In the rural districts the nihilists are working with great success, and before long the peasantry will be ripe for insurrection. As for the townspeople, nothing but the vast military organization and the terrorism practised by the police stays an inevitable revolution.

It is reported that the nihilist executive committee had a great solemn meeting, at which several exiles from Geneva attended. It was resolved to give the czar one more warning, and if he does not heel it he and all his pig-headed advisers will perish.

Hard Drink.

Collingwood, July 22.—This morning the body of a man named Henry Wilson was found floating in the bay, near the Northern elevator, by some workmen on the dock. The body could not have been in the water more than three days, as Wilson was on Monday night last paid off by his employer, Mr. Josiah Winters of the Anglo-American hotel, with whom he worked as hus-driver. The unfortunate man was American hotel, with wholin he bus-driver. The unfortunate man was addicted to drink, and at times would expear to be almost crazy. It is supposed that while under the induce of liquor he wandered to the dock, intending to take a steamer for Gore Bay, where it is said he steamer for Gore Bay, where it is said he steamer for cote Bay, where is said that two brothers living, and accidentally stepped off the wharf and was drowned. As no suspicion of foul play could be poduced, Coroner Stephens deemed it unnecessary to hold an inquest.

String Bull may be called Jonathan's prodigal son. There was something akin to rejoicing at Fort Buford on Tuesday, when he went through the ceremony of giving up his rife, and followed that graceful act with an oration. There was also a fine distinction when the tyranny of monopoly is the monster of the day.

The lady's reserve was broken by a step approaching her door. It was her husband's. The sound of those footsteps would not in dicate that the husband felt much care for the nerves of his sick wife. It was very loud. Then the steps seemed to approach so slowly. Had the lady needed any time to conceal anything or compose her face for the meeting, she would have had it. Then there came a knock. It was not usually B.'s custom to knock at the door before entering his wife's apartments. Finally he entered, after she had twice called for him to do so. He came up and seated himsel down at her side:
"Your indisposition is caused, I suppose by C.'s death, my love?"

"It was he that you once loved, was it E. SMITH. - - Proprietress. not, mother?"
"Yes. It was of him that I spoke when WITCHELL & RYAN, I promised to be your wife."
"He was a great man and a good and noble-hearted friend. He is well worthy that you must have been in the wrong when you cast him off. He might have committed some youthful follies, but on the whole God has made few nobler men. Even before you I feel it my duty to defend my dead friend."

"But, Henry, I have been so happy with you, I don't—I really don't see that I have anything to regret, and I know that he has been happy too in doing his great deeds."

Mr. B was one of the pall-bearers at his funeral, and after mourning for him sincerely, he turns out to be just as contented and loving a husband and father as before he discovered that locket.
