REV. PERRY J. STACKHOUSE.

A short Biographical Sketch

Rev. Perry J. Stackhouse was born in St John in 1876. His early education was obtained in the schools of his native city. He entered St Martin's Seminary in 1892 and after graduating from there at the age of 18 assumed charge of the Mission at Dipper Harbor and Musquash. As a result of his work there fifty were baptized and the struggling mission was organized into a church. He left this charge Mr Stackhouse during his session year was editor-in chief of the Acadia "Atheneaum": He accepted a call to the Tabernacle Church and entered upon his ministry there. His work was greatly blessed, up-arus of seventy uniting with the church during the first eleven months of his pastorate. The hall in which pastor of Austin Avenue Baptist Church. A new building was found te be a necessity and a church was begun to cost in the vicinity of $20,000 Mr Stackhouse had the pleasure of seeing the Chapel finished and dedicated during his pastorate

The Theological course of three years was taken by him in two years and three months and the degree of Bachelor of Divinity was conferred upon him A call to return to Tabernacle Church was received and accepted and in 1904 he again took up his work there The Tabernacle Church during his six years ministry has grown from a struggling mission church to one of the largest in the city having an evening congregation of 4 or 5 hundred people. We teel that the Campbellton Baptist church is to be congratulated in securing the services of a man of his calibre and that the town is gain ing a good citizen and one who will take a deep interest in its welfare.

I have found a tried and tested cure for Rheumatism! Not a remedy that will straighten the distorted limbs of chronic cripples, nor turn bony growths back to flesh again. That is impossible. But I can now surely kill the pains and pangs of this deplorable disease.

In Germany—with a Chemist in the City of Darmstadt—I found the last ingredient with which Dr. Shoop's Rheumatic Remedy was made a perfected, dependable prescription. Without that last ingredient, I successfully treated many, many cases of Rheumatism; but now, at last, it uniformly cures all curable cases of this heretofore much dreaded disease. Those sand-like granular wastes, found in Rheumatic Blood seem to dissolve and pass away under the action of this remedy as freely pas from the system, and the cause of Rheumatism is gone forever. There is now no real need—no actual excuse to suffer longer without help. We sell, and in confidence recommend on those snow-white beds women and girls, either awaiting or recovering from serious operations.

Why should this be the case? Simply because they have neglected themselves. Female troubles are certainly on the increase among the women of this country—they creep upon them unawares, but every one of those patients in the hospital beds had plenty of warning in that bearing-down feeling, pain at left or right of the abdomen, nervous exhaustion, pain in the small of the back, dizziness, flatulency, displacements of the organs or irregularities. All of these symptoms are indications of an unhealthy condition of the female organs, and in not heeded the penalty has to be paid by a dangerous operation. When these symptoms manifest themselves, do not drag along until you are obliged to go to the hospital and submit to an operation—but remember that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has saved thousands of women from surgical operations.

When women are troubled with irre-

Mrs. Fred. Seydel, 412 N. 54th Street, West Philadelphia, Pa., writes:

F WOMEN

Thousands of women suffer untold miseries every day with aching backs that really have no business to ache. A woman's back wasn't made to ache. Under ordinary conditions is oright to be strong and readyto help her bear the burdens of life. It is hard to do housework with an aching back. Hours of misery at leisure or at work. If women only knew the cause. Backache comes from sick kidneys, and what a lot of trouble sick kidneys cause in put on them than they can stand it's not to be wondered that they get out of order. Backache is simply their cry for help. DOAN'S KIDNEY will help you. They're helping sick, over-worked kidneys—all over the world— making them strong, healthy and vigorous. Mrs. P. Ryan, Douglas, Ont., writes: "For-over five months I was troubled with lame back and was unable to move without help. I tried all kinds of plasters and liniments but they were no use. At lest I liniments but they were no use. At last I heard tell of Doan's Kidney Pills and after I had used three-quarters of the box. my back was as strong and well as ever." "Call Mr. Durnovo." "Met Mr. Durnevo, sir, goin' out as In a few minutes Jack joined Durnovo and Oscard, who were talking together on the terrace in front of the house. Guy Oscard was still in his pajamas, which he had tucked into topboots. He also wore a sun helmet, which added a finish to his costume. They got quite accustomed to this getup during the next three days, for he never had time to change it, and somehow it ceased to be humorous long before the end of that time. "Oh, it's nothing," Durnovo was saying, with a singular eagerness. "I know these chaps. They have been paid in advance. They are probably shamming, and if they are not they are only suffering from the effects of a farewell glorification. They want to delay our start. That is their little had left them, "I suppose you'll be a

"Seems to me," he said, "there's thunder coming. I think I had better In the course of his inspection of the lowering clouds which hung black as ink, just above the trees his eyes lighted on Joseph, standing within the door of the cottage watching him with a singular half suppressed smile. "Yes," he said harriedly, "I will start at once. I can eat some sort of break fast when we are under way." He looked beneath his habes quickly from Jack to Guy and back again. Their silent acquiescence was not quite satisfactory. Then he called his own men and spoke to them in a tongue unknown to the Englishmen. He hur ried forward their preparations with a feverish irritability which made Jack Meredith think of the first time he had ever seen Durnovo, a few miles farther Jown the river, all palpitating and trembling with climatic nervousness. His face was quite yellow and there was a line drawn diagonally from the nostrils down each cheek, to lose itself. ultimately in the heavy black mus-

Scarcely had the boat disappeared in the bend of the river before the rain broke. The thunder crashed out in sharp reports, and the men ceased rowing and crouched down in the canoe. But Durnovo knew that behind him he had left a greater danger; smallpox had laid its hand on the camp at Msala.

It is still said on the Ogowe river that no man travels like Victor Durnovo. Certain it is that in twenty-seven hours from the time he left Msala on the morning of the great storm he presented himself before Maurice Gordon in his office at the factory at Loango. "Will you be at home tonight?" asked Durnovo, gently pushing aside the hospitable decanter. "I have got a lot of work to do today, but I should like to run in and see you this evening.

Durnovo shook his head and looked down at his wrinkled and draggled

"Well, I'll lend you a black coat. Seven o'clock sharp!" Durnovo hurried away with a gleam of excitement in his dark eyes. Maurice Gordon did not resume his work at once. He sat for some time idly drumming with his fingers on the

"If I can only get her to be civil to ...m," he reflected aloud, "I'll get into this business yet."

At 7 o'clock Durnovo appeared at the Gordons' house. He had managed to borrow a dress suit and wore an orchid in his buttonhole. It was probably the first time that Jocelyn had seen-him in this garb of civilization, which is at the same time the most becoming and the most trying variety of costume left to sensible men in these days. A dress suit finds a man out sooner than anything except speech. Jocelyn was civil in her reception; more so, indeed, than Maurice Gordon had hoped for. She seemed almost glad to see Durnovo, and evinced quite a kindly interest in his movements. Durnovo attributed this to the dress suit, while Maurice concluded that his obvious hints thrown out before dinner had fallen on fruitful ground.

At dinner Victor Durnovo was quite charmed with the interest that Jocelyn took in the expedition, of which, he gave it to be understood, he was the chief. So also was Maurice, because Durnovo's evident admiration of Joce- it than he could have put into words. lyn somewhat overcame his natural secrecy of character.

The glitter of the silver on the table, the shaded candles, the subtle sensuality of refinement and daintiness appealed to his hot blooded nature. He was a little off his feet perhaps. He took the decanter and put it to the worst use he could have selected. "Not so soon as that," he said; "but "Lucky beggar!" muttered Maurice Fordon, with a little sigh. "I don't mind telling you," said Dur-novo, with a sudden confidence begotten of madeira, 'that it's simiacine—that's what it is, I can't tell you "Simistine," repeated Gordon, finger-ing the stem of his wineglass and looking at him keenly between the candle shades. "Yes, You've always been on Its track, haven't you?"

"In six months your go-downs will "By Jove, I wish I had a hand in it!" Maurice Gordon pushed the decanter again-gently, almost surreptitiously. "And so you may, some day. You help me and I'll help you-that is my ticket. Reciprocity - reciprocity, my

"Yes, but how?" HOL dear Maurice." "Can't tell you now, but I will in good time-in my own time. Come, let's join the lady-eh? Ha, ha!" But at this moment the servant brought in coffee, saving in his master's ear that Miss Jocelyn had gone to bed with a slight headache.

During the three days that followed Durnovo's departure from Msala Jack Meredith and Oscard learned to know each other. These three days were as severe a test as could well be found, for courage, humanit, tenderness, loyalty, were by turns called forth by circumstance. Smallpox . ; ges in Africa as it rages nowhere else in these days. The natives fight it or bow before it as before an ancient and deeply dreaded foe. It was nothing new to them, and it would have been easy enough for Jack and Oscard to prove to their own satisfaction that the presence of three white men at Msala was a danger to themselves and no advantage to the natives. It would have been very simple to abandon the river station, leaving there such men as were stricken down to care for each other. But such a thought never seemed to suggest itself.

The camp was moved across the river, where all who seemed strong and healthy were placed under canvas.

awaiting further developments. The infected were carried to a special camp set apart and guarded, and this work was executed almost entirely by the three Englishmen, aided by few natives who had had the disease. For three days these men went about with their lives literally in their hands, tending the sick, cheering the despond ent, frightening the cowards into some semblance of self respect and dignity. And during these three days, wherein they never took an organized meal or three consecutive hours of rest, Joseph. Meredith and Oscard rose together to that height of manhood where master and servant, educated man and common soldier, stand equal before their

Owing to the promptness with which measures had been taken for isolating the affected the terrible sickness did not spread. In all eleven men were stricken, and of these ten died within three days. The eleventh recovered, but eventually remained at Msala. It was only on the evening of the third day that Jack and Guy found together.

"Do you think," Oscard asked bluntly when they were left alone to smoke, "that Durnovo spotted what was the matter?" "I am afraid that I have not the

"So would I," said Jack, turning sharply in his chair, "if"-Oscard laughed curtly and waited. "If," continued Jack, "I could. But I am more or less bound to go on now.

Such chances as this do not turn up every day. I cannot afford to let it go by. Truth is, I told-some one who shall be nameless—that I would make money to keep her in that state of life wherein her godfathers, etc., have placed her; and make that money I

"That's about my size, too," said Guy Oscard, somewhat indistinctly, owing to the fact that he habitually smoked a thick stemmed pipe.
"Is it? I'm glad of that. It gives us something in common to work for." "Yes." Guy paused and made a huge effort, finally conquering that taciturn ity which was almost an affliction to him. "The reason I gave the other night to you and that chap Durnovo was honest enough, but I have another. I want to lie low for a few months, but I also want to make money. I'm as good as engaged to be married and I find that I am not so well off as I thought I was. People told me that I should have three thousand a year when the guy'nor died, but I find that people know less of my affairs than I thought." "They invariably do," put in Jack encouragingly. "It is barely two thousand, and-and she has been brought up to something better than that." "Um! They mostly are. Mine has been brought up to something better than that too. That is the worst of it." "I believe implicitly in this scheme," said Oscard. "It is a certain fact that the men who can supply pure similacine have only to name their price for it. They will make a fortune, and I believe that Durnovo knows where it is growing in quantities."

"I cannot see how it would pay him to deceive us in the matter. That is the best way of looking at it," murmured Jack reflectively, "When I first met him the man thought he was dying, and for the time I really be-lieve that he was honest. Some men are honest when they feel unwell. There was so little doubt in my mind that I went into the thing at once." "If you will go on with it I will stand by you," said Oscard shortly. "All right. I think we two together are as good as any half bred sharper on this coast, to put it gracefully." During the ensuing silence Jack was apparently meditating over the debt of confidence which he still owed to his ompanion, for he spoke first and quite seriously about himself, which was somewhat against his habit.

"I dare say you have heard," he said, "that I had a-a disagreement with my "Yes, heard something of it," replied Oscard in a tone which seemed to imply that the "something" was quite ufficient for his requirements. "It was about my engagement," Jack went on deliberately. "I do not know how it was, but they did not hit it off together. She was too honest to throw herself at his head, I suppose, for I imagine a pretty girl can usually do what she likes with an old man if she takes the trouble."

"Not with him, I think. Seemed to be rather down on girls in general," said Oscard coolly.

"Then you know him?" "Yes, a little. I have met him once or twice—out, you know. I don't sup-pose he would know me again if he saw

CHAPTER XII. T is possible even in Loango to have a fling, but the carouser must be prepared to face, even in the midst of his revelry, the haunting thought might be a preferable pastime.

During the three days following his arrival Victor Durnovo indulged, according to his lights, in the doubtful pleasure mentioned. He purchased at the best factory the best clothes obtainable; he lived like a fighting cock in the one so called hotel, a house chiefly affected and supported by ship captains. He spent freely of money that was not his and imagined himself to be leading the life of a gentleman. He rode round on a hired horse to call onhis friends, and on the afternoon of the sixth day he alighted from this quadruped at the gate of the Gordons' bun-

A few minutes later Jocelyn came into the drawing room, where he was waiting, with a brazen face and a sinking heart. Somehow the very room had power to bring him down toward his own level. When he set eyes on Jocelyn, in her fair Saxon beauty, he regained aplomb.

She appeared to be rather glad to see him "I thought," she said, "that you had gone back to the expedition? "Not without coming to say goodby," he answered. "It is not likely." Just to demonstrate how fully he felt at ease he took a chair without menal increase in the Japanese merchant marine, which is rapidly driving British and United States vessels off the North Pacific Ocean, and the arrival of Japbattleships, comes from India the most disquieting news of any since The Hindu students of the Panjab, that section of India where the climate is coolest and the people the whitest, have so succeeded in formenting riot that all the European residents capable of bearing arms have had to enlist in the militia, judges and other professional men enrolling as privates. All over Northern India, where the upper classes are of the same race as the Europeans, the same agitation for an elected parliament and home rule is being carried on, especially in Bengal, where the wellto-do people have gone so far as to boycott all European goods. The educated natives, except those of the Mohamedan faith, are almost a unit against the continuance of British rule as at present constituted. An immediate armed revolution is prevented only, it would seem, by the fact that the Mohamedans, who number nearly onefourth of the population, are for the moment siding with the Eurcpean element against their brethren of the Hindu faith. This will delay the crisis for a few years, but an arrangement between the Hindus and Mohamedans is always possible for in Egypt the Mohamedans themselves are carrying on the same campaign against foreign rule as are the Hindus in India. The future of British dominion is fraught with much uncertainty and hazard.

"Ah! Yes, I am Meredith. I am glad to see you."

They shook hands. There was a twinkle in Jack Meredith's eyes, but Oscard was quite grave. His sense of humor was not very keen, and he was before all things a sportsman. "I left the canoes a mile below Msala and landed to shoot a deer we saw drinking, ut I never saw him afterward. Then I heard you, and I have been stalking you ever since." "But I never expected you so soon. You were not due till-look!" Jack whispered suddenly.

Oscard turned on his heel, and the next instant their two rifles rang out through the forest stillness in one sharp crack. Across the stream, ten yards behind the spot where Oscard had emerged from the brush, a leopard sprang into the air five feet from the ground, with head thrown back and paws clawing at the thinness of space with grand free sweeps. The beast fell with a thud and lay still, dead.

The two men clambered across the rocks again, side by side. While they stood over the prostrate form of the ard beautiful, incomparably graceful and sleek even in death, Guy Oscard stole a sidelong glance at his companion. He was a modest man, and yet he knew that he was reckoned among the big game hunters of the age. This man had fired as quickly as himself, and there were two small trickling holes in the animal's head. While he was being quietly scrut nized Jack Meredith stooped down and taking the leopard beneath the shoulders, lifted it bodily back from the "Pity to spoil the skin," he explained as he put a fresh cartridge into his Oscard nodded in an approving way. He knew the weight of a full grown leopard, all muscle and bone, and he was one of those old fashioned persons mentioned in the Scriptures as taking a delight in a man's legs-or his arms, so long as they were strong.

"I suppose," he said quietly, "we had better skin him here." "Yes."
They laid the skin out on the tram pled maidenhair and contemplated it with silent satisfaction. In the course of their inspection they both arrived at the head at the same moment. The two holes in the hide, just above the eyes, came under their notice at the same moment, and they turned and smiled gravely at each other, thinking the same thought—the sort of thought that Englishmen rarely put into intelligible English.

"I'm glad we did that," said Guy Oscard at length; suddenly, "Whatever comes of this expedition of ours—if we light, as we probably shall, before it is inished—if we hate each other ever afterward, that skin ought to remind us that we are much of a muchness." By 9 o'clock they reached the camp t Msala. Victor Durnovo was still at work superintending the discharge of the baggage and stores from the large frading canoes. They heard the shout-ing and chattering before coming in light of the camp, and one voice raised angrily above the others.

was suddenly hushed, and presently Durnovo came forward to greet them. Meredith hardly knew him, he was so much stronger and healthier in appearance. Durnovo shook hands heart-

"No need to introduce you two," he said, looking from one to the other. "No; after one mistake we discovered each other's identity in the forest," answered Meredith. Durnovo smiled, but there was something behind the smile. He did not seem to approve of their meeting without his intervention. The three men walked up toward the house together, It was a fair sized house, with a heavy thatched roof that overhung the walls like the crown of a mushroom. The walls were only mud, and the thatching was nothing else than banana leaves, but there was evidence of European taste in the garden surrounding the structure and in the glazed windows and wooden door.

As they approached the open door way three little children, clad in very little more than their native modesty, ran gleefully out and proceeded to engage seats on Jack Meredith's boots, looking upon him as a mere public conveyance. They took hardly any notice of him, but chattered and quar-

teled among themselves, sometimes to baby English, sometimes in dialect unknown to Oscard and Meredith. "These," said the latter, when they were seated and clinging with their little dusky arms round his legs, "are the very rummest little kids I ever

Durnovo gave an impatient laugh and went on toward the house. But Guy Oscard stopped and walked more slowly beside Meredith as he labored along heavy footed. "They are the jolliest little souls imaginable," continued Jack Meredith. "There," he said to them when they

the culinary powers of Durnovo's housekeeper at the Msala station. The woman had only appeared for a noment, bringing in some dishes for Joseph-a tall, stately woman, with great dark eyes, in which the patience of motherhood had succeeded to the soft fire of West Indian love and youth. She had the graceful slow carriage of the creek, although her skin was darker than that of those dangerous sirens.

to familiarity. The man who had found the simiacine was eager, restless, full of suspicion. To the others the scheme obviously presented itself in a different light. Jack Meredith was dilettante, light hearted and unsatisfactory. It was impossible to arouse any enthusiasm in him, to make him take it seriously. Guy Oscard was gravely indifferent. He wanted to get rid of a certain space of time, and the African forest con-taining as it did the only excitement that his large heart knew, was as good a place as any. The simiacine was, in his mind, relegated to a distant place behind weeks of sport and adventure such as his soul loved.
"You men," said Durnovo eagerly, "don't seem to take the thing serious-

"I," answered Meredith, "intend, at all events, to take the profits very seriously. When they begin to come in, J. Meredith will be at the above address, and trusts by a careful attention to business to merit a continuance of your kind patronage."

Durnovo laughed somewhat nervous-ly. Oscard did not seem to hear. "It is all very well for you," said the half caste in a lower voice. "You have not so much at stake. It is likely that the happiness of my whole life depends upon this venture."

A curious smile passed across Jack Meredith's face. Without turning his head he glanced sideways into Durnovo's face through the gloom. But he said nothing, and it was Oscard who broke the silence by saying simply: "The same may possibly apply to There was a little pause, during which he lighted his pipe.

It did not seem to occur to any of

The glow of Victor Durnovo's cigar died away as if in his attention he was forgetting to smoke; but he said

"It seems to me," Jack went on, "that before we leave here we should system, and give tone and vitality to the draw up and sign a sort of deed of partnership. KING EDWARD A MASTER OF DIPLOMACY

Paris, May 4—The French Press re gards King Edward's continental tour which ended today with his departure from this city for London, as being from this city for London, as being fraught with large political significance. The following is a sample opinion. "The King has demonstrated that he is a master of diplomacy. He has succeeded in applying to Germany from the political point of view, the continental blockage which Napoleon I failed to apply to England commercially. Were King Edward twenty years younger the result might be dangerous for the peace of the world, but a man of sixty-six will hesitate to but a man of sixty-six will hesitate risk the grand coup."

VALUABLE MEDICAL PRESCRIPTION

Recommended by a Well-known

The following very valuable prescription, by an eminent and success ful physician, will be appreciated by many who are suffering from la grippe, cold, cough, pneumonia, or any throat, lung or stomach trouble, or run-down system, as it is a certain cure, and will save many a doctor's bill. It is almost a certain preventive as well:

"When you feel that you are taking cold or have chilly feeling or aching in any part of the body or head, or feel weak, tired, dizzy, unfit for work, pain in the nead or back of the neck, do not neglect these dangerous symptoms, but send immediate v to your druggist and get a bottle of Psychine (pronounced Si-kecn), and prepare as follows:

to jail for contempt of court."

This was a declaration today of Miss Alva Hall, twenty-two and pretty, who was ordered out of Judge William Luders's court because she appeared there in a lattic work shirt waist. Miss Hall does not deny that she wore a "peek a-boo" of black net and that the holes in the network were of generous proportions, but she insists that it was none of the judge's business. Furthermore, she intimated to-day that she might sue the judge for the insult he subjected her to when he referred to her before a crowded court-room as "half clothed."

Miss Hall's appearance in court created quite a stir. There was a craning of necks as she entered and swept

"Choice of the latter can be made according to the judgment and preference of the patient.

"Mix thoroughly and take regularly and the send in the patient."

This prescription has been used in thousands of cases and has been so universally successful that a number of leading physicians regularly prescribe Psychine in their practice for any of the above troubles, or any rundown, wasting or constitutional difficulty. It is the most reliable and valuable home remedy. It tones up the entire system, giving a feeling of youthfulness and vigor, adding many years to the life of those who use it. years to the life of those who use it. Hon. Mr. Pugsley promised to work in the interests of St. John and New Brunswick. He defended the increased expenditure of the Liberal government on the ground that the growth ol the country had made it necessary. The revenue at the present time was $7r,-000,000 compared with $36,000,000 in 1896. This increase, however, did not represeent increased taxation, for the rate of taxation had decreased 12 per cent. He would oppose the giving of any control of the I. C. R. to a private company. With the advance of years the vital functions of the body slow down. In consequence the organs of secretion suffer, the action of the bowels are lessened and there is no longer healthy circulation. The brain is congested with blood, giddness, trembling and cold extremities are common. No assitance is so potent as Dr. Hamilton's Pills: By their direct action on the stomac By their direct action on the stomach, liver, and kindeys they cause an immidiate change. Mild, free from gripe, strengthing and cleansing the whole system, no medicine is so valuable in old age as Dr. Hamilton's Pills of Mandrake and Butternut. Try these Pills, 25c per box at all Cealears.

TO FINISH SURVEY.

The National Transcontinental issioners are putting four surveying parties on the route between Chipman and Grand Falls to make the final ,ocation survey. As soon as they have been completed contracts for the construction of this portion of the line will be invited. This will likely be some time in the summer.
