gave to the defendant his note, payable in two years, for the price of the shares, which were transferred to him. At the defendant's request he then pledged these seventy-six shares, and, as the jury found, lent the de-fendant forty-four other shares of his own. to pledge to a bank, which discounted the note for the defendant. The jury also found that it was a condition of the purchase that the defendant, who had a large interest in the Globe Printing Company, should keep the plaintiff in the position which he occupied as managing director of the Globe Printing Company, at a fixed salary. The defendant at the maturity of the note retired it, and took an assignment to himself of the 120 shares. The plaintiff having been afterwards dismissed from his position as managing director, brought this action for a return of the fortyfour shares, on the ground that the purpose for which they had been pledged had been fulfilled; and for a return of the note, and to be relieved from the purchase of the seventy-six shares, on the ground that the condition of the purchase, (viz.: his being retained in office,) had not been fulfilled, but had been broken by the defendant's procuring his dismissal:-Held, that as there had been a partial performance of the defendant's agreement, by retaining the plaintiff in office for the period within which the seventy-six shares were to have been paid for, there could be no rescission of the whole contract; but that the plaintiff-the finding of the jury as to the forty-four shares not having been moved against-was entitled to a return of these shares, and the defendant to judgment for shares, and the defendant to judgment to the price of the seventy-six shares; and that the plaintiff's remedy, if any, for wrongful dismissal was by an independent action:— Held, also, that the defendant having performed his portion of the agreement, the Sta-tute of Frauds, as regards agreements not to be performed within a year, was not appli-cable to the undertaking to keep the plaintiff in office. Brown v. Nelson, 7 O. R. 90.

Sale of Timber—Revocation of Extension of Time.]—The owner of land by a memorandum in writing sold the timber thereon, and when the time verbally agreed upon for its removal was nearly expired, the vendor told his vendee that he might have another year within which to complete the cutting and removal of the timber:—Held, that the vendor was not at liberty afterwards to revoke such extension of time. Lawrence v. Errington, 21 Gr. 261.

Waterworks-Notice.]-A contract for the construction and maintenance of a system of waterworks required them to be completed in a manner satisfactory to the corporation and allowed the contractors thirty days after notice to put the works in satisfactory working order. On the expiration of the time for the completion of the works the corporation served a protest upon the contractors complaining in general terms of the insufficiency and unsatisfactory construction of the works without specifying particular defects, but made use of the works complained of for about nine years when, without further notice, action was brought for the rescission of the contract and forfeiture of the works under conditions in the contract :- Held, that, after the long delay, when the contractors could not be re-placed in the original position, the complaint must be deemed to have been waived by acceptance and use of the waterworks and it would, under the circumstances, be inequitable to rescind the contract :- Held, further, that a notice specifying the particular defects to be remedied was a condition precedent to action and that the protest in general terms was not a sufficient compliance therewith to place the contractors in default. VI. SUBSTITUTION AND ASSIGNMENT.

Assignment Without Leave - Know-Crown-Reseission-Quantum Mernit Damages.] -- See Regina v. Smith, 10 S.

Bond to Secure Rent - Surrender of Lease. - Declaration on a bond to plaintiffs securing payment by L. of the rent of certain premises, and averring that rent was then in Plea, on equitable grounds, that L. had died, having by will appointed defendant and another his executors, who continued in possession of the premises as tenants to plaintiffs under the lease to L. until a certain day. when an agreement (not stated to have been in writing) was entered into between the widow of L., the defendant, and the other executor, as executors, and one S., with plain-tiffs' consent, that S. should purchase the lease of the premises for the amount of the rent then agreed upon as in arrear, and that the widow and executors should surrender the lease and possession of the premises, and S should become tenant to plaintiffs, and should have additional yard room, &c., and should in consideration thereof give his note payable to plaintiff B., for the said agreed sum, and de-fendant should for accommodation, and as surety for S., join him as maker of the note; that the tenancy and defendant's liability on that the tenancy and derendant's hability the bond and in respect of the rent should cease, and plaintiffs should accept the note and surrender of the lease and possession in satisfaction and discharge of the rent then overdue, and of defendant's liability upon the bond and lease; that an indorsement was made under the hands and seals of the execu-tors and widow upon the lease, at plaintiffs' request and accepted by them, surrendering to plaintiffs said lease and all the estate and interest of the testator at the time of his death in the premises, as also their own interest therein as his executors, and that the widow consented thereto, and also surrendered to plaintiffs; that the note for the rent was made by S. and defendant payable to plaintiff B., and delivered by S. to plaintiffs, and plaintiffs took possession of the premises, and accepted the surrender thereof in full satisfaction and discharge. Replication, on equitable grounds, setting up, by way of estoppel to the admissibility of the plea, that in an action in the county court upon said note against defendant and S., they had pleaded an entirely different agreement from that alleged in the above plea respecting said note, and that the consideration for the note had wholly failed; that the jury had found the issue joined thereon in their favour; and that defendant subsequently, upon motion for a new trial, made and filed an affidavit stating that neither defendant nor S. had ever received any benefit. Ac., for said note, or in payment thereof, by reason of which said acts and statements plaintiffs had been prevented from recovering the amount of said note :- Held, on demurrer, plea good, both in substance and in form; in substance, as setting up an entirely new contract and part performance in substitution of the former contract; and in form, as shewing the plaintiffs to have been sufficiently identified with the whole transaction to be bound by it, as they had taken the benefit of it:— Held, also, replication bad. Bradfield v. Hop-kins, 16 C. P. 298.

Building Centract - Abandonment.]-To an action for breach of contract between plaintiffs and defendant, that defendant would build plaintiffs' railway to be completed by a day named, defendant pleaded equitably that plaintiffs, with consent of defendant, agreed with E. to finish said railway, and defendant, before breach, abandoned said contract, and E. entered upon and took possession of the works on said railway, and continued the same with plaintiffs' consent. Replication, that by the agreement in the last plea mentioned, the plaintiffs' rights against defendant were expressly reserved :- Held, on demurrer, replication good, but plea bad, as not shewing that the alleged substituted contract contained all the esentials requisite to make it a complete discharge and release of the original one. Port Whitby and Port Perry R. W. Co. v. Dumble, 32 U. C. R. 36, See S. C., 22 C. P. 36, where the court of common pleas, in an action against the principal, took a different view as to the replication.

Building Contract-Change in Plan.]-To a declaration upon a sealed agreement to build a vessel for plaintiff, of a certain size and according to a certain model, by a certain day, &c., defendant pleaded, that he procured materials, and before breach of the agreement he was ordered by plaintiff to build a vessel of larger size; and that in pursuance of plaintiff's directions, and by his order and request, he did erect and build such larger vessel, and was consequently compelled to take a longer time, which is the breach complained of :-Held, no answer to the declaration. Gaskin v. Counter, 6 C. P. 99.

Building Contract-Change in Plan.]-Declaration on a contract by a testator to build a marine boiler and steam engine for plaintiff, alleging partial completion by testator before his death, and a promise by defendants as executors to complete it for the balance due, but that they did not complete it in time, and delivered it unfinished and not according to the specifications, &c. The 7th plea stated that after testator's contract and promise, it was agreed between him and plaintiff in his lifetime that he should not perform them, but that instead testator should deliver plaintiff, who was to accept, a different boiler and engine, larger and more valuable requiring a longer time for construction; and afterwards, before action, testator in his lifeand defendants as executors, did make and deliver to plaintiff, who accepted the same upon such terms, and paid the price thereof:

Postponing Performance. |-While an agreement is open between the parties, and the time for performance has not arrived, a new agreement may be substituted for it postponing the period for performance, and the original consideration will be regarded as imported into such new agreement, and will support it. Hurlburt v. Thomas, 3 U. C. R. 258; O'Don-nell v. Hugill, 11 U. C. R. 441. P. R. 114.

Previous Rights Reserved.]-G. and S., the managers of certain steamboats running in opposition, S. having only one boat, and G. two, referred to arbitration the terms on which the opposition should cease. arbitrators awarded that each party should run one boat at different hours, and that S. should pay G. £150. Afterwards G. and some of the owners of the steamer for which S. was agent entered into an agreement respecting the two boats which the award allowed to run, which stated that the parties had agreed to settle the disputes between them as steamboat owners on the following terms, and then specified the hours and days on which the boats were to leave the different ports; but it was expressly declared that this agreement was without prejudice to any demand which G. might have upon S.:—Held, that G.'s right to the £150 awarded was not affected by Remuneration for Services—Collateral Contract—Novation.]—Where services have been performed by one person for the benefit and at the request of another, and have been caarged to the latter, the fact that a third person has subsequently agreed to pay for such services, and has had judgment recovered against him therefor, by the person rendering them, will not prevent the latter recovering in an action against the person liable in the first instance, unless the subsequent agreement amounts to a novation. Sale of Goods—Extending Time for Delivery, 1—Declaration, that defendant agreed to sell and deliver to plaintiff within one week certain wheat, and the plaintiff advanced $600 on account, yet defendant failed to deliver. Plea, that before breach it was agreed that the plaintiff should, and he did waive the delivery within one week, and extended the time for delivery:—Held, plea bad, for no subsequent delivery was alleged, nor that the extended time had not elapsed. Molson v. Bradburn, 25 U. C. R. 457.

Sale of Land—Forfeiture—Extension.]—An indersement on a contract for the sale of land extending the time for payment, was:—Held, not to do away with the provision for forfeiture on default, but to incorporate the extended time in the agreement as if originally there. Marcus v. Smith, 17 C. P. 446.

CONVERSION.

Expropriation.]-P. being the owner of certain lands was served by a railway company with notice of expropriation and tendered a sum of money for right of way and damage, which was refused. Subsequently on the application of the company and with the con-sent of P.'s solicitor, the county Judge made an order fixing the amount of security to be given for damages, and the price of the land, and giving the company possession upon their paying the amount of such security into a bank to the joint credit of P. and the com-pany. The money was paid in pursuant thereto. An arbitration was then proceeded thereto. An arbitration was then proceeded with, and the compensation to be paid for the value of the land taken and the damage to the remainder was fixed by the award in separate sums. Proceedings and appeals as to the costs kept the matter open, and the money remained to the credit of the joint account until P, died, after making his will by which he devised all his real estate to a trustee, and appointed the plaintiff executor. The defendants were appointed trustees in place of the trustee named in the will. Upon a special case for the opinion of the court as to whether case for the opinion of the court as to whether belaintiff as executor or the defendants as trustees of the testator's land, was or were entitled to the sums awarded or any part thereof:—Held, that notice to treat having been given, and a claim made by the landowner, and refused by the company, and the money having been paid into court and possession taken by the company. pany, these circumstances under the authority of Nash v. Worcester Improvement Commissioners, 1 Jur. N. S. 973, would entitle the landowner to have specific performance against the company, and that therefore the land was converted into money and the plain-tiff as executor was entitled to the sums awarded. Hoskin v. Toronto General Trusts Co., 12 O. R. 480.

Infant's Estate.]—The principle of s. 56 of C. S. U. C. c. 12, relating to the conversion of infants' estates sold under that Act, is also applicable to all cases where it is necessary for collateral purposes to effect the conversion of an infant's estate from realty into personalty; the rule of the court in all such cases being that the conversion shall not have any greater effect than is necessary for accomplishing the immediate purpose of the conversion, so far as the rights of the next of kin and heirs-at-law of the inflant are concerned. COPYRIGHT.

Book—Importation of Foreign Reprints—Assignment of Proprietorship.)—Upon a motion for an interim injunction restraining the defendants from importing into Canada for sale, and from exposing and offering for sale, and from exposing and offering for sale, and from exposing and offering for sale, copies of a book written by Francis Prakman, known as "A Half Century of Conflict," in infringement of the plaintiffs copyright in such book, it appeared that at the time of the author's death he was such book for the British dominous claim of the copyright and that after his death such copyright and ownership had been assigned and transferred to the plaintiffs by those upon whom they devolved; that the defendants had imported copies of the book from the United States of America, and were offering them for sale in Canada:—Held, that s. 17 of the Imperial Act to amend the Copyright Act, 5 & 6 Vict. c. 45, prohibiting the importation of foreign reprints by any person not being the proprietor of the copyright, or some person authorized by him, is now in force in Canada; and the plaintiffs were, therefore, entitled to prohibit the importation of foreign reprints into Canada.

Book — Registration — Infringement — Particulars. —In an action for infringement of copyright in a book, the statement of claim alleged that the plaintiffs were the proprietors of a subsisting copyright duly registered, and further alleged that the defendants printed for sale a large number of copies of another book, a part whereof was an infringement of the plaintiffs' copyright: —Held, that the defendants were entitled to particulars shewing the date of registration of the plaintiffs' copyright, and shewing what part of the defendants' book infringed the plaintiffs' right. Consent Judgment—Damages—Costs.] —Where judgment was pronounced by consent declaring that the defendant had infringed the plaintiffs' copyright, restraining him from continuing to infringe, and directing a reference to ascertain the damages sustained by reason of the infringement, and the master found that the damages were only and also reported specially that the plaintiffs were aware before action that the defendant was willing to hand over all copies of and to stop selling or giving away the publications in question, but the plaintiffs demanded $100 compensation, and that after action the defendant offered to pay $25 for damages and costs and to deliver up any of the publications on hand and to give an undertaking that there would be no further in-fringement, but the plaintiffs did not accept the offer:—Held, that the plaintiffs were entitled to the costs of the action; and also to the costs of the reference, the defendant not having, when consenting to judgment, offered to pay a fixed sum for damages and to pay it into court. Anglo-Canadian Music Publishing Association v. Somerville, 19 P. R. 113.

Circulars—Forms.]—The purely commercial or business character of a composition or a composition of copyright, if time, labour and experience have been devoted to its production. The plaintiff, the proprietor of a school for the cure of stammering, had obtained copyright for publications consisting of: (1) "Applicant's Blank," a series of questions to be answered by entrants to the school: (2) "Information for Stammerers," an advertisement circular: (3) "Entrance Memorandum," an agreement to be signed by entrants: and (4) "Entrance Agreement, similar to No. 3, but more formal:—Held, that the plaintiff had copyright in the publications, and was entitled to an injunction restraining infringement thereof. Depositing Copy in Parliamentary Library, | — Section 5 of C. S. C. c. 81, is merely directory, and so the neglect of the author of a work to deposit a copy thereof in the library of Parliament does not incapacitate him from proceeding for an infringement of it. Griffin v. Kingston and Pembroke R. W. Co., 17 O. R. 630.

English Copyright—Importation of Foreign Reprints.]—Held, affirming 23 Gr. 590, that it is not necessary for the author of a book, who has duly copyrighted the work in England under 5 & 6 Vict. c. 45, to copyright it in Canada under the Copyright Act of 1875. with a view of restraining a reprint of it there; but if he desires to prevent the importation into Canada of printed copies from a foreign country, he must copyright the book in Canada. Smiles v. Bedford, 1 A. R. 436.

Infringement — Biographical Sketches.]
The publisher of a work containing biographical sketches cannot copy them from a copyrighted work, even where he has applied to the subjects of such sketches and been referred to the copyrighted works therefor. In works of this nature where so much may be taken by different publishers from common table to the same workshormation given must be in the same workshormation given must be into restrict the right of will be for a formation of the same workshormation from common sources and does not, to save himself labour, merely copy from the work of the other that which has been the result of the latter's skill and diligence. License to Publish—Acquiescence.]—To create a perfect right under 38 Vict. c. 88 (D.), there should be an assignment in writing of such parts of the book as the owner of the copyright therein is willing to permit his licensee to publish; but without any writing, there may be such conduct on the part of the owner, in assenting to and encouraging the infringement complained of, as to disentitle him to relief in equity by way of injunction. Allen v. Lyon, 5 O. R. 615.

Notice on Title Page—Error in Form.] On the title age of the book as published the plaintiff caused these words to be printed: "Entered according to the Act of Parliament, in the year 1883, by J. A. Gemmill, in the office of the Minister of Agriculture, at Ottawa:"—Held, that this was sufficient compliance with s. 9 of the Act, although the form of words used was not exactly the same as there prescribed, inasmuch as the words "of Canada," omitted after the word "Parliament," were immaterial. General remarks on forms prescribed in various cases by Acts of Parliament. Garland v. Genmill, 14 S. C. R. 321.

Printing Canadian Copyright Work Abroad—"valication in Canada.]—Section 33 of the Copyright Act, R. S. C. c. 62, does impose the penalty mentioned therein upon the owner of a Canadian copyright in respect to a musical composition who has the work printed abroad, and inserts notification of the existence of such copyright on copies published in Canada. Lancefield v. AngloCanadian Music Publishing Association (Limited), 26 O. R. 457.

Priorities of British and Canadim Copyrights,—There is a very clear distinction to be observed in the Copyright Act, R. S. C. c. 62. between works which prior British copyright, and those which prior British copyright, and these which prior British copyright, and therefore is a prior British copyright, and thereafter Canadian copyright is obtained by the production of the work, then, by s. 6, that local copyright is subject to be invaded by the importation of lawful British reprints. But if the Canadian copyright is first on the part of the author or his assigns, then, under s. 4, the monopoly is secured from all outside importations. The Imperial Parliament has sanctioned and reiterated colonial legislation whereby the possessor of a prior Canadian copyright is secured completely against all interference to the territorial extent of the Dominion, even as against English reproductions or copies made under a subsequent British copyright. Proprietor in England — Ignorance of Infringement—Evidence of Copyright.]—The plaintiffs, a company incorporated in England for the purpose of securing Canadian copyright, and of acquiring the protection of the Canadian Copyright Act, 1875, moved to restrain the defendants from offering for sale in Canada a collection of songs imported from New York, which contained songs covered by the plaintiffs' Canadian copyright:—Held, that neither the facts that the domicile of the plaintiffs was in London, England, nor that the defendants were ignorant of the plaintiffs' right, were defences to the plaintiffs' right, were defences to the plaintiffs' action. The affidavit of the plaintiffs' amanager, setting out their incorporation, and the acquisition of the copyright of the songs in question, which was in no way controverted, was held, for the purposes of the motion, sufficient evidence of copyright. The defendants were ordered to pay the costs of the action, sufficient evidence of copyright. The defendants were ordered to pay the costs of the action, sufficient evidence of copyright, in court, anglocanadian Music Publishers' Association (Limited) v. Winnifrith Brothers, 15 O. R. 1944.

Proprietor in England — Copyright Through Apont — Sterostyping, 1—A person resident in England who procures a book for valuable consideration, to be compiled for him, the compiler not reserving his rights, is the proprietor thereof, and entitled, either personally or through an agent in Canada, to copyright under the Copyright Act, R. S. C. c. 62. Printing and publishing the book from stereotype plates imported into Canada is a sufficient "printing" within the meaning of the Act, though no typographical work is done in preparation of the copies. American reprints of the plaintiff's copyright book added as an appendix to American reprints of the Bible imported into Canada, were held to be a violation of the plaintiff's rights, Froucde v, Parrisk, 27 O. R. 526, 23 A. R. 728.

Railway Ticket.]—A railway ticket is not a subject of copyright under the Act. Griffin v. Kingston and Pembroke R. W. Co., 17 O. R. 660.

Works of Fine Art—Imperial Act.]— The Imperial Act, 25 & 26 Vict. c. 68, an Act for amending the law relating to Copyright in Works of Fine Art, does not extend to the colonies, and copyright thereby conferred is confined to the United Kingdom. Graves v. Gorre, 32 O. R. 206.

CORONER.

Evidence — County Attorney Advising as to hiording of Verdeit, —At a coroner's inunity of the state of the

It is not improper for the county attorney acting for the prosecution to enter the juryroom, with the consent of the coroner, after the jury have reached a conclusion, where the object of the county attorney is to advise the jury as to the proper language to be employed in order to draw their verdict after it has been arrived at. Ib.

Evidence — Admissibility at Trial.] — A coroner's court is a criminal court, and the depositions of a witness before such court, who is subsequently charged with murder, cannot be received in evidence against him at the trial. Regina v. Hendershott, 26 O. R. 678.

Evidence—Admissibility at Trial.]—The depositions of a witness taken at a coroner's inquest without objection by him that his answers may tend to criminate him, and who is subsequently charged with an offence, are receivable in evidence against him at the trial. Regina v. Hendershott, 26 O. R. 678, overruled. Regina v. Williams, 28 O. R. 583, Not followed in Regina v. Hammond, 29 O. R. 211.

Excluding Counsel from Inquest.]—
A barrister cannot insist upon being present at a coroner's inquest, and upon examining and cross-examining the witnesses, &c., and can maintain no action against the coroner for excluding him from the room. Defendant in such an action having justified as coroner, it was held, on the authority of Garnett v. Ferrand, 6 B. & C. 611, that the pleu was good, for, 1. The coroner was not liable to a civil action for anything done in his judicial capacity; and, 2. He was authorized in what he did. In a second count the plantiff set out the facts, stating that as a barrister and attorney-at-law he had been employed by certain clients to attend on their behalf at an inquest held by the defendant as coroner on the body of one W., in the issue of which they were interested, and that the defendant unlawfully and maliciously, and without reasonable or probable cause, refused to allow him to act, and forcibly compelled him to desist:
—Held, bad, for the same reasons that the plea was sustained. Agnete v. Steveart, 21 t. G. R. 396.

Fire Inquest — Fees.] — Under 20 Vict. c. 36. the coroner is made the judge of the necessity for investigating into the cause of a fire; and therefore, to an application for a mandamus to the treasurer to pay him his fees, it was held no answer to shew that in the opinion of the reeve and others the inquiry was not called for:—Held, also, that the want of funds in the treasurer's hands was no answer, the payment not having been refused on that ground. In re Fergus and Cooley, 18 U. C. R. 341.

Form of Inquisition.]—Held, that the inquisition set out in this case was bad, for the principal was not sufficiently charged either with manslaughter or murder; and it was uncertain which crime it was intended to charge the others as aiding in, although they were said to have been present at the "murder aforesaid." Regina v. Breden, 16 U. C. R. 487.

Form of Inquisition—Concurrence of Jurors—Appending Names of Jurors.—A coroner's inquisition on the body of M. found that G. on, &c., at, &c., "did feloniously and maliciously kill and slay one M., against the peace of our Lady the Queen, her crown and dignity, in self-defence of him, the said G., without malice or intent to kill:"—Held, that it must be quashed, on the application of G., as not disclosing with certainty any criminal offence on his part. Semble, that it was also a fatal objection that twelve jurors did not concur in the finding. The Christian and surnames of all the jurors need not be appended to the inquisition where they are given in the body of it. Regina v. Golding, 30 U. C. R. 259.

Form of Inquisition—Constable Acting as Juvor—Juvor Giving Evidence.]—The caption to an inquisition finding the prisoners guilty of murder, stated that the inquest was held at H. &c., on the 11th and 15th days of January, in the 51st year of the reign of Her Majesty Queen Victoria, and the inquisition to be "an inquisition indented, taken for our Sovereign Lady the Queen." &c., "m view of the body of an infant child of A. W. (one of the prisoners) then and there lying, and upon the oath of " (giving the names of the jurors) "good and lawful men of the county, and who being then and there duly sworn and charged to inquire for our said Lady the Queen, when, where, how and by what means the said female child came to her death, do upon their oaths say," &c.:—Held, that the statement of the time of holding the inquest was sufficient; that it sufficiently appeared that the presentment was under oath: and that it need not be under seal; that there was a sufficient finding of the place where the alleged murder was committed: and of identification of the child murdered with that of the body of which the view was had. Regina v. Winegarner, 17 O. R. 208.

L., the constable to whom the coroner delivered the summons for the jury, was at the inquest sworn in as one of the jury, and was sworn and gave evidence as a witness; and Y., a juryman, was also sworn and gave evidence as a witness:—Held, that the fact of L. being such constable did not preclude him from being on the jury, nor did either of such positions preclude him from giving evidence: and so also Y. was not precluded. Ib.

Form of Warrant.]—A coroner's warrant to arrest J. C., reciting a coroner's inquisition, and stating the offence as follows: that J. C. "stands charged with having inflicted blows on the body of the said D. F.," and not shewing the place where the blows, if any, were inflicted, or the offence, if any, was committed, is bad. In re Carmichael, 10 L. J. 323.

Identifying Body.]— The inquisition was held to be defective in not identifying the body of the deceased as being the person with whose death the prisoner was charged; but the prisoner was recommitted, as the evidence shewed that a felony had been committed. Regina v. Berry, 9 F. R. 123.

Inquest on Sunday.]—A coroner's inquest held on Sunday is invalid. In re Cooper, 5 P. R. 256.

Insurance—Certificate of Loss.]—A coroner is a magistrate who may give a certificate of loss under an insurance police. Kerr v. British America Assurance Co., 32 U. C. 18, 569.

Malicious Verdict - Trespass.]-Plaintiff sued defendant in trespass, stating that acting as coroner he assaulted the plaintiff &c. The second count stated that defendant was acting as coroner, &c., and that a jury being duly sworn he held an inquisition on the body of one N. F., then lying dead, setting forth the finding of the jury, which shewed that deceased had died from the effects of laudanum administered according to a prescription by plaintiff and through culpable negligence on his part in not having given sumciently explicit directions, and charging that defendant maliciously and without reasonable cause issued his warrant for plaintiff's arrest and committal for wilful murder, on which plaintiff was arrested, &c. At the trial, on its being objected that defendant, as a coroner, was a Judge of a court of record, and that no action would lie against him for anything done in his judicial capacity, plaintiff proposed to shew that he had acted maliciously, and was therefore not protected, but without suggesting in what particular he had so acted. It was not disputed, however, that defendant had acted within his jurisdiction and super visum corporis, or that he had issued his warrant on the finding of the jury. On this the plaintiff was nonsuited:—Held, that as defendant was acting judicially, trespass would not lie against him; and that though the nonsuit did not appear so errone-ous as to warrant its being set aside, still, that if the plaintiff desired to present facts to the jury not suggested to them at the trial, he should be allowed to do so, on payment of costs. Garner v. Coleman, 19 C. P. 106.

Post-mortem Examination — Damages, 1—The wife of the plaintiff having died suddenly, the defendants, three practising physicians and surgeons, acting under a verbal direction from a coroner for the city where the death occurred and the body lay, entered the house of the plaintiff for the purpose of making and made there, a post-mortem examination of the dead body. The coroner had issued a warrant to impanel a jury for the purpose of holding an inquest on the body, but the warrant was afterwards withdrawn without the knowledge of the defendants. There was no consent in writing of the county crown attorney:—Held, that the coroner, having authority to hold an inquest upon the body, and having determined that it should be held, and having determined that it should be impanelling of the jury; that was a matter of procedure in the discretion of the coroner. Held, also, that the meaning of s.

12 (2) of R. S. O. 1897 c. 97, was that the coroner should not, without the consent of the Crown attorney, direct a post-morten examination for the purpose of determining whether an inquest should be held, but only where the coroner had determined to hold an inquest and gave the direction as part of the provision should be read differently, it was at all events merely directory, and did not render an act done by a surgeon in good faith, under the direction of a coroner, unlawful because the coroner had neglected to obtain the prescribed consent, where the act would be lawful if the consent had been obtained. Semble, also, that if the verdict for the plaintiff had been allowed to stand, the amount of damages assessed, $600, was excessive. Davidson v. Garrett, 30 O. R. 653.

Poundage.]—A coroner is not entitled to poundage on an attachment against a sheriff. In re Duggan, 2 U. C. R. 118.

Rider to Verdiet. —At an inquest held upon the body of a boy who had committed suicide, the verdict, after finding the cause of death, stated that from evidence submitted the jury judged that the boy's master, a medical man, had not done justice to him according to his agreement made with the boy's father in Scotland, in regard to his clothing and the labour he had to perform:—Held, that the latter part of the verdict was relevant and within the province of the jury; and although the evidence seemed to preponderate the other way, the court could not on that account after the finding. In re Miller, 15 U. C. R. 244.

Rider to Verdict — Intituling Affidacits.]—A coroner's jury found the cause of a death into which they were inquiring to have been disease, adding that it was accelerated by an over dose of certain frugs taken in excess, and improperly compounded, prescribed and administered by one of the constant of the property of the gross care-incomparation of the gross care-incomparation of the property of Summoning Jury.]—The coroner, under a special writ of venire, is not required to return a panel of thirty-six jurors, 36 Geo. III. c. 2, and the general jury law, being applicable only to the sheriff and not to the coroner. Fraser v. Dickson, 5 U. C. R. 231.

Summoning Jury.]—48 Geo. III. c. 13, s. 5, gives no authority to the coroner to summon a special jury. Where the sheriff is interested some indifferent person appointed by the court must strike the jury. Clandinan v. Dickson, 8 U. C. R. 281.

Territorial Jurisdiction.]—A coroner for the county of Carleton was held to have jurisdiction to hold an inquest in the city of Ottawa, situate in that county. Regina v. Berry, 9 P. R. 123.

Witness Fees—Medical Practitioner.]—
A medical witness attended during two inquests held on fifty-two posts morten examinations were made.—Held, entitled, under 13 & 14 Yief. and, only to 25s., for each day's attendance, (not for each body), together with his mileage in travelling. In re Askin and Charteris, 13 U. C. R, 498.

Witness Fees—Post Mortem.]—Where a coroner, under C. S. U. C. c. 125, summoned a second medical practitioner as a witness at an inquest, and to perform a post mortem exami. ation, but it was not shewn that such practitioner had been named in writing and his attendance required by a majority of the first properties of the consurer for the fees of such witness, a provided for by s. 3, smanner on the context of the consurer for the fees of such witness, and application for such mandamus, the county treasurer as well as the coroner must be called upon. I. APPEALS AS TO COSTS.

By-law in Question in Action Repealed.—After the rendering of the judgment by the court of Queen's bench refusing to quash a by-law passed by the corporation of the village of Huntingdon, the by-law in question was repealed. On appeal to the supreme court of Canada:—Held, that the only matter in dispute between the parties being a mere question of costs, the court would not entertain the appeal. Moir v. Village of Huntingdon, 19 S. C. R. 363.

Defendant Ordered to Pay all Costs.]—Where a defendant is ordered to pay all costs of the action, but no further relief is given by the judgment, an appeal from the judgment is not an appeal for costs within the meaning of s. 65 O. J. Act. A judgment ordering the defendant to pay the whole costs of the action cannot be supported unless the plaintiff is entitled to bring the action. Dick v. Yates, 18 Ch. D. 76, followd. Fleming v. City of Toronto, 20 O. R. 547, 19 A. R. 318.

Discretion.]—The court will not interfere with the discretion exercised as to costs, unless the Judge whose order is appealed from has proceeded upon some erroneous principle of law or upon some misapprehension of the facts of the case. Young v. Thomas, [1892] 2 Ch. 134, foilowed. It is not intended by Rule 1170 (a) that the discretion of the appealate tribunal should be substituted for that of the judicial officer whose decision is appealed from. Campbell v. Wheter, 17 P. R. 289.

Discretion of Court Appealed From.]
—It is only when some fundamental principle of justice has been ignored or some other gross error appears that the supreme court will interfere with the discretion of provincial courts in awarding or withholding costs. Smith v. Saint John City Railteay Company, Consolidated Electric Company v. Atlantic Trust Compeny, Consolidated Electric Company v. Pratt, 28 S. C. R. 603.

Erroneous Principle—Misapprehension of Fact.]—The rule as to an appeal on the question of costs appears to be this, that if, in making the order complained of, there has been any violation of principle, or the court has proceeded on a wrong general rule, or if the discretion of the court has been exercised upon any misapprehension of fact, a court of appeal will interfere, but not otherwise. Wansley v. Smallwood, II A. R. 439.

Erroneous Principle—Recovery of Land -Construction of Will-Improvements Un-der Mistake of Title. The plaintiffs claimed a farm, a portion of the estate of their father, under an executory devise over to them in his will, after the life estate of their brother, The defendants were the executors of the will of the brother's grantee, and were possession of the farm, asserting that their grantor's estate was in fee. The plaintiffs claimed, in the alternative, as two of the heirs-at-law of their brother, upon the ground that the conveyance to the defendants' testator was void for mental incapacity and fraud. The plaintiffs succeeded upon their first contention, and were awarded possession of the farm, subject to payment for the defendants improvements, less the rents received them :-Held, that, as the whole estate of the original testator was not before the court, nor the executors, nor all the persons representing that estate, it was impossible to give costs out of it in the ordinary sense, and an appeal lay from the judgment of the high court ordering the costs to be paid out of the farm in question, which was wrong in prin-The costs should be disposed of, in the manner mentioned in the judgment, as in an ordinary action for the recovery of land, in which the plaintiffs had succeeded, subject to a claim for and a balance found due to the defendants for improvements under mistake of title. Crawford v. Broddy, 18 P. R.

Erroneous Principle.]—An appeal lies to a divisional court from the order of a trial Judge who has awarded costs on a wrong principle. McCaudand v. Quebec Fire Ins. Co., 25 O. R. 330.

Lapse of Time Curing Defect Complained of, —Held, that as the valuation roll sought to be set aside in this case had been duly homologated and not appealed against within the delay provided in Article 1061 (M. C.), the only matter in dispute between the parties was a mere question of costs, and therefore the court would not entertain the appeal. Moir v. Village of Huntingdon, 19 S. C. R. 363, followed. McKay v. Tournship of Hunchinbrook, 24 S. C. R. 55.

Receiver—Ex Parte Order,]—After judgment a receiver may be appointed ex parte in case of emergency or where there is danger apprehended in the disposal of property. Re Ports, [1893] 1 Q. B. at p. 632, and Minter v. Kent, &c., Land Society, 11 Times L. R. 197, referred to. And where ex parte orders were made in respect of two parcels of stock which the plaintiff feared might be disposed of if notice were given, and in toth cases costs were given to the applicant:—Held, that the disposition of the costs should not be reviewed on motion to continue the receiver, McLean v. Allen, 14 P. R. 84, distinguished, Stark v. Ross, 17 P. R. 257.

Submitting to Order.]—On an application by an insurance company to stay proceedings in an action on a policy, pending in an action on a policy, pending the statutory as to the amount of loss under the statutory as to the amount of loss under the statutory as to the amount of the statutory as the company administration of the policy; and further ordered, but without out defendants' consent, that either they might, after the award, apply to the court in respect of the costs of the arbitration. On a subsequent application an order was made by a Judge in chambers for defendants to pay a part of such costs:—Held, that the court had jurisdiction to deal with the costs; and moreover, that defendants having submitted to the order of the court, and taken the benefit of it, could not object to the order of the Judge made under it. Hughes v. British America Insurance Co., Hughes v. London Assurance Co., 7 O. R. 465.

Successful Litigant in Effect Paying Costs.]—See Lamb v. Cleveland, 19 S. C. R. 78.

Supreme Court—Appeal Involving Costs Only.]—In order to evoid expense the supreme court of Canada will, when possible, quash an appeal involving a question of costs only, though there may be jurisdiction to entertain it. Schlomann v. Dowker, 30 S. C. R. 323.

Wrong Principle.]—Where in an action in the county court costs upon the scale of the division court only are given an appeal will lie to a divisional court if the Judge of the court below has proceeded upon a wrong principle. Where an action is properly brought in the county court the plaintiffs should not be deprived of their costs of such action by reason of what they may have done pendente lite. Grove v. Bender, 20 C. L. T. Occ. N. 95.

II. GIVING AND WITHHOLDING COSTS.

1. In General.

Accidental Omission to Award Costs.]

—The trial Judge reserved judgment and afterwards delivered a written judgment in the plaintiff's favour, but inadverently omitted to make any order as to costs:—Held, that the case came within Rule 338, and that he Judge had power even after an appeal to a divisional court, which left his judgment undisturbed, to make an order as to costs. Fritz v. Hobson, 14 Ch. D. 542, followed. Hurdy v. Pickard, 12 P. R. 428.

See Re Great Western Advertising Co. v. Roiner, 9 P. R. 494.

Argument Conducted Unsatisfactority.]—The court being dissatisfied with the mode in which the argument was conducted, and the brief of the pleadings had been prepared, though it allowed a demurer to the bill, liquidated the costs at $10 only. McFadyen v. Steuert, 11 Gr. 272.

Costs not Asked in Rule.]—Costs not asked in rule, though they were at the bar:—

Held, no objection, as they are in the discretion of the court under the Judicature Act. In re Peck and Town of Galt, 46 U. C. R. 211.

Doubtful Point.]—The question as to jurisdiction being important, and open to reasonable doubt, no costs were allowed. Re North York Election, Paterson v. Mulock, 32 (c. P. 458.

Equal Division of Jucges.]—The two Judges who composed the divisional court at the hearing of this case disagreeing, a motion to set aside the judgment of the trial Judge in favour of the plaintiff was dismissed with costs. Consineau v. City of London Fire Ins. Co., 15 O. R. 329.

Illegible Affidavits.] — Where affidavits used on a motion were badly written, scarcely begible and difficult to decipher, the court refused the plaintiff all costs connected with their preparation, although the costs of the suit were given him. Burnham v. Garvey, 27 (r. 89).

Indemnified Defendant.] — One defendant agreed to save another harmless as regards the costs of an action. In the written retainer of the latter to his solicitors it was provided that the costs should be charged to the former defendant. The plaintiffs having been ordered to pay the costs of the defendants:—Held, by the court below, 16 P. R. 346, a proper case to allow two sets of costs, and that no disability existed on the part of the indemnified defendant to tax and recover his costs against the plaintiffs. Jarvis v. Great Western R. W. Co., S C. P. 289, and Stevenson v. City of Kingston, 31 C. P. 333, distinguishel:—Held, by the divisional court on appeal, that the indemnified defendant was not entitled to costs against the plaintiffs. Jarvis v. Great Western R. W. Co., S C. P. 289, and Stevenson v. City of Kingston, 31 C. P. 333, followed. Meriden Britannia Company v Braden, 16 P. R. 346, 410. Affirmed in appea, 17 P. R. 77.

Indulgence.]—On motion for leave to answer notwithstanding an order pro confesso, where the proposed answer was not properly sworn:—Held, that it could only be granted on the terms of paying the costs of the application and of the order pro confesso; but if the answer had been properly sworn, the application would have been allowed without costs. Merrill v. Erans, 1 Ch. Ch. 303.

Infringement of Copyright.]—The defendants were ordered to pay the costs of the action for infringement of a copyright although they had acted innocently, and at once expressed regret, inasmuch as they had contested the plaintiffs' right in court. Anglo-Canadian Music Publishers Ass'n. (Limited) v. Wimnfrith Brothers, 15 O. R. 104.

Inquiry Justifiable.]—Where the petitioner had carefully abstained from ascribing frond or fraudulent conduct to the plaintiff, and the circumstances were such as to invite discussion, the court in dismissing the petition did so without costs. Ricker v. Ricker, 27 Gr. 576.

Irregularity.] — Where the defendant's solicitor was served with a short notice of motion, which was admitted to be defective:

—Held, that the defendant was not entitled to the costs of counsel attending on the motion merely to shew that the notice was irregular. Waller v. Claris, 11 P. R. 130.

Liability to Solicitor—Indemnity.]—If the client be not liable to pay costs to his solicitor, he cannot recover these costs against the opposite party. Jarvis v. Great Western R. W. Co., 8 C. P. 280, and Meriden Britannia Co. v. Braden, 17 P. R. 77, followed. This rule applied to a case where the defence to an action for damages for personal injuries sustained by a workman in the employment of the defendants was undertaken by a guarantee company who had contracted to indemnify the defendants against such claims, and who employed their own solicitors to defend the action, exercising a right given by the contract: and extended, beyond the actual costs of the defence, to subsequent costs arising out of an application made by the plainitif's solicitors, where the defeading solicitors continued to act upon the retainer of the guarantee company. Walker v. Gurney-Tilden Co., 19 P. R. 12.

Municipal Arbitration.]—The power given by the Municipal Act, R. S. O. 1897 c. 223, s. 460, to arbitrators under that Act "to award the payment by any of the parties to the other of the costs of the arbitration, or of any portion thereof," should receive the same construction as Consolidated Rule 1130; the discretion given is a legal discretion, and subject to the rule that when the claimant has been guilty of no misconduct, omission or neglect such as to induce the court to deprive him of his costs, the unsuccessful party should bear the whole costs of the litigation, In re Pattullo and Town of Orangeville, 31 O. R. 192.

New Grounds of Attack. —The applicants for an order quashing a by-law before moving had appeared on a notice, given by the control of the con

New Grounds of Defence.]—Costs withheld from the successful respondent where the objection as to laches was substantiated by affidavits filed for the first time in the Cruster of appeal. MeVicar v. McLaughlin, 16 P. R. 450.

Novel Point.]—Demurrer overruled without costs, as it was the first occasion the point decided under it had arisen since the Judicature Act. Rumohr v. Marx, 29 Gr. 179, Novel Point.]—In this case the action was dismissed without costs as the point decided was a new one, and the statute was not plainly expressed. Wallace v. Lobo School Trustees, 11 O. R. 648.

Point not Taken.]—In an action for bodily injuries where the extinction of the right of action by prescription was not pleaded or raised in the courts below and upon an appeal the prescription was judicially noticed and the action dismissed, the appeal was allowed without costs. City of Montreal v. MGGe, 30 S. C. R. 582. Point not Taken.]—Where the only deferce set up failed, and the ground on which the court decided against the plantiff was not taken, or even pointed to in any manner by the answer, the court, though it dismissed the bill, refused defendant his costs of the suit. McAnnany v. Turnbull, 10 Gr. 298.

Prohibition—Forum Chosen in Deferction to Judge's Views.]—On a motion for a writ of prohibition to restrain an action in a division court:—Held, that as the learned Judge who tried the case did not allow county court costs in similar cases, and as the plaintiff was obliged to sue in the division court at the risk of prohibition, or in the county court and lose his costs, the defendant should get no costs of this motion, unless he should successfully resist the suit to be subsequently brought to recover the amount of the note. Re Young v. Morden, 10 P. R. 276.

Settlement—Tender of Costs.]—After issue joined, plaintiff and defendant settled the action on condition of defendant paying the costs incurred, which were stated at a certain sum by plaintiff's attorney, and defendant gave his note therefor payable before the assizes. On the first day of the assizes, defendant's agent tendered the amount, reserving to himself the right of taxation; and the plaintiff's attorney refused to receive it, except unconditionally. The agent afterwards tendered it unconditionally, but it was then refused, because additional costs had been incurred; and the plaintiff's attorney took a verdict for nominal damages. The court set the verdict aside on payment of the sum originally agreed upon, and made the plaintiff's attorney pay the costs of the application. Rutten v. Robertson, 2 U. C. R. 37.

Slander—Verdict for $1.]—Where, in an action of slander, the jury returned a verdict for the plaintiff for $1. the trial Judge refused to deprive the plaintiff of costs, his conduct not having been reprehensible, and the small verdict being explained by the condition of the defendant at the time the words were uttered. Bell v. Wilson, 19 P. R. 167.

Strict Rights. —The defendants having paid into court twenty cents less than the correct amount due by them, the plaintiff was held entitled to full costs. Henderson v. Bank of Hamilton, 25 O. R. 641, 22 A. R. 414.

Technical Objection.]—Appeal quashed with costs where, upon the merits, there appeared to be no reason to differ from the court below. Teskey v. Neil, 15 P. R. 244.

Tender.]—Discussion as to the effect of the defences of tender and payment into court upon the question of costs and otherwise, Rules 632-640 considered. Davis v. National Assurance Co., 16 P. R. 116.

Tender.]—Where the amount of compensation tendered by the Crown in an expropriation proceeding was found by the court to be sufficient, and there was no dispute about the amount of interest to which the defendant was entitled, but the same was not tendered by the Crown although allowed by the court, costs were refused to either party. Where mortgages were made parties to an expropriation proceeding and they had appeared and were represented at the trial by counsel, although they did not dispute the amount of compensation, they were allowed their costs. The Queen v. Wallace, 6 Ex. C. R. 264.

Towage—Tender.]—Where, in an action for towage services, the defendants paid into court an amount sufficient to liberally compensate the plaintiffs for the services rendered, they were given their proper costs against the plaintiffs. Hine v. The "Thomas J. Keully," 6 Ex. C. R. 318.

Undefended Action.] — Where it was held that a legatee having signed a receipt, not being by law bound to execute a release, no costs were given against him in an action undefended to compel him to execute a release. See Kaiser v. Boynton, 7 O. R. 143.

Undertaking Before Action.]—Where an offer to do certain work, which would abate an injury to suppliant's property caused by a public work, was made in writing by the Crown and its receipt acknowledged by the suppliant before action brought, but such offer was not repeated in the statement of defence (although filled subsequently pursuant to leave given), the court, in decreeing the suppliant relief in terms of the undertaking, refused costs to either party. Fairbanks v. The Queen, 4 Ex. C. R. 130.

Venue—Party not in Fault.]—Costs were not given against the plaintiffs where they obtained a change of venue to expedite the trial because of the illness of a witness, they not being in fault. Mercer Co. v. Massey-Harris Co., 16 P. R. 171.

2. Conduct of the Parties.

Charges not Sustained.] — When the plaintiff made charges of improper conduct against the administratrix, which were not sustained in evidence, he was ordered to pay all costs other than of an ordinary administration suit. Hodgins v. McVeil, 9 Gr. 305.

Common Mistake.]—Held, that the costs in this case having been incurred in a proceeding consented to under a common mistake of parties as to the proper tribunal to decide the question, each party should bear his own costs. Dalby v. Bell. 29 Gr. 336.

Delay and Acquiescence.]—Where defendants set up a defence to a bill, which if tenable would have formed sufficient grounds for their having taken steps to set aside the transaction, which it was now sought to enforce, but had not done so, although twelve years had elapsed since the net was done which they questioned, and which it was shewn they had all the while been aware of, the court, under the circumstances, ordered them to pay the costs of the suit. Miller v. Ostrander, 12 Gr. 349.

Delay—Want of Candour, I—In this case the verdict, though irregularly obtained, was set aside without costs, as defendant's attorney had not raised the objection upon which the verdict was set aside until after it had been obtained, and his conduct was wanting in candour in not drawing attention to such objections to the precedure as he intended to insist upon until the day before the trial, although he might have done so some two months before. Cushman v. Reid, 20 C. P. 147.

Delay.]—Costs refused on ground of delay in proof of claim by dowress. Hyde v. Barton, S. P. R. 205. Delay in Taking Objection.]—An appeal was allowed without costs where an objection to jurisdiction was not taken in limine. Jacobs v. Robinson, 16 P. R. 1.

Delay in Making Objection to Title.]

—I near the circumstances of this case, it was held that the vendee had not, by his conduct and delay, waived his right to object to the title, but as he had not raised the objection in the proper manner at the proper time, he was allowed no costs of his action.

Mason v. Armstrong, 22 O. R. 542.

Demurrer Invited.]—A count having been drawn so as to invite a demurrer, the demurrer was overruled without costs. Smith v. Ancaster Township, 45 U. C. R. 86.

Discreditable Defence.] — On application for an injunction against a corporation, though refused, the corporation were not allowed their costs, as their conduct in the matter in question was highly discreditable. Durby v. City of Toronto, 17 O. R. 554.

Dismissal of Action for Penalties— Defendant Guilty of Bribery.]—An order was made dismissing an action for penalties under the Pontinion Election Act, 37 Vict. c. 9, for wilful delay in prossecution, without costs, for the reason that a primal facie case of bribery was established against the defendant, which he had not attempted to contradict. Mice v. Rec. 10 P. R. 218.

Dower—No Demand.]—Although in this case the plaintiff was entitled to judgment of seizin, yet as there was no demand made and the defendants were always ready and willing to assign the dower the plaintiff was not entitled to costs. Malone v. Malone, 17 O. R. 101.

Each Party at Fault.]—The plaintiff, by his bill, did not submit to do what he was bound to do as the price of the relief asked; and the defendant asked relief which the court could not grant. The court on pronouncing a decree refused costs to either party. Clemow v. Booth, 27 Gr. 15.

Ex Parte Judgment.] — In this case judgment having been granted ex parte, it was ordered that there should be no costs of the defendant's motion for relief under Rule 358, which was granted. Jackson v. Gardiner, 19 P. R. 137.

Extravagant Claim.]—Where the tender was not unreasonable and the claim very extravagant, the claimant was not given costs although the amount of the award exceeded somewhat the amount tendered. McLeod v. The Queen, 2 Ex. C. R. 106.

Failure to Make Proper Admissions.]
—In an administration action commenced by writ the plaintiff was allowed upon taxation only such costs as would have been taxed had be begun his proceedings by a summary application under Rule 965. The defendant claimed to have taxed to him and set off his additional costs incurred by reason of the less expensive procedure not having been adopted. He had not in the action admitted the right of the plaintiff to an account, but had bleaded a release, and had not objected to the procedure adopted:—Held, that the defendant's additional costs had not been incurred by reason of the plaintiff's improper or unnecessary proceedings, but by his own conduct in not admitting the right to an account and in not objecting to the plaintiff's manner of proceeding at the earliest possible stage; and the case therefore did not come within Rule 1195. Semble, it would have been proper to raise the question at the hearing; but the taxing officer had jurisdiction under Rule 1195, without an order, to "look into" it. Moon v. Caldwell, 15 P. R. 159.

False Answers. — The court, although unable upon the evidence to grant the relief asked, refused defendants their costs up to the original hearing, in consequence of the untruthfulness of their answers. Finlayson v. Mullard, 10 Gr. 130.

False Denial of Facts.]—When the defendant had by his answer denied the agreement to convey, which, however, was clearly established by his own evidence, he was refused his costs. Ferguson v. Ferguson, 28 Gr. 380.

False Statements in Answer.]—Costs refused where action dismissed but successful defendant in his answer swore to what was unrue, or to what he did not know to be true. McKay v. Davidson, 13 Gr. 498.

Fraud not Proved.] — Costs withheld from the defendant because he had misled the plaintiff as to his power to make an exchange, and declined to perform his contract on grounds some of which were untenable, and also alleged fraud which he failed to prove. Tenute v. Walsh, 24 O. R. 309.

Impugning Motives.]—Where an auswer improperly impugned the motives of the solicitor who filed the bill, the court, although it dismissed the bill with costs, directed the costs of the answer to be disallowed to the defendant. McKenzie v. Yielding, 11 Gr. 405.

Inequitable Defence.]—In a suit instituted to compel payment of the amount of a policy of insurance against fire the company raised the defence of ultra vires, which the court sustained and dismissed the bill, but refused the company their costs of suit, as in opposing the plaintiff's claim they were resisting upon inequitable grounds the payment of a just debt. Lawson v. Canada Farmers' Ins. Co., 28 Gr. 525.

Inspector of Estate—Breach of Duty.]
—Where the appellant was an inspector of an insolvent estate and participated in arrangements intended to secure a fraudulent preference to a particular creditor the appeal was allowed with costs but the action against him was dismissed without costs and an order made that no costs should be allowed in any of the courts below. Brigham v. Banque Jacques-Cartier, 30 S. C. R. 429.

Misleading Conduct.]—The beneficial owner of land omitted to have the paper title thereto in his own name, and thus enabled his son, who held such title, to mislead varties into accepting a mortgage thereon from the son. The court, thouch unable to refuse him relief, in a suit brought to set aside such mortgage, under the circumstances refused him his costs. Gray v. Coucher, 15 Gr. 419.

Misleading Conduct.]—In this case the motion to quash the by-law was refused, but without costs, as the applicant had been led into his position by the indiscretion of certain members of the corporation. In re Workman and Town of Lindsay, 7 O. R. 425.

Misrepresentation Before Action.]—Costs were refused to successful claimants where there had been a misrepresentation innocently made by their agent, to whom they had not communicated facts within their knowledge. Smith v. The Queen, 2 Ex. C. R. 417.

Mortgage—Tender.)—Where the defendant, who had covenanted that only $664 was due on a mortgage held by a building society on property purchased by plaintiff. In his answer admitted an error in the computation of the amount due to the society, and offered to pay the difference between the $664 and what he alleged was the cash value of the mortgage and costs up to that time:—Held, that in the event of the society accepting present payment of the cash value, the defendant was entitled to his costs of suit, subsequent to answer. Stark v. Shepherd, 29 Gr. 316.

Mortgage—Undue Haste.]—Where a bill had been filed on a mortgage on which orly a small sum for interest had become due two days previously, and the defendant's solicitor had called at the plaintiff's solicitor's office and left word that he was ready to pay the money, the court refused the plaintiff his costs, and held that the bill was unnecessarily and improperly filed. McLegn v. Cross, 3 Ch. Ch. 432.

Mortgage—Unsuccessful Claim to Consolidate. —The defendants before action tendered, with the amount due on the first mortgage, an assignment thereof, which the plainmort bound and declined to give, mader R. S. O. 1887 c. 192, s. 2, and subsequently but without tender the defendant offered to take a reconveyance:—Held, that the plaintiffs' claim to consolidate was not misconduct so as to deprive them of their costs of the action. Stark v. Reid, 29 O. R. 257.

Negligence.] — Under a sequestration against the defendant, property on his land had been seized, to which a third party laid claim, and which the bailiff released to the claimant upon his own undertaking. Upon inquiry by the plaintiff into the circumstances, he released the property, but not until after notice given by the claimant of a motion in the nature of one for an examination pro interesse suo: — Held, that the claimant, by leaving his property in the custody of defendant, had brought the difficulty on himself, and was therefore not entitled to the costs of the application. Harvey v. Taylor, 1 Ch. Ch. 353.

Personal Charges.]—Remarks as to the unnecessary introduction of personal charges and assertions of motives in resisting an application for mandamus in this case and costs refused in dismissing it. In re Stanton and Board of Audit of Elgin, 3 O. R. Sc.

Personal Misconduct by Members of Council.]—The wrong (if any) complained of, being a personal wrong on the part of the members of the council who voted for the resolution:—Quarre, if costs were adjudged to the plaintiff, whether they should not be paid by those members. Marsh v. Huron College, 27 Gr. 605.

Prohibition—Unmeritorious Deferce.]— A summons for a writ of prohibition to a division court was made absolute without costs, there being ne meritorious defence. Kinsey v. Roche, S P. R. 515.

Setting Up Untenable Defences, —
The appeal of one of the defendants, a bank, was allowed and the bill against them dismissed, but as they set up a claim in their original answer, which was urged on appeal and could not be maintained, they were held not entitled to their costs of defence or of the appeal. Bailey v. Jellett, 9 A. R. 187.

Solicitor Stating Impertinent Matter. |-The plaintiff's attorney having stated impertinent and irrelevant matter is his affidavit, was ordered to pay the costs of the appl'action. Anonymous, 4 P. R. 242. See also Corley v. Roblin, 5 L. J. 225.

Suppression of the Facts. |- It is within the power of the court or a Judge, upon an application to discharge a defendant from custody, to impose upon him the term that he shall bring no action against the plaintiff: but it should only be imposed where the plaintiff is shewn to have been entirely frank and open in his application for the order for arrest, and to have had reasonable grounds for the statements he has laid before the Judge. The circumstances of this case did not warrant such a term being imposed; for the plaintiff was aware of the circumstances and the publicity of the defendant's departure in 1891, and conveyed a false impression when he swore that the defendant then "absconded from this Province," For the same reason For the same reason the defendant was entitled to the costs of his application to be discharged from custody. Scane v. Coffey, 15 P. R. 112.

Tampering With Informant.]—A conviction was quashed, without costs, where it appeared that the defendant had attempted to tamper with the informant. Regina v. Ryam, 10 O. R. 254.

Undue Haste—Charges not Sustained.]—When a plaintiff, without proper inquiry into facts, and with undue haste, filed a bill in this court to enforce a judgment at law, in which he made charges of fraudulent practices against the defendant, the court, while granting him the relief to which he was strictly entitled, refused him his costs of the suit, and ordered him to pay the costs of the defendant. Neale v. Winter, 9 Gr. 261.

Unmeritorious Defence.]—In this case the defendant was refused his costs, as the ground on which he had succeeded did not go to the merits. Regina v. Sparham, 8 O. R. 570.

Unmeritorious Use of Name.] — No costs were given to defendant in an action to restrain him from using a certain designation of his college as he had sought by the use of the name to advantage himself in an unmeritorious way. Robinson v. Bogle, 18 O. R. 387.

Untrue Plea—Statute 4 Anne c. 16.]— See McLeod v. Torrance, 3 U. C. R. 174.

3. Divided Success.

Demurrer Successful in Part.]—Held, that the demurrer being partially successful and partially unsuccessful, neither party should get costs. Attorney-General v. Midland R. W. Co., 3 O. R. 511.

Different Branches.]—Held, that inasmuch as the plaintiff succeeded in the only branch of the case argued before the divisional court, she should get her costs of that appeal, but as to the rest of the suit, to save the expense and trouble of apportionment, no costs should be given or received. Gough v. Beach, 6 O. R. 639.

Failure in Main Object.]—The plaintiff having failed in that part of a suit which rendered a bill necessary, and as the other objects of the suit could have been attained by less expensive proceedings, and it being considered that in case the latter course had been adopted the costs to the insolvent estate would have been about equal to the costs incred by it in defending the suit, no costs were given to either party. Darling v. Wilson, 16 Gr. 255.

Patent Action.]—In a suit seeking to restrain the use by defendant of an oven, which had been the subject of a patent in favour of the plaintiff, the plaintiff having succeeds as to part only of his claim, no costs were given to either party up to the hearing. A reference as to damages having been directed, subsequent costs were ordered to abide the result. Hundre v. Carrick, 28 Gr. 489.

Rectification of Mortgage, 1—The court refused in this case to reform an instrument on parol evidence, although satisfied that the plantiffs ought to have the case been one depending on the weight in the case been one depending on the weight of the trained would have dismissed it with costs; but relief would have dismissed it with costs; but as the bill contained a prayer for forcelosure, that relief was afforded the plaintiffs, subject to the payment of such costs as the defendant, an assignee in insolvency, had incurred in resisting a rectification of the mortgage. Dominion Loan & Savings Society v. Darling, 27 Gr. 68.

Several Defences.] — Where defendants had set up several grounds of defence on which much evidence was gone into, and the court without going into these defences, dismissed the plaintiff's bill on a ground not argued, and which might have been taken by denurrer to the bill:—Held, that the defendants were notwithstanding, upon the authorities, entitled to the whole costs of their defence. Simpson v. Grant, 5 Gr. 267.

Several Grounds of Appeal.]—The plaintiff appealed from the report of the master, stating eleven objections thereto. On the argument he abandoned one, two were found in his favour, and the remaining eight were decided against him, but they embraced only four distinct questions. Under the circumstances, the court, instead of giving one set of costs to the plaintiff and another to the defendants, directed the costs of the appeal gently to be taxed to the defendants, deducting therefrom one-fourth in respect of the jartial success of the plaintiff. Ferguson v. Fronteauc, 21 Gr. 188.

See McGuire v. Donaldson, Tay. 247; Camcron v. McLean, Tay. 381; Jeffrey v. Lawrence, 5 O. S. 317; Harper v. Ward, M. T. 4 Vict.; Goodall v. Glen, 6 U. C. R. 14; Jones v. Marshall, 11 U. C. R. 204.

5. Good Cause.

In an action for seduction it appeared that the wrong complained of was pertly attributable to the culpable conduct of the girl's parents, and the jury gave a verdict for the defendant, but declared that they desired him not to get the costs, whereupon judgment was directed to be entered for him without costs:

—Held, that good cause was shewn why costs should not be given to the defendant within Rule 428, which declares that where an action is tried by a jury the costs shall follow the event, unless, upon application made at the trial, for good cause shewn, the Judge or court shall otherwise order. Walmsley v. Mitchell, 5 O. R. 427.

Where, in an action for libel, the plaintiff obtained a verdict for twenty cents damages:
—Held, that no certificate or order for full costs was necessary, and that the plaintiff could be deprived of such costs for good cause only. Wilson v. Roberts, 11 P. R. 412: Garnett v. Bradlev, 3 App. Cas. 544, followed. Wellbanks v. Conger, (2), 12 P. R. 447.

The court cannot look behind or beyond the

The court cannot look behind or beyond the finding of the jury as to the right of a party to recover a verdict, and therefore the cause here alleged for depriving the plaintiff of costs, viz., that he was really not entitled to recover, as shewn by the result of a trial of substantially the same issues before another forum, could not be regarded. Ib.

An action by the bailiff of one division court against the bailiff of another division court to recover the proceeds of goods seized and sold by the latter, such goods being at the time of such seizure and sale already under seizure by the plaintiff upon executions in his hands against the execution debtor, was tried before the Judge a county court, without a jury, who held that the plaintiff was entitled to recover, but, under the circumstances, de-prived the plaintiff of his costs, and ordered that the defenant's costs of the action, and the costs of the seizure and sale, should be deducted from the amount of the judgment. On appeal from such exercise of discretion, this court reversed the decision of the learned Judge, and ordered judgment to be entered for the plaintiff with costs. Hagarty, C. J. O., reserved his opinion as to the existence of any right in any Judge to make a defendant pay the costs of a plaintiff who has failed to establish a right to recover, or to make a plaintiff who substantially proved his right to recover, pay the costs of the defendant. Per Patterson, J.A.—Rule 428 gives full discretion over the apportionment of costs, and in proper cases to deprive the successful party of costs, but does not extend to make any party, whether plaintiff or defendant, who is wholly successful in his action or defence, pay his defeated opponent's costs. Per Osler, J.A.—
The jurisdiction in question is one which existed in the old court of chancery, though the circumstances in which it was exercised, were of a very special and unusual character. Mitchell v. Vandusen, 14 A. R. 517.

In an action for libel, the jury found that the defendant was guilty of libelling, but that the plaintiff had sustained no damage. The trial Judge dismissed the action, but ordered the defendant to pay the plaintiff's costs, and gave the latter judgment therefor. The de-fendant thereupon moved in the divisional court against the judgment for costs, which that court varied by ordering the action to be dismissed with costs, and the plaintiff having appealed to this court from the judgment at the trial, dismissing the action, as also from the judgment of the divisional court :- Held, that although Rule 428 gives to the Judge or court the power of depriving any of the parties to an action, plaintiff or defendant, of their costs; it does not confer the power of compelling a successful party to pay the costs of an unsuccessful party. Mitchell v. costs of an unsuccession party. Affectively, Vandusen, 14 A. R. 517, considered, approved and followed:—Held, also, allowing the appeal of the plaintiff from the judgment at the trial, that a venire de novo should be awarded. Wills v. Carman, 14 A. R. 656. See also Bush v. McCormack, 20 O. R. 497.

By R. S. O. 1887 c. 52, s. 2, a successful party on an application for a writ of prohibition is entitled to and should be awarded costs, unless the court in the proper exercise of a wise discretion can see good cause for depriving such party of them: and such party should not be deprived of costs unless there appear impropriety of conduct which induced the litigation, or impropriety in the conduct thereof. Under the circumstances of this case, reported 12 P. R. 450, the defendant was allowed costs of a successful motion for prohibition to a division court. Re MeLeod v. Emigh (2), 12 P. R. 503.

The jury found a verdict for the plaintiff on his claim for $200, and for the defendants on their counterclaim for $100, and stated that they wished the plaintiff to have full costs and the defendants to have no costs, and the Judge gave effect to the expression of their wishes as to costs:—Held, that the recommendation of the jury did not constitute good cause for depriving the defendants of the costs of the counterclaim. Weaver v. Sawyer, 16 A. R. 422.

In an action tried by a jury, where the defendant recovers on a counterclaim, the costs should be on the scale of the court in which the action is brought by the plaintiff, unless the Judge for good cause makes a different order. The fact that the recovery is for a sum within the jurisdiction of an inferior court is not good cause for such an order. Foster v, Viegel, 13 P. R. 133.

When the special jury before which an action of libel was tried returned to the court-room after considering their verdict, the foreman announced a verdict for the defendant. He then asked if the jury had anything to do with the question of costs. The trial Judge replied that he thought not, but if any recommendation was made it would be considered. The foreman then announced that in the opinion of the jury each party ought to pay his own costs. Upon a motion by the plaintiffs to the trial Judge for an order disposing of the costs in the way recommended by the jury :- Held, that the recommendation of the jury as to costs was not a part of their verdict, but if so it was an announcement of a result at which they had no right in law to arrive; the verdict was complete before anything was said as to costs. If the verdict for the defendant would not have been given except with the recommendation as to costs, that would be matter for consideration upon a motion for a new trial, and not upon the present motion. Upon the motion the plaintiffs filed affidavits of some of the jurors, stating that they would not have agreed in a verdict for the defendant if they had thought the result would be to throw upon the plaintiffs the whole costs of the action: — Held, that these affidavits were not receivable in evidence. Regina v. Fellowes, 19 U. C. R. 48, followed. Jamieson v. Harker, 18 U. C. R. 590, distinguished. It was also contended by the plaintiffs that the trial Judge should make an order depriving the successful defendant of costs, upon the recommendation of the jury and the facts appearing in evidence :- Held that the question of costs was within the power of the trial Judge, and he could only interfere with the event for "good cause." (Con. Rule 1170). By acting on the recommendation of the jury he would, in effect, be abdicating his functions and allowing the jury to determine what was "good cause." "Good means some misconduct leading to the litigation, or in the course of the litigation, which requires the court in justice to inter-fere, and there is a marked distinction between interfering with costs going to the plaintiff and costs going to the defendant; and upon the facts of this case there was no "good cause" for interfering. Farquhar v. Robertson, 13 P. R. 156.

The plaintiffs claimed more than $13,000 upon a special contract for iron sold to the defendants, and damages for refusal to accept a portion of the goods sold. The defendants denied their liability to pay for any part of the iron, setting up that it was not what they had contracted for, and counterclaiming for damages for breach of contract. The case was tried by a jury, who in answer to questions left to them found that the iron delivered was not up to contract, but that the defendants had accepted and used a portion of it and judgment was entered for the plaintiffs by the trial Judge for over $5,000 for the portion of the iron used by the defendants, at the contract price, less fifteen per cent, for inferi-ority, as found by the jury. The trial Judge gave the plaintiffs the costs of the action and the defendants the costs of the counterclaim, and the divisional court (15 O. R. 516) affirmed the judgment and disposition of costs. The defendants appealed upon the question of costs only, contending that they had succeeded upon the issue as to the quality of the iron, and were entitled to the costs of that issue. The defendants had not asked at the trial to have judgment entered for them upon such issue, nor was it so entered:-Held, by the majority of the court, that there was, upon the evidence, "good cause" within the meanthe evidence, "good cause" within the meaning of Con. Rule 1170 for depriving the defendants of the costs of the issue found by the jury in their favour, and the order of the trial Judge and the divisional court should not interfered with. Per Hagarty, C.J.O .- If the trial Judge did not intend by his order to deprive the defendants of such costs, then the costs were properly left to follow the event, which was in favour of the plaintiffs to the extent of over $5,000. Per Burton, J.A.— The defendants, not having applied for judgment thereon, were not entitled to costs of the issue found by the jury in their favour. Per Osler, and Maclennan, JJ.A.—Although there was no formal order specifically depriving the defendants of costs, the trial Judge and the court below intended to deprive them of costs for good cause. Huxley v. West London Extension R. W. Co., 14 App. Cas. 26, specially referred to. Bertrum & Co. v. Massey Manujulating Op., 13 P. R. 184.

The court can interfere with the trial Judge's discretion in depriving a successful party of costs in an action tried by a jury, where he has given effect to considerations which do not constitute "good cause" within the meaning of Con. Rule 1170. Fulton v. 1 pond. 13 P. R. 485.

The plaintiff s principal claim, upon which

The plaintiff's principal claim, upon which a succeeded, was for wood cut and removed by the defendant. The trial Judge ruled that the conduct of the plaintiff in refusing a remeasurement caused unnecessary litigation, and he deprived him of the costs of that claim. The plaintiff and defendant had each had a measurement made, and differed as to the result. The plaintiff refused to have a remeasurement and brought the action, the result of which shewed that his measurement was correct:—Held, that the plaintiff's refusal was not misconduct inducing the litigation, and there was no "good cause" for depriving him of costs, Huxley v. West London Expension R. W. Co., 14 App. Cas. at pp. 33-4, specially referred to. Ib.

Co., Rule 11/0 provides that where an acton, itule 1170 provides that where an action is tried by a jury the costs shall follow the event, unless, upon application made at the trial for good cause shewn, the Judge before whom the action or issue is tried or the court otherwise orders:—Semble, that there must be substantially an application at the trial, and if the trial Judge, anticipating the application of counsel, makes the order in presence of oposing counsel, he makes it on application.

The words of Rule 1172 "the Judge or court makes no order respecting the costs do not confer any wholly discretionary powers the Judge, but must be read with Rule 1170, as referring to an order made "for good cause." And where, in an action in a county court for damages for bodily injuries sus-tained by the plaintiff through the alleged negligence of the defendant, the jury found for the plaintiff and assessed the damages at $30, and added that the defendant should pay "the court expenses," and the Judge made an order that the plaintiff should have full county court costs, and that the defendant should not have the set-off provided by Rule 1172, because, in his opinion, the injury done to the plaintiff was attended by circumstances of great aggravation, and the jury ought to have given larger damages :- Held, that these were not circumstances which constituted "good cause" within the meaning of Rule 1170; for the very matters relied upon by the Judge as "good cause" had been passed upon Judge as "good cause" had been passed upon adversely by the jury; and therefore the costs should follow the event under Rule 1172. Beckett v. Stiles, 5 Times L. R. 88, followed. McNair v. Boyd, 14 P. R. 132.

In an action for damages for assault and hegligence brought in the high court and tried by a jury, a verdict for $110 damages was rendered. The trial Judge directed judgment to be entered for that sum, with county court costs, and ordered that the defendant should have no right to the excess of his costs in the high court over county court costs, in the manner provided for by Rule 1172. The trial Judge's reasons for making the order preventing the set-off were: (1) because the dendant had indust be deliuitiff to go with the constant of the property of

In an action for damages for malicious prosecution and arrest brought in the high court of justice and tried by a jury, the plaintiff recovered a verdict for $50. The trial Judge entered judgment for this sum with costs to the plaintiff on the scale of the county court, and ordered that the defendant should not be allowed to set off his extra costs occasioned by the action being brought in the high court. He was of opinion that the plaintiff had reasonable grounds for bringing the action in the high court; that the conduct of the defendant was wrong; and that the verdict might well have been larger:—Held, that there was no "good cause" under Rule 1170 for depriving the defendant of the set-off provided for by Rule 1172. McNair v. Boyd, 14 P. R. 132, followed. Carton v. Bradburn, 15 P. R. 147.

The rule of the supreme court of judicature for Ontario, passed on 4th November, 1893, amending rule 1170 by providing that where an action is tried by a jury, the costs shall follow the event, unless, upon application made at the trial, the trial judge, in his discretion, otherwise orders, does not apply to actions tried before it was passed. And where the jury in an action of tort, tried before the passing of the new rule, assessed the plaintiff's damages at $100, and the trial Judge did not give judgment till after the passing of the new rule, and then ordered that the plaintiff should have costs on the that the plaintiff should have costs of the high court scale: — Held, that he had no power to so order, unless for "good cause shewn" within the meaning of rule 1170, as it stood at the date of the trial. The right to it stood at the date of the trial. or to set-off costs is a substantial right, and not a mere matter of procedure. But, under rule 1170, the court has the power to make such order as to costs as may seem just, irrespective of good cause; and, as in this case, the awarding of so small a sum as $100, assuming the plaintiff's right to recover, was almost perverse, and the plaintiff had a right to expect an award well beyond the jurisdiction of the county court, the divisional court affirmed the trial Judge's disposition of the costs. Stratford v. Sherwood, 5 O. S. 169, at pp. 170, 171, followed. Island v. Tovenship of Amaranth, 16 P. R. 3.

In an action of tort, tried before the passing of the rule of 4th November, 1893, amending rule 1170, the jury assessed the plaintiff's damages at $290, and judgment was given for the plaintiff for that amount, but the trial Judge did not give judgment upon the question of costs till after the passing of the new rule, and then ordered that the plaintiff should have costs on the high court scale. An appeal from this order was discovered that the plaintiff should have costs on the rule was the scale. An appeal from this order was discovered that the scale.

The amendment of the rule was to be regarded by the trial Judge, while the application of the plaintiff for full costs was before him, and while the action was still pending. Changes in the law as to costs since the Judicature Act are matters of procedure, and, as such, act retrospectively or with reference to current and uncompleted proceedings. But even if rule 1170 in its unamended form applied, the divisional court had under it an alternative power over the costs, not limited by the condition as to good cause, and, as this was not a case in which the costs of the plaintiff should be diminished by taxation on a lower scale, or by the allowance of a set-off, the jurisdiction should be exercised in accordance with the view of the trial Judge. Meredith, J., dubitante, considered himself bound by Island v. Township of Amaranth, 16 P. R. 3. to arrive at the same conclusion. McGillicray v. Towns of Lindsay, 16 P. R. 11.

Under rule 1170, as it stood before the amendment made by rule 1274, a divisional court had the power to make such order as to costs as might seem just, irrespective of "good cause." Meyers v. Defries, 4 Ex. D. 176; Marsafen v. Lancashire, etc., R. W. Co., 7 Q. B. D. 641, followed. Island v. Township of Amaranth, 16 P. R. 3, approved. Where similar motions are made to the same court in two actions and the parties in the first argree that the decision in the second shall govern, there is nothing to preclude an appeal in the first action, even though there is no appeal in the first action, even though there is no appeal in the latter should be final. Per Maclennan, J.A.—Rule 1274 was inapplicable to this action, which was tried before it came into force. Coutts v. Dodds, 16 P. R. 273.

6. Unnecessary or Unduly Expensive Proceedings.

Action to Enforce Award.]—It not appearing that there was any good reason for filing a bill instead of proceeding to enforce an award in the usual way, the court refused to the plaintiff any costs other than such as would have been entitled to had he proceeded to enforce the award under the statute. Moore v. Buckner, 28 Gr. 606.

Administration.]—Where an executor obtained the usual order for the administration of his testator's estate, and, upon the hearing on further directions, no reason was shewn for invoking the nid of the court, and the guardian of the infants did not object in any way to the course taken by the executor, the court refused both parties their costs. Springer v. Clarke, 15 Gr. 664.

Administration.]—In the case of small estates, an administration suit can only be justified where every possible means of avoiding the suit has been exhausted before suit brought. McAndrew v. LaFlamme, 19 Gr. 193.

Where a next friend filed a bill for a minor, without having observed this rule, and the suit did not appear to have been necessary in the interests of the minor, the next friend was charged with all the costs. Ib.

Administration.] — Administration suit —Costs allowed out of estate—Employment of experts — Costs of journeys — Attendance before master—Service of warrants on creditors—Fees paid to counsel in United States—Comparing deeds of property, &c. See Ro Robertson, Robertson v. Robertson, 24 Gr. 555.

Administration.]—Where one of several persons beneficially interested under the will of a testator, without making proper inquiries into the conduct and dealings with the estate by the executors, instituted proceedings against them, and groundlessly charged them with misconduct, causing thereby much unnecessary costs and trouble, the court being satisfied with the conduct of the executors, refused to take the further administration and winding up of the estate out of their hands; and it being shewn that all the other persons interested in the estate were satisfied with the conduct of the executors, ordered the plaintiff to pay the costs of the suit. Rosebatch v. Parry, 27 Gr. 193.

Administration.] — When it appeared that administration proceedings had been instituted without any shew of reason, or proper foundation, for the benefit of the estate, and that they had not, in their results, conduced to that benefit, the plaintiff was ordered to pay the costs of all parties. Re Woodhall, Garbutt v. Heuseon, 2 O. R. 456.

Administration.]—The decision reported in 13 P. R. 403, upon appeal from taxation of costs between solicitor and client, disallowing to the solicitors the additional costs occasioned by their bringing on their client's behalf an action for administration, where a summary application would have sufficed, was affirmed by the court of anneal. In the administration action the additional costs incurred by the defendants in that action were allowed to them by way of set-off against the costs awarded to the plaintiff:—Held, that no relief could be obtained by the client, updu a proceeding for taxation of costs, in respect of the loss suffered by her in virtually naying these costs to the defendants. Re Allenby and Weir, 14 P. R. 227.

Affidavits.]—Costs for superfluous or irrepresent matter introduced into affidavits will not be allowed, and in extreme cases the Judge will disallow costs of the whole affidavit. Corley v. Roblin, 5 L. J. 225.

Affidavits.]—Where plaintiff filed many useless affidavits and had a great many repetitions as well as idle statements on information and belief in affidavits filed, a direction was given to the master that they should not be allowed to the plaintiff on taxation, though he discharged defendant's summons with costs. Hooper v. Burley, I. C. L. J. 273.

Affidavits.]—As the affidavits filed on shewing cause to a rule for a mandamus in this case were unnecessarily long, the corporation were only allowed half their costs. In reschool Trustees of South Fredericksburg and Corporation of South Fredericksburg, 37 U. C. R. 534.

Court Instead of Chambers.]—Where a party moves in court for what should properly be moved for in chambers, the court will not allow him any costs of the application even if the motion be granted. Murney v. Courtney, 10 Gr. 52.

Court Instead of Chambers, —Where a cause was set down to be heard on further directions, for the purpose of having remedied a defect in the master's report, the court, although it made the order asked, redused the plaintiffs costs other than those of a motion in chambers; the order being such as might have been obtained on motion there. King v. Connor, 10 Gr. 364.

Court Instead of Chambers.]—Where a motion to stay proceedings was made in court it was enlarged into chambers, and costs were ordered against the applicants. Lee v. Wimico Real Estate Co., 15 P. R. 288.

Counsel Fees.]—With respect to brief and counsel fees, it was held under the circumstances of this case that the master should allow no disbursement to counsel with brief, nor any charge with brief either not actually incurred or unnecessarily incurred. Pegg v. Pegg, 7 U. C. R. 220.

Cross-Action.] — Costs of cross-actions refused where such actions unnecessary, Norvell v. Canada Southern R. W. Co., 9 A. R. 325.

Defence Instead of Demurrer.] — Where, instead of demurring to the bill, the defendant put in an answer, and went to an examination and hearing, the court, on dismissing the bill, gave the defendant costs only as upon demurrer. Brouse v. Cram, 14 Gr. 677

Defence Instead of Demurrer.]—One principle upon which this court has steadily acted is, that where two courses of proceeding are open, one less expensive than the other, and a party can with equal advantage to himself adopt either, and he takes the more expensive one, he does so at the peril of costs. Where, therefore, a woman, after the death of her husband, was joined as a party defendant in a suit upon a mortgage created by her late husband, in which she had not joined, and instead of demurring put in an answer, the court at the hearing dismissed the bill as against her, without costs. Bush v. Trowbridge Waterworks Co., L. R. 10 Ch. 459, considered, distinguished, and not followed. Samuders v. Stull, 18 Gr. 390, approved of and followed. Gildersleece v. Courn, 25 Gr. 460.

Defence Instead of Demurrer.]— Where an objection might have been raised by a demurrer, the costs of defence were given as of a successful demurrer, to be set off against the costs of a judgment on the pleadings for an admitted debt. Wallis v. Skain, 21 O. R. 532.

Expensive Procedure.]—In selecting the form of action regard must be had not only to the interests of the plaintiff, but also to those of the defendant, and when a simple inexpensive mode of procedure is open, and a more expensive and burdensome course is adopted, it must be at the peril of costs. Vandecaters v. Horton, 9 O. R. 548.

Injunction.]—The plaintiff was ordered to pay the costs of an interim injunction obtained by him, because the facts proved at the trial shewed no anticipation of such immediate and serious damage as to justify the application for it. Sklitzsky v. Cranston, 22 O. R. 590.

Mortrage—'laim for Possession.]—The practice of bringing an action for an amount due on a mortgage within the proper competence of the division court in the high court, by making a claim for possession of the land, is one that must be carefully guarded; and except in cases clearly indicating the necessity for proceeding in the high court, no costs will be given to the plaintiff. In this case where the amount claimed under a mortgage was within the proper competence of the division court, but the suit was brought in the high court, and there were no circumstances shewing the necessity for bringing it therein, no costs were allowed the plaintiff. Vandevacters v. Horton, 9 O. R. 548.

Pleadings.]—The master disallowed a great portion of the pleadings, which he considered unnecessary, and the court discharged with costs a rule nisi to revise the taxation. Malloch v. Grier, 2 U. C. R. 113.

Pleadings.]—Unnecessarily lengthy pleadings ordered to be reduced by the master at the party's expense. Canada Permanent Building and Savings Society v. Harris, 16 C. P. 54.

Printing.]—The costs of printing unnecessary material disallowed. Bryce v. Loutit, 21 A. R. 100.

Several Motions Instead of One. — Costs not allowed where several motions depended really upon the same considerations, and there should have been only one motion. See Monteith v. Walsh, 10 P. R. 162.

Trial at Place Distant from Residence of Witnesses. —Where the parties to a cause had produced and examined their witnesses at Toronto, all of whom resided at a distance therefrom, and in close proximity to one of the circuit towns, the court, while awarding the general costs of the cause to defendant, refused him the costs of the attendance of his witnesses. Ledyard v. McLean, 10 Gr. 139.

Trial Instead of Demurrer.]—Where a question might have been raised by demurrer, without the expense of a trial, no other costs or greater were taxed to the defendants than would have been taxed to them had they simply demurred to the statement of claim, and the demurrer had been decided in their favour. Hepburn v. Township of Orford, 19 O. R. 585.

Two Suits for Same Object.]—Where there were two suits by a solicitor for the same object, the master refused in one of the two, without a special order, to tax as between party and party, more than part of the costs, and it appearing that, as between solicitor and client, no part of that bill could have been recovered, the court refused to interfere with the taxation. Spence v. Clemov, 15 Gr. 584.

Will—Motion.]—As there were no disputed facts and no questions that could not have been raised under Rule 938, costs only of a motion under that rule were allowed. In re Brown, Brown, v. Brown, 32 O. R. 323.

III. PARTICULAR CLASSES OF COSTS.

1. Abortive Proceedings.

Judge Refusing to try Gase, —An order was made by the master in chambers changing the venue from the assizes at Sincoe, for which notice had been given, to the chancery sittings in London. The Judge presiding at those sittings having refused to take the case, as it belonged to a common law division:—Held, without determining whether the master's order was a proper one, that the plaintiff was justified in acting on it, and his costs occasioned by the abortive proceedings were allowed to him. Schwob v. McGlough-lin, 9 P. R. 475.

Jury Disagreeing.]—The costs of a trial which was abortive because the jury disagreed, no order to the contrary having been made by the Judge at the trial, were held taxable against the defendants by the plaintiff who ultimately succeeded. Copeland v. Township of Blucheim, 11 P. R. 54.

Nonsuit by Judge ex Mero Motu.]-Upon the trial of a county court action, counsel for the defendants, at the close of the plaintiff's case, formally moved for a nonsuit. and stated that he would renew the motion at the close of the defendants' case. Then he called and examined three witnesses, but, when a fourth was sworn, the Judge interposed and said he would take the responsibility of entering a nonsuit. He heard argument from the plaintiff's counsel opposing this course, and the defendants' counsel said he proposed to tender his evidence and go on and complete the case. The Judge refused to hear further evidence, and entered a nonsuit, which in term he refused to set aside, the defendants' counsel neither opposing nor assentremains counsel hertner opposing nor assenting to the motion. The plaintiff successfully appealed to the court of appeal. Upon the argument there, the defendants' counsel took the same position, but urged that the defendants should not be ordered to pay costs: Held, however, that nothing was shewn to induce the court to depart from the general rule; and the defendants were ordered to pay the costs of the appeal, the lost trial, and the motion in term. The mere fact that the Judge below has ex mero motu made an erroneous adjudication is not a ground for absolving the respondent from the costs of the app Mills v. Hamilton Street Railway Co., 17 P.

2. Apportionment and Severance.

Appeals Argued Together.]—When the actions were in the court of appeal an order was made by a Judge of that court that only one appeal book should be printed for the three cases, and the three cases were argued together, but the defence was different:—Held, that the taxing officer was right in allowing separate counsel fees in each case, Petrie v, Guelph Lumber Co., Stewart v, Guelph Lumber Co., 10 P. R. 600.

Chattel Mortgage — Action to Set Aside | See Martin v. Sampson, 17 C. L. T. Occ. N. 87.

Common Defence by Several Defendants. |—An action by a judgment creditor against three defendants, one of whom was the judgment debtor, to set aside a conveyance as fraudulent, was dismissed with costs, but with the direction that the costs of the judgment debtor should be set off against the judgment recovered by the plaintiff. There was a common defence by one solicitor for all three defendants, and no separate proceedings for the benefit of particular defendants—Held, upon appeal from taxation, that a setoff of one-third of the whole costs taxed to the defendants should be allowed. Re Colquboun, 5 Def. M. & G. 35, and Clark v. Virgo, 17 P. R. 260, followed. Zavitz v. Dodge, 17

P. R. 296.

Contractor and Sureties.]—In an action by a municipality against a contractor, one of his sureties, and the executors of a deceased surety, three separate defences were delivered by different solicitors. It did not appear that separate solicitors were employed for the mere purpose of increasing costs— Held, that the defendants were not liable in any joint character, and were entitled to tax separate bills of costs. Township of Logus v, Kirk, J4 P. R. 130.

Costs Given Generally—Trustee and Develored 315 applies to cases where several persons are acting in the same interest, and where costs are to be apportioned among them. It does not empower the master to deprive any one of his entire costs where the decree gives costs generally. A surviving trustee, and the representatives of a deceased trustee, are not within the rule which prevents trustees exercing in their defence at the risk of having but one set of costs between them. Reid v. Stephens, 3 Ch. Ch. 372.

Former Partners. |- In an action against a municipal corporation for injury to a drain, the corporation caused the two contractors who had constructed the drain, and the assignee of one of them, to be made defendants. The two contractors were partners at the time of the construction of the drain, but had dissolved partnership before the action begun. One partner appeared, and defended by one solicitor, and the other partner and his assignee by another solicitor. ment was given dismissing the claim of the corporation against the added defendants with costs, but they were not by the judgment limited to one set of costs:—Held, that there was no "law of the court" which, under the circumstances of this case, justified the taxing officer in refusing to allow more than one set of costs to the added defendants. Con. Rule Melbourne v. City of To-1202 considered. ronto, 13 P. R. 346.

Fraud Charged.]—The bill, which was fided against H., L., and T., alleged that a deed of the land in question from the plaintiff to H.'s father, though absolute in form, was only a mortgage. The father had died, having devised the land to H., and appointed L. and T. executors. The bill charged that the testator was overpaid by receipt of rents and profits in his life-time, and that since his death the defendants had received a large amount of rents, of which an account was sought. It also charged the above defendants and another defendant with fraud. On the hearing the suit was compromised, the plaintiff agreeing to pay the "costs of several defendants to their respective solicitors:"

Held, that defendants were justified in severing their detence, and could tax separate belis. Held, also, that where one of several defendants is charged with fraud, the others are not obliged to connect their defence with his. Conally v. Hill, 7 P. R. 441.

Fraud Charged.]—The defendants were the same in all three actions. The actions are brought against the defendants other than the company as wrong-doors. They were shed for an alleged conspiracy to defraud, which it was alleged they carried into effect by derauding the plaintiffs respectively. The defendant McL. defended, meeting the charge directly. The other defendants did the same, but they further said that they obtained their information from McL., and that they believed it to be true, and believed that the statement nade by them and McL., which was the foundation of the actions, was true:—Held, that the taxing officer was right in allowing two bills of costs, one to the defendant McL. and one to the other defendants, Petric v. Guelph Lumber Co., Ruglis v. Guelph Lumber Co., 10 P. B. 1990.

Interpleader — Success as to Some thods.]—Where a mortgage claimed all the gods seized by a sheriff under execution, but it appeared on the trial of an interpleader isome between the mortgagee and the execution creditors that some of the goods seized, amounting to one-sixth of total value, were not covered by the mortgage;—Semble, although the mortgage was entitled to the general costs of the issue a deduction of one-sixth should be made in respect of the goods as to which he failed. Segsmorth v. Meriden Silver Plating Co., 3 O. R. 413.

Maker and Indorsers of Note.]—
Where separate actions were brought against the anther and indorsers of a note, and upon a denurrer to the replication judgment was given for defendant, and the plaintiffs made the application to amend in three cases:—
Held, that defendant was entitled only to the costs as for one case, in attending to oppose in Held, also, that as to the ordinary fee disbursed to counsel to argue the demurrer in the three cases, and the ordinary taxable costs excisioned to defendant by the demurrer in case case, they might be allowed to defendant. Bank of British North America v. Ainley, 7 U. C. R. 521.

One Defendant Successful.]—One of several defendants who, in an action of tort, joins his co-defendants in plea of not guilty, upon which a verdict is rendered in his favour against plaintiff, though plaintiff recovers against his co-defendants, is entitled to a propertion of the taxed costs of defence. Huntingdon v. Lutz, 10 L. J. 46.

One Defendant Successful.—Plaintiff shel C, and G, G, being a married woman, and obtained a verdict against both. In term both defendants obtained a rule to enter a nonsuit for them, or a verdict for G. The lating officer disaflowed the plaintiff any costs is term, because he had not given notice that be abundoned his verdict against G, and taxed to her one-half of the costs of the term morfon, both defendants having appeared by the same attorney:—Held, on appeal, that a proper proportion of the costs in term should be allowed to the plaintiff, against defendant C., and the taxing officer was directed to inquire whether any binding contract of retainer had been entered into by G., and if not to allow her only disbursements. Clark v. Creinton, 9 P. R. 125.

One Defendant Successful.]—An action against two defended by the same solicitor, was dismissed as against one with costs, and judgment was given for the plaintiff against the other with costs:—Held, that the successful defendant should on taxation be allowed the costs of services (if any) appertaining wholly to his own defence, and at most only a proportionate part of the costs of services appertaining to both defences, as in Heighington v. Grant, 1 Beav. 228. Clark v. Virgo, 17 P. 18, 230.

Persons in Same Class.]—Where the several members of classes of persons interested in an estate severed in instructing counsel, the court, though it gave them costs out of the estate, directed the attention of the master to the subject of taxation. Crawlord v. Landy, 23 Gr. 244.

Purchaser against Vendor and Subsequent Purchaser, —In a suit for specific performance by a vendee against his vendor and a person to whom he had sold after agreing to sell to the plaintiff, the defendants may sever in their defence and employ separate solicitors, and each is entitled on dismissal of the bill with costs to tax a separate bill. Barrett v. Campbell, 7 P. R. 150.

Several Issues of Fact.]—See Caniff v. Bogart, 6 L. J. 59; Mein v. Short, 11 C. P. 430; Holton v. McDonald, 12 C. P. 246; Evans v. Kingsmill, 4 U. C. R. 132.

Several Issues of Law and Fact.]— See Davis v. Davis, 5 0, 8, 453; Richmond v. Campbell, H. T. 2 Viet. R. & J. Dig. 813; Sheldon v. Hamilton, M. T. 3 Viet. R. & J. Dig. 813; Clarke v. Davham, T. T. 4 & 5 Viet.; Taylor v. Carr, 4 U. C. R. 149; Bank of B. N. A. v. Ainley, 7 U. C. R. 521; S. C. 1 C. L. Ch. 187; Fraser v. Hickman, 12 C. P. 213; Kinloch v. Hall, 26 U. C. R. 134; Townsend v. Sterling, 4 P. R. 125.

Successful Defence upon one Ground Costs Relating to Other Grounds, 1-It was adjudged that the plaintiff should pay to the defendants so much of the costs of the action (upon a building contract), reference, and appeal, as were occasioned by reason of his claiming to be allowed as against the defendants, for extra work, anything in addition to the sums allowed therefor by the architect :-Held, that in taxing costs under this direction the officer was in error in disallowing to the defendants the costs of witnesses called to shew the value, &c., &c., of the extras that had been disallowed to them by the architect's certificate, which was attacked by the plain-The defendants were not called upon to stand upon a single item of evidence, though ir the end it might appear that the item would have been sufficient for their pur-poses. Lockard v. Waugh, 17 P. R. 269.

Tenants.]—Two actions were brought by the same plaintiffs against different defendants to recover rent for different parcels of land, in which the defences were not identical. A compromise was effected, and it was agreed between the parties "that judgment shall be entered in each of the said actions for the amounts claimed therein by the plaintiffs," with costs of suit between solicitor and client; and judgments were entered accordingly:— Held, that the plaintiffs were entitled to tax a separate set of costs for each action. Badderin v. Quinn; Badderin v. McGuire, 16 P. R. 248.

Two Branches, I—Where an action was, roughly speaking, divisible into two parts, one claiming compensation for land, and the other seeking to restrain the defendants from proceeding to estimate it in an improper way, and the judgment gave the plaintiff the costs of the first branch and no costs of the second to either party:—Held, that the taxing officer had not erred in principle in allowing the plaintiff one-half of the general costs and also items which exclusively related to the first branch. Vancant v. Village of Markham, 15 P. R. 412.

3. Costs in the Cause,

Assignment of Bond before Action.)

—The costs of an application under s. 82 of the Surrogate Court Act, C. S. U. C. c. 18, for an assignment of a probate bond, in order te an action thereon at common law, cannot be taxed as costs in the action, but should be recovered as damages consequent on default.
Closson V. Post, 6 I. a. J. 141.

Change of Venue.]—The venue in an action to restrain the infringement of a patent was changed, without terms, to Brockville. As the defendant had been slow in applying, the costs of the application below and in appeal were made costs in the cause. Atteheson v. Mann, 9 P. R. 253.

Commission to take Evidence. —The costs of a commission to take evidence in a foreign country, form part of the costs of the cause. Colborne v. Thomas, 4 Gr. 169.

Demurrer Books. | — See Elliott v. Northern Assurance Co., 6 P. R. 111.

Interlocutory Order — "Costs in the Cause" — Discretion of Trial Judge, I—Where an interlocutory order in an action directs that the costs of certain proceedings shall be "costs in the cause," that is not a final disposition of such costs in favour of the party who shall succeed in the action, but merely puts these costs in the same position as any other of the ordinary costs of the action, that is, leaves them to be dealt with in the discretion of the trial Judge under rule 1130 and s. 119 of the Judicature Act, R. S. O. 1897 c. 51. Koosen v. Rose, [1897] W. N. 25, 76 L. T. N. S. 145, 45 W. R. 337, 13 Times L. R. 257, distinguished. Dickerson v. Radeliffe, 10 P. R. 223.

Interlocutory Order—"Costs in the Cause"—Discretion of Trial Judge.]—The judgment of the trial Judge was in favour of the plaintiff, and was not appealed against, As to costs, it adjudged that the defendants should pay to the plaintiff the costs of certain witnesses, and continued: "This court doth not see fit to interfere with the interlocutory orders disposing of certain costs throughout the action, nor make any further or other order as to costs." Two interlocutory orders nade the costs of applications "costs in the cause;" two made them "costs in the cause;" two made them "costs in order provided to the successful party;" one order provided that "the defendant do pay to the plaintiff the costs of this motion to be taxed in any event of the cause but on the final taxation of the costs herein." It was conceded that the plaintiff was entitled to the costs made payable in any event:—Held, following Dickerson v. Radeliffe, 19 P. R. 223, that the costs made costs in the cause were subject to the disposition of the trial Judge, and under the judgment were not to be taxed to the plaintiff, Held, also, that the words "costs in the cause to the successful party" did not mean more than costs in the cause; and, even if they did, the plaintiff was not a successful party. Brotherton v. Metropolitan District Railway Joint Committee, [1894] I Q. B. 606, followed. Murr v. Squire, 19 P. R. 237.

Motion Stayed.] — Where defendant serves a notice of motion, but before the return thereof the plaintiff takes out on pracipe and serves an order to dismiss his bill, the defendant cannot bring on his motion, but he is entitled to tax his costs thereof, under the order to dismiss, as costs in the cause. Pardy v. Ferris, 1 Ch. Ch. 303.

Motion to Rescind.1—Costs of applying to rescind a Judge's order to allow county court costs, were held not to be costs in the cause. Cameron v. Campbell, 1 P. R. 170.

Motion to Stay Proceedings.]—Where after notice of motion to stay proceedings until the costs of a former suit for the same cause of action should be paid, such costs are paid, the costs of the motion to stay proceedings will be made costs in the cause. Little y, Haucking, 3 Ch. Ch. 78.

Opposing Rule to Set Aside Award.]— The costs of shewing cause against a rule for setting aside an award, are costs in the cause, and the successful party is entitled thereto, although no mention of them is made in the rule. Corporation of Essex v. Parke, 12 C. P. 150.

Postponing Trial.] — Where a cause is withdrawn on account of the absence of a necessary witness for the plaintiff, and he shews that he has made diligent efforts to secure the attendance of such witness who is residing within the jurisdiction, but fails to secure it, the costs of putting off the examination will, as a general rule, be costs in the cause. In all other cases, the costs will be disposed of according to circumstances and in the discretion of the Judge. Pattison v. Mc-Nab, 12 Gr. 483.

Postponing Trial.] — A motion was granted for postponing the hearing and examination of a cause, on the ground of the absence of a material witness after notice of hearing had been given, although the cause had been at issue for some months previous. The costs of such a motion are costs in the cause. Graham v. Machell, 2 Ch. Ch. 376.

Postponing Trial. —It is the practice to make the costs of postponing the hearing of a cause, where sufficient grounds are shewn for such postponement, costs in the cause. Rees v. Attorney-General, 2 Ch. Ch. 386.

Postponing Trial.]—Costs of moving to postpone a trial on account of the absence of a material witness will be costs in the cause where the party moving has made diligent efforts, &c., to secure the attendance. Brown v. Porter, Knox v. Porter, 11 P. R. 250.

Rehearing.]—The decree in a cause gave the paintiff the general costs thereof:—Held, that this did not carry the costs of rehearing an interlocutory order made refusing an injunction, which order was reversed on rehearing; the practice requiring that, where costs of rehearing are intended to be given they must be expressly mentioned in the decree or order giving the costs of the cause. Mossop v. Muson, 20 Gr. 406.

Special Jury.] — The costs of a special jury are costs in the cause, not costs of the day. Whitehead v. Brown, 2 O. S. 345.

Special Wording.]—The phrase "costs in the cause," generally means the costs only of the party who is successful in the cause. But where the phrase was used in an award as follows: "We also order and award that the plaintif and defendants shall each pay half the costs of the cause, and that the defendants shall pay all the costs of the reference and award, our costs of which reference and award as arbitrators we assess at the sum of $201.50:"—Held, that the words "costs in the cause," meant the whole costs of the plaintiff and defendants. Secott v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 3 P. R. 276.

Supplemental Order Varying Judgment. —The plaintiff had obtained a decree with costs against defendant. Afterwards, by consent, a supplemental order varying the decree was made, which was silent as to costs: —Held, that the costs of such order and proceedings thereunder were not costs in the cause, and could not be taxed against the defendant. Attorney-General v. Taylor, 1 Ch. Ch. 302.

Taxing Officer's Discretion.]— The plantiffs obtained an order for the issue of a foreign commission to examine a witness. The order contained the usual direction that the costs be costs in the cause. The evidence was taken, but was not put in at the trial:— Held, that the direction in the order as to costs did not preclude the taxing officer from disallowing the costs to the plaintiffs, on the ground that the evidence had not been used. Dominion, &c., Co. v. Stinson, 9 P. R. 177.

When Directed.]—In an appeal against an order refusing further security for costs, the appeal was dismissed, and the costs made costs in the cause to the plaintiff. Bell v. Landon, 9 P. R. 100.

4. Costs of the Day.

The rule for costs of the day for not proceeding to trial, is absolute in the first instance. Chisholm v. Simpson, Dra. 2.

Held—1. Under s. 225, C. L. P. Act, C. S. U. C. c. 22, that the rule should be drawn up in the principal office at Toronto: 2. That deputy clerks of the Crown have no power, under the 120th rule of practice, to issue rules for costs of the day. White v. Shire, 7 L. J. 201.

Per McLean, C.J., and Wilson, J., under rule of court No. 120, such rule may issue in vacation, at any time after the assizes for which notice was given. Per Hagarty, J., semble, that the rule of court was not intended to allow such a rule to be obtained sooner than by the previous practice, but to give it either in the term following the assizes or in any subsequent vacation. Adshead v. Upton, 22 U. C. R. 429.

Costs allowed for not proceeding to assessment of damages pursuant to notice. Cross v. Cronther, Tay, 186; King's College v. Maybee, 2 U. C. R. 94.

The court refused to order a plaintiff to pay defendant's executors the costs of not going to trial pursuant to notice. Morris v. Randall, Tay. 299.

Costs were allowed to a defendant who had accepted short notice, and the plaintiff did not proceed to trial pursuant thereto. Harris v. Haukins, 3 O. S. 142.

Where the plaintiff having given notice of trial, did not enter his record in time, but defendant, notwithstanding, agreed to go to trial if he were ready, and after having detained the plaintiff's witnesses more than a week, at last determined not to go to trial, he was refused the costs of the day. Doe d. Crawford v. Coppledke, 4 O. S. 6.

Where a cause was put to the foot of the docket with defendants' consent, and was not tried, costs of the day were refused. Bank of Upper Canada v. Covert, 4 O. S. 324.

Where the plaintiff's attorney sent notice of countermand to his agent in town, but too late for service, and the defendant's witnesses attended for the trial:—Held, that their expenses were rightly allowed in the costs of the day. Spafford v. Buchanan, 4 O. S. 325.

Defendant is entitled to costs where the plaintiff does not enter his cause on the commission day, although he offers to enter it subsequently, which the defendant refuses to allow. O'Neil v. Barnhart, 5 O. S. 453.

Costs were refused, where after notice of trial defendant pleaded de novo, and the plaintiff did not proceed to trial, the court considering a new notice necessary. McMillan v. Ferguson, M. T. 2 Vict.

Where no notice of trial had been given, but the cause was entered after the commission day by consent, and the plaintiff did not afterwards proceed to trial:—Held, that the defendant was entitled to costs of the day. Tenbrock v. Cole, 1 U. C. R. 401.

In ejectment, where the jury having been sworn were discharged on defendant objecting that the jurata was defective, the defendant was not allowed costs of the day. Doe d. Crooks, v. Cummings, 2 U. C. R. 380,

Where a cause in the absence of plaintiff's counsel was struck out, and afterwards on his application restored, and then leave obtained to add pleas, and the cause at the close of the assize was not tried, a rule by defendant for costs of the day was set aside. Scott v. Crosthecate, 6 L. J. 159.

Where a cause being called on for trial, counsel for plaintiff states he is not ready, and counsel for defendant states he is ready, and the cause is struck out of the docket, defendant is entitled to his costs of the day. White v. Shire, 7 L. J. 206.

After the jury had been sworn, it appeared that the notice to examine defendant had been avoid to be, and the plaintiff having no evidence, was unable to go on. The Judge dismissed the jury, telling the plaintiff's attorney that they might be called together when convenient, at any time during the assizes, and the case taken. The plaintiff was afterwards rendy to go on, but defendant's attorney refused to allow the case to be taken out of its order, and it was not tried;—Held, that defendant could not move for judgment as in case of nonsult; but as the plaintiff's laches had rendered it necessary to dismiss the jury, the rule was discharged without costs. Taylor v. Smith 2 P. R. 213.

A cause was set down for the examination of witnesses, and when called on the plaintiff was not prepared to proceed:—Held, overruling Wallace v. McKay, 1 Ch. Ch. 67, that the defendant was entitled to have the case struck out of the paper, with the costs of the day. Cobourg and Peterborough R. W. Co. v. Covert, 7 Gr. 411.

An application for costs of not proceeding to hearing according to notice will not be granted ex parte. The practice discussed. Armour v. Noble, 3 Ch. Ch. 99, considered. Jardine v. Hope, 3 Ch. Ch. 197.

As to when costs of the day will be granted. Re McDonell, 4 Ch. Ch. 60.

The costs of a special jury are costs in the cause, and not costs of the day. Whitehead v. Brown, 2 O. S. 245.

The plaintiff had a verdict on all the issues, subject to a denurrer; the denurrer was decided in favour of the defendant; the plaintiff had leave to amend on payment of costs; —Held, not entitled to the costs of the day at nisi prius, not having succeeded on any of the issues. Bank of British North America v, Ainten, 1 C. L. Ch. 187.

Held, that 29 & 30 Vict. c. 42, s. 1, does not refer to costs of the day in the same suit, and consequently proceedings cannot be stayed in a suit in which the costs of the day have not been paid. Held, nevertheless, that this can be done on the ground of abuse of the process of the court, where the proceedings are vexatious. Nicholson v. Coulson, 6 P. R. 65.

No costs of the day for not proceeding to trial pursuant to notice in an interpleader suit will be allowed until the termination of the proceedings. Salter v. McLeod, 10 L. J. 990

In ejectment against U, and H, after notice of trial given a summons was obtained to allow U, to defend as landlord in lieu of H, and an order to that effect was made on the commission day of the assizes, 13th April. The plaintiff, in consequence, did not enter his record, and on the 27th, during the assizes, defendant's attorney (who had made no amendment as allowed by his order) took out a rule for costs of the day on the ordinary affidavit, that the plaintiff had not proceeded to trial pursuant to notice nor countermanded it;—Held, that such rule must be set aside with costs, for the plaintiff under the circumstances was not bound to go to trial in pursuance of his notice. Per McLean, C.I.—Such rule was irregular, for as the Judge at nisi prius might have allowed the record to be entered at any time during the assizes, there could be no default until they were over. Adshead v. Upton, 22 U. C. R. 429.

Where, upon a cause being called on for trial, counsel for plaintiff states he is not ready, and counsel for defendant, though reset ent in court, does not insist upon having the cause struck out or a nonsuit entered, in one sequence whereof the cause is passed over, defendant is not entitled to costs of the day. Vauluvan v. Tolan. 8, L. J. 276.

Where defendants' counsel was ready at the assizes, and the plaintiff's counsel not being prepared, the cause was struck out:—Held, that defendants were not entitled to costs for not proceeding to trial pursuant to notice, but their proper course was to have insisted upon a nonsuit. Crofts v. McMaster, 3 P. R. 121.

Defendant obtained a Judge's order: "That the trial of this cause be put off to the next spyring assizes for York, and that the record now entered for trial be withdrawn, and that said trial be so put off on payment of costs." The costs were taxed, but defendant refused to pay them. The record was not withdrawn,—Held, that as the record was not withdrawn, and was a remanet, the order should be treated as conditional, and that defendant could not be compelled to pay the costs; but a summons to rescind the order was made absolute. Brega v. Hodgson, 4 P. R. 47.

Held, that a "reasonable time" need not be given in which to pay the costs of the day, &c., after taxation, but that the order, &c., may be made a rule of court, &c., the day after taxation. Smith v. Cronk, 9 C. L. J. 237.

Where plaintiff sets down a cause for the examination of witnesses, and serves notice thereof on the other side, but fails to proceed with the examination, this will not entitle defendant to costs of the day; his proper course is to examine his own witnesses, as thereby the plaintiff would be excluded from going into evidence unless by leave of the court. Wallace v. McKay, 1 Ch. Ch. 67.

After the plaintiff had entered the record for trial, the defendant took out an order staying proceedings until security for costs were given. Whereupon the record was withdrawn:—Held, that defendant was not entitled to costs of the day. Fitzgerald v. Ludwig, 7 P. R. 187.

Plaintiff being ready to proceed with the trial of his case at the assizes, defendant's counsel applied for a postponement, stating that defendant and his witnesses had not arrefund the process of the plaintiff did not observe the constant of the plaintiff of the plaintiff of the plaintiff of the plaintiff was not ready, owing to the absence of a witness, who had been there the day before, but the Judge in-sisted upon the cause proceeding, whereupon the plaintiff, in order to avoid a nonsuit, withdrew the record:—Held, that defendant was entitled to the costs of the day, and an order made by the clerk of the Crown and pleas, setting aside a sidebar rule therefor, was accordingly rescinded. Parkinson v. Thompson, 44 U. C. R. 29.

The practice of giving costs of the day is superseded by the O. J. Act. No officer of the court has now power to issue a rule for such costs. Where the plaintiff fails to enter the cause, defendant should apply to a Judge under rule 204. The master in chambers has no jurisdiction to entertain an application for costs under that rule. Hopkins v. Smith, 9 P. R. 285.

See Hogg v. Crabbe, 12 P. R. 14.

5. Counterclaim.

Building Contract—Deduction for Unskillall Work.]—To an action on a building contract, the defendant set up the defence that the work was incompletely and unskilfully done, and counterclaimed for damages by reason thereof. The master to whom the action was referred found that $177$ should be deducted for unskilful and incomplete work from the amount claimed by the plaintiff, and that the defendant had suffered damage to the extent of $177:—Held, that the questions raised by the defendant might have been raised in a similar action before the Judicature Act, and that he was not entitled to have the costs dealt with as if what he had set up was properly a counterclaim. Cutler v. Morse, 12 P. R. 594.

The plaintiff claimed $1.205, the balance of the contract price for work done, and the defendant claimed that by reason of imperfect limits of the property of the property of the plainties should be reduced by $900. The defendant was allowed $296.54 in respect of his claim for reduction, and the plaintiff, therefore, recovered $638.46; — Held, that what the defendant claimed was neither a set-off nor a counterclaim; and, as the plaintiff had substantially succeeded, he should get the general costs of the action and reference, less the costs incurred by the defendant in establishing the items of improper work on which he succeeded. Cutler v. Morse, 12 P. R. 534, followed. Sanderson v. Ashfeld, 32 P. R. 230.

Claim and Counterclaim.]—An action on an unsettled account, to which there was a counterclaim, also on an unsettled account, The referee found that there was referred was a sum of $148.81 due the plaintiff on his claim, and $164.50 due the defendant on his counterclaim, leaving a balance due defendant of $15.69, and he certified to entitle the defendant to full costs. The Statute of Limitations was pleaded respectively to the claim and counterclaim, and the items barred by the statute were in consequence disallowed; apart from the statute the balance would have been in the plaintiff's favour :- Held, that the plaintiff and defendant were entitled to recover the costs of and relating to the claim and counterclaim, and proof thereof respec-tively, including the reference and subsequent proceedings; the defendant being also entitled to recover the sum of $15.69; the taxing officer to divide items in common; and judgment entered for the party in whose favour the balance should be found. Coughlin v. Hollingsworth, 5 O. R. 207.

Claim and Counterclaim.] — Although for some purposes a claim and counterclaim form but one action, yet the costs of the counterclaim are to be taxed separately from the costs of the action, a counterclaim being, for the purposes of taxation, to be treated as a cross-action. McGowan v. Middleton, 11 Q. B. D. 464, and Beddall v. Maitland, 17 Ch. D.

174, followed. Emerson v. Gearin, 12 P. R.

Where the order of a divisional court varied the judgment at the trial by directing that the counterclaim should be struck out and not dismissed, and should be disposed of in a separate action, and also directed that the defendants should pay into court the amount of the costs of the action, but was silent as to the crights of the parties must be governed by this order, and not by anything that preceded it, and that under it the plaintiffs were not entitled to tax the costs of the counterclaim.

Claim and Counterclaim.] — Where judgment is given for the plaintiff upon his claim with costs, and for the defendant upon his counterclaim with costs, the amounts to be set off, the costs should be taxed so as to allow the plaintiff the costs on his claim as though he had wholly succeeded in the suit, and the defendant the costs of the counterclaim as though he had wholly succeeded in the suit. Summerfeldt v. Johnston, 17 P. R. 6.

Claim and Counterclaim. |—Where the plaintiff succeeds upon his claim, and the defendant upon his counterclaim, the former should receive the costs of the action, and the latter those of the counterclaim. Outerio Forge and Bolt Co. v. Comet Cycle Co., 17 P. R. 156.

Co-defendant. |-One of the defendants. in an action brought to recover possession of land and to set aside a conveyance of the land from him to his co-defendant, delivered with his statement of defence a counterclaim against his co-defendant for relief upon the covenants contained in the conveyance attacked and in a prior mortgage deed, but sought no relief against the plaintiff in that regard, and did not serve a third party notice upon his co-defendant. The latter pleaded to the counterclaim, but at the trial moved to strike it out, and, after an expression of opinion from the trial Judge, the counterclaiming defendant submitted to have it struck out:— Held, that the co-defendant was entitled as against the counterclaiming defendant to such costs as he would have been entitled to upon a successful motion to strike out the counter-Held, also, that the fact of his having claim. pleaded to the counterclaim did not militate against his rights. Cope v. Crichton, 18 P.

Items Common to Defence and Counterclaim, |—A claim and counterclaim are to be treated as separate actions, and the costs are to be taxed in accordance with that principle; but items common to both defence and counterclaim should not be taxed, either in whole or in part, to a defendant who has succeeded upon his counterclaim, but should be wholly disallowed him. In re Brown, Ward v. Morse, 23 Ch. D. 377, followed, Griffiths v. Patterson, 22 L. R. Ir. 656, not followed, Summerfeldt v. Johnston, 17 P. R. G. distinguished. Haggert v. Town of Brumpton, 17 P. R. 477.

6. Disclaimer.

Disclaimer without Previous Notice.]

—A., an execution creditor of B., was made a defendant to a suit as claiming an interest in certain chattels which the defendant claimed as prior mortgagee. A filed an answer and disclaimer, but it appeared that his solicitor had given instructions to the sheriff to seize the interest of the debtor therein, if any:—Held, that before answering the bill he should have notified the plaintiff that he made no claim to the chattels, and that, not having done so, he was not entitled to the costs of the suit. Lymburner v. Clarke, 12 Gr. 30.

Formal Disclaimer not Filed.]—J., one of the defendants, had bid for and had become purchaser of a lot of land sold under the provisions of R. S. O. 1877 c. 216, by certain parties claiming to be the trustees of the Coloured Wesleyan Methodist Church, whose proceedings in respect of such attempted sale were impeached in the action to which J. was made a party defendant, although he avowed his willingness to withdraw from the purchase, and by his answer disclaimed all interest in the result of the suit, and alleged that no effort had been made by him to have the sale carried out, as he was aware that the same would have to be first confirmed by the members of the said church. At the trial judgment was pronounced setting aside the sale, and ordering the defendants generally to pay costs:—Held, that under the circumstances, a formal disclaimer was not required, and J. was ordered to be paid his costs of the appeal, but the action in the court below was dismissed as against him, without costs. Wansley v. Smallwood, 11 A. R. 439.

IV. Particular Items, Matters and Persons.

Abstract of Title,]—Attendance to bespeak and for registrar's abstract of title, to prepare for litigation or prove title, is not taxable against the opposite party. Carlisle v. Roblin, 16 P. R. 328.

Administration—Taxed Costs in Lieu of Commission. —See Wright v. Bell, 15 C. L. T. Occ. N. 193.

Affidavits—Irregular Filing.]—The costs of a fillavits for use on a motion in the weekly court filed with the clerk in chambers, instead of in the registrar's office, as required by Rule 102, should nevertheless be taxed, if otherwise taxable, where such affidavits have been before the court on the motion, and are recited in the order made thereon. Sturgeon Falls Electric Light and Power Co. v. Town of Sturgeon Falls, 19 P. R. 286.

Affidavit on Production.]—The plainimage six affidavits on production, either prompted by the action of the defence or by way of voluntary supplement to the original affidavit.—Held, that they were entitled to tax the costs of one affidavit only, with extra folios for the additional matter contained in the subsequent affidavits. Baldwin v. Quinn, Baldwin v. McGuire, 16 P. R. 248.

Affidavit on Production.]—Attendance to search affidavit on production is not taxable against the opposite party. Carlisle v. Roblin, 16 P. R. 328.

Agency Letters.]—Necessary letters between a solicitor and his agent on the business of the cause are taxable as between party and party, whether the agent resides in the county town of the county in which the solicitor resides, or in another county, or in Toronto. Agnew v. Plunkett, 9 P. R. 456.

Alimony—Counsel Fee.]—Rule 1144 does not warrant the making of an order for payment by defendant to plaintiff's solicitors in an alimony action, of a sum to cover counsel fees, unless it is shewn that the fees are to be paid to counsel who is not the solicitor for the plaintiff or the partner of the solicitor. Gallagher, Gallagher, IT P. R. 575.

Almony — Disbursements — Undertaking, I.—Notwithstanding the language of Rule 1144 — "only the amount of the cash disbursements actually and properly made by the plaintiff's solicitor"—an order may be made in an action for alimony for payment by the defendant to the plaintiff's solicitor of a sum to cover prospective witness fees, upon the undertaking of the solicitor to account for all sums not actually and properly disbursed. Stevenson v. Stevenson, 19 P. R. 48.

Appeal.]—Allowance on ground not taken below. See Page v. Austin, 7 A. R. 1; Ellis v. Midland R. W. Co., 7 A. R. 464; Garrett v. Roberts, 10 A. R. 650; Vancelsor v. Hughson, 9 A. R. 330.

Appeal from Report — Evidence.]—Hidd, that the defendant was not entitled to tax as part of his costs of the plaintiff's appeal from the report the amount paid for a copy of the evidence taken before the referee, which was required by the defendant for his own appeal. Denison v. Woods, 18 P. R. 328.

Application to Stay Proceedings.]—Held, that the costs of a chamber application to stay-proceedings until term in a superior court case tried at the county court under the Law Reform Act 1888, are taxable under a rule for a new trial upon payment of costs, the county court Judge having refused to stay the proceedings. Merchants Bank v. Ross, 6 P. R. 214.

Arbitration.]—In taxing the costs of an arbitration upon the county court scale, no larger fee for attendance of counsel before the arbitrators than $25 can be allowed, even though the attendance is for several days, Re Montague and Township of Aldborough, 12 P. R. 140.

Arbitration — Increased Fees.] — Item 13 of Tariff A, Con. Rules, should be read as part of item 164; and the taxing officers at Toronto have authority to consider the question of increased counsel fees in the case of an arbitration where there is no cause in court and a reference to a local officer to tax costs has been made under R. S. O. 1887 c. 55, s. 24. Ke McKeen and Township of South Gover, 12 P. R. 553.

Arbitration—Second Counsel Fee.]—In taxing the costs of an arbitration, a taxing officer has jurisdiction, in his discretion, to allow a second counsel fee. The provision of R. S. O. 1887 c. 53, s. 25, that not more than one counsel fee shall be taxed, is inconsistent with item 164 of the tariff of costs appended to the Consolidated Rules, 1888, and, by virtue of 51 Vict. c. 2, s. 4, must be taken to be repealed. Re McKeen and Township of South Gower, 12 P. R. 553, followed, Howard v. Herrington, 20 A. R. 175, and Arscott v. Lilley, 14 A. R. 283, distinguished. Re Pollock and City of Toronto, 15 P. R. 355.

Assignee.]—The assignee for the benefit of creditors, may be ordered to pay the costs of the action personally as any other unsuccessful litigant may be. Macdonald v. Balfour, 20 A. R. 404.

Assignee — Costs of Litigation in respect to Disputed Claim.] — An assignee for the benefit of creditors, on instructions of the inspectors, contested the plaintiff's claim, who then brought an action, which was dismissed with costs, because of the cost of t

Assignee—Removal of.]—Where a Judge of 1887 c, 124, s, 6, orders the removal of an assignee, he exercises a statutory jurisdiction as persona designata, and has no power to order payment of costs. The proceedings in such a case are not in any court; and Rule 1170 (a) does not apply to them. Re Pacquette, 11 P. R. 493, followed. History and construction of Rule 1170 (a). Re Jonng, 14 P. R. 303.

Attending for Depositions.]—Attendames to bespeak copies of depositions of parties, on their examination for discovery in the action, should be taxed. Alexander v. School Trustees of Gloucester, 11 P. R. 157.

Attending on Notice without Payment,]—Plaintiff having attended under defendants' notice, without being paid, which she was not bound to do, the court refused to direct her expenses to be deducted from defendants' costs. Ham v. Lasher, 24 U. C. R. 557.

Attending to Hear Judgment.]—Attendance to hear judgment should only be taxed once, that is, attendance when judgment is delivered. How v. Lusher, 24 U. C. R. 357. Defendants could not tax the costs of enlarging plaintiffs' rule for their own convenience. Ib.

Attending to Hear Judgment.]—A fee for attending to hear judgment on a day fixed, when the Judge deferred it till a subsequent day at Toronto, should have been taxed. A fee for attending to hear judgment at Toronto should have been taxed, although a fee on a previous attendance, when judgment was deferred, had been allowed, and a charge for sending a telegram advising defendants of result of judgment, by direction of Judge, should have been allowed. Alexander v. School Trustees of Gloucester, 11 P. R. 157.

Attorney Paid by Salary.]—Right to recover costs from opposite party where attorney is paid by a fixed salary. See Stevenson v. City of Kingston, 31 C. P. 333.

Barrister Conducting his own Case.]

—A solicitor, who is also a barrister, cannot tax a counsel fee to himself when he sues in person and conducts his own case.

Smith v. Graham, 2 U. C. R. 268.

But the rule does not extend to partners. Henderson v. Comer, 3 L. J. 29.

Barrister Conducting his own Case.]—A counsel conducting his own case in court cannot tax a counsel fee against the opposite party. Smith v. Graham, 2 U. C. R. 268, followed. Clarke v. Creighton, 15 P. R. 105.

Barrister and Solicitor Acting for Himself and Co-Trustees.]—One of several trustees who is a barrister and solicitor, and acts for himself and his co-trustees as solicitor and counsel in an action, may tax against the opposite party his full costs, including instructions and counsel fees. Cradock v. Piper, I Macn. & G. 634, followed. Smith v. Graham, 2 U. C. R. 268, distinguished. Strachan v. Ruttan, 15 P. R. 169.

Bonus By-law—Scrutiny]—Under s. 372 of the Municipal Act, R. S. O. 1897 c. 223, a county court Judge, on a scrutiny of the ballot papers cast on the voting for a bonus by-law, cannot award costs against the corporation if it be successful in upholding the by-law. Township of Aldborough v. Schmeltz, 32 O. R. 64.

Brief.]—Where fees paid to witnesses are disallowed, the portions of counsel's brief containing their evidence should also be disallowed. Carlisle v. Roblin, 16 P. R. 328.

Brief.]-See Re Robinson, 16 P. R. 423.

Building Societies—Petition.] — A person died in the United States of America having moneys to his credit deposited upon savings bank account with two building societies doing business in Ontario, incorporated under R. S. O. 1887 c. 169. An administrator appointed by a court in the foreign country applied to the building societies to have the moneys transferred to him, but the societies, entertaining doubts whether the words of s. 47 of R. S. O. 1887 c. 169. "share, bond, debenture, or obligation" applied to a savings bank account, petitioned the court under s. 49:—Held, that the word "obligation" covered the liability of the petitioners to repay the amount deposited with them:—Held, also, that the doubts of the petitioners were reasonable and they were entitled to costs. Re Ging, 20 O. R. 1.

Company — Liquidator.] — An order was made by a county court, under R. S. O. 1887 c. 183, for the winding-up of the companies, and a liquidator was appointed, who brought in a list of contributories. The contributories shewed cause to their names being settled upon the list, and the court made an order in the case of each of them, reciting that it appeared there was no jurisdiction to make the winding-up order and that all proceedings were irregular or null, and ordering that each contributory should have his costs of shewing cause, to be paid by the companies and the liquidator:—Held, that if there was jurisdiction to make the winding-up order, the contributories could not defend themselves by shewing that it was irregular or erroneous; and if there was no jurisdiction, all the proceedings were coram non judice, and there was no jurisdiction, the court being an inferior one, to order the liquidator or the companies to pay the costs. And even if there was jurisdiction, in the circumstances of this case it should not have been exercised against the liquidator. Rule 1256 does not apply to proceedings under the Winding-up Act, either by virtue of s. 34 of the Act or otherwise. Remarks as to multiplicity of orders taken out in the matters. Re Cosmopolitan Life Association, Re Cosmopolitan Casualty Association, 15 P. R. 185.

Company — Liquidator] — Where an action is brought by the liquidator of a company in liquidation, in the name of the company, and he is not otherwise a party to it, he cannot be ordered personally to pay the costs of it. Ontario Forge and Bolt Co. v. Comet Cycle Co., 17 P. R. 156.

Company-Liquidator Intervening - Personal Order for Costs. |—After the action was at issue, an order was made by a Quebec court directing the winding-up of the defendant company and appointing a liquidator. ant company and appointing a liquidator. The plaintiff then obtained leave from that to proceed with this action. Afterwards the liquidator obtained an order from that court authorizing him to intervene and defend this action in his own name as liquida-tor; he then applied to this court in this action, and obtained an order that the action proceed in the name of the plaintiff against the company and the liquidator :-Held, that the liquidator having thus intervened and made himself a party to the action, and hav-ing appeared by his counsel at the trial and contested the claim of the plaintiff, the latter, having succeeded upon his claim, was entitled to a judgment for his costs both against the company and the liquidator per-This court had no authority to direct sonally. This court had no authorise himself that the liquidator might reimburse himself out of the assets; that was a question for the court in the Province of Quebec having control of the assets. Boyd v. Dominion Cold Storage Co., 17 P. R. 468.

Convictions.]—Remarks on the question of costs in quashing convictions. Regina v. Westlake, 21 O. R. 619.

The court in considering the question of costs suggested that in future with the notice of motion for a certiforari, a notice might also be served stating that unless the prosecution was then abandoned, and further proceedings rendered unnecessary, costs would be asked for, when a strong case would be made for granting the defendant costs in cases in which it would be unjust and unfair to put defendant to such costs. Regina v. Westgate, 21 O. R. 621.

Convictions quashed with costs to be paid by the prosecutor. Regina v. Hazen, 23 O. R. 387.

The practice is not to give costs on quashing a conviction. Regina v. Johnston, 38 U. C. R. 546, followed. Regina v. Somers, 24 O. R. 244.

Costs of quashing conviction withheld from successful defendant, where he filed no affidavit denying his guilt, or casting doubt upon the correctness of the magistrate's conclusion upon the facts. Regina v. Steele, 26 O. R. 540

Co-owners of Ship.]-In actions of account between co-owners the rule as to the incidence of costs followed by the courts of law in partnership actions, may be adopted in a court of admiralty.—In an action of account where there is a deficiency of assets the court may order the costs of the proceedings to be borne equally by the co-owners, Sidley v. The Ship "Dominion," Sidley v. The Ship "Arctic," 5 Ex. C. R. 190.

Copies.]—A writ of summons is a "pleading or other document" within the meaning of Rule 395, and more than four copies cannot be taxed. The provision of Rule 395 as to four copies covers all copies required during litigation, and extends to the copy of pleadings in the brief. Sparks v. Purdy, 15 P. R. 1

Copies—Depositions.]—See Re Robinson, 16 P. R. 423.

Copies.—Depositions.]—In taxing the costs of a motion in chambers, no allowance can be made for copies of depositions taken for use upon the motion, Rennie v. Block, 17 P. R. 317.

Copies—Judgments.]—Charges for procuring copies of opinions of Judges in another action, for the instruction of counsel, should not be taxed as between party and party, Platt v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 12 P. R. 273.

Costs Out of Estate—Successful Litigent in Effect Paying Costs.]—The supreme court of New Brunswick, while deciding against the next of kin on his claim as against the husband to the residue of the estate of a feme covert, directed that his costs should be paid out of the estate. The next of kin's appeal to the supreme court of Canada was dismissed with costs, and the direction as to costs of the court below was struck out of the decree, as that direction had the effect of making the successful party pay the costs. Lamb v. Cleveland, 19 S. C. R. 78.

Counsel Fees—Advising on Evidence— Reference—Brief—Copies of Depositions.]— Upon appeal from the taxation between solicitor and client of a bill of costs for the defence of an action of redemption in which, before the beginning of the sittings at which the action was entered for trial, an arrange-ment had been made between the parties that all the matters in question should be referred to a master, and accordingly no witnesses were subpænaed, and a reference was directed at the sittings :- Held, that the taxing officer had no discretion to allow an increased counsel fee with brief at the trial, as the action could not be said to be of a special and im-portant character, nor to allow a fee for ad-vising on evidence. The reference lasted for 137 hours, 18 of which were occupied in argument. Nearly the whole of the time was dewhether the defendant should be charged with an occupation rent, and if so at what The master found that they were chargeable with a rent of $312.50. ing officer allowed the solicitor $302 for the time occupied in taking the evidence and $47 for the argument: — Held, that the allowance of counsel fees upon a reference, under clause 107 of the tariff, should be exceptional and made only when matters of special importance or difficulty are involved at some particular sitting; and also that the taxing officer should have taken into consideration the unreasonable time occupied over so small a matter, and have exercised his discretion by confining the solicitor to the minimum allowance of $1 an hour, under clause 104 of the tariff, for the argument as well as for the taking of the evidence. The taxing officer allowed the solicitor $77.50 for brief upon appeal from the master's report; this amount included $67.80 paid to the master for copies of the depositions:—Held, that the solicitor had no prima facie right to order and charge for these copies, and, in the absence of any authority from his clients, should not be allowed for them upon taxation. The taxing officer allowed the solicitor $35 counsel fee upon the appeal, $12 for travelling expenses, and $10 counsel fee upon the plain-tiff's motion for judgment, which came before the court with the appeal:—Held, that these allowances, though liberal, were not so clearly wrong as to justify the court in interfering. Re Robinson, 16 P. R. 423. An appeal to the court of appeal was dismissed, the members of the court being divided in opinion as to the regularity of the taxation.

Alimony—Consent Judyment.]—
The parties to an alimony suit consented to a decree, whereby defendant was ordered forthwith to "pay the plaintiff the sum of $75, and all disbursements in the suit as between solicitor and client, including sheriff's fees on executions; such disbursements to be taxed and allowed by the master of this court:—Held, that in proceeding under this decree the master had properly allowed to the plaintiff a sum of $50 paid by the plaintiff to her solicitors, they being also counsel, for counsel fees on the examination and hearing of the cause. Bucke v. Bucke, 21 Gr. 77.

— Appeal from Taxation.]—No counsel fee was allowed upon an appeal from pending taxation of costs to the master under Con. Rule 854. Re Nelson, 13 P. R. 30.

— Change in Tariff.]—An appeal to the court of appeal was heard in 1894, but the costs thereof awarded to one party against the other were not taxed until 1899:—Held, that the counsel fees on the argument must be taxed in accordance with the tariff in force in 1894, notwithstanding the provisions of Rules 2 and 1178, and the alteration made in the tariff as to such counsel fees; cf. item 155 of tariff A. appended to the Consolidated Rules of 1888 with item 149 of tariff A. appended to the Rules of 1897. Delap v. Charlebois, 18 P. R. 417.

Commission to Examine Witnesses Abroad. — Upon the settlement of an action it was arranged that the defendants should pay the plaintiff's costs less counsel fees:— Held, that a per diem charge of $20 for attendance in a foreign country on a commission issued by defendants, was to be regarded as a solicitor's attendance and not as that of a counsel. Greey v. Smith, 7 C. L. T. Occ. N. 168.

——— Counsel not Attending.]—A counsel fee will be taxed between party and party, even though the counsel did not attend the trial. Henderson v. Comer, 3 L. J. 29.

Discretion of Local Officer—Increased Counsel Fees.]—See Re Macaulay, 18 P. R. 184. Entry for Trial.]—A counsel fee on hearing is not taxable until the cause has been set down for hearing, and notice of hearing given. Dewar v. Orr, 3 Ch. Ch. 141.

Hearing Before Master.]—Where evidence taken before the master, sitting for a Judge, was entered in the decree as having been taken in court, the same fees were taxed to counsel before the master as before a Judge. Rae v. Trim, 8 P. R. 405.

Increased Fee.]—An application for an increased counsel fee must be to the Judge who tried the case. Ratrick v. Monarch Ins. Co., 3 L. J. 30.

of Counsel, —On motion by plaintiffs to revise taxation:—Held, that under rule of court of H. T. 22 Viet. (18 U. C. R. 58), no single Judge is authorized to grant an order for a larger counsel fee than the tariff specifies, nor can the master allow more as between party and party. If brief for second counsel was actually prepared, his accidental absence was actually prepared, his accidental absence v. Lasher, 24 U. C. R. 351.

——Liability of Client.]—An attorney is entitled to recover against his client fees paid to counsel conducting the case at the trial. Brock v. Bond, 3 U. C. R. 349.

Motion.]—On an application for further security for costs, a counsel fee of $10 was allowed. Bell v. Landon, 9 P. R. 100.

—Partner of Litigant.]—The rule that a person cannot tax a counsel fee in his own case does not extend to his partner. Henderson v. Comer, 3 L. J. 29.

Postponement of Trial.]—Where, hefore the commission day, an order had been obtained to postpone the trial on payment of costs, and the plaintiff afterwards, on taxation of costs, claimed a counsel fee as paid to the partner of plaintiff's attorney, without shewing when or how paid; and it appeared that the record had not been entered for trial, the master refused to tax the counsel fee; and a summons for a revision of his taxation was discharged. Manary v. Dash, 9 L. J. 327.

—Reference — Advising on Evidence.]
—An action by an architect to recover $690 for professional services was by consent referred for trial to an official referce, who reported that the plaintiff was entiled to recover $397. The defendant had before action tendered $225, and had paid that amount into court with his defence. The defendant appealed from the report, and the plaintiff also appealed, after the defendant's appeal had been set down. Both appeals were dismissed with costs. A further appeal by the defendant to the court of appeal was also dismissed: —Held, upon appeal from taxation of costs, that the plaintiff was entitled to tax a counsel fee upon the trial before the referee, the amount of which would not be reviewed, and also a fee for counsel advising on evidence. Re Robinson, 16 P. R. 423, distinguished. Denison v. Woods, 18 P. R. 328.

Reference at Trial.]—Held, that a counsel fee may be taxed for the trial, although the case was referred to arbitration without being entered upon. Wood v. Foster, 6 P. R. 175.

—Settlement Before Trial.]—Where in a country cause the record was entered and afterwards settled before the commission day, the master, upon consulting the chief justice of the common pleas, refused to allow the costs of entering the record or counsel fee. Hingston v. Whelan, 8 L. J. 72.

—Taxing Officer's Powers.]—The Administration of Justice Act, 1885, has not conferred upon local registrars of the high court the power of taxing counsel fees of any greater amount than is allowed by the tariff of costs in force. Bank of British North America v. Western Assurance Co., 11 P. R. 30.

—Taxing Officer's Discretion.] — The discretion of the taxing officer as to counsed fee at the trial should not be interfered with. Alexander v. School Trustees of Gloucester, 11 P. R. 157.

Taxing Officer's Discretion.]—Held, that the amount to be allowed per diem to arbitrators and counsel was a matter peculiarly within the province of the taxing officer, and his decision should not be interfered with. Re Illilyard and Royal Insurance Co., 12 P. It. 285.

— Taxing Officer's Discretion.]—The master, in a case occupying three days, allowed 875 to the senior counsel and 830 to the junior, and declined to tax a counsel fee for consultation between counsel previous to trial, The Judge refused to interfere, Fox v. Toronto and Nipissing R. W. Co., 7 P. R. 157.

Taxing Officer's Discretion.]—The discretion of a taxing officer as to the amount of counsel fees will not be interfered with upon appeal. Talbot v. Poole, 15 P. R. 274.

— Taxing Officer's Discretion.] — The practice is not to interfere upon appeal with the discretion of a taxing officer as to the quantum of a counsel fee. Rondot v. Monetary Times Printing Co., 18 P. R. 141.

Trial Alone to be Considered. —The counsel's fee should be exclusively as for fee with brief at the trial. Doe d. Boulton v. Switzer, 1 C. L. Ch. S3.

— Two Fees.]—The question of the allowance of counsel fees is one for the discretion of the taxing officer; and where the action is strennously contested on both sides, it is proper to allow fees to both senior and junior counsel. Carlisle v. Roblin, 16 P. R. 328.

Crown.)—In an action in the nature of an information filed by the attorney-general, costs will not be allowed to the defendant against the Crown. Regina v. Mainwaring, 5 O. S. 670.

Crown.] — The attorney-general is never made to pay costs, even upon interlocutory proceedings. Gibson v. Clench, 1 Ch. €9.

Crown.]—The rule that the Crown neither elaims nor pays costs is favoured by the court as most consistent with the dignity of the Crown and the practice of the court; and where the Crown is made a party in consequence of the discharge of an international duty, and out of courtesy or for form's sake, having no substantial interest in the question at issue, and no interests have suffered, and no loss accrued by the Crown dischaiming or not appearing, the court will certainly not order costs to be paid to the attorney-general. United States v. Denison, 2 Ch. Ch. 263.

an action for libel the defendants, in support of their defence of justification, obtained a commission and land the evidence of certain witnesses out of the jurisdiction taken thereunder for use at the trial. The evidence, however, the summer of the summer of the summer of the plantiff being called as a winess by the summer of the plantiff being called as a winess by what was stated by the mitting substantially what was stated by the mitting substantially what was stated by the mitting substantially what the defendants, having obtained judgment in their favour with costs, were entitled to tax against the plaintiff the costs of executing the commission, the taking of the evidence having been, under the circumstances, not unreasonable, and the fact that it was not used not being sufficient to deprive the defendants of the costs of it. Romdot v. Monctary Times Printing Co., 18 P. R. 141.

Demurrer, I.—Where a demurrer has been left to be disposed of by the trial Judge, and has not been so disposed of by the trial Judge, and has not been so disposed of by the wise ing judgment in the action, as the state of the costs of it, and any application for that purpose should be made to him; but if to another Judge, it must be to a Judge in court. The master in chambers, having no jurisdiction to decide a demurrer, has none to determine the costs of it, Jones v. Miller, 16 P. R. 92.

Director—Solicitor, I—Where a director, who was also president, of a company was appointed by the board of directors and acted as solicitor for the company:—Held, in winding-up proceedings, that he was entitled to profit costs in respect of causes in court conducted by him as solicitor for the company, but not in respect of business done out of court, and was entitled to set off the amount of such costs against the amount of his liability as a shareholder. Cradock v. Piper, 1 Manca, & G. 694, followed. Re Minico Secretic and Briek Manufacturing Co., Pearson's Case, 23 O. R. 289.

Discontinuance.] — Where the plaintiff serves a notice of discontinuance under Rule 641, the defendant is entitled to a reasonable time within which to apply for an appointment to tax his costs, and until after the lapse of that time an appointment will not be granted to the plaintiff, even where he is entitled upon the final taxation to tax interlocutory costs which may exceed the defendant's general costs. Under Rule 641 it is not necessary for the plaintiff to ascertain the amount of the defendant's costs and pay them to make the notice of discontinuance effectual. Barry v. Hartley, 15 P. R. 376.

Discretion.]—By their statement of claim the plaintiffs alleged themselves to be creditors for wages of two of the defendants, and they sought relief against the third defendant only as having obtained certain assets from the other two, either 'fraudulently or upon a trust to pay the plaintiffs' claims. In their reply they set up that they were creditors of the third defendant himself, upon the ground that he was really the person who bired them. There was no subsequent pleading:—Held, that the reply was a direct violation of Rule 419; and that the trial Judge was within his right in refusing, in his discretion, to try the action until the issues were properly presented upon the pleadings, and in directing that the costs of the postponement should be borne by the plaintiffs. No opinion expressed as to whether a divisional court had power to review such a ruling. Hurd v. Hostarick, 16 P. R. 121.

Drainage Actions. |—Where actions begun in the high court were referred at the trial to the drainage referee, and upon appeal from his report an order was made by an appellate court for taxation and payment of costs of the actions:—Held, that they were not costs coming within the previsions of s. 24, s.-s. 4, of the Drainage Trials Act, 1841, but were to be taxed in the usual way in which costs of actions are taxed, and subject to the same right of appeal, Crooks v. Tournship of Ellice, 16 P. R. 553.

Election—Dismissal of Petition—Sheriff's Costs of Publication.]—Where an election petition is dismissed at the trial without costs the petitioner must pay to the sheriff the costs incurred in the publication of the notice of trial thereof; and although the sum deposited as security is not a security for such expenditure, payment out of court will only be ordered on the condition of its being made good to the sheriff. No charge can be made by the sheriff for attending to the publication, no allowance therefor being authorized by the tariff. East Middlesex (Provincial), 2 E. C. 150.

Enlargement of Motion.]—A counsel fee of $5 for each necessary and proper enlargement of a court motion should be taxed. McCallum v. McCallum, 11 P. R. 179.

Estate—Persons not Trustees.]—The costs payable out of an estate to persons not trustees thereof, were directed to be taxed between party and party only. Gray v. Hatch, 18 Gr. 72

Evidence—Advising on.]—See Re Robinson, 16 P. R. 423.

Examination de Bene Esse.]—An order was obtained by the plaintiff, who sued for damages for bodily injuries sustained, for his own examination de bene esse before the trial. The order provided that after the conclusion of the plaintiff's examination, he should submit to a personal examination by medical men on behalf of the defendants, and that the defendants might afterwards continue their cross-examination of the plaintiff; and that the examination might be given in evidence at the trial, "provided the defendants had been able to continue and complete their cross-examination of the plaintiff after the said medical examination." The plaintiff was examined, and partly cross-examined, under this order, and was examined by the medical men, but his cross-examination, owing to his ill-health, was never completed. The plaintiff was not examined as a witness at the trial; the depositions taken were offered in evidence, but were rejected as inadmissible under the terms of the order. The plaintiff succeeded in the action :- Held, under the circumstances of the case, that the examination of the plaintiff de bene esse was a proper and reasonable proceeding, and as the failure to complete it was through no fault of the plaintiff or his solicitor, and as it was not without use to the defendants, the costs of it should have been taxed to the plaintiff as part of the costs of the action. Beaufort v. Ashburnham, 13 C. R. N. S. 388; 32 L. J. N. S. C. P. 97; 7 L. T. N. S. 710; 11 W. R. 267; 9 Jur. 822, followed. Carty v. City of London, 13 P. R. 285.

Examination for Discovery.]—An objection that a person examined by the defendants for discovery was not an officer or representative of the plaintiffs should have been taken at the outset and was not open on taxation. Township of Loyan v. Kirk, 14 P. R. 130.

By Rule 1384, Rule 1177 was rescinded and a new Rule substituted, providing that the costs of every interlocutory examination should be horne by the examining party, unless otherwise ordered. Where an action was begun and the defendants examined for discovery before the Rule was passed, but was tried and judgment given after it was passed, but before it came into force:—Held, that the new Rule applied, and the taxing officer had no power to tax to the successful plaintiff the costs of the examination without an order therefor. Application for such order should be made to the trial Judge at the trial or immediately after judgment. McClary v. Plunkett, 16 P. R. 310.

Executors and Administrators — Just Allowances — Unsuccessful Litigation.] — Where the administrators of the estate of a deceased assignee for creditors defended in good faith an action brought by his successor in the trust to recover damages for breach of trust committed by the intestate and being unsuccessful were obliged to pay the plaintiff's costs and those of their own solicitors, they were held entitled to credit for these payments in passing heir accounts. Where it is plain that a dispute can be settled only by litigation it is not necessary for a trustee to ask the advice of the court before defending. In re Williams, 22 A. R. 190

Executors—Mortgage Action.]—Where an action to enforce a mortgage by foreclosure is brought against the executors of a deceased mortgage, and an order for payment of the mortgage debt is, in addition, asked against the executors, and judgment is entered for default of appearance, only the additional costs occasioned by the latter claim should be taxed against the executors personally. Miles v. Brown, 15 P. R. 375.

Executors—Unsuccessful Action to Establish Will.]—Where the person named as an executor in a written instrument failed, in the final result of this action, to establish it as the last will of the testator, and the court of last resort refused to order that his costs incurred therein should be paid out of the estate:—Held, that the court of first instance could not make an order for payment, out of moneys paid into that court by the administrators pendente lite, of these costs as costs of the litigation, because they were refused by the only tribunal which had jurisdiction to award them, nor as costs and expenses properly incurred by the applicant in the performance of his duties as executor, because he never was an executor. Purcell v. Bergin, 16 P. R. 301.

Exemplification of Judgment.]— Refore a party can tax the costs of obtaining an exemplification of judgment, he must serve the other side with notice to admit, under rule 28 E, T, 1842; but the master may allow the costs of procuring a copy of the roll. Conger v. McKechnie, 1 C. L. Ch. 220.

Ex parte Motion.]—Costs should not be awarded against another person upon an exparte motion. McLean v. Allen, 14 P. R. 84.

Ex parte Order.]—Counsel fee on attendance to obtain ex parte order is not taxable against the opposite party. Carlisle v. Roblin, 16 P. R. 328.

Ex parte Order.]—Where ex parte orders for the appointment of a receiver were made in respect of two parcels of stock which the plaintiff feared might be disposed of if notice were given, and in both cases costs were given to the applicant:—Held, that the disposition of the costs should not be reviewed on motion to continue the receiver. McLean v. Allen, 14 P. R. 84, distinguished. Stark v. Ross, 17 P. R. 237.

Expropriation. — In expropriation cases the costs should be taxed liberally in favour of the propriefor; but where the statutes mention "costs" only, and not "full costs," costs as between solicitor and client are not intended. Re Bronson and Canada Atlantic R. W. Co., 13 P. R. 440.

Where a railway company in expropriating land under the Dominion Railway Act agreed to pay to the land-owners "all costs incidental to pay to the land-owners "all costs incidental to first the companion of the land owners "all costs incidental to the partial that the words did not extend to costs as between solicitor and client, nor to costs preliminary to the arbitration.

Fee Revising Reply.]—Upon an appeal from the taxation of the plaintiff's party and party costs:—Held, a counsel fee for settling plaintiff's reply to the defendant's counterclaim should have been taxed in addition to fee allowed on settling statement of claim. Alexander v. School Trustees of Gloucester, 11 P. R. 157.

Foreign Commission.]—Upon taxation a fee was properly allowed for counsel in British Columbia attending upon examination of witnesses there. Township of Logan v. Kirk, 14 P. R. 130.

Increasing Fees.]—The discretion of a Judge to order an increase of fees, payable to solicitor or counsel, has been taken away by the general orders 511 and 608. Re Curry, 24 Gr. 528.

Indictment for Nuisance.]—Upon an application for a rule to tax the costs of proceedings on an indictment for nuisance under 5 & 6 Will. & Mary, c. 33, and that they should be allowed to a particular person, the court refused the rule. A side bar rule is granted in England to tax these costs as a matter of course, but this application went further. Regina v. Gordon, Regina v. Robson, 8 C. P. 58.

Infant.]—An infant cannot during infancy avoid a lease by him, reserving rent for his benefit, and possession of the demised premises will be ordered to be given in an action by the lessee for that purpose. Hartshorn v. Early, 19 C. P. 139, and Slator v. Brady, 14 H. C. L. R. 61, 342, followed. The discretion given by Con. Rule 1170 as to costs authorizes the imposition against the infant of the costs of an action to enforce such lease, including the costs of the official guardian, paid by the plaintiffs. Lipsett v. Perdue, 18 O. R. 575.

Infant—Next Friend—Costs out of Estate or Share. |—The plaintiffs, infants suing by a next friend, claimed against their father and the executors of a will a forfeiture by their father of his share of the testator's estate, and that they had become entitled to it. The action was occasioned by acts which, if they occurred, were done by the legatee after the testator's death. The action was successful in the high court, but was dismissed on appeal to the court of appeal:—Held, that the costs should not be made payable out of the testator's estate, nor out of the share of the infants' father, but should be paid by the next friend, without prejudice to his claim for indemnity out of the shares of the infants whenever they should come into possession. In general a next friend is in the same position as any other litigant, and receives or pays costs personally as between himself and the defendants. Smith v. Mason, IT P. R. 444.

Infringement of Copyright.]-Where judgment was pronounced by consent de-claring that the defendant had infringed the claring that the derendant had hirringed plaintiffs' copyright, restraining him from continuing to infringe, and directing a refer-ence to ascertain the damages sustained by reason of the infringement, and the master found that the damages were only $6.70, and also reported specially that the plaintiffs were aware before action that the defendant was willing to hand over all copies of and to stop selling or giving away the publications question, but the plaintiffs demanded $100 compensation, and that after action the defendant offered to pay $25 for damages and costs and to deliver up any of the publications on hand and to give an undertaking that there would be no further infringement, plaintiffs did not accept the offer :-Held, that the plaintiffs were entitled to the costs of the action; and also to the costs of the reference, the defendant not having, when consenting to judgment, offered to pay a fixed sum for damages and to pay it into court. Anglo-Canadian Music Publishing Association v. Somerville, 19 P. R. 113.

Injunction.]—Where the result of a motion for an interlocutory injunction depended upon a question of law and not of fact, and the motion was reheard at the instance of the defendant, against whom an injunction had been ordered, the court, on reversing such order, gave the defendant the costs of the motion as well as of the rehearing. Fire Extinguisher Co. v. North Western (Babcock) Fire Extinguisher Co. 20 Gr. 625.

Injunction.]—The plaintiff was ordered to pay the costs of an interim injunction obtained by him, because the facts proved at the trial shewed no anticipation of such immediate and serious damage as to justify the application for it. Sklitzsky v. Cranston, 22 O. R. 590.

Instructions for Affidavit of Dis-bursements.] — Instructions for common affidavit of disbursements were properly dis-allowed. Alexander v. School Trustees of Gloucester, 11 P. R. 157.

Instructions for Brief.] — Instructions for brief should be allowed where the brief itself is allowed. McCallum v. McCallum, 11 P. R. 179.

Instructions for Examination.] - Instructions for the examination of the plaintiff, and of the defendants, each $2, should have been taxed. Alexander v. School Trustees of Gloucester, 11 P. R. 157.

Instructions for Reply-Proceedings to Save Expense.] — On a taxation between party and party, instructions for reply will not be allowed, as well as instructions for statement of claim. But expenses incurred in procuring a deed, and certain other documents, which caused a saving of expense, were allowed. Torrance v. Torrance, 9 P. R. 271.

Instructions to Defend.]-A bill had been filed but not served, and was subsequently dismissed with costs by the plaintiff. It appeared that, though no answer had been drawn, the defendant's solicitor had received instructions to defend, some two months be-fore the dismissal of the bill:—Held, that defendant was entitled to tax instructions, and the costs of the taxation. Bissett v. Strachan, 8 P. R. 211.

Interlocutory Costs.]-Where under the judgment in an action the costs thereof are to be taxed to one party, and under interlocutory orders certain costs are payable to the opposite party in any event on the final taxation the taxing officer should not close the taxation of the costs of the action and certify the result until the interlocutory costs are taxed, unless there is unreasonable delay in bringing in a bill of the latter costs. Cousineau v. Park, 15 P. R. 37.

Interpleader-Sheriff's Fees and Costs-Divided Success. 1-Where an interpleader is sue, ordered upon the application of a sheriff who had seized certain goods under the direction of the execution creditors, was determined as to part of the goods in favour of the claimant and as to the remainder in favour of the execution creditors, and no costs of the issue were given to either party to it :- Held, that the execution creditors should pay the sheriff his fees and poundage on the value of the part of the goods they were found entitled to, and his costs of the interpleader application and of a subsequent application to dispose of the costs, &c.; and that the execution creditors should have an order over against the claimant for one-half of such costs. Ontario Silver Co. v. Tasker, 15 P. R. 180.

Interpleader - Reservation.]-The costs of an interpleader issue should not be reserved by the interpleader order to be disposed of in chambers, but should be left to be dealt with by the trial Judge. Grothe v. Pearce, 15 P. R. 432.

Judgment Debtor.]-Under Rule 1180, the costs of proceedings to examine a judgment debtor may be allowed, in the discretion of the court or a Judge, where the examination has not actually taken place. And where the judgment debtor attended upon an appointment for his examination, procured an enlargement, and meanwhile, under force of the proceedings, paid the judgment debt, he was ordered to pay the costs of the proceedings. Popham v. Flynn, 15 P. R. 286.

Justice of the Peace.]—Where a plain-tiff in an action against a magistrate for acting maliciously and without reasonable and probable cause, being guilty of the offence of probable cause, being guilty of the offence of which he was convicted, was, under the opera-tion of C. S. U. C. c. 126, s. 17, restricted to the recovery of only three cents damages, he was held not to be entitled to any costs what-ever. Haacke v. Adamson, 10 L. J. 270. Held, that ss. 18 and 19 of C. S. U. C. c. 126, taken together must be limited "to any such action" not provided for in s. 17 of the such action" not provided for in s. 17 of the same Act. 1b.

Held, that no one can have costs taxed to him who did not incur costs. Ib.

Laud Titles Act-Costs as between Solicitor and Client—Costs as of a Court Mo-tion.]—A local master of titles has power by virtue of ss. 137 and 74 of the Land Titles Act, R. S. O. 1887 c. 116, in ordering that a caution be vacated, to direct payment by the cautioner of costs as between solicitor and client; and by rule 16 (2) of the rules in the schedule to the Act has power to give a special direction that costs as of a court motion may be taxed. And where a master in his discretion so ordered, a Judge in chambers refused to interfere, more especially as the appeal was late and could only be entertained as an indulg-ence. Re Ross and Stobic, 14 P. R. 241.

Liability to Solicitor-Taxation against Opposite Party.]—Where, by the terms of an express contract, a party is not to be liable for costs to the solicitor representing him in an action, he cannot tax costs against the op-posite party. Jarvis v. Great Western R. W. Co., S C. P. 280, and Stevenson v. City of Kingston, 31 C. P. 333, approved. Meriden Britannia Co. v. Braden, 16 P. R. 410; 17 P.

Litigant in Person.] - The judgment debtor appeared in person and argued his own case on appeal:—Held, that he should be allowed to set off against the judgment debt his disbursements and a moderate allowance for his time and trouble on the argument. Millar v. Macdonald, 14 P. R. 499.

Local Master.] — Held, that the local masters, who are paid by fees instead of salary, are entitled to charge one dollar per hour in money under chancery tariff of 23rd March, 1875, when taxing costs. McGannon v. Clarke, 9 P. R. 555.

Maritime Law-Action in rem-Benefit to Claimants Generally.]-Where a party in an action in rem has incurred costs which have benefited not only himself but parties in other actions against the res, the costs so incurred by him will, if the proceeds of the property are insufficient to satisfy all claims in the various actions, be paid to him out of the fund in court before any other payment is made thereout. The Queen v. The City of Windsor, Symes v. The City of Windsor, 5 Ex. C. R. 223 Maritime Law—Towage.]—In an ordinary contract of towage the vessel in tow has control over the tug, and if the pilot of the tow negligently allows the tug to steer a dangerous course whereby the tow is injured the tug is not responsible in damages therefor. (2.) Where a very great part of the blame is to be attributed to the tug the costs of the latter in defending the action may not be allowed. The "Prince Arthur" v. Jewell (The "Florence,") 5 Ex. C. R. 151.

Married Woman.] — Where a solicitor such a married woman and her husband upon an untaxed bill of costs, and, in default of appearance, signed judgment against both defendants personally for the amount of the bill and interest:—Held, that the judgment was irregular and might have been set aside with costs if the defendant had applied promptly; and, under the circumstances, the judgment was amended by limiting it as to the married woman to her separate estate, by disallowing interest, and by directing that the amount should abide the result of taxation, with leave to the husband to dispute the retainer. Cameron v. Heighs, 14 P. R. 56.

Married Woman — Set-off, 1—Judgment for debt and costs having been recovered by the plaintiffs against the defendant, a married woman, to be levied out of her separate estate, there was an appeal by the plaintiffs with regard to the form of the judgment, which was dismissed with costs. An application to vary the order made upon the appeal by directing that the costs thereof should be set off pro tanto against the amount of the judgment was refused; but the court intimated that the taxing officer, upon taxing the costs of the appeal, would have power under Rule 1164 to set them off pro tanto against the costs awarded by the judgment to be levied out of the defendant's separate property. Pelro v. Harrison (No. 2), [1892] 1, Q. B. 118, followed. Hammond v. Keachie, 17 P. R. 565.

Married Woman.]—Inquiry directed as to retainer, with direction that only disbursements be taxed if formal retainer not proved. See Clark v. Creighton, 9 P. R. 125.

Mechanics' Lien—Costs of Onner—Costs of Lien-holders—Scale of Costs.]—In an action by lien-holders to enforce their lien under the Mechanics' Lien Act it is not necessary to make other holders of registered liens parties in the first instance in order to attack their status as lien-holders; but this can be done where they are added as defendants in the master's office. The amount due from the owner to the contractor should be paid into court by the former, less his costs, which should be taxed as to a stake-holder watching the case. The costs of lien-holders establishing their liens should be paid as a first charge on the fund. The costs of lien-holders subsequent to judgment of reference should be taxed upon the scale appropriate to the amount found due to each. Hall v. Hogg, 14 P. R. 45.

Mechanics' Lien.—Payment into Court.]
—In a mechanics' lien action a certain sum was found due from the owner to the contractor, and the latter was found indebted to other lien-holders. Payment of the former sum into court was ordered and made, the amount, however, being insufficient to pay the claims of lien-holders against the contractor.

The latter then appealed unsuccessfully and was ordered to pay the costs of appeal to the owner, who claimed that these costs should be paid out of the moneys paid by her into court; —Held, that by the payment into court for distribution she was discharged from her liability and the money ceased to be hers, and that she was not entitled to have the costs due to her deducted from the amount paid in Patten v. Laidlauc, 26 O. R. 189.

Mechanics' Lien—Appeal.]—Sections 41 and 42 of the Mechanics' and Wage-Earners' Lien Act, R. S. O. 1897 c. 153, limiting "the costs of the action under the Act" to twenty-five per cent. of the judgment, besides actual disbursements, do not apply to the costs of an appeal from the decision of the Judge or officer trying the action. Semble, that the costs of such an appeal are within the scope of s. 45. Gearing v. Robinson, 19 P. R. 192.

Mortgage—In[ants.]—In a mortgage action, where possession is claimed, the writ of summons if served on the official guardian need not be served personally on the infant heirs of the mortgagor, if they are not personally in possession, and the costs of such service will be disallowed. Rules 258 and 250 considered. Sparks v. Purdy. 15 P. R. 1.

Mortgage — Appearance,]—Where a defendant in a mortgage action desires only to dispute the amount claimed, but, instead of giving the notice referred to in Rule 718 enters an appearance in which he disputes the amount, judgment cannot be entered on practipe; a motion to the court becomes necessary, and the defendant so appearing must pay the additional costs of it:—Semble, in such a case, that where there are several defendants, there should be only one judgment against all. Rice v. Kinghorn, 17 P. R. I.

Motion — Preliminary Objection—Affidavits.]—Where an interlocutory motion was dismissed upon preliminary objections:—Held, that the taxing officer had a discretion to disallow to the party opposing it the costs of affidavits filed in answer to it. Whitewood v. Whitewood, 19 P. R. 183.

Motion Abandoned.]—Where a motion stands over, and afterwards the party moving gives notice of abandoning the application, the costs which are given against him are not those of an abandoned motion, but of a motion refused. Dennison v. Declin, 11 Gr. 84.

Motion for Judgment.] — Held, that upon the taxation "between solicitor and client" of the plaintiffs' costs, they were not entitled to the costs of a motion for summary judgment under Rule 739, which was useless and not according to the practice, and was refused because the indorsement on the writ of summons claimed "interest on arrears of rent," and was, therefore, not a good special indorsement. Baldwin v. Quinn; Baldwin v. McGuire, 16 P. R. 248.

Negligence of Solicitor.]— The court refused to interfers with the discretion of the taxing officer in allowing certain costs to the solicitor, of proceedings which had been set aside in the action as irregular, and as to which the judgment creditor alleged negligence and want of skill. Gall v. Collins, 12 P. R. 413.

Notice of Trial.]—Where one of several defendants gives notice of trial, and afterwards, becoming aware that the action is not at issue against the other defendants, abandons his notice, he cannot tax the costs of it against the opposite party. Strachan v. Ruttan, 15 P. R. 109.

One of Firm not a Solicitor.]—The defendant in this action was represented by a firm purporting to be a firm of solicitors, one of the members, however, not being a duly admitted or certificated solicitor. The plaintiff objected to the costs awarded the defendant in the action being taxed to him:—Held, that in the absence of proof that these costs had not been paid by the defendant to the persons who acted as his solicitors, the objection could not prevail; nor could it even if proof had been given. Reeder v. Bloom, 3 Bing, 9,—v. Sexton, 1 Dowl, 180, followed. Scott v. Duly, 12 P. R. 610.

See Kempt v. Macauley, 9 P. R. 582.

Partnership.—In partnership actions, in the absence of special circumstances such as miscondact or negligence, the assets will be applied, first, in payment of creditors, next, in payment of the sum found due to the successful party, and lastly, in payment of the costs of all parties. Hamer v. Giles, 11 Ch. D. 942, followed. The fact of a balance being found due by one partner to the other is no reason for departing from the ordinary rule as to costs. Chapman v. Nevcell, 14 P. R. 208.

Partnership.]—The fact that in an action to take the accounts of a partnership, one partner has succeeded in his contention as to such accounts as against the contention of his co-partner, is not sufficient to entitle him to the costs of the action against the latter. Chapman v. Newell, 14 P. R. 208, followed. Mitchell v. Lister, 21 O. R. 318.

Postponing Trial.] — Under an order made at the assizes postponing the trial upon payment of "the costs of the day," only one counsel fee of $10 is taxable. Hogg v. Crabbe, 12 P. R. 14

Postponing Trial.]—An action came on for trial, and a postponement was applied for by the defendant, and was ordered upon payment of the costs of the day: — Held, that counsel fees were chargeable and taxane according to an arbitrary limit. Hogg v. Crabbe, 12 P. R. 14, dissented from. Outcater v. Mullett, 13 P. R. 590.

Praccipe Order.]—Held, that only one attendance should be allowed on obtaining a praccipe order. Latour v. Smith, 13 P. R. 214.

Railway Arbitration — Witnesses.]— Costs of witnesses who have appeared before arbitrators to give evidence as to the value of land taken by a railway. See Re McRae and Ontario and Quebec R. W. Co., 12 P. R. 282.

Redemption — Defences not Proved.]——In answer to a bill for the redemption of a mortgage alleging usury in the original transaction, the mortgage set up several defences which were decided against him. The court, in decreeing redemption, ordered the plaintiff to pay the costs as of a common redemption redemption.

suit, and defendant the costs of the issues found against him. Isherwood v. Dixon, 5

Reference.]—See Re Robinson, 16 P. R.

Retaining Fee.]—Where the defendant was ordered to pay the plaintiffs' costs of a former action, as between solicitor and client, an unpaid retaining fee which the plaintiffs had agreed in writing to pay to their solicitors, over and above the costs of the action, was held not to be taxable. Re Gedles and Wilson, 2 Ch. Ch. 447, and Ford v. Mason, 16 P. R. 25, approved and followed. Re Fraser, 13 P. R. 497, distriguished. McKev v. Hamlin J. Hamlin v. Connelly, 16 P. R. 207.

Salvage Action.]—See The Gleniffer, 3 Ex. C. R. 57.

Second Application. —Where an application has been refused with costs, and a motion is made for leave to make a new application of the same nature, on further evidence, the new evidence must be produced, and the costs of the previous application paid. Anon., 1 Ch. Ch. 196.

Services not Covered by the Tariff.j

—The tariff of costs now in force does not pretend to exhaust all possible items of services for which remuneration is to be made. The object of a tariff is to provide a lixed or movable scale for usual and ordinary services and as to all items embraced therein it is generally conclusive, but for other matters one has to go outside of the tariff-rot the practice and course of the court. It is therefore for the taxing officer to determine, according to a proper discretion, what allowance to make for procuring the attendance of witnesses who live out of the jurisdiction. Rules 154 and 168 of T. T., 1856, are still in force as to matters not embraced in the tariff of 1881. Ball v. Crompton Corset Co., 11 P. R. 256.

Service on Infant.]—The costs of serving an infant personally who is out of the jurisdiction will not be allowed. Rew v. Anthony, 9 P. R. 545.

Service out of the Jurisdiction.]—
Held, that where the plaintiff, before serving the writ of summons on defendants out of the jurisdiction, obtains an order shortening the time for appearance, he should include in it an order allowing the issue of the writ for service out of the jurisdiction, and should not have taxed to him the costs of a subsequent order allowing the service. Rule 274 and form 121 considered. Sparks v. Purdy, 15 P.
R. 1.

Sessions — Appeal to Sessions — Witness Fees.]—Where an appeal to the sessions is dismissed without being heard and determined on the merits there is no power to impose costs. Re Madden, 31 U. C. R. 333, followed. Section 58 of R. S. C. c. 178 authorizes justice of the peace to allow witness fees. Regina v. Becker, 20 O. R. 676.

Sessions — Order to Sheriff to Abate Nuisance—Costs.]—The defendant was convicted at the general sessions on an indictment for a nuisance in obstructing the highway by the erection of a wall thereon, and directed to above, the sessions made an order directing the sheriff to abate the same at defendant's costs and charges, and to pay the county crown attorney forthwith after taxation the costs of the application and order, and the sheriff's fees and costs and incidental expenses arising out of the execution of the order;—Held, that the sessions had no authority to make the order to the sheriff, the proper mode in such case being by a writ de nocumento amovendo; that the order being a judicial act was properly removed by certiorari, and must be quashed, but without costs. Remarks as to the jurisdiction of the sessions as to the costs. Regina v. Grover, 23 O. R. 92.

Sessions—Appeal.]—On an appeal to a county court Judge from a summary conviction under the Act to provide against frauds in the supplying of milk to cheese, butter, and condensed milk factories (52 Vict. c. 43, s. 9), the Judge has the same power to award costs as the sessions of the peace under ses. 879-889 of the Criminal Code, 1892. Under the Criminal Code, s. 880, the court may, on appeal, award such costs, including solicitor's fee, as it may deem proper, and there is no power in the high court to review such discretion. Regina v. McIntosh, 28 O. R. 603.

Sessions.]-Where the chairman of the general sessions of the peace made a minute of dismissal of an appeal from the conviction of a police magistrate, with costs to be taxed by the clerk of the peace, but no formal order was drawn up in pursuance of such minute: —Held, that a certificate of the clerk as to the amount of such costs and a subsequent order of the court of general sessions directing a distress warrant to issue in respect of the same were irregular and must be quashed. If such formal order had issued the certificate might have been upheld, although the appellant was bound by recognizance conditioned to pay them. Freeman v. Read, 9 C. B. N. S. 301, specially referred to: — Held, also, that in view of s. 880 (e) (f) of the Criminal Code the formal order might have been drawn up at any future sittings of the court of general sessions and the costs included therein nunc pro tunc if necessary, the power to determine the amount of such costs not being, as it is in England confined to the justices at the same general sessions at which the appeal is heard. Re Bothwell and Burnside, 31 O. R. 695.

Settling Bond.)—A disbursement charged in a bill of costs of $1 paid in stamps to an officer of the court upon settling a bond was disallowed upon appeal from taxation. Such a fee is not authorized by tariff B. annexed to the Consolidated Rules under the item "Every reference, inquiry, examination, or other special matter." Casey v. Morden, 16 P. R. 127.

Similiter.] — Upon an appeal from the taxation of the plaintiff's party and party costs:—Held, the costs of a similiter, with jury notice, were properly disallowed. Alexander v. School Trustees of Gloucester, 11 P. R. 157.

Solicitor — Action without Authority.]—An action, brought by solicitors in the plaintiff's name, was dismissed with costs, and judgment entered against the plaintiff. The solicitors had acted without any written retainer from the plaintiff, or any instructions from her personally, relying on instructions received from plaintiff's husband, which she positively denied ever having given, and also on letters written to her, the sending of which was not strictly proved, and which she denied ever having received. On a motion made therefor by the plaintiff the judgment and all subsequent proceedings were set aside, and the solicitors ordered to pay the plaintiff's costs as between solicitor and client, and the defendant's costs as between party and party. Scribner v. Parcells, 2 O. R. 554.

Solicitor -- Action without Authority.]-Upon application to the court therefor the next friend of an infant plaintiff may be allowed to withdraw, upon such terms as the circumstances of the case and the welfare of the infant may require. Solicitors began an action in the name of an infant as plaintiff by her mother as next friend, with the consent of the latter. After the action had been some time in progress, the mother wrote a letter to the solicitor revoking the authority to use her name, to which they replied that the proceedings would not be stayed unless she paid costs up to date, and that if she did not do so they would assume that she intended them to conwould assume that she intended them to continue the action. She took no notice of this and they went on with some proceedings, whereupon the defendant, instructed by the mother, moved to dismiss the action on the ground that it was being prosecuted without authority, and asked for costs against the solicitors, "LIIdd in waving she, proceedings." solicitors:—Held, in staying the proceedings, that there was nothing to prevent the mother from renouncing her character of next friend and withdrawing from the litigation, subject to her remaining amenable to the jurisdiction of the court as to liability for costs thereto-fore incurred. As to costs: — Held, that the court reaches the solicitors of a plaintiff directly for the benefit of the defendant only where the plaintiff as client has a right to be recouped by the solicitor, and to the extent of that recoupment. The next friend here was liable to the solicitor for costs up to her letter, and the solicitor was liable to the next friend for costs subsequent thereto; and as the former costs exceeded the latter, and, as be-tween the next friend and the defendant, the former was liable for costs so long as she did not make a direct application against the solicitors, no order could be made in favour of the defendant; but the next friend was en-titled to be indemnified by the solicitors for costs incurred after her letter :- Held, also, that it was competent for the defendant to move to stay the proceedings, although the normal practice is for the next friend to move. Taylor v. Wood, 14 P. R. 449.

Solicitor — Action without Authority.]—By a resolution of the council of a municipal corporation the mayor and clerk were instructed to grant a certificate under the corporate seal to the solicitors for the other plaintiffs authorizing them to join the corporation as plaintiffs in this action upon receiving a bond, to the satisfaction of the mayor, indemnifying the corporation against all costs. A bond was accordingly handed to the mayor, who retained it, but the action was brought by the solicitors, and the corporation joined therein as plaintiffs, without the granting of any certificate under the corporate seal. After the action had been begun the mayor informed the defendants' solicitors that no certificate had been issued, and stated that he would not sign one until he had been properly advised by counsel:—Held, that the action was brought in the name of the corporation without authority; and that the defendants had the right to move to have such name struck out. Semble, that the corporation should have been parties to the motion:—Held, also, that as the solicitors for the plaintiffs other than the corporation were not guilty of any intentional polantiffs, they should not be made flaidle for the defendants' costs. Foren of Barrie v. Weogmouth, 15 P. R. 95.

Solicitor—Action without Authority.]—
On the application of the defendants the name of one plaintiff was struck out on the ground that the solicitors had not been properly authorized to sue, but the solicitors having acted in good faith no costs were awarded. Barrie
Public School Board v. Town of Barrie, 19
P. R. 33.

Solicitor—Profit Costs—Counsel Fees.]—
Solicitors suing in person are entitled to fees for the same services as are allowed in like cases in England, but a solicitor, who is also a barrister, cannot tax a counsel fee to himself when he sues in person, and conducts his own case. Smith v. Graham, 2 U. C. R. 268.
But the rule does not extend to partners.
Henderson v. Comer, 3 L. J. 29.

Solicitor—Barrister Conducting his Own Case.]—A counsel conducting his own case in court cannot tax a counsel fee against the opposite party. Smith v. Graham, 2 U. C. R. 268, followed. Clarke v. Creighton, 15 P. R. 105.

Solicitor — Trustee—Instructions—Counxel Fees, [—One of several trustees who is a barrister and solicitor, and acts for himself and his co-trustees as solicitor and counsel in an action, may tax against the opposite party his full costs, including instructions and counsel fees. Craddock v. Piper, I Macn. & G.
694, followed. Smith v. Graham, 2 U. C. R.
208. distinguished. Struchon v. Ruttan, 15
P. R. 109.

Solicitor—Striking Name of Solicitor off Roll.]—Where a client applies to strike the name of a solicitor off the roll for misconduct in neglecting to pay over the client's money in his hands as solicitor, the first application should be made to a Judge in court, whereupon, in a proper case, an order will be made requiring the solicitor to pay over the money by a named day, and in default that his name be struck off. Upon default, no further application to necessary, except an application to have the roll brought into court for the purpose of having the name struck off, and this should be on notice to the solicitor. Ruling of a taxing officer that costs of the first application should be taxed as of a chambers motion only, reversed on appeal. Re Bridgman, 16 P. R. 232.

Solicitor—Trustee—Proceedings in Surrogate Court.]—A solicitor trustee acting on behalf of himself and his co-trustee is entitled to profit costs for preparing the accounts of the trustees and attending the audit thereof before the surrogate Judge. In re McNab, 19 C. L. T. Occ, N. 74.

Special Disposition of Costs.] — See McCullough v. Clemove, 26 O. R. 467; Dolen v. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co., 26 O. R. 67.

Special Jury.] — An application for a Judge's certificate, that a cause is a proper cause for a special jury, must be made immediately after the trial on the same day the cause is tried. Binkley v. Desjardine, Tay. 177.

Specific Performance.]—In an action for specific performance by a vendor, whose title was, to the knowledge of the purchaser, a possessory one of long standing, in conformity with a family arrangement, ample proof thereof having been offered before action, the vendor was held entitled to his costs of action and of proving his title in the master's office. Games v. Bonnor, 33 W. R. 64, followed. Brady v. Walls, 17 Gr. 699, and Re Boustead and Warwick, 12 O. R. 488, specially referred to, Dame v. Slater, 21 O. R. 376.

Staying Proceedings.]—The costs of a chamber application to stay proceedings until term, in a superior court case tried at the county court under the Law Reform Act, 1868, are taxable under a rule for a new trial upon payment of costs, the county court Judge having refused to stay proceedings. Merchants Bank v. Ross, 6 P. R. 215.

Striking out Cause.]—If a cause irregularly set down for hearing by the plaintiff is struck out upon defendant's motion in chambers with costs, this entitles the defendant to tax costs of the application only, and not the costs of preparing for hearing. Frietsch v. Winkler, 3 Ch. Ch. 141.

Subpoena—Fee On.] — Fee on subpoena by direction of the court to be allowed on taxations under the tariff of costs where the amount itself is properly taxable. Stephen v. Simpson, 3 C. L. J. 102.

Subpoena—Service.]—Held, that service of subpenns made by one of the defendants could not be allowed, unless such defendant held a warrant or written authority from the sheriff to act as his balliff on the occasion. Ham v. Lasher, 24 U. C. R. 357.

Semble, that subpœnas being mesne process, under s. 277 of C. L. P. Act, no fees can be allowed for mileage or service, if not made by the sheriff. McLean v. Evans, 3 P. R. 154.

Held, having regard to Con. Rules 254, 1212, 1217, and items 16 and 17 of tariff A., that the plaintiff was not entitled to tax anything for costs of service by his solicitor of writs of subpena. Carty v. City of London, 13 P. R. 285.

Subpoena.] — Engrossment of order for subpœna and attendance to file the order are not taxable against the opposite party. Carlisle v. Roblin, 16 P. R. 328.

Supreme Court—Motion to Quash Appeal,—On motion to quash an appeal where the respondents filed affidavits stating that the amount in controversy was less than the amount fixed by the statute as necessary to give jurisdiction to the appellate court, and affidavits were also filed by the appellants, shewing that the amount in controversy was sufficient to give jurisdiction under the statute, the motion to quash was dismissed, but the appellants were ordered to pay the costs, as the jurisdiction of the court to hear the appellant affidavits in answer to the motion. Dreschel v. Auer Incundescent Light Mfg. Co., 28 S. C. R. 298.

Surveys—Maps—Taxing Officer's Discretion.] — Expense incurred for surveys and other special work of that nature, made in order to qualify witnesses (surveyors) to give evidence, are not taxable between party and party, the English chancery order 120 (1845) not being in force here. McGannon v. Clarke, 9 P. R. 552

The taxing officer refused to allow charges for maps prepared to identify the details of the line mentioned in the judgment as that which the Judge considered the true line, and also for a certificate of the state of the cause, for a letter advising of judgment, and for instructions on motion for judgment:—Held, that there being no error in principle, but only an exercise of discretion by the taxing officer, the court would not interfere with his ruling.

Transfer of Right Pendente Lite-Stay of Proceedings.]—It may, in rare cases such as Chambers v. Kitchen, 16 P. R. 219, be necessary and desirable under Rule 396 to add or substitute a person as plaintiff, without the consent required by Rule 206 (3), upon the application of the opposite party; but where it becomes necessary to substitute a person as plaintiff without his consent, to prevent injustice, he should not be exposed. without some further action on his part or adoption by him of the position into which he is forced, to any liability for damages or costs. Under the circumstances of this case, the fact that F. had become pendente lite the transferee of the promissory note sued on did not entitle the defendants to an order substituting him as plaintiff and making him liable for the costs of the action. But the original plaintiff could not be allowed to prosecute the action further, because he had no longer any interest in it, and F. could not be allowed to do so because he had not caused himself to be substituted as a plaintiff, nor obtained leave to proceed in his own name upon the judgment pronounced in favour of the plaintiff, which had not been entered, but from which the defendants sought to appeal; and all further proceedings in the action should, therefore, be stayed, but without costs. Murray v. Wurtele, 19 P. R. 288.

Term Fee.]—No term fee is allowed after judgment. Wilt v. Lai, 1 C. L. Ch. 216.

Nor unless there has been some proceeding during the term. Ham v. Lasher, 24 U. C. R. 357.

Test Case.]—Costs of both parties of an appeal to the judicial committee were directed to be paid by the successful appellant, special leave having been given to him under special circumstances notwithstanding the small amount at stake. Forget v. Ostigny, [1895] A. C. 318.

Third Party.] — Where the plaintiffs brought action against the defendants to recover possession of certain lands, and the latter resisted the claim, and also served a third party notice upon H., claiming indemnity; and, thereupon, by order in chambers, on the application of the defendants, H. was made a party defendant to the action, and the plaintiffs afterwards abandoned their claim to the lands:—Held, that the plaintiffs must pay H.'s costs. Beard v. Credit Valley R. W. Co., 9 O. R. 616.

The defendants, being sued as carriers for the loss of goods in transit under a contract between the plaintiffs and defendants, gave notice under Rules 107 and 108 to the third parties that they claimed indemnity from them, under a contract to which the plaintiffs were strangers; the third parties appeared, and an order of the contract to which the plaintiffs were strangers; the third parties appeared, and an order size in defending the action and stop of the bound by the result as regards the liability of the defendants to the plaintiffs. The plaintiffs were nonsuited at the trial:—Held, that the plaintiffs were not liable for the costs of the third parties, or for the costs occasioned by joining them; nor were the defendants liable for such costs. Tomlinson v. Northern R. W. Co., 11 P. R. 449.

Held, that the order of the court below, 11

Held, that the order of the court below, 11 P. R. 419, refusing the third parties their costs, was made in the exercise of a discretion which, by s. 52 O. J. Act, was not subject to review without leave, and as no such leave had been given, an appeal from the order was dismissed, with costs. The court directed that such part of the costs incurred by the third parties in establishing the defence as might properly have been incurred by tine defendants, should be allowed by the taxing officer. S. C., ib. 526.

In an action for rent or royalties upon iron received by the defendants, they served a notice upon a third party claiming contribu-tion from him. The third party appeared; and an order was made that he should be at liberty to defend the action as regarded the questions between the plaintiff and the defendants only, and to appear at the trial, call witnesses, cross-examine the witnesses called by the plaintiff and defendants, and be bound by the findings. The third party delivered a statement of defence, which was directly against the plaintiff's statement of claim, except a portion thereof which stated that he was not a proper party, and that no right of contribution existed against him, but this portion was struck out at the trial upon his own application. The plaintiff was success-ful in the action:—Held, that the third party had adopted the position of one who was called upon by his own interest to defend the action, and that he should not recover from the defendants who brought him in his costs of so defending it. Wallbridge v. Gaujot, 13 P. R. 463.

Where a third party has been brought into an action by the defendant, and an order obtained by the latter directing that the question of indemnity as between the third party and himself be tried after the trial of the action, and that the third party be at liberty to appear at the trial of the action, and oppose the plaintiff's claim, so far as the third party is affected thereby, and at the trial the action is dismissed:—Semble, that the third party is entitled against the defendant to costs up to and inclusive of the trial. Held, however, that the disposition of such costs is in the discretion of the trial Judge, whose order, by R. S. O. 1897 c. 51, s. 72, is not subject to appeal without leave. Held, also, that the third party cannot be heard in a divisional court upon an appeal by the plaintiff from the judgment at the trial, and is entitled to no costs of such appeal. Eveng v. City of Toronto, 18 P. R. 137.

Where in an action for negligence the defendants served a third party, under Rule 329, with notice of a claim for indemnity, but he did not appear thereto, and no order was made or applied for under Rule 332:—Held, that he was under no obligation to take any proceeding, and was not bound by the result of the action; and his subsequently appearing at the trial and asking to be made a defendant was gratuitous, and he was not entitled to costs against the defendants. Gibb v. Township of Canden, 16 P. R. 316.

The defendants, having paid to other persone the moneys claimed by the plaintif, brought in those persons as third parties for indemnity, whereupon the third parties paid the plaintiff the amount of his claim and costs:—Held, that the defendants were entitled to be paid by the third parties, their costs of defence to be taxed between solicitor and client, and their costs of the claim over against the third parties to be taxed between party and party. Hartas v. Scarborough, 33 Sol. J. 661, followed. King v. Federal Life Assurance Company, 17 P. R. 65.

Trusts and Trustees.]-Upon a petition by a surviving trustee under a will to be dis-charged from the trusteeship, it appeared that a trust fund created by the will had become impaired, and a reference was directed to take an account of the dealings of the trustees with the fund. The master reported that a portion of the fund had been lost in the hands the petitioner's deceased co-trustee, and that the estate of the latter was liable there-Upon appeal the report was sent back to be amended by charging the petitioner with the portion of the fund so lost by his co-trustee:—Held, that the inquiry as to the petitioner's liability having resulted un-favourably to him, he must bear the costs of it; but was entitled to receive out of the fund his costs of the petition and of bringing in his accounts; and, upon payment of the amount found due by him, and of the costs awarded to be paid by him, to his discharge. Re Haw-kins, 16 P. R. 136.

Unauthorized Proceedings — Payment under Inealid Execution.] — A person who finds himself a party plaintiff to proceedings which he has never authorized is entitled to be relieved from liability in connection with them, whether the solicitor in fault be solvent or not; and the fact that an order dismissing the action has been issued before the applicant becomes aware that his name has been used makes no difference in the rule. Nurse v. Durnford, 13 Ch. D. 764, followed; Delay in moving to set aside the proceedings from the last August to the 25th September; —Held, not a bar to relief, where no detriment had resulted to the defendants thereby. The sheriff having seized the plaintiff's goods under execution upon an order dismissing the action with costs, the plaintiff paid the costs to the sheriff, who undertook to hold the amount for ten days "to be returned if writ set aside, and if not within that time, to be applied in payment of execution." After the lapse of more tifant en days.

during which the plaintiff took no step, the sherin paid over the money to the defendants. The plaintiff having afterwards established his right to be relieved from liability:—Held, that he was entitled to be repaid by the defendants. Morris v. Confederation Life Association, 17 P. R. 24.

Unsuccessful Application to Take an Affidavir off the Piles—Criminal Code.]—
The costs referred to in ss. 897 and 898 of the Criminal Code are those dealt with by the general sessions of the peace, when a conviction or order is affirmed or quastad on appeal to it; but the above sections are not applicable to the costs of an unsuccessful application to a Judge of the high court to take an affidavit off the files, after a conviction has been moved by certiorari into that court. Regina v. Graham, 29 O. R. 193.

will.]—The rule is, that if there exist sufficient and reasonable ground, looking at the knowledge and means of knowledge of the opposing party, to question either the execution of a will or the capacity of the testator, or to put forward a charge of undue influence or fraud, the losing party may properly be releved from the costs of the successful party. This rule was acted upon, and the plaintiff relieved from costs in a case where the plaintiff had seen the deceased the day after the will was executed, and found him very low and unable to speak intelligibly, and where the testator had to several persons spoken approvingly of the conduct of the plaintiff, a son of a deceased brother, and had expressed himself in such a manner as induced the plaintiff and others to believe that he would become a beneficiary under his uncle's will, in which had been prepared at the house of the widow of another brother of the testator, where he had for some time been residing, and was taken ill and died, although at the hearing the plaintiff's case entirely failed in proof. Macaulay v. Kenn, 2 T Gr. 442.

Where a plaintiff claiming under a will, insisted on a construction which was decided against her, whereby her claim was considerably reduced, she was, nevertheless, under the circumstances of the case:—Held, entitled to the costs of the suit. Goldsmith v. Goldsmith, 17 Gr. 213.

M. H. proved a will as executrix; afterwards a subsequent will was found dated about a time when the testator was in a weak state of health, both physical and mental. A suit was brought by S. H., the executor in the latter will, against M. H. to set aside the first and establish the second will, which was successful, and in which M. H. was ordered to pay the costs:—Held, that M. H., in an action for an account of her dealings with the estate, having a fair question for litigation in endeavouring to uphold the first will, was entitled to the costs thereof out of the estate. Hill v. Hill, 6 O. R. 244.

Where a testator provided that the executrix was to have the sole management during her life, and the executors were to manage afterwards; and the latter filed a bill against the executrix without sufficient cause, they were not allowed their costs; but the matter having been brought to the notice of the court. a decree for an account was made as respected the executrix. Hellem v. Severs, 24 Gr. 320.

In an action to set aside a will for undue influence by two of the defendants, one of whom was the executor, the attack failed, and the action was dismissed, but without costs as to these two defendants, there being circumstances which might, unexplained, appear to be suspicious. The other defendants, two pecuniary legates under the attacked will, and a religious society to whom land was devised by it, submitted their rights to the court, but appeared by counsel at the trial, and joined in resisting the plaintiffs' claim:—Held, that these defendants were in a position similar to that of "interveners" under the English procedure, and were not entitled to costs out of the estate. Held, also, that they were not entitled to costs against the plaintiffs. Semble, that they would be entitled to compensation in the administration of the estate. Logan v. Herring, 19 P. R. 168.

Costs ordered to be paid out of the real estate, as the litigation had related to it, McMylor v. Lynch, 24 O. R. 632.

The costs of opposing an unsuccessful appeal to the court of appeal from a judgment establishing a will and codicil were ordered to be paid to the respondents, who were the executors, and certain legatees, out of the estate, in the event of their not being able to make them out of the appellant; the costs of the executors to be only as on a watching brief. Re Cassic, Toronto General Trusts Co. v. Allen, 17 P. R. 402.

Held, that although testamentary expenses, which include the costs of a suit for construction and administration, are usually payable out of the general personal estate, yet here the provision that the testamentary expenses were to be paid out of the first money which should come into his executors' hands, shewed the come into his executors' hands, snewed the testator contemplated the payment of such expenses out of a mixed fund of pure and im-pure personalty derived from the conversion of his real estate; and there being nothing else in the will to affect or alter this, the costs of this action must be borne ratably by the pure and impure personalty, and the proceeds of land directed to be sold. Ball v. Rector and Churchwardens of Church of the Ascension, 5 O. R. 386.

The court ordered that the costs in this case should be paid by the respondents (executors and trustees of the will) out of the general residue of the estate of the deceased, but if the said residue should have been distributed then the said costs should be contributed by the persons who should have received portions of the said residue ratably according to the amounts of the respective sums received by them. Fisher v. Anderson, 4 S. C. R. 496,

Winding-up - Creditors' Solicitors.] -Upon a reference for the winding-up of a company, the referee appointed a firm of solicitors to represent the general body of creditors, and ordered that they should be notified to attend ordered that they should be notined to attend whenever he so directed, and that their costs, as between solicitor and client, should be paid out of the assets:—Held, that this class of order and liability was not favoured by the courts, and should be invoked and attendance thereunder had only when there was any special question on which the appearance of some one to represent the creditors was desirable; that attendances and services should not be paid for out of the assets except where contemporaneously approved of by the referee: and it was not proper practice to extend this at the close of the proceedings by obtaining a certificate from him that, had he been applie to from time to time, he might have provided for other attendances and services. Re Drury Nickel Co., 16 P. R. 525.

Witnesses - Admissions - Time of Attendance. |—The plaintiff, not being bound to rely on the admissions of the defendants on their examination for discovery, the costs of procuring the attendance of a witness to prove curing the attendance of a witness to prove what was then admitted should have been taxed. Alexander v. School Trustees of Glou-cester, 11 P. R. 157. Where there is no daily peremptory list of cases at the assizes, and it is necessary to keep the witnesses in attendance from the first day, the fees for such attendance should be taxed. Ib.

Discretion as to Number-Witness not Called-Election Act.]-In trials under the Controverted Elections Act of 1871, the costs and witness fees, and the materiality of evidence, are in the discretion of the master, subject to the court, as in other trials, Re Prescott Election, 32 U. C. R. 303,

The master will generally be sole judge as to how many witnesses shall be allowed for as to one issue. Ib.

Where the master allowed fees to seventy witnesses subponned, but not called, on charges of bribery by the petitioner, the elec-tion having been avoided on the evidence of other witnesses:—Held, that the master exorther witnesses:—Head, that the master ex-ercised a proper discretion, even though re-spondent's attorney swore he believed the witnesses would have disproved the charges they were called to prove; the facts that each witness was subpænaed to prove appearing on the petitioner's brief put in before the master, and it appearing also by affidavit that the witnesses were subpænaed bona fide, and were material. Ib.

There is no presumption in a trial under the Controverted Elections Act of 1871 aris-ing from the number of witnesses subpænaed that they are unnecessarily called. The presumption is to the contrary. Ib.

- Disproving Defence.]-Costs of evidence to disprove the merits of the defence set up must not be incurred without consideration, and will not be allowed as of course. Redford v. Todd, 6 P. R. 154.

the affidavit of disbursements was made, were the amount of disoursements was made, were disallowed by the master, whose ruling was sustained by a divisional court. Hornick v. Township of Romney, 11 C. L. T. Occ. N. 329. See Harding v. Knust, 15 P. R. 80.

Medical Witness.]—The plaintiff's own physician attended on him during an examination de bene esse, and was called as a witness at the trial, when he stated what his charges for attendance on the plaintiff would amount to:—Held, that there being nothing to shew that he did not include in his statement the charges for attendance at the examination, they must be taken to have been in-cluded in the verdict, and could not be taxed to the plaintiff as part of the costs of the section. Carty v. City of London, 13 P. R.

— Public Officer.]—A public officer in charge of documents for which he is responsible, and attending as a witness in his public espacity and in relation to matters connected with his office, will be allowed professional witness fees of $4 a day. In re Nelson, 2 Ch. Ch. 252.

See Deadman v. Ewen, 27 U. C. R. 176.

— Travelling Expenses.]—A plaintiff an action can tax as part of such costs of travelling expenses from abroad to attend the trial, if he is a necessary and material witness. Talbot v. Poole, 15 P. R. 274.

— Trial Postponed]—A taxing officer refused to allow the plaintiffs the expenses of seventeen witnesses who were subponned to attend a trial at Hamilton, which proved abortive, the trial being postponed because the defendants had not obeyed an order to produce. The defendants were ordered to pay the costs of the hearing at Hamilton rendered nugatory by the postponement. The seventeen witnesses were subponned to be examined at the abortive trial, and were examined at the adjourned trial upon matters which the Judge held could not be interfered with by the court:—Held, that in refusing the plainiffs the costs of subpenaing these seventeen witnesses, the taxing officer did not erroneously exercise the discretion given him by Rule 442 O. J. Act. Christopher v. Nozon, 10 P. R. 149.

Trial Postponed.]—Where costs were awarded to the plaintiffs upon a postponement of the trial, and the case was not tried till after the taxation of such costs was closed, but it appeared upon appeal from the taxation that some of the witnesses allowed for were not called when the case was actually tried, the taxation was reopened upon payment of costs, and the taxing officer was directed to reconsider the allowance of witness fees. Connec v. North American Railway Contracting Co., 13 P. R. 433.

—Unsuccessful Issues.]—By the judgment on further directions the plaintiffs were awarded the costs of the action and reference. Upon appeal from the taxation of such costs the defendant contended that the plaintiffs should not be allowed the costs of attendances and witnesses in the master's office relating to items in the account in question as to which the plaintiffs failed:—Held, that the plaintiffs were entitled to all the costs properly, fairly, and reasonably incurred upon the reference, but not to costs of unnecessary proceedings or witnesses, and costs of witnesses called to establish something on which the party calling them failed were in the discretion of the taxing officer. Con. Rules 1195 and 1215 considered. Latour v, Smith, 13 P. R. 214.

Witness not Called.]—Where witnesses are subpenaed but not called, the mater should decide whether they were necessary or not, and allow or refuse their expenses accordingly. McLean v. Evans, 3 P. R. 154.

—Witness not Called.]—Where witnesses in attendance at the trial are not called, the onus is on the party subpenaing them to shew their relevancy. Carlisle v. Roblin, 16 P. R. 328.

Witness Paid by Both Parties.]— Where witnesses are subpensed and paid by both parties to a suit, the successful party is entitled to the costs of such witnesses from the other. McLean v. Evans, 3 P. R. 154.

Written Argument.]—Where the Judge directed reasons for judgment in plaintiff's favour to be put in, the plaintiff's charges for drawing, settling, engrossing, &c., such reasons should have been taxed. Alexander v. School Trustees of Gloucester, 11 P. R. 157.

Wrong Person Served as Defendant.]

—A person of the same name as the defendant served by mistake with the writ in the action, was held entitled to his costs of opposing a motion for judgment under Rule 324, O. J. Act, Lucas v. Frazer, 9 P. R. 319.

See Appeal, IX. 1.

V. RECOVERY OF COSTS.

1. In General.

Bail-bond—Staying Proceedings.]—Sureties used on a bail-bond obtained an order to stay proceedings on the render of their principal, "upon payment of costs:"—Held, that the words "upon payment of costs:" are words of agreement, not mere words of condition, and that execution for the costs was properly issued under the order. Stuart v. Branton, 9 P. R. 506.

Contribution—Petition to Open Judgment.]—In an action by creditors to set aside a conveyance of land as fraudulent, a consent judgment was pronounced, which was so framed as to exclude creditors other than the plaintiffs from sharing in the proceeds of the property. Upon the petition of a creditor this judgment was opened up, the conveyance was declared fraudulent and void against all creditors, and a reference was directed to a master to sell the lands and distribute the property. It was also ordered that the petitioner's costs should be paid by the plaintiffs and the two defendants. The master made a special finding in his report that the whole of the petitioner's costs had been paid by one of the defendants. The latter appealed from the report on the ground that the plaintiffs should have been found liable to contribution in respect of these costs, and also moved substantively for an order for payment of one-third thereof by the plaintiffs.—Held, that the master was right under the terms of the reference not to deal with the question of contribution; but that the appellant was entitled to a substantive order against the plaintiffs for payment of one-third of the costs, because the plaintiffs were jointly liable with him and the other defendant therefor. Fouchier v. St. Louis, 13 P. R. 318.

Demand. —A party who has to pay debt and costs on a final judgment on verdict, nonswit, demurrer, or otherwise, in the ordinary course of a cause, is not entitled to any time to pay them after proper proceedings had to entitle the other party to collect them; nor is any demand for payment before execution required. A party entitled to costs may proceed to collect the same by execution immediately after revision, without waiting a "rea-

n Demand.]—The plaintiff taxed costs on an order on 10th May. These costs were revised in Toronto on 22nd May, and on the same afternoon were demanded of defendant's attorney in Toronto, the defendant himself living in Belleville. On 23rd May, the order for costs was made a rule of court:—Held, that the rule was regular. Smith v. Cronk, 6 P. R. So Execution—Reasonable Time.]—It is irregular to take out a fi. fa. the instant costs have been taxed without allowing a reasonable time to the solicitor whose client has to pay them to communicate the result of the taxation, Cullen v. Cullen, 2 Ch. Ch. 94.

Execution — Reasonable Time.] — Held, that a "reasonable time" need not be given in which to pay the costs of the day, &c., after taxation, but that the order, &c., may be made a rule of court, &c., the day after toxation. Smith v. Gronk, 9 C. L. J. 237.

Execution.] — The word "immediately" in Rule 863 means "instanter;" and a party to whom costs are awarded by an order may issue execution therefor on the day of the taxation. Clarke v. Creighton, 14 P. R. 34.

Interest.)—Costs of all parties to an action for the construction of a will were ordered to be paid out of the estate of the testator, and were taxed in 1885, but there were no funds available for their payment until 1888:—Held, that interest upon these costs could not be allowed out of the estate. Archer v. Severn, 12 P. R. 648.

Service of Notice of Motion. —Where an order for payment of costs is sought which may, finder C. S. U. C. c. 24, s. 19, be followed by execution, as in this instance, for payment of costs of a prosecution for libel under C. S. U. C. c. 103, the service of the summons must in general be personal. The court may, under special circumstances, dispense with personal service. Where the defendant is abrond, or it is known where he lives, personal service will not be dispensed with, unless it be made to appear that defendant is keeping out of the way to evade service; and even in this case, it is by no means clear that personal service will be dispensed with. Service on the attorney, on the record, and on the wife of the defendant, it not being shewn that he was keeping out of the way to avoid service, was held insufficient, though it was shewn that he had left Upper Canada, and gone to reside in the United States. Regina v, Simpson, 10 L. J. 220.

Subpoena for Costs.] — See Saul v. Cooper, 4 Gr. 61.

Tender of Costs.)—On the 1st March, an order was made setting aside a judgment on payment of costs within a week. On the 8th March, the costs were tendered, and through error refused. On the same day the defendant, treating the judgment as set aside, filed and served his pleas, together with a demand of replication. Plaintiffs afterwards demanded the costs, and on non-payment issued execution:—Held, 1. That the tender of costs was in sufficient time: 2. that the tender was a compliance with the order setting aside the judgment on terms; 3. that where the conduct of the defendant's attorney was vexatious, this was a ground for refusing costs of the application. Plaintiffs afterwards, to avoid judgment of non pros. took issue on the pleas, and then executed a power of attorney, authorizing a party to demand payment of costs, payment of which was refused on the ground that the power of attorney was not countersigned by the president of the company:—Held, I. That the duty to pay costs continued, notwithstanding the refusal to receive them when tendered; 2. that the filing of the replication was not, under the circumstances, a waiver of the plaintiffs' right to costs; 3. that the plaintiffs were entitled to a substantive order directing the payment of the costs, and the costs of the application. Quere, as to plaintiffs' right, under the circumstances, to costs, between attorney and client, to be paid by the attorney for the defendant, as a punishment for his vexatious conduct. Gore District Mutual Fire Insurance Co. v. Webster, 10 L. J. 190.

Undertaking of Solicitors.] — Semble, that payment out of the moneys in court to the defendant of his costs of the high court and court of appeal, upon the undertaking of his solicitors to repay in the event of the further appeal succeeding, could not properly be ordered. Kelly v. Imperial Loan Co., 10 P. R. 499, commented on. Agricultural Insurance Co. v. Sargent, 16 P. R. 397.

2. Set off.

Agreement to Set off.] - A plaintiff having taken out a rule for the payment of costs, &c., erroneously entitled, gave defend-ant's attorney notice of a waiver of the rule and proceedings under this rule were staved by a Judge's order until the fourth day of next term. The plaintiff after that day is sued the rule properly entitled, and having obtained an order for an attachment, arranged with defendant's attorney to allow certain costs to be set off against the costs for non-payment of which the attachment was ordered, and that the attachment should only be proceeded with for the balance. The defendant on the 21st November, obtained a rule to set aside the rule or the attachment thereon issued, on the ground that the plaintiff's attorney had issued the rule properly entitled without authority, and during the time the proceedings were stayed by the Judge's order Against this rule it was shewn that on the 18th November the plaintiff's attorney served a notice on defendant's attorney, abandoning the second rule and the attachment issued thereon:—Held, that the Judge's order only stayed proceedings upon the rule erroneously entitled, not in the cause; and that the ar-rangement made by defendant's attorney with plaintiff's attorney as to setting off costs after the attachment had been ordered, precluded defendant from going back to object to proceedings antecedent to the granting of the at-tachment; and as, in addition to this, notice of abandonment of the attachment had been served before defendant's attorney took out this rule, that such rule should be discharged with costs. Doe Murphy v. McGuire, 1 P. R.

Alimony.] — Order for interim alimony payable by defendant—Set-off of costs against allowance. See Maxwell v. Maxwell, 7 P. R. 03.

Claim and Counterclaim.] - Where judgments were recovered in the same action, the plaintiff on his claim with general by the plaintiff on his claim with general costs of action, and the defendant on his counterclaim with costs thereof, such claim and counterclaim arising out of the same sub-ject matter, the judgment for counterclaim largely exceeding the former in amount, a set-off was allowed of so much of the money recovered by the defendant against the plaintiff on defendant's counterclaim as would tiff on defendant's counterclaim as would cover the costs adjudged to the plaintiff on his recovery of judgment against the defendant, norwithstanding the claim of the plaintiff's solicitors to a lien on the costs adjudged to the plaintiff. Bronen Nelson, 11 P. R. 121. Quere, when a judgment, as in this case, has been framed without directing a set-off, whether a Judge in chambers has power to direct it to the prejudice of the solicitor, so as to vary the decree of the court. Ib.

Claim and Counterclaim.]-The plaintiff recovered judgment against the defendant with costs, upon a claim for the value of goods sold under a distress for rent, of which the defendant, the landlord, himself became the purchaser; and the defendant recovered the purchaser; and the defendant recovered judgment against the plaintiff, with costs, upon a counterclaim for rent and damages to the demised premises. The judgment did not direct any set-off, and the plaintiff's solicitors having asserted a lien upon the judgment for costs against the defendant, the taxing officer refused to allow a set-off of the costs, awarded to plaintiff and defendant respectively:—Held, that the claim and counterclaim were segurate and distinct, and the judgments must separate and distinct, and the judgments must be treated as judgments in separate actions; and Con. Rule 1204 did not apply to enable the taxing officer to deduct or set off costs. Under the circumstances of this case, the court deprived the plaintiff, who was finally successful upon the appeals as to costs, of the costs of the appeals. Link v. Bush, 13

Claim and Counterclaim - Relief Obtainable without Cross-action—Set-off.]—The counterclaim of a defendant, properly socalled, is a claim by the defendant for a relief which cannot be obtained by him in the ac-tion; and calling a claim made by the defendant a counterclaim cannot make it one. The plaintiff claimed a declaration that his interest as a chargee upon land could not be sold under the power in the defendant's mortgage upon such land, and, in the alternative, that he was entitled to redeem the defendant. By he was clifting to reagem the detendant. By her pleading in answer the defendant alleged certain facts justifying her right to exercise the power of sale, and "by way of counter-claim" claimed payment of her mortgage, sale foreclosure, possession, costs, and dames. The action was at the trial dismissed with costs, the defendant not desiring a fore-closure, which she was offered:—Held, that the relief claimed by the defendant was ob-tainable by her in the action brought against her, and was not the subject of a cross-action or counterclaim; and the only costs taxable by the plaintiff against the defendant were such costs as were occasioned to the plaintiff by reason of the claim made by the defendants, treating it as a claim properly made in the action and dismissed; and such costs should be set off pro tanto against the defendant's costs of the dismissal of the action. The judgment dismissing the "counterclaim" with costs meant that such costs should be taxed D-44 as were appropriate to it in its true character. Semble, that in this Province the law as to set-off is different from the English law, and here a set-off should not be treated as a counterclaim nor be pleaded as such :-Held, also, that such costs were interlocutory costs within the meaning of Rule 1165; and, if not, that they were costs falling within Rule 1164, and subject to the discretion of the taxing officer in setting them off against the defend-ant's costs of action. Held, also, that costs of an order of revivor obtained by the plaintiff after judgment in order to tax his costs, should be taxed to him and added to his other costs and set off against the defendant's costs. Girardot v. Welton, 19 P. R. 162, 201.

Compelling Entry of Judgment.]—If the plaintiff refuse to enter his judgment in a case where defendant is entitled to set off his costs against plaintiff's verdict and costs, a Judge in chambers will limit a time within which plaintiff must enter his judgment, and in default, allow defendant to enter it for him. Sinclair v. Barrow, 3 L. J. 49.

Held, that a defendant who conceives he has a right to costs against a plaintiff, in consequence of plaintiff having recovered in a superior court an amount within the jurisdiction of an inferior court, is entitled to call upon plaintiff, either himself to proceed to the entry of judgment, or to bring in the record, in order that judgment may be entered by defendant. Cross v. Waterhouse, 3 P. R.

Held, also, that a Judge in chambers has power to entertain the application and make the order. Ib.

Cross-actions at Law and in Equity.] —A bill had been filed for an injunction to stay an action of ejectment, which action the plaintiff successfully defended before any injunction could be obtained; he proceeded no further with his suit in equity, and the bill was dismissed with costs. It was claimed that the costs at law should be set off as against these costs, but the referee considered that costs at law could not be set off against costs in equity, that being the rule in England. The Judge in chambers affirmed the order of the referee as to the first point, and without expressing any opinion as to whether costs at law could be set off against costs in equity in a proper case, affirmed the order of the referee in this point also, on the ground that the lien of the attorney attached, was paramount to any right to set-off. Webb v. McArthur, 4 Ch. Ch. 63.

Cross-actions at Law and in Equity. A defendant in an ejectment suit entitled to relief in equity on the ground of mistake, defended the action, in which he was unsuc-cessful, instead of coming at once to this court cession instead of coming at once to this control of the control o such costs his costs of the ejectment subsequent to the writ. Haynes v. Gillen, 21 Gr. 15.

Different Causes of Action.]—Where there is a different cause of action in different courts between the same parties, the costs will not be ordered to be set off. Cuthbert v. ommercial Travellers Association, 7 P. R.

Different Rights.]-On the dismissal of a bill, costs were taxed to the defendants, and execution issued against the plaintiff, which was returned nulla bona. Two of the defendants, as administrators, held moneys part of which would, on distribution, belong to the plaintiff, and which they now applied for leave to set off against the taxed costs. Under the circumstances the motion was refused. Black v. Black, 11 Gr. 270.

Divided Success.]—Where the plaintiff's bill sought to enforce two judgments, one of which the court held him not entitled to enforce, no costs were given to either party up to the hearing. The rule seems to be, that where the costs are to be set off against other costs, the court will not give costs to either party. Cumeron v. Bradbury, 9 Gr. 67.

Equitable Considerations.] — Under Rule 436, a discretion is allowed as to whether or not there shall be a set-off of costs in the same action, where costs are awarded to and against the parties; equitable considerations are allowed to enter into the disposal of the contention, and there is no strict right in the matter. McCarthy v. Cooper, 12

A direction to set off costs was properly refused under the following circumstances:—The plaintiff succeeded at the trial of an extension for specific performance of a contract for the sale of land, and was given costs up to the trial; on reference to a master he failed to shew title, and was ordered to pay defendant his costs subsequent to the trial, and to repay $500 of the purchase money which had been paid by the defendant; the defendant's solicitor asserted a lien upon the sum due by the plaintiff for costs, which could be recovered upon the bond given by him as security for costs, whereas the $500 could not be recovered against the plaintiff, who was worthless. 1b.

Failure to Claim Set-off.]—If plaintiffs on a verdict are allowed only district court costs, and defendant neglect to take out a rule to be present at the taxation, the court will not direct a revision that defendant's costs may be deducted. McCall v. Cameron, 1 U. C. R. 414.

Insolvent Debtor.] — In a partnership suit, the partnership was found indebted to the defendant; and, on the other hand, the defendant was liable for certain costs. The defendant having become insolvent, it was held that the plaintiff was entitled, notwith-standing the insolvency, to set off the costs against the debt. Brigham v. Smith, 17 Gr. 512.

Interlocutory Costs—Order for Set-off.)—The costs of a motion, and appeals following, to discharge the defendant out of custody in the cost of a rest before judgment, are promised from the cost of t direction to set off was necessary; had the order been made before judgment, the taxing officer would have made the deduction. Elgie v, Butt, 18 P. R. 469.

Interlocutory Costs. |—Proceedings may be considered "interlocutory" within the meaning of Rule 1205, till satisfaction is obtained in respect of the moneys, costs, or subject matter in controversy; and where judgment was given for payment by the plaintiff to the insolvent defendant of the costs of the action, and defendant's solicitors were by an order declared to have a lien upon such judgment, and the plaintiff became entitled against the defendant to costs of zarnishing proceedings upon the judgment, begun before the solicitor's lien was declared, a set-off was allowed. Clarke v. Creighton, 14 P. R. 34, See the next case.

Where judgment was given for payment by the plaintiff to the insolvent defendant of the costs of the action, and the defendant's solicitors were by an order of court declared to have a lien upon such judgment, and to have the sole right to control the judgment and execution to the extent of their costs between solicitor and client, and the plaintiff became entitled against the defendant to costs of garnishing proceedings upon the judgment, begun before the lien was declared:—Held, reversing 14 P. R. 34, that Rule 1295 did not apply to enable a set-off of the costs to be made. Clarke v. Creighton, 14 P. R. 100.

Where, under the judgment in an action, the costs thereof are to be taxed to one party, and under interlocutory orders certain costs are payable in any event to the final taxation, the taxing officer should not close the taxation of the costs of the action and certify the result until the interlocutory costs are taxed, unless there is unreasonable delay in bringing in a bill of the latter costs. Cousineau v. Park, 15 P. R. 37.

In the course of a proceeding for the taxation, at the instance of the client, of the solicitors' bill of costs, there were several interlocutory applications and appeals by the solicitors, which were dismissed with costs to be paid by the solicitors forthwith:—Held, that the solicitors were not entitled to have these costs set off against the amount of costs alleged to be due to them upon the bills then being taxed. Re Clarke and Holmes, 15 P. R. 269. See the next case.

Decision below, 15 P. R. 269, refusing to order a set-off of certain interlocutory costs against the amount alleged to be due to the solicitors upon bilis in course of taxation, affirmed on appeal:—Held, that, as the taxation had never been completed, and the solicitors declined to proceed with it, they were not entitled to the set-off. If the taxation had been completed, the fact of the interlocutory costs being ordered to be paid forthwith after taxation, would not have prevented their being ordered to be set off; but it raised an inference that it was not intended that they should be set off. Whether the costs in question should be set off or not, was in the master's discretion, and, having regard to the fact that they had been assigned, and to the other circumstances before the court, it could not be said that an improper discretion had been exercised. Re Clarke and Holmes, 16 P. R. 94.

Interlocutory Costs — Rules 1164, 1165

—Discretion of Taxing Officer — Appeal.]—
See Wright v. Calvert, 18 C. L. T. Occ. N.

Joint and Individual Liability, —To entitle a party to set off one debt against another, it must be shewn that the debts are due from and to the same parties respectively. Where, therefore, a debt was due from A. to B., and an amount of costs was due from B. and his solicitor to A., the court refused an application made by B. and his solicitor to set off the one amount against the other, although the effect of such a set-off would have been that B. would have place and the tother was only jointly liable with another. Wilson v. Switzer, 1 Ch. L. 160.

Judgment in another Action.]—Held, that a Judgment purchased by defendant from a third party cannot be set off against the costs of the day, given to the plaintiff upon an application to postpone the trial, secured by the personal undertaking of the defendant's attorney to pay these costs, and upon which the plaintiff's attorney has a lien. Bennett v., Tregent, 6 P. R. 171.

Motion after Judgment.]—Held, that the costs of a motion made after judgment might be treated as interlocutory, for the purposes of a set-off under Reg. Gen. 52. Young y, Hobson, S.P. R. 253.

Motion to Postpone. —Where a defendant put off a trial on payment of costs, and never having paid them afterwards, obtained a verdict:—Held, that those costs could not be set off against defendant's general costs, there being no affidavit of his insolvency. Potts v. Doyle, 5 O. 8, 97.

Plea Confessed.] — Defendant pleaded several pleas on which issue was joined, and afterwards pleaded a defence arising since suit commenced, to which the plaintiff replied, confessing its truth, and praying judgment for costs. It was ordered that all the pleas and issues thereon, except the plea confessed, should be struck out, the costs of such pleas to be set off against plaintiff's general costs of the cause. Gordon v. Robinson, 1 C. L. J. 326.

Solicitor's Lien—Different Actions.]—There can be no set-off of damages or costs between the same parties in different actions, to the prejudice of the solicitor's lien; that is the effect of Rule 1205. The lien is simply a right to the equitable interference of the court not to leave the solicitor unpaid for his services, and it exists if it is made to appear that the solicitor has not been paid his costs. Turner v. Drec, 17 P. R. 475.

Solicitor's Lien.]—The plaintiffs, having recovered judgments for large sums against the defendants, sought to set off such sums, pro tanto, against certain costs adjudged to be paid by the plaintiffs to the defendants, but the solicitors for the defendants asserted a lien for their costs upon the judgment for these costs recovered by their clients against the plaintiffs. The defendants themselves were worthless, but there was another source from which it was probable that the defendants' solicitors would obtain payment of their costs:—Held, that this was not enough; if the solicitors had a certainty of being able to recover their costs from another source, the set-off could be ordered, because the lien would then be unnecessary; but it being merely a probability, the set-off could not be ordered without its operating to the prejudice of the solicitors lien, for, should that source fail, the lien could not be replaced; and therefore, under Eule 1465, the set-off should not be ordered. Molsons Bank v. Cooper, 18 P. IR. 396, Successful Plaintiff Appealing in Part.]—A decree had been made in a cause giving the plaintiffs relief, and ordering defendants to pay the costs, which however, were not paid. The plaintiffs appealed from a portion of the decree with which they were dissatisfied, which appeal was dismissed with costs, to be paid to one of the respondents; thereupon the plaintiffs applied to set off the amount so ordered to be paid against the costs directed to be paid by the defendants in the court below to the plaintiffs, which was ordered accordingly, Bank of Upper Canada v, Thomas, 10 Gr. 336.

Successful and Unsuccessful Defendants.]— The practice at common law with respect to the set-off of one defendant's costs against those of another, for the benefit of the plaintiff, does not prevail here. Nor can a plaintiff set off costs payable by one defendant against that defendant's share of the joint costs of defence in the same suit, all defendants being represented by the same solicitor. Commercial Bank v. Elicood, 1 Ch. Ch. 219.

Successful and Unsuccessful Defendants.]—By the judgment in the action costs were awarded to the plaintiff against the chief defendant, and to the other defendants against the plaintiff, without any direction as to setting off costs, and the plaintiff's solicitor asserted a lieu upon the costs awarded the cost of the cost ordered to be paid to the plaintiff by the chief defendant against the costs ordered to be paid to the plaintiff to the other defendants. Construction of Rules 1204 and 1205. The older decisions as to set-off are not applicable since Rule 3. Flett v. Way, 14 P. R. 312.

Term Motion.]—The costs of a motion in term are interlocutory costs, and the party to whom they are awarded is entitled to have them set off against the judgment of the opposite party obtained in the same cause. Young v. Hobson, 8 P. R. 253.

Two Actions.]—Two actions commenced in December were tried in May; the plaintiff had a verdict in one and defendant in the other. In March the plaintiff assigned all his effects to his attorney for the henefit of creditors:—Held, that notwithstanding the assignment defendant was entitled to set off his costs against the plaintiff's verdict and costs, saving the attorney's lien for his costs, if it could be shewn that the property assigned to him was insufficient to pay them. Tippett v. Haacke, 1 P. R. 365.

3. Settlement of Action or Attainment of Object.

Collusion—Costs of Solicitor.]—See Bellamy v. Connolly, 15 P. R. 87; and Sanvidge v. Ireland, 14 P. R. 29.

Defendant Insisting on Trial.]-The rule of this court, that when the subject mat-ter of a suit is settled by defendant before decree, the question of costs cannot be disposed of on a summary application by plaintiff, unless the defendant consents, applies to mortgage suits. A defendant in such a case may insist on the suit going to hearing, as there may be grounds on which he may be relieved from costs. Where under such circumstances the referee refused an application by plaintiff for the payment by defendant of the costs of the suit, an appeal from such order was dismissed with costs. McLean v. Cross, 3 Ch. Ch. 432.

Defendant Refusing to Consent to Summary Disposition. | - Where the object of a suit has been attained, the proper course is for the plaintiff, if he seeks costs, to apply to the defendant to have the question of costs disposed of on a motion; unless he does so, he will not be given the extra costs occa-sioned by going on to a hearing. Webb v. McArthur, 3 Ch. Ch. 364. Quare, will such a motion be entertained at all, except by consent. Ib.

Semble, if the defendant refuse consent to the costs being disposed of on motion, the plaintiff will get his extra costs of going to hearing. 1b. See Gore District Mutual Fire Insurance Co. v. Webster, 10 L. J. 190.

Forum for Disposal of Costs.]-Where a suit becomes unnecessary by reason of matters subsequent to its institution, the question of costs cannot be disposed of in chambers, except by consent. Merchants' Bank v. Musgrove, 7 P. R. 59.

Libel—Apology.] — After action for libel brought, the defendants published a retracand apology, which tion and apology, which was accepted as satisfactory by the plaintiff. The defendants declined to pay the plaintiff's costs up to that time, and the plaintiff proceeded to trial:— Held, that either party could, after the publication of the apology and its acceptance by the plaintiff, have moved in chambers to have the question of costs disposed of; but, neither party having moved, that the plaintiff should such costs only as he would have been entitled to had he so moved, and that the defendants should have no costs, Knicker-bocker Co. v. Ratz, 16 P. R. 191, followed. Eastwood v. Henderson, 17 P. R. 578.

Motion in Chambers.]-The claim for which a suit had been brought having been compromised, the question by whom the costs of the suit should be borne, was determined by the referee in chambers, on a summary application by consent of the parties. Upon appeal, the court refused to interfere with the discretion exercised by the referee as to costs. Garforth v. Cairns, 9 C. L. J. 212.

Motion for Costs—Power of Master or Judge in Chambers to Dispose of Costs.]— Action by plaintiffs against defendants for infringement of a patent of the plaintiffs. The defendants were, before action, notified of the infringement of a patent, but denied it. In the action, the defendants, besides denying the allegations in the statement of claim, set up that they had not used the machine alleged to be an infringement for two years, and did not intend to use it again, and offered to give a covenant against further use, and paid $10 into Court as damages. This the plaintiffs accepted, and moved in chambers for the costs of the action, which the master gave them; but the court, upon appeal, ordered that the parties should pay their own costs up to the time of the motion (which the defendants had offered before the motion), and that the plain-tiffs should pay the costs of the motion and appeal. Upon further appeal to a divisional court, there was a division of opinion, and the appeal was dismissed without costs. Knickerbocker Co. v. Ratz, 16 P. R, 30.

An appeal to the court of appeal by the plaintiffs from the above order, was allowed and the master's order restored:—Held, that he had a jurisdiction to make the order which did not necessarily depend upon consent of the parties to go before him. North v. Great Northern R. W. Co., 2 Giff. 94, and Thomp-son v. Knights, 7 Jur. N. S. 704, followed, 2. That the Judge in chambers had exercised his discretion and reversed the master's order upon a wrong principle, and his decision was appealable. Wansley v. Smallwood, 11 A. R. 439, and Crowther v. Elgood, 34 Ch. D. 691, followed. 3. That when the action was begun the circumstances justified it, and there was nothing to take the case out of the or-dinary rule that the person in the wrong shall answer in costs. Proctor v. Bayley, 42 Ch. D. 390, distinguished. Knickerbocker Co. v. Ratz, 16 P. R. 191.

Proceeding to Trial.]—Where the object for which a bill was filed has been obtained during the progress of the cause, it should not be brought to a hearing on the mere question of costs without an offer to settle that question otherwise. O'Sullivan v. Cluxton, 26 Gr. 612.

Summary Disposal in Chambers -Object of Action not Attained.]—The plain-tiff claimed in this action damages for injury to his person and property by the alleged negligence of the defendants in having a foul drain in front of his property, and an injunction. The defendants denied the plaintiff's allegations, and alleged that if the plaintiff had suffered any injury it was by his own negligence. Before trial of the action, the defendants opened and inspected the drain and did some work upon it. The plaintiff, pro-fessing to regard this as a compliance with his demand, asked the defendants to consent to the costs being disposed of by order in chambers, to which the defendants answered that the work was being done in the ordinary course of municipal work, without the inten-tion of admitting any liability, and refused to consent. The plaintiff moved in chambers, without consent and against the objection of the defendants, and obtained an order for payment by the defendants of the costs of the action:—Held, that, under the circumstances, there was no jurisdiction to summarily dispose of the costs in chambers, the object of the action not having been substantially at-tained. Knickerbocker Co. v. Ratz, 16 P. R. 191, distinguished. Hunter v. Town of Strathroy, 18 P. R. 127.

Validating Act.]-Held, that the plaintiffs were entitled to the costs of the action down to the time of the passing of an Act validating the by-law complained of, and in addition to the costs of a motion in chambers for the disposal of the action, and that the defendants were entitled to the subsequent costs and to the costs of the appeal. Observations on the course taken by the legislature in passing Acts to validate proceedings which are under attack in a pending action, leaving the costs of the action to be disposed of by the court as if the Act hud not passed, Deiger v. Token of Port Arthur, 19 A. R. 555. Reversed by the supreme court on the merits, 22 S. C. R. 241.

4. Staying Proceedings for Non-payment of Costs.

The court refused to stay proceedings until payment of costs in two other suits pending for the same cause. Richmond v. Campbell, E. T. 2 Vict.

When the second action appears to be vexations, the court will stay the proceedings till the costs of the first action be paid. Bays v. Rattan, 1 C. L. Ch. 20.

Non-payment of costs of the day is not a sufficient ground for staying proceedings until such costs are paid, except perhaps in an extreme case. Becket v. Durand, 6 L. J. 15.

In an action of trespass de bonis, in the county court, the Judge stayed proceedings, on it appearing that defendants had been sued for the same causes in the county court of another county, in which action the proceedings against them were held to be coram non judice, and whereof the costs, though taxed, had not been paid. A mandamus to compel the Judge to proceed to try this case, was refused on the ground that the defendants being primarily interested, had a right to be before the court and heard:—Semble, that the proceedings should not have been stayed. In re Bollery v. Whaley, 12 C. P. 552.

The plaintiff, having sued in the county court, proved a claim beyond the jurisdiction, whereupon the jury was discharged. He then brought his action in this court, and upon defendant's application an order was made staying proceedings until the plaintiff should discontinue the county court action and pay the costs of it. The order was rescinded, for, 1. the county court having no jurisdiction, the plaintiff could not discontinue the suit there, which would be a proceeding in the cause; and, 2. this suit being for a debt, and not brought oppressively or vexatiously, should not have been stayed. Hodgson v. Graham, 26 U. C. R. 127.

An action was prosecuted to trial in the mame of a plaintiff who was dead before the commencement of the suit, but of this the attorney was ignorant. The death of plaintiff being shewn at trial, the record was struck out by the Judge. An action was subsequently brought for the same cause by the parties properly entitled to sue:—Held, that this action was not vesatiously brought, so as to entitle defendant to stay proceedings in it until the costs of the first were paid. Davis v. Weller, 5 P. R. 150.

Held, that 29 & 30 Vict. c. 42, s. 1, does not refer to costs of the day in same suit, and consequently proceedings cannot be stayed in a suit in which costs of the day have not been paid. Held, nevertheless, that this can be done on the ground of abuse of the process of the court, where the proceedings are vexatious. Nicholson v. Coulson, 6 P. R. 65.

Where a plaintiff files a bill for relief, and both parties daying after answer, a new bill setting forth substantially the same facts is filed by the plaintiff's heir against defendant's heir, praying no relief but a discovery, and to perpetuate the testimony of witnesses, proceedings in the second suit will not be stayed till the costs of the first are paid. Semble, that if both suits were instituted by the same individual, and if he were liable to pay the costs of the first, he would not be prevented from prosecuting the second until he had paid those costs. Street v. Ryckman, 1 Gr., 215.

In prosecuting a claim to land before the referee of titles, a contestant, served with notice, will not be prevented from asserting his rights until payment of costs of proceedings instituted by him against the claimant, in respect of the property in question, ordered to be paid by the contestant. Shepherd v. Hayball, 13 Gr. 681.

Non-payment of the untaxed costs of an unsuccessful application in a former suit is no bar to a motion for a like purpose in another suit between the same parties. Erie and Niagara R. W. Co. v. Galt, 15 Gr. 567.

A plaintiff suing in forma pauperis is not liable to have his suit stayed until he has paid the costs at law, or of a former suit in this court, touching the same subject matter, unless it can be shewn that the proceedings this court, touching the same subject matter, unless it can be shewn that the proceedings are vexatious. Casey v. McColl, 3 Ch. Ch. 24. Where therefore a plaintiff had been ordered to give security for prior costs at law, and by another order the time for giving and by another order the time for giving the control of th were set aside. Ib.

Where costs are given to a plaintiff suing in formal pauperis, they are in general, and unless otherwise ordered, dives costs. Ib.

See Steeart v. Sullivan, 11 P. R. 529. See also Security for Costs, post VII.

VI. SCALE OF COSTS.

1. In General.

Accounts.]—This action was tried without a jury, and the plaintiff recovered judgment for $120.75, "together with the costs of action, to be taxed according to the proper scale applicable:"—Held, that a county court has jurisdiction to entertain and investigate accounts and claims of suitors however large, provided the amount sought to be recovered does not exceed the sum prescribed by the Act; and in this case a county court would have had jurisdiction. Bennett v. White, 13 P. R. 149.

The case, not having been tried by a jury, did not fall under Con. Rule 1172; and the determination of the scale of costs was a matter in the discretion of the court. In the exercise of such discretion the principles of Con-Rule 1172 were applied to the case, and the plaintiff was allowed costs on the county court scale, and the defendant the excess of his costs incurred in the high court, as between solicitor and client, over the amount which he would have incarrred in the county court, to be set out. Ib.

Arbitration.]—Where upon an arbitration under s. 585 et seq. of the Municipal Act, 1892, the arbitrators made their award and directed that the costs should be paid by the land-owners, but add not fix the amount nor direct on what scale they should be taxed, as required by s. 539:—Theid, that there was no authority for their taxation either upon the high court or the county court scale. But semble, that upon a proper application the award would be referred toack to the arbitrators to complete it in the matter of costs. Re Village of Preston and Rotes, 16 P. R. 318.

Ascertained Amount — Fulfilment of Continuon. J—Claim for $475, ascertamed by agreement between the parties, reduced by payment to an amount within county court jurisdiction. The plannitifi, however, before he could recover was obliged to give evidence of the fullniment of a condition:—lied, that the plaintiff was entitled to a certificate for full costs. Swartwout v. Skead, 11 C. L. J. 329.

Ascertained Amount -Act. | — The defendant employed the plaintiffs as his brokers to sell on his account 200 shares of stock at a named price, the plaintiffs undertaking that in event of loss the defendant's liability should not exceed $200. In an action upon this contract the plaintiffs recovered $200 and interest:-Held, that the amount of $200 recovered was ascertained by the act of the parties within the meaning of s. 23 (2) of the County Courts Act, R. S. O. 1897 c. 55, and therefore recoverable in Decision below, 18 P. R. 308. county court. Thompson v. Pearson, 18 P. R. reversed. 420.

Ascertained Amount.]—The increased jurisdiction of the county court applies only in the comparatively plain and simple cases where by the act of the parties or the signature of the defendant the amount is liquidated or ascertained as being due from one party to the other on account of some debt, covenant, or contract between them; such ascertainment of the amount by the act of the parties being something equivalent to the stating of an account between them. Robb v. Murray, 16 A. R. 503.

Assessment of Damages—Order Giving Costs.]—An order in chambers referred an action in the high court of justice to a master to assess the damages, and directed that the costs should be taxed to whichever party was successful in a certain appeal. There was no trial, and no judgment was entered. The master assessed the damages at $800, and the taxing officer taxed to the plaintiff, who succeeded in the appeal, his costs upon the high court scale:—Held, that the officer had no power under the order to determine the scale of costs, and he was therefore right in taxing upon the scale of the court in which the action was brought. McGarcey v. Town of Strathroy, 11 P. R. 57.

Balance on Taking Accounts.]—The decree on further directions gave the plaintiff costs to be taxed by the master, who was "to determine the scale under which the same are to be taxed." The original report found $37 due the plaintiff, viz., $225.00 in respect of work done, and $18 for damages, less $5.50 allowed defendants for damages;—the defendants by their answer having admitted ard offered to pay $22.23 in respect of the work. The taxing officer allowed costs upon the higher scale. On rehearing, which by agreement was also treated as an appeal from the master, the court allowed an objection to the taxation, and directed costs to be taxed on the lower scale only, without costs to either part of the rehearing. Smith v. McDonald, 25 Gr. 600.

Bond - Damages.] - The defendant, for valuable consideration, executed a bond in favour of the plaintiff, conditioned for the payment of the principal and interest secured by a mortgage executed by the plaintiff. The defendant having made default in payment of the interest for four years, the plaintiff was compelled to pay the arrears, amounting in all, together with the interest on the amount all, together with the interest on the amount enpaid, to $163, for the recovery of which he sued the defendants in the county court, when judgment was given for that sum, together with division court costs, against which the amount of the defendant's county court costs was ordered to be set off :-Held, (1) that the debt or money demand arose from payment of the money by the plaintiff, and the amount of it was not ascertained by the signing of the bond. (2) That under the circumstances the bond Judge had no discretion to refuse the plaintiff, Judge had no discretion to refuse the plaintiff, who had been successful in the litigation, his full county court costs. Mitchell v. Yandusen, 14 A. R. 517, considered and followed. Kin-sey v. Roche, 8 P. R. 515; Wiltsie v. Ward, 8 A. R. 549; Forfar v. Climie, 10 P. R. 90, ap-proved. Graham v. Tomlinson, 12 P. R. 367, referred to. McDermid v. McDermid, 15 A. R. 287

Bond—Penalty.]—In an action on a bond for $500 given to secure payment of costs in the supreme court of Canada in a prior action, judgment was given for the plaintiff for $318.55, the amount at which such costs were tased and certified in the supreme court:— Held, that the amount recovered was not ascertained by the act of the parties or by the signature of the defendants, within R. S. O. 1887 c. 47, s. 19, and the plaintiff was entitled to costs of the action on the scale of the high court. Hager v. Jackson, 16 P. R. 485.

Certificate as to Lower Scale.]—The 554th general order as to the filing a certificate of the applicability of the lower scale tariff is directory, and the omission of it does not entitle a defendant in case of the dismissal of the bill to the higher scale costs, except for fees of court actually paid. Ferguson v. Rutledge, 18 Gr. 511.

Consent Verdict.]—Where an action was brought on an open account, and a verdict entered by consent for the amount claimed, which was within the county court jurisdiction:—Held (dissenting from Bonter v. Pretty, 9 C. P. 273.) that it was a case in which, under rule of court No. 135, a Judge in chambers could make an order for full costs. Cumberland v. Ridout, 3 P. R. 14.

Consent Verdict — Costs to Abide the Event.)—The parties, by consent, allowed a verdict for the plaintin for $1$ to be taken before the Judge at the assizes, to be altered according to the result of a reference agreed upon, and also agreed that the costs should abide the event. The action was for damages for negligence, and the award was in favour of the plaintiff for $85. A question having arisen as to the scale of costs:—Held, following Watson v. Garrett, 3 P. R. 74, and Hyde v. Beardsley. 18 Q. B. D. 244, that "costs to mide the event" does not mean that the plaining of successful, shall necessarily have full costs but that he shall have such costs as under the statutes and rules of court, a plaining recovering the amount that he recovers by the event is entitled to. Andrews v. City of London, 12 P. R. 44.

Held, also, following Cumberland v. Ridout,

Held, also, following Cumberland v. Ridout, 3 P. R. 14, that the final judgment by means of the reference was to be regarded as obtained without a trial, and the costs therefore depended upon Rule 511, under which the taxing officer was directed to proceed. Ib.

Contract — Extrinsic Exidence,]—In an action in the county court for 887.50, balance the on a building contract of 8475, signed by the defendant, where extrinsic evidence was required to shew performance of the contract by the plaintiff, and for an open eccount for $27.35, against which the defendant was allowed $25 for defective work and material:—Held, that the division court had night in the costs on the county court scan Kinsey V. Roche, 8 P. R. 515, apprex S. McDemid V. McDernid, 15 A. R. 287, followed. Re Graham v. Tomlinson, 12 P. R. 367, not followed. Krustiger v. Bros., 32 O. R. 418.

Court of Appeal.]—Where the plaintiff recovered judgment in the high court for a sum within the jurisdiction of the county court, and was allowed costs on the county court scale only, with the usual set-off to the defendant, and the defendant's appeal from the judgment to the court of appeal was dismissed with costs:—Held, that the court of appeal having ordered the defendant to pay the costs of the appeal generally, without any limitation as to scale or amount, and there being only one tariff of fees payable upon appeals from the high court, that tariff must govern the nillowance of costs under the judgment of the court of appeal. Holmes v. Bready, 18 P. R. 79.

Costs of Unsuccessful Application-Costs Paid to Opposite Party—Counsel Fees.] By the judgment in an action it was ordered that the plaintiffs should recover against the defendant whatever amount should be found due to them on the taxation of their solicitors bills of costs of certain litigation, as between solicitor and client, and certain bills were referred for taxation between solicitor and client. Upon appeal from the taxation:— Held, that it was to be treated as if it had heen directed on an application, under s. 32 of the Solicitors' Act, R. S. O. 1887 c. 147, by the defendant as the person chargeable, and was a taxation between the solicitors and their clients, the plaintiffs. 2. That the decision of the taxing officer allowing to the solicitors the costs of an unsuccessful interlocutory application, undertaken in the exercise of an honest and fair discretion, should not be interfered with. 3. That the payment by the solicitors to the opposite party in the litigation of a sum for interlocutory costs which the plaintiffs were ordered to pay, while not properly such a disbursement as should be included in the bill of the costs of the action, was a proper payment on behalf of the clients, to which payments credited on the reference might have been applied, and should be treated as so applied. 4. That, notwithstanding the provisions of the tariff, the taxing officer was justified in taxing larger counsel fees upon this taxation than had already been allowed between solicitor and client for the same services, and that his discretion as to the amount thereof should not be interfered with. Re Geddes and Wilson, 2 Ch. C. 447, followed. Smith v. Harwood, 17 P. R. 36.

County Court—No Order as to Costs.]—In an action in a county court, tried by a Judge without a jury, judgment was given for $36, no order being made as to costs:—Held, that no costs could be awarded, and a mandamus was granted to the county court clerk to enter up judgment for the plaintiff with costs, and without allowing defendant to set off against the judgment the difference between county and division court costs. Re Great Western Advertising Co. v. Rainer, 9 P. R. 494.

County Court Action—Motion to Change Venuc.]—The costs of an application to the master in chambers, under Rule 1219, to change the place of trial in a county court action, should be taxed on the county court scale, but the costs of an appeal in the same matter from the master's order to a Judge in chambers and of a further appeal to a divisional court schould be taxed on the high court scale. Re Hicks v. Mills, 18 P. R. 123.

County Court Action Transferred to High Court. — The provisions of Rule 1219 are applicable to an action transferred from a county court to the high court by virtue of 54 Viet. c, 14 (O.); and the costs of the proceedings after the transfer should be taxed upon the lower scale where the case falls within s.-s. 4 of the Rule, by reason of the plaintiff seeking equitable relief and the subject matter involved not exceeding $200. Struthers v. Green, 14 P. R. 486.

County Court Tariff.] — The tariff of costs under the C. L. P. Act, 1876, did not apply to county courts. Chard v. Lount, 2 L. J. 227.

Damages Claimed Beyond Jurisdiction.]—The mere fact that the damages have been laid at a sum beyond the jurisdiction of the county court, does not entitle the plaintiff without a certificate, to superior court costs. In the absence of this certificate the master on taxation must be governed by the verdict recovered. Miller v. Beaver Mutual Fire Insurance Co., 15 C. P. 75.

Damages for Non-return of Promissory Note. —The plaintiff held defendant's note for $$300, and gave it back to the defendant to hold until the latter should be free from a certain liability as surety. After he became freed he refused to give up the note, and destroyed it, and this action was brought for breach of his contract to return the note. The action was referred to a referee who found the plaintiff entitled to $314 damages, being the amount of the note and interest: —Held, that so soon as the facts relating to the note had been arrived at, the quantum of damages was a fixed amount ascertained by calculating the amount of the defendant's liability upon the note; and therefore the claim was within he jurisdiction of the county court under R. S. O. 1887 c. 47, s. 19 s.-s. 2; and the plaintiff was entitled to costs upon the county court scale only. The defendant was entitled to set off the difference between county court off high court costs of the defence. Johnson v. Kenyon, 13 P. R. 24.

Before a motion for costs was made, the defendant offered to pay the plaintiff's costs upon the county court scale:—Held, that this was not an offer which the plaintiff was bound to accept, and the plaintiff was entitled to the costs of the motion on the county court scale. Ib.

Delivery Up of Promissory Note.]—
In an action brought in the high court to restrain the defendants by nipmerion from negotiating a promissory note for $230, and to compel them to deliver it up to the plaintiff, or for damages for its detention, it was determined that the note was wrongfully held by the defendants, who had obtained it under the pretence of discounting it, but really with the view of making it the subject of garnishment:—Held, that the action sounded in tort and not in contract, and could not have been brought in a county court; and the successful plaintiff was therefore entitled to tax his costs on the high court scale. Johnson v. Kenyon, 13 P. R. 24, distinguished. Robb v. Murray, 16 A. R. 502, followed. Plummer v. Colductl, 15 P. R. 144.

Drainage,]—Section 113 of the Drainage Act, K. S. O. 1897 c. 228, providing that the tariff of the county court shall be the tariff of costs under that Act, applies only to actions which ought properly to have been instituted by notice under s. 93, and not to actions which might properly be brought notwithstanding the Drainage Act, and which are referred to the referee under s. 94 only because the court thinks they may be more conveniently disposed of by him. McCulloch v. Township of Calcdonia, 19 P. R. 115.

Drainage.]—Where an action is brought to recover damages for injury to property by the construction of drainage works, and the claim is within the scope of s. 93 of the Drainage Act, R. 8, O. 1807 c. 226, under which proceedings before the drainage regression may be taken without bringing an action, and an order is made referring the action to the referre for trial, the costs should be taxed according to the tariff of the county court, under s. 113. Moke v. Township of Osnabruck, 19 P. R. 117.

Drainage.]—Having regard to ss. 111, 112, and 118 of the Municipal Drainage Act, R. S. O. 1897 c. 225, and no turiff of fees having been framed the current of the county court applies, not only to trace the county court applies, not only to trace before the drainage referee, but to appeals from his decisions; and therefore the for taxation of the costs of an appeal to the court of appeal from the decision of the referee should be the county court tariff. Re Township of Metcalfe and Townships of Adelender and Warwick, Re Township of Cochester North and Township of Gosfield North, 19 P. R. 188.

Foreign Judgment.]—The plaintiff sued the defendant on a foreign judgment for $240, and specially indorsed this amount upon the writ of summons. He obtained judgment in default of appearance:—Held, that the foreign judgment was not a liquidated or ascertained amount within the meaning of R. S. O. 1877 c. 50, s. 153, and that the plaintiff was entitled to superior court costs. Davidson v. Cameron, 8 P. R. 61.

Fraudulent Conveyance.]—The costs of a suit by a judgment creditor, to whom less than $200 is due, to obtain payment of his own debt alone out of property alleged to have been conveyed away to defeat the plaintiff's claim, are taxable according to the lower scale, no matter what the value of the property may be. Forrest v. Layeock, 18 Gr. 611.

Fraudulent Conveyance.]—The plaintiffs had judgment and execution against one of the defendants for less than $200, and sought in this action, though not on behalf of all creditors, to set aside a conveyance by that defendant to the other, as fraudulent. At the trial this action was dismissed. At the time it was brought the sheriff had other executions in his hands against the same defendant, amounting to more than $200:—Held, that if the plaintiffs had been successful all the executions must have been satisfied out of the property covered by the impenched conveyance, and the provisions of the Creditors' Relief Act would have applied to the case, and therefore the amount of the subject matter involved exceeded $200, and the costs were taxable on the high court scale. Dominion Bank v. Heflerann, 11 P. R. 504.

It is proper practice to obtain a direction of a Judge as to the scale of costs before they are taxed. Ib.

Fraudulent Conveyance — Settlement.]
—In an action by a judgment creditor, seeking payment out of land alleged to have been conveyed away by the debtor in fraud of the plaintiff, the proceedings were not alleged to be taken on behalf of other creditors, and the plaintiff's judgment was less than $200. It appeared that there were three other claims, amounting in all to $36, owing by the judgment debtor. Before the trial of the action a settlement of the plaintiff's claim was effected for $75 and costs, and upon the taxation of these costs a question arose as to the scale.—Held, that the case was taken out of the provisions of the Creditors' Relief Act by the compromise between the plaintiff and defendant; and the claims of other creditors need not be considered; and the plaintiff's claim being less than $2.00, the costs should be on the lower scale. Forrest v. Laycock, 18 Gr. at p. 622, followed, Dominion Bank v. Heflernan, 11 P. R. 504, distinguished. McKay v. Magee, 13 P. R. 106, 149.

Fraudulent Conveyance — Amount of Subject-matter,]—An action by simple contract creditors, the amount of whose claim was less than $200, suing on behalf of themselves and all other creditors, to obtain judgment and equitable execution against the lands of the debtor conveyed to a third person in alleged fraud of creditors. It appeared that the hand was worth more than $200, and that the claims of execution creditors exceeded $500 in the aggregate:—Held, that the amount of the subject-matter involved exceeded $200, and the costs should be taxed on the higher scale. Hall v. Pilz, 11 P. R. 449: Dominion Bank v. Heffernan, ib. 504; and Forrest v. Laycock, 18 Gr. 611, followed. Morphy v. Fawkes, 18 P. R. 24.

Goods Sold - Partial Success - Taxing Officer's Duty.]—An action for the price of two distinct parcels of goods sold and de-livered. The defendants accepted a bill of exchange for each parcel, one bill being for exchange for each parcel, one bill being for $103.40. At the time the action was brought the second bill had not matured, as was alleged by the defendants, and afterwards admitted by the plaintiffs. Upon the application of the plaintiffs, the master made an order, under Rule 322 O. J. Act, for final judgment against the defendants for the first parcel of goods sold and delivered, that is, for $103.80, with interest and costs of suit, including the costs of the application, "to be cliding the costs of the application, to be taxed according to the course and practice of the court." Under this order the taxing officer allowed the plaintiffs county court costs on that part of their claim upon which they obtained the order for judgment, and he allowed to the defendants the full costs of the high court of justice on that part of the plaintiffs' claim upon which the defendants succeeded, that is the claim for $106.40, the price of the second parcel of goods. Upon an application by the defendants to revise the taxation: Held, that it was the duty of the taxing officer to look at the pleadings, and if necessary receive affidavits so as to ascertain the facts of the case; that division court costs only should have been taxed to the plaintiffs, as the amount for which they obtained judgment was ascertained by the signature of the defendants, and was therefore within the competence of the division court; that the de-fendants should have superior court costs down to and including the statement of defence, which would not have been required but for the plaintiffs claiming improperly the price of the second parcel of goods, which was not due, and also their costs of this application, with a set-off pro tanto against the plaintiffs' judgment and costs. White Sewing Machine Co. v. Belfry, 10 P. R. 64.

Goods Sold.]—In an action for the price of goods sold and delivered, in which the plaintiff recovered $290, it was contended that that amount was ascertained by the act of the parties, and therefore within the jurisdiction of the county court, because the goods were sold according to a price list agreed to, and therefore the amount was ascertainable by a simple computation:—Held, not so. Thompson v. Pearson, 18 P. R. 429, distinguished, Evans v. Chandler, 19 P. R. 160.

Goods Sold.]—Action in the common pleas division for 8228.20 the balance of a claim of $1,828.20, for 8,310 lbs. of butter at 22c, per lb. $1,400 had been paid on account of the claim. The plaintiff obtained a verdict for $228.20. No certificate for costs was asked for at the trial.—Held, on a motion to a Judge for an order directing the defendant to pay to the plaintiff full costs, without deduction or set-off, that the amount was liquidated by the act of the parties, within the meaning of R. S. O. 1877 c. 43, s. 19, s.-s. 2, and the plaintiff, without a Judge's certificate, was entitled to county court costs only. Durnia v. McLean, 10 F. R. 205.

Goods Sold.]-Where in an action in the high court an order was made by a local Judge upon consent, allowing the plaintiffs to sign judgment for $233, with costs of suit to be taxed:-Held, that full costs were not implied unless it was a case for suing in the high court; and the jurisdiction of the taxing officer to decide as to the scale of costs was not ousted. History of Rule 1174. The claim was $233, the price of furniture sold by the plaintiffs to the defendant, according to prices indorsed on the writ, and duly delivered. By his statement of defence the defendant admitted $160.50, which he paid into court. As to the balance he pleaded that it was not payable, because the goods ordered in respect thereof were not supplied or delivered, and that there was no agreement therefor within the Statute of Frauds:-Held, that the pleadings only must be looked at to ascertain what was in dispute; that the cause of action was one and indivisible; and that the whole cause of action was not for an ascertained amount within the county court competence. Vogt v. Boyle, 9 P. R. 249, distinguished. Brown v. Hose, 14 P. R. 3.

Illegal Distress.]—The defendants under a mortgage for $2,300, made by plaintiff's father, and containing a distress clause, distrained the plaintiff's goods for interest amounting to $112.55. The plaintiff claimed that the distress was illegal and should be est aside, that the defendants should be enjoined from selling the goods distrained, and that the plaintiff should be paid $290 damages, or if the distress should be held legal, that the plaintiff should be subrogated to the right of the defendants under their mortgage, as against the mortgagor. The Judge at the trial found in favour of the plaintiff, assessing the dämages at $25, and granting the injunction prayed for; but this judgment was reversed by the divisional court and judgment for defendants was ordered to be entered, with costs:—Held, that the action was not one that could properly have been brought under the equity jurisdiction of the county court before the passing of the O. J. Act and Law Reform Act, 1808, though the arrears of interest and the damages found by the learned Judge were less than $200; and therefore the case did not come under Rule 515 Or. J. Act, and the costs should be taxed on the scale of the high court. McDonell v, Building and Loon Association, 11 P. R. 413.

Interest upon Verdict.]-The interest which a verdict or judgment bears by virtue of R. S. O. 1887 c. 44, s. 88, is no part of the claim; and the question as to the scale upon which costs are to be taxed is to be determined by the amount of the verdict or judg-ment irrespective of such interest. Malcolm v. Leys, 15 P. R. 75, distinguished. Sproule v. Wilson, 15 P. R. 349.

Interference with Lateral Support.] —The plaintiff was entitled to the lateral support of the defendants' land, in which they made excavations for the purposes of a rink, whereby the plaintiff's land was damaged. The damages were assessed at $40, but judgment was given for the restoration of the plaintiff's land:—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to full costs. Snarr v. Granite Cur-ling and Skating Co., 1 O. R. 102.

Interlocutory Motion-" In any Event."] —In an action in the high court where the plaintiff was given the costs of certain interlocutory motions " in any event of the action and was afterwards awarded costs on the county court scale he was held entitled to the interlocutory costs on that scale only. Blake v. Toronto Brewing and Malting Co., 8 C. L. T. Occ. N. 123.

Interpleader.] — In interpleader issues. See Masuret v. Lansdell, 8 P. R. 57; Phipps v. Beamer, 8 P. R. 181; Beaty v. Bryce, 9 P. R. 320; Arkell v. Geiger, 9 P. R. 523; Christie v. Conway, 9 P. R. 529.

Judgment for Amount within Inferior Jurisdiction.]—It is not a fair construction to incorporate with Rule 511 the provisions of R. S. O. 1877 c. 50, s. 346, that section being restricted to a case where there is a trial. White v. Belfry, 10 P. R. 64, commented upon. Andrews v. City of London, 12 P. R. 44.

Justices of the Peace. |- In an action against justices of the peace for false imprisonment, &c., the divisional court (10 O. R. 631) ordered judgment to be entered for the plaintiff for $25, the damages assessed by jury, leaving the costs to be taxed according to such scale and with such rights as to set-off as the statute and rules of court might direct. Upon appeal from taxation:

—Held, that the action being within the proper competence of the division court (unless the defendant objected thereto), the plaintiff should have costs only on the scale applicable to that court, and the defendants should have to that court, and the derendants should have their proper costs by way of deduction or set-off:—Held, also, that the effect of R. S. O. 1877 c. 73, s. 19, read in connection with s. 12 of that Act and with R. S. O. 1877 c. 43, s. 18, s.-s. 5, R. S. O. 1877 c. 47, s. 53, s.-s. 7, and with R. S. O. 1877 c. 50, s. 347, is not to provide that the plaintiff should have costs on the superior court scale when his recovery is within the jurisdiction of an inferior court. Per Cameron, C. J.—The case came under s, 18 rather than s, 19 of R. S. O. 1877 c, 73. Ireland v. Pitcher, 11 P. R. 403.

Libel. |- Where in an action of libel a verdict for $1 damages was found, and the Judge the trial gave no certificate for costs: Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to tax full costs. Garnett v. Bradley, 3 App. Cas. 944, considered and followed. Wilson v. Roberts, 11 P. R. 412.

Mechanic's Lien.]-Where the plaintiff's claim in an action to enforce a mechanic's lien was only $142, but at the time the action was begun the aggregate amount of the liens (the plaintiff's and another) registered against the property was over $200:—Held, that the action was properly brought in the high court of justice, and the costs should be on the scale of that court, and it made no difference that the other lien holder failed to substantiate his claim. Hall v. Pilz, 11 P. R. 449.

Mechanic's Lien.]—The plaintiffs, sub-contractors, in an action brought in the High Court to enforce a mechanic's lien, claimed against the contractor $245.29, and recovered $284.54. They claimed a lien on the land for the amount due them, but upon the investi-gation of accounts to the extent of upwards $1,700 between the contractor and the landowner, it was found that the latter owed only $63.79, and the plaintiffs' lien was limited to this amount:--Held, upon an appeal from taxation of costs, that the contractor could not have sued the landowner in the division court to recover the balance of $63.79, but must have proceeded in the county court, and the plaintiffs, suing upon the same claim, were therefore entitled to county court costs; and as the plaintiffs' claim was beyond the jurisdiction of the division court, upon any construction of the meaning of s. 28 of the Mechanics' Lien Act, R. S. O. 1887 c. 126, the plaintiffs could not have brought their action in the division court, and were therefore entitled to tax their costs upon the county court scale. Truax v. Dixon, 13 P. R.

Held, that, as the plaintiffs could not have hoped to establish a case which would have entitled them to high court costs, the de-fendant landowner should be allowed a set-off of the excess of his costs incurred in the high court over what he would have incurred in court over what he would have incurred in the county court; but as the action was tried without a jury, and Con. Rule 1172 did not apply, the taxing officer had no power to allow this set-off without the direction of the court: and the judgment of the court was amended so as to meet the case. Ib.

Mechanic's Lien.]—The costs of lien-holders subsequent to judgment of reference should be taxed upon the scale appropriate to the amount found due to each. Hall v. Hogg, 14 P. R. 45.

Mortgage - Account.]-Mortgagees, after the exercise of the power of sale in their mortgage, claimed that $182.61 was still due to them, but on an account being taken, $20.07 was found due to the mortgagor:— Held, that laying aside the question of the whole amount of the mortgage money ($6,705), the amount involved was $202.68 money and therefore the case was not within Rule 515 O. J. Act (C. S. U. C. c. 15, s. 34, s.-s. 8) and the costs were properly taxed on the higher scale. Morton v. Hamilton Provident and Loan Society, 10 P. R. 636. Affirmed, 11 P. R. 82.

Mortgage-Foreclosure.]-When a plaintiff files a bill in the court of chancery to foreclose a mortgage for a sum within the jurisdiction of the county court no costs will be allow-The fact that defendant is resident in a county other than where the land is situate will not vary this rule. Connell v. Curran, 1 Ch. Ch. 11. See Hyman v. Roots, 11 Gr. 202.

$170.30. Chick v. Toronto Electric Light Co., 12 P. R. 58: Tobin v. McGillis, ib. 60 n.

Mortgage—Surplus ofter Sale,]—Prima facts the sum realized on a sale under a power contained in a mortgage is the subject matter of the suit. A mortgage is the subject matter of the suit. A mortgage is the subject matter of the suit. A mortgage is the subject matter of the suit. A mortgage at the subject was considered by the mortgage at an action of eigenment, as also a payment made to the plaintiff before suit, the balance coming to the plaintiff was reduced to $130. The plaintiff was still held entitled to his full costs, "the subject matter involved" being the $350. McGillicuddy v. Griffin, 20 Gr. 81.

Mortgage - Surplus after Sale - Claimants in Different Counties.]-After a mortgage sale, the first mortgagee paid the surplus proceeds of sale ($162) into court. third mortgagee petitioned for payment out to him of the $162, alleging that the second mortgage was void for want of consideration, A reference was directed, and the master that the second mortgage was valid, and that a much larger amount than $162 was due upon it. The claimants in three different counties. The claimants of the fund lived An order made upon further directions gave the second mortgagee the costs of the petition and reference: Held, that what was in contest was the whole amount represented by the second mortgage, and the subject matter thus involved exceeded the limits of the former equitable jurisdiction of the county court, and herefore, and also because the different respendents resided in different counties, and the money in question was in court in a third county, the taxing officer was right in taxing costs upon the higher scale. Re Lyons, 10 P.

Partnership Accounts.] — The plaintiff and defendant entered into partnership to furnish G. & W. with certain staves, for the price of $2.000. The contract was not full-lilled, and the plaintiff subsequently brought an action, and obtained a reference to take an account of the partnership dealings. The report found that the plaintiff had contributed to the partnership capital $87.39, and the defendant $2.33.89, and that there was due from the defendant to the plaintiff $43.74. The taxing officer taxed the plaintiff seasts under the lower scale, on the ground that the case came within C. S. U. C. c. 15, $3.4, s.*s. 1. On appeal, this ruling was reversed. Blancy v. McGrath, 9 P. R. 447.

Payment into Court.]—The plaintiff in an action in the high court of justice claimed $296.14, the balance of an account of $89.6 for rent and goods sold and delivered. The defendants in their statement of defence admitted a liability of $170.30, but claimed a credit of $81.14, leaving a balance of $89.16, which they brought into court with their defence. The plaintiff served notice under Rule 218 O. J. Act. 1881, accepting the amount paid in full of the claim, and proceeded to tax his costs. Upon taxation a question arose as to the scale of costs:—Held, that the provision in Rule 218, that the plaintiff may tax his costs, does not give him costs according to any higher scale than if he had entered judgment for the sum which he received out of court; the costs should therefore, be on the county court scale, as the whole amount of the account was over $800, and the amount admitted by the defendant was Payment into Court -Competence of Division Court.1-The plaintiff in an action in a county court claimed $140, the balance alleged to be due upon the sale of a chattel, and the defendant brought into court $95 in full of the plaintiff's cause of action, which the plaintiff accepted in due time. The Judge of the county court thereupon made a summary order allowing the defendant to set off his costs incurred in the county court in excess of such costs as he would have incurred in a division court against the costs of the plaintiff, and to enter judgment and issue execution for the excess, if any, of the costs of the defendant over and above the costs of the plaintiff:-Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to tax his costs of the action according to the county court scale, irrespective of the amount paid into court and accepted by him in satisfaction of his claim; and the plaintiff being entitled to his costs by the express provision of Rule 425 (which is not qualified by Rule 1130), they were not subject to the discretion of the Judge. Held, also, that the order of the Judge was in its nature final, and therefore appealable under s. 52 of the County Courts Act, R. S. O. 1897 c. 55. Babcock v. Standish, 19 P. R.

Reduction by Payments.)—Where a note originally beyond the jurisdiction had been reduced within it by payments after action, the plaintiff was allowed full costs. Kilborn v. Wallace, 3 O. S. 17.

Where, after action in the superior court, defendant paid $152 in full of the suit, which the plaintiff accepted, less costs, to be paid when taxed or agreed on, it was held that the plaintiff was entitled to full costs, as if the money had been paid into court. Leslie v. Forsyth, I C. L. J. 188.

Where a note was reduced by payments before action, full costs were refused. Donnelly v. Gibson, 5 O. S. 704.

Where an account originally beyond the jurisdiction of the district court, was reduced within the jurisdiction of the court of requests by payments before action, a suggestion to deprive the plaintiff of full costs under the Court of Requests Act, was refused. Scott v. Ferguson, Scott v. Rooke, M. T. 3 Vict.

The plaintiff is entitled to full costs, when he sues for the balance of an account originally bayond the jurisdiction of the district court, but reduced by payments never specially applied to any items in the account. Mearns v. Gilbertson, 6 O. 8, 573.

In an action for goods sold and delivered, the plaintiff claimed $453.50, but the verdict decided that his proper claim was at first only $324.77; of this $155 was paid before action, leaving $49.77, of which defendant paid into court $119.77, and the verdict was $58. A certificate for full costs was refused. Broven v. McAdam, 4 P. R. 54.

Except in very special cases certificates will be refused when the claim is reduced by payment within the jurisdiction of an inferior court Ib.

Replevin.]—A certificate is necessary to obtain full costs in replevin as in other actions, though the affidavit and fond state the goods to be worth a sum above the jurisdiction of the inferior courts. Ashton v. McMillan, 3 P. R. 10.

At the trial in replevin in the county court a verdict was entered for defendant, with leave reserved to move to enter it for the plaintiff, and no certificate was applied for. On appeal a verdict was directed for the plaintiff for 15s., and the clerk of the county court taxed only division court costs. The Judge refused a revision, and this court would not interfere. In re Coleman v. Kerr, 28 U. C. R. 297.

The mere fact of the plaintiff in his declaration in replevin stating the value of the goods distrained at a higher sum than £15, does not shew that the action could not have been brought in the District Court. The plaintiff, to entitle him to Queen's bench costs, must prove at the trial that the goods are really of greater value. Wheeler v. Sime, 3 U. C. R. 265.

Residence of the Parties.]—Where an action was brought upon a promissory note, the consideration for which had arisen in the district of A., and the plaintiff brought his action and recovered a verdict under £15, in the district of B., the court refused to set aside a certificate for costs, under the District Court Act. Secord v. Hornor, Tay. 215.

Where plaintiff and defendant and the plaintiff's witnesses resided in different districts, full costs were allowed on a cause of action within the jurisdiction of the district courts. Hagill v. Driscotl, Dra. 234.

Full costs were refused on a note under £40 where the plaintiff resided in the United States. Sawyer v. McDonell, T. T. 7 Will. IV.

Full costs will not be allowed on a cause of action within the jurisdiction of the district court, unless the cause of action arose in the district in which the plaintiff resides, or defendant removed from the district in which the action accrued before action brought. Ketchum v. Cryster, H. T. 7 Will. IV.

Full costs allowed on a note for £10, defenddant having left the district in which it was made, and residing in another. Perrin v. *Car*son, T. T. 2 & 3 Vict.

Full costs allowed in a cause within the jurisdiction of the district court where there were several defendants residing in different districts. Jones v. O'Sullican, H. T. 3 Vict.

So in a joint action against maker and indorser of a note, for less than £40. Bank of British North America v. Dennison, 1 U. C. R. 414.

Action against maker and indorser of a note for £25, made and indorsed at Perth, in the Bathurst district, but discounted at Brockville, in the Johnstown district, by the agent of the plaintiffs, the indorsees, laying the venue in the Johnstown district. Judgment by default, and an order to compute was obtained:—Held, plaintiffs entitled to Queen's bench costs. Commercial Bank v. Kerr, 5 U. C. R. 320.

Where the amount in dispute is under $200 but the defendant is out of the jurisdiction, the plaintiff is entitled to costs on the higher scale. Skelly v. Skelly, 18 Gr. 495.

Where a cause was properly within the equity jurisdiction of a county court, but the defendants resided in a different county from that in which the land in question was situated, the costs were ordered to be taxed on the higher scale. Doubledee v. Credit Valley R. W. Co., S. P. R. 416.

Surrogate Court—Order of Transfer]—An order transferring a cause or proceeding from a surrogate court into the high court from a surrogate court into the high court from a surrogate court into the high court of the defendant, the applicant for recovering the surrogate court scale. By a consent judgment, which recited the pleadings and proceedings, and adjudged that the will which was disputed by the defendant was the last will of the testatrix, and should be admitted to probate, it was also adjudged that the costs of all parties should be paid out of the estate, Held, upon appeal from taxation, that the defendant was bound by the order of transfer, and his costs should be taxed on the scale of the surrogate court. Re Forster, Battisby v. Witherspoon, 18 P. R. 65.

Taxation against Client—Ascertainment of Amount.]—On an appeal by the client from a local master's taxation, as between solicitor and client, of the solicitor's bill in an action against a bank, which was dismissed, and in which the real claim, if any, was on a deposit receipt, with interest amounting to $355, or the moneys secured thereby, alleged to belong to the plaintiff as administratrix, and in which action the facts, as set out in the report, only came to the knowledge of the solicitor and client after the action was brought, there being sufficient room for doubt whether a claim could be ascertained, after the death of the creditor, by the signature of the debtor, to warrant the bringing of the action in the high court:

Held, that the solicitor was entitled to high court costs. Re Jackson, 18 P. R. 326.

Taxing Officer's Powers.]—Semble, that since as well as before the Law Reform Act (1868), which transferred to the court of chancery the jurisdiction therecologies were successful to the court of the suit was or is within the county court jurisdiction. Brough v. Brantford, Norfolk and Port Burwell R. W. Co., 25 Gr. 43.

Taxing Officer's Powers.]—Where there has been a trial of an action, and the plaintiff has thereat been awarded costs, Rule 1174 gives no jurisdiction to the taxing officer to deal with the scale of costs. Brown v. Hose, 14 P. R. 3, distinguished. Andrews v. City of London, 12 P. R. 44, applied and followed. Date v. Weston Lodge, 17 P. R. 513.

Timber.)—The plaintiff sued for damages sustained by the defendant cutting timber on his own land, after having sold such timber standing to the plaintiff's assignor. It was determined by the court that the timber sold was an interest in land:—Held, that the title to land was brought in question in the action, and therefore, although the plaintiff recovered only $135, a county court would have no jurisdiction, and the costs should be on the scale of the high court. McNeill v. Haines, 13 P. II. 115.

See, also, Danaher v. Little, 13 P. R. 361.

Title to Land in Question.]—Trespass q. f. Plea, "that the close was not the close of the plaintiff." Verdict for 1s, damages:—Held, that the plaintiff, under 22 Car, 1. c. 9, without a certificate that the title came in question, was entitled to full costs, Lake v. Briley, 5 U. C. R. 307.

Tresposs q. c. f. with a count for taking goods: Plea, not guilty by statute. Verdiet for £1 and no certificate:—Held, plaintiff not entitled to full costs. Hawkes v. Richardson, 9 U. C. R. 229.

Trespass q. c. f. Plea, general issue only, Verdict for 20s. A certificate under 22 & 23 Car. H. was refused at the trial:—Held, approxing Hawkes v. Richardson, 9 U. C. R. 229, that the plaintiff was entitled at least to county court costs. Davis v. Barnet, 10 U. C. R. 501.

In trespass, defendant pleaded not possessed, which was held bad on demurrer, and plantiff obtained a verdict with 18. damages. A certificate under 43 Eliz, was obtained by defendant after judgment entered and costs taxed, that damages were under 40s. On motion for revision of taxation:—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to costs, because the Judge could have had no opportunity of certifying that the title was in question under the plea, after its being held bad on demurrer; and that the certificate under 43 Eliz, was too late. Kain v. McGill, 2 C. P. 151.

In an action against a road company for obstructing a flow of water from plaintiff's lands, the plea of not guilty by statute, was held not to bring the title to the land in question, so as to entitle the plaintiff to full costs without a certificate. Orerholt v. Paris and Dundas Road Co., 7 C. P. 293.

Where in trespass the title to land was not in question upon the pleadings, and the plaintiff obtained only £5 damages, and no certificate:—Held, that he was entitled only to division court costs. Hamilton v. Clarke, 2 P. R. 189.

division court costs. Humania 1, P. R. 189.

Under 16 Viet. c. 177, s. 1, it is for the plaintiff claiming full costs to shew that the title did really and bona fide come in question, not merely that by the pleadings it might have been put in issue. Ib.

Plaintiff sued for trespass to land, and obtained a verdict for 1s., the pleas being not guilty, not possessed, and liberum tenementum; and the Judge certified that the action was really brought to try a right, besides the right to recover damages for the trespass complained of:—Held, that this certificate alone, taken with the pleadings, was equivalent to an assertion by the Judge that the title to the land was in question and entitled the plaintiff to full costs. Spiers v. Carrique, 23 U. C. R. 585.

In trespass q. c. f. defendant pleaded that the land was not the plaintiff's, and the plaintiff obtained a verdict for £10:—Semble, that he would have been entitled to full costs without a certificate, though title were not brought in question at the trial (as in this case it was held to be). Humberstone v. Henderson, 3 P. R. 40.

In trespass q. c. f. and for taking goods, defendant pleaded not guilty; that the goods were not the plaintif's; and justification under a fi. fa. Title to land was not brought in question:—Held, that the plaintiff on a verdict for $175 was clearly not entitled to full costs without a certificate. Stewart v. Jarvis, 27 U. C. R. 467.

The plaintiff filed a bill for the protection of the timber on certain land which he claimed to own. At the hearing the court retained the bill with liberty to the plaintiff to bring an action. The plaintiff brought the action and recovered a verdict of $20. It appearing that the question in issue was the plaintiff's title to the land, he was held entitled to a decree with costs, notwithstanding the small amount of damage which had been actually done by the defendant. McAlpine v. Eckfrid, 16 Gr. 595.

To an action for negligently setting out fire, which spread to the plaintiff's land and damaged his woods, the defendant, amongst other pleas, pleaded that the land and property were not the plaintiff with $50 damages, but no certificate for costs:—Held, following Humberstone v. Henderson, 3 P. R. 40, that the plea raised the question of title to land, and that the plaintiff was therefore entitled to full costs without a certificate. Coulson v. O'Connell, 29 C. P. 341.

Held, that on a plea of non demisit to a count in covenant, a question of title arises, which entitles the plaintiff to superior court costs, although no certificate be granted. Purser v. Bradburne, 7 P. R. 18.

The statement of claim alleged that the defendant was a monthly tenant of the plaintiff's land, and that the plaintiff on a certain day terminated the tenancy by notice, and claimed damages for injuries to the denised premises. The statement of defence denied the allegation that the defendant was the allegation that the defendant was the statement of the plaintiff:—Held, that the title was not to be plaintiff;—Held, that the discounty control of the high court, although the plaintiff ecovered only $75:—Held, also, that the question whether the title was in issue must be determined according to the pleadings, and not according to what took place on the trial or reference. Worman v. Brady, 12 P. R. 618.

Where in an action by a monthly tenant against his landlord and other persons for wrongful entry upon the demised premises, the landlord denied the plaintiff's tenancy:—Held, that the title to land was brought in question, and the costs of the plaintiff were properly taxed on the high court scale, although the damages recovered were only $104. Worman v, Brady, 12 P. R. 613, and Danaher v, Little, 13 P. R. 361, followed. Tomkins v, Jones, 22 Q. B. D. 599, specially referred to. Flett v. Way, 14 P. R. 312.

In an action brought in the high court by a landlord against a tenant for damages for breach of the latter's covenants in a farm lease, the statement of claim alleged that the plaintiff by deed let to the defendant the land described for a term of years, and that the defendant thereby covenanted as set forth, and assigned as breaches of the covenants that the defendant did not cultivate the farm in a good, husband-like, and proper manner. By the statement of defence the defendant denied all the allegations of the statement of claim, and further alleged that the defendant had used the premises in a tenant-like and proper manner, "according to the custom of country where the same were situate The plaintiff recovered a verdict of $100, the action being tried with a jury. The title to the land was not brought into question at the trial, but it was contended that it came in question on the pleadings :- Held, not so; for the defendant was, on the face of the record, estopped from pleading non demisit, and his denial could only be read as a traverse and his denial could only be read as a traverse of the actual execution of the lease. Purser v. Bradburne, 7 P. R. 18, commented on:—Held, also, that the "custom" pleaded was not the "custom" meant by s. 69, s.-s. 4, of the Division Courts Act, R. S. O. 1887 c. 51, which refers to some legal custom by which the right or title to property is acquired, or on which it depends. Legh v. Hewitt, 4 East 154, followed:—Held, therefore, that the action was within the com-petence of the division court, and that the costs should follow the event in accordance with Rules 1170, 1172. Talbot v. Poole, 15 P. R. 99.

Trespass.]—In an action in the common pleas division, for trespass to lands and removal of fixtures, the plaintiff recovered a vertict for $50. The taxing officer taxed division court costs to the plaintiff, and full costs to the defendant. The pleadings admitted an entry under an agreement as to placing fixtures, and their removal and appropriation, but put in issue their wrongful removal:—Held, that the taxing officer was right, the title to corporeal hereditaments not being in question:—Held, also, that though the defendant had failed to prove his defence, he was entitled to set off his costs. Richardson v. Joshin, 10 P. R. 292.

Trespass to Land—Injunction—Counterclaim—Declaratory Judgment.]—Under s. 23, s.*s. 8, of R. 8, O. 1897 c. 55, a county court can give a judgment for nominal damages and grant an injunction in an action for trespass to land, where the value of the land does not exceed $200. A counterclaim upon which no relief is given can make no difference as to the jurisdiction of a court; and semble, also, that a judgment declaring a right can be given in a county court by virtue of s.*s. 13 of s. 23, R. 8, O. 1897 s. 55. Where an action of the proper competence of a county court was brought in the high court, the successful plaintiff was allowed costs on the county court scale, with a set-off to the defendants of the excess of their costs over county court costs. Fitchett v. Mellow, 18 P. R. 161.

Varying Order.]—At the trial the learned Judge allowed only county court costs. On shewing cause to the defendants' motion, the plaintiff, who had not moved, asked to have the direction as to costs varied, and full costs allowed; but the court, in the absence of a substantive motion therefor, refused to interfere, Dyment v. Northern and North-Western R. W. Co., 11 O. R. 343.

Verdict.] — The amount of the verdict prima facie settles the jurisdiction, and if under any circumstances the inferior court could have tried the action for that amount, a certificate is necessary. Bonter v. Pretty, 9 C. P. 273.

Verdict.]—The verdict of the jury must determine for all purposes of costs the amount of the plaintiff's claim. Brown v. McAdam, 4 P. R. 54.

Water Privilege—Appeal from Order of County Court Judge.]—The disposition of the costs of an appeal is not a part of the practice and proceedings upon the appeal. Upon an appeal from an order of a county court Judge, under R. S. O. 1887 c. 119, with respect to a water privilege, the court of appeal has power, under s. 18, to direct that the costs shall be taxed on the scale applicable to high court, county court, or division court appeals; and the Judge to whom application for leave to appeal is made under s. 16 has no power to control the discretion of the court in this respect. Re Burnham, 16 P. R. 390.

Work and Labour.]—Where the plaintiffs in an action in the high court of justice to recover a sum for work and labour and materials, the amount not being liquidated or ascertained, recovered $190.01 for debt. and $14.54 for interest from the issue of the writ of summons:—Held, that the amount recovered was not within the jurisdiction of a county court, and the plaintiffs were entitled to costs on the scale of the high court. Malcolm v. Leys, 15 P. R. 75.

Work and Labour — Goods Sold.] — Whenever a sun up to $400 is agreed on by the parries as the remuneration for a service to be performed, or as the price of any article sold, if the service be performed or the article be delivered in pursuance of the bargain, the amount may be recovered in the county court, denial of the contract and price not availing to oust the jurisdiction. Robb v. Murray, 16 A. R. 503, considered. Ostrom v. Benjamin (2), 21 A. R. 407.

See County Court — Division Court — Prohibition.

2. Certificate for Costs.

(a) For County Court Costs.

Under 13 & 14 Vict. c. 53, s. 78, in a case brought in this court; and a verdict rendered within the division court jurisdiction, the Judge had no power to order county court costs. Cameron v. Campbell, 11 U. C. R. 159,

Where plaintiff in good faith sues in a county court, and had reasonable grounds for supposing that he would recover more than he could recover in the division court, the Judge may properly certify for county court costs. Donnelly v. Fletcher, 8 L. J. 169.

If one of the Judges of the superior courts would grant a certiorari by reason of difficult questions of law, to remove the cause if commenced in a division court, it is proper for the Judge of the county court certify for county court costs. Patterson v. Snook, 8 L. J. 109.

Where the verdict exceeds $60, and a certificate for full costs is refused, the master has still power to inquire whether a division court and jurisdiction, and to tax county and occupation, the plaintiff recovered $100, and the master taxed county court costs. In this case the action was for and occupation, the plaintiff recovered $100, and the master taxed county court costs. The learned Judge who tried the case would have certified for such costs if he had had authority to do so, and he therefore refused to interfere. Harold v. Stewart, 2 C. L. J. 245.

The proceedings here with regard to writs of error to county courts, must be governed by the old practice in England. The plaintiff, in the county court, recovered $5 on a declaration containing counts on the warranty of a horse for deceit, and the common counts. No certificate was granted, and judgment was entered for defendant for his costs of defence as between attorney and client, less the $5 damages. The plaintiff removed the judgment by writ of error, contending that under the statute of Ontario, 31 Vict. 24, s. 2, s.-8, 4, he was entitled to division court costs. The defendant obtained a rule calling upon the plaintiff to assign errors:—Held, not his proper course: but that he should have sued out a scire facias quare executionem non. Held, also, that this writ could not be said to have been sued out merely for delay, in which case the court will not stay execution, for there was fair ground for contending that the plaintiff was entitled to division court costs, and that the defendant should have deducted his own costs in such court from his own county court costs. Pope v. Reilly, 29 U. C. R. 478.

A certificate under 31 Vict. c. 24, ss. 1, 2, was granted after a verdict for $118, "to entitle the plaintiff to county court costs:"—Held, that there could not be a set-off of costs on such certificate. Moore v. Price, 5 P. R. 9.

13 & 14 Vict. c. 53, s. 78, enacts, that in any suit which might have been brought in a division court, unless the Judge shall certify as therein mentioned, so much of defendant's costs as shall exceed the costs which would have been incurred by him in the division court shall be set off by the master in entering judgment against the plaintiff's costs, and defendant shall be entitled to execution against the plaintiff when the costs so set off shall exceed the plaintiff's verdict and division court costs:— Held, that under this the defendant might set off the excess of his costs of defence above his own and the plaintiff's verdict. Cameron v. Campbell, 12 U. C. R. 139; S. C., 1 P. R. 170.

Held, also, that the plaintiff's attorney, having advanced to the plaintiff's te amount

Held, also, that the plaintiff's attorney, having advanced to the plaintiff the amount of the verdict, could have no lien so as to deprive the defendant of the benefit of the statute. Ib.

(b) For Full Costs.

The plaintiff recovered a verdict within the jurisdiction of the district court, and as soon as the verdict was recorded, the court adjourned. A motion for a certificate, made at the opening of the court on the following morning:—Held, too late. Falls v. Lewis, Dra. 500.

A certificate under 58 Geo. III. c. 4, if not moved for after other causes have been tried, though upon the same day, will not be granted. McKee v. Irwine, 1 U. C. R. 160.

When ordered at the trial but not completed from inadvertence it may be completed afterwards at any time. Linfoot v. O'Neill, 5 O. S. 343.

Where there are issues in law and in fact, and a venire to try the issues and assess the damages, a certificate must be applied for at the trial, and an order cannot be made by a Judge as in cases of assessment, after judgment by default. Makoney v. Zwick, 4 O. S. 99.

Where a verdict was found for the plaintiff in a defended cause, and the Judge at nisi prius did not certify, but the plaintiff afterwards obtained an order for costs in chambers from another Judge, as if the damages had been assessed after judgment by default—the court set the order aside. McNab v. Reeres, H. T. 6 Vict.

After the jury had rendered their verdict, but before any other business, the Judge examined a witness to prove only that the cause was commenced before the late District Court Act, and therefore proper to be tried in the Queen's Bench, and thereupon granted a certificate: — Held, properly granted. Handcock v, Bethune, 2 U. C. R. 386.

A certificate either under the Division Court or District Court Act, must be moved for immediately after the verdict is rendered, and no discretion remains with the court or with the Judge who tried the cause to grant it afterwards. Malloch v. Johnston, 4 U. C. R. 352.

Semble, that where in a personal action the sum recovered is within the division court jurisdiction, a certificate must be moved for at the trial, or costs cannot afterwards be given. Hamilton, V. Clarke, 2 P. R. 189.

In trespass, the verdict was for 45s., and a certificate was applied for at the trial. The Judge took time to consider, and before judgment entered, but after the first four days of next term, certified that the trespass was whiful and malicious, and that it was a proper case to be tried in the superior court:—Held, that the delay was no objection. Wise v. Herson, 1 P. R. 232.

A certificate having been granted, on application first made three months after verdict, and costs taxed thereon, the order was rescinded and costs revised: the defendant was at the same time allowed to set off the excess of his costs of defence between attorney and client over county court costs against the phintiff's costs of the cause. Bonter v. Pretty, 9 C. P. 273.

Where a verdict for substantial damages is subsequently reduced by the court to a nominal sum, the court has power, under ss. 345.8 of R. S. O. 1877 c. 30, to grant a certificate for costs; but the motion must be made when the judgment reducing the verdict is delivered, or before the rule absolute is issued, unless the matter is nostnoned to a future day. In this case the judgment reducing a verdict for $1,000 to nominal damages, was delivered on the judgment day after Easter term, but no certificate was then moved, and the rule absolute issued without one. The court, not-withstanding the delay, as the practice was new, granted the certificate on a motion made in the following term, and directed the rule absolute to be re-issued with a certificate embodied therein. Driffill v. McFall, 42 U. C. R. 597.

In an action for damages for breach of contract, the jury awarded the plaintiff $68.50, and the trial Judge entered judgment for that amount, and certified to en-title the plaintiff to costs on the division court scale, and to prevent the defendant from setting off high court costs. On appeal, a divisional court varied the order as to costs s divisional court varied the order as to costs so as to give the plaintiff such costs only as he would have recovered under R. S. O. 1877 c. 50. s. 347, s.-s. 3, where the Judge at the trial did not certify. Livernois v. Bailey, 12 P. R. 535.

An appeal to the court of appeal was dismissed without costs, the Judges being divided in opinion. S. C., 13 P. R. 62.

The master is not to refuse to tax Queen's bench costs, merely because the verdict is within the district court jurisdiction, although the Judge has not certified. Murray v. Orr. Dra. 3.

Full costs not allowed where in covenant only £2 was recovered, and the Judge did not certify. Gardner v. Stoddard, Dra. 94. Effect of the word "withdrawn" in in a certificate, Ib.

One of the plaintiffs being Judge of the district court in which the defendant resided, full costs were allowed, although the cause of action was within the district court jurisdiction. Jones v. Wing, 3 O. S. 36.

An action of seduction may, under some circumstances, be brought "to try a right," or the grievance complained of may be "wilful and malicious:" and therefore, on a verdict under SS, without a certificate, the plaintiff was held not entitled under C. L. P. Act, s. 324, to any costs whatever, but, as the statute is confined to a verdict or assessment, he was entitled to full costs of demurrer. Townsend v. Sterling, 4 P. R. 125.

The fact that a plaintiff prays an injunction is not sufficient to entitle him to full costs without a certificate. The action itself and the equitable relief sought must be such and the equitable relief sought inust be such as to justify the Judge in certifying it to be a proper action to be tried in the superior court. There is nothing in the Patent Act. C. S. C. c. 34, to justify the Judge in refusing to certify for costs, merely because defendant might have defeated the plaintiff entirely by proper pleading, but had not done so. Under peculiar circumstances of these cases:that the first was a case proper for a certificate, but the second case not so. E. v. Iredale, Emery v. Hodge, 7 L. J. 181.

In an action on a lease alleged to contain a covenant sued on, where it was a difficult question of law to determine whether or not the lease contained such a covenant, although the jury found $140 damages only, the Judge certified that the cause was a fit one to be tried in the court of common pleas. Thompson v. Crawford, 9 L. J. 262.

Where in an investigation of a charge under the Petty Trespass Act, 4 Will. IV. c. 4, before magistrates, the plaintiff was guilty of a contempt, for which the magistrates convicted him, but without warrant, and plaintiff brought an action for false imprisonment against them and recovered:—Held, that the action did not arise in consequence of anything done by the magistrates under the Petty Trespass Act, and that therefore it was not necessary for the Judge under the 21st section of that Act, to certify his approval of the verdict to entitle the plaintiff to his costs. Armour v. Boswell, 6 O. S. 450.

Full costs were allowed in a bailable action, there being no Judge in the district where the cause of action arose when the action was brought. Jennings v. Dingman, T. T. 4 & 5 Vict.

So, also under similar circumstances in a non-bailable action. Willis v. Merriton, T. T. 4 & 5 Vict.

The plaintiff sued in the Queen's bench, and applied for Queen's bench costs, on the ground that on the day he commenced his suit, no Judge of the county court had been appointed by the government to fill up the vacancy that had occurred; but, held that under the circumstances Queen's bench costs could not be allowed. Sutherland v. Tisdale, 1 C. L. Ch. 213.

The plaintiffs having recovered only £5 against a corporation, were allowed Queen's bench costs, as the right to sue a corporation in a district court was doubtful. Fisher v. City of Kingston, 4 U. C. R. 213,

The court ordered full costs on an assessment of damages upon a cause of action exceeding £30, but under £40, it being a case in which the court would have granted a certificate if there had been a trial. In another case, it was refused. Ferrie v. Young, McGill v. Stull, 3 O. S. 140.

It is no ground for a certificate that defendant's set-off could not be tried in the district court. Gooderham v. Chilver, 5 O. S.

Plaintiff, residing in the London district, sold goods to defendant residing in the Western district, who gave his note for the amount :-Held, that on the mere surmise that the consideration of the note might be disputed, the plaintiff was not justified in suing in the Queen's bench, and could not therefore get full costs. Cronyn v. Probat, 6 O. S. 192.

Declaration on a special count and common counts-General verdict for a sum within the district court jurisdiction and no certificate :- Held, plaintiff entitled only to district court costs. Washburn v. Longley, 6 O. S. 217.

Declaration in covenant, assigning two breaches, one for liquidated, and the other for unliquidated demands. Verdict under £40:— Held, plaintiff not entitled to Queen's bench costs without a certificate. Beattie v. Cook, 6 O. S. 217.

Where plaintiff, an attorney, brought assumpsit and recovered 3s., the court held him entitled to full costs, as he proved a cause of action to the amount of £20 and upwards, although the jury decided against him on those items of his claim on hearing the whole evidence. King v. Such, 5 O. S. 81.

Attorneys, suing for costs by an attorney, and not by attachment of privilege, were refused full costs. Strachan v. Bullock, 2 U. c. R. 382.

Trespass for assault and battery. Defendant pleaded that the plaintiff was wrongfully in defendant's close, and molliter manus imposuit to turn him out, and the plaintiff replied excess, and obtained a verdict for 1s.:—Held, that he was entitled to full costs. Caniff v. Corwin, T. T. 5 & 6 Vict.

In an action for assault and battery, where a battery has been proved, the Judge nevertheless has a discretion to withhold a certificate for full costs under 22 & 23 Car. II. c. 9. Carr V. Trotter, S U. C. R. 324.

An action for assault and battery was brought before 16 Vict. c, 175, s, 26, and damages were afterwards assessed at 1s. After the passing of the C. L. P. Act, s, 312, the plaintiff applied for an order to tax full costs:—Held, that 16 Vict. c, 175, being in force till the C. L. P. Act came into operation, the plaintiff might have moved under it; and the application was refused. Savage v. Robertson, 2 P. R. 307.

Held, that a party who gave instructions for an action, without specifying the court, the attorney not stating that he would expect him to pay the difference should the verdict be within the county court jurisdiction, and commencing the action in the superior court, was only liable for county court costs between attorney and client, the sum recovered being within the jurisdiction of the county court, and no higher costs being taxable between party and party. Scanlon v. McDonough, 10 C. P. 104.

An action in which it would be necessary to issue a commission for the examination of witnesses may be brought in one of the superior courts, although the amount sued tor may be within the jurisdiction of an inferior court. Constock v. Leaney, 3 L. J. 13.

An order for a certiorari to bring up a case into a superior court entitles the defendant to the full costs of that court if he succeed, without any certificate. Cortey v. Roblin, 5 L. J. 995.

Trover for a deed. Verdict for £24 16s. A new trial was ordered unless plaintiff would accept nominal damages, to which he consented. The court refused to compel plaintiff to enter judgment and tax his costs, or allow defendant to do so for him, in order to set off the costs of defence, and recover the excess over the plaintiff's verdict and taxable costs—first, because it is not clear that an action of this nature is within the jurisdiction of the division court; and secondly, because the verdict was not reduced until after the trial, and the plaintiff therefore had no opportunity to apply for a certificate, which perhaps he might otherwise have obtained. Ginn v, Scott, 11 U. C. R. 542.

Where in an action for false imprisonment the plaintiff obtained a verdict for 1s., and no certificate:—Held, that as he was entitled by 45 to no costs, defendant could not, under s. 328 of the C. L. P. Act, set off or recover his costs, against him. Cross v. Waterhouse, 23 U. C. R. 590.

Held, that where plaintiff, without a trial, recovers in a superior court an amount within the pecuniary jurisdiction of an inferior tribunal, defendant is not entitled to set off as against the costs of plaintiff so much of defendant's costs taxed, as between attorney and client, as exceed the taxable costs of defence, which would have been incurred in the inferior tribunal, had the action been brought in that tribunal—s. 328 of C. L. P. Act not being applicable. Johnson v. Morley, 3 P. R. 217.

Under 31 Vict, c, 24, s. 1, a Judge should certify for costs where he would have done so under the repealed section of the C. L. P. Act.

Grok v. Garvin, 5 P. R. 169.

In an action for overflowing plaintiff's land, the defendant pleaded not guilty, and the jury found for plaintiff with 1s. damages:—Held, that (there being important rights at stake, and it being such a case as would properly be removable from an inferior court by certiorari), the plaintiff was entitled to a certificate for full costs. Ib.

In an action for breach of promise of marriage, a certificate for full costs under 31 Vict. c. 24, s. 1, was moved for at the trial, and refused; but some seven weeks afterwards the plaintiff applied for and obtained a certificate under the same section, to prevent the defendant from setting off costs. The certificate was set aside, for, 1. Section 1, which only authorizes such a certificate in actions of trespass or trespass or the case, does not extend to actions of contract, like the present; and, 2. As the certificate granted was not applied for at the trial, nor the consideration thereof postponed, it was granted too late. Major v. McKenzie, 23 C. P. 261.

Held, that the Act 31 Vict. c. 24, s. 1 (O.), deprives a plaintiff of costs in all cases of trespass or trespass on the case, no matter what defence may be pleaded, where the verdict is under 88, and there is no certificate of costs from the presiding Judge. Davis v. Vandecer, 28 C. P. 185.

In trespass quare clausum fregit, where the pleas were, not guilty, that the land was not the plaintiff's, and a right of way, there was a verdict for one shilling damages only, and no certificate. The master having refused to tax the plaintiff any costs, the plaintiff obtained a Judge's order directing the taxation of full costs:—Held, that the order must be rescinded. Ib.

The plaintiff, in an action for trespass to land, in which the pleas were only not guilty and leave and license, recovered damages, and the Judge refused to certify for costs. The plaintiff then applied for leave to enter a suggestion on the record that the trespasses were committed after notice, and for an order, on such entry, that the master should tax full costs:—Held, that s. 325 of the C. L. P. Act not being repealed by 31 Vict. c. 24 (O.), the plaintiff was entitled under it to enter the suggestion; but the provise to that section—not to be found in the corresponding Imperial enactment, 3 & 4 Vict. c. 24, s. 3—would prevent him from recovering more than division court costs, without a certificate. Howden v. Donnelly, 40 U. C. R. 119.

In an action for slander the plaintiff is entitled under a certificate for full costs pursuant to 31 Vict. c. 24 (O.), to tax full costs of suit; but he is not so entitled without a certificate, upon the ground that some of the words mentioned in the declaration are not actionable without special damage laid. Stewart v. Moffatt, 20 C. P. 89.

3. Solicitor and Client Costs.

Payable by Opposite Party.]-Where costs have to be paid by the opposite party between "costs as between solicitor and client," and costs between solicitor and client;" both mean costs between party and party, to be taxed as between solicitor and client; and held, that the plaintiff was entitled to tax against the defendant, under the words of the judgment, only such costs as a solicitor can tax against a resisting client under the general retainer only to prosecute or de-fend the action; but that the taxation should be as liberal as possible, under the practice, in favour of the plaintiff. Cousineau v. City of London Fire Ins. Co., 12 P. R. 512, followed. Heastip v. Heastip, 14 P. R. 21. See the next case.

The decision in 14 P. R. 21, as to the taxa-tion of costs under a judgment for payment by the defendant to the plaintiff of costs "between solicitor and client," and as to the procedure where there has been an appeal to a master under Rule 854, affirmed. Per Boyd, C. where there has been an appear of a master under Rule 854, affirmed. Per Boyd. C.— The real distinction in taxations "between" and "as between" solicitor and client turns upon the source of payment, and where the payment is by the opposite party, the taxation is on a less liberal scale than where the client himself pays. Per Meredith, J.—The words "between solicitor and client" are not technically appropriate or applicable to a case where the costs of the action are to be paid by one party to another; and these words can-not have any greater effect or more extended meaning than the appropriate words "as between solicitor and client." Heaslip v. Heaslip, 14 P. R. 165.

Taxable Costs.] - The words "taxable costs of defence," used in Rule 1172, do not mean costs as between solicitor and client. Talbot v. Poole, 15 P. R. 274.

VII. SECURITY FOR COSTS.

1. When Ordered.

(a) In General.

Alimony Action. |—An order for security for costs will not be made in an alimony suit. Bennett v. Bennett, 7 P. R. 54.

Appeal.]—Rule 826 is applicable to an appeal under s, 39 (2) of the Mechanics' Lien Act, R. S. O. 1897 c. 153, by the respondent in the court below from the order of a divisional court reversing the judgment upon the trial of a mechanic's lien action, where the amount in question is more than $100, and not more than $200; and therefore security for the costs of such an appeal must be given unless otherwise ordered. Sherlock v. Powell, 18 P. R. 312.

Appeal-Proverty of Appellants]-Upon an appeal by the defendants to the court of appeal from an order of a divisional court reversing the judgment at the trial and ordering judgment to be entered for the plaintiffs for possession of land with costs:—Held, that the fact that the appellants had no means or money or resources other than the land in question, and were unable to procure sureties, was not a ground for dispensing with security was not a ground for easy-assing with security for costs of the appeal. Until it is reversed, there is a presumption in favour of the cor-rectness of every judgment of a court of competent jurisdiction. If the defendants had a lien on the land for a sum exceeding $400 for improvements made by them in the belief that the land was their own, security belief that the and was their own, security might be dispensed with or the lien charged by way of security. But in this case the plaintiffs would be entitled to mesne profits as against the improvements, and the defendants had mortgaged the land for the money laid out, and the lien, if any, was the mortgagee's. Thuresson v. Thuresson, 18 P. R. 414.

Appeal to Divisional Court.] - The words "appeal from a single Judge" in Rule 1487 mean from a Judge presiding in court; that Rule does not interfere with the right to appeal from the judgment of the trial Judge to a divisional court; and a party has still the right to prosecute such an appeal without terms being imposed as to givpear without terms being imposed as to giv-ing security for costs:—Semble, that security should not be "specially ordered" under Rule 1487, upon an appeal by the defendant, where substantial questions arise and the action is of a penal character. Wilson v. Manes, 17 P. R. 239.

Attachment.]-The judgment creditor ob-Attachment, |— The Judgment creditor op-tained an attaching order, which was set aside by the local Judge who granted it; the judgment creditor then appealed to a Judge in chambers unsuccessfully, and had given notice of a further appeal to a divisional court, when his proceedings were stayed by an order of the master in chambers requiring him to give security for costs, on the ground that he was insolvent and was proceeding for the benefit of another:—Held, that the order for security could not be sustained: the judgment creditor was not proceeding either by action or petition; and there was no authority for ordering security. Re Rees, 10 P. R. 425, overruled. Palmer v. Lovett, 14 P. R. 415.

Claimants in Master's Office.]-Parties residing out of the jurisdiction who come into the master's office in an administration action pursuant to a notice to creditors, and claim to be creditors of an estate administered there, will be required to give security for costs. Re Rees, Urquhart v. Toronto Trusts Co., 10 P. R. 425.

Defendant Claiming Relief.]-A defendant asking relief against his co-defendant will not be ordered to give security for costs on the ground of residence out of the jurisdiction:—Semble, such relief should not be asked by way of counterclaim. Walmsley v. Griffith, 11 P. R. 139. See Molsons Bank v. Sawyer, 19 P. R. 316.

Divisional Court.]-Rule 825, providing that no security for costs shall be required on a motion or appeal to a divisional court, does not preclude a defendant from obtaining an order for security for costs where the plaintiff has taken up his residence abroad after a judgment dismissing his action without costs, from which his appeal to a divisional court is pending. Arnold v. Van Tuyl, 30 O. R. 663, distinguished. Tanner v. Weiland, 19 P. R. 149.

Division Courts Act.]—The real plaintiff need not shew upon the trial that security for costs has been given, as required by the Division Courts Act, C. S. U. C. c. 19, s. 154, 17 not given, defendant may move to stay proceedings, or perhaps may plead it in bar of the action. Quare, as to the meaning of that clause in the statute, McDonald v. McDonald, 21 U. C. R. 52.

Dower.]—Security for costs may be obtained in an action for dower. Nolan v. Reid, 1 P. R. 264.

Elections—Cross-Petition.]—Under s. 13 of the Controverted Elections Act, R. S. O. 1887 c. 10, security for costs is required only in the case of the original or principal petition, and not in that of a cross-petition. Kingston (Provincial), 2 E. C. 10.

Executors and Administrators.]—An executiv stands in no different position as to the liability to give security for costs from a litigant suing in his own right. And an executiv resident abroad, applying for payment out of court of moneys to the credit of her testator, was ordered to give security for the costs of an alleged assignee of the fund, who opposed the application. The rule as to security applies to a motion as well as to a petition. Re Parker, Parker v. Parker, 16 P. R. 392.

Foreign Commission.]—An order for a foreign commission being discretionary, there is power to impose proper terms in making it. And the plaintiff was required to give security for the costs of a commission to examine a witness abroad, where the information as to his exact locality was slender and it seemed doubtful whether he would attend to be examined. Langen v. Tate, 24 Ch. D. 522, followed. Coleman v. Bank of Montreal, 16 P. R. 159,

Foreign Corporation—Assets in Ontario.]—The plaintiffs, a foreign corporation, having acquired the patent right to manufacture and sell a certain incandescent light in the Dominion of Canada, entered into an agreement with another company by which the latter were to act as the agents of the plaintiffs in Ontario, and to manufacture and sell the lights at a fixed price or lense them, and the plaintiffs were to receive the net profits, guaranteeing the other company against loss. The other company carried on the business and leased the lights in their own name. A large number of these lights were in existence in Ontario, under lease to different persons:—Held, that as the lights could not be made available in execution without a taking of accounts between the two companies, they were not assets of the plaintiffs in Ontario sufficient to answer a motion for security for costs. Nor could the plaintiffs be regarded as resident in Ontario by reason of their doing business through the medium of the other company. Welsbach, Incandescent Gastight Co. v. St. Leger, 16 P. R. 382.

Infant.]—An infant out of the jurisdiction petitioning for relief will be required to

Infant. |- Infants having bona fide cause of action are privileged suitors; and the same rule as to security for costs should not be applied as in the case of adults. If the next friend of the infant plaintiffs, being the natural guardian, is within the jurisdiction when the action is begun, and so continues pendente lite, the court will not too anxiously scrutinize the tenure of his residence. And where the infant plaintiffs and their natural guardian and next friend were foreigners, and came within the jurisdiction merely for the purpose of bringing the actions, but continued therein up to the time of an application for security for costs, and it appeared that they had a bona fide cause of action, an order staying proceedings until a new next friend within the jurisdiction should be found, was reversed, Scott v. Niagara Navigation Co., 15 P. R. 409, 455.

Infant — Guardian — Next Friend.]—An infant cannot be required to give security for costs nor can his guardian or next friend. Re McConnell, 3 Ch. Ch. 423, approved and followed. Moran v. Kellogg, 10 C. L. T. Occ. N. 184.

Infant—Yert Friend.]—An infant, residing out of the jurisdiction, brought an action for administration, by her mother, who resided in the jurisdiction, but was without substance, as next friend:—Held, that the plaintiff could not be required to furnish security for costs. Roberts v. Coughlin, 18 P. R. 94.

Interpleader.] — An execution creditor made defendant in an interpleader issue, may be ordered to give security. Lovell v. Wardroper, 4 P. R. 265.

Interpleader.]—The claimant under an interpleader issue, if out of the jurisdiction, is bound to give security. Walker v. Niles, 3 Ch. Ch. 108.

Interpleader.] — Security for costs may be ordered in interpleader proceedings. Swain v. Stoddard, 12 P. R. 590, approved and followed. Belmonte v. Aynard. 4 C. P. D. 221, 352, distinguished. The party substantially and in fact moving the proceedings, whether plaintiff or defendant in the interpleader issue, should, if resident out of the jurisdiction, give security to the opposite party. Re Ancient Order of Foresters and Castner, 14 P. R. 47.

Interpleader.]—In a sheriff's interpleader the party out of the jurisdiction, whether claimant or execution creditor, may be ordered to give security for costs to his opponent in the issue. Knickerbocker Trust Company of New York v. Webster, 17 P. R. 189.

Justice of the Peace—Character of Property of Phaintiff.]—Upon applications under 53 ver. c. 23 0, tor security for costs in actions against justice, but reach the rule should not be more, but reach the rule should not be more, but reach the rule should not be more but reached the rule should be less exacting as to the court should be less exacting as to the character of the property where the person is a bona fide resident than in the ordinary case of a stranger who seeks to justify upon property within the jurisdiction; the test is; is it such property as would be forthcoming and available in execution? And where the plaintiff had property, partly real and partly personal, to the value of $890 over and above debts, incumbrances, and exemptions, security for costs was not ordered. Bready v. Robertson, 14 P. R. 7.

Justice of the Peace—Mcrits.]—In an action against a justice of the peace for false arrest and imprisonment, it appeared that there was a valid warrant of commitment against the plaintile in the plaintile in a specific plaintile in the plaintile was there arrested. The plaintilf alleged that the arrest was illegal because the defendant's mandate was not actually indersed upon the warrant, and because the defendant's number was not shewn on the face of his mandate. It appeared, however, that the defendant's mandate was pasted or annexed to the warrant, and that the defendant in fact had authority, though it was not set out. It was admitted that the plaintiff was not possessed of property sufficient to answer costs:—Held, that the defendant was entitled to security for costs under 53 Vict. c. 23 (0.). Per Robertson, and Meredith, JJ. It was not intended by the statute that the merits of the action should be determined upon an application for security for costs. Southneick v. Hare, 15 P. R. 222.

Libel—Newspaper—Frirolous Action.]—Where an action of libel was brought by one Greme complaining of statements published in a newspaper imputing a crime to one Graham, and it appeared that it was stated in the article complained of that no one would believe the charge against Graham, and that in an article published in the same newspaper, after the commencement of the action, it was stated that the person referred to in the former article was not the plaintiff, and there were other facts shewing that the plaintiff was not the person referred to —Held, that the action was frivolous, and the defendants were entitled to security for costs under R. S. O. 1887 c. 57, s. 9. Grame v. Globe Printing Co., 14 P. R. 72.

Libel—Neuspaper — Criminal Charge.]—
The legislation in R. S. O. 1887 c. 57, s. 9, as to security for costs in actions for libel contained in newspapers, is unique, and the intention is to protect newspapers reasonably well conducted, with a view to the information of the public. In a newspaper article published by the defendants the plaintiff was referred to as an "unmitigated scoundred," and it was stated that he had endeavoured to ruin his wife by inciting another person to commit adultery with her:—Held, that this did not contend that the grounds of action were trivial or frivolous; and it was conceded by the plaintiff that he had not sufficient property to answer the costs of the action. The manager of the defendants swore to a belief in the substantial truth of what was published, and that it was so published in good faith and without malice or ill-will towards the plaintiff:—Held, that, under these circumstances, an appeal from the discretion of a Judge in chambers in reversing a referee's decision and ordering security for costs, should not prevail. Bennett v. Empire Printing and Publishing Co., 16 P. R. 63.

Libel—Newspaper—Good Faith.]—On an application under R. S. O. 1887 c. 57, s. 9, for security for costs in an action of libel, the Judge is not to try the merits of the action; if it appears on the affidavits filed by the defendant that there is a prima face case of justification or privilege, and that the plaintiff is not possessed of property sufficient to answer costs, the statute is satisfied and security should be ordered; it is not for the Judge to pass upon disputed facts disclosed in conflicting affidavits filed against the application. Secain v. Mail Printing Co., 16 P. R. 132.

Libel—Candidate for Public Office.]—The plaintiff was a candidate at an election of a member of the Legislative Assembly of Ontario, and brought this action in respect of several libels alleged to have been published by the defendant in his newspaper, some of them before the date of the writ for the election, and some after that date but before the election;—Held, that the plaintiff was not a candidate for a public office in this Province within the meaning of R. S. O. 1887 c. 57, s. 5, s.-s. (2) (a), before the date of the writ for the election; and that as to the libels alleged to have been published before that date, a notice before action under the statute was necessary; but the paragraphs of the statement of claim charging these libels could not, on the ground that the notice was not given, be struck out under Rule 387, nor action as to them summarily dismissed; and as to the libels alleged to have been published after that date, security for costs could not be ordered under the statute, because the plaintiff was then a candidate for a public office within the meaning of s. 5, s.-s. (2) (a), and the statute did not apply, there having been no retraction. Connec v. Weidman, 16

Libel—Newspaper — Criminal Charge, 1—The words "involves a criminal charge" in R. S. O. 1887 c. 57, s. 9, s. s., (1) or involves are charge that the plaintiff has been guilty of a criminal offence." And where the words published by the defendants in their newspaper of which the plaintiffs, an incorporated company, complained in an action of libel, alleged that the plaintiffs, an incorporated company, complained in an action of libel, alleged that the plaintiffs had tried to bribe aldermen by issuing to them paid-up stock in the company:—Held, upon an application for security for costs under the above section, that the words did not involve a criminal charge, for a corporation cannot be charged criminally with a crime involving malice or the intention of the offender, Mayor, &c., of Manchester v. Williams, 118911 Q. B. 94, followed. Journal Printing Co. v. MacLean, 25 O. R. 599, distinguished. And where the defendants by afficiantly the second of the deponent on the cross-examination of the deponent on his affidavit an order was made for such security. Georgian Bay 8hij Canal Co. v. World Newspaper Co., 16 P. R. 320.

Libel — Newspaper — Criminal Charge — "Blackmail."]—Upon an application under R. S. O. 1887 c. 57. s. 9, for security for costs in an action for libel, in which the words complained of, published in the defendants' newspaper, accused the plaintiff of attempted 'blackmail'":—Held, that the words might bear such a meaning as to charge the indictable offence defined by s. 406 of the Criminal Code, and the question whether they did so, when read with the context, was for the jury, and one which should not be determined upon this application; and the master in chambers having held that they "involved a criminal charge." his decision should not be interfered with. An action cannot be considered "trivial or frivious" within the meaning of s. 9 merely because the existence of a good defence on the merits is shewn by the defendant's affidavit, and not contravened by an affidavit of the plaintiff. The latter may properly consider that upon an application for security for costs a denial on oath of the truth of the charges against him is unnecessary. Macdonald v. World Newspaper Co., 16 P. R. 324.

Libel—Norspaper—Good Faith.]—In an action of libel against the publishers and editor of a newspaper, the defence suggested by alfidavits filled upon an application under R. S. O. 1887 c. 57, s. 9, for security for costs, was that the statements complained of as defaulted by the second of the sec Libel — Newspaper — Criminal Charge—Pleuding—Innuendo.]—Where a statement of claim in an action for libel contained in a public newspaper is not so defective as to be demurrable, and the words are alleged by the plaintiff to have been used in a sense which involves the making by the person using them of a criminal charge against the plaintiff, and may have that meaning, the case is brought within the exception contained in clause (a) of s. 9 (1) of the Act respecting Actions of Libel and Slander, R. S. O. 1887 c. 57, and the defendant is not entitled to security for costs. That clause is applicable to cases where an innuendo is necessary to give the words complained of a defamatory sense; and upon an application for security there cannot be a trial of the action on the merits in order to determine whether the words used involve a criminal charge. Smyth v. Stephonson, 17 P. R. 374.

Libel — Newspaper—Contentious Affidavit in Ansicer.]—Upon an application for security for costs made under R. S. O. 1887 c. 57s. 9 by the defendant in an action for an alleged libel contained in a public newspaper, the plaintiff desired to read and have the benefit of an affidavit made by himself contradicting the statements in the affidavit of the agent of the defendants on which the motion was based, and contended that the object was not to try the facts on affidavits, but to shew that the agent had not knowledge of the facts, that many statements made by him were not true, and therefore that his affidavit was not such as required by s. 9:—Held, that the plaintiff's affidavit could not be read or used upon the application. Bartram v. London Free Press Printing Co., 18 P. R. 11.

Libel—Newspaper — Mercentile Agency.] A printed paper issued daily by the conductors of a mercantile agency, to persons who are subscribers to the agency, for the purpose of giving the information required by such subscribers, is a "newspaper," and "printed for sale." within the meaning of s. 1 of R. S. O. 1897 c. 68; and the publishers are, therefore, in an action for libel brought against them, entitled to the benefit of the provisions as to security for costs contained in s. 10. Slattery v. R. G. Dun & Co., 18 P. R. 168.

Married Woman.]—Action to remove a cloud from the title to certain land of the plaintiff, a married woman, whose husband when in embarrassed circumstances had bought the land and taken a conveyance in her name. The plaintiff had no separate establishment of the land and was not a person of chusband and wife:—Held, that though suing alone and without separate estate, a married woman is not required to give security for costs. The only person who could be plaintiff on the title was the wife, and her husband could not be joined as a necessary or even a proper party. This case did not come within the class of cases where a nominal insolvent plaintiff is put forward, while the substantial litigant keeps in the background in order to avoid liability for costs. McKay v. Baker, 12 P. R. 341.

Misleading Description.]—The court will order a plaintiff to give security for costs if he misdescribe himself in his bill through an improper motive, or with the intention of misleading the defendant, even though on the application for security the plaintiff should furnish his true address. Waldron v. Mc-Walter, 6 P. R. 145.

Mortgage Action.]—The fact that the suit was a foreclosure suit, was held not to disentitle the defendant to the order for security against the plaintiff, although a mortgagor, he disputing that anything was due, and the master being directed to inquire "what, if anything, was due." Thompson v. Allagan, 3 Ch. Ch. 15.

Motion to Quash By-law—Recognizance.]—On a motion to quash a municipal bylaw a recognizance is necessary; a bond cannot be substituted. Re Burton and Village of Arthur, 16 P. R. 160.

Motion to Set Aside Consent.]—On a motion by plaintiff to set aside a consent to the dismissal of a bill, it appeared that the plaintiff resided out of the jurisdiction. The pludges' secretary ordered that security to $100 should be given before the plaintiff could proceed with his motion. Bolster v. Cochrane, 4 C. L. J. 45.

Plaintiff in Gaol.]—Where the defendant applied for security and one of the plaintiffs deposed in an affidavit that he was resident at Kingston, where in fact he was in gaol, the court ordered security. Bastable v. Moucatt, Tay. 492.

Public Officer—Pleading — Affidavits.]— Where a person who holds a public office is made defendant in an action, the pleadings must be looked at to determine whether he is sued in his capacity of a public officer, and so estitled to security for costs under s. 7 of the Law Courts Act, 1890; and if the pleadings are of such a character that the case cannot on them go to the jury against the defendant as a public officer, he cannot claim the protection of the statute, even where he shews by affidavits that his sole connection with the matters alleged against him was in his public capacity. Parkes v. Baker, 17 P. R. 345.

Sheriff.]—A sheriff executing a writ of fi. fa. is not an officer or person fulfilling a public duty within the meaning of R. S. O. 1897 c. 89, s. 1, and is not, therefore, entitled to security for costs of an action brought against him for negligence in not making a seizure under the writ. McWhirer v. Corbett, 4 C. F. 203, followed. Creighton v. Secection, 18 F. R. 180.

Slander.]—In an action for slander brought under 52 Vict. c. 14 (O.), the defamatory words complained of imputing want of classity to the plaintiff, an unmarried female, and also for an assault, the defendant moved under s.-s. 3 of s. 1 of the Act, for security for costs, upon an affidavit which stated, among other things, that the defendant had a good defence on the merits, but did not disclose such defence:—Held, that the affidavit was not sufficient, for a primâ facie defence must be shewn; but the cross-examination of the defendant upon her affidavit might be read in aid of the affidavit itself; and counter affidavits could not be received:—Held, also, that the stay of proceedings in the order made for security for costs should not apply to the count for assault. Lancaster v. Ryckman, 15 P. R. 199.

Slander — Burden of Proof.] — Upon an application under 52 Vict, c. 14, s. 1, s. s. 3 (O.), for security for costs of an action for slander imputing unchastity to a female, the onus is on the defendant to shew that the plaintiff has not sufficient property to answer the costs of the action; and to defeat such an application it is not necessary that the plaintiff should have property to the amount of $500 over and above debts, incumbrances, and exemptions. And where it was shewn that the plaintiff had property of the value of $500 at least, and it was not shewn that she had not property of much greater value, the application was refused. Bready v. Robertson, 14 P. R. 7, considered. Feaster v. Cooncy, 15 P. R. 290.

Slander—Meaning of Words Used—Good Defence,—In an action for slander brought by a married woman the words alleged to have been spoken were, "you are a black guard; you are a bad woman are a black guard; you are a bad woman;" and the innuendo was that the plaintiff was a common prostitute and a woman of evil character. Upon an application by the defendant under 52 Vict. c. 14, s. 1, s. s. 3 (O.), for security for costs, the defendant admitted having called the plaintiff "a bad, quarrelsome woman," but said he did not recollect using, and believed he had not used, the word "black-guard," and he denied that he used the words with the meaning attributed to them by the plaintiff;—Held, that the defendant had not shewn a good defence to the action on the merits, and his application was properly refused. Per Boyd, C., and Ferguson, J., that the expressions used might be employed in circumstances and surroundings such that by-cumstances and surroundings such that by-cumstances and surroundings such that bystanders might think them a statement of want of chastity. Per Meredith, J., that as it was shewn by the pleadings and the affidayit of the defendant that there was a real and substantial question for the jury to pass upon, and upon which the action might fail the defendant had shewn a good defence upon the merits. Paladino v. Gustin, 17 P. R. 553.

Winding-up Act—Interrening Shareholder out of the Jurisdiction.] — An order was made by the court delegating the powers exercisable by the court for the purpose of winding up a company, to a referee, pursuant to R. S. C. c. 120, s. 77, ns amended by 52 Vict. c. 32, s. 20 (D.):—IIIeld, that power was delegated to the referee to order security for costs and to stay proceedings til security should be given by a shareholder resident out of the jurisdiction, who intervened:—IIIeld, also, that the liquidator and others opposing the applications made by the intervening shareholder were not barred of their right to security by not applying till after the original applications of the shareholder had been dismissed, and appeals taken; but that the security should be limited to the costs of the appeals. Re Sarnia Gl Co., 14 P. R. 335.

(b) Costs of Former Action Unpaid.

Actions at Law and in Equity.]—The plaintiff (the yeador) had sued at law to recover the purchase money due under an agreement for the sale of lands, but had failed, and the costs of the action were given against him; the defeadant (the vendee) issued a fi. fa. goods to recover the costs, which was returned nulla bona. Afterwards the vendor filed his bill in equity to enforce specific performance of the contract. On motion of the defendant in the suit, the proceedings in equity were stayed till security for the costs at law should be given. Follis v. Todd, 1 Ch. Ch. 288.

Costs not Payable Personally,]—Certain proceedings in the Surrogate Court by the present plaintiff were determined in favour of the defendant, and judgment was given for him, with costs to be paid out of the estate. The plaintiff then filed her bill raising substantially the same questions as those tried in the surrogate court:—Held, that the plaintiff could not be ordered to give security for the costs of the present suit, under 29 & 30 Vict. e. 42, s. 1, for the costs of the former proceedings were not payable by her, but out of the estate. Curtis v, McNabb, 7 P. R. 246.

Ejectment.]—The mere fact of a second action of ejectment being brought between the same parties, and for the same land, is no reason for ordering security, if the costs of the first action have been paid, and the second action brought in good faith. Armstrong v. Montgomery, 5 P. R. 461.

Former Costs Paid.)—On an application for security for costs under C. S. U. C. c. 27. s. 76, the fact of the costs of the former unsuccessful actions having been paid, is not a ground for refusing to make an order. Chambers v. Unger, 6 P. R. 101.

Identity of Actions Necessary.] — To bring a case within 29 & 30 Vict. c. 42, requiring security for costs to be given where another action for the same cause is pending, it must be clearly shewn that the causes of action are identically the same, and not merely growing out of the same transaction. Dean v. Lampreg. 2 Ch. Ch. 202. Quare, does the Act apply at all to this Quere, does the Act apply at all to this court, or to a case where one action is at law and the other in this court. Ib.

Lessor and Lessee of Goods.]—The plaintiff sued as lessee from her brother of certain goods, for damages for lilegal distress. An action had been previously brought by her brother in respect of the same distress against the same defendant, and had been dismissed. Semble, that under these circumstances security for costs might be ordered. Denham v. Gooch, 13 P. R. 344.

Married Woman — Next Friend.] — A former sait, brought by a married woman in her own name for redemption of lands in which she claimed an estate for life, under a lease made in 1866, in which the bill had been dismissed with costs, to be paid by the next friend of the plaintiff, was considered substantially a decree against the plaintiff with costs, and proceedings were stayed in a second suit until security should be given for the costs of the second suit. A stay of proceedings until the costs of the former suit were paid, was refused, there being a distinction in this respect between suits by married women and suits by persons sui juris. Redman v. Brounscombe, 9 C. L. J. 1992.

New Plaintiff — Nominal and Insolvent Plaintiff, — Security for costs may be ordered where the costs of a former action for the same cause are unpaid, even although the actions are not between precisely the same parties, if the plaintiffs are suing substantially virtue of the same alleged title. McCabe v. Bank of Ireland, 14 App. Cas. 413, follow-cel. And where the title to property, the subject of the present and a former action of ejectment, was shifted into the hands of the present plaintiff to evade, if possible, the effect of an order requiring the plaintiff in the former action to give security for costs—the former action to give security for costs—the former action in the former action for the present plaintiff knew the history of the prior litigation, an order for security for costs was afirmed. The order was also maintainable upon the ground that the plaintiff was a person of no substance, and the action brought mainly, if not entirely, for the benefit of some unknown and unnamed person, not a party to the record. May v. Werden, May v. Bedingfield, 17 P. R. 539.

Personal Action and Action as Administrator.]—The plaintiff, as administrator of his late wife, brought this action under R. S. O. 1887 c. 135, to recover compensation for her death, alleged to have been caused by reason of the negligence of the defendants. Previous to his obtaining letters of administration to his wife's estate he had brought an action in his own name against the same defendants for the same purpose, but discontinued it. The costs of the first action being unpaid, the defendants applied for security for costs under Con. Rule 1243:—Held, that the cause of action in the two cases was not the same, and an order staying proceedings till send and the plaintiff should give security for costs was set aside. Lucas v. Cruickshank, 13 P. R.

Principal and Sureties.]—The plaintiff was nonsuited in an action against the sureties of A. Whilst this suit was pending the same plaintiff sued A., who then asked for security for costs under 29 & 30 Vict. c. 42, s. 1:—Held, that he was entitled to security. Elliott v. Pinkerton, 4 P. R. 85.

Prior Action without Authority.]—
Upon an application by the defendant under Rlue 1243 for security for costs, upon the ground that the costs of a former action brought against him by the same plaintiff for the same cause, and discontinued, remained unpaid, the plaintiff contended that the former action, though brought by a solicitor in his name, was brought without his authority:
—Held, that there should be no discussion as to the incidence of the costs of a prior action, known to the plaintiff, he not having taken the proper steps to get rid of these costs prior to the launching of the second action. Lea v. Lang, 17 P. R. 203.

"Proceeding for the Same Cause"—Award.]—The word "proceeding" in Rule 1243 means a proceeding in court. An appeal from an order dismissing a motion to set aside an award made upon a voluntary submission is not a "proceeding for the same cause," within the meaning of Rule 1243, as an action to recover moneys in respect of certain matters included in the submission, but not dealt with by the award; and, although the costs of such appeal are unpaid, security for costs of the action will not be ordered. Caughell v. Brocer, 17 P. R. 438.

Staying Proceedings.]—The practice by which, when the defendant's costs of a former action for the same or substantially the same cause were unpaid, the defendant was entitled to have the latter action stayed until they should be paid, is now superseded by the effect of Rule 3, the defendant's only remedy being o apply under Rule 1243 for security for costs in the second action. Campbell, v. Elgie, 16 P. R. 440.

Substantial Identity Necessary.]—
The plaintiff filed a bill against B. and his daughter, alleging that he had been induced by the false representations of defendants to marry the daughter, upon the supposition that her husband was dead, whereas he was alive; that the plaintiff was induced by B. to expend money on property which B. was to convey to the plaintiff, and his supposed wife, who afterwards left the plaintiff; and the plaintiff claimed a lien upon and sale of the property to repay his said expenditure thereon. This bill having been dismissed for want of prosecution, the plaintiff sued the executor of B., who had died, setting out his expenditure under the false representations, and alleging that after his supposed wife had left him B. agreed that upon receiving three years' rent of the property which was under lease, he would convey it to the plaintiff, and praying for specific performance:—Held, that the second suit was not for substantially the same cause as the first, and that defendant therein was not entitled to security for costs. Cascell v. Murray, 9 P. R. 192.

(c) Nominal or Insolvent Plaintiff.

Assignment — Beneficial Interest.] — Where an assignment had been made by the plaintiff of his interest in a suit to secure a claim, such claim not equalling what the plaintiff claimed in his suit, the surplus to go to the plaintiff after the claim was paid, it was held that the plaintiff had such a beneficial interest in the suit as that no order for security could be made. Carroll v. Eccles, 2 Ch. Ch. 432.

Assignment Pendente Lite.] — Where the plaintiff, having filed a bill for an injunction to abate a nuisance, had parted with his interest in the land in question, proceedings were stayed until security for costs should be given, or the defective state of the record cured. Stean v. Adams, 7 P. R. 147.

Beneficial Interest.]—The plaintiff will be ordered to give security where it is shewn that he is insolvent, and is carrying on the suit for the benefit of another party, who seeks to escape the risk of costs. Mason v. Jeffrey. 2 Ch. Ch. 15.

Beneficial Interest.]—Where an insolvent plaintiff in an action is not an actor therein, but is a mere passive instrument in the hands of the real plaintiff, by whom the action is brought, security for costs will be ordered; but where the plaintiff, by whom the action is brought, security for costs will be ordered; but where the plaintiff, financially worthless, unable to pay costs, although he partly bring the action for the benefit of another, is also himself largely interested in the result, he has to be considered as the real acting plaintiff, and cannot be compelled to give security for costs. Delaney v. MacLellan, 13 P. K. 63, distinguished, Wallbridge v. Trust and Loan Co., 13 P. K. 67.

Beneficial Interest. — To entitle a defendant to security for costs, it is not sufficient to shew that the plaintiff is a man of no means and has no beneficial interest in the subject-matter of the action; if must be shewn that it is really the action of some other person. Gordon v. Armstrong, 16 P. R. 432, explained. Major v. Mackenzie, 17 P. R. 18.

Class Action — Insolvent Plaintiff,] —
Where it appeared that a large number of persons had an interest in the settlement of the question involved in the suit, and they put forward as plaintiff in the suit one of their number, who was shewn to have been insolvent some years before the commencement of the suit, and did not appear to have accumulated any property since his insolvency, security for costs was ordered. Hathway v. Doig, 9 P. R. 91 P.

Class Action—Ratepayer,]—Security for costs was ordered in an action brought by a ratepayer for himself and the other ratepayers to restrain the delivery by the corporation of certain debentures to a railway company, where it appeared from the examination of the plaintiff that he was financially incompetent to pay the defendants' costs, and was only interested to an insignificant extent; and where he swore that he expected certain persons named to pay his costs and to protect him should the case go adversely, that he did not want to spend any money on the prosecution of his own right in the matter, and that he did not know who instructed the plaintiff's solicitor. Clark v. St. Catharines, 10 P. R. 205.

Class Action—Test Case.]—Where several parties suffer damage from the acts of the defendant, and they agree among themselves to share the costs of a test action by one of them to establish his rights, security for costs will not be ordered even though such a plaintiff is insolvent. Clark v. St. Catharries, 10 P. R. 205, distinguished. Clarke v. Rama Timber Transport Co., 10 P. R. 384.

Class Action.)—Security for costs was refused in an action brought by four ratepayers of a municipal corporation, on behalf of themselves and all others with the corporation and reeve for an account of the plaintiffs, and the slight interest they possessed in the properties for which they were assessed, where the action was virtually the plaintiffs action, and not that of third persons who were alleged to be putting the plaintiff forward, and there was no contention that the action was frivolous. Clark v. St. Catharines, 10 P. R. 205, distinguished. McAllister v. O'Mesra, 17 P. R. 167.

Company. |—An application for an order for security for costs was made on the ground that the plaintiffs had no corporate existence, and that their name was being used by one C, who was insolvent:—Held, upon the evidence, that there was nothing to warrant the conclusion that this action was really brought for the benefit of any other than the plaintiffs. Port Rowen and Lake Shore R. W. Co., V. South Norfolk R. W. Co., 13 P. R. 32 T. Held, that the question whether the plaintiffs.

Held, that the question whether the plainiffs had or had not ceased to be an existing corporation, having been raised upon the pleadings, could not be raised and determined on an application for security for costs. Ib.

Contributory.]—One S., a contributory of the company, petitioning to set aside a winding-up order, was required to the security for the costs of the company and tor opposing the petition, where it appeared that S., although he had a nominal intrest as the holder of stock upon which nothing was paid, was not in such a position that anything could be made out of him upon execution, and was petitioning merely in the interest of other persons who lived out of the jurisdiction, and who had indemnified him as to the costs. Re Rainy Lake Lumber Co., 11 P. R. 314.

Ejectment.]-The defendants in an action of ejectment, in which the plaintiff claimed title as owner subject to a mortgage to a bank, moved for security for costs on the grounds that the plaintiff was not able to pay costs and that the action was not really brought by him, but by the bank. It was shewn that the plaintiff was financially worthless; that his interest in the land was so doubtful that he did not feel sufficient interest in the question to litigate it. That the bank instructed their own solicitor to look into the title, took the advice of counsel, and were advised to have an action brought in the name of the mortgagor, who was then for the first time consulted about bringing the action; that the ordinary solicitor of the bank was retained to bring the action; and that he admitted he knew the plaintiff was insolvent. It was fairly deducible from the evidence that the bank had really in fact retained the solicitor, and that the solicitor would look to the bank for his costs:—Held, that under these circumstances the action must be regarded as that of the bank, and not of the plaintiff, who was therefore required to give security for costs. Parker v. Great Western R. W. Co., 9 C. B. 793, and Andrews v. Marris, 7 Dowl. P. C. 712, followed. Delaney v. MacLellan, 13 P. R. 63.

Insolvency — Affidavit — Notice of Motion.]—Held, that an application for security for costs on the ground that the plaintiff is insolvent and is only nominally interested in the action, should be based on an affidavit of belief on the defendant's part that such are the facts, and such an affidavit should at least tempts to establish the facts by examining the plaintiff. Semble, that the proper practice in such a case is to have the grounds set forth in the notice of motion, as was done in Port Rowan and Lake Shore R. W. Co. v. South Norfolk R. W. Co., 13 P. R. 327; and if this method were adopted, an affidavit of belief might be dispensed with if it was proposed to establish the facts alleged out of the mouth of the plaintiff. Held, also, that a finding that the plaintiff had a substantial interest, should be adopted, and such being the position, the defendant had no right to prove the plaintiff spoverty out of his own mouth on this application. Leave was given to the defendant for proceed in proper form with his application for security. Pritchard v. Pattison, 19 P. R. 180, 277.

Insolvent—Action to Set Aside Attachment.]—In a suit by an insolvent to set aside an attachment as fraudulently issued, the assignee in insolvency of the plaintiff having been made a defendant (although not a party to the alleged fraud), an order was granted under s. 39 of the Insolvent Act of 1875, requiring the plaintiff to give security for the costs of the defendant, the assignee. Lee v. Moffatt, 6 P. R. 284.

Insolvent — Action for Personal Wrong.]—1875, an insolvent is bound to give security for costs in an action for a personal wrong. Humphries v. Ramsay, 13 C. L. J. 299.

Insolvent.]—Held, that under s. 39 of the Insolvent Act of 1875, an insolvent must give security for costs in every action he brings, and it was ordered in an action by him for malicious prosecution. *Humphries v. Ram*soy, 7 P. R. 188.

Insolvent Suing for Creditors.]—When the plaintiff has assigned all his property for the benefit of his creditors, and sues on their account, defendant may demand security. Reid v. Cleal, 1 C. L. Ch. 128.

Mortgagor—Action to Establish Right of Way.]—Where an action is brought to establish a right of way over lands adjoining those of which the plaintiff is the owner subject to a mortgage, and, having regard to the value of the property, the amount of the mortgage, and other circumstances, the lands may be said to be really the mortgagee's and the action substantially his, the defendant is entitled to security for costs, if the plaintiff be without substance:—Held, that the mortgage was not a necessary party to the action. But, semble, that he was a proper party and should have been added. Gordon v. Armstrong, 16 P. R. 482.

Official Assignee.]—An official assignee in insolvency cannot be compelled to give security. Monck v. Northwood, 2 C. L. J. 268

Official Assignee — Personal Benefit]— Where a bill was filed by an assignee in insolvency against B, for the indemnification of the estate in respect of a claim by C, which it was alleged B, should pay, and it appeared that the plaintiff was himself an insolvent; that there were no assets whatever of the estate he represented; and that the suit was brought at his instigation, risk, and expense, and for his benefit:—Held, that the plaintiff must give security for costs. Mazon v. Jeffrey, 1 Ch. Ch. 379.

Official Assignee.]—Where the assignee one of the plaintiffs, who had obtained his discharge in insolvency, brought an action in the name of the plaintiffs on an old judgment which had been assigned to the insolvent by the other plaintiffs, and to the benefit of which the assignee was entitled, he was ordered to give security for costs. Boice v. OfLone, 7 P. R. 359.

Official Assignee.]—An assignee in insolvency bona fide suing in discharge of his duty as such assignee, will not be required to give security for costs on the ground that he is without means, and not beneficially interested in the suit. Vars. v. Gould, 8 P. R. 31.

One of Several Plaintiffs.]—The rule that security for costs should not be ordered where it could be only against one of several plaintiffs does not now universally govern, since the law as to joinder of plaintiffs has been changed by Rule 89, O. J. Act, 1881. Quere, whether the rule was ever applicable to the ordering of security for costs against an insolvent plaintiff suing for the benefit of another necessor. Irring. V. Clark. 12 P. R. 29.

an insolvent plantity sungt for the benefit of another person. Irring v. Clark, 12 P. R. 29. Where one plaintiff was suing to enforce a mechanic's lien against certain land, and the other, an insolvent, suing on another's behalf to set aside a sale of the same land, security for costs was ordered against the latter plaintiff alone. Ib.

Partial Interest.] — On an application for security for costs, it appeared that the plaintiff, though a resident of Canada, was in such circumstances as not to be good for the costs of the suit, should it go against him; that other persons were greatly interested in the subject matter thereof; that the plaintiff's success would materially benefit them; and that the defendant had already succeeded in an ejectment suit at law in respect of the same right on one of the grounds relied on by the bill; but there being no evidence that the plaintiff was actually put forward by the other persons interested to try the right, or that the suit was not brought entirely at his own instance, security for costs was refused. Little v. Wright, 16 Gr. 576.

Receiver of Insolvent Company.]—
The plaintiffs, an incorporated company, became insolvent pending an action at law for calls, and the court of chancery appointed a receiver to wind up their affairs, and authorized him to continue the action. An application was made to a Judge in chambers to compel the plaintiffs or the receiver to give security for costs:—Held, that the application should have been made to the court of chancery; but that in any event neither the plaintiffs nor the receiver could be ordered to give security. Provincial Ins. Co. v. Gooderham, 7 P. R. 283.

Shareholder.]—An action was begun by D. as plaintiff, suing on behalf of himself and all other shareholders in the defendant company, to set aside a judgment obtained by the defendant C. against the company, D., who lived out of the jurisdiction, amended the writ of summons, before serving it, by adding A. another shareholder, as a plaintiff. Upon a motion by C. for security for costs, A. was examined, and it appeared from his examination that he had never intended bringing any action himself; that he did not know the nature or the position of the action; and that he did not know D. He had, however, written a formal letter authorizing D.'s solicitors to have him added as a plaintiff. It also appeared that A. had no property except some household furniture of trifling value:—Held, that A. was merely a nominal plaintiff, and that C. was entitled to an order for security for costs. There being reason to suppose that the action would be an expensive one, the plaintiffs were ordered to give security in the sum of $1,000. Delap v. Charlebois, 15 P. R. 45.

(d) Next Friend.

Idiots.] — The next friend of an idiot stands in the same position as the next friend of an infant, and is not required to establish his solvency or give security. Where, however, in the bill, the description and residence of the next friend were not given, the secretary ordered an amendment to be made within a week giving the residence and description, or the defendant to be entitled to security. Sharp v. 2 th. Apr. p. 2 th. Ch. 244.

Infants.]—When the court has appointed the natural guardian of an infant as next friend, and it appears probable that no one else can be found to act in time for the assizes, and no inposition has been practised upon and no imposition has been practised upon the state of the st

In the case of an infant plaintiff, the court will not require security for costs, or remove a next friend because he is, not a person of substance. Re McConnell, 3 Ch. Ch. 423.

Married Woman.] — Where a plaintiff sues with her brother-in-law, with whom she lives, as next friend, he will not be ordered to give security, even though there is a doubt as to his solvency. Gardiner v. Graham, 5 P. R. 463.

When one of several co-plaintiffs is a married woman, she must sue by next friend, who must be a solvent person capable of answering costs. Rann v. Lawless, 1 Ch. Ch. 333.

Where, upon a bill filed by a married woman by her next friend, it appears that after due inquiries the next friend is not known in the locality of which he is described to be a resident, and not in possession of any property there, an order will be made for security. Van Winkle v. Chaplin, 3 C. L. J.

The next friend of a married woman who is co-plaintiff with her husband, will be required to give security if it appear that he is a person of no known means, and his residence not known—though it appear that the husband has a substantial interest and is not a mere formal party to the suit. VanWinkle v. Chaplin, 2 Ch. Ch. 98.

A feme covert plaintiff has a right to change her next friend without notice to the former next friend, and without giving him security for the costs already incurred. But notice to the opposite party is necessary, because the order for security is only given on condition of the antecedent costs of the opposite party being secured, if such a condition is desired by him. Harvey v. Boomer, 3 Ch. Ch. 11.

Held, qualifying McBean v. Lilley, 2 Ch. Ch. 247, as the decision in that case is stated in the head note: that the affidavit of a next friend, that he is worth $400 over and above all his debts, is only primû facie proof of his sufficiency as a next friend, and that evidence as to his circumstances may be given. Walker v. Walker, 3 Ch. Ch. 273.

Where evidence contradictory to the affidayit was adduced, which in the opinion of the court outweighed this statement, security or a new next friend was ordered. Ib.

The test of the solvency of a next friend is, whether he is worth £100 over and above what will pay his just debts. If the allegation to such effect is uncontradicted, or the fact established by evidence, it is sufficient. Storel v. Coles, 3 Ch. Ch. 421.

When on a motion to change a next friend on the ground of insolvency, the next friend's own cross-examination shewed him worth the necessary amount, and no evidence to the contrary was adduced, the motion was refused with costs. Ib.

Other Cases.]—Where the next friend of a plaintiff has become insolvent and left the jurisdiction, the proper order to be made is, that proceedings be stayed until a solvent next friend be appointed, or until security be given. McGoay v. Maladay, 2 Ch. Ch. 437.

A next friend is liable for costs incurred while acting as such next friend, and not for other or past costs. Poole v. Poole, 2 Ch. Ch. 459.

Where a next friend had been appointed who proved to be an infant, and a new next friend was consequently appointed, an application to make the new next friend liable for the costs incurred before his appointment was refused. Ib.

When a bill is filed by a next friend, if he be not a person of substance, the plaintiff will be required to give security. Leishman v. Eastwood, 2 Ch. Ch. SS.

(e) Residence Out of the Jurisdiction.

Action to Restrain Proceedings at Law.)—Where a suit is brought in this court to restrain proceedings at law, the plaintiff will not be ordered to give security, though resident out of the jurisdiction; and that, too, notwithstanding the bill may ask for relief other than the injunction. Manly v. Williams, 1 Ch. Ch. 48.

Admission of Claim.]—The right to security for costs under Rule 431, O. J. Act, is absolute, where the plaintiff resides out of Ontario, and it is immaterial that the defendant has no defence upon the merits. Quare, as to the proper time for making application for such security. Bank of Nova Scotia v. La Buche, 9 P. II, 503.

A defendant is not necessarily entitled to security for costs because the plaintiff's residence is out of the jurisdiction. Door v. Rand. 10 P. R. 105.

If it be made apparent by evidence, which the court should look at, that the defendant has no defence, security will not be ordered.

The defendant admitted on his examination in this cause, that he owed the debt sued for, but he afterwards alleged a counterclaim for illegal arrest by the plaintiff in the course of his action:—Held, that under these circumstances, the defendant was not entitled to security for costs, and a pracipe order for security was set aside with costs. Ib.

Security for costs will not be ordered when the defendant has admitted the cause of action: and it is not essential that the admission should be in the action, on the pleadings, or in any technical form. Anglo-American Casings Co. v. Roselin, 10 P. R. 391.

The plaintiff swore that there was no de-

The plaintiff swore that there was no defence on the merits, and produced a letter received from the defendant before action, promising to pay the claim sued on:—Held, that this, uncontradicted and unexplained, warranted the conclusion that there was no defence. Bank of Nova Scotia v. La Roche, 9 P. R. 503, not followed. Ib.

Since the passing of Con. Rule 1251, the practice sanctioned by Doer v. Rand. 10 P. R. 155. and Anglo-American Casings Co. v. Rowlin, ib. 391, is no longer applicable, and where a plaintiff, against whom a praceipe order for security for costs had been obtained, moved to set it aside and for judgment under Con. Rule 739 without paying $50 into court, under Con. Rule 1251. his motion was dismissed. Payne v. Newberry, 13 P. R. 354.

In cases where the defendants are possessed of funds belonging to the plaintiff, the discretion of the court will be exercised against hampering the plaintiff by ordering security for costs. The plaintiff, who lived out of the jurisdiction and had lately attained his majority, sued the defendants for an account and payment of funds which he alleged they held as joint trustees for him, he having had no account. The receipt of trust funds by both defendants was proved, but one defendant put the blame of their not being forthcoming on the other, and swore that he had a good defence to the action, though he did not disclose it. The other defendant did not defend!—Held, not a case in which the plaintiff should be required to give security for costs. Duffy v. Donovan, 14 P. R. 159.

Where there was an admission by the defendant of the debt sued for, sworn to and not contradicted, and the writ of summons was specially indorsed so as to enable the plaintiffs to move for judgment under Rule 739, an order for security for costs obtained by the defendant on præcipe, after appearance, the plaintiffs being our of the jurisdiction, was set aside, notwithstanding that the plaintiffs might have paid $50 into court under Rule 1251 and proceeded to move for judgment. Doer v. Rand, 10 P. R. 165, followed. Payne v. Newberry, 13 P. R. 354, not followed. Thibbudeau v. Herbert, 16 P. R. 420.

Application after Judgment,]—Where the judgment of the high court is against a defendant, and he is appealing to the court of appeal, he is not entitled to an order requiring the plaintiff to give security for costs. Where the defendants would have been entitled to such an order at the commencement of the action, but did not take it because they feared that it would be set aside owing to the plaintiff, though resident out of the judication after judgment, upon the ground that the plaintiff had ceased to own property within it, an application after judgment, upon the ground that the plaintiff had ceased to own property within the jurisdiction, was refused by a Judge of the court of appeal. Exchange Bank v. Barnes, 11 P. R. 11, followed. Small v. Henderson, 18 P. R. 31, followed. Small v. Henderson, 18 P. R. 31, R. 11, followed.

Application against Solicitor.]—Where, on petition against a solicitor for an account, it was alleged, and not denied, that he had large sums of the client's money in his hands, the petitioner, though resident in a foreign country, was relieved from giving security. Re Carroll, 2 Ch. Ch. 305.

The rule requiring security will be relaxed by the court in their discretion, when the circumstances require. Ib.

Application against Solicitor.]—Held, that the mere fact that a client, who has applied to have an attorney's bill taxed, is out of the jurisdiction, is not a sufficient ground for an order for security, but upon special circumstances being shewn it may be. In re A. B., 6 P. R. 210.

Application against Solicitor.]—When plaintiffs in an action repudiate the authority of the solicitor to take the proceedings, and move to set them aside, they cannot be compelled by the solicitor to give security for costs on the ground that they reside out of the jurisdiction. Re Percy and Kelly Nickel Co., 2 Ch. D. 531, followed. Where a charge of improper conduct is made against a solicitor, who is an officer of the court, by a person out of the jurisdiction, the court ought not to order security for costs, and thus prevent such a charge being investigated. Sample v. McLaughlin, 17 P. R. 499.

Attachment of Debts.]—In an issue between a judgment creditor and a garnishee as to the liability of the latter to the judgment debtor:—Held, that there was power to order security for costs. Edwards v. Edwards, 12 P. R. 583.

Claim by Defendant against Codefendant.) — Where a defendant proceeds under Rule 215 to seek relief from a codefendant which he would not be entitled to upon the pleadings and proofs between the plaintiff and defendants, he is a "plaintiff" within the meaning of Rule 1198, and, if resident out of the jurisdiction, is liable to an order for security for costs. Walmsley v. Griffith, 11 P. R. 139, considered. Moisons Bank v. Sauger, 19 P. R. 316.

Compliance with Order-One Plaintiff within the Jurisdiction-Order against One of Several Plaintiffs.]-The writ of summons was indorsed with a statement that the plaintiffs resided at the township of Brant, in the county of Bruce, and in the state of Wisconsin, in the United States of America. Upon this an order was issued upon præcipe under Con. Rule 1242 by an officer of the court requiring one of the plaintiffs to give securequiring one of the plaintins to give security for costs and staying proceedings until security should be given. The plaintiffs, desiring to arrest the defendant, were refused an order because of the stay of proceedings, and then applied for and obtained an order allowing them to deposit $400 with an officer of the court, instead of giving a bond for security for costs, and also declaring it to be without prejudice to the right of the plaintiffs to set aside the order staying proceedings, and they paid the $400 to the officer accordingly:— Held, that it appeared from the indorsement on the writ that the plaintiffs resided out of Ontario, and that the issue of an order for security under Con. Rule 1242 was thereby warranted; but that the order issued, being against one plaintiff only, was irregular and might have been set aside; it was not void, however, and was good until set aside; and having been complied with, as it was by the deposit of the money with the officer, the compliance made it good, and it could not afterwards be set aside, notwithstanding the reservation in the order:—Semble, that if it had appeared by the indorsement, as it afterwards did by affidavit, that one of the plain-tiffs in fact resided in Ontario, the order for security would have been void, and would have been set aside notwithstanding the compliance with it. McConnell v. Wakeford, 13

Contempt—Leaving Jurisdiction to Avoid Arrest.]—Where the plaintiff after the commencement of the action left the Province to escape arrest under orders of committal for contempt of court in other actions, he was ordered to give security for costs. Codd v. Delap, 15 P. R. 374.

Co-plaintiff Within the Province.]— Held, following Rann v. Lawless, 1 Ch. Ch. 335, that the fact of a co-plaintiff, resident within the jurisdiction, being on the record would not prevent an order for security for costs being granted. Van Winkle v. Chaplin, 3 C. L. J. 44.

Exchequer Court—Action to Expunge a Trade-mark.] — On an application by the plaintiffs to expunge defendants, resident out of the jurisdiction, applied for and obtained an order for security for costs against the plaintiffs, also resident out of the jurisdiction; plaintiffs thereupon applied for a similar order upon the ground that the matter was within the discretion of the court:—Held, that security should not be ordered against the defendants. Wright, Crossley & Co. v. Royal Baking Powder Co., 6 Ex. C. R. 1435.

False Address — Temporary Residence within Jurisdiction — Incarceration under Criminal Sentence.]—Where the plaintif, who for two years previous to the commencement of the action had been a resident of the Province of Quebec, indorsed a false nddress, within Ontario, upon the writ of summons, for the purpose of misleading, and escaping giving security for costs, and was, at the time an application was made therefor, a prisoner in Ontario under a criminal sentence, he was ordered to give security for costs. Swanzy v. Swanzy, 4 K. & J. 231, followed. Redondo v. Chaytor, 4 Q. B. D. 453, commented on, Fournier v. Hogarth, 15 P. R. 72.

False Address — Mistake—Residence out the Jurisdiction — Temporary Return.]— The plaintiff, who was a sailor on the lakes, at the time of the issue of the writ of summons was residing out of Ontario. The writ was, by a mistake of the plaintiff solicitor, indorsed with a statement that the plaintiff resided in Windsor, Ontario; and upon the defendants moving for security for costs on the ground that the plaintiff had given a false ad-dress, the plaintiff declared that naming Windsor was a mistake, and that the true place of residence was Collingwood, Ontario. Collingwood was not then his actual place of residence. Pending the motion, however, he returned to Ontario, and went to reside tem-porarily at Sarnia:—Held, that the plain-tiff by giving a false address entitled the defendants to move for security for costs, and it lay on the plaintiff to shew that his misstatement was not made mala fide. That being shewn, the plaintiff would be driven to amend, or the defendants would be entitled to But the plaintiff could not amend by substituting Collingwood, for he did not reside there at the date of the writ; and the defendants would have been entitled to the order but for the plaintiff's subsequent return to the jurisdiction. And —Held, following Re-dondo v. Chaytor, 4 Q. B. D. 453, and Ebrard v. Gassier, 28 Ch. D. 232, that where a for-eigner comes within the jurisdiction, pending motion for security for costs and before judgment, although for the temporary purpose of enforcing his claim by action, he cannot be called upon to give security. The motion for security was refused, without costs to either party, and leave was reserved to the defendants to apply again if the plaintiff should go to reside out of the jurisdiction before the termination of the action. Anderson v. Quebec Fire Ins. Co., 15 P. R. 132.

Military Officer.]—A military officer on duty out of Canada and suing as plaintiff, must give security. Tripp v. Frazer, 1 U. C. R. 253.

Misstating Address—Temporary Residence within the Jurisdiction.]—Where a plaintiff resident without the jurisdiction wilfully stated in his bill that he resided within it, security for costs was ordered. Sutherland y. McDonald, 9 P. R. 178.

A subsequent application to rescind the order on the ground that the plannitf had returned within the jurisdiction and intended to remain there at the time of the former application, but had not then shewn the facts fully, was granted, but on appeal this order was reversed, and the order for security directed to stand. Ib.

Stand. Ib.

Semble, that security will not be ordered, even where the plaintiff is a foreigner who has come within the jurisdiction temporarily, and only for the purpose of maintaining the suit. Ib.

"Ordinarily Resident"—Discretion of Judge.]—It is not a ground for refusing to order a plaintiff resident out of the jurisdiction to give security for the defendant's costs, that the defendant himself resides out of the jurisdiction. Rule 1198 provides that security for costs may be ordered, "(b) where the plaintiff is ordinarily resident out of Ontario, though he may be temporarily resident within Ontario:"—Held, that these words refer to a person who, under ordinary conditions or ciris habitually present in some cumstances, country or place out of Ontario; and that a person who has no home, and whose calling causes him to be as much in Ontario as elsewhere, cannot be said to come within this branch of the Rule. The discretion which the court has in making or withholding an order for security for costs should be exercised against making an order which would shut the doors of the court against a plaintiff. v. Marks, Earle v. Marks, 18 P. R. 465. Denier

"Ordinarily Resident."] - Rule 1198 provides that security for costs may be ordered, among other cases, in the following: " (a) Where the plaintiff resides out of Ontario; (b) where the plaintiff is ordinarily resident out of Ontario, though he may be temporarily resident within Ontario." The defendant's affidavit stated that the plaintiff was now residing out of the jurisdiction; and also that he had no certain place of abode within the jurisdiction; that he had hitherto resided out of the jurisdiction; and at the conclusion of the pending suit intended to reside out of the jurisdiction. The plaintiff's affi-dayit stated that he had not for the past year nor had he now any fixed or ordinary place of abode either in or out of the Province of Ontario, his occupation requiring that he should be from time to time in England, the Province of Ontario, and the Province of New Brunswick:-Held, that the actual residence abroad was still what prima facie entitled the defendant to security, and the plaintiff could not answer the application by shewing that he had no fixed residence at all. Denier v. Marks, 18 P. R. 465, overruled. Allcroft v. Morrison, 19 P. R. 59.

Property within Jurisdiction sent to Charge Share with Costs.]-A plaining a substantial amount of property within it, should not be ordered to give security for costs. And where a plaintiff was applying summarily for an administration order, and it appeared that he had an interest worth $273 in the estate in respect of which he applied, he was absolved from giving security for costs, although his residence was out of the jurisdiction, upon his consenting that his whole interest in the estate should be subject to a first charge in respect of any costs which he might be lawfully ordered to pay in the course of the administration proceedings. Re Armstrong, Armstrong v. Armstrong, 18 P. R.

Property within the Jurisdiction.]— The recent Act, 22 Vict. c. 33, has effected a material change in the practice of this court as to granting or refusing security for costs. The fact that the plaintiff has not any fixed place of abode within the Province will not be sufficient to warrant an order for that purpose where it is shewn that he has property within the jurisdiction. White v. White, 1 Ch. Ch. 48.

Property within the Jurisdiction.] A plaintiff who is resident out of the juris-diction will not be ordered to give security for costs, if he is possessed of unincumbered real estate of sufficient value situate within the jurisdiction. Gault v. Spencer, 2 Ch. Ch. 92; 3 C. L. J. 70.

Refusal of Solicitor to Tell Residence.]—Held, that the refusal of the solicitor for the judgment creditor to disclose his client's place of abode was not sufficient evidence of his living out of the jurisdiction to support an order for security for costs. Ed-wards v. Edwards, 12 P. R. 583.

Removal Pendente Lite.]-When during the progress of a suit it occurs that all parties reside out of the jurisdiction, there may be an application for security for costs. Parks v. Brown, 4 L. J. 232.

Removal Pendente Lite.] - Where a plaintiff leaves the jurisdiction permanently while his action is pending, he will be ordered to give security for costs past as well as future. Hately v. Merchants Despatch Transportation Co., 10 P. R. 253.

Removal Pendente Lite. |-The plaintiffs having recovered judgment in the action, the defendant appealed to the court of appeal, and then moved to compel the plaintiffs to give security for costs, on the ground that they resided out of the jurisdiction, and had since the recovery of judgment ceased to carry on business in this Province, and withdrawn their assets therefrom. The motion was re-fused. Exchange Bank v. Barnes, 11 P. R.

Residence at Time of Application. |-Held, that if the plaintiff be actually a resident of the Province at the time of the application, and intend so to remain until trial or cation, and intend so to remain until trial or judgment in the cause, security for costs ought not to be ordered. Hawkins v. Paterson, 3 P. R. 253.

Semble, if a resident in the Province were to declare his intention of leaving for abroad at once, and had sold off his property, and made other preparations for his immediate departure, with the intention of residing abroad, that upon these facts being shewn the party might be called upon to give security, according to the general practice. Ib. ing to the general practice.

Residence at Time of Application.]-The plaintiff, a British subject, having resided in the United States for several years, but never taken any oath of naturalization, or ex-ercised the rights of citizenship, returned to this Province, and some months afterwards filed a bill in this court. A motion for security for costs was refused, although several persons swore that his intention was to leave immediately on the decision of the case, which the plaintiff denied. O'Grady v. Munro, 7

Residence at Time of Application the Residence at Time of Application the Test.]—A defendant is entitled to security for costs from a plaintiff whose permanent residence is foreign, if at the time application is made the plaintiff is actually out of the jurisdiction. Robertson v. Cowan, 10 P. R. 568.

Residence not Mentioned in Writ.] Where a plaintiff who resided out of the juris-diction did not indorse his place of residence on the writ, the costs of an application for securit, were made costs to the defendant in the cause. McCready v. Hennessy, 9 P. R. Residence Unknown.]—Where it appears that the residence of the planitiff is not known, and that there is reason to believe he has left the country, security will be ordered, although it does not appear by the bill that the plaintiff is resident out of the jurisdiction, and it is not shewn positively where he is resident. Somerville v, Kerr, 2 Ch. Ch. 108.

Service of the Crown.]—The mere fact of a plaintiff being in the service of the Crown and absent from the jurisdiction, is not sufficient to exempt him from giving security; it must be shewn that he is absent from his domicile in the service of the Crown. Dickenson v. Dufill, 1 Ch. Ch. 108.

Several Plaintiffs—Only One in Jurisdiction—Joint Action.]—Action by the widow, as dowress, and the children, as heirs-at-law, of a deceased person, to recover possession of land alleged to be the property of the deceased:
—Held, that the action was a joint one, and although the plaintiffs other than the widow resided out of the jurisdiction, they could not be ordered fo give security for costs. D'Hormusgee v. Grey, 10 Q. R. D. 13, followed. Smith v. Silecrithorne, 15 P. R. 197.

Temporary Absence.]—A plaintiff out of the jurisdiction, with no certain place of abode, and having no property in this Province, though stating on affidavit that she was only temporarily absent, and intended to return, was ordered to give security for costs, there being no circumstances from which the court could reasonably infer that the intention to return would certainly be carried out. Grant v, Winchester, 6 P. R. 44.

Temporary Absence.]—Where a bill described the plaintiff as "of the city of Toronto," but afterwards contained the following statement, "by the advice of a physician the plaintiff has sought change of air, and is now temporarily resident at Rochester:"—Held, that it must be concluded that the residence was only temporary, and no order for security should be granted. Wilson v. Wilson, d.P. R. 152.

Temporary Stay in Province.] — So in the case of a plaintiff from England, coming here merely to attend to the suit, and intending to return when it is over. Gill v. Hodgson. 1 P. R. 381.

Temporary Stay ia Province.]—Semble, that security will not be ordered when the plaintiff intends to reside here during the suit. Wider v. Hopkins. 4 P. R. 350.
Where a plaintiff came here shortly before

Where a plaintiff came here shortly before commencing an action, but shewed an intention of residing here permanently, security was refused. Ib.

- 2. Practice and Procedure.
- (a) Affidavits on Application,

Where the plaintiff has left the Province, the affidavit should state that he has become a stationary resident abroad. Micklejohn v. Holmes, Tay. 39.

The affidavit must state with certainty that the plaintiff is not resident within the jurisdiction. Redden v. McNab, 4 O. S. 136.

Semble, that on the authority of Dowling v. Harman, 6 M. & W. 131, an affidavit that deponent is informed and believes that plaintiff resides abroad, is sufficient. Morgan v. Hellems, 1 P. R. 363.

But held not, on the authority of Joynes v. Collinson, 2 D. & L. 449. Noad v. Provincial Insurance Co., 2 P. R. 381.

On making this application it must be shewn at what stage the proceedings are. Torrance v. Gross, 2 P. R. 55. But see Maneilly v. Hays, 1 C. L. Ch. 222.

The state of the cause should be shewn on affidavit; but, to supply a defect in this respect, a Judge may in his discretion look at the records of the court. Hall v. Brigham, 5 P. R. 461.

An order for security can only be obtained on practice when the plaintiff admits on the face of the bill that he is resident abroad, and there is nothing in the bill qualifying such admission. Wilson v. Wilson, 10 C. L. J. 173.

Wilson v. Wilson, 10 C. L. J. 473.

Where a bill described the plaintiff as of the city of Toronto, but stated that by the advice of a physician he had sought change of air, and was then temporarily resident at Rochester, it was held that an order for security could not properly be granted on praceipe. Ib.

A certificate of the state of the cause is only necessary where the application for security is made before answer filed. Grant v. Winchester, 6 P. R. 44.

In an application for security for costs on the ground that the plaintiff had generally lived abroad, the affidavits should state positively the absence from this country and residence abroad. Smith v. Crooks, 4 L. J. 67.

An order for security for costs will not be granted after the cause has been entered for trial, unless a clear and positive case be shewn. Smith v. Crooks, 4 L. J. 67.

An order for security for costs cannot be obtained under s. 71 of the Common Law Procedure Act, R. S. O. 1877 c. 50, upon an affidavit made by defendant's attorney. That section requires the affidavit to be made by the defendant personally. An application made upon the affidavit of the solicitor of defendants, a corporation, was therefore refused. Martin qui tam v. Consolidated Bank, 45 U. C. R. 163.

An affidavit filed by the defendant set out that "the said plaintiff has been for some time past, and is now, residing, as I am informed and believe, out of the Province of Ontarlo, and beyond the jurisdiction of this court, having taken up his residence in New York, one of the United States of America; "—Semble, that a statement of the plaintiff's residence out of the jurisdiction, on information and belief is not sufficient; —Held, that the foreign residence of the plaintiff was here positively sworn to, and the affidavit was sufficient in substance for the court to act upon it in ordering security for costs. Hollingsworth v. Hollingsworth, 10 P. R. 58.

(b) Bond and Surcties.

Attorney.]—Where a plaintiff is required to give security for costs, the court will not allow his attorney (or partner, or both) in the cause to give the security. Myers v. Hutchinson, 4 L. J. 138, 2 P. R. 380.

Attorney.]—Held, that a practising attorney may be a surety in an election petition. Re Hamilton, 10 C. L. J. 170.

Attorney or Solicitor.]-It is irregular for a solicitor to become security for his client, Beckitt v. Wragg, 1 Ch. Ch. 5.

Form of Bond.]—A bond for security for costs must be made to the registrar. Munro v. McLeod, 7 P. R. 53.

One Surety—Affidavits of Execution and Justification.]—It is no objection to the bond that there is no affidavit of execution annexed.

Donnelly v. Jones, 4 Ch. Ch. 48.
Neither is an affidavit of justification necessary until the solvency of the surety is questioned. 1b.

In the case of bonds for carrying a case to the court of appeal, an affidavit of justification is necessary under the order of court of error and appeal, No. 8. 1b.

A bond for security for costs need not be by two sureties unless the defendant, before the bond is prepared, gives notice that he receives two. 1b.

16. quires two.

One Surety — Approval of Bond—Form of Condition.]—Held, that it is for the plainf's convenience to submit the name of the proposed surety to the opposite party before filing the bond, as he may risk the surety not being successfully objected to by the defendant, and it is not necessary that the surety and, and it is not necessary that the surery should be first approved by defendant's solici-tor or the registrar, nor is a plaintiff bound to give more than one surety unless he alone is insufficient. Beaton v. Boomer, 1 C. L. J.

Held, also, that the bond should contain the condition to the effect that upon the surety (and not the plaintiff) paying the costs, the obligation should be void. Ib.

One Surety.]—It is not essential that a bond for security for costs should be by more than one obligor, if otherwise sufficient. Fletcher v. Noble, 9 P. R. 534.

Parties to Bond—Condition of Bond.]— Where, upon an application by one of several defendants, an order is made for security for defendants, an order is made for security focots, it may properly provide that the security is to answer the costs of all the defendants. Construction of Rules 1245 and 1247. Execution by the plaintiffs of a bond for security for costs may be dispensed with in a proper case. Delap v. Charlebois, 15 P. R.

Surety Holding under Unregistered Conveyance.] — Where, on a motion in chambers to disallow a bond given on an appeal, it appeared from the examination of one of the bondsmen that he had lands of suffi-cient value, but that the conveyances to him were unregistered, it was directed that the conveyances should be registered. Adamson v. Adamson, 9 P. R. 96.

See COURT OF APPEAL, II. 1.

(c) Cancellation of Bond and Payment Out of Court.

Cancellation of Bond. |- Where a plaintiff, being out of the jurisdiction, has given security for the defendant's costs of the acsecurity for the derendant's costs of the ac-tion, and has succeeded in the court of first instance and in the court of appeal, he is entitled, notwithstanding that the defendant is appealing to the supreme court of Canada, to have his security delivered out to him. Hamill v. Lilley, 3 Times L. R. 546, 56 L. T. N. S. 620, followed. Marsh v. Webb, 15 P. R. 64.

A judgment by the court of appeal, in favour of a defendant appellant, puts an end to all liability upon the appeal bond, which may after such judgment be delivered up to the appellant, even where the other party has given notice of appeal to the supreme court of Canada. Burgess v. Conway, 11 P. R. 514.

Notice should be given to the opposite party of a motion to take the appeal bond off the

The plaintiff, who lived out of the jurisdic-tion, obtained a judgment at the trial, which was affirmed by the divisional court, except as to one defendant against whom the action was dismissed, without costs:-Held (reversing 11 P. R. 9), pending an appeal to the court of appeal by the other defendants, that the plaintiff was not entitled to have delivered out to him for cancellation a bond for security for costs for cancellation a bond for security for costs of the action after judgment in his favour by the Oueen's bench division before the time for appealing to this court had actually elapsed, and while an appeal was actually pending. Hately v. Merchants' Despatch Co., 12 A. R. 640.

A defendant is not entitled to have delivered out to him for suit a bond for security for his costs of the action filed by the plaintiff, after judgment in the defendant's favour with costs in the high court, while an appeal by the plaintiff to the court of appeal is pending, notwithstanding that there is no stay of exenotwinstanding that there is no stay of execution for the costs awarded to the defendant. Hately v. Merchants' Despatch Co., 12 A. R. 640, applied and followed. Coffey v. Scane, 16 P. R. 307.

Payment Out.] - When plaintiffs, who were residents out of the jurisdiction, had paid a certain sum into court in lieu of security for costs, an application to have this money paid out to them was refused, although a decree for specific performance had been made in their favour, the suit not being finally terminated. Luther v. Ward, 2 Ch. Ch. 175.

Where money has been paid into court for a specific purpose, and that purpose has been answered in favour of the party paying it in, it will be paid out to that party. McLaren v. Caldwell, 9 P. R. 118.

Plaintiffs, who resided in England, obtained a verdict for the price of goods in defendants' possession. The defendants appealed to the court of appeal. Plaintiffs applied for payment out of $300 paid in by them as security for costs on commencing the action: — Held, that as the plaintiffs were shewn to have goods in the country, and in the defendants' possession, the $300 should be paid out. But for this the plaintiffs would not have been entitled to the money, the appeal being a step in the original cause, not a new action. Napier v. Hughes, 9 P. R. 164.

Money paid into court in lieu of giving the usual bond for security for costs will not be paid out to the party paying it in, in whose favour a decree has been made, pending an appeal to the court of appeal. National Ins. Co. v. Egleson, 9_P. R. 202.

Supreme Court Appeal.]—The defendants being entitled by the judgment of the court of appeal to the costs of the action, obtained out of court for suit the bond given by the plaintiff for security for such costs. Before action on the bond, and pending an appeal by the plaintiff from the judgment of the court of appeal to the supreme court of Canada, one of the sureties on the bond obtained leave and paid into court to the credit of this action $400, the amount due on the bond, to abide further order. Upon the application of the defendants the Judge in chambers directed $200 of the $400 to be paid out to their solicitors, upon the solicitors undertaking to refund the amount if the supreme court should vary the disposition of costs made by the court of appeal. Kelly v. Imperial Loan Co., 10 P. R. 439.

Supreme Court Appeal.]—Semble, that payment to the defendant out of the moneys in court of his costs in the high court and court of appeal upon the undertaking of his solicitors to repay in the event of an appeal to the supreme court succeeding, should not be ordered. Agricultural Ins. Co. v. Sargent, 16 P. R. 397.

Supreme Court Appeal. |- The plaintiffs recovered judgment in the high court against the defendants for damages and costs. The defendants appealed to the court of appeal, paying $200 into court as security to the plaintiffs for the costs of such appeal, which was dismissed with costs. The defendants launched a further appeal to the supreme court of Can ada, and gave the security required by s. 46 of the Supreme and Exchequer Courts Act, but no other security:—Held, that proceedings to enforce the plaintiffs' judgment in the high court were not stayed, either by force of s. 48 or otherwise. But the court was not bound to pay out immediately to the plaintiffs the sum of $200 paid in by the defendants, the judgment of the court of appeal being stayed pending the appeal to the supreme court, which might determine that the plaintiffs were not entitled to the costs of the court of appeal; and the money ought not to be paid to the plaintiffs, from whom it could never be recovered, and whose solicitors declined to take it upon the usual undertaking, but should remain in court pending the appeal. Rombough v. Balch, 19 P. R. 123.

(d) Discharging Order.

Property Held in Trust.)—A suit was brought to recover possession of certain lands, of which the plaintiffs claimed to be trus-ees, and to restrain the defendant, an overholding tenant, from committing waste. An order for security for costs had been obtained against the plaintiffs, by reason of their being out of the jurisdiction. The plaintiffs applied to discharge the order on the ground that they had property within the jurisdiction, and the property relied on was the property in question in this suit:—Held, that the plaintiffs not being entitled in their own right to the property, it did not constitute sufficient security for costs. McKenie v. Sinton, 6 P. R. 282. Property Within the Jurisdiction.]—
The fact that defendant's solicitor knew that the plaintiffs had lands in the Province when he took out the order for security, was held a good ground of objection to the order. Glanson v. Finch, 3 Ch. Ch. 296.

An objection that the copy of the order served was not indorsed with the name and place of business of the solicitor serving was overruled, it not being shewn to have been the first proceeding taken by him.

been the first proceeding taken by him. Ib.
On the plaintiff shewing he had lands in the Province worth $4,000, an order for security obtained on præcipe was set aside, and the order being also irregular in form, it was set aside with costs. Ib.

A plaintiff resident abroad will not be released from giving security for costs, unless he shew that he has property to the value of $400 within the jurisdiction of the court and available in execution. Leasehold property may be sufficient. Higgins v. Manning, 6 P. R. 147.

The plaintif had property within the jurisdiction, consisting of a one-sixth interest (nominally worth $2,000) in lands subject to a lease made to the defendants by the plaintiff's ancestor, the validity of which lease was in question in the suit. The lease was for twenty-one years, and gave the defendants an option to purchase; under its terms no rent or taxes were to be paid until the title had been quieted under the Act for Quieting Titles, or a certificate was refused; in the latter event the defendants were to accept the title or give up the term. Proceedings for quieting the title had been instituted, but were still pending. The plaintif's interest in this property was held insufficient to entitle him to the discharge of an order for security. Ib.

Nature of the property within the jurisdiction necessary to discharge an order considered. Wilson v. Wilson, 6 P. R. 152.

Where the plaintiff lived out of the jurisdiction, but had real property in the jurisdiction, incumbered, but of the value of $5.10 over and above all incumbrances and all debts that it was shewn or suggested that he owed, a precipe order for security for costs was set aside. Belair v. Buchanan, 17 P. R. 413, 476.

Return to Jurisdiction.]—Where after an order made for security, plaintiff came within the jurisdiction, made affidavit "that he is now residing in Toronto; that when he left Canada he intended to return, his absence from Canada being merely temporary; and that he now intends to remain in Toronto until after judgment has been obtained in this suit by or against him, "and undertook not to leave the jurisdiction without leave of the court or a Judge, or of defendant, until a reasonable time after defendant might properly enter judgment against him, an order was made discharging the order for security for costs. Watson v. Yorston, 1 C. L. J. 37. Quare, as to relleft in such a case if security Quære, as to relief in such a case if security for costs were actually given, and not merely an order staying proceedings till security given. Ib.

Where a plaintiff, who, when bill filed, was out of the jurisdiction, and had been ordered to give security, afterwards returned, but it appeared that he had no business and no intention of entering into any, no fixed place of abode, no house and no family or ties to bind him to the Province; and the court was of opinion that the return of the plaintiff was merely to get rid of the order for security, the court declined to rescind it. Marsh v. Beard, I Ch. Ch. 390.

Where a plaintiff, who had been ordered to give security, returns within the jurisdiction to reside permanently, the order will be discharged. Harvey v. Smith, 1 Ch. Ch. 392.

A plaintiff who had been for several years and was at the time of the filing of the bill, resident in the United States, described herself in her bill as of the township of Bertie, in the Province of Ontario. Under these circumstances the court refused to discharge an order for security, although the plaintiff had returned to the jurisdiction and stated that it was her intention to reside there for the rest of her life. Waldron v. McWalter, 6 P. R. 15:

Security for Costs of Motion.]— A plantiff may move to set aside a pracipe more requiring him to give security for costs, motivithstanding the stay of proceedings imposed thereby, without giving security for costs: and, where his writ of summons is specially indorsed, he is not compelled to follow the procedure indicated in Rule 1251, which is inapplicable unless he is moving for summary judgment under Rule 739. Thibeaudeau v. Herbert, 16 P. R. 420, distinguished. Walters v. Duggan, 17 P. R. 350.

Subsequent Acquisition of Property.]

—The subsequent acquisition of property is no ground for rescinding an order for security. Reaume v. Leavitt, Reaume v. Trowbridge, 61, 18, 70.

Terms-Form of Order.] - An appeal by the plaintiff from an order requiring him to give security for costs upon the ground that the costs of a former action, brought by plaintiff against defendant for the same cause, were unpaid, was dismissed by a Judge in cham-lers, and a further appeal by a divisional court, which held, 17 P. R. 203, that the plaintiff could not answer the application for security by shewing that the former action was brought without his authority. The costs of the appeals were made payable to the defendant in any event. The plaintiff, upon appli-cation in the former action, then had the judgment for costs against him therein set aside, upon the ground that the action was brought without his authority; and afterwards applied to set aside the order for security for costs;— Held, that the master in chambers, in setting aside the order for security for costs, had discretion to impose terms, and the terms imposed, viz., payment by the plaintif of the costs of obtaining the order for security, of the appeals therefrom, and of the application is of the costs of obtaining the order for security, of the appeals therefrom, and of the application is of the costs of other and present what to the itself, were competent and proper. As to the form of the order, a dismissal of the action, As to the in the event of security not being given within a limited time, was authorized by Con. Rules (1888) 1243 and 1246. Lea v. Lang, 18 P. R. 1.

(e) Dismissing Action.

When security is ordered to be perfected in order to dismiss may be granted exparted a certificate that no bond for security has been filed. McCarrol v. McCarrol, 2 Ch. Ch.

The fact that the plaintiff has lodged an appeal against an order for security for costs is "sufficient cause," within the meaning of Rule 1246, to exempt him from having his action dismissed for failure to comply with the order, pending the appeal. And if a motion to dismiss is made, the better practice is to enlarge it before the appellate tribunal to be dealt with after the main question has been determined. Bennett v. Empire Printing and Publishing Co., 15 V. R. 430.

Where an order for security for costs directs that unless security be given within a limited time the action shall be dismissed, and security is not given within the time limited, the action is to be regarded as dismissed, unless the defendant treats it as still adive. Carter v. Stubs, 7 Q. B. D. 116, followed. Rule 1251 does not give a plaintiff any further time for or relieve him from the obligation of putting in his security for costs; it only enables him to remove the stay effected by the order, for the sole purpose of making a motion for judgment under Rule 739; and if he does not succeed in that motion, he must obey the order by putting in the full security. But where the defendant, after the time for giving security under the order had expired, opposed a motion for judgment under Rule 739 and appealed to a Judge in Chambers, and afterwards to a divisional court from the order made upon such motion, without taking the objection that the action was at an end:—Held, that he had waived the objection; and a bond filed after the time limited was allowed. Hollender v. Floulkex, 16 P. R. 225.

—Heid, that he had waived the objection; and a bond filed after the time limited was allowed. Hollender v. Ffoulkes, 16 P. R. 225. Upon appeal to the divisional court the decision was varied by extending, pursuant to Rule 485, the time for giving security. Hollender v. Ffoulkes, 16 P. R. 315.

On the 5th November, 1885, an order was made requiring the plaintiff to give security for costs within four weeks and in default that the action should be dismissed with costs, unless the court or judge on special application for that purpose should otherwise order. Within the four weeks the plaintiff obtained a summons, with a stay of proceedings, for "further time to perfect security for costs," and on the 10th December, 1885, an order was made extending the time till the 23rd December, 1885, but not providing that the dismissal of the action should be the result of non-compliance with its terms. Security was not furnished within the time so extended, and it was contended that after that the action was dead, and there was no jurisdiction to make an order in it:—Held, that the action never became dismissed under either of these orders, and that a motion to dismiss was regular and necessary. Whistler v. Hancock, 3 Q. B. J. S. King v. Davenport, 4 Q. B. J. 402, distinguished, Bank of Minnesota v. Page, 14 A. R. 347.

Justice of the Peace—Time.]—An order under 53 Vict. c. 23 for security for costs in an action against a justice of the peace should not limit a time within which security is to be given nor provide for dismissal of the action in default: the order should be simply "that the plaintiff do give security for the costs of the defendant to be incurred in the ection." Thompson v. Williamson, 16 P.

An order under Rule 1244 for security for costs in an action for a penalty may properly contain provisions limiting the time for giving security and for dismissal of the action, giving security and for disminsal of the action, without further order, upon default; and such an order, not appealed against, is conclusive between the parties as to all its terms. Thompson v. Williamson, 16 P. R. 308, distinguished. The action was brought against justices of the peace to recover a penalty for non-return of a conviction of the plaintiff, the error of the defendants being merely clerithe error of the defendants being merely clerical, and one not prejudicing the plaintiff.—

Held, not a case in which the indulgence of extending the time for giving security should be granted to the plaintiff. Ashcroft v. Tyson, 17 P. R. 42.
See Lea v. Lang, 18 P. R. 1.

(f) Time for Applying.

Security granted, in an action proceeded with by the plaintiff's attorney, in the name of the plaintiff, for costs, before issue joined, and delay accounted for. O'Bierne v. Gowin, 1 C. L. Ch. 16.

Security refused where defendant had pleaded, and applied after notice of trial, without accounting for his delay. McDade d, O'Connors v. Dafoe, 1 C. L. Ch. 18.

The defendant may, under certain circumstances, demand security, with a stay of proceedings, even after plea. Generally, he must apply as soon as he reasonably can after knowledge of the fact of the plaintiff's resi-dence abroad. Wood v. Bellisle, 1 C. L. Ch.

An application made on the 23rd January, after issue joined, and on an affidavit sworn on the 4th, was refused. Morgan v. Hellems, 1 P. R. 363.

In ejectment, security for costs cannot be obtained before appearance, as in other actions; and the appearance does not put the cause at issue, so as to prevent the application. Crove v. McGuire, 3 L. J. 205.

Held, that the defendant in ejectment not having appeared could not move for security. O'Reilly v. VanEvery, 2 P. R. 184.

In ejectment, commenced 26th February, 1861, appearance entered 18th March following, defendant, on 19th of same month, demanded security for costs, because plaintiff resided in Great Britain, but no proceedings were afterwards taken, either by plaintiff or defendant, till 28th January, 1864, when the plaintiff gave defendant a term's notice of his intention to proceed by serving notice of trial: -Held, that an application by defendant for security after service of the notice of trial was too late. Fogo v. Pypher, 3 P. R. 309.

An appearance was entered on 13th September, 1862, declaration filed on 29th, order for security for costs obtained on 7th October, 1862, on the ground that plaintiff had left Canada, and order rescinded on 11th March. 1863, on the ground of his return. Plaintiff again left Canada in October, 1863. An application was again made in March, 1864, for security :- Held, not too late: there being nothing to shew when defendant first had notice of plaintiff leaving in October, 1863, or that defendant had taken any steps in the cause, between that date and his application, Somers v. Carter, 3 P. R. 328.

A delay in applying for security from the 2nd July, when the interpleader issue was delivered, until the 11th August, was held fatal. Lovell v. Wardroper, 4 P. R. 205.

An application to remove the next friend an infant plaintiff on the ground of inor an intant plaintiff on the ground of in-solvency, or to stay proceedings till security given, must be made promptly after declara-tion served, according to the rule in ordinary cases. Morris v. Leslic, 5 P. R. 141.

Security must be applied for before the time for answering has expired. Smith v. Day, 2 Ch. Ch. 456.

The filing of an answer is a waiver of any claim for security. Ib.

The application may be made after the expiry of the time for answering. Ganson v. Finch, 3 Ch. Ch. 296.

Application for security for costs in this court must be made within the time allowed for filing statement in defence, except under special circumstances. Wood v. The Queen, 13 C. L. J. 16.

A defendant does not waive his right to security for costs by filing his answer, when the grounds entitling him to such an order are unknown to him at the time. Pendry v. O'Neil, 7 P. R. 52.

After an order for security for costs had been made, the cause came on to be heard, need made, the cause came on to be heard, and was postponed on terms which were arranged at the time. Subsequently an application for further security was made:—Held, that such an order could not be made at this stage, as the application should have been made at the hearing. Simon v. Banque Nationals, 70, B 1999. tionale, 7 P. R. 422.

A motion for security for costs may be made at any time before issue is joined. Cas-well v. Murray, 9 P. R. 192.

In a penal action brought by a common in-In a penal action brought by a common in-former, an order for security for costs, under s. 71 of the C. L. P. Act, was held to have been properly made after the statement of de-fence had been delivered, and after the parties had been examined, as authorized by Rule 429, O. J. Act, but, held, that the order should direct that security should be given "for the costs to be incurred in such suit or action, following the words of s. 71. Budworth v. Bell. 10 P. R. 544.

(g) Waiver of Right.

Delay With Knowledge.]-The defendant was aware of the insolvency of the plaintiff before the action was commenced, but did till before the action was commenced, but did not apply for security for costs until after issue was joined, alleging that he was not be-fore aware that the plaintiff had not obtained his discharge.—Held, that the defendant had waived his right to security. Robertson v. McMaster, S P. R. 14.

New Plaintiff.]-Where a defendant had by answering waived his right to security, and the plaintiff assigned his interest in the mortgage, the subject of the suit, to a party resident out of the jurisdiction, it was held that the defendant was entitled to security against the new plaintiff. Thompson v. Callagan, 3 Ch. Ch. 15.

Pleading in Abatement.]—A defendant, having applied for security for costs, does not waite his application by pleading in abatement before the rule is returnable. Hastings v, Champion, 6 O. S. 29.

Taking Steps in Action.]—A defendant, after plea, obtained an order to stay proceedings until security for costs was given to him, and the plaintiff delivered him a bond for such security, and at the same time gave notice of trial, and defendant signed an agreement to admit documents at the trial, but afterwards returned the bond, and gave notice that he would move to set aside plaintiffs proceedings if he went to trial. The plaintiff, however, tried his cause:—Held, that defendant had waived any irregularity or insufficiency in the bond. Doe d. Leonard v. Myers, 2 U. C. R. 3882.

Taking Steps in Action.]—A petition by the defendant to reduce the amount of almony allowed in the suit, came on to be board on the 5th of October, when counsel for the plaintiff appeared and procured an enlargement for two weeks to answer the defendant's affidavits, and on the same day demanded and received copies of them. On the 19th October, counsel appeared and obtained a further enlargement for two weeks, but before the time expired applied for an order for security for costs, on the grounds stated in the report:—Held, without expressing an opinion on the merits, that the plaintiff had waived her right, if any, to such security. Knowlong, 8 P. R. 400.

Taking Steps in Action.]—The defendant demanded copies of affidavits to be used on an injunction motion, and subsequently obtained an enlargement of the motion:—Held, not a waiver of his right to security for costs, because the facts on which to base such motion for security were unknown to him at the time of the demand and enlargement. Hathway v. Doig, 9 P. R. 91.

Time to Answer.]—Security will not be ordered to be given where a defendant has obtained further time to answer. Arthur v. Brown, 3 Ch. Ch. 396.

(h) Miscellaneous Cases.

Action on Bond.]—On an application for liberty to sue upon the bond given to secure the costs of an appeal against a decree of this court:—Held, that the party moving must shew a demand from, and refusal of the costs by, the sureties mamed in the bond. Stokes v. Crysler, 1 Ch. Ch. 14.

Action on Bond.]—On an application by defendant for leave to sue on the bond given in this case for security for costs, the plaintiff being resident out of the jurisdiction:—Held, that the decree must be produced, to shew that the defendants were ordered to receive their costs. Roaf v. Topping, 1 Ch. Ch. 14.

Admissions of Surety in Other Proceedings—Refiling Bond.]—A bond was filed by the defendant for the purposes of an appeal to the court of appeal. Leave to appeal was, however, necessary, and had not been obtained before filing the bond which was, therefore, on the 4th April, 1891, disallowed, Leave to appeal was afterwards obtained, and the same bond was, on the 18th September, 1891, refiled without the consent of the sureties, and was again disallowed:—Held, rightly so; for the sureties might object that the bond had been improperly used by the defendant; and the respondent was entitled to a security free from any objections of that nature. The plaintiff objected to the bond on the ground of the insufficiency of one of the sureties, and in support of that objection read the sworn statements of such surety in another action:—Held, that such statements were admissible against the defendant, who was putting forward the surety as a person of substance. Jones v. Macdonald, 14 P. R. 535.

Affidavits in Opposition.]—A party opposing the allowance of a surety's bond for security for the costs of an appeal, may read affidavits in opposition to the surety's affidavit of justification. Campbell v. Royal Canadian Bank, 9 C. L. J. 169.

Appearance.]—Defendant's attorney entering common bail, is a good appearance to sustain a motion for security. Grace v. Meighau, Dra. 187.

Effect of Order.]—The order for security for costs under Rule 431, O. J. Act, is a stay of proceedings, and a Judge has no power to set it aside when once properly issued and sign final judgment under Rule 80, O. J. Act, Bank of Nova Scotia v. LaRoche, 9 P. R. 503.

Held, that a pracipe order for security for costs is a stay of proceedings while it exists, and a motion for judgment made simultaneously with the motion to set aside the praccipe order for security for costs was refused. Doer v. Rand, 10 P. R. 162.

Since the passing of Con. Rule 1251, the practice sanctioned by Doer v. Rand, 10 P. R. 165, and Anglo-American Casings Co. v. Rowlin, ib. 391, is no longer applicable, and where a plaintiff, against whom a pracipe order for security for costs had been obtained, moved to set it aside and for judgment under Con. Rule 739 without paying $50 into court, under Con. Rule 1251 his motion was dismissed. Payne v. Neuberry, 13 P. R. 354.

Where there was an admission by the defendant of the debt sued for, sworn to and not contradicted, and the writ of summons was specially indorsed so as to enable the plaintiffs to move for judgment under Rule 739, an order for security for costs obtained by the defendant on præcipe, after appearance, the plaintiffs being out of the jurisdiction, was set aside, notwithstanding that the plaintiffs might have paid $50 into court under Rule 1251 and proceeded to move for judgment. Doer v, Rand, 10 P. R. 1354, not followed. Thibaudeau v. Herbert, 16 P. R. 420.

An order for security for costs made pursuant to Rule 1199, and issued according to Form 95, has the effect of staying all further proceedings until security is given; and while such order stands, it is not competent for the plaintiff to proceed with a pending motion for an injunction against the defendant who has obtained the stay, but such motion should be enlarged till the security is perfected. Weekes v. Underfeed Stoker Co. of America, 19 P. R. 299.

Examination of Surety — Affidavit of Justification—Partnership.]—A surety on a bond, who is a member of a mercantile partnership, but justifies on his own individual property, not on his share in the partnership, is not compellable, upon cross-examination on his affidavit of justification, to disclose the liabilities of the partnership. Douglas v. Huckey, 14 P. R. 504.

Form of Order.]—The order for security should name the sum for which the bond for security is to be given. Ganson v. Finch, 5 Ch. Ch. 296.

Increasing Security.]—The usual pracipe order for security for costs had been taken out by the defendant and duly complied with by the plaintiff. Subsequently the cause was partially heard, but was adjourned for three months owing to the Judge being required to open another sittings of the court. The defendant thereupon, seeing that the costs far exceeded the security given, applied for an order for further security. It was not shewn that the defendants could not have foreseen that the $400 would not cover the costs, and the application was refused. Bell v. Landon, 9 P. R. 100. See S. C., pp. 161, 162.

Judicial Notice of Territorial Divisions.]—Held, that by the Provincial statute, 16 Vict. c. 152. the whole Province having been set off into territorial divisions, the court is bound to take notice of such subdivisions of the country as that Act makes, and that therefore security for costs should be given, where the plaintiff is stated in the bill to be resident in Rigaud, country of Yaudreuil. McDonald v. Dicaire, 1 Ch. Ch. 34.

Limiting Time.] — On an application to limit the time for purting in security for costs, a plaintiff was allowed the same length of time as she would have had for answering the bill, if she had been a defendant, such time to date from the application to limit the time. Grant v. Winchester, 6 P. R. 56; S. C., 9 C. L. J. 183.

Money Paid in With Defence.]—The statement of defence set up that the assault complained of was in self-defence, and, as an alternative defence, that, while the defendant did not admit his liability for damages, he brought into court $150, and said that the same was sufficient, &c.:—Held, that the money paid into court under this defence could not be retained there to answer the defendant's costs, if he succeeded, unless a proper case was made for ordering security for costs. Ropers v. Loos. 11 P. R. 118.

Noting Bill After Security.]—Where a defendant obtains an order for security it is not necessary to file affidavits shewing that the order has been complied with before the bill is noted pro confesso. Bolster v. Cochrone, 2 Ch. Ch. 327.

Payment into Court.1—The defendant having obtained on præcipe an order for security for costs, a local Judge allowed the plaintiff to pay $200 into court in lieu of giving a bond for $400, and afterwards ordered a further payment of $50, but refused to increase the latter sum. An appeal from the order of the local Judge was dismissed, as $250 appeared to be sufficient: — Quere, whether there is any power to fix the amount at less than $400, where a praceipe order under Rule 431, O. J. Act, has been taken out. North v. Fisher, 10 P. R. 582.

An order amending a præcipe order for security for costs, issued under Rule 431, 0, J. Act, by reducing the security to $200, cash paid into court, was reversed, where no reason was shewn for making the reduction:—Held, that Rule 429, O. J. Act, does not authorize the reduction of the sum named in Rule 431, O. J. Act. Riddell v. McKay, 11 P. R. 459.

Praccipe Order.]—An order for security for costs can only be obtained upon pracipe when the plaintiff admits on the face of the bill that he is resident abroad, and there is nothing in the bill qualifying such admission. Wilson, v. Wilson, G.P. R. 152.

Practipe Order—Increased Security— Election—Delay,1—Increased security for costs refused where defendant had taken out the ordinary pracipe order, and could have foreseen the necessity of a commission to England, that being the ground of the application. Trecelyan v. Meyers, 15 C. L. T. Occ. N, 135.

See, also, D'Ivry v. World Newspaper Co., 17 C. L. T. Occ. N. 82.

Several Defendants.)—Where defendants took separate orders for security, and the plaintiff obtained an ex parte order giving him liberty to pay $400 into court, instead of filing security by bond, the money so paid in was held to be security for all defendants, though the order recited one only of the orders for security. Bolster v. Cochrane, 2 Ch. Ch. 327.

Time to Plead.]—Held, that where a summons for security for costs, with a stay of proceedings, was obtained, followed by an order, also containing a stay of proceedings, the defendant has the same number of days after security given in which to plead that he had at the time the proceedings were stayed by the summons. Ryley v. Parmenter, 2 C. L. J. 268.

See Court of Appeal, II. 1.

VIII. TAXATION OF COSTS.

1. In General.

Arbitrator's Fees.] — Arbitrator's fees may be referred to the master for taxation. Scott v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 10 L. J. 72.

Award Giving Costs.]—Where the arbitrators having authority so to do awarded costs, and their award had not been moved against, it was the duty of the taxing officer to tax costs. Re Smith and City of Toronto, 13 P. R. 479.

Certificate—Filing.] — Upon the issuing of a certificate of taxation a taxing officer is functus officio, and it is only when the court requires information that he should further certify. Langtry v. Dumoulin, 10 P. R. 444.

An appeal from a certificate of taxation will not lie until the certificate has been Under Rules 437 and 448, O. J. Act, a taxing officer may issue a certificate of his ruling on any points in dispute pending the taxation. and upon it an appeal may be had, but his right to issue such certificate ceases when he has issued his final certificate. Ib.

Costs of Taxation.]—Semble, that if defendant does not rule the plaintiff, or attend taxation, he will only be allowed a revision on payment of costs of it and of revision. Halfpenny v. Kelly, 1 C. L. Ch. 174.

Costs of Taxation. |-Where defendant asks the plaintiff for the amount of costs in order to settle, and the plaintiff merely gives the amount, and refuses a bill in detail, de-fendant will not be allowed the costs of an application for taxation :- Semble, it might be otherwise if the defendant paid the amount of costs into court. But the plaintiff may will not be allowed costs for obtaining such order. Sutherland v. Rutheste, 1 C. L. Ch.

Costs of Taxation.] — The defendant paid the plaintiffs the amount of their claim and costs, as between party and party, the day before commission day. He afterwards taxed the costs, when more than one-sixth was struck off:—Held, that he was not entitled to the costs of taxation under C. S. U. C. c. 35, s. 31. Bank of Montreal v. Hillard, 7 P. R. 17.

Delivery of Bill. |-The defendant is not entitled to the delivery of any bill he is not entitled to have taxed; and where a bill has been taxed it will not again be referred, even with other or subsequent costs, except on proof of special circumstances. Bell v. Wright, 2 Ch. Ch. 96.

An application to tax costs should be on petition and not by motion. Ib.

Discontinuance.] - Where the plaintiff serves a notice of discontinuance under Rule 641, the defendant is entitled to a reasonable 64), the detendant is entitled to a reasonable time within which to apply for an appoint-ment to tax his costs, and until after the lapse of that time an appointment will not be granted to the plaintiff, even where he is entitled upon the final taxation to tax interlocutory costs which may exceed the defendand on yourse which may exceed the detend-ant's general costs. Under Rule 641 it is not necessary for the plaintiff to ascertain the amount of the defendant's costs and pay then to make the notice of discontinuance effectual. Barry v. Hartley, 15 P. R. 376.

Evidence on Taxation.] - The taxing

Evidence on Taxation.] — The taxing officers have the power to call for evidence on taxations pending before them. Williamson v. Town of Appiner, 12 P. R. 129.

Where the plaintiff was out of the jurisdiction, and a taxing officer had refused to proceed with the taxation of her costs of the action against the defendant until she was action against the detendant until sine was produced before him for examination, touching her retainer of the solicitor in whose name the proceedings in the action had been conducted, it was directed that the officer should first examine other witnesses, and then if unable to decide the question of retainer. should report to a Judge in chambers. Ib.

False Affidavit of Increase.] - Upon the taxation of the plaintiff's costs of the action, he made the usual affidavit of increase, and was thereupon allowed for disbursements of sums of money as witness and counsel fees. The taxation was closed, and the certificate issued without objection. The defendant afterwards discovered that the fees had not been paid as stated in the affidavit, and made a motion to set aside the certificate and have the items in question disallowed:—Held, that neither the master in chambers nor a Judge in chambers had jurisdiction to entertain the motion. Upon a motion to a Judge in court: —Held, that the items should be disallowed. Hornick v. Romney, 11 C. L. T. Occ. N. 329, followed. Harding v. Knust, 15 P. R. 80.

Fixing Costs-Bill, |-When the registrar is directed to fix the amount of interlocutory costs and to aid him in doing so a bill of costs is prepared and taxed, the bill of costs should be filed. Saunders v. Furnivall, 2 Ch.

Half-hour's Grace. | - One half-hour's grace is always allowed for both parties to appear under an appointment to tax. Landon v. Stubbs, 3 L. J. 70.

Misnomer of Witness-Payment before Taxation.]—A misnomer of a witness, David instead of Daniel, would be immaterial. Ham

N. Lasher, 24 U. C. R. 357.

As to the sums paid to and expended by witnesses, defendant being bound to a strict compliance with the 165th rule of T. T. 20 Vict., and the master having authority to make all such inquiries as he might deem necessary to satisfy himself, the court refused to give any directions as to such inquiries. Ib.

All witnesses should be paid before tax-ation, and only actual disbursements proved are taxable, not mere engagements to pay. Ib.

Notice of Taxation.] - The judgment having been entered without notice of taxation, the court set it aside as irregular, in order to give defendant the advantage of a certificate under 43 Eliz. c. 6, which had been obtained after judgment, and therefore too late. Davis v. Barnet, 10 U. C. R. 501.

Want of notice of taxation is not in all cases a sufficient reason for setting aside judgment. Riach v. Hall, Patterson v. Hall, judgment. Riac 11 U. C. R. 356.

Semble, that it is no ground. Felton v. Conley 1 P. R. 319.

Notice of Taxation—Lapse of Appointment—Vacation.]—The plaintiff's costs were being taxed by one of the taxing officers at Toronto, when he applied to stop the taxation in order that he might have the order for taxation varied. The taxation was stopped, the officer gave up to the plaintiff the bill of costs which he had brought in for taxation and nothing further was done:—Held, that the effect of this was that the appointment to tax and the taxation laused and no ment to tax and the taxation lapsed, and no further proceedings could have been had without a fresh appointment; and, therefore, the taxing officer was not thereafter seized of the taxation, and the local registrar in whose office the action had been begun and was pending could properly issue his appointment, and tax the plaintiff's costs. Cousineau v. City of tax the plaintiff's costs. Cousineau London Fire Ins. Co., 13 P. R. 36.

Held, that the taxation was properly had during the long vacation. Ib.

The defendants objected that they had not a reasonable notice of the taxation by the local registrar, but did not ask for an enlargement of it, relying instead on objections they took to its proceeding at all, and the tax-ation proceeded in their absence:—Held, that having taken the risk they must also take the result. 1b.

Notice of Taxation-Retaxation. |-The defendant obtained an order dismissing the action with costs for non-prosecution, upon notice to the plaintiff, who did not appear upon the motion. The defendant did not serve the plaintiff with a copy of the order, and went on and taxed his costs, without notice to the plaintiff, and issued execution for the amount taxed:—Held, no ground for setting aside the execution that the order had not been served before the taxation. Hopton v. Robertson, 23 Q. B. D. 126n, distinguished. Held, also, that the absence of a notice of taxation was not an irregularity entitling the plaintiff to set aside the execution, but only to a retaxation of the costs. Lloyd v. Kent, 5 Dowl, 125, followed. Cranston v. Blair, 15 P. R. 167,

Order Giving Costs. |- Evidence cannot be received by a taxing officer to make costs payable otherwise than they appear to be by the order awarding them when explained by the ordinary rules of construction. Keam v. Yeagley, 6 P. R. 60.

Order Giving Costs.]-The defendant order Giving Costs.—The defendant brought into court, with his defence, a sum which he pleaded was sufficient to answer the plaintiff's claim, and the Judge at the trial finding that it was sufficient, directed judgment to be entered for the defendant, with costs:—Held, that the Judge at the trial land a discretion to deal with the questrial had a discretion to deal with the ques-tion of costs, and having exercised it, the taxing officer had no alternative but to tax to the defendant his full costs incurred, as well before as after the payment into court. Small v. Lyon, 10 P. R. 223.

Overcharge of Fees. |- A Judge in chambers may make an order on a deputy clerk of the Crown to refund costs improperly received. McIntosh v. Pollock, 2 C. L. Ch. 209.

Party not Appearing.]-Where a party does not appear on notice of taxation, he cannot, perhaps, object to the amount of items taxable in the discretion of the master, but he is not precluded as to items in toto, upon the allowance of which the master has no discretion. Conger v. McKechnie, 1 C. L. Ch.

Persons Entitled to Attend.] - The taxing officer has a discretion as to the attendance of parties claiming a right to attend on taxation, and his discretion will not be lightly interfered with. Clarke v. Union Fire Ins. Co., Caston's Case, 10 P. R. 339.

Persons Entitled to Attend.]-G. Persons Entitled to Attend.]—G., a judgment creditor of W. A. C., garnished a fund recovered by J. W. C., suing as the assignee of W. A. C. G. disputed the validity of the assignment from W. A. C. to J. W. C., and an issue was directed to be tried between G. and J. W. C., as to the portion of the fund which would remain after satisfying the claim of the solicitor of J. W. C., who had a lien upon the fund for his costs incurred in the recovery of it. Upon appeal from the taxation of these costs, before the trial of the issue:—Held, that G. had the right to be represented upon the taxation and appeal, as in one event he had an interest in the reduction of the solicitor's bill, and there could not be two taxations, one as against J. W. C. and the other as against G. if he succeeded in the issue. Gall v. Collins, 12 P. R. 413.

Questioning Affidavit of Disbursements.]—The master may examine into the truth of an affidavit of disbursements for witnesses' expenses, &c., or counsel's receipt for fees. Doe d. Boulton v. Switzer, 1 C. L. Ch. 83.

Taxation to Complete Judgment. There is no need for local officers, when taxing costs for the purpose of completing a ing costs for the purpose of completing a judgment and issuing execution thereon (which they as local officers may also do), to preface the issuing of an execution by a formal certificate to themselves of what they have done upon the taxation. They signify clearly and sufficiently the completion of the taxation, and the full discharge of their functions as taxing officers, when they add up results, ascertain the correct amount payable. note the bill of costs as taxed at such a sum, with the date, and verify the whole with their signature, which is a sufficient certificate or allocatur to shew that the taxation is at an end. They have no power to alter what they have allowed or disallowed after this, except as to clerical errors, and they are then functi officiis. Cuerrier v. White, 12 P. R. 571.

officiis. Cuerrier v. White, 12 P. R. 571.
Any objection to the taxation must be carried in in writing, before the signature of the officer is affixed. Ib.
Remarks upon the former practice at law and equity as to allocaturs and certificates of taxation. Ib.

Taxing Officer's Powers.]-Where the master is directed by a decree to tax the costs of the suit, he has no jurisdiction to decline taxing them, even if he find that the amount due does not exceed $200, and that the suit might have been brought in the county court. McLeod v. Millar, 12 Gr. 194.

Vouchers.]-Taxing officers should not allow any items for which there are not proper vouchers, and these vouchers, (except briefs, &c.), should be filed. Wilson v. Moulds, 4 P. R. 101. (except

On revision of a taxation by deputy clerks of the Crown, the master is not to allow any items which are not verified by vouchers which have been filed on the original taxation.

2. Appeal from Taxation.

Appeal Pending Taxation.]-The practice upon appeals from pending taxations of tice upon appeals from pending taxations of costs to the master in ordinary, under Con, Rule S54, should be simple and inexpensive; there is no necessity for a formal order, or a counsel fee, upon such an appeal. Re Nelson, 13 P. R. 39.

It is not desirable that any taxation should ne more than once by way of appeal before a Judge; and where there was an appeal pending the taxation to the master in ordinary, and an appeal from his order to a Judge in chambers, the latter was ordered to stand over till after the close of the taxation. Ib.

Appeal Pending Taxation.]—An appeal by the defendant in an action for alimony from the certificate of a taxing officer, upon maxion of the plaintiff's costs of the action and reference between solicitor and client, as directed by the Judgment. Pending the maxion there was an appeal by the plaintiff to the master in chambers under Rule S54, upon which the master made an order allowing the appeal. The taxing officer in his certificate simply followed the order of the master, and the present appeal was in respect only of the items in question before the master. The order of the master was not appealed from, and the time for appealing from it had elapsed:—Held, that the appeal under Rule S54 should be looked upon as an intermediate thing and directory in character, and that the defendant was not precluded from appealing from the certificate of the taxing officer because he did not appeal from the order of the master. Re Nelson, 13 P. R. 30, followed. Re Monteith, 11 P. R. 3di, distinguished. Heastlp v. Heastlp, 14 P. R. 21, 105.

Appeal to Divisional Court.]—An appeal lies to a divisional court from an order of a Judge in chambers upon appeal from a certificate of taxation of costs. The discretion of a taxing officer as to the amount of counsel fees will not be interfered with upon appeal. Talbot v. Poole, 15 P. R. 274.

Costs of Appeal—Objections.]—Upon an appeal to a Judge in chambers from the taxation of costs by a local taxing officer, where the bill was referred to one of the taxing officers at Toronto as upon a revision:—Held, that there should be no costs of the appeal and revision, unless substantially entire success was with one party or the other. Platt v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 12 P. R. 273.

An appeal should not be allowed as to any

An appeal should not be allowed as to any item not included in the objections put in to the taxation, Ib.

Court of Appeal Costs.]—Quære, as to whether an appeal from taxation of the costs of an action in the court of appeal should not have been to a Judge of the court of appeal, instead of to one of the chancery division. Petric v. Guelph Lumber Co., 10 P. R. 600.

Divisional Court Jurisdiction.] — An appeal from the taxation of costs where the amount in question is less than $40, should not be brought before a divisional court. Re McRae and Ontario and Quebec R. W. Co., 12 P. R. 32.

Extending Time — Objections.] — Time for appealing from taxation extended, as a matter of discretion, where, by the mistake of the solicitor, the appeal was at first brought on in due time in the wrong forum, and after that, but too late, in the proper forum. Where the principle on which the taxing officer acts is objected to, that is to say, his mode or method of proceeding in taxing the bill, it is not necessary for the party proposing to appeal to carry in written objections before the officer, as provided for by Rule 1230, to enable him to review his taxation, under Rule 1231. Clark v. Virgo, 17 P. R. 260.

Forum—Court of Appeal—Costs.] — The appeal from the taxing officer's taxation of costs in the court of appeal is to a Judge of the high court, not of the court of appeal.

Petrie v. Guelph Lumber Co., 10 P. R. 600, applied and followed. Holmes v. Bready, 18 P. R. 79.

Forum.]—An appeal from a master's certificate of costs should be to the court, not to a Judge in chambers. Grahame v. Anderson, 2 Ch. Ch. 303.

Informal Certificate—Notice,]—Where no formal certificate of the result of a taxation by a local registrar of the party and party costs was filed, but the bill itself, with a memorandum at the end signed by the registrar shewing the result, was filed in the local office and forwarded to Toronto for the purposes of an appeal, and it was admitted that execution had issued upon such memorandum:—Held, that the appeal should not be barred because no more formal certificate was filed. Two clear days' notice of such an appeal is sufficient. Exchange Bank v. Newell, 19 C. L. J. 253, distinguished. McCallum v. McCallum, 11 P. R. 179.

Informal Cortificate.] — An informal certificate of taxation was written at the end of a bill of costs, shewing that it was taxed at so much, initialled by the taxing officer, and "filed" in his office: — Held, that this was not a sufficient filing of a certificate of taxation for the purposes of appeal, to satisfy the rule laid down in Langry v. Dumoulin, 10 P. R. 444. McCallum v. McCallum, 11 P. R. 179, distinguished. Gall v. Collins, 12 P. R. 413.

Mortgagor and Mortgagee.]—No appeal lies from the taxation of a mortgage's costs of proceedings under the power of sale in a mortgage, had under R. S. O. 1897 c. 121, s. 30. Re Vanluren and Walker, 19 P. R. 216.

Objections.]—Rule 447 applies to a taxation of costs conducted by a local taxing officer under the powers given him by 48 Vict. c. 13, s. 22 (O.), and an appeal from such taxation does not lie unless objections are carried in before the officer, as required by that rule. Quay v. Quay, II. P. R. 258, followed. Snowden v. Huntington, I2 P. R. 248.

Objections.]—A party should not be deprived of his appeal from the taxation by reason of the officer having issued his certificate before the party has carried in his objections, as required by Rule 1230, where he has not delayed, and has acted in good faith, relying on the officer not issuing his certificate until after the taxation of interlocutory costs. Cuerrier v. White. 12 P. R. 571, distinguished. Cousineau v. Park, 15 P. R. 37.

Quantum and Quoties.]—Upon appeals from taxation of costs the court will not interfere with the discretion of the taxing officer as to the quantum or quoties of fees; and this rule covers any question of distribution or allotment of charges among different cases or branches of a case. Connec v. North American Railway Contracting Co., 13 P. R. 433.

Question of Principle.]—An appeal from taxation of costs was entertained in chambers where the amount involved was only $5.32, for the reason that a question of principle was involved. Monk v. Benjamin, 13 P. R. 256.

Referring Bill to Toronto Officer.]—
It is a convenient practice, when any case is made on appeal from taxation as to several items, or on the ground of general exorbitancy, to refer the whole bill to one of the taxing officers at Toronto, as upon a revision. Quay v. Quay. 11 P. R. 258.

Time for Appeal.] — Where costs have been taxed and the amount entered in an order, an appeal from the taxation must be disposed of before the issue of the order, otherwise it is too late. Nt. Michael's College v. Merrick, 15 C. L. J. 111.

Time for Appeal.]—Appeals from taxation by local officers must be brought on within eight days from the date of the taxing officer's certificate. Stark v. Fisher, 11 P. R. 235.

Appeals from the taxation of costs by local registrars are subject to the eight days' limit prescribed as to appeals from orders of masters and local judges, as was held in Stark v. Fisher, 11 P. R. 235, but the time for appealing may be enlarged by the master in chambers or a Judge. Quay v. Quay, 11 P. R. 258.

Appeals from taxation should be brought on within a reasonable time, and within eight days, the time limited for appeals under Rule 427, O. J. Act, is a reasonable time. Stark v. Fisher, II P. R. 253, and Quay v. Quay, 11 P. R. 258, approved. Ireland v. Pitcher, II P. R. 403.

The time for appealing from a taxation of costs begins to run from the date of the certificate of taxation, not from the date of each ruling in the course of taxation. Re O'Dono-koc, 12 P. R. 612.

Unnecessary Appeal.] — As there was no need to appeal in this case, and the application might have been made in chambers, no costs of it were given. Fouchier v. St. Louis, 13 P. R. 318.

3. Revision of Taxation.

If plaintiffs on verdict are allowed only district court costs, and defendant neglect to take out a rule to be present at the taxation, the court will not direct a revision that defendant's costs may be deducted. McCall v. Cameron, I U. C. R. 410.

A Judge in chambers can order a revision of taxation. Doe d. Boulton v. Switzer, 1 C. L. Ch. 83.

A revision was granted, as defendant's attorney was not present at the taxation, and some of the items were questionable. Halfpenny v. Kelly, 1 C. L. Ch. 174.

Defendant's costs not having been taxed with sufficient liberality, as between attorney and client, a revision was ordered on that ground. Cameron v. Campbell, 1 P. R. 170.

A revision of taxation was ordered on contradictory affidavits as to the payments sworn to in the affidavit of disbursements. Smith v. McKap, 1 P. R. 178.

Where, on the 27th June, the master, to whom certain bills had been referred, certified that there was £30 10s, due by the attorneys to their clients, which sum the clients on 7th July received from the attorneys under and pursuant to the allocatur, a summons obtained on 26th August for a revision, upon the ground that certain retainers had been improperly allowed, was discharged. In re Smith & Henderson, 9 L. J. 205.

Quere, whether under C. L. P. Act. 1856, s. 12, a Judge's order is not necessary to have taxation revised by the principal clerk. Cochrane v. Scott, Cochrane v. Ross, 3 P. R. 32.

Judgment was entered in an outer county, and full costs taxed. On the 29th July, 1869, the taxation was revised in Toronto, under C. L. P. Act, s. 331, and 22 15s, 7d, struck off. On the 2nd August £2 15s, 7d, struck off. On the 2nd August the Judge who tried the cause gave a certificate or memorandum, stating, among other things, that he declined to certify that it was a proper case to be withedrawn from the window and the control of the control of the control of the paintiff, on the 3rd August, 1860, reduced the costs to division court costs and gave a certificate that he had done so, which was served on the plaintiffs attorney. In October, 1862, defendant sued the plaintiff for enforcing the execution for too much, which was the first notice plaintiff had of the reduction, and some time after that the master made an entry on the roll of this last revision, and the reduction therefore, 2c, ...—Held, that the proceeding on the 3rd August, which was not shewn to have been a continuation or adjournment of the revision of the 20th July, and the subsequent entry on the roll was wholly unauthorized, and must be set aside. Spices v. Carrique, 23 U. C. R. 585.

Where the taxation is not objected to before the master, the court is slow to interfere, but—Held, that the circumstances shewn in this case sufficiently explained the omission, Stecert v. Jarvis, 27 U. C. R. 467; 2 C. L. J. 330.

The bill of costs in this cause having been taxed by the local master, the plaintiff paid the amount taxed without protest:—Held, that he still was entitled to a revision before the master at Toronto. Korman v. Tookey, 6 P. R. 112; Elliott v. Northern Assurance Co., 10 C. L. J. 18.

An order to retax a bill of costs, on the ground that, through inadvertence, no person attended on behalf of the plaintiff, was refused, no improper items being pointed out in the bill as taxed. Eastman v. Eastman, 4 C. L. J. 322.

The taxing officer on revision of bills of costs taxed by a local master, has power under general orders 311 and 312, not only to strike out items improperly allowed, but also to restore items improperly struck out, and generally to review the taxation. Keam v. Yeagley, 6 P. R. 60.

A prohibition was granted restraining a Judge of the division court from proceeding upon an order for revision of costs, the application for such order not having been made within fourteen days from the judgment, and such order being in this case equivalent to a reversal of the judgment on the question of costs. Bell v. Lamont, 7 P. R. 307.

Held, that an application to a Judge in chambers to review a taxation of a sheriff's bill of costs taxed under R. S. O. 1877, e. 66, s. 48, was properly made under R. S. O. 1877, e. 06, s. 52, as Rule 477, applied only to the Toronto taxing officers appointed under Rule 438. Grant v. Grant, 10 P. R. 40.

A certain sum of money had been paid into court as security for the defendants' appeal to the court of appeal, which was afterwards abandoned; and by an order made on the consent of both parties it was provided that the plaintiff's costs should be paid out of this money after taxation:—Held, that this money was a fund in court within the meaning of Con, Rule 1207, and there should be a revision by one of the taxing officers at Toronto of the taxation of costs by the local registrar, Consincan v. City of London Fire Ins. Co., 13 P. R. 36.

I. CLERK.

Privilege from Arrest. |—A clerk of the county court, being also ex officio deputy clerk of the Crown and clerk of assize, is privileged from arrest only while engaged in his official duties, or while going to and returning from his office, and this court therefore discharged a rule to prohibit the county court Judge from issuing an order of commitment against such officer. In re Mackay v. Goodson, 27 U. C. R. 263.

II. JUDGE.

Appointment — Deputy Judge.]—Held, that the commission in this case appointing a deputy Judge during pleasure and the absence of the county Judge, was validly issued under R. S. O. 1877 c. 42, and that it was not essential to enable the deputy Judge to act that the county Judge should be absent from the county. Regina v. Fee, 3 O. R. 107.

Arrest.]—A Judge of a county court cannot be arrested upon mesne or final process.

Adams v. Ackland, 7 U. C. R. 211.

Attachment for Disobedience to Certiorari.]—The court will not order an attachment against a Judge of a district court for not obeying a certiorari, unless it be shewn clearly that he acted contunaciously.

In re Judge of District Court of Niagara, 3 O. S. 437.

Attachment for Disobedience to Subpoena.] - A county Judge being served with a subpoena duces tecum to produce a deed did not attend; and, on motion for an attachment, excused his absence on the ground of important private business, urging also that he obtained the deed and became possessed of his information as an attorney, that he had a lien on the deed, and that he was entitled to witness fees as an attorney :-Held, that he was not so entitled, and should have attended, and the rule was made Deadman v. Ewen, 27 U. C. R. 176. made absolute.

Commission of Inquiry - Tenure of Office.] — Certain charges having been pre-ferred against a county court Judge, a commission was issued under the great seal of Canada, reciting the facts and the provisions of 22 Geo. III. c. 75 (Imp.), and directing the commissioners to examine into the charges, and for that purpose to summon witnesses and require them to give evidence on oath and produce papers; and to report thereupon. The inquiry proceeded, and a motion was made for a prohibition:—Held, that inquiries under the Imperial Act should be made before the governor-general in council, and the authority could not general in council, and the authority could not be delegated, nor inquiry upon onth author-ized by commission: — Held, also, that the commission could not be supported at com-mon law, for it created a court for hearing and inquiring into offences without determin-ing. Re Squier, 46 U. C. R. 474. C. S. C. c. 13, and 31 Vict. c. 38 (D.), give power to issue commissions for inquiring into the administration of justice when the inquiry is not regulated by any special law, inquiry is not regulated by any special bar, and an inquiry into the conduct of any one connected with the administration of justice is within the meaning thereof. But held, that this inquiry into the conduct of a county court Judge falls within the exception in the Act, being regulated by C. S. U. C. c. 14, ss, 1 and 4, which are a special law for such cases. Ib. 32 Vict. 32 Vict. c, 22, s, 2 (O), 32 Vict. c 26 (O.); 33 Vict. c, 12, s, 1 (O.); and R, S O. 1877 c. 42, s. 2, assuming to repeal C. S. U. C. c. 14, and C. S. U. Deputy Judge — Partner of Applicant's Attorney.]—A deputy Judge of the county court declined, on the ground that he was the partner of the plaintiff's attorney, to entertain an application by the defendant for a supersedeas because he had not been charged in execution within the term next after judg-ment:—Held, that the defendant was entitled to be discharged from custody under a writ of habeas corpus. Reid v. Drake, 4 P. R. 141.

Ejectment Against Judge-Venue.]-Held, that the fact of a defendant being a county Judge, where the plaintiff might otherwise have proceeded under the Overholding Tenants Act of 1868, and thereby have obtained a more summary remedy, is a sufficient reason to change the place of trial in an action of ejectment. Anonymous, 4 P. R. 310. Quære, whether the circumstance of defendant being a county court Judge is not itself sufficient to give plaintiff the right to have the place of trial changed on grounds of public policy. Ib.

Practising Profession—Gratuitous Services.]—C. S. U. C. c. 15, s. 5, as amended by 29 Vict, c. 30, enacts, that no county county Judge shall directly or indirectly practise in the profession of the law as counsel, attorney, solicitor, or notary public, or as a convey-ancer, or do any manner of conveyancing, or ancer, or do any manner of conveyancing, or prepare any papers or documents to be used in any court of this Province under the pen-alty of forfeiture of office and $400. The declaration alleged that defendant, being such Judge, did in certain proceedings in the surrogate court prepare certain papers and docurogate court prepare certain papers and docu-ments to be used in said court, to wit, the petition of one G., &c. (describing the pa-pers). Defendant pleaded that he did not practise in the profession of the law as an attorney for said G., or as such attorney pre-pare any papers or documents to be used in said surrogate court. The evidence shewed that defendant prepared granitously for G. who was a widow in poor circumstances, the petition, bond, and affidavits required to enable her to obtain administration to her late husband:—Held, that the plea was proved, and a verdict was therefore entered for defor defendant on the leave reserved. Held, also, that the evidence did not bring defendant within the spirit of the Act, or the mischief against which it was directed which was doing the acts prohibited for profit. Allen q. t. v. Jarvis, 32 U. C. R. 56.

Reference-Fees. -The fees on a reference to a county Judge from the superior court, such as an examination of a judgment debtor, must be paid in the proper stamps, and not in cash. James v. Jones, 4 P. R.

Reference to "Judge."] — Held, the where a reference is directed to "the Judge Held, that of a certain county, the senior Judge is the person referred to. Elora Agricultural Co. v. Potter, 7 P. R. 12.

Reference to Judge by Name.]—Fees.] When a reference is made from Nisi Prius to a Judge of a county court by name, adding a Judge of a county court by name, adding his description, Judge of a county court, and not to him as Judge of the county court, he is entitled to his fees as such arbitrator. Wood v. Foster, 6. P. R. 175. See Smith v. Rooney, 12 U. C. R. 661; Les-lie v. Emmons, 25 U. C. R. 243.

III. JURISDICTION.

1. In General.

Accounts.] - Held, that a county court has jurisdiction to entertain and investigate accounts and claims of suitors however large, provided the amount sought to be recovered does not exceed the sum prescribed by the Act. Bennett v. White, 13 P. R. 149.

Action Beyond Jurisdiction - Second Action in Superior Court.] - The plaintiff, having sued in the county court, proved a claim beyond the jurisdiction, whereupon the jury was discharged. He then brought his action in this court, and upon defendant's application an order was made staying proceedings until the plaintiff should discontinue the county court action and pay the costs of it. The order was rescinded, for 1, the county court having no jurisdiction the plaintiff could not discontinue the suit there, which would be a proceeding in the cause; and, 2, this suit being for a debt, and not brought oppressively or vexatiously, should not have been stayed. Hodgson v. Graham, 26 U. C. R. 127.

Amendment of Plan.]—Held, reversing 9 O. R. 274, that the status of C., as a person, or the assignee of a person, who registered a plan, was a question of law and fact combined, for the county Judge to determine upon C.'s application to him, under R. S. O. 1837, c. 111, s. 84, to amend the plan, and that his decision was not examinable in prohibition, In re Chisholm and Town of Oakville, 12 A. R. 225.

Balance.]—The inferior courts can entertain a suit for the balance remaining due upon a written undertaking to pay a larger sum. Longworth v. McKay, 6 O. S. 149.

Balance of Disputed Accounts.]—Where in an action in the county court, judgment is given for a sum in itself within the jurisdiction of the court, but which is the balance of a sum beyond the jurisdiction, and which was arrived at not by any settlement or statement of account between the parties, but as the ascertainment of a disputed account:—Held, this was the allowance of a claim beyond the jurisdiction of the court, and a writ of prohibition was granted. Sherveood v. cline, 11 O. R. 30.

Capias in High Court.]—The Judge of a county court has no power, either as such Judge or as local Judge of the high court, to order the issue of a ca. sa, in an action in the high court. Cochrane Manufacturing Co. v. Lamon, 11 P. R. 351, followed. A Judge of the high court, sitting in "single court," has power to set aside such an order. Water-house v. McVeigh, 12 P. R. 678.

Covenant.] — Under 8 Vict. c. 13, s. 5, the district courts have jurisdiction in actions on covenant to pay a sum certain to £50. Billings v. Nicolls, 5 U. C. R. 622.

Damages for Loss of Cattle.]—The declaration stated that the plaintiff had delivered certain cattle to defendant to be pastured, &c., and to be re-delivered on request—with a breach, that through the negligence, &c. of the defendant, the cattle were lost. The plaintiff had a verdict for £9, and no certificate:—Held, that the action might have been brought in the county court. Hinds v. Denison, 1 C. L. Ch. 194.

Declaration of Right — Assignments Act.]—An action asking for a declaration of right to rank on an insolvent estate is not within the jurisdiction of the county court. Whidden v. Jackson, 18 A. R. 439.

Distraining Beast of the Plough.]—An action on the case, founded on the statute of Merton for distraining beasts of the plough, may be maintained in the county court. McGregor v. Batson, 2 C. L. Ch. 206.

Division Court Judgment.]—Held, following McPherson v. Forrester. 11 U. C. R. 362, that an action would not lie in a county court upon a division court judgment. Donnelly v. Stewart. 25 U. C. R. 398.

Imprisonment.] — A county Judge has power to imprison in the county Judge's criminal court. Regina v. St. Denis, 8 P. R. 16.

Inquiring into Facts.—The Judge of a county court has the right at the trial of a case, where the jurisdiction of the court is denied, to inquire into the facts, so as to ascertain whether or not there be jurisdiction: e. g. to inquire whether there has been a settlement of accounts between the parties. Until such inquiry has been made, prohibition cannot be granted. In re Dixon v. Snarr, 6 P. R. 336,

See Swartwout v. Skead, 11 C. L. J. 329.

Investigation Under Municipal Act.]
— Held, reversing 16 O. R. 275, where the county court Judge is making an investigation pursuant to the resolution of a council under R. S. O. 1887 c. 184, s. 477, he is acting as persona designata, and not in a judicial capacity, and is not subject to control by a writ of prohibition. That writ is not to be applied to any proceedings of any person or body of persons, whether they may be popularly called a court or by any other name, on whom the law confers no power of pronouncing any judgment or order imposing any legal duty or obligation on any individual. Re Squier, 46 U. C. R. 474, considered. In re Godson and City of Toronto, 16 A. R. 452.

Liquidated and Unliquidated Claims.]

—A county court has jurisdiction to try a claim up to $400 which is made up of an unliquidated amount of less than $200, and the balance of a liquidated amount. Vogt v. Boyle, 8 P. R. 249.

Mechanies' Liens.]—Held, that notwithstanding the apparently unlimited provisions of s. 1 of 53 Vict. c. 37 (O.), initialed an "Act to Simplify the Procedure for Enforcing Mechanics' Liens," the intention of the Act is to simplify such procedure in the High Court only, leaving the procedure provided for in county courts and division courts unaffected by the passing of the Act. Secord v. Trumm, 20 O. R. 174.

Mechanics' Liens—Mortgage—Account.]
—Section 23 of R. S. O. 1887 c. 126, which allows proceedings to recover the amount of a mechanics' lien to be taken under certain circumstances in the county court and division court, applies only to actions in which the party seeking to enforce his lien is suing in the ordinary way to obtain judgment and execution. Those courts cannot entertain an action in the nature of an action of account by a lien holder against a mortgage who has sold the land in question under mortgage prior to the lien, though there may be wider powers by way of summary application. Hutson v. Valliers, 19 A. R. 154.

Objection to Jurisdiction.]—An objection to the jurisdiction exercised under R. S. O. 1877 c. 42, ss. 16, 22, was not entertained, because there was nothing upon the proceedings to shew that the case was not tried before the proper Judge. McKenzie v. Dancey, 12 A. R. 317.

Overholding Tenant.]—In ejectment in the county court, under 23 Vet. c. 43, it appeared that the defendant held the land under a verbal lease for a year, from 7th June, from one B., with the arrangement that if B. sold defendant would give up possession at the end of the year. B. in January, sold to the plaintiff, of which defendant had notice, and promised to give up possession, and the plaintiff gave defendant a notice to quit on the 8th June, his term having expired. At the trial the deed from B. to the plaintiff and the notice to quit were proved:—Held, a case within the statute; that defendant's term was put an end to on the 7th June; and that there was no dispute as to title to exclude the jurisdiction, which was clearly not ousted by the mere proof of the plaintiff's paper title. Neads v. McMillan, 29 U. C. R. 415.

Overholding Tenant.]—The Overholding Tenancy Act. 31 Vict. c. 26 (O.), gives jurisdiction to the county Judge in cases where the tenancy has been determined by forfeiture for breach of contract. Nash v. Sharp, 5 C. L. J. 73.

Overholding Tenant—Colour of Right.)
—The intention of the Act 31 Vict. c. 26 (0.), was not to empower the Judge of the county court to determine the question of right between landlord and tenant on its merits; but, on its appearing that the tenant is holding under a bona fide belief of right, which the evidence in this case shewed, he should dismiss the case, and leave the right to be tried in ejectment. Gilbert v. Dogle, 24 C. P. 60.

Overholding Tenant—Volour of Right.)
—The expression "volour of right" in the Overholding Tenants' Act. R. 80. 1887 of 1844. Means such semblance or present as the right is really a first as shews that the right is really not right as shews that the right is really not appear the Act confers no authority upon the county Judge to try the question of the tenant's right or title; and as soon as it is made to appear that the right is really in dispute, there is then that colour of right which the Act contemplates, and the Judge is bound to dismiss the case. Gibert v. Boyle, 24 C. P. 60, and Woodbury v. Marshall, 19 U. C. R. 597, not followed. Upon the proceedings before the county Judge being commanded to be sent up. the high court has power to stay proceedings upon the writ of possession under the Act. Price v. Guinane, 15 O. R. 264.

Partnership Accounts.] — A county court has jurisdiction, where the amount of the claim does not exceed the ordinary jurisdiction of the court, to entertain an action by a partner against his co-partners for a purely money demand, which is part of the partnership assets, although it may involve the taking of the partnership accounts. Allen v. Fairlax Checae Co., 21 O. R. 598.

Penal Actions.]—The county courts have no jurisdiction in penal actions, unless expressly given them by statute; and for this purpose they were held not to be included in the words "any court of record in Canada West," used in 4 & 5 Vict. c. 12. O'Reilly q. t. v. Allan, 11 U. C. R. 526.

But they were held to have jurisdiction in an action for the penalty imposed by s. 81 of C. S. C. c. 6, for selling spirituous or fermented liquors on polling days. In re Medealfe v. Widdifield, 12 C. P. 411. And, under C. S. U. C. c. 124, s. 2, to try an action for a penalty against a justice of the peace, where the penalty claimed does not exceed $80. Brash q. t. v. Taggart, 16 C. P. 415.

Punishing for Contempt.] — Every court of record has the power to punish for contempt; but if the court is one of inferior jurisdiction, the superior court may intervene and prevent any usurpation of jurisdiction by it. Exparte Lecs. 24 C. P. 214.

Quo Warranto.]—A county court Judge cannot grant a quo warranto during term time in the superior courts. Regina ex rel. Gleeson v. Horsman, 13 U. C. R. 140.

A county court Judge has power to give a fiat in term time for the issue of a writ of quo warranto to try a contested municipal election:—Held, that Rule 1 M. T. 14 Vict, has become inoperative by the effect of subsequent statutory enactments to which it is repugnant. Regima ex rel. McDonald v. Anderson, 8 P. R. 241.

Power of county court Judge to set aside writ of quo warranto when issued on his flat. See Regina ex rel. Grant y. Coleman, S.P. R. 497; S. C., 46 U. C. R. 175; T. A. R. 619; Regina ex rel. O'Duger v. Lewis, 32 C. P. 104; S. C., sub nom. Regina ex rel. Dugre v. Lewis, S. P. R. 497.

Reference.]—County court Judges acting under Rule 422, O. J. Act, have no jurisdiction under ss. 47 and 48 O. J. Act, to order references in opposed cases. White v. Becmer, 10 P. R. 531.

Removal of Assignee.]—A Judge of a county court, acting under the authority of 48 Vict. c. 26, s. 6 (O.), removed an assignee for creditors, and substituted another assignee. The first assignee, as alleged, refused to deliver over the keys of the place of business of the insolvent to the second assignee, and the Judge made an order for the issue of a writ of attachment against the first assignee for contempt:—Held, that the Judge, in acting under the statute, was not exercising the powers of the county court, but an independent statutory jurisdiction as persona designata, and had therefore no power to direct the issue of a writ of attachment; and prohibition was ordered. Re Pacquette, 11 P. R. 463.

Sec, also, Re Young, 14 P. R. 303.

School Trustees.]—Held, 1, that the citing of a trustee to appear before the Judge of the county court, under s. 130 et seq. of the School Act, C. S. U. C. c. 64, is not necessarily a bar to proceeding by arbitration under s. 29; 2, that under s. 130 the Judge of the county court has no jurisdiction, except where a secretary-treasurer "has in his possession, books, moneys, &c., which came into his possession as secretary-treasurer, and which he wrongfully holds and refuses to deliver up," &c., and such secretary-treasurer must be guilty of misdemeanour, contemplated by s. 130 before the Judge can interfere. Ferris v. Checkerfeld, 10 C. P. 272.

Set-off.]—Where there are open running accounts between the plaintiff and the defendant, made up of divisible items, not exceeding in each £25, the defendant can only recover by way of set-off the difference between £25 and the amount due to the plaintiff. If the defendant, however, desire to recover more than will balance the plaintiff's demand, he must give notice of or plead a set-off to the £25, and claim in his plea or notice to have the amount between the plaintiff's demand and the £25 allowed to him. Russell v. Conicay, 5 U. C. 12, 256.

Sheriff — False Return.] — The district courts have no jurisdiction in an action for a false return. Bell v. Jarvis, 6 U. C. R. 423.

Third Party—Indemnity—Investigating Accounts, —In an action in a county court, on a promissory note made by the defendant, in which the defendant claimed indemnity against the third party, the third party having appeared, the learned Judge of the county court directed certain issues to be tried between the defendant and the third party. At the trial he found for the plaintiff, and investigated accounts between the defendant and 10,000, non which he found that a balance of more than $50,000 would be payable to the defendant, and he directed that the third party should out of this balance, pay to the defendant and the amount of the plaintiff's claim. On a motion for prohibition:—Held, that the order directing the issues between the defendant and the third party where the defendant and the third party where the defendant and the third party which could be given to the defendant against the third party, was protection against the demand of the plaintiff, which was within the pecuniary jurisdiction of the county court, the learned Judge was not acting beyond his jurisdiction investigating accounts of sums beyond his jurisdiction. Neald v. Corkindale, 4 O. R. 337.

Tort—Delivery up of Note.]—In an action brought in the high court to restrain the defendants by lujunction from negotiating a promissory note for $2.30, and to compel them to deliver it up to the plaintiff, or for damages for its detention, it was determined that the work had compelled the desired that the work had compelled the desired that the work had compelled the desired of discounting it, but really with the view of making it the subject of garnishment:

—Held, that the action sounded in tort and not in contract, and could not have been brought in a county court; and the successful plaintiff was therefore entitled to tax his costs on the high court scale. Johnson v. Kenyon. 13 P. R. 24, distinguished. Robb v. Murray, 16 A. R. 502, followed. Plummer v. Coldwell, 15 P. R. 144.

Trying Validity of Division Court Judgment. —The jury in a district court cannot try, as an issue of fact, whether the division court gave judgment on insufficient evidence, nor whether the plaintiff abandoned the residue of a large demand, so as to give the court furisdiction. Hypes v. Burrouce, 5 U. C. R. 253.

Voters' Lists.] — Jurisdiction of county Judge to make order as to time for holding court to hear appeals from voters' lists. See In re Voters' List for the City of St. Thomas, Re Boyes, 13 O. R. 3.

Wages — Amendment — Particulars.]
The plaintiff sued in the county court, on the indebitatus count, for $375, claiming by his particulars, balance due from defendant to let November, 1877, $120; wages from 1st

November, 1877, to 1st November, 1878, 8360, less amount paid 8169, 8290. Balance, 8329, On objection being taken at the trial to the jurisdiction of the county court, the plaintiff was allowed to amend by striking out all the items except the first:—Held, that the particulars were no part of the record, which shewed an amount within the jurisdiction of the county court; but:—Held, also, that judgment for that sum would be a bar to any future action for work done at any time before the commencement of this suit. Davidson v. Belleville and North Hastings R. W. Co., 5 A. R. 315.

Winding-up—Sale of Assets by Liquidators—I—The liquidator of a company which was being voluntarily wound up under the Ontario Winding-up Act, sold the assets thereof en bloc, without the sanction of the contributories, to a private individual, and then obtained from the county court an order approving of the sale and making certain provisions for the disposition of the purchase moneys. On appeal it was held that the order was made without authority, and that it was a nullity. In re D. A. Jones Co., 19 A. R. 63.

Winding-up—Ordering Liquidator to Pay Costs.]—See Re Cosmopolitan Life Association, Re Cosmopolitan Casualty Association, 15 P. R. 185.

Writ of Attachment.]—The Judge of a county count who orders the issue of a writ of attachment out of the high court, under s. 2 of the Absconding Debtors' Act, R. S. O. 1877 c. 93, has no jurisdiction to entertain an application to set aside such writ. Disher v. Disher, 12 P. R. 518.

2. Equitable Jurisdiction.

Administration.] — Where creditors whose claims in the aggregate were under $200, obtained the usual administration order, and it was shewn that the value of the estate including lands, was under $800, and although the real estate, which it was necessary to sell to satisfy such claims, was incumbered by mortgage to an amount which together with these claims exceeded $200. it was held that the plaintiffs could not reckon the mortgage debt for the purposes of this suit, and therefore that the case was within the jurisdiction of the county court; and the plaintiffs were refused their costs. In reScott, Heherington v. Steccen, 15 Gr. 683.

Administration.] — An administration suit by a person interested to an amount less than $200 in an estate, which considerably exceeded $800, and against which a debt proved (and the only debt proved) exceeded that sum, was held not to be within the equity jurisdiction of the county court. Goldsmith v. Goldsmith, 17 Gr. 231.

Defendants in Different Counties.]—A county court has no equitable jurisdiction where all the defendants do not reside in the county. McLeod v. Millar, 12 Gr. 194.

Defendant Out of Jurisdiction.]—The Act giving county courts equitable jurisdiction in relation to mortgages, when the sum does not exceed £50, does not apply when defendant is resident out of the jurisdiction. Laurason v. Fitzgerald, 9 Gr. 371. Foreclosure—Defendant not Resident in County where Land Lies.]—Where a plaintiff flies a bill in the court of chancery to foreclose a mortgage for a sum within the jurisdiction of the county court, no costs will be allowed him. The fact that the defendant is resident in a county other than where the land is situate, will not vary this rule. Connell v. Curran, 1 Ch. Ch. 11.

Foreclosure — Subsequent Incumbrance.]
—Where a bill is filed to foreclose in respect of a demand not exceeding 150, the plaintiff will be entitled to his full costs if it appear that there is an incumbrance beyond that sum. Hyman v. Roots, 11 Gr. 202.

Injunction.] — The county court, on its equity side, had power to grant an injunction in any case coming within its jurisdiction. The fact of the title to land coming in question did not oust the jurisdiction of the county court on its equity side. Rac v. Trim, S P. R. 405.

Legacy under $200 Charged on Land.]—A county court has jurisdiction under s.-s. 13 of s. 3 of 59 Vict. c. 19 (O.), in an action brought by the legatee against the devisee of land, to recover a legacy of $5 charged on the land, as involving equitable relief in respect of a matter under $200. The subject-matter involved in such an action is the amount of the legacy and not the value of the land. Rustin v. Bradley, 25 O. R. 119.

Mortgage — Account of Surplus.] — A mortgage exercised the power of sale contained in his security and realized $350. On a bill filled by the mortgage for an account, it appeared that after deducting the amount due on the mortgage at the time of sale, together with the costs of the sale and of an action of ejectment, as also a payment made to the plaintiff before suit, the balance coming to the plaintiff was reduced to $133. The plaintiff was still held entitled to his full costs, "the subject matter involved" being the $350. McGillicuddy v. Griffin, 20 Gr. 81.

Mortgage — Account of Surplus.] — A county court has jurisdiction, whatever the amount of a mortgage's claim at the time of the exercise of a power of sale, to entertain an action for the recovery of an alleged surplus derived from the sale and not exceeding $200, although the existence of the surplus is denied. Reddick v. Traders' Bank of Canada, 22 O. R. 449.

Mortgage — Substitutional Service.]—Where the plaintif's claim on the premises, together with the amount of a subsequent mortgage, exceeded $200, it was held to be beyond the jurisdiction of the county court. Semble, the necessity for an order for substitutional service would appear to be sufficient reason for filing a bill in this court which might otherwise have been filed in the county court. Seath v. Meltrog, 2 Ch. Ch. 93.

Ratepayer's Action to Compel Payment of Costs—Personal Action.]—Since 32 Vict. c. 6, s. 4 (O.), the county courts have had common law jurisdiction only; the Judicature Act did not after the jurisdiction of those courts, but only made applicable to matters cognizable by them the several rules of law thereby enacted and declared. An action by a ratepayer of a school section, on behalf of himself and all other ratepayers.

against trustees of the section, seeking to compel the defendants to pay to the treasurer of the section such amount as might be disallowed upon taxation of a bill of costs paid by the trustees to a solicitor, is one of purely equitable jurisdiction, and is not cognizable by a county court, even though the amount in question is not more than $200. The term "personal actions" used in R. 8. O. 1887 c. 47, 8, 19, means common law actions. Re McGugan v. McGugan, 21 O. R. 259.

See Scale of Costs, ante, col. 1386.

3. Liquidated or Ascertained Amount.

Account Stated.]—The declaration contained three counts, claiming each £50, but the damages were laid only at £50, and the particulars were, for account rendered £55 [158, less by cash £22] 108,—£33 5s. At the trial the plaintiff relied on the count on account stated, and produced a draft by himself on defendant for £55 15s. 1d., "being the balance in full of your account," and proved that when presented defendant acknowledged the amount to be correct, but refused to accept it, as he was afraid he would be sued. A verdict having been found for £34 3s. 3d.—Held, that the claim was within the jurisdiction; and, semble, that the evidence of an account stated was sufficient. McMurrey v. Munro, 14 U. C. R. 196.

Amounts Evidenced by Draft — Secretal Unliquidated Claims, — The plaintiff purchased, by sample, from the defendant two lots of barley, consisting of ten and five car loads respectively. On receipt of the first lot, the plaintiff, alleging that the bulk did not correspond with the sample, claimed $200 for inferiority in quality. The defendant disputed any liability, and the plaintiff threatened to dishonour the draft which nordened drawn on hill feith the bank, the ordened drawn on hill feith the bank, the plaintiff threatened to dishonour the draft which nordened drawn on hill feith the bank, the plaintiff of the price, though the defendant was not aware of it, had then been paid by the plaintiff. A deduction of $100 from the price of the second lot of five car loads was subsequently demanded on the same ground, and the plaintiff refused to pay the defendant's draft for that lot unless he sent a cheque for that amount, and instructed the bank to pay the plaintiff dishonoured draft for $200 claimed in respect of the first lot. The defendant the plaintiff dishonoured draft for $200 claimed in respect of the first lot. The defendant they are plaintiff dishonoured draft for $200 claimed in respect of the first lot. The defendant legaraphed the plaintiff, "Accept my draft, Will be down Wednesday and pay you." The plaintiff having paid the second draft, sued the defendant in the county court for $300—Held, per Burton and Patterson, JJA., that the sums of $200 and $100 were both liquidated by the act of the parties; that the whole demand was therefore within the jurisdiction of the county court, and that plaintiff was entitled to recover. Per Hagarty, C.J.O.—Without deciding that either demand was liquidated, the court in this case had jurisdiction. It cannot entertain any unliquidated cause of action over $200; but it has jurisdiction to try any number of unliquidated causes of action nover $200; but it has jurisdiction to try any number of unliquidated causes of action over $200; but it has jurisdiction to try any Bond—Taxed Costs.]—In an action on a bond for $590 given to secure payment of costs in the supreme court of Canada in a prior action, judgment was given for the plaintiff or $318.55, the amount at which such costs were taxed and certified in the supreme court:—Held, that the amount recovered was not ascertained by the act of the parties or by the signature of the defendants, within R. S. O. 1887 c. 47, s. 19, and the plaintiff was entitled to costs of the action on the scale of the high court. Hager v. Jackson, 16 P. R. 485.

Commission on Sale.]—An action was brought in a county court to recover the amount of a broker's commission on the sale of land. The defendant disputed his liability, and the action was tried by a jury, who found that the planntiff was entitled to recover $250. The amount was not ascertained otherwise than by the agreement of the parties, as found by the jury:—Held, that the amount was not ascertained within the menning of R. S. O. 1887 c. 47, s. 19, s.-s. 2, and the county court had no jurisdiction. Robb v. Murray, 16 A. R. 563, followed. Re McKay v. Martin, 21 O. 1, 194.

Goods Sold.)—The plaintiff, by special indersement on his summons, claimed for each lent and other section for a lattle sold, 105 128. St. and in his particulars 201 18. Other content of the produced a paper signed by the defendant, specifying that he was to be produced a paper signed by plaintiff for the lattle the invoice price, and "the charges of freight, duties, &c."—Held, clearly an amount liquidated by the act of the parties, and therefore within the jurisdiction. Walbridge v. Brown, 18 U. C. R.

Goods Sold.]—Action for the price of thirty hospheads of goods. It appeared that K. sold to S., the defendants' testator, a quantity of goods, which K., in his evidence, said was a definite quantity, which he could not recollect, but not less than thirty hogsheads, and not more than forty, at the price of $10 per hogshead:—Held, that the demand was liquidated by the act of the parties at the time of sale, and the action was therefore within the jurisdiction of the county court. Watson v. Secern. 6. R. 550.

Fer l'atterson, J.A.—That it was not im-

Per Patterson, J.A.—That it was not improper to leave to the jury the question whether the amount was ascertained by the act of the parties. Ib.

Goods Sold.]—The plaintiff agreed to sell the defendant a plano for $400, to be paid by notes at one and two years, with interest, with a rebate for eash. The plano was delivered at the defendant's residence, who after using it for some time objected to retain it, and refused to give the notes or pay the stipulated price. The plaintiff thereupon sued the defendant in the county court, claiming the $400 and interest. At the trial leave was given to strike out the words "with interest;"—Held, that the amount was ascertained by the act of the parties, and that defendant having neglected to pay, either by notes or cash, the plaintiff was entitled to recover in an action for goods sold and delivered. Greenier v. Burns, 13 A. R. 481.

Goods Sold.]—In an action for the price of goods sold and delivered, in which the plaintiff recovered $290, it was contended that amount was ascertained by the act of the narties, and therefore within the jurisdiction of the county court, because the goods were sold according to a price list agreed to, and therefore the amount was ascertainable by a simple computation:—Held, not so. Thompson v. Pearson, 18 P. R. 420, distinguished. Evans v. Chandler, 19 P. R. 160.

Gurantee.]—An action on a guarantee for goods to be supplied to A. to a sum numed, was held not a case in which the amount is ascertained by the signature of the defendant, within 8 Vict. c. 13, s. 51, so that a writ of trial might issue. The document itself, without further evidence, must be prima facie proof of a debt. Montford v. McNaught, 3 L. J. 15

Guarantee—Abandoning Part of Claim.]
—The county court has no jurisdiction to entertain an action for more than $200 on a guarantee, in general terms, of payment of the price of goods, there being no liquidation or ascertainment of the amount as between the vendor and the guarantor, a liquidation or ascertainment by the debtor not binding the guarantor. Where an action was for two unliquidated claims each within but together beyond the jurisdiction of the county court, the plaintiff was allowed after judgment to amend by abandoning one of them. Thomson v. Ecde, 22 A. R. 105.

Moneys Received on Sales.]—Pending negotiations for the sale by the plaintiff to the defendant of a certain business as a going concern the defendant entered into possession, made sales, and received moneys, entering the receipts in a cash book. The negotiations fell through and the plaintiff brought this action in the county court to recover "$271.03, the return of moneys received by the defendant belonging to the plaintiff, being proceeds from sales of goods in plaintiff's shop, as follows:" setting forth the sums received on each day by the defendant :—Held, that this sum was not ascertained by its receipt by the defendant and the bringing of the action by the plaintiff for the sums or received. Robb v. Murray, 16 A. R. 503.

The increased jurisdiction applies only in the comparatively plain and simple cases where by the act of the parties or the signature of the defendant, the amount is liquidated or ascertained as being due from one party to the other on account of some debt, covenant, or contract between them; such ascertainment of the amount by the act of the parties being something equivalent to the stating of an account between them. Ib.

Services Performed or Goods Sold.]—Whenever a sum up to $400 is agreed on by the parties as the remuneration for a service to be performed, or as the price of any article sold, if the service be performed or the article be delivered in pursuance of the bargini, the amount may be recovered in the county court, denial of the price not availing to oust the jurisdiction, Robb v. Murray, 16 A. R. 505, considered, Ostrom v. Benjamin, 2.1 A. R. 467.

Set-off Credited.)—Upon the evidence in the county court it appeared that the plaintiff, under the common counts, was claiming an amount of $771, reduced to $204 by credit given, but not by payment or by set-off agreed to be taken as payment:—Held, that the $304 was not an amount fleuidated or ascertained by the act of the parties, and that the claim therefore was beyond the jurisdiction. A plaintiff cannot by giving credit for a set-off compel defendant to set it up, or give the county court jurisdiction. Furnical v. Saunders, 26 U. C. R. 119.

Set-off Credited. —The plaintiff in a county court suit gave credit on a claim of $300 (for board, &c.) for $170, being the value of an article received by him from defendant:—Held, that although the agreement as to setting off the one against the other be made before the debt for which the action is brought is contracted, yet, if the amount to be allowed to defendant for the article can be treated as a payment of a portion of plaintiff's claim, and not merely an unliquidated set-off against it, or the transaction can be viewed as a sale first of the article upon an agreement that payment of it was to be made in board, &c., to be furnished by plaintiff to defendant—the court has jurisdiction. Fleming v. Livingstone, 6 P. R. 63.

Work and Labour—Interest.]—Where the plaintiffs in an action in the high court of justice to recover a sum for work and labour and materials, the amount not being liquidated or ascertained, recovered $197.01 for debt, and $14.54 for interest from the issue of the writ of summons:—Held, that the amount recovered was not within the jurisdiction of a county court, and the plaintiffs were entitled to costs on the scale of the high court. Malcolm v. Leys, 15 P. R. 75.

See Scale of Costs, ante, col. 1386,

4. Replevin.

Action against Sheriff, 1—To an action against a sheriff for taking an insufficient replevin bond, he pleaded that the goods replevied were worth more than £15, and that so the writ of replevin, being sued out of the district court, was void:—Held, plea bad. Krickendall v. Thomas, 7 U. C. R. 30.

Distress for Rent—Title to Land.]—In replevin defendants avowed under a distress for rent, to which the plaintiff pleaded that he did not hold the land as tenant, &c., as in the avowry alleged:—Held, that the title upon this plea did not necessarily come in question, and that the record therefore did not shew a cause of action beyond the jurisdiction. O'Brien v. Wetsh. 28 U. C. R. 394.

Replevin Act.]—The Replevin Act. 4 Will. IV. c. 7, gives jurisdiction to the district courts only in cases of seizure for distress. Foster v. Miller, 5 U. C. R. 509.

Trespasser ab Initio—Goods in Another County.—In an action of replevin, brought in the county court of Haldimand, for a mare taken by the defendants from the plaintiff's close in that county, removed to the county of Brant, and there detained until replevied:—Held, that the taking could not be justified under a warrant issued for the arrest of the plaintiff on a charge of stealing the mare; and although the original taking was justified under a search warrant issued in Haldimand, to search the plaintiff's premises in Haldimand for the mare, and to bring it before a justice of that county, yet the subsequent removal to the county of Brant, and detention there, were not, and constituted the defendant a trespasser ab initio, and therefore the county court of Haldinand had jurisdiction to replevy the goods in Brant. Hoocer v. Craig, 12 A. R. 72.

Value Claimed not the Test.]—The mere fact of the plaintiff in his declaration in replevin stating the value of the goods distrained at a higher sum than £1 stores not shew that the action could not have brought in a district court. The plaintiff, to entitle himself to Queen's bench ceats, must prove at the trial that the goods are really of greater value. Wheeler v. Sime, 3 U. C. K. 255.

5. Title to Land.

Conversion of Fixtures.]—Declaration for converting the plaintiff's dwelling-house, with the doors and windows, &c. Plen, that the goods were not the plaintiff's. At the trial in the county court, it appeared that the plaintiff claimed as assignee of a mortgage of the land on which the house stood, and that the dispute was whether the house was part of the freehold. A verdict having been rendered for the plaintiff, was afterwards set aside, on the ground that the title to the land came in question, and that the case should have been stopped upon the plaintiff seidence:—Held, that this was right, and the judgment below was affirmed. Portman v. Patterson, 21 U. C. R. 237.

Damages for Cutting Timber.]—The plaintiff by his statement of claim alleged that he was, and had been for more than six years, the owner of certain land, which was unoccupied, and claimed damages for timber cut by the defendant on such land. The defendant, by his statement of defence, disputed the plaintiff's claim, and set up certain facts by way of confession and avoidance. The action was brought in the high court, but the plaintiff only recovered $120 damages:—Held, that under the pleadings the plaintiff was obliged to prove his title to the land, and therefore the county court would have had no jurisdiction, and the costs should be on the scale of the high court. Danaher v. Little, 13 P. R. 361.

Denial of Title after Attornment.]—S, being indebted to the plaintiffs, entered into an agreement to morrgage to them, amounts other lands, certain lands known as the Dominion Hotel property. A mortgage was on the same day executed, but by mistake the Dominion Hotel property was omitted therefrom, and a lot formerly owned by S, adjacent thereto inserted. The defendant had been the tenant of S,, and after the mortgage, attorned and paid some rent to the plaintiffs, believing them to have a title to the lands. In an action for arrears of rent:—Held, that after such attornment and payment of rent, the defendant could not be heard to deny the plaintiffs' title, and they being the equitable owners of the land, were entitled to recover:—Held, also, that the title not being open to question by the defendant, the county court had jurisdiction. Bank of Montreal v. Gilchrist, G.A. R. 63.

Dispute as to Timber.]—One H. sold to defendant timber standing on his land, and afterwards conveyed and gave possession of the land to the plaintiff. The defendant proceeded to take off the timber:—Held, that the title to land was net in question, and that an action for trespass to the land would lie in the county court. Builey v. Bleecker, 5 C. L. J. 19.

New Trial — Absence of Affidavit.]—A plea was pleaded bringing title to land in question, and after a verdict for the plaintiff a next trial was granted, on the ground that the court had no jurisdiction. On appeal, the judgment was reversed, as the court having no jurisdiction could not grant a new trial. The absence of the affidavit required by the statute with such plea will not warrant the court in proceeding, but would be ground for setting aside the plea. Campbell v. Darvidson, 19 U. C. R. 222.

Nonsuit.]—In trespass defendant pleaded pleas bringing the title to land in question, accompanying them with the affidavit required by 8 Vict. c. 13, s. 13. A nonsuit having been ordered:—Held, upon appeal, that the effect of the pleas was to oust the jurisdiction altogether; that the Judge should therefore have refused to entertain the case; and that the indigment of nonsuit must be reversed. Poucley v. Whitehead, 16 U. C. R. 580.

Raising Question at the Trial.]—The statement of claim presented a cause of action within the jurisdiction, and the defendant could not have demurred; it depended upon his pleading whether the jurisdiction would be oussed, and therefore Rule 189 G. J. Act did not apply to prevent the raising of the question of jurisdiction at the trial. Scabouk v. Joung, 14 A. R. 97.

It was contended that the defendant was estopped from disputing the plaintiff attitude has admissions, and by meason of the plaintiff and produced the plaintiff and the plaintiff and was for damages for pulling down fonces, and for mesne profits for a period of five or six months prior to the date of ejectment, and the admissions of title did not go further back than the ejectment.—Held, that the judgment against his tenants was evidence against the defendant, at the date of the write of ejectment, and the admissions of title did not go further back than the ejectment.—Held, that the judgment against his tenants was evidence against the defendant, at the date of the write of ejectment, but that title was really in question, and necessary to be proved in respect of the period for which mesne profits were claimed prior to the ejectment. Ib.

Rent.]—Declaration, that one A. devised the N. half of lot 15 to his son W. in fee, and the S. half to his wife J. for life, and after her death to W. in fee; that during W.'s life, he and his mother, J., leased to defendant the whole lot for five years at an annual rent, and that W. died soon after, having devised his land to the plaintiffs in fee. And the plaintiffs claimed from defendant a portion of the first year's rent, which they alleged they were entitled to, and which the defendant had paid to J. after notice. Equitable plea, that W. by his will devised all his lands to the plaintiff in trust for the sole benefit of J. during her life, under which she claimed and received from them the rent:—Held, that upon these pleadings the title to land was brought in question, and the Jurisdiction ousted. Fair v. McCrow, 31 U. C. R. 509.

Right to Pasture Cattle.]—The defendant, by an agreement under seal with one $S_{1,2}$ acquired a right of user in certain land for the purpose of pasturing their cattle. There was $D_{1,2} = D_{2,2} = D_{2,2}$ no demise, or right of distress, or anything in the agreement to make the defendants tenants of S. There was, however, a covenant that S. would not allow his own animals, or those of others, to enter upon the land in question. The question, whether S. gave the defendants such an interest in the land as entitled them to impound cattle, was held not to be a question of title in the sense that it would oust the jurisdiction of the county court. Graham v. Spettique, 12 A. R. 261.

Striking Out Plea.]—A county court Judge, at the trial of a case, upon the application of plaintiff's counsel, struck out a count of the declaration and all pleadings relating thereto, because the pleadings thereunder ousted his jurisdiction, by bringing title to land in question:—Held, that he had the power to do so. Fitzsimmons v. McIntyre, 5 P. R. 119.

Trespass to Chattels.]—Where in matters of tort relating to personal chattels, title to land is brought in question, though incidentally, the court has no jurisdiction. Trainor v, Holcombe, 7 U. C. R. 548.

Trespass—Not Guilty.]—Title to land does not, on mere suggestion, necessarily come in question under a plea of not guilty by statute. The general rule is, that it must not only be pleaded, but be verified by affidavit. In this case, which was an appeal from the county court:—Held, that though defendant might have shewn, upon the plea of not guilty, that for want of title the plain-tiff could not maintain the action for injury to his premises, yet that in the absence of such proof, or a bonn fide tender thereof, the mere suggestion of it did not preclude the county court from trying the real cause of action, which was within its jurisdiction. Ball v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 16 C. P. 252.

Trespass—Raining Question of Jurisdiction at the Trial, 1—Where, in an action of trespass for puling down fences and for mesne profits, the plaintiff alleged his title at the time from which he claimed to recover mesne profits; and the defendant, an owner of the control of the wrongs in the plaintiff's statement of claim mentioned, and denied that he was liable in damages or otherwise on the alleged causes of action:—Held, that on these pleadings the title to land was expressly brought in question, and the jurisdiction of the county court ousted. Held, also, that the defendant was not estopped from raising the question of jurisdiction at the trial, because of his omission to file an affidavit under R. S. O. 1877 c. 43, s. 28, that his pleading was not exatious, or for the mere purpose of excluding jurisdiction; such an omission being a mere irregularity, for which the plea might have been set aside, but not operating to confer jurisdiction where the defence in fact raised the question of title. Campbell v. Davidson, 19 U. C. R. 222, followed. Scabrook v. Young, 14 A. R. 97.

Trial in High Court.]—Where a county court cause is entered for trial at the assizes, under 32 Vict. c. 6, s. 17, s.-s. 2, the jurisdiction is the same only as if it had been tried in the county court. Where in such a case, therefore, the title to land came in question, and a verdict was entered for defendant:—Held. that the proceedings were coram non judice, and the verdict was set aside. Wetherall v. Garlow, 30 U. C. R. 1.

IV. PRACTICE AND PROCEDURE.

1. In General.

Attachment—Issue Sent from High Court—Order to Produce.]—Where, after judgment in an action in the common pleas division, an issue on a garnishee application was directed to be tried under Rule 373, O. J. Act. by a county Judge and jury:—Held, that such Judge had no jurisdiction to make an order to produce before trial, and consequently no authority to make any order on a failure to produce. Cochrane v. Morrison, 10 P. R. 606.

Attachment.]-Where it was charged by a judgment creditor that a fraudulent arrangea judgment creditor that a fraudulent arrange-ment had been made between the judgment debtor and his employers, the garnishees, whereby a third person had been substituted for the debtor as the servant of the garnishees, and money paid to such third person, while the debtor continued to do the work:—Held, that the judgment creditor was entitled to have an issue directed, to which the third person should be a party, to determine whether there was at the time of the service of the attaching order any debt due or accruing from the garnishees to the debtor; to entitle the creditor to an issue, it was not necessary to bring home a case of fraud to the persons against whom it was charged; it was sufficient to shew unexplained facts and circumstances so unusual as to create a strong suspicion that fraud had been practised:—Held, also, that the Judge of the county court in which the judgment has been recovered has power, when the amount claimed to be due from the garnishee is so large as not to be within the jurisdiction of a county court, to make the garnishing summons returnable before himself, even where the garnishee resides in another county. Semble, that the proper construction of Rules 917, 918, and 919 is, that the Judge of a county court in which a judgment has been recovered has power, when the amount claimed to be due from a garnishee residing in another county is within the juris-diction of the county court or the division court, to order the garnishee to attend before the Judge of the county court or the clerk of the division within which he lives:—Held, also, that an order for a receiver should not he made in respect of a fund which may be reached by garnishing process. Millar v. Thompson, 19 P. R. 294.

Attorney's Status.]—Attorneys, not being barristers, cannot, as of right, be heard as advocates in the district courts. In re Lapenotiere, 4 U. C. R. 492.

Held, that county court Judges cannot allow attorneys who are not barristers to practise before them as advocates in county courts. In re Brooke, 10 L. J. 49.

Conflicting Decisions.] — When the courts of Queen's bench and common pleas are at issue on the construction of an Act of Parliament, the duty of a county Judge is to decide according to his own view of the law, McInnes v. Benedict, S L. J. 22.

Costs—Tariff.]—The new tariff established by the courts of Queen's bench and common pleas does not extend to the county courts. Card v. Lount. 2 P. R. 72.

Costs.—No Order as to Costs.]—In an action in a county court, tried by a Judge without a jury, judgment was given for 836, no order being made as to costs:—Held, that no costs could be awarded, and a mandamus was granted to the county court clerk to enter up judgment for the plaintiff without costs, and without allowing defendant to set off against the judgment the difference between the county and division court costs. Re Great Westers Advertising Co. v. Rainer, 9 P. R. 494.

Counterclaim—Amount to be Set off.]—
In an action in a county court to recover an amount to for salary and travelling expenses there was considered in for advances made to the plaintiff recovered $398.55, and the amount found recovered under the counterclaim was $1.169.54, but the under the counterclaim was $1.169.54, but the under set $2.00 to be set off:—Held, that under se, 28 and 29 of the County Courts Act, R. S. O. 1897 c. 55, the defendants were entitled to judgment on the counterclaim to the full amount of the plaintiff's claim. Wellace v. People's Life Insurance Co., 30 O. R. 438.

Death of Judge—Enlargement of Rule by Clerk, —A rule to enter a nonsuit having been granted in the county court in April term, was duly enlarged until the following term. The Judge died before the term began, and no successor was appointed till after its expiration, but the clerk of the court granted a rule to enlarge it. It was argued in October term before the new Judge, who treated it as still pending, and gave judgment:— Held, that he was right. Leslie v. Emmons, 25 U. C. R. 243.

Defence Arising after Action — Discharge of Part of Claim.]—On the 5th August, 1899, a creditor of the plaintiff issued a summons out of a division court claiming $64 from the plaintiff and claiming to attach moneys in the hands of the defendant, as garnishee, to answer the plaintiff's debt, and served it on both primary debtor and gar-nishee on the day of its issue. On the 17th August this action was brought in a county court to recover $133.40. On the 28th August the garnishee (the defendant in this action) paid $57.50 into the division court. On the 6th September judgment was given in the division court for the primary creditor against the primary debtor (the plaintiff in this ac-tion) for $64 and against the garnishee for $57.50. On the 5th October the plaintiff delivered his statement of claim for the whole $133.40:—Held, that the service of the summons was no bar to this action; that the de-fence that the defendant was discharged as to $57.50 by his payment into the division court was a defence which did not arise until the payment was made and judgment given in the vision court, and was consequently a defence arising after action brought; and such payment and judgment could not have rela-tion back to the time of the service of the summons; and therefore, it having been adjudged in this action that the plaintiff was entitled to the amount claimed by him, less the 857.50, the action was properly brought in a county court, and the plaintiff was entitled to costs on the scale of that court. Pickerd v. Tims. 19 P. R. 109.

District Court—Effect of Judgment.]—
The judgment of a district court could not bind lands under 5 Geo. H. c. 7, for want of a docket. Doe d. McIntosh v. McDonell, 4 O. S. 195.

Effect of A. J. Act, 1873.]—See Dain v. Gassage, 6 P. R. 103.

Enlargement of Rule Nisi. —Where a rule nisi in a county court was ordered by the Judge to stand over until the next term:—
Held, that it was not necessary to take out a rule to enlarge the rule nisi to prevent it from Japsing. In re Dean v. Chamberlain, 8 P. R. 303.

Entering Verdiet.]—On error from the county court, it appeared by the record that after issue joined a ven, fac, was awarded, and then the postea stated an agreement by the parties to leave the case to the Judge, the decision to be looked upon as the verdict of a jury. Afterwards it was entered that "the said Judge has determined, and the court is of opinion and has ordered," that the defendant should pay to the plaintiff a sum named. Then followed an entry of judgment for that sum and costs:—Held, that the judgment was erroneous, for no verdiet was directed or entered to support it. Quarre, whether the Judge had power to direct a verdict. Jones v. Smith, 23 U. C. R. 485.

Examining Proceedings in High Court.]—Quere, whether in a proceeding before him, a county court Judge can of his own motion examine proceedings pending in a division of the high court; but—Held, that the defendant should have been allowed to produce such proceedings in order to meet technical objections as to the state of the cause not being shewn. Hollingsworth v. Hollingsworth, 10 P. R. 58.

Immediate Execution.]—Under 16 Vict. c. 175, a county court Judge can certify for immediate execution in cases sent down to him by a writ of trial, as well as in other cases, the 53rd clause of 8 Vict. c. 13, being in effect overruled. Riach v. Hall, Patterson v. Hall, 11 U. C. R. 356; McKay v. Hall, Johnston v. Hall, 4 C. P. 145.

Injunction—Threatened Sale of Goods.]
—Under the Judicature Act, R. S. O. 1897 c.
51, s. 57, s.-s. 4, and the County Courts Act,
R. S. O. 1897 c. 55, s. 23, s.-s. 11, when a cause of action is within the jurisdiction of a county court an injunction may in a proper case be granted to restrain an apprehended wrong, and a declaration of right may be made in a case whether substantive relief is sought or not in as full and ample a manner as in a case in the high court. A threatened sale of a specific chattel which, if carried out, could have been compensated in damages, is not a proper case in which to grant an injunction restraining the sale. Bradley v. Barber, 30
O. R. 443.

Issue from County Court Sent to High Court — Subsequent Proceedings.]—An issue had been directed from a county court to one of the superior courts under R. S.

O. 1877 c. 49, s. 12, to try whether a conveyance of certain lands by a judgment debtor was fraudulent, and the county court had defined the issue to be tried, and the time and place of trial. The plaintiff, in pursuance of the direction, prepared and delivered the issue to defendant, the grantee in the conveyance, who did not return it; and the plaintiff, after the time for trial had elapsed, applied in the superior court for an order absolute for sale of the land;—Held, such order could be made only in the county court, whence the issue had been directed, and that the superior court could only try the issue, and could make no final disposition of the matter:—Held, also, that the application was not in any event well founded, as the plaintiff should have proceeded with the trial of the issue. Quaere, as to the granting of a new trial, or reviewing the verdict upon such an issue. Merchants Bank v. Brooker, 8 P. R. 133.

Issue from Superior Court — Adding Pleas. — Held, that the Judge of the county court has power to allow pleas to be added in cases sent down from the superior courts to be tried by him, as well as in actions commenced in his own court. King v. Glassford, 11 C. P. 490.

Issue from Superior Court — Execution.]—in a case depending in one of the superior courts, and taken down for trial to the county court, under 23 Vict. c. 42, s. 4, the Judge of the court below can order immediate execution. Gildersleeve v. Humilton, 11 C. P. 298.

Issue from Superior Court—Mode of Trial.]—Under s. 18 of the Law Reform Act, Judges of the county courts can try cases brought down from superior courts without the intervention of a jury. Cushman v. Reid, 5 P. R. 121.

Interpleader Issue Sent from High Court—Setting Aside Verdiet.—A verdiet was entered for the plaintiff on the trial of an issue directed by the court of chancery to be tried at the sittings of the county court of the county of Dufferin. The county court Judge set aside the verdiet, and entered a nonsuit, on grounds embracing matters of law as well as of fact and evidence:—Held, that he had no power to do so, and that the application should have been made to the court that directed the issue. Barker v. Lecson, 9 P. R. 107.

Interpleader Issue Sent from High Court—Change of Venue.]—In an action pending in the high court, an interpleader issue and all subsequent proceedings were transferred, under 44 Vict. c. 7, s. 1 (O.), to the county court of Middlesex. By a subsequent order made on consent, the trial of such issue was withdrawn from Middlesex, and a special case was agreed on, and the venue changed from Middlesex to York, where the special case was agreed:—Held, per Patterson and Osler, JJ.A., that in strictness the append should be quashed. The transfer to the Middlesex county court was final, and there was no jurisdiction under the statute or otherwise to transfer the issue or any part of it, or to change the venue to any other county court. The proceedings in the county court of York could therefore only be regarded as a summary trial by consent from which no appeal lay. Copne v. Lee, 14 A. R. 503.

Motion in Term.]—Reading s, 41 with s, 29 of the County Courts Act, R. S. O. 1887 c, 47, and having regard to the provisions of Rule 488 O. J. Act.—Held, that a party may move before the Judge in court against the verdict or judgment at the trial, either before, or during the first two days of the next quarterly sittings after the trial. The motion is not necessarily to be made at the usual fixed sittings; the Judge may entertain it at any previous time. Scope of s, 42, s.-s. 5, R. S. O. 1887 c, 47, as to moving before the county court to set aside the judgment at the trial, observed on. Smith v. Rooney, 12 U. C. R. 661, is not applicable to the existing law and practice. Norton v. McCabe, 12 P. R. 506.

Recognizance.]—Semble, that a recognizance taken in a district court may be sued on in the Queen's bench. Cochrane v. Eyre, 6 I. C. R. 289.

Where a recognizance has been taken in open court, and it is so averred:—Held, that under 8 Vict. c. 13, ss. 20, 23, and 50, the filing of the recognizance in the other of the clerk is not necessary to perfect it. Ib.

Rule Nisi not Signed.)—Defendant in the county court obtained a rule risi to enter a nousuit, with stay of proceedings; it was not signed by the clerk, but had at the side the words, "Rule nisi granted: W. Salmon, Judge." Plaintiff's attorney, treating it as no rule, signed judgment, but the Judge held it to be a proper rule and the judgment a nullity, and ordered a nonsuit. On appeal by the plaintiff' —Held, that the judgment was irregular only, and should therefore have been got rid of before any other step could be taken; and on this ground the appeal was allowed. Brown v. Cline, 27 U. C. R. 87.

Setting Aside Verdiet—Entering Judgment.]—At the trial, the jury answered all the questions left to them in favour of the plaintiff, and judgment was entered for him, which the county court Judge subsequently set aside and entered judgment for the defendants:—Held, that under Rule 490 O. J. Act, the same power is extended to the county courts as is possessed by the high court under Rule 321, and that the Judge of the county court was right in giving judgment in favour of defendants instead of submitting the question to another jury. See also, on the same point, Stewart v. Rounds, 7 A. R. 575, and Williams v. Crow, 10 A. R. 301. McConnell v. Wilkins, 13 A. R. 438.

Silence of Pleading.]—Under the system of pleading in the high court of justice, and in county courts, under the Judicature Act, Rules 128, 146, 147, 148, 240, where a material fact is alleged in a pleading, and the pleading of the opposite party is silent with respect thereto, the fact must be considered as in issue. Waterloo Mutual Fire Ins. Co. v. Robinson, 4 O. R. 295, approved of. Seabrook v. Young, 14 A. R. 97.

Term Business in Vacation. |—A county your Judge cannot, by arrangement with the bar of his county, transact term business in vacation. Smith v. Rooney, 12 U. C. R. 661.

Trial in High Court—Motion to Arrest Judgment.]— Held, under the Law Reform Act, 1868, s. 17, s.-ss. 4 and 5, as amended by 33 Vict, c. 71 (O.), that in a county court cause tried at the assizes the motion to arrest judgment was properly made in this court, Edmunds q. t. v. Hoey, 35 U. C. R. 495.

Trial in High Court — Setting Aside Notice, —Where a county court case has been directed to be tried at the assizes, an application to set aside the notice of trial must be made to the county court. Clark v. Clifford, 7 P. R. 329.

Trial—Sheep Act.]—The right of action given by It. S. O. 1887 c. 214, s. 15, to the owner of sheep killed by dogs, is to be prosecuted with the usual procedure of the appropriate forum. If, therefore, an action be properly brought in the county court it may be tried before a jury, and where it is so tried, they, and not the Judge, should apportion the damages if an apportionment be required. Fox v. Williamson, 20 A. R. 610.

Vacation.] — The vacation succeeding a term is not to be considered for the purpose of charging a defendant in execution as part of the preceding term. The same rule governs in this respect in county courts as in the superior courts. Reid v. Drake, 4 P. R. 141.

Venue — Appeal.] — Held, that there is no appeal to the full court in term from an order of the clerk of the Crown and pleas, made on an application to change the venue in county court cases under R. S. O. 187, c. 50, s. 155; but the only appeal in such cases is to a Judge in chambers under s. 31 of that Act:—Held, however, that if an appeal did lie to the full court, it might be made direct thereto without first going before a Judge in chambers. Mahon v. Nicholls, 31 C. P. 22.

Semble, in such cases the proper course is to follow, as laid down in the Act, the practice in force in the superior courts; and the mere fact of the cause of action having arisen in the county to which it is sought to change the venue, is not of itself sufficient to outweigh any actual preponderance of convenience arising from other causes in favour of retaining the venue where the plaintiff bad laid it. 1b.

Venue — Appeal.] — Where an application is made to the master in chambers to change the place of trial in a county court action no appeal lies from his order thereon to a Judge in chambers, and no appeal lies from the decision of a Judge in chambers to a divisional court. McAllister v. Cole, 16 P. R. 105.

Venue — Appeal — Second Application.]
—Where in a county court action an application has been made to the master in chambers, under Rule 1250, to change the place of trial, no appeal lies from his order; and a second application for the same surpose, not based upon any new state of facts arising since the first application was made, will not be entertained by a Judge in chambers. McAllister v. Cole, 16 P. R. 105, followed. Milligan v. Sills, 13 P. R. 350, not followed, with the concurrence of the Judges who decided it, pursuant to s. 9 (2) of the Law Courts Act, 1895. Cameron v. Elliott, 17 P. R. 415.

Venue—Intituling Papers.]—Where a motion is made to a Judge of the high court or the master in chambers under Rule 1260 to change the venue in a county court action, the papers should not be intituled in the high court of justice, but in the county court. Ferguson v. Golding, 15 P. R. 43.

Venue—Master in Chambers.]—As to the power of the master in chambers to change the venue in county court actions. See Brigham v. McKenzie, 10 P. R. 406.

Venne—Replevia.1—Held, that the venue in an action of replevia in a county court, except for goods distrained, may be changed to any other county, under R. S. O. 1877 c. 50, s. 155. O'Donnell v. Ducheneuit, 14 O. R. I.

Venue - Replevin-Tax Collector.]-A tax collector sued for damages in respect of may collector sued for damages in respect of parts done by him in the execution of his duty is entitled to the benefit of R. S. O. 1887 c. 73, and under s. 15 of that Act, and s. 4 of R. S. O. 1887, c. 55, a county court action against him for replevin of goods seized by him, and for damages for malicious seizure, must be brought in the county where the seizure and alleged trespass took place. The Consolidated Rules as to venue do not override these statutory provisions. Legacy v. Pitcher, 10 O. R. 620, distinguished. Arscott v. Lilley, 14 A. R. 283, applied. Howard v. Herring-ton, 20 A. R. 175.

Writs of Trial and Inquiry. |-Where the declaration claims £75 for work and labour, but the bill of particulars only £19, the case is within the limits of the 8 Vict. c. 13, and a writ of trial may be ordered. Martin V. Gegynne, 5 U. C. R. 245.

It is not necessary to obtain a rule of court or a Judge's order to warrant the issue of a writ of inquiry to the district court. A plain-tiff enters his record at the assizes to assess damages; the cause does not come on in its order, and is made a remanet; the plaintiff subsequently sues out a writ of inquiry to the district court; the defendant moves to set this writ aside, and all subsequent proceedings, for irregularity, the cause having been made a remanet at nisi prius; but—Held, writ of inquiry regular. Northcote v. Hodder, 5 U. C. R. 635.

Under 8 Vict. c. 13, a writ of inquiry may issue from the Queen's bench to the district court, not only to try the issues to the country, but also to assess contingent damages upon demurrer. King's College v. Gamble, 1 C. L. Ch. 54.

Notice of trial of a Queen's bench cause in the county court, cannot be given by anticipa-tion before the writ of trial has been obtained. Riach v. Hall, Patterson v. Hall, 11 U. C.

R. 356.

The filing of the writ of trial with the verdict indorsed on it, signed by the Judge of the county court, is a sufficient compliance with did indersed on us assisted to the statute. It is a sufficient comprime the statute. It is posten according to the form given in the rule of court of H. T. 10 Viet, where held no objection, and if indispensable the court would have allowed such postea to be the court would have allowed such postea to be the court would have allowed such postea to be the court would have allowed such postea to be the court would have allowed such postea to be the court would have allowed such postea for the court would have allowed such postea for the court would have allowed such postea.

Held, 1. that a defendant complaining of an installing in a superior court, but sent to a county court for trial under 23 county cou apply within four days after the trial to the county Judge for a stay of proceedings till the fifth day of the following term of the superior court of law. Fisher v. Green, 2 C. L. J. 14. Held, also, that he may, within the like period, make a similar application to a Judge period, make a similar application to a Judge of one of the superior courts of law sitting in chambers. Ib. Quare, if he delay for seven days after the verdict without making an application of any kind, has he not thereby waived the irregu-larity? Ib.

2. Appeal from County Court.

(a) When it Lies.

Amendment.] — The order of a Judge upon an application to amend, is not appealable. Branigan v. Stinson, 10 U. C. R. 403.

Amendment.] — The court, having no power on an appeal from the county court to amend the record, allowed the appeal on payment of costs by the appellant, so far as to direct the issue of a rule nisi, upon the return of which, in the court below, the necessary amendment could be made. Wilson v. Brown, 6 A. R. 411.

Amendment.]—This case had been remitted to the court below, this court being of opinion that the record should be there amended and a verdict entered for the plaintiff against the defendant B. alone (6 A. R. 411). The Judge of the county court instead of entering such a verdict, directed a new trial, the parties to apply to amend their pleadings as they might be advised, so that B. might raise any defence which he was not obliged to raise in the action on the joint liability:— Held, that the direction of the Judge as to the way in which he thought it most just to the way in which he thought it most just to the defendant B, that the application to amend should be made, was an exercise of his discretion with which this court in the exercise of its appellate jurisdiction would not interfere. Wilson v. Brown, 7 A. R. 181.

Attachment.]—Appeal in garnishee proceedings. See Van Norman v. Grant. 27 Gr. 498; Sato v. Hubbard. 6 A. R. 546; McKindsey v. Armstrong, 11 P. R. 200.

Attachment of Debts — Judgment on Issue.]—Under s. 42 of the County Courts Act, R. S. O. 1887 c. 47, an appeal lies to the court of appeal from the order or judgment of a county court disposing of an issue directed or a county court disposing of an issue directed by an order made in an action in such county court upon a garnishing application: and the claimant, the plaintiff in the issue, though not a party to the original action, is a "party" within the meaning of s. 42, and may be an appellant. Sato v. Hubbard, 6 A. R. 546, distinguished. Henderson v. Rogers, 15 P. R. 241

Attachment of Debts-Issue sent from High Court to County Court.]-The master in chambers made an order in an action in the high court, by consent of parties, directing the trial in a county court, between an executhe trial in a county court, between an execu-tion creditor and a claimant, of an inter-pleader issue with respect to the ownership of certain goods, which the sheriff had not seized or intended to seize, but which, by the consent of the parties recited in the order, were to be regarded as if the sheriff had seized them and applied for an interpleader order :-

Held, that there was no jurisdiction, under Rule 1163 or otherwise, to make the order for trial of the issue in the county court; and, as the absence of jurisdiction was apparent on the face of the order, all the proceedings under it were coram non judice, and there was no right of appeal to the court of appeal from the judgment of the county court upon the issue. Teskey v. Neil, 15 P. R. 244.

Consent Verdict.] — After the evidence has the been taken, a vernict was entered by consent for plaintiff, subject to the opinion of the court upon the whole case, with power to reduce the verdict:—Held, that there was no right of appeal. McColl v. Waddell, 19 C. P. 213.

Costs. |—An order allowing the defendant in an action in which the plaintiff accepted in settlement of his claim $85 paid into court, to set off his costs in excess of such costs as he would have incurred in a division court, is in its nature final and subject to appeal. Babecek v. Standish, 19 P. R. 195.

Demurrer.]—See Outwater v. Dafoe, 6 U. C. R. 256; Kerby v. Elliott, 13 U. C. R. 367.

Discretion.] — Where the county court Judge had exercised his discretion in a case, a superior court Judge refused to interfere. Moltoy v. Shaw, 5 P. R. 250: Clark v. Hurtburt, 6 C. P. 438.

Discretion.]—Although the jurisdiction of the court of appeal is not limited in appeals from the county court as it is in appeals from the superior courts, under s. 18, s.-s. 3, of the Appeal Act, it will not in ordinary cases interfere where a new trial has been refused by the county court upon a matter of discretion only. *Uampbell *V. Prince, 5 A. R. 330.

In an action for assault against a public officer, in which the jury had found a verdict of $100, and a new trial, asked for on the ground that the verdict was against evidence, was refused, the court of appeal granted a new trial, as the evidence strongly preponderated in the defendant's favour, and there was reason to believe the jury had been misled by the charge. Ib.

Discretion.]—At the trial the Judge left several matters of fact in dispute to the jury, who found on one point only and the Judge granted a new trial owing to his dissatisfaction with the verdict; the court refused to interfere with his discretion, at it did not appear that he was clearly wrong. Hunter v. Vanstone, 6 A. R. 337.

Divisional Court — Discovery of New Evidence—Motion for New Trial, I—A divisional court has no jurisdiction under s. 44, s.s. 3 of the Law Courts Act. 1895, to hear an appeal from a county court in term refusing a new trial on the ground of the discovery of fresh evidence, and this applies to a judgment given before the Act came into force. Brown v. Carpenter, 27 O. R. 412.

Entry of Verdict.]—The Judge, at the trial in the county court, entered a verdict for the plaintiff, instead of directing judgment to be entered, and afterwards refused a rule nisi to set aside such verdict. Rule 40.5 of the O. J. Act in effect forbids the granting of any rule to shew cause where the application is against the judgment of a Judge who tries a cause without a jury. Quere, as to the application of this rule to county courts by Rule 4-04 O. J. Act; but—Held, that the entry of the verdict might be treated as a direction to enter judgment, and was a decision from which an appeal would lie under Rule 510 O. J. Act. Williams v. Crow. 10 A. R. 301,

An objection to an appeal from a Judge refusing such rule might be raised by motion in chambers, but it is not obligatory to raise it in that manner. Ib.

Finding of Fact.]—In an action of replevin, the defendant, for a second plea, arowed for board due by plaintiff to him as a boarding-house keeper; and for a third, avowed for a lien on the goods of plaintiff under R. S. O. 1877 c. 147, s. Z. On the trial, the evidence as to whether the defendant was the evidence as to whether the defendant was found that the defendant was not a boarding-house keeper. On appeal this finding of the county court Judge was affirmed, although, had the matter combefore this court in the first instance, it would have decided otherwise, and under the circumstances, no costs of the appeal were given to the respondent. Recs v. McKcown, 7 A. R. 521.

Finding of Fact.]—The court will not entertain an appeal from a county court, where the decision turns wholly upon the evidence, and involves no point of law. Fowler v. McDonald, 3 U. C. R. 385; Bradley v. Crane, 4 U. C. R. 122; Manning v. Ashall, 23 U. C. R. 302; Clark v. Hurblurt, 6 C. P. 438; McKinstry v. Furby, 24 U. C. R. 176; Hurris v. Robinson, 25 U. C. R. 247; Regina ex rel. McKeon v. Hogg, 15 U. C. R. 140; Regina v. McLeon, 22 U. C. R. 449.

Insolvent's Discharge.]—The decision of a county Judge on an application by an insolvent for his discharge from imprisonment is appealable. Hood v. Dodds, 19 Gr. 639.

Interlocutory Order — Summary Judgment.]—An order for leave to sign judgment under Rule 80 is in its nature final, and not interlocutory, and such an order made in the county court, or district court, is appealable. Bank of Minnesata v. Page, 14 A. R. 347.

Interlocutory Order—Striking out Jury Notice. |—The right or claim mentioned in s. 42 of the County Courts Act, R. S. 0. 1887 c. 47, is that which forms the subject of the action, not the right to take any particular step in the course of the action; and an order made in chambers in a county court action. striking out a jury notice, is not an order finally disposing of a right or claim within the meaning of the section, but is in its nature an interlocutory order, and not appealable. Mc-Pherson v. Wilson, 13 P. R. 339.

Interpleader.]—An appeal will lie upon an interpleader. Feehan v. Bank of Toronto, 10 C. P. 32.

Interpleader — Issue from High Court.]
—An interpleader issue, arising out of an action in the chancery division of the high court of justice, was sent to a county court for trial by order made in chambers:—
Held, that it was to be intended that the order was made under 44 Vict. c. 7 (0.), rather than under the interpleader jurisdiction of the old court of chancery; and that being so, that a divisional court of the high court of justice had no jurisdiction to hear an appeal from the judgment of the county court on such issue, and that such appeal should have been to the court of appeal, under R. S. O. 1877 c. 54, s. 23. Close v. Exchange Bank, 11 P. R. 186.

Interpleader.]—The proviso at the end of s. 52, R. S. O. 1897 c. 55, as to the order being final governs the whole section, and an order made in county court chambers in an interpleader application directing an issue in the event of security being given, and in default a sale of the goods and payment of the proceeds to the execution creditor, was held not appenhable. Hunter v. Hunter, 18 C. L. T. Occ. N. 114.

Interpleader—Application of Stakeholder—Issue from High Court.]—The court of appeal has no jurisdiction to entertain an appeal from the decision of a county court upon an interpleader issue sent for trial by an order made in an action in the high court, upon the application of a stakeholder. Rule 1163 applies only to the case of an application by a sheriff, and not to a case coming within the first clause of Rule 1141; and in the latter case the high court has no power by virtue of any of the Consolidated Rules to direct an interpleader issue, in or arising out of an action in the high court, to be tried in a county court; and, therefore, unless otherwise supportable, the proceedings under an order so directing are coram non judice. But if the high court has power to make such an order—and semble, it has—by force of s. 110 of the Judicature Act, irrespective of the Consolidated Rules, preserving the old jurisdiction of the court of chancery, the appeal from the decision upon the issue is, in the first instance at all events, to the high court, and not to the court of appeal. Clancy v. Young, 15 P. R. 248.

Judge of Another Court Sitting in Term—t-cedict, 1—An action in the county court of Carleton was tried without a jury by the junior Judge of that county, who, after consideration, entered a verdict for the defendant. A court composed of the senior and junior Judges of Carleton and the Judge of the county court of Prescent and Russell subsequently assumed to set aside the verdict, and to enter judgment for the plaintiff, dissentiente the junior Judge of Carleton:—Held, that the judgment of a court so constituted was not affected thereby. Fer l'attendue, J. A., he verdict at the trial was not affected thereby. Fer l'attendue, La court, and could not be attacked except by an appeal to this court. Rule 540, J. Act gives a party no right to move in the county court. Fer Osler, J.A., the party dissatisfied with the judgment at the trial may under Rule 510 O. J. Act, move against it before the Judge himself; and an appeal to this court may under 45 Vict. c. 6, s. 4 (O.), as properly be brought from the desision on such motion as from the judgment at the trial. Ferguson v. McMartin, 11 A. R. 751.

Jury—Motion for New Trial.]—When a case in the county court has been tried with a lary, the only appeal given by R. S. O. 1887 c. 47, s. 41, direct to the court of appeal from the judgment at trial, is when such judgment is directed to be entered upon special findings of the jury, and it is complained of as being wrong in law upon such findings. Any other appeal raising an objection to the conduct of the proceedings at the trial, on a motion for a nonsuit, or the reception or rejection of evidence, or the charge to the jury, must be brought from the decision of the Judge upon a subsequent motion for a new trial. The general language of s. 42 does not apply when the case is one coming within s. 41. Weaver v. Sawyer, 16 A. R. 442.

Motion to Set Aside Verdict, —Where a verdict is taken for plaintiff, with leave to move to enter a verdict for defendants, an appeal will lie from the decision on such motion. Haucorth v. Fletcher, 20 U. C. R. 278; McLean v. Toten Council of Brantford, 16 U. C. R. 347.

Objection not Taken at Trial.]—The verdict in this case was set aside by the Judge of the county court, and a nonsuit entered, upon a ground not taken as a defence at the trial, or in the rule nisi:—Held, that the Judge erred in giving effect to the objection, which, if taken at the trial, would have been met with an amendment. As the evidence shewed that the plaintiff was entitled to succeed upon the merits, the appeal was allowed, and the rule in the court below discharged. Clarke v. Barron, 6 A. R. 309.

Order Discharging from Arrest.]—An order of the Judge of a county court discharging the defendant from arrest under a ca. sa. is not in its nature final within the meaning of s, 52 of the County Courts Act. R. S. O. 1897 c. 55, and an appeal does not lie therefrom. Gallagher v. Gallagher, 31 O. R. 172.

Order Dismissing Motion for Judgment.)—An order in the county court dismissing an application by a plaintiff for summary judgment is not in its nature final and an appeal does not lie therefrom. Fisken v. Stewart, 17 C. L. T. Occ. N. 82.

Order Enlarging Sine Die Motion to Dismiss.]—An order of the county court enlarging sine die until after the happening of a named event, a motion by a defendant to dismiss an action for want of prosecution is not in its nature final and is not appealable. Slater v. Trader, 17 C. L. T. Occ. N. S3.

Order for Arrest.]—There must always be great reluctance to set aside the order of a county Judge directing bailable process, when there are reasonable grounds from which he might draw the conclusion that defendant was about to leave. Swift v. Jones, 6 L. J. 62

Order for New Trial.]—In an action in a county court tried with a jury, a verdict was given in favour of the defendant. On motion in term the verdict was set aside, and a new trial ordered. The defendant appealed to a divisional court:—Held, that the appeal did not lie. Irvine v. Sparks, 31 O. R. 693.

Order for New Trial.]—Where, in a case of collision, the Judge reported that he thought he had not sufficiently directed the jury to the rule hald down in Tuff v. Warman, 5 C. B. N. S. 573, as to the effect of negligence on the plaintiff's part, and that he had therefore granted a new trial, this court on appeal refused to interfere. Somers v. Livingston, 24 U. C. R. 64.

Order for New Trial.]—Under s. 44, s.-s. 4, of the Law Courts Act of 1895, 58 Vict. c. 13 (O.), where a new trial has been granted in a county court action, the opposite party may appeal from the order directing the new trial to a divisional court of the high court of justice. Cantelon v. Thompson, 28 O. R. 396.

Order for New Trial and Refusing Nonsuit.]—Where defendants moved for a nonsuit on leave reserved, or for a new trial, and the rule was made absolute for a new trial, and anyment of costs:—Held, that they might appeal from this decision as refusing the nonsuit, and need not first take out the rule absolute as granted. Penton v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 28 U. C. R. 307.

Order in Term—Reversal of Verdict.]—In a county court action tried with a jury, a verdict was found for the defendant and judgment in his favour ordered by the trial Judge. Upon motion by the plaintiff to set aside the verdict and judgment and to enter judgment for the plaintiff or for a new trial, the county court, in term, made an order setting aside the verdict and judgment and ordering judgment to be entered for the plaintiff:—Held, that under the provisions of s. 51 of the County Courts Act, R. S. O. 1897 c. 55, an appeal by the defendant from the order of the county court, in term, lay to a divisional court of the high court. The county court of the high court. The county court of the high court. The county court under the proper judgment upon the evidence to be entered, for he had before him all the materials necessary to finally determine the questions in dispute. Donaldson v. Wherry, 29 O. R. 552.

Order Setting Aside Judgment on Terms.]—In a county court action the defendant made a motion to set saide a judgment by default as irregular, but the Judge held it regular, and, while he set aside the judgment, he did so upon terms of the defendant paying costs. The defendant appealed from this order upon the ground that the judgment should have been set aside unconditionally:—Held, that the order was not "in its nature final," within the meaning of s. 42 of the County Courts Act, R. S. O. 1887 c. 47, and the appeal did not lie. O'Donnell v. Guinane, 28 O. R. 380.

Order Without Jurisdiction.]—Where an action for not repairing the road, in which the venue is local, had been brought in the county court of a county different from that in which the road was situate, and a verdict for the plaintiff confirmed in term, this court allowed the appeal from such judgment, but made no order, as the court below, having no jurisdiction, could not be ordered to do anything in the case. Ferguson v. Township of Howick, 25 U. C. R. 547.

Partition.]—An appeal will lie under the Partition Act, 32 Vict. c. 33 (O.), from the judgment of a county court Judge on a special case stated. In re Shaver and Hart, 31 U. C. R. 603.

Persona Designata.)—By s. 30 of the Assignments Act, R. S. O. 1897 c. 147, an assignee for the benefit of creditors is enabled to take the proceedings authorized by s. 32 of the Creditors' Relief Act, R. S. O. 1897 c. 78, and, if he does so, the provisions of ss. 32 and 33 of that Act are to apply, mutatis mutandis, to proceedings for the distribution of moneys and determination of claims arising under an assignment:—Held, that an order of a county court Judge dismissing an application by a claimant, under s. 30, to vary the scheme of distribution made by the assignee of a debtor, was made by him as persona designata, and there was no appeal therefrom either by virtue of s. 38 of the Creditors Relief Act or of s. 52 of the County Courts Act, R. S. 0. 1897 c. 55, or otherwise. In re Pacquette, 11 P. R. 463, and In re Young, 14 P. R. 305, approved and followed. In re Waldie and Village of Burlington, 13 A. R. 104, distinguished. Re Simpson and Clafferty, 18 P. R. 492.

Pleading.]—Quære, whether the refusal of a re-pleader is an appealable matter. Anglin v. City of Kingston, 16 U. C. R. 121.

Quo Warranto.]—Appeal from an order fo county Judge, setting aside fiat and writ of summons in the nature of a quo warranto, See Regina ex rel. Grant v. Coleman, 7 A. R. 619.

Registry Act—Order Altering Plan.]— Semble, that an appeal lies from the order of the Judge of the county court under the Registry Act, altering or amending a plan,
In re Waldie and Village of Burlington, 13 A.
R, 104.

Right to Address Jury.] — The court will not entertain an appeal from the court below upon the question whether plaintiff or defendant was entitled first to address the jury. Hastings v. Earnest, 7 U. C. R. 520.

The Judge of the county court granted a new trial on the ground that he was wrong in allowing the plaintiff to begin, and that it had prejudiced the defendant, as the verdict for the plaintiff was against the weight of evidence. This court held that though the verdict was wrong on the evidence, the ruling at the trial as to the right to begin was right, and an appeal was therefore dismissed without costs. Neville v. Fox, 28 U. C. R. 231.

Rule Nisi.)—An appeal will not lie from the granting of a rule nisi in the county court, before it has been made absolute or discharged. Robinson v. Richardson, 32 U. C. R. 344.

Security for Costs.]—In an action in a county court, after judgment therein dismissing the action with costs and notice of appeal therefrom to the high court given by the plaintiffs, an order was made by the Judge of the county court, upon the application of the defendants, requiring the plaintiffs, within four weeks, to give security for the costs of the action in addition to security already given. staying, proceedings in the meantine, and directing that, in default of security being given within the time limited, the action should be dismissed with costs:—Held, that this order was not in its nature final, but merely interlocutory, within the meaning of s. 52 (1) of the County Courts Act, R. 8. O, 1897 c. 55, and no appeal lay therefrom. Held, also, that the provision of Rule $25$, that no security for costs shall be required on a motion or appeal to a divisional court, applies to county court appeals; and it must be assumed that the security ordered was not intended to extend to the costs of the appeal to the high court from the judgment dismissing the action, nor the stay to the appeal itself. Arnold v. Van Tuyl, 30 O. R. 063.

Settled Case.]—The decision on a case settled by consent in the county court without pleadings, is not appealable. Harding v. Knowlson, 17 U. C. R. 564.

Special Case.]—The plaintiff having commenced an action in the county court, at the trial a bill of exceptions was tendered, and it says then agreed that the pleadings and evidence should be stated as a special case for the Queen's bench, on which the court might order a verdiet for plaintiff or defendants, or, at the election of the plaintiff, a nonsuit or new trial, the court to draw inferences as a jury. This was argued as a special case in the Queen's bench, and judgment given for the plaintiff, whereupon the defendants brought error. In the copy of the judgment roll transmitted immediately after pleadings and venire the evidence was set out, and then a statement of the contention on either side, and a formal entry of judgment for the plaintiff. The court of appeal refused to entertain the case, holding that if it was to be looked upon as an informal appeal from the control court to the Queen's bench, it was not a special case within so, 150 and 157 of the Common Law Procedure Act, upon which error could be brought; that if it was to be treated as a cause in the Queen's bench, then the agreement of the parties to the special case, and a Judge's order allowing it, should have appeared on the roll, the facts and not the evidence only should have been stated, and the agreement of the parties should have been absolute, not giving the plaintiff an option to take a nonsuit or new trial instead of being bound by the judgment. Holmes v. Gronn Tarke R. W. Co., 29 U. C. R. 294.

Special Case.]—In a county court case, tried at the assizes, after verdict for defendant in that suit, the parties agreed upon a special case in the action in that court, and not upon a case originating in a superior court; the clerk, with the approval of the court, refused to receive it, on the ground that the only mode of bringing such a case before the superior court was the ordinary statutory one, by way of appeal. Pattypiece v. Magville, 21 C. P. 316.

Winding-up.]—An order in a winding-up proceeding for the sale of assets is a "final order" as nothing further remains to be done under it and therefore is the subject of appeal. In re D. A. Jones Co., 19 A. R.

(b) Procedure on Appeal.

Action Dismissed on Plaintiff's Opening, |—There was a demurrer to the replication and a verdict had been directed for defendant on the issue in fact on the opening address of plaintiff's counsel, from which the plaintiff appealed. Remarks as to the inconvenience of an appeal under such circumstances. Sheriff v. McCoy, 27 U. C. R. 597.

Appellate Court's Duty.]—The general rule in matters of appeal is, that unless the appellate court can say that the judgment of the court appealed against is clearly wrong, that judgment stands. Keena v. O'Hara, 16 C. P. 435.

Appellate Court's Duty.]—In appeals against the orders of the county court, this court will assume those orders to be correct until the contrary is shewn; and care must be taken to point out the defects on the pleadings and proceedings brought into this court. Murphy v. Morrison, 14 Gr. 203.

Bond not Given in Time.]—An appellant, having obtained the usual stay, omitted to give the bonds, and the opposite party, at the expiration of the four days, entered judgment. A mandamus to certify the proceedings in appeal upon a bond subsequently entered into was refused, upon the ground that no appeal would lie after judgment entered. Murphy v. Northern R. W. Co., 13 C. P. 32.

Bond - Immaterial Omission.] - On the 18th of January proceedings were stayed for four days to allow defendants to give a bond for appeal, which was to be taken for $600. On the 18th the bond was filed, the proper penalty being inserted in the obligation, but in the recital of the Judge's order this sum was left blank. The Judge pointed out the omission to defendants' attorney, who inserted the sum; but the Judge afterwards required him to get the bond re-acknowledged, and he procured it from the clerk of the court for that purpose. The plaintiff's attorney finding it gone gave notice of taxation; but it was returned before judgment, which was nevertheless entered, and upheld on the ground that the bond when first filed was defective, and that it had not been refiled with an affidavit of execution after being corrected. The Judge afterwards re-fused to transmit the papers for appeal, and to a mandamus nisi returned the above facts: -Held, that the bond was sufficient when first filed, the omission being immaterial: that the sum might have been inserted without reexecution, and that it was therefore unnecessary to file any new affidavit. Regina v. Wells, 17 U. C. R. 545.

Bond—Condition Defective.]—A county curt Judge having refused to certify the papers for appeal, because the bond was not conditioned to abide by the decision of the court above, as the statute requires, this court refused to interfere. In re Keenahan v. Preston, 21 U. C. R. 461.

Bond—Condition Defective.]—The condition of the bond not being in accordance with the statutes, the appeal entered for argument was struck out of the paper. Pentland v. Heath, 24 U. C. R. 464.

Bond—Form]—As to the effect of 27 Vict. c. 14, regarding the form of bond, see Tozer q. t. v. Preston, 23 U. C. R. 310; Darling v. Sherwood, 2 C. L. J. 130.

Bond—Not in Time.]—This court will not refuse to hear an appeal properly entered, because the necessary bond was not given in time. Haworth v. Fletcher, 20 U. C. R. 278.

Certificate of Judge—Objection to Security—Order for Committal of Judgment Debtor,—I. An appeal lies to the court of appeal from an order of the Judge of a county court, in a county court action, committing the defendant to gaol, upon his examination as a judgment debtor, for concealing or making away with his property in order to defeat or defraud his creditors. Such an order is in its nature final, and therefore comes within s.-s. 2 of s. 42 of the County Courts Act, R. S. O. 1887 c. 47, as controlled by the proviso at the end of the section, 2. It is not a valid objection to an appeal that the Judge of the county court has not, in certifying the proceedings, expressed in his certificate that they are certified "to the court of appeal." 3. The court of appeal will not entertain an objection to the security upon the appeal given in the county court appealed from. Baby v. Ross, 14 P. R. 440.

Costs in Court Below. 1-Where a party filed a bill on the equity side of the county court, which on the hearing was dismissed with costs, and the plaintiff appealed to this court, when the ruling of the Judge was reversed, the court gave to the plaintiff the costs of the appeal, as well as of the court below. Farquhar v. City of Toronto, 12 Gr. 186.

Costs—Appeal at Suggestion of Judge.]— As the defendant might be said to have appealed in compliance with the wish of the learned Judge, costs were not given on dismissing the appeal. Harris v. Robinson, 25 . C. R. 247.

Costs.]-Appeal allowed with costs, contrary to the previous practice. Eddy v. Ottawa City Passenger R. W. Co., 31 U. C. R. 569, 576, note a; In re Shaver and Harty, ib 609, note a. See, also, Smith v. Rooney, 12 U. C. R. 661.

Costs-Appeal Instead of Motion.]-The defendant, in a suit on the equity side of the county court, had, before being served with an injunction restraining the removal of a building, removed the same by direction of the city inspector as being a nuisance, having been erected partly on the public street; notwithstanding this, an order was made by the Judge of the county court for the committal of the defendant, who, without moving to dissolve the injunction on the facts, appealed to this court. In allowing the appeal, and directing defendant's discharge, the court did not give him the costs of the application. Murphy v. Morrison, 14 Gr. 203.

Costs—Discretion.]—As the judgment was varied on a matter of discretion, no costs of appeal were given. Campbell v. Prince, 5 A. R. 330.

Costs.] - See APPEAL, IX. 1., ante col. 47.

Cross-appeal.]-In county court cases nos-appeal is not necessary. Hutson v. Valliers, 19 A. R. 154.

Delay in Setting Down-Dismissal.]-The fact that the appellant in a county court appeal has obtained from the Judge of the court appealed from, under R. S. O. 1887 c. 47, s. 46, a stay of proceedings to enable him to give security, does not absolve him from the necessity of complying with Rule 836, by set-ting the appeal down for hearing at the first sittings of the court which commence after the court which commence after sitings of the court which comments the expiration of thirty days from the decision complained of, although such sittings commence before the expiration of the stay, And where judgment in a county court was entered on the 17th January, notice of appeal served on the 30th January, a stay of proceedings for thirty days granted on the 12th February, and security given on the 12th March, but the appeal was not set down for the March sittings of the court of appeal, nor the proceedings certified, an order was made dismissing it with costs, no sufficient excuse being given for the delay. Paul v. Rutlidge, 16 P. R. 140.

Delay in Setting Down - Dismissal -Extending Time.]—Section 46 of the County Courts Act, R. S. O. 1887 c. 47, providing that the county court Judge shall stay the proceedings for not more than thirty days to afford an appellant time to give security to enable him to appeal, and Rule 836, providing that a county court appeal shall be set down for the first sittings which commence after the expiration of thirty days from the decithe expiration of thirty days from the decision complained of, are, to some extent, in conflict. Until, however, the proceedings in the court below have been sent up to the court of appeal by the county court Judge, as directed by s. 51 of the County Courts Act, the appeal is not lodged, and the court can neither dismiss it nor extend the time for setting it down for hearing. But the court can always extend the time, on application, where the appeal has been lodged, and will do so, as a matter of course, where there has been no wanton delay in giving the security within the time allowed by the county court Judge. Paul v. Rutlidge, 16 P. R. 140, commented on. Gilmor v. McPhail, 16 P. R. 151.

Directing Amendment in Court Below.]-In pleading the general issue by statute, any statute relied upon for the defence must be referred to in the margin as well as that by which such plea is allowed. where such a statute had been omitted in the county court, this court on appeal directed the court below to amend by inserting it, VanNatter v. Buffalo and Lake Huron R. W. Co., 27 U. C. R. 581.

District Court-Writ of Error.]-Where either party can appeal from a district court under s. 57 of 8 Vict. c. 13, the appellant must take that course and not by writ error. Thomas v. Hilmer, 4 U. C. R. 527.

Exhibits.]-Where exhibits used in the court below are not produced before the appellate court, the appeal will not be heard, if the attention of the court be called to the fact. Morse v. Thompson, 19 C. P. 94.

Grounds of Decision to be Certified. It is the duty of a county court Judge to certify to the court above on an appeal the grounds of his decision. The statute is not complied with by certifying the decision simply. Hayward v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 32 U. C. R. 392.

Habeas Corpus.]—Where a county Judge has jurisdiction in the premises, a superior court Judge will not in general, if at all, exercise a power of appeal by habeas corpus, which was never intended as a means of appealing from the discretion of a county Judge. Runciman v. Armstrong, 2 C. L. J. 165. See, also, In re Munn, 25 U. C. R. 24.

Insolvency Appeal.]-A petition of appeal from the decision of a county court Judge, acting in insolvency, need not set out all the evidence, documents, and materials used before the Judge. What is needed is, that either the petition, or the notice accompanying it, should shew to the opposite party the objection which is taken to the proceeding appealed from, and the materials to be used on the argument of the appeal. Hood v. Dodds, 19 Gr. 639,

An order in insolvency was made on the 24th day of December, and the fifth day there-after fell on a Sunday:—Held, that service of notice of appeal on the Monday following, was in time,

It is not necessary that the security to be given on an appeal in insolvency should be executed in presence of a Judge. Ib.

Insufficient Material.] - Observations on the manner of sending up cases from the county courts on appeal to the superior courts, and the insufficient materials furnished. Ar-thur v. Monk, 21 C. P. 76.

Irregularities in the Appeal—Procedure—Effect of Judge's Certificate.]—Semble, that until the bond has been filed with the clerk, he cannot refuse to enter the judgment. In this case the bond had been allowed and the opposite party notified thereof, but it was not deposited with the clerk until after the entry of judgment and issue of execution, though on the same day:—Held, 1, that such judgment was not a nullity; 2, that if irregular it should have been moved against in the court below. The proceedings in the cause having been improperly certified to this court, after the entry of such judgment the appeal was ordered to be struck out of the paper. Wood v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 16 C. P.

Where the bond allowed was for less than the verdict:—Held, insufficient; but this court will not go behind the certificate of the county Judge to inquire into the regularity of the prior proceedings. Pentland v. Heath, 24 U. C. R. 464, referred to. McLellan v. McClellan. 2 C. L. J. 297.

This court will not entertain objections to the hearing of county court appeals unless such objections appear or should properly appear upon the proceedings certified. They refused therefore to strike out an appeal entered, for objections to the form and amount of the bond, and to the sufficiency of the sure-ties and the affidavits of justification. Penton v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 28 U. C. R. 367.

Judgment Entered. |- The right to apmust be exercised before the entry of judgment in the cause. A bond having been allowed, and the appeal set down for argument, after judgment entered, the case was struck out upon motion. Duffil v. Dickenson, 14 C. P. 142.

New Evidence.]-The court refused to receive an affidavit, made by one of the witthe argument of the appeal. Bank of Upper Canada v. Tarrant, 19 U. C. R. 423.

New Evidence.]-Under Rule 498 the court may entertain an application to admit new evidence in a proper case on a county court appeal, notwithstanding R. S. O. 1897 5. S. J. S. S. S. Moder which such an application must be made before the county court, and this although the time for applying for a new trial had expired. Butler v. McMicken, 32 O. R. 422.

Nonsuit. |-- Where a nonsuit was granted in the county court, which this court thought could not be sustained, but the right of the plaintiff upon the evidence seemed very doubtful, the court on appeal ordered a new trial. O'Rourke v. Lee, 18 U. C. R. 609.

Pleadings to be Certified.]—Semble, that on an appeal the Judge should certify the original pleadings, &c., filed in the cause, Murphy v. Northern Railway Co., 13 C. P.

Reasons of Appeal. |- The grounds of appeal must be stated in the appeal books, independently of the objections set out in the rule nisi below. Severn v. Street Railway Co., Corbett v. Taylor, 23 U. C. R. 254.

Appeals will not be heard unless such grounds are entered on the appeal books when delivered. Eddy v. Ottawa City Passinger Railway Co., 31 U. C. R. 569.

Recovery on Bond.]—R., the plaintiff below, appealed, giving a bond to the defendant, W., to abide by the decision of this court of the cause, "and to pay all such sums of money and costs, as well as of the said suit as of the said appeal, as should be awarded and taxed to said W." The appeal having been dismissed, W. recovered judgment naving been dismissed, W. recovered judgment in the court below :—Held, that the bond com-pelled R. to pay W.'s costs of defence taxed there, not merely the costs of appeal. Wad-dell V. Robertson, 26 U. C. R. 376. Where the decision of the court appealed to in effect sustains a judgment of the county court, which disposes of the cause in the respondent's favour, or directs a proceeding or judgment which has that effect, the bond is a security for any debt or damages awarded, and for the costs of the cause as well as of the appeal. Ib.

Declaration on a bond conditioned to abide by the decision of the common pleas in a county court suit of W. v. M., appealed to that court, and to pay all moneys and costs, as well of the suit as of the appeal. Breach, as wen of the suit as of the appear. Breach, nonpayment of all sums of money and costs awarded and taxed to W. in the suit: that he recovered judgment in the county court against M. for $220 damages and $72 costs, which defendant had not paid. Plea, that no decision of the said cause was ever made by the common pleas nor any money or costs awarded or taxed by the court to the plainawarded of axed by the condition was only to abide by the decision of the common pleas, and if the appeal was not heard and the refusal to entertain it was a decision of that court, it should have been so alleged. The plaintiff replied, that the sums of $270 and $72 were within the true intent and meaning of the condition awarded and taxed to the plaintiff as and for his moneys and costs which M., within such intent and meaning, was liable to pay:—Held, bad, as tendering an issue on matter of law. Waddell v. McColl, 30 U. C. R. 260.

Reference Back to Assess Damages. The court of appeal directed a verdict to be entered for the plaintiff against a tavern-keeper for selling liquor to her husband after being forbidden by the plaintiff, his wife, to do so, but referred it back to the county court Judge to assess the damages, declining to fol-low the course adopted in Denny v. Montreal Telegraph Co., 3 A. R. 628. Austin v. Davis, 7 A. R. 478.

Security.]-As to the time in which security for an appeal might be tendered to the county court Judge under s. 11 of 12 Vict. c. 66. See Ford v. Crabb, 8 U. C. R. 274.

Setting Down Appeal — Former Practice.]—See Ruttan v. Vandusen, 10 U. C. R. 620: Simpson v. Great Western R. W. Co., 17 U. C. R. 57; Smith v. Foster, 11 C. P. 161.

Staying Proceedings.]-Held, that an order staying proceedings to enable a party to appeal, under 33 Vict. c. 7, s. 13 (O.), beyond the ten days limited therein, is void; but held, also, that an appeal may be brought without any order staying proceedings at any time before it has been precluded by the proceedings of the other party, as by the entry of final judgment. Where, therefore, the Judge had stayed proceedings for more than ten days to enable the defendant to appeal, but the plaintiff had not signed judgment, and defendant had given the security, a prohibition against proceeding further with the appeal was refused. In re Lawson v. Laidlaw, 7 P. R. 166.

Technical Objection.] - Semble, effect must be given to a valid legal objection on appeal, though justice has been done. Kelly v. Baldwin, 4 U. C. R. 143.

Time.]—Semble, that no time is now limited for appealing from the county courts. In re Tozer q. t. v. Preston, 23 U. C. R. 310.

Time.]-When an appeal from a county court is set down too late, the court has no power to hear it, nor has the court or the Judge below power to extend the time: Con. Rule 353 neither in terms nor by inference applying so as to enable the court to extend the time limited by the statute. McCarron v. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co., 35 C. L. J. 421, 19 C. L. T. Occ. N. 230.

Time.]—The County Courts Act, R. S. O. 1897 c. 55, s. 57, provides that "the appeal shall be set down for argument at the first sittings of a divisional court of the high court of justice which commences after the expira-tion of one month from the judgment, order, or decision complained of:"—Held, that the month begins to run from the date of the judicial opinion or decision, oral or written, pro-nounced or delivered, and the judgment or order founded upon it must be referred to that date. If such opinion or decision is not pronounced or delivered in open court, it cannot be said to be pronounced or delivered until the parties are notified of it. Quære, whether, after a judgment has been settled and entered, the Judge has power to resettle it. Fawkes v. Swayzie, 31 O. R. 256.

Time.]-The provisions of ss, 55 and 56 of the County Courts Act, limiting the time in which an appeal from the county court to the divisional court must be set down are peremptory, and there is no power to dispense with such provisions, or to enlarge the time for setting down the appeal. Where, there-fore, a Judge of a district court refused to certify the pleadings so as to enable an appeal to be set down for the divisional court, and an order was obtained from a Judge to allow such an appeal to be set down, such order was held to be of no avail, and the appeal was struck out. Reekie v. McNeil, 31 O. R. 444.

Time.]—Neither R. S. O. 1897 c. 55, s. 57, nor Con. Rule 795, prohibits a county court appeal being set down to be heard for a sitting of the divisional court, commencing with-in thirty days from the decision complained of. Lees v. Ottawa and New York R. W. Co., 31 O. R. 567.

Undue Length of Books.] - The unnecessary length of the appeal books remarked upon in this case. Phillips v. Findlay, 27 U. C. R. 32.

V. TRANSFER TO HIGH COURT.

Ascertained Amount.]-An action was brought in a county court to recover the amount of a broker's commission on the sale of land. The defendant disputed his liability, and the action was tried by a jury, who found that the plaintiff was entitled to recover $250. The amount was not ascertained otherwise than by the agreement of the parties, as found by the jury :- Held, that the amount was not by the Jury:—Treat, that the amount was more ascertained within the meaning of R. S. O. 1887 c. 47, s. 19, s.-s. 2, and the county court had no jurisdiction. Robb v. Murray, 16 A. R. 503, followed:—Held also, that the Act 54 Vict. c. 14 (O.), passed after the determination that the county court had no jurisdiction, was retrospective, and enabled the action to be transferred to the high court. Re McKay v. Martin, 21 O. R. 104.

Equitable Relief.]-If a county court has no jurisdiction over the plaintiff's cause of action, the proceedings in respect thereof in that court are all coram non judice, and the Judge of that court has no power over them; 38 of R. S. O. 1887 c. 47, applies only where the action in which the equitable question is raised is within the jurisdiction of the county Prohibition granted to restrain a Judge from transferring to the high court an action brought in a county court for an equitable cause of action. Re McGugan v. McGugan, 21 O. R. 289.

Judgment Before Transfer.]—An action cannot be removed under 54 Vict. c. 14 (O.), from a county court to the high court after verdict or judgment in the county court in favour of the plaintiff, leaving that verdict or judgment in force, with the right to either party to move against it in the high court. Re McKay v. Martin, 21 O. R. 104, considered. Sherk v. Evans. 22 A. R. 242.

Removal to Court of Chancery.]suit in the county court is only removable into this court, under s. 57 of the County Courts Act (C. S. U. C. c. 15), where the county court has jurisdiction in the matter, but the "nature of the claim renders it a proper case to be withdrawn from the jurisdiction of the county court, and disposed of in the court of chancery." Martin v. Mitchell, the court of chancery."

Scale of Costs of an Action Transferred from County Court to High Court. |-The provisions of Rule 1219 are applicable to an action transferred from a anty court to the high court by virtue of 54 Vict. c. 14 (O.), and the costs of the proceedings after the transfer should be taxed upon the lower scale where the case falls within s.s. 4 of the Rule, by reason of the plaintif seeking equitable relief, and the subject matter involved not exceeding $200. Struthers v. Green, 14 P. R. 486.

COUNTY CROWN ATTORNEY AND CLERK OF THE PEACE.

Advising Jury.]-As to the propriety of a county attorney entering the jury room and advising coroner's jury as to the language of their verdict. See Regina v. Sanderson, 15

Appointment.] — In 1858 the plaintiff as appointed county attorney for W. In 1862, the person who had for many years been clerk of the peace for that county appointed to succeed him in such office. C. S. T. C. c. 106, s. 7, enacts that any clerk of the peace appointed after that Act "shall be ex officio county attorney for the county of which he is clerk of the peace:"—Held, that defendant upon his appointment as clerk of the peace became also county attorney, although the plaintiff's commission had been not otherwise revoked, and he had received no notice of any change in his position. Robertson v. Freeman, 22 U. C. R. 298.

Audit.] - The magistrates in quarter sessions, not the county auditors, are to audit the accounts of the clerk before payment, and the treasurer should pay them upon the chairman's order. In re Poussett and County of Lambton, 22 U. C. R. 80.

See, also, In re Sheriff of Lincoln, 34 U. C.

County of York.]—Semble, that under the Jury Act, the Municipal Act, and the Act separating the city from the counties, the duty of selecting and drafting jurors for the city, now belongs to the clerk of the recorder's court, and not to the clerk of the peace for the counties. In re McNab and Daly, 22 U. C. R. 170.

County of York.]—The county attorney of York, though not clerk of the peace, is an officer coming within R. S. O. 1877 c. 85, whose expenses form part of the expenses of the administration of criminal justice. In re Fenton, 31 C. P. 31.

Fees.]—The payment of certain fees by a district council in accounts rendered for services in former years, will not prevent their disputing the charges in subsequent years. Askin v. London District Council, 1 U. C. R.

The clerk of the peace cannot charge fees for any service for which no fee is given by 43 Geo. III. c. 11, or otherwise. Ib.

If he accept a salary in lieu of all fees, he is entitled only to such salary. Ib.

A municipal council, in 1850, assigned to a clerk of the peace a fixed salary for that year, "in lieu of all fees:"—Held, (the Jury Act 13 & 14 Vict. c. 55, having been subse-quently passed,) that he could still claim the fees allowed by the status for proposition. fees allowed by the statute for preparing the jury books for the following year. Pringle v. McDonald, 10 U. C. R. 254.

The clerk of the peace is not entitled to any fee from the parties to a cause for striking a special jury. Hooker v. Gurnett, 16 U. C. R. 180.

In this case the question was whether certain fees, classified in schedules in a special case submitted, could legally be claimed, and how far the county having paid them during several years upon accounts duly audited and passed, could recover back such as the clerk was not entitled to. Besides deciding as to the different charges the following general principles were laid down: Where the clerk, at the request of the justices or municipality, or of the county auditors, renders services which he is not bound to render, and for which no fee is allowed, though he might be unable to sue for his charges, yet, when they have been duly audited and paid under no misunderstanding, the municipality cannot recover them back; and the same rule is applicable to disbursements, as for stationery, office furniture, &c. County of Lambton v. Pous-sett, 21 U. C. R. 472. C. S. U. C. c. 119, making it penal in the clerk to receive more than the logally established fee for services performed by him, does not apply to services or disburse-ments not properly belonging to his office; but the enactment is not confined to fees demanded of individuals for public services, nor does the penalty imposed interfere with the right to reclaim fees received contrary to the Act. Ib.

Where the fees are within that Act, and have been paid, they may be recovered back as money illegally received, though his accounts containing them have been audited accounts containing them have been address and passed. Ib.

Under C. S. U. C. c. 120, the clerks of the peace and other officers are not to make out accounts against the government in the first instance, but against the county, who are to be paid or reimbursed by government after proper audit. Ib.

The schedule appended to that Act was not intended to embrace all the expenses of criminal justice chargeable against the government, but only to remove all doubt as to those specified. Ib.

The clerk under C. S. U. C. c. 124, and the tariff of 1862, No. 57, is entitled only to $1 for each quarterly return of convictions made by him to the minister of finance, not to $1 for the list of convictions sent to him by each justice included in such return. In re Poussett, 22 U. C. R. 412.

Drafting the panel from the jury list under C. S. U. C. c. 78, is not a special session of the peace, and the clerk therefore is not en-titled to charge for it under No. 66 of the tariff. 1b.

The clerk is required by C. S. U. C. cc. 19, 120, to record and notify to the government and to the clerks of each division court only the acts of the quarter sessions with regard to the limits of the different divisions, not the orders of the Judge as to the times and places of holding the courts; and he is not entitled therefore under the tariff, Nos. 38 to 43 inclusive, to charge for such last mentioned orders.

The table of fees established and promulgated by the courts contains all the services for which clerks are entitled to charge, in addition to such as are specially authorized and provided for by any statute. No local tariff or user in particular counties can give any additional right. In re Dartnell, 26 U. C. R. 439.

C. R. 430. Where the quarter sessions have audited the account of such clerk, this court will not interfere by mandamus to compel the allowance of particular items. Ib.

Where the account of the county attorney of York, for the quarter ending 31st December, 1879, for expenses connected with the administration of criminal justice, was audited by the county board of audit, and paid, but certain of the items were disallowed by the provincial treasurer as not payable by the Crown out of the consolidated revenue fund, not being contained in the schedule, and the board of audit, therefore, in auditing the county attorney's account for a subsequent quarter, deducted therefrom the amount of said disallowed items, a mandamus was granted to the board to rescind their order for such deduction. In re Fenton, 31 C. P. 31.

Under an order in council the county attorney is entitled to $4 on receiving and examining all informations, &c., connected with criminal charges for the court of assize, &c., upon the certificate of the crown counsel that such fee should be allowed. One C. on being brought before the county Judge on twenty-five charges of larceny, having elected to be tried by a jury, was tried at the ensuing assizes, and convicted on three of them; but the remaining twenty-two cases were not tried. The plaintiff, a county attorney, obtrined the Crown counsel's certificate for and charged a fee of $4 in each o, the twenty-five cases, which was passed by the board of audit, and paid by the county treasurer, but upon the twenty-two untried cases being disallowed by the provincial treasurer and his decision communicated to the board they deducted the amount from a subsequent account :-Held, that a mandamus would not lie to the board of audit, to rescind their order, the ruling of the provincial treasurer being a good reason for deducting the amount, which was a matter for their discretion under R. S. O. 1877 c. 85. In re Stanton, 3 O. R. 86.

A fee of fifty cents is allowed to the county attorney for attendance in the county Judge's criminal courts, and making the necessary entries for each prisoner not consenting to be tried summarily. The plaintiff charged fifty cents for actual attendances and making the necessary entries in each of the twenty-five charges preferred against C., which were scarartely read over to him and his election taken thereon. The three cases only on which the prisoner was actually tried were allowed by the board of audit, on the ruling of the provincial treasurer:—Held, that for the same reasons as above, a mandamus would not lie to the board of audit to allow the fee in lie to the board of the other cases, it is to the other cases, it is to the other cases, it is to the other case it is to the other cases, it is to the other cases, it is to the other cases of the other

&c. The tariff allows $1 "for each certificate required to be entered in the jurors' book to verify the same:"—Held, that these fees could not be allowed, and that a mandamus would not lie. Ib.

Garnishing Salary.] — See Harvey v. Stanton, 13 C. L. J. 108.

Notice of Action.1—See McDougall v. Peterson, 40 U. C. R. 95.

Office Accommodation.]—A county attorney and clerk of the pence may maintain an action against the corporation of the county for brench of duty in not providing necessary and proper accommodation for him as such officer, as required by 29 & 30 Vict. c. 51, s. 419, and may recover, by way of damages in such action, rent paid by him to procure such accommodation. Lees v. County of Carleton, 33 U. C. R. 409.

damages in such account from parts by min of procure such accommodation. Less v. County of Carleton, 33; U. C. R. 409.

The court house in which plaintiff previously had his office was burned, and the county council informally offered him certain rooms in another building leased by them. The plaintiff considering them insufficient, as in fact they were, hired others at $11 per month; and having sent in his bill to the council for seventeen months, they passed a resolution to pay him $835.50 (being one-half) in full of his claim, which sum he afterwards received, and signed the receipt and the cheque therefor, which purported to be in accordance with the resolution:—Held, that he was bound by such settlement, and could not recover more in respect of the seventeen months' rent; but that he might recover the full rent paid by him subsequent to the resolution. Ib.

Payment of Fees.]—Where the treasurer of the district council refused to pay the account of the clerk of the peace for certain services, and returned to a mandamus nisi that such charges were not shewn by the clerk of the peace to be connected with the administration of justice, or to have been specifically provided for by law, so as to render it necessary that they should be audited by the district council; and returned further, that there were no funds in his hands out of which he could pay those charges; the return was allowed. Clerk of the Peace v. Western District Municipal Council, 1 U. C. R. 162.

Persons Liable for Fees.]—It was decided in County of Lambton v, Pousett, 21 U. C. R. 472, that the clerk is not to look to the government for the expenses payable by them under C. S. U. C. c. 120, but to the county, who are to be reimbursed by the government. Where the clerk applied to the county auditors instead of to the sessions, and they refused on the ground that he should be paid by the government in the first instance, both parties being wrong, the court discharged without costs a rule for a mandamus calling upon the county to pay. In re Poussett and County of Lambton, 22 U. C. R. S0.

Practising Law—Certificate.]—A county attorney practising law only so far as required by that office, need not take out a certificate. Re Coleman, 33 U. C. R. 51.

COURTS.

Appellate Jurisdiction.] - Where the court of common pleas exercises an appellate jurisdiction, it will decide according to its own view of the law, notwithstanding an adverse decision in the Queen's bench. Mc-Innes v. Haight, 8 L. J. 20.

British Columbia Court.] — The supreme court of British Columbia is clothed with all the powers and jurisdiction, civil and criminal, necessary or essential to the full and perfect administration of justice, civil full and perfect administration of pastee, violent or criminal, in the province; powers as full and ample as those known to the common law and possessed by the superior courts of England. In re Sproule, 12 S. C. R. 140. England.

Chamber Motion at Assizes. |-There is nothing to prevent a Judge sitting at the assizes hearing a chamber motion, if he is disposed, for the purpose, to treat the court room as his chambers. Sarnia Agricultural Implement Manufacturing Co. v. Perdue, 11 P. R. 224.

Commission of Assize.]-As to the power of the Crown to issue commissions to hold courts of over and terminer and assize. See Regina v. Amer, 42 U. C. R. 391.

Conflicting Decisions.] - When the Queen's bench and common pleas are at issue on the construction of an Act of Parliament, the duty of a county Judge is to decide according to his own view of the law. McInnes v. Benedict, S L. J. 22.

Where defendant, besides denying plain-tiff's title, claimed title under a deed from the plaintiff to M. and under M.:—Held, that such notice did not relieve the plaintiff from proof of title. A contrary opinion had prevailed in this court, in opposition to the view taken by the common pleas, but each of the Judges now composing the Queen's bench, had, while sitting in the other court, concurred in their decisions:—Held, therefore, that the difference of opinion should no longer continue; and the cases in this court continue; and the cases in this court—Brandon v. Cawthorne, 19 U. C. R. 368, and Cartwright v. McPherson, 20 U. C. R. 251—were overruled. McGee v. McLaughlin, 23 U. C. R. 90.

Where the courts of chancery and common pleas had given different judgments upon the same point, the court of Queen's benca considered the question and expressed their own opinion. Barber v. Maughan, 42 U. C.

Where the courts of Queen's bench and common pleas had given opposing judgments on the same question, this court, on affirming one of those judgments, dismissed the appeal without costs. Sexton v. Paxton, 2 E. & A.

Contempt-Judge in Vacation.]-Semble, that a Judge sitting out of term under the A. 13. Act, does not represent the full court so as to enable him to punish for a contempt of such court. Regina v. Wilkinson, Re Brown, 41 U. C. R. 47.

Contempt or Misdemeanour.] — Held, that the jurisdiction given to the Legislature by R. S. O. 1877 c. 12, ss. 45 to 48, to punish for a contempt does not oust the jurisdiction of the courts where the offence is of a criminal character, but that the same act may be in one aspect a contempt of the Legislature, and in another aspect a misdemeanour. Regina v. Bunting, 7 O. R. 524.

Delaying Judgment to Allow Legislation. | - The court delayed pronouncing judgment in order to enable Parliament, if they should think proper, to legalize certain orders of sessions on which large expenditure has been incurred. Rex v. Justices of New-

See, Dra. 294.
See, also, Forester and Township of Ross, 24 U. C. R. 588.

Disqualification of Judge - Sitting pro Formâ.]—Three of the Judges in appeal being members of the church society, they held themselves disqualified to sit as Judges, except ex necessitate, though no objection to except ex necessitate, though no objection to their sitting was taken at the bar; but there not being a quorum without them, they heard the case with the other Judges, in order that a judgment, legal in point of form, might be given by the court. Boulton v. Church Society, 15 Gr. 450.

Disqualification of Judge.] — Where a reference was made to a local master who had, prior to his appointment, been the counsel of one of the litigants, neither party objecting to his taking the reference, and on the contrary the master certified that he acted on the reference at the pressing instance of both parties, the court held that the other party, against whom the master reported, could not raise that objection on an appeal from the report, having taken the chance of the master finding in his favour. Cotter v. Cotter, 21 Gr.

English Decisions.] — We are not to adopt as a rule the decisions of the Queen's bench in matters of practice, more than those of the exchequer or common pleas, but should adopt whichever will be most convenient and suitable for ourselves. Hawkins v. Paterson, 3 P. R. 254.

The court of chancery in this country having frequently held constructive notice of an unregistered interest to be insufficient, where such unregistered interest was founded on an instrument capable of registration, and the want of actual notice was not wilful or fraudulent, this rule will continue to be acted on until the different doctrine lately held in England and Ireland, is adopted in appeal, either in England or here. Moore v. Bank of British North America, 15 Gr. 308.

If there be a series of decisions in this country leading one way, they should be followed in preference to a single decision of an English court, especially where in it there was a difference of opinion. Scott v. Reikie, 15 C. P. 200.

The decision of Humberstone v. Henderson, 3 P. R. 40, being upon a point of practice, was adhered to, though placing a construction on our statute different from that put upon substantially similar language in the English Act. Coulson v. O'Connell, 29 C. P. 341.

When a decision of the court of appeal in England is at variance with a decision of the court of appeal of this Province, the latter should be followed here, as the former court is not the court of ultimate appeal for the Province. Sutton v. Sutton, 22 Ch. D. 511, not followed. Macdonald v. McDonald, 11 O. R. 187. See McDonald v. Elliott, 12 O. R. 98.

Equal Division of Judges.]—Observations upon the effect of a decision where the court is equally divided. Clarkson v. Attorney-General of Canada, 16 A. R. 202, See In re Hall, 8 A. R. 135; Booth v. Ratte, 21 S. C. R. 637.

False Verdict.] — 16 Car. I. c. 10, was inclaimed only to apply to the court of star chamber and other courts therein mentioned, and not to such tribunals as the recorder's court for the city of Hamilton. Therefore an action against the mayor, acting as president of such court, charging that he falsely and knowingly caused a verdict of guilty to be recorded against the defendant on his trial for larceny, and claiming to recover therefor the penalty of £500 stg., imposed by the 6th clause of the statute, was held not sustainable, and, at all events, the record, being unreversed, would have protected the defendant. Stark v. Ford, 11 U. C. R. 363.

Following Decision.] — The Judge, though having an opinion at variance with a decision in chambers, refused to hold contrary thereto until the practice was settled by the court. Clark v, Galbraith, 10 L. J. 296.

Where the construction of a will had been determined by the common pleas, this court held it to be settled by their decision, and conformed to it, without expressing any opinion on the question raised. Scouler v. Scouler, 19 17. C. R. 1006.

Another action had been brought by the plaintiff in the common pleas against a different company, in which the pleadings and terms of the policy were similar, and this court conformed to the decision in that court, without entering into a consideration of the questions raised. Meagher v. Etna Ins. U. C., 19 U. C. R. 330.

Held, that whatever might be the individualinginion of the present members of the court, and however inclined to take the opposite view, they were bound by the judgment previously pronounced, as to the meaning of the contract sued upon, until its reversal. Thomson v. Leach, 20 C. P. 241.

The practice of adopting and following the judgments of courts of co-ordinate jurisdiction has prevailed to a greater extent in our courts than it ever has in England. Geraldi v, Provincial Ins. Co., 29 C. P. 321.

The contract declared on being for an assimilation of rates, and a division of the net profits on certain classes of traffic, between certain points, was objected to as illegal and contrary to public policy. The question having given rise to great difference of opinion in England, the court followed the latest decision—Hare v. London and North Western R, W, Co., 30 L. J. 517—and upheld the contract. Great Western R. W. Co. v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 25 U. C. R. 37.

Mandamus to Judicial Officer.]—It was contended in this case that the revising officer, under the Electoral Franchise Act, 48 & 49 Vict.

Electoral Franchise Act, interfered with civil rights in this Province, and having made no provision for a court to superintend the conduct of the officials appointed under that Act, and following Valin v. Langlois, 3 S. C. R. 1, that until such court is created, the provincial courts, by virtue of their inherent jurisdiction, have a right to superintend the discharge of their duties by any inferior officer or tribunal. Re Simmons and Dalton, 12 O. R. 505.

Opinions in Case Stated.]—Quere, as to the propriety of asking the court to pronounce an opinion as to the construction of a contract for parliamentary printing, and whether an action would lie thereon against the postmaster-general. Taylor v. Campbell, 33 U. C. R. 204.

The court should not be asked, upon a case stated without pleadings, to answer questions which could not be raised upon proper pleadings. Ib.

Right of Accused to be Heard.]— Right of persons accused to be heard before decision. See Regina v. College of Physicians, 44 U. C. R. 146.

Superior Court Judgment.] — Held, that an inferior court has no jurisdiction to entertain an action brought upon the judgment of a superior court. Re Eberts v. Brooke, 10 P. R. 257. Reversed, S. C., 11 P. R. 296.

I. JURISDICTION.

Cancellation of Bond — Interlocatory Orders,] — Held, reversing 11 P. R. 9, that the plaintiff was not entitled to have delivered out to him for cancellation a bond for security for costs of the action, after judgment in his favour by the Queen's bench diviment in his favour by the Queen's bench divi-sional court, before the time for appealing to this coart had elapsed, and while an appeal was actually pending. The order of the court below even if interlocutory, was appealable under the language of the Court of Appeal Act, and as the penalty of the bond was $1900, and the defendants' costs exceeded that amount, the sum in controversy was sufficient to warrant an appeal, and it could not be said that it was a matter so entirely in the discretion of the court below, that this peal conferred by the Judicature Act con-sidered:—Quære, whether the order in appeal was interlocutory :- Quære, whether ss. 33 and 34 O. J. Act, apply to appeals from inter-locutory orders. Hately v. Merchants' Deslocutory orders. Hately patch Co., 12 A. R. 640.

See also Boultbee v. Cochran, 17 P. R. 9.

Chamber Order.]—Appeal to court of appeal, from order of Judge in chambers, affirming order of master to strike out jury notice, refused. Adamson v. Adamson, 12 P.

Divisional Court.]-An appeal lies from an order of a divisional court affirming an order setting aside a judgment for default of appearance. Schroeder v. Rooney, 11 A.

Divisional Court.] - Where the Judge presiding at the trial of an action directs it to stand over to have parties added, and both parties apply to a divisional court to set aside this direction and, by consent and without prejudice to the right of appeal, ask the divisional court to hear the case on the merits, either party may, without leave, appeal to the court of appeal for Ontario from the judgment of the divisional court. Payne v. Caughell, 24 A. R. 556.

Divisional Court Affirming Chamber Order—Leave to Appeal.]—An appeal lies to the court of appeal from an order of a divisional court dismissing an appeal from an order of a Judge in chambers, dismissing an appeal from an order of the master in chamappeal from an order of the master in chambers, dismissing a motion to set aside judgment by default of defence in an action for the recovery of land; but only upon leave to appeal being obtained. Construction of ss. 72 and 73 (as amended) of the Judicature Act. 1835. And leave to appeal was granted, where the omission to file the defence was a mere slip of the solicitor; the application for relief was made promptly; and it appeared that in a previous action the court had stayed proceedings under the power of sale contained in the mortgage upon which this action was brought, and had required an action of ejectment to be brought. Terms of payment of costs and security for costs imposed.

Bourne v. O'Donohoe, 17 P. R. 274.

Court - County Divisional Appeal.]-No appeal lies, with or without leave, to the court of appeal, from the order of a divisional court made on appeal from an order in the county court discharging the defendant from the custody of his bail. Mc-Veain v. Ridler, 17 P. R. 353.

Divisional Court.]-An appeal does not lie without special leave from an order of a divisional court varying an order in chambers as to a solicitor's lien. Walker v. Gurney-Tilden Co., 18 P. R. 471.

Dominion Controverted Ziection.] -Held, that an appeal does not lie to the court of appeal from a judgment of the court of common pleas overruling a preliminary objection as to the jurisdiction of the court to try a controverted election for the Dominion. In re Niagara Election, 4 A. R. 407.

Expropriation—Award.]—Under s. 161 of the Dominion Railway Act, 51 Vict. c. 29 (D.), an appeal lies in this Province by either from an award of compensation exceeding $400 either to the court of appeal or to the high court of justice, but if an appeal is taken to the latter tribunal, no further appeal lies by either party to the court of appeal.

Birely v. Toronto, Hamilton and Buffalo R.

Habeas Corpus.]-An appeal does not lie to the court of appeal from a decision of a Judge sitting for the court out of term, on a motion to discharge a prisoner on habeas corpus, under either 29 & 30 Vict. c. 45, or R. S. O. 1877 c. 38, s. 18. In re Boucher, 4 A. R. 191.

Indictment for Nuisance.] - The defendants having been convicted on an inrenams having been convicted on an indicated for a misance, which had been removed into the Queen's bench division by certiforari, moved for a new trial, which was refused:—Lield, that no appeal would lie to refused:—Iteld, that no appear would be to this court from the judgment refusing the new trial, and that it could make no differ-ence that the indictment had been removed by certicarti, and tried on the civil side. Regina v. Eli, 13 A. R. 526; Regina v. Laliberté, 1 S. C. R. 117, referred to. Regina v. City of London, 15 A. R. 414.

Interpleader.]—The decision of a Judge of the high court of justice (which by s. 28 of the O. J. Act 44 Vict. c. 5, is the decision of the court) in an interpleader issue to try of the court) in an interpretate issue to the title to property taken under execution on a final judgment in the suit on which it is issued, is not an interlocutory order within the meaning of that expression in s. 35 of the O. J. Act, or if it is, it is such an order as was appealable before the passing of that Act, and in either case it is appealable now. Hovey v. Whiting, 14 S. C. R. 515; 12 A. R. 119.

Judge Directing Reference. —The objection that the Judge at the trial should himself have decided the issue as to failure of consideration, instead of directing an inquiry before the master, is not one that the court will entertain. Featherstone v. VanAllen, 12 A.

Order Extending Time to Appeal.]—
Held, that an appeal will not lie from an order of a Judge of the court of appeal extending the time for appealing to the supreme court of Canada. Neilt v. Travellers' Ins. Co., 9 A. R. 54.

Order for Discharge of Mortgage.]-An order was made by a Judge sitting in court, directing the execution by the defendants (mortgagees) of a reconveyance or discharge, directed by a previous judgment, or in default for a sequestration:—Held, that an appeal to the court of appeal lay without leave, whether the order was to be regarded as interlocutory or not. Semble, that such an order is not in its nature interlocutory. Bull North British Canadian Investment Co., 12 P. R. 284.

Order Quashing Conviction.)—The defendant, who was convicted by two justices under the Canada Temperance Act, removed the conviction by certiorar, and the same was quashed 110 O. R. 727). When the same was the court to har the appeal, and the same was therefore quashed, with costs, to be paid by the informant. Regina v. Eli, 13 A. R.

Order Quashing Conviction—Constitutional Question—Certificate of Attorney-General.]—The Attorney-General certified his opinion, pursuant to s. 3 of R. S. O. 1897
c. 91, that the decision of the high court quashing a conviction made under an Outario statute involved a question on the construction of the British North America Act, and an appeal from such decision was brought on in the regular way; but, as it plainly appeared to the court of appeal that the decision involved no such question, and the certificate of the Attorney-General appeared to have been granted inadvertently, in consequence of an authentic copy of the reasons for the judgment of the court below not having been brought before him, the appeal was quashed, and with costs to be paid by the prosecutor, the appellant, whose proceeding was in the nature of a qui tam action. Regina v. Reid, 26 A. R. 181.

Order Quashing Conviction.]—No appeal lies to the court of appeal for Ontario from an order of a divisional court quashing a conviction by a police magistrate for breach of a municipal by-law. Regina v. Cushing, 26 A. R. 248.

Fractice Court.]—Held, that an appeal lies from a judgment of the practice court to the court of appeal on a rule to set aside an award. Carroll v. Stratford, 12 C. L. J. 309.

Preliminary Issue—Divisional Court.]—An appeal lies to the court of appeal, without leave, from the judgment upon the trial of a preliminary issue directed by an order in chambers; but fence is necessary for an appeal from an order of a divisional court affirming an order in chambers, where the appellant is the same party who appealed to the divisional court, and the order appealed from was pronounced after, although the appeal was taken and heard before, the coming into force of the Act of 1895. Construction of ss. 72 and 73 (as amended) of the Judicature Act, 1895. Graham v. Temperance Life Assurance Company, 17 P. R. 271.

Weight of Evidence.]—Held, that there is no appeal to this court where a verdict has been pronounced in the Queen's bench or common pleas under 33 Vict. c. 7, s. 6, reversing the verdict of the Judge at the trail, upon the weight of evidence. Trumpour v. Saylor, 1 A, R, 100

Held, also, that s. 44 of the A. J. Act, 1873, only confers a right of appeal against judgments pronounced under the authority of that Act. Ib.

Winding-up.]—Appeal from an order of a Judge of the high court, for the winding up of a company under 45 Vict. c. 23 (D.). See Re Union Fire Insurance Co., 13 A. R. 268. S. C. sub nom. Shoolbred v. Union Fire Ins. Co., 14 S. C. R. 624.

II. PRACTICE AND PROCEDURE.

1. Bond and Security.

Allowance of Bond.]--Read v. Smith, 2 Ch. Ch. 326; Heenan v. Dewar, 3 Ch. Ch.

Damages - Vendor and Purchaser.]-In winding-up proceedings a property was sold by tender under the power of sale in a mortgage with the consent of the liquidator, and an appeal by an unsuccessful tenderer to a Judge from the report confirming the sale was dismissed, whereupon a further appeal to the court of appeal was allowed upon the appellant giving security by bond to the successful tenderer to answer the damages which the latter as purchaser might sustain by being prejudicially affected in his purchase, by the appeal allowed, in case such appeal should fail, Possession was not taken by the purchaser until after the failure of the appeal. The conditions of sale provided that possession would be given upon payment of the balance of the purchase money within a time fixed, but the money was not paid, nor did it appear that it had been set aside for that purpose, nor was any provision made in the conditions as to the payment of interest or taxes:
Held, that under the bond the purchaser was not entitled to payments made by him for care of the property or taxes, nor was he entitled to interest on the purchase money, or to damages for deterioration of the property. Re Alger and Sarnia Oil Co., 23 O. R. 583.

Disallowance of Bond — Refiling without Consent of Sureties] — A bond was filed by the defendant for the purpose of an appeal to the court of appeal. Leave to appeal was, however, necessary, and had not been obtained before filing the bond, which was, therefore, on the 4th April, 1891, disallowed. Leave to appeal was afterwards obtained, and the same bond was on the 18th September, 1891, refiled without the consent of the sureties, and was again disallowed:—Held, rightly so; for the sureties might object that the bond had been improperly used by the defendant; and the respondent was entitled to a security free from any objections of this nature. The plaintiff objected to the bond on the ground of the insufficiency of one of discussive and the sworn statements of such surety and other action:—Held, that such its were admissible against the defendant, who was putting forward the surety as a person of substance. Jones v. Macdonald, 4 P. R. 353.

Discontinuance of Appeal.)—The condition of an appeal bond in which the defendant was a surety was that the appellant would effectually prosecute his appeal, and pay such costs and damages as might be awarded in case the judgment appealed from was affirmed. The appealnut discontinued the appeal pursuant to R. S. O. 1877 c. 35, s. 41, which enacts that "thereupon the respondent shall at once be entitled to the costs of and occasioned by the proceedings in appeal, and may either sign judgment for such costs or obtain an order for their payment in the court below, and may take all further proceedings in that court as if no appeal had been brought." The registrar, to whom the matter was referred, assessed the damages of the respondent's costs of opposing the appeal:—Held, that the judgment had been affirmed by the discontinuance, and that these costs had been awarded to the respondent by virtue of s. 41:—Quere, as to the meaning of the expression "effectually prosecute." Hughes v. Boyle, 5 O. R. 395.

Form of Bond.]—The bond and the affidavits of execution and justification were all entitled in the name of the original plaintiffs, one of whom had died, and both were named as obligees in the bond:—Held, irregular. McFarlane v, Dickson, 1 Ch. Ch. 377.

The bond should be styled in the court of error and appeal. The style of the cause in the court below, if adopted, should be the style in full, and the parties should be described as they become appellants and respondents, but they may be given in the same order as in the style of the original cause. Werry, Matheson, 2 Ch. Ch. 73.

An appeal bond is properly intituled in the cause in the court below. Campbell v. Royal Canadian Bank, 6 P. R. 43.

In the case of bonds for carrying a case to the court of appeal, an affidavit of justification is necessary. Donelly v. Jones, 4 Ch. Ch. 48.

Injunction.]—See McLaren v. Caldwell, 29 Gr. 438.

Insolvency of Surety.]—An application for further security for costs of appeal, on the ground of the insolvency of one or more of the sureties, should be made to the court appealed from. Lumsden v. Davis, 10 P. R. 10.

Where one of the sureties in a bond given to secure the costs in the court below became worthless:—Held, that the respondent was entitled to a new one. Gage v. Canada Publishing Co., 10 P. R. 169; Saunders v. Furnigil, 2 Ch. Ch. 159.

Mechanics' Lien Act. |—Rule 826 is applicable to an appeal under s. 39 (2) of the Mechanics' Lien Act. R. S. O. 1897, c. 153, by the respondent in the court below from the order of a divisional court reversing the judgment upon the trial of a mechanic's lieu action, where the amount in question is more than $100, and not more than $200; and therefore security for the costs of such an appeal must be given, unless otherwise ordered, Sherlock v. Powell, 18 P. R. 312.

Motion to Set Aside Bond.]—Affidavits in opposition to the affidavit of justification may be read on a motion to set aside a bond. Comphell v., Royal Canadian Bank, 6 P. R. 43; and the papers and affidavits used on the motion should be initiuled in the court below. Demison, v. Denison, 4 C. L. J. 43.

Objection to Bond.]—The court of appeal will not entertain an objection to the security upon the appeal given in the county court appealed from. Baby v. Ross, 14 P. R. 440.

Ontario Winding-up Act.]—An appeal under the Act respecting the winding-up of joint-stock companies, 41 Vict. c. 5, s. 27 (O.), cannot be entertained when security has not been given within eight days from the rendering of the final order or judgment appealed from. Re Union Fire Ins. Co., 7 A. R. 783.

Where a bond good in form, with proper sureties, was filed with the clerk of the county court on the last of the eight days, though not allowed by the Judge:—Held, to be within the words "given security before a Judge." and a sufficient complience with the Act, though a person thus filing a bond without allowance, risks being deprived of his right of appeal in the event of the bond proving defective. Ib.

Order Allowing Payment in.]—An order allowing $400 to be paid into court by the appellant, in lieu of a bond, will be granted ex parte. Comolby v. O'Reilly, 8. P. R. 159. And money may be paid in in substitution for a bond previously given. Townships of Chatham and Dover East v. Eric and Huron R. W. Co., 7 P. R. 309.

Parties to Bond—Non-execution by some of the Parties, 1—An appeal bond for the purpose of an appeal by the plaintiffs to the court of appeal was drawn up with the names of all the plaintiffs as parties thereto, and was executed by the sureties and some of the plaintiffs in that form, and an order was afterwards obtained dispensing with the execution of the bond by the other plaintiffs, except two, who had withdrawn from the appeal. The bond was also defective in the condition:—Held, that the order should have been obtained before the execution of the bond, and that only those of the appellants actually executing it should have been manuel as parties to it; and the bond was set aside. Grothe v. Pearce, 15 P. R. 195.

Payment into Court.]—An application for costs of an appeal from a certificate of title under the Quieting Titles Act having been granted by the referee ex parte, and it not having been brought to his notice that the appeal was as to two separate parcels of land, one claimed by a husband and wife and the other by the husband alone; it was held that the order was bad; as these facts should have been made known to the referee and the order under such circumstances made upon notice. Re Howland, 4 Ch. Ch. 16.

Payment in for Specific Purpose.]—Where money has been paid into court for a specific purpose, and that purpose has been answered in favour of the party paying it in, it will be paid out to that party. McLaren v. Calduccil, 9 P. R. 118.

Poverty of Appellants.)—Upon an appeal by the defendants to the court of appeal from an order of a divisional court reversing the judgment at the trial and ordering judgment to the entered for the plaintiffs for possession of land with costs:—Held, that the fact that the appellants had no means or money or resources other than the land in question, and were unable to procure sureties, was not a ground for dispensing with security for costs of the appeal. Until it is reversed, there is a presumption in favour of the correctness of every judgment of the court of competent jurisdiction. If the defendants had a lien on the land for a sum exceeding $400 for improvements made by them, in the belief that the land was their own, security might be dispensed with or the lien charged by way of security. But in this case the plaintiffs would be entitled to mesne profits as against the improvements, and the defendants had mortgaged the land for the money laid out, and the lien, if any, was the mortgage's. Thurcsson v, Thurcsson, 18 P. R. 414.

Privy Council Appeal.) — Where the plaintiffs were appealing to the privy council from a judgment of the court of appeal dismissing with costs an appeal from the judgment of the Queen's bench division in favour of the defendants with costs, and had given security in $2,000, as required in s. 2 of R. S. O. 1887 c. 41:—Held, that the order of a Judge of the court of appeal, under s. 5 allowing the security should not have stayed the proceedings in the action, and so much of the order as related to the stay should be re-scinded: — Held, also, that the plaintiffs not having given security to stay execution for the costs in the courts below, and the stay being removed, if they now desired to have execution for such costs stayed, they should give security therefor as provided by Rule 804, which is made applicable by s. 4 of the Act:— Held, also, that if an order for payment out of the high court of money therein, awaiting the result of the litigation, was "execution" within the meaning of s. 3, it was stayed by the allowance of the security, and required no order; if it was not execution, a Judge of the court of appeal had no jurisdiction to stay proceedings in the court below; and it was for the high court to determine whether such an order was "execution," and if not, whether the money should be paid out. McMaster v. Radford, 16 P. R. 20.

Reversal of Judgment - Recovery of Payments, —On appeal to the court of appeal, from the judgment of the court of Queen's bench in favour of one P. against the Citizens' Insurance Company, the company paid into court a sum of money as security for the amount of the judgment, as well as for in-terest and costs, and also for the costs of the appeal. The appeal was dismissed with costs, and the company then appealed to the su-preme court, and paid a further sum into court as security for the costs of such appeal. The supreme court dismissed the appeal with The supreme court dismissed the appeal with costs. A Judge's order was then obtained, under which the moneys were paid out of court to G, and M., to whom P, had assigned The company afterwards appealed to them. the privy council, when the appeal was allowed and the judgment of the supreme court reversed. On an action brought therefor :-Held, that the company was entitled to recover back the moneys so paid out of court on the Judge's order with interest thereon from that payment at six per cent.; and also all sums paid for costs, but without interest. Citizens' Ins. Co. v. Parsons, 32 C. P. 492.

Special Order for Security.]—Under s. 71 of the Judicature Act, 1825, security was specially ordered to be given by the plaintiffs, in the sum of $290, on their appeal to the court of appeal from the Judgment of the trial Judge dismissing their action for the recovery of land of which the defendants and those under whom they claimed had been in undisturbed possession for nearly thirty years, where two of the 'Jaintiffs resided abroad, and the other two, who resided in this Province, had no property exigible under execution, the taxed costs in the court below being unpaid, and execution therefor having been returned nulla bona. Donnelly v. Ames, 17 P. R. 106.

Standing alone, the appellant's poverty is not a circumstance, within the meaning of s. 77 of the Judicature Act, 1895, entitling the respondent to a special order for security for costs. McCornick v. Temperance Life Assurance Co., 17 P. R. 175.

Where there was no reason to suppose that the defendants were not intending to prosecute their appeal to the court of appeal in good faith, where they were conforming to an injunction obtained by the plaintiffs at an early stage, and where their ability to answer for costs had not been put to the test of an execution, and the proof of their alleged inability to pay the plaintiffs' costs, in case the appeal should prove unsuccessful, rested in great measure upon statements founded upon information and belief, a special order for security for costs under s. 77 of the Judicature Act, 1895, was refused. Welsbach Incandexcent Gaslight Co, v. Stannard, 17 P. R. 486.

Where both the appellants were domiciled out of Ontario, and one of them, an incorporated company, was in process of winding in the Province of Quebec under R. S. a. 129:—Held, having regard to ss. 17, 39, and 66 of that Act, that the property of the company in Ontario was beyond reach of the process of the court; and the circumstaves were such that a special order for security for costs of the appeal should be made under Rule 1487 (803) of the 1st January, 1896, taken from s. 77 of the Judicature Act, 1895, Grant v. Banque Franco-Egyptienne, 2 C. P. D. 430, and Whittaker v. Kershaw, 44 Ch. D. 296, followed, Royd v. Dominion Cold Storage Co., 17 P. R. 545.

Staying Action on Bond.]—An action against the sureties upon a bond given by the defee-dants in the action of McLaren v. Canada Central Railway Company, upon the appeal of the defendants to the court of appeal in that case, The defendants in that case appealed from the court of appeal in that case appealed from the court of appeal to Her Majesty in council, and in that appeal security had been given and allowed, including security for the whole amount recovered, and execution had been stayed in consequence:—Held, that proceedings must also be stayed in this action. McLaren v. Stephens, 10 P. R. SS.

Staying Proceedings—Costs of Unsuccessful Motion.) — Upon an appeal to the court of appeal, upon security for costs being allowed, in general the proceedings ought to be stayed; but if it is made to appear in any case that the respondent may suffer injustice by his execution being stayed, then the stay may be removed upon terms which may be just to both parties. Rules S26, S27. The plaintiff recovered a money judgment against the defendants, a benevolent society incorporated in a foreign country, but having members in Ontario who paid dues and assessments which were transmitted abroad. The defendarts appealed from the judgment to the court of appeal, and gave security for costs. Upon an application by the plaintiff under Rule S27 to remove the stay of proceedings it was admitted by the defendants that they had no assets in Ontario, but they said that they were advised that they had good grounds for the appeal, and if it should fail, that the plaintiff's claim would be paid; and this was not contradicted:—Held, that the dues and assessments of members in Ontario, being voluntary payments, could not be reached by a receiver or by attachment; and there was no prejudice or injustice that the plaintiff was likely to suffer by the stay, as he already had security for costs, and the delay would be compensated by interest on the judgment, if the appeal should be unsuccessful. Boyd v. Dominion Cold Storage Co., 17 P. R. 545, distinguished. Wintenute v. Brotherhood of Rahaga Trainmen, 19 P. R. 6.

Staying Proceedings.] — Proceedings stayed pending appeal from report. Lewis v. Talbot Street Gravel Road Co., 10 P. R. 15.

Staying Proceedings. — The bond for State eiven under the provisions of R. S. O. 1877 c. 28, s. 26, is a security for the costs of appeal only: in order to stay execution for the costs of the court below, further security must be given. Powell v. Peck. S. P. R. S5. Hecard v. Hecard v. Hecard v. 25 ch. Ch. 245.

Staying Proceedings-Manifold Judgment. |-The defendant in appealing to the court of appeal from a manifold judgment of the high court in an action for specific performance directing the execution by him of a conveyance, the delivery of documents, and also the payment of a sum for costs of the action, gave security for the costs of the court of appeal and for payment of the costs of the action, but did not execute the conveyance, deposit the documents in court, or otherwise comply with the judgment or the provisions of Rule 804, s.-ss. 1, 2, 3:—Held, that, upon the perfecting of the security, there was a stay of execution, amounting to a supersedeas, as to the costs of the action, by virtue of s.-s. 4 of Rule 804, although the defendant had done nothing with respect to the parts of the judgment falling under the other sub-sections; and garnishing proceedings taken for the purpose of collecting such costs were not sustainable. Vigeon v. Northcote, 15 P. R. 171.

Staying Proceedings.]—Where an appellant who had given the stantury notice of amount to the court of ampeal, but had not severed his reasons, moved to stay execution under R. S. O. 1877 c. 28, ss. 27, 28, the court examined the pleadings to ascertain whether the amount was frivolous, but ordered the appellant to pay the costs of application. Norvel v. Canada Southern Railway Co., 7 P. R. 422

Surety Holding under Unregistered Conveyance.] — Where, on a motion in chambers to disallow a bond given on an appeal, it appeared from the examination of one of the bondsmen that he had lands of sufficient value, but that the conveyances to him were unregistered, it was directed that the conveyances should be registered. Adamson v. Adamson, 9 P. R. 99

Surety—Solicitor.]—It is irregular for a solicitor to become security for costs of appeal for his client. Beckitt v. Wragg, 1 Ch. Ch. 5.

Sureties.]—Where the statutory requirements are observed with respect to bonds given upon appeal, the bonds will not be disallowed on the ground that the sureties are "Standing sureties" of the appellants, in the absence of satisfactory evidence of their insufficiency. Norval v. Canada Southern R. W. Co., 7 P. R. 313.

Taking Bond off the Files.]—A judgment of the court of appeal, in favour of a defendant appellant, puts an end to all liability upon the appeal bond, which may after such judgment be delivered up to the appellant, even where the other party has given notice of appeal to the supreme court of Cannotice of appeal to the supreme court of Can-notice of appeal to the supreme court of Canada. Burgess v. Conway, 11 P. R. 514. Notice should be given to the opposite party of a motion to take the appeal bond off the files. Ib.

2. Cross-appeal.

Discontinuance of Main Appeal.]—A proceeding under Kule S21 by way of crossappeal, taken by the respondent to an appeal to the court of appeal, is a mere branch or offshoot of the main appeal; and if the appellant discontinues his appeal, or the respondent causes it to be dismissed for want of prosecution, the cross-appeal is bound up in it, and cannot be retained for any purpose. The difference in the English practice pointed out. The Beeswing, 10 P. D. 18, distinguished. Semble, if a party does not wish his own objection to a judgment to be subject to the prosecution of his opponent's appeal his only course is to launch an independent appeal by giving notice and security, and under ordinary circumstances the two appeals would then be consolidated. Pickering v. Toronto R. W. Co., 16 P. R. 144.

Enforcing Order.]—A respondent, in an appeal to the court of appeal, who desires to vary the decision appealed against, is in the same position as if he were an appellant, and whatever would be an answer to his copeal, the country of the beaution of the had brought an independent contention of the beaution of the beaution of the beaution of the contention of the beaution of the beaution of the contention of the beaution of the Notice — Several Defendants — Plaintiff Successful against Onc—Cross-appeal against Others—Extension of Time.]—In an action brought against three defendants for damages for pollution of a stream, judgment was given at the trial for the plaintiff against one defendant, and the action was dismissed against the other two:—Held, that, upon the appeal of the first defendant to the court of appeal, the plaintiff, the respondent, could not maintain a cross-appeal against the other defendants by way of notice under Rule 825, but must proceed by way of an independent appeal. Freed v. Orr, 6 A. R. 690, not followed. Re Cavender's Trusts, 16 Ch. D. 270, followed. Under Rule 804, the time for service of notice of appeal runs from the day on which the judgment appealed against is actually signed or entered, and not from the day upon which it is pronounced. Time for giving notice of appeal extended where the party proposing to appeal had from the first shewn his intention to appeal, but had been under a misapprehension as to the practice, and no session of the court had been lost, Johnston v. Town of Petrolia, 17 P. R. 332.

Third Parties. |-An order was made by a local Judge upon the ex parte application of the defendant, allowing him to serve a third party notice, but, upon the application of the third parties so called upon, this order was set aside by an order of the master in chambers, which was affirmed by a Judge at chambers and by a divisional court upon the appeal of the defendant. That court, howthe proceedings until the plaintiffs should add the third parties as defendants, and from this order the plaintiffs appealed to the court of appeal, not making the third parties respondents. The defendant, however, served no-tice of cross-appeal upon the plaintiffs and the third parties, by which he asked that the order made by the local Judge might be restored; and the third parties moved to strike out this notice:—Held, that the word "part-ies" in Rule 821 means persons who in Rule 821 means persons who are parties to the action or proceeding in question on the appeal; and that what the defendant sought by the cross-appeal was not a variation of the order appealed from, which is what Rule 821 speaks of, but the substitution of one of an entirely different character; and the notice was struck out. Begg v. Ellison, 14 P. R. 267.

3. Leave to Appeal.

Appeal Launched without Leave.]—
Where leave of the court is necessary for an appeal, application therefor should be made within three months from the judgment to be appealed from; but in a case where, although leave to appeal was necessary, none was obtained, and the appellant gave notice and filed his appeal bond, which was allowed without objection by the respondent, and where the appeal presented a fairly arguable question of law, and no sittings had been lost by the delay:—Held, that such an equity was raised in the appellant's favour as entitled him to relief after the three months. The rule haid down in Sievewright v. Leys, 9 P. R. 290, is the rule that should be acted upon in regard to extension of time. Langdon v. Robertson, 12 P. R. 139.

Change of Venue—Appellant Undertaking to Pay Costs.]—Leave to appeal to the court of appeal from an order of the Queen's bench division changing the place of trial was asked by the plaintiff, because it was of importance to him in other litigation to have the question of venue decided, and was granted upon his undertaking to pay the costs of both parties of the appeal. Greey v. Siddall, 12 P. R. 557.

Cross-appeal.]—Cross-applications in respect of the same subject-matter were argued together, and both were dismissed by a judgment pronounced on the 26th April, 1885. The question argued was an important one, viz., the validity of an Act. Separate orders were taken out dismissing the two applications, and the time for appealing from both orders was extended till the 6th June, on which day one of the parties gave notice of appeal from the order adverse to him. The other party, who was not desirous of appealing unless his opponent appealed, was advised too late to serve notice within the time limited, and therefore applied, after the expiration of the time, to have it extended:—Held, that it was a proper case for exercising a discretion in favour of the applicant, and leave to appeal was accordingly granted. Re Lake Superior Native Copper Co., 11 P. R. 36.

Importance of Case-Novel Point. |-- By paragraph 7 of the schedule to the Law Courts Act, 1896, s. 73 of the Judicature Act, 1895 was amended so as to enable a divisional court and the court of appeal, and any Judge there of, to grant leave to appeal in cases where no absolute right to appeal exists, and where, under the law as it stood before the amendment, no such leave could have been obtained: —Held, that, being a matter of procedure, it applied to pending actions. Watton v. Watton, L. R. 1 P. & M. 227, followed: 2. that where at the time the amending statute was passed the judgment of the court had been passed the judgment of the court had been pronounced, but had not been entered up, the action was still pending. Holland v. Fox, 3 E. & B. 977, and In re Clagett's Estate, 29 Ch. D. 637, followed. Leave granted to appeal the court of appeal from an order of a divisional court affirming, but on different grounds, the judgment at the trial dismissing the action, where no lapse of time had oc-curred to prejudice the plaintiff's claim to the consideration of the court, the injury for which he sued being a serious one, and there being no authority upon the question of law decided by the divisional court. Spence v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 17 P. R. 172.

Intention to Appeal.]—Where notice of appeal was given, but the appeal was not set down in due time, and a sittings of the court had been lost, the time and a sittings of the court had been lost, the time that the court was the court of the dear and the court of the debt and costs, and a large sum paid for a copy of the evidence. The terms of giving further security, setting down the appeal within a limited time, and paying costs in any event, were imposed, D'Irry v. World Newspaper Company of Toronto, 17 P. R. 543.

Laches.]—By the decree in question further directions were reserved, and it also appeared that the defendant resided in England, but it was not shewn that any attempt had been made to communicate with her, nor that if there had it would have been of any use, nor that the defendant had been prejudiced:—Held, not sufficient special circumstances to entitle the defendant to obtain leave to appeal after the lapse of the month within which notice of appeal is to be given. Miller v, Broom, 9 P, R, 542.

A plaintiff was advised by his solicitor on the 3rd July, of the judgment of the court given on the 30th June. He did not see his solicitor again until the 20th August, when he, for the first time, learned that he should have caused notice of appeal to be served within a month from the rendering of the judgment:—Held, not a sufficient ground for giving leave to appeal, and thus denying to the party who had obtained the judgment of the court the right to have it enforced as promptly as the rules and practice of the court will permit:—Held, also, that the fact that the plaintiff might be prejudiced in another action against another party in another division of the high court of justice, by this judgment, was not a ground for granting the indulgence sought. Wilby v. 8 Standard Fire Insurance Co., 10 P. R. 34, 40.

Mistake as to Time.]—An appeal was not made within the time required by Rule 401, as it was supposed that Christmas vacation did not count. On the facts stated in the judgment, leave was given to appeal on payment of costs. Sievewright v. Leys, 9 P. R. 298.

Representative Capacity.]—Upon an application by the churchwardens of St. James church, for leave to appeal from the judgment of the chancery divisional court (7 O. R. 644) in their own names, or in the name of the rector, the defendant (who declined to carry the case further), as their trustee:—Held, that the rector was not a trustee for the applicants, but would himself, if the contention should prevail, be beneficially entitled to the fruits of the litigation; and that the applicants had not such an interest as entitled them to be made parties to the action; and the application was therefore refused. The event rendered it unnecessary to consider whether or not the application was properly made to this court. Langtry, Dumoulin, 11 A. R. 544.

See Appeal, IX., 2, 8. .

4. Miscellaneous.

Allowing Further Evidence.]—The defendants, appealing from a divisional court, applied for leave to adduce further evidence in the court of appeal, to corroborate that already taken upon a point which was argued before the divisional court, and decided adversely to the applicants. The application was refused. Remarks on the reception of further evidence by appellate courts. Merchant's Bank v. Lucas, 12 P. R. 526.

After the judgment of the court of appeal affirming the judgment of the trial Judge dismissing the action, had been drawn up and entered, and while an appeal was pending therefrom to the supreme court of Canada, the plaintiffs moved for leave to adduce further evidence for the purpose of shewing that an exhibit which was used as part of the evidence in the case was not a true copy of the original document. It was not suggested that there was any error in the judgment of the court of appeal which could be corrected by the introduction of the proposed evidence, or that, if the proposed evidence, or that, if the proposed evidence, or that, if the proposed evidence, the introduction of the proposed evidence, or that, if the proposed evidence, or that, if the proposed evidence, bat the trial Judge relied, or might prevent the defendants from relying upon that ground if the case went further, but that was all that could be said:—Held, that the application must be refused. Rule 408, which empowers the court to receive further evidence, is clearly confined to cases where such evidence is sought to be introduced for the purpose of the appeal. Ducber Watch Case Manufacturing Co. v. Taggart, 19 P. R. 233.

In an action for damages for bodily injuries received by the plantiff, owing to the alleged negligence of the defendants, the plaintiff recovered a verdict for $3,300, which a divisional court reduced to $3,000, which a divisional court reduced to $3,000, which a divisional court reduced to $3,000, if the plaintiff would consent, and in the alternative divided a new trial. The plaintiff accepted to do so, insisting that the damages, even as reduced, were excessive, and appealed to the court of appeal. Their appeal being set down, they moved for leave to give further evidence to shew that the damages were excessive, and, in order to shew that the plaintiff had recovered his health, and that the injury sustained had not been so serious or of so permanent a character as was anticipated at the trial, they asked that he might be ordered to submit to a bodily examination by a surgeon, under Rule 442:—Semble, that the examination under Rule 402 is for discovery only, and is not evidence of the character contemplated by Rule 408 (1)—Held, that as the only object in getting in the proposed evidence was to reduce the damages still further, or to obtain a new trial, it was not reasonable that the defendants, having refused the relief the court below offered, should be allowed to introduce this evidence on the appeal, and they did not make out a sufficiently clear case for its admission. Fraser v. London Street R. W. Co., 18 P. R. 370.

Amendments.]—This court is allowed, and required by law, to give judgment "according to the very right and justice of the case," and, up to the last moment, has the right to make any amendment proper for the attainment of that end. Therefore, where the defendants had by their answers admitted the truth of certain paragraphs of the bill, which charged that they had severally purchased with notice of the claim of the plaintiff; but subsequently they swore that they did not intend to make such admission; that in fact they had not had such notice, and the admission was made in ignorance of its effect; the defendants up to the last stage of the proceedings should be at liberty to set up the facts as a means of defence. Peterkin v. McFarlane, 9 A. R. 429.

Assessment Appeal — Non-prosecution.]
—Notice of an appeal to the court of appeal.
under s. $4 (6) of the Assessment Act, R. S.
O. 1897 c. 224, against the decision of a board of county court Judges with respect to a municipal assessment was served by the municipality upon the railway company whose assessment was in question, but the motion was not set down to be heard nor proceeded with in any way. Upon motion by the railway company for an order dismissing the appeal:—Held, that the appeal, by force of s. $4 (6), was lodged in the court of appeal in like manner as an appeal from a decision of a county court in an ordinary action becomes lodged—when the proper proceedings have been taken—in a divisional court, in which case Rule 790 or Rules $21 and $22 applied, and a motion to dismiss was unnecessary; or if not, that the appeal was not in the court of appeal at all, and no order could be made. Re Toronto, 18 P. R. 489.

Concurrent Appeals.]—As to separate appeals to court of appeal and divisional court. See Hately v. Merchants' Despatch Co., 4 O. R. 723.

Costs—Execution.]—Held, that the plaintiff, after the judgment in appeal, should have amended the judgment below in accordance with the certificate of the court of appeal, and that the costs in the court of appeal should have been added to the costs of the action, and only one execution issued thereon. Hofiman v. Crerar, 18 P. R. 473.

Costs of Appeal.]—See Appeal, IX. 1—Costs—County Courts—Division Courts —Surrogate Courts.

Costs of Motion.]—The costs of an unsuccessful motion should be paid by the applicant: there is no rule that costs of such a motion shall go to the successful party upon the appeal. Wintemute v. Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen, 19 P. R. 6.

Dismissal for Want of Prosecution.]
—Motion to dismiss the defendants' appeal to this court for want of prosecution. The judgment appealed from (12 O. R. 119) was pronounced on the 28th April. 1886, and notice of appeal was given within two weeks thereafter. Security was given at the end of June, but the draft appeal case was not sent to the plaintiff's solicitors till the 24th September. However, till the 28th April, when a year had run from the pronouncing of judgment. However, till the 28th April, when a year had run from the pronouncing of judgment. However, the delay after the 1st March was, that the appellants' solicitor thought it best to have the case settled by the Judge who tried the action, and that that Judge did not during the case settled by the Judge who tried the action, and that that Judge did not during the time in question hold chambers, he being away on circuit. It was shewn, however, on the other side, that he was not continuously absent during this period:—Held, in chambers, that no special circumstances were shewn to justify an extension of the time, and that the appeal should be dismissed for want of prosecution. Platt v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 12 P. R. 380.

Division of Opinion.]—The court of appeal for Ontario, composed of four Judges, proaounced judgment in an appeal before the court. two of their lordships being in favour of dismissing and the other two pronouncing no judgment. On an appeal from the judgment dismissing the appeal, it was objected that there was no decision arrived at:—Held, that the appellate court should not go behind the formal judgment which stated that the appeal was dismissed; further, the position was the same as if the four Judges had been equally divided in opinion, in which case the appeal would have been properly dismissed. Booth v. Ratte, 21 S. C. R. 637.

See In re Hall, 8 A. R. 135; Clarkson v. Attorney-General of Canada, 16 A. R. 202.

Enforcing Judgment.]—Held, that a certificate of the court of appeal may be acted on in the court below, without issuing a rule upon such certificate. MeArthur v. Township of Southwoold, S P. R. 27.

Semble, a motion to make a decree of the court of appeal an order of the court of chancery may be made in chambers if the order is to be in the terms of the decree, but if further directions or new terms are necessary to carry out the decree in appeal, the motion should be to the court. Weir v. Matheson, 2 Ch. Ch. 10,

The proper way of enforcing a judgment of the court of appeal is to have the judgment of the court below amended, if necessary, according to the judgment in appeal; and, when amended, to issue proceess thereon. Section 44 of the Appeal Act. R. S. O. 1877 c. 38, is not superseded by s. 14 of the O. J. Act. Laucson v. Canada Farmers' Mutual Ins. Co., S. A. R. 613. See S. C., 9 P. R. 185.

An ex parte motion to make the certificate of judgment of court of appeal an order of the high court of justice was refused, the master in chambers being of opinion that such a course was unnecessary. Freed v. Orr, 9 P. R. 181.

Remarks as to the practice of making a certificate of the judgment of the court of appeal an order of the court of chancery, which has been the uniform practice of that court, and is not inconsistent with R. S. O. 1877 c. 38, s. 44. Norvall v. Canada Southern R. W. Co.; Cunningham v. Canada Southern R. W. Co., 9 P. R. 339.

Entering Verdict.] — See Herbert v. Park, 25 C. P. 57; Denny v. Montreal Telegraph Co., 3 A. R. 628.

Inferences of Fact.]—See Hood v. Toronto Harbour Commissioners, 37 U. C. R. 72.

Interest on Judgment.]—Section 43 of the Court of Appeal Act, R. S. O. 1877 c. 38, which provides "when on an appeal against a judgment in any action personal, the court of appeal gives judgment for the respondent, interest shall be allowed by the court for such time as execution has been delayed by the appeal," does not apply to a case where the judgment of the court below is in favour of the defendant, and is reversed on appeal. In such case the court on reversing the judgment gave liberty to the appellant, the plaintiff in the court below, to move to be at liberty to enter judgment as directed by this court, nunc protuce, whereby he would be enabled to recover interest on the amount of the verdict rendered in his favour. Quintan v. Union Fire Ins. Co., 8 A. R. 376.

Mistake in Certificate.] — Where the certificate of judgment of the court of appeal by inadvertence directed the dismissal of a county court action with costs, instead of merely setting aside the judgment in the county court for want of jurisdiction, the certificate was, on summary application, amended, and repayment of costs taxed and raid under it directed. Sherk v. Evans, 22 A. R. 242.

Where the certificate of a judgment of the court of appeal does not truly state the decision of the court it will be amended. St. John v. Rykert, 3 C. L. T. 119.

Mistake in Judgment Below.] — See McEdwards v. Palmer, 2 A. R. 439.

Notice of Appeal—Omission to File.]—By the oversight of a clerk of the appellant's solicitor, the notice of appeal required by R. S. O. 1877 c. 38 (s. 38 O. J. Act 1881), was not given to the registrar of the court appealed from, but it was only served on the respondent, who had not been prejudiced. The notice was allowed to be filed within four days, upon payment of costs. Re Lewis, Laws v. Laws, 9 P. R. 72.

Notice of Appeal — Time.] — A notice served on Monday, 6th October, of an appeal to the court of appeal from a judgment given on the 4th September, was held too late. Wright v. Leys, 10 P. R. 354.

Notice of Appeal—Setting Aside.]—A notice of appeal to the court of appeal is not an initiation of the appeal. Where notice was served, but the security required by s. 38, O. J. Act, was not given:—Held, that there was no appeal pending, and a motion to set aside the notice of appeal, or to dismiss the appeal, was dismissed. Smith v. Smith, 11 P. R. 6.

Order not Issued.]—The court will not ordinarily quash or dismiss an appeal because the order or judgment appealed from has not been drawn up. Henderson v. Rogers, 15 P. R. 241.

Order Setting Aside Judgment — Judges Unable to Agree, —The plaintiffs by their agent, Patrick R., in April, 1877, procured a judgment to be signed against Peter R., the defendant, who, for purposes of his own, suffered the judgment to go by default. No execution was issued thereon. death of Peter, the plaintiffs assigned the judgment to the wife of Patrick, who paid them $50 therefor; and, on her application, an order was made allowing execution to issue against the executors of Peter. The executors then applied to set aside the judgment as having been fraudulently obtained, and to be allowed to defend the action, or for such other order as should seem just; and upon such application, an order was made setting aside the judgment and all proceedings in the action, and directing the plaintiffs to repay the This order was affirmed on appeal by 8-30. This order was affirmed on appeal by the common pleas division:—Held, that an appeal lay from the order of the common pleas division, as it was, in effect, a final disposition of the whole matter, and a bar to the plaintiffs' further proceeding; but, although the members of this court were all of opinion for different reasons that the order below was wrong, they did not agree as to the extent to which it should be modified or reversed, and therefore the appeal was dis-missed, without costs. Schroeder v. Rooney, 11 A. R. 673.

Order Setting Aside Nonsnit.]—As the court below had pronounced no opinion as to whether there should be a new trial or not, the appeal was simply allowed, setting aside the nonsuit, but leaving the question of new trial untouched. Walton v. County of York, 6 A. R. 181.

In an action for negligence in not keeping a county road in repair, the jury found for the plaintiff. A rule nist having been subsequently obtained to enter a nonsuit, or for a new trial, the divisional court made it absolute to enter a nonsuit. On appeal the court allowed the appeal, but made no order as to that portion of the rule nist to which a new trial was asked, leaving it to be disposed of by the divisional court:—Held, that the rule nist was completely and finally disposed of, so far as the divisional court was concerned, by the rule to enter a nonsuit, which the defendants, by taking it without asking for any reservation so far as regarded the new trial, had acquiesced in:—Held, also that the court of appeal have no power under s. 23 of the Court of Appeal Act, R. S. O. 1877 c. 38, to direct the divisional court to reopen the rule or reconsider the question whether, in their discretion, a new trial should be granted. Watton V. County of York, 32 C. P. 35.

Printed Case.] — Except where for the convenience of the contr appeal cases ought to be printed, the court will not, as a rule, force that course upon an unwilling appellant at the instance of the respondent, upon a motion under Rule S02 (3). If the respondent desires to have the appeal case printed, he may have it done at his own expense; and the appellant may be put upon terms, in the event of a further appeal by him, upon which a printed case will be necessary, as to the use of the books printed by the respondent. Tectsel v. Dominion Construction Co., 18 P. R. 16.

Printing Formal Judgment.] — The formal judgment or order appealed from should be printed in the appeal book. Thompson v. Robinson, 16 A. R. 175.

Printing Reasons for Judgment.]— Where no written judgment has been delivered by the court appealed from, a statement of the grounds assigned therefor should be obtained from the reporter, or from notes of counsel who attend to hear judgment, and should be inserted in the appeal book. Blackley v. Kenny, 16 A. R. 522.

Printing.] — The costs of printing unnecessary material disallowed. Bryce v. Loutit, 21 Å. R. 100, and see Parsons v. Standard Ins. Co., 4 Å. R. 326.

Quashing.]—Where there is no right of appeal the respondent is not bound to move before the hearing to quash the proceedings. In re Freeman, 2 E. & A. 109.

Surrogate Court Appeal.]—Costs of an appeal from the surrogate court to the court of appeal should be taxed on the scale of the court appealed from, as provided by Rule 28 of the court of appeal, and not on the scale of county court appeals. Regan v. Waters, 10 P. R. 394.

Third Party — "Party Affected by the Appeal."] — The defendants alleging that another person was liable to indemnify them against the plaintiff's claim, caused him to be served with a third party notice under Rule 209. The third party appeared, and an order was made under Rule 213 that he should be at liberty to appear at the trial and take such part as the Judge should direct and be bound by the result; that the question of his liability to indemnify the defendants should be tried after the trial of the action; and that pleadings should be delivered between the de-fendants and him. The Judge who tried the case dismissed the action, but held the third party bound to indemnify the defendants against any costs they incurred in the action. The third party appealed from this judgment to a divisional court, and the plaintiff appealed to the court of appeal:—Held, that the third party was a "party affected by the appeal" of the plaintiff within the meaning of Rules 799 (2) and 811, and it was the plaintiff's duty to give the notices therein provided for; but there his duty as regards the third party ended, unless he was in a position to demand some relief against him; and the third party was not by the order made before the trial placed in the position of a defendant so as to entitle the plaintiff to relief against him. But, as the defendants, for their own convenience, brought the third party into the action, and did not procure him to be made a defendant, they should, if they desired to retain him before the court for the purposes of the plaintiff's appeal, do whatever might be necessary to that end beyond what was required of the plaintiff under Rules 799 and 811. Eckens-weiller v. Coyle, 18 P. R. 423.

Time for Appeal.]—Where a decree was made at the hearing of a case, but certain questions were reserved for further directions:—Held, that the year within which an appeal could be brought ran from the making of the decree on further directions, and not from that on the hearing. Freed v. Orr, 6 A. R. 630.

Held, that s. 38, O. J. Act, did not affect the plaintiffs' right under R. S. O. 1877 c. 38, s. 46, to appeal within a year from the making of the decree, which had been pronounced on the 2nd April, 1881, before the first mentioned Act came into force. Workman v. Robb, 9 P. R. 169.

Semble, R. S. O. 1877 c. 38, s. 46, would have the effect of preventing an appeal from a judgment more than a year old, unless leave were obtained from the court of appeal; but if new evidence were admitted, and the case leard anew, the time for appealing would run from the date of the later judgment:—Semble, also, R. S. O. 1877 c. 38, s. 22, was not intended to apply to newly, discovered evidence. Synod v. De Blaquiere, 10 P. R. 11, followed. Bank of British North America v. Western Assurance Co., 11 P. R. 434.

Upon the true construction of Rule 484, the period of long vacation is not to be reckoned in the time allowed by s. 71 of the Judicature Act for filing and serving notice of appeal to the court of appeal. Hespeler v. Campbell, 14 P. R. 18.

Two Actions.] — Where similar motions are made to the same court in two actions, and the parties in the first agree that the decision in the second shall govern, there is nothing to preclude an appeal in the first action, even though there is no appeal in the second, unless it was agreed that the decision in the latter should be final. Coutts v. Dodds, 16 P. R. 273.

Two of Several Defendants Appealing—Plaintiff Claiming Relief Against Other Defendants.]—Two only of several defendants appealed. The respondent, by her reasons against the appeal, claimed relief over against two of the other defendants to the suit, and served them with reasons against appeal, and subsequently with the printed appeal book, and with notice of setting down the appeal for argument. These defendants had never been served with the statutory month's notice of appeal, nor furnished with security for the costs of appeal, nor afforded an opportunity of taking part in the settlement of the appeal book:—Held, that they were properly before the court. Freed v. Orr, 6 A. R. 690.

Unnecessary Party.]—The plaintiff served notice of appeal from the judgment of the common pleas division (15 O. R. 544) upon both defendants, and furnished both with security for costs of appeal, but disclaimed any relief against the defendant B., and brought him before the court only that the defendant L. might obtain any relief over against B. that he might consider himself entitled to. No notice of setting down or reasons of appeal were served on B. L. claimed no relief against B. in his pleadings or reasons of appeal.—Held, that B. was not a person who would or might be affected by a reversal of the decision complained of, and there was no reason for retaining him before the court. O'sullican v. Lake, 12 P. R. 550.

COURT OF CHANCERY.

Criminal Prosecution.]—This court has no jurisdiction to give relief to sureties on a recognizance in a criminal proceeding. Rastali v. Attorney-General, 18 Gr. 138; reversing 8. C., 17 Gr. 1.

Expulsion of Member.]—Where a member of a college council complains that he has been improperly expelled from the council, the court of chancery, under the A. J. Act, has jurisdiction in a proper case to decree relief; that Act giving jurisdiction to the court of chancery "in all matters which would be cognizable in a court of law," although the remedy in such a case in a court of law would be sought by mandamus. Marsh v. Huron College, 27 Gr. 605.

Removal from Surrogate Court.]— Where a will related to both real and personal estate, and the personal property was worth at least £2,000, and it was sworn that the questions to be tried and determined were of such importance and difficulty that they could be more effectually tried and disposed of in this court than in the surrogate court, which statement was uncontradicted, the court ordered the removal of the matter into this court. Re Eccles, 1 Ch. Ch. 376.

Trifling Amount.]—The rule and policy of the court is to discourage suits for trifling amounts, or brought vexationsly; where, therefore, a bill was filed in respect of a sum not exceeding S10, including interest, the court at the hearing, without reference to the merits of the demand, dismissed the bill, but without costs, as the defendant ought, under the circumstances, either to have demured or moved to take the bill off the files. Westbrooke v. Broveett, 17 Gr. 339.

The court of chancery will not entertain a suit where the subject-matter of litigation is a sum not exceeding £10. Where, therefore, after default was made in payment under a decree in foreclosure, in a suit in which the bill was filed to enforce a mortgage securing $18.53, a final order was refused. Shaw v. Fredy, S.C. L. J. 136. See, also, Gilbert v. Brattheadte, 3 Ch. Ch. 413.

COURT OF QUEEN'S BENCH.

The proper style of this court is "before His Majesty's justices," not "before the King himself" — "coram vobis," not "coram nobis," Boulton v. Randall, Tay, 184.

Declaration upon a judgment giving the following description of the court of Queen's bench in Toronton' For how whereas he had not been as the following the property of the property of the same court recovered a judgment, &c., as by the record still remaining in the same court of our Lady the Queen, at Toronto, aforesaid, more fully appears:"—Held, on demurrer to this description as being uncertain, description god. French v. Kingsmill, 4 U. C. R. 215.

I. Construction. 1. In General.

Bill of Sale—Proviso as to Default.]— Plaintiff gave defendant a bill of sale of certain timber, in which was contained a provise for making the same void in case the defendant should pay to the plaintiff £300, and interest, on a day named; and it was added, "but if default be made in payment of said £300 in part or in whole, contrary to the manner and form aforesaid, then it "(the bill of sale) "shall remain and be in full force and virtue;"—Held, on demurrer, that the deed did not import a promise to pay, and debt would not lie. McLaughlin v. Brouse, 11 U. C. R. 600.

Building Contract — Surctics Completing on Principal's Default — Payment.]—The plaintiffs were sureties to defendant for the performance by C. of an agreement whereby C. covenanted for himself, his executors, administrators, and assigns, to build certain cottages for £1,800, which defendant covenanted to pay to C., his executors, administrators and assigns, as follows: £800 to be advanced during the work, and the remaining £1,000 to be paid on the completion of the agreement, by the conveyance to C. of certain specified premises. C. failed to perform his contract, and assigned it to the plaintiffs, having received £800 on account. It was not shewn that defendant was any party to the assignment. The plaintiffs and defendant then entered into an agreement (to which C. was no party): recting C.'s previous contract; the plaintiffs' liability as sureties for him; his non-performance and assignment to the plaintiffs; that the defendant, at the plaintiffs covenanted to finish the work according to the first agreement; and the parties mutually bound themselves in £1,000 for the performance of this last agreement:—Hed, that there was no covenant, either express or implied, on the part of the defendant to convey to the plaintiffs, or to pay them £1,000. Hall v. Gilmour, 9 U. C. R. 4922.

Building Contract—Penalty for Delay.]
—Upon a contract to do certain work within a specified time, with a penalty of £4 per week in case of default, as rent of the premises:—Held, that the condition to pay the £4 per week, although not incorporated in the specifications, formed a covenant on the part of the defendant to pay that sum for so long as his contract should remain unperformed after the day limited. Gaskin v. Wales, 9 C. P. 314.

Implying Covenant.]—A covenant must be express and distinct, and not gathered as arising consequently or morally by reason of something else in the deed. Liddell v. Munro, 4 U. C. R. 474.

"Indemnity.] — Covenant to indemnify "generally and without exception" against a charterparty, which defendants had assumed:—Held, under the circumstances of the case, to mean rather without exception as to the description of claim, than as to time; and that the defendants would be liable only for moneys accruing due under it during their co-partnership, and thence to the expiration of the charter. Jones v. Walker, 9 U. C. R. 136.

Informal Deeds.] — Construction of informal deeds as to the parties liable as covenantors. See McDonald v. Clarke, 30 U. C.

R. 307; Coghlan v. School Trustees of Tilbury East, 35 U. C. R. 595.

Lease—Proviso for Payment for Improvements, —A lessee covenanted to build on the demised premises during the term. "provided always, and it is the true intent and meaning of these presents, and the parties thereunto, that at the expiration of the demise the buildings erected shall be paid for at the valuation of two indifferent persons." &c.:—Held, a covenant to pay. McFattridge v. Talbert, 2 U. C. R. 156.

Lease—Proviso as to Improvements.]—
Plaintiff demised certain premises to defendant by lease, dated the 1st November, 1849, which lease contained a covenant to the effect that it should be "competent" for the defendant to remove the then front window sashes, &c., and to put the best plate glass windows in the room of those removed, &c., within one year from the date of the lease:—Held, that not withstanding the introduction of the word "competent," the defendant covenanted to do the work specified. McDonald v. Cochrane, &
C. P. 134.

Maintenance-Place of Residence.]-H. S. by deed dated 4th November, 1863, granted his farm and some chattels to his son T. S., in consideration of $300, "subject to be dein consideration of coop, subject to be de-feated and rendered null and void upon the non-performance by the said party of the second part of the following condition, or any second part of the following condition, or any part thereof, viz., the said party of the second part covenants to feed, clothe, support and maintain the said party of the first part * * during the term of his natural life. * * " T. S. having fulfilled the condition during his T. S. naving tunined the condition during ma-lifetime, died on the 5th October, 1865, leaving a widow and one child. The widow removed from the farm, but offered to take H. S. with her to her father's house, and have him provided for there, or to allow him to go to her brother's house in the same way, both of which offers were declined, and as no maintenance was provided for him by her at the farm, he treated the condition as broken and brought an action of ejectment, and recovered judg-ment; and conveyed the farm away by deed, and the defendant became the owner by subsequent conveyance. H. S. was subsequently supported part of the time on the farm by the defendant, and died in 1880. In an action of ejectment by the infant daughter of T. S. claiming under the deed to her father against the defendant, it was:—Held, that the grantor was not bound to accept the offers made and that the conditions of the deed were broken and the land forfeited. Per Armour, J. (at the trial), the deed must be construed as being made upon condition and as being defeated and rendered void by the non-performance of the covenant. The effect of the covenant is, that H. S. was to be maintained wherever he might choose to live, but he was not bound to go to any place the covenantor or his representatives might require him to go, and he was justified in refusing to accept the offers made. Per Boyd, C., the parent who for value purchases the right to support from his son has, if the written instrument is silent on the point, the first and controlling choice as to the place of abode. If the father's wishes are reasonable, having regard to his age and sta-tion in life, the court ought to respect them in preference to the counter propositions of those who are to supply the maintenance, There was here no caprice, no unwarrantable obstinacy in the father's resolve to cling to the homestead, such as should induce the court to disregard the general rule. The result to that the conditions of the deed were broken and the land forfeited. Per Ferguson, J. it was a condition annexed to the estate granued, the proper effect of which was that if broken the title would go to the grantor, or those claiming from him the reversion in the lands; the grantor was not bound to accept the offer that was made, and there was a breach of the condition, the effect of which was to revest the estate. Millette v. Sabourin. 12 O. R. 248.

Mortgage—Inconsistent Provisions.]—M. gave a mortgage to T. on certain lands. The mortgage was in the statutory short form, except that immediately after the printed covenant for payment the following words were inserted in writing: "It being understood, however, that the said lands only shall in any event be liable for the payment of the mortgage." The discussion of the mortgage of the payment of the mortgage. The discussion of the covenants. The assigned the mortgage to H., who, on an instalment of interest falling due, distrained for it. M. now brought this action for a wrongful distress:—Held, that M. was entitled to recover the amount distrained for with interest and costs, for the earlier provision controlled the subsequent one, both because it was first in the deed, and because it was in writing, and the words superadded in writing were entitled to have greater effect attributed to them than the printed clauses. McKay v. Hoorard, 6 O. R. 132

Mortgage—Proviso for Payment.]—Covenant cannot be sustained on the proviso in a mortgage deed, to pay the mortgage money.

Martin v. Woods, T. T. 3 & 4 Vict.

The mere words, in the proviso of a mortgage "in three equal payments to be respectively made," do not create a covenant to pay the amounts specified. Jackson v. Yeomans, 19 C. P. 394.

Sale of Land—Payment of Price.]—The plaintiff demised to defendant certain premises at a yearly rent, which defendant covenanted to pay; and by the same instrument it was further witnessed, that "in consideration of $200, of which £50 was paid down at the ensealing hereof, the receipt whereof is hereby acknowledged, and the other moiety is to be paid on the 30th September, 1802, with interest in the meantime payable yearly, half yearly, or quirterly," the plaintiff sold to defendant the house on the land:—Held, that defendant was liable as on a covenant to pay the unpaid moiety of the purchase money. Joseph v. Todd, 23 U. C. R. 80.

Plaintiff and defendant entered into an agreement under seal, by which the plaintiff agreed to convey to defendant certain land "for $300," payable in the manner specified:
—Held, to amount to a covenant by defendant to pay the money. Berry v. Garrard, 32 U. C. R. 173.

Sale of Machine.]—An agreement for the sale of a machine provided that the inventor should personally inspect the placing and setting of it in operation. The machine was delivered, but the inventor refusing to go, the vendors sent another competent person to set it up:—Held, that the vendors were neverdadess entitled to recover the price on the principle that the stipulation alleged did not go to the whole root and consideration of the contract, and, therefore, was not to be considered as a condition precedent but as a distinct covenant, the breach of which could be satisfied by damages. Cowan v. Fisher, 31 of R. 426.

2. Dependent and Independent,

General Rule.]—To determine whether covenants or agreements are dependent or independent, they are to be construed according to the intent and meaning of the parties, to be collected from the instrument, and to the circumstances legally admissible in evidence with reference to which it is to be construed. Where a covenant or agreement goes to part of the consideration on both sides, and may be compensated in damages, it is an independent covenant or contract. Re Canadian Niagara Poacer Co., 30 O. R. 185.

Agreement for Service—Conceyance of Land.]—Where the plaintiff covenanted that his son should serve defendant for seven years, in consideration whereof defendant covenanted at the expiration of the time, to convey 200 acres of land to the son, his heirs and assigns:—Held, that the service for seven years was a condition precedent to the right to the conveyance. Goodall v. Elmsley, I. U. C. R. 457.

Agreement to Lease-Agreement to Sell Goods. |-A. by deed, in consideration of the rents, &c., on the part of B., to be paid and performed, agreed with B, that he would on or before the 1st October, upon request to him in writing by B., grant unto him a lease to be prepared or approved by B.'s counsel of certain premises, to hold for five years at a rent named; the said lease to contain certain covenants; and said A, thereby agreed to de-liver to said B, on the 1st October, 200,000 staves at the above premises, at a price specified, for which B. agreed to pay said A. on certain days; and it was thereby agreed that said lease should contain a covenant by said A, that he would deliver to the said B, in each of the two succeeding years staves, &c.: and further, that B. should furnish securities for the due performance of the above agreement on or before the 20th July:—Held, that a request by B. for, or the granting by A. of, such lease, was not a condition precedent to the right of B. to have the staves delivered, the covenants to grant the lease and to deliver staves being independent. Leonard v. Wall, 5 C. P. 9.

Agreement to Sell Patent—Covenant to being Patent into Use, 1—Declaration on a death which is the consideration of $3$, decendent with the consideration in an invention, for which he was applying for a patent in the United States, and covenanted to assign to him the same share in such letters patent to be issued; in consideration whereof the defendant covenanted to use his best endeavours to bring said patent into general use in the United States, Breach, that after the patent had been obtained, the defendant would not assign to the plaintiff, but wrongfully sold his whole interest to others. Plea, on equitable grounds, that the real consideration, as the plaintiff well knew, was not the $1$, but the plaintiff's covenant to endeavour to bring the patent into use in the United States; that the plaintiff wholly neglected to do this, but spoke against and by his conduct prejudiced the invention. And so the defendant said that before any breach on defendant's part, or any sale by him, the plaintiff withdrew from and broke his agreement, whereby the consideration for the defendant's agreement wholly failed:—Held, on demurrer, no defence; for the two covenants were independent, the plaintiff was entitled to a transter as soon as the patent issued, and the nonperformance by him of something to be done afterwards could not defeat his right of action. Storin v. Dean, 26 U. C. R. 600.

Building Contract — Agreement to Lease.] — Declaration, that the plaintiffs agreed to complete the ballasting of a certain portion of defendants' railway, and to comstruct stone culverts and bridge abutments at certain points, and to do the grading neces-sary, &c., all to be completed before the 1st January, 1859, provided the company should furnish cash to meet the monthly estimates of the engineer; and that the plaintiffs commenced and were ready to complete the work, but defendants wrongfully prevented and dis-charged them. Plea, that by the same agreement it was provided, that whereas the plaintiffs had leased said railway from defendants by lease bearing even date with the agreement. in which it was provided that £30,000 should be expended by defendants on the completion of the road before the rents should be payable, and whereas defendants were unable to raise the £30,000, it was therefore agreed that the plaintiffs should work the road free of any charge for the use of it, and should expend the surplus earnings on the completion there-of, the amount so expended to be taken as part of the £30,000; that the lease so made was for the express purpose of enabling the plaintiffs to work the road, and raising thereby enough to enable defendants to pay them for the work contracted to be done by them; that the plaintiffs, although they had the free use of the road, refused to work and abau-doned the same, whereby they forfeited the contract, and the defendants therefore prevented them from proceeding with the work, as they lawfully might :- Held, on demurrer, plea bad, the agreements being independent. Tate v. Port Hope, Lindsay, and Beaverton R. W. Co., 17 U. C. R. 354.

Building Contract — Third Person's Corenant to Pay 1—The declaration recited that the Desjardins canal company were indebted opinal recommendation recited that the Desjardins canal company were indebted on plant canal company were indebted on the property of the latter of latter of the latter of the latter of the latter of the latter of in pursuance of said statute entered into the covenant declared upon as security for the payment by the canal company of said sum; that the said agreement of the plaintiffs is subject to a condition precedent, that the work should be approved of by the engineers of the plaintiffs and the canal company, &c., who should report when the same were executed, and that no such report was made before this 4. On equitable grounds, that the said channel and bridge were not completed before this suit. The plaintiffs replied, setting out the agreement in full, by which it appeared that the agreement of the canal company was to give security for the repayment of the money advanced by the plaintiffs "at the time and in manner as is stated in such securities: -Held, on demurrer, both pleas bad, as shewing no equitable defence; for the covenant by defendants was absolute, that the canal company should pay on a certain day; and by the agreement the money was to be paid at the time mentioned in the security, not to be de-pendent on the completion of the work. Great estern R. W. Co. v. Town of Dundas, 20 U. C. R. 523.

Building Contract-Payment, 1-Declaration upon defendant's bond, conditioned for the performance by one D. of his agreement, under seal, to construct a railway for the plaintiffs, to be completed by the 15th Februplaintiffs, to be completed by the 10th Febru-ary, 1871, or within such further time as might be allowed. First breach, failure to complete by the 15th February, Second breach, failure to complete within the exten-sion of time allowed. Flea to the first breach, that by the agreement the plaintiffs promised to pay D, for the work $290,000, of which $100,000 was to be paid in mortgage bonds of the plaintiffs, and the rest as specified, but ten per cent, was to be retained out of each payment of bonds until the completion of the work, and then to be paid with the last payment; and that, although the plaintiffs made certain payments according to the contract, they failed to make the residue, whereby D. was and is prevented from completing the work:—Held, plea bad, for the covenants were independent, and non-performance by the Port Perry R. W. Co. v. Dumble, 32 U. C. R. 36: 22 C. P. 39.

Lease — Possession—Security.]—Defendant leased to the plaintiff certain premises for three years from the 1st May; and the plaintiff covenanted that, on or before said 1st May, he would give to defendant two good and sufficient securities for the performance of plaintiff's covenants in the lease:—Held, that the giving such security, was a condition precedent to the plaintiff's right of possession under the lease. Murphy v. Searth, 16 U. C. R. 48.

Lease—Valuation of Furniture.]—Declaration on an agreement, whereby defendant agreed to give and plaintiff to take a lease of an hotel in Toronto, in the occupation of the defendant, for ten years, from the 29th September, 1873, when possession was to be given; that defendant's license to sell liquors in the hotel was given to plaintiff, who was to pay a proportionate part of the cost thereof for the unexpired part of the year; and that all the furniture then in use in the hotel, and the stock of liquors, &c., were to be taken at a valuation, including the omnibus, &c., as well as certain other articles mentioned. The valuation to commence and be finished on or before the 29th September, a lease containing the usual covenants to be prepared and executed by both parties; and that for the due came bound to each other in $1,000; where the commence bound to each other in $1,000; where the content is sufficient to the content of the furniture, &c., was not finished on or before the 29th September, nor yet finished. Plaintiff replied that the valuation was prevented and not finished on or before, &c., solely by the acts and misconduct of the defendant:—Held, good, as the valuation was a condition precedent to the granting of the lease. Walker v. Kelly, 24 C. P. 174.

Sale of Land — Payment.]—Held, that under the agreement for the sale of land set out in this case, the covenants by defendant to pay, and by plaintiff to convey a good title, on receiving payment, were independent of each other, and that defendant was responsible on his covenant, notwithstanding the plaintiff's inability to perform his. Tisdale v. Dallos, 11 C. P. 238.

Work and Labour — Payment.]—The plantiff sued in assumpsit for work and labour, and at the trial put in a sealed agreement under which he had agreed to perform the work, by which it appeared that defendant was bound to pay for the work at stated periods. The work was not done according to the contract, and the plaintiff consequently sued in assumpsit, but was nonuited at the trial, on the ground that the covenants in the sealed instrument were independent, and that he could have sued on the agreement for the money although the work was not performed: —Held, that the nonsuit was wrong. Barton v. Fisher, 3 U. C. R. 75.

Work and Labour — Payment.]—Upon a contract extending over several years for work and labour to be paid for by instalments, the defendants admitted part performance of the contract upon which the action was brought, and pleaded general non-performance to the satisfaction of their officer named in the contract, and that thorough and complete performance was a condition precedent to nayment:—Held, that by payment in part they were not barred from claiming full performance, and to the satisfaction of their officer, as a condition precedent, the contract being in consideration of performance, and not in consideration of plaintiff's covenant to nerform. Coatsworth v. City of Toronto, 10 C. P. 73.

Work and Labour — Payment.]—Upon a covenant to pay, in consideration of certain work to be performed, the first payment to be made before the time fixed for the completion of the contract:—Held, that the performance of the work was not a condition precedent to payment. Cullen v. Nickerson, 10 C. P. 549.

3. For Title.

Canada Company.)—The Canada Company, by their charter, are not exempted from giving to purchasers of the lands granted to them by the Crown the usual covenants against their own acts: and as to lands purchased from private individuals, the company will be required to give the same covenants as another vendor. Scarlett v. Canada Company, 1 Ch. Ch. 90.

Covenantee's Knowledge of Defects.] —Action on covenants for seisin and right to convey, contained in a deed by the defendants rought on equitable grounds, that the conveycontained in a deed by the defendants rought of the property of the plantiffs, conveyed to the plantiffs,
conveyed to the plantiffs, conveyed to the right to convey; and the plaintiffs were aware of these facts when F, conveyed to them.—Held, on denurrer, no defence, for such covenants are not in equity confined to defects unknown to the vendee.
The plaintiff replied equitably, that F,'s deed to the plaintiff was a mortgage, to secure money then lent to him by them, and defendants conveyed to F, for the express purpose of causiling him to execute such mortgage and obtain the loan, and the plaintiffs were induced to lend by their reliance on defendants' covenants, as the defendants well knew.
Semble, that if the plea had been good, the replication would have been an answer to it.
Trust and Loan Co. of Upper Canada v. Cocert, 27 U. C. R. 120.

Deed and Mortgage.]—In a suit by a vendor for specific performance, where the vendor is ordered to execute a deed and the vendee to execute a mortgage:—Semble, that it would be improper to insert a power of sale in such mortgage, and quere, if the deed merely contains qualified covenants, whether the mortgage should contain any others. Mo-Kay v. Reed, 1 Ch. Cb. 208.

Estoppel. —It is a firmly established rule of property in Ontario, that covenants for title are sufficient to work an estoppel, though it is otherwise held in England. Casselman v. Casselman, 9 O. R. 442.

Liability.]—Plaintiff purchased from defendant two lots of land, taking the following receipt: "Received, Goderich, 16th June, 16th effectually avoided. Cochrane v. McDonald, 11 C. P. 202.

Mortgagee's Action Against Mortgagor's Grantor, 1—To a declaration on a evenant for quiet enjoyment, in a mortgage to the plaintius executed by T., the defendants' grantee, one defendant plended that T. did not, after the making of that deed, convey to the plaintiffs. The deed from the defendants to T. was dated 22nd June, and the mortgage from T. to the plaintiffs was dated 10th April, 1855. Both were registered on the 28th July, the deed first. It appeared that there were two mortgages from T. to the plaintiffs, on another lot, when this mortgage was made, and instead of which it was given. After executing this mortgage T. found that a deed from defendants to him was necessary to give him the legal title, and he got the deed in question. The two mortgages were not discharged until the 16th August:—Held, that the mortgage was not intended to take effect until the perfecting of T.'s title and the discharge of the other mortgages for which it was given, and that the plaintiffs therefore could recover:—Held, also, that if the mortgage had been delivered before the deed, defendants could not have been liable on the ground of estoppel, for the estoppel would apply to T. only, not to defendants. Trust and Loan Co. v. Covert, 32 U. C. R. 2222.

Quebec Law — Timber Limits—Warrunty, —On a sale of "timber limits," held under licenses, in pursuance of C. S. C. c. 23, a clause of simple warranty (garantie de tous troubles généralement quel-conques) does not operate to protect the purchaser against eviction by a person claiming to be entitled under a prior license to a portion of the limits sold. Judgment below, 6 S. C. R. 425, reversed. Ducondu v. Dupuy, 9 App. Cas. 150.

Sale of Timber—Recitals—Right to Conrey.]—An indenture between plaintiff and defendant recited that defendant was the owner and occupier of certain timber limits, and had agreed to sell to the plaintiff all the square timber growing there of a specified length for $1,000, the receipt of which was acknowledged, and witnessed that the plaintiff "had a right to cut, make, and draw off the said timber until the 15th April next, and not longer:"— Held, that taken altogether the instrument contained a covenant by defendant that he owned the limits, and had power to sell and give the plaintiff a right to remove the timber. Link v. Hunter, 27 U. C. R. 187.

Short Forms Act—Omission of Qualifying Words—Covenante's Mortgage to Covenantor Outstanding.]—Action by the plaintiff against defendant as administrative of one Jack. for breach of covenant for title conplaintiff. The deed purported to be under the Short Forms Act and the covenant was that the grantor had the right to convey, omitting the words "notwithstanding any act of the said covenantor:"—Held, following Brown v, O'Dwyer, 3S U. C. R. 354, that although not in accordance with the statute, it bound the covenantor as an absolute covenant that he was seised and had a right to convey in fee simple. McKay v, McKay, 31 C. P. 1.

Special Covenant.)—Defendant conveyed his equity of redemption in certain land to the plaintiff, subject to two mortgages, one made by himself, the other by a stranger, covenanting that notwithstanding anything done by him he was entitled to such equity, and had good right to grant the same to plaintiff; that the lands were not subject to any incumbrance but the mortgages mentioned, and that he had done or suffered nothing whereby such equity could be affected; and further, that the plaintiff might quietly enjoy the land after the 1st November next, without interruption from the defendant or any other person, and that free from all arrears of taxes, and from all former conveyances, mortgages (except the mortgages referred to), judgments, especially any and all undischarged judgments registered against the lands of the defendant, and of and from all manner of other charges and incumbrances whatsoever:—Held, that the last covenant was not restricted to judgments against the defendant, but extended to judgments against the defendant, but extended to judgments against the grantor. Austin v. Ferguson, 25 U. C. R. 270.

Special Words.] — Held, that the full covenant for quiet enjoyment and freedom from incumbrances, contained in a deed for the conveyance of land, was not controlled by the restrictive words preceding the earlier covenants. Wallbridge v. Everitt, 22 C. P. 28.

Usual Covenants.]—"Usual covenants" in a conveyance to a purchaser extend only to the acts of the vendor, if himself a purchaser for value; if he take by descent, to the acts of himself and his ancestors; and if by devise, to the acts of himself and his devisor. Gamble v. McKay, 7 C. P. 319.

II. PERFORMANCE AND BREACH.

1. In General.

Alternative.] — Defendant covenanted to pay £100 to plaintiff in three months after a certain day, or as soon as the defendant returned from the United States after having taken possession of certain land (which had been sold by the plaintiff to the defendant, or disposed of any part thereof. The plaintiff assigned as a breach, that although the three months had elapsed, defendant had not paid the money, without averring that the defendant had returned from the United States, having taken possession, &c;—Held, sufficient. Hardy v, Johnston, 2 U. C. R. 160.

Assignment of Mortgage — Collateral Covenant—Covenante Dealing with Lands.]
—The defendant M. had in his possession, as executor of J. D. C. an one possession, as executor of J. D. C. an one possession in the secretary of J. D. C. an one possession, as collateral security for moneys advanced to such agent, in all about $400. Some years after M. executed an assignment of this mortgage to S. C., a legatee under the will, for the alleged purpose of securing payment of her legacy, at the same time giving a personal covenant for the same object. H. assuming to act as owner of such mortgage, wrote to the persons owning the equity of redemption, that he controlled the mortgage; that the lands were incumbered for more than their value; and suggesting that they should convey their right to him. This they did for $30, by conveying to a trustee for H., and subsequently H. in consideration of $5,000 obtained from S. C. an assignment of her interest in the R. mortgage, and also an assignment of $5,000; acceptying a conveyance of other lands, which he shortly afterwards sold for $6,500 cash. The whole amount of H.'s claim, including the $500 paids R. C., did not exceed $1,500 — Held, reversing the judgment of M.'s covenant. Wilkins v, McLean, 13 A. R. 467. But see S. C., 14 S. C. R. 22, reversing the court of appeal and restoring the judgment of the common pleas division.

Bailif's Misconduct—Personal Judgment— — Action against Sureties.]— The plaintif sued C., a division court bailif, and his sureties, on their covenant that the bailiff would not misconduct himself in office, alleging a judgment recovered by himself against C., for selling his goods under execution contrary to the orders of the plaintiff in the suit, and a fi. fa. on such judgment returned nulla bona as to part, and claiming to recover the balance:—Held, that the declaration was bad, for the plaintiff having recovered judgment against C. for the tort, could not afterwards sue upon the covenant for the same cause of action. Sloan v. Creasor, 22 U. C. R. 127. See McArthur v. Cool, 19 U. C. R. 476.

Building Contract - Penalty for Delay - Waiter, Declaration for work and materials in construction of a house for defendants. Sixth plea: that by deed, dated 31st July, 1871, plaintiff covenanted to finish the works before the 31st October, 1871, un-der a forfeiture of $20 per week for every week the work was left unfinished after that day: that the plaintiff did not complete the works till twenty weeks after said date. thereby $400 became due from plaintiff to defendants, which defendants are willing to set off. Fourth replication, on equitable grounds, that by the said deed the work was to be done to the satisfaction of S. & G., architects, and if any dispute arose between the parties touching the works or the meaning of the contract, &c., it should be referred to S. & G., whose award should be final: that by the said deed defendants agreed to pay the plaintiff $3.037 on the certificate of S. & G., eighty per cent, on the work and materials, as done and provided, and the balance one month after the whole had been completed, subject to any deduction for the nonfulfilment of the terms of the deed: that the plaintiff completed said works to the satisfaction of S. & G. without objection as to the time within which it was to be done, either from the architects or the defendants: that the architects certified from time to time, as provided in said deed, and on completion certified that the whole had been completed, and that the plaintiff was entitled to be paid for the same: that more than a month had elapsed after the last certificate was given: that no complaint was made by defendants after or before that certificate, or before suit, that the work had not been completed in time, and no deduction was sought to be made for nonfulfilment of the contract: that defendants by parol waived and discharged the plaintiff from the per-formance of the alleged covenant, and on completion of the work promised to pay the plaintiff notwithstanding anything in the said indenture to the contrary contained. And that upon the faith of said promise the plaintiff delivered possession of the premises to defendants, who accepted the same. Fifth replication, on equitable grounds, that after the breach in the plea alleged, the defendants, for good and sufficient consideration, by parol, discharged the plaintiff from the performance of the covenant and damages for the breach thereof:—Held, on demurrer, 1. Fourth replication bad, for it disclosed no equity, and was multifarious, inconsistent, and embarrassing: that the architects could only certify subject to defendants' right of deduction: that the omission to complain was immaterial: that the parol waiver, after breach and with-out consideration, could not avail: that the promise to pay, as alleged, might mean subject to the deduction; and that the delivering possession to the plaintiffs of their own building, as stated, could form no satisfaction: 2 that the fifth replication was good. Simpson v. Kerr, 33 U. C. R. 345.

City of Toronto—Maintenance of Court House—Legislation.]—In consequence of the separation of the city of Toronto from the county of York for judicial purposes, a deed was executed between the respective corporations, in which the city covenanted to pay the county a certain annual sum for the use of the court house. The deed also contained other agreements as to use of zaol. This arrangement was to continue in force until twelve months' notice to determine it should be given. By the Law Reform Act which came into force in February, 1869, the city was remuited to the county for judicial purposes, and on 21st March, 1869, the city gave the county the stipulated notice as to intended discontinuance of use of gaol, stating that as to the court house the action of the Legislature had virtually terminated the provision respecting it, and that no further payment would therefore be made:—Held, that the city had been released from its covenant to pay for the court house by the Law Reform Act, and also that there was no liability for an aliquot portion of the half year's rent which would have become due on 21st March following. County of York v. City of Toronto, 21 C. P. 95.

Disposal of Business—Transfer of Interest.—Where there was a covenant by defendant that one-half of the surplus proceeds of goods, transferred by the plaintiff to the defendant after deduction of liabilities, should be paid to the plaintiff by the defendant, by his promissory note at two years, with a proviso that should the defendant, or the firm of T. & S., of which the defendant was a member, dispose of their business, or make an assignment for the benefit of creditors, the note should become due; and S. subsequently retired from the business and transferred to the defendant all his interest therein:—Held, that the transfer by S. to T. was not a breach of the covenant, and that the time of payment of the note was not thereby accelerated. Masters v. Threlkeld, 12 O. R. 645.

Hire of Vessel—Loss of Vessel.]—The plaintiff declared in covenant on defendant's agreement for the hire of a steamboat, for which certain sums were to be paid by instalments, and it was provided that the defendant should employ an experienced and competent captain, officers, and men, and that if from any other cause than carelessness or bad management on the part of the master or hands on board she should be lost during the term, then the instalment should not further be paid; and the plaintiff assigned a breach in the non-payment of £1.250, the instalment due on 1st December, 1842. Defendant pleaded that before that sum became payable, the steamboat from a certain cause other than such carelessness or bad management, to wit, because she was run into by a schooner called the Canada, was sunk and wholy lost, of which the plaintiff had notice, and the defendant was thereby discharged:—Held, plea bad, because the accident was not so described as to except the master and hands on board from being the occasion of the loss. Counter v. Hamilton, 6 O. S. 612.

Indemnity—Release.]—A covenant by a purchaser with his vendor that he will pay the mortgage moneys and interest secured by indomnify and save harmless the vendor from all loss, costs, charges, and damages sustained by him by reason of any default, is a covenant of indemnity merely; and if before default the purchaser obtains a release from the only person who could in any way damnify the vendor, he has satisfied his liability. Smith v. Pears, 24 A. R. 82.

Insurance Claim—Proofs of Loss.]—Defendants covenanted to pay the plaintiff $951, and by the same agreement it was made a condition that the plaintiff $950 and condition that the plaintiff should allow his name to be used in prosecuting a claim in which defendants were interested, against an insurance company: that he would personally present his particulars of loss, with the usual affidavits and certificate required by the company, whenever requested in writing so to do by any of the parties to the agreement; and that if the claim should be defeated by any gross negligence of the plaintiff, then this agreement should be void. In an action upon defendant's covenant:—Held, that it was not necessary that the plaintiff should present the necessary papers in person to the company, or on the precise day named by defendants; and that he must be held to have performed the condition upon the evidence set out in the claim was not defeated owing to their insufficiency. Rice v. Wells, 20 U. C. R. 404.

Interference under Superior Authority—Covenantee Himself to Blame.]—By letters patent, bearing date in 18-40, certain lands situate on the water's edge in the city of Toronto were granted to one A., the patent containing a condition for the erection of an explanade according to a certain plan, within three years. A., by indenture, demissed the said lands to M., of whom plaintiff was assignee, with full covenants against all the world, and M. covenanted to perfor 2.10, except the condition in the patent. Me for the lessees should to the corporation of the city of Toronto should do it, and impose a special rate to defray the expense thereof; and by 20 Vict. c. 80, further powers were granted to the corporation. The corporation entered upon the premises, and by filling up the space between the water's edge and the esplanade, prevented the working of the plaintiff's mill. For this the plaintiff brought an action on the covenant against defendants, the assignees of the lessor:—Held, that as the act of the corporation was done under superior authority (the Legislature), although the statute did not exist at the time of the execution of the lessor, and as the breach of covenant did not arise from the neglect, fraud, or procurement of the lessor, but from the non-fulfilment by the lessee of his own covenants, defendants were entitled to succeed. Snarr v. Baldwin, 11 C. P. 353.

Law Society — Maintenance of Osgoode Hall—Increased Cost.]—In 1846 the Law Society of Typer Canada entered into a covenant with the Crown, in conformity with the Crown in the Crown and without further charge to the Province, for all time to come, fit and proper accommodation for the superior courts of law and equity for Upper Canada, as then existing or thereafter to be constituted; and in default, or in case of the buildings becoming dilapidated, &c., the Crown to repair, &c., and the outlay to become a charge on the society's land. On the execution of this covenant, the sum of £6,000 was paid over to the society by the Government, and proper accommodation was provided by the former for the then existing courts. Subsequently the court of common pleas was established, and it became necessary to enlarge the buildings in which the courts were held at greatly enhanced outlay. Is Viet. c. 122, 20 Viet. c. 64, 22 Viet. c. 31, and C. S. I. C. c. 33, were passed for raising function the purpose; and the moneys authority were expended in the erection of Osgoodhers were expended in the erection of Osgoodhers, and the request of the courts. In 1805, at the request of the society, a certain sum and pulled by the Government for necessary repaired the building, and by subsequent arrangement the building, and by subsequent arrangement proposes of heat and light:—Held, affirming purposes of the experiment to repair and maintain the building known as "Osgoode Hall." for the accommodation of the superior courts of common law and equity; and that no estopped arose in favour of the society, against the Crown, in consequence of the several Acts of the Legislature that had been passed in relation thereto. Regina v. Law Society, 21 C. P. 229.

Lease of Chattels—Loss by Fire.]— Where the lessee of goods covenanted to restore them to the lessor "at the expiration of the term, in as good order as they then were, reasonable wear and tear only excepted," and the goods during the term were destroyed by fire without the lessee's default:—Held, that the absolute words of the covenant were controlled by the implied condition that the goods should continue to exist, and that the lessee was not liable on the covenant for not restoring them at the end of the term. Chamberlen
v. Trenouth, 23 C. P. 497.

Held, also, that the exception "reasonable wear and tear excepted," referred to the order and condition of the goods, so as to exclude bad repair, breakages, &c., not arising from reasonable wear and tear, but did not amount to a guarantee of the continued existence of the goods. Ib.

Mortgage—Conveyance to One Mortgages. —A conveyance of the equity of redemption to one of several joint mortgages, he covenanting to pay off the mortgage, does not extinguish the mortgager's liability on his covenant for payment of the mortgage debt. Scarlett v. Natress, 23 A. R. 297.

Mortgage Sale-Purchaser's Covenant to Indemnify.]—The declaration set out that the plaintiff was assignee of a mortgage made by one A. to R., containing a power of sale, under which he sold to defendant for less than the mortgage money, and defendant covenant-"in case any chancery or other law ed that proceedings arising out of said sale payable by the plaintiff, he, the defendant, would pay that sum," to wit, any costs or charges in-curred by the said plaintiff by reason of such chancery or other law proceedings: that afterwards R. filed a bill, to which the plaintiff and defendant were made parties, whereupon the sale was set aside, plaintiff being ordered to pay his own costs of defence, &c.; and these costs the plaintiff claimed to recover. Defendant, in a plea on equitable grounds, set out two agreements between himself and defendant, of the same date, which he alleged formed part of one transaction and constituted the sale. By the first the plaintiff agreed to sell the land to defendant for £400, £50 to be paid down, and forfeited on non-payment of the halance within a month; a deed to be given on payment in full. By the second it was agreed that if the plaintiff should fail to make the balance of his mortgage money from A., defendant would pay it, and all costs to be incurred in suing on the covenant, "and in case any chancery or other law proceedings arise out of the sale payable by E.," the plaintiff, defendant covenanted to pay "that sum" to the plaintiff. The plen then stated the bill in chancery, and the setting aside the manners to the plaintiff, who gave not on the plaintiff, and the setting aside the anticest to the plaintiff, who gave not on the plaintiff, who gave not on the plaintiff, who gave to the plaintiff, who gave to the plaintiff, who gave to the plaintiff never completed the sale, or gave defendant any title; and that the consideration for defendant's covenant failed, and his agreement was done may with by the decree — Held, on demurrer, that the plea shewed no ground for absolving defendant from his express covenant, which was independent of the plaintiff's covenant to give the deed, and that he was liable to pay the plaintiff's costs incurred to his own solicitor, not merely costs given against him in favour of other parties. Evans v. Turley, 23 U. C. R. 282.

Relief against Breach - Mortgage.]-The defendant gave a mortgage to the plaintiff, in which he covenanted to pay the mortmoney in nine equal annual instalments, and also to clear up and fence ten acres in each year for five years from the date of the mortgage, and to build a log house on the land within one year, and there was a proviso "that the mortgage should immediately become due and payable after default being made in building the house and clearing the land at the periods of time above mentioned." No default occurred in payment of the mortgage money, but the log house was not built until about a but the log house was not built until about a month after the expiry of the first year, nor were ten acres fenced, though more than ten were cleared:—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to insist on a forfeiture of the extended terms of payment in consequence of the breach of the covenants as to the erection of the house, and to judgment for redemption or foreclosure, but should have no costs. Relief is given against forfeiture for non-payment of rent, and in certain cases for neglecting to insure, but no case appears in which default like the present has been relieved against:—Semble, that if the only default had been the not putting up the fence, the forfeiture would be relieved against, for the clearing of the land was the substantial part of the covenant:—Semble, also, that in this Province equity will not relieve against a proviso in a mortgage that on default of payment of a part of the debt the whole shall become due. Graham v. Ross, 6 O. R. 154.

Renewal of Lease—Illegality to Lessee's Knowledge.]—To an action against a municipal corporation for not renewing a lease pursuant to their covenant contained in it, defendants pleaded that they had no authority to make the lease, as defendant, who was an inhabitant of the town, well knew when he took it: and that before the term expired, a decree was obtained against them in chancery, of which defendant had notice before this action, declaring that the land in question was dedicated for a market square only, and that this lease had been granted without authority, and should not be renewed:—Held, on de-murrer, no defence. Wade v. Town of Brantford, 19 U. C. R. 207.

Rent Charge — Sale under Execution.]— Under a fi. fa. lands against the plaintiff in this suit, in favour of A., the sheriff sold to A, a rent charge which defendant in this suit had granted by deed to the plaintiff for her life. The deed contained a personal covenant of the detendant to the plaintiff to pay the rent charge. Quere, whether the sale to A, would not have the effect of discharging the defendant from his covenant. Smith v.
Turnbull, 1 P. R. 38.

Sale of Factory—Covenant not to Remove Machinery.—On the sale of a woollen factory and machinery, it was stipulated that until the purchase money should be fully paid the vendees were not to remove the machinery. The vendors afterwards executed a conveyance to the purchasers, and the latter, to secure the unpaid purchase money, executed a mortgage which purported to be of the factory only, and did not mention the machinery:—Held, that the covenant against removing the machinery remained in force. Crawford v. Findlay, 18 Gr. 51.

Separation Deed — Annuity.]—An unqualified covenant in a separation deed for payment of an annuity to the wife for her life, is not avoided by the subsequent renunciation of the parties, or by the wife's leaving the husband without cause. Walker v. Walker, 19 Gr. 37.

Towage—Tug Frozen, in.]—Semble, that it is no defence to an action against the commander of a steamboat for not towing, &c., that he could not perform his contract by reason of his towboat being unavoidably frozen in the ice. Dorland v. Bonter, 5 U. C. R. 583.

2. For Title.

Dower,]—It is no breach of the covenant for seisin free from incumbrances that the covenantor's wife is alive and has not barred her dower; nor is it any breach of a covenant for further assurance that a deed of release of his wife's dower was tendered to the covenantor to be executed, and refused. Boucer v. Brass, E. T. 5 Vict.; Hoyt v. Widderfield, 5 U. C. R. 180: Dack v. Currie, 12 U. C. R. 334; Wilson v. Biggar, 26 U. C. R. 85.

Semble, that if the woman survive her husband, an action on the covenant for further assurance will only lie upon tender of an effectual conveyance to pass her estate. Hoyt v, Widderfield, 5 U. C. R. 180.

The plaintiff declared on the covenants for seisin and quiet enjoyment, alleging as a breach the prospective claim for dower of defendant's wife. The defendant by his plea set up a special agreement with defendant, by which the claim for dower was excluded from the operation of the covenants, and provided for by a certain bond. The bond having been set out on oyer, the plea was held bad, for not describing the bond correctly as regards the recital, or setting it out according to its leval effect; but the court gave judgment for defendant, on the ground that a prospective claim to dower is no breach either of the covenant for seisin or quiet enjoyment. Quarre, however, whether the intention of the parties did not sufficiently appear from the bond to enable the court to stay proceedings in this action as being against good faith, unless the plaintiff would swear that the agreement was not such as alleged by defendant, Quere, also, whether, taking the bond and award together as one instrument, the covenant might not be read as containing an exception of the claim for dower. Thornhill v. Jones, 12 U. C. R. 231.

One T. S. conveyed lands to one R. with full covenants. R. conveyed by a similar deed to plaintiff. T. S. died leaving a wife, who re-overed judgment for her dower. R. paid her a certain sum in accord and satisfaction:——Held, that the recovery was a breach of the covenant for quiet enjoyment, which is prospective in its operation; and this though the plaintiff was never evicted, and no dower assigned. Cuthbert v. Street, 9 C. P. 115.

Declaration on a covenant for quiet enjoyanent. Breach, that one F. G., as the widow of J. G., claimed dower to which she was sutitled against plaintiff, and threatened to evict him from one-third of the land; and plaintiff, to protect himself from eviction, was compelled to pay $150, and other large sums, to settle said claim, and to procure a release from F. G.;—Held, on demurrer, declaration good: for that the plaintiff was not obliged to delay settling the claim until a judgment in dower had been obtained, much less until eviction. McClure v. Grafton, 19 C. P. 149.

Easement — Interruption — Title.]—On 3rd February, 1873, the company granted to A. T. P. (through whom S. P., the original plaintiff in this action, claimed), a mill site partition in this action, claimed), a mill site on the river Matthand with certain easements, one of which was the right to erect a dam across the river, high enough to take up eight feet of the fall of the river, the location of the dam being defined by the deed, and covenanted that they had the right to cover and for that they had the right to convey and for quiet enjoyment. The company had previously granted (without reserving any of the ease ments granted to A. T. P.), an island in the river called "Island C." and two parcels of land, one on each bank, immediately opposite each other, and adjoining the property of the plaintiff, called respectively "The Great plaintiff. called respectively "The Great Meadow," and "Block F." all three of which were above the land granted to A. T. P., and subsequently became the property of H. Y. A. In an action by S. P. (who died after action brought, M. A. P. being made plaintiff by order of revivor), against the company, it was alleged and proved that a dam could not be maintained across the river high enough to take up eight feet of the fall of the river. without submerging a great part of, if not the whole of "Island C." and penning back water and ice on "The Great Meadow," and "Block F." and encroaching upon the rights of H. Y. A. as riparian proprietor of the said It was contended, on the part of the defendants, that the mortgages of the property should be made parties:—Held, that O. J. Act, s. 17, s. s. 5, enables a mortgagor, entitled to the possession of land, as to which the mortgagee has given no notice of his intention to take possession, to sue to prevent or recover damages in respect of any trespass or other wrong relative thereto in his own name only, and that the objection for want of par-ties ought not to prevail:—Held, also, that in an action on a covenant for quiet enjoyment

a plaintiff must shew an interruption or obstruction of the easement, in order to entitle him to recover, and that S. P. not having attempted to enjoy his easement by building a dam in the place and manner specified, and not having been interrupted, he could not succeed on the covenant for quiet enjoyment; Held, also, as to the covenant for title, that as the supreme court of Canada had decided in Platt v, Attrill, 10 S. C. R. 425, that the company had no right to grant the easement to A. T. P., that decision was binding here, although the company were not parties to the suit; and that the covenant was broken as soon as it was made, and the plaintiff was soon as it was made, and the plaintin was entitled to such damages as accrued during the life of S. P.; and, following Empire Gold Mining Co. v. Jones, 19 C. P. 245, that the damages would be the difference in money between the value of the estate that had passed, and that which the deed purported to convey, and the company covenanted that they had a right to convey. It appeared that during S. P.'s ownership the Goved that during S. F. 8 ownership the doc-ernment had constructed a breakwater at the mouth of the river, and that S. P. had been awarded damages "on account of the been awarded damages on account of the penning or damming up of the waters by the construction of the breakwater, and forcing them back on S. P.'s property," and on an other account not material to this action; and on an-Held, that as the sum awarded was a lump sum for both accounts together, and as the evidence on the arbitration shewed that the breakwater only affected S. P. to the extent of three feet of water, leaving him a fall of five feet, the value of which could only be ascertained by a reference, and as the subjects of the arbitration and the action on the covenant were not the same, the company were not entitled to set off the money recovered from the Government against their liability for damages for their breach of contract:— Held, also, that the registration of the previous conveyances, even if that was notice, was no bar to a recovery on the covenant. no oar to a recovery on the covenant. Are plaintiff, therefore, was held entitled to damages for breach of the covenant for title, and a reference was directed. Platt v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co. of Canada, 12 O. R. 119.

Highway.]—Semble, a public highway is not an incumbrance within the covenant for quiet enjoyment. Moore v. Boulton, 10 U. C. R. 140.

Local Improvements. —Action on covenants in a deed of land, whereby the defendant covenanted that he had done no act * whereby or by means whereof the lands * were, or should, or might be in anywise impeached, charged, or affected, or incumbered in title, estate, or otherwise however, and that the grantees should enjoy them free from all incumbrances. It appeared that a scheme of local improvement which resulted in the imposition of a fixed rate for ten years, as a charge upon the lands conveyed, to defray the expenses of the improvement, was undertaken, at the instance and upon the petition of the defendant and other property holders interested, under R. S. O. 1887 c. 184, s. 612, s.-s. 9. The by-law creating the charge was passed before the conveyance to the plain-tiff, although the precise sum to be paid by each parcel was not ascertained by apportionment till after the conveyance. The by-law also contained a provision for commutation at the option of the defendant in joining in the petition of the defendant in joining in the petition of the defendant in joining in the petition of the defendant in joining in the petition.

tion, was the means by which an incumbrance was created on the property, and was a breach of the covenants for which the plaintiffs were entitled to recover;—Held, also, that the plaintiffs were entitled as damages in this action to a sum sufficient to remove the charge. Per Boyd, C.—Different would be the conclusion if the taxes had been imposed by municipal authority, without the intervention of the defendant; Moore v. Hynes, 22 U. C. R. 107, distinguished, Cumberland v. Kearns, 18 O. R. 151; 17 A. R. 281,

In a contract for sale and exchange of certain lands free from incumbrances, it was provided that "unearned fire insurance premium, interest, taxes and rental" should be "proportioned and allowed to date of completion of sale;"—Held, notwithstanding, that special frontage rates imposed for local improvements and construction of sewers by bylaw passed prior to the contract, the period for payment of which had not expired, were incumbrances to be discharged by the vendors respectively;—Held, also, that the vendors respectively;—Held, also, that the vendors respectively is to the date of the contract and frontage rate imposed by a by-law passed subsequently both to the date of the contract and the date fixed for the completion of the sale, inasmuch as the work was actually done and the expenditure actually made before the contract, the council having first done the work and then passed the by-law to pay for it under 53 Vict. c. 50, s. 38 (O.). The substantial charge as a whole came into existence upon the finishing of the work. Cumberland c. Kearns, 18 O. R. 151, 17 A. R. 281, commented on and distinguished. Re Graydon and Hammith, 20 O. R. 199.

A contract for the sale of land provided for the payment of the purchase money in quarterly instalments; when half was paid the venter case to convey and give the usual stantony compared to the contract. In an action to recover a the tenter than the contract in the contract when the contract were incumbrances to be discharged by the vendor; but rates imposed and work done after the contract were not so. Its Graydon and Hammill, 20 O. R. 199, followed. Ecclésiastiques de St. Sulpice de Montreal v. City of Montreal, 16 S. C. R. 400, distinguished. Held, also, that the covenant parainst incumbrances were independent; and the vorenant against incumbrances were independent; and the covenant against incumbrances were independent; and the vendor was entitled to judgment for the instalments; but the purchaser was entitled to judgment for the instalments; but the purchaser was entitled to shew the existence of incumbrances as an equitable ground of relief, and, the time for completion of the contract not having arrived, to pay into court so much of his purchase money as might be necessary to protect him against the incumbrances. McDonald v. Murray, 11 A. R. 101, and Tisdale v. Dallas, 11 C. P. 238, distinguished. Armstrong v. Auger, 21 O. R. 98.

Assessment rolls were made by the City of Montreal under 27 & 28 Vict, c. 60 and 29 & 20 Vict, c. 56 apportioning the cost of certain local improvements on lands benefited thereby. One of the rolls was set aside and the other was lost. The corporation obtained power from the Legislature by two special Acts to make new rolls, but in the meantime the property in question had been sold and conveyed.

New rolls were made assessing the lands for the same improvements, and the purchaser paid the taxes and brought suit en garantie to recover the amount from the vendor:— Held, that as two taxes could not both exist for the same purpose at the same time, and the rolls made after the sale were therefore the only rolls in force, no taxes for the local improvements had been legally imposed till after the purchaser had become owner of the lands, and that the vendor was not obliged by her warranty and declaration that taxes had been paid to reimburse the purchaser for the payment of the special taxes apportioned against the lands subsequent to the sale, Banque Ville Marie v. Morrison, 25 S. C. R. 289.

Mortgages.] — Defendant conveyed to plaintiff certain land which had been previously mortgaged, covenanting for enjoyment free from incumbrances and for further assurance. Plaintiff sued upon these covenants; and it appeared that before action the mortgage had been satisfied, though no discharge was recorded, and that he nad sold the land to a third party, who had not been disturbed in his possession, but who had refused to pay part of the purchase money, for want of such discharge:—Held, that the action could not be maintained. Kennedy v. Solomon, 14 U. C. R. 623.

A party giving an absolute covenant in a conveyance of real estate, and a bond conditioned that it should be void upon payment of a certain mortgage for £75 upon the land conveyed, is liable thereon, although no legal proceedings may have been taken upon the mortgage by which the party is damnified. Carlisle v. Orde, 7 C. P. 456.

P. conveyed certain lands to defendant, "subject to a mortgage," and with a covenant for quiet enjoyment free from all incumbrances. Defendant then demised the same language of the property of the property

On the sale of land, subject to a prior mort-gage by the vendor, not then due, the vendor covenanted with the purchaser, B., that he had not incumbered the property, and B. extended a mortgage for his urpaid purchase money. The intention was that the vendor should pay the prior mortgage, but he failed to do so. After it became due, he sold and sasigned B.'s mortgage to the plaintiff, who had notice of all the facts; the plaintiff afterwards obtained an assignment of the prior mortgage, and B. paid off the same—Held, that B. was entitled to apply on his mortgage the money so paid by him to the plaintiff. Henderzon v. Brocen, 18 Gr. 79.

Proceedings in Chancery.] — Plaintiff declared against executors, on a qualified covenant by their testator, that he had the right to convey certain land, and for quiet possession, assigning as a breach of the first covenant that the testator at the time of making the deed was only a trustee of the land for one D., in whom the right to convey the same in fee as beneficial owner was vested, and by whom it had been conveyed to testator in pursunner of a conspiracy between the testator and D. to defraud one W., a creditor of D., who had then a writ in the hands of the sheriff against D.'s lands. The plaintiff then alleged that W., having purchased the land at sheriff's sale on the execution, filed a bill in chancery against defendants and the plaintiff, and was declared to have a lien on the land for the amount of his claim; and that although the defendants had paid the sum due ., they had not paid the plaintiff's costs of defending the suit in chancery :- Held, that the declaration was bad, for the covenant for right to convey was qualified, and the writ being in the sheriff's hands before the deed to the testator, the sale and subsequent proceedings did not arise from any act of his in accepting that deed for the purpose alleged, but might equally have taken place without it; nor could they support a recovery on the other covenant, also qualified, if they had been assigned as a breach of it. Shire v. Gates, 21 U. C. R. 419.

The declaration alleged that W., defendants' testator, by indenture made under the Act, conveyed certain land to the plaintiff, in fee, covenanting for right to convey, and that he had done no act to incumber; and assigned as a breach, that before the execution of said deed the title was vested in the Bank of Upper Canada, who conveyed to W., being then a director and vice-president of, and as such a trustee for, the said bank; by reason whereof the said W, had not good right to convey, and the said lands were impeached in title and estate, and afterwards many persons to whom the plaintiff had agreed to sell parts of said land, refused in consequence thereof to perform their contracts; and the court of chan-cery, in a suit duly instituted, thereupon decreed the plaintil's title to be defective for this cause, whereby the plaintiff was unable to enforce said agreements, or to sell the land, &c.:-Held, on demurrer, that the declaration shewed no cause of action, for, among other reasons, the legal estate passed to the plaintiff, the defect alleged being an equitable one only; no eviction or disturbance was shewn and the alleged proceedings in chancery would not compel a court of law to hold the title bad. Brunskill v. Wilson, 25 U. C. R. 248.

Declaration, that defendant by deed conveyed land to one T, in fee, covenanting that he should quietly enjoy, without the let, suit, &c., of defendants or any person; that T, conveyed to the plaintiffs, who entered into possession; and afterwards a bill in chancery was fleed against plaintiffs and defendants, and it was decreed in the suit that defendants had no right to convey, being trustees only; and that the plaintiffs were ordered to convey the land and give up possession thereof, and of their deeds, to two trustees named, whereby the plaintiffs had lost the land, and been compelled to pay costs of the suit, &c.:—Held, that a good cause of action was shewn; that it was unnecessary to allege an eviction; and that the proceedings in chancery constituted a breach of the covenant. Trust and Loan Co. of Upper Canada v. Covert, 30 U.C. R.

One defendant pleaded that since action the plaintiffs had conveyed the land to C. and M.; and the other, that the plaintiffs had so conveyed in pursuance of the decree, C. and M. being the trustees appointed thereby:—Held, clearly no defence. Ib.

Sale of Land — Mortgage Back — Breach of Proviso for Quiet Enjoyment by Mortgagor. |-The plaintiff, on the 4th April, 1864, mortgaged land to L., who covenanted thereby for quiet enjoyment by the plaintiff until default. To an action against L.'s administrator on this covenant, alleging an eviction by persons claiming under L., defendant pleaded that L. conveyed the land to the plaintiff on the 31st March, 1864, which was the plaintiff's only title to the land; that the mortgage sued on was to secure the purchase money, and was executed immediately after the deed, and as a part of the same trans-action: that the plaintiff by the mortgage covenanted that he was seised in fee and had good right to convey; and that the eviction complained of was an action of ejectment complained of was an action or ejectment brought by the heirs of L., on the ground that L. was of unsound mind when he executed the deed on the 31st March, 1864, which was proved at the trial, and the jury thereupon found for the heirs:—Held, that the plea was bad; for the avoidance of the deed for insanity did not necessarily involve the avoidance of the mortgage; nor did the estoppel applicable to the deed extend to the mortgage; that defendant should have pleaded L.'s insanity directly to the mortgage if he wished to test its validity; and moreover the parties here were not the same as in the ejectment suit, nor was it certain from the record in electment that the recovery therein was on the ground alleged. Eccles v. Lowry, 32 U. C.

Taxes.]—Taxes due upon land at the time of sale, are an incumbrance within the covenant for quiet enjoyment; but the plaintiff can recover only the arrears due at the date of the conveyance. Hapnes v. Smith, 11 U. C. R. 57.

A sewerage rate imposed by by-law is not a tax upon the land, but a personal charge upon the owner. Where, therefore, the plaintiff purchased certain land from defendants, in respect of which this rate was for three months overdue, which the plaintiff paid, and also commuted for the entire rate as allowed by the by-law:—Held, that he had no right of action for either of these sums, under the covenants in his deed for seisin and quiet enjoyment, free "from all arrears of taxes and assessments whatsoever due or payable upon or in respect of the said lands." Semble, that even if the rate in arrear were an incumbrance on the land, the payment by way of commutation, being wholly optional, would not be recoverable under the covenant. Moore v. Hynes, 22 U. C. R. 107.

The declaration alleged that by indenture the defendant did (in pursuance of the Act respecting short forms of conveyances) grant to the plaintiff, in fee, certain land subject to the reservations, &c., in the original grant from the Crown; and covenanted with the plaintiff for right to convey, notwithstanding any act of the defendant; and for quiet enjoyment, free from incumbrances. Averment, that the defendant at the time of executing the indenture, was 87.132 in arrar for taxes, which the plaintiff was obliged to pay, and was put to great trouble and expense in defending an action brought by one S. under a covenant for quiet enjoyment in a deed given by plaintiff to her:—Held, that the declaration was bad, because it did not aver that the taxes had accrued during the time the defendant held the land; because the covenants in defendant's deed to plaintiff, and plaintiff's deed to S., were not shewn to be the same, and therefore a recovery upon one might not give a like claim upon the other; and because the plaintiff had assigned his interest in the covenant before the commencement of this action. Harry v. Anderson, 13 C. P. 476.

Defendant conveyed land on the 13th April, 1933, covenniting for quiet enjoyment free from arrears of taxes. The property was assessed in February, and the by-law fixing the rate passed in July:—Held, that the taxes for the year could not be considered as in arrear at the date of the deed, for the amount had not then been ascertained, no rate having been fixed, and they therefore could not be paid. "Arrears" means something behind in payment; it implies a duty and a default. S. 16 of the Assessment Act C. S. U. C. c. 55, is intended only to fix the fixed year as regards taxes, and to provide that no matter when the by-law imposing the rate is passed, they shall be considered as imposed for the year; it gives no retrospective existence to the tax. Corbett v. Taylor, 23 U. C. R. 454.

A declaration on a covenant against incumbrances by defendant or his wife, or any one claiming under them, alleged as a breach that at the time of making said covenant a large sum was in arrear for taxes duly imposed, without shewing that they accrued while defendant owned the land or were caused by his acts:—Held, bad. Silverthorn v. Love, 40 U. C. R. 73.

The purchaser of land gave back a mortgage to secure part of the purchase money, with absolute covenants for payment, &c. In fact a part of the land had been sold for taxes accrued before the vendor acquired title, and the time for redemption had elapsed at the time of the sale:—Held, no answer to a claim for the full amount secured by the mortgage, although the conveyance by the vendor contained covenants limited to his own acts only. Harry v. Anderson, 13 C. P. 576, followed, though doubted; Cockenour v. Bullock, 12 C. P. 138, doubted. In re Kennedy, Wijel v. Kennedy, 26 G. 33.

Warranty—Impeachment by Warrantor.]
—The grantee of the warrantors of a title cannot be permitted to plead technical objections thereto in a suit with the person to whom the warranty was given. Powell v. Watters, 28 S. C. R. 133.

III. RECOVERY IN ACTIONS ON COVENANTS.

1. By and Against Whom.

(a) In General.

Assignment of Covenant by One Joint Covenantee to His Co-covenantees.]—One joint covenantee can by virtue of the Mercantile Amendment Act, R. S.

O. 1887 c. 122, assign to his co-covenantees his interest in the covenant, and they can then sue upon it without joining him as plaintiff. Scarlett v. Nattress, 23 A. R. 297.

Award—Action for Breach.] — Where the plaintiff has been awarded a certain sum in accordance with the terms of an instrument under seal, for the non-payment of such an award the plaintiff should sue in covenant: he cannot sue in assumpsit unless some new consideration, apart from the written instrument, can be proved. Tait v. Atkinson, 3 U. C. R. 152.

Beneficial Right—Stranger.]—Where the effect of a contract is to give a stranger to it a beneficial right thereunder, he may enforce such right by action. And where in an agreement for the exchange of certain lands between the sons of the defendant and a third party, which was carried out, and in which the defendant released her dower, and also conveyed lands of her own to the third party for the benefit of her sons, in consideration whereof they jointly with her covenanted with such third party to pay her an annuity to be secured by mortgage, it was:—Held, that although not named as a covenantee, she was entitled to maintain an action to enforce such covenant, and that a judgment creditor of hers was entitled to have equitable execution against her, and a receiver appointed to receive payment of the annuity. Moot v. Gibson, 21 O. R. 248.

Beneficial Right—Covenant with Mother—Action by Child.]—The defendants' mother having conveyed her farm to them, they mortgaged it to her in consideration of the conveyance and of $2.500, and covenanted in the mortgage, inter alia, to educate their younger brother. The latter was not up and the mortgage, inter alia, to educate their younger brother. The latter was not to part the morter of the mortgage in the morter of the mortgage in the mortgage in the properties of the more it, but there was a stipulation that if the defendants failed to educate him, the mother or her executors might distrain upon them for such sums as might be required from time to time to secure the due performance of the agreement. After the death of the mother, this action was brought by her executors and the younger brother for damages for breach of the covenant:—Held, that there was no trust in favour of the younger brother, and that the action was not maintainable by him. Held, however, that it was maintainable by the executors to the extent that they might recover such sum as would enable them to perform the covenant to educate their co-plaintiff. West v. Houghton, 4 C. P. D. 197, distinguished. Faulkner v. Faulkner v. See Roberts v. Hall, 1 O. R. 388.

Bond to Secure Salary—Nature of Recovery.]—The defendants gave a bond to the plaintiff in the sum of ±35 conditioned to pay him £45 a year so long as he should continue the minister of a certain congregation. They paid him without suit for the first two years. For the next four years the plaintiff sued them, declaring upon the bond as a covenant, and obtained judgments, which were satisfied without any question being raised. He then sued for the sixth year, and the question of defendants' liability was left to the court without pleadings:—Held, that covenant clearly would not lie: but that to a declaration on the bond the former payments, not having been paid or received in satisfaction of the penalty, could form no defence; and that the defendants, therefore, were entitled only to have satisfaction entered on payment of the penalty and costs. Niven v. Jardine, 23 U. C. R. 470.

Church Trustees — Mortgage — Personal Liability.]—The duly appointed trustees of a religious congregation, to whom by that description the site for a church has been conveyed, and who by that description gave to the vendor to secure part of the purchase money a mortgage with the ordinary covenant for payment, are a corporation and are not personally liable upon the mortgage although it is signed and sealed by them individually, Beaty v. Gregory, 28 O. R. 60, 24 A. R. 325.

Covenant to Convey—Heir.]— Held, that an heir could not sue on a covenant with the ancestor to convey land to him, his heirs and assigns, within a certain time, the heir not being mentioned in the covenant, and the breach having taken place in the ancestor's life-time. Goodall v. Elmsley, 1 U. C. R. 457.

Grant of Water Rights—Conditions.]
—Where the plaintiffs, who had built mills on a strenn, by indenture granted a license to the defendant, by indenture granted a license to the defendant, by indenture granted a license to the defendant built bewond over their lands for a mill to be built bewond over the water we not thrown back thereby, nor any injury or damage occasioned to the plaintiffs' mills, and after the defendant's mill had been erected, by an accumulation of ice on the by-wash, the water was forced back on the plaintiffs' mill:—Held, that the plaintiffs might maintain an action for such injury, and that case, and not covenant on the indenture, was the proper form of remedy. Eastwood v. Helliscell, 4 O, 8, 38.

Indemnity—Assignment of Covenant to Indemnify.]—See Sutherland v. Webster, 21 A. R. 228; Ball v. Tennant, 21 A. R. 602.

Indemnity—Right of Action.]—See In-

Joint Covenantors.]—Semble, the rule stated in Rawle on Covenants, 4th ed., p. 538, that when two persons jointly covenant with another, a joint action lies for the covenantee on a breach of covenant by one of the covenantors only, because they are sureties for each other for the due performance of the covenant, should be limited to the case of antecedent breaches, and not be extended to promissory engagements, in the absence of language imputing such suretyship in regard to future acts or breaches. Elliott v. Stanleys. 70, R. 350.

Mortgage—Indemnity.] — See Mortgage, XII. 10 (b).

Partners—Corenant in Firm Name.]—
Two persons carrying on business in partnership as bankers took from a customer as security for his indebtedness to them a conveyance to them individually of certain land which was subject to a mortgage in favour of the plaintiffs. Subsequently, upon proceedlogs being threatned by the plaintiffs upon their mortgage, one of the partners, without the knowledge or assent of the other, in consideration of a stay of proceedings, signed in the firm name a covenant under seal to pay to the plaintiffs the arrears due on the mortgage:—Held, that this covenant bound only the partner who signed it. Hamilton Provident and Loan Society v. Steinhoff, 23 A. R. 184.

Rent Charge—Sale.]—Under a fi. fa. lands, against the plaintiff in this suit, in favour of A., the sheriff sold to A. a rent charge, which defendant in this suit had the suit of the suit had been charged by the suit of the Sale of Vessel—Purchaser Bound by Vendor's Coreant.]—The owner of several steamers, carrying on business as a forwarder, sold one of them to another forwarding firm, and upon the sale covenanted that he would not directly or indirectly have any interest in any vessel navigating the St. Lawrence below Ogdensburg at any time thereafter; and also, that he would not dispose of two other steamers then owned by him to any person or persons for the purpose of navigating the St. Lawrence below Ogdensburg. Afterwards the proprietor transferred his business as forwarder, and sold the two other steamers to persons having full knowledge of this covenant, who notwithstanding commenced running the vessels on the St. Lawrence below Ogdensburg. Upon a bill filled for that purpose, the court held the owners bound by the covenant entered into by the original proprietors, and granted an injunction restraining them from navigating the river below Ogdensburg with those vessels. Holcomb v. Nizon, 5 Gr. 278, 373.

Settlement of Accounts.]—Covenant to pay a sum to be ascertained on settlement of accounts—Construction—Right of action. See Garland v. McDonald, 41 U. C. R. 573.

Unexecuted Deed—Acceptance of Benefit under Deed. —An action of covenant cannot be maintained on a deed conveying land, executed by the grantor, and purporting to contain a covenant by the grantee to pay certain mortrages existing upon the premises but which has not been executed by the grantee, although she has accepted the benefit of the deed. Credit Foncier Franco-Canadien v. Lauric, 27 O. R. 498.

See Contract, IV. 3.

(b) Covenants Running with the Land, and Covenants for Title.

Building Restriction.] — Where D., the owner of certain lands, on selling part to B., inserted this clause in the conveyance: "Bellevue square is private property, but is always to remain unbuilt upon, except one residence with the necessary outbuildings, including porter's lodge," and the purchaser, on his part, covenanted not to allow any business of a certain kind to be carried on on the part conveyed:—Held, that the benefit of the restriction passed to the assignee of the purchaser, as one of the advantages and privileges appurtenant to the land, though the word "assigns" was not there, and though the benefit of it was not formally transferred to him. VanKoughnet v. Denison, 1 O. R. 349; 11 A. R. 699. See S. C., 28 Gr. 485.

Where it is clearly intended to give some tangible benefit to a grantee by such a coverant in the theory since to him, and it formed a property of the contract of the contrac to the language, wintever narrowing may oboccasioned to the party who has entered into the engagement. S. C., 1 O. R. 349. Where the person who was building the house objected to, held under an agreement for a lease, but had made no outlay on the property till after notice was served on her, nor paid any rent:—Held, that she was not in the same position as an innocent person holding for value under a completed instrument, and the erection of the house must be stopped.

Where the square had been built upon for years without objection by purchaser or his vendee, the plaintiff, but the building had been erected by purchasers under a mortgage executed by D. before he conveyed to B.—Held, no proof of acquiescence, as they could not have objected with effect. Ib.

The land having been sold under a mortgage, a portion came again to the hands of D, who proceeded to convey parts of it for building purposes:—Held, that D.'s liability under restrictive agreement not to build on Bellevue square, revived on his again acquiring the property. 8. C, 11 A. R. 639.

Covenant against Incumbrance—
Grantor Seized of Equity of Redemption.]—
Becharation stated that defendant, by indenture, conveyed lands to C. in fee, who on the same day re-conveyed same to defendant by way of mortgage; and defendant afterwards conveyed to one A. in fee, subject to the equity of redemption then existing, and covenanting in the assignment that he had done no act whereby said premises had been incumbered; that A. assigned to W., who assigned in fee to the plaintiff, whereby plaintiff is assignee of the premises, and entitled to sae on defendant's covenant. Breach, that defendant before conveying to C. had mortgaged to one J., who foreclosed, and plaintiff was thereby deprived of his security, &c. Demurrer, because the deed to C. conveyed only the equity of redemption, which alone passed to C., and defendant's covenant applies only to that estate:—Held, declaration good, as there was nothing to shew any intention of the mortgager to limit his covenant to the assignment to plaintiff;—Held, no defence, for the covenant and all damage accrued before the assignment to plaintiff;—Held, no defence, for the covenant for title in the original mortgage, by which the premises passed to plaintiff, and plaintiff was entitled to all the incidents thereto, and therefore to bring this action for breach of the paid covenant. Meredith v. McCutcheon, 13 C. P. 209.

A covenant against incumbrances in a deed purporting to convey the legal fee simple, runs with the land, although the grantor was in fact seised only of an equity of redemption. Empire Gold Mining Co. v. Jones, 19 C. P. 245.

Declaration—1st count, on the covenant for right to convey in a deed of three lots of land by defendant to plaintiffs, alleging that at the time of making the conveyance dependant had granted one of the lots to S.;

2nd, on the covenant for quiet possession in the same deed. Breach, that before making it defendant had mortgaged one of the lots to in fee, and afterwards S. proceeded against the plaintiffs in chancery and foreclosed his mortgage, by which the plaintiffs lost this lot; 3rd, that defendant, being possessed of a lot of land, mortgaged it to one S, for £250 in fee, and afterwards conveyed his equity of redemption in this and other lots to the plaintiffs in fee for $22,400, before then advanced by plaintiffs to defendant, and in this con-veyance covenanted to pay off the mortgage to S., and indemnify plaintiffs against it; but that he neglected to do so, and S. obtained a decree of foreclosure against the plaintiffs, whereby they lost their security and the land, and were put to costs, &c.: 5th plea, to the first three counts: that before the alleged breaches, the plaintiffs by deed conveyed all their estate in the land in those counts mentioned to one D., and they have not and had not at the commencement of this suit got back or become seised of their former or any back of become seised of their former or any estate in said land, whereby the causes of action in those counts could not and did not accrue to the plaintiffs. On demurrer:—Held, plea good, as to the first, but bad as to the second and third counts; for the plaintiffs, as those counts shewed, had only an equity of those counts, she was a signer of the coverants would not pass with it to their assignee. Burrowes v. DeBlaquiere, 34 U. C.

Govenant for Title—Assignment After Breach. —The usual covenant for good title runs with the land, and it is no objection therefore to an action by the assignee of the covenantee, that because according to the statement in the declaration, "the grantor was not seised in fee when he gave his covenant," the covenant was broken as soon as made, and could not inure to the benefit of the assignee. Gamble v. Reca, 6 U. C. R. 313. (Scott v. Frailck, 6 U. C. R. 511.

Quere, what would the effect be, if when the covenant was given a third party had been in adverse possession, or if the covenantee had been evicted before he made the deed to the assignce. Gamble v. Recs, 6 U. C. R. 396.

Defendant conveyed with absolute covenants to plaintiff, who before action conveyed to one D.:—Held, that the covenants ran with the land, and the plaintiff could not sue, though they were broken as soon as made. Sericer v. Myers, 9 C. P. 255.

Covenant for Title—Life Estate.]—In the covenant for good title, it is only the assignee of the fee who can represent the covenantee; the devisee of a life estate cannot sue on the covenant. Clark v. Robertson, S U. C. R. 370.

Covenant for Title—Devisees.]—An action will not lie on a covenant for title against the devisees of the covenantor. Sickles v. Snyder, 10 U. C. R. 200.

The declaration set out that in 1837 one W. conveyed land to E., giving absolute covenants for title and quiet enjoyment: that E. entered and died seised, having made his will in 1840, devising "all his messuages, lands, and real estate" to B., in trust: that B. entered, and in 1843 conveyed to the plaintiff, without covenants: that the plaintiff soon after conveyed to D., with the usual covenant for quiet enjoyment. The deed from W., and the plaintil's deed to D., both contained the usual reservation of the rights of the Crown as expressed in the original grant. The declaration then averred that when W. conveyed to E. he was not seised according to his covenant, but that part of the land was the property of the Crown, and was granted in 18-46 to one J.; that J. afterwards conveyed to R., who brought ejectment against D., and recovered: that the plaintiff, in order to prevent D. from being dispossessed, paid to R. a large sum of money as the price of the land, besides costs and charges, and these damages he claimed from the defendant in this action as surviving executor of W. Quere, as E. devised to R. only all his real estate, and this land, not being owned by him, was not therefore in words devised, whether B. could be treated as holding the covenant of W. as assignee, and as a covenant running with the land. Bouen v. Hart, 10 U. C. R. 228.

Covenant Limiting Supply of Water.]
—Plaintiff conveyed land to M., with the privilege of drawing off from the mill race on the adjoining land of the plaintiff a certain quantity of water for purposes specified, leaving always sufficient to supply the mill on the plaintiff's land. And by the same indenture M. covenanted for himself, his heirs, executors, administrators and assigns, to restrict themselves to the use of the water for the purpose mentioned, and not to take such water unless there should be enough without it to supply the plaintiff's mill:—Held, a covenant running with the land, on which the plaintiff might sue M.'s assignees. Warren v. Munroe, 15 U. C. R. 557.

Death of Covenantee, —Plaintiffs, administrators of R., sued defendants, executors of M., on their covenants for seisin in their own right contained in a conveyance of land by them to R. It appeared that defendants' only claim to the land was as executors, under a power to sell for payment of debts, contained in M.'s will:—Held, I. That if the power was well exercised the estate passed to R.'s heir, who must sue on the covenant, not the plaintiffs; 2. that there would be a breach of the covenant, defendants not being seised, for which, however, only mominal damages would be recoverable. A new trial was granted, to enable defendants to prove the existence of debts, in order to warrant the sale. Macdongli v. Macdonell, 5 C. P. 355.

Death of Covenantee-Person Entitled to Sue.]-S. P. brought an action for damages sustained and to be sustained by reason of breaches of covenants for title in a con-veyance of certain lands to him, and before the trial died intestate, whereupon his administratrix took out an order of revivor, which order it was now sought to set aside on the ground that the right of action did not survive to her :- Held, that as to damages which accrued during the lifetime of S. P., his administratrix was entitled to sue for the same; but that this was not so as to damages which might have accrued since his death, for which: -Semble, the heir, or devisee, might bring an action. Platt v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 11 O. R. 246.

In the case of such covenants running with the land, where only a formal breach takes place in the life of the ancestor, the remedy for damages accruing after his death passes to the heir or devisee; but where not only the breach took place, but damages accrued in the lifetime of the ancestor, the remedy for these damages passes to the personal representative. Ib.

Executors—Personal Liability.]—Where eventors conveyed land under a power of sale in the will of testator, but covenanted for themselves, their heirs, &c., in the deed, for good title:—Held, that they were personally liable on that covenant, and that the grant by them as executors could not control their express contract. McDonald v. McDonell, 6 O. S. 109.

Forum.]—The plaintiff sued defendants on their covenants for title in a conveyance of land to the plaintiff, alleging as the breach, that at the time of the execution of the deed one H. was possessed of part of the land under a demise from defendants, on which part was a stone wall, whereby the plaintiff was unable to build on said wall, and his premises were injured. Defendants pleaded that the plaintiff had reconveyed the land to them by way of mortgage, with the usual covenants for title, which was still in force and unpaid. The plaintiff replied, on equitable grounds, that the mortgage provided for possession by him until default, and that no default had been made:—Held, on denurrer, that the action could not be maintained, nor transferred to the court of chancery, under s. 2 of the A. J. Act of 1873, not being for a purely money demand. Kavanagh v. City of Kingston, 39 U. C. R. 445.

Lease—Repairs.]—In a lease for years of premises made to G., and assigned by G. as to the residue of the term of defendants, was contained, after the usual covenant to yield up the same in good repair, a proviso that nothing therein contained should be taken in any way to compel the said G, to give up the buildings at the expiration thereof, which are all wooden and liable to decay, in as sound and good a state as they now are, "but such buildings are not to be wilfully or negligently wasted or destroyed; necessary repairs, however, for the preservation of the said buildings to be done and performed by the said G, at his own proper cost and charge;"—Held, that these words constituted a covenant running with the land, and bound the assignees of the lease, though assignees were not expressly mentioned. Perry v. Bank of Upper Canada, 16 C, P. 404.

Maintenance.] — On the 1st December, 1870, A. M., by deed, conveyed certain lands to his grandsons W. M. and D. M., as tenants in common; and on the same day an agreement in writing was made between the parties whereby W. M. and D. M. agreed to pay the following sums of money, and fulfil the agreement, namely, that W. M. and D. M. should thenceforward support their mother, the plaintiff, and furnish her with reasonable suitable, and comfortable board, lodging, and clothing, and medical attendance during her lifetime, and maintain her in a proper mainer; and in the event of any disagreement between W. M., D. M., and the plaintiff, whereby she would be obliged to leave the said premises, they were to pay her $55 a year in lieu of such board, &c., and, if not paid, to be recoverable by suit at law; the covenants, payments and annulties to be chargeable against the said land. The plaintiff was no party to the agreement. On the 4th October, 1872, the defendant W. M., for a nominal control of the said land. W. M., for a nominal control of the said land. W. M., for a nominal control of the said land.

sideration of $1,000, conveyed his undivided half interest to the plaintiff, but of which she said she was not aware; and on 1st March, 1877, she reconveyed the same to W. M. "free from incumbrances." On 12th Jan-Mary 1882, D. M. sold his undivided half interest to C_n and a conveyance was executed, but the sale was never carried though. On 27th September, 1883, D. M. sold his said interest to G. A. B_n and, to save registration charges, the conveyance was made by C. to G. A. B. On 20th March, 1884, G. A. B. conveyed to E. and S., who in May, 1884, ejected the plaintiff from the land. The agreement was not registered until 27th January, 1882:

Held, that the agreement did not create a rent charge, as no power of distress was conferred; that if either a rent service or rent seck there would be a right of distress and ap-portionment, but if neither, but covenant charged on land, performance of it would be decreed; that upon the conveyance by W. M. to the plaintiff, the whole charge was not exto the binimin, the whole charge was not ex-impulshed, but an apportionment took place; and that therefore defendant was entitled to enforce performance against D. M.'s undivided half interest, in the hands of E. & S., who the evidence shewed were purchasers with notice. McCaskill v. McCaskill, 12 O. R. 783.

Mortgagor's Action Against Prior Vendor.]—Held, that a mortgage in fee made subsequently to a breach of a covenant for quiet enjoyment, and to an action for substantial damages therefor, does not estop the from whom he purchased, on the covenant contained in the vendor's deed for the property. Cuthbert v. Street, 9 C. P. 386.

Partial Assignment.] - An assignee of part of the land conveyed by a deed containng a covenant for seisin in fee may sue upon the covenant and recover damages in propor tion to his interest. Keyes v. O'Brien, 20 U.

Party Wall.]-C. and the defendant were owners of adjacent lots, and C. being about to build on his lot agreed, by writing under seal, to erect a party wall on the dividing line and equally on both lots, defendant agreeing to pay for the half of the front forty feet thereof when erected, and for the rear por-tion thereof whenever defendant should require to use it. Subsequently C. sold and conveyed his lot to the plaintiffs in fee, by deed containing the usual statutory covenants, and the plaintiffs entered into possession. years later, defendant erected a building on his lot, making use of the rear part of such party wall, by reason of which he be-came liable to pay $98.65, and interest therecame mater to pay $385.55, and interest therefor, and did accordingly pay the same to C. In an action by the plaintiffs, as assignees of C.'s interest in said land, against the defendant to recover the sum so due in respect of such wall:—Held, that the plaintiffs were not entitled as vendees of C. to recover, the right to payment of the sum stipulated to be paid for the wall under the covenant with C. not having passed under the conveyance by to the plaintiffs. Kenny v. Mackenzie, 12 A. R. 346.

Privity at Time of Breach.]-An action on covenants running with the land, can only be maintained by the party between whom and the covenantor there is privity of estate at the time of the breach. Rowe v. Street, S C. P. 217.

Sale of Land - Covenantee's Mortgage Outstanding.]—Defendant conveyed land to the plaintiff by deed, made under the Act to facilitate the conveyance of real property, containing covenants for right to convey, for quiet possession, and that he had done no act quiet possession, and that he had nobe it as to incumber, and on the same day took back a mortgage in fee to secure the purchase money, in which it was provided that the plaintiff should retain possession until default, Before making the deed, defendant had leased land to one D., to whom the plaintiff was obliged to pay £66 to obtain possession:— Held, that this sum could not be recovered as money paid, and that the plaintiff could not sue upon the covenants in the deed while the mortgage continued in force, Proctor v. Gamble, 16 U. C. R. 110.

Where a purchaser mortgages the same lands to his vendor in fee, to secure payment of the purchase money, he cannot sue the vendor for breach of covenant for good title, while the mortgage continues in force. Huyck v. McDonald, 3 O. S. 292; Rees v. Strachan, 14 U. C. R. 53.

Sheriff's Sale. |-Quære, whether a purchaser at sheriff's sale acquires a right to sue conser at sheriff's sale acquires a right to she on covenants running with the land. Campbell v. Burley, 19 U. C. R. 204.

Plaintiff sued defendant on a covenant for seisin and right to convey, and defendant pleaded only that he was seised and had good right to convey. It appeared that the plain-iff's interest in the land had been sold by the sheriff to one M., so that he was not the proper person to sue, if the action had been properly resisted; but he recovered a verdict, and on motion for a new trial it appeared on affidavit that he was in fact suing for the benefit of the person entitled. The court, under these circumstances, refused to interfere, the verdict being just. Ib.

Sub-purchaser against Vendor.] - A. conveys to B., covenanting that "at the time of making the conveyance he was lawfully seised of a perfect and absolute estate of in-heritance in fee simple." B. afterwards conveys to C., reciting that he was then pos-sessed in his own right of the land in ques-tion:—Held, in an action brought by C., the assignee of B., against A. upon his covenant, that C. was not estopped by B.'s recital.

Gamble v. Rees, 6 U. C. R. 396.

Upon an action of covenant for title by an assignee of the covenantee, it is not essential that he should shew that a legal interest passed to him under the deed; his cause of action is that he has not the interest he supposed he was acquiring, and which he would have had if the title of the covenantor, who executed the first deed, had been good. Ib.

In covenant for good title brought by the assignee against the original covenantor, it is no objection to the declaration that it does not shew that the covenantor or assignee may not have been seised of a good estate in the land at the time of action brought. Ib.

2. Damages.

(a) In General.

Assignment for Creditors - Covenant to Reconvey.]—A debtor, whose business was the manufacture of reaping machines, conveyed his personal property to trustees; and having afterwards compounded with them and his other creditors, the trustees entered into a covenant to reassign to him the property a covenant to reassign to him the property filled a bill, alleging, amongst other things, a breach of the covenant, and claiming damages: — Held, that he might be entitled to damages for the detention of the machinery necessary for carrying on his business; and it was referred to the master to inquire into the nature of the personal property withheld, and, if it was machinery or chattels of a like nature, to inquire and report as to damages. Scott v. Wilson, 16 Gr. 182.

Assignment of Lease—Covenant to Repurchase. |—Where A. purchased a lease from B., and B. covenanted to re-purchase it in three years for more than he paid, and after the three years A. tendered an assignment of the lease, which B. refused:—Held, that in an action on the covenant A. was entitled to recover as the amount of damages the price agreed upon by B. for the re-purchase. Gibson v. Cubitt, E. T. 2 Vict.

Costs Incurred.] — Upon a foreclosure suit upon a mortgage for £350, and on which only £250 had been in fact advanced, the court disallowed the additional £100 and costs of the suit. The plaintiff, being the assignee of the mortgage, then claimed to recover these costs from defendant, his assignor, upon his covenant for the validity of the security. &c.:—Held, not recoverable. Sturgess v. Bitner, 11 C. P. 102.

A, having mortgaged land to B, sold it to C, giving covenants against his own acts. B, foreclosed, making C, a party to the suit, who employed a solicitor and incurred £10 costs, which he claimed in an action against A, for breach of his covenant:—Held, that the costs were incurred by the voluntary act of C, and were not a necessary consequence arising from a breach of the covenant, and were not recoverable against A. Parker v. McDonald, 11 C, P, 478.

W, sold land to H., and covenanted to indemnify him against a mortgage thereon:— Held, that H. was not entitled to solicitor and client, but only to party and party, costs of an action on the covenant. Hutton v. Wanzer, 11 P. K. 302.

Covenant not to Assign Lease, I—I'pon breach of a covenant in a lease not to assign without leave, the lessors are entitled to recover as damages such sum of money as will put them in the same position as if the covenant had not been broken and they had retained the liability of the defendant instead of an inferior liability, but in estimating the value of the defendant's liability allowance must be made for the vicissitudes of business and the uncertainty of life and health. Upon appeal from a referee's report the damages were reduced from $8.897.62 to $500. Williams v. Earle, L. R. 3 O. B. 739, followed. Munro v. Walter (2), 28 O. R. 574.

Covenant to Pay Mortgage — Part Paument.] — In an action upon defendant's covenant to pay off a mortgage exceuted by the plaintiff to one G. upon land sold by the plaintiff to defendant, it appeared that G. had sold under the mortgage in chancery in a suit against defendant, the costs of which amounted to 443, and that for the mortgage money remaining, after defor the mortgage money remaining, after deducting the proceeds of sale and these costs, he had obtained a judgment against the plaintiff. The defendant had paid £20 to G. before the chancery suit was begun, but had not obtained credit for it:—Held, that this sum of £20 should not go to reduce the plaintiff chaim, for it was the defendant's duty to have obtained credit for it in taking the accounts; and that the plaintiff could recover for the chancery costs, as G. had properly deducted them, and the plaintiff, being liable to pay G, the deficiency then remaining on the mortgage, was entitled to be paid it by defendant. Stephens v. Boutton, 23 U. C. R. 10.

Govenant to Pay Mortgage — Set-off appurchase who had taken a conveyance and given a mortgage for the purchase Money.]—A purchase who had taken a conveyance and given a mortgage for the purchase money had been compelled to pay off a prior mortgage, under threat of proceedings being taken against the land by the prior mortgage. The purchaser had taken a covenant from the vender for the discharge of this prior mortgage.—Held, overruling Henderson v. Brown, 18 Gr. 79, that as against an assignee of the mortgage made by the purchaser with notice of these facts, the purchaser with notice of these facts, the purchaser with notice of these facts, the purchaser with notice what he has paid on the first mortgage, subsequent to the assignment. Egleson v. Honc, 3 A. R. 596.

Indemnity — Recovery before Payment.]
—See INDEMNITY.

Liquidated Damages — Several Breach.] — The plaintiffs being indebted to the defendant in the sum of $80,000, and to other parties (whether partnership or individual debts) in an amount not exceeding $2,160, by deed dated October, 1859, in consideration of a release of the debt of $80,000, and of $4,000 paid, assigned to defendant all their stock in book debts, and assets (except house hold furniture) with a covenant on defendant's part, that he would indemnify and save harmless the plaintiffs from all debts and de-mands not exceeding the amount of $2,160, and a further covenant by both plaintiffs and defendant for $4,000 as liquidated damages for the performance of the covenants on both sides contained in the deed. Upon an action brought upon the covenant to indemnify, and reference to arbitration, it appeared that the defendant had paid plaintiffs' liabilities to the amount of $1.857, and claimed the sum of $356, he having settled that sum by setting off against the same with the creditors of the plaintiffs to whom the said debts were due sums of money due from those creditors to the plaintiffs, being partnership debts due to plaintiffs and assigned to defendant by the deed above stated:—Held, that the sum to be set off ($356) was not properly defendant's property, and that the plaintiffs were entitled to a verdict for that amount. Held, also, that the sum of $4,000 so claimed was not a debt due as liquidated damages upon each breach of the covenant. Rutherford v. Stovel, 12 C. P. 9.

Money Demand. |—In an action brought to reform a lease, and claiming damages for a breach of a covenant:—Held, that such claim for damages was not a "purely money demand" under the A. J. Act, R. S. O. 1877 c. 49, s. 4. Goucanlock v. Mans, 9 P. R. 270.

Quebec Law — Refusal to Issue Debentures.]—The corporation of the county of Ottawa, under the authority of a by-law, andertook to deliver to the Montreal, Ottawa and Western R. W. Co., for stock subscribed by them, 2990 debentures of the corporation, of $100 each, payable in twenty-live years from date, and bearing six per cent, interest, and subsequently, without any valid cause or reason, retused and neglected to issue said debentures. In an action brought by the company against the corporation, solely for damping of their neglect and refusal to issue said debentures. In a faction brought by the company against the corporation, solely for damping the company of their liability for the amount of the company of th

(b) Covenants for Title.

Amount Paid in Settlement—Value of Land, 1—W, sold and conveyed lands by metes and bounds to B., who conveyed to D. by a deed containing absolute covenants for title. A portion of the land was subsequently claimed by one R., who brought ejectment, and D. saud B. under the covenant. W. then gave B. a mortgage to indennify him against all damages, costs, and charges in respect of the action of covenant. B. subsequently compromised with R.:—Held, that W.'s estate was only liable for the value of the piece of land so claimed, and not the amount paid by his vendee on the compromise. Hart v. Bosen, 7 Gr. 97.

Concealment of Incumbrance—Set-off against Unpaid Purchase Monce,1—Where on the sale and conveyance of land the existence of an incumbrance is concealed by the vendor, who covenants against incumbrances, and the purchaser executes a mortgage to secure a balance of unpaid purchase money, the court will restrain an action to enforce payment of such mortgage, brought at the instance of the mortgagee—or the voluntary transferee—unless the amount of the incumbrance so concealed is deducted from the sum secured by such mortgage. This principle was applied in a case where the purchaser was a married woman, and her husband had joined in and executed the mortgage, by which he covenanted to pay the amount secured thereby, although the covenant against incumbrances was to the eife and not to the husband, the covenant against incumbrances was to the sineself. Lorelace v. Harrington, 27 Gr. 178.

Costs Incurred.] — Covenant for title: breach, that defendant had no title and no right to convey, charging eviction, and claiming damages for costs incurred by the plaintiff in his defence against a person having paramount title:—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to recover the costs paid in defending himself in the suit of ejectment under which be had been dispossessed. Brennan v. Servis, 8 U. C. R. 191.

A purchaser, who had been ejected, suing upon his covenant for a good title, may recover as damages the costs of defending an ejectment brought against him, even though he has not actually paid them, in addition to the purchase momey and interest. Stubbs v. Martindale, 7 C. P. 52.

A. purchases from B. a lot of land (to which B. had no title) and conveys it to C., taking back a mortgage for the balance of the purchase money. C. ascertains that he has no title, and claims a deduction in the mortgage money on that account. They arbitrate and a deduction is made by the arbitrators. The costs of the arbitration, &c., amounting to £31 48, 94, A. has to pay. He then sues B. for the purchase money of the lot, and these costs:—Held, that such costs were the consequence of his own act, inasmuch as if he had not sold the property they would not have been occasioned, and were not recoverable. Forsuth v. McIntosh, 9 C. P. 492.

In an action brought against the executors of a grantor on a full covenant deed, to recover damages sustained by the plaintiff, by reason of the payment of a more in an action for dower, defendant of money in an action for dower, defendant below the the deed was not the deed of the grant han his lifetime and plene administravit. To the instruction that the plaintiff joined issue, and to the second replied lands. It appeared on the trial that an action had been brought against one G. S. B. for the recovery of this dower, and a release obtained for $120; but not until after a defence and some $20 of costs were incurred, and that the only amount paid by plaintiff was $50:—Held, that the jury should have been directed that the defence of the dower suit was not justifiable, the deed containing the release of dower executed in May. 1835, not being signed by the wife, although certified to by two magistrates, and the costs thereof should have been disallowed; and that the plaintiff was only entitled to recover the amount paid for the release of dower and interest. Hunter v. Johnson, 14 C. P. 123.

The plaintiff having been ejected by the heirs of H. L., sued under the covenant for quiet enjoyment in a deed from H. L., and under a covenant in a mortgage subsequently made by the plaintiff to H. L. by which the plaintiff was to be undisturbed until default in the mortgage, and a verdict was rendered for the plaintiff with 1s. damages on the second count:—Held, that plaintiff was not entitled to increase these damages by the costs of the ejectment suit, for it appeared that the mortgage was not set up by the plaintiff in that suit, and if it had been he might have been successful in it. Eccles v. Loreny, 34

Defendants having conveyed land to T, with full covenants, T, mortgaged to the plaintiffs. The children of T. filed a bill in chancery against the plaintiffs and others, under which a decree was made directing the plaintiffs to convey the land to the plaintiffs named in the bill, who shewed a good title as against both plaintiffs and defendants herein; and the plaintiffs thus lost the land, and were obliged to pay their own and the plaintiffs (costs in the suit in chancery. The plaintiffs thereupon used defendants upon the covenant for quiet enjoyment contained in their deed to T.—Held, that they were entitled to recover all the costs incurred by them in defending the chancery suit, either as between party and party, or as between attorney and client, it not appearing upon the evidence that such costs were either needlessly or unreasonably incurred. Trust and Loan Company of Upper Canada v. Covert, 39 U. C. R. 321.

Covenantee's Knowledge.] — Semble, that where heavy damages are given in an action of covenant for good title, and it appears that the plaintiff knew the state of the defendant's title, the court will grant a new trial, and will intend that in that case excessive damages have been given contrary to evidence.

Emery v. Miller, Tay. 336.

Defendant being seised in fee of certain land in trust for his son, at the request of the son mortgaged it to B. and V. for $400, the son receiving the money and agreeing to pay it off. Afterwards the defendant conveyed to his son, the consideration stated being $4000, but in reality it was a gift, and the deed by inad-vertence and mistake contained a covenant for the right to convey, notwithstanding de-fendant's acts, and that he had done no act to incumber the land. On the 21st October, 1866, the son mortgaged the land to the plaintiff for $400, and this mortgage was closed by the plaintiff, who was compelled to pay off the mortgage to B, and V. It did not appear that the plaintiff had any knowledge the trust between the father and son or of the arrangement between them as to the mortgage to B. and V., or that he knew of this mortgage until after the foreclosure, but it appeared that it, together with the other conveyances, had been duly registered and that the land was worth both the mortgages. The plaintiff having sued defendant on the covenant contained in the defendant's deed to the son, to recover the amount paid to B. and V.:—Held, that the plaintiff could not recover, for that the facts would constitute a good defence on equitable grounds to an action brought against defendant by the son; and the title of the covenantor and covenantee being equitable only, the plaintiff, as assignee of the covenant, could stand in no better position than his assignor. Claston v. Gilbert, 24 C. P. 500.

Crown Grant Defective, —The declaration set out that in 1837, one W. conveyed land to E., giving absolute covenants for title and quiet enjoyment; that E. entered and died seised, having made his will in 1840, devising and the seised proposed to the seised proposed to the plaintiff without covenants; and that the plaintiff without covenants; and that the plaintiff soon afterwards conveyed to D. with the usual covenant for quiet enjoyment. The deed from W., and the plaintiff's deed to D., both contained the usual reservation of the rights of the Crown as expressed in the original grant. The declaration then averred that when W. conveyed to E. he was not seised according to his covenant, but that part of the land was the property of the Crown, and was granted in 1846 to one J.; that J. afterwards conveyed to R., who brought ejectment against D. and recovered; that the plaintiff, in order to prevent D. from being dispossessed, paid to R. a large sum of money as the price of the land, besides costs and charges, and these damages he claimed from defendant in this action as surviving executor of W.—Held, that under the facts alleged, the action was not maintainable.

Delay and Expense in Obtaining Possession. —No action will lie on the covenant for title when the grantor had a good title at the time of conveying, although the plaintiff experienced delay and expense in getting into possession. Carr v. Dunn, 9 U. C. R. 248.

Dower—Costs.]—In an action on a covenant for quiet enjoyment, the breach alleged was the recovery of a judgment for dower, and eviction of defendant from one-third of the land. Defendant allowed judgment to go by default:—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled, in assessing damages, to recover the costs of the dower suit, and to the whole value of the dower estate, not merely damages to the bringing of this action. Stuart v. Mathieson, 23 U. C. R. 135.

Dower — Crops—Costs.] — The plaintiff's father by indenture of bargain and sale conveyed to him certain land (the dower of the grantor's wife not being barred), covenanting for quiet enjoyment in consideration, among other things, of 5s. Upon his death his widow recovered judgment in dower against plaintiff, and the covenant for quiet enjoyment was special case:—Held, that the measure of dianages on a covenant for quiet enjoyment was not to be governed by the consideration money in the conveyance; and that the plaintiff was entitled to the value of the crops which he had lost by the eviction. The court being of opinion that the plaintiff should have satisfied the demand for dower upon receiving notice, the costs of her action of dower were disallowed him. Hodgins v. Hodgins, 13 C. P. 146.

Easement of no Value.]—The defendans granted to the predecessor in title of the plaintiff, with covenants for title under the Short Forms Act, certain lands with the right and easement of erecting a dam at a certain spot. It was afterwards held that they had no power to grant such a right, but it was the property of the state of the tion:—Held the state of the state of the tion of the state of the value of the supposed right, which was colling. Platt v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 19 A. R. 403.

Eviction or Ouster, |—In an action on the covenants for seisin and right to convey the plaintiff is not entitled to substantial damages without shewing an exiction or ouster from the premises in question, or some other facts which will entitle him to more than nominal damages. Snider v. Snider, 13 C. P. 157; Graham v. Baker, 10 C. P. 426; Bannon v. Frank, 14 C. P. 255.

Executors Covenanting for Seisin in Their Own Right.]—Plaintiffs, administrators of R., sued defendants, executors of M., on their covenants for seisin in their own right contained in a conveyance of land by them to R. It appeared that defendants' only claim to the land was as executors, under a power to sell for payment of debts, contained in M.'s will:—Held, that there would be a breach of the covenant, defendants not being seised, for which, however, only nominal damages would be recoverable. Macdonall v. Macdonall, 5 C. P. 355.

Improvements — Increased Value.] — In an action for breach of covenant of good title the measure of damages is the purchase money paid with interest. No allowance is to be made for the improvements or increased value. McKinnon v. Burrones, 3 O. S. 590; Clark v. Robertson, S. U. C. R., 370.

Incumbrances — Disturbance of Possession. — The right to damages is not lessened by the fact that the plaintiffs have never been disturbed in their possession, if an incumbrance really do exist. Gibson v. Boulton, Backett v. Boulton, 3 C. P. 407.

Incumbrances — Assignee.]—A covenant against incumbrances in a deed purporting to convey the legal fee simple, runs with the land, atthough the grantor was in fact selsed only of an equity of redemption, and can be sued upon by the assignee of the covenance, who will be entitled to substantial damages, represented by the amount for which the mortgage stands as security, though it may not be yet due. Empire Gold Mining Co. v. Jones, 19 C. P. 245.

Incumbrances—No Eviction.] — Where the evidence shewed that when the grantor emerged, there was a mortgage on the land by a prior owner, unpaid; but the granter, the plaintiff, had taken possession and left after a month, not having been evicted, and no one else had been in possession since; and it did not appear that he had been unable to sell, nor that defendant, the covenantor, had been guilty of any fraud:—Semble, that only nominal damages could be recovered, the covenant being in effect the same as a covenant for seisin, and a continuing one. Brown, O'Druger, 35 U.C. R. 354.

Incumbrances—Other Lands Included.]
—In an action on a covenant that the defendant had done no act to incumber contained in a conveyance of land by the defendant to the plaintiff, for a consideration of £150:—
Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to recover the whole amount due upon an outstanding mortgage, although it exceeded the purchase money and interest, and the mortgage included other lands sufficient in value to satisfy it. Connell v. Boulton, 25 U. C. R. 444.

Incumbrance Larger than Value of the Land.]—Where the vendee of lands, who had himself after purchasing mortgaged the property, brought action for breach of covenant against incumbrances; and the mortgage, constituting the breach, covered other lands as well as his, and was for an amount much greater than the present value of the land, and it was impossible to apportion it:—Held, that the measure of damages was the whole amount due on the mortgage, which should be paid into court to insure its reaching its proper destination. McGillieray v. Mimico. Real Estate Security Company, 28 O. R. 265.

Qualified Covenant — Incumbrances by Prior Owner.] — After a conveyance incumbrances upon the property sold were discovered, created by a former owner, but of which neither the vendor nor the purchaser had been previously aware. The covenants given by the vendor only extended to his own acts and the acts of those claiming under him:—Held, that the vendor was not bound to pay off the incumbrances; and therefore that the purchaser was not entitled to set off against them a balance of his purchase money remaining unpaid and secured by mortgage. Re Buck, Peck v. Buck, 6 P. R. 98.

Sale for Taxes—Covenantee's Neglect to Redeem.]—A party is liable only for such damages as are the natural consequences of his act or omission. Where, therefore, the vendee of land allowed it to be sold for taxes accrued during his vendor's time, and neglected to redeem it within the year:—Held, on a covenant for a right to convey, and freedom from incumbrances, that he could not as of right recover the value of the land so allowed to be sold. McCollum v. Davis, 8 U. C. R. 150.

Sub-purchaser—Price on Resale.]—Defendant agreed to sell land to P. for £150, and gave him a bond for a deed; P. sold to O., who sold to plaintiff; and at his request defendant executed a deed in fee to plaintif, the consideration expressed being £425, with covenants in fee. Plaintiff being dispossessed:—Held, entitled to recover the full consideration in the deed. Graham v. Leslie, 4 C. P. 176.

Two Parcels—Eviction from One.]—The dead with absolute covenants for title contained two several parcels of land, and the plaintiff was evicted from one, but was still owner of the most valuable parcel:—Held, that the measure of damages was not the whole purchase money, but only the proportionate value of that part to which the title failed. McKay x McKay, 31 C, P. 1.

Vendor Acquiring Title After Breach.]—In an action for breach of an absolute covenant for title to land:—Held, that the plaintiff (the vendee) was entitled only to nominal damages where defendant (the vendor) had, after action brought, acquired the outstanding title; for by estoppel as held in Doe Irvine v. Webster, 2 U. C. R. 224, a perfect title to the land passed to the plaintiff through the defendant's former conveyance to him immediately upon the outstanding title becoming vested in defendant. Boulter v. Hamilton, 15 C. P. 125.

3. Evidence.

Onus of Proof. —In covenant for title, the breaches assigned were, want of seisin in fee, and an eviction by a stranger, to which the defendant pleaded a seisin in fee in himself:—Held, that on the plaintiff proving an eviction by a stranger, without shewing his title, it was incumbent on defendant to give evidence of a seisin in fee in himself. Varcy v. Muirhed, Dra. 486.

Where to a declaration in covenant for title generally, and a breach that defendant had no title, the defendant pleaded a seisn in fee: —Held, that the issue lay upon him, and that he must shew such seisn by proof of actual possession at some time as primā facie evidence of his estate in fee, although the plaintiff offered no evidence. But the rule is otherwise when the covenant is only against the party's own acts. McKinnon v. Burrows, 3 O. S. 114.

In an action on a covenant for title, where defendant pleads that he was seised in the terms of the covenant, the onus of proof lies upon him, and the plaintiff need not first prove a breach to entitle himself to a verdict. Lemesurier v. Willard, 3 U. C. R. 285.

Where the plaintiff sues upon a covenant for right to convey land, alleging as a breach that defendant had no such right, and defendant pleads that he had, the proof of title lies upon defendant, Mills v. Wigle, 22 U. C. R. 108; McCollum v. Davis, S U. C. R. 150.

Upon an action of covenant for title by an assignee of the covenantee, it is not essential that he should shew that a legal interest passed to him under the deed; his cause of action is, that he has not the interest he supposed he was acquiring, which he would have had if the title of the covenantor, who executed the first deed, had been good. Gamble v. Recs. 6 U. C. R. 396.

Where a party binds himself to make a good and effectual conveyance of land, he must prove that he has the legal title, and that the land did actually pass by his deed. Toland v. Bruce, S U. C. R. 14.

Pleading — Amendment.] — Plaintiff declared that defendant, by his deed, covenanted not to commit waste, not stating with whom:—Held, that the plaintiff could not shew that he was suing as assignee of the reversion, but must prove a covenant with himself; and an amendment was refused at nisi prius. Brennan v. Whitley, 15 U. C. R. 277.

4. Pleading.

In an action on covenant for quiet enjoyment, it is sufficient to state that one B. was seised before conveyance to the plaintiff, and that the plaintiff was obliged to pay bim a named sum to obtain possession, without stating eviction by B. Blecker v. Myers, Tay. 285.

A plea that the plaintiff enjoyed the estate without eviction, was held no answer. Sherwood v. Johns, Tay. 232.

In an action on a covenant that plaintiff was the lawful owner, and had a good title, a plea that defendant was the right owner, &c., and that the plaintiff has had possession since the conveyance, and never has been evicted:—Held, bad. Vanderburyh v. Vanalstine 5 0. S. 454.

Where in an action on a covenant for quiet enjoyment without the hindrance, &c., of defendant (the grantor), or any one claiming under her, the plaintiff declared that A. and others, who had title from the defendant at the execution of the covenant to the plaintiff to the lands conveyed, expelled the plaintiff under such title; and that the defendant at the title to the lands and woods at the time of the conveyance to the plaintiff;—Held, on special denurrer, that the allegation of title in A. and the others at the time of the conveyance was immaterial; and that the plea was bad in denying the title of A. and the others to the lands and woods, conjunctively, and not disjunctively. Gwynne v. Brock, 6 O. S. 271.

In covenant, plaintiffs agreed to deliver 200 toises of stone for building a wall, defendants to pay 6s, 9d, per toise, i.e., for every 216 feet cubic measure, when the wall was erected. Plaintiffs averred delivery of 195 toises laid in the wall, but omitted to aver how many toises, at the rate of 216 cubic feet to a toise, had been laid in the wall and measured there: neid, bad on general demurrer. Howe v. Newman, Dra. 90.

In an action of covenant for not making a lease of premises, it is no ground for arresting the judgment that the premises are not particularly set forth, if the breach be as definite as the terms of the covenant require. Rowand v. Tyler, 4 O. S. 257.

Where the declaration set out that the money was to be paid according to the condition of a certain bond, the balance due on which was alleged to be ascertained, and the breach assigned was, that the money was not paid according to the covenant, but did not state the balance due, the judgment was arrested. Martin v. Woods, T. T. 3 & 4 Vict.

Declaration on a covenant by defendant to transfer to plaintiff certain land to which defendant was entitled as the son of a U. E. Loyalist, provided the plaintiff should locate the land, perform settlement duties, and procure the patent thereof, at his own costs, defendant in his covenant agreeing to furnish the plaintiff with full power to do so. The breach was held bad, for not avering a demand of authority to locate, perform settlement duties, &c., with time and place. Detlor v. Kcoph, 1 U. C. R. 226.

Where in covenant for quiet enjoyment free from incumbrances, the breach assigned was, that £15 was due upon the land for arrears of taxes, without stating of what nature:—Held, bad, on special denurrer. Wilson v. Rorke, 2 U. C. R. 437.

In an action upon the covenant for further assurance the covenantee must aver in his declaration that the conveyance which he required was prepared by himself or his counsel, and tendered to the party to be executed. Hoyt v, Widderfield, 5 U. C. R. 180.

Declaration for payment of money by instalments, alleging that a sum became due on one day for two instalments:—Held, good, on special demurrer. Thompson v. Chambers, 2 U. C. R. 191. See, also, Courtney v. Sinclair, 5 U. C. R. 311.

Where a payment is to be a condition precedent, or a concurrent act, and is to be made in a certain manner, the plaintiff must aver readiness to pay in the precise manner stipulated. Tanner v. D'Everado, 3 U. C. R. 154.

To an action of covenant, the fraud of the plaintiff may be pleaded in general terms. Lacey v. Spencer, 3 U. C. R. 169.

Declaration on a covenant to pay money. Plea, that the defendant had not broken his covenant:—Held, bad on special demurrer. Mitchell v. Linton, 5 U. C. R. 331.

Construction of conveyance, as to the necessity of averring affirmatively, in declaring thereon, that the plaintiff had sold lands, or why he had not sold them, before he could entitle himself to sue upon the covenant for the non-payment of a sum of money. Kay v. Gamble, 6 U. C. R. 267.

Quære, whether the first count of the declaration, set out in the case, was in covenant or in tort. Warren v. Monroe, 15 U. C. R. 557.

In covenant upon articles of agreement, to recover payment for certain works therein specified, the defendants pleaded in general terms denying the doing of the work and the performance of the covenants mentioned in the articles:—Held, good, without specifying what works the plaintiffs had not performed, or wherein they had not performed the covenants. Punn v. Zimmerman, 6 C. P. 346.

Amendment of declaration in covenant, by allowing plaintiff to claim as assignee of the reversion, instead of proving a covenant with plaintiff, refused. Brennan v. Whitley, 15 U. C, R, 273.

The breach assigned of a covenant to convey free from incumbrance was that the land was at the date of the covenant subject to a claim for a dower in favour of one R., the wife of one J., a former owner of said land:

—Held, bad, for it could not be assumed that J. was dead at the date of the covenant. Wilson v. Biggar, 26 U. C. R. 85.

Part of the land included in a conveyance was inserted by mistake, the vendor not being or pretending to be the owner of it. To an action on the covenants for title defendant pleuded these facts as an equitable defence:— Held, that the plea was good as pleaded. Belyeav y, Muir, 5 P. R. 273.

The devisee of a grantee suing upon the grantor's covenant, that "the land was free from incumbrances," must aver that the incumbrance was unsatisfied when the devisee took the estate. Managan v. Fraser, S U. C. R. 11.

The plaintiff sued on the usual covenant for quiet enjoyment, alleging as a breach a highway over a portion of the land conveyed:

—Held, bad; for the exception in the covenant for title of any limitation, proviso, or condition contained in the original grant from the Crown, extends equally to the covenant for quiet enjoyment, and it was not averred that no highway was reserved in the original grant. Moore v, Boutlon, 10 U. C. R. 140.

A plea to an action on the covenants for title and right to convey:—Held, bad, as being only an argumentative assertion of the defendant's title; and because defendant should have averred directly that he himself was seised, and need not have set out a derivative title. Shanahan v. Sheerin, 10 U. C. II. 600.

Action on covenants for seisin and right to convey. a mortgage to C. being specially excepted. Breach, that defendants were not seised, with the exception of said mortgage, and had not good right to convey; but that one G. H. was seised of a portion of said lands, and one J. B. and T. B. of another. Pleas, 2. That said mortgage was a mortgage in fee, and that by the indenture declared on, defendants covenanted for seisin, except said mortgage, which is still unpaid; 3. same defence, applied to the covenant for right to convey; 4. that defendants were seised, in accordance with their covenants; 5. that they had good right to convey as covenanted for; 6. that before the execution of the indenture declared on, defendants agreed with the plaintiff for the sale of lands to him at a specified sum, of which part was to be paid down, and the residue secured by morrgage, and that the plaintiff then mortgaged the same lands in fee to the defendants, to secure such residue, which is still unpaid; 7, that said G. H. was not seised as alleged; 8, that said J. B. and T. B. were not, nor was either of them seised; —Held, on demurrer—2nd, 3rd, 4th, 5th, 7th, and 8th pleas bad; 6th plea good. Rees v. Strachen, 14 U. C. R. 53.

Declaration on a covenant contained in a mortgage to plaintiffs, to which the defendant pleaded equitably that the plaintiffs gave their bond, binding themselves to execute a good and sufficient bond to defendant of the premises comprised in the said mortgage, and alleging that the plaintiffs had not done so, &c. and averring that the plaintiffs had not at the time of giving their bond, nor at any time since, a good title to the said land, &c.:—Held, plea, bad, as it did not shew what defect there was in the plaintiffs' title, nor that the plaintiffs' bond would not fully indemnify defendant against loss, nor that there was any fraud or misrepresentation; and as this court could not do ample justice between the parties, they would not interfere. Dauphin v. Lesperance, 14 C. P. 133.

The declaration stated that one W. G. mortgaged to the plaintiff and two others, as trustees of S., his unexpired term in certain lands, tees of S., his unexpired term in certain lanes, to secure £400 and interest, which he thereby covenanted to pay them at certain times speci-fied; that W. G. also mortgaged said term to the plaintiff, to secure £226 7s. 6d.; that under a power of sale in said last mentioned mort-gage, the plaintiff duly sold the mortgaged premises to defendant at the following pricethat is to say, that defendant should pay the mortgage to said trustees, and £150 to the plaintiff; that the plaintiff thereupon assigned said premises to defendant, and defendant, by the assignment, covenanted with the plaintiff to perform the covenants in the mortgage to said trustees; and the plaintiff alleged that desand tusees, and not paid the price so to be paid fendant had not paid the price so to be paid by him for his purchase, and had not paid the last instalment of the mortgage money payable to the trustees. Defendant pleaded, 1. As to so much of the declaration as relates to the price or sum of money to be paid by defendant to plaintiff, that he did not promise as alleged; 4. as to said price, a set-off for moneys due by plaintiff to defendant; 5. as to the plaintiff's claim in respect of the mortgage the plainth's chaim in respect of the mortage from W. G. to the trustees, a similar set-off: —Held, on demurrer, pleas bad, for the first was not a denial of the covenant sued upon, but an attempt to put in issue its legal effect: the fourth and fifth were pleaded to a cause of action not advanced, as the declaration was for the non-payment of money to the trustees, not to the plaintiff; and as to the fifth plea, the claim under the covenant to pay the trustees was not one to which a set-off could be pleaded, the debts not being mutual. Martin v. Clark, 20 U. C. R. 419.

A plea of leave and license:—Held, bad, as no answer to an action of covenant. McDonald v. Great Western R. W. Co., 21 U. C. R. 293

Declaration that plaintiffs covenanted with defendants to do certain works within a limited period, with power to defendant by six days, notice to take the works out of plaintiffs, hands in default of sufficient progress to the completion of the said works within the sufficient of the said works within the sufficient form of the work is to be carried on unceasingly night and day with sufficient force to ensure its completion within the limited time." Averment, that though plaintiffs fulfilled the conditions precedent, de-fendants did take the works out of the plaintiffs' hands without notice or just cause, &c., whereby, &c.;—Held, on motion for anosuit to be no variance, as by s. 106 of C. L. P.

Act, 1856, the averment of performance by plaintiff of conditions precedent, not denied by defendant, is sufficient. Hennessey v. Weir, 11 C. P. 175

Declaration, by executor of S., on a covenant made by defendant on the 10th January, 1855, to pay S. £240, with interest, by instalments. The second and third pleas set up payment of £210 under a previous agreement to secure the fulfilment of which the deed declared on was given, and these pleas were:— Held, bad, for it was not alleged that the £210 formed any part of the £240 for which the covenant sued on was made, or that there was no other consideration for such covenant than to secure the £210. Robison v. Flanigan, 22 U. C. R. 417.

Fifth plea, that before breach of the covennnt declared on, S. accepted from defendant £210 in goods in full satisfaction of said sum of £240, and of the cause of action declared on, and by deed released defendant therefrom. On demurrer to this plea, except as to the allegation of release:—Held, that the rest might be rejected as surplusage, and that it shewed a good defence, Ib.

The plea was that A, S, did not at the request of defendant sign and seal, and as his act and deed deliver to the insurance company the covenant mentioned in the first count:—Held, that by this plea the question of A. S. having entered into the covenant at the request of the defendant was put in issue, and there being no evidence to support the issue, a new trial was ordered without costs. Stewart v. Clark, 13 C. P. 203.

Declaration on a covenant to pay $1,400 on a day named, if defendant did not make a deed in fee simple, clear of all incumbrances, of certain land specified, to the plaintiff, his heirs and assigns. Breach, that defendant did not make a deed in fee simple, clear of all incumbrances, of the said land to the plaintiff, his heirs and assigns, nor did he pay the $1,400. Demurrer, that the breach is uncertain, as it might mean either that defendant made no deed, or not one free from incumbrances in which case the incumbrances should be stated:—Held, that the breach was sufficient. Cully v. Winter, 25 U. C. R. 34.

Declaration, that the defendant, by deed, covenanted (not saying with the plaintiff to pay to the plaintiff, &c.:—Held, good of demurrer. Hennessy v. Hennessy, 30 U. C. R. 38.

Declaration, that the plaintiff and defendant and one D, entered into an agreement under seal, set out, which was in substance as follows: D, has sold to defendant his interest in certain land and mills (described) for £1,350, which was held in trust by said D. for the plaintiff, and has conveyed it to defendant to be held in trust for the plaintiff. as it was held by D. The lien therefore which defendant has on said property is said sum of £1,350 paid by him to D. Plaintiff agrees to pay defendant said £1,350, with interest, as follows (setting out the times of payment). And further, D, delivers to defendant all the chattels on the premises, to be held in defendant's name, but for the plaintiff's benefit, and the business to be done in defendant's name, but the profits to go to the plaintiff. It was then alleged that the said agreement being in full force, the defendant, in breach thereof, distrained upon the plaintiff's goods, as his tenant, in the house he then dwelt in on the said premises, for £306, being, as the warrant of distress falsely alleged, the amount of rent due to defendant for the same on the 1st October then last, whereby the plaintiff, in order to obtain possession of his goods, was obliged to replevy them, and was put to great loss and expense, &c.:—Held, that the declaration was bad, as not shewing a breach of any covenant contained in the agreement set out; for it was not alleged that the goods distrained were those mentioned in the deed, nor that the plaintiff was not defendant's tenant, nor that no rent was due, nor what proceedings were had in the replevin suit. Scott v. McCabe, 31 U. C. R. 220.

To a declaration on a covenant in a lease alleging that defendant covenanted with plaintiff that he would during the term spend and employ, in a husband-like manner, upon the demised premises, all the straw which should grow thereon, and charging as a breach, that defendant drew away many waggon loads of straw which grew thereon, and used it elsewhere, defendant pleaded that the covenant in the declaration was not the whole of the covenant, but that it contained additional matter completely qualifying, as he contended, and in effect neutralizing that part of the covenant set out; the whole alleged covenant was then set out, with an averment that defendant had fulfilled it acording to the true intent and meaning of the added part:—Held, on demurer, plea bad. Shier v. Shier, 22 C. P. 147.

To an action of covenant in a lease, defend-

To an action of covenant in a lease, defendant pleaded in substance on equitable grounds, that by mutual mistake the covenant declared on was inserted in the lease in different terms from what both parties had agreed upon, intended and supposed when the lease was exceuted, and that reading the covenant as it should have been, there was no breach thereof:—Held, plea bad. 1b.

To an action in covenant defendant pleaded never indebted: — Held, not a nullity, but merely an irregularity. Abell v. Glen, 6 P. R. 64

Treating a pleading as a nullity does not prevent it afterwards being attacked as an irregularity. Ib.

IV. MISCELLANEOUS CASES.

Acceleration Clause,]—Where, by virtue of an acceleration clause in a mortgage deed, the whole of the mortgage money has become due by default of payment of interest, and judgment has been recovered for the whole by the mortgage against the mortgagor, in an action solely upon the covenant for payment contained in the mortgage deed, the defendant is not entitled, upon payment of interest and costs, to have the judgment and execution issued thereon set aside. The acceleration is not in the nature of a penalty, but is to be regarded as the contract of the parties. Rules 359, 369, and 361, and the long form of the acceleration clause, R. S. O. 1887 c. 107, schedule B. s. 16, considered. Wilson V. Campbell, 15 P. R. 254.

Assignment of Covenant — Compelling Recassipment.)—The plaintiff transferred a covenant for the payment of $4,000, executed by four persons in his favour, to the defendant, by an absolute assignment, as security for $2,000; the defendant giving to the plaintiff a separate agreement to "re-assign" on payment of the loan and interest. On a bill to obtain a re-assignment, alleging that such loan had been repaid, the court made a decree for redemption in favour of the plaintiff, with costs; the defendant having set up a claim to be entitled to hold the security as absolute purchaser thereof. Livingston v. Wood, 27 (r. 515.

Chattel Mortgage to Defeat Creditors—Cocenant made by the defendant to the plaintiff, whereby he covenanted to pay the plaintiff 37 10s, and interest. The defendant pleaded that the covenant was contained in a chattel mortgage made by him at the plaintiff's request, and to hinder, defeat, and defraud his creditors, and without consideration. Upon denurrer:—Held, that a covenant executed as above is only void as against third parties, and not between the parties to it; and that the plaintiff, therefore, was entitled to judgment. Scoble v. Henson, 12 C. P. 63.

Covenant Not to Sue.]—Covenant not to sue in deed of composition. See Andrews v. Bank of Toronto, 15 O. R. 648.

Partial Illegality.]—The general rule is, that where you cannot sever the illegal from the legal part of a covenant, the contract is altogether void, but where you can sever them, whether the illegality be created by the statute, or by the common law, you may reject the bad part, and retain the good. kitching v. Hicks, 6 O. R. 739.

Restraint of Trade.]—See CONTRACT, II. 3.

Sale of Patent Rights—Covenant to Protect Against Infringement.]—In 1875, J. II. obtained letters patent for improvements in "harvesters," and sold and assigned to the plaintiffs the exclusive right to manufacture and sell the same, and to sell such right to other persons. In the same year the plaintiffs executed a deed to the defendant, assigning to the defendant the exclusive right to manufacture and sell such "harvesters" in certain counties, he paying $10 royalty on each one to be manufactured by him. It was then covenanted by and on the part of the plaintiffs that the original patentee, J. R., would warrant and defend the defendant in the possession of the said patent within the territory thereby granted, and further agreed that if J. R. neglected or refused to protect and defend him in his peaceable possession of the said patent, then the royalty agreed to be paid by him should cease. Per Hagarty, C.J. O., and Morrison, J.A., that the plaintiffs, under this coverant, were liable only to the defendant in case J. R. neglected to defend him against all persons having a right to manufacture and sell the machines, not as against mere wrongdoers. Per Burton and Patterson, J.J.A., that the terms of the covenant bound J. R. to protect the defendant against all infringers, the rule of construction of covenants to "warrant and defend," as applied to lands, not having any application in cases like the present. The court being equally divided, the appeal from decision of Ferguson, J. (2 O. R. 627) was dismissed. Green v. Watson, 10 A. R. 113.

Surety — Reservation of Remedies.] — A covenant not to sue entered into by the creditor with the principal debtor without the surety's consent, but with a reservation of remedies against other parties, does not discharge such surety. Hall v. Thompson, 9 C. P. 257.

Two Debtors—Covenant not to Sue Onc.]

—A stipulation not to sue one of two judgment debtors is no discharge of the other, though there should be no express reservation of rights as against such other. Dewar v. Sparling, 18 Gr. 633.

II. ARREST.

Arrest before Indorsement of Warezzlement and Frauds by Trus-tees, Agents, and Others, 1645. | rant—Detention After.]—A warrant for the arrest of the plaintiff, who had made default in paying a fine on conviction for an infraction of the liquor license law, was sent from an outlying county to a city. Before it was indorsed by a magistrate in the city the plain if was arrested there by two of the defendants, the chief constable and a detective, and contined. Some hours after the arrest the warrant was properly indorsed and the detention of the plaintiff was continued until payment of the line:—Held, that the only damages recoverable by the plaintiff were for the treepass up to the time of backing the warrant:—Held, also, that the plaintiff being illegally in custody under a criminal charge, his subsequent detention on a similar charge under a proper warrant was lawful. Distinction between subsequent civil and criminal proceedings in such cases pointed out, Southwell v. Marc. 24 O. R. 528.

Arrest without Warrant.]—The prisoner was arrested in Toronto, upon information contained in a telegram from England, charging him with having committed a felony in that country, and stating that a warrant had been issued there for his arrest:—Held, that a person cannot, under the Imperial Act 5 & 7 Vict. c. 34, legally be arrested or detained here for an offence committed out of Canada, unless upon a warrant issued where the offence was committed, and indorsed by a Judge of a superior court in this country. Such warrant must disclose a felony according to the law of this country; and, semble, that the expression "felony, to wit, larceny," is insufficient. The prisoner was therefore discharged. Regina v. McHolme, S. P. R. 452.

A justice of the peace, who issues his warrant for the arrest of a person charged with felony without the information having been sworn, is liable in trespass. Sections 22 and 23 of the Criminal Code are a codification of the common law, and merely justify the personal arrest by the peace officer, whether justice or constable, on his own view, or on suspicion, or calling on some one present to assist him. They do not authorize a justice to direct a constable to make an arrest elsewhere without warrant. McGuiness v. Dafoe, 23 A. R. 704.

Assault.]—Where a man is himself assaulted by a person disturbing the peace in a public street, he may arrest the offender and ake him to a peace officer to answer for the breach of the peace. Forrester v. Clarke, 3 U. C. R. 151.

Central Prison—Warden's Responsibility—Handcuffing,]—The plaintiff, a workman in the central prison, in the employment of a contractor therein, was detected conveying tobacco to a convict, contrary to the rules in force and to the provisions of the Central Prison Act, whereupon the warden directed a constable to arrest him, which he did, and though under no apprehension of plaintiff making an attempt to escape, handcuffed him, and led him through the public streets of Toronto to the police station. On the charge preferred the plaintiff was indicted:—Held, that the plaintiff was subject to an indictment and therefore the arrest was legal:—Held, however, that under the circumstances the handcuffing was not justifiable, and the constable was liable in trespass therefor, but no liability attached to the warden as the evidence failed to shew that he was a party to it. Hamilton w. Massie, 18 O. R., 585.

Detention of Accused—Proceedings in Quebec.]—Section 752 of the Criminal Code only applies where the court or Judge making the direction as to further proceedings and inquiries mentioned therein has power to enforce it, and a Court or Judge in Ontario has no power over a Judge or Justice in Quebec to compel him to "take any proceedings or hear such evidence," &c. Regina v. Defries, Regina v. Tamblyn, 25 O. R. 645.

Gaoler's Duty.]—The gaoler of a common gool is bound to receive and detain until released a prisoner delivered into his custody by a constable on a charge of felony, without warrant; and may justify in an action for false imprisonment without shewing what the particular felony was with which the plaintiff was charged. McKellar v. MacFarland, 1 C. P. 457.

III. ATTAINDER,

The property of a person attainted for high treason, is not forfeited until the attainder is complete. Quere, as to the effect of a defendant becoming attainted between the seizure and sale of his goods under a fi. fa. Eastwood v. McKenzie, 5 0. S. 708.

Semble, that the wife of an attainted traitor cannot defeat the recovery in ejectment of the purchaser at sheriff's sale, in an action against the traitor on a bond entered into before his attainder, by setting up the title by forfeiture in the Crown, which the Crown had forborne to assert. Doe d, Gillespie v. Wixon, 5 U. C. R, 132.

R. 132.

The estate of a traitor concerned in the rebellion of 1837, and who accepted the benefit of the Previocal statute I Vict. c. 10, is at once by such acceptance as much vested in the Crown, under the operation of 33 Hen. VIII. c. 20, s. 2, without office found, as afterwards. Ib.

Though by 33 Hen, VIII, c, 20, the Crown, in case of attainder for high treason, would be deemed in actual possession without any inquisition of office, yet such lands would only vest in the commissioners under 59 Geo. III. c, 12, as should be found by inquisition to be vested in the Crown, and therefore no more land could possibly pass by a deed from the commissioners than the inquisition had found the traitor seised of. And held, that the inquisition could not support the conveyance which the commissioners made; for it referred to nothing which could supply proof of identity, and the commissioners were not warranted in going beyond the inquisition. And semble, that the inquisition was void for want of certainty. Doe d. Sheldon v. Ramsay, 9 U. C. R. 105.

A statute was passed reversing the attainder of A.S., and taking away the forfeiture wrought thereby, so far as it might affect such portions of his estate as had not been already declared forfeited, and been sold under authority of law, and vesting such estate in those who could claim it if he had not been attainted: provided, always, that nothing in the Act contained should affect any property sold or conveyed by the commissioners of forfeited estates, or any public officer acting for the Crown in that behalf, but that such property should remain as if the Act had not been passed. In the preamble it was recited that a part of the estate had been taken upon inquisition, and seized by the Crown:—Held, that the plaintiffs, claiming as devisees of A. S., must shew, as part of their case in the first instance, that the lands claimed were not part of those forfeited and sold. Doe d. Stevens v. Clement, 9 U. C. R. 550.

IV. BAIL.

General Rule.]—The guilt or innocence of a prisoner is not the question to decide on application for bail on a criminal charge. The seriousness of the charge, the nature of the punishment and evidence, and probability of the prisoner appearing to take his trial, are the important questions to be considered:—Held, where it was shewn that the prisoner attempted to bribe the constable to allow him to escape, that the probability of his appearing to take his trial was too slight for the Judge to order bail. Regina v. Byrnes, 8 L. J. 76.

Bail refused, although it was some months before a criminal court competent to try the case would sit. Ib.

Assault.]—Upon a charge of assault, or aggravated assault, there being doubts as to the law, the fact being disputed, the prisoner was admitted to bail pending application for his discharge, which was to be renewed in term. In re McKinnon, 2 C. L. J. 324.

Case Reserved. — Where the prisoners were convicted at the sessions of felony, and a case reserved for the Queen's bench, which had not been argued, the Judge in chambers refused to bail except with the consent of the attorney-general. Regina v. Sage, 2 C. P. 138.

Discretion.]—The evidence in this case warranted the magistrates in requiring bail. Regina v. Mosier, 4 P. R. 64.

Evidence on Application.]—Where a prisoner applies to a Judge in chambers to be admitted to bail for an indictable offence, under C, S, C, c, 102, s, 63, he copies of information, examination, &c., may be received, though certified by the county crown attorney, and not by the committing justice. Regina v, Chamberlain, 1 C, L, J, 151.

High Court Judge.]—Held, that a Judge of the high court has power under s. 83 of the Criminal Procedure Act, R. S. C. c. 174 to admit to bail in cases where the accused has not been finally committed for trial if he "think it right so to do;" but in this case, the charge being a serious one, the magistrate before whom the prisoner appeared, having refused to admit him to bail, and no depositions having been taken, an order for bail was refused. Regina v. Cox. 16 O. R. 228.

Larceny.] — A prisoner in custody for grand larceny may be admitted to bail. Rex v. Jones, 4 O. S. 18.

Murder.]—The court refused to discharge a prisoner on a habeas corpus, charged with having murdered his wife in Ireland, communication having been made by the Provincial to the Home Government on the subject, and no answer received, and the prisoner javing been in custody less than a year; and bail in such a case will not be allowed until a year from the time of the first imprisonment, although no proceedings have been taken by the Crown. Rev v. Fitzgerald, 3 O. S. 300.

A prisoner charged with murder may in some cases be admitted to ball; and on such an application the court may look into the information, and if they find good ground for a charge of felony, may remedy a defect in a commitment, by charging a felony in it. Rex. v. Higgins, 4 O. S. Si.

On an application by prisoner in custody on a charge of murder, under a coroner's warrant, to be admitted to hail, it is proper to the coroner's probability of their foreiting general probability of their foreiting general probability of their foreiting general properties. The properties of the prisoners as to warrant a grand jury in finding a true bill, they should not be bailed. The fact of one assige having passed over since the committal of the prisoners, without an indictment having been preferred, is in itself no ground for bail. The application is one of discretion and not of right, the prisoners not having brought themselves within 31 Car. II. c. 2, s. 7, by applying on the first day of the assign to be brought to trial. Regina v. Mullady, 4 P. R. 314.

Where the grand jury have found a true bill for murder bail will generally be refused. In this case there was evidence, if believed, sufficient to warrant a conviction, and only one assize had elapsed without a trial. An application to admit to bail was refused, and the prisoners left to their remedy under the Habeas Corpus Act. Remarks as to the considerations which should govern the exercise of discretion in granting or refusing bail. Regina v. Kecler, 7 P. R. 117.

One Justice Granting.]—Although a statute may require the presence of three justices to convict of an offence, yet one has power to bail the offence; and a second arrest for the same charge, by the same complainant, before the time appointed for the hearing, is illegal. King v. Orr., 5 O. 8. 724.

Recognizance — Form.] — The recognizance entered into by the defendants on the removal of the proceedings from the sittings of oyer and terminer and general god delivery to the Queen's bench division of the high court provided that they should "appear in this court and answer and comply with any judgment which may be given upon or in reference to a certain indictment, &c., or upon or in reference to a certain indictment, &c., or upon or in reference to the demurrer to such indictment, and plead to said indictment if so required." Semble, that the practice and procedure before the Judicature Act should be maintained in its entirety; though possibly it might be varied by agreement. By the recognizance the defendants had not agreed to vary it, but they might thereunder elect to appear and answer to the indictment, or to appear and argue the demurrer; and they, being ready to appear and answer the indictment, would fully perform the condition of the recognizance by so doing. Regina v. Bunting, 7 O. R. 118.

Recognizance - Acknowledgment - Estreat—Writ of Fieri Facias and Capias.]—A by the clerk of the court addressing the parties, being then before him in open court, by name, and stating the substance of the recognizance; and the verbal acknowledgment of the parties so taken is quite sufficient with-out more. 2. In this case a recognizance was drawn up which stated that the principal and sureties personally came before the clerk of assize, in open court, and acknowledged, &c.; and also stated that it was taken and acknowledged in open court before the clerk of assize. As a matter of fact the parties actually came before the court, and properly acknowledged the debt to the Crown in open court:-Held, that the recognizance should have stated that the parties personally came before the court, and that the recognizance was taken and acknowledged in open court; and the name of the clerk should merely have been subscribed to it; but the errors made in drawing it up were not sufficient to avoid it, Notice to the sureties of the recognizance is not necessary where it is taken as and where this one was. 4. The provision of R. S. C. c. 179, ss. 10 and 11, and R. S. O. 1887 c. 88, ss. 7 and 8, requiring the written order of the Judge for the estreating or putting in process of a recognizance, applies only to recognizances to appear to prosecute, or to give evidence, or to answer for any common as-sault, or to articles of the peace, and does not apply to a recognizance such as the one here in question, whereby the bail became bound for the appearance of their principal bound for the appearance of their principal to stand his trial upon an indictment for conspiracy. 5. The estreat roll was sufficiently signed by the clerk when he signed the affidavit at the foot of the roll. 6. It is no part of the duty of the clerk in making up the roll to instruct the sheriff as to what disposition he is to make of the mount these instances. he is to make of the money therein mentioned when collected. And where the clerk, making it up, stated it to be made in accordance with a Provincial statute, and also with two Dominion statutes, thus leaving it uncertain whether the moneys were to be paid over to whether the moneys were to be paid over to the Provincial treasurer or to the Dominion minister of finance:—Held, that the words so used were surplusage, and did not affect the validity of the roll, and should be stricken out. 7. The estreat roll, as drawn up, stated that it was a roll of fines, issues, amercia-ments, and forfeited recognizances, set, im-posed, lost, or forfeited, by or before the court, &c., commenced, &c., and contained the names of parties, residences, &c., with the amounts for which the bail were bound, filled amounts for which the bail were bound, filled in under the heading "amount of fine imposed:"-Held, that the roll sufficiently shewed the recognizance to have been forfeited, and that it was fairly entered and extracted on the roll as a forfeited recognizance. 8. Held, that the proceedings to collect the debt due to the Crown, under the recognizances, were civil and not criminal proceedings, and were to be regulated by R. S. O. 1887 c. 88; and the writ of fieri facias and capias issued in this case, following the form given in the schedule to the Act, was not open to any objection. 9. Held, that, under the circumstances set forth in the affidavits, the court would not be justified in releasing the bail from their liability. Re Talbot's Bail, 23 O. R. 65.

Recognizance — Affidavit.] — Where the affidavit accompanying a recognizance filed on a motion for a rule nisi to quash a conviction did not negative the fact of the sureties being sureties in any other matter, and omitted to state that they were worth $100 over and above any amount for which they might be liable as sureties, it was held insufficient. The rule in force as to recognizances prior to the passing of the Criminal Gode is still in force. Regina v. Robinet, 16 P. R. 49.

Refusal to Grant. —Held (before the passing of 16 Vict. c. 179), that magistrates were not liable for refusing to admit to bail on a charge of misdemeanour in the absence of any proof of malice. Conroy v. McKenney, 11 U. C. R. 439.

Rescinding Order.]—Where a prisoner charged with felony had been admitted to bail upon an order of a Judge, and an application was subsequently made to rescind such order, and to recommit the prisoner, on the grounds that he had not been committed for trial at the time such order was granted, and that the bail put in was fictitious:—Held, that a Judge had power to make the order asked for; but the order in this case was conditional upon the failure of the prisoner to find new sureties within a specified time. Regina v. Mason, 5 P. R. 1250.

V. CRIMINAL INFORMATION.

1. Against Judges and Magistrates.

To support a motion for leave to file a criminal information against a justice of the peace, the athdavis should not be intituled as in a suit pending. Bustard v. Schofield, 4 O, S. 11.

O. S. 11.

Notice must be given of complainant's intention to apply. Ib.

Notice must be given of companiants intention to apply. Ib.

The motion should be made without unceessary delay, and sufficiently early in term to admit of notice of it being given. Ib.

Application for leave to file an information against a Judge of a recorder's court, upon the grounds that he had falsified the records of the court and maliciously condemned the applicant as guilty of a felony upon the verdict of his peers, when, as alleged, no verdict whatever was found by the jury. The facts were that the jury came into court and the foreman pronounced a verdict of guilty. The counsel of the accused then questioned (not through the court) some of the jury as to the grounds of their verdict, when one stated that he did not concur in it. The attention of the court was not drawn to this dissent, nor did it appear the court was aware of it. A verdict of guilty was recorded by the presiding Judge; and when formally read to the jury by the clerk, no objection was made. The court refused the information. Regina ex. rel. Stark v. Ford, 3 C. P. 209.

On application for leave to file a criminal

On application for leave to file a criminal information against a division court Judge, for his conduct in imposing a fine for contempt upon a barrister employed to conduct a case before him:—Held, that such leave should never be granted unless the court see plainly that dishonest, oppressive, vindictive, or corrupt motives influenced the mind, and prompted the act complained of, which in this case was clearly not shewn. In re Recorder and Judge of Division Court of Toronto, 23

Quære, whether such information is proper in the case of a Judge of an inferior court of civil jurisdiction, in relation to a matter over which he has exclusive jurisdiction, Ib.

2. Miscellaneous Cases,

A criminal information must be signed by the master of the Crown office, Regina v. Crooks, 5 O. S. 733.

On putting off the trial of an information for penalties, on the application of the defendant, costs will be imposed as in civil cases, Rex v. 1ves, E. T. 1 Will. IV.

It is not necessary that there should be fifteen days between the teste and return of a subpoena on a criminal information, where the venue is laid in the home district. Regina v. Crooks, E. T. 3 Vict.

An information to restrain a nulsance caused by the erection of a fence on a public highway, alleged that "the defendants or some or one of them had put up such a fence:"—Held, bad, on demurrer, as being too uncertain an allegation as to who had committed the act complained of, Attorney-General v. Boulton, 20 Gr. 402.

VI. EVIDENCE.

1. Accomplice.

Accessory After the Fact. |- Upon a trial for murder it appeared that the de-ceased was found dead in his stable in the morning, killed by a gunshot wound. The prisoner was a hired man in his house. His widow, the principal witness for the Crown. testified that she and her husband went to bed by ten o'clock; that afterwards her husband, being aroused by a noise in the stable, got up and went out: that she heard the report of a gun; that a few minutes after the prisoner a gun; that a rew minutes after the prisoner tapped at the door, which she opened; that he said he had done it, and it was well done; that she asked him if he had killed her hus-band, and he said he had, and that it was for her sake he had done it: that he told her to keep quiet, and give him time to get into bed, which she did: that she waited a few minutes and then gave the alarm, calling the prisoner and another man who was sleeping in the house, who went out together and dis-covered the body. She also swore that the prisoner had previously told her he was planning the murder, but that she did not then consider him in earnest. There was evidence, apart from her own, of her improper intimacy with the prisoner; and a true bill had been found against her for the murder. The jury were told that there was no direct evidence corroborating her testimony; the rule requiring the evidence of an accomplice to be confirmed was explained to them, and they were directed that before convicting they should be satisfied that the circumstantial evidence resatisfied that the circumstantial evidence re-lied upon by the Crown did corroborate her testimony. They convicted; and questions were reserved under C. S. U. C. c. 112, whether the widow was an accomplice, and whether there was sufficient evidence to sub-mit to the jury:—Held, that, whether she was an accomplice or not, there was no ground for disturbing the verdict. Quære, per Harrison, C.J., whether the widow was an accessory after the fact, and whether, if so, she was such an accomplice as to require corroboration, according to the rule of practice. Per Morrison, J., and Wilson, J., she was an accessory after the fact. Regina v. Smith, 38 U. C. R. 218.

Cautioning Jury.]—A conviction of a prisoner for horse-stealing, upon the uncorroborated evidence of an accomplice, was held legal, although the Judge did not caution the jury as to the weight to be attached to the evidence. Regina v. Beckeith, S. C. P. 274.

Cautioning Jury.]—The question whether or not a Judge, in charging a jury, should caution them that the evidence of an accomplice should be corroborated, is not a matter for a court to review on a case reserved, for it is not a question of law but of practice, though a practice which should not be omitted, Regina v. Stubbs, 7 Cox, C. C. 48, and Regina v. Beckwith, S. C. P. 274, followed. Regina v. Andrews, 12 O. R. 184.

Cautioning Jury.]—When the jury have been cautioned as to acting upon the unconfirmed testimony of accomplices, no fault can be found with the admission of their evidence. Regina y. Seddons, 16 C. P. 389.

In this case being an indictment for soliciting P, and S, to steal money of the Gore Bank, the jury were told that the testimony of the accomplices was not sufficiently corroborated to warrant a conviction, whereupon they came into court stating that they thought the prisoner guilty, but that he ought not to be convicted on the evidence. They were then told that they ought to acquit; but after a short interval they returned a verdict of guilty. Before recording their finding, the presiding Judge recommended them not to convict on the evidence, saying, however, that they could do so if they thought proper; they nevertheless adhered to their verdict:—Held, no ground for a new trial. Ib.

Corroboration.]—Semble, that a conviction on an indictment for conspiracy to procure by fraud the return of one F, to the Legislative Assembly, upon the evidence of an accomplice not corroborated by other testimony, is not illegal; but,—Held, that in this case such evidence was clearly confirmed, and that the verdict against all the defendants was warranted. Regina v. Fellowes, 19 U. C. R. 48.

Corroboration.]—Remarks as to the application to civil causes of the practice in criminal cases regarding the corroboration of accomplices. See Re Monteith, Merchants' Bank v. Monteith, 10 O. R. 529; United States Express Co. v. Donohoe, 14 O. R. 333.

2. Competent and Compellable Witness.

Assault.)—Where a prisoner was indicted under 32 & 33 Vict. c. 20, s. 47 (D.), for an assault occasioning actual bodily harm:—Held, that he could not be deemed to be on his trial on an indictment for a common assault, so as to entitle him to be admitted and give evidence as witness on his own behalf, under 41 Vict. c. 18, s. 1 (D.), Regina v. Bonter, 30 C. P. 19.

The prisoner was indicted for an indecent gasulit. At the close of the case for the frown the prisoner tendered himself as a witness in his own behalf. The Judge at the trial ruled that as upon the evidence adduced an indecent assault had been proved the prisoner could not be a witness, but reserved the point for the opinion of the court of Queen's bench, and that court affirmed the conviction, Regina v. McDonald, 30 C. P. 21 (n).

Canada Temperance Act.] — See In-TOXICATING LIQUORS.

Convict.]—A writ of habeas corpus ad testificandum may be issued to the warden of the Provincial penitentiary to bring a convict for life before a court of oyer and terminer and general gaol delivery, to give testimony on behalf of the Crown in a case of murder. Regina v. Toursend, 3 L. J. 184.

Drunkenness.]—On the trial of an ofence of being "unlawfully found drunk on the public street" contrary to the provisions of a municipal by-law, the magistrate cannot refuse to receive the defendant's evidence. Repina v. Grant, 18 O. R. 169.

Fraudulent Removal of Goods.]—See Regina v. Lackie, 7 O. R. 431.

Husband and Wife.] — See Regina v. Bissell, 1 O. R. 514; Regina v. Meyer, 11 P. R. 477; McFarlane v. The Queen, 16 S. C. R. 292

Judge—Juror.]—Review of the cases on the questions whether either a Judge or a juror can be properly a witness in a case which he is trying. Regina v. Petrie, 20 O. R. 317.

Offences Under By-law. |—On the trial of an offence against a city by-law in the erection of a wooden building within the fire limits, the defendant is not either a competent or compellable witness; and, therefore, where in such a case, the defendant's evidence was received and a conviction made against him, it was quashed with costs. Regina v. Hart, 20 O. R. 611.

Practising Medicine.]—Upon trial of an information for practising contrary to the provisions of the Ontario Medical Act, R. S. O. 1877 c. 142:—Held, following Regina v. Hoddy, 41 U. C. R. 291, that the defendant was properly rejected as a witness in his own behalf. Regina v. Sparham, 8 O. R. 570.

Presiding Magistrate.]—Calling magistrate as a witness in prosecution under the Canada Temperance Act, 1878, with a view of shewing his interest in the prosecution. See Regina v. Sproule, 14 O. R. 379.

Prisoner—Prisoner's Wife.]—The defendant on his trial upon an indictment cannot give evidence for himself, nor can his wife be admitted as a witness. Regina v. Humphreys, 9 U. C. R. 337.

Prisoner Acquitted.]—Where no evidence appears against one of several prisoners, he ought to be acquitted at the close of the prosecutor's case. Quare, whether without such formal acquittal he may be called as a witness for his co-prisoner. Semble, not, unless it appear that he has been joined in order to exclude his testimony. It is in the discretion of the Judge at the close of the prosecution to submit such prisoner's case separately to the jury; but he is not bound to do so, and whether he has rightly exercised his discretion or not, cannot be reserved as a point of law:—Held, that in this case (being an indictment for arson) it could not be said that there was no evidence against E. H., one of the prisoners; and semble, that under the circumstances he could not be called as a witness for the other. Regina v. Hambly, 16 U. C. R. 617.

Prisoners Severing.] — Four prisoners being indicted together for robbery, one severed in his challenges from the other three, who were first tried: — Held, that he was a competent witness on their behalf. Regina v. Jerrett, 22 U. C. R. 499.

Rejection of Defendant's Evidence-Appeal — Certiorari.] — The defendant was convicted before two justices of the peace under the Weights and Measures Act, 42 Vict. under the Weights and Measures Act, 42 vect. c. 16, s. 14, s.-s. 2 (D.), as amended by 47 Vict. c. 36, s. 7 (D.), of obstructing an inspector in the discharge of his duty, and was fined $100 and costs, to be levied by dis-tress, imprisonment for three months being awarded in default of distress. At the hearing before the justices the defendant tendered his own evidence, which was excluded. The defendant appealed to the quarter sessions, and on the appeal again tendered his own evidence, which was again excluded, and the conviction affirmed. On motion for certiorari :-Held, that the conviction having been affirmed in appeal certiorari was taken away except for want or excess of jurisdiction, and that there was no such want or excess of jurisdiction, inasmuch as the justices and the quarter sessions had jurisdiction to determine whether the defendant's evidence was admissible or not, and that such determination, even if erroneous in law, could not be reviewed by cer-tiorari. That even if the determination on tiorari. That even if the determination on this point could be reviewed the justices were right in excluding the evidence of the defen-ant, inasmuch as the offence charged was a crime. Regina v. Dunning, 14 O. R. 52.

Traders' By-law.]—The defendant was convicted of selling and delivering teas as the agent of P. W., a non-resident of the county, in violation of a by-law of the county of Bruce, the third section of which was a copy of s. 1 of 48 Vict. c. 40 (O.). The defendant, against the protest of his counsel, was called as a witness, and swore that he bought the tea in question from one W. of the city of London, and that he did not sell as the latter's agent, but on his own account; that he had formerly sold tea on commission for W. but purchased that in question for the purpose of evading the by-law. The conviction alleged that defendant was the agent of P. W., but did not state that he had not the necessary license to entitle him to do the act complained of:—Held, 1. That defendant being, under the evidence, an independent trader, and not an agent, did not come within the Consolidated Municipal Act, 1883, a, 495, s.-s. 3, nor within 48 Vict. c. 40 (O.). 2. That defendant had been improperly compelled to give evidence against himself. 3. That the having a license is a matter of defence, and not of proof by the prosecution. Regina v. McNicol, 11 O. R. 659.

3. Confessions and Admissions.

Information against Another Person. |-The prisoner, after his committal for trial, and while in the custody of a constable, made a statement, upon which the latter took him before a magistrate, when he laid an information on oath charging another person with having suggested the crime, and asked him to join in it, which he accordingly did. Upon the arrest of the accused, the prisoner made a full deposition against him, same time admitting his own guilt. Both information and deposition appeared to have been voluntarily made, uninfluenced by either hope or threat; but it also appeared that the prisoner had not been cautioned that his statements as to the other might be given in evi-dence against himself, though he had been duly cautioned when under examination in his own case :-Held, following Regina v. Finkle, P. 453, that both the information and deposition were properly received in evidence, as being statements voluntarily made, uninfluenced by any promises held out as an inducement to the prisoner to make them, and that too, though made under oath. Regina v. Field, 16 C. P. 98. The rule of law excluding the sworn state-

The rule of law excluding the sworn statements of a prisoner under examination apply only to his examination on a charge against himself, and not when the charge was against another; for, in the latter case, a prisoner is not obliged to say anything against himself, but if he volunteer such a statement, it will be admissible in evidence against him. Explanation of the principle on which the statement of a prisoner under outh is excluded, Ib.

Persuading Prisoner to Confess.]—
Where it appeared that a police constable gave the usual caution to the prisoner, who was arrested on a charge of obstructing a railway train by placing blocks upon the line, but afterwards said to him: "The truth will go better than a lie. If any one prompted you to it you had better tell about it." whereupon the prisoner said that he did the act charged against him:—Held, that the admission was not receivable in evidence, and a conviction grounded thereon was improper. Regina v. Fennell, 7 Q. B. D. 147, followed. Regina v. Romp, 17 O. R. 567.

Questioning Prisoner — Statements while in Custody.]—Answers given by a prisoner under arrest in response to the officer in charge, are receivable in evidence, if the presiding Judge is satisfied that they were not unduly or improperly obtained, which depends upon the circumstances of each case, Reniaa v. Elliott, 31 O. R. 14.

Statements to Constable and Coroner—Inducements.]—The prisoner was convicted of arson. His admission or confession was received in evidence on the testimony of the constable, who said that after the prisoner had been in a second time before the coroner, he stated there was something more he could tell, whereupon the constable cautioned him not to say what was unirue. He then confessed the charge. The constable did not recollect any inducement being held out to him. There was also evidence that on the third day of his incarceration he expressed a wish to the coroner to confess, on which the latter gave him the ordinary caution, that anything he said might be used against him, and not to say anything unless he wished. He then made a second statement, and after nn absence of a few minutes returned and made a full confession:—Held, that on these facts appearing, the statement made to the constable was prima facie receivable, and that the Judge was well warranted in receiving as voluntary the confession made to the coroner after due warning by him. Regina v. Finkle, 15 C. P. 453.

Semble, however, that the more reasonable rule to adopt in such cases is, that notwith-standing the caution of the magistrate, it is necessary in the case of a condition of the magistrate, it is necessary in the case of a condition of the magistrate, it is necessary in the case of a condition of the case of the case

Held, also, that if the Judge suspected the confessions had been obtained by undue influence, such suspicion should have been removed before he received the evidence. It is a question for the Judge whether or not the prisoner has been induced by undue influence to confess. Ib.

Semble, that when the names of other prisoners are mentioned in the confession, the proper course is to read the names in full, but to direct the jury not to pay any attention to them. Ib.

Statements to Detective.]—During the trial of the prisoner for murder questions arose as to the admissibility in evidence of statements made by him to certain detectives, in answer to questions put to him by them, he being at the time in their custody:—Held, upon a case reserved, that the statements were admissible in evidence. Regina v. Day, 20 O, R. 200, C.

In the course of a conversation between the prisoner and a detective relative to the purchase of counterfeit money, the prisoner asked the detective whether he had received a letter written by the former stating his desire to purchase counterfeit money; and upon the detective shewing prisoner the letter he admitted it was his:—Held, that the letter was admissible as in a sense forming part of the subject-matter of the conversation. Regina v. Attwood, 20 O. R. 574.

Statements to those Arresting.]— Held, that statements made by a prisoner to the parties who arrested him, he having been previously told on what charge he was arrested, were evidence. Regina v. Tufford, 8 C. P.
S1.

Statements Made by Prisoner's Counsel at a Previous Trial.]—See Regina v. Bedere, 21 O. R. 189.

Value of Such Evidence.]—Remarks as to evidence of confessions, and an objection that the whole statement was not given. Regina v. Jones, 28 U. C. R. 416.

See, also, Specific Offences, sub-title IX., post—Intoxicating Liquors—Justice of the Peace.

4. Evidence in Other Proceedings.

Committee of House of Commons.]—At the hearing of a criminal charge before a county Judge, sitting as police magistrate, evidence given before a special committee of the House of Commons, and taken by stenographers, was tendered before the magistrate and refused by him:—Held, that the court lad no power to grant a mandamus to the county Judge directing him to receive such evidence. Rose, J., while concurring in the decision that a mandamus should not issue, was of opinion that Parliament, having ordered the prosecution, the evidence should have been received by the magistrate. Subsequent resolution of the House of Commons, authorizing the evidence to be given. Regina v. Connolly, 22 O. R. 220.

Consent.]—Upon the hearing of a charge under the sections of the Code relating to the summary trial of indictable offences, evidence in other proceedings against another prisoner is admissible upon the consent of the accused's counsel. Regina v. 8t. Clair, 27 A. R. 308.

Goroner's Inquest.]—At a trial for murder the prisoner's counsel proposed to prove by witness his own deposition at the inquest, and to shew by other witnesses that it contained a true statement of his evidence, although the witness alleged it to be incorrect.
The learned Judge ruled that the coroner must be called to prove the depositions. He was afterwards called to prove them, and the evidence before offered was not again tendered:
—Semble, that the ruling as to proof of the depositions was right, they having been taken before a coroner; but, held, that the point became immaterial when they were afterwards proved in accordance with it; and that it must be assumed that it was not intended to adduce the other evidence. Regina v. Hamitton, 16 C. P. 340.

The object of taking depositions is not to afford information to the prisoner, but to secure the testimony. Ib.

A coroner's court is a criminal court, and the depositions of a witness before such court, who is subsequently charged with murder, cannot, since the Canada Evidence Act, 1893, be received in evidence against him at the trial, notwithstanding privilege was not claimed by him at the inquest. Regina v. Hendershott, 26 O. R. 678.

The depositions of a witness taken at a coroner's inquest without objection by him that his answers may tend to criminate him, and who is subsequently charged with an offence, are receivable in evidence against him at the trial. Regina v. Hendershott, 26 O. R. 678, overruled. Regina v. Williams, 28 O. R. 583.

The coroner's court is a criminal court. Section 5 of the Canada Evidence Act, 1893, 56 Vict. c, 31 (D.), which abolishes the privilege of not answering criminating questions, and provides that no evidence so given shall be receivable in evidence in subsequent criminal proceedings against the witness, other than for perjury in respect thereof, applies to any evidence given by a person under oath, though he may not have claimed privilege. Regina v. Williams, 28 O. R. 583, not followed. Regina v. Hammond, 29 O. R. 210.

Examination in Civil Action.]—The examination of the defendant C, in a civil action arising out of the matters in question, he not having claimed privilege therein, was allowed to be used against him on his trial for criminal conspiracy. Regina v. Connolly, 25 O. R. 151.

5. Procuring Attendance or Evidence of Witnesses.

Appeal to Sessions—Subpana to Witnesses in Another Province.]—Under the provisions of ss. 584 and 843 of the Criminal Code, 1842, it is competent for a Judge of the high court or county court to make an order for the issue of a subpena to witnesses in another Province to compel their attendance upon an appeal to the general sessions from the action of the justices of the peace under ss. 879 and 881. Regina v. Gillespie, 16 P. R. 155.

Foreign Commission - Prosecution for Indictable Offence.]—A prosecution for an indictable offence is "pending" within the meaning of s. 683 of the Criminal Code, 1892, when an information has been laid charging such an offence; and a commission to take evidence abroad for use before a magistrate upon a preliminary inquiry may then be or-dered. But the discretion of the Judge in ordering the issue of a commission is to be exercised upon a sworn statement of what it is expected the witnesses can prove, and he must be satisfied as to the materiality of the evidence. And, under the circumstances of this case, a commission was granted to take the evidence of only one of three witnesses whom the Crown proposed to examine, it appearing that the other two had not been asked to come into the jurisdiction, and that their evidence would be in corroboration only of a statement of the third witness that he was with the defendant upon a certain occasion. Regina v. Verral, 16 P. R. 444.

An order for a commission, under s. 683 of the Criminal Code, to take the evidence of any person residing out of Canada who is able to give material information relating to an indictable offence, or to any person accused thereof, may be made at any time after an information has been laid charging such offence, and such evidence may be used at any stage of the inquiry at which evidence may be given. Decision below, 16 P. R. 444, affirmed, but the order issued thereon varied. Regina v. Verral, 17 P. R. 61.

Police Magistrate—Warrant to Compel Attendance of Witness—Right of Police to Search Witness Arrested.]—Where a police magistrate acting within his jurisdiction under R. S. C. c. 174, s. 62, issues his warrant for the arrest of a witness who has not appeared in boedience to a subpora, he is not, in the absence of malice, liable in damages, even though he may have erred as to the sufficiency of the evidence to justify the arrest. Judgment below, 24 O. R. 576, affirmed. The right of the police to search or handcuff a person arrested on a warrant to compel attendance as a witness and the duty of the constable on making the arrest, considered.

6. Miscellaneous Cases.

Certificate of Previous Conviction.]
—Quere, whether a certificate of a previous conviction is sufficient prima facie evidence of the identity of the accused with the person of the same name so previously convicted. Regina v. Edgar, 15 O. R. 142.

Character-Prior Conviction.] - An indictment for an assault occasioning actual bodily harm contained a second count charging a prior conviction for an indictable of-The offence disclosed by the indictment upon which the prisoner was tried was not one of that class of offences for which. after a previous conviction for felony, &c., additional punishment might be imposed. The first part of the indictment only, was read in arraigning the prisoner, and no allusion was made to the second part charging the prior made to the second part charging the prior conviction. The prisoner in his defence gave evidence of good character. The Crown gave some general evidence in rebuttal, and then tendered, under s. 26 of c. 29, 32 & 33 Vict., a certificate to prove a prior conviction, and read the second clause of the indictment charging such prior conviction :- Held, that this evidence was not properly admissible as to character, and that such evidence can only be as to general reputation evidence of a prior conviction going to the matter of punishment, and not to general character. Regina v. Rowton, 10 Cox C. C. 25, followed. Regina v. Triganzie, 15 O. R. 294.

Common Design — Acts of Others.] — Whenever a joint participation in an enterprise is shewn, any act done in furtherance of the common design is evidence against all who were at any time concerned in it. In this case, the prisoner being charged with being in arms in Upper Canada with intent to levy war against the Queen, evidence was admitted against the prisoner of an engagement between the body of men with whom he had been and the Canadian volunteers, although the same took place several hours after his arrest:—Held, that the evidence had been properly received, as shewing to some extent that the engagement in question had been contemplated by the parties while the prisoner was with them before his arrest. Regina v. Slavin, 17 C. P. 205.

Coroner's Inquest — Discrediting Witness, — At a coroner's inquest evidence is properly receivable under R, S. C. c. 174, 8, 23 at other times a statement inconsistent with his present testimony; and independently of that enactment the improper reception of evidence is no ground for a certiorari to bring up the coroner's inquisition. Regina v. Ingham, 5 B, & S, at p. 200, specially referred to. Regina v. Sanderson, 15 O. R, 106.

Coroner's Inquest—Juror — Constable.]
—L., the constable to whom the coroner delivered the summons for the jury, was at the inquest sworn in as one of the jury, and was sworn and gave evidence as a witness; and Y., a juryman, was also sworn and gave evidence as a witness:—Held, that the fact of L. being such constable did not preclude him from being on the jury, nor did either of such positions preclude him from giving evidence; and so also Y, was not precluded. Regina v. Winggarner, 17 O. R. 208.

Depositions - Absence of Deponent.] -Upon a prosecution for uttering forged notes. the deposition of one S. taken before the police magistrate on the preliminary investi-gation was read, upon the following proof that S. was absent from Canada:—R. swore that
S. had a few months before left his (R's) house, where she (S.) had for a time lodged. that he had since twice heard from her in the United States, but not for six months. chief constable of Hamilton where the prisoner was tried, proved ineffectual attempts to find S, by means of personal inquiries in some places, and correspondence with the police of other cities. S, had for some time lived with the prisoner as his wife :- Held, that the admissibility of the deposition was in the discretion of the Judge at the trial, and that it could not be said that he had wrongly admitted it. Regina v. Nelson, 1 O. R. 500.

Destroying Trees—Other Acts of Same Nature.]—Two indictments were preferred against the defendants for feloniously destroying the fruit trees respectively of M. and C. The offences charged were proved to have been committed on the same night, and the injury complained of was done in the same manner in both cases. The defendants were put on their trial on the charge of destroying M.'s trees; and evidence relating to the offence charged in the other indictment, was admitted as shewing that the offences had been committed by the same person:—Held, that the evidence was properly received. Regina v. McDonald, JO O. R. 532 Dying Declarations.] — See Regina v. McMahon, 18 O. R. 502.

Habens Corpus—Affidavits—Locality of Offence. —A Judge cannot, upon the return for a habens corpus, where a warrant should be a surface of the corpus where a warrant should be suffered by the comparison of the corpus of the co Identity.]—To identify defendant as a private prosecutor. See May v. Reid, 16 A. R. 150; Jacobs v. The Queen, 16 S. C. R. 433.

Liquor License Act. — On motion to quash a conviction, it was objected that the evidence taken before the magistrates and returned by them was not shewn to have been read over and signed by the witnesses:—Held, that the maxim omnia presumuntur esse rite acta applied, and, as the contrary was not shewn, it would be presumed to have been done. Regina v. Excell, 20 O. R. 633.

In proof of defendant being a licensed hotel-keeper under the Act, a witness in giving evidence, stated defendant to be such, and aithough defendant was present and represented by counsel, he allowed the statement to pass unchallenged:—Held, sufficient, as the witness might have obtained his information from the defendant. Regina v. Flynn, 20 O. R. 638.

An objection that it did not appear that the evidence had been read over to the witnesses was overruled, following Regina v. Excell, 29 O. R. 633. The direction in s.-s. 2 of s. 96, as to the witnesses signing their evidence, is not imperative but directory merely. Regina v. Scott, 20 O. R. 646.

For an offence under "The Liquor License Act," R. S. O. 1887 c, 194, the license inspector who lays the information is a competent witness. Regina v. Fearman, 22 O. R. 456.

And see Intoxicating Liquors.

Medical Expert. |-- A witness was called at the trial to give evidence as a medical expert, and in answer to the Crown prosecutor, he said, "there are indicia in medical science from which it can be said at what distance small shot were fired at the body. I have studied this — not personal experience, but from books." He was not cross-examined as to the grounds of this statement, and no medical witnesses were called by the prisoner to confute it. The witness then stated the distance from the murdered man at which the shot must have been fired, in the case before the court, and on what he based his opinion as to it, giving the result of his examination of the body:—Held, that by his preliminary statement the witness had established his capacity to speak as a medical expert, and it not having been shewn by cross-examination, or other testimony, that there were no such indicia as stated, his evidence as to the distance at which the shot was fired, was properly received. Preeper v. The Queen, 15 S. C. R. 401.

Negative Evidence.]—On a trial for murier, the death of the deceased was shown to have been caused by his being stabled by a sharp instrument. It was proved that the prisoner struck the deceased, but neither a snife nor other instrument was seen in his hand. For the prisoner evidence was offered that on the day preceding the homicide the prisoner had a knife which could not have indicted the wound of which deceased died; and that on that day the prisoner parted with it to a person who held it until after the crime was committed. The learned Judge at the trial refued to admit this evidence:—Held, that the evidence was properly rejected. Regina v. Herod, 29 C. P. 428.

Orders in Council.]—Held, that a magistrate cannot take judicial notice of orders in council, or their publication, without proof thereof by production of the official Gazette, and therefore, that a conviction was bad, which was made without such evidence that the Canada Temperance Act of 1878 was in force in the county, pursuant to the terms of 8,96 thereof. Regina v. Bennett, 1 O. R. 445. And see INTOXICATION LIQUONS

Previous Inconsistent Statement.]—A witness for the Crown gave evidence quite different from a previous written statement made by him to the prosecutor's counsel. He admitted such statement when shewn to him, but said it was all untrue, and made to save himself. Per Wilson, J.—The prosecutor's counsel was properly admitted to disprove the witness's assertion as to how the statement came to be made, for the fact of its being obtained as he stated would tend very much to prejudice the prosecution and was therefore not a collateral matter, but relevant. Hagarry, J., inclined to the opinion that the witness having fully admitted his previous inconsistent statement, no further evidence relating to it should have been received. Regina v. Jerrett, 22 U. C. R. 499.

Prostitution—Evidence of Reputation of Bauedy House.]—On an indictment for attempting to procure a woman to become a common prostitute, in corroboration of her evidence that for such purposes the prisoner had taken her to a bawdy house, evidence of the general reputation of the house is admissible. Regina v. McNamara, 20 O. R. 489.

Reply.)—The theory of the defence, on an indifferent for murder, was that the death was caused by the communication of small-pox virus by Dr. M., who attended the deceased and one of the witnesses for the defence explained how the contagion could be guarded against. Dr. M. had not in his examination in chief or cross-examination been asked anything on this subject:—Held, that he was properly allowed to be called in reply, to state what precautions had been taken by him to guard against the infection. Regina v. Sparham and Graerae, 25 C. P. 143.

Territorial Division-Judicial Notice.] A warrant of commitment was made by the stipendiary magistrate for the police division of the municipality of the county of Picton. Nova Scotia, upon a conviction for an offence stated therein to have been committed "at Hopewell, in the county of Pictou." The county of Pictou appeared to be of a greater extent than the municipality of the county of Pictou,-there being also four incorporated towns within the county limits—and it did not specifically appear upon the face of the warrant that the place where the offence had been committed was within the municipality of the county of Pictou. The Nova Scotia statute of 1895 respecting county corporations (58 Vict. c, 3, s, 8), contains a schedule which mentions Hopewell as a polling district in Pictou county entitled to return two councillors to the county council:-Held, that the court was bound to take judicial notice of the territorial divisions declared by the statute as establishing that the place so mentioned in the warrant was within the territorial limits of the police division. Ex parte James W. Macdonald, 27 S. C. R. 683.

View by the Judge.]—The prisoner was tried without a jury by a county court Judge exercising jurisdiction under the Speedy Trials Act, upon an indictment for feloniously displacing a railway switch. After hearing the evidence and the addresses of counsel, the Judge reserved his decision. Before giving it, having occasion to pass the place, he examined the switch in question, neither the prisoner nor any one on his behalf being present. The prisoner was found guilty:—Held, that there was no authority for the Judge taking a "view" of the place, and his so doing was unwarranted; and even if he had been warranted in taking the view, the manner of his taking it, without the presence of the prisoner, or of any one on his behalf, was unwarranted. Held, also, that the question whether the Judge had the right to take a view was a question of law arising on the trial, and was a proper question to reserve under R. S. C. c. 174, s. 259. Regina v. Petrie, 20 O. R. 317.

VII. EXTRADITION.

1. Application and Construction of the Acts and Treaties,

General Rule.] — Judges are bound to construe the treaty in a liberal and just spirt, not labouring with legal astuteness to find flaws or doubtful meanings in its words, or in those of the legal forms required for carrying it into effect. Re Burley, 1 C. L. J. 34.

Remarks on the propriety of giving a liberal interpretation to the extradition treaty, and the inadequacy of its provisions to meet the class of felonies of most common occurrence in both countries. Regina v. Morton, 19 C. P. 9.

Accessory.]—An accessory before the fact is liable to extradition, but an accessory after the fact is not. Regina v. Browne, 6 A. R. 386, 31 C. P. 484.

Acts in Force.|—Held, that 40 Vict. c. 25 (D.) is not in force, but that the law and practice relating to the extradition of fugitive criminals between the United States and Canada, is to be found in the Asburton Treaty, Art. X., 31 Vict. c. 94 (D.), 33 Vict. c. 25 (D.), and the Imp. Acts. 33 & 34 Vict. c., 52, and 36 & 37 Vict. c. 69. Re Williams, 7 P. R. 275, approved of. Regina v. Browne, 31 C. P. 484, 6 A. R. 386.

Assault with Intent.] — A warrant charging that the prisoners "did feloniously shoot at &c., with intent, &c., to kill and nurder," sufficiently charges an "assault with intent to commit murder," the words used in the treaty and statute. Regina v. Reno, 4 P. R. 281.

The prisoner was charged with assault with intent to commit murder, in that he had opened a railway switch, with intent to cause a collision, whereby two trains did come into collision, causing a severe injury to a person on one of them:—Held, that this was not an "assault" within the statute. In re Lewis, 6 P. R. 236.

British Subjects Committing Offences in the United States.]—Held, that the Asburton Treaty as to the extradition of fugitive felons, and our Acts passed to give effect to it, extend to British subjects committing the offences named in the treaty in the territory of the United States and becoming fugitives to Canada. In re Burley, 1 C. L. J. 20, 34.

Burglary.]—Burglary is not an offence within the Ashburton treaty or the statutes of Canada passed to give effect to it. In re Beebe, 3 P. R. 273.

Forgery.]—Held, that upon the facts set forth in the judgment the prisoner, who had been committed for extradition by the mayor of Toronto upon an alleged crime of forgery, had been committed upon insufficient evidence, and must be discharged. In re Kermott, 1 C. L. Ch. 253.

Held, that a person convicted of forgery or uttering forged paper in the United States, who escaped to Canada after verdict, but before judgment, was liable to be delivered over. In re Warner, 1 C. L. J. 16. A prisoner was arrested here for having committed in the United States the crime of forgery, by forging, coining, &c., spurious silver coin, &c.:—Held that the offence as above charged, did not constitute the crime of "forgery," within the meaning of the Extradition Treaty or Act. Definition of the term "forgery," considered. In re Smith, 4 P. R. 215.

A prisoner was committed for extradition to the United States, on a charge of having forged a resolution of a city council relating to the issue of bonds, of having forged a bond of said city, and of uttering the same:—Held, on an application for his discharge, that the resolution being an essential preliminary to the issue of the bond, and the bond being an instrument which might be the subject of forgery, although not executed in strict accordance with the code of the state in which the bond was issued, there was a prima facie case made out against the prisoner, and that he should be remanded as to the charge of forgery. Regina v. Horey, 8 P. R. 345.

The prisoner was a clerk in the employ of the mayor and common council of the city of Newark (in the state of New Jersey, U. S.), a portion of his duties being to receive payment of taxes payable to the city; and on the 18th November, 1881, a sum of 85d2.32 for taxes, &c., due upon certain lands in that city, was paid to him—such sum being included with other taxes in a cheque of the party assessed for 84.044. The 85d2.32 was composed of three items; costs 87.70, interest 87.208, and taxes $482.54—each of which required to be entered in a separate column of the cash book belonging to the office of the comptroller. The gross sum (85d2.32) had apparently been entered first in the column headed "Totals," and subsequently in making the separate entries the sum of $482.54 was entered as $282.54, and the figure "2" in the total column substituted; the difference (8200) being abstracted by the prisoner from moneys paid to him on that day:—Held, per Osler, J. (3 O. R. 331), that the offence was forgery. On appeal:—Held (per Spragge, C.J. O., and Gali, J.), that this act amounted to the crime of forgery, and, as such, rendered the prisoner liable to extradition. Per Burton and Patterson, JJ.A., that such alteration was not forgery, though the act amounted to one of embezzlement, and therefore that the prisoner was entitled to be discharged, embezzlement not being one of the offences for which a party was at the time liable to be extradited under the Ashburton Treaty. In re Hall, 8 A. 3.1.

It is not necessary to constitute the crime of forgery that another's right shall have been actually prejudiced, the possibility of prejudice to another is sufficient; and if publication be necessary, the books in question being of a public character, the forged entry in them must be regarded as having been published as soon as made. $S.\ C_n$, 3 O. R, 331.

P. was the superintendent of the Blocksley Almshouse, situated in and supported by the city of Philadelphia, U. S. A. Parties supplying provisions, &c., for the use of the charity were paid by warrants duly prepared and signed by the proper officers thereof. Three such warrants for the payment of certain persons or firms were in the hands of W., the secretary of the almshouse, to be delivered to them on their respectively signing the stub or counterfoil of the warrants. P., who was well known to the secretary, applied to him for these warrants, stating that he had authorfor these warrants, stating that he had authority from the several parties to sign for then, which he did accordingly, and W. handed over to him the warrants, which were subsequently cashed at the office of the city treasurer. P. having fled to this Province, an application was made for his extradition before the Judge of the county court of Wentworth, when expert evidence was adduced, proving that according to the statute law of Pennsylvania, as also at common law as there interpreted, these facts constituted the crime of forgery : these facts constituted the crime of longery. Held, on appeal, per Spragge, C.J.O., and Patterson, J.A., affirming 1 O. R. 586, that the acts amounted to the crime of forgery, and so condered P. liable to be extradited. Per Bursaler of the condered P. liable to be extradited. ton, J.A., and Ferguson, J., that in the absence of any suspicion of any complicity of W. in the fraud, the facts would not have made out the crime of forgery; but as the evidence afforded ground to infer that W. and P. were in collusion, and had combined together for the purpose of committing the fraud by means of the false documents, and was therefore sufficient to warrant the committal of P. for the crime of forgery at common law, the order for his committal for extradition should be affirmed. Per Spragge, C.J.O.—The forgery which is the subject of the treaty cannot be confined to the statutory felony of forgery. In re Phipps, 8 A. R. 77.

The prisoner, who was collector of the county of Middlesex, in the state of New Jersey, kept a book in which to enter the payment and receipt of all moneys received by him as such collector, and which was by nim as such collector, and which was the principal book of account kept by him. The book was purchased with the money of the county, and was kept in the collector's office, and was left by him at the close of his term of office; it was by statute open to the inspection of those interested in it, and contained the certificate of the county auditors as to the correctness of the matters therein contained :-Held, that the book was the public property of the county, and not the private property of the prisoner. After the book had been examined by the proper auditors as to the amounts received and paid out by and through the prisoner as such collector, and a certificate of the same made by them, the prisoner, who was a defaulter, with intent to cover up his defalcation, altered the book by making certain false entries therein of moneys received and paid out, and chang-ing the additions to correspond. Some of these entries were by the prisoner himself, and others by his clerk under his direction, but the clerk on finding that such entries were false changed them back:-Held, that this constituted forgery at common law, as well as under our statute 32 & 33 Vict. c. 19 (D.). In re Jarrard, 4 O. R. 265. Affirmed, 20 C. L. J. 145.

A cargo of oats was received at an elevator for the S. Co., of which the prisoner was a member, and also secretary and financial manager, with power to sign notes, &c. On the day of their receipt, a clerk of the S. Co., who was authorized so to do, prisoner having nothing to do with the buying and selling of the grain, signed an order for the delivery of 19.886 bushels of the oats to a railway company, consigned to the S. Co.'s agents in New York, on whom two drafts were drawn by the S. Co., signed by the prisoner, which were accepted and paid. Warehouse receipts transferable by indorsement were given to the S. Co., for these oats, though after the delivery thereof to the railway company, and were allowed to remain with the S. Co. without any demand being made for their cancellation. Subsequently, the prisoner, in the name of the S. Co., discounted two promissory notes at a bank, and indorsed the warehouse receipts as security for the payment thereof, the notes containing a statement that the receipts were pledged as such security with authority to sell, &c., in default of payment:—Held, in extradition proceedings, that the indorsement to the bank of the receipts did not constitute a forgery. In re Sherman, 19 O. R. 315.

In extradition proceedings, it is sufficient if the evidence disclose that the offence under the Extradition Acts is one which, according to the laws of Canada, would justify the com-mittal for trial of the offender had the offence been committed therein, it not being essential to shew that the offence was of the character charged according to the laws of the foreign country where it was alleged to have been committed; and quere, whether evidence is admissible to shew what the foreign law is. In pursuance of a fraudulent conspiracy between the prisoner and his brother, a cheque was drawn by the latter, under a fictitious name, on a bank in which an account had been opened by him in such fictitious name, there eing, to the knowledge of the prisoner, no funds to meet it, and which, on the faith of its being a genuine cheque, another bank was induced by the prisoner to cash:—Held, that the cheque was a "false document," both at common law and under s. 421 of the Criminal Code, 1892, and that there was sufficient evicone, 1892, and that there was sufficient evidence to justify the committal of the prisoner for extradition for uttering a forged instrument. Regima v. Martin, 5 Q. B. D. 34, distinguished. Where, in such proceedings, the warrant of commitment stated that the prisoner had been "committed" for an extraditable offence, instead of his having been "accused" thereof, the fact that the evidence shewed such an offence will not warrant the shewed such an offence will not warrant the court in remanding the prisoner for extradition; but the court may, if necessary, permit the return to be amended, and for such pur-pose allow it to be taken off the files and refiled. Re Murphy, 26 O. R. 163. See the next case.

The prisoner's brother opened a bank account in an assumed name and drew cheques from time to time thereon. Several of these cheques were paid, but the last one the prisoner cashed at his own bank, knowing that there were no funds to meet it:—Held, per Hagarty, C.J.O., and Maclennan, J.A.—That there was evidence from which it might reasonably be inferred that the opening of the account in the assumed name was part of a conspiracy between the prisoner and his brother to defraud and that there was, therefore, the fraudulent uttering of a false document which would constitute forgery. Per Burton, and Osler, J.J.A.—That as the account was a genuine one, and there was no false representation as to the drawer of the cheque, the offence of forgery was not made out. Held, also, per Hagarty, C.J.O., and Maclennan, J.A.—That it is not necessary to shew in extradition proceedings that the prisoner is liable to conviction of the crime charged according to the law of the demanding country. Per Burton, and Osler, JJ.A.— That it must be shewn that the prisoner is liable to conviction of the crime charged, according to the law of both countries. In the result the judgment below, 26 O. R. 163, was affirmed. In re Murphy, 22 A. R. 386.

The prisoner, using an assumed name, represented himself to a shopkeeper to be a traveller for a certain wholesale firm, and after going through the form of taking an order for goods, obtained the indorsement of the shopkeeper to a draft drawn by him in his assumed name on this firm, and this draft was then cashed by him at a bank:—Held, that this was forgery and that the prisoner should be extradited. In re Lazier, 30 O. R. 419, 26 A. R. 260,

Murder by Escaping Slave.]—A. being a slave in the state of Missouri, belonging to one M., had left his owner's house with the intention of escaping. Being about 30 miles from his home he met with D., a planter, working in the field with his negroes, who told A. that as he had not a pass he could not allow him to proceed, but that he must remain until after dinner, when he, D., would go with him to the adjoining plantation, where A, had told him that he was going. As they were walking towards D's house, A. ran off, and D. ordered his slaves, four in number, to take him. During the pursuit D., who had only a small stick in his hand, met A., and was about to take hold of him, when A. stabbed him with a knife, and as D. turned and fell he stabbed him again. D. soon afterwards died of his wounds. By the law of Missouri any person may apprehend a negro suspected of being a runaway slave, and take him before a justice of the peace; any slave found more than twenty miles from his home is declared a runaway, and a reward is given to whoever shall apprehend and return him to his master. A. having made his escape to this Province was arrested here upon a charge of murder, and the justice before whom he was brought having committed him, he was brought up in this court on a habeas corpus, and the evidence returned under a certiorari. It was contended that as A. acted only in defence of his liberty, there was no evidence upon which to found a charge of murder if the alleged offence had been committed here, and that he could not be de-manded by the treaty:—Held, that under the Ashburton treaty, and our statute for giving effect to it, C. S. C. c. 89, the prisoner was liable to be surrendered. In re Anderson, 20 U. C. R. 124. See S. C., 11 C. P. 9.

Neutrality—Piracy.]—Lawful acts of war against a belligerent cannot be either commenced or concluded in a neutral territory. In re Burley, 1 C. L. J. 34.

The fact that the person is charged with piracy committed in the foreign country, ought not to prevent the government of the country where the fugitive is found, from surrendering him on the charge of robbery made and proved in the latter country. Ib.

Offence at Date of Commission.]-It is not necessary for purposes of extradition that the crime charged should have been such an act as would have constituted that crime at the date of the Ashburton treaty. It is sufficient if it constituted the crime in question at the date of its alleged commission. In re Hall, 3 O. R. 331.

Offence by Laws of Each Country. Held, that, under the Extradition Act, 1877 (40 Vict. c. 25 [D.]), it is essential that the offence charged should be such as if committed here would be an offence against the laws of this country. In re Jarrard, 4 O. R. 265, See In re Murphy, 26 O. R. 163, 22 A. R. 386, United States and Canada.] — Held. that the Ashburton treaty contains the whole of the law of surrender as between Canada and the United States, 3 Will. IV. c. 6, being superseded by it, and the Imperial Act 6 & 7 Vict, c. 76, and Provincial statute 12 Vict, c. 19; though in relation to other foreign powers, with whom no treaty or conventional arrangement existed, 3 Will, IV. c. 6, is still in force. Regina v. Tubbec, 1 P. R. 98. Quere, how far the United States, Lower Canada, or England, would respect 3 Will.

IV. c. 6, if a fugitive surrendered by Uppe Canada to a foreign power were taken through those countries. Ib

Held, that though the surrender must be by the executive government, yet a party coma magistrate's warrant may mitted under apply for a habeas corpus, and the court or Judge may determine whether the case be within the treaty. Ib.

The only existing law as to the extradition of criminals between the United States and Canada is the Imperial Act of 1870 (33 & 34 Vict, c. 53), modified by 31 Vict, c. 91 (D.), and 33 Vict, c. 25 (D.). The Canadian Extradition Act of 1877 40 Vict, c. 25 (D.), does not apply to criminals from the United States, as the operation of the Imperial Act of 1870 has not "ceased or been suspended within Canada." Proceedings taken for the extradition of the prisoner under 40 Vict. c. 25 (D.), and a warrant committing him under that Act, were therefore set aside, and the prisoner discharged. In re Williams, 7 P. R. 275.

2. Practice and Procedure.

Admissions-Rule as to Committal-Setting out Evidence—Requisition or Prior Proceedings.] — Where the accused, on his examination before the magistrate, admitted the acts charged, which prima facie amounted to robbery (one of the crimes enumerated in the treaty), and alleged by way of defence matter of excuse which was of an equivocal character :--Held, that the magistrate could not try the case, but was bound to commit the accused for trial before the tribunals of the foreign country. In re Burley, 1 C. L. J. 34.

If the magistrate sitting on a similar charge if committed in Canada would commit for trial, he is equally bound to commit for trial in the foreign country where the offence, if any, has been committed. Ib.

The warrant for committal till surrendered under the treaty need not set out the evidence taken before the committing magistrate, nor shew any previous charge made in the foreign country, or requisition from the government of that country, or warrant from the governor-general of Canada, authorizing and requiring the magistrate to act. Ib.

The adjudication of the committing magis-The adjunction of the committee reference for the sufficiency of the evidence for committee may be by way of recital in the warrant of commitment. D.

It is not necessary to the jurisdiction of a magistrate in Canada, acting under the treaty and statutes, either that a charge should be first haid in the United States, that a requisition should be first made by the government of the United States upon the Canadian government, or that the governor-general should list issue his warrant requiring magistrates to aid in the arrest of the fugitives; in other words, the charge may be originated before the magistrate in Canada. Ib.

Alibi-Identity-Extradition Judge-Variance from Proof — Reading over Foreign Depositions to Prisoner,]—Where evidence is given by the prosecution before an extradition Judge positively identifying the prisoner, the Judge cannot receive evidence on behalf of the prisoner to shew an alibi; for that would be in effect trying the guilt or innocence of the prisoner; if the evidence given by the prosecution is sufficient to justify the committal of the prisoner, he must be committed under s. 11 of the Extradition Act, R. S. C. c. 142 Semble, that a prisoner is entitled to go into evidence to disprove his identity; but that means his identity with the person named in the warrant; not his identity with the person who actually committed the extradition crime. The junior Judge of a county court is "a Judge of a county court, and has the functions of an extradition Judge. Re Parker, B O. R. 612, followed. R. S. C. c. 142, s. 6, s. 2, is directory only; and the neglect of a Judge to forward to the minister of justice a report of the issue of a warrant, as required by the sub-section, is not a ground for the discharge of the prisoner. The information upon which a warrant issued committing a person to await extradition for forgery, stated the Christian name of the indorser of the forged instrument as Albert, whereas when the in-strument was proved it appeared to be James: —Held, that the variance was immaterial under ss. 57 and 58 of R. S. C. c. 174, which are made applicable to extradition proceedings by s. 9 of R. S. C. c. 142. It was objected by the prisoner that certain depositions taken abroad and put in by the prosecution were not read over to the prisoner as required by s. 70 of R. S. C. c. 174:—Held, that the objection was not one which as a matter of law would entitle a prisoner to be discharged; and it should not be given effect to as a matter of discretion because it was entirely technical in its character. Re Garbutt, 21 O. R. 179. See the next case.

Amending Warrant.] — Held, that a magistrate, acting under the treaty and statute, after issue of a writ of habeas corpus, but before its return, might deliver to the gaoler a second or amended warrant, which, if returned in obedience to the writ, must be looked at by the court or Judge before whom the prisoner is brought. In re Warner, 1 C. L. J. 16.

Bail. — A prisoner charged with forgery in Canada was arrested and surrendered by the government of the United States under the Asiburton treaty. Upon application for bail on the ground that there was no evidence of the corpus delicti: — Held, that the surrender of the prisoner by the United States government was sufficient evidence. Regina v. Van Aerman, 4 C. P. 288.

Conflicting Evidence, —The magistrate cannot weigh conflicting evidence to try whether the prisoner is guilty of the crime charged. Regina v. Reno, 4 P. R. 281; Re Burley, 1 C. L. J. 20.

Corroboration.]—In extradition proceedings the evidence of interested parties need not be corroborated. In re H. L. Lee, 5 O. R. 583.

Depositions.]—Under 31 Vict, c. 94, the depositions must be those upon which the original warrant was granted in the United States, certified under the hand of the person issuing, and not depositions taken subsequently to the issue of the original warrant, and without any apparent connection therewith. Regina v. Robinson, 5 P. R. 189.

Held, that original depositions are admissible in proceedings under the Imperial Act 6 & 7 Vict. c. 34, and can be used in evidence against a prisoner upon proof of their identity and of their being properly taken, which in this case, upon the evidence set out, was held to be clearly shew. Regina V. Matthew, 7 P. R. 199.

Held, also, that they may be clearly proved

Held, also, that they may be clearly proved by the vivâ voce evidence of a witness competent to swear to the facts: that copies of the depositions can be proved by such testimony, as well as by the certificate prescribed by the Act; and that a certificate identifying the copies as copies of the original documents may be supplemented by vivâ voce evidence that the originals referred to in the certificate were the originals upon which the warrant issued. Ib.

Certain foreign depositions used were sworn to before E. G., a justice of the peace for Cincinnati township, Hamilton county, Ohio, A certificate was attached, commencing, "I, Daniel J, Dalton, clerk of the court of common pleas for said Hamilton county," certifying as to the signature of E. G., and that he was a duly qualified justice of the peace for said county, and entitled to take depositions of witnesses, &c., and concluded, "In testimony whereof I have hereunto set my hand and affixed the seal of the said court at Cincinnati, &c. D. J. Dalton, by Richard C. Rohner, deputy," To this was attached the certificate of the governor of the State, certifying that D. J. Dalton, "whose genuine signature and seal are affixed to the annexed attestation, was at the date thereof clerk of the said court," &c.: that "he is the proper person to make such attestation, which is in due form, and that his official acts are entitled to full faith and credit." The court, without specially pronouncing on the question, refused to allow an objection, which as a matter of fact was not taken, to the sufficiency of the depositions under 45 Vict. c. 25, s. 9, s.-s. 2 (a) (D.), for the official seal of D. J. Dalton was attached, and the governor certified that he was the proper person to make such attestation; and also there was viva voce evidence given in proof thereof, so that the "papers were authenticated by the oath of some witness" under s.-s. (b). In re H. E. Lee, 5 O. R. 583.

In extradition proceedings the information, warrant and depositions were certified under the hand and seal of a justice of the peace of Oscoda township, in the county of Josio, in the State of Michigan. There was also a certificate under the hand of the clerk of the county of Josio and the clerk of the circuit court for the said county and the official seal of the said circuit court, certifying that the said justice of the peace was, at the time of signing his certificate, a duly qualified justice of the peace, in the active discharge of the duties of his said office, and that his official seals were entitled to full credit. At the hearing before the county Judge, before whom the extradition proceedings were had, S. stated he was the prosecuting attorney for Josio county, and all criminal prosecutions therein came under his care. He identified the papers, and that they were the depositions and copies of depositions relating to the charge; and that the justices who took the depositions were justices of the peace as alleged, and had jurisdiction in the premises:—Held, that the documents were sufficiently authenticated. "Authenticated," as used in s. 9 of 40 Vict. c. 25 (D.), is in effect the same as "attested" in s. 2 of 31 Vict. c. 94 (D.). In re Weir, 14 O. 289

Held, that the depositions and statements admissible in evidence are not restricted to those made in respect of the charge upon which the original warrant issued. Ib.

Held, that the depositions, &c., before the county court Judge disclosed sufficient evidence to warrant the defendant being placed on his trial for murder caused, as was alleged, by the defendant having feloniously ravished the deceased while in such a state of health as to hasten her death. Ib.

On a charge of forgery of a promissory note, alleged to have been committed in the State of Kansas, the justice before whom the depositions were made was certified to be a justice of the peace, with power to administer onths:—Held, that he was a magistrate or officer of a foreign state within s. 10 of the Extradition Act; and also that it was not necessary that he should be a federal and not a state officer; and further that the depositions need not be taken in the presence of the accused. In re Parker, 19 O. R. 612.

Detaining Prisoner to Allow Case to be Strengthened, 1—Quere, can a committing magistrate detain a prisoner upon evidence amounting only to a ground of suspicion, for the purpose of other evidence being imported into the case so as to bring it within the treaty. In re Kermott, 1 C. L. Ch. 253. Divisional Court—Reviewing Evidence.]—The divisional court cannot review the decision of the judicial officer having jurisdiction to hear extradition cases upon the weight of evidence. In re Weir, 14 O. R. 389.

Evidence for the Defence.] — The magistrate should not go beyond a bare inquiry as to the primă facie evidence of criminality of the accused, and should not inquire into matters of defence which do not affect such criminality. In re Calducell, 5 P. R. 217.

It is in the discretion of the magistrate investigating into a charge under the treaty against a person accused of one of the crimes mentioned in the treaty, to receive evidence for the defence. In re Burley, 1 C. L. J. 20.

Remarks upon the general right of a person charged before a magistrate with an indictable offence to call witnesses for his defence; and of a person whose extradition is demanded to shew by evidence that what he is charged with is not an extradition crime:—Semble, that the evidence here offered, as stated in the report of the case, was not improperly rejected. In re Phipps, S A. R. 73.

Foreign Indictment.]—Held, that the etidence against the prisoner of having utered a forged instrument not being otherwise sufficient, the court could not look at an indictment against him found by the grand jury of an American criminal court. Regina v. Hovey, 8 P. R. 345.

Foreign Indictment -Depositions.] -On an application for the discharge of a prisoner committed for extradition under an order oner committed for extradition under an order of the county Judge of Kent, on a charge of nurder:—Per Wilson, C.J., that under the Ashburton Treaty, Art. X; 31 Viet. c, 94 (D.), 33 Viet. c, 25 (D.), 33 Viet. c, 30, ss. 4, 5 (D.), and the Imperial Acts 33 & 34 Viet. c, 52, and 36 & 37 Viet. c, 60, a certified copy of an indictment for murder found by the grand jury of Erie county, State of New York, U. S., was of itself sufficient evidence to justify the committal of such prisoner for extradition. Per Osler, J., that such indictextradition. Fer Osier, J., that such indice-ment was not evidence for any purpose. Per Wilson, C.J., and Osler, J., that the other evidence taken before the county Judge, documentary and viva voce, set out in the report, was insufficient, as it shewed at most that the prisoner was an accessory after the fact, which did not come within the treaty. Per Galt, J., that if the case had turned on the indictment alone, he would have hesitated to accept it as conclusive against the accused; but that the other evidence together with the indictment, was sufficient to warrant his extradition. Regina v. Browne, 31 C. P. 484. See the next case.

Upon an application to the county Judge of Kent for extradition of the defendant, who was under indictment in the State of New York for murder, the coroner who had held the inquest there, proved by oral testimony before the county Judge here, the original depositions taken on oath before him, and also copies of the depositions certified by him to be true copies:—Held, that under s. 14 of the Imperial Extradition Act of 1870, the original depositions were properly received, as the power given therein to use the original depositions is not qualified by 31 Vict. c. 94, s. 2 (D.); and that the evidence disclosed therein was sufficient to warrant the extraditional control of the sufficiency of the control o tion of the prisoner as an accessory before the fact:—Held, also, that the foreign indictment was not admissible as evidence against the accused. It was shewn that the only warrant issued in this case was the warrant issued by the district attorney, after the grand jury had found a true bill for murder, which did not profess to be issued upon the depositions, nor was it proved upon what evidence the bill was found:—Semble, that the right given by s. 14 above referred to, to use copies of depositions is confined by the effect of s. 2 of 31 Vict, c. 94, to those cases in which a warrant has been issued in the United States upon the depositions. S. C., 6 A. R. 386.

Forgery-Form of Information.]-In ex-Forgery—Form of Information.]—In extradition proceedings the information charged that the informant "hath just cause to suspect and believe, and doth suspect and believe that II. L. Lee," the prisoner, "is accused of the crime of forgery," &c., "for that the said II. L. Lee," &c., "did feloniously forge" some seventy-eight orders for the payment of money. The 79th charge was, that the said H. L. Lee, at the aforesaid several times, &c., did feloniously utter, knowing the same to be forged, the said several orders, &c.:—Held, sufficient, for that the information charged that the prisoner "did feloniously forge," that the prisoner "did feloniously forge," &c.; and the allegation that the informant believed that the prisoner "is accused," &c., might be treated as surplusage; but even if objectionable at common law, it was good under s. 11 of 32 & 33 Vict. c. 30 (D.), and 32 & 33 Vict. c. 27 (D.); and moreover the 79th charge was free from objection:-Held, also, that in these proceedings, a plea to the information is not required. In re H. L. Lee, 5 O. R. 583.

Forgery - Identifying Forged Note.]-The depositions produced and acted upon befor the committing Judge failed to shew that the note, alleged to be forged, was pro-duced and identified by the deponents or any of them:—Held, that this constituted a valid ground for refusing extradition; and that there was no power to remand the accused to have further evidence taken before the extradition Judge as to such identification. In re Parker, 19 O. R. 612.

General Rule of Procedure. | - The authority of the magistrate need not be shewn on the face of a warrant of commitment, and where the crime has been committed in a foreign country and the committing magisforeign country and the committing magistrate has (as in this case), jurisdiction in every county in Ontario, the warrant is not bad, though dated at Toronto, the county mentioned in the margin being York, but directed to the constables, &c., of the county of Essex, and being signed by the police magistrate as such for the county of Essex. Regina v. Reno, 4 P. R. 281.

Under 31 Vict. c. 94 (D.), all that the committing magistrate or the court or a Judge has to do is, to determine whether the evidence of criminality would, according to the laws of Ontario, instift the apprehension and laws of Ontario, justify the apprehension and committal for trial of the accused if the crime committal for trial of the accuse it the chad had been committed therein. Ib. Such decision, if adverse to the prisoner, does not conclude him; as the question of extradition or discharge exclusively rests with the Governor-General. Ib.

Evidence offered to a magistrate by a pris-oner on an examination of this kind, by way of answer to a strong prima facie case, may perhaps properly be taken, but would not justify the magistrate in discharging the prisoner. And, quære, whether it was not the intention of 31 Vict. to transfer to the Governor exclusively the consideration of all the evidence, that he might determine whether the prisoner should be delivered up. Ib.

Under the circumstances of this case, it was held that there was sufficient prima facie evidence of the criminality of the prisoners to warrant a refusal to discharge them, and that there was evidence to go to a jury to lead to the conclusion that the intent of the prisoners was, at the time of shooting, to commit a murder. Ib.

Information and Belief.]-Where the facts in evidence, though sufficient to warrant extradition if deposed to by witnesses who could really testify to their occurrence, were sworn to from information only, the prisoner was discharged. In re Parker, 9 P. R. 332.

Initiating Prosecution-Private Prosecutor—Corroboration.]—It is not necessary that it should appear on the face of the extradition proceedings under R. S. C. c. 142, or otherwise, that the information or com-plaint against the prisoner was laid or made by or under the authority of the foreign Government; but the extradition Judge may receive the complaint of any one who, if the alleged offence had been committed in Canada, might have made it. Canin Canada, might have made it. Canadian enactments and practice in this regard contrasted with those of the United States:—Semble, that if an act criminal according to the laws of both countries be committed, the guilty person can be extradited, although it constitute forgery under the laws although it constitute forgery under the laws of one, and larceny under those of the other, both being extraditable offences. Semble, also, that the provisions of the Criminal Code as to corroboration (55 & 56 Vict. c. 29, s. 484 [D.1]) refer to the trial, and not to the pre-liminary inquiry before the magistrate. In re Lazier, 30 O. R. 419. See the next case.

Initiating Prosecution.]-The prisoner using an assumed name, represented himself to a shopkeeper to be a traveller for a certain to a snopkeeper to be a traveler for a certain wholesale firm, and after going through the form of taking an order for goods, obtained the indorsement of the shopkeeper to a draft drawn by him in his assumed name on the firm, and this draft was then cashed by him at the health. It led that the thick of the state of at the bank:—Held, that this was forgery and that the prisoner should be extradited. A prosecution under the Extradition Act may A prosecution under the Extratution Act hay be initiated by any one who, if the offence had been committed in Canada, could put the criminal law in motion. In re Burley, 1 C, L. J. 34, and Regina v. Morton, 19 C. P. 9, approved. Judgment below, 30 O. R. 419, affirmed. In re Lazier, 26 A. R. 260.

Junior Judge.] - The expression "all Junior Judge, — The expression an judges, &c., of the county court," contained in s. 5 of the Extradition Act, R. S. C. c. 142, includes the junior Judge of said court. In re Parker, 10 O. R. 612; Re Garbutt, 21 O. R. 179, 465.

Murder-Form of Warrant-Remand.]-Held, that a warrant of commitment issued by a magistrate under the treaty and our statute, C. S. C. c. 89, which used the words "did wiffully, maliciously, and feloniously stab and kill," and omitted the words "mur-der," and "with malice aforethought," and concluded by instructing the gaoler to "there safely keep him, the prisoner, until he shall be thence delivered by due course of law," did not come within the provisions of the treaty or statute, and was consequently defective. In re Anderson, 11 C. P. 9. Held, that when a prisoner was brought be-Held, that when a prisoner was brought before the court upon a writ of habeas corpus under our statute, the warrant of commitment upon which he was detained appearing on its face to be defective, the court had no authority to remand him, such power only being possessed by the court at common law, and the prisoner not being charged with any offence for which he could be tried in this Province. Ib.

Offence Referred to by Wrong Name — Thett—Larcenn, —Where there is evidence of the commission of an act which is recognized as a crime by the law of Canada and the law of the country demanding the extradition of the accused person, extradition will lie, though in the proceedings therefor the offence is referred to by a wrong name. Larceny is, by the Ashburton Trenty, the convention of 1889, and the Extradition Act, specified as a crime for which extradition to the United States will lie, but larceny is not, by that name, recognized as a crime, by the Criminal Code, 1842, the terms there used to describe the same offence being "theft" or "stealing: "—Held, that where there was evidence of the commission of the crime of theft the prisoner should be held for extradition, although in the proceedings for extradition the offence was described as larceny. In re Gross, 25 A. R. 83.

Power of County Court Judge—Previous Discharge.]— The jurisdiction of a county court Judge under the Extradition Act is limited only by the bounds of the Province and not by those of his county. An extradition Judge has power to inquire into a charge and commit a person for extradition, after a previous inquiry and committal by another Judge and discharge under habens corpus. In re Parker, 10 C. L. T. Occ. N., 373.

Preliminary Proceedings — Depositions.]—Where a prisoner in custody under the Ashburton treaty obtained a habeas corpus and certiforari for his discharge, it was held that the argument as to the regularity or irregularity of the initiatory proceedings, such as ignormation, warrant, &c., was a matter of no consequence, the material question being whether, being in custody, there was a sufficient case made out to justify the commitment for the crime charged. It was held, that certified copies of depositions sworn in the United States after proceedings had been initiated in Canada, and after the arrest in Canada, were admissible evidence before the police magistrate. Ex parte Martin, 4 C. L. J. 198.

Reviewing Decision.]—The Judges of the superior courts in the country where the fugitive is found may, on a writ of habers corpus and certiorari, consider if there was sufficient evidence before the committing magistrate to justify the committal, and so may review the decision of the magistrate on the evidence. In re Burley, 1 C. L. J. 34; In re Warner, 1 C. L. J. 16.

The duty of the court or a Judge on a habeas corpus, is to determine on the legal sufficiency of the commitment, and to review the magistrate's decision as to there being sufficient evidence of criminality. Regina v. Reno, 4 P. R. 281.

Reviewing Evidence.] — A Judge in chambers has power to review and decide on the sufficiency of the evidence returned by the committing magistrates, or, if necessary, to hear further testimony. Regina v. Tubbee, 1 P. R. 98.

Second Application - Depositions.]-Application for the discharge on habeas cor-pus of prisoners charged with robbery com-mitted in the United States, and committed at Sandwich for extradition by Mr. Mc-Micken, a police magistrate appointed under 28 Vict. c. 20. The prisoners, it seemed, had been previously arrested at Toronto on the same charge, and been discharged by the local same charge, and been descharged by the local police magistrate, after a lengthened investi-gation before him:—Held, that this did not prevent another duly qualified officer from entertaining the charge against them on the same or on fresh materials:—Held, also, that s. 373 of 29 Vict. c. 51, did not preclude M. from taking the information and issuing his warrant in Toronto, where there was already a police magistrate; for that the words of the section merely excluded him from jurisdiction section merely exchange there in local cases:—Held, also, that the appointment of M. might well have been made under 28 Viet. c. 20, for any one of or for all the counties of Upper Canada, including Toronto, and his powers made the same as a police magistrate in cities, except as regarded purely municipal matters; and that this Act was continued by 31 Vict. c. 17, s. 4 (0.), but that as nothing was suggested impugning his authority to act, the warrant must be treated as executed by an officer possessing such authority:—Held, also, that the depositions on which the warrant issued in the United States after the arrest in Canada, were properly admitted here as evidence of criminality, their admission being within both the letter and spirit of 31 Vict. c. 94. Regina v. Morton, 19 C. P. 10.

Several Theories.]—If the evidence present several views, on any one of which there may be a conviction, if adopted by the jury, the court will direct extradition. Regina v. Gould, 20 C. P. 154.

Strict Proof—Depositions.]—In extradition cases, the forms and technicalities with which the statute surrounds the production of affidavit evidence must be strictly complied with; and therefore—Held, that depositions taken in the United States cannot be read unless certified under the hand of the magistrate who issued the original warrant as being copies of the depositions upon which such warrant issued, although attested by the party producing them to be such true copies; but, semble, the prisoner might be remanded to enable properly certified copies to be produced. In re Levis, 6 P. R. 236.

Supreme Court Appeal.]—By s. 31 of the Supreme and Exchequer Courts Act (R. S. C. c. 135, s. 31), "no appeal shall be allowed in any case of proceedings for or upon a writ of habens corpus arising out of any claim for extradition made under any treaty." On application to the court to fix a day for hearing a motion to quash such an appeal:—Held, that the matter was coram non judies and there was no necessity for a motion to quash. In re Lazier, 29 S. C. R. 630.

Trial only for Offence Charged.]—When surrendered to the government of the country from which he fled, the government of the latter are bound to try the accused for the offence for which he is surrendered, and not for any other or different offence. In re Burley, I C, L, J, 34.

Warrant in the United States—Accomplices.—4t is not necessary under the Extradition Treaty and Act, 31 Vict. c. 94 (1). that an original warrant should have been granted in the United States for the apprehension in this country of the person accused, to enable proceedings to be effectually taken against him in this Province for an offence within the treaty. In re Caldwell, 5 P. R. 217.

The evidence of accomplices is sufficient to establish a charge for the purposes of extradition. Ib.

Where the crime comes within the treaty, it is immaterial whether it is, according to the laws of the United States, only a misdemeanour or a felony. Ib.

Warrant.]—Held, that the original warrant, within the meaning of 31 Vict. c. 94, s. 2 (D.), is not the first of two or more consecutive warrants, but is any warrant issued in the United States of America. Re Phipps, 1 O. R. 586. See S. C., S. A. R. 77.

2. Appeal and Review.

(a) Appeal.

Chancery Division.] — See Regina v. Birchall, 19 O. R. 697; Regina v. Davis, 22 O. R. 652.

Court of Appeal.]—See Regina v. Eli, 13 A. R. 526; Regina v. City of London, 15 A. R. 414; Regina v. Cushing, 26 A. R. 248.

Judicial Committee.]—The rule of the Privy Council is not to grant leave to appeal in criminal cases except where some clear departure from the requirements of justice is alleged to have taken place. Riel v. The Queen, 10 App. Cas. 675.

Public Health — Conviction under By-law in Schedule.]—Where there is a conviction for an offence under the by-law set out in the schedule to the Public Health Act, R. S. O. 1887 c. 205, as distinguished from any of the provisions in the Act itself, an appeal will lie from such conviction to the sessions notwithstanding s. 112, which has no application. Regina v. Coursey, 26 O. R. 685. See S. C., on appeal, 27 O. R. 181.

Sessions—Appeal—Dismissal.]—There is no appeal to the court of general sessions of the peace from an order of dismissal of a complaint for an offence against a city by-law passed under the authority of s. 551 of the Municipal Act, R. S. O. 1897 c. 223. The "order" referred to in s. 7 of R. S. O. 1897 c. 90, "The Ontario Summary Convictions Act," means an order against the party against whom the information and complaint is laid, and does not include an order of dismissal. Regina v. Toronto Public School Board, 31 O. R. 457.

Supreme Court.] — The only appellate power conferred on the supreme court in criminal cases is by s. 49 of the Supreme and Exchequer Courts Act which limits appeals in criminal cases to those of the highest Importance, and does not impose on the court the duty of revisal in matters of fact of all summary convictions before magistrates. In re Trepainer, 12 S. C. R. 111.

Since the passing of 32 & 33 Vict. c. 29, s. 80 (D.), repealing so much of c. 77 of C. S. L. C. as would authorize any court of the Province of Quebec to grant a new trial in any criminal case; and of 32 & 33 Vict. c. 36 (D.), repealing s. 63 of c. 77, C. S. L. C., the court of Queebe has no power to grant a new trial, and the supreme court of Canada, exercising the ordinary appellate powers of the court under ss. 38 and 49 of 38 Vict. c. 11 (D.), should give the judgment which the court whose judgment is appealed from ought to have given, viz.: to reverse the judgment which has been given, and order the prisoner's discharge. Laliberté v. The Queen, 1 S. C. R. 117.

Where the court appealed from has affirmed the refusal to reserve a case moved for at a criminal trial on two grounds, and is unanimous as to one of such grounds but not as to the other, the supreme court on appeal can only take into consideration the ground of motion in which there was dissent. McIntosh v. The Queen, 23 S. C. R. 180.

An appeal to the supreme court of Canada does not lie in cases where a new trial has been granted by the court of appeal under the provisions of the Criminal Code, 1892, ss. 742 to 750 inclusively.—The word "opinion" as used in the second sub-section of s. 742 of the Criminal Code, must be construed as meaning the contract of the co ing a "decision" or "judgment" of the court of appeal in criminal cases. Viau v. The Queen, 29 S. C. R. 90.

(b) Error.

Court of Appeal.] — Error, as distinguished from appeal, will lie in a criminal case from the court of error and appeal to the Queen's bench, and the writ of error may be as nearly as possibly in the form of a writ of appeal given by the orders of the court published in 1850. Regina v. Whelan, 28 U. C. R. 108. See S. C., 28 U. C. R. 2. Appeals under C. S. U. C. c. Il. 3, s. 20, as distinguished from error, are in criminal cases confined to such as arise under the Act respecting new trials in criminal cases, 20 Vict. c. 61. Ib.

Defect in Indictment.]—The court will not arrest judgment after verdict, or reverse it in error, for any defect patent on the face of the indictment, as by 32 & 33 Vict. c. 29, s. 32, such defect must be objected to by demurrer, or by motion to quash the indictment. Regina v. Mason, 22 C. P. 246.

Jury—Irregularities in its Choice or Constitution.]—See post, sub-head 5.

Objections to Indictment.]—The Attorney-General refused his fiat for a writ of error in this case, upon objections taken to the indictment. Regina v. Greenwood, 23 U. C. R. 256, note a.

Police Court.]—Whether the police court is a court of justice within 32 & 33 Viet. c. 21, s. 18, or not, is a question of law which may be reserved by the Judge at the trial, under C. S. U. C. c. 112, s. 1, and where it does not appear by the record in error that the Judge refused to reserve such question it cannot be considered upon a writ of error. Regina v. Mason, 22 C. P. 246.

Right to have Commitment Reviewed. 1—29 & 30 Vict. c. 45 had in view and recognizes the right of every man committed on a criminal charge to have the opinion of the Judge of the superior court upon the cause of his commitment by an inferior jurisdiction. Regina v. Mosier, 4 P. R. 64.

Sessions.]—The proper proceeding to reverse a judgment of the court of quarter sessions is by writ of error, not by certiorari and habeas corpus. Regina v. Powell, 21 U. C. R. 215.

(c) New Trial.

The court has no power to order a new trial in a criminal case reserved under 14 & 15 Vict. c. 13; but only to decide upon any legal exceptions raised, and whether there was legal evidence to sustain the indictment, taking it in as strong a sense against the defendant as it will bear, and supposing the jury to have given credit to it to its full extent. Regina v. Baby, 12 U. C. R. 346.

Quære, whether it is proper to grant a new trial, where an individual or a corporation has been once acquitted on an indictment, even in cases of misdemeanour. Regina v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 15 U. C. R. 121.

Where after conviction for a capital offence, the proceedings were discovered to have been illegal, there having been no associate Judge sitting in court during the trial, on motion on behalf of the Crown (the prisoner not moving in any way), the indictment and conviction, with the prisoner, were brought up on certicard and habeas corpus, and an order made setting aside all such proceedings, and remanding the prisoner to custody, with a view to a new trial. Regina v. Sullivan, 15 U. C. R. 198.

Remarks, and review of authorities, as to granting new trials upon the evidence, Regina v. Chubbs, 14 C. P. 32; Regina v. Mc Elroy, 15 C. P. 116; Regina v. Fick, 16 C. P. 379; Regina v. Humilton, 16 C. P. 340; Regina v. Soddons, 16 C. P. 389; Regina v. Slavin, 17 C. P. 205.

The court declined to receive affidavits as ground for such applications. See Regina v. Crozier, 17 U. C. R. 275; Regina v. Beckwith, 8 C. P. 274; Regina v. Fitzgerald, 20 U. C. R. 546; Regina v. Chubbs. 14 C. P. 32; Regina v. Hamilton, 16 C. P. 340.

Under 20 Vict. c. 61, the court was not empowered to grant a new trial in criminal cases on any ground apart from what was done by either the court or the jury at the trial, such as the alleged discovery of new evidence, or a disappointment in obtaining witnesses. Regina v. Gray, 1 E. & A. 501.

The court was not authorized to grant a new trial on the discovery of new evidence, or for the misconduct of the jury. Regina v. Oxentine, 17 U. C. R. 295.

Upon motion for a new trial upon an information for conspiracy tried at nisi prius upon a record from the Queen's bench:—Held, that affidavits made by some of the jurors that the jury were not unanimous, but believed that the verdict of the majority was sufficient, could not be received as ground for new trial. Regina v. Fellowes, 19 U. C. R. 48.

Where several defendants have been con-

Where several defendants have been convicted, a new trial, if granted, must be to all.

Where points of law were reserved under the Act, and the prisoner, besides relying upon them, moved for a new trial, the court refused to grant it, though the evidence was slight. Regina v. Hambly, 16 U. C. R. 617.

On motion for a new trial by a prisoner convicted of murder on circumstantial evidence only, Morrison, J., who tried the case, expressed himself as not dissatisfied with the verdict, and Draper, C. J., having reviewed the evidence at length, came to the conclusion that their shinding upon it could not be declared wrong. Hagarty, J., held that under the statute a Judge is called upon only to say whether there was evidence to go to the jury, not to express any opinion as to their verdict founded upon it. A new trial was therefore refused; and the court declined to grant leave to appeal. Regina v. Greenwood, 23 U. C. R. 255.

Held, that the withholding from the court confessions made before the coroner, for fear that they would prejudice the prisoner, would render the application for a new trial irregular. Regina v. Finkle, 15 C. P. 453.

The court on the return of the rule refused to receive new affidavits, stating that the deceased had been seen alive after the date of the alleged murder, and thus setting up an entirely new case. Regina v. Hamilton, 16 C. P. 340.

One of the prisoner's counsel at the trial, whilst he was addressing the jury at the close of the case, was suddenly seized with a fit and incapacitated from proceeding any further. No adjournment, however, was applied for, for the other, who was the senior counsel, con-tinued the address to the jury on the prisoner's behalf, without raising any objection that er's behalf, without raising any objection that he was placed at a disadvantage by reason of his colleague's disability; it did not, more-over, appear that the prisoner had been pre-judiced by the absence of the counsel alluded to:—Held, no ground for a new trial. Re-gina v. Fick, 16 C. P. 379.

The rule is the same in criminal as in civil cases, at any rate where the prisoner is defended by counsel, that any objection to the charge of the presiding Judge, either for nondirection or for misdirection, must be taken at the trial, and if not then taken, it cannot be afterwards raised, especially where the evidence fully sustains the verdict. Ib.

The defendants having been convicted on an indictment for a nuisance which had been removed into the Queen's bench by certiorari, moved for a new trial, which was refused:—
Held, that no appeal would lie to this court from the judgment refusing the new trial, and that it could make no difference that the indictment had been removed by certiorari, A. R. 526; Regina v. Laliberté, 1 S. C. R. 117, referred to. Regina v. City of London, A. R. 414.

Quere, whether in any case of misdemean-our a new trial can now be granted, C. S. U. C. c. 12, 112, 113—32 & 33 Vict, c. 29, s. 80 (D.). Ib.

(d) Reserved Case.

Challenge to the Array.]—To an indictment for murder, the prisoner pleaded, challenging the array of the jury panel, which plea was demurred to and judgment given in favour of the Crown by the Judge holding the court of oyer and terminer, who, at the request of the prisoner, reserved a case for the consideration of the common pleas division :-Consideration of the common pleas division:— Held, not a matter which could be reserved under C. S. U. C. c. 112, and the case was therefore directed to be quashed. Regina v. C'Rourke, 32 C. P. 388, See S. C., 1 Q. R. 464; Morin v. The Queen, 18 S. C. R. 407.

Semble, that a writ of error was the proper remedy, and that, notwithstanding the Judicature Act, it would lie in the first instance to either the Queen's bench or common pleas division, and not to the court of appeal. Ib.

Defamatory Libel-Right to have Jurors Stand Aside—Reserving Case After Ruling.]
—Regina v. Patterson, 36 U. C. R. 127. Forum — Evidence.] — A Crown case reserved should be reserved for the consideration of the justices of one of the divisions ation of the justices of one of the divisions of the high court, not of a divisional court, and when the court is asked whether on the evidence the defendants were lawfully convicted the whole of the evidence should not be made part of the case, but merely the material facts established by the evidence. Regina v. Gibson, 16 O. R. 704.

Forum—What may be Reserved.]—Under C. S. U. C. c. 112, any question of law which may have arisen on a criminal trial, may be reserved for the consideration of the justices of either of Her Majesty's superior courts of common law. Regina v. Bissell, 1 O. R. 514.

Murder — Right to Have Jurors Stand Aside.]—Morin v. The Queen, 18 S. C. R. 407.

Police Court.]-Whether the police court Police Court. — Whether the police court is a court of justice within 32 & 33 Vict. c. 21, s. 18, or not, is a question of law which may be reserved by the Judge at the trial, under C. S. U. C. c. 112, s. 1, and where it does not appear by the record in error that the Judge refused to reserve such question it cannot be considered upon a writ of error. Regina v. Mason, 22 C. P. 46.

Police Magistrate.]—Held, that a police magistrate cannot reserve a case for the opinion of a superior court under C. S. U. C. c. 112, as he is not within the terms of that Act. Regina v. Richardson, 8 O. R. 651.

Right to Special Jury.]—Regina v. Kerr, 26 C. P. 214.

Sufficiency of Evidence.]-On a Crown case reserved it is not proper to reserve the question whether there is sufficient evidence in support of the criminal charge, that being a question for the jury; whether there is any evidence is a question of law for the Judge. The evidence against the prisoners here was the uncorroborated evidence of the woman charged to have been raped, which, in view of admissions made by her, and the circumstances, was unsatisfactory:—Held, that the evidence was properly submitted to the jury. but the court directed that the attention of the executive should be called to the case. Regina v. Lloyd, 19 O. R. 352.

Sufficiency of Indictment.]-The suffiis not a question of law which arises on the trial, and therefore cannot be reserved under R, S, C, c, 174, s, 259, and the court has no power to entertain it. Regina v. Gibson, 16 O. R. 704. ciency of an indictment upon motion to quash Wrong Person Summoned and Sworn as Juror.]-Brisebois v. Regina, 15 S. C. R.

3. Costs.

Conviction.]-There is no general power to award costs upon a conviction under an Ontario statute, where such power is not given by the statute itself; and therefore where on a conviction under s. 162 R. S. O. 1877 c. 174, for attempting to obtain information at a polling place as to the candidate for whom a voter was about to vote, costs were awarded against the defendant, the conviction was ordered to be quashed:-Held, also, that there was no power to amend the conviction in this respect. Regina v. Lennon, 44 U. C. R. 456.

Nuisance.]—Upon an application for a rule to tax the costs of proceedings on an indictment for nuisance in obstructing a highway, under 5 & 6 Will, & Mary, c. 33, and that they should be allowed to a particular person, the court refused the rule. A side bar rule is granted in England to tax these costs as a matter of course, but this application went further. Regina v. Gordon, Regina v. Robson, 8 C. P. 58.

Summary Conviction — Appeal.] — On an appeal to a county court Judge from a summary conviction under the Act to provide against frauds in the supplying of milk to cheese, butter, and condensed milk factories (52 Vict. < 43, s. 9), the Judge has the same power to award costs as the sessions of the peace under ss. ST3-S80 of the Criminal Code, 1842. Under the Criminal Code, s. S80, the court may, on appeal, award such costs, including solicitor's fee, as it may deem proper, and there is no power in the high court to review such discretion. Regina v. McIntosh, 28 O. R. 603.

See Costs-Justice of the Peace.

4. Indictment.

Aiding and Abetting.]—The indictment charged one B. with obtaining by false pretences from one J. T., two horses, with intent to defraud, and that the defendant was present aiding and abetting the said B. the misdemeanour aforesaid to commit:—Held, good, defendant being charged as a principal in the second degree:—Held, also, that the evidence, set out in the case, was not sufficient to sustain the charge. Regina v. Connor, 14 C. P. 529.

Alias Dictus.]—Where two or more names are laid in an indictment under an alias dictus, it is not necessary to prove them all. Jacobs v. The Queen, 16 S. C. R. 433.

J. was indicted for the murder of A. J., otherwise called K. K. On the trial it was proved that the deceased was known by the name of K. K., but there was no evidence that she ever went by the other name:—Held. that this variance between the indictment and the evidence did not invalidate the conviction of J. for manslaughter. Ib.

Amendment.)—The prisoner was indicted for stealing the cattle of R. M. At the trial R. M. gave evidence that he was nineteen years of age: that his father was dead, and the goods were bought with the proceeds of his father's estate; that his mother angular managed the property, and bought the cattle in question. On objection taken the indictment was amended, by stating the goods to be the property of the mother, and no further evidence of her administrative character was given, the county court Judge holding the evidence of R. M. sufficient, and not leaving any question as to the property to the jury. On a case of R. M. sufficient, and not leaving any question as to the property to the jury. On a case to the property to the jury. On a case to the property to the jury. On a case to the property to the jury. On a case to the property to the jury. On a case to the property to the jury. On a case to the property to the jury. On a case to the property to the jury. On a case to the property to the jury. On a case that he country is the property of the succession in R. M. to support the Judge had power to amend under C. S. C. C. 10, s. 78; 3. that the conviction on the amended indictment could not be sustained.

there being no evidence of the mother's representative character; nor any question of ownership by her, apart from such character, left to the jury. Regina v. Jackson, 19 C. P. 280.

Defendant was charged with having set fire to a building, the property of one J. H.. "with intent to defraud." The case opened by the crown was that the prisoner intende to defraud several insurance companies, but the legal proof of the policies was wanting, and an amendment was allowed by striking out the words "with intent to defraud." The evidence shewed that different persons were interested as mortgages of the building, a large hotel, and J. H. as owner of the equity of redemption. It was left to the jury to say whether the prisoner intended to injure any of those interested. They found a verdict of guilty:—Held, that the amendment was authorized and proper, and the conviction was warranted by the evidence. Regina v. Cronin., 36 U. C. R. 342.

The indictment in such a case is sufficient without alleging any intent, there being no such averment in the statutory form: but an intent to injure or defraud must be shewn on the tried.

the trial. Ib.

"The merits of the case," with reference to amendments, under 32 & 33 Vict. c. 29, s. 71 (D.), means the justice of the case as regards the guilt or innocence of the prisoner: and "his defence on such merits" means a substantial and not a formal or technical defence. Ib.

Where a bridge was wrongly described in an indicament as being in two townships:—Held, that though this could have been amended at the trial it could not be amended on a motion to set aside the verdict or for a new trial. Regina v. County of Carleton, 1 O. R. 277.

Certainty. —The indictment charged that the defendant "did receive, conceal, or assist "tone W.. a deserter from the navy. Semble, not sufficiently certain and precise. Regina v. Patterson, 27 U. C. R. 142.

Contra Formam.]—As to the averment, "Contra formam statuti," see Regina v. Deame, 10 U. C. R. 464; Regina v. Walker, 10 U. C. R. 465; Regina v. Cummings, 16 U. C. R. 15; Regina v. Carson, 14 C. P. 309.

Copy.]—A copy of an indictment for high treason may be had by the consent of the attorney-general. Rex v. McDonel, Tay. 299.

Semble, that a person tried for felony and acquitted, can only obtain a copy of the indictment and record of acquittal, to be used in an action for malicious prosecution, on the fiat of the attorney-general; and the granting or refusing such application cannot be reviewed by this court. The application here was for a rule calling on the attorney-general to shew cause why judgment of acquittal should not be entered on the indictment:—Held, that the indictment not being a record of this court, or brought into it by certiforari, the court had no jurisdiction. Regina v. Ivy. 24 C. P. 78.

See Malicious Procedure.

Court Wrongly Described.]—On an indictment for not keeping a bridge in repair:
—Held, no objection that the proceedings on the record were in the court of Queen's bench for the Province of Ontario, there being no such Province when they were had, for the mention of the Province was surplusage; nor that there were no second placita or continuances on the record, for, if necessary, an amendment would, be allowed. Regina v. Despardins Canal Co., 27 U. C. R. 374.

Demurrer to Indictment.]--An Indictment having been held bad upon demurrer, the judgment was that the indictment be quashed, so that another indictment might be preferred, not that defendants be discharged. Regina v. Tierney, 29 U. C. R. 181.

An indictment was found against the defendants in the high court of justice, at its sittings of oyer and terminer and gaol delivery, and on being called upon to plead, the defendants demurred to the indictment. A writ of certorari was subsequently obtained by the defendants, in obedience to which the indictment, demurrer, and joinder were removed to the Queen's bench division. Upon the return, the Crown took out a side-bar rule for a concilium, and the demurrer was set down for argument. A motion was made by the defendants to set aside the proceedings of the Crown, on the ground that they should have been called upon to appear and plead de novo in this division:—Held, that the court of assize of oyer and terminer and general gool delivery is now, by virtue of the Judicature Act, the high court of justice; that the indictment was found, and the defendants appeared and demurred thereto in the high court of justice; and that it was not necessary to plead de novo to the indictment. Regina v. Bunting, 7 O. R. 118.

Duplicity.]—Duplicity in an indictment on a summary trial before the county Judge, under 32 & 33 Vict. c, 35, is not a ground of error. Cornwall v. Regina, 33 U. C. R.

Joinder of Counts and Defendants.]

—An indictment charging a misdemeanour against a registrar and his deputy jointly is good if the facts establish a joint offence. A deputy is liable to be indicted while the principal legally holds the office, and even after the deputy himself has been dismissed. Regina v. Benjamin, 4 C. P. 179.

Where two defendants sat together as magistrates, and one exacted a sum of money from a person charged before them with a felony, the other not dissenting:—Held, that they might be jointly convicted. Regina v. Tisdale, 20 U. C. R. 272.

It is not a misjoinder of counts to add allezations of a previous conviction for misdemennour, as counts, to a count for larceny; and the question, at all events, can only be raised by demurrer or motion to quash the indictment, under 32 & 33 Vict. c. 29, s. 32, (D.): and where there has been a demurrer to such allegations as insufficient in law, and judgment in favour of the prisoner, but he is convicted on the felony count, the court of error will not reopen the matter on the sugeror in that there is misjoinder of counts. Regina v. Mason, 22 C. P. 246.

The prisoner in this case was indicted on two sets of counts, one charging him as a citizen of the United States, the other as a subject of her Majesty. The learned Judge at the trial refused to put the Crown to an election between the two sets of counts, and the court upheld his ruling. Regina v. School, 26 U. C. R. 212.

Where an indictment contains one count for leaving and allegations in the nature of counts for previous convictions for misdemennours, and the prisoner, being arraigned on the whole indictment, pleads "not guilty," and is tried at a subsequent assize, when the count for larceny only is read to the jury:—Held, no error, as the prisoner was only given in charge on the larceny count. Regina v. Mason, 22 C. P. 246.

Patent Defect.]—The court will not arrest judgment after verdict, or veverse judgment in error, for any defect patent on the face of the indictment, as by 32, 43 3 Vict. e, 29, s, 32, objection to such defect must be taken by demurrer or by motion to quash the indictment. Regina v. Mason, 22 C. P. 246.

An indictment describing an offence within 32 & 33 Vict. c. 21, s. 18, as feloniously stealing an information taken in a police court, is sufficient after verdict. Ib.

Proof of Indictment.]—The production of the original indictment is insufficient to prove an indictment for felony; but a record must be made up, with a proper caption. Henry v. Little, 11 U. C. R. 296.

Variance.)—Where an indictment charged defendant with procuring certain persons to cut trees, the property of A., B., and C., growing on certain lands belonging to them, and the evidence shewed that the land belonged to them and to another as tenants in common:—Held, that a conviction could not be supported. Regina v. Quinn, 29 U. C. R. 158.

Variance between indictment and proof, in description of land. Regina v. Baby, 12 U. C. R. 346.

An indictment alleged a nuisance to be near lot 16, and the evidence shewed it to be on it:—Held, a fatal variance. Regina v. Meyers, 3 C. P. 305.

On a charge of stealing 2.200 bushels of beans for which he was committed for trial, the evidence before the maristrate disclosed that the prisoner had obtained certain cheques on the false pretence that "there were 2,689 bushels of beans" in his warehouse. At the assizes he was indicted for obtaining the cheques on the false pretence "that there was then a large quantity of beans, to wit 2,680 bushels," in his warehouse. During the progress of the trial the indictment was amended by striking out the words "a large quantity of beans, to wit," and the prisoner was convicted thereon:—Held, no such variation as prevented the indictment being preferred for a charge founded upon the facts or evidence disclosed within the menning of s. 641 of the Criminal Code, 1892:—Held, also, that the prisoner not having been misled or prejudiced by the amendment, it was properly made. Regina v. Patterson, 26 O. R. 659.

5. Jury.

Challenge for Cause.] - After some jurors had been peremptorily challenged by the prisoner, and others directed by the Crown to stand aside, and when only one had been sworn, one M. was called and challenged by the prisoner for cause. At the suggestion of the court, and with consent of counsel, M. was directed to stand aside by the Crown "till it was ascertained whether a jury could be empannelled without him, on the underbe empannelled without fills, on the under-standing that if it appeared necessary or ex-pedient the challenge for cause should be tried in the usual way." After the prisoner tried in the usual way." After the prisoner had made nineteen peremptory challenges, a juryman was called whom the prisoner desired to challenge peremptorily. The counsel for the Crown then asked that the question of M.'s competency should be tried in the usual way. The prisoner's counsel objected, usual way. The prisoner's counsel objected, but the Judge ruled with the Crown, and he certified that he so ruled because it was in accordance with the arrangement under which the juror was directed to stand aside: that no exception was taken to this ruling: that he was not asked to note any objection to the mode of empannelling the jury; and that he was first asked to reserve the question after the assize had finished, when upon the consent of counsel for the Crown it was added to the other questions reserved :-Held, that the jury were properly empannelled. Regina v. Smith, 38 U. C. R. 218.

Clergyman Addressing Jury, |—In the course of a trial for murder by shooting, the jury attended church in charge of a constable, and the clergyman directly addressed them, referring to the case of a man hung for murder, and urging them, if they had the slightest doubt of the guilt of the prisoner they were trying, to temper justice with equity. The prisoner was convicted:—Held, that although the remarks of the clergyman were highly improper, it could not be said that the jury were so influenced by them as to affect their verdict. Precper v. Regina, 15 S. C. R. 401.

Conspiracy — Challenge.] — Upon an indiment for conspiracy to procure by fraud the return of one F. as a member for the Legislative Assembly:—Held, that the Crown was entitled to challenge any of the jurors peremptorily, without assigning a cause, until the panel had been exhausted. Regina v. Fellouces, 19 U. C. R. 48.

Defamatory Libel — Croun's Right to have Jurors Stand aside,]— 37 Vict. e, 28, s. 11, enacts that the right of the Crown to cause jurors to stand aside shall not be exercised "on the trial of any indictment or information by a private prosecutor for the publication of a defamatory libel: "—Held, to include all cases of defamatory libel with the control of the prosecution being conducted by a counsel appointed by and representing the attorney-general would make no difference." Reguna v. Patterson, 36 U. C. R. 127.

The Judge, at the trial, allowed the Crown counsel in such a case to direct jurors to stand aside, but, after the verdict, entertaining doubts, he reserved a case for the opinion of the court, as to the propriety of his having permitted it:—Held, that he was clearly not precluded from such reservation by having allowed the right when claimed, and that such question was a question of law which arose on the trial, within the meaning of the statute. Ib.

Insolvent Act-Special Jury.]-Section 148 of the Insolvent Act of 1869, provided that all offences punishable under that Act should be tried by a special jury. Section 141 of the Act of 1875, directed that all offences punishable under that Act should be tried as other offences of the same degree; and by section 149, as respects matters of procedure merely, the provisions of that Act should supersede the Act of 1869. In this case, be-fore the trial, the Crown gave notice of and struck a special jury, who were in attendance at the trial, but the Crown, notwithstanding, elected to call and try the case by a common jury. The prisoner's counsel objected thereto, and the case proceeded, the prisoners entering into a full defence, but subject to such objection, which was re-newed at the close of the case, with the fur-ther objection, that ther objection that there had been a mistrial: -Held, that the case should have been tried by a special jury, for the offence was not punishable under the Act of 1875, and the matter was not one of procedure within s. 149; that there had therefore been a mistrial which the prisoners under the circum-stances had not waived their right to insist upon; and that this was a "question of law which arose on the trial," which might properly be reserved, and not an objection to be raised by challenge to the jury. Regina v. Kerr, 26 C. P. 214.

Irregularities — Error.] — Semble, that under s. 139, C. S. U. C. c. 31, where no "unindifference" or fraudulent dealing of the sheriff is shewn, any irregularities are not assignable for error. Regina v. O'Rourke, 1 O. R. 464.

Quere, whether, when such a question has been reserved by a Judge at the trial, it can afterwards be made the subject of a writ of error. Ib.

Misdemeanour—Crown's Right to Make Jurors Stand aside.]—Upon the trial of a party indicted for misdemeanour, the Crown has a right to cause jurors to stand aside until the whole panel is gone through. Regina v. Benjamin, 4 C. P. 179.

Murder—Challenge for Cause—Peremptory Challenge in Deference to Judge's View.] On a trial for murder the prisoner desired to challenge one S., one of the jurors called, for favour, alleging sufficient cause. The Judge ruled that he must first exhaust his peremptory challenges, and this point was raised by plea and demurrer, and formally decided. The entry on the record then was, that in deference to the judgment the challenge was taken attorney-general, as a peremptor of the prisoner. Afterwards, having exhausted his twenty challenges, including S., he chaimed to challenge peremptorily one H., contending that by the erroneous ruling he had been compelled to challenge S. peremptorily, and should not be obliged to count him as one of the twenty. This was also entered of record and decided against him:—Held, that the prisoner was entitled to challenge for cause before exhausting his peremptory challenges; that error would lie for the refusal of this right; and that had S. been sworn there must have been a venire de novo; but, held, also, that by cluded him from the jury, the first ground of error was removed; and that error on the second challenge could not be supported, for the prisoner had in fact had twenty peremptory challenges, and the peremptory challenge of S, being in deference to the ruling of the Judge did not make it the less a peremptory challenge. Whelan v. Regina, 28 U. C.

Murder — Juror Discharged after being Sworn.]—Upon a trial for murder, after the usual notice of right of challenge, two jurymen were sworn without challenge. was then called, and a person came forward and was sworn. Others were called and chaland was sworn. Others were called and chal-lenged; and after another was called and sworn without challenge, the prisoner's counsel objected to J. H., as he was a witness in the case. Upon inquiry he was found not to be the person intended to be called on the jury, being not only a witness, but not a resident in the counties, and therefore not qualified as a juryman. Upon consent of counsel fied as a juryman. Upon consent of counsel for the Crown and prisoner, he was allowed to retire, and others were called and sworn, the prisoner exercising the right to challenge, till the jury was chosen. After conviction, upon motion for a new trial:—Held, 1. That J. H. (improperly sworn) was legally dis-charged from the jury; 2, that the right of challenge as to those previously sworn was being rendered necessary; 3, that the prisoner was properly tried by the twelve, although thirteen were sworn to try him. Regina v. Coulter, 13 C. P. 299,

Provincial Jurisdiction.]-By 32 & 33 Vict. c. 29, s. 44 (D.), the selection of jurors in criminal cases is authorized to be in accordance with the provincial laws, whether passed ance with the provincial laws, whether passed before or after the coming into force of the B. N. A. Act, subject, however, to any provision in any Act of the Parliament of Canada, and in so far as such laws are not inconsistent with any such Act, By 42 Vict, c. 14, and 44 Vict, c. 6 (O.), the mode of selection jurors in criminal cases, as provided by S. U. C. c. 31, as amended by 26 Vict. c. 44, was changed, by excluding the clerk of the peace as one of the selectors, and requiring the selection to be made only from those qualified to serve as jurors whose surnames began with certain alphabetical letters, in-stead of from the whole body of those competent to serve as previously required. The jury in question were selected under these provincial Acts. Semble, that 32 & 33 Vict. c, 29 (D.) was not ultra vires the Dominion Parliament as being a delegation of their powers, and that the selection made in accordance with the provincial Acts was valid. Regina v. O'Rourke, 32 C. P. 388. Quare, whether the selection and summoning of jurors is a matter of procedure, or relates to the constitution and organization of criminal courts. Ib. See next case.

Provincial Jurisdiction - Challenge to the Array.]-By 32 & 33 Vict. c. 29, s. 44 (D.), every person qualified and summoned to serve as a juror in criminal cases according to the lay in any Province, is declared to be qualified to serve in such Province, whether such laws were passed before the B. N. A. Act or after it, subject to, and in so far as, such laws are not inconsistent with any Act of the Parliament of Canada. By 42 Vict. c. 14 (O.), and 44 Vict. c. 6 (O.), the mode of selecting jurors in all cases, formerly regu-lated by 26 Vict. c. 44, was changed. The jury was selected according to the Ontario statutes, and the prisoner challenged the array, to which the Crown demurred, and judgment was given for the Crown. The prisoner was found guilty and sentenced, and he then brought error:—Held, per Hagarty, C.J., that the Dominion statute was not ultra vires by reason of its adopting and applying the laws of Ontario as to criminal procedure. Per Armour, and Cameron JJ., that the objection raised by the prisoner was not a good ground of challenge to the array. Regina v. O'Rourke, 1 O. R. 464.

Qualification of Juror-Wrong Person Summoned and Sworn.] — B. having been found guilty of feloniously having administered poison with intent to murder, moved to arrest the judgment on the ground that one of the jurors who tried the case had not been returned as such. The general panel of jurors contained the names of Joseph Lamoureux and Moise Lamoureux. The spe-cial panel for the term of the court at which the prisoner was tried, contained the name of Joseph Lamoureux. The sheriff served Joseph Jamoureux's summons on Moise Lamoureux, and returned Joseph Lamoureux as the party summoned. Moise Lamoureux as the party summoned. Moise Lamoureux appeared in court and answered to the name of Joseph and was sworn as a juror without challenge when B, was tried. On a reserved case it was held, that the point should not have been reserved by the Judge at the trial, it not being a queston arising at the trial within the meaning of s, 259, c, 174, R. S. C.:—Held, also, that assuming the point could be reserved, s, 246, c, 174, R. S. C., clearly covered the irregularity complained of. Brisebois v. Regina, 15 S. C. R. 421. tion arising at the trial within the meaning of

Right of Crown to Make Jurors Stand aside a Second Time. |-- When a panel had been gone through and a full jury had not been obtained the Crown on the second calling over of the panel was permitted, second calling over of the panel was permitted, against the objection of the prisoner, to direct eleven of the jurymen on the panel to stand aside a second time, and the Judge presiding at the trial was not asked to reserve and neither reserved nor refused to reserve and write of error was issued :—Held, per Taschereau, Gwynne, and Patterson, JJ., that the owestion was one of law arising on the trial. question was one of law arising on the trial which could have been reserved under s. 259 of c. 174 R. S. C., and the writ of error should therefore be quashed. Per Ritchie, C. J., Strong, and Fournier, JJ., that the question arose before the trial commenced and could not have been reserved, and as the error of law appeared on the face of the record remedy by writ of error was applicable. Brise-bois v. The Queen, 15 S. C. R. 421, referred to. Per Ritchie, C.J., Strong, Fournier, and Patterson, J.J., that the Crown could not without shewing cause for challenge direct a juror to stand aside a second time. The Queen v. Lacombe, 13 L. C. Jur. 259, overruled. Per Gwynne, J., that all the prisoner could complain of was a mere irregularity in procedure which could not constitute a mistrial. Morin v. The Queen, 18 S. C. R. 407.

Summoning Jury.] — By proclamation published on the 15th December, 1866, the county of Peel was separated from York from and after the 1st January, 1867. On the 23rd November preceding, the usual precept had been sent to the sheriff of the united counties for the winter assizes for York, to be held on the 10th January, 1867, and the sheriff re-turned his panel to that precept, containing fifty-four jurors from York and thirty from Only those from York, however, attended, and the prisoner was tried by a jury de medietate, including six of these jurors, upon an indictment found and pleaded to at the previous assizes in October. On motion for a new trial, or venire de novo, because the precept and panel should have been for York only, not for the united counties:-Held, per Draper, C.J., that the objection, if available at all, must be taken by writ of error. Per Hagarty, J., no objection would lie. Regina v. Kennedy, 26 U. C. R. 326.

Venire Facias.]—It was objected on error to the record of a judgment on a conviction for murder that the only authority shewn being that of oyer and terminer, the award, "therefore let a jury thereupon immediately come." was unauthorized, and a special award of venire facias was requisite; but—Held, assuming, but not admitting, that in England there is a difference in this respect between the power of justices of oyer and terminer and of good delivery, and that the record shewed no authority to deliver the gool,—that in this country by the Jury Act, C. S. U. C. c. 31, both have the same powers, the general precept to summon a jury being issued by both before the assizes. Whelan v. Regina, 28 U. C. R. 2.

6. Trial.

Capital Sentence — Court of King's Bench.]—A criminal convicted at a court of over and terminer of a capital felony, may be brought up to the court of King's bench for sentence. Rex v. Kenrey, 5 O. S. 317.

Commission of Assizes.] — Held, that the Crown, by prerogative right, could issue a commission to the Judge of the provisional judicial district of Algoma to hold a court of over and terminer, and general gaol delivery, for trial of felonies, &c. Semble, ner Wilson, J., that such Judge having by s. 94 of C. S. U. C. c. 128, the same powers and duties as a county Judge in Upper Canada, he might have been appointed under C. S. U. C. c. 11, s. 2, to act as commissioner. Regina v. Amer, 42 U. C. R. 391.

Commitment for Trial—Dies non Juridicus—Subsequent Trial—Court of Record—Habeas Corpus—Writ of Error.]—The prisoner was on a statutory holiday committed for trial by a magistrate upon a charge of attempting to steal from the person, and on being brought before the county court Judge in combliance with s. 766 of the Criminal Code, 1892, consented to be tried by the Judge without a jury, and, being so tried, was convicted and sentenced to a term of imprisonment:—Held, upon the return to a writ of habeas corpus, that the fact that the prisoner was committed for trial and confined in gool on a warrant that was a nullity could not affect the validity of the trial before the Judge affect the validity of the trial before the Judge under the Speedy Trials Act. Upon appeal the court of appeal held that the county court Judge's criminal court being a court of record, its proceedings were not reviewable upon habeas corpus, but only upon writ of error. Regina v. Murray, 28 O. R. 549.

Committal for One Offence-Change of Committal for One Offence—Change of Venue—Trial for Two Offences—Administer-ing Oath—Comment by Judge on Prisoner not Testifying—Withdrawal of Comment.— The prisoner was committed for trial in one county upon a charge of perjury alleging an offence committed in that county. The venue was changed to another county, where he was tried and found guilty upon an indictment containing two counts, alleging two offences arising out of the same matter. The facts relating to both of the charges appeared in the depositions taken by the committing magistrate:—Held, that there was jurisdiction to try for both offences in the county to which the venue had been changed. On the occasion when the perjury was alleged to have been committed the oath was administered to the prisoner in open court by the clerk of the county court sitting in the general sessions of the peace for and at the verbal request of the clerk of the peace:—Held, that the witness was properly sworn. At the trial the prisoner did not testify on his own behalf and the trial Judge in his charge to the jury, contrary to the provisions of the Canada Evidence Act, 1893, s. 4, s.-s. 2, commented upon that fact, although, when his at-tention was drawn to it, he recalled the jury and withdrew his comment :- Held, that the prisoner had a right to have his case submitted to the jury without the comment and, having been deprived of that right, there was a substantial wrong done to him which could not be undone by calling back the jury and withdrawing the comment. New trial ordered. Regina v. Coleman, 30 O. R. 93.

Consent to Summary Trial — False Pretences — Term of Imprisonment.]—The plaintiffs in error were charged with having defrauded one C. by a game called three card monte. They consented to be summarily tried. When brought up for trial, therewe at the result of the summarily tried. When brought up for trial, therewe attenney asked for and obtained leave to substitute a charge of combining to obtain money by false pretences, the prisoners objecting. The trial preceded without the consent of the prisoners obtained to be tried summarily for this offence. They were convicted and sentenced to one year's imprisonment:—Held, on error, that their consent to be summarily tried on the substitute charge should appear, and that in its absence the conviction was bad:—Held, also, that it was bad in adjudging the sentence of one year, the Act, 40 Vict. c. 32 (D.), only authorizing a sentence for any term less than a year. Goodman v. Regina, 3 O. R. 18.

Conviction for Offence not Charged.]—A county court Judge trying a prisoner summarily under 32 & 33 Vict. c. 35 (D.), has the same authority to convict of an offence under 32 & 33 Vict. c. 21, s. 110 (D.), instead of that charged, as a jury-has. Region v. Hance, 42 U. C. R. 208.

Court of Record — Habeas Corpus.]— The prisoner was convicted before a county Judge's criminal court on a charge of receiving stolen goods, knowing them to have been feloniously stolen, and was sentenced to imprisonment. On an application for a habeas corpus :-Held, that the court was a court of record, and that under R. S. O. 1877 c. 70, solve and that under R. S. O. 1877 c. 70, s. l. there was therefore no right to the writ. Regina v. St. Denis, S. P. R. 16.

Held, also, that the Judge had power to imprison. Ib.

The prisoners were committed for trial on a charge of gambling in a railway train. On the case coming before the county Judge for real, an indictment was preferred, under 42 Vict. c. 44, s. 3 (D.), for obtaining money by false pretences. The prisoners' counsel objected to the prisoners being tried on a different charge from that on which they had been committed. The objection was overruled, and the charge read over to the prisoners, and, on forthwith or remain in custody until the next sitting of over and terminer, &c., they pleaded not guilty, and said that they were ready for trial. The case then proceeded, and the pris-oners were convicted; no question having been oners were convicted; no question having been raised as to their having been tried without their consentance of the proceedings. A write of laborate corpus having been issued, and the prisoner's discharge moved for, on the ground of the absence of such consent:—Held, that the motion must be refused. Regina v. Goodman, 2 O. R. 468.

Election to be Tried by Jury-Re-election—Mandamus to Sheriff to bring Pris-oner before County Judge.]—Where a pris-oner is brought before a county court Judge under s. 766 of the Criminal Code, and elects to be tried by a jury, and is thereupon remanded under s. 767 to await such trial, although his election is made under a mistake or qualified by using the words "at present." there is no duty upon the sheriff to notify the Judge a second time under s. 766, or to bring the prisoner again before him to enable the prisoner to re-elect to be tried by the Judge. Regina v. Ballard, 28 O. R. 489.

Kidnapping — Postponing Trial—Record — Amendment — Re-sentencing Prisoner.] — The plaintiff in error, having been committed to gool for trial on a charge of unlawfully and forcibly kidnapping and taking one B, without contacts and the statement of the sentence of the se authority, with intent to transport him out of Canada against his will, was, on the 24th June, 1872, brought before the county Judge, by whom he consented to be tried under 32 & 33 Viet. c. 35. In the record drawn up under that statute, it was charged that he did feloniously and without authority, forcibly seize and confine one B. within Canada, &c.. (without alleging any intent,) and that he did afterwards feloniously kidnap one B. with intent to cause the said B. to be unlawfully transported out of Canada against his will, &c. The Judge fixed the 3rd July for the trial, and on that day the prisoner said he was ready, but upon day the prisoner said he was ready, but upon the request of counsel for the Crown the trial was postponed till the 15th July, when the prisoner was found guilty on both counts. An amendment of the indictment was allowed by the Judge, changing the name of R. B. to J. R. B. In the notice required from the sheriff to the Judge by 32 & 33 Vict. c. 35, s. 2, only the charge contained in the second count of the indictment was referred to. On errors being assigned:—Held, that the sessions had jurisdiction over the offence, and so the county Judge had power to try it:—Held, also, that the record was properly framed, in stating the offence charged in such form as the depositions or evidence shewed it should have been; and that the Judge's jurisdiction was not confined to the trial only of the charge was not commed to the trial only of the charge as stated in the commitment:—Held, also, that the Judge had power to postpone the trial, and the record was not defective in not stating the cause of the adjournment. By 32 & 33 Vict. c. 20, s. 69, under which the charge was made, "Whosoever, without lawcharge was made, "Whosoever, without law-ful authority, forcibly seizes and confines or imprisons any other person within Canada, or kidnaps any other person with intent" to cause such person to be secretly confined or imprisoned in Canada, or to be unlawfully sent or transported out of Canada against his will, or to be sold or captured as a slave, is guilty of felony :-Held, that the intent required applied to the seizure and confinement in Canada, as well as to kidnapping; and that the first count, therefore, was defective in not stating any intent. Upon this ground the judgment was reversed, and under C. S. U. C. c. 113, s. 17, the record was remitted to the Judge to pronounce the proper judgment, which would be upon the second count only: —Held, also, that the amendment was author-ized, under 32 & 33 Vict. c. 29, ss. 1 and 71 (D.) :-Held, also, that the court would not presume that the two counts referred to the same offence, and if it were so, duplicity would not be a ground of error:—Held, also, no objection that the jurisdiction conferred no objection that the jurisaliction conterred by 32 & 33 Vict. c. 35, was not shewn, for the record and judgment were in the form pre-scribed by that Act:—Held, also, that the sheriff's notice was sufficient, as 32 & 33 Vict. c. 35, s. 2, requires it only to state the "nature of the charge" preferred against the prisoner. The prisoner having been sent to the penitentiary, a habeas corpus was ordered to bring him up to receive the proper judgment. Corn-wall v. Regina, 33 U. C. R. 106.

Mutiny Act. — Held, per J. Wilson, J., that the Imperial Mutiny Act does not over-ride C. S. C. c. 100, but that the latter was passed in aid of it, and is therefore in force. Per A. Wilson, J., that the punishment by fine and imprisonment, imposed by the Provincial Act, stands abolished as long as the Mutiny Act is in force, and that the imprisonment can in no case exceed six calendar months; but that the power of trial by the court of over and terminer, under the Provincial Act, has not been taken away by the Mutiny Act; and therefore that the defendant in this case could not complain, as he had been tried by a tribunal of this kind, and sentenced to no longer imprisonment than the last mentioned period; and that though a fine of 10s. had also been imposed, this was merely nominal, in compliance with the Provincial statute, and would not entitle him to be discharged, as the court had power to pass the proper judgment,, if an improper one had been given. Regina v. Sherman, 17 C. P. 166.

Nuisance — General Verdict — Second Trial.]—On an indictment for nuisance in obstructing a highway, judgment had been arrested, and a second trial had, in order to take the opinion of the jury on a particular ques-tion which the court thought material. The jury upon the second trial found a general verdict of acquittal, without answering such question, which was submitted to them by the Judge. The indictment had not been removed by certiorari, and-Held, therefore, that this court could not interfere by staying the entry of judgment until a new indictment could be preferred. Semble, that the jury had a right to find generally as they did. Regina v. Spence, 12 U. C. R. 519.

Proof of Judge's Commission - Caption.]—On error brought, it was—Held, that on the record of a conviction for murder the authority of the justice sufficiently appeared, without any statement whether a commission had issued or been dispensed with by order of the governor; for such courts are now held, not under commission, but by virtue of C. S. U. C. c. 11, as amended by 29 & 30 Vict. c. 40; and as the record sufficiently shewed the absence of any commission, it must be presumed that it seemed best to the governor not to issue one. Semble, that if the court had been held by a Queen's counsel or county court Judge, it might have been necessary to shew whether a commission had issued or not, as he would derive his authority from a different Semble, source in each of the two cases. also, that if the caption had been defective it might have been rejected altogether, under (S. U. C. c. 99, s. 52. Whelan v. Regina, 28 U. C. R. 2.

Right of Reply.]—It was held in a prosecution for conspiracy that although evidence was called by only one of the defendants, it might have enured to the benefit of both, and that the right to a general reply was with the counsel for the Crown. Regina v. Connolly, 25 O. R. 151.

Several Prisoners—No Evidence against One.]—Where no evidence appears against one of several prisoners, he ought to be acquitted at the close of the prosecutor's case. Regina v., Hambly, 16 U. C. R. 617.

Speedy Trials Act-Bail Surrendering-Right to Elect to be Tried Summarily.]-The surrender of defendants out on bail, including the surrender by a defendant himself out on his own bail, committed to gaol for trial, has the effect of remitting them to custody, and enables them to avail themselves of the Speedy Trials Act, 52 Vict. c. 47 (D.), and to appear before the county Judge and elect to be tried summarily; and where defendants had so elected, indictments subsequently laid against them at the assizes were held bad and quashed, even after plea pleaded where done through inadvertence, s. 143 of R. S. C. c. 174 not be-ing in such case any bar. Two indictments ing in such case any bar. I wo indictments were laid against defendants, one for conspiracy to procure W. to sign two promissory notes; and the other for fraudulently inducing W. to sign the documents representing them to be agreements, whereas they were in fact promissory notes :- Held, that several offences were not set up in each count of the indictments; that it was no objection to the indictments that the notes might not be of value until delivered to defendants; and further, that under s. 78 of R. S. C. c. 164, an indictment would lie for inducing W. to write his name on papers which might afterwards nis name on papers which might arretwrite be dealt with as valuable securities. Rex v. Danger, 1 Dears, & B. 307, 3 Jur. N. S. 1011; Regina v. Gordon, 23 Q. B. D. 354, considered. Regina v. Burke, 24 O. R. 64.

Speedy Trials Act—Territorial Jurisdiction.)—The Speedy Trials Act, 51 Vict. c. 47 (D.), is not a statute conferring jurisdiction but is an exercise of the power of Parliament to regulate criminal procedure. By this Act jurisdiction is given "to any Judge of a county court" to try certain criminal offences: — Held, that the expression "any Judge of a county court," in such Act, means any Judge having, by force of the Provincial law regulating the constitution and organization of county courts, jurisdiction in the particular locality in which he may hold a "speedy trial." The statute would not authorize a county court Judge to hold a "speedy trial" beyond the limits of his territorial jurisdiction without authority from the Provincial Legislature so to do. In re County Courts of British Columbia, 21 S. C. R. 446.

7. Venue.

Acts in Two Counties.]—The attempt to procure a woman to make a false affidavit, consisted of a letter written by defendant, dated at Bradford, in the county of Simcoe, purporting, but not proved, to bear the Bradford post mark, and addressed to the woman at Toronto, where she received it:—Held, that the case could be tried at York. Semble, per Draper, C.J., if the post mark had been proved, and the letter thus shewn to have passed out of defendant's hands in Simcoe, intended for the woman, the offence would have been complete in that county, and the indictment only triable there. Per Hagarty, J., the defendant in thaf case would still have caused the letter to be received in York, and might be tried there. Regina v. Clement, 16 U. C. R. 297.

Change of Venue.)—Held, that 32 & 33 Vict. c. 29, s. 11, does not authorize any order for the change of the place of trial of a prisoner in any case where such change would not have been granted under the former practice, the statute only affecting procedure. Regina v. McLeod, 5 P. R. 181.

An order made pursuant to 32 & 33 Vict. c. 29, s. 11 (D), directing a change of venue, would be sufficient although containing no reference to any provision for expenses, when the indictment has been pleaded to and the trial proceeded with without objection, and even in a court of error there could be no valid objection to a conviction founded on such order. In re Sproule, 12 S. C. R. 140.

Upon a motion made by the Crown under s. 651 of the Criminal Code to change the venue from the town of Napanee to some other place, for the trial of three persons charged with the offence of breaking into a bank in the town of Napanee and stealing money therefrom, upon the ground that the sympathy felt for two of the accused in the town and in the county of Lennox and Adding on, of which it is the county town, was such that a fair trial could not be had:—Held, that the rule that all causes should be tried in the county where the crime is supposed to have been committed ought never to be infringed unless it plainly appears that a fair and impartial trial cannot be had in that county; and mere apprehension, belief, and opinion are not to be relied on as evidence. And, under the circumstances appearing upon affidavits filed, the motion was refused. Region v. Proton, 18 P. R. 210.

Under s. 651 of the Criminal Code the venue for the trial of a person charged with an indictable offence may be changed to some place other than the county in which the offence is supposed to have been committed, if it appears to the satisfaction of the court or Judge that it expedient to the ends of justice, by reason of anything which may interfere with a fair trial in that county; it is not a question as to the jury altogether. And where at a trial of the defendant, at which the jury disagreed, a crowd of persons congregated round the court house while the jury were deliberating, and endeavoured to intimidate the jurors and influence them in favour of the defendant, and afterwards made riotous demonstrations towards the Judge who presided at the trial, the venue was changed before the second trial, Where affidavits were filed by the Crown to shew that the conduct of the crowd must have influenced the jurors, affidavits of jurors denying that they were intimidated were received manswer. Regina v. Ponton (No. 2), 18 P.

Great Lakes.]—The great inland lakes of Canada are within the admiralty jurisdiction, and offences committed on them are as though committed on the high seas; and any magistrate of this Province has authority to inquire into offences committed on said lakes although in American waters. Regina v. Sharp, 5 P. 11, 135.

8. Miscellaneous Cases.

Autrefois Acquit.]—The prisoner being indicted under C. S. U. C. c. 98, and charged as a citizen of the United States, was acquitted on proving himself to be a British subject. He was then indicted as a subject of Her Majesty, and pleaded autrefois acquit:—Held, that the plea was not proved, for that by the statute the offence in the case of a foreigner and a subject is substantially different, the evidence, irrespective of national status, which would convict a foreigner, being insufficient as against a subject; and the prisoner therefore was not in legal peril on the first indictment. Regina v. Magrath, 26 U. C. R. 385.

Enforcing Payment of Fines. |—The Crown may issue a fi. fa. for the sale of lands and goods in order to satisfy a fine imposed; and the person fined may be said to be indebted, and the fine to be a debt. Regima v. Besinding Count for Sol V. C. P. (1991).

debted, and the fine to be a debt, Regina v. besignations Canal Co., 29 U. C. R. 165.
Lands and goods may be included in the same writ, and it may be made returnable before the expiration of twelve months, the Crown not being bound by 43 Geo. III. c. 1 th.

The court or a Judge may at any time interfere, as exercising the powers of the court of exchequer, to restrain undue he shoess or laste in the execution of such writ, although what is complained of may be strictly authorized II.

Expenses of Administration of Criminal Justice. —The liability of the Crown for payment of expenses connected with the administration of criminal justice in the Prochine out of the consolidated revenue fund is instricted, under R. S. O. 1877 c. SG, s. 1, to such expenses as are mentioned in the schedule to the Act; and the county, under R. S.

O. 1877 c. 85, is required to pay all other proper expenses connected therewith. Re-Fenton and the Board of Audit of the County of York, 31 C. P. 31.

Following Decisions.]—As the court of appeal for criminal cases is now constituted the decision of the Judges of one court is not binding on Judges sitting as another court of co-ordinate jurisdiction. Regima v. Hammond, 29 O. R. 211.

Provincial Criminal Law.] — Special Case.]—A magistrate has no power to state a case under s, 900 of the Criminal Code, for an alleged offence against an Ontario statute, not involving the constitutionality of the statute, the procedure by way of appeal to the sessions provided for by Ontario legislation applying in such a case. Regina cx ret. Brown v. Robert Simpson Company (Limited), 28 O. R. 231.

Substituting New Charge. | - The defendant was brought before justices of the peace on an information charging him with the indictable offence of shooting with intent to murder, and they, not finding sufficient evi-dence to warrant them in committing for trial, of their own motion, at the close of the case, summarily convicted the defendant for that he did "procure a revolver with intent therewith unlawfully to do injury to one J. It appeared by the evidence that the weapon was bought and carried and used by the defendant personally. By the Criminal Code, s. 108, it is matter of summary conviction if one has on his person a pistol with intent therewith unlawfully to do any injury to any other person. The return to a writ of habeas corpus shewed the detention of the defendant under a warrant of commitment based upon the above conviction.-Held, that the detention was for an offence unknown to the law; and, although the evidence and the finding shewed an offence against s. 108, it was unwarrantable to convict on a charge not formulated, as to which the evidence was not addressed, upon which the defendant was not called to make his defence, and as to which no complaint was laid; and the prisoner was therefore entitled to be discharged. Regina v. Mines, 25 O. R. 577.

Uncertainty as to Charge - Affidavits Questioning Magistrate's Conclusions, 1 - It appeared, on an application for a habeas corpus, that the information laid before a police magistrate and warrant to apprehend were for an assaulting and beating, but it was disputed whether upon the examination and trial this was all the charge made, or whether he was not then charged with an aggravated assault; and whether, when he pleaded guilty, he did so to the former or the latter charge; numerous contradictory affidavits were filed. several warrants of commitment were in the gaoler's hands, upon one at least of which the prisoner was retained in custody. were all for the same offence, one having been from time to time substituted for the other, Quære, whether, or how far or for what pur-pose, affidavits can be received against a conviction or warrant of commitment valid on the face of it. A Judge cannot inquire into the conclusions at which the magistrate arrived if he had jurisdiction over the offence charged and issued a proper warrant upon that charge, but may inquire into what that charge was, or whether there was a charge at all. In its McKinnon, 2 C. L. J. 324.

Writ of Exigi Facias.]—A writ of exigi facias will be awarded by the court of Queen's bench upon the application of a prosecutor without its being applied for by the Attorney-General. Rex v. Etnod. Tay. 120.

IX. SPECIFIC OFFENCES.

1. Abortion.

Evidence. | - The prisoner was indicted for unlawfully using an instrument on J. L., with intent to procure a miscarriage. J. was called for the prosecution to prove the charge, and in cross-examination denied that she had told H. A., H. R., and M. T. that be fore the prisoner had operated on her she had been operated on by a doctor for the purpose er procuring a miscarriage. H. A., H. R and M. T. were called for the defence, and swore that J. L. had so told them. The doctor was then called by the Crown, and he swore that he had not operated on J. L :-Held, that the evidence of the doctor was properly admitted; but in any event the prisoner's case was not so affected by the evidence as to warrant a reversal of the conviction, even if the evidence were not strictly admissible. Regina v. Andrews, 12 O. R. 184.

Intent. |- The prisoner, with intent to procure abortion, supplied a pregnant woman with two bottles full of pills, with directions to take twenty-five at a dose, and that they would have that effect. The pills contained cit of savin, an article used to procure abor tion, and it is said that a bottle full would contain about four grains, but the evidence was not very clear as to this. It was in evidence that such a quantity would be greatly irritating to a pregnant woman, and might possibly procure an abortion, and that oil of savin in any dose would be most dangerous to give to a woman in that condition:-Held, under the circumstances, that there was a supplying of a noxious thing within the meaning of the Act, 32 & 33 Vict, c. 20, s. 60 (D.), with the intent to procure an abortion. Regina v. Stitt, 30 C. P. 30.

2. Arson.

Attempt to Commit Arson. |—On an indictment for attempt to commit arson, the evidence shewed that a person, under the direction of the prisoner, after so arranging a blanket saturated with oil, that if the flame were communicated to it the building would have caught fire, lighted a match, held it till it was burning well, and then put it down to within an inch or two of the blanket, when the match went out, the flame not having touched the blanket:—Held, that the prisoner was properly convicted under 32 & 33 Vict. c, 22, s, 12. Regina v. Goodman, 22 C, P. 338.

Building.]—The remains of a wooden delling house, after a previous fire, which left only a few rafters of the roof, and injured the sides and floors so as to render it untenantable, and which was being repaired:

—Held, not a building within s, 7 of 32 & 33 Vict. c. 22, so as to be the subject of arson. Regina v. Labadie, 32 U. C. R. 429.

Carpenter.]—A building used by a carpenter, who was putting up a house near it, as a place of deposit for his tools and window frames which he had made, but in which no work was carried on by him:—Held, not "a building used in carrying on the trade of a carpenter," within 4 x 5 Vict. c. 25, s. 3. Regina v. Smun, 14 U. C. R. 546.

Intent. |-- Upon an indictment for arson. the prisoner was proved to have requested or procured one S, to set fire to the house, telling S, that he had his house insured, and asked if he would not set fire to it. He also stated that "his insurance would run out next day, and that he, S., must set the house on fire that The evidence also shewed that a sum had been awarded the prisoner for his insurance, in payment of which he was seen to have a bill of exchange on London in his possession:-Held, that under C. S. C. c. 93, s. 4. it is necessary, where the setting fire is to a man's own house, to prove an intent to injure and defraud, although the words "with intent thereby to injure or defraud any person," introduced into the Imperial Act, are omitted in ours. The indictment alleged that the prisoner did incite, &c., one F. S., the said felony in form aforesaid to do and commit. with intent then and there to injure and de fraud a certain insurance company called, &c.:—Held, necessary to prove that the premises were insured. Regina v. Bryans, 12 C. P. 161.

In an indictment for arson, it is unnecessary to charge an intent, as our statute (differing from the English Act) does not make the intent part of the crime. This omission, however, if a defect, would not be ground for a new trial, under C. S. U. C. c. 113. Region v. Greenwood, 23 U. C. R. 236.

But although the indictment is sufficient without alleging any intent, an intent to injure or defraud must be shewn on the trial. Regina v. Cronin, 36 U. C. R. 342.

The prisoner being indicted for unlawfully and maliciously attempting to burn his own house by setting fire to a bed in it, it appeared in evidence that the dead body of woman was in the bed at the time; that her death had been caused by violence; that she had been recently delivered of a child, whose body had been found in the kitchen; and that she had lived in the house since it had been rented by the prisoner, who frequently went there at night. It was also shewn that the prisoner had been indicted for the murder of this woman and acquitted, and the record of his acquittal was put in. This evidence was objected to as tending to prejudice the prisoner's case; but, held, admissible, for the house being the prisoner's, it was necessary to shew that his attempt to set fire to it was unlawful and malicious, and these facts might satisfy the jury that the murder being committed by another, the prisoner's act was intended to conceal it. Regina v. Greenwood, 23 U. C. R. 250.

3. Assault.

Aggravated Assault.]—C. S. C. c. 91, probably applies only to common assaults, &c. A charge of assaulting and beating is not a charge of aggravated assault, and a complaint of the former will not sustain a conviction of the latter, though when the party is before the magistrate, the charge of aggravated assault may be made in writing and followed by a conviction therefor. In re Wekinson, 2 C. L. J. 324.

Arresting Offender.)—Where a man is himself assaulted by a person disturbing the peace in a public street, he may arrest the offender and take him to a peace officer to arswer for the breach of the peace. Forister v. Clarke, 3 U. C. R. 151.

Assault on Coustable—Eridence.]—An assault on a constable attempting to serve a summons issued by a magistrate on information charging violation of the Canada Temperance Act, is an assault on a peace officer in the due execution of his duty, and indictable under R. S. C. c. 162, s. 34. On the trial of an indictment for such assault the wife of the defendant is not a competent witness on his behalf. MacFarlane v. The Queen, 16 S. C. R. 393.

See Regina v. Triganzie, 15 O. R. 294.

Assault with Intent to Commit Felony, I—An assault with intent to commit a felony is an attempt to commit such felony within the meaning of s. 183 of R. S. C. c. 174. On an indictment for rape a conviction for an assault with intent to commit rape is valid. On such conviction the prisoner was held properly sentenced to imprisonment under R. S. C. c. 162, s. 38. John v. The Queen, 15 S. C. R. 384.

Assault with Intent.]— The prisoner, who had been committed for extradition, was charged with assault with intent to commit murder, in that he had opened a railway switch, with intent to cause a collision, whereby two trains did come into collision, causing a severe injury to a person on one of them:—Held, that this was not an "assault" within the statute. In re Levis, 6 P. R. 236.

Attempt to Have Connection.]—On an indictment for attempting to have connection with a girl under ten, consent is immeterial; but in such a case there can be no conviction for assault if there was consent. Regina v. Connolly, 26 U. C. R. 317.

Bar of Civil Remedy—Alteration of Charge,—Justices of the peace, before whom a charge of "shooting and wounding with intent to do grievous bodily harm" came on for preliminary hearing, changed it of their own notion to one of common assault and convicted and fined the accused. The information was laid by a peace officer, and the person aggreed attended the hearing pursuant to subpena and gave evidence, and did not object when the charge was changed:—Held, that the justices had no right to alter the charge to one of conviction and payment of the fine was a nullity and no bar under s. S63 of the Code to an action by the person aggreeved to recover damages. Miller v. Lea, 25 A. R. 428.

Bar of Civil Remedy.] — Sections 865 and 896 of the Criminal Code, 1892, whereby it is enacted that a person who has obtained a certificate of the justice who tried the case, that a charge against him of assault 0.05 and battery has been dismissed, or who has paid the penalty or suffered the imprisonment awarded, shall be released from all further proceedings, civil or criminal, for the same cause, are intra vires the Dominion Parliament. Flick v. Brisbin, 26 O. R. 423,

Bar of Civil Remedy.]—Where a charge under s. 262 of the Criminal Code, 1892, of assault causing actual bodily harm is brought under Part 55 of the Code, by the election of the defendant under s. 786 to be tried summarily, a conviction releases, under s. 739, from further criminal proceedings, but does not bar civil proceedings. Flick v. Britshin, 26 O. R. 423, distinguished. Nevills v. Ballard, 28 O. R. 588.

Constable Arresting Under Warrant Valid on its Face.]—A warrant of commitment issued by two justices of the peace, for nonpayment of a fine and costs imposed on J. D. who had been convicted of an offence under the Indian Act, directed the constables of the county of B. to take and deliver J. D. to the keeper of the common gaol of the county, to be kept there for two months, uncounty, to be kept there for two months, un-less the fine and costs imposed, including the costs of conveying to the gaol, should be sooner paid:—Held, that the justices having had jurisdiction over the offence, and the warrant being valid on its face, it afforded a complete protection to the constable executing it, and that the defendant was properly convicted of assaulting the constable while attempting to execute the warrant, notwithstanding that the awarding of the punishment may have been erroneous in directing imprisonment for the nonpayment of the fine and costs, including costs of conveying to gaol, as not authorized by the said Act. Regina v. King, 18 O. R.

Defendant's Evidence.] — On an indictment for assault and battery, occasioning actual bodily harm: — Held, that the defendant is not a competent witness on his own behalf under 43 Vict. c. 37 (D.). Regina v. Richardson, 46 U. C. R. 375.

Detention.]—The defendants were convicted for unlawfully assaulting F. V. "by standing in front of the horses and carriage driven by the said V., in a hostlie manner, and thereby foreibly detaining him, the said V., in the public highway against his will:"—Held, that the conviction was bad in stating the detention as a conclusion, and not as part of the charge, which, as shewn by the conviction, was merely standing in front of the horses, and did not amount to an assault. Regina v. McElligott, 3 O. R. 525.

Evidence of Subsequent Conduct.]—
Upon the trial of the prisoner, a school teacher, for an indecent assault upon one of his scholars, it appeared that he forbade the prosecutrix telling her parents what had happened, and they did not hear of it for two months. After the prosecutrix had given evidence of the assault, evidence was tendered of the conduct of the prisoner towards her subsequent to the assault:—Held, that the evidence was admissible as tending to shew the indecent quality of the assault, and as being in effect a part or continuation of the same transaction as that with which the same transaction as that with which the prisoner was charged. By the majority of the court:—The evidence was properly admissible as evidence in chief. Regina v. Chute, 46 U. C. R. 555.

Firing Pistol.]—To discharge a pistol londed with powder and wadding at a person within such a distance that the might have the such as the property of the property of the prisoner having done this, and a conviction for assault was upheld. Regina v. Cronan, 24 C. P. 106.

Indictment for Manslaughter.]—Under C. S. C. e. 99, s. 65, there can be no conviction for an assault unless the indictment charges an assault in terms, or a felony necessarily including it, which manslaughter is not. Where, therefore, the indictment was for manslaughter, in the form allowed by that Act, charging that defendants "did feloniously kill and slay "one D.:—Held, that a conviction for assault could not be sustained. Regina v. Dingman, 22 U. C. R. 283.

Indictment for Murder.] — Held, following Regina v. Bird, 2 Den. C. C. 94, and Regina v. Phelps, 2 Moo. C. C. 240, that on an indictment for murder the prisoner cannot be convicted of an assault under 32 & 33 Vict. c. 29, s. 51. Regina v. Ganes, 22 C. P. 185.

On an indictment for murder in the statutory form, not charging an assault, the prissoner, under 32 & 33 Vict. e, 29, s, 51, cannot be convicted of an assault; and his acquittal of the felony is therefore no bar to a subsequent indictment for the assault. Regina v. 8mith, 34 U. C. R. 552. But in this case there could have been no

But in this case there could have been no conviction for the assault, because the evidence upon the trial for murder shewed that it did not conduce to the death. Ib.

Indictment for Shooting with Intent.] — Upon an indictment for shooting with a felonious intent, the prisoner, if acquitted of the felony, may be convicted of common assault. Regina v. Cronan, 24 C. P. 106.

Insult, —The defendant was convicted of having unlawfully assaulted the complainant, who was the daughter of the convicting justice, where the only evidence was, that the defendant had, in company with one S., gone to the complainant's house at the hour of about ten o'clock p.m., and S. had knocked at the door and told the complainant that he desired to introduce the defendant, whereupon the complainant replied that they had come to insult her, and that she would have tem both arrested in the morning: — Held, that there was no evidence of an assault, and the conviction must be quashed. Regina v. Langford, 15 O.D. 5°

Insulting Language and Menaces.]—Sci. fa. upon a recognizance to keep the peace and be of good behaviour towards Her Majesty and all her liege subjects, and especially towards H. M., charging an assault and breach of the peace. For the Crown a judgment of the court of quarter sessions was proved, aftirming a conviction of defendant before magistrates on a charge of assaulting H. M. "by using insulting and abusive language to him in his own office, and on the public street, and by using his fist in a threatening and menacing manner to the face and head of said H. M.:"—Held, sufficient proof of a breach of the peace. Held, also, that defendant was properly convicted, for the offence charged amounted to an assault. Regina v. Harmer, 11 U. C. R. 555.

Quarter Sessions.)—The court of quarter sessions has power, in the case of an assault, to pronounce a sentence of fine and costs of prosecution, and imprisonment in case of default. Oceans v. Taylor, 19 C. P. 49.

Riot and Assault.)—Defendant was indicted for a riot and assault, and the jury found him guilty of a riot, but not of the assault charged:—Held, that a conviction for riot could not be sustained, the assault, the object of the riotous assembly, not having been executed, although the defendant might have been guilty of riot or joining in an unlawful assembly. Regina v. Kelly, 6 C. P. 372.

Summary Conviction.] — On motion to quash a conviction by two justices of the county of Norfolk for an assault:—Held, 1, that stating the offence to have been committed at defendant's place in the township of Townsend was sufficient, for C. S. U. C. C. S. s. 1, s.-s. 37, shews that township to be within the county; 2, that it was unnecessary to shew on the face of the conviction that complainant prayed the magistrates to proceed summarily, for the form allowed by C. S. C. c. 103, s. 50, was followed, and if there was no such request, and therefore no jurisdiction, it should have been shewn by affidavit; 3, that it was clearly no objection that the assault was not alleged to be unlawful. Regina v. Shau, 23 U. C. R. 616.

It had been previously held that the prayer for summary jurisdiction should appear on the face of the conviction, even if not necessary on the face of the information. In re Switzer and McKee, 9 L. J. 266.

A conviction for a common assault adjudged payment of a fine and costs, and in default imprisonment: — Held, good; and that it was not necessary to order that a distress warrant to compel payment be issued before imprisonment. Regina v. Smith, 46 U. C. R. 442.

4. Bigamy.

Constitutional Law — Second Marriage out of Canada — Evidence, 1—Held, that R. S. C. c. 161, s. 4, which enacts that every one who being married marries any other person during the life of the former husband or wife whether the second marriage takes place in Canada or elsewhere is guilty of felony, provided that the person who contracts such second marriage is a subject of Her Majesty, resident in Canada, and leaving the same with intent to commit the offence, is not ultra vires the Dominion legislature either as being repugnant to Imperial legislation or on any other grounds. Regina v. Brierly, 14 O. R. 595.

In order to prove the second marriage, which took place in Michigan, the evidence of the officiating minister was tendered, who shewed that during the last twenty-five years he had solemnized hundreds of marriages, that he was a clergyman of the Methodist church, that he understood the laws of Michigan relating to marriage, that he had been all the while resident in Michigan, that he had had communications with the secretary of state regarding these laws, and that this so called second marriage was solemnized by him according to the marriage laws of that State:— Held, that this evidence was admissible in proof of the validity of the second marriage, and was sufficient proof of the same, even assuming that such ought not to have been presumed. Ib.

In the case of a second marriage, it is not essential to prove the foreign law where British subjects are concerned, as in this case, Regima v. Griffin, 14 Cox C. C. 308, followed. Ib.

Conviction for biganny quashed where the secand marriage took place in a foreign country, and there was evidence that the defendant, who was a British subject, resident in Canada, left there with the intent to commit the offence. The provisions of s. 275 of the Criminal Gode, making such a marriage an offence, are ultravires the Parliament of Canada. Macleod v. Attorney-General for New South Wales, (1891) A. C. 455, followed. Regina v. Ploreman, 25 O. R. 656.

Sections 275 and 276 of the Criminal Code, 1852, respecting the offence of bigamy, are intra vires of the Parliament of Canada, In re Bigamy Sections of Criminal Code, 27 8, C. R. 401.

First Wife's Absence.] — Where the prisoner relies upon the first wife's lengthened absence, and his ignorance of her being alive, he must shew inquiries made and that he had reason to believe her dead, more especially when he has deserted her; and this, notwithstanding that the first wife may have married again. Regina v. Smith, 14 U. C. R. 565.

Proof of First Marriage. |-On a trial for bigamy, in proof of an alleged prior marriage, a deed was produced executed by the prisoner, containing a recital of the prisoner having a wife and child in England, and conveying certain lands and premises to two trustees, in trust to receive and pay over the rents and profits to such wife and child; but with a power of revocation to the prisoner. B., one of the trustees, proved that at the time of the execution of the deed the prisoner informed him that he had quarrelled with his present wife, and had a law suit with her; that the place had been bought with the first wife's money, and he wished it to go to her; and that he requested B, to act as a trustee and to receive and pay over the rents and profits, but B. never paid anything over, nor had he ever written to or heard from such alleged wife:-Held, not sufficient evidence to prove the alleged prior marriage. Regina v. Duff, 29 C. P. 255.

Proof of First Marriage.] — Upon an indictment for bigamy the first marriage must be strictly proved as a marriage de jure. Evidence of a confession by the prisoner of his first marriage is not evidence upon which he can be convicted. Regina v. Ray, 20 O. R.

Proof of Foreign Marriage.]—The witness called to prove the first marriage swore that it was solemnized by a justice of the peace in the State of New York, who had power to marry, but this witness was not a lawyer nor inhabitant of the United States, and did not state how the authority of the justice was derived:—Held, insufficient. Regina v. Smith, 14 U. C. R. 565.

Second Marriage out of Canada. The prisoner was convicted of bigamy under 52 & 33 Vict. c. 20, s. 58, which enacts that whosoever, being married, marries any other person during the life of the former husband or wife, whether the second marriage takes place in Canada or elsewhere, is guilty of felony * * provided that nothing in this section contained shall extend to any second marriage contracted elsewhere than in Canada, by any other than a subject of Her Majesty, resident in Canada, and leaving the same with the intent to commit the offence. The first marriage was contracted in Toronto. the second in Detroit, U.S. The Judge at the trial directed the jury that if the prisoner was married to his first wife in Toronto, and to the second in Detroit, they should find him guilty:—Held, a misdirection, and that the jury should have been told in addition that before they found him guilty they ought to be satisfied of his being at the time of his second marriage a subject of Her Majesty resident in Canada, and that he had left Canada with intent to commit the offence; and, held, that it was incumbent on the Crown to prove these matters. Quere, whether the trial should or should not have been declared a nullity. Regina v. Pierce, 13 O. R. 226.

Solemnization of the Marriage.]—It is not necessary that marriage shall be solemnized in a church. Where banns have been published, and no dissent then expressed by parents or guardians, the husband being under age is no objection even by the English Marriage Act; but, quare, whether that Act is in force here. Regina v. Secker, 14 U. C. R. 694.

Wife's Evidence.]—The first wife is not admissible as a witness to prove that her marriage with the prisoner was invalid. Regina v. Madden, 14 U. C. R. 588.

The evidence of the first wife is not admissible, nor is that of the second until the first marriage is proved. Regina v. Tubbee, 1 P. R. 98.

5. Bribery.

Conspiracy to Bribe Members of Legislature, 1—On demurrer to an indictment (set out in the report), for conspiracy to bring about a change in the government of the Province of Ontario, by bribing members of the Legislature to vote against the government: — Held, I. That an indictable offence was disclosed; that a conspiracy to bribe members of parliament is a misdemenaour at common law, and as such indictable. 2. That the jurisdiction given to the Legislature by R. S. O. 1837, c. 12, ss. 45, 46, 47, 48, to punish as for a contempt, does not oust the jurisdiction of the courts where the offence is of a criminal character, but that the same act may be in one aspect a contempt of the Legislature and in another aspect a misdemeanour, 3. That the Legislative assembly has no criminal jurisdiction, and hence no jurisdiction over the matter, considered as a criminal offence. 4. That the indictment, considered as a pleanding, sufficiently stated the offence intended to be charged. Regina v. Bunting, 7 O. R. 524.

Giver and Receiver.]—The giver of a bribe as well as the receiver may be indicted for bribery. North Victoria Election (D.), Cameron v. Madennan, 1 H. E. C. 584. Municipal Election.]—Where a statute relating to municipal elections made no provisions to repress bribery:—Held, that it would no doubt be an indictable offence. Regina ex rel. McKeon v. Hogg, 15 U. C. R. He-

6. Burglary.

Attempt.|—The prisoner was convicted of unlawfully attempting to steal the goods of one J. G. It appeared that he had gone out with one A. to Cookswille, and examined J. G.'s store with a view of robbing it, and that afterwards A. and three others, having arranged the scheme with the prisoner, started from Toronto, and made the attempt, but were disturbed after one had got into the store through a panel taken out by them. Prisoner saw them off from Toronto, but did not go himself:—Held, that as those actually engaged were guilty of the attempt to steal, the prisoner, under 27 & 28 Vict. c. 19, s. 9, was properly convicted. Regina v. Esmonde, 26 U. C. R. 152.

The prisoners being indicted for an attempt to commit burglary, it appeared that they had agreed to commit the offence on a certain night, together with one C., but C. was kept away by his father, who had discovered their design. The two were seen about twelve that night to come within about thirteen feet of the house, towards a picket fence in front, in which there was a gate; but without entering this gate they went, as was supposed, to the rear of the house, and were not seen afterwards. Afterwards, about two o'clock, some persons came to the front door and turned the knob, but went off on being alarmed, and were not identified:—Held, that there was no evidence of an attempt to commit the offence, no overt act directly approximating to its execution; and that a conviction, therefore, could not be sustained. Regina v. McCann, 28 U. C. R. 514.

7. Buying Offices.

Sheriff.]—The statute 5 & 6 Edw. VI. c. in force in this country under 40 Geo. III. c. 1, as part of the criminal law of England. Any act done in contravention of that statute is indictable, though not specially made so:—Quarer, whether it is also introduced by 32 Geo. III. c. 1, which adopts the law of England. "in all matters of contraversy relative to property and civil rights." 49 Geo. III. c. 126, clearly extends 5 & 6 Edw. VI. to Upper Canada, and to the office of sheriff. Foott v. Bullock, 4 U. C. R. 380, approved. Regina v. Mercer, 17 U. C. R. 602; Revina v. Moodie, 20 U. C. R. 380.

The defendant agreed with R., then sheriff of the country of Norfolk, to give him E500

The defendant agreed with R., then sheriff of the county of Norfolk, to give him £500 and an annuity of £300 a year if he would resign: R. accordingly placed his resignation in defendant's hands. The £500 was paid and certain lands conveyed to secure the annuity: and it was further agreed that in the event of the resignation being returned, and R. continuing to hold the office, the money should be repaid and the land reconveyed; but R. did not undertake in any way to assist in procuring the appointment for defendant. The defendant having been apnointed by the government in ignorance of this agreement, an information was filed against him and sei, fa. brought to cancel his patent:—Held, an illegal transaction within 5 & 6 Edw. VI., and that an information might be sustained under that Act without reference to 49 Geo. III., which clearly prohibited and made it a misdemeanour. Ib.

Semble, that the agreement would also have Semble, that the agreement would also have been an offence at common law. The ignorance of the government, which was averred in the information, as to the illegal agreement, was immaterial. Ib.

S. Coin (Offences Relating to.)

Foreign Coin. |—Section 18 of C. S. C. c. 90, makes it an offence to have possession of any coin counterfeited to resemble, or any dies for the purpose of imitating, any foreign gold or silver coin described in the 16th section of the Act. The gold or silver coin there de-scribed are any coin of coarse gold or silver resembling any coin made by the authority of sembling any continuous the actually current any foreign state and then actually current there, though not current by law in this Province. An indictment under this section alleged, that there was a certain silver coin known as a half-dollar struck by and current in the United States, though not current by law in this Province, and that the defendants had in their possession counterfeited coin, each piece resembling a piece of the current coin of the United States of the value of fifty cents, and called therein half-a-dollar, and also dies used to counterfeit the current silver coin of the United States called halfa-dollar, &c.:—Held, on demurrer, that the indictment was bad, for not alleging that the counterfeit coin which the defendants had, resembled some gold or silver coin of the United States; but that the allegation as to the dies was sufficient, without alleging that the silver coin was not current in this Pro-vince. Regina v. Tierney, 29 U. C. R. 181.

Genuine Notes—Relieved to be Counterfeit.]—A person indicted for offering to purchase counterfeit tokens of value cannot be convicted on evidence shewing that the notes which he offered to purchase were not counterfeit, but genuine bank notes unsigned, though he believed them to be counterfeit, and offered to purchase under such belief. Regina v. Attwood, 20 O. R. 574.

9. Concealment of Birth.

Temporary Concealment. —On an indictment for concealing the birth of a child, it appeared that the prisoner, who lived alone, had placed the dead body of the child behind a trunk in the room she occupied, between the trunk and the wall. On being charged with having had a child she denied it, saying she was suffering from cramps, and it was only after the doctor who was called in had informed her that he knew that she had been delivered of a child, and on being pressed by one of the women present, that she pointed out where the body was, and the woman went and got it. Until so pointed out the body could not be seen by any one in the room:—Held, that the evidence, more fully set out in the report, was sufficient to go to a jury; and the county court Judge, before whom the prisoner was tried by her cop-sent without a jury, having found her guilty, the court refused to interfere. Regina v. Pichė, 30 C. P. 409.

10. Conspiracy.

Defrauding Municipality, |—Indictment charging that defendants H., C., and D. were township councillors of East Nissouri, and F. treasurer; and that defendants intending to defraud the council of £390 of the money of said council, falsely, fraudulently, and unlawfully and fraudulently to obtain and get into their hands, and did then, in pursuance of such conspiracy, and for the unlawfull purpose aforesaid, unlawfully meet together, and fraudulently and unlawfully get into their hands £300 of the moneys of said council, then being in the hands of said T. as such treasurer as aforesaid:—Held, bad, on writ of error. Horseman v. Regina, 16 U. C. R. 543.

Defrauding Railway.]—It is a crime under s. 394 of the Code to conspire by any fraudulent menus to defraud any person, and so a conspiracy to permit persons to travel free on a railway, as alleged in these cases, would be a conspiracy against the railway company. Regina v. Defries, Regina v. Tamblyn, 25 O. R. 645.

Indictment of One of Two Conspirators. |—A conspiracy to defraud is indictable, even though the conspirators are unsuccessful in carrying out the fraud. One of two conspirators can be tried on an indictment against him alone, charging him with conspiring with another to defraud, the other conspirator being known in the country. Regina v. Fraucley, 25 O. R. 431.

signed by the firm and given to the defendant McG., and he also received money from his brother, whose only means of paying were his profits as a partner. On an indictment for conspiracy against McG. and C., a member of the firm:—Held, that there is no unvarying rule that the agreement to conspire must first be established before the particular acts of the individuals implicated are admissible in evidence, and that the letters written by the defendant McG. at Ottawa were overt acts there in furtherance of the common design, there in furtherance or the common westign, and admissible in evidence against all privy to the conspiracy for which they might be prosecuted in this Province, and as the defendant C. was, by his own admission, privy the constraints of the constraints of the common way to be constraints. to the large payment after it was made, was a matter for the jury to say whether he was not throughout a participator in the pro-ceedings: Mulcahy v. The Queen, Ir. R. 1 C. L. 12, followed. (2) The transactions, con-versations, and written communications between R. H. McG. (the partner) and his brother, the defendant McG., and the other members of the firm, were receivable in evidence in the circumstances of this case. If at first not available against both defend-ants they became so when the proof had so far advanced and cumulated as to indicate the existence of a common design. (3) Evidence as to the manner in which other contracts were obtained by the firm previous to the date mentioned in the indictment was properly received as introductory to the transaction in question. (4) Letters written by a member of the firm in the name of an employee, and purporting to be signed by him, were also properly in evidence. (5) The report of the government engineer recommending the acceptance of the firm's tender, was also properly in evidence as the object of all that was done was to obtain a report in favour of the firm. (6) Entries in the books of the firm were evidence against the defendant C., and statements prepared therefrom by an accountant were good secondary evidence in the absence of the books withheld by the defendants. Quere.—How far they were evidence against the defendant McG., who was not a member of the firm. (7) The examination of the defendant C. in a civil action arising out of these matters, he not having claimed privilege therein, could be used against him on this trial. (8) The evidence of an expert in calculating results on data supplied and proper for an engineer to work upon, admissible. (9) Evidence of a present being made to an engineer in charge of the work with the knowledge of one of the defendants was proper to be considered by the jury as was proper to be considered by the jury as casting light on the relations between the firm and that officer. (10) The use of ficti-tious tenders was a deceit, and if done to evade the results of fair competition for the contracts it was "unlawful." Regina v. Con-nolly, 25 O. R. 151.

Proof of Acting in Concert.]—Upon an indictment for conspiracy to procure by fraud the return of one F. as a member of the Legislative Assembly:—Held, that it was clearly unnecessary to prove that all the defendants, or any two of them, actually met together and concerted the proceeding carried out; it was sufficient if the jury was satisfied from their conduct and from all the circumstances, that they were acting in concert. Region v. Felloveca, 19 U. C. R. 48.

Trade-Union.]-Held, that the defendants, members of a trade-union, in conspiring to injure a non-unionist workman, B., by depriving him of his employment, were guilty of an indictable misdemeanour, and that what they conspired to do was not for the purposes of their trade combination, within the meaning of R. S. C. c. 173, s. 13, s.-s. 2; and that upon the evidence the conviction of the defendants, for unlawfully conspiring together to injure B. in his trade, and to prevent him from carrying it on, was right. Semble, also, that the indictment in this case was sufficient, Regina v. Gibson, 16 O. R. 704.

11. Desertion, (Assisting Sailors or Soldiers to Desert.)

Indictment.)—The Naval Discipline Act 29 & 30 Vict. c. 109, s. 25, authorizes a summary conviction before magistrates for this offence, but the 101st section expressly preserves the power of any court of ordinary civil or criminal jurisdiction with respect to any offence mentioned in the Act punishable by common or statute law:—Held, therefore, that defendant could be indicted under C. S. U. C. c. 100, s. 2. Regina v. Patterson, 27 U. C. R. 142.

Mutiny Act.]—The Imperial Mutiny Act does not override C. S. C. c. 100, but the latter was passed in aid of it, and is therefore in force. Regina v. Sherman, 17 C. P. 166, Held, that the punishment by fine and imprisonment imposed by the Provincial Act, stands abolished as long as the Mutiny Act is in force, and that the imprisonment can in no case exceed six calendar months; but that the power of trial by the court of oyer and terminer, under the Provincial Act, has not been taken away by the Mutiny Act, and therefore that the defendant in this case could not complain, as he had been tried by a tribunal of this kind, and sentenced to no longer imprisonment than the last mentioned period; and though a fine of 10 s, had also been imposed, this was merely nominal, in compliance with the Provincial statute, and would not entitle him to be discharged, as the court had power to pass the proper judgment if an improper one had been given. Ib.

Persuading Soldier to Desert.]—Held, that a warrant of commitment in which it was charged that the prisoner, on the 20th June, 1864. "and on divers other days and times," at the city of Kingston, did unlawfully attempt to persuade one H., a soldier in her Majesty's service, to desert, was bad, for it was impossible to say upon reading the warrant how many offences he had committed, or how the punishment was awarded. In re Mc-Ginnes, 1 C. L. J. 15.

12. Elections (Offences Connected With.)

Misdemeanour — Unlawful Voting at Elections.]—A person who does an act which a statute on public grounds has prohibited generally is liable to an indictment for misdemeanour; and it is not necessary that the statute should prohibit such an act in express language. The defendant's name appeared on the voters' list used at the election of a member of the House of Commons, but before such election he lost his right to vote, but voted at the election without having at the time he so voted the qualifications prescribed by law:—Held, that he was guilty of a criminal offence, and was rightly indicted as for a misdemeanour. Regina v. Sturdy, 23 C. L. J. S7.

Omitting Names from List.]—Denurrer to an indictment. The first count charged that the defendant, after having made the alphabetical list of persons entitled to vote. &c., made out a duplicate original of the said list, and certified by affirmation to its correctness, and delivered the same to the clerk of the peace, and that in making out the certified list so delivered to the clerk of the peace of persons entitled to vote, &c., the defendant dia feloniously omit from the said list the names, &c., which names or any or either of them ought not to have been omitted. The second count was nearly the same as the first, the word "insert" being used where the word "omit" was used in the first.—Held, that the omission charged having been from the certified list delivered to the clerk of the peace or "duplicate original," the words "said list," referring to the words "the certified list so delivered to the clerk of the peace," were a sufficient description to identify the list intended. Regina v. Sieitzer, 14 C. P. 470.

As to the objection that it did not appear

As to the objection that it did not appear that the persons whose names were charged to have been omitted, &c., were persons entitled to vote, &c.:—Held, that the words in the indictment were not a direct and specific allegation that those persons were entitled to vote. Ib. As to the objection that it was not alleged

As to the objection that it was not alleged that the list was made up from the last revised assessment roll:—Held, that by the indictment it appeared that the assessment roll referred to was the assessment roll for 1863, and that it was sufficiently stated that the alphabetical list was made up for that year, and that the Crown would be bound to prove such a list. Ib.

such a list. Ib.

Hid, further, that both counts in the indictment were bad, as they should have shewn explicitly how and in what respects these names should or should not have been on the list, by setting out that they were upon or were not upon the assessment roll (as the case might be) or at any rate were or were not upon the alphabetical list. Ib.

Personation. — Falsely personating a voter at a municipal election is not an indictable offence. Remarks as to the form of indictment in such a case. Regina v. Hogg. 25 U. C. R. 66.

Refusal to Administer Oath.]—An indictment against a deputy returning officer at an election, for refusing, on the requisition of the agent of one of the candidates, to administer the oath to certain parties tendering themselves as voters, was held bad on demurer, for omitting the name of the agent. Regiona v. Bennett, 21 C. P. 235.

gina v. Bennett, 21 C. P. 235.

In the same indictment another count charged defendant with entering and recording in the poll books the names of several parties as having voted, although they had refused to take the oath prescribed by law:—Held, not an indictable offence, being a creature of the statute, which also prescribed the penalty and the mode of enforcing it. Remarks upon the otherwise objectionable character of the indictment, in setting out in the inducement a copy of the poll book containing a number of names, while none were mentioned in the indictment itself, a reference being merely made to the "said list." B.

Riots at Elections. |- Under the statute for repressing riots at elections, no power is given to magistrates to convict summarily: the offenders must be tried by a jury. Ferguson v. Adams, 5 U. C. R. 194.

13. Embezzlement and Frauds by Trustees, Agents, and Others.

Agent.]-The prisoner was convicted upon an indictment under 4 & 5 Vict, c, 25, s, 41, charging that one W. entrusted to him for a special purpose, viz., for the purpose of exhibiting to B. and obtaining another note made by prisoner to and indorsed by B. the said prisoner then being the agent of W., a promissory note made by prisoner payable to and indorsed by B., being a valuable security, without any authority to sell, transfer, &c., or convert the same to his own use; and that he unlawfully kept and converted it to his own use. It appeared that the prisoner gave an indorsed note, payable at Kingston, in payment of goods purchased, with an agreement that in case the payee should be unable to get it discounted at Kingston, he would procure for him a new note, with the same indorsers, payable at Belleville. The payee hoorsers, payane at Benevine. The payee being unable to get it discounted at Kingston, sent the note to W. at Belleville, with instruc-tions to get a new note from the prisoner as agreed on; W. entrusted the prisoner with the note, on his promise that he would take it to the indorsers, and either return it or bring back a new note at once. The prisoner, however, kept the note, and neither returned it nor procured another, though often requested to do so both by the payee and W .:—Held, that the prisoner was not an agent within the meaning of the statute, and that the conviction must be quashed. Regina v. Hynes, 13 R. 194.

Semble, also, that it could not be said that the prisoner was intrusted with the note without any authority to transfer or pledge the same; or that his retaining it was proof of converting it to his own use. Ib.

The indictment charged that one M. en-The indictment charged that one M. entrusted to defendant, then being an agent, a promissory note of one R., for $200, for the special purpose of receiving £6 thereon from A., and that defendant, contrary to the purpose for which said note was entrusted to him, did unlawfully negotiate and convert the same to his own use. It annegated that R. the same to his own use. It appeared that R. had made the note for A.'s accommodation, and A. being indebted to one C. in £6, it was agreed that he should deposit this note with M. to secure the payment. Defendant, by C.'s order, got the note from M. on condition that he should give it up to A. on the £6 being paid. A. afterwards paid this sum to defendant, but defendant kept the note and sued R. upon it, alleging that he was entitled to do so by some arrangement with R., which the jury found was not the case, and they con-victed defendant:—Held, that the conviction could not be sustained, for defendant was not an agent within the meaning of the Act, which refers only to general agents of the descriptions specified; and—semble, that upon the evidence he was not M.'s agent, or guilty of any breach of trust towards him. Regina v. Armstrong, 20 U. C. R. 245.

Clerk.]—The prisoner being a clerk in the Bank of Upper Canada, was placed in an office apart from the bank, and entrusted with funds for the purpose of paying persons having claims upon the government, which payments were made upon the cheque of the re-ceiver-general, whose office was in the same building. While so employed a deficiency was discovered in his accounts, which he at first ascribed to a robbery, but he afterwards con-fessed that he had lent the moneys entrusted to him to various friends. It also appeared that on a certain day he had received a cheque from the receiver-general for £1439 15s, for coupons on government debentures held by the bank, and had credited himself in account with that sum as if paid out by him on the cheque, making no entry of the coupons, thus covering his deficiencies by so much, and making it appear that he had paid out the amount of the cheque in cash, when in fact he had paid nothing. The indictment contained two counts, the first charging that on, &c., the prisoner, being a clerk, then employed in that capacity by the bank, did then and there in virtue thereof receive a certain sum, to wit, £1439 15s., for and on account of the said bank, and the said money feloniously did embezzle. The second, that he as such clerk received a certain valuable security, to wit, an order for the payment of money, to wit, £1439 15s, for and on account of the said bank, and the said valuable security feloniously did embezzle. On this indictment he was convicted of embezzlement:—Held, that the prisoner had been nezziement:—Held, that the prisoner had been guilty of embezziement within 19 Vict. c. 121, s. 40; and the conviction was affirmed. Re-gina v. Cummings, 16 U. C. R. 15. Reversed on appeal, 4 L. J. 182. Held, also, that the indictment was suffi-cient in form, the omission of the conclu-sion, contra formam statuti, being no objec-tion. Ib.

tion. Ib.

Municipal Treasurer - Civil Proceed-Municipal Treasurer — Civil Proceedings.]—On an indictment against a treasurer of a county for embezzling £9 14s. 10d., received for taxes, it appeared that defendant received the money in October, 1858, and resigned in February, 1859, when his books were taken from him by the warden, although the usual time for making up his account with the county, 31st March, had not arrived. This sum was not entered in his books as received, nor was there any entry or other moneys received for taxes at a later date; but after his books had been taken he sent in a list of moneys received, including this, although before he did so it had been stated in a newspaper that this and other pay-ments were not accounted for. There was no proof that he was indebted to the county on the whole of his accounts, and it was shewn that he claimed that they were in his debt; and that the question was pending before arbitra-tors, to whom several civil suits between himself and the council had been referred. The jury found defendant guilty:-Held, that the a new trial was granted. Held, also, that the money was not improperly charged to be the money of the county, though it was received for the township of Maidstone, and was to be accounted for to it by the county. Regina v. Bullock, 19 U. C. R. 513.

Municipal Treasurer - Illegal Application of Funds.]—Semble, that the treasurer of a municipality may be indicted for an appro-priation of the funds clearly contrary to law, even though sanctioned by a resolution of the council. Municipality of East Nissouri v. Horseman, 16 U. C. R. 576. Semble, that the treasurer of a municipality might be indicted for paying a member of the council for his attendance. Ib.

Postmaster.]-One D., being postmaster at Berlin, transmitted to defendant at Toronto at Berlin, transmitted to derendant at Forence several post-office orders payable there, which defendant presented and got cashed, but it appeared afterwards that the moneys thus obtained had never been received by D. for defendant, and that frauds to a large extent had been thus committed. Defendant having been convicted upon an indictment which charged him with unlawfully, fraudulently, and knowingly obtaining from our Lady the Queen these sums, of the moneys and property of our said Lady the Queen, with intent to de fraud:—Held, that the indictment was good; that the 56th section of the Post Office Act, C. S. C. c. 31, was not applicable to the case; that the money was properly charged to be the money of the Queen, not of the postmaster; and that it was unnecessary to allege an intent to defraud any particular person, Remarks as to the extensive nature of the provision on which the indictment was framed, C. S. C. c. 92, s. 73. Semble, that defendant might also have been properly convicted under another count of the indictment, charging him with having obtained the money by false pretences. Regina v. Dessauer, 21 U. C. R. 531.

School Trustee.]—A school trustee having money in his hands not as secretary and treasurer of a board, or in any official capacity, cannot embezzle such money, his duty as trustee not requiring or authorizing him to receive it. Ferris v. Irnein, 10 C. P. 116.

14. Escape.

Prisoner Remanded.] — One W. was brought before majstrates in the custody of defendant, a constable, to answer a charge of misdemeanour, and after witnesses had been examined he was verbally remanded until the next day. Being then brought up again, and the examination concluded, the justices decided to take bail and send the case to the assizes. He said he could get bail if he had time to send for them, and the justices verbally remanded him till the following day, telling defendant to bring him up then to be committed or bailed. On that day defendant negligently permitted him to escape, for which he was convicted:—Held, that W. was in custody under the original warrant, and the matter still pending before the magistrates, until finally disposed of by commitment to custody or discharge on bail; and that the conviction was proper. Regina v. Shuttleworth, 22 U. C. R. 372.

15. Extortion.

Two Magistrates.]—Where two defendants sat together as magistrates, and one exacted a sum of money from a person charged before them with a felony, the other not dissenting:—Held, that they might be jointly convicted. Held, also, not indispensable that the indictment should charge them with having acted corruptly. Regina v. Tisalate, 20 U. C. R. 272.

16. False Pretences.

Aiding and Abetting.]—The indictment charged one B. with obtaining by false pretences, from one J. T., two horses, with intent to defraud, and that the defendant was present aiding and abetting the said B. the misteneanour aforesald to commit:—Held, good, defendant being charged as a principal in the second degree. Held, also, that the evidence set out in this case was not sufficient to sustain the charge. Regina v. Connor, 14 C. P. 529.

Altering Order.]—A municipality having provided some wheat for the poor, the defended obtained an order for 15 bushels, decribed obtained an order for 15 bushels, decribed obtained an order for 50 bushels, decribed for the property of the Attempt. — Held, that a prisoner indicted for a misdemeanour (in this case it was for false pretences) may on such indictment be convicted of an attempt to commit the offence which is a misdemeanour. Regina v. Goff, 9 C. P. 438.

Attorney-General's Fiat.]—On an indictment, for obtaining money by false pretences, was indorsed: "I direct that this indictment be laid before the grand jury. Montreal, 6th October, 1880:—By J. A. Mousseau, Q.C.; C. P. Davidson, Q.C.; L. O. Loranger, Attorney-General." Messrs, Mousseau and Davidson were the two counsel authorized to represent the Crown in all the criminal proceedings during the term. A motion was made to quash the indictment on the ground, inter alia, that the preliminary formalities required by 8, 28 of 32 & 33 Vict. c. 29, had not been observed. The chief justice allowed the case to proceed, intimating that he would reserve the point raised, should the defendant be found guilty. The defendant was convicted, and it was held, that under 32 & 33 Vict. c. 29, s. 28, the attorney-general could not delegate to the judgment and discretion of another that a bill of indictment for obtaining money by false pretences be laid before the grand jury; and it being admitted that the attorney-general gave no directions with reference to this indictment, the motion to quash should have been granted, and the verdict ought to be set aside. Abrahams v. The Queen, 6 S. C. R. 10.

Fraudulent Post-office Orders.]—One D., being post-master at Berlin, transmitted to defendant at T. several post-office orders paynibe there, which defendant presented and got crashed, but it appeared afterwards that the moneys thus obtained had never been received by D. for defendant, and that frauds to a large extent had been thus committed. Defendant was held properly convicted of having obtained these sums with intent to defraud. And, semble, that defendant might also have been properly convicted under another count of the indictment, charging him with having obtained the money by false pretences. Regina v. Desauer, 21 U. C. R. 231.

Fraudulently Procuring Court Cheque. |—Defendant was indicted for obtaining by false pretences from M. an order for the payment of $806.69, the property of P., with intent to defraud. It appeared that a suit was pending in chancery, in which the defendant, who was a solicitor, but had been struck off the rolls, was acting for P. Defendant procured V. his clerk, to write a praceipe in the name of McG., who had acted as counsel on defendant's instructions, for $806.69 of the moneys standing to the credit of the cause, and to sign McG.'s name to it. V. left it with M., the accountant in chancery, who prepared a cheque payable to P. or order. Defendant then got one H., a solicitor, to get the cheque from the accountant and sign McG.'s name to the receipt, on which H. handed the cheque from the defendant, who got P. to indorse it, and baid P. $109, keeping the rest for costs:—Held, that the defendant was rightly convicted, for be obtained the cheque from the accountant by fraud and forgery, and with intent to defraud lim; and he was not the less guilty because P. was entitled to the money, and there was no sufficient proof of intent to defraud P. Hevina v. Parkinson, 41 U. C. R. $45.

Indictment—Form.]—Held, that the indictment for false pretences in this case was clearly sufficient, as it followed exactly the form sanctioned by 18 Vict. c. 92. Regina v. Davis, 18 U. C. R. 180.

Indictment—Form—Board.]—An indictment that defendant by false pretences did obtain board of the goods and chattels of the prosecutor:—Held, bad, the term "board" being too general. Regina v. McQuarrie, 22 U. C. R. 6000.

Indictment—Variance.] — An indictment for obtaining from A. $1200 by false pretences, is not supported by proof of obtaining A.'s promissory note for that sum, which A. afterwards paid before maturity. Regina v. Brady, 25 U. C. R., 13.

Larceny.]—A defendant indicted for a misdemeanour for obtaining money under false pretences, cannot under C. S. C. c. 99, s. 62, be found guilty of larceny. That clause only authorizes a conviction for the misdemeanour though the facts proved amount to larceny. Revina v. Ewing, 21 U. C. R. 523.

Where a defendant on such an indictment

Where a defendant on such an indictment had been found guilty of larceny:—Held, that the court had no power under C. S. U. C. c. 112, s. 3, to direct the verdict to be entered as one of "guilty," without the additional words, Ib.

Money Taken to Change.]—G., the prisoner, and another, were in a hoat and they agreed to take M., the prosecutor, to meet a steamer, G. saying the charge would be onto a the teamer. The prosecutor, according to his own account, took out a $2 bill at the steamer, saying he would get it changed. Prisoner said "I'll change it." upon which the prosecutor handed it to him, and he shoved off with it. Other witnesses represented the prisoner's statement to be that he had change. The prosecutor did not say what induced him to part with the money:— Held, that a conviction could not be sustained. Regina v. Gemmell, 26 U. C. R. 312. See Regina v. Campbell, 18 U. C. R. 413.

Note of Third Person Given for Goods. —Where a person tenders to another a promisery note of a third party in exchange for goods, though he says nothing, yet he should be taken to affirm that the note has not to his knowledge been paid, either wholly or to such an extent as almost to destroy its value:—Held, that on the evidence in this case it was properly left to the jury to say whether the note for $100, which defendant gave to the prosecutor for the full amount, had or had not been paid except the value of half a barrel of flour; and that the conviction was warranted. Regina v. Davis, 18 U. C. R. 180.

Note Procured Under a Fraudulent Contract.]-The defendant, by untrue representations, made with knowledge that they were untrue, induced the prosecutor to sign a contract to pay $240 for seed wheat. The defendant also represented that he was the agent of H., whose name appeared in the con-tract. H. afterwards called upon the prosecutor and procured him to sign and deliver to him a promissory note in his, H.'s, favour for the $240. The contract did not provide for the $240. The contract did not provide rich giving of a note, and when the representations were made the giving a note was not mentioned. The prosecutor, however, swore that he gave the note because he had entered into the contract. The defendant was indicted for that he, by false pretences, fraudulently induced the prosecutor to write his name upon a paper so that it might be afterwards dealt a paper so that it might be attended with as a valuable security; and upon a second count for, by false pretences, procuring the prosecutor to deliver to H. a certain valuation. able security:—Held, upon a case reserved, that the charge of false pretences can be sus-tained as well where the money is obtained or the note procured to be given through the medium of a contract, as when obtained or procured without a contract; and the fact that the prosecutor gave a note instead of the money, by agreement with H., did not relieve the prisoner from the consequences of his fraud; the giving of the note was the direct range; the giving of the note was the direct result of the fraud by which the contract had been procured; and the defendant was prop-erly convicted on the first count as being guilty of an offence under R. S. C. c. 164. s. 8; but :- Held, that the note before it was delivered to H. was not a valuable security, but only a paper upon which the prosecutor had written his name, so that it might be afterwards used and dealt with as a valuable security; and the conviction of the defendant upon the second count could not stand. Rex v. Danger, Dears & B. C. C. 307, followed. Regina v. Rymal, 17 O. R. 227.

The defendant was indicted in the first count of the indictment for obtaining from one H. a promissory note with intent to defraud, and in the second count with inducing H. to make the said note with like intent. The evidence shewed that on 4th May, 1887, the defendant's agent called on H., and obtained from him an order addressed to defendant to deliver to H., at R. station, thirty bushels of Blue Mountain improved Seneca fall wheat, which II. was to put out on shares, and to pay defendant $240 when delivered, and to pay detellant $240 when derivered, and to equally divide the produce thereof with the holder of the order, after deducting said amount. On 23rd May, defendant called, pro-duced the order, and by false and fraudulent representations as to the quality of the wheat, and his having full control of it, its growth and yielding qualities, and that a note defend-ant requested him to sign was not negotiable, induced H, to sign the note. Evidence was received, under objection, of similar frauds on others, shewing that defendant was at the time engaged in practising a series of systematic frauds on the community. The defend-ant was found guilty and convicted:—Held, on a case reserved, that the conviction should be affirmed on the second count, as the evidence shewed that the note was signed by H. not merely to secure the carrying out of the contract contained in the order, but on the faith of the representations made; and it was immaterial that a note was taken when the order called for cash; and, also, that the evidence objected to was properly receivable. Regina v. Hope, 17 O. R. 463.

Obtaining Payment of Note Previously Sold.]—The prisoner sold a mare to B., taking his notes for purchase money, one of which was for $25$, and a chattel mortgage of the property of the previous property on the previous previous property on the previous property of the previous previous property of the previous previous property of the previous property of the previous previous Place of Offence.]—The prisoner, at Seaforth, in the county of Huron, falsely represented to the agent of a sewing machine company that he owned a lot of land, and thus induced the agent to sell machines to him, which were sent to Toronto, in the county of York, and delivered to him at Seaforth:—Held, that the offence was complete in Huron, and could not be tried in York. Regina v. Feithenheimer. 26 C. P. 139.

Promise—Existing Fact] — The prisoner, with one D., whose note he held, came to the store of H. & F., whose note he held, came to the store of H. & F., where an agreement was entered into between the parties, that D. would pay for all the goods furnished by H. & F. to the prisoner, on the amount being indorsed on his (D.s) note, held by the prisoner. The prisoner several times called at H. & F.'s store by the prisoner several times called at H. & F.'s store had the amount index and the another mentioned, obtained goods, and had the amount index wards he called without the note of the prisoner several prisoner several prisoner and directed him not to be prisoner and directed him not to pay anything more than the amounts indorsed on the note, and he never after presented the note to have the amount indorsed hereon:—Held, that there was no false representation or pretence of an existing fact, but a mere promise of defendant, which he failed to perform. Regina v. Bertles, 13 C. P. 607.

Held, that defendant (who was indicted for false pretences) could not on the indictment and evidence in this case be convicted of larceny under C. S. C. c. 99, s. 62. Quare, as to the meaning of that clause. Ib.

Registration as Physicians.]—Procuring registration as a physician under 37 Vict. c. 30 (O.), by false or fraudulent representation. See Regina v. College of Physicians, 44 U. C. R. 146.

Vacant Land Represented as Improved. |—The prisoner represented to the prosecutor that a lot of land, on which he wished to borrow money, had a brick house upon it, and thus procured a loan, when in fact the land was vacant:—Held, that he was properly convicted. Regina v. Huppet, 21 U. C. R. 281.

Valuable Security.]—The term "valuable security." used in C. S. C. c. 92, s. 72, means a valuable security to the person who parts with it on the false pretence; and the inducing a person to execute a mortgage on his property is therefore not obtaining from him a valuable security within the Act. Regina v. Brady, 26 U. C. R. 13.

See Fraud, sub-head 23—Larceny, sub-head 28.

17. False Trade Description.

Evidence.]—The defendants by an advertisement in a newspaper described certain teasets as "quadruple plate," staring that the regular price thereof was "$12.00 a set, Saturday at $6.00." The purchaser of one of the sets, before making his purchase, inquired, and was informed, by the saleswoman of the defendants, that it was one of the teasets advertised, and that the advertisement could be relied upon:—Held, (1) that the use of the words "quadruple plate" in the advertisement was an application of false trade description, in that the goods could not properly be described as such: (2) that there was evidence to shew that the advertisement applied to these goods. Regina v. T. Eaton Co., 31 O. R. 276.

Procedure.]—A prosecution under s. 448 of the Criminal Code for selling goods to which a false trade description is applied must be by indictment. Prohibition granted to restrain summary proceedings before a magistrate. Regina v. T. Eaton Co., 29 O. R. 591.

18. Forcible Entry.

Evidence of Title in Defendant.]—On an indictment for forcible entry and detainer of land, evidence of title in defendant is not admissible. Regina v. Cokely, 13 U. C. R. 521.

Inquisition.—An inquisition for a foreible entry, taken under 6 Hen. VIII. c. 9, must shew what estate the party expelled had in the premises, or the inquisition will be quashed and restitution awarded. The inquisition is also bad if it appear to the court that the defendant had no notice, or that any of the jury had not lands or tenements to the value of 40s., or that the party complaining was sworn as a witness. Mitchel v. Thompson, Rex v. McKreavy, 5 O. S. 620, 625.

Probability of Employment of Force — Restitution.]—Defendants, employees of the Great Western R. W. Co., in obedische to orders from the company, went upon the land in question, then in possession of the Stratford and Huron R. W. Co., and occupied by its employees. No actual force was used, but the latter had good reason to apprehend that sufficient force would be used to compel them to leave, and they left accordingly:—Held, that this was a foreible entry within the statutes relating thereto. The Judge at the trial having granted a writ of restitution:—Held, that such writ is in the discretion of the presiding Judge, which had been properly exercised here. Regina v. Smith, 43 U. C. R. 39.

Restitution.)—The court refused a writ of restitution after a conviction of forcible entry and detainer, where the premises were a Crown reserve, the lease of which had expired. Rex v. Jackson, Dra. 50.

The defendants applied for delay in order to give evidence of title, but on the prosecutor consenting to waive restitution in the event of conviction, they were compelled to go to trial, and were convicted. A writ of restitution was afterwards refused; though, semble, that it would in any case have been improper to delay the trial for the reason urged. Regina v. Connor, 2 P. R. 139.

Semble, also, that where the prosecutor has been examined as a witness, restitution should not be granted. Ib.

The defendant having been convicted at the quarter sessions on an indictment for forcible entry, was fined, but that court refused to order a writ of restitution, and the case was removed here by certiorari:—Held, that it was in the discretion of this court either to grant or refuse the writ; and under the circumstances it was refused. Regina v. Wightman, 29 U. C. R. 211.

19. Foreign Aggression.

Acquittal as Foreign Citizen—Subsequent Prosecution as British Subject.]—The personer being indicted under C. S. U. C. c. 98, and charged as a citizen of the United States, was acquitted on proving himself to be a British subject. He was then indicted as a subject of Her Majesty, and pleaded autrefois acquit:—Held, that the plea was not proved, for that by the statute the offence in the case of a foreigner and a subject is substantially different, the evidence, irrespective of mational status, which would convict a foreigner, being insufficient as against a subject; and the prisoner, therefore, was not in legal peril on the first indictment. Regina v. Magrath, 26 U. C. R. 385.

Proof of Citizenship—Admissions.]—
The prisoner, having been indicted under C.
S. U. C. c. 98 (3 Vict. c. 12), as a citizen of the United States, was convicted of having as such joined himself to divers other evil disposed persons, and having been unlawfully and feloniously in arms against the Queen within Upper Canada, with intent to levy war against Her Majesty. It was sworn that the prisoner had said he was an American citizen, and had beea in the American army, and there was no evidence offered to contradict this:—Held, evidence against the prisoner, as his own admissions and declarations, of the country to which he belonged. Held, also, that the evidence, set out in the report, was sufficient to prove the offence charged. The Imperial statute 14 & 12 Vict, c. 12, does not override 3 Vict, c. 12, of this Province, for the latter is re-enacted by the consolidation of the statutes, which took place in 1859. Regina v. Statein, 17 C. P. 205.

Proof of Citizenship—Carrying Arms.] —The prisoner was convicted upon an indict-ment under C. S. U. C. c. 98, containing three counts, each charging him as a citizen of the United States. The first count alleged that he entered Upper Canada with intent to levy war against Her Majesty; the second that he was in arms within Upper Canada, with the same intent: the third, that he committed an act of hostility therein, by assaulting certain of Her Majesty's subjects, with the same intent. The prisoner's own statement, the Crown rested, was that he was born in The prisoner's own statement, on which Ireland, and was a citizen of the United States. It was objected that the duty of allegiance attaching from his birth continued, and he therefore was not shewn to be a citizen of the United States—but, held, that though his duty as a subject remained, he might be-come liable as a citzen of the United States by being naturalized, of which his own dec-laration was evidence, Held, also, upon the testimony set out in the case, that there was evidence against the prisoner of the acts charged. Held, also, that even if he carried no arms, on which the evidence was not uni-form, yet being joined with and part of an armed body which had entered Upper Canada from the United States and attacked the Canadian volunteers, he would be guilty of their acts of hostility and of their intent; and that if he was there to sanction with his presence as a clergyman what the rest were doing, he was in arms as much as those who were actu-ally armed. Regina v. McMahon, 26 U. C. R.

In this case, the charge being the same as in the last, it was shewn that the prisoner haddeclared himself to be an American citizen since his arrest, but a witness was called on his behalf who proved that he was born within the Queen's allegiance: — Held, that the Crown might waive the right of allegiance, and try him as an American citizen, which he claimed to be. The fact, of the invaders coming from the United States, would be prima facie evidence of their being citizens or subjects thereof. The prisoner asserted that he came over with the invaders as reporter only; but, held, that this clearly could form no defence, for the presence of any one encouraging the unlawful design in any character, would make him a sharer in the guilt. Regina v. Lynch, 26 U. C. R. 208.

20. Foreign Enlistment.

A warrant of commitment under the Foreign Enlistment Act, 59 Geo, III. c, 69, s, 4, reciting that T. K. C. "was this day charged (not saying upon oath) before us," and without shewing any examination by the magistrates, upon oath or otherwise, into the nature of the offence, and commanding the constables or peace officers of the county of Welland to take the said T. K. C. into custody:-Held, sufficient. In re Clark, 10 L. J. 331.

A warrant of commitment under the statute, committing the prisoner until "discharged by due course of law," sufficiently complies with the statute, which provides for a com-mittal until delivered by due course of law, Ib.

A commitment under 28 Vict. c. 2, s. 1, stat. ing the offence " for that he on, &c., at, &c., did attempt to procure A. B. to serve in a warlike or military operation in the service of the government of the United States of America," omitting the words, "as an officer, soldier, or sailor," &c.:—Held, bad. In re Bright, 1 C. L. J. 240.

Held, that a judgment for too little is as bad as a judgment for too much, and so a condemnation to pay $100 and costs, when the statute creating the offence imposes a penalty of $200 and costs, is bad. Ib.

Held, that a commitment on a judgment for a penalty and costs, not stating in the body of the commitment or a recital in it the amount of costs, is bad. Ib.

Quere, is the jurisdiction of the officers named in 28 Vict. c. 2, a general or a local one. Ib.

Held, 1. That to charge a prisoner in a warrant of commitment issued under 59 Geo. III. c. 69, with attempting or endeavouring to hire, retain, engage, or prevail on to enlist, a soldier in the land or sea service, for or under or in aid of "Abraham Lincoln, President of or in and of Abraham Lancoln, it the United States of America, and in the ser-vice of the Federal States of America," is sufficiently certain; 2. that the foreign power was sufficiently defined in the warrant, and one whose existence the court is bound judi-cially to notice, viz.: "The President of the United States of America"—the words relat-ing to the Federal States being rejected as surplusage; 3. that in such a warrant it is unnecessary to allege that the accused is British subject, the law presuming him to be such till the contrary appears; 4, that it was unnecessary in the warrant to negative a license from Her Majesty to do the act or acts complained of; 5, that the direction to the gaoler to keep the prisoner in the common gaol "until he shall thence be discharged by due course of law, or good and sufficient sureties be received for his appearance," &c., was sufficient, the latter words being read as surplusage; 6, that "I," in the text of the warrant, might be read as "I and I," so as to read "Given under my and my" hand and seal, &c., it being presumed that both magistrates used one and the same seal. In re Smith, 10 L. J. 247.

Held, 1. that a warrant of commitment on a conviction had before a police magistrate for the town of Chatham, in Upper Canada, under 28 Vict. c. 2, averring that on a day named, "at the town of Chatham, in said county, he the said A. S. did attempt to procure A. B. to enlist to serve as a soldier in the army of the United States of America, contrary to the statute of Canada in such case made and provided;" and then proceeding: "And whereas the said A. S. was duly convicted of the said offence before me the said police magistrate, and condemned," &c., sufficiently shewed jurisdiction. In re Smith, 1 C. L. J. 241.

2. That the direction to take the prisoner "to the common gool at Chatham," the war-rant being addressed "to the constables, &c., in the county of Kent, and to the keeper of the common gool at Chatham, in the said ounty." was sufficient. Ib.
3. That the warrant as above set out sufficounty.

ciently contained an adjudication as to the offence, though by way of recital. *Ib.*4. That the words "to enlist to serve "do not shew a double offence, so as to make a warrant of commitment bad on that ground.

1b.
5. That the offence created by the statute was sufficiently described in the warrant as above set out. Ib.

6. That the warrant was not bad as to duration or nature of imprisonment. Ib.

That the amount of costs was sufficiently fixed in the warrant of commitment. Ib. 8. That there is power to commit for non-payment of costs. 16. That the statute does not require both imprisonment and money penalty to be awarded, but that there may be both or either. Ib.

A warrant of commitment reciting that F. M. was charged on the oath of J. W.. "for that he F. M. was this day charged with enlisting men for the United States army, offering them $350 each as bounty," without charging any offence with certainty, and without stating that the men enlisted were subjects of Her Majesty, and without shewing that J. W. was unauthorized by license of Her Majesty to enlist :- Held, bad. In re Martin, 3 P. R.

The Imperial statute, 59 Geo. III. c. 69, for procuring and endeavouring to procure enlistments in this country for the army of the United States:—Held, to be in force in this Province; and a conviction under it sustained. Regina v. Schram, Regina v. Anderson, 14 C. P. 318.

21. Forgery.

Agreement to Sell—Form of Indict-ment.]—Indictment for offering, &c., the fol-lowing instrument knowing it to be forged:— "I, J. H., do agree to W. C., of W., the full rite and privilege of all the whiteoke and elm and hickory lying and standing on lot 26, south part, on the 3rd confession Plymp, for the sum of $30, now paid to H. by C., the receipt whereof is hear by me acknowledged." The jury having convicted the prisoner :-Held, upon a case reserved, 1, that the instrument forged being set out in hee verba in the indictment, the description of its legal character would be surplusage, and was unnecessary; 2. that under s. 29 C. S. C. c. 99, it is not necessary to allege an intent to defraud in an indictment for forgery; 3, that the averment of the offence being contra formam statuti was immaterial, (the objection being that there was nothing in the indictment, which contained this averment, to shew that the offence was against any statute); 4. that the instrument might be construed as an agreement or contract to sell the timber, or a receipt for the payment of money, and in either case came within 22 Vict. c. 94: and the conviction was sustained. Regina v. Carson, 14 C. P. 309.

Alteration of Bank Note.]-On an indictment for feloniously offering, &c., a forged note commonly called a provincial note, issued under the authority of 29 & 30 Vict, c. 10, for the payment of 85, it appeared that the prisoners had passed off a note purporting to wing fact the figure 5 had been pasted over the interest, and the word five over the word one. No evidence was given that the note so altered was a note issued by the government of Canada, but it was shewn further, that when the attention of the prisoners was called to the alteration they said "give it back if it is not good," and that on its being placed on the counter one of them took it up and refused to return it, or substitute good money for it:—lifed, that looking at the particular character of the forcery—i.e., an alteration—and the conduct of the prisoners, the onus was on them to dispute the validity of the writing, it is invalidity would be a defence; and a conviction was sustained. Regina v. Portis, 40 U. C. R. 214.

Alteration of Dominion Note.]—Held, that the alteration of a $2 Dominion note to one of the denomination of $20, such alteration consisting in the addition of a cypherater the figure two, wherever that figure occurred in the margin of the note, was forgery, and that the prisoner was rightly conviced therefor, Regima v, Bail, 7 O. R. 228.

Alteration of Indorsed Note, I—A promissory note had been drawn by the prisoner, payable two mouths after date to the order of one S., and afterwards indorsed by said S., and the prisoner then altered the note from two to three months, and discounted it at a bank. It was objected that the forgery or utering, if any, was a forgery of or the uttering of a forged indorsement (the note having been made by himself), and that there was no legal evidence of an intent to defraud:—I leid, that the altering the note while in his possession after it was indorsed was a forgery of a note, and not of an indorsement; and that the passing of the note to the third party, who was thereby defrauded, was sufficient evidence of an intent to defraud. Regina v. Craig, 7 (2, P. 23).

Alteration of Cheque.]—Bank of Hamilton v. Imperial Bank, 27 A. R. 590.

Assessment Roll.] — An indictment will not lie for forging or altering the assessment roll for a township deposited with the clerk. Regina v. Preston, 21 U. C. R. 86.

Bank Note.]—A forged paper purporting to be a bank note, is a promissory note within 10 & 11 Vict. c. 9, even though there is no such bank as that named. Regina v. McDonald, 12 U. C. R. 543.

Corroboration.] — Semble, that on the cridence, stated in the report, the testimony of the prosecutor, whose name had been forged to a note, was sufficiently corroborated. Regiona v, McDonald, 31 U. C. R, 337.

Prisoner was indicted for forging an order for the delivery of goods. The only witnesses examined were the person whose name was forged, and the person to whom the order was addressed, and who delivered the goods thereon; and there was no corroborative testimony:—Held (under 10 & 11 Vict. c. 9, 8, 21), not sufficient evidence. Regina v. Giles, 9 C. P. S4.

On an indictment for forgery of the prosecutor's name as indorser of a promissory note, the prosecutor swore that he had not indorsed the note: that it was not his writing: that he had never authorized the prisoner to sign his name to the note, and that he was himself unable to write his name, being in fact a marksman; and a son of his also swore that his father was unable to write his name, and was a marksman. The prosecutor also swore that on other occasions he had indorsed for the prisoner, making his mark, and had sometimes authorized the prisoner to write his name :- Held, that a sufficient prima facie case was thus made out: that the prosecutor's case was thus made out; that the prosecutors evidence was duly corroborated within the meaning of 32 & 33 Vict. c. 19, s. 54 (D.); and that the onus was then on the prisoner to shew that he was authorized to use or write the prosecutor's name. Regina v. Bannerman, 43 U. C. R. 547.

By s. 218 of R. S. C. c. 174, "the evidence of any person interested or supposed to be interested in respect of any deed, writing, instrument, or other matter given in evidence on strument, or other natter given in evidence on the trial of any indictment or information against any person for any offence punishable under the 'Act respecting forgery,' shall not be sufficient to sustain a conviction for any of the said offences unless the same is corof the said offences unless the same is cor-roborated by other legal evidence in support of such prosecution." The prisoner was in-dicted for forgery in feloniously uttering a cheque signed by H. J. & Co. on the Quebec Bank, which he had altered from $400 to $1,400. The evidence in support of the forgery was that of J., who though a member of firm when the cheque was made, had ceased to be such at the time of the trial, and who had been released by his partner from all liability and disclaimed any interest in the cheque. There was some evidence of the liabilities of the firm to creditors at the time of J.'s withdrawal :- Held, that J. was not a person interested, or supposed to be interested. within the meaning of the Act; and his evidence did not require corroboration. Regina v. Hagerman, 15 O. R. 598.

The defendant was convicted of uttering, with knowledge that it was a forgery, the indorsement of the name "Taylor Brothers" upon a promissory note, which had been discounted by a bank, but given up and destroyed before maturity, upon security being furnished to the bank. The manager of the bank and the business partner of the defendant gave evidence of the forgery, and the three members of the firm of Taylor Brothers were also called as witnesses, and denied having indorsed the note, or having any knowledge of it:—Held, that the members of the firm of Taylor Brothers were not persons interested or supposed to be interested in respect of the indorsement, within the meaning of R. S. C. c. 174, s. 218, and their evidence therefore was sufficient to corroborate that of the other witnesses. Regina v. Selby, 16 O. R. 255.

On the trial of an indictment for uttering a forged note evidence was given by a person who had no interest therein of the note being forged. The wife of the person on whose behalf the note was received, and who, when receiving it, was in attendance in her husbund's shop as his agent, proved the uttering. Per MacMahon, J. — The note having been proved to be forged by a person having no interest, the question as to corroboration of the wife's evidence, on the ground of interest, did not arise under s, 218 of the Criminal Procedure Act, R. S. C. c, 174. Per Rose, J.—The wife had no interest in the forged document; her interest, if any, was to prove its genuineness; but in any event there was abundant evidence of corroboration. Regina V, Rhodes, 22 O. R. 489.

Where on a charge of forgery, in addition to evidence of one witness that the forged documents were written by the accused, it was also proved by the same witness that certain names in a book written by the same hand as the forged documents, were in the handwriting of the accused:—Held, that this was not sufficient corroboration under s. 684 of the Criminal Code, 1892. Regina v. McBride, 26 O. R. 639.

Deed Executed in Name of Another.]—Semble, that the execution of a deed by prisoner in the name of and representing himself to be another, may be forgery, if done with intent to defraud, even though he had a power of attorney from such person, if he fraudulently conceal the fact of his being only such attorney, and assume to be the principal. In re Region v. Gould, 20 C. P. 154.

Evidence of Other Forgeries. |—The prisoner was indicted along with W.; the first count charging W. with forging a circular note of the National Bank of Scotland; and the second with uttering it knowing it to and the second with utering it anothing it to be forged. The prisoner was charged as an accessory before the fact. Evidence was ad-mitted shewing that two persons named F, and H, had been tried and convicted in Montreal of uttering similar forged circular notes, printed from the same plate as those uttered printed from the same plate as those uttered by W.; that the prisoner was in Montreal with F., they having arrived and registered their names together at the same hotel, and occupied adjoining rooms; that after F. and H. had been convicted on one charge, they admitted their guilt on several others; and that a number of these circular notes were found on F. and H., which were produced at the trial of the prisoner. Before the evidence trial of the prisoner. Before the evidence was tendered, it was proved that the prisoner was in company with W., who was proved to have uttered similar notes. Evidence was also admitted shewing that a large number of the notes were found concealed at a place near where the prisoner had been seen, and were concealed, as was alleged by him, after W. had been arrested :-Held, that the evidence was properly received in proof of the guilty know-ledge of the prisoner. Regina v. Bent, 10 O.

Pictitious Note Found by Prisoner.]
—Defendant was convicted at the quarter sessions on an indictment for uttering a promissory note purporting to be made by one F., for £4 10s., with intent to defraud, knowing it to be forged. It appeared that some boys had been amusing themselves with writing promissory notes and imitating persons' signatures, and among them was one with F.'s name. The papers were put into the fire, but this note was carried up the chimney by the draught and fell into the street, where it was picked up by defendant. A person who was with him at the time, said that he thought it was not genuine, and advised him to destroy it; but defendant kept it, and afterwards passed it off, telling the person who took it that it was good:—Held, that defendant was guilty of a felonious uttering, but the convic tion was quashed, for the indictment was defective in not stating expressly that the note was forged, or that defendant uttered it as true; and the case should not have been tried at the quarter sessions. Regina v. Dunlop, 15 U. C. R. 118.

Incomplete Note - Indorsement before Signature. | -W., a division court bailiff, had an execution against the prisoner and H. M., and to settle the same they arranged to give a note made by A. M. and indorsed by A. D. M. W. then drew up the note in question, which was payable to the order of A. D. M., and which he handed to the prisoner, who took it away to obtain, as he said, A. D. M.'s indorseaway to obtain, as he said, A. D. M.'s indorse-ment, returning shortly afterwards with the name A. D. M. indorsed thereon. He then handed the note to A. M., who signed his name as maker and handed it to W., who took it away with him. The indorsement was a for-gery. The prisoner was indicted for forging the indorsement on a promissory note, and convicted:—Held, following Regina v. Butterwick, 2 M. & Rob. 196, Regina v. Mopsey, 11 Cox 143, and Regina v. Harper, 7 Q. B. D. 78, that the conviction could not be sustained on the indictment as framed. The instrument, by reason of the maker's name not being signed to it at the time of the forgery, was not a promissory note; and neither could the conviction be sustained on the count for uttering, as after it was signed by A. M. it was never in the prisoner's possession, but was delivered by A. M. to witness. Regina v. McFee, 13 O.

Incomplete Note — Payee's Name in Rlunk.]—Where, in an instrument in the form of a promissory note, a blank is left for the payee's name, it is not a complete note so as to support a conviction for the forgery thereof, or for the forgery of an indorsement thereon; nor is it a document, writing or instrument within ss, 46, 47, or 50 of R. S. C. e. 165. Semble, a conviction might have been sustained on an indictment for forgery at common law. Region v. Cormack, 21 O. R. 213.

Order for Payment of Money. |---' Mr. y please let the bearer, W. T., have the amount of ε10, and you will oblige me. B. B. Mitchell: '--Held, on an indictment for forgery, to be an order for the payment of money, not a mere request. Regina v. Tuke, 17 U. C. R. 296.

"Mr. McK., Sir,—Would you be good enough as for to let me have the loan of $10 for one week or so, and send it by the bearer immediately, and much oblige your most humble servant. I. Almiras, P. P.:"—Held, not an order for the payment of money, but a mere request. Regina v. Reopelle, 20 U. C. R. 260.

"83.50. Carick, April 10th, 1863. J. McL., tailor.—Please give Mr. A. S. to the amount of 83.50, and by doing so you will oblige me."
 —Held, an order for the payment of money, and not a mere request. Regina v. Steel, 13 C. P. 619.

A writing not addressed to any one may be an order for the payment of money, if it be shewn by evidence for whom it was intended. In this case the order was for $15, in favour of "bearer or R. R.," and purported to be signed by one B. The prisoner in person presented it to M., representing himself to be the payee, and a creditor of B.;—Held, that it might fairly be inferred to have been intended for M.; and a conviction for forgery was sustained. Regina v. Parker, 15 C. P. 15.

Quarter Sessions.]—The quarter sessions has no jurisdiction to try the offence of forgery. Regina v. McDonald, 31 U. C. R.

Telegram.]—The prisoner, at Woodstock, with intent to defraud, wrote out a telegraph message purporting to be sent by one C, at Hamaton, to McK, at Woodstock, authorizing McK, to furnish the prisoner with funds, which was delivered to McK, and upon the faith of it McK. indorsed a draft for 885 drawn by the prisoner on C, on which the prisoner was guilty of forgery. Regina v. Steacart, 25 C. P. 440.

Uttering Forged Note.] — The defendant laid an information charging that the plaintiff "came to my house and sold me a promissory note for the amount of ninety dolhars, purporting to be made against J. M. in favour of T. A., and I find out the said note to be a forgery." Upon this a warrant was issued reciting the offence in the same words, and the plaintiff was under it apprehended and brought before the justice of the peace who issued it, and by him committed for trial by a warrant reciting the offence in like terms, The plaintiff was tried for forging and utter-ing the note, and was acquitted:—Held, that the information sufficiently imported that the plaintiff had uttered the forged note, knowing it to be forged, to give the magistrate jurisdiction, and therefore the warrant was not void, and an action of trespass was not maintainable against the defendant, even upon evidence of his interference with the arrest. Semble, that if the offence were not sufficiently laid in the information to give the magistrate jurisdiction, and the warrant were void, as action for malicious prosecution would nevertheless lie. Anderson v. Wilson, 25 O. R. 91.

22. Fortune Telling.

Imperial Act—Decoy.]—The statute 9 Geo, II, c. 5 is in force in this Province. By the statute the mere undertaking to tell fortunes constitutes the offence; and a conviction was affirmed where it was obtained upon the evidence of a person who was not a dupe or victim, but a decoy. Regina v. Milford, 20 O. R. 30d.

23. Fraud.

Fraudulently Depriving of the Use of Property—Disputed Claim—Magistrate's durisdiction.]—The defendant sold to C., amongst other things, a horse-power and belt, part of his stock in the trade of a butcher, in which he also sold a half interest to C. The larse-power had been hired from one M., and at the time of the sale, the term of hiring had of expired. At its expiry M. demanded it, and C. claimed that he had purchased it from defendant. The defendant then employed a man to take it out of the premises where it was kept, and deliver it to M., which he did.

The defendant was summarily tried before a police magistrate and convicted of an offence against 32×33 Vict. c, 21, s. $110 \cdot (D.)$:— Held, that the conviction was bad, there being no offence against that section, and no jurisdiction in the police magistrate to try summarily; and that it was bad also in not shewing the time and place of the commission of the offence. Remarks upon the improper use of the criminal law in aid of civil rights. $Regina v. Voung, 5 \cdot 0.$ R. 400.

Fraudulent Removal of Goods by Tenant—Defendant Compelled to Testify.]—The fraudulent removal of goods, under 11 Geo. 71, c. 19, s. 4, is a crime, and a conviction therefor was consequently quashed, with costs against the landlord, because the defendant had been compelled to give evidence on the prosecution. Regina v. Lackie, 7 O. R. 431.

A tenant is not liable to prosecution under 11 Geo. II. c. 19, for the fraudulent and clandestine removal of goods from the demised premises, unless such goods are his own property, nor can goods which are not the tenant's property be distrained off the premises. Martin v. Hutchinson, 21 O. R. 388.

Fraudulent Transfer to Defeat Creditors. I—Upon an indictment under 22 Vict, c. 96, for making an assignment of personal property to defraud creditors:—Held, that a money bond for the conveyance of land is personalty seizable on an execution under 13 & 14 Vict, c. 53, and 20 Vict, c. 57; and, further, that a transfer made to a creditor, who accepted the same in full satisfaction and discharge of his debt, did not render the assignor less liable under this indictment. Regina v. Potter, 10 C. P. 39.

An action by the party aggrieved to recover the moiety of the penalty imposed by s. 3 of 13 Eliz. c. 5, may be joined with an action to set aside a fraudulent transfer under that Act, in this case the transfer of certain promissory notes. Bills and notes are, by virtue of the legislation passed since 13 Eliz., goods and chattels within that Act. Section 28 of R. S. C. c. 173 applies only to the concluding part of said s. 3, namely, that relating to imprisonment and conviction, &c. Millar v. McTaygart, 20 O. R. 617.

Under s. 28 of R. S. C. c. 173, every one who makes or causes to be made, amongst other things, any assignment, sale, &c., of any of his goods and chattels, with intent to defraud his creditors, or any of them, is guilty of a misdemeanour:—Held, it is not essential, under the Act, that the debt of the creditor should, at the time of the sale, &c., be actually due. Replan v. Henry, 21 O. R. 113.

Receiving Money on Terms.]—Section 30s of the Criminal Code does not mean "terms imposed by the person paying the money," but "terms on which the defendant when he receives it, holds it," Regina v. Unger, 14 C. L. T. Occ. N. 204.

See False Pretences, sub-head 16—Larceny, sub-head, 28, 24. Frontier (Outrages upon).

Restoration of Property.] — Under s. 11 of 28 Vict. c. 1, for preventing outrages on the frontier, the court can only order restoration of property seized when it appears that the seizure was not authorized by the Act; and in this case, on the facts stated, they refused to interfere. In re Propeller "Georgian," 25 L', C. R. 319.

25. Gaming.

Becoming Custodian of Wager.]—The Act 40 Vict. c. 31 (D.), initialled an Act for the repression of betting and pool selling, does not forbid betting, and does not apply to stake-holders in any of the three cases mentioned in s. 2. Regina v. Dillon, 10 P. R. 352.

Becoming Custodian of Wager—Election—Stakeholder—Accessory, 1—R. S. C. c. 123, s. 9, provides inter alia that "everyone who becomes the custodian or depositary of any money " se staked, wagered or pledged upon the result of any political or numicipal election " se is guilty of a misdemeanour" and a sub-section says that "nothing in this section shall apply to " se se bets between individuals: "—Held, reversing 21 A. R. 55, that the sub-section is not to be construed as meaning that the main section does not apply to a depositary of money bet between individuals on the result of an election: such depositary is guilty of a misdemennour, and the bettors are accessories to the offence and liable as principal offenders. R. S. C. c. 145. Regina v. Dillon, 10 P. R. 552, overruled. After the election when the money has been paid to the winner of the bet, the loser cannot recover from the stakeholder the amount deposited by him, the parties being in pari delicto and the illegal act having been performed. Walsh v. Trebilcock, 23 S. C. R. 695.

Becoming Custodian of Wager—Restruction to Events to take Place in Canada, —It. 8, C. c. 150, 8, 9, provides that "every one who becomes the custodian or depositary of any money, property, or valuable thing staked, wagered, or pledged upon the result of any political or municipal election, or of any race, or of any contest or trial of skill or endurance of man or beast, is guilty of a misdemenour:"—Held, that this enactment does not extend to the result of any election, race, contest, &c. to take place outside of Canada, Wells v. Porter, 3 Scott 141, followed. Regina v. Smitg., 22 O. R. 686.

Betting—Horse Race in Forcign Country, |—The defendant occupied a tent in a village open to and frequented by the public, in which there was a telegraph wire to an incorporated race track in the United States, where horse racing and betting were legalized. In the tent was a blackboard on which were the names of the horses and jockeys taking part in the race, with the weights and the track quotations, and as the race was being run, an operator called off the progress thereof, giving the name of the winner and of the second and third horses, and marked them on the board. Duplicate tickets were furnished in the tent to applicants, which requested defendant to telegraph one B, at the race track to place a certain amount of money on a horse named by the applicant at track quotations, and upon transmission thereof, the applicant all liability on defendant's part should cease. On the tickets being handed in, one of them was stamped with the date of its receipt and returned to the applicant. The aggregate amount of the money so received was notified by telegram to B. and placed by him before the race with bookmakers on the track. B. paying defendant a percentage on the moneys received for him and ten cents on each application. B. had an agent in another part of the village, whom he furnished with money to pay any winnings by remitting same to him or giving him orders on defendant for stated sums :- Held, that the defendant was properly convicted under ss. 197 and 198 of the Code, of keeping a common betting house. the place in question being opened and kept for the reception of money by defendant on behalf of B, as consideration for an undertaking to pay money thereafter to the depositor on event of a horse race. Regina v. Giles, 26 O. R. 586.

Betting-Horse-race in Foreign Country-Telegraphing Bets. | — A bank, a telegraph office, and another office were simultaneously receipts therefor in the name of a person in the bank by various persons, who were given receipts therefor in the name of a person in the United States, which receipts were taken to the telegraph office, where information as to horse-races being run in the United States was furnished to the holders of the receipts, who telegraphed instructions to the person there, for whom the receipts were given to place and who placed bets equivalent to the amounts deposited, on horses running in the races, and, on their winning, the amounts won were paid to the holders of the receipts at the third office by telegraph instructions from the persons making the bets in the United States: -Held, on the evidence and admissions to the above effect, that the defendant, who kept the telegraph office, was properly convicted of keeping a common betting house under ss. 197-198 of the Criminal Code. Regina v. Osborne, 27 O. R. 185.

Card-playing—Penalty.]—The defendant was convicted by the police magistrate for the city of Toronto for playing at a game of cards called faro, contrary to the statute 12 Geo. II. c. 28, and sentenced to pay £50 sterling, the benalty thereby imposed:—Held, that under 27 Geo. III. c. 1, s. 2, the jurisdiction of justices of the pence in such cases was taken away, and in lieu thereof the recovery of such a penalty was to be by civil action. The conviction was therefore quashed:—Semble, that the defendant could have been convicted under the Municipal Act, 46 Vict, c. 18, s. 49, s.-s. 33, against gambling, and the by-law of the municipality passed with reference thereto. Regima v. Matheson, 4 O. R. 559.

Confiscation of Gaming Instruments, Moneys, &c.—Evidence.]—Section 575 of the Criminal Code, authorizing the issue of a warrant to seize gaming implements on the report of "the chief constable of deputy chief constable" of a city or town, dees not mean that the report must come from an officer having the exact title mentioned but only from one exercising such functions and duties as will bring him within the designation used in the statute. Therefore, the warrant could properly issue on the report of the deputy high constable of the city of Montreal. The warrant would be good if issued on the report of a person who filled de facto the office of deputy high constable though he was not such de jure. In an action to revendicate the moneys so seized the rules of evidence in civil matters.

prevailing in the Province would apply, and the plaintiff could not invoke "The Canada Evidence Act, 1893," so as to be a competent witness in his own behalf in the Province of Quebec, O'Neil v, Attorney-General of Cangda, 26 S. C. R. 122.

Guessing Contest.]—The defendant, being the proprietor of a newspaper, advertised in it that whoever should guess the number nearest to the number of beans which had been placed in a sealed glass far in a window on a public street, should receive a $20 gold piece; the person making the next nearest guess, a set of harness; and the person making the third nearest guess, a $5 gold piece; any person desiring to compete to buy a copy of the newspaper, and to write his name and the supposed number of the beans on a coupon to be cut out of the paper. The defendant was convicted of a contravention of C. S. C. c. 95; —Held, that as the approximation to the number depended as much upon the exercise of skill and judgment as upon chance, this was not a "mode of chance" for the disposing of property within the meaning of the Act. Regions v. Dodds, 4 O. R. 390.

Per Hagarty, C. J.—The Act applied to the unlawful disposal of some existing real or per-

For Hagarty, C. J.—The Act applied to the unlawful disposal of some existing real or personal property. In this case there were no specific gold coins, nor was there any particular set of harness, to be disposed of, which might have been forfeited pursuant to s, 3 of the Act, and therefore the conviction was bad on that ground. Ib.

Guessing Contest.] — The defendant phaced in his shop window a globular glass jar, securely sealed, containing a number of buttons of different sizes. He offered to the person who should guess the number nearest to the number of buttons in the jar a pony and cart, which he exhibited in his window, stipulating that the successful one should buy a certain amount of his goods:—Held, that as the approximation of the number of buttons depended upon the exercise of judgment, observation, and mental effort, this was not a "mode of chance" for the disposal of property within the meaning of the Act:—Quere, whether defendant should not get the costs of quashing conviction made to test the law in such a case. Regina v. Jamieson, 7.0. R. 149.

Keeping a Common Gaming House Offence in linited States.]—In a betting game called "policy." the actual betting and payment of the money, if won, took place in the United States; all that was done in Canada being the happening of the chance, on which the bet was staked, by means of implements operated in the house of defendant:—Held, there was no offence under s. 198 of the Criminal Code of 1892 of keeping a common gaming house within that section. Regina v. Wettman, 25 O. R. 459.

Keeping a Common Gaming House— Penalty.]—A conviction under the provisions of the Act respecting Gaming Houses, R. S. C. e. 15s. s. 6, provided, in addition to fine and imprisonment, for distress in default of payment of the fine:—Held, that the punishment being in excess of that warranted by the statute, the conviction must be quashed:—Held, also, that, as the maximum penalty prescribed for the offence was imposed, the defect in the conviction in the provision for distress was not cured under R. S. C. c. 178, ss. 87 and 88, Regina v. Sparham. 8 O. R. 570, approved of. Regina v. Logan, 16 O. R. 335. Keeping a Common Gaming House— Contracts on Margin. —The Act 51 Vict. c. 42, s. 1 (D.), makes it an indictable offence to make or authorize contracts by way of gaming or wagering on the rise or fall of stocks and merchandise, and to habitually frequent any office or place where such contracts are made. By s. 3, the keepers of such places are to be held to be keepers of common gaming houses, the place of business to be a common gaming-house, and the instruments used in-struments of gaming, "the whole within the meaning of R. S. C. c. 158, the Act respecting Gaming Houses, and shall be subject to all the provisions of the said Act." Section 6 of Section 6 of R. S. C. c. 158 enacts that persons playing or looking on while others are playing, are guilty of an offence under the Act; and by s. 9, authority is given to the police magistrate to try offences under the Act summarily. An information under R. S. C. c. 158, charging the defendant and others with unlawfully playing in a common gaming house, was heard before police magistrate summarily, and the defendant convicted. The evidence shewed that the defendant was merely in a place where it was alleged that contracts in violation of 51 Vict. c. 42, were made: — Held, that s. 3 of Vict. c. 42, were made: Aren, that s. o o. 51 Vict. c. 42 (D.), was not incorporated into ss. 4 and 3 of R. S. C. c. 158, so as to make the fact of a person being in an office or place of business where such prohibited contracts were made equivalent to playing or looking on while others were playing in a common gaming house and so punishable by summary convictions. Regina v. Murphy, 17 O. R. 201.

Keeping Disorderly House — Common Gaming House, 1—10 order to obtain under s. 198 of the Code a conviction of a person for keeping a disorderly house, to wit a common gaming house, as defined by s. 196 (a), the Crown must shew by satisfactory evidence that the person charged is deriving some gain or profit from keeping the house, room or place, and allowing games of chance to be played therein. Regina v. Sanders, 20 C. L. T. Occ. N. 213.

Lottery—Art Association.]—The defendant, an agent of an incorporated art society, was convicted by a police magistrate for that he did "unlawfully sell and barter a certain card and ticket for advancing, selling, and otherwise disposing of certain property, to wit, pictures, or one-half the stated value of each picture in money, by lots, tickets, and modes of chance: "—Held, that "property" in s.-s. 1 (b) of s. 205 of the Code is not necessarily to be read "specific property," the essence of the enactment being in the disposal of any property by any mode of chance. Held, also, there being evidence of an option reserved to the society to give money instead of pictures to the winning tickets, that this destroyed the privilege in favour of works of art under s.-s. 6 (c) of the Code. Regina v. Lorrain, 28 O. R. 123.

Lottery.] — The Provincial Legislatures have no jurisdiction to permit the operation of lotteries forbidden by the criminal statutes of Canada. Lassociation St. Jean-Baptiste de Montreal v. Brault, 30 S. C. R. 598.

Municipal Regulations.]—A clause in a by-law that no gambling, profane swearing, &c., should be permitted in any licensed ravern or shop:—Held, authorized by the Municipal Act, 36 Vict. c. 48, s. 379, s.-ss. 33, 36, and by the general police power of the council.

In re Brodie and Town of Bowmanville, 33 U. C. R. 580.

Sale of Betting Privileges on Race Course, |—The object of the Legislature in enacting the latter part of s.-s. 2 of s. 204 of the Criminal Code apparently was to reserve the race courses of incorporated associations as places where bets might be made during the actual progress of a race meeting, without the betters being subject to the penalties of that section. An agreement for the sale of betting and gaming privileges at a race meeting by an unincorporated association, who are the lessees of an incorporated association the owners of the race course, is not illegal. Stratford Turf Association v. Fitch, 28 O. R. 579.

Sale of Goods.]-Section 2 of R. S. C. c. 159 prohibits the sale of "any lot, card, or ticket, or other means or device for * * selling or otherwise disposing of any property, real or personal, by lots, tickets, or any mode of chance whatsoever." The complainant went to the defendant's place of business, and having been told by the defendant that in certain spaces on the two shelves there were in cans of tea a gold watch, a diamond ring, or $20 in money, he paid one dollar and received a can of tea, which contained an article of small value he handed the can back, paid an additional fifty cents, and received another can, which als contained an article of small value. He hand He handed this can back also, paid another fifty cents. and secured another can, which also contained an article of small value. He then refused to pay any more money, and went away, taking the third can and the article in it with him. On a complaint laid by him before the police magistrate, the defendant was convicted, in that he, "unlawfully did sell certain packages of tea, being the means of disposing of a gold watch, a diamond ring, $20 in money, by a mode of chance, against the form of the statute." &c.: — Held, that the transaction came within the terms of s. 2, so as to make the defendant liable to conviction thereunder: Held, also, that the Summary Convictions Act applied to cure any defect in the form of the conviction. Regina v. Freeman, 18 O. R. 524.

26. House of Ill Fame,

Evidence.]—Nature of evidence to prove a charge of being an inmate of a house of illfame, considered. Regina v. St. Clair, 27 A. R. 308.

Form of Commitment — Certainty—Forum, 1—The prisoner was convicted by the police magistrate for the city of Toronto, for that she "did on," &c., "at the said city of Toronto, keep a common disorderly bawdy house on Queen street, in the said city," &c., and committed to gool at hard labour for six months. A habeas corpus and certiforar is sued; in return to which the commitment, conviction, information, and depositions were brought up. On application for her discharge:—Held, I. No objection that the commitment stated the offence to have been committed on the 10th August, instead of the 11th, as in the conviction, the variance not being material to the merits; 2, nor that the commitment charged that the prisoner "was the keeper of," &c., and the conviction "that she keeper of," &c. and the conviction "that she did keep," both differing from the statute, which designates the offence as "keeping any disorderly house," &c., for all those expressions convey the same idea; 3. nor that the commitment did not shew that the offence was committed within the police limits of the city, the words used in the Act C. S. U. C. c. 105, s. 14, for there was no ground for supposing any difference between these and the ordinary city limits; 4. nor that there was nothing in the commitment to shew whether the prisoner pleaded to the charge or confessed it; 5, it was held no objection that the conviction was not sustained by the information, the latter being that defendant was the keeper of a disorderly house, and the former for keeping a common disorderly bawdy house; for the commitment would not be void because of a variance be-tween the original information and the con-viction made after hearing evidence; 6, nor that no notice had been put up as required by s. 25 of the same Act, to shew that the court was that of the police magistrate, not of an ordinary justice of the peace; for the jurisdiction, in the absence of express enactment, could not be made to depend on the omission of the clerk to post up such notice; 7, nor that there was no evidence to warrant the conviction; for when a proper commitment is returned to a habeas corpus, and there was evidence, the court will never enter into the question whether the magistrate has drawn the right conclusion from it; 8, nor that the of-fence stated in the commitment, of keeping a common disorderly bawdy house, was not sufficiently certain; for the legal meaning of the last two words is clear, and if keeping a dis-orderly house be no offence, the addition of that would be only surplusage. Semble, that on an application like this, affidavits cannot be received to sustain objections to the conduct of a magistrate in dealing with the case before him; but that such conduct may furnish ground for a criminal information. Quere, with regard to some of the objections, whether the court on such an application, can go behind the warrant of commitment. Regina v. Munro, 24 U. C. R. 44.

Inmate of House of Ill-fame—Appeal to Nessians. —Where a woman has been prosecuted before the police magistrate of a city under s, 783 of the Code for being an immate of a house of ill-fame and convicted under s, 788 of the Code, there is no appeal to the general sessions. Regina v. Nixon, 19 C. L. T. Occ. N, 344.

Procedure — Pleading Guilty.] — The offence of being a keeper of a house of ill-fame is an indictable offence, and it may be tried either before a jury in the ordinary way or be fore a police magistrate under the summary trial clauses or before a justice of the peace under the summary convictions clauses of the Code. A prisoner was convicted by a police magistrate, after pleading guilty to the charge that she did "unlawfully appear the keeper of a house of ill-fame," and was sentenced to be imprisoned for one year in the Andrew Mercer reformatory :- Held, that the conviction might be treated as having been made under the summary convictions clauses of the Code, although the sentence exceeded the power of the magistrate, and that such convic-tion might be supported and the sentence amended under those clauses. Held, also, that where a prisoner charged before a magistrate with unlawfully appearing the keeper of a house of ill-fame had pleaded guilty to such charge, there was a trial on the merits, and that such person was to be deemed guilty of the offence of keeping a house of ill-fame. Regina v. Spooner, 32 O. R. 451.

Prostitute.] — A conviction under 32 & 20 ct., c. 28 (D.), for that V. L. was, in the night time of the 24th February, 1870, a common prostitute, wandering in the public streets of the city of Ottawa, and not giving a satisfactory account of herself, contrary to this statute:—Held, bad, for not shewing sufficiently that she was asked, before or at the time of being taken, to give an account of herself, and did not do so satisfactorily. Regina v. Leccepte, 30 U. C. R. 509.

N. Lecceque, 30 U. C. R. 1995. Semble, proceedings having been taken under 29 & 30 Viet. e. 45 (D.), that the evidence might be looked at; and if so, it was plainly insufficient, in not shewing that the place in which she was found was within the statute, or that she was a common prostitute. 1b.

Time—Place.]—A conviction for keeping a house of ill-fame on the 11th October, and on other days and times before that day:—Held, sufficiently certain as to the time. The information described the parties as of the township of East Whitby, and had "county of Ontario" in the margin. It charged that they kept a house of ill-fame, but did not expressly allege that they did so in that township or county. The evidence, however, shewed that their place, at which such house was kept, was in East Whitby, in which the justices had jurisdiction:—Held, sufficient A certiforari to remove the conviction was therefore refused. Regina v. Williams, 37 U. C. R. 540.

Upon a motion on the return of a habeas corous to discharge the prisoner, who was convicted of keeping a house of ill-fame:—Held, that the conviction was bad on its face for uncertainty in not maning a place where the offerce was committed:—Held, also, that it was defective because it did not contain an adjudication of forfeiture of the fine imposed. Regina v. Cyr. 12 P. R. 24.

27. Kidnapping.

The plaintiff in error having been committed to gao for trial on a charge of unlawfully and forcibly kidnapping and taking one Bratton without authority, with a property of the county of the county that the sessions had jurisdiction over the offence, and so the county Judge had power to try it. Held, also, that the record was properly framed, in stating the offence charged in such form as the depositions or evidence shewed it should have been, and that the Judge's jurisdiction was not confined to the trial only of the charge as stated in the commitment. Held, also, that the Judge had power to postpone the trial, and the record was not defective in not stating the cause of the adjournment. By 32 & 33 Vict. c. 20, s. 69, under which the charge was made, "Whoseever, without lawful authority, for-cibly seizes and confines or imprisons any other person within Canada, or kidnaps any other person with intent" to cause such person to be secretly confined or imprisoned in Canada, or to be unlawfully sent or transported out of Canada against his will, or to be sold or captured as a slave, is guilty of felony: -Heid, that the intent required applied to the seizure and confinement in Canada, as well as to kidnapping; and that the first count therefore was defective in not stating any intent. Upon this ground, the judgment was reversed and under C. S. U. C. c. 113, s. 17, the record was remitted to the Judge to pronounce the proper judgment, which would be upon the second count only. Held, also, that the amend-ment was authorized, under 32 & 33 Vict. c. 29, ss. 1 and 71 (D.). Held, also, that the court would not presume that the two counts referred to the same offence, and if it were so, duplicity would not be a ground of error. Held, also, no objection that the jurisdiction conferred by 32 & 33 Vict. c. 35 was not shewn, for the record and judgment were in the form prescribed by that Act. Held, also, that the sherif's notice was sufficient, as 32 & 33 Viet, c. 35, s. 2, requires it only to state the "nature of the charge" preferred against the prisoner. The prisoner having been sent to the penitentiary, a habeas corpus was ordered to bring him up to receive the proper judgment. Corn-wall v. Regina, 33 U. C. R. 106.

28. Larceny.

Agent.]—The prisoner, being the agent of the American Express Company, in the state of Illinois, received sum of money which had been collected by sum of money which had been collected by a sum of money which had been collected by the sum of the state of the sum o

Attempt.]—The prisoner was convicted of unawfully attempting to steal the goods of one J. G. It appeared that he had gone out with one A. to Cooksville, and examined J. G.'s store with a view of robbing it, and that afterwards A. and three others, having arranged the scheme with the prisoner, started from Toronto, and made the attempt, but were disturbed after one had got into the store through a panel taken out by them. Prisoner saw them off from Toronto, but did not go himself:—Held, that as those actually engaged were guilty of the attempt to steal, the prisoner, under 27 & 28 Vict. c. 19, s. 9, was properly convicted. Regina v. Esmonde, 26 U. C. R. 152.

Carrier—Non-delivery of Money.]—In an apricing of money, it active for non-delivery of a package of money, defendant pleaded not guilty. The plantiffs witness, their adverting the parcel to defendant he found that he had absconded; that he then sued out an attachment against him as an absconding debtor; and that, as he believed, defendant was at the time of the trial in gnol, charged with stealing the money:—Held, that this evidence sufficiently shewed a felony, as defendant upon it might, as a bailee, be properly convicted of larceny, under C. S. C. e. 29, z. 55; and a nonsuit was ordered. Livingstone v. Massey, 23 U. C. R. 156.

Upon an indictment for stealing money, the property of certain persons (composing the firm of the American Express Co.), it ap-peared that the agent of the company in St. Mary's delivered two parcels containing $888, which had been sent by one K., addressed to E. & S. at St. Mary's, to the prisoner to deliver, and that he appropriated them to his own use. On the trial in the quarter sessions the counsel for the Crown asked the agent of the company when their (the company's) liability ceased, which was objected to by the prisoner's counsel:-Held, 1, that the inquiry aimed at was material to shew how far the company had undertaken to deliver, and therefore when their duty as carriers ceased, but that the question as put was objectionable. 2. That it was a question for the jury to say whether the contract of the company was to deliver to E. & S., and the property in the money therefore was properly laid in the in-dictment. 3. That if the undertaking was to deliver the money to E. & S. the prisoner was the agent of the company for that purpose. 4. That money is property, of which a person can be a bailee so as to make him guilty of felony, if he appropriates it to his own use, The case not having been properly submitted to the jury on these points, a new trial was ordered in the court below. Regina v. Massey, 13 C. P. 484.

Criminal Breach of Trust.]-A conviction under s, 85 of the Larceny Act, R. S. C. c, 164, for unlawfully obtaining property, is good, though the prisoner, according to the evidence, might have been convicted of a criminal breach of trust under s. 65. Two bills of indictment were presented against A, and B. under ss. 85 and 83 of the Larceny Act. By the first count each was charged with having unlawfully and with intent to defraud taken and appropriated to his own use $7,000 belonging to the heirs of C., so as to deprive them of their beneficiary interest in the same, The second count charged B. (the appellant) with having unlawfully received the $7,000, the property of the heirs which had before then been unlawfully obtained and taken and appropriated by said A., the taking and re-ceiving being a misdemeanour under s. 85, c. cerving being a misdemeanour under s. 85, c. 164, R. 8, C., at the time when he so received the money. A., who was the executor of C.'s estate, and was the custodian of the money, pleaded guilty to the charge on the first count. B. pleaded not guilty, was acquitted of the charge on the first count, but was found guilty of unlawfully receiving: Held, that whether A, was a bailee or trustee, and whether the unlawful appropriation by A. took place by the handling over of the money to B. or previously, B. was properly convicted under s. 85, c. 164, R. S. C., of re-ceiving it knowing it to have been unlawfully obtained. McIntosh v. The Queen, 23 S. C. R. 180.

Evidence. |-On an indictment for stealing cooper's tools on the 5th November, 1874, it appeared that the prisoner was not arrested for nearly two years afterwards. During that time—it was not shewn precisely when—he was proved to have sold several of the tools at much less than their value, representing that he was a cooper by trade, and was going to quit it, which was proved to be untrue. It was proved also that he was in the shop from which the tools were stolen the night before they were taken, and frequently; and that when arrested he offered the prosecutor $35 to settle and buy new tools, and offered the constable $100 if he could get clear:— Held, that though the mere fact of the possession by the prisoner, after such a lapse of time, might not alone suffice, yet that all the facts taken together were enough to support a conviction of larceny, Regina v. Starr. 40 U. C. R. 268.

Held, that the prisoner was properly convicted, on the evidence set out in the report, of the larceny of certain articles connected with a mill which he had rented from the prosecutor, and that in the manner in which the case was reserved, the only question for the court was, whether in any view of the evidence the prisoner could have been found guilty. Regina v. Stevart, 43 U. C. R. 574.

Excessive Penalty-Amendment.] - The defendant was prosecuted for stealing $5 in money, the property of one J. M., contrary to the form of the statute, &c., and the charge was heard and determined in a summary way by a police magistrate:—Held, that the prose-cution fell under s. 783 (a) of the Criminal Code, the value of the property being less than $10, and it not being charged that the offence was "stealing from the person;" therefore s. 787 applied, and the magistrate had no power to impose a penalty of imprisonment for longer than six months. The provisions of the Code respecting amendments to summary convictions do not apply to summary trials and the provisions of s. 800 do not apply where the same infirmity is found in the conviction as in the commitment. The conviction and commitment were bad for imposing an unauthorized penalty; the defendant was entitled to be discharged upon habeas corpus; and an order should not be made under s. 752 for his further detention. Regina v. Randolph, 32 O. R. 212.

False Pretences.]—A defendant indicted for misdemeanour in obtaining money under false pretences cannot, under C, S, C, c, 29, s, 62, be found guilty of larceny. That clause only authorizes a conviction for the misdemeanour, though the facts proved amount to larceny. Where a defendant on such an indictment had been found guilty of larceny:—Held, that the court had no power under C, S, U, C, c, 112, s, 3, to direct the verdict to be entered as one of "guilty," without the additional words. Regina v, Ewing, 21 U, C, k, 523.

Held, that defendant, who was indicted for false pretences, could not, on the indictment and evidence in this case, be convicted of larceny, under C. S. C. c. 99, s. 62. Quare, as to the meaning of that clause. Regina v. Bertles, 13 C. P. 607.

Form of Information.]—The information charged that the prisoner at a named time and place "being a trustee of a sum of money * * the property of the C. B. of C. (a corporate body) for the use of the said the C. B. of C., did unlawfully and with intent to defraud, convert and appropriate the same to his own use, contrary to the statute in that behalf?"—Held, that the prisoner was by this information charged with a criminal offence under the Larceny Act, R. S. C. c. 164. Regina v. Cox. 16 O. R. 228.

Fruit—Overhanging Branch.]—A party cannot be prosecuted under 4 & 5 Vict. c. 25, for stealing fruit 'growing in a garden,' unless the bough of the tree upon which the fruit is hanging be within the garden; it is not sufficient that the root of the tree be within the garden. McDonald v. Cameron, 4 U. C. R. I.

Hiring Horses.]—Defendant hired a pair of horses from a livery stable to go to a parficular place, and afterwards absconded with them. The jury found that affirst he did not intend to steal, but having accomplished the object of hiring, he then made up his mind to convert them to his own use:—Held, that he was a builee, within C. S. C. c. 92, 8.55, and properly convicted on an indictment for lareeny in the ordinary form. Regina v. Tuccedy, 23 U. C. R. 120.

Indian Act—Cutting Wood—Larceny.]—
There can be no indictment of an Indian for larceny for cutting and removing wood from an Indian reserve from land of which he is in possession. The proper proceeding is by summary prosecution under ss. 26, 27 and 28 of the Indian Act, R. S. C. c. 43. The property in the wood should be laid in the Crown. Regina v. Johnson, S. C. L. T. Occ. N, 334.

Indian Act—Trees.]—The prisoner was inducted for larceny under the Indian Act of 1880, 43 Vict. c. 28, 8, 66 (D.), and was convicted:—Held, that he ought not to have been convicted, because the wood, the subject of the alleged larceny, was not, in the absence of satisfactory information, supported by affidavit, "seized and detained as subject to forfeiture" under the Act, and because the affidavit required by s. 64 had not been made, and was a condition precedent to a seizure. Regina v. Fearman, 10 O. R. 660.

Indictment—Form.]—In an indictment charging the prisoner with stealing bank bills, the words "of the moneys, goods, and chattels" may be rejected as surplusage. Regina v. Saunders, 10 U. C. R. 544.

Indictment—Form.]—An indictment for breaking into a church and stealing vestments, &c. there, describing the goods stolen as the property of "the parishioners of the said church:"—Held, bad. They must be averred to belong to some person or persons individually Such a defect is not within 18 Vict. c. 92, ss. 25, 26. Regina v. O'Brien, 13 U. C. R. 436.

Indictment—Several Counts.]—Where an indictment contains one count for larceny, and allegations in the nature of counts for previous convictions for misdemeanours, and the prisoner, being arraigned on the whole indictment, pleads "not guilty," and is tried at a subsequent assize, when the count for larceny only is read to the jury:—Held, no error, as the prisoner was only given in charge on the larceny count. Regina v. Mason, 22 C. P. 246.

It is not a misjoinder of counts to add allegations of a previous conviction for misdemensour, as counts, to a count for larceny; and the question, at all events, can only be raised by demurrer, or motion to quash the indictment, under 32 & 33 Vict. e. 29 s. 32; and where there has been a demurrer to such allegations, as insufficient in law, and judgment in favour of the prisoner, but he is convicted on the felony count, the court of error will not reopen the matter on the suggestion will not reopen the matter of the average that there is misjoinder of counts. Ib.

An indictment describing an offence within 32 & 33 Vict. c. 21, s. 18, as feloniously stealing an information taken in a police court, is sufficient after verdict. Ib.

Larceny from the Person-Sentence.]—
The prisoner consented to be tried, and was tried and convicted, by the police magistrate for a city, for stealing a purse containing $3.48 from the person, and was sentenced to three years' imprisonment:—Held, upon the return of a habeas corpus, that the offence was an indictable one under s. 344 of the Criminal Code, whether or not it fell also under the provisions of ss. 783 and 787, and was punishable by imprisonment for any period up to fourteen years, and the magistrate had jurisdiction by virtue of s. 785. Regina v. Conlin, 29 O. R. 28.

The public interest being concerned, the principle of estoppel would not apply, so as to prevent H. from asserting that the payment which he professed to make in good faith was in fact only a pretence. Ib.

Proof of Title.]—The prisoner was indicted for stealing the cattle of R. M. At the trial R. M. gave evidence that he was nineteen years of age; that his father was dead, and the goods were bought with the proceeds of his father's estate; that his mother was administratrix, and that the witness managed the property, and bought the cattle in question. On objection taken, the indictment was amended, by stating the goods to be the property of the mother, and no further evidence of her administrative character was given, the county court Judge holding the evidence of R. M. sufficient, and not leaving any question as to the property to the jury:—On a case reserved, Held, I. That there was ample evidence of possession in R. M. to support the indictment without amendment. 2. That the Judge had power to amend, under C. S. C. c. 99, s. 78, 3. That the conviction on the amended indictment could not be sustained, there being no evidence of the mother's representative character, nor any question of ownership by her, apart from such character, left to the jury. Regina v. Jackson, 19 C. 280

Several Articles.]—Held, that if an indicament for stealing certain articles be sustainable as to some of the articles stolen, the conviction is good, although the indictment may contain any number of articles as to which an indictment could not be sustained. Regina v. 8t. Denis, 8 P. R. 16.

Toronto Police Court. —Held, that the police court of the city of Toronto is a court of justice, within 32 & 33 Vict. c. 21, s. 18 (D.), and that the prisoner was properly convicted of stealing an information laid in that court. Regina v. Mason, 22 C. P. 246.

Trees—Cordwood.]—The conviction stated that "Joseph Caswell had on his premises a quantity of chopped wood, to wit, about half a cord, belonging to Thomas Fulton, which said Thomas states was taken and stolen from him, and which said Joseph could not satisfactorily account for its possession:"—Held, that the conviction was bad, because 32 & 33 Vict. c. 21, s. 25, under which it was made, applies to trees attached to the free-hold, not to trees made into cordwood, and because cordwood is not "the whole or any part of a tree" within the statute. Regina v. Casnell, 33 U. C. R. 393.

Semble, that the conviction was also bad, for not alleging that the property taken was of the value of twenty-five cents at the least; the direction in the conviction, that the defendant should pay seventy-five cents for said wood, not being a finding that it was of that Semble, that the conviction sufficiently stated that defendant was in possession of the wood. Ib.

Trustees — Conversion of Securities — Sanction of Attorney-General,]—The defendant was indicted and convicted under the Larceny Act, R. S. C. c. 164, s. 65, for that he being a trustee of two negotiable securities for the payment of $5,250 each, the property of the C. bank, for the use and benefit of the C. bank, unlawfully and with intent to defraud, did convert and appropriate the two negotiable securities to the use and benefit of him, the defendant, &c. At the trial the following letter, written and signed by the defendant, dated 6th November, 1885, was produced: "I have this day been intrusted by A. (the cashier of the C. bank) with two notes of $5,250 each, for the specific purpose of paying two notes for $5,000 that are due in Montreal on 8th November, 1885, and my failing this shall consider myself committing criminal offence and amenable to the criminal law." The securities produced at the trial as those converted by the defendant were two drafts, not promissory notes, for $5,250 each, dated 7th November, 1885; and two drafts for $5,000 each were also produced answering the description of the notes for that amount mentioned in the letter, except that they were not actually notes, and were due at Toronto on the 9th November instead of at Montreal on the 8th. It was shewn. however, that they were held by a person in Montreal. It also appeared in evidence that the defendant procured one B, to discount the two drafts for $5,250 each, B. retaining $1,000 for an old debt, and paying part of the balance of the proceeds to the defendant in diamonds. The defendant did not take up the two $5,000 drafts and retained the proceeds of the two new drafts. The drafts were identified by witnesses as to dates, amounts, &c., and entries in the defendant's memorandum book, also produced, shewed the nature of the transactions with the cashier and R The trial Judge stated a case for the opinion of the court :- Held, upon the evidence, that the drafts were the property of the bank and not of the cashier in his private capacity; and upon the law and evidence, that the deand upon the law and evidence, that within fendant was a trustee of the documents within the meaning of the statute; and that, not-withstanding the discrepancies as to the nature of the instruments, the due date, and place of payment, there was sufficient evidence to go to the jury of the identity of the drafts produced at the trial with the notes mentioned in the letter. It was contended that the defendant should have been indicted for converting the proceeds of the securities, inasmuch as the securities were intrusted to the defendant for a purpose which rendered necessary the conversion of the securities themselves:—Held, that the nature of the transaction with B, shewed an appropriation by the defendant of the securities themselves to his own use; and, per Falconbridge, J., even if it had been otherwise, the definition of property in s.-s. (e) of s. 2 of R. S. C. 164 shewed the sufficiency of the indictment. It was objected that no proof was given at the trial that the sanction of the Attorney-General, required by R. S. C. c. 164. s. 65, s.-s. 2, had been given:—Held, that this objection was not open to the court upon a case reserved, not being a question that could properly arise at the trial. Knowlden V. The Queen, 5 B. & S. 532, followed. Regina v. Barnett, 17 O. R. 649.

Unstamped Promissory Note.]—S. was indicted, tried and convicted for stealing a note for the payment and value of $258.33, the property of A. McC. and another. The evidence shewed that the promissory note in question was drawn by A. McC. and C. R., and made payable to S.'s order. The said note was given by mistake to S. It being supposed that the sum of $258.33 was due him by the drawers, instead of a less sum of $458.43 was due him by the drawers, instead of a less sum of $458.43 was due him by the drawers, instead of a less sum of $458.43 was due him by the drawers, instead of a less sum of $458.43 was due him by the drawers, instead of a less sum of $458.43 was due him by the drawers, instead of a less sum of $458.43 was due him by the drawers, instamped and unindorsed, in exchange for another note of $175.00. An opportunity occurring, S. afterwards, on the same day, stole the note; he caused it to be stamped, indorsed it, and tried to collect it:—Held, that S. was not guilty of larceny of "a note" or of "a valuable security" within the meaning of the statute, and that the offence of which he was guilty was not correctly security in the drawer of the drawer of the indictment. Scott v. The Queen, 2 S. C. R. 349.

29. Libel.

Pleading—Setting Out Facts.]—To an indicatent for libel, the language of which was completed in vague general terms, the deficient pleaded that the words and statement seems on plained of in the indictment were rare in substance and in fact, and that it was for the public benefit that the matters charged in the alleged libel should be published by lime—Held, that the plea was insufficient, because it did not set out the particular facts upon which the defendant intended to rely; and that the omission from 37 Vict. c. 38, s. 5, (R. S. C. c. 163, s. 4) of the words "in the manner required in pleading a justification in an action for defamation," which were contained in C. S. U. C. c. 103, s. 9, had not the effect of altering the rule:—Held, also, that this was a case in which the court should, in the exercise of its discretion, quash the plea upon a summary motion, without requiring a demurrer, a course permitted by s. 2, s.-s. (c), Regina v. Urcighton, 19 O. R. 339.

See Defamation.

30. Lord's Day Act.

Amusements—Imperial Act.]—See Regina v. Barnes, 45 U. C. R. 276.

Cab-driver.]—A cab-driver is not within any of the classes of persons enumerated in s. 1 of the Lord's Day Act, R. S. O. 1887 c. 203, and cannot be lawfully convicted thereunder for driving a cab on Sunday. Regina v. Somers, 24 O. R. 244.

Foreman of Railway Elevator.]—The defendant was convicted of following his ordinary calling of foreman of the Grand Trunk Railway Company elevator in superintending the unloading of grain from a vessel into the elevator on Sunday:— Held, that R. S. O. 1897 c. 246 does not apply to that railway, and as it did not apply to the employer it did not apply to the employer it did not apply to the employer. Conviction quashed, with costs against the prosecutor. Regina v. Reed, 30 O. B. 732.

31. Maliciously Injuring Property.

Bona Fide Belief of Right.]—Defendant B. had buried a child in a graveyard near the remains of his own father. The complainant Nichol had a parcel of ground which the sexton of the church had appropriated to his exclusive use, without any authority from the incumbent or churchwardens. The complainant subsequently extended his fence, by the like consent of the sexton only, and enclosed more ground so that the fence crossed diagonally over the grave of the child. Defendant remonstrated, but obtaining no redress, nor a removal of the fence, proceeded to remove it himself. In process of doing so he broke a marble pillar of complainant's fence, for which he was summoned before the police magistrate of St. Thomas, for "wilfully and maliciously" destroying a fence under s. 29 of 32 & 33 Vict. c. 22 (D.). He was fined $10, and ordered to pay for the damages. From this conviction defendant appealed to the general sessions:—Held, that although defendant was guilty of trespass, for which he might be muleted in damages in a civil action, he was not liable to a fine, and that, acting under a claim of right, the act was not necessarily malicious. Regina v. Bradshae, 13 C. L. J. 41.

Bona Fide Belief of Right—Trial by Jury—Mulice, —On the 8th November, 1875, an information was hiid against B, before the police or gistate of 8th Thomas, by one N, and the state of the police of th

Bona Fide Belief of Right.] — The honest belief of a person charged with an offence under R. S. O. 1897 c. 120, s. 1 (unlawfully trespassing), or the Criminal Code, s. 511 (wilfully committing damage to property), that he had the right to do the act complained of, is not sufficient to protect him; there must be fair and reasonable ground in fact for that belief. The usual reservation in a patent of land bounded by navigable water of "free access to the shore for all vessels, boats and persons," gives a right of access only from the water to the shore, and in this case it was held that a person who had broken down fences and had driven across private property to the shore, could not successfully assert, when charged under R. S. O. 1897 c. 120, s. 1, and the Criminal Code, s. 511, that he had "acted under a fair and reasonable supposition of right" in so doing. Regina v. Davy, 27 A. R. 508.

Form of Conviction.] — A conviction, purporting to be under C. S. C. c. 93, s. 28, charging that defendant, at a time and place named, wilfully and maliciously took and carried away the window sahes out of a building owned by one C., against the form of the statute, &c., without alleging damage to any property, real or personal, and without finding damage to any amount, was held bad, and quashed. Regina v. Caswell, 20 C. P. 275.

A summary conviction under R. S. C. c. 168, s. 59, alleged, in the words of the statute, that the defendant unlawfully and maliciously committed damage, injury, and spoil to and upon the real and personal property of the Long Point Company;—Held, that this was not sufficient without its being alleged what the particular act was which was done by the defendant which constituted such damage, &c., and what the particular nature and quality of the property, real and personal, was in and upon which such damage, &c., was committed; and the conviction was quashed for uncertainty, Regina v. Spain, 18 O. R. 385.

Form of Indictment.]—In an indictment purporting to be under 32 & 33 Vict. c. 22, s. 45 (D.), for malicious injury to property, the word "feloniously" was omitted:—Held, bad, and ordered to be quashed. Regina v. Gough, 3 O. R. 402.

Form of Information.]—Quere, would a complaint against A. B. that he "was seen in the act of destroying or injuring private property," without alleging that the property belonged to another person, or that the act was wilfully or maliciously done, authorize a warrant as for a malicious injury to property under 4 & 5 Vict, c. 26. Powell v. Williamson, 1 U. C. R. 154.

Form of Warrant, |-Under s, 58 of the Malicious Injuries to Property Act, R. S. C. c. 168, the offence must be "unlawfully and maliciously" committed, and the damage must exceed twenty dollars. In this case the warrant of commitment charged the offence as having been willfully and maliciously committed, omitting the word "unlawfully:"—Held, that this was fatal to the commitment, and it was directed to be quashed:—Held, and also, that the commitment should have alleged that the damage exceeded twenty dollars. Regina v. Fife, 17 O. R. 710.

Police Court Information.] — Held, that maliciously destroying an information or record of the police court is a felony within 32 & 33 Vict. c. 21, s. 18. Regina v. Mason, 22 C. P. 246.

32. Maliciously Wounding.

Form of Conviction—Term of Imprisonment.]—On motion to discharge prisoner on habeas corpus on conviction before a police magistrate, the conviction charged that the prisoner did "unlawfully and maliciously cut and wound one Mary Kelly, with intent then and there to do her grievous bodily harm;"—Held, that the addition of the words, "with intent to do grievous bodily harm," did not vitiate the conviction, and that the prisoner might be lawfully convicted of the statutory misdemeanour of malicious wounding:—Held, also, that imprisonment at hard labour for a year was properly awarded under 38 Vict. e. 47 (D.). Regina v. Boucher, S. P. R. 20. Athrined, 4. A. R. 191. See Cassel's Dig, 325, 33. Marriage (Offences Against Laws as to).

Minister—"Religious Denomination,"]—
"The Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints," is a religious denomination within the meaning of R. S. O. 1887 c.
131, s. I; and a duly ordained priest thereof is a minister authorized to solemnize the ceremony of marriage. Upon a case reserved, a conviction of such a priest for unlawfully solemnizing a marriage was quashed. Semble, the words of the statute "church and religious denomination" should not be construed so as to confine them to Christian bodies. Regina v. Dickout, 24 O. R. 250.

34. Menaces and Threats.

Accusation. —the word "accuses" in s. 405 of the Criminal Code, providing for the punishment of any one who, with intent to extort or gain anything from any person, accuses that person or any other person of certain offences, includes the accusing of a person by laying an information under s. 558 of the Code. Regina v, Kemplel, 31 O, R, 631.

Demanding Property with Menaces —Intent to Steal.]—By s. 404, Criminal Code, 1892, "Every one is guilty of an indictable offence and liable to two years prisonment who, with menaces, demands from any person, either for himself or for any other person, anything capable of being stolen with intent to steal it." The defendant was convicted by a magistrate of an offence against this enactment. The evidence was that the defendant went, as agent for others, to the complainant's abode to collect a de't from complainant's abode to collect a de't from him; that the defendant threatened the complainant that if the latter did not pay the debt, he would have him arrested; that the defendant demanded certain goods, part of which had been sold to the complainant by the defendant's principals, on account of which the debt accrued, but upon which they had no lien or charge; and the complainant, as he swore, being frightened by the threats and conduct of the defendant, acquiesced in the demand for the goods, part of which the defendant took away and delivered to his principals, who themselves took the remain-der. The defendant swore that he demanded and took the goods as security for the debt which he was seeking to collect; but the complainant said nothing as to this :- Held, that there was no evidence of intent to steal. Conviction quashed. Regina v. Lyon, 29 O. R. 497.

Demanding Money Due.]—Demanding with menaces money actually due, is not a demand with intent to steal, under 4 & 5 Vict. c. 25, s. 11. Reyina v. Johnson, 14 U. C. R. 569.

Reasonable Cause.]—32 & 33 Vict. c. 21. s. 43 (D.), makes it a felony to send "any letter demanding of any person with menaces, and without reasonable or probable cause," any money, &c.:—Held, that the words, "without reasonable or probable cause," apply to the money demanded, and not to the accusation threatened to be made. Regina v. Mason, 24 C. P. 58.

Threatening Letter — Accusation of Abortion.]—A crime punishable by law with imprisonment for a term not less than seven years means a crime the minimum punishment for which is seven years; and, as no minimum term is prescribed for the crime of abortion, sending a letter threatening to accuse a person of that crime is not a felony within the meaning of R. S. C. c. 173, s. 3. Regina v. Popplectell, 20 O. R. 303.

35. Misbehaviour in Office.

Audit Department—Pecuniary Damage.]
An officer in the public service of Canada having charge of the public dredging and whose duty it was to audit the expenditure therefor, used property of his own in connection with the dredging, having first placed it in the name of a third party, in whose name also he made out the accounts. No undue gains were made by him, but as such public officer he certified to the correctness of the accounts respecting the use of his said property as though for services rendered by contractors with the government, and thereby received for himself a payment for these services:—Held, that he had been guilty of misbehaviour in office, which is an indictable offence at common law, and that to constitute the offence it was not essential that pecuniary damages should have resulted to the public by reason of such irregular conduct, nor that the defendant should have acted from corrupt motives. Regina v. Arnoldi, 23 O. R. 201.

36. Murder and Manslaughter.

Aiding and Abetting.]—The prisoner was indicted for aiding and abetting one M. in a murder, of which M. was convicted. It appeared that about six in the evening the deceased was with R. and his wife on the river bank at Amherstburg, standing hearing the deceased was with R. and his wife on the river bank at Amherstburg, standing hearing the pile, who on deceased going up to him struck deceased with a stick, inflicting a wound of which he died; deceased ran, when two other men sprang out and followed him, but in a few seconds two of them returned and assaulted her and her husband. She could not identify the prisoner. Two other witnesses saw the blow struck and identified M.; and one witness, B., swore that about six on that evening deceased left his office with R. and his wife, and that about twenty minutes after he saw the prisoner, with M. and another, go into the vacant lot where the wood pile was, M. having a stick in his hand, and heard M. say to the others, "Let us go for him." It was also proved by others that the three were together before the affray, and in a saloon together about nine o'clock afterwards:—Held, that there was not sufficient evidence to warrant he prisoner's conviction, for there was no direct proof that he was present when the blow was struck, and no evidence whatever that he and the others were together with any common unlawful purpose; and the words spoken were in themselves unimportant. Repina v. Curtley, 27 U. C. R. 613.

Assault.]—On an indictment for murder in the statutory form, not charging an assault, the prisoner, under 32 & 33 Vict. c. 29 s. 51 (D.), cannot be convicted of an assault; and his acquittal of the felony is therefore no bar to a subsequent indictment for the assault. Regina v. Smith, 34 U. C. R. 552.

In this case there could have been no conviction for the assault, because the evidence upon the trial for murder shewed that it did not conduce to the death. Ib.

Attempt to Murder—Assault.]—At the quarter sessions the prisoner was found guilty on an indictment charging that she, on, &c., in and upon one B., in the peace of God and of our Lady the Queen then being, unlawfully did make an assault, and him, the said B., did beat and illtreat, with intent him, the said B., feloniously, wilfully, and of her malice aforethought, to kill and murder, and other wrongs to the said B., then did, to the great damage of the said B., against the form of the statute in such case made and provided, and against the peace, &c. A count was added for common assault. The evidence shewed an attempt to murder, but it was moved in arrest of judgment that the court had not jurisdiction, for that it was a capital crime, under C. S. C. c. 91, s. 5:—Held, that the indictment did not charge a capital offence under that section, nor an offence against any statute, but that the conviction might be sustained as for an assault at common law. Regina v. MeEvoy, 20 U. C. R. 344.

Credibility — Direction to Jury.]—
On a trial for murder, the Crown having made out a prima facie case by circumstantial evidence, the prisoner's daughter, a girl of fourteen, was called on his behalf, and swore that she herself killed the deceased without the prisoner's knowledge, and under circumstances detailed, which would probably reduce her guilt to manslaughter:—Held, that the learned Judge was not bound to tell the jury that they must believe this witness in the absence of testimony to shew her unworthy of credit, but that he was right in leaving the credibility of her story to them, and if from her manner he derived the impression that she was under some undue influence it was not improper to call their attention to it in his charge. Regina v. Jones, 28 U. C. R. 416.

Remarks as to alleged misdirection, in not directing that the jury must be satisfied not only that the circumstances were consistent with the prisoner's guilt, but that some one circumstance was inconsistent with his innocence. Ib.

Discrepancies between Evidence at Impest and Trial. — The prisoner, having been indicted with two others acquitted, was convicted of the murder of the prisoner in the railway, on Monday the 10th April, apparently about three days after death, which had clearly been caused by violence. One M., the chief witness for the Crown, swore that on the Friday night previously, he heard cries in this field, a quarter of a mile from his house, and that he saw three persons walk quickly past his house from that direction, whom he recognized as the prisoner and two of his sons. He also stated that on the following morning he saw the prisoner walking along the railway and stopping near where the body was afterwards found, his manner being strange and excited. At the coroner's inquest, held six months before, this witness had declared himself unable to identify the persons seen by him, and had not mentioned seeing the prisoner on Saturday. On motion for a new trial, on the ground, among others, of surprise at these discrepancies, the court refused to interfere. Regina v. Hamilton, 16 C. P. 340.

Dying Declarations.]-On an indictment for manslaughter, it appeared that deceased died about midnight, December 16th, from the effect of severe bruises alleged to have been caused by the prisoner, her husband, striking her with a lighted coal oil lamp. diately after receiving the injuries, which was between eight and nine in the evening of the 15th December, she said to the prisoner and to a female relative that she was dying. Four physicians, who saw her almost at once, declared that there was no hope of recovery One of them who had remained with her till three, a.m., on the 17th, returned in the forenoon of that day. He then told her that she would die, and asked her if she was afraid to die; she said "No," and asked him if she was dying then; he answered, "Yes, you are." and she replied, "God help me." He said from the manner of her answering he believed she thought she was dving. She then made the statement which was put in evidence. The doctor asked her how she had caught fire; she said, "Arthur" (the prisoner) "knocked me down with the lamp He then asked if the prisoner had threatened her before he did it, and she said "Yes, died about twelve hours after this, from the effect of her injuries. The parish clergyman. who was with her from six to nine o'clock on the morning of the 17th, said he addressed her as a woman who he thought was dving, and that she understood it in that way: that he recommended her to trust in Christ as her only hope, and she said "Yes, I look to him -Held, that the statement was admissible as dying declaration; and that it made no difference that the second answer was given to a leading question. Regina v. Smith, 23 C.

The prisoners were charged with the murder of one B., caused by attempting, by the use of an instrument, to procure abortion. The deceased died on the 28th December, 1874. On the 24th she made a statement commencing: "I am very ill. I have no hope whatever of recovery. I expect to die." She then narrated the facts, and added: "It I die in this sickness I believe it will have been caused by the operations performed on me by Dr. Sparham, at the instigation of William Grenves. "I make these statements in all truth, with the fear of God before my eyes, for I firmly believe that I am dying." On the 26th she was again examined, and the previous statement read to her. She confirmed its truth in every respect, and added that she then felt she was in the presence of God, and had no hope of recovery of any kind at the time; and her extention being called to the expression "If I die," she said, "I had no doubt whatever that I was dying, and If left that I was dying, and did not by the form of the expression mean to doubt in any way that I was dying, and when the control of the same occasion; and that he second declaration of abandonment of all hope made on the same occasion; and that the second declaration was receivable in order to explain the first. Regina v. Sparham and Greaves, 25 C. P. 143.

At the trial of the prisoner upon an indictment for murder, a witness for the Crown swore upon direct examination that deceased lived about thirty rods from him, and that one night, about half an hour after he had heard shots in the direction of deceased's house, deceased came to the witness's house, and asked the witness to take him in, for he was shot, The witness did so and deceased died there some hours afterwards. Evidence of statesome nours afterwards. Evidence of state-ments made by deceased after being taken into the witness's house was rejected. Upon a case reserved it was contended on behalf of the prisoner: (1) that his counsel was en-titled to ask the witness in cross-examination whether deceased mentioned any particular person as the person who attacked him; (2) that statements made by deceased after he arrived at the witness's house were admissible as part of the res gestæ; (3) that such statements or some of them were admissible as dying declarations:—Held, (1) that the admission of evidence of a complaint baying been made ought properly to be confined to rape and its allied offences, but even if such evidence is admissible in other cases, it can only be so where, as in such offences, the complainant has been examined as a witness moreover, in this case, when deceased asked the witness to take him in, for he was shot, he was not making a complaint at all but merely assigning a reason for asking to be taken in, and the question proposed to be asked was not relevant. (2) That the state-ments made by deceased after he was taken into the house were not admissible as part of the res gestæ, being made after all action on the part of the wrong doer had ceased through the completion of the principal act, through the completion of the principal act, and after all pursuit or danger had ceased. Regina v. Bedingfield, 14 Cox 341, and Regina v. Goddard, 15 Cox 7, followed. (3) That upon the evidence, the statements made by deceased after being taken into the house were not made under a settled hopeless expectation of death, and were therefore not admissible in evidence as a dying declaration. Regina v. McMahon, 18 O. R. 502.

Joinder of Count for Manslaughter— Eridence of Prior Assaults.]—An indictment contained two counts, one charging the prisoner with murdering M. J. T. on the 10th November, 1881; the other with manslaughter of the said M. J. T. on the same day. The grand jury found "a true bill." A motion to quash the indictment for misjoinder was refused, the counsel for the prosecution electing to proceed on the first count only:— Held, that the indictment was sufficient. Theal v. The Oucen, 7 S. C. R. 397.

The prisoner was convicted of manslaughter in killing his wife, who died on the 10th November, 1881. The immediate cause of her death was acute inflammation of the liver, which the medical testimony proved might be occasioned by a blow or a fall against a hard substance. About three weeks before her death, (17th October preceding) the prisoner had knocked his wife down with a bottle: she fell against a door, and remained on the floor insensible for some time; she was confined to her bed soon afterwards and never recovered. Evidence was given of frequent acts of violence committed by the prisoner upon his wife within a year of her death, by knocking her down and kicking her in the side. On the reserved questions, viz., whether the evidence of assaults and violence committed by the prisoner upon the deceased, prior to the 10th November or the 17th October, 1881, was properly received, and whether there was any evidence to leave to the jury to sustain the charge in the first count of the indictment :-Held, that the evidence was properly received, and that there was evidence to submit to the jury that the disease which caused her death was produced by the injuries inflicted by the prisoner. Ib.

Malice.]-P. (the prisoner) and D. (deconsed) being brothers, were in the house of his wife, and on P. interfering a scuffle began. While it was going on D. asked for the axe, and, when they let go, P. went out for it and gave it to him, asking what he wanted with it.

D. raised it as if to strike P., and they again closed, when the wife hid the axe. While the scuffle was going on D. struck P. twice. On getting up, P. kicked him on the side and arm, and then ran across the garden, got over a brush fence into the road, and dared D. three times to come on, saying the last time that he would not go back the same way as he came. D. seized a stick from near the stove, which had been used to poke the fire with, and ran rowards P. In trying to cross the fence he fell to his knees, and P. came forward and took the stick out of his hand. He got up, and as he went over the fence P. struck him on the head with it. The wife entreated him to spare her husband, but he struck him a second time, when he fell, and again while on the ground, from which he never rose. P., in answer to the wife, said D. was me titled. D. seized a stick from near the stove, which on the ground, from which he never rose. F., in answer to the wife, said D. was not killed, and refused to take him in, saying, "Let him lie there till he comes to himself:"—Held, that the evidence was sufficient to go to the jury to establish a charge of murder; that if the death had been caused by the kicks received before leaving the house, the circumstances would have repelled the conclusion of malice; but that whether what took place at the fence was under a continuance of the heat and passion created by the previous quarrel, was, under the circumstances, a question for the jury. A conviction for murder was therefore upheld, and a new trial refused. Regina v. McDowell, 25 U. C. R. 108.

Medical Evidence - Reply.]-The prisoner's witness having stated that death was caused by two blows from a stick of certain dimensions:—Held, that a medical witness, previously examined for the Crown, was properly allowed to be recalled to state that, in perly allowed to be recalled to state that, in his opinion, the injuries found on the body could not have been so occasioned. Regina v. Jones, 28 U. C. R. 416. Remarks as to the effect in criminal cases of a belief by the jury that false evidence has been fabricated for the prisoner, or false answers to questions. Ib.

The theory of the defence in an indictment for murder, was that the death was caused by communication of small pox virus by a medical man who attended the deceased, and one of the witnesses for the defence explained how the contagion could be guarded against. The medical man had not in his examination in chief or cross-examination been asked anything on this subject:—Held, that he was properly allowed to be called in reply, to state what precautions had been taken by him to guard against the infection. In Sparham and Greaves, 25 C. P. 143. Regina v.

Motive-Insurance. |-On a trial for murder, the alleged motive being the obtaining of insurance moneys on policies effected by the a previous attempt by the prisoner to insure another person for his own benefit cannot be given in evidence against him. Regina v. Hendershott, 26 O. R. 678.

Motive - Insurance.] - On a charge of wife murder, the Crown sought to prove that the prisoner had been with evil design accumulating insurance on his wife's life: — Held, that evidence of various applications for insurance, though in some cases resulting in rejection of the risk, was admissible, all being made practically at the same time and forming part of one transaction which could be properly given in evidence as a whole. Re-gina v. Hammond, 29 O. R. 211.

Pagan Indian-Evil Spirit-Delusion.]pagan Indian who, believing in an evil spirit in human shape called a Wendigo, shot and killed another Indian under the impression that he was the Wendigo, was held properly convicted of manslaughter. Regina v. Machekequonabe, 28 O. R. 309.

Poisoning-Death of Former Husband of Prisoner.]—Upon the trial of the prisoner for the murder of her husband, who was living with and attended by her in his last illness, it was proved that his death was due to arsenical poisoning. In order to shew that the poisoning was designed and not accidental, the Crown offered evidence to prove that a former husband of the prisoner had been taken suddenly ill after eating food prepared by her, and that the circumstances and symptoms attending his illness and death were similar to those attending the illness and death of the second husband, and that such symptoms were those of arsenical poisoning:—Held, that the evidence was admissible. Regina v. Sternaman, 29 O. R. 33.

Provocation—New Trial.]—The prisoner was tried for murder. It was not denied that he had killed the deceased, but it was urged that, by s. 229 of the Criminal Code, the offence was reduced to manslaughter, as hav-ing been committed "in the heat of passion caused by sudden provocation." There was caused by sudden provocation." There was evidence that just before the killing the pris-oner had called at the house of the deceased oner had called at the house of the deceased to see the latter, who ordered him out and immediately laid hands on him and put him out of the house, when the prisoner drew a revolver and shot deceased. The Judge at the trial directed the jury that the deceased was, at the time he was killed, "doing that which he had a legal right to do," and that there was, therefore, no provocation and no question of fact to be submitted to the jury to reduce the crime to manslaughter:—Held, misdirection; for whether or not the deceased, at the time he was shot, was doing what he had a legal right to do depended upon whether. if the jury accepted as true the statement of the defendant given in evidence as to the cir-cumstances attending the shooting, the de-ceased had, before laying hands upon him, ceased had, before laying hands upon him, ordered him to leave his house, and whether, if he had done so, the prisoner had refused to leave, and whether, if violence was used in putting him out, it was greater than was necessary; and the deceased was clearly not doing what he had a legal right to do if the facts were found in favour of the prisoner's contention on these points. New trial direct-ed, upon an appeal under s. 744 of the Criminal Code. Reging v. Rerngan, 27 O. R. 659. nal Code. Regina v. Brennan, 27 O. R. 659.

Rejecting Evidence as to Alleged Accessory.] — Prisoner being indicted for the murder of one IL, the principal witness for the Crown stated that the crime was committed on the 1st December, 1839, on a bridge over the river Don, and that the prisoner and one S. (who had been previously tried and acquitted) threw H. over the parapet of the bridge into the river. The counsel for the prisoner then proposed to prove by one D. that S. was at his place, fifty miles off, on that evening, but the learned Judge rejected the evidence, saying that S. might be called, and if contradicted might be confirmed by other testimony. S. was called, and swore that he was not present at the time, but he not being contradicted D. was not examined: —Held, that the presence of S. was a fact material to the inquiry, and that D. therefore should have been admitted when rendered; and, the prisoner having been found guilty, a new trial was ordered. Regina v. Broven, 21 U. C. R. 330.

Threats.]—As to certain threats alleged to have been uttered by the prisoner:—Held, that they were clearly admissible, and if undue prominence was given to them in the charge, the attention of the learned Judge should have been called to it by the prisoner's counsel. Regina v. Jones, 28 U. C. R. 416.

37. Neglecting to Provide for Family.

Facts to be Proved.]—An indictment under 32 & 33 Vict. c. 20, s. 25 (D.), alleged that S. was the wife of defendant, and was willing to live with him as such; that it was defendant's duty to provide the necessary food, clothing, and lodging for her sustenance; and that he, on, &c., and from thence hitherto, unlawfully, wilfully, and without lawful excuse, did refuse and neglect to provide the same, contrary to the statute, &c.:—Held, that the allegation that she was ready and willing to live with defendant was surplusage, and need not be proved; but that it must be shewn that she was in need, and that defendant had the ability to supply her wants; and as this did not sufficiently appear by the evidence a conviction was set aside. Regina v. Nasmith, 42 U. C. R. 242.

Former Marriage — Proof of Death of First Husband.]—The defendant, on the complaint of his wife, was convicted under s.-s. 2 of s. 210 of the Code, of refusing to provide necessaries for her. The evidence shewed the parties were married in 1890, but that the complainent had been married to another person in 1886, though she had never lived with him: that in 1888 she had received a letter stating he was dying in the United States, and that that was the last she heard of him, save that about a year after her marriage to the defendant she again heard that he was dead. No further proof of the death of the first husband, and that the defendant of the first husband, and that the defendant was properly convicted. Regina v. Holmes, 29 o. R. 362.

Lawful Excuse—Agreement.]—Upon an indictment of the prisoner under s. 210, s.-s. 2, of the Criminal Code, 1892, for omitting without lawful excuse to provide necessaries for his wife, evidence is admissible on behalf of the prisoner of an agreement between him and the person who became his wife, at the time of the marriage, that they were to live at their respective homes and be supported as before the marriage until the prisoner obtained a situation where he could earn sufficient for their maintenance. Regina v. Robinson, 28 O. R. 407.

Refusal to Hear Evidence.]-Under 32 & 33 Vict. c. 20, s. 25 (D.), as amended by 49 Vict. c. 51, s. 1 (D.), defendant was charged by his wife, before a magistrate, with refusing to provide necessary clothing and lodging for herself and children. lodging for herself and children. At the close of the case for the prosecution, defendant was tendered as a witness on his own behalf. The magistrate refused to hear his evidence, not because he was the defendant, but because he did not wish to hear evidence for the defence; and subsequently, without further evidence, committed him for trial:—Held, that the defendant's evidence should have been taken for the defence; that a magistrate is bound to accept such evidence in cases of this kind and give it such weight as he thinks proper, and that the exercise of his discretion to the contrary is open to review :-Held, also, that the amended section of the Act is intended to enlarge the powers and duties of magistrates in cases of this nature, and that the word "prosecution" therein includes the proceedings before magistrates as well as before a higher court. Regina v. Meyer, 11 P. R. 477.

Wife as Witness.]—The evidence of a wife is inadmissible, on the prosecution of her husband for refusal to support her, under 32 & 33 Vict. c. 29, s. 25 (D.). Regina v. Bissell, 1 O. R. 514.

38. Obtaining Money with Intent to Defraud.

Fraudulent Post-office Orders.]—One D., being post-master at Berlin, transmitted to defendant at Toronto several post-office orders payable there, which defendant presented and got cashed, but it appeared afterwards that the moneys thus obtained had never been received by D. for defendant, and that frauds to a large extent had been thus committed. Defendant having been convicted upon an indictment for obtaining from the Queen these sums, of the moneys and property of the Queen, with intent to defraud:—Held, that the indictment was good; that s. 55 of the Post-office Act, C. S. U. C. c, 31, was not applicable to the case; that the money was properly charged to be the money of the Queen, not of the post-master; and that it was unnecessary to allege an intent to defraud any particular person. Regina v. Dessaucr, 21 U. C. R. 231.

39. Perjury.

Attempting to Procure False Affidavit of Bastardy-Letter-Venue.]—Attempting to bargain with or procure a woman falsely to make the affidavit provided for by C. S. U. C. c. 77, s. 6, that A. is the father of her illegitimate child, is an indictable offence. The attempt proved consisted of a letter written by defendant, dated at Bradford, in the county of Simeoe, purporting, but not proved, to hear the Bradford post mark, and addressed in:—Held, that the case could be triei at York. Semble, per Draper, C.J., if the post mark had been proved, and the letter thus shewn to have passed out of defendant's hands in Simeoe, intended for the woman, the ofence would have been complete in that county, and the indictment only triable there. Fer Hagarty, J., the defendant in that case would still have caused the letter to be received in York, and might be tried there. Quarer, whether, if the woman had committed the offence, it should have been charged as a misdemeanour only, or as the statutory offence of perjury. Regima v. Clement, 26 U. C. R. 290 U.

Civil Proceedings Pending.] — The practice of indicting parties or witnesses for alleged perjury in a civil suit, while proceedings are still pending, disapproved of. Chadd v, Meagher, 24 C. P. 54.

Fire Loss—Production of Policy.]—C. S. C. C. c. 52, s. 73, empowers any justice of the peace to examine on oath any person who comes before him to give evidence touching loss by fire, in which a mutual insurance company is interested, and to administer to him the requisite oath. Upon an indictment for perinry assigned upon an affidavit made in compliance with one of the conditions of a policy:—Held, that the policy must be produced, although the deendant's affidavit referred to the policy in such a way that its existence might be fairly inferred. Regina v. Gagan, 17 C. P. 530.

Form of Indictment:]—An indictment for perjury charge, that it was committed on the trial of an indictment against A. B., at the court of quarrier sessions, for the count of persons that the person of the court of the person in the person of the person in the person of the person o

Indictment—Averment of Authority.]— Where it appears on the face of the indictment that the statement complained of was made before a justice of the peace in preferring a charge of larceny committed within his jurisdiction, it is unnecessary to allege expressly that he had authority to administer the oath. Regina v. Callaghan, 19 U. C. R. 364.

Jurat — Place not Mentioned—Proof of Taking Oath.]—To sustain a conviction for perjury in an affidavit, it is not necessary that the jurnat should contain the place at which the affidavit is sworn, for the perjury is committed by the taking of the oath, and the jurnt, so far as that is concerned, is not material. Regina v. Atkinson, 17 C. P. 29.5.

There was no statement in the affidavit as to where it had been sworn, either in the jurat or elsewhere, except the marginal venue, "Canada, county of Grey, to wit;" but the contents shewed that it related to lands in that county, and it was proved that defendant subscribed the affidavit; that the party before whom it purported to have been sworn was a justice of the peace for that county, and had resided there for some years; that the affidavit had been received through the post-office, by the agent of the Crown lands there, by whom it was forwarded to the commissioner of Crown lands; and that subsequently a patent issued to the party on whose behalf the affidavit had been made:—Held, evidence from which the jury might infer that the affidavit was sworn in the county of Grey. Ib.

in the county of Grey, Ib.
Held, also, that if the affidavit was sworn in the county of Grey, the proof of the swearing by the justice of the peace, and the taking of the oath by the defendant, were made out by proving their signatures. Ib.

Justices Hearing Charge without Jurisdiction.]—The prisoner being indicted for perjury in giving evidence upon a charge of felony against one E. G., it appeared that the felony was committed in the county of Middlesex, if at all. The justices before whom the examination took place entertained the charge and examined the witnesses within the city of London. Defendant's counsel objected at the trial that the justices, being justices of the county of Middlesex, had no jurisdiction, sitting in London, to examine into an offence committed outside the city limits:—Held, that the conviction was illegal. Revina v. Row. 14 C. P. 307 limits:—Held, that the conviction was illegal. Regina v. Rove, 14 C. P. 307 Held, also, that the Imperial statute, 28 Geo. III. c. 49, s. 1, is local in its character and not in force in this Province.

Magistrate's Jurisdiction.] — 32 & 33 Vict. c. 23, s. 8 (D.), applies to all cases of perjury, not merely to "Perjuries in Insurance Cases," which is the heading under which ss. 4 to 12 are placed in the Act. Regina v. Currie, 31 U. C. R. 582.

Held, therefore, that a magistrate in the county of Halton had jurisdiction to take an information, and to apprehend and bind over a person charged with perjury committed in the county of Wellington. Ib.

Held, also, that a recognizance to appear for trial on such charge at the sessions was wrong, as that court has no jurisdiction in perjury, but a certiorari to remove it was refused, as the time for the appearance of the party had gone by. 1b.

Municipal Election.]—An election under the Municipal Act is commenced when the returning officer receives the nomination of candidates, and it is not necessary to constitute an election that a poll should be demanded. Where, therefore, in an indictment for perjury, defendant was alleged to have sworn that no notice of the disqualification of a candidate for township councillor had been given previous to or at the time of holding the election, the perjury assigned being that such notice had been given previous to the election; and the notice appeared to have been given on the nomination of the candidate objected to: — Held, that the assignment was not proved. Regina v. Cocan, 24 U. C. R. 608.

Negative Averment — Evidence.]—D., in answering to faits et articles on the contestation of a saisie arrêt, or attachment, stated among other things, "1st, that he, D., owed nothing for his board; 2nd, that he, D., from about the beginning of 1880 to towards the end of the year 1881, had paid the board of one F. the rent of his room, and furnished him all the necessaries of life with scarcely any exception; 3rd, that he, F., during all that time, 1880 and 1881, had no means of support whatever." D. being charged with perjury, in the assignments of perjury and in the negative averments, the facts sworn to by D. in his answers were distinctly negatived, the terms in which they were made:-Held, that under the general terms of the negative averments, it was competent for the prosecution to prove special facts to establish the falsity of the answers given by D. in his answers on faits et articles, and the conviction could not be set aside because of the admission of such proof. Even if the evidence was inadmissible, there being other charges in the same count which were pleaded to, a judgment given on a general verdict of guilty on that count would be sustained. Downie v. Regina, 15 S. C. R. 358.

Oath Administered in Foreign Country,—Semble, that if the county Judge in the course of an investigation under R. S. O. 1887 c. 184, s. 477, proceeded to the United States to take evidence, any oath administered by him in the United States would have no legal significance, and any false statement made by a person sworn before him under such circumstances would not have attached to it the consequences of perjury. In re Godson and City of Toronto, 16 O. R. 275.

Proceedings Before Information— Form of Indictment.)—Upon an indictment for perjury committed upon the hearing of a complaint before a magistrate, the information having been proved:—Held, upon a case reserved, that it was unnecessary to prove any summons issued, or any step taken to bring the person complained of before the magistrate; for so long as he was present, the manner of his getting there was immaterial. Regina v. Mason, 29 U. C. R. 431.

The indictment was defective for not shew-

The indictment was defective for not shewing the jurisdiction over the othere, by alleging where the liquor was sold, the sale of which without the ense was the complaint; but as judgment had been pronounced, this could be taken advantage of only by writ of error. Quere, whether it was not defective also, for not shewing that the person complained against was present, or that a summons issued, and that the magistrate was authorized to proceed ex parte. Ib.

Trial Without Jurisdiction.] — The clerk of a division court, acting under 13 & 14 Vict. c. 53, s. 102, issued an interpleader summons of his own authority, without the ball-iff's request. Both parties attended before a barrister appointed by the Judge of the court, who was ill, and an order was made. The Judge afterwards ordered a new trial, which took place. The defendant was convicted for perjury committed upon that occasion:—Held, that both parties having appeared, the proceedings in the first instance could not be considered void for wart of a previous application by the balliff; but,—Held, also, that it was not competent for the Judge to order such new trial, the first order being made final by the statute; and that the conviction was therefore illegal. Regina v. Doty, 13 U. C. R. 298.

Variance between Indictment and Information.]—The court will not quash the indictment because there is a variance in the specific charge of perjury contained in the information and that in the indictment, provided the indictment sets forth the substantial charge contained in the information. Regina v. Broad, 14 C. P. 163.

Voter's Oath. — The swearing falsely by a voter, at an election of aldermen or common councilmen for the city of Toronto, that he is the person described in the list of voters entitled to vote, is not perjury by any express enactment; and a plea of justification to a declaration on the case for imputing perjury to plaintiff, on the ground of such false swearing, is bad on demurrer, Thomas v. Platt, 1 U. C. R. 217.

40. Rape.

Cross-examination of Prosecutrix-Previous Connection with Other Men. [-The prosecutrix, in an indictment for rape, was asked in cross-examination, after she had declared she had not previously had connection with a man, other than the prisoner, whether she remembered having been in the milk-house of G. with two persons named M., one after the other :- Held, that the witness may object, or the Judge may, in his discretion, tell the witness she is or she is not bound to answer the question; but the court ought not to have refused to allow the question to be put because the counsel for the prosecution objected to the question, Laliberté v. The Queen, 1 S. C. R. 117.

Evidence—Statements of Prisoner—Statements of Counsel, 1—On a trial for rape, the evidence of the prosecution was that the orisoner knecked are fown, go on her, pulled up her clother and that he did no more than her husband would have done. Evidence was admitted of a statement made by prisoner's counsel at a previous trial on behalf of prisoner, that prisoner had had connection with the woman with her consent, and that he had paid her $1.00;—Held, that there was sufficient evidence of the commission of the offence; and that the statement of the prisoner's counsel was properly admitted. Regina v. Bedere, 21 O. R. 189.

Finding of Fact—Fear or Solicitation.]
—The defendant was indicted and convicted for committing a rape on his daughter. The learned Judge left it to the jury to say whether on the evidence the act of connection was consummated through fear, or merely through solicitation:—Held, that the question was one of fact entirely for the jury, and could not have been withdrawn from them, there being ample evidence to sustain the charge, and it having been left to them with the proper direction in such a case. Regina v. Cardo, 17 O. R. 11.

Idiot or Lunatic.]—In the case of rape on an idiot or lunatic, the mere proof of connection will not warrant the case being left to the jury. There must be some evidence that it was without her consent, e. g. that she was incapable, from imbecility, of expressing assent or dissent: and if she consent from mere animal passion, it is not rape. Regina v. Connolly, 26 U. C. R. 317.

In this case the charge was assault with intent to ravish. The woman was insane, and there was no evidence as to her general character for chastity, or anything to raise a preacter for chastity, or anything to raise a pre-sumption that she would not consent. The jury were directed that if she had no moral perception of right and wrong, and her acts were not controlled by the will, she was not deepable of giving consent, and the yielding on her part, the prisoner knowing her state, was not an act done with her will. They con-victed, saying she was insane and consented: -Held, that the conviction could not be sus-ained. Ib.

On an indictment for attempting to have connection with a girl under ten, consent is immaterial, but in such a case there can be no conviction for assault if there was consent.

Indictment for Rape — Conviction for Common Assault.]—A prisoner indicted for rape may be found guilty of common assault, notwithstanding the complaint or information is not laid within six months under s. 841 of the Criminal Code. Regina v. Edwards, 29 O. R. 451.

Personating Husband.] - Having connection with a woman under circumstances which induce her to believe that it is her husband, does not amount to a rape. Regina v. Francis, 13 U. C. R. 116.

Seduction.]-A prisoner indicted and tried under s. 3. clause (a), of the Act respecting offences against public morals and public correlator. R. S. C. c. 157, with having seduced a girl under sixteen:—Held, properly convicted of such offence, although the evidence given, if believed in whole, would have supported a conviction for rape, an indictment for which has been previously ignored by the grand jury. Regina v. Doty, 25 O. R. 362.

Statement of Prosecutrix.] — On a charge of rape it was sought to give in evicharge of rape it was sought to give in evidence statements made by the prosecutrix on the day following the alleged assault to a police inspector who called upon her with reference to the matter:—Held, that the evidence was inadmissible. The statements were not made as the unstudied outcome of the feelings of the woman, nor as speedily after the occasion as could reasonably be expected. Regina v. Graham, 31 O. R. 77.

Violently and against her Will.]-The meaning of the words that the prisoner "violently and against her will feloniously did ravish." is, that the woman has been quite overcome by force or terror, accompanied with as much resistance on her part as was possible under the circumstances, and so as to have made the ravisher see and know that she really was resisting to the utmost, and in this case the evidence was held sufficient to warrant a conviction. The facts, as they ap-peared in evidence, were left to the jury, who were also told that they must be satisfied before convicting that the prisoner had had con-nection with the prosecutrix "with force and violence and against her will;" and further, that "some resistance should be made on the part of the woman, to shew that she really was not a consenting party:"—Held, a proper and full direction. Regina v. Fick, 16 C.

41. Receiving Stolen Goods.

See Regina v. St. Denis, 8 P. R. 16.

42. Riot.

Assault.]—Defendant was indicted for a riot and assault, and the jury found him guilty of a riot, but not of the assault:—Held. guilty of a riot, but not of the assault:—Held, that a conviction for riot could not be sustained, the assault, the object of the riotous assembly, not having been executed; although the defendant might have been guilty of riot or joining in an unlawful assembly. Regina v. Kelly, 6 C. P. 372.

Firing at Rioters.]-A procession having been attacked by rioters, the prisoner, one or the processionists, and in no way connected with the rioters, was proved, during the course of the attack, to have fired off a pistol on two occasions—first in the air, and then at the rioters. So far as appeared from the evidence the prisoner acted alone and not in connection with any one else:-Held, that a conviction for riot could not be sustained. The prisoner having been indicted jointly with a number of the rioters on a charge of riot and convicted, upon a case reserved after verdict, the conviction was quashed. Regina v. Corcoran, 26 C. P. 134.

43. Sacrilege.

Stealing from a Church. 1-An indict-Stealing from a Church.]—An indict-ment for breaking into a church and stealing vestments, &c., there, describing the goods stolen as the property of "the parishioners of the said church:"—Held, bad. Regina v. OBrien. 13 U. C. R. 436. They must be averred to belong to some per-son or persons individually. Such a defect is not within 18 Vict. c. 92, ss. 25, 26. Ib.

44. Treason.

Forfeiture of Estate.]—The estate of a traitor concerned in the rebellion of 1837, who accepted the benefit of the 1 Vict. c. 10, is at once vested in the Crown under the 33 Hen. VIII. c. 20, s. 2, without office found. Doe d. Gillespie v. Wizon, 5 U. C. R. 132.

45. Unlawfully Pointing Firearms.

Prisoner Testifying.]-On appeal to the divisional court, a conviction for unlawfully and maliciously pointing a loaded firearm at a person, was quashed on an objection taken for the first time, that the defendant who was called as a witness at the trial, was not a competent or compellable witness. Regina v. Hart, 20 O. R. 611, followed. Regina v. Becker, 20 O. R. 676.

46. Miscellaneous Offences.

Blasphemous Language. |- A conviction by a magistrate, stated that defendant did on, &c., at &c., being a public highway, use blasphemous language, contrary to a certain byhaw, which was passed almost in the words of C. S. U. C. c. 54, s. 282, s.-s. 4; but there was no statement of the words used:—Held, bad. Semble, also, that there was nothing in the evidence set out giving the magistrate jurisdiction to act. In re Doudly, 20 C. P. 165.

Hawkers — Negativing Exception.] — A by-law of a county council recited the provisions of s.-s. 14 of s. 383 of the Municipal Act, R. S. O. 1897 c. 223, and that it was expedient to enact a by-law for the purpose mentioned in the sub-section; it then went on to enact "that no person shall exercise the calling of a hawker, peddler or petty chapman in the county without a license obtained as in this by-law provided;" but the by-law contained no such exception as is mentioned in the proviso to s.-s. 14, in favour of the manufacturer or producer and his sure rives the council, and a conviction under it was bad, Held, also, following Regina v. McFarlane, 17 C. L. T. Occ. N. 29, that the conviction was bad because it did not negative the exception contained in the proviso, and they was no power to amend it, because the evidence did not shew whether or not the defendant's acts came within it. The conviction was therefore quanshed, but costs were not given against the informant. Regina v. Smith, 31 O. R. 224.

The defendant, who was a traveller for a tea dealer, carried samples with him from house to house, and took orders for tea, which orders the forwarded to his employer, who sent the toa to him. The defendant then got the tea which had been forwarded in packages, and delivered it to his customers, receiving the price on delivery. On this evidence he was convicted of selling tea as a pedlar without a license, contrary to a by-law which prohibited "hawkers or petty chapmen and other persons carrying on petty trades," from selling goods in the manner pointed out by the Consolidated Municipal Act, 1883, s. 485 (3)—Held, that the defendant was not a "hawker," nor was the word pedlar used in the Act, and if he was a "petty chapman or person carrying on a petty trade," the conviction could not be supported, when the was "not carrying goods for sale."

Regina V.Coutts, 5 O. R. 644.

"The Consolidated Municipal Act, 1883." (46 Viet. c. 181, s. 495, s. s. mnowered the council of any county to see by-laws for licensing, &c., hawkers, &c. going from place to place, &c., with any goods, wares, or merchandise for sale, and by 48 Viet. c. 40, s. 1 (O.), the word "hawkers" shall include all persons who, being agents for non-residents of the county, sell or offer for sale tea, dry goods, or jewelry, or carry and expose samples of any such goods to be afterwards delivered, &c.:—Held, that electrotype ware was not jewelry within the above enactment, and a conviction for selling this without license was therefore bad, and was quashed, though the fine imposed had been paid:—Held, also, that the words "other goods, wares, and merchandise," in the conviction, were too general. Regina v. Chapter, 11 O. R. 217.

The defendant was convicted of selling and delivering teas as the agent of P, $W_{\rm s}$, a non-resident of the county, in violation of a hylaw of the county of Bruce, s. 3 of which was a copy of s. 1 of 48 Vict. c. 40 (O.). The deciendant, against the protest of his counsel, was called as a witness, and swore that he bought the tea in question from one W, of the city of London, and that he did not sell as the latter's agent, but on his own account; that he had formerly sold tea on commission for W, but purchased that in question for the purpose of ecading the by-law. The conviction alleged that defendant was the agent of P, W, but did not state that he had not the necessary license to entitle him to do the act complained of :—Held, 1, that defendant being, under the evidence, an independent trader, and not an agent, did not come within the Consolidated Manicipal Act, 1883, s. 495, s. s. 3, nor within 4 Vicr. et al. (10, 1); 2, that the conviction with the converse of the converse

The defendant, a wholesale and retail dealer in tens in the county of W., where he resided, went to the county of W., where he resided, went to the county of W., and sold tens by sample to private persons there, taking their orders to private persons there, taking their orders to the warded by him to county of W. packages of tens subsequently delivered. All the packages of tens subsequently delivered. All the packages were sent in one parcel to H. county, and there distributed. The defendant was convicted under a by-law passed under statutes which are now R. S. O. 1887 c. 184, s. 495, s.-s. 3 (a) and (b), for carrying on a petty trade without the necessary license therefor:—Held, that the conviction could not be sustained, and must be quashed. Regina v. Henderson, 18 O. R. 144.

Practising Medicine without License. —A conviction for practising medicine without license or being registered as a medical practitioner, under R. S. O. 1877, c. 142, s. 49, omitted to add "for hire, gain, or hope of reward," and it did not appear that the defendant had appeared and pleaded, and that the merits had been tried, and that the defendant had not appealed, or that the conviction had been affirmed on appeal, so that the 52 & 33 Vict. c. 31, s. 73 (D.), was not applicable:—Held, that the conviction must be quashed. A conviction should, if possible, state the facts necessary to bring it within that section, and it should not be drawn up that section, and a fact of the drawn up that section.

A conviction under the "Ontario Medical Act." R. S. O. 1877 c. 142. s. 40, for practising without being registered, was quashed, because in default of payment of the fine imposed, distress was also awarded:—Held, that s. 57 of 32 & 33 Vict. c. 51 (D.), does not apply, as by s. 46 of the Medical Act provision is made for enforcing payment. Regina v. Sparham, S. O. R. 570.

Held, that a justice of the peace, on a conviction under ss. 40 and 46 of R. S. O. 1877 c. 142, intituded an Act respecting the profession of Medicine and Surgery, has no jurisdiction on default by the defendant of payment of fine and costs, to direct his confinement for the space of one month, unless, in addition to the payment of the fine and costs, he paid the charges of conveying him to jail. Regina v. Wright, 14 O. R. 668.

Provincial Fisheries Act—Prosecution for Penalty Exceeding $39.1—The defendant was convicted before one justice of the peace on an information under 55 Vict. c. 10, s. 19 (O.). charging him with fishing in a certain stream without the permission of the proprietors, and of taking therefrom forty-five fish:—Ileld, that the conviction must be quashed, for the penalty fixed for the offence charged exceeded $30, and, therefore, under ss. 25 and 26 of the Act, the prosecution should have been before a police magistrate or two or more justices of the peace, or one justice and a fishery overseer. Only one offence is created by s. 19, that of fishing in prohibited waters, and that offence is complete though no fish be taken, Regina v. Plouss, 26 O. R. 339.

Public Health.]—Held, that the unloading of manure from a car on a certain part of railway premises into waggons, to be carried away, came within the terms of a ba-bay, amending the by-law appended to the Public Health Act. R. S. O. 1887 c. 205, and archibiting the unloading of manure on said part of said premises; that the use of the word 'manure' in the amending by-law was not of itself objectionable; and that it was not essential to shew that the manure might endanger the public health. A conviction for unloading a car of manure on the premises, as contrary to the by-law, was therefore affirmed. Regina v. Redmond, Regina v. Redmond, Regina v. Ryan, Regina v. Burk, 24 O. R. 331.

Public Morals — ByJane against Sucarius in Street or Public Place—Private Office is fustom House.]—A city by-law enacted that no person should make use of any profane swearing, obseene, blasphemous or grossic insulting indecency in any street insulting the indecency in any street indicates the by-law was to prevent an injury to public place in the by-law was to prevent an injury to public place displace guided green generis with a street, and not be private office in the custom house. It glass v. Bell, 25 O. R. 272.

Refusal to Pay Toll.]—Defendant, in a private carriage, refused to pay toll, on the ground that he was in uniform, and adjutant of the military train, and therefore exempt:— Hield, that the conviction could not be quashed on the ground of his being on duty, as the exemption had not been claimed on that account. Regina v. Dauces, 22 U. C. R. 333.

Refusal to Pay Tolls.]—A conviction under C. S. U. C. c. 40, s. 95, stating that defendant wilfully passed a gate without paying, and refusing to pay toll:—Held, good. Quere, whether it would be sufficient to allege only that he wilfully passed without paying, without in any way shewing a demand. Regina v. Caister, 30 U. C. R. 247.

payable forthwith. *Ib.*Held, also, that it was clearly not requisite to shew that defendant was summoned or heard, or any evidence given. Ib.

Secondhand Shops and Junk Stores.]

—R. S. O. 1887 c. 184, s. 436 (R. S. O. 1847 c. 292, s. 481), which provides that "the board of commissioned for police shall in cities license and regulate found-fanal shops and junk stores," does not authorize a by-law to the effect that "no keepen for things from any person who appears to be under the age of eighteen years." Such a by-law is bad as partial and unequal in its operation as between different classes, and involving oppressive or gratuitous interference with the rights of those subject to it without reasonable justification. Regina v. Levy, 30 O. R. 4,03;

Transient Traders.]—A by-law of a city provided that "No person not entered upon the assessment roll * or who may be entered for the first time in the said assessment roll * or who have be entered for the first time in the said assessment roll * and who at the time of commencing business * has not resided continuously in said city * at least three months shall commence business * or the said of goods or merchandise * or the said of goods or merchandise * the sum of * by way of license: "—Held, that the statute under which the by-law was framed, R. S. O. 1897 c. 22.3, S.53, S. s.s. 30 and 31, reintes to transient traders who occupy premises in a municipality, and that clause (b) of s.-s. 31 defining the term "transient traders" does not modify the provision as to occupation, and that the by-law was defective and invalid in being directed merely against persons not entered upon the assessment roll and who had resided continuously for three months in the municipality, and was silent as to these persons being in occupation of premises. Conviction quashed. Regina v. Appeleo, 30 O. R. 623.

Transient Traders — Trading Stamps.]
—The defendant arranged with various retail merchants that each should receive from him trading stamps the property in which, however, was to remain in him, and should pay him fifty cents per hundred stamps, and give one to each customer for every ten cents of cash purchases, while the defendant should advertise the merchants in certain directories and otherwise. A blank space was left in these directories for pasting in such stamps, and every customer who brought to the defendant one of the directories with a fixed number of stamps pasted in was entitled to receive in exchange any article he might select out of an assortment of goods kept in stock by the defendant. Apart from this the goods were not for sale:—Held, that these transactions did not constitute a selling or offering actions did not constitute a selling or offering for sale by the defendant within the meaning of a municipal by-law, passed under R. S. O. 1897 c. 223, s. 583, s.-ss. 30, 31. Regina v. Langley, 31 O. R. 295.

Transient Traders - Penalty - Costs-Imprisonment — Distress. | — The defendant was convicted before a justice of the peace for that she did on a certain day, and at other times since, occupy premises in the town of B., and did carry on business on said premises by selling dry-goods, she not being entered on the assessment roll of the town for income or personal property for the current year, and not having a transient trader's license to do business in the town, as required by a certain by-law of the town; and was adjudged for her offence to forfeit and pay the sum of $50 (to be applied on taxes to become due) to be paid and applied according to law, and also to pay to the justice the sum of $11.45 for his costs in that behalf; and if these sums were not paid forthwith, she was adjudged to be imprisoned. The first clause of the by-law provided that every transient trader who occupied premises in the municipality and who was not entered in the assessment roll, and who might offer goods or merchandise for sale, should take out a license from the municipality. The second clause provided that every other person who occupied premises in the municipality for a temporary period should take out a license. The eighth clause provided for the imposition of a penalty for a breach of any of the provisions of the by-law, and that, in default of payment of the penalty and costs, the same should be levied by distress, and authorized imprisonment in default of distress:-Held, that the defendant was not brought within either the first or second clause of the by-law, as it was not alleged or charged that she was a transient trader or that she occupied premises in the municipality for a temporary period; and these omissions were fatal to the conviction. Regina v. Caton, 16 O. R. 11, followed. Held, also, that the conviction was open to objection because of the application of the penalty, the award of the costs to the justice, instead of to the informant, and the award of imprisonment upon default in payment of the penalty. The conviction was quashed, and costs were given against the informant. Regina v. Roche, 32 O. R. 20.

Transient Traders.]—The by-law under which the defendant was convicted, provided that "no transient trader or other person occupying a place of business in the town of M. for a temporary period less than one year, and whose name has not been duly entered on the assessment roll for the current year, shall " offer goods, wares, and merchandise for sale " within the limits of the town of M. without, or until he shall have first duly obtained a license for that purpose." The conviction was for that the defendant, being a transient trader, occupying a place of business in the town of M., did sell certain goods, wares, and merchandise, contrary to the by-law:—Held, that the want of an allegation in the conviction that the defendant was a transient trader whose name had not been duly entered on the assessment roll for the current year, was fatal. Regina v. Caton, 16 O. R. 11.

On the trial of a charge of being a transient trader without a license contrary to a municipal by-law, no copy thereof certified by the clerk to be a true copy, and under the corporate seal, as required by s. 289 of R. S. O. 1887 c. 184, was given in evidence. A by-law stated by the solicitor for the complainant to be the original by-law, was, however, read to the defendant in court:—Held, that the requirements of s. 289 not having been complied with, the conviction was invalid, and must be quashed. Regina v. Douvslay, 19 O. R. 622.

Trespass—Redway,]—Section 283 of the Railway Act of Canada, 51 Vict, c. 29, enabling a justice of the peace for any county to deal with cases of persons found trespassing upon railway tracks, applies only where the constable arrests an offender and takes him before the justice. A summary conviction of the defendant by a justice for the county of York, for walking upon a railway track in the city of Toronto, was quashed where the defendant was not arrested but merely summoned. Regina v. Hughes, 26 O. R. 486.

Weights and Measures Act.] — Held, that although irregularly directed imprisonment was justified in default of distress by 8, 62 of 32 & 33 Vict. c, 31 (D.), incorporated in the Weights and Measures Act by 8, 53 thereof; but that if such imprisonment were not so justified the whole conviction would be bad, there being no power to amend by striking out the award of imprisonment. Regina v, Dunning, 14 O. R. 52.

X. Suspension of Civil Right of Action,

Arson. — Held, that where the original holder of a policy had been indicted for arson, it would not be in the interest of justice to postpone a suit by the assignee of the policy until after the criminal trial. Whitelaw v. National Ins. Co.; Whitelaw v. Phanix Ins. Co., 13 C. I. J. 139.

Assult:]—To an action for assult and battery defendant pleaded that before action brought the plaintiff laid an information before a magistrate, charging defendant with feloniously, &c., wounding the plaintiff with intent to do him grievous bodily harm, thereby charging the defendant with felony: that defendant was brought before the magistrate, and committed for trial, which had not yet taken place; that the subject of both the civil and criminal prosecution was the same, and that plaintiff's civil right of action was suspended until the criminal charge was disposed of:—Held, plea good, and an order was accordingly made staying the civil action in the meantime. Taylor v. McCullough, S O. R, 309.

Assault—Bar of Civil Remedy.]—See Assault, ante col. 1633.

Embezzlement — Money had and Received, —In an action for money had and received:—Held, that an exemplification of an indictment upon which defendant had been convicted of embezzlement, but acquitted on a charge of larceny, was admissible to shew that defendant had been acquitted of the felony, so that the civil action would lie. Macdonald y, Ketchun, 7 C. P. 484.

Embezzlement— Trust — Partnership — Imperial Act.]—The Imperial Act, 20 & 21 Vict. c. 54, s. 12, provides that "nothing in this Act contained, nor any proceeding, conviction or judgment to be had or taken thereon against any person under this Act, sind of the convent, lessen, or impeach any result and the convent of the convent entered into, or security given by any trustee, having for its object the restoration or repayment of any trust property misappropriated;"—Held, that the class of trustees referred to in said Act were those guilty of misappropriation of property held upon experses trusts. Semble, that the section only covered agreements or securities given by the said Imperial Act in force in British Columbia; If in force it would not apply to a prosecution for an offence under R. S. C. c. 164 (The Larceny Act), S. S. An action was brought on a covenant given for the purpose of stifling a prosecution under R. S. C. c. 164 (The Larceny Act), under R. S. C. c. 164 (Sept. 1892;—Held, that the alleged criminal code, was not re-enacted by the Criminal Code, was not re-enacted by the Criminal Code, was not re-enacted by the Criminal code, can be consumed to the covenant could not be enforced. Further, the partnership property not having been held on an express trust the civil remedy was not preserved by the Imperial Act, Major v. McCraney, 29 S. C. R. 182.

Felony, |—The rule which prevents a civil remedy being taken whilst the prosecution for the felony which is the foundation of the action is not concluded does not apply where the Crown and not a private person is the plaintiff. Regina v. Reiffenstein, 5 P. R. 175.

Felony. |—Under the Temperance Act of 1834, where the deceased had been assaulted and killed by a person who became intoxicated by drinking to excess in defendant's inn, it was held that the legal representative might maintain an action under C. S. C. c. 78, before prosecution for felony. McCurdy v. Switt, T. C. P. 126.

Felony—Foreign Country.]—To an action on promissory notes the defence was that they were given to procure the withdrawal of a charge of felony which the plaintiff had made against defendant in Utah territory in the United States. Fer Wilson, J., the plaintiff would not have been bound first to take criminal proceedings for the felony before suing here on the notes, the suspension of the civil remedy being a matter of purely local policy. Toponce V. Martin, 38 U. C. R. 411.

Theft.]—In an action against a carrier for the non-delivery of a package of money, where the evidence sufficiently shewed a felony a nonsuit was ordered. Livingstone v. Massey, 23 U. C. R. 156.

Theft.]—The person upon whom a robbery has been committed, is even before conviction entitled to be considered as a creditor of the party committing the robbery, although the romedy for the recovery of the amount may be suspended until after conviction. Reid v. Konnedy, 21 Gr. 85. XI. MISCELLANEOUS CASES.

Administration of Justice—Constable's Services and Expenses.]—The gist of s. 12 of R. S. O. 1897 c. 101, is to empower a warden and county attorney to authorize any constable or other person to perform special services not covered by the ordinary tariff, which are in their opinion necessary for the detection of crime or the capture of persons believed to have committed serious crimes, and to do so upon the credit of the county, and so to render the county liable for the payment for such special services, and that whether the account is certified by the warden and county attorney as required by the said section or not. Sills v. Counties of Lennox and Addington, 31 O. R. 512.

Bench Warrant—Seal.]—A bench warrant issued at the quarter sessions, tested in open sessions, and signed by the clerk of the peace:—Held, not invalid for want of a seal. Fraser v. Dickson, 5 U. C. R. 231.

Criminal Liability for Act of Servant.)—The owner of the shop is criminally liable for any unlawful act done therein, in his absence, by a clerk or assistant; as, for instance, in this case, for the sale of liquor without license by a female attendant. Secus, semble, if it appeared that the act of sale was an isolated one, wholly unauthorized by him, and out of the ordinary course of his business. Regina v. King, 20 C. P. 246.

Enhancement of Future Value of Enhancement of Future Value ox Property by Railway — Tender by the Vives—Bare Indemnity—Costs.]—Upon an expropriation of land under the provisions of 30 & 51 Vict. c. 17 (D.), the measure of compensation is the depreciation in the value of the premises assessed, not only in reference to the damage occasioned by the construction of the railway, but also in reference to the loss which may probably result from its operation. 2. Where there was evidence that the railway would enhance the value for manufacturing purposes of certain portions of land remaining to claimant upon an expropriation, but it did not appear that there then was, or in the near future would be, any demand for the land for such purposes, the court did not consider this a sufficient ground upon which reduce the amount of compensation to to reduce the amount of compensation to which the claimant was otherwise entitled. 3. In assessing the value of lands taken or injuriously affected by a public work the owner should be allowed a liberal, not a bare indemnity. 4. Where the tender was not un-reasonable and the claim very extravagant, the claimant was not given costs although the amount of the award exceeded somewhat the amount tendered. McLeod v. The Queen, 2 Ex. C. R. 106.

Imperial Lands Clauses Consolidation Act, and Railway Clauses Consolidation Act—"The Government Railways Act, 1881," "I—In so far as "The Government Railways Act, 1881," re-emets the provisions of the Lands Clauses Consolidation Act, 8 & Vict, (Imp.) c. 20, where the latter statutes have been authoritatively construed by a court of appeal in England, such construction should be adopted by the courts in Canada. Trimble v. Hill, 5 App. Cas, 342, and City Bank v. Barrow, App. Cas, 644, referred to, Paradis v. The Queen, 1 Ex. C. R. 191.

Lessee's Claim Against Owner.]—The government of Canada, having taken the land of the defendant's testator for the purposes of the Welland canal, paid into court, under the statute, a sum awarded by the valuers, intended to cover all claims which the owner might be of any kind. The owner was to be at liberty to remove buildings, &c., and on psymen of the money to convey free from all other incumbrances, including taxes. The plantif was lessee of the property so taken, and channel compensation for disturbance:—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to compensation out of the money paid into court, and that his claim was one which the owner and that his claim was one which the owner and that his claim was one which the owner was liable, under 37 Vict. c. 13, s. 1 (D.), to pay. In re Welland Canal Enlargement, Fitch v. McRae, 29 Gr. 139.

Market Value—Real Value to Osner at Time of Expropriation.—In an expropriation matter the court should assess damages in the same way a jury would do in an action for forcible eviction. It is not merely the depreciation in the actual market value of the land that a claimant has to be indemnified for, it is the depreciation in such value as it had to him that should be the basis of compensation. Paradis v. The Queen, 1 Ex. C. R. 191.

Minerals—Tests.]—In a case of expropriation the claimant is not obliged to prove by costly tests or experiments the mineral contents of his land. Brown v. Commissioner for Railways, 15 App. Cas. 240, referred to, Where, however, such tests or experiments have not been resorted to, the court, or jury, must find the facts as best it can from the indications and probabilities disclosed by the evidence. The Queen v. McUurdy, 2 Ex. C. R. 311.

Municipal Assessment Rolls.]—The valuation of a property appearing upon the municipal assessment rolls does not constitute a test of the actual value upon which compensation should be based where such valuation is made arbitrarily, and without consideration of the trade carried on upon the property or the profits derivable therefrom. Paradis v. The Queen, 1 Ex. C. R. 191.

Offer to Settle Claim.]—Where claimant, for the purpose of effecting a settlement without litigation, had offered to settle his claim for a sum very much below that demanded in the pleadings, the court, while declining to limit the damages to the amount of such offer, relied upon it as a sufficient ground for not adopting the extravagant estimates made by claimant's witnesses. Falconer v. The Queen, 2 Ex. C. R. S2.

Official Arbitrators — Jurisdiction.] —
Section 34 of 31 Vict. c. 12 (D.), the Public Works Act, which provides for the reference to the board of official arbitrators of claims for damages arising from the construction, or connected with the execution of any public work, only contemplates claims for direct or consequent damages to the property, and not to the person or to the business of the claimant. McPherson v. The Queen, 1 Ex. C. R. 53.

Potential Advantages Derived from a Public Work.]—Notwithstanding the generality of the terms of 44 Vict. c. 25, s. 16 (D.), re-enacted by R. S. C. c. 40, s. 15, and 50 & 51 Vict. c. 16, s. 31, which provides that the official arbitrators shall take into consideration the advantages accrued, or likely to accrue to the claimant, or his estate, as well as the injury or damage occasioned by reason of the public work, such advantages must be limited to those which are special and direct to such estate, and not construed to include the general benefits shared in common with all the neighbouring estates. The Queen v. Carrier, 2 Ex. C. R. 36.

Profits.] — The loss of profits derivable from the prosecution of a certain business is of a personal character, and cannot be construed as a direct or consequent damage to property within the meaning of s. 34 of 31

CROWN.

Viet, c. 12. Lefebvre v. The Queen, 1 Ex. C. R. 121.

Profits.]—Where lands are injuriously affected but no part thereof expropriates, damages to a man's trade or business, or any dungare not arising out of injury to the land itself, are not grounds of compensation; but where lands has been taken, compensation, as well as from the construction and maintenance of the works. Jubb v, Hull Bock Co., 9 Q. B. 443, and buke of Buceleuch v, Metropolitan Board of Works, L. R. 5 E. 221, L. R. 5 H. E. 418, referred to. Paradis v. The Queen, 1 Ex. C. R. 191.

Prospective Capabilities of Property — Value to Owner — Unity of Estate Advantage to Paper Town from Railway.] In assessing damages in cases of expropriation, regard should be had to the prospective capabilities of the property arising from its situation and character; 2. in awarding compensation for property expropriated, the court should consider the value thereof to the owner and not to the authority expropriating the same. Stebbing v. Metropolitan Board of Works, L. R. 6 Q. B. 37, followed; 3. in assessing damages where land has been expro-priated, the unity of the estate must be considered, and if, by the severance of one of sev eral lots so situated that the possession and control of each give an enhanced value to them all, the remainder is depreciated in value, such depreciation is a substantive ground for com pensation; 4, the advantage resulting to the owner of a paper town from the Crown mak ing it the terminus of a Government railway, and constructing within its limits a station house and other buildings, is one that should be taken into account by way of set-off under 50 & 51 Vict. c. 16, s. 31 (D.). Paint v. The Queen, 2 Ex C. R. 149.

Prospective Capabilities of Property.]—Inder the provisions of 31 Vict. e, 12, s. 34 (D.), in assessing compensation in respect of damage to property arising from the construction or connected with the execution of any public work, the prospective capabilities of such property must be taken into consideration, as they may form an important element in determining its real value. Mayor of Montreal v. Brown, 2 App. Cas. 168, referred to. Lefebre v. The Queen, 1 Ex. C. R. 121.

Quebec Law—Interest.]—Apart from any legislation of the Dominion Parliament, where lands have been expropriated for any purpose, a right to compensation obtains under the law of the Province of Quebec in the same way as under the law of England. Under the law of the Province of Quebec where interest is allowed on an award by the official arbitrators, a claim for loss of profits or rent cannot be entertained by the court on appeal, as such interest must be regarded as representing the profits. Paradis v. The Queen, 1 Ex. C. R. 1911.

Sales of Similarly Situated Properties. —When lands possess a certain value for building purposes at the time of expropriation, but that value cannot be ascertained from an actual sale of any lot or part thereof, the sales of similar and similarly situated properties constitute the best test of such value. Falconer v. The Queen, 2 Ex. C. R. 82.

(b) Lands Injuriously Affected.

Damage Peculiar to Property in Question. — To entitle the owner of property alleged to be injuriously affected by the construction of a public work to compensation, it must appear that there is an interference with some right incident to his property, such as a right of way by land or water, which differs in kind from that to which other of Her Majesty's subjects are exposed. It is not enough that such interference is ground in common with the public. Robinson v. The Queen, 4 Ex. C. R. 430.

Deprivation of Access — Interference With Navigation.]—An interference with the right of navigation in a harbour, which the owner of a wharf suffers in common with the public, is not sufficient to sustain a claim for compensation for the injurious affection of the property on which the wharf is structure resulting from the constructor public work; 2: but whe constructor enders a private right of access which the barron or with the use of such water of the hardon or with the use of such water for the hardon or with the use of such water for the lading and unlading of vessels at his wharf, the claimant is entitled to compensation. Magee v. The Queen, 5 Ex. C. R. 391.

Destruction of Highway-Obstruction to Navigation.]—Where lands are taken for a public work, and other lands, held with those so taken, are injuriously affected by the construction of the work, the measure of damages is, in general, the value of the lands taken and the depreciation in value of such other lands: 2, the claimant's lands were situated upon an island connected with the mainland by a highway carried over a structure in waters that were, in law, navigable, but had not been used for the purpose of navigation, being only some five or six feet in depth. The obstruction had been acquiesced in for many years. The Crown had repaid to the land owners on the island money the latter had expended in repairing the highway over this structure, and the municipality had also expended money in repairing the highway where it crossed such waters. By the construction of a public work this highway was flooded and destroyed. The Crown, however, treated it as a public way, and substituted another way for it that mitigated, but did not wholly prevent the deprecia-tion in value of the claimant's property:— Held, that even if the legislature had not authorized the obstruction in such navigable waters, the claimant was entitled to compensa-tion for the depreciation caused by the construction of the public work, inasmuch as such depreciation did not arise from any proceeding taken by the Crown for the removal of such obstruction. The Queen v. Moss, 5 Ex. C. R.

Drainage—Prospective Damages—Acquittance by Predecessor in Title.]—Where, by the construction of a railway, the claimant is put to greater trouble and expense in carrying off surface water from his lands through the boundary ditches between his farm and the farms adjoining he is entitled to compensation therefor; 2, the injury thereby occasioned to claimant is one that could have been foreseen at the time when part of his land was taken for the purposes of the railway, and was discharged by an acquittance given to the company of all damages resulting from such expropriation. Simoneau v. The Queen, 2 Ex. C. R. 391.

Easement—Diminution in Value of Part of Land not Taken.]—The statute 48 Vict. c. 21 (O.), authorized the taking of land for the purpose of a public park, and defined land, as including "any parcel of land, stream, * * and any easement in any land." There was no express provision for compensation for lands in inriously affected, the compensation, price, or value mentioned in the Act, being only for the land taken. Fourteen acres of an estate of thirty three acres owned by B. were taken for the park. The thirty three property owned by B, and leased by him for the purposes of an hotel for a term of twenty years from February, 1881. The water supply for the hotel was, and had been for thirty years, derived from springs on the fourteen An appeal as to the amount of compensation was dismissed, except as to the question of the supply of water for the hotel property. As to that, it being an easement which passed to the tenant under the lease, and being "land" within the meaning of the Act, the fourteen acres might be expropriated, leaving the easement to be enjoyed by B. as appurtenant to the hotel property; or it might be extinguished in which case it would be a proper subject for compensation, and it not appearing upon the evidence whether this had been considered, the award was referred back Commissioners of Niagara Falls Park, 14 A.

Fire—Increased Risk from Fire by Railway—Depreciation from Nature of Expected Lsr. |—Damage resulting from increased risk from fire by reason of the intended user of the expropriated property is a proper subject for compensation. Duke of Buccleuch v, Metropolitan Board of Works, L. R. 5 H. L. 418, and Cowper Essex v, Local Board for Acton, 14 App. Cas. 153, referred to. 2. Where lands are taken and others held therewith injuriously affected, the measure of compensation is the depreciation in value of the premises damaged, assessed not only with reference to the injury occasioned by the construction of the authorized works, but also with reference to the loss which may probably result from the nature of the user. Straits of Canseau Marine R, W, Co, v, The Queen, 2 Ex, C, R.

Frightening Horses—Interfering with Work—Market Value.] — A portion of the claimant's property, although not damaged by the construction of the railway, was injuriously affected by its operation, inasmuch as near a certain point thereon trains emerged suddenly and without warning from a snow-shed, frightening the claimant's horses and thereby interfering with the prosecution of his work:—Held, that this was a proper subject for compensation. Where certain land remaining to the owner was not appreciably affected in respect of the value it had to him for the purposes of occupation, the damages were ascertained and assessed in respect of its depreciation in market value. Vezina v. The Queen, 2 Ex. C. R. 11.

Injury Done—Lands Clauses Consolidation Act.]—The phrase "injury done" in 31 Vict. c. 12, s. 40 (D.), is commensurate with, and has the same intendment as, the phrase "injuriously affected" in 8 & 9 Vict, c. 18, s. 68, Imperial Lands Clauses Consolidation Act, and, in so far as the similarity extends, cases decined under the Imperial Act may be cited with authority in construing the Canadian statute. McPherson v. The Queen, 1 Ex. C. R. 53, See also, Paradis v. The Queen, 1 Ex. C. R. 191.

Navigable Stream - Public Easement-—Riparian Rights.]—The public easement of passage in a navigable stream is so far in derogation of the rights of riparian owners as to enable the Crown to make any use of the water or bed of the stream which the legislature deems expedient for improving the navi-gation thereof; 2. defendants, who were pros-centing a milling business on certain waters forming part of the Trent Valley Canal, asserted a claim against the Crown for a quan-tity of land taken for the improvement of the navigation of such waters, and also claimed a large sum for damages alleged to have been sustained by them (1) as riparian owners by reason of the taking of the land on both sides of a head-race preventing any future enlarge-ment of the width of such head-race, and (2) from the fact that they would not be able in the future to use to the full extent all the power which the mill-pond contained, because they could not cut raceways from the pond into the river through the expropriated part:

—Held, that while the defendants were entitled to compensation for the quantity of land taken by the Crown they could not recover for any injury to the remaining land arising from the utilization of the waters of the stream for the purpose of improving the navigation. Semble, that where no particular estate was sought to be expropriated in a notice and sought to be expropriated in a notice and tender to claimants under s. 10 of 50 & 51 Vict, c. 17 (D.) (repealed by 52 Vict, c. 13 (D.)), it is to be presumed that the Crown intended to take whatever estate, &c., claimants had in the lands expropriated. The Queen v. Fowlds, 4 Ex. C. R. 1.

Obstruction of Access—Construction of Railway Siding on Sidewalk Contiguous to Land.]—Where lands are injuriously affected, no part thereof being taken, the owners are not entitled to compensation under the Government Railways Act, 1881, unless the injury (1) is occasioned by an act made lawful by the statutory powers exercised, (2) is such an injury as would have sustained an action but for such statutory powers, and (3) is an injury to tands or some right or interest therein, and not a personal injury or an injury to trade; 2, the construction of a railway siding along the sidewalk contiguous to a claimant's lands whereby access to such lands is interfered with, and the frontage of the property destroyed for the uses for which it is held (in this case for sale in building lots), is such an injury thereto as will entitle the owner to compensation. Quere, whether the rule that compensation in cases of injurious affection only, must be confined to such damages as arise from the construction of the authorized works, and must not be extended to those resulting from the user of such works, is applicable to cases arising under the Government Railways Act, 1881? The Queen v. Barry, 2 Ex. C, R. 333.

Obstruction of Access.] — The defendant was the owner of a dwelling-house and property fronting on a public highway. In the construction of a government railway, the Crown erected a bridge or overhead crossing on a portion of the highway in such a manner as to obstruct access from such highway to defendant's property, which he had theretofore freely enjoyed:—Held, that the defendant was entitled to compensation under the Government Railways Act and the Expropriation Act. Beckett v. Midland R. W. Co. L. R. 3 C. P. 82, referred to. The Queen v. Malculm, 2 Ex. C. R. 357.

Obstruction of Canal.]—See Fairbanks v. The Queen, 24 S. C. R. 711.

Potential Advantage of Railway to Remaining Property. —On appeal from an award of the official arbitrators, the court, in assessing the amount of compensation to be paid to the owner, declined to take into consideration any advantage that would accrue to the property if a siding connecting the property with the railway were constructed, as there was no legal obligation upon the Crown to give such siding, and it might never be constructed. Charland v. The Queen, 1 Ex. C. R. 21.

Profits—Danger of Fire.]—Although a claimant is entitled to reasonable compensation for the damage sustained in respect of the injury to, and depreciation in value of, his property arising from the construction and operation of a railway in its immediate vicinity, he is not entitled to damages for loss and injury to his business consequent thereon; nor for extra rates of insurance it might become necessary for him to pay upon vessels in some off construction in his shipyard by reaching the construction of the railway. Metropolitum Board of Works v, McCarthy, L. R. 7 H. L. 243, fellowed, McPherson v. The Queen, 1 Ex. C.

Profits. |—In assessing damages for injury osciolated to a property by the construction of a railway, the annual loss of profits since the commencement of the injury as well as the permanent decrease in the value of the property, must be taken into consideration. Pouliot v. The Queen, 1 Ex. C. R. 313.

Undertaking to Give Right of Way—Future Damages—Increased Value by Reason of Public Work.]—Defendants owned a certain property situated in the counties of Ynudreuil and Soulanges, a portion of which was taken by the Crown for the nurposes of the Soulanges Canal. Access to the remaining portion of the defendants' land was cut off by the canal, but the Crown, under the provisions of 52 Vict. c, 28, s, 3 (D.), filed an undertaking to build and maintain a suitable road or right of way across the property for the use of the defendants. The evidence shewed that the effect of this road would be to do away with all future damage arising from the deprivation of access; and the court assessed damages for the past deprivation only. It having been agreed between the parties in this case that the question of damages which might possibly arise in the future from any flooding of the defendants' lands should not be dealt with in the present action, the court took cognizance of such agreement in pronouncing judgment. In respect to the land taken the court declined to assess compensation based upon the consideration that the lands were of more value to the Crown than they were to the defendants at the time of the taking. Stebbing v. Metropolitan Board of Works, L. R. 6 Q. B. 37, and Paint v. The Queen, 2 Ex. C. R. 149, 18 S. C. R. 718, followed. The Queen v. Harwood, 6 Ex. C. R. 420.

Water Rights—Prospective Capabilities of Property—Linavigable Stream of Water Running through Claimant's Land,1—Where the Crown in the construction of a public work had forever destroyed the milling capabilities of a property and deprived the owner of a future income derivable from the property as applied to such a use, and had rendered useless certain mills and their machinery situate thereon:—Held, in assessing compensation in respect of damage to property arising from the construction, or connected with the execution, of any public work, under the provisions of 31 Vict. c. 12, s. 34, the prospective capabilities of such property must be taken into consideration, as they may form an important element in determining its real value. Mayor of Montreal v. Brown, 2 App. Cas. 168, referred to, (2) The owner of land through which unnavigable water flows in its natural course is proprietor of the latter by right of accession; it is at his exclusive disposition during the interval it crosses his property, and he is entitled to be indemnified for the destruction of any water power which has been or may be derivable therefrom. Lefebere v. The Queen, 1 Ex. C. R. 121.

(c) Lands Taken.

Assessment — Valuation of Property.] — The valuation of a property appearing upon the municipal assessment rolls does not constitute a test of the actual value upon which compensation should be based where such valuation is made arbitrarily, and without consideration of the trade carried on upon the property or the profits derivable therefrom. Paradis v. The Queen, 1 Ex. C. R. 191.

Building Purposes.]—The Crown had expropriated a certain portion of land which the claimant contended was held for saile as building lots. It was established in evidence that such land had not been laid off into lots prior to the expropriation, and that none purposes. There was evidence, however, shew that there was a remote probability that the land would become available for such purposes upon the extension of the limits of an adjoining town:—Held, that while such remote probability added something to the value which the property would otherwise have had, compensation should not be based on any supposed value of the land for building purposes at the time of the expropriation. Kearney v. The Queen, 2 Ex. C. R. 21. Judgment varied by the supreme court by increasing the compensation; see Cassels Dig. 313.

Building Purposes—Sales of Similarly Situated Properties—Crossings.]—When lands possess a certain value for building purposes at the time of expropriation, but that value cannot be ascertained from an actual sale of any lot or part thereof, the sales of similar and similarly situated properties constitute the best test of such value. (2) There is no legal liability upon the Crown to give a claimant a crossing over any Government railway, and where the Crown offered by its pleadings to construct a crossing for claimant.

ant, the court assessed damages in view of the fact that there were no means of enforcing the performance of such undertaking. (3) Where claimant for the purpose of effecting a settlement without litigation, had offered to settle his claim for a s m very much below that demanded in his pleadings the court, while declining to limit the damages to the amount of such offer, relied upon it as a sufficient ground for not adopting the extravagant estimates made by claimant's witnesses. Falconer v. The Queen, 2 Ex. C. R. 82.

Character of the Title.] — Claimants' tile to a water lot, in the harbour of Quebee, was based on a grant from the Lieutenant-Governor of Quebee, prior to Confederation. The grant centrained, inter alia, a provision that upon giving the grantee twelve months' notice, and paying him a reasonable sum as indemnity for improvements, the Crown might resume possession of the said water lot for the purpose of public improvement, would be represented by the property being situated in a public harbour, this power of resuming possession for the purpose of public improvement, would be exercisable by the Crown as represented by the Government of Canada. Holman v. Green, 6 S. C. R. 707, referred to. (2) Inasmuch as the Crown had not exercised this power, but had proceeded under the expropriation clauses of the Government Railways Act, the claimants were entitled to recover the fair value of the lot at the date of expropriation. The value, however, should be determined with reference to the nature of the title. Samson v. The Queen, 2 Ex. C. R. 30.

Interest. |—Interest may be allowed from the date of the taking of possession of any property expropriated by the Crown, even if the plan and description be not filled on that date. Drury v. The Queen, 6 Ex. C. R. 294.

Lease—Lessees' Loss of Profits—Increased Cost of Carrying on Business.]—The sup-pliants were lessees of certain land and premises expropriated for the Intercolonial Railway. The premises had been fitted up and were used by them, for the purposes of their business as coal merchants. By the terms of the lease under which they were in possession, the term for which they held could at any time be determined by the lessors by giving six months' notice in writing, in which even the suppliants were to be paid two thousand five hundred dollars for the improvements they had made: Held, that the measure of compensation to be paid to the suppliants was the value at the time of the expropriation of their leasehold interest in the lands and premises. Apart from the sum payable for improvements, there was no direct evidence to shew what the value was, but it appeared that the suppliants had procured other premises in which to carry on their business, and that in doing so they had of necessity been at some loss, and that the cost of carrying on their business had been increased. The amount of the loss and of increased cost of carrying on business during the six months succeeding the expropriation proceedings was in addition to the sum mentioned taken to represent the value to them, or to any person in a like position, of their interest in the premises. The suppliants also contended that if they had not been disturbed in their possession they would have increased their business, and so have made additional profits, and they claimed compensation for the loss of such profits, but this claim was not allowed. Gibbon v. The Queen, 6 Ex. C. R. 430.

Market Value.]—It is the real value of the land to the owner at the time of the expropriation that must be taken as the basis of compensation; and where claimant sought to recover damages in respect of a portion of his farm as a gravel pit, but failed to shew that it had a value quoud hoc at the time of the taking, the court declined to assess its value otherwise than as farm land. Vezina v. The Queen, 2 Ex. C. R. 11.

Market Value—Real Value to Owner at Time of Expropriation. —In an expropriation matter the court should assess damages in the same way a jury would do in an action for forcible eviction. It is not merely the depreciation in the actual market value of the land that a claimant has to be indemnified for, it is the depreciation in such value as it had to him, that should be the basis of compensation. Paradis v. The Queen, 1 Ex. C. R. 191.

Possession of Buildings on Expropriated Property—Use and Occupation—Interest.]—Where the Crown had expropriated certain real property for the purposes of a railway, but had for a number of years left the owner in the use and occupation of several buildings thereon, two of which, an hotel and a store, were burned uninsured before action brought, compensation was allowed him for the value, at the time of the expropriation, of all the buildings together with interest on the value of the hotel and store from the time they were so destroyed. The Queen v. Clarke, 5 Ex. C. R. 64.

Prospective Capabilities of Land for More than One Purpose—Basis of Valuation.]—B. & Co. were owners of uncleared land in a parish in the Province of Manitoba, upon which certain agents of the Dominion Government had entered at different times, under the provisions of s. 25 of 31 Vict. c. 12 (D.), and taken therefrom large quantities of sand and gravel:—Held, that the official arbitrators were wrong in assessing the damages in respect of the agricultural value of the land; and that such assessment should have been made in respect of its value as a sand and gravel pit. Semble, where lands are taken which possess capabilities rendering them available for more than one purpose, under s. 40 of the Public Works Act, 31 Vict. c. 12, compensation for such taking should be assessed in respect of that purpose which gives the lands their highest value. Burton v. The Queen, 1 Ex. C. R. 87.

Prospective Capabilities of Property

— Advantage Accruing to Projected Town from Railway.]— In assessing damages in cases of expropriation, regard should be had to the prospective capabilities of the property arising from its situation and character. (2)
In awarding compensation for property expropriated, the court should consider the value thereof to the owner, and not to the authority expropriating the same. Stebbing v. Metropolitan Board of Works, L. R. 6 Q. B. 37, followed. (3) In assessing damages where land has been expropriated, the unity of the estate must be considered, and if by the severance of one of several lots so situated that the possession and control of each gives an enhanced value to them all the remainder is depreciated in value, such depreciation is a substantive ground for compensation. (4) The advantage resulting to the owner of a paper town from the Crown making it the terminus of a government railway, and constructing within its limits a station-house and other buildings, is one that should be taken into account by way of set-off under 50 & 51 Vict. c, 16, 8, 13 (D.). Paint v. The Queen, 2 Ex. C. R. 149, 18.8. C. R. 718.

Siding.]—On appeal from an award of the official arbitrators, the court, in assessing the amount of compensation to be paid to the owner, declined to take into consideration any advantage that would accrue to the property if a siding connecting the property with the railway were constructed, as there was no legal obligation upon the Crown to give such siding, and it might never be constructed. Charland v. The Queen, 1 Ex. C. R. 201.

Special Value to Owners-Advantages Derived from a Public Work - Nature of Title.]—In assessing compensation to be paid to an owner whose land has been expropriated, the market value of the property should not be exclusively considered. Although the claim-ant has the right to sell his property, and should therefore be indemnified in respect of any loss which, in consequence of the expropriation, he might make on such sale, he is not bound to sell, and may reasonably prefer to keep his property for the purpose of his business; and in that case should be indemnified for any depreciation in its value to him for the purpose for which he has been accustomed, and still desires to use it. (2) Not withstanding the generality of the terms of 44 Vict. c. 25, s. 16 (D.), re-enacted by R. S. C. c. 40, s. 15, and 50 & 51 Vict. c. 16, S. 31 (D.), which provides that the official arbitrators shall take into consideration the advantages accrued, or likely to accrue, the claimant or his estate, as well as the injury or damage occasioned by reason of the public work, such advantages must be limited to those which are special and direct to such estate, and not construed to include the genbenefit shared in common with all the neighbouring estates. (3) In assessing compensation to be paid to a claimant whose land has been expropriated, the court will look at the nature of his title as one of the criteria of value. The Queen v. Carrier, 2 Ex. C. R.

Temporary Enhancement in Value—Interest.]—The temporary enhancement in the value of lands by reason of their being adjacent to the site of a projected railway teninus which had been abandoned, was not taken into consideration by the court in assessing compensation under s. 31 of The Exchequer Court Act (prior to its amendment by 54 & 55 Vict. c. 26, s. 37 (D.), for the expropriation of such lands. (2) Where the Crown has gone into possession of lands sought to be expropriated for the purposes of a public work, interest upon the sum awarded as their value may be computed from the date of entering into possession, notwithstanding the fact that the Crown may not have acquired a good title to the lands until a date subsequent to that of such entry into possession. The Queen v. Murray, 5 Ex. C. R. 69.

2. Crossings.

Damage Occasioned by Want of Crossing. — By the absence of a crossing over the railway, claimant was deprived of access to the shore, and thereby suffered loss in the use and occupation of the property remaining to her:—Held, that claimant was entitled to compensation in respect of the damage resulting from the want of a crossing. Kearney v. The Queen, 2 Ex. C. R. 21.

Damage Occasioned by Want of Crossing.]—Where, upon the expropriation of land for the right of way of a government railway through a claimant's property, a crossing over the railway is not provided by the Crown, damages will be allowed for the depreciation of his property resulting from the absence of such crossing. Guay v. The Queen, 2 Ex. C. R. 18.

Offer to Give Crossing.]—There is no legal liability upon the Crown to give a claimant a crossing over any government railway, and where the Crown offered by its pleadings to construct a crossing for claimant, the court assessed damages in view of the fact that there were no means of enforcing the performance of such undertaking. Falconer v. The Queen, 2 Ex. C. R. 82.

3. Miscellaneous Cases.

Agreement to Accept a Certain Sum as Compensation. |- Defendants entered into a written agreement to sell and convey to the Crown, by a good and sufficient deed a certain quantity of land, required for the purposes of the Cape Breton Railway, for the sum of $1,250. At the date of such agreement the centre line of the railway had been staked off through the defendants' property. staked off through the defendants' and they were fully aware of the location of the right of way and the quantity of land to be taken from them for such purposes. Thereafter, and within one year from the date of such agreement, the land in dispute was set out and ascertained, and a plan and description thereof duly deposited of record, in pur-suance of the provisions of R. S. C. c. 39. Upon the defendants refusing to carry out their agreement on the ground that the damages were greater than they anticipated, and the matter being brought into court on the information of the attorney-general, the court assessed the damages at the sum so agreed upon:—Quære—Is the Crown in such a case entitled to specific performance? The Queen v.McKenzie, 2 Ex. C. R. 198.

Annuity Dependent on Ownership.]—A testator devised his residential estate, with the islands, lands, and grounds appertaining, to his nephew, whose grandmother, by her will, directed her executors to pay him $2,000 a year so long as he should remain the woner and nactual occupant of the property, "to enable him the better to keep up, decorate, and beautify the property known as and the islands connected therewith: "—Held, that the expropriation, under an Act of the Legislature, of a part of the property, did not in any way affect the right to this annuity; and therefore in awarding compensation to the nephew for the lands expropriated the arbitrators properly excluded the consideration of any contemplated loss by him of this annuity. In re Macklem and Commissioners of Niagara Falls Park, 14 A. R. 20.

Falls Park, 14 A. R. 20.

A failure to reside and occupy as required by her will would be in the nature of a forfeiture for breach of a condition subsequent.

and his right to the annuity would continue absolute until something occurred to divest the estate which must be by his own act or default; the vis major of a binding statute could not work a forteiture. Ib.

Claimant's Acquiescence in Construction of Culverts. —The supplinat sought to recover damages for the flooding of a portion of his farm, resulting from the construction of certain works connected with the Intercolonial Railway. The Crown produced release under the hand of the suppliant, given subsequent to the time of the exprepriation of a portion of his farm for the right of way of a section of the Intercolonial Railway, whereby he accepted a certain sum "in full compensation and final settlement for deprivation of water, fence-rails taken, damage by water, and all damages past, present and prospective arising out of the construction of the Intercolonial Railway," and released the Crown "from all claims and demands whatever in connection therewith." It was also proved that although the works were executed subsequent to the date of this release, they were undertaken at the request of the suppliant and for his benefit, and not for the benefit of the railway, and that, with respect to part of them, he was present when it was being constructed and efficient in the construction: and of the provided of the construction: and of the construction is such construction: and of the construction is such construction: and of the construction of the construction and effect of the real was not entitled to compensation. Bertrand v. The Queen, 2 Ex. C. R. 285.

Conversion into Personalty.] — When land is taken under authority of legislative provisions similar to Revised Statutes of Nova Scotia, 4th series, c. 36, s. 40 et seq., the compensation money, as regards the capacity of married women to deal with it, is still to be regarded in equity as land. Kearney v. Kean, 3 S. C. R. 332.

Damages Claimed from Claimant. |—
The claimants sought to recover from the Crown the amount of damages they alleged they were obliged to pay to a contractor who was prevented by the expropriation from completing the construction of what fine and undertaken to build for them:—Held, that as the contractor had been prevented from completing the construction of the wharf by the exercise of powers conferred by Act of Farliament, the claimants ere exensed from any liability to him in respect of the breach of contract and could not maintain any claim against the Crown in that behalf. Nameon v. The Queen, 2 Ex. C. R. 30.

Damage from Government Railway—Parol Undertaking by Officer of the Uroun.]—Claimants are entitled to take such steps and to execute such works as are necessary to make their property injuriously affected by carrying out government improvements as good, safe and serviceable as it was before the interference therewith, and to recover from the Crown the expenses thereby incurred, and are entitled to be fully indemnified for any injury done, but in this case they were held not entitled to improve their water system and service at the Crown's expense. 2. Where the question of the government engineer's authority, under the circumstances of this case, to make a parol contract whereby the Crown's liability would be extended, was not raised:—Held, that the claimants were entitled, under the contract made with him, to recover the cost of the works executed under their engineer's directions.

tion. St. John Water Commissioners v. The Queen, 2 Ex. C. R. 78, 19 S. C. R. 125.

Dedication of Highway.]—In the construction of a government railway the Crown diverted street as laid out on a registered plan, which, although it had not been declared a public way, was used as such, and public work compensation on it. The claimant asked street was her private property:—Held, I. That the question was one of dedication rather than of prescription; that the evidence shewed that the claimant had dedicated the street to the public; and that it was not necessary for the Crown to prove user by the public for any particular time. 2. That the law of the Province of Quebec relating to the doctrine of dedication or destination is the same as the law of England. Semble, that IS Vict. c. 100, s. 41, s.-8, 9, is a temporary provision having reference to roads in existence and style provided that the context of the Discontinuance. |—Where issue has been joined and the trial fixed in an expropriation proceeding, the Crown may obtain an order to discontinue upon payment of defendant's costs; but the court will not require the Crown to give an undertaking for a flat to issue upon any petition of right which the defendant may subsequently present. The Queen v. Stewart, 6 Ex. C. R. 215.

Filing Plans—Contractor to Build Government Railway, 1—Section 199 of the Government Railway, 1—Section 199 of the Government Railway Act of 1881, 44 Vict. c. 25 (D.). provides that "no action shall be brought against any officer, employee or servant of the Department of Railways and Canals for anything done by virtue of this office, service or employment, exception, three months after the act committed, and upon one month's previous townwriting."

—Held, that a contractor of the Minister of Railways and Canada as representing the Intercolonial Railway, is not an "employee" in the Intercolonial Railway, is not an "employee" in the Intercolonial Railway, is not an "employee" in the Intercolonial Railway, is not an "employee" to the Government of Canada to expropriate lands required for any public work can only be exercised after compliance with the statute requiring the land to be set out by metes and bounds and a plan or description filed; if these provisions are not compiled with, and there is no order in council authorizing land to be taken when an order in council is necessary, a contractor with the Crown who enters upon the land to construct such public work thereon is liable to the owner in trespass for such entry. Kearney v. Oakes, 18 S. C. R. 148.

Flooding Land.]—The Dominion Government constructed a collecting drain along a portion of the Lachine Canal. This drain discharged its contents into a stream and syphon-culvert near the suppliant's farm. Owing to the incapacity of the culvert to carry off the large quantity of water emptied into it by the collecting drain at certain times, the suppliant's farm was flooded and the crops thereby injured. The flooding was not regular and inevitable, but depended upon certain natural conditions which might or might not occur in any given time:—Held, that the Crown was liable in damages; that the case was one as to which the court had jurisdiction under clause (d) of s, 16 of the Exchequer Court Act; and that in assessing the damages in such a case the proper mode was to assess them once for all. Davidson v. The Queen, 6 Ex. C, R, 51.

Niagara Falls Park—Closing Road.]— The statute 48 Vict. c. 21 (O.) does not empower the commissioners appointed thereunder to expropriate the rights of a road company or to close up any part of the road for the purposes of the Niagara Falls Park. Re Niagara Falls Park. Re Niagara Falls Park. R. 65.

Prince Edward Island Railway—Effect of Non-Entry of Commissioners on Land Taken,—Held, on the facts of this case, that the railway commissioners had not complied with the statute, 34 Vict. c. 4, s. 13 (P.E.I.), and that the Crown had not acquired title to the lands in question. The Queen v. Sigsworth, 2 Ex. C. R. 194.

Railway-Expropriation of a Railway by the Crown—Special Act—"Present Value of Work done"—Allowance for Capital Expend ed in Railway.]-The plaintiff company had entered into an agreement with the Dominion Government to construct, in consideration of a certain subsidy per mile, a line of railway, but when they had partially completed it abandoned active work for lack of funds. The Government under Parliamentary authority to pay all claims standing against the company on account of their par-tial construction of the line, and to set the same off against the company's subsidy, was empowered by 50 & 51 Vict. c. 27, s. 1 (D.), to acquire "by purchase, surrender or expropriation the works constructed and property owned by the said company paying therefor the amount adjudged by the Court "for the present value of the work done on the said line of railway by the said company:"—Held, that the statute contemplated the taking of all the works constructed by the company and not a portion thereof; and where a portion only was taken compensation should be assessed in respect of the total value of the works; 2. that the words "present value of the work done," in s. 1 of the said Act, should be construed to mean the value of the works constructed and the property owned by the company at the time of the passing of the Act; 3, that the word "value" in the Act meant the value of the property to the company and not to the Government; and that compensation for the taking should be assessed at the fair value of the property at the time contemplated by the Act; 4, the company were in possession of a right of way that had been acquired by proceedings taken under certain provincial statutes not applicable to the case, and for which certain county councils had, in aid of the company's undertaking, paid the proprietors whose lands were situated in such counties:—Held, that the company were entitled to compensation therefor; 5, held, also, that the company were entitled to an allowance for the use of capital expended in the enterprise. Montreal and European Short Line R. W. Co. v. The Queen, 2 Ex. C. R. 159.

Roads—Expropriation for Public Work.]
-See Re Trent Valley Canal, 11 O. R. 687.

Unfinished Wharf — Builder's Profit—Basis of Value,]—Where a wharf in course of construction, and materials to be used in completing it, had been taken by the Crown, the court allowed the claimants a sum representing the value of the wharf as it stood, together with that of the materials; and to this amount added a reasonable sum for the superintendence of the work by the builder, who was one of the claimants, for the use of money advanced, and for the risks incurred by him during the construction thereof, in other words a sum to cover a fair profit to the builder on the work so far as completed. Samson v. The Queco, 2 Ex. C. R. 94.

Vesting Title in Crown — Incumbrances. —An agreement by a proprietor to sell land to the Crown for a public work, followed by immediate possession and, within a year, by a deed of surrender, is sufficient under year, by a deed of surrender, is sufficient under to defeat a conveyance thereof made subsequent to such land in the prior to such agreement and possession, but prior to such agreement and possession, but prior to such surrender; 2, under s. 11 of the said Act the compensation money for any land acquired or taken for a public work stands in the stead of such land, and any claim or incumbrance upon such land is converted into a claim to compensation, and such claim once created continues to exist as something distinct from the land and is not affected by any subsequent transfer or surrender of such land, Partridge v. Great Western R. W. Co., S. C. P. 97, and Dixon v. Baltimore and Potomac R. W. Co., 1 Mackey 78, referred to. The Queen v. McCardy, 2 Ex. C. R. 311.

Waiver-The defendant was the owner of a dwelling house and property fronting on a public highway. In the construction of a government railway, the Crown erected a bridge or overland crossing on a portion of the highway in such a manner as to obstruct access from such highway to defendant's property, which he had theretofore freely enjoyed:—Held, that the defendant was entitled to compensation under the Government Railways Act and the Expropriation Act. Beckett v. Midland R. W. Co., L. R. 3 C. P. 82, re-ferred to; 2, the defendant, and others interested in the manner in which the crossing was to be made, consulted the government engineer, who declined to authorize a level crossing with gates, and those present at the meeting decided on a certain grade which the defendant subsequently petitioned to have altered, which was refused: — Held, that by his presence at the meeting the defendant did not waive his right to compensation. The right of way for the line of railway had been previously acquired by another railway, and the defendant's predecessor in title had been paid the damages awarded to him. But it was clearly shewn that at the time when such damages were assessed there was no intention to construct an overhead bridge, and that they were assessed on the understanding that there was to be a crossing at rail level:—Held, that the defendant was not, by reason of such payment, precluded from recovering compensation for injuries occasioned by the overhead bridge. The Queen v. Malcolm, 2 Ex. C. R. 357.

Intrusion.)—To an information of intrusion inled by Her Majesty's Attorney-General for the Dominion, prosecuting for Her Majesty, defendant pleaded that the lands mentioned were not ordnance property, or property in any manner under the control of the Dominion of Canada, but, on the contrary thereof, the said lands became upon the passing of the B. N. A. Act, 1867, and still are the property of the Province of Ontario, in which they are situated. Issue being joined on this plea, the title at the trial was gone into, and a verdict entered for the Crown, with leave to defendant to move to enter it for him:—Held, that the Crown was clearly entitled to recover, for, among other reasons, the plea set up no title in defendant, and admitted the Crown title by stating the lands to belong to this Province; and the fact of the Attorney-General for Canada prosecuting for the Crown could not shew that a Dominion title was necessarily claimed. right, or Crown grant, at the time the statutory conveyance of the railway belt by the Province of British Columbia to the Dominion of Canada took effect, are exempt from the operation of such statutory conveyance, and upon such pre-emption right being abandoned or cancelled all lands held thereunder become the property of the Crown in the right of the Province and not in the right of the Dominion. Deciding Claims to Land.]—Section 3 of 4 & 5 Vict. c. 100, giving authority to the Governor in Council to adjudge upon claims to free grants of land under any order in council then in force:—Held, to apply to located lands on which improvements have been made as well as other lands. Simpson v. Grant, 5 Gr. 267.

Exemption.]—The defendant was locatee of certain lands under the Free Grants and Homesteads Act, R. S. O. 1887 c. 25, and duly obtained patents therefor. Afterwards he and his wife sold and conveyed parts of the land, he taking back mortgages to secure the purchase money:—Held, that the mortgages were not interests in the land exempt from levy under execution within the meaning of s. 20, s.-s. 2. The exemption extends to the land or any part thereof or interest therein, so long as it is held by the original location title, whether before or after patent; but where there has been a valid alienation, a mortgage taken by the original locatee does not vest in him qua locatee. The word "interest" used in the sub-section does not extend to the chartel interest of a mortgage. Cann v. Knott. 19 O. R. 422; 20 O. R. 294.

S of the Act had been compiled with by the locatee. Judgment below, 31 O. R. 54, reversed. Meck v. Parsons, 31 O. R. 59, reversed. Meck v. Parsons, 31 O. R. 59, reversed.

5. Ordnance Lands.

Bytown Act-Dower.]-To an action of dower the tenant pleaded, that the husband in his life time, in 1823, granted certain land to the King; and from thence until the passing of 7 Vict. c. 11, the Crown continued seized of said land for purposes connected with the military defence of the Province, and the same was, during all the time aforesaid, duly set apart and occupied for the said purposes; that by the 7 Vict. c. 11, the said land was vested in the principal officers of ordnance, for the service of said department, &c.; that the lands in the declaration mentioned, formed part of the said land, and were part of the land on which a great part of Bytown had been built, as mentioned in the fifth clause of that statute, and at the passing of the Act was one of the building lots mentioned in said section, and was held under said officers by the tenant in this suit; and that under the powers contained in s. 6, the said officers in 1844, conyeyed the land to the said tenant, to be held him and his heirs for ever, clear of all charges and incumbrances of whatsoever kind or nature, as by the said statute they were empowered to do. By 7 Vict. c. 11, s. 1, the land in question was vested in the principal officers of ordnance, but it was provided that nothing in the Act should be taken to affect any right, title, or claim, vested in or pos-sessed by any person at the passing of the Act, nor to give them a better title than was then vested in the Crown; and s. 6 enacted that the said officers might convey the land, which had for some time been held by the tenant under them, "to be held as freehold forever, and clear of all charges and incumbrances of whatsoever kind or nature: Held, on demurrer, that the plea shewed no defence, for the demandant's right was not extinguished by the conveyance to the Crown, nor by the provisions of the statute. Begley v. Gibson, 19 U. C. R. 458.

Confirmatory Act.]-Section 4 of 7 Vict. 11, only protects persons who, at the time of the Act passing, held an assurance derived under the officer in charge of the ordnance, of some certain or existing estate or interest in any portions of the lands about to be vested in the ordnance. Lease—Power of Minister of Interior.]—
The Minister of the Interior cannot lease or authorize the use of ordnance lands without the authority of the Governor in Council. Quebec Skating Club v. The Queen, 3 Ex. C. Ř. 387.

Niagara River Beserve.]-Held, that under the facts stated in this case defendant, being the lessee of the ordnance department, had no right to obstruct the road leading to the Niagara Falls ferry, and that he was guilty of a nuisance in so doing. Regina v. Davis, Regina v. Fralick, 11 U. C. R. 340.

In an action by the plaintiffs, claiming under a patent from the Ontario Government, and the defendant claiming under a lease from the Dominion Government, to try the right to a part of the chain reserved along the bank of the Niagara River and the slope between the top of the bank and the water's edge, which had been reserved out of the original survey of the township of Stamford, and was claimed by the defendants to have been reserved or set apart for "military" have been reserved or set apart for mintary or "ordnance" purposes;—Held, that the "chain reserve" was part of the waste lands of the Crown held for public nurposes. It was a "government reserve" originally made for public purposes:—Held, also, that as there was no evidence that this "chain reserve" was set apart for military purposes, or of any user, charge or control of it by the military authorities, it was not affected by the Ordnance Vesting Act of 1843, 11, but remained a government re serve, held for public purposes generally, and that the portion in question vested in the Pro-vince of Ontario, as successor of the old Province of Canada, until vested in the plaintiffs, who were entitled to succeed: Held, also, that assuming the "chain reserve" had been so set apart for military purposes, the "slope formed no part of such reserve, but always remained part of the waste lands of the Province. History of the "chain reserve" along the west bank of the Niagara River from Niagara to Fort Erie traced. Commissioners for Queen Victoria Viagara Falls Park v. Howard, 23 O. R. 1: 23 A. R. 355.

Rideau Canal - Improvident Grant.]-Ouere, whether any grant improvidently made by the Crown of lands set apart for the Rideau canal, before the passing of 7 Vict. c. Rideau canal, before the passing of 7 Vet. c. 11, would not be void at common law if in-jurious to the canal, without the necessity of proceeding by sci. fa. to repen] it. Doe d. Maj-loch v. Principal Officers of Her Majesty's Ordnance, 3 U. C. R. 387.

Held, that lands which had been so grantel before the passing of the Vesting Act, 7 Vict. c. 11, but afterwards marked out and reserved by the ordnance department as unnecessary for the canal, became again re-vested in the Crown. Ib.

Right of Province.] - The purchase money of ordnance land, comprised in the second schedule of 19 Vict. c. 45, but sold by the principal officers before that Act, is thereby transferred to the Provincial Government. Her Majesty's Secretary of State for War Department v. Great Western R. W. Co., 13 Gr. 503.

Sale of Ordnance Lands in Quebec-Cancellation. |-Held, on the facts set out in the report that the sale of a lot of ordnance land to the suppliant was not duly cancelled, and that the suppliant had forfeited none of his rights under the sale, and was entitled to damages equal to the value of the lot at the time the Crown resumed possession thereof:-Quære, has the deputy minister of the interior the right to exercise the powers of cancellation vested in the commissioner of Crown lands by s, 20 of the Act of the Province of Canada, 23 Vict. c. 2. Murphly v. The Queen, 3 Ex. C. R. 75.

Trusts Affecting Ordnance Lands— Power to Vary.]—Kennedy v. City of Toronto, 12 O. R. 211.

CROWN. 1726

6. Patents and Location Tickets.

(a) In General,

Absolute Grant—Patentee Described as Free Grant Settler]—In a patent from the Crown of lots 16 and 17 in the 11th cencession of Snowdon, the patentee was described as "a free grant settler;" but the patent on its face purported to grant the land absolutely and unconditionally, and did not contain the statements required by s. 16 of the Grants and Homesteads Act, R. S. O. 1877 c. 24; and there was no evidence that the patentee ever was a locate of the land under said Act, or that the Crown intended issuing the patent thereunder:—Held, that the land under the patent might have issued under s. 12 of the Public Lands Act, R. S. O. 1877 c. 23. Canada Permanent Loon and Savings Co. v. Taylor, 31 C. P. 41.

Access to Shore.]—The usual reservation in a patent of land bounded by mavigable water of "free access to the shore for all vessels, bonts, and persons," gives a right of access only from the water to the shore, and in this case it was held that a person who had proken down fences and land driven across private property to the shore, could not successfully assert, when charged under R. S. 9817 c. 220, s. 1, and the Criminal Oston 11, that has "accete frainfal for and reasonable supposition of right." In so doing, Regina v. Davy, 21 A. R. 508.

Claim for Obtaining Patent.]—A. having a claim upon the Government for certain wild lands, gave a bond to B. to procure the patent for the same in B.'s name, on condition that B. should pay him a certain stipulated sum on a fixed day. He did so obtain the patent, and informing B. of it, requested payment. B., without refusing, put it of, and afterwards an action of assumpsit was instituted to recover this money, in which the plaintiff declared, among other things, for the value of lands sold, and for services rendered in procuring letters patent to B., granting bim certain lands in fee simple:—Held, that A. could recover. Küborn v. Forester, Dra. 332.

Conclusive Effect of Patent.]—When the Crown has issued the letters patent in view of all the facts, the grant is conclusive, and a party cannot set up equities behind the patent. Farmer v. Livingstone, S. S. C. R. 140.

Construction—Evidence.]—In construing a patent, reference may be had to papers in the Crown lands office connected with the application for the patent. Brady v. Sadler, 13 O. R. 462. See S. C., 16 O. R. 49; 17 A. R. 365.

Construction—Evidence—Other Grants.]—
In actions in which the King is a party, in the construction of grants from the Crown, where there is an ambiguity in respect of the premises—as, for instance, what is to be considered the bank of a river—other grants from the Crown are admissible in evidence to assist the construction. Clark v. Bonnycastle, 3 O, 8, 528.

Grants from the Crown, either for a valuable consideration or of special favour, are to be construed in the same manner as deeds from subject to subject. Ib.

Construction—Use.]—The Crown granted lands by letters patent to J. S., in trust for his son, a lunatic, his heirs and assigns for ever, to have and to hold the same land to him, the said J. S., his heirs and assigns for ever:—Held, that this patent coming, as any other mode of assurance, under the operation of the Statute of Uses, 27 Hen. VIII. c. 10, if it did not, from particular considerations applying to the lunatic only, vest the real estate in him, yet that it nevertheless created a use which, on the death of the lunatic, was executed in his heir, and that therefore a deed, made by the heir after his death, would be valid as against a deed executed by the grantee of the Crown. Doe d. Snyder v. Masters, S U. C. R. 55.

Construction.]—The land in question was granted by letters patent to A. G., her heirs and assigns for ever, "to have and to hold the said parcel or tract of land thereby given and granted to her the said A. G., in trust for herself and her children, M. G. and F. G.:—Held, that A. took the fee, and that no legal estate passed to the children. Goldie v. Taylor, 13 U. C. R. 603.

Crown Grant—Scal—Exemplification.]—A grant from the Crown must be a matter of record and under the great seal. An exemplification under the great seal of a grant invalid in its inception, will not have the effect of making such grant valid by relation from its commencement. Doe d, Jackson v, Wilkes, 4 O, S. 142.

A grant of lands, in 1784, by the then Governor of the Province of Quebec, and under his seal at arms, to the Mohawk Indians and others, conveyed no legal estate; as not being by letters patent under the great seal, and for want of a grantee or grantees capable of holding. Doe d. Sheldon v. Ramsay, 9 U. C. R. 105.

Description — Unsurveyed Township— Subsequent Survey.]—Semble, the Crown may grant a tract of land by a sufficient description to designate the portion meant, although the township within which the land lies has not been surveyed and laid out into lots and concessions; and the grantee will be entitled to hold it although a subsequent survey made by authority of the Crown makes it by name a different lot or places it in a different concession from that named in the patent, or the surveyor laying it out projects a road through it. Horne v. Murro, 7 C. P. 433.

Disclaimer.]—It is not essential to the validity of a disclaimer that it should be by deed or by record. Where therefore on the 19th June, 1818, a free grant or patent for 200 acres of Crown lands was issued in favour of W., as daughter of a U. E. loyalist, who shortly afterwards petitioned the Governor in Council, stating that the lands were granted to her by mistake and without her authority, whereupon an order in council was passed in 1820 allowing her to surrender them:—Held, affirming 8 O. R. 147, that the lands by reason of W. disagreeing to the grant never passed out of the Crown. Moffatt v. Scratch, 12 A. R. 157.

Ejectment - Evidence of Invalidity of Patent 1-Evidence will not be received to shew that a grant from the Crown was improperly issued, so as to enable a subsequent grantee to recover in ejectment. Doe d. Mc-Køy v. Rykert, T. T. 3 & 4 Vict.

Improvements. |-On an application being made for the patent to certain lands, a claim was made by the defendant, who had married the widow of the locatee, and had improved the land, to be allowed the value of such improvements, whereupon the commissioner of Crown lands directed that, before the patent issued, the amount, if any, payable to the defendant for his improvements and work on the land, after proper deductions, should be ascertained. A consent judgment was ob-tained referring it to the master to inquire and report as to what sum, if any, the defendant was entitled to for permanent immaintenance of the family of the locatee; and for any advances made to them, after making all proper deductions:—Held, that while the consent judgment was silent as to the principle to be applied in ascertaining the amount payable to the defendant for the improvements, &c., having regard to the object of the Crown lands department, the proper mode was to award such sum as in fore conscientice the defendant ought to receive. Highland v. Sherry, 32 O. R. 371.

Mandatory Remedy Sought by Petition of Right.]—A petition of right will not lie to compel the Crown to grant a patent of lands. Clarke v. The Queen, 1 Ex. C. R. 182.

Uncertainty of Description.]-A patent of land from the Crown is to be upheld rather ably for the grantee. Where land was granted by a Crown patent describing it as the north part of lot 13, containing sixty acres, and the original plan of the township shewed the lot with centre line running through the concession and shewed the part south of the line as one hundred acres, and the part north of the line as eighty acres, and it appeared that, prior to the grant of the north part, there had been a grant of the southerly part, containing one hundred acres, describing it by metes and bounds, which were evidently intended to include all the land south of the line, although they actually fell short of doing so:-Held, in a contest between the plaintiff claiming under the patentee of the north part and the defendant claiming under sales for taxes based upon the lands sold being patented lands, that the patent was not void for uncertainty, but that under the words "the north part" the whole of the lot lying to the north of the centre line passed to the grantee and those centre line passed to the grantee and those claiming through him. Doe Devine v. Wilson, 10 Moo. P. C. 502; Nolan v. Fox, 15 C. P. 505; Regina v. Bishop of Huron, 8 C. P. 253, specially referred to. Hyatt v. Milts, 20 O. R. 351.

Reversed in appeal on another point, 19 A. R. 329.

(b) Cancellation.

Action Against Patentee and Purchaser—Purchaser not Defending,1—A bill was filed impeaching a patent as having been obtained wrongfully; the defendants were the patentee and his vendee, who had not paid all his purchase money. The patentee answered denying the equity claimed; his vendee allowed the bill to be noted pro confesso:— Held, that the plaintiff failing to establish his case against the patentee, the bill should be dismissed against both defendants. Mc-Dermott v. McDermott, 3 Ch. Ch. 38.

Adverse Claim.] — Where the Crown lands commissioner had erroneously returned certain lands to the municipal officers as parented, whereas, although a patent land been operative, nor been even intended to be operative, nor been even intended to be operative, nor been even to the parentee, B., who had paid only a part of the parentee, B., who had paid only a part of the parentee, B., and the assigned his interest, and the assignee having assigned his interest, and the assignee having surrendered his interest to the Crown, before the issue of the patent to M., it could not be said that at the time of the issue of the patent to M., there was any "adverse claim" to the lands in question within 23 Vict. c. 2, s. 22, so as to debar the commissioner from cancelling the patent to B. under that section. O'Grady v. McCaffray, 2 O. R. 309.

Commissioner in Error as to Immaterial Fact.]—Where it appeared that the commissioner of Crown lands, in deciding between rival claimants to a lot to which neither had any right, was under a false impression as to a matter of fact, and the fact had not been untruly stated by the party in whose favour he decided, and was not shewn to be material, the court held, that the error was not a sufficient ground for setting aside the patent at the suit of the disappointed claimant. McIntyre v. Attorney-General, 14 Gr. 86.

Concealment of Facts.]-The lessee of the Crown conveyed his interest to others. The right to one portion, after going through several hands, became vested in one F., who died, leaving a widow and several children. The widow joined with her second husband in assigning the portion bought by F, to one C., who subsequently agreed to sell to S. A conveyancer employed to prepare the necessary writings recommended a transfer direct from the lessee of the Crown to S., to simplify the title, which was accordingly done, and thereupon S. applied to the Crown lands department to purchase, producing his transfer, a certificate of a surveyor, and an affidavit by himself that there was not any adverse claim, no mention being made of the previous transfers, or the possession of the intermediate transferees, or of the fact that the uncle of F.'s eir-at-law had intimated to S. that the heir did claim it. Upon this application S. was allowed to purchase, and a patent was issued to him in January, 1853. In 1863 a bill was filed by the heir-at-law of F., seeking to set aside this patent, as having been obtained through the fraudulent concealment of the facts by S when applying for the grant. It appeared that the plaintiff before attaining his majority went to reside in California, and immediately on his return instituted proceedings. court, under the circumstances, although acquitting defendant of all actual or intentional fraud, declared the patent void, in order that the Crown, with a full knowledge of all the the Crown, with a full knowledge of all the facts, night deal with the case as should be deemed right, and ordered S. to pay the costs of the suit; the delay which had occurred in commencing the suit being accounted for by the inability of the plaintiff, arising from his poverty and his absence. Fricht v. Scheck, 10 Gr. 254.

Conditional Sale.]—Suppliant purchased from the Crown a parcel of land, forming part of an Indian reserve, subject to the condition that unless he erected certain manufacturing works thereon within a given time he would forfeit all rights under the sale. A portion of the purchase money was paid down. Some time after the expiry of the time wherein suppliant was bound to erect the works but had not done so, the Crown, through a duly authorized officer, accepted and received the balance of the purchase money from him,—such officer stating, however, that the sale would not be complete until the condition upon which it was made was complied with. On petition praying for a declaration by the court that suppliant was entitled to letters patent for said land:—Held, (1) that the acceptance of the balances, constituted a money, under the distribution in respect of the time within which it was to be performed, but not of the condition in respect of the time within which it was to be performed such a condition, he was not entitled to the relief prayed for. Clarke v. The Queen, 1 Ex. C. R. 182; Canada Central R. W. Co. v. The Queen, 20 Gr. 273, referred to. Peterson v. The Queen, 2 Ex C. R. 57.

Conflicting Claims Dealt with by the Crown.]—Where the executive government have considered the claims of opposing parties to lands leased from the Crown, with a claim of pre-emption, and have ultimately granted to one, the court cannot, where no fraud appears in obtaining the grant, afterwards declare the grantee a trustee of any portion of such lands for the opposing party, on the ground that he had previously acquired an equitable interest therein. Boulton v. deffrey, 1 E. & A. 111. Followed in Barnes v. Boomer, 10 Gr. 532.

Quære, even if there had been fraud, whether the court could interfere at the instance of the party who had opposed the grant. Ib.

Where the Crown lands department has considered opposing claims, and a patent is directed to issue to one claimant, the court cannot review the decision of the commissioner, although it might have taken a different view of the case in the first instance. Kennedy v. Laudor, 14 Gr. 224.

Evidence of Cancellation.]—Held, that the evidence set out in this case was insufficient to prove that a sale of land to R, from the Crown had been effectually avoided. Cochrane v. McDonald, 11 C. P. 202.

Evidence Required.] — Although the Crown may shew mistake in law or fact in respect of its grant when the individual could not, still the evidence must be conclusive. Attorney-General v. Garbutt. 5 Gr. 181.

Facts not Made Known.] — Although parties dealing with the Crown will be held to the strictest good faith, yet where it is shewn that the patentee of land was ignorant of a fact which might have been material to bring under the notice of the officers of the Crown, and the plaintiff had the opportunity, but failed to do so, and subsequently filed a bill impeaching the patent, as issued in error and improvidence, the court refused the relief prayed, and dismissed the bill with costs. Mahon v. McLean, 13 Gr. 361.

Fraudulent Concealment — Crown's Knowledge.]—Patents issued under a right of pre-emption obtained by fraudulent concealment of other existing claims to such right, are void. Attorney-General v. McNutty, 8 Gr. 324.

If a party knowing that another claims an adverse right to pre-emption, or that there are circumstances which may give him such right, applies for the lands, and does not state these circumstances, such suppression will be considered fraudulent, even if the circumstances were already known to the Government; and a patent issued upon such application will be declared void. Ib.

Parties dealing with the Crown lands department must be fair and candid in all statements. Where, therefore, a bill was filed to set aside a patent, on the ground that the same had been so issued in ignorance of the opposing claim of the plaintiff, upon the fraudulent misrepresentations of the patentee, and the concealment of the facts by him from the Crown lands department, the court, although unable to afford the relief sought, dismissed the bill without costs as against the defendant who had thus dealt with the department. Laurence v. Pomeroy, 9 Gr. 474.

Fraudulent Misrepresentation by Applicant. |—It is the duty of the court to give as large and liberal an interpretation to the provisions of the Public Lands' Act as they will justly bear, otherwise many cases of flagrant wrong will go unredressed. A party, on applying to the Crown lands department for the grant of a lot of land belonging to the Crown, knowingly misrepresented that the same "was not valuable for its pine timber." At that time the lot was embraced in a timber license to B., but, in ignorance of that fact, the commissioner of Crown lands granted the application, and a patent for the lot was prepared on the 12th March, 1873, but, before its issue, the fact as to B.'s license comprising this lot was discovered, and thereupon the patent a memorandum, that "These letters patent are subject to the renewal of the timber license for one year from the 30th April, 1873," In an action brought by a purchaser of the timber from the patented and invalid. See Contois v, Bonfield, 27 C. P. 84:—Held, under these circumstances, that the attorney-general was entitled to proceed in the court of chancery for a repeal of the patent, on the ground that the same had been issued improvidently.

Grant of Reserved Square — Attorney-General.]—In laying off the town plot of S., a reservation was made by the surveyor of a block for a market square, and marked upon the plan returned by him to the office of the commissioner of crown lands, a copy of which was furnished to the local agent at S., by which he was to sell, and several sales were accordingly effected by him, some of them of lots fronting on this square. On the plans finally adopted by the Crown lands office, the market reservation was marked "Reserve" simply. Subsequently the government, under the impression that this block was at their disposal, granted part of it to the church society for a church: — Held, on a bill filed to set aside the patent on the ground of error or inadvertence, that it must be presumed that had the Crown lands department been aware of what had been done, the grant to the society would never have been made: that therefore, upon a bill properly framed, the letters patent should be repealed; and that the suit ought to have been instituted by the attorney-general on behalf of the public. Township of Saugeen y, Church Society, 6 Gr. 538.

Grant to Wrong Person.]—In 1797 an order in council was made in favour of M. P., as daughter of S. de F., a U. E. lovalist, under which a lot was located, and a description therefor regularly made out in her name; but in 1801 a patent for the lot so described issued to one M. F., the sister of the husband of the locatee, but during her life she never chimed any interest under such patent. No authority was shewn for the change of the name in the grant from M. P. to M. F. The court decreed the patent to be cancelled. Attorney-General v. Garbutt, 5 Gr. 383.

Heir and Devisee Commission-Evidence.]-The commissioners under the Heir and Devisee Act, in deciding upon claims, are not bound by the strict rules of courts at law. A purchaser from the Crown devised the land to his wife for life, with a power of appointment amongst his descendants in tail; and she devised the estate to one of such descendants in fee, on whose application the commission recommended a grant in tail to the person named as devisee. The Crown thereupon issued a patent in favour of such devisee. A bill was afterwards filed to set aside the patent, as having been issued in error; but a demurrer to the bill for want of equity was allowed. Scane v. Hartrick, 7 Gr.

The heir and devisee commission having reported that the heirs-at-law of A. were entitled to a patent, the governor-in-council afterwards, upon a report of the solicitor-general in favour of B., a brother of A., issued a patent to B. The heirs of A. thereupon filed a bill to have the patent set aside as issued in error, and a new patent issued to themselves. The court having found there was no error of fact:—Held, that the patent was properly issued to B. notwithstanding the finding of the commissioners. McDiarmid v. McDiarmid, 9 Gr. 144.

Semble, this court may, in a proper case, set aside a patent issued upon the finding of the heir and devisee commission. Ib.

Homestead Entry Issued Through Error and Improvidence.]—Where a homestead entry receipt for Dominion lands has been issued through error and improvidence, the holder thereof is not entitled to have a patent for such lands issued to him, and the court may order his entry receipt to be delivered up to be cancelled, as, outstanding, it might constitute a cloud upon the title. The Queen v. Becher, 4 Ex. C. R. 412.

Improvements by Locatee-Fraudulent Purchase by Crown Agent.]-A locatee of the waste lands of the Crown having settled thereon, in preparing it for cultivation cleared part of the adjoining land. According to the usage of the Crown lands department any person, even without settling upon lands of Crown, effecting a clearing thereon, was allowed to purchase the lot at the price fixed by the agent of the government. Subsequently the government employed an agent to inspect the lands in the neighbourhood, who reported the property on which the clearing had been made as vacant and unimproved, and valued it at 12s. 6d. per acre. This agent afterwards applied for and obtained a patent for this lot at 8s. an acre, and almost immediately after sold it to a person who had full knowledge of the clearing. Upon a bill filed by the person who had made the improvement, the court or-dered the patent to be revoked, as issued in error and mistake, without costs. But semble, that had the agent been joined as a party, he would have been ordered to pay costs. Proctor v. Grant, 9 Gr. 26.

On appeal, the court, while affirming the general doctrine on which the decree was pronounced, reversed the same, on the ground of want of notice of the improper conduct of the grantee of the Crown in obtaining the patent. 8, C., ib, 224.

Improvements by Occupants - False Representations.]—A bill was filed alleging that by statute the Grand River Navigation Company could take such land as might be necessary for the purposes of the Act, subject to payment; and in case of dispute arbitrators were named to determine the amount: and the compensation was in the same manner to be made for any Indian lands required for the undertaking. The bill alleged that the company having claimed about ninety one acres, forming part of the village of Cayuga, which was then occupied and improved by several parties, an arbitration was had in respect thereof on the 30th October, 1847, when an award was made directing the payment of £159 5s, for the right of the Indians therein, but that no notice was given to the occupiers of the land, nor was anything further done in the matter until January, 1864, when the assignees of the company applied to the Government for the absolute purchase of the land, untruly representing, as the bill alleged, that the company had gone into possession under the award and were then in peaceable posses sion; that the only improvements made on the land were so made by squatters with knowledge of the company's right; and the applicants were thereupon allowed to purchase for the sum awarded, and interest, although in reality the land, by the improvements of the occupiers, was then worth ten times the amount. The bill prayed to set aside the patent as having been issued through fraud, error, improvidence, and mistake. A demurrer by the patentees for want of equity was overruled. Westbrooke v. Attorney-General, 11 Gr. 330.

Quere, whether, although a person may have been entitled to a grant, yet if on applying therefor, he knowingly makes grossly false representations to the government, the patent may not be set aside. Ib.

Information - Scire Facias - Improvidence—Error,] — Letters patent having been issued to F. of certain lands claimed by him under the Manitoba Act (35 Vict. c. 3, as amended by 35 Vict. c. 52), and an information having been filed under R. S. C. c. 54, s. 57, at the instance of a relator claiming part of said lands, to set aside said letters patent as issued in error or improvidence :-Held, that a judgment avoiding letters patent upon such an information could only be justified and supported upon the same grounds being established in evidence as would be necessary if the proceedings were by scire facias. seea v. Attorney-General of Canada, 17 S. C. R. 612.

The term "improvidence," as distinguished The term "improvidence, as distinguished from error, applies to cases where the grant has been to the prejudice of the commonwealth or the general injury of the public, or where the rights of any individual in the thing granted are injuriously affected by the letters patent: and E's title having been recognized by the government as good and valid under the Manitoba Act, and the lands granted to him in recognition of the right, the letters patent could not be set aside as having been issued improvidently except upon the ground that some other person had a superior title also valid under the Act. Ib.

Letters patent cannot be judicially pronounced to have been issued in error or improvidently when lands have been granted upon which a trespasser, having no colour of right in law, has entered and was in possession without the knowledge of the government officials upon whom rests the duty of executing and issuing the letters patent, and of investigating and passing judgment upon the claims therefor; or when such trespasser, or any person claiming under him, has not made any application for letters patent; or when such an application has been made and refused without any express determination of the officials refusing the application, or any record having been made of the application having been made and rejected. Ib.

In the construction of the statute effect must be given to the term "improvidence" as meaning something distinct from fraud or error: letters patent may, therefore, be held to have been issued improvidently if issued in ignorance of a substantial claim by persons other than the patentee to the land, which, if other than the patentee to the land, which, if it had been known, would have been investi-gated and passed upon before the patent issued; and it is not the duty of the court to form a definite opinion as to the relative strength of opposing claims. Ib.

Interest before Issue of Patent.]—A bill by a private individual impeaching a patent for fraud or error, must shew that the plaintiff's interest arose before the patent was issued. Mutchmore v. Davis, 14 Gr. 346.

This rule applies whether the plaintiff's interest is under another patent for the same land, or under a contract of purchase. Ib.

Jurisdiction of the Court.] -- The court of chancery has jurisdiction, under 4 & 5 Vict. c. 100, s. 29, to rescind a patent though the grant may be voidable, or even void at law. Martin v. Kennedy, 2 Gr. 80.

But not to set aside a grant made upon a deliberate view of all the circumstances, and in the absence of fraud or mistake. Simpson v. Grant, 5 Gr. 267.

Limitations Act-Frand. |-One through whom the plaintiff claimed obtained in 1855 from the commissioner of Crown lands a receipt on sale of a certain lot of land. 1868, B., in whose possession this receipt was, handed it back to the Crown lands office, and by means of fraud procured his own name to be substituted as purchaser in the books of the department; and he and those claiming under him, including the defendant, had remained in possession of the lot ever since. In 1872, the plaintiff, having learned of the imosition, applied to the department for redress, This application was pending and undisposed This application was pending and underposed of by the commissioner till March 14th, 1880, when it was ordered that the patent should issue to the defendant, but three months were allowed to the plaintiff to take proceedings in court to establish his title; and within that time the plaintiff commenced this action for a declaration as to his right to the land:—
Held, that the plaintiff's right of action was not barred by any statute of limitation. Per Ferguson, J.—Even if the Statute of Limitation. rergisson, J. Even in the State of Paniar tions did commence to run against those under whom the plaintiff claimed, it ceased to do so on rescission of the sale and the substitution of B.'s name in 1868, because then all right to bring an action or make an entry on their part ceased. McLure v. Black, 20 O. R. 70.

Location Tickets - Transfer chaser's Rights—Registration.]—A location ticket of certain lots was granted to G. C. H. in 1863. In 1872 G. C. H. put on record with the Crown lands department that by arrangement with the Crown lands agent, he had performed settlement duties on another lot known as the homestead lot. In 1874, G. C. H, transferred his rights to appellant, paid all moneys due with interest on the lots, registered the transfer under 32 Vict. c. 11, s. 18, and the Crown accepted the fees for register-ing the transfer and for the issuing of the patent. In 1878 the commissioners cancelled the tent. In 1873 the commissioners cancelled the location ticket for default to perform settle-ment duties:—Held, that the registration by the commissioners in 1874 of the transfer to respondent was a waiver of the right of the Crown to cancel the location ticket for default to perform settlement duties, and the cancella-tion was illegally effected. Holland v. Ross, 19 S. C. R. 566.

Manitoba Act—Half Breed—Indian Annuities. | —See The Queen v. Thomas, 2 Ex. C. R. 246.

Onus of Proof. |- Where a bill is filed by a private individual to repeal letters patent on the ground of error, the onus of proof is on the plaintiff, though it may to some extent involve proof of a negative. Attorney-General, 14 Gr. 86. McInture v.

Parties.]-Several persons being in posses Farties. Several persons being in possession of separate portions of Crown land, filed a bill, claiming to have, by the invariable usage of the government, a preeimptive right each to the portion he was in possession of, and not the portion he was in possession of, alleging that a patent had been obtained for all the lands by a defendant through fraud, and praying that the patent might be rescinded. A denurrer to the bill for misjoinder was allowed. Westbrooke v. Altorney. was General, 11 Gr. 264.

Parties - Plaintiff's Interest.] - A bill which shews ground for repealing a patent is not demurrable for not shewing that the plaintiff was entitled to have a patent issued to him. Rees v. Attorney-General, 16 Gr. A671. A bill alleged that the patentees obtained their patent by false representations to the government, and shewed a case in which the patentees would not be entitled to compensation if the patent were set aside and the land given to another:—Held, that to such a bill the attorney-general was not a necessary party. De.

Possession by Consent of Patentee.]—Possession of Crown lands by a person who entered under an agreement with another to clear and improve for the latter, on stipulated terms, is not such possession as entitles the occupant to maintain a bill to set aside a patent to the latter, on grounds of fraud or error unconnected with his own interest. Cosproce v, Corbell, 14 Gr. 617.

Previous Sale.]—Where a party had, according to the custom of the clergy corporation, paid the patent fee for a lease, gone into possession and made large improvements, the custom being that such party was considered as having a lease for twenty-one years, with a right of renewal and preëmption, thot materially varied by the subsequent orders in council regulating the sale of clergy reserves) and the Crown, in ignorance of the facts, granted the lands as a glebe of the rector of D., such patent was rescinded as issued in error and mistake. Martyn v. Kennedy, 4 Gr. 61.

Where the government had appropriated and patented as a glebe a lot which had been previously occupied and improved, and upon which the patent fee had been paid by the occupier, and not returned to him by the government, the patent was set aside as issued in error and mistake. Attorney-General v. Hill, 8 Gr. 532.

Rideau Canal. — Quere, whether any grant improvidently made of lands set apart for the Rideau canal, before 7 Viet. c. 11, would not be void at common law fi injurious to the canal, without proceeding by sei, fa, to repeal it, Doe d, Malloch v, Principal Officers of Her Majesty's Ordnance, 3 U. C. R. 387.

Held, that lands granted before 7 Vict. c. 11, but afterwards marked out and reserved by the ordnance department as unnecessary for the canal, became again revested in the Crown. Ib.

Sale by Supposed Owner after Cancellation — Recovery Back of Purchase Money.]—See Walker v. Douglass, 23 U. C. R. 9.

Scire Facias — Tender.] — The locatee of certain Crown lands sold his rights therein to B., reserving the right to redeem the same within nine years, and subsequently sold the same rights to M., subject to the first deed. These deeds were both registered in their proper order in the registry office for the division and in the Crown lands office at Quebec. M. paid the balance of Crown dues remaining unpaid unon the land and made an application for letters patent of grant thereof in which no mention was made of the former sale by the original locatee. In an action by scire facias for the annulment of the letters patent granted to M.:—Held, that the failure to mention the vente à rémére in the application for the letters patent was a misrepresentation and concealment which entitled the Crown to have the grant declared void and the letters patent annulled as having been issued by mistake and in ignorance of a material fact, notwithstanding the registration of the first deed in the Crown land office. Fonseca v. Attorney-General for Canada, 17 S. C. R. 612, referred to. Held, further, that it is not necessary that such an action should be preceded or accompanied by tender or deposit of the dues paid to the Crown in order to obtain the issue of the letters patent. The Queen v. Montming, 29 S. C. R. 484.

Second Sale by Mistake.]—In March, 1862, S. purchased land from the Crown, and with his family went to reside on it, but by mistake settled on the adjoining land, and made improvements. In June following C. applied to the Crown lands department to know whether the land so purchased by S. was for sale; the patent had not issued to S., and through an error in the department C. was informed that the land was for sale, and mmediately purchased and received a patent. He did not. however, take possession until December, 1863, when he brought ejectment against S., and engaged the defendant B. to take the timber off the lot. At the hearing the plaintiff failed to prove notice to C. of his claim and improvements, but the error on the part of the office being proved, and the attorney-general being a defendant, and submitting to the direction of the court, the patent to C. was rescinded, an injunction granted, and C. required to account for the timber cut. Stevens v. Cook, 10 Gr. 410, Squatter.]—Λ bill by a squatter to set aside a patent for fraud or error, must allege the custom of the Crown in favour of squatters, and such other facts as may shew his interest, Cosgrove v, Corbett, 14 Gr. 617.

(c) Rights before Issue of Patent.

Advances.]—The plaintiff, having no title, assigned the land in question first to one C, and afterwards to one M., to secure certain advances. The Crown having issued the patent to C., the plaintiff sought to get in the legal estate outstanding in C., but without paying M.:—Held, under the maxim "He that comes into equity must do equity," that he was first bound to pay the advances made by M. Wiggins v. Meldrum, 15 Gr. 377.

Death Before Issue of Patent—Heir's Status.]—A patent was issued in favour of a person who had died six months previously:
—Held, that her heir could not file a bill to set aside a conveyance executed under a power of attorney from her, alleged to have been forged. Brouse v. Cram, 14 Gr. 677.

It is no part of the functions of the court

It is no part of the functions of the court to take evidence or find facts, upon which the officers of the Crown may act in the disposition of the rights of claimants to grants of Crown lands. Ib.

Dedication—Roads.]—A by-law passed by a municipal corporation cannot have the effect of taking any lands of the Crown in addition to those appropriated by the Crown for the purpose of highways in order to the opening up of the country. Neither can parties in possession of Crown lands before pa tent issued dedicate any portion of the same; parties so in possession, however, may so far bind themselves by their acts as that when a patent shall issue to them the lands granted would be bound by any right or easement to which their sanction has been obtained. Rae v. Trim. 27 Gr. 574.

Dispute between Vendor and Purchaser while Title in the Crown.;—A bill being field to rescind a contract for the purchase of an Indian right to certain lands on the Grand river, and to set aside the assignment executed in pursuance thereof, on the grounds of fraudulent misrepresentations, or to obtain compensation for an alleged deficiency in the quantity of the lands:—Held, that as the whole estate both legal and equitable was in the Crown, it was not a case in which the court would interfere even if the plaintiff had established the case stated in the bill by evidence; and that no fraud having been proved, the bill ought to be dismissed with costs. Bown v. West, 1 O. S. 287.

Dower. — A widow is entitled to dower in lands purchased from the Crown by her deceased husband, and whereof he died possessed, although no patent issued therefor, and the purchase money had not been all paid. Craig v. Templeton, 8 Gr. 483.

She is also entitled to one-third of the rents and profits for six years before the commencement of suit. Ib.

A widower was locatee of the Crown, and agreed with his son to assign his interest in the land on condition of his son making certain payments and performing certain services for the father, which were all duly made and performed, and afterwards the patent was issued in the name of the son, by which name the father was known to the officers of the land granting department. Meanwhile, before the issuing of the patent, the father married again. The son during all the father's life continued to occupy the premises, making valuable improvements, without any claim by the father, except for his support under the agreement made between the father and son. After the father's death, the widow filed a bill for dower in the premises, but the court held, that even admitting that the grant of the land was to, and was by the government meant only to be to, the father, he could be treated only as a trustee for the son, and dismissed the bill with costs. Burns v. Burns, 21 Gr. 7.

Ejectment.]—A person holding land under a license of occupation from the Crown is entitled to a demand of possession before ejectment brought by a grantee of the Crown in fee. Doe d. Creen v. Friesman, 5 O. S. 661.

Evidence of Title—Receipts for Purchase Money.]—The plaintiff in ejectment produced two receipts for certificates of deposits to the credit of the receiver-general, on a purchase of certain lands. In both the money was expressed to have been received from the plaintiff. In the first a blank was left for the name of the vendee, the words "sold to" being inserted. In the second no mention was made of the purchaser:—Held, that the receipts primā facie imported a sale to the plaintiff. Young v. Scobe, 10 U. C. R. 372.

The plaintiff brings ejectment on a patent to himself for the south-west half of lot No.

12 in the 6th concession of Trafalgar, dated 22nd September, 1852; defendant puts in a receipt for the payment of the first instalment on the said lot from the commissioner of Crown lands, dated 19th July, 1852. Fending this suit IV vict. c. 161 was passed; which the said was proposed in the said of the s

In ejectment the plaintiffs produced and proved a receipt in the following form:—
"Bank of Upper Canada, agency at Goderich, Feby, 20th, 1841. Original for the depositor, 860,20. Received from W. G. W. and A. M. the sum of sixty dollars twenty cents for account of the Crown land department, which amount will appear at the credit of the account with this bank on the mill reserve in the town plot of Fordwich, in the township of Howick, Signed in duplicate, &c."—Held, that this receipt was not a sufficient authority under 23 Vict. c. 2, to maintain ejectment: that a license of occupation under the hand and seal of the commissioner of Crown lands or a patent was necessary; and that the 17th section of 23 Vict. c. 2, is only retrospective in its operation. Walker v. Rogers, 12 C. P. 327.

A receipt for the purchase money of land from the Crown under 4 & 5 Vict. c. 100, entitles the purchaser to maintain trespass, or repleyy any property taken therefrom. Deedes v. Wallace, 8 C. P. 385.

A purchaser holding a receipt for an instalment, and having actual possession, may maintain trespass against all strangers, though not against the Crown. Glover v. Walker, 5 C. P. 478. Approved in Alexander v. Bird, S C. P. 539.

But actual possession is necessary, for the receipt confers no constructive possession. Henderson v. McLean, S.C. P. 42.

at the plaintiff in proof of his title put in at the trial a receipt from the Bank of Upper Canada at Kingston, which stated that the amount therein mentioned would appear at the credit of the Crown land department in the said bank on lots Nos. 24 and 25 in the 9th concession of Hinchinbrooke, being the premises in question. On this receipt was indorsed a certificate of the sale and terms thereof, signed by the Crown land agent:—Held, sufficient, under 23 Vict. c, 2 to entitle the plaintiff to maintain trespass for cutting trees after the date of the certificate, but before the statute. Whiting v. Kernahan, 12 C. P. 57.

Flooding Land—Reservation.]—A locatee before patent may maintain an action on the case against a stranger for an injury done by him to his land by flooding; but where an order in council had been made that no deeds should issue from government for lands in a particular part of the township, without a special reservation to the defendant of a right to flood certain portions of that land:—Held, that a locatee could not maintain an action for the flooding of a portion of those lands by the defendant, as he would in such a case be in a better position before grant from the Crown than afterwards. Miller v. Purdy, H. T. 6 Vict.

Fraudulent Assignment by Locatee.]—The court has jurisdiction in a proper case to give relief against a fraudulent assignment by a locatee of the Crown, before the issuing of the letters patent, but a bill for the purpose must shew why it is necessary to come to the court. Bull v. Frank, 2 Gr. 80.

Indian Lands-Mortgage before Patent.] -A patent of Indian lands was obtained by the patentee by virtue of his title under certain assignments from the original locatee registered in the Indian Department, and it appeared that certain prior assignees from the locatee had executed a mortgage on the lands to the plaintiff, of which the patentee had no getual notice, neither the assignment to the mortgagors nor the mortgage having been registered in the department, though the mortgage was registered in the county registry office, and the plaintiff now sought to foreclose his mortgage :- Held, that the patentee was entitled to priority over the mortgage to the extent of the moneys paid for obtaining the patent, and that the registration of the mortgage in the county registry office was not notice to him. Re Reed v. Wilson, 23 O. R.

Mortgage — Statute of Limitations.] — R. S. O. 1877 c. 25, s. 26, declares that any mortgage or lien created by the nominees of the Crown in lands for which the patent has not issued, shall in law and equity have the same force and effect, and no other, as if letters patent had before the execution of such instrument been issued in favour of the grantor:—Held, that under this provision a mortgager and mortgagee had all the rights and liabilities as between themselves, they would have had, had the freehold been actually vested in the mortgagor; that the mortgagor was entitled to set up the statute of limitations against any one claiming under such mortgage; that the exercise of the power of sale by the mortgagee had not the effect of stopping the running of the statute; and that the fact that the commissioner of Crown lands before the issuing of the patent. had made a memorandum in his "ruling upon the claims of the parties, that the sales made to them were "not intended to cut out the right, if any," of the mortgagee, had not the effect of escopping the mortgagor or those claiming under him, from claiming the benefit Watson v. Lindsay, 27 Gr. the statute. 353; 6 A. R. 609,

Partition. |—The right which a squatter acquires by being in possession of lands of the Crown is not such an interest therein as this court will order a partition of amongst his heirs; in such a case the only remedy is by application to the executive government of this Province. Jenkins v. Martin, 20 Gr. 613.

The court will not decree the partition of lands, the title to which is vested in the Crown; neither will it decree the sale of such lands at the instance of the representatives of a deceased locatee. Abell v. Weir, 24 Gr. 464.

A locatee of Crown lands left the Province in 1868, and was last heard of in 1877. The defendant, a son of his, had resided continuously on the property since 1881, cultivating and improving it, and the plaintiff, a daughter, resided on it also, from time to time, till 1887. There were two other children who had not been in possession of the land for more than ten years before action, which was brought in 1895:—Held, that the locatee must be presumed to have been dead by 1884, and the defendant had acquired a title by possession as against the children other than the plaintiff, whose claim as to one-quarter was as good as his, and in making partition the Crown should recognize his right to the improvements. The Statute of Limitations, R. 8, O. 1887 c. 111, applied because the rights involved upon the record were merely private rights not affecting the pleasure or the sovereignty of the Crown. Even in the case of unpatented lands, declaratory relief may in a suitable case be given, which will work practically the result of a partition of the property, subject to the Crown being willing to act upon the judgment of the court. Pride v. Rodger, 27 O. R. 320.

Patent Issued to Caretaker.] — The plaintiff having purchased at sheriff's sale all the interest of a bargainee of the Crown, placed defendant in possession. Afterwards the Crown land department advertised these lands, amongst others, for sale, at a stipulated price. The rule of the department in all such cases was, that the occupant of lands was entitled to a right of preëmption, and the defendant, concealing the nature of his holding, applied for and became the purchaser, and obtained a patent, after notice to the government of the plaintiff's claim. The court declared the defendant a trustee of the lands, and ordered him to pay the costs of the suit. Dougall v. Lang, 5 Gr. 292.

Persons in Occupation at Time of Sale—Cancellation of Sale.]—Plaintiff in 1846 purchased some clergy reserve land from a government agent, and obtained receipts for partial payment. Defendants were then living the land, and had been living there since 1840, having made valuable improvements, On the 2nd of August, 1849, an order of council was made, that on the defendants making the required payments, the plaintiff's money should be returned to him, and the sale to him cancelled. When the present action was brought, an order of the executive council was made on the 6th August, 1850, recommending that the attorney-general be authorized to defend the suit :-Held, that when the plaintiff received his first receipt, defendants being mere intruders, he acquired a right to eject them under 12 Vict. c. 31, s. 2; and that the Crown could not at its pleasure divest the crown could not at its piensure divest him of that right, nor change a wrongful occupant into a rightful occupant, to the prejudice of their own vendee. Doe v. Hen-derson v. Segmour, 9 U. C. R. 47.

Priority of Purchasers.]—The purchaser from the government of a clergy reserve, upon which he had paid an instalment and obtained the usual receipt from the department, has a right to obtain possession against any one in occupation, even although the occupant may have subsequently obtained the receipt of the commissioner of Crown lands; the Crown, under such circumstances, being bound by the contract made by the department with the first purchaser. Doe d. Henderson v. Westover, 1 E. & A. 445.

Reservation of Timber—Trespasser.]— The patent to A. C. contained the clause then usual, (1796) saving and reserving to the Crown all white pine trees:—Held, that notwithstanding this reservation the plaintiff, claiming under the patentee, could maintain trover against defendant for the white pine trees, for the soil in which they grew was his, and he was entitled to their shade as against a stranger. Casselman v. Hersey, 32 U. C. R.

Held, also, that on the evidence the posses-sion being such as an owner could be expected to have of wild land, was sufficient to entitle the plaintiff to maintain the action.

Sale of Locatee's Interest. |- The court will, at the instance of a judgment creditor of a locatee, with execution against lands in the hands of the sheriff, direct the interest of the locatee to be sold, and order him to join in the necessary conveyance to enable the purchaser, under the decree, to apply to the Crown lands department for a patent, as vendee or assignee of the locatee. Yale v. Tollerton, 13 Gr. 302.

The interest of a debtor in land bought from the Crown, but for which at the time of his death he had not fully paid, and had not obtained the patent, is available in equity for the benefit of his creditors; and their right is not destroyed by a friend of the heirs paying the balance of the purchase money, and procuring the patent to issue in the names of the heirs. Ferguson v. Ferguson, 16 Gr. 309.

Sale of Timber.]-Land within the free grant territory was located on the 12th August, 1870. On the 2nd April, 1872, the locatee sold to defendant all the pine and other timber thereon, stipulating that ten years should be allowed for taking it off, and the defendant paid the purchase money in full. The patents for the lands issued in 1876, and defendant afterwards cut timber, for which the patentees brought trespass:—Held, that under 31 Vict. c. 8, and the order in council of 4th October, 1871, confirmed by 37 Vict c. 23 (O.), the locatee had a right to make the sale; that no limitation as to the time within which the timber should be removed could be implied from these statutes; and that the plaintiff therefore could not recover. Hutchinson v. Beatty, 40 U. C. R. 135.

Transfer by Nominee of Crown. |--A., being the nominee of the Crown, transferred his certificate to B. in 1796, who soon after by writing, not under seal, contracted to sell It was not shewn whether C, had made to C. It was not shewn whether C. had made the payments specified by his agreement, but he went into possession, and he and his de-scendants had held uninterruptedly for more than fifty years. The defendant claimed under them. In 1837 a patent first issued to A., whose heir brought ejectment. It was left to the jury to presume a grant made by A. before the patent, but they found for the plain-tiff, and the court refused to set aside the ver-dict. McDonald v. Prentiss, 14 U. C. R. 79.

Trespass.]—The plaintiff obtained a lease under the great seal for a lot of land, and findtimer the great sear for a tot of man, and meling defendant in possession as an intruder, gave him notice of the lease, and requested him to leave the lot. Defendant afterwards cut off some valuable timber, for which act plaintiff brought trespass:—Held, that plaintiff could recover without further poof of entry. St. Leger v. Manahan, 5 O. S. S0.

The plaintiff entered into an agreement for purchase of land from the Crown. He had the lots surveyed, and paid persons to look after them for him, who had frequently entered and examined them, but the plaintiff had not en-tered upon the land himself, nor cultivated any portion. Defendant went upon the land and cut trees, for which he offered to settle with the plaintiff's agent, but he afterwards went to the local Crown land agent, who was ignorant of the plaintiff's purchase, and got him to accept a sum of money and give a receipt for it, as for timber cut on the same land:—Held, that the plaintiff's possession was sufficient to maintain trespass against defendant, and that the payment to the Crown land agent formed no excuse. Quære, whether as vende he could recover substantial damages for the trees cut. Henderson v. McLean, 16 U. C. R. 630. Held, that 16 Vict. c. 159, by repealing the former Acts, does not confine the right of action against wrong-doers to those who have obtained the license of occupation mentioned in the sixth clause; but leaves to other purchasers whatever rights they may have at common law. Henderson v. McLean, 8 C. P. 42, in part dissented from. Ib.

The plaintiff held possession as purchaser ander a receipt from the Crown land agent, and before defendant entered he had paid up in full, and was entitled to the patent, which however did not issue until some time after: -Held, that he was entitled to recover for trespass committed before as well as after the patent, Nicholson v. Page, 27 U. C. R. 505.

The patentee of the Crown of land may maintain trespass without entry against a per son in actual possession before and at the time the issuing of the patent, for the letters patent operate by way of feoffment with livery of seisin to the patentee, and defendant's possession must be regarded as an entry subsequent thereto. Greenlaw v. Fraser, 24 C. P.

Where a person is in possession with the assent of the Crown, paying rent, or where a person is a purchaser, although the patent has not issued, such person can maintain trespass against a wrong-doer, Bruyea v. Rose, 19 O. R. 433.

Where the owner of a lot of land encroached upon an adjoining lot belonging to the Crown. and took three successive crops off it without any permission from the Crown, and another person who had taken possession of the same land also without license about ten years before, and paid taxes and made clearings on it, warned off the owner of the other lot after he had taken the third crop, and then cropped the land himself:—Held, that the owner of the adjoining lot had no property or possession to maintain trespass against him for that crop. Killichan v. Robertson, 6 O. S. 468.

7. Miscellaneous Cases.

Affidavits. |-The provision of 23 Vict. Affidavits. — The provision of 23 Vict. c. 2, s. 28, the Crown Lands Act, that all affidavits required thereunder may be taken before "any justice of the peace," only empowers a justice to administer the oath in a place where he can act as such justice. Regina v. Alkinson, 17 C. P. 295.

The same interpretation of this Act applies to commissioners for taking affidavits mentioned therein. Ib.

Clergy Reserves — Revoking Order in Council, |—An order in council was made after 7 Will. IV. c. 118, and before 4 & 5 Vict. c. 100, appropriating land to certain religious purposes:—Held, that under s. 27 of the latter statute, the Governor in Council had power to revoke such appropriation. Simpson v. Grant, 5 Gr. 267.

Crown Grant.]—See Chisholm v. Robinson, 24 S. C. R. 704.

Expired Crown Lease—Restitution.]—
The lease of a Crown reserve having expired, the court refused a writ of restitution after a conviction of forcible entry and detainer. Reav. Jackson, Dra. 50.

Palse Representation by Grown Lands Agent, —A., a Crown lands agent, being asked by the plaintiff whether there were any lands for sale by Government in the township of M., told him that there were not, but that B. had certain lots there, to which he would sell his right, and the plaintiff heing Introduced by A. to B., paid the latter £30 for his good will, together with the first instalment of the control of the control of the control of the latter £30 for his good will, together with the first instalment him a receipt for the latter signed by A. to Crown lands agent. The jury found that the representation that there were no lands for sale was false, and made by A. in concert with B. to enable the latter to obtain an advance upon the Government price:—Held, that the £50 and interest might be recovered in an action against A. and B., either upon a special count charging the false representation, and the damage suffered in consequence, or as money had and received. McMaster v. Geddes, 19 U. C. R. 216.

Foreshore.]-The property of the soil adjacent to the shore, and which is covered by is in the Crown, subject to the right of the public to pass over the water in boats, and to fish and bathe therein :-Held, therefore ,where the defendant had encroached on a portion of lake Ontario not far from land belonging to himself, but not adjoining it, by the construc-tion therein of certain crib work and piers, upon which he had built a warehouse, that these not being natural accretions to his land. but artificial improvements to the waters of the lake or harbour (the harbour being then vested in the Crown) must be considered to be upon the soil of the Crown, and that the defendant was liable to be removed therefrom on an information of intrusion at the suit of the Crown. Attorney-General v. Perry, 15 C.

By 44 Vict. c. 1, s. 18, the Canadian Pacific ailway Company "have the right to take, Railway Company use, and hold the beach and land below high water mark, in any stream, lake, navigable water, gulf or sea in so far as the same shall be vested in the Crown and shall not be required by the Crown, to such extent as shall be required by the company for its railway and other works as shall be exhibited by a map or plan thereof deposited in the office of the Minister of Railways." By 50 & 51 Vict. c. 56, s. 5, the location of the company's line of railway between Port Moody and the city of Westminster, including the foreshore of Burrard Inlet, at the foot of Gore avenue, Vancouver city, was ratified and confirmed. Act of incorporation of the city of Vancouver, 49 Vict. c. 32, s. 213 (B.C.), vests in the city all streets, highways, &c., and in 1892 the city began the construction of works extending from the foot of Gore avenue, with the avowed object to cross the railway track at a level and obtain access to the harbour at deep water. On an application by the railway company for an injunction to restrain the city corporation from proceeding with their work of construction and crossing the railway :-Held, that as the foreshore forms part of the land required by the railway company, as shewn on the plan deposited in the office of the Minister of Railways, the jus publicum to get access to and from the water at the foot of Gore avenue is subordinate to the rights given to the railroad company by the statute 44 Vict. c. 1, s. 18a, on the said foreshore, and therefore the injunction was properly granted. City of Vancouver v. Canadian Pacific R. W. Co., 23 S. C. R. 1.

Indian Lands Agent.]—See Young v. Scobie, 10 U. C. R. 372.

License of Occupation. |—Held, that s. 13, C. S. C. c. 22, was mandatory and not permissive, and that a license of occupation should be issued to every person wishing to purchase, lease, or settle on any Crown land. Street v. County of Kent. 11 C. P. 255.

Navigable Waters.]—Right of commissioner of Crown lands to grant a right to construct a wharf over the navigable waters of the bay of Toronto. See Clendinning v. Turner, 9 O. R. 34.

Quere, whether the soil at the bottom of the Toronto bay at the place in question was vested in the Province or in the city of Toronto, under the patent from the Crown of the island. Ib.

A grant from the Crown which derogates from a public right of navigation is to that extent void unless the interference with such navigation is authorized by Act of Parliament. The Provincial Legislatures, since the union of the Provinces, cannot authorize such an interference. The Queen v. Fisher, 2 Ex. C. R. 365.

Possession as against the Crown or its Grantee. —A and B. having received grants from the Crown for adjoining lots, A. inalvertently occupied, fenced, and improved a portion of B.'s lot, according to the mode of running side lines prescribed by 58 Geo. III. c. 14, believing it to be a portion of his own lot. Some years after, B.'s lot was confiscated under the Alien Act, 54 Geo. III. c. 12, A. and those claiming under him, had held the disputed tract for upwards of twenty years at the time of action brought, but not at the time B.'s estate was confiscated, and the Crown became seized by inquest of office:—Held, that A.'s occupation did not work a dissession of B., and that B. continued seized so as to entitle the Crown to that portion of his lot in A.'s possession, and that the bargainee of the Crown commissioners could maintain ejectment against the occupiers thereof. Doc d. Howard v. McDonald, Dra. 374.

The grantee of the Crown has the same right as the Crown has to treat the possessor without title as a trespasser: he is not disseised by the continuance of a possession that has been held wrongfully as against the Crown. Doe d. Charles v. Cotton, S.U. C. R. 313.

The effect of the exception in 4 Will. IV. c. l. s. 17, in favour of a grantee of the Crown who has never gone into possession, is, that while ignorant of the fact of his land being in the actual possession of some other person, he is not to be regarded as disseised, and consequently is in condition to devise. Doe d. Metallis v. McGilliery, 9 U. C. R. 9

Right to Possession. —So long as there is no other person in possession, claiming adversely to the grantee's title, the grant and title given under it carry the possession by construction of law to the owner of the fee. A visible actual possession by the owner, or by those claiming through him, need not be proved. Doe d. Muclem v. Turnbull, 5 U. C. R. 129.

Sale of Government Land.]—Government contracts for sale of lands. Time of the essence of the contract. Ewing v. Good 1 O. S. 65.

Tenancy by the Curtesy.]—Where a married woman claims under letters patent from the Crown, her husband need not have entered upon the land in order to entitle him to tenancy by the curtesy, the letters patent suo vigore constituting seisin in fact. Weaver v. Bargess, 22 C. P. 104.

Tolls.|—The patent in this case granted a certain public toll-bridge, with a planked and macadamized toll-road, together with all toll-gates on said road or bridge, "and now vested in us, and the tolls arising from said bridge and road, on certain conditions contained," &c.:—Held, that the patent was not ultra vires, but passed the soil and freehold and the right and franchise of taking tolls thereon and in respect thereof. Regina v. Mills, 17 C. P. 654.

III. LIABILITY.

1. Carriers.

Regulations for Carriage of Freight—Notice by Publication in Canada Gazette—Duty of Conductor of Train Carrying Lice Stock in Box Cars.]—Apart from statute the Crown is not liable for the loss or injury to goods or animals carried by a Government railway, occasioned by the negligence of the persons in charge of the train by which such goods or animals are shipped. By virtue of the several Acts of the Parliament of Canada relating to Government railways and other public works the Crown is in such a case liable, and, under the Act 50 & 51 Vict. c. 16 a petition of right will lie for the recovery of damages resulting from such loss or Injury. The Queen v. McLeod, 8 S. C. R. 1, and The Queen v. McFarlane, 7 S. C. R. 216, distinguished. 2. The publication in the Canada Gazette, in accordance with provisions of the statute under which they are made, of regulations for the carriage of freight on a Government railway is a notice thereof to all persons having occasion to ship goods or animals by such railway. 3. Under and by virtue of R. S. C. c. S. certain regulations were made by the Governor in Council whereby it was provided that all live stock carried over the Intercolonial Railway were to be loaded and discharged by the owner or his agent, and that he assumed all risk of loss or injury in the loading, unloading and transportation of the same. The regulations were, by s. 44, to be read as part of the Act, and by s. 50 it was enacted that the Crown should not be relieved from liability by any notice, condition or declaration where damage arose from the negligence, omission or default of any of its officers, employees or servants:—Held, that the regulation did not relieve the Crown from liability where such negligence was shewn. 4. The owner of a horse shipped in a box car, the doors of which can only be fastened from the outside, and who is inside the car with the horse, has a right to expect that the conductor of the train will see that the door of the car is closed and properly fastened before the train is started. Lavoic v. The Queen, 3 Ex. C. R. 96.

McL., the suppliant, purchased, in 1880, a first-class railway passenger ticket to travel from Charlottetown to Souris on the Prince Edward Island railway, owned by the Do-minion of Canada, and operated under the management of the Minister of Railways and Canals, and while on said journey sustained serious injuries, the result of an accident to the train. By petition of right the suppliant alleged that the railway was negligently and unskilfully conducted, managed, and main-tained by Her Majesty; that Her Majesty, disregarding her duty in that behalf and her promise, did not carry safely and securely suppliant on said railway and that he was greatly and permanently injured in body and health, and claimed $50,000. The Attorney-General pleaded that Her Majesty was not bound to carry safely and securely, and was not answerable by petition of right for the negligence of The Judge at the trial found her servants. that the road was in a most unsafe state from the rottenness of the ties, and that the safety of life had been recklessly jeopardized by runof life had been recklessly jeopardized by run-ning trains over it with passengers, and that there had been a breach of a contract to carry the suppliant safely and securely, and awarded $35,000: — Held, that the establishment of Government railways in Canada, of which the Minister of Railways and Canals has the management, direction, and control, under statutory provisions, for the benefit and advantage of the public, is a branch of the public police created by statute for purposes of public convenience, and not entered upon or to be treated as a private and mercantile specula-tion, and that a petition of right does not lie against the Crown for injuries resulting from the nonfeasance or misfeasance, wrongs, negligences, or omissions of duty of the subordinate officers or agents employed in the public service on said railways. That the Crown is not liable as a common carrier for the safety and security of passengers using said railways. The Queen v. McLeod, 8 S. C. R. 1.

2. Contract.

Carriage of Mails—Authority of Postmaster-General to Bind the Crown.)—An action will not lie against the Crown for breach of a contract for carrying mails for nine months at the rate of $10,000 a year, made by parol by the postmaster-general and accepted by the contractor by letter notwithstanding it was partly performed, as, if a permanent contract, being for a larger sum than $1,000, it could not be made without the authority of an order in council, and if temporary it was revocable at the will of the postmaster-general. Humphrey v. The Queen, 20 S. C. R. 591.

Construction of Public Work-Material Change in Plans, &c.—Second Contract— Waiver,]—Held, 1, that s, 7 of 31 Viet, c, 12. which provides "that no deeds, contracts, documents or writings shall be deemed to be binding upon the department of Public Works, or shall be held to be acts of the minister of public works unless signed and sealed by him or his deputy, and countersigned by the secretary. only refers to executory contracts, and does not affect the right of a party to recover for goods sold and delivered, or for work done and materials provided to and for another party and accepted by him; 2, that the Crown, having referred the claim to arbitration, having raised no legal objection to the investigation of the claim before the arbitrators, and not having cross-appealed from their award, must be assumed to have waived all right to object to the validity of the second contract put forward by the claimants. Starrs v. The Queen, 1 Ex. C. R. 301. But, on appeal, reversing this judgment, held, that the chief engineer could not make a new contract binding on the Crown; that the claim came within the origi-nal contract and the provisions thereof which made the certificate of the chief engineer a condition precedent to recovery, and such certificate not having been obtained, the claim must be dismissed. The Queen v. Starrs, 17 S. C. R. 118.

The Crown having referred the claim to arbitration instead of insisting throughout on its strict legal rights, no costs were allowed.

Construction of Public Work—belay in Exercising Crown's Right to Inspect Materials—Independent Promise by Crown's Servant. |—Held, that the Crown was not bound under the contract in question to have the inspection of timber to be supplied made at any particular place; and that in view of s. 98 of the Government Railways Act, 1881, and the express terms of the contract, the officer whose duty it was to inspect had no power to vary or add to its terms, or to bind the Crown by any new promise; 2, the contract contained the following clause: "The contractor shall not have or make any claim or demand, or bring any action, or suit, or petition against Her Majesty for any damage which he may sustain by reason of any delay in the progress of the work arising from the acts of any of Her Majesty's agents; and it is agreed that, in the event of any such delay, the contractor shall have such further time for the completion of the work arising from the acts of any of Her Majesty's name of the work as may be fixed in that behalf by the minister: "—Held, that this clause covered delay by the Government's engineer in causing an inspection to be made of certain material whereby the suppliant suffered loss, Mayues v, The Queen, 2 Ex. C. R. 403; 23 8.

Executory Contract — Goods Sold and Delivered—Interest.] — Notwithstanding the provisions of s. 23 of the Railway and Canals Act. R. S. C. c. 37, where goods have been purchased on behalf of the Crown by its responsible officers or agents without a formal contract therefor, and such goods have been delivered and accepted by them, and the Crown has paid for part of them, a ratification of the informal contract so entered into will be implied on the part of the Crown, and, under such circumstances, the plaintiffs are entitled to recover so much of the value of the said goods as remains unpaid:—Held, also, following St. Louis v. The Queen, 2 S. C. R. 649, that in erest was payable by the Crown on the balance due to the plaintiff in respect of such contract from the date of the filing of the reference of the claim in the exchequer court. Henderson v. The Queen, 6 Ex. C. R. 39. See the next case.

Executory Contract — Goods Sold and Delivered — Interest.] — The provisions of s. 23 of the "Act respecting the Department of Railways and Canals" (R. S. C. c. 37.) which require all contracts affecting that department to be signed by the minister, the department to be signed by the minister, the deputy minister, or some person specially authorized, and countersigned by the secretary, have reference only to confracts in writing made by that department. Where goods have been bought by and delivered to officers of the Crown for public works, under orders verbally given by them in the performance of their duties, payment for the same may be recovered from the Crown, there being no statute requiring that all contracts by the Crown should be in writing. Where a claim against the Crown arises in the Province of Quebec and there is no contract in writing, s. 33 of "The Exchequer Court Act" does not apply, and interest may be recovered against the Crown, according to the practice prevailing in that Province. tillegality of Contract—Dominion Elections Act, 1873.]—The information alleged an agreement with Her Majesty whereby in consideration of the conveyance by the Intercolonial Railway of certain passengers between certain stations, the defendants agreed to pay Her Majesty, through the proper officers of that railway, the fares or passage money of such passengers at the rate therein mentioned as agreed to between the defendants and such officers. The defendants admitting the agreement as alleged, sought to avoid it by setting up as a defence that such passengers were carried on bons in blank signed by one of the defendants only:—Held, on demurrer to the plea, to be no answer to the breach of contract alleged. Parliamentary Committee—Petition of Right for Services Rendered to a Parliamentary Committee.] — The Crown is not liable upon a claim for the services rendered by anyone to a committee of the House of Commons at the instance of such committee. Kimmitt v. The Queen, 5 Ex. C. R. 130.

Parliamentary Printing.]—On the 2nd July, 1869, the plaintiff contracted with one

II. as clerk of the joint committee of both houses of parliament, to do the printing, &c., for both houses at scheduled prices. On the 7th October, 1869, the plaintiff contracted with Her Majesty for all the printing required for the several departments, to be specified in for the several departments, to be specified in requisitions to be made upon him by the de-partments respectively, including the post-master-general's department, at scheduled prices; which were lower than under the first contract, and so tendered for, as alleged by plaintiff, because he expected in cases where similar matter was required under both contracts to use the type set to fulfil one for the When the contracts were entered into the custom was for the annual reports of the heads of departments to be printed on the or der of and paid for by such departments, and the copies required for parliament were or-dered and paid for separately through the clerk of the joint committee on printing; but afterwards, by resolution of the committee, concurred in by the house, it was directed that the annual reports should be printed on the the annual reports should be printed on the order of the committee, under the first con-tract, including a sufficient number for the use of departments, with which the depart-ments should be charged. The reports of the postmaster-general having thus been ordered and printed, the plaintiff claimed to charge for and printed, the plaintiff claimed to charge for the extra number required for the department under the second contract, and for the com-position as though re-set for the department: —Held, that he had no such right. Parol Contract between Crown and Subject — Quantum Meruit.] — The provisions of s. 11 of 42 Vict. c. 7, and of s. 23 of R. S. C. c. 37, do not apply to the case of an executed contract; and where the Crown has received the benefit of work and labour done for it, or of goods or materials supplied to it or of services rendered to it by the subject at the instance and request of its officer acting within the scope of his duties, the law implies a promise on the part of the Crown to pay the fair value of the same. Hall v. The Queen, 3 Ex. C. R. 373.

Public Work—Formation of Contract—Ratification—Breach. — On 22nd November, 1879, the Government of Causda attered into a contract with C, by which the contract with C on the contract was executed under the authority of 32 & 33 Vict. C, 7, 8, 6, and on 25th November, 1879, was assigned to W, who performed all the work sent to him up to 5th December, 1884, when, the term fixed by the contract having expired, he received a letter from the Queen's printer as follows: "I am directed by the honourable the secretary of state to inform you that, pending future arrangements, the binding work of the Government will be sent to you for execution under the same rates and conditions as under the contract which has just expired." W. performed the work for two years under authority of this letter and then brought an action for the profits he would have had on work given to other parties during the seven years:—Held, that the letter of the Queen's printer did not constitute a contract binding on the Crown; that the statute authorising such contract was not directory but limited the power of the Queen's printer to make a contract except subject to its conditions; that the power of the special principle in a contract except subject to its conditions; that the contractor was chargeable with notice of all statutory limitations upon the power of the state then authorized the secretary of state to enter into such formal contract with W, but subject to the condition that the Government should waive all claims to damages by reason of the non-execution or imperfect execution of the work, and that W, should waive all claims to damages because of the execution of binding damages because of the execution of binding work by other parties up to the date of said extension. W. refused to accept the exten-sion of such terms:—Held, that W. could not rely on the order-in-council as a ratification of the contract formed by the letter of the of the contract formed by the letter of the Queen's printer; that the element of consensus enters as much into a ratification of a contract as into the contract itself; and that W. could not allege a ratification after expressly reby it. After an appeal from the final judgment of the exchequer court was lodged in the supreme court the Crown obtained leave to appeal from an order of reference to ascertain the amount of the suppliant's damages:— Held, that the Judge of the exchequer court had authority to allow the appeal and it was properly before the supreme court. The Queen v. Woodburn, 29 S. C. R. 112.

Statutory Requirements — Informality —Ratification by Crown.]—A contract entered into by an officer of the Crown empowered by statute to make the contract in a prescribed way, although defective in not conforming to such statutory requirements, may be ratified by the Crown. Woodburn v. The Queen, 6 Ex. C. R. 12.

Undertaking by Government to Promote Legislation — Damages — Ordnance Lands—Power of Minister of Interior to Lease Same.] — A minister or officer of the Crown cannot bind the Crown without the authority of law. 2. An order of the governor-general in council pledging the Government to promote legislation does not constitute a contract for the breach of which the Crown is liable in damages. R. S. 3. Intercolonial Railway.

Boundary Ditches — Non-Liability of Croven for Acts or Omissions of Grand Trunk R. W. Co.]—The Crown is not bound to keep in repair the boundary ditches between farms crossed by the Intercolonial Railway in the Province of Quebec. 2. The Act 43 Vict. c. 8 (D.), does not make the Crown liable for the acts or omissions of the Grand Trunk R. W. Co. in respect of the construction or management by the company of such portion of its railway in the Province of Quebec as was purchased by the Crown, Simoneau v. The Queen, 2 Ex. C. R. 391.

Boundary Ditches — Damage to Farm from Overflow of Water—Vegligence,]—Under 43 Vict, c. 8, confirming the agreement of sale by the Grand Trunk Company to the Crown of the Rivière du Loup branch of their railway, the Crown cannot be held liable for damages caused from the accumulation of surface water to land crossed by the railway since 1879 unless it is caused by acts or omissions of the Crown's servants. Judgment reported 2 Ex. C. R. 396, affirmed. Morin v. The Queen, 20 S. C. R. 515.

Petition of Right -- Tort-Demurrer-Acts Authorized by Statute—Official Arbitra-tors. | — The suppliants filed a petition of right claiming redress against the Dominion Government for damages sustained by them by reason of the partial expropriation of their railway tracks, and incidental injury, owing to the extension of the Intercolonial railway into the city of Halifax. The Crown demurred to the petition on the grounds that the acts in respect of which the suppliants complained were authorized by 31 Vict, c. 13 (the Intercolonial Railway Act), and that the suppliants had not shewn good cause for relief against the Crown by petition of right:— Held, that under s. 14 of 31 Vict. c. 13, the only remedy suppliants had was by reference to the official arbitrators; and that, apart from this enactment, inasmuch as the claim was founded in tort, no action could be maintained against the Crown. Halifax City R. W. Co. v. The Queen, 2 Ex. C. R. 433.

4. Negligence of Officers and Servants.

Goods Stolen while in Bond in Customs Warehouse—Croren not a Bailec—Personal Remedy against Officer.]—When goods are in the customs examining warehouse for examination and appraisal, the customs of the customs goods while so in the custody of customs officers the law affords no remedy, except such as the injured person may have against the officers through whose personal act or negligence the loss happens. Corse v. The Queen, 3 Ex. C. R. 13.

Government Railway.]—The widow and children of a person killed in an accident on a Government railway in the Province of Quebec have a right of action azainst the Crown therefor, notwithstanding that the accident was occasioned by the negligence of a fellow servant of the deceased. The right of action in such cases arises under 50 & 51 Vict. c. 16 (c) and Art. 1056 C. C. L. C., and is an independent one in behalf of the widow and children, which they may maintain in case the deceased did not in his lifetime obtain either indemnity or satisfaction for his injuries, Grenier v. The Queen, 6 Ex. C. R. 276. See the next case.

Government Railway. |—In s. 50 of the Government Railways Act (R. S. C. c. 38), providing that "Her Majesty shall not be relieved from liability by any notice, condition or declaration in the event of any damage arising from any negligence, omission or default of any officer, employee or servant of the minister," the words "notice, condition or declaration" do not include a contract or agreement by which an employee has renounced his right to claim damages from the Crown for injury from negligence of his fellow servants. Grand Trunk R. W. Co. v. Vogel, 11 S. C. R. 612, disapproved. The Queen v. Grenier, 30 S. C. R. 42.

Government Railway, — In an action against the Crown for an injury received in an accident upon a Government railway, the suppliant cannot succeed unless he establishes that the injury resulted from the negligence of some officer or servant of the Crown while acting within the scope of his duties or employment upon such railway. The Crown's liability in such a case rests upon 50 & 51 Vict. c. 16, s. 16 (c). Colpitts v. The Queen, 6 Ex. C. R. 254.

Implied Liability.]—Laches cannot be imputed to the Crown, and, except where a liability has been created by statute, it is not answerable for the negligence of its officers employed in the public service. Burroughs v. The Queen, 2 Ex. C. R. 293.

Injury to Person by Accident on a Government Railway—Burden of Proof—Latent Defect in Axle of Car—Undue Speed in Passing Sharp Curve.]—On the trial of a petition claiming damages for personal injuries sustained in an accident upon a Government railway, alleged to have resulted from the negligence of the persons in charge of the train, the burden of proof is upon the suppliant. He must shew affirmatively that there was negligence. The fact of the acci-dent is not sufficient to establish a primâ facie case of negligence. The immediate cause of case of negligence. The immediate cause of the accident was the breaking of an axle that was defective. It was shewn, however, that great care had been used in its selection and that the defect was latent and not capable of detection by any ordinary means of examination open to the railway officials. The train had immediately before the accident passed a curve which, at its greatest degree of curva-ture, was one of 6° 52′. It was alleged that the persons in charge of the train were guilty negligence in passing this curve and a switch near it at too great a speed. On that point the evidence was contradictory, and, having regard to the rule as to the burden of proof stated above, it was :-Held, that a case of negligence was not made out. Dubé v. The Queen. 3 Ex. C. R. 147.

Injury to Person on a Public Work—Brukesman's Duty in Putting Children off Car when Trespassers—Damages.]—The Crown is liable for an injury to the person received on a public work resulting from negligence of which its officer or servant, while acting within the scope of his duty or employment is guilty. City of Quebec v. The Queen, 2 Ex. C. R. 252, referred to, 2. One who forces a child to jump off a railway carriage while it is in motion is guilty of negligence. The fact that the child had no right to be upon such carriage is no defence to an action for an injury resulting from such negligence. Martin v. The Queen, 2 Ex. C. R. 328.

jury resulting from such negligence. Martin v. The Queen, 2 Ex. C. R. 328.

Reversed in the supreme court, on the ground that the Act 50 & 51 Vict, c. 16 was not retroactive and did not apply. The Queen v. Martin, 20 S. C. R. 240.

Injury to Property by Government Railway. —A filly, belonging to the suppliant, was run over and killed by a train upon the Intercolonial Railway. It was shewn on the trial that at the time of the accident the train was being run faster than usual in order to make up time, that it had just passed a station without being slowed and was approaching a crossing on the public highway at full speed. The engineer admitted that he saw something on the track, which he did not recognize as a horse. He, however, paid no attention to it, and made no attempt to stop his train until after it was struck:—Held, that the engineer, as a servant of the Crown, was guilty of negligence, for which the Crown was liable under R. S. C. c. 38, s. 23, and 50 & 51 Vet. c. 16, s. 16 (c). City of Quebee v. The Queen, 2 Ex. C. R. 300.

Injury to Property from Negligence of Crown's Servants on Public Works.

A large portion of rock fell from part of a cliff, alleged to be the property of the Crown, under the citadel at Quebec, blocking up a public thoroughfare in that city known as Champlain street, to such an extent that com-munication was rendered impossible between the two ends thereof. The suppliants charged that this accident was caused by the execution of works by the Crown which had the effect of breaking the flank side of the cliff, by the daily firing of guns from the citadel, and the fact Crown to prevent the occurrence of such an accident. On demurrer to the petition: tion that the property mentioned was a work of defence or other public work, or part of a public work, and it not appearing therein that any officer or servant of the Crown had any duty or employment in connection with the dity or employment in connection with the property mentioned, or that the acts complained of were committed by such officers while acting within the scope of their duties or employment, no case was shewn by the suppliphoyment, no case was snewn by the suppli-ants in respect of which the court had juris-diction under the Exchequer Court Act, 50 & 51 Vict. c. 16, s. 16 (c). 2. Under section 16 (c) of the Act, the Crown is liable in dam-ages for any death or injury to the person or to property on any public work resulting from to property on any public work resulting from the negligence of any officer, or servant of the Crown while acting within the scope of his duties or employment. 3. The Crown's im-munity from liability for personal negligence is in no way altered by s. 16 (c) of the Act, City of Quebec v. The Queen, 2 Ex. C. R. 252. See the next two cases.

The Crown is liable for an injury to property on a public work occasioned by the negligence of its officer or servant acting within the scope of his duty. That liability is recognized in the Exchequer Court Act, 8, 16 (et., but had its origin in the earlier statute 33 Viet. c. 23 (D.). 2. Prior to 1887, when the Exchequer Court Act was passed, a petition of right would not lie for damages or loss resulting from such an injury, the subject's remedy being limited to a submission of his claim to the official arbitrators, with, in certain cases after 1879, an appeal to the exchequer court and thence to the supreme court of Canada. 3. It is not the duty of an officer of the Crown to repair or add to a public work at his own expense, nor unless the Crown has placed at his disposal money or credit with instructions to execute the same. He must exercise reasonable care to know of the condition in which the public work under his charge is, and he must report any defect or stanger that he discovers. It does not follow from the fact that a public officer does not discover a defect in, or a danger that threatens, a public work under his charge, that he is negligent. To make the Crown liable in such a case it must be shewn that he knew of the defect or danger and failed to report it, or that he was negligent in being and remaining in ignorance thereof. Sanitary Commissioners in ignorance thereor. Sanitary commissioners of Gibraltar v. Orfila, 15 App. Cas. 400, re-ferred to. The injury complained of by the suppliants was caused by the falling of a part of the rock or cliff below the King's Bastion at the citadel in Quebec, in the year 1889. The falling of the rock was caused or hasthe failing of the rock was caused or has-tened by the discharge, into a crevice of the rock, of water from a defective drain, con-structed and allowed to become choked up while the citadel and works of defence were under the control of the Imperial authorities, and before they became the property of the Government of Canada. The existence of this drain and of the defect was not known to any officer of the latter Government, and was not discovered until after the accident, when a careful inquiry was made. In the year 1880 an examination of the premises had been made by careful and capable men, one of whom was the city engineer of Quebec, without their discovering its existence or suspecting that there was any discharge of water from it. The surwas any discharge of water from it. The sur-face indications, moreover, were not such as to suggest the existence of a defective drain. The water that came out lost itself in the earth within a distance of four or five feet, and might reasonably have been supposed to be a natural discharge from the cleavages or cracks in the cliff itself:—Held, that there was no negligence on the part of any officer of the Crown in being and remaining ignorant of the existence of this drain and of the defect in it. Quare, whether the place where the accident happened was part of the public work? Semble, the Crown may be liable although the injury complained of does not actually occur on, i.e., within the limits of, a public work. City of Quebec v. The Queen, 3 Ex. C. R. 164. See the next case.

50 & 51 Viet. c. 16, ss. 16 and 58 (D.), confers upon the subject a new or enlarged right to maintain a petition of right against the Crown for damages in respect of a tort. By 50 & 51 Viet. c. 16, s. 16 (D.), the exchequity court is given invisible to the heart against the Crown are invisible to the heart against the Crown resulting root of any death or injury to the person, or to the property, on any public work, resulting from the negligence of any officer or servant of the Crown while acting within the scope of his duties or employment; (d) every claim against the Crown arising under any law of Canada:—Held, on the facts stated in the previous case, affirming 3 Ex. C. R. 164, that as the injury to the property of the city did not occur upon a public work, s.-s. (c) did not make the Crown liable, and, moreover, there was no evidence that the injury was caused by the negligence of any officer or servant of the Crown while acting within the scope of his duties or employment. Negligence.] — As to liability of the Crown for the negligence of its servants. See Regina v. McFarlane, 7 S. C. R. 216.

Personal Injuries Received on Public Works. |- The suppliant alleged in his petition that on a certain date he was driving slowly along a road in the Rocky Mountain Park, N. W. T., when his buggy came in contact with a wire stretched across the road, whereby the suppliant was thrown from the buggy to the ground and sustained severe He further alleged that the Rocky Mountain Park was a public work of Canada under the control of the Minister of the Interior and the Governor in Council, who had appointed one S. superintendent thereof; that S. had notice of the obstruction to travel caused by the wire and had negligently failed to remove it, contrary to his duty in that behalf; and that the Crown was liable in damages for the injuries so received by him, Crown demurred to the petition on the ground that the claim and cause of action were founded in tort, and could not be maintained or enforced:—Held, that the petition disclosed a claim against the Crown arising out of an injury to the person on a public work resulting from the negligence of an officer or servant of the Crown while acting within the scope of his duties and employment, and therefore came within the meaning of 50 & 51 Vict. c. 16, s. 16 (c), (D.), which provides a remedy in such cases. Brady v. The Queen, 2 Ex. C. R. 273.

Under s. 16, clause (e), of The Exchequer Court Act, 50 & 51 Viet, c. 16 (D.), the Crown is liable for the death of any person on a public work resulting from the negligence of any of its officers or servants while acting within the scope of their duty or employment. (2) Within the limitation prescribed in s. 16 of The Exchequer Court Act, 50 & 51 Viet, c. 16 (D.), the Crown is liable for injuries resulting from the negligence of its officers and servants in any case in which a subject would, under like circumstances, be liable. (3) Held, in this case, that the superintendent and foreman in charge of work on a Government canal having failed to give notice to the men working beneath a derrick when they started to some of these men, were guilty of negligence for which the Crown was liable. Filion v. The Queen, 4 Ex. C. R. 134.

Held, on appeal, affirming this judgment, that the Crown was liable under 50 & 51 Viet, c. 16, s. 16 (c); and that it was no answer to the petition to say that the injury was caused by a fellow servant of the deceased, the case being governed by the law of the Province of Quebec, in which the doctrine of common employment has no place. The Queen v, Filion, 24 S. C. R. 482.

Prescription under Law of Quebec.]

The Queen v. Martin, 20 S. C. R. 240.

Public Work. |—A petition of right does not lie to recover compensation from the Crown for damages occasioned by the negligence of its servant to the property of an individual using a public work. Regina v. McFarlane, 7 S. C. R. 216.

Public Work—Government Canal—Accident to Vessel, |—Under the provisions of The Exchequer Court Act, s. 16 (c), the Crown is liable in damages for an accident to a steamer and cargo while in a Government canal, where such accident results from the negligence of the persons in charge of the said canal. McKay's Sons v. The Queen, 6 Ex. C. R. 1.

Public Work.]—A suppliant seeking relief under clause (v) of s, 16 of the Exchequer Court Act must establish that the injury complained of resulted from something negligently done or negligently omitted to be done on a public work by an officer or servant of the Crown while acting within the scope of his duties or employment. Quarre, whether the words "on any public work" as used in clause (d) of s, 16 of The Exchequer Court Act may be taken to indicate the place where the act or omission that occasioned the injury occurred, and not in every case the place where the injury was actually sustained? City of Quebe v. The Queen, 24 S. C. R. 429, referred to, Alliance Assurance Co. v. The Queen, 6 Ex. C. R. 76.

The suppliants complained that the Crown, by its servants, so negligently and unskilfully constructed a fish-way in a mill-dam used to secure a head of water for running certain mills owned by them, that such mills and premises were injuriously affected and greatly depreciated in value:—Held, that the fish-way was not a public work within the meaning of 50 & 51 Vict. c. 16, s. 16 (c) (D.), and that the Crown was not liable. Brown v. The Queen, 3 Ex. C. R. 79.

Where the Crown, by the construction of a public work, has interfered with a right common to the public, a private owner of real property whose lands, or any right or interest therein, have not been injured by such interference, is not entitled to compensation in the exchequer court, although it may happen that the injury sustained by him is greater in degree than that sustained by other subjects of the Crown, (2) The injurious affection of property by the construction of a public work will not sustain a claim against the Crown based upon clause (c) of the 16th section of the Exchequer Court Act, 50 & 51 Vict. c. 16, which gives the court jurisdiction in regard to claims arising out of any death or injury to the person or to property on any public work, resulting from the negligence of any officer or servant of the Crown while acting within the scope of his duties or employment. Archibald v. The Queen, 3 Ex. C. R. 251, 23 S. C. R. 147.

Undue Rate of Speed of Train at Crossing. —Where a train was approaching a level crossing over a public thoroughfare in town and the conductor was now that the watchman or flagman was not at this post at such crossing, it was not at his post at such crossing, it was not at his post at such crossing, it was not at his post at such crossing, it was not at his post at such crossing, it was not at his post at such crossing, it was not at his post at such conductor was guilty of negligence in running his train at so great a rate of speed as to put it out of his control to prevent a collision with a vehicle which had attempted to pass over the crossing before the train was in sight. (2) Where such negligence occurs is liable therefor under 50 & 51 Vite, c, 16, s. 16 (c) (D.). Connell v. The Queen, 5 Ex. C. B. 74.

5. Miscellaneous Cases.

Acts Authorized by Statute — Proper Remedy for Damages Arising Therefrom.]—
The suppliants filed a petition of right claiming redress against the Dominion Government for damages sustained by them by reason of the partial expropriation of their railway tracks, and incidental injury, owing to the extension of the Intercolonial Railway into the city of Halifax. The Crown demurred to the petition on the grounds that the acts in respect of which the suppliants complained were authorized by 31 Vict. c, 13, the Intercolonial Railway Act, and that the suppliants had not shewn good cause for relicf against the Crown by petition of 31 Vict. c, 13 (1)), the only remedy suppliants had was by reference to the official arbitrators; and that, apart from this enactment, inasmuch as the claim was founded in tort, no action could be maintained against the Crown, Halifax City R. W. Co. v. The Queen, 2 Ex. C. 18, 433.

Ditches.]—The Crown is not under any obligation to maintain drains or back-ditches constructed under 52 Vict. c. 13, s. 4 (D.). Bertrand v. The Queen, 2 Ex. C. R. 285.

Grant of Ferry—Subsequent Lease to Railway Companies.]—Under the provisions of R. S. C. c. 97 and amendments, the Governor in Council duly issued to the suppliant a ferry license within certain limits over the Ottawa River between the cities of Ottawa and Hull. Subsequently the Crown leased certain property to two railway companies to be used for the construction of approaches to a bridge to be built across the said river between the said cities, and also granted permission to the Ottawa Electric Railway Company to extend its tracks over certain property belonging to the Dominion Government on the Hull side of the river, to enable the latter to make closer connection with the Hull Elec-tric Company. The suppliant claimed that the construction of the said approaches inter-fered with the operation of his ferry, by en-abling the said company to diver traffic from his ferry, and constituted a breach of his ferry grant for which the Crown was liable: —Held, that the granting of the said leases and permission did not constitute a breach of any contract arising out of the grant or license of the ferry; and that the Crown was not liable to the suppliant in damages in respect of the matters complained of in his petition. Windsor and Annapolis R. W. Co. v. The Queen, 10 S. C. R. 335, 11 App. Cas. 607; and Hopkins v. Great Northern R. W. 2 Q. B. D. 224, referred to. Semble, that if the said leases and permission prejudiced the rights acquired by the suppliant under his ferry license, he would be entitled to a writ of scire facias to repeal them. Brigham v. The Queen, 6 Ex. C. R. 414.

Improvements Under Mistake of Title-Compensation - Occupation Rent.]—
The temperation - Occupation Rent.]—
The temperature of land adjoining the land of the Nagara relationship of the Nagara relationship of the Nagara statement of the river to enable visitors to descend to see the view, and large sums were received for the use of these facilities. Expensive repairs to the stateways, elevators and paths were from time to time necessary, owing to their exposed position, and the defendants knew that they had no title to the bank, which was vested in the Crown:—Held, that works of this kind were not lasting improvements within the meaning of s. 30 of R. S. O. 1887. c. 100, and that both on this ground and on the ground that they knew they had no title the defendants could not recover compensation. Semble, the section would not affect the Crown and the title being in the Crown when the improvements were made the Crown's grantee would take the land free from any lien. In cases coming within the section the amount by which the value of the land has been enhanced is to be allowed and the cost or value of the improvements is not the test. Held, also, that the defendants were not chargeable with the profits made by them but only with a fair occupation rent for the land. Commissioners for Queen Victoria Niagara Falls Park v. Cott. 22 A. R. 1.

Injury to Person Falling on Icy Steps of Government Post-office. |—The Crown is under no legal duty or obligation to any one who goes to a post-office building to post or get his letters, to repair or keep in a rea-sonably safe condition the walks and step leading to such building. 2. A person who goes to a post-office to post or get his letter goes of his own choice and on his own business; and the duty of the Crown as owner of the building, if such a duty were assumed to exist, would be to warn or otherwise secure him from any danger in the nature of a trap known to the owner and not open to ordinary observation, 3. A petition of right will not lie against the Crown for injuries sustained by one who falls upon a step of a public building by reason of ice which had formed there and which the caretaker of the building employed by the Minister of Public Works, had failed to remove or to cover with sand or ashes, 4.
The expression "public work" occurring in the 16th section of The Exchequer Court Act includes not only railways and canals and such other public undertakings in Canada as in older countries are usually left to private enterprise, but also all public works mentioned in The Public Works Act, R. S. C. c. 36, and other Acts in which such expression is defined, Leprohon v. The Queen, 4 Ex. C. R. 100.

Public Work—Negligence of Contractor.]
—In an action by the Crown for damages arising out of an accident alleged to be due to the negligence of a contractor in the performance of his contract for the construction of a public work, before a contractor can be held liable the evidence must shew beyond reasonable doubt that the accident was the result of his negligence. The Queen v. Poupore, 6 Ex. C. R. 4.

Rifle Range.]—The suppliant was wounded by a bullet fired, during target practice, from the rifle range at Côte St. Luc, in the District of Montreal. He filed a petition of right claiming damages for the injury he thereby sustained:—Held, that the rifle range was not a "public work," within the meaning of clause (c) of s. 16 of The Exchequer Court Act, 50 & 51 Vict, c. 16 (D.), and that the Crown was not liable. City of Quebec v. The Queen, 24 S. C. R. 420, referred to. Larcose v. The Queen, 6 Ex. C. R. 425.

Salaries of License Inspectors—Approval by Governor-General in Council,—On a claim brought by the Board of License Commissioners appointed under the Liquor License Act, 1883, for moneys paid out by them to license inspectors with the approval of the Department of Inland Revenue, but which were found to be afterwards in excess of the salaries which two years later were fixed by order in council under s, 6 of the sala Liquor License Act, 1883;—Held, affirming 2 Ex. C.

R. 293, that the Crown could not be held liable for any sum in excess of the salary fixed and approved of by the Governor-General in Council. Burroughs v. The Queen, 20 S. C. R. 420

Salvage.]—Right to claim salvage for services rendered to ship belonging to the Dominion Government. See Couette v. The Queen, 3 Ex. C. R. 82.

Wrongful Arrest of Merchant Ship by Crown—Damages—Juterest, I.—Where a nerchant vessel was seized by one of Her Majesty's ships, acting under powers conferred in that behnif by The Behring Sea Award Act, 1894, and such vessel was found to be innocent of any offence against the said Act, the court awarded damages for the wrongful seizure and detention together with interest upon the ascertained amount of such damages. The Queen v. The Ship "Beatrice," 5 Ex. C. R. 169.

Wrongful Seizure of Ship by Crown's Servants. | Dalmages cannot be recovered against the Crown for the wrongful act of a Customs officer in seizing a vessel for a supposed infraction of the customs law; but the claimant is entitled to the restitution of the vessel. Julien v. The Queen, 5 Ex. C. R. 238.

IV. OFFICERS AND DEPARTMENTS.

Civil Servant-Extra Work. |-The plaintiff was chief reporter of the debates staff of the House of Commons, and, as such, was an annual salary out of moneys voted by Parliament. He was employed by the chairman of a royal commission to report the evidence, and perform other work connected with the execution of the commission, at certain rates of remuneration fixed by agreement between him and the chairman-the same to be paid out of a sum voted by Parliament to meet the expenses of the commission :-Held, that he was entitled to recover such remuneration notwithstanding the provisions of s. 51 of The Civil Service Act that no extra salary or additional remuneration of any kind whatsoever shall be paid to any deputy head, officer, or employee in the Civil Service of Canada, or to any other person permanently employed in the public service. Bradley v. The Queen, 5 Ex. C. R. 409, 27 S. C. R. 637.

Civil Servant—Superannuation.]—Where under the provisions of The Civil Service Superannuation Act. R. S. C. e. 18, the Governor in Council exercises the discretion or authority conferred upon him by such Act to determine the allowance to be paid to a retired civil servant, his decision as to the amount of such allowance is final, and the exchaquer court has no jurisdiction to review the same. Balderson v. The Queen, 6 Ex. C. R. 8, 28 S. C. R. 261.

Commissioners Under Statute.]—Commissioners, appointed under an Act of parliament, employing persons to make a macadamised road, are not personally responsible. New v. Burn, T. T. 3 & 4 Vict.

Assumpsit does not lie against the commissioners of the St. Lawrence canal, under 3 Will. IV. c. 17, for the work done on the canal on a contract made with them, unless it can be specially shewn that they made themselves personally liable, as they must be considered merely as the agents of the Government. Tait v. Hamilton, 6 O. S. 89.

Debt Due to the Crown—Public Accountant.]—The testator at or before his death was deputy superintendent general of Indian affairs, and trustee of the Six Nation Indians, and as such superintendent was an accountant to the Crown, and at the time of his death he was indebted as trustee:—Held, that the testator was not a public accountant within the meaning of 13 Eliz. c. 4, and that the Crown could have no authority to sell his land under that statute. Doe d. Dickson v. Gross, 9 U. C. R. Soy.

Division Courts—Examination of Gorcrument Official.]—A county court Judge has jurisdiction under R. S. O. 1897 c. 60, s. 247, as amended by Gl Vict, c. 15, s. 4 (O.), in an action in a division court after the examination of, and an order for payment by, a judgment debtor who is a Government official, to commit him for default in payment, although he has no other source of income than his official salary. Prohibition refused. Re Hyde and Cavan, 31 O. R. 189.

Engineer in Charge of Works.]

Neither the engineer nor the clerk of the works, nor any subordinate officer in charge of any of the works of the Dominion of Canada, has any power or authority, express or implied under the law, to bind the Crown to any contract or expenditure not specially authorized by the express terms of the contract duly entered into between the Crown and the contract or according to law, and then only in the specific manner provided for by the express terms of the contract. O'Brien v. The Queen, 4 S. C. R. 529.

Niagara Falls Park Commissioners-Obligation to Maintain Fences. |—There is no liability on the part of the commissioners for the park to the public using the highways in the Queen Victoria Niagara Falls Park by the Queen Victoria Niagara Falls Park by reason of the absence or insufficiency of a fence, railing, or barrier on the edge of the cliff, there being no statutory obligation in that behalf imposed on them. Gibson v. Mayor of Preston, L. R. 5 Q. B. 218; Sani-tary Commissioners of Gibraltar v. Orfila, 15 App. Cas. 400; Cowley v. Newmarket Local Board, [1892] A. C. 345; Municipality of Pic-Newmarket Local tou v. Geldert, [1893] A. C. 524; Municipal Council of Sydney v. Bourke, [1895] A. C. 433, followed. Nor are the commissioners liable for an accident happening under the above circumstances to a person while resorting to the park, who, paying nothing for the privilege, is in the position of a bare licensee, to whom no duty would be owing, unless the accident occurred by reason of some unusual danger known to the commissioners, and unknown to the person injured. Southcote v. Stanley, I H. & N. 247; I vay v. Hedges, 9 Q. B. D. 89; Schmidt v. Town of Berlin, 26 O. R. 54; and Moore v. City of Toronto, ib. 59n, followed, The commissioners, under the provisions of the statutes in that behalf, under any circumstances, act in the discharge of their various duties as "an emanation from the Crown" or as agents of the Crown, which is not liable for the acts of the subordinate servants of the commissioners. Graham v. Commissioners for Queen Victoria Niagara Falls Park, 28 O. R. 1. Notice of Action—Government Railway Act.]—Section 109 of the Government Railway Act of 1881, 44 Vict. e. 25 (D.), provides that "no action shall be brought against any officer, employee, or servant of the department Railways and Canals for anything done by virue of his office, service or employment, except within three months after the act committed, and upon one month's previous notice in writing:"—Held, that a contractor with the Minister of Railways and Canals, as representing the Crown, for the construction of a branch of the Intercolonial Railway, is not an "employee" of the department within this section. Held, also, that the compulsory powers given to the Government of Canada to expropriate lands required for any public work, can only be exercised after compliance with the statute requiring the land to be set out by metes and bounds, and a plan or description filed; if these provisions are not compiled with, and there is no order in council and the statute requiring the land to construct such that the companion of the council is necessary, a contractor with the Crown who enters upon the land to construct such public work thereon, is liable to the owner in trespass for such entry. Kearney, Oakes, 18 S. C. R. 148.

Officer of the Crown.]—An officer of the House of Commons of the Dominion at Ottawa, paid out of moneys voted by the Parliament of Canada, is an officer of the Dominion Government. Leprohon v. City of Ottawa, 40 U. C. R. 478.

Ontario—Public Department,1—The maxim that the Crown can do no wrong applies to alleged tortious acts of the officers of a public department of Ontario. See Muskoka Mill Co., v. The Queen, 28 Gr. 563.

Ordnance Department.] — Held, that the contract set out in this case, for the construction of a lake wall on Lake Ontario, above the barracks at Toronto, was an agreement between the plaintiffs and the commissariat department, and that therefore the plaintiffs had no right of action under the statute against these defendants. Quare, suppose the contract had been clearly made between the plaintiffs and the ordnance department, could the plaintiffs have recovered against defendants under 7 Vict, c. 11, s. 30. Can the Provincial Parliament constitutionally give a right of action against the board of ordnance, a military department of the Imperial Government? Quare, also, does s. 20, assuming it to be constitutional, give a right of action against the ordnance department upon an implied, as well as upon an express contract. Tally v. Principal Officers of Her Majesty's Ordnance, 5 U. C. R. 6.

The officers of Her Majesty's ordnance, composing a department of the public service, existing in England, cannot at the common law be sued in our courts in this Province in their collective capacity, for an alleged culpable negligence; the remedy against them for any wrong done by the orders or omissions of the board as a board, can only be by application to the Crown, Lane v. Officers of the Ordnance, 10 U. C. R. 108.

Actions against the officers of Her Majesty's ordnance, as incorporated under 7 Vict. c, 11, are subject to the limitation provided for in 8 Geo. IV. c, 1. Denaut v. Principal Officers of ther Majesty's Ordnance, 10 U. C. R, 189, D—56

7 Vict. c. 11, s. 30 (Ordnance Vesting Act), enables the principal officers of Her Majesty's ordnance to sue in their corporate capacity for the price of ordnance stores sold by them before the passing of that Act. Principal Officers of Her Majesty's Ordnance v. Johnson, I U. C. R. 198.

Personal Liability.]—A bill was filed against the attorney-general and A_w the super-intendent of certain slides belonging to the Crown, who was also the collector of the rates thereat, alleging that he had seized certain saw logs of the plaintiff, and was about to sell them on the false pretence that the tolls thereon had not been paid. The bill prayed for an injunction to restrain the sale. A demurred to the bill on the ground that being the agent of the Crown he was exempt from personal liability. The denurrer was overruled with costs. Baker v. Ranney, 12 Gr. 228.

For acting without authority of law, or in excess of the authority conferred upon him, or in breach of the dutty imposed upon him, by law, an officer of the Crown is personally responsible to any one who sustains damage thereby. Boyd & Co. v. The Queen, 4 Ex. C. R. 116.

Postmaster-General.] — Power of, as minister of the Crown, to change his office in the Government without re-election under 20 Vict. c. 22. See McDonell v. Smith, 17 U. C. R. 310.

A declaration on the common money counts, by the postmaster-general, alleged that defendants were indebted to one M., who assigned such debt or chose in action to the plaintiff:—Held, sufficient, under 38 Vict. c. 7 (D.), without alleging that the debt was connected with plaintiff's office, that being a matter of evidence at the trial. Postmaster-General v. Robertson, 41 U. C. R. 375.

Receiver-General.] — The Receiver-General of this Province is not liable to actions at the suit of individuals, for money placed in his hands by the executive to be distributed among them. Butler v. Dunn, Tay, 415. See Barclay v. Sutton, 7 P. R. 14: McKellar v. Henderson, 27 Gr. 181.

Retiring Pension—Surrender—Cancellution—Rights of Wife,—D., a retired employee of the Government of Quebec, in receipt of a pension under Arts, 676 and 677, R. S. Q., surrendered said pension for a lump sum to the Government, and subsequently he and his wife brought an action to have it revived and the surrender cancelled. By Art. 690 of R. S. P. Q. the pension or half-pension is neither transferable nor subject to seizure, and by Art. 683 the wife of D. on his death would have been entitled to an allowance equal to one-half of his pension:—Held, that D. after his retirement was not a permanent official of the Government of Quebec, and the transaction was not, therefore, a resignation by him of office and a return by the Government, under Art. 688, of the amount contributed by him to the pension fund; that the policy of the legislation in Arts, 685, and 630 is to make the right of a retired official to his pension inalicenable, even to the Government; that D.'s wife had a vested interest jointly with him during his life in the pension, and could maintain proceedings to conserve it; and therefore that the surrender of the pension should be cancelled. Dionne v. The Queen, 24 S. C. R. 451.

Suretyship—Lex Loci Contractus.]—In an action by the Crown on the information of the attorney-general for Canada upon a bond executed in the Province of Quebec in the form provided by the "Act respecting the security to be given by the Officers of Canada" (31 Vict. c. 37 (D.); 35 Vict. c. 19 (D.); and "The Post Office Act," 38 Vict. c. 7 (D.):—Held, that the right of action under the bond was governed by the law of the Province of Quebec. Held, further, that such a bond was not an obligation with a penal clause within the application of articles 1131 and 1135 of the Civil Code of Lower Canada. Held, also, that the rule of law that the Crown is not liable for the laches or negligence of its officers obtains in the Province of Quebec except where altered by statute. Black v. The Queen, 29 S. C. R. 693.

V. PRACTICE AND PROCEDURE IN ACTIONS.

1. In General.

Absconding Debtor.] — Proceedings by attachment against absconding debtor for debt due to the Crown. See Regina v. Stewart, S. P. R. 297.

Administration — Will — Probate,]—
Where a person possessed of real and personal estate dies leaving no known relatives within the Province, the attorney-general on behalf of Her Majesty may maintain an action to set aside letters probate of that person's will, executed without mental capacity, and in that action may obtain an order for possession of the real estate; but a grant of administration should be obtained by a separate proceeding. Such an action under the statute R. S. O. 1887 c. 59, is not for the purpose of escheating, but to protect the property for the benefit of these who may be entitled. Regina v. Bonnar, 24 A. R. 220.

Argument of Crown Cases.]—Semble, that the court may direct Crown cases to stand in the new trial paper for argument with ordinary suits between party and party, Regina v. Sinnott, 2T. C. R. 539.

Attachment of Debts.]—The garnishee clauses of the C. L. P. Act do not extend to the Queen. The Crown cannot, therefore, proceed under them to attach a debt. Regina v. Benson, 2 P. R. 350.

Conflict of Laws—Contract Made in One Province to be executed in Another, 1—The doctrine that where a contract is made in one Province in Canada, and is to be performed either wholly or in part in another, then the proper law governing the contract, especially as to the mode of its performance, is the law of the Province where the performance is to take place, may be invoked against the Crown as a party to a contract. The Queen v. Ogülvic, 6 Ex. C. R. 21.

Customs Export Bonds — Penalties — Law of Quebec.]—The provisions of 8 & 9 Wm. 1H. c. 11, affecting actions upon bonds, do not apply to proceedings by the Crown for the enforcement of a penalty for breach of a customs export bond. Two customs export bonds were entered into by warehousemen at the port of Montreal, Que. Upon breach of the port of Montreal, Policy Charles action to recover the arount of the penalties fixed by such bonds;—Held, that the case must be determined by the law of the Province of Quebec, and that under that law (Arts. 1936 and 1135, C. C. L. C.) judgment should be entered for the full amount of each bond. The Queen v. Finlayson, 6 Ex. C. R. 202.

Debts Due to the Crown.]—In case of debts due to the Crown, which would be cognizable in the court of exchequer in England, the court of Queen's bench may give relief when it appears that in law, reason, or good conscience, the debtor ought not to be charged. Regina v. Bonter, 6 O. S. 551.

Division Court Clerk's Sureties.]—
The sureties of a clerk of the division court having entered into the bond authorized by the Acts 4 & 5 Vict. c. 3, and 8 Vict. c. 37, are liable upon such bond to the Grown for moneys collected by the clerk for suitors in the court not paid over. Regina v. Patton, Regina v. McCullough, Repina v. McCullough, Repina v. Moran, 7 U. C. R. 83.
Semble, that on the trial of any such action

Semble, that on the trial of any such action the Crown would be entitled to a verdict for the penalty of the bond, and not only for the sum received for the suitor and not paid over. Ib.

Enforcing Civil Remedy. — The rule which prevents a civil remedy being taken whilst the prosecution for the felony which is the foundation of the action is not concluded does not apply where the Crown and not a private person is the plaintiff. Regina v. Reiflenstein, 5 P. R. 175.

Escheats.]—Held, on demurrer, 1 that the doctrine of escheats applies to lands held in Ontario; 2 that the attorney-general of Ontario is the proper party to represent the Crown, and to appropriate the escheat to the uses of the Province; 3, that the court of chancery has jurisdiction in such cases; and, 4, that it was proper for the attorney-general, if he saw fit, to file a bill in that court to enforce the escheat. Attorney-General v. O'Reilly, 26 Gr. 126; 6 A. R. 576.

Estoppel—Title to Land.]—Where a person is in possession of land under a good title but, through the mutual mistake of himself and another person claiming title thereto, he accents a lease from the latter of the lands in dispute, he is not thereby estopped from setting up his own title in an action by the lessor to obtain possession of the land. In such a case the Crown, being the lessor, is in no better position in respect of the doctrine of estoppel than a subject. The Queen v. Hall, 6 Ex. C. R. 145.

Execution to Enforce Fines.]—The Crown may issue a fi. fa. for the sale of lands and goods in order to satisfy a fine imposed; and the person fined may be said to be indebted, and the fine to be a debt. Regina v. Desjardins Canal Co., 29 U. C. R. 105.

Lands and goods may be included in the Lands and goods may be included in the same writ, and it may be made returnable before the expiration of twelve months, the Crown not being bound by 43 Geo. III. c, 1. Ib.

Foreclosure.] — Where the Crown holds the equity of redemption of mortgaged premises no absolute order of foreclosure can be pronounced, but only that in default of payment the mortgagee be at liberty to enter into possession. Dunn v. Attorney-General, 10 Gr.

Forum.]—The court of chancery has no jurisdiction to grant relief to a subject where the rights of the Crown are in question. Miller v. Attorney-General, 9 Gr. 558.

Held, following the last case, that the equitable jurisdiction in matters of revenue in this Province, at the suit of a subject, is in the superior courts of common law, if at all, and not in the court of chancery. Norwich v. Attorney-General, 9 Gr. 563. But see S. C., in appeal, 2 E. & A. 541.

Inland Revenue Dues.]—Mode of proceeding by the Crown to enforce a claim for dues under the Inland Revenue Act. See Attorney-General v. Walker, 25 Gr. 233.

Interpleader.]—The Crown cannot be a claimant within the meaning of the statute authorizing the settlement of claims of goods taken under execution by interpleader. McGee v. Baines, 3 L. J. 151.

Joint and Several Obligors.] - The Crown may have sci, fa, against one or against all of the joint and several obligors of a bond. but the proceedings must be against all or each one. Regina v. McPherson, 15 C. P. 17.

Jury.]-The Crown coming into the high court of justice is in the same position as the subject; and a Judge, on the application of the Crown, can make an order striking out a jury notice given by the defendants. Regina v. Grant, 17 P. R. 165.

Lien-Crown's Rights in Enforcing Maritime Lien-Writ of Extent] — Where the Crown invokes the aid of a court of admiralty to enforce a maritime lien, it is in no higher position than an ordinary suitor, and its rights must be determined in such court by the rules and principles applicable to all claims and suitors alike. 2. Where the Crown sued the owners of a steamship for damages to a Govowhers of a steamship for damages to a de-erument canal occasioned by the ship colliding with the gates, but had obtained judgment sub-sequent in date to one obtained by the master sequent in date to one obtained by the master of the ship upon a claim for wages and disbursements accrued and made after the time of such collision, the latter judgment was accorded priority over that held by the Crown. Semble, where the Crown pursues its remedy by writ of extent against the owners of a ship, it can only take under the writ of extent the property of the debtor at the time of the issue of the writ. If the debtor has assigned his property before that, the Crown can realize nothing under the writ in respect to the res. The Queen v. "The City of Windsor," Symes v. "The City of Windsor," 5 Ex. C. R. 233.

Petition of Right.]—A petition of right may be amended at the trial. Smylie v. The Queen, 27 A. R. 172.

Plea of Purchase for Value.]-A plea of purchase for value without notice cannot be set up against the Crown, Attorney-General v. McNulty, 11 Gr. 281.

Prosecution — Statutory Procedure.] — The Crown is not obliged, under 27 Vict. c, 32, s, 44 (O.), to prosecute before two magistrates for selling beer without a license as a private individual would be, but may proceed by information. Regina v. Taylor, 36 U. C. R. 183.

Provincial Government - Style Cause.]—The action was instituted against the Government of the Province of Quebec, but when the case came up for hearing on the appeal to the supreme court, the court ordered that the name of Her Majesty the Queen be substituted for that of the Province of Quebec. Grant v. The Queen, 20 S. C. R. 297.

Set-off against the Crown — Running Accounts—Pleading—Practice.] — The Queen v. Whitehead, 1 Ex. C. R. 134.

Specific Performance.]—The court of chancery cannot enforce against the Crown specific performance of an order in council. Simpson v. Grant, 5 Gr. 267.

Venue.]—The Crown has the right in a civil action to lay the venue in any county. Regina v. Shipman, 6 L. J. 19.

Where a recognizance is removed into one of the superior courts at Toronto, the united counties of York and Peel are the proper countries in the countries of the countries of the superior courts. ties in which to lay the venue, and in such a proceeding the venue cannot be changed without the consent of the attorney-general. Ib.

2. Information of Intrusion.

Jus Tertii.] - Where defendant justifies under a third person, he must shew his own title and that of the person under whom he justifies, and also traverse the title in the Crown. Regina v. Gould, H. T. 3 Vict.

Plea of Not Guilty.]-The plea of not guilty puts in issue only the question of intru-sion, and not the title of the Crown. Regina v. Munro, H. T. 6 Vict.

Information for intrusion. Plea, not guilty, with the words, "per stat." in the margin. The Crown gave evidence of their title, commencing within twenty years before the information brought, but gave no further proof of the trespass and intrusion, and defendants gave no evidence:—Held, that a general ver-dict could not be entered for the Crown, Semble, that the Crown was entitled to a writ of amoveas manus. Attorney-General v. Stanley, 9 U. C. R. 84.

On an information for Intrusion: — Held, there being no proof that the Crown had been out of possession for twenty years, that under not guilty defendant could not give evidence of title under a Crown lease. Held, also, that the Crown on this plea was not entitled to judgment at once, but must go down to trial to shew the intrusion and damages, and because the defendants under the plea might shew the Crown out of possession for twenty years, and thus put the Crown to proof of title. Regina v. Sinnott, 27 U. C. R, 539.

Possession after Grant.]—A continuance in possession of land, under an erroneous impression that it was their own, of intruders, as against the King, after grant made, is not a disseisin of the grantee. Doe d. West v. Howard, 5 O. S. 462.

Procedure.]—In an information of intrusion the proper process to bring the defendant into court is a writ of subpena ad respondendum, directed to the defendant. Attorney-General v. McLachlin, 5 P. R. 63.

This writ can be issued after the informa-

This writ can be issued after the information is filed, and, in this country, without the information being entered; and a specific prayer for such process is not necessary. Ib. A subpean ad respondendum directed to the Right of Entry. |—Under a Crown grant the grantee may maintain ejectment against a person who has seen in adverse possion for upwards of twenty years, and it is not necessary that the Crown should proceed by information of intrusion in such a case before the grant, or that the grant should specially convey the Crown's right of entry on the land to the grantee. Doe d. Fitzgerald v. Finn. Doe d. Fitzgerald v. Clench, 1 U. C. R. 70.

Venue. |—In an information for an intrusion, the venue may be laid in any district. Attorney-General v. Dockstader, 5 O. S. 341.

VI. PREROGATIVE.

Commission of Assize.]—As to the prerogative right of the Crown to issue commissions to hold a court of oyer and terminer. See Regina v. Amer, 42 U. C. R. 391.

Insolvency—Priority, |—Held, 1, that the Crown, claiming as a simple contract creditor in this case in respect of public moneys deposited by government departments in a bank which had become insolvent, to the credit of the receiver-general, has a right to priority over other creditors of equal degree. This prerogative privilege belongs to the Crown as representing the Dominion of Canada, when claiming as a creditor of a provincial corporation in a provincial court, and is not taken away in proceedings in insolvency by 45 Vict. c. 23 (D.). 2. That the Crown in filing and receiving dividends on its first claim and not specially notifying the claim of privilege had not waived its right to be preferred. Regina v. Bank of Nova Scotia, 11 S. C. 1.

Crown prerogatives can only be taken away by express statutory enactment. Therefore Her Majesty's right to payment in full of a claim against the assets of an insolvent bank in priority to all other creditors, is not interfered with by the provision of the Bank Act (R. S. C. c. 120, S. 79), giving note holders a first lien on such assets, the Crown not being named in such enactment. Liquidators of Maritime Bank v. The Queen, 17 S. C. R. 637,

An insurance company, in order to deposit $50,000 with the minister of finance and receive a license to do business in Canada, according to the provisions of the Insurance Act (R. S. C. c. 124), deposited the money in a bank and forwarded the deposit receipt to the minister. The money in the bank drew interest which, by arrangement, was received by the company. The bank having failed the government claimed payment in full of this money as money deposited by the Crown:— Held, that it was not the money of the Crown but was held by the finance minister in trust for the company; it was not, therefore, subject to the prerogative of payment in full in priority to other creditors. D.

Held, affirming 20 S. C. R. 695, that the Provincial Government of New Brunswick, being a simple contract creditor of the Maritime Bank of the Dominion of Canada, in respect of public moneys of the Province deposited in the name of the receiver-general of the Province, is entitled to payment in full over the other depositors and simple contract creditors of the bank, its claim being for a Crown debt to which the prerogative attaches, Liquidators of Maritime Bank of Canada v. Receiver-General of New Brunswick, [1892] A. C. 437.

The Crown has no priority under an assignment for the general benefit of creditors.

Clarkson v. Attorncy-General of Canada, 15
O. R. 632, 16 A. R. 202.

Public Right of Navigation since the Union of the Provinces.]—A grant from the Crown which derogates from a public right of navigation is to that extent void unless the interference with such navigation is authorized by Act of Parliament. 2. The Provincial Legislatures, since the union of the Provinces, cannot authorize such an interference. The Queen v. Fisher, 2 Ex. C. R. 365.

See Constitutional Law.

VII. TIMBER AND TIMBER LICENSES.

Action After Expiration of License.]
—Quere, whether, as was assumed in this case, the holder of a license which has expired may sue for trees cut during its currency.
White V. Dunlop, 27 U. C. R. 237.

Application for License not Completed-Laches. |-McA. filed an application with the proper Government official for a license to cut timber upon two berths, and complied with the usual regulations, one of which was the payment of a certain sum for ground rent, and his application was duly forwarded to the commissioner of Crown lands; but owing to a defective survey it was impossible then to convey the berths. Subsequently the survey difficulty was removed, and his application as to one of the berths was accepted in the year 1861, but he having removed to the United States, never received any notice of such acceptance. In 1881 he first heard of the acceptance, and in 1884 sold all his interest therein for $4,000. B. afterwards became entitled by subsequent assignments for value to all McA.'s interest, the assignments being duly filed in the Crown lands department. McA. and B., in 1884 joined in a petition of right for the issue of the license, and the attorneygeneral demurred to the same :- Held, that there was no laches on the part of McA. in not enforcing a right which he did not know existed, and there was no intention on his part existed, and there was no internal on the part to abandon the right when he did become aware of it, as he treated it as a valuable asset. As between subjects a delay of four years would probably be under ordinary circumstances, a defence to a claim for specific performance; but under the facts in this case a wendor would not be allowed to set up such a defence:—Held, also, that as the assignments were duly filed, and the Crown had the power of forfeiting the claim for nonpayment, and did not do so, even were the rule between subjects to apply, it would not be a bar in this case. Semble, it may be doubted whether the same rule should apply to the Crown, and whether the subject should not have the right to a completion of the purchase at any time before it has been forfeited. McArthur v. The Queen, 10 O. R. 191.

Crown Timber Agent.] — Held, that Crown timber agents have no legal right to dispose of the timber upon lands sold by the Crown lands agents, and that they can in no way affect the rights of purchasers as against trespassers: Glover v. Walker, 5 C. P. 478, approved. Alexander v. Bird, 8 C. P. 539.

C. S. C. c. 23, s. 1, enacts that the commissioner of Crown lands, or any agent under him authorized to that effect, may grant licenses to cut timber:—Held, that a person appointed the agent for Crown timber for the western division of Upper Canada had not, as such, any power to grant these licenses. Farquharson v. Knight, 25 U. C. R. 413.

Damages—Loss of Profits in Cutting Loos.]—Trees cut by the locatee in the actual process of cultivation were sold to the plainifif, a mill owner, and were seized by the defendants, the timber licensees, who also had a mill, and were taken by them thereto and cut up into lumber. It was proved that the plaintiff could not get other logs at that season of the year:—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to the loss of profits sustained by him by being deprived of cutting the logs into lumber at his mill. Cackburn v. Muskoka Mill and Lumber Co., 13 O. R. 343.

pseth of Licensee.]—A bill was filed in respect of certain timber limits by two of the devisees and legatees of the original licensee thereof:—Held, that the suit ought to be by the personal representative, such licenses being personal estate. Bennet v. O'Meara, 15 Gr. 304.

Disputed Territory-Permit to Cut Timber-Implied Warranty of Title.]—A permit issued under the authority of the minister of the interior, under which the purchaser has the right within a year to cut, from the Crown domain, a million feet of lumber, is a contract for the sale of personal chattels, and such a sale ordinarily implies a warranty of title on the part of the vendor; but if it appears from the facts and circumstances that the vendor did not intend to assert ownership, but only to transfer such interest as he had in the thing sold, there is no warranty. (2) The government of Canada by order-in-council authorized the issue of the usual annual license to the plaintiff company to cut timber upon the Crown domain, upon certain conditions therein mentioned. The company did not comply with such conditions, but before the expiry of the year during which such license might have been taken out, proceedings were commenced by the government of Ontario against the company under which it was claimed that the title to the lands covered by the license was vested in the Crown for the use of the Province of Ontario. and that contention was ultimately sustained by the court of last resort:—Held, that there was a failure of consideration which entitled the company to recover the ground rent paid in advance on the government's promise to issue such license. Quare.—Will an action by petition or on reference lie in the exchequer court against the Crown for unliquidated damages for breach of warranty implied in a sale of personal chattels? 8t. Catharines Milling and Lumber Co. v. The Queen, 2 Ex. C. R. 202.

By the 50th section of the Dominion Lands Act, 1883, it is provided that leases of timber berths shall be for a term of one year, and that the lessee shall not be held to have any claim whatsoever to a renewal of his lease unless such renewal is provided for in the order in council authorizing it, or embodied in the con-ditions of sale or tender. The orders in council in question in this case authorized the council in question in this case activates its siste of leases subject to the terms of the regulations of March 8th, 1883, by which it was provided that under certain conditions (existing in this case) the minister of the interior minist remove when the many such licenses. From the terior might renew such licenses. From the orders in council and character of the several transactions it appeared to be the intention of the parties that the licenses should be renewable :-Held, that such renewals were provided for within the meaning of the statute. When the Crown agrees to issue a lease or license to cut timber on public lands it agrees to grant a valid lease or license, and a contract to grant a value lease or neense, and a contract for title to such lands is to be implied from such agreement. Not only the word "de-mise" but the word "let," or any equivalent words which constitute a lease, create, it words which constitute a lease, create, it appears, an implied covenant for quiet enjoyment. Hart v. Windsor, 12 M. & W. 85; Mostyn v. West Mostyn Coal and Iron Co., 1 C. P. D. 152. Quere,—If this rule is applicable to a Crown lease? The Queen v. Robertson, 6 S. C. R. 52, referred to. An agreement to issue and to renew from year to year at the will of the lessee or licensee a lease or license to take exclusive possession of a tract of land and to cut the merchantable timber of land and to cut the merchantable timber of land and to cut the merchantable timber thereon is an agreement in respect to an interest in land, and not merely a sale of goods. The claimant applied to the government of Canada for license to cut timber on certain timber berths situated in the territory lately in dispute between that government and the government of Ontario. The application was granted on the condition that the applicant would pay certain ground-rents and bonuses, would pay certain ground-rents and bonuses, and make surveys and build a mill. The claimant knew of the dispute, which was at the time open and public. He paid the rents and bonuses, made the surveys, and enlarged a mill he had previously built, which was accepted as equivalent to building a new one. The dispute was determined adversely to the government of Canada, and consequently they could not carry out their promises :- Held, that the claimant was entitled to recover from the government the moneys paid for ground-rents and bonuses, but not the losses incurred in making the surveys, enlarging the mill, and other preparations for carrying on his business. Bulmer v. The Queen, 3 Ex. C. R. 184.

Held, on appeal:—(1) Orders-in-council issued pursuant to 46 Vict. c. 17, ss. 49 and 50, authorizing the minister of the interior to grant licenses to cut timber, did not constitute contracts between the Crown and proposed licensees, such orders in council being revocable by the Crown until acted upon by the granting of licenses under them. (2) The right of renewal of the licenses was optional with the Crown and the claimant was entitled to recover from the government only the moneys paid for ground-rents and bonuses. Bulmer v. The Queen, 23 S. C. R. 488.

Free Grant Territory—Patent.]—Held, that a license to cut timber on lands comprised in the free grant territory, under the Free Grants and Homesteads Act of 1898, 31 Vict. c. 8 (O.), and located under that Act, does not eliable the licenses to cut timber after the issue of the patent, although during the currency of the license year. Anderson v. Muskoka Mill and Lumber Co., 27 C. P. 180.

Hay on Lands under License.]—The entry of a party on timber limits to cut hay, and his cutting and stacking it on the land, do not give him such property in the hay cut as to enable him to maintain trover for its removal against persons claiming by virtue of Crown timber licenses then in force. Mc-Donald v, Bonfield, 20 C. P. 73.

Hay on Land under License—Intereals between Licenses.] — Where the plaintiff entered on lands of the Crown in the summer months, without any right of occupation, and, no one hindering him, cut and cured hay, but was prevented from removing it by defendant, who subsequently took possession under colour of a timber license, which, however, was only in force during the winter months:—Held, that the plaintiff had no right of action against the defendant for the value of the hay so cut, the former shewing no better title than the latter. Graham v, Hecnan, 20 C. P. 340.

latter. Graham v. Heenan, 20 C. P. 340.

Quære, as to the rights of licensees during the intervals between successive licenses, Ib.

Intervals between Licenses-Replevin.] —The plaintiffs were in possession of certain timber limits under a license from the Crown, which expired in April, 1872, but it was the practice of the Crown lands department to recognize the right of licensees to a renewal, and a renewal was granted to the plaintiffs for 1872-3, and the ground rent paid in advance, the plaintiffs remaining in possession. In consequence, however, of some difficulty about the boundaries, the license did not issue until the 5th April, 1873, but it was stated to cover the period from the 20th June pre-During this period certain persons, vious. under whom defendant claimed, entered upon the land and cut a quantity of saw logs; and on the plaintiffs going to where they were lying in a creek or river on their limit, for purpose of marking them, they were prevented by defendant, who opened an artificial dam, and caused the logs to be floated down the river, where they got mixed with some of defendant's logs. The plaintiffs then went to where the logs were, and selected the logs in question, being of the same size and description as their own logs, and marked them: — Held, that the plaintiffs might mainand marked tain replevin: that there was sufficient evidence of identity; and that at all events, as the defendant's own wrongful act was the cause of any difficulty, he could not object on this ground. The plaintiffs being in possession, though they might have no title as against the Crown, could maintain replevin against a wrongdoer. Gilmour v. Buck, 24 C. P. 187.

Locatee—Evidence of Cutting.]—The locatee of Crown lands located under authority of the Act of 1868, has no power to sell or dispose of the pine timber growing thereon. Hughson v. Cook, 20 Gr. 238.

One S, was the locatee of two lots of land, one a free grant, the other a purchase, which he transferred to the plaintiff. The agent of the plaintiff swore that some pine timber had been taken off these lots in 1870-1 by some persons getting out square timber, and further, that the defendant was the only person getting out square timber that season. After two years the court considered this evidence too indefinite as to the locality of cutting and as to quantity cut; and the act too old in date to warrant the court in granting an injunction to restrain further cutting. Ib.

Locates—Right to Sell Pinc.]—A locates of land whose rights are governed by R. S. O. 1887 c. 25, s. 10, or a patentee whose rights are governed by s. H. I. though he may really intend to clear a parcel of land, cannot simply point out such parcel to a purchaser before anything was done in the way of clearing it for cultivation, and sell to such purchaser the pine timber standing and growing upon such parcel. The right or liberty in such cases is only to cut and dispose of trees during the process of actually clearing the land for cultivation, when it appears to be and is requisite that the trees should, for the purposes of such clearing, be removed. McArthur Bros. Co. v. Deans, 21 O. R. 380.

Obstructing Creeks-Evidence.]-Plaintiff got out a quantity of timber, and placed it in a creek communicating with the intervening rivers for transport during the spring freshefs to Quebec. Defendant, who was the lessee of the Crown of certain timber limits within which the creek was, obstructed the latter with fallen trees, &c., and thereby caused a large outlay to plaintiff in the removal of the obstructions, and prevented his getting his timber to the Quebec market. Defendant put in a sworn and examined copy of the original map from the Crown lands department of recent date, containing defendant's name as entitled to the timber limits, to prove that the creek was within such limits:-Held, that this coupled with the fact that he had been for many years in possession of the timber limits, cutting timber thereon, and improving the same, was some evidence to go to the jury that he was not a mere intruder on the rights of the Crown. Whelan v. McLachlan, 16 C. P. 102.

Manufacturing Condition—Constitutional Low.,—The Ac, 61 Vict. e, 19 (O.), making applicable to timber licenses the condition approved by order-in-council of the 17th February, 1897, that all pine timber cut under such licenses shall be manufactured into sawn lumber in Canada, is intra vires, and applies to licenses issued after the passing of the Act in renewal of licenses is force at the time of its passage. The rights acquired under sales and licenses of timber limits under "The Crown Timber Act" considered. Smylic v. The Queen, 31 O. R. 202, 27 A. R. 172.

Patent—Subsequent Reneval of License.]
—To an action for taking the plaintiff's timber defendant pleaded, on equitable grounds, that at the time of an application to the commissioner of Crown lands for patents to certain ungranted lands of the Crown, upon which the timber grew, it was agreed between the applicants and the commissioner that the lands should be granted subject to a timber license to the defendant, then in force, and to a renewal of such license, if granted; that on the patents subsequently issuing, granting the limbs absolutely to the patentees, the commissioner indorsed thereon and signed a memorandum of such agreement, and on the expiration of the license renewed it: that the limber was cut during such renewal; and that the plaintiff acquired his title from the patentees, with full knowledge of the premises:—Held, affirming 25 C. P. 39, that such indorsement and the renewal of the license were unauthorized and invalid, and that the plea shewed no defence. Contois v. Bonfeld, 27 C. P. 84.

See Attorney-General v. Contois, 25 Gr. 346.

Patent without Reservation of Timber. |—The plaintiff was, in March, 1884, located as the purchaser of a lot in the township of Burleigh, and obtained a patent therefor in November, 1888, the patent being in the usual form of a patent in fee to a purchaser, without any reservation of timber or any reference to the "Free Grants and Home-steads Act." The defendants, assuming to steads Act." The defendants, assuming to act under a timber license issued in May, 1888, covering this and other lots, entered upon the lot after the issue of the patent and took timber therefrom. In the license the lot was referred to as "located and sold." The township of Burleigh was within the geo-graphical limits described in s. 4 of the Free Grants and Homesteads Act, R. S. O. 1887 c. 25, but had never been appropriated or set apart as free grant lands under the provisions of that Act:—Held, that the lot was not "land located or sold within the limits of the free grant territory," within the meaning of that Act, and that the patent was not subject to the reservations as to timber in that Act contained. The expression "Free Grant Territory" in s. 10 does not refer to the whole territory or tract defined in s. 4, but only to such portion of that territory or tract as may be actually set apart and appropriated by the Lieutenant-Governor-in-council under the Act : —Held, further, that there being no actual reservation in the patent the defendants had no right to cut the timber after its issue, and were liable in damages. Shairp v. Lakefield Lumber Co., 17 A. R. 322; 19 S. C. R. 657.

Proceedings after Expiration of Lineauer, III and a limits under licenses granted from 30th December, 1865, to 30th April, 1863; from 15th October, 1865, to 30th April, 1867; from 30th December, 1867, to 30th April, 1871; from 30th December, 1867, to 30th April, 1873; and 16th November, 1870, to 30th April, 1871. The timber in question was taken in the winter of 1866-7; and this action was not brought until November, 1871, after the last license had expired. C. S. C. c. 23, s. 2, enacts that such licenses shall vest in the holders thereof all rights of property in all timber cut within the limits during the term thereof, and to prosecute all trespassers to punishment, and to recover damages, if any; "and all proceedings pending at the expiration of any such license may be continued to final termination as if the license had not expired:"—Held, that the concluding clause did not prohibit a license efrom suing after the expiration of his term, and that the action might be maintained. McLearce, v. Ryan, 30 U. C. R. 307.

Proof of License.]—In trover for timber by a license:—Held, that the licenses were sufficiently proved by the evidence of the person who issued them that he was the Crown timber agent, and had acted as such, and issued these licenses in the discharge of his duty. Boyd v. Link, 29 U. C. R. 365.

Railway Through Timber Limits.]
—Construction of railways through lands under timber license. See Booth v. McIntrye, 31 C. P. 183; Foran v. McIntrye, 45 U. C. R. 288; McArthur v. Northern and Pacific Junction R. W. Co., 15 O. R. 733; 17 A. R. 86.

Right of Crown Land Agent to seize Lumber. |—Held, that under 12 Vict. c. 30, a Crown land agent is not authorized to seize beards made from Crown timber cut wrongfully. Miller v. Clark, 10 U. C. R. 9.

Rights of Way.]—Plaintiff was a locatee of a free grant and homestad lot, which, at the time he located it, in May, 1877, was subject to a regulation of an order in council of the 27th of May, 1869, providing that holders of timber licenses should have the right to haul their timber or logs over the uncleared portion of any land so located, and to make necessary roads thereon for that purpose, etc. The patent in favour of plaintiff was issued in June, 1883, and contained only the usual reservations of mines, minerals and navigable waters. The defendant was the holder of a timber license issued after the date of the patent, and justified the trespasses complained of under the authority of the order-in-council:—Held, affirming 13 O, R, 254, that the only reservations or exceptions from the grant were those mentioned in the patent, and that the plaintiff's land was not subject to the regulations of the order-in-council. Semble, that such regulations apply only before the issue of the patent to lands located under the order-in-council, and then only so far as rights of way, etc., are expressly conferred upon the licensee by the terms of his license. Dunkin v. Cockburn, 15 A. R. 433.

Sale after License.]—A license to cut was granted to the plaintiffs on the 22nd November, 1865. On the 6th December defendant purchased the land, taking a receipt in full from the bank agent at Chatham. On the 14th he obtained a receipt from the commissioner of Crown lands, and on the 6th February, 1866, a patent issued to him:—Held, that if the license had been duly authorized, it would not have been revoked by the defendant's purchase, until the issuing of the patent. Farquharson v. Knight, 25 U. C. R. 413.

A license to cut timber under C. S. C. c. 23, has by the statute the effect of a grant of the timber cut, and though not under scal it is not revoked by the issuing of a patent for the land. McMullen v. Macdonell, 27 U. C. R. 36.

The plaintiff obtained from a county Crown lands agent a ticket stating the amount to be paid into the Bank of Montreal as the first instalment on a lot which he said he would probably buy. Nearly a month afterwards he paid this sum to the bank, taking their receipt, which stated that it would appear at the credit of the Crown lands department, from which he subsequently received a letter acknowledging the receipt of the money on this lot, and saying that his communication would receive attention. The agent said this was not a sale, and this lot was not in the monthly return of lots sold sent to him from the department. Defendant held a timber license for this and other lots, but land previously sold was expressly excluded from it:—Held, that the plaintiff was not a purchaser from the Crown, so as to entitle him to recover against defendant for cutting timber on the lot. Wells v. Cumming, 27 U. C. R. 470.

Sale Subject to Licenses. |- Under the provisions of the Quebec Act, 41 Vict. c. 14, the respondents in November, 1881, alleging themselves to be proprietors and in possession of a number of lots in the township of Whitton, obtained an ex parte injunction, restraining the appellants from further prosecuting lumbering operations which they had begun on these lots. The appellants were cutting in virtue of a license from the government, dated 3rd May, 1881, which was a renewal of a former license. By a report of renewal of a former license. By a report of the executive council of the Province of Quebec, dated 1st April, 1881, and approved by the Lieutenant-Governor-in-council on the 7th of the same month, the commissioner of Crown lands was authorized to sell to the company the lands in question, and the company de-posited $12,000 to the credit of the department, to be applied on account of the intended purchase. On the 9th May, the company gave out a contract for the clearing of a portion of the land, and on the 19th July, 1881, the commissioner executed a deed of sale in favour of the company, subject, amongst other condi-tions, "to the current licenses to cut timber on the lots:"—Held, that the respondents had not acquired any valid title to the lands in question prior to the 19th July, 1881, and that by the instrument of that date their rights were subordinated to all current licenses, and the appellants having established their right to possess said lands for the purpose of carry ing on their lumber operations, under a license from the Crown dated 3rd May, 1881, the injunction had been properly dissolved by the superior court. Hall v. Dominion of Canada Land and Colonization Co., S.S. C. R. 631.

Sale of Timber-False Representation by Purchaser as to Payment of Dues.]—Declaradefendant intending, &c., tion, that and fraudulently represented to plaintiffs that the land and timber were defendant's, that he had the right to grant to plaintiffs the privilege of cutting the timber thereon, and that all Crown dues in respect of such timber and the cutting thereof had been paid by him; whereas the land and timber were not defendant's property, nor had defendant any right to grant to plaintiffs the privilege of cutting the timber, nor had the said dues been paid by defendant, as defendant well knew; by reason whereof the plaintiffs were induced to contract with defendant to purchase said timber, and paid him $88 for the same and for the privilege of cutting it, and not to investigate the title to the land and timber; and relying on the same they cut and conveyed to Quebec the said timber to be sold on their behalf; and that by reason of the premises, and before sale, the timber was seized on behalf of the Crown for non-payment of the said dues, and plaintiffs had to pay the same and damages for the illegal cutting thereof, and were deprived thereof for a long time, and prevented during that time from selling same, and the same became greatly depreciated in value:—Held, on demurrer, declaration good; for it sufficiently disclosed a cause of action against defendant for assuming fraudulently to sell the privilege of cutting the timber discharged from Crown dues, when it was not discharged from them; and that it did not profess to set out a case of either defendant or plaintiffs being mere wrong-doers, without license of any kind from the Crown. Quare, as to an action on the case lying, where the cause of action arises from matter of contract. Edscall v. Hamell, 16 C. P. 93.

Sale of Timber - Dues - Warranty.]-The plaintiff agreed to sell to defendants cer tain timber which he was about to cut on a lot in the free grant district, of which lot he was in occupation on or before the 30th September, 1871. He cut it and delivered the logs at the 1871. He cut it and delivered the logs at the place agreed upon, but the government made a claim of $111 upon them for timber dues, for which they would be liable in case the plaintiff had not, before cutting the trees, obtained his patent. There was no positive proof of this, but defendant swore that he told the plaintiff he had better not be in a hurry about cutting it, as he would soon have his patent, when there would be no dues, but that in the meantime there would be, to which the plaintiff replied that the local agent had informed him there would be no dues:—Held, that this, being unanswered, amounted to an admission on the plaintiff's part that the patent had not issued when the timber was cut, and sufficient affirmative evidence of the fact, which was one peculiarly within the plaintiff's knowledge. Defendants, without objection, put in a notice published by the Crown lands department, that pursuant to an order-in-council of the 4th October, 1871, the order-in-counter of the 4th October, 1811, to government would recognize the rights of all locatees of free grant lands before the 30th September, 1871, to sell the pine thereon sub-ject to certain dues:—Held, that this was some evidence of the order-in-council, especially when taken in connection with the testimony that the Crown claimed only a lien for the dues. Brown v. Cockburn, 37 U. C. R.

Held, although there was no express warranty of title, that this being an executory contract for purchase and sale of a subject unascertained and afterwards to be conveyed, the purchaser was entitled to a good title; and that in an action for not accepting he might deduct the amount of dues for which the Crown held a lien;—Semble, however, that in all cases of the sale of chattels, the vendor, by selling them as his own, impliedly warrants the title, unless the facts shew that he intended only to transfer his interest. Ib.

Sale of Timber by Locatee—Subsequent Patent to Another Person.]—in 1871. S. under the Free Grants and Homestends. Act, located certain land in the Crown lands department, but never entered into possession, or performed the settlement duties. The lot was located through B., the Crown lands agent for the district. In 1873 S. sold the timber on the lot to B. In 1875 B. wrote the department asking if a cancellation and relocation would affect his title to the pine, and that it be relocated subject to his claim. The department replied that if the purchase was a bond fide one, and in accordance with the order-in-council, a relocation would not affect his claim. The order-in-council was that the department, would recognize the right of all purchasers or locates of free grant lands who had purchased or located any lot on or before 30th September, 1871, and who on that day were in actual occupation of, or resident on the lots located, to sell and dispose of all pine trees on the said lots. On 10th Septem-ber, 1875, S.'s location was cancelled for nonher, 1845, 8, 8 focation was cancelled for non-performance of the settlement duties; and on the 2ard July, 1876, the lot was relocated to the plaintiff. The plaintiff was informed by B. of his purchase of the timber, and stated that be had a good tile to it, which the plaintiff believed, and acted on that belief. On the 9th November, 1886, the patent issued to the 9th November, 1886, the patent issued to the plaintiff, and contained no reservation of the pine trees. In 1883, B. sold the timber to the defendant, who in October, 1886, cut same notwithstanding he was notified by the plain-tiff to desist. The timber was removed by defendant after the issue of the patent. In an action by plaintiff to recover the value of the timber:—Held, that as the patent contained no reservation of the pine trees standing or being on the land, and as the land was located prior to 43 Vict. c. 4 (O.), the trees "remaining on the land" at the time of the patent passed to the plaintiff; that prior to the issue of the patent, the locatee under R. S. O. 1877 (O.), for the locatee was not on or before 30th September, 1871, "in actual occupation or resident on the lots located;" and, semble, that the words, "remaining on the land, plied only to the trees not then cut; but it was not necessary to decide this point, for the plaintiff being in possession with the assent of the Crown, he had title to the timber as against trown, he had the to the thinst a same the defendant a wrong-doer:—Held, also, that the plaintiff having acted on B.'s misrepresentations, was not estopped from bringing the action. Languaid v. Mickle, 16 O. R.

Sale of Timber Limits—Licenses—Plan—Description—Damages.]—Where the holder of a timber license does not verify the correctness of the official description of the lands to be covered by the license before it issues, and after its issue works on lands and makes improvements on a branch of a river which he believed formed part of his limits, but was subsequently ascertained by survey to form part of adjoining limits, he cannot recover from the Crown for losses sustained by acting on an understanding derived from a plan furnished by the Crown prior to the sale. The licensee's remedy would be by action to cancel the license under Article 992 C. C. with a claim for compensation for moneys expended. Grant v. The Queen, 20 S. C. R. 297.

Timber on Road Allowances.]—Licensees of the Crown of timber limits, covering allowances for roads, are not liable for cutting timber on such allowances, under the authority of the Crown, when no steps have been taken by the municipality to pass a by-law dealing with such timber. Township of Burleigh v. Campbell, 18 C. P. 457.

But after the passage of such by-laws the municipality may sue the licensees for cutting such timber, even though the licenses were granted before the by-laws, the licensees at the time of cutting having had notice of the by-law, Township of Barrie v. Gillies, 20 C. P. 369.

Quære, whether such licenses confer the right to cut timber on the road allowances. Semble, not. Ib,

The last case affirmed in appeal, and—Held, that the licenses did not authorize defendants to cut and carry away the timber from the road allowances. S. C., 21 C. P. 213.

Timber Unlawfully Cut—Trespasser— Crown's Paramount Right.]—Where timber unlawfully taken from the Crown property was subsequently taken by force out of the possession of the first taker, who recovered a judgment against the trespassers, which included the value of the timber;—Held, that the Crown was entitled to claim so much of their payment as represented the value of the timber, exclusive of the labour and money expended upon it. Attorney-General v. Price, 15 Gr. 304.

The defendant was ordered on argument to pay the costs of the relators. S. C., 18 Gr. 7.

Transfer of License without Approval.]

—The plaintiff herein, a timber licensee, sold his interest in the license and limits to one W., who entered and cut timber, but the transfer was not approved, and by the regulations of the Crown lands department all transfers were to be in writing and subject to their approval, and were to be valid only from such approval:

—Held, that the legal title to the limits and timber thereon was in the plaintiff, and that W.'s possession was the plaintiff's, who was entitled to maintain an action for damage done to the limits. Booth v. McIntyre, 31 C. P. 183.

Trees Cut in Clearing Land—Building and Fencing.]—Under s. 10 of R. S. O. 1837 c. 24, as amended by s. 2 of 43 Vict. c. 4 (9.), the locatee of land "may cut and use such pine trees as may be necessary for the purpose of building and fencing on the land so located, and may also cut and dispose of all trees required to be removed in the actual clearing of such land for cultivation, but no pine trees (except for the necessary building aforesaid) shall be cut beyond the limit of such actual clearing: "—Held, there was nothing to prevent the locatee cutting, clearing, and cultivating the land in several parcels in various shapes and forms, so long as done in good faith for the purpose of clearings and ultivating, as was found to be the fact here: it not being necessary that the clearings should be together and contiguous; that the locatee may cut such pine trees necessary for building and fencing wherever he chooses on the land, but they can be only used for such purpose; but when the trees are cut in the actual process of clearing for cultivation they may be sold and disposed of. Cockburn v. Muskoka Mill and Lumber Co., 13 O. R. 343.

Trees Reserved in Clearing Land.]—
Where a locatee of lands, in clearing a portion thereof, reserved twenty-six pine trees thereon, thinking that they would be useful for building, but had previously erected a permanent house and stable, and put up fences, and had enough timber left for building a barn without reserving these trees:—Held, that by thus reserving these trees, the locatee left them the property of the Crown, and a licensee of timber under the Crown had a right to cut and remove them. Parker v. Maxwedl, 14 O. R. 239.

Where a locatee of lands left certain trees standing temporarily on a certain portion of the land which he was in process of clearing, intending first to burn the fallow and then to cut them down:—Held, that a licensee of timber under the Crown, had no right to interrupt the locatee in clearing the lands and to cut and remove such trees. Ib.

The meaning of 43 Vict. c. 4 (O.), is, that all standing pine belongs to the Crown; when cut during the process of actually clearing the land for cultivation, or in order to build and fence on the location, it belongs to the locates; otherwise, when cut, it still continues the property of the Crown. Ib.

Trespass.]—A party obtaining from the Crown agent a license to enter upon certain land, and to cut such a quantity of timber of particular dimensions as he might require, not having by such license the exclusive possession of the land, cannot maintain trespass. McLaren v. Rice, 5 U. C. R. 151.

The patent contained the clause then usual. (1799), saving and reserving to the Crown all white pine trees:—Held, that notwithstanding the reservation, the plaintiff, claiming under the patentee, could maintain trover against defendant for the white pine, for the soil in which they grew was his, and he was entitled to their shade as against a stranger. Casschann v. Hersey, 32 U. C. R. 333.

Held, also, that the evidence of possession,

Held, also, that the evidence of possession, being such as an owner could be expected to have of wild land, would alone have been sufficient to entitle the plaintiff to maintain the action. Ib.

The legal right of a licensee of timber limits under a license issued by the Ontario Crown lands department ceases (except as to the matters specially excepted by the Act) at the expiration of the license year, and there is no equ table right of rective and there is no equ table right of rection for trespass committed after the expiration of the license and before the issue of a renewal. The insertion in a license, after its expiration, of a lot omitted by error does not confer upon the licensee such a title as enables him to maintain an action for trespass committed on the omitted lot, Muskoka Mill and Lumber Co, v. McDermott, 21 A. R. 129.

Trespass for Timber Cut in Quebec.]

—Trespass or trover will lie here for timber cut in the Province of Quebec (the declaration not charging any trespass to the realty), although it may be necessary in such action to try the title to the land on which it was cut. McLaren, V. Ryan, 30 U. C. R. 307.

VIII. MISCELLANEOUS CASES.

Bond — Charge on Land,]—The testator held certain lands as a trustee to secure a debt due him, and devised the residue of his property to his executors, except such parts thereof as might at his decease be vested in him upon any trusts or by way of mortgage, and then, by a subsequent devise, all the residue of his estate, real and personal, to J. M. (whom he also appointed one of his executors) and his heirs absolutely. The testator had joined in certain Crown bonds which remained undischarged:—Held, that they formed a charge upon the lands, which the purchaser was entitled to have removed. Re Charles, 4 Ch. Ch. 19.

Bond—Co-sureties.]—A. and B. enter as co-sureties into separate bonds to the Crown for C.; C. becomes a defaulter; the Crown proceeds by sci. fa. on each bond, and obtains a separate judgment against each surety. A. and the surety is sufficient to be sufficient Chattel Mortgage.] — The Queen may take a chattel mortgage from any of her subjects (under our Acts) through and in the name of the head of the department to which the debt is due, to secure such debt. McGee v, Smith, 9 C. P. S9.

Chose in Action.]—Where a chose in action was assigned, inter alia, for the general benefit of creditors, all the parties interested being before the court, and the Crown making no objection, the court gave effect to such assignment:—Quære, in the absence of acquiescence in such an assignment, are the assigness rights thereunder capable of enforcement against the Crown? The Queen v. McCurdy, 2 Ex. C. R. 311.

Customs Duties — Drawback. — By the Customs Act, 1877 (4 d) Vict, c. 10), s. 125, clause 1.1, it was enacted, inter alia, that the Governor in Council might make regulations for granting a drawback of the whole or part of the duty paid on materials used in Canadian manufactures. In 1881, by an amendment made by the Act 44 Vict, c. 11, s. 11, the Governor in Council was further empowered to make regulations for granting a certain specific sum in lieu of any such drawback. (See also the Customs Act, 1883, s. 230, clause 12, and R. S. C. c. 32, s. 245m.) By an order of the Governor-General in Council, dated the 15th May, 1880, it was provided and paid by the Minister of Customs on materials used in the construction of ships or vessels built and registered in Canada, and built and exported from Canada under Governor's pass, for sale and registry in any other country since the first day of January, 1880, at the rate of 70 cents per registered ton on iron kneed ships or vessels classed for 7 years, and at the rate of 65 cents per registered ton on liron kneed ships or vessels not iron kneed." By an order in council of the 15th November, 1883, an addition was made to the rates stated "of ten cents per net registered subsequent to July, 1893:"—Held, that a petition of right would not lie upon a refusal by the controller of customs to grant a drawback in any particular case. Semble, that the provision in an order in council that the drawback "may be granted" should not be construed as an imperative direction; it not being a case in which the authority given by the use of the word "may" is coupled with a legal duty to exercise such authority. Matton v. The Queen, 5 Ex. C. R. 401.

Crown Bonds.]—The testator had joined in certain Crown bonds, which remained undischarged:—Held, that they formed a charge upon lands, which the purchaser was entitled to have removed. Re Charles, 4 Ch. Ch. 19.

Enrolment of Surrender.]—Enrolment of a surrender to the Crown is unnecessary in this country to perfect the title of the Crown. Regina v. Guthrie, 41 U. C. R. 148; Regina v. McDonell, ib. 157.

Estoppel.]—The doctrine of estoppel cannot be invoked against the Crown. Humphrey v. The Queen, 2 Ex. C. R. 386; 20 S. C. R. 591.

The doctrine of res judicata may be invoked against the Crown. The Queen v. St. Louis, 5 Ex. C. R. 330.

Semble:—There is no sound reason why the Government of the Dominion should not be bound by the judgment of a court of justice in a suit to which the attorney-general, as representing the Government, was a party defendant, equally as any individual would be, if the relief prayed by the information is sought in the same interest and upon the same grounds as were adjudicated upon by the judgment in the former suit. Fonseca v, Attorney-General of Uanada, 17 S. C. R. 612.

Exemptions.]—The statute 23 Vict. c, 25 (c), exempting certain articles from seizure, does not bind the Crown. Regina v. Davidson, 21 U. C. R. 41.

Highways.]—See Rae v. Trim, 27 Gr. 374; Re Trent Valley Canal, 11 O. R. 687.

Injunction — Breach of Charter.]—The defendants were incorporated by letters nature under the Street Railway Act, R. S. O.1887 c. 171, which authorized them to construct and operate (on all days except Sundays) a street railway:—Held, that an action would not lie by the Crown to restrain the defendants from operating the road on Sunday, the restriction against their doing so being at most an implied one, and no substantial injury to the public, or any interference with proprietary rights, being shewn. Judgment below, 19 O. R. 624, altimed. Attorney-General v. Nigagar Falls, Wedey Park, and Clifton Tranway Co., 18 A. R. 453.

Interest.]—Held, following St. Louis v. The Queen, 25 S. C. R. 649, that interest may be allowed against the Crown upon a judgment on a petition of right arising ex contractu in the Province of Quebec in the absence of any express undertaking by the Crown to pay the same, or any statutory enactment authorizing such allowance. But such interest should only be computed from the date when the petition of right is filed in the office of the Secretary of State. Lainé v. The Queen, 5 Ex. C. R. 103.

Interpretation Act—Controverted Elections Act.]—The Crown is not bound by ss. 100 and 122 of the Dominion Elections Act, 1874. The 46th clause of s. 7 of the Interpretation Act, R. S. C. c. 1, whereby it is provided that no provision or enactment in any Act shall affect in any manner or way whatsoever, the rights of Her Majesty, her heirs or successors, unless it is expressly stated therein that Her Majesty shall be bound thereby, is not limited or qualified by any exception such as that mentioned in the Magdalen College Case, 11 Rep. 70b, "that the King is impliedly bound by statutes passed for the general good * * or to prevent fraud, injury, or wrong." The Queen v. Pouliot, 2 Ex. C. R. 49.

Laches and Estoppel—Wairer by Acts of Minister of Crown. —While the law is that the Crown is not bound by estoppel, and that the Crown is not bound by estoppel, and that the can be imputed to it, and that there is no reason why it should suffer by the negligence of its officers, yet it appears to be well settled that forfeitures of certain kinds may be waived by the acts of ministers and officers of the Crown. Attorney-General of Victoria v. Ettershank, L. R. 6 P. C. 354, and Davenport v. The Queen, 3 App. Cas. 115, referred to. Peterson v. The Queen, 2 Ex. C. R. 67.

Lease of Canal—Action by Users of Canal to Cancel,1—Parties who for many years had the chief use of a canal, and had always resisted payment of tolls demanded by the lessee, were held to have such an interest as entitled them to maintain a bill (to which the Attorney-General was a defendant) to have the lease declared void. Hinckley v. Gildersleeve, 19 Gr. 212.

Lord's Day Act.]—R. S. O. 1877 c. 189, which forbide the profanation of the Lord's Day by persons carrying on their ordinary business, does not apply to persons in the public service of Her Majesty, and therefore a conviction of a government locktender on the Welland Canal, for locking a vessel through the canal on Sunday, in obedience to the orders of his superior, was quashed. Regina v. Berriman, 4 O. R. 282.

Moneys in Court—Payment Out by Mistake—Lopes of Time—Restitution.]—Statutes of Limitation have relation only between subject and subject—the Crown cannot be bound by them. The supreme court of judicature for Ontario is a public trustee as to all moneys and securities in its hands. Moneys in court are in custodiâ legis, in this case tantamount to custodiâ regis, and to such a fund and such a custodian the Statute of Limitations has no pertinence. Suitors and claimants are not barred by any lapse of time in their application for payment out of moneys to which they are entitled, and reciprocally they should not be protected by lapse of time from making restitution, if they have improperly or fraudulently received moneys from the court to which they have no just claim. Restitution was ordered after a period of fourteen years, without interest, as the mistake was that of an officer of the court. Where moneys in court have been improperly paid out in an action, a motion to refund the amount is the proper procedure. Allstadt v. Gortner, 31 O. R. 485.

Mortmain — Forfeiture.] — Forfeiture by the Crown of lands held by corporations contrary to the statutes of mortmain. See Mc-Diarmid v. Hughes, 16 O. R. 570. Navigable Waters—Title to Soil—Pressurption of Dedication—Obstruction to Navigation. The user of a bridge over a navigable river for 35 years is sufficient to raise a presumption of dedication.—If a Province before Confederation had so dedicated the bed of a navigable river for the purposes of a bridge that it could not have objected to it as an obstruction to navigation, the Crown as representing the Dominion, on assuming control of the navigation, was bound to permit the maintenance of the bridge. An obstruction to navigation cannot be justified on the ground that the public benefit to be derived from it outweighs the inconvenience it causes. It is a public nuisance though of very great public benefit and the obstruction of the slightest possible degree. The Queen v. Moss, 26 S. C. R. 322.

Parol Agreement.]—Under the provisions of the 7th section of the Petition of Right Act of 1876, the Dominion Government, in enforcing a parol agreement, is entitled to whatever rights any subject of the Crown would have in respect of such an agreement in an action between subject and subject. Merchant's Bank of Canada v. The Queen, 1 Ex. C. R. 1.

Railway Subsidy—Discretionary Power of Lieutenat-Governor in Council — Petition of Right — Misappropriation of Subsidy Moneys by Order-in-Council.]—Where money is granted by the Legislature, and its application is prescribed in such a way as to confer a discretion upon the Crowtn, no trust is imposed enforceable against the Crown by petition of right:—Held, that the statute 51 & 52 Vict. c. 97 and documents relied on did not create a liability on the part of the Crown to pay the money arising from a converted land grant voted to the appellant railway company enforceable by petition of right; but assuming it did, the letter and receipt signed by the president of the company set out in this case did not discharge the Crown from such obligation to pay the subsidy; and payment by the Crown of the subsidy; and payment by the Crown of the subsidy; and payment of the company, was a misappropriation of the subsidy. Hereford R. W. Co. v. The Queen, 24 S. C. R. 1.

Receiver — Claim against Crown.] — The plantiff and detendant were partners, and as such had a claim against the Crown for work such had a claim against the Crown for work such had a claim against the Crown for work sum. Subsequently the partnership made a further claim for interest on the sum paid, which was rejected, and could not make the converser, without admitting rany liability, offered a sum in satisfaction of the claim for interest, and an appropriation was made by Parliament to enable that to be done, but the appropriation lapsed. A minister of the Crown afterwards offered to pay the defendant half the amount of the appropriation, and the defendant agreed to necept it. Accordingly a sum was voted by Parliament for this purpose, and by an order-in-council authority was granted to pay it to the defendant: —Held, that on the date of the order-in-council that the existed a debt due by the Crown to the defendant, arising out of contract, and recoverable by petition of right. Held, also, that this sum could be made available for satisfaction of a judgment recovered by the plaintiff against the defendant. Willcook v. Terrell, 3 Ex. D.

Taxes Paid by Mistake, |—Held, that the Crown could not be prejudiced in its right to recover back taxes on land leased to a commissariat officer by mistake of the officer in charge in paying them. Principal Secretary of State for War v. City of London, 23 U. C. R. 476.

Yukon — Tolls.]—The Executive Government of the Yukon territory may lawfully authorize the construction of a toll tramway or wargon road over Dominion lands in the territory, and private persons using such road cannot refuse to pay the tolls exacted under such authority. CUSTOM AND USAGE.

Animals Running at Large - Wire Fences.]—Held, that the colt in question in this case, five weeks old, following its dam, could not be said to be running at large, the universal custom of the country, which ought to govern, being for colts thus to follow the dam. Hillyard v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 8 O. R. 583.

Held, that evidence of the common use of barbed wire fences in other townships, and that other municipalities held out inducements to erect them, should not have been rejected, as shewing that they were not considered dangerous or a nuisance. Ib.

Bill of Lading—Acceptance of Draft. — The plaintiffs, a bank at Milwaukee, sent to defendants, a bank at Toronto, for collection, a bill drawn by A. at Milwaukee on B. at Toronto, payable forty-five days after date, together with a bill of lading indorsed by A. for certain wheat consigned by A. to B:— Held, that in the absence of any instructions to the contrary defendants were not bound to retain the bill of lading until payment of the draft by B., but were right in giving it up to him on obtaining his acceptance. Evidence having been given as to the custom of mer-chants in such cases, both in the United States and in Canada:—Held, that the latter only could be material. Wisconsin Marine and Fire Ins. Co. v. Bank of British North America, 21 U. C. R. 284.

Brokers.]—Custom of brokers in dealing with customers' stock. See Mara v. Cox, 6 O. R. 359; Sutherland v. Cox, 6 O. R. 505; 15 A.

Carriers — Payment to Wharfingers.] — Action for money earned by plaintiffs as forwarders and carriers. Plea, that according to the custom and usage of forwarders and carriers existing at Toronto, consignees are authorized to pay wharfingers the amount due from them to such forwarders and carriers for the forwarding or carrying of their goods, and that defendant so paid this money :that assuming the alleged custom to be valid, notice thereof to the plaintiff, if not acquie-scence therein, should be alleged. Torrance v. Hayes, 2 C. P. 338.

Assumpsit on the common counts for work and labour, &c., by plaintiffs, who were com-mon carriers by water. Plea, setting forth a delivery of the goods carried by plaintiff to a wharfinger at T., to whom defendants, according to the custom and usage of forwarders and carriers at T., paid the plaintiffs' claim:— Held, plea bad, for not averring notice of the custom to the plaintiffs. S. C., 3 C. P. 274.

Commission Merchants — Reimbursement of Advances.]—At the trial of an action for advances made by a commission merchant on goods consigned to him for sale, defendant tendered evidence to shew the meaning of cash advances so made, and the usual practice as to commission merchants reimbursing themselves for such advances:—Held, that such evidence was properly rejected. Cowie v. Apps, 22 C. P. 589.

Commission Merchants -- Interest on Advances.]-A merchant agreed in writing to Aucunces. —A merchant agreed in writing to advance money for the purpose of getting out timber, to be forwarded to him for sale; for which advances he was to be paid certain commissions. The timber was duly forwarded to him in the autumn; but, prices being low, the plaintiff, with the assent of the other party, held the timber over till the following spring, and claimed interest on his advances from the 1st of December until the sale of the timber, the case not being provided for by the agreement. It appeared that it had been customary in the trade to charge interest in such cases, where there was not any writing; but there was no evidence of such custom being known to the plaintif:
Held, that interest could not be charged. D
Hertel v. Supple, 13 Gr. 648, 14 Gr. 421.

Contract for Sinking Well.] — Defendant agreed with the plaintiffs to sink an artesian well in B. for seventy-five cents a foot. After sinking a distance of 160 feet he toot. After sinking a distance of 140 feet he met with an impediment, and refused to proceed further:—Held, that he was entitled to be paid for the work done. Quaere, whether evidence as to how contracts for artesian wells were usually made in B. should have been received. Barrie Gas Co. v. Sullivan, 5 A. R.

Custom of Paris.] - See Pilon v. Brunet, 5 S. C. R. 318.

Customary Right.] — Held, following Shuttleworth v. Le Fleming, 19 C. B. N. S. 687, that pleas setting up a custom for inhabitants of the surrounding country as of right to drink the water of certain mineral right to drink the water of certain miserial springs for forty years were bad, for such right could not be claimed in gross under the Pre-scription Act, R. S. O. 1877 c. 108, s. 38. Semble, that, apart from the statute, the alleged custom was bad, as being too large, alleged custom was bad, as being too large, and not confined, either in the pleas or in the evidence, to any particular class of persons. Grand Hotel Co. v. Cross, 44 U. C. R. 153. Quere, whether a custom could be proved in this Province, there being no time im-memorial on which to found it, especially where, as here, the land sought to be burdened therewith was only granted by the Crown within fifty years. Ib.

Deck Cargo.]-Where it is the usage of the trade to carry a deck cargo in inland navigation, and such usage is known to the shipper, he cannot hold the master or owner responsible for a part of the deck cargo swept off in a storm, the bill of lading excepting the dangers of navigation. Stephens v. McDonell, M. T. 6 Vict.

Whether in case of loss of cargo loaded on deck the ship-owner will be liable, depends on deck the smp-owner will be hable, depends of the usage which prevails in respect to deck loading in the particular navigation. Pater-son v. Black, 5 U. C. R. 481. Case against defendant as a common carrier for loss of goods. Plea, not guilty; 2. That it is a custom in navigating Lake Ontario to carry cargo on deck; that the plaintiff's goods were laden and stowed on deck; and that a storm arising they were of necessity thrown overboard for the preservation of the vessel Replication de injurià generally, and cargo. not expressly admitting nor expressly traversing the custom:—Held, per curiam that under these pleadings, the custom of trade, as well as all questions tending to shew negligence, either in the method of loading or in the management of the vessel, or in the throwing overboard the goods without adequate reason, were put in issue. Ib.

As to the usage of vessels to carry deck ids, with reference to marine insurance, See Spooner v. Western Assurance Co., 38 U. C. R. 622.

Evidence of Usage - Knowledge.]-To incorporate mercantile usages with the terms of a contract, or to prove that they form the versally to the subject matter of the contract in the neighbourhood or place where it was If a local custom or usage of a particular place, or class of persons, be relied on, it must be shewn that the parties knew the at most be snewn that the parties knew in custom, as it is not binding on those who are ignorant of it. The evidence of the usage must be "clear, cogent and irresistible." Burke v. Blake, 6 P. R. 260.

At the trial the bank manager to whom the draft was returned, was asked. "What do you understand by the words added by defen-To this question objection was taken, and the Judge ruled that in the absence of evidence (which it was admitted could not be given), that by the usage of bankers the words complained of had a meaning other than that conveyed by them in their natural construction, the question could not be put:— Held, that the usage of bankers could not in any way be the rule by which the meaning of such words could be held to be governed, and (following Daines v. Hartley, 3 Ex. 200), a proper foundation had not been laid for the question; that the witness should first have been asked if there were any circumstances which would lead him to understand the words in other than their natural sense, and that upon proof of such circumstances the question would have been allowable. As, however, the Judge's ruling had precluded the plaintiff's counsel from laying such a foundation, a new trial was ordered. Huber v. Crookall, 10 O. R. 475.

Foreign Usage. |- Evidence of custom in foreign country rejected where the contract was made in Ontario. See Williams v. Carby, 5 A. R. 626, Import Duties.]—Plaintiffs bought from defendant certain coal, shipped to defendant at Toronto from a foreign port, and then lying on board the vessel in the Welland Canal. A sale note was given, stating only the quantity and price, and the time by which it was to be taken out of the vessel:—Held, that defendant was not obliged to pay the import duties. Held, also, that evidence was rightly admitted to shew the usage of the trade on sales made under such circumstances. Brown v. Browne, 9 U. C. R. 312.

Inspection of Timber.]-Action for nondelivery of timber at a place named. Plea, setting up a custom requiring the plaintiff to inspect the timber where it was being cut before delivery, and neglect to do so:-Held bad, as insufficient and inconsistent with the defendant's express contract. Hayes v. Neshitt, 25 C. P. 101.

See, also, Aitcheson v. Cook, 37 U. C. R.

Insurance—Credit for Premiums.]—The plaintiffs alleged that it was the custom of agents to give each other credit for premiums on reassurance and to settle at the end of the month, when the balance, if any, was handed over, but no knowledge by defendants of such a course of dealing, nor such a course of dealing on the part of their agents, was proved:—Held, that even if such a custom had been proved to exist between local agents, it would not be binding on the company, unless authorized by it. Western Assurance Co. v. Provincial Ins. Co., 5 A. R. 190.

Insurance-Deviation in Voyage.] - The plaintiff effected an insurance with defendants on certain wheat to be carried in a schooner from Port Darlington to Kingston, and from thence to Montreal by such boats, barges, or vessels, as might be deemed necessary and pro-per for the safe transport thereof. The schooner proceeded to Port Sidney, about three miles below Kingston; the wheat was there transferred to a barge, which returned to Kingston to complete her cargo, and while so returning the barge was stranded and the wheat lost. The plaintiff endeavoured to prove a custom in support of the course taken by the schooner, but the evidence only shewed that certain forwarders having storehouses at Port Sidney had been in the habit of doing as was done in this case; and it appeared that no such question as the present had ever been raised :- Held, that such evidence was wholly insufficient, and that the policy was avoided by the deviation in the voyage. Fishe Western Assurance Co., 11 U. C. R. 255.

Plaintiff shipped 90 barrels of flour at Port Credit, in a vessel of defendant's, to be car-Creat, in a vessel of derendant's, to be carried to Quebec, such vessel being capable of carrying 4,500. She proceeded to Toronto, where she took in 400 barrels more, and thence to Oswego, where 2,450 were shipped for Quebec also. She was wrecked near Oswego. Defendant was held liable therefor, such deviation being beyond the established usages of trade. Wright v. Holcombe, 6 C.

Interest on Note.]-A promissory note was dishonoured at maturity, but was not prowas disnonoured at maturity, out was not pro-tested by the holders (a banking corporation) because of a waiver by the indorsers of pre-sentment and notice:—Held, that the indor-sers were not liable to pay interest thereon as a debt. Nor could a contract to pay interest be deduced from a usage of banks to charge interest on overdue debts, and to collect it if possible, Re McDougall, 12 A. R. 265.

Lease-Away-going Crops. 1-Where there is a stipulation in a lease for a term certain that the lessee shall deliver up all the lands at the expiration of the lease, all question as to a customary right of the away-going crop to a customary right of the away-going crop is excluded; and semble, that there is no custom of the country as to the away-going crops in Upper Canada. Burrowes v. Cairns, 2 U. C. R. 288.

Marking Timber.]-B. had agreed to deliver certain timber to the plaintiff at a price named, and in trover for such timber defendant claimed under a purchase from B. The fact that the timber was marked with B.'s mark was relied upon by defendant to shew that it was not the plaintiff's:—Held, that the plaintiff might shew, in answer, that it was not uncommon for persons in charge of but not owning timber thus to mark it. Little v. Foley, 24 U. C. R. 177.

Sale of Wheat—Providing Cars.]—Held, that under a contract to sell wheat f. o. b. the railway cars, it was the duty of the buyer to provide the cars; and that there was no evidence of a usage or custom to the contrary, even if such usage could be received to vary the contract. Semble, that the explanation of the alleged usage was that the sellers, in providing cars at Clinton under such contracts, were acting as agents for the buyers. Marshall v. Jaunicson, 42 U. C. R. 113.

shall v. Jamieson, 42 U. C. R. 115.

Sheep Left with Vendor—Bills of Sale Act.]—Plaintiff bought from R. a number of sheep, paying him part of the purchase money at the time, and the balance within a few days. Upon the first payment being made plaintiff marked the sheep with red paint as his property, and they were then placed apart from the rest of R.'s sheep in a separate field on the latter's farm, where they were to remain until required by plaintiff. Plaintiff was a butcher, and it appeared to be the custom among butchers to leave with farmers stock purchased from them until convenient to remove it. This had also been the course of dealing between plaintiff and R. on previous occasions. The sheep thus remained on R.'s premises until seized under an attachment argainst R., as an absconding debtor:—Held, that the mere marking of the sheep, or the removal of them from one field of the seller to another, did not constitute a sufficient of them from one field of the seller to mother, did not constitute a sufficient of the seller to mode of dealing among farmers of treating as their own property really belonging to others, to put third parties upon inquiry as to the actual ownership. Quere, whether such inquiry would be admissible in a case arising under the statute in question. Doyle v. Lasher, 16 C. P. 263.

Trade Terms.]—The construction of a mercantile contract is for the court, unless it contains words of a technical or conventional use in the trade to which the contract relates. Nordheimer v, Robinson, 2 A. R. 305.

Injury to Right.]—An action will lie for injury to a right, though no appreciable damage has been sustained. Mitchell v. Barry, 26 U. C. R. 416; Plumb v. Mctannon, 32 U. C. R. 5. C. R. 8; Warren v. Deslippes, 33 U. C. R. 5.

II. APPORTIONMENT.

Joint Act—Severance of Damages.]—In an action against two justices for one act of imprisonment, charged in one count as a trespas, and in another as done maliciously, the jury found $800 against one defendant, and $400 against the other:—Semble, that the damages could not be thus severed; but, held, no ground for a new trial, as the finding might be treated as a verdiet for $800 against one defendant, the other being let go free by the plaintiff. Quaere, as to the proper mode of entering the judgment. Clissold v. Mitchell, 25 U. C. R. 420. Affirmed in appeal, 26 U. C. R. 420.

Liquor Supplied by Two Tavern-Keepers, I—Where a person comes to his death while intoxicated, and the intoxicating liquor has been supplied to him at two taverns and to excess in each so that an action might have been brought successfully against either of the tavern-keepers under R. S. O. 1887 c. 194, s. 122, they cannot be sued jointly. The jury having in such an action in which tavern-keepers had been jointly sued assessed the damages at the trial at different sums against the two defendants, upon application to set aside the verdict on the ground that the statute would not support such a joint action, the plaintiff was put to his election to retain his judgment against either defendant, undertaking to enter a nolle prossqui against the other. Crane v. Hund., 26 O. R. 641.

Pollution of Stream.]—In an action against several mill owners for obstructing a navigable river by throwing saw-dust and refuse into it from their mills, a reference was made to the master to ascertain the amount of damages: — Held, that the master rightly treated the defendants as joint tort-feasors; that he was not called upon to apportion the damages according to the injury inflicted by each defendant; and he was not obliged to apportion them according to the different grounds of injury claimed by the plaintiff. Booth v. Ratie, 21 S. C. R. 637.

Sheep Act. |—The right of action given by R. S. O. 1887 c. 214, s. 15, to the owner of sheep killed by dogs, is to be prosecuted with the usual procedure of the appropriate forum. If, therefore, an action be properly brought in the county court it may be tried before a jury, and where it is so tried, they, and not the Judge, should apportion the damages if an apportionment be required. Fox v. Williamson, 20 A. R. 610.

See Edmonds v. Hamilton Provident and Loan Society, 18 A. R. 347.

III. ASSESSMENT.

1. By Jury or Judge.

After Interlocutory Judgment.]—The plaintiff must assess his damages after interlocutory judgment, in debt on a bond to the limits. Callagher v. Strobridge, Dra. 158.

Where an interlocutory judgment was set aside by a Judge's order, but the plaintiff proceeded and assessed damages, the court set the proceedings aside. Staats v. Reynolds, 4 O. S. 5.

Where, in a country cause, a short time before the assizes, an interlocutory judgment was set aside by a Judge's order on terms of payment of costs and that the defendant should plead issuably and take twenty-four hours' notice of trial, and defendant tendered the costs and pleas the evening before the first day of the assizes, at the same time serving a written demand of replication, and offering to take one hour's notice of trial, notwithstanding which the plaintiff, having previously given notice of assessment, went on and assessed damages, the court held the assessment regular, the defendant filing no affidavit of merits, nor shewing that his pleas were issuable, and the delay in his proceeding after the order was granted being too great. Jessup v. Frazer, 1 U. C. R. 390.

A plaintiff is not at liberty to go on and assess his damages, pendling a summons to set aside his interlocutory judgment, and after it is returnable. Pace v. Meyers, S. U. C. R. 70. See Star Life Assurance Society v. Southgate, 18 P. R. 151; Stuart v. McVicar, ib. 250; Stanley v. Litt, 19 P. R. 101; Appleby v. Turner, ib. 145, 175.

After Judgment on Demurrer,]—Semble, that in making up a record for assessment after judgment on demurrer, before the record is made up a judgment paper should be filed in the office; but the omission of it must be taken advantage of before damages assessed. The fact that a nist prius record contains a blank for the date of the judgment on the demurrer, is no ground for setting aside the assessment of damages. Gamble v. Recs, 7 U. C. R. 406.

Contingent Damages.] — Where there was an issue of fact and an issue in law, on which contingent damages were to be assessed, a notice of trial was held sufficient to enable the plaintiff to try the issue and assess damages. Davis v. Davis, 4 O. S. 322.

In trespass qu. cl. fr., defendant's attorney, seeking the advice of counsel upon some difficult points of pleading that were likely to arise in the defence, undertook to allow the plaintiff's attorney to enter his record at any time during the assizes. Defendant's attorney pleaded a special plea, to which the plaintiff new assigned, and defendant then pleaded specially to the new assignment, and the plaintiff demurred specially. Defendant thereupon gave the plaintiff notice that if he proceeded to assess contingent damages, he should move to set aside the proceedings for irrequiarity; the plaintiff proceeded to assess his damages, and the court set the assessment aside without costs. Hodykinson v. Donaldson, 2 U. C. R. 274.

A plaintiff cannot, under rule 23 of H. T. 12 Vict., assess contingent damages where there is nothing on the record but a demurrer to the whole declaration. Elliott v. Wilson, 7 U. C. R. 331.

Evidence on Assessment — Admissibility.]—Upon an assessment of damages for goods sold, defendant tried to prove a contract to deliver the goods in Toronto free of charge, and that they were refused by defendant in consequence of their arriving with charges on them, and the jury found nominal damages only:—Held, that such matter should have been pleaded in bar, and was not available to defendant on an assessment of damages. Comstock v. Thistle, 7 C. P. 27.

Evidence—Necessity for—Payment into Court.1—Where in indebitatus assumpsit the defendant, as to all the moneys in the declaration except as to £33 14s., pleaded the general issue, and as to that sum pleaded payment of £1 1s. 8d. into court, and no damages ultra; DAMAGES.

and the plaintiff replied that he had sustained greater damages, but at the trial obtained a verdiet for the difference between the sum of £33 14s, and £1 1s, 8d, paid into court, as a sum admitted on the record, without giving any evidence—the court set the verdiet aside, as it was incumbent on the plaintiff to prove damages, no specific sum being admitted on the record in this form of action. Ross v. Garrison, 6 O. S. 625.

General Damages,] — Where one count is good and another bad, and the damages general, the court will not arrest judgment, but award a venire de novo. Owens v. Purcell, 11 U. C. R. 390; Decow v. Tuit, 25 U. C. R. 188.

Issues—Sufficiency of.]—In debt by execution on an annuity bond made by defendant to the testator, and payable during the lifetime of the testator:—Held, that the issues tendered by the replications were sufficient, and that the allegations in the pleadings, set out in the case, were sufficient to warrant the assessment of damages. Smith v. Muirhead, 13 U. C. R. 9.

Several Damages.]—Held, that, upon the evidence given in this case, a jury might assess several damages on each of the three counts; the first two being for assault and imprisonment on different days, and the third for malicious prosecution. Appleton v. Lepper, 20 C. P. 138.

Several Damages.] — Agreement to get out logs and to make road therefor. Plaintiff overpaid for the logs got out, but damages to S10 sustained by defendant's neglect to make the road:—Held, plaintiff entitled to a verdict for S10, notwithstanding the overpayment. Stubbs v, Johnston, 38 U. C. R. 466.

Several Damages.]-After a count by husband and wife for injury done to the wife during coverture, a second count, by the husband alone—after setting out the facts that the horse and cutter, in which both plaintiffs at the time were, having been precipitated over a bridge with the wife, and that she was thereby greatly injured, and laid up for a long time in consequence of the injuries sustained by her, and endured great suffering—proceeded to al-lege that the husband was put to great trouble and expense by reason of the loss of the wife's society and her services, and was compelled to nay and did pay large sums of money on ac-count of her illness to nurses and medical men, &c., and also lost the said horse and cutter, and was otherwise put to great ex-pense, &c. The jury having found for the plaintiffs, and assessed damages generally on both counts:—Held, that after verdict the second count must be treated as a count only for the damages of the husband, for, which he alone could sue; and that, treating it as such, it was well ioined with the first count. pay and did pay large sums of money on ache alone could sue; and that, treating it as such, it was well joined with the first count, under the C. L. P. Act, though damages were sought by him for the injury to the horse and cutter, as well as for that resulting to the husband from his injury to the wife:-Held, also, that defendants were not entitled to arrest the judgment on the ground that the damages had not been separately assessed upon each count. Campbell v. Great Western R. W. Co., 29 C. P. 345, 563.

Special Venire.]—When the writ of trial is only to try the issue, and contains no special p—57 venire to assess damages, the jury have no authority to assess damages on breaches suggested. Hunter v. Vernon, 7 U. C. R. 552.

Verdict for Defendant.]—There can be no assessment of damages where a verdict is found for defendant on an issue going to the whole cause of action. Prynne v. Carroll, 10 U. C. R. 519.

2. Reference to Assess.

Court of Appeal — Reference back to Court below.]—The court of appeal directed a verdict to be entered for the plaintiff against a tavern keeper for selling liquor to her busband after being forbidden by the plaintiff, his wife, to do so, but referred it back to the county court Judge to assess the damages, declining to follow the course adopted in Denny v. Montreal Telegraph Co., 3 A. R. 628. Austin v. Davis, 7 A. R. 478.

Trial Judge-Discretion--Appeal.1—The right of the trial Judge to refer the question of damages, as a question arising in the ac-tion, under s. 101 of the Judicature Act, is indisputable, at all events as a matter of discretion and subject to review; and it is for the party objecting to the reference to shew that the discretion has been wrongly exercised, And where, in an action for damages injury to the plaintiff's land on the bank of a navigable river and to his business as a boatman, by the acts of the three several defendants, who owned saw mills higher up on the stream, in throwing refuse into it, it appeared that the plaintiff's title to relief and the liability of the defendants had been established in a former action, and the trial Judge heard the case only so far as to satisfy himself that the plaintiff had established a prima facie case on the question of dam-ages, and directed a reference to assess and apportion them among the defendants, reserving further directions and costs:-Held, that there was no miscarriage, and the discretion of the trial Judge should not be overruled. Ratté v. Booth, 16 P. R. 185.

IV. CONTINUING DAMAGE.

Criminal Conversation — Statute of Limitations,1—Criminal conversation is a continuing wrong, and where the wife is enticed away more than six years before, but the criminal conversation continues down to the time of the bringing of the action, the husband may recover such damages as he has sustained within the period of six years mext before the bringing of the action; recovery in respect of the enticing away and of anything else which happened prior to the six years being barred by the statute of limitations. Bulley v. King, 27 A. R. 703.

Personal Injuries—Future Sufferings.]—When in an action for bodily injuries there is but one cause of action, damages must be assessed once for all. And when damages have been once recovered, no new action can be maintained for sufferings afterwards endured from the unforeseen effects of the original injury. City of Montreal v. McGee, 30 S. C. R. 582.

Severance of Land—Railway.]—Under 14 & 15 Vict. c. 51, where a railway company's line severs a farm, it is primâ facie their duty to construct a farm crossing, and the fact of their having commenced the construction of such a crossing at a particular place, and afterwards desisted at the request of the owner, does not prevent the owner from recovering damages as for a continuing breach. Reist v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 6 C. P. 421.

Water —Flooding Land—Public Work.]
—The Dominion Government constructed a collecting drain along a portion of the Lachine that a strength of the Lachine that a strength of the collecting drain discharged its contents that a strength of the collecting drain of the culvert to carry off the large quantity of the culvert to carry off the large quantity of water emptied into it by the collecting drain at certain times, the suppliant's farm was flooded and the crops thereby injured. The flooding was not regular and inevitable, but depended upon certain natural conditions which might or might not occur in any given time:—Held, that the Crown was liable in damages; that the case was one in which the court had jurisdiction under s. 10 (a) of the Exchequer Court Act; and that in assessing the damages in such a case the proper mode was to assess them once for all. Davidson v. The Queen, 6 Ex. C. R. 51.

Water—Obstruction.]—An action is maintainable by the reversioner of a mill demised to a tenant for diversion or obstruction by a stranger of water from the mill head, the obstruction being of such a character as to render the sale of the reversion less valuable:—Quare, whether damages must be recovered once for all. Rogers v. Dickson, 10 C. P. 481.

V. Double or Treble Damages.

Distress — Construction of Lease.] — Remarks as to the hardship of the statute allowing double damages for distraining when no rent due, where the landlord has acted on an erroneous construction of a doubtful lease. Brown v. Blackwell, 35 U. C. R. 239.

Distress—Reference to Arbitration.]—A reference to arbitration disentities a plantiff from recovering treble damages and costs in cases where he would otherwise be entitled to them under 2 Wm. & M. c. 5, s. 4; the word "recover" used in the statute means "recover by the verdict of a jury." Clark v. Irwin, 8 L. J. 21.

Registrar—Conviction.]—An action cannot be brought against a registrar for treble damages under s. 10 of 35 Geo. III. c. 5, until he has been convicted under that section of some offence for which he shall forfeit his office. Hamilton v. Lyons, 5 O. S. 503.

VI. EQUITY- DAMAGES IN.

Discontinuance of Wrongful Act.]—
Where a plaintiff filed a bill for an injunction and payment of damages; and it appeared that the wrongful act complained of had, without his knowledge, been discontinued before the suit was commenced:—Held, that the court had not jurisdiction to make a decree for the damages. Brockington v. Palmer, 18 Gr. 488.

Reference—A. J. Act.1—Under 28 Vict. c. 17, s. 3, and the A. J. Act. 1873, the court of chancery is bound, where common shewn to have been sustained by a saintif, to give him full relief in any suit brought before it, by directing an inquiry as to the damages sustained; and the court is not at liberty to send the plaintiff to law for the purpose of obtaining such damages, Standly v. Perry, 23 Gr. 507.

VII. EXEMPLARY DAMAGES.

Justice of the Peace.]—In an action against two justices, one of the defendants having used insulting expressions to the plain-tiff during the examination before then:—Held, no misdirection to tell the jury that they were at liberty to give exemplary or vindictive damages. Clissold v. Machell, 25 U. C. R. 80, 26 U. C. R. 422.

VIII. INCREASING OR REDUCING.

1. Excessive Damages.

Bodily Injuries.]—In an action by Y. against a steamboat company to recover damages occasioned by the death of his wife, by a fall from a wharf, it appeared that the deceased had not had regular and continual medical treatment after the accident, and the doctors who gave evidence at the trial differed as to whether or not the immersion was the proximate cause of her death. The jury when asked: Would the deceased have recovered, notwithstanding the accident, if she had had regular and continual attendance? replied "very doubtful." A verdict was found for the plaintiff, with $1,500 damages, which the supreme court of Nova Scotia set aside, and ordered a new trial. On appeal from that decision:—Held, that the evidence and finding of the jury having left it in doubt that the accident was the proximate cause of Mrs. Y.'s death, the jury not having been properly instructed as to the liability of the company under the circumstances, and the damages being excessive under the evidence, the order for a new trial should be affirmed. York v. Canada Allantic Steamshipt Co., 22 S. C. R. 167.

Bodily Injuries.]—The bodily injuries received by the plaintiffs having been severe and caused much suffering, a verdict of 86,500 was not one that should be disturbed as excessive. Sornberger v. Canadian Pacific R. W. Co., 24 A. R. 263.

Bodily Injuries—Appeal—Further Evidence.]—See Fraser v. London Street R. W. Co., 18 P. R. 370.

Breach of Contract—Manufacture and Sale of Chattels.]—See Ontario Lantern Co. v. Hamilton Brass Mfg. Co., 27 A. R. 346, post X. 1 (b).

Conversion — Interpleader.]—Defendant caused plaintiff's goods to be seized under an execution against his father, believing them to belong to the latter. The goods in question consisted of some articles of machinery, metal, &c.. in the upper portion of a shop where plaintiff carried on his business. The sheriff did not take possession before the 20th, and an interpleader order was made on 29th January, and during part of this interval plaintiff was allowed to continue his business. The jury having given the plaintiff $1.000 dnmages:

—Held, excessive, as no damages were recoverable after the date of the interpleader order; and a new trial was ordered. Lister v. Northern R. W. Co., 19 C. P. 408.

Death of Son—Expectation of Pecuniary Benefit.]—Damages of $3,000 for the death of the plaintiff's son by the negligence of the defendants held excessive, having regard to the plaintiff's expectation of pecuniary benefit, and a new trial ordered unless the plaintiff should consent to accept $1,500, Collier v. Michigan Central R. W. Co., 27 A. R. 630.

Defamation.]—See Dominion Telegraph Co. v. Silver, 10 S. C. R. 238.

Ejection from Train.]—The amount of damages allowed by the jury to the plantiff because of his removal from a train while taking a longer route than that authorized by his ticket was reduced by the court of appeal as unwarrantably large. Bancey v. Grand Truck R. W. Co., 19 A. R. 664.

Hlegal Distress.]—Where in an action for illegal distress damages were assessed by the trial Judge generally in favour of several plaintiffs, whose rights and interests were distinct, and were apportioned equally between them by the divisional court, the court of appeal, while holding that one plaintiff only was entitled to recover, reduced the damages apportioned to him, being of opinion that such damages were excessive; it appearing, moreover, that in the general assessment matters had been taken into consideration of which he was not entitled to complain. Corham v. Kingston, 17 O. R. 432, considered. Judgment in 19 O. R. 677 varied. Edmonds v. Hamilton Provident and Loan Society, 18 A. 347.

Loss of Goods by Carriers—New Trial.]
— See Robertson v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co.,
21 A. R. 204.

Reversion — Injury to.] — The plaintiffs, lessors, proved that the damage to the reversion by reason of the defendant's omission to repair was 8651, the estimate covering all highry up to the time of trial; the jury gave a verdict for 8409. There was no misdirection complained of, nor was the Judge asked to direct the jury to find in express terms the actual damage sustained by the reversion; nor were any affidavits filed to shew that the damages were excessive. The court refused to grant a new trial, on the ground of excessive damages. Marriot v. Cotton, 2 C. & K. 533, referred to, distinguished, and doubted. Review of English authorities as to injuries to the reversion, the time of beinging the action therefor, and the measure of damages. Perry v. Bank of Upper Canada, 15 C. P. 404.

Trespass — Mutilation of Corpse.] — See Davidson v. Garrett, 30 O. R. 653.

2. Inadequate Damages,

Bodily Injuries—Loss of Business.]—Although it is unusual to interfere with a verdiet of a jury in an action of tort on the ground of inadequacy of the damages found, still such verdicts are subject to the supervision of the court, and if the amount awarded be so small that it is evident the jury must have overlooked some material element of damage in the plaintiff's case, a new trial will be granted. A practising physician having been badly, if not permanently, injured through the negligence of the defendants, it appearing also that his professional business had suffered to a considerable extent, was awarded $700 by the jury:—Held, that there must be a new trial on the ground of inadequacy of the damages. Church v. City of Ottawa, 25 O. R. 298, 22 A. R. 348.

3. Practice of Appellate Courts.

Discretion of Court of First Instance,—In an action for damages, if the amount awarded in the court of first instance and to make it apparent that the court of the following and to make it apparent that the discretion of the Judge of the exercise of a discretion on his part being, in the nature of the case, required), an appellate court will not interfere with the discretion such Judge has exercised in determining the amount of damages. Levi v. Reed, 6 S. C. R. 482.

A court of appeal should not interfere with damages awarded by a judgment under consideration in appeal unless they appear to have been calculated upon a wrong principle, or arrived at without regard to considerations which ought to govern a tribunal in awarding damages. It is not sufficient if the Judges in the appeal sitting as Judges in the first instance might have given, as some of the Judges in the court below in this case were disposed to give, larger damages. Mayor of City of Montreal v, Hall, 12 S. C. R. 74.

The amount of damages awarded by the Judge who tries the case, in his discretion, in the court of first instance, should not be interfered with by a court of appeal, unless clearly unreasonable and unsupported by the evidence, or there be some error in law or fact, or partiality on the part of the Judge. Levi v. Reed, 6 S. C. R. 482, and Gingras v. Desilets, Cassels's Dig. 117, followed. Cossette v. Dun, 18 S. C. R. 222.

The supreme court will not interfere with the amount of damages assessed by a judgment appealed from, if there is evidence to support it. Montreal Gas Co. v. 8t. Laurent, City of St. Henri v. 8t. Laurent, 26 S. C. R. 176.

Where evidence offered at a trial and rejected affects only the amount of damages, and the amount assessed is small, the court, in the exercise of the discretion vested in it by the Error and Appeal Act (C. S. U. C. c. 13, s. 24), will refuse leave to appeal. Myers v. Curric, 9 L. J. 152.

Increasing Damages without Crossappeal. |—Under the Ontario Judicature Act, R. S. O. 1887 c. 44, s. 47 and 48, the court of appeal has power to increase damages awarded to a respondent without a crossappeal, and the supreme court has the like power under its rule No. 61. Though the court will not usually increase such damages without a cross-appeal, yet where the original proceedings were by arbitration under a statute providing that the court, on appeal from the award, shall pronounce such judgment as the arbitrators should have given, the statute is sufficient notice to an appellant of what the court may do, and a cross-appeal is not necessary. Town of Toronto Junction v. Christic, 25 S. C. R. 551.

4. Miscellaneous Cases.

Inflammatory Address to Jury.] — Where complaint is made that counsel at the trial has improperly inflamed the minds of the jurors by remarks addressed to them, objection must be lodged at the time the remarks are made, and the intervention of the trial Judge chimed; and where this has not been done, the court will not interfere upon appeal. The injuries having been severe and caused much suffering, a verdict of $6,500 was not one that should be disturbed as excessive. Surnberger v. Canadian Pacific R. W. Co., 24 A. R. 265.

Nuisance — Abatement — Release.] — Where in an action on the case for a nuisance, by landlords as reversioners, they recovered 2500 damages, the court granted a rule nist to reduce the verdict to Is, on the nuisance being abated within a certain time, unless the landlords obtained a release from their tenants to the defendant of any cause of action accruing to them from the nuisance. The rule was afterwards discharged on a release being produced, although the release was not exactly in accordance with the terms of the rule. Drew v. Baby, 6 O. S. 241.

IX. LIQUIDATED DAMAGES OR PENALTY.

Bonus—Breach of Condition.]—In 1874 the county of Halton gave to the Hamilton and North-Western Railway Company a bonus of $85,000 to be used in the construction of the railway, upon the condition that the company should remain "independent" for twenty-one years. In 1888 the Hamilton and North-Western Railway Company became (as was on the facts held) in effect merged in the Grand Trunk Railway Company, and ceased to be an independent line:—Held, that there had been a breach of the condition entitling the plaintiffs to recover the whole amount of the bonus as liquidated damages, County of Halton v, Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 19 A. R. 522. Affirmed, 218 C. R. 746.

Building Contract—Delay.]—Under a building contract, in writing, the contractor agreed that, subject to any extensions of time by the architect, the building should be finished by a maned day, and that in default he would pay $50 a week as liquidated damages. It was also provided that all extras, &c., should form part of the contract if authorized by the architect, who was first to fix the price, and grant such extension of time therefor as he thought necessary, and power was also given him to extend the time for completion in case of a strike. The building was not completed for over four months after the time fixed, and this action for the balance of the contract price was commenced within the time the final payment was made payable under the contract. Although some extras were done, and there was evidence as to delay by strikes, the architect was not asked for, and he did not grant, any extension of time:— Held, that the contract must govern, and that the defendants were entitled to recover, by way of counterclaim, the sum provided by the contract as liquidated damages. If a claim to liquidated damages by a defendant is pleaded by way of counterclaim, the plaintiff may reply matters arising subsequent to action brought. The plaintiff was allowed to reply that the final payment under the contract had accrued due after action brought. Altier, if pleaded by way of set-off. Toke v., Andrews, 8 Q. B. D. 428, followed. McNamara v. Skain, 23 O. R. 103.

Building Contract—Delay.]—Where a contract provided that upon non-completion by a fixed date a contractor was to pay or "allow" $10 a day until completion:—Held, that this authorized a deduction as liquidated damages of the amount so "allowed," from the contract price, even as against lien-holders chaiming adversely to the contractor, other than those having liens for wages where such wages liens were less in the aggregate than ten per cent, of the contract price. McBean v. Kinnear, 23 O. R. 313.

Contract—Delay Caused by Contractor.]—Where a contract provides that an engine shall be built and placed in position by a certain date, with a penalty for each day's delay, the time of commencement is of the essence of the contract, and if, owing to the purchaser's fault, the contractor is materially delayed in commencing the work the parties are at large so far as the penalty is concerned, the purchaser, if the work be not completed by the time fixed, being entitled only to actual damages. Holme v. Guppy, 3 M. & W. 387, followed. Kerr Engine Co., v. French Ricer Tug Co., 21 A. R. 160. Affirmed, 24 S. C. R. 703.

Covenant — Delay — Equitable Relief,]—
Under a covenant contained in a lease granting a right of way over certain lands to a railway company for the purpose of a switch to a gravel pit, the lessees on default in removing the tracks and ties from the land within fifteen days from the termination of the lease, were to forfeit and pay to the lessor 85 a day as liquidated damages, and not as a penalty, for each day after the said time that the lands and premises should remain in any way obstructed:—Held, that such damages were liquidated. Held, however, that, under the circumstances set out in the judgment, this was a proper case in which to grant relief under s. 52, s.-s. 3, of the Ontario Judicature Act, 1895, by awarding actual damages estimated on a liberal scale.
Townscal v. Toronto, Hamilton, and Buffalo R. W. Co., 28 O. R. 195.

Insurance — Life — Non-acceptance of Policy—Premium.]—See Royal Victoria Life Ins. Co. v. Richards, 31 O. R. 483.

X. Measure of Damages,

1. Breach of Contract.

(a) Covenants.

Against Incumbrances.] — Where the venue of lands, who had himself after purchasing mortgaged the property, brought action for breach of covenant against incumbrances; and the mortgage constituting the action of the lands as well as his, and the mortgage constituting the sent value of the land, and as well as his, and the sent value of the land, and as well as his, and the sent value of the land, and as well as his, and the sent value of the land, and as well as his, and the sent value of the land, and the sent properties of the lands of the lands of the sent proper destination. Meditheray v. Mimico Real Estate Security Co., 28 O. R. 255.

Against Lucumbrances—Tazes.]—Upon a breach of covenant, a party is liable only for such damages as are the natural consequences of his act or omission. Where, therefore, the vendee of land allowed it to be sold for taxes which had accrued during his vendor's time, and neglected to redeem it within the year afterwards:—Held, that he could not as of right recover damages to the value of the land so allowed to be sold. McCollum v. Davis, 8 U. C. R. 150.

For Quiet Enjoyment - Deducting Amount of Former Award. | — During the plaintiff's ownership of a mill site the Government constructed a breakwater at the mouth of the river, and the plaintiff had been awarded damages "on account of the penning or damming up of the waters by the construct ing of the breakwater, and forcing them back on his property," and on another account not material to this action:—Held, that, as the sum awarded was a lump sum for both accounts together, and as the evidence on the arbitration shewed that the breakwater only affected the plaintiff to the extent of three feet of water, leaving bim a fall of five feet, value of which could only be ascertained by a reference, and as the subjects of the arbitration and this action on the covenant for quiet enjoyment were not the same, the defendants were not entitled to deduct the money recovered from the Government from the amount recovered for damages for their breach of con-Platt v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 12 O. R. 119.

For Title, I—W. sold and conveyed lands by metes and hounds to B., who conveyed to by metes and bounds to B., who conveyed to be to be sold to

Not to Assign Lease.]—Upon breach of a covenant in a lease not to assign without leave, the lessors are entitled to recover as damages such sum of money as will put them in the same position as if the covenant had not been broken and they had retained the liability of the defendant instead of an inferior of the defendant is liability allowance must be made for the vicissitudes of business and the uncertainty of life and health. Upon appeal from a referee's report the damages were reduced from $3.897.62 to $500. Williams v. Earle, L. R. 3 Q. B. 739, followed. Munro v. Waller (No. 2), 28 O. R. 574.

Not to Carry on Business — Loss of Custom.] — In an action for damages for breach of a covenant not to carry on a certain business, it was held that general loss of custom after the commencement of the new business by the defendants could be shewn by the plaintiff as evidence to go to the Jury of damages resulting to him from such business. Rateliffe v. Evans, [1892] 2 Q. B. 524, applied and followed. 2. That damages were properly assessed up to the date of the judgment. Stalker v. Dunwich, 15 O. R. 342, followed. Turner v. Burns, 24 O. R. 28.

To Insure against Fire, I—In an action on a covenant by lesses to insure the premises in the name of the lessor, the insurance money to be expended in the erection of new buildings:—Held, that the measure of damages was the value of the premises lost to the plaintiff by defendant's neglect to insure, such value not exceeding the sum in which defendant was to have insured by his covenant; and that it could make no difference that, on failure of the lessee to insure, the lessor was allowed by the lease to do so, and charge the premiums as rent. Douglass v. Murphy, 16 U. C. R. 113.

To Repair.)—In an action on a lease thaving many years to run) for rent and non-repair of the premises:—Held, that the reversioner, by reason of the length of the lease, was not restricted to nominal damages, but the measure of damages was the amount to which the reversion is injured by the premises being out of repair. Atkinson v. Beard, 11 C. P. 245.

(b) Other Contracts.

Advance of Money. |- Assumpsit on an agreement, whereby defendant agreed to sup-ply plaintiff with whatever funds he should require for carrying on his business (a miller, &c.) not exceeding, &c., to be secured by the promissory notes of plaintiff, and warehouse receipts for the flour, which was to be sold by defendants as agents and commission merchants in any market the plaintiff might think proper, and that plaintiff should give a mortgage to defendants on his mill as collateral security. Breach (first count), that, although defendants advanced a small sum, yet they would not make any further advances, by means whereof the plaintiff has been unable to do such an extensive business and gain such profits as he might have done. Defendants traversed the several averments in the declaration, and pleaded a substituted special agreement. After verdict for plaintiff on the first count for £3,030 and on the second for £2,237 12 s. 6d.:—Held, that there should be a new trial: that as to the first count, the damages were not warranted by the evidence. there being no request of any specific sum proved, and that general evidence of plaintiff asking for and failing to obtain advances was asking for and falling to obtain advances was not sufficient. Quære, as to the measure of damages for breach of the contract set out in the first count. Hyde v. Gooderham, 6 C. P.

Advance of Money.]—Defendant agreed to furnish plaintiff with money to construct a drain in the township of Dunwich known as the Mennie drain, the amount to be furnished " not to exceed the sum of $1,500 at any time and to pay the same to plaintiff as often and in such sums as might be required, the plaintiff to give the defendant his note for each sum required, and to pay defendant interest at twelve per cent, per annum for the use of said Plaintiff alleged that upon the strength of this agreement he contracted with the township to construct the drain. Defendaut furnished money from time to time to the plaintiff, exceeding in all $1,500, but not sufficient to complete the drain, and defendant refused to furnish more. The plaintiff borrowed moneys from others at less than twelve per cent, interest, but claimed damages for breach of his agreement, contending that he was thereby delayed in completing the drain, and that owing to such delay and to the winter setting in he lost largely, instead of making a profit, which he would otherwise have made: -Held, that whether the agreement was to furnish money to the extent of $1,500 only, or furnish money to the extent of $1,500 only, or to such extent as might be necessary for the construction of the drain, not exceeding $1,500 at any one time, the only damages for which defendant was liable would be the difference between the rate of interest payable to the defendant under the agreement and the market rate of interest at the time of the breach. Mennie v. Leitch, 8 O. R. 397.

Bonus.]—Damages to a municipal corporation upon failure of defendant in performance of contract to carry on manufactures according to the terms of a by-law granting him aid. See Village of Brussels v. Ronald, 4 O. R. 1, 11 A. R. 695.

Bonus—Failure to Comply with Conditions, |— See County of Halton v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 19 A. R. 252, 21 S. C. R. 716; Village of Brighton v. Auston, 19 A. R. 205

Building Contract - Non-completion of Houses by Stipulated Time. |—The defend-ant agreed with the plaintiff to exchange five houses, then in course of erection, for certain lands of the plaintiff. By the con-tract, which was dated 24th March, the houses were to be completed by 30th similar to certain houses on O. street. Mutual conveyances were to be exchanged between the parties within sixty days, i.e., by 24th May, but as a matter of fact they were executed and exchanged about 9th May. The plaintiff subsequently in the present action claimed damages for non-completion of and defects in the finishing of the houses. The deed from the defendant contained no covenants covering the matters complained of :-Held, nevertheless, that the plaintiff was entitled to recover on the original contract. A contract to per-form work or to do things for the other con-tracting party on a sale of lands at a period after the time fixed by the same contract for the execution and final delivery of the formal conveyance, does not become merged in the conveyance:-Held, also, that the loss of rents which might have been obtained for the houses if completed at the proper time was a proper measure of damages, the contracting parties having known that the houses were intended to be rented. Smith v. Tennant, 20 O. R. 180.

Building Contract—Reduction of Price for Bad Work.]—In an action to enforce a mechanics' lien, brought by material men against the contractor and the registered owner, the contest was as to whether anything was due to the contractor, the registered owner not being liable on the contract:— Held, that the amount due to the contractor could not be ascertained without the persons liable on the contract being brought before the The work in question was the building court. of a church. The last of the work done was the pews, and as they were being put in objection was made by the architect to their material and workmanship: -Held, that the occupying of the church with the pews objected to in it was not an acceptance of the work:—Held, also that a reduction of the contract price by an amount equal to the difference in value between the bad material and that which should have been used was not an adequate measure of the set-off to which the proprietors were entitled. Wood v. Stringer, 20 O. R.

Carriers.] — The measure of damages against carriers for non-delivery of trees considered. McGill v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 19 A. R. 245.

Carriers—Knowledge of Special Purpose
—Non-delivery of Animals.] — Where dogs were delivered to an express company to be carried to a city for the purpose, made known to the company, of being exhibited at a dog show, and were not delivered at the address given until ten hours after their arrival in the city, and were thus too late to compete, their owner was held entitled to damages against the company, including anticipated profits, Kennedy v. American Express Co.,
22 A. R. 278.

Carrying Rails-Employment of Persons other than Contractor to do Work Covered by Contract.]—On the 9th August, 1875, the suppliant entered into a written contract with the Dominion Government to remove and carry in barges all the steel rails that were then actually landed, or that might thereafter be landed, from sea-going vessels upon the wharves in the harbour of Montreal during the season of navigation in that year, and to deliver them at a place called the Rock Cut on the Lachine canal. Suppliant duly entered upon the execution of his contract, and no complaint was made on behalf of the Governcompaint was made on benair of the Govern-ment that his performance of the work was not entirely satisfactory. Some time in the month of September, and when the suppliant had only carried a small quantity of rails, the Government, without previous notice to the suppliant, cancelled the contract and employed other persons to do the work that he had agreed Thereupon the suppliant filed a to perform. petition of right claiming damages against the Government for breach of contract: - Held. that suppliant was entitled to damages, the measure thereof being the profits that would have accrued to him if he had carried such portion of the rails as was carried by other persons during the continuance of his contract. Kenney v. The Queen, 1 Ex. C. R. 68.

Crown.]—Petition of right for damages for failure on the part of the Crown to perform agreement. See Windsor and Annapolis R. W. Co. v. The Queen, 11 App. Cas. 335.

Employment of Workmen. |—The defendant, who was a contractor for certain work in this Province, entered into an agreement with the plaintiffs that if they would go to New York, at their own expense, and procure about 200 labourers, he would give them work at $1.25 a day. The plaintiffs brought the labourers, but the defendant refused to employ them. The plaintiffs were allowed as damages for the breach of the agreement $25, their expenses in going to and returning from New York, and $700, the amount of advances made by them in paying the fares of certain of the labourers from New York. They were not allowed commission that would have been received by them from the men if employment had been furnished. Mandia v. McMahon, 17 A. R. 34. R.

Indemnity.] — Held, that the value of goods sold under a judgment recovered upon a mortgage made by the plaintifts, against which they held a bond of indemnity from defendants, did not form the measure of damages, but they were entitled to recover the amount of such judgment. Raymond v. Cooper, 8 C. P. 388.

Insurance — Fire—Estimate of Loss.]—
Where a policy of insurance against fire on a steamboat, provided that in the event of loss the damage should be estimated "according to the true and actual cash value of the said property at the time the same shall happen:"—Held, that in estimating the loss the defendants were not entitled to have taken into account a depression in the value of stemmers generally, caused by circumstances which might be temporary only. McCuaig v. Quaker City Insurance Co., 18 U. C. R. 130.

Insurance—Fire—Tenant for Life.]—The measure of damages recoverable by tenant for life of insured premises is the full value of such premises to the extent of the sum insured. Caldwell v. Stadacona Fire and Life Insurance Co., 11 S. C. R. 212.

Insurance — Life — Non-acceptance of Policy,]—By an application for a policy of insurance on the defendant's life he bound himself to pay the first premium on the presentation of the policy; but it was also agreed that the company should not incur any liability until the premium had been actually paid and received by the company. The application was accepted by the company and a policy issued and tendered to the applicant, who refused to accept it:—Held, that the company could not claim the whole amount of the premium as liquidated damages, but were entitled to such damages only as had been occasioned by the defendant's refusal to accept the policy. Royal Victoria Life Ins. Co. v. Richards, 31 O. R. 483.

Land Scrip — Assignment of Worthless Right.1—The plaintiff had agreed with the defendant to purchase the claim of a half-breed to land scrip in Manitoba, and defendant procured to be assigned to plaintiff the claim of one alleged to be a child of a half-breed. This proved to be erroneous, and the scrip which had been issued to him was worthless: —Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to recover from the defendant the amount paid by the plaintiff for the purchase of the so-called right; the plaintiff to assign to the defendant, quantum valeat, the land scrip he had received. Burns v. Young, 10 A. R. 215.

Manufacture and Sale of Chattels— Contingencies.]—Five days after making a contract with the plaintiffs for the manufacture by them of a large number of shells for electric light lamps, to be delivered monthly for a period of twenty months, the defendants notified the plaintiffs that they would not earry out the contract. The plaintiffs had done nothing towards performing the contract, and had incurred no expense with reference to it:—Held, that though a concern to be allowed as damages the full amount of their expected profit, but that allowance should be made for the many contingencies which might have happened before the time for fulfilment. The court, after stating the general principles and pointing out some of the contingencies, reduced the amount of damages allowed by the trial Judge. Ontario Lantern Co. v. Hamilton Brass Manujacturing Co., 27 A. R. 346.

Mortgage — Distress — Request of Mortgagor — Judgment agginst Mortgage,] — Action on a mortgage and for damages and expenses of a fruitless distress on F., the tenant of the mortgaged premises, made at the request of the defendant. On the reference to assertial what damage the plaintiffs had properly sustained by reason of such distress, the master held that the amount of a judgment recovered by F. against the plaintiffs was the proper measure, and was conclusive evidence of the amount, although it was proved before him that an offer had been made by defendant to the plaintiffs to furnish witnesses and assist in the defence, and had been declined, and the witnesses when examined shewed that their evidence might materially have affected the verdict:—Held, that the ruling of the master was erroneous, and that the case must go back to him to revise his report. Peterborough Real Estate Investment Co. v. Ireton, 5 O. R. 47.

Sale of Goods—Defect in Quality.]—
Assumpsit on a contract to make and deliver two pair of burr mill-stones. Breach, their insufficiency and bad quality. The jury, in addition to the cost of new stones, allowed certain separate sums for money expended in attempting to repair the broken stones, for dressing them, and for injury caused by their oreaking the machinery of the mill; damages being specially claimed in the declaration on these accounts:—Held, that the verdict was sustainable as to the last two items, but not as to the first. Colton v. Good, 11 U. C. R. 153.

Sale of Goods—Non-delivery.]—In an actions by plaintiffs against defendants for damages occasioned by the non-delivery of a certain article of machinery contracted to be delivered by them for plaintiffs, it appeared that no notice had been given at the time of the contract to the defendants of the necessity for a prompt delivery of the machinery, nor of the use it was to be put to:—Held, on the authority of Cory v. Thames Iron Works Co., L. R. 3 Q. B. 181, and Hadley v. Baxendale, 9 Ex. 341, that the plaintiffs could only recover the value of the missing article, and were not entitled to the loss of profits arising from this non-delivery, or the wages of certain workmen employed upon the building in which the machinery was to be used. Ruthren Woollen Manufacturing Co. v. Great Western R. W. Co., 18 C. P. 316.

Plaintiff had sold certain goods to M., which were at the time lying at the defendants' railway station, and defendants were fully aware of the sale, but notwithstanding they contracted with plaintiff to carry and deliver them for him as required, and gave him a shipping bill accordingly. In an action by plaintiff against defendants for non-delivery—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to recover the whole value of the property converted, and not merely the difference between the price at the time when defendants refused to deliver it, and when they tendered it back again. Brill v. Grand Trank R. W. Co., 20 C. P. 440.

In an action for non-delivery of 2,000 bushels of wheat sold by defendant to plaintiff:—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to recover as damages the amount paid by him for additional carriage on wheat which he was forced to purchase in a more distant market. Bruce v. Totton, 4 A. R. 144.

In an action for non-delivery of goods purchased by plaintiff:—Held, that the fact of plaintiff having contracted to re-sell to a third person would not limit his damages to the price agreed upon on such re-sale, though less than the market price. Ballantyne v. Watson, 30 C. P. 529.

Sale of Goods—Warranty of Title—Con-templated Profits. |—The defendant company in 1893 sold a hay press to their co-defendant upon credit, and upon the terms that the property should remain in them until payment. contract was properly filed under s. 6 of 51 Vict. c. 19 (s. 3 of R. S. O. 1897 c. 149). A few months afterwards the purchaser resold the press to the plaintiff, who had no knowledge of the facts, and was told that it was paid for and free from any lien. The defendant company seized it in the plaintiff's possession under the terms of their contract :- Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to recover from his vendor, upon a warranty of title which he proved, the value of the press and the sum he would have received beyond expenses upon contracts actually made to press hay with the press in question, and which he was in course of executing at the time of the seizure, the use of the press in that way having been in the contemplation of the plaintiff's vendor at the time of the sale. Sheard v. Horan, 30 O. R.

Sale of Laud—Loss of Bargain Previously Made.]—Loss of profit sustained by, and the expenses which a purchaser of lands has been put to, on a resale by him, unknown to his vendor, before such purchase; has entered into a binding contract for purchase, are not damages naturally flowing from the breach of the latter agreement, and cannot be recovered by him against his vendor. In such a case, if recoverable at all, the true measure of damages would be the increased value of the land at the time of the breach, over the purchase money. Loney Volicer, 21 O. R. 89.

Work and Labour.]—Defendant agreed to saw for plaintiff a certain quantity of logs, which the plaintiff was to deliver at his mill, at specified rates. In an action for not sawing logs so delivered:—Quere, as to the measure of damages to be recovered. Buchanan v. Indexnon, 16 U. C. R. 331.

Work and Labour—Loss of Profits.]— M, entered into a contract with the Dominion Government to do parliamentary and departmental binding for a period of five years. During the continuance of the contract the Government employed other persons to do certain portions of the work which M, was entitled to do, and in consequence of this M. through his trustee in insolvency) brought an action by petition of right to recover damages against the Government for breach of contract. The breach was admitted by the Crown, and the case was referred by the court to two referees to ascertain the amount due M. for loss of profits in respect to the work that was withheld from him and given to other persons. The referees found that the work done by persons other than M. amounted to $25,357.79, and that the cost of performing such work amounted to $10,094.74, leaving a balance for contractor's profit of $15,285.95. From this balance the referees made deductions for "superintendence generally, wear and tear of plant, building, &c., rent, insurance, thel, and taxes," amounting in the whole to such of $11,025.44 and the profit of $11,025.44 and the profit of $11,025.44 and the superintendence generally, wear and tear of plant, building, &c., rent, insurance, thel, and taxes," amounting in the whole to such of $11,025.44 and the profit of $11,025.44 and the superintendence generally. On appeal from the referees report:—Held, that the referees were wrong in making such deductions, and that M. was entitled to be paid the difference between the value of the work done by persons other than himself during the continuance of his contract, and the amount it would have actually cost him, as such contractor, to perform that work. Boyd v. The Queen, 1 Ex. C. R. 186.

2. Torts.

Bodily Injuries—Mental Shock.]—In an action for bodily injuries damages for "mental shock" are not recoverable. Victorian Railways Commissioners v. Coultas, 13 App. Cas. 222, followed. Henderson v. Canada Atlantie R. W. Co., 25 A. R. 437.

Chattel Mortgage—Possession Taken by Mortgagee—Scieure by Sheriff under Attachment in Insolveney—Handing Goods over to Assignee, 1—See Paterson v. Maughan, 39 U. C. R. 371.

Chattel Mortgage — Seizure before Default.]—Held, following Porter v. Flintoft, G. P. 335, and Ruttan v. Beamish, 10 C. P. 90, that an action will not lie at the suit of the mortgager of chattels against the mortgage for seizure of the chattels before default in payment, where there is no provise in the mortgage for possession until default; and that even if an action would le, the jury should be told that the plaintiff could recover only to the extent of his interest in the goods and for the damage done to such interest, instead of, as in this case, for their full value, as in the case of a wrong-doer. McAulay v. Allen, 20 C. P. 417.

Company—Transfer of Stock—Refusal to Register.]—In an action against a harbour company for refusing to register a transfer of stock by one S. to the plaintiffs:—Held, as to the shares for which the plaintiffs were entitled to recover, that they were strictly entitled to recover, that they were strictly entitled only to their value at the time of demand and refusal to transfer; but the jury having allowed a larger sum, and this question not having been pressed on the argument, the court did not reduce the verdict, McMurrich v. Bond Head Harbour Co., 9 U. C. R. 333.

Conversion—Distress—Measure of Damages,]—See Williams v. Thomas, 25 O. R. 536.

Crown—Lands Taken—Lands Injuriously Affected.]—See Crown, I.

Diversion of Watercourse.]—The defendants built an embankment which entirely out off the plaintiff's access to the water of a stream by diverting it from his farm:—Held, that the diversion, not the damage sustained therefrom, gave him his cause of action: and the proper mode of estimating the damages was to treat the diversion as permanent and to consider its effect upon the value of the farm. McGillivray v. Great Western K. W. Co., 25 U. C. R. 69, distinguished, Arthar v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 25 O. R. 37. Affirmed in appeal, 22 A. R. 89.

Diversion of Watercourse.]—The plaintiff, having failed to prove actual damage, was allowed nominal damages for the wrong; and, instead of granting a mandatory injunction to compel the restoration of the watercourse, the court directed a reference to nscertain the compensation to which the plaintiff would be entitled as upon an authorized diversion of the watercourse under 51 Vict. c. 29, s. 90, s.-s. h (D.) Tolton v. Canadian Pacific R. W. Co., 22 O. R. 204.

Easement.) — The defendants granted to the predecessors in title of the plaintiff, with evenants for title under the Short Forms Act. certain lands with the right and easement of erecting a dam at a certain spot. It was afterwards held that they had no power to grant such a right, but it was shewn that it was not, in any event, practicable to maintain a dam at the spot in question:—Held, that the defendants were not liable to repay the full purchase money less the actual value of the land without the supposed right, but only the actual practical value of the supposed right, which was nothing. Platt v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 19 A. R. 403.

Execution—Neizure of Stranger's Goods.]

—The defendant G. and two others, having executions against W. & K., directed the seizure of certain goods. The plaintiff, to whom the goods belonged, demanded them of the build, who refused to give them up. G. afterwards directed the build not to sell or do anything more on his execution, but it did not appear that he told the plaintiff of this, or ordered the goods to be returned to him. The plaintiff them brought trover against the build and G., and the build afterwards sold the goods under the other executions, paying over no portion of the proceeds to G.:—Held, that G. was liable for the full value of the goods, for the plaintiff's right of action accrued on the demand and refusal, and was not defeated by what took place afterwards. Macklem v, Durrant, 32 U. C. R. 98.

Fraudulent Removal of Goods Liable under Execution.) — A writ agnisst one McK, having been placed in the sheriff's hands, the defendant in this action fraudulently removed and secreted money and goods liable to be seized under the execution. In estimating the damages agnisst the defendant for such fraudulent removal, it was held that the return of the sheriff as to the amount made on the writ should be presumed to be correct, and if the defendant contended that the sheriff should have applied the proceeds of the sale of other goods to satisfy the planiff's execution, or that the sheriff should have seized and sold goods, and so applied the processived and sold goods, and so applied the proceeds, he must prove such a case. Turner v. Patterson, 13 C. P. 412.

Nuisance—Injury to Reversion.]—In an action on the case by reversioners for a serious injury to their reversionary interest by the erection of a nuisance in a public highway, the jury are not necessarily restricted to a verdict for nominal damages on the first trial, but may give damages commensurate to the injury which the plaintiffs may sustain by the possible continuance of the nuisance. Drew v. Baby, 1 U. C. R. 438.

Principal and Agent—Mis-investment.]
—An agent who invests money for his principal, without taking proper precautions as to the sufficiency of the security, is guilty of negligence, and, if the value of the security proves less than the amount invested, he is liable to his principal for the loss occasioned thereby. The measure of damages in such a case is not the amount lent, with interest, but the difference between that amount and the actual value of the land. Lowenburg v. Wolley, 25 S. C. R. 51.

Registrar of Deeda—Omission in Certificate. |—A registrar, being applied to by the plantiff for a certificate of the registries on a tot raw one in which be omitted to mention a mortgage for 8600, prior to that which the plaintiff purchased, supposing it, from the certificate, to be a first incumbrance. The first mortgage obtained a decree for sale, and the plaintiff purchased the land at less than what would satisfy the two mortgages, but he soon afterwards sold at a considerable advance, so that in the end he would receive all that he had paid for his mortgage. In an action against the registrar for this omission in his certificate, the jury gave $500 damages: —Held, that the damages were moderate, the plaintiff having in fact sustained loss by defendant's mistake to the full amount of the first mortgage. Harrison v. Brega, 20 U. C. R. 324.

Right of Way—Loss of Business.]—The defendant, the owner of certain water lots upon the lake front, subject to the usual reservation in favour of the Crown of free passage over all navigable waters thereous refused to allow the plaintiff to hall ice cut from the lake over such lots, when frozen, to the wharf from which the plaintiff desired to ship the ice for the purposes of his business, unless the plaintiff paid toll, which he refused to do—Held, that the water ever the defendant's lowns a highway, and the plaintiff baid the right without paymen to cross the lot, whether the water upon it was fluid or frozen; and, having a cause of complaint, and a right of action for his personal loss, he was entitled to come to the court for a declaration of right. 24 O. R. 220, followed. Held, also, that the defendant was liable for such reasonable damages as flowed directly from the wrong done by his refusal; but, as he had acted without malice and under a bonh fide mistake as to his rights, and as the plaintiff might have paid the toll under protest; the defendant was not liable for the plaintiff is loss of business consequent on his failure to ship the ice. Cullerton v. Miller, 26 O. R. 30.

Shares-Pledge-Sale.]-See BROKER.

Sheriff.]—Damages in action against sheriff for taking insufficient bond in action of replevin. Norman v. Hope, 43 O. R. 556, 14 O. R. 287.

Ship—Injury by Collision.1,—In an action for injury to plaintiff's vessel, caused by collision with defendant's steambont:—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to recover the cost of repairing his vessel, and for the permanent injury done to her, and the wages of his crew necessarily kept over during the repairs: but not for the sum expended in the hire of another vessel to take her place, or for the proground the place of the property of the proportion of the place of the property of the proportion of the place of the property of the profers a vessel, the loss of profit may be recovered. Brone v. Beatly, 35 U. C. R. 328.

Timber—Injunction.]—On an application for an injunction, where timber is cut and there is no evidence of mala fides or intertional wrong, the injury actually sustained by such cutting is the measure of damage to the owner or mortgagee of the land. Mc-Lean v. Burton, 24 Gr. 134.

Timber—Trespass.]—In trespass for taking timber, the court refused to disturb the verdict, on the ground that the damages were beyond the value of the logs taken. Flint v. Bird, 11 U. C. R. 444.

Timber License—Failure to make Title.]

v. The Queen, 2 Ex. C. R. 202, and Bulmer

v. The Queen, 3 Ex. C. R. 184, 23 S. C. R.

Trespass to Land—Crops.]—In trespass to land, where the action was brought on the 7th May:—Held, that the plaintiff might recover to the extent of the ultimate injury resulting to the crop from the act complained of, as ascertained at the time of harvest. Throop y, Faviler, 15 U. C. R. 335.

Trespass to the Person - Arrest before Indorsement of Warrant-Detention after. A warrant for the arrest of the plaintiff, who had made default in paying a fine on conviction for an infraction of the liquor license law, was sent from an outlying county to a city Before it was indorsed by a magistrate in the city the plaintiff was arrested there by two of the defendants, the chief constable and a detective, and confined. Some hours after the arrest the warrant was properly indorsed, and the detention of the plaintiff was continued until payment of the fine :-Held, that the only damages recoverable by the plaintiff were for the trespass up to the time of the backing of the warrant. Southwick v. Hare, 24 O. R. 528.

Trover — Pamphlets — Literary Value — Worth of Paper. I — Trover for pamphlets, Plea, not guilty. On the production, at the trial, of one of the pamphlets sued for, the Judge in the county court directed that the plaintiff was not entitled to maintain the action because the pamphlet was a scoffing and indecent attack on christianity, and ordered a nonsuit. On appeal: — Held, that the plaintiff had property in the materials composing the pamphlets, independently of what was printed on them, and he would have a right to be indemnified therefor; that the Judge should have directed the jury as to the nature of works which the law protects and what it prohibits; that if the pamphlets were not illegal, they should give damages for their value as a literary production; and if illegal, they should give damages to the value of the paper, &c., irrespective of the words upon it. Boucher v. Shevam, 14 C. P. 419.

Trustee — Bad Investment.] — Where a trustee is authorized to invest in either of two specified modes, and by mistake invests in neither, the measure of his liability is the loss arising from his not having invested in the less beneficial of the authorized modes. Two years before the passing of the Act relaxing the usury laws (22 Vict. c. 85), a trustee, who was authorized to invest on mortgage or government securities, made an investment in Upper Canada Bank stock, under the impression that such an investment was within his authority. The stock ultimately turned out worthless; and the trustee submitted to account for the principal with compound interest at six per cent.:—Held, that this was the extent of his liability, though eight per cent, might have been obtained on mortgages. Paterson v. Lailey, 18 Gr. 13.

XI. MITIGATION OF DAMAGES.

Breach of Promise of Marriage.]— In assumpsit for breach of promise of marriage, the defendant is entitled, in mitigation of damages, to cross-examine the plaintiff's own witness respecting the general bad character of the plaintiff. McGregor v. McArthur, 5 C. P. 403.

Carriers—Not Carrying Goods Safely.]—In an action for not carrying goods safely, whereby they were lost, issues in fact were left to the jury, reserving the question of nominal or substantial damages for the opinion of the court was, whether the plaintiff should be limited to nominal damages, or recover the actual value of his goods; and that the question of mitigating the damages upon the facts proved could not be considered. Robson v. Buffalo and Lake Huron R. W. Co., 10 C. P. 279.

Sale of Goods—Redelivery, J.—Semble, if in an action upon the case for not manufacturing 400 bushels of wheat into flour, the plaintiff recover damages equal to the value of the wheat delivered to defendant, he cannot bring an action for goods sold, for part of the wheat which had, in point of fact, been redelivered to the plaintiff; and that such redelivery should have been given in evidence in mitgation of damages. Andrus v. Burwell, Tay, 382.

Trespass to Goods—Justice of the Peace.]
—Trespass against a magistrate for seizing and selling plaintiff's goods. At the trial evidence was given to shew that the plaintiff had been guilty of the offence charged, but such evidence was offered and received only in mitigation of damages; the provisions of 16 Vict. c. 180, s. 12, which in such a case limits the damage to 2d, and deprives the plaintiff of costs, were overlooked; and the plaintiff obtained a verdict for full damages:
—Held, that there must be a new trial without costs. Bross v. Huber, 15 U. C. R. 625.

See PLEADING.

XII. NOMINAL DAMAGES.

Assumpsit—Admission of Cause of Action—Failure to Prove Damages.]—In assumpsit on the common counts, defendant was duly notified to attend the trial of the cause as a winess on behalf of the paintiff, which he neglected to do. The plaintiff proceeded with the trial of the cause, expecting to prove by defendant's attorney that he had offered £20 to compromise the action, which he failed to prove. A verdict was taken for the plaintiff, under the statute 14 & 15 vict. c. 08, pro confesso, and damages were assessed at 1s.;—Held, on an application to increase the verdict to £50, the amount claimed by the plaintiff in his particulars, that the admission was only to be taken as to the cause of action, and not the amount of damages, and that a misunderstanding having arisen as to the offer of £20, the plaintiff was entitled to a new trial on the ground of surprise, on payment of costs. Robertson v. Ross, 2 C. P. 193.

Attorney.]—Where an attorney was retained to apply to relieve a sheriff from an attachment, and the jury found him in fault in conducting the application:—Held, that he was liable to nominal damages, although the special damage laid was not proved. McLeod v, Boulton, 3 U. C. R. 84.

Bailiff Not Executing Writ of Execution.]—See Nerlich v. Malloy, 4 A. R. 430.

Carriers.] — See Robson v. Buffalo and Lake Huron R. W. Co., 10 C. P. 279, ante, XI.

Contract-Breach of-Formation of Company.]-The plaintiffs and defendant entered into a joint venture to form a company to work a mine in land forming part of a township road allowance, the defendant to form the company, and the plaintiffs to yest in the company the mineral right in the land. plaintiffs accordingly procured a by-law to be passed by the municipality for the sale of mineral rights, under s. 442 of the Municipal Act, which authorizes such sale, but with the proviso that the public travel should not be interfered with. A conveyance containing the above proviso was, with the defendant's consent, made to one R. B. J., who executed a formal declaration of trust of one-third interest to the plaintiffs, but not of the balance; but he stated that he held the whole land in trust for plaintiffs, and was willing to convey as they directed, and the plaintiffs in-formed defendant that they were ready to convey to him. Defendant obtained an Act in-corporating a company to work the mine and issue stock, which company proved a failure, but through no default of defendant, who was the heaviest loser of all the parties interested. The plaintiffs having sued defendant for not forming the joint stock company, or carrying on mining operations, and having obtained a verdict for $400:—Held, that the verdict must be reduced to nominal damages. Johns v. Beck, 24 C. P. 219.

Contract — Breach of — Presentment of Note.] — Plaintiff sued defendant, an agent of an express company, on an alleged undertaking to take and carry a copy of a lost note and present it for payment, and in case of non-payment to notify the indorsers. Breach, that defendant did not present or notify, in consequence of which the indorsers refused to pay the note. The evidence shewed no demand by the plaintiff upon the indorsers for the payment, nor refusal by them to pay:—Held, that without such evidence the plaintiff could at most recover only nominal damages. McQuarrie v. Fargo, 21 C. P. 478.

Contract—Breach of —Revocation.]—A contract saled and delivered by one party, which is subject to the approval of the other party, cannot be revoked by the former before the latter has had a reasonable time within which to signify his assent. Nominal damages only allowed against the defaulting party under the circumstances set out in the report. Waterous Engine Works Co. v. Pratt, 30 O. R. 528.

Contract—Breach of—Sale of Goods.]— Upon an assessment of damages for goods sold, defendant tried to prove a contract to deliver the goods in Toronto free of charge, and that they were refused by defendant in consequence of their arriving with charges on them, and the jury found nominal damages only:—Held, that such matter should have been pleaded in bur, and was not available to defendant on an assessment of damages. Comstock v. Thistle, 7 C. P. 27.

Defamation—Omission of Jury to Find.)—Per Hagarty, C.J.O., and Galt, J.—No court has or ought to have the right ex proprio mout to direct judgment for nominal damages where a jury has refused to award them. Per Osler, J.A.—Nominal damages should not be added, unless it clearly appear that such damages are a mere matter of form, or that the omission to find them was accidental, or unintentional, or an oversight following a distinct intention to find the plaintiff's cause of action proved. Per Patterson, J.A.—The jury having left no fact undetermined, the plaintiff was entitled to judgment, which might properly be entered for nominal damages with full costs. Wills v. Carman, 14 A. R. 656.

Ejectment.]—When the term in a declaration in ejectment has expired, the plaintiff is entitled to recover nominal damages and his costs, although he cannot recover possession. Doc d. Lick v. Ausman, H. T. 6 Vict.

Ferry Rights — Infringement of.] — See Galarneau v. Guilbault, 16 S. C. R. 579.

Money Demand—Payment after Action.]
—Sherwood v. Campbell, 5 O. S. 2.

Prohibition.]—In proceeding in prohibition, the plaintiff can only recover nominal damages. If he wish to recover substantial damages, he must proceed by action on the case after the entry of judgment quod stet prohibitio. Mittleberger v. Merritt, 2 U. C. R. 413.

Sheriff.] — Where a jury, upon being charged that they were not to find for the plaintiff unless they were satisfied that there had been neglect on the part of the sheriff from which the plaintiff had suffered some damage, returned a nominal verdict in favour of the plaintiff, the court refused to set it aside under the facts stated in the case, on the ground that, even to sustain such a verdict for not arresting a defendant upon mesus process, some clear proof of an injury received from the neglect should have been given, and that none was offered. O'Connor v. Humitton, 4 U. C. R. 243.

Sheriff—Direction of Appellate Court.]— The pury having assessed the damages against a sheriff's officer at a nominal sun, the court of appeal, instead of a new trial, directed judgment to be entered against his co-defendant, the sheriff, for a like amount. Gordon v. Rumble, 19 A. R. 440.

Trespass.]—In trespass, defendant justified cutting the ditch complained of under an award of fence viewers, &c. The jury found for defendant on this issue, and on the general issue that there was no damage—Held, that, as a right was involved, the plaintiff was entitled to a verdict on the general issue for nominal damages. Warren v. Deslippes, 33 U. C. R. 59.

See Taylor v. Massey, 20 O. R. 429; Coffey v. Scane, 25 O. R. 22, 22 A. R. 209.

XIII. PARTICULAR ACTIONS AND PROCEED-

(See also under the Titles of the Particular Actions,)

Bailment -Hire of Goods-Agreement to Return — Contract — Damage Occasioned by Unforescen Accident.]—Where there is a posi-tive contract to do a thing not in itself unlawful, the contractor must perform it or pay damages for non-performance, although in consequence of unforeseen causes the performance has become unexpectedly burdensome or even impossible. The defendant hired the plaintiff's scow and pile driver, at a named price per day, they to be responsible for damage thereto, except to the engine, and ordinary wear and tear, until returned to the plaintiff. While in the defendants' custody, by reason of a storm of unusual force, the scow and pile driver were driven from their moorings and damaged :- Held, that the defendants were liable for the damages thus sustained, and for the rent during the period of repair. Taylor v. Caldwell, 3 B. & S. 826, followed. Harvey v. Murray, 136 Mass, 377, approved. Grant v. Armour. 25 O. R. 7.

Bailment — Inability to Deliver Specific Property—Claim for Unliquidated Damages —Interpleader Order.]—See Re Canadian Pacific R. W. Co. and Carruthers, 17 P. R. 277.

Banks and Banking—Special Deposit—Wrongial Refusal to Pay Out.]—The damages recoverable by a non-trading depositor in the savings bank department of a bank who has made his deposit subject to special terms, on the wrongful refusal of the bank to pay it to him personally, are limited to the interest on the money. Marzetti v. Williams, 1 B, & Ad, 415, and Rolin v. Steward, 14 C. B, 594, distinguished. Henderson v. Bank of Hamilton, 25 O, R, 641.

Benefit Insurance.]—The plaintiff, in an action to recover damages from a railway company for the death of her husband, was paid a sum of $250 by a benefit insurance society in connection with the railway, though a distinct organization, of which deceased was a member. The plaintiff gave a receipt stating that the railway company was relieved from all liability. The deceased's certificate did not profess to be an insurance against accidents, and the railway company were not parties to the receipt:—Held, that the receipt formed no bar to the action against the defendants; nor was there any right to deduct the amount received from the benefit society from the sum the plaintiff was entitled to as damages. Hicks v. Newport, &c., R. W. Co., 4 B. & S. 403 (n.), distinguished. Farmer v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 21 O. R. 299.

Bond—Administration Bond,]—In an action on an administration bond, the want of a decree is a good plea to a breach for not distributing, but it is no ground for staying proceedings, nor is the want of a citation for an account, nor the omission to shew the receipt rund misappropriation of funds. On such breach full damages may be recovered. Neitle v. McLaughlin, 4 P. R. 312.

Bond-Appeal Bond.]-In winding-up proceedings a property was sold by tender under the power of sale in a mortgage with the consent of the liquidator, and an appeal by an unsuccessful tenderer to a Judge from the report confirming the sale was dismissed, whereupon a further appeal to the court of appeal was allowed upon the appellant giving security by bond to the successful tenderer to answer the damages which the latter as purchaser might sustain by being prejudicially affected in his purchase, by the appeal allowed, in case such appeal should fail. Possession was not taken by the purchaser until after the failure of the appeal. The conditions of sale pro-vided that possession would be given upon payment of the balance of the purchase money within a time fixed, but the money was not paid, nor did it appear that it had been set aside for that purpose, nor was any provision made in the conditions as to the payment of interest or taxes :- Held, that under the bond the purchaser was not entitled to payments made by him for care of the property or taxes, nor was he entitled to interest on the purchase money, or to damages for deterioration of the property. Re Alger and Sarnia Oil Co., 23 O. R. 583.

Bond—Damages in Lieu of Interest.]— See The Queen v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 2 Ex. C. R. 132, post, Interest, II.

Bond—Fiddily of Clerk.]—An action of trover may be maintained against the obligor in a bond for securing the fidelity of a clerk, the obligor having torn off his seal—(and this, although the bond might be considered as still subsisting and sufficient to sustain an action of debt1—and damage may be recovered against the obligor to the amount of the penalty. Bank of Upper Canada v. Widmer, 2 O. S. 222.

Copyright — Infringement — Consent Judgment — Costs—Reference—Offer—Pagnet into Court.]—Where judgment was pronounced by consent declaring that the defendant had infringed the plaintiffs' copyright, restraining him from centinuing to infringe, and directing a reference to ascertain the damages sustained by reason of the infringement, and the master found that the damages were only $6.70, and also reported specially that the plaintiffs were aware before action that the defendant was willing to hand over all copies of and to stop selling or giving away the publications in question, but the plaintiffs demanded $100 compensation, and that after action the defendant offered $2.5

for damages and costs and to deliver up any of the publications on hand and to give an undertaking that there would be no further infringement, but the plaintiffs did not accept the offer :- Held, that the plaintiffs were enfitled to the costs of the action; and also to the costs of the reference, the defendant not having, when consenting to judgment, offered to pay a fixed sum for damages and to pay it into court. Anglo-Canadian Music Publish-ing Association v. Somerville, 19 P. R. 113.

Covenant for Title — Heir.]—In this revince (though not in England) the heir is only liable, on descent of lands, for the debts of his ancestor. He is not liable for unliquidated damages, as, for instance, upon the ancestor's covenant for good title. Vankoughnet v. Ross, 7 U. C. R. 248.

Erection of Dam. |-Semble, that though an inquiry as to daamges, or to assess damto create an easement, yet that it may be sufficient, as a license, to prevent the plaintiff from recovering damages for the erection as a wrongful act. Robinson v. Fetterly, S U. C.

Injunction.]-The jurisdiction to award an inquiry as to damages, or to assess damages without a reference, where an injunction has been granted and an undertaking as to damages given, is a discretionary one, to be exercised judicially and not capriciously. Where, in an action to set aside a sale of goods as fraudulent, a claim for damages by reason of an injunction was set up in the defence, and the trial Judge was, on the evidence, of opinion that no damage was proved to have been occasioned by the injunction as distinct from the detriment arising from the litigation, and no additional evidence having been given, a divisional court, under the circumstances of this case, where the defendant was given his costs, although his conduct had been such as properly to provoke legal inquiry, refused to award a reference as to damages. Gault v. Murray, 21 O. R. 458.

Injunction—Damages in Lieu of.]—See Arthur v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 22 A. R.

Injury to Land-Abating Nuisance.]-A person who takes upon himself to abate a puisance-for instance, a mill dam-may be called upon to pay damage for any injury done to the plaintiff's property beyond what is pecessary for removing the public inconven-Truesdale v. McDonald, Tay. 121.

Injury to Person.]-The inability pro perly to calculate the damages to the plaintiff perty to calculate the damages of the plantic from a personal injury, owing to a sufficient time not having elapsed from the receipt of the injury, was held a sufficient ground for postponing the trial on terms. Speces v. Great Western R. W. Co., 6 P. R. 170.

Interest—Damages in Lieu of—Interest post Diem.]—See The Queen v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 2 Ex. C. R. 132, post, Interest, R. W. Co., 2 Ex. C. R. 132, post, Interest, 11.; McCullough v. Clemow, 26 O. R. 467, post, INTEREST, I.

Lessor—Term.]—A lessor, who had the life to the premises at the time of action brought, but not at the time of trial, is entitled to damages, although he cannot recover his term. Doe d. Meyers v. Blakier, E. T. 2 Viet.

Libel-Damages in the Way of Trade, 1-See Blachford v. Green, 14 P. R. 424; Acme Silver Co. v. Stacey Hardware Co., 21 O. R.

Libel-Mitigation of Damages.1-The defendant may plead in mitigation of damages that the article complained of was published in good faith in the usual course of business. Beaton v. Intelligencer Printing and Publishing Co., 22 A. R. 97.

Libel - Special Damages-Loss of Cus-Libel — Special Damages—Loss of Cus-tom, —By s. 11 of the Libel Act of Manitoba, 50 Vict. c. 22, actual malice or culpable negli-gence must be proved in an action for libel unless special damages are claimed:—Held, that a general allegation of damages by loss of custom is not a claim for special damages under this section. Where special damages are sought to be recovered in an action of libel, or for verbal slander where the words are actionable per se, such special damage must be alleged and pleaded with particularity, and in case of special damage by reason of loss of custom the names of the customers must be given or otherwise evidence of the special damage is inadmissible, Ashdown v. Manitoba Free Press Co., 20 S. C. R. 43. See Blachford v. Green, 14 P. R. 424.

Replevin.] — 'The plaintiff, a solicitor, claiming on defendant's papers a lien for costs, settled with him, taking a note therefor payable on demand. He then went to the United States, leaving the note and papers with another solicitor as his agent. The defendant, stating that he required the papers, or some of them, for use in his business, brought replevin proceedings in the division court, giving a bond to prosecute the suit with effect and without delay, or to return the property replevied and to pay the damages sustained by the issuing of the writ, and there was a breach of the bond in not prosecuting the suit with effect. Under the replevin the defendant only procured some of the papers, which were tendered back to the plaintiff and re-fused, the defendant stating that they were of no value, the agent having retained the valuable ones. In an action on the bond to recover the amount of the note as damages he had sustained by the replevin:—Held, that, even if any lien existed, which was questionable, by reason of the taking of the note and departure from the country, it was not displaced by the replevin suit; but, in any event, the plaintiff had failed to prove any actual damage; and though there might be judgment for nominal damages and costs, there would be a set-off of the defendant's costs of trial; and the action was dismissed without costs. Under the Division Courts Act, R. S. O. 1887 c. 51, s. 266, the whole matter could have been litigated in the division court.— Quære, as to the amount of damages recover Quære, as to the amount of damages recoverable. The fact of the conditions of the bond able. The fact of the condition instead of the conbeing in the alternative instead of the conjunctive remarked on. Kennin v. Macdonald, 22 O. R. 484.

Sewers-Act of God.]-Where a sewer, built and maintained by a municipal corporation, is free from structural defect and is of sufficient capacity to answer all ordinary needs, the corporation is not liable for damages caused, as a result of an extraordinary rain-fall, by water backing into the cellar of a person compelled by by-law to use the sewer for drainage purposes. An extraordinary rainfall may properly be treated as an act of God, in the technical meaning of that term, though it is not of unprecedented severity, if there is nothing in previous experience to point to a probability of recurrence, Garfield v. City of Toronto, 22 A. R. 128.

Slander—Finding of No Damage.]—See Bush v. McCormack, 20 O. R. 497.

Tavern-keeper — Penalty.] — Whether under 27 & 28 Vict. c. 18, s. 40, which makes a tavern-keeper liable in case any person while in a state of intoxication from excessive drinking in his tavern has come to his death "by shooting or drowning, or perishing from cold or other accident caused by such intoxication," proof of some pecuniary damage must be given, or whether, without it, the damages are fixed by the Act at not less than $100, was a question raised but not decided. Bobier v. Clay, 27 U. C. R. 438.

Trespass to Land—Mortgagec, |—An action of trespass to vacant lands will lie by the mortgage thereof. In such an action, after the lands had been vacant for many years, and the mortgagee had then made an actual entry and was subsequently dispossessed, and the lands taken by a railway company for the purposes of their undertaking, he was held entitled to recover the value of the land as demages, to be held by him as security for his mortgage moneys, the mortgagor being entitled to redeeem in respect of the land, Delancy v, Canadian Pacific R. W. Co., 21 O. R. 11.

Wages—Agreement to Remunerate by Leggue—Dannages for Failure to Do so.]—See Smith v. McGugan, 21 A. R. 542, 21 S. C. R. 263; Murdoch v. West, 24 S. C. R. 305.

XIV. PLEADING IN ACTIONS FOR DAMAGES.

Action on the Case—Manner of Pleading.]—In a special action on the case for obstructing an inquiry into the financial affairs of a township:—Held, that upon the declaration, which is fully set out in the report, the damage was sufficiently stated, and was a legal damage, being directly occasioned by the Act complained of. Township of East Nissouri v. Horseman, 16 U. C. R. 556.

Carriers — Delay — Loss.] —In an action for delay in carrying goods:—Held, that under the averment in the declaration of the loss of market caused thereby, the evidence of loss caused by the corn sprouting, and thus deteriorating in quality, was improperly received. Kyle v. Buffalo and Lake Huron R. W. Co., 16 C. P. 76.

Contract—Revial—Estoppel.]—The plaintiff and defendants entered into an agreement, the former to perform certain work for the latter upon certain conditions. The plaintiff executed the contract, and the defendants' engineer signed it on their behalf, without attaching the seal of the company. Upon an action brought by plaintiff for work and labour performed and executed, the defendants put on the record a plea denying the contract:—Held, that by their pleadings having denied the contract, they could not invoke its aid to prevent the recovery of damages by the plaintiff. Stock v. Great Western R. W. Co., 9 C. P. 134.

Injury Continued after Action.]—In a action on the case, a declaration would be open to special denurrer in claiming damages for an injury stated to have been committed, or at least continued, after action. Watson v. City of Toronto Gaslight and Water Co., 4 U. C. R. 158.

Particular Damages — Notice of.] — Where a party, upon an alleged breach of an agreement, seeks to recover compensation not in the nature of general damages, to be left to the discretion of the jury, but in the shape of particular damages specially contracted for by the agreement itself, should he not aver in his declaration notice to defendant before action brought of such particular damages and the amount? Henderson v. Nichols, 5 U. C. R. 398.

Special Damage — Necessity for Pleading. —In an action for breach of cevenant by delaying the completion of a railway crossing, which afforded the best road to the plaintiff's saw mill:—Held, that evidence of special damage was not admissible, none being alleged in the declaration, and the plaintiff not having notified the defendants at the time of the fact of his suffering the loss of profit, which constituted the alleged damages. Shaver v. Great Western R. W. Co., 6 C. P. 321.

Unrecoverable Damages.]—An allegation of damages on a ground on which the plaintiff is not entitled to recover, does not form ground for demurrer to a declaration. Duffield v. Great Western R. W. Co., 4 L. J. 47.

XV. RECOVERY OF COSTS AS DAMAGES.

Application for Assignment of Probate Bond. —The costs of an application under s. 82 of the Surrogate Courts Act, C. 8. U. C. c. 16, for an assignment of a probate bond, in order to an action thereon at common law, cannot be taxed as costs in the action, but should be recovered as damages consequent on default. Closson v. Post, 6 L. J. 141.

Criminal Prosecution.]—Right of person robbed to recover expenses incurred in criminal prosecution of the robber—Pleading. See Pettit v. Mills, 12 C. L. J. 224.

Postponement of Trial. |—In an action by the sheriff on an indemnity bond, the sheriff is entitled to recover from the obligors in the indemnity bond the costs for putting off the trial of the cause against himself on account of the absence of a material witness. Corbett v. Wilson, 8 U. C. R. 22.

Previous Action—Defence.]—Action by the assignee of a replevin bond for costs incurred in setting aside the writ, and for damages for detention of the vessel replevied. Plea, non damnificatus, At the trial it appeared that the plaintiff had caused the vessel for which the writ of replevin had issued, to be seized on certain fi. fas, placed in the sheriff's hands prior to her being repleviel :—Held, that the plaintiff's property being seized under the writ of replevin, he had to take steps to defend the same, and was entitled to his costs of defence. Burn v. Blecher, 14 C. P. 415. Previous Action—Indemnity.]—Defendant took an assignment of a lease from the plaintiff, a lessee, covenanting to perform all the covenants in it on plaintiff's part, and to indemnify him against them. The lessor sued the plaintiff for breach of the covenants to repair, &c., and recovered, defendant having notice of the action, and, according to some of the witnesses, having sanctioned the defence:
—Held, that under defendant's covenant to indemnify him, the plaintiff was entitled to recover the damages and costs in that suit, but not interest. Spence v. Hector, 24 U. C. R. 277.

Previous Action — Landlord and Tenaut. |—The plaintiff lensed a house from defendant, and a dispute arose as to some repairs, for which defendant refused to pay. The plaintiff, being sued for the work done, defended on the ground that defendant only was liable to the contractor; but a verdict was rendered against him, which he paid, with costs. The plaintiff thereupon sued defendant:—Held, that he could recover the amount of such verdict only, not the costs, Taylor v. Struchan, 16 U. C. R. 76.

Previous Action—Principal and Agent—Representation of Authority.]—Held, that a person who induces another to contract with most of the property of the property of the person who are also assert of the person of the assertion that he is such a first answerable to the person who so contracts, for any damages which he may sustain, by reason of the assertion of authority being untrue; and further, that costs incurred by such third person in an action for the recovery of damages against the supposed principal, may be recovered as damages in an action against such unqualified agent. Eckstein v. Whitehead, 10 C. P. 65.

Previous Action—Unsuccessful Action.] Defendants sold to the plaintiff and received the purchase money for some wheat, which they represented to be their own, but which belonged to one B., who obtained it from the railway company in whose cars it was. The plaintiff sued the company for delivering it to B., and the action was referred and decided against him, defendants being present at the arbitration, but it was not shewn that they were otherwise concerned in the suit. The plaintiff then sued the defendants for the deceit, claiming as special damages the costs of this unsuccessful action:—Held, that such costs could not be recovered. Merritt v. Nevin, 20 U. C. R. 540.

Quashing Conviction.]—Action against justices of the peace for issuing distress warrant under conviction. Right to recover costs of quashing conviction. Hallett v. Wilmot, 40 U. C. R. 263.

XVI. RECOVERY OF INTEREST AS DAMAGES.

By Verdict of Jury.]—Interest is in practice much more frequently allowed by our juries, than English authority would seem to warrant. Spence v. Hector, 24 U. C. R. 277.

Rate of Interest.] — Held, following Howland v, Jennings, 11 C. P. 272, and Montgomery v, Boucher, 14 C. P. 45, that the agreement between the parties fixes the rate of interest recoverable as damages, however excibitant that rate may be. Young v. Fluke, 15 C. P. 369.

XVII. REMOTENESS.

Bodily Injuries—Mental Shock.]— See Henderson v. Canada Atlantic R. W. Co., 25 A. R. 437.

Detinue—Decd.]—In detinue for a deed:
—Quere, whether plaintiff can recover damages for having been prevented by the want of it from obtaining horses to cultivate his farm. Wood v. Bouden, 23 U. C. R. 466.

Fire—Loss of Goods by,!—The plaintiffs, living 'at Southampton, having purchased goods at Montreal, directed them to be forwarded to Kingston, to the care of the schooner "Regina," They were so sent in one of the mail steamers, but the captain of the "Regina," being unable to wait at Kingston, directed defendants, who were forwarders there, to send them on by the same steamer to Hamilton, and then by the railway to Sarnia, where he would take them up on his way to Southampton. Defendants, however, shipped them from Kingston by a propeller, which was burned, with the goods on board, in the river St. Clair. They had been insured to go by the "Regina," but having been shipped on a different vessel the policy was cancelled. It was held in the Queen's bench that on the contract for not sending as directed, defendants were liable only for nominal damages, the loss by fire being too remote; and that they were not liable in trover. On appeal:—Held, reversing the judgment, that the defendants were liable on the contract for the value of the goods. Wallace v. Swift, 31 U. C. R. 523, 28 U. C. R. 503.

Highway — Obstruction.] — The plaintiff was driving a horse and sleigh along a highway belonging to a city corporation, when the runner of the sleigh came in contact with a large boulder, whereby both horse and sleigh were overturned. In endeavouring to raise his horse the plaintiff sustained a bodily injury, on account of which he sued the corporation for damages, alleging that his injury was due to their negligence:—Held, that the damages were not too remote. Page v. Bucksport, 64 Maine 51, and Stickney v. Maidstone, 30 Vermont 738, applied and followed. McKetcien v. City of London, 22 O. R. 70.

Impurity of Seed.]—Plaintiff bought seed barley from defendant guaranteed to be clean. The seed was sown, and it was afterseed to be clean. The seed was sown, and it was afterseed to be clean that it was mixed with a weed close well that it was mixed with a weed to be compared to be compare Impurity of Seed.)—Where seed is delivered, without any warranty, by one person, honestly believing it to be clean, to another, to be grown on the land of the latter, the produce thereof to be returned and paid for at a fixed price per bushel, the transaction is a bailment and not a sale; and damages arising from other innocuous seed having been mixed therewith, and on harvesting having become scattered on the ground and coming up the following year on the land, are too remote, and not within the rule laid down in Hadley v. Baxendale, 9 Ex. 341, and Cory v. Thames Ironworks Co., L. R. 3Q. B. 181. McMullen v. Free, 13 O. R. 57, and Smith v. Green, 1 C. P. D. 92, distinguished. The plaintiff, having received seed from the defendant to be grown under the circumstances and conditions above mentioned, became aware while it was growing that vetches were coming up with it, but did not inform the defendant of the fact, and permitted them to grow, and delivered the produce mixed to the defendant, and was paid for it:—Held, that he could not recover damages for an injury which his own conduct was responsible for. McCollum v. Davis, 8 U. C. R. 150, specially referred to. Stewart v. Senthlorp, 25 O. R. 544.

Injury to Land — Deposit of Filth in Lane—Raising Level. |—See Lewis v. City of Toronto, 39 U. C. R. 343.

Injury to Land-Ditches and Watercourses Act.] — After the time fixed by an award under the Ditches and Watercourses Act, 1883, for the completion of certain drainwork by neighbouring landowners, the plaintiff, who was one of the parties interested in the award, in writing required the defendant, as township engineer, to inspect the work with the object of having it com-pleted according to the award, but, as the plaintiff alleged, the defendant neglected to inspect the work or cause it to be completed according to the award, and thereby the provisions of the award were not carried out, and the plaintiff in consequence suffered damage by reason of water remaining on his land, &c. : -Held, that the provision of s. 13 of the above Act as to the inspection by the engineer is imperative, and an action will lie for breach of his duty; but, even if the evidence had shewn such a breach, the damages claimed were not the proximate, necessary, or natural result thereof. The other provisions of s. 13 are merely permissive, and no action will lie for non-compliance therewith; nor, were it otherwise, could it be held that the damages claimed were the proximate result of such noncompliance. Those who, by the terms of the award, ought to have done the work, were the persons proximately responsible for the damages. O'Byrne v. Campbell, 15 O. R. 339.

Injury to Land - Lowering Highway.] -The defendants having built a subway in front of the plaintiffs' property, and in so doing lowered the highway so as to cut off the access thereto, which was previously enjoyed, under the circumstances set out in 7 O. R. 270, 8 O. R. 59, 12 A. R. 393, 12 S. C. R. 250, and 12 App. Cas. 602, it was referred to an official referee to take an account of the damage, if any, sustained by the plaintiffs by reason of the wrongful acts of the defendants. and to fix the compensation proper to be paid in respect thereof. On such reference referee ruled: (1) that the measure of damages was the difference in value of the property before and after the construction, with interest added; (2) that the prospective capabilities or value of the land could not be taken into account except so far as such element entered into the computation of the then market value, or had regard to what would have been the present value of the property had the subway not been constructed; and (3) that the plaintiffs were not entitled to special damages for injury to their busines On an appeal from this ruling it was:-Held. that the corporation were liable as wrongdoers, who were not protected from the consequences of their tort by any statutory provision, to make good all damages sustained, for which an action would lie for their unauthorized act, such damages being of a twofold character, involving injury to the plaintiffs' ence, one injury could be discriminated from the other, it was competent to recover under both heads. Held, also, that evidence might be received of the present value of the property with a view to throw light on the prospective capabilities of the land at the date of the trespass, but not to form a basis for compensation on its present value; such evidence to be used to aid in fixing compensation for the detriment sustained at the date of the perpetration of the wrong, having regard to the then present and potential value of the pro-West v. Town of Parkdale, 15 O. R.

Injury to Person—Neglect of Duty to ence.]—The plaintiff and his wife sued defendants for injury alleged to have been caused to the wife by their neglect to have a railing or guard along an embankment leading down to a bridge, on one of their leading highways in a populous township. It appeared that the wife and her son, about eight years old, were crossing the bridge in a buggy, when the horse shied at some new planks on the bridge, and backed to the end of it, where the hind wheel went over the bank, throwing her out and into the water, about fourteen feet below. The jury found, upon the evidence set out in the case, that the road was not in a sufficiently safe state, and that the wife was guilty of no negligence in the management of the horse: Held, that it was the duty of defendants to fence or guard the place in question; that the injury was caused by the want of such protection as the proximate cause, not by horse becoming frightened or unmanageable; and that defendants therefore were liable, The authorities as to remote and proximate causes of damage reviewed. Toms y. Towncauses of damage reviewed. Toms v. Town-ship of Whitby, 35 U. C. R. 195. Affirmed on appeal, 37 U. C. R. 100.

Rallway Company — Abandonnent of Station.] — Where a railway company, in breach of a contract entered into by them to run trains from the enstern part of the city of St. T. to the western part, ceased to run such trains:—Held, on a reference as to damages, that though the actual depreciation of property in the western part of the city resulting therefrom was a matter pertaining to the property owners, and not to the city, yet the lessened taxation resulting from such depreciation was not too remote a fact for consideration which could be traced to or reasonably connected with the company's default formed a yearly standard which might be capitalized so as to fairly represent the money compensation to which the plaintiffs were entitled. Stated broadly the inquiry was how much less benefit had been received by the municipality by reason of the railway service at one station being discontinued. Constat, that the personal loss or inconvenience suffered by travellers or citzens from the abandonment of the station, or the actual depreciation in value of the land individually owned in that neighbourhood, could not be reckoned as constituents per se of the damages suffered by the corporation. Held, also, that if the railway company admitted that they were never again going to run trains to the western end of the city, the damages should be assessed once for all, which might be done either by fixing one solid sum, or by directing a yearly payment. City of St. Thomas v. Credit Valley R. W. Co., 15 O. R.

Sale of Land—Breach of Contract for.]— Defendant, on 14th March, 1872, agreed to buy from the plaintiff two acres of land in a village for $325, and to complete upon it within eighteen months a brick factory of specified dimensions, and at or before its completion to commence and prosecute therein the manufacture of plated ware on a scale commensurate with its size; and that in case he should not perform his agreement in this respect he would at the end of the eighteen months reconvey the land to the plaintiff, receiving back the purchase money, $325, and compensating the plaintiff for damages, if any. The defendant did not pay the purchase money, and at the end of sixteen months elected not to go on with the agreement, whereupon the plaintiff sued, alleging in his declaration that the plain-tiff's adjoining land would have been much enhanced in value by the sale to defendant, and the erection of the factory, and claiming as damages profits which he would have de-rived therefrom:—Held, that such damages were not recoverable, being altogether too remote. Quere, whether he could recover interest, though he had demanded the $325, for he had not offered at the time to make a conveyance. Dullea v. Taylor, 35 U. C. R. 395.

Street Railways—Expulsion from Car—Cold.]—In an action for damages for being wrongfully ejected from a street car, illness resulting from exposure to cold in consequence of such ejectment, is not too remote a cause for damages; and where the evidence was that the person ejected was properly clothed for protection against the severity of the weather, but was in a state of perspiration from an altercation with the conductor when he left the car and so liable to take cold, the jury were justified in finding that an attack of rheumatism and bronchitis which ensued was the natural and probable result of the ejectment, and in awarding damages therefor. I of the Partition Act, C. S. U. C. c. 26, to be made by certain persons agreed upon by the parties, one of the persons agreed upon by the parties, one of the persons many fed used to the parties of the parties of the parties of the parties of the partition to be made by the real representative:—Quare, whether the order might not have been properly varied or rescinded by consent of all those who consented to its being made; or if one of those appointed to make the sale were to die or become incapable of acting, whether the court might not often the proceedings to be completed by those remaining. In re Knowless v. Post. 24 U. C. R. 311.

Of Principal—Effect on Agent.)—By the death of the principal the authority of an agent is determined. Where, therefore, an agent obtained on credit from persons with whom his principal had been in negotiation previously, a supply of furniture for the house of the principal, in which he had intended carrying on business, but before any binding agreement was concluded or the furniture delivered, the principal had died abroad, the court refused to decree a specific performance of the contract to purchase, and ordered the administrators, who had taken possession of the goods, to deliver them to the vendors, and pay the costs of the suit instituted for the purpose of obtaining possession of turniture, or security for the price of it. Jacques v. Worthington, 7 Gr. 192.

Of Prosecutor—Rule Nisi to Quash Conviction.]—The death of the prosecutor, who is also informant, after a summary conviction, before the service on him of a rule nisi to quash, does not prevent the court from dealing with the matter and from quashing the conviction. Of Vendor of Land.]—The vendor of real estate had died before the execution of the conveyances, and his infant heirs filed a bill praying for specific performance of the contract, which the defendants (the vendees) admitted and expressed their willingness to carry out but for the obstacle created by the death of the vendor leaving his heirs-at-law infants. The court under the circumstances made a decree for specific performance of the agreement, but without costs to either party; the costs of the infants to be defrayed out of the balance of purchase money payable by the defendants. Weihe v. Ferrie, 10 Gr. 98.

I. ALTERATION.

1. After Confirmation.

Composition and Discharge—Execution by Insolvents.)—G. & Co. having made an assignment on the 4th July, 1808, a deed of composition and discharge, dated 8th August, was filed on the 14th September, 1808, not being then signed by the insolvents. It was confirmed by the county Judge on the 2nd December, 1808, but the confirmation was reversed in the Queen's bench in March following, on the ground that the insolvents had not executed it. Afterwards, in the same month, the insolvents executed the deed, without previous leave from the Judge, and without refiling it; and they then set it up as a defence to this action previously brought on a note:—Held, that the plaintiff, a non-assenting creditor, was not bound by this deed, for the evidence shewed that the members of the insolvent firm had individual creditors, and it provided only for partnership debts. Per Richards, C.J.—The deed was invalid also, because not properly executed by the insolvents. Per Wilson, J.—Such execution was not an alteration of the deed, for the insolvents, being named in and parties to the deed, were only perfecting, not altering it, by executing. Allan v. Garratt, 30 U. C. R. 165.

2. After Execution.

Bail Bond.]—See Woodworth v. Dickie, 14 S. C. R. 734.

Bond — Filling up Blank — Consent — Absence of Obligor.]—A blank having been left in the bond, which was afterwards filled up with the consent of the debtor, although not in his presence, was held no variance on non est factum. Leonard v. Merritt, Dra. 281.

Band — Verbal Direction — Absence of Obligor.]—A person who has executed a deed cannot be bound by an alteration made in his absence by his verbal direction. Quere, whether upon the evidence, more fully stated in the case, defendant could be held estopped by his acts from disputing the bond so altered. To bind a person to a deed altered out of his presence, and by his verbal directions only, the acts done should be unequivocal and consistent only with his positive assent. Martin v. Hanning, 26 U. C. R. 80.

Conveyance of Land—Alteration of Description—Absence of Authority—Ratification.]—II. obtained from his debtor an absolute conveyance of land as security, which was attacked by the plaintiff, who had subsequently recovered an execution against the grantor, as being a fraudulent preference. It was shewn that the deed, after its execution, bad heen altered by the grantee so as to convey the correct lot (22 instead of 122), the only lot owned by the grantor, but no re-execution or acknowledgment took place: the grantor, however, accepted a lesse from II. of the correct lot, which he afterwards surrendered to II.—Held, that as the grantor, according to the ruling in Sayles v. Brown, 28 Gr. 10, could not claim to have the conveyance vacated, so neither could his creditor, the plaintiff. Sommercifle v. Rac, 28 Gr. 618.

Conveyance of Land — Alteration in Name of Granter.— In an action to recover possession of land it appeared that one of the deeds forming a link in the plaintiff's title had been altered by the granter's agent under authority of a letter from the grantor. The alteration consisted in the agent rewriting the first two pages and substituting a new grantee. The letter was not under seal; and the deed was not reexecuted or re-delivered by the grantor. The plaintiff proved that he had a good equitable right to possession:—Held, that the deed was void at law; but that the plaintiff was entitled to recover on his equitable title. Leave was also granted to add the owner of the legal estate as plaintiff if necessary. Thorne v. Williams, 30 O. R. 577.

Conveyance of Land — Alteration in Name of Grantee — Authority of Granter— Effect of.]—See Wilson v. Owens, 26 Gr. 27.

Conveyance of Land — Insertion of Words—Authority of Grantor—Absence.]—
The Crown, in 1798, granted 5,000 acres, including the land in question, to J. H. and E. H. and three others. In 1800 E. H. became a nun in Montreal, by which, according to the law of Lower Canada, she became civilly dead as regarded her property, and she afterwards as regarded her property, and she afterwards died there in Is38. In Is04 J. H. conveyed "all his fourth part or share" of the lands mentioned in the above patent, "containing in all five thousand acres," to his brother-in-law, M., the husband of one of the patentees. This deed was executed in Indiana, and was expressed to be in consideration of natural love and affection and of $1 paid. When executed, the words "fourth" and "five thousand" were omitted, but attached to the deed was a letter of the same date, signed by the grantor, and addressed to M., in which he mentioned these blanks, and told M. to fill them up according to the fact; adding in a postscript, that if any errors should be found in the deed, he authorized M. to rectify them, and that such corrections should be valid as if he had made them himself. The words "fourth" and "five thousand" were inserted after M. received the deed in Lower Canada: -Held, that by the deed of 1804 J. H.'s share passed to M., the consideration being sufficient, and the insertion of the words mentioned not being fatal under the circumstances. Stuart v. Prentiss, 20 U. C. R. 513.

Covenant by Sureties — Alteration in Name—Ratification—Laches.]—To an action against V. & G. on their covenant as sureties for the payment of rent by lessees, V. pleaded that the agreement was drawn up to be signed by one C. as his co-surety, and was delivered by him as an escrow until C. should execute, which C. afterwards refused to do; and that the plaintiff then, without V.'s consent, erased C.'s name and inserted that of the other defendant. The plaintiff replied that, after both defendants had executed, V. ratified the agreement and accepted the other defendant as his co-surety. There was contradictory evidence as to the ratification, but the subscribing witness swore that V. executed without any condition, C.'s name having been previously erased. The other defendant said he signed at V.'s request; and it was proved that V. had told others he was responsible for the rent:—Held, that this was evidence from which a ratification might be inferred; and as the defendant had hain by for years, leaving the plaintiff to believe, and telling others, that he was bound, a verdict for the plaintiff was upheld. Henderson v. Vermilyea, 27 U. C. R. 544.

Discharge of Mortgage — Mortgagee's Agent.]—See Sayles v. Brown, 28 Gr. 10.

Lease—Name of Lessee—Action on Corenant,]—A lease having been granted by plaintiff to one T., the defendant, before the expiration of the term, without the plaintiff's knowledge, struck out T.'s name and put his own opposite to the seal, and entered and pulrent:—Held, that the plaintiff could not maintain covenant against defendant on such lease. Lapp v. Mag, 14 U. C. R. 47.

3. Presumption as to whether after Execution.

Date—Erasure—Delivery.] — The erasure of the date is not to be presumed to have been made after execution; but, even if it were, the deed takes effect from its delivery. Fraser, V. Fraser, 14 C. P. 70.

Material Alteration—Offence.]— The production of the registered duplicate original of an instrument, with the registrar's certificate indorsed thereon, is, by virtue of s. 63 of the Registry Act. R. S. O. 1897 c. 136, prima facie evidence of the due execution thereof, notwithstanding the fact that material alterations appear on the face of the instrument, all questions as to these alterations being however still left open. Whenever it would be an offence to alter a deed which has been completed, the legal presumption is, that material alterations appearing on the face of the deed were made at such a time and under such circumstances as not to constitute an offence. Graystock v, Barnhart, 26 A. R. 545.

See Northwood v. Keating, 18 Gr. 643; Real Estate Investment Co. v. Metropolitan Building Society, 3 O. R. 476.

II. CANCELLATION AND MUTILATION.

Cancellation of Bond—Tearing off Seal —Attorney,1—An action of trover may be maintained against the obligor in a bond for securing the fidelity of a clerk, the obligor having torn off his seal (and this although the bond might be considered as still subsisting and sufficient to sustain an action of debt'; and damages may be recovered against the obligor to the amount of the penalty. A several obligor is a competent witness in an action against a co-obligor to prove the cancelling of the obligation by tearing off the seal of the co-obligor. A bond may be given up to be cancelled by the president and directors of a banking corporation, without the appointment of an attorney. Bank of Upper Canada
v. Widner, 2 O. S. 222.

Cancellation of Contract—By Order of Conrt—Cancellation of Signature.]—An injunction restraining a corporation from permitting certain buildings to be completed under a contract, was dissolved, it appearing that the contract which had been entered into between the corporation and a contractor had been cancelled. On production of the contract in court, it appeared that the rescission referred to had been effected by cancelling the signatures to the document, which being objected to as not legally discharging the corporation from liability, the court, as a condition of dissolving the injunction, required a formal cancellation of the contract to be made. Edinburgh Life Assurance Co. v. Town of St. Catharines, 10 Gr. 379.

Cancellation of Deed—By Order of Court.1—The court will, in a proper case, order a deed to be cancelled; or, if registered, a conveyance of the estate to the person properly entitled, and that although his title may be such that he would succeed in defending any action against him at law. Harkin v. Rabidon, 7 Gr. 243.

Cancellation of Deed—By Order of Court—Effect of.]—A deed was entered into by the parties to a suit in order to effect a compromise of family disputes and prevent itigation, but failed to attain its end, and was annulled and set aside by order of the court as being in contravention of article 311 of the civil code of Lower Canada:—Held, that upon the nullification of the deed no allegation contained in it could subsist even as an admission. Durocher v. Durocher, 27 S. C. R. 363.

Cancellation of Deed—Directing of Estate. —The cancellation of a deed does not divest the estate which has passed by it. Fraser v. Fraser, 14 C. P. 70; Laur v. White, 18 C. P. 99; Fraser v. Fralick, 21 U. C. R. 185; Dee d. Burr v. Denison, 8 U. C. R. 185.

Cancellation of Lease-By Agreement.] -By an indorsement under seal upon a lease of premises, it was agreed between landlord and tenant that the lease was to be cancelled on payment of the second instalment of purchase money under an agreement for purchase of the premises leased; but that, if the agreement became void by reason of the non-fulfilment of its terms before or at the time of payment of the second instalment, the lease was to remain in full force; and in case of the lease being cancelled, no rent was to be paid after 3rd February, 1863, the date of the agree-ment to purchase. Under the lease, the rent was payable in advance, and at the date of the agreement to purchase, a quarter's rent was overdue, having matured on 1st February pre-The second instalment of purchase money was duly paid under the agreement, and the interest also, according to the tenant's evidence, but according to the landlord's it was not paid at the time, though he admitted that he had agreed to allow it to stand for some months afterwards:—Held, that by the memorandum under seal, indorsed on the lease, the rent under it, payable in advance, was not to be paid in case the lease was can-celled; and that the deed was cancelled, cened; and that the deed was cancened, in accordance with the agreement, by the payment of the second instalment of purchase money, even supposing the interest not to have been paid, for the landlord admitted he had waived its payment at the day, by suspending it to a future time. Forge v. Reynolds, 18 C. P. 110.

Cancellation of Lease—By Deed—Reexecution of Lease—Construction.]—Bell v. McKindsey, 23 U. C. R. 162, 3 E. & A. 9.

Cancellation of Lease — Effect of — Merger. |—See Laur v. White, 18 C. P. 99.

Mutilation—Deed or Patent—Accident— Validity.)—If it be clear that a deed or patent, once perfect, has afterwards had its seal and signature torn off, or has become otherwise mutilated by accident, or the effect of time, such mutilation does not render it invalid. Doe d. Ellis v. Mcfill, 8 U. C. R. 224; Todd v. Cain, 16 U. C. R. 516.

Mutilation—Deed Torn up by Granter— Subsequent Stitching Together by Grantee— Delicery—Effect of Affidacit of Execution.)— McDonald v. McDonald, 44 U. C. R. 291 (but see 23 C. L. J. 102).

Mutilation—Patent from Crown—Exemplification.]—See Goodtitle ex dem. Snyder v. Barker, 5 O. S. 333.

III. CONSTRUCTION AND OPERATION.

1. Bargain and Sale,

Consideration—Purchaser for Value.]—
A deed purporting to be a deed of bargain and sale, but containing no statement of consideration, pecuniary or otherwise, and no sufficient proof of consideration being given allunde, was held void in law against a bonh fide purchaser for value at sheriff's sale, under judgment and execution, although the jury had negatived any fraud in fact in the deed expressing no consideration. Doe Proudfoot v. McCrae, 6 O. S. 502.

Registry—Deed Poll — Statutes — Retroactivity.]—A deed poll will operate as a bargain and sale; and 4 Will. IV. c. 1, s. 47, has a retrospective operation so as to make deeds of bargain and sale executed before the Act valid, without registry. Rogers v. Barnum, 5 O. S. 252. See, also, Doc d. Rogers v. Barnum, 2 U. C. R, 470.

Registry—Time.]—The registry of a deed of bargain and sale relates back to the time the conveyance was made. Doe d. Spafford v. Brown, 3 O. S. 92.

"Remise, Release, and Quit Claim."]—By indenture of bargain and sale made in 1856 between L. and K., L. in consideration of $4,000 (the receipt whereof was thereby acknowledged) did remise, release, and quit claim unto K., his heirs and assigns, the south half, &c., to have and to hold, &c.:—Held, that since 14 & 15 Vit. c. 7, s. 2, the words "remise, release, and quit claim "may ôperate as a grant; and either before or since that enactment they would operate as a bargain and sale. Acre v. Livingstone, 26 U. C. R. 282, not followed. Pearson v. Mulholland, 17 O. R. 502.

Use.]—It is superfluous in any deed of bargain and sale to express that the land is to be held "to the use of" the bargainee. Gomble v. Recs, 6 U. C. R. 396,

Use—Trust—" Grant."]—In an indenture the granting words were, "grant, bargain, sell, alien, release, enfeoff, convey, and confirm unto the parties of the second part, their heirs and assigns, all and singular, &c.: To have and to hold unto the said parties of the second part, their heirs and assigns forever, to the use and upon the trust following, that is to say, to and for the use of, &c., infant children of, &c., their heirs and assigns forever." It appeared that upon the execution by the grantor of this deed, which was executed in completion of a sale of his equity of redemption to the grantees, in settlement of an overdue mortgage held by them as representing the deceased mortgagee, the grantees discharged this mortgage and then mortgaged the estate back to the grantor to secure the purchase money of his equity. In ejectment, by the infant children against the lessee of the grantees :- Held, that the use was not exthe grantees:—Held, that the use was not ex-ceuted in them (the children), but that, not-withstanding the use of the word "grant" in the deed, and C. S. U. C. e. 90, 8. 2, the old rule that deeds "shall operate according to the intention of the parties, if by law they may," must govern, and that the intention to be acceptable from the acceptance. be gathered from the mortgage transaction, which would otherwise be defeated, clearly was that the deed should operate as a bargain and sale, vesting the use in the bargainees, the subsequent use being a trust. Mitchell v. Smellie, 20 C. P. 389.

2. Conditions, Reservations, and Exceptions.

Crown Grant—Rescreation of Trees— Trover against Stranger.]—The patent to A. C., in 1736, contained the clause then usual, saving and reserving to the Crown all white pine trees:—Held, that, notwithstanding this reservation, the plaintiff, claiming under the patentee, could maintain trover against defendant for the white pine, for the soil in which they grew was his, and he was entitled to their shade as against a stranger. Casselman v. Hersey, 32 U. C. R. 333.

Crown Grant-Use of Land for Park.]-Certain ordnance land vested in the Crown was, in 1858, patented to a city corporation, with the following clause in the patent: " Provided always, and this grant is subject to the following conditions, viz., that (the land) * shall be dedicated by the said corporation and by them maintained for the puration and by them maintained for the pose of a public park for the use * * of the inhabitants of the said city of T., for all time to come * * ." The corporation in 1876 obtained from the Ontario Legislature an Act empowering them "to lease, sell, or otherwise dispose of" the said land, and one of their committees transferred it to another to use as a cattle market, receiving a yearly rent therefor, which they applied to a park fund, as provided by the Act giving the power to sell, &c.:—Held, that the words in the patent "Provided always, and this grant is subject to the following conditions," did not a condition annexed to the estate granted, but a trust was created the same as if the words used had been "upon the follow-ing trusts," and that by the grant the grantors parted with all their estate and interest. Held, also, that the words "otherwise dispose when read with the rest of the Act, covered the mode of using the property adopted. viz., as a cattle market. Kennedy v. City of Toronto, 12 O. R. 211.

Erection of School House—Condition of Re-entry.]—On 26th September, 1844, a man by deed bargained and sold, &c., to a district municipal council, in consideration of five shillings, a certain lot for the purpose of erecting thereon a school-house. Habendum, for the purpose aforesaid, unto the municipal council forever. The deed was sub-ject to a proviso that the said council should yet to a proviso that the said council should within one year from its date erect a school-house for the use of the district, or if the council should at any time erect any other building save said schoolhouse and necessary offices, or should lease, alien, transfer, or convey the said land, it should be lawful for the grantor and his heirs to re-enter and avoid the estate of the said municipal council. The grantor by his will, dated in July, 1847, devised all his real estate to certain nieces, and died in the year 1848, without having revoked or altered it. The municipal council complied with the condition by building a school-house, and at the time of the making of the will the condition had not been broken, but the successors of the council dealt with the land otherwise than was authorized by the deed, and broke the condition. The land having been sold:—Held, that the word "possibility" in R. S. O. 1877 c. 106, s. 2, includes a "right of entry for condition broken," mentioned in s. 10, and is more extensive than the latter phrase; and might therefore be a subject of a devise, and is covered by the general name of "land." And that upon the breach of the condition no new estate was acquired, so as to require words applicable to after-acquired estates to be found in the will. The possibility of reverter was a contingent interest that existed in the testator when the will was made, and the subsequent breach of the condition gave a right of entry by which the contingent interest might be con verted into an estate in possession. Held, also, that a "condition of re-entry," or condition strictly so called, as distinguished from a "conditional limitation," is a means by which an estate or interest is to be prematurely defeated and determined, and no other estate created in its room; and that the condition in this case was therefore perfectly valid. The devisees and not the heirs were consequently held entitled to the land or the money representing it. In re Melville, 11 O. R. 626.

Life Interest—Reservation of — Convenence of Fee—Covenant to Stand Seized.]—H., by deed poll, in consideration of natural love and affection and of 5s., conveyed land to her daughter, R., in fee, adding after the habendum, "reserving, nevertheless, to my own use, benefit, and behoof, the occupation, rents, issues, and profits of the said above granted premises for and during the term of my natural life: "—Held, a conveyance of the fee simple, not a mere testamentary paper which the grantor could revoke by a subsequent deed. Quare, whether the reservation was void, or whether only the reversion passed subject to the life estate. Simpson v. Hartman, 27 U. C. R. 400.

Held, that the reservation in the above deed was not void, but that the deed might be construed as a covenant to stand seized of the reversion to the use of R., the life estate remaining in H. Hartman v. Fleming, 30 U. C. R. 200.

Preliminary Contract—Inconsistent Reservation.]—C., by agreement of 6th April. 1891, agreed to sell to the Eric County Gas Company all his gas grants, leases, and franchises, the company agreeing, among other things, to "reserve gas enough to supply the plant now operated or to be operated by them on said property." On 20th April a deed was not seen to be company transferred by the company transferring all the lossess of the company transferring all the lossess of the second of the company of the said agreement, but containing to specific on in favour of C, such as was contained the property transferred by said deed to the Provincial Natural Gas and Fuel Company, who immediately cut off from the works of C, the supply gas, and an action was brought to prevent such interference:—Held, that, as the contract between the parties was embodied in the deed subsequently executed, the rights of the parties were to be determined by the latter instrument, and, as it contained no reservation in favour of C, his action could not be maintained. Carroll v, Provincial Natural Gas and Fuel Co, of Ondroio, 26 S. C. R. 181.

Restraint on Alienation — Sale under Execution.]—Where lands were held by A., upon express condition to alienate only to his children, and under an execution against him the sheriff sold and conveyed his interest by a deed sufficient to pass the fee:—Held, not a breach of the condition. Renume v. Guichard, 13 U. C. R. 275.

Restraint on Alienation — Repugnancy.]—The grantor conveyed certain lands to the grantee, his heirs and assigns, and by a provise at the concluding part of the deed declared "nevertheless, that the above L, shall have no right to sell, alien, or dispose in any way whatsoever of the above-mentioned premiiess, but have only the use during his lifetime, after which his children will have full right to the said property above mentioned." —Held, on demurrer, that such provise was repugnant to the grant and habendum, in fee, and therefore void. Lario v. Walker, 28 Gr. 216.

Restraint on Alienation — Rights of Judgment Creditor—Quebec Law.]—See Fraser v. Pouliot, 4 S. C. R. 515.

Reverter—Proviso for, Inconsistent with Grant, 1—Defendant claimed under a deed in fee, in which, after the habendum, was contained a proviso that the conveyance should be void, and the estate revert to the grantor, if the grantee should make default in performing the covenant thereinafter contained. This covenant was, that the grantee should cultivate the land during the life of the grantor for his benefit:—Held, that the proviso was void, as being inconsistent with the grant. Brown v. Stuart, 12 U. C. R. 510.

Revocation by Grantor.]—By deed between B., grantor, of the first part, certain named persons, trustees, of the second part, and P., grantee, of the third part, B. conveyed his property to the trustees, the trusts declared being that if P. survived B. and performed certain conditions intended for the support or advantage and security of B, which by the deed he covenanted to perform, the trust, tees should convey the property to P., and it should be reconveyed to B. in case he survived, No trust was declared in the event of P, surviving and failing to perform the conditions or of failure in the lifetime of both parties, In an action by B, to have this deed set aside:—Held, that the conditions to be performed by P, were conditions precedent to his right to a conveyance of the property; that by failure to perform them the trust in his favour lapsed; and B., the grantor, being the only person to be benefited by the trust, could revoke it at any time and demand a reconveyance of the property. Poirier v. Brulé, 20 S. C. R. 97.

Right of Redemption—Effect as to Third Parties—Quebec Law.]—See Salvas v. Vassal, 27 S. C. R. 68.

Right of Way. —In an action of trespace, c. f. the defendants justified under a reservation or exception in a deed through which the plaintiff claimed title and in which the description of the property was followed by the words, "excepting and reserving a right of way or rond allowance of two rods in width along the south side of said lot:"—Held. that this was only a reservation of a right of way to the grantor and not an exception of the soil. Wright v. Jackson, 10 O. R. 470.

Right of Way—Construction of Grant.]

—A deed of conveyance of land under the Short Forms Act from the plaintiff to the defendants recited that the latter had determined to construct waterworks in their municipality, and for that required the laud for buildings and other purposes connected with buildings and other purposes connected with the waterworks, and the plaintiff had agreed to sell them such land for such purposes for the consideration and subject to the condi-tions set forth. The consideration was a valu-able one. The grant was to the defendants and their assigns for ever, for the purposes mentioned in the recital, of the land described, with full right of ingress and egress to and from the said lands for the defendants, their employees and others doing business on and about the said waterworks with teams and otherwise, from a certain street, &c., along a certain road, &c.; habendum to the defendants, their successors and assigns, for the purposes aforesaid to and for their sole and only use for ever, subject, nevertheless, to the following conditions. The first condition was that the conditions. The first condition was that the defendants should fence and keep fenced at their own expense the land conveyed to them, and place an entrance and gate on the right of way at the north and south limits of the land conveyed, for the use of the plaintiff, his heirs and assigns, and all persons claiming under him or them, whenever he or they might require the same. The second condition was, that the defendants should put and maintain the right of way in a reasonable state of repair until the happening of a certain event, and thereafter that the plaintiff and defendants should each bear a proportionate part of the repairs necessary according to their respective requirements. Certain other conditions were also made. There was a covenant for quiet possession for the purposes aforesaid, and subject to the conditions aforesaid. The plaintiff released to the defendants all his claim upon the land save as aforesaid, and for the purposes aforesaid. The conveyance con-tained no provision that the lands should not tained no provision that the lands should not be put to any other use, and no condition making the grant void upon the happening of any event subsequent to the grant:—Held, that under the terms of the conveyance, the defendants acquired an absolute estate in fee simple, free from any condition of defeasance, and unincumbered by any trust restricting the use to which they should put it; and that under s. 29 of the Municipal Waterworks Act, R. S. O. 1887 c. 192, they had the right to dis-pose of the land when no longer required for waterworks purposes. 2. That the grant of the right of way gave to the defendants and their employees footway, carriageway, and way for horses, but conferred no right of way upon persons to whom the defendants might sell or lease the land. McLean v. City of St. Thomas, 23 O. R. 114.

Right to Occupy House and Three Acres. |-R. G., being seized in fee, by an in-strument purported to lease to his daughters "three acres, with the right of way to a well, including an orchard and dwelling-house, after the decease of his beloved wife, J. G.." to hold to his daughters for and during their lives, or the life of the survivor of them, at the yearly rent of twenty cents, if demanded. days afterwards he conveyed in fee to his son W. G. the land of which the three acres formed part, the son having actual notice of the agreement between his sisters and R. G. Subsequently W. G. conveyed to the plaintiff, "subject to the right of R. G.'s wife and daughters to occupy the house and three acres during the life of them or the survivor, and the right to and from the well," and subject to a mortgage, which the plaintiff agreed to To this deed the plaintiff was an executing party. The plaintiff brought eject-ment against R. G.'s daughters for the three acres :- Held, that the agreement by which R G. intended to demise the three acres created a term at once, the wife of R. G. retaining the right to occupy during her life:—Held, also, that the words "subject to," &c., in the conveyance to the plaintiff, either operated as an exception, or, by reason of the execution of the deed by the plaintiff, as a regrant of the three acres to her vendor. Quere, also, if the deed operated as a regrant to W. G., whether if the lease were void, as contended, as creating a freehold interest to commence in future, W. G., having notice of his sisters' claim under it, would not be restrained from disturbing them. Wilson v. Gilmer, 46 U. C. R. 545.

Right to Select One Acre.]-Defendant conveyed to his son J. L., jun., the east half of a lot, "reserving from the operation of these presents unto the said parties of the first and second parts (the latter being defendant's wife), during their joint lives, and during the life of the survivor, one acre of the said lot hereby conveyed, the same acre to be taken in any part of the lands hereby conveyed, where the said parties of the first and second parts see fit." Defendant continued to live on the lands with his son till the latter's death in 1876. Several years before his death, J. L., jun, built a small house on the land, which was occupied by his men till his death, After his son's death the defendant went off the land, but returned in about a year, and lived in the small house built by his son, and improved the same. The mortgagees of the son sold to the plaintiff under the power in their mortgage, and the defendant, at the sale to the plaintiff, on being asked, said he had not selected his acre, was then asked to do so, and then selected the part where he was liv-The plaintiff was present and heard this, ing. and his conveyance was "subject to the re-servations contained in the deed from J. L., sen., (the defendant) to J. L. jun.:"—Held, that the reservation in the deed from the defendant to his son was more properly an exception than a reservation: that an estate for the joint lives of the defendant and his wife, and for the life of the survivor, remained in the defendant; and he therefore was entitled to select the acre at any time, and was not bound to do so in the lifetime of his son, Burnham v. Ramsey, 32 U. C. R. 49, distinguished. The estate in question had been conveyed to G. D. and L. P., between whom a partition had been made, not under seal, giv-ing to L. P. the east half. Afterwards G. D. conveyed to the defendant his interest in the east half, and after the execution of the deed by the defendant to his son, L. P., by deed reciting that by oversight there was no release from him of the east half, and that he was desirous of completing the son's title, released the east half to the son. It was con-tended that the defendant owned only an un-It was condivided moiety of the lot when he conveyed to his son, and that the plaintiff, claiming through the son, could recover an undivided moiety of the acre selected by the defendant; but :- Held, otherwise, for the plaintiff took his deed subject to the reservation in the defendant's deed to his son, and the deed from L. P. to the son would enure only to the benefit of the title conveyed to him by his father. Lapointe v. Lafleur, 46 U. C. R. 16.

Way—Dedication—Trespass.]—E., owning land through which Victoria street ran part of the way, from N. to S., conveyed to the plaintiff four acres S. of that street, "with the exception of continuing Victoria street across said lot," Afterwards E., conveyed to W. by a statutory deed 65 acres adjoining plaintiff's land on the south, and W. conveyed to defendant:—Held, that by the deed to the plaintiff the continuation of Victoria street was excepted out of the land conveyed: that upon the evidence, set out in the report, this continuation was, when E. conveyed to W., a way actually used across the plaintiff's land to W.'s land, and so passed by the deed to W. and from him to defendant, who was therefore not limble in trespass for entering to repair the way. Hebner v. Williamson, 44 U. C. R. 538.

3. Consideration.

Absence of Consideration - Purchaser for Value without Notice. |-The defendant, being the owner of the equity of redemption in certain lands, executed a deed on the 18th October, 1884, purporting to convey them directly to his wife for a consideration of $100, the receipt of which was acknowledged in the margin and in the body of the deed. The plaintiff, who claimed by conveyance from the wife, brought this action to recover possession from the defendant, who contended that the deed to his wife had been made without consideration, and was, therefore, void. The plaintiff purchased bona fide without notice of there having been no consideration:
—Held, that under 49 Vict, c. 20, s. 10 (O.), the acknowledgment of the consideration in the deed authorized the plaintiff to deal on the footing of its having been paid upon execution of it, and the defendant could not now dispute the consideration. That section of the Act is not to be restricted to claims upon alleged vendors' liens and the like. Semble, DEED. 1842 that, even if the deed in question were to be considered voluntary and without consideration, the authorities, though not at all in unison, were sufficient to support a judgment in the plaintiff's favour, inasmuch as he had at all events a good title in equity, which was now sufficient. 4. Description of Land.

(a) Crown Patents.

Boundaries — Certain Points.] — Where there is a dispute as to the boundary line between two lots granted by patents from the Crown, and it has been found impossible to identify the original line, but two certain points have been recorded in the Crown lands department, the proper course is to run a straight line between the two certain points, R. S. Q. Article 4155. Bell's Asbestos Co. v. Johnson's Co., 23 S. C. R. 225.

Boundaries—Departure from—Estoppel.)—Quare, whether a boundary intended by a grant from the Crown might be varied or departed from by subsequent acts and acquiescence of parties interested in the position of such boundary, who would be accordingly bound. Hart v. Rozen, 10 Gr. 263.

Boundaries—Evidence.]—The description of a lot prepared for and used by the Crown lands department in framing the patent, which grants the lot by number or letter only, is admissible evidence to explain the metes and bounds of that lot. Renny v. Caldwell, 21 A. R. 110. Adhrued, 24 S. C. R. 639.

Boundaries—Falsa Demonstratio.]—In 1792 lot 17 in the 2nd concession of Harwich was appropriated by the land board for the district of Hesse to O'B. He had made no improvements, however, up to 1794, and in 1853 the location made to him by the board was formally cancelled. In 1890 a patent issued to F. for lot 17 in the front concession of Harwich, which had been appropriated to him by the land board about a year after their grant to O'B, described as commencing in front of the concession at the N. E. angle of the lot, on the river: then S. 45 degrees C. 85 chair, more or less, to tall its properties of the lot, and the location, more or less, to be 116; them N. 45 degrees W. 68 chairs to the river; then along the water's edge north-easterly to the place of beginning, containing 200 acres, more or less. Up to this time there had been no second concession line run. In 1863 the Crown granted to defendant the rear part of the lot, 18815 acres, and the plaintiff, claiming it under the patent to F. brought trespass:—Held, that, as O'B, never got a patent or became entitled to claim one, the reference to his land was falsa demonstratio, and that the plaintiff was confined to the distance of 80 chains mentioned in the patent to F. Fields v. Miller, 27 U. C. R. 416.

The Crown in 1808 granted the continuation of to 12 and 13 in the 1st concession of Gosfield, by two separate patents, describing each as containing 100 acres, more and giving metes and of acres, more and giving metes and serving the S. E. and the Gosfield of the Gosfield of

Boundaries—Point of Commencement.]—
The point of commencement "in front on lake Eric, at the south-east angle of the lot," means the south-east angle as it stood at the time the grant issued, and not a point shifting with the encroachment of the lake. Her v. Nolan, 21 U. C. R. 309.

Boundaries—Point of Commencement, 1— The question was as to the true boundary line between lots 26 and 27 in the 6th concession of Wainfleet, which the plaintiff contended should be 10 chains further east than where the defendant asserted it should be. The patent under which the defendant chaimed described his land as commencing at the S. W. angle of his lot, 26, and then running north "56 chains, more or less, to the lands granted to B." It was shewn that taking the defendant's point of commencement this course would not reach B.'s land, and that commening at the point contended for by the plaintiff it would reach B.'s land;—Held, that upon the evidence stated in the case—the original instructions to the surveyors, the field notes, character of the land, &c,—the defendant was right in his contention. 2. That the description in the patent under which defendant derived title was not sufficient alone to outweigh all the other facts in his favour; and that under the circumstances the words, "to the lands granted to B.," should rather be rejected. Hoorer v. Sabourin, 21 Gr. 333.

Boundaries—Water's Edge. |—In 1804 a patent issued to J. McG., for lot 20 in the 1st concession of the township of Chatham, containing 200 acres, more or less, and described as "commencing in front on the river Thames, at the north-east angle of the said lot, then N. 45° W. 58 chains, more or less, to within one chain of the lands granted to Hugh Holmes," &c. In 1809 a survey of the lands was made, the plan of which shewed a road between the 1st and 2nd concessions 58 chains from the river, which had never been opened however, and the lands remained in the same position as in 1702, when a description had been issued for this lot in the name of one W. as running north 67½ chains, more or less, to a post, containing 200 acres, more or less, but no patent had ever been completed on such description. McG.'s interest in this land was subsequently sold by the sheriff in 1811 under execution, and the conveyance was of lot 20 in the 1st concession, containing 200 acres, more or less; not expressing any metes or bounds. The deed to the plaintiff was made in 1843, and purported to convey the lot (20) as containing 200 acres, "bounded in front by the river Thames; in the rear by the allowance for road between the 1st and 2nd concessions," &c.:—Held, that the plaintiff was restricted in his claim to a space of 58 chains from the river Thames, and that he had no title upon which to found an action for trespass to lands to the north thereof, although the same were situate at a distance greater than one chain from the lands granted to Holmes, Crow v, Martin, 2 E. & A. 425, 22 U. C. R. 485.

Boundaries—Water's Edge—Accretions.]
—Where land granted by the Crown bordered on lake Ontario, and was described in the grant thereof as extending to the water's edge, it was held that under this description the water's edge must be the boundary, wherever it might be, and therefore that land which was gradually and imperceptibly formed by the receding of the water would belong to the grantee, the boundary of the lake being fluctuating, and the grantee not being restricted to the land extending to where the water's edge was at the time of the issuing of the grant. Land gradually and imperceptibly formed by the washing of sand and shingle from the lake, is the property of the owner of the adjoining land, even although the formation is caused by the artificial erections of a harbour company who are entitled to particu-lar privileges by Act of Parliament. Doc d. McDonald v. Cobourg Harbour Co., M. T. 7 Viet.

Boundaries Water's Edge-Rank.]—A grant conveying land to within one chain of a river, means to within one chain of the edge of the river, and not of the top of the bank. Stanton v. Windeat, 1 U. C. R. 39.

Boundaries—Water's Edge—Bank—Sub-sequent Patent.]—On the 9th February, 1852, a patent issued to F., under which the plaintiff claimed, for a mill site in Owen Sound, described by metes and bounds, by which, after going "1 chain 70 links, more or less, to the top of the bank of the river," it proceeded, "then south-easterly along the top of the bank, to the limit between park lots 5 and 4; then southerly to the southerly limit of the town plot, or park lot 1, keeping in all places town plot, or park lot I, keeping in all places at such a distance inland from the river as will allow of 13 feet head of water being raised at the mill," &c. It then crossed the river "to a point to which the water will be backed by being raised 13 feet, as before men-tioned, at the mill," and then ran northwardly, eastwardly, and northwestwardly (being the general directions of the river) "keeping always, as on the other side of the river, at such a distance inland therefrom as ensures to the mill owner the privilege of raising 13 feet head water as aforesaid, to the place of beginning." A well-defined bank of the river about 30 feet above the water extended from where the line first mentioned struck the top of the bank to the limit between lots 4 and 5, and then the bank died away into a flat:—Held, that under this patent the limit of the land granted was the top of the bank as far as the limit between park lots 4 and 5, not the line formed by the 13 feet head of water. On the 14th February, 1852, a patent issued to F. (presumably the same person as the patentee of the mill site for park lots 4 and 5). The description of these lots by metes and bounds was in part "commencing where a post has been planted in the N. W. angle of park lot 5; then N. 82' 45' E., 9 chains 30 links, more or less, to the water's edge of the mill dam in the mill-site block, in the said town aforesaid, by 13 feet head of water being raised at the mill; then southerly following the water's edge thus formed," &c.;—Held, that the first patent could not be controlled by the second; and the latter being to the first patentee, he thus acquired the whole land in dispute, and there was no reason why the description in his own deed, which was according to the first patent, should be qualified by the second. Harrison v, Frost, 34 U. C. R. 110.

Lands Covered by Water.]-A patent from the Crown purported to grant the W half of a certain lot of land, through which flowed the F, river, issuing out of the C, lake in the N. W, corner of the half lot, and running in a diagonal direction. In the metes and bounds given in the patent occurred the following courses: "Then S. 73 degrees 15 minutes W. 24 chains, more or less, to C. lake; thence southerly, along the water's edge, to the allowance for road between the 9th and 10th concessions; thence S, 16 degrees 45 minutes E, 21 chains, more or less, to the place of beginning containing 76 acres, more or less, together with the waters thereon lying and being." From the point thus indicated on the margin of the C. lake, which was about the place of issuance of the F. river from it, a shoal, a good part of which was exposed, extended across in a southerly direction to the road between the 9th and 10th concessions. It was contended that the said metes and bounds indicated that a course was to be taken from the said point on the margin of the C. lake along the east bank of the river to the imaginary eastern boundary line of the half lot, then across the river, and up the other side to the said road, and that this interpretation coincided with the acreage mentioned in the patent, and that none of the land covered by the F. river passed to the grantee:

—Held, however, that the plan and description of the lot, together with the other cir-cumstances of the case, shewed that by the "water's edge" was meant the edge of the lake, i.e., the shoal above mentioned, which was to be taken as the margin of the lake, and the course indicated was across the lake on the line of the said shoal, so that the bed of the river crossing the half lot passed to the grantee, notwithstanding that by this interpretation about 14 acres above the quantity mentioned in the patent passed there-There being a reasonably accurate particularization of the four boundaries, the quantity of acres must not be regarded as the controlling term of the description. The fair presumption was that such a course was meant as would give the most direct points of connection between the termini thereof. Where a river flowed diagonally through a certain lot of land, and the owner of the lot granted the part thereof lying N. or E. of the said river to one party, and the part lying S. or W. of the said river to the other party:—Held, that this would carry the ownership of the soil to the mid thread of the river to the respective parties, no evidence of intention inconsistent therewith appearing upon the instrument. Re Trent Valley Canal, 12 O. R. 253.

Lands Covered by Water.]—A Crown patent, issued in 1852, conveyed to the plaintiff M. B. a tract of land "containing by admeasurement sixty acres, be the same more or less," and otherwise known as lot 9 in the 4th concession of the township of Ops, "ex-clusive of the lands covered by the waters of the S. river, which are hereby reserved, together with free access to the shore thereof for all vessels, boats, and persons." The lot ac-tually contained 200 acres, but the dry part was only 60 acres. At and before the issue of the patent, there was a certain mill-dam on the S. river, which raised the waters of the river and flooded a portion of lot 9; the plaintiffs did not object to the flooding of lot 9; the plaintiffs did not object to the flooding of lot 9 by the dam, but brought this action to restrain the defendants from still further flooding the lot to the extent of about 4 acres, by the use of bracket boards upon the dam, which raised the water about a foot. The two Judges composing a divisional court agreed in reversing the judgment in 13 O, R, 692, and reversing the judgment in 13 O. R. 1872, and in holding that the defendants had no prescriptive right to overflow the plaintiffs' lands by means of the bracket boards, but disagreed as means of the bricket boards, but disagreed as to the construction of the patent:—Held, by the court of appeal, that the words "the war-ters of the S. river" did not mean the waters of that river flowing in its natural channel merely, or the waters at the height at which they might happen to be on the day of the issue of the patent, but had the effect of reserving from the grant that portion of the lot liable to be covered, owing to the existence of the dam, by the waters of the river, at their natural height at any time during the ordinary changes of the seasons. Brady v. Sadler, 16 O. R. 49, 17 A. R. 365.

"North-Westerly Quarter" — Evid-deacc—Subsequent Putent, [—In 1857 a patent issued for "the north-westerly quarter" of a 200-acre lot, the side lines of which ran N. 45° W., and S. 45° E. (or north-west and south-east); and in 1859 another patent was issued for "the S. E. ½ of the N. W. ½ " of the same lot:—Held, that the first patent covered 50 acres, extending half the depth and half the width of the whole lot, not 50 acres extending one-fourth of the depth and the whole with the same lot in the patent patent could not affect the construction of the first, for the question must be, what did the patent cover when it was issued. Held, also, that the assignments to the respective patentees by the original purchaser from the Crown of the N. W. ½ of the lot, could not be resorted to to aid in interpreting the patent. Davis v. McPherson, 33 U. C. R. 376.

Plan—Reference to.]—Held, under the facts and evidence set out in this case, that the plaintiff, claiming under a patent for part of lot 29 in concession A, "according to a plan of survey by provincial land surveyor O'H., dated on the 9th January, 1899, of record in the Crown lands department," was confined to and governed by the plan mentioned, and could not claim according to the legal limits of the led by the original survey. O'Donnell V. Tierzen, 35 U. C. R. 181.

Presumption as to Correctness.]—The description in a grant will be taken as correct unless proved wrong by the clearest testimony. Doe d. Smith v. Meyers, 2 O. S. 301.

Quantity of Land — Additional Lot.]— Held, that a grant from the Crown of "all that certain parcel or trace of land in the township of the control of the control of the control situation of the control of the control of the situation of the control of the control of the the clergy reserve lot 21 in the 6th concession west of Yonge street, in the said township," the land not being set out by metes and bounds, conveyed to the grantee lot 21 in the 7th concession as well as lot 21 in the 6th concession. Doe d, Keating v, Wyant, 6 0, S, 314.

Quantity of Land—Alteration of Plan.]
—Ejectment, to recover a piece of land claimed by plaintiff as part of lot 3 and by defendant as part of lot 4, both claiming under the letters patent for the respective lots. The plaintiff's patent, issued on the 2nd January, 1874, granted lot 3, containing 85 acres, without any description by metes and bounds. The defendant's patent, issued on the 8th December, 1875, granted lot 4, containing 23 acres, without any specific description. It appeared that the plece in question, though not so laid out on the ground, would, according to the field notes and plan made on the original survey, have formed part of lot 4; but that the Crown lands department had subsequently erased a portion of the division line between the lots, and that the grants were evidently made according to the plan question, lot 3 would consist of 8 acres, while lot 4, exclusive of the plece, would consist of 23 acres — Held, that the piece in dispute was granted as part of lot 3. Stevens v. Buck, 43 U. C. R. J.

Quantity of Land-" More or Less."]-In 1851 J. purchased the whole of lot 20 from the Crown, the lot nominally containing 200 acres, and being described in the Crown lands department books as containing 175 acres, more or less. On 30th October, 1852, before taking out his patent, J. sold and assigned, by a writout his patent, J. sold and assigned, by a written assignment to R., the east half or part of the lot, described as 75 acres, "neither more or less." In 1863 R. sold to B. his interest in this parcel, described as containing "75 acres, more or less," and as being composed of the east part of the lot. On 22nd July, 1883, B. took out a patent of his portion, the land being described as "75 acres, more or less," being all the lot event the west 100 acres. On being all the lot except the west 100 acres. On 28th August, 1868, J., who retained all he had not sold to R., took out a patent himself, the land being described as the west 100 acres, without the words "more or less," these words having been erased from the printed form on which the patent was written. Subsequently B. reconveyed to R., through whom the plaintiff claimed as heir of his father, and as having acquired the title of the other heirs. J., after obtaining his patent, conveyed the northerly and southerly portions to his two sons, the defendants. About the time J. took out his patent, by instructions from the plaintiff's father, a surveyor ran a line dividing the 75 acres from the 100 acres; and in 1874 he procured another line to be run, under in-structions to lay off the 75 acres, which was done, and the plaintiff's father and J. jointly done, and the plaintiff's father and J. jointly erected a fence on such line. In 1883 the plaintiff discovered that the actual acreage exceeded 175 acres by some 11 acres. The actual occupation under B.'s patent was confined to the 75 acres :—Held, that B.'s patent would of itself include the 11 acres; and there was a such as the content of the such actual to the such actual actual to the such actual actua was nothing to shew that the patent was issued by fraud or mistake so as to entitle defendants to have it reformed; and that defendants on the evidence, except as to a small portion thereof, failed to shew any possessory title to the land in question. Cein v. Junkin, 6 O. R. 532. Affirmed, 13 A. R. 525.

Quantity of Land—Municipality.]—In a patent the land was described as "certain parcel of land in the township of Nigara, containing by admeasurement 35 acres, more or less, which said 35 acres of land are butted and bounded as follows," &c. The boundaries given would embrace about seventy acres, including several lots in the town of Nigara, which it was clear was not the intention of the government:—Held, that the description as in the township, coming first, must govern, and therefore that no land could pass which was then in the town, 2. It being shewn that in the patents dated both before and after this the lots claimed by defendant were declared to be set apart as clergy reserves, that such declaration was conclusive as against the Crown, and would prevent the land so appropriated from passing to the defendant, independently of the first objection. Doe d. Campbell v. Crooks, 9 U. C. R. 639.

Quantity of Land—Numbered Lots—Inclusive or Exclusive, [—A license to cut timber "from lots 1 to 13;"—Held, to exclude both 1 and 13. Haggart v. Kernahan, 17 U. C. R. 341.

Quantity of Land — Particular De-scription—Falsa Demonstratio,]—Ejectment, to recover a piece of land claimed by the plainas part of the south half of lot 23 in the 10th concession of the township of Clinton, as being included in the patent thereof from the Crown, and by the defendant as ungranted land lying between the western boundary of the lot and the township line. No original field notes could be found, but according to the official plans lot 23 appeared to extend to the township line, and there was no evidence of any work on the ground inconsistent therewith; and it also appeared that the government had never made any claim to this piece as ungranted land, but, on the contrary, had always assumed it to have been included in the patent of lot 23. In the patent there was a general description of the lot as lot 23 in the 10th concession, &c., and also a particular description by metes and bounds, which would exclude the part in question from the limits of lot 23:—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to recover, for that the piece in question passed under the general description in the patent, and that the particular description, which was inconsistent therewith, must be rejected as falsa demonstratio. Huntsman v. Lynd, 30 C. P. 100.

. Quantity of Land — Plan — Evidence — Tornship—Concession.]—The question in dispute was, what quantity of land was granted by the patent, which described it as "beginning about 18 chains below a small creek which empties itself into the river Thames, in lot number 17," thence, &c., — there being two creeks. An old map from the surveyor-general's office was put in evidence, under which the lot had evidently been granted; and a surveyor called for the defence stated that the ground contended for by the plaintiff corresponded best with the old map:— Held, that, as the description contended for by the plaintiff corresponded best with this plan.

and with a survey since made for the purpose of tracing out or completing parts not fully surveyed before, he was entitled to recover. Semble, that the Crown may grant a tract of land by a sufficient description to designate the portion meant, although the township within which the land lies has not been surveyed and laid out into lots and concessions, and the grantee will be entitled to hold it although a subsequent survey made by authority of the Crown makes it by name a different lot, or places it in a different concession from that named in the patent, or the surveyor laying it out projects a road through it. Horne v. Munro, 7 C. P. 433.

Quantity of Land-" North Part "-Tax Sale. | —A patent of land from the Crown is to be upheld rather than avoided, and to be construed most favourably for the grantee, Where land was granted by a Crown patent describing it as the north part of lot 13, containing 60 acres, and the original plan of the township shewed the lot with centre line running through the concession, and shewed the part south of the line as 100 acres, and the part north of the line as 80 acres, and it appeared that, prior to the grant of the north part, there had been a grant of the southerly part, containing 100 acres, describing it by metes and bounds, which were evidently intended to include all the land south of the line, although they actually fell short of doing so :- Held, in a contest between the plaintiff, claiming under the patentee of the north part, and the defendant, claiming under sales for taxes based upon the lands sold being patented lands, that the patent was not void for uncertainty, but that under the words "the north part" the whole of the lot lying to the north of the centre line passed to the grantee and those chiming through him. Doe Devine v. Wilson, 19 Moo. P. C. 502, Nolan v. Fox. 15 C. P. 555, Regma v. Bishop of Huron, 8 C. P. 253, specially referred to. Hyatt v. Mills, 20 O. R. 351. See the next case.

A parcel of land was described in the patent and in the books of the county treasurer as "the north part of lot number 13 " " containing 90 acres of land, be the same more or less." The parcel contained in fact 82 acres. In 1898 there were sold for taxes 50 acres described thus: "Commencing at the north-east angle of said north part at the limit between said north part of lot number 13 and lot number 14, thence along said limit, taking a proportion of the width corresponding in quantity with the proportion of the said north part of lot number 13, in regard to its length and breadth sufficient to make 50 acres of land," Then in 1871 there was sold for taxes a parcel described thus:—"The whole of said southerly part of the north half of said lot number 13 " containing 10 acres, and being part not sold for taxes in 1808;"—Held, that the sale of 1871 could not be limited to 10 acres to be located by the court "in such manner as is best for the owner," but was, the taxes being properly chargeable against the whole of the unsold portion, a sale of the whole of the unsold portion, and could not in consequence of the provisions of R. S. O. 1887 c. 193, s. 191, be attacked by the plaintiff, a purchaser from the owner after the time of the tax sale, who then had a mere right of catry. Application and effect of this section considered. Decision in 20 O. R. 351 reversed. Hyatt v. Mills, 19 A. R. 329.

Quantity of Land — Possession — Evidence, |—Iu 1796 a patent issued to R. for 528 acres, more or less, "being composed of lots 16 and 17, front concession, 16 and 17, 2nd concession, and 17, 3rd concession, with the broken fronts of 16 and 17 on Burlington Bay, in the township of Barton, butted ington Bay, in the township of Barton, butted and bounded as follows: beginning at the N. W. angle of lot 15 on Burlington Bay; thence S. 18° W. 115 chains; then N. 72° W. 21 chains; then S. 18° W. 51 chains; then N. 72° W. 29 chains; then N. 18° E. to Burling-ton Bay; then easterly along the bay to the place of beginning. Barton is on the south shore of Burlington Bay, and the lots number from the east. At the west side of lot 15 the shore turns suddenly to the south, for some distance, so that the broken front of lots 16 are on a line with what to the eastward is the 1st concession, and these broken fronts contain together only 28 acres. In the description for this patent in the department the lots were called 16 and 17, "front or 1st concession." The question was, whether lot 16 in the 3rd concession proper, passed by this grant. It was shewn that the government had never asserted any right to it; and the entries in books and plans in the Crown ands department shewed that it had always been assumed to have been granted to R. The descriptions for patent, and the patents of the surrounding lots, agreed with this view; the number of acres mentioned, 528, would not otherwise be covered by the grant; and R., and those claiming under him, had held possesssion for more than forty years. It was shewn, also, that the N. W. angle of lot 15, on the bay, was about 14 chains N. of the concession road in front of the second concession proper, The defendant in ejectment, R.'s heir-at-law, contended that the description excluded this lot, so that the title was still in the Crown, and relied, among other things, upon certain old plans from the department, which plaintiffs asserted to be incorrect: — Held, that the lot passed by the patent. Remarks Remarks as to the nature of the evidence admissible,documentary evidence, plans, conduct of the parties, &c .. - in order to ascertain what land was intended to pass by a patent. Quære, whether the defendant, a mere stranger, could set up the title in the Crown as against the plaintiffs' possession for forty years, with the privity of the Crown. Semble, that at all events the plaintiffs could have maintained trespass against him. Juson v. Reunolds, 34 U. C. R. 174.

Road Allowance—Government Survey—Defectively in Lots—Evidence.]—One R., in 1829, first surveyed part of the township of Plymouth fronting on lake Huron, and his plan returned shewed the lots fronting on the lake with an oblique line in rear, following the general course of the lake, but no allowance for road. Afterwards a plan of the whole township was compiled in the Crown land office, from surveys of three separate portions of it, made by different surveyors. The descriptions of the lots were made from this plan, all the lots having been granted after it had been completed, and the distances in the descriptions contained in the deeds were according to the scale on which the plan was compiled. This plan shewed a road in rear of the front lots, and made their depth greater than in R.'s plan. There was no proof of any work on the ground shewing that R, had ever run out or posted the rear line as it appeared on his plan:—Held, that it was competent for the government to make such allowance for road, not being inconsistent with any work on the ground. Held, also, that in order to give effect to the change made by such allowance to avoid an irregular rear boundary for such front lots—and to reconcile the plans, and the grants for one of the front lots and two gore lots in rear of it, which could not all three be carried out, owing to a deficiency in the land—a proportionate reduction should be made in each of such lots. The description of a lot by metes and bounds, from the Crown lands department, is admissible in evidence to explain the patent for the lot, in which it is described only by the number and concession. Hagarty v. Britton, 30 U. C. R. 321.

Road Allowance—Gavernment Survey—Possession.]—On the 8th January, 1836, a surveyor, in compliance with instructions from the government agent, laid out a road or street on the northern limits of the town of London, two chains wide, a portion of which was then and had for some time been in the actual possession of the Episcopal church, to which body a patent subsequently and on the 18th January, 1836, was issued, granting to them all that parcel or tract of land "on which the Episcopal church now stands, and containing four acres and two-tenths of an acre or thereabouts." Upon an indictment for a nuisance in stopping up the highway:—Held, that this survey, although made after the grantees had gone into possession, must prevail against such possession. Mountjoy v. The Queen, 1 E. & A. 429.

(b) Evidence to Explain.

Exceptions.]—Where land was described in a deed as consisting of certain lots, excepting thereout certain portions, and it was objected that the deed was void for uncertainty, the excepted portions not being sufficiently described:—Held, that evidence was properly admitted to shew what these portions were. Lloyd v. Henderson, 25 C. P. 253.

Latent Ambiguity-Intention of Parties.] Defendant leased to plaintiff a lot of land, "known as the park, in front of Denison ter race residence, and to embrace all the land from the carriage drive in front of the house to Dundas street on the south, to be bounded on the east by the garden fence of my old cottage, and on the west by McGregor's garden and my orchard, and to embrace all the flats even with the north part of the cottage now occupied by my carpenter, and which cottage is to go into the bargain with the land." appeared that the garden fence extended only part of the way to the drive from Dundas part of the way to the arrive from Dandass street, and the dispute was as to the eastern boundary beyond it:—Held, that the plaintiff was not therefore entitled to claim to the eastern boundary of all the land known as the park, but that, this being a latent ambiguity, parol evidence was admissible to ascertain what was intended by the parties. Burgess v. Denison, 16 U. C. R. 457.

Latent Ambiguity — Mistake.] — Defendant, owning a block of land which had been laid out in village lots, conveyed it to S., the plaintiffs' grantor, reserving thereout several village lots, and among them lots 1, 2, and 3 on the south side of Queen street, in tier 2. There was in fact no such lot 1 laid out, either on the plan of the village or on the ground, the first lot on the south side of Queen street being No. 2. S., in 1870, conveyed to the plaintiffs part of village lot 4 on the south side of Queen street, in tier 2. The adjoining lot, 5, was then pointed out to the plaintiffs as being 4, and they built upon it, defendant occuping 2, 3, and 4, and having a blacksmith's shop on 4, which lot he had occupied ever since his sale to S., as one of the reserved lots, The plaintiffs having brought ejectment for lot 4:-Held, that, as the extrinsic evidence shewing that there was no lot 1 disclosed a mistake in the description of the lots reserved. and a latent ambiguity, parol evidence might be received to explain it; and that the reservation might be construed as meaning lots 2, 3, and 4, or the first, second, and third lots on that side of the street. Kean v. Drope, 35 U. C. R. 415.

Name of Place. |—]. sold to the predecessor in title of the plaintiff certain lands, and the deed outside the following (which was sor in title of the plaintiff certain lands) and the deed of the plaintiff of t

Point of Commencement—Erroncous Understanding,1—A deed of part of to 5 in the 1st concession of Uxbridge, described it as commencing at a point 46 chains 23½ links from the north-west angle of the lot:—Held, that the deed must be read as meaning the true north-west angle, from which the admensurement must be made, and not from a point which when the deed was executed was erroncously supposed to be such angle, and which, for the purpose of construing the deed, it was understood should be so taken; and that evidence of such understanding was inadmissible. Forsyth v. Rople, 28 C. P. 20.

Preliminary Contract - High Water Mark. |-Trespass to try title to lands lying adjacent to the river Humber, and occasionally overflowed during freshets. The defendant's deed gave him the bed of the river, and two rods beyond "high water mark" on both The evidence was conflicting as sides of it. to the position of posts mentioned in the deed, and defendant contended that he was entitled to two rods beyond the highest point to which the water of the river ever rose, including the lands in question. A bond containing the agreement between the parties, in pursuance of which the conveyance appeared to have been made, defined "high water mark" to be "where the water has already or may hereafter be flowed for mill conveniences or other machinery:"—Held, that the language of the deed was explained by the bond, and that high water mark was the line to which the water was flowed for the purposes therein mentioned. Grahame v. Brown, 12 C. P. 418.

Vagueness—Road Allowance.] — Where, in trespass for cutting timber, the question was, in which of two townships there was an allowance for road, and the grants from the Crown not being very explicit, the plaintiff endeavoured to support his construction of the grant by parol evidence, which was rebutted by the defendant by parol testimony also, and the jury found for the defendant—the court held such finding right, and that parol evidence was admissible. Milter v. Palmer, 3 O. S. 425.

(c) Inconsistent Descriptions.

General and Particular Descriptions.]—Where land is described generally as part of lot 4, and the specific description afterwards clearly given embraces a part of lot 3, the specific will govern. Doe d. Murray v. Smith, 5 U. C. R. 225.

The Crown in 1838 granted a parcel of land as containing 70 acres, being the E. 1/2 of lot 30 in the 7th concession of Albion, giving the metes and bounds as commencing at the S. E. angle of the rear or E. 1/2 of the lot (such point being known and undisputed, and the Crown at the time owning all the land in that concession beyond that lot); then on a course N. 45° 45′ W. 10 chains, more or less, to the allowance for road on the northern boundary of the township (which was also well known and ascertained); then S. 74° W. 35 chains, 50 links, more or less, to the allowance for road between lots 30 and 31; then S, 39° 30' W. 1 chain 50 links, more or less, to the centre of the concession, &c.; and in 1850 another grant was made of lot 31 in the 7th concession, as containing 34 acres, without any de-scription. In the original survey the allowance for road between lots 30 and 31 had never been run through, or any posts planted on the rear of the lots, although posts had been planted at the front angles, and by producing the line as run between lots 30 and 31 in the 6th concession, the distance of 35 chains and 50 links, as given by the patent, along the allowance for road on the northerly side of the township, would be materially lessened. The owner of lot 31, treating the person in possession of lot 30 as a trespasser, in respect of all the land not included within such limits. brought trespass against him:-Held, that the orought trespass against him:—Held, that the grantee, under the patent of 1838, in the absence of any post to mark the allowance for road, was entitled to the full distance of 35 belowant 50 library. chains and 50 links, as specified in the grant, without any reference to the posts planted at the front angles of the lot. Dixon v. Mc-Laughlin, 1 E. & A. 370.

The Crown in 1804 granted lots 18 and 19 in the 6th concession of F., containing 247 acres, more or less, and bounded as follows:—"commencing in front of the said concession at the S. E. angle of the said lot 19; then N. 31° W. 65 chains; then S. 59° W. 38 chains, more or less, to the allowance for road between lots 18 and 17; then S. 31° E. 65 chains, more or less, to the allowance for road in front of the said 6th concession; then N. 59° E. 38 chains, more or less, to the place of beginning:—Held, to include all of lots 18 and 19, not merely that part extending 65 chains back from the front or south end, Cartheright v. Detlor, 19 U. C. R. 210.

The Crown in 1836 granted to S., under whom defendants claimed, "200 acres, more or less, in the township of Colchester, being let 41 in front on lake Eric, in the said township," describing it as "commencing in front on lake Eric, at the S. E. angle of the said lot; thence N. 175 chains," &c. In 1839 a grant issued to B. for the rear parts of lots 41, 42, and 43 in the front or 1st concession of Colchester," described as commencing in the limit between lots 40 and 41, at a distance of 175 chains from the S. E. angle of the said lot 41; and then going north:—Held, that the first grant must be taken to include the whole of lot 41, notwithstanding the particular description, and therefore that nothing could pass by the second patent. Her v. Nolan, 21 U. C. R. 309.

J. A. by deed dated 22nd January, 1840, conveyed to the plaintiff lots 134, 135, and 136 in the 3rd concession of Sandwich, adding this description, "which said lots were patented to the said J. A., bearing date the 15th March, 1836, and which was surveyed and laid off by J. A. Wilkinson, D.P.S., on 21st January, 1840:"—Held, that the plaintiff was not bound by such survey, but could claim the whole of lot 136, as haid out by government. Makony v. Campbell, 15 U. C. R. 396.

Ejectment for part of the E, half of lot 95, Ejectment for part of the E. half of 1ot 15, The mortgage under which the defendants claimed described the land as "part of broken low No. 94, and Nos. 95 and 96," butted and bounded as follows: "lot 94, commencing at the eastern angle of said lot," &c. The metes and bounds given would cover the whole of the lot, or part of 93 and part of 94, but it did not appear from them which was intended, except that the last course was "to the place of beginning in lot 94," "Also lot 96, commencing 9 chains and 40 links on a course S. 45° W. from the northerly angle of said lot," and running westerly to the distance of 6 chains 50 links beyond the limit between lots 95 and 96, being a description in fact of parts of lots 95 and 96, "Also lot 96," commencing &c., giving boundaries to include only that part of 96 not covered by the previous description. The patent to A., under whom defend-ant claimed, was put in, covering lots 95, 96, and the west half of 94; and it was admitted that he had conveyed to the mortgagor. By commencing at the eastern angle of the W. ½ of 94, instead of at that angle of the whole lot, the descriptions given would cover this land, and the distances given for the courses from north to south would then agree very closely with the measurement on the ground. but would be incorrect otherwise. There was no evidence that the mortgagor owned any part of 94 but the west half:—Held, that by the general description the whole of lot 95 passed; and (reversing the judgment below) that the particular description, being clearly maccurate in many respects, could not control the previous grant, so as to exclude the part of that lot not described. Semble, however, that had the description by metes and bounds been consistent with itself, and excluded chearly a part of 95, the whole would still have justed by the previous words. Jamicson v. Met'ollum, 18 U. C. R. 5445; McCollum v. Wilson, 17 U. C. R. 572.

In ejectment brought to recover possession of certain land, called part of 22 in the Sth concession of Hamilton, and described as extending to the edge of Rice Lake, it was proved that there was a concession in the eriginal survey of the township (called the 9th), between the Sth, to the north thereof, and Rice Lake. The plaintiff proved that the patent under which he traced title described the 8th concession as extending to the bank of Rice Lake, but the deed to himself only stated the lot without giving metes and bounds:—Held, that, although the specific description in the patent, and not the general description, would probably govern, yet the plaintiff having in his notice of title only claimed lot 22 in the 8th concession, whereas the part contended for was in the 9th concession, defendant was entitled to a verdict. Henderson v, Harris, 10 C. P. 374.

A mortgage described the land as all those certain parcels of land situate in the township of N., containing 2½ acres, more or less, being composed of part of lot 23 in the 5th concession of the said township of N., particularly described in the deed of conveyance thereof made between, &c. This deed referred to was for 2½ acres, part of lot 23 in the 4th concession, and of lot 23 in the 5th concession, and of lot 23 in the 5th concession, and or lot 23 in the 5th concession, the part in each concession separately by metes and bounds, that in the 5th containing less than half an acre:—Held, that the nortgage included only the land in the 5th concession. Ferrie v. Wright, 20 U. C. R. 644.

Plaintiff claimed under a deed from one C, of "all that parcel of land being composed of lot 26, as laid down upon a plan of lots laid out by G. T. and W. T., being on the west side of G, street in the town of Belleville, described as follows," adding a description by metes and bounds, which left a small strip at the south end of the lot uncovered:—Held, that the whole lot passed, and that the description curtailing its size should be rejected as falsa demonstratio. Held, also, that evidence of what took place between the parties when C. afterwards conveyed the small strip to defendant; possession thereunder, and the acquiescence therein of the person through whom plaintiff chimed, &c., was properly rejected. Gillen v. Haunes, 33 U. C. R. 516. See Haynes v. Gillen v. Haunes, 33 U. C. R. 516. See Haynes v. Gillen 21 Gr. 15.

Held, the general description being wholly insufficient, that the particular description by metes and bounds which followed, not being a falsa demonstratio added to a complete description, but an entire description in itself, governed. Hart v. Bouca, 10 Gr. 256.

Other Cases.] — Where the number of acress mentioned in a patent does not correspond with the quantity of land according to the description in the grant, the description will control. Manning v. Doe d. Fergusson, H. T. 2 Vict.

Where in a deed a certain quantity of land, and half of a saw-mill thereon erected, were conveyed, and the description of the premises covered the whole site of the mill:—Held, that the vendee was entitled to only one-half of the mill. Doe d. Miller v. Dixon, 4 O. S. 101.

A. surrendered to the Crown in consideration of £636 5s., "all that parcel of land overflowed and covered with water, being and composed of lots 37, 38–39 in the 1st concession of the township of Kingston, containing by admeasurement 462 acres, more or less, and more particularly described in the plan thereof hereunto annexed, to the intent that the said land and premises covered with water should for ever be vested in His Majesty," &c. There was attached to the deed a plan verified by one Burke, the surveyor who made it, and cer-tified by him thus: "I do hereby certify that the above diagram is drawn from actual survey, and in actual accordance with the deed held by the proprietor, and that there are 462 acres 16 roods, permanently covered with the waters of the Rideau canal." Across the land from one side to the other was drawn an irregular line, exhibiting on the one side (which was the front end of the lots) the 462 acres surrendered to the government, as being covered by the overflowing of the canal, and on the other side, or in rear of this line, 12332 acres, which was marked "land." Afterwards A. conveyed to B. "all those certain parcels of land in the township of Kingston, and being the rear parts of lots 37, 38, and 39, (as laid down on a certain plan drawn by Mr. Burke the surveyor), in the fifth concession of the township of Kingston, and by the said B. stated to contain 123½ acres." The land surrendered to the Crown had been paid for to A. at a price per acre, assuming it to contain 462 acres, according to Burke's survey; but it afterwards turned out that the plan did not correspond with the fact, the survey being extremely inaccurate, for that there was not as much land covered with water as the plans represented, by 141 acres: — Held, that the deed made to B. carried only such land (1231/2 acres) as, upon the scale of measurement upon which the plan was framed, formed the area in rear of the irregular line drawn across the lots, without regard to the fact of what portion of the lots was actually covered with water, and that the whole 462 acres had, under the deed of surrender, vested in the Crown. Doc d. Gildersleeve, v. Kennedy, 5 U. C. R.

The defendant agreed, under seal, with the plaintiffs to pay them £275 by a certain day, for "the south 100 acres of lot 15 in the 7th cencession of Norwich, beginning at the 8. E. cerner, and run by the surveyor 100 acres exactly:"—Held, upon the facts stated in the case, that under these words defendant was emitled to the tract as "run by the surveyor," that being in accordance with the substance of the agreement, and the latter words being the principal feature of the description, not the words, "the south 100 acres," Joiner v. Colberne, 11 U. C. R. 631.

A. conveyed to B. all and singular those lands and premises, with the appurtenances, situate at Point Iroquois canal, in the township of Matilda, being composed of the wharf, store-houses, and appurtenances built on part of the east half of lot 24 in the 1st concession of the said town ship, south of said Point Iroquois Canal, commonly known as Carman's wharf:—Held, that by such deed all the premises known as Carman's wharf would past to B., although part of said wharf was in fact built in front of lot 23. Carman v. Molson, 5 C. P. 124.

When the description in a deed which was supposed to contain half a lot, in giving meres and bounds, stated as a measurement 40 chains "being half the length of the lot," as the length conveyed;—Held, that it was necessary for the grantee to prove that the whole lot contained more than 80 chains from front to rear, to entitle him to any greater quantity, for the production of the deed alone would entitle him to 40 chains only. VanEvery v. Drake, 9 C. P. 478.

One S. B., by deed dated January, 1851, conveyed to W. T. 120 acres of the south part of lot 6 in the 2nd concession of Canborough, cribing it by metes and bounds. In March. 1855. W. T. and wife conveyed to the defendant J. T. the southerly part of lot No. 2 in the 2nd concession of Canborough, "which said southerly part was sold by S. B. to W T." The defendant J. T. and wife conveyed to T. H. the north 65 acres of the southerly part of No. 2 in the 2nd concession of Canpart of No. 2 in the 2nd concession of Can-borough, described as follows, "which said southerly part was sold to W. T. by S. B., and by the said W. T. conveyed to J. T. by deed," &c. T. H. and wife conveyed to one M. in fee 65 acres of the southerly part of lot No. 6 in the 2nd concession of Canborough, by metes and bounds, and concluding, "the same metes and bounds, and concluding, "the same being the lands originally sold by W. T. to J. T. and by J. T. to H." M. entered into possession and demised for one year to the plaintiff D., who entered, and being disturbed by defendants, brought this action to recover It was admitted that there was no lot No. 2 in the 2nd concession of Canborough —Held, the description of lot No. 2 being falsa demonstratio, and it appearing 'n evidence that S. B. did convey the south part of lot No. 6 in 8. F. and convey the south part of to 1.8.6.5 in the 2nd concession of Canborough to W. T., that by rejecting the words "No. 2" sufficient remained to shew that 65 acres of No. 6 were conveyed, and the plaintiff was entitled to recover. Polan v. Tice, 11 C. P. 289.

Held, that upon the lease and assignment, as set out in the declaration in this case, there was nothing to sustain the defence relied on, that the lease was intended to include land on Front street, in the city of Toronto, for Front street was not mentioned in either, except in defendants' covenant, where it must be treated as merely a falsa demonstratio of what had been already clearly described. Talbot v. Rossin, 23 U. C. R. 170.

Where land was described as commencing at a post planted 4 chains and 50 links from the N. E. angle of a lot:—Held, that the post (the existence and position of which were satisfactorily established) was the point of commencement, though its distance from the true N. E. angle was inaccurately given. Marrs v. Davidson, 26 U. C. R. 641.

A description of land in a deed, after running to a point two chains from a line with the east side of the Port Colborne guard lock on the Welland canal, proceeded: "thence S. half a degree E. 25 chains, more or less, always at a distance of two chains from a line with the east side of said guard lock, to the northern limit of said lot 27." thence, &c. The course should have been north instead of south, and the effect of it as written was to go away from the northern limit of the lot, and exclude the land in question:—Held, that the course might be rejected, and a line two chains from the east side of the lock be adopted as the course to be taken in order to reach the northern limit of the lot. County of Welland v. Buffalo and Lake Huron R. W. Co., 30 U. C. R. 147.

(d) Uncertainty.

Boundaries — Ambiguous Description — Evidence to Explain.]—By a deed made in August, 1882, the appellant ceded to the DEED. 1858

Government of Quebec, who subsequently conveyed to the respondent, an immovable described as part of lot No. 1937 in St. Peter's ward in the city of Quebec, situated between the streets St. Paul, St. Roch, Henderson, and the river St. Charles, with the wharves and buildings thereon erected. Of the lands which the respondents entered into possesthe lands sion of by virtue of said deeds, they remained in possession for twelve years withour objection to the boundaries. They then brought an action to have it declared that, the proper construction of the deeds, an additional strip of land and certain wharves were included and intended to be transferred. They contended that the description in the deed was ambiguous, and that Henderson street as a boundary should be construed as meaning Henderson street extended, and they sought to establish their case by the produc tion of certain correspondence which had taken place between the parties prior to the execution of the deed of August, 1882:—Held, that the words "Henderson street" as used in the deed must be construed in their plain natural sense as meaning the street of that name actually existing on the ground; that the correspondence was not shewn to contain all the negotiations or any finally concluded agreement, and could not be used to contradict or modify the deed, which should be read as containing the matured conclusions at which the parties had finally arrived; that the deed should be interpreted in the light of the conduct of the parties in taking and remaining so long in possession without objection, which raised against them a strong presumption, not only not rebutted but strengthened by nor only nor rebutted but strengthened by the facts in evidence; and that any doubt or ambiguity in the deed, in the absence of evid-chee to explain it, should be interpreted against the vendess, and in favour of the venders, City of Quebe v. North Shore R. B. Co., 27 S. C. R. 102.

Boundaries—Water's Edge — Evidence of lutention.)—The deed to the plaintiff, in an electment action, purported to convey "part of lot 43," described as " commencing in the southerly limit of said lot 43, at a distance of 20 feet from the water's eige of the Detroit river, thence northerly, parallel to the water's edge 208 feet, thence westerly parallel to the said southerly limit 030 feet, more or less, to the channel bank of the Detroit river, thence southerly, following the channel bank 208 feet, thence easterly 600 feet, more or less, to the channel bank of the Detroit river, thence southerly, following the channel bank 208 feet, thence easterly 600 feet, more or less, to the place of beginning, together with the fishery privileges appurismant to the premises hereby conveyed: "Held, that the patent of lot 43 might be looked at to ascertain the point of commencement; that, as that lot was described as raming to the water's edge of a navigable river, the point of commencement must be taken to be 20 feet landwards; and that the plaintiff was entitled to claim the strip of 20 feet along the water's edge. Scotten v. Barthet, 21 A. R. 569. See the next case.

A grant of land bounded by the bank of a navigable river, or an international waterway, does not extend ad medium file as in the case of a non-navigable river. If, in a conveyance of land, the description is not certain enough to identify the locus, it is to be construed according to the language of the instrument, though it may result in the grantor assuming to convey more than his title warranted. The intention of the parties to a deed is paramount, and must govern regardless of consequences. Res magis valeat quam pereat is only a rule to aid in arriving at the intention, and does not authorize the court to override it. A general description of land as being part of a specified lot, must give way to a particular description by boundaries, and, if necessary, the general description will be rejected as falsa demonstratio. Where there is an ambiguity on the face of a deed incapable of being explained by extrinsic evidence, the maxim verbs fortius accipiuntur contra proferentem cannot be applied in favour of either party. Where a description is such that the point of commencement cannot be ascertained, it cannot be determined at the election of the grantee. Judgment in 21 A. R. 549 reversed. Barthel v. Scotten, 24 S. C. R., 307.

Exception.]—The mortgage under which the plaintiffs claimed, executed in 1861, described the land as lot 5 in the 4th concession of Flos, containing 200 acres, "save and except 35 acres soil off the east side of said lot 5 to L. for taxes." L. had bought 35 acres in 1808. The certificate of purchase then given to him by the sheriff had a diagram sketched on it, shewing this to be the east 35 acres, and the said diagram was on the certificate and deed given in 1865 and 1866 to one J., who purchased the remaining 165 acres for taxes, and under whom the plaintiffs claimed:—Held, that the description in the mortgage was sufficient, the exception being thus clearly defined. Edinburgh Life Assurance Co. v. Ferguson, 32 U. C. R. 255.

Highway.)—A surveyor's deed to plaintiff granted land as being "the public highway or road leading from Wellington to the carrying place," and described it thus, "commencing at the base line in front of lot No. 7, then on a north-westerly course along the northcasterly dege till it intersects the limits between lot No. 8 and 9; thence south 20° east to the southern limits of said road; thence along the south-westerly edge of said old road, till it intersects the base line in front of lot No. 7; thence along said line to the place of beginning," with the exception of what is occupied by the main road, meaning, by the new quarter sessions road, which traversed the old road on defendant's lot No. 8. Semble, that the description was too uncertain to convey anything. Clapp v. Haight, 19 U. C. R. 94.

Illegibility—Insufficiency.] — Where, in electroment, the deed under which the lessor of the plaintiff claimed, was in several parts illegible, and contained no description by which the part of the lot intended to be conveyed could be certainly ascertained, and there was strong evidence that the deed was made to defeat creditors, the court set aside a verdict for the plaintiff. Doe d. McDonald v. McDonald, 2 U. C. R. 267.

Insufficiency.]—In advertising lands for sales they were described as "Race lands, Paris Hydraulic Co.," no further specification of the locality or quantity to be sold being given:—Held, that the description was insufficient, and the sale void. Greenstreet v. Paris, 21 Gr. 229.

Insufficiency.]—The property in an agreement for exchange was described as "135 feet on G. avenue, the same being 337 feet west from R. avenue, Parkdale, on the north side of anid avenue. It was shewn that R, avenue was the west boundary of Parkidale, and G, avenue a street in it, which, as such street, would have its termination at R, avenue, but it extended across R, avenue as a road or way outside of Parkidale, and no further description was given, such as the depth or by reference to a plan or otherwise:—Held, that the property was not sufficiently described. Stevenson v, Welleury, 16 O, R, 139.

Insufficiency — Exception,] — L. in conveying land to S. described it as being composed of the contherly half of lot 17 in the 4th described of the contherly half of lot 17 in the 4th described in the land of the same 45 acres sold for taxes. The only part of lot 17 which L. had before the same 48 acres sold for taxes. The only part of lot 17, giving it the metes and bounds of the cash laff, the same as in the deed to 8.; and the same quantity was conveyed in both deeds. The sheriff's deed described a portion of the lot sold by him for taxes as "45 acres of the south half of said lot number 17 in the 4th concession of the shell township of King:"—Held, that the sheriff's deed was void for uncertainty. Held, also, that the exception in the deed to S. was likewise void for uncertainty. Held, that the metes and bounds given in the deed to S. correctly described the lands intended to be conveyed, and the works "southerly half" were controlled by them. Mulholland, 17 O. R. 502.

Land Occupied by Buildings.]—Defending specified, "with the land which they occupy, with the whole of the dam and water privilege:"—Quare, as to the effect of the uncertainty in the agreement with regard to the description of the premises. Snyder v. Proudfoot, 15 U. C. R. 532.

Omission of Concession and Township - Surrounding Circumstances. | modern doctrine in interpreting the meaning of a grant or other instrument, is to ascertain the surrounding facts at the time the same was made. In ejectment for part of lot 41 in the 1st concession of the township of Col chester, it appeared that the patentee of the whole lot granted to the plaintiff "all that parcel of land commonly known by part of lot 14 (not giving the township or concession) containing 50 acres," describing it by bound aries which corresponded with the 50 acres off the rear part of the lot on which it was proved he lived at the date of the deed, being also himself described in the deed as of the The grantee with her husband same place. thereupon went into possession of that land, and there was no evidence that the grantor owned any other lot 41 :- Held, that the words in the deed, with the surrounding facts, to-gether with what followed immediately after its execution, were sufficient to shew reasonable certainty what land passed by the deed; and that evidence of such facts was properly received at the trial. Nolan v. Fox, 15 C. P. 565.

Quantity of Land—Assertainment,]— Where a contract was for the sale of lot 16, "and as much of lot 17 as should require to be flooded for the purpose of working a mill on lot 16:"—Held, that, as the quantity of land in lot 17 could be assertained by a jury or the master, there was not such an uncertainty as to make the contract void. Hook v. McQueen, 2 Gr. 490.

Unspecified Part of Lot—Election.]—
An agreement to sell and convey, or a deed of,
"one acre of land, being part of the northeast quarter of lot 19 in the 7th concession of Darlington," is not void for uncertainty, but the purchaser may elect what acre he will have, Cummings v. McLachlin, 16 U. C. R.
626.

Unspecified Part of Lot—Election.]— See Burnham v. Ramsay, 32 U. C. R. 491.

Wrong Lot. —Where land is so described by its local abutments as to enable any one to find it with certainty, it is unnecessary to state further in what lot in the township the land lies. If, therefore, the lands of described is stated to be part of lot 42, when it is in reality part of lot 45, the deed is nevertheless certain and good. Doe d. Notman v. Mc-Donald, 5 U. C. R. 321.

(e) Other Cases.

Boundaries—Astronomical Linc.]—Defendant claimed under a timber license, which described his limits as bounded on the south by "the continuation of a line from the head of Mud Lake on the course N. 54° E., formerly the boundary between T. C. and A. R. M." The plaintiff claimed under a license which gave his northerly limit as the same line, describing it also as running N. 54° E. Both licenses were renewals of previous licenses from about 1839:—Held, that the boundary between them was the true astronomical line N. 54° E. and that the plaintiff could not claim according to a line run in 1874 N. 54° E, magnetically, making no allowance for the variations of the compass. Thibaudeau v. 8kead, 39 U. C. R. 387.

Boundaries—Estoppel.]—In trespass q. c. f. it appeared that defendant conveyed to the plaintiff 19 acres of lot 2 in the 5th concession of Barton, described by metes and bounds, commencing at the N. E. angle of the lot. This starting point upon the ground was undisputed; and it was admitted that the description given enclosed the land claimed by the plaintiff:—Held, that defendant was estopped by his deed, and could not set un any question as to the boundary between lots 1 and 2. Crosscaite v. Gage, 32 U. C. R. 196.

Boundaries—Intersection of Stream.]—Where land is described as commencing at the intersection of a round flowance by a stream, and the boundary control of the stream on either course; Quarter from the point of commencement, in the middle of the stream or on the bank, and what are the owner's rights as regards the water? This question was discussed, but not decided, as the plaintiff failed to shew that any part of his land came to the stream. Hamilton v. Gould, 24 U. C. R. 58.

Boundaries—Lands Fronting on Streets.]
—The owners of a block of land in Toronto, bounded on the north by Wellesley street and west by Sumach street, entered into an agreement with B. whereby the latter agreed to purchase a part of said block, which was vacant wild land not divided into lots, and containing neither buildings nor streets, though a by-law had been passed for the construction of a street immediately south of it to be called Amelia street. The agreement contained certain restrictions as to buildings to be erected on the property purchased which fronted on the two streets north and west of it respectively, and the vendors agreed to make similar stipulations in any sale of land on the south side of Wellesley street produced. A deed was afterwards executed of said land pursuant to A deed was the agreement which contained the coverant:—"And the grantors * * * coverovenant:—"And the grantors * * * that in case they make sale of any lots fronting on Wellesley street or Sumach street on that part of lot ier street or sumach street on that part of lot 1, in the city of Toronto, situate on the south side of Wellesley street and east of Sumach street, now owned by them, that they will convey the same subject to the same building agreements or conditions" (as in the agreement). The vendors afterwards sold a por-tion of the remaining land fronting on Amelia street, and one hundred feet east of Sumach street, and the purchaser being about to erect thereon a building forbidden by the restrictive covenant in the deed, B, brought an action against the vendors for breach of said cove-nant, claiming that it extended to the whole block:—Held, that the covenant included all the property south of Wellesley street; that, the land not being divided into lots, any part of it was a portion of a lot of land fronting on Wellesley and Sumach streets, and so with-in the purview of the deed; and that the vendors could not by dividing the property as they saw fit narrow the operation and benefit of their own deed. Dumoulin v. Burfoot, 22 S. C. R. 120.

Boundaries—Lines between Lots—Plan.]
—Where a conveyance describes the property by reference to a plan, the plan becomes incorporated with the conveyance, and just as much part of the description as if it had been drawn upon the face of the conveyance, and to description and plan alone are to be looked at, their construction being a question of law.
Smith v. Millions, 16 A. R. 140, 15 O. R. 453.

Where, therefore, lots were sold by reference to a plan, and in the plan the lots were laid out in rectangular and not in rhomboidal shape, the dividing lines between the lots were held to run at right angles to the admitted line of frontage, and the ownership of the land in dispute was determined by this test, S. C., 16 A. R. 140, reversing the decision in 15 O.

Boundaries—Mistake as to Line between Lots—Title by Possession.]—In 1847, by a fence intended as a divis on fence between lots 26 and 25 in the township of Southwold, the land claimed in this action as part of 25 was included with 26, and was occupied by M., the owner of 26, as part of his lot, until 1854, when the error was discovered by a survey. M. assented to the line as then run, and was to have moved his fence, but he continued to occupy until 1856, when he conveyed to the defendant, who entered into possession and eccupied up to the fence as M. had done. The deed purported to convey the south half of lot 26, together with all and singular the hereditaments and appurtenances belonging or in any wise appertaining, or therewith demised, held and occupied or enjoyed, or taken or known as part and parcel thereof. By deeds made in 1865 and 1874, M. conveyed all his estate and interest in lot 25. In 1875 the plaintiffs, claiming under these conveyances, brought ejectment against the defendant for the part of lot 25 which had been enclosed with 25, as above stated, contending that M., notwithstanding the deed of 1866 and the delivering up of possession to the defendant, still retained a right of entry, either because the defendant was his tenant at will and so estopped from denying his title, or by virtue of his prior possession;—Held, in the common pleas, that whatever interest M. had in the land in question, whether it was part of 26 or 25, passed to the defendant under the deed to him of lot 26, together with the appurtenances, &c., therewith occupied, &c. Held, on appeal, that no part of 25 passed by M.'s deed to defendant; but that the plaintiff could not recover, for the defendant, when he took possession, did not enter as acknowledging any remaining right in M., and therefore not being tenant at will to M. of this piece, or estopped from denying M.'s title, he had acquired title as against the plaintifs under the statute of limitations. McNish v. Munro, 25 C. P. 290.

Boundaries — Point of Commencement—Ascertainment. — In an action of ejectment the question to be decided was whether the locus was situate within the plaintiff's lot, No. 5 in concession 18, or within defendant's lot adjoining, No. 24 in concession 17. The grant through which the plaintiff's title was originally derived, gave the southern boundary of lot 5 and 5 a Boundaries — Point of Commencement— Plan—Evidence, 1—In 1861 W. D. P., who owned a piece of land bounded on the south by Queen street, on the east by William street, on the west by Dummer street, and running north some distance, laid out the southerly portion into lots depicted upon a plan, which plan shewed the boundary line between the plaintiff's and defendant's lots to be exactly 600 feet from Queen street. There were no stakes or other marks on the ground to indi cate the boundaries of the lots or the extent of land so laid out. Many years afterwards the remaining land to the north of the parcel so laid out, was laid out in lots, so depicted on another plan, and a street was shewn between the northerly limit of the first plan and the southerly limit of the second plan. The actual distance, however, of this street from Queen street was greater than the first plan on its face shewed it to be, and the parties owning lots on the first plan appeared to have taken up their lots as if Queen street and the street on the north of the first plan were actual limits of the plan:—Held, per Strong, J., that the true boundary line between the plaintiff's and defendant's lots was a line commencing at a point 600 feet from Dummer street, as measured on the ground at the time when the plan was made; but in the absence of evidence shewing a measurement on the levelled street, that point could not be accepted as the true point of commencement of the boundary 'n question. 2. Inasmuch as the conveyances to the parties were made according to the first plan, the second plan could not be invoked to aid in ascertaining the limits of the lot so converse. When the plan is considered as incorporated with the deed, and the boundaries of the lands conveyed as defined by the plan are to be taken as part of the description. 4. In constrning a deed of and not subject to special statutory regulations, extrinsic evidence of menuments and actual boundary marks is inadmissible to control the deed, but if reference is made by the deed to such monuments and boundaries, they control, though they may call for courses, distances, or computed contents which do not agree with those in the deed. Grussett y, Carter, 10 S. C. R. 105.

Boundaries—Water's Edge.]—P., owning land on both sides of a stream, conveyed a piece on the south side, described as extending 'to the water's edge of the creek, then keeping along the water's edge of said creek with the stream until. 'Ke.; reserving a road 15 feet wide along the bank:—Held, to pass the land to the centre of the stream. Kains v. Turville, 32 U. C. R. 17. See Robertson v. Watson, 27 C. P. 579.

Boundaries — Way—Staking out.]—An oblong tract of land, 20 by 100 chains, con-taining 200 acres, was sub-divided into smaller lots, with a lane laid out and staked. as was supposed, through the centre of the tract, which it really was according to the then understood boundaries. Part of the tract lying to the east of the lane was sold and conveyed; and, in the deed of that part reference was made to a plan, which shewed the lane as laid out through the centre of the whole tract, and the lane was therein declared to be the western boundary of such piece. the same deed a right of way was granted to the purchaser in and over the said lane or way, being 83 links in width, "and which said way is already staked and laid out for the benefit of the occupiers of the said lot." Afterwards it was discovered that the eastern and western boundaries of the whole 200 acre lot. as of all the lots adjoining, should lie more to the west than was formerly supposed; and if those boundaries were shifted to their proper places, as had been done by the owners of adjoining lots, the lane as originally laid out could not remain in the centre of the lot when shifted:—Held, in ejectment by the purchaser of the piece to the east of the lane, that his western limit could not extend beyond the east side of the lane as staked out before the execu-tion of the deed. Dunn v. Turner, 3 C. P. 104.

Exception.]—When two deeds were given to different parties of a lot containing 150 acres, the first covering fifty acres by metes and bounds, the last containing the whole lot, and commencing at the same point as the first, "except fifty acres already sold:"—Held, that the last deed covered only the remaining 100 acres of the lot. Arner v. McKenney, S.C. P. 273.

Exception. —The plaintiff owned part of lot 7, and agreed verbally, in 1859, to buy from one M. 2 acres more adjoining on the north, of which he went into possession. In 1860 M. gave to defendant a bond to convey to him 30 acres of the lot, more or less, describing it as "all that part of the said lot 7 lying north of the land owned by D.," the plaintiff, "and south of the road through the said lot to Cramabe Hill." He afterwards conveyed the 2 acres to the plaintiff, who then brought ejectment. M. swore upon the trial that these 2 acres were not intended to be included in the bond to the defendant, but were looked upon as a part of the plaintiff's land referred to in it, and that defendant had without them his full 30 acres:—Held, that the plaintiff must recover, for 1, the bond, ander the circumstances, should be construed as referring to all the land in the plaintiff's visible possession as owner, thus excluding the two acres; and, 2, the deed at all events vested the legal title in the plaintiff, and defendant's equitable right under the bond could afford no defence. Duscubury v. Palmatier, 21 U. C. R. 462.

General and Particular Descriptions -Plan. |-When a close or parcel of land is granted by a specific name, and it can be shewn what are the boundaries of such close or parcel, the governing part of the description is the specific name, and the whole parcel will pass, even though to the general description there is supperadded a particular description by metes and bounds, or by a plan which does not shew the whole contents of the land as included in the designation by which it is In 1859 the then owners of part of known. the lands in question had a plan prepared and registered, and in 1871 they conveyed a parcel which they described as block F.:—Held, that it must be presumed they intended to convey the same parcel of land shewn on said plan as block F, with the same natural boundaries as those indicated thereon. Attrill v. Platt, 10 S. C. R. 425.

Land Abutting on Lane—Obstruction of Lane by Buildings—Obligation of Vendors to Remove.]—See O'Sullivan v. Cluxton, 26 Gr. 612.

Mistake—"Northwards" — Rejection of.]

—The premises intended to be conveyed by a tax deed from the warden and treasurer to the plaintiff, were described therein as 180 acres of the east halves of two lots 'commencing at the front east halves of said lots, taking the full breadth of each half respectively, and running northwards so far as required, to make 90 acres of each east half:"—Held, that "northwards" might be rejected, being evidently a mistake for exteward. Ferguson v. Freeman, 27 Gr. 211.

Portion of Lot—Inadequate Description.]—In a deed under which defendant claimed in ejectment the description was "the east side of the southerly part of lot 24, containing 90 acres:"—Held, that this was a good description of the east 90 acres of the southerly part of the lot, and that it sufficiently appeared what the southerly part was, for the patent from the Crown was for the rear or southerly part of lots 23 and 24 described by metes and bounds, and the deed of defendant's grantor referred to the patent. McCracken v. Warnock, 43 U. C. R. 214.

Quantity of Land—Deficiency—Compensation.]—The plaintiff sold to defendant a lot of land; the contract did not mention the number of acres it contained; the conveyance stated the quantity to be 200 acres, more or less, and the covenants did not warrant the quantity. Part of the purchase money remained as a lien on the land, and many years afterwards, but before the purchase money was fully paid, the vendee discovered that there was a deficiency of 24 acres in the supposed contents of the lot:—Held, that the vendee was not entitled to compensation from the plaintiff for deficiency as against the unpaid purchase money. Follis v. Porter, 11 Gr. 442.

Quantity of Land — Drowned Land,]—Defendant gave a bond to the plaintiff in $1,000, reciting that he had that day purchased certain land known as "the mill property," in the village of P., and culdid secribed in a deed made by one J., and conditioned to convey to the plaintiff all the land in said deed over 2½ acres, being a strip on the western portion of the property, as soon as said land could be surveyed. The deed by J. included over 4 acres, part of which at the eastern end was covered with water;—Held, that defendant clearly was not entitled to retain 2½ acres of dry land in addition to that covered with water, but only 2½ acres of the whole. Greer v. Johanston, 32 U. C. R. 73.

Quantity of Land—"Half Lot."]—The front half of a lot supposed to contain in all 200 acres, but in reality consisting of more, was construed to mean half the real quantity. Ellis v. Waddet, 5 O. S. 639.

Quantity of Land — Mistake—Registry Lause.]—The owner of two town lots, 25 and 26, sold a portion of 26 to one P., but by mistake the description in the deed was such as at law to pass the whole lot. He subsequently sold lot 25 and all that part of lot 26 not before sold to P. to the plaintiff, and the deed thereof was duly registered. Subsequently to the registration of this deed, defendant obtained a conveyance from P., the description of the land being the same as that in the deed to P.:—Held, that the registration of the plaintiff's dead was notice to the defendant of the plaintiff's claim to that part of lot 26 not sold to P., and that the plaintiff was entitled to a reconveyance thereof. Gillen v. Haynes, 33 U. C. R. 516, followed but not concurred in. Haynes v. Gillen, 21 Gr. 15.

Quantity of Land — Mutual Mistake— Motice, |—W. mortraged his land to S., and alterwards sold and conveyed the equity of redemption to A.; but by mutual mistake the land was so described in the conveyance to A. as to comprise part only. A. sold and conveyed to S. by the same description. The plaintiff afterwards discovered the omission, precured W. to sell and convey the omitted pertion to him, and filed a bill against S. for a conveyance thereof. It was proved that, before the sale to the plaintiff, W. had sold all he purchased to A.;—Held, that this was sufficient proof of that actual notice which is requisite in this class of cases. Wigle v. Setterington, 19 Gr. 512.

Quantity of Land—" More or Less."]— Held, that the words "be the same more or less," following the description of the quantity of land, improperly inserted in a sheriff's deed, might be rejected as surplusage. Nelles v. li hite, 29 Gr. 338.

Quantity of Land—Right of Way.]—A right of way ten feet wide, described as running north from a certain street equally upon, along, and between two lots to the depth of 60 feet, and then at right angles:—Held, to extend only 60 feet between the lots, so that the crossway would lie within that distance, not 10 feet beyond it, which would make the depth 70 feet. McCammon v. Beaupré, 25 U. C. R. 419.

Quantity of Land—Road Allowance.]—
The north half of lot 24 in the 2nd concession of Darlington, according to the original survey, contained 198 acres. B. conveyed to defendant "the south 100 acres of the north half," and afterwards to the plaintiff, "8 acres, more or less, being the north 8 acres of lot 24," &c., "and being all the north half of said lot contains over 100 acres." The Kingston road, not being an original allowance, but substituted for it owing to natural obstructions, ran through the south part of the north half, taking up two acres, and had been established as a highway by user for forty years. Whether it existed before the deed to defendant, or whether the soil had become vested in the Crown under our statutes, did not appear:—Held, that the deed to defendant could cover only 100 acres in all, not exclusive of the road, and that the plaintiff was entitled to the remaining eight acres. Ash v. Somers, 22 U. C. R. 191.

Quantity of Land — shifting of Street Line.]—J. L. conveyed to G. L. a piece of land extending 103 feet 6 inches along the south side of Wellington street, easterly, from its intersection with Elgin street, eovenanting that, should the line of Wellington street be shifted to the north, he would grant to G. L. any land thus left intervening between that street so changed and the land now granted. The south side of Wellington street was shifted about 23 feet to the north, and, as Elgin street intersected it at an acute angle, the intersection was about 11 feet further west than before. G. L. having obtained a conveyance in accordance with the covenant:—Held, that he was entitled to have his eastern boundary preduced on its original course, at right angles to Wellington street, though he would thus have more than 103 feet 6 inches on that street; for the intention was to give him all the land in front of that first conveyed to him, and between it and the street as altered. Lang v. Mattheuman, 32 U. C. R. 126

Quantity of Land — Terminal Point— Number of Rods.]—A specific lot of land was conveyed by deed and also: "A strip of land 25 links wide, running from the eastern side of the aforesaid lot along the northern side of the railway station about 12 rods unto the western end of the railway station ground, the said lot and strip together containing one acre, more or less:"—Held, that the strip conveyed was not limited to 12 rods in length, but extended to the western end of the station, which was more than 12 rods from the starting point. Doyle v. McPhec, 24 S. C. R. 65.

Reference to Former Deeds.]—A description of land in a deed by reference to other conveyances for a fuller description is sufficient. In re Treleven and Horner, 28 Gr. 624.

Schedule—Plan—Reference to.]—in ejectment for 20 acres the plaintiff claimed under a patent. Defendant put in a mortgage from the plaintiff to one P. of 1,300 acres, described as "being comprised in the schedule and map attached." The land in the patent was not mentioned in the schedule, though it was laid down on the map, but it was proved that the map contained other lands belonging to other parties, and was not made with reference to the mortgage, and that the schedule embraced lands not appearing on the map:—Held, clearly insufficient to disprove the plaintiff's claim. Cotton v. McCully, 21 U. C. R. 559.

Specific Description—Other Lands—Appurtenances—Short Forms Act. —See Hill v. Broadbent, 25 A. R. 159, post, 10.

Uncertified Plan—Reference to—Registry Laws.]—Held, that, though a plan not eertified as required by the registry law, R. S. O. 1877 c. 111, s. 82, s.-s. 2, had, although deposited in the registry office, no effect under the registry law, yet in a deed reference might be made to it, as it might to any other document in the registry office or elsewhere, for the description or designation of a lot. Ferguson v. Winsor, 10 O. R. 13. See 8, C., 11 O. R. 88.

Wrong Concession — Surreyor's Mistake, |—A mistake of a surveyor in marking the number of the concessions wrong on some of the posts of an original survey will not make it proper to describe the lots so marked as being in the concession numbered on the posts, Jarvis v, Morton, 11 U. C. R. 431.

Wrong Part of Lot. |—Trespass q, c, f, The plaintiff claimed under deeds from A. M. to S. M. in 1834, and from S. M. to the plaintiff in 1843. In 1829 A. M. had made a deed to his step-mother, intended to be in lieu of her dower in his father's lands. It was clear by evidence at the trial, and by the mention made in this deed of the lands adjoining, that the grantor's intention was to convey the west part of lot 5; but the deed described the land as "being composed of the easterly part of lot 5 in the 1st concession of the said township of S." adding a description by metes and bounds, beginning at the S. E. angle of the said lot, which could be well carried out. It was proved, however, that S. M. had been in possession of the land in 1829, and that he and the plaintiff had held it ever since: — Held, that the deed could pass no land which was not part of the easterly part of lot 5. White v. Myers, 10 U. C. R. 574.

Wrong Part of Lot—Conveyancer's Mistake—Parties.]—Where a vendee before obtaining a conveyance assigned to A. half of the land purchased, and to B. the other half; and the vendor afterwards executed a conveyance to each, by which it was intended to convey to A. and B. their respective portions of the land, but by a mistake in the respective descriptions the conveyance to A. comprised B.'s land, and did not comprise A.'s own, nor did the conveyance to B. comprise A.'s land; but each took and kept the land actually intended for him:— Held, that to a bill fleed by B. against A. for a conveyance of B.'s land to him, the heir of the original vendor, in whom the legal estate in A.'s land was still vested, was a necessary party. Roussell v. Hapden, 2 Gr. 557.

Wrong Part of Lot—Mistake of Fact.]
—The owner of the west half of a lot of land, supposing himself to be the owner of the east half, and not the west half, contracted with the owner of other lands to exchange for these the east half, and the east half was conveyed accordingly. He filed a bill to compet the other party to the agreement to accept a conveyance of the west half, and specifically perform the contract entered into between them, by conveying the lands agreed to be given for the east half, alleging mistake in the insertion of "east" instead of "west." It appeared that the two halves were of about equal value, and that the defendant had no personal knowledge of either; bat, as the contract was for the east half, and the mistake was that of the plaintiff alone;—Held, that the west half could not be substituted for the east half; and the relief asked was refused. Cottingham v. Boulton, 6 Gr. 186.

5. Description of Parties.

Company—Change of Name.]—The deed of the defendant company described it by its original name of P. II. L. & B. R. Co., when in fact its name had then been changed;—Held, a sufficient descriptio persons to enable the company to take, though it might not be sufficient to sue in. Grand Junction R. W. Co., v. Midland R. W. Co., 7 A. R. 681.

Mistake — Name of Mortgagec.]—In a mortgage which was intended to be taken in the name of the mortgagee, she, by mistake, was described by a name which was not her real name, and which was one she had never assumed or been known by:—Held, that the legal estate did not pass to her by the mortgage, whatever its operation in equity; and that she could not make a good legal title to a purchaser under the power of sale contained in the mortgage. Burton v, Dougall, 30 O. R. 543.

6. Estate Created.

Fee Simple — Limitations.] — Under a grant to A, and his heirs for ever, habendum to A, and his wife "for and during their natural life and the life of the survivor of them;" and "from and after the death of both, to have and to hold unto their lawful heirs and assigns for ever," or from and after the death of both, to have and to hold unto their lawful heirs, their heirs and assigns for ever," at takes a fee simple absolute. Langlois v. Lesprance, 22 O. R. 682.

Fee Simple—Rule in Shelley's Case.]—Under a conveyance of land to M., to hold "during her natural life, then to go to her heirs, equally alike, and their heirs and assigns for ever:"—Held, that the rule in Shelley's case applied, and that M. took a fee. Brown v. O'Bruger, 55 U. C. Ik. 354.

Future Estate—Deed of Appointment.]—On the 25th October, 1870, the plaintiffs' testator purchased certain lands and procured a deed to be made to the grantees named therein to hold to such uses as he should by deed or will appoint, and, in default of such appointment, and so far as such appointment should not extend, to the use of the said grantees, their heirs and assigns. He put his mother in possession of the land, and she so continued up to the time of her death, which occurred on the 21st July, 1878, the defendants, her two daughters, residing with her, and after her death continuing to reside on the land, and remaining in possession until action brought. On 1st November, 1892, the plaintiffs' testator, in the alleged exercise of the power of appointment, executed a deed appointing and converging the lands to another person, who then re contexed to him. He subsequently died, having devised the property to the plaintiffs, and on the 19th March. 1867, an action to recover possession was brought by them:—Held, that the effect of the deed of the 25th October, 1870, was to vest the fee simple in the lands in the grantees to uses, subject to be divested on the exercise of the power of appointment, and that the deed of the 1st November, 1892, was a due execution thereof; that the testator's estate, prior to the appointment, was a future estate or interest within the meaning of s. 5, s.s. 11, of the Real Property Limitation Act, R. S. O. 1897 c. 133, which came into possession on the execution of the deed of the 1st November, 1892, and that the plaintiffs, not being barred by effluxion of time, were entitled to recover. Theresson, v. Thurcsson, 30 O. R. 504.

Life Estate-Trustees - Temperance So cicty. |-A grantor, by deed, conveyed certain to three trustees in trust for certain societies at a named place and their successors, representatives of the aforesaid societies, or the representatives of the said societies (sic) of any temperance society by whatever name it or they might be known or designated. Together with all * * * the estate, right, * * the estate, right, assigns, babendum, unto the said trustees and their successors in trust for said societies, or such of them as may continue to exist The three temperance societies mentioned in the deed had all ceased to exist for many years:—Held, that the trustees took only a life estate for their joint lives and the life of the survivor of them, leaving the reversion in fee in the grantor:—Held, also, looking at the situation of the premises and the uses for which they were intended, and that the temperance societies originally named were formed in a certain place, that, although the trust was intended to be confined to temperance societies having the same local habitation, the words in the habendum were large then, the words in the hadendum were large enough to include any temperance society founded at that place while any of the original grantees were living:—Held, also, that the plaintiff, having been appointed a trustee for such a society, although no such appointment could extend or prolong the life estate granted, was entitled to restrain the defendant, his cotrustee and the sole surviving trustee under the deed, from pulling down a building on the premises, which he had commenced to do, Armstrong v. Harrison, 29 O. R. 174.

Maintenance—Gift of Board and Ladging—Right of Occupation.]—A father conveyed to one of his sons certain farm lands, subject to his own life estate therein, and subject also to the use of another son, the plaintiff, of a bed, bedroom, and bedding, in the dwelling bones on the farm, and to his board so long as bone on the farm, and to his board so long as under the farm, and to his board so long as the second of the farm of 7. Habendum.

Assignment — Indenture — Estate.]—
Where the granting part of a deed of assignment transfers the indenture simply, and the habendum the estate in the indenture, the estate passes. Doe d. Wood v. Fox, 3 U. C. R. 134.

Bargain and Sale—Use.]—It is superfluous in any deed of bargain and sale to express that the land is to be held "to the use of" the bargainee. Gamble v. Rees, 6 U. C. R. 397.

Estate in Fee—Habendum for Years.]— See McDonald v. McGillis, 26 U. C. R. 458.

Estate in Fee—Limitation—Repugnancy.]
—Hy deed of bargain and sale, A. M. conveyed to H. M., her heirs and assigns, certain free-hoid premises, to hold the same to the said H. M., her heirs and assigns, "so long as she remains the widow of M. M., but should she marry or decease, the above described land will become the property of the two sons of the said H. M., C. M. and J. M., for ever," Covenants for tile were added to the said H. M., but heirs and assigns:—Held, that the habendum constituted a limitation and not a condition; that such limitation was void, as being repugnant to the grant in the premises; and that the grantee took a fee simple. Doe d. Meyers v. Marsh, 9 U. C. R. 242.

Estate in Fee—Limitation—Repugnacev.}—
Under a conveyance to A., her heirs and assigns, habendum to A., her heirs and assigns, and in case of her decease leaving issue, then in trust to O. (her husband), his heirs or assigns, to and for the henefit of the said children, their heirs or assigns, to be sold for their benefit, if the said O., his heirs or assigns, should think fit; and if the said A. should not survive the said O., leaving no issue, then to the said O., his heirs and assigns for ever:—Held, that the habendum being inconsistent with the premises, the former must govern, and that A. took a fee. Oveston v. Williams, 16 U. C. R. 405.

Estate in Fee—Statute of, Uses—Croun Patent.)—By a patent from the Crown, after a recital of one J. L. having contracted for the purchase of certain and from the Crown atterned to the purchase of certain and from the Crown at the consideration of the payment of said and by J. L. was granted "to the said J. L. upon the conditions below stated," &c.: "To have and to hold to the said J. L., for the use and benefit of herself and children, Marzaret, Robert, and Mary, their heirs and assigns for ever. And also to have and to hold the said parcel or tract of land hereby granted," &c.: "unto the said J. L., upon the conditions above stated, her heirs and assigns for ever."—Held, that in order to carry out the intent of the Crown the second habendum must be transposed, and read as the first, and thereby a fee simple under the Statute of Uses was created in J. L., and her three children named, as the grantees of the first use declared. Long v. Anderson, 30 C. P. 516.

Estate in Futuro—Limitation of Use.]—
T. and his son D. desired to effect a certain settlement of landed property, but employed a non-professional conveyancer to draw the deed of settlement, who failed to insert many of the essential provisions of the agreement, and as to the land, made T., in consideration of natural love and affection, grant the same to D., his heirs and assigns, habendum "after the decease of T. unto and to the only proper use and behoof of D., his heirs and assigns for ever;" and D. now brought this action for waste against T.:—Held, that the deed was not void as passing only a freehold to commence in future, for the habendum is not essential to a deed, and the granting part was sufficient of itself to pass the immediate freehold to D., the expressed consideration of natural love and affection sufficing to carry the use to D., in whom the deed, viewed as a covenant to stand seized, would vest the entire estate. But quere, whether the express limitation of the use in the habendum after T.'s death would not rebut the implication of an immediate vesting of the use at the date of the deed in D., so that the use of so much of the estate as was not expressly limited, viz., for the life of T., resulted to and vested in T. Dundap v. Dundap, 6 O. R. 141. The decree which directed the deed to be reformed was reversed. See S. C., sub now. Dunlop v. Dunlop, 10 A. R. 670 (post VII. 3).

Repugnant Subsequent Clause.]—A lease with labendum for a year contained a subsequent clause that either party might terminate the lease at the end of the year on thereto:—Held, that the clause was repugnant to the labendum and must be rejected, and that the lease terminated at the end of the year without any notice. Weller v. Carnew, 29 O. R. 400.

8. Option to Purchase,

Sale of Phosphate Mining Rights-Option to Purchase other Minerals. |-M. by deed sold to W. the phosphate mining rights of certain land, the deed containing a provi-sion that "in case the said purchaser in working the said mines should find other minerals of any kind he shall have the privilege of buying the same from the said vendor or representative by paying the price set upon the same by two arbitrators appointed by the parties." W. worked the phosphate mine for five years and then discontinued it. Two years later he sold his mining rights in the land, and by various conveyances they were finally transferred to B., each assignment pur-porting to convey "all mines, minerals, and mining rights already found or which may hereafter be found" on said land. A year after the transfer to B., the original vendor, M. granted the exclusive right to work mines and veins of mica on said land to W. & Co., who proceeded to develop the mica. B, then claimed an option to purchase the mica mines under the original agreement, and demanded an arbitration to fix the price, which was refused, and she brought an action to compel M. to appoint an arbitrator and for damages Held, that the option to purchase other minerals could only be exercised in respect to such as were found when actually working the phosphate, which was not the case with the mica as to which B. claimed the option Baker v. McLelland, 24 S. C. R. 416.

9. Recitals.

Deed Poll — Recitals in — Effect on Grantee.]—The recitals in a deed poll are not binding on the grantee, being entirely the language of the grantor, and the grantee is not estopped from setting up the contrary in an action not founded on the instrument, and wholly collateral to it. Minaker v. Ash, 10 C. P. 363.

Erroneous Recital—Effect of.]—A testator devised property to his wife, who conveyed to D. in fee. Afterwards D., and S., his wife, joined in a deed for valuable consideration, to M. and his wife, reciting that she was entitled to the property as co-heiress of the testator. Subsequently M. and his wife conveyed to a trustee for S. The plaintiff claimer under S., and, notwithstanding the erroneous recital, the court held her entitled to a conveyance. Laulor v. Murchison, 4 Gr. 284.

Evidence—Recital of Facts.]—The recitals in a deed put in as evidence:—Held, not conclusive as to the facts therein stated, Neale v. Winter, 9 C. P. 394.

Evidence—Recital of Mortgage.]—Semble, that the recital in a deed proved is sufficient evidence of the contents of a mortgage, so far as therein recited. Nesbitt v. Rice, 14 C. P. 409.

Guaranty—Recital of Previous Controct— Error in Juste.]—K. having agreed with the plaintiffs for the purchase of some lumber, the defendants consented to guarantee his punctual payment for the same; but inadvertently the first agreement in which K. bound himself to pay for the lumber, was recited in the agreement signed by the sureties, as bearing date the 22nd December, 1851, whereas it was dated on the 8th January, 1852:—Semble, that on such an issue, if it were shewn that there was but one agreement between the parties relating to the matter, the error in the recital of it would not be fatal, and the plaintiff might recover. Wadsworth v. Townley, 10 U. C. R. 579.

Presumption—Identity of Grantor—Recitals as to Iteath, 1—Lands were conveyed, in 1804, by deed to W. R. By a deed poil indersed upon the deed of 1804, and dated in 1823, W. R., described as "the within named W. R.," granted the same lands to trustees of a marriage settlement executed in 1820, under which plaintiffs claimed:—Held, that the W. R. who executed the deed poil would be presumed to have been the grantee of the deed of 1804, notwithstanding recitals in other deeds, produced by the plaintiffs as part of their chain of title, tending to shew that the grantee of the deed of 1804 was dead before 1820. Thompson v. Bennett, 22 C. P. 333. See Melacke v. Simpson, 29 S. C. R. 375.

Sheriff's Deed—Error in Reciting Wirl.]
—Ejectment on a sheriff's deed, which recited that by a ven. ex. he had seized the lands, and since the seizure made by virtue of the said writ, had exposed then to public sale, &c. and that the lands had been seized under a fi. fa.
previously issued, and that the ven. ex. ordered him to sell the lands so seized:—Held, that the misrecitals did not invalidate the deed, and that the plaintiffs might shew what the facts were. Roe v. McVell, 14 C. P. 424.

Tax Deed — Advertisement.] — Held, that the recital in the tax deed and the advertisement in the Gazette were sufficient evidence of the amount of taxes due, but not of the warrant to sell. Hutchinson v. Collier, 27 C. P. 249 Unregistered Agreement — Effect of Receital in—Title to Land.]—The plaintiff proved a deed to himself from D., atted 3rd July, 1851, registered on the 7th of the same menth. The defendant put in an instrument under seal, dated 3rd June, 1847, between one between them, and that M. had D. reciting that differences had arises between them, and that M. had so the seal of the seal

10. Short Forms Act.

(See, also, under Landlord and Tenant—Mortgage.)

Appurtenances.] — Where in a conveyance made in pursuance of the Short Forms of Conveyances Act, R. 8. 0. 1877 c. 102, a parcel of land is accurately described by metes and bounds, the general words of s. 4 will not pass lands with buildings thereon not embraced in the specific description, merely because the buildings were previously used, occupied, and enjoyed with the property specifically described by metes and bounds. Willis V. Watney, 51 L. J. Ch. 181, 30 W. R. 424, 45 L. T. N. 8. 739, distinguished. Hill v. Broadbeat, 25 A. R. 159.

Conveyance to Trustees.] — The operation of an ordinary deed of bargain and sale under the Short Forms Act, R. S. O. 1877 c. 102, conveying lands to trustees, considered and acted on. Seaton v. Lunney, 27 Gr. 169.

Covenant—Right to Convey—Omission of Words.—A covenant in a deed, purporting to be made in pursuance of the Act respecting Short Forms of Conveyances, that the grantor hath the right to convey the said land to the said party of the second part," omitting the words "notwithstanding any act of the covenantor," contained in column 1 of schedule 2 of the Act:—Held, not a covenant within the statute; but to mean that the covenantor had the right to convey as he had conveyed, i. e., in fee simple. Held, also, that the omission of these words did not affect the succeeding covenants for quiet possession and further assurance, and that defendant had done no act to incumber, by making them absolute covenants; these covenants being in accordance with the form in column 1. Brown v. O'Dreyer, 35 U. C. R. 354.

Covenant—Right to Convey.]—In a deed proporting to be under the Short Forms Act, the covenant was that the grantor had the right to convey, omitting the words "notwithstanding any act of the said covenantor:"—Held, following Brown v. O'Dwyer, 35 U. C. R. 354, that although not in accordance with the statute it bound the covenantor as an absolute covenant that he was seized and had a right to convey in fee simple. McKay v. McKay, 31 C. P. 1.

Easement—Implied Grant,] — One J. S., being owner of the east half of one and the west half of an adjoining lot, by deed, under the Act respecting Short Forms, conveyed to G. S. in fee, the west half, without express mention of any easements, &c. There were then on the west half a saw mill and factory, which then, and for some years during unity of title to both lots, were driven by a river, which was dammed back to form a pond on both lets, by a dam and embankment extend-ing on to both. There was on the west half a grist mill, ready for the reception of machand the embankment was partly cut through to carry the water therefrom to another pond partly begun, from which the grist mill was to be supplied. After the conveyance, G. S. finished the cut through the embankment, carried the water required from one pond to the other by a flume, and thus worked the grist mill, which could not otherwise have been worked. By this he diverted the water from the first pond and from the east half, more than before the conveyance. Such diversion and working of the mill were with the parol license of J. S. The cutting, flume, and grist mill pend were all on the west half, and the water was returned from the mill to the river below the east half:—Held, that, as by the statute the deed included all easements, &c., used or enjoyed with the lands granted, there was an express grant of the right or easement to maintain the dam and to enter for purposes of repair on the east half, and to dam back thereon for the purposes of the saw mill and factory, to the same extent as before the conveyance. Held, however, that no right or ensement passed in respect of the grist mill; and also, that the parol license was revocable; but that the plaintiffs, the mortgagees of G. S., would be entitled in equity to restrain J. S. and those claiming under him from interfering with the right claimed respecting the grist mill. Edinburgh Life Assurance Co. v. Barnhart, 17 C. P. 63, Quit Claim—Form of.]—S., being owner in fee, by deed expressed to be made in pursuance of the Act to facilitate the conveyance of real property, in consideration of £75, did quit claim to one G., his heirs and assigns for ever, all his right and title to the land in question. It was added that G. might take possession, that S. would execute such further assurances as might be requisite, that he had done no act to incumber, and he released and quitted chaim to G. all his claim upon said lands:—Held, sufficient to pass the title in fee. Nicholson v. Bildsbough, 21 U. C. R. 591.

11. Other Cases.

Gravel — Subsequent Deposit.] — In 1856 the owner of land by deed conveyed to a railway company "the gravel situate and being on and comprised within a certain part of the land, with the right of moistructed use the company of the land, with the right of moistructed use the company of the land at the date of the deed: — Held, that gravel deposited on the land after the date of the deed, owing to the action of the waters of the lake, did not pass by the company. Again the land of the lake, did not pass by the conveyance. Mann v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 32 O. R. 240.

Notarial Deed — Ratification of Title — Validity — Doner.] — See Chevrier v. The Queen, 4 S. C. R. 1. Notarial Deed—Warranty — Interest.]— See Windsor Hotel Co. v. Cross, 12 S. C. R.

Trust Deed-Good in Part.]-A deed may be good in part, though void in part. Where, therefore, a conveyance was made of lands and the grantees contemporaneously executed a declaration of trust in respect thereof, as follows: first, to lease the lands until sold, and to sell them; to pay the annual proceeds to the settlor for life, and after the death of the settlor to pay the same, or in the discretion of the trustees a portion thereof, to A. M. during his life; and the trustees sold a portion of the estate, and after the death of the settlor a bill was filed impeaching the settlement as void under the statute of mort-main, which it admittedly was as respected the trusts declared of the corpus of the estate :-Held, that the trusts declared in favour of the settlor and A. M. were sufficient, how-ever, to support the sale which had been effected; and the bill as against the trustees, the purchaser from them, and A. M., was dismissed with costs, McIsaac v. Heneberry, 20

IV. Escrow.

Agreement—Release — Delivery—Condition.]—To an action for work and labour, the defendants pleaded a release by agreement under seal, making profert. The plaintiff replied that the agreement was delivered to a third party as an escrow, on condition that it should be void on default made by the defendants in payment of £200 by a certain day; that the defendants did not pay, whereby the agreement became void, and so was not the plaintiff's deed:—Held, that the defendants must prove the execution of the agreement, and that it was not necessary for the plaintiff to shew the conditional delivery as part of his case. Light v. Woodstock and Lake Eric R. W. and H. Co., 13 U. C. R. 216

Assignment for Creditors - Release -Condition Precedent.]—R., being indebted to B. and V., the plaintiffs, in $979.76, gives his note in September, 1859, at six months, pay-able at the Bank of Montreal, in Guelph, with current rate of exchange on New York. June, 1860, R. made an assignment, to which the plaintiffs were executing parties, which -after reciting an agreement by R.'s creditors to accept 5s, in the £, payable in six and twelve months, to be secured by notes satisfactorily indorsed, and a covenant by R. to pay that sum-contained an absolute release of R, from all those executing it. The plaintiffs before executing this instrument claimed the promised indorsed notes, or to hold the original note till the compromise was paid. On the 6th August, 1860, another assignment was made by R., in trust, till he should pay his creditors their dividend, and was sent to the plaintiffs for execution, with the statement that he (R.) could not get the security that he (1), could not get the security wanted—"the party that promised to become a partner drew back." This assignment the plaintiffs did not sign, because when the first offer fell through they sold the original note, and claimed to have nothing more to do with the matter:—Held, that the giving of the notes by R, was not a condition precedent to the derivery of the first assignment, and that the execution and delivery of it, as it contained an absolute release, operated as a discharge of the original debt. Benedict v. Rutherford, 11 C. P. 213.

Bargain and Sale - Delivery - Condition.]—Detinue for an indenture of bargain and sale. Pleas, 1. Non-detinet; 2. That the deed was not the plaintiff's. The jury found that the indenture was delivered by one A. to the defendant, to be delivered to the plaintiff after A.'s death, on condition that he (the plaintiff) should keep A, until his death, and should pay his debts; and that the plaintiff had not maintained A., but after his death was ready to pay his debts. Defendant, who was one of A.'s creditors, had refused to accept his debt from the plaintiff, and had destroyed the deed :-Held, that on these facts and pleadings the plaintiff could not recover; for, as to the first plea, the writing, being delivered to the defendant merely as an escrow, was not in fact a deed as described in the declaration; as to the second plea, the plaintiff had forfeited his right by a breach of one of the conditions. Reynolds v. Waddell, 12 U. C.

Conveyance of Land-Bar of Dower.]-No form of words is necessary to constitute the delivery of a deed as an escrow, but the facts and surrounding circumstances may be looked at to see whether such was the intention of the parties. On a sale of land the deed and mortgage back for the unpaid purchase money were executed resp ctively by the vendor and purchaser at one X.'s, and left with him until their respective wives should come in and bar their dower; but there was nothing to shew that the instruments were to have no operation until the dower should be barred, nor until a good title was shewn, nothing having been said at the time as to title, whilst it appeared that the defendant, the purchaser, had been for years in possession of the land, had made a payment on the mortgage, which was indorsed thereon, and used the deed in endeavouring to raise money on the land; and it also appeared that the covenants in the deed were sufficient to protect the purchaser against any claim for dower or against certain incumbrances afterwards discovered: -Held, that there was nothing to justify the inference that the instruments were delivered as escrows until the dower should be barred or a good title shewn. O'Connor v. Beaty, 27 C. P. 203.

Conveyance of Land — Contradictory Evidence. —The jury having found that a deed by father to son had been absolutely delivered, although the father asserted the delivery to have been as an escrow only: —Held, that the evidence, set out in the case, supported their verdict. Young v. Hubbs, 15 U. C. R. 250.

Conveyance of Land—When Operatice.]
—Plaintiff was defendant's tenant of premises in Toronto, for which rent was in arrear to the amount of S145-S3. Defendant sold the premises to the Crown. The deed, darted 23rd October, 1872, was delivered by F, the agent at Toronto of the minister of justice, to M, the agent of the defendant, on the 15th November, for execution. On the 16th it was exceuted, and was by M, handed to F, as an escrow, to become a deed when the money was poid. The deed was returned to F. on the 26th November, and he registered it on the 29th, but the money was not paid till the 7th December, Defendant having distrained on the plaintiff for rent on the 29th Novembert—Held, that the deed did not become operative from its original delivery by relation back, in which case defendant would have had no reversionary interest at the time of the distress, but from the payment of the purchase money only. Oliver v. Mowat, 34 U. C. R. 470.

Covenant—Surety—Execution on Condition.]—Declaration on a covenant by defendant as surety for the payment of rent by one B. Plea, on equitable grounds, that the defendant executed on the understanding and representation, that Y. K. & E. should also execute, and that he should be responsible with them and not solely; and that it was represented to him by B. and by the said k. that inmediately after defendant's execution, the other three would execute. It was then alleged that they never did execute, and before any breach and with all due diligence, he gave notice to the plaintiffs of the premises; and that he claimed to have been released by such non-execution. There was also a plea of non est factum:—Held, that the defence was admissible under this plea, as shewing in substance that defendant executed the deed conditionally only, and as an escrow. County of Huron v. Armstrong, 27 U. C. R. 533.

Covenat—Surcty—Execution on Condition—Ratification,—To an action against V, & G, on their covenant as surcties for the payment of rent by lessees, V, pleaded that the agreement was drawn up to be signed by one C, as his co-surcty, and delivered by him as an escrow, until C, should execute, which C, afterwards refused to do, and that the plaintiff then, without V's consent, crased C's name and inserted that of the other defendant. The plaintiff replied that after both the defendants had executed, V, ratified the agreement and accepted the other defendant as his co-surety. There was contradictory evidence as to the ratification, but the subscribing witness swore that V, executed without any condition; C's name having been previously erased. The other defendant said he signed at V's request; and it was proved that V had told others he was responsible for the signed at the defendant had him by for years, leaving the plaintiff to believe and telling others that he was bound, a verdict for the plaintiff was upheld. Henderson v, Vermilyea, 27 U. C. R. 544.

Insurance Policy.] — See Confederation Life Association v. O'Donnell, 10 S. C. R. 92, 13 S. C. R. 218.

Mortgage — Discharge of Prior Mortgages, I—To a declaration on a covenant for quiet enjoyment in a mortgage to the plaintiffs (appellants), executed by T., the defendants grantee, R., one of the defendants (the respondent), pleaded that T. did not, after the making of that deed, convey to the plaintiffs. The deed from defendants to T. was dated 22nd June, 1855, and the mortgage from T. to the plaintiffs was dated 10th April, 1855. Both were registered on the 28th July.

1835—the deed first. It appeared there were two mortgages from T. to the plaintiffs on another lot when this mortgage was made, and instead of which it was given. After executing this mortgage, T. found that a deed from the defendants to him was necessary to give he legal title, and he got the deed in question. The two mortgages were not discharged until the 16th October, 1845;—Held, on appear affirming the judgment in 32° U. C. R. 2223, and reversing the judgment of the court of appeal, 1 A. R. 26—that the whole transaction shewed that the mortgage was not intended to take effect until the perfecting of T's title and the discharge of the other mortgages for which it was given, and that the plaintiffs therefore could recover. Held, also, per Strong, J., the chief justice concurring), that, assuming the deed of the 10th April to have been a completed instrument from its date, the usual covenant contained in it, that the grantor was seized in fee at the date of the deed, created an estoppel, and that the estoppel was fed by the estate T. acquired by deed of the 22md June, 1855.—Henry J., dissenting, Trust and Loan Co., v. Ruttan, 1 S. C. R. 594.

V. EXECUTION AND DELIVERY.

1. Delivery.

Authority to Deliver-Repudiation.]-Under an agreement for the sale of land, defendant, on the execution to him of the deed thereof and removal of certain prior incumbrances, was to give back a mortgage for the balance of the purchase money. ant by agreement went into possession, and afterwards executed a mortgage and left it with his solicitors, with, as he stated, express instructions not to deliver it over until he was satisfied that all was right and assented to their doing so, and he alleged that without such approval or consent they had filled in the date and delivered it over. In consequence date and delivered it over. In consequence of delay in removal of the incumbrances defendant claimed that the agreement was at an end and quitted possession, repudiating the de-livery of the mortgage as being without his consent. In an action by the plaintiff, assignee of the mortgage, on the covenant to pay signee of the mortgage, on the covenant to pay the mortgage money:—Held, that the evi-dence, set out in the report, shewed that de-fendant was fully cognizant of his solicitors' dealings in the matter, and had authorized their delivering the mortgage whenever they should deem it advisable to do so in defend-ant's interests, which it appeared they had fully protected; and that on the faith of the solicitors' acts the position of the parties was solicitors acts the position of the parties was changed, namely, a conveyance executed vest-ing the title in defendant and incumbrances removed, all of which took place before de-fendant quitted possession. The plaintiff was therefore held entitled to recover. Leys v. Hollingshead, 29 C. P. 66.

Date of Delivery.]—A deed will be assumed to have been delivered on the day it bears date. Hayward v. Thacker, 31 U. C. R. 427.

Date of Delivery—Re-execution.]—The plaintiff, by lease, consisting of seven sheets, and bearing date the 15th March, 1862, demised certain premises to W. On the 21st July following, this lease was uncelled by an instrument under seal; the seed and fourth sheets were taken out and replaced by others, and it was re-executed and redelivered without any other alteration. As it then stood it was dated as before, to hold "from the 1st day of April now next," for nine years "from thence next ensuing," at a yearly rent, payable "in advance, that is to say, on 1st April, 1862, and on the 1st April in each year during the term;" the conclusion being that the parties had thereunto set their hands and seals, "the day and year first above written;"—Held, that the lease took effect from the delivery, on the 21st July, 1862, not the date; that the term began on the 1st April, 1863; that the first year's rent, payable "in advance," was not due until that day, the words, "that is to say, on the 1st April, 1882," being merely falsa demonstratio. Bell 1892," being merely falsa demonstratio. Bell v. McKindey, 23 U. C. R. 162.

Held, affirming the judgment in the last

Held, affirming the judgment in the last case, that the lease spoke from the day of reexecution, not from its date; and that the provisions of the lease, in connection with the surrounding circumstances, did not afford sufficient evidence of a contrary intention to justify a different construction. Bell v. McKindsen, 3 E. & A. 9.

Promise to Deliver.]—A promise to deliver a conveyance includes a promise to execute it. Whittier v. McLennan, 13 U. C. R. 638.

What Constitutes—Affidavit of Execution.]—One M. prepared a deed of land which purported to be executed in plaintiff's favour and delivered by him, and requested one C.
to witness his execution of it, which C. did.
He procured C. to swear to the affidavit of execution for registry. Subsequently, in a moment of anger against plaintiff, he tore up the deed, the pieces of which plaintiff collected and stitched together:—Held, that the deed was executed and delivered, so as to vest the land in plaintiff. McDonald v. McDonald, 44 U. C. R. 291. See, however, S. C., 23 C.
L. J. 102.

What Constitutes—Inwance Policy.]—A suit was brought in this court against an insurance company to recover for loss sustained, on the ground that the policy was not a perfected one, and therefore that the plaintiff had no remedy at law, but the allegations in the bill were that the policy had been duly signed by the president and secretary, and countersigned by the agent at I. (the place where the insurance was effected) and was ready to be delivered to the plaintiff:—Held, that these allegations must be taken in law to include a delivery of the policy, although it had not actually reached the plaintiff's hands; and on this ground a demurrer for want of equity was allowed. McFarlane v. Andes Insurance Co., 20 Gr. 486.

of Marta Constitutes—Registration—Death of Mortgagor, |—A mortgage in favour of persons in Europe was executed in this country, and left in the hands of the attorney who prepared the security, with directions from the mortgagor not to register it until further orders. After the death of the mortgagor, the mortgage was delivered up to the agent of the mortgages, who had the same registered:—Held, that there had been a sufficient delivery during the lifetime of the mortgagor, and that a person who entered into partnership with the mortgagor, and thereby acquired an interest in the mortgage estate, with a knowledge of the circumstances attending the execution of the mortgage, did so subject to the claim of the mortgagees. Mackechnie v. Mackechnie, 7 Gr. 23.

What Constitutes—Registration—Ignorance of Grantee.]—See Muir v. Dunnet, 11 Gr. 85.

What Constitutes—Retention by Grantor—Presumption—Rebuttal.]—The fact that a deed, after it has been signed and sealed by the grantor, is retained in the latter's possession, is not sufficient evidence that it was never so delivered as to take effect as a duly executed instrument. The evidence in favour of the due execution of such a deed is not rebutted by the facts that it compromised all the grantor's property, and that while it professed to dispose of such property immediately, the grantor retained the possession and enjoyment of it until his death. Zwicker v. Zwicker, 29 S. C. R., 527.

What Constitutes—Time.]—In a bond for a deed, where the condition required that a deed should be "executed and delivered" before a certain day:—Held, that the due execution of the deed before the day and forwarding it to a third party for the obligee, though it was not received until after the day, was a sufficient delivery under the terms of the bond. Muirhead v. McDongall, 5 O. S. 642.

2. Execution by Illiterate Persons.

Misreading.] — Where the subscribing witness swore that the agreement was not read as it stood upon the record:—Held, no execution. Hutton v. Fish, S.U. C. R. 177.

Omission to Read.]—A deed executed by a person making his mark is not invalidated by the mere omission to read it over to him. Doe d. Biggard v. Millard, E. T. 3 Viet.

Where a blind and illiterate person, an Indian, had been induced to put his mark to a chattel mortgage without its being read over to him, although he desired such reading:—Held, not a sufficient execution. Onens v. Thomas, 6 C. P. 383.

See Powell v. Watters, 28 S. C. R. 133.

3. Parties.

Agreement — Executing Parties not Named.]—The agreement sued on was headed "specification of school-house in school section No. 4. Tilbury East." Then followed in detail the size of the building, and the work and material to be employed, and it concluded: "The whole to be of good material, and to be finished in a good workmanlike manner, and to be finished on the 1st July, 1873. In consideration the parties of the first part agree to pay the party of the second part the sum of $708, one-half on the 15th May, and the other half when the said school-house is completed." Then followed the signatures of the three trustees, with their corporate seal, and the signature of the plantiff. It bore no date, but was proved to have been executed by the parties about the 1st March, 1873. It referred to no plan, but the trustees furnished the plaintiff with a plan to work by, and they paid to him $400 on account. They refused to pay the balance, or to accept the building, alleging that it was not properly constructed, but the learned Queen's counsel who tried the case without a jury, found for the plaintiff for the balance of the $708:—Held, that it was sufficiently clear from the instrument itself, and the acts of the parties, that defendats were the parties covenanting with the plaintiff, and that the instrument was intended so to operate; and the verdict was upheld, Coghlon v. Tilbury East School Trustees, 35 1. C. R. 575.

Bar of Dower — Executing Party not Named, 1—A husband by deed aliens land, and the wife, though not named in the commencement as a formal party, in the body of it releases her dower, and both execute it:—
Held, a sufficient bar of dower. Bonter v. Morthcote, 20 C. P. 76.

Conveyance by Wife — Non-joinder of Husband.]—See Hartley v. Maycock, 28 O. R. 508.

Conveyance of Land — Execution by Agent of Grantee — Surplusage,]— In ejectment a deed under which the plaintiff claimed was stated to be an indenture made at Quebec, in Lower Canada, between G., of the one part, and "H. accepting hereof for and on behalf of" T., of the other part. The consideration was declared to have been paid by T., and the grant of the land was to him, as was also the habendum. The covenants, including one for further assurance, were also made with T. The deed, however, was signed by G. and H.:—Held, that in order to give effect to the deed in every particular according to the plain intent of the parties, the words, "H. accepting hereof for and on behalf of," must be struck out as surplusage and regunant to the rest of the deed, and thereby the whole conveyance was made operative as a conveyance to T., the signature of H. to the deed being of no consequence, not being necessary in the conveyance. Held, also, that in any event the plaintiff must recover, for, even if the deed could not be sustained in law as conveying a perfect title to T., it would be deemed to be a license to T. to enter upon the land, and he claiming it as his own had sold to a purchaser from whom a good possessory title was shewn. Elliott v. Douglas, 30 C. P. 308.

Indenture of Apprenticeship—Execution by Father of Apprentice.]—By deed between A. B. and C. D., father and son, of the one part, and E. F. and G. H., partners, coach builders, of the other part, the son, with the consent of his father, bound himself apprentice to the coach builders, The instrument contained this clause: "And lastly, for true and faithful performance, &c., the said A. B., C. D., and E. F. and G. H., do bind themselves unto each other in the sum of, "&c.,—Held, in the coach other in the sum of, "&c.,—Held, in the coach other in the sum of, "&c.,—Held, in the coach other in the sum of, "&c.,—Held, in the coach of the intervention of the coach other in the sum of, "&c.,—Held, in the coach other in the plaintif; that the words "unto each other" did not mean separately and individually, but that each party respectively, i.e., E. F. and G. H. jointly to A. B. and C. D. jointly, became jointly bound to the other; and that there was therefore a non-joinder of plaintiffs, Quære, the sufficiency of the declaration as given in the report. Connell v. Owen, 3 C. P. 249

Mortgage—Executing Party Not Named.]
—See Foster v. Beall, 15 Gr. 244.

4. Scal.

Omission of Seal—Bond.]—Defence to an action on a bond against survives that the bond when executed had no seals. See Marshall v. Municipality of Shelburne, 14 S. C. B. 787.

Omission of Seal—Insurance Policy.]—The defendants' Act of incorporation provided that "all policies shall " he signed " and being so signed and countersigned and under the seal of the company, shall be deemed valid and binding upon them." The policy sued on was issued by the company without the corporate seal being affixed, although the attestation clause stated that the company had thereunto affixed its seal:—Held, affirming the judgment in 20 C. P. 221, that the policy was a valid contract to grant an insurance. Wright v. San Mutual Life Ins. Co. 5. A. R. 218. Affirmed, London Life Ins. Co. v. Wright, 5. S. C. R. 466.

Pleading—Setting out Deed—Oyer—"L. S." Need Not be Inserted.]—See Moffat v. Loucks, Tay. 305.

What Constitutes "Sealing."]—A circular flourish with the word "seal." inscribed, is not a legal seal. Nagle v. Kilts, Tay. 269.

Semble, there is no absolute necessity to put the hand on a seal in executing, or make any declaration of delivery. Hatton v. Fish, 8 U. C. R. 177.

Defendant had signed the deed, and afterwards merely marked the paper with the end of a poker, opposite to his name, not even acknowledging the mark as his seal:—Held, not a sealed instrument. Clement v. Donaldson, 9 U. C. R. 299.

Where a seal is set opposite to the name of the party signing, the document must be treated as under seal, although the testatum is, "I hereby subscribe myself." Whittier v. McLennan, 13 U. C. R. 638.

Semble, that an impression upon the paper, without wax or any extraneous substance, is a sufficient seal. Foster v. Geddes, 14 U. C. R. 239.

Defendants, having signed a bond, left in a hurry, without having it properly sealed, which was afterwards done, but it was clear they knew it to be a bond, and it was stated on the face of it to be under seal. The jury having found against the defence that the bond was not sealed, the court refused to interfere, holding it not one to be favoured. Mutual Fire Insurance Co. of Prescott v. Palmer, 20 U. C. R. 441.

A deed had been duly signed by the parties; but, instead of any wax or wafer being affixed thereto for seals, slits had been cut in the parchment, and a ribbon woven through, so as to appear on the face of the document at intervals, opposite one of which each of the parties to the deed signed:—Held. a seal. Hamilton v. Dennis, 12 Gr. 325. Affirmed by the court of error and appeal, 14th March, 1867.

The covenur on the back of a mortgage had no seal on it when produced at the trial, but there was a mark of where the seal had been, and the witness to its execution swore he had put a seal on it before execution. It was contended on defendant's part that the covenant was invalid, not being proved to be under seal. The point being left to the jury, and they having found for the plaintiff, the court considered the evidence sufficient to support the finding. Stewart V, Clark, 13 C. P. 203.

Held, that where one of two partners signed in the name of both in the presence of the other, and for him, with his assent, though there was but one seal, it was the deed of both. Moore v. Boyd, 15 C. P. 513, 23 U. C. R, 459.

The testimonium clause in a power of attorney declared that the principal set his hand and seal to the instrument. The attestation clause declared that it was signed and sealed in the presence of a subscribing witness, and opposite the signature of the principal was a visible impression made by the pen in the form of a scroll, in which was insertibed the word "seal:"—Held, a sufficient sealing of the document, Re Bell and Black, 1 O, 13, 125.

5. Other Cases.

Blanks—Evidence of Bond of Surctyship to Crown Being Executed in Blank—Estoppel of Defendant from Denying Execution.]—See Regina v. Chesley, 16 S. C. R. 306.

Blanks—Filling in after Execution—4.u-thority—Attorney 1—The Crown, in 1798, granted 5,000 acros, including the land in question to J. H. and E. H. and three others. In 1890 E. H. became a num in Montreal, by which, according to the law of Lower Canada, she became civily dead as regarded her property. And the according to the law of Lower Canada, she became civily dead as regarded her property. And the according to the law of Lower Canada, she became civily dead as regarded her property. And the law of Lower Canada, she had the law of Lower Canada, she had the law of Lower Canada, she had the law of the lands mentioned in the above patent," "containing in all five thousand acres," to his brother-in-law, M., the husband of one of the patentees. This deed was executed in Indiana, and was expressed to be in consideration of natural love and affection, and of 81 paid. When executed, the words "fourth" and "five thousand" were omitted, but attached to the deed was a letter of the same date, signed by the granter, and addressed to M., in which he mentioned these blanks, and told M. to fill them up according to the fact; adding in a postscript, that if any errors should be found in the deed, he authorized M. to rectify them, and that such corrections should be valid as if he had made them himself. The words "fourth" and "five thousand" were inserted after M. received the deed in Lower Canada. On the 9th January, 1805, M. and his wife, A., and J. H. L. by deed recting the patent, conveyed to R. and D. 2,000 acres, parcel of the 5,000 granted, "being the undivided part and portion of the said 5,000 acres belonging under and by virtue of the said letters patent to J.

II. and A. M." This deed was executed by M. and his wife, and by J. H., by his attorney M., but there was no evidence of any power of attorney to M. The plaintiff claimed under these conveyances; defendant under a deed from the heir-at-law of J. H. — Held, that by the deed of 1894 J. H.'s share passed to M., the consideration being sufficient, and the insertion of the words mentioned not being fatal under the circumstances. 2. That the conveyance of 1805 passed his share as belonging to M., though the execution by M., as his attorney, could have no effect for want of authority. Stuart v. Prentiss, 20 U. C. R. 513.

Blanks—Filling in after Execution—Au-thority, 1—A debtor, on going away to raise funds to pay his debts, signed and scaled a printed form of mortgage upon certain lands, without inserting either the name of himself or the mortgage therein; his wife also executed it, and he locked it up in his desk. From Halifax he wrote to his agent in Upper Canada instructing him to ill up the blanks as he should find necessary, which was accordingly done, and handed over to the mortgage;—Held, that this was a sufficient execution of the mortgage; and that it was valid. Bank of Montreal v. Baker, 9 Gr. 97.

Held, affirming this decision, that whether the deed there mentioned as having been executed in blank operated as a deed, or as a mere parel agreement, it created a charge upon the equitable estate of the debtor; and that a registered judgment creditor, having notice thereof before the registration of his judgment, would be bound thereby. Bank of Montreal v. Baker, 9 Gr. 298.

Compelling Execution.]—An application for an order to compel a party to execute a deed directed to be executed, should be on notice, and will not be granted ex parte. Westmacot v. Cockerline, 2 Ch. Ch. 442.

Compelling Execution — Volunteer']—
The court will not, in favour of a volunteer, order the due execution of an instrument informally executed, although the relief would be granted to a purchaser for value. Ross v. Fox. 13 Gr. 683.

Compelling Proof of Execution.]—A mandamus will lie to compel a witness to prove the execution of a deed and memorial for registry. Regina v. O'Meara, 15 U. C. R. 201.

Composition and Discharge - Execution by Insolvent after Filing—Alteration— Perfecting. 1—G. & Co. having made an assignment on the 4th July, 1868, a deed of com-position and discharge, dated 8th August, was filed on the 14th September, 1868, not being then signed by the insolvents. It was confirmed by the county Judge on the 2nd December, 1868, but the confirmation was reversed in this court in March following, on the ground that the insolvents had not executed it. Afterwards in the same month the insolvents executed the deed, without any previous leave from the Judge, and without refiling it; and they then set it up as a defence to this action previously brought on a Held, per Richards, C.J., that the deed was invalid, because not properly executed by the insolvents, Per Wilson, J., that such execution was not an alteration of the deed, for the insolvents, being named in and parties to the deed, were only perfecting, not altering, it by executing; but the deposit of such deed with and notice thereof by the assignee, under s. 9, s.-s. 2, of the Act of 1864, were necessary after the execution by the insolvents, and for want of this, it was ineffectual:—Held, also, that it was no objection that some of the assenting creditors had executed in the name of their firms and by procuration, and that no power of attorney was proved, for they had accepted the composition under it. Allan v. Garratt, 30 U. C.

Date of Execution — Operation — Presumption.]—A convexance of land, dated 27th March, 1824, was to hold to the grantee from the 30th day of the same month until the day of her decease:—Held, that though it might, if executed and livery of seisin given on the day it bore date, be void, yet if not executed or livery of seisin not given until after the day on which it was to begin to operate, it would be good; and that, under the facts stated in the case, the jury might properly have been asked to presume one or both of these propositions in favour of the grantee. Notan v. Fox. 15 C. P. 565.

Defect in Form — Quebec Law.] — See Powell v. Watters, 28 S. C. R. 133.

Executors—Signature.] — Executors empowered under a will to sell lands, are not bound to sign the deed in presence of each other, as arbitrators executing an award. Little v. Aikman, 28 U. C. R. 337.

Partnership — Execution by one Partners, —Upon an application under 29 & 30 Vict. c. 45 for the discharge of a prisoner committed under the Apprentices and Minors' Act for disobedience to his masters, on the ground, inter alia, that the indenture of apprenticeship was not a binding contract, it having been executed by one only of the employers, in the name of the irm:—Held, that it was binding at all events upon the apprentice and the partner who had signed it, and there was nothing to she that his co-partners had not been present assented to the execution. Region v. ½ angy, 5 P. R. 438.

Pleading—Non ext Factum.]—In order to except to the execution of a deed, the defendant should plead non est factum; he should not demur. Burns v. Robertson, S U. C. R. 280

Power of Attorney.]—A prior deed, through which the title comes to the vendor, having been executed by the attorney of the grantor, does not render the title invalid, or such as a purchaser will not be bound to accept. Farrell v. Moore, 1 Ch. Ch. 139.

Power of Attorney—Attorney Made Grantor.]—A. received from B. a power of attorney to sell lands. Under the power A. delivered to C. a deed professing to be made as follows:—"Between A., by and under power of attorney, bearing date, &c., by and from one B., &c., recoman, of the first part, and C., of the other part." Throughout the deed, A., the party of the first part, was made the grantor, and the deed was thus executed:

Signed A. [L.S.], signed C. [L.S.]: — Held, that B.'s interest did not pass by the deed. Semble, that, even if B. had been made the granting party, the deed would have been in-operative from the informal mode of execution. Dacksteder v. Baird, 5 U. C. R. 591.

Ratification of Execution — Presumption from Presence at — Acquiescence.] — See Powell v. Watters, 28 S. C. R. 133.

Sheriff's Sale—Inoperative Deed—Power to Execute Another.]—'The sheriff having, in 1839, put up and sold part of a certain tract of land, by mistake conveyed the whole, describing it in such terms that on the face of the deed no parcel could be distinguished from the rest, and allowed to pass alone: —Held, that he must be considered in the same light with any other person having a power to execute: that he could not be regarded as functus officio by the execution of the first deed, which was wholly inoperative and void; and that he might therefore, in 1849, make a deed of the part actually sold. Quere, whether, in this case, the debtor having a title to all the land conveyed, if the part sold had been separately described and divisible from the part not sold on the face of the deed, it could have passed alone under such circumstances, though case might be otherwise if the mistake had arisen from including land not owned by the debtor. Queere, also, whether the proper course would not have been to apply to the court to set aside what had been done under the execution. Doe d. Tiffany v. Miller, 10 U.

Signature.]—Signing is not essential to a deed, but should never be dispensed with. Judge v. Thomson, 20 U. C. R. 523.

Signature — Partnership,]—Defendants, B, and A., being in partnership, agreed under seal to buy a quantity of tobacco, B, signing the name of defendants' firm opposite to one seal, Quaere, whether one or both defendants could be held liable upon the deed. Moor v. Boyd, 23 U. C. R. 459.

Signature — "Signed" — Copy.] — The word "signed" before the lessor's name to a lease, raises no presumption that the instrument is a copy, not the original. Becher v. Woods, 16 C. P. 29.

Stamps.] — Deeds executed in England, conveying land in this Province, do not require to be stamped under the provisions of the English Stamp Acts, but are valid in this Province though unstamped. Murray v. Van-Brocklin, 1 Ch. Ch. 300.

Unincorporated Body.] — Where four persons, described not by their own names and personal descriptions, but as a collective body, not shewn to be corporate, signed and sealed a deed with their own names and seals, they were heid to be individually bound. Cullen v. Nickerson, 10 C. P. 549.

2. Agreements under Seal.

Conflict of Verbal Evidence.]—Reformation of agreement for renewal lease by inserting a provision for reference to arbitration as to the terms. The evidence as to mistake in omitting such provision being chiefly the verbal testimony of defendant, which the plaintiff denied:—Held, that the agreement clearly could not be reformed. Dawson v. Grotham, 41 U. C. R. 532.

Meaning of Words-" Contract Price."] E. contracted with the plaintiffs for the manufacture by him into logs of all the pine timber on a certain timber limit owned by the plaintiffs, during a period of six years from 1st October, 1867, for an aggregate sum of money equal to the sum of $1.29 for every standard log delivered and accepted, the plaintiffs advancing to E. "three-fourths thereof as the work progressed, and the balance on delivery of the logs, namely, for each and every log accepted and delivered as above mentioned, and cut on any lots numbered * * the sum and cut on any lots numbered " the sum of $1.129; for similar logs cut on any of the lots numbered " the sum of $1; for similar logs cut on any of the lots numbered " the sum of $1.50; for similar logs cut on the remaining lots of the said limit the sum of $1.20; and the balance, if any, on the completion of this contract. And should it be found that the aggregate of the said advances will amount to more than $1.29 for each standard log, then the parties of the second part (the plaintiffs) shall be at liberty to reduce their advances by such excess, so that on completion of the contract they shall not have advanced and paid * * more than the said sum of $1.29 for each such standard saw E, entered upon the task of carrying out the contract, and worked for two years thereunder, when he died intestate, and letters of administration were, by his father, obtained to his estate; an arrangement having in the meantime been entered into between the plaintiffs and the father, whereby the were to assume all the debts and liabilities of E. incurred in connection with the contract, and account for the value of the logs got out by the deceased "at the contract price." In a suit brought by the administrator against the present plaintiffs, he claimed and recov-ered judgment for $1,880.54, being the balance remaining due to the intestate's estate, computing the price of the saw logs at $1.29 each, which the court of common pleas determined was the sum properly chargeable under the agreement. The plaintiffs, insisting that the words "contract price" meant the sum of $1, 81.12½, and $1.50, according to the section from which the logs were obtained, filed a bill in chancery, seeking to have their agreement with the administrator varied in this respect, and obtained a decree for that purpose, although the administrator swore that he had never entered into such an agreement. On appeal to the court of appeal, that decree was reversed with costs; and the bill ordered to be dismissed with costs. Campbell v. Edwards, 24 Gr. 152

Mistake—Omission of Proviso.] — Defendant applied to the plaintiffs to purchase from them 10,000 barrels of crude petroleum oil, for exportation; and the plaintiffs, at a meeting of their board at which defendant was present, passed a resolution accepting defendant's application for the purchase of said oil for exportation, and that he was not to offer any possible to the provided of the provided provided refined oil for sale up to 15th July, 1877, provided the London Oil Refining Company should make an arrangement with the plaintiffs and continue their monopoly till that date: this proviso being added at defendant's stance. An agreement under seal was then drawn up and executed by the parties, containing a stated sum as liquidated damages for a breach thereof, but omitting the above proviso. The president of the plaintiff company said, but the defendant denied, that he told the defendant at the meeting that the contract must be absolute, and that he, the president, must be absolute, and that he, he present, would not have signed it otherwise. He in-structed the plaintiffs' solicitor to draw it without the proviso, and the defendant so ex-ceuted it, believing, as he swore, that it con-tained the proviso, his attention not having tained the proviso, his attention not been specially called to the omission. Afterwards the arrangement which had been made with the London Oil Refining Company was put an end to, and the monopoly ceased to exist. In an action by the plaintiffs to recover the said damages for breach of the agreement, in selling crude and refined oil in the Dominion:-Held, upon the above facts, and upon the evidence set out in the report, that they could not recover; that the resolution, which had not been rescinded by any corporate act of the plaintiffs, must govern; that the defendant should have been informed of the omission; and that the defendant was entitled to have the instrument reformed by inserting the condition. Petrolia Crude Oil and Tanking Co. v. Englehart, 29 C. P. 157.

Non-existence of Part of Subject-matter.]—On the separation of three town-ships into two municipalities, the two corporations executed an instrument whereby the one agreed to pay to the other a certain sum as soon as certain non-resident rates therefore imposed should become available. It was subsequently discovered that these rates had been illegally imposed, and that the supposed fund would never be available; and its supposed existence had been an element in determining the amount to be paid:—Held, on rehearing, that the corporation was not entitled to have the agreement altered so as to make the money payable by the other absolutely. Township of Arran v., Townships of Amabel and Albemarle, 17 Gr., 163, Sec S. C., 15 Gr., 701.

3. Conveyances of Land.

Confirmation Deed—Material Error.]—Where there was a material error in a confirmation deed of land sold with the sanction of the court under C. S. U. Grant to Non-existent Party. —In one of the conveyances in the chain of title, the grant was to the party of the third part, whereas there were only two parties to the conveyance, and the party of the second part did not execute it: — Held, that this was a valid objection, though the instrument would be at once corrected or reformed as against the grantors; or could be cured by another conveyance drawn with proper certainty. Re Clarke and Chamberlain, 18 O. R. 270.

Limitation of Covenant.|—Held, that the evidence set out in the report of this case shewed that the agreement of the parties was that the plaintiff should have a deed with covenants as distinguished from a quit claim deed, and that it was through the mistake of all the parties that the covenant, as framed, was entered into, and that the deed should be accordingly reformed by limiting the covenant to the grantor's own acts in the usual form. McKay v. McKay, 31 C. P. 1.

Omission of Covenant. | - In an action against the defendant for unpaid purchase money on the sale of land, the deed thereof, as well as the receipt indorsed thereon, ac knowledged the payment; but in an equitable as also at the trial, the defendant admitted the non-payment thereof, but claimed that he was not liable to pay it because the plaintiff had agreed at the time of the sale, on the faith of which agreement the defendant purchased, to pay off a prior incumbrance, and that a covenant to that effect had been omitted by mistake; that the same had not been paid off by the plaintiff, but had been paid by the defendant; and the defendant prayed that the deed might be reformed by the sertion in the deed of such covenant: Held, that, notwithstanding the receipt under seal, the court could entertain the plaintiff" claim as an equitable demand under s. 2 of the A. J. Act of 1873; but that the evidence, set out in the report, failed to establish the agreement relied on. Parkinson v. Clendinning, 29 C. P. 13.

Omission of Part of Land - Belief of Grantor.] — The plaintiff was entitled to a conveyance from defendant of half a lot of 160 acres; defendant wished to give 50 acres A friend of both, aware of their mutual rights, was requested by the plaintiff to obtain the deed as claimed by him; he procured the defendant to execute a deed which conveyed 50 acres only, and which the defendant executed in that belief, as this person knew; but he thought that it really conveyed the half lot or the 80 acres, to which the plaintiff was entitled. He took the deed to the plaintiff, telling him that it conveyed the 80 acres, on which the plaintiff accepted the deed. The plaintiff was not then aware of the different belief which the defendant had in signing it :- Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to have the deed corrected, and made to embrace the 80 acres. McDonald v. Ferguson, 17 Gr. 652.

Omission of Part of Land—Trust Deed.]—A deed of trust was executed by a debtor, and by a mistake in setting out the metes and bounds a portion of the property intended to be conveyed was omitted; subsequently to which a creditor obtained and registered a judgment against the debtor:— Held, that the assignees in trust were entitled to have the mistake rectified, and that the lien of the judgment creditor did not attach upon the land. McMaster v. Phipps, 5 Gr. 253.

Omission of Provisions. —In an action to restrain waste it was shewn that the plaintiff obtained from his father a deed of the premises in question, the father swearing that he supposed when executing the document that it was his will be was making; the conveyancer who prepared the deed admitted in his evidence that he might have suggested to the subscribing witness to the deed not to talk too much to the old man about the writing, as perhaps he would not sign it; and the deed as prepared was silent altogether as to certain provisions and payments that were to be made as alleged by the plaintiff. The court reversed the decree of the court below 6 0 R. 1411, directing the deed to be reformed; and ordered the bill to be dismissed with costs and the deed to be delivered up to be cancelled. Dunlop v. Dunlop, 10 A. R. 670.

Omission of Words of Inheritance,] —Held, in this case, that, although equity has ample powers to supply words of inheritance in a deed, no case was established for the reformation of the deed in question. Trust and Loan Co, v. Clarke, 3 A. R. 429.

Omission of Words of Transfer.]—Where there was a contract for the sale of a reversion, and the deed purported to relinquish and quit claim the property, with no other words of transfer, the court held that, in order to remove any doubt, the vendee was entitled to have proper technical words introduced. Volter v. Shaw, 19 Gr. 599.

Quit Claim Deed - No Consideration -Purchaser for Value—Equities.]—The defendant, a man of weak intellect, was fraudulently induced to execute a quit claim deed of certain land to which he was entitled as heir-at-law, out no consideration was given for such deed, The land was afterwards conveyed to plaintiffs in these suits, for valuable consideration. After the lapse of more than fifteen years, the defendant brought ejectment against the plainstiffs, and it was decided that the legal title had not passed by the deed executed by him. The plaintiffs thereupon instituted proceedings in the court of chancery to reform the deed executed by defendant, or, treating it as a contract only, for a specific performance thereof: -Held, that, though the plaintiffs had equities as purchasers for value, yet the defendant had an equity to set aside the deed he was deceived into executing; and that his equity being the elder, and having the legal title in his favour, the court could not interfere to give the plaintiffs relief. 2. That though the laches and acquiescence of the defendant for so long a period, might be a reason for refusing him relief, were he a plaintiff, still they were no ground for granting the plaintiffs the relief sought; and the court dismissed the bill with costs. Livingstone v. Acre, 15 Gr. 610.

Substitution of Proper Words of Inheritance.)—A deed executed in Lower Canada conveyed certain lands situate in Upper Canada to parties "and their successors." which words it was proved would convey the fee simple according to the law of Lower Canada, and it was shewn that the grantor's intention was to convey the lands absolutely. The court ordered the devisee of the grantor to execute a release of the lands according to the law of Upper Canada. Allan v. Thorne, 3 Gr. 645.

Voluntary Deed — Estate in Fee instead Life Estate. |—By a deed of gift from a father to his daughter it was intended to convey a life estate to the daughter with remainder, to her issue, but, through the want of skill of the person preparing the deed, the same conveyed the fee simple to the daughter, whose interest was afterwards sold under ex-ecution, the sheriff at the time of sale distinctly stating in the presence and hearing of the purchaser that the interest he was selling was only an estate for life of the defendant in The purchaser afterwards claimed the fee in the lands under the terms of the deed of gift and the conveyance from the sheriff: whereupon, and upwards of fifteen years after the sheriff's sale, a bill was filed by the children of the daughter, seeking to have both the deeds rectified in accordance with the true intention of the grantor, to which the defend ant demurred on the ground that the plaintiffs had not shewn any interest in the land :-Held, that the plaintiffs, though volunteers, had such an interest as entitled them to have the deeds rectified; and that their delay in filing the bill was not such as should deprive them of their right to relief. To such a bill it was considered that the grantor in the deed of gift was not a necessary party, but that the grantee must be made a party, as she had a right to insist that the deed had been correctly drawn, and the defendant had a right to have her before the court in order to protect him from another suit. Calvert v. Linley, 21 Gr. 470.

Whole of Lot instead of Part—Purchaver for Valve—Representation—Estoppel.]—The trial Judge found that in a conveyance by a deceased person to one S, and in all the subsequent transactions and conveyances, there had been, without deceit or fraud on either side, but from accident and ignorance, mutual mistake in designating the land as the whole of lot 7 instead of a part thereof, and he gave judgment declaring that the defendant was entitled only to such portion as was intended to be conveyed:—Held, reversing the judgment, that the evidence was not satisfactory or conclusive. Dominion Loan Society v. Darling, 5 A. R. 577, followed. Held, also, that the defendant was entitled to the benefit of his grantor's position as purchaser and registered owner for value, and was not estopped by a representation made by him to the plantiff. Ferguson v. Winsor, 10 O. R. 13, 11 O. R. 88.

4. Leases.

Omission of Proviso—Evidence.]—The lessee set up an agreement between himselt and the lesses that the lesses should expire at her death, in case she should not live for the full term of ten years, and asked that the lease should be reformed necordingly. The only evidence in support of this was that of the lessee and his wife, and of a relation of theirs, whose memory was shewn to be untrustworthy:—Held, that this evidence was not sufficient, after so many years of acquiescence, and after the death of the lesse, to justify the reformation of the lease. Thatter v. Bocumn, 18 O. R. 265.

Proviso as to Manure — Purchaser for Value.]—M., being possessed of certain lands subject to a mortgage, made a lease thereof for a term of years to the plaintiff, which provided, amongst o'her things, that 815 should be expended in the first year of the term in procuring manure for the purposes of the farm. Afterwards be created a mortgage in favour of the defendant, and assigned to him this lease as collateral security. The defendant distrained for rent, and plaintiff replevied the goods seized, asserting that there was no rent due, and proved the payment of certain moneys to the first mortgages, and claimed also credit for 815 a year in respect of manure furnished and expended in each year on the premises, which, at the trial, was proved to have been the true agreement between the landlord and tenant, though not so expressed in the lease; and the lease was ordered to be reformed accordingly:—Held, that the lease should not have been reformed as against defendant, he being a bona fide purchaser for value, without notice of the facts on which the plaintiff's equity rested. Forse v. Socreen, 14 A. R. 482.

Rent — When Payable — Uncertainty, 1—Defendant on the 2nd September, 1872, leased land to the plaintiff for five years from the 1st October, 1872, at the yearly rent of 8230, payable "on the 1st day of October of each year in each and every year" during the continuance of the term, "the first payment of $200 to be made on the 31st December, 1872, in advance, the balance of said year's rent, amounting to 830, to be paid at the same time that the payment for 1873 is to be made." In an action against the defendant for distraining on the 9th October, 1873, for the second year's rent, defendant pleaded the general issue by statute:—Held, that under the Administration of Justice Act, 1873, defendant could have pleaded an equitable plea setting out the facts relied on for altering the lease in accordance with the agreement of the parties; and a verdict for the plaintiff was set aside on payment of costs to enable him to do so. Brown v. Blacket, 35 C. C. R. 239.

5. Mortgages.

Amount—Increase of—Evidence.]—To induce the court to vary a written instrument, on the ground of alleged mistake, the evidence must be of the strongest character. Where, therefore, a bill was filled to rectify an alleged error in a mortgage, by inserting "1225" instead of "1125," and defendants denied any mistake, and the conveyancer who drew the deed swore that he had read over distinctly the written portion of the conveyance, that the mortgage had corrected him as to the time of payment, and that he thought he could not have been understood as reading "two" when he read "one," and it also appeared that the instructions for the mortgage had been given to another person in the absence of the conveyancer, and were read over to the parties at the time, the court dismissed the bill with costs. Williams v. Felker, 7 Gr., 345.

Amount—Proviso for Payment—Wrong Amount—Omission of Redemise Clause—Rescission.]—Defendant applied to the plaintiffs, a money lending company, after being shewn their loan tables, on a form of application provided by the plaintiffs, for a loan of $2,000, payble in twenty years, by quarterly payments, according to the plaintiffs' scale of repayments. This scale shewed the quarterly payment required to repay $1,000 in twenty years to be $20.55, or $53.70 for $2,000, the sum required by defendant. The loan tables had this notice printed on them: - "The loan table is for the inspection of all, rendering borrowers free from the possibility of extor-tion, deception, or fraud, the loan being made at a fixed uniform rate." The application was submitted to the loan committee of the plaintiffs' board of directors and passed, it not being shewn or appearing that the committee was aware of any change from the loan table. A mortgage was afterwards prepared under the directions of the plaintiffs' manager, and signed by the defendant, wherein the quarterly payment was stated to be 857.60 instead of 853.70, and the plaintiffs' manager swore that he told defendant the quarterly payment would be $57.60 when he applied for the loan. This the defendant denied. The mortgage contained no redemise clause. Defendant paid the first quarterly instalment, stating that he thought the amount too much. The second he got a member of the plaintiffs' company to pay The second he for him, telling him, as he said, of the mistake This person, being indebted to defendant, paid the full amount. When the third payment matured, defendant tendered to plaintiffs the correct amount, after crediting himself with the overpayments on the first two instalments This the plaintiffs refused to accept, and brought ejectment, claiming a right to pos-session of the land mortgaged, both by reason of the default in payment of the third instalment, and because there was clause:-Held, that the loan table and defendant's written application referring thereto, accepted by plaintiffs' loan committee, constituted the agreement between the parties, and that the mortgage, notwithstanding the manager's statement that he had told the defendant the amount of the quarterly payment as stated in the mortgage, did not correctly as stated in the mortgage, and not correctly set forth the true agreement, and therefore the defendant was entitled to have it re-formed; and that rectification, and not rescission, was the proper remedy. Held, also, that, notwithstanding the omission of the redemise clause, it sufficiently appeared from the provisions of the mortgage itself and the rules and regulations of the plaintiff company, that it was the intention of the parties that the defendant should retain possession until default, and the plaintiffs should, therefore, be enjoined from disturbing defendant's possesssion until such default. Superior Savings and Loan Society v. Lucas, 44 U. C. R. 106.

An appeal was allowed on the grounds mentioned in the dissenting judgment of Hagarty, C.J., in the court below, viz., that the defendant was entitled to a decree for rescission only, and that a decree for rescission only, and that a decree for rectification of the mertgage was improper, the parties never having been ad idem. 8, C., sub nom. Superior Loan and Savings Co. v. Lucas, 15 A. R.

Amount—Reduction of,]—Before the face of a mortgage is altered by reducing the amount secured, there must be clear evidence by which to act. Fraser v. Locic, 10 Gr. 207.

Dower—Omission to Bur.] — A voluntary deed will not be reformed against the grantor. And where the defendant's husband, having appropriated moneys of a client in his hands for investment, secretly executed in the client's favour, a statutory mortgage not containing a bar of dower, the defendant being a party to and executing the mortgage, and subsequently after her husband's death, paying, with knowledge of the facts, an instalment of interest due under it, an action to reform the mortgage by inserting a proper bar of dower was dismissed, there being no consideration to support a contract by the defendant with the plaintiffs to bar her dower. Bellamy v. Badgeron, 24 O. R. 278.

Exchange of Mortgages—Personal Liability,1—The transaction between the plaintiff and defendant was an exchange of mortgages. The plaintiff in assigning bis mortgage to the defendant, guarded himself against personal liability; but the defendant in assigning her mortgage did not do so, and the plaintiff such her upon the covenant in her assignment, that the mortgage assigned was a good and valid security, alleging that it was not so:—Held, upon the evidence, that the true agreement was that neither the plaintiff nor the defendant should be personally liable in respect of the mortgage which each assigned to the other; and rectification according to such agreement was adjudged. Clarke v, Joselin, 16 O. R. 68.

Inclusion of Land not Intended— Action Against Assignces of Mortgage. |—See Bridges v. Real Estate L. & D. Co., S O. R. 493.

Omission of Part of Land-Buildings.] The owner of a lot of land mortgaged the west half thereof when it was supposed that the east and west halves were divided by a high-Subsequently it was discovered, upon a survey made, that a small portion of the east half was embraced in what was always taken to be the west half only. At the time of the mortgage there was a grist and saw mill under one roof, about one-third of which was on the strip; there were also a tavern, storehouse, barn, and piggery, all on the strip, and the west half and strip had always been occupied as one property by the mortgagor, who delivered up possession of the whole to the agent of the mortgagee. Afterwards the mortgagor sold the east half up to the road; and subsequently, having become bankrupt in the meantime, took a lease of the west half, "with a grist mill, saw mill, tavern, sheds, store," &c., and no mention was made in the bankrupt's schedule of assets of any claim upon this pro-perty. On a bill filed by the holder of the mortgage against the mortgagor's assignee in bankruptcy:—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to have the mortgage rectified, and to a decree of foreclosure for the whole of the property, including this strip; but, under the circumstances, without costs, Davey, 6 Gr. 165.

Omission of Part of Land—Evidence.]

A mortgage may be reformed by inserting additional parcels, on clear parol evidence that the omission was by mutual mistake. Forrester v. Campbell, 17 Gr. 379.

Omission of Part of Land—Evidence.]
—The plaintiffs sought a rectification of the description of the premises covered by a mortgage to them, by including therein the water lots and dock property in front of the lots described in the mortgage. The plaintiffs relied on parol testimony, while the documentary evidence was all in favour of the defendant:—Held, affirming the judgment reported in 27 Gr. 68, that no case was made for a reformation of the mortgage. Dominion Loan Society v. Darling, 5.A. R. 576.

Omission of Part of Land — Insolvency Proceedings.] — In proceedings in insolvency mortgagees claimed to rank upon the insolvent estate for the excess of their claim over the premises, after which they discovered that certain property intended to be included in the security had, by mutual mistake, been omitted therefrom, whereupon they filed a bill in chancery to have the mortgage rectified and the security realized:—Held, that the fact of the mertgagees having so proceeded in insolvency formed no objection to the relief asked, and the court ordered a rectification of the instrument as prayed, as this was a matter dehors the administration of the assets, in which the Judge in insolvency could not give adequate relief; remitted the parties back to the insolvency proceedings with a view of the same or a new value being placed by the mortgagees on their security, in order that the assignee and creditors might proceed under the statute; and in the event of those proceedings resulting in the security being retained by the mortgagees, the court directed the bill to be retained to enable them to resume proceedings here to realize the security, for which purpose it would be necessary simply to file a petition stating shortly the proceedings taken and their Cameron v. Kerr, 23 Gr. 374.

Omission of Part of Land — Land Shewn by Mortgagor to Mortgagee.]—See Merchants' Bank of Canada v. Morrison, 19 Gr. 1.

Omission of Part of Land—Municipal Corporation.—Where a mortgage on land was executed to a municipal corporation, for the purpose of securing a debt due to the corporation by its treasurer, and by a mistake of both parties the mortgage did not cover a part of the land which it was intended to mortgage, it was held that the corporation was not entitled to a decree rectifying the mortgage, though a private person under the circumstances would have been so entitled. Brown v. McVab. 20 Gr. 179.

Omission of Part of Land—Notice.]— D. having a mortgage over 22 acres, filed his bill to foreclose. A., B., and C., having liens, were made parties, and their position settled by the master. A. held a mortgage as executor of a decensed mortgage. B. redeemed and applied by petition to rectify an alleged mistake in C.'s mortgage, so as to make it a lien over an additional 25 neres prior to A.'s, over the same land. B. failing to prove that A.'s testator had notice of the error at the time of taking his mortgage, the relief sought was refused. Ogitice v. Squair, 10 Gr. 444.

Omission of Part of Land—Subsequent Purchase.]—M. & B., owners of certain village lots of land, were in possession of an adjoining water lot in a lake, the title to which was in the Crown, and to which, according to the practice of the Crown lands department, they had a right of preëmption. On this water lot they erected a mill on cribwork built on the bettom of the lake. A mortgage given to R. of the village lots and certain other lands was intended to comprise the water lot and mill, but the latter were omitted by mistake of the solicitor who prepared the instrument. M. & B. afterwards executed separate instruments in the form of a chattel mortgage purporting to mortgage certain chattel property and the said mill to two other persons. M. & B. laving become insolvent assigned all their property for the benefit of their creditors, and the assignee sold at auction all their property, including the mill. The sale was made sub-including the mill.

ject to certain printed conditions, one which was that, as all the information relating to the titles of the property was set out in the schedules, stock list, and inventory, the vendor would not warrant the correctness of the same, and that no other claims existed, the purchaser must take subject to all claims thereon, and whether herein mentioned or not, and subject to all exemptions in law." These conditions were signed by the purchasers, to whom the assignee executed a conveyance of all the property so sold. Before the sale the assignee had procured the two last above mentioned mortgages executed by M. & B. to be paid off by a person who advanced the money, and he took an assignment to himself after the sale, paying the amount out of the pur-chase money. The conveyance to the purchase money. The conveyance to the pur-chasers at the sale purported to be made in pursuance of all powers contained in these R., the mortgagee of the village mortgages. lots, brought an action to have his mortgage rectified, so as to include the water lot and mill property, omitted by mistake, chasers at the auction sale set up the defence of purchase for valuable consideration without notice: - Held, that there being ample evidence to establish, and the trial Judge having found, that the mortgage was intended to cover the water lot and mill, and that the purchasers had notice of R.'s equity before paying the purchase money and taking a conveyance, facts must be taken to be established, and the findings deemed final on this appeal, and they established R.'s r ght to have his mortgage reformed. Utterson Lumber Co. v. Rennie, 21 S. C. R. 218.

Substitution of Land—Wrong Half of Lot.]—A, being in possession of the east half of a lot, claiming title thereto, mortgaged the west half. On a bill against his heir to reform the mortgage by substituting the east half, it was shewn that A, had no claim to the west half, which was an improved farm, of which others had, for many years, been in possession. The defendant neither admitted nor denied the mistake:—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to a decree for reforming the mortgage. White v. Haright, 11 Gr. 420.

Substitution of Lot—Collateral Securius.)—A mortgage which had been executed by the defendant L, reciting that it had been agreed to be given to secure notes held by the plaintiffs, and containing covenants for title, was reformed, on parol evidence, by substituting for one of the parcels inserted by mistake, which did not belong to L. another lot proved to be his at the time of creating the mortgage; and being the only other lot owned by him. Such a mortgage is not voluntary or without consideration so as to exclude reformation. Bank of Toronto v. Iricin, 28 Gr. 397.

Time for Payment. |—Rectification of the mortgage deed as to the time of the first payment of principal, was refused where it was sought by the mortgagors at a time when the payment in any event was long past due, and the mortgage as without fraud had acted upon the mortgage as executed, and without notice of the intention of the mortgagors to have the payment fixed for a later period; and where also there was really no agreement upon which to found the rectification, the defendants local appraiser and agent to receive applications having no express or implied authority to make such agreements, Edmonds v, Hamilton Provident and Loan Society, 19 O. R. 677.

6. Other Instruments.

Bond - Stipulations. | - In suits for the rectification of deeds, the court allows great weight to the statements made by the answer. On the sale of a steamboat, the vendors gave a bond binding themselves unconditionally to procure a conveyance of the vessel to the purchasers within three months, and delivered possession to them; but the conveyance was not made, and two years afterwards the vessel was taken from the purchasers, upon process against the owner, and under a mortgage previously existing upon the vessel. A bill was filed by the vendors to rectify the bond, by introducing certain stipulations set forth in a memorandum made by the holder of the incumbrance at the foot of the vendor's bond, and which the incumbrancer swore he had made in order that the purchaser might have notice of his claim, and also a receipt given by him when paid part of the claim he held against the vessel. The purchasers in their answer asserted that they never had intended to abridge their rights under the bond, and never would have consented to any stipulation therein to that effect; and, as the alteration proposed would have materially affected the rights of the purchasers to their prejudice, and there was nothing inconsistent in the facts being as the purchasers alleged them to be, the court refused the relief prayed, and dismissed the bill with costs. Cotton v. Corby, 7 Gr. 50. Affirmed in appeal, 8 Gr. 98,

Insurance Policy.]—As to reformation of a policy of insurance, when not in accordance with the intention of the parties. See Wyld v. London and Licerpool and Globe Ins. Co., 33 U. C. R. 284.

Insurance Policy—Omission to Affix Scal —Right to Reform by Adding Scal.]—See Right v. Sun Mutual Life Insurance Co., 29
C. P. 221, 5 A. R. 218.

Notarial Transfer—Evidence to Contradict.]—Verbal evidence is inadmissible to contradict an absolute notarial transfer, even where there is a commencement of proof by writing: Article 1234, C. C. Bury v. Murray, 24 S. C. R. 77.

Partnership Articles.]—See Macdonald v. Worthington, 7 A. R. 531, 9 S. C. R. 327.

Partnership — Registered Declaration.]—An action was brought by W. McL. and F. W. R. to recover the amount of an action they insuring the members of the firm of McL. Bros. & Co., alleging that J. S. McL. one of the partners, had been accidentally drowned, signed and registered a declaration of the partners, had been accidentally drowned, signed and registered a declaration of a health of the signed and registered a declaration of a health of the signed and registered a declaration of a new partnership under the same name, comprising the plaintiffs only. At the trial the plaintiffs tendered oral evidence to prove that these declarations were incorrect, and that J. S. McL. was a member of the partnership at the time of his death;—Held, that such evidence was inadmissible: Article 1835, C. C., and c. 65, C. S. L. C. Calwell v. Accident Ins. Co. of North America, 24 S. C. R. 263.

Release of Debt—Trust.]—A widow, by writing duly signed, scaled, and attested, released to her son W. a sum of $14,477.95,

"standing to my account in my son W.'s books at this date, and which I intended to give him: I hereby give it to him and release him from all claim in respect thereof." W. subsequently went into a somewhat hazardous business, and afterwards, becoming insolvent, made an assignment under the Insolvent Acts. In a suit instituted by the official assignee claiming this money for W's creditors, the court allowed parol evidence to be given, shewing that such release, though absolute in form, was, as to one-half of the amount transferred, intended to create a trust in favour of another son, A., his wife and children; and the court being satisfied of the truthfulness of such evidence, refused the relief asked, and dismissed the bill with costs. Kerr v. Read, 23 Gr. 525.

VIII. MISCELLANEOUS.

Disclaimer of Grant.]—It is not essential to the validity of a disclaimer of a grant of land that it should be by deed or by record. Moffatt v. Scratch, 12 A. R. 157.

Revival of Deed. |—Semble, where a deal contains a covenant that a wife shall release her dower in consideration of a settlement made in her favour by a deed of separation, and she does so after reconciliation and subsequent separation at the husband's instance, the deed is thereby revived. McArthur v. Webb, 21 C. P. 358.

Setting Aside or Varying Deed for Misrepresentation — Evidence.] — See Coates v. Bacon, 21 Gr. 21.

Unexecuted Deed—Acceptance of Benefit under, 1—An action of covenant cannot be maintained on a deed conveying land, executed by the grantor, and purporting to contain a covenant by the grantee to pay certain mortgages existing upon the premises, but which has not been executed by the grantee, although she has accepted the benefit of the deed. Clergyman — Drunkenness.] — Declaration, that the plaintiff was and is a clergyman of the Church of England, and that the defendant falsely and maliciously spoke and published of him, in relation to his said profession, "He will get drunk, I have seen him drunk," meaning thereby that the plaintiff was an unfit and improper person to exercise his said calling, whereby the plaintiff was injured in his good name, &c., and shunned by divers persons; without any averment of special damage:—Held, on demurrer, declaration bad. Tiphe v, Wicks, 33 U. C. R. 479.

Medical Practitioner, Unregistered.]—A medical practitioner registered in Great Britain but not in this Province, cannot maintain an action against a person slandering him in his profession. Skirving v. Ross, 31 C. P. 423.

Methodist Preacher — Crime.]—Held, that words imputing the crime of ineest to a paid preacher or lay exhorter of the Methodist Church, are of themselves actionable, without special damage, on the ground that the tendency of the slander is to occasion the loss of plaintiff's employment or office, even though it was not spoken with reference to the office. Starr v. Gardner, 6 O. S. 512.

Methodist Preacher — Immorality.]— Saying of a Methodist preacher that he kept company with a prostitute, and defendant could prove it:—Held, not actionable, at all events without special damage. Breeze v.
Sails, 23 U. C. R. 94.

Postmaster Violating Public Truet.]

—Where a paper contains matter that is grossly libellous per se, and without reference to any particular situation or office to make it so, it is no objection to a verdict upon such libel that the plaintiff filled no such office as mentioned in the declaration. Nor is such libel excused on pretence of its being a formal application to the head of the department for redress of grievances, the plaintiff being a postmaster. And words charging a person with violating a public trust, are words libellous per se, and do not require connexion with any particular office; an office may be introduced as an explanatory circumstance. Jones v. Stewart, Tay, 453.

Registrar of Deeds—Misconduct in Office. —The statement of claim alleged that from 1874 to 1883 the plaintiff was registrar of deeds of the county of Bruce; that in 1880, on a petition of the defendants to the plaintiff as recommendant for the plaintiff as registrar and the plaintiff as registrar in an analysis of the plaintiff as registration and an inquiry held, when charges were not sustained in law or by the evidence, and were shewn to be, and were, untrue in fact, and to have been made maliciously and with the design of injuring the plaintiff; that, before the commissioner had made any report on the charges, the defendants maliciously, and without any reasonable or probable cause, and with design and intention of injuring the plaintiff; that, before the commissioner had made any report on the charges, the defendants maliciously, and with design and intention of injuring the plaintiff in his reputation, character, and business, caused the accusations, charges, and defamatory statements thereinbefore specially mentioned, and portions of the evidence adduced before the said commissioners, together with certain statements made by one R., who, during the investigation, acted as defendants' solicitor, to be printed and published in pamphlets and in the minutes of the county council, and circulated throughout the county and elsewhere in the Province, greatly to the plaintiff; — Held, on demurrer, that a good cause of action for libe was shewn, and that such action lies against a municipal corporation. McLay v. County of Bruce, 14 O. R.

Trader in Land - Fraud. 1-The first count set out that the plaintiff was a trader in the purchase and sale of land, and in lending money; and that defendant had purchased a lot of land for himself and the plaintiff, which they agreed to divide by lot, one to take the east and the other the west half, the latter being of more value. And it was alleged that in speaking of the plaintiff in reference to his said trade and to the drawing lots, defendant had asserted that the slips were prepared by the plaintiff in such a way (explaining it) defendant was precluded from getting that defendant was precluded from getting anything but the east half. In another count, after stating the same trick, defendant was alleged to have added, "It then struck me I was swindled," And in another he was said to have prefaced the relation with, "He cheated me out of 100 acres of land," and concluded by saying, "so he cheated and swindled me out of the lot:"—Held, on demurrer, that no cause of action was shewn, for the words alleged in the first count could not be treated as spoken of the plaintiff in any trade or business, but in a private transaction; and the additional words stated in the other counts were not of themselves actionable. Fellowes v. Hunter, 20 U. C. R. 382.

Tradesman—Cheating.]—The plaintiff alleged that he was a commission merchant buying wheat, and that defendant spoke of him, in relation to his said trade, "I sold wheat to Mr. Marsden, and he cheated me out of two bushels of wheat, and when I went to try the scales, he finger-rigged some screw about the scales, and threw on some weight at the same time, and I will not patronize him any more;"—Held, clearly a slander of the plaintiff in his business. Marsden v. Henderson, 22 U. C. R. 585.

Tradesman — Mercantile Agency—Falso Information.]—Persons carrying on a mercantile agency are responsible for the damages caused to a person in business when, by culpable negligence, imprudence, or want of skill, false information is supplied concerning his standing, though the information be communicated confidentially to a subscriber to the agency on his application therefor. Cossette v. Dun, 18 S. C. R. 222.

(See, also, post XII. 3 (a).

Tradesman - Overcharging. |-The libel sued for herein consisted of the statement, in substance, that the plaintiffs, who were manufacturers of lightning rods, were charging from 37 to 421/2c. per foot for their rods, whereas the defendant could furnish the same and even a better rod for 7c. to 10c. per foot, and that defendant, having a thorough knowledge of the lightning rod business, felt it to be an imposition practised by plaintiffs on the public in charging such exorbitant prices, when the rods could be sold at the above low prices. publication was proved to be untrue, in that the prices charged by the plaintiffs included the cost of erecting the rod, while the sums named by the defendant only included the price of the rod, although the publication, as the jury found, was intended to convey the meaning that they included the cost of erecting it also: -Held, that the action was maintainable. The jury assessed the damages at $4,000, but the court, being of opinion that under the circumstances the damages were excessive, directed a new trial unless the plaintiffs would consent to reduce the verilet to $1,000. Ondario Copper Lightning Rod Co. v. Hewitt, 30 C. P. 172.

Tradesman—Roguery.]—Plaintiff and defendant were tailors, the latter also selling dry goods. Plaintiff went into defendant's shep to buy cloth to make up a pair of trousers for one A., who was with him, when defendant said to A., "Don't you have anything to do with that man: that man will rob you; he is a rogue." He also asked A. to let him make the trousers. The jury were directed that the words were actionable if spoken to the plaintiff in the way of his trade; and a verdict found for the plaintiff was upheld. Sloman v. Chisholm. 22 U. C. R. 20.

Tradesman — Solvency.]—The defendant spoke of the plaintiff, a miller and grain buyer, that one of the big millers (meaning the plaintiff) had run away owing money to him and others; that he, the defendant, had come in to catch the plaintiff, but that he had gone or cleared out. At the trial a nonsuit entered, on the objection that the words were not shewn to have been used with reference to the plaintiff's business, and no special damage was proved :- Held, that the nonsuit was wrong, for the words used cast an imputation upon the solvency and financial standing of the plaintiff, and it was for the jury to say whether they were spoken in reference to his business, and calculated to injure him therein. Lott v. Drury, 1 O. R. 577.

Tradesman - Solvency-Message Sent by Telegraph Company.]—The respondents, partners in trade, sued the appellants for defamation of the respondents in their trade, alleging: -1. That they were merchants at Halifax; that the appellants wrongfully, falsely, and maliciously, by means of their telegraph lines, transmitted, sent, and published from their office in St. John, and there caused to be printed, copied, circulated, and published the false and defamatory message following: "John Silver & Co., wholesale clothiers, of Grenville street, have failed; liabilities heavy. 2. That the same message was caused also to published in other parts of the Dominion. 3. That the appellants promised and agreed with the proprietor or publisher of the St. John Daily Telegraph newspaper, and entered into an arrangement with him, whereby the appellants agreed to collect and transmit, by means of their telegraph lines, news despatches to said newspaper from time to time, and that such publisher should pay for all such messages, and should publish them in his newspaper, and that, in pursuance of said agreement, the appellants wrongfully, maliciously, and by means of said telegraph, transmitted, sent and published from their office in Halifax to their office in St. John, and there falsely and maliciously caused to be written, printed copied, circulated, and published, the above message, whereby many customers who had heretofore dealt with plaintiffs, ceased to do so, and their credit and business standing and reputation were thereby greatly damaged. appellants denied the several publications charged, and also the entering into the agreement mentioned in the third count, and the forwarding of the messages as alleged. At the tribl it was proved that the telegram which was published in the morning paper was corrected in the evening edition, and that the publisher's agreement was with an officer of the company, to furnish him news at so much for every hundred words, but that he only poid for such as he used. The original despatch was not produced. The only evidence as to damage was the evidence of two witnesses, who proved that by reason of the publication they ceased to do business with the respondents as they had previously been accustomed to do:—Held, that the appellants were responsible for the publication of the libel in question. 2. That the damages ($7,000) were excessive, and therefore a new trial ought to be granted. 3. That no special damage having been alleged in the declaration, the evidence as to such damages, having been adjected to, was inadmissible. Dominion Telegraph Co. v. Silver, 10 S. C. R. 239.

Wife of Tradesman—Loss of Custom.] —in an action by busband and wife for a verbal slander of the latter, not actionable without special damage, an affidavit to hold to bail, made by the wife, stated only that persons not named had in consequence withdrawn their custom from her husband, who was a tailor. The Judge expressed surprise and regret that an arrest should have been ordered on such statements, but set it aside on the ground of irregularity only. Allman y, Kensel, 3 P. R. 110.

II. CHARGING CRIME.

Arson.]—Words spoken imputing the crime of arson, where the burning of the building of which plaintiff was accused would not have constituted such crime, are not actionable. McVab v, Magrath, 5 O. 8, 516.

Forgery — "False Writings."]—Declaration for slander averred that defendant used and published the words, "Old Gooff made false writings." meaning that the plaintiff forred writings &c., and was guilty of forgery: —Held, good, on demurrer, as shewing a good cause of action for accusing plaintiff of forgery. Groff v. Bricker, 4 C. P. 154.

Incest — Special Damage.]—In an action for oral slander the words spoken imputed to the plaintiff that he had committed incest and adultery with his daughters, and alleged as grounds of special damage the loss of the society of friends and illness and expenses consequent thereon:—Held, that the words were not actionable without proof of special damage, incest not being a crime cognizable in our courts; and that the special damage alleged here was insufficient. Pather v. Solmes, 30 C. P. 481. S. C. 45 U. C. R. 15.

Larceny—Words of Abuse.]—"Go home, you whore, and steal more potatoes from Peggy's field, and steal more chemises from us:"—Held, actionable, for it imputed that the person addressed had previously stolen other things of the same kind; and the potatoes might have been severed, and so the subject of larceny. Hunter v. Hunter, 25 U. C. R. 145.

Larceny-Words of Abuse-Understanding of Bystanders.]—The declaration set out that the plaintiff carried on the business and trade of a weaver in, &c., and defendant had em-ployed plaintiff to weave thirty-five pounds of yarn for him, and had delivered such yarn to the plaintiff for that purpose; that upon said yarn being wove, &c., it had been alleged by defendant that five pounds of the yarn was deficient, and had been feloniously stolen by the The declaration then, in the third count, alleged that the defendant, in a certain other discourse of and concerning the yarn, and in the presence and hearing of divers persons, spoke and published the following words, that is to say: "T. Y. (the plaintiff) stole five pounds of my yarn; it was a roguish trick." And in the fourth count the words were alleged to have been, "T. Y. stole five pounds of my yarn:"—Held, that the words, spoken in the presence of strangers, ignorant of the particular circumstances relating to the yarn, were actionable: - Held, also-on motion in arrest of judgment on the ground that the plaintiff being a bailee could not be guilty of larceny.—that the use of words imputing an indictable offence is actionable or not according to the sense in which they may be fairly understood by bystanders not acquainted with the matter to which they relate. Young v. Sloan, 2 C. P. 284.

Malicious Injury to Property — Imprisonment—Fine.]—Held, on demurrer to a statement of claim in an action of slander, that any defamatory charge referable to wrong-doing under s. 26 or s. 58 of the Act relating to malicious injury to property. R. S. C. c. 168, is actionable, without proof of special damage; for the bunishment of imprisonment, and not merely the infliction of a fine, is imposed in the case of such offences; but it is otherwise in the case of such offences; but it is otherwise in the case of a defamatory charge referable to s. 27 or s. 59 of that Act, for such offences are bunishable by fine only. Routley v. Harris, 18 O. R. 405.

Misappropriation of Trust Moneys—Misdemennour.]—To a declaration containing six counts, each charging defendant with having accused the plaintiff of misappropriation of moneys intrusted to him as trustee, defendant pleaded not guilty, only; and the jury gave a general verdict for $400. On motion for a new trial, the substantial ground being that the verdict was general, while some of the counts were defective:—Held, that if so, the proper course would not be a new trial but a trial de novo, which might be ordered on motion for a new trial; but that each count disclosed a sufficient cause of action, for in each the defendant was charged with a misdemeanour, within C. S. C. c. 92, s. 51, and there was no plea denying that he was a trustee as alleged. Decov v. Tait, 25 U. C. R. 188.

Murder — Innuendo — Sense in which Words Used.]—Declaration, that one A. had been murdered, and that defendant had said to the plaintiff, of the deceased, "that boy who is now lying a lifeless corpse on the floor, you have been the cause of his murder, and his blood lies upon your head," meaning thereby that the plaintiff had feloniously murdered the said A. Demurrer, because the innuendo was unwarranted by the charge:—Held, declaration good, for it was for the jury to determine whether the words were spoken in the sense imputed. Jackson v. McDonald, 1 U. C. R. 19.

Offence Committed out of the Jurisdiction.] — An action will lie for words spoken here imputing the commission in a colony subject to the British crimnal law of a crime punishable by that law, Malloch v. Graham, 2 O. S. 341.

It is actionable to charge a man with the commission of felony in a foreign country. Smith v. Collins, 3 U. C. R. 1.

Perjury — False Outh—Judicial Proceeding.;—Words imputing to the plaintiff the having taken a false oath, but not in any judicial proceeding, or on any occasion where it would be an offence in law, are not actionable; but where the jury on such a charge gave £2 10s, damages, the court refused a new trial in order to give defendant his costs, but arrested the judgment. Houle v. Houle, 16 U. C. R. 518.

Perjury — Fulse Oath—Judicial Proceedion.]—Where a declaration in slander charged that the defendant had accused the plaintiff of having taken a false eath, meaning thereby that he was guilty of wilful and corrupt perjury.—Peld, sufficient on motion in arrest of judgment, and that no allegation of the oath having been made in a judicial proceeding was necessary. In such a case it is a question for the jury whether such meaning existed, or was intended to be conveyed; and it is not necessary to shew the actual existence of the suit or proceeding in which the oath was alleged to have been taken. McDonald v. Moore, 26 C. P. 52.

Perjury-Words of Abuse-Understanding of Bystanders. |- In an action of slander for saying of the plaintiff on a public street in the presence of a number of people "you are a perjured villain and I can put you behind the bars, you are a forger and I can prove it," the trial Judge left it to the jury to say whether in their opinion the defendant was really charging the plaintiff with having committed the crimes mentioned:—Held, misdirection, and a new trial was ordered. What should have been left to the jury was whether or not the circumstances were such that all the bystanders would understand that the defendant did not mean to charge the plaintiff with the commission of the crime according to what he actually said, the undisclosed intention of the defendant in this respect having nothing to do with the question and being wholly immaterial. Johnston v. Ewart, 24 O. R. 116.

Prospective Crime.]—No action will lie for words spoken when they only refer prospectively to some act which, if committed, would be a crime. Conkey v. Thompson, 6 C. P. 238.

Receiving Stolen Goods—Innkeeper.]—
The declaration charged as a libel the following words: "You have stolen goods in your house, and you know it." Innuendo, that defendant knew the goods were in his house and were stolen:—Held, not actionable, though spoken of and to an innkeeper. Paterson v. Collins, II U. C. R. 63.

Theft — Words of Abuse.]—Declaration charged defendant with saying that one M. at the time of the election had mortgaged his property to the plaintiff without consideration, and that the plaintiff afterwards foreclosed and took it from him without paying anything, and adding, "The fact is, he is a villain, and a thundering thief:"—Held, not actionable. Fellowes v. Hunter, 20 U. C. R. 382.

Unnatural Offence—Innuendo—Amendment.]—Held, that a declaration in slander for calling defendant a 'rsodomite,' sufficiently imputed the charge of an indictable offence, without any innuendo. But if this were otherwise, defendant having by his plea justified the words as imputing the statutable crime:— Held, that an amendment, by adding the innuendo, should have been allowed. Anon., 29 U. C. R. 456.

III. CORPORATIONS.

Building Society — Impugning Validity of Election of Directors.]—The defendant published of the directors of the plaintiffs, an incorporated building society, in a newspaper, a notice stating, amongst other matters, that "certain persons representing themselves to be directors of the society had been self-arpointed by the most despicable, foul, and fraudulent means, and in consequence, all business transacted by them * * * is wholly and entirely contrary to rules and regulations and law: "— Held, that the paragraph was capable of the meaning attributed to it, namely, that the business of the society was being illegally transacted, and as such it was defamatory of the plaintiffs. Oven Sound Building and Sarings Society v. Mer. 24 O. R. 109.

IV. Costs.

(See, also, Security for Costs, post, XIII.)

Certificate—Nominal Damages.]—In an action of libel wherein the plaintiff recovered only 20s, damages, the Judge who tried the cause refused to certify. Cameron v. McLean, Tay, 381.

Certificate — Nominal Damages.] — The certificate under 16 Vict. c. 175, s. 25, did not necessarily entitle the plaintiff to full costs, but only to such costs as might otherwise have been recovered, and did not interfere with 21 Jac. I. c. 16. Where, therefore, in slander (no special damage being laid) the verdict was for 1s., and the Judge certified, under 16 Vict., that the grievance was wilful and malicious, the plaintiff was restrained by 21 Jac. from obtaining more costs than damages. Pedder v. Moore, 1 P. R. 117.

Certificate—Nominal Damages.] — Where in an action of libel a verdict for $1$ damages was found, and the Judge at the trial gave no certificate for costs:—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to tax full costs. Garnett v. Bradley. 3 App. Cas. 944, considered and followed. Wilson v. Roberts, 11 P. R. 412.

Certificate—Nominal Damages, 1—Where, in an action for libel, the plaintiff obtained a verdiet for twenty cents damages:—Held, that no certificate or order for full costs was necessary, and that the plaintiff could be deprived of such costs for good cause only. Wilson v. Roberts, 11 P. R. 412, followed. Wellbanks v. Conger (2), 12 P. R. 447.

Certificate—Nominal Damages.]—Where, in an action of slander, the jury returned a verdict for the plaintiff for $1, the trial Judge refused to deprive the plaintiff of costs, his conduct not having been reprehensible, and the small verdict being explained by the condition of the defendant at the time the words were uttered. Bell v. Wilson, 19 P. R. 167.

Certificate — Special Damage.] — In an action for slander plaintiff is entitled, under a certificate for full costs, pursuant to 31 Vict. c. 24 (O.), to tax full costs of suit; but, per Gwynne, J., he is not so entitled without a certificate, where some of the words mentioned in the declaration are not actionable without special damage laid. Stewart v. Moffatt, 20 C.

Jury—Finding of no Damage.]—Order of Judge dismissing action and ordering defendant to pay plaintiff's costs where the jury found that the defendant was guilty of libeling, but that the plaintiff had sustained no damage—set aside. Wills v. Carman, 14 A. R. 650.

Jury — Recommendation of .] — Where the jury found, in an action of slander, damages and full costs of suit, full costs were allowed. Skinner v. Mair, 5 O. S. 337.

Jury — Recommendation of j — Held, that the jury in an action for slander had no right to give costs by their verdict. Campbell v. Linton, 27 U. C. R. 563.

Jury—Recommendation of.]—See Farquhar v. Robertson, 13 P. R. 156.

Trial of Question of Costs—Application at thumbers, I—After action for libel brought, the defendants published a retractation and apology, which was accepted as satisfactory by the plaintiff. The defendants declined to pay the plaintiff s costs up to that time, and the plaintiff proceeded to trial:—Held, that either party could, after the publication of the apology and its acceptance by the plaintiff, have moved in chambers to have the question of costs disposed of; but, neither party having moved, that the plaintiff should have such costs only as he would have been entitled to had he so moved, and that the defendants should have no costs. Knickerbocker v. Ratz, 16 P. R. 191, followed. Eastwood v. Henderson, 17 P. R. 578.

V. CRIMINAL PROCEEDINGS FOR.

Application for Criminal Information—Affidavit—Person Charged—Copp of Libel, 1—Where a party on moving for a craninal information for a libel, swears that the libel was published of him, and his affidavits set out the libel, which does not charge him in express terms, nor is made to refer to him by innuendo, the court will grant a rule. In such a case, a verified copy of the letter containing the libel is sufficient to move upon, without the production of the original. Reginar, V. Crooks, M. T. 3 Vict.

Application for Criminal Information—Affidavits in Support and in Ansacer.] On an application for a criminal information against defendants for a libel, the applicant's affidavit stated that he had read an article published in the "National" newspaper in Toronto, on the 16th July, 1874, setting it out; that he was the person referred to; that the statements therein were untrue, and that they were intended to prejudice and injure him; that the defendants were, on the 16th July, proprietors and publishers of said paper; and that the article was printed and published by them, and is the same article contained in the said newspaper, attached to the affidavit of R., "filed on this application." R.'s affidavit was sworn on the 22nd August, and stated that "the annexed copy of the 'National' newspaper, bearing date the 16th July, 1874, was on that day published in Toronto, at No. 21 Adelgide street east," by defendants, "who are the publishers and proprietors thereof."

the applicant's affidavit. The application was not made until the 24th August, two days after the affidavit was sworn:—Held, that the applicant's affidavit was sufficient; that the reference to R,'s affidavit as "filed on this application" could only mean, there being only one application, the application about to be made on these affidavits. Held, also, that it was no objection that the rule nisi was stated to have been moved by counsel for the Crown, instead of for the applicant. Held, also, that it was no objection that the affidavit described the applicant as "esquire" only, for it was not necessary to shew that he occupied any public or official position. In answer to the appli-cation, defendants filed an affidavit stating that they had no personal knowledge of the matter contained in the alleged libels, but received the information from persons whom they believed to be reliable and trustworthy; that the "Globe" newspaper was controlled by the applicant, who was an active politician, and had published a number of articles violently attacking one S., who was a candidate for a public office, and the libels in question were published with a view of counteracting the effect of these articles, and believing them to be true and without malice :- Held, no answer. Regina v. Thompson, 24 C. P. 252.

Application for Criminal Information—Affidavit in Support—Denial of Truth of Charge—Affidavit in Answer.]—S., the relator, a senator of the Dominion and president of a bank, applied on the last day of Michaelmas Term, 1875, for a criminal information against one W., the editor of a newspaper, for three alleged libellous articles published there-The first, published on the 5th November. 1875, charged the relator with political in-triguing, alleging that "his now famous circuiar to the electors of South Ontario, his extending credit at a suspicious time to institutions that control votes, his impudent letter to the Finance Minister, his consultation with the Government as to his reply to certain charges made against him, all point too clearly to the fact of intrigues in political matters. The second article, published on the 12th November, 1875, accused him of having purchased the votes of three members of Par-liament on the occasion of a political crisis referred to, and of having boasted of so doing. The third article, published on the 19th November, 1875, accused the applicant of corruption, referred in terms of ridicule to his assertion that he had never spent a dollar to purchase or secure a vote, and reiterated the charge of buying up members. The substance of the libels of the 12th and 19th November had previously appeared in defendant's paper of the 17th September, but the relator swore he had no recollection of having seen it :-Held, that the application was not too late. The complainant must come to the court either during the term next after the cause of complaint arose, or so soon in the second term thereafter as to enable the defendant, unless prevented by the accumulation of business in the court, to shew cause within that term; and this without reference to the fact whether an assize intervened or not. 2. As to the first article that the applicant's denial of the charge there made was not sufficient; for, though his affidavit denied in general terms the charges made, it contained no reference to the circular, or to the letter referred to in the article, or to the alleged consultation with the Government; and these matters being specified in the article as justifying the charge of political intriguing, the court should have been informed with regard to them, so as to enable it to judge whether they formed ground for the charge. The information as to this article was therefore refused, and the applicant left to his ordinary remedy. 3. The denial on such an application must, as a rule, be full, clear, and as specific as possible; and all the circumstances must be laid before the court fully and candidly, in order that they may deal with the matter. 4. Per Wilson, J., that upon the circular referred to, and upon other documents set out, and which were brought before the court by the defendant, the charge of political intriguing was so far sustained that the application should be refused on this ground also. 5. The charges in the second article were, on the affidavits set out in the report, held to be sufficiently denied. There was no affidavit of their truth, and no suggestion that the defendant had any personal knowledge of the facts on which charges rested, so that he would be prejudiced by being excluded as a witness on his own behalf. As to these, therefore, the information was granted. Regina v. Wilkinson, 41 U. C.

Application for Criminal Information — Affidacits in Answer — No Replu—Costs.]— In Trinity Term, 1876, an application was made for a criminal information against defendants, for the publication in their newspaper of certain alleged libellous articles, on the 23rd and 30th March and 25th May, 1876, respectively, against the applicant. On shewing cause, the defendants' affidavits reiterated the charge, giving full particulars, and pointing out that B., a person who could prove their truth, had since died, namely, in June. These affidavits had been in the hands of the applicant's solicitors for upwards of six months, but no affidavits were filled in reply; and Easter term, commencing shortly after the publication, had been allowed to chapse without moving. Under the circumstances the applicant on was refused, but, in view of the virulent and unwarranted language of the articles, without costs. Regina valed.

Application for Criminal Information — Position of Applicant — Nature of Libel.]—The court, following recent English decisions, confining the granting of criminal informations for libel to the case of persons occupying an official or judicial position, and filling some office which gives the public an interest in the speedy vindication of their character, or to the case of a charge of a very grave or atrocious nature, refused leave to the manager of a very large railway company to file a criminal information for libel, on the ground that he did not come within the description of persons referred to. Regina v. Wilson, 43 U. C. R. SS.

Application for New Trial—Jurisdiction—Admissibility of Eridence.]—The defendant, having been convicted on a criminal information for libel, obtained a rule nisi for a new trial for the rejection of evidence, and for misdirection in ruling that there was no evidence to support the pleas of justification. Upon this rule coming up for argument, the court, under the circumstances, as a matter of indulgence, allowed to be argued another ground of misdirection, not taken to the charge at the trial, in ruling that the libel implied malice, whereas the jury should have been told that, it being a privileged communiation, the inference of malice was repelled. The rule requiring any objections to the charge to be taken at the trial, applies in criminal as well as civil proceedings. The Judge at the trial told the jury that the defondant must prove all the charges which he had justified: that the evidence fell far short of doing so; and that in his opinion they should find the pleas of justification against the defendant. Per Harrison, C.J.— This was not so much a direction on the law as a strong observation on the evidence, and therefore not open to the objection of misdirection. But if so open, there was no misdirection, for the defendant was bound to such proof, and the observation was justified by the evidence, set out in this case. Per Wilson, J.—There was evidence, upon the facts stated in the report, to go to the jury in support of the pleas of justification; and defendant was estitled to a new trial for the misdirection. The libel, which formed the subject of the first count, began by saying, "The party referred to by us as the head of a public institution, who purchased three votes at the time of the crisis, is the Hon, J. S.," the prosecutor, The second count was upon an alleged libel, in which, besides specific charges against the prosecutor, he was said to be the most corrupt man in Canada. Per Harrison, C.J.—The defendant was not entitled to put in evidence an article in a previous issue of his paper, charging the prosecutor with political intriguing, &c., on which a criminal information had been refused to the prosecutor; nor a letter written to the prosecutor alleged to be a request to supply money to be used for corrupt purposes, there being no evidence tendered of anything done by him in pursuance of such letter. Wilson, J.—Such evidence was admissible; but, as it was not formally pressed, the rejection of it formed no ground for a new trial. Regina v. Wilkinson, 42 U. C. R. 492.

Costs—Payment of—Summons—Service.]
—Where an order for payment of costs is sought which may, under C. S. U. C. c. 24, s. B), be followed by execution, as in this instance, for payment of costs of a prosecution for libel under C. S. U. C. c. 103, the service of the summons must in general be personal. The court may, under special circumstances, dispense with personal service. Where the defendant is abroad, or it is known where he lives, personal service will not be dispensed with, unless it be made to appear that defendant is keeping out of the way to exade service; and even in this case it is by no means clear that personal service will be dispensed with. Service on the attorney on the record, and on the wife of the defendant, it not being shewn that he was keeping out of the way to avoid service, was held insufficient, though it was shewn that he had left I piper Canada, and gone to reside in the United States. Regina v. Simpson, 10 L. J. 222.

Estoppe!—Libld Shewn to Prosecutor before Public tion.]—Upon an indictment for ibel, published at defendants' instance in a newspaper, it appeared that the editor (who was not indicted) before inserting the libel shewed it to the prosecutor, who did not exslewed it to the prosecutor, who did not express any wish to suppress the publication, but wrote a reply, which was also inserted:— Held, not such a defence for the parties indicted as to render a conviction illegal; and a new trial was refused. Regina v. McElderry, 19 U. C. R. 168.

Justification — Proof Differing from Plotal—The defendant was indicated for a libel, which alleged that the prosecutor, G. N., had been prosecuted for perjury, in swearing that defendant had attempted to assassinate him. Defendant pleaded two pleas in justification, the gist of which was, that one G. N. had falsely laid an information on oatn against the decendant, charging defendant with attempting to assassinate him by firing a pistol at him; and that said G. N. was presented tor perjury tor having half this false information. It was shewn at the trial that the said G. N. had been presented by the grand jury for perjury, but not for the matters complained of by defendant, and the jury found for the Grown. The court refused a new trial. Region v. Giovan, T. C. P. 136.

Pleading—Justification — Sufficiency.] — A plea to an information for libel under C. S. U. C. c. 103, s. 9, must allege the truth of all the matters charged; and in this case the plea was clearly insufficient in that respect. Regima v. Moylan, 19 U. C. R. 521.

Trial-Jury-Crown Case Reserved-Absence of Prosecutor — Justification — Judge's Charge.] — The statute 37 Vict. c. 38, s, 11 (O.). enacts that the right of the Crown to cause jurors to stand aside shall not be exercised on the trial of any indictment or information by a private prosecutor for the publication of a defamatory libel:"—Held, to include all cases of defamatory libels upon individuals, as distinguished from seditious or blasphemous libels; and that the fact of the prosecution being conducted by a counsel appointed by and representing the attorney-general, would no difference. The Judge at the trial allowed the Crown counsel in such a case to direct jurors to stand aside, but after the verdict, entertaining doubts, he reserved a case for the opinion of the court, as to the propriety of his having permitted it:—Held, that he was clearly not precluded from such reservation by having allowed the right when claimed, and that such question was a question of law which arose on the trial, within the meaning of the statute. The prosecutor's usual residence was in England, but he had come here with emigrants, and at the time of the publication of the libel had gone back for a temporary purpose, intending to return:

—Held, that his absence was no answer to the indictment. The libel contained several dis-tinct charges, all of which were justified by a general plea of their truth, and the jury were directed that unless all the charges which were libellous were justified, they should convict:—Held, that the charge was right, Regina v. Patteson, 36 U. C. R. 127.

See Criminal Law, IX, 29.

VI. Damages.

Excessive Damages. —In slander for accusing the plaintiff of larceny, and a verdict of £150 damages, the court refused a new trial for excessive damages. Eakins v. Evans, 3 O. S. 383.

Excessive Damages.]—In an action for libel, the imputations being of a very slander-ous character, and a plea of justification pleaded which was not attempted to be proved, the court refused a new trial for excessive damages, though they would have been much better satisfied with a smaller verdict. Gfreerev, Hoffman, 15 U. C. R. 441.

Excessive Damages, |—The evidence in support of one of the pleas of justification of a charge of theft was very strong, sufficient to lave warranted a conviction if the plaintiff had been on his trial. The charge, however, was made three years after the alleged offence, for which there had been no prosecution, and defendant had no special interest in the matter. The jury having found for the plaintiff, and $450 damages, the court refused to interfere. Edga v. Seirell, 24 U. C. R. 215.

Excessive Damages. |-The plaintiff sued his step-mother for slander, in having said of him that when his father was ill, he and his sister went into his bedroom and gave him a drug, after which he went into a doze, and never recovered, and that the plaintiff and his sister had killed him. There was another count for charging the plaintiff with having robbed her. It appeared that the plaintiff and defendant were not on friendly terms, arising out of defendant's marriage with plaintiff's father: that defendant was a garrulous old lady, prone to talk of the family difficul-ties; and that the words atleged were spoken when the plaintiff's brother-in-law and another person went to see her to get her to sign a release of dower. The defendant denied hav-ing charged any criminal offence, and it appeared that the plaintiff, who was a medical student, had administered some medicine to his father shortly before his death. There was no proof of any actual damage, but the jury gave $500:—Held, that the verdict was exgave 8500;—Held, that the vernet was ex-cessive; and the Judge who tried the cause being dissatisfied with it on this ground, a new trial was ordered unless the plaintiff would reduce it to $100. Held, also, that it was admissible to ask the plaintiff's witness whether the plaintiff was not a student of medicine, although the declaration did not charge that the words were spoken of him in that character. Cook v. Cook, 36 U. C. R.

Excessive Damages. | — See Massie v. Toronto Printing Co., 11 O. R. 362.

Inadequate Damages — New Trial.] — The court will not grant a new trial for smallness of damages in an action for slander, Atkins v, Thornton, Dra, 239; Proctor v, Allen, T. T. 2 & 3 Viet.

Jury Finding No Damages—Nominal Damages,—In an action for libel the jury found that the defendant was guilty of libeling, but that the plaintiff had sustained no damage:—Held, that there was no power to direct judgment for nominal damages; and a venire de novo was awarded. Wills v. Carman, 14 A. R. 656.

Jury Finding No Damages—New Trial.]—In an action for shander the jury returned a finding of no damage; but said they could not agree as to whether their verdict should be for the plaintiff or defendant; upon which the trial Judge directed judgment to be entered for the defendant, dismissing the action:—Held, that the finding of no damage did not dispose of the action, but that there should have been a finding on the charge of guilt; and a new trial was directed. Wills v. Carman, 14 A. R. 656, considered. Bush v. McCormack, 20 O. R. 497.

Mitigation of Damages—Pleading,]— Facts intended to be relied on in mitigation of damages in a libel action must be set out in the statement of defence, and unless this is done they cannot be given in evidence, On, Rule 339 is inconsistent with Con, Rule 573, and governs. The defendant may plead in mitigation of damages that the article complained of was published in good faith in the usual course of business. Beaton v. Intelligencer Printing Co., 22 A. R. 97.

Special Damage—Amendment at Trial.]

—The plaintiff, a schoolmaster, sued the defendant for a libel, and laid as its consequence, by way of special damage, his dismissal from his school; whereas it appeared at the trial that the real effect of the libel was to prevent his being examined by the superintendent, with a view to his qualification for receiving a renewal certificate. The plaintiff applied to the Judge at nisi prius to amend his special damage to meet the evidence, which was allowed:—Held, on a motion for a nonsuit, that the Judge had power to make such amendment. Judges had power to make the factors are such as the such Special Damage—Pleading.|—The second count of the declaration was for defamation in the use of words not actionable without special damage alleged, and the averment was, "whereby plaintiff lost the friendship, assistance, and hospitality of (specifying certain persons) and many others of his neighbours, divers of whom refused and were unwilling, as theretofore, to deal with and transact business with the plaintiff, and from whose friendship, hospitality, and business dealings plaintiff had derived profit and advantage:—Held, insufficient, Ashord v. Choote, 20 C. P. 471.

VII. EVIDENCE.

1. In Miligation of Damages.

Assault—Slander of Wife.]—In trespass for assault and battery the defendant offered to prove in mitigation of damages that the plaintiff had slandered his wife, and that he had committed the trespass immediately on being informed of such slander. The evidence having been rejected, and a verdict found for £140, a new trial was granted that all the circumstances might be elicited. Short v. Lewis, 3 0. S. 385.

Assault—Newspaper Libel.]—Held, in an action for assault, that libellous and abusive articles reflecting on the defendants, published on the day of, and preceding, the assault, in a newspaper of which the plaintiff was the proprietor, were admissible in evidence in mitigation of damages. But where the verdict was for $50 only, and though such evidence was rejected the jury were fully informed by defendants' counsel that the assault was committed in consequence of these articles, and the court saw no reason to believe that defendants had been prejudiced by the ruling, a new trial was refused, but, under the circumstances, without costs in term to either party. Percy v, Glasco, 22 C. P. 521.

Bad Character.]—Held, that in an action of slander, evidence of the plaintiff's general had character is inadmissible, even in mitigation of damages. The verdict being for $15, and such evidence urged only in mitigation, the court refused leave to appeal. Myers v. Curric, 22 U. C. R. 470.

Bad Character—Common Rumour—Specific Officiace, 1—In an action for slander impating theft, defendant having pleuded and endeavoured to support pleus of justification:—Held, that evidence of the plaintiff's general had character for honesty was properly rejected. Semble, that it would have been indusisable even without the justification: but that if "not guilty" only be pleuded, defendant may shew, solely in mitigation of damages, and to rebut the presumption of malice, that before speaking the words it was a common rumour in the neighbourhood that defendant lad been guilty of the specific offence charged. Edgar v. Newell, 24 U. C. R. 215.

Facts and Circumstances. |—In slander the defendant may give facts and circumstances in evidence in mitigation of damages. Johnson v. Eastman, Tay. 243.

Previous Writings-Provocation.] - In Previous Writings Proceeding.]—In libel for two articles which were printed in the defendant's newspaper reflecting upon the character and conduct of the plaintiff:—Held, that an article in another newspaper, published before the first of the alleged libels, purporting to be an account of an interview with the plaintiff in which he made an attack upon the defendant's newspaper by its name, and a letter signed by the plaintiff. published in two newspapers before the second of the alleged libels, in which the defendant's newspaper and the editor thereof-not the defendant himself-were referred to in abusive language, were admissible in evidence upon the part of the defendant, in mitigation of damages. Percy v. Glasco, 22 C. P. 521, followed. Held, also, per Rose, J., that editorial articles which appeared on the same day in the newspapers which published the plaintiff's letter, referring to it and to the defendant's newspaper, were also admissible as furnishing provocation for the second of the alleged libels: Meredith, C.J., contra. Stirton v. Gummer, 31 O. R. 227.

Statements Originated by Others.]—Slander of the plaintiff as a physician, with respect to his treatment of one II., deceased, whom he had attended after her confinement. Plea, not guilty. Evidence of statements made by II. to the same effect as the words charged was received, though objected to, as shewing that defendant did not originate the alleged slander; and the plaintiff had a verdict of 1s.:

—Quare, whether such evidence was admissible, but held, that its proper reception would be no ground for a new trial, for the plaintiff had notwithstanding obtained a verdict, and led did not move for smallness of damages. Rogers v. Munns, 25 U. C. R. 153.

2. Of Malice.

Justification—Attempt to Prove.]—In an action of slander for charging the plaintiff with perfect as a witness at a trial between defendant and another, the defendant pleaded and tried to prove a justification, but having failed in the attempt abandoned the plea. The jury were told that if defendant believed the charge to be true, and acted bond fide, and did not make it before more persons or in stronger language than was necessary, they might consider the circumstances of the speaking, and entertain them as evidence to rebut the legal inference of malice:—Held, there being no ground for saying that the communication was privileged, that this was nisdirection. Held, also, that the jury should have been told that they might consider defendant's conduct in pleading and attempting to prove the justification as some evidence of malice, and an aggravation of the injury. Faucit V. Booth, 31 U. C. R. 263.

Motive. |—In an action for malicious prosecution and slander:—Held, that evidence of the motives which induced the defendant to lay the charge before the magistrate was properly receivable, and should not have been rejected as was done here. McCann v. Preneceau, 10 O. R. 573.

3. Of Publication.

Examination of Defendant for Discovery—Inferences from.]—In an action for libel it was alleged that the defendant had as a correspondent at T. of a newspaper, furnished several items, which included one reflecting on the plaintiff. In his examination for discovery defendant, while admitting he was a correspondent at T., could not say whether he was the only one; and alleged that he did not remember sending any of the items: but might possibly have sent some of them: but he did not think he had sent the one complained of; that he had had since the publication an interview with the editor with reference thereto, but he refused to answer whether he had discussed the item complained of, for fear, as he said, of incriminating himself, At the trial he stated he had since ascertained that there were other correspondents at T., and on being pressed as to the item complained of, after some hesitation, said he did not furnish it. No other evidence was given connecting the defendant with the publication: —Held, that this did not constitute any evidence of publication to go to the jury. The trial Judge in his charge, after referring to the defendant's refusal to answer on his exthe defendant's refusal to answer on as ex-amination for discovery, and to his reason for refusing, told the jury that they might draw the inference as to what the true answer would have been:—Held, misdirection, and would have been: — Held, misurfection, and that no inference adverse to the defendant should have been drawn from his refusal to answer. Nunn v. Brandon, 24 O. R. 375.

Incorporated Company—Admissions of Manager—Authority.]—The plaintiff was the patentee and manufacturer of an automatic steam injector, and the defendants were a company manufacturing automatic steam injectors, one J. being their manager. A printed circular, signed "Penberthy Injector Company," contained certain statements as to the mode in which the plaintiff had obtained his patent, and this action was brought by him on the ground that these statements were libellous. At the trial it was proved that the circular had been found a dission by J., made in conversation with the plaintiff, that the circular had been issued by the Penberthy Injector Company in reference to a circular issued by the plaintiff.—Held, that no authority can be inferred in a general manager or other officer of a bank or trading corporation of any kind to subject the corporation to actions for libel by his admissions to any person that he had published a libel on another person by their authority, and that there was therefore no proof of publication. If J. had been called as a witness and proved that he had been so authorized, and that it formed part of his duty to do the act complained of, then the libel would be the act of the corporation. Tench v. Great Western R. W. Co., 33 U. C. R. 8, distinguished. Carpoll v. Penberthy Injector Co., 16 A. R. 446.

Newspaper—Failure to Read or File.]—
In an action of libel for publication in a newspaper, the plaintiff's counsel proved the paper containing the publication, but did not file it, or read the article containing the alleged libel. Defendant's counsel opened his case, and said he would call no witnesses. The plaintiff's counsel then moved to have the paper read and filed, which the Judge allowed, reserving leave to the defendant to move to enter a non-suit, if according to strict practice the plaintiff was not entitled to read the paper;—Held, that the evidence offered was not admissible, except in the discretion of the Judge trying the cause, and a nonsuit was therefore ordered. Cross v. Richardson, 13 C. P. 433.

Post Card by Mail.]—Sending by mail a post card addressed to the plaintiff containing libellous matter is a publication of the libel. Mothersill v. Young, 18 C. L. T. Occ. N. 5.

Republication — Letter—Possession of.] -Evidence was given by a woman who said that she saw the defendant's letter in the hands of the plaintiff's mother within twenty minutes after its receipt, and that she read it aloud in the presence of the plaintiff and her mother and several other persons. There was also evidence to shew that the letter had been posted and given out by the postmaster to the plaintiff's mother :- Held, that had the evidence of the woman been offered in order to fix the defendant with liability for what was done as a further publication of the letter, it would not have been admissible, but it was admissible in order to prove publication by the defendant, which was denied, as it shewed that the letter was in the possession of the person to whom it was addressed shortly after it was posted by the defendant, and therefore was evidence of the receipt of it by her. It may not have been necessary to give the evidence but the plaintiff had the right to do so. also, that it was not a ground for interfering with the verdict of the jury in favour of the plaintiff, that the trial Judge refused to tell the jury that the defendant was not responsible for the further publication of the letter made by the plaintiff or her mother, the jury not having been invited to increase the damages by reason of publication to others, and the damages awarded not being excessive. Benner v. Edmonds, 30 O. R. 676.

Statement Sent to Illiterate Plaintiff—Read by Wife.]—The plaintiff had been a servant of the defendant, and, on leaving the defendant's service, asked for a statement of account, whereupon the defendant made out an account as follows: "Mr. Joseph Jackson to Wm. Staley, Dr." Amongst the items were the following: "Stole hay during winter, $4," and "stole hatchet-hammer, $1.50." The account was placed in an unsealed envelope and handed to M., the plaintiff's then employ-er, who took it to the plaintiff's house and put on the table between the plaintiff and his wife while at supper. The wife took up the envelope and taking out the account read it to the plaintiff, who could neither read nor write. There was no evidence to shew that the defendant knew that the plaintiff could not read, the only knowledge that defendant could have had being that the wife had signed plaintiff's contract with defendant, but it die not appear that the defendant's attention was called to this fact or that he knew that the signature was not the plaintiff's own hand writing; nor was there any evidence that M read the account or took it out of the envelope, and he was not called as a witness:-Held that there was no evidence of publication; and, as the onus of proof thereof was on the plaintiff, the action failed. Jackson v. Staley, 9 O

4. Proof of Defamatory Matter.

(a) Variance between Allegation and Proof.

Words stated in the declaration as if narrated by defendant in the third person, are not supported by proof of words spoken by him in the first person. Phillips v. Odell, 5 O. 8, 483.

Where, in case for slander of the plaintiff's steamboat, it was averred in the declaration that certain persons were going on a voyage in the steamboat, and that the slanderous words were spoken in the hearing of a particular person and others, but no proof was given of the voyage nor of the persons who were going on it, nor of the individuals in whose hearing the words were stated to have been spoken, and the jury found for the plaintiff, the court held that the evidence did not support the declaration, and a new trial was granted without costs. Hamilton v. Walters, 4 O. S. 24

Where the words charged were, "You robbed the mail," and those proved, "I am not like you, running about the country with forged deeds, and robbing the mail as you did:"—Held, that the variance was fatal. McBean v. Williams, 5 O. S. 689.

Where the innuendo was, "that the plaintiff, in performing his duties of the office of treasurer of a district, had made a false return under oath to the Government of the amount of assessments received by him," and at the trial the witnesses stated that they understood the words to mean that the plaintiff had sworn that he had paid over moneys that he had not paid over, a verdict for the plaintiff was set aside, as the meaning charged was negatived by evidence. Johnston v. McDonald, 2 U. C.
R. 200.

Where the words charged were, "He (meaning the plaintiff) burn my barn," meaning thereby that the plaintiff had felonfously burnt defendant's barn, and the words proved were, "there is the man that burnt my barn: if he were not guilty of it he would not carry pistols:"—Held, that the proof did not support the declaration. Vankeuren v. Griffis, 2 U. C. R. 423.

Where the declaration only charged defendant with saying of the plaintiff, "he burnt Knox's barn," and the proof was that defendant added, "because one of the girls would not marry him:"—Quere, whether there was not a fatal variance. Manly v. Corry, 3 U. C.

More proof of the defendant saying of the plaintiff, "he burnt Knox's barn," without proof of the colloquium respecting Mrs. Knox's barn, alleged in the declaration, was insufficient. Ib.

The words charged were, "He stole wheat last winter." The words proved were, "he trie plaintiff) stole away the wheat in the night, and I was well aware of it, and could have put him in gaol for doing it."—Held, a fatal variance. McNaught v. Allen, 8 U. C.

The last sentence of the libel as set out was, "We supposed that they had become aware of the fact," &c. The sentence as proved was, "We supposed that they had by this time become aware of the fact;"—Held, variance immaterial. Smiley v. McDougall, 10 U. C. R. 113.

The words charged were spoken at an election, with reference to plaintiff's qualification, a matter in which defendant had an interest, and on which it is of consequence to encourage freedom of discussion. The evidence was doubtful as to the sense in which they were used, and the damages large. The court, under these circumstances, granted a new trial on payment of costs. Swan v. Clelland, 13 U. C. 11, 335.

In an action against husband and wife, the declaration alleged the shander to have been spoken by both defendants, while the evidence proved the wife alone to have used the words:

—Held, that the declaration was not supported by the evidence. Wilson v. West, 11 C. P. 127.

In an action against a mercantile agency company the alleged libel consisted of the publication among the general body of the defendants' subscribers of a notice or circular containing the words, after the plaintiff's name: "If interested inquire at the office." The dendants pleaded that the notice also contained words explanatory of the alleged libel, which should be read in connection therewith, and which had not been set out in the statement of claim. Upon this the plaintiff took issue. At the trial it appeared that the circular contained not only the expression arised in the statement of claim, but also a further statement referring to and explanatory of it. The evidence was confined to the effect and meaning of the words set out in the statement of claim, notwithstanding the defendants' objection that they could not be severed from the rest of the circular. The plaintiff insisted that an amendment was unnecessary, and made no application to amend until the jury had retired:—Held, that there was a variance between the libel alleged and that proved, and that, as the proposed amendment would have raised a new issue, to which the evidence did not apply, the plaintiff should not have been nonsuited. Todd v. Dun, 15 A. R. S., 12 O. R. 791.

See Marsden v. Henderson, 22 U. C. R. 585, post (b).

(b) Other Cases.

Innendo—Office of — Not Supported by Evidence.)—The declaration alleged that the defendant had spoken words (setting them out) to the effect that the plaintiff had stolen "the bond." There was no previous special inducement, but the innuendo was "meaning a certain bond from the defendant to the plaintiff for the payment of a certain sum of money." At the trial the words proved were, "If he has the bond he stole it when we settled," but the only bond spoken of in the evidence was one by the defendant to the plaintiff conditioned to secure the conveyance of some lands—the insimuation being that, after it had been delivered up by the defendant to be cancelled, it had been clandersinely abstracted by the plaintiff:—Held, that the innuendo went beyond its proper office; and the proof did not support the innuendo, for such a bond as was referred to in the evidence could not be the subject of larceny. Caverley v. Caverley, 3. O. 8, 338.

Innuendo—Onus — Jury — Newspaper— Report of Speech—"Blackmailing," Meaning of—Truth of Words.]—In an action for libel the words complained of were: "It can be readily understood what interest Mr. M. has in the matter, and why he should make advances, hire committee rooms, and generally control the campaign, when $4,000,000, which he controls, will be made available if (the plaintiff) can be elected mayor. In addition to this, Mr. M. has between $7,000 and $10,000 of claims against (the plaintiff), which in proceedings it was shewn under oath of Mr. M. that he hoped to be paid, should be succeed in qualifying (the plaintiff) for mayor, and then electing him." The innuendo was, that the defendants charged the plaintiff with havthe defendants charged the plaintiff with having "entered into a corrupt arrangement" with one M., "whereby the plaintiff should use the office of mayor, when elected, for private gain," and with having "unlawfully and corruptly influenced or attempted to influence the said M. to support him in the mayoralty campaign, both financially and corruptly influenced "by said M." to use the said office of mlayor to improperly advance the pseudiary and private undertakings of said M."—Held, that, there being no evidence apart from the newspaper article in which they anneared. the newspaper article in which they appeared, to shew that the words bore any other than their ordinary meaning, the onus of proof of the innuendo was not satisfied; there was no reasonable evidence to go to the jury that the words conveyed the meaning which the plain-tiff attributed to them. The plaintiff also complained of a statement published by the defendants, that a speaker at a public meef-ing "characterized" the plaintiff's behaviour as "blackmailing." The defendant pleaded the truth of the words used:—Held, that it made no difference that the defendants were only reporting, or purporting to report, the words of another, or whether the report was accurate or inaccurate-that question arises on a defence of fair and accurate report only. If the words were true, the plaintiff could not recover. The word "blackmailing" should should not, at the present day and in this country, be limited in its meaning to the case of the crime of extortion by threats, or any other crime. Where a man, having no right, nor any pretence of right, to receive one farthing (except his proper law costs, if he succeeded in the action), receives $4,500 to hush a complaint counsel from laying such a foundation, a new trial was ordered. Huber v. Crookall, 10 O. s'llitaining and beecluded the plaintiff's would have been allowable. Meaning of Words—"Lock Him up"]— In the first of the alleged libels one of the statements made along plantiff was "that during an election campaign that was "that during an election campaign to keep him from disgracing them on the stump;"—Held, that evidence was admissible on the part of the defendant to explain the meaning of the words "beck him up." Stirton v. Gummer, 31 O. R. 27.

Person Referred to-Understanding of Witnesses—Variance between Allegation and Proof.]—A declaration for libel set out the following words: "The farmers, as a class of producers, are the only ones that I am aware of who allow another class, the purchasers of their produce, the sole right to weigh their produce, and helplessly submit to their decision.* This state of things has introduced a men somewhat similar to Rob Roy, who call themselves commission merchants and wheat-buyers, and make it their business to levy blackmail upon every man that sells them a load of wheat. This is done by a them a lond of wheat. This is done by a species of thimblerigging performed on the platform scales, by which from five to ten bushels are taken from every hundred bushels bought," with an innuendo that all this bought," with an innuendo that all this was intended to charge the plaintiff with such In the libel proved, at the place marked with a star, this sentence was contain-"This state of helpless dependency has been introduced with the platform scales, which the farmer has not yet learned to use, for when the balance scale was in use either party performed the operation of weighing, and fraud was soon detected:"—Held, not a substantial variance, for the same imputation appeared upon the writing with or without the part omitted. Held, also, that though a class only was described, the plaintiff might be referred to, and that a verdict in his favour was justified by the evidence of witnesses who stated this to be their understanding and be-lief. Marsden v. Henderson, 22 U. C. R. 585.

Person Referred to - Surrounding Circumstances—Public Meeting—Notes Taken.1 The plaintiff, who was employed by a manufacturing company of which the defendant was resident, brought an action for the seduction of his daughter against the superintendent of the company. Particulars in regard to alleged seduction having appeared in public newspapers, a meeting of some of the members and servants of the company was held, at which the defendant presided, and a resolution was passed expressing confidence in the in-nocence of the superintendent of the alleged seduction. A letter was then or immediately afterwards drawn up and signed by a number of the persons present, including the defendant, handed to a reporter for publication, and was published in several newspapers, without any objection on the defendant's part. letter was addressed to the superintendent, referring to the charges against him which had appeared in the newspapers, declared the belief of the signers in his innocence, and con-cluded, "We believe you are the victim of a conspiracy as base and ungrateful as was ever sprung on an innocent man, and we pledge ourselves to stand by you until your innocence shall have been clearly established or untilwhich we are confident will never be-you are shewn to be the monster depicted in the public press." The plaintiff was not named in the letter. The plaintiff sued the defendant for libel in consequence of the publication of this letter. The innuendo was that the plaintiff was guilty of the offence of conspiring and agreeing with his daughter to defame and slander or otherwise injure the reputation and slather of the superintendent. The whole character of the superintendent. The whole question of libel or no libel was left to the jury, who found for the plaintiff with $1.500 damages :- Held, that it was not necessary to decide whether the letter could be construed as decide whether the letter could be supporting the innuendo of a criminal conspiracy; the question really was whether the defendant had libelled the plaintiff; and this question had been determined by the jury, Question had been determined by the Jury, 2. That the surrounding circumstances were admissible in evidence for the purpose of shewing that persons conversant with those circumstances might naturally conclude that the plaintiff was the person aimed at by the letter; and it was enough that the circumstances and the libel taken together pointed to some one, and that the jury found the plaintiff to have been the person intended. 3. That the verdict of the jury could not be interfered with on the ground that the damages were excessive.

4. That the evidence of what took place at the meeting was admissible as proof that the plaintiff was the person intended by the resolution passed at it, the defendant having been present; and that a witness who was present at the meeting and took notes, which were afterwards printed, could refer to the printed copy, after the destruction of the original notes, to shew exactly what did take place. That the occasion was not one of privilege qualified privilege. Taylor v. Massey, 20 O. R. 429, Person Referred to — Injury to Business,] — It is proper to ask witnesses in a libel action who, in their opinion, is aimed at by the libel in question. It is not proper in such an action to ask a witness whether, in his opinion, the alleged libel is likely to cause injury to the plaintiffs' business; but the court refused to interfere because of the admission of the opinion of one witness, where in the charge to the jury special stress was laid on the fact that they were to form their own opinion as to the dunages, and the damages allowed were small. Journal Printing Co. v. MacLean, 23 A. R. 324.

5. Under the General Issue.

In an action for libel the truth of defendant's remarks is not admissible under the general issue. Small v. McKenzie, Dra. 174.

In case, for slander, defendant may, under the general issue, shew that the words spoken were used in a privileged communication. Richards v. Boulton, 4 O. S. 95.

In slander not guilty puts in issue the defamatory sense imputed to the words. Forbes v. McClelland, 4 P. R. 272.

6. Other Cases.

Authorship of Libel-Anonymous Cireular—"Style"—Experts.]—In an action for a libel contained in an anonymous letter, circulated among solicitors, charging the plaintiff, a solicitor, with unprofessional conduct, no direct evidence was given to shew that the defendant, another solicitor, was the author of the letter, but the plaintiff relied upon several circumstances pointing to that conclusion:-Held, reversing the judgment in 11 O. R. 541, that evidence of the defendant being in the habit of using certain uncommon expressions, which occurred in the letter, was improperly rejected; but semble, that a witness could not be asked his opinion as to the authorship of a letter; and evidence of literary style on which to found a comparison, if ad missible at all, was not so except as expert evidence. Scott v. Crerar, 14 A. R. 152

Authorship of Libel-Refusal to Auswer Question as to—Inference—Surrounding Circumstances. |—The libel consisted of a letter published in a Boston, U. S., newspaper, alleged to have been written by defendant, The letter, which was signed by a person of the same name as the defendant, stated that it was written in answer to an anonymous letter, dated 15th September, published in the same newspaper, which the writer stated he had seen the manuscript of, and which was a clumsy attempt to make the writer believe was written further off than Ottawa, and had also seen the manuscript of a letter written by an Ottawa shoe dealer to a Boston firm, and that the handwriting of both was the same. anonymous letter referred to a trip made by defendant to New Brunswick, which was also referred to in the letter in question. The letter in question also spoke of the writer of the anonymous letter as a person who had come to Ottawa and opened a boot and shoe business, and stayed at the same hotel as the writer of the letter in question. The letter spoke of a certain machine called the Crescent The letter Heel Plate Machine as "our" machine. The defendant at the trial refused to answer whether or not he was the writer of the letter in question, claiming privilege on the ground that it might criminate him, and the publishers, for the examination of whom a commission issued, refused to be examined for the like reason. The defendant in his examinalike reason. tion stated that both he and the plaintiff were boot and shoe dealers in Ottawa; that he was a subscriber and correspondent to this paper: that he had been on a trip to New Brunswick and on his return saw the anonymous letter of 15th September in this newspaper, as also the manuscript thereof, as well as the manuscript of a letter to a Boston firm, both apparently in the same handwriting. The plaintiff's counsel stated that in addition to the above he intended proving that when plaintiff came to Ottawa, he stopped at the same hotel as defendant, and that defendant was the sole agent for the Crescent Heel Plate Machine:-Held, that this was sufficient evidence to go to the jury of defendant being the author of the letter in question. Quare, whether the refusal to answer the direct question as to authorship or the claim of privilege against criminal proceedings, afforded any evidence thereof, by way of admission or estoppel or otherwise. Harkins v. Doney, 17 O. R. 22.

Confession by Plaintiff-Justification Mitigation of Damages.] -When in an action for slander and libel, imputing criminal offences, the defendant set up by way of mitigation of damages, that the plaintiff had confessed to a third party that he had done the acts charged against him :-Held, that evidence of such a confession was only admissible under a plea of justification, unless the de-fendant added on the record that she had now good cause for discrediting that part of the admission or confession alleged to have been made by the plaintiff, although she honestly believed it to be true at the time she repeated the words complained of :-Held, also, that objection should have been taken to the pleading either by demurrer or by application to strike it out as embarrassing. Switzer v. Laidman, 18 O. R. 420.

Document Referred to in Writing Complained of. —In an action for libel the trial Judge ruled that the plaintiffs were bound to produce and put in as part of their case the written advertisement referred to by the defendant in the article complained of: and the plaintiffs, though protesting, accepted the ruling and put in the evidence:—Held, that the ruling was wrong; but that the plaintiffs were not entitled to a new trial, the only injury to the plaintiffs being to let the defendant's counsel have the last word with the jury. Grahm v. McKimm, 19 O. R. 475.

Druggist—Sale of Medicine.]—Proof that several persons practising physic had purchased medicines from the plaintiff:—Held, sufficient to prove an allegation that plaintiff was a druggist, vendor of medicines, and apothecary. Terry v. Starkweather, Tay. 51.

Engineer—Weight of Evidence.]—In an action for a libel published in a newspaper against the plaintiff in his professional capacity as town eigineer of, &c., where a verdict was rendered for the defendant on evidence preponderating greatly in plaintiff's favour, the court set aside such verdiet, and granted a new trial, on payment of costs. Peters v. Wallace, S. C. P. 238.

Fair Comment — Defence of — Proof of Truth of Matters Commented on.]—In this action of libel the defendant did not plead justification, but he said in his defence that the alleged libel was a fair comment upon matters of public and general interest; — Held, that he was entitled under this defence to shew that the matters upon which he commented were true. Lefroy v. Burnside, 4 L. R. (Ireland) 556, Davis v. Shenstone, 11 App. Cas. 187, and Riordan v. Willeox, 4 Times I. R. 475, followed. Wills v. Carman, 17 O. R. 223.

Falsity of Slander.]—Slander for calling a person "a contemptible thief," Justification not pleaded. Defence that the occasion was privileged. Semble, that evidence of the falsity of the words should not have been received on the plaintiff's examination in chief. Ross v. Baucke, 21 O. R. 692. Newspaper—Report of Trial—Comment.] In a stion for libel the publication given in a cidence consisted on the reports of relative to the report of the report

Physician and Surgeon—License,]—Where in an action for libel, the plaintiff set out with an inducement of character as "a physician and surgeon, licensed to practise according to the laws of the Province;"—Held, that proof that he acted as such was insufficient without shewing a license; but that, as he was libelled in his private character, he was entitled to recover on that ground, notwithstanding the failure of proof of the other averment; and the omission of part of the libel, which did not after the sense, was considered immaterial. Hamilton v. Burnell, 2 O. S. 205.

Surgeon—Unskilful Treatment.]—In an action for libel against a surgeon respecting unskilful treatment by him of a fractured thich, the question was raised, whether the failure to cure was not owing to the rough treatment of the patient by his master; and defendant desired to prove that the patient had been heard to complain of such usage;—Semble, that such evidence was admissible. Smith v. McIntosh, 14 U. C. R. 592.

VIII. NEWSPAPER.

Advertisement—Criticism Before Publication, 1—The plaintiffs brought a written advertisement to the defendant for the purpose of having it published in his newspaper, but the defendant refused to insert it, and the plaintiffs took it away, intimating that it would be immediately published in another newspaper. It was so published; and on the day of its publication, appeared in the defendant's newspaper, referring to it as unfit for publication. The plaintiffs sued the defendant for libel. The trial fudge tool the jury that if the article was nothing more that a wind to the article was nothing more that we not reflicted that the defendant was not entitled to criticise that the defendant was not entitled to criticise the advertisement because it had not been published before the article criticising it:—Held, that this was not a valid objection. Graham v. McKimm, 19 O. R. 475.

Apology—Pleading.]—See Doyle v. Owen Sound Printing Co., 8 P. R. 69.

Apology — Time.] — Action brought for libes published in a newspaper called the "Daily Leader," of which defendant was proprietor. The first publication appeared on the 20th October, 1802, the second on the 5th November. This action was commenced on the 15th December, and the declaration was dated on the 24th December, 1862. On the same day an apology was published in the same paper, which the plaintiff's counsel, on the argument, admitted was sufficient, if published within a reasonable time, under the statute, which point being left to the jury, ther found the property of the pury, they found trial.—Held, that the question of the publication of the apology within a reasonable time was properly left to the jury to decide. Semble, the apology was too late; but the evidence shewed neither actual malice nor gross negligence in the publication of the libel, and the court refused to set aside a verdict for defendant. The publication of the apology "at the earliest opportunity" is to be construed as meaning within a reasonable time, the circumstances of the case and the opportunities of the defendant to publish it being considered. Cotton v. Beaty, 13 C. P. 243.

Fair Comment — General Verdict — New Trial.]—See Manitoba Free Press Co. v. Martin, 21 S. C. R. 518, ante VII. 4.

Fair Comment—Truth of Statement.]—
Under a defence of "fair comment" in a libel action, evidence of the existence of a certain state of facts on which it is alleged the comment was fairly made, is admissible, but not evidence of the truth of the statement complained of as a libel, Wills v. Carman, 17 O. R. 223, discussed. Judgment in 23 O. R. 222 reversed. Brown v. Moper, 20 A. R. 509.

Mercantile Agency—Security for Costs.]

—A printed paper issued daily by the conductors of a mercantile agency, to persons who are subscribers to the agency, for the purpose of giving the information required by such subscribers, is a "newspaper," and "printed for sale," within the meaning of s, 1 of R. S. O. 1897 c. 68; and the publishers are therefore, in an action for libel brought against them, entitled to the benefit of the provisions as to security for costs contained in s, 10. Stattery v. Dum, 18 P. R. 168.

Notice of Action—Statement of Claim.]—newspaper, the statement of claim must be confined to the statements complained of and specified in the notice required by R. S. O. 1887 c. 57, s. 5, s.-s. 2, to be given by the plaintiff before action; and where the plaintiff in such notice specified parts of an article published by the defendant, and in her statement of claim set out the whole article, the portions not specified in the notice were struck out. Obernier v. Robertson, 14 P. R. 553.

Notice of Action—Sufficiency.]—In an action brought against a newspaper company for alleged libellous articles published in the company's newspaper, the notice complaining of the publication given in pursuance of R. S. O. 1887; c. 57, s. 5, s. s. 2, was as served on each control of the publication of the publication of the company's office, and a similar notice was served on the chairman of board of directors at the said office:—Held, that this was a notice merely to the editor, and not to the defendants, and therefore was not sufficient under the statute. Burnell v. London Free Press Printing Co., 27 O. R. 6,

Public Benefit—Duty of Journalist.]—
To a statement of claim, charging the defendants with the publishing of the plaintiff, in their newspaper, that he had seduced and betrayed one B. P., and was a man unfit for the society of respectable people, &c., whereby the plaintiff was injured in his credit, etc., the defendants pleaded that the article was published bona fide and without malice, and for the public benefit, and in the usual course of the defendant's duty as public journalists, and was a correct, fair, and honest report of proceedings of public interest and concern:—Held, bad, for the publication complained of was in no sense for the public benefit, nor published in the course of the defendants' duty. Farmer v. Hamilton Tribane, &c., Co., 3 O, R, 538.

Publication — Affidavit of Pronvictors — Incorporated Company — Malice — Special Damage—Loss of Custons.]—By s. 13 of 50 Vict. c. 22 (M.), "The Libel Act." no person is entitled to the benefit thereof unless he has compiled with the provisions of 50 Vict. c. 23, "An Act respecting newspapers and other like publications." By s. 1 of the latter Act. no By s. 1 of the latter Act, no person shall print or publish a newspaper until an affidavit or affirmation made and signed, and containing such matter as the Act directs, has been deposited with the prothonotary of the court of Queen's bench or clerk of the Crown for the district in which the newspaper is published; by s. 2 such affidavit or affirmation shall set forth the real and true names, &c., of the printer or publisher of the news paper and of all the proprietors; by s. 6, if the number of publishers does not exceed four. the amdayit or affirmation shall be made by all, and if they exceed four it shall be made four of them; and s. 5 provides that the affidavit or affirmation may be taken before a justice of the peace or commissioner for taking affidavits to be used in the court of Queen's bench: — Held, that 50 Vict. c. 23 contemplates, and its provisions apply to, the case of a corporation being the sole publisher and proprietor of a newspaper. 2. That s. 2 is complied with if the affidavit or affirmation states that a corporation is the proprietor of the newspaper and prints and publishes the 3. That the affidavit or affirmation, in case the proprietor is a corporation, may be made by the managing director. 4. That in every proceeding under s. 1 there is the option either to swear or affirm, and the right to affirm is not restricted to members of certain religious bodies or persons having religious scruples, 5. That if the affidavit or affirmation purports to have been taken before a commissioner his authority will be presumed until the contrary is shewn. By s. 11 of the Libel Act, actual malice or culpable negligence must be proved in an action for libel unless special damages are claimed:—Held, that such malice or negligence must be established to the satisfaction of the jury, and if there is a disagree-ment as to these issues the verdict cannot stand. Held, further, that a general allegation of damages by loss of custom is not a claim for special damages under this section. down v. Manitoba Free Press Co., 20 S. C.

IX. PARTIES.

Husband and Wife.]—Under R. S. O. 1877 c. 125, in an action for a tort (in this case the action was for slander) committed by a wife during coverture, the husband is not a proper party, but the wife must be sued alone. Amer v. Rogers, 31 C. P. 195, See Lee v. Hopkins, 20 O. R. 666.

Husband and Wife.]—A married woman may bring an action of libel in her own name without joining her husband as plaintiff. The omission of the words "either in contract or in tort or otherwise." found in s. 2 (2) of the Married Woman's Property Act, 1884, from s. 3 (2), R. 8. O. 1887 c. 132, does not limit the legal effect and operation of that section, Spahr v. Bean, 18 O. R. 70.

Husband and Wife—Joint Action by— Husband a Witness for Defence—Adultery of Wife—Estoppel—Dominus Litis.]—See Campbell v. Campbell, 25 C. P. 308.

Members of a Class. |—Where slanderous words were spoken under such circumstances as that the person to whom they were spoken in the control of the control of the control of the sons they were intended to be applied — Left, that either of the two members of the class was entitled to sue, but it was necessary for her to prove that the words were untrue of the other member, otherwise she could not recover. Albrecht v. Burkholder, 18 O. R. 287,

Several Defendants—Joint Action.]—A joint action may be maintained against several persons for the joint publication of a libel. Brown v. Hirley, 5 O. S. 734.

An action for oral slander will not lie against several defendants jointly. Carrier v. Garrant, 23 C. P. 276.

1. Before the Judicature Act.

(a) Declaration.

Amendment.] — See Anon., 29 U. C. R. 456.

Cause of Action.]—See Fellowes v. Hunter, 20 U. C. R. 382: Groff v. Bricker, 4 C. P. 154; Jackson v. McDonald, 1 U. C. R. 19.

Cause of Action — Sufficiency.] — The words alleged in the declaration were, "it's my soul's opinion that nothing else kept that girl in the house last winter but taking medicine to banish the young baker." Innuendo, that the plaintiff took medicine to procure abortion:—Held, that the declaration charged a good cause of action; also, that the damages (£190), though large, were not under the circumstances excessive. Miller v. Houghton, 10 U. C. R. 348.

Cause of Action — Sufficiency.] — Held, that in this case a sufficient cause of action for libel was stated, the article complained of charging the plaintiff with being concerned in a system of plundering visitors to the Falls, and that there was no ground for arresting judgment. Barnet v. Davis, 14 U. C. R. 271.

Cause of Action — Trade-libel — Several Counts.]—See Russell v. Wilkes, 27 U. C. R.

Inducement.]—See Johnston v. McDonald, 1 U. C. R. 384.

Inducement—Colloquium.]—As to the degree of certainty formerly required in making the colloquium refer to the inducement. Marter v. Digby, 4 U. C. R. 441.

Inducement—Innuendo.]—A declaration on the following words, as varied in three different counts: "I saw Peter (meaning the plaintiff) with the heifer," (meaning that the defendant saw the plaintiff commit the crime of sodomy with the heifer) is .." I saw Peter with the heifer just at the cross way," (meaning that the defendant saw the plaintiff ten commit the crime of sodomy with the defendant's heiferen is ... "I have seen Peter Johnson with my heifer; Peter Johnson is the man that did it, and I can swear within a foot to the ground where he stood when he committed the crime aforesaid:"—Held, bad, in agrest of judgment, on the ground that the words did not themselves import what was charged as their meaning, and that there was no sufficient inducement or statement of prefatory matter, to which the innuendoes in the declaration could refer. Johnson v. Hedge, 6 U. C. R. 337.

Inducement — Innuendo.] — The plaintiff averred that she was the mother of one B. and then complained that the defendant, well knowing this, published in his paper the following libel, which she averred imported that she was the mother of an illegitimate child: "Of the Barkers—that was the name of his reputed father; what was his mother's I either never knew, or have forzoi, but I know it was not Barker." On demurrer to the declaration, as not containing inducements sufficient to support such an innuendo: — Held, declaration good. Anderson v. Stewart, S U. C. R. 243.

Inducement—Innuendo.]—Where the words spoken were, "Green, you have been mad with me ever since I caught you with your daughter;" innuendo, having sexual intercourse with his daughter under the age of twelve;—Held, that the declaration should have averredwhat the plaintiff had a daughter either under the age of ten or above that age and under twelve, and that the words spoken had reference to such daughter. Green v. Campbell, 6 U. C. R. 50.

Remarks as to the effect of C. L. P. Act, s. 110 (C. S. U. C. c. 103, s. 2), and as to the decision in Hemmings v. Gasson, E. B. & E. 346. Black v. Alcock, 12 C. P. 19.

Innuendo.]—Words cannot be amplified in their meaning by unwarranted innuendoes. Morley v. Nichols, 1 U. C. R. 235.

Misjoinder of Counts—Partnership.]—One count for slander stated a cause of action accruing to the plaintiffs as partners, by reason of its being an injury to them in their joint business; other counts in the same declaration charged defendant with imputing forgery to the plaintiffs as partners, &c.;—Held, the imputation of forgery not being a partnership imputation, that the declaration was bad for misjoinder of counts. Morley v. Nichols, 1 U. C. R. 235.

Part of Count — Demurrer to,] — A defendant will not be allowed in slander to single out some of the words of a count and demur to them as not actionable, while the same count contains other words uttered in the same conversation which are clearly actionable. Taylor v, Carr, 3 U. C. R. 306.

Particular Calling or Character of Plaintiff.]—When words are libellous in themselves, it is not necessary to aver that they were spoken of the plaintiff in any particular character or in reference to any particular fact. Bell v. Stewart, E. T. 11 Geo. IV.

Particular Calling or Character of Plaintiff. — When the plaintiff declares against the defendant for charging him with being "a public robber," with an innuendo that "he, the plaintiff, had defrauded the public in his private dealings with them," it is not necessary for the plaintiff to aver that he is in any office, trade, or employment, in which he could have defrauded the public. Taylor v. Carr, 3 U. C. R. 306.

Repetition of Slander — Several counts. |—Several counts for repeated utterances of the alleged slander on the same occasion were allowed. Forbes v. McClelland, 4 P. R. 272.

Special Damage — Amendment.] — The plaintiff, a schoolmaster, sued defendant for libel, and laid as special damages his dismissal from his school. It appeared at the trial that the real effect of the libel was to prevent his being examined by the superintendent with a view to his qualification for receiving a renewed certificate. The plaintiff applied at the trial for leave to amend the allegation of special damage to meet the evidence, which was allowed:—Held, that the Judge at nisi prius had power to make the amendment. Jackson v. Simpson, 4 U. C. R. 287.

Special Damage — Loss of Society — Names of Persons, |—A declaration by a married woman for slander imputing that she had committed incest and adultery with her father, and alleging as grounds of special damage. (1) the loss of the consortium of her husband, (2) the loss of the society of friends, was:— Held, on demurrer, good, although the second ground was clearly insufficient in not naming the friends. Palmer v. Solmes, 45 U. C. R. 15.

Special Damage — Huxband and Wife—Loss of Hospitality and Consortium—A mendment.]—In a declaration by a huxband and wife for the slander of the wife in accusing her of adultery, it was alleged as special damage that the wife had lost and been deprived of the hospitality of friends with whom she was in the labit of associating, and who now refused to associate with her:—Held, on a motion for arrest of judgment, a sufficient allegation of special damage to support the action. Quare, whether the allegation of the loss of the consortium of the huxband would have been alone sufficient:—Held, that the declaration claiming the damages as the wife's, although when recovered they might belong
although when recovered they might belong to the husband, was no objection, and, at all events, was merely a matter of form and so amendable. Campbell v. Campbell, 25 C. P. 368.

Words Not Set Out-Joinder of Husband and Wife.]-The first and second counts of a declaration, in an action by husband and wife, charged slander of the wife, consisting of imputations of adultery and prostitution. without setting out the words :-Held, clearly bad. The third count was for assaulting the wife, whereby, &c.; and the fourth and fifth counts were respectively for assault of the wife, per quod consortium amisit, and of the husband himself. The plaintiffs claimed damages jointly under the first four counts, and the husband alone under the fifth count:-Semble, that the claim for damages by both plaintiffs, though bad as to the fourth count, was good as to the first three; but that both plaintiffs being expressed in the declaration to sue in respect of all the counts, though the husband alone, at the conclusion, claimed in respect of the fifth count, the whole declara-tion was bad. Breen v. McDonald, 22 C. P. HIN

See ante VII. 4.

(b) Pleas of Justification,

Argumentativeness—Insufficiency.]—In case for a libel charging the plaintiff with being a "convicted felon," a plea that in a memorial to the Lieutenant-Governor he had confessed being guilty of bigamy, is had, as an argumentative and insufficient way of pleading a justification. Longworth v. Hyndman, I U. C. R. 17.

Attributing Different Meaning.]—A plea seeking to justify the use of the words in a sense different to that imputed was disallowed, but defendant was permitted to justify generally. Forbes v. McClelland, 4 P. 1. 272.

Generality.]—Held, upon the declaration for libel and the several pleas thereto, set out in this case, that the pleas were had; the second and third as being too general, and not stating the facts on which defendant formed his opinion as given in the libel of the plaintiff's want of respectability and influence, and the fourth as not co-extensive with that part of the publication which it attempted to justify. Gibb v. Shaw, 18 U. C. R. 165.

Generality.] — Declaration for a libel charging defendant, an inspecting field officer of militia, with swearing and drunkenness on a specific occasion and generally. Plea, that the statements complained of were true in the sense in which they were alleged to have been used:—Held, plea bad, as being too general. Buretto v. Piric, 26 U. C. R. 468.

Immateriality. —The first count set out that the plaintiffs were watchmakers, and sold certain watches made for them in Switzerland, and other superior watches made in England, marking the former with the mame of their firm only, adding on the other the words, "Chronometer makers to the Queen." The libel complained of charged in substance that a large proportion of the watches advertised by them were merely Swiss watches, imposed upon the public as English, and at twice their true value. In the second count the libel alleged charged the plaintiffs with selling their watches made in Switzerland as English, and thus defrauding the public. Plea to sach count, that the plaintiffs marked their Swiss watches with the name, "Thomas Russell & Sons, London and Liverpool," not "Thomas Russell & Sons," only, as alleged:—Held, bad, as offering an immaterial issue. Held, also, that each count shewed a good cause of action. Russell v. Wilkes, 27 U. C. R. 280.

In Criminal Proceedings. | — See ante

Sufficiency.] — To an action for slander, in saying of the plaintiff, "I am told that Muma was the man that killed the pedlar, and I believe it," the defendant pleaded that he was told that the plaintiff was the man that killed the pedlar, and he did believe it:—Held, insufficient. Muma v. Harmer, 17 U. C. R. 293.

Sufficiency.]—The sixth count was for a libel, in which the defendant had stated that the plaintif stood charged with the crime of forgery, committed not against one man, but a whole community. Defendant pleaded, justifying this charge by setting out at length a fraud committed by plaintiff and others at an election by falsifying the poll books, and inserting fictitious votes, and his trial and conviction therefor; and he alleged that this was what he referred to in that part of the libel, and was understood to mean by all to whom it was published:—Held, sufficient. Fellowers v. Hunter, 20 U. C. R. 382.

Sufficiency.]-Declaration, that the plaintiff was a conductor in the employment of a railway company of which the defendant was manager, and had been dismissed therefrom, and that defendant falsely and maliciously published of the plaintiff, in relation to his conduct while so employed and his dismissal, in the form of a hand-bill addressed to the employees of the company, the following: "It having come to the knowledge of the directors of the company that an envelope was mailed at Hamilton, containing four coupon tickets for passages from Suspension Bridge to Detroit, which had been previously used, but not cancelled or returned to the audit office in accordance with the regulations, and which envelope was addressed in the handwriting of conductor T. (the plaintiff) to a conductor on the New York Central Railway Company, conductors and others are informed that conductor T. has been dismissed from the service of the Great Western Railway Company. Innuendo, that the plaintiff had conducted himself fraudulently in his said employment, and attempted to defraud the company, and had been dismissed therefor. Plea, that it is true, as stated in the alleged libel, that an envelope was mailed at Hamilton containing four coupon tickets for passages from Suspension Bridge to Detroit, which had been previously used, but not cancelled or returned to the audit office in accordance with the regulations, and which envelope was addressed in plaintiff's handwriting to a conductor on the New York Central Railway Company, and that conductors and others were informed that the plaintiff had been dismissed from the service of the Great Western Railway Company:

—Held, on demurrer, that under C. S. U. C. c. 103, s. 2, the plea was a good defence, for that the defendant undertook by it to justify the libel with the immendo. Tench v. Swinyard, 29 U. C. R. 319.

Sufficiency.]—The libel for which the plaintiff sued alleged in substance that the plaintiffs, a life assurance company, had lost heavily on debentures taken at par, and nearly worthless, which they had nevertheless con-tinued to value; that they were compelled by public opinion to call in an actuary, but prevented him from making a proper valuation; vagance and daugerous debility; that for years they had trembled on the very verge of disaster; and that they were in an unsound and precarious condition, &c. The plea to the whole declaration alleged only, in substance, that defendants had for several years made untruthful annual statements; that they had lost large sums of money by investments; and that they paid larger bonuses and dividends and salaries than their true financial position would justify:-Held, that the plea did not justify all the material charges in the declara-Assurance Co. v. O'Loane, 32 U. C. R. 379.

Sufficiency.]—Declaration, that the plaintiff voted at a certain parliamentary election, and took the oath prescribed by «, 41 of the Election Act of 1898, and that in reference to such oath defendant falsely and maliciously spoke. &c., of the plaintiff the words. "He store to what was false, and I can prove it," meaning that the plaintiff was guilty of wilful and corrupt perjury. Plea, to so much of the declaration as related to the speaking of the alleged words without the alleged meaning, that the plaintiff did swear false in swearing that he was a resident of a certain electoral division, and as such entitled to vote, &c.—Held, on demurrer, plea bad, because if it intended to specify perjury, it should have distinctly charged that offence, and if not, the general issue should have been pleaded. Strucken v. Barton, 34 U. C. R. 374.

Sufficiency—General Charge—Particular Instance.]—As to part of a libel complained of, charging that the plaintiff had narrowly escaped being indicted for perjury, defendant justified, alleging that in a certain suit the plaintiff, as plaintiff's attorney therein, in an affidavit for a ca. sa. had sworn falsely to certain specified statements made to him by one R.; that defendant in that suit had recovered damages against the plaintiff for falsely and maliciously making such affidavit, and conperjury, but was dissuaded:—Held, a good plea. In the second count, the libel alleged was in part the publication of an affidavit made by R., in which he set out the action against the plaintiff, and the statements sworn by plaintiff to have been made to him by R., and averred that on the trial of that action he. R., had sworn that these statements were false, as in fact they were. Defendant, in a plea to this part of the libel, averred that the e statements made by R., repeating them, were true:—Held, sufficient. In a third count the libel was, that the plaintiff, a practising barrister and attorney, was a pettifogger and without character. This defendant justified, by setting out one matter (the suit men-tioned in the other pleas) in which the plaintiff was alleged to have acted as charged in the libel:—Held, bad, for the general charge could not be justified by a single instance. Fitch v. Lenmon, 27 U. C. R. 273.

Sufficiency — Justifying Words without Innuendo.]—See Davis v. Stewart, 29 U. C. R.

Sufficiency-Multifariousness. |- As to an assertion in the libel complained of, that the plaintiff "left New York with his creditors in the lurch," defendant pleaded that before the alleged grievances the plaintiff resided in New York, and came to Canada permanently to reside without having paid or satisfied his creditors in New York:-Held, upon demurrer, bad, as for all that was stated in the plea the plaintiff might have left New York with the consent and approbation of his credi-As to a charge that the plaintiff "resorted to that style of financiering which in the vernacular is called swindling," defendant pleaded that the plaintiff obtained from one W. R. B. a certain promissory note, with the understanding that he, W. R. B., should at the maturity thereof pay the amount actually due between the plaintiff and himself, and that the plaintiff should retire the note; and that W. R. B. did pay plaintiff the amount so due, but plaintiff did not retire the note, and W. R. B. was sued thereon. Secondly, that the plaintiff obtained from one W. a promissory note for $200, and upon its maturity a re-newal for $100 and $100 in cash, upon the express understanding that he would retire the $200 note, which he did not, but used and appropriated the funds and new note to his own use:-Held, that the receipt and application of the funds as above stated did not in the first case amount to swindling; and that the facts of the second case stated as a justification were sufficiently stated to entitle defendant to the decision of a jury thereon. Brown v. Beatty, 12 C. P. 107.

Sufficiency-Multifariousness.]-The matter relied upon as libellous was that the plain-tiff "has for the past twelve months made his paper a receptacle for coarse abuse, scurrilous personalities, and in some cases gross slanders on private individuals who happened to come within the pale of his displeasure. That he has dragged into print in the most offensive manner the names of some of our most respectable and philanthropic citizens, invaded privacy of their personal relations, and held their peculiarities up to ridicule, and has, by heaping unmerited abuse on some of our most valued institutions, endeavoured to turn them into a bye-word and a laughing stock. is, no doubt, a generous impulse in our nature, * * * but it is surely carrying such an impulse a great deal too far * * * if we so far lose the sense of his moral turpitude as to elevate into an oppressed hero the man who is suffering the merited consequences of a long course of deliberate, determined, and reckless wickedness." Defendant justified, setting out articles from the newspaper published by the plaintiff twelve months previous to the publication by the defendant of the communica-tion complained of, and alleging that the said matters published by the plaintiff were false and malicious, and that the persons so libelled were persons of good name," &c.—Held, that primā facie the articles set forth in the pleas afforded a justification for the alleged libel.—Held, libel:-Held, also, in accordance with Brown v. Beatty, 12 C. P. 107, that the plea was not bad for multifariousness. Stewart v. Rowlands, 14 C. P. 485.

See Small v. McKenzie, Dra. 174, ante, VII. 6.

(c) Other Pleas.

Not Guilty—Inconsistent Plea.]—In an action for libel the plea of not guilty was held inconsistent with a plea of apology and payment into court, and was ordered to be struck out. Dayle v. Owen Sound Printing Co., S P. R. 69.

Plea Negativing Inducement—Immaterial Issue.]—See Johnston v. McDonald, 1 U. C. R. 384.

Public Matter—Fair Comment.]—The alleged libel purported to be founded on information given to defendant by "a resident of this city vesterday," meaning the day before the publication. One of the pleas sought to be pleaded alleged that the gravamen of the charge was matter of "public notoriety and discussion," and that the words used were a fair comment, &c., and made other statements which it was alleged would enable defendant to introduce evidence of irrelevant matters:— Held, that the general plea that the publication was a fair bonh fide comment, &c., might be pleaded, but the plea as framed and set out in the case was inconsistent with the words used in the alleged libel, and could not be allowed. Detelin v. Moglan, 4 P. R. 150.

(d) Replication.

Conviction-Reversal. 1-The declaration was for a libel of the plaintiff, in the following words: "Old S., who was naturalized by serv ing a term in the penitentiary of New York Innuendo, that the plaintiff had served a term as a convict in said prison. Defendants justified by setting up a conviction of the plaintiff of an indictable offence before the recorder's court in Buffalo, prior to the publication of the libel, his sentence of imprisonment in the state prison of New York state for two years, and his detention there for that period Replication, that within three months from the alleged conviction, and before the plaintiff was imprisoned for said term, the conviction was reversed by the supreme court of the state, was reversed by the supreme court of the state, and the plaintiff released from custody upon the charge against him:—Held, on demurrer, replication good. Davis v. Stewart, 18 C. P.

Conviction — Reversal, 1—The plaintiff complained of a libel describing him as an expenitentiary bird from the state prison at Auburn, in the state of New York. Immendo, that the plaintiff had served a term in the penitentiary as a convict, to which it was alleged that he was sent on a conviction for obtaining money by false pretences. Defendant pleaded, as to the words without the meaning alleged, that the plaintiff, before the libel, had been duly convicted of the offence mentioned, and imprisoned at Auburn under sentence therefor. The plaintiff replied that the alleged conviction was obtained without legal evidence, and afterwards, on appeal to the proper court, was reversed and annulled, as defendant well knew before publishing the libel:—Held, on demurrer, replication good, Held, also, plea good, although pleaded to the words without the innuendo. Davis v, Stewart, 29 U. C. R. 441.

(a) Statement of Claim.

Amendment.]—See Todd v. Dun, 12 O. R. 791, 15 A. R. 85.

Cause of Action — Municipal Corporation.]—See McLay v. County of Bruce, 14 O. R. 398.

General Allegations—Necessity for Details.]—In an action of slander, the statement of claim, after various specific allegations, charged that at divers times during the years ISSS, ISS9, and ISO9, and to many people in and about the city of T., the defendant falsely and maliciously repeated the said slanders and words of like effect, and spoke of the plaintiff words conveying the meaning the said slanders and the said words conveyed:—Held, that this was embarrassing and should be stricken out unless the plaintiff elected to amend, by giving details, upon payment of costs. Paterson v. Dunn, 14 P. R. 40.

Innuendo-Words not Capable of.]-W. a Judge of the supreme court of B. C., brought an action against H., editor, for a libel contained in the following article published in his paper: "The McNamee-Mitchell suit. In the sworn statement of Mr. McNamee, defendant in the suit of McKenna v. McName lately tried at Ottawa, the following passage 'Six of them were in partnership (in the dry dock contract) out in British Columbia, one of whom was the Premier of the Province.' The Premier of the Province at the time referred to was Hon. Mr. Walkem, now a Judge of the supreme court. Mr. Walkem's career on the bench has been above reproach. His course has been such as to win for him the admiration of many of his old political enemies. But he owes it to himself to refute this charge. We feel sure that Mr. McNamee must be labouring under a mistake. Had the statement been made off the stand, it would have been scouted as untrue; but having been be treated lightly or allowed to pass unheed made under the sanctity of an oath, it cannot The innuendoes alleged by the declaration to be contained in this article were: 1. That W. corruptly entered into partnership with McNamee while holding offices of public trust, and thereby unlawfully acquired large sums of public money. 2. That he did so under cloak of his public position and by fraudulently pretending that he acted in the interest of the Government, 3. That he committed criminal offences punishable by law.

4. That he continued to hold his interest in the contract after his elevation to the bench: -Held, that the article was susceptible of the first of the above innuendoes, but not of the others, which should have been, but were not, distinctly withdrawn from the consideration of the jury at the trial. On the trial the jury found a verdict for the plaintiff, with $2,500 damages:—Held, that the case was inproperly left to the jury, but the only prejudice sustained by the defendant thereby was that of excessive damages, and the verdict might stand on the plaintiff consenting to the damages being reduced to $500. Higgins v. Walkem, 17 8. C. R. 225.

Slander—Names of Persons—Times and Planers, I—In an action of slander the statement of claim, after alleging that the slanders had been snoken and published to certain maned nersons, added "and to others at present unknown to the plaintiff."—Held, sufficient. It was also alleged that during a neriod of five months the defendant spoke and published various slanders to certain named persons and to others not known to the plaintiff:—Held, had, for it did not shew which of the persons mentioned were present when the different statements were made, nor at what times and places they were made, Leave to the polaritiff to amend by adding further charges within reasonable limits. Special Damage—Loss of Custom—Particulars, 1—Ashdown v. Manitoba Free Press Co., 20 S. C. R. 43.

Trade-libel—Frame of Statement.]—The plaintiff, a tradesman, claimed damages for injury to his credit and business by reason of the defendant having sent certain hand-bills issued by the plaintiff, advertising his business, to various wholesale creditors of the plaintiff, and having written and published letters to such creditors falsely and maliciously charging that the plaintiff was advertising his business and unduly forcing sales with the view of selling and disposing of his goods to defeat and defraud his creditors:—Held, that the action was for libel, and not in case for disturbing the plaintiff in his calling, and the defendant was entitled to have the words of the alleged libel set out in the pleading. Flood v. Jackson, [1885] 2 Q. B. 21, and Riding v. Smith. 1 Ex. D. 91, specially referred to, Robinson v. Sugarman, 17 P. R. 419.

Trade-libel — Malicc—Special Damage—Denurrer.] — In an action of libel the plaintiffs' statement of claim alleged that defendants falsely and maliciously published of and concerning the plaintiffs' goods. " * * * We do not keep Acme or common plate," and also alleged special damage:—Held, on denurrer, that, as the allegation was that the defendants "falsely and maliciously "published of and concerning the plaintiffs, &c., and as special damage was alleged in direct terms, following Western Counties Manure Co. v. Lawes Chemical Manure Co., I. R. 9 Ex. 218, if the plaintiffs were able to prove that allegation, they would be entitled to judgment, and the demurrer was overruled. Acme Silver Co. v. Stacey Hardware Co., 21 O. R. 261.

(b) Statement of Defence.

Inaccuracy - Correction-Materiality-Defence to Portion of Damages,]—The statement of claim in an action of libel brought by plaintiff, an insurance inspector and adjuster, and at the time of action brought the liquidator of an insurance company, alleged that de-fendant, in an article published in his newspaper commenting on the trial of a previous action of libel brought by plaintiff against de-fendant in which plaintiff had recovered one shilling damages, stated that he would not have been surprised if the jury had found more fav-ourably for plaintiff, for, though evidence of general reputation was admitted, the court had refused to allow evidence of specific acts of improper conduct, unless directly connected with the insurance company; and that, in further commenting on said trial in his said article, he falsely and maliciously published of the plaintiff, in his business as an insurance adjuster, that plaintiff would have been asked to explain the purchase of a claim in respect of a loss, one-half of the amount of which he afterwards received from the company while their adjuster; and as to gifts received from persons whose losses he had adjusted; the innuendo alleged being that plaintiff had been dishonest in adjusting claims and had accepted bribes, &c.; and that the article was an unfair and false report of the trial. The defendant by his statement of defence admitted the publication of the article, but denied the innuendo, and also any malice, &c.; and alleged that there was an inaccuracy in the article as to the question which might have been asked plaintiff, by which a wrong impression might have been conveyed, which was corrected at the earliest opportunity in defendant's newspaper by an article stating that the question referred to should have been that the purchase was made in respect of a loss which occurred while he was the company's adjuster, but that the payment was after he had left the company :-Held, on demurrer, that the difference between the first and second articles as to the payment on the alleged purchase was material, for if it was proved that the first article was this respect false to the knowledge of the defendant, and he made no correction, this would be evidence of malice, and would probably materially affect the damages; but even if immaterial the plaintiff was not prejudiced; that it was only offered as a defence to a portion of the damages. The demurrer was therefore overruled. Livingston v. Trout, 9 O. R. 488.

Mitigation of Damages—Justification.]
—To an action of slander the defendant set up as a defence facts which amounted to a justification, but restricted their effect to the mitigation of the damages:—Held, that this constituted a good defence. Wilson v. Woods, 9 O. R. 687. But see the next case.

Mitigation of Damages—Justification— Bad Character of Plaintiff,—In libel a plea in mitigation of damages must in its nature be an admission that the plaintif is entitled to recover some compensation; but it amounts to a contention that the amount of the plaintiff's recovery should be limited to the value of the plaintiff's character, which value is affected by the facts pleaded. Such a plea, based upon the plaintiff's bad character, must either shew that the plaintif is a man of bad general reputation or character, or that the plaintiff has a bad character with regard to some specific act which relates to the charge in the libel complained of. It is not permissible to a defendant to plead justification to a libel, and under that defence to offer evidence of the plaintiff's bad character in mitigation of damages. Wilson v. Woods, 9 O. R. 687, disapproved of. Moore v. Mitchell, 11 O. R. 21.

Mitigation of Damages Justification— Confession. |—See Switzer v. Laidman, 18 O. R. 420, ante VII. 6.

Mitigation of Damages — Privilege— Fair Comment—Confusion—Embarrassment.)— The plaintiff should not be driven to spell out the defences set up in an action. He is entitled to have them set forth in such manner as will enable him, upon reading them, to form a fairly correct judgment as to their scope and meaning, and as to what is intended to be relied upon under them. And while the defendant in an action of defanation ought not to be shut out from setting up any matter which he may properly plead either in bar or by way of mitigation of damages, he should so arrange the paragraphs of his statement of defence as to group the separate defences of privilege and fair comment and the matters alleged in mitigation under their appropriate heads. Dryden v. Smith (No. 2), 17 P. R. 505.

Privilege—Trial.]—The omission to plend privilege as a defence does not preclude the defendant from setting it up at the trial. Blagden v. Bennett, 9 O. R. 593.

XI. PRACTICE.

1. Examination for Discovery.

Before Defence.]—In an action for a libel published in a newspaper, the defendants, on a motion under rules 285, O. J. Act, were, with certain restrictions, allowed to examine the plaintiff before defence filed. Tate v. Globe Printing Co., 11 P. R. 253. See the next case.

Before Defence.]—Rule 566 does not apply to examinations for discovery. Fisken v. Chamberlain, 9 P. R. 283, and cases following it, overruled. But were that rule applicable, it was not "necessary for the purposes of justice," in the circumstances of this case, an action for libel, to make an order allowing the defendants to examine the plaintiff for discovery before delivering their statement of defence. Decision in 15 P. R. 473 reversed. Tate v. Globe Printing Co. 11 P. R. 251, and cases following it, specially referred to. Goreley v. Plimsoll, L. R. 8 C. P. 362, and Zlerenberg v. Labouchere, (1893) 2 Q. B. 185, followed. Beaton v. Globe Printing Co., 16 P. R. 281.

Before Statement of Claim.]—In actions of slander when the court is satisfied of the bona fides of the plaintiff, and is convinced that he cannot state fully and with sufficient particularity his various grounds of complaint, and when the knowledge required is within the possession and control of the defendant, an examination for discovery before statement of claim will be ordered under rule 566; but in such case a further examination after pleading will not be allowed except upon special grounds. Fisken v. Chamberlain, 9 P. R. 290, McLean v. Barber, 13 P. R. 500, followed. Campbell v. Scott, 14 P. R. 203. See the preceding case.

Damages in Way of Trade.]—In an action for damages for libelling the plaintiffs in the way of their trade, the plaintiffs did not allege special damage but alleged generally that their business and commercial reputa-tion had suffered. Upon the examination of the plaintiffs for discovery they refused to answer as to what business they had lost by reason of the alleged libels :-Held, that no evidence of special damage would be admis sible at the trial, but that the plaintiffs would have the right to place figures before the jury to shew a general diminution of profits since the publication of the alleged libels; and if the plaintiffs proposed to give this class of evidence at the trial, the defendants were entitled on the examination for discovery to know how such diminution was made out and the figures by which it was proposed to support it, but not to seek information as to the loss of any particular custom; but if the plaintiffs did not propose to give such evidence, the defendants were not entitled to the discovery. It was, therefore, ordered that the plaintiffs should give particulars of any damage intended to be claimed for diminution of profits; and if particulars given, that the examination should be continued and discovery afforded: but if particulars were not given, that evidence of diminution of profits should not be given at the trial. Blackford v. Green, 14 P. R. 424.

Disclosure—Justification—Immorality,]—
The defendants having in their newspaper charged the plaintiff with immorality, he sued them for libel, and the defendants pleaded that the charges were true. The plaintiff having required particulars, the defendants set forth that he lived at a particular place in adultery; that a child was born to the woman with whom he lived; and that he brought to his house and kept with the members of his family a woman who had lived in a house of ill-fame. The plaintiff, being examined for discovery, admitted that he had lived in adultery with a woman who had previously lived in a house of ill-fame, and that she bore a child of which he was not the father, but denied the other allegations of the particulars:—Held, that the plaintiff was bound to disclosure might injure her. Macdonald v. Skeppard Publishing Co., 13 P. R. 282.

Officer of Newspaper Company—Subchitor, | — Held, that the assistant or subcitor of the defendants was an officer of the company examinable for the purpose of discovery under R. S. O. 1877 c. 50, s. 156. Haitland v. Globe Printing Co., 9 P. R. 370.

Officer of Newspaper Company—Editorial Writer,]—In an action against a newspaper publishing company for a libel contained in an article written by a member of the newspaper staff, who procured special information therefor, under the supervision of the managing editor, and in which action the defendants plended justification:—Held, that the writer was not in the position of a sub-editor, nor could be be called an officer of the company, and he was not examinable for discovery under rule 487. Held, also, that no sufficient foundation was otherwise laid for his examination; for it did not appear that he could give information of any facts, but merely that he could indicate where he procured evidence of the facts in dispute upon the plea of justification. Murray v. Mail Printing Co., 14 P. R. 165.

Privilege — Criminating Answers.] — See Nunn v. Brandon, 24 O. R. 375; D Ivry v. World Newspaper Co. of Toronto, 17 P. R. 387.

Privilege — Criminating Ansaces.] — No man can be compelled to answer a question in-criminating himself. And where the defendant upon his examination for discovery in an action of libel refused to answer questions as to the authorship of an alleged libel, and claimed privilege, not before the examiner, but afterwards upon a motion by the plaintiff to commit him for refusal to answer, swearing positively that the answers might tend to the privilege, and that it was not too late to claim it. The costs of the motion to commit, were made costs to the plaintiff in the cause. Hall v. Goncantock, 12 P. R. 604.

Privilege-Criminating Answers.]-In an action of libel and slander, the plaintiff com-plained that the defendant had communicated to several persons the contents of a letter received from another person in which the plain-tiff was accused of larceny, &c. Upon an examination of the defendant for discovery, he refused to say whether he had received any letter from the person named, or to answer any questions in relation to such letter or its contents, giving as a reason that it might criminate him to do so :- Held, that the reason given was sufficient to privilege the defendant from answering; and, although it was not the receipt of the letter, but the publication, that would make the offence, he was entitled to object to the line of inquiry at the outset. Semble, that s. 5 of the Dominion statute of 1893 respecting witnesses and evidence will, when it comes into force, supersede the privi-lege now existing in cases of this kind. Weiser v. Heintzman, 15 P. R. 258. See the next case.

Privilege—Criminating Answers.]—The Outario statute as to evidence, R. S. O. 1887 c. 61, s. 5, limits the scope of all preliminary examinations for discovery or otherwise in civil actions. Jones v. Gallon, 9 P. R. 296, followed. It has not been affected by s. 5 of the Dominion statute 50 Vict. c. 31, which, by necessary constitutional limitations, as well as by express declaration (s. 2.), applies only to proceedings respecting which the Parliament of Canada has jurisdiction. The language used in a previous decision in this case, 15 V. R. 258, at p. 290, is too broadly expressed, in the absence of concurrent Ontario legislation. And therefore, a defendant, upon his examination for discovery in an action for defamation, cannot, even since the coming into force of 56 Vict. c. 31 (D.), be compelled to answer questions which may tend to criminate him. Weiser v. Heintzman, 15 P. R. 407.

2. Particulars.

Damages.]—See Blachford v. Green, 14 P. R. 424, ante, 1.

Justification.]—In an action of libel the plaintiff alleged that the defendant had accused him in a newspaper article of having made false returns to the government in his business of distiller. To this the defendant pleaded justification:—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to particulars of the defence intended to be set up under this plea. Corcoran v. Robb, S.P. R. 49.

Names of Persons to whom Words Spoken. —In an action for slander in charging the plaintiff with theft, particulars were ordered shewing the person to whom the words were spoken, or if such person were unknown, or the words were spoken to the plaintiff, then the name of any person who was present and heard or might have heard the words spoken. Thornton v. Capstock, 9 P. R. 535.

Names of Persons to whom Words Spoken—Examination for Discovery, —An order for particulars, under the statement of claim in an action of slander, of the names of the persons to whom the alleged slander was spoken, was rescinded because the examination of the plaintiff gave to the defendant all the discovery that he sought to obtain by the order for particulars:—Semble, in actions of slander the practice laid down in Thornton v. Capstock, 9 P. R. 535, as to particulars to be furnished, should be followed in preference to that prevailing in England. Gould v. Beattie, 11 P. R. 329.

Names, Times, and Places.]—In an action for slander the statement of claim alleged that the defendant, on a specified day, spoke to C. and others the slanderous words alleged. In answer to a demand for particulars, the plaintiff's solicitor wrote to the defendant's solicitor stating that he had given all the information the plaintiff had, the names of the others to whom the words were spoken not being known to him, and the plaintiff, when a motion for particulars was made, deposed on affidavit to the same facts. An order of a master requiring the plaintiff to furnish particulars of all the persons within his knowledge to whom, the places where, and the times when the words were spoken, was affirmed by a Judge in chambers, was reversed by a divisional court:—Held, that the plaintiff having given all the information in his possession, and the defendant not having sworn that she could not plead without further particulars, or that she was ignorant of what occasion was complained of, it was useless and unnecessary to order the particulars. Thornton v. Capstock, 9 P. R.5535, approved. Winnett v. Appetbe, 16 P. R. 57.

Names, Times, and Places.]—The plaintiff alleged that at a certain city, in a certain month and year, the defendant falsely and maliciously spoke and published of the plaintiff certain specified words:—Held, that the defendant was emitted to some particulars as to the times when and the places where the defamatory words were used, and as to some of the persons in whose hearing they were alleged to have been spoken. Winnert v. Appelbe, 16 P. R. 57, distinguished, Held, also, that the plaintiff should have leave to examine the defendant before delivering particulars, in order to enable him to furnish them. Robinson v. Sugarama, 17 P. R. 419.

Necessity for Details in Pleading.]— See Paterson v. Dunn. 14 P. R. 40, ante X. 2 (a).

Slander of Title to Goods—Damping Auction Sule.]—In an action for slander of title to goods the statement of special damage was that by reason of the utterances of the defendant to a crowd of persons assembled at an auction sale which he had advertised, a large number of them withdrew from it, and the goods which were sold at it brought less money than they would otherwise have done: —Held, that the plaintiff should not be required to give particulars of the names of the persons who would have given for each article in respect of which damage was claimed a larger price than was realized at the sale; all that he could reasonably be required to particularize was the amount by which his sale had been damped. Catton v. Gleason, 14 P. R. 222.

Sufficiency—Striking out—Discretion.]— Particulars in an action for libel cannot be struck out as insufficient: if those delivered are too general, the Judge at the trial will exercise his discretion as to the admission of evidence thereunder. Citizens' Insurance Co. y, Campbell, 10 P. R. 129.

See Macdonald v. Sheppard Publishing Co., 19 P. R. 282, ante (1); Townsend v. O'Keefe, 18 P. R. 147, ante (X, 2 (a)).

3. Production of Documents.

Privilege — Criminating Answers—Incorporated Company.]—A person is protected against answering any question, not only that has a direct tendency to criminate him, but that forms one step towards doing so; the nerson however, or, in the case of a corporation, an officer, must pledge his oath to his belief that such would or might be the effect of his answer, and it must appear that such belief is likely to be well founded. The statute R. S. O. 1887; c. 61, s. 5, has merely embodied the existing law as to the protection of a witness against answering questions tending to criminate, though including the case of a party examined as a witness of for the purpose of discovery. In regard to affidavits of documents the same privilege exists as in regard to questions put to a witness or party. The proposition that a corporation is not liable to an indictment for libel is at least so doubtful that it would not be proper to compel a newspaper publishing corporation to make production of documents on earliminal prosecution. Paramaceutical Society v. London and Provincial Supply Association, 5 App. Cas. 857, specially referred to. Legislation suggested, similar to 32 & 33 Vict. c. 24 (Imp.), to afford an easy means of proving by whom a newspaper is published. D'tery v. World Newspaper Co. of Toronto, 17 P. R. 387.

4. Venue.

Fair Trial—Convenience—Expense.]—An aprilection to change the venue in an action of libel to a county where the cause of action arcse and the witnesses resided, and whereby there would be a great saving of expense, was apposed on the ground that a fair trial alleged prejudice against the output owing to alleged prejudice against the output of the ground alleged prejudice against the output of the expense of the case being against the belief that a fair trial could not be obtained, as alleged, and the preponderance of convenience and expense being grainst the belief agreatly in favour of the change. Roche v. Patrick, 5 P. R. 210.

Fair Trial—Convenience—Newspaper,]—When in an action for a libel contained in a newspaper, the plaintiff lays the venue in a county distant from that in which the newspaper is published and the parties reside, so that the trial may be free from local influences, it will not be changed to the county in which the cause of action arose, merely because it would be more convenient and less expensive to try the case in the latter county. The obtaining of a fair trial must overbear every consideration of convenience. Blackburn v. Cameron, 5 P. R. 341.

5. Other Cases.

Interlocutory Judgment—Assessment of Damages—Stander,!—The action was commonced by a writ of summons indorsed, "The plaintiff's claim is for damages for slander," No ampearance having been entered, the plaintiff signed interlocutory judgment against the defendant according to Form 146, and set the cause down for assessment of damages at a sittings of the high court:—Held, that there being nothing to shew that the action was brought under s. 5 of the Act respecting Libel and Slander, R. S. O. 1897 c. 68, it must be treated as an ordinary action of slander; rule 578 therefore applied to the case; the delivery of a statement of claim was unnecessary; and the plaintiff had the right to sign interlocutory judgment and have the damages assessed as she proposed, Origin of rule 578. Standey v. Litt, 19 P. R. 101.

XII. PRIVILEGE,

1. Generally-Absence of Malice.
