AN ADVANCE SHEET.

Many years ago I lived for some time disposed to specialize in the subject of mental disease, I often availed myself of his permission to visit and study the various cases placed under his charge. In one among these, that of a patient whom I will cell John Lyan, I came to feel a peculiar interest, apart from scientific considerations. He was a young man of about twenty-five, handsome, gentlemanlike, and to a superficial observer apparently quite free from any symptoms of about twenty-five, handsome, gentleman-like, and to a superficial observer apparently quite free from any symptoms of his malady. His intellectual powers were far above the average, and had been highly trained; in fact, the strain of preparing for a brilliantly successful university examination had proved the cause of a brain fever, followed by a long period of depression, culminating in more than one determined attempt at available.

No one, who is willing to adopt the right course, need be long afflicted with boils, carbuncles, pimples, or other cutaneous eruptions. These are the results of Nature's efforts to expel poisonous and effete matter from the blood, and show plainly that the system is ridding itself through the skin of impurities which it was the legitimate work of the liver and kidneys to remove. To restore these organs to their proper functions, Ayer's Sarsaparilla is the medicine required. That no other blood-purifier can compare with it, thousands testify who have gained

It is true that soon afterwards a ridiculous-looking small terrier came trotting round the corner; but his bored and indifferent air only too plainly proved his arrival to be non propter hoc. I vainly endeavored to attract his attention whistling phantom whistles, and slapping my knees, and even going to the lengths of flourishing defiant legs; but the moun tain could not have been more disregardful of Mahomet than he of me. And, as if to show that this arose from no natural imperturbability of disposition, he presently saw fit to bark himself hoarse at a flock of sparrows. Altogether it seemed sufficiently obvious that in these new scenes-where and whatever they might be-I was to play the part merely of a spectator, invisible, inaudible, intangible; and, furthermore, that my opportunities for looking on were subject to rigorous dircumscription, approaching that experi-anced by the boy who peers under the Fresh Fish, Lobsters, edges of the circus-tent and sees the hoofs of the horses. Still, unsatisfactory as might consider this arrangement, I had no resource save to acquiesce therein; nor could I under the circumstances think of anything better to do than to K. F. "What happened next was that a glass door in the house opened, and out of it came two ladies, in one of whom I recog- Salesmen Wanted nized, as they walked toward me down the slope, my eldest sister Elizabeth. There was nothing in her appearance to make me for a moment doubt her identity, though it did strike me that she looked unusually grave and yes, decidedly older and seemed to have lost the pleasant freshness of coloring which mainly constitutes what the Irish call 'pigbeauty.' I was then inclined to attribut this impression to the queer, old-fashion-ad-looking dress she wore; but I must now suppose her attire to have been Great Reduction whatever is to be the latest novelty for that particular summer. The other girl puzzled me much more, for though there was certainly something familiar to me in her aspect, I couldn't fit any name to her nneummonly pretty face and figure; and it wasn't until I heard my sister call her 'Nellie' that the truth occurred to me-it was Helen Rolleston. She, you know, is a sort of cousin of ours, any my mother's ward, and has lived with as most of her STANLEY'S CREAT BOOK life, so there was nothing surprising in finding her and Elizabeth together. The curious and, except upon one hypothesis, unaccountable part of the matter is, that whereas I saw her a few months ago in the guise of an angular, inky-fingered ashoolgirl of fifteen or sixteen at most, pesterday she had shot up to twenty or librarabouts, had, I believe, grown several inches, and had undoubtedly turned into a come out young lady. I must say that she had improved very much during the transformation; I should Lever have thought Miss Nellie had the makings of thought Miss Nellie had the makings of such a pretty girl. Not that it is a style I particularly admire; too tall and dark for my taste, and I should be inclined to predict her ultimate development into a fine woman—rather an aversion of mine, but distinctly handsome all the same.
