THE ILL-MANNERED PREMIER. "This is some fellow that Having been praised for bluntness, doth affect & saucy roughness."-Shakespeare.

If you happened to be head of such a powerful moral force as the Ontario Alliance, as Mr. Joseph Gibson is, and your duties brought you in contact with the man who is nominally the citizen of the province, you would expect to be treated with measure of courtesy. The deputation, headed by Mr. Gibson, met not only with an absence of courtesy, but with positive insult. Mr. Gibson, himself a Conservative, says that Sir James' conduct was "not that of a gentleman." If Sir James were congenitally incapable of behaving like a gentleman, it would be thought that he would at least behave Tike a politician when dealing with men speaking for many thousands of citizens who helped to put Sir James where he is. This knight without the spirit of noblesse oblige poured contumely on his interviewers by picking up a newspaper and affecting to be oblivious of their presence.

President Gibson is angry, but his treatment was not exceptional. Sir James was praised so much for his bluntness by servile camp-followers that churlishness became a pose with him, then a habit, then second nature. In the Legislature he is like the big bully of a school. There is a Tom Brown, who has been taking his measure, and, as Tom himself might put it, "he is due for an awful lick-

Nonconformists refuse to play the game of their enemies a second time. In Gladstone's day a considerable body of them deserted the Liberal party in the conscientious belief that a religious issue was involved in the Home Rule movement. These fears can be no longer kept alive by the ferment of bigotry, intolerance and partisanship in Belfast. They have awakened to the real character of the agitation there, and the recent attack upon free speech has shocked the liberty-loving instincts of the Free Churches. The British Weekly, the great organ of British Nonconformity, is enthusiastically supporting Irish Home Rule and pouring indignation on the Ulster Unionists. One of the most powerful personalities in the ranks of English Nonconformity, Rev. Silvester Horne, M. P., is also championing the Irish cause. He

"We may say, in a word, that Protestant Free Churchmen in England and Wales have less and less sympathy with those who use the language of intolerance and ascendancy. Fanaticism makes but a weak appeal to them, and blind bigotry is repulsive. They have always naturally resented the ignorance and prejudice that are too frequently manifest in the lan-guage used about Nonconformity by members of the sacerdotal communions. Equally they resent the partisan harangues of the Orangemen, where there is much sound and little sense. ... "The problem of today is not as to what England will do for Ireland, but as to what England will allow Ireland to do for herself. British Nonconformity cannot resist the claim of Ireland for self-government until we are prepared to repudiate for ourselves that privilege and responsibility of self-reliance and self-control which for three hundred years have been the secret, under God, of the atrength and prosperity of our Free

AN INDUSTRIAL CLOUD IN GREAT BRITAIN.

Great Britain is threatened with the disaster of a coal miners' strike, involving over 500,000 men. Every industry in the country would be instantly affected, and the situation would become intolerable if the strike were prolonged beyond three weeks or a month. No adequate supply of coal could be purchased from other European countries. The cost of importing it from the United States would be oppressive, and coal-carrying vessels could not be hurriedly procured in sufficient numbers.

The present trouble originated in October, when the Miners' Federation at its annual conference asked for a minimum wage, based on conditions in the individual districts. The coal owners after negotiations, conceded the principle of a minimum wage, and conciliation boards were appointed to reduce it to practice. The problem presented many difficulties. In the first place the coal owners asked that informed by dispatches, is to generate a minimum output be required from each man, as a guarantee against malingering. The miners alleged the impossibility of a uniform minimum, as coal was more easily mined in some two coal mines presented exactly similar conditions. The coal owners refused point blank to yield to the demand for a minimum wage of eight shillings a day in South Wales and Northumberland, where the average wage is only 7s. 11/2d. The miners' demands in these districts also constituted a breach of a five years' agreement entered upon in April,

The coal owners are in a strong position to wage a fight. The industry is the most profitable in the United Kingdom, the average return on capital sunk in the ordinary shares having been 9.6 per cent, for the past thirteen years. A stoppage of work would not injuriously affect the mines and would chable the accumulated stocks of coal to be sold at famine prices. The men, on the other hand, have only funds enough to last them a month. A minimum wage of two dollars a day is little enough for the arduous and dangerous underground work. If the miners of South Wales would keep faith with their employ ers. they would aid the cause of their brethren in other districts, and establish their own claim to higher pay when their contract expires.

Sir James Whitney has no manners, but what a manner!

Twenty-seven thousand doctors out of 31,000 in the United Kingdom have signed a declaration that they will not work under the new insurance act. Llody George has hitherto overcome all obstacles, but how can he make 27,000 doctors take his medicine?

Mr. Bourassa will make a threemonths' tour of the country expounding his political creed. He is a delightful speaker and will not be so untactful as to say in the English provinces some of the things he said in Quebec before the election.

Dr. Maloney, of South Renfrew, told daughter received a declaration and an audience he had Hon. George Graham "beaten to a platinum thread." This witticism was followed by "loud and prolonged cheering" from people who never saw a platinum thread. Mr. Graham, it is safe to say, bears more resemblance to a live wire, as Dr. Maloney will probably know later on.

Between 1896 and 1911 the Dominion paid no less a sum than $20,-519,000 in bounties. The bounty on pig iron reached a total of $7,097,041; that upon puddled iron ores, $113,674 (but these ended in 1906); that on steel to $6,706,990, that on manufactures of steel to $2,701,372; upon lead to $1,720,-355; on manilla fibre to $255,750; and upon crude petroleum, to $1,923,827. Last fiscal year the iron and steel industry was paid no less than $1,138,748. The late government refused to renew the bounties on iron and steel which expired last year. The iron and steel interests took their revenge in the election, and are now claiming payment of an election debt.

NEW CALENDAR ADOPTED

Republic in China Is Favored-Reform Association Is Preparing to Celebrate in Fine Style.

Saturday is the Chinese New Year's Day, and it will be observed by the ecal Chinese imperialists. The year of the Chinese Empire 4610 begins tomorrow, but only a few days ago with the abdication of the boy emperor, the empire came to an end.

The holiday will be observed, how-ever, by the Chinese Empire Reform Association. Their festivities will no doubt be marked by a tinge of regret and sadness at the passing of the em pire, which for over four thousand years withstood the ravages of time. Most of the local Chinese are proown gressively inclined, and are ready to support the republic if it can be made successful. Festivities will be observed tomorrow in the Reform Association headquarters on Dundas street, and in the homes of the Celes-Don't buy your wife any more of tials. As has long been the Chinese custom, the day following New Year's will be spent in visiting each other.
The Republicans and Chinese Free, Masons will not observe the day. They have contributed to the founding of the new republic with their money and sympathy, and the Chinese New Year no longer exists for them. The Christian reckoning of time because of its worldwide usage has been officially adopted by the Chinese republic, and the Chinese calendar has been altered to read 1912 A. D., in the Chinese provinces just as in Europe and America.

Adopting New Calendar. Unlike the founders of the first French republic the Chinese, although not a Christian people, are quite content to adopt the Christian calendar. France in a frenzy of extreme secularsm, cut out from her calendar all reerences to Christian things and events and time was to be counted from the first year of the republic. The old Jewish division of the week into seven days was also discarded, and the de cimal system of reckoning was adopted

The Chinese Republicans, however, care nothing whatever for the origin of the Christian reckoning of time. Anno domini" means nothing to them any more than the Teutonic names of the days of the week mean to the Christian. After all the date of the year is practically the only Christian element in the calendar of Christen-

CUNARD AGREEMENT WITH C. N. R. ROAD

Eleven Big Steamers to Feed the Road at Port of Montreal.

[Canadian Press.] York, Feb. 15. — The New

York American this morning publishes the following: An agreement reached between the Cunard Steamship Company and the Canadian Northern Railway has created much interest in steamship circles here, while it has set at rest many speculations as to the future policy of one of the most progressive railroads in the Dominion.

With the completion of its coast to coast system, the Canadian Northern will be in a position to wrest a large portion of the transcontinental traffic from its rival, the Canadian Pacific. The latter company, with four steamers and its working agreement with the International Mercantile Marine, which has six steamers on the Montreal run, had an advantage over the Northern that only acquisition of fleet could surpass. They finally reached an agreement whereby the Cunard Line, with its three steamers now in the Montreal service, and two larger ones building, would combine with the Royal Line and the Uranium Steamship Company, the latter concerns being controlled by the Canadian Northern.

The new arrangement means that eleven steamers will feed the Canadian Northern road, as against the ten vessels that will form the conecting link between Liverpool, Antwerp and Mon-

TEMPERAMENT

Each individual has a peculiar temperament to which he owes his mode of existence and his degree of health, ability and

We must study the natures of people individually. When we find a phlegmatic or relaxed temperament we find people indifferent to us, unsympathetic and obtuse, generally stout and dyspeptic, meditative, and inclined

CYNTHIA'S CHAUFFEUR

[BY LOUIS TRACY.]

A queer shiver ran through the Frenchman's body, but Medenham did not commit the error of imagining that his adverses. Versary was afraid. His grip on Marigny's shoulder tightened. The two were now not twelve inches apart, and the Englishman read that involuntary tension of the muscles aright, for there is a palsy of rage as of fear.

"I have some acquaintance with the savate," Medenham said snavely. "Please take my word for it, and you will be spared an injury. A moment ago you offered to treat me like a gentleman. I sieur Marigny. Once bitten, twice shy, you know, and I would insist on checking each mile of the map if you were at the wheel."

"Your chauffeur is immovable, made-moiselle," was the ready answer, though the accompanying smile was not one of the Count's best efforts. "He looks it. Why are you vexed, Fitz-y? Can't you forgive your friend Sim-

Cynthia lifted those demure blue eyes of hers, and held Medenham's gaze stead-

"I trust you are not challenging contradiction, Miss Vanrenen?" he said, with deliberate resolve not to let her slip back thus easily into the role of gracious employer. She did not flinch, but her eyebrows arched a little.

"Oh, no," she said offhandedly. "Simmonds told me his misfortunes last night, and I assumed that you and he had set-tled matters satisfactorily between you."
"As for that," broke in the Count, "I have just offered my car as a substitute, but Fitzroy prefers to take you as far as Hereford, at any cost."

"Hereford! I understood from Simmonds that Mr. Fitzroy would see us through the remainder of the tour."

"Monsieur Marigny is somewhat vague in our island topography; you saw that last evening," said Medenham.

He smiled. Cynthia, too, glanced from one to the other with a frank merriment that showed how fully she appreciated their mutual dislike. As for Marigny, his white teeth gleamed now in a sarcastic grin.
"Adversity is a strict master," he said, lapsing into his own language again. "My blunder of yesterday has shown me the need of caution, so I go no farther than Hereford in my thoughts." far you are going in your car," cried the girl lightly.

"I, too, hope to be in Hereford tonight.

Mrs. Devar says you mean to spend Sunday there. If that is a fixed thing, and you can bear with me for a few hours, I shall meet you there without fail." "Come by all means, if your road lies that way; but don't let us make formal engagements. I love to think that I am drifting at will through this land of gardens and apple blossom. And, just think of it—three cathedrals in one day—a Mineton for healtfeat lunch and dinner. Minster for breakfast, lunch and dinner, with Tintern Abbey thrown in for afternoon tea. Such a wealth of mediaevalism makes my head reel. I was in there for matins," and she nodded to the grave old pile rearing its massive Gothic within a few paces of the hotel. "At high noon was shell visit Gloviesters and tonight we we shall vsit Gloucester, and tonight we shall see Hereford. Here, at least, Marigny was hope-lessly at sea—desoriente, as he would have put it—because he could not possibly know that Cynthia herself had counselled the disappearance of Simmonds. Indeed, he attributed her high spirits to mere politeness—to her wish that he should believe she had forgotten the flasco on take my word for it, and you will be spared an injury. A moment ago you offered to treat me like a gentleman. I reciprocate now by being willing to accept your promise to hold your tongue. Miss Vanrenen is coming, what say you?"

"I agree." said Marigny, though his dark eyes blazed redig.

"Ah, thanks!" and Medenham's left hand busied itself once more with the fastening of the glove.

"You understand, of course?" he heard in a soft snarl.

"Perfectly. The truce ends with my departure. Meanwhile, you are acting wisely. I don't suppose I shall ever respect your so much again."

"Now, you two—what are you discussing?" cried Cynthia from the porch. But that was a mere feint, a prelimin-ry flourish, such as a practiced swordsary flourish, such as a practiced swords-man executes in empty air before saluting his opponent. He had not the slightest intention of testing Medenham's pugilistic powers just then. The reasonable prob-ability of having his chief features beaten ability of having his chief features beaten to a pulp was not inviting, while the crude efficacy of the notion, in its influence on Miss Vanrenen's affairs, was not the least stupefying element in a difficult and wholly unforeseen situation. He realized fully that anything in the nature of a scuffle would alienate the girl's sympathies forever, no matter how strong a case for interference he might present afterwards. The chauffeur would be dismissed on the spot; but with the offender would go his own prospect of winning the would go his own prospect of winning the heiress to the Vanrenen millions.

So Count Edouard swallowed his spleen hough the requisite effort must have dissipated some of his natural shrewdness or he could not have failed to read more correctly the tokens of embarrassment given by Cynthia's heightened color, by her eager vivacity, by her breathless anxiety not to discuss the substitution of one driver for the other.

Medenham was about to disclaim any intention of measuring his lore against that in the guide books when Mrs. Devar bustled out. "Awfully sorry," she began, "but I had wire James..." to wire James——"

"For goodness sake," she cried, "let us regard it as a settled thing that Fitzroy taked Simmonds" place until we reach London again. Surely we have the best of the bargain. If the two men are satisfied why should we have anything to say against it?"

ST. THOMAS SMITH'S PAINTINGS EXHIBITED

Works of the Famous Artist Are Highly Appreciated in London.

A large number attended the exhibilion of paintings by St. Thomas Smith, A.R.C.A., O.C.A., held under the auspices of the London Art Association in the art gallery of O. B. Graves Wednesday afternoon

The work of St. Thomas Smith is characterized by the lifelike and realistic touches which he imparts to the motion of cloud and water in his pictures of the Orkney Islands, his marine paintings, and his paintings of the Scottish coast, with its quaint villages and rocks and storms. His storm pictures are exceptionally characteristic of faithful portrayal, and in all his sketches the sky and water effects are truly wonderful. Sketches of English landscapes. Holland sketches, and one or 'wo portraits are also noticeable in the fine showing of paintings which fill up several rooms. The exhibition will be open this afternoon again, and tea will be served after 4 o'clock,

The correspondence, contained in one of the thirty-two indictments, and embracing what are termed "unconsummated act of conspiracy," is held as showing that a vast plot, known to, and furthered by, Frank M. Fix Your Mind On This

Then Act and Make Money get in on this.

This is opportunity! That's what it is. Face to face is OPPORTUNITY TALKING to you. YOUR GREAT CHANCE is now before you. You will never have an opportunity to buy lots close in to Regina—the city that is making the most rapid growth in Canada today—again at such prices as we offer until Tuesday next. We have told you about Regina and about Glenelm Park, the best investment opportunity in Regina, and many have taken advantage of our offer. We have still a few lots left from $100 up, on payments extending over two years. ISN'T THIS EASY ENOUGH TO BUY AND EASY ENOUGH TO PAY FOR? These lots are selling now at $30 less than their value. Come in and we will prove it for you.

Those who fail to take advantage of this will say when they see Regina five times its present size, "If I had only invested a few dollars in Regina then what profits it would have made me," just as hundreds are saying about Winnipeg now.

ARE YOU A MAN OF TODAY, TOMORROW OR YESTERDAY? If you are of tomorrow, looking ahead and building for the future, you will secure one or more of these lots at once. If you are always looking back at what you might have done, instead of ahead to what you can do, you will stay in the ranks of the plodders. Get up with those who lead in the march of progress by taking advantage of this great chance offered you today.

If you have $20 it will start you. Nothing more to pay for six months, and an immediate margin of profit of $30 on above investment, as we can show you if you will call.

London people who bought this property when we first offered it, have resold and realized three times their first investment. How about you?

Come in and see us, and be convinced. Our office is open evenings, if you can't call in the Jews Protest Against the Word "Christian" In Bill of Nationalization.

Ontario Government Thinks Jurisdic tion of the Institution Should Be in Provincial Hands.

[Special to The Advertiser.]
Ottawa, Feb. 16.—A Jewish delegation put up a lively protest this morning against the terms on which it is proposed to separate Queen's Uni-versity from the Presbyterian Church. The protest was lodged with the bills committee of the Commons, in which the bill to nationalize Queen's University and to separate it from the Presbyterian Church was being con-

One clause in the bill declares that the university is for the general advantage of Canada, and "distinctively Christian.

The delegation which appeared against this clause included Rabbi Jacobs, of Toronto, Ald. Blumenthal, L. Cohen and L. Silver, of Montreal, and A. H. Wolff, Ottawa.

W. F. Nickle, M. P., of Kingston, who had the bill in charge, opened the proceedings by explaining to the committee that it was to give effect to the decision of the Presbyterian Church at the last general assembly to make the university undenominational. The bill had ben prepared by the heads of the church and of the university. Might Exclude Jews.

Robert Bickerdike, M. P., whose division of St. Lawrence, Montreal is largely populated by Jews, stated that as the bill was drawn it might result in the exclusion of the Jews from participation in the advantages of one of Canada's great educational institutions. He thought that the clause declaring tages of Canada and distinctively Christian should be struck out.

The province of Ontario also made a kick against the bill. R. G. Code, K. C., bobbed up with the announcement that the Ontario Government objected to the words "for the general advantage of Canada," which appeared in the bill, and in fact to the whole of the bill, on the ground that education was reserved for the provinces by the British North America

Mr. Nickle replied that the courts had decided the Dominion had jurisdiction decided the Dominion had jurisdiction when a university had property. In more than one instance the Dominion had passed bills for the university.

A good many members of the committee insisted upon the provincial jurisdiction point, and especially Mr. Burnham, of Peterboro, who wanted the opinion of the department of justice.

Mr. Nickle said that he was willing to withdraw the words "for the general"

Ontario's objection to the bill was then dropped by Mr. Code, and it was decided to refer the question of jurisdiction to the department of justice.
Then the case of the Hebrews was

Mr. Nickle: "My practice is law, and I get lost in creed discussions."

There was a bit of a blaze-up when Mr. Jacobs said that this bill would make a Canaddan institution, supported by the funds of all Canada, more Russian than Russia itself. or N. MacDonnell, K.C., speaking for the Presbyterian Church, said that it had been agreed between the church and the been agreed between the church and the trustees that the university should be Christian when nationalized. This had been the original intention of its founders, and this could not be carried out except by passing this clause.

Rabbi Jacobs argued so long as the college remained Presbyterian restricted clauses were all right. Nationalized and probably supported in part, at least, by Jewish money, such restrictions were Jewish money, such restrictions were nothing short of a stigma on Canada. Dr. Ramsay said that the framers of Dr. Ramsay said that the framers of the bill were not alming at the Jews, but at another class of men who were antagonistic to Christianity.

L. Cohen, of Montreal, declared restrictive clauses to be inconsistent in a charter wide as the boundless mercy of God, which had been obtained from Parliament.

Rev. Robt. Campbell, D.D., declared that the non-Christian Christians were the ones who were aimed at in the clause.

The discussion was brought to an end by Mr. Claude MacDonnel, of Toronto, who held that when the university declared itself national it was wise to be national in fact as well as in name. Further consideration of the bill was held over for a week.

It it very plainly not a case in which we can wisely or well adopt "stand and deliver" methods. Indeed, however it may end, this much is certain, that it shall have received the most careful and earnest consideration on the part of the deputy minister, and the lleutenant-governor in council. My own idea is that the making of school teachers should not absorb too much of our thoughts and efforts: I would rather that the university may become an institution in versity may become an institution in which every young man and woman, no matter what their means, or whether they have any or not, if they have natural ability, may be fitted for putting to the fullest and best use.

I am sending to you now, a memorane dum of the extensions of the university, in all its parts, to be carried into effect in all its parts, to be carried into effect before the beginning of the coming academic year; indicating, as I am sure everyone will see, a very decided and satisfactory step forward in the university's progress. All that is now needed to continue its rapid advancement is proof of the faith of the people of Western Ontario in, and their desire for, a university in their midst, by filling its classes with their children. It is all very well to praise, and to shout for the cal and unwise to send their sons and Huron College.

The Western University in all the branches of learning which it undertakes to teach, affords advantages equal to that of any other university, and has statute-con-ferred degree conferring powers unsurpassed in any.

At the opening of the Western University next September, everything needed in it will be in readiness; the next move must be made by the people of Western Ontario, especially of Lon-don, in filling its classes, and if continued progress and success are to attend it and London to become a noted centre of educational activity, the outstanding features of which shall be, I trust, in addition to scholastic appliance. addition to scholastic qualifications, manliness, good morals, good manners,

Another matter which is causing trouble is the resistance offered to it by the Jewish community. One clause declares that the university "shall in every respect be national and undenominational in its character and management," while another says, "The university shall continue distinctively Christian, but no religious test or qualification save the profession of Christianity shall be required of or appointed for any officer, trustee, member of council or official of the university." occa Gandolfi is searching for a didden reasure in the garden of her dilapidated story is that the countess discovered an ld manuscript hidden inside one of the ooks of her family library, which when deciphered read as follows:

'Oh, you who have the fortune to renove from its hiding place one or a hundred years hence this old parchment keep the secret of it in your dark and jealous When the night is dark and silent go with men whom you can trust to the place indicated below and excavate the earth three times thirty feet deep. The countess then decided to resort to services of a retired artillery captain, who invented a magnetic apparatus, a of diving rod, which dipped and pointed downward when held over the spot where the treasure is supposed to be hidden. Despite such convincing evidence of the existence of the treasure, no discovery has so far been made.

It is not at all unlikely that a treasure really exists, since it is a well-established fact that from remote times the Romans were in the habit of burying valuables, especially money and jewelry, when the city was threatened by the enemy. Treasures dating from the republican period have been discovered, as well as many others dating from the invasions of barbarians, the sack of Rome in 1523, the repeated incursions of Saracens, and finally the political troubles and revolutions of recent times. The safest way to hide money is still considered to be that of burying it deep in the ground in some

He dled without divulging the place where he had buried the money, and his widow was about to abandon all attempts at finding the treasure, when an old family servant, who was seriously ill in a hospital, summoned her to his bedside and told her that his master had confided the hiding place to him Unfortunately the servant died while he was explaining where the treasure had

He was able to state that at the end of a year the French army would be able to mobilize 344 machines, with 234 officer airmen, and complete forces of mechanics, sappers, and pupils. REICHSTAG CHEERS CHANCELLOR'S WORDS

A Reasonable Plea Municipalities Donating Aero-planes for Use of the Proves Better Agreement With Great Britain.

> Berlin, Feb. 15 .- In the Reichstag this afternoon, the Chancellor, Dr. Bethmann-Hollweg, stated that Lord Haldane, the British secretary of war, did not come to Berlin with the power of making a binding agreement between Germany and Great Britain, but was authorized by the English cabinet to discuss with the German Government the points concerning the interests of both countries, in order to lay the foundations for confidential relations between the two powers. Negotlations to this end would be pursued, the chancellor declared.

The loud and unstinted applause from all parties which greeted the chancellor statement indicated the general relie with which Germans greet the prospect of a betterment of the relations between the two countries. A majority of the German newspapers had previously commented with warm approval on Premier Asquith's statement on the same subject n the British House of Commons

There is nothing official as to how the further negotiations on this important subject are to be conducted, but it is stated that Dr. Von Stumm, the chief of the English department of the German foreign office, is drawing up suggestions, and Lord Haldane is performing a similar office in London. These will form the basis for future friendly discussion here. It is possible that Dr. Von Stumm will go to London. It is hoped that the visit of King George and Queen Mary to Berlin, which is scheduled for the coming spring, will emphacountries. It is stated that the Kaiser's return visit to London will be of ever greater importance.

The Churches Must Do It.

"If in our west," said Mr. Austin, "we are to have a country where a man may live in decency, where wohood protected, we must have Christian institutions, and it is for the churches to provide them.

The effort to evangelize the world offers to every man the largest opportunity for service. Christian stewardship would solve every problem of world-evangelization: If every Christian would give one-tenth of his income all the demands of the field would be readily met. Those who practiced tithing always claimed that they had lost nothing on that account. A revival of tithing on the part of the church members would mean new life to the church. Systematic giving was , and most effective means of Ig missions.

The remedy for the inadequacy of the present forces, and arrangements for encompassing the evangelization of the world must be found in the mature marhood of the Christian church. SPOKE ON CHINA Interesting Address in London Junction Presbyterian Church.

A good attendance at the regular prayer meeting of the London Junction Presbyterian Church thoroughly enjoyed the genial missionary's address on Wednesday evening. In an address of over an hour, with the aid of a small map only, he covered that vast continent and the great problem of its future so simply, clearly earnestly as to convince his audience of the real possibility of a Christian China.

The address was unique in method of presentment, and dealt with the problem on broad statesmanlike lines. The doctor but touched on the revolution as indicating in the birth of the newest republic the logical sequence of Christian ideals. He emphasized the need of greater effort and sacrifice on the part of the Christian people at home, that our work as a church agency on China might at this juncture grasp its opportunity, and aid to the utmost the native Chinese church, to whom sooner or later will be committed the gigantic task of China's

At the close the doctor exhibited the flag of the new republic, in red, white and blue, explaining that the Chinese leaders fully realized the emblematic significance of these colors. He also exhibited a ten-dollar bill of the new republic, having its face value. A standing vote of thanks was awarded to Dr. McGillivray for his excellent lecture and after the usual closing exercises, a most enjoyable missionary meeting was brought to a close.

Best Sellers of Past Year

The list of "best sellers" for 1911 presents twenty-seven novels, against thirty-two for the previous year, and includes "Molly Make-Believe," "The Broad Highway," "The Prodigal Judge," "The Rosary," "Queed," "The Long Roll," "The Common Law," "The Iron Woman," "The Miller of Old Church," "The Slege of the Seven Suitors," "Flamsted Quarries," and "The Glory of Clementina." The good and bad are curiously mixed in this list: but the fact that "The Broad Highway" stands second in popularity, that "Queed" ranks with "The Rosary," and that "The Miller of Old Church" and "The Iron Woman" find a place in the list shows that literary excellence and seriousness of purpose do not exclude stories from popular The "Bookman" calls attention

Mr. Kester's "The Prodigal Judge" made a strong impression on many readers, and if the second part had fulfilled the promise of the first, would have been a notable story; Jeffry Farnol's "The Broad Highway" has such breezy, out-of-door freshness and Broadway with a friend, I saw my vitality that it may be set in broad contrast to "The Rosary," and welcomed for its tonic quality at a time when a great many morbid books and stories of suffocating atmosphere are in the hands of undeveloped readers No story of the year by a new writer "'Hush! PRACTICAL USES OF FINGER PRINTS.

In the Argentine Republic the identification cards of policemen, coachmen, cab drivers, commissioners and servants have, since 1896, borne their finger prints. Upon all passports and bank receipts for deposits the imprint of the thumb must be made at time of delivery.

In Roumania, since 1903, the thumb print has been substituted for the cross made instead of signature by persons who cannot write. In the Philippine Islands those who cannot write are not obliged to be identified by witnesses at savings banks, but merely have to make their mark with their thumb

The same system has been used in the banks of Bengal for fifty years. In France, to put an end to the fraud of enlistment, desertion and re-enlistment for the bounty paid in the Foreign Legion, every man's finger prints are taken and kept on file.

"I will not support an increase like hat," said Commissioner Stevenson. 'It is out of the question." "I am not in favor of giving him $600 additional," was Mayor Graham's commissioner Chapman thought it should be increased to $2,100. "You cannot interfere with this," declared Ald. Stevenson. "You voted everything into Mr. Glaubitz's hands, and now you must accept his recommendations without a question."

"What are you talking about, anyway?" retorted Mayor Graham, "We did not sign away all our rights. I guess we have something to say in this business." Dr. Stevenson persisted in opposing the interference of the commissioners, as he styled it, but the increases passed with Mr Chanman's amendmen Fourteen of the 35 permanent officials were given advances, the other 21 re-

WILL TEA PRICES GO UP?

Market Is Widening and Plantations Being Reduced.

Tea dealers forecast a possible rise in the price of tea, this being one of the last commodities to join the procession of rising prices. Among the causes given are the facts that the market for tea is constantly widening, Moscow buyers are now competing with London and New York, and that the increased demand for rubber has caused rubber planters to buy tea lands and convert them to their purposes, thus decreasing the area given to tea raising.

MOVING PICTURES IN TEMPERANCE FIGHT

Would Be Great Help in the Hebner, of the Illinois Athletic Club. Nation Wide Educational Work.

[Canadian Press.] Toronto, Feb. 15 .- That the moving picture exhibition can be made one of the most potent influences in nationwide educational work along temperance lines was the opinion expressed by Mr. J. H. Roberts, of Montreal, in an address on "Nation-Wide Educational Work" before the National Temperance Congress. Amusement, he declared, was a necessity, and recognizing this, they should selze the opportunity it offered to spread temperance information. "We should take a part in federal politics," declared Mr. Roberts. "We ought to go to the Federal Government immediately and ask them what they are going to do for us."

Mr. Roberts declared that education along temperance lines must be kept apace of the times, even after the iquor traffic has been suppressed in a "Supposing we get every province of Canada dry, but the Province of Quebec," said he. "Although I don't think Quebec will be last, we could, through the newspapers, continue the process of temperance education just so long as the evil existed in one part of the territory served by a metropolitan press.' In his opinion educational work was even a greater influence than a prohibitory measure in curtailing liquor consumption. "The drink evil was not provincial but nation-wide, he declared, and it should be fought by a Dominion-wide, aggressive organization. The Dominion Alliance, in his estimation, had of late been too provincial." He favored the organization of a band of workers to visit the more populous centres of the Dominion to infus temperance sentiment. Mr. Roberts thought that the Governments, Provincial and Dominion should at least go as far as the railways and demand strict sobriety from civic servants. This would be a great help in the movement. WORLD'S RECORD FOR TEN GAMES. [Canadian Press.]
