The Old Marquis

The Girl of the Cloisters

CHAPTER XXI
A WEEK OF SUSPENSE.

He came forward in his soft, self-possessed manner and took her hand — by chance or intention she gave him the left, the one that Lord Edgar had not touched.

He raised it to his lips.

"I am indeed fortunate," he murmured, his dark, piercing eyes fixed on her. "It is the first time I have seen you alone for—days. I could tell you the number of hours."

"Please do not," she said, forcing a smile.

"I will not. I leave that kind of sentimental reckoning to ordinary lovers, to which class you and I do not belong, Edith."

"No," she said.

He sniffed the air with his delicate nostrils.

"Smoking? My simple cousin has just left. I presume?"

"Lord Edgar has just gone," she said; and she strove hard to keep her face fair and impassive.

Clifford Revel laughed contemptuously.

"Poor fellow! he is still in the depths of despair. He has not yet found his runaway lady-love?"

"So he says. He tells me that you are helping him to find her."

Clifford Revel laughed softly.

"Helping him not to find her would be nearer the truth," he said. "Poor Edgar! It is a pity he is Lord Fane, and the next to the marquisate! He would have made such an excellent civil servant."

"Why?"

"Because he is so trustful."

"Explain. I don't understand."

"No. I will tell you: there shall be no secret between us, Edith. My bosom lies bare before you, with all its secrets. My dear cousin employed me to find this lady-love of his, and of course I have not succeeded."

"Of course?"

"Of course not. Do you suppose I want him to find her and marry her? No! But I have found her, equally of course."

"You have found her?" she echoed.

He smiled and stroked her hand, little guessing that his touch filled her with loathing.

"Yes! I found her at once. She is not far off; but I did not tell him. I kept him in suspense! I know my man. Another week and he will have grown tired of the whole business. You understand? Quite tired of it. So that if he should find her then, he will have arrived at the conclusion that she was not worth seeking for."

"I see," she murmured.

He laughed.

"Give me one week more and I don't care. By the way, Edith, I owe you a debt of gratitude."

"For what?" she asked, coldly.

"For the way in which you have interpreted my unspoken ideas. You have kept my worthy cousin amused and tolerably contented—and all for my sake! All for my sake!"

"All for your sake!" she murmured.

"Yes," he whispered, drawing nearer. "Take courage! Help me as you have been doing, and I shall be still nearer the coronet—my hands are within reach of it now! I shall grasp it presently, and place it on your brow!"

He would have taken her in his arms, but she drew away from him; and at that moment Lord Edgar was fighting with the chestnut and starting for his ride.

CHAPTER XXII
A RUINED LIFE.

LORD EDGAR got on the great chestnut and rode through the park into Richmond, toward the pretty Surrey towns and villages that lie on the banks of the Thames—silvery here, and not muddy and murky as it is when it flows through the arches of London Bridge.

It was a beautiful afternoon, just the afternoon for a long ride, and he would have enjoyed it if Lela had been by his side, or if he had known where she was and what she was doing; but as it was, he felt inclined to go on instead of turning back. He dreaded the silence of his chambers, which seemed to echo with her voice as the voice of one dead.

He stopped at Kingston—historic Kingston—and, while the chestnut rested and got a feed, Lord Edgar sauntered up and down the street looking listlessly at the shops.

It was time he turned back to town, but as they brought the chestnut out, looking fresh and eager, the idea struck him that he would go on, put the horse up at some quiet village still further in the country, and get back to London by rail. He wanted to kill time, anyway, anyhow; so he turned onto the country road and still followed the course of the winding river. Soon the villages on this road grew smaller, the way led through avenues of trees and flower-dotted banks, and he knew that he was really in the country. A strange kind of peace fell upon him. As the sunset died away and the twilight fell like a silvery sheen on the landscape, the feeling grew more intense. His recollection of Lela and all that had passed between them became more vivid and distinct, and once he started, waking from a sudden idea that he was riding toward the Abbey, and that he should soon fold her in his embrace. He awakened to a sense of his loss, sighed and looked around him. He was in a long country lane, leading whither he knew not. The last house he had passed was a mile behind; there were no more in sight. The chestnut was still fresh, but he himself felt hungry and rather tired, and he rode up to a finger-post and raised himself in his stirrups to read it. He was on the road to Littleton.

"Littleton will do," he thought, "as well as any other," and he put the chestnut to a trot. After a mile or two he came upon a small hamlet, a cluster of houses round a village green; a blacksmith's forge vomiting sparks through its open door into the quiet dusk—a pretty picture, such as one might see in the Dudley Gallery. Lord Edgar rode up to the forge, and the blacksmith came out wiping his brow and glancing intuitively at the horse's hoofs.

Lord Edgar smiled.

"No, he doesn't want shoeing," he said, answering the glance. "This is Littleton, I suppose?"

"No, sir," said the man, eyeing the stalwart figure and handsome face of the rider with that open admiration which one strong man feels for another. "Littleton is two miles further on."

Lord Edgar felt disappointed, though he certainly did not know why. "How far are we from the station?" he inquired.

The man came into the road and pointed to the west. "Almost half a mile, sir."

Lord Edgar nodded.

"I want to get back to London. Is there a decent inn here where I can leave my horse for the night?"

"Oh, yes, sir; there's the Barley Mow across the green. They'll take care of him there, sir. Come from London, sir?"

"Yes," said Lord Edgar, looking on at the glowing forge absently. "I will go on to the inn. I think, unless I go to Littleton."

"The Barley Mow is quite as good as anything you'll get at Littleton, sir," said the blacksmith, speaking up for his own place, "and nearer the station."

This decided Lord Edgar.

"You have got a pretty forge in a pretty spot," he said, in his pleasant, sociable fashion. "I'll get you to look at my horse's shoes, if you will, and he dismounted.

The man led the horse in and overhauled him. "All right, sir," he said. "He's a good 'un. It's a fair spin from London, and I don't expect you came slow."

Lord Edgar smiled and put a shilling on the anvil, got on the chestnut and rode slowly across the green to the quaint country inn.

An old hostler came out limping and led the horse into the stable, and Lord Edgar, after waiting to see him rub down and feed, entered the inn. It was of the simplest character, but scrupulously clean, and the landlady bustled to and fro and laid a high tea in a cozy sitting-room looking out onto the green and the ancient ivy-covered church. It was very seldom that so distinguished a visitor entered the Barley Mow, and there was quite a little flutter of pleasant excitement about the event. If they had known that their guest was the heir to the marquisate of Farintosh the excitement would have been intense. As it was, the good lady of the Barley Mow saw that she was entertaining what she called "a real gentleman."

Lord Edgar took what they gave him; tea at that hour—and a high tea—was rather a novelty to him, and he would have enjoyed it but for his ever-present trouble.

When he had finished he lighted a cigar and sauntered into the bar, and asked the next train to London.

There was none till ten o'clock; it was barely eight, and he strolled out into the fragrant evening air and sauntered around the green.

The whole place was so quiet that it seemed as if the chestnut had put on seven league shoes and carried him a couple of hundred miles from London instead of a little more than twenty. The stars came out, and a half-moon rose from behind the church; he thought of that last moonlight night in the cloister garden, and his heart throbbed wistfully. He turned from the green, and, pushing open the half-closed gate, entered the church-yard. Peace serene and profound reigned in this out-of-the-way God's acre, and he leaned against the wall-ramp in thought. As he stood thus motionless and silent, watching the rings of smoke ascending from his cigar, he saw something glide along the path beside the church. He turned toward it absently, and saw that it was the figure of a girl; she was dressed in a plain black dress; and in place of a bonnet had drawn the hood of her cloak over her head. Something in her gait, in the graceful gliding walk, struck him, and he started upright; but at the moment the moon disappeared behind a cloud, and when the light came again the figure had melted. He smiled sadly.

"I never see a figure about Lela's size but I am smitten with the wild idea that it may be she!" he murmured, and he flung his cigar away and went down toward the inn. Then he paused; there was nothing to be done there—it would be better to wait in the open air, in the pleasant moonlight than shut up in the little parlor. He turned back and sauntered around the church. He had traversed three sides, keeping to the path, when, as he turned the last corner, he came face to face with the figure he had seen and so suddenly lost. There was not much light, and the girl started a little and swerved aside at the unexpected appearance of a stranger.

Lord Edgar raised his hat, and, as he made way for her, murmured gently, "I beg your pardon," expecting her to pass on.

But with a low exclamation and a gesture of surprise, almost fear, she stopped, and let fall a basket which she held in her hand.

Lord Edgar stooped and picked it up, and looked up to offer it to her, when he saw above him the lovely face of his lost darling.

For a moment he knelt motionless, speechless, fearing that his trouble had overturned his reason, and that this was the vision of a disordered brain; and in that moment she drew the hood across her face, and taking the basket, turned swiftly from him.

Her movement broke the spell that bound him. With a cry of joy and amazement he sprang toward her and caught both her arms, with the one word, full of love and entreaty, upon his lips—"Lela."

Panting and trembling, she gazed at him, her lovely face white to the very lips, her eyes suffused with a glow of passionate devotion, and—yes, sorrow!

"Lela!" he cried, drawing her near to him. "Lela! Oh, my darling, do you know me? Why do you look like this? Why do you not speak? What is the matter? What does it all mean? Lela, Lela! Speak to me!"

And the Worst is Yet to Come--

Lord Edgar felt disappointed, though he certainly did not know why. "How far are we from the station?" he inquired.

The man came into the road and pointed to the west. "Almost half a mile, sir."

Lord Edgar nodded.

"I want to get back to London. Is there a decent inn here where I can leave my horse for the night?"

"Oh, yes, sir; there's the Barley Mow across the green. They'll take care of him there, sir. Come from London, sir?"

"Yes," said Lord Edgar, looking on at the glowing forge absently. "I will go on to the inn. I think, unless I go to Littleton."

"The Barley Mow is quite as good

ITALIANS BEING SATISFIED.

PARIS, May 13.

The Adriatic controversy is nearing adjustment as the Italian delegates are no longer insisting on the fulfillment of the secret treaty of London.

AUSTRIANS ARRIVE.

PARIS, May 14.

The Austrian peace delegation arrived at St. Germain at 5.55 o'clock this afternoon. The delegation was headed by Prefect Chaillet and representatives of the French Government and the Allied and Associated Powers.

A CONTRAST.

PARIS, May 14.

The first meeting with the Austrian delegates presented a sharp contrast to the first meeting with the German delegates, because of its greater ease and friendliness. The delegation was headed by Karl Renner, the Chancellor. He appeared in the doorway of the car with his hat in his hand and with a contagious smile that put the reception committee quickly at ease. Dr. Renner, a plump-faced man with a black beard and bald head and with his eyes shining brightly behind a pair of gold-rimmed spectacles, bowed courteously to the reception committee. There was no hand-shaking.

LONDON, May 14.

Representatives of the Irish-American Societies of the United States will not be received by Premier Lloyd George on his return to Paris, or be accorded official or semi-official recognition. Col. House, who had promised to arrange an interview with the British Premier, now declines to do so on account of the delegation's activities in Ireland.

GERMAN PROTESTS.

PARIS, May 14.

The answers of the Council of Four to the German notes, on prisoners of war and other subjects, were delivered this afternoon. One of the latter German notes dealing with the economic clauses of the treaty, declared that they mean the ruin of Germany if they are enforced. A note on territorial questions protests particularly against the Saare Valley arrangement and the transfer of the Malmedy, Moresnet and Eupon districts to Belgium, as well as the forced evacuation of a part of Schleswig.

EBERT ATTACKS WILSON.

BERLIN, May 11.

(By way of New York. Delayed Cable).—President Ebert denounced the terms of the Peace Treaty as contemplating the physical, moral and intellectual paralysis of the German people. He attacked the President Wilson bitterly and declared the Government would hold out against the terms to the end.

A ROMANIAN REMINDER.

BERNE, May 13.

Romania considers the peace terms given Germany severe, but just, and less severe than Germany imposed upon Rumania a year ago, the Rumanian Press Bureau here announces. It is recalled that the German plenipotentiaries made this remark to the Rumanians: "The conditions imposed upon you are mild."

PARIS, May 14.

The German peace delegation is busy preparing voluminous counter proposals for submission to the Allied and Associated Powers as substitute terms of the peace treaty. Several economic subcommittees of the delegation met to-day, including one on coal supplies.

House of Assembly.

(Yesterday.)
The House met at 3.15 p. m. The Minister of Finance and Customs moved the House into Committee of the Whole on Ways and Means and delivered the Budget Speech. The Committee will sit again on Friday. A Bill to amend the Insurance Companies' Act, 1906, was introduced by the Minister of Finance and Customs.

Mr. Currie asked the Prime Minister if the Government had received any communication from the Newfoundland Company relating to the condition of the railroad, and if so to lay a copy of such communication upon the table of this House, and to state to the House what action, if any, the Government purposes taking thereon.

The Premier, in reply, stated that he was not in a position to furnish the House with any information at present. On being further questioned by Mr. Currie, he stated that he hoped to be able to do so before the session closed.

The bill to extend the Beaver Act, was read a third time. The House then went into Committee on the Tenants and Tenancies Bill.

Mr. Morine raised strong objections to the bill, which he regarded as being infamous in principle. It would not relieve the congestion complained of, but on the contrary would prohibit the erection of cheap houses, the class that is mostly required. He believed such a measure would destroy the whole value of existing property, and would be terribly bad in its effect on the community, and should be given the six months' notice.

The Speaker (Mr. Higgins) defended the bill on the grounds that it was made necessary by extraordinary circumstances, which it was imperative to relieve. He did not agree with the principle involved in the bill, but believed that under the existing conditions it was justified. He showed that similar legislation was in force elsewhere, and related instances to show that if something were not done next November a large number of people would be without a roof to shelter themselves.

Mr. Morine pointed out the difference between the legislation introduced in other countries, as quoted by the Speaker, and that now before the House, and urged that the bill should be sent to a Select Committee.

A brief debate followed, in which Messrs. Bennett, Downey, Grimes and the Prime Minister participated, all concurring with the suggestions made. The Committee rose and reported its decision, and the following Select Committee was appointed: The Premier, Grimes, Currie and the Speaker. A bill respecting the Bell Island Co-operative Company, Ltd., was then read a second time, and adjournment was taken until to-day.

C. C. C.
The C. C. C. will likely hold a church parade next Sunday week, when it is expected that some 400 lads including returned soldiers and school companies will turn out. The Athletic Association will meet at 7.30 to-night to discuss matters in connection with the coming seasons' games, and at 8 o'clock the battalion will parade and go for a route march in the country.

The concert, supper and dance held at the British Hall last night by the Spencer Club proved a splendid success, being attended by an unusually large gathering. The concert programme consisted of numbers by Mrs. Riggs, Mrs. Christian, Misses Ryan, Mitchell, C. Wood and Tait; Messrs. Christian, Trapnell and Riggs and was carried out in a manner which won much applause. The different items were splendidly rendered, all taking part ably maintaining their high reputations. Following the concert the dance was held, the C. L. B. The proceeds will be devoted to the school which has now been established in the British Hall. The affair which concluded at an early hour this morning was promoted by the President, Miss Stirling, assisted by members of the Club, to whom with all associated with them, credit is due on the success achieved.

Budget Presentation.

Minister of Finance Makes Financial Statement --- Surplus of $2,000,000 Estimated --- No New Taxation Foreshadowed.

Mr. Chairman.—I am fortunate today in being able to present my 11th successive Budget in this Chamber, and I rejoice that I can not only congratulate the Colony on having another surplus to its credit as an outcome of the operations of the past fiscal year, but also am enabled to announce that for the current fiscal year, of which ten months have now elapsed, the prospect is for a surplus unapproached in the previous history of the Colony, a surplus which I estimate will reach in round figures, $1,900,000, or nearly $900,000 more than last year's surplus, which really was $1,170,628, while the surplus for the previous year was $651,756.

It will, I am sure, be a cause of profound gratification to every member of this House to know that this Colony has made such a rapid and striking recovery from the effects of the depression which overpowered the world in 1913, and the commercial chaos that attended the opening period of the war in 1914-15, and that we have had a gradually increasing surplus each year since, as seen by the following figures:

1915-16	489,386
1916-17	651,756
1917-18	1,170,628
1918-19	1,900,000

In accordance with the usual custom, I will now proceed to deal with the Revenue and Expenditure of the Colony for the three fiscal years embraced in a Budget statement—the year that has passed, the current year, and the year to come.

The Revenue for the past fiscal year, that ending on the 30th of June 1918, was $5,540,082.67, being an increase of $1,323,435.14 over the revenue for 1916-17. The principal increases were $452,859 for Customs, mainly due to the prosperity of the Colony as a result of the enhanced value of its products, whereby its people were enabled to purchase in greater quantities goods of high cost, paying an ad valorem duty, but the new export duty on fish and oil contributed in part to its augmentation; $48,688 for Postal and Telegraphs, this being an abnormal increase, the result of the new postage and telegraph rates, and the substantial increase in the commission on money orders; $90,189, from the Western Union and Direct U. S. Cable Companies, being payment of the tax imposed on cables landed in this country by them; $70,905 for estate duties collected from the estates of partisans throughout the country who died during the year; $640,461 from the Excess Profits Tax effective for 1917, and $49,832 from Income Tax effective for the same period; $15,380 for Inland Revenue stamps, due to increased sales under the Stamp Act; $12,150 for the increased sale of brooms at the higher prices prevailing; and $9,089 profit on the issue of coin. Decreases are to be noted under three heads: a total of $54,483 under Miscellaneous General, which is a fluctuating source of Revenue; $4,536 from liquor licenses, this source of Revenue no longer existing; and $463 from Crown Lands, the rentals from which have been declining for some years past, due to the lack of activity in this regard during war time.

The Expenditure under the Public Service Act for the year 1917-18 amounted to $5,939,454.73, being an increase of $314,564.15 over the previous year, the total of dropped balances surrendered to the Treasury being $156,216.06.

As inevitable under war conditions and with an economic situation such as has prevailed for the past four years, the expenditure under all heads of the Public Service, except civil pensions, roads and bridges, and Audit Act (Section 33 B) has increased, notably for Interest on Public Debt, Civil Government, Administration of Justice, Education, Public Charities, and Postal and Telegraphs.

The details of the various items of additional expenditure are embodied in the Auditor General's report already laid on the table of the House, so that it will be unnecessary for me to deal with them in detail here.

The result of the fiscal operations of the Colony for that year, therefore, with a Revenue of $5,540,082.67 and an Expenditure of $5,939,454.73, was to produce a Surplus of $1,170,627.94, the largest thus far, as I have already said, in our financial history, exceeding that of the previous year, until then the largest, by $518,871. I might say here that, out of this surplus, the Government in the autumn of last year appropriated to the Reid Newfoundland Company the sum of $316,960.00, for the purchase of the lands granted to the Reid Co. for the operation of the branch railways, paying for the same at the rate of 28 cts. an acre and $132,546.94 as a payment on account of work under said contract, these amounts being certified by the Government Engineer.

The disposition of the remaining Surplus, of roughly, $720,000, I shall deal with later.

For the current fiscal year, 1918-19, expiring on the 30th of next month, I estimate a total Revenue of $8,568,000, the actual Revenue to the 31st of March having been $5,520,000, a close estimate for April being $760,000 and an estimate for May and June being $2,288,000. Against this revenue, the actual Expenditure will amount to $6,675,000, that is to say, the Estimates voted at last session, roundly, $5,400,000, and Supplementary Supply voted last week of $1,375,000, less dropped balances of, say $100,000, leaving a total expenditure, as already stated, of $6,675,000, against a revenue of $8,568,000, so that we may expect a Surplus Revenue for this year of approximately $1,900,000. In connection with this very acceptable outcome of the year's transactions, which I am sure not alone every member, but the country at large will meet with great pleasure, I would like to point out that last year I estimated a Revenue of $400,000 from the Excess Profits Tax, which has been put through the Legislature at the previous session, and which was met then with the criticism that it would not pay the cost of the machinery to carry it out; but now, as the House will already have grasped, the receipts from this source not alone reached the $400,000, but actually overtopped that figure by $250,000 more, besides which we secured $50,000 from the Income Tax Law of last session. This, I think, is not alone a justification for the policy which the Government adopted in this regard, but it is also a most conclusive evidence of the substantial prosperity of all classes within this country, and of the very great profits made out of its staple industries in recent years, a condition which I sincerely trust will continue for a long period.

For the coming fiscal year I do not propose to estimate too closely, in view of the fact that this country has returned here before the end of June, those remaining being merely the men in hospital whose convalescence will not have advanced sufficiently to justify being sent out.

On account of the Regiment the local disbursements are estimated to be $2,000,000 up to the end of June, and $1,400,000 for the latter half of the year, the conditions being somewhat similar; that is to say, the men back our own men, and the men at home and demobilized and the outlay in connection with this process has been gradually reduced as the months go by.

For the Naval Reserve the estimate is for $450,000 for the first half of the year, and $400,000 for the latter half, the proportionately large amount for the second half of the year being due to the greater delay in getting back our own men, and the men at home and demobilized and the outlay in connection with this process has been gradually reduced as the months go by.

It may be interesting, in connection with our war expenditure, if I furnish some of the figures of Canada's outlay in April 1918, and in May 1918, that to the 31st March, 1918, (the Canadian fiscal year ending on the 30th June, like our own) the entire amount was $1,277,273,200, a figure that, proportionately, Canada's War Bill is more than six or eight months, to attempt any changes in the Tariff, and therefore I propose in regard thereto to merely provide certain minor rectifications, the need for which has been urged upon us. They are as follows:—

(a) A change in the duty on partly manufactured leather for the manufacture of shoes, in order to give the local manufacturer a greater measure of protection than is afforded under the present regulations, the alternative to this being a duty or tax of five cents, in addition to the said Customs duty, a duty or tax of five cents.

Resolutions to give effect to these proposals I now table.

The surplus of roughly $720,000 which we are applying in account of 1916-17 we propose to apply as follows: $500,000 for public and marine works with the object of building up the output of the country, and similar utilities whereby our fishermen are enabled to more efficiently conduct the main industry of the Colony, and the balance of $220,000 towards offsetting the reduction of the amount in the $6,000,000 we propose to seek in the few days, and which we are offering as outside portion of the loan, $5,000,000, for subscription by tender and what figure we shall receive therefor cannot be known until the tenders are received.

The estimated surplus of $1,900,000 on account of the present fiscal year we propose to place to the credit of the Surplus Fund, and to reserve as a reserve or nest-egg in case any emergency arises in the near or remote future, which it could be applied to coping with such a condition.

In a statement recently furnished by the Minister of Militia, he shows that the requirements of the Department for the present year, 1919, will be as follows:—

To the end of June	$2,850,000
For latter half of year July 1st to Dec. 31st	1,902,500

making a total requirement to the end of December of $4,752,500.

During the year the London office will, it is expected, spend about half a million dollars for the pay, allowances and other expenses in connection with our men on service overseas and for their repatriation, $400,000 of this amount up to the end of June and $100,000 during the latter half of the year. The reduction in expenditure during that period will of course be due to the fact that most of our soldiers will be home by the end of June, those remaining being merely the men in hospital whose convalescence will not have advanced sufficiently to justify being sent out.

Under these circumstances the Committee will, I think, agree with me that it is undesirable, in view of the conditions which exist in the Colony, and the prospect of a recession in the Tariff, and therefore I propose in regard thereto to merely provide certain minor rectifications, the need for which has been urged upon us. They are as follows:—

(b) A change in the duty on partly manufactured leather for the manufacture of shoes, in order to give the local manufacturer a greater measure of protection than is afforded under the present regulations, the alternative to this being a duty or tax of five cents, in addition to the said Customs duty, a duty or tax of five cents.

I think in this connection that we must count ourselves very fortunate in Newfoundland that we are in such a favourable position financially at the end of the war as we are in comparison with other countries. Hon. members will have observed from the British budget speech, a summary of which was cabled here last week, that the financial position of the Mother Country is such that it has to finance an obligation seven to eight times as great as before the war, and that the Finance Minister there has before him the problem that the sources of taxation in sight will only realize about two-thirds of the sum he requires, and he must find the remainder by new sources of taxation. In Canada again, though the budget speech has not been delivered the opinion of financial

Why Some People Sing and Others Not!

Now I am sure this same woman (somehow I feel perfectly sure it is a woman though she did not sign her name) would not think of asking me to explain why some people can sing or paint wonderfully while others cannot. She would not expect me to know the secrets of creation and heredity by which genius is given to one person and denied to another. And to a certain extent I think the genius for being popular is just as much a gift as the ability to sing or paint. There are many people who have this gift, without making any effort to be anything but their natural selves they inevitably take the centre of the stage.

But There is Also a Social Talent.

But aside from this genius for popularity I do not think there is also a social talent which can be cultivated and encouraged. Of course, the cultivator will never win the easy brilliant successes of those naturally gifted, but he may at least keep himself from being always left out.

The rules of such cultivation have been so often enunciated that I am a bit diffident about mentioning them again. And yet I will indicate a few.

If you want to play the game, be sure you know the fundamental rules of the game. If necessary buy a book of etiquette.

Why Some People Hold the Centre.

By RUTH CAMERON.

RUTH CAMERON

"Can you explain why some people are always on the edge of a crowd or clique and others are left out of social affairs when others are invited and pushed into the centre of social life in any community? Any light on this puzzling question which you can give will be gratefully appreciated by one of the above-mentioned social fallows."

So writes a letter friend, in the course of a letter in which she asks me to discuss popularity and unpopularity.

Why Can Some People Sing and Others Not?

Now I am sure this same woman (somehow I feel perfectly sign her name) would not think of asking me to explain why some people can sing or paint wonderfully while others cannot. She would not expect me to know the secrets of creation and heredity by which genius is given to one person and denied to another. And to a certain extent I think the genius for being popular is just as much a gift as the ability to sing or paint.

There are many people who have this gift. Without making any effort to be anything but their natural selves they inevitably take the centre of the stage.

But There is Also a Social Talent.

But aside from this genius for popularity I do not think there is also a social talent which can be cultivated and encouraged. Of course, the cultivator will never win the easy brilliant successes of those naturally gifted, but he may at least keep himself from being always left out.

The rules of such cultivation have been so often enunciated that I am a bit diffident about mentioning them again. And yet I will indicate a few.

If you want to play the game, be sure you know the fundamental rules of the game. If necessary buy a book of etiquette.

Learn to talk small talk.

Cultivate any abilities you have. Society is interested in those who can give it something.

Try to remember what each person is specially interested in and to bring up that topic in their presence. Learn to do the popular things, bridge, dancing, skating, etc.

Never be effusive or pushing or too eager in any way.

Keep your eyes open to learn both by the good and bad example.

And above all things try to really think of and be interested in others and not too much in yourself.

A Correspondence School in Popularity Needed.

Whether this will help the individual who wrote me or not I don't know. Perhaps it doesn't fit her case. That's the trouble with all such general advice. I wonder no one has ever started a correspondence school in popularity through which individuals should present their problems and be told how to improve themselves. I think a person who was in earnest might really do good work along that line.

STORKS BACK AGAIN IN STRASBOURG.

Storks, which ceased their annual visits to Strasbourg in the spring of 1914, returned last week to the old nests on a building on the left side of the Place de Broglie, in the centre of Strasbourg. Several storks, the first in five years, now occupy the nests. The unexpected return in the present circumstances is commented upon with pleasure by the native population, who have always held that the storks brought good luck. The building to which the storks returned is next door to the house in which on April 25, 1792, Rouget de Lisle first sang the Marseillaise. The Bank of France recently has established its offices in the building with the stork nests. Before the war the storks of Strasbourg brought many tourists to that city.

Panic in Britain Over Rabies.

The first panic over rabies in twenty-one years is spreading through England. Several cases developed in the country recently and two were discovered in London in the past week.

The Board of Agriculture has issued an order that all dogs in London and surrounding counties up to be muzzled or led, and that none can be taken in or out of those boundaries.

If a stray dog seems excited and runs fast he is pursued and stoned to death. Three hundred stray dogs were executed in the lethal chamber, Battersea, in one day. Some owners are taking their pets there to be put to death by gas as the most merciful manner in which to deal with the situation. The newspapers claim that wealthy women are smuggling their dogs away in railroad trains, and demand a penalty or imprisonment for endangering the lives of others.

There are rumours, but no proofs, that the disease was introduced by soldiers' dogs brought across the Channel in airplanes to evade the standing quarantine against dogs.

THE SECOND EDITION.

Seems like I'm livin' over all the childhood that I knew, An' doin' all the reckless things that once I used to do For that little chap beside me with the tousled shock of hair That is always into trouble an' his mother's greatest care Is the image of his daddy, in his every act I see The living, moving picture of the boy I used to be.

People say that he's just like me an' I guess it must be true For he's simply doin' over all the things I used to do. You'll find him gaily swingin' from the top branch of a tree Or tight-rope walkin' fence tops with his mother cannot know An' he's never really happy till he's wallowed in the dirt An' he keeps his mother busy sewin' buttons on his shirt.

The woman folks all wonder where he gets his heedless ways, But I know that they are rooted in my by-gone yesterdays An' I see in every action what his mother cannot know That he's simply livin' over all my life of long ago. An' they say that I should stop him when he risks his precious pate An' change his willful nature, but it's forty years too late.

Volcanoes Only Sleep.

It's Never Safe to Live Near One.

Mount Eburuz, in the Caucasus has suddenly burst into activity after a sleep lasting for untold ages. This is the way with volcanoes. They take naps lasting a few thousand years, then they erupt all unexpectedly, with results that are frequently disastrous to those living in the vicinity.

A striking example is that afforded by Mount Pelee, in the island of Martinique. Ever since the coming of Columbus, and the first settlement of the island by white people, the volcano had been regarded as extinct. In fact, its supposedly dead crater was filled by a lake of crystal clearness, which was a favorite resort of boating and picnic parties from the neighbouring city of St. Pierre.

Then, one morning in May, 1902, after a few preliminary grunts, it exploded like a gigantic bomb-shell, wiping St. Pierre off the face of the earth, and burying its twenty thousand inhabitants beneath millions of tons of fiery, incandescent ashes.

Scientists are not agreed as to the causes which impel volcanoes to suddenly come to life again in this erratic way. One thing, however, is certain! The longer a volcano is bottled up, so to speak, the bigger the explosion when it does come.

It is not the one that is regularly in eruption that is to be feared, but the sleeping monster whose powers for evil are never unsuspected.

France Honors Admiral Beatty.

Admiral Sir David Beatty, of the British Navy, received the Grand Cross of the Legion of Honor from President Poincare at the Palace of the Elysee recently. The Admiral was accompanied by Lady Beatty and a number of British naval officers. President Poincare in his address said:

"I am happy to have this occasion of expressing the congratulations of the French Republic to you all, Gentlemen, let me ask you to convey them to the staffs and crews of the British Navy, who made such a glorious contribution to victory.

"I particularly wish to offer my warmest congratulations to Sir David Beatty, who had the command of the battle-cruisers and of all the forces engaged in the splendid action off Heligoland and the Dogger banks, and who won the heroic combat of Jutland. In making you, sir, a Grand Cross of the Legion of Honor, France is doing honor to all who have served under you."

HOHENZOLLERN.

For many years old Kaiser Bill accomplished fine things for his state; we must admit, already still, that as a hustler he was great. He helped the state in every way, by every fair and unfair means; and now his thankless people say, "Twas Kaiser Bill who spilled the beans." Now who remembers how he wrought, to uphold German industries, and how he gave his midnight thought to finding marts for German cheese? Forgotten are his coal tar dyes; men think but of his submarines, and daunt his spirit with their cries, "You are the guy who spilled the beans!" If Bill had dreamed no war lord stuff, he would have honored throne and crown; for he had done big things enough to earn a fair and fine renown; but now he humbly sows his weeds, and humbly hoos his patch of greens, while peasants say, "He is no good—he is the guy who spilled the beans." How it must gall the exiled Hun to know that busy men forget the saner things that he has done, to talk about his one fool bet! How he must weary of the game, when on his window sill he leans, and hears the passerby exclaim, "There is the skate who spilled the beans!"

UNJUSTIFIABLE.

The unjustifiable, contemptible and altogether reprehensible attack made on the Hon. John Anderson in the Legislative Council, Tuesday, by Hon. W. J. Ellis, leader of the Government, is without parallel in the history of that body. It was a savage onslaught, made with malice aforethought and obviously intended to wreak injury to the business connections of the gentleman upon whom the leader of the Government poured out the vitals of his wrath. It was unjustifiable because no matter what evidence the Hon. Mr. Ellis had possessed of relating to the internal affairs of Mr. Anderson, they were not his sole property, but rather that of the Executive and as such were committed to members of that body as Executive secrets and not for public information.

It was contemptible because Mr. Ellis had not the ability to reply to Mr. Anderson's criticisms of various legislation proposed by the Government, and of its conduct of public affairs, and not being able to refute the arguments of his opponent, was obliged to resort to private information of a sacred and intimate nature in order if possible to score a point, and to save some of the wounds inflicted in the many lingual battles engaged in between the Honorable leader and his critic.

It was reprehensible because evidently Mr. Ellis had come prepared with the war material and was determined in some way or other to fire it off—but—and the point is—by whom and in what way Mr. Ellis supplied with the manuscript from which he read. Department Heads as a rule do not supply information which comes to them through the working of their departments, especially when such information concerns the private financial transactions of a firm engaged in the trade of the dominion. Deputy Heads have no authority to give out such matters as were contained in the speech of Hon. Mr. Ellis. This being so we have to come to the conclusion that there was a violation of honor as well as of confidence somewhere. Mr. Ellis could not very well bring away from Executive meetings memoranda of the discussions, taking place there, this course being, we understand, not permitted, consequently we are forced to the conclusion that he was supplied with the script from which he read, as in no case would the mind of the Government leader contain all that he declared of Mr. Anderson's business dealings with the Customs department, without prompting.

Things have indeed reached a disgraceful pass, when it is deemed quite the thing to get up in the Council Chamber and hurl derisively at an opponent that his business has only been saved from wreck and ruin by the good offices of a Government department. If this sort of thing continues, no man's financial concerns will be safe, and the floors of the Legislative Halls will be the scenes of public pronouncements on the condition of the trade and internal economy of a political opponent's commercial affairs.

There is no language which should be held back in denouncing such a depraved and pernicious policy. There can be no honor or semblance of honor among public men who will stoop so low in their efforts to stifle opposition and honest criticism. The sanctity of the Executive has been violated, the privacy of the Government departments invaded in order to give the leader of the Government in the Upper House a chance to avenge himself on an open and honest critic. And this has been done with the consent and connivance of the Executive Government of this dominion. What do you think of it Newfoundlanders?

Budget Speech.

We publish to-day a portion of the Budget Speech of Hon. M. P. Cashin, made to the House of Assembly yesterday, which is almost as delivered, the chief omission being a number of comparative statistical tables which are not usually interesting. The task which they have undertaken is a big one, and will entail a great deal of hard work, as well as wise counsel; but they are determined to work with eye and constancy; and they hope to be in a position, at no very remote date, to lay, well and truly, the cornerstone of the edifice, and then in due order to see the top stone brought on with rejoicing. In this wish we all join.

1200 Miles by Air Without Stop.

American Dirigible Arrives From Montauk, N.Y. --- Flight Lasted Twenty-Seven Hours --- Crew Hungry But Fit --- Arrival Witnessed by Thousands.

Some hundreds of citizens of St. John's had turned up at Pleasantville on the shores of Quidi Vidi Lake this morning, when the American balloon C-5 arrived after a twelve hundred mile flight from Montauk Point, New York. Motor cars and carriages were scattered along the road for over a quarter of a mile, while the entire countryside was black with the crowds that had congregated. Everybody was looking into the sky, eyes being directed to every point of the compass, for it was not known from which direction the dirigible would come. When at last she did appear, it was with a suddenness that took everybody by surprise, and as the graceful balloon floated around Signal Hill, in between that Hill and Cockle's Head, over the Cove, a spontaneous cry of admiration rose from every throat. Within a few minutes she manoeuvred in over the Lake and, nearly touching the old house in which is stored material connected with the ship, took up her position in the field adjacent to the houthouse against the sky, with the sun shining on the fabric bag, the balloon presented a beautiful sight, one that will not soon be forgotten by all who saw her. She came right down to the field, the thirty-five foot long car, suspended underneath, and containing the crew, touching the grass. The waiting sailors from the Chicago, who were on the ground since daylight, quickly attached the mooring ropes, and in a minute the aviators began to climb over the side. People ran from the road to the ship, many clasped the hands of the aeronauts, and everyone cheered himself hoarse with excitement and enthusiasm. Admiral S. S. Wood, Captain Kurtz and other officers of the Chicago, and the American Consul were present to greet the fliers. A minute after the balloons had alighted, Major C. W. F. Morgan, the Martinsyde navigator, was introduced to Com. Coll, and the latter congratulating him upon accomplishing the flight. The party then motored in Mr. J. O. Hawvermale's car to the U. S. Chicago, at Shea's, where the newspapermen of the city interviewed them in the Admiral's cabin. Commander Coll's story was briefly this:

Leaving Montauk Point, N. Y., 10 o'clock yesterday morning, they went over Long Island Sound, and arrived off Chatham. From there they proceeded across Massachusetts Bay to Nova Scotia, making a landfall at Cape St. Mary's, on the western Nova Scotia shore. Crossing the Nova Scotia system and continuing on to the east coast to Cape Breton, and at 11 o'clock last night struck across for Little Miqelon. The night was clear, with a bright moon and stars. Instead of the straight course that they had laid out, they found that the ship had been thrown off, and it was not until over the western shore of Placentia Bay that they identified the land beneath. From that on they used directional radio, but this failed to work. In fact the directional wireless instruments were altogether a failure. They also tried to locate their position by chart, and starting across the country. Eventually they got their bearings by crossing the railway track, which they identified as Topsail. They came in from that following the railway line. Although they saw lots of fog they did not run into any. The ride was pretty rough, all told, but upon arrival here the balloonists felt more hungry than tired, and declared that they could have eaten anything. They then went to the kitchen, bath, and then to the party soon were slumbering between the cool sheets of the berths of the U. S. Chicago. The crew is comprised of:

Commander E. W. Coll, Lieut. J. B. Lawrence and Ensign D. F. Campbell, pilots; Lieut. M. H. Easton, radiograph officer; and Chief Machinist Mates T. L. Blackburn and J. T. Moorman.

The distance covered was 1200 miles, taking 26 hours and 50 minutes to fly. The actual mileage direct from N. Y. to here is 950, but the circling and variations made up the extra distance.

It has not yet been decided that the balloon will attempt a Transatlantic flight. Needs to state the Americans in port are delighted over the success of the balloon, and the siren of the Chicago, as the crew came aboard, drowned the music of the band that played as they came onto the pier.

C-5's Flight Told by Messages. MONTAUK, N. Y., May 14. Navy Dirigible C-5 left at 8 o'clock to-day on a flight to St. John's, Nfld., which may be followed if successful, by an attempt to fly across the Atlantic. The balloon promptly slipped into the maximum speed of 59 miles, and should reach Newfoundland in 24 hours.

MONTAUK PT., May 14. The C-5, in command of Lieut. Commander Coll took a northeast course which is expected to carry him over the Naval Air Station in Chatham and along the New England and Canadian Coasts. "Lighter than air experts" have been put ashore at St. John's, Newfoundland, from the cruiser Chicago with spare parts, tools, supplies, inflation gas and fuel to await the ship to assist her in the two thousand mile non-stop cruise to the British Isles. She might possibly go by the Azores and thus have the protection of warship patrol. Five men in addition to Lieut. Coll, commanded the crew of the C-5. "We will join the seaplane yet," said Commander Ashe, stepping into the basket. The service crew of the Chicago, consisting of 150,000 cubic feet of gas, out of the hangar and "walk" it to the beach. A south wind was blowing at 15 miles an hour when it took the air.

CHATHAM, Mass., May 14. The C-5, flying at one thousand feet high, passed over the Air Station here at 10:05 a.m. The balloon was ascending as she disappeared over the course followed by seaplane N.C. 4.

WASHINGTON, May 14. Reports received at the Navy Department to-day on the progress of the navy dirigible C-5, which left from Montauk Point, Long Island, to Newfoundland, led officials to believe that the craft would reach St. John's between six and nine o'clock to-morrow morning.

HALIFAX, May 14. The United States dirigible C-5 passed off Halifax Harbor at 5:45 this afternoon, headed for Newfoundland.

ST. PIERRE, May 15. The U. S. dirigible C-5, passed over here at 4 o'clock this morning.

WHITBOURNE, 10 a.m. American dirigible C-5 passed over here at the above hour this morning flying in an easterly course toward St. John's.

Arrived and anchored at Pleasantville at 11:30 a.m.

N.C. 4 at Halifax.

The following are the latest advices to hand regarding the N.C. 4 seaplane, which left N.C. 1 and 3 are waiting at Trepassay.

SEAPLANE ACCOMPLISHES FIRST LEG.

CHATHAM, Mass., May 14. The naval seaplane N.C. 4, after a brief trial flight about the Bay, set out to-day in a northerly direction, possibly on the cruise to join N.C. 1 and N.C. 3 waiting at Trepassay for favorable weather to start on the trans-Atlantic flight.

CHATHAM, May 14. The naval seaplane N.C. 4, here at 9:25 a.m. to join N.C. 1 and N.C. 3 at Trepassay, Nfld., the starting point of the trans-Atlantic flight. The N.C. 4 was to fly to-day to Halifax. With a northwest breeze and the sky clear, weather conditions were regarded as promising and the hope was expressed by naval officers that the N.C. 4 would join her sister planes, N.C. 3 and N.C. 1 at Trepassay Bay. N.C. 4 will stop at Halifax and not attempt to make the distance to Newfoundland in one flight. Naval authorities say it is not certain that she would stay at Halifax a night. There is a possibility that about the engine work properly, Lieut. Commander A. C. Read, in charge of N.C. 4, might decide to make only a brief stay at Halifax and resume the flight to Trepassay to-night.

HALIFAX, May 14. Seaplane N.C. 4 arrived at 2:10 this afternoon.

C. 5 Along the Line.

From the Reid Despatching Office we have received the following movements of the Balloon C-5 as reported by the telegraphers in each place: Placentia Junction, Whitbourne (ten o'clock), Brigus Junction, Avondale, Holyrood, and Koligrew. She then went St. John's ward according to the reports.

In the bantam class, first series, Pta. Digger Evans, Australia, beat Gunter Moore, Canada, after a game bout; the Canadian taking much punishment in the featherweight semi-finals. Sgt. Cole, of Canada, beat Bennett. In lightweight series, Sgt. Ralph Wilkin, Navy, beat gunner Herscovitch, Canada; middleweights, first series, Sapper Harris, Canada; heavyweights, first series, Sgt. ADVANTAGE ALL. LONDON, May 14. In the House of Commons, Sir C. Henry, M.P., for Salop, asked if when peace terms are agreed upon, will all the former German colonies, of which Great Britain or her colonies hold mandates, be included as British colonies and obtain the advantage of Imperial preference. Mr. Bonar Law replied that none of these territories would be colonies, but in certain cases, for example Southwest Africa, and certain Pacific Islands, they would be administered as integral portions of the mandatory's territory and consequently share in its advantages.

CHANCE FOR SPECULATION. LONDON, May 14. Replying to Kennedy Jones, M.P., for Hornsey, in the Commons to-day, Rt. Hon. C. D. Roberts, Minister of Food, said the food ministry did not propose to purchase the exportable supply of Canadian cheese in the present season, but to leave it to private traders, who would purchase the cheese on their own account.

Immediate measures, tending to the further subjugation of Germany, if its delegates refuse to sign the Peace Treaty, were indicated to-day by the Government and that Marshal Foch had been sent to the Rhine by the Council of Four, to take such action as may become necessary in the event that the Treaty is not signed.

After another witness had been called the court took recess until 2.30 p.m.

The reports of the Secretary-Treasurer were presented and proved very satisfactory. The election of officers for the ensuing year resulted in the return of last season's Board, namely:— Chairman—Hon. J. D. Ryan. Vice-Chairman—M. Bambrick. Secretary-Treasurer—W. S. Dunphy. Chairman of Labor—M. W. Myrick. Secretary of Labor—J. O'Mara. The above with Messrs. A. O'Reilly, P. Casey, D. Brown and J. Doyle comprise the committee. Every effort will be made during the year to improve the cemetery grounds. On the second Sunday in June the annual collection in aid of Belvidere and Mount Carmel will be taken up at the Masses in all the churches.

The Mayor's Standpoint.

Editor Evening Telegram. Dear Sir,—As Mr. Smith and I are quite in accord as to the principle involved in the Section recently added to Section 7 of the original Charter, it is hardly necessary to argue as to who was the author of the mighty thought, but as Mr. Smith has seen fit to challenge my statement, I am forced once more to trespass upon your space to substantiate my statement. The Section reads as follows: "Whenever in the assessment of the cost of improvements under Sections 4, 6 and 7 of this Act, there may be buildings already existing upon the streets dealt with, the land upon which such buildings are erected shall be exempt from the assessment to the extent of 80 feet frontage but no more."

The desire of the Citizens' Committee, according to Mr. Smith, was, "that (a) only the owners of property not built upon should pay anything for the improvement, and (b) that owners of adjoining property not directly benefited should be exempt from paying any part of the cost of the improvement." It is in accordance with my own memo and also with Mr. Higgins' notes. It is also in entire accordance with the Sections as originally written. Upon the streets dealt with, the principle decided upon by the Municipal Board. There seemed, however, to be some misapprehension as to the interpretation of the term "building sites," which was used in the original draft, (and which I may say is a term commonly used in English Acts), therefore at a meeting between the Joint Select Committee of the Legislature and representatives from the Municipal Board, it was decided to use instead the term "land suitable for building purposes."

It might be said with perfect fairness that this alteration was made because of the question raised by the Citizens' Committee, and it sets at rest any question as to point (a) raised by them. No change was made in the draft on account of point (b), because by no possible chance could the wording be so interpreted as to include in the assessment anybody who was not benefited by the improvements. The new Section has nothing whatever to do with the points, and does not modify them in any way. It was found to be necessary through an experience of the Council in 1917, when a man claimed exemption from a considerable amount of frontage on the plea that it was part of the measure or grounds of his house, and was not intended for building purposes. This was a new one on me, as they say, and I made a note that provision was to be made in the Charter to prevent exemption being claimed for more than a reasonable amount of frontage, whether it was to be built upon or not. Hence the added Section, and as Mr. Smith upon re-examination, will see that it has no reference to the points raised by the Citizens' Committee, one of which was met by the substitution of the term "land suitable for building purposes," instead of "building sites," and the other was not acted upon, as it was held to be unnecessary.

Yours truly, W. G. GOSLING. GRAND CONCERT by the Band of U. S. Warship "Chicago" (under the distinguished patronage of His Excellency the Governor). An unexpected treat will be given us on Saturday night at the Casino Theatre when, by permission of Admiral Wood, the splendid orchestra of the "Chicago" will give a Concert in aid of the Jensen Camp. It is a special orchestra, and the music lovers of St. John's, which means all the community, will have an exceptional pleasure. It is seldom that we have such an opportunity; the Band Concert given by the Band of H. M. S. Ophir, many years ago, we believe to have been the last. It has been found impossible to arrange any other night but Saturday, but we know that we may promise these musicians of our Allies a crowded house. Tickets may be had from Gray & Goodland's on Friday and Saturday. Seats, 50c.; 40c.; Gallery, 30c.; Pit, 20c.—may15,11

HIS WAY OF PROPOSING. He was the grave-digger of a Scottish parish; she was the minister's servant girl. One day he asked her to take a walk with him, and she consented.

Leading her to the scene of his honest, if melancholy, labours, he walked by her side in silence until they reached a particular lot in the burying ground. Then, becoming very much affected, he said: "Look there, Jeanie, that's whaur a' my folk lie, and that's whaur I'll lie myself if I'm spared. Wad ye like to lie there, Jeanie?" She replied that she should, and so the matter was settled.

What Released Murderers Do.

Some Write Their Life Stories and Make Money. Horace Rayner, who has just been released after serving twelve years' penal servitude for the murder of William Whiteley, is going to emigrate and start life afresh, away from the scenes which have left such an indelible impression on his life.

According to the Rev. John Pitkin, who was the prison chaplain at the time, John Lee, the man whom the authorities tried three times unsuccessfully to hang, became a barman after his release from prison in 1907. Many people used to go to the public house where he was serving, just to be served by a released murderer! He added to his income by writing an account of his experiences after being released. His example has been followed by several released murderers.

Everybody knows the famous pair of murderers Burke and Hare, who killed people for the sake of the anatomy which their bodies would fetch. Burke was hanged and Hare released. Many a man afterwards has must have wished that he had been fortunate enough to be hanged. After his release he obtained work under a false name as a lime burner. By some means his true identity became known to his fellow-workers, who promptly set upon him and threw him into one of the kilns.

He was rescued in time to preserve his wretched life, but the lime had destroyed the sight of both of his eyes. Eventually he wandered through London streets for many years as a blind beggar, and eventually died in the utmost poverty and misery. Most readers will remember the famous Penge mystery in which the Stautons were tried and condemned to death for starving to death Mrs. Louis Stauton. One of the Stautons died in prison not long after his conviction, but his wife, who had been condemned to life, lived to make a successful living. Louis Stauton himself, after his release, married again, was given £100 by the Counsel who defended him, and started in a prosperous business, trying to forget the terrible times he had been through.

Most released murderers, in fact, promptly change their names and do all within their power to retrieve the past, and make up for their lost years in prison.

Shell Shock or Neurosis. The Medical Department of the United States Army has found that the early conclusions regarding shell shock are not true. There is really no such thing as shell shock, although there are many cases of war neurosis. War neurosis is really not different from neurosis found beyond the war zone.

Neurosis, whether found in the Army or among civilians is a subconscious desire and the physical condition induced thereby to avoid a discomfort. In the Army, it is a subconscious desire to get to or to remain at the rear. However, it does not necessarily follow that the patient is lacking in courage, for there are many cases of war neurosis induced by the mental attitude of the patient concerning promotions, leave, alleged favoritism, etc. Among officers, neurosis is often induced by the responsibility occasioned by the demands at the front.

Investigation has shown that shell shock or neurosis is unheard of among prisoners, although they may be in fearful physical or mental condition, just as it is almost unheard of among wounded, excepting those who are about to be returned to their commands. Emphasis should be laid on the fact that shell shock or neurosis is a sub-conscious attitude and a disease which must be cured. There are comparatively few cases of patients' faking.

Many soldiers having neurosis will remain uncured even after returning to civil life unless the disease is thoroughly understood so that proper treatment may be given.—Scientific American.

Famous Poem in Book Form.

No poem produced by the war has been so universally popular as "In Flanders Fields." Sentiment has always something, perhaps most, to do with the appeal in a poem that captures the heart of mankind as this poem has done all over the world. But sentiment will not keep a poem alive, it will not bring to each new reader a fresh and engaging mood of beauty and enjoyment. Sentiment is like one of those perishable fabrics in which the texture is destroyed along with the pattern. "In Flanders Fields" is the embodiment and expression of a mood crystallised by a profound and durable idea; an idea born from the stress of a great experience in the eventful and critical hour of human sacrifice. The experience itself will pass, as passed away the spiritual residue that is left becomes one of those eternal and immortal symbols which keep true and unwavering the rectitude of men's vision and preserves for them the best of what they have done. "In Flanders Fields" is a great poem, great in a sort of solemn temerity which blooms with conviction at every reading. It has the same elevated mood, the same profound subtlety, and communicates the same exalted vision as Lincoln's Gettysburg address. As often as McCrae's ode has been quoted, it is always privilege to have it make the occasion rich by its presence.

Famous Poem in Book Form.

No poem produced by the war has been so universally popular as "In Flanders Fields." Sentiment has always been something, perhaps most, to do with the appeal in a poem that captures the heart of mankind as this poem has done all over the world. The sentiment will not keep a poem alive, it will not bring to each new reader a fresh and engaging mood of beauty and enjoyment. Sentiment is like one of those perishable fabrics in which the texture is destroyed along with the pattern. "In Flanders Fields" is the embodiment and expression of a mood crystallized by a profound and durable idea; an idea born from the stress of a great experience in the eventful and critical hour of human sacrifice. The experience itself will pass, has passed away along with the terrible realities of time and place and participation, but the spiritual residue that is left behind is one of those eternal and immortal symbols which keep true and unwavering the rectitude of men's vision and preserves for them the benefits of sacrifice so gladly and unselfishly made. I really think "In Flanders Fields" is a great poem, great in a sort of solemn temerity which blooms with conviction at every reading. It has the same elevated mood, the same profound substance, and communicates the same exalted vision as Lincoln's Gettysburg address. As often as McCrae's address has been quoted, it is always a privilege to have it make the occasion rich by its presence.

In Flanders fields the poppies blow
 Between the crosses, row on row,
 That mark our place; and in the sky
 The larks, still bravely singing, fly,
 Scarce heard amid the guns below.
 We are the Dead. Short days ago
 We lived, felt dawn, saw sunset glow,
 Loved and were loved, and now we Lie in Flanders fields.

Take up our quarrel with the foe;
 To you from falling hands we throw
 The torch; be yours to hold it high;
 If ye break faith with us who die
 We shall not sleep, though poppies grow
 In Flanders fields.

As has often happened in times of great stress among mankind, the substance of the stress is gathered and focussed by the non-professional poets. Though Col. McCrae wrote and published a number of poems and perhaps loved the art with an almost professional passion, he was a physician who had made a name for himself in scientific medicine. "In Flanders Fields" has been printed in a volume with twenty-nine other poems, none of which is touched with anything like the finality of force and substance of that poem. Indeed, except for three or four, they are rather commonplace in theme, though expressed with that distinction of form which characterizes the "poppy" poem. He affected quite often the form of the rondeau, and in one other effort at least, in "The Night Cometh," gives us a glimpse of the grace and conception which we associate with him in the one supreme performance. This is the poem:

Cometh the night. The wind falls low,
 The trees swing slowly to and fro;
 Around the church the headstones
 Gray
 Cluster, like children, strayed away
 But found again and folded so.

No chiding look doth she bestow:
 If she is glad, they cannot know;
 If ill or well they spend their day,
 Cometh the night.

Singing or sad, intent they go:
 They do not see the shadows grow;
 "There yet is time," they lightly say,
 "Before our work aside we lay";
 Their task is but half-done, and lo!
 Cometh the night.

Another poem of McCrae's which shows the profounder side of his nature, which was, as Sir Andrew Macphail tells us, deeply religious, a characteristic of his Scotch breeding and environment, is "Anarchy":

I saw a city filled with lust and shame,
 Where men, like wolves, slunk through the grim half-light;
 And sudden, in the midst of it, there came
 One who spoke boldly for the cause of Right.

And speaking, fell before that brutish
 race
 Like some poor wren that shrieking eagles tear,
 While brute Dishonor, with her blood-less face
 Stood by and smote his lips that moved in prayer.

"Speak not of God! In centuries that word
 Hath not been uttered! Our own King are we."
 And God stretched forth His finger as
 He heard
 And o'er it cast a thousand leagues of sea.

The "Essay in Character" which Sir Andrew Macphail appends to the poems in this volume, is a sympathetic and informing memoir of the physician-poet. Sir Andrew's picture of the man, and the account of his life, are intimate and detailed. They are filled out from McCrae's letters and diary, which give not only a complete narrative of his experiences in Flanders up to the time of his death, but also his services and adventures in the Boer War.

Has the Record.

The story of the Creation was told in four hundred words. Lincoln's Gettysburg speech was a model of brevity. General Pershing of the American Expeditionary Force made a famous speech in four words: "Lafayette, we are here." The palm for the longest sentence ever constructed surely must be awarded to Hon. J. J. Reid, Minister of Railways and Canals for Canada. He moved in Parliament to-day a resolution of 1,300 words, all crammed into one sentence. Hon. Edward Blake was noted for long sentences, but Dr. Reid's effort would make three or four of Blake's. It contains 71 comas, 33 semicolons, two parentheses and one period. It would fill more than one column of the Globe.—Toronto Globe.

A Girl Who Loved a Monkey

Although She Must Have Married a Duke.

(Pearson's Weekly.)
 Of the fair women who flitted round the throne of our second Charles in the early years of his reign, Elizabeth Hamilton, a daughter of the noble House of Abernethy, was unrivalled Queen.

"Everyone," Sir John Resesby tells us, "was her lover, from the King himself to the roughest page-boy. In his Majesty's frequent fits of gloom she was the only one who could bring a smile to his lips by her infectious and irrepressible high spirits."
 Every man at court was, in fact, her avowed lover, and the most ardent of them all was James, Duke of York, the King's brother and successor on the Throne, who was her very shadow.

She Didn't Like Sweethearts.
 Never was maiden's heart so persistently besieged; never did it prove more impregnable. To all her wooers she made it abundantly clear that she meant to keep both hand and heart in her own possession; and that she valued her freedom more highly than any wedding-ring, though it brought a ducal coronet with it.

But to Elizabeth Hamilton, as often as to the coyest and most unapproachable maiden, there came at last her "Prince Charming," and in such a guise as made the entire Court wonder and smile. For the man on whom she at last designed to smile sweetly was neither young nor comely. He was, in fact, just twice her age, and physically so unattractive that he was once described as "more like an ape than a man."

But the Comte de Gramont had gifts which are often more potent than a handsome exterior. He was a courtier to his finger-tips, with a tongue skilled in the framing of pretty speeches and subtle flatteries. He was a past-master in all the arts of love; and, above all, he had that magnetism of personality which few women can resist.

It was at a Court ball that Gramont first set eyes on Elizabeth's queenly beauty and grace; and at sight of her, he was undone. The impression he made on her, however, was very different; for, it is said, she asked one of her admirers who was always at her heels, "Who is that ugly man, who looks so like a monkey?"—an unflattering speech which later came to Gramont's ears.

"So," said the Comte, "she calls me a monkey, does she? Well, I must show her some of my tricks."

Grew to Love Her "Monkey" Man.

So skilfully did he bring his weapons to bear on the unsuspecting beauty that her disdain quickly gave place to admiration; and admiration to a passion as strong as his own. And thus it was, to the amazement and amusement of the Court, that within a few months of first setting eyes on the "monkey," Elizabeth Hamilton had promised her jealousy-guarded hand to the least attractive of all her legion of suitors.

But Elizabeth's dream of happiness was doomed to disillusion. She had not been affianced many weeks before she began to discover that her lover's ardour was cooling. He had won his prize from a host of rivals; when it was his, its glamour quickly faded.

To such an extent, indeed, that, when he paid his next visit to France, he quite forgot even to say "good-by" to the lady whose heart he had won. He had no sooner reached Dover, however, than he heard the sound of galloping horses behind him; and before he had well dismounted, found himself face to face with two of his lady's brothers.

Had to Drag Him to the Altar.

"Comte de Gramont," said George Hamilton, sternly, "is there nothing you have forgotten in London?"

"Pardon!" was the prompt reply, accompanied by a sweeping bow, "Pardon, monsieur, but I have forgotten your sister."

And thus reminded, the next morning he was riding back to London to do his neglected duty at the altar.

A wedded life thus inauspiciously opened could scarcely fail to be unhappy. And so it proved for the Court beauty, who found in a life of piety and good works a refuge from the worldliness and heartlessness of a husband whose passion had flickered out before ever he called her wife.

Dogs In All Ages.

Dogs are among the most widely distributed of animals. In few parts of the world are they absent or even rare. There were none in Polynesia until long after Columbus discovered America, and at a much later period they were so unfamiliar in the Maldiv Islands that the natives at sight of them took to the trees. The dog was doubtless the first animal to be domesticated by man. But its earliest use was for food. Even to-day its flesh is far more widely utilized as meat than is commonly supposed.—Philadelphia Record.

Chasing Strangers.
 The Sydney tax chasing policemen still continues to harass strangers leaving that place on the ferry steamers," says the North Sydney Herald. "One day last week a Newfoundland ship owner, who went to Sydney on business, was accosted by one of Sydney's cops while awaiting the departure of the steamer for here. The busy cop was plying all manner of questions to the stranger when a friend of the latter quietly told the captain to refuse further information. This seemed to nettie the policeman and he endeavored to say something to the third party; but was rewarded with a simple little bit of advice which had the desired effect, and the policeman walked ashore. The system of tax collecting in Sydney is about as Prussianized as in the worst days of darkest Russia; and unless the civic authorities call off these dogs of war, the city will some day find itself mulcted in heavy damages."

Italy Irredenta.

(Christian Science Monitor.)
The newspaper reader who hardly knows the meaning of Italia Irredenta, the man in the street who never knew or heard of the days when the Austrian hands played in the Piazza, under the very feet of St. Mark's horses, and the safe tables, under the colonnade on one side, where bright with Austrian uniforms, whilst Venice with lowering looks forgathered under the colonnade across the square, cannot hope to understand the patriotic passion bred under such conditions of servitude.

In such circumstances the recovery of unredeemed Italy became a religion with the Italian. It may have been selfish, but it was the avowed main incentive of his participation in the great war. This does not mean that the country had not other, and more altruistic reasons. But it does mean that the supreme sacrifice, because war to any thinking human being is a supreme sacrifice, was offered by the nation in the name of Italy unredeemed. Mr. Wilson, in his statement on the point of difference between himself and the Italian negotiators, in admirable taste, to this very matter, he points out, not merely to Italy, but to the Italians throughout the world, that unredeemed Italy can scarcely be said any longer to exist. The old frontiers are being practically restored. The walls of Rome, the moat of Venice are giving place once again to the titanic wall and moats of the Alps and their rivers. And as a result "the she-wolf" litter, if attacked to-morrow, can "stand savagely at bay," not with its back to the Tiber, with the white porches on Palatinus in sight, but along the crests of the great mountain range, which Hannibal pierced and Napoleon climbed.

That Mr. Wilson has made out his case we imagine the world will agree, unless there are any material facts which have not yet been divulged. But that does not make an attack upon the Italian statesman in any way more generous or gifted with greater foresight. In demanding the possession of Fiume the Italian government is requiring something that was not in the original bond, known as the Pact of London. In this pact, the famous port was allotted to Croatia, which it is understood is to become a part of the new Jugo-Slav confederacy or state. Consequently, insisting upon the surrender of Fiume, Italy is requiring more than she originally stipulated, and requiring it at the expense not of her enemies today but of her allies. Nay more, she is understood to be making similar demands at the expense of another ally, Greece, in northern Epirus, at Rhodes, and throughout the entire Dodecanese. Now any such surrender would, as Mr. Wilson points out, be totally destructive of the aims of the peace conference, and the ideals upon which its labors have been based. Therefore he has found it absolutely necessary to stand firm on this point in view of what it means, not to a nation, but to humanity.

From England to India by Airplane.

With the arrival in Calcutta on December 18th last of a Handley-Page airplane, the first epoch-making aerial trip from England to India was completed. The landing of the huge biplane on the race course in Calcutta was witnessed by the Viceroy and Lady Chelmsford, the governor of Bengal, and an immense crowd of Europeans and natives, to whom the second appearance of an airplane in Calcutta was a great attraction. The trip was made without serious mishap via Egypt and Mesopotamia, a distance of about 6,700 miles by the route followed. An average speed of 45 miles an hour was maintained, and many stops were made. The original trip from London to Egypt was made for the purpose of military inspection, and it was then decided to continue to India, with stops in Mesopotamia, for further inspection duty.

Fierce Film Fire Fights.

Sometimes They Get Out of Hand.
The biggest fire ever filmed was a four-storey brick structure 110 feet high, and 75 feet wide. The walls and floors had been strewn with forty gallons of gasoline and kerosene, and seventy-five tons of gunpowder was placed to blow up at the tense moment. In order to increase the reality, a brigade of real firemen with all their apparatus was engaged. Fifteen children and other actors were carried to the roof for "rescue," policemen were stationed below, and a great crowd, which had gathered, seethed excitedly in the street. "Let her go!" shouted one of the producers. A few seconds later black smoke and flame leapt from one of the lower windows. The fire increased with alarming rapidity—much quicker than had been expected. A wind sprang up, fanning the flames to gigantic size, and it blew the fire towards a powder factory. Then the "take" rescues became real ones. Firemen—anyone who dared—climbed to the roof to carry the women and children into safety. More than one cinema actress was overcome with the heat and smoke and had to be rescued in an unconscious condition. Mr. William Russell, the athletic film hero of Bolton's Mutual Films, was recently returning home to Santa Barbara in his car when he passed through the district in which a big forest fire had played terrible havoc. The fire had not been got under—was raging fiercely in a deep canyon in which there lived a woman and her family. The woman had returned home to rescue family treasures. Seeing she must perish, William Russell went full speed ahead in his racing car, dashing through the blaze. He was just in time to see the poor woman trying frantically to run through the flames from her house. He rescued her and her family, but not without suffering bad burns.

The Malefactor.

In making the request of the German Government that he be allowed to return to Germany and occupy one of his estates there the ex-kaiser is betraying the nervousness that has doubtless come upon him since the Associated Powers determined to summon the Netherlands government to deliver him up for trial for "offences against international morality and the sanctity of treaties," says the Montreal Herald. It is unlikely that Holland will resist this demand for the extradition of William Hohenzollern. Such resistance would be useless. Therefore, he hopes for the co-operation of the Ebe government to enable him to make a "get-away" from Holland before he is "pinched" by the high sheriff of the Tribunal of Five, to be appointed by the Great Powers to try the ex-emperor for high crimes and misdemeanors. It might be more difficult for the trial tribunal to obtain the person of the accused from Germany. To be contented, Ebert and his colleagues are bound to assist in their late master to the extent of their power, as they were all along participants in his crimes, accomplices in fact, and may, who knows, receive their share of punishment. When the kaiser reached Holland he immediately "passed the buck" to his advisers in Berlin. Every member of the Reichstag might be indicated as his accomplice, and every member of the Great General Staff. It is noted in the cablegrams that even Hindenberg wants to get from under. He says he wants to resign. It is to his credit, we must admit, that he did not, like Ludendorff and some others, run away. Up to the present time he has held down his job as chief military commander. His desire, just expressed, to resign may be only another symptom of that contagious nervousness which is so apt to make men facing deserved punishment weak at the knees. The ex-kaiser may take his bit of comfort from history; Napoleon was punished, and punished severely, without any trial at all—Sydney Record.

This well to have a pitcher for left-over psake batter. Bread crumbs and crumbs, cereals and milk may go into it.

When stoning raisins, pour boiling water on them and let stand five minutes. Drain and rub between thumb and finger.

The foot of each bar is soldered down into a hole in the stone coping. The rain and fog make the joint damp, the moisture being always slightly acid through impurities washed out of the air.

So here you have two metals, iron and solder, in the presence of an acid, and that, if you come to think of it, is a galvanic battery. Take a small piece of iron and another of solder, fasten a wire firmly to each and set them in a cup of vinegar, or in diluted sulphuric acid. Then attach the other ends of your wires to the two brass screws of an electric bell. You have a galvanic battery and it produces enough electric current to ring an electric bell. Keep your battery for a few months and you will find the soft solder unchanged, but the hard iron will be completely eaten up by the acid, and reduced to the same condition as the foot of the old area railing.

An Unlucky Remark

Her husband had just come after demobilisation, and his first meeting with the new nurse was remarkably pretty.

"She is sensible and scientific," urged the fond mother, "and she will allow no one to kiss baby who is near."

"No one would want to," replied the husband, "while she is near." And the nurse was discharged. Wily Rattings Rust.

Legislative Council.

The Council resumed its sitting at 4.15 yesterday.
 The Income, Tax and Profits Tax Bill were read a third time.
 The bill respecting Grand Bank Harbour went through Committee; and the God Liver Oil Inspection Bill and Local Affairs bills passed second reading.
 In moving the second reading of the bill providing for the inspection of Food on Sealing Steamers, the Hon. W. J. Ellis stated that on several occasions complaints had been brought under the notice of the Government regarding food distributed at the Seal Fishery, and the object of the bill was to have an inspection on each ship to see that proper food was served.
 Hon. W. B. Grieve said that if complaints had been sent to the Government the House should be given a chance to see them, and the bill should not be rushed through. He thought that something more definite should be advanced and that, personally, he regarded the bill as being most pernicious.
 Hon. R. K. Bishop moved that the bill be deferred until such time as the leader of the Government should produce the proofs.
 Hon. Mr. Ellis promised that the information would be ready by next sitting, and the second reading was deferred till to-day.
 Hon. Mr. Squires complained of not having received any reply to his request to have the report of the Government Engineer tabled, after which the House adjourned.

Wedding Bells.

LADLEY—MAUNDER.
 A large gathering of relatives and friends witnessed the tying of the nuptial knot yesterday, between Miss Lucille Louise, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Ladley, to Mr. Herbert Ernest, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Maunder. The ceremony which united the happy couple took place at the home of the bride's parents, 35 Governor Street, and was performed by Rev. Dr. Bond, pastor of Cochrane Street Central Church, the wedding march being played by Mr. Gordon Christian.
 The bride was most exquisitely gowned in white Georgette over white satin, with a pearl headband and wore a bridal veil and coral of orange blossoms. The bridesmaid was Miss Alice Ladley, wearing a most charming costume of pale blue chiffon. The groom was supported by Mr. Bert Noseworthy, late of the Royal Newfoundland Regiment.
 Following the marriage ceremony Rev. Dr. Bond most eloquently proposed the health of the newly married pair, which was fittingly responded to.
 Mr. and Mrs. Maunder later left by automobile for Holyrood where the honeymoon will be spent. Testifying to the esteem of the bride and groom by their friends were the wedding presents, which were numerous and appropriate including nuptial gifts of gold and cheques. The hosts of friends of both the happy parties join in wishing them all the pleasure and happiness which the matrimonial voyage contains.

Considerable damage was caused before the fire was extinguished.

An Unlucky Remark

Her husband had just come after demobilisation, and had first meeting with the new nurse, was remarkably pretty. "She is sensible and scientific," argued the fond mother, "and says will allow no one to kiss baby while she is near." "No one would want to," replied husband, "while she is near." And the nurse was discharged. Why Ratings Rust. A kitchen kit consisting of spoons, needles, thread, pins, pencil, etc., is a time-saver.

DISEASED GUMS AND TEETH.

Of all the poisons taken into the blood, the germs and pus contributed by the diseased gums and teeth are the most destructive to the human system. If every red blood cell is forced to fight against numbers of germs to the cell, the blood cannot attend to the building up of the body, and if allowed to continue the system is bound to break down and eventually you are an invalid. Kidney, stomach, heart trouble, rheumatism and many other diseases are brought on by diseased gums and teeth.
