeau has been spending the winter in Washington, where he has been engaged in literary work. His only companion is George Corsa, who acts as his private secretary. Corsa is the son of a rich banker in
New York. He

GRATEFUL-COMFORTING. PEPP'S COCOA.

BREAKFAST.
"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected Cocoa, Mr. Pepp has provided our breakfast table with a delicately flavored beverage which may save us many heavy doctors' bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle miasms are floating around us ready to attack wherever there is a weak point. We may escape may a fatal shaft by keeping ourselves well fortified with pure blood and a properly nourished frame."—Glasgow Herald.

WHY

Should Not Be... Answer—Quiet your fears, gentlemen, the Bible and your business know but little of each other, and are as much opposed as light and darkness, life and death.

Answer—The churches and science declare this assertion false. It is the liquor traffic that robs home of property, honor and purity; the State of industry, wealth, and the lives of multitudes of her citizens, and of order, peace and morality; and the church of her members.

Answer—The only "reasonable" method of diminishing intemperance is by prohibition—and the Scott Act is a local prohibitory law. Temperance people are working for prohibition, and as a means to that end use the Scott Act.

Answer—It makes many barley growers hypocrites, and wheat growers becoming unprofitable. The law has cut off the revenue of the State of Ontario, and has caused a general depression of the agricultural industry.

Answer—The liquor traffic is not responsible, directly or indirectly, for the uses to which his grain is put; the Act has nothing to do with wheat-growing, except that if liquor were not manufactured and sold, more people would be able to purchase flour, and the price of wheat would consequently be advanced by the demand. The liquor traffic is consequently a detriment to our agricultural industry.

Answer—Does liquor prevent the bees? On their own continent, the bees are in Toronto, under license, to be hives to every license. In N. Y. the license law is 4000 unlicensed places. Statistics show that where light, in the form of liquor, is sold, the use of bees is also greater than in places where there is prohibition in both.

Answer—The inland revenue report for 1896, Appendix A, P. 10, shows that in 1886, the total revenue of the Province was $1,342,080, of which $1,000,000 was derived from the liquor traffic. In 1896, the total revenue was $1,342,080, of which $1,000,000 was derived from the liquor traffic.

Answer—It is not a tyranny, and allows a magistrate to convict without good and without either jury or right of matters of evidence. In this respect, it is a tyranny which cannot be justified for the good the promoters seek to do.

Answer—The Parliament, Senate and of Canada, as well as the Privy Council of England, have pronounced against and constitutional. A tyranny which cannot be justified for the good the promoters seek to do.

REASONS FOR VOTING FOR REPEAL

THE SCOTT ACT. It is a failure and cannot be enforced, with direct respect to hotels and drug men. Liquors are adulterated and the company and associations are low and demoralizing.

It increases the temptation to drink, and by developing speakeasies, unhealthiness, quibbling, lying, perjury, and feeling of being more immediately than seeks to remove. It makes many public and business men hypocritical and dishonest.

It is grossly tyrannical, without good evidence, without either jury or right of matters of evidence. In this respect, it is a tyranny which cannot be justified for the good the promoters seek to do.
