Express Malice.|—Where the words were spacen on an occasion when, either from public dirty, private interest, or the relation of the parties to each other, the character of the party complaining may be freely discussed, the jury must find express malice, upon evidence sufficient to warrant their finding, before defendant can be pronounced guilty. Richards v. Boutton, 4 O. 8, 95.

Express Malice — Falsity.] — Where the libel complained of is clearly a privileged communication, the inference of malice cannot be raised upon the face of the libel itself, as in other causes it might be, but the plaintiff must give extrinsic evidence of actual express mulice; he must also prove the statement to be false, as well as malicious; and defendant may still make out a good defence by shewing that he had good ground to believe the statement true, and acted honestly under that persuasion. McIntyre v. McBean, 13 U. C. 15, 7534.

Functions of Judge and Jury.]—In actions for slander or libel it is the province of the Judge to determine whether the occasion of uttering the slanderous words, or writing the libellous matter complained of, was or was not privileged; and if privileged, in the absence of evidence of malice, there is nothing to be left to the jury as to bona fides or otherwise. MeIntee v. McCulloch, 2 E. & A. 390, reversing the decision below, 13 C. P. 438.

Malice—Justification.] — Pleading justification in an action of slander, where no attempt is made to prove the plea, is not in itself evidence of malice entitling the plaintiff to have the case submitted to the jury, the words in question having been spoken on a privileged occasion. Corridan v. Wilkinson, 20 A. R. 184.

Malice-What Constitutes-Knowledge of Lutruth. |-The alleged offence for which a fine was inflicted by a trade union upon a member was the causing an extra apprentice to be brought into the yard in which plaintiff and defendants were employed. The defendants, after being told by their employer that the plaintiff had nothing to do with bringing the apprentice in, wrote and caused to be pub lished in their trade journal a statement that the strike ordered by the union when the apprentice was brought in would not have occurred but for the treachery of the plaintiff, who richly deserved the fine imposed:—Held, by the trial Judge, that the publication was not privileged. On appeal to a divisional court:—Held, that the evidence did not support the finding that the defendants knew that the words complained of were untrue, nor was there evidence of malice, and that in the ab-sence thereof the communication was privileged; and the appeal was allowed. Beaulieu v. Cochrane, 29 O. R. 151, 598.

Malice—What Constitutes—Misdirection.]—In an action for slander, where the occasion was privileged, the Judge at the trial in defining malice, which it was essential for the plaintiff to prove, told the jury that it consisted of a reckless statement, of a statement not true, made without consideration of what the probable consequences might be to another person, and of a statement not made in good faith—not truly, but wantonly and recklessly, and without proper consideration:— Held, misdirection, for it should have been left to the jury to say whether the defendant acted through a wrong feeling in his mind against the plaintiff—some unjustifiable intention to do him wilful injury; and a new trial was directed. English v. Lamb, 32 O. R. 73.

(a) Actions by and against Public Officers.

Attorney-General—Newspaper Attack— Fair Comment.] — See Manitoba Free Press Co. v. Martin, 21 S. C. R. 518.

Commissioners of Court of Requests—Petition to Gorcement.]—A petition to the lieutenant-governor complaining of the conduct of commissioners of the court of requests, and charging them with partiality, corruption, and comivance at extortion, signed by a number of persons, and praying for redress, is absolutely privileged, even though defendant had circulated it and been the means of obtaining signatures to it of individuals who knew nothing of the facts stated in it, and supposed it to be a totally different matter. Stanton v. Andrews, 5 O. 8, 211.

Corporation Solicitor.]—See Douglas v. Stephenson, 29 O. R. 616, post (b).

Government Clerk.—Accusations of Fellow Clerk.]—Where defendant, a clerk in the receiver-general's office, told his principal that the plaintiff, another clerk, had robbed him (the receiver-general), there being no proof that any money had been stolen, or that the receiver-general had ever suspected it:—Held, not privileged. Prentice v. Hamilton, Dra. 398.

License Inspector-Resolution of Commissioners—Ultra Vires.]—Claim, that the defendant, an inspector of licenses, falsely and maliciously published of the plaintiff a circular which he caused to be sent to all licensed victuallers, &c., in the riding, containing the following words: "W, R. (and others) are in the habit of drinking intoxicating liquors to excess, and you are hereby notified that you are not to sell, give, &c., intoxicating liquors to the said parties, or to the wife, husband, to the said parties, or to the wife, husband, child, employee, agent, or any member of the family or household of the said parties." Defence, that the commissioners in good faith, intending to net within the scope of their powers, passed a resolution, "that no intoxicating liquors shall, under any pretence, be sold in any tavern, &c., to any person who has the habit of drinking intoxicating liquors to excess, or the wife, &c., of such person, or any person concerning whom notice had been given to the landlord by the husband, &c., of such person, or any justice of the peace or inspector, that such person is in the habit of drinking," &c.: that the licenses were issued to the persons to whom the notices were addressed, subject to the right of suspending them for breach of the resolution. And the defendant justified upon information obtained respecting the plaintiff, upon which he followed the terms of the resolution:—Held, on demurrer, that the license commissioners had no power to pass the resolution, and therefore that the defence was bad, for the communication was not privileged, and the defendant's belief in the validity of the resolution could not create any privilege. Roberts v. Climie, Murphy v. Climie, 46 U. C. R. 264.

Post Office Inspector-Malice-Onus.] The appellant, having been appointed chief post office inspector for Canada, was engaged. under directions from the postmaster-general, in making inquiries into certain irregularities which had been discovered at the St. John post office. After making inquiries, he had a conversation with the respondent, W., alone in a room in the post office, charging him with abstracting missing let-ters, which the respondent strongly de-nied. Thereupon the assistant postmaster was called in, and the appellant said: "I have charged Mr. W, with abstracting the letters. I have charged Mr. W, with the abstractions that have occurred from these money letters, and I have concluded to suspend him." The respondent, having brought an action for slander, was allowed to give evidence of the conversation between himself and the appel-There was no other evidence of malice. The jury found that the appellant was not actuated by ill-feeling toward the respondent in making the observation to him, but found that he was so actuated in the communication he made to the assistant postmaster :-Held, on appeal, that the appellant was acting in the due discharge of his duty and in accordance with his instructions, and that the words addressed to the assistant postmaster were privileged. 2. That the onus lay upon the respondent to prove that the appellant acted under the influence of malicious feelings, and as the jury found that the appellant had not been actuated by ill-feeling, the respondent was not entitled to retain his verdict, and the rule for a nonsuit should be made absolute. Dewe v. Waterbury, 6 S. C. R. 143.

Post Office Inspector — Malice—Interest.]—See Hanes v. Burnham, 26 O. R. 528, 23 A. R. 90.

Postmaster.]—See Jones v. Stewart, Tay.

Postmaster — Excessive Language.]—Defendant wrote to R., who was M. P. for the county in which the parties resided, requesting him to have plaintiff, a postmaster, removed from office, as his "roguery" was unbearable in the locality, and stating that he (defendant) could not trust his bank-book through the post office lest plaintiff should go to the bank and draw or keep the money; that he had sent a declaration to the P. O. department at Ottawa to have him removed; and demanding to know what the country would "turn to" if the government kept such men in office; and that if the people could not send their money through the post office they had better rise in rebellion at once. The defendant then wound up his letter with a demand upon R. as their representative, to have the "scoundrel removed;" that he had "broken up seven or eight money letters and used the money for his own purpose:" — Held, that the Judge at the trial had rightly ruled that the occasion of writing the letter was not privileged; and that, on the authority of Fryer v. Kinnersley, 15 C. B. N. S. 430, the violence of the language was so much in excess of the occasion as to exclude it from the rule as to privileged communications. Graham v. Crozier, 44 U C. R. 378.

Public School Master—Histake,]—A representation by the assessed inhabitants of a school section as to the character of the teacher, made with a view of obtaining redress, is a privileged communication, which it is of importance to the public to protect; and such a statement would not be the less privileged if made by mistake to the wrong quarter, Quaree, whether a communication of this nature, made by an inhabitant of any part of the Province, would not be privileged. MeIntyre v. McHean, 13 U. C. R. 534.

Sheriff — Malice—Motive.]—A complaint addressed to a public body or to Government respecting the conduct of an officer (in this case a sheriff) under their control, is not necessarily privileged. That depends on the motives with which it was made. Corbett v. Jackson, I. U. C. R. 128.

Fair Comment — General Verdict—New Trial.]—See Manitoba Free Press Co. v. Martin, 21 S. C. R. 518.

Fair Comment—Public Benefit—Absence of Malice—Pleading.]—In an action of libel, paragraphs 3 and 4 of the defence set up that the alleged libel was published on a privileged occasion; the ground of privilege being that it was a fair and bonā fide comment upon a matter of public and general interest, which had become such by means of the plaintiff's own appeal to the public through the medium of the press, inviting public attention to his professional character and position, and challenging public criticism upon his conduct in connection with all the matters referred to in the alleged libel, which was printed and published by the defendant bonā fide, for the public benefit, and without malice:—Held, affirming the judgment in S.O. R. 53, a god defence. Farmer v. Hamilton Tribune Co. 3 O. R. 538, and Murphy v. Halpin, Ir. R. S. C. L. 127, distinguished. Macdonell v. Robinson, 12 A. R. 270.

Fair Comment—Public Matter—Warden of Prison.]—The alleged libel consisted of letters of a very gross character published in the defendants' newspaper reflecting on the plaintiff as warden of a prison. The defendants refused to give the name of the writer of the letters, and assumed responsibility therefor. The Judge told the jury that "every one has a right to comment on matters of public interest and general concern, provided he does so fairly and with an houest purpose * * Such comments are not libellous, however severe in their terms, unless they are written intemperately and maliciously." The jury found for the plaintiff with $8,000 damages:—Held, that the libel was not privileged, or published on a privileged occasion; that no exception could be taken to the Judge's charge; nor could it be said that the libel was a fair comment upon a matter in which the public had an interest. Massie v. Toronto Printing Co., 11 O. R. 302.

Fair Comment-Public Official-Conduct of Belief in Truth of Statements.]—The discussion of the conduct of a solicitor of a municipal corporation in that capacity, is a matter of public interest, and a newspaper is entitled to criticise or make fair comments thereon; but the statements on which the criticism or comments are based must be true and not merely believed to be true on reasonable grounds. Where, therefore, in an action for libel for statements published in a newspaper on which comments were made criticising the plaintiff's conduct as such solicitor. jury, although they were told by the trial Judge in his charge that any criticism on the plaintiff's conduct must be based on the truth, were at the same time told that it was sufficient if the statements on which the criticism was founded, were believed to be true, on which there was a finding for the defendant. such finding was set aside and a new trial directed. Douglas v. Stephenson, 29 O. R.

Fair Comment—Truth of Statement.]— See Wills v. Carman, 17 O. R. 223; Brown v. Moyer, 23 O. R. 222, 20 A. R. 509.

Public Benefit—Duty of Journalist.]— See Farmer v. Hamilton Tribune Printing and Publishing Co., 3 O. R. 538.

Public Beneft—Letter to Newspaper—Liberty of Discussion.—The defendant published a letter addressed to the editor of a public paper, in which he stated that the plaintiff, a medical practitioner, was unlicensed;—Held, that the Judge might either have ruled that this was privileged, or at all events have left it to the jury with a strong caution as to the usual liberty of discussion allowed in all matters of public interest, and with observations somewhat like those in the charge in Turnbull v, Bird, 2 F, & F, 508, Shaver v, Linton, 22 U. C. R. 147.

(c) Other Cases.

Petition to Government—Malice,]—An action for libel contained in communications to the Government with a view of obtaining redress, cannot be sustained, unless the party making them acted maliciously and without probable cause. Rodgers v. Spalding, 1 U. C. R. 258.

Petition to License Commissioners-Reflection on Tavern Keeper — Express Ma-lice.] — The defendants and others signed a petition to the license commissioners of the city of Hamilton, praying that a license might not be granted to the plaintiff, and stating that his tavern was one of the worst drinking holes in the county; that it was kept very disorderly; that there was no suitable accommodation; and that the landlord was very much given to drinking :- Held, that the occasion of the presentation or publication of the petition was not absolutely privileged, but that the onus lay upon the plaintiff to prove express malice, and that the defendants used the occasion for some indirect or wrong motive. jury gave a verdict for the plaintiff for $1,000. and the court was of opinion, on the evidence, verdict, and general merits, that there should be a new trial. Willcocks v. Howell, 5 O. R.

Prosecution before Magistrate-Statement Made by Defendant's Father.]—The defendant's son, alleged to be an infant, was brought before a magistrate charged with assault. The defendant attended before the magistrate. On the plaintiff being called as a witness on the prosecutor's behalf, the defendant objected to his giving evidence, stating that "he," plaintiff, "is a perjurer, he perjured himself three times at Butt's trial before There was no evidence to shew that the defendant was acting for and on behalf of his son, with his son's consent, nor was it absolutely proved that the son was a minor :-Heid, that the communication was not privijury. Semble, that under like circumstances a counsel, attorney, or party to the action or pro-ceeding would be privileged; and even a stranger when permitted by another to act for him with the magistrate's sanction. If the defendant was acting in good faith and without malice, under the belief that it was his duty to inform the magistrate of the witness's bad character, he might have a qualified privilege, but the question of malice would be for the jury. Cowan v. Landell, 13 O. R. 13.

Inspector of Insolvent Estate—Letter by Former Partner of Insolvent.]—The plaintiff and one S. had been in partnership, S. having retired and left the country. Subsequently the plaintiff made an assignment for the benefit of creditors. The defendant was a creditor, and was appointed one of the inspectors of the estate. S. wrote one of the inspectors of the estate. S. wrote business, a continued that the condition of the privilege of the inspector of the plaintiff condition of the inspector of t

Mercantile Agency — False Information.]—See Cossette v. Dun, 18 S. C. R. 222.

Mercantile Agency—False Information—Express Malice—Onus.]—A subscriber to a mercantile agency company applied to them for information as to the standing of a customer, and in order to furnish it they requested a local agent of theirs (the defendant C.) to advise them confidentially on the subject. In an action by the customer against the local agent for an alleged libel consisting of the information given by him to the company in answer to their request:—Held, reversing the judgment in 12 O. R. 791, that the information having been procured for the purpose of being communicated to a person interested in making the inquiry, and there being nothing in the language in excess of what the defendant might fairly state, the communication was privileged, and there being no proof of express matice, the plaintiff was not entitled to recover. It is the occasion of publishing the alleged libel which constitutes the privilege. Where privilege exists, implied malice is negatived, and the burden of shewing express malice is on the plaintiff. The mere untruth of the statement, unless coupled with proof that the defendant knew that what he was stating was untrue, is not evidence of express malice. Clark v. Molyneux, 3 Q. B. D. 255, and Mc-Intee v. McCulloch, 2 E. & A. 339, followed, Semble, that a mercantile agency company have no higher privilege for their business publications than other members of the community, and a general publication of libellous matter to all their subscribers indiscriminately is not privileged. Todd v. Dun, 15 A. R. S5.

Mercantile Agency—False Information—Publication in Givenlar;]—The defendant published of and concerning the plaintiff, a business man, in a written circular, called "The Legal Record, Co. Renfrew," a statement meaning that plaintiff had given a chattel mortgage on his property, whereas he had only assigned one held by him against another:—Held, libellous, and not privileged. Lemay v. Chamberlain, 10 O. R. (SS.

Mercantile Agency — False Information—Heavsondlic Cure, !—In an action of likel brought by a trader against the conductors of a mercantile agency, it appeared that the likel-lous matter was sent to a few subscribers on their personal application. The information on which the statement complained of was founded, in reality related to another trader of the same surname as the plaintiff—Held, that the publishing of the information was a matter of qualified privilege, but that the want of reasonable care in collecting the information was evidence of malice which destroyed the privilege. Toddy V, Dun, 15 A, R, 85, followed. Cossette V, Dun, 18 S, C, R, 222, discussed. Robinson V, Dun, 28 O, R, 21.

Held, on appeal, that a mercantile agency is not liable in damages for false information as to a trader given in good faith to a subscriber making inquiries, the information having been obtained by the agency from a person apparently well qualified to give it, and there being nothing to make them in any way doubt its correctness. Cossette v. Dun, 18 S. C. R. 222. considered. Judgment in 28 O. R. 21 reversed. Robinson v. Dun, 24 A. R. 287.

Trade Association — Publication to Clerk—Finding of Jury.—One of the defendants, the secretary of a trade association, prepared a statement for circulation among the members of the association, and gave it to a person whom he occasionally employed, with instructions to copy it. This statement contained an allegation that the plaintiff was unwortly of credit:—Held, that, as the publication to the members of the association would have been privileged, in the absence of malice, on the ground of interest, the publication to the copyist was also privileged, being a reasonable means employed to make the communication to the others. Lawless v. Anglo-Exyptian Cotton and Oil Co. L. R. 4 Q. B. 202, followed. Held, also, that the finding of the jury that "there was no ground of action" was in fact a finding that the words were not defamatory. Harper v. Hamilton Retail Grocer's Association, 32 O. R. 203.

(b) Communications to Relatives.

Family of Plaintiff-Express Malice.] —The plaintiff's daughter had been in the de-fendant's service for some time, and after she had left, the defendant's wife went to where she was staying, at her sister's, and claimed some things as her property, as being taken by the girl. The girl and her sister went and told this to their father, the plaintiff; and the plaintiff, his wife, the girl, the sister, and the sister's husband, went together to the defend-The plaintiff said he came to inquire about the charge against his daughter. defendant said she had been stealing all the time she had been at his house. The plaintiff then said that if so the defendant should not have kept her in his service. The defendant then said that the plaintiff was a thief and that his family were all thieves, and that hey were all tarred with the same stick :-Held, not a privileged communication, so as to require proof of express malice. Miller v. Johnston, 23 C. P. 580.

Father of Plaintiff-Charging Crime.] The plaintiff had been working for a couple of days for the defendant as a seamstress, when the defendant missed $11, and so in-formed the plaintiff. She drove the plaintiff home that evening, stating she would require her again in a week or so. Next day the defendant laid the case before the chief of police, who said the plaintiff must have taken the money. The defendant then went to a Mrs. W., for whom she thought the plaintiff was working, and on being informed that the plainworking, and on being informed that the phan-tiff was not there, asked to see Mrs. W. alone, and said: "I have missed $5. I went to the chief of police and haid the case before him." and he said "plaintiff had taken the money that plaintiff was the only one at defendant's house except defendant's children and sister. Defendant asked what she should do and asked if she could have the plaintiff arrested. Mrs. W. advised her not to, but to go and see plaintiff. The defendant then went to a see plaintiff. The defendant then went to a Mrs. B., for whom the plaintiff was working, and called the plaintiff outside and told her what the chief had said; she then put her hand on plaintiff's shoulder and said, "You did, you must have taken it." and asked her to confess and give back the money, and defendant would give her all her sewing. The plaintiff denied taking the money, and asked to be driven to her father, and the defendant drove her to her father's residence. Before doing so, Mrs. B. asked plaintiff what was the matter, and plaintiff said that defendant accused her of taking some of her money. Mrs. B. said that, through the door having been blown open, she heard the defendant say, "You did, you must have," and then the door slammed to. On arrival at her father's, the defendant did not want to go in, but on his pressing her, asking what was the matter between her and plaintiff, defendant informed him she had missed some money, and told him what the chief of police had said. The father asked her if she knew plaintiff's character, and why she should be accused more than defendant's sister. The defendant appeared shocked at the suggestion, and said she would have plain-tiff arrested; and the father then said that she would do so on her own responsibility. In an action of slander:—Held, that the action was not maintainable: that the words spoken to the plaintiff's father were privileged, while those heard by Mrs. B. and those spoken to Mrs. W. did not impute any criminal offence. Gorst v. Barr, 13 O. R. 644.

Husband of Plaintiff.]—See Hanes v. Burnham, 26 O. R. 528, 23 A. R. 90.

Mother of Plaintiff-Protection of Defendant's Interests — Excessive Language.]-The defendant received a letter from the solicitor of the plaintiff's mother complaining of statements circulated by the defendant which had caused the mother and her family, and particularly her daughter the plaintiff, annoyance, and threatening to begin an action for slander unless a retractation were signed and costs paid. This letter was not answered by the defendant, but the threatened action having been brought, the defendant wrote a letter to the plaintiff's mother, with the avowed pur-pose of preventing her from proceeding with her action. In that letter he referred to the plaintiff, and said he saw her drive her father out of the house and pelt him with sticks of wood, and asked the mother if she thought if wood, and asked the mother if she thought it would add to her daughter's character to have this and much more published in court and an newspapers:—Held, in an action for iibel based upon this letter, that it did not come within the rule as to "statements necessary to protect the defendant's interests" so as to make the occasion privileged; and even if it did, the privilege was destroyed by the excess the language. Benner v. Edmonds, 30 O.

Promised Husband of Plaintiff—Express Malice—Excess.—The defendant, who was the superintendent of a public asylum, said to a person who had formerly been a servant at the asylum, and who was engaged to be married to the plaintiff, that the latter, a maid-servant at the asylum, was a "contemptible thief." for which she brought an action of slander. Justification was not pleaded. The evidence shewed that the defendant honestly believed in the truth of the words spoken, and that he had reasonable grounds for his belief:—Held, that the occasion on which the words were spoken was one of qualified privilege, in that the person addressed had an interest in receiving the communication, and that the plaintiff could not recover without proof of actual malice. Held, also, that the use of the qualifying adjective "contemptible" was not evidence of actual malice. Coxhead v. Richards, 2 C. B. 569. Whiteley v. Adams, 15 C. B. N. S. 392, and Stuart v. Bell, [1891] 2 Q. B. 341, followed. Ross v. Bucke, 21 O. R. 682.

Wife of Plaintiff—Malice—Excess.]—W. was in the employ of a mining company, of which L. was president, and had been working in the mining district under an arrangement by which his wife was to draw half his wages at the headquarters of the company (her home). After he caused to be employed by the company, but while still in the mining district and before he was settled with and his wages paid up, his wife, with a companion, went to L. to apply for some of her husband's wages, and he replied. "We don't owe him anything now, he stole the boat, the cooking stove, and a lot of other things and sold them." The secretary of the company had previously received a letter stating that the plaintiff had done what the defendant said he had. The defendant by his statement of defence denied using the words, and gave evidence to that effect at the trial, but proposed also to give evidence that whatever the words used were, he honestly believed them to be true, and leave was asked to amend by setting this up. The Judge held that the occasion was not privileged, and refused to allow the amendment, and on a motion for a new trial it was:— Held, that the occasion was privileged, and a new trial was granted to give the plaintiff an opportunity to prove malice. Wells v. Lindop, 13 O. R. 434.

Where one used defamatory language of another under circumstances of quasi-privilege, but used the words in had faith, not believing them to be true :—Held, that the expressions must be considered as in excess of the requirements of the occasion, and malicious, and he was not protected in an action for damages. Jacob v. Lawrence, 4 L. R. (1r.) 582, followed. Wells v. Lindop (2), 14 O. R. 275. Affirmed, 15 A. R. (35).

(c) Communications to and Concerning other Persons.

Candidate for Municipal Office—Qualification.]—See Swan v. Clelland, 13 U. C. R. 335.

Loan Company — Statement as to Borrowers — Absence of Malice.] — Differences having arisen between a municipal council and a road company, of which the plaintiff was a director, defendant was appointed by the council to act as their attorney, and to examine the books of the company and report to the council. The directors were then negotiating with the Trust and Loan Company for a loan for the purposes of the road, and defendant, in the name of the firm of which he was a member, wrote a letter to the company, saying that they had been requested by three of the councillors of the township to inform them that the loan was contrary to the wishes not only of the majority of the council, but of the majority of the stockholders; that the directors were strongly suspected of misappropriation of the funds of the company, and refused an account of their expenditure to the coun-"All of which we can ourselves youch It appeared that the directors of the road company had been acting in a manner of which the council disapproved; that defendant was told that a majority of the council were opposed to the loan, and was urged to interpose and prevent it. It was also proved that the affairs of the road company were in confusion, and that the council had good reason for wishing to check the proceedings of the directors:—Held, that the term "misappro-priation" might be considered in its gravest sense libellous, but that in this case it was necessary to shew a malicious intent on the part of the defendant, for otherwise the communication would be privileged, and he would stand excused on account of his particular and legitimate connexion with the subject of which was writing. Hanna v. De Blaquiere, 11 U.

Partner of Plaintiff.]— Defendant, a government detective, knowing that one M. was in partnership with the plaintiff, informed him that the plaintiff was connected with a gang of burglars which defendant had been the means of breaking up, and put him on his guard:— Held, that the communication was privileged. Smith v. Armstrong, 26 U. C. R. 57.

School Trustee—Express Malice—Special Damage.]—The plaintiff, a school trustee, with another trustee, under the authority of the school board, purchased a quantity of firewood for use in the school house. In December, shortly before the municipal and school trustee elections, the defendant and H., another school trustee, were discussing the taxes. when defendant said that the trustees had paid too much for the wood; that plaintiff had culled it, and sold the best of it, and had drawn the culled wood to the school house; and, on H. remonstrating with him, said: "Oh, but he remonstrating with him, said: "Oh, but he did, and I can prove it;" that he could prove did, and I can prove it;" that he could prove it by a person named N. Subsequently in the same month, a discussion took place between defendant and B., first as to council, and then as to school matters, when defendant related the conversation he had had with N. in which he had said to N, that the wood was dear, and that N. had said that it was No. 2 at that; that there was something strange about the wood, and it must have been culled, for they bought No. 1, and drew No. 2 to the school house: — Held, that the words having been spoken by a person interested to another, also interested, the occasion was privileged; and in the absence of proof of malice no action would lie. Quære, whether defamatory words spoken of a person holding an elective office with regard thereto, not followed by special damage, are actionable when they would not be so when spoken of the holder in his private capacity. Blagden v. Bennett, 9 O. R. 593, Servant of Defendant - Railway Company — Malice — Excess.] — S., the general manager of the defendants' railway, without special instructions of the directors dismissed the plaintiff, a conductor, for alleged dis-honesty; and, by his directions, placards describing the offence, and stating the plaintiff's dismissal, were posted up in the company's private offices (in some of which they were seen by strangers), and in the circular books of the conductors, for the information and warning of the company's employees, two thousand in number:—Held, that defendants were liable for the publication, as being an act done by their general manager in their interest and within the general scope of his duty. 2. That the communication to the employees was privileged, as made by a person having a duty or interest to persons having a corresponding duty or in-terest. 3. That the evidence shewed a reasonable mode of publication, and no excess such as to take away the privilege or shew malice, That this was not an action within 16 Vict. c. 99, s. 10, which must necessarily be brought within six months. Teach v. Great Western R. W. Co., 33 U. C. R. 8; S. C., 32 U. C. R.

Sheriff — Words Spoken to, of Medical Practitioner—Gaal Attendance.]—Defendant, being clerk of the peace, in conversation with the sheriff as to the medical examination of a lunatic in gaol, said be would not employ the plaintiff, as he had not the governor's license, adding that he thought the sheriff had morspluck than to ask him after what he, the defendant, had written (referring to some article in a medical journal). On being applied to by one M. on the plaintiff's behalf for an apology, he repeated that defendant was not a qualified physician in Upper Canada, and could not legally practise here without the governor's license:—Held, that both conversations were privileged, and that there being no evidence in either, and no extrinsic evidence, of malice, there was nothing to leave to the jury. Shacer v. Lutton, 22 U. C. R. 174.

Sureties of Plaintiff's Husband Postmaster—Partner of Surety—Matice. |The plaintiff, the wife of a postmaster, complained of slander by the defendant, an assistant post office inspector, to the effect that she had taken money from letters and had given him a written confession of her guilt :- Held, that as to statements made in the discharge of the defendant's official duty, to the plain-tiff's husband as postmaster, and to two other persons as sureties for him, the occasions were privileged; but not so as to statements made to a partner of one of the sureties, who used the post office, and to whose business premises the defendant contemplated removing it; for the defendant and the partner had no such common interest in the matter as justified the communication, nor was there any public or moral or social duty resting on the defendant which justified him in making it. Even bad the evidence shewn that the defendant honestly believed that such a duty rested upon him or that there was such a common interest, if such belief were unfounded, the occasion would not have been privileged. 2. Where the occasion is privileged, the plaintiff's case fails, unless there is evidence of malice in fact, and the burden of proving this is on the plaintiff, who must adduce evidence upon which a jury might say that the defendant abused the occasion either by wilfully stating as true that which he knew to be untrue, or stating it in reckless disregard of whether it was true or And where the plaintiff in her evidence false. denied that she had made a confession to the defendant, but admitted in a qualified way that after her denial the defendant continued to assert to her, and appeared to believe, that she had made one :-Held, that, in the absence of a clear admission by the plaintiff, there was evidence of malice in fact to go to the jury. 3. The defendant was not entitled to notice of action as a public officer; the statutes reof action as a point of the quiring such notice applying only to actions brought for acts done. Royal Aquarium Society v. Parkinson, [1892] I Q. B. 431, followed. Murray v. McSwiney, I. R., 9 C. L. 545, distinguished. Semble, also, that the statutes requiring notice of action cannot be invoked where the words spoken are defamatory and have been uttered with express ma-lice. Hancs v. Burnham, 26 O. R. 528.

Held, on appeal, that the statement to the sureties was prima facie privileged, because of the sureties in the sureties in the sureties are the statement interest of the sureties in the sureties are the sureties was not pretected. The facts that the plaintiff at the trial denied having stolen the letters and having made any confession, and that the inspector did not produce the alleged confession, or in any way account for it, was some evidence that he made the accusation knowing it to be untrue, and therefore maliciously, so as to displace the prima facie case of privilege. A post office inspector is not entitled to notice of an action to recover damages for defamatory statements made by him. Judgment in 26 O. R. 528 affirmed. Hanes v. Burnham, 23 A. R.

Township Treasurer—Letter in News-paper—Malice—Excess.]—The plaintiff had been treasurer of the township of C. from 1882 to 1886, when by reason of the auditors' report, shewing that two sums of $1,400 and $132.32 were not accounted for by him, he was dismissed. A commissioner was appointed by the Lieutenant-Governor, who examined into the matter, and in December made his report stating that the $1,400 item was a mistake of the auditors, and that, except as to the $132.32, all the township moneys were accounted for. The commissioner subsequently attended a meeting of the council, at which defendant, who was a councillor, was present, and after examining plaintiff on oath informed the council that he was satisfied with plain-tiff's explanation as to $125 of this sum, namely, being interest on his own moneys deposited with the township funds; and he made in addition to his report to that effect. February following the plaintiff wrote to a newspaper that he was ready to pay the town-ship any moneys either the council, auditors, or commissioner could shew he owed, whereupon the defendant wrote to the paper, stating that the commissioner, apart from the mixing of moneys, had found plaintiff indebted in 8125, and also stating that plaintiff had made several thousand dollars out of the township, and could well afford to pay his shortage and still have some thousands to the good:—Held, that the matter discussed in the defendant's letter being one in which defendant was interested as a ratepayer and a member of the council, there might be a qualified privilege; still it was for the jury to say whether under the circumstances the language employed was within the privilege, or was in excess of what the occasion justified: and if in excess, they could properly draw inference of malice. The jury having found for plaintiff, the court refused to interfere. Colvin v. McKay, 17 O. R.

Tradesman — Customer — Honest Belief.]

The planintiff chimed damages for slander in respect of words spoken to him by the defendant in the presence of others, to the effect that to had sold certain seed given to him by the defendant in in order to raise seed for sale. The jury found that the words seek for sale. The jury found that the words seek for sale, and the proposed for sale and the proposed for sale, the proposed for sale and the projection of the word in the seek for sale. The jury found that the word in the projection of the projection of the projection of the projection of the planiff had failed to she word in the planif

4. Other Cases.

Advertisement in Newspaper—Publication by Insurance Company—Reflections on Former Agent.]—The plaintiff, who was at one time an agent of defendants, having left them, defendants published in a newspaper an advertisement headed "Caution" and containing the words, "N.B.—Notwithstanding the false statements of (plaintiff) to the con-trary he is no longer an agent of this com-pany." Defendants justified, pleading that pany." Defendants justified, pleading that after he ceased to be in defendants' employ, after ne ceased to be in defendants' employ, the plaintiff stated to M. and G. that he was still defendants' agest. At the trial it ap-peared that the plaintiff, after he had ceased to be defendants' agent, asked G., who had been insured in defendants' company, to insure. G. believed he was still acting for defendants, but after signing the application discovered that it was to another company, and the plaintiff then refused to allow him to withdraw. One M., who had previously insured with plaintiff in defendant company, said the plaintiff called when the time to renew came, and being asked if he came to re-new the policy, said "yes," and expressed annoyance when he found she had already renewed it with defendants. The plaintiff denied these statements :- Held, that this evidence, if believed, was sufficient to prove the plea; and it having been withdrawn from the a new trial was granted for misdirection, that the communication was privileged; but this ground was not taken at the trial. This case was carried to appeal, but the appeal was dismissed without any decision on the merits, there being a misunderstanding as to what took place at the trial. Holliday v. Ontario Farmers' Mutual Fire Ins. Co., 33 U. C. R. 558.

After the new trial:—Held, reversing the judgment in 38 U. C. R. 76, that the publication was not privileged; that the statement, although made under the belief of its truth, was in point of fact false; and that, even if the occasion precluded the implication of malice, the privilege had been exceeded both in the language used and in the publication in a newspaper, so as to afford evidence of malice; that the language might have been privileged if made to any one dealing with the company, but that the privilege had been forfeited by its publication in a newspaper. Holiday v. Ontario Farmers' Mutual Ins. Co., 1 A. R. 483.

Charge Laid Against Plaintiff-Answers of Defendant to Questions.]—There was no evidence to sustain the slander laid in this case; but an amendment was allowed, to comply, as was alleged, with the evidence, The only objection made at the trial by the defendant was that he should be allowed to examine witnesses on the new count, which was An objection to the amendment in term was therefore not allowed. The evidence in support of the amended count consisted not statements made voluntarily by the defendant, but of answers to questions put to him, after he had laid a charge against the plaintiff, as to the nature of it :- Held, that this not sufficient to sustain an action for slander; and that words so spoken were privileged. McCann v. Preneveau, 10 O. R. 573.

Investigation—Meeting of Persons Concerned in Stander—Repetition of Words.]—
The plaintiff was assistant in the shop of C., a druggist, over which the defendant and her husband, a physician, lived, the latter being C.'s landlord and customer. The defendant having in the presence of a witness accused the plaintiff of having taken 84 from her trunk upstairs, her husband told C. that the plaintiff must be discharged, or he would send him no more prescriptions. A meeting was, however, arranged between the parties in the presence of the witness, for the purpose, as they said, of an investigation. On this occasion the shanderous words were repeated, and the plaintiff was discharged from C's employment:—Held, that what was said at this meeting was privileged, and the case having been left to the jury generally a verdict for the plaintiff was set aside. Hargreaves v. Sinclair, 1 O. R. 260.

Resolution of Association-Strictures on Member.]—The plaintiff, being a member and a vice-president of the Commercial Travel-Association, incorporated by 37 Vict. c. 96 (D.), was charged with using abusive language towards the president and other members, and with improper conduct at a meeting of the directors. A committee of seven was appointed, of whom the plaintiff chose three, to investigate these charges, and four of the committee made a report finding the charges proved. This report was adopted by the association, and the directors afterwards passed a resolution expelling the plain-The plaintiff appealed to the next general meeting, which decided to let the appeal drop, and to sustain the action of the directors; but at a subsequent general meeting the resolution of expulsion was rescinded. The railway companies had been notified by the defendants of the plaintiff's removal, by which he was compelled to pay higher fares than if he had been a member. The plaintiff published a paper purporting to be on behalf of the association, in which the whole matter was discussed in an address from himself, and very offensive and violent language was used towards the president and other members: and the directors, in reference to this, passed a resolution repudiating the publication as being on behalf of the association and censuring the plaintiff in strong language for its appearance. The plaintiff having sued the association for the expulsion, and for the libel contained in the resolution:—Held, that the plaintiff could not recover: that the expulsion by the directors, without having themselves tried the matter, and without notice to the plaintiff was informal and void; that the plaintiff therefore was not expelled as alleged, so that there was no cause of action therefor; that any loss sustained was the loss of his employers, not his own; and that the alleged libel was privileged. Cuthbert v. Commercial Travellers' Association of Canada, 39 U. C. R. 578.

XIII SECURITY FOR COSTS.

1. Libel by Newspapers.

Candidate for Public Office.] — The plaintiff was a candidate at an election of a member of the Legislative Assembly of Ontario, and brought this action in respect of several libels alleged to have been published by the defendant in his newspaper, some of them before the date of the writ for the election, and some after that date but before the election :- Held, that the plaintiff was not a candidate for a public office in this Province within the meaning of R. S. O. 1887 c. 57, s. 5, s. s. (2) (a), before the date of the writ for the election; and that as to the libels alleged to have been published before that date, a notice before action under the statute was necessary; but the paragraphs of the statement of claim charging these libels could not, on the ground that the notice was not given, be struck out under rule 387, nor the action as to them summarily dismissed; and as to the libels alleged to have been published after that date, security for costs could not be ordered under the statute, because the plaintiff was then a candidate for a public office within the meaning of s, 5, s, s, (2) (a), and the statute did not apply, there having been no retractation. Connec v. Weid-man, 16 P. R. 239.

Correspondent. — The expressions in the Act respecting the law of libel, 50 Viet, c. 9, s. 4 (O.), shew that the provisions as to security for costs apply only to the publisher, editor, or proprietor of a newspaper. So held in an action for libel against a correspondent, Egan v. Miller, 7 C. L. T. Occ. N., 443.

Criminal Charge.]-The legislation in R. S. O. 1887 c. 57, s. 9, as to security for costs in actions for libel contained in newspapers, is unique, and the intention is to protect newspapers reasonably well conducted, with a view to the information of the public, In a newspaper article published by the defendants the plaintiff was referred to as an "unmitigated scoundrel," and it was stated that he had endeavoured to ruin his wife by inciting another person to commit adultery with her :- Held, that this did not involve a criminal charge within the meaning of s. 9 (a). The defendants did not contend that the grounds of action were trivial or frivolous; and it was conceded by the plaintiff that he had not sufficient property to answer the costs of the action. The manager of the defendants swore to a belief in the substantial truth of what was published, and that it was so published in good faith and without malice or ill-will towards the plaintiff: - Held, that, under these circumstances, an appeal from the discretion of a Judge in chambers in reversing a referee's decision and ordering security for costs, should not prevail. Bennett v. Empire Printing and Publishing Co., 46 P. R. 63.

Criminal Charge—" Blackmail"—" Trivial or Frivolous."]—I' non an application under R. S. O. 1887 c. 57, s. 9, for security for exercise complained of, published in the defendants' newapaper, accused the plaintiff of attempted "blackmail."—Held, that the words might bear such a meaning as to charge the indictable offence defined by s. 400 of the Criminal Code, and the question whether they did so, when read with the context, was for the jury, and one which should not be determined upon this application; and the master in chambers having held that they "involved a criminal charge," his decision should not be interfered with. An action cannot be considered "trivial or frivolous" within the meaning of s. 9 merely because the existence of a good defence on the merits is shewn by the defendant's affiduati, and not contravened by an affidavit of the plaintiff. The latter may properly consider that upon an application for security for costs a denial on oath of the truth of the charges against him is unnecessary. Macdonald v. World Newspaper Co. of Toronto, 16 P. R. 324.

Criminal Charge — Incorporated Company, 1 — The words "involves a criminal charge" in R. S. O. 1887 c. 57, s. 9, s. s. (1) (a), mean "involves a charge that the plaintiff has been guilty of the commission of a criminal offence." And where the words published by the defendants in their newspaper of which the plaintiffs, an incorporated company, complained in an action of libel, alleged that the plaintiffs had tried to bribe aldermen by issuing to them paid-up stock in the company:-Held, upon an application for security for costs under the above section, that the words did not involve a criminal charge, for a corporation cannot be charged criminally with a crime involving malice or the inten-tion of the offender. Mayor of Manchester v. Williams, [1891] 1 Q. B. 94, followed. Journal Printing Co. v. MacLean, 25 O. R. 509, distinguished. And where the defendants by affidavit shewed publication in good faith and other circumstances sufficient under the above section to entitle them to security for costs, and the case made was not displaced by the cross-examination of the deponent on his affidavit, an order was made for such security. Georgian Bay Ship Canal and Pow Aqueduet Co. v. World Newspaper Co., 16 P.

Criminal Charge—Pleading—Innuendo.]—Where a statement of claim in an action for libel contained in a public newspaper is not so defective as to be demurrable, and the words are alleged by the plaintiff to have been used in a sense which involves the making by the person using them of a criminal charge against the plaintiff, and may have that meaning, the case is brought within the exception contained in clause (a) of s, 9 (1) of the Act respecting Actions of Libel and Slander, R. S. O. 1887 c. 57, and the defendant is not entitled to security for costs. That clause is applicable to cases where an innuendo is necessary to give the words complained of a defamatory sense; and upon an application for security there cannot be a trial of the action on the merits in order to determine whether the words used involve a criminal charge. Smyth N. Stephenson, 17 P. R. 374.

Disclosing Defence.]—On an application under R. S. O. 1887 c, 57, s. 9, for security for costs in an action of libel, the Judge is not to try the merits of the action; if it appears on the affidavits filed by the defendant that there is a prima facic case of justification or privilege, and that the plaintiff is not possessed of property sufficient to answer costs, the statute is satisfied, and security should be ordered; it is not for the Judge to pass upon disputed facts disclosed in conflicting affidavits filed against the application. Scain v. Mail Printing Co., 16 P. R. 132.

Disclosing Defence—Good Faith.]—In an action of libel against the publishers and editor of a newspaper, the defence suggested by affidavits filed upon an application under I. S. O. ISN c. 57, s. 9, for security for costs, was that the statements complained of as defamatory did not refer to the plaintiff. The Judge who heard an appeal from an order made by a master for security being of opinion that, upon the fair reading of the statements complained of, they did refer to the plaintiff:

complained of, they did refer to the plaintiff:—Held, that it did not appear that the defendants had a good defence on the merits, and that the statements complained of were published in good faith, and therefore the order should be set aside. Swain v. Mail Printing Co., 16 P. R. 132 distinguished. Lennox v. Star Printing and Publishing Co., 16 P. R. 488.

Frivolous Action.]—Where an action of libel was brought by one Greme complaining of statements published in a newspaper imputing a crime to one Graham, and it appeared that it was stated in the article complained of that no one would believe the charge against Graham, and that in an article published in the same newspaper, after the commencement of the action, it was stated that the person referred to in the former article was not the plaintiff, and there were other facts shewing that the plaintiff was not the person referred to:—Held, that the action was frivolous, and the defendants were entitled to security for costs under R. S. O. 1887 c. 57, s. 9. Græme v. Globe Printing Co., 14 P. R. 7. 2 and therefore that his affidavit was not such the application. Bartram v. London Free Press Printing Co., 18 P. R. 11.

2. Slander of Women.

Disclosing Defence. |—In an action for slander brought under 52 Vict. c. 14 (O.), the defamatory words complained of, imputing want of chastity to the plaintiff, an unmarried female, and also for an assault, the defendant moved under s.-s. 3 of s. 1 of the Act, for security for costs, upon an affidavit which stated, among other things, that the defendant had a good defence on the merits, but did not disclose such defence:—Held, that the affidavit was not sufficient, for a prima facie defence must be shewn; but the cross-examination of the defendant upon her affidavit might be read in aid of the affidavit itself; and counter affidavits could not be received. Held, also, that the stay of proceedings in the order made for security for costs should not apply to the count for assault. Lancaster v. Ryckman, 15 P. R. 199.

Disclosing Defence—Meaning of Words Used.]—In an action for slander brought by a married woman the words alleged to have been spoken were, "you are a blackguard; you are a bad woman;" and the innuendo was that the plaintiff was a common prostitute and a woman of evil character. Upon an application by the defendant under 52 Vict. c. 14, s. 1, s.-s. 3 (O.), for security for costs, the defendant admitted having called the plaintiff "a bad, quarrelsome woman," but said he did not recollect using, and believed he did not use, the word "blackguard," and he devised that he used the words with the meaning attributed to them by the plaintiff:—Held, that the defendant had not shewn a good defence to the action on the merits, and his application was properly refused. Per Boyd, C., and Ferguson, J., that the expressions used might be employed in circumstances and surroundings such that bystanders might think them a statement of want of chastity. Paladino v, Gustin, 17 P. R. 553.

Property Sufficient to Answer Costs.]—Upon an application under 52 Vict. e. 14, s. 1, s., s., s. 3 (O.), for security for costs of an action for slander inputing unchastity to a female, the onus is on the defendant to shew that the plaintiff has not sufficient property to answer the costs of the action; and to defeat such an application it is not necessary that the plaintiff should have property to the amount of 8800 over and above debts, incumbrances, and exemptions. And where it was shewn that the plaintiff had property of the value of 8500 at lenst, and it was not shewn that she had not property of much greater value, the application was refused. Bready v. Robertson, 14 P. R. 7, considered. Feaster v. Cooney, 15 P. R. 200.

XIV. SLANDER OF TITLE,

Pleading — Justification — Estoppel. Case for libel in publishing a printed notice denying the plaintiff's title to certain land, of which the declaration alleged that he was seised in fee, and which he had advertised for sale, and stating that one C. J. had the title. and that a suit was pending in chancery to establish her undoubted right. Second plea, establish her undoubted right. Second prese, that the plaintiff was not, at the said time when, &c., seised as of fee of or in the land, or any part thereof. Third plea, that the or any part thereof. Third plea, that the matters published by the defendant were at the said times when, and still are, true in substance and effect. Fourth plea, that the said C. J. had and still has an undoubted right to the land; and that the defendant so believing, as her agent, and at her request, published the notice to protect her right, and without malice The fifth plea alleged that the plaintiff's only title was by virtue of an indenture of mort gage executed to him by one K., who was then seised in fee; that the said indenture was given to secure usurious interest; that the said K. died intestate, and his heir gave to the said C. J. full license to enter on and occupy the said land during her life; and thereupon the defendant, as her agent, published, &c., (as in the fourth plea.) The plaintiff replied, by way of estoppel, a verdict and judgment in an action of ejectment brought by him against the defendant and one E. Y., to recover possession of this land, in which it was found by the jury that the said indenture was not illegal or usurious:—Held, on demurrer, second plea good; third plea had, as too general; fourth and fifth pleas had, for omitting to justify the statement that a chancery suit was pending, that being a very material part of the libel. Semble, that the replication to the fifth plea shewed an estoppel. Mair v. Culy, 12 U. C. R. 71.

Pleading-Malice-Special Damage. 1-In an action for slander of title, the declaration should not only contain an allegation that the words complained of as conveying the slander are false and maliciously uttered, but also an express allegation of some special damage resulting from the slander, actually sustained. which must appear upon the declaration to be the mere natural and direct consequence of the words complained of. In this case the averment, "whereby said M. was prevented from carrying out and completing, and refused to carry out and complete, said contract for the purchase of said land from plaintiff, and plaintiff has hitherto lost the sale of said land and the use of the purchase money thereof, and has been unable to sell and dispose of said land, and has incurred and been put to great loss and expense in and about said contract with M., and the enforcement thereof, and in and about quieting the title to said land." held a sufficient averment of special damage. Ashford v. Choate, 20 C. P. 471.

Pleading - Two Causes of Action -General Verdict-New Trial,] - Declaration for publishing of and concerning plaintiff, and of and concerning him in relation to his business, and of and concerning certain letters patent and the invention patented, and the plaintiff as inventor and proprietor thereof, the following: "Caution-to all persons who be entering into any arrangements with J. M. C. for his self-acting cattle and stock pump, who claims to have patented the same in April last, I wish by this notice to caution the public against having anything to do with Cousins or his pumps, it being an infringement on my patent, which was obtained by me in 1858. I intend to prosecute him immediately. Beware of the fraud and save costs:"—Held, that the declaration set out a cause of action for slander of title, in the allegation that plaintiff's pumps were an infringement on defendant's patent, for which defendant intended to prosecute plaintiff immediately. Held, also, that it disclosed a libel on plaintiff personally in the caution against having anything to do with plaintiff or his pumps, and in the words, "beware of the fraud." in relation to the infringement of the patent. The evidence shewing that defendant was entitled to a verdict as to the slander of title, and the verdict for plaintiff being general:-Held, that the verdict must be set aside, unless plaintiff would confine it to the general issue applicable to the personal part of the libel. In such an action the attention of the jury should be directed to the separate character of the publication, in view of their finding one part to be true and the other untrue; and the damages should be specially awarded for that part which is untrue. Consins v. Merrill, 16 C. P. 114.

XV. MISCELLANEOUS CASES.

Arrest—Action for Libel.]—An order to arrest was refused in actions for malicious arrest and libel. O'Connor v. Anon. and Darces v. Hall. T. T. 2 & 3 Vict. See Allman v. Kensel, 3 P. R. 110.

Bar to Action — Verdict in Former Action.]—A recovery of a verdict in an action for libel against some of several persons concerned in the libel, and payment of the amount of verdict and all costs without judgment being entered, is a har to an action against others for the same libel. Wiltcocks v. Howell, S. O. R. 576.

Husband and Wife-Husband a Witness for Defence-Estoppel-Dominus Litis.]-In an action by a husband and wife for the slander of the wife in accusing her of adultery : Held, that the course adopted by the husband at the trial, with the defendant's concurrence, in conceding the action to be, in substance, that of the wife alone, and coming forward as a witness for the defence in support of a plea of justification, and allowing the case to be submitted to the jury on the question of the truth or falsity of the accusation, precluded a motion in arrest of judgment. The husband had sued the person accused of the adultery. for charging which this action was brought, and recovered a judgment against him in an action of crim. con., and judgment had been given in chancery against the wife, on the ground of adultery, in a suit brought by her against the husband for alimony:—Held, that under these circumstances the verdict entered dinder these circumstances the vertice enterpolar for the plaintiffs must be set aside, when the plaintiff Robert Campbell, if so advised, might raise the question whether he was not dominus litis. Campbell v. Campbell, 25 C. P.

Partners — Slander of Firm.] — The two plaintiffs were the members composing a firm, which firm had sold out the business to a company composed of the plaintiffs and another, the old firm continuing in existence for the purpose of being wound up. In an action of slander, the innuendo charging insolvency of the company, the jury found that the imputation of insolvency had no reference to the company but to the plaintiffs as members of the firm:—Held, that on a record properly framel, the two plaintiffs might recover for any damage accruing either to them as individuals or to the firm, without proof of special damage, and also as members of the company, for any special damage suffered by the company by reason of the slander of two members thereof, but on the record as framed here the plaintiffs must fail; and as no amendment was asked for at the trial, and no reason given for allowing one on appeal to a divisional court, it was refused. Bricker v. Campbell, 21 O. R. 204.

Poster Advertising Account For Sale—Justification.]—Two of the defendants, merchants, placed in the hands of the other defendant, a collector of debts, an account against the female plaintiff, wife of the other plaintiff, for collection, well knowing the method of collection adopted by the collector, who, after a threatening letter to the female plaintiff, which did not evoke payment, caused to be posted up conspicuously in several parts of the city where the plaintiffs lived, a yellow poster advertising a number of accounts for sale, among them being one against "Mrs. J. Green (the female plaintiff), Princess Street, dry goods bill, $59.35." The evidence shewed that she owed $24.33 only:—Held, that the publication was libellous and could only be justified by shewing its truth, and, as the defendants had failed to shew that she was indebted in the sum mentioned in the poster, they were liable in damages. Green v. Minnes, 22 O. R. 177.

DEVOLUTION OF ESTATES ACT.

Administrator ad Litem. | — See Re Williams and McKinnon, 14 P. R. 338.

Assignment for the Benefit of Creditors—Debt by Assignor to Executors—Security.]—See Tillie v. Springer, 21 O. R. 585.

Devise of Incumbered Land. |—The Devolution of Estates Act has not superseded but is to be read in conjunction with R. S. O. 1877 c. 106, ss. 36, 37, and mortgaged land devised by will is primarily liable to pay its own burdens, unless the will otherwise directs by such terms as distinctly and unnistakably refer to or describe the mortgage debts. Muson v. Muson, 13 O. R. 725.

Devise of Incumbered Land—Exoneration from Incumbrance — Distribution of Estate.]—The testatrix, who died in 1891, specifically devised to her grandson a part of her land, which was incumbered. To the plaintiff she gave a legacy of $5,000. The remainder of her estate, consisting of personalty and other lands, she did not dispose of or in any way refer to in her will, except in this clause: "I hereby charge my estate with payment of all incumbrances upon the said lands at the time of my death:"—Held, that the residue of the estate was charged with the mortgage debts to the exclusion of the land specifically devised. Such residue was to be treated as one fund and as if it were all personalty, under s. 4 of the Devolution or Estates Act, R. S. O. 1887 c. 108; and out of it the debts, including the mortgage debts upon the land specifically devised, were first to be paid, and then the legacy; the balance, if any, to go to the heirs-at-inav and next of kin. Scott v. Supple, 23 O. R. 393.

Devise of Land to Executors in Trust to Sell—Necessity for Approval of Official Guardian.]—Where a will devised lands to the executors on trust to sell the same:—Held, that the case was not within s. S of the Devolution of Estates Act, and the approval of the official guardian or an order of the court was not necessary to validate a sale. The word "devolve" in s. S is not used in its strict and accepted meaning of falling upon by way of succession, but in the sense merely of "passing," and what is meant is that where infants are concerned no real estate which, but for the preceding sections, would not come to the executors or administrators by a devise, gift, or conveyance, can be validly sold without the written consent of the official guardian. In re Booth's Estate, 160. R. 429.

Dower—Election — Marriage Settlement.]—R-Section 4 of the Devolution of Estates Act.
R. S. O. 1887 c. 108, which gives the widow a right of election between her dower and a distributive share in her deceased husband's lands, does not apply where by marriage settlement she has accepted an equivalent in lieu of dower. In such case she has no right to any share in the lands. Toronto General
Trusts Co. v. Quin, 25 O. R. 250.

Dower — Election — Money in Court.] — Where a widow desires to take, under the Devolution of Estates Act, her interest in the proceeds of her husband's undisposed of real estate, in lieu of dower, she must so elect by an attested instrument in writing, pursuant to

s. 4, s. s. 2, even where the lands have been sold under an order of the court at her in-stance, free from her dower, and the proceeds are in court. Re Galway, 17 P. R. 49.

Dower-Election-Money in Court-Lapse) cur. |-Where in the administration by the court of the estate of an intestate lands have been sold and the purchase money paid into court and not distributed, the widow may, although more than twelve months have elapsed since the death of her husband, elect chapsed since the death of her hisband, dece-to take in lieu of dower her distributive share under the Devolution of Estates Act. Judg-ment in 29 O. R. 388 affirmed. Baker v. Stuart, 25 A. R. 445.

Dower-Election-Restraint of Marriage.] A testator divided his real estate among his three sons, the portion of A. C., the eldest son, being charged with the payment of $1,000 to each of his brothers and its proportion of the widow's dower. The will also provided that "should any of my three sons die without lawful issue and leave a widow, she shall have the sum of $50 per annum out of his estate so long as she remains unmarried. and the balance of the estate shall revert to his brothers with the said $50 on her mar-riage." A. C. died after the testator, leaving ringe." A. C. died after the testator, leaving a widow but no issue:—Held, that the widow of A. C. was entitled to dower out of the lands devised to him, notwithstanding the defoasible character of his estate; that she was also entitled to the annuity of $50 per annum given her by the will, it not being inconsistent with her right to dower, and she was therefore not put to her election; that the limitation of the annuity to widowhood was not invalid as being in undue restraint of marriage; and that she could not claim a distributive share of the devised lands under the Devolution of Estates Act, which applies only to the descent of inheritable lands, Cowan v. Allen, 26 S. C.

Lease — Covenant to Renew — Power of Executor of Lessor to Execute Renewal of Lease,]—Under the Devolution of Estates Act the executor of a deceased lessor can make a valid renewal of a lease pursuant to the covenant of the testator to renew. Re Canadian Pacific R. W. Co. and National Club, 24 O. R.

Mortgage by Devisee within Twelve Months from Death-Absence of Cauti The devisee of real estate under the will of a testator, subject to the Devolution of Estates Act and amendments, has a transmissible interest in the lands during the twelve months after the death of the testator, pending which inter the death of the testator, pending which time they are vested by the Act in the legal personal representatives. And where real estate devised by a will so subject, of which letters of administration with the will annexed had been granted during the twelve months succeeding the testator's death, but as to which no caution had ever been registered, was, during such period, mortgaged by the devisee in good faith:—Held, that the mort-gage was operative between the devisee and the mortgagee when made, and became fully so as to the land and against the personal representatives when the year expired, in the absence of any warning that it was needed for their purposes. Re McMillan, McMillan v. McMillan, 24 O. R. 181.

Mortgage Action - Heirs-at-law of Deccased Mortgagor.]—Since the Judicature Act the proceeding by demurrer for misjoinder of parties is no longer available. Werderman Société Générale D'Electricité, 19 Ch. D. 246, followed. In an action upon a mortgage for foreclosure, immediate payment, and immediate possession, the plaintiff joined as defendants the heirs-at-law of the deceased mortrendams the heirs-at-law of the deceased mort-gagor (who died after the Devolution of Estates Act) with the administrator of the real and personal estate. One of the heirs-atlaw demurred to the statement of claim, on the grounds that the administrator represented the estate in all regards, that the heirs-at-law were not bound by any covenants of the deceased, and that no relief was claimed or could be granted against them :—Held, that the demurrer was in effect one for misjoinder of parties, and that the proper remedy was a motion under rule 324 (a) to strike out the name of the demurring defendant. Carter v. Clarkson, 15 P. R. 379.

Mortgage Action-Personal Representative of Deceased Mortgagor.]—The court will, on the application of a mortgagee in a mortgage action, appoint an administrator to the estate of an intestate mortgagor. McLaren v. Rivett, 7 C. L. T. Occ. N. 202.

Mortgage Action-Personal Representative of Deceased Mortgagor-Infants.]-In a mortgage action for foreclosure, it may be mortgage action for forecastic, it may octate that since the Devolution of Estates Act, as a matter of title, the record is complete with the general administrator of the deceased owner of the equity of redemption as the sole defendant; yet, as a matter of pro-cedure, the infant children of the deceased are proper parties, and as such should appear as original defendants, unless some good reason exists for excluding them. Rules 309 and 1005 considered. Keen v. Codd, 14 P. R. 182.

Mortgage Action-Personal Representative of Deceased Mortgagor.]-A mortgage action against the surviving husband and infant children of the mortgagor, who died intestate in February, 1892, was begun before the lapse of a year from the death:—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled, after the lapse of a year, to judgment for the enforcement of her mortgage, without having a personal representative of the mortgagor before the court, no administrator having been appointed, and no caution registered under 54 vict. c. 18, s. 1, amending the Devolution of Estates Act. Ramus v. Dow., 15 P. R. 219.

Nephews and Nieces—Rights of Children of Predeceased Sister of Intestate.]—On the death of a person, intestate, leaving no issue, the children of a predeceased sister or brother are not entitled under s. 6 of the Devolution of Estates Act, R. S. O. 1887 c. 108, to share in competition with a surviving father, mother, brother, or sister of the intestate. Re Colqu-houn, 26 O. R. 104.

See the next case.

Under s. 6 of the Devolution of Estates Act, R. S. O. 1887 c. 108, where brothers or sisters entitled to share on an intestacy, the children of a deceased brother or sister of the intestate are entitled to share per stirpes. Colquhoun, 26 O. R. 104, overruled. v. Allen, 24 A. R. 336.

Payment of Debts—Real and Personal Property.]—The Devolution of Estates Act, It. S. O. 1897 c. 127, vests the real as well as the personal representatives for the purpose of paying his debts; but, except in the case of a residuary devise specially provided for by s. 7, the order in which different classes of property are applicable to the payment of debts has not been changed by the Act. Re Hapkins, 32 O. II. 315.

Personal Estate—Surrogate Courts Act.1, of the Surrogate Courts Act. R. S. O. 1887 c. 50, mean personal estate "in s. 31 (2) of the Surrogate Courts Act. R. S. O. 1887 c. 50, mean personal estate proper, notwith-standing that by the Devolution of Estates Act. R. S. O. 1887 c. 108, the whole estate is now to be administered as personalty. Re Nicon, 13 P. R. 314.

Power of Sale—Surviving Executors.]—Where executors are given express power to sell lands, whether coupled with an interest or not, such power can be exercised by a surviving executor. The Devolution of Estates Act and amendments do not interfere with an express power of sale given by a will to executors extending beyond the periods of vesting prescribed by these Acts. In re Koch and Wideman, 25 O. R. 262.

Power of Sale-Devise to Executors-Grant of Probate to One-Caution.]-A testatrix devised and bequeathed all her real and personal property to two executors in trust to carry out the provisions of her will, directing payment of her debts out of the estate, with full power in their discretion to sell all or any of her property, and to invest the proceeds as they might deem best, and to pay the income thereof to the husband during his lifetime. and after his death to sell the property and divide the same equally between her children. One of the executors renounced probate, which was granted to her husband, the other executor, who, some years after, without having registered a caution, contracted to sell certain of the lands to pay debts:—Held, that he had power to make a valid sale, and that the devise being to the executors, s. 13 of the Devolution of Estates Act, which requires a caution to be registered, in no way interfered with such power. In re Koch and Wideman, 25 O. R. 262, followed. In re Hewett and Jermyn, 29 O. R. 383.

Powers of Administrator—Conveyance of Land by—Debts, —Land was conveyed in 1874 to a husband and wife who were married in 1864:—Held, that they took like strangers, not by entireties, but as tenants in common. Held, also, that the husband could by virtue of the Devolution of Estates Act, as administrator of the wife, and in his own right, make a valid conveyance of the whole of the land, although there were no debts of the wife to pay. Martin v. Magee, 19 O. R. 705, distinguished. Re Wilson and Toronto Incandescent Electric Light Co., 20 O. R. 397.

Powers of Administrator—Sale of Land—Objection of Adult Beneficiaries.]—Under the Devolution of Estates Act, where the persons beneficially interested are both adults and infants, and the former object, and there is no necessity for a sale to pay debts, the administrator has no power to sell the real estate. In re Mallandine, 10 C. L. T. Occ. N. 226.

Powers of Executor — Exchange of Lands.]—An executor or administrator cannot, having regard to R. S. O. 1887 c. 108, s. 9. and 54 Vict. c. 18, s. 2 (0.4), make the lands of the testator or intestate the subject of speculation or exchange by him in the same manner as if the lands were his own. The court refused to decree specific performance of a contract by an executor to exchange lands of his testativis for other lands, as the purpose of the exchange could not have been the payment of debts or the distribution of the estate, and it was shewn that the beneficiaries objected to the exchange, and it did not appear that the official guardian had been consulted. Tenute v. Walsh, 24 O. R. 309.

Powers of Executor—Mortgage—Infants —Official Guardian.]—Where infants are interested in real estate, executors or administrators have power under s. 9 of the Devolution of Estates Act, R. S. O. 1897 c. 127, with the consent of the official guardian, to mortgage lands. In re Bennington, 18 C. L. T.
Occ. N. 239.

Powers of Executor — Will — Trustee Act. 1—The Devolution of Estates Act, R. S. O. 1897 c. 127, does not apply to a case where the executor derives his title to the land from, and acts under, the will and the provisions of the Trustee Act. Mercer v. Neff. 20 O. R. 880.

Registration of Caution.]—The provisions of 56 Vict. c. 20 (O.), as to registration of cautions, apply to a case in which probate has not been taken out or letters of administration obtained till more than a year after the death of the owner. By virtue of s. 2, the effect of such subsequent registration would be only to withdraw to or vest in the executor or administrator so much of the land as is properly available for the purpose of administration. The provisions of 56 Vict. c. 20 (O.) are so engrafted on 54 Vict. c. 18 as to make both Acts apply to all persons dying after 1st July, 1886. In re Baird, 13 C. L. T. Occ. N. 277, reconsidered. In re Martin, 26 O. R. 465.

Registration of Caution after Twelve Months—Sale to Pay Behts—Bevise.]—The effect of the Devolution of Estates Act and amendments acted upon by the registration of a constant and the same of the the sa

Sale of Infants' Lands—Consent of Official Guardian—Liability of Personal Representatives for Neglect to Sell.] — Under 54 Vict. c. 18, s. 2 (O.), the approval of the official guardian to a sale of land by executors or administrators is now required only where the sale is for the purpose of distribution simply, and then only where there are infants interested, or heirs or devisees who do not concur. Where administrators in contracting to sell lands under circumstances not requiring the consent of the official guardian, nevertheless made the contract of sale subject to his approval, and, as was alleged, lost the sale by having through nerligence and delay failed to obtain such approval within the time required by the contract, but had acted throughout in good faith and to the best of their judgment:—Held, that they were not liable to make good to the estate the deficiency resulting from a resale. Under the above Act, executors and administrators are not, in all respects, in the same position as a trustee for sale of lands. Upon the latter is cast a duty to sell, upon the former a mere discretion to be exercised only for certain purposes and in certain events. Semble, where the approval of the official guardian is not required, notice need not be given to him under rule 1905. In ce Fletcher's Estate, 26 O. R. 499.

Title to Land—Concegauce—Executors—Beachical Owner—Debts.]—On a sale of lands the purchaser objected to the title on the grounds (1) that there was no evidence that a certain mortgage had been discharged, and (2) but the title being deduced through the devisee that a person who had died since the coming into force of the Devolution of Estates Act, 18.8. O. 1887 c. 198, the legal estate was outstanding in the executor of such person. It appeared that all debts of the testator had been paid:—Held, by the chancery division, that both matters were matters of conveyancing and not of title. Under the Devolution of Estates Act, where debts have been paid, or where there are no debts, executors will hold the bare legal estate for the devisee of the land of the deceased:—Held, by the court of appeal, that under the Devolution of Estates Act the legal estate for the devisee of the deceased are paid or not, cannot make a good title without a conveyance from the legal personal representative; and the beneficial owner, whether the debts of the deceased are paid or not, cannot make a good title without a conveyance from the legal personal representative, Judgment in 19 O. R. 705 reversed. Martin v. Magee, 18 A. R. 88.

Widow's Charge—Quantum of—Foreign Estate, 1—Under 58 Vict, c. 21 (O.) (s. 12 of R. S. I. DAMAGE FEASANT.

Fences.]-A land-owner in this country must fence against cattle. Spafford v. Hub-bell, M. T. 2 Vict.

Fences-Disputed Right of Way-Plead-Fences—Hispatea Right of Way—Hisa-ing. |—Plaintiff sued defendant for taking his cattle. Plea, justifying as for distress damage feasant on defendant's land. Replication, that the plaintiff demised to defendant the land mentioned in the plea, reserving a right of way along the west side thereof, and the alleged trespass was the use of such way. Re-joinder, that the trespass was beyond the right of way. Surrejoinder, that at the time of the lease there was a fence along the east side of the way to prevent horses, &c., straying therefrom; that defendant covenanted by the lease to keep such fence in repair, but removed it, whereby the plaintiff's horses strayed from the way upon defendant's land. Rebutter, that the lease contained covenants allowing the plaintiff to enter on the land and view the state of repair, and that defendant would repair according to notice; that the plaintiff directed the defendant to remove the fence along the east side of the way, and use the rails for other purposes, which defendant, with the plaintiff's assistance, and as the act of the plaintiff, accordingly did; and this is the removal referred to in the surrejoinder :- Held, moval referred to in the surrejoinder:—Held, that, upon the evidence, the jury were justified in finding the rebutter proved by defendant, whether it was a good answer in law to the surrejoinder not being a question for them. The jury was directed that if the removal of the fence was the plaintiff's act, he was bound, having thus thrown open the way, so to use his right over it as not to injure the defendant's land. Semble, that the question of plaintiff's duty in this respect was not really raised by the pleadings, but that the charge was correct. Wixon v. Pickard, 25 U. C. R.

Fences-Height-Municipal By-law-Running at Large. |- A municipal council by bylaw, passed pursuant to the Municipal Act, enacted that certain descriptions of animals (naming them), and all four-footed animals known to be breachy, should not be allowed to run at large in the township; and provided for fixing the height of fences. The plaintiff's cattle strayed from the highway into the lands of defendant Williams, whose fences were not of the height required by the by-law. trained them and they were impounded, defendant Steeper being the pound-keeper. an action of replevin :- Held, that, as the bylaw did not affirmatively authorize these cattle to run at large by negatively providing that certain other classes of animals should not be allowed to do so, the plaintiff was liable common law, and under R. S. O. 1877 c. 195, for the damage done, irrespective of any ques-tion as to the height of the defendant's fences. Crowe v. Steeper, 46 U. C. R. 87.

Fences-Height-Pleading.]-Trespass for taking, impounding, and selling plaintiff's horses, Plea, that horses were damage feasant, Replication, that, by town meeting regulations, fences should be five feet high, and that de-fendant's fences not being that height, but ruinous and out of repair, plaintiff's horses escaped out of his close into defendant's close without the knowledge and consent of plaintiff:—Held, good, on general demurrer. Ives v. Hitchcock, Drn. 247.

Fences-Running at Large-Straying from Enclosure.]—The effect of ss. 2, 3, 6, 20, and 21 of the Act respecting pounds, R. S. O. 1887 c. 215, is to give a right to impound cattle trespassing and doing damage, but with a condition that if it be found that the fence broken is not a lawful fence, then no damage can be obtained by the impounding, whatever may be done in an action of trespass. Cattle feeding in the owner's enclosure, or shut up in his stables, cannot be held to be running at large when they may happen to escape from such stable or enclosure into the neighbouring grounds. Ives v. Hitchcock, Dra. 247, com-mented on. McSloy v. Smith, 26 O. R. 508.

Fences - Sufficiency - Award.]-On the nestion of the sufficiency of a fence according to township regulations, where cattle are dis-trained damage feasant, the award of fence iewers is conclusive. Stedman v. Wasley, 1 . C. R. 464.

Immediate Re-taking of Animal-Whether Distrainable. |-The plaintiff's horse escaped from his stable and got into the plain-tiff's pasture field, but was immediately pur-sued by M., the plaintiff's son-in-law, who saw it escape, and was leading it out of defendant's field, when defendant seized and detained it. The plaintiff replevied, and defendant avowed as for distress damage feasant:—Held, that the horse, under the circumstances, was not distrainable. McIntyre v. Lockridge, 28 U. C. R. 204.

Re-entry of Cattle Driven Out—Scizwe for Former Damage—Pound-keeper,— Defendant seized the plaintiff's oxen damage fenant in his wheat field, and being unable to find a pound-keeper, turned them loose near the plaintiff's gate. On the evening of the same day the defendant again seized them for doing damage to his meadow and impounded them, giving a statement of his claim for damage to the wheat, but making no claim for injury to the meadow:—Held, that the damage to the wheat had been abandoned, and that the impounding and sale of the oxen for the damage so claimed were illegal. The plaintiff forbade the sale, when defendant told the poundkeeper to sell and that he would be responsible;
—Held, that the defendant and pound-keeper were both liable. Spafford v. Hubbell, M. T.
2 Vict., ante, explained. Buist v. McCombe,
8 A. R. 5089.

Right of User of Land-Right to Distrain. | — The defendants, by an agreement under seal with one S., acquired a right of user in certain land for the purpose of pasturing their cattle. There was no demise, or right of distress, or anything in the agreement to make the defendants tenants of S. was, however, a covenant that S, would not allow his own animals or those of others to enter upon the land in question :- Held, that the defendants had no right under this agreement to distrain the plaintiff's cattle damage feasant upon the land. Semble, the defendants' remedy (if any) was by action on the damage feasant cannot be supported unless the cattle are taken at the time the damage is done: if they are driven out after doing damage, they cannot on their re-entry be seized for the former damage. Graham v. Spettigue, 12 A. R. 261.

Running at Large—Municipal By-law—Pound-keeper—Notice of Action.]—Replevin will not lie against a pound-keeper. In this case the sheep which were impounded were grazing upon an open common with the consent of the owner thereof, and were being herded by a boy in charge of them with a view to driving them home, when they were taken possession of by two constables, against the boy's remonstrance:—Held, that the sheep were not "running at large," in contravention of a by-law of the municipality on the subject, and that the constables were liable in replevin for impounding them; but that replevin would not lie against the pound-keeper:—Held, also, that the constables were not entitled to notice of action. Ibbottson v. Henry, 8 O. R. 625.

II. FOR MORTGAGE MONEY.

[See R. S. O. 1897 c. 121, s. 15; c. 126, 2nd sched., cl. 15.]

Distress Clause—Arrears of Interest— Abandonment of Seizure—Second Seizure— Goods of Stranger.]—By a mortgage under the Short Forms of Mortgages Act, the interest was made payable on the 30th January in each year, and the mortgage contained a power of distress for arrears of interest. On the 30th January, 1879, two years' interest was over-due, and on 23rd May following, the defendants, under power of attorney from the mort-gagee, and as his agents, entered upon the mortgaged premises, and distrained the plaintiff's goods for arrears of interest. The plaintiff was tenant of the mortgagor, and had The defendants entered after the mortgage. notified the plaintiff that they had distrained, but they did not remove the goods, nor place any one in charge. On the 18th August following, the defendants distrained and sold the plaintiff's goods for $8.75 and costs, being for a half-year's interest, ending 30th July, 1879, in addition to the previous seizure and de-mand: — Held, that the defendants, having abandoned the first seizure, could not seize a second time for the same demand:-Held, also, that the half-year's interest claimed by the second seizure was not due by the terms of the mortgage, and that the distress was for that reason illegal:—Quære, whether the goods of a stranger could be seized under such a dis-tress clause. La Vassaire v. Heron, 45 U. C.

Distress Clause-Attornment, Absence of -Merc License - Goods of Stranger.]-A mortgage of land contained no attornment clause, and no provision expressly creating the relationship of landlord and tenant between the mortgagors and mortgagees, but it provided for possession by the mortgagors until default: that on default in payment of any one instalment for two months all should become due; and that on default in payment of any instalment the mortgagees might distrain therefor, and by distress warrant recover by way of rent reserved, as in the case of a demise of the said lands, so much as should be in arrear. The first instalment fell due on the 1st November, 1879, and the mortgagors being in possession, the mortgagees distrained therefor on the 6th October, 1880 :- Held, that this right to distrain was a mere license, and did not warrant the taking of a stranger's goods upon the premises. Semble, that the mortgagors, on default, ceased to hold as tenants, and the distress therefore was illegal, as having been made more than six months after their term had expired. Laing v. Ontario Loan and Savings Co., 46 U. C. R. 114.

Distress Clause — Damages. 1—See Edmonds v. Hamilton Provident and Loan Society, 19 O. R. 677, 18 A. R. 347.

Distress Clause—Insolvency of Mortgagor—Assignee Taking Possession of Goods on Mortgaged Premises—Right of Mortgage to Distrain.]—See Munro v. Commercial Building and Investment Society, 36 U.C. R. 401

Distress Clause — Intention to Omit— Construction of Decd—Wrongful Distress.]— M. gave a mortgage to T. on certain lands. The mortgage was in the statutory short form, except that immediately after the printed covenant for payment the following words were inserted in writing: "It being understood, however, that the said lands only shall in any event be liable for the payment of the mortgage." The distress clause remained unerased in its usual place, viz., after the covenants. T. assigned the mortgage to H., who, on an instalment of interest falling due, distrained for it. M. now brought this action for a wrongful distress:—Held, that M. was entitled to recover the amount distrained for with interest and costs, for the earlier provision controlled the subsequent one, both because it was first in the deed and because it was in writing, and the words superadded in writing were entitled to have greater effect attributed to them than the printed clauses. McKay v. Howeard, 6 O. R. 135.

Distress Clause Authority of Bailiff-Agent-Evidence.]-Mortgagees, by their warrant, authorized their bailiff to distrain the goods of the mortgagor upon the mortgaged premises for arrears due under the mortgage. The mortgagor being dead, the bailiff seized the goods of a stranger upon the premises Held, that he was acting within the scope of his authority, as agent for a principal, in making the seizure upon the premises, and the mortgagees were liable for his act. Lewis v. Read, 13 M. & W. 834, and Haseler v. Lemoyne, 5 C. B. N. S. 530, followed:— Held, also, that there was evidence upon which the jury might properly find that a local appraiser of the mortgagees was their agent for the purpose and interfered in and directed the seizure, after being informed that the goods were not those of the deceased mortgagor. Semble, that a letter written before action by the solicitor of the defendants to the solicitor for the plaintiff was improperly received in evidence. Wagstaff v. Wilson, 4 B, & Ad. 339, evidence. referred to. McBride v. Hamilton Provident and Loan Society, 29 O. R. 161.

Distress Clause — Creation of Relationship of Londord and Tenant — Possession after Maturity of Mortgage—Tenancy at Will—Goods of Strangers.]—A clause in a mortgage, that the mortgager shall continue in possession, coupled with his occupation in pursuance of it, and with a covenant for distress, in accordance with the terms of cl. 15 of the 2nd sched, to 27 & 28 Viet, e. 31, creates the relationship of landlord and tenant at a fixed rent:—Held, that by the indenture of mortgage set out, the tenancy created was until the day of repayment of the principal, for a determinant term, and thereafter a tenancy at will at an annual rent, incident to which tenancy was the right of distraining upon the goods of third persons upon the premises. Royal Canadian Bank v. Kelly, 19 C. P. 196.

In replevin, charging a distress of plaintiff's goods, defendant avowed setting out a mortgage executed to him by one D., in pursuance of the Act respecting Short Forms of Mortgages, and averred that under the proviso therein D. was possessed of the premises as tenant of defendant, and so continued until after said distress; that D. made default in payment under the mortgage, but defendant did not enter by reason thereof, but permitted D. to continue in occupation as his tenant; avowing the taking of plaintiff's goods as distress for arrears of interest:—Held, on demurrer, good, for that D., so occupying, was tenant of defendant at a fixed rent, being the interest on the principal sum secured; that defendant had the right to distrain for such interest, "by way of rent reserved," upon the property of third persons on the lands mortgaged; and that the continuance of the mortgagor in possession, after the day named for payment, with the permission of the mort-gagee, constituted him thereafter tenant at will of the mortgagee, and on the terms of distress contained in the mortgage. S. C., 19 C. P. 450. See, also, S. C., 20 C. P. 519, reversed on appeal, 22 C. P. 279.

Distress Clause—Merc License—Attornment—Mortgagee's Right as Against Execution Creditor.]—The distress clause in the Short Forms of Mortgages Act is merely a license to take the goods of the mortgagor; the intention being to provide in a concise referential manner for the disposal of the goods when seized in the same manner as goods seized for rent. A mortgage made in pursuance of this Act, contained the following: "And the mortgagor doth release to the company all his claims upon the said lands, and doth attorn to and become tenant at will to the mortgagees, subject to the said proviso." It also provided that the mortgagees on default of payment for two months might on one month's notice enter on and lease or sell the lands; that they might distrain for arrears of interest; and that until default of payment the mortgagors should have quiet possession:—Held, reversing the judgment in 45 t. C. R. 176, that though the relation of landlord and tenant may have been thereby created, yet there was no rent fixed for which there was power to distrain, and the plaintiffs therefore could not claim a landlord's right, as against an execution creditor, of a year's arrears of interest on their mortgage before removal by the sheriff. Trust and Loan Co. v. Laurrason, 6 A. R. 286. Affirmed, 10 S. C. R. 679.

Distress Clause - Sale under Power -Purchaser Distraining.]—The plaintiff mort-gaged his land to the F. L. & S. Co. by a mortgage which contained a distress clause, and gave a second mortgage to the defendant, by which it was agreed between them that if default was made in payment of interest to the company, the defendant should be at liberty to pay it, and should have the same remedies for its recovery from the mortgagor that the company had. Default having been made, the company exercised their power of sale, and the defendant became the purchaser. After signing a contract for the purchase he distrained the goods of the plaintiff for the interest that had fallen in arrear to the company. Shortly afterwards he obtained a formal conveyance of the land expressed to be under the power of sale in the company's mortgage :- Held, that the plaintiff's estate having paid the mortgage debt to the company in full the defendant could not be said by means of his purchase thereof to have paid the interest in arrear so as to entitle him to distrain therefor. Harron v. Yemen, 3 O. R. 126.

Re-Demise Clause — Creation of Relationship of Landlord and Trannt—Death of Mortgager — Distress for Principal.] — The plaintiff's father executed a mortgage, declared to be in pursuance of the Short Forms of Mortgages Act, of certain land, dated 17th November, 1881, to the defendants, but which was not executed by them, for the term of seven years, the principal and interest being repayable by instalments on the 1st November in each year. The mortgage contained a demise clause for the term of the mortgage at a rental equal to the instalment of principal and interest and due at the same time, and also a distress clause. The mortgager was to remain in possession until default. He remained in possession and paid the instalments due on the 1st November, 1882 and 1883. He died intestate in December, 1882 and 1883.

plaintiff, a son, by arrangement with the other heirs-at-law and the widow, occupied the land. At the father's death there was due for principal $100, and for interest $147. The interest was subsequently paid by the plaintiff. In October, 1885, after the interest had been so paid, the defendants executed a distress warrant to their bailiff, directing him to levy $112.55, "the amount of interest due on the 1st November, 1884," under which the bailiff distrained the plaintiff's goods:—Heid, that by reason of the provisions of the mortrage, the mortragor remaining in possession, and the payments made by him, the retailouship of landlord and tenant on the basis of a tenancy from year to year was created between the parties, with the right to distrain, which was not put an end to by the death of the mortgagor:—Held, also, that, notwithstanding that the distress was stated to be for interest, the defendants, being entitled to distrain for principal, could justify therefor. Methonell v. Building and Loan Association, 10 O, R. 580.

Re-Demise Clause — Creation of Relationship of Landlord and Tenant — Mortgagee's Right as against Execution Creditor.] On the 31st May, 1883, one D. mortgaged to the plaintiffs certain lands to secure the sum of $20,000 then advanced by them to him. advances were repayable as follows: $500 on the 1st December, 1883; $500 in each of the months of June and December in each of the four following years; and $15,500 on the 1st June, 1888; together with interest at the rate of seven per centum per annum from the 1st June, 1883, to be paid half-yearly on the 1st days of June and December in each year. The mortgage was made in pursuance of the Act respecting Short Forms of Mortgages, and contained the following clause, described in the margin as "Re-demise clause:" "And the mortgagees lease to the mortgagor the said lands from the date hereof until the date herein provided for the last payment of any of the moneys hereby secured undisturbed by the mortgagees or their assigns, he, the mortgagor, paying therefor in every year during the said term, on each and every of the days in the above proviso for redemption appointed for payment of the moneys hereby secured, such rent or sum as equals in amount the amount payable on such days respectively according to the said proviso, without any deduction. And it is agreed that such payments when so made shall respectively be taken and be in all respects in satisfaction of the moneys so then payable according to the said proviso." The mortgage did not contain the statutory distress clause or the statutory clause providing for possession by the mortgagor until default, and it was not executed by the mertgagees. At the time it was given D. was himself in occupation of certain of the properties comprised in it of the annual rental value of about $1,200, while the other properties comprised in it were in the occupation of tenants of D. and were producing an annual rental of about $2,000. After the execution of the mortgage the properties continued to be occupied in the same manner by D, or his tenants, and some payments under the mortgage were duly made by D. In 1887 the goods of D. on one of the properties comprised in the mortgage, and occupied by him, were seized under executions against him and sold, and the plaintiffs claimed that as landlords they were entitled to be paid out of the proceeds of the sale the amount due to them for the 0 - 62 unpaid instalments of principal and interest of June and December, 1886;—Held, reversing the judgment in 15 O. R. 440, that this claim was well founded, the relation of landlord and tenant having been validly created between the parties, and the execution creditors in the absence of fraud not being entitled to complain. Trust and Loan Co. v. Lawrason, 6 A. R. 289, 10 S. C. R. 679, distinguished. Ontario Loan and Debenture Co. v. Hobbs, 16 A. R. 255.

Re-Demise Clause - Rent or Interest after Maturity of Mortgage.]-In 1881 plaintiff made a mortgage to the defendants ma-turing in 1886, in which was contained a proviso under the Short Forms of Mortgages Act, that the mortgagees might distrain for arrears of interest, and a special provision by which plaintiffs leased the lands until the maturity of the mortgage, at a rental of the same amount as the interest. In August, 1888, while plaintiff was in possession, the defendants distrained on his goods for rent or interest due at the maturity of the mortgage in 1886 and also for the amounts due in 1887 and 1888: -Held, in an action for illegal distress, that no right of distress existed as to the rent due at the maturity of the mortgage, as more than six months had elapsed after the expiry of the tenancy. Held, on the evidence, that there was no definite tenancy after the maturity of the mortgage, and that the interest thereafter being recoverable not by the terms of the contract, but as damages, the rent became uncertain, and therefore there was no right of distress. Klinck v. Ontario Industrial Loan and Investment Co., 16 O. R. 562.

See Lambert v. Marsh, 2 U. C. R. 39, post, 111. 5.

III. FOR RENT.

1. For What Rents.

(a) Amount not Determined.

Abatement—Expropriation—Arbitration.] Defendant leased to planitiff certain land at a yearly rent of 15s. per acre, and the taxes, so that said taxes should not exceed £10 a year, any sum above that to be paid by the lessor; and it was provided that the lessor might sell and part of the farm, making a reasonable deduction from the rent therefor, to be determined by arbitration in case of dispute. A railway company gave notice to defendant that they required a portion of the land, which he conveyed to them after an arbitration as to price:—Held, that the land taken by the company was sold by defendant within the meaning of the lease. 2. That the abatement from the rent should not be measured by the interest of the money paid by the railway company, but should be determined by the jury, upon a consideration of the comparative value to the tenant of the land sold, assuming 15s. per acre as the average value of the whole. 3. That after the sale the lessor could not distrain, without first arranging or offering to arbitrate as to the amount to be deducted. 4. That there was no ground for claiming any abatement of the taxes from the £10 on account of the sale. Bickle v. Beatty, 17 U. C. R. 465.

Arbitration—Rent Due—Arrears.]—The defendant leased certain land to the plaintiff for a term, during which the latter was to make improvements, and at the expiration of the term the value of such improvements, as well as the amount, of the rent, was to be fixed by arbitration. The defendant having distrained for rent claimed to be due:—Held, that, there being no fixed rent agreed upon, there was no right of distress, and the defendant was therefore merely a trespasser and liable in damages to the actual value of the goods, but not to double their value, as it was not a case within 2 Wm, & M., sees, 1, c. 5, & 5, which refers to the wilful abuse of the power of distress. Semble, that although there may be no rent in arrear until the same is fixed by arbitration, there cannot be said to be none due. Mitchell v. McDuffy, 31 C. P. 266. See S. C., ib, 6439.

(b) Insolvency of Tenant,

(c) Rent not Payable in Money.

A distress may be made for rent for a sum certain payable in produce at the market price, and the goods seized may be sold, Thompson v. Marsh, 2 O. S. 355.

A rent of a sum certain reserved payable in leather, may be distrained for. Cumming v. Hill, 6 O. S. 303.

Quere, as to the right to distrain for the non-fulfilment of a contract respecting certain rails agreed to be delivered in lieu of rent. Robinson v. Shields, 15 C. P. 386.

Defendant leased a farm to the plaintiff for fine years from 31st March, 1896. He was to find the team and seed for the first year. 'to receive as rent for the first year two-thirds of all the grain when cleaned, threshed, and rendy for market, also one-third of the straw, turnips, and root crops, and half the hay: for the remainder of the term to receive one-third of all the crops, with the exception of the hay, of which one-half.' Semble, that the rent was sufficiently certain to warrant a distress, and that the goods seized might be sold. Novery v. Counolly, 29 U. C. R. 39.

(d) Other Cases.

Agreement to Abate Rent—Sum in Gross.,—The first and second counts of the declaration were respectively for distraining where no rent was due and for excessive distress for rent. It appeared that defendant had leased to plaintif for a term of years certain premises, portions of which were at the time in the possession of other parties, and that these parties retained possession against the plaintiff, and refused to give them up to him. In consequence of this, defendant, after the expiration of the first year, agreed with plaintiff to an abatement in the rent for that year, and gave him a receipt for the balance, which plaintiff paid as the amount of rent due upon the premises; defendant, however, subsequently distrained for the sum agreed to be remitted:—Held, distinguishing Watson v. Waud, 8 Ex. 335, that the agreement be-tween plaintiff and defendant as to the abatement of the rent did not create a new tenancy between them at a new rent, entitling defend ant to distrain therefor, because the agreement was not made until after the expiration of the year, to which it alone had reference, so that the relationship of landlord and tenant could not have been created for that year, and the sum agreed to be paid could not have been rent, but a mere sum in gross, and could not consequently have been distrained for. Held, also, that the plaintiff could not recover on the first and second counts, which were framed upon the assumption that the plaintiff was tenant to defendant at a certain rent. Kelly v. Irwin, 17 C. P. 351.

Agreement to Charge Work sgainst Rent. |—A landlord agreed with his tenant that if he should not paint the tavern outside, and the sheeds and driving house, &c., in 1843, the tenant might do it in 1844, and charge it against the rent of 1845. The landlord did not paint; the tenant only began to paint in June, 1845, during which month he painted one side and two ends of the tavern, but had not finished painting any of the buildings on the 12th July, 1845, when the landlord distrained for a quarter's rent due on the 1st July, 1845:—Held, in replevin, that under the terms of the lease with respect to the painting, the landlord might distrain for the quarter's rent due on the 1st July, 1845, though the painting which had been then begun, but not completed, exceeded the quarter's rent for which the landlord had distrained. Millmine v, Hart, 4 U. C. R. 525.

Arrears Due by Deceased Tenant.]—
A plea of distress for rent, on a demise of a house and other premises to A. at a certain rent, and that the plaintiff occupied the house with A. during A's lifetime, and after his death continued as defendant's tenant, and that defendant distrained for the rent of the house and other premises on the plaintiff's goods in the house, was held bad, as the plaintiff, under the demise to him, was liable for the rent of the house only after A.'s death, and could not be distrained on for the rent due for the entire premises demised to A. Strathey v. Crooks, 6 O. S. 587.

Assignment of Rent—Rent Charges.]—A Geo. II. c. 28, s. 5, rent charge or rent seek may be distrained for, and by one who has not the reversion, as, for instance, the assignee of the landlord. White v. Hope, 17 C. P. 52; 8, C., 19 C. P. 479.

Subsequent to Notice of Forfeiture— Was Tenancy.]—After an action of ejectment was commenced for the forfeiture of the lease the landlord distrained for and received rent subsequently accruing due:—Held, that such course did not per se set up the former tenancy, which ended on the election to forfeit manifested by the issue of the writ, but might be evidence for the jury of a new tenancy on the same terms from year to year. McMullen v. Vannatto, 24 O. R. 625. Whole Rent—Sub-tenants,] — Defendant leased to the plaintiff by deed for three years, there being another person in possession of part, as a monthly tenant, who was succeeded by two others, holding under defendant:—Held, that the lease to the plaintiff, being under seal, operated as a grant of the reversion (with the rent incident thereto), as to the part thus held, and that defendant was entitled therefore to distrain for the whole rent in arrear. Kelly v. Irwin, 17 C. P. 357, remarked upon, and not followed. Holland v., I anstone, 27 U. C. R. 15.

See Laur v. White, 18 C. P. 99.

2. How and Where to be Made.

Appraisement.]—See Maguire v. Post, 5 O. S. 1; Howell v. Listowel Rink and Park Co., 13 O. R. 476.

Appraisement.]—The statute 1 Vict. c. 16 has not dispensed with the necessity for two sworn appraisers. Stoddart v. Arderly, 6 O. S. 305.

Ingress—Breaking Door—Sub-tenant.]— Where a sub-tenant has an apartment with an outer door, it is illegal to break into that apartment to make a distress. McArthur v. Walkley, M. T. 4 Vict, Ingress—Breaking Window.]—See Nattrass v. Phair, 37 U. C. R. 153.

Ingress—Trap-door—Bailiff—Liability of bondbord,]—An entry by a bailiff under a distress warrant for rent must be through the distress warrant for rent must be through the place with the distress warrant for rent must be though the place with the distress to the plain of the distress was the plain of the distress were also the kitchens in the rear, over which there was a dark loft, which was undivided, and access to which was through a trap door in the celling of each kitchen. The bailiff, acting under a distress warrant delivered to him by the bandlord, entered the adjoining house, got through the trap door in that house into the loft, and then removing the trap door in the plaintiff's house, descended into the kitchen, and distrained:—Held, that the distress was liable for the bailiff's act. Anglehart v. Ratheier, 27 C. P. 97.

Sufficiency of Sciaure—Distress off Demised Premises, 1—1 ta pupeared that when the build went to distrain, the lessee's mare and yoke of oxen, the subject of the distress, had strayed off the demised premises to the lessor's land adjoining, and the bailiff then, and before making a scieure, served the lessewith a notice of distress, and taking a bridle from the lessor's stable, he, the lessor, and one L. went to the place where the mare and exen were, off the demised premises, and the bailiff having put the bridle on the mare, L. mounted her, and they all drove the oxen before them to the lessee's premises, where they put a yoke on them:—Held, that there was evidence to go to the jury that the distress was made off the demised premises, and therefore illegal, and in an action for the scieure a nonsuit entered was set aside. Peacety v. Oras, 26 C. P. 464.

Sufficiency of Seizure—Intention of Tenant to Replexy,]—Replevin against a landlord and his bailiff for goods distrained. It appeared that the bailiff had gone to the plaintiffs' store, who told him to proceed and they would replexy, and they requested him to seize some barrels of spirits, which he did, and afterwards advertised them for sale in the usual manner; he did not touch the casks, or leave any one in possession, or take security for their production at the time of sale, relying, as he said, on the plaintiffs' assurance, and knowing that they intended to replexy:—Held, a sufficient seizure, Finn v. Morrison, 13 U. C. R. 508.

Sufficiency of Seizure—Tranat Left in Possession as Agent.]—A builify signed certain goods under a landlord's warrant, for rent in arrear, but did not remain in possession, or take any further steps to execute it, except that, as the jury found, the tenant was constituted the landlord's agent to take possession of the goods for him under the warrant. After more than a month, a person having a mortgage on the goods took possession under it, and removed the goods, for which the landlord replevied:—Held, that the action could not be maintained. Rev. Noper, 23: C. P. 76.

Sufficiency of Scizure—Tenant Left in Possession as Agent—Acknowledgment.]—A basiliff, under a distress warrant, entered and made an inventory of "the several goods and chattles distrained by me, viz., in front shop, quantity of millinery," &c., "together with sundry articles on the premises." The tenant then gave to the bailiff the following receipt: "I acknowledge to have received from G, bailiff, all the goods and chattels in house No, 113," &c., "seized for rent," &c., "to be delivered to bim, the said bailiff, when demanded," &c.:—Held, sufficient to constitute a distress executed. Black v. Coleman, 29 C. P. 507.

Sufficiency of Seizure-Visits of Landlord-Absence of Formalities-Waiver.]-The plaintiff was mortgagee of certain goods of one F. G., a tenant of his father, the defendant C. G. The landlord on the 17th February, 1883, went to the house of the tenant, and declared that he seized everything for rent. He touched nothing and made no inventory. On 24th February he went again and told the tenant's wife that the property had been seized for rent, and to let no one take anything away, when she promised to do her best for him. On 5th March the plaintiff took possession under his mortgage and removed the goods, A bailiff went the next day for taxes in arrear, and the landlord gave him a distress warrant to take goods for rent. The bailiff then took the goods which had been removed, and on the tenant's waiving an inventory, advertising, &c., sold them within two days to a nephew of the landlord :- Held, that the landlord's two visits of 17th and 24th February did not amount to a distress. Quere, whether a tenant can waive all statutable formalities as to inventory, &c., as regards the Whimsell v. Giffard, 3 O. K. 1. as regards the mortgagee.

3. Illegal Distress, Actions for.

(a) Costs.

Sce McCallum v. Snider, G L. J. 187; Clark v. Irwin, S L. J. 21.

(b) Damages.

Double Value—Agent of Landlord.)—The action for double value, under 2 Wm. & M., sess, 1, c, 5, s, 5, for illegal distress for rent, is not confined to the landlord only, but extends to those who distrain on his behalf, or in his name or right. Hope v. White, 17 C. P. 52.

Double Value—Costs.]—Held, that the words, "recover double of the value of the goods or chattels so distrained and sold, together with full costs of suit," in the Imperial control of the Wm. & M., sess. I. c. 76, 8, 57, does not mean double the value of the goods, &c., distrained and double costs, but only double the value of goods, we, and full or ordinary costs of suit, McCallum v. Snider, 6 L. J. 187.

Double Value—No Rent Duc—Doubtful Lease, |—Remarks as to the hardship of the statute allowing double damages for distraining when no rent due, when the landlord has acted upon an erroneous construction of a doubtful lease. Brown v. Blackwell, 35 U. C. kt. 239.

Double Value—No Rent Duc—Jucys.]— In an action for distraining when no rent was due, where the case was left to the jury as an ordinary case, without being expressly left to them to find double damages, and without their being apprised of the provisions of the statute, the court refused to increase the verifiet to double the value of the goods distrained. Shipman v. Gruydon, 5 C. P. 465.

Double Value—No Rent Duc—Jury.]— Where a plaintiff claims double value for distraining when no rent was due, he must make such claim at the trial and ask to have the jury directed upon it. Bell v. Irish, 45 U. C. R. 167.

Double Value—No Rent Reserved.]—In an action for illegal distress, in which the Judge who tried the case found that the plaintifi occupied the premises in question under an agreement with the defendant, by the terms of which no rent was payable by the plaintiff to the defendant, and that the distress was therefore illegal, upon which the plaintif claimed double the value or the goods as damages, under 2 Wm, & M., sess. I, c. 5, s. 5.—Held, that the 5th section of the statute, by reference to the 2nd section, does not extend to a holding of land where there is no rent reserved, and that the plaintiff was not entitled to double value. McCaskill v. Rodd, 14 O, R. 282.

Double Value—Rent not Duc—Conversion—Jus Tertii—Measure of Damages.]—In an action for wrongful distress for rent before it was due, there was no allegation in the statement of claim that the action was brought upon 2 Wm. & M., sees, 1, c. 5, s. 5, nor that the goods distrained were "sold," but merely an allegation that the defendant "sold and carried away the same and converted and disposed thereof to his own use;" nor was a claim made for double the value of the goods distrained and sold, within the terms of the statute;—Held, that the action was the ordinary action for conversion, and that the value, and not the double value, of the goods distrained was recoverable. Held, also, that a wrong-doer taking goods out of the possession of another, cannot set up jus tertii, but the person out of whose possession the goods are taken, may shew it, and in such case the wrong-doer may take advantage of it; and the plaintiff, having shewn a chattel mortgage subsisting upon a portion of the goods distrained, could not be allowed to recover the value of such portion without protecting the defendant against another action at the suit of the mort-gagee. Held, also, per Ferguson, J., that the plaintiff was not entitled to recover from the defendant the amount received by him from the sale of the plaintiff's goods in addition to the value thereof; nor was the defendant obliged to deduct the amount so received by him from the rent which afterwards fell due. Hoare v. Lee, 5 C. B. 754, followed. Judgment being given in favour of the plaintiff upon his claim, and in favour of the defendant upon his counterclaim: - Held, that the amounts should be set off. Williams v. Thomas, 25 O. R. 536.

Double Value—Set-off against Rent.]— See Brillinger v. Ambler, 28 O. R. 368.

Excessive Damages - Pretence of Distress to Obtain Possession.]—Defendant in October, 1855, leased certain premises to one W. and the plaintiff as joint tenants, to hold for seven years from the 1st October, at a yearly rent, payable quarterly in advance, on the 1st October, &c., the first payment to be made at the commencement of the term; and in the conclusion of the lease it was agreed that the first three quarters' rent should be due and paid "on the day when the said term commences," On the 1st January 1973 fendant distrained for two quarters' rent, due on the 1st October preceding. Plaintiff brought trespass, complaining that the distress, if rightful, was merely a pretence for getting possession. He gave evidence tending to shew this, and proved that defendant entered into the house, assumed the management of it as if the term were at an end, insisted on the plaintiff's wife leaving a room down stairs which she occupied as a bed room, and taking another above: and remained there nine days against the plaintiff's will. For the defendant it was proved that W., the co-tenant, had surrendered to him his interest in the lease, and that the plaintiff, who had never paid his rent, though not then assenting, a few days afterwards (on the 9th January), entered into an arrangement by which he gave up possession. The jury gave £75 damages :- Held, that any authority derived from W., the co-tenant, could not be given in evidence under the general issue, by statute (11 Geo. II. c. 19); that at all events it could not have justified the defendant's conduct; and that, although the damages seemed excessive, the verdict must stand. Chase v. Scripture, 14 U. C. R. 598.

Measure of Damages—Hlegal Distress—Hlegal Sate—Tender,1— After a tender, as found by the jury, the goods distrained (illegally so, in the first place) were sold by the bailiff:—Held, that by reason of the illegal distress the plaintiff would be entitled to recover as damages the difference between the goods and the rent due; but, as the sale was after the tender, the plaintiff could recover the full value of the goods. Held, also, on the evidence, that the damages found were not excessive. Howell v. Listowel Rink and Park Co., 13 O. R. 476.

Measure of Damages—Hlegal Sale.]—In an action for an illean sale of goods distrained, the measure of damages is the difference of the sale of the goods of the mount of the rent in arrear. Laces of Tarleton, 3 H. A. W. 136, 27 H. J. B. 246, distinguished. Sautz v. Reddick, 43 U. C. R.

Measure of Damages—Wrongful Scizure only, —Where a tenant, to relieve his goods from an illegal distress, pays the amount of the distress and recovers his goods:—Semble, that in an action of trespass for the wrongful scizure, he is not entitled to recover as damages at least the value of the goods. Matheson v. Kelly, 24 C. P. 598.

Nominal Damages—No Appraisement.]
—In case for illegal distress, the plaintiff is entitled to succeed on shewing that there was no such appraisement as the law directs, even though but for nominal damages. Maguire v. Post, 5 0, S. 1.

Special Damage — Excessive Distress.]

—In an action for excessive distress the plaintiff may recover, though no special damage be proved. Black v. Coleman, 29 C. P. 507.

Special Damage—Second Distress.— Trespass lies for a seizure and sale of goods where they have been left on the premises after a distress longer than five days, no person being in charge of them, the seizure and sale for which the action is brought being subsequent to the five days after the first seizure; but in such case the full value of the goods cannot be recovered, but only special damages. Thompson v. Marsh, 2 O. S. 355.

Treble Value—Reference to Arbitration—Jury.]—A reference to arbitration disentitles a plaintiff from recovering treble damages and costs in cases where he would otherwise be entitled to them under 2 Wm. & M., sess. 1, c. 5, s. 4. The word "recover." used in the statute, means "recover by the verdict of a jury." Clark v. frucin, S. L. J. 21.

Admissibility—General Issue—Justification under Authority from Co-tenant.]—See Chase v. Scripture, 14 U. C. R. 598.

(d) Form of Action or Proceeding.

Case—Part of Rent not Due.] — Where some of the rent distrained for was not due :— Held, that case and not trespass was the proper remedy. Kendrick v. Lee, 6 O. S. 27.

Conversion—Rent not Duc—Measure of Damages — Jus Tertii.] — See Williams v. Thomas, 25 O. R. 536.

Injunction—Set-off—Damages.]—The defendant having distrained for rent in arrear, the plaintiff claimed that defendant was indelted to him in damages for breach of the covenants in the lease to repair and to lease to plaintiff an adjoining piece of land, and obtained ex parte an interim injunction restraining proceedings under the distress, which was dissolved on the ground of concenhent of facts:—Held, that the damages claimed by the plaintiff were not a "debt" within s. 3 of 50 Vict. c. 23 (O.), so as to constitute a set-off against the rent; and, although under the O. J. Act they might be the subject of counterclaim, they would not justify an injunction as against a distress levied as here. Walton v. Henry, 18 O. R. 620.

Trespass—Continuance in Possession.]—Where goods had been distrained for rent:—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to maintain trespass for a wrongful continuance in possession beyond the time defendant was reasonably authorized to keep the same. Lynch v, Bickle, 17 C. P. 540.

Trespass—Receiver—Restraining Action.]
—The receiver in a cause distrained for rent.
On the following day notice was given by a prior incumbrancer that he claimed the rent, and three days afterwards the bailiff was withdrawn. The tenant brought trespass against the receiver. The court restrained the action. Simpson v. Hutchison, 7 Gr. 308.

Trespass—Sale after Five Days.]—Trespass lies for the sale of property seized as a distress and allowed to remain on the premises more than five days after seizure, but the full value of the property cannot be recovered. Thompson v. Marsh. 2 O. S. 355.

Trespass—Trover—Distress off Premises.]
—Part of the plaintiff's goods having been distrained for rent off the premises:—Held, that he might recover their value either in trespass or trover. Huskinson v. Laurence, 26 U. C. R. 570.

Trespass.]—See Laur v. White, 18 C. P.

(e) Justification.

As Owner.] — A landlord when sued in trespass for an illegal distress, is precluded by the distress from claiming the goods as his own under a prior bill of sale. Gibbs v. Crawford, S U. C. R. 155.

As Owner.]—Where a person distrained, as landlord, on goods which as a matter of fact had, by subsequent agreement between himself and the tenant, but before the distress, become his absolutely:—Held, that he might justify the taking on this latter ground. Bell v. Irish, 45 U. C. R. 167.

Under Authority of Co-tenant.]—See Chase v. Scripture, 14 U. C. R. 598.

Under Warrant of Distress.]—A bailiff distraining for rent need not have a written warrant to distress, for if the warrant be insufficient, but the landlord adopt the distress, the bailiff may justify under him. Halsted v. McCormack, E. T. 3 Vict.

Where a party assumes to act as principal in making a distress for rent, he cannot afterwards justify as bailiff, on the subsequent confirmation of the party entitled to the rent. Lambert v. Marsh, 2 U. C. R. 39.

To an action of trespass q. c. f., defendant justified the entry under a warrant of distress, and the plaintiff replied de injuriâ:—Held, that under these pleadings, and under the facts proved, there could be no inquiry into defendant's motives; and that the plaintiff, having prevented the defendant from distraining, was not at liberty to shew that he had no intention of executing the warrant when he entered, although nothing was done inconsistent with such an intention. Lucas v. Nockells, 4 Bing. 740, distinguished. Scott v. Vance, 9 U. C. R.

(f) Pleading.

Declaration — Case — Duplicity.] — A count in case for maliciously seizing a horse of large value as a distress for a very small sum, when there were other chattels of smaller value, and that the defendant afterwards sold the horse for much less than he was worth, is not bad for duplicity. Higson v. Thompson, 8 U. C. R. 561.

Declaration - Contract - Variance.1 -In an action by a tenant against his landlord for wrongful distress and sale, the gist of the action is the wrong complained of, and therefore a variance between the contract set out in the declaration and that proved is immaterial. Robinson v. Shields, 15 C. P. 386.

Declaration — Excessive Distress — Malice.]-The second count, after stating the tenancy, and that the plaintiff's goods were premises, alleged that the defendants wrongfully distrained for arrears of rent the said goods of greater value than such arrears and costs, although a small part would have sufficed, and although the tenant's goods also distrained were of themselves sufficient; and that defendants thereby made an excessive and unreasonable distress for said arrears, contrary to the statute:—Held, good, and that it was clearly unnecessary to allege malice. Huskinson v. Lawrence, 25 U. C. R. 58.

Declaration - More Rent than Due Admission—Place of Distress.]—Declaration for distraining for more rent than due, &c .: Held, bad, because it did not admit the amount of rent distrained for to be in arrear, or shew where the distress really took place. Mooney v. Jackson, 1 C. L. Ch. 29.

Declaration - More Rent than Due -Tender—Excessive Distress.]—The first count alleged that one H, held premises as tenant to defendants at a certain rent; that the plaintiff's goods being there, defendants wrongfully seized the same, as well as all the tenant's goods, as a distress for alleged arrears of rent, to wit, $401, then claimed by defendants, and afterwards sold the same for such arrears and costs, whereas only $38 was really due, for which one-fifth of the goods would have sufficed, and the tenant's goods alone would have been more than sufficient :- Held. under the authority of French v. Phillips, 1 H. & N. 654, that the count disclosed no cause of action, for, as a count for distraining for more than was due, it averred no tender of the proper sum, and though the plaintiff could make no tender, he could avail himself of one made by the tenant; and if for excessive distress, it should have alleged distinctly that the distress was excessive and unreasonable, or that the roceeds were more than reasonably sufficient. Huskinson v. Lawrence, 25 U. C. R. 58.

taking a distress when no rent was due, the declaration need not set forth any tenancy between the parties; it is sufficient if it appear that the seizure was made under colour of a distress. Stoddart v. Arderly, 6 O. S. 305.

Declaration-Rent Due - Admission.] -Count in a declaration for a wrongful distress, admitting that some rent was due: — Held, bad, on demurrer. Cochran v. Welsh, 7 C. P.

Plea-Exemptions-Duplicity.]-A plea to an avowry was held not objectionable for duplicity, for stating that the articles distrained and replevied were beasts of the plough and an implement of husbandry, and also that they were in actual use of the plaintiff, because the articles were not absolutely privileged, but only sub modo; and to constitute an absolute privilege it was necessary further to have alleged that there was a sufficiency of other goods on the premises liable to be distrained: but, as that could not be alleged in this case, the plaintiff was entitled to rely on the actual user at the time of distress, which exempted them as fully as if there had been other goods liable to seizure. A plea which alleged that there were other articles on the premises besides the privileged article:-Held, good, as affording a sufficient answer to the seizure.

Miller v. Miller, 17 C. P. 226.

Plea-General Issue-Evidence of Authority of Co-tenant.] — See Chase v. Scripture, 14 U. C. R. 598, ante (b).

Plea-" Not Guilty."]-In such an action it is necessary to state correctly to whom the rent is due. "Not guilty" puts in issue the tenancy and the ownership of the goods. Rob-inson v. Shields, 15 C. P. 386.

Reply-No Right to Rent.]-In trespass to land and goods, the defendant justified the seizure of the goods as a distress for rent under a demise to A. B. The plaintiff replied that A. B. and the plaintiff at the time of said demise were partners in trade; that before the rent accrued A. B. died, and the defendant and A. B.'s executors, in consideration that the plaintiff would carry on the business for his and their benefit, demised the same premises to plaintiff for so long as he should so carry it on, without payment of rent; that the plaintiff under this demise entered and occupied, and thereupon the demise to A. B. was surrendered and determined :-Held, a good answer to the plea, as shewing that there was no right to the rent distrained for. Strathey v. Crooks, 6 O. S. 587.

Reply-No Rent Payable-Release.]-Action for taking goods. Third plea, avowry as bailiffs of W. H., for rent due by one W. B., the goods being on the demised premises.
Third replication, that on the 7th May, 1870, the tenant, by deed, released to the plaintiff all his estate in the land, and the landlord, in conns estate in the land, and the landidord, in consideration thereof, released the tenant from the rent and covenants:—Held, good, for though the plaintiff would be estopped from denying the landlord's right to distrain, the release shewed that no rent was payable. Hayward v. Thacker, 31 U. C. R. 427.

Reply-Plaintiff in as Owner.] - Third plea, avowry and cognizance under a distress Declaration—No Rent Duc—Tenancy.]—
In an action upon 3 Wm. & M. c. 5, for the dumper a decimal than the definition of the decimal than the dec land, and by deed dated 30th October, 1869, granted it to the plaintiff, who entered and took possession, and held it as owner in fee at the time of the distress. It was objected that, consistently with this replication, A. H. might have held such an interest in the land as would enable him to make the lease prior and paramount to plaintiff's title:—Held, replication clearly good. Ib.

Statement of Claim—Conversion—Rent not Due—Double Value.]—See Williams v. Thomas, 25 O. R. 536.

(g) Tender.

Necessity for—Sum Duc—Excess Paid.]—An action for distraining for more rent than Juc, cannot be maintained without a tender of the sum which is really due; and the excess paid cannot be recovered back as money had and received. Owen v. Taylor, 39 U. C. B. 258.

Proof of.]—To divest a landlord of his right to distrain, a strict legal tender must be shewn. Matheson v. Kelly, 24 C. P. 598.

Proof of—Bailiff—Landlord—Finding of Jury, |—In proof of an alleged tender to the bailiff, the plaintiff said that he asked the bailiff for a bill of demands, with all costs, and he would pay him; that he, plaintiff, had then 887 in his hand, which was sufficient to pay the rent and costs, and said, "Here is your money;" but that the bailiff related to pay the rent and costs, and said, "Here is your money;" but that the bailiff; but the question was left to the jury, who found that there was a tender. The goods distrained were afterwards sold by the bailiff:—Held, that on the evidence the finding of the jury could not be interfered with, and there must be held to have been a tender to the bailiff; and the landlord was responsible for the bailiff; act. Matheson v. Kelly, 21 C. P. 398, distinguished. Howell v, Listowel Rink and Park Co., 13 O. R. 476.

(h) Other Cases.

Bailiff — Illegal Charges — Liability of Landlord, —A count charging the landlord with selling the goods for extortionate and illegal charges, cannot be sustained, for the charge of extortion lies only against the bailiff who received the fee. See 1 Vict. c. 16, s. 4 (C. S. U. C. c. 123, ss. 7, S). Nichols v. Mooney, 1 U. C. R. 199.

Bailiff.—Science Off Premises—Liability of Indulard, —The bailiff, having a warrant from defendant to distrain, seized property of the premises. This was done without defendant to distrain, seized property of the premises. The was done without defendant of his having a one that there was —Held, defendant was not liable, and that the plaining out of the premise of Excessive Distress.]—The rent due was $401, and the value of the goods distrained $469:—Held, that the difference was insufficient to support an action for excessive distress. Huskinson v. Laurence, 26 U. C. R. 570.

Mortgagee of Goods—Right of Action— Ingress of Landtord—Breaking Windows.]— The defendant, in order to seize the goods under the distress, broke into the house by forcing the window open:—Quaere, as to the right of action of the plaintiff (the mortgagee of the goods) therefor. A new trial was granted in order to ascertain the facts more fully. Natrass v. Phint, 37 U. C. R. 153.

Pretended Sale of Goods by Tenant— Right of Action.]—A tenant is not precluded from setting up his title to goods illegally distrained for alleged fraudulent removal because of a pretended sale of them by him, the effect of which was to vest the possession but not the property in the goods in the alleged purchaser. Whitelock v. Cook, 31 O. R. 493.

Removal of Goods.]—The plaintiff having remained in possession and paid rent after the expiry of his term, the defendants levied a distress upon plaintiff's goods in the premises, situate six miles from Toronto, for two months' arrears of rent, and removed the goods to Toronto to impound and sell. The plaintiff brought an action of trespass, claiming that he was not defendant's tenant:—Held, that the relationship of landlord and tenant existed at the time of the distress. 2. That the removal to Toronto, unless unnecessary and unreasonable, or malicious, was not a good ground of action. Mactiregor v. Defoe, 14 O. R. St.

Surplus Proceeds of Sale—Receipt by Tenant. —In an action for wrongful distress, the receipt by the tenant from the bailiff of the surplus of the proceeds of the sale:—Held, no condonation of the wrong complained of, the payment having been neither made nor accepted in satisfaction or compromise of the injury suffered. Robinson v. Shields, 15 C. P. 386.

4. Notice of Distress.

Omission of—Effect.]—On a distress for rent no notice thereof in writing was given to the lessee; nor a legal appraisement made hefore sale; and the actual value of the goods sold was much greater than the amount due for rent:—Held, that the distress was illegal. Howell v. Listowel Rink and Park Co., 13 O.

Waiver of. |—After the distress was made, the tenant, on being informed by the bailift that he had eight days in which to redeem, said he did not require an inventory of the goods to be given him:—Held, that this did not constitute a waiver of the notice of distress. Shultz v. Reddick, 43 U. C. R. 155.

5. Persons Distraining.

Agent of Landlord—Ratification.]—A distress made by an agent for the benefit of his principal, in his own name, and subsequently ratified by the principal:—Held, legal. Grant v. McMillan, 10 C. P. 530.

Assignee of Landlord.)—One of the defendants in an action for wrongful distress, had assigned certain rent to a co-defendant, who gave the tenant (plaintiff) notice:—Held, that such an assignment conferred an estate, and that under 4 Anne c. 16, ss. 9, 10, the assignee was entitled to distrain for the rent in question, whether the tenant attorned or not. Hope v. White, 17 C. P. 52.

Assignee of Landlord.]—A landlord, after leasing certain premises, by deed "assigned, transferred, and set over 'to M. two instalments of the rent reserved, and appointed him his attorney to sue for, collect, or levy by landlord's warrant, if necessary, in his (the landlord's) name:—Held, that the instrument contained a grant, and of a rent charge, as an incorporeal hereditament, accompanied with a clause of distress, and therefore not of a rent seek, and that M. could distrain for the rent in his own name; but that, whether rent charge or rent seek, he had equally the power of distress under 4 Geo, II, c. 28. Hope v. White, 19 C. P. 479, affirming S. C., 18 C. P. 430.

Executors. —A testator by his will desired that his executors should sell and dispose of his land then nominated appointed his because then nominated appointed his because then nominated and appointed his because the necessary for making a title to the purchaser:—Held, that this devise vested no interest in the executors, but gave them a mere power, and consequently that they could not distrain for rent accruing in their own time, before the land was sold. Wichold v. Cotter, 5 U. C. R. 564.

Infant.]—Semble, that an infant may make a warrant of distress. Owen v. Taylor, 39 U. C. R. 358.

Landlord — Interest Expired.] — A landlord cannot distrain after his interest in the estate has expired. Hartley v. Jarvis, 7 U. C. R. 545.

Mortgagee.] — Where a mortgagee received rent from a tenant of the mortgagor by lease subsequent to the mortgage, but afterwards directed the tenant to pay the rent to the mortgagor, which he did:—Held, that the mortgagee could not distrain afterwards, as he had himself put an end to the implied tenancy created by his former receipt of rent. Lambert v. Marsh, 2 U. C. R. 39.

Mortgagee.] - See ante, 11.

Receiver.]—The receiver in a cause distrained for rent. On the following day notice was given by a prior incumbrancer that he claimed the rent, and three days afterwards the buildf was withdrawn. The tenant brought trespass against the receiver. The court restrained the action. Simpson v. Hutchison, 7 Gr. 308.

Receiver.]—An order had been made giving a receiver liberty to distrain for arrears of rent. Upon the application of a tenant distrained upon, for discharge of this order, it appeared that the tenancy had determined more than six months before the order to disstrain was made, so that distress could not be made under 8 Anne c. 14, ss. 6 and 7. The order to distrain was therefore discharged. No notice need be given to a tenant of an application for an order giving a receiver leave to distrain, Paxton v. Dryden, 6 P. R. 127.

6. Sale of Goods Distrained.

Delay in Sale—Collusion.]—Delay in the sale of goods distrained for rent does not prejudice the distress, if there is no fraud or collusion between the landlord and tenant to defeat the rights of third parties. Anderson v. Henry, 29 O. R. 719.

Goods of Third Person—Resort First to Goods of Tenant.]—Where a landlord has distrained for arrears of rent goods upon the demised premises liable to such distress, belonging in part to the tenant and in part to a third person, such third person has no right to compel, or to ask the court to compel, the landlord to sell the part belonging to the tenant before selling the part belonging to such third person. Pego, v. Starr, 23 O. R. 83, Purchase by Distrainor.]—Plaintiff distrained upon his tenant, and at the sale, with the latter's consent, purchased a portion of the property sold, which he left upon the tenant's premises for a couple of days, when it was removed, partly by his own servant, and partly by the delivery of the tenant to him:—Held, that though as a general principle no one can sustain the double character of seller and buyer, yet where, as in this case, the tenant consents to the purchase by the landlord, the sale can be supported; and therefore that the property sold passed to the plaintiff, and that he could hold it against defendant's execution issued subsequently to the sale, provided there was an immediate delivery, followed by an actual and continued change of possession, under C. S. U. C. c. 45, s. 4. Woods v. Rankin, 18 C. P. 44.

Purchase by Distrainor.]—In January, 1872, the plaintiff, a musical instrument maser at Toronto, rented a piano to one J., at Woodstock, at 86 per month, with the right of purchase, the rent to go towards payment of purchase, the rent to go towards payment of the standard standard

Purchase by Distrainor.]—The plaintiff caused the goods in question to be distrained for rent in arrear of a farm, and, after an unsuccessful attempt by the bailiff to sell them, they were sold with the tenants' consent to the plaintiff, and one P. was put in charge, who, however, allowed the tenants to remain in possession as before. Subsequently, the goods were seized and sold by the sheriff under executions against the tenants, whereupon the plaintiff brought trover:—Held, affirming the judgment in 28 C. P. 263, that he could not, as landlord, claim as purchaser at the bailiff's sale: nor could he claim as vendee of the tenants, it appearing that there was no registered bill of sale, nor any actual or continued change of possession. It was urged in appeal, for the first time, that some of the goods belonged to one of the tenants, and that the sheriff seized before he had any execution against them:—Held, that the evidence failed to shew any such seizure: and quere, whether the objection should be permitted at this stage. Buraham v. Waddell, 3 A. R. 288.

Purchase by Distrainor. |—II., who was the president of the defendants, an incorporated company, and also a member of an incorporated gas company, purchased the goods at the sale for the gas company. The Judge charged the jury that II. was both seller and buyer, and that the sale was void:—Held, a misdirection: but, as it appeared that no substantial wrong or miscarriage was occasioned thereby, the court, under rule 311, O. J. A., could not interfere. Housell v. Listoucel Rink and Park Co., 13 O. R. 476.

Time—Period after Distress—Jury.]—In the case of distress for rent, there must be five clear days between the day of distress and the sale, at the expiration of which the landlord is at liberty to sell; but he has a reasonable time is a reasonable time is a question for the jury. In this case, therefore, the Judge having directed the jury that the landlord was bound to proceed to sell on the sixth day:—Held, that the direction was improper, and that the right direction would have been, after having told the jury the time when the goods could first have been sold, for them to find whether under all the facts the defendant had remained an unreasonable time in possession after the five days before selling. Lynch v. Bickle, 17 C. P. 549.

Time—Period after Notice of Distress.]— Under 2 Wm, & M., sess, 1, c, 5, goods distrained cannot be sold until the expiration of fixe days after a written notice of distress, with the cause of the taking, shall have been given. In this case the only notice was one given on the Sth February, and the sale took place on the 12th—Held, that the sale was invalid. Shults v. Reddick, 43 U. C. R. 155.

Time — Removal of Goods Purchased — Trespass, —The purchaser of property sold for rent must remove the same off the premises within a reasonable time after the sale. Where the property was sold on the 15th February, and the purchaser entered to remove it off the premises on the 20th March following, he was held liable as a purchaser. Alway v, Anderson, 5 U. C. R. 34.

7. Second Distress.

Abandonment — Grounds of — Sale of Goods. 1—A, having distrained the goods of B. for rent said to be due to him by B., and abandoned the same without renlizing, and subsequently, upon a second distress for the same rent, having sold the goods:—Held, in an action for illegal distress, that the defendant having shewn no sufficient ground for the abandonment of the first distress without realizing, the second was illegal; and a verdict against him for $20 in the county court was upheld. Lyness v. Sifton, 13 C. P. 19.

Abandonment — Agreement to Look to Insolvent Estate—Time.]—D, was tenant to M, under a lease which provided that in the event of D. making an assignment in insolvency the term should become forfeited and void, but that the then current quarter's rent. as well as the next succeeding current quaras well as the next successing current quar-ter's rent, should immediately become due and payable. On the 21st June, 1872, D. made an assignment in insolvency to K., an official assignee; and M. immediately distrained for the rent, including two quarters due by virtue of the forfeiture. At the request of the official assignee, M. abandoned the distress, and in lieu thereof agreed to look to the insolvent estate, the assignee thinking that there would be abundance of property to pay it, but repudiating any interest in the term. sequently, the goods proving insufficient by reason of a chattel mortgage, the assignee told M. that he could not continue responsible, and M. thereupon, on the 24th September, a second distress for same rent:—Held, that the second distress was bad, for on the abandonment of the first distress, which could not be said to have been at the request of the M.'s right to distrain was gone, and he could only look to the insolvent's goods, which passed, without the term, to the assignee. Held, also, that the second distress could not be supported under the statute of Anne, as having been made within six months after the determination of the term. May v. Severs, 24 C. P. 396.

Withdrawal by Arrangement with Tenant—Fraud.]—A landlord may lawfully distrain a second time for the same rent when the first distress is withdrawn by an arrangement for the benefit of the tenant, which arrangement is at an end at the time of the second distress. Semble, when the withdrawal has been effected through the fraud of the tenant, the landlord can again distrain, Section 4 of 58 Vict. c. 26 (O.), the Landlord and Tenant Act. 1895, does not take away the common law right of distress, but merely renders it unnecessary that the relation of landlord and tenant should depend upon tenure or service or that a reversion should be necessary to the relation. In any event the section is not retrospective. Harpelle v. Carroll, 27 O. R. 240.

See Thompson v. Marsh, 2 O. S. 355, ante 3 (d); La Vassaire v. Heron, 45 U. C. R. 7, ante, 11.

8. Set-off or Counterclaim.

Damages—Injunction to Stay Distress.]—
The defendant having distrained for rent in arrear, the plaintiff claimed that defendant was indebted to him in damages for breach of the covenants in the lease to repair, and to lease to plaintiff an adjoining piece of land, and obtained ex parte an interim injunction restraining proceedings under the distress, which was dissolved on the ground of conceniment of facts:—Held, that the damages claimed by the plaintiff were not a "debt" within s, 3 of 50 Vict. c. 23 (O.), so as to constitute a set-off against the rent; and although under the O. J. Act they might be the subject of counterclaim they would not justify an injunction as against a distress levied as here, Walton v. Henry, 18 O. R. 620.

Notice—Illegal Distress—Double Value.]
—The service by the tenant, after distress but before sale, of a notice of set-off, pursuant to R. S. O. 1887 c. 143, s. 29, of an amount in excess of the rent, to which the tenant is entitled, does not make the distress illegal, and the landlord is not liable for "double value" for selling, under 2 Wm. & M., sess. 1, c. 5, s. 5, which requires both seizure and sale to be unlawful. Brillinger v. Ambler, 28 O. R. 368.

See Williams v. Thomas, 25 O. R. 536, ante, 3 (b).

9. Time of Distraining.

A distress more than six months after expiration of the tenancy is illegal, and a continuation of the tenancy will not necessarily be implied from the mere fact of the party remaining in possession. Soper v. Brown, 4 O. S. 103.

A plea of distress for rent under a demise after the lease had expired, was held bad, for not stating that the distress was made within six calendar months after the determination of the lease, according to 8 Anne c. 14. Strathey v. Crooks, 6 O. 8, 587.

A letting at an annual rent constitutes a yearly renancy, which continues at the same rent for the second year, if the tenant remain in possession; and the landlord may distrain for the first year's rent at the end of the second year. 4 Wm. IV. c. 1, s. 20 (C. S. U. C. c. S. S. 9.), does not determine the tenancy at the end of the first year, so as to make it necessary to distrain within six months afterwards. McClenaghan v. Barker, 1 U. C. R. 26.

A landlord cannot distrain after his interest in the estate has expired. Hartley v. Jarvis, 7 U. C. R. 545.

Where a tenant, with the knowledge and consent of his landlord, takes a lease from another person, to whom the landlord has transferred the reversion, this amounts to a surrender in law of the lease; the relation of landlord and tenant no longer exists; and consequently the right to distrain is gone. Lewis v. Brooks, S. U. C. R. 576.

10. What may be Distrained.

(a) Exemptions.

Benefit of Trade—Vessels—Material.]— M., a ship-builder, carried on his business in a yard leased from A. The plantiff sent two vessels there to be repaired, but M. gradient we tessels there to be repaired, but M. gradient means, it was agreed that the plaintiff should furnish the materials, and he purchased from M. for the purpose some oak timber then in the yard. The plaintiff's foreman took possession of it, and a portion had been worked up by the plaintiff's and M.'s men, when A. distrained both it and the vessels were exempt from distress. Gildersleeve v. Ault, 16 U. C. R. 401. Benefit of Trade—Goods Consigned for Sate.]—Goods were consigned to R, by plaintiff, with certain prices affixed in the invoice, below which he was not to sell, and all above which he might keep for himself; and it appeared that he was in the habit of transferring them when convenient in payment of his own debts, charging himself with them as sold at the invoice prices. Under any circumstances, therefore, he was not paid by commission on the sales!—Held, that such goods were not exempt from distress for rent due by R. Hurd v. Davis, 23 U. C. R. 123.

Benefit of Trade—Goods Left for Repair and Sale.]—An engine and boiler were left with D. by the plaintiff to be repaired and sold by him, the repairs to be made in consideration of the use of the engine and boiler while in his possession; if a sale should be made within six months, D. to pay plaintiff $400, and retain anything over as his commission; if not sold in six months, plaintiff to be at liberty to retain the goods; D. to leave the same in repair, without charge, and to pay nothing for their use:—Held, that D, acquired no beneficial interest until the repairs were made; and semble, that they were exempt from seizure for his rent. May v. Severs, 24 C. P. 306.

Benefit of Trade — Machine Left at Hotel, 1.—The defendant distrained for rent a reaping machine on premises leased by him to one G., from whom the plaintiff, an hotel keeper, had the use of the yard and stable. The machine had been left at the plaintiff's hotel about isk months before by one R., an agent for the sale of reaping machines, when he was stopping there, and R. had never been to be a superior of the sale of the Benefit of Trade—Saw Logs—Property of Stranger,]—The exemption from distress of goods intrusted to persons carrying on certain public trades, to exercise their trades upon them, is a privilege grounded on public policy for the benefit of trade. In this case saw logs were taken to a saw mill by the plaintiff, to be converted into lumber in the due course of business of the mill, and were distrained there for rent by defendant:—Held, that the business of sawing lumber for hire is a trade in which is exempted from distress for rent the property of a stranger brought in to be converted into lumber. Paterson v. Thompson, 46 U. C. R. 7, 9 A. R. 326.

Chattels in Use.]—The actual user of goods, of whatever kind, exempts them from seizure, either by distress or otherwise, and whether, in the case of distress, there be a sufficiency or not of other goods on the premises liable therefor. Miller v. Miller, 17 C. P. 226.

See Couch v. Crawford, 10 C. P. 491, post

Militia Horses.]—A person serving with or attached to a militia cavalry troop as quartermaster is an officer thereof, and his horse protected from distress under s, 31 of 18 Vict. c. 77. Davey v. Cartwright, 20 C. P. 1.

Sheep.]-It is illegal to distrain sheep for rent when there are other goods upon the premises sufficient to satisfy the claim. Hope v. White, 22 C. P. 5.

(b) Goods in Custodiá Legis.

Assignment for Benefit of Creditors - Distress before Possession Taken by Assignee, |- The tenant of certain freehold premises executed an assignment under 48 Vict. c. 26 (O.), and afterwards, but before possess-25 (0.1), find atterwards, but before possession of the tenant's property had been taken by the assignee, or such property removed from the demised premises, the landlord distrained for arrears of rent past due before the making of the assignment:-Held, that the landlord's of the assignment:—Held, that the landlord's right of distress was not affected by the as-signment:—Held, also, that goods so assigned were not to be therefore deemed in custodia legis. Eacrett v. Kent, 15 O. R. 9.

Assignment for Benefit of Creditors —Distress after Possession Taken by Assignee.]—See Linton v. Imperial Hotel Co., 16 A. R. 337.

Execution.]-A landlord cannot distrain goods held under execution and in custody of the law, Grant v. Grant, 10 P. R. 40.

Execution-Goods Left with Tenant.]-Execution—Goods Left with Tenant.]—A sheriff seized goods under execution, but left them in the possession of the execution debtor upon receiving a receipt for the same, with an undertaking to deliver them to the sheriff when requested:—Held, that the sheriff had not such a possession of the goods as precluded the landlord from distraining. Melatyre v. Stata., 4 C. P. 248.

See Roe v. Roper, 23 C. P. 76: Whimsell v. (viljard, 3 O. R. 1; Langtry v. Clark, 27 O. R. 280: Anderson v. Henry, 29 O. R. 719.

Execution - Sale under - Removal by Purchaser-Time.]-Although goods seized by the sheriff cannot be distrained in his custody, still they must be removed within a reatody, still they must be relieved within a rise somable time after sale, in order to protect the purchaser against a distress for rent; and in this case, under the facts set out:—Held, that the goods had not been removed within a reasonable time either after the sale or after notice to plaintiffs to remove them, and that in either view they were liable to defendant's distress for rent. Hughes v. Towers, 16 C.

Execution-Sheriff's Bailiff - Constable.] - Plaintiff, who was acting as a bailiff under a landlord's warrant to distrain for rent, attempted to remove some grain which had been previously seized by a sheriff under an execu-tion, and while in the act was arrested by the sheriff's officer, who was also a county constable. He was committed for trial and was tried but acquitted. In an action for false arrest and malicious prosecution:—Held, that arrest and malicious prosecution:—Held, that the grain was properly under lawful seizure and in the custody of the law and that by R. S. C. c. 164, s. 50, anyone taking it away without lawful authority was guilty of lar-ceny, and that by R. S. C. c. 174, s. 25, any-one found committing such an offence might be apprehended without a warrant and forthwith taken before a justice of the peace, and that the finding of the jury that the defendant acted as a sheriff's bailiff and not as a con-stable was immaterial, as it was incumbent on any bystander to do as he did; and the action was dismissed with costs. Beatty v. Rumble, 21 O. R. 184. See next case.

sheriff is identified in interest with his bailiff and liable for whatever the latter does under colour of the writ. The plaintiff, assisting a person acting as bailiff under a land-lord's distress warrant, attempted to remove some grain which was at the time under sei-zure by the defendant as sheriff's officer, and zure by the detendant as sheriif's officer, and was arrested by the defendant:—Held, that the sheriff was liable for the act of his officer. Beatty v. Rumble, 21 O. R. 184, distinguished. The jury having assessed the damages against The jury having assessed the damages against the officer at a nominal sum, the court, instead of ordering a new trial, directed judgment to be entered against his co-defendant, the sheriff, for a like amount. Gordon v. Rumble, sheriff. 19 A. R. 440.

Sale for Taxes—Removal by Purchaser— Time.]—C. owned a boiler and smoke-pipe, which had been erected in a building of which he was sub-lesse. On the 19th February they were sold for city taxes due by him, and bought by the plaintiff; but the whole pur-chase money not being paid, they were left in charge of the city chamberlain. On the 23rd he settled the balance, and was removing the goods on the 26th, when they were seized for rent due to the original landlord :-Held, that the goods could not be considered as in the custody of the law after the sale on the 19th February. Langton v. Bacon, 17 U. C. R.

Seizure for Taxes-Priorities.]-There is nothing in the Assessment Act, R. S. O. 1897 c. 224, to warrant a municipal tax collector seizing for arrears of taxes, goods which, being under distraint by a landlord, are in custodia legis; and in this case subsequent rent having accrued due during the joint possession of the landlord and the collector, the landlord was also held to have priority in respect to another distress made by him for such subsequent rent, City of Kingston v. Rogers, 31 O. R. 119.

(c) Goods of Third Persons.

[See R. S. O. 1897 c. 170, s. 31.]

Person in Possession under the Tenant.]-The plaintiffs were let into possession of certain demised premises by the agent of the tenants, who afterwards repudiated the agent's authority and refused to recognize the plaintiffs as sub-tenants. The defendant, who was head landlord, in the meantime dis-trained the plaintiffs' goods for arrears of rent, and the plaintiffs brought this action to recover damages:—Held, by the supreme court of Canada, reversing the judgment of the court of appeal, that persons let into pos-session by a house agent appointed by assignees of a tenant for the sole purpose of exhibiting the premises to prospective lessees and without authority to let or grant possession of them, were not in occupation "under" the said assignees, and their goods were not liable to distress. Farwell v. Jameson, 27 O. R. 141, 23 A. R. 517, 26 S. C. R. 588. Purchaser at Tax Sale—Delay in Removal of Goods.]—See Langton v. Bacon, 17 U. C. R. 559, ante (b).

Stranger—Horses in Actual Use.]—Held, that a pair of horses belonging to a stranger, which were driven belonging to a stranger, which were driven whose the same tied, the party in whose more they are going into the house, were not seizable for rent if they were in actual use at the time of the distress. Couch v. Crawford, 10 C. P. 491.

Stranger—Landlord's Right to Demise,]— A stranger, whose goods have been seized on the premises of a tenant and distrained for rent, cannot, any more than the tenant himself, question the landlord's right to demise. Smith v. Aubrey, 7 U. C. R. 90.

Tenant of Person in Possession without Title. |—A. demises to B. for a term: B. during the term absconds and abandons the property; C., finding the place vacant, puts a person in possession, and makes a demise to D.; A. distrains for rent under his lease to B.:—Held, distress legal. Rudolph v. Bernard, 4 U. C. R. 238.

Unpaid Vendor — Scheme — Creation of Relationship of Landlord and Tenant.]—C., having paid rent due by R. to H., in order to secure the sum so paid and other advances, took an assignment of the residue of the term from R., who forthwith took a lease from C. for a term of three months, the rental being the amount of C.'s advances to R.:—Held, that such a lease, however binding between the parties, could not create the relation of landlord and tenant so as to enable C, to distrain the goods of third parties (unpaid vendors) on the premises, the intention, as disclosed by the evidence set out in the report, being manifestly not to create such relation except as a scheme to enable C, to seize such goods. Thomas v. Cameron, 8 O. R. 441.

(d) Goods Seized after Removal,

Cattle on Highway.] — Cattle may be taken on the highway as a distress, if driven off the land in view of the bailiff; and if the legality of a distress turn upon the place of seizure, as to whether it was a highway or not, that point should be left clearly to the jury. Halsted v. McCormack, E. T. 3 Vict.

Forbidding Removal—Scizure on Highway. |—A landlord on the day of the removal of goods, rent being in arrear, forbade such removal until it was paid. Upon a seizure on the highway for such rent:—Held, that a sufficient inception of distress had taken place to warrant such seizure. Pulver v. Yerex, 9 C. P. 270.

Fraudulent Removal—Goods of Stranger.]—In case of a fraudulent removal, the landlord can follow the goods of his tenant only, and not those of a stranger, which had been on the premises. McArthur v. Watkley, M. T. 4 Vict.

Fraudulent Removal — Goods not on Demised Premises.]—A tenant is not liable to prosecution under 11 Geo. II. c. 19, for the fraudulent and claudestine removal of goods from the demised premises, unless such goods are his own property, nor can goods which are not the tenant's property be distrained off the premises. Martin v. Hutchinson, 21 O. R. 388.

(e) Goods Subject to Chattel Mortgage.

Agreement Between Balliff and Tenant—Remoral of Goods. —A bailiff seized certain goods under a landlord's distress warrant for rent in arrear, but did not remain in possession or take any further steps to execute the warrant, except that, as the jury found, the tenant was constituted the landlord's agent to take possession of the goods for him under the warrant. After more than a month, the defendant, having a chattle mortgage on the goods, took possession under it and removed the goods, for which the landlord brought replevin:—Held, that the action could not be maintained. Rev. V. Roper, 23. C. P. 76.

Agreement Between Bailiff and Tenant—Taking Goods — Pound Breach.]—Where the goods of a tenant, which had been mortgaged by him, were distrained for rent and impounded, and were left on the premises in his charge for over three weeks by agreement between him and the bailiff, when on being advertised for sale under the distress they were seized and taken away by the mortgage:—Held, as regards the mortgagee, that the goods were no longer in custodia legis, and that in taking them he had not committed a breach of the pound within the meaning of 2 Wm. & M., sess. 1, c. 5. Langtry v. Clark, 27 O. R. 280.

Agreement Between Balliff and Tenant - Transit's Bond -- Mondonnent -- Collision.] -- Where the goods seized are left by the landlord's bailiff upon the denised premises, in the possession of the cenant, the taking of a bond from the tennant to the balliff to produce and keep and deliver the balliff to produce and keep and the lectartist and trops and for the balliff, is not evidence of an abandonment of the seizure, but the contrary. Pending the distress, the goods taken are in the custody of the law, and not liable to seizure under a chattel mortgage, so long as no fraud is on foot and no intention or contrivance exists to prejudice the mortgage. Melntyre v. Stata. 4 d. T. 218. Ree v. Roper, 23 C. P. 76, and Whimself . Giffard, 3 O. R. I, distinguished. Langtry v. Clark, 27 O. R. 280, distinguished and not followed. Anderson v. Henry, 29 O. R. 719.

Growing Crops.]—A land mortgage provided that on default in payment of any one instalment for two months all should become due, and that in default of payment of any instalment the mortgages might distrain. The first instalment fell due 1st November, 1879, and, the mortgagese being in possession, the mortgagese distrained therefor on the 6th October, 1880. They distrained crops produced from the land after the 1st November, 1879, and the plaintiffs claimed them under a chattel mortgage given on 31st May. 1880, of such crops, which had then been just sown:—Held, that the growing crops passed by the chattel mortgage to the plaintiffs, who were entitled to recover for them as against the defendants. Laing v. Ontario Loan and Sacings Co., 46 U. C. R. 114.

Tenant—Duty of, to Protect Mortgaged Goods. | —See Herring v. Wilson, 4 O. R. 607.

(f) Other Cases,

Garnishment of Rent.] — A landord's right to distrain is suspended as to that portion of the rent which has accrued up to the garnishment, by the service on the tenant, before such distress, of an order attaching the rent, and distress for such portion is wrongful. Patterson v. King, 27 O. R. 56.

Interest of Tenant in Goods—Unpaid Vendor.]—An agreement upon the sale of certain machinery and other goods contained a provision that until the balance of the purchase money should be fully paid, the vendor should have a vendor's lien on the goods for such balance, and that no actual delivery of such property should be made, nor should possession be parted with, until such balance and interest should be fully paid. After the sale the vendee took possession of the goods, and subsequently, on the 1st April. 1890, with the assent of the vendor, who surrendered a former lease, the defendants leased to the vendee the premises upon which the goods were situated. Afterwards, and while the balance of the purchase money was still unpaid, the defendants distrained for rent upon the goods in question:—Held, that the stipulation in the agreement for a vendor's lien was inappropriate and inconsistent and must be read out as mere surplusage; and so reading the acreement, the transaction was one of conditional sale, and under 57 Vict. c. 43 (O.) only the interest of the tenant in the goods could be distrained on. Held, also, that 57 Vict. c. 45, which repeats s. 28, s.s. I, of 1887 c. 145, appelled. Carroll v. Beard, 27 O. R. 340.

Property of Joint Owners.] — Where the plaintiff had not shewn that he was solely entitled to possession of the logs, the subject of distress, and the seizure as regarded his coowner being lawful, the plaintiff could not maintain replevin. Patterson v. Thompson, 9 A. R. 326.

Vessels at Wharres. — Where a wharf has been leased, "with all the privileges thereto belonging," a vessel attached to the wharf by the usual fastenings cannot be distrained for rent, not being on the premises demised. Sanderson v. Kingston Marine R. W. Co., 3 U. C. R. 168.

IV. MISCELLANEOUS CASES.

Annuity.]—See Crone v. Crone, 27 Gr.

Costs of Distress.]—The form of order given in the schedule to C. S. U. C. c. 123 (respecting the costs of distress for rents and bendites not exceeding $80) states the unlawful charges to have been taken from the complainant "under a distress for (as the vise may be !)"—Held, sufficient to say "a distress for rent," and that it was unnecessary to state such rent to have been under $80, in order to shew jurisdiction. Regina v. Stewart, 25 U. C. R. 327.

Proceedings in Insolvency—Right to Distrain,]—See Murro v. Commercial Building and Investment Society, 36 U. C. R. 461; McEdwards v. McLean, 43 U. C. R. 454; Laur v. White, 18 C. P. 99; Timmins v. Surples, 26 C. P. 49.

Taking Note for Rent.]—The mere taking of a note for rent will not take away the right to distrain, but it is otherwise where, in consideration of receiving it, the landled expressly agrees to await until it has been dishonoured. The plaintiff being unable to pay his rent in arrent, defendant, his landlord, proposed to him to go to the bank, and that defendant would indorse his note for the amount, on which defendant could get the money, defendant saying that if the plaintiff could not pay it in full at maturity he would renew. This was done, and defendant by discounting the note, which was not due until March, obtained the money. The bank already held other notes given for previous rent. In January, however, the notes being still in the bank, the defendant distrained: — Held, that this evidence shewed that defendant obtained the notes upon an express agreement that his right to distrain should be suspended until they were dishonoured; and that the distress therefore was not warranted. Simpson v, Moorit, 39 U. C. R. 610.

See Assessment and Taxes, III. 3—Replevin, I.

DISTRIBUTION OF ESTATES.

Allowance for Improvements.] — A testator placed his two sons in possession of portions of his real estate, intending to convey or devise the same to them, but during his lifetime retained the full control of the property; notwithstanding this, the sons made valuable improvements upon their respective portions. Upon a bill filed after the decease of the father for a distribution of the estate, the court refused to make to the sons any allowance in respect of such improvements. Foster v. Emerson, 5 Gr. 135.

Allowance for Improvements.]— A father placed one of his sons in possession of creatin wild and, and announced his intendent of the place of the son had taken possession. The father than the son had taken possession, and by his improvements nearly doubled the value of the land:—Held, that the son was entitled to a charge for his improvements, and to have the land allotted to him in the division of his father's estate, provided the present value of the land in its unimproved state would not exceed his share of the estate. Quere, in such a case, whether the son is not entitled to an absolute decree for the land. Biehn v. Biehn, 18 Gr. 497; Hovey v. Ferguson, ib. 498.

Appropriation—Mistake—Unequal Division—Readjustment—Lackes.]—A division of the residuary personal estate of a testator was made between his legatees, with their concurrence, appropriating to one of them, as part of her share, a mortrage for about £10,000, assumed to be good, but which, from defective title and other causes, was not worth one-fourth of that sum:—Held, that in consequence of the mistake as to the character and value of the mortgage, the appropriation was not binding on such legatee. An unequal and unjust division of a residuary estate was agreed to in 1858, under circumstances which rendered the transaction invalid. The division was acted on to a certain extent by both parties, though convexances had not been executed. A bill being filed in 1864 to set aside the division, and the delay sufficiently accounted for, a decree was made as prayed, and it was referred to the master to make a new division, not disturbing the old division more than should be necessary. Clarke v. Hawke, 11 Gr. 527.

Compensation-Mistake-Rectification-Contribution.]—A testator devised to his son a certain named lot: the residue of his estate, after certain other specific devises, he directed to be divided between his two brothers and sister, amongst whom, after the death of the testator, the property was divided. In this division, by mistake, the lot devised to his son was included, and was allotted to one of the residuary devisees as part of his share, who devised the same to his sons, and who, on discovering the mistake which had been committed, applied to those interested in the resid uary estate to have the mistake rectified. It then appeared that some of the other residuary devisees had sold portions of the shares allotted to them, by reason of which a re-division of the estate was impossible, and a bill was thereupon filed praying for compensation for the loss sustained by reason of the mistake in thus allotting the devised lot. court, under the circumstances, ordered a valuation to be made of the residuary estate, at its present value, and one-third of such value, with interest from the date the first division was made, to be contributed ratably by the other residuary devisees, or their representatives, or, if desired, by either of the parties, with an account of rents and profits received. Stinson v. Moore, 10 Gr. 94.

Creditors-Estate of Deceased Debtor-Division Pari Passu — Overpayment—Action against Executrix.]—By 29 Vict. c. 28, s. 28, the assets of a deceased debtor, in case of deficiency, are to be distributed amongst his several creditors pari passu, without any pri-ority over each other; and where the executrix in such a case allowed judgment to be recovered by two creditors and execution to be issued, under which they were paid nearly in full, when by applying to the court in that action the proper distribution of the estate would have been ordered, the court charged her, in favour of the other creditors of the estate, with the excess beyond the ratable proportion of the claim due the execution creditors; giving an order over in favour of the executrix against those creditors, who were ordered to pay to the other parties to the suit all the costs, other than those of proving their to this extent they were held entitled to re-cover their costs. Taylor v. Brodie, 21 Gr.

Creditors—Estate of Deceased Debtor— Division Pari Passu—Overpayment—Action by Administratrix.]—An administratrix, having given the statutory notice for creditors, after expiry of the time therein mentioned, paid money on a claim, and afterwards, new claims being raised against the estate, sought to recover a portion of the money back as on an overpayment:—Held, that she had no locus standi to maintain the action. Leitch v. Malsons Bank, 27 O. R. 621.

Division of Chattels—Personal Representative.]—A., who was domiciled in Sectland, died there intestate, leaving some personal property. Three of his next of kin, a brother and two sisters, concurred in appointing an agent in Scotland to wind up the estate and transmit and account to them therefor; the agent did so, and transmitted to the brother some money and personal chattels as all that remained after paying the intestate's debts and funeral expenses. The brother paid the sisters their shares of the money, but kept all the chattels. In a suit by the sisters for a division of these, an objection taken to the absence of any personal representative of the decensed in this country, was overruled. Sutherland v. Ross, 13 Gr. 507.

Lunatic — Sale of Lands — Proceeds— Realty.]—One of several heirs of an intestate being lunatic, an Act was procured authorizing the sale of the intestate's lands, and the investment of the lunatic's share for the benefit of the lunatic "and his representatives." The lunatic afterwards diet:—Held, that this share, for the purposes of distribution, retained the character of realty, and was to be divided among his real representatives and not his next of kin. Campbell v. Campbell, 19 Gr. 254.

Married Woman — Husband's Right to Residuum—Next of Kin, 1—The Legislature of New Brunswick, by 26 Geo. III. c, 11, ss. 14 and 17, re-enacted the Innerial Act 22 & 23 Car, II. c, 10 (Statute of Distributions), as explained by s, 25 of 29 Car, II. c, 3 (Statute of Frauds), which provided that nothing in the former Act should be construed to extend to estates of femes coverts dying intestate, but that their husbands should enjoy their personal estate as theretofore. When the statutes of New Brunswick were revised in 1854, the Act 26 Geo. III c, 11 was re-enacted, but is, 17, corresponding to s, 25 of the Statute of Frauds, was omitted. In the administration of the estate of femes covert her next of kin claimed the personalty on the ground that the husbands' rights were swept away by this omission:—Held, that the personal property passed to her husband and not to the next of kin of the wife; that the Married Woman's Pronerty Act of New Brunswick, C, 8, N, L, c, 72, which exempts the separate property of a married woman from liability for her husband's rights, and prohibits any dealing with it without her consent, only suspends the husband's rights, in the property daring coverture, and on the death of the wife hat the Act had never been passed. Lamb v, Cleveland, 19 S, C, R, 78.

Statute of Distributions—Grand-ne-phews.]—The proviso in the Statute of Distributions that "there be no representatives admitted amongst collaterals after brothers' and sisters' children" excludes the children of a deceased nephew of the intestate. Crowther v. Cwethre, 1 O. R. 128.

Statute of Distributions.]—See Arkell v. Roach, 5 O. R. 699; Re Quimby, Quimby v. Quimby, ib. 738.

DISTRICT COURTS.

Appeal—Court of Appeal—Final Order.]—There is an appeal to the court of appeal from the judgments of the district courts of the provisional judicial districts. Section 34 of R. S. O. 1877 c. 90 imports that when by the law in force with regard to county courts an appeal lies from these courts to the court of appeal, it lies also from the district courts. Bank of Minnesola v. Page, 14 A. R. 347.

An order for leave to sign judgment under fule S0 is in its nature final and not merely interlocutory, and therefore such an order if made in a county court would be appealable by virtue of 45 Vict. c. 6, s. 4 (O.), and is also appealable when made in a district court.

47 Vict. c. 14, s. 4 (O.), assumes the existence of the right of appeal from district courts; and the optional right to move against the verdict in the high court, provided by s.-s. 5, is not the appeal referred to in the first part of the section, in the words "subject to appeal." Ib.

Appeal—High Court—Interpleader.]—The high court of justice has no jurisdiction by virtue of R. S. O. 1887 c. 91, s. 56, s. s. 2, or otherwise, to entertain a motion against a verdict or judgment obtained in the district court in an interpleader issue. Isbister v. Sullivan, 19 O. R. 418.

Execution — Transcript from Division Court.]—Upon a transcript from a division court to a district court, it is not necessary to issue a fi. fa. goods from such district court before a valid sale can take place under a fi. fa. lands issued therefrom. Kehoe v. Brown, 13 C. P. 549, observed upon. Daby v. Geht, 18 O. R. 104.

Jurisdiction — Interpleader, — The district court of the provisional judicial district of Thunder Bay has jurisdiction in interpleader under R, S. O. 1887, e. 91, s. 56; for it has "the jurisdiction possessed by county courts," which is by R, S. O. 1877, c. 45, s. 19, s.-s. 6, "in interpleader matters as provided by the Interpleader Act;" and such jurisdiction is determinable in a sheriff's interpleader by the fact whether the process under which the goods were seized has issued out of the district court, and not by the amount for which the recovery was had or the process issued. Isbister v, Sullican, 16 O. R. 418.

Jurisdiction—Title to Land.]—The jurisdiction conferred on the district court of the provisional judicial district of Thunder Bay by 47 Vict. c. 14, ss. 4, 5 (O.), is not subject to the exceptions to the general jurisdiction of the county courts mentioned in R. S. O. 1877 c. 43, s. 18, and therefore, the district court has power to try actions in which the title to land comes in question. McQuaid v. Cooper, 11 O. R. 213.

Jurisdiction of Judge — Vendors and Purchasers Act—Land Titles Act.—Notwithstanding anything in R. S. O. 1897 c. 199, s. 7, and R. S. O. 1897 c. 51, s. 185, Judges of district courts who are local Judges of the high court, have no jurisdiction to deal with applications under the Vendors and Purchasers Act, or under the Land Titles Act. In reunder the Land Titles Act. In re-Mickell and Pioneer Steam Navigation Co., 31 O. R. 542.

Order of Master for Trial of Action Therein — Subsequent Judgment of High Court Judge.]—In an action brought for damages to the plaintiff's house, situated in a provisional judicial district, an order was made by the master in chambers, assuming to act upon the Unorganized Territory Act, R. S. O. 1887 c. 91, directing that the issues of fact be referred to the district Judge, reserving further directions and questions of law arising at the trial for the disposal of a Judge in court. Notice of trial was given for the district Judge, who made certain findings of fact, assessed the damages, and directed judgment to be entered for the plaintiff. The plaintiff moved for judgment on such findings before a Judge in court, the defendant at the same time appealing from the judgment or report, whereupon the Judge disposed of both motions, directing judgment to be entered for the plaintiff for the amount found by the district Judge. On appeal to a divisional court:—Held, that, apart from the question of the jurisdiction of the master to make the order, as the parties had treated it as valid, and the subsequent order of the Judge in court remained unreversed and not appealed from, the court would not interfere; that if the question of the jurisdiction of the master vere involved, the appeal should have been to the court of appeal. I. APPEAL.

Evidence - Omission to Take down.] -The right of appeal from the division court is not lost because the Judge omits in an appealable case to take down the evidence at the trial in writing. Sullivan v. Francis, 18 A. R. 121.

Garnishee—Party.]—An appeal does not lie under the Division Courts Act, 1880, on a question arising between a primary creditor or plaintiff and a garnishee. Section 17 of the panntin and a garnishee. Section 17 of the Act gives the right of appeal to "any party to a cause," but a garnishee is not a "party to a cause;" he is merely a party to the proceed-ings. Beswick v. Bappy, 9 Ex. 315, followed, but not approved of. Cameron v. Allen, 10 P. R. 192.

In Interpleader.]—See In re Turner v. Imperial Bank of Canada, 9 P. R. 19; Fox v. Symington, 13 A. R. 296.

Nonsuit-Refusal to Set aside.]-At the trial the plaintin elected to take a nonsuit, and the Judge refused a new trial:—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to move to set aside the nonsuit, and if refused could appeal. Bank of Ottawa v. McLaughlin, 8 A. R. 543.

Prohibition pending Appeal.] — See Wiltsey v. Ward, 9 P. R. 216.

Security—Form and Amount,]—The se-curity to be given on a division court appeal is regulated by 53 Vict. c. 19 (O.), and is to be either by a bond in the sum of $100, or a cash deposit of $50. Sullivan v. Francis, 18 A. R. 121.

Security - Time for Giving.]-Security upon a division court appeal may be given by deposit after the ten days' delay allowed by s. 149 of the Division Courts Act, R. S. O. 1887 c. 51. Simpson v. Chase, 14 P. R. 280.

"Sum in Dispute" - Interest.] -"sum in dispute" upon an appeal from a division court, under R. S. O. 1887 c. 51, s. "sum in dispute" division court, under R. v. 18-20, 18-31, 148, is the sum for which judgment has been given in the division court. Where judgment was given for $100:—Held, that subsequently accrued interest did not make the sum in dispute exceed $100. Foster v. Emory, 14 P.

"Sum in Dispute "-Right of Appeal.]-Where the subject-matter of the claim in a division court is one cause of action exceeding $100, and the amount recovered at the trial is under that sum, an appeal lies to a divi-sional court under s. 148 of the Division Courts Act, "the sum in dispute upon the appeal" being the amount claimed, and not that amount less the sum recovered at the trial. Petrie v. Machan, 28 O. R. 504.

Time—Pronouncing of Judgment—Eutry.]—At the trial in a division court two of the defendants did not press their defence, and judgment was given against them, although not formally entered until judgment, which was reserved against the other defendant, was subsequently given against him. Afterwards, the two defendants was subsequently given against him. Afterwards, the two defendants moved for a dismissal of the action, which was refused on the ground that the judgment having been given against them at the trial, they were too late:—Held, that they could not appeal to the divisional court against the judgment. Kinnard v. Tewsley, 27 o. R. 308.

Time — Extension of—Delay of Clerk— Janusliction of Divisional Court.]—Where, through the delay of the clerk in furnishing a certified copy of the proceedings, the appellant in a division court action was unable to file the same within the two weeks prescribed by 58 Vict. c, 13, s, 47 (4), while the junior county court Judge refused to make an order allowing any other period for so doing:— Held, that this court had no jurisdiction to grant relief; but application might be made to the senior county court Judge. Owen v. Sprung, 28 O. R. 607.

II. ATTACHMENT OF DEBTS.

Accounts—Small Sunus—Superior Courts.]
—Semble, that debts of accounts within the jurisdiction of division courts, will not be attached by the superior courts under C. L. P. Act, 1856, s. 194. Topping v. Salt, 3 L. J. 14.

Amount of Sum Attached — Jurisdiction.]—Held, reversing the judgment in S. P. R. 374, that a primary creditor can garnish part of a debt due by a third person to the primary debtor for which, as between the primary debtor and the garnishee, a suit could not be maintained in the division court by reason of the amount being in excess of the jurisdiction. Re Mead v. Creary, 32 C. P. 1.

Assignment by Primary Debtor—Priorities,1—An assignment for the benefit of creditors by a primary debtor after a garnishing summons has been duly served upon him and the garnishee, and judgment has been obtained thereon against the debtor, does not intercept or take precedence of the attachment of the debt, and the primary creditor may obtain judgment against and enforce payment thereof by the garnishee. Wood v. Joselin, 18 A. R. 59.

See In re Dyer v. Evans, 30 O. R. 637 (post XIV. 2.)

Assignment of Debt Attached—Trial of Validity of Assignment—Assignee not 'alled Upon as Claimant.]—Each of the three primary creditors began an action in a division court against the primary debtor for the recovery of an amount within the jurisdiction of the court, and also attached in the hands of garnishees the amount of the debt in each case; the sum of $500 having been admittedly due by the garnishees to the primary debtor, who, however, asserted that before the actions $100.000 ft. The court of the cou were commenced he had assigned the debt for valuable consideration. Upon the court day, the primary creditors, the primary debtor, and the assignee of the debt, appeared before the Judge in the division court, counsel also appearing for the garnishees. Judgment was lirst given in favour of the primary creditors against the primary debtor in each case, and then the question of the validity of the assignment was entered upon and evidence given upon it, the assignee producing his books and giving his evidence. Judgment was then given declaring the assignment void as against the primary creditors as a fraud upon them. From this judgment the assignment void as against the primary creditors as a fraud upon them. From this judgment the assignment void as against the primary creditors as a fraud upon them. From this judgment the assignment was a specific to the primary creditors and the submitted himself as "claimant." Upon motion by the assignee for prohibition:—Held, that he had submitted himself as the primary creditors and the submitted himself as the primary distribution of the court, and could not be heard to say that he was there merely as a witness; and that the Judge, having all parties before him, was justified under s. 197 of the Division Courts Act, R. S. O. 1887 c. 51, in trying their rights without going through the formality of calling them before him:—Held, also, that the division court had jurisdiction to try the right of the primary creditors to garnish portions of the $500 sufficient to satisfy their claims; and, under s. 197, to determine whether or not the $500 sufficient to satisfy their claims; and, under s. 197, to determine whether or not the $500 sufficient to satisfy their claims; and, under s. 197, to determine whether or not the $500 sufficient to satisfy their claims; and, under s. 197, to determine whether or not the $500 sufficient to satisfy their claims; and, under s. 197, to determine whether or not the $500 sufficient to satisfy their claims; and under s. 197, to determine whether or

Damages.]—The judgment of the Judge who tries the cause, with a jury or without one, is now an effective judgment from the day on which it is pronounced; and where damages are awarded thereby, they are attachable as a debt without the formal entry of judgment. Holtby v. Hodgson, 24 Q. B. B. 103, followed. Davidson v. Taylor, 14 P. R. 78.

Effect of Attachment and Payment—Wrong Primary Debtor—Recovery by Right-ful Owner.]—In an action to recover a deposit of money to the credit of the plaintiff with the defendants, it appeared that the whole amount had been innocently but wrongfully paid by the defendants either into court or directly to the creditors of another person of the same name as the plaintiff, under garnishee proceedings in a division court:—Held, that there was nothing in such proceedings to bar the plaintiff of his right to recover, or to protect the defendants against his claim, and that the judgments in the proceedings did not apply to money in their hands belonging to the plaintiff:—Held, also, that s. 195 of R. S. O. 1887 c. 51 only protects a garnishee against being called upon by a primary debtor to pay over again, and does not protect him gasinst any third person. Andrew v. Canadian Mutual L. and I. Co., 2 O. R. 365.

Exemption—Salary of Medical Health Offficer.)—The defendant was the medical health officer of the city of London, and his monthly salary as such was attached in the hands of the city corporation, in a division court action. It was claimed by the defendant that $25 of the amount due him was exempt from attachment under R. S. O. 1877 c, 47, s. 125. No facts were in dispute, and the division court Judge determined, as a matter of law, upon the construction of the above section, and of the Public Health Act, 1884, and amending Acts, the Municipal Act, 1883, s. 281, and a by-law of the city of London, that the defendant's salary was not so exempt:—Held, in chambers, that the decision of the Judge could be reviewed upon a motion for prohibition, and that he had determined wrongly:—Held, by a divisional court, that the defendant was not an employee within the meaning of R. S. O. 1887 e. 47, s. 125, and that it was therefore rightly determined that his salary was not exempt, Re Mache v, Hutchinson, 12 P. R. 167.

Insurance Moneys.]—A claim under an insurance policy for a loss, the amount of which has been settled and adjusted, is not a debt which can be attached under s. 178 of R. S. O. 1887 c. 51; and Con. Rule 935 does not apply to division courts. Semble, even if it did, that such a claim could not be attached so long as the insurance company's right to have the money applied in rebuilding was open. Simpson v. Classe, 14 P. R. 280.

Judgment Summons — Defendant, 1—A garnishee is not a defendant within the meaning of ss. 235 et seq. of the Division Courts Act, R. S. O. 1887 c. 51, and is not examinable under after-judgment summons. Judgment in 23 O. R. 493 affirmed. In re Hanna y, Coulson, 21 A. R. 632.

v. Coulson, 21 A. R. 692. See Re Dowler v. Duffy, 29 O. R. 40 (post X.); In re Holland v. Wallace, 8 P. R. 186, post

Money Paid to Clerk — Demand.]—
Semble, that money paid to a division court clerk for a suitor in a cause is paid in to the use of the suitor, and is garnishable. Where the garnishee, who was clerk of the 1st division court in a county, had submitted himself to the jurisdiction, and had paid the money in his hands into the 10th division court in the county, from which latter court the summons issued, and the Judge of the division court had acted within his jurisdiction in determining whether the garnishee was indebted to the primary creditior and whether the debt was attachable:—Held, that the order discharging a summons for a prohibition was right; and a rule nisi to rescind the same, and for a writ of prohibition, was discharged, Dolphin v. Layton, 4 C. P. D. 130, remarked upon, Bland v. Andrews, 45 U. C. R. 431.

Money Paid to Clerk by Garnishee-Attachment under Absconding Debtors' Act-Payment to Sheriff. |-Where money comes into the hands of a division court clerk under a garnishee summons, and he is made aware of a writ of attachment under the Absconding Debtors' Act, he must pay the money to the sheriff and not to the primary creditor, under the provisions of s. 16 of the Absconding Debtors' Act. R. S. O. 1877 c. 66. Where after the service upon the garnishees of a division court garnishee summons a county court writ of attachment was placed in the hands of the sheriff, and the garnishees paid the amount owing by them to the primary debtor, to the sheriff, but the Judge in the division court ordered the sheriff to pay the money to the division court clerk, and the clerk to pay it out to the primary creditors in the division court:—Held, that the Judge was right in ruling that the money should have been paid by the garnishees to the division court clerk under s. 189 of the Division Courts Act, R. S. O. 1887 c. 51, and therefore his order upon the sheriff to pay it to the clerk could not be interfered with; but the order to pay out to the primary creditors was contrary to s. 16 of the Absconding Debtors' Act; and prohibition to restrain the clerk from so paying out the meney was directed. Re Moore v. Wallace, 13 P. R. 201.

Motion for New Trial after Fourteen Days. — The time limit for applying for a new trial in ordinary litigation in the division court does not apply to garnishment trials, and so long as the money remains unpaid after judgment against a garnishee, he may apply for relief by paying into court, or for a new trial, in the event of a new claim being made known to him. In re McLean v. McLeod, 5 P. R. 467, followed. Prohibition refused. Hobson v. Shannon, 26 O. R. 554, Affirmed by a divisional court, 27 O. R. 115.

New Trial in Garnishment Cases.]— See post, XII.

Party—Garnishee.]—A garnishee is not a "party to a cause," under 43 Vict. c. 8, s. 17 (O.), for the purpose of an appeal. Cameron y, Allen, 10 P. R. 192.

Proof of Amount Owing by Garnishee —Repayment to Garnishee. —The Judge of a division court has no jurisdiction to give judgment against a garnishee without proof of the amount owing by the garnishee to the judgment debtor, and for such a cause prohibition will lie. There is nothing in the sub-section substituted by 49 Vict. c. 15, s. 12, for R. S. O. 1877 c. 47, s. 136, s.-8.2, which repeats the condition precedent in s. 132 to the Judge's giving judgment against the garnishee. If necessary, the writ of prohibition should go to compet the re-payment to the garnishee of money paid by him into the division court. Re Johnston v. Thereim, 12 P. R. 442.

Proof of Garnishable Debt—Invisidetion—tian-inkec— Defendant."]—A plaintif in a division court proceeding against a primary debtor and a garnishee in a court which would not have jurisdiction against the primary debtor alone, must prove a garnishable debt in the hands of the garnishee; otherwise, a prohibition will lie. A garnishee is not a defendant within the menning of R. S. O. 1877 c. 47, s. 62. In re Holland v. Wallace, S. P. R. 186.

Removal into High Court—Garnishee Plaint — Judgment against Primary Debtor only.]—An application under s. 79 of the Division Courts Act, R. 8. O. 1887; c. 51, to remove an action from a division court into the high court will not lie after judgment in the division court: and this rule will be applied where the action in the division court is brought under s. 185. the garnishee being a party to the proceedings from the beginning, if final judgment has been obtained against the primary debtor, even though the liability of the garnishee has not been determined. Gallagher v. Bathle, 2 C. L. J. 73, applied and followed. Re Brodericht v. Merner, 17 P. R. 264.

Residence of Garnishee—Jurisdiction— Transfer to Proper Court.]—A garnishee summons before judgment may be issued out of the court of the division in which the garnishee lives or carries on business, notwithstanding that the cause of action does not arise and the primary debtor does not reside or carry on business therein. A garnishee proceeding under s. 185 of the Division Courts Act, R. S. O. 1887 c. 51, is an "action" or a "cause" within the meaning of s. ST, and may be transferred from a wrong to the proper forum, under the last mentioned section. Holsson v. Shannon, 26 O. R. 554, Re Me-Lean v. McLeod. 5 P. R. 467, and Re Tipling v. Cole. 21 O. R. 276, specially referred to. Re McCabe v. Middleton, 27 O. R. 170.

Service—Notice of Defence.]—Service of a division court after-judgment garnishee summons upon the local agent of a foreign insurance company, whose powers were limited to receiving and transmitting applications:—Held, effective, having regard to the provisions of ss. 182 and 185, s.-3, of R. S. O. 1887, 5.51. Where the defence of the garnishee is put in after the expiration of the eight days from service of the summons allowed by s. 188, s.-8, c. of R. S. O. 1887 to J. so long as it is put in in sufficient time to enable the creditor to give notice rejecting it, and for the clerk to transmit such notice to the garnishee, the latter is not bound to attend the trial if such last mentioned notice is not given, and the creditor cannot proceed to the trial of the action until that is done. Simpson v. Chase, 14 P. R. 280.

Service — Partnership—Notice Disputing discidition,1—The garnishees, though partners, resided in different places out of the furishied of the division court, and but one of them was served. No order was made dispusing with service on the other. The division court Judge gave judgment against both in their absence:—Per Armour, J.—The probletion might be supported on this ground, R. S. O. 1877 c. 47, s. 134, construed. The Judicature Act does not apply to a case of this kind, the proceedings of which are specially procided for in the Division Courts Act. Held, that where a garnishee does not file a notice disputing the jurisdiction of a division court within the time required by 43 Vict. c. S. 5. 14 (O.), though no objection court in that court, the jurisdiction of the high court of justice to prohibit the proceedings is not ousted. Clarke v, Macdonald, 4 O. R. 310.

Solicitor's Lien.] — Where solicitors claimed a lien for costs upon a judgment recovered, the amount of which was the subject of a garnishee suit in a division court had power under s. 197 of the Division courts Act, R. S. O. 1887 c. 51, to decide upon the proper sum to be allowed in respect of such lien, and was not bound to refer it elsewhere. Davidson v. Tuglor, 14 P. R. 78.

See Victoria Mutual Fire Ins. Co. v. Bethunc. 1 A. R. 398; In re Franklin v. Owen, 15 C. L. T. Occ. N. 105, 158, 185, post, XI, 7.

III. ATTACHMENT OF GOODS,

Affidavit for — Requirements of—Form—Natute.]—In trespass for taking goods, defendant justified under an attachment from a division court, which he averred to have been issued on his affidavit that the plaintiff was about to abscond from this Province, or leave the county in which he lived, with intent and design to defraud him of his said debt, taking away personal estate liable to seizure underevention for debt:—Held, plea bad, the affidavit neither averring the conditions enacted by the statute on which an attachment may issue, nor answering to the form of affidavit given in the schedule. Boyle v. Ward, 11 U. C. R. 416.

Semble, as there is a material difference between the enacting clause and the form of affidayit given, that the former must govern. Ib.

Affidavit for—Requirements of—Statute.]

Affidavit on which the attachment issued, stated the indebtedness of plaintiffs to defendant; that defendant had good reason to and did believe that plaintiffs "hath" absoonded from the Province of Canada, with intent, &c., to defraud, &c., or that the planntiffs "is" about to absoond, &c., to defraud, &c., or leave the county of Prince Edward, with intent, &c., taking away personal property liable to seizure, &c., or that plaintiffs "is" concealed within the county of Prince Edward, to avoid being served with process, with intent, &c.;—Held, bad, as not containing any one of the three alternatives in C. S. I. C. e. 19, s. 199. Quackenbush v. Snider, 13 C. P. 196.

Affidavit for—Absence of—Jurisdiction.]
—A maistrate having issued a warrant of attachment under 200 of the Division Courts Act, without the affidavit required, under which goods were seized:—Held, that he had no jurisdiction whatever, and was therefore a trespasser. Gray v. McCarty, 22 U. C. IK. 568.

Affidavit for—Necessity for Filing.]—Defendant, a justice of the pence, issued a warrant of attachment under the Division Courts Act, s. 199:—Held, that it was unnecessary, in order to give defendant jurisdiction, that the affidavit should be filed with the clerk though his neglect to do so might be a breach of duty. Moore v. Gidley, 32 U. C. R. 233.

Claim of Third Party — Replevin.]— Goods seized under an attachment from the division court may be replevied by a third party claiming them as his own. Arnold v. Higgins, 11 U. C. R. 191.

Claim of Third Party—Detinue—Demand.] — The defendant, having a claim against one R., sued out an atta-ament from a division court, under which he directed the bailift to selze certain goods in the house where R. was living with the plaintiff, and he was present when such seizure was made. The goods were placed by the bailiff in the custody of the clerk of the division court, in whose possession they continued until the bringing of this action:—Held, that, as the goods were seized in the possession of the defendant in the attachment, an action of detinne could not be maintained against this defendant, even admitting the goods to have been all the time under his absolute control, without shewing that the plaintiff had made him acquainted with her claim, and demanded to have them given up. Clark v. Orr, II U. C. R. 430.

Claim of Third Party—Trespass—Estoppel.]—In an action for seizing goods under division court attachments, it was proved that a few days before the seizure the goods had been soid by auction under the direction of one of the plaintiffs, who executed a bill of sale to the vendee, witnessed by the auctioneer:—Held, that this plaintiff could not afterwards be permitted to set up that the sale was void because fraudulent as against the plaintiffs' creditors, and to maintain trespass for seizing the same goods as if they were his own. McPhatter v. Leslie, 23 U. C. R. 573.

Constable — Execution of Warrant.]—A constable of any town within the county in which a warrant of attachment is issued under 12 Vict. c. 69, s. 1, may execute such warrant. Delaneu y. Moore, 9 U. C. R. 294.

Scizure of Attached Goods under Execution. —Goods in the hands of a division court clerk under an attachment are liable to an execution issuing from a superior court before the attaching creditor has obtained judgment. The sheriff, therefore, may seize such goods; but quare, if the seizure were illegal, whether an action on the case would lie by the attaching creditor against the sheriff and the plaintiff in the execution. Francis v. Brown, 11 U. C. R. 558.

Science of Attached Goods under Execution — Original Process—Fraud.]—Sections 55 and 56 of C. L. P. Act only apply to suits in which an original process has been served. An execution of a superior court always takes precedence of an attachment of the division court. Attaching creditors in a division court of the defendant in a judgment in the superior court, will not be admitted to except to such judgment on the ground of fraud. Fisher v. Sulfey, 3 L. J. 89.

Setting aside Attachment.] — Power over the process of his own court is inherent in the Judge of a division court as well as of other courts; and, notwithstanding the provisions of s. 262 of the Division Courts Act, R. S. O. 1887 c. 51, a Judge may set aside an attachment which has been improperly issued. Re Mittedt V, Seribner, 20 O. R. 17.

IV. BAILIFFS.

1. Actions Against.

(a) Scizure of Goods.

Judgment on Improper Service—
Pleading.]—Trespass q. c. f., with a count for taking goods. The defendants justified as commissioners and bailiff of the court of requests, and the plaintiff replied that he was not duly summoned to attend at the court at which judgment was recovered:—Held, replication bad, on general demurrer. Stevens v. Covan, 5. O. S. 572.

Judgment without Jurisdiction — Pleading, |—Held, that the balliff seizing under an execution issued by the Judge of a district court under the Division Courts Act, on a judgment given by the commissioners of the court of requests under the old Court. of Requests Act, in a matter beyond their jurisdiction, was not liable, but that his defence must be pleaded specially; but quere, whether he was not within 21 Jac. I. c. 12. Davis y Moore, 2 U. C. R. 180.

Judgment — Dispute as to Effect of — Minute of Adjudication—Informality, — In an action of trespass against a division court builff and one B. for entering plantiff's close and taking goods, defendants pleaded that one H. having recovered a judgment in a division court against the plaintiff's mother, and the goods in question having been seized under an execution issued thereon, the plaintif claimed them, whereupon the bailiff obtained an interpleader summons, on which the Judge, after hearing the parties, adjudged that the goods were the property of the said execution. The interpleaded such above the said execution creditor, and ordering the costs to be paid by the claimant in fifteen days. The plaintiff called witnesses who swore that the Judge did not decide the matter, but put off the hearing on payment of costs by the plaintiff within fifteen days:—Held, that the minute of adjudication and order were conclusive to shew that the summons was not enlarged, and that the jury should have been so directed. Held, also, that although the rainute was informal, in adjudging that the goods were the property of the execution creditor, instead of saying that they were the chaimant's, or not the execution debtor's, yet it was in substance a dismissal of the plaintiff's claim, and a protection to the bailiff. Oliphant v. Leslie, 24 U. C. R. 398.

Jurisdiction—Acting in Wrong District—Pleading, 1—The plaintiff declared in trespass for breaking and entering the plaintiff's close in the Ningara district, &c. The defendant pleaded that, being bailiff of a division court in the district of Brock, he committed the alleged trespass in discharge of his duty as such; and that no notice was given to him of the action one month before it was brought. Denurrer to the plea, on the ground that it is not shewn by what authority the defendant, though a bailiff in the district of Brock, acted in the district of Niagara, where the trespass is laid;—Held, plea bad. Davis v. Moore, 4 U. C. R. 200.

Leaving Goods Seized on Premises— Acknowledquent—Transfer to Third Person— Pleading,1—The defendant, a bailiff of a division court, having an execution against L, went to him and seized a yoke of oxen, which he allowed him to retain on receiving an acknowledgment of the levy indorsed on the writ. L, absconded, leaving the oxen with the plaintiff. The defendant took them away, whereupon she brought trespass, alleging that she had received them from L, on the day of his departure in payment of a debt:—Held, that under a plea denying the plaintiff's property, it was competent for the defendant to give in evidence the execution and seizure under it. Held, also, that, by the acknowledgment given, the debtor had put it out of his power to transfer the goods seized. Lossing v. Jennings, 9 U. C. R. 406.

Local Venue — Mistake — Amendment— Costs. |—In an action against a builiff of a division court, the venue being local was by mistake laid in the wrong county, and the plaintiff discovering the mistake did not go to trial in pursuance of his notice. Cross-rules having been obtained, the plaintiff was allowed to amend by changing the venue, and the defendant's rule for judgment as in case of nonsuit was discharged on the peremptory undertaking, and on payment of costs. Ward v, Sezsmith, 1 P. R. 382.

Notice of Action—Service of—Time for Commencement of Action.]—Section 231 of the Division Courts Act, R. S. O. 1877 c. 47, enacts that any action or prosecution against any person for any thing done in pursuance of the Act, shall be commenced within six months after the act was committed, &c., and notice in writing of such action, and of the cause thereof, shall be given to the defendant one month at least before the commencement of the action:—Held, that personal service was not required, but that service on the wife at the defendant's residence was sufficient. The court in which the action is to be brought, need not be stated in the notice; but even if required, semble, that the statement in the notice that the action would be brought in the high court of justice, without naming the particular division, was sufficient. In comparing the time in which the action must be brought, the day on which the act was committed must be excluded, so that an action commenced on the 5th June, for an act commenced on the 5th June, for an act commented on the 5th December, was in time, liaman's v. Johnston, 3 O. R. 100.

Two Executions—Joint Action.]—In an action against a division court build and two execution creditors for seizing goods:—Held, upon the facts set out in this case, that there was evidence to shew that it was one seizure and one sale under the direction and for the benefit of the two defendants holding separate executions, and that they were therefore jointly liable. Lough v. Coleman, 29 U. C. R. [267].

(b) Other Matters.

False Swearing — Service.]—Case held maintainable against a bailiff of a court of requests for falsely swearing to the service of a summons, whereby judgment was given against the plaintiff. Cline v. McDonald, E. T. 2 Vict.

Injury to Property while in Possession of Balliff.,—The defendant, a balliff of a division court, under an execution against plaintiff's father, seized two horses, waggon, &c., which, on an interpleader proceeding, were decided to be the goods of the plaintiff, who at the end of three weeks obtained possession of them from the balliff. In an action brought by the plaintiff against the defendant for damages done to the horses during the time they were in his possession, the jury, under the direction of the Judge, found a verdict for the plaintiff and $80 damages, which verdict the Judge subsequently refused to set aside:—Held, that the finding of the Judge on the interpleader proceedings formed no ground of defence to a suit for damages for the alleged injury to the property. Farrow, *Tobin, 10 A. R. 69.

Misconduct—Demand of Warrant.]—The statute 16 Vict. c. 177, s. 14 (C. S. U. C. c. 19. s. 195), requiring demand of perusal and copy of warrant does not apply in an action against a bailiff acting under a warrant of attachment or execution from a division court, where the wrong complained of is the misconduct of the defendant, and not anything illegal in the writ itself, or in the act of zerating it. Sayers v. Findlay, 12 U. C. R. 155. Followed in Oliphant v. Leslie, 24 U. C. R. 398, and Pearson v. Ruttan, 15 C. P. 79.

Neglect to Levy—Pleading.]—A declaration against a division court bailiff for not levying under an execution, alleged that the plaintiff recovered a judgment in the first division court in the county, and thereupon sued on an execution directed to defendant as bailiff of the second division court, commanding him to make the money out of the goods of defendant in the suit, wheresoever the same might be found; and that there were goods of such defendant within the bailiwick of defendant, out of which he could have levied:—Held, that the count was bad; that the writ was not shewn to be within 32 Vict. c. 23, ss. 18, 19, for it was not alleged that the fi. fa. was to be executed in the defendant's division or near to it, or that the goods were within such division, the defendant's 'bailiwick' extending to the whole county. Davy v. Johnson, 31 U. C. R. 153.

Neglect to Execute Writ of Execution —False Return — Damages — Summary Pro-ceedings — Bar.l—To an action against a division court bailiff and his sureties for neglect to execute a writ or return it in due time, and for a false return, defendants pleaded that the execution was not enforced owing to a threat execution was not enforced owing to a threat-by the principal creditors of the debtor to place him in insolvency if it was proceeded with, and that while the goods were being advertised for sale an attachment was issued against the debtor, and the plaintiffs suffered no damage in consequence of the breaches alleged. At the trial the jury was directed to find a verdict for defendants, on the ground that this plea and another had been proved: Held, that it was for the jury, and not for the Judge, to say whether the bailiff's inaction the Judge, to say whether the ballin's maction had caused the plaintiffs damage; and a new trial was therefore ordered. Semble, also, that under s. 221 of the Division Courts Act. R. S. O. 1877 c. 47, the plaintiffs were entitled to nominal damages upon proof of a breach of duty, without shewing any actual damage. Before the commencement of this action the plaintiffs had taken summary proceedings against the bailiff for neglecting to levy under 220, when their complaint was dismissed. Held, no bar to this action, which was brought under s. 221. Nerlich v. Malloy, 4 A. R. 430.

Neglect to Sell after Seizure-Damages. |—Defendant, a division court bailiff, received an execution against K. on the 12th 1873, on a judgment recovered on that day, under which, on the 14th, he seized two horses. On the 10th K, executed a voluntary assignment under the Insolvent Act, but the assignee on being made acquainted with it advised a private settlement, and did not receive and act on the assignment until the 7th June. The bailiff, who had left the horses in K.'s possession, taking a bond for their forthcoming, took them again and advertised them for sale on the 2nd June, but on being notified by the official assignee, he delivered them over to him on the 9th. The plaintiff then sued the bailiff and his sureties on their covenant for not selling and paying over the money between the seizure and the claim by the assignee:—Held, that he could not recover; for (1) there was no misconduct, because the horses passed to the assignee on the execution of the assignment, which was before the judgment; and (2) if the delivery was a breach ment; and (2) if the derivery was a break of duty, the plaintiff had sustained no damage from it, for if the bailiff had proceeded to sell sooner, the assignee would no doubt have claimed the horses, as he did afterwards. Brown v. Wright, 35 U. C. R. 378.

2. Sureties.

Judgment for Tort — Remedy against Sweeties Lost.] — The plaintiff sned C., a division court bailiff, and his sureties, on their covenant, alleising a judgment recovered by himself against C., for selling his goods under execution, contrary to the orders of the plaintiff in the suit:—Held, declaration bad; for the plaintiff, having recovered judgment against C. for the tort, could not afterwards sue upon the covenant for the same cause. Stoan v. Crossor, 22 U. C. R. 127.

Mistake of Bailiff-Money Received-Joint Action against Sureties—Remedy Lost by another Action. | Declaration against a build of a division court and his surefres on their covenant, under C. S. U. C. c. 19, s. 25, alleging that the bailiff, under an execution against B., wrongfully seized and sold the plaintiff's goods, and received the proceeds; that the plaintiff having sued the bailiff in the county court, the bailiff issued an interpleader summons, on which the Judge of the division court determined that the plaintiff owned the goods, and was entitled to the money received by defendant, with the costs: that the bailiff still refused to pay the money to the plaintiff, whereupon the plaintiff proceeded with his suit in the county court, and issued execution thereon, which was returned nulla bona. And so the plaintiff alleged that the bailiff had neglected to pay said money so received by him as such bailiff to the plain tiff, being the party entitled thereto, and had misconducted himself in his office, to the plaintiff's damage. Plea, by the sureties, that the said bailiff did pay to the plaintiff all the money he had received by virtue of his office. to which the plaintiff was entitled, and had not misconducted himself, &c.:—Held, on de-murrer to the declaration, (1) that the defendants could be properly sued on the covenant in a joint action; but (2) that no cause of action upon the covenant was shewn: that the wrongful act of the bailiff, in seizing by mistake the goods of a stranger, was not misconduct or neglect of duty for which his sureties were liable; that the money received by him, though not received for the plaintiff at first, became the plaintiff's by virtue of the interpleader order, but that the plaintiff lost his right to sue for it upon the covenant, by proceeding with the county court action and obtaining judgment therein. McArthur y, McArthur v. Cool, Nixon v. Stafford, 19 U. C. R. 476.

Non-Execution of Covenant by Principal. |—Held, that the surety of a division court bailif under C. S. U. C. c. 19, s. 25, is not relieved from liability under his covenant by neglect of his principal to execute such covenant. Miller v. Tenis, 10 C. P. 423.

Non-Residence in County.]—Section 25 of C. S. T. C. c. 19 is directory, not mandatory:—Held, therefore, in an action against a bailiff and his sureties for an excessive scizure by the former, &c., that the fact of the sureties of a division court bailiff being non-residents of the county in which the bailiff's duties lay, did not avoid their covenant. Pearson v. Ruttan, 15 C. P. 79.

See, also, Nerlich v. Malloy, 4 A. R. 30; Brown v. Wright, 35 U. C. R. 378; Cool v. Switzer, 19 U. C. R. 199. 3. Other Cases.

Action by Bailiff against Sureties of Clerk—Moneys not Paid over—Plending— Evidence.]—See Cool v. Switzer, 19 U. C. R. 199.

Canvassing.]—Observations on the impropriety of division court bailiffs convassing voters during an election. North Victoria Election, Cameron v. Maclennan, H. E. C. 612.

Constable — Justification as Bailiff — Absence of Warrout.) — Defendant M., a magistrate, gave a warrout to defendant K., a a constable, out the 23rd September, under s. 200 of the Division Courts Act, to attack the goods of G. in the possession of the plaining and others, who were about to abscond. Under this certain goods were seized, and to an action brought against the constable, the magistrate, and the creditor, the constable, K., pleaded not guilty, by ss. 196, 197, and 198 of the Act:—Held, that these sections had clearly no application, for K. was not shewn to be a bailiff of any division court, and had no warrant from the clerk. Gray v. McCarty, 22 U. C. R. 508.

Deputy of Bailiff. |—It was objected that the father of the person who acted as division court bailiff was the duly appointed bailiff, and the son had no authority to act for him; but the evidence shewed that the father being an aged man, the son was in fact the acting bailiff, and was clearly recognized and trened as such by the plaintiff's attorney. Me-Bougall v. Waddell, 2S. C. P. 191.

See post, VII.

V. CLERKS.

1. Actions Against.

Malicious Issue of Warrant—Pleading, 1—Held, not necessary in a declaration against a clerk, churging that he "as such clerk maliciously, &c., issued a warrant of commitment," to allege that it was so issued without the order of the Judge. McBride v. Howard, 12 C. L. J., 280.

Money Received for Municipality— Action by Treasurer—Pleading.]—In an action by a treasurer of a district, under the Division Courts Act, against the clerk of a division court, for not paying over moneys received, it is sufficient to declare in the treasurer's own name for money had and received by defendant to the use of the plaintiff for the purposes of the Act. Howard v. Walton, 2 U. C. R. 266.

Money Received from Sale of Gods Attached—Letion on Covenant.]—Plaintiff and others took out attachments against an absconding debtor, and the goods seized being claimed, the plaintiff indemnified the baillift, who sold and paid over the money to defendant, the clerk of the division court. The claimants sued the plaintiff and the purchasers, and recovered from them the value of the goods, after which defendant distributed the money among the attaching creditors, of whom he himself was one, pro rata. Plaintiff thereupon used defendant and his sureties as for money received to his use:—Held, that he could not recover, for the money was not received by defendant, in his official capacity, as the plaintiff's money, and the recovery against the plaintiff's money, and the recovery against the plaintiff, to which defendant, was a stranger, could not make it his as against defendant, so as to support this action upon the statutory covenant. Quarre, whether the plaintiff, having procured the money to be paid to the defendant as that of the attaching creditors, could afterwards claim it as his own. Preston v. Wilmot, 23 U. C. R. 348.

Notice of Action. |—Semble, that notice to a division court clerk is sufficient if it complies with C. S. U. C. e. 19, ss. 193, 194, though it may not contain all that is required by c. 126, for the latter Act does not overrule the former, but they establish rules for distinct cases. McPhatter v. Leslic, 23 U. C. R. 573.

Payment—Cheque—Failure of Bankers.]

- Detendant, clerk of a division court in York, sent a transcript of the entry of a Judgment recovered therein by the plaintiff to one M., the division court clerk of Essex, with directions to remit the money by post-office order or by cheque. M. having recovered the money paid it into his private account at McB. Bros., private bankers, and sent their cheque to defendant for the amount, as he had been accustomed to do, which the defendant acknowledged in the following words: "McLeish v. Richards: received from the D. C. clerk, Windsor, $70.40." Before the cheque was presented McB. Bros. failed, and the plaintiff sued defendant for the money:—Held, that the cheque and receipt operated as payment between M. and the defendant, and that the plaintiff was entitled to recover the money from defendant as money received to his use. Meccush v. Houvard, 3 A. R. 503.

2. Sureties.

Duty of Judge as to Amount and Number—Frecholders—Residents—Filing of Security.]—Held, that it is the duty of the Judge to fix the amount and number of surfies to be given by the division court clerk, before the clerk enters on his duty; and permitting the clerk to enter on his duty without it gives a right of action to a party grieved, if damage be shewn resulting from it. A count admitting the fulfilment of the equirement of the statute, but denying that the surfices were freeholders or residence of the county.—Held, bad, on denurrer. The Judge is not responsible for the filing of the security of the division court clerk; and the non-filing of it would not relieve the sureties. Parks v. Parks, v. Daris, 10 C. P. 229.

Moneys Collected for Suitors—Action by tracen. —The sureties of the clerk, having entered into the bonds authorized by 4 & 5 Viet. c. 3, and 8 Viet. c. 37, are liable upon such bond to the Crown for moneys collected by the clerk for suitors. Semble, that in such action the Crown would be entitled to a verdict for the penalty of the bond, and not merely for the sum received and not paid over. Regina v. Patton, Regina v. McCullough, Regina v, Moran, 7 U. C. R. S3.

Moneys Received for Bailiff—Pleading—Evidence.]—The bailiff of a division court may sue the clerk's sureties upon the bond given under 13 & 14 Vict. c. 53, for fees on the service of process. The declaration in such a case need not specify the names of the parties from whom, or the suits in which, the moneys claimed were received. Whether the money received was payable before action brought, or whether the clerk was justified in withholding it under the Act, is a question of evidence as to each sum. Cool v. Sweitzer, 19 U. C. R. 199.

Moneys Received for Bailiff—Evidence—Entries.]—In an action against a clerk of the division court for moneys received for bailiff's fees, entries made by such clerk in the course of his business in books kept under the provision of an Act for that purpose:
—Held, evidence against the sureties, Middle-field v, Gould, 10 C. P. 9.

Set-off-Private Account against Clerk.] An action against the sureties of a division court clerk for moneys received by him for the plaintiff having been referred to arbitration, the arbitrator submitted a special case, stating that in 1858 the plaintiff sued the clerk for goods sold to him; that the clerk then produced a memorandum of settlement between them, signed by the plaintiff, relating to suits in the division court, which shewed a sum of £30 0s. Sd. due to the clerk; and that the Judge, thereupon, against the clerk's wish, and without any particulars of set-off having been given, treated this as a set-off and ducted it from the plaintiff's claim. ducted it sureties, defendants in the suit referred, contended that the plaintiff's demand then sued for being a private account against the clerk, that sum was improperly set off, and they claimed to have it credited to them in this action against moneys since received for the plaintiff:—Held, that what had been done in the former suit could not be thus reviewed, and that, as the clerk could not take credit a second time for this sum as against the plaintiff, neither could his suretles. Franklin v. Gream, 20 U. C. R. 84.

3. Other Cases.

Fees of—Arrangement Made as to.]—See Victoria Mutual Fire Insurance Co. v. Davidson, 3 O. R. 378.

Office for. |—There is no obligation upon a municipality to provide an office for the clerk of the division court. Griffin v. City of Hamilton, 37 U. C. R. 519.

Removal of—Refusal to Give up Papers
— Mandamus.]—A mandamus was granted against the clerk of a court of requests to give up the books and papers of the court, which he had refused to do on being removed from office. In re Lacroix, 4 O. 8, 339.

VI. Costs.

Motion for Prohibition.]—See post, XIV, 1 (b).

Order for—High Court—Action on, in Division Court.]—See Re Kerr v. Smith, 24 O. R. 473.

Reserving Judgment as to—Jury Trial —Time for Moving for New Trial.]—See Bland v. Rivers, 19 O. R. 407, post, XII. Revision of—Prohibition.]—Prohibition was granted restraining a Judge of the division court from proceeding upon an order for a revision of costs, the application for such order not having been made within fourteen days from the judgment, and such order being in this case equivalent to a reversal of the judgment on the question of costs. Bell v. Lamont, 7 P. R. 307.

Security for.]—Under R. S. O. 1877 c. 47, 8, 244, an order for security for costs may be made in a division court. Re Fletcher and Noble, 9 P. R. 255.

Witness—Travelling Expenses.]—A plaintiff who is entitled only to division court costs of an action can tax as part of such costs his travelling expenses from abroad to attend the trial, if he is a necessary and material witness. Tailbut v. Poole, 15 P. R. 274.

VII. EXECUTION.

Malicious Issue of—Mistake—Payment of Debt—Transcript of Judgment—Liability of Execution Creditor—Seizure of Goods— Remedy — Restoration.] — See Tuckett Eaton, 6 O. R. 486, post (MALICIOUS PRO-CEURE).

Priorities — From what Time Property Bound, |—Executions from a division court do not bind the property before they are placed in the bailiff's hands; and quære, whether before an actual seizure. Cultoden v. Me-Doucell, 17 U. C. R. 359.

Priorities — From what Time Property Bound.]—Held, in an action for a false return of a writ of fi. fa. goods, that under s. 266 of the C. L. P. Act, when a writ has issued against the goods of a party from a superior court, and a warrant of execution against the goods of the same party from the division court, the right to the goods seized is to be determined by the priority of the time of delivery of the writ or warrant to the sheriff or bailiff respectively, and not by the priority of seizure. Held, also, that the right acquired by such prior delivery, which in this case was to the division court bailiff, was not, under the evidence set out in the report, defeated by his omission to indorse on the warrant, as required by the same section, the time of such delivery. McDougall v, Waddell, 28 C. P. 191.

Priorities — From what Time Property Round—Assignment before Sale.] — Section 59 of the Insolvent Act of 1869 applies to judgment delux recovered in division courts, on which execution has been issued to and the money leviced thereunder by a build of such courts, although the section speaks only of executions delievered to the sheriff. In this action by the assignee in insolvency for money levical under executions against the insolvent, or received by defendant, the clerk of a division court, it was objected that the defendant received the money only as clerk of the court, but it appeared that the sale had taken place after the assignment; — Held, that there being no lien created by the mere seizure, which took place before the assignment, the plaintiff, as assignee, was entitled to the money as part of the insolvent's estate, no matter in whose hands it might be. Patterson v. McCarthy, 35 U. C. R. 14.

Priorities—Mortgagee — Assignee — Jus Tertii.]—The bank, the three defendants C., and the defendant R., each had executions in the division court against one D., in the hands of defendant Cowan, as bailiff, who seized the goods in question in July, 1875, and advertised them for sale. One O'C, gave notice of claim, and there was an interpleader between him and the bank, on which judgment was given on 30th November, 1875, against the claimant. On the 15th November an attachment in insolvency issued against D., the execution debtor, and the official assignee gave notice there-of to the bailiff, defendant Cowan, who on the 4th December, being indemnified, sold the goods. The plaintiff claimed as a purchaser from O'C., who claimed under a chattel mortgage from D., dated 25th January, 1875, and gage from D., dated 25th January, 1876, and obtained the goods on 27th November, 1875, from the official assignee, who knew nothing of the interpleader, and sold them to the plaintiff, from whom the bailiff took them. The plaintiff, having sued in trespass and trover, was nonsuited :-Held, that, as between the plaintiff and the execution creditors, the plaintiff by the interpleader judgment was postponed to them; that the assignee had priority over the execution creditors, but not necessarily over the plaintiff as mortgagee; and a new trial was granted in order to determine whether the plaintiff could, by setting up the insolvency proceedings and the claim of the assignee, recover against defendants. On a second trial, the jury having found a general verdict for defendants-Held, that the plaintiff, unless suing under and by authority of the assignee, and of which there was no evidence, had no right to avail himself of the assignee's title; and the verdict was affirmed. Quære, if this were otherwise, whether the plaintiff, on the evidence set out, could have recovered against the defendants as for a joint trespass or conversion. O'Callaghan v. Cowan, 41 U. C. R.

Priorities—Sale of Property—Expiry of Executions.]—On the 18th March, 1855, the Buffalo, Brantford, and Goderich Railway Company mortgaged the goods in question to Her Majesty, to secure £15,000; and on the 17th April, 1855, they executed a second mortgage of the same property to other parties. mortgages were duly filed. On the 20th February, 1856, an execution was issued at the suit of Her Majesty for the same debt, on which the property was seized, and afterwards other executions were issued. The sheriff put defendant, who was a bailiff of a division court, in possession on the 29th April, 1856, to hold, first, on account of the sheriff, and next on account of several executions which defendant had in his hands from division courts. On the 11th February, 1856, the Buffalo, Brantford, and Goderich Railway Company sold out to the Buffalo and Lake Huron Railway Company; the sale was confirmed by 19 Vict. c. 21; and that company having arranged the executions, the sheriff afterwards delivered possession to their agent of the property at Brant-ford, in the name of the whole. Defendant, however, claimed to hold, notwithstanding, under the division court executions. executions were all subsequent to the sale made on the 11th February, 1856, and had expired before the sheriff gave up possession. The plaintiffs (the Buffalo and Lake Huron Railway Company) having replevied from defendant:—Held, that they were entitled to recover. Buffalo and Lake Huron R. W. Co. v. Brooks-banks, 16 U. C. R. 337. Priorities — Superior Court Execution—Supulus. —A seizure of goods under a division court execution being entitled, under s. 266, C. S. U. C. c. 22, to priority over a seizure subsequently made by the sheriff, trespass will not lie against the latter for the seizure made by him, the goods being, under the division court writ, already in the custody of the law. Fig. v. Macdonald, B. C. P. 337.

Held, also, in the absence of a count in the declaration for money had and received, that Held, also, in the absence of a count in the declaration for money had and received, that the plaintiff could not recover for the surplus money which, under s. 251, the sheriff could have seized in the hands of the division court beniliff, after satisfaction of the prior execution. Ib.

Renewal — Neglect — Sale.] — Plaintiff claimed a horse as purchaser. Defendant claimed under a sale upon a division court execution, which it appeared had not been regularly renewed:—Held, that the execution not having been kept regularly in force, the sale in the interval cut it out, and that the plaintiff was entitled to recover. Carroll v. Lann, 7 C. P. 510.

Renewal — Time—Computation.]—By s. 141 of C. S. U. C. c. 19, it is enacted that every execution "shall be returnable within thirty days from the date thereof:"—Held, that in computing such thirty days the day of issue is excluded, so that a writ issued on the 24th April was in force on the 24th May, and capable of being renewed on that day under 32 Viet, c. 23, s. 24 (O.), which, even if introducing the rule of the C. L. P. Act, s. 342, in computing the time for renewal of writs, so as to make both days inclusive, does not affect their original duration. Clarke v. Garrett, 28 C. P. 75.

Return-Expired Execution-Nulla Bona Transcript of Judgment. 1 - The plaintiffs recovered judgment in a division court and issued an execution thereon, under which no-thing was made and which expired by lapse of time. At the request of the plaintiffs' solicifor the bailiff returned the writ nulla bona, athough it was alleged that there were goods out of which the debt might have been levied. Upon this return the plaintiffs procured a regular form and filed the same in the office of the clerk of the county court and sued out a writ of fi. fa. goods in order to obtain the benefit of the provisions of the Creditors Relief Act. It of the provisions of the Creditors Relief Act. The respondent S., the holder of a warrant of execution in the division court, then moved to set aside the plaintiffs' proceedings, and they were accordingly set aside by the county court Judge, on the ground that the judgment in the court was void, being founded on a return to an expired execution:—Held, that a return of nulla bona where there were goods, was no more than an irregularity to be complained of by the defendant. Ontario Bank v. Kirby, 16 C. P. 35, followed. Nor could a third party object that such a return was made at the instance of the solicitor of the plaintiffs. Held, also, that a return of nulla bona could be properly made after the expiration of the writ, and that the transcript and judgment in the county court founded thereon were valid and regular. Molsons Bank v. McMeekin, Ex-parte Sloan, 15 A. R. 535.

Return — Nulla Bona — Creditors' Relief Act.]—On the return of nulla bona to a division court execution, the plaintiff, under 57

Vict. c. 23 (O), amending the Division Courts Act, issued out of the division court an execution against lands to the sheriff of another county, but before the sheriff had taken any steps to enforce it, the defendant paid to him the amount thereof, with the request that it should be applied on planitiff's execution. At the time of such payment there were other exceutions in the hands of the sheriff against the goods and lands of the defendant:—Held, that the Creditors' Relief Act applied to the moneys so received by the sheriff. In re Young v. Ward, 27 O, R. 588.

What may be Seized—Crops.]—Growing crops are seizable under a division court execution. McDougall v. Waddell, 28 C. P. 191.

What may be Seized—Dobt—Money.]—In an action by the plaintiff upon an agreement for moneys alleged to be due him, a special plea setting out that while the moneys remained in defendant's hands they were seized by a bailiff of a division court, under an execution issued from that court against the plaintiff, at the suit of one 0:—Held, bad, on demurrer, as it imported only that defendant was indebted to the plaintiff in a certain sum, and such a claim could not be seized under 13 & 14 Vict. c. 53, s. 89. Quere, if defendant had set out the amount of plaintiff's money in his hands, and averred that this sum remained separate and apart from his own for the plaintiff when it was seized, whether that would have been a good defence. Clarke v. Easton, 14 U. C. R. 251.

What may be Seized—Promissory Note.]
—See McDonald v. McDonald, 21 U. C. R. 52.

What may be Seized—Separate Personal Estate.]—A married woman's separate personal estate, but not her real estate, may be charged and sold under a judgment against her in the division court. The omission to prove the existence of such personal estate, though it may be urged as a defence, does not need the jurisdiction. Prohibition was therefore refused. In re Widmeyer v. McMahon, 32 C. P. 187.

— What may be Seized—Term of Years.]—
A term for years in land cannot be sold under a division court execution, but only such things as can be delivered over to the purchaser, or such securities as C. S. U. C. c. 19, s. 151, expressly authorizes the seizure of. Duggan v. Kitson, 20 U. C. R. 316.

Where Goods may be Seized.]—The bailiff of a division court from which a warrant of execution issued could under 13 & 14 Vict. c. 53, execute it in any other county in which defendant had goods. Chrysler v. Serpell, 10 U. C. R. 647.

Where Goods may be Sold.]—Executions for about $200 issued against the plaintiff from a division court, the list in the county, under which lumber was seized at his mill, within that division. A sale was attempted there without success, and, by direction of one of the execution creditors, the bailiff had the lumber removed to the county town, thirty miles off, in the 5th division, which cost $160. It was there bought by G., the deputy sheriff, for $100, and defendant purchased from him. The plaintiff having brought trover, a nonsuit was ordered, for, though s. 151 pravides only for sale in the division where the goods have been seized, yet a sale in another division to a hond fide purchaser would pass the property, leaving the party injured to sale the buildf: Held, that G. must be assumed to be such a purchaser, and that defendant could not be made liable for purchasing from him. Quare, whether, on the evidence stated in the case, the jury might not have found that G. was in fact purchasing for defendant, who was a division court buildf; and, if so, under s. 157 the sale would have been void. Remarks as to the hardship of the case upon the plaintiff. Campbell v. Contheard, 25 U. C. R. 621.

Words. |—The terms "fieri facias" and "warrant of execution," used in the Division Courts Act, are convertible terms. Macfie v. Hunter, 9 P. R. 149.

VIII. INTERPLEADER.

1. Effect of, on Other Proceedings.

Finality of Judgment in Interpleader - Trespass against Builiff and Another. | - In trespass against a division court builiff and one B., for entering plaintiff's close and taking goods, defendants pleaded that one H. having recovered judgment and execution in a divi-sion court against O., the plaintiff's mother, and these goods having been seized there, the plaintiff claimed them, whereupon, on an interpleader, the Judge adjudged that the goods were the property of said execution creditor. and liable to said execution. The interpleader summons was produced, with a minute indorsed by the Judge, adjudging that the goods " the property of the execution creditor. and ordering the costs to be paid by the claimant in fifteen days. The plaintiff's witnesses swore that the Judge did not decide the matter, but put off the hearing on payment of costs by the plaintiff within fifteen days; but -Held, that the minute of adjudication and order were conclusive :- Held, also, that the minute, though informal, was in substance a dismissal of the plaintiff's claim, and a protection to the bailist. Defendant B. having declared that he owned the debt, and that the execution was issued at his instance, and having appeared for the execution creditor on the interpleader summons:-Held, sufficient evidence to go to the jury of his being a joint trespasser. Oliphant v. Leslie, 24 U. C. R. 398.

Finality of Judgment in Interpleader—Trover against Execution Creditor, [—Trover for goods seized under the defendant's division court execution. An interpleader issue was tried by the Judge of the division court, who decided that the goods did not belong to the plaintiffs:—Held, that the decision of the Judge of the division court was final under C. S. U. C. e. 19, s. 175. Keane v. Stedman, 10 C. P. 435.

Finality of Judgment in Interpleader—Traver by Builiff against Cammunt.]—The plaintiff, a division court bailift, having seized a quantity of wheat under a warrant of execution against one P., which the defendant claimed, an interpleader summons issued, and on its return was adjourned with leave to the defendant to file his claim in fifteen days, Afterwards the case came up for final hearing, when the Judge made this order: "The claimant, not having put in his claim or complied with the order above made, is barred, and is ordered to pay the costs in fifteen days. plaintiff, as such bailiff, thereupon brought this action to recover the wheat, which the defendant had obtained possession of pending the summons :- Held, that the minute so made by the Judge in the interpleader issue was equivalent to stating that the claim was dismissed. and was final and conclusive upon the defendant, and that he could not be heard to say that the bailiff had not seized the wheat, Hunter v. Vanstone, 7 A. R. 750.

Finality of Judgment in Interpleader
—Union arising out of Execution of Process —Stay of Proceedings—Appeal. —On an interpleader proceeding in the division court under 48 Vict. c. 14, s. 6, s.-s. 3 (O.), in respect of a claim to goods taken in execution, any claims between the parties themselves for damages arising out of the execution of the process, must also be brought before and adjudicated upon by the Judge who hears the interpleader summons. Whether such claims are then brought forward or not, the adjudication upon the summons is final and conclusive between the parties, and no action can afterwards be maintained in respect of them. In such an action the fact of the previous adjudication may be properly pleaded as a defence, Judgment in 9 O. R. 767 reversed. Quare, whether the proceedings therein can be summarily stayed on motion. Quarer, whether an appeal lies under c. 14, s. 7, s.-s. 2, from the adjudication of the Judge of the division court on a claim for damages. Fox v. Symington,
13 A. R. 206.

Sale of Goods Seized-Validity of Proeccdings after Salc.1—Goods seized under a division court execution were claimed by the plaintiff, and the bailiff sold them expressly subject to the result of an interpleader, which he intended to apply. Nothing was paid, and they were to remain in his custody until the decision. Afterwards, on an interpleader, the Judge determined that the goods belonged to the execution debtor, and the plaintiff sued the bailiff in this action for selling the property :- Held, that he could not recover, for the interpleader proceedings were not invalid, as having taken place after sale, the sale upon such conditions being ineffectual; and the goods, therefore, still remained subject to the execution. Harmer v. Cowan, 23 U. C. R. 479.

Sale of Goods Seized—Interpleader as to Proceeds—Replecin against Purchaser.]—The Division Courts Act. C. S. U. C. c. 19, s. 175, does not authorize a bailiff, when a claim is made by a third person to goods seized under execution, to sell the goods and issue an interpleader for the proceeds, and thus compel the claimant to try his right merely to such proceeds, and deprive him of his goods. The claimant, having proved his right to the goods—a quantity of timber—was therefore held entitled to recover in replevin against the purchaser under the execution. Reid v. McDonald, 26 C. P. 147.

Stay of Proceedings — Trespass—Regularity of Proceedings in Division Court—Reriew.]—A. had claimed certain steers under a division court attachment against one F. The halliff who seized obtained a summons to determine such claim, which was heard on the 2th June, 1853; and on the 8th July, 1853, an order was made by the Judge of the division court deciding against A.'s claim. A. then brought trespass against the balliff:— Held, that the regularity of the proceedings on the interpleader summons could not be inquired into, and that all proceedings in this action since the issuing of such summons must be stayed. Findayson v. Howard, 1. P. R. 224.

Stay of Proceedings—Trespass—Laches
—Farum. |—The plaintiff in November, 1856, suca defendant, a bailiff of a division court, in trespass for seizing his goods. Defendant thereupon, in February, 1857, obtained a sum-mons in the Queen's bench calling on the plaintid to shew cause why the action should not be stayed, and why the Judge issuing the summons should not adjudicate upon the plaintif's When the summons was obtained, an interpleader was pending in the division court, which the Judge of that court determined in March, by deciding that the plaintiff was en-titled to the proceeds of the goods sold, and 415 as damages for taking them, which the execution plaintiff then paid into the division court. In the meantime, however, the sum-mons in this court had been discharged; and afterwards the plaintiff proceeded with this action by filing a declaration in August, to which the defendant pleaded; and a trial took place, which resulted in a verdict for the plain-tiff. The defendant applied to rescind the order discharging the summons, and to stay proceedings:-Held, that the summons should not have been discharged altogether, but proeeedings should have been stayed, as directed by 16 Vict. c. 177, s. 7; and that the defendant was still entitled to a stay of proceedings, under the statute, notwithstanding the laches; but on account of his delay the rule was made absolute without costs. Under 13 & 14 Vict. c. 53, s. 102, and 16 Vict. c. 177, s. 7, amending it, the Judge of the division court must adjudicate upon the claim to goods seized; but the application to stay proceedings in any action brought for the seizure, must be made to the court, or a Judge of the court, in which such action is pending. Washington v. Webb, 16 U. C. R. 232.

Stay of Proceedings — Replevin—Division Court (lerk.]—Certain goods, being seized under an attachment from the division court, were placed by the baliff in custody of the clerk, from whom they were replevied by the plaintiff. A summons then issued from the division court, calling before the Judge there the attaching creditors and the plaintiff as claimant of the goods:—Held, that under 1b viet, c. 177, the proceedings in the replevin swit in the Queen's bench must be stayed, Held, also, that if the plaintiff had been allowed to proceed, he must have failed, for neither trespass nor trover would lie against the clerk, and therefore replevin could not be maintained. Quare, as to the remely which the defendant, the clerk of the division court, or the attaching creditors, would have in case the plaintiff in replevin should be held by the Judge to have no claim. Caron v. Graham, 18 t. C. R. 315.

Stay of Proceedings — Subsequent Action.]—Held, following Jones v. Williams, 4 II. & N. 706, that under the Division Courts Act. C. S. U. C. c. 19, s. 175, this court has no power to stay proceedings in an action brought after the adjudication by the Judge in the division court. Shamehorn v. Traske, 30 U. C. R. 543.

Stay of Proceedings—Sale of Goods— Interpleader as to Proceeds.—A stay of proceedings will not be granted under 16 Vict. c. 177, s. 7, where the goods have been sold, the interpleader being for the proceeds of the sale of the goods. Washington v. Webb, 3 L. J. 75.

2. Other Cases.

Appeal.]—There is no right of appeal from the decision of the Judge in an interpleader suit in a division court, even when the amount in dispute excess! $100. In re Turner v. Imperial Bank of Canada, 9 P. R. 19.

Certiorari—Removal of Issue.]—An interpled by the in a division court was held not to be within s. 51 of the Division Courts Act, and so not removable by certiorari. Russell v. Williams, S. L. J. 277.

Equitable Interest.]—On an interpleader in the division court, the Judge may determine the claimant's right to an equitable interest. McIntosh v. McIntosh, 18 Gr. 58.

Sheriff's Interpleader — Division Court Executions, |—The term "execution creditors," used in s. II of the Interpleader Act. R. S. O. 1877 c. 54, taken in connection with s. 12, includes persons holding executions in division courts, who are therefore proper parties to, and should be called upon in, an interpleader application by a sheriff. Macfie v. Hunter, 9 P. R. 149.

IX. JUDGE.

Appointment—Provincial Government— Right of. |—See In re Wilson v. McGuirc, 2 O. R. 118.

Deputy Judge — Powers of — Appointment,]—" Belleville, Ont., 24th July, 1880. I hereby appoint E. B. Fralick, Esq., barristerat-law, as my deputy to hold the second divi-sion court of the county of Hastings, on Monday the 26th day of July instant, at the town hall, in the township of Sydney. T. A. Lazier, junior Judge, C. H." The person named in this deputation tried this case at the time and place appointed, but delivered his judgment, according to a postponement for that purpose, on 2nd August following, at the Judge's cham-bers in Belleville, outside the limits of the 2nd division court but within the county, without having named a day and hour for delivery thereof in writing at the clerk's office:—Held. (1) that the word "Judge" in s. 20 of R. S. O. 1877 c. 47 includes the junior Judge, and that the deputation was therefore valid. That the proper construction of the same was, "to hold the 2nd division court of the county of Hastings, to be holden on Monday," &c.. and that his appointment continued until he had performed the purpose for which it was made. (3) That the effect was to clothe Mr. Fralick with all the powers of the junior Judge during the time of his appointment, where r he might be within the county. And the rule was therefore made absolute to rescind the order made for a prohibition. In re Leibes v. Ward, 45 U. C. R. 375.

Deputy Judge - Trial by - Death of County Court Judge—Delay in Appointment of Successor—Motion for New Trial.]—See Applebe v. Baker, 27 U. C. R. 486, post (Sub-title New TRIAL.)

Interest -- Attachment.] -- Attachment lies against commissioners of a court of requests who try causes in which they have an interest. Rex v. McInture, Tay. 22.

Jurisdiction-Excess-Liability for Scizurc. |—Commissioners of the court of requests under the old Court of Requests Act, who had given judgment in a matter beyond their jurisdiction :- Held, not to be liable for a seizure committed under an execution issued on the judgment by the Judge of the district court, under the Division Courts Act. Davis v. Moore, 2 U. C. R. 180.

Jurisdiction-Excess-Liability for Scizure — Evidence — Waiver.]—An action was brought in a division court of Hastings by A. and B. against C., who lived in Wolford, county of Grenville, for the price of a reaping machine. No defence was offered or objection taken, and judgment was given for the plaintiff, it being proved by a witness that the machine had been ordered by C. in Hastings, or contracted for there by him. The clerk of the court, on the application of one of the plaintiffs, transmitted a transcript of the judgment to the clerk of the division court of Wolford, on which he issued execution, and gave it to the bailiff, who made the money under it, being indemnified. The defendant in the division court thereupon sued the Judge who decided the case, the clerk of his court, the two plaintiffs in the suit, the clerk of the court in Wolford, the bailiff, and the two persons who indemnified him, resting his case on the ground that the Judge had no jurisdiction :- Held. that the clerks and the bailiff were clearly not liable, as they acted only in a ministerial capacity and in the performance of their duty, and that the parties indemnifying them for doing so were equally free; that no action would lie against the Judge, for the evidence justified him in assuming that the cause of action arose within his jurisdiction, and the plaintiff (defendant in the suit) had at all events waived the objection by not taking it at the trial; and that the plaintiffs in the suit were not liable, as they had done nothing but state their claim. Held, also, that evidence to shew want of jurisdiction, which had not been given in the division court, was rightly rejected. Graham v. Smart, 18 U. C. R. 482

Security of Clerk-Responsibility as to.] -Held, that it is the duty of the Judge to fix the amount and number of sureties to be given by the division court clerk, before the clerk enters on his duty; and that permitting the clerk to enter on his duty without it, gives a right of action to a party grieved, if damages be shewn resulting from it. A count admitting the fulfilment of the requirements of the statute, but denying that the sureties were freeholders or residents of the county:—Held, bad, on demurrer. The Judge is not responsible for the filing of the securities of the division court clerk, and the non-filing of the security would not relieve the sureties. Parks v. Davis, 10 C. P. 229.

X. JUDGMENT DEBTORS.

-False Pretences.]-The plaintiff demurred to the replication to a plea justifying an arrest under an order to commit, issued by a division court for disobedience of an order to pay a judgment debt within a named time. Defendant joined in demurrer and excepted to the plea :--Held, as to the plea, that it was unnecessary to state the proceedings before the judgment, so as to give the division court jurisdiction, the amount stated being clearly within it. 2. That the issue of execution in due course, and its delivery to the plaintiff and return, were sufficiently stated. Semble, that the issue and return of execution is not, under the Division Courts Act, a condition precedent to the examination of defendant. It was alleged that when the summons to examine issued the plaintiff resided in the county, but not that he continued so resident at the issue of the summons to commit :- Held, sufficient, for this would be presumed. It was not averred that the plaintiff was examined on oath before the Judge, or any other evidence adduced. The warrant, set out in the replication, recited that it appeared to the satisfaction of the Judge that he had contracted the debt under false pretences :- Held, sufficient, for it is not necessary in all cases to take evidence on oath, and the Judge might have acted on the plaintiff's admission. Semble, that the omission of the clerk to enter an order of commitment in the procedure book, could affect a defence under such warrant :- Held, also, that the Judge had power to make an order to pay in nine weeks or for commitment on default; and, as a summons and order to commit issued before the plaintiff's arrest, it was immaterial that the first order had not been entered or that three months had elapsed after it before the warrant issued. The order to pay or for commitment issued in May. October, on the return of a summons, an order was made to commit for non-appearance and disobedience of the order to pay. The warrant of commitment recited that the order of May issued because it appeared to the satisfaction of the Judge that the plaintiff had incurred the debt under false pretences, and that on the return of the summons in October he had not appeared:—Held, that the ground for commitment sufficiently appeared. Peck v. Me-Dougall, 27 U. C. R. 353.

Arrest outside of County.]-The proceeding by judgment summons in a division court, and its consequences, are of a strictly local character. A warrant of commitment must be directed to a bailiff of the county and to the gaoler of the county in which the proceedings are taken, and is not effectual beyond ceedings are taken, and is not effectual beyond the limits of the county within which it is-sued, nor does the "bucking" of the warrant by a magistrate in another county give it any force or validity there. History of ss. 242 and 243 Division Courts Act, R. S. O. 1887 c. 51. Re Hendry, 27 O. R. 297.

Committal upon Default-Day to Shew use—Issue of Order—Duty of Clerk—Prohibition. |-The order of a division court Judge upon judgment summons directed that the defendant should pay the judgment debt within a fixed period, and in default that he should be committed to gaol :- Held, that the part of the order as to imprisonment was not sustainable; the defendant, if he did not pay within the time limited, was entitled to a day to shew cause why he did not pay; and prohibition was Arrest — Order to Commit—Execution— Return—Residence of Debtor—Examination ordered:—Semble, the defendant should have called upon the clerk of the court to shew ordered :- Semble, the defendant should have cause against the issuing of any order for imprisonment, as such order is merely a ministerial act. Re Woltz v. Blakely, 11 P. R. 430.

Garnishee — Defendant, 1—A garnishee is not a defendant within the meaning of ss. 235 et seq. of the Division Courts Act, R. S. O. 1887 c. 51, and is not examinable under afterjudgment summons. Judgment in 23 O. R. 461 affirmed. In re Hanna v. Coulson, 21 A. 1; 682.

Garnishee — Eramination—Committal—
Agilacit — Probibition.]—The county court Judge, presiding in a division court, has no power to commit a garnishee for default in unking payments pursuant to an order atter judgment; and s. 18 of 57 Viet. c. 23 (O.)
has not extended his powers in that behalf.
Before a garnishee can be examined under ss.
25 to 248 of R. S. O. 1887 c. 51, as now permitted by s. 18 above, it is necessary that the creditor, his solicitor or agent, should make and file the affidavit required by s. 255. Prohibition against enforcement of committal order, Re Douclev, Duffly, 20 O. R. 40.

Indorsement on Judgment Summons.]

-Held, following Regina v. Judge of Brompton County Court, 18 Q. B. D. 213, that the Judge's indorsement on the Judgment summons was the order upon such summons; and that a subsequent order was illegal. ReMeLeed v. Emigh, 12 P. R. 450.

Insolvency — Discharge.] — A discharge under the Insolvent Act does not prevent a parry from being committed upon a judgment summons under the Division Courts Acts. In re Mackey v. Goodson, 27 C. C. R. 263.

Married Woman—Examination — Committed, I—A judgment nagainst a married woman by virtue of the Married Woman's Property Act creates no general personal liability, but merely charges her separate estate; and the provisions of s, 177 of the Division Courts Act, R. S. O. 1877 e. 47, as amended by 43 Vict. c. S, touching the examination of judgment debrors, are not applicable to a married woman against whom judgment has been obtained in the division court, and even if liable to be examined, such a person is not liable to be committed to good under s. 172. Metropolitua L. & S. Co. v. Mara, S. P. R. 555, distinguished. Re McLeod v. Emigh, 12. P. R. 450.

Married Woman — Examination—Committal—Execution,]—A married woman was sued in a division court for a debt contracted before marriage, and judgment was given against her personally for the amount of the debt:—Held, that the judgment was properly a personal and not a proprietary one, having regard to her capacity to contract at the time of incurring the liability; and an application, upon habeas corpus, to discharge her from custody under an order made in the division court for her committal for failure to attend upon an after-judgment summons, was refused. Scott v. Morley, 20 Q. B. D. 123, followed. Re MeLeod v. Emigh, 12 P. R. 450, distinguished, and doubted in view of Aylesford v. Great Western R. W. Co., [1892] 2 Q. B. 524, Quære, whether such an order to commit is by way of punishment or execution. Re Teasdall v. Brady, 18 P. R. 104.

Partnership—Judgment against—Examination of Partner by Estoppel. —After judgment obtained against the firm of P. & Co.

in a division court, upon service of summons on M. P., who was in fact the only member of the firm, an after-judgment summons was issued and served on R. P. The division court Judge determined that R. P. had made himself liable as a partner by holding himself out as such, and was bound by the judgment, and liable to be examined as a judgment debtor:—Held, on motion for prohibition, that s.ss. 4, 5, and 6 of s, 108 of the Division Courts Act, R. S. O. 1887 c, 51, are applicable only to persons who are in truth partners; and prohibition was ordered. Munster v. Railton, 10 Q. B. D. 475, 11 Q. B. D. 435, 10 App. Cas. 680, referred to. Re Young v. Parker, 12 P. R. 646.

Partnership—Judgment against—Examination of Partner,]—An order for committal under the judgment summors provisions of contempt, but is in the nature of execution or limited or qualified execution. A member of a partnership against which a judgment has been recovered in a division court in the firm name, who has not been personally served with the summons, and has not admitted himself to be or been adjudged a partner, cannot be proceeded against by an order for committal for non-attendance on a judgment summons. The judgment in 25 O. R. 573 reversed on this point, and prohibition granted. In re Reid v. Graham, 26 O. R. 126.

XI. JURISDICTION.

1. Abandonment of Excess.

At Trial. — The plaintiff sued the defendant in the division court for 8100, and indorsed on the summons as particulars a promissory note for 8125:—Held, that the plaintiff might at the trial abandon in his particulars the excess above 8100, so as to bring the case within division court jurisdiction. In re Stogdade and Wilson, 8 P. R. 5.

At Trial—Amendment. |—The plaintiff, in a suit in a division court brought before the passing of 39 Vict. c. 15 (O.), sued for $30 due as a balance of an account for board for self and horse, which appeared at the trial to be a balance of an unsettled account exceeding $200. He also sued for $82 for board for self and horse for a subsequent period, and abandoned the excess of $12 over $100. On objection being taken to the jurisdiction, the Judge allowed an amendment. The plaintiff then altered his claim, reducing it to $82 only, and the case was again tried and judgment reserved, whereupon application was made for prohibition:—Held, that the division court had no jurisdiction, independently of 39 Vict. c. 15, s. 2, which gives jurisdiction in cases unsettled accounts under $400. under that Act the claim might have been investigated, as the subsequent proceedings took place after its passing, and there was therefore no necessity for any amendment. The plaintiff, to give a division court jurisdiction where his claim is in excess, must abandon the excess in his claim, and cannot wait until the hearing, and then do it. In re Mc-Kenzie and Ryan, 6 P. R. 323.

At Trial — Amendment—Prohibition.,]— Plantiff stated his claim to be for goods sold, £26 14s., and four years' interest thereon, and for two promissory notes, £15 each, and interest, in all, £73, and gave credit for cash payments of 545, abandoning the excess of the balance above 425. At the trial defendant objected to the jurisdiction, and judgment having been given against him, he afterwards obtained a new trial on affidavit of merits. In granting it, the Judge allowed the plaintiff to amend his claim, and the account then rendered claimed only the balance due on the potes, in all 549, gave credit for £23, and abandoned all but £25 of the balance. Held, that as amended the claim was clearly within the jurisdiction, and that the amendment being improper would form no ground for prohibition. Quære, whether the first account shewed a claim beyond the jurisdiction, as without the notes, which were liquidated demands, the account would not exceed £50. In we Higuidated was

At Trial—Incodment—Mandamus—Discretion.]—General rule 8 of the division courts provides that when the excess of a claim is abandoned to bring the amount within the jurisdiction, it must be done in the first instance on the claim:—Held, that this rule does not prevent the Judge before or at the trial from permitting the plaintiff to amend his claim upon such terms as he thinks fit; general rule 118 and s. 304 of the Division Courts Act afford ample authority for permitting such amendment; but the Judge cannot be compelled by mandamus to exercise his discretion to permit an amendment, Re White v, Galbraith, 12 P. R. 513.

At Trial—Votarial Fees.]—The Judge of a 7 of the division court has power, under revised rule 7 of the division courts, to permit at the trial the abandonment of the excess caused by a claim for notarial fees in an action upon a promissory note. Pegg v. Howlett, 28 O. R. 473.

Effect of Abandonment — Judgment — Release of Exerces, I—The commencement of a suit in the division court for part only of an entire claim, and indorsing an abandonment of the balance on the summons, is not per se a release of the excess; but the part so abandoned cannot be sued for after recovery of judgment in such suit. Winger v. Nibbald, 2 A. R. 619.

General Abandonment-Several Items of Claim—Damages, |—The plaintiff sued in the division court on a claim which was was originally composed of a solicitor's bill of costs, $36,06; damages, $69,33; due for advice, $6; total $111,39. The plaintiff abandoned as to $11.39, without specifying from what items he threw the amount off plaintiff, at the trial, agreed to take $30 for the first item, and the Judge reduced the 863.33 to 862, the 86 item was struck out, and the total then stood 892.33. This sum was further reduced to $80, for which judgment was entered: — Held, that prohibition was properly directed; that the abandonment being general, it could not be assumed that the plaintiff had made a reduction in his demand for damages, so as to give the court jurisdiction; and, even if the court had power to confine the prohibition to the claim for damages, it could not be done here, for it did not appear how much of the $80 was applicable to such claim. Meek v. Scobell, 4 O. R. 553,

2. Accounts, Unsettled.

Claim for Balance—Original Amount beyond Jurisdiction.]—A balance of account originally exceeding $200, but reduced by payment (not set-off) to $100, is within the jurisdiction of a division court. In re Miron v. McCabe, 4 P. R. 171.

An action on an unsetfled account exceeding 8290 reduced by payment to $100:—Held, not to be within the jurisdiction. In re Mirco v. McCabe, 4 P. R. 171, considered. Waugh v. Conway, 4 C. L. J. 228.

The plaintiff in a division court may recover $100, being the balance of an unsettled account not exceeding $200, but where the whole account exceeds that sum there is no jurisdiction. An unsettled account means an account the amount of which has not been adjusted, determined, or admitted by some act of the parties. The plaintiff here sued for $84, being the balance due for rent of premises occupied by defendant as his tenant for several years, at $100 a year, after deducting the payments made from time to time:—Held, not within the jurisdiction. In re Miron v. McCabe, 4 P. R. 171, overruled. In re Hall v. Cartain, 28 U. C. R. 533.

The plaintiff claimed 894.88, annexing to his summons particulars of claim, she sing an account for goods for 3834.23, reduced by credits to the sum sued for; but no hing had been done by the parties to liquidate the account or ascertain the balance, except a small amount admitted to have been paid, and a credit of $35 given for some returned barrels, but which still left a unsettled balance of upwards of $300:—Held, not within the jurisdiction, and a probibition was ordered. In re-Judge of County Court of Northumberland and Durham, 19 C. P. 239.

Plaintiff, having been employed by defendants to purchase wool for them on commission, sued them in the division court for this commission, and for $10 paid to an assistant. It appeared that the defendants had furnished the plaintiff with $1,100, and that the plaintiff had expended $36 beyond this sum in the purchase of the wool, but no question was made at the trial as to the due expenditure of the $1,100, the only question being whether plaintiff was entitled to any commission at all, and no claim was made for the $36, or any portion of it, the plaintiff's demand being confined to the commission claimed on the quantity of wool purchased, and not on the price paid :- Held, not an action for the an unsettled account exceeding $200, the balance of the unsettled account between the parties being $36, which was not in question in this suit; and a prohibition was therefore refused. McRae v. Robins, 20 C. P.

Claim for Balance — Original Amount beyond Jurisdiction—Interest—Part Probibition.]—The summons in a division court plaint stated the plaintiffs' claim to be $100.73, the amount of an account with interest. The account, as shewn by the particulars annexed, was a debit and credit one, consisting on the debit side of a number of items, aggregating $446.59, and on the credit side of items of cash payments, amounting to $361.50, leaving a balance of $95, which, with $41.32 claimed for interest, made the $109.73. Judgment for default of a dispute note:—Held, that it did not appear on the face of the proceedings that the account, though exceeding $400.

might have been a settled account, and the balance of 895 an admitted balance; and therefore the jurisdiction of the division court was not the set of the prission court was the set of the prission court was the set of the prission court was also as the set of the prission court, at most their more than $100 was beyond the jurisdiction of the division court, as defined by 8,70, s.s. (1), clause (b). As, however, the claim for interest was severable, the prohibition should be limited to the excess over $100. Trimble v, Miller, 22 O, R, 500, follewed. Re Lott v, Cameron, 29 O, R, 70.

Equitable Claim — Surplus Proceeds of Martingue Nalc.]—A division court has jurisdiction to entertain a claim for less than $100 made by a mortgager upon the surplus proceeds of a mortgage sale which realized less than $400. Such a claim is an equitable cause of action for money had and received. Relegatic v. Canada Loan and Banking Co., 11 P. R. 512.

Sct-off — Unconnected Items.) — The plaining such defendant, a married woman, on a demand exceeding $200, but abandoned the excess above $99.75. Defendant claimed a set-off exceeding $400, but consisting of various unconnected items: — Held, that no ground was shewn for a probabilition to the division court: that the suit was clearly within the jurisdiction; and that the defence of coverture should have been set up in the court below. Read v. Wedge, 29 U. C. R. 456.

Set-off Admission of Question of Fact.] The plaintiff brought his action in a division court for $74.31, his claim being $156.36, an anascertained amount, as against which admitted a set-off of $82.05. At the trial in the division court the plaintiff affirmed, and the defendant denied, that there had been an agreement between them to set off against the plaintiff's claim the value of certain purchases made by the plaintiff from the defendant, and the Judge at the trial found, as a matter of fact, that there had been such an agreement following Fleming v. Livingstone, P. R. 63, and Dixon v. Snarr, 6 P. R. 336, that it was a question of fact for the Judge of the division court to determine whether or bot there was an agreement between the plainiff and defendant; and the Judge having determined that there was, there was jurisdiction, and a prohibition was refused. In redenkins v. Miller, 10 P. R. 95.

3. Ascertainment of Amount,

(See, also, Costs, VI.—County Court, IV. 3.)

(a) Promissory Notes.

Husband and Wife—Purchase by Wife—Signature of Husband—Agency.—A husband, as agent for his wife, purchased goods from the plaintiffs, who were ignorant that she was the purchaser. On becoming aware of it, and the goods not having been paid for, they sted both husband and wife, but on the husband giving a promissory note signed by him for part of the debt, and the wife paying the balance in eash, the action was not further preceded with. The note not having been gaid at maturity, an action was brought in a county court for the balance due on the goods, being the amount for which the note had been given:—Held, that the debt was not cognizable by the division court, the claim not having been ascertained by the signature of the wife; that the note signed by the bushand could not be treated as such, it not having been signed by the husband as her agent, but as his own promise. Davidson v. McClelland, 32 O. R. 322.

Instalments.]—An action for the first instalment due on a promissory note for 8409, payable in three annual instalments, is for an amount ascertained by the signature of the defendant, and may be brought in a division court before the maturity of the second instalment. "In three annual instalments" in such a note means equal instalments, Prohibition refused. In re Babcock v. Ayers, 27–0. Rt. 47.

Interest. —Plaintiff sued on a promissory note for $73.14, payable with interest at 7 per cent.; the principal and interest together amounting to $103.44;—Held, that under the Division Courts Act, 1889, the amount of fixed legal damages in the nature of interest for non-payment of a promissory note need not be under the signature of defendant, and the above claim could therefore be recovered in a division court. McCracken v. Creswick, 8 P. R, 501.

Interest. |—The plaintiff sued on a promission por port for $158, payable with interest at ten per cent, the principal and interest amounting to $185.65:—Held, following McCracken v. Creswick, S. P. R. 501, that under the Division Courts Act. 1880, 43 Vict. c. 8 (O.), the above claim could be recovered in the division court. In re Widmeyer v. McMahon, 32 C. P. 187.

Interest.]—In an action in a division court on a promissory note for $200 and interest, the Judge entered judgment for $200 and interest, the Judge entered judgment for $200, the amount of the note, $7.17 accrued interest, and costs:
—Held, on a motion for prohibition, that the wording of the statute is clear, namely, "all claims for the recovery of debt or money demand the amount or balance of which does not exceed $200;" and the motion was granted. McCrneken v. Creswick, S.P. R. 501, and In re. Widmeyer v. McMahon, 32 C. P. 187, distinguished. Re Young v. Morden, 10 P. R. 276.

Interest.]—In an action in a division court against the makers and indorsers of a promissory note expressed on its face to be for 8200 and interest, judgment was given for the plaintiff for $210;—Held, that the amount was ascertained by the signatures of the defendants, and the interest accumulated upon the note from the time the amount was so ascertained was not to be included in acternaining the question of jurisdiction, and might be recovered, in addition to the claim, under 56 Vict. c. 15, s. 2 (O.), notwithstanding that the interest and the amount of the claim, so ascertained, together exceeded $200. Pegg v. Howlett, 28 O. R. 433.

(b) Whether Signature alone Sufficient.

Acknowledgment in Writing — Condition.]—The defendant signed a writing in these words: "Brantford, Oct. 9th, 1886. If anything happens to me sudden, this is to insure my sour Joseph (the plaintiff) to take 100 m his sister Hannah's share, to repay money lent to ber; if I live until this time next year I will settle it with him ?"—Held, that this was not a sufficient ascertainment of the amount due, by the signature of the defendant, within the meaning of R. S. O. 1887 e, 51, s. 70, to allow of a claim upon it and other items (amounting to about $60) being joined in a division court action. Mebernid, 15 A. R. 287, followed. Re Graham v. Tomlinson, 12 P. R. 367, referred to. Moree v. Mosre, 3 B. P. R. 12, 144.

Contract—Condition.] — By the Division Courts Act, 1880, these courts have jurisdiction in an action for a debt, the amount or balance of which the properties of the amount of the claim is ascertained by the signature of the defendant. The claim was upon the following document simed by the defendant: "Received from R. W. an order from C. B. ordering me to pay him the sum of $140, which is necepted on the following conditions, providing he carries out his agreement with me as cheese—maker."—Held, that the division court had no jurisdiction, because the writing did not ascertain the amount, inasmuch as it depended upon the nappening of certain events with respect to which evidence had to be adduced. Wittsie v. Ward, S. A. R. 549

Contract — Condition.] — "Mr. Thomas Forfar. — Please ship us your old boiler and engine, to be in good shape, to our address, not later than June 7th, 1883, for the sum of 8115 and shafting.—G. Climie & Son:"— Held, that the foregoing order did not ascertain the amount due, so as to bring the case within the increased jurisdiction of the division courts under 43 Vict. c. 8 (O.) Forfar v. Climic, 10 P. R. 30

Contract—Conditions.]—A division court has no jurisdiction to entertain a claim for 8200 on a contract signed by defendant where, to entitle plaintiff to recover, evidence ultra must be given to shew that conditions of the contract on the plaintiff's part have been compiled with. Re Shepherd and Cooper, 25 O. Rt. 274.

Covenant in Lease—Balance.]—The defendant covenanted in a lease to pay the plaintiff $210 on a certain day as rent reserved. A payment of $34 having been made, leaving the sum of $180.40 due for principal and interest, the plaintiff brought his action in the division court for that sum, and prohibition was applied for upon the ground that the claim was not within the jurisdiction of the division court:—Held, that the original amount of the claim was ascertained by the signature of the defendant under s.-s. (c) of s. 70, R. S. O. 1887 c. 54, and that the division court had jurisdiction. McDermid v. McDermid, 15 A. R. 287, and Robb v. Murray, 16 A. R. 503, specially referred to and considered. In re Wellace v. Virtue, 24 O. R. 558.

Loan of Money—Indorsement of Cheque.] Where a cheque was given to the defendant by the plaintiff as a loan of the money represented by it:—Held, that the indorsement of the signature of the defendant on the cheque, which was payable to his order, was a sufficient ascertainment of the amount of the plaintiff's claim by the signature of the defendant to satisfy s. 54 of R. S. O. 1877 c. 47, as amended by s. 2 of 43 Vict. c. 8 (O.), and to give a division court jurisdiction where the amount claimed without ascertainment would have been beyond its competence. Kimsey v. Roche, 8 P. R. 515, overruled; and Wiltiss v. Ward, 8 A. R. 549, and Forfar v. Climie, 10 P. R. 90, specially referred to. Cushman v. Reid, 20 C. P. 147, distinguished. Re Graham v. Tomlinson, 12 P. R. 367.

Promissory Note—Payment by Surety—Recovery over against Principal.]—Plaintiff having paid a note of which he and defendant were joint makers, for $169, but which the plaintiff sizned as a surety only:—Held, that plaintiff could not sue defendant in a division court for the money so paid, the amount not being ascertained by the signature of defendant. A summons for prohibition was made absolute without costs, there being no meritous defence. Kinsey v. Roche, 8 P. R. 515.

Rent — Signature to Memorandum of Lease.]—See Re Gordon v. O'Brien, 11 P. R.

Sale of Goods — Commission.] — The defendant, by an instrument signed by him, authorized the plaintiff to dispose of the goods mentioned therein for the sum of $1,000 net to the defendant, the latter reserving to himself the right to dispose of the goods without the plaintiff a sasistance, and agreeing in such case to pay the plaintiff a commission of ten per cent, on the above mentioned sum. The defendant, unassisted by the plaintiff, afterwards disposed of the goods for $350, and the plaintiff then claimed ten per cent. commission on $1,000, and interest:—Held, that lie was entitled to recover the amount, and that the claim was within the jurisdiction of the division court, the original amount thereof being ascertained by the signature of the defendant. Petric v. Machan, 28 O. R. 642.

Sale of Goods—Price.]—Under a written agreement for the sale of a machine, signed by the defendant, he was to send to the plaintiffs, within ten days after the machine was started, a promissory note, with approved security, for 81.25, the price thereof; and in default the price was to become forthwith due and payable. The machine, which was by the agreement to be delivered by the plaintiffs f. o. b. cars addressed to the defendant to an outside railway station, was received and used by him, and shortly after was returned to the plaintiffs. In an action on the agreement:—Hold, that there was jurisdiction in the division court to entertain an action for the price of the machine, as the amount was "ascertained by the signature of the defendant." Petrie v. Machan, 28 O. R. 642, followed. Re Surger-Massey Co. and Parkin, 28 O. R. 662.

(c) Other Cases.

Combination of Claims — Liquidated and Uniquidated Sums, |—A claim aggregating more than $100 and less than $200, which is made up of two amounts, one liquidated and one unliquidated and both less than $100, cannot be sued in a division court. Per Armour, J.—The claims could not have been sued together before 49 Vict. c, 15, s, 6 (O.), and that Act does not expressly or impliedly affect the question. Per O'Connor, J.—But for 49 Vict, c, 15, s, 6 (O.), the case would be governed by Vogt v, Boyle, 8 P, R, 249, It must be assumed that the Legislature intended by that enactment to lay down a rule of combination to regulate the whole subject; and the enactment being silent as to the combination of such claims as are here sued on, they must be taken to be excluded from the jurisdiction. Re Walsh v, Elliott, 11 P, R, 520.

Original Demand Ascertained — Balance Sued for.]—Where the original demand, no matter how large, is ascertained by the signature of the party liable, and a balance not exceeding $200 remains due, the division courts under the Act of 1880 have jurisdiction. Bank of Ottawa v. McLaughlin, 8 A. R. 543.

See Re Lott v. Cameron, 29 O. R. 70 (ante, 2).

4. Judgments, Actions on.

County Court Judgment—Abandonment of Excess, —Application for a prohibition to the Judge of the 1st division court in the country of Kent, and to the plaintiffs, to prohibit them from prosecuting an action, which was brought upon a county court judgment for S211.87, the plaintiffs abandoning the excess of their claim over $100, and claiming $100.—Held, that an inferior court has no jurisdiction to entertain an action brought upon the judgment of a superior court. Re Reberts v. Brooke, 10 P. R. 257, Reversed, 11 P. R. 206.

Division Court Judgment.]—An action is not maintainable in this court on a judgment obtained in a division court, under 13 & 14 Vict. c. 53. McPherson v. Forrester, 11 U. C. R. 31

Division Court Judgment—Action on, in County Court.]—Held, following the previous case, that an action would not lie in a county court upon a division court judgment. Donnelly v. Stewart, 25 U. C. R. 398.

High Court—"Final Judgment"—Abandoning Excess.]—A division court has jurisdiction to entertain an action brought upon a judgment of the high court, where the judgment of that court is a final judgment. Reberts v. Brooke, 11 P. R. 296, followed. In an action for alimony, the plaintiff recovered judgment against the defendant D—65 for 8211.39 taxed costs, and in the usual form for alimony, at the rate of 8226 per year, payable in equal quarterly instalments at specified times:—Held, that the judgment, so far as it related to the costs, was a final judgment, whatever might be the case with regard to the payments of alimony, and that a division court had jurisdiction under R. 8. O. 1887 c. 51, s. 70 (b), to entertain a suit by the plaintiff for 8100 in respect to the costs, as being a claim for a debt owing to the plaintiff by the defendant, she expressly abandoning the balance of the taxed costs awarded. Aldrich v. Aldrich, 23 O. R. 374. Alfirmed, 24 O. R. 124.

High Court - Order for Payment of Costs.]-Prohibition granted to restrain the enforcement of a judgment in a division court in an action brought upon an order of a Judge in an action in the high court ordering the defendant in the division court action to pay certain costs arising out of his default as a witness. Notwithstanding the broad provisions of rule 934, an order of the court or of a Judge is not for all purposes, and to all intents, a judgment; and no debt exists by virtue of such an order as was sued on here. Rule 866 means that an order may be enforced in the action or matter in which it is, as a judgment may be enforced, and does not extend to the sustaining of an independent action upon the order. Re Kerr v. Smith, 24 O. R. 473, Magistrate's Order — Maintenance of Wife—Final Judgment.]—See Re Sims v. Kelly, 20 O. R. 291.

5. Notice Disputing Jurisdiction,

Necessity for—Prohibition.]—Held, that where a garnishee does not file a notice disputing the jurisdiction of a division court within the time required by 43 Vict. c. 8, s. 14 (O.), though no objection can be taken to the jurisdiction of the high court of justice to prohibit the proceedings is not ousted. Clarke v. Macdonald, 4 O. R. 310.

Held, affirming the judgment reported 8 P. R. 374, that the notice mentioned in 8, 14 of 43 Vict. c. 8 (O.) refers only to suits otherwise of the proper competence of the division court, but which have been brought in the wrong division. Re Mead v. Creary, 32 C. P. 1.

Held (disagreeing with the court below, 11 O, R. 188, and approving Mead v. Creary, S.P. R. 374, 32 C. P. 1), that the notice under 48 Vict. c, 14, s. 1 (O.), amending 43 Vict. c, 8, s. 14 (O.), disputing the jurisdiction, is only required when a suit otherwise of the proper competence of the division court has been brought in the wrong division, and the want of such notice cannot give the division court jurisdiction if the title to land is brought in question. Re Knight v. Medora, 14 A. R. 112.

Held, doubting, but following Re Knight v. Medora, 14 A. R. 132, and Re Mead v. Creary, 32 C. P. 1, that the operation of s. 14 of the Division Courts Act, 1880, is restricted to cases within the general jurisdiction of the division courts, and the absence of a notice under that section disputing the jurisdiction where the amount claimed is beyond the competence of a division court. Re Graham v. Tomlinson, 12 P. R. 367.

Power to Extend Time for Giving.]—A division court Judge has no power, after the expiry of the time limited by s. 205 of the Division Courts Act, R. S. 9, 1897 c. 60, for the giving of notice of intention to context the jurisdiction of the court, to grant leave to file a notice disputing it. Re McLean v. Osgoode, 30 O. R. 439.

6. Splitting Causes of Action.

Account-Items. 1-Plaintiff rendered an account to defendant, commencing with the amount of an account rendered on the 30th June, 1862, and continued to the 14th October, when the balance, after allowing a credit of $4.25, was $106.43. In February, 1863, he sued in the division court, the statement of claim commencing with the 24th April, and ending on the 10th October, 1862, amounting to $99.31. He was allowed to recover without abandoning the excess, notwithstanding the production of the larger account rendered; and in May he sued for the items included in that account, but not in the former action, and was also allowed to recover. Defendant then applied for a prohibition. Semble, that the application should have been made in the first suit, but the point was not settled, as, after rule nisi granted, the plaintiff consented to the writ going without costs. In re Grace v. Walsa, 3 P. R. 196.

Contract of Hiring—Claim for Hire—Claim for Injury, 1—Where plaintiff sued defendants on an alleged promise to return a yoke of oxen 'n as good condition as when hired, afleging as a breach that they were not so returned, &c., but were injured, &c., and it appeared on the trial that defendants had been before sued by the plaintiff for the hire of the same oxen on the same contract for hiring, which suit resulted in judgment for the plrintiff:—Held, a splitting of the plaintiff's cause of action, within the meaning of the Division Courts Act; and judgment was given for defendants, Light v. Lyons, 7 L. J. 74.

Money Deposited—Interest.] — Where the plaintif sued in a division court for $100 interest upon moneys deposited with the defendants, and it appeared that she had treated the deposit receipt in her hands as one upon which the whole sum was must due and collectable:—Held, that the action came within s. 77 of the Division Courts Act, R. S. O. 1887 c. 51, whereby the splitting of causes of action is forbidden; and prohibition was granted. In re-Clark v. Barber, 26 O. R. 47, followed, but commented on as irreconclable with such cases as Dickenson v. Harrison, 4 Pri. 282, approved in Attwood v. Taylor, 1 M. & G. 307. Re McDonald v. Donedalt, 28 O. R. 212.

Money Paid by Indorser — Several Promissory Notes, I—Claims, such as promissory notes, which would each constitute a distinct cause of action if sued upon directly, come within the rule as to splitting of causes of action when sued upon indirectly, as in an action for money paid by an indorser to the use of the maker. Gilbert v. Gilbert, 4 C. L. J. 229.

Mortgage-Instalments of Interest-Assignee of Covenant - Indemnity.] - A mortgagee cannot sue in the division court for the amount of an instalment of interest within the jurisdiction of that court, when other instalments of interest are due which bring the whole amount beyond the jurisdiction. section 2 of s. 79, R. S. O. 1897 c. 60, permitting separate actions for principal and interest on a mortgage, applies only to an action brought upon the mortgage by a person to whom the money is payable thereon, and does not apply to an action brought by the assignee of the mortgagor upon a covenant entered into by his vendee with him to pay off the mortgage and indemnify him against Re Real Estate Loan Co. v. Guardhouse, 29 O. R. 602.

Mortgage—Obligation to Indeanity—Interest, 1—The plaintiff conveyed land to the defendant subject to a mortgage, and after the maturity thereof paid the mortgage two gales of interest since accrued, which he sought to recover from the defendant by action in a division court:—Held, that there was no splitting of the cause of action within s. 77 of the Division Courts Act, R. S. O., 1887 c. 54. Decision in 226 O. R. 123 reversed. Re Bull v. Bell, 26 O. R. 601.

Promissory Notes, |—In settlement of an action on a promissory note for 83S; given for the price of liquors sold to him by plaintiff, a liquor dealer, defendant, a tavern-keeper, agreed in writing to give and gave security upon certain terms, by a conveyance of land, and a new note for the amount sued for, which was subsequently divided into three notes of 8125 each:—Held, that each note was a separate cause of action and could be sued in the division court. Re McGolrick v. Ryall, 25 0, 18, 435.

Purchase Money — Instalments — Inter-ext.]—Under an agreement for sale of land, the balance of the purchase money was payable by instalments with interest at a named rate half-yearly; and at a time when three of the instalments of principal, and interest amounting to 870, and three years' taxes, were overdue, an action was commenced in a division court for the arrears of interest and two years' taxes, 895.30 —Held, reversing the decision in 25 O. R. 253, that the plaintiffs could have recovered all the purchase money and interest due when the action was begun under one count in a superior court; and therefore there was a dividing of their cause of action within the meaning of s. 77 of the Division Courts Act, R. S. O. 1887 c. 51. Re Gordon v. O'Brien, 11 P. R. 287, approved and followed. Public School Trustees of Section 9 Nottawasaga, t. Township of Nottawasaga, 15 A. R. 310, distinguished. Re Clark v. Barber, 26 O. R. 47.

Rent—Monthly Instalments,1—The defendant rented certain premises from the plaintiff for a year, agreeing in writing to pay monthly $125 therefor, but no formal lease was executed. When the rent had become four months in a division court against the defendant, each for a month's rent, $125:— Held, that the sums claimed in the three plaints were payable under the one contract, and would have been included in one count under the old system of pleading; and, therefore, that the division into three plaints was improper under R. S. O. 1877 c. 47, s. 59:— Held, also, that the defendant's signature to the memorandum of lease could not be construed as ascertaining the amounts claimed in the plaints; and prohibition was ordered. Re Gordon v, O'Brien, 11 P. R. 287.

Surplus School Rates-Claims for Different Years.]—In 1887 the plaintiffs sued the council in the division court for the sur-plus rates received by them in 1881, and re-covered judgment therefor. They afterwards brought this action in the county court for the surplus received in the five sub-squent years. The defendants contended that the chaim was res judicata by reason of the judgment in the division court, and also that the plaintiffs were not entitled to recover, because, by suing in the division court for the surplus of 1881 alone, they had divided their cause of action into two or more suits, contrary to s, 77 of the Division Courts Act, R. S. O. 1887 c. 51:—Held, (1) that the recovery in the division court being for a wholly distinct and separate cause of action, and not upon a balance of account under s, 77, or after abandonment of excess under D. C. rule No. 8. was no defence to an action for the surplus rates received by the defendants in the subsequent years. (2) That if there had been a rates received by the derendants in the sear agent years, (2) That if there had been a splitting of the cause of action within the meaning of the Act, by suing for the surphus of one year alone, the objection should have been taken as a defence, or by way of motion for prohibition, in the first suit, and could not be pleaded as a bar to this action, Semble, that the several claims, being entirely distinct and unconnected, did not form distinct and unconnected, and not form "one cause of action" so as to come within the pro-libition of s, 77 against dividing a cause of action. Re Ackroyd, 1 Ex. 479, referred to, Public School Trustees of Section 9 Nottawa-supa v. Township of Nottawasaga, 15 A. R.

Work and Labour—Money Overpaid,] —Held, on the facts, that there was no splitting, the plaintiff having two separate causes of action, one for work and labour, and the other for a balance due for money paid by him for goods in excess of the amount furnished to him. McRae v. Robins, 20 C. P. 135.

7. Territorial Jurisdiction.

Application to Transfer Cause—Forms—Convenience.)—Held, affirming Bongard v. McWhirter, 12 U. C. R. 143, that under 16 Vict. e. 177, s. 9, a suitor desiring to remove the cause to another division, must apply to the Judge who ordinarily would have cognizance of the cause, not to the Judge of the division to which he desires to transfer it. But the only issue taken being as to which division was most convenient to try in, upon that point the decision of the Judge who had granted the order was held to be decisive. McWhirter v. Bongard, 14 U. C. R. S4.

Application to Transfer Cause—Pending Motion for Prohibition.]—Held, that, although before the motion for prohibition came on to be heard the plaintiff in the division court caused the plaint to be transferred to the proper division court in the county of Lambton, nevertheless the defendant, upon being sued in a wrong division court, had the right to apply for prohibition, and the Judge in chamber, having in his discretion given the defendant his costs of the motion for prohibition, that discretion could not be interiered with. & Olmstead v. Errington, 11 P. R. 236.

Application to Transfer Cause—Refusal of—Prohibition.]—See In re Brazill v. Johns, 24 O. R. 209.

Application to Transfer Cause—Trial of Question Raised by Notice Disputing Jurisdiction—Refusal of Judge to Try.]—Where the Judge presiding at the trial of an action in a division court declines to try the question of the jurisdiction, he may be prohibited. Such question may be tried at the time and place of the trial of the action; and the defendant is in no way bound by anything contained in R. S. O. 1887 c. 51, s. 87, as amended by 52 Vict. c. 12, s. 5, to apply for an order transferring the action to a division court having jurisdiction over it, or to apply to the Judge at any other time or place for the trial of the question so raised. In re Watson v. Woolverton, 9 C. L. T. Occ. N. 480, distinguished. Re Thompson v. Hay, 22 O. R. 583.

Under R. S. O. 1887 c. 51, s. 87, as amended by 52 Vict. c. 12, s. 5 (O.), either party in a division court action mar, after notice disputing the jurisdiction has been duly given, apply to have the action transferred to another court. If no application be made, and if in fact there be jurisdiction, prohibition will not lie merely because the Judge has assumed that as no application for a transfer had been made he had jurisdiction, i.e., has not tried the question of jurisdiction. But if, in fact, there good, and prohibition will be granted. Judgment in 22 O. R. 88; affirmed. In re Thompson v. Hug, 20 A. R. 379.

Application to Transfer Garnishee Proceeding. J—See Re McCabe v. Middleton, 27 O. R. 170, ante II.

Carrying on Business—Railway Company.]—Held, that a railway company does not "live and carry on business," within the meaning of 32 Vict. c. 23, 8, 7 (O.), at any other place than its head office, at which its business is managed. Where the garnishees had their principal station at Montreal, and a local station at Berlin, at which they took passengers and received goods, and the bulantifi issued a garnishee summons against the company out of the division court at Berlin, under that section, on the ground that they lived and carried on business there:—Held, that the Judge of said division court had no jurisdiction, and a prohibition was ordered. Statutes regulating the practice and procedure of a court apply only to matters within its jurisdiction, and cannot be called in aid to give jurisdiction, and eannot be called in aid to give jurisdiction, where it is in question. Ahrens v. McGillioat, 23 C. P. 171. Followed in Westover v. Turner, 26 C. P. 510.

Section 7, s.-s. 1 of the Division Courts Act, 32 Vict. c. 23. provides that the garnishee summons shall issue," out of the division court of the division in which the garnishee lives or carries on business:"—Held, in the case of a foreign railway company doing business within this Province, to mean that proceedings may be taken in the division in which the principal offices for the Province are located. By 29 & 30 Vict, c, 92, the Grand Trunk Railway Company, whose head office was at Montreal, leased the line of the Buffalo and Lake Huron Railway Company, whose principal offices were at Brantford:—Held, that garnishee proceedings ngainst the company were preperly taken at Brantford. Fair V. James, 6 C. L. J. 329.

The Grand Trunk Railway Company, having their head office in Montreal, Que, are not detendants residing or carrying on business in this Province, within the meaning of R. S. O. 1877 c. 47, s. 62. In re Guy v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 10 P. R. 372.

Cause of Action—Contract, where Made—Where to be Performed,—On an application for a prohibition on the ground that the cause of action did not arise within the jurisdiction of the Judge of the county of Lambton, it appeared that the defendant resided at G., where a bargain was made for the delivery of goods at W., and the bargain was fulfilled by such delivery and acceptance:—Held, that the cause of action arose partly at G. and partly at W., and the Judge of the county where W. was situate had no authority in respect of the cause of action. Kemp v. Ovcen, 14 C. P. 432.

Defendants, residing at Toronto, agreed to sell to the plaintiffs at Kingston certain barrels of oil. Upon the oil being delivered at Kingston, it was found to run short, and an action was brought for the shortage in the division court there:—Held, that the cause of action did not wholly arise there, and the action should have been brought at Toronto, where defendants resided. Carsley v. Fisken, 4 P. R. 255.

Where defendants, residing at Goderich, made a contract at Brantford with one W, to deliver to him certain goods at the railway station at Goderich:—Held, that an action in the division court for the bad quality of the goods delivered must be brought at Goderich, as the whole cause of action did not arise at Brantford. Watt v. Van Every, 23 U. C. R. 196.

"Gause of action." within the Division Courts Act, C. S. U. C. c. 19, s. 71, means the "whole cause of action:" and therefore, where the plaintiffs sued defendant in the division court at Ingersoll, in the county of Oxford, on a note payable there, but made at Strathroy, in the county of Middlesex, where defendant resided:—Held, that, as the whole cause of action did not arise at Ingersoll, the action would not lie there, but should have been brought at Strathroy, where defendant resided; and that a prohibition was properly ordered. Vaughan v. Weldon, L. R. 10 C. P. 47, and the cases on the C. L. P. Act, s. 44, distinguished. Nozon v. Holmes, 24 C. P. 541.

The defendant, who resided within the limits of the 10th division court in the county of York, drew a cheque in the planniff's favour within the limits of the 1st division court in the same county, upon a bank situate in the 10th division. The cheque having been dishonoured, the plaintiff sued upon it in the 1st division court:—Held, that the action was improperly brought there, and that a summons for a prohibition thereto, on the ground of want of jurisdiction, must be made absolute. King v. Farrell, 8 P. R. 119.

The defendant, residing at Port Elgin, by letter instructed the plaintiff, an attorney at Toronto, to take certain legal preceedings. The plaintiff, having performed these services, brought an action in a division court at Toronto to recover his fees:—Held, that the cause of action partly arose in each place, and that a prohibition should issue. In re Hagel v, Dalryapple, 8 P. R. 183.

The plaintiff lived in Ottawa, and the defendant corporation had its head office at Hamilton. The plaintiff made a mortgage to the defendants, and, a dispute arising between the plaintiff and the defendants as to the amount of interest to be paid thereon, the defendants claimed the full interest according to the mortgage, and desired the plaintiff to remit it by mail to their office at Hamilton, which the plaintiff refused to do. The defendants then began proceedings under the power of sale contained in their mortgage, and also an action for the recovery of the land, whereupon the plaintiff paid the money to his solicitors in Ottawa, and the latter sent it under protest to the defendants' solicitors in Hamilton, who in turn paid it to the defendants in Hamilton, On an action brought in the division court in Ottawa for the recovery of the money so paid under protest :- Held, that when the plaintiff made the payment, by reawhen the painting are so not the action against him, the defendants former direction to pay by deposit of the money in the Ottawa P. O. was superseded; and that the payment having been made by the plaintiff in Hamilton, the whole cause of action did not therefore arise at Ottawa. Garland v. Omnium Securities Co., 10 P. R. 135.

A promissory note was dated at Milton, in the county of Halton, 17th September, 1877, and was for $100, payable three months after date at Milton, with interest at eight per cent, per annum. The amount claimed was $149.50. The maker died in the county of Essex, long after the maturity of the note; her will was proved in Essex, and the defendants, at the time of the action, pesided in that county. The plaintiff having sued upon the note in a division court of the county of Halton:—Held, that the death of the maker, the circumstances of her making a will appoining the defendants executors were no part of the cause of action, which was complete before the granting of the probate, Held, also, that the division court of Halton, which was sought to be problibited, had jurisdiction by virtue of 43 Vict, c. S. s. 12 (O.) Re McCallum v. Graccy, 10 P. R. 514.

A plaint was brought in the 1st division court of Middlesex upon a contract signed by the defendant, dated at London, to pay to the order of the plaintiffs at London, "816 in wood delivered on the Hamilton and North-Western Railway," which was not in Middlesex. The defendant resided in the county of Sincoe:—Held, that the court in which the plaint was brought had no jurisdiction. Re Elliot v. Norris, 17 O. R. 78.

The plaintiffs resided in the district of Algoma, and the defendant in the county of Wentworth. The defendant telegraphed from Wentworth an order for a ton of fish to be

The plaintiff gave an order in Ontario for goods to the traveller of the defendants, whole-sale merchants in Montreal. "Ship vià G. T. H." at a certain named date. The goods were not so shipped, and a correspondence ensued, ending in the defendants refusing to supply the goods:—Held, that the breach was the non-shipment vià Grand Trunk Railway at Montreal, and not the subsequent refusal by correspondence, and, as the whole cause of action did not arise where the order was given, a mandamus to a division court Judge to try the action was refused. Re Diamond v. Waldron, 28 O. R. 478.

Residence of Defendant — Foreign Country — Garnishing Claim — Place Where Garnishees Carry on Business—57 Vict. c. 25, s. 12 (O.1) — Prohibition granted and order affirmed by a divisional court. In re Franklin v. Oucen, 15 C. L. T. Occ. N. 105, 158, 185.

Residence of Defendant—Outside of County, 1—The jurisdiction of the division court, under 13 & 14 Vict, c. 53, did not extend to persons residing out of the county, Indianae v., Judge of Leeds and Grenville, 12 U. C. R. 32.

Residence of Defendant—Promissory Mote—Indorser, I—Where the holder of a promissory note, payable to "A. B. or bearer," indorsed it over to a third party:—Held, that under C. S. U. C. e. 19. s. 71. an action might be brought against the maker and indorser in the division court for the division in which the indorser resided; and that on a motion for a writ of prohibition, the question whether or not the indorsement was made for the purpose of giving jurisdiction could not be inquired into. Bridges v. Douglas, 13 C. L. J. 358.

Residence of Defendant—Employment above and — Wife's Residence, | — Defendant worked at Aylmer, in the Province of Quebec, whist his wife and family lived at Rochester-ville, across the Ottawa, in the Province of Ontario, where his wife kept a store, and where defendant often came to see her: —Held, that his residence was with his family, and he was subject to be sued in the proper division court in the Province. In re Ladouccur v. Salter, 6 P. R. 305.

Residence of Defendant—Court Nearcet to.]—An action was brought in a division court against a firm consisting of two partners, which had been dissolved before action, one of the partners being resident out of Ontarios, and the other where the cause of action arose, being in a county other than that comprising the division in which the action was brought, although such division was nearest to where the firm had carried on business and the applicant resided. The Judge having overruled an objection to his jurisdiction and tried the case and pronounced judgment on the merits, prohibition was, under the circumstances, refused:—Semble, the Judge at the trial might have made an order permitting the plaintiff to proceed. Re Sinclair v. Bell, 28 O. R. 483.

8. Title to Land.

Breach of Covenant in Lease-Custom.]-In an action brought in the high court landlord against a tenant for damages for breach of the latter's covenants in a farm lease, the statement of claim alleged that the plaintiff by deed let to the defendant the land described for a term of years, and that the defendant thereby covenanted as set forth, and assigned as breaches of the covenants that and assigned as breaches of the covenants that the defendant did not cultivate the farm in a good, husbandlike, and proper manner. By the statement of defence the defendant denied all the allegations of the statement of claim, and further alleged that the defendant had used the premises in a tenant-like and proper manner, "according to the custom of the country where the same was situate." The plaintiff recovered a verdict of $100, the action being tried with a jury. The title to the land was not brought into question at the trial, but it was contended that it came in question on the pleadings:—Held, not so; for the de-fendant was, on the face of the record, estopped from pleading non demisit, and his detopped from pleading son demisit, and his denial could only be read, as a traverse of the actual execution of the lease. Purser v. Bradburne, 7 P. R. 18, commented on. Held, also, that the "custom" pleaded was not the "custom" meant by s. 69, s.-s. 4, of the Division Courts Act, R. S. O. 1887, c. 51, which refers to some legal custom by which the right or title to property is acquired, or on which it depends. Legh v. Hewitt, 4 East 154, followed. Held, therefore, that the action was depends. Legh v. Hewitt, 4 East 154, followed. Held, therefore, that the action was within the competence of the division court, and that the costs should follow the event in accordance with rules 1170, 1172, v. Poole, 15 P. R. 99,

Conveyance of Land as Security.]—In settlement of an action on a promissory note for $383, given for the price of liquors sold to him by plaintiff, a liquor dealer, defendant, a tavern keeper, agreed in writing to give, and gave security upon certain terms, by a conveyance of land, and a new note for the amount sued for, which was subsequently divided into three notes of $125 each:—Held, that the title to land did not come in question, Re McGolrick v. Ryall, 26 O. R. 435.

Highway — Liability to Repair.] — The judgment in 11 O. R. 138, refusing to order prohibition to a division court, was affirmed on appeal on the ground that defendants were liable to repair the road in question, which was not a public road "vested as a Provincial work in Her Majesty or in any public department or board," and that the title to land was not brought in question. Re Knight v. Township of Medora, 14 A. R. 112.

Interpleader as to Goods — Title to Land Involved.]—The Judge of a division court may entertain an interpleader application, to try the property in goods, even though the inquiry may involve the title to land. The Judge himself must decide such application without the aid of a jury. Munsie v. McKinley, 15 C. P. 50.

Line Fence—Mistake as to Boundary— Ownership of Rails.]—A., intending to make a line fence between his land and that of B., by mistake made the fence on B.'s land. Afterwards, a correct like having been run, it was agreed that A. and B. should each make a portion of the fence on the correct line. B., in making his share, used the rulls on the control of the price of the rulls on the share court for the price of the rulls so used, and the Judge having decided in his favour, B. applied for a problibition:—Held, that the Judge had jurisdiction. Re Bradshaw v. Duffg, 4 P. S. 50.

Prima Facie Case. |- Primâ facie proof of a title to land being given, and that such title must come in question, and no cause being shewn to the contrary, a prohibition was granted. Macara v. Morish, 11 C. P. 74.

Rent-Dispute as to Surrender of Lease.] The bare assertion of the defendant in a division court action that the right or title to any corporeal or incorporeal hereditament comes in question is not sufficient under R. S. O. 1887 c. 51, s. 69, s.-s. 4, to oust the jurisdiction of that court. The Judge has authority to inquire into so much of the case as is necessary to satisfy himself on the point, and if there are disputed facts or a question as to the proper inference from undisputed facts, that is enough to raise the ques-tion of title. If the facts can lead to only one conclusion, and that against the defendant, then there is no such bona fide dispute as to title as will oust the jurisdiction of the court. In an action in a division court for rent on a covenant in a lease, in which it was contended that the lease had been surrendered, prohibition was refused. Re Moberly v. Town of Collingwood, 25 O. R. 625.

Rent—Dispute as to Terms of Tenancy.]—
In an action in a division court to recover $79.50 for taxes on certain land, which defendant was to pay as rent therefor, the facts as to the terms and conditions of the tenancy were disputed, but the defendant did not dispute the plaintiff is title. On the plaintiff obtaining judgment for the amount claimed, the defendant applied for a prohibition, on the ground that the title to land was brought in question:
—Held, that the amount was properly recoverable in a division court. In re English v. Mutholland, 9 P. R. 145.

Use and Occupation-Contract for sale. 1 -The plaintiff agreed to sell to the defendant a parcel of land for $1.750, of which $10 was paid on the execution of the written agree-The agreement contained no provision as to possession, but the defendant went into possession as the purchaser. The plaintiff was unable to make title, and the defend-ant continued in possession for a considerable The plaintiff brought a division court action for use and occupation. The defend-ant set up that the contract had not been rescinded when he gave up possession and that he never became tenant to the plaintiff nor liable to pay rent :- Held, that the plaintiff was bound to prove a contract, express or implied, to pay compensation for the use and occupation, and in order to do so, it might have been necessary to shew when the contract of sale went off; but that was not a bringing of the title into question so as to oust the jurisdiction of the division court. In prohibition the court must be satisfied that the title really comes in question; it is not enough that some question is raised by the defendant's notice, Purser v. Bradburne, 7 P. R. 18, distinguished. Re Crawford v. Seney, 17 O. R. 74.

See, also, Costs, VI.—County Courts, III. 5.

9. Tort or Contract.

Breach of Warranty.]—Held, that an action for breach of a warranty of a horse, where the damages recovered were over $10 and under $100, was within the jurisdiction of the division court. Morris v. Cameron, 12 C. P. 422.

Negligence of Bailee, —A plaint in a division court charging that the defendant hired of plaintiff a horse, &c., to go from A, to B, and back, and agreed to take good care of the same as bailee, with an averment that the defendant so carelessly, &c., drove said horse, &c., that the horse was killed, &c., is a plaint in contract and not in tort, and therefore within the judisdiction. In re Rumble v. Wilson, 5 P. R. 38.

The plaintif sued in a division court for $800 as the value of his horse employed by defendant, the injury complained of being that the defendant allowed the horse to be worked after he took sick, by which his death was occasioned:—Held, that this was an action for breach of contract in not taking proper care of the horse, and that the division court had jurisdiction. O'Brien v. Irving, 7 P. R. 308.

Penalty. — Held, that a penal action for not returning a conviction is founded on tort, and for that reason cannot be brought in a division court, where the amount in question is more than $40. Corsant q. t, v. Taylor, 10 C. L. J. 320.

Uncertain Damages. — The jurisdiction of division courts is restricted to $40 in actions brought purely and simply to recover uncertain damages depending on matters of opinion whether the cause of action arose out of tor. or breach of agreement. Hyland v. Warren, 6 L. J. 116.

See Re London Mutual Fire Ins. Co. v. McFarlanc, 26 O. R. 15, post, XII. 3.

10. Other Cases.

Claim for Balance of Larger Sum.]— Courts of requests can entertain a suit for the balance remaining due upon a written undertaking to pay a larger sum. Longworth v. McKay, 6 O. S. 149.

Courts of Record.]—Division courts are, by virtue of 32 Vict. c. 23, s. 1 (O.), courts of record. Corsant q. t. v. Taytor, 10 C. L. J. 320.

Detinue.]—Division courts have jurisdiction in actions of detinue. Where, therefore, the plaintif sued in a county court, and the value of the article detained was found to be $1, and no certificate granted for full costs, the plaintiff was restricted to division court costs only, and set-off of costs allowed. Lucus v. Elliott, 9 L. J. 147.

Infants—Wayes—Labour,]—Section 27 of 13 x 14 Vict, c, 53 does not restrict infants from suing in the division courts for anything but wages, but enables them to recover for their own labour, contrary to the principles of the common law. Ferris v, Fox, 11 U. C. 18, 612.

Judgment—Mation to Set aside—Fraud.]
— A Judge in an action in the division court, apart from the jurisdiction conferred by s. 152 of the Division Courts Act, R. S. O. 1897 c. 69, to grant a new trial within fourteen days thereby prescribed, has not any inherent jurisdiction to set aside a judgment by reason of its having been procured by fraud, and to order a new trial. Re Nilick v. Marks, 31 O. R. 637.

Liquors.]—The words "liquors drunk in a tavern or alchouse," in s.-s. 2, and "such liquors," in s.-s. 3 of s. 63 of the Division Courts Act, R. S. O. 1887 c. 51, mean liquors drunk in the tavern or alchouse of the vendor. Re McGolvick v. Ryall, 26 O. R. 435.

Married Woman—Dehts.]—As to proceeding for debts within the jurisdiction of the division or county courts against married women. In re Widmeyer v. McMakon, 32 C. P. 187.

Mechanics' Liens—Mortgage—Account.] Section 23 of R, S. O. 1887 c. 126, which allows proceedings to recover the amount of a mechanic's lien, to be taken under certain circumstances in the county court and division court, applies only to actions in which the party seeking to enforce his lien is suing in the ordinary way to obtain judgment and execution. Those courts cannot entertain an action in the nature of an action of account by a lienholder against a mortgage who has sold the land in question under a mortgage prior to the lien, though there may be wider powers by way of summary application, Hutson, V. Fulliers, 19 A. R. 154.

New Trial — Application — Time.]—See In re MeLean v. MeLead, 5 P. R. 467, and other cases, post, XII.

New Trial—Raining Question of Jurisdiction. [—Held, that a party not raising the question of purisdiction in the first trial of a case in the division court, is not prohibited from raising the question upon the second trial, a new trial having been granted. Deadwar v. Agricultural and Arts Association, 6 P. R. 176.

Outside Ontario.]—The process of division courts is of no effect outside the Province of Ontario. Ontario Glass Co. v. 8wartz, 9 P. R. 252.

Preferential Transfer of Goods in Trust—Netting aside—Distribution of Proceeds amongst Creditors.]—Within sixty days of the making of an assignment for the beneit of creditors, the insolvent transferred to a person in trust for certain of his creditors a quantity of butter, which was sold, realizing $1,800, and the proceeds were distributed amongst such creditors in proportion to their claims, whereby they acquired a preference. The assignee then sued one of the creditors to recover back the money paid him as his share, the amount so sought to be recovered being within the jurisdiction of the division court:—Held, that the transfer was divisible into as many parts as there were shares, and the division court had jurisdiction to entertain the action. Beattie v. Holmes, 29, 0, R. 204.

Replevin — Damages.] — The plaintiff, a solicitor, claiming on defendant's papers a lien for costs, settled with him, taking a note therefor payable on demand. He then went to the United States, leaving the note and papers with another solicitor as his agent. The defendant, stating that he required the papers, or some of them, for use in his business, brought replevin proceedings in the division court, giving a bond to prosecute the suit with effect and without delay, or to return the property replevied and to pay the dam-ages sustained by the issuing of the writ; and there was a breach of the bond in not prosecuting the suit with effect. Under the resecuting the suit with effect. Under the re-plevin the defendant only procured some of the papers which were tendered back to the plaintiff and refused, the defendant stating that they were of no value, the agent having retained the valuable ones. In an action on the bond by plaintiff to recover the amount of the note as damages he had sustained by the replevin:—Held, that, even if any lien existed, which was questionable, by reason of the tak-ing of the note and departure from the country, it was not displaced by the replevin suit; but, in any event, the plaintiff had failed to prove any actual damage; and though there might be judgment for nominal damages and costs, there would be a set-off of the defendcosts, there would be a set-off or the detendant's costs of trial; and the action was dismissed without costs. Under the Division Courts Act, R. S. O. 1887 c, 51, s. 266, the whole matter could have been litigated in the division court. Quære, as to the amount of damages recoverable. Kennin v. Macdonald, 22 O. R. 484.

School Rates—Action by Collector.]—A township collector might sue for an assessment for common schools, under 4 & 5 Vict. c. 48, s. 10, in a division court. McGregor v. White, 1 U. C. R. 15.

Unorganized District — Stipendiary Magistrate, 1—The Division Courts Act, 1880, does not apply to the division courts in territorial divisions and unorganized tracts; and a prohibition was ordered to restrain a stipendiary magistrate from adjudicating upon a claim on a promissory note for $110, In re Ontario Bank v, Harston, 3 P. R. 47.

Wager — Amendment at Trial—Waiver—Prohibition.] — A division court Judge has power to allow a plaintiff to amend his particulars at the trial so as to bring within the jurisdiction a case which, from the nature of the cause of action (in this case a claim for the amount of a wager), was, as originally launched, outside it; and where in such a case the defendant did not insist on re-service of the summons, but answered the claim, and the trial proceeded and the Judge found facts shewing jurisdiction, upon which judgment was entered, prohibition was refused. In re Sebert v, Hodgson, 32 O. R. 157.

XII. NEW TRIAL.

Application for—Bar to Motion for Prohibition.]—See Robertson v. Cornwell, 7 P. R. 207; Archibald v. Bushey, 7 P. R. 304; In re Evans v. Sutton, 8 P. R. 367; McGregor v. Norton, 13 P. R. 28, 223.

Application for—Death of Judge—Delay in Appointment of Successor.]—A suit in the division court having been tried on the 18th July, before a deputy Judge duly appointed, the defendant on the 22nd July applied for a new trial, by which, under rule 52 of the division courts, proceedings were stayed. The Judge died on the 26th; the deputy Judge before whom the case had been tried did nothing in the matter; and the new Judge was not appointed until October. In January following he ordered a new trial:—Held, that he was authorized to do so under s. 117 of the Division Courts Act, C. S. U. C. c. 19, and the Interpretation Act, C. S. U. C. c. 5, S. s.s. 23, taken together. Appelbe v. Baker, 27 U. C. R. 486.

Application for—Time.]—Held, that C. S. U. C. e. 19, s. 197, giving the Judge power to grant a new trial within fourteen days, is imperative, and that the Judge has no power to grant a new trial after the expiration of that time. Mitchell v. Mulholland, 14 C. L. J. 55: Re Foley v. Moran, 11 P. R. 31°.

Application for—Time—Commencement of, I—Where at the sittings of a division court a case is "adjourned for plaintiff on payment of costs within ten days othervise judgment for the defendant," the two weeks within which a motion can be made by a new trial, the costs not being paid, does not commence to run until the expiration of the ten days, for until then there is no judgment. Thompson v. McCrae, 31 O. R. 674.

Application for—Time—Commencement of—Notice of Judgment.]—Under the amendment made to s. 144 of R. S. O. 1887 c. 51, by 57 Viet, c. 23, s. 4, allowing judgment to be given without previously naming a day and directing that the parties shall be notified, the time within which to move for a new trial does not begin to run until the day on which the party has notice of the judgment. In re Moore v. Farquhar, 15 C. L. T. Oec. N. 103.

Application for — Time — Revision of Costs.]—See Bell v. Lamont, 7 P. R. 307.

Application for — Time — Filing Affidavit.] — After judgment in an action in a division court in the county of Victoria, the defendant within the fourteen days required by the Division Courts Act, R. S. O. 1877 c, 47, s. 107, moved, on notice filed with the clerk of the court, for a new trial on the ground of the discovery of fresh evidence, but did not within the fourteen days file an affidavit as required by the division court rule 142. An affidavit was subsequently filed, the motion heard, and a new trial granted by the county court Judge. A motion for prohibition was refused, the transgression of a rule of practice forming no ground for such motion. Fee v Metharage, 9 P. R. 329.

Application for—Time—Filing Papers.]—Quere, can a division court Judge set aside a judgment and execution on which the money has been regularly made, on application to him for a new trial, where the papers were not regularly filed with the clerk of the court? McKenzie v. Keene, 5 L. J. 225.

Application for — Time—Garnishment.]
—Under 32 Vict. c. 23 (O.), n Judge of a division court has power in garnishment proceedings, when the justice of the case requires it, to grant a new trial after the lapse of fourteen days, notwithstanding C. S. U. C. 19, s. 107. In re McLean v. McLeod, 5 P. R. 467.

Application for — Time—Garnishment.]
—The provisions of s. 145 of the Division Courts Act, R. S. O. 1887 c. 51, as to applying for a new trial within fourteen days, do not apply to a garnishee. In re McLean v. MeLead, 5 P. R. 467, followed. Re Tipling v.
Cole, 21 O. R. 276, distinguished. Judgment in 26 O. R. 554 affirmed. Hobson v. Shannon, 27 O. R. 115.

Application for — Time — Jury Cuse — Judgment Reserved as to Costs.] — An action was tried in a division court with a jury on the 15th January, when they found for the plaintiff with a recommendation that plaintiff should pay his own and defendant's costs, whereupon judgment was entered for the plaintiff, and costs reserved. On 24th January the Judge directed "judgment for plaintiff with costs on verticed jury." On 5th February an application was made for a new trial, which was granted on 16th February:—Held, that the application for the new trial was too late, not having been made within fourteen days from the trial, as required by s. 145 of the Division Courts Act, R. S. O. 1887 c. 51; and a prohibition was therefore directed. Bland v. Rivers, 19 O. R. 407.

XIII. PRACTICE AND PROCEDURE.

1. Parties.

Examination of—By Judge at Trial.]—A division court Judge may, of his own motion, under s, 102 of the Division Courts Act, have the plaintiff or defendant sworn at the trial and examine him, although the demand exceed $8. In re Burrowes, 18 C. P. 493.

Examination of—For Discovery.]—Sections 24 et seq. of the A. J. Act, 1873, authorizing the examination of parties to a suit, does not apply to division courts. Willing v. Elliott, 37 U. C. R. 320.

Substituting Defendant.]—A witness in a division court suit having admitted that he was the real debtor, the plaintiff was allowed, under D. C. rule 115, to substitute the witness as a defendant and obtain a judgment against him:—Held, that the division court Judge had the power to do this. In re Henney v. Scott, S P. R. 251.

Substituting Plaintiff. |—Held, that revised rules 211, 216, and 224 of the division courts authorized the Judge to substitute the name of the plaintiff for that of the original holder of the note as plaintiff in the action. Pegg v. Howlett, 28 O. R. 473.

Third Parties.] — Quere, whether the third party clauses of the O. J. Act apply to division courts. In re Merchants' Bank v. 1 an Allen, 10 P. R. 348.

2. Service.

Added Party — Service of Notice only—Appearance at Trial — Waiver, — In an action on a promissory note, brought in a division court, M., the indorser, was made a defendant by the order of the Judge, and was served by the original defendant, the maker of the note, with a notice claiming relief over and indemnity, but was not served with the summons or a copy of the plaintiff's demand. M. filed a notice disputing the defendant's claim against him and the jurisdiction of the court to try in and also appeared at the trial and gave edidence and objected to the jurisdiction, Judgment was streen for the plaintiffs against both the original defendant and M.:—Held, that judgment could not have been given against M. in his absence, because the writ of summons and statement of claim had not been served upon him; but that, by appearing in the suit and taking part in the proceedings both before and at the trial, M. had waived service of the summons and demand. In re Merchant's Bank v. Van Allen, 10 P. R. 348.

Blank Summons — Bailiff Inserting Name of Defendant, — The issue by the clerk of a division court of a summons with a blank for the name of a partry, which is afterwards filled up by the bailiff pursuant to the clerk's instructions, though contrary to the provisions of s. 44 of the Division Courts Act, R. S. O. 1887 c. 51, does not affect the jurisdiction of the Division Court, nor afford ground for prohibition, but is a matter of practice or procedure to be dealt with by the Judge in the division court. Re Gerow v. Hoole, 28 O. R. 405.

Out of the Jurisdiction. — halliff may serve a summons out of the jurisdiction, though he is not obliged to do so. It is immerial that a defendant is without the jurisdiction at the time he is served, if at such time he is law a resident within the jurisdiction. In re Ladouceur v. Satter, 6 P. R.

Out of the Jurisdiction—Taking Chances at Trial—Waiver.]—Service upon a defendant resident out of the jurisdiction is not a principle of practice within the meaning of s. 24 of the Division Courts Act, but a branch or system of practice, or a means of relief which the procedure in division courts does not admit of being applied. Neither R. S. O. 1877 c. 47, s. 244, nor rules 8 and 45 O. J. Act, make applicable to division courts the statutory rules and practice governing service on defendants out of the jurisdiction in actions in the superior courts:—Held, that the service of the writ in this action on the station master of the defendants at Bowmanville, was void, but the defendants having appeared at the trial, and, after their objection to the jurisdiction had been overruled, having proceded with the defence and cross-examined witnesses, &c:—Held, that they had thereby peechded themselves from objecting to the jurisdiction. In re Guy v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 10 P. R. 372.

Substitutional Service—Defendant out of Javiadiction — Taking Chances at Trial—Waiver,]—T., one of the defendants in a division court action, resided out of Toronto, and process was served substitutionally upon him. L., the other defendant, objected that the court had no jurisdiction by reason of T.'s absence from the Province. No written notice of this objection was given before the trial, there was a conflict of evidence as to whether it was taken at the trial, and the suit was defended on a different ground. The trial was on the 13th January, 1888, when judgment went for the plaintiff for more than $100; a new trial was moved for by L., and was refused on the 23rd February, 1888; execution then issued, under which goods of L. were seized, and became the subject of an interpleader. L. did not appeal, but on the 16th May, 1888, moved for prohibition:—Held, that L. having taken his chances at the trial, and not having appealed nor sufficiently accounted for his delay in moving, the discretion of the court should not be exercised in his favour. Re Soules v. Little, 2 P. R. 533.

Substitutional Service - Order for.] At the time of the issue of the summons in a division court plaint the defendant was in Ontario, but she left without its having been served upon her, and an order was made after she had left for substitutional service. In the material upon which she supported a motion for prohibition she did not negative the existence of such facts as would give jurisdiction to make an order for substitutional service, and from her own affidavit it was to be inferred that the summons had come to her knowledge:—Held, that, as the Judge in the division court had jurisdiction under s. 100 of R. S. O. 1887 c. 51, as amended by 51 Vict. 10, s. 1, to order substitutional service, certain facts were made to appear, and as the defendant was subject to the summons at the time it was issued, it was for the Judge to determine whether the facts necessary to give jurisdiction appeared, and his determination could not be reviewed by the high court. Re Hibbitt v. Schilbroth, 18 O. R. 399.

Time of Service—Dispute Note—Defendant Entitled to Full Notice—Prohibition.]—See Zaritz v. Mann, 16 C. L. J. 144.

3. Trial.

Adjournment of Trial—Chambers.]—A division court Judge may, under s. 86 of the Division Courts Act, adjourn the hearing of a cause from a regular sitting of the court to his chambers within the division, and such adjournment is, if not objected to by the parties, an adjournment of the court to hear that cause. In re Burroces, 18 C. P. 493.

Jury—Action of Tort.]—A claim by an insurance company, as indorsed on a division court summons, to recover back from the insured the sum of $30 loss under an insurance effected by him, payment of which is alleged to have been procured by his false and fraudulent representations, is a claim arising ex delicto, and can be required to be tried by a jury under R. S. O. 1887 c. 51, s. 154. Re London Mutual Fire Insurance Co. v. McFarlane, 26 O. R. 15.

Jury—Res Julienta,! — When an issue arises on the plen res judiesta, the identity of the season of the plaint in a division court. In a plaint in a division court where the defence of res judienta had been raised, and in which a jury notice had been given, the Judge determined the case hinself, and refused to allow it to be tried by a jury:—Held, that he had no jurisdiction to do so, and that a mandatory order must go to compel him to try the case in accordance with the practice of the court. In re Coucou v. Affic. 24 O. R. 358.

Jusy — Submitting Questions — Acquierecone "Problition.]—In a division court aretion for the price of goods sold, the Judge, without objection taken, submitted questions to the jury, and on their answers entered a vertical and judgment for the plaintiff after the defendant had, however, put in a written argument in his own favour:—Held, on motion for prohibition, on the ground that the defendant was entitled to a general verdict of the jury, and that the Judge had no right to submit questions and enter a verdict on them, that, however this might be, the defendant had so acquiesced in the course taken as to debar him from obtaining prohibition. In re Jonce v. Julian, 28 O. R. 601.

Jury-Withdrawal of Case from-Prohibition.]—In a division court suit a jury was demanded and called, but the presiding Judge withdrew from their consideration everything except the amount of damages to be awarded, saying there were no facts in the case disputed, the plaintiff's evidence being uncon-tradicted. The jury assessed the damages, and judgment was entered for the plaintiff :-Held, that where the plaintiff furnishes evi-dence which the Judge thinks sufficient to support his case, the case cannot be withdrawn from the jury; the mere fact that the defendant does not call evidence to controvert the plaintiff's evidence does not conclude the matter, for the jury might refuse to credit the plaintiff, and properly find a verdict for the defendant. The Judge in this case exceeded his jurisdiction by assuming the functions of the jury; and the right to have the case submitted to the jury being an absolute statutory right, the violation of it was ground for pro-hibition. Re Lewis v. Old, 17 O. R. 610.

Proof of Claim-Necessity for-Waiver.] The plaintiff, residing within the limits of a division court in Wentworth, sued, in that court, two defendants who both resided in St. Catharines, on a cause of action which partly arose in St. Catharines. One defendant put in a notice of defence disputing the claim and the jurisdiction of the court. the trial neither defendant appeared, and the Judge gave judgment for the plaintiff without requiring any proof of the claim, in accordance, it was said, with the practice in that county :- Held, that proof of the claim should have been given; and a prohibition was or-dered with costs. Held, also, that an appli-cation for a new trial by the defendant who had given the notice was no waiver of his right to object to the jurisdiction; and that the other defendant could not prejudice such right by having given no notice of defence. In re Evans v. Sutton, S P. R. 367.

Restoration of Case to Docket — Ex-Parte tract,—When the action was called for trial the plaintiff and his agent were accidentally absent from the court, and the action was dismissed. The plaintiff afterwards obtained from the Judge an ex-parte order for the restoration of the case to the docket for trial at the next sittings. The defendant made a motion to rescind this order, which was refused, and he then applied for prohibition:— Held, that the Judge had power to dispense with notice of votion for the order; and the motion for prohibition was refused. Barrister or Attorney.]—No person except a barrister or attorney duly qualified, is entitled to prosecute or defend suits in division courts. In re Judge of County Court of York, 31 U. C. R. 267.
See, also, Kegina v. Erridge, 3 L. J. 32.

Defence — Negligence — Cross-action.]—
It is an established rule of English law that negligence or breach of duty cannot be set up as a defence in an action for the recovery of freight, where the defendant has derived a part benefit under the contract, but defendant must bring a cross-action for damages; and such rule must be taken to prevail in division courts, notwithstanding the provisions of the Division Courts Act enabling the Judge to decide according to equity and good conscience, Brown v. Muckle, 1 L. J. 298.

Defence — Splitting Cause of Action— Bart, I — An objection to splitting a cause of action should be taken as a defence or by way of motion for a prohibition and not as a bar to a subsequent action. Public School Truslecs of Section No. 9, Nottueusaga v. Township of Nottueusaga, 15 A. R. 310.

Judgment — Form of — Abandonment of Excess—Action for Balance of an Account.] — See Public School Trustees of Section No. 9, Nottawasaya v. Township of Nottawasaya, 15 A. R. 310.

Judgment—Motion to Set aside—Fraud.] See Re Nilick v. Marks, 31 O. R. 677, ante, XI, 10.

Judgment—Set-off,]—A judgment in a division court may be set off and allowed against the judgment of a superior court of record. Robinson v. Shieles, 2 C. L. J. 45.

Judgment—Time for Entry—Execution.]
—Although the defendant has fourteen days to move against a judgment in a division court, it is proper for the plaintiff to enter judgment and issue execution forthwith, unless restrained by the Judge to a future named day. The practice under rule 270, O. J. Act, is not applicable to division courts. Re Foley v. Moran, 11 P. R. 316.

Judicature Act and Rules.]—The Judicature Act and Rules in relation to procedure do not apply to division courts; and rule 330 of the supreme court of judicature applies only to the courts to which in terms it is made applicable. Bank of Ottawa v. McLaughlin, 8 A. R. 543.

Judicature Act and Rules—Examination of Witness before Trial.]—Division coart Judges may, in their discretion, apply the rules of the Judicature Act to the division courts:—Held, also, that a division court Judge had power to make an order for the examination of a witness for the defendants before a special examiner, the examination so maken to be filed according to the practice of the high court, and to be receivable in evidence saving all Just exceptions. Maence v. Ontario Bank, 3 C. L. T. 360.

Mechanics' Liens.]—Notwithstanding the apparently unlimited provisions of s. 1 of 53 Viet. c. 37 (O.), intituled an "Act to Simplify the Procedure for Enforcing Mechanics' Liens," the intention of the Act is osimplify such procedure in the high court only, leaving the procedure provided for in county courts and division courts unaffected by the passing of the Act. Secord v. Trumm, 20 O. R. 174.

Notice of Action.]—A notice of action in trespass under the Division Courts Act. C. S. U. C. c. 19, s. 193:—Held, insufficient for not stating the time and place of the alleged trespass. There is no substantial difference in this respect between the form of notice required under that Act and under C. S. U. C. c. 126. Moore v. Gidley, 32 U. C. R. 233.

Payment into Court — Nonsuit—Division Court Rule 130—Impounding Money for Defendant's Costs.]—See Oakes v. Morgan, 8 C. L. J. 248.

Payment into Court—Tort—Continuade of Action—Rights of Parties.]—In a division court action for a tort, money paid into court by a defendant in alleged satisfaction of the plaintiff's, claim, at once becomes the plaintiff's, but if he proceed with the action it must, under rule 170, remain in court until after judgment is given in the action, when any costs awarded the defendant, after the payment in, must be deducted therefrom. Where, therefore, after payment into court by a defendant of a sum of money in alleged satisfaction of the plaintiff's claim and costs, the plaintiff proceeded with the action, and judgment was given in the defendant is favour, an order made by the Judge directing the sum so paid in to be paid out to the defendant, was set aside, and the amount directed to be paid out to the plaintiff after deducting the costs awarded to the detendant. O'Neil v. Hobbs, 29 O. R. 487.

Payment into Court by Garnishees— Effect of — Judgment — Subsequent Action— Costs of.]—See Pickard v. Tims, 19 P. R. 109.

Pleading—Action Removed into Supertor Court.]—A claim in a division court for $40, for "detection or plaintiff by defendants on a journey from Toronto to Detroit and back the journey occurring between 28th November, when he started from Toronto, and 3rd December, when he got back)," was removed by certioary into the Queen's bench, where the declaration was in contract for $500 for delaying the plaintiff in his journey, in not starting the train at the time named. An application to set aside the declaration was refused, the two claims being held sufficiently similar, considering the want of technicality in division court pleadings. Hunter v. Grand Trank R. W. Co., 6 P. R. 67.

Promissory Note — Default Judgment — Production of Note, |—In a suit in a division court upon a negotiable instrument, where the summons is specially indorsed, and defendant does not dispute the claim, the plaintiff is entitled to enter judgment for the amount claimed, without the production or filing of such instrument. In re Drinkwater v. Clarridge, 8 P. R. 504.

Promissory Note — Lost Note — Indemnity.]—The non-filing of a bond of indemnity for a lost note is a matter of practice, and is not a ground for prohibition. Prohibition to a division court refused. Re McGolrick v. Ryall, 25 O. R. 435.

Promissory Note — Presentment.]—Semble, that a recovery should not be allowed in a division court against an indorser of a note, without proving presentment or notice. Siddall v. Gibson, 17 U. C. R. 98.

Removal into Superior Court — Stage of Proceedings.] — Held, that the Imperial statute 43 Eliz. c. 5, as to removal of causes by certiorari, applies to cases in division courts where a jury is empannelled by the Judge, and a verdict rendered before delivery of the writ of certiorari to the Judge. Semble, that the Act in spirit applies to cases where the plaintiff's witnesses are sworm, although no jury is called. Black v. Wesley, 8 L. J. 277.

Statutes — Regulating Procedure — Jurisdiction.]—Statutes regulating the practice and procedure of a court apply only to matters within its jurisdiction, and cannot be called in aid to give jurisdiction where it is in question. Ahrens v. McGilligat, 23 C. P. 171.

Style of Cause — Firm Name — Amendment.]—See Lang v. Thompson, 16 P. R. 516, post Partnership.

XIV. PROHIBITION.

1. Application for.

(a) Affidacits and Papers, Intituling.

Divisions of High Court—Amendment.]
Where a defendant, upon being sued in a division court, filed a notice dispating the jurisdiction and served a notice of motion for probibition to the division court, on the ground oi want of jurisdiction, but did not intitule his notice of motion, nor the affidavit filed in support of the motion, in any division of the high court of justice:—Held, not a fatal objection, but one which could and should be amended under Rule 474, O. J. Act. Re Olmstead v. Errington, 11 P. R. 366.

Style of Court and Cause.]—See Siddall v. Gibson, 17 U. C. R. 98; In re Miron v. McCabe, 4 P. R. 171; In re Burrowes, 18 C. P. 493.

(b) Costs of Application.

When Awarded — Discretion.] — By R. S. O. 1877 c. 52, s. 2. a successful party on application for a writ of prohibition is entitled to and should be awarded costs, unless the court in the proper exercise of a wise discretion can see good cause for depricing such party of them; and such party should not be deprived of costs unless there appear impropricy of conduct which induced the Hitgation, or impropriety in the conduct thereof. Under the circumstances of this case, reported 12 P. R. 450, the defendant was allowed costs of a successful motion for prohibition to a division court. Re McLeod v. Emigh (2), 12 P. R. 503.

See, also, Archibald v. Bushey, 7 P. R. 304; Robertson v. Cornwell, 7 P. R. 297; Kinsey v. Roche, 8 P. R. 515; Friendly v. Needler, 10 P. R. 267; Re Olmstead v. Errington, 11 P. R. 366.

(c) Forum.

Judge in Chambers.]—See In re Kemp v. Owen, 10 L. J. 269.

(d) Time for Application.

Upon proceedings being taken in a division court in an action in which that court has not jurisdiction, the defendant is entitled to prohibition immediately upon the action being brought, and the fact of no notice of statutory defence being given under s. 92 of R. S. O. 1877 c. 47, does not affect the defendant's right to prohibition. In re Summerfeldt v. Worts, 12 O. R. 48.

If the right to prohibition exists, it is optional with the defendant to apply at the outset of the division court proceedings, or he may wait till the latest stage of appeal so long as there is anything to prohibit. In re Brazill v. Johns, 24 O. R. 209.

See Re Olmstead v. Errington, 11 P. R. 366.

2. Error in Law.

Attachment of Debts—Superseding by Assignment for Creditors.]—After the recovery of judgment in a division court against the primary debtor and garnishee, but before the payment of the amount re-overed, the debtor made an assignment for the benefit of creditors under R.S. O. 1897 c. 147, whereupon an application was made by the assignee to the division court Judge for an order under s. 200 of R. S. O. 1897 c. 09, discharging the debt from the attachment, upon the ground that it had been superseded by the assignment, which was refused :—Held, that the matter being one within the jurisdiction of the Judge, prohibition would not lie. In re Dyer v. Evans, 30 O. R. 637.

Interpretation of Statute—Employee.]
—The determination by a division court Judge of the question, depending upon the construction of certain statutes, whether a medical health officer of a city was an employee within the meaning of R. S. O. 1877 c. 47, s. 125, is reviewable on a motion for prohibition. In re
Mache v. Hutchinson, 12 P. R. 41, 167.

Interpretation of Statute - Husband and Wife—Magistrate's Order for Payment of Maintenance Money.]—Where new rights are given by a statute with specific remedies for given by a statute with specific rememes for their enforcement, the remedy is confined to those specifically given. And where a wife obtained a magistrate's order under 51 Vict, c, 23, s, 2 (O.), for payment by her husband of a weekly sum for her support:—Held, that her remedies were limited to those given by the statute, and that an action in the division court for arrears of payments under the order could not be maintained against the husband, The facts not being in dispute, prohibition to the division court was granted on the ground that the Judge in that court had given an erroneous interpretation to the Act referred to in holding that the magistrate's order was equivalent to the final judgment of a court and that an action upon it would lie. Re Sims v. Kelly, 20 O. R. 291.

Interpretation of Statute — Juriscotion.]—Prohibition will not lie to a division court merely because the Judge has cred in his construction of a statute, when he does not by this error in construction is considered in the possess. Judgment in 19 O. R. 487 reversed. In reLong Point Co. v. Anderson, 18 A. R. 401.

See Siddall v. Gibson, 17 U. C. R. 98.

3. Excessive Amount.

Interest—Prohibition quousque,]—Where a division court has jurisdiction at the time of the institution of an action, but, by the addition of interest accruing during its pendency, judgment is given for an amount beyond the jurisdiction of the court, prohibition will be granted until the Judge amends the judgment by striking out the excess; or a partial prohibition will be issued to prevent the enforcement of judgment for the excess. Re Elliott v. Biette, 21 O. R. 595.

Interest—Prohibition quousque — Undertaking.] — Judgment was recovered in a division court for $108.63, being $100 balance due and $8.63 interest on a document signed by defendants, namely: "To G. T., we hereby undertake to pay the executors of the late J. D. K., the sum of 8375 on a mortgage they hold against the Royal Hotel property, Streetsville, thereby reducing the amount to 82 000."

sille, thereby reducing the amount to $2,000."

—Held, that the document, even if a note, under s, $2 of the Bills of Exchange Act, 53 Vict, c, 33 (D), which was doubtful, only entered to the benefit of the executors and not to 6. T.; and therefore, the action being merely for breach of contract, the judgment was in excess of the jurisdiction, which is limited to $100, but that prohibition would only go for the excess. Trimble v. Miller, $2 O. R. 500.

Interest — Prohibition quousque — Secerable (Dain.) — The summons in a division court plaint stated the plaintiffs' claim to be $190.73, the amount of an account with interest:—Held, that the amount claimed was beyond the jurisdiction of the division court, as defined by s. 70, s.-s. (1), cl. (b), of R. S. O. 1887 c. 51; but, as the claim for interest was severable, the prohibition should be limited to the excess over $100. Trimble v. Miller, 22 O. R. 500, followed. Re Lott v. Cameron, 29 O. R. 70.

Right of Judge to Amend by Striking off Excess. —Where a claim for an account beyond the jurisdiction of the division court is brought in that court, the Judge at the trial has no power to strike out the excess so as to bring the amount within the jurisdiction. Cleveland Press v. Fleming, 24 O. R. 335.

See ante, XI. 1.

4. Irregularity in Procedure,

Effect of.]—Where the Jadge has jurisdiction over the subject-matter of the suit, prohibition will not go for irregularities in mere matters of practice. In re McLean v. McLead, 5 P. R. 467.

Filing Affidavit.]—The transgression of a rule of practice (requiring the filing of an affidavit within a certain time) forms no ground for a motion for prohibition. Fee v. McHarage, 9 P. R. 329.

Revivor—Absence of Notice.]—A motion for prohibition to a division court, on the ground that the action was revived by the administrator of the plaintiff without serving a summons or notice on the defendant, as required by the division court rules, was refused, the irregularity complained of being a mere matter of practice, and therefore not reviewable in prohibition. Re McKay v. Palmer, 12 P. R. 219.

Summons—Issue in Blank,]—The issue by the clerk of a division court of a summons with a blank for the name of a party, which is afterwards filled up by the bailiff pursuant to the clerk's instructions, though contrary to the provisions of s. 44 of the Division Courts Act, R. S. O. 1887 c. 51, does not affect the jurisdiction of the division court, nor afford ground for prohibition, but is a matter of practice or procedure to be dealt with by the Judge in the division court. Re Gerov v. Hople, 28 O. R. 405.

See Zaritz v. Mann, 16 C. L. J. 144.

5. Questions of Fact.

Agency.]—On an application for a prohibition to a division court after judgment and execution, where the question of jurisdiction depends upon disputed facts—as in this case, upon whether the person by whom the bargain sued upon was made, acted as plaintiff's or defendant's agent—if the division court Judge has decided this question on evidence, and found in favour of his jurisdiction, the court will not interfere with his finding; but here, there having been no such decision, and the want of jurisdiction being clear upon the affidavits filed, a prohibition was granted. Stephens v. Laplante, S P. R. 52.

Corporation—Existence of, 1—Motion for prohibition to a division court on the ground that the Western Fair Association did not exist in fact or in law, and could have no title to the grand stand in dispute, and therefore the court had no jurisdiction to enforce the judgment in the suit:—Held, that the question of corporation or no corporation was one of fact, and that the decision thereon was not reviewable in prohibition. Re Western Fair Association v. Hutchinson, 12 P. R. 40.

Fixtare or Chattel. |—The plaintiff sued in a division court for the conversion of a mirror, which the defendant contended was annexed to the freehold and had passed to him therewith. The Judge in the division court found that the mirror was a chattel, and gave judgment for the plaintiff:—Held, that, the Judge having found as a fact that the mirror was a chattel, his decision should not be interfered with by way of prohibition. Re Bushell v. Moss, 11 P. R. 251.

Money Handed by Prisoner to Constants—Attachment.]—The defendant was arrested, and when taken to the police station handed over the money in his possession to a constable. Creditors of the defendant sought to gatalish this money by division court suits. The Judge in the division court found that the money was handed over voluntarily, and determined that it could be garnished:—Held, that the question whether the garnishee was indebted to the defendant was a question of fact within the jurisdiction of the inferior court, and that prohibition would not lie, Re Field v. Rice, Re Ford v. Rice, 20 O. R. 309.

See In re Jenkins v. Miller, 10 P. R. 95 (ante XI, 2); In re Sebert v. Hodgson, 32 O. R. 157 (ante XI, 10).

6. Reservation of Judgment.

Day Named—Judgment not Given till a Later Day—Acquiescence.]—Where a Judge in an action in a division court has pronounced a judgment otherwise than in accordance with the directions of s. 144 of the Division Courts Act, R. S. O. 1887 c. 51, such judgment can, upon motion for prohibition, be sustained only upon clear and satisfactory evidence that the party complaining has agreed in advance to the adoption of the course which the Judge has actually adopted in delivering his judgment, or that he has subsequently acted in such a manner as to waive his right to complain. And where at the trial of an action in a division court judgment was postponed till a named day, but was not then given, and two subsequent days were successively named by the Judge, but judgment was not actually given till three days later than the latest day named; and, upon motion for prohibition, it was not shewn that the party moving had ever agreed that the judgment might be given without previously naming a day for its delivery, and had not acted so as to waive his right to complain, an order was made prohibiing the enforcement of the judgment. Re Wilson v. Hatton, 23 O. R. 20.

Day not Named—Absence of Notice.]— Prohibition will lie to restrain proceedings under a judgment delivered without the notice required by 8, 144 of the Division Courts Act, R. 8, 0, 1887 c, 51. In re Tipling v, Cole, 21 O. R. 276, approved. Judgment in 22 O. R. 568 affirmed. In re Forbes v, Michigan Central R. W. Co., In re Murphy v, Michigan Central R. W. Co., 20 A. R. 584.

Day not Named—Garnishee Summons.]—Section 144 of the Division Courts Act, R. S. O. 1887 c. 51, which provides that when a Judge reserves judgment he shall name a subsequent day and hour for the delivery thereof, applies as well to the Judge's decision upon the hearing of a garnishee summons as to his decision in any other case, and must be strictly compiled with. Where a division court Judge reserved judgment, indorsing the summons "judgment reserved iff," but did not name a subsequent day and hour for the delivery thereof, nor adjourn the trial, prohibition was granted to restrain further proceedings, no nequiescence being shewn on the part of the applicants. Re Tipling v. Colc, 21 O. R. 276.

Day not Named-Notice-Acquiescence.] The division court Judge, all parties being present and not objecting, postponed the deli-very of his judgment without naming a day or hour for delivery thereof. On the following day the Judge sent his written judgment to the clerk of the court, who within three days notified the parties. The defendants at-tended and perused the judgment, and neglected to move for a new trial until after execution had been issued, when they applied to set aside the judgment, and this being refused, an application was made for a prohibition: Held, that, even if the Judge had exceeded his jurisdiction in making such postponement, defendants were not entitled to a prohibition, as there was no want of jurisdiction apparent on the face of the proceedings, and defendants had acquiesced in the course taken by the Judge. Re Smart and O'Reilly, 7 P. R. 364.

Day not Named—Prejudice—Waiter.]— The fact that a division court Judge has reserved judgment without fixing a day and time for the delivery thereof, is only ground for prohibition when the party applying has been prejudiced thereby, and has not consented to the course adopted, and has not subsequently waived the objection. Re Bank of Ottawa v. Wade, 21 O. R. 486.

Hour not Named—Judgment before Day Named—Notice, 1—Where a district court Judge, at the close of the hearing of a cause, said he would take time to consider, and deliver judgment at his chambers on a subsequent day, without naming an hour, and before that day sent a written judgment to the clerk of the court, who read it in his office to the agents of both parties on that day:— Held, a sufficient delivery of a written judgment within s. 106 of the Division Courts Act. In re Burrowes, 18 C. P. 493.

Hour not Named—Knowledge—Acquies-cence.]—Where a division court Judge reserved judgment, but did not adjourn the trial, and indorsed on the summons. "judgment in a week," not naming any hour, and on the day named delivered judgment, which was brought to the defendant's knowledge, whereupon he moved on the merits for a new trial, or to set aside the judgment, which was refused, otherwise acquiescing in the judgment, prohibition was refused. Re McPherson v. McPhee, 21 O. R. 280 (n.) Affirmed, 21 O. R. 411.

See In re Moore v. Farquhar, 15 C. L. T. Occ. N. 103 (ante, XII.)

7. Waiver or Acquiescence.

Defence not Set up Below—Coverture.]—Where the defence of coverture is not set up in the division court, a married woman defendant cannot have prohibition on the ground of coverture. Read v. Wedge, 20 U. C. R. 456.

Motion for New Trial-Delay.]-The plaintiff sued defendant in the division court in a county in which he did not reside, and in which the cause of action did not arise. Defendant filed a notice disputing the claim, but he was not represented at the trial, as the agent employed by him was not in court when the case was called on, and judgment was given for the plaintiff. Defendant applied to the Judge of the division court for a new trial, on the grounds (1) that the suit was not entered in the proper court, and (2) that before action he paid the claim. A new trial was granted upon payment of costs by a given day, which were not paid, and defendant applied, after the day appointed for payment, for a prohibition :- Held, that the defendant was entitled to a prohibition; but, as he had applied to the division court Judge for a new trial, and in view of the delay, he was refused his costs of the application. Semble, that when an action is brought in a division court in which neither the cause of action arose nor the defendant resides, and proceeds to judgment with the defendant's acquiescence, his right to move afterwards for a prohibition is gone. Robertson v. Cornwell, 7 P. R. 297.

Motion for New Trial—Paying Moncy into Untri.—The defendant in an action in the 1st division court in the county of York, brought upon a promissory note dated at Toronto, but actually made at Wiarton, filed a notice disputing the jurisdiction. Judgment, however, was given in the action against him in his absence, and he moved for and obtained a new trial, paying the money into court as a condition, and afterwards applied for an order of transference, which was refused. Before the new trial he applied for a prohibition:—Held, that by moving for a new trial and paying the money into court, the defendant had not waived his right, and the want of jurisdiction being clear, prohibition should be granted. In re Brazill v. Johns, 24 O. R. 209.

Motion to Set aside Judgment.]— Held, that an application by the defendant to the inferior court to set aside the judgment was not a bar to the motion for prohibition:
—Semble, it was a convenient practice to move in the inferior court. Decision in 13 P. R. 228 reversed. Re McGregor v. Norton, 13 P. R. 223.

Non-Disclosure of Want of Jurisdiction in Court below. | - Where the cour has jurisdiction, except from the existence of undisclosed facts within the knowledge of the defendant, who allows the court to proceed to judgment without disclosing the want of jurisdiction, the interference of the court by pro-hibition is discretionary. Where in a suit hibition is discretionary. in the division court a new trial was applied for and refused on the merits, no objection being taken to the jurisdiction, and an appli-cation was afterwards made for a prohibition, on the ground that the note was not made nor did the defendants reside in the county in which the action was brought: that defendants were not entitled to a prohibition; but, as the plaintiff knew that defendants did not reside within the jurisdiction, it was refused without costs. Archibald v. Bushey, 7 P. R. 304.

Prima Facte Jurisdiction — Defendant and Appearing at Trial—Delay, 1—A defendant entered a notice disputing the plaintiff's claim in a division court suit, and objecting to the jurisdiction of the court, but did not appear at the trial, when the Judge, upon proof of the plaintiff's claim, and such facts as in the absence of proof to the contrary established a prima frace case of jurisdiction, entered a judgment in favour of the plaintiff for $44.75. On motion for prohibition on the ground of want of jurisdiction:—Held, following Archibald v. Bushey, 7. P. R. 394, that the granting of prohibition under the circumstances was discretionary; that it would be unfair to place upon the Judge trying the case, the burden of cross-examining the witnesses to ascertain jurisdiction; that if a prima facie case of jurisdiction is made out, the defendant is himself to blame if it is not displaced; and, as neither a good defence on the merits was shewn, nor despatch used in making the application, the motion was refused with costs. Friendly v. Needler, 10 P. R. 267.

Submitting Questions to Jury without Objection. —In a division court action for the price of goods sold, the Judge, without objection taken, submitted questions to the jury, and on their answers entered a verdict and judgment for the plaintiff after the defendant had, however, put in a written argument in his own favour:—Held, on motion for prohibition, on the ground that the defendant was entitled to a general verdict of the jury, and that the Judge had no right to submit questions and enter a verdict on them, that, however this might be, the defendant had so acquiesced in the course taken as to debar him from obtaining prohibition. In re Jones v. Julian, 28 O. R. 601.

Taking Chances at Trial.]—An applicant for prohibition against a Judge of a division court for excess of jurisdiction, who has appeared at the trial, cross-examined witnesses, argued the case before the Judge, and taken no exception at the time to the jurisdiction, is precluded by his own act from objecting to the jurisdiction after judgment entered and execution issued in the division court. In re Burroces, 18 C. P. 493.

8. Other Cases.

Appeal from Division Court—Prohibition pending Appeal, 1—No case exists for prohibition to a division court pending an appeal from that court to the court of appeal under 43 Vict. c. 8 (O.) Wiltsey v. Ward, 9 F. R. 216.

Enforcement of Committal Order.]—See Re Dowler v. Duffy, 29 O. R. 40 (ante, X.)

Nature of Claim—Summons.]—The nature of the claim, as appearing on the summons, is the claim recognizable on a motion for prohibition. Meek v. Scobell, 4 O. R. 553.

Refusal of Evidence.]—The refusal of evidence is not ground for probibition. An order having been made in a division court upon judgment summons committing a defendant under s. 240, s.s. 4 (e), of R. S. O. 1887 c. 51. for having made away with his property, it is not ground for probibition that the Judge has refused to allow the defendant under examination to make explanations as to his dealings with money lent by and repaid to him after judgment. Re Reid v, Graham, 25 O. R. 573. Reversed on another point, 26 O. R. 126.

Repayment to Garnishee. |—If necessary, the writ of prohibition should go to compel the repayment to the garnishee of money paid by him into the division court. Re Johnston v. Therrien, 12 P. R. 442.

XV. TRANSCRIPT OF JUDGMENT.

To Another Division Court—Effect of— Prohibition to Original Court.].—The defendant filed a notice disputing the claim and the jurisdiction of a division court in Middlesex, but did not appear at the trial, and judgment was given against him. Subsequently a transcript of the judgment was transmitted to a division court in Simcoe:—Held, that the judgment did not thereby become a judgment of the Simcoe court, and prohibition to the Middlesex court was granted after such transmission. Re Elliott V, Norris, 17 O. R. 78.

To County Court—Effect of—Examination of Judgment Debtor—Ca, Sa.]—A transcript of judgment in the division court for $63, having been filed in the county court:—Held, that it thereby became a judgment of the county court, so that under C. S. U. C.

c. 24, s. 41, defendant could be examined under it. 2. That under s. 41 a ca. sa, might be issued by the Judge for unsatisfactory answers, though the judgment was for less than $100. This section is to be read as independent of s. 12, and the ca. sa, under it being issued by the Judge, and not by the plaintiff, there is no limit as to the sum. Kehoe v. Brozen, 13 C. P. 549.

To County Court—Effect of—Form of Transcript—Judgment Summons,]—A transcript may be validly issued from a division court to the county court notwithstanding the pendency in the division court of proceedings by way of judgment summons, but, as soon as the transcript is issued and filled, the judgment becomes a judgment of the county court, and the judgment summons proceedings cannot be continued. The form of a transcript considered. Ryan v. McCartney, 19 A. R. 423.

To County Court—Necessity for Return of Execution.]—Held, under C. S. U. C. c. 19, s. 142, that a transcript omitting to state the issue and return of a fi. fa. goods was a nullity, and therefore that a fi. fa. lands could not issue thereon. Farr v. Robins, 12 C. P. 35.

To County Court—Necessity to State Pracecdings in Division Court,—Upon ejectment for land which had been sold and conveyed by the sheriff under a ven. ex. issued upon a county court judgment, the sale was held void, inasmuch as the transcript of the judgment from the division court did not conform to the requirement of s. 142 of the Division Courts Act, by stating the proceedings in the cause in the court below. Jacomb v. Henry, 13 C. P. 377.

To County Court—Necessity to State Proceedings in Division Court—Attachment.]—
Ejectment having been brought for land sold and conveyed by the sheriff to the plaintiff under a writ of ven. ex. issued upon a county court judgment, based upon a division court judgment, recovered on proceedings commenced by attachment and summons issued the same day:—Held, that the sale under the ven, ex. was void, by reason of the transcript of the judgment from the division court not having shewn that the proceedings in that court were commenced by attachment. Hope v. Graves, 14 C. P. 393.

To County Court—Necessity for Return of Execution, —Under the Division Courts Act, C. S. U. C. c. 19, ss. 142, 143, 145, an execution against goods and chattels must first issue out of the division court in which judgment was originally recovered, and be returned nulla bona, before a transcript of the judgment can be transmitted and filed in a county court. Where, therefore, without the issue of such execution and its return nulla bona, a transcript was filed in the county court, under which plaintiff's lands were seized by the sheriff and sold:—Held, that the sale was void. Burgess v. Tully, 24 C. P. 549.

To County Court—Necessity for Return of Execution.—Nullity.]—Where a judgment was obtained in a division court in one county, and, without execution being issued theron, a transcript was issued to a division court in another county and an execution issued thereon and returned nulla bona, and a transcript then obtained to the county court of the latter county:—Held, that the so-called judgment of the county court upon the transcript was a nullity, since the transcript did not shew the return to the writ in the original division court, as required by R. S. O. 1887, c. 51, s. 223. Jones v. Paxton, 27 C. L. J. 596.

See the next case.

To County Court—Previous Transcript to Another Division Courts Act, R. S. O. 1887 c. 51, and rules, the Issue of execution and return of nulla bona in a foreign division court, to which a transcript has previously been sent, is a sufficient foundation for a transcript from the home court to the county court under s. 223 et seq. of that Act. Burgess v. Tully, 24 C. P. 549, distinguished. A transcript to a county court is not a proceeding within the purview of s. 24 of 52 Vict. c. 12 (O.), providing that no further proceedings shall be had in a division court after a transcript to another division court, without an order or affidavit. Jones v. Paston, 19 A. R. 163.

To District Court — Fi. Fa. Goods—Fi. Fa. Lands—Sale under.]—Upon a transcript from a division court to a district court, it is not necessary to issue a fi. fa. goods from such district court before a valid sale can take place under a fi. fa. lands issued therefrom. Kehoe v. Brown, 13 C. P. 549, observed upon. Daby v. Gehl, 18 O. R. 132.

Pleading — Removal of Action into Superior Court—Departure.]—A claim in a division court for 840 for "detention of plaintiff by defendants on a journey from Toronto to Detroit and back (journey occurring between 28th November, when he started from Toronto, and 3rd December, when he got back," was removed by certiorari into the Queen's bench, where the declaration was on contract for $500 for delaying the plaintiff in his journey, in not starting the train at the time named. An application to set aside the declaration was refused, the two claims being held sufficiently similar considering the want of technicality in division court pleadings. Hunter v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 6 P. R. 67.

Promissory Note — scieure under Division Court Execution—Action on, in Superior Court—Real Plaintiff, 1—In any action on a note payable to plaintiff or bearer, brought in the name of the plaintiff, under the Division Courts Act, C. S. U. C. c. 19, s. 152, by a person who had obtained execution against him in that court, defendants pleaded, among other pleas, that the plaintiff was not the legal holder. It appeared that the note had been seized by the bailiff in the hands of one T., to whom the plaintiff had handed it for collection:—Held, that it was not indispensable that the declaration should shew the suit to be brought under the statute, but that defendants were entitled to succeed on the plea, for the plaintiff was not in fact the holder, and to entitle the real plaintiff to shew his right under the statute to sue in the name of the moninal plaintiff, the facts should have been specially replied. It is safer in such actions to aver and prove a judgment to support the execution, but semble, that it is not essential. The real plaintiff need not shew upon the trial that security for costs has been given as required by s. 164. If not given, defendants may move to stay proceedings, or perhaps may plead it in bar of the action, Quaere, as to the meaning of that clause in the sature. Methonald v. Methonald, 21 U. C. R.

Assessment—Change of Domicile—Intention.1—By the St. John City Assessment Act (53) Vict. c, 6(1), s. 2. "for the purposes of assessment, any person having his home or domicile, or carrying on business, or having D—65 any office or place of business, or any occupation, employment, or profession, within the city of St. John, shall be deemed * * an inhabitant and resident of the said city." J. carried on business in St. John as a brewer up to 1893, when he sold the brewery to three of his sons and conveyed his house and furniture to his adult children in trust for them all. He then went to New York, where he carried on the business of buying and selling stocks and securities, having offices for such business, and living at a hotel, paying for a room in the latter only when occupied. ing the next four years he spent about four months in each at St. John, visiting his children and taking recreation. He had no business interests there, but attended meetings of the directors of the Bank of New Brunswick during his yearly visits. He was never personally taxed in New York, and took no part in municipal matters there. Being assessed in 1897 on personal property in St. John, he appealed against the assessment unsuccessfully, and then applied for a writ of certiorari with a view to having it quashed:—Held, that, as there had been a long continued actual residence by J. in New York, and as on his appeal against the assessment he had avowed his bonà fide intention of making it his home permanently, or at least for an indefinite time, and his determination not to return to St. John to reside, he had acquired a new home or domicile, and that in St. John had been abandoned within the meaning of the Act. Jones v. City of St. John, 30 S. C. R. 122.

Husband and Wife—tlimony.]— The writ of ne exeat granted after filing a bill in an allimony suit, remains in force after decree; and it is no objection that the wife resides out of the jurisdiction, as during coverture the domicile of the husband is the domicile of the wife. McDonald v. McDonald v, L. J. 66, Husband and Wife — Alimony.] — A woman left her husband in consequence of disagreements, without any threats of personal violence, or any well founded apprehension on her part of violence; and the husband expressed his readiness and willingness to take her heck. The wife failed to return, however, and the husband left this Province and went to reside permanently in the United States. The wife, without any communication with her husband, or any intimation of a desire on her part to renew their marital relations, and without any offer to live with him, or any expression of willingness to do so, filed a bill for alimony on the ground of desertion:—Held, that, in the absence of an offer on her part to return to her husband, and a refusal by him to receive her back, she was not in a position to claim alimony; that the domicile of her husband was her domicile also, and that his being resident in the United States afforded no ground for dispensing with an offer by her to return to and live with her husband, it not appearing that she was ignorant of his place of residence. Edwards v. Edwards, 20 Gr. 332.

Intestate's Domicile—Administration— Foreigner—Surrogate Court.]—The law of England as to granting probate or committing letters of administration, is the law to be administered by our probate and surrogate courts. Where a person domiciled in the state of New York died suddenly in timere, in the county of Wentworth, in this Province, having triding personal effects about him of less value than 15:—Held, that the surrogate court of Wentworth had jurisdiction to grant administration of his effects. Such administration should be granted by the surrogate court only to an inhabitant of the Province, Grant v. Great Western R. W. Co., 7 C. P. 438. Alfirmed, 5 L. J. 210.

Parents' Domicile—Custody of Child.] -The parents of a child were foreigners. They lived apart, and had brought cross-actions for divorce in the United States courts, the husband complaining of adultery, and the wife of cruelty. The child was placed by the father in custody of a person in Canada. The mother applied to have the child delivered up to her, on the ground that by the law of the state of Michigan she was entitled, when living apart from her husband, to the custody of the child until it should arrive at the age of twelve, subject, however, to the right of the court to interfere with and remove it for cause assigned. An ex parte order had been made in April, 1875, in the wife's divorce suit, in her April, 1875, in the wires divorce sur, in ner-favour, directing the father to give up the child to her. In July, 1874, the wife had given a formal document to her husband renouncing all claim to the custody of the child:—Held, that the parents being foreigners, and the domicile of the child not having, under the circumstances, been changed, the law of the state of Michigan must govern; but that the order in favour of the wife being ex parte, and the foreign judgment not being conclusive (23 Vict. c. 24), it was competent to consider the "cause assigned" by the father; and so it was "cause assigned by the father; and so it was held (especially in view that the divorce suits would be tried in a few weeks' time, and so settle the merits of the case), that the mother, having voluntarily given up the custody of the child to the father, could not, under the present facts, have it re-delivered to her. Admission of Title - Jurisdiction of Court of Chancery—Demand.]—The plaintiff filed a bill for dower. Defendant admitted her title, but submitted that the proper remedy was at common law under the Dower Act of Ontario, and claimed the same benefit of that objection as if he had demurred:—Held, that the jurisdiction of the court of chancery in cases of dower had not been ousted by that statute; and that the defendant was properly made to pay costs up to and inclusive of the made to pay costs up to and inclusive of the hearing:—Held, also, that under the existing law no demand is necessary before suit. Grieve v. Woodruff, 1 A. R. 617.

Default Judgment.] — See Gourlay v. Gourlay, 27 U. C. R. 178.

Default Judgment-Demand. |- In dowof Service.)—Judgment was signed in default tion, and judgment allowed to go by default, costs may be recovered. Harris v. Morden, 17 U. C. R. 278; Street v. Rowe, 8 C. P. 213

Default Judgment - Demand-Affidavit of Service.]-Quære, when the tenant does not plead, so that there is no trial, whether the right to costs cannot be shewn by producing the demand and affidavit of service before the master on taxation. Scratch v. Jackson, 26 U. C. R. 189.

Default Judgment - Demand - Affidavit of Service.]—Judgment was signed in default of plea to a declaration which averred a demand of dower one month before action, and that the action was brought in less than one year from such demand; but no affidavit of service of the demand was produced to the master on taxation. An offer to assign dower was made before action brought:—Held, that the defendant was entitled to costs, and that the judgment was regular. Gilleland v. Reid, 5 P. R. 96.

Security for Costs.] - See Nolan v. Reid,

Unsuccessful Claim - Will-Extrinsic Evidence. |--Where a widow insisted on her right to dower as well as to the bequests made the will, the court allowed her her costs, although unsuccessful in such contention: the question having arisen from the terms of the will, and dower not having been in terms ex-cluded, but having been held to be excluded on extrinsic evidence. Becker v. Hammond, 12 Gr. 485.

Unreasonable Defence.]-If the bill is simply for dower, and the title is admitted, no costs will be given, but when the defendant makes an unreasonable defence and fails, he will be made to pay costs. Craig v. Tentpleton, 8 Gr. 483.

- (a) Amount and Mode of Estimating Damages.

Detention. 1 — The mode of estimating damages for the detention of dower is provided for by 32 Viet. c. 7, s. 21 (O.) See Norton v. Smith, 20 U. C. R. 213 (affirmed, 7 L. J. 236); Buck v. McCallum, 13 C. P. 163.

- Set-off - Mitigation.]-De-Detention mandant's residence on the premises, in the family and at the expense of the heir-at-law, for part of the time between the death of her husband and her recovering judgment, is not admissible in evidence as a set-off to her damages for the detention, though proper to go to the jury in mitigation. Robinet v. Lewis, Dra. 260.

Increase—Motion—Time.]—Motion to increase damages refused where not made until the second term after the trial. Watson v. Terwilleger, 1 U. C. R. 21.

Sale of Land—Compensation.]—In case of a sale of land, a widow is not entitled, as compensation for her dower, to the present value of one-third of the interest in the purchase money; the value is to be computed with reference to the nature of the property. Stewart v. Hunter, 2 Ch. Ch. 330.

Timber — Removal—Proceeds—Costs.]—
In case of land of which a widow is dowable, but in which her dower has not been set out, it is considered to the control of the income arising from one-third of the amount produced. In such a case the widow had reason to apprehend that the owner intended to fell the whole of the wood; it was shewn that in fact he had no such intention; but he had an opportunity of undeceiving her, and did not avail himself of it:—Held, that proof that he had not the intention imputed to him did not exempt him from liability to the costs. Farley v. Starling, 18 Gr. 378.

Time for Commencement of Damages— Demand.]—Quare, whether if a demand and refusal be pleaded and proved, damages can be computed against such a tenant from the death of the husband or only from the date of the plaintiff's demand for dower. Ryun v. Fish. 4 O. R. 335.

(b) Right to Recover-In General.

AFFEATS—Residence on Land—Waiters.]—
Where the annual value of a widow's dower was not large, and she made no demand for it, but resided on the property with her son, the heir, during his life, having no intention of claiming dower, a claim for arreas against his estate after his death was refused. Phillips v. Zimmerman, 18 Gr. 224 Claim — Absence of —Judgment—Execution.)—A writ of execution for damages and costs was set aside, damages being neither claimed on the record nor awarded in the judgment. Davis v. M'Vab. 6 O. 8. 157.

Detention — Arrears — Dover Act.]—Quiere, whether damages for detention of dower, or for arrears of dower, can be recovered under the Dower Act. Giles v. Morrow, 10, R. 527.

Detention — Demand — Refusal,] — R. brought an action for dower against E., the tenant of the freehold, who claimed title through the devisee of her husband, and indersed her writ with a claim for damages for detention of dower. F. appeared and admitted his tenancy, and R.'s right to dower: — Held, that R. might, nevertheless, go on and recover damages for the detention from and after demand for dower made by her on F. Held, also, that R. S. O. 1877 c. 55 has not taken away or diminished the right of a dowress to damages as well as messen profits, as for detention, against all persons and in all cases where they were recoverable before 10th August, 1850, Held, further, that, at all events since the O. J. Act, s. 17, s.-s. 10, a tenant of the freehold claiming as in this case, may plead that he has at all times since the beame such tenant, been ready and willing to render the plaintiff her dower, and if the plaintiff desires to avoid that plea she should reply a demand and refusal. Ryan v. Fish, 4 O. R. 335.

Husband Dying Seised or not.]—A suggestion might be entered after final judgment that the husband died seised, and an inquiry had concerning the damages since the death, although the tenant was the alience of the heir. Robinet v. Lewis, Dra. 228.

In dower neither damages nor costs can be recovered when the husband did not die seised, Dayton v. 1udjo, 60, 8, 143; Lockman v. Nesse, 50, 8, 505; Walker v. Boulton, 60, 8, 553.

The rule is the same in equity. Losee v. Armstrong, 11 Gr. 517.

Where the husband dies seised, unless the team dant pleads tout temps prist, the demandant may recover damages without setting forth or shewing a demand. Empey v. Loucks, 8 U. C. R. 374.

Action for dower—no suggestion on the record that the husband died seised, Plens, I, that the teuant is, and always has been ready to render dower; 2; tout temps prist, and a tender of dower and refusal before action brought. Replication to first plen, praying judgment of demandant's dower to be assigned to her; to second plen, a demand and refusal by tenant—the rejoinder to which was demurred to;—Held, that upon this record there could be no assessment of damages. Hawkshaw v. Hodgins, 11 U. C. R. 71.

Plea, tout temps prist. There was no averment that the husband died seised and no damages claimed, but the jury found for the plaintiff and ls. damages:—Held, that the damages must be struck out. Humphries v. Barnett, 16 U. C. R. 463.

Held, that a widow cannot recover damages for detention of dower when her husband did not die seised, even though she made demand for dower. Morgan v. Morgan, 15 O. R. 194.

Improvements — Rentable Value.]—The more fact that at the death of or alienation by the husbad bis lands were of no rentable value, is not alone sufferent to disentifie the widow to damages, if the sufference of the widow to damages, if the provided the widow to damages, if the widow to damages in the widow to damage the widow the wido

Judgment for Seisin — Effect of.1—A judgment for seisin of dower, under s. 16 of 32 Vict. c. 7 (O.), is final, and there is no provision in such a case entitling a demandant to any damages, nor any proceeding provided for ascertaining any such damages. The Statute of Merton remarked upon and distinguished. Linfoot v. Duncombe. 21 C. P. 484.

 signed against two only of three defendants, a declaration against the third for damages was held not irregular. Cameron v. Gilchrist, 7 P. R. 184.

Judgment for Seisin — No Demand tosts — Damages for Detention,]—Held, in this case, that as no demand was made, although the plaintiff was entitled to judgment of seisin, it should be without costs; and, as defendants were always ready and willing to assign dower, plaintiff was not entitled to damages for detention. Malone v. Malone, 17 O. R. 101.

(c) Demand and Offer to Assign under 13 & 1/4 Vict. c. 58 and C. S. U. C. c. 28.

The tenant pleaded tout temps prist. The demandant replied, denying the tenant's readidemandant replied, denying the tenant's read-ness to assign, and averring a demand under 13 & 14 Vict, c. 58, and a refusal. The tenant traversed the refusal. It appeared that after receiving the demand the tenant gave a written notice to demandant that he was willing to assign her dower. In pursuance of this no-tice, the tenant and the demandant's second husband met on the ground, and the tenant then offered what he considered a third, and put up tickets to mark the boundary. The busband, however, refused this, and would not say what particular portion the demandant wanted or would take. The parties then sep-arated, and the action was brought:—Held, that the offer proved was sufficient, and that a verdict was rightly found for the tenant. Draper, J., considered that 13 & 14 Vict. 58 was not intended to interfere with any right to costs existing under the old practice, or to require a demand where demandant would before have been entitled to costs with-out it: that the plea of tout temps prist admitted a right to damages from the commencement of the suit to the issuing, if not to the execution, of the writ of inquiry, without any suggestion that the husband died seised; and that on the pleadings, therefore, in the sale, the demandant might strictly have recovered such damage and consequently the costs; but the cors was not insisted on at the trial, and the verdict was just, he concurred in refusing to interfere. Bishoprick v. Pearce, 12 U. C. B. 306. See White v. Grimshawe, 23 U. C. B. 75.

There was no suggestion in the declaration that the husband died seised, and no claim for damages. The tenant pleaded tout temps prict. Replication, a demand and refusal. Rejoinder, taking issue on the refusal. It was proved that after demand served on the tenant, under 13 & 14 Vict. c. 88, s. 5, he went to demandant's attorney, and said that he was ready and willing to assign dower whenever she would come for it, to which the attorney replied that the tenant must take his own course. The jury found for demandant and by damages, and a rule having been obtained for a new trial:—Held, per Draper, J., and Burns, J., that such rule should be discharged. For Draper J., that hy pleading tout temps prist the tenant had admitted a right to daminess, at least from bringing the action, which would carry costs. For Burns, J., that the offer proved was insufficient, and in effect inhounted to a refusal, and the demandant should therefore have costs; but that there could be no damages, as the husband was not proved to have died seised. Quin v. Mc-Kibbin, 12 U. C. R. 323.

The tenant having allowed judgment to go by default, demandant entered a suggestion of demand made before action brought, to which the tenant made no answer, and a venire was awarded, on which the jury found that such demand was made:—Held, that this was a trial, within s. 5 of 13 & 14 Vict. c. 58, and therefore that demandant was entitled to costs. Anderson v. Marriott, 14 U. C. R. 161.

Plea, tout temps prist. Replication, a demand and refusal. Rejoinder, denying the refusal. There was no suggestion that the husband died seised. The evidence shewed that the tenant had frequently offered the demandant her dower, and to leave it to two persons to stake out the land, but she declined, saying that she could not work the land, and would rather have compensation, and no portion was in fact marked out:—Held, that the issue must be found for the tenant. As the husband did in fact die seised:—Semble, that that should have been suggested on the record, and the tenant would then have been entitled to damages from the suing out of the writ. and consequently to costs. Ryckman v. Ryckman, 15 U. C. R. 296.

Where nothing appears on the record to shew that a demand of dower was served:—Semble, that the master cannot tax costs; and quare as to the proper mode of shewing that a service of demand was "made appear on the trial" so as to entitle demandant to costs under 13 & 14 Vict. c. 58, s. 5. Humphries v. Barnett, 16 U. C. R. 463.

To an action of dower, alleging a demand made pursuant to the statute, C. S. U. C. c. 28, the tenants pleaded tout tennys prist. Demandant replied that she requested her dower more than one month and less than one year before action, but that the tenants did not endow her; and that the judgment for the said damages and endownent shall wait till the said issue is tried. The tenants joined issue. The evidence proved a demand, and that the tenants said demandant might have here were tenants and demandant might have here were under the control of the control

Demandant sued for dower as widow of J., alleging in her declaration that J. died seised, claiming damages from his death, and averring service of a demand of dower. There was no plea, and the demandant went down to assess damages:—Held, that the tenant had clearly a right to shew that J. had narted with his estate, and therefore did not die seised, though he could not dispute his seisin during coverture. The tenant proved a deed made in 1831, of the land in question, by J. to the tenant; and in reply the demandant proved another deed made in 1834, by J. to his father, to which the tenant was a subscribing witness:—Held, that, as either deed shewed the estate out of J. during his lifetime, it was unnecessary to consider the effect of the tenant being a subscribing witness to the second deed; and in any event, as J. could not set up the second deed to avoid the first, having made both, neither could the demandant, who claimed through him. As J., therefore, did not die seised, it was held that demandant could have only nominal damages from the time of the demand; but that she was entitled to such damages, and the tenant was not entitled to the costs of the assessment. Semble, that a demandant failing in the action is liable to costs. Scratch v. Jackson, 26 U. C. R. 189.

Demandant averred that her husband did not die seised, and a demand pursuant to the Act, and that the tenant had been during six years next before the action in occupation and receipt of the rents and profits, of the yearly value of £15: and she claimed her dower, with the profits accrued since her husband' death, and damages for the detention. The tenant pleaded that he had always been ready and willing to render dower, and before this suit, and within a month after the demand, offered it to demandant, which she refused to which the demandant replied that he had not always been ready and willing, &c., for he did not render to demandant her dower as alleged, but refused so to do. At the trial it appeared that the tenant served a written notice, naming a day and hour to meet demandant on the land and assign her dower, and attended accordingly, but demandant having mistaken the day appointed did not attend, and the tenant in consequence refused to do anything more:—Held, that on this evidence the tenant was clearly not entitled to succeed on the issue, and a verdict having been found in his favour a new trial was granted. Semble, that the demandant, having treated the plea as offered in bar of damages and costs only, should have signed judgment at once to recover seisin. Quære, as to the propriety and effect of an averment that the husband did not die seised, added to a claim of damages, the right to which, since C. S. U. C. c. 28, as well as before, depends on such seisin. Cook v. Philips, 23 U. C. R. 69.

Dower, Plea, tout temps prist, on which demandant signed judgment for her dower. She then entered a suggestion of demand and refusal, praying damages for the detention, on which she signed judgment by default, and assessed damages at the assizes:—Held, that such assessment was irregular, for there being no averment that the husband died seised, no damages could be recovered, notwithstanding the plea. Bishopriek v, Penre, 12 U. C. R. 316, commented upon. White v, Grimshauc, 23 U. C. R. 75.

The offer to assign dower required by C. S. U. C. e. 28, s. 7, to deprive demandant of costs, is proved by a bond fide offer, shewing a concession of demandant's right, and a readiness to do what is requisite to render it; it is not necessary that the land should be staked out or assigned. The issue being upon such offer, it appeared that a demand having been made under the statute, the tenant served a notice on demandant admirting her right, and appointing a day on which he would be unon the land to assign her dower. On that day no one appeared, but on the next day demandant's son and another person sent by her came, and the tenant pointed out to them a cleared field, which he said he would give, with one-third of the bush land. This was not accepted, nor did they tell the tenant what they required:—Held, that the evidence was sufficient to go to the jury, and the court refused to disturb a verdict for tenant. Remarks upon the uncertainty of the law as to dower. Bigger v. Howice, 23 U. C. R. 399.

3. Evidence.

(a) Of Marriage.

Evidence of cohabitation and reputation of marriage will be sufficient in dower; it is not necessary to prove the marriage by persons who were present at the ceremony. Stoner v. Walton, 6. O. S. 190; Phipps v. Moore, 5. U. C. R. 16; Graham v. Luv, 6. C. P. 310; Beatty v. Reatty, 17. C. P. 484; Losec v. Murray, 24 U. C. R. 586.

But where the demandant relied upon such evidence of a marriage said to have taken place in the United States, and failed, the court, under the circumstances of this case, refused a new trial. Street v. Dolsen, 14 U. C. R. 537.

And where the demandant relied upon such evidence of an alleged marriage in Ireland many years previous, and there was a second verdict for the defendant, the court refused to interfere. Lynch v. O'Hara, 6 C. P. 259, 268-9.

In this case, irrespective of general reputation, there was evidence that defendant had told a third party he was to give demandant's husband (his brother) $100 to bring out his wife and children from Scotland, and that the husband was to execute to the defendant in return a deed of the land in question. Defendant attenwards said he had received the deed, and that the wife would bar her dower on her arrival here. On her arrival, defendant received her into his house as his brother's wife, and recognized her as such until his brother's death—Held, good primâ facie evidence of marriage. Semble, that the recognition of demandant as his brother's wife would alone have been sufficient primâ facie evidence of their marriage, as against defendant in this action. Beatty v. Beatty, 17 C. P. 484.

A separation deed executed by the deceased husband, wherein he acknowledged the plaintiff as his wife, with proof of payments made to her under it, and a certified copy of registry of marriage from the parish registry in Ireland:—Held, sufficient evidence of marriage against infant defendants; the adult infants by their answer admitting the marriage. Craig v. Templeton, 8 Gr. 483.

(b) Of Scisin,

Under the plea of ne unques seizie, possession by the husband is primă facie evidence of a seisin in fee. Lockman v. Nesse, 5 O. S. 505.

But in this case it was held that merely giving evidence that the husband had been in possession of the estate, without proving his title, was insufficient. Johnson v. McGill, 6 U. C. R. 194.

Held, that the evidence stated in this case was insufficient to establish the husband's seisin: but on the affidavit filed the court granted a new trial on payment of costs. Wannacott v, Fillater, 11 U. C. R. 49.

It was proved that the tenant held under a conveyance made to the husband, and by the husband to another person. He admitted that he had both these deeds in his possession, and declined to produce them on notice:—Held, ample evidence of seisin. Matheson v. Malloch, 13 U. C. R. 354.

In dower, by the widow of M., it appeared that a patent for the land issued to one K., and a witness proved that he was one of the subscribing witnesses to K.'s will, but the will was not produced, and no evidence of its contents given. It was proved, however, that B., from whom defendants purchased, derived title through P., who had held a bond for a deed from the patentee, and that P., before he sold to B., took a quit claim from M. of all his interest in the land, execute the land only, in which will no the said M. by K., the original production of the land of the said M. by K., the original production of the land content of the land content of the land of the land content to the land of th

Dower. Pleas: 1. Ne unques seizie. 2. Ne unques accouple. 3. That demandant and her husband were both aliens born, and not naturalized before he sold. The first her had been a seize of the deeds affecting the three the burning of the deeds affecting the three presences of the demandant of the transport of the t

In an action for dower in the west half of a lot, the husband's seisin being denied, it was proved that upwards of sixty years ago his father, whose title was not shewn, died in possession, leaving the husband, his eldest son and heir-at-law. He married demandant forty-five years ago, and moved on to the east half about 1814. His brother, who had always lived with him and the mother on the west half, remained there, but knew that the husband claimed it until his death, eight years before the trial:—Held, sufficient to support a verdiet for demandant, for the husband's seisin by descent from his father was in full force when he married, and if afterwards his brother had obtained a title by possession, that could not affect demandant's right. McDonald v. McMillan, 23 U. C. R. 302.

The evidence of seisin was defendant's declaration to a third party that the husband was to convey the land in question to him, and his subsequent declaration that he had conveyed to him in fee, together with a memorial of this conveyance executed by the defendant. The husband had been also on and off the land before the conveyance: — Held, sufficient. Beatty v. Beatty, 17 C. P. 484.

(c) Other Cases.

Assignment of Dower-Title.]—Semble, that where the evidence shews that the tenants in an action of dower could have assigned dower, which would be binding upon themselves, the demandants are entitled to succeed upon the issue of non tenuerum, without any reference to the comparative goodness of their title. McClellan v. Meggott, 6 U. C. R. 551.

Contents of Title Deeds.]—A tenant in dower is not compellable to give evidence of the contents of the title deeds, &c., under which he claims. Lynch v. O'Hara, 6 C. P. 259.

Crown Patent — Registrar's Abstract — Proof by, I—Held, in an action of dower, that the production of an abstract of the registries upon a lot, shewing the granting by the Crown of a patent, was not sufficient evidence of the patent without the production of an exemplification. Quare: Is an abstract receivable in evidence at all if objected to? But under the facts stated in the case, the court refused to set aside a verdict for demandant. Reed v. Ranks, 10 C. P. 202.

Discovery of New Evidence — New Trial. |—The defendant in an action of dower plended ne unques seizie que dower, and after trial and verdiet against him remembered that a bond had been executed by himself and the demandant several years before, providing for the release of the dower in question, which bond had remained in the hands of a third party, and had not been produced at the trial. The court granted a new trial on payment of costs, with leave to add a plea. Germain v. Shuart, 7 C. P. 86,

Husband and Wife—Evidence of Wife.] In an action for dower by husband and wife, the wife is a competent witness. Cadman v. Strong, 10 U. C. R. 591.

Presumption of Death of Hasband.]—Held, that the presumption of death arising from continued absence of the defendant's husband, unheard of for seven years, is sufficient to sustain an action of dower as against the objection that he is still living. Giles v. Morroic, 1 O. R. 527.

Proof of Defendant's Tenancy. — In an action for dower in three lots of land, to prove that defendant was tenant of the free-hold, a witness stated that he had occupied one of the lots as tenant to defendant, and about ten years ago conveyed all three lots to one H., who swore that he conveyed to defendant after having occupied as owner, and built upon the land. A certified copy of the memorial of this deed was put in, notice to produce having been given to defendant:—Held, sufficient evidence to go to the jury. Fisher v. Harty, 23 U. C. R. 408.

Release—Proof of Signature.]—In an action of dower, the tenant relied upon a release by the demandant and her husband to C., from whom the tenant had afterwards purchased the land. This release was executed by the demandant by mark, her name being written by some one else, and the tenant was the only subscribing witness:—Held, that proof of the tenant's signature was not rendered admissible to prove the deed by the fact of his being a party to the record; and that, as he could not be examined on his own behalf, and offered no other evidence that the demandant must succeed. Clark v. Stevenson, 23 U. C. R. 525.

4. Parties, Defendants.

13 & 14 Vict. c, 58. —By this Act no change was made in the persons liable to an action of dower. Harris v. Stratton, 17 U. C. R, 520.

Devisees. |—M. M. made his will on the 13th April, 1888, devising his farm to his two sons, appointed the defendants his executors, and died on the 21st May, 1888. In an action executors, in which they of the state sons were the tenants of the freehold, and should be made parties, it was:—Held, that since the Devolution of Estates Act, R. S. O. 1887 e. 108, s. 4, devisees are not necessary parties to an action for dower. Malone v. Malone, 17 O. R. 101.

Executors. — Held, that the defendants, executors under the will of N. S., devising "all and every the messuages and tenements whatsoever whereof or wherein I have or an entitled to any estate of freehold or inheritance, by virtue of any mortgage or mortgages, unto and to the use of my executors (the defendants) to the intent," &c., took such an estate as to make them liable in an action for dower. Low v. Sparks, 14 C. P. 25.

Mortgagee.]—W. C. died seised in fee of the land in question, having devised the same to his wife for life, and after her death, to his son, the demandant's husband, in fee. The testator's widow, the devisee for life, died before the demandant's husband, and during her life his interest was sold under a fi. fa. azainst lands, and conveyed to one J., who having recovered possession, sold to the tenant, the no tragged lands game to the second to the tenant of the land of the tenant, who contracted have the several whether all the mortgage money had been paid or not; but the time for payment of several of the instalments had not arrived;— Held, that the demandant could not succeed, for the tenant was not tenant of the freehold, but the mortgagee. Cumming v. Alguire, 12 U. C. R. 330.

Tenant in Actual Possession.]—To a bill for equitable dower, the tenant in actual possession of the premises may be a proper though not a necessary party. McIntosh v. Wood, 15 Gr. 92.

Tenant of Preehold—Assignment of Douver-Title, I—Semble, that where the evidence shews that the tenants in an action of dower could have assigned dower, which would be binding upon themselves, the demandants are entitled to succeed upon the issue of non tenerunt, without any reference to the comparative goodness of the tenants' title. McClellan v. Mcggott, 6 U. C. R. 551.

Tenant of Freehold out of the Jurisdiction.]—Semble, that under C. S. U. C. c. 28, the tenant of the freehold can be sued only when within the jurisdiction; if out of it, then a mere occupier may be sued, but a recovery against him will not bind the right of the tenant of the freehold. Gourlay v. Gourlay, 27 U. C. R. 178.

Tenant of Receiver—Leave of Court.]

—A widow entitled to dower commenced an action therefor against a tenant to whom, without express authority, the property had been leased by a receiver in a suit in this court:—Held, that she was not at liberty to proceed in such action without the leave of the court. Coleman v. Glanville, 18 Gt. 42.

5. Pleading.

(a) Bill of Complaint.

Seisin of Husband—Contract of Sale.]—In a bill for dower, the plaintiff alleged that her busband was in his lifetime, at the time for making his last will, seised or entitled time of making his last will, seised or entitled the bill, but so in an another part of the bill, but the husband had in his lifetime contracted for the sale of the premises, out of which the dower was sought:—Held, bad, on demurrer, it nowhere appearing that the husband had been seised during coverture, or that the contract of sale had not been entered into before marriage. Gordon v. Gordon, 10 Gr. 466.

Statute of Limitations — Pleading.]—
In a hill seeking to obtain the benefit of a sale of land freed from the dower of the widow of the deceased owner, it was alleged that he had died at such a time as would, if true, bar the widow's right to dower, and submitted "that the defendant E. B. (the widow) is not entitled to dower: "—Held, a sufficient allegation that the defendant's right to dower was barred by the statute, though it omitted to state that this was the legal result of any particular statute. Banks v. Bellamy, 27 Gr. 342.

(b) Declaration.

Demand—Allegation of Service.]—Semble, under C. S. U. C. c. 28, that averments of the service of demand, and that the husband died seised, should not be inserted in the declaration, but suggested afterwards; and being irrevelant to the right of action, if so alleged, they are not admitted by not being traversed. Serateh v. Jackson, 26 U. C. R. 189.

Semble, that the declaration is a proper, though perhaps not the necessary place, for averring the necessary demand of dower, under C. S. U. C. c. 28, and where it does contain it the averment is admitted by a judgment by default. Gilleland v. Reid, 5 P. R. 96.

Detention of Dower — Several Defendants—Irrequarity—Seisin of Husband.]—To a declaration in dower against three defendants, suggesting that while one defendant had not, another had appeared and acknowledged the tenancy of the freehold and consented to demandant having judgment, and going on to declare against the third defendant, claiming damages for detention of dower, the third defendant demurred, on the ground that, as the action was against three defendants, the plaintiff could not recover damages for detention of dower against him alone:—Held, that the declaration was good, and that the objection was not the subject of demurrer, but, if a good objection, only a ground for moving to set aside the declaration for irregularity. Held, also, that it was not necessary to allege that demandant's husband had died seised. Cameron v. Gilchrist, 43 U. C. R. 512. Right to Dower Admitted—Declaration for Hower and Damages for Dietention.]—To a summons under the Dower Procedure Act, R. S. O. 1877 c. 55, with the statutory notice indorsed under s. 10, claiming damages, the defendant entered an appearance under s. 20, with an acknowledgment that he was tenant of the freehold, and consent that plaintiff might have judgment for her dower, and take the necessary proceedings to have the same assigned to her. The plaintiff then served a declaration claiming dower as well as damages for its detention:—Held, that the declaration was bad, in claiming dower when the plaintiff is right to it was admitted. Quarre, whether such damages might not be recovered on a record properly framed. Linfoot v. Duncombe, 21 C. P. 484, remarked upon. Harvey v. Pearsald, 31 C. P. 239.

Service of Declaration — Tenants in Possession.]—See Gourlay v. Gourlay, 27 U. C. R. 178, post, 6.

(e) Pleas.

Alien Ne.]-See Robinet v. Lewis, Dra. 44.

Assignment of Right—Denial of Scisin and Marriage. —A denial of the sessin and marriage were allowed together, but a third plen, that demandant had assigned her right, was struck out. Street v. Dolsen, 2 P. R. 306, Denial of Coverture — Admission of Scisin, 1—Plea, that demandant never was accoupled to the husband during the time he was seised of the said land;—Held, that the plea admitted the seisin, and denied the coverture only. Losce v. Murray, 24 U. C. R. 586.

Devise in Satisfaction of Dower.]—Where a plea states that the husband devised certain lands to the demandant in bar and satisfaction of dower, and that she agreed to the devise, it is sufficient without setting out the words of the devise. Aliter, where the devise is not in express terms in bar of dower. Breakenridge v. King, 4 O. S. 180.

Duplicity.]—The provisions of the C. L. P. Act as to pleading double, applies to actions of dower. Street v. Dolson, 2 L. J. 208.

Election—Exchange of Lands.]—A wife cannot be endowed of land given and taken in exchange, but she has her election to take one or the other. McLellan v. Meggatt, 7 U. C. R. 554; White v. Laing, 2 C. P. 186.

And such election must be pleaded by a party defending in an action for dower. White v. Laing, 2 C. P. 186.

As to the form of such a plea. See Leach v. Dennis, 24 U. C. R. 129.

| Election - Other Cases. | - See Cooper v. | 43500, 23 U. C. R. 345; Baker v. Baker, 25 U. C. R. 448; Walmsley v. Walmsley, 26 U. C. R. 352; Reynolds v. Reynolds, 29 U. C. R. 225.

Infant Defendants — Default of Plea — Procedure. |—Where in dower, after declaration filed and notice to plead served upon infant tenants, the latter neglect to plead, an order nisi may be made that unless the infants plead within a given time the demandant may assign John Doe for their guardian; which order nisi afterwards, upon an affidavit of service and affidavit that no plea filed, will be made absolute. Robinson v. Blandshard, 9 L. J. 23.

Notice of Action — Want of.] — See White v. Grimshawe, 23 U. C. R. 75.

Non Tenure.]—A plea of non tenure is not necessarily a plea in abatement, and it may be pleaded either to part or the whole of the lands demanded; but non tenure to the whole cannot be pleaded with other pleas in bar. Breakenridge v. King, 4 O. S. 180; Nolan v. Reid, 1 P. R. 266.

Partnership Lands.]—Dower, Plea, on equitable grounds, that the land was part of the partnership property and stock-in-trade of the husband and S., trading together as merchants, and was purchased by them as such partners, and paid for out of their partnership moneys, and used in the said partnership business, and that the husband was never seised thereof, otherwise than as such partners!—Held, that the plea sufficiently shewed the land to have been purchased for partnership purposes, and formed a good defence. Conger v. Platt, 25 U. C. R. 277.

Reference to Arbitrators—Assignment of Dower.]—The tenant pleaded a reference to arbitrators and an assignment by them of certain specified land, of which demandant had notice, and averred that he had always been and still was ready to abide by such assignment:—Held, on demurrer, plea bad, for not shewing that the assignment had been actually made. MeLean v. Horton, 9 U. C. R. 685.

Release—Denial of Seisia at Death.]— Defendant having allowed judgment to go by default, the court, under the circumstances of this case, refused to allow him to plead a release by demandant, or a denial that the husband died seised as alleged in the plaint:—
Held, however, that such allegation was not admitted by defendant not pleading, for it was an averment not material to the right of action, and must be proved if required to establish a claim to damages. Scratch v.
Jackson, 25 U. C. R. 598.

Release—Purchaser, |—Plea, that demandant during her husband's lifetime joined with him in a conveyance by deed of the lands to a purchaser, in which deed a release of dower was contained:—Held, good, though the purchaser was not named or shewn to have taken a freehold estate. Miller v. Wiley, 16 C. P. 529.

Statute of Limitations.]—See Leach v. Dennis, 24 U. C. R. 129, post, 111. 5.

(d) Replication

Form of Replication to Plea of Alien No. |—See Robinet v. Lewis, Dra. 44.

Form of Replication to Other Pleas.]

—Replication to a plea of ne unques accouple, that the demandant, on the 1st May, 1790, and before suit, was accoupled to A. B., deceased, in lawful matrimony:—Held, good, without alleging when, or by whom, or by what form of religious rite the demandant was married. As to the form of replication to a plea of the Statute of Limitations, and to a plea of ne unques seizie, and the proper conclusion of such pleas. Williams v. Lee, Williams v. Vansittart, 2 C. P. 175.

Sec, also, Begly v. St. Patrick's Literary Assn. of Ottawa, 23 U. C. R. 395, post, III. 5.

(e) Statement of Claim.

Judicature Act—Statement of Facts.]—
The statement of claim in an action of dower alleged that the plaintiff was the widow of L, who died seised of such an estate (in certain lands) as to entitle and give the plaintiff an estate of dower therein:—Held, that the pleadings in dower are governed by the O. J. Act; that the right of dower is a legal conclusion from certain facts; and these facts should be stated in the pleading. The statement of claim was three on the leading live in the pleading. The statement of claim was truck out, leave being given to amend. Lauder v. Carrier, 10 P. R. 612.

Judicature Act—Dower Act,—The writ of summons was indorsed under the O, J. Act with a claim for dower and arrears of dower, The defendant entered an appearance, but added to it an acknowledgment of the plaintiff's right to dower, and a consent to her taking proceedings to have the same assigned to her under the Dower Procedure Act, R. S. O, 1837 c, 55. The plaintiff delivered a statement of claim, taking no notice in it of the acknowledgment and consent, and claiming dower and arrears:—Held, that it was necessary for the plaintiff to deliver a statement of claim in order to recover her dower, and she could not, having elected to institute proceedings under the O, J. Act, be compelled to take any steps under the Dower Act, Moore v. Moore, 11 P. R. 324.

(f) Statement of Defence.

Striking Out Portions.)—In an action for damages for detention of dover, defendants pleaded (1) that the lands in question were wild, and plaintiff was not entitled to the sum claimed for damages, if any; (2) that plaintiff had assigned her claim for damages; (3) set-off for moneys expended in respect of said lands; (4) that they did not detain, but were always willing, etc. On a motion in chambers, after issue joined, for an order directing a reference as to the damages unders, 47, O. J. Act, and upon evidence by affidavit both for and against the truth of the pleas, the master made an order striking out the 2nd and 3rd pleas, and directing a reference:—Held, that the master had no jurisdiction to make the order, and that the issues raised questions that were properly triable only at the hearing. Ryan v. Fish, 10 P. R. 187. See, hearing. Ryan v. Fish, 10 P. R.

6. Practice.

Affidavits—Intituling—Style of Parties.]
—See Ferguson v. Malone, 1 U. C. R. 519.

Consent—Decree Not Drawn up—Plaintiff Bound by.]—The plaintiff claimed dower. A decree was made less extensive than she claimed. The master made his report in pursuance of the decree. The solicitor on the same day signed a consent to a decree on further directions being made in certain terms stated in the consent. These terms were in accordance with the decree and report. They provided, also, that in lieu of dower the plaintiff should be paid a certain annual sum named. The decree was not drawn up, but the agreement which it embodied was acted on for eight years:—Held, that the plaintiff was bound by it, and that she could obtain no relief on the ground that the original decree should have been more favourable to her. Sills v. Lang, 17 Gr. (591.

Death of Defendant—Seire Facias—Rericor.]—A plaintiff in an action for dower recovered judgment, but before the execution of the writ of assignment of dower, and after its issue, the tenant of the freehold died, having devised the land in question to the present defendant:—Held, that the plaintiff must proceed against the devisee by seire facias, and not by suggestion or revivor. Davis v. Dennison, 8 P. R. 7.

Infant—Demurrer.] — An infant demandant may sue for dower. If an infant be tenant, the parol is not allowed to demur. Phelan, V. Phelan, Dra. 386

Judgment—Default—Notice of Action.]—Quare, as to the right to sign judgment by default on a suggestion of demand and refusal of dower. Under 24 Vict. c. 40, s. 18, a notice of action is necessary in all cases, but the want of it must be specially pleaded. White v. Grimshace, 23 U. C. 18, 75.

Judgment-Default-Service of Declaration-Costs - Reference.] - The plaintiff dower, having served a demand on defendant, the tenant of the freehold residing in Scotland, served the declaration and notice to plead on the tenants in possession of the land. plead on the tenants in possession of the land, and on this entered judgment by nil dicit against the defendant for seisin and costs, and issued execution. The sheriff delivered possession according to the report of the com-missioners appointed, under 24 Vict. c. 40; and their fees, including the charge of the surveyor employed by them, amounted to $266. An order was afterwards made to refer this charge to taxation, on a summons calling on the sheriff and the commissioners and surveyor, but not on the plaintiff:-Held, that the judgment was irregular, and must be set aside; for service of the declaration on the tenants of the land could not enure as a service on the defendant, the tenant of the fre-hold. Quere, as to the defendant's right to sign judgment by default for the costs; but, assuming such judgment to be valid:—Held, that the costs of the commissioners, under 24 Vict. c. 40, would be recoverable against de-fendant. Held, also, that the order to refer such costs could not be sustained, for defendant should have been a party to the summons. Gourlay v. Gourlay, 27 U C. R. 178.

Judgment—Entry—Time.]—In an action of dower judgment was given in favour of the tenant in June, 1856. In August the tenant died, and the entry of judgment was delayed by the difficulty in procuring the affidavit of disbursements, &c. The demandant brought another action against the heirs of the tenant for dower in the same land, and in April, 1857. an application was made to allow the judgment given in June to be entered nunc protune:—Held, too late. Stafford v. Trueman, 2 P. R. 154, 3 L. J. 114.

Judgment-Vacating-Mistake of Solicitor. |-In an action for dower and damages for detention of dower, defendants appeared under 1. S. O. 1877 c. 55, s. 20, and filed acknowledgment of tenancy, consent to dower, &c. Plaintiff's solicitor thereupon entered judg-ment of seisin, issued writ of assignment of dower, and proceeded for damages. The judgment of seisin was held at the hearing to be final, and to preclude any proceeding for damages, but leave was given to plaintiff to move in chambers to vacate it. The master in chambers made an order vacating the judgment :-Held, on appeal, that the order was one in the discretion of the master, which was properly exercised under the circumstances in the plaintiff's favour, especially as judgment had been signed through mistake of her solicitor. Ryan Fish, 9 P. R. 458.

Leave to Proceed—Tenant of Receiver.]
—A widow entitled to dower commenced an action therefor against a tenant, to whom, without express authority, the property had been leased by a receiver in a suit in chancery—Held, that she was not at liberty to proceed in such action without the leave of the court. Coleman v. Glanville, 18 Gr. 42.

Particulars. | —Particulars of the premises cannot be obtained by the tenant. Nolan v. Cherry, 1 P. R. 277.

Report—Motion Against—Time—Filing.]
See Giles v. Morrow, 4 O. R. 649.

Writ of Assignment of Dower— Teste.]—A writ of assignment of dower is a writ of execution, within s. 240 of the C. L. P. Act, and may therefore be tested when ssued. Fisher v. Grace, 28 U. C. R. 312.

Writ of Summons.]—The form of writ of summons to commence an action of dower, is provided for by con, rules 120 et seq. For decisions as to the writ and proceedings connected therewith, under the old practice, see Phelan v. Phelan, Dra. 386; Frazer v. Richardson, 4 O. S. 391; Bissonet v. Radenharst, M. T. I Vict. R. & H. Dig, 170; Fullmer v. Dougdin, I U. C. R. 402.

Writ of Summons—Service.]—In dower, the summons, if served on the tenant, need not be served on the premises. Honsburgh v. Fritz, 5 O. S. 73.

For cases under the practice before 13 & 14 Vict. c. 58, see Robinet v. Lewis, Dra. 44; Henderson v. Stephens, 2 U. C. R. 64; Amiot v. Woodcock, 2 U. C. R. 119; Cox v. Hand, 4 U. C. R. 281.

As to the practice and pleadings in dower, under 13 & 14 Vict. c. 58, see Bishoprick v. Pearce, 12 U. C. R. 306; Williams v. Rider, 1 P. R. 41.

II. ASSIGNMENT OF DOWER.

Agreement in Lieu of — Statute of Franks.—A widow having married, she and her husband verbally agreed with the devisees of her first husband, that she and her husband should enjoy a certain portion of the estate during her life, in respect of her interest therein;—Held, that this was binding on all parties interested, as being an agreement not within the Statute of Frauds; and the court restrained a purchaser of portions of the estate from disturbing the dowress and her husband during her lifetime. Leach v. Shaw, 8 Gr. 494.

Assignment before Action—Jury— Evidence.;—Held, that, upon the evidence, the jury were justified in finding that the tenant had assigned dower before action, Humphrics v, Burton, 16 U. C. R. 511.

Description of Land Assigned—Metes and Bounds—Acquiseence. —An assignment of dower by the sheriff must be by metes and bounds. Where two lots fronted on a river, and were therefore irregular in shape, and the sheriff assigned the east third of one and the west third of the other, making no survey and giving no further description, the assignment was held insufficient. But neither livery of seisin nor writing are necessary to an assignment and where the tenant of the free-hold, after such assignment, gave notice to demandant to make her share of the fence between those portions which had been assigned by the sheriff as her dower in the said lots and the defendant's portion:—Held, that this was evidence of an assent by him to the assignment as made, which was therefore sufficient. Fisher v. Grace, 28 U. C. R. 312.

Improvements—Clearing Land—Report of Commissioners.]—The husband of demandbeing possessed of the land in question, a 100 acre lot, conveyed it to S., 20 acres being at the time cleared. After alienation some 70 acres more were cleared. Defendant having admitted demandant's claim, the sheriff appointed commissioners, who awarded demand-ant seven acres of the cleared and four of the uncleared land. The land in question, as well as that in the neighbourhood, had greatly increased in value, and, besides the clearing, had been improved by fencing and buildings; but no part of the buildings was awarded to demandant. It appeared that the commissioners had considered the clearing of land a permanent improvement under s. 35, s.-s. 2, R. permanent improvement under 8, 55, 8, 2, K. 8, O. 1877 c. 55, but that they did not award any portion of the land cleared by the pur-chaser to the demandant:—Held, that the report should not be disturbed unless upon the clearest evidence of its injustice, and no case was made in the present instance to induce the court to interfere. Robinet v. Pickering, 44 U. C. R. 337.

Judgment—Action to Establish Will—Decree Establishing "Rabject to Dover."]—In an action by a devisee to establish a destroyed will devising real estate, to which the plaintiff, the widow of the testator, was a defendant, she, although she pleaded to the action, did not claim to be entitled to or to recover her dower in the land of which the action also sought to deprive her, and a decree was made declaring that the devisee, one of the defendants hereto, was entitled to the land in fee simple, subject to the dower of the plaintiff herein:—Held, not such a judgment as entitled the dower under s. 7 of R. S. O. 1887 c. 131, so as to bar the remedy of the plaintiff. Cope v. Cope, 25 O. R. 441.

Sum in Lieu of Dower—"Peculiar Circumstances"—Ducelling-house Partly on Donadile Land.]—Where dower was claimed in land upon a portion of which stood two-thirds of a dwelling-tionse, the remaining third being upon the addining land, which was not with the state of the state of a case that the land of the Transfer of Right before Assignment.]—A widow's title to dower before assignment, although not transferable at common law, may be the subject of sale and conveyance in equity, Rose v. Simmerman, 3 Gr. 508.

Transfer of Right before Assignment.]—A right to dower, although not an estate, is an interest in land within C. S. U. C. c. 90; and therefore, semble, that under that statute a woman may before assignment of dower convey her right to any person. Md-ter v. Wiley, 16 C. P. 529. But see McAnnany v. Turnbull, 10 Gr. 208.

III. BAR, CONVEYANCE, AND FORFEITURE.

1. Adultery,

A wife abandoned by her husband, and subsequently guilty of adultery:—Held, not barred from dower, Graham v. Law, 6 C. P. 310.

It is the voluntary living apart in adultery that deprives a wife of dower, whether leaving the husband's roof was sua sponte, or in consequence of his violence, or whether he abandoned her without provision. Woolsey v. Finch, 20 C. P. 132. Approved in Neff v. Thompson, 20 C. P. 211.

See 3.

2. By Marriage Settlement.

Dower. Equitable plea, that by deed, before and in consideration of demandant's intended marriage, it was agreed between her and her intended husband that certain lands should be conveyed by him after marriage to trustees, to his use for life, then to her use for life, then to the use of the issue of the marriage, and in default of such issue to his heirs; that after the marriage the lands were accordingly so conveyed, and demandant after iter husband's death became seised and entered into possession of such lands under the settlement in lieu and satisfaction of her dower in all his lands, according to said settlement:—
Held, a bad plea, for there was no provision, express or implied, that such settlement was to be in lieu of dower; and the allegation of entry in lieu, the land being her own, could make no difference. Gilkison v. Elliott, 27 U.
C. R. 95.

By a marriage contract executed in Lower Canada, the intended wife, in consideration of certain provisions made therein for her separate benefit, agreed to renounce her dower in the lands of her intended husband, either "customary, prefix, or stipulated," no mention being made of lands in Upper Canada, ——Held, affirming the judgment in 12 C. P. 691, that this did not preclude her from claiming dower out of lands in Upper Canada, held by her husband during the coverture; and this notwithstanding the contract so entered into would form a first charge on all the property which the husband held at the time of the contract, or which might be afterwards acquired by him. Jamicson v. Fisher, 2 E. & A. 242.

3. Order to Convey Free from Dower.

[See 40 Vict. c. 8, s. 35 (O.); R. S. O. 1877 c. 126, s. 10; 41 Vict. c. 8, s. 13 (O.); R. 8, O. 1887 c. 133, ss. 9-12; R. S. O. 1897 c. 164, ss. 11-17.]

Alimony—Right to, |—An order will not be made under 40 Vict, e, 8, 8, 35 (O.), allowing a husband to convey his lands free from the dower of his wife, unless it clearly appears that she is not entitled to alimony. Re Eagles, 7 P. R. 241.

Application—Notice of—Service—Affidavite—Advertisement.]—The affidavit of service of notice of an application to convey land free from dower under 40 Vict. c. S. s. 35, must identify the person served as the wife of the application of the person served as the wife of the application of the person served as the wife of the application of the person served as the wife which application of the person of the Application—Notice of—Service—Intention not to Return.)—The court of chancery will not, acting under R. S. O. 1877 c. 126, s. 10, order a conveyance free from dower of a wife living apart from her husband, unless it is shewn that the party moving is unable to serve notice of the intended application upon the wife, or that she has left her husband and has expressed her determination never to return to reside with him. Re Campbell, 25 Gr. 187.

Application-Notice of-Service-Advertisement—Right to Alimony.]—An order under s. 12 of the Dower Act, R. S. O. 1897 c. 164, dispensing with the concurrence of a land owner's wife for the purpose of barring her dower, where he is desirous of selling free from dower, is made by the Judge as persona designata, and is not subject to appeal. Great care should, therefore, be taken to ascertain that the case made by an applicant comes clearly within its provisions, and an order should not be made ex parte unless under very exceptional, if under any, circumstances. words "where the wife of an owner of land has been living apart from him for two years under such circumstances as by law disentitle her to alimony," do not require more to be shewn than that the wife has been living apart from her husband for two years, and that the circumstances under which she has been living apart from him are such that she is not entitled to claim alimony. Leave given to serve notice on a missing wife by advertisement in a newspaper if further search for her should not prove successful. Re King, 18 P. 18. 13.5.

Evidence of Adultery—Decree.]—Upon such an application, alleging that the wife had been living apart from her husband (the petitioner) for two years in consequence of her adultery and other misconduct charged. The petitioner produced as evidence the decree in a suit for allimony, in which he had set up her adultery as a defence. The decree dismissed the bill, and did not state the ground of dismissal:—Held, that such decree was not sufficient, and the application was refused. In temple 1, 25 Gr. 480.

4. Release.

(a) Certificate of Bar of Dower.

[By 37 Geo, III. c. 7 (C. S. U. C. c. S. L. s. 5, 61, a person entitled to dower might release her right by deed, executed either alone or jointly with other persons; but to make such deed effectual, it must be acknowledged before the Chief Justice or one of the Judges of the Queen's bench, or before the quarter sessions, and a certificate of such examination was required to be indorsed on the deed. By 2 Vict. c. 6, this acknowledgment was dispensed with whenever the married woman should join with her husband in any deed containing a release of dower. By the Dower Act. 32 Vict. c. 7, s. 23 (O.), embodied in R. S. O. 1897 c. 144, s. 22, the absence of or any informality in the acknowledgment is rendered immaterial.)

Held, that on the pleadings it could not be indeed, from the state of the record, that the defendant had given her consent before a Judge to be barred of her dower. Huffman v. 4skin, 2 C. P. 423.

A certificate of bar of dower indorsed on a deed, in 1839, stating that the wife "being duly examined," &c., did appear, &c., but not stating that she was "privately" examined, &c.:—Held, sufficient, Buck v. McCallum, 13 C. P. 103.

The husband, who died before 24 Vict. Cho, having conveyed land in 1849, in the following year his wife by deed, with his concurrence, testified by his execution thereof, released her right of dower to T., through whom the tenant claimed. There was no certificate of acknowledgment before magistrates, &c.:—Held, that such release was effectual, being within the ietter of 2 Vict, c, 6, 8, 3, which is not confined to deeds by which the husband is conveying lands; and that were this otherwise, the action would be barred by 8, 19 of 24 Vict, c, 40, which is not limited in its application by 8, 16. Hill v. Greenwood, 23 U. C. R. 404.

A certificate on a deed executed in 1816, to which the wife of the grantor was not a purty, stated that "on the 30th May, 1829, sersonally came before me A. F., Judge of the Midland district court, Mary, wife of the within named Robert McNally," and being extanined, &c., consented to be barred of herdower. The grantor was described in the deed as of the town of Kingston, county of Frontenne. It was objected that the wife did not appear to have been resident in the county when the certificate was given; but held, otherwise, for the presumption was that she resided with her husband, and that his resiconce continued the same. Held, that 2 Vict, c. 6, s. 4, clearly removed any objection on the ground that she was not a party to the deed. Hunter v. Johnson, 14 C. P. 128, remarked upon. McNally v. Church, 27 U. C. R. 103.

Where the right to dower is released by an instrument separate from the conveyance by the lusband, an examination and certificate is still necessary, as before the late statute, Bogart v, Patterson, 14 Gr. 624.

Where after a husband's estate had been vested by order of the court in A., a purchaser, his wife executed a deed to A., in which the husband joined, containing a release of dower by her, but no word of release or conveyance by the husband:—Held, sufficient, without examination or certificate. Heveard v. Scott, 2 Ch. Ch. 274.

(b) After Second Marriage,

A woman under a second coverture cannot, without her husband's concurrence, release her right to dower in lands of her first husband; right by a conveyance in accordance with the statutes for enabling married women to alienate their real estate. An action was brought at their real estate. An action was brought lower in mars of the first husband, After action to work the secured a release to the defendant of her right, and obtained a certificate of her examination and consent, according to 50 Geo. III. 10.—10. How the such real concurrence of the husband, act not being a conveyance for any purpose contemplated by the different statutes, for barring dower. Howard Cill V. Wilson, 10 1. C. 188. Approved in McGill v. Squire, 15 U. C. 18. 500.

Action for dower by S., and M., his wife, in land of M.'s former husband. Pieu, a release under seal by S., of all his interest in the land:—Held, bad, as being no bar to the action. Lawson v. Montgomery, 10 U. C. R. 528.

Dower. Defendant pleaded that by deed of 21st August, 1837, the husband conveyed the land to T. C., and that on the 23rd April, 1850, the demandant, by deed jointly executed with her husband, released her dower to T. C., who conveyed to defendant; and on this issue was joined. The release of the 23rd April was a deed poll of release of dower, for a nominal consideration, executed by demandant by mark; and, the only subscribing witness being the defendant, it had been decided that it could not be proved by evidence of his handwriting: Clark v, Stevenson, 22 U. C. R. 575. The defendant therefore proved the execution of the deed of the 21st August, 1837, which was executed by the demandant, though she was no party to it, and it contained no release of dower. A certificate of two justices was indorsed, dated 2nd March, 1850, that the demandant had appeared before them, and duly barred her dower; and one of them proved that she was examined, executed the deed, and received $10. T. C., the grantee, proved that she agreed to bar her dower, and that he took her to the justices for that purpose, but, finding that the proceeding before them was ineffectual, he had the release of the 23rd April, 1859, prepared, and sent it to her by defendant, with a note for $40, which he held against her husband, to be kept if the release was executed, otherwise returned; and that T. C. brought back to him the release apparently executed, but not the note. This evidence was received (though objected to) as tending to strengthen the probability that the release was executed. But not the note, had been also shown in confirmation that the demandant's name to the release was written by her husband; that in May following the demandant told witness that defendant had been to her to sign a paper for T. C., which she had signed; and that the next day she told defendant she had no rights there. The jury found for defendant :—Held, that defendant, who could have given the best, notwithstanding her adverse interest; and that the verified must therefore be set aside. Clark v. Stevenson, 24 U. C. R. 200.

(c) Other Cases.

Agent-Power of Attorney-Avoidance of Release, |-The demandant on the 6th Marc 1863, executed a power of attorney to one 'M to demand her dower in all lands of her late husband, to compound for her claim, and to accept such sum in lieu thereof, either by an nual payments or in one sum, as he should think fit, and to execute releases of such dower. On the 22nd May he released, in her name, to defendants her dower in the lands in question, for a consideration expressed of $400, but M. swore that he agreed to take $300, and that this was not paid until July. The power was revoked on the 23rd May, and the power was revoked on the 25rd May, and the jury found that the release had been pre-viously executed:—Held, that the power to release was not conditional upon receiving a cash payment or an arrangement for an annuity; that the difference between the sum mentioned in the release and that received by M, could not avoid the release; and that the tenants therefore were entitled to succeed, Williams v. Commissioners of Cobourg Town Trust. 23 U. C. R. 330.

Conveyance—Release in—Pleading—Purchaser not Named.]—See Miller v. Wiley, 16 C. P. 529.

Conveyance — Inoperative—Release in— Transfer of Right.]—After recovery in ejectment against the husband by the purchaser at sheriff's sale of the husband's estate in the land in question, but before judgment entered, and while the husband was in actual possession, his wife joined with him to release her dower in a conveyance in fee of the land, by way of bargain and sale, to a third party. No mentey consideration passed, the grantnee executing a mortgage back for the whole purchase money mentioned in the deed to him, and the husband remained in possession until dispossessed by the sheriff under process in the ejectment suit. The defendants, the tenants of the land, chaimed under the purchaser at sheriff's sale:—Held, that the demandant was entitled to her dower in the land in question; for that the husband not having at the time the estate he professed to grant, nothing passed by his deed, and the release of the wife, as incident to, fell with it, as there was nothing upon which it could attach; that it was not a case within 24 Vict. c. 40, s. 19; that, though the bargainee acquired an estate as against the husband, and perhaps against the wife also, by estoppel, the defendants, being no parties to the deed, but claiming adversely to it, could not conclude the demandant from saying she had not released her dower to a purchaser. Quære, whether husband and wife can at law concey the right of dower as a distinct subject of bargain and property; or whether subject of bargain and property; or whether she herself can do so after his death, and before the assignment of it. If so, semble, that the remedy should be pursued by the assignee in his own name. Miller v. Wiley, 17 C. P. 308.

Conveyance — Release in — Short Forms Act — 1 ariation.] — A variation from the short form of bar of dower in R. S. O. 1887 c. 102 by the substitution of the words "the said party of the second part" for "the said A. B., wife of the said grantor," is not a material variation. In re Manufacturers' Life Ins. Co. and McLean, 10 C. L. T. Occ. N. 295.

Conveyance—Setting Aside for Fraud—Effect on Release.]— In setting aside a deed for fraud, at the instance of a judgment creditor, by a decree of the court or chancery, the proper form is to avoid the deed only as against the parties injured by the conveyance, and direct a sale of the property.
The court will not simply set aside the deed and allow the judgment creditor to proceed and enforce his claim at law; and where the wife of the grantor joins in such a deed to bar her dower, it should be avoided only so far as it passes the estate and interest of the grantor, the creditor not being entitled to the benefit of such release of dower. Quarer, in such a case, what is properly the effect following from the release of dower and to whose benefit it will enure. Bank of Upper Uanada
v. Thomas, 2 E. & A. 502.

Conveyance — Wife Executing — Absence of Release Clause.]—Where a married woman had signed a deed which, however, contained no bur of dower, the secretary refused to direct a reference to inquire whether she intended thereby to bar her dower, though there were infant defendants who were interested in having the dower barred. Such relief would be properly the subject of a bill. Thompson v. Thompson, 2 Ch. Ch. 211.

Conveyance—Wife not Named as Partv.]

—A husband by deed aliens land, and the wife, though not named in the commencement as a formal party, in the body of it releases her dower, and both execute it:—Held, a sufficient bar. Bonter v. Northcote, 20 C. P. 76.

See, also, Bellamy v. Badgerow, 24 O. R. 278, post, VI. 1 (b).

Covenant to Release—Separation—Revival.]—Semble, that where a deed contains a covenant that a wife shall release her dower in consideration of a settlement made in her favour by a deed of separation, and she does so, after reconciliation and separation, at his instance, the deed is thereby revived. MeArthur v. Webb, 21 C. P. 358.

Mortgage - Release in. |-Where a wife joins in a mortgage of her husband's estate as a security only to the mortgagee, she parts with her dower so far only as may be neces-sary for that purpose, and she is a necessary party to a subsequent sale by the husband free from dower. Forrest v. Laycock, 18 Gr. 611.

5. Statute of Limitations.

[By 32 Vict. c. 7, s. 22 (O.), no action of dower shall be brought but within twenty years from the death of the husband of the years from the deam of reach of very demandant. The same provision was contained in 24 Vict. c. 40, s. 18, and the law was the same under 4 Wm, IV. c. 1; German v. Grooms, 6 U. C. R. 414; McClelland v. Meggatt, 7 U. C. R. 318, McDonald v. McIntosk, 8 U. C. R. 388, See now R. S. O. 1897 c. 133, s. 25, by which the action must be brought within ten years from the husband's Continuance of Possession.] - Though the widow has been allowed to remain in possession for nearly twenty years from the husband's death, she must still sue for her dower within the twenty years after this death. McDonald v. McIntosh, S.U.C. R.

Continuance of Possession. owner of land died intestate in 1858, leaving his widow and two infant daughters in possession, all of whom continued to occupy in possession, an of whom continuer to occupy and cultivate the farm until 1883, when the daughter left the premises, In February, 1884, the widow intermarried with J. M. No proceeding had meanwhile been taken or claim made by the widow to have dower assigned In an action brought by the daughto her. ters against J. M. and his wife, to recover pos-session thereof, the mother claimed to be enritled to retain possession of the premises in respect of her dower, but:—Held, that the right to dower was barred by 38 Vict. c. 16, s. 14 (O.), which requires proceedings to be taken to enforce a widow's dower within ten years from the death of her husband. Mc-Donald v. McRae, 13 A. R. 121.

Death of Husband - Commencement of Statutory Period. —Plea, that the seisin of the husband was a seisin in law, and that he was seised upwards of forty years be-fore this suit, and for upwards of that time before this suit the tenant, and those under whom he claimed, were in actual possession of the lands, claiming title adversely to the husband: -Held, no defence, for, though a dowress in one sense claims through her husband, yet the right claimed is one that first accrues, not to him, but to her on his death. Leach v. Den-nis, 24 U. C. R. 129.

Exceptions to Operation of Statute.]
—In dower, defendant pleaded that the right accrued more than twenty years before the action, to which the plaintiff replied that the husband while seised, and during his marriage, conveyed to H. M. Geo. IV., his heirs and successors, certain lands, including those in the declaration, of which he and his successors on decentration, of which he and his successors continued tenants in fee until twenty years before this suit: that forty years had not elapsed since the husband's death; and that H. M. Queen Victoria and her predecessors had at all times been out of the jurisdiction: —Held, replication no answer, for the exceptions to the operation of the statute (C. S. U. C. c. S. S. s. 1) arise only out of the plaintiff's position, not defendant's. Quere, as to the operation of 24 Vict. c. 40, s. 18, and the effect upon it of s. 16. Beely v. St. Patrick's Literary Association of Ottawa, 23 U. C. R.

Set-off of Dower against Rent. |-A|though a widow is bound to bring her action for dower within twenty years from the death of her husband, the statute limiting that time does not apply where the widow is brought unwillingly before the court, and she only seeks to reduce the amount of rents charged against to reduce the amount of refus charged against her by setting off what she is entitled to as dowress. Laidlaw v. Jackes, 25 Gr. 293. But see S. C., in part reversed on rehear-ing 27 Cr. 101

ing, 27 Gr. 101.

Taking Case out of Statute—Agreement as to Rents.)—The widow and heir joined in creating a term in the descended lands for ten years, and in the lease it was stated that it had been mutually agreed between the parties thereto that one-third of the rent should be paid to the widow in each year, which was accordingly done during the cur-rency of the term:—Held, that this had the effect of preventing the lapse of time being set up as a bar under the statute to the widow's right to dower. Fraser v. Gunn, 27 Gr. 63.

6. Other Cases.

Agreement—Life Lease—Absence of Re-lease—Forfeiture. —Where a father had con-veved a house and premises to his son in fee, and the son afterwards leased to his father and mother for their joint lives, at a nominal rent, and on the same day the father and mother executed an agreement under seal to the son, that he should occupy the house, except certain rooms, and take the rents and profits, upon certain conditions, on breach of any of which he was to go out of possession, but his mother did not release her right under the statute:—Semble, that the mother could not, after the father's death, on the ground that she had not barred her dower under the life lease, maintain ejectment for the whole of the premises, without shewing a forfeiture of the agreement by breach of the conditions, although she was entitled to recover the rooms which were excepted from the son's occupation under the agreement. Doe d. Peck v. Peck, 1 U. C. R. 42.

Bond—Recitals—Estoppel— Satisfaction.] The demandant had accepted for her claim a bond from the tenant, securing to her, as part of a family arrangement, a main-tenance which, after enjoying for some time, she relinquished. She had also executed the bond:—Held, that, even though the recitals in the bond did not operate by way of estoppel, jury were warranted in finding that it amounted to a satisfaction of her claim to dower. Germain v. Shuert, 7 C. P. 316.

Conveyance to Crown - Extinguishment.]— A plea setting up a conveyance by the husband to the king; and that the land afterwards, under 7 Vict. c. 11, became vested in the principal officers of ordnance, who conveyed to the tenant:—Held, bad, on demurrer, for that demandant's right was not extinguished by the conveyance to the Crown, nor by the provisions of the statute. Begley v. Gibson, 19 U. C. R. 458.

Instrument not under Seal-Effect of. as Bar.]—Plea, that demandant from the 2nd November, 1858, had been tenant of the premises to defendant under a demise, the rent of £15 a year, one-third of which she was to retain, and still does retain, for her dower, and the demandant accepted the same in lieu of her dower; and so the tenant averred that she assigned to demandant, and demandant accepted her said dower. To support this plea, the following instrument was put in, signed by the demandant only, not under seal: "I do hereby attorn to C. S. for (describing the land), and I agree to become her tenant therefor at the yearly rental of £15 a year, with taxes, payable quarterly from this date, one-third of which I am to retain as my dower, and the remaining two-thirds to be paid to C. S. during her life. And in case a higher rent can be obtained for said premises, I agree to quit on receiving three months' notice previous to the end of any ouarter:" — Held, that the plea was not proved, for the instrument passed no interest in the land to demandant, and could not bar the right to dower, or be treated as a satisfaction of it. Sursfield v. Sursfield, 22 U. C.

Possession of Widow—Continuance.]—A plea that demandant had been in possession of the land in which dower was claimed since her husband's death:—Held, no bar, for this could not deprive her of her right to have dower assigned. Gilkison v. Elliott, 27 U. C. R. 95.

Rights of Creditors—Equitable Dower.]
—A widow having by her conduct parted with her right to equitable dower in favour of her son, a subsequent creditor of hers was not entitled to have her dower set out and applied to pay his demand, though she was not aware of her right to dower at the time she was said to have parted with it. Cottle v. McHardy, 17 Gr. 342.

Wife Concealing Relation to Husband—Exappet.]—Where for ten years a wird with the state of the public her relation to her bushoul, and allowed him to live with another woman as his wife under an assumed name, the real wife living in the neighborhood, and receiving from them her own support, it was held that she was precluded from claiming dower out of land purchased during this period in the husband's assumed name, and afterwards sold by him and his supposed wife to a purchaser, who bought in good faith, and without any notice of the real relationship of the parties. Holy v. Gordon, 17 Gr. 559.

IV. ELECTION.

1. Under Devolution of Estates Act.

[49 Viet. c. 22 (O.); R. S. O. 1887 c. 108; R. S. O. 1897 c. 127].

Effect of.]—R, died intestate entitled to real and personal property leaving a widow and children:—Held, that the widow having elected to take her interest under s. 4 of the Devolution of Estates Act, 1886, 49 Vict. c. 22 (O.), was entitled to one-third of the real estate absolutely. Re Reddan, 12 O. R. 781.

Release by Marriage Settlement.]—Section 4 of the Devolution of Estates Act, R. S. O. 1887 c. 108, which gives the widow a right of election between her dower and a distributive share in her deceased husbands lands, does not apply where by marriage settlement she has necepted an equivalent in lieu of dower. In such case she has no right to any share in the lands. Toronto General Trusts Co. v. Quin., 25 O. R. 250.

Time for Electing — Administration— Money in Court.]—Where in the administration by the court of the estate of an intestate lands have been sold and the purchase money paid into court and nor distributed, the widow may, although more than twelve months have elapsed since the death of her husband, elect to take in lieu of dower her distributive share under the Devolution of Estates Act. Judgment in 29 O. R. 388 affirmed. Baker v. Stuart, 25 A. R. 445.

Will — Construction—Action for,]—Held, that by bringing an action for the construction of her deceased husband's will, the widow had made her election, and it was too late for her to elect to take her interest in her husband's undisposed real estate under the Devolution of Estates Act, R. 8. O. 1887 c. 108, s. 4, s.-8. 2. Radd v. Harper, 16 O. R. 422.

Will—Election by,]—An election by a widow to take her distributive share in lieu of her dower under s, 4, 8, 8, 2, of the Devolution of Estates Act, may be made by will, which as to such election speaks from the time of its execution, and not from the time of her death. Re Ingolsby, 19 O. R. 283.

See, also, Devolution of Estates Act.

2. Whether Widow Bound to Elect.

Terms of Will—Circumstances.]—Held, that the widow, under the devises mentioned in the will in this case, was put to elect whether she would take under the will, or claim her dower. Kerr v. Leishman, 8 Gr. 435.

A testator by his will gave to his wife a life interest in certain portions of his real estate, and certain annual allowances, both in money and kind, such as to exclude the probability that she would require any other means for her support. The rents and profits of the real estate after payment of such annual allowance being insufficient to satisfy the widow's claim for dower:—Held, that she was bound to elect. Becker v. Hammond, 12 Gr. 485.

Quære, whether a provision for the maintenance of testator's widow, charged on the real estate, is by implication in lieu of dower.

A testator devised his farm to ms eldest son in tail, upon condition, amongst other things, that he should support the testator's widow during her life: that she should be mistress and have the control of the dwelling-house on the farm, and should have the proceeds of onehalf the cows and sheep kept on the premises; and that the farm should be a home for the testator's son J., so long as it might be necessary for him to remain, and for another son. D., should any misfortune happen to him:— Held, that the widow was not entitled to dower in addition to this provision made for her. McLennan v. Grant, 15 Gr. 65.

Where a testator by his will made provision for his widow, but did not express the same to be in lieu of dower, evidence for the purpose of shewing that he intended it to be in lieu of dower was held inadmissible. The testator, after providing for his widow, directed certain of his real estate to be sold at the expiration of a lease thereof then existing, and the proceeds to be divided among his three daughters, and that in the meantime the rent was to be divided among them:—
Held, that this latter expression was not inconsistent with her claim to dower. An intending purchaser of devised lands, doubting whether a provision made by testator was in lieu of dower, asked the widow whether she had or claimed dower:—Held, that, even if her answer was in the negative, it afforded no ground for the purchaser applying to the court to restrain her action for dower, brought on her being advised that under the will she was not put to her election. Fairweather v. Archibald, 15 Gr., 255.

Where a testator devised one parcel of land to his wife in lieu of dower, and another parcel without expressing that it was to be in lieu of dower, and then devised his remaining lands to other persons, and the will contained other evidence shewing an intention that such last mentioned devises should be free from dower: —Held, that on the widow electing to take dower she forfeited both parcels of land. Stewart v. Hunter, 2 Ch. Ch. 336.

A testator devised to his daughter for life a house and four acres of land, and the will shewed that he contemplated that the devisee should reside on this property:—Held, that the testator had thereby sufficiently indicated his intention to devise free from the widow's dower; and that therefore the widow could not have dower in either this land or the other lands devised, without foregoing the provisions in her favour in the will. Hutchinson v. Sargeat, 16 Gr. 78.

A testator by his will made certain gifts to his widow, not saying that they were in lieu of dower. It was suggested that the estate was not sufficient to answer these gifts in addition to the dower:—Held, that the other devisees were entitled to an inquiry as to this, and the weight to be attached to the circumstance would be considered after the result of the inquiry was ascertained. Lapp v. Lapp, 16 Gr. 159.

A testator at the time of making his will and of his death had real estate to the value of 87,600, and personal estate to the value of 87,600, and personal estate to the value of 83,95, which realty to the amount of about 83,905 he disposed of by his will during his wife's life; and he left legacies to the amount of 81,000. The other real estate he directed to be sold. The residue he divided; but there would be no residue if the widow was to have ber dower:—Held, that the widow must elect between the provision made for her by the will and her dower. Lapp v. Lapp, 19 Gr. 608.

A testator devised his farm to his widow for life, determinable upon her marrying again, and gave her a certain portion of the dwelling house thereon; and subject to this the will p—67 shewed an intention that the rest of the house and the farm should be kept in entirety, and be personally occupied by his sons until the youngest should attain twenty-one:—Held, that the widow must elect. Held, also, that a second marriage, after an election to take under the will, would not resuscitate the right to dower. Coleman v. Glauville, 18 Gr. 42.

A testator bequeathed a sum of money to his wife in lieu of all dower, &c., and revoked "all gifts or deeds or deed of gift of any real estate made by me at any time heretofore:"—Held, that the widow was put to her election whether she would accept the bequest or retain an estate conveyed to her by a deed of gift. Lee v. McKiuly, 18 Gr. 527.

A testator devised land to his children in tail, with cross-remainders, and in the event of their dying without issue, to his brother; and directed his widow to receive the whole of the rents, &c., during widowhood; and in the event of her marrying she was to receive one-half thereof for life:—Held, that the contingency of the widow surviving all the children was too remote to put her to elect. Travers v. Gustin, 20 Gp. 106.

A testator by his will gave to his widow 100 are so of land, which he expressed should "be my wife's portion during her natural life," and the balance of his real estate, fifty acres, he directed to be sold, and until sold that the same should be rented, "and the rent shall be given to my wife to assist her in keeping and supporting of herself and the children that may choose to reside with her;"—Held, that the widow was not entitled to her dower in the fifty acres and also to the provision made for her by the will; but that she was bound to elect. Armstrong v. Armstrong 12 Gr. 351.

A testator directed, first, that all his debts, funeral and testamentary expenses, should be paid; and then, that all his real and personal estate, of every nature and description, should be equally divided between his wife and mother, share and share alike:—Held, that the widow was not entitled to dower and to the provision made for her by the will; but that she was put to her election. McGregor v. McGregor, 20 Gr. 450.

A testator devised all his real and personal estate to trustees, with full power of leasing, incumbering, and selling the same, as in their opinion might be advisable, and at a certain period to convey the same to his children or child then surviving. By a codicil he directed all his personal property to be equally divided between his three daughters and his widow:— Held, that the widow was, under the terms of the will, bound to elect between the provision for her by the will and her dower. Patrick v. Skaver, 21 Gr. 123.

The testator devised as follows: "To my beloved wife A. M. I give and devise a full and sufficient support for her natural life; or, in case of any disagreement between her and other members of the family, I give and bequeath the north part of my house, with an annuity of 880 in cash, to be paid half-yearly, I give and bequeath to her also the use of the well, to which she must have free access without any hindrance whatever. I give and bequeath also to my beloved wife all the furniture in the north part of the house:"—Held, that this had not the effect of putting the widow to elect between her dower and the provision made for her by the will; and that she was entitled to an inquiry as to the sufficiency of the estate to allow her the bequests in her favour, as also her dower; as in Lapp v. Lapp, 16 Gr. 159, Murphy v, Murphy, 25 Gr. 81.

Testator bequeathed to his widow the annual income from the real and personal estate during her widowhood and until the eldest son attained his majority, for the support of herself and the support of herself and the support of herself and the support of the widow during her widowhood:—Held, not to indicate an intention on the part of the testator to give her this in lieu of dower. Laidlaw v. Jackes, 25 Gr. 203, 27 Gr. 101.

The testator by his will, executed in 1840, gave the annual income of all his real estate to his wife, for the support of herself and children during widowhood; and after her death or marriage, and the youngest child attaining majority, the property was to be di-vided. He appointed his widow and eldest son executrix and executor, both of whom continued to reside, with the other members of the family, in the homestead, and she, with the consent of her son, received the rents of the realty, which she applied in the support of the children for more than twenty years after the death of the testator, without having had dower assigned to her, or having made any demand therefor. Some of the lands had been acquired by the testator after the execution of the will, and as to them there was an intestacy. A bill having been filed by one of the heirs, seeking an account of rents received by the widow, and a partition of descended lands: -Held, on rehearing (in this affirming the decree in 25 Gr. 293), that the widow was not bound to elect between the provision made for her by the will and her dower, and that, notwithstanding the lapse of time, she was entitled, out of the devised land, to retain onethird of the rents in respect of past and future dower; but that, as to the descended lands, the remedy was barred by the Statute of Limitations; that the claim made by the widow in her answer, and awarded her by the decree, was a pursuing the remedy so as to bring the case within the statute, although as to the rents of these lands received, the widow was entitled to set off against the claim made by the plaintiff, the amount which she was entitled to have received thereout as dowress, Laidlaw v. Jackes, 27 Gr. 101.

A testator devised and bequeathed to his wife, during widowhood, all his household goods, furniture, &c., together with an an-nuity of $20, and also the free use, during the same time, of the homestead lot, together with Two parcels of the several buildings thereon, his real estate he devised to his two sons, upon which he placed certain fixed valuationsfound by the master to be the full values -and directed one of the sons to pay threefifths of the interest computed on the valuation of his lot to the three daughters of the testator for life, the other son to pay interest on the valuation of his lot to the executors during the life or widowhood of his mother. The homestead and the other portions of his real, as also his personal estate, the testator directed to be sold and the proceeds divided at the death or marriage of the widow:—Held, that she was not forced to elect, and that the direction to sell the lands was not sufficient to put her to her election. Beilstein v. Beilstein, 27 Gr. 41.

The testator bequeathed to his widow for The testator bequeathed to his widow for life an annuity of 869, payable by his son J., his heirs, &c., together with all and singular his household furniture, &c., and in the event of his widow remaining in the dwelling-house on the premises after his decease, she was to have the free use of certain rooms therein; and, in case of sickness while there, this son was to see that she had proper medical attendance and nursing. This annuity, as well as the other bequests, the testator charged upon the lands in question, and devised the same so burthened to his said son, the defendant. widow filed her bill for payment of the annuity alone, not claiming any lien on the land in respect of the charges created in her favour by the will or for dower. The usual decree for payment or in default sale was made, The land was sold under the decree, without any reference to dower or the other charges, and the purchase money was paid into In the master's office the widow made no claim, either for dower or in respect of the other charges; but she afterwards presented a petition to have it declared that she was entitled to dower in the land and to compensa-tion in respect of the bequests above set out. and prayed that a sum in gross out of the money in court should be paid to her in lieu of dower, and a proper sum allowed by way of compensation for the other benefits :- Held. following Murphy v. Murphy, 25 Gr. 81, that the widow was not put to her election by the will, and that she was entitled to have a proper sum paid to her for dower out of the purchase money in court; but that by her acquiescing in the sale of the land, and by her laches, she had waived her right to any com-pensation for the loss of the benefits bequeathed to her. Ripley v. Ripley, 28 Gr. 610.

A testator devised to his widow his "house and orchard for a home for herself and children as long as she may live," and to his son Duncan all his title and interest in the farm lot, and all implements thereon, "at the death of my wife as aforesaid, on condition that he shall provide for her board and maintenance, he, my son Duncan, holding possession of the land from the time of my decease, subject to the proviso aforesaid:"—Held, that the widow was put to her election between her dower and the provision made for her by the will; the latter forming a charge upon the lands devised. McLellan v. McLellan, 29 Gr. 1.

A testator devised all his real and personal estate to trustees to sell the realty and get in the personalty, the proceeds of which, after payment of debts, they were to invest in their names, upon trust to pay the annual income to his two sons in equal moieties, they maintaining their mother during life; and after the death of each of the sons the trustees to hold one moiety of the trust moneys upon trust to pay and divide and transfer the same equally between and amongst such of his children as should be living at his decease, and the issue then living of such children as should be then dead, as tenants in common in a course of distribution, according to the stocks, and not to the number of individual objects, and so that the issue of any deceased child should take, by way of substitution, amongst them the share or respective shares only, which the decased parent or parents would if living have taken:—Held, that the widow was not put to her election, but was entitled to dower as well as the provision made for her by the will; and it being alleged that the sons had not provided for her maintenance, a declaration was made that she was entitled to such maintenance, and a reference was directed to find what would be a proper sum for that purpose. McGarry v. Thompson, 29 Gr. 287.

In the case of separate devises, though the wife may be barred of her dower in one, she is not therefore barred of her dower in the others. Covean v. Besserer, 5 O. R. 624.

A testator, by his will and codicils, devising his real estate, &c., to G. H. M. and B. M., trustees, and the survivor of them, and the heirs of such survivor, gave his widow an annuity, and provided that when his son should attain the age of twenty-one his trustees should convey to him one-half of the estate and are residue when he should attain thirty, vided that if his son should attain thirty, to the state of distributions." The last codicil appointed G. E. T. and G. R. and the survivor of them and the heirs, executors, administrators, and assigns of such survivor, new trustees and executors in place of G. H. M. and B. M. with the same powers. The son attained the age of twenty-one, received half of the estate, and died before attaining the age of thirty, unmarried and without issue:—Held, that the widow was entitled to her annuity as well as her share under the statute of distributions; but that the testator, having treated the real and personal estate as a blended fund to be distributed, she was not also entitled to dower, and that she must elect between the distributive share, and the dower, Re Quimby, Quimby, O, O, R. 738.

J. C. by his will devised as follows: "First, I will and bequeath unto my beloved wife, E. C., one-half undivided of the place where I now live being "P" so long as she shall live and no longer. I also will and bequeath unto my said wife one-half of all the goods and chattels I may own at the time of my denise "P" Third, I will and bequeath unto my grandson, D. C., and to his heirs and assigns forever, the place or homestead where I now live, it being "P" with all that appertains thereto: subject, nevertheless, to the following conditions, that is to say: my wife E. C. shall have quiet and peaceable possession of all said premises with all that appertains to said half of said homestead for her own use and benefit as long as she shall live "P" I also will and bequeath unto my said grandson, D. C., one-half of all the goods and chattels I may own at the time of my demise," In an action by the wife, E. C., claiming both the legacy and her dower:— Claiming both that she must elect; the testator having treated the homestend as one whole thing, the half of which he specifically bequeathed to his wife. Card v. Cooley, 6 O. R. 229.

A testator, after bequeathing certain legacies, devised his lands to his sons, charging them, however, with the legacies and also with an annuity of $100 to his widow, to whom he also bequeathed his furniture, apartments in his dwelling house, and sundry other things. The estate was sufficient to answer all legacies, and also the widow's dower:—Held, that the widow was not put to her election as between the will and her dower. Wilson v. Wilson, 7 O. R. 177.

A will bequeathing to a wife the dwellinghouse for her natural life, the household goods, and an annuity of $300 secured to her out of the estate:—Held, not to put the widow to her election. In re Bigyar, Bigyar v, Stinson, 8 O. R. 372.

A testator by his will left all his real and personal property to J. K., "subject to the following bequest, viz.; to my wife E. K., a one-third interest in all my real and personal estate, so long as she shall remain unmarried;"—Held, that E. K. was bound to elect between the will and her dower, for the former imported that there was to be the same manner of division of the land as of the personalty, viz.; a division of the entire property of each kind, which would be defeated if dower were first subtracted from the realty. Re Quimby, Quimby v. Quimby, 5 O. R. 738, followed. Amsden v. Kyle, 9 O. R. 439.

A testator provided by his will "that the farm be kept till the youngest surviving child comes of age, at which time I would desire the property to be sold and the proceeds to be equally divided between all my children, and my wife. * My will is, that I would like the farm rented to some good tenant, on the best terms possible, the rent to be used in the support and maintenance of the family now at home." The farm referred to was the only real property possessed by the testator either at the time of making his will or at his death:—Held, that the widow was intended to be included in the word family, and that the widow was put to her election as to dower, since, whigh the direction to lease the farm, and provisions of the will result not be carried into effect consistently with the dower being set apart. Buxeson v. Fraser, 18 O. R.

A testator, having by his will blended his real and personal estate into a fund from which payments of income were to be made to his wife and other devises, postponed the division of the corpus until after the death of his wife:—Held, that the wife was not bound to elect between her dower and the testamentary bestowments. Re Quimby, Quimby, 50 R, 744, distinguished. The testator also gave a house for the residence of his wife during her life, and also another house for the use of certain nephews and nieces until the youngest attained twenty-one, or until they married:—Held, that this right of personal occupation of the nephews and nieces was, while it lasted, Inconsistent with a claim of the widow to have one-third of the house set apart for her use as dowress, but that the deprivation of dower for a time in part of the real estate was not sufficient to put her to her relection as to the residue of the estate. Cowan v. Besserer, 5 O. R. 624, followed. The widow was held put to her election as to both houses. The judgment in Amsden v. Kyle, 9 O. R. at p. 441, corrected. Lyps v. Tronto General Trasts Co., 22 O. R.

A testator bequeathed his personal estate to his widow absolutely, and devised his real estate to his executors to be by them sold, and four per cent, of the proceeds paid to his widow, and the balance invested, and the income paid to his widow during her life, and afterwards the proceeds to be divided as directed; and he gave the rents, until the real estate was sold, to his widow:—Held, that the widow was put to her election, and that she could not claim dower and to be tenant of the freshold at the same time. Marriott v. Mc-Ray, 22 O. R. 320.

By the first clause in his will, a testator directed that his executive should pay his decision to the present estate and the present estate and they present estate the present of the present estate and they are the six wife, whom he named as his executive, certain lands subject to incumbrances, and all his stock, cattle, etc., upon the said lands, and then devised the residue of his real and personal estate (after payment of his just debts and funeral expenses) and all the rents and issues thereof to a brother and sister for their lives, to be equally divided between them, share and share alike, and after their death, to their children, their heirs and assigns for ever, share and share alike, The brother predeceased the testator. The widow now brought this action for the construction of the will:—Held, that the widow was not put to her election as to dower, there being no such intention to be gathered from the will. Rudd v. Harber, 16 O. R. 422.

A will provided for the payment of a large number of pecuniary legacies, including one to the testator's widow, and, except as to the household property, which was bequeathed to her, the residue of the estate, real and perafter paying the debts and these legacies, was given to a charity, provision being made for the early conversion into money and distribution of the estate:—Held, that the widow was not put to her election, but was entitled both to her legacy and to dower. The will further provided that the widow for her legacy might have the first selection of such securities or real estate as she might think desirable. Without making any claim to dower, she joined with her co-executors in sales and conveyances of parts of the real estate, and selected the remainder of it in part satisfaction of her legacy, and, although not transferred to her, subsequently dealt with such remainder as her own. It was not until after the sales and selection referred to, that her right to dower was in any way considered, when she immediately claimed it:—Held, that, under these circumstances, the residuary legatees not having been prejudiced by her dealings with the lands selected by her, she was not estopped from claiming dower; but was entitled to treat the executors as having received for her use so much of the purchase money of the lands sold as was equal to the value of her dower in them, ascertained on the same principle as it would have been had the sale been one made by the court of the lands free of her dower, and so much of the sum at which the iands selected by her was valued at as was equal to the value of her dower in those lands, ascertained in the same way. Bingham v. Bingham, I Ves. Sen. 126, applied. Elliott v. Morris, 27 O. R. 485.

An estate consisting of realty and personalty and amounting to over $10,000, was, after a direction to pay the debts and funeral and testamentary expenses, and after a specific devise of certain land, devised by the testator to his executors, in trust to sell and convert into money, and out of the proceeds to pay to his widow $3,000 for her own use absolutely, and to divide the remainder among certain nephews and nieces:—Held, that the widow was not put to her election, but was entitled to her dower in addition to the bequest. Amsden v. Kyle, 9 O. R. 439, distinguished, Re Shunk, 31 O. R, 175.

A husband in a separation deed covenanted to pay his wife an annuity of $200 as follows: $100 on the 1st June and December in every year; and charged it on certain land, the wife accepting it in full satisfaction for support, maintenance, and alimony during coverture, and of all dower in his lands then or thereafter possessed. The husband by his will, subsequently executed, directed his executors to pay his wife $400 annually; $200 on the 1st June and December in each year during her life; and added, "which provision in favour of my said wife is made in lieu of dower?"—Held, that the wife was not put to her election between the benefits under the deed and the will, but was entitled to both. Carscallen v. Woltbridge, $2 O. R. 114.

3. Whether Widow Has Elected.

Facts and Circumstances in Particular Cases, |--Where a will expressly declares that what is given to the widow is intended to be in lieu of dower, and the widow accepts it, she is as much bound by her election in a court of law as in equity. A widow cannot so far elect to take under a devise as to enter into possession of the whole property out of which she claims dower, and yet sue for her dower, when that was part of the property expressly devised to her in lieu of dower. Walton v. Hill, S. U. C. R. 502.

Held, that a plea of election by demandant to take under her husband's will was not sustained upon the evidence set out in this case, Pulker v. Evans, 13 U. C. R. 546.

Dower. Plea, on equitable grounds, that the lusband devised to demandant half an acre of land, after the decease of the husband's parents, for her life, and all the rest of his real and personal estate to defendants in the state of the sta received from defendants, executors under the will, the said sum of 812 for mourning, and continued to live on the land under the will for six months, when she left of her own accord; that defendants have been and are ready to carry out the provisions of the will in her favour; and so defendants say that the demandant ought not in equity to have dower, and duly elected to accept the provisions of the said will in lieu thereof:—Held, on demurrer, no defence, for the acceptance of the 812 and continuing on the land for six months was not a sufficient election; that the words, "in lieu of dower" in the will applied rather to the 830; and the avernent of election was stated only as a conclusion from the previous facts. Cooper v. Watson, 23 U. C. R. 345.

Plea, on equitable grounds, that the husbana devised the land to defendant, in trust to maintain the demandant during her life in everything necessary for her comfort, and allow her two rooms in the house, and all the furniture, and provide her with a horse, two cows, and a servant girl; or if she preferred it should give her £50 a year, payable quarterly; that such allowance and maintenance was intended by testator to be in lieu of dower; and the demandant, since his death hitherto, in lieu of her dower hath elected to occupy the rooms, &c., and defendant hath provided her with all things required by the will, which she elected to take and did take in lieu of her dower:—Held, plea had, as not shewing a case in which equity would put the widow to her election. Baker v. Baker, 25 U. C. R. 448.

Dower. First plea, that demandant's bus-band by his will gave her an annuity of £25, chargeable on his estate, and a life estate in certain lands, and thereby declared that such annuity should be in lieu of dower; that demandant entered into possession of such property, and received the annuity, and elected to take and did take the same in lieu and satisfaction of her dower. Second plea, on equitable grounds, that by said will the husband gave demandant an annuity of £25, which was declared to be in lieu of dower, and was to be paid out of his estate by his executor, by the same will be devised certain land to her for life: that he afterwards died, leaving, besides land, personal estate sufficient to pay the annuity: that demandant entered on said land, and elected to receive said annuity and devises in lieu of her dower; but before any payment of such annuity had fallen due, she, against the will of the executor, posses-sed herself of the personal estate, and con-verted the same to her own use; and the executor having no other property out of which he could pay such annuity, was thereby prevented from paying the same, as he would otherwise have done pursuant to the will:— Held, on demurrer, both pleas good: that the first was clearly a good defence at law; and as to the second, though the demandant's wrongful act alone would not defeat her claim, wrongill act alone would not defeat her claim, yet there was, besides, an express averment that she elected to take the annuity and devises in lieu of dower, which was sufficient without shewing the receipt of any portion of the annuity. Walmsley v. Walmsley, 26 U. C. R. 392.

It appeared on the trial that demandant's husband, who was a potter, devised to each of his children certain real estate, and gave to his wife an annuity of £25, to be paid half yearly by his executor, and to be in lieu of dower, and devised to her certain town lots for life. The pottery he directed to be rented until his son J. should come of age, when all his estate not otherwise devised was to be divided amongst his children, subject to the zunnity. She was to have firewood off the premises in question; and his executors were to sell all his stock and farming utensils, &c. After the testator's death, in 1846, the executor, who consented to act at the demandant's urgent request, sold the stock, &c., and handed the whole proceeds to her. She kept the pottery until her son came of age, collected the debts, and having married six months after the testator's death, she and her second husband managed all the real estate and received the rents. The annuity was never specifically paid to her, but the rents exceeded it:—Held, that there was sufficient evidence to warrant a verdict for the tenant on a plea of electiop. Walmsley V. Walmsley 2, 92 U. C. R. 214.

To an action of dower defendant pleaded, on equitable grounds, that before the husband was seised his father owned the land, and conveyed it to the husband in consideration natural affection, and that the grantor and his wife should enjoy it for their lives and that of the survivor: that the husband leased it to his father and mother during their joint lives and the life of the survivor, which was intended for their support, and the mother, the survivor and one of the tenants, has no other means of support: that afterwards the husband devised his personal property and all his real estate to demandant until his two sons should come of age, on which event he devised a portion to each, subject to certain charges in favour of his wife, which devise he intended and by his will declared to be in lieu of dower: that neither of the sons attained twenty-one: that after the death of her husband the demandant took possession of, and had since enjoyed, all her husband's real estate, and took also the personal estate, and had used and disposed of the same for her own used and disposed of the same for her own use:—Held, on demurrer, a bad plea, for not alleging expressly an election by the widow, but leaving it to be inferred from the other statements. The evidence shewed that the testator died in debt; that the executor declined to prove the will, there being no money to pay probate or funeral expenses; that the widow sold some of the stock, horses and cows, transmit the feet in the stock horses and cows. to support the family, and others because there was no fodder to keep them; and the furni-ture, &c., was sold by the sheriff under execution. The real estate consisted of forty-five acres, without a house on it, leased on shares, and worth about $80 a year; and on her claiming dower five years before, the person working it had agreed to pay her $50 a year, which had been paid for one year:—Held, no evidence of an election to take under the will in lieu of dower. Reynolds v. Reynolds, 29 U. C. R. 225.

A testator devised to his wife all his real and personal property during widowhood, under which she entered upon the real estate, and took and applied to her own use the personal property. The court restrained an action for dower brought by her and her second husband, holding that she had elected to take under the will. Westacott v. Cockerline, 13 Gr. 79.

Where the question as to whether the widow had elected to take an annuity in lieu of dower, arose in connection with a claim of the defendant for past maintenance and education of the plaintiff, and was a mere matter of inference, depending to a certain extent on the amount of moneys the widow had received, the point was reserved until after the master had made his report. Walmstey v. Bull, 15 Gr. 210.

The widow remained on the farm, and received some small sums of money for her own use, but had never had set apart for her exclusive enjoyment the portion of the house devised to her:—Held, that these acts did not amount to that deliberate and well considered choice, made with a knowledge of rights and in full view of consequence, which is necessary to constitute an election. Coleman v. Glauville, 18 Gr. 42.

The testator made a provision in favour of his widow, much more advantageous to her than her interest as dowress, and which was expressly given in lieu of dower, and given during widowhood. The will was acted upon for two years, when the widow married a brother of her deceased husband, and thereupon filed a bill alleging that she had accepted the provisions and bequests made for and given to her by the will in ignorance of her right to dower, had she elected to take dower; and in her evidence she swore that she had been ignorant of such right until advised in respect thereof in 1880, shortly before her second marriage, and now sought to have dower assigned her:—Held, that the rule "ignorantia juris neminem excusar" applied, and the bill was dismissed with costs. Gillam v. Gillam, 20 Gr. 376.

Where a will in express terms makes provision for the festator's wife in lieu of dower, thus bringing directly to her mind that she cannot have dower and the benefits of the will as well, a much slighter dealing with the property left to her will evidence an election on her part to take under the will, than would be sufficient in the absence of such express provision:—Held, in this case, that, there being such provision, the evidence set out in the report of the case was sufficient to establish an election to take under the will, though otherwise it would not have been. Nixon v. Ashenhurst, 7 O. R. 664.

The testntor devised his farm to his only child, a daughter, giving his widow the use of it until the daughter became of age or married, and provided that in the event of the latter dying without issue "then in that case" it should be equally divided between his "near-est of kin;" and the daughter died while still an infant and unmarried. The widow remained in possession after the death of the testator, with her infant daughter, whom she supported out of the rents, until an order was made under R, S. O. 1887 c. 137, permitting her to lease the farm, to retain one-third of the rents for herself as dowress, and to apply the remaining two-thirds in supporting the infant:—Held, that she was put to her election by the terms of the will, but that she had not elected to take under it, and was therefore entitled to dower out of the farm in addition to the one-third in fee simple. Brabant v. Lalonde, 25 O. R. 379.

A testator left his wife all his personal estate absolutely, and all his real estate for life or widowhood, subject to which he devised "my said real estate" in specific parcels

On the 24th July, 1868, the plaintiff and her husband and trustees on her behalf executed a deed which, after reciting that disputes had arisen between the husband and wife and that an action for alimony was pending, provided for the separation of the husband and wife and the conveyance of certain property by the husband to trustees for the benefit of the wife. and contained a number of covenants, one of which was a covenant by the trustees "that the said (wife) will, whenever called upon, release her dower in any lands of which he, the said (husband), may hereinafter (sic) acquire a title." The husband died in January, 1898, having acquired, and being at the time of his death seized of, other lands, and in August, 1898, the wife brought this action claiming dower in these lands, having up to that time continued to have the beneficial use and possession of the lands mentioned in the deed of 1868:—Held, that the deed of 1868 provided a jointure for the wife within the provisions of s. 7 of 27 Hen. VIII. c. 10; that the acceptance of the deed and of the benefits conferred was an election by her thereby within that Act to accept the jointure; and that, therefore, she was not entitled to dower in the after acquired lands. Judgment in 30 O. R. 689 affirmed. Eves v. Booth, 27 A. R. 420.

4. Other Cases.

Effect of Election—Undevised Lands.]—A testator by his will gave to his widow an annuity of $4,000 in lieu of dower. His will contained certain devises, and gave other legacies and annuities which the testator charged on the whole of his estate not before devised, and he empowered his executors to sell any of his property which they should think necessary. The widow elected to take the annuity:
—Held, that she was entitled to dower out of any of the testator's lands, whether devised or not. Held, also, that the legacies and annuities were payable primarily out of the personal estate. Davidson v. Boomer, 18 Gr. 475.

Effect of Election where Several Parcels of Land.]—See Stewart v. Hunter, 2 Ch. Ch. 336; Corean v. Bessever, 5 O. R. 624; Leys v. Toronto General Trusts Co., 22 O. R. 603.

Legacy to Widow in Lieu of Dower-Right to Annual Specific Sum. |—A testator by his will bequeathed to his wife $150 a year, payable half-yearly out of the rent of his farm until the sale thereof, when she was to be paid the interest on $2,500 at 6 per cent.. or the $150. On the sale, $2,500 was to be left on mortgage or invested by the executors at interest payable half-yearly to the widow during her lifetime or widowhood, and such during her lifetime or widownood, and such provision was to be in lieu of dower. Lega-cies were given to each of testator's tweive children (one of whom was dead at the date of the will), to be paid out of the proceeds of the sale of the real estate. The residue of the deceased daughter's legacy was directed to be placed at interest and divided equally between her surviving children on their at taining twenty-one years, and in case any of testator's children died before receiving their full shares and leaving issue, the deceased's full shares and leaving issue, the necessers child's share was to be equally divided between his or her children; if such deceased child died without issue his or her share was to be divided equally between his or her surviving brothers and sisters. All the resistance has the property of the state and these photographics of the state and these photographics. due of the estate, not thereinbefore disposed of, he gave to his children "and their issue as aforesaid provided for" to be divided equally between them from time to time as the money should become payable. The estate proved in-sufficient to provide for the annuity and payment of the legacies in full, and the annual interest obtainable on the $2,500 was less than $150:—Held, that there was a gift to the widow of $150 a year, and not merely of the annual interest derivable from the investment of the $2,500, and that she was entitled to have it paid out of the residue in priority to the other legatees. Koch v. Heisey, 26 O.

V. EXCHANGE OF LANDS.

A wife cannot be endowed of land given and taken in exchange, but has her election to have one or the other. McLellan v. Meggatt, 7 U. C. R. 554; White v. Laing, 2 C. P. 186.

Dower. Plea, that the husband exchanged other lands with one F. for the lands in question, and that the demandant elected to be endowed of such other lands. To prove this exchange, an ordinary deed of bargain and sale of the other lands was produced, executed by demandant's husband, for an expressed consideration of £600; and it was shewn clearly by parole vidence that the transaction between F, and the husband was in fact an exchange: —Held, that such evidence could not avail; that the exchange must be proved in proper technical form, and by deed; and that the demandant was therefore entitled to succeed. Tousdey v. Smith, 12 U. C. R. 555.

Where the defence in dower rested upon an alleged exchange by the husband for other lands out of which the widow had been satisfied her dower, and no deeds were produced, and the only evidence for the defence consisted of parol statements that the husband had "traded" certain lands:—Held, not sufficient evidence to warrant a verdict for defendant. Stafford v. Trueman, 7 C. P. 41.

Plea, that during the marriage, the husband agreed with one D, to exchange the lands in question with other lands, and in pursuance thereof, they by deeds "conveyed" the lands to each other, D.'s wife barring her dower: that the demandant afterwards elected to take her dower in the other land, and by deed released the same to one C:—Held, plea bad, as not shewing strictly an "exchange" of the lands, for the word "convey" has not the same effect; and semble, no other word can be substituted. Leach v. Dennis, 24 U. C. R. 129.

VI. RIGHT TO DOWER.

1. In Mortgaged Lands.

(See, also, Mortgage.)

(a) Wife or Widow of Mortgagee.

Not entitled to dower. Ham v. Ham, 14 U. C. R. 497,

Reconveyance to Mortgagor—Joining in.]—A final order for forcelosure having been obtained, some time afterwards the mortgagor flied a bill to redeem, and the court had opened the foreclosure and granted redemption, it appearing that no change bad taken place in the relative positions of the parties:—Held, on a motion by the mortgage for payment out of court of the mortgage for payment out of court of the mortgage to join in the conveyance to the mortgagor to bur dower. Simpson v. Simpson, 1 Ch. Ch. 265.

(b) Wife or Widow of Mortgagor or of Owner of Equity.

Assignee of Mortgage for Term—Possossion—Sale under Execution.]—D. S., seised in fee of lands, mortgaged them for 1999 years to one S., who took possession. D. S. afterwards conveyed in fee to C., and after C.'s death the premises were sold to defendant at sheriff's sale under judgment against C. His widow then sued for dower:—Held, that she should have judgment for dower, with a cesset executio, the facts respectively and the second property of the secon

Ejectment against—Equitable Defence.]
—Held, that the equitable defence in ejectment in this cause, filed under the Administration of Justice Act of 1873, ss. 3 and 4, setting up the right of a widow and dowress, who had paid off a mortgage made by her husband, to possession of the land as against the plaintiffs, her children, until she should be repaid, and afterwards as dowress; and setting up also a lien for improvements made under a lease from her, fully set out in the report of this case, though probably not affording a good equitable defence, should be allowed:—Held, also, that a plaintiff may reply and demur to such an equitable defence. 36 Vict. c. 22, as to improvements on land made in mistake before notice, and the lien therefor, discussed. Carrick v. Smith, 34 U. C. R. 289

Equitable Estate — Scisin.] — A person equitably entitled to lands (one who had not paid up his purchase money or obtained a conveyance) morgaged them with a power of sale. The power was not exercised until after the death of the mortgagor; afterwards his widow filed a bill against the purchaser under the power for dower. A demurrer for want of equity was allowed; dower attaching only to such equitable estates as the husband dies seised of, and the sale when made having relation to the time of creating the power, and thereby overreaching the title to dower, which had in the meantime attached. Smith v. Smith, 3 Gr. 451.

Immediate Mortgage to Vendor to Secure Purchase Money—Sciein,1—Where an estate was conveyed to a vender, and immediately mortgaged back again to the seller to secure payment of the purchase money:—Held, that the widow of the mortgagor was entitled to dower. Potts v. Meyers, 14 U. C. R. 439.

A. conveyed land to B. in 1833, and on the same day took a mortgage for the whole purchase money. B, paid nothing for either principal or interest, and in 1840 re-conveyed abeliance of the control of the either mortgage or reconveyance, and of the either mortgage or reconveyance, and the control of the either mortgage of reconveyance, and the control of the either mortgage of reconveyance, and the control of the either mortgage of t

The seisin of a husband when he takes an estate in fee, and immediately mortgages it to secure a portion of the purchase money, is sufficient for the wife's right of dower to attach to it. $Lynch \cdot O'Hara, 6 \cdot C. P. 259$.

L. purchased from S., who conveyed to him, and immediately took back a mortgage to secure the purchase money, in which L.'s wife did not join. L. afterwards conveyed his equity of redemption to H., who subsequently conveyed to S., and S. then sold to another have for down to the sold to have the sold the sold to have the sold t

Joining in Mortgage — Effect of — Whether Dower Based on Surplus or Whole

Value.]—A vendor took from a purchaser a mortgage for the whole purchase money, in which his wife joined to bar dower:—Held, the husband having died, and the property having been sold, that the widow was entitled to dower in the excess, after payment of mortgage money and interest, but no more, Campbell v. Royal Canadian Bank, 19 Gr. 334.

A wife joined in a mortgage made by her husband for the purpose of barring her dower, and he subsequently mortgaged the equity of redemption, to which deed she was not a party:—Held, that she was entitled to dower as against the second mortgagee. Held, also, that under G. O. 220, the master, in his subsequent report in a suit by the first mortgagee for the sale of the mortgage premises had power to report the widow's claim to dower against the second mortgagee as a "snecial circumstance." Leave to appeal from the master's report, after an unexplained delay of six months, was refused. Dawson v. Bank of Whitehaven, 37 L. T. N. S. 64, distinguished. Ronce v. Wert, 7 P. R. 252.

Where a woman joins with her husband to bear her dower in creating a mortgage for securing a debt to her husband, and after his death the lands are sold during the widow's lifetime, she is entitled to dower out of the whole value of the mortgaged premises, and not only out of their value beyond the mortgage debt. Doan v. Davis, 23 Gr. 207.

Where in a suit for partition, a sale is ordered of an estate, subject to a mortgace, securing a debt of the ancestor, and in which his wife had joined to bar her dower, the master, before estimating the dower of the widow, should not deduct the costs of the suit; the widow's right in such a case being to have her dower out of the gross value of the estate. The interest of the purchase money of the estate so sold commenced to run on the 31st March, 1875, and the report of the master bore date the 3rd February, 1876. An appeal, on the ground that the master should have computed interest on the sum allowed for dower from the former date, was dismissed with costs, the court assuming that the value of the dower was ascertained at the date of the report, Doan v. Davis, 23 Gr. 207, approved and followed. Lindsay v. Lindsay, 23 Gr. 210,

Held, on rehearing (affirming the judgment in 25 Gr. 276), that a woman is entitled to dower in lands on which she and her deceased husband had joined in creating a mortgage to secure a debt of the husband; and that in ascertaining such dower the value of the whole estate is the basis of computation, not the amount of surplus after discharging the claim of the mortgage. Dawson v. Bank of Whitehaven, 6 Ch. D. 218, observed upon and distinguished. Robertson v. Robertson, 25 Gr. 486. See also Re Robertson, 24 Gr. 442 (post Mortgage, VIII. 15).

The statute 42 Vict. c. 22 (O.), "An Act to amend the law of dower," does not apply to mortgages made before it was passed. Martindale v. Clarkson, 6 A. R. 1.

H., being possessed of some lands, executed mortgages of them, some of which were given to secure unpaid purchase money, and others to secure the repayment of money lent to H. The wife of the mortgagor had joined in the mortgages to bar dower. H. having died iniestate:—Held, on rule of the lands under decrees, directing a sum in gross, in lieu of dower, to be paid to the widow, that she was entitled to dower out of the whole amount realized from the sale, after deducting therefrom the amount of the mortgages given by H. to secure unpaid purchase money, but not of the other mortgages. Re Hopkins, Barnes v. Hopkins, 8 P. R. 160.

The defendant, a judgment debtor, being the owner of lands subject to mortgages in which his wife land joined, sold the same, and allowed her to receive a part of the purchase money for her dower. On an application for a ca. sa.:—Held, that she was not entitled to anything for dower, and that 42 Vict. c. 22, s. 2 (O.), does not apply to a case of voluntary sale by a husband. Calvert v. Black, 8 P. R. 255.

W. H. in 1883 made a mortgage of vacant land to a loan company, purporting to be a security for an advance of $6,000, but with an agreement of even date that—the purpose of the loan being to enable W. H. to erect a house on the land—the mortgage money should be advanced only on architect's certificates of the progress of the building. M. A. H., wife of W. H., joined in this mortgage for the purpose of barring her dower only. The house was built, and the mortgage moneys went into the building as agreed. In 1886 W. H. died, and in the course of the administration of his estate real and personal by the court this land was sold:—Held, that M. A. H. was entitled to dower in the full value of the land out of the balance of purchase money remaining after the payment off of the mortgage, and this on the authority of Re Robertson, 25 Gr. 276, 486, and by virtue of 42 Vict. c. 22, s. 1 (0.) Whatever may be the full meaning of 42 Vict. c. 22, s. 1 (0.), it cannot be held to have the effect of making a dowress less than they were held to be in Robertson v. Robertson, R. Rober

Under ss. 5 and 6 of the Dower Act, R. S. O. 187, c. 133, a wife who joins to bar dower in a mortgage of land made by her husband to secure a part of the purchase money, is entitled to dower notwithstanding a conveyance by him of the equity of redemption without her concurrence. The wife so joining in the mortgage is not merely a surety for her husband; and she is entitled to dower out of the surplus only of the land or money left after satisfying the mortgage debt. Re Hague, 14 O. R. 660, Re Croskery, 16 O. R. 207, and opinion of Patterson, J. A., in Martindale v. Clarkson, 6. A. R. 1, dissented from. Pratt v. Bunnell, 21 O. R. 15.

Where lands mortgaged to secure a loan have been sold by the mortgagee, the wife of the mortgagro, who has joined in the mortgage to bar her dower, is entitled to dower out of the surplus, computed on what would be the full value of the land, if unincumbered. Pratt v. Bunnell, 21 O. R. 1, not followed so far as the reasoning and dicta therein are opnosed to the above decision. Gemmill v. Nelligan, 26 O. R. 307.

Joining in Mortgage—Interest in Equity —Parties.]—Where the wife joins in a mortgage of her husband's estate as a security to the mortgagee, and for no other purpose, she parts with her dower so far only as may be necessary for the purpose, and she is a necessary party to a subsequent sale by the husband free from dower. A wife joined in a mortgage of her husband's estate to secure a loan of one-fourth or one-fifth of the value of the property, and he subsequently sold the property, his wife claimed to be entitled to dower, and refused to join in the conveyance without a reasonable compensation being made to her; her right to dower being supposed by all parties to exist, her husband had a piece of land conveyed to her, which she accepted, and thereupon she signed the conveyance of the mortgaged estate. The transaction appearing to have been for the interest of creditors, it was held to be valid, independently of the question whether her claim to dower was in such a case well founded in point of law or not, Forrest y, Luycock, 18 Gr. 611.

In 1881 C. S. mortgaged certain lands to J. A., his wife, M. S., joining and barring dower. In 1884 C. S., sold the lands to C. M. S. grain joining in the conveyance. C. gave back a mortgage to secure payment of part of the lands of lands

Joining in Mortgage—Interest in Equity—Equitable Doncer, 1—Where one mortgaged certain lands in fee, his wife joining to bur dower, and subsequently in his lifetime conveyed away his equity of redemption, and the mortgages afterwards sold puder the power of sale and had a surplus in their hands, which they desired to pay into court under R. S. O. 1887 c. 133, s. 7:—Held, that they should be allowed to do so, in view of the conflict of opinion and decision as to ss. 5 and onlife of opinion and decision as to ss. 5 and onlife of the sale of t

There can be no dower in land of which the husband had merely acquired the equity of redemption, and which he had parted with. Re Croskery, 16 O. R. 207, followed. Gardner v, Brown, 19 O. R. 202.

Although, since the passing of 42 Vict. c. 22 (0.), an Act to amend the law of dower, a married woman is entitled to dower out of an equity of redemption in land, whether her husband dies seised of it or not, where such equity has arisen by his having executed a mortgage of the legal estate in which she has joined to bar her dower, she is and entitled to dower out of an equity of re-demption purchased and sold by him in his lifetime, the legal estate never having vested in him. Martindale v. Clarkson, 6 A. R. I, distinguished. And where a purchaser of land subject to a mortgage paid off and procured a discharge in favour of the mortgagor, and on the same day obtained his conveyance from him, giving back a mortgage, with bar of dower, for the balance of the purchase money, all of which instruments were registered in the above order, it was :-Held, that the wife of such purchaser was not entitled to dower out of a surplus arising on a sale under a subsequent incumbrance, her husband never having been even momentarily seised of the legal estate in the land. Re Luckhardt, 29 O. R. 111.

Mortgage Paid Off-Discharge not Reg-Assignment for Creditors — Subsequent Extinguishment of Mortgage.]-In repect to discharges of mortgages, what the Registry Act makes tantamount to a reconveyance is the certificate of discharge and the registration of it, not the execution of the cer-tificate merely. Therefore, where in 1868 R. O'N., in partnership with J. O'N., executed a mortgage on certain real estate, and his wife joined to bar her dower, and the mortgage money was subsequently paid, and a discharge of the mortgage signed but not registered, and afterwards the partnership became insolvent, and the mortgagee's executors conveyed the property to the assignee in insolvency, who had now contracted to sell to a purchaser :-Held, that the wife of R. O'N, could not have dower at law in the land in question, neither could she have dower out of the equitable estate, because that had passed away from her husband to the assignee, and the former could not now die seised of it. In 1868 J. O'N. and R. O'N, executed a mortgage on certain land, which was in full force and unsatisfied at the date of their insolvency. Afterwards, in 1879, it was declared by judgment of the court to have been extinguished by lapse of time. Neither of the wives of J. O'N, and R. O'N. joined in this mortgage :—Held, nevertheless, that, in the face of the assignment in insol vency, the extinguishment of the mortgage did not have the effect of again vesting the estate in J. O'N. and R. O'N., so that the dower of their wives attached. In re Music Hall Block, Dumble v. McIntosh, 8 O. R. 225.

Mortgage before Marriage—Donce in Equity or Contribution.]—D, being owner in fee of certain lands, on 4th March, 1884, mortgaged the same to secure payment five years after date of certain moneys. On 15th March, 1884, he married the plaintiff, and died intestate on 16th August, 1884. He left no other estate:—Held, that the plaintiff could claim dower only in the equity of redemption, unless she contributed ratably to the amount of the mortgage incumbrance. Method of arriving at the amount of dower in such cases pointed out. Reid v. Reid, 29 Gr. 372, commented upon. Dobbin v. Dobbin, 11 O. R. 534.

Mortgagee — Arrangement with Heir— Dower notwithstanding.] — A mortgage was created by an absolute conveyance with a separate defeazance, and the mortgagor having died, his heir effected an arrangement with the mortgagee, who conveyed to the heir, and accepted from him a deed of a portion of the land in discharge of the mortgage debt. The heir afterwards sold to a person who had notice of the several conveyances:—Held, that the widow of the mortgagor was entitled to dower in the portion conveyed by the heir to the purchaser. Methods v, Wood, 15 Gr. 92.

Mortgagee not in Possession — Action against.]—Bower may be maintained against a mortgagee in fee, although not in possession, and although the mortgage entitles the mortgage to bold until default, which has not been made. Stewart v. Kay, 25 U. C. R. 15. See, also, Walker v. Boutlon, 6 O. S. 553.

Omission of Bar of Dower-Wife Executing Mortgage-Reformation. |- A voluntary deed will not be reformed against the grantor. And where the defendant's husband, having appropriated moneys of a client in his hands for investment, secretly executed in the client's favour a statutory mortgage not containing a bar of dower, the defendant being a party to and executing the mortgage, and subsequently after her husband's death paying, with knowledge of the facts, an instalment of interest due under it, an action to reform the mortgage by inserting a proper bar of dower was dismissed, there being no consideration to support a contract by the defendant with the plaintiffs to bar her dower. Bellamy v. Badgerow, 24 O. R. 278.

Party to Mortgage Action.] — See MORTGAGE, IV. S (b).

Proceeds of Sale—Priorities—Creditors.]
—Where a woman bars her dower in a mortgage to secure a debt of her husband, and after his death the property is sold for more than the claim of the mortgage, the widow will be entitled to have her dower secured out of the surplus in preference to the simple contract creditors of her husband. Sheppard v.
Sheppard v.

A widow who has barred her dower in a mortgage given by the husband for his own delt, is entitled to have the mortgage paid off by the husband's assets. If she claim dower merely out of the equity of redemption, she has priority over creditors, but if out of the corpus of the property, she is postponed to them. On a sale of the lands, as soon as the debts of the husband are paid, she takes precedence over the heir and volunteers claiming under the husband, and becomes absolutely entitled to her rights as dowress in the balance of the proceeds. Sheppard v. Sheppard, 14 Gr. 174, considered, Re McMorris, S. C. L. J. 284.

A testator while married purchased the equity of redemption in lands to which he afterwards died beneficially entitled. The widow claimed dower out of the whole property, both legal and equitable, and that the surplus money produced by a sale of the premises after paying off the mortgage, being less than one-third of the whole purchase money, should be invested for her benefit, as her dower: but there being creditors, and specific and pecuniary legatees under the will of the testator, whose claims would exceed the surplus:—Held, that the widow was only entitled to dower in the surplus money which represented the value of the equity of redemption. Thorpe v. Richards, 15 Gr. 403.

Where a wife joins in a mortgage she is not entitled on the death of her husband, insolvent, to have the debt paid in full out of the assets to the prejudice of creditors. Baker v. Dawbarn, 19 Gr. 113.

Proceeds of Sale-Inchoate Dower-Sum Representing Value of—Payment into Court. Certain lands were subject to a first mortgage, a charge registered in respect to the price of an engine, and a mortgage to the plaintiff registered subsequently to the charge; and the lands having been sold under the power of sale in the first mortgage, a contest arose in respect to the surplus after satisfaction of the first mortgage. The engine company had resumed possession of the engine, and sold it, and claimed the balance of the price under the charge out the surplus, in priority to the plaintiff :-Held, that they were entitled to make that claim, and that, having sold the engine without notice to the plaintiff, the latter was engreater sum could have been realized, if it had been properly sold after proper notice:

—Held, also, that the plaintiff alone was entitled to the value of the interest of the wife of the owner of the equity of redemption in the land as inchoate dowress; inasmuch as she had barred her dower in his favour, whereas she had not done so in connection with the charge of the engine company. In the absence of arrangement, the value of this interest must be ascertained and retained in court, to be paid out to the plaintiff if the right of dower attached by the wife surviving her husband, and to the engine company if it did not attach. Discher v. Canada Permanent Loan and Sav-ings Co., 18 O. R. 273.

Purchase Subject to Mortgage - Arrears of Dower-Equity of Redemption.]-Where one died entitled to an equity of redemption in certain real estate, which he had originally purchased subject to the mortgage still existing thereon, and, the same having been sold in certain administration proceedings, his widow now claimed arrears of dower in respect thereof during the period between the death and sale, when she was in possession by herself or her tenants:—Held, that there being no assignment of dower, and the husband not having died seised in fee so as to give his widow legal dower, she was not en-titled to arrears of dower as of right, but only upon the equitable consideration of the court, and the proper mode of exercising the same was to deduct from the rents received by the widow, plus an occupation rent charged against her, so much as she had properly applied in meeting necessary outlay and expenditure in respect of the land and buildings, and allow her one-third of the residue as her arrears of dower. Re Percy, Stewart v. Percy, 11 O. R. 374.

Sale Under Decree—Conveyance to Purchaser—Parties.]—If the wife of the mortgager join in the execution of the incumbrance, and a sale of the mortgaged estate is afterwards effected under a decree of the court made in a cause instituted upon such mortgage, it is not necessary for her to join in the conveyance to the purchaser. Moore v. Shinners, I Ch. Ch. 59.

Sale Under Decree — Neglect to Prove Claim—Bar.]—The widow of a mortgagor, the defendant in a mortgage suit, did not prove her claim for dower on the reference before the master, as it was not then certain that the rights of the mortgagee would be fully protected, and she was not found an incumbrancer by the report. By consent of all parties a sale was had, and the purchaser paid ten per cent, of the purchase money down, but subsequently applied for and obtained from the referee an order dispensing with the payment of the purchase money into, court, and vesting the estate in the purchaser. The widow opposed the granting of this order, claiming to be allowed in to prove her claim for dower, but without avail. An appeal was allowed and the referee's order reversed, but without costs, as the dilatory conduct of the widow had invited discussion. Hyde v. Barton, 8 P. R. 205.

Several Mortwages—Bar of Dower in One.]—Where a mortgagor has executed several mortgages, in one only of which his wife joined, the proper decree on a bill for fore-closure against the widow and devisees of the mortgagor, is one in the usual form against them all, with a declaration that upon nayment of the mortgage executed by the widow, she shall, if she choose, be let into her dower. Thibbdo v. Collar, 1 Gr. 147.

(c) Wife or Widow of Mortgagor's Prede-

Bar of Dower—Non-registration—Priority of Subsequent Mortgage, I—Certain land was devised to the testator's sons charged with an annuity to the widower therein. The dower therein the widower therein the widower was not regard the land to C. in March. 1879, and the mort of the widow of the widow of the widow of the widow signed to M. and registered until January. 1880. Some was given to M. and registered the same month. In this mortgage the widow joined barring her dower and releasing her annuity for the benefit of M. She had had knowledge of the prior mortgage when it was made and had refused to join in it. The second mortgage, not being aware, when the mortgage was executed, of the prior incumbrance, gained priority, and the land was sold to satisfy his mortgage; the proceeds of the sale being more than sufficient for that purpose, the surplus was claimed by both independent in 16 A. R. 224, which had reversed the decision in 16 O. R. 321, sub nom. Maclennan v. Gray, that the security for which the dower had been barred and the annuity released having been satisfied, the widow was entitled to the fund, as representing her interest in the land, in priority to C. Gray v. Coughlin, 18 S. C. R. 553.

2. Other Cases.

Alien's Land.]—The widow of an alien naturalized is entitled to dower. White v. Laing, 2 C. P. 186.

The widow of an alien is entitled to dower in land of which her husband has been seised during his lifetime. Davenport v. Davenport, 7 C. P. 401.

Equitable Interest.]—4 Will. IV. c. 1, giving dower out of equitable interests, applies as well where the parties were married after as before the Act. McIntosh v. Wood, 15 Gr. 92.

Joint Tenancy. — The death of one of two joint tenants during their joint seisin passes the title to the other joint tenant free from dower of the deceased tenant's widow. Haskill v. Fraser, 12 C. P. 383.

Lands Conveyed by Impeached Deed——listence of Consideration.]—A. conveys land in the Consideration (N. W., and the Consideration) and the Consideration (N. W., and the Consideration (N. W., and the Consideration) and that the claim for dower pesting upon the seisin under it was not sustainable. Wilson (N. Wilson, S. C. P. 525)

Lands Conveyed by Impeached Deed—Consideration.]—A, entered into an agreement whereby he conveyed part of his land to his son 1c, "on necount of natural love," the son to give his father one-half of the produce, if demanded:—Held, a valuable consideration. A, afterwards by deed conveyed to others these premises, and their assignee having commenced ejectment, L's widdw obtained an injunction against the action. L's widow having meantime internarried, the assignee moved to dissolve, urging that the widow's estate had determined, and that it was defeasible, and had been defented by the testator's subsequent transfer for value, under 27 Eliz, c. 4; but the application was, under the circumstances, refused. Leech v. Leech, 11 Gr. 572.

Lands Conveyed Subject to Agreement. —Where property was conveyed to a busband, under an agreement with the grantee that the grantor should be allowed to remain in possession for life of a specified portion:—Held, that the widow of the grantee had no right to dower out of this portion during the life of the grantor. Slater, 17 Gr. 45.

Lands Conveyed to Person in Possession. — Property concel by a married woman was in possession of her and her husband; W, their second son, lived with them. The wife died, and the husband afterwards left the remises, but W, continued to reside there, After the death of their father, L, the eldest son of the original owner, conveed in 18:22 to W, who was still in sole possession; J, 's wife did not join in the conveyance;—Held, that there having been no disseisin, and J, having conveyed before the passing of the Real Property Act, his widow was entitled to dower, R Higgins, 19 Gr, 203.

Lands Devised for Maintenance— Election.]—Held, that a devise of land by the husband to his widow for her own and her son's support till they should come of age, did not make her tenant of the freehold, so as to prevent her from recovering dower, she not having elected to take under the devise. Reynolds v. Reynolds, 29 U. C. R. 225. (See as to Election, ante, IV.)

Lands Held in Trust.]—J. W. B., a widrower, was locatee of the Crown, and agreed with his son, J. B., to assign his interest in the land on condition of his son's making certain payments, and performing certain services for the father, which were all duly made and performed; and afterwards the patent was issued in the name of J. B., by which name the father was known to the officers of the land granting department. Meanwhile, before the issuing of the patent, the father married again. The son, during all the father's life, continued to occupy the premises, making valuable improvements, without any claim by the father except for his support under the agreement made between the father and son. After the father's death, the widow filed a bill for dower in the premises, but the court held, that, even admitting that the grant of the land was to, and was by the Government meant to be to, the father, he could be treated only as a trustee for the son; and dismissed the bill with costs. Bursa v. Burns, 2.1 Gr. 7.

Lands Sold for Taxes.]—A sale of land for taxes destroys the right of the widow of the owner to dower. Tomlinson v. Hill, 5 Gr. 231.

Lands Sold Under Execution.]—The dower of a wife is not barred by the sale in execution of her husband's estate. Walker v. Powers, M. T. 4 Vict.

C. died seised in fee of land, having devised the same to his wife for life, and after her death to his son, the demandant's husband, in fee. The testator's widow, the devisee for life, died before demandant's husband, and during her life his interest was sold under a fi. fa. against lands, and conveyed to one Ja, who having recovered possession sold to the tenant, who mortgaged back again to J., but continued in nossession. It was not shewn whether all the mortgage money had been paid or not; but the time for payment of several of the instalments had not arrived:—Held, that the demandant could not succeed, for the husband was never so seised as to entitle his widow to dower, his reversionary interest having been sold during his lifetime. Cumming v. Alguire, 12 U. C. R. 330. Auproved in Pukker e. Ecans, 13 U. C. R. 340.

See, also, Chisholm v. Tiffany, 11 U. C R. 338, ante, 1 (b.).

Lands Sold Under Partition Decree.]
—See Re Hewish, 17 O. R. 454.

Partnership Lands. |—Dower. Plea, on equitable grounds, that the land was part of the partnership pronenty and the stock in trade of the husband and S. trading together as merchants, and was purchased by them as such partnership money, and used in the said partnership business, and that the husband was never seised thereof, otherwise than as such partner:—Held, that the plea sufficiently shewed the land to have been purchased for partnership purposes, and formed a good defence. Conger v. Platt, 25 U. C. R. 273.

It appearing that certain lands owned by J. O'N, and R. O.N. were part of the assets of the partnership, having been purchased with partnership funds, and the rent afterwards collected and received by the partnership moneys:—Held, that the wives of J. O'N, and R. O'N, had no inchoate right of dower in these lands, In re Music Hall Block, Dumble v. McIntosh, 8 O. R. 225.

Pleading—Widow a Defendant]—Where a widow is made a defendant as being ennitled to dower, it is not sufficient for the bill to allege that the husband died leaving her his widow; the bill should further expressly aver that she is entitled to dower, and that she claims to be so entitled. Martin v. Mctilashan, 15 Gr. 485.

Remainder with Surrender of Life Interest. 1—A, by will devised a certain lot of land to B, for her natural life, and then of C, during his natural life, and then to its heirs forever. B, subsequently executed a writing by which she agreed to demise the land in question for all her term and interest to C, in consideration of his allowing her the occupation and use of certain portions of the premises, &c.:—Held, that the force of the surrender to C, which was effected by the demise to him of all the term of the interest of B, the tenant for life, passed to him an estate of fee simple in possession, whereof his wife was entitled to dower. Bress v. Hardy, 9 C, P. 120.

Reversion. |—Where a husband died entitled to the reversion in fee in certain lands expectant on a life estate therein:—Held, that dower could not be claimed therein, for that the husband had never been seised during coverture of an estate of inheritance in possession. The demandant, who was a stranger to the life estate, was held not entitled to set up that there had been a forfeiture thereof by non-payment of rent or other breach of covenant. Leitch v. McLellon, 2 O. R. 587.

Temporary Contingent Interest.]—A bestator, after making specific devises of certain lands, added, "at which time," (i.e., after his youngest son should have arrived at the age of twenty-one years,) "it is my will that the whole of my lands be divided in four equal parts; one part of which I give and bemeath to my two daughters. A and B, the other three parts to be divided among my three sons, C., D., and E.;"—Semble, that under this devise of the residuary estate the devisees took not a vested estate, but a contingent and future estate, and that for life only; the estate in the meantime vesting in the heir-at-law. Semble, also, that the heir-at-law would not entitle his widow to her claim for dower, the estate not being a beneficial estate of inheritance, but a mere temporary interest of uncertain duration, contingent upon a distribution being made in pursuance of the will. McLellan v, Mcggatt, 7 U. C. R. 554.

Tenants in Common.]—Where the husband is seised as tenant in common, his wife may be endowed. Ham v. Ham, 14 U. C. R.

Unpatented Lands.]—Where a nominee of lands before patent issued conveyed them away, being unmarried, and afterwards, having obtained the patent, made a new conveyance to the same party, being then married:—Held, that his wife could not claim dower, as she was estopped by the deed made before the patent issued. McLean v. Laidden. 2 U. C. R. 292.

Unpatented Lands.]-A widow is entitled to dower in lands purchased from the Crown by her husband, and whereof he died possessed, although no patent issued, and the purchase money had not been all paid. She is also entitled to one-third of the rents and profits for six years before the suit. Craig v. Templeton, 8 Gr. 483.

VII. RIGHTS OF PURCHASERS WHERE THERE IS OUTSTANDING DOWER,

Abatement of Purchase Money— Forum.]—An application by a purchaser in a suit for specific performance for abatement of purchase money, on the ground of outstanding dower, should be made in court and not in chambers. Shinners v. Graham, 1 Ch, Ch. 212.

Application to be Relieved from Contract—Obstacle Created by Applicant.]—At a sale under a decree on the 25th Marci, 1879, A, purchased the land in question. On the 19th April, 1879, he transferred his interest to W., and on the 20th April one H. purchased and took an assignment of the dower of one S. in the land. On the 19th rebrary, 1889, A. applied to be relieved from the contract to purchase on the ground of the outstanding dower. The evidence shewed that S. had agreed with the heir-atianv to accept a gross sum in lieu of her dower, that W. really purchased the dower, but took the assignment in H. is name, and that this application, though in A.'s name, and that this application, though in A.'s name, was really made by W:—Held, that no relief could be granted, the applicant having himself created the obstacle by means of which he sought to prevent the sale being carried out. Fraser v. Gunn, 8 P. R. 278.

Conveyance Subject to Dower—Abatemater of Purchase Money.]—Where a party agrees to convey property, he is bound to do so free from dower; or if the wife will not release her dower, then to convey subject thereto, with an abatement in the purchase money. Kendree v. Shewan, 4 Gr. 578.

Lunatic's Dower—Order Barring.]—On a sale of land by an infant under R. S. O. 1877 c. 40, s.s. 75-85, an order was made under 44 Vict. c. 14, s. 5 (O.), barring the dower of the infant's mother, who was a lunatic and confined in an asylum. Re Colthart, 9 P. R. 356.

Partition Decree—Sale of Lands Under.]

—On a vendor and purchaser application, it appeared that in 1877 a decree was made for partition or sale of the lands in question, to which four married men were parties, whose wives, however, were not made parties, either originally or in the master's office, and the lands were sold pursuant to the decree, and a vesting order granted to the purchaser, under whom the present vendor claimed title:—Held, that, notwithstanding the Conveyancing Act, R. S. O. 1887 c. 44. s. 53, s.-s. 10, the inchoate right of dower of the wives was not affected by the proceedings. Re Hall-Dare's Contract, 21 Ch. D. 41, considered. In the case of two of the wives, their husbands had, prior to the partition proceedings, mortgaged the lands, the wives joining to bar their dower:—Held, that these two no longer had any right of dower. Re Croskery, 16 O. R. 207, 209, referred to. Re Hewish, 17 O. R. 454.

Removal of as an Incumbrance— Refusal to Enforce Contract.]—The court refused to enforce a contract for the sale of land, which was subject to an outstanding claim for dower, until the title to dower was removed. Chantler v. Ince, 7 Gr. 432, observed upon, Thompson v. Brunskill, ib. 542, approved of, Gamble v. Gummerson, 9 Gr. 193.

Removal of as an Incumbrance— Specific Performance—Abstrant.]—A)though at law the right to dower is, during the life of the vendor, a nominal incumbrance only, the purchaser has a right in equity to compel its removal, or to have specific performance of the contract, with an abstement in the amount of the purchase money in respect of such incumbrance. Van Norman v. Beaupre, 5 Gr. 559.

An owner of real estate who alone enters into an agreement to sell will be required to procure a bar of his wife's dower or abate the purchase money in the event of her refusal. Van Norman v. Beaupre, 5 Gr. 599, followed. Loughcad v. Stubbs, 27 Gr. 387.

Setting aside Portion of Purchase Money.]—Where in a suit for specific performance the wife of the vendor refuses to join in the consequence the purchase the property of the purchase of the purchase the purchase is to set aside a sufficient portion of the purchase money to indemnify him against the claim for dower in the event of the wife subsequently becoming entitled thereto by surviving her husband; the interest during the joint lives of the vendor and his wife to be paid to him, and also the principal so set aside on her decease. Skinner v. Ainsworth, 24 Gr. 148.

VIII. SALE OF RIGHT TO DOWER UNDER EXECUTION.

Before Assignment—Interest,!—A right to dower is not saleable under execution against the lands of a dowress. Till dower is assigned she has no estate in the land, nor even a right of entry; neither does her interest come within the meaning of the words (in C. S. U. C. c. 90, s. 5.) "a contingent, or executory, or a future interest, or a possibility coupled with an interest." McAnnany v. Turnbull, 10 Gr. 290.

Inchoate Right. — The court of chancery has jurisdiction in a suit, as well as on a potition, to decree a sale of an inchoate right of dower. Cassey v. Cassey, 15 Gr. 399.

Inchoate Right.]—The inchoate right of a married woman to dower is not saleable under execution against her. Allen v. Edinburgh Life Assurance Co., 19 Gr. 248.

Rents.)—The question whether the right of a widow to dower, which is not yet assigned to her, is seizable under common law process, or is only so liable in equity, considered and treated of. In a suit for administration, it was found that the widow of the textator was indebted to the extate in a considerable amount, and the plaintiff, a creditor of the extate, sought to set off her indebtedness against the amount which might be found due to her in respect of past as well as of future dower:—Held, that, whether her right to dower was or was not exigible under common law process, the creditors were entitled to this relief; but, as part of her indebtedness was composed of rents received by her, she was entitled to retain one-third of such rents by way of arrears of dower, and thus reduce the amount of her indebtedness. Williams v. Repnolds, 25 Gr. 49.

Statute—Retrospective.]—Since 40 Vict. c. 8 (O.), which is retrospective in its oneration, the right of a woman to dower, as well during the life of her husband as after his death, is such an interest in lands as can be sold under a fi. fa. at law. Allen v. Edinburgh Life Assurance Co., 25 Gr. 306. See S. C., 26 Gr. 192.

IX. MISCELLANEOUS CASES,

Administrator—Power to Compromise.]
—An administrator with the will annexed has no authority as such to compromise dower or other claims by assigning to the claimant a portion of the real estate of the deceased. Iricin v. Toronto General Trusts Co., 24 A. R. 484.

Assessment Before Assignment of Dower, I—The widow of an intestate owner continuing to live on the property with her children, who own the estate and work and manage it, should not till her dower is assimed, be assessed, nor should any interest of hers be deducted from the whole assessed value, she not having the management of the estate. Brackville Election Petition, 7 C. L. J. 221.

Charges on Land—Liability of Douress—Remainderman—Interest.!—The general rule as between a tenant for life and the remainderman in respect of a charge upon an estate, is, that the tenant for life must keep down the interest on such charge, and the duty of the remainderman is to pay the principal. This rule was applied where a widow claimed to have dower out of her husband's estate, which at the time of her marriage was subject to certain legacies and a mortgag, in preference to an annuity given her by his will; she being held bound to pay one-third of the interest on these claims until they became payable, after which the remainderman must pay all the interest as well as the principal thersof. Reid v. Reid, 29 Gr. 372.

Chattel Mortgage—Security for Bar of Dover.]—Validity of chattel mortgage executed by a husband to his wife to secure her against loss by reason of her having barred her dower in certain mortgages of land. Morris v. Martin, 19 O. R. 564.

Connterclaim for Dower—Decree.]—In ejectment the defendant was allowed to set up a counterclaim for dower out of the lands in question. Remarks as to the form of decree in such a case. Glass v. Glass, 9 P. R. 14

Dower Act—Retroactivity.]—The Dower Act, 32 Vict. c. 7, s. 3 (O.), is retrospective. Re Tate, 5 C. L. J. 260.

Dower Act — Effect on Jurisdiction of Court of Chancery.]—The jurisdiction of the court of chancery in cases of dower has not been ousted by the Dower Act of Ontario, 32 Viet. c. 7 (O.) Grieve v. Woodruff, 1 A. R.

Executors—Payment to Widow—Release of Douer.)—The defendants, executors of Z., gave a bank on the 20th April. 1858. a confession of judgment for £217,637 8s., in which sum the estate of Z. was at that time indebted, and judgment thereon was entered on the following day. This action was brought to test the validity of the judgment, the plaintiffs contending that the judgment was recovered in fraud of them and other creditors. It appeared that defendants, being trustees of the real estate of Z., as well as his executors, had allowed out of the personalty to the widow of Z. 800,000, to obtain a release of her right to dower in his, Z.'s, lands. The plaintiffs contended that under the plea of plene administravit vel non, they were entitled to judgment to this amount:—Held, that the application of the personalty of the estate to obtain a release of dower in lands was a devastavit the bank, being interested is more, of which the bank being interested is more, of which the bank being interested is more, of which the bank being interested in the bank being interested in the bank out of the proceeds of the sale of lands. Under these facts:—Held, that the verdict should be entered for the defendants, the plaintiffs being allowed to take judgment of assets quando. Commercial Bank v. Woodruff, 13 C. P. 621, 44 C. P. 22, Liabilities of Debtor—Value of Right of Doner, !—Evidence of the value of the right of dower is properly admissible in determining the value of a debtor's liabilities. Rae v. McDonald, 13 O. R. 352.

Release of Dower—Tenants in Common.]—Where a widow purported to release "All my dower "" in, to, out of all that certain "" lot" to two or more tenants in common:—Held, (1) that her dower was gone in the whole lot; (2) that there was no accural in favour of the other tenants in common. McDearmid v. McDearmid, 15 C. I. J. 112.

Sale of Dower.]—A widow's title to dower before assignment, although not transferable at common law, may be the subject of sale and conveyance in equity. Rose v. Simmerman, 3 Gr. 598.

Sum in Lieu of Dower — Payment on Account, 1—In an administration suit, the testator's widow agreed that the real estate should be sold free from her dower, and the master by his report approved of this, but the sale was delayed at the instance of the creditors in order to obtain a better price. The widow therefore petitioned for payment of a small sum towards the allowance that might be made in lieu of dower. The creditors were too numerous to be all served with the petition, but many of them, including the plaintiff, having consented thereto, and there being no opposition, the court granted what was prayed. In re Thompson, Bigger v. Dickson, 1 Ch. Ch. 323.

Sum in Lieu of Dower — Devolution of Listates Act—Creditors.]—Under the Devolution of Estates Act, land of an intestate was sold by the administrator, with the approval of the official guardian, and, by consent of the widow, freed from her dower, upon the footing that she was to get out of the proceeds of the sale a sum in gross in lieu of dower. The estate was practically insolvent, and but little was left for the sustenance of the widow and children:—Held, that, notwithstanding the opposition of creditors, the widow should be allowed a gross sum. DURESS.

Bond—Conviction of Child.]—A bond to secure the payment of the cost of maintaining at an industrial school a boy under fourteen years of age, convicted of larceny, and who otherwise eame within the requirements of s. 7 of the Act respecting Industrial Schools, given in consequence of the Judge's statement that in default the boy would be sent to the restormatory, is void, this being in law duress, City of 8t. Thomas v. Yearsley, 22 A. R. 340.

Deed Obtained by Threats of Legal Proceedings.]—See Sheard v. Laird, 15 A. R. 339.

Deed—Undue Pressure—Trust Property.]
—The owner of land having died intestate leaving several children, W. R. received from the others a deed conveying to him the entire title in the land, in consideration of his paying all debts against the intestate estate and those of a deceased brother. Subsequently W. R. borrowed momey from his sister and gave her a deed of the land, on learning which B., a creditor of W. R. accused the latter of fraud and threatened him with criminal prosecution, whereupon he induced his sister to execute a reconveyance of the land to him and then give a mortgage to B. The reconveyance, not having been properly acknowledged for registry purposes, was returned to the sister to have the defect remedied, but she had taken legal advice in the meantime and destroyed the deed. B, then brought an action against W. R, and his sister to have the deed to the latter set aside and his mortgage declared a lien on the land;—Held, allirming the judgment in 30 N. S. Reps. 405, that the sister of W. R, was entitled to a first lien on the land for the money lent to her brother; that the deed of re-conveyance to W. R. had been obtained by undue influence and pressure, and should be set aside, and B. should not be allowed to set it up. Burris v. Rhind, 29 S. C. R. 498.

Intimidation of Workmen.] — See Hynes v. Fisher, 4 O. R. 60, 78.

Marriage—Consent to—Threats,]—Where duress is alleged, it must be manifest that force preponderated throughout, so as to disable the one interested from acting as a free agent. Although the plaintiff in this action, in which he sought to have his marriage with the defendant declared void, on the ground that he was forced into it by intimidation and threats, at first protested, by his subsequent conduct he displayed a readiness to assist in the preliminary and final details, and submitted to the proposed method of procedure, and intelligently forwarded its accomplishment:—Held, on the evidence, that his consent to the marriage was proved. Laucless v. Chamberlain, 18 O. R. 236.

Mortgage—Lyreement when under Arrest—Subsequent Execution of Deed.]—A person—having been arrested on a charge of obtaining money under false pretences, agreed, in presence of the magistrates who land issued the warrant, to execute a mortgage on his farm to secure the amount, whereupon he was discharged, and he, with the complainant, went and gave instructions for the conveyance, which he subsequently executed. The court, under the circumstances, refused to set aside the mortgage as obtained by duress, but, as the conduct of the defendant had been harsh and oppressive, dismissed the bill without costs. Boddy v. Finley, 9 Gr. 162.

Mortgage - Threat of Criminal Prosecution. |-The plaintiff, a farmer of about sixty years of age, and unacquainted with legal matters, was taken by the defendant to a lawyer's office and when there was charged with having defrauded the defendant, by changing the figures in certain weigh tickets for grain, to an amount of about $500, and was threatened that if he left the office without settling the claim he would be arrested by a detective, who was pointed out to him, in consequence of which the plaintiff executed a mortgage on his farm for the sum of $600. The court found that the mortgage was void as having been obtained by duress and coer-cion, although the plaintiff, before giving the instrument, had been told that he might leave and go where he pleased, but the person so giving him permission declined to undertake that in case of his leaving he would not be arrested. Armstrong v. Gage, 25 Gr. 1.

Mortgage — Wife — Criminal Charge against Husband.]—Where it was shewn that the wife of a nerson against whom criminal charges were about to be instituted, executed a mortgage on her lands in order to prevent such charges being proceeded with, the court refused to enforce payment of the security, and dismissed a bill filed by the mortgagees for that purpose. The fact that the friends of the husband and wife were the persons who had urged her to give the security, did not validate the instrument. Watts v. Mitchell, 26 Gr. 570.

Order for Payment of Money—Threat of Criminal Prosecution.]—W. obtained from P. an order for £50 i which was paid), on a statement that he could prosecute him for an alleged felony:—Held, recoverable in an action brought therefor. Pasco v. Wegg, 6 C. P. 375.

Promissory Note — Threat of Criminal Prosecution.]—Quiere, as to the effect upon the validity of the note sued on in this case, of the threats to prosecute defendant, by which it was alleged that the note was obtained, if it had been shown that the plaintiffs were entitled to recover the money for which it was given. Canada Farmers' Mutual Ins. Co. v. Watson, 25 C. P. 1.

Promissory Note — Arrest — Imprisonment,]—See Kneeshaw v. Collier, 30 C. P. 265.

Transfer of Chattel-Threat of Criminal Prosecution.]—The plaintiff, being an agent for the defendants, an agricultural manufacturing company, sold to one S, a mowing machine for $52, taking in exchange a horse, notwithstanding his instructions were to sell for cash only. The company, however, adopted the sale by accepting from the plaintiff a chattel mortgage on the horse for their claim. Shortly afterwards, the defendants becoming dissatisfied, C., their general agent, proposed to S. to return the mower and receive back the horse. This being agreed to, C. saw the plaintiff and informed him that he was authorised to take back the horse to S., and urged the plaintiff to do so himself or allow him (C.) to do so. S. at first objected, but, on being threatened "with an action," he consented. and lent C. a horse and buggy, and also a halter so as to lead the horse away. Subsequently, on the same day, the plaintiff, when informed that the horse had been returned to S., told C. that he had no right to take back the horse, alleging that he was worth $95, for which sum he brought this action against the defendants. At the trial the jury found that the horse had been taken away against the will of the plaintiff, and under a threat of criminal proceedings, and judgment was given in favour of the plaintiff for $85, as being the value of the horse :- Held, that there was no evidence of duress by threats, sufficient to avoid the plaintiff's consent to return the horse The law as to duress by threats of imprisonment considered. Piper v. Harris Manufacturing Co., 15 A. R. 642.

Transfer of Goods—Trover.]—Where in trover it was apparent that the goods for which the action was brought, were transferred by the plaintiff to defendant when under duress, and the jury found a verdict for defendant against the justice of the case, the court granted a new trial. Stewart v. Byrne, 6 O. S. 146.

Transfer of Property—Father of Person under Arrest, 1—S., a trader in Yarmouth. N.S., had a number of creditors in Montreal. J., one of such creditors, preferred a criminal charge against S., sent a detective to Yarmouth with a warrant, caused such warrant to be indorsed by a local magistrate, and had S. brought to Montreal, when the other creditors there issued writs of capias for their respective claims. The father of S. came to Montreal, and, in consideration of the release of S. on both the civil and criminal charges, transferred all his property for the benefit of the Montreal creditors, and S. was released from gaol, having given his own recognizance to appear on the criminal charge. In the settlement to the claims of the creditors was added the costs of both the civil and criminal suits. In a suit to set aside the transfer as being obtained by duress and to stifle the criminal prosecution, the evidence shewed that the creditors in taking the proceedings they did, expected to obtain the security of the proceedings and the evidence clearly shewed that the criminal process was only used for the purpose of getting S. to Montreal to enable the creditors to put pressure on him, in order to get their claims paid or secured, and the transfer made by the father under such circumstances was void. Shorey v. Jones, 15 S. C. R. 398.

DYING DECLARATION.

EASEMENT.

Abandonment-Sale-Lane not in Use.] Abandonment of an easement may be shewn not only from acts done by the owner of the dominant tenement indicating an intention to abandon, but also from acquiescence in acts done by the owner of the servient tenement. therefore, the owner of the property over which a right of way existed built, with the knowledge of the owner of the property for the benefit of which the right of way had been reserved, an ice-house upon the portion reserved, and after some years pulled down the ice-house, and with the same knowledge built a stable on the same site, and a row of shops over another part of the right of way, it was held that the owner of the dominant tenement could not then have the right of way opened. Mykel v. Doyle, 45 U. C. R. 65, considered. A conveyance made in pursuance of the Short Forms Act, of a lot according to a registered plan upon which a lane is laid out does not pass any interest in the lane when it has not in fact been opened on the land, and has not been used or enjoyed with the lot in question. Bell v. Golding, 23 A. R. 485.

Artificial Stream—Dominant Tenement—Servient Tenement.—The owner of a servient tenement who takes water by an artificial stream from the dominant tenement, created by the owner of the latter for his own convenience for the purpose of discharging surplus water upon the servient tenement, acquires no right to insist upon the continuance of the flow, which may be terminated by the owner of the dominant tenement; and the fact that the burthen has been imposed for over forty years does not alter the character of the easement and convert the dominant into a servient tenement. The owner of a servient tenement, the owner of a servient tenement taking water under such circumstances is not "a person claiming title thereto "within R. S. O. 1887 c. 111, s. 5. Ennor D—68.

v. Barwell, 2 Giff, 410, distinguished. Oliver v.Lockie, 26 O. R. 28.

Chimney and Stovepipe.] — The owner of a house subdivided it, and let the north part to one G. This consisted of two rooms, a front and back room, the former having a chimney, but not the latter. G. had a stove in the back room, and the only way he could use it was by passing a stovepipe through a hole in the partition between his and the south part, and thence into the chimney in that part. The owner subsequently leased the south part to defendant, who at the time he became tenant was aware of the existence of the stovepipe. G. afterwards assigned to the plaintift, and on leaving took down the pipe. The plaintiff, on coming in put up a pipe of his own, with the consent of, or at least without any objection by, defendant. The defendant having afterwards taken down the pipe gnd stopped up the hole: — Held, that he was a wrong-doer in so doing, for that he only held the south part subject to the user or ensement of the plaintiff of the stovepipe and hole. Culcervell V. Lockington, 24 C. P. 611.

Damages — Interference with Easement.]
Right to damages against railway company for injury to easement in construction of their road. See Wells v. Northern R. W. Co., 14
O. R. 594.

Damages.]—See Platt v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 19 A. R. 403.

Drain—Building Interfering with Access.] In 1843 the plaintiffs by deed obtained the right of draining their property by passing a good drain through an alley left open between two houses on another lot in the town of St. In 1880 defendants built a barn covering the alley under which the drain was constructed, and used it to store hay, &c., the flooring being loose and the barn resting on wooden posts. In 1881 the drain needing repairs the plaintiffs brought an action con-fessoria against defendants as proprietors of the servient land, praying that they, the plaintiffs, might be declared to have a right to the servitude constituted by the deed of 1843, and that the defendants be ordered to demolish such a portion of the barn as diminished the use of the drain, and rendered its exercise more inconvenient, and claiming damages; the defendants pleaded that there was no change of condition of the servient land contrary to law, and prayed for the dismissal of plain-tiffs' action:—Held, that by the building of the barn in question, the plaintiffs' means of access to the drain had been materially interfered with and rendered more expensive, and therefore that the judgment of the court below ordering the defendants to demolish a portion of their barn covering the drain, in order to allow the plaintiffs to repair the drain easily as they might have done in 1843, when the drain was not covered, and to pay damages, should be affirmed. Wheeler v. Black, 14 S. C. R. 242.

Duration of Easement.]—An agreement to grant an easement will not necessarily be for an easement in perpetuity. Craig v. Craig, 2 A. R. 583.

Grant—Parol.]—An easement can only be granted by deed, and if given by parol, may be revoked at any time. Crysler v. Creighton, E. T. 2 Vict.

Interruption.]-As to the application of | Crown to make use of any of the water or bed the Ontario Act, R. S. O. 1877 c. 108, reducing the period of limitation to ten years, to the interruption of an easement. See Mykel v. Doyle, 45 U. C. R. 65.

Lateral Support-Damages.] - The plaintiff was entitled to the lateral support of the tions for the purposes of a rink, whereby the plaintiff's land was damaged: Held, that in substituting artificial support for the natural support of the soil which had been removed, the defendants might construct it of any material, provided it was a sufficient support for the purpose, and they continued to main-tain the plaintiff's land in its proper position: -Held, also, that in estimating the plaintiff's damages, no sum should be allowed for damages to arise in future. The damages were ages to arise in tuture. The damages were assessed at $40, but judgment was given for the restoration of the plaintiff's land:—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to full costs. Snarr v. Granite Curling and Skating Co., Snarr v. G 1 O. R. 102.

An action against the proprietor of adjoining land for damage done to a building by the removal of the lateral support afforded by such adjoining land, may be maintained by the tenant of the building. McCann v. Chisholm, 2 O. R. 506.

The plaintiff, tenant for years of the defendant S., sued for loss of use of a tenement in consequence of the fall of the wall thereof, which was caused by the excavation of the adjoining lot for a cellar by the defendant H. who owned it. H, had excavated the land in some places to within a few inches of the dividing line, close to which the house in ques-tion stood. This house had been built upon tion stood. This house had been built upon oak planks laid about one foot under the ground, by S. in 1854, when he had a lease of the lot for ten years, which gave him the right to remove it at the expiration of the In 1856, however, he acquired the fee, term. In 1856, however, he acquired the fee, and in 1870, he also became owner of the lot now owned by H., and held it for a year, when he conveyed it to E. H. from whom H. derived There was no evidence to shew that H. knew that the house was receiving more support from his land than it would have required if it had been constructed in the ordinary way: —Held, that owing to the unity of seisin of S., there had not been twenty years' continuous enjoyment of the support as an easement; but that even if there had been, no such acquiescence in the use of the servient tenement had been shewn as to justify the presumption that an easement had been acquired by grant:

—Held, also, that when S. sold H.'s lot, there was no implied reservation of the right of sup-port for the house:—Held, also, reversing 44 U. C. R. 428, that under the circumstances there was no evidence of negligence in fact, and that the plaintiff was therefore not entitled to recover. Backus v. Smith, 5 A. R. 341.

Measure of Enjoyment. |-The nature of the enjoyment of an easement, at the time of the enjoyment of an easement, at the time of the grant, is the proper measure of enjoyment during the continuance of the grant. Heward v. Jackson, 21 Gr. 263.

Navigable Stream - Public Easement therein.]—The public easement of passage in a navigable stream is so far in derogation of the rights of riparian owners as to enable the of the stream which the legislature deems expedient for improving the navigation thereof. The Queen v. Foulds, 4 Ex. C. R. 1.

Notice - Severance of Tenement by Conregarder—Rights of Drainage and Aqueduct— Registry Laws.]—Where the owner of two adjoining lots of land conveys one of them, he impliedly grants all those conditions and apparent easements, including rights of drainage and aqueduct, over the other lot which are necessary for the reasonable use of the property granted, and which are at the time of the grant used by the owner of the entirety for the benefit of the part granted. The grant of such an easement, if implied, is not within the provisions of the Registry Act, and prevails over a subsequent purchaser, without notice, of the adjoining lot; if express, its due registration on the lot conveyed is notice thereof to a subsequent purchaser of the adjacent lot without registration thereof. Dicta in Carter v. Grasett, 14 A. R., at pp. 709, 710, dissented from. Israel v. Leith, 20 O. R. 361.

Notice-Equitable Interest.]-A municipal council who, with the oral consent of the owner, build a sewer through land, acquire an equitable right to compel a conveyance of so much of the land as is occupied by the sewer, but a purchaser of the land without notice of the consent or of the existence of the sewer is protected by the Registry Act. Jarvis v. City of Toronto, 21 A. R. 395, 25 S. C. R. 237.

Nuisance.]—Twenty years' user will legitimate an easement affecting private property, but not a nuisance. Regina v. Brewster, 8 C. P. 208.

Prescription — Enjoyment for Twenty Years — Extinguishing Easement — Registry Laws — Notice.] — The plaintiff claimed through the defendant's predecessor in title the right to use two springs, C and E, under conveyances in 1841 and 1843 of lands north of the springs. One conveyance granted the sole and perpetual right to spring C, together with the right to use a road from the southern boundary of the land granted to the spring; the other granted the sole and perpetual use of and right to the water of spring E, without indicating the manner in which the water was to be approached or its enjoyment had. defendant was the owner of the land to the south upon which the springs were situated. The water had been carried from the springs by means of pipes through the defendant's land to the plaintiff's land, from 1861 to 1882 or 1883, when the defendant tore up the pipes insisting that the then owner of the plaintiff's land had no right to maintain them, and thereupon an arrangement was made under which the pipes were again put down with the addition of certain troughs for the convenience of the defendant's cattle :-Held, that under the conveyances the plaintiff had a right of access to spring C by the road mentioned, and to spring E by a convenient road to be laid out, but had no right to the easement of conveying the water by pipes through the defendant's land. The result of the interruption in 1882 or 1883 and the arrangement then made was that since that time the plaintiff must be taken to have maintained the pipes, not as a matter of right, but by the license of the defendant: under ss. 35 and 37 of R. S. O. 1887 c. 111, the fact that twenty years had expired before the interruption was immaterial; and, therefore, the plaintiff had not acquired a pre-scriptive right to the easement. The fact that for nearly the first half of the period from 1861 to 1881 or 1883, the land over which the owners out of the country, constituted another objection to the acquisition of a prescriptive right under s. 35. The license of the defendright under s. 35. The license of the defend-ant under which the pipes were maintained since 1882 or 1883, being by parol, was de-terminable at any time by the defendant; and the defendant in subsequently taking up the pipes, which led to the bringing of tion, was acting within his strict legal right of tion, was acting within his strict read right peroling the license; and the plaintiff was not entitled to damages for their removal, or for disturbing the ground in which they lay whereby the water was rendered impure. The whereby the water was rendered impure. The possession by the defendant of the land through which access to the springs was to be through which access to the springs was to be had, for upwards of ten years, did not extin-guish the plaintiff's right of access. Mykel v. Doyle, 45 U. C. R. 65, followed. Before the conveyances of 1841 and 1843, G., the then owner of all the lands now in question, conveyed them to M, by a deed absolute in form, but really intended as a mortgage, and in 1857 in a redemption suit brought by persons who had acquired the equity of redemption from G fter the registration of the conveyances of 1841 and 1843, it was declared that this conveyance was a mortgage only, and in 1858 a conveyance was made by the representatives of G., pursuant to the decree, reciting the payment of the mortgage moneys and conveying the lands to the plaintiffs in the redemption The defendant claimed the land upon which the springs were situated which the springs were situated under the grantees in the conveyance of 1858:—Held, that the defendant was affected under the Registry Acts with notice that M. was a mortgagee only, and that those who redeemed him did so as owners of the equity; and the defendant could not set up the estate of the mortgagee, which upon payment of the mortgage, was a bare legal estate, carrying with the rights as against the beneficial owners of the land. McKey v. Bruce, 20 O. R. 709.

Prescription—Unity of Title.]—The time for acquisition of an easement by prescription does not run while the dominant and servlent tenements are in the occupation of the same person, even though the occupation of the servient tenement be wrongful and without the privity of the true owner. Innes v. Ferguson, 21 A. R. 323, 24 S. C. R. 703.

Right of Way—Limited Grant—Colourable I see, 1—A right of way granted for the benefit of a specific lot cannot be used by the owner of that lot generally apart from his ownership and use of the lot. Robinson v. Purdom, 26 A. R. 95, 30 S. C. R. 64.

Right of Way — Prescription—Landlord and Tenant—Acknowledgment by Tenant.]—
After a right of way had been enjoyed for more than the period necessary to obtain title thereto by prescription the tenant of the dominant tenement, without the knowledge of the owner, gave to the tenant of the servient tenement two pairs of shoes as consideration for the exercise of the right:—Held, that even if an act of this kind could m any event affect the right that had been acquired the owner of the dominant tenement was not bound by what the tenant did without his authority. Ker v. Little, 25 A. R. 387.

Roadway—User.]—In 1831 the owners of several continguous farms purchased a roadway over adjacent lands to reach their cultivated fields beyond a steep mountain which crossed their properties, and by a clause in-serted in the deed to which they all were parties they respectively agreed "to furnish roads upon their respective lands to go and come by the above purchased road for the cultivation of their lands, and that they would maintain these roads and make all necessary fences and gates at the common expense of themselves, their heirs and assigns." Prior to this deed and for some time afterwards the use of a road from the river front to a public highway at some distance further back, had been tolerated by the plaintiff and his auteurs, across a portion of his farm which did not lie between the road so purchased over the spur of the mountain and the nearest point of the boundary of the defendant's land, but the latter claimed the right to continue to use the way. In an action (negatoire) to prohibit further use of the way:—Held, that there was no title in writing sufficient to establish a servitude across the plaintiff's land over the roadway so permitted by mere tolerance; that the effect of the agreement between the purchasers was merely to establish servitudes across their respective lands so far as might be necessary to give each of the owners access to the road so purchased from the nearest practicable point of their respective lands across interpoint of their respective lands across intervening properties of the others for the purpose of the cultivation of their lands beyond the mountain. Riou v. Riou, 28 S. C. R. 53.

Seignorial Grant — Servitude — Special Reservation.]—See Commune de Berthier v. Denis, 27 S. C. R. 147.

Servitudes Established for Public Utility.]—Where, under authority of a statute authorizing the extension of a street, a servitude for public utility was established on private land which was not expropriated and the extension was subsequently abandoned, the owner of the land was not, in the absence of any statutory authority therefor, entitled to damages for loss of proprietary rights while the servitude existed. Perault v. Gauthier, 28 S. C. R. 241, referred to. Hollester v. City of Montreal, 29 S. C. R. 402.

Severance — Continuous User.] — When two properties belonging to the same owner are sold at the same time, and each purchaser has notice of sale to the other, the right to any continuous easement passes with the sale as an absolute legal right. But the easement must have been enjoyed by the former owner at the time of the sale. Therefore, one purchaser could not claim the right to use a dam on his land in such a way as to cause the water to flow back on the other property, where such right, if it had ever been enjoyed by the former owner, had been abandoned years before the sale. Hart v. McMullen, 30 S. C. R. 245.

Surface Water — Lands of Different Lecels, i—The doctrine of dominant and servient tenement does not apply between adjoining lands of different levels so as to give the owner of the land of higher level the legal right as an incident of his estate to have surface water falling on his land discharged over the land of lower level although it would naturally find its way there. The owner of the land of lower level may fill up the low places on his land or build walls thereon although by so doing he keeps back the surface water to the injury of the owner of the land of higher level. Ostrom v. Sills, 24 A. R. 526. See the next case.

Surface Water-Levels, 1-0, and S. were adjoining proprietors of land in the village of Frankford, Ont., that of O, being situate on a higher level than the other. In 1875 improvements were made to a drain discharging from the premises of S., and a culvert was made connecting with it. In 1887, S. erected a building on his land and cut off the wall of the culvert which projected over the line of the street, which resulted in the flow of water through it being stopped and backed up on the land of O., who brought an action against S for the damage caused thereby :-Held, that S. having a right to cut off the part of the culvert which projected over his land was not liable to O. for the damage so caused, the remedy of the latter, if he had any, being against the municipality for not properly maintaining the drain, Ostrom v. Sills, 28 S. C. R. 485.

Unity of Title - Subsequent Grants.]-One piece of land cannot be said to be bur-dened by an easement in favour of another piece when both belong absolutely to the same owner, who has, in the exercise of his own unrestricted right of enjoyment, the power of using both as he thinks fit and of making the use of one parcel subservient to that of the other, if he chooses so to do,—and if the title to different parts comes to be vested in the same owner, there is an extinguishment of any easements which may previously have existed, a species of merger by which what may have been, whilst the different parcels were in separate hands, legal easements, cease to be so, and become mere easements in fact - quasi easements. If the quasi servient tenement is subsequently first conveyed without expressly providing for the continuance of the ease ments, there is no implied reservation for the benefit of the land retained by the grantor, except of easements of necessity, and no dis tinction is to be made for this purpose between easements which are apparent and those which are non-apparent. If the dominant tenement is first granted, all quasi easements which have been enjoyed as appendant to it over a quasi servient tenement retained by the grantor, pass by implication. Attrill v. Platt, 10 S. C. R. 425.

Walls of House.]—In 1883, M. W. being seized of certain lands, conveyed half thereof to G. W. in fee, describing the same by metes and bounds, and afterwards died having devised the other half to M. There was a house on the lands in question so situate that half of it was on the portion granted to G. W., and half on the portion devised to M. No specific mention of the house was made either in the deed to G. W. or in the will. Subsequently M. commenced, in defiance of G. W.'s protests, to pull down the half of the house situate on the land devised to her, and G. W. applied in the present action for an injunction to restrain the same:—Held, that he was entitled to the relief claimed. Wray v. Morrison, 9 O. R. 180.

Watercourse — Discersion by Railway Company — Equitable Engement—Notice, [—] Where the defendants in 1871, without authorize the defendants in 1871, without authorize the defendants in 1871, without authorize the then owner of the land, the plaintiff's predecessor in title:— Held, that the equitable casement thereby created in favour of the defendants was not valid against the registered deed of the plaintiff, a bonh fide purchaser for value without actual notice; the defendants having shewn no prescriptive right to divert the varierourse; and the diversion being wrongiul as against the plaintiff. Knapp v. Great Western R. W. Co., 6, P. 187; L'Esperance v. Great Western R. W. Co., 14 U. C. R. 13; Wallace V. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 16 U. C. R. 551; and Partridge v. Great Western R. W. Co., 22 O. R. 294.

Way—Appartenances.] — Right of way— Severance of tenements—When the right will pass—"Appartenances."—Pleading. See Harris v. Smith, 40 U. C. R. 33.

Way—Grant of "Road."]—A deed, after granting certain land, describing it by metes and bounds, continued, "also a road forty feet wide," adding to the description thereof "and not included in the above quantity of land:"—Held, that by the conveyance of the road the fee in the freehold therein did not pass to the grantee, but merely an easement of the right of way over the land. Review of the American decisions, Fisher v. Webster, 27 O, R. 35.

Way - Implication - Prescription - Interruption-Unity of Possession.]-A testator dying in 1874 devised adjoining lots of land, and 5, to his two sons respectively. House No. 9 stood mainly on lot 4, but also partly on lot 5, and house No. 13 stood on the remainder of lot 5, there being a passage-way between the two houses, used in common by the occupants of both for the purpose of getting wood and coal and getting out ashes. The appellant, the owner of lot 4, had, as was admitted, by virtue of a conveyance from the devisee of lot 4 and by the Statute of Limitations, acquired title to the portion of lot 5 on which house No. 9 stood:—Held, that a right of way over the passage between the two houses did not pass by implication of law to the devisee of lot 4. The passage in question was used by the ocupants of house No. 9 from the time of the death of the testator until 1895, but during the period from March to June, 1894, the owner of No. 13 was also the tenant of No. 9:—Held, that the unity of possession during that period interrupted the runsing of the statute, and the appellant had not acquired a right of way as an easement by prescription under R. S. O. 1887, e. 111, s. 35. Dietum of Hatherley, L. C., in Ladyman v. Grave, L. R. 6 Ch. 763, not followed. But, that at all events the locus in question could not be treated as a way to lot 4; it was rather a way to that portion of lot 5 on which house No. 9 stood; and there being unity of seisin of the alleged dominant and servient tenements in the devisee of lot 5, no easement could exist while that unity continued; and therefore the enjoyment of the way as an easement began only when the title of the devisee of lot 5 to that portion of it on which house No. 9 stood became extinguished by the statute, which was less than twenty years before this litigation. Semble, that, but for this latter circumstance, the claim of the appellant might have been sustained by the application of the doctrine of "lost grant." And also, that the doctrine of "lost grant." And also, that the respondent, by reason of his tenancy of house No. 9, was estopped from asserting that his possession of the land of which he was tenant, and his user of the way which was enjoyed in connection with it, were other than a possession and user by him as tenant. Re Cock-burn, 27 O. R. 450.

Way—Real or Apparent Servitude—Regis-tration—Law of Quebec.]—See Macdonald v. Ferdais, 22 S. C. R. 260.

Way of Necessity-License.]-Held, 1 versing 16 A. R. 3, and restoring 15 O. R. 639, that plaintiff had no title to the right of way by prescription, the evidence clearly shewing that the user was not of a well defined road but only a path through bush land and that he only enjoyed it by license from his father, the adjoining owner, which license was revoked by his father's death; but—Held, that under the agreement the right of way that under the agreement the right of way granted to the plaintiff was wholly over de-fendant's land, the agreement, not being ex-plicit as to the direction of such right of way, requiring a construction in favour of the plaintiff and against the grantor. Rogers v. buncan, 18 S. C. R. 710.

Way of Necessity - Interruption.] - K. owned lands in the county of Lunenburg, N.S., over which he had for years utilized a roadway for convenient purposes. After his death the defendant became owner of the middle portion, the parcels at either end passing to the plaintiff, who continued to use the old read-way, as a winter road, for hauling fuel from his wood lot to his residence, at the other end of the property. It appeared that though the three parcels fronted upon a public highway, this was the only practical means plaintiff had for the hauling of his winter fuel, owing to a dangerous hill that prevented him getting it off the wood lot to the highway. There was not any formed road across the lands, but merely a track upon the snow during the winter months, and the way was not used at any other season of the year. This user was enjoyed for over twenty years prior to 1891, when it appeared to have been first disputed. but from that time the way was obstructed from time to time up to March, 1894, when the defendant built a fence across it that was allowed to remain undisturbed and caused a cessation of the actual enjoyment of the way during the fifteen months immediately preceding the commencement of the action in assertion of the right to the easement by the plaintiff. The statute (R. S. N. S. 5th ser. c. 112) provides a limitation of twenty years for the acquisition of easements and declares that no act shall be deemed an interruption of actual enjoyment, unless submitted to or acquiesced in for one year after notice thereof and of the person making the same :-Held, that notwithstanding the customary use of the way as a winter road only, the cessation of user for the year immediately preceding the commencement of the action was a bar to the plaintiff's claim under the statute. Held, also, that the cir-cumstances under which the roadway had been used did not supply sufficient reason to infer that the way was an easement of necessity appurtenant or appendant to the lands for merly held in unity of possession, which would without special grant pass by implication, upon the severance of the tenements. Knock v. Knock, 27 S. I. BY WHOM AND FOR WHAT.

Adverse Possession — Heir-at-Law.] — Where there is an adverse possession of land, an heir-at-law who has never entered cannot make a conveyance so as to enable his vendee to recover in ejectment. Doe d. Dison v. Grant, 3 O. S. 511.

Assignee of Tenant.]—Ejectment cannot be maintained on a written assignment, not under seal, of all the tenant's right, title, and interest in the premises, it not being shewn that he had any, or if so what his interest was. Doe d. Pringle v. Hodgson, E. T. 3 Vict.

Devisees inter Se-Legal Estate in One 1 The testator, in 1864, describing himself as of the north half of lot 27, 5th concession, Nottawasaga, bequeathed "the above men-Notawasaga, bequeathed the above mentioned property in the following manner to my wife (the plaintiff) and family." The will ceeds of the said property to be used for the support and keeping of his wife and family for a term of twenty years; and directed them to pay his debts, but did not devise the prop-The will further directed that, erty to them. after the said term of 20 years, his son Ronald, the defendant, was to have the south part of the above land, which he was to pay for, and the remainder was devised to another son. who was directed to pay legacies to his sisters, Subsequently Ronald obtained a patent from the Crown of the land devised to him, haben-"subject, nevertheless, to the terms and conditions of the last will and testament I bethe testator:—Held, that the words "I bequeath, &c., in the following manner, &c.," to my wife and family," carried the estate direct to them, notwithstanding the direction to the executors. Held, also, that the defendant holding the legal estate under the patent. and having a beneficial interest in his own right as one of the family, the plaintiff could not maintain ejectment against him. Donald v. McDonald, 34 U. C. R. 369.

Dowress.]—Where a father had conveyed a house and premises to his son in fee, and the son afterwards made a lease to his father and mother for their joint lives, at a nominal rent, and on the same day the father and mother executed an agreement under seal to the son that he should occupy the house, except certain rooms in it, and take the rents and profits upon certain conditions, on breach of any of which he was to go out of possession, but his mother did not release her right under the statute:—Semble, that the mother could not, after the father's death, on the ground that she had not barred her dower under the life lease, maintain ejectment for the whole of the premises, without shewing a forfeiture of the agreement by breach of the conditions, although she was entitled to recover the rooms which were excepted from the son's occupation under the agreement. Doe d. Peck v. Peck, I U. C. R. 42.

Highways.]— In ejectment it appeared that the land in question had been surveyed by the government, and laid out as streets in 1852, in their plan filed in the registry office; and that the plaintiffs had afterwards been incorporated as a town including these streets within their limits:—Held, that the plaintiffs could not maintain ejectment, the land being a public highway. Town of 8sernia v. Great Western R. W. Co., 21 U. C. R. 59

Joint Tenants and Tenants in Common.)—Tenants in common cannot make a joint demise in an ejectment. Doe d. McNab v. Sicker, 5 O. S. 323; Doe d. Shuter v. Carter, H. T. 2 Vict.

Joint tenants, in bringing ejectment, may sever in their demise. Doe d. Barwick v. Clement, 7 U. C. R. 549.

Under the old practice, in ejectment by one tenant in common against another, where the common consent rule had been entered into, proof of an actual ouster was dispensed with. Doe d. Clarkson v. Haskins, 2 U. C. R, 75. One tenant in common under a will conveyed the whole estate, claiming it as heirat-law. In ejectment by the other tenants in common against his grantee: — Held, that proof of actual ousier was unnecessary. Scatt v, McLead, 14 U. C. R, 574.

Several plaintiffs claiming each an undivided interest need not prove a joint title, or any privity, but may maintain a joint action upon separate titles. Bradley v. Ferry, 20 U. C. R. 563.

The defendant defended for the whole, giving no notice of defence as tenant in common, under s, 29 of the Ejectment Act, C. S. U. C. e. 27. The evidence shewed that she was entitled to an undivided moiety; but, held, that defendant not having limited her defence, the plaintiff was entitled to the postea. Leech v. Leech, 24 U. C. R. 321.

The plaintiff was held entitled to recover two undivided third parts. It was urged on the authority of Leech v. Leech, 24 U. C. R. 321, that the plaintiff being held so entitled, the postes should be awarded to him generally: but, held, not, the proceedings on both sides in that and other cases having been directed to try the title to the whole. Lyster v. Ramage, 25 U. C. R. 235.

Where the action was against three, and two claimed only under the infant, admitting the plaintiffs right to two undivided thirds, but denying ouster:—Held, that as the infants right to one third was established, the plaintiff without proof of ouster could not recover against the others. Gilchrist v. Ramsey, 27 U. C. R. 500.

A tenant in common, in an action for the possession of land against a person without any title, can recover judgment only for the possession of his share; and the Ontario Judicature Act has made no difference in this respect. Barnier v. Barnier, 23 O. R. 280.

Person Entitled to Maintenance.]—A testator seised in fee of land devised the same to his son on condition that he should support the plaintiff during her life, and that she should be mistress, and have control of the dwelling house on the land:—Held, that the son took the land conditioned for the maintenance of the plaintiff during her life, but that no title was conferred upon her under which she could bring ejectment, the control which the testator meant being merely the domestic management, not the ownership of the house. Grant v. McLennan, 16 C. P. 395.

Pew.]—Held, that the plaintiff, a member of the church of England, could not maintain ejectment for pews in St. James's church held by him, because he was not entitled to the exclusive possession of them, his possession being limited to the special purpose of attending divine service, at which time alone he had the right to enter; and because such right was of an incorporal nature, and possession of it could not be given by the sheriff. Ridout v. Harris, 17 C. P. 88.

Religious Institutions Act.]—Trustees under C. S. U. C. c. 69, may maintain ejectment in their individual names, with the description, "as trustees," &c., stating the name of the congregation or religious body for whom they are trustees, according to the description in the deed of conveyance. Humphreys v. Hunter, 20 C. P. 456.

Sheriff's Sale of Road.]—The sale of a road owned by a company under the Road Companies Act, C. S. U. C. c. 49, by a sheriff under a fi. fa, lands, is a valid sale, and a conveyance made by him to the purchaser is sufficient to enable the vendee to bring ejectment. Totten v. Halligan, 13 C. P. 567.

Vendor and Purchaser.]—The plaintiff owned part of lot 7, and agreed verbally, in 1859, to buy from one M. two acres more adjoining on the north, of which he went into possession. In 1860 M. gave to defendant a bond to convey to him thirty acres of the lot, more or less, describing it as "all that part of the said lot lying north of the land owned by D." the plaintiff. "and south of the first first and the said lot to Crambbe 11." In the plaintiff, and south of the said lot to Crambbe 11." In the plaintiff, and south of the plaintiff, and south of the plaintiff, and the plaintiff, and the said lot to Crambbe 11. The plaintiff, and the said lot to Crambbe 11. The plaintiff was the plaintiff and referred to in it, and that defendant had without them his full thirty acres:—Held, that the plaintiff must recover, for, 1. The bond, under the circumstances, should be construed as referring to all the land in the plaintiff sy visible possession as owner, thus excluding the two acres; and, 2. The deed at all events vested the legal title under the bond could afford no defence. Dusenbury v. Palmatier, 21 U. C. R. 462.

The court will not compel a vendee of land, who has recovered from the vendor the purchase money and interest for defect of title, to stay proceedings on his judgment until he gives up possession. The vendor must proceed by ejectment; and quare, as to his right to recover. McKinnon, V. Burrones, 4. O. S. 71.

A is let into possession by B, upon an agreement to purchase, with the understanding that he is to remain until default. A afterwards, though not in default, lets B, into possession, on the express condition that B, is to restore to him (A.) the possession in a certain event. This event happens, but B, retains the possession:—Held, that A., being entitled to the possession, could maintain ejectment against B, though he had the legal title. Doe d, Barker V, Crosby, 7 U. C. R. 202.

II. DAMAGES AND MESNE PROFITS.

Change of Title Before Trial.]—A lesson who had the title at the time of action brought, but not at the trial, is entitled to damages, although he cannot recover his term. Doe d. Meyers v. Blakier, E. T. 2 Vict.

Costs.]—In an action for mesne profits, after judgment by default in ejectment, it is not necessary that the costs of the ejectment should be taxed before they can be recovered. Bank of Upper Canada v. Armstrong, H. T. 6 Vict.

The plaintiffs having recovered in ejectment against one W. for lands occupied by W. as tenant to defendant, brought an action against defendant for mesne profits, and succeeded, the costs of the ejectment being allowed as part of the damages. These costs were subsequently reduced on revision in Toronto by £120 15s. 2d.:—Held, that the amount taxed was the amount plaintiffs were entitled to, and the verdict was reduced accordingly, Neale v. Winter, 10 C. P. 139.

Evidence after Judgment—Ejectment.]
—Where after a recovery in ejectment an action is brought for the mesne profits, and evidence of title is given, it is not necessary to shew the judgment in ejectment. Stephenson v. McCombs, M. T. 4 Vict, Executrix. —An action for mesne profits may be maintained against an executrix under 7 Will. IV. c. 3: and where the action is founded on the judgment against the casual ejector in ejectment, it is no ground of defence that although the writ of possession is tested in the tenant's lifetime, it was issued and executed after his death without a sci. fa. Green v. Hamilton, E. T. 3 Vict. E. T. 3 Vict.

Improvements. |—In an action for mesne profits the jury gave a verdict for mominal damages. Evidence was given that the defendant had made substantial improvements on the lot from which he had been ejected, and evidence of the costs of the ejectment suits:—Held, that the damages were in the discretion of the jury, and that the damages and costs of the ejectment might be considered as paid for by the improvements, and a new trial was refused. Patterson v. Reardon, 7 U. C. R. 326.

36 Vict. c. 22, as to improvements on land in mistake before notice, and the lien therefor discussed. Carrick v. Smith, 34 U. C. R. 389.

In trespass for mesne profits defendant may shew in mitigation of damages the value of buildings erected on the premises by him. Lindsay v. McFarling, Dra. 6.

Mesne Profits—Occupation Rent.]—See Elliott v. Elliott, 20 O. R. 134.

Mesne Profits.] — Quere, as to when mesne profits may now be recovered in ejectment. McCarthy v. Arbuckle, 31 C. P. 405.

Mortgagee — Trespassers.] — Where a mortgagee brought ejectment after foreclosure, and defendants appeared to be mer trespassers having no privity with the mortgager, the plaintiff was held clearly entitled to mesne profits from the date of the foreclosure. Mair v. Cully, 11 U. C. R. 308.

Notice. — A plaintiff in ejectment claiming substantial damages under 14 & 15 Viet. c. 114, must give notice as the Act directs, and proceed for such damages at the trial of the ejectment, otherwise he waived his claim, and could maintain no action afterwards. Curtis v. Jarcis, 10 U. C. R. 468.

Overholding Tenant.]—A landlord proceeding against an overholding tenant under 4 Will, IV, c. 1, s. 53, cannot, under 14 & 15 Vict, c. 114, s. 12, recover mesne profits, the latter Act applying only to actions of ejectment. Allan v. Rogers, 13 U. C. R. 166, Pleading.]—See Grant v. Fanning, Tay. 470; Green v. Hamilton, 6 O. S. 79; McKenzie v. Fairman, 1 C. P. 50.

Subsequent Action.] — Semble, that a plaintiff in ejectment, under 14 & 15 Viet, c. 114, not having proceeded for substantial damages, is precluded from recovering them in a subsequent action. Hamer v. Laing, 13 U. C. R. 233.

III. DEMAND OF POSSESSION AND NOTICE TO QUIT.

1. In General.

Where defendant, who went into possession under the lessor of the plaintiff, afterwards refused to acknowledge his title:—Held, that he was neither entitled to a notice to quit nor a demand of possession, Doe d. Bonter v. Frazer, 4 O. S. 80.

A person holding under a liceuse of occupation from the Crown, is entitled to a demand of possession before ejectment by a grantee of the Crown. Doe d. Creen v. Friesman, 5 O. S. 661.

A demand of possession made by a person who afterwards assigned his interest to the lessor of the plaintiff, cannot be available by the lessor so as to make the tenant's holding tortious as to him. S. C., E. T. 2 Vict.

Where a person has been in possession for many years, and made valuable improvements under the eye of the owner, his consent to the occupation may be presumed, and the possessor cannot be ejected without a demand of possession.

*Doe d. Sheriff v. McGillivray, 6 O. S. 189.

An heir need not demand possession from a person claiming the land as the grantee of the ancestor, who was a feme covert, and exceuted the deed under which defendant claims with her husband without the acknowledgment required by 59 Geo. III. c. 3, such deed being as to her absolutely void. Doe d. Vansickler v. Fairzetl, M. T. 4 Vict.

Though a surviving partner may have an equitable title, yet the heir of the deceased partner suing in ejectment upon his ancestor's legal title, need not demand possession. Doe d. Atkinson v. McLeod, S U. C. R. 344.

The plaintiffs claimed as tenants for life under a will, and defendant did not hold under them, and by his notice denied their title:— Held, that no notice or demand was necessary. Scouler v. Scouler, 19 U. C. R. 106.

Two persons agree to exchange land; that each shall have possession from a day named, and that they shall exchange deeds in one year; and each gives the other a bond to perform these conditions. The year elapses without either giving a deed. Upon ejectment for the lot which the plaintiff was to convey to the defendant:—Held, that a demand of possession was necessary, and probably also that the plaintiff should offer, if not actually give up, possession of the defendant's lot, which he (plaintiff) occupied under the agreement. Perritt v. Arnold, Il C. P. 413.

Defendants being in default under a demise from plaintiff, he and the plaintiff referred all differences, and the arbitrators postponed the date of payment. Quare, whether the reference and postponement would not constitute defendant a tenant at will, and so entitle him to a demand of possession before action. Black v. Allan, 17 C. P. 240.

A. having given to B. his bond in £2,500, conditioned, among other things, that C. and D. should reside on a certain lot of land so long as they conducted themselves in a manner agreeable to A:—Held, that no notice or demand was necessary before bringing ejectment. Tisdale v, Tisdale, 10 C. P. 106.

A demand of possession by a person whose authority is afterwards recognized by the person having title, is sufficient. Doe d. Creen v. Friesman, 1 U. C. R. 420.

The plaintiff demanded possession at defendant's dwelling house in his absence, in the presence of several members of the family:—Held, sufficient, as it did not appear that the defendant was not aware that it had been made. Doe d. Sherwood v. Stevens, 6 O. S. 432.

The demand must be particular in pointing the defendant to the precise parcel of land sued for. Doe d. Jeffrey v. Williams, 6 U. C. R. 160.

Ejectment for a house and small lot of land adjoining. It appeared that as to the house notice to quit had been given too late, but that the plaintiff was entitled to the land. It was ordered that unless the plaintiff would confine his judgment to the land, defendant should have a new trial. Conley v. Lee, 12 U. C. R. 456.

- Between Landlord and Tenant. See that title.
- 3. Between Mortgagee and Mortgagor, See Mortgage.

4. Between Vendor and Purchaser.

When a minor gives a bond to convey, and he or his heir afterwards brings ejectment against the assignee of the obligee, the defendant is entitled to a demand of possession. But where the defendant went to the heir and offered to pay him the money due on the bond, and to take a deed from him as heir; it was held that by such conduct he had water than the defendant of the conduct of the conduct

Where defendant entered under an agreement to purchase, and that he should enjoy until default in payment:—Held, that on default he might be ejected without any notice or demand. Doe d. Sheriff v. McGillveray, 6 O. S. 294.

Where defendant contracted for the purchase of land, and gave his bond and notes for payment of the money by instalments, but did not pay any of them, and his vendors after-wards sold to the lessor of the plaintiff, who demanded possession at defendants' swelling house in his absence, in the presence of several members of the family:—Held, that if a demand were necessary, that was sufficient, as it did not appear that defendant was not aware that it had been made. Doe d. Sherwood v. Stevens, 6 O. S. 432.

The mere fact of a vendor continuing in possession of land after conveying it, without more being shewn, does not entitle him to a demand of possession. Doe d. Richardson v. Dafoc. 4 U. C. R. 484.

Where a person takes possession of land under an agreement to purchase it, he is a tenant at wil! to the seller, and at the seller's death his heir-at-law can maintain ejectment without any notice to quit, or demand of possession. Doe d, Kemp v, Garner, 1 U. C. R. 39.

Where a defendant was in possession under an agreement to purchase and pay by instalments, and after payment of the first instalment failed to pay any of the others, but remained in possession for many years, until the lessor of the plaintiff offered to give him a deed on certain terms, which were not complied with, and told him he might remain for the summer if he would leave in the autumn, which defendant refused:—Held, the jury having found that the lessor of the plaintiff had at this time determined the holding at will, that defendant was not entitled to a demand. Doe d. Stodders v. Trotter, 1 U. C. R. 310.

A. contracted to sell to B. for a sum to be paid by instalments, and defendant went in under B., upon some understanding not explained. Default was made in the payments to A.:—Held, that A. could eject defendant without notice or demand. Doe d. Phillpotts v. Crouch, 5 U. C. R. 453.

Held, that under the evidence in this case, the defendant having been in possession as a purchaser, and failed in making the payments, the plaintiff might eject without a demand. Robertson v. Stattery, 10 U. C. R. 498.

Plaintiff's devisor gave a bond to the defendant conditioned to convey to him upon payment of £175 on the 1st March, 1856, when the obligor was to give the deed, and defendant to secure the balance of the purchase money by mortgage on the premises. Then followed these words: "The said I. A. (the defendant) is to have possession of the said land and premises, with the exception of the louise and barn, from the sealing and delivery of these presents:"—Held, that on default in payment of the £175, plaintiff might eject defendant. A demand of possession was made, but, semble, it was unnecessary. Stringham v. Ammerma, 14 U. C. R. 548.

The defendant had been let into possession under a contract to purchase, payable by instalments, with a stipulation for forfeiture if payment were not made on a particular day, and the vendor had subsequent to such day received payment on account:—Held, that defendant was tenant at will, and not by sufferance, and that a demand of possession was necessary. Lundy v. Dozey, 7 C. P. 38.

Plaintiff sold to defendant, and gave a bond for a deed, receiving defendant's bond for the purchase money. Nothing was said about possession in either instrument. Defendant having made default in payment, after having been for some time in possession:—Held, that the plaintiff could eject without either notice or demand. Robinson v. Smith, 17 U. C. R. 218

Plaintiff being in possession as assignee of mortgagee, under a mortgage upon which default had been made, contracted to sell the mortgage to defendant for $500: $200 down, and $300 on the 1st April following; at which time the plaintiff agreed to have the mortgage time the plaintin agreed to have the horizontal assigned to defendant. On payment of $200 defendant was let into possession. He made default in payment of the $300. Plaintiff gave him notice that he was ready to assign the mortgage on payment of the amount due, and that if not paid defendant would be ejected. Defendant refused payment, and said ejected. Detendant refused payment, and the would stand a suit, and claimed a deed in fee:—Held, that by default in payment the tenancy at will was converted into a tenancy at sufferance, and that therefore, as well as on account of his disclaimer of the plaintiff's title, defendant was not entitled to a demand of possession before action; and also that the tenancy at will would have been determined by the demand of payment under the threat of ejecting the defendant, and the default of the defendant to pay. Prince v. Moore, 14 C. P.

1V. EFFECT OF JUDGMENT IN EJECTMENT,

Held, that a judgment in ejectment, recovered after twenty years had expired, would not save the statute: aliter, if recovered within twenty years, and the occupant within the twenty years had been dispossessed upon such judgment. Doe d. Perry v. Henderson, 3 U. C. R. 486.

One F, rented the locus in quo from the plaintiff previous to May, 1851, when he went out and the defendant obtained possession. The plaintiff recovered in ejectment, in which the denise was laid on the 14th June, 1851, and entered his judgment in March, 1852; he then brought trespass q. e. f., alleging the trespass to have been committed on the 5th July, 1851. The trespass proved was in May, 1851, while F, was in possession; but, Held, that the action was maintainable, for the recovery in ejectment entitled the plaintiff to treat the defendant as a trespasser from the day of the demise. Foster v. Foster, 10 U. C. R. 667.

At the trial of an ejectment, under 14 & 15 Viet, c, 114, recovery was proved in favour of John Doe, on the demise of the now defendant against the now plaintiff; and it appeared that the question there decided, being one of boundary, was precisely the same as that again brought up in this case:—Held, clearly no estoppel, for that judgment was between different parties, and under the old practice. Quaere, whether this Act has altered the effect of a recovery in ejectment, as regards estoppel. Semble, that, under s. 8 it has not, when the finding is for the claimants. Clubine v. McMaldlen, 11 U. C. R. 250.

Case for libel in publishing a printed notice denying the plaintiff's title to certain land, of which the declaration alleged that he was seised in fee, and which he had advertised for sale, and stating that one C. J. had the title, and that a suit was pending in chancery to establish her undoubted right. The fifth plea alleged that the plaintiff's only title was by virtue of an indenture of mortgage executed to him by one K., who was then seised in fee: that the said indenture was given to secure usurious interest; that the said K. died intestate, and his heirs gave the said C. J. full license to enter on and occupy the said land during her life; and thereupon the defendant, as her agent, published, &c. The plaintiff replied, by way of estopped, a verdict and judgment in an action of ejectment brought by him against the defendant and one E. X., to recover possession of this land, in which it was found by the jury that the said indenture was not illegal or usurious. Semble, that the replication showed an estoppel. Mair v. Cully, 12 U. C. R. 71.

First count, debt on the statute for double value, claiming £40: second count, for use and occupation, claiming £20. Pleas: 1, that after the passing of 14 & 15 Vict, c. 114, the plaintiff impleaded the defendant in an action of ejectment for the same premises in the delaration mentioned, &c., in which action the jury were sworn as well to try the Issue joined as to assess the damages to which the plaintiff might be entitled for the use and occupation of said premises, and a verdict was rendered for the plaintiff, as and for damages for the use and occupation of said premises, &c.; 2, to the whole declaration, as to £20, parcel, &c., the same plea:—Held, on demurrer, both pleas bad, as being no answer to the first count, and for not shewing that notice of claim to substantial damages was given, or that judgment had been entered, or that the recovery was for the same claim; and that the second plea was bad also, for not shewing to what £20 it was pleaded. Homer v. Leting, 13 U. C. R. 233.

Quare as to the effect of the issue in ejectment now being only as to the right of possession. Robinson v. Smith, 17 U. C. R. 218.

Upon an action by N. against W. for mesne profits:—Held, that judgment in ejectment recovered by N. against a third party, who was proved to have been acknowledged by W. as his tenant, was evidence against W., be being looked upon as landlord of the party against whom the ejectment was brought, with notice of the action, which he might have defended. Neade v. Winter, 9 C. P. 394.

Declaration, upon a writ issued on the 21st December, 1858, for entering plaintiff's close, and keeping him out of possession thereof for six years. Plea, that the land was not the plaintiff's. Replication, that defendant ought not to be allowed so to plead, because by writ issued defendant in ejectment to recover possession of the same land, and after trial obtained judgment therein:—Held, on demurrer, replication bad, as being pleaded to the whole plea, and containing no answer to the defence as to any time previous to the 11th August, 1858. Green v. Kain, 18 U. C. R. 629.

The plaintiff being tenant in common with defendant (her mother) and a sister, lived on the place with them until March, 1850, when she left of her own accord. The mother invited her to return, which she refused to do, and in April, 1850, she brought ejectment as tenant in common against both of her cotenants, in which she obtained judgment for default of appearance in October, but never took possession. In March, 1864, she suef for mesne profits, and defendant pleaded not guilty:—Held, that the judgment in ejectment was not conclusive proof of outser: that the plaintiff had never in fact been so kept out of possession as to make defendant liable in trespass; and that she could therefore recover only the costs of the ejectment. Steen v. Steen, 21 U. C. R. 454.

A judgment in ejectment against the casual ejector does not estop a defendant, in an action for mesne profits, from disputing the title of the plaintiff from the time of the denise laid in the action of ejectment. Ponton v. Duly, 1 U. C. R. 181.

A judgment in ejectment for part of the premises is an estoppel against defendant's denial of the plaintiff's interest in such portion. Doc v. Langs, D.U. C. R. 676.

Held, in ejectment, that a record in ejectment in a former trial substantially between the same parties, was properly admitted as evidence, and that all that could be inferred against the plaintif's right to recover at that time, and the defendant's right to possession, were proper inferences from the production of the record. Orser v. Vernon, 14 C. P. 573.

Trespass to plaintiff's land in the township of Saltfleet, digging and making drains, &c. converting same into a road or highway, and expelling plaintiff therefrom. Second plealand not plaintiff's. Fourth plea—as to the digging and making drains for six years next digging and making dranks for its years as before action brought, and maintaining the land during that period as a highway, and keeping plaintiff out of exclusive possession—that before and during the period of six —that before and during the period of six years before action brought, there was a high-way over the whole of the said land, upon which statute labour had before and since been annually performed; that during said six years defendants, as such municipal cor-poration, had jurisdiction over said highway; that the soil and freehold of said land, being such highway, were during that period vested in the Crown, or in defendants, under the sta-tute in that behalf, and defendants were tute in that behalf, and defendants were thereby bound during said period to keep said highway in repair. The plea went on to deny the reservation of any rights in the soil by any individual, or the exclusive possession during said period by plaintiff, or any other person, but averred that the same had been used as a highway, and that the trespasses complained of were committed for the purpose of repairing the said highway. Replications, to so much of the pleas as related to that portion of the trespasses committed since the commencement of an action of ejectment, brought by plaintiff against defendants for the same land, that defendants were estopped by the recovery of judgment by default in that action and possession taken thereunder, from pleading said pleas:—Held, on demurrer, replications good, the exceptions thereto being sustained neither in fact nor law; in fact, because plaintiff did not bring ejectment for a highway; and in law, because, suing as plaintiff did sue, he rightly brought his action for so much land, though there was a right of way over it for the public, in accordance with the law as laid down in Goodtitle v. Alker, 1 Burr. 133 :- Held, also, that the writ in ejectment not having described the property sued for as a highway, the recovery in that action would not have estopped the defendants from setting up, under a proper plea, that the land was a highway, and that they entered upon it for the purpose of repair; for that the recovery was not absolutely irreconcilable with the fact of the land having been all along a highway, the plaintiff, and not the defendants, being the owner of the soil, the public having the right of way over it, and therefore the right to enter and make repairs; but that defendants could not, after the recovery in ejectment, set up the pleas they had pleaded; the second, denying that the land was plaintiff's property, and the fourth not being confined to a mere assertion that the land was a highway, but distinctly alleging the soil and freehold of the land to be in the Crown, or in defendants; besides other averments quite opposed to plaintiff's having any right in the property, and therefore to his right to recover in ejectment, as he had recovered. Carscallen v. Municipality of Sattleet, 17 C. P. 219.

Plaintiffs claimed under a deed from E. M. and T. Defendants shewed no title. It appeared that E., on the 26th June, 1856, recovered judgment in ejectment for the land, against defendant, in an action commenced on the 3rd September, 1855, and the hab, fac, was returned executed on the 21st July, 1856, possession having been delivered to the plaintiffs' agent, who held it for two or three years. It also appeared that on the 17th March, 1858, the defendant brought ejectment against E. and the other two plaintiffs herein, and was nonsuited. How he afterwards obtained possession did not appear:—Held, that the defendant could not dispute the plaintiffs' title further back than the 3rd September, 1855, the judgment in ejectment being evidence of their title at that time as against this defendant, who shewed no title in himself. Thompson v. Hall, 31 U. C. R. 367.

In trespass for mesne profits, &c., defendants justified under a demise from a tenant in common for one year from May, 1871. The plaintiff replied estoppel by a judgment in ejectment, recovered in 1870, against a tenant of defendants hen in possession, of which suit defendants had notice. On demurrer to the replication, on the ground of want of privity between the tenant in common and the defendant in ejectment, and because it did not appear that the title under which the plaintiff recovered in ejectment continued up to the demise to defendants:—Held, that the replication was good, the presumption being that the title continued until the contrary was shewn. Herr v. Weston, 32 U. C. R. 402.

The plaintiff on the 4th April, 1864, mortgaged land to L, who covenanted thereby for quiet enjoyment by the plaintiff until default. To an action against L's administrator on this covenant, alleging an eviction by persons claiming under L, defendant pleaded that L conveyed the land to the plaintiff, on the 31st March, 1864, which was the plaintiff's only title to the land; that the mortgage sued on was to secure the purchase money, and was executed immediately after the deed, and as a part of the same transaction; that the plaintiff by the mortgage covenanted that he was seised in fee, and had good right to convey, and that the eviction complained of was an action of ejectment brought by the heirs of L on the ground that L was of unsound mind when he executed the deed on the 31st March, 1864, which was proved at the trial, and the jury thereupon found for the heirs;—Held, that the plea was bad; for heirs;—Held, that the deed for insanity did not necessarily involve the avoidance of the mortgage; nor did the estopued, applicable to the deed, extend to the mortgage; that defendant should have pleaded L.'s insanity directly to the mortgage if he wished to test its validity; and moreover the parties here were not the same as in the ejectment suit, nor was it certain from the record in ejectment that the recovery therein was on the ground alleged. Eccles v. Lovry, 32 U. C. R. 635.

A judgment in ejectment is evidence of the title of the party in whose favour it was given: but whether it is conclusive, and may be pleaded by way of estoppel, has not been determined. Wightman v. Fields, 19 Gr. 559.

Where a vendor brought ejectment and turned the heirs of the purchaser out of possession, he was held to have disabled himself from coming to the court for specific performance, and could only do so in order to bind their interest in such a manner as to render the property saleable. Haven v. Cashion, 20 Gr. 518.

Since the Ontario Judicature Act, a judgment recovered in an action of ejectment by default of appearance will sustain a defence of res judicata to an action subsequently brought by the defendant to try the same question. Cochrane v. Hamilton Provident and Loan Society, 15 O. R. 128; Ball v. Cathcart, 16 O. R. 525.

See Estoppel, II.

V. PLAINTIFF'S TITLE AND EVIDENCE THEREOF.

Admissions of Plaintiff.]—The admissions of the plaintiff in ejectment, being a real person, (the lessor being an infant), are not evidence to prevent the recovery of the premises. Nichotson d. Spafford v. Roc, 3 O. S. S4.

Agreement to Give up Possession.]—Defendant being in possession under one M., agreed, under seal, to give up necessite pessession to plantiffs, together with certain for-niture specified, within one week from the date, upon receipt of $30. On the following day the plaintiffs tendered to him $30, which he refused, and they then brought ejectment;—Held, that in the absence of any explanation it was properly left to the jury as importing an admission by defendant that the plaintiffs were entitled to possession on paying or tendering the $30, Stewart v. Cameron, 20 U. C. R. 133.

Claiming by Different Titles,]—Where the lessor of the blaintiff endeavours at the trial to establish his title as devisee, and fails, he is not thereby precluded from insisting on his right as heir-at-law, or as a purchaser or the person last seised in possession. Due d. Hussey v. Gray, M. T. 6 Vict.

The lessor of the plaintiff supported his title by a deed, in consideration of love and affection. Defendant proved a subsequent deed from the same party for a valuable consideration, and impeached the first deed as voluntary. The plaintiff then offered to prove a real consideration for the first deed beyond what was expressed in it. This evidence was rejected as going into a new case; but held, that it might have been received, the principle that the plaintiff should go into his whole case at once not admitting of such a strict application in ejectment. Doc d. Lawrence v. Stalker, 5 U. C. R. 346.

Semble, that a plaintiff in ejectment, relying in the opening of his case upon a prima facie title by possession, and being met by proof on the part of the defendant of a prior possession, cannot repel such proof by attempting to shew the possession of defendant that of a tenant to him, the plaintiff, as landlord; he should go into his case fully in the first instance. Doe d. Osborne v. McDougall, 6 U. C. R. 135.

A plaintiff having opened his case as heirat-law of the patentee, relying upon the assumed limited effect of his own deed to the dependant, was not allowed to change his ground and shew himself entitled under the statute of limitations. McKinley v. Bowbeer, 11 U. C. R. 86.

The plaintiff in ejectment claimed title by deed from M. the defendant, by length of nossession. At the trial the plaintiff failed to prove his paper title, but shewed that defendant went in under him, and it was then objected that a demand of possession was necessary, on which defendant had leave to move for a nonsuit. In term this point was not urged, but defendant objected that the plaintiff could not rely on a different title from that in his notice:—Held, that as this objection had not been taken at the trial, and defendant's case was not one to be favoured, he should not be allowed to raise it afterwards; and the plaintiff's verdict was upheld. Kennedy v. Freeth, 23 U. C. R. 92.

Conditional Devise. — The plaintiffs claimed under a will, by which testator devised to his widow 1,000 acres of land in Walsingham; and if he had less than 1,000 acres there, then that quantity to be made up to her out of his Zorra lands:—Held, that to succeed, the plaintiffs must prove that the testator died seised of 1,000 acres more than the land in question in Walsingham. Miller v. Anger, 8 C. P. Su Corporation—Lands held beyond Statutory Period.]—Where a corporation is empowered by statute to hold lands for a definite period, without any provision as to reverter, and holds beyond the period, only the Crown can take advantage of it, and it is not a defence to an action of ejectment that the lands were acquired by the plaintiff from the corporation after the period fixed by the statute. McDiarmid y Hughes, 16 O. R. 570.

Effect of Mortgages, — A. mortgaged lands in fee to B., and before the time for redemption expired, on an arrangement with B., A. conveyed these same lands in fee to C., in full satisfaction of the debt secured by mortgage. No reconveyance from B. to A. was proved. C. went into possession and held for about 13 years, when B. made a conveyance in fee of the same premises to D., claiming the title through this mortgage:—Held, that D. was not entitled to recover in ejectment, and that if necessary a reconveyance from B. to A, might be presumed. Doe d. McLean v. Whitesides, 5 O. S. 92.

Ejectment cannot be sustained by a mortgagor against a stranger where the mortgage is overdue and unsatisfied, the fee and right of possession being in the mortgagee. Doe d. McBernie v. Lundy, 1 U. C. R. 186.

A satisfied mortgage in fee to a third party cannot be set up by a stranger as a subsisting title to defeat the true owner. I frenny v. Johnson, 4 U. C. R. 508.

Semble, that a widow cannot be allowed to set up a mortgage to a third party against the heir of the husband. Ib.

Defendant produced a mortgage in fee given by the plaintiff to one C., to secure the payment of £230 by instalments. By the mortgage the mortgagor was to remain in posses-sion until three months' notice in writing. after default, demanding payment. The morttered a week after the commencement of the action, and it was therefore contended that the plaintiff had no legal title when he began his suit :- Held, that he might nevertheless recover, for no notice was proved to have been given as required by the mortgage, and he was therefore entitled to possession against the mortgage. Sidey v. Hardcastle, 11 U. C. R.

It was admitted that the plaintiff had mortgaged the premises to a building society, the condition of the mortgage being to pay on the first day of every month until the on the first day of every month until the objects of the society, as stated in it, should be fulfilled. No default had been made, and it was proved that since action brought the society had released to the plaintiff their claim. on the land in question:—Held, that the plaintiff could not recover, for the expiration of the mortgage being uncertain, he was only a tenant at will when the suit was brought, and therefore not entitled to the possession.

Ashford v. McNaughton, 11 U. C. R. 171.

See, also, Dundas v. Arthur, 14 U. C. R.

Plaintiff purchased at sheriff's sale defendant's interest in certain lands, and, on ejectment brought in 1856, defendant produced a mortgage executed by one B., under whom he had gone into possession, to secure repayment of £28 in October, 1846. This mortgage had been satisfied, as was proved by the mort-gagee, but no discharge had been registered:— Held, that the jury should have been directed, as a matter of course, to presume a re-conveyance, and plaintiff should recover. Collins v. Dempsey, 14 U. C. R. 393.

Upon the trial it appeared that the plaintiff, by a mortgage dated 1st October, 1861, had conveyed the premises to one L. to secure him for indorsing certain notes, the said mort-gage to be void on payment of the notes; and it contained a recital that the notes might be renewed, but only three times or for a year. which the mortgage consented to. It appeared that the notes had been renewed for longer than the period allowed, and were affoat at the commencement of this suit:—Held, that the notes not having been paid within the year. the condition of the mortgage was broken, and the right to possession vested in the mortgagee; and a nonsuit was therefore ordered.

Mahon v. McFaul, 14 C. P. 433.

M., owning land, executed a bond to defendant, reciting that defendant was to reside with him and work the farm for their mutual advantage; that it had been agreed that after M.'s death it should become defendant's, and to secure this, M. had that day made his will leaving it to him;—and the condition was, that if the defendant should work the farm properly, &c., M. would not execute any other will, nor dispose of or incumber the land will, nor dispose of or incumber the land. Afterwards they disagreed, and M. conveyed to the plaintiff, who brought ejectment after having demanded possession:—Held, that an unsatisfied mortgage executed by M. before the bond, and put in by defendant, was clearly no defence. McDonald v. Murphy, 20 U. C. R.

One F. mortgaged land in fee to the Trust and Loan Company, with a proviso for pos-session until default. Upon his death his heirssession that actual. Upon his death his herrisat-law brought ejectment to recover possession from a tenant, no default having been made in the mortgage:—Held, that the proviso would entitle the mortgager to bring ejectment, but that the right of action descended to the executors and not to the heirs. Ford v. Jones, 12 C. P. 358.

Estoppel-Allegations in Defence-Statements in Other Proceedings. |-Where in an action for recovery of lands by M., who had bought them at a sale under execution against J. K., it was objected that he had failed to prove that J. K. had at the time of such sale any title to the said lands:—Held, that it was no answer to this objection to say that defendant had in setting up certain facts "by no answer to this objection to say that the way of a further and separate defence leged that J. K. was the patentee of the lands in question, for that such an allegation could in question, for that such an allegation could not be made use of by the plaintiff to satisfy any defect in his evidence to prove his case, the burden of which rested on him by reason of the said defendant having pleaded sion in herself and her tenants:-Held, also, that the fact that in the course of certain prior that the fact that in the course of certain prior proceedings had by M. on an execution against A. K. the wife of J. K., for the purpose of selling the said lands, M. had then asserted that they belonged to her, did not estop M. from now as against J. K. and A. K., alleging that they belonged to J. K. McGee v, Kane, 14 O. R. 226. Affirmed by the supreme court, Cassels Dig. 247.

Impeaching Crown Grant.]-Evidence will not be received to shew that a grant from the Crown was improperly issued, so as to enable a subsequent grantee to recover in ejectment. Doe d. McKay v. Rykert, T. T. 3 & 4 Vict.

Jus Tertii. |- Semble, that the wife of an attainted traitor, remaining in possession of her husband's lands, cannot defeat the re-covery of a plaintiff in ejectment (the pur-chaser at sheriff's sale, in an action brought against the traitor upon a bond entered into before his attainder) by setting up under the attainder a title by forfeiture to the Crown. which the Crown had forborne to assert. Doe d. Gillespie v. Wixon, 5 U. C. R. 132.

Where the estate is in the Crown, and metre the estate is in the Crown, and neither party shews any title beyond a short possession, the tenant in possession, if he entered peaceably and under colour of a claiming right, may set up the just tertii as a defence. Doe d. Wilkes v. Babcock, 1 C. P. 388.

A party possessed of premises is not estopped from setting up as an outstanding title against a claimant a conveyance to a third party, although that third person could not set up the conveyance as a bar to a recovery. Phillips v. Long, 9 C. P. 341.

Quare, whether the defendant, a mere stranger, could set up the title in the Crown as against the plantiffs possession for forty years, with the privity of the Crown. Semble, that at all events the plaintiffs could have maintained trespass against him. Juson v. Repuolds, 34 U. C. R. 174.

Letters Probate — Allegations in Defence. —In an action for the recovery of land, the plaintifis claimed title under a deed from the executors of one S., but the only evidence of the will produced by them was the copy of the probate from the registry office with the affidavit of verification attached:—Held, that this was not proper evidence of the will. The plaintiffs, however, sought to support their case by reference to a certain statement in the defendant's pleading, in which, besides denying their right to recover, she herself also claimed title under a deed from the executors of S:—Held, that they could not take that part of the pleading which suited their purpose and reject the rest; they could not use a scrap of it to eke out the insufficiency of their own evidence. Barber v. McKay, 17 O. 15. 52?

Offer by Defendant to Purchase.]— Defendant, being an occupant of land, went to the lessor of the plaintiff of his own accord, made an offer to purchase the land, and made a payment on account:—Held, that he was thereby prevented from maintaining an adverse possession, or putting plaintiff to further proof of title. Doe d. Boulton v. Walker, 8 U. C. R. 571.

Where defendant, having obtained possession without any privity with M., the plaintiff's assignor, went to him and offered to purchase, but no bargain was made, and he told M. he might sell to whoever he chose:—Held, that the plaintiff could maintain ejectment without further proof of his title. Drake v. North, 14 U. C. R. 476.

Where the plaintiff proved that he had leased to one B., and that after he had left defendant went in: that defendant offered to purchase at the valuation of a person named, and after the commencement of this action offered $800 for the place:—Held, sufficient evidence to go to the jury, without further proof of plaintiff's title. Penlington v. Brownlee, 28 U. C. R. 189.

There was some evidence in this case of an offer by defendant to purchase plaintiff's claim, but.—Held, that this could avail only if defendant had no title, not to defeat a good title by possession, which defendant had shewn. Mctregor v. La Rush, 30 U. C. R. 299.

Paramount Title in Defendant.]— Where defendant defended as the landlord of the tenant in possession, and the lessor of the plaintiff proved a mortgage in fee from the tenant himself, but did not further shew defendant's title to the land, and established no privity between defendant and himself, and the defendant shewed title paramount in himself to the land:—Held, that defendant was entitled to recover. Doe d. Matheuson v. Ault, 2 U. C. R. 31. Plaintiff's Son in Possession. — The ethence shewed that the plaintiff's son had for some time been in possession as a tenant under lease, at a yearly rent:—Semble, that this would have been a bar to plaintiff's action. Johnston v. White, 40 U. C. R. 309.

Plaintiff's Title to Part.]—Held, following Dison v. Grayfere, 17 Bew. 421, that the defendant not having by himself and his grantor the length of possession to constitute a bar, the plaintiff coming clothed with the rightful title to five-siths was entitled to succeed, even though the owners of four of those shares, who conveyed to him, had been out of possession for more than ten years. Ryerse v. Tecter, 44 U. C. R. 8.

Possession.] — Possession from which seisin may be inferred must be actual or visible, not constructive. Doe d. Morgan v. Simpson, 5 O. S. 555.

A. in 1842 conveyed to B.'s son, then a minor. The deed was never registered. B, swore that he bought the land from A., but being in difficulty had the deed made to his son, and that he had always continued in possession; but on this point the evidence was contradictory. A.'s heir in 1849, made a deed of release to B., and B. conveyed to the lessors of the plaintiff; both these deeds were registered:—Held, that the mere fact of B. being in possession when he conveyed to the lessors of the plaintiff could not be relied on as prima face; evidence of seisin, after A. had been shewn to have been in possession previously, and to have conveyed to B.'s son. Doe d. Prince v. Girty, 9 U. C. R. 41.

Where a plaintiff in ejectment recovers land of which be has been for twenty years disonssessed, and is put into possession by the sheriff, the defendant is not precluded from trying the right again, and replying in an action brought by him upon his title acquired by the twenty years' possession. Moran v. Jessup, 15 U. C. R. 612.

In ejectment against two, the plaintiffs proved a mortgage in fee made by one while in possession as owner, and duly assigned to them, and that the other defendant came in after, without shewing how:—Held, sufficient, primâ facie, to entitle the plaintiffs to a verdict against both, Eccles v. Paterson, 22 U. C. R. 167.

In ejectment for 100 acres, the east half of lot 23, the plaintiff claimed under a mortgage executed by F. in 1847, and nessigned by the executors of the mortgage to the loadiniff in 1856, and a comparison of the loadiniff in 1853. Neither the most of the mortgage of the loadiniff in 1853. Neither the most of the mortgage debt was mentioned in F. will. It was proved that in 1847 F. owned 100 acres of lot 22 adjoining, and had cleared four or five nerres of the half lot in question, of which he was reputed to be the owner. Defendant had occupied about twelve acres of it for nearly fourteen years:—Quære, whether this was sufficient primfi facie evidence of F. being owner in fee. Hunter v. Farr, 23 U. C. R. 324.

The plaintiff proved a mortgage to him in fee from one B., and called a witness who swore that he purchased from one P. the east half of the lot, of which this land was part, excepting nine acres: that P. had been in nossession of the east half since 1850, and gave B. possession of the land sued for before witness purchased the remainder from P. and that defendant told him he bought from B. When defendant entered, or under what right, did not appear:—Held, sufficient prină facie evidence as against defendant, Covert v. Robinson, 24 U. C. R. 282.

In ejectment for the east half of a lot, the plaintiff proved a deed to him from S. of the whole lot executed in 1865, and that persons claiming under S. had lived from 1837 to 1850 on part of the west half, building a log house and clearing four or five acres. It was not shewn that S. had been dispossessed by any one: and the defendant, with those through whom he claimed, had been in possession since about 1850:—Held, that this evidence was not sufficient to go to the jury. Shaver v. Jamieson, 25 U. C. R. 156.

Evidence that plaintiff had been in possession and had been intruded upon by defendant:—Held, insufficient, it appearing that the fee was still in the Crown, the plaintiff being in possession as a free grant settler, but without patent or license of occupation. Henderson v. Morrison, 18 C. P. 221.

Held, upon the facts stated in this case, that, irrespective of the objections raised to the proof of their paper title, the plaintiffs had sufficient title as against the defendants, who had entered upon the peaceable possession of the plaintiffs or their grantors. Thompson v. Bennett, 22 C. P. 393.

It appeared that the plaintiff's grantor had cut timber on the land, and had the lines run by a surveyor, and then conveyed, claiming as owner: that defendant then entered, the lot being unoccupied and wild; but that there had been a prior occupation by defendant, at least as netual as that of the plaintiff, but no occupation by any one for any period approaching twenty years:—Held, that any presumption in plaintiff's favour from any presumption proved by him, was rebutted. Wallbridge v. Gilmour, 22 C. P. 135.

In an action for trespass to land, the plaintiff proved a good paper title derived through a sale for taxes, but he had never been in actual possession, and it was shewn that after the plaintiff obtained his deed the defendant had cut timber on the land and built a shanty for the lumbermen, although the plaintiff went there and forbade him; and it appeared that the plaintiff had brought ejectment against him, but had not proceeded with it after defendant appeared. The defendant claimed under a deed from the heirs of the patentee, and it was sworn that before defendant purchased the plaintiff also wished to buy from them, saying that he thought his own title not good:
—Held, that the plaintiff was sufficiently in possession to maintain trespass, and that he was not estopped by having brought ejectment, as being an admission of defendant's possession. Heck v. Knapp, 20 U. C. R. 360.

A., purchasing land at sheriff's sale, having reason to believe that he cannot zet possession without legal proceedings against the execution debtor, B., to avoid this, contrives, by collusion with C. B.'s tenant, to get into nossession without the consent of B.:—Held, in an action of ejectment brought by B. against A., that A. thus acquiring possession collusive-by through B.'s tenant, cannot set up any title in himself adverse to B.; that before he can do this, however good his title may be, he must abandon the possession obtained through C., and bring an action against B. Doe d. Miller v. Tilfany, 5 U. C. R. 79.

Plaintiff brought ejectment against the defendant after he had quitted possession. Defendant appeared, not limiting his defence, nor stating the nature of his own claim, but at the same time he served a notice on the plaintiff's attorney that he did not deny the plaintiff's title, and had given up possession before action brought. The plaintiff nevertheless took the record down to trial:—Held, that the notice given with the appearance did not oblige the plaintiff to prove at the trial that the defendant was in possession when the writ issued. Harper v. Londos, 15 U. C. R. 430.

The plaintiff was assignee in insolvency of H., who bought from the purchaser at a sheriff's sale. H. leased to T. and put him in possession, and had some small buildings put on the land. Subsequently, the defendant O. made untrue representations to T., which induced him to quit possession, whereupon O. went in and occupied, claiming under defendant W., who, he alleged, had an interest in the land. W. by his answer adopted O.'s possession and claimed under conveyance from the Crown, but failed to prove his title:—Held, following Doe Johnson v. Baytup, 3. A. & E. 188, that the possession so fraudulently obtained by O. did not entitle him to put the plaintiff upon proof of his title. Nelles v. White, 29 Gr. 238. Affirmed by supreme court, Cassels Dig. 374.

Where the defendant, claiming to be the owner of certain land, procured the plaintiff's tenant to attorn to him and thereby claimed the possession:—Held, in ejectment, that the plaintiff was entitled to recover by reason of the defendant having thus obtained possession from the plaintiff's tenant; but that this was not to estop the defendant from disputing the plaintiff's title and shewing title in himself in any action he might bring to recover possession. Mulholland v. Harman, 6, 0, R, 546.

In an action for the recovery of land, proof of possession is prima facie evidence of title, and, in the absence of proof of title in another, is evidence of seish in fee; if, however, it be proved that the title is in another, although the defendant does not claim under or in privity with such other, the plaintiff's action will fail. Where, in such an action, the plaintiff claimed to have acquired a title thereto by possession, originally that of a squatter, commencing in 1851, on land then patented and in a state of nature, such possession being without the knowledge of the patentee or those claiming under him:—Held, under 27 & 28 Viet. c. 29, s. 1, that in order to bur the right of the patentee forty versi's possession at least was necessary; and the action therefore failed as against the defendant in possession though not claiming through or in privity with the patentee. Bonnelly v. Ames, 27 O. R. 271.

Presumption — Statutory Title.] — The Provincial statute 1 Wm. IV. c. 26, vesting in a trustee certain lands belonging to the estate of the late St. G., has not he effect of raising a presumption of title in the particular lands enumerated in the schedule so as to relieve his trustee from the necessity of shewing title in the first instance. Doe d. Baldwin v. Stone, 5 U. C. R. 388.

Production at Trial.]—Where the plaintiff's counsel in opening his case stated it as a question of legitimacy, and that defendant claimed under a will, and the defence was conducted without the production of the will, as if the statement of the counsel had rendered that unnecessary:—Held, that it ought to have been produced. Doe d. Breakey v. Breakey, 2 U. C. R. 349.

Production of Agreement.]—Where in ejectment naginst a person let into possession of land, a witness stated he had seen a written agreement about the land between the parties, but it was not shewn in whose custody it was or what its terms were, and it was proved the defendant had written a letter to the plaintiff's agent, stating that he was to give up the premises on a certain day—it was held that the lessor of the plaintiff could not be required to produce the agreement, as it was not sufficiently shewn to be in his custody or power. Due d. Mitchell v, McLeod, 6 O. 8, 553.

Proof of Patent. — The plaintiff was entitled to anceod, under the registry law, if a patent had issued for the land, and at the trial no objection was taken for want of proof of that fact:—Held, that such objection could not be taken in term; and, quarer, whether a deed from defendant covenanting for title, subject to the reservations, &c., contained in the original patent, was not some evidence against him, Garctt v. Blakely, 9 C. P. 46.

Several Plaintiffs.] - 36 Vict. c. 135 ss. 10-12 (O.), respecting the property of religious institutions, authorizes only the appointment of successors to trustees dead or legally removed, and does not empower the congregation to remove trustees competent and willing to act. The three plaintiffs in this case claimed title under a conveyance to two of them, and to H., one of the derendants, as a trustee of a congregation named, alleging that H. had been since removed from the office of trustee, and the plaintiff T. appointed in his stead. Defendants denied the plaintiffs' title. The conveyance contained no clause for the removal of trustees or the appointment of new ones, and the congregation, under the statute above mentioned, had assumed to appoint the plaintiff T. in place of H .: - Held, that the plaintiffs must wholly succeed or wholly fail as to the title alleged, and that the appointment of T. being invalid, a nonsuit must be entered. Lage v. Mackenson, 40 U. C. R. 388.

Statutory Title.]—Where land had been taken by the Great Western R. W. Co. for the purpose of their railway under 9 Vict. c. 81, s. 30, and 16 Vict. c. 99, the company, in ejectment brought by them, can rely on the title acquired thereby, and are not driven to prove strictly the title of their grantors. Great Western R. W. Co. v. Lutz, 32 C. P. 166.

Substituted Defendants.] — Ejectment having been brought against A., B. was allowed to defend in his place. The plaintiffs claimed under a mortgage from A., whose title B. deniel.—Semble, that upon the evidence set out in the case, the verdict for the plaintiffs could not be supported. Pecbles v. Lottridge, 19 U. C. R. 628.

Void Deed—Equitable Title.]—In an action to recover possession of land it appeared that one of the deeds forming a link in the plaintiff's title had been altered by the grantor's agent under authority of a letter from the grantor. The alteration consisted in the agent rewriting the first two pages and substituting a new grantee. The letter was not under seal; and the deed was not re-executed or re-delivered by the grantor. The plaintiff proved that he had a good equitable right to possession:—Held, that the deed was void at law; but that the plaintiff was entitled to recover on his equitable title. Leave was also granted to add the owner of the legal estate as plaintiff if necessary. Thorne v. Williams, 13 O. R. 577.

(2) Appearance and Defence.

(a) At What Time.

The writ of summons under the Ejectment Act reques the defendant to appear "within sixteen days after the service hereof." A summons was served on the 12th, and judgment signed on the 28th:—Held, too soon. Scott v. Dickson, 1 P. R. 306. Followel in Montgomery v. Bronn, 2 C. L. J. 72.

Summons served on 15th February (not being leap year.) Judgment signed in default of appearance on 4th March, the 3rd March, the last of the sixteen days within which defendant had to appear, being Sunday:—Held, regular. Cline v. Caulcy, 4 P. R. St.

(b) By Landlord.

A landlord may be admitted to defend without an affidavit stating that he is so. Doe d. Griffin v. Lee, Tay. 235.

Where judgment js obtained against the casual ejector in consequence of the tenant in possession having neglected to give notice to his landlord, the court will set the judgment and writ of possession aside, and compel the tenant to pay costs. Doe d. Robertson v. Metcalf, Pay, 377.

In ejectment on a vacant possession, after the usual rule had been obtained by the plaintiff, the court set the proceedings aside, on affidavits stating that there was a house on the premises, with several articles of furniture in it, and that the tenant lived near, on condition that the applicant, who claimed as landlord, should appear and defend. Popplewell d. Capreal v. Abbott, 5 O. S. 61.

A mortgagee will not be admitted to defend as landlord, unless he can shew that the tenant is or holds under his mortgagor. Doe d. Mallock v. Roe, M. T. 1 Vict.

In ejectment against two tenants, the landlord obtained leave to join in a defence as a third party, but not availing himself of the order the plaintiff made up his record against the two tenants alone. He gave notice of trial, however, in a cause as against the three; and the two not confessing, &c., the plaintiff was nonsuited. On application in term:— Held, that under these circumstances there was no necessity to set aside the nonsuit, but it was set aside on terms. Doe d. Murphy v. McGuire, 7 U. C. R. 405.

A judgment regularly obtained will not be set aside for the purpose of allowing a third party (landlord) to come in and defend. Mercer v. Bond, 3 L. J. 150.

The tenant in possession having neglected to notify his landlord, the defendant, of the action, the plaintiff obtained judgment, and having issued execution thereupon, got possession. A Judge in chambers set aside the judgment and writ of possession, and let defendant in to defend on terms. On motion to rescind the order for want of jurisdiction:—Held, that it was in the discretion of the Judge, and he had power to make the order. Turley v. Williamson, 13 C. P. 581.

Defendant being tenant was served with the writ, which he handed to H., his landford, and H. took it to his attorney, who, instead of getting leave for H. to defend, entered an appearance in defendant's name without his authority. A verdict having been obtained against defendant, a Judge refused to interfere, but left him to his remedy against his landlord and the attorney. Moran v. Schermerhorn, 2 P. R. 261.

In ejectment against A. and B., both were served with the summons, and before the time for appearance had expired one L. was allowed to come in and defend as landlord, by Judge's order, which did not express whether he was to defend in place of A. and B. or with them, nor did this appear from his appearance or notice. They did not appear, and judgment was signed against them by default.

The issue with L. was carried down and tried, and a verdict rendered for the plaintiff, on which judgment was entered, and costs taxed against L. only, and a writ of possession issued against the three:—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to enter the judgment against A. and B., and that his proceedings were regular. Haskins v. Cannon, 2 P. R. 334.

Where leave is given to a landlord to appear and defend, the appearance must be initiated in the cause against the defendants named in the writ. Notice of appearance and notice of title, if so initiated (i. e. in the cause against the original defendants), are correctly initiated. A summons obtained to set aside the appearance and subsequent proceedings for irregularity, styled in the cause against the new defendants, was correctly initiated. Heron v. Elliott, 1 C. L. J. 156.

In ejectment against A. and B., by consent of the plaintiff's attorney an appearance was entered for S. as landlord, A. and B. not ap-pearing. The notice of trial was intituled as against A. and B., and notice was served on the plaintiff's attorney warning him that this would be objected to. The nisi prius record contained no appearance, but annexed to it was an appearance by S. as landlord. The plaintiff was allowed to enter this on the record, and took a verdict, defendant not appearing. On application to set aside the verdict, the plaintiff objected that the affidavits filed by defendant, intituled as against S, alone, were wrongly intituled, and that no Judge's order was shewn allowing S. to defend :-Held, 1. That the plaintiff was precluded from the last objection, for he had consented to S. appearing, and obtained leave to enter his appearance on the record; 2. That the plaintiff's own proceedings warranted S. In assuming that he was to appear alone, and that the affidavits objected to were therefore rightly intituled: 3. That the notice of trial was wrongly intituled. The verdict therefore was set aside, the costs to be paid by plaintiff. Jones v. Seaton, 26 U. C. R. 166.

Where in ejectment a landlord is allowed to come in and defend, the order not saying whether it is instead of, or in addition to, the original defendant, it is irregular to omit the name of the latter in the style of the cause, Ycoman v. Steiner, 5 P. R. 466.

One Casselman, claiming under sheriff's sale, recovered possession by ejectment against defendant, who had been his tenant at will since the purchase at sheriff's sale, and on the 20th July, 1866, turned him out of possession; but the premises were left vacant. On the 29th March, 1866, blaintiff commenced this action of ejectment against defendant, and on the 8th June, 1867, was put in possession under a writ in this suit. Casselman then applied to set aside this judgment, and to be let in to defend as landlord, but:—Held, that he must be left to his ordinary remedy by ejectment. Cameron v. Murphy, 4 P. R. 132.

In an action of ejectment, G., the landlord of the defendant C., intervened and appeared to the writ. C. did not appear until statement of claim delivered, when he appeared and joined with G. in the statement of defence:—Held, that the appearance of C. was regular. Goring v. Cameron, 10 P. R. 490.

(c) By Other Persons not Named in the Writ.

On an affidavit shewing that the defendant sued in ejectment was merely the agent of one R., an order was made to substitute R.'s name as defendant, and that he be allowed three days to enter an appearance. Morris v. Smythe, 2 L. J. 112.

A person in possession and not named in the writ will be allowed to appear and defend, even though defendant has confessed judgment, and a writ of hab. fac. has been issued thereon. Harrington v. Harrington, 3 L. J. 30.

Leave to appear and defend will be granted to a person not named in the writ, pursuant to 8, 225 of C. L. P. Act, 1856, upon affidavit of the applicant that he is in possession, and disclosing his title, Webster v. Horsburgh, 3 L. J. 32.

In general an application for a third party to be allowed to defend, will not be entertained after judgment. Mercer v. Bond, 3 L. J. 150.

A mortgagee out of possession is entitled, under s. 9 of C. S. U. C. c. 27, to be admitted to defend an action against his mortgagor. McDermott v, Keeling, 7 L. J. 150.

Ejectment having been brought against A., B. was by Judge's order allowed to defend in his place, and the issue book and notice of trial were served as against B. alone, but A.'s name was inserted in the record as a codefendant. A verdict having been found for the plaintiff, on motion in term an allidavit was filed that B.'s attorney was not aware of A.'s name being on the record until after the trial lad commenced, and that B. had been prejudiced in his defence by being deprived of A.'s evidence. The court set aside the record and verdict for irregularity. Peebles v. Lottridge, 19 U. C. R. 628.

(d) Counterclaim,

In ejectment the defendant was allowed to set up a counterclaim for dower out of the lands in question. Remarks as to the form of decree in such a case. Glass v. Glass, 9 P. R. 14.

In an action for the recovery of land and for mesne profits, a counterclaim for damages for illegal distress against the plaintiff and his bailli who executed the distress was held good. Dockstader v, Phipps, 9 P. R. 204.

The defendant C. counterclaimed for damages in respect of a trespass by the plaintiff upon the lands in question, whilst he C. was in possession, and for an assault, &c., whereby he was compelled to quit the premises:—Held, that the counterclaim was not joining another cause of action with an action for the recovery of land within the meaning of Rule 116 O. J. Act.—Held, also, that the counterclaim should not be disallowed or excluded under Rule 127 (b) or 148, O. J. Act, on the ground of inconvenience, it not appearing that there would be any inconvenience, and:—Semble, that the counterclaim was sufficiently connected with the cause of action to make it advisable that they should be tried together. Goring v. Cameron, 10 P. R. 496.

To an action to recover possession of land it is a good cause of counterclaim that defendant was induced by his solicitor's fraud to make two promissory notes, which were then overdue, and in plaintiff's hands, who took them with knowledge of the fraud; and praying that plaintiff might be restrained from negotiating or parting with them, and that they should be delivered up to be cancelled; for the fact of the notes being overdue in plaintif's hands had not the effect of destroying the right to have them delivered up. Pritchard v, Pritchard, 17 O. R. 50.

Held, the defendant can counterclaim without leave; but that he cannot in his counterclaim without leave under Con. Rule 341 Join another cause of action with a claim for the recovery of land. Ib.

(e) Disclaimer.

An application by defendants in an action of ejectment to have their names struck out on the ground that they were not in possession at or subsequent to the issue of the writ, and disclaim any interest in the land, is regularly made before appearance, although the application would be entertained after appearance where the justice of the case required it. But where two defendants applied after appearance to have their names struck out, and the court, from the facts, entertained a doubt as to the good faith of these defendants, the application was dismissed, with costs. (c) Security for Costs.

In ejectment, security for costs cannot be obtained before appearance is entered, as in other actions; and the entering an appearance does not put the cause at issue so as to prevent the defendant applying for security for costs. Crouce v. McCuirc, 3 L. J. 205.

The action was commenced 26th February, 1861, and appearance entered 18th March, following. Defendant on 19th of the same month, demanded security for costs, because plaintiff resided in Great Britain, but no proceedings were afterwards taken, either by plaintiff or defendant, till 28th January, 1864, when the plaintiff gave defendant a term's notice of his intention to proceed by serving notice of trial:—Held, that an application by defendant for security after service of the notice of trial was too late. Fogo v. Pypher, 3 P. R. 309.

The mere fact of a second action of ejectment being brought between the same parties, and for the same land, is no reason for ordering security if the costs of the first action have been paid, and the second action brought in good faith. Armstrong v. Montgomery, 5 P. R. 461.

But the fact of the costs of the former unsuccessful actions having been paid, is not necessarily a ground for refusing to make an order. Chambers v. Unger, 6 P. R. 101.

Where a husband brought ejectment in his own name and that of his wife, upon a covenant for re-entry upon default being made in payment of an annuity reserved to them jointly, an application by the wife for security for costs from her husband, on the ground that he was using her name without her authority, was refused; but leave was given to her to renew the application on the Judge being satisfied that there was not a good cause of action, or that there was a good defence, and that she had separate estate liable to execution. Junkin v. Junkin, 7 P. R. 392.

The defendants in an action of ejectment, in which the plaintiff claimed title as owner subject to a mortgage to a bank, moved for security for costs, on the ground that the plaintiff was not able to agree the action was not really brounded by the matches the action was not really brounded by the matches the action was not really brounded by the matches the plaintiff was financially worthess; that the plaintiff was financially worthess; that the plaintiff get sufficient interest in the question to litigate it; that the bank instructed their own solicitor to look into the title, took the advice of counsel, and were advised to have an action brought in the name of the mortgager, who was then for the first time consulted about bringing the action; that the ordinary solicitor of the bank was retained to bring the action; and that he admitted he knew the plaintiff was insolvent. It was fairly deducible from the evidence that the bank had really in fact retained the solicitor, and that he solicitor would look to the bank for his costs:—Held, that under these circumstances the action must be regarded as that of the bank, and not of the plaintiff; who was therefore required to give security for costs. Parker v, Great Western R. W. Co., 9 C. B. 766, and Andrews v. Marris, 7 Dowl, P. C. 712, followed. Delancy v. MacLellan, 13 P. R. 63.

Administrator.]—A trustee or executor stands in the same position as any other litigant with respect to costs. And where an action of ejectment was brought by the administrator of a deceased person in whom the legal estate in certain land was vested, and consideration of the certain land was vested, and consideration of the certain land was vested, and consideration of the certain land was vested and consideration of the defendant, and too movern with moners of the defendant, and too move we was to the defendant, and too the weight of the defendant, and too the defendant was the true owner of the land:—Held, that the fact that there was no declaration of trust in favour of the defendant, and that the evidence in the hands of the administrator tended to shew that the deceased was in his lifetime owner and not trustee, did not relieve the administrator from liability for relieve the administrator from liability for relieve the administrator from liability for relieve the administrator from liability for costs: which were given to the defendant against both plaintiffs. Smith v. Willamson, 13 P. R. 126.

Third Party.] — Where the plaintiffs brought action against the defendants to recover possession of certain lands, and the latter resisted the claim, and also served a third party notice upon H. claiming indemnity; and, thereupon, by order in chambers, on the application of the defendants, H. was made a party defendant to the action, and the plaintiffs afterwards abandoned their claim to the lands:—Held, that the plaintiffs must pay H.'s costs. An action of ejectment was brought in 1867 and was entered for trial in that year, but the trial was postponed. The original plaintiff died in 1871, having several years before conveyed the lands to a person who in 1888 conveyed to one M. In 1892 an ex parte order of revivor was obtained in the name of M. as plaintiff:—Held, alimning the judgment in 22 O. R. 314, discharging the plagment of the present plaintiff's predecessor in title was made except perhaps as to costs, for which the original plaintiff might probably have proceeded. Lemesurier v. Macaulon, 20 A. R. 421. See the next case.

Rules 383, 384, and 385, Ontario Judicature Act, 1881, which relate to the transmission of interest pendente lite, and permit the continuance of an action by or against the person to or upon whom the estate or title has come or devolved, are applicable to an action of ejectment begun before the Act, when the conveyance of the land by the original plaintiff did not take place until after its passing. Irrine v. Macaulay, 16 P. R. 181.

6. Execution,

Where the sheriff puts a plaintiff in possession under a writ of hab fac, noss., and the session moved to set aside the proceedings for irregularity, and his rule having been discharged, immediately forcibly dispossessed the lessor of the plaintiff, the court granted a new writ, the first not having been returned by the sheriff, and ordered that the defendant should pay the costs of the application within a month. Doe d. Peck V. Roc. 2 U. C. R. 27.

Where the sheriff puts a plaintiff, in possession under a writ of hab. fac, poss., and the plaintiff afterwards quietly relinquishes that possession in consequence of hearing that an injunction has issued from the court of chancery:—Held, that upon the injunction being dissolved, the court cannot grant the plaintiff an alias writ of possession. Doe d. Deane v. Henderson, 5 U. C. R. 208, Upon the facts of this case it was—held that the court had no authority, under the 12th clause of 59 Geo, III, c. 10, to stay proceedings until the defendant received the value of his improvements, or until the plaintiff conveyed the land in dispute. Doe d. Short v. Bass, 8 U. C. R. 14T.

Where a rule has been taken out and served for the landlord to defend, the lessor of the plaintiff, though he may sign judgment against the casual ejector, has no right to take out a hab, fac. poss. without leave of court. Doe d. Mathews v. Roc, 1 C. L. Ch, 160.

Where the writ was issued within one year after entry of judgment, an alias writ issued more than six years thereafter is regular without reviving the judgment. Johnston v. McKenna, 3 P. R. 229.
Where the sheriff returned to the first writ

Where the sheriff returned to the first writ of habeas, that "none came to receive possession." the presumption of release of the judgment did not arise in the same manner as if nothing had been done upon the judgment, Ib,

The writ may be executed by the removal from possession of a person who was the widow of a person that claimed under a judgment defendant. Ib.

Under the circumstances set out in this case, a new writ of hab, fac, poss, (the first having been executed and returned), was refused. Wilson v. Chanton, 6 L. T. N. S. 255, followed. Edwards v. Bennett, 5 P. R. 161.

No such relief will be given to a plaintiff when the parties against whom the application is made do not assert title through the defendant, but in some other way, and where no forcible taking possession or expulsion of the plaintiff, or interference with the plaintiff's officer in the execution of the writ, is shewn. Ib.

Semble, the writ of execution should, as in other actions, follow the judgment: and where, by reason of a limited defence, the plaintiff is entitled to recover less than he claims in his writ of summons, there should be some entry on the roll to authorize the deviation. Harold v. Stevent, 3 P. R. 335.

In ejectment an attachment was refused against the original tenant, who resumed possession more than a year after execution executed. Doc d. Myers v, Roe, T. T. 3 & 4 Vict.

A writ of hai, fac, poss, was completely executed, and possession given to plaintif. Three weeks after, defendant (claiming to be equitably entitled, and who was informed and found that the premises were vacant, and the door of the house unfastened, and who denied knowledge of who opened it,) retook possession. A rule to redeliver possession to plaintiff or to attach defendant as for contempt, was refused. McDermott v. McDermott, 4 P. R. 252.

Where the sheriff puts a printiff in possession under a writ of hab. fac. poss., and the proceeding could be served, but the plaintiffs in ejectment had been informed of the intention to apply for the injunction, the court, under the circumstances, granted a mandatory injunction requiring the possession to be redelivered to the defendants in that suit, pending an appeal to the court of error and appeal against a decree dismissing a bill filled by them to redeem. Campbell v. Royal Canadian Bank, 19 Gr. 477.

The application of R. S. O. 1877 c. 66 is not limited to merely common law actions pending in those courts before the Judicature, but but extends to all writs of execution; and a writ of assistance in execution of a decree of the court of chancery for the recovery of land, is a writ of execution within the meaning of s. 11 of that Act, and is not in force after one year from the teste, if unexecuted, unless renewed. Adamson v. Adamson, 12 P. R. 21.

Judgment in ejectment in 1867 for certain lands in the county of Northumberland, and lab. fac, poss, to the sheriff of that county, who executed the writ. Subsequently the land sold was, by proclamation of the Lieut-Governor, detached from the county of Northumberland and incorporated with the village of Trenton, in the county of Hastings:—Held, that the plaintiff might enter a suggestion of the facts upon the judgment roll, and issue an original writ of lab. fac, poss, to the sheriff of the county of Hastings. Le Mesurier v. Tierney, 13 C. L. J. 40.

11. Notice Limiting Defence.

Where immediately after appearance, the plaintiff served the issue book, together with notice of trial, and subsequently, within four days after appearance, defendant gave notice limiting his defence, which notice did not appear upon the issue book or record:—Held, that the notice of trial was irregular, as the notice limiting the defence was regular, and should appear on the issue book, and be served with notice of trial. Grimshaw v. White, 12 C. P. 521.

Where defendant limits his defence under C. S. U. C. c. 27, s. 12, to part of the lands sought to be recovered, he is entitled to the four days allowed him by the statute, even though this may have the effect of throwing the plaintiff over an assize; and an order will not be granted to plaintiff to amend the issue which has been served by him before the four days have elapsed, without prejudice to his notice of trial. Phillips v. Winters, 3 P. R. 312. Followed in Buchanan v. Betts, 2 C. L. J. 71. But see next case.

Where a defendant files his appearance, the cause is at issue, and the plaintiff may serve issue book and notice of trial. Defendant may, however, within four days after appearance give notice limiting his defence; and if he do so, he may, under the powers of amendment in the Administration of Justice Act, have the issue book amended in accordance with the limitation, but he is not entitled to have the notice of trial set aside. Casey v. McGrath, 6 P. R. 274.

Defendant filed a notice claiming the to the land "mentioned and described in the writ of ejectment summons herein," and after service of issue hook and notice of trial, and writer of issue hook and notice of trial, and writer appearance, served a strip on one six to all said and, except a strip on one six to all said and, except a strip on one six to all said and, except a strip on one six to all said and, except a strip on one six to all said and, except a strip on one six to all said and to the said and the said and

In ejectment for part of the east half of a lot, it appeared that L., the patentee, in 1855, by deed gave to his son James his interest in one half of the east half, with certain portions of the house, stipulating that he was to till the farm as usual, and give his father one half of the produce if demanded. In 1863, L. conveyed to two other sons the east half, the consideration expressed in the deed being £500, and their vendee brought ejectment against the widow and devisee for life of James. She defended for the whole, giving no notice of defence as tenant in common, under s. 29 of the Ejectment Act. C. S. U. C. c. 27:—Held, that the effect of the deed of 1855, was to give an undivided moiety of the half lot to James, but that defendant not having limited her defence, the plaintiff was entitled to the postea. Lecch v. Lecch, 24 U. C. R. 321.

12. Notice to Appear.

13. Notice to Defendant to Shew Title,

When in ejectment it is necessary to leave the question of adverse possession in the defendant for twenty years as a doubtful point to the jury, it is not a case in which a plaintiff can avail himself of the provisions of 4 Wm. IV. c. 1, s. 52, and give notice to defendant as an intruder. Doc d. Lyons v. Crawford, 6 O. 8, 334.

The plaintiff proved a paper title, but the grant from the Crown did not issue until 1826, and the deed from the grantee was executed in 1824. This deed was lost, and the memorial of it produced as secondary evidence, shewed it to have been an ordinary conveyance in fee, but did not shew what covenants it contained. The plaintiff gave notice under C. S. U. C. c. 27, s. 17, and defendants shewed no title:—Held, that the deed by the patentee should be presumed to have been one which would operate by estoppel, and that the statute applied. Armstrong v. Little, 20 U. C. R. 425.

The plaintiffs in ejectment, executors and trustees of S., claimed title by a sale under execution against C. It appeared that the patent for the land issued to one Y., of the township of Fredericksburch, in 1840. There we no deed proved from Y., but in 1854; one whole log and is was sheen that the patent had been in D.'s possession, and in that of C., whose papers had been burned. No claim had been made by or under Y., but no possession had been made by or under Y., but no possession had been made by or under Y., but no possession had been made by or under Y., but no possession had been made by or under Y., but no possession had been seen of the land until 1847, when the lot was sold for taxes and purchased by C., who had paid the taxes and exercised nets of ownership until the defendant entered as a trespasser:—Held, a case within ss. 17 and 18 of the Ejectment Act, C. S. U. C. c. 27; that the plaintiff, under s. 18, was a person entitled in justice to be regarded as the proprietor of the land, but unable to shew a perfect legal title from a cause not within his power to remedy by due diligence; and that the defendant being a mere intruder and stranger to the title, and having received a notice to shew what legal right he had, under s. 17, was not at liberty to take objections to the plaintiff's title. Davis v. VanNorman, 30 U. C. R. 437.

Held, that under the circumstances of this case, the plaintiffs, by serving a notice under C. S. U. C. c. 27, s. 17, might have compelled the defendant to shew title. Thompson v. Hall, 31 U. C. R. 367.

Land sold for taxes under C. S. U. C. c. 55, was described in the assessment roll, advertisements, and treasurer's warrant, as the south part of the west half of lot 17 in the 9th concession of Rawdon 75 acres; and in the sheriff's deed by metes and bounds. The plaintiff in ejectment claiming through this sale, and being a bona fide purchaser, gave defondant a notice, under s. 17 of the Ejectment Act, C. S. V. C. c. 27, requiring him to prove his title:—Held, that the defendant, upon the evidence set out in this case, was a mere intruder; that the case was within the statute; and that defendant could not take advantage of the defective description. Booth v. Gird wood, 32 U. C. R. 23

Semble, that an objection to the absence of proof of an order in chancery, recited in a deed executed under the order, but which order is not otherwise proved, may be met by a notice under s. 17 of the Ejectment Act. Thompson v. Bennett, 22 C. P. 393.

14. Notice of Title.

(a) In General.

In ejectment for breach of covenant in a lease, the notice of claimant's title should set out the particular covenant which had been broken, and the particulars of the breach in general terms. Kenney v. Shaughnessy, 3 L. J. 29.

It is only necessary to state how the party claims, as by conveyance, descent, &c., and from whom, without exhibiting the whole chain of title. Coltman v. Brown, 16 U. C. R, 133.

Where a landlord is allowed to appear instead of the persons named in the writ, notice of title need not be served. Heron v. Elliott, 1 C. L. J. 156,

In ejectment it is not necessary to annex the notices of title on either side to the issue book. Campbell v. Pettit, 26 U. C. R. 507.

An objection that the title relied on is not the same as that mentioned in the notice, cannot be taken advantage of after the trial. Penlington v. Brouchlee, 28 U. C. R. 189.

(b) By Plaintiff.

In ejectment for part of 22 in the 8th concession of Hamilton, described as extending to the edge of Rice Lake, it was proved that there was a concession in the original survey of the township (called the 9th), between the 8th (to the north thereof) and Rice Lake. The plaintiff proved that the patent under which he traced itile described the 8th concession as extending to the bank of Rice Lake, but the deed to himself only started the lot without giving metes and bounds:—Held, that although the specific description in the patent, and not the general description of the lot, would probably govern, yet the plaintiff having in his notice of title only claimed lot 22 in the 8th concession, whereas the part contended for was in the 9th concession, the defendant was entitled to a verdict, Henderson v. Harris, 19 C. P. 374.

A line run without legal authority between lots 5 and 6 acquiesced in for years, was subsequently found to be erroneous, and a new line was run according to law, which took away land from the supposed lot 5, and added to 6. Plaintiff sought to recover the land so taken, which was clearly a part of lot 6, claiming right by possession, though his grant-or never pretended to have any right thereto, and he did not claim by possession in his noand ne did not ciaim by possession in his notice:—Held, that the plaintiff not having set up a possessory title in his notice, was debarred from doing so at the trial. Smith v. Cluxton, 10 C. P. 538.

The claimant is entitled to set up any number of conveyances from the grantee of the Crown of respective portions of the land claimed, such being but one mode of title set up. Grimshaw v. White, 12 C. P. 521.

The plaintiff, describing herself as executrix of S., claimed title by virtue of "a mortgage made by the defendant:"—Held, that she was not restricted to proof of a mortgage made to herself, but might shew one to the testator, and her own right as devisee; and that omitand her own right as devisee; and that omitting to name the mortgagee was at most only want of "reasonable certainty," for which defendant might have applied under s. 13 of the Ejectment Act. C. S. U. C. c. 27. The addition of "executrix of," &c., to the plaintiff's name :— Held, mere matter of description. Skeahon v. Whelan, 24 U. C. R. 174.

Quære, whether in this country, owing to the provisions as to notice of title, a plaintiff must give notice of his claim being only for a mojety, before he can insist upon defendant admitting his claim and denying actual ouster. Lyster v. Ramage, 26 U. C. R. 233.

The plaintiff, by his notice, claimed as devisee of F., defendant, under a sheriff's deed to one M., upon a fi. fa. against F.'s land. Defendant having proved such deed:—Held, that the plaintiff could not in answer, under that the plaintiff could not in answer, under his notice, rely upon twenty years' possession held by him subsequently; and defendant hav-ing been in possession eighteen years, the court refused to allow an amendment of plaintiff's notice. Fields v. Livingston, 17 C. P. 15.

Held, affirming 17 C. P. 34, that a plaintiff having by his notice claimed under his paper title, could not, in answer to a lease of the premises from him to defendant set up by the latter, rely upon the forfeiture of such lease by reason of condition broken, but that, entitle him to take advantage of such forfei-ture, he should have alleged it in his notice. Pettigrew v. Doyle, 17 C. P. 459.

The doctrine established in the last case, when the plaintiff claims by reason of forfeiture of a term, applies also to a plaintiff claiming to avoid his lease on the ground of infancy. Hartshorn v. Earley, 19 C. P. 139.

A. entered into possession under B., who verbally promised him a deed, to be executed as soon as he himself should receive a conas soon as he himself should receive a conveyance from M., whose tenant at will he was, and who had in the meantime died. In ejectment by B. against A.'s heirs:—Held, that B. having entered under M. originally, notice of title "under M., who claimed title from the Crown," was sufficient to enable B. to recover, Pettigrew v. Doyle, 17 C. P. 34, 459, distinguished. Armstrong v. Armstrong, 21 C. P. 4.

(c) By Defendant.

Defendant will be allowed in the notice required by the C. L. P. Act of 1856, s. 224, to set up a paper title, and also title by possession, upon affidavit that he can establish both titles; and that he wishes to establish his paper title, but lest he should fail in doing so from being unable to procure the necessary witnesses, he desires also to set up title by possession. Leave will be granted ex parte in first instance. Todd v. Cain, 2 L. J. 232.

Where defendant's notice described the land for which he intended to defend as a part of for which he intended to defend as a part of the lot mentioned in the writ, he was not al-lowed to contend at the trial that what he defended for was not included in such lot, and therefore not plaintiff's property. Darling v. Wallace, 9 U. C. R. 611.

A notice of claim under the statute, may at the same time deny the title of the plaintiffs and shew in what respect it is defective. Commercial Permanent Building Society v. Row-ell, 5 L. J. 230.

Where defendant in his notice claimed the whole premises under a conveyance from B., he was not allowed at the trial to set up that he was tenant in common with the plaintiff, and insist upon proof of ouster. McCallum v. Boswell, 15 U. C. R. 343.

Quare, whether, if defendant appears, but omits to give notice of the nature of his title, the plaintiff may sign judgment as for want of appearance. Harper v. Lovendes, 15 U. G. R. 430.

Where defendant, by his notice, besides denying the plaintiff's title, claimed to hold denying the plaintiff's title, claimed to hold under a lease:—Semble, that he was entitled to shew an adverse possession by himself for twenty years in order to defeat the plain-tiff's claim, although the effect might be to establish a title in himself of which he had given no notice. Hill v. McAinnon, 16 U. C.

Where defendant, in his notice of title, claimed as purchaser through one M., and the claimed as purchaser through one M., and the plaintiff, in proving his title, put in a lease from one M. to himself:—Held, that it was unnecessary for the plaintiff to shew M.'s title. Brandon v. Cravethorne, 19 U. C. R. 368.
See, also, Cartwright v. McPherson, 20 U. C. R. 251.

The notice of title confines the claimant to proof of the title therein stated, but allows him to defeat by any means the title set up by the defendant; and in like manner the de-fendant is confined to proof of the title claimed fendant is confined to proof of the title claimed by his notice, but 'may equally defeat (and that without going into his own title) the title set up by plaintiff. When, therefore, the plaintiffs, claiming by their notice under a grant from the Crown, had put in such grant, it was competent for defendant, though his notice claimed title in himself, as derived from one A. under a lease from the plaintiffs, to rely upon proof of such lease alone as defeat-ing the plaintiffs' title, without proving an assignment to himself. Canada Company v. Weir, 7 C. P. 341.

Ejectment for lots 15, 13 and N, half 12, in 2nd concession of Sandwich. The defendant in his notice of title, besides denying the plain-tiffs' title, claimed title in himself as their tenant. The plaintiffs, under this notice of defence, claimed that the defendant was thereby debarred from disputing their title as landlord, and proved a receipt for rent in full to 31st March, 1861. The defendant in reply proved his tenancy:—Held, that the case of Cartwright v. McPherson, 20 U. C. R. 251, upon which the plaintiffs relied, did not relieve the plaintiffs from the proof of the determination of defendant's tenancy, although the notice was evidence to estop defendant from denying that he was plaintiffs' tenant. Colby v. Wall, 12 C. P. 95.

Held, that the omission of the words, "besides densing the title of the plaintiff" in the defendant's notice of defence, did not entitle the plaintiff to recover without proving the title stated in his notice:—Held, also, that the appearing of defendant at the trial, he having filed an appearance without any notice of defence, would equally put the plaintiff on proof of his title; but having proved his title, defendant would be debarred from giving rebuttal evidence. Shore v. McCabe, 10 C. P. 26.

Defendant entered an appearance without filing any notice of title:—Held, that he could not at the trial set up a title in himself by possession, the effect of his appearance being merely to deny the title of the claimant, and allow him to make any answer to it which did not assert title in himself or in any one under whom he claimed. In such a case, the plaintiff must prove a strict title, and defendant may shew that this title has not been perfectly proved, or, being proved, he may shew a better title in some one else, but not in himself, or in any one under whom he claims. Burke v. Battle, 17 C. P. 478.

Where the plaintiff claimed as assignee of a mortgage made by defendant, and defendant by his notice claimed under a deed from the mortgagee:—Held, that defendant might shew that he was an infant when he executed the mortgage. Grace v. Whitehead, 16 U. C. R.

The defendant, in his notice of defence, hesides denying the claimants' title, claimed title as tenant or by permission of the tenants in fee of the land. On the trial the plaintiffs, having proved their title, objected to the defendant being permitted to go into his defence because he had denied and put the plaintiffs to proof of their title. The learned Judge, under the authority of Cartwright v. McPherson, 20 U. C. R. 251, refused to receive the evidence. A new trial was granted without costs, the court adhering to their opinions in Canada Company v. Weir, and Shore v. McCabe, both of which were delivered before the case of Cartwright v. McPherson came before the Queen's bench. Thompson v. Falconer, 13 C. P. 78. See next case.

Where defendant, besides denying the plaintiff's title, claimed title under deed from the plaintiff to M., and under M.: — Held, that such notice did not relieve the plaintiff from proof of title. Brandon v. Cawthorne, 19 U. C. R. 368, and Cartwright v. McPherson, 20 U. C. R. 251, overruled, Canada Company v. Weir, 7 C. P. 342, Shore v. McCabe, 10 C. P. 29, Colby Wall, 12 C. P. 95, and Thompson v. Falconer, 13 C. P. 78, followed. McGee v. McLaughlin, 23 U. C. R. 30.

A defendant appearing cannot be compelled to file a notice of his title; but if he does not. he is precluded from setting up title in himself, and the plaintiff will recover on proving his own title. Fairman v. White, 24 U. C. R. 123.

Ejectment on mortgage. Defendant appeared; but on examination under A. J. Act. 1873, he admitted the examinor of mortgage, and that the defence was merely of the defence and that the defence and defence could not be struck out on the authority of McMaster v. Beattie, 10 C. L. J. 193, as defendant was entitled to possession until planniff should prove his case. Metropolitan Building and Saving Society v. Rodden, 12 L. J. 50.

Quære, whether a defendant in ejectment can set up title in himself by estoppel without asserting it in his notice. Chambers v. Unger, 25 C. P. 180.

(d) Particulars of Title.

Defendant is entitled to particulars of a plaintiff's claim in ejectment after appearance, or at any other stage if it appear proper to α Judge that he should have them. Watson v. Breucer, 4 P. R. 202.

Held, that an order for better particulars of plaintiff's title may, in ejectment, be made before appearance is entered. Fralick v. Dormyn, 6 P. R. 101.

15. Parties.

(a) In General.

Quære, as to the effect of a misjoinder of plaintiffs in ejectment under 14 & 15 Vict. c. 114. Young v. Scobie, 10 U. C. R. 372.

Where several tenants occupied different apartments in one house as several tenements: —Held, that a single action might be brought for the premises, serving each tenant with a copy and notice. Doe d. Bell v. Roc, 3 O. S.

Under the old practice, the fact of defendant being tenant in possession in an action of ejectment, could not be contested by affidavits on a motion to set aside the service of the declaration and notice. Semble, that all the tenant could do was to ask the court to excuse him from confessing possession, and to require the plaintiff to prove it. Doe d. Vancott v. Roe, 5 U. C. R. 272.

A writ of ejectment was issued against defendant, who cas was alleged by the plaintiff and not denied by the defendant) claimed to be owner of the land. The possession was vacant, and it was not shewn that defendant was last in possession:—Held, that defendant was entitled to have the writ set aside without disclaiming title. Wallace v. Acre, 5 P. R, 142.

The Ejectment Act, C. S. U. C. c. 27, changed the procedure rather than the law for the recovery of land: and therefore the right, under the old practice, to make all persons found in possession of land defendants, without reference to whether their possession was joint or several, still exists. Bannerman v. Deceson, 17 C. P. 257.

The disclosure by one defendant that he occupies a part of the land claimed not jointly with another defendant, does not entitle him to have his name struck out of the writ, and oblige the plaintiff to proceed against the other alone; but the Act provides a mode by which every one may defend, by limiting his defence to the particular part claimed. Ib.

Under the Married Woman's Act, 1872, a wife may be the sole defendant in ejectment brought to recover possession of land owned by her husband, who is permanently resident out of the Province. Warren v. Cotterell, 8 C. L. J. 245.

Where a wife, living apart from her husband, is in possession of land, under such circumstances as precludes the presumption of her being agent of her husband, she must be made a defendant in ejectment for the land. Woodward v. Cummings, 6 P. R. 110.

Quere, whether when A. is in possession as a bired servant of B., a writ of ejectment should not be directed to the latter. Parsons v. Ferriby, 26 U. C. R. 380.

(b) Adding and Striking Out.

One defendant in ejectment is not entitled to have his name struck out at the trial, on disclaiming all right to possession, in order to be called as a witness for his co-defendants. Grogan v. Adair, 14 U. C. R. 479.

Where a person made defendant is not in possession, and claims no right to the land, he is entitled to have his name struck out. Hall v. Yuill, 2 P. R. 242.

The name of a defendant who disclaimed all interest in the land except as dowress, struck out. Weaver v. Burgess, 5 P. R. 307.

A Judge's order was obtained to amend the proceedings after the consent rule and plea had been filed (by adding three new demises), and no proceedings had been taken under the order until the commission day of the assizes—some months after the granting of the order—when the nisi prius record was passed with additional demises. The record was entered for trial, and after the jury had been sworn, and the plaintiffs had given evidence, defendants objected to the amendment, and refused to confess lease, entry and ouster, except to the original demises, and a verdict was entered for the plaintiffs on the original demises only:—Held, on an application to set aside the verdict on the original demises, that the new demises added to the nisi prius record did not violate the nisi prius record did not violate the nisi prius record did not the dessers of the plaintiff could abandon the order to amend. Doc d. Duff v. Dougall, 2 C. P. 163.

2 C. P. 169, Held, also, that after defendants appearing and confessing the lease, &c., it was too late to object to the regularity of the notice of trial. Ib.

Application to add to a declaration in ejectment a demise by A. B., after issue joined, was refused under the circumstances of the case. Doe d. Nichols v. Heron, 1 C. L. Ch. 99.

Held, that the C. L. P. Act does not authorize the striking out of all the plaintiffs' names in a summons in ejectment, and substituting a new set therefor, after the entry of the record for trial. Robinson v. Bell, Vasbinder v. Bell, 9 C. P. 21.

Held, on the authority of Blake v. Done, 7 H. & N. 405, that a Judge at nisi prius has power, under s. 222 of C. L. P. Act, to amend y addinate the purpose such amendment is necessary for the purpose such amendment in the purpose of t Quare, whether such consent should be in writing; but the point not having been raised at the trial, the court refused to entertain the objection. Ib.

On the argument in term, it was objected that as F., who had been joined as a plaintiff at the trial, was not present when the amendance was made, his consent in writing should have been filed:—Held, that though this objection was raised at the time the amendment was made, yet as F. afterwards appeared and was examined as a witness, and no question was then raised as to his assenting or non-assenting, and the Judge reported that there really was no question about it, the court would not entertain the objection. Henderson v. White, 23 C. P. 78.

The plaintiffs claimed under a deed from B, and defendants under a lease from T, and his sife, trustees of the plaintiffs. The plaintiffs, the plaintiffs that T, and his wife took the legal cent cast trustees for the plaintiffs. The plaintiffs then applied to make T and his wife plaintiffs, and to add a claim by them for an alleged forfeiture of their lease to defendant under which defendant claimed:—Held, that such application was properly refused. Mitchell v. Smellie, 20 C. P. 389.

An ejectment summons having been served on A. and B., A. only defended, and B. allowed judgment to go by default. The plaintiff obtained a verdict, and issued a hab. fac. and ii. fa. for costs against both, whereupon B. moved to set it aside as against himself, or to have his name struck out of the proceedings:—Held, that the plaintiff was right, for as to the hab. fac. if B. claimed no interest in the land, and was not in possession, he should have applied on receiving the summons to have his name struck out. D'Arcy v. White, 24 U. C. R. 570.

In an action against a landlord and his tenant, the latter being in actual possession:— Held, though with much doubt, that the name of the tenant might be struck out of the proceedings. Kerr v. Waldie. 4 P. R. 138.

of the tenant might be struck out of the proceedings. Kerr v. Waldie, 4 P. R. 138.
Doubts as to the propriety of the practice laid down in D'Arcy v. White, 24 U. C. R. 570. D.

In ejectment the plaintiff claimed as grantee of one S., but the conveyance was not executed until after the commencement of the suit. A verdict having been entered for the plaintiff, the plaintiff, on shewing cause to a rule for a new trial, filed the consent of S., who at the commencement of the suit was a bare trustee for the plaintiff, to be added as a plaintiff, and the court allowed the amendment. White v. McKay, 43 U. C. R. 226.

In ejectment plaintiff claimed as assignee of M. of a mortgage made by C., and the substantial defence was that the mortgage had been paid, or, if not, that the defendant should be allowed to redeem. At the trial the cause, by consent, was referred to an arbitrator with the powers of a Judge at nisi prius, as to adding parties, &c. After the reference had been entered upon it was discovered that there had been a previous assignment to E. W. and J. W., whom, although their title was adverse to the plaintiff, on their consenting thereto, and after notice to defendants, the arbitrator ordered to be added as co-plaintiffs. On motion by defendant to set aside the order, but without shewing that he was in any way prejudiced thereby: - Held, that under the A. J. Act, 36 Vict. c. 8 (O.), the arbitrator had power to make the amendment, and that it was properly made, as it caused complete and final justice to be done in the action Held, also, that even if, under the circumstances, the amendment was improper, the motion should have been to revoke the submission. Wright v. Creighton, 30 C. P. 5.

In ejectment the plaintiff obtained a verdict, but as the defendant had made improvements on the land under a bona fide belief that the land was his own he was held entitled to the ratio was his own he was held entitled to the entitled given by R. S. O. 1877 c. 95, s. 4, and the master in chancery at Ottawa was directed to ascertain the value of such improvements and report thereon which he did. A rule nisi hav-ing been obtained to refer back the report for the reasons stated, it appeared that after the report the defendant died intestate, and that no personal representative had been appointed, leaving a widow who was residing on the land in question and a son by a former wife but no children by the second wife, and also that defendant had assigned to a loan society all his interest in the sum to be found due for improvements. The court permitted the plain-tiff to amend his rule nisi by calling on the widow or son of the deceased and on the loan society to shew cause why they should not be made parties to the suit and why the former should not be appointed under A. J. Act, s. 9, to represent the estate of the defendant for the purposes of this motion and all subsequent proceedings in the reference, and why in that recedings in the reference, and why in that event the relief asked by the rule should not be granted. The rule to be returnable on 14 days' notice before a single Judge. McCarthy v. Arbuckle, 31 C. P. 48.

An application by defendants in an action of ejectment to have their names struck out on the ground that they were not in possession at or subsequent to the issue of the writ, and disclaim any interest in the land, is regularly made before appearance, although the application would be entertained after appearance where the justice of the case required it. But where two defendants applied after appearance to have their names struck out, and the court, from the facts, entertained a doubt as to the good faith of these defendants, the application was dismissed, with costs. Anglo-Canadian Mortgage Co. v. Cotter, S. P. R. II. 11.

In an action of ejectment and for mesne profits, the defendant O, was tenant in possession, and had, two months after the service of the writ upon him, paid rent to his co-defendant, his landlord. An application by O, to have his name struck out as a party to the suit, he having gone out of possession on the expiration of his lease, was refused with costs. Johnston v. Oliver, 9 P. R. 353.

16. Pleading.

(a) Declaration and Service Thereof.

Service upon one of several tenants in common in possession of the same parcel, is sufficient. Doc d. Davidson v. Roc. Tay. 491.

Where several tenants occupied different apartments in one house, as several tenements: —Held, that a single action might be brought for the premises, serving each tenant with a copy and notice. Doc d. Bell v. Roc, 3 O. S. 64.

The declaration cannot be served by the lessor of the plaintiff. Doe d. Armstrong v. Roe, 4 O. S. 302.

Service on a person (not shewn to be a servant of the tenant) on the premises claimed, explaining the meaning and intent thereof:—
Held, insufficient, without shewing that the tenant had received it. Doe d. Smith v. Roc, 5 O. S. 306.

A declaration designating the property by the lot and concession, without mentioning the quality or description of land, is sufficient, boe d, O'Reilly v, Pickle, 1 U. C. R. 282.

Service upon any person but the tenant or his wife is insufficient, unless it can be shewn that the declaration came to the tenant's knowledge before the first day of the term, Doe d. Gray v. Roc. 5 O. S. 483; Doe d. Hunter v. Roc. 3 U. C.R. 127.

The declaration in ejectment is not included in the proviso to s. 26 of 12 Vict. c. 63, but may be served between the 1st July and 21st August. Doe d. Shortts v. Roc, 2 C. L. Ch. 106.

Where service upon the tenant in possession was sworn to, the court refused to set it aside upon an affidavit stating it to have been served upon a stranger or servant on the premises. Doe d. Dunlop v. Roc, Tay. 350.

Where the affidavit stated a service on the tenant in possession of part of the premises, a rule for judgment against the casual ejector was granted as to such part. Doe d, Davidson v, Roe. M. T. I Vici.

Service on a person stated in the affidavit to have admitted himself to be tenant in possession, is not sufficient; he must be sworn to be tenant in possession. Doe d. Dunn v. Roe, E. T. 2 Vict.

An affidavit of service on a person who represented herself to be the wife of the tenant is insufficient, unless it state deponent's belief that she is so. Doe d. Sanderson v. Roe, T. T. 2 & 3 Viet.

An affidavit of service cannot be sworn before the attorney in the cause. Doe d. Walker, v. Roe, T. T. 2 & 3 Vict.

The affidavit must shew the time of service. Doe d. Sherwood v. Roc, 5 U. C. R. 319.

(b) Statement of Claim.

A writ in ejectment was served on 15th August, 1881, and an appearance entered after the 22nd of the same month:—Held, that plaintiff need not file a statement of claim, under the new practice, and that a notice of trial served immediately after the entry of the appearance was regular, the cause being then at issue. Laidlane v. Ashbaugh, 9 P. R. 6.

The plaintiff indorsed his writ of summons and filled his statement of claim to recover possession of the land in dispute, as being the assignee of a lease made by him to the defendants, who assigned to a third party, who assigned and surrendered to the plaintiff. The defence was that the lease was in effect a mortrage, and fraud and want of consideration were alleged:—Held, that the plaintiff could not amend his statement of claim, and ask a foreclosure of the land as mortgagee. Mc-Hhargey v. McGinnia, 9 P. R. 157.

Held, that the mention of the date of issue of a writ of ejectment in the statement of claim was essential. But leave was given to amend on payment of costs. Scott v. Creighton, 9 P. R. 253.

17. Rule for Judgment,

See Doe d, Harley v, Roe, 2 O, 8, 113; Doe d, McFarlane v, Roe, H, T, 7 Wm, IV., R, & H, Dig, p, 177; Goodtitle d, Garten v, Roe, M, T, 1 Viet, R, & H, Dig, p, 176; Doe d, Bond v, Roe, H, T, 1 Viet, R, & H, Dig, p, 176; Doe McDouald v, Roe, H, T, 2 Viet, R, & H, Dig, p, 176; Doe d, Street v, Roy, M, T, 2 Viet, R, & H, Dig, p, 176; Doe d, Yeigh v, Roe, 3 U, C, R, 377.

As to the rule for judgment nisi under 13 & 14 Vict. c, 57, see Elliott v. Roe, 1 P. R. 11.

18. Trial, Verdict, and Judgment.

(a) In General.

When the term in the declaration has expired, the plaintiff is entitled to recover nominal damages and costs, although he cannot recover possession. Doe d. Lick v. Ausman, II. T. 6 Vict.

A Judge at chambers has power to set aside a judgment in ejectment, and the hab, fac, poss, issued thereon, Popplewell d. Capreol v. Abbott, 5 O. S. 245.

Where a tenant moved to set aside a judgment against the casual ejector, on the ground of collusion between the lessor of the plaintiff and the tenant's wife, in accepting service of the declaration—the court refused to interfere, more than a year having elapsed since the execution of the writ of possession. Doe d, Gray v. Roc, H. T. 4 Vict.

Where a verdict was rendered for the plaintiff in ejectment, subject to points reserved, and without any argument of the points, the polaintiff entered and took possession, the court refused to interpose and set the judgment aside after a lapse of more than two years. Doe d. Myers v. Tolman, I U. C. R. 529 Where the tenant in possession is shewn to have been acting in collusion with the lessor of the plaintiff, the court will set aside the judgment against the casual ejector. Doe d. Henderson v. Roe, 4 U. C. R. 366.

The court, though they will set aside a judgment against the casual ejector.

The court, though they will set aside a judgment obtained by collusion between the lessor of the plaintiff and the tenant in possession, will not order the tenant in possession to pay the costs, but will leave the landlord to his remedy under the statute 11 Geo, II. Ib.

Where defendant was a few minutes too late in entering his appearance, and afterwards promptly applied to set aside the judgment upon an affidavit of merits, shewing the merits in detail, the application was allowed, upon the terms of entry of appearance, and payment of costs within a month, otherwise summons to be discharged. Watts v. Little, Watts v. Loney, 6 L. J. 233.

Held, that the action of ejectment is within s, 18 of the Law Reform Act, 1898; and semble, that such action must be tried without the intervention of a jury, subject only to the Judge's discretion to direct one. Humphreys v. Hunter, 20 C. P. 456.

Where the plaintiff declared generally, stating neither the concession nor lot, and defendant defended for lot 23, and at the trial the plaintiff proved title to lot 22, which in the description appeared to include lot 23:—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to a general judgment, and that he must take possession of the right land at his peril. Doe d. Oneen v. Curtis, M. T. 4 Vict.

In ejectment, where the plaintiff proves his title to possession of any part of the premises sued for, he must obtain a verdict. Doc d. Sheldon v. Ramsay, 7 U. C. R. 446.

The jury having found a general verdict for the plaintiff, though the defendant was in fact entitled to a part of the land:— Held, not ground for a new trial, but for an application to restrain the plaintiff from taking possession of such part. Ferrier v. Moodie, 12 U. C. R. 379.

In ejectment under 14 & 15 Vict. c. 114, one or more of several plaintiffs might recover. Draper, J., suggested, that under s. 5 there might be a distinction between the claim and the title, so as to render it incumbent on claimants, when there is more than one, to point out in the writ on what or whose title they rely as giving them a right to the possession, and to prove such title, which may be either in one of themselves, or possibly in a third party. Butler v. Donaldson, 10 U. C. R. 643.

Where several plaintiffs claim jointly, but title is not proved in all of them, there will be a verdict for those who prove title, and for defendant against the others. Wilson v. Baird, 19 C. P. 98.

Ejectment upon mortgage. Defendant appeared, and notice of trial was served on the 18th of September for the 30th of October. On the evening of the 29th defendant served a notice of confession on the plaintiff at his residence, thirty miles from the assize town, where his attorney had gone; and on the 30th a verdict was taken, defendant not appearing, and the plaintiff's attorney being ignorant of the confession. The court refused to set aside the verdict. Row v. Quinlan, 21 U. C. R. 452.

In ejectment it appeared that the plaintiff had recovered judgment in dower against defendant's landlord, who had submitted to the claim, and defendant after this action had attorned to the plaintiff and paid rent to her attorney. There had been also a demand of possession:—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to a verdict and judgment for costs, but not to a writ of possession, for she had accepted defendant as her tenant. Fisher v. Johnston, 25 U. C. R. 616.

The court has power to grant a new trial as to half of a lot of land, allowing the verdict to stand as to the other half, when the granting of such new trial is in the discretion of the court; and this in an action of ejectment. Where the new trial is ordered ex debito justifie, the whole record is thrown open; and this will be done in ejectment, unless the defendant consent to a verdict standing for such portion of the land as the plaintiff has falled to prove title to. The statute governing the action of ejectment makes it divisible both as to the lands and the parties claiming them. McNab v. Stewart, 15 C. P. 189.

The old practice of allowing a plaintiff, who succeeded as to part of the land, to take a verdict for the whole, and to proceed thereon at his peril, has long since ceased to be the rule and the action of ejectment, as held in the last case, is divisible, under C. S. U. C. c. 27, both as to land and parties:—Held, therefore, that an order made by the Judge who tried the cause amending the postea, by confining the verdict of the plaintiff to that portion for which he had succeeded, and recording a verdict for defendant as to the residue, thus entitling the latter to the costs of defence for that residue, and directing the nisi prius record to be delivered to defendant for the purpose of such amendment, had been properly made. McBride v. Lee, 16 C. P. 315.

The defendant defended for the whole, giving no notice of defence as tenant in common, under s, 29 of the Ejectment Act, C. S. U. C. c. 27. The evidence shewed that she was entitled to an undivided moiety but, held, that defendant not having limited her defence, the plaintiff was entitled to the posten. Lecch v. Lecch, 24 U. C. R. 321.

The plaintiff was held entitled to recover two undivided third parts. It was urged, on the authority of the last case, that the plaintiff being held so entitled, the postea should be awarded to him generally; but, held, not, the proceedings on both sides in that and other cases having been directed to try the title to the whole. Lyster v. Ramage, 26 U. C. R. 233.

Plaintiff brought ejectment against the defendant after he had quitted possession of the premises in question. Defendant appeared, not limiting his defence, nor stating the nature of his own claim, but at the same time he served a notice on the plaintiff's attorney that he did not deny the plaintiff's itle, and had given up possession before action brought. The plaintiff, nevertheless, took the record down to trial:—Held, that upon such notice the plaintiff could not have signed judgment. Harper v. Louendes, 15 U.C. R. 430.

Quere, whether, if defendant appear, but omit to give notice of the nature of his title, the plaintiff may sign judgment as for want of an appearance. Ib.

Where there is a limited defence, it is irregular for the plaintiff to enter judgment without first obtaining a Judge's order, or a rule of court, authorizing the signing of judgment, which rule or order, or a duplicate thereof, must, under rule 92, be filed together with the writ. Harold v. Stewart, 3 P. R. 335.

Held, that a notice to proceed to trial within twenty days, under s, 44 of the Ejectment Act, (C. S. U. C. c. 27), did not operate as a waiver of an order previously obtained by defendant staying proceedings until particulars of the land claimed were delivered. Gilmour v. Strong, 7 P. R. 154.

Semble, that the notice for jury which, by 35 Vict. c. 19, s. 1, must be annexed to the issue books in ejectment, may now be served at any time when the issue book could have been served under the old practice. Harris v. Peck, 12 L. J. 279.

In ejectment where equitable issues are raised under R. S. O. 1877 c. 50, s. 257, the issues must be tried without a jury. Bryan v. Mitchell, S P. R. 302.

Application for order to sign final judgment under Con. Rule 756. See Trust and Loan Co. v. Hill, 9 P. R. 8; Cook v. Lemieux, 10 P. R. 577.

Where a statement of claim in an action for the recovery of land was held good on denurrer, and upon the case going down to trial, the plaintiff proved all the material allegations in it:—Held, that he was thereupon entitled to judgment, and that O. J. Act, 1881, s. 44, did not apply, and an objection that the plaintiff had not sufficiently proved his title could not be entertained. Johnsson v. Bonhote, 2 Ch. D. 298, distinguished. McGec v. Kane, 14 O. R. 226.

The action, to recover possession of land, was tried without a jury before the consolidated rules came into force, and the trial Judge ordered that judgment should be entered for the plaintiff for possession of the land, for the plaintiff or possession of the land, and the plaintiff set of the properties of the plaintiff and the plaintiff and possession. The short under the practice, and having regard to rules 273, 274, 275, 341, and 379, of the Ontario Judicature Act, 1881, there was nothing to remove actions for the recovery of land out of the general rule, and the entry of judgment and subsequent proceedings were regular. Section 34 of R. S. O. 1877 c. 51, was repealed by rule 273 of the Ontario Judicature Act, 1881, Rudd v. Frank, 17 O. R, 758.

(b) Questions of Boundary.

In ejectment to try disputed boundaries, the plaintiff has to shew, beyond any reasonable doubt, that he is entitled to some land at least of which defendant is in possession. Where the point is a doubtful one he must show a survey carefully made, and the proper steps taken which the law requires for ascertaining the exact position of any posts along the line which can still be discovered by inspection, or established by evidence, in order that the court and jury may see whether the two lots in question are, by the survey which the plaintiff is seeking to establish, made to occupy their proper position on the concession line, Doe d. Strong v. Jones, 7 U. C. R. 385; Baban v. Lauson, 27 U. C. R. 339.

In ejectment, where the plaintiff proves his title to possession of any part of the premises sued for, he must obtain a verdict, and the court will not go into the question of boundary, in order to determine the precise quantity of land he is entitled to recover. Doe d. Sheldon v. Ramsay, 7 U. C. R. 446.

In ejectment the plaintiff claimed the land in his writ as part of lot six, and defendant defended for it as part of five. No notices of title were attached to the record:—Held, that the plaintiff was not bound to prove his title to lot six. Cascaden v. Conway, 17 U. C. R. 598.

The court will discourage (except when bound by well established rule), the practice of trying questions of boundary by actions of ejectment, the legitimate object of which is to try titles. Peters v. Nicon, 6 C. P. 451.

A question of boundary may be tried in an action of ejectment. Irwin v. Sager, 21 U. C. R. 373; S. C., 22 U. C. R. 22.

The court of common pleas in the same term came to a different decision. Lund v. Savage, Lund v. Nesbitt, 12 C. P. 143.

The plaintiff described the land claimed as part of lot 10, "commencing at a post planted by Y., Provincial land surveyor, at the northwest angle of the said lot, then S. 16° E. 35-chains, more or less, to the centre of the concession; then N. 70° E. 2 chains 35 links, to a certain blazed line; thence along the said line N. 13° W. 35 chains, more or less, to the rear of the concession; then S. 75° W. 2 chains 6 links, to the place of beginning." Defendant claimed it all as part of lot 9;—Held, that the plaintiff's land being clearly described in the writ so as to be discoverable on the ground, the question of boundary should have been tried, to ascertain whether it formed part of lot 9 or 10. Sexton v. Paxton, 21 U. C. R. 391.

In ejectment the question of boundary may be tried, to ascertain whether the land in question forms part of the lot claimed by the plaintiff. Sexton v. Paston. 2 E. & A. 219. Followed in Hunter v. Baptic, 23 U. C. R. 43, and in Mosier v. Keegan, 13 C. P. 547.

The plaintiff in ejectment described the land claimed by him as that part of lot 24 comprised within these limits; commencing at the south westerly corner of lot 24; then north, parallel with town line, 20 feet; then easterly parallel with the southerly limit of said lot to town line; then southerly along said line to the southerly limit of said lot to the southerly limit of said lot 24; then westerly along said southerly limit to the place of beginning. Defendant appeared and limited his defence to the land described as commencing at the north-easterly corner of 102 5; thence southerly along the easterly boundary of said lot, 20 feet, to a point; thence westerly, at right angles to said boundary, to a point on the western boundary of said lot 25; thence northerly along said boundary, 20 feet, to a point on the boundary line between lots 24 and 25; thence easterly along said lots mentioned boundary line to the place of beginning; "and which is sought to be recovered in this action as being part of lot 24." Lot 24 adjoined and lay to the north of lot 25. It was admitted at the trial that the plaintiff was entitled to the south half of 24, and defendant to the north half of 25, and the learned Judge thereupon held that there was nothing to try, and entered a verdict for the plaintiff; but—held, that the question of the true position of the boundary line between the lots was substantially raised, and should have been tried. Archer v. Kilton, 24 C. P. 195.

In ejectment to try a question of boundary, the plaintiff claimed the north half of lot 31. Defendants limited their defence to a piece described by metes and bounds, giving notice that they claimed it as part of lot 32:

—Held, that the plaintiff was not entitled to succeed on proving his title to lot 31; but that it was for him, seeking to change the possession, to shew that the piece in dispute was part of that lot. Palmer v. Thornbeck, 27 C. P. 291.

Unnecessary Action. |—Plaintiff brought ejectment against defendant after he had quitted possession. Defendant appeared, not limiting his defence, nor stating the antwo of his own claim, but at the same time he served a notice on the plaintiff's attorney that he did not deny the plaintiff's title, and had given up possession before action brought. The plaintiff nevertheless took the record down to trial:—Held, that the bringing an action under the circumstances was unnecessary, but that defendant should have applied to the court to set aside the writ, instead of appearing to it; and, both parties being wrong, the proceedings were set aside without costs. ELECTION.

Attacking Assignment — Right to Rank, —Kloepfer v. Gardner, 14 A. R. 60, 15 S. C. R. 390.

Attacking By-law and Award.]— Where the plaintiff filled his bill seeking to quash a certain municipal by-law, passed to open a road, and also an award made thereunder:—Held, that there was nothing inconsistent in this, and the plaintiff was not bound to elect between attacking the by-law and attacking the award. Harding v. Tounship of Cardiff, 2 O, R. 329.

Where, however, under such circumstances, the plaintiff, being called on by the court to elect, had elected to attack the award, and consented to a decree setting it aside, and ordering a new arbitration, which arbitration he had prosecuted until another award was made, which he had not moved against within the time allowed therefor:—Held, he could not afterwards complain of having been forced to elect at the hearing. Ib.

Concurrent Proceedings in Insolvency and at Law, —Held, under the facts stated in the report of this case, that the defendant, although the attaching creditor in insolvency, was not put to his election, but might proceed in insolvency as well as upon his fi. fa. Thorne v. Torrance, 16 C. P. 445; 18 C. P. 26

Insolvency—Retaining Security.]—Election by assignee to allow creditor to retain, at a valuation, property held by him as security. See Bell v. Ross, 11 A. R. 458.

Insurance — Right to Require Assignment.]—It was provided by an insurance policy, that whenever defendants should pay any loss to the insured, he agreed to assign over all his right to recover satisfaction therefor from any other person, town, or other corporation, or to prosecute therefor at the charge and for the account of defendants if requested:—Semble, that defendants had not the right under such agreement to elect whether the plaintiff should assign or prosecute. Recsor v. Provincial Ins. Co., 33 U. C. R. 357.

Insurance—Right to Terminate.]—A condition indorsed on an insurance policy provided that if for any cause the company should so elect, it should be optional with them to terminate the insurance upon notice given to the insured or his representatives of their intention so to do, in which case the company should refund a ratable proportion of the premium:—Held, not essential that the notice should precede the termination of the insurance, but that they might be contemporaneous, and that the company could terminate the risk by giving notice that they did so, and refunding the uncarned premium. Held, also, that in this case, on the facts set out in the report, there was evidence for the jury to shew a termination of the risk under the condition. Cain v. Lancashive Ins. Co., 27 U. C. R. 433.

Judgment—Several Defendants.] — Election to proceed against one or more of several defendants, under C. L. P. Act, 1856, s. 66, by signing judgment against such only as have not appeared, and issuing execution thereon. See Kerr v. Hereford, 17 U. C. R. 158.

Lease—Renewal.]—Covenant by lessor to renew or pay for buildings—Waiver of right to elect. See Roaf v. Garden, 23 C. P. 59.

Mortgage — Application of Insurance Money,1—1pon a motion for an interim injunction the defendants filed an affidavit and statement shewing that they had applied instance moneys received by them, in respect of loss by fire of buildings upon land mortgaged to them by the plaintiffs, upon overdue instalments of principal, and an insurance premium profit by them; and in their nesticement of defence they also stated their position in a way monsistent with that which they afterwards took, viz. that the insurance may be a supplied to the position of the insurance mone was applicable upon the whole principal, which by virtue of an neceleration clause in the mortgage, had become due;—Held, that the defendants had made their election, so far as the effect of the default and the application of the insurance money was concerned, not to claim the whole principal as having become due by reason of the default; and that they must apply the insurance money, as required by R. 8, 0.1887 c. 192, s. 4, s. 8, 2, upon arrears of principal and interest. Corham w. Kingston, 17 O. R. 432, approved and followed. Edmonds v. Hamilton Provident and Loon Society, 19 O. R. 677. Reversed in appeal, 18 A. R. 347.

Mortgage—Calling in Principal.]—In an action of foreclosure upon a mortgage which contains a clause by which the principal falls due upon default made in payment of any instalment of interest, if the plaintiff claims the benefit of the clause, and calls in the whole mortgage debt, he is bound by his election and must accept principal, interest, and costs, whenever tendered, although he does not pray for a personal order for immediate payment. Drummond v. Guickard, cited in Green v. Adams, 2 Ch. Ch. 124, overruled. Cruso v. Bond, 1 O. R. 384; reversing S. C., 9 P. R. 111.

Covenant in mortgage to pay by instalments, the whole to become due on default—Evidence of election by plaintiffs to waive their right to claim the whole. See Trust and Loan Co, v. Drennan, 16 C. P. 321.

Partnership — Persons Liable.]—J. E. Dunham carried on business at Montreal from February, 1836, a let September, 1836, under february, 1836, a let September, 1836, under the J. E. Dunham with W. W. Park carried on business at Toronto from 1st May, 1836, to let August, 1836, under the same style, J. E. Dunham & Co. By the articles of partnership between Dunham and Park it was agreed that Dunham should not sign the firm name to bills or notes. The dissolution of the partnership between Dunham and Park was not advertised until the 20th August, 1836. Dunham for purposes of his own, and without the knowledge of Park, upon the 11th of August, 1886, one of the partnership between Dunham for purposes of his own, and without the knowledge of Park, upon the 11th of August, 1886, signed a series of notes amounting to $21,000 with the firm name of J. E. Dunham & Co., and gave them to one Isaacs. The note in question in this action was one of that series, but antedated upon the 30th July. The plaintiffs who had no knowledge of Park being a member of J. E. Dunham & Co., took this note without notice of any infirmity, and to secure a pre-existing debt which was overdue. The Judge at the trial charged the jury that the plaintiffs had a right to resort to either firm for payment. Held, a misdirection, and that there was no such right of election: that it was for the creditor to prove who his debtor was and not for the defendants to prove that they were not the debtors. Standard Bank v. Dunham, 14 O. R. 67.

Person Instead of Firm. |—Election by suing one person instead of the members of the firm. See Mail Printing Co. v. Devlin, 17 O. R. 15.

Promissory Note — Persons Liable,] — Election to waive personal liability on a note and accept the liability of the company by proving against the company on the note, and accepting a dividend thereon. See Brown v. Hoveland, 9 O. R. 48; 15 A. R. 750.

Refusal to Call Witnesses.]—Application to remit action to the court to take evidence after refusal to call witnesses. See Macdonald v. Worthington, 7 A. R. 531.

Sale of Land—Abatement.]—Where lands where advertised for sale under a decree, and the purchaser, the owner of the adjoining lot, who had also been in possession by his son of the advertised premises, tendered for them, knowing that the lands comprised fewer acres than the advertisement stated, and intending to seek abatement after the purchase was complete, and a subsequent incumbrancer offered to give the same price for them as the purchaser:—Held, that the petitioner should be put to his election, either to take the land without abatement of the purchase money, or let it go to the subsequent incumbrancer. Carmichael v, Ferris, 8 P. R. 289.

Sale of Land—Forfeiture.]—Plaintiff, on 20th January, 1806, agreed under seal with defendants to sell to them certain land for $5,000; $2,500 to be paid on 1st April, 1806, and $2,500 on the 1st May, 1806, with interest, and to convey on these payments being made. Defendants covenanted to pay, and that if they made default, "the agreement should be void and of no effect, and all moneys paid thereunder up to the time of such default should be forfeited to the plaintiff," and that time should be forfeited to the plaintiff," and that time should be forfeited to the plaintiff, and that time should be forfeited to the plaintiff, and that time should be forfeited to the plaintiff evicted and lept them out of possession and paid $1,500, but having made default in a further payment, the plaintiff evicted and kept them out of possession and elected to treat the agreement as forfeited, whereby the covenant became void. At the trial if appeared that the whole purchase money was $6,000, of which $1,000 was paid down, and $1,000 more on the 7th April, 1866, when, by an indorsement under seal on the agreement, the plaintiff extended the time for payment of the balance to 20th May, 1865, Defendants had taken possession under a presented that the state of the payment of the balance to 20th May, 1865, Defendants had taken possession under a presented that the state of the payment of the balance to 20th May, 1865, Defendants had taken possession under a presented that the plaintiff refused to allow, saying that they had forfeited the land, having failed to make their refused to allow, saying that they had forfeited the land, having failed to make their payments, and that the property was his, and they were trespassers. He brought several men with him who threatened defendants with violence if they attempted to cross the fence into the premises, and he mailed up the engine house, refusing to let de lendants enter it. The plaintiff gave evidence tending to shew that his object in this was to obtain payment. The jury having found for defendants upon the pleat—Head. I. That the control of the pleat—Head is a control of the plaintiff of the plaintiff; 2, that there was evidence to go to the jury that the plaintiff had elected to forfeit the agreement as alleged; and the verdict was upheld. Marcus v. Smith, 17 C. P. 416.

Sale of Land—Rescission.]—Election by plaintiff to put an end to agreement for sale of land, so as to form a defence to action for purchase money. See McCord v. Harper, 26 C. P. 96.

I. EQUITABLE ESTATE.

Agreement to Convey.]—Where defendant in November, 1858, conveyed the real estate, which formed his qualification, to his father, for a consideration of £300, for which he took his father's notes payable at distant dates, and in February, 1860, purchased the property back, returning to his father all the notes: though the father did not reconvey the property to the son till 3rd October, 1800, yet the son was held to have had at the time of the assessment, "an equitable estate" within the meaning of s. 70 of the Municinal Institutions Act. Regina ex rel. Tilt v. Cheyne, 7 L.
J. 90.

Assignment of Interest in Land—Mortgage—Notice.]—The plaintiff's father, being in possession of a farm under an unregistered agreement for the sale thereof to him, assigned the agreement and all his interest thereunder by way of security to one who gave a bond to reassign unon repayment of a small sum advanced. Neither the assignment nor the bond was registered. The money was repaid, but there was no reassignment. Subsequently, on the 3rd April, 1886, the father p—70.

assigned all his interest in the land to the plaintiff for valuable consideration, the plain-tiff having no notice or knowledge of the previous assignment. This assignment was duly registered. The plaintiff lived on the farm with his father and mother, whom he had coveraged to majutain during their lives had covenanted to maintain during their lives, had covenanted to harman during their less, until July, 1888, when he went away, leaving his parents on the farm, with no definite agreement or understanding, but with the expectation, as he said, that they would remain on the place and make the last two payments under the original agreement, and that when this was done the place would be his. In February, 1891, the father mortgaged the land to the person who had made the first advance, the person was not made the first advance, to secure a larger sum, and the mortgage deed was registered. A few days later the original venoor conveyed the land to the father, the purchase money having been paid in full, and the conveyance was registered. In February, 1892, the mortgagee died. In September, 1893, the plaintiff's father conveyed the land absolutely to the administrator of the mortgagee's estate, and this conveyance was also registered. estate, and this conveyance was also registered. In an action against the administrator and the plaintiff's father to recover possession of the land and for a declaration that the last mentioned conveyance was void and a cloud upon the plaintiff's title:—Held, that the assignment to the plaintiff in 1886 gave him an equitable estate in fee and the vicibt to assignment to the plantill in 1200 gave man an equitable estate in fee and the right to possession, and after its execution, the father and son both being on the place, the posses-sion would be attributed to the son. 2. That the registration of that assignment constituted the registration of that assignment constituted notice to the mortgagee, and the mortgage did not affect the plaintiff's title or right to possession. 3. That after the plaintiff went away in July, 1888, his father had possession under him as tenant at will, and his tenancy did not terminate until July, 1889, and therefore the Real Property Limitation Act had not barred the plaintiff's right at the time this action was begun in 1898. 4. That the plaintiff, having the equitable title and having the owner of the legal estate before the court, was entitled to recover possession of the land. Cope v. Crichton, 30 O. R. 603.

Covenants.]—Defendant being seised in fee of certain land in trust for his son, at the request of the son mortgaged it to B. and V. for $400, the son receiving the money and agreeing to pay it off. Afterwards the defendant conveyed to his son, the consideration stated being $4,000, but in reality it was a gift, and the deed by inadvertence and mistake contained a covenant for the right to convey, notwithstanding defendant's acts, and that he had done no act to incumber the land. On the 21st October, 1803, the son mortgaged the land to the plaintiff for $400, and this mortgage was foreclosed by the plaintiff, who was compelled to pay off the mortgage to B. and V. It did not appear that the plaintiff had any knowledge of the trust between the father and son, or of the arrangement between them are the mortgage to B. and V., or that he are the mortgage to B. and V., or that he colours but it appeared that it, together with the other convexances, had been duly registered, and that the land was worth both the mortgages. The plaintiff having sued the defendant on the covenant contained in defendant's deed to the son, to recover the amount paid to B. and V.—Held, that the plaintiff could not recover, for that the facts would constitute a good defence on equitable grounds to an action brought against defendant by the son; and the title of the covenantor and covenantee being equitable only, the plaintiff as assignee of the covenant, could stand in no better position than his assignor. Claxton v. Gilbert, 24 C. P. 500.

Joint Trust to Convey.]-On the 19th January, 1824, the Crown granted to O. S., G. M., and J. M., in fee, certain lands which had formerly been set apart for a rectory, and on which a church had been erected, in trust to confirm all existing leases, and to grant new leases, and apply the rent first to the payment of any money borrowed for erecting a new church, and then to pay the rent to the clergyman of such church; with a proviso for the appointment of new trustees by the three grantees, or the survivors or survivor of them, and a further proviso, that whenever the governor should erect a parsonage or rectory in Kingston, and duly present an incumbent thereto, the trustees should by instrument under their hands and seals, attested by two credible witnesses, convey the land to such incumbent and his successors forever, upon the same trusts thereinbefore expressed. On the 21st of January, 1836, letters patent issued erecting a rectory in Kingston. Before the 10th 1837, the trusts of the patent of 1824 had been fulfilled, and on that day by deed poll, after reciting the two patents above mentioned, and the induction of the said O. S. into the said rectory, the said G. M. and J. M., the two other grantees in the first patent men-tioned, in fulfilment of the trust conveyed the land to the said O. S., as rector and incum-bent, to hold to him and to his successors, subject to and under the uses and trusts set forth in the letters patent to them. To this was appended another deed poll of the same date. executed by O. S., and declaring, for himself and his heirs, that as one of the trustees named in the patent of 1824 he agreed to this assignment, and held the same in his capacity of rector and incumbent of Kingston, and not otherwise. In 1842, O. S. leased the land for twenty-one years, with certain covenants for building and renewal. In this lease he was building and renewal. In this lense he was described as rector, and it recited the two patents of 1824 and 1836. The successor of O. 8, brought ejectment against defendants, claiming under this lease:—Held, on the authority of Denne d. Bower v. Judge, 11 East 288, that the conveyance of 1837 passed two-thirds to the plaintift, and that he was entitled to recover for that; for, semble, in a court of law the ground that the trust to convey being joint was incapable of severance could not arise, the legal estate only being in could not arise, the legal estate only being in question. Lysfer v. Kirkpatrick, 26 U. C. R.

But for that decision, semble, that if the appointment of O. S. as rector rendered him irso facto incapable of acting in the trusts of the patent of 1824, it could not divest him of the estate, or prevent him from joining in a conveyance to any new trustee substituted for him; nor could the deed poll of 1837, executed by him, pass the estate vested in him in trust in his natural capacity, to himself as a rector and corporation sole; that whether the grantees in the patent were to be treated as taking a power or as trustees owning the fee, the conveyance by two only of the three was inoperative; and, semble, that they were trustees. Ib.

Shelley's Gase.]—By ante-nuptial settlement, reciting that F, intended to make provision for his future wife, F, agreed with her and K, to transfer and convey to K, certain property he expected to acquire, to hold unto K. for the joint use and benefit of him. F., and his intended wife during their joint lives, and after the decease of either of them to the use of the survivor during his or her natural life, and after the decease of the survivor, to the use of the heirs of F. as he might by will direct; and it was further agreed that articles of settlement should be executed in pursuance of this document. After the marriage, F., pursuant to the said ante-nuptial settlement, conveyed, in 1879, certain land to K. and his heirs, upon trust, with the consent of F. and his wife, or the survivor, to sell, lease or otherwise convey the same, and to hold the moneys thereon arising upon the trusts and subject to the powers contained in the antenuptial settlement. F.'s wife having died:—Hedd, that, though there were children of the marriage still surviving, F. was centited to a fee simple, for that the trusts in the antenuptial settlement were executed and not executory, and under them F. had an equitable estate in fee simple under the rule in Shelley's Case. Ferris v. Ferris, 9. O. R. 324.

Surviving Partner.]—Though a surviving partner may have an equitable title, yet the heir of the deceased partner suing in ejectment upon his ancestor's legal title need not demand possession. Doe d. Atkinson v. Mc-Leod, S U. C. R. 344.

Trespass.]—The owner of an equitable estate cannot, notwithstanding the Judicature Act, proceed against a trespasser in his own name. He is still bound to sue in the name of his trustee. Adamson v. Adamson, 7 A. R. 592.

See, also, 8, C, 28, Gr, 221, 12, 8, C. L.

Sec. also, S. C., 28 Gr. 221, 12 S. C. R. 563.

Wife's Conveyance.]—A wife's conveyance of her equitable estate is valid without the husband joining in the conveyance; and the husband having the legal title vested in him, the wife's vendee was held entitled to a decree against the husband for a conveyance. Adams v. Loomis, 22 Gr. 99.

II. ESTATE AT WILL.

Agreement for Lease.]—A, and B, being partners, A, alone verbally leased certain premises for a place of business, for a term of five years, at a given rent, and both went into possession. A memorandum for a lease was prepared by A, but never signed by the lessor:—Held, that A, was a tenant at will. Brougham v, Bullour, 3 C. P. 72.

Agreement to Purchase.] — Where a person enters into possession of land under an agreement to purchase, he is tenant at will to the seller, and at the seller's death his heir-at-law can maintain ejectment against him without any notice to quit or demand of possession. Doe d. Kemp v. Garner, 1 U. C. R. 39.

The defendant had been let into possession under a contract to purchase payable by instalments, with a stipulation for forfeiture if payment not made on a particular day, and the vendor had, subsequent to such day, received payment on account:—Held, that defendant was tenant at will and not by sufferance, and that a demand of possession was necessary. Lundy v. Dovey, 7 C. P. 38.

Death—Entry by Heir.]—If on the death of a tenant at will his heir enter, such entry is tortious; and, if the heir die, and his heir enter, the original owner or his heir will be put to his action. Doe d. Moak v. Empey. 3 O. S. 488.

Encroachment on Land.]—House encroaching on plaintiff's land—Occupation by permission of plaintiff—Elect of as creating a tenancy at will. See Keys v. Guy, 36 U. C. R. 356.

Lease without Date for Termination.]

The plaintiff, by indenture dated 6th April, 1854, did "lease let and to farm let," the land in question to defendant upon the terms that he should pay all rates, levies, and assessments upon the said property, inclose the same with a good fence, and farm the same in a lashand-like manner, and not transfer without the lessor's consent; and the plaintiff for himself, his heirs and assigns, did thereby rent unto the defendant (the premises) at the rate of sixpence per acre per annum, payable half-yearly in advance. There was no livery of seisin, nor any time mentioned, but the defendant entered into possession:—Held, that an estate at will only passed. Wilmot v. Larabec, 7 C. P. 407.

Mortgagor's Lessee.]-By a mortgage in fee to secure the payment of $1,490.42, by monthly instalments of $12.42, it was pro-vided that the mortgagor should become tenant to the mortgagees thenceforth, during their at the rent of one pepper corn monthly until default, and after default at the yearly rent of $149.04, payable monthly. There was also a proviso that in case of default the mortgagees without any previous demand of possession might enter and sell. On ejectment by the mortgagees, upon default, against a lessee of the mortgagor subsequent to the mortgage: Held, that no notice to quit or demand of possession was necessary; that the combined effect of the two clauses was to create in the mortgagor a qualified tenancy at will, and to enable the mortgagees at their option either to distrain, or at any time to eject the mortgagor himself without demand; but that the mortgagor's lessee, not having been accepted by the mortgagees as their tenant, was not entitled to a demand of possession. If the mortgagor had been simply a tenant at will, semble, that the mortgagees might have treated the lease by him to defend ant as a determination of such tenancy. ada Permanent Building and Savings Society v. Byers, 19 C. P. 473.

Occupant—Deed by Ourser, |—On the 26th October, 1852, a railway company took a deed from the plaintiff's father, by which, in consideration of the benefits which would result to him from the construction of the road, and of 627 18s., he agreed "to allow and permit the said company forthwith to take, occupy, possess, and enjoy of and through "the land in question. It appeared that the plaintiff lad no title to the hand, but had merely been allowed by his father to occupy it; that he had admitted in presence of his father that it was with his father, and not with him, that he company must settle; and that he had sorked under the defendant, a contractor with the company, in making the fence along the line through this land. After the deed, the plaintiff and his father forbade the defendant entered in December, 1852, for the purpose of making the railway, and the fences along the line being insufficient, the plaintiff's wheat was injured by cattle getting in. For these injuries, he sued in this action trespass q. c. f.—Held, that the plaintiff could not maintain trespass against any one claiming under the company;; for he was not at any time more than a tenant at will, and the deed determined the will and left him tenant at sufferance only, with a right to enter and remove the crop. McIson v. Cook, 12 U. C. R. 22.

Possession under Mortgagee.]—Plaintiff being in possession as assignee of a mortgage, under a mortgage upon which default had been made, contracted to sell the mortgage to defendant for 8500; 8200 down, and 8300 on the list April following; at which time the plaintiff agreed to have the mortgage assigned to defendant On payment of 8200 defendant was let into possession. He made default in payment of 8200, Plaintiff gave him notice that he was ready to assign the mortgage on payment of the amount due, and if not paid, defendant would be ejected:—Held, that by default in payment, the tenancy at will was converted into a tenancy at sufferance; and, also, that the tenancy at will would have been determined by the demand of payment under the threat of ejecting the defendant, and the default of the defendant to pay. Price v. Moore, 14 C. P. 349.

Postponement of Payment of Rent.]
—Defendant being in default under a denise from plaintiff, he and the plaintiff referred all differences, and the arbitrators nostponed the date of payment. Quere, whether the reference and postponement would not constitute defendant a tenant at will. Black v. Allen, 17 C. P. 240.

III. ESTATE FOR LIFE OR YEARS.

Assignment of Rent.]—In an action for distraining when no rent was due, it appeared that one of the defendants assigned certain rent to a co-defendant, who gave the tenant (plaintiff) notice:—Held, that such an assignment conferred an estate, and that under 4 Anne c. 16, ss. 9 and 10, the assignee was entitled to distrain for the rent in question, whether the tenant attorned or not. Hope v. White, 17 C. P. 52.

Cutting Timber.]—A tenant for life in this country may cut down timber in the proper course of good husbandry, in order to bring the proper proportion of the land under cultivation, and perhaps destroy such timber, but he cannot cut down timber even for the same purpose, and sell it. Drake v. Wigle, 22 C. P. 405, followed. Saunders v. Breakie, 5 O. R. 603.

Death of Life Tenant—Representative.]

—The plaintiff's testatrix, who had a life estate in certain lands, made a lense of them for ten years to one of the defendants, who was entitled to the reversion in fee. The reservation of rent in the lease was to the lessor simply, and the covenant for payment of rent was "with the lessor, her heirs and assigns," for payment to "the said lessor, her heirs and assigns," The lessor died before the expiration of the ten years, and this action was brought by the executrix of her will to recover (inter alia) the instalments of rent which became payable, as it was alleged, upon the lease after her death:—Held, that, as the interest of the lessor was a freehold interest, the plaintiff could not recover either as being entitled to the reversion of a chattel interest, or as being the person designated by the covenant:—Held, also, that there was no estopped to prevent the lessee from shewing that the title of the lessor had come to an end, and that he himself became the owner upon her death. Thatcher v. Bourman, 18 O. R. 205.

Death of Tenant for Years.]-In ejectment, it appeared that C. died in 1851, seised of an unexpired term of years in the land, intestate, and leaving an only son, M., who remained in possession, and on his death, in 1857, devised it to his uncle J. D. for life, and thence to the plaintiff, testator's child. M. D. another uncle of the testator, was appointed executor. He saw J. D. in possession after M.'s death, and was himself living on the place, but in 1858, he, as executor, conveyed the term to one F.; and afterwards in 1860, J. D. administered to C.'s estate, and as such administrator, assigned his interest to F., under whom defendant claimed. The court being left to draw the same inferences as a jury, and the defendant's claim appearing to be dishonest:—Held, that the plaintiff must succeed; that on the death of C., her only child, M., remaining in possession, became entitled, so that J. D.'s deed as administrator conveyed nothing; that there was sufficient evidence to infer an assent by M.'s executor to the bequest to J. D., which would extend to the subsequent devise to the plaintiff, and that his conveyance as executor was therefore inopera-Teahon v. Leamy, 21 U. C. R. 216.

Demise — Livery of Scisia.]—The word "cenise" is an effective word to convey an estate of freehold, and is of like import with and equivalent to the word "grant. An estate for life was therefore held to be validly created by the words "demise and lease" to E. M. for life; and livery of seisin was held nnnecessary. Spears v. Miller, 32 C. P. 661.

Effect of Covenants. 1-One C., a lawyer, portgaged certain property to the plaintiffs, When searching the title the plaintiffs' solicitor found that a deed, made in 1848 between and his mother, after reciting that C. was his father's executor, and that all the property was devised to him in trust for his mother for life, and after her decease in trust for his sisters, the defendants, and that he was in debted to the said trust fund in the sum of £1,200, and was "desirous of securing the same in accordance with the provisions of the said proceeded to grant the property in question "unto the said party of the second part, his mother "forever." Upon enquiry by the plaintiffs' solicitor, C. informed him that the deed was only intended to convey a life estate to his mother, who was then dead. The plaintiffs having contracted to sell this property after C.'s death, an objection to the title was raised on account of the deed of 1848. ceedings were thereupon taken to quiet the title, and the sisters were made claimants. No evidence was given to shew what the real agreement between the parties to the deed was One of the claimants swore that certain payments were made to her by C. after her mother's death, but her evidence failed to establish that the rents as such were paid to her:—Held, that under the operative words of the deed a life estate merely passed, and that their effect could not be enlarged by the covenants, which were in the short form:—Held, also, that although equity has ample power to supply words of inheritance, no case was established for the reformation of the deed:—Held, also, that even if the claimant's evidence had been satisfactory, being that of one of the litizants and uncorroborated, it could not be made the foundation of a decree after C/s death; and, moreover, the claimants were volunteers, being no parties to the agreement, if any, between C, and his mother, and having done nothing on the faith of it. Semble, also, that the statute of limitations would not be a bar, the trust, if any, declared by the deed, being an implied, and not an express trust. Trust and Loan Co., Clarke, 3 A. R. 429.

Encroachment—Statute of Limitations.]
—Mrs. H., the owner of lot 13, built a house thereon, but which on a survey made by a surveyor, B., was found to have encroached on lot 12, owned by R., seven and a half inches, whereupon the following agreement was en tered into: "It is hereby agreed between R and Mrs. II. that the line as surveyed between the lots of the above parties on Cherry street, Mr. B. is correct, but that the said Mrs. II, be permitted to occupy her house during her life, and not be compelled to remove the same, notwithstanding a portion of it is on the land of said R.; but that after the death of the said Mrs. H., said R. may claim the whole of his said lot; and that in the meantime said R. shall occupy his said lot up to the said line in the rear of the said house. derendant had purchased from M. to whom Mrs. II. had sold some twelve years prior to the trial, which took place in the spring of 1886, M. at the time being aware of the agreement, but of which defendant when he bought had no notice. The defendant moved a fence. which plaintiff had erected in rear of the house in accordance with B.'s survey, in a line with the house, and also veneered the house with brick so as to cause it to encroach one and a half inches further on plaintiff's lot. Mrs. II. died within ten years before action commenc ed, which was brought to recover that part of lot 12 encroached on by defendant:-Held. that the plaintiff was entitled to recover, for that the agreement must be construed as a demise to Mrs. H. for life of that portion of lot 12 covered by the house, and not merely a license to occupy the same, so that the right of entry of the plaintiff, who claimed under of chirry of the plaintiff, who claimed under R., did not accrue until Mrs. H.'s death, and therefore plaintiff having brought his action within ten years of Mrs. H.'s death, was not barred by the statute of limitations. It was objected that the plaintiff must fail under the registry laws, because the grant to Mrs. H., it appeared, had not been registered, and defendant bought in ignorance of plaintiff's rights: but :- Held, that the registry laws did not affect the matter, for as defendant bought lot 13 and not 12, the instrument relating to lot 12 would not properly be registered on lot 13: —Held, also, that the agreement signed by Mrs. II, recognizing the line run by B, as the true boundary between the lots, relieved the plaintiff from doing more than shewing where that line ran, and imposed on defendant, who claimed by mesne conveyance from Mrs. H., the burden of shewing that such line was incorrect. Roan v. Kronsbein, 12 O. R. 197.

Grant to Person and Her Children.]

-Under a conveyance to "B. and her children for ever," there being no children at the time of the deed:—Held, that the grantee took only a life estate. Shank v. Cates, 11 U. C. R.

Husband's Possession of Wife's Life Estate, I—Though a man has been in possession for 20 years of land granted to his wife for life, he does not thereby acquire an absolute title to the land; for he is merely seised with her, by operation of law, of her estate therein, and any grant made by him will only pass an estate for his own life, if his wife should so long live, and if he predecease her, the right to possession will revert to her, and entitle her to maintain ejectment against his grantee. Nolan v. Fox. 15 C. P. 505.

Under a deed of land to a married woman,

Under a deed of land to a married woman, dated 27th March, 1824, to hold from the 30th day of the same month until her decease, and after that to her husband for his life: —Held, that though it might, if executed and livery of seisin given on the day it bore date, be void, yet if not executed or livery of seisin not given until after the day on which it was to begin to operate, it would be good; but, semble, that the jury might properly have been asked, under the peculiar facts of the case, to presume one or both of these propositions in favour of the plaintiff, the grantee under the deed. Ib.

A grant to a married woman of a life estate in land does not require the assent of her husband to pass the title to her; and unless he repudiate it in some way, both will be seised in her right, Ib.

Incumbrance.]—A testator devised certain lands to his wife for life, remainder to such of his children as she should appoint, and, failing issue, to such child or children of J. C. as she should appoint. The property, it was alleged, was incumbered to its full value, which incumbrance the widow directed to be paid out of her own funds, and appointed the estate to the defendant M. C. Upon a bill filed to have the sums so paid by the widow declared a charge on the estate, evidence was directed to be given as to whether the estate was of considerably greater value than the claims so paid off, in which case it would be declared that the widow had a lien theron for the amount advanced by her; but if otherwise, it would be intended that the appointment of the estate had been made freed and discharged of such claim. Macklem v. tunnings, 7 Gr. 318.

Interest on Charge.]—The general rule as between a tenant for life and the remain-derman in respect of a charge upon an estate, is, that the tenant for life must keep down the interest on such charge, and the duty of the remainderman is to pay the principal. Reid v. Reid, 29 Gr. 372.

Lease for Life.] — A. died leaving a widow, the plaintiff, and defendant, his helrarchaw. The plaintiff being in possession of part of the property, defendant executed the following instrument under seat: "Know we, all men, that I, J. G. H., do bind myself, may heirs, executors, and assigns, in the sum of 500 to let my mother, L. H., retain quiet and peaceable possession of the lot of land now in her possession, the same being fifty arcs, more or less, for the term of her natural life."—Held, a lease for life, and that the plaintiff might maintain ejectment. Semble, that the writing might also be supported as a release. Hall v. Hall, 15 U. C. R. 637.

Lease for Life or Years.!—Defendant on the 13th October, 1852, granted the land in question to one S., to hold "to the said S., and the heirs of his body, for twenty-one years, or the term of his natural life, from the lat April, 1853, fully to be complete and ended," but not to be underlet to any person, except to the family of the said S., for any period during the said term. A yearly rent was reserved, which S. covenanted to pay, and it was provided that on failure to perform the covenants, the lease and the term thereby granted should cease and be utterly null and void. The lessee entered, and on the 1st April, 1859, a year's rent being in arrear, defendant distrained and sold the goods of S., who remained for some time on the premises as defendant's servant; and the sheriff afterwards, under executions which had been in his hands since November, 1858, sold the unexpired term of S, in the premises, describing it as a term with fifteen years yet to run, at a rent of $100 a year. The plaintiff became the purchaser, and brought ejectment against defendant on the sheriff seed:—Held, that by the lease S. took a life estate, in which the term merged, and he therefore had no interest which the sheriff could sell under the fi. fa, against goods. Dulye v. Robertson, 19 U. C. R. 411.

Lease for Life—Reservation of Right to Possession]— The defendant leased to his father the lands in question in this action for life the lands in question in this action for life the lands in question in this action for life the lands in question in this action for lands and lands are large of the place as it should the father in his later years become incapable of taking charge of the place as it should be by good husbandry, then and in such govern the lands as seemed best to him. And in the event of the father becoming incapable of manual labour he was to be supported by the son, and it was agreed that, subject to the son's rights, the father was entitled to peaceable and quiet possession. The father became incapable of taking proper care of the place, and in consequence the defendant reentered and worked the farm. Subsequently thereto the interest of the father was sold by the sheriff to the plaintiff, who brought ejectment:—Held, reversing 31 C. P. 417, that the defendant had, according to the terms of the plaintiff must therefore fall in his action. Turley v. Benedict, 7 A. R. 300.

Life Estate and Remainder.]—A deed made by C. G. (mother) to J. H. G. (daughter) just after the latter's marriage, contained the following provision: "It being hereby declared and agreed that it is intended by this deed to vest in the said J. H. G. life interest and estate in the said Jand, and at her decease the same is to go to the lawful issue of the said J. H. G., and to be held by them, their heirs and assigns, in equal shares," and was executed by both grantor and grantee. No issue were in existence at the date of the deed, Subsequently J. H. G. and her children, with the exception of two, executed a mortgage in fee of the property; of these two, one died in the lifetime of J. H. G. leaving infant children. In an application under the Vendor and Purchaser Act, R. S. G. 1877 c. 190, on a sale calculation of the grantee and the transplant of the grantee and the transplant of the grantee, appearing on the face of the deed, was that only a beneficial life estate should be given to the grantee, and that the beneficial remainder in fee should go to her children; that each child born while the grantee lived would have a vested right to share in the property, and that such share would descend to those who died before the grantee; and that such a title could not be forced on a purchaser. Re Morice and Risbridger, 13 O. R. 640.

Taxes. |—Semble, a tenant for life of the whole estate of the testator, consisting of an improved farm, and of wild lands, is bound to keep down the taxes on the whole. Biscoe v. VanBearle, 6 Gr. 438.

The devisee of a life estate in all a testator's property is bound to keep down the annual taxes on the land, and they form a first charge on the testator's interest. Gray v. Hatch, 18 (Le 72)

Trustees — Temperance Society.] — See Armstrong v. Harrison, 29 O. R. 174.

IV. ESTATE IN FEE.

Assign.]—"Assign" is a good operative word to pass the fee. Fraser v. Fraser, 14 C.

Deed by Mortgagees.]—Where mortgages in fee in possession executed a deed purporting to "convex, assign release, and quit claim to be grantees, "their heirs and guite dain" to be grantees, "their heirs and gazed land, habendum, "as and for all the estate and interest" of the grantors "in and to the same "—Held, sufficient to pass the fee to the grantees. Bright v. McMurray, 1 O. R. 172.

Foreign Deed.] — A deed executed in Lower Canada conveyed certain lands situate in Upper Canada to parties "and their successors." which words it was proved would convey the fee simple according to the law of Lower Canada, and it was shewn that the grantor's intention was to convey the lands absolutely. The court ordered the device of the grantor to execute a release of the lands according to the law of Upper Canada. Allan v. Thorne, 3 U. C. R. 645.

Habendum for Years, 1—A., by indenture, in 1826, in consideration of the rents and covenants by M. to be paid and performed, "granted, demissed, are found to the head of the rents and sessions," certain he to M. his heirs and assigns," certain head of the day of the date hereof, for and during the term of 21 years, "yielding and paying yearly during said term to M., his heirs and assigns, 78. 6d. There was a covenant by M. to pay rent, and by A. for quiet enjoyment during the term. At the end of the term M. gave up the lease to A., saying he had no further claim, but he was allowed to continue in possession upon no definite understanding, and defendant went in after him. Upon ejectment brought by the devisee of A.:—Held, that without livery of seisin the fee simple granted in the premises could not take effect, and the habendum for 21 years would stand; but a new trial was granted to determine the fact of livery, McDonald v, McGillilis, 26 U. C. R. 458.

Semble, that the jury should not be directed to presume livery of seisin, as they would be if the possession had been held as on a claim of absolute ownership. Ib. Habendum in Trust.]—Land was granted by letters patent to A. G., her heirs and assigns for ever, "to have and to hold the said parcel or tract of land hereby given and granted to her the said A. G., in trust for herself and her children, M. G. and F. G. "—Held, that A. G. took the fee, and that no legal estate passed to the children. Goldie v. Taylor, 13 U. C. R. 603.

Habendum with Special Limitations.]

See Langlois v. Lesperance, 22 O. R. 682.

Quit Claim of all Right and Title.]—
The plaintiff in ejectment claimed under a deed from one S., who was proved to be the owner in fee, expressed to be made in pursuance of the Act to facilitate the conveyance of eral property, by which S., in consideration of £75, did quit claim to one G., his heirs and assigns for ever, all his right and title to the land in question. It was added that G. might take possession, that S. would execute such further assurances as might be requisite, that he had done no act to incumber; and he released and quitted claim to G. all his claim upon said lands:—Held, sufficient to pass the title in fee. Nicholson v. Dillabough, 21 U. C. R. 591.

Repugnant Limitations.]—See Doc d. Meyers v. Marsh, 9 U. C. R. 242; Owston v. Williams 16 U. C. R. 405.

Reservation of Life Estate. —A deed conveying land in fee simple, "reserving, nevertheless, to my," the grantor's "own use, benefit, and behoof, the occupation, rents, issues, and profits of the said above granted premises, for and during the term of my natural life: "—Held, a conveyance of the fee simple, not a mere testamentary paper which the grantor could revoke by a subsequent deed, Quaere, whether the reservation was void, or whether only the reversion passed subject to the life estate. Simpson v. Hartman, 27 U.C. R. 460.

Shelley's Case.]—Under a conveyance of land to M., to hold "during her natural life, then to go to her heirs equally alike, and ther heirs and assigns for ever:"—Held, that the rule in Shelley's case applied, and that M, took a fee. Brown v. O'Dwyer, 35 U. C. R. 354.

Statute of Uses. — A busband and wife were the parties of the third part in a conveyance, whereby the wife's father did "grantunto the said party of the third part his heirs and assigns for ever," &c., habendum "unto the said party of the third part, his heirs and assigns, to and for his and their sole and only use for ever: — "Held, that by the operation of the Statute of Uses, the husband took an extate in fee simple. Re Young, 9 P. R. 521,

A, by deed sold and assigned certain lands to B, his heirs, executors, administrators, and assigns, "to have and to hold the same unto B, his heirs, executors, administrators, and assigns in trust, for the sole and separate use of A, for life, and after A,'s decease, in trust for C, for her life; and after C,'s decease, in trust for the heirs of A, and in the event of A, surviving C, then in trust to convey and revest the said premises in A, his heirs, executors, administrators, and assigns, for their own proper use and benefit for ever. But should C, survive A, then and in that event, and in the further event of the decease of C, in trust to convey the said premises to such persons and in such manner as A. shall by his last will and testament order, designate. and appoint. But in the event of A. dying intestate, then in trust to sell and convey the said premises for A.'s heirs, executors, administrators, and assigns: "—Held, that A. took an estate in fee simple, subject to the intervening life estate of C.; for no such special trust was created as took the case out of the Statute of Uses. Re Bingham and Wrigglesworth, 5 O. R. 611.

Certain owners of the equity of redemption in lands by deed granted the same to "A., his heirs and assigns, to have and to hold the same to A., his heirs and assigns, unto and to the use of B., his heirs and assigns. This was dated 17th July, 1875, and registered 21st July, 1875:—Held, that whether this deed onerated under the Statute of Uses or not, B. took under it the beneficial interest in fee, and it had the same effect as if it were a conveyance to A. upon trust for the benefit of B. Imperial Bank of Canada v. Metcalfe, 11 O.

V. ESTATE TAIL.

Barring.]—A testator seised in fee of land, having devised to one of three sons, "to be by him entailed to any of his issue he may think proper," with the further provision that if any of the three should die without issue, the property should "be divided equally between their successors, subject to entailment," died before the 6th March, 1834. In November, 1851, two of the sons, D. and R., by deed conveyed their estates in the land to the third son, C. This deed was never registered, C, had a child who predecensed him. By several deeds, executed respectively in February and March, 1805, D, and his assignee in insolvency conveyed to and his assignee in insolvency conveyed to plaintiff. Both these conveyances were duly paintiff. Doin these conveyations to the registered:—Held, that the three sons took estates tail in the land; that D. and R. had a contingent interest in fee tail on failure of the issue of C.; and that D., as heir-at-law of the testator, had the reversion in fee. Dumble v. Johnson, 17 C. P. 9. Held, also, that although the deed of No-

Held, also, that although the deed of November, 1851, might not for want of registra-tion, under C. S. U. C. c. 83, s. 31, have barred the entail as against their issue, it did pass the individual rights of the grantors during their lives; and that as D., under whom alone the plaintiff claimed, was still alive and could not impeach this deed, no more could the plaintiff, who took no higher interest than D. had it then in his power to transfer. Ib.

transfer. Ib.Held, also, that if the title had been regis-tered before 1851, of which there was no evidence, and if the plaintiff had relied on the evidence, and if the plaintiff had relied on the non-registration of this deed under the general Registry Act, he would, upon proof that he was a purchaser for valuable consideration, (as to which, however, the evidence was other-wise,) have been entitled to succeed as to that portion of the land which D. himself could have claimed, just as if the deed of 1851 had never been executed. Ib.

Quære, whether a mortgage in the short form under 27 & 28 Vict. c. 31, executed by the tenant in tail, has the effect of barring the entail. Re Dolsen, 4 Ch. Ch. 36.

A mortgage in fee simple by a tenant in tail bars the entail. Re Lawlor, 7 P. R. 242.

Held, reversing 6 A. R. 312, that the execution and registration in accordance with R. S. O. 1877 c. 111, s. 67, of a discharge of a mortgage in fee simple made by a tenant in tail reconveys the land to the mortgagor barred of the entail. Lawlor v. Lawlor, 10 S. C. R. 194.

The express consent of the protector to the settlement is not necessary to bar an estate tail. The tenants in tail and the mother, who was protector to the settlement, having an estate during widowhood in the land, joinan estate during widowhood in the land, join-ed in a mortgage in fee, purporting to be made under the Act respecting Short Forms of Mortgages, and containing the usual cove-nants, for the purpose of securing moneys borrowed to pay off legacies charged on the whole estate, including the mother's interest whole estate, including the mother's interest therein:—Held, that her consent sufficiently appeared, and that the estate tail was barred. Ostrom v. Palmer, 3 A. R. 61.

By a will made in 1847 a testator, who died in 1854, devised to his son a piece of land, describing it, and proceeded: "All which shall be and is hereby entailed on my said son and his heirs for ever." In 1859 and again in 1860 the son granted the land in question in fee by way of mortgage, each mortgage being duly registered within less than six months of its execution within less than six months of its execution and each containing the usual proviso that it should be void on payment at a named date. No discharge of either mortgage or reconveyance of the mortgaged land had been registered, and there was no evidence whether, either mortgage had in fact been with the contraction of the contraction of the conwhether either mortgage had in fact been paid:—Held, per Maclennan, and Lister, J.J.A., that under this will the son took an estate tail; but held, also, per curiam, that even if the son did take an estate tail, that estate had been barred and converted into an estate in fee simple in his own favour as well as in that of the mortgagee by the execution and registration of the mortgages. Lawlor v. Lawlor, 10 S. C. R. 194, applied, and Plomley v. Felton, 14 App. Cas. 61, distinguished. Culbertson v. McCullough, 27 A. R. 459.

Deed in Fee-Statute of Limitations.]-Before the passing of the Act respecting the assurance of estates tail, a tenant in tail executed a deed purporting to convey the pro-executed a deed purporting to convey the property in fee and gave up possession to the purchaser:—Held, that the statute of limitations did not begin to run against the herr of the tenant in tail until the death of the grantor. Re Shaver, 3 Ch. Ch. 379.

A tenant in tail, who was supposed to have the fee simple, sold the property a few weeks before the passing of the Act respecting the assurance of estates tail; the purchaser accepted the conveyance, and paid the purchaser money, without seeing the will or chase money, without seeing the will or having the title investigated. The eldest son of the vendor was not quite twenty-one at the time; he was aware of his interest, but was anxious that the sale should be effected, urged anxious that the sale should be effected, urged the purchaser to buy, and was privy to the completion of the purchase, without giving any notice of his title or of the defect in the father's right to convey. The purchaser went into possession and improved the premises, and had no notice of the defect in his title until after the death of the vendor:—Held, that he was entitled to hold the property in equity against the issue in tail. Ib. In such a case, constructive notice of the defect in the vendor's title is no bar to the purchaser's right to relief. Ib.

Infant. |—On an application for a ruling as to whether the estate of an infant being an estate tail in possession could be sold under R. S. O. 1877 c. 137:—Held, that the Act applies to an estate tail. In re Gray, 26 O. R, 355.

Separate Estate - Tenant by the Curtesy. - A father conveyed lands to his daughter by deed with habendum "to have and to hold the same unto * * and the heirs of her body lawfully begotten to and for their sole and only use for ever to and for the sole and separate use and benefit of (grantee) for and during the term of her natural life, and after her death then to the heirs of her body lawfully begotten for ever Provided always, however, that it shall and may be lawful for (grantee) to direct and appoint either by deed or her last will and testament which or in what manner her said heirs shall have the lands and premises hereby granted should circumstances at any time render it necessary, of which circumstances she shall and may be sole judge." She died leaving her husband and several children sur-viving her, and by her will devised and appointed the lands to her eldest son with instructions to dispose of the same between her husband and children in the proportions men-tioned in her will:—Held, that the daughter took an estate in fee tail general, and that took an estate in rec tail general, and that her husband was tenant by the curtesy:— Held, also, that the provisions of the will were not a valid exercise of the power. Archer v. Urquhart, 23 O. R. 214.

Specific Performance.]—A decree for specific performance will be made against a tenant in tail. Graham v. Graham, 6 Gr. 372.

Wife's Conveyance.]—Section 44 of C. S. U. C. c. 83, "An Act respecting the assurance of estates tail," applies only to cases arising under that statute, and does not authorize the court, in every case where a husband is living apart from his wife, to dispense with his concurrence in a conveyance by her. In re McElrop, 32 U. C. R. 95.

VI. EXCHANGE OF LAND.

Agreement not Carried out—Ejectment.]—Two persons, each possessed of a lot of land, agreed to exchange lots; that each should have possession of the other's lot from a day named, and that they should exchange good and sufficient deeds in one year from the date of the bond, and each gave the other a bond with a penalty conditioned to perform the conditions above. The year clapsed without either giving a deed. Upon ejectment brought for the lot which the plaintiff was to convey to the defendant:—Held, that a demand of possession of the premises was necessary, and probably also that the plaintiff should offer, if not actually give up, possession of defendant's lot, which he (plaintiff) occupied under the agreement. Perritt v. Arnold, 11 C. P. 413.

Infant.]—An exchange of lands by an infant is not void, but voidable only, and as such may be rendered valid by acts of confirmation. Where, therefore, a party said to have been under age and intoxicated when he made an exchange of lands, continued, after coming of age, in possession of the property received in exchange, and afterwards sold or exchanged it for other property, it was considered such a confirmation as barred those claiming under him from impeaching the transaction. Miller v, Ostrander, 12 Gr. 349.

Mortgage.]—J. and S., the owners of two distinct parcels of land, agreed to exchange the one for the other. S.'s land was subject to a mortgage, which he agreed to pay off, but did not; and J. was compelled to redeem the same:—Held, that J. was entitled to a lien on the land conveyed by him to S., as for unpaid purchase money, for the amount paid to redeem the mortgage. Sency v. Porter, 12 Gr. 546.

Pleading.]—Dower. Second plea, that during the matriage, the busband agreed with one D. to exchange the lands in question with other lands, and in pursuance thereof they by deeds conveyed the lands to each other, D.'s wife barring her dower; that the demandant afterwards elected to take her dower in the other land, and by deed released the same to one C.:—Held, plea bad, as not shewing strictly an exchange of the lands, for the word convey has not the same effect; and, semble, no other word can be substituted. Leach v. Dennis, 24 U. C. R. 129.

Presumption of Advancement.]-The evidence of acts or declarations of a father to rebut the presumption of advancement must be of those made antecedently to or contemporaneously with the transaction, or else immediately after it, so as in effect to form part of the transaction; but the subsequent acts and declarations of a son can be used against him and those claiming under him by the father, where there is nothing shewing the intention of the father, at the time of the transaction, sufficient to counteract the effect transaction, sufficient to commerce the of those declarations. A testator devised to his grandson, A., an infant, 30 acres, part of his farm, and the remainder thereof he devised to his eldest son, the father of A. By the evidence of the father it was shewn that on A. coming of age, by agreement between them, his father conveyed to him 50 acres of equally valuable land in lieu of the portion devised to him, the father at the time saving that he would charge him with the difference in value as an advance; and that it was supposed by the parties that no conveyance from A. to his father was necessary, as, he being the heir-at-law of the testator, all that was necessary was to destroy the will, which was done. Up to the time of his death A, never made any claim to the 30 acres; on the contrary, it was proved that on several occasions he had admitted the fact of the exchange :-- Held, under the circumstances stated, sufficient appeared to shew that the conveyance to A. had bened to shew that the consequence of lands, and not as an advancement by the father to his son. Birdsell v. Johnson, 24 Gr. 202.

Proof of Exchange.] — Dower. Plea, that the husband exchanged other lands with one F. for the lands in question, and that the demandant elected to be endowed of such other lands. To prove this exchange, an ordinary deed of bargain and sale of the other lands was produced, executed by demandant's husband, for an expressed consideration of £600; and it was shewn clearly by parol evidence that the transaction between F, and the husband was in fact an exchange:—Held, that such evidence could not avail; that the exchange must be proved in proper technical form, and by deed, and that the demandant was therefore entitled to succeed. Toresley v. Smith, 12 U. C. R. 555.

Where in dower the defence rested upon an alleged exchange by the husband for other lands out of which the widow had been satisfied her dower, and no deeds were produced, and the only evidence for the defence consisted of parol statements that the husband had "traded" certain lands:—Held, there was not evidence to warrant a jury in finding for the defendant. Stafford v. Trucman, 7 C. P. 41.

Settled Estates.] — The Settled Estates Acts do not authorize the court to sanction an exchange of the lands of an infant cestui que trust; but when in such a case it can be shewn that a part of the property of the infant is exposed to depreciation if the proposed exchange be not effected, the court may order the same to be carried out under the provisions of s. 50 of c. 12, C. S. U. C. Re Bishoprick, 21 Gr. 589.

Fitle Completed after Action to Enforce Exchange.]—The plaintiff and defendant agreed to an exchange of lands, the plaintiff conveying 100 acres in B., upon which there was a mortgage for $1,300, and the defendant agreeing to convey to the plaintiff whichever of two loss—one in T. the other in the latter of the plaintiff whichever of two loss—one in T. the other in the latter, it was to be assigned to him, subject to the payment of $150 in four equal annual instalments, with interest at seven per cent. The plaintiff selected the latter, but it appeared that the defendant had not yet obtained a title thereto, although he was in a position to call for a patent from the Crown on making certain payments, and this he procured the day the cause was leard. The court, as the defendant had all along had a title to the lot, and was at the time in a position to carry out his part of the agreement, and submitted to do so, directed that the contract should be completed by conveyance of the lot in S., and that the time for payment of the $150 should date from the bearing, from which time also the interest should be computed, but refused to give to either party the costs of the litization, Gray y. Recsor, 15 Gr. 205; 16 Gr. 615; 16 Gr. 205; 16 Gr. 615; 16 Gr. 705; 16 Gr. 7

Want of Title.]—Where two owners of land effect an exchange, and mutual conveyances are executed between the parties, and one of them loses the estate conveyed to him in consequence of the want of title in his grantor, he is not obliged to resort to an action on the covenants in the deed conveying the property to him; but may claim a rescission of the bargain, and a restoration of the lands conveyed by him. Rose v. Anger, 22 Gr. 525.

VII. HEIRSHIP AND DESCENT.

Agreement to Purchase.]—The eldest son and heirer law of a person who had in his lifetime agreed for the purchase of land from the Canada Company, left this country without in any manner attempting to complete the purchase. The other children of the purchaser paid the balance of purchase money due on the land, and sold it in portions to three several purchasers. In a suit brought in the name of the several purchasers against their vendors and the Canada Company, it appeared that the heir-at-law had not been heard of for upwards of twenty-dive years. The court, under the circumstances, ordered the conveyance of the several portions to the purchasers without requiring any administration of the estate of the heir-at-law, the Candad Company, 7 Gr. 587.

Assets.]—Declaration, against defendants as heirs-at-law of J. A., who died seised of lands, on a covenant of J. A. to pay money, averring that there is no personal representative of J. A. The defendants pleaded riens per descent. The plaintiffs replied that the equity of redemption in fee of the said lands, subject to a certain mortgage to A. B. descended on defendants. On denurrer:—Held, insufficient, for not shewing legal assets in defendants. Rymal v. Ashberry, 12 v. P. 330.

Breach of Covenant.]—Held, that an heir could not sue on a covenant entered into with the ancestor, to convey land to him, his heirs and assigns, within a certain time, the heir not being mentioned in the covenant, and the breach having taken place in the ancestor's lifetime. Goodall v. Elmsley, E. T. 4 Vict. S.

Damages.]—In this Province, though not in England, the heir is only liable for the debts of his ancestor on descent of lands. He is not liable for unliquidated damages as, for instance, unon his ancestor's covenant for good title. Vankoughnet v. Ross, 7 U. C. R. 248.

Debts. — The liability of lands for debts under 5 Geo. II, c. 7, is not affected by the death of the debtor. He, or his heir or devisee after his death, may sell or convey to a bona fide purchaser for value, at any time hefore judgment has been entered against hum or his personal representatives, or execution against lands issued upon it; and such purchaser will have a good title as against evelitors. Levisconte v. Dorland, 17 U. C. R. 437, remarked upon. Reid v. Miller, 24 U. C. R. 610.

Entry.]—Where there is an adverse possession of land, an heir-at-law who has never entered, cannot make a conveyance so as to enable his vendee to recover in ejectment. Doc d. Dixon v. Grant, 3 O. S. 511.

The heir-at-law can convey land descended to him, before he enters. Doe d. Spafford v. Breakenridge, 1 C. P. 492.

Execution. |—For the purposes of an execution against lands, heirs are primâ facie bound by a judgment against the executor or administrator of their ancestor, in the same way as next of kin are bound; and although they are not entitled as of course to have the issues tried over again, still it is open to them to shew not only frand and collusion, but that the judgment or decree, though proper against the defendant, was in respect of a matter for which the heirs were not liable. Loved by, Gibson, 19 Gr. 280.

Heirs, being also next of kin, who had been parties to the continuing of the business of the deceased with his assets and those of his partner, were held precluded from objecting to payment by the estate of the losses incurred in continuing the business. Ib.

Lease—Right to Purchase.]—Simpson v. McArtiur, 8 Gr. 72, remarked upon, and over-ruled so far as the same decided that the right to purchase contained in a lease was personalty. Such right goes to the heir-at-law, not to the personal representative, on the death of the lessee. Henrikan v. Gallagher, 2 E. & A. 338.

New Trial to Have Date of Death Proved.]—See Beckett v. Foy, 12 U. C. R. 361.

Onus of Proof. —Where a party claims as one of the heirs of the half-blood of an intestate, and in his bill professes to set out how his interest arises, it is necessary for him to negative the fact of the intestate having obtained the land by gift or devise from his ancestor; or if he did so obtain it, the claimant must shew that he is of the blood of such ancestor. Tryon v. Pecr, 13 Gr., 311.

Simple Contract Debt. |—An action does not lie against an heir on the simple contract debt of his ancestor. Forsyth v. Hall, Dra. 304.

Surplus after Sheriff's Sale.] — The heir-at-law is entitled to recover from a sheriff the surplus of moneys arising from a sale of his ancestor's land, on a fi. fa. against those lands in the hands of the executors. Ruggles v. Beikie, 3 O. S. 276, 347.

Void Patent. — A patent was issued purporting to grant land to B, as daughter of a U. E. Loyalist, but B, had died six months previously: —Held, the patent being absolutely void, that the heir could not file a bill to set aside a conveyance executed under a power of attorney from B, alleged to have been forged. Brouse v. Crum, 14 Gr. 677.

VIII. JOINT TENANTS AND TENANTS IN COM-MON.

1. Joint Tenants.

Conveyance inter se.]—A conveyance in fee to A. by B., the survivor of two joint tenants, "of his undivided half of the lot." puts an end to the joint tenancy and makes the joint tenant B. till he die a tenant in common with A.; and B. by his will may devise the moiety he has not by his deed conveyed to A. Doe d. Eberts v. Montreuil, 6 U. C. R. 515.

Conveyance of Two Lots to Two Persons. |—By a settlement certain lands were conveyed to trustees, upon trust to hold the said land * * situated * * single lot No. 2 * * to G. A.; and also lot No. 1, situated * * to A. A., sons of the settler) * to A. A., sons of the settler) * to A. A., sons of the settler; and assigns, as joint tenants, and not as tenants in common * and, lastly, upon trust, that the said trustees * * shall well and sufficiently convey and assure, absolutely in fee to the said parties respectively, &c.":—Held, that this trust was an executed trust, in which the limitations were expressly declared, and that neither a difficulty in ascertaining the true construction and legal meaning of the words used, nor the final trust directing the trustees to make the conveyances of the legal estate, made any difference; and that the words must receive the same construction as if they were found in a common law conveyance:-Held, also, that an estate in fee in lot 2, passed to G. A., and that the words, "as joint tenants, and not as tenants in common," used to prevent G. A. and A. A. from taking as tenants in common, as it was supposed they would have taken under 4 Wm. IV, c. 1, s. and that they were needlessly used:—Held, also, that as G. A. died intestate and unmarried, after January 1st, 1852, the defendants, as the children of a deceased brother of the plaintiff, took an equal share in the lands as co-tenants in common with the plaintiff A A: that they were as much entitled to the possession of the lands as the plaintiff, and that the plaintiff having obtained the legal estate from the trustees should hold the same as a trustee for all the tenants in common :-Held, also, that there being no proof of ouster of the plaintiff he could not recover from the defendants any mesne profits in this action.

Adamson v. Adamson, 17 O. R. 407.

Two several lots were conveyed, by the deed in trust set out in the report, to C. and A. respectively to the use of G. and A., their heirs and assigns, as joint tenants, and not as tenants in common:—Held, that under the provisions of such deed, the grantees took the respective lots in severalty. Adamson v. Adamson, 7 A. R. 592, 12 S. C. R. 563.

Division of Property.]—Joint tenants in tail executed articles of agreement for a division of the property; and each went into possession, and for thirty-six years continued to enjoy the portion allotted to him, when a bill was filed to enforce the agreement:—Held, that the defendant could not set up as a defence to such bill that the plaintiff had by possession acquired a perfect title at law. Graham, G Graham, G Gr. 372.

Dower.]—The death of one joint tenant during their joint seisin, passes the title to the co-joint tenant free from dower of the deceased joint tenant's widow. Haskill v. Fraser, 12 C. P. 385.

Mortgagees. — Mortgagees are not trustees under 4 Wm. IV. c. 1, s. 48, so as to take jointly when the deed is silent as to the tenancy created. Doe d. Shuter v. Carter, H. T. 2 Vict.

Release by One.]—Granting that a release by one joint tenant would extinguish the right of both, it does not follow that entering into a new agreement by one will prejudice the right of the other. Clarke v. Union Fire Ins. Co., McPhec's Claim, 6 O. R. 635.

Release inter se.]—A release by one joint tenant to another conveys a fee, without words of inheritance. Ruttan v. Ruttan, M. T. 4 Vict.

Service of Notice.]—Semble, that service of notice to determine a lease upon one of two joint tenants is sufficient. Barrett v. Merchants Bank, 26 Gr. 409.

2. Tenants in Common.

Accounting.]—At common law there can be no action of account by one tenant in common or joint tenant, unless there has been an appointment of one by the other as bailiff. Gregory v. Connolly, 7 U. C. R. 500, Under the statute 5 Anne c. 16, however, one tenant in common, or joint tenant, may be sued as bailiff in an action of account, whenever he has entered and taken more than his just share of the profits, whether by appointment of his co-tenant or not. Ib.

Semble, that co-parceners, not coming within that statute, cannot sue each other in an action of account. The point, however, was not expressly decided, as the court held that in this case the facts shewed that the defend-ant entered into possession of the land not as a co-parcener, claiming through his wife and in privity with the plaintiff, but as an execuin privity with the plaintin, but as an executor claiming adversely to the plaintiff without his consent; and that on that ground the action of account would not lie. Ib.

Where one of several tenants in common, of a plaster bed, was in sole possession of the property, and had sold portions of the plas-ter, an account of his receipts therefrom was ordered in favour of his co-tenants. Curtis v. Coleman, 22 Gr. 561.

Chattel-Removal to Foreign Country.]-An action for conversion of his interest in a chattel lies by one tenant in common against his co-tenants in common if the chattel owned in common is destroyed by them, or so dealt with by them as, in effect, to put an end to his rights. In this case the removal of a brick-making machine to a foreign country was held sufficient to support the right of action, the plaintiff's power of enforcing his rights in the courts of this Province being thus interfered with McIntosh v. Port Huron Petrifich Brick Company, 27 A. R. 202.

Costs Incurred for Common Benefit. —Where costs were incurred by a tenant in common, suing on behalf of himself and his co-tenants, in restraining the committing of waste on the joint property by a stranger, it was held, that, on its being shewn that the suit was necessary and proper, and that it resulted in benefit to the co-owners, they should share the expense, in proportion to the advantage they had derived from the suit. Gage v. Mulholland, 16 Gr. 145.

Crops.]-H., by agreement with defendant, planted sixteen and a half acres of defendant's land with Indian corn and other crops, the agreement being that H. was to do all the work, and defendant to receive for his share as much Indian corn as should represent the portion of the land sown with sugar corn and potatoes, and one-third of the Indian corn, and that H, was to have the remainder. sequently, H., being indebted to the plaintiff on a note, sold his interest in the growing crop to the plaintiff, the price being allowed on the note. At a later period H, executed a bill of sale of the crop to the defendant, who afterwards claimed the entire crop as his and harvested it :-Held, that H. and defendant were tenants in common of the crop of Indian corn: that one tenant in common cannot maintain trespass or trover against his co-tenant for merely reaping and harvesting the crop; but he may, if his co-tenant has con-sumed the crop, or dealt with it so that he can-not retake it or pursue his remedies against the persons who have possession of it; and that under the circumstances of the case the court might assume, after verdict for the plaintiff, in the absence of any question raised on the point, that such events had happened as entitled the plaintiff to maintain his action against the defendant for conversion. Brady v. Arnold, 19 C. P. 42.
See, also, Culcer v. Macklem, 11 U. C. R.

Although the general rule is that the mere fact of one tenant in common holding possession of the entire estate, will not render him liable to a co-tenant, who might himself enter and enjoy the possession with the other, and the court will not in such a case interfere with the dealing of such co-tenant in regard to the property; still where the co-tenant in possession was the mother of the other cotenants, all of whom were infants at the time of her second marriage, the court, at the in-stance of one of the children who had attained majority, restrained the husband and wife from selling or disposing of the crops of the current year, or the proceeds thereof, unless they undertook to bring into court one-third of such proceeds; but refused to interfere with the possession of the mother and her husband in respect of previous years, although as to such previous years the mother might have been accountable to her infant children as trustee for them. Bates v. Martin, 12 Gr. 490.

Dower.]—Where a husband is seised as tenant in common, his wife may be endowed. Ham v. Ham, 14 U. C. R. 497.

Effect of Statute. |- The effect of C. S. U. C. c. 82, s. 10, is to create a tenancy in common only in cases where before the 1st July, 1834, there would have been a joint ten-aucy. In re Shaver and Hart, 31 U. C. R.

Farming in Partnership.]—A., of whom the plaintiff was administratrix, and defendant having worked and stocked a farm in partnership:—Held, that on the death of one, the survivor did not take the whole of the chattels, but that the maxim "Jus accrescendi inter mercatores locum non habet," applied. Rathwell v. Rathwell, 26 U. C. R. 179.

Joint Demise in Ejectment. | - Tenants in common cannot make a joint demise in ejectment. Doe d. McNab v. Sicker, 5 O. S.

Making Bricks.]-One tenant in common will be restrained at the suit of a co-tenant from digging earth for bricks on the joint property. Dougall v. Foster, 4 Gr. 319.

Mortgage-Insurance.] - One of several devisees claimed to be solely entitled, and mortgaged the property; and the mortgagees entered into the receipt of the rents:-Held, that they must account to the other devisees for their shares of the rents. MeIntosh v. Ontario Bank, 19 Gr. 155.

One of several tenants in common, being in sole possession of the premises and claiming to be solely entitled, insured the buildings on the property; the buildings having been de-stroyed by fire the insurance moneys were paid to the party insuring, and new buildings were erected by a person to whom he had contracted to sell the property:—Held, varying 19 Gr. 155, that the party insuring was entitled to appropriate the insurance money to his own benefit. McIntosh v. Ontario Bank, 20 Gr. 24.

Held, also, varying the original decree, that he was not entitled to any allowance in respect of the new buildings. Ib, Occupation Rent-Improvements.] - A tenant in common being in actual occupation of the joint estate forms no ground for charging him with rent. It would be otherwise, however, if he had been in the actual receipt of rent from third parties. Rice v. George,

One of several tenants in common, or joint tenants, making improvements on the joint estate, is not entitled to be paid therefor, unless, on the other hand, he consents to be charged with occupation rent. Semble, that one tenant in common selling timber off the joint property is not chargeable with sums realized therefrom. 1b.

Purchase by Husband of One Cotenant in Common. |—The defendant, husband of one of several tenants in common, being in possession of the joint estate, purchased the same at sheriff's sale, of which fact the co-tenants were aware, but took no steps to impeach the transaction until after such a lapse of time as that under the statute the defendant acquired title by possession. The court, on a bill filed by the other tenants in common, asking to set aside the sheriff's sale and deed on the ground of fraud and collusion between the defendant and execution creditor. negatived such charges, and dismissed the bill. with costs. Kennedy v. Bateman, 27 Gr. 380,

Quarry.]-One of two tenants in common of land, leased part of it as a stone quarry :-Held, that the other tenant in common was entitled to an injunction against further quarrying, and to an account against the lessee for one moiety of what had been already quarried. On a bill filed by the co-tenant against the lessor and lessee, alleging that the lessee had quarried stone outside the limits as well as within the limits of the lands demised, the lessee by his answer insisted on his right to quarry where he had, the limits of the acre really agreed to be demised being different from those mentioned in the lease, but did not submit to account for the stone quarried. At the hearing the court made a decree for an account with costs against the lessee. Good-enow v. Farquhar, 19 Gr. 614.

Release of Dower.]-Where a widow purported to release "all my dower * * * in, to, or out of all that certain * * * lot." Held, 1. That her dower was gone in the whole lot. 2. There was no accrual in favour of the other tenants in common. McDearmid v. Mc-Dearmid, 15 C. L. J. 112.

Rents and Profits. |-One of two executors and co-residuary legatees got in por-tions of the residuary estate, and as to such his estate was held liable as for a legacy to the other residuary legatee, 19 C. L. J. 95, Some of the residuary estate consisted of lands, which the co-residuary legatee as tenant in common occupied, or got in the rents and profits of :-Held, (1) that the account extended only to whatever had been paid or given by tenants or occupants of the joint property more than the co-tenant's just share or proportion. 2. That such co-tenant was not ble for the profits or produce taken by him from the common property, nor for his enjoyment of such property where there was no ex-clusion or ouster. 3. That the six years' bar of the statue of limitations applied to such claim. Re Kirkpatrick, Kirkpatrick v. Ste-venson, 10 P. R. 4.

Sale of Common Property without Authority.]—The plaintiff and L. were tenants in common of an oil well. They filled an oil tank with oil equal in quantity to 2,400 barrels, of which 1,600 belonged to the plaintiff and 800 to defendant, and they agreed that the oil was not to be sold under $5 a barrel; they were not partners. L., without authority, contracted for the sale of all the oil in the tank at $1.25 a barrel:—Held, on a bill against the purchaser, that L. had no right to sell the plaintiff's portion of the oil, and that the defendant's removal of it would be wrongful; but that as the oil was a staple commodity which had not any peculiar value. and as there was no fiduciary relation between the plaintiff and L., the plaintiff was not entitled to an injunction; and that his only remedy was an action at law. Mason v. Norris, 18 Gr. 500.

Special Agreement, |—In ejectment for part of the east half of a lot, it appeared that L., the patentee, in 1855, executed an agreement under seal, whereby he gave to his son J. his right, title, and interest of one half of the east half, with certain portions of the house, stipulating that he was to till the farm as usual, and give the father one-half of the produce, if demanded:—Held, that the effect of the deed was to give an undivided moiety of the half lot to J. Leech v. Leech, 24 U. C.

Timber.]-A tenant in common occupying the common property is not chargeable with the value of timber cut by him on such property during his occupation. Munsie v. Lind-say, 10 P. R. 173.

Trespass. |-One tenant in common may commit trespass by expelling his co-tenant and taking the whole enjoyment of the estate wrongfully to himself. Petrie v. Taylor, 3 U. C. R. 457.

Working Farms Together.] - Where the plaintiff and defendant, being each pos-sessed of a farm, agreed to work them together and divide the profits arising from them at the end of the season; and before the harvest defendant was dispossessed of his farm by ejectment, and the plaintiff thereupon gave him notice that he would not divide his crops with him, notwithstanding which the defendant entered the plaintiff's farm and took away his share of the crop :- Held, that the plaintiff could not maintain trespass against him. Wemp v. Mormon, 2 U. C. R. 146.

IX. MISCELLANEOUS CASES.

Charge on Land-Right of Occupation.] Charge on Land—Right of Occupation.;

—In January, 1841, B. devised to his daughter, the wife of defendant, the land in question in fee. In July following B, and the defendant and his wife executed a deed, reciting the will, and stating that the parties had mutually agreed that the defendant on his wife, both consequences are a size of the consequence o the parties had mutually agreed that the defendant and his wife should come upon the land and possess and enjoy it without the interruption of said B., his heirs or assigns, as long as defendant and his wife assigns, as long as derendant and ins wife should support the said B, and his wife in the manner described. The deed then set out, that in consideration of the will, and that B, did put defendant and his wife in possession, they had agreed to maintain the said B. and his wife during their natural lives; and that if defendant and his wife should keep their agreement, then the land was to become the property of the said defendant and his wife, their heirs and assigns for ever. B. lived with and was supported by defendant and his wife until his wife died in 1847. He afterwards married again, and in July, 1850, a few days before his death, made another will revoking all former wills, and directing his executors to sell all his land, and divide the proceeds equally among his four daughters. Defendant had made considerable improvements on the farm during his occupation:-Held, in ejectment brought by one of the four daughters, that the deed passed no estate of inheritance, and that nothing contained in it could operate as an estoppel on the devisees under the second will; that it gave only a right to occupy until testator's death, with the assurance that if the agreement were kept by defendant and his wife, he would make no alteration in his first will. Throop v. Edmonds, 12 U. C. R. 33.

Quere, whether defendant, having kept the condition on his part, would have any remedy against B.'s representative for breach of the agreement. Ib.

Charge on Land—Right of Occupation.]

—A father conveyed to one of his sons certain farm lands, subject to his own life estate therein, and subject also to the use by another son, the plaintiff, of a bed, bedroom and bedding, in the dwelling house on the farm, and to his board so long as the plaintiff should remain a resident on the farm:—Held, that the plaintiff took no estate under the deed, but merely the use, after the termination of the father's life estate, and while resident on the land, of the bedroom and board, which was a charge thereon; that no period was fixed for such occupation, which might be either permanent or temporary, and therefore no forfeiture was created by non-occupation. Wilkinson v. Wilson, 26 O. R. 213.

Charge.]—In an instrument under seal the words, "and for securing, &c., the said P. P. doth hereby specially bind, oblige, mortgage, and hypothecate the said piece or parcel of land," &c., pass no interest; they only shew an intention to create a charge or lien. Doe d, Ross v. Papat, 8 U. C. R. 574.

Covenant to Stand Seised.]—In ejectment, the plaintiff claimed under a sealed instrument executed in his favour by one M., and witnessing that in consideration of prior indebtedness for professional services, and to secure the plaintiff for future services, and to secure the plaintiff for future services of the same kind, and of the sum of £25 already paid and advanced by plaintiff to him, &c. ne. M. covenanted, granted, and agreed that he would stand seised and possessed of the land in question to the use of the plaintiff, his heirs and assigns, by way of charge, security, and mortgage on the land for said moneys and costs; and when the plaintiff's costs were taxed, he was to be at liberty to hold the instrument as and by way of a charge, mortgage, and security upon the land for the amount so to be ascertained, or M. would: and he covenanted that he or his heirs would, on demand, execute a good and sufficient mortgage in law, with bar of dower if necessary, and usual covenants, &c.:—Held, that the instrument could only operate under the Statute of Uses, as being granted on a money consideration, which appeared from the express recitals contained in it; and, semble, that full effect would be given to the whole instrument, and the real intent of the parties carried out by holding that it was to operate as a charge, security, and mortgage in equity on the land, until plaintiff's claim was ascertained by taxation, and so continue as an equitable charge unless the plaintiff desired a legal mortgage, which in that case M. covenanted to execute, Quere, whether the plaintiff took the legal estate so as to enable him to maintain ejectment. Miller, v. Stitit, 17 C. P. 550.

Deed by Reversioner, —Held, that the acceptance of a deed of land from the reversioner in fee did not of itself acknowledge any present right or interest in such reversioner, Wilkinson v. Conklin, 10 C. P. 211.

Effect of Livery of Seisin.]—Possession is evidence of livery of seisin of land; and where there is evidence of possession accompanying and following a deed for upwards of thirty years, seisin may well be presumed. Notan v. Foz. 15 C. P. 545.

panying and following a deed for upwards of thirty years, seisin may well be presumed. Nolan v. Fox, 15 C. P. 565.

By a deed dated 27th March, 1824, one J. S. leased land to H. S., to hold from the 30th day of the same month, until her decease:— Held, that though under the authorities, it might, if executed and livery of seisin given on the day it bore date, be void; yet if not executed or livery of seisin not given until after the day on which it was to begin to operate, it would be good; and semble, the jury might properly have been asked, under the peculiar facts of the case, to presume one or both of these propositions in favour of the plaintiff, the grantee under the deed. Ib.

A. by indenture, in 1826, in consideration of the rents and covenants by M. to be paid and performed, "granted, demised, and to farm let to M., his heirs and assigns," certain land, habendum, "unto the said M., his heirs and assigns, from the day of the date hereof, for and during the term of 21 years," yielding and paying yearly during said term to M., his heirs and assigns, is, 6d. There was a covenant by M. to pay rent, and by A. for quiet enjoyment during the term. At the end of the term M, gave up the lease to A., saying lie had no further claim, but he was allowed to continue in possession upon no definite understanding, and defendant went in after him. Upon ejectment brought by the devisee of A.:—Held, that without livery of seisin, the fee simple granted in the premises could not take effect, and the habendum for twenty-one years would stand; but a new trial was granted to determine the fact of livery. McDonald v. McGillis, 26 U. C. R. 458.

Semble, that the jury should not be directed

Semble, that the jury should not be directed to presume livery of seisin, as they would be if the possession had been held as on a claim of absolute ownership. Ib.

Entireties—Husband and Wife.]—Quare, whether the effect of the Married Woman's Acts may not be to do away with the estate by entireties, and make husband and wife, when devisees, tenants in common. Griffin v. Patterson, 45 U. C. R. 536.

Where a deed in a chain of title had been made to husband and wife as joint tenants:

—Held, following In re Shaver and Hart, 31 U. C. R. 903, that notwithstanding the terms of the deed the husband and wife took by entireties. And where the husband made a conveyance of the same land in the lifetime of his wife, she merely joining to bar her dower, and she predeceased her husband:— Held, that the husband's deed conveyed the fee, Re Morse, S P. R. 475.

Held, that a lease for life to a husband and wife makes them tenants by entireties, so that the whole accrues to the survivor. Leitch v. McLettan, 2 O. R. 587.

Estate by the Curtesy.]—See HUSBAND

Future Estate.] — See Thuresson v. Thuresson, 30 O. R. 504.

Growing Crops. |—By deed of conveyance of all and singular that certain parcel of land, &c. together with the houses and ensements, profits, privileges, hereditaments, &c., to said parcel of land belonging to or in anywise appertaining, and all the rents, issues and profits thereof, &c., growing crops in the ground at the time of the execution of the deed will pass to the grantee. Wood v. Lang, 5 C. P. 204.

Interest not Passing.]—A, received from B, a power of attorney to sell lands, Under this power A, delivered to C, a deed professing to be made as follows: "Between A., by and under power of attorney, bearing date, &c., by and from one B., &c., yeoman, of the first part, and C, of the other part." Throughout the deed, A., the said party of the first part, was made the grantor, and the deed was thus executed: "By power of attorney bearing date 14th April, 1849. (Signed) A, [L.S.], (Signed) C, [L.S.], "—Held, that A, being the granting party in the deed, and not B., B.'s interest did not pass by the deed. Dacksteder v. Baird, 5 U.C. E.

Semble, that even if B. had been made the granting party, the deed would have been inoperative from the informal mode of execution. Ib.

Interest Wrongly Described.]—If a party convey land and all his estate therein as heir-at-law of another person decensed, though he claim as devisee and not as heir-at-law, still the land passes. Doe d. Clark v. McLanis, 6 U. C. R. 28.

Mortragee of Term Cutting Timber.)
—The mortgagee of a term of years, being in possession of the mortgaged estate, will at the suit of the mortgaged estate, will at the suit of the mortgaged personal premises; although the mortgaged premises; although the mortgagee may have obtained the consent of the reversioner to what he is doing. Chisholm v. Sheldon, I Gr. 318.

Quere, whether the doctrine applicable in England between termor and reversioner in respect to felling timber, can prevail as to an estate in this country; the beneficial enjoyment of which is ordinarily attained, and can be generally obtained only through the destruction of the growing timber; and whether the doctrines of the common law as to growing timber can be applied in all their extent to forest land in this country. Ib.

Power of Attorney to Receive Share of Estate.]—One of the devisees of an estate sold her interest therein to her brother, and executed with her husband an instrument in the form of a power of attorney, authorizing the assignee for his own benefit to demand and receive of and from the executor, &c., all moneys which might become due and payable to her and her husband, or either of them, by virtue of all devises and bequests under the last will and testament of her father. In fact she was then entitled to a share of another brother's portion of the estate by assignment from him:—Held, that the instrument had not the effect of transferring the share of the wife in the portion of the brother so assigned. Pherrill V. Pherrill, 10 Gr. 580.

Pretended Title, |—A., the owner of certain lands, conveyed to the plaintiff by deed, which was never recorded; the plaintiff conveyed to others, who registered their deeds; the defendant A.'s son and heir-at-law, subsequently released to 8., and the release was also recorded; the defendant had never been in possession, but the persons to whom the plaintiff conveyed were. The plaintiff sued defendant for the penalty under 32 Hen, VIII. c. 9, for selling a pretended right; —Held, that 14 & 15 Vict. c. 7, would not apply in defendant's favour, for that only allows the sale of a right of entry, and as his father's deed was binding upon him, he had no such right, Baby q. t. v. Wetson, 13 U. C. R. 531.

In 1841 land was granted by King's College to G., who in 1849 conveyed it to a married woman, who, with her husband, was in possession at the time of the grant to G. The conveyance to the married woman was executed by her husband. The husband and wife lived together on the land till her death, in 1864, and the husband till 1870, he dying in January, 1889. In an action of ejectment begun in October, 1889, by the heirs-at-law of the wife against persons claiming through the husband:—Held, that the possession of the husband was not adverse at the time of the conveyance to G., and the conveyance to G. and the subsequent conveyance to the wife were operative, notwithstanding the statute 32 Hen. VIII, c. 9, hen in force, Marsh v. Webb, 21 O. R. 281, 19 A. R. 564, 22 S. C. R. 437.

Sale of Reversion.]—Although the number of persons in this country in the position of expectant heirs and reversioners is but small, still the same rule applies here as in England, the principle of the doctrine being that such persons need to be protected against the consequences of their own improvidence in dealing with designing men. Morey v. Totten, 6 Gr. 176.

Where the tenant for life was the father of the reversioner, but the son was not dependent upon him, and had no expectation from him, and both were illiterate persons:—Held, that the father's knowledge of the sale of the reversion by the son did not render such sale unimpeachable. Ib.

Special Words. — Held, that the words "all my right, interest, and estate of, in and to the estate of G. M. and M. M." in a conveyance, passed all the estate of the grantor in G. M.'s estate. O'Neil v. Carey, S. C. P. 339.

Statutory Conversion of Lunatic's Exatet,—One of several heirs of an intestate being lunatic, an Act of Parliament was procured authorizing the sale of the intestate's lands, and the investment of the lunatic's share in Government securities or mortgages for the benefit of the lunatic "and his representatives." The lunatic afterwards died; and in a proceeding to distribute his share, it was held, that this share, for the purpose of distribution, retained the character of realty, and was to be divided between his real representatives and not his next of kin. Campbell v. Campbell, 19 Gr. 2-3.

Timber Limits. — A bill was filed in respect of certain timber limits by two of the devisees and legatees of the original licensee thereof:—Held, that the suit ought to be by the personal representative, and a demurrer to the bill, on the ground that it was not so constituted, was allowed. Bennet v. O'Meara, 15 Gr. 396.

Vesting.]—By a deed of trust certain lands were conveyed to trustees for the benefit of an infant, to whom the trustees were to convey in fee on her attaining twenty-one:— Held, that the infant took a vested interest; and the court directed an inquiry as to her past and future maintenance. Stewart v. Glasgore, 15 Gr. 653.

1. In General.

Acceptance of Deed from Reversioner. — Held, that the acceptance of a deed of land from the reversioner in fee did not of itself acknowledge any present right or interest in such reversioner. Wilkinson v. Conklin, 10 C. P. 211.

Acceptance of Life Lease—Dowress.]—Where a father had conveyed a house and premises to his son in fee, and the sen afterwards made a lease to his father and mother for their joint lives, at a nominal rent, and on the same day the father and mother their joint lives, at a nominal rent, and on the same day the father and mother executed an agreement under seal to the son that he should occupy the house, except certain rooms in it, and take the rents and profits of the land upon certain coulditions, on breach of any of which he was to go out of possession, but the mother did not release her right under the statute:—Semble, that the mother could not, after the father's death, on the ground that she had not barred her freehold interest under the life lease, maintain ejectment for the whole of the agreement by breach of the conditions, although she was entitled to recover the rooms which were excepted from the son's occupation under the agreement. Doe d. Peck v. Peck, 1 U. C. R. 42.

Accepting in Part and Attacking in Part.]—Where a party succeeds in establishing the illegality of an instrument, he will not be allowed to enforce any stipulation that may be contained therein for his benefit. Attorney. General v. Niagara Falls International Bridge Co., 20 Gr. 430.

Agreement to Make Will—Maintenance.)—In January, 1841, B. made his will, devising to his daughter, the wife of the defendant, the land in question in fee. In July following, B. and the defendant and his wife, executed a deed reciting the will, and stating that the parties had mutually agreed that the defendant and his wife should come upon the land, and hold, and enjoy it, without the interruption or denial of him the said B., his heirs or assigns, as long as the defendant and his wife should support the said B. and his wife should support the said B. and his wife in the manner described. The deed then set out, that in consideration of the will, and that the said B. did put the defendant and his wife in possession, they had agreed to maintain the said B. and his wife during their natural lives; and that if the defendant and his wife should keep their agreement, then the land was to become the property of the said defendant and his wife, their heirs and assigns for ever. B. lived with and was supported by the defendant and his wife until his wife died in 1847. He afterwards married again, and in July, 1850, a few days before his death, made another will, revoking all former wills, and directing his executors to sell all his land, and divide the proceeds equally among his four daughters. Defendant had made considerable improvements on the farm during his occupation:—Held, in ejectment brought by one of the four daughters, that the deed passed no estate of inheritance, and that nothing contained in it could operate as an estoppel on the devisees under the second will: that it gave only a right to occupy until the testator's death, with the assurance that if the agreement were kept by defendant and his wife, he would make no alteration ir, his first will. Throop v. Edmonds, 12 U. C. R. 33.

Alteration of Bond.]—A person who has executed a deed cannot be bound by an alteration made in his absence by his verbal direction. Quere, whether, upon the evidence stated in the report of this case, defendant could be held estopped by his nets from disputing the bond so altered. Martin v. Hanning. 26 U. C. R. 80.

Assignment — Conversion.]—Held, under the special facts of this case, that the plaintiff was not estopped by his assignment to the Bank of Upper Canada, from treating these defendants as guilty of a conversion of his property. Capley v. McDonell, 8 U. C. R. 454.

Boundary—Grant Defining it — Grantee's Acquiescence Therein—Subsequent Attempt to Alter.]—See McArthur v. Brown, 17 S. C. R. 61.

Company-Amalgamation-Disputing Vatidity of Incorporation.] — Declaration, that before 16 Vict. c. 43, the plaintiffs, with others, promoters of the Grand Junction R. W. Co., incorporated thereby, had caused certain preliminary plans and surveys of the said railway to be prepared: that the line of said railway passed through plaintiffs' territory, and the plaintiffs under that Act defrayed their fair proportion of the expense of such plans, &c., which sum the said company, by force of said statute, s. 5, became liable to refund to the plaintiffs: that while so liable, the said company and the defendants were, under 16 Vict. c. 76, and a certain deed of amalgamation, formed into one company, and became amalgamated; and the Grand Junction W. Co. did intersect the main line, and said surveys have been appropriated by defendants to their own use, and by force of said acts defendants have become liable to pay to plaintiffs the said proportion so paid by them as aforesaid. Plea, that the capital stock in said Grand Junction R. W. Co. was not taken by the persons in said Act named, or any others, nor was any money ever paid upon it, and defendants never became stockholders in said company. Replication, that defendants should not be allowed so to plead, because, by the deed of amalgamation mentioned in the declaration, they united themselves with the Grand Junction R. W. Co., and recognized it as an existing company, and the same thereby became and has since existed as part of de fendants. Rejoinder, that defendants should not be precluded from their plea, because said deed was only made by authority of the provisional directors in 16 Vict. c. 43 named, but there never were any shareholders in said company, nor was said deed ever duly ratified by them, as required by the statute:-Held. on demurrer, rejoinder good; and that there was no such estoppel as relied on by the plaintiffs. United Counties of Peterborough and Victoria v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 18 U. C.

Court Sale-Party to Proceedings afterwards Attacking Title, - The Island of Anticosti, held in joint ownership by a number of people, was sold by licitation for $101,000. report of distribution allotted to plaintiff $16,578.66, for his share, as owner of one sixth of the island acquired from the Island of Antic sti Company, who had previously acquit-d one-sixth from Dame C. Langan, widow of H. G. Forsyth. The respondent's claim was disputed by the appellant, the daughter and legal representative of Dame C Langan, alleging that the sale by her through her attorney, W. L. F., of the one-sixth to the Anticosti company was a nullity, because the Act incorporating the company was ultra vires the Dominion Government, and that the sale by W. L. F., as attorney for his mother, to himself, as representing the Anticosti company, was not valid. The Anticosti company was one of the defendants in the action for licitation, and the appellant an intervening party; no proceedings were taken by the appellant prior to judgment, attacking either the constitutionality of the Island of Anticosti Company's charter or the status of the plaintiff, now respondent:—Held, that as Dame C. Langan had herself recognized the existence of the company, and as the appellant, her legal representative, was a party to the suit order-ing the licitation of the property, she, the appellant, could not now on a report of distribution, raise the constitutional question as to the validity of the Act of the Dominion Parliament constituting the company, and was now estopped from claiming the right of setting aside the deed of sale, for which her mother had received good and valuable con-sideration. Forsyth v. Bury, 15 S. C. R. 543,

Demise of Tolls—Coreant.]—A declaration in covenant stated that, by indenture made between the plaintiffs and defendants the plaintiffs demised to the defendants the tolls authorized by law to be received upon a certain turnpike road, for the term of one year: that defendants covenanted to pay a certain rent therefor; and that, by virtue of said demise, the defendants entered and were possessed for said term. Breach, non-payment of the rent:—Held, on demurrer, that defendants were estopped from denying the demise, and were bound by their express covenant to pay the rent; and that the non-execution by the lessors was no defence. Municipal Conneil of Frontenae, Lennox, and Addington
v. Chestnut, 9 U. C. R. 335.

Denying Grantor's Title.! — The grantor, antee, by taking a title from the grantor, does not estop himself from denying that his grantor was legally seised. Dittrick v. O'Connor, 7 U. C. R. 448.

Derogating from Grant.]—On the 15th December, 1848. O. conveyed to P. part of lot 33, and he conveyed by the same deed "as appurtenant to the land, a full, free and unrestricted right of way in, over, upon and along, and to use as a public highway or street, a certain strip of land of twenty feet in breadth adjoining the westerly side of the said parcel of land, extending from the highway aforesaid to the water's edge of the river St. Lawrence, at all times and seasons for ever hereafter.' In an action for obstructing the right of way by a boat-house:—Held, that it would be no defence that the boat-house was below highwater mark, though O.'s right only extended so far, for O. and the defendant claiming under him were estopped by O.'s deed to P.

which granted to the water's edge. Plumb v. McGannon, 32 U. C. R. S.

Derogating from Grant.]—In trespass q. c. f., it appeared that defendant conveyed to the plaintiff 19 acres of lot 2, described by metes and bounds, commencing at the N. E. angle of the lot. This starting point upon the ground was undisputed, and it was admitted that the description given enclosed the land claimed by the plaintiff:—Held, that defendant was estopped by his deed, and could not set up any question as to the boundary between lots 1 and 2. Crosswaite v. Gage, 32 U. C. R. 196.

Dower.]—In dower, by the widow of M., it appeared that a patent for the land issued to one K., and a witness proved that he was one of the subscribing witnesses to K.'s will, but the will was not produced, and no evidence of its contents was given. It was proved, however, that B., from whom defendants purchased, derived title through P., who held a bond for a deed from the patentee, and that P., before he sold to B., took a quit claim from M. of all his interest in the land, executed by M. only, in which it was stated that the land was devised by will to the said M. by K., the original grantee of the Crown:—Held, that no estoppel arose upon this deed, and that there was no proof of seisin in M. Minaker v. Haukins, Minaker v. Ashe, 20 U. C. R. 20.

Dower—Grantee of Claimant's Husband Disputing his Title. |—After the British North America Act came into force the Government of Nova Scotia granted to S. a part of the foreshore of the harbour of Sydney, C.B. S. conveyed this lot through the C. B. Coul Co, to the S. and L. Coal Co. S. having died, his widow brought an action for dower in said lot, to which the company pleaded that the grant to S. was void, the property being vested in the Dominion Government:—Held, that the company having obtained title to the property from S. they were estopped from saying that the title of S. was defective. Sydney and Louisburg Coal and R. W. Co. v. Sword, 21 S. C. R. 152.

Execution Creditor—Purchase of Mortgage—Benial of Mortgagor's Title, —An execution creditor who purchases and takes a transfer of a mortgage of property is not estopped thereby from setting up in an action against him for the seizure of the same property under his execution against the grantor of the mortgagor, that the said grantor was not the owner of the property in question and that the conveyance to the mortgagor by him was fraudulent and vold as against the creditors of the latter. Gordon v. Proctor, 20 O. R. 53.

Fixtures — Assignce of Mortgagor.] — A firm being indebted to the plaintiffs, mortgaged to them in fee certain land and premises, on which was erected an iron foundry with the machinery and fittings used in the business. Previous to this mortgage a prior owner of the land had already mortgage it in fee, which mortgage was still outstanding. The defendant, assignee of the firm, removed certain portions of the machinery, and a dispute arose with the plaintiff as to what part of the property so removed consisted of fixtures: —Held, that the defendant being assignee of the firm, could not set up the prior D—71.

mortgage as disabling them from mortgaging to the plaintiffs what they assumed to mortgage, and that the only question therefore was what portion of the articles mentioned formed part of the land. Gooderham v. Denholm, 18 U. C. R. 203.

Grantor Disputing his own Title. |-A., the patentee of lot 12 in the second con-cession of Reach, died intestate before 1843, leaving defendant B. his heir-at-law. By indefendant B. as nei-rat-raw. By in-denture bearing date 12th September, 1843, defendant B. without having entered on said lot, in consideration that the lessor of the plaintiff had sworn that the intestate (the original locates of the lot) had bargained and sold to him the said lot, and also in consideration of 5s., conveyed to the said lessor of the plaintiff the said lot in fee. This indenture plaintiff the said lot in fee. This indenture was registered on the 3rd June, 1850. By indenture, made 21st January, 1850, between the defendant B. and one Brown, then in possession of the north half of the said lot, the said Brown, for the considerations mentioned, had surrendered and assigned the said north half to defendant B. This indenture was registered on the 26th February, 1850. Also, by two several indentures bearing date 21st January, 1850, between defendant B. and de-January, 1850, between defendant B, and defendants C, and D, respectively, it was witnessed, that the defendant B, conveyed to defendant C, and D, respectively, the south half of the lot, viz., 50 acres of the said routh halt of each of the said defendants C, and D,; and said defendants C, and D, severally mortage of the said control said defendants C, and D, severally mortage of the said control said defendants C. and D. severally mortage of the said control said defendants C. and D. severally mortage of the said control said the said control said the said control said the said th gaged the property conveyed to them severally by said defendant B. These indentures were registered on the 16th February, 1850. It appeared that twelve years since, a man named W, was in possession of this lot, claim-ing under one Gideon Bullis; that a deed of bargain and sale of the lot existed (but was bargain and sale of the parentee of Bullis: that on the 11th October, 1838, Bullis executed a conveyance in fee of the lot to W., which was registered on the 24th February, 1850; that on the 18th March, 1841, ruary, 1850; that on the 18th March, 1841.
W. executed a conveyance to G. Brown, which was registered the same day; that Brown continued in possession of the north half ever since, and that defendants C. and D. entered into possession of the south half under him;—
Held, that defendant B. was estopped from disputing the title of his own bargained against his own deed; and as to the south half. against his own deed; and as to the south half, the defendants C, and D, being estopped from disputing his title as mortgage, were also estopped from disputing the title of the lessor of the plaintiff claiming under a deed from him. Doe d. Spafford v. Breakenridge, 1 C. P, 492.

Joint Covenant—Execution by One.]—A covenant in a deed professing to be made jointly by husband and wife, but executed only by the husband, is not sufficient to work an estoppel. Doe d. Tiffany v. McCreen, M. T. I Vict.

Lease with Option to Purchase—Disputing Title,—On the 9th January, 1844, one J. W. took possession of the land in question under an indenture of lease for four years executed by C., the owner, under power of attorner, at the rent of £15 a year. This instrument also contained the right to purchase for £250, £50 to be paid on the execution of the instrument and the balance in four instalments of £50 each, on the 9th January in each year, the first payment to be made on the 6th January, 1845, and if the purchase was carried out, in lieu of the rent reserved a sum equal to six per cent, on the original purchase money should be paid. J. W. made the first payment of £50 at the time of executing this instrument, and deposited £50 in the bank to meet the second, but the person in whom the legal estate was vested having died it was not paid, and nothing more was done. J. W., remained in possession until his death in 1850, when he was succeeded by his son, to whom it appeared that he had previously sold, and the son conveyed to the defendants, who entered and had been in possession ever since:—Held, that as the entry of J. W., under whom the son and the defendants chained, was under C., defendants could not object to C's title at the time of J. W.'s entry. Cchuac v. Scott, Cahuac v. Eric, 22 C. P. 551.

Lease—Statutable Objection to Title.]— Quaere, whether a tenant or licensee of land is estopped from disputing his landlord's or licensor's title as being void on a statutable objection. Hallock v. Wilson, 7 C. P. 28.

Lease by Life Tenant—Lessee Entitled to Reversion.]—A lease by a life tenant for a term certain to the reversioner containing a covenant by the lessee to pay rent to the lessor, "her heirs and assigns," does not estop the lessee from shewing that he has become owner on the lessor's death. Thatcher v. Bourman, 18 O. R. 265.

Lessee Acquiring Term.]—Where the assignee of a term, subject to a mortgage, becomes the owner of the fee by purchase, the reversion in the lands is bound in his hands for the parment of such mortgage, without repayment to him of the purchase money; and where he has obtained the conveyance of the reversion upon the representation that he is the assignee of the term, he is estopped from saying that he acquired it otherwise than as the conveyance to him shews. Building and Lonn Association v. Merkenzie, 28 O. R. 316, 24 A. R. 50, 28 S. C. R. 407.

Married Woman—Corement,!—A married woman may shew in answer to an action against her upon a covenant in a mortgage made by her husband and herself containing no recital of her ownership, given to secure part of the purchase money of land purchased by the husband, but conveyed to her, that the conveyance was taken merely as trustee for her husband, and not for her benefit; and this although the mortgagee or those claiming under him had no knowledge of her position. Gordon v. Warren, 24 A. R. 44.

Mortgagee — Merger.] — The plaintiff brought ejectment on the 6th September, 1885, claiming under a mortgage from W., the then defendant, in whose place M, was allowed to defend as landlord, claiming under a mortgage from W. to McI. assigned to him. The mortgage to McI. was given on the 9th November, 1861, and that to the plaintiff on the 21st March, 1864. On the 21st September, 1865, McI. by deed reciting an interlocutory decree in chancery in respect to the foreclosure of W.'s mortgage to him conveyed to M. as W.'s appointee, and on the 9th November, 1865, by a decree in the same suit, this mortgage was foreclosed. It was contended that the mortgage to McI. had merged in the inheritance, and could not be set up against the plaintiff, but—held, that if it were so, the plaintiff could not recover, for when he brought his action he was barred by the mortgage, and he could not avail himself of what took place afterwards. It was proved that the defendant, in April or May, 1865, asserted that he had got a deed of the equity of redemption from W:—Hold, however, that this might refer to the equity as created by the second mortgage, and that the defendant was not estopped from denying W.'s title to mortgage in fee in 1864. McKay, 25 U.C. R. 1325.

Mortgage—Possession.]—D, mortgaged to a signed to the plaintiff. D, then conveyed to the defendant, who took possession, and was recognized by the loan company as holding under them. The plaintiff brought ejectment, there having been no default under the mortgage to the loan company, which contained a proviso for possession by D, until default:—Beld, that the plaintiff was entitled to recover, for D, could not in the face of his mortgage deny A.'s right to possession (though A, might be ejected by the loan company), or that of the plaintiff as his assignee. Reid v. McBenn, S. C. P. 246.

Mortgage - Redemise - Estoppel on Estoppel. |-Defendant, being lessee for years, with a right to purchase the fee, in 1859 mortgaged to one S, for £75, payable in four years, with a proviso that until default defendant should hold possession. In 1861 he made another mortgage of the same premises to the plaintiff in fee for £118, payable in six years, with a similar proviso. In 1863 the first mortgage was assigned by S. to the plaintiff; and on ejectment brought by him upon it, defendant set up the proviso in the second mortgage, on which there had been no default :-Held, that the plaintiff was not estopped; for, 1. the second mortgage might take effect by passing an interest; 2. if the plaintiff was extopped by the second mortgage, defendant was estopped by the first, and an estoppel against an estoppel sets the matter at large; but, 3, semble, that the re-demise in a mortgage cannot operate, by estoppel or otherwise, to grant a greater estate than the mortgagor conveyed, out of which it is carved, and here he had no such title as he professed to pass. James v. McGibneu, 24 U. C. R. 155.

Mortrage of Shin—Disputing Title of Assignce, 1—befendant owning a vessel mortgaged her to C., and C. assigned the mortgage, with his other property, to the plaintiff in trust for creditors. The plaintiff having brought replevin to obtain possession:—Held, that defendant could not dispute the plaintiff's title, or set up that he was trustee for a foreign corporation, who by law could not hold ships. Paton v. Browne, 19 U. C. R. 337.

Partnership—Agreement in Firm Name.]
—Where an agreement under seal, but of a nature not requiring a seal, was executed by one of two partners in the name of the firm, and the partner not executing afterwards acted under and received the benefit of it, such agreement was sustained as his deed; and it was held that he could not be allowed to dispute the authority by which it was executed in his name. Bloomley v. Grinton, 9 U. C. R. 455.

Purchase of Land—Subsequent Sale by Sheriff—Disputing Validity after Agreement to Buy.]—In ejectment the plaintiff claimed through a deed from J. M. to J.; defendant claimed through a purchase at sheriff's sale under execution against J. M. After the sheriff's sale, J. entered into an agreement with D. the purchaser at such sale, by which D. covenanted to convey the hand to J. on payment of 8.43 within five weeks; the agreement to be void on morpayment. The money was mot paid. D. conveyed to on his paying M. 11.10 within a paid of the paying M. 11.10 within a peur M. would convey to him; that J. might sell within the year, and should have all he could get above $1,200; and that M. should have possession, which J. accordingly gave to blim. After this J. conveyed to the plaintiff —Held, that neither agreement estopped the plaintiff from objecting to the tile derived under the sheriff's sale or from setting up his legal title. Morrison v. Ster, 32 U. C. R. 182.

Purchaser from Sheriff Disputing Validity. |—A debtor being a vendee of the Crown of land, and in default in paying the purchase money, a creditor obtained execution against his lands, and purchased his debtor's interest for a sum equal to the debt and costs, and took the sheriff's deed accordingly: —Held, that he could not afterwards repudiate the purchase and claim his debt, on the ground that the debtor's interest was not saleable by the sheriff. Ferguson v. Ferguson, 18 Gr. 200.

Sale of Land—Removal of House.]—De-claration, for entering plaintiff's land, and also plaintiff's dwelling-house thereon, and removing the house therefrom, and converting it to defendant's use. Plea to so much of the count as refers to the dwelling-house, that before plaintiff became possessed and owner of the lot, defendants placed the said dwellinghouse thereon, so that it might thereafter be removed by them, not affixing it to the land and defendants afterwards, and while the tand was unenclosed and used as a common, and the house open and unoccupied, in the day time, peacefully entered the lot and removed the dwelling-house, the same being their property, and placed it on their own land, which are part of the trespasses complained of. Replication, that defendants should not be al-lowed to plead said plea, because they were entitled to an interest in said land, and built the house on the land, and occupied it, and afterwards, and before the trespasses, &c., by deed conveyed the land, with the appurtenances, to A., who conveyed to plaintiffs:
Held, replication good, by way of estoppel,
Cameron v. Hunter, 34 U. C. R. 121.

Sale—Subscount Deed to Grantor's Administrator, 1—Where A., having only a bond for the deed, and not having paid all the purchase money, convexed in fee to B. and died, and B. went into possession and continued for several years, when A/s administrator obtained a conveyance in fee to himself from the obligor:—Held, that the administrator by making use of the deed was guilty of a fraud, and that his title under it could not prevail against B. Doe d. Dobie v. Vanderlip, 5 O. 8, 85.

Sheriff's Deed—Land not Sold Included.]
—A sheriff's deed, being but a completion of the sale, is only good for land actually sold; a party therefore is not estopped by such a deed from proving by parol that portions of the land therein described as sold were not in fact included in the sale. Doe d. Miller v. Tiffany, 5 U. C. R. 79.

Special Deed.]—Construction of a deed in peculiar terms, set out in this case, as to its operation by estoppel. Doe d. Piquotte v. Piquotte, 4 U. C. R. 101.

Taking Benefit of Grant. |—By an arrangement made within ten years before this action of ejectment was begun, the land in question was conveyed by the owners of the legal estate to D., through whom the plaintiff claimed. One of the terms of the conveyance and a part of the consideration was that D. should, and he did thereby, release a debt which he held against the defendant and others. The defendant did not execute the conveyances, but he was an assenting party to the whole transaction, and was aware that the conveyance was being executed, and that D. was releasing his limitity:—Held, that he was estopped from setting up a prior adverse possession in himself as effectually as if he had been a conveying party. McDiarmid v. Hughes, 15 O. R. 570.

Taking Benefit under Conveyance. |-In 1841 land was granted by King's College to G., who in 1849 conveyed it to a married woman, who, with her husband, was in pos-session at the time of the grant to G. The conveyance to the married woman was exconveyance to the married woman was ex-ecuted by her husband. The husband and wife lived together on the land till her death, in 1864, and the husband till 1870, he dying in January, 1889. In an action of ejectment begun in October, 1889, by the heir-at-law of the wife against persons claiming through the husband:-Held, that the possession of the husband was not adverse at the time of the conveyance to G., and the conveyance to G. and the subsequent conveyance to the wife were operative, notwithstanding the statute 32 Hen. VIII. c. 9, then in force. The conveyance to the wife was made by the procurement of the husband, and he took an estate under it, and having no other right or title to the land, was estopped from denying the to the land, was estopped from denying the validity of G.'s title. Held, also, upon the evidence, that the plaintiffs were not estopped by the dealings of their ancestress with the land, and that the defendants were not entitled to be subrogated to the rights of a mortgagee in whose mortgage she had joined as a grantin whose mortgage she had joined as a grant-ing party, but which had been paid off and dis-charged. Marsh v. Webb, 21 O. R. 281, See this case in appeal, 19 A. R. 564, 22 S. C. R.

Ultra Vires Deed.]—The Act of incorporation of a railway company, the predecessors in title of the plaintiffs, which was incorporated for the purpose of constructing and operating a certain line of railway, conferred upon the company in respect of the disposition of lands acquired by them, "powers of letting, conveying and otherwise departing therewith for the benefit and on account of the company from time to time as they should deem processary." Nearly forty years before the commencement of this action the predecessors in title of the defendants laid pipes for conveying water along the railway track of the plaintiffs, predecessors, using them for such purpose almost continuously up to the present time, such privilege having been given to them by resolution of the directors of the company, who a few years subsequently passed another resolution, and in pursuance thereof executed a deed granting, releasing and confirming such right and privilege which at the time this action was brought had become vested in the defendants. The undertaking of the original railway company became vested in the plaintiffs, who, a few years before the commencement of this action desiring to alter the position of their track, gave notice of expropriation to the immediate predecessors in title of the defendants, and placed the track over the water pipes. The plaintiffs now sought to have the resolution and deed mentioned declared ultra vires, and also claimed an injunction restraining the user of the water pipes, and if necessary an order for their re-moval:—Held, that the resolutions and deed were ultra vires as not within the powers specified by the charter, or such as could fairly be regarded as incidental thereto, or reasonably derived by implication therefrom. also, that the plaintiffs were not estopped from asserting their own title and denying the de-fendants'. Held, lastly, that the defendants not having used and enjoyed their easement for forty years had not acquired a title thereto by prescription under R. S. O. 1887 c. 111, s. 55. Canada Southern R. W. Co. v. Town of Niagara Falls, 22 O. R. 41.

2. Estate by Estoppel.

Conveyance before Issue of Patent.]

—Where a nominee of the Crown before the issuing of letters patent, conveys in fee to one person, either by indenture or deed poll, and he afterwards obtains the patent to himself, and then conveys to another, who again conveys, the patentee of the Crown, and his assigns, as privies in estate, are estopped by the first conveyance, and the patent feeds the estopped and makes it a vested interest and estate. Doe d. Hennesy v. Muers. 2 O. S. 424, approved in Doe d. Tiffanny v. McErcan, 5 O. S. 508: Doe d. trvine v. Webster, 2 U. C. R. 224: Boulter v. Hamilton, 15 C. P. 125; Edinburgh Life Assurance Co. v. Allen, 23 Gr. at p. 235.

Where a nominee of land before patent issued conveyed it away, being unmarried, and afterwards, having obtained the patent, made a new conveyance to the same party, being then married:—Held, that his wife could not claim dower, as she was estopped by the deed made before the patent issued. McLean v. Laidlaux, 2 U. C. R. 2222.

Where the nominee of the Crown gave a bond for a deed of the land to be made when the patent should issue, and in the same bond conveyed and covenanted to guarantee the title:—Held, on ejectment by a grantee of the nominee under a deed executed after the patent issued, that this bond gave to the obagee no title by estoppel. Doe d. Metill v. Shea, 2 U. C. R. 483. Followed in Todd v. Cuin, 16 U. C. R. 516.

The plaintiff in ejectment proved a paper title, but the grant from the Crown did not issue until 1826, and the deed from the grantee was executed in 1824. This deed was lost, and the memorial of it produced as secondary evidence shewed it to be an ordinary conveyance in fee, but did not shew what coverants it contained. The plaintiff gave a notice under C. S. U. C., e. 27, s. 17, and defendant shewed no title:—Held, that the deed by the patentee should be presumed to have been one which would operate by estopel. Armstrong v. Little, 20 U. C. R. 425.

T., to whom the patent of the land in question issued, by deed poil made prior thereto, bargained, sold, aliened, and confirmed the land to L., habendum to L. and his heirs; with a covenant of warranty:—Held, that on obtaining the patent T. was estopped by the deed from setting up title in himself under the patent. Robertson v. Daley, 11 O. R. 352.

Declarations Contrary to Title. |-G W. F., being the patentee of a certain lot de-scribed as of 200 acres, but in which there was a deficiency, conveyed half of the lot to was a dencincy, conveyed han of the lot to J. B. P., who conveyed it to trustees, to hold in trust for E. F., wife of G. W. F., upon certain trust declared in the deed, and with-out power to her to anticipate. The deficiency was subsequently discovered and upon application to the government in the name of the trustees by G. W. F., whom they ap-pointed their agent for that purpose, a grant of land as compensation for the deficiency was made to the trustees of E. F., describing them as such. Subsequently an instrument under as such. Subsequently an instrument under seal, expressed to be made between J. B. P. of the first part, and E. F., wife of G. W. F., of the second part, and the trustees of the third part, which recited the facts and also that the trustees had no real interest therein, that the tristees and no real interest merely as being the legal owners of the original half lot, was executed by J. B. P. and E. F., whereby they declared that the parties of the first and second parts were not in any way interested in the lands granted as compensation, and that the trustees held them as trustees for G. W. F., the patentee of the original lot. After this F., the patentee of the original lot. After this the trustees, by the direction of G. W. F., con-veyed to E., under whom the defendants claimed. E. F. now brought this action to recover the land:—Held, that E. and those claiming under him must be held to have had notice of the title of the trustees, who were described in the patent as trustees of E. F.: that this land was subject to the trusts of the previous conveyance to them: that E. F. was not estopped by the declaration executed by J. B. P. and herself, which did not divest her of her title, and that therefore she was entitled to recover. Foott v. Ricc. 4 O. R. 94. Approved in Foott v. McGeorge, 12 A. R. 351.

Grant without Covenants—Title Subsequently Acquired,]—Held, that the deed in question in this case, which granted the land and not merely defendant's interest therein, though without covenants, operated by way of estoppel, and that the title subsequently acquired by defendant passed at once to the plaintiff. Todd v. Cain, 16 U. C. R. 516, and Doe d. McGill v. Shea, 2 U. C. R. 483, distinguished. Featherston v. McDonell, 15 C. P. 162.

Infant's Deed.]—Quere, whether the deed of an infant, unless legally avoided, would operate by estoppel to pass the title to the land as soon as the fee vested in him on obtaining his majority. McCoppin v. McGuire, 34 U. C. R, 157.

Lease after Mortgage—Reversion.]—8. having mortgaged certain land in fee, afterwards leased if for 21 years, making no mention of such mortgage in the lease. He then conveyed to the plaintiff in trust, subject to the mortgage. P., the assignee of the mortgage, proceeded to foreclose, and under a decree in chancery, the land was sold expressly subject to the lease to J., who received a conveyance from S. and P. and the plaintiff, each using apt words (bargain, sell, and release) to convey a legal estate in fee. On the same day, J. mortgaged to the plaintiff to secure a balance of the purchase money. This mortgage had been discharged before action by certificate duly registered, and the plaintiff sued defendant, who was a mortgage of the term by assignment, for rent accrued during the existence of the mortgage:—Held, that though S., when he leased, had only an equity of redemption, yet as this fact did not appear in the lease, he had a legal reversion by estoppel as against the tenant. Cameron v. Todd, 22 U. C. R. 39, 2 E. & A. 434.

Mortgage—Subsequent Deed to Mortgagor.]—See Trust and Loan Co. v. Ruttan, 1 S. C. R. 564.

Mortgage before Title. | -- McM., in Mortgage before Title. — McM., in building a house, by mistake built part of it on the land of the adjoining owner B. On discovering this he applied to B. with a view of purchasing a portion of B.'s lot, and B. on 29th July, 1889, wrote: "I hereby offer to sell you twenty-five feet frontage for the sum of 8250, to be paid six months from this date, otherwise this offer to be null." and B. accepted such offer at the foot in the words, "I hereby accept the above offer," McM. seven days after registered a plan as McM. seven days after registered a plan as No. 327, alleged to be of his own property, but which included the twenty-five feet as part of lot M., and the next day executed a mortgage on lot M. with a description, which included the twenty-five feet, and which was assigned to the defendants the O. S. Co. B.'s offer to sell to McM, was not acted on within the six months limited, and B. afterwards, in January, 1883, sold and conveyed the twenty-five feet (which was called lot 40 on his (B.'s) plan No. 396, registered 26th Janu-(B.'s) plan No. 396, registered 20th January, ISS2) to McM, for $400, payable $100 cash and mortgage for $300, which mortgage was at the instance of B, taken to his daughter N., the plaintiff. The O. S. Cosmbsequently sold under the power of sale in their mortgage to the defendant W. In an action by N, to realize her mortgage, it was:
—Held, that the original dealing between B. and McM. created no binding contract on the latter, it being merely an option given him; and he not having completed the purchase within six months the subsequent sale and conveyance by B, to McM, was upon a new and distinct contract. No interest in the twenty-five feet (lot 40) passed to the O. S. Co. under McM.'s mortgage, and the subsequent conveyance to him "fed the estoppel" created by his prior mortgage to the extent only of McM.'s interest which was that of owner of the equity of redemption, or owner the twenty-five feet (lot 40) charged with $300, and it made no difference that the $300 mortgage was taken to the plaintiff instead of to B., the effect of the whole transaction being that W. was the owner of lot 40 subject to a first mortgage of $300 in favour of the plaintiff and to a second mortgage of the O. S. Co. B. having by his dealing with McM. created in him the status of owner, and in the plaintiff that of mortgagee, was not, nor was the plaintiff, in a position to complain of the registration of plan 327. Doe Irvine v. Webster, 2 U. C. R. 234; Doe Hennessey v. Meyers, 2 O. S. 424, observed upon. Nexitt v. McMurray, 14 A. R. 126.

Mortgage for Balance of Purchase Money. —The plaintiff agreed to sell a par-cel of land, one-half of the purchase money to be paid in cash and the other half to be secured by a mortgage thereon. A deed and mortgage were prepared and executed, the cash payment made, and the deed delivered to the purchaser, the mortgage being delivered to the vendor's agent to be registered. The pur-chaser had obtained a loan of the cash payfrom the defendant upon the security of a first mortgage to be given upon the land in question, and this mortgage was prepared, executed and delivered before the execution and delivery of the deed and was registered before the deed to the purchaser and before the mortgage to the plaintiff. Upon receiving the deed the purchaser handed it to the defendant's agent, who then registered it, the plaintiff's mortgage having in the meantime been also registered. The plaintiff and the defendant acted in good faith and each without knowledge or notice of the other's mortgage: —Held, that the Registry Act did not apply: that the defendant's mortgage was valid only by estoppel and was fed by estoppel to the extent only of the interest taken by the purchaser under the deed; that that interest was subject to the right of the plaintiff to have a legal mortgage for the balance of purchase money, and that the plaintiff's mortgage was therefore entitled to priority. Nevitt v. Mctherefore entitled to priority. Nevitt v. Mc-Murray, 14 A. R. 126, applied. McMillan v. Munro, 25 A. R. 288.

Quit Claim without Covenants.—M. C. made a voluntary deed of certain land to L. C. At that time M. C. had no title to the land, it having been previously sold for taxes and conveyed by sheriff's deed to B. There were no recitals or covenants for title in the deed to L. C., and by it M. C. did "assign, transfer, demise, release, convey, and for ever quit claim" to L. C., his heirs and assigns, all his estate in the land. Subscuently B. sold and conveyed the land to M. C.;—Held, that the deed from M. C. to L. C. did not operate by estouped to vest the estate in the land subsequently acquired from B. in L. C., for (1) there was no recital or covenants for title; (2) it did not purport to grant any estate in the land, but merely to assign or release and quit claim to L. C., M. C's interest therein; (3) it never had any operation, for L. C. never paid anything for the land, never went into possession, never claimed to be owner of its open constant of the first repudited. The constant of the const

It is a firmly established rule of property in Ontario that covenants for title are sufficient to work an estoppel, though it is otherwise held in England. Ib.

3. Parties and Privies.

Alienage. —The defendant in ejectment, under the facts stated in the report, was held not estopped from setting up the alienage of S., for he claimed under H., whose title he supported against that of S. Her v. Elliott, 32 U. C. R. 434.

Assigns of Patentee.]—A nominee of the Crown before the issuing of letters patent made a conveyance in fee to one person, after which the patent was issued to him, and he then conveyed to another, who again conveyed:—Held, that the patentee of the Crown, and his assigns as privies in estate, were estopped by the first conveyance, and that the patent fed the estopped and made it a vested interest. Doe d. Hennesy v. Myers, 2 O. S. 424, approved. Doe d. Tiffang v. McEwin, 5 O. S. 598.

Dower-Release. |-In dower, it appeared that after recovery in ejectment against the husband by the purchaser at sheriff's sale of the husband's estate in the land in question, but before judgment entered, and while the husband was in actual possession, his wife joined with him to release her dower in a conveyance in fee of the land, by way of bargain and sale, to a third party. No money consideration passed, the grantee executing a mortgage back for the whole purchase money mentioned in the deed to him, and the husband remained in possession until disposses-sed by the sheriff under process in the eject-ment suit. The defendants, the tenants of the land, claimed under the purchaser at sheriff's sale: Held, that the demandant was entitled to her dower: that though the bargainee acquired an estate as against the husband, and perhaps against the wife also, by estoppel, the defendants, being no parties to the deed, but claiming adversely to it, could not conclude the demandant from saying she had not released her dower to a purchaser. Miller v. Wiley, 17 C. P. 368.

Dower—Two Decds.]—In dower the tenant proved a deed made in 1831 of the land in question by J., the deceased husband, to the tenant; and in reply the demandant proved another deed made in 1834 by J. to his father, to which the tenant was a subscribing witness:—Held, that as either deed shewed the estate out of J. during his lifetime, it was unnecessary to consider the effect of the tenant being a subscribing witness to the second deed; and in any event as J. could not set up the second deed to avoid the first, having made both, neither could the demandant who claimed through him. Scratch v. Jackson, 26 U. C. R. 189.

Interpleader—Claimant Denying Debtor's Title after Purchase from Him.]—Where in an interpleader issue (the execution creditor being defendant) it appeared that the plaintiff had taken a bill of sale of the goods in question from the execution debtor while the f. fa. was in the sheriff's hands:—Held, that he was not thereby estopped from denying the debtor's title, this action not being upon the deed, and between other parties. Macaulay v. Marshall, 20 U. C. R. 273.

Mortgage and Deed. |—To a declaration on a covenant, for quiet enjoyment in a mortgage to the plaintiffs excented by T., the defendants "grantee, one defendant pleaded that T. did not after the making of the deed convey to the plaintiff. The deed from defendants to T. was dated 22nd June, and the mortgage from T. to the plaintiffs was dated 10th April, 1855. Both were registered on the 28th July, the deed first. It appeared that there were two mortgages from T. to the plaintiffs on another lot when this mortgage was made, and instead of which it was given. After executing this mortgage, T. found that a deed from the defendant to him was necessary to give him the legal title, and he got the deed in question. The two mortgages were not discharged until the 16th August:—Held, that if the mortgage had been delivered before the decel (which the facts did not shew), the defendants would not have been liable on the ground of estoppel, for the estoppel would apply to T. only, not to defendants. Trust and Loan Co. v. Covert, 32 U. C. R. 222.

Purchase—Discent.]—Where A. made a mortgage of his property to two persons at different times, and died after the time for payment in the first mortgage, without having redeemed either, and the first mortgage having taken possession sold to A.'s heir for a valuable consideration, who entered into possession and died, leaving B. his heir, who was also A.'s heir:—Held, that the second mortgage, having a mortgage of the equity of redemption only, could not bring ejectment against B., who was in by purchase, and not by descent, and was therefore not estopped by A.'s deed, Doe d. Gillespie v. Macaulay, H. T. 7 Wm. IV.

4. Receipts.

Assignment of Lease.] — Plaintiff assigned to defendant his interest in a certain lease by deed, containing a receipt for the consideration money, $350. This deed was placed in K.'s hands to hold till defendant deposited this sum. K. delivered it to defendant on his afterwards paid him $75. saying he would hand him the balance as soon as he obtained it. On being asked again he said he had the mot sy, but that the plaintiff should pay part of the *spense of a bond which he had to give respecting the title. Plaintiff then sued upon the common counts, for the purchase money of land and on an account stated:—Held, that he was estopped by the receipt under seal, and could not recover on either count. Cocking v. Ward, I. C. B. SS, distinguished, as to the account stated. *Sparling v. Savage, 25 U. C. R. 259.

Bill of Sale—Action against Third Person,1—The sheriff, in an action for the purchase money of goods sold, was held not estopped, under the facts stated in this case, from denying the payment by the neknowledgment under seal, in the bill of sale, of receipt from G., the trustee and agent of the defendants, the purchasers; for it was not specially pleaded, the action was not upon the deed nor against a party to it, and there was nothing on the face of it to connect G, with defendants. Carrall v. Bank of Montreal, 21 U. C. R. 18.

Consideration Expressed.]—Where a father intending in the distribution of his property to give his son 100 acres of land, was induced by the son to exchange that land for the property of a stranger, the father paying £125 for such exchange, and the son promising to repay it, so that it might go in the distribution to the rest of the family; and the father then for a nominal consideration, conveyed to the son the land received in exchange:
—Held, that the executors of the father might maintain an action against the son for the £125 as money paid to his use; and that they were not estopped by the consideration stated in the deed. McBride v. Parnell, 4 O. S. 152.

Grant—Purchase Money.]—In an action for the purchase money of land conveyed, a

Plaintiff sold and conveyed to defendant certain land, the deed centaining a receipt for the purchase money also indorsed. Plaintiff then sued defendant upon the common counts for the perchase money of the land, on an account stated. The defendant pleaded, among other pleas, payment. After the sale defendant told one M. that he had only paid plaintiff $41, and offered to pay him (M.), whatever plaintiff was welling he should. It also appeared, though not very clearly, that the plaintiff was present at this conversation:—Held, following the two last cases, that the plaintiff was present at this conversation:—Held, following the two last cases, that the plaintiff was present at this conversation:—Held, following the two last cases, that the plaintiff was present at the receipt in the deed and that he could not recover on either count. Casey v. McCall, 19 C. P. 30.

Plaintiff in August, 1867, conveyed to defendant certain land, by deed containing a receipt for the purchase money. It appeared, however, that when this conveyance was made, some question being raised as to plaintiff's title, the defendant retained $100 of the purchase money, and in October following, gave the plaintiff the following agreement: "Harriston, 1st October, 1867. Fifteen months after date, I promise to pay to the order of W. H., or bearer, the sum of $100, providing that the title is good, on lots known as town hall, court house, and fair ground, situated on the north side of Elora street, for value received." these being the lots conveyed. Plaintiff sued defendant on this agreement, and on the common counts, to which defendant pleaded payment:—Held, that the plaintiff was estopped by the receipt in the deed, which included this $100, and that he could not recover. Harrison v. Preston, 22 C. P. 576.

Sale of Ship—Executory Agreement.]—Action on the common counts, and on an agreement between plaintiff and defendant, dated 8th of April, 1873, by which, in consideration that the plaintiff would deliver to defendant at Port Maitland, when requested, that portion of the rigging of the vessel R. D. then on board the said vessel, the defendant would pay the plaintiff $400. The defendant pleaded payment before action, and release by deed. At the trial this agreement was proved, and one of even date, under the plaintiff's hand and seal, by which the plaintiff sold to the defendant for $800, the receipt whereof was acknowledged, the body and hull of the R. D., and also his rights in a contract for stripping said vessel, and any payments due from the T. Insurance company for stripping said vessel, or from defendant for any work done under the contract to strip the vessel. It also appeared that the vessel having run upon a reef in lake Erie, the plaintiff had been employed by the T. Insurance company to strip her and put the outfit in a place of safety, for which he was to receive $250 and the hull. Defendant bought the outfit from the insurance company for $800. The defendant tonly paid the plaintiff $400 on the agreement now sued on:—Held, that the plaintiff was not estopped by the receipt in the deed from shewing that the agreement now sued on:—Held, that the plaintiff was not estopped by the receipt in the deed from shewing that the agreement sued on was part of the consideration for said deed, and that the $400 mentioned in said agreement was unpaid. Smith v. McCallum, 34 U. C. R.

5. Recitals.

Agreement between Others.]—B., a married woman, in order to carry out an agreement between her husband and his creditor, consented to convey to the creditor, a farm, her separate property, in consideration of the transfer by her husband to her of the stock and other personal property on, and of indemnity against her personal liability on a mortgage against, said farm. The conveyance, agreement, and bill of sale of the chattels were all executed on the same day, the agreement, to which B. was not a party, containing a recital that the husband was the owner of the again that the husband was the owner of the containing a party of the containing a recital that the husband was the owner of the recital markets. The chattels having subsequently hen seized under execution against the husband it was claimed, on interpleader proceedings, that the bill of sale was in fraud of the creditor:—Held, that the recital in the agreement worked no estopped as against Bz; that as it appeared that the husband expressly refused to assign the chattels to his creditor there was nothing to prevent him from transferring them to his wife; and that the court of appeal rightly held the transaction an honest one, and B, entitled to the goods and to indemnity against the mortgage. Boulton v. Boulton, 28 S. C. R. 502.

Bond to Indemnify Sheriff—Expired Writ.]—Action on a bond reciting that the plaintiff as sheriff had seized goods under a ft. fa. at the suit of G. v. C., and conditioned to be void if the obligor should deliver the same to the sheriff at such time and place as he should appoint. Plea, that at the time pointed out for delivery the sheriff had no writ at the suit of G. under which he could have sold said goods. At the trial the only writ produced was one tested the 21st May, 1859, and spent. Issue having been taken, and a verdiet rendered for defendant on this plea:
—Held, that there must be judgment non obstante, for as the bond expressly admitted a levy under this writ, defendant could not object to the plaintiff's right to sell, and the plea therefore formed no defence. Fortune v. Cockburn, 22 U. C. R. 359

Bond to Indemnify Sheriff—Recital of Ownership.]—The sheriff, holding executions against defendant at the suit of different parties, took from him a bond reciting that he had seized his goods, and indemnifying the sheriff "against any loss, damage, or liability, which may be incurred by reason of the execution, the wrongful execution, or non-execution of the said writ." The sheriff afterwards sold the goods contrary to defendant's wish, who informed him that they belonged to one G. G. brought trover against the sheriff, proved a bonâ fide bill of sale, recovered the value of the goods and registered his judgment. The sheriff then sued defendant on his bond:—Held, I. That the defendant was not estopped by the recital from denying his property in the goods. 2. That although the damage accruing to the sheriff came literally within the condition of the bond, yet that the defendant, having expressly objected to the sale, would not be liable. Corbett v. Hopkirk, 9 U. C. R. 479.

II. BY RECORD.

Conveyance Reciting Indebtedness.]
—Defendant being indebted to plaintiff by an indenture reciting his indebtedness, and that he had agreed with plaintiff for the repayment of the said sum due within six mouths from date, with interest, conveyed to plaintiff certain lands, habendum in fee: Proviso, that the plaintiff, if the debt was duly paid, would re-convey. In an action to recover the money:—Held, that defendant could not deny that he was at the date of said indenture indebted to the plaintiff. Allnutt v. Ryland, 11 C. P. 200.

Deed Poll. — Held, that the recitals in the deed poll in this case, were not binding on the grantee, they being entirely the language of the grantor; and consequently that the grantee was not estopped from setting up the contrary in an action not founded on the instrument and wholly collateral to it. Minaker v. Ash, 10 C. P. 363.

Dower—Road for Maintenance.]—The demandant in dower had accepted for her claim as dower, a bond from the tenant of the land for the purpose of securing to her, as part of a family arrangement, a maintenance, which, after enjoying for some time, she relinquished. She had also added her own hand and seal to the bond:—Held, that even though the recitals in the bond did not operate by way of estoppel, a jury was warranted in finding that it amounted to a satisfaction of the plaintiff's claim to dower. Germain v. Shuert, 7 C. P. 316.

Lease—Alleged Title Recited.]—Held, that defendants were not estopped by the lease under which they claimed from denying the power of the lessor to lease, for the recitals professed to shew what title he had. Lyster v. Kirkpatrick, 26 U. C. R. 217.

Release by Beneficiaries—Estoppel interse.]—A testator by his will devised to his son G. "the property I may die possessed of in the village of M., also lot 28 in the 10th concession of B." In the early part of the will be had used the words "wishing to dispose of my worldly property." The testator did not own lot 28, and the only land he did own in the 10th concession of B, was a part of lot 29. The will contained no residuary devise:—Held, that the part of lot 29 owned by the testator did not pass by the will to the son. After the death of the testator, all his children executed a deed of release to the executors of his will, containing a recital that the part of lot 29 owned by the testator was devised to the son G., and that he was then in possession:—Held, that there was no estoppel as among the members of the family, who together constituted one party to the deed, Held, however, upon the evidence, that G. had acquired a good title to the lands in question by virtue of the statute of limitations. Re Bain and Leclie, 25 O, R. 133.

Title—Sub-Grantec not Bound by Recital of Grantec's Seisin.]—A. conveyed to B., covenanting that at the time of making the conveyance, he was seised in fee simple. B. afterwards conveyed to C., reciting that he was then possessed in his own right of the land in question:—Held, in an action by C., the assignee of B., against A., upon the covenant, that C. was not estopped by B.'s recital. Gamble V. Recs, 6 U. C. R. 396.

General Rule. |—"Where the cause of action is the same and the plaintiff has an opportunity in the former suit of recovering that which he seeks to recover in the second, the former recovery is a bar to the latter action. To constitute such a former recovery a bar however, it must be shewn that the plaintiff had an opportunity of recovery, and but for his own fault might have recovered in the former suit that which he seeks to recover in the second action." Per Willes, J., in Nelson V. Couch, 15 C. B. N. S. 108, quoted in Davidson v. Belleville and North Hastings R. W. Co., 5 A. R. 30.

Allegation of Legal Effect.]—Where a party alleges the legal effect and operation of an instrument, he is bound by such allegation. Foster v. Beall, 15 Gr. 244.

Assault — Bar of Civil Remedy.] — See CRIMINAL LAW, 1X. 3.

Assignce in Insolvency — Status.] — Declaration by plaintiff, as assignce in insolvency of McM., on the common counts. Plea, that McM. was not a trader within the meaning of the Insolvent Act of 1893. Replication by was of estoppel, setting out in full the pourt, signs and adjudication in the insolvent court, signs and adjudication in the insolvent the Judge to set it adds. At that the petitioned the Judge to set it adds decided that he was a trader, and that such decided that he was a trader, and that such decided that he was a trader, and that such decided that he was a trader, and that such decided that he was a stander, and that such decided that he was a stander, and that such decided that he was a stander, and that such decided that he was a second that we was a decided that he was a trader, and that was a trader, and that was a trader, and that was a decided that he was a trader, and that we was a decided that he was a trader, and that we was a decided that he was a trader, and that we was a decided that he was a trader, and that we was a decided that he was a trader, and that we was a decided that he was a decided that he was a decided that he was a trader, and that we was a decided that he was a decided Assignee for Creditors.—Previous Action by Creditors.]—To a bill filed by the assignee in insolvency of P. D., for the creditors other than D. and J. S., to impeach a sale of real estate to defendant, the answer set up that before the proceedings in insolvency a bill was filed by D. and J. S., as execution creditors, on behalf of themselves and all other creditors who should contribute to the expenses of the suit, for the purpose of avoiding the conveyance in question as a fraud upon creditors, and that the bill was dismissed upon the merits. It was further alleged, that the case made by the two bills was substantially the same, and that defendant believed that the evidence in this suit would be similar in effect to that upon which the decree refusing relief was foundei:—Held, that the decree was not a bar to this suit. Smith v. Dople, 4 A. R. 471.

Assignment for Creditors—Subsequent Judgment against Assignor.]—S. was an assignee for the benefit of creditors of J. E., and G. was similarly assignee of E. H. E. Before the assignments J. E. was a creditor of E. H. E. for money lent, and as holder of certain notes. After the assignment S. obtained a judgment against E. H. E., but G. refused to recognize S. as a creditor on E. H. E., se estate by virtue of the judgment. S. then brought an action against G. for an account of G.'s dealings with the estate of E. H. E., and for payment of the judgment. G.

set up the statute of limitations:—Held, that the judgment recovered against E. H. E., after his assignment in an action to which G. was not a party was not even primă facie evidence against G. Eccles v. Lowry, 23 Gr. 167, considered. Stewart v. Gage, 13 O. R. 458.

Assignee.]—On proceeding with the reference under the decree pronounced on the hearing, as reported 28 Gr. 356, the master by his room found that there was due to the plaintiff $1,104.59, which included a sum of $171.32 costs incurred in the suit brought by him to redeem:—Held. (1) that the plaintiff was entitled to claim the costs so incurred, that proceeding having been taken in reality in defence of his rights as owner of an equity of redemption with the concurrence of C, through whom the appellant claimed; and, pute the findings in that suit, but were extopned from questioning the amount found due therein to the same extent as Jarvis under whom they claimed would have been, the proceeding not being in respect of a matter collateral to the mortgage in question in that suit, but virtually upon the same instrument, and that therefore the rule as to estoppel by deed applied. Pierce v. Canavan, 29 Gr. 32.

Saliff — Sureties.] — Declaration against a bailiff of a division court and his sureties on their covenant, under C. S. U. C. c. 19, s. 25, alleging that the bailiff under an execution against B., wrongfully seized and sold the plaintiff's goods, and received the proceeds; that the plaintiff having sued the bailiff in the county court, the bailiff issued an interpleader summons, on which the Index of the diskington. Bailiff-Surcties.]-Declaration against a summons, on which the Judge of the division court determined that the plaintiff owned the goods and was entitled to the money received by defendant, with the costs; that the bailiff still refused to pay the money to the plaintiff, whereupon the plaintiff proceeded with his suit in the county court, and issued execution thereon, which was returned nulla bona. And so the plaintiff alleged that the bailiff had neglected to pay said money so received by him as such bailiff to the plaintiff, being the party entitled thereto, and had misconducted himself in his office to the plaintiff's damage. Plea, by the sureties, that the said bailiff did pay to the plaintiff all the money he had received by virtue of his office, to which the plaintiff was entitled, and had not misconducted himself, &c.:—Held, that no cause of action upon the covenant was shewn; that the wrongful act of the bailiff, in seizing by mistake the goods of a stranger, was not misconduct or neglect of duty for which his sureties were liable; that the money received by him, though not received for the plaintiff at first, became the plaintiff's by virtue of the interpleader order, but that the plaintiff had lost his right to sue for it upon the covenant by proceeding with the county court action, and obtaining judgment there. McArthur v. Cool, Nixon v. Stafford, 19 U. C.

An action against the sureties of a division court clerk for moneys received by him for the plaintiff having been referred to arbitration, the arbitrator submitted a special case, stating that in 1858, the plaintiff sued the clerk for goods sold to him; that the clerk then produced a memorandum of settlement between them, signed by the plaintiff, relating to suits in the division court, which shewed a sum of £30 0s. 8d. due to the clerk; and that the Judge thereupon, against the clerk's wish, and without any particulars of set-off having been given, treated this as a set-off and deducted it from the plaintiff's claim. The sureties, defendants in the suit referred, contended that the plaintiff's demand then sued for being a private account against the clerk, that sum was improperly set off, and they claimed to have it credited to them in this action against moneys since acceived for the plaintiff;—Held, that what had been done in the former suit could not be thus reviewed, and that as the clerk could not take credit a second time for this sum as against the plaintiff, neither could his sureties. Franklin v. Gream, 20 U. C. R. 84.

The plaintiff sued C., a division court bailiff, and his sureties, on their covenant, alleging a judgment recovered by himself against C., for selling his goods under execution, contrary to the orders of the plaintiff in the suit:—Held, declaration bad; for the plaintiff having recovered judgment against C. for the tort, could not afterwards sue upon the covenant for the same cause. Sloan v. Creasor, 22 U. C, R. 127.

Benevolent Society—Dispute as to Age of Applicant.]—After an application for membership in a benevolent association had been accepted a dispute arose as to the applicant's age, and an action was brought by him to compel the association to issue to compel the association to issue to compel the association to issue to the applicant's property. They are applicant's potter as proof of his age and there are proof of his age and there are proof of his age and the applicant's given a special proof of the applicant's age was not in fact that stated by his brother:—Held, that nothing less than clear proof by the association of the certificant on the ground that the applicant's age was not in fact that stated by his brother:—Held, that nothing less than clear proof by the association of the cartula age of the applicant, and of fraud in procuring and making the affidiavit, would suffice to undo the settlement and entitle the association to cancellation of the certificate. Sons of Sectland Benevolent Association v. Faulkner, 26 A. R. 253.

Boundaries. |—In an action en bornage between M. and B., a surveyor was appointed by the superior court to settle the line of division between the lands of the respective parsion between the lands of the respective par-ties, and his report, indicating the position of the boundary line, was homologated, and the court directed that boundaries should be placed at certain points on said line. M. appealed from that judgment to the court of review claiming that the report gave B. more land than he claimed and that the line should follow the direction of a fence between the pro-perties that had existed for over thirty years. The court of review gave effect to this contention and ordered the boundaries to be placed according to it, in which judgment both par-ties acquiesced and another surveyor was appointed to execute it. He reported that he had placed the boundaries as directed by the court of review, but that his measurements shewed that the line indicated was not in the line of the old fence and his report was rejected by the superior court :- Held, that the judgment of the court of review in which the parties acquiesced was chose jugée between them not only that the division line between the pro-perties must be located on the line of the old fence but that such line was one starting nt the point indicated in the plan and report of the first surveyor. Mercier v. Barrette, 25 S. C. R. 94.

Bridge—Prior Recovery of Damages.]—Held, that after 18 Viet, c. 176, the plaintiff could not maintain an action against defendants for unhawfully and wrongfully erecting a bridge across the Twenty Mile Creek, and impeding the navigation, for the statute expressly authorizes such erection, and gives only a right to compensation for damages sustained. A prior recovery for injury sustained by the erection of the bridge was a bar to this action. Wismer v. Great Western R. W. Co., 17 U. C. R. 510.

Common Carriers-Bailees.]-In a case against the defendants as common carriers defendants pleaded that plaintiff sued defendants in the Queen's bench for the same identical causes of action and obtained a verdict, which verdict remains unreversed, to which plaintiff replied denying that the verdict was for the same identical causes of action. The first two counts in this action charged defendants as common carriers, the third charged them as bailees, and the fourth was in trover. The declaration in the former case contained only counts against them as common carriers and a count in trover:—Held, that the plea was not sustained, for the evidence necessary to sustain counts against defendants as common carriers would be differremains as common carriers would be different from that required to charge them as bailees; and moreover, the identity of the goods in question in this and the former action was not proved. Dearon v. Great Western R. W. Co., 6 C. P. 241.

Company—Ultra Vires Contract — Consent Judgment, [—If a company enters into a transaction which is ultra vires and litization ensues in the course of which a judgment is entered by consent, such judgment is as binding on parties as one obtained after a contest and will not be set aside because the transaction was beyond the power of the company, Charlebois v. Delap, 26 S. C. R. 221. But see this case in the judicial committee, [1899] A. C. 114.

Contention Argued but not Pleaded.]—It was contended by the plaintiffs before a divisional court that the defendants were members of a de facto corporation in which they held shares that were not fully paid up, and that recovery could be had against them to the extent of the amount remaining unpaid upon their shares, but no such case was made upon the pleadings or at the trial. The court treated this contention as not having been raised, and reserved leave to the plaintiffs to raise it in fresh actions, as they might be advised. Flatt v. Waddell, Townsend v. Waddell, 18 O. R. 539.

Court Equally Divided.]—When the supreme court of Canada in a case in appeal is equally divided so that the decision appealed against stands unreversed the result of the case in the supreme court affects the actual parties to the litigation only, and the court, when a similar case is brought before it, is not bound by the result of the previous case. Stanstead Election Case, 20 S. C. R. 12.

Court Equally Divided.]—Effect of judgment in appellate court where the Judges were equally divided. See In re Hall, 32 C. P. 498, 8 A. R. 135; Clarkson v. Attorney-General of Canada, 16 A. R. 202; Booth v. Ratté, 21 S. C. R. 637.

Covenant-Previous Assessment.]-Covenant against the executors of a lessor for not rebuilding after loss by fire. Second plea, that after said fire defendants, as executors, were sued in a former action by the plaintiff on the covenant, who then claimed to recover prospective damages for the whole term: that defendants, not intending to rebuild, assented; that the jury were therefore directed to give and did give damages accordingly; and that defendants, in consequence of the understanding at the trial, made no attempt to disturb the verdict, but allowed judgment to be entered, and considering that full damages had been given, did not rebuild; that the damages then given far exceeded all damages sustained up to the time of that action; and that, in consequence of the matters above mentioned, this action is prosecuted fraudulently and wrongfully against defendants:—Held, bad, at least in point of form, Proudfoot v. Trotter, 12 U. C. R. 226.

Covenant—Single Breach,] — A covenant to erect a crossing over a railway for the use of the plaintiff will not sustain several successive actions, the breach being entire and perfect in the first instance, and a recovery for such breach being a har to a future action. Smith v. Great Western R. W. Co., 6 C. P. 151.

Criminal Code—Confiscation of Gaming Instruments, Moneys, dec. |—In an action to revendicate moneys seized and confiscated under the provisions of s, 575 of the Criminal Code:—Held, that a judgment declaring the forfeiture of moneys so seized cannot be collaterally impeached in a action of revendication. O'Neil v, Attorney-General of Canada, 26 S. C. R. 122.

Criminal Prosecution—Civil Remedy.]—Held, that the acquittal of a locomotive driver on a train upon a charge of manslaughter for the death of a party, on account of whose death the action for damages was brought by his administrative, did not constitute any answer to the action. Ham v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 11 C. P. 80.

Crown.]—There is no sound reason why the Government of the Dominion should not be bound by the judgment of a court of justice in a suit to which the statemey general, as representing the Government was a party defendant, equally as any individual would be, if the relief prayed by this differentiation is sought in the same interest and upon the same grounds as were adjudicated mon by the same grounds as were adjudicated mon by the Attorney-General of Canada, 17 S. C. R. 612.

Crown.]—The doctrine of res judicata may be invoked against the Crown. The Queen v. St. Louis, 5 Ex. C. R. 330.

Deed—Rectification.]—In an action relating to the construction of a deed the plaintiff claimed the benefit of a reservation contained in a prior agreement but judgment was given against him on the ground that the agreement was superseded by the deed. He then brought an action to reform the deed by inserting the reservation therein. Held, that the subject matter of the second action was not res judicata by the previous judgment. Carroll v. Eric County Natural Gas and Fuel Co., 29 S. C. R. 591.

Deed and Mortgage.]—The plaintiff, on the 4th April, 1864, mortgaged land to L., who covenanted thereby for quiet enjoyment by the plaintiff until default. To an action against L's administrator on this covenant, alleging L. s administrator on this covenant, alregated an eviction by persons claiming under L., defendant pleaded that L. conveyed the land to the plaintiff on the 31st March, 1864, which was the plaintiff's only title to the land; that the mortgage sued on was to secure the purchase money, and was executed immediately after the deed, and as a part of the same transaction; that the plaintiff by the mort-gage covenanted that he was seised in fee, and had good right to convey, and that the eviction complained of was an action of ejectment brought by the heirs of L. on the ground that L. was of unsound mind when he exe-cuted the deed on the 31st March, 1864, which was proved at the trial, and the jury theraupon found for the heirs:—Held, that the plea was had; for the avoidance of the deed for insanity did not necessarily involve the avoidance of the mortgage; nor did the estoppel, applicable to the deed, extend to the mortgage: that defendant should have pleaded L.'s insanity directly to the mortgage if he wished to test its validity; and moreover the parties here were not the same as in the ejectment suit nor was it certain from the record in ejectment that the recovery therein was on the ground alleged. Eccles v. Lowry, 32 U. C. R. 635.

Defect in Pleading.]—A judgment recovered for a defect in pleading, and not on the merits, is no bar to another action. Baker v. Booth., 2 0. S. 373.

Defect in Pleading.]—A defendant held precluded from taking advantage of defects in his own pleading. Kilroy v. Simpkins, 26 C. P. 281.

Debt on bond. Plea, a former action on the same bond in a county court, in which defendant obtained judgment. Replication, that the breaches in this action and the damages claimed are different from those in the former action. In the first suit, as appeared from this plea, no breach was assigned but the nonpayment of the penalty:—Held, on demurrer, replication bad; for the plaintiff, having had judgment against him that he should be barred in his action on the bond, was precluded from suing again on it. Stinson v. Branican, 10 U. C. R. 402.

A condition of a contract for the carriage of goods provided that no claim for damage for loss or detention of goods should be allowed unless notice in writing with particulars was given to the station agent at or nearest to the place of delivery within thirty-six hours after delivery of the goods in respect to which the claim was made:—Held, that a plea setting up non-compliance with this condition having been demurred to and the plaintiff not having appended against a judgment overuling the demurrer, the question as to the sufficiency in law of the defence was res judicata. Grand Trank R. W. Co. of Canada v. McMillan, 16 S. C. R. 543.

Denial of Identity.]—When a former recovery is pleaded, and the action is such that it cannot be discovered from the record whether the same demand was in question, the plaintiff need not new assign, but may deny the identity of the cause of action. Beasley, v. Beasley, l. Dt. C. R. 367.

Different Causes of Action—Statute of Frauds.—S. brought a suit for performance of an alleged verbal agreement by M. to give him one-eighth of an interest in his, M.'s, interest in a gold mine, but failed to recover, as the cour held the alleged agreement to be within the Statute of Frauds. On the hearing M. denied the agreement as alleged, but admitted that he had agreed to give S. one-eighth of his interest in the proceeds of the mine when soid, and it having been afterwards sold S. brought another action for payment of such share of the proceeds:—Held, that S. was not estopped by the first judgment against him from bringing another action. Held, also, that the contract for a share of the proceeds was not one for sale of an interest in land within the Statute of Frauds. Stuart v. Mott, 23 S. C. R. 384.

Dismissal of Action to Enforce Mortgage—Subsequent Action by Mortgagor to Cancel,—S. being the holder of two mortgages, brought ejectment thereon, when the genuineness of the signatures to the instruments was disputed, notwithstanding which he recovered judgment in that action, and subsequently instituted proceedings in this court seeking to obtain a sale of the mortgaged premises and the usual order for payment of any deficiency. Owing to the extremely contradictory evidence adduced at the hearing, the court refused to make the decree as asked, holding the evidence insufficient to establish the execution of the mortgages, as the plaintiff was bound to do, and dismissed the bill, with costs, but without prejudice to S. filing another bill is so advised, within twelve months from the date of that decree. After the lapse of more than twelve months the mortgagor filed a bill seeking to have the mortgages delivered up to be cancelled:—Held, that if the strict construction of such decree was that the point was res judicata it was erroneous, and the court refusing to enforce it in this proceeding by making a decree in favour of the plaintiff, dismissed the bill with costs. Mitchell v. Strathy, 2S Gr. SO.

Division Court—Res Judicata—Question for Jury.]—When an issue arises on the plea of res judicata the identity of the facts in the former case with those in the existing case is matter for the jury when the trial is by a jury in a division court. In a case in a division court where the defence of res judicata had been raised, and in which a jury notice had been given, the Judge determined the case himself, and refused to allow it to be tried by a jury:—Held, that he had no jurisdiction to do so, and that a mandatory order must go to compel him to try the case in accordance with the practice of the court. In re Covan v. A flex, 24 O. R. 358.

Division Court Clerk.] — Plaintiff and others took out attachments against an absconding debtor, and the goods seized being claimed, the plaintiff indemnified the bailiff, who sold and paid over the money to defendant, the clerk of the division court. The claimants sued the plaintiff and the purchasers, and recovered from them the value of the goods, after which defendant distributed the money among the attaching creditors, of whom he himself was one, pro rata. Plaintiff thereupon sued defendant and his sureties as for money received to his use:—Held, that he could not recover, for the money was not received by defendant in his official capacity as the plaintiff, and the recovery against the plaintiff, to which defendant was a stranger, could not make it his as against defendant, so as to support this action upon the statutory covenant. Quere, whether the plaintiff, having procured the money to be paid to the defendant as that of the attaching creditors, could afterwards claim it as his own. Preston v. Wilmot, 23 U. C. R. 248.

Division Court Interpleader.] - The plaintiff, a division court bailiff, having seized a quantity of wheat under a warrant of execution against one P, which the defendant claimed, an interpleader summons issued, and on its return was adjourned with leave to the defendant to file his claim in fifteen days. Afterwards the case came up for final hear-ing, when the Judge made this order, "the claimant not having put in his claim or complied with the order above made is barred, and s ordered to pay the costs in fifteen days. The plaintiff, as such bailiff, thereupon brought this action to recover the wheat, which the defendant had obtained possession of pending the summons:—Held, that the minute so made by the Judge in the interpleader issue was equivalent to stating that the claim was dismissed, and was final and conclusive upon the defendant, and that he could not be heard to say that the bailiff had not seized the wheat. Hunter v. Vanstone, 7 A. R. 750.

Division Court Interpleader.] — The defendant, a bailiff of a division court, under an execution against plaintiff's father, seized two horses, waggon, &c., which, on an interpleader proceeding, were decided to be the goods of the plaintiff, who at the end of three the plaintiff, who at the end of three bailiff. In an action brought for the bailiff. In an action brought of the bailiff, and are the plaintiff, and are the bailiff. In an action when the bailiff, in an action when the bailiff, in an action brought of the bailiff, in an action brought of the bailiff, in an action brought of the bailiff, and are the bailiff, in an action brought of the bailiff, and are the bailiff, and are the bailiff, and are the bailiff, and are the bailiff, and the bailiff, and so the bailiff, and the bailiff, and suit for damages for the alleged injury to the property. Farrow v. Tobin, 10 A. R. 69.

Division Court Judgment.]—In an action in the division court against the now plaintiff, on notes given by him tor the price of a machine, the question of the warranty was tried, and decided against the now plaintiff:—Held, that the matter was res judicata, and the judgment in the division court was therefore a good defence, by way of estoppel, to the present action. Radford v. Merchants' Bank, 3 O. R. 529.

Dual Capacity.]—Plaintiff as assignee for the benefit of creditors under 48 Vict. c. 26 (O.), brought this action on behalf of certain creditors under s. 7, s. s. 2, of that Act to set asside as fraudulent a mortgage made by his assignor, while insolvent, to the defendants. The defendants set up as a deferee, inter alia, a judgment for foreclosure on the said mortgage was a party defendant. On demurrer to this it was:—Held, that the judgment of foreclosure was no bar to this action. The plaintiff acted in a dual capacity as assignee of the mortgagor's equity of redemption, and also as a trustee for creditors. It was in the former capacity he was made defendant in the foreclosure action, in which he could not have set up the fraud of his assignor, nor was he bound to have counterclaimed for his present cause of action; while in this action he was suing as trustee for creditors, and in another right. Glass v. Grant, 16 O. R. 233.

Effect of Pleading.] — A defendant having pleaded to the declaration as containing two separate counts, cannot afterwards object that there was but one. May v. Howeland, 19 U. C. R. 66.

Held, that defendants were clearly not estopped from denying that the instrument sued on was a note by having, in addition to the plea of non feecrunt, pleaded other pleas in which they denied their liability to pay "the said promissory note." Boulton v. Jones, 19 U. C. R. 517.

Action on a judgment recovered against an executor. The declaration set out the judgment, alleging the issuing of a fi. fa. and a return of nulla bona, and suggested a devastavit. Plea, that in the action on which this action is founded, the defendant pleaded plene administravit, and that the plaintiff replied lands, on which judgment was given; that the lands were assets in the hands of the defendant as executor:—Held, that the replication of lands was a full admission of the truth of the plea of plene administravit; and that the plaintiff by his replication in the former action being estopped from setting up a devastavit now, the defendant was at liberty to shew the true state of the case to save himself from personal liability. Hogan v. Morrissy, 14 C. P. 441.

Held, under the facts appearing on the pleadings, that the denial by defendants, in their answer in chancery, that the agreement sued on in this action was illegal, could not estop them from asserting such illegality here. Carr v. Tannahill, 30 U. C. R. 217; 31 U. C. R. 201.

Ejectment.] — In ejectment, it appeared that the defendant had sued D. and B. for trespass to the same land; that they had defended under a lease made by said defendant to the present plaintiff; that the replication was, that such lease had not been surrendered, and the jury found that it had not been:—Held, that the judgment in that case was not conclusive nor even admissible evidence for the plaintiff in ejectment. Doe d. Burr v. Denison, S. U. C. R. 610.

An award upon a question respecting real property, expressly referred, is binding upon the parties so far as respects the rights of either to bring or defend an ejectment against the other. Doe d. McDonald v. Long, 4 U. C. R. 146.

The lessor of the plaintiff having previously recovered judgment against defendant, in an action on the covenants for the payment of money contained in two several mortrages on which this action of ejectment was brought, in which prior action the defendant had pleaded usury, and the issue thereon having been found for the plaintiff, an execution issued against the lands of the defendant, and the premises contained in the mortgage were, under 12 Vict, c. 73, sold to defendant, who at the time of the trial of this action was in possession, claiming to hold under a deed from the sheriff:—Held, that there was a sufficient privity of estate between the purchaser at the sheriff's sale, (the defendant in this suit) under the execution against the judgment debtor, to enable the lessor of the plaintiff to estop the defendants from setting up the same defence of usury unsuccessfully set up by the judgment debtor, under whom the defendant claimed. Doe d. Mills v. Kelly, 2 C. P. 1.

Held, that the recovery of a judgment in an action of covenant upon a mortgage, on pleas of "non-set factum," and that the defendant was not indebted as alleged, and payment before action, did not estop defendant from impeaching the same mortgage in ejectment subsequently brought thereon, on the ground of usury, Edinburgh Life Assurance Co, v. Clark, 10 C. P. 351.

In ejectment, where the defendant claimed through a purchase at sheriff's sale, it appeared that the purchaser had sued the present plaintiff in trespass, and obtained a verdict and judgment on a plea that the land was not his, the purchaser's:—Held, the court being left to draw inferences of fact, that though the freehold on such plea was not necessarily in issue, yet in the absence of proof to the contrary it might be assumed to have been, and the plaintiff in this suit was therefore estopped by the judgment. Chambers v. Dollar, 29 U. C. R. 599.

In ejectment the plaintiff claimed under a mortgage made by defendant, and defendant under a deed from the plaintiff, the mortgage having been given to secure part of the purchase money. Defendant proved a judgment in an action of covenant brought by the plaintiff against defendant on this mortgage to recover the money secured thereby, in which defendant pleaded that the mortgage had been obtained by fraud, and judgment was given in his favour on that issue:—Held, that the defendant could not set up the judgment as a defence to this action, not having placed the plaintiff in statu quo by restoring to him possession of the premises. Puertell v. Boilan, 23 C. P. 175.

In ejectment, where defendant claimed under an sheriff's deed to S. made upon a sale under an execution against lands, it appeared that the purchaser from S. had sued the present plaintiff in trespass, to which the present plaintiff pleaded not guilty, and that the land was not his (the plaintiff's), and had in 1892 obtained a verdict and indement on the issue joined on these pleas:—Held, that the plaintiff was not estopped by the judgment, for the record alone would not shew that the title set up by the plaintiff here was set up and determined upon there, which it was for the defendant, relying upon the estoppel, to prove; and the plaintiff's evidence in this action shewed that in that case he did not attempt to dispute this defendant's right to possession, because the title was then in another person. Chambers v. Dollar, 29 U. C. R. 599, distinguished, because the inference drawn there from the evidence had been displaced by the evidence here. Chambers v. Unger, 25 C. P. 180.

In ejectment, against two defendants, where the plaintif claimed under a conveyance from H., the defendants put in an exemplification of a judgment recovered by one defendant, in an action against two sons of H. for trespass to the same land, in which defendants plended that it was the freehold of H., under whom they entered; but there was no evidence to connect H. with the trespass or the suit:— Held, that the plaintif was not estopped by such judgment. Cassidy v. Ingoldsby, 35 U. C. R. 339.

It was contended that the defendant was estopped from disputing the plaintiff's title by his admissions and by reason of the plaintiff having recovered a judgment in ejectment against the defendant's tenants; but the plaintiff's claim was for damages for pulling down fences and for messe profits for a period of five or six months prior to the date of the ejectment, and the admission of title did not go further back than the ejectment:—Held, that the judgment against the tenants was evidence against the defendant, at the date of the writ of ejectment, but that title was really in question, and necessary to be proved in respect of the period for which mesne profits were claimed prior to the ejectment. Scabrook v. Young, 14 A. R. 97.

Action for breach of an agreement made between plaintiff as mortgazor and defendants as mortgazees, whereby in consideration of the olaintiff having given defendants a chatted mortgage on certain property, defendants agreed to extend the time for payment of the mortgage, &c., one year from 1st April, 1882. The defence was that on 17th June, 1882, the now defendants brought ejectment against the now plaintiff, setting up that by such mortgage moneys the now defendants should be entitled to take possession of said lands alleging default and by reason thereof the now defendants claimed possession; that the now plaintiff did not plead any defence to the action; and for default of any defence to the action; and for default of any defence to recovered:—Held, that the judgment so recovered estopped the now plaintiff from maintaining the present action. Cochrane v. Humitton Provident Loan Society, 15 O. R. 128.

Since the Ontario Judicature Act, a judgment recovered in an action of ejectment by default of appearance will sustain a defence of res judicata to an action subsequently brought by the defendant to try the same question. Cochrane v. Hamilton Provident Loan Society, 15 O. R. 128, followed. Ball v. Catheart, 16 O. R. 525.

Sec, also, EJECTMENT, IV.

Ejectment—Mesue Profits.]—In a former action of ejectment brought by the plaintiff against the defendants, mesne profits were claimed, but no evidence was given in regard to them:—Held, that the plaintiff was not estopped from recovering in this action occupation rent for the premises since the expiry of the term. Elliott v. Elliott, 20 O. R. 134.

Execution Sale-Allegations in Defence -Statements in Other Proceedings.]-Where in an action for recovery of lands by M., who had bought them at a sale under execution against J. K., it was objected that he had failed to prove that J. K. had at the time of such sale any title to the said lands:—Held. that it was no answer to this objection to say that the defendant had in setting up certain facts "by way of a further and separate de-fence" alleged that J. K. was the patentee of the lands in question, for that such an allegation could not be made use of by the plaintiff to satisfy any defect in his evidence to prove his case, the burden of which rested on him by reason of the said defendant having pleaded possession in herself and her tenants: -Held, also, that the fact that in the course of certain prior proceedings had by M. on an execution against A. K. the wife of J. K., for the purpose of selling the said lands, M. had then asserted that they belonged to her, did not estop M, from now as against J, K, and A, K, alleging that they belonged to J, K, Metice v, Kane, 14 O, R, 226, affirmed by the supreme court, Cassels' Dig. 247.

Foreign Action—Putting in Buil.]—To prove a judgment recovered in Lower Canada, an instrument was produced headed. "Province of Quebec, District of Montreat, superior court of Lower Canada," and setting out the judgment of the court, and certified to be a true copy under the hand of the prothonotary and the seal of the court. It was objected that the judgment was not sufficient, as the defendant had not been personally served with process in the action in the foreign court, but—Held, that as defendant had procured built to be put in, and so obtained his freight, which had been attached, the objection could not be raised. Tüton v. McKay, 24 C. P. 94.

Foreign Divorce. |—In an action for alimony, held, that a foreign decree of divorce obtained on an untrue statement of facts, and for a cause not recognized by our law, could not be set up as a bar to the wife's claim for alimony. Magurn v, Magurn 11 A. R. 178.

Foreign Judgment.]—A judgment of a foreign court having the force of res judicata in the foreign country has the like force in Canada. Unless prevented by rules of pleading a foreign judgment can be made available to bar a domestic action begun before such judgment was obtained. The Delta, 1 P. D. 393, distinguished. Law v. Hansen, 25 S. C. R. 69.

Sec, also, Hughes v. Rees, 9 O. R. 198.

Former Action at Law, |—An action at law having been brought upon a promissory note, and the defendant having pleaded that it had been given as collateral security for another debt, which had been paid, but having adduced no evidence to establish this fact, was held precluded, in a suit afterwards instituted in the court of chancery to enforce the charge of the judgment against lands, from shewing any payments prior to the time of plea pleaded. Carpenter v. Commercial Bank of Canada, S. L. J. 286.

A defendant at law pleading a plea of payment, and either failing or neglecting to establish the plea, cannot afterwards set up the same facts as a defence to a bill in equity to enforce payment of the judgment at law, Ib, Fraudulent Assignment.]—In a suit by a creditor, A., and his assignee, B., to enforce payment of a debt due by C., out of the proceeds of certain property assigned by C. to D., it had been declared that the assignments were fraudulent and void against the plaintiffs in the suit:—Held, in another suit by B. and his assignee against D. and C. s representatives in respect of another debt due by C. to B., that, notwithstanding the difference of parties, the decree in the first suit was binding in the second on the question of fraud. Gillies v. How. 19 Gr. 32.

Fraudulent Judgment.] - D., the purchaser of land, gave a mortgage thereon to secure part of the purchase money, and subsequently allowed taxes to accumulate on the land, which was sold in order to realize such taxes when D, bought it and obtained the usual deed to himself. D, having made default in payment of the mortgage, proceedings at law were instituted thereon, pending which D. conveyed this and other property to his two sons, who gave a mortgage back securing the support and maintenance of D. and his wife, and the plaintiff, after recovering judgment, filed a bill impeaching the transaction for fraud:-Held, (1) that upon the evidence the transaction was fraudulent and void as against creditors; (2) that although ordinarily the production of the exemplification of a judgment at law is admissible, and has been generally received as evidence of a debt due the plaintiff against all parties in suits under the statute of Elizabeth, yet that the judg ment so recovered by the plaintiff against D. was not evidence against the sons, being res inter alios judicata. Allan v. McTavish, 28 Gr. 539. See S. C., S A. R. 440.

Goods Sold—Inmages.]—The first count was for non-delivery of a certain quantity of oats sold by defendant to the plaintiff. The count count alleged an agreement between plaintif and defendant, that plaintiff should buy of defendant a certain quantity of Canada oats, and that defendant should deliver the same to plaintiff at a certain place, yet defendant delivered to plaintiff as and for the said Canada oats the same quantity of a heterogeneous mixture of burnt wheat and oats, greatly inferior in value to Canada oats, and the defendant never delivered the plaintiff the Canada oats, and that the mixture so delivered was wholly valueless to and unsaleable by plaintiff, &c. The defendant plended, that the oats on the control of the first and second counts theretofore, on the ISR August, ISR4, in an action brought against the plaintiff for the receivery of the price of the same oats, in which the now plaintiff plended that the debt thereby claimed from him was contracted by and through the fraud of the now defendant, upon issue joined in said action, which involved the identical facts alleged as breaches of contract in the plaintiff's declaration in this action, a verdict was rendered for the now defendant:—Held, on denurrer, plea bad, as not alleging that judgment had been entered on the verdect—Held, also, that the second count of the declaration was good. Twohy v. Armstrony, 15 C. P. 203.

Goods Sold—Damages.]—A merchant in Ottawa, Ont., purchased the assets of an insolvent trader in Hull, Que., but refused to accept delivery of the same. The curator of the estate brought an action in the superior court of Quebec to compel him to do so and obtained judgment, whereupon he accepted delivery and paid the purchase money. The curator subsequently brought another action in Ontario for special damages alleged to have been incurred in the care and preservation of the assets from the time of the purchase until the delivery:—Held, that these special damages, most of which could not be ascertained until after the purchase was completed, could not have been included in the action brought in the Quebec courts and the right to recover them was not res judicate by the judgment in that action. Hyde v. Lindsay, 29 S. C. R. 536.

Action on a contract to make and deliver tweeds of a good merchantable quality. Plea, a former action by defendant for the price of the goods, in which the defective quality of the goods was set up and considered by the jury in their verdict in reduction of damages:— Held, on demurrer, that to the extent to which the now plaintiff obtained an abatement from the price he was precluded from recovering in another action; that the plea shewed suffi-ciently that the subject matter complained of herein was submitted to the jury, in abatement of the price to be allowed the now plaintiff in that action, and that they found for the plaintiff; that if the now plaintiff was allowed damages in the former action, in abatement of the price of the cloth, he would be precluded from recovering them again; and that if he was not allowed them, because-the cloth was not inferior, it was likewise against public policy that the matter should be again litigated:—Held, also, that the claim for loss of profits, which could not have been considered in the other action, was not laid in considered in the other action, was not laid in the declaration as a substantive ground of ac-tion, at introduced incidentally at its con-clusion:—Held, further, that the verific in the former action was not conclusive until judg-ment, and therefore the plaintiff was not pre-cluded from maintaining this action. Gordon v, Robinson, 14 C. P. 566. v. Robinson, 14 C. P. 566.

A. wishing to procure a water-wheel which, with the existing water power, would be sufficient to drive the machinery in his mill, C. undertook to put in a "four-foot Sampson turbine wheel," which he warranted would be sufficient for the purpose. The wheel was subsequently put in, but proving insufficient A. sued C. for breach of the warranty and recovered $438 damages. C. having subsequently sued A. for the price, A. offered to give evidence in mitigation of damages that the wheel was worthless and of no value to him:—Held, that such evanence was inadmissible, for that the facts offered in mitigation might have, and for all that appeared had, formed a ground for the recovery of damages in the action on the warranty, and therefore could not be set up in this action. Abell v. Church, 26 C. P 338. Reversed, 1 S. C. R. 442.

Indorser.]—Where, in an action on a note against an indorser, the defendant pleaded in estoppel that the note was given as security for the performance of a certain agreement between the plantiff and one M.; that the defendant indorsed as security for M. the maker; and that the plantiff had brought an action against M. on the agreement in which action M. had pleaded non-assumpsit, and had judgment on the plea:—Held, that the plea was no answer to the declaration. Squire v. Breenan, 13 C. L. J. 326.

Information of Intrusion—Subsequent Action—Beneficial Interest in Land.]—In proceedings on an information of intrusion exhibited by the attorney-general of Canada against the impellant, who claimed title under a gent from the Crown under the Great Seal of British Columbia, should deliver up possession of certain lands situate within me rail-bett that Province. The Queen v. Farwell 14 S. R. 892. The appellant having registered his grant and taken steps to receive the control of the province of the season of titles of British Columbia, thus preventing grantees of the Crown from obtaining a registered title, another information was exhibited by the attorney-general to direct the appellant to execute to the Crown from obtaining a registered title, another information was exhibited by the attorney-general to direct the appellant to execute to the Crown in right of Canada a surrender or conveyance of the said lands:—Held, affirming 3 Ex. C. R. 271, that the judgment in intrusion was conclusive against the appellant as to the title. The Queen v. Farwell, 14 S. C. R. 392, and Attorney-General of British Columbia v. Attorney-General of British Columbia v. Attorney-General of Canada, 14 App. Cas. 255, commented on and distinguished. Farucelt v. The Queen, 22 S. C. R. 533.

Injunction—Specific Performance.]—Bill for injunction and specific performance dismissed:—Held, no bar to a subsequent suit for specific performance. Simmons v. Campbell, 17 Gr, 612.

Insolvent Act — Charge of Fraud.]—
Where a judgment has been recovered for a debt without fraud being charged under s. 133 of the Insolvent Act of 1875, the plaintiff is barred by such recovery from bringing another action against the debtor charging the fraud, even although the judgment was recovered by derault, for the plaintiff might have declared, averring such fraud, and had the question tried. Lightbound v. Hill, 32 C. P. 249.

Insurance—Quantum of Loss,]—The defendant having been paid $50,000 insurance moneys under various policies issued to him upon certain lumber, which had been burnt by a spark from an engine of the C. C. R. W. Co., afterwards brought action against the railway company and recovered a verdict of $100,000; the jury finding that that "was the actual value of the lumber destroyed." The insurance companies now brought this action ance companies now brought this action against him claiming that he was trustee for them for so much of the $100,000 as repre-sented the excess of the total moneys received by him over the amount of his loss, contending that he was estopped by the verdict from asserting his loss to be greater than that amount. The defendant, however, contended that his actual loss had exceeded in the whole $150,000 :-Held, that he was not concluded from so contending by the finding of the jury in the action against the railway company, and that the utmost right of the plaintiffs was to have the amount recovered as damages from the railway company brought into account together with the moneys previously paid by the plaintiffs for insurance in order to ascertain whether the defendant had been more than fully compensated for his total loss by fire and other loss and outlay connected with the litigation, and for these purposes the matter was referred to the master. Co. v. McLaren, 12 O. R. 682.

Intervention.]—The plea of res judicata is good against a party who has been in any way represented in a former suit deciding the same matter in controversy. Dingwall v. Mc-Bean, 30 S. C. R. 441.

Items Disallowed.]—Where a plaintiff goes to a jury upon certain items of account and fails in recovering those items, he is concluded by the verdict, and cannot bring a second action for the same demand. Proudpot v. Lucrence, S. U. C. R. 209.

Joint Contractors.]—The plaintiff having sued one of two joint contractors, the other being out of the jurisdiction, and having recovered judgment against the one cannot afterwards sue the other. Harris v. Dunn, 18 U. C. R. 352.

Judgment against Two—Action for Increased Interest. —Plaintiff sued defendant as maker and A. as indexer of two notes, adding a count sound, as indexer of two notes, and in a support of two supports on the support of two support of the support of Justifying under Judgment.]—Trespass q. c. f., with a count for taking goods. Defendants justified as commissioners and bailif of the court of requests, and the plaintiff replied that he was not duly summoned to attend at the court at which judgment was recovered:—incld. replication bad on general demurrer. Stevens v. Cowan, 5 O. S. 572.

Lease—Covenant—Previous Declaration of Termination.]—Action on defendant's covenant to pay rent, contained in a lease to him by plaintiff of a mill, for nine years from 15th December, 1868, at a yearly rent, payable half-yearly in advance on the 15th June and December in each year, alleging non-payment of three half yearly instalments of rent reserved. Plea, by way of estoppel, that previous to this action the lessee (now defendant) sued the lessor (the now plaintiff) in the county court, alleging in his declaration that by the lease, in the event of total destruction of the mill by accidental fire the term should cease, and the rent be apportioned; that upon such destruction on the 30th October, 1860, the said term ceased and the lessor became liable to refund to the lessee such part of the rent paid in advance as on the apportionment should be found due, and the lessee alleged in such action that $137.50 thus became due to him, for which he sued therein; that the lessor pleaded in such action that the said lease was not his deed, and issue being joined thereon, the lessee recovered judgment for the said sum of $137.50. The plea then alleged that the judgment remained in force, and that the rent sued for in this action was rent accruing due after the said 30th October, 1869. To this the plaintiff replied, that after such fire the defendant con tinued to hold and occupy, and still holds and occupies the premises under and by virtue of the lease, and would not and did not put an end to said term or surrender said premises —Held, a good plea; for though the plea of non est factum did not put in issue the destruction of the mill and consequent determination of the term, yet these facts being necessarily averred in that action, and not denied, were admitted for the purpose of such action. and the lessor was now estopped from disput-ing them. Taylor v. Hortop, 33 U. C. R. 462. See also, Taylor v. Hortop, 22 C. P. 542. an action against the surety of the lessee. in

See also, Taylor v. Hortop, 22 C. P. 542, an action against the surety of the lessee, in which it was held that the judgment recovered, being a bar to the recovery against the principal, was a good defence for the surety.

Libel.]—Case for libel in publishing a printed notice denying the plaintiff's title to certain land, of which the declaration alleged that he was seised in fee, and which he had advertised for sale, and stating that one C. J. had the title, and that a suit was pending in chancery to establish her undoubted right. The fifth plea alleged that the plaintiff's only title was by virtue of an indenture of mortgage executed to him by one K., who was then seised in fee; that the said indenture was given to secure usurious interest; that the said K died intestate, and his helf gave to the said all and during her life; and thereupon the defendant, as her agent, published, &c. (as in the fourth plea.) The plaintiff replied, by way of estoppel, a verdict and judgment in an action of ejectment brought by him against the defendant and one E. X., to recover possession of this land, in which it was found by the jury that the said indenture was not illegal or usurious:—Held, on demurrer, plea bad, for omitting to justify the statement that a chancery suit was pending, that being a very material part of the libel. Semble, that the replication to the fifth plea shewed an estoppel. Moir V. C. R. 71.

A recovery of a verdict in an action for libel against some of several parties concerned in the libel, and payment of the amount of verdict and all costs without judgment being entered, is a bar to an action against others for the same libel. Willcocks v. Howell, 8 O. R. 576.

Mandamus to Arbitrate — Action on Aveard.]—On application to compel a railway company to arbitrate, the question whether the plaintiff's land was injuriously affected, under the admitted facts, was raised by return to the mandamus, and formally decided in the plaintiff's favour. An arbitration then took place, and an award was made, on which the plaintiff sued, and a trial was had resulting in a verdict for defendants, which was sed asside after an appeal to the cort was sed. The control of the c

Matters not Decided.] — Declaration, first and second counts for penning back water on plaintiff's land. The defendant by his plea set up the conseen and superposence of the plaintiff's ancestor der wom the plaintiff claimed. The plaintiff replied that a former action had been brought by her against defendant for a similar penning bekt of the water: that defendant had filed his bill to restrain that action, and had in that bill alseed the same matters now alleged in the plea, which bill was dismissed. Rejoinder, that the ourt of chancery gave no judgment he spect of matters alleged in the plea, but dismissed the bill in respect of other matters:—Held, on denuirer, rejoinder good. Bean y, Gray, 22 C. P. 202.

Mortgage—Usury.]—Usury having been set up as a defence to ejectment on a mortgage, the plaintif gave in evidence a decree between him and defendant in a foreclosure suit on the same mortgage, which upheld the mortgage, and in effect declared that it was not tainted with usury—Held, conclusive in plaintiff's favour. Scripture v. Curtis, 11 C. P. 345.

Mutual Effect.]—Action for penning back water by a dam. Plea by way of estopnel, a verdict on the plea of not guilty in an action brought by the plaintiff against a tenant for years under a predecessor of the defendant in title, for erecting the said dam:—Held, on denurrer, that such plea shewed no estoppel, since, had the verdict been the other way, there would have been no estoppel, and estoppels must be mutual. Smith v. Wallbridge, 6 C. P. 324.

Necessity for Pleading, —In an action against the sheriff and his sureties for not arresting a party at the plaintiff's suit;— Held, that defendants were not concluded with regard to the fact of the arrest being made, by the decision in that suit in the county court, no estoppel being pleaded, nor could such decision act as an estoppel, being resinter alios acta. McIntosh v. Jarris, S U. C. R. 535.

In an action of dower:—Held, that the demandant could not, without specially replying p—72.

it, rely upon the tenant being estopped, by taking a conveyance from her husband after marriage, from shewing that the seisin of the demandant's husband was as joint tenant with his brother, and that he died first. Haskill v. Frascr, 12 C. P. 383.

Certain goods of H. were seized under an execution at the suit of defendant, and caimed by the plaintiff. The issue was decided in the plaintiff's favour, who then sued defendant for the seizure, which he had directed:—
Held, that the action would lie, and that by the Interpleader Act (C, S, U, C, c, 30, s, 5), the result of the issue was conclusive as to the plaintiff's right to the goods, though not replied as an estopple to defendant's place that the goods were not the plaintiff's. Harmer v. Goundock, 21 U, C, R, 260.

Under the Judicature Act of Onjario res judicata cannot be relied on as a defence unless specially pleaded. Cooper v. Molsons Bank, 26 S. C. R. 611.

Non-return of Conviction—Dismissal against other Magistrate.] — Action against one of two convicting magistrates for not returning a conviction. An action against the other magistrate for not returning a conviction. An action against the other magistrate for not returning the same conviction was tried at the same assizes, on the same day and resulted in a verdict for defendant, the jury finding that the return was "immediate." as required by the statute. On the trial of this case the defendant offered to put in as evidence the record of the other action with the verdict indorsed thereon, the object of which appeared to be to shew the return of the conviction by himself, and so Indirectly to make him a witness on his own healf:—Held, that the penalty not being a joint one as against the two magistrates, but several, each being individually liable for not making the proper return, the record and verdict in favour of defendant in the former case could not be evidence of the return made by the defendant in this case. McLellan q. t. v. McLellagre, 12 C. P. 548.

Nova Scotia Probate Act-License to Sell Lands.]—An executrix obtained from the probate court a license to sell real estate of a deceased testator for the payment of his debts. Judgment creditors of the devisees moved to set aside the license but failed on their mo-tion and again in appeal. The lands were sold under the license and the executrix paid part of the price to the judgment creditors, and they received the same knowing the moneys to have been proceeds of the sale of the lands. Afterwards the judgment creditors, still al-Afterwards the judgment creditors, still al-leging the license to be null, issued execution against the lands, and the purchaser brought an action to have it declared that the judgment was not a charge thereon :-Held, the judgment upon the motion to set aside the license was conclusive against the judgment creditors and they were precluded thereby from taking collateral proceedings to charge the lands affected, upon grounds invoked or which might have been invoked upon the motion. Held, further, that the judgment credi-tors, by receiving payment out of the proceeds of the sale, had elected to treat the license as having been regularly issued, and were estopped from attacking its validity in answer to the action. Clarke v. Phinney, 25 S. C. R. 633.

Omitted Credit.]—Where two masons recovered a verdict for work and labour against their employer for £60, it was held that the employer could not afterwards sue them for noney paid them on account, which he had attempted to prove in the former action. Hunt v, McCarthy, 6 O. S. 434.

The plaintiff in this action having a contract with a township corporation for constructing drains, the defendant occasionally cashed cheques or orders on the corporation for him, and was also in the habit of supplying him with goods, on account of which the plaintiff gave him two orders. The defendant having sued the plaintiff on the common counts, the plaintiff pended payment. By the particulars in that action the now defendant claimed for goods sold and money lent, and gave credit for one item of $300, received upon an order for that sum. He had a verdict for $920, and the now plaintiff afterwards brought this action against him to recover back a sum of $300, which he alleged had been received by the defendant on another order, but had not been credited in the former action:—Held, that the plaintiff was estopped by the former judgment. Sedden v. Tutop, 6 T. R. 607; Chisholm v. Morse, H. C. P. 580, distinguished. Sorenson v. Smart, 5 O. R. 678.

Partnership - Pleading.] - In an action upon the common counts for the price of certain timber delivered under a contract de-fendants objected to the non-joinder of J. B., the plaintiff's brother, as a plaintiff, and at-tempted to prove that they contracted with them both, as "Brown Bros.," by an exemplification of a judgment recovered by the defendants after issue joined in this suit, but not pleaded herein, in an action against the plaintiff and his brother for the non-delivery of part of the timber in question. To that action the plaintiff pleaded that he never was a mem ber of the firm of "Brown Bros.," and bot the defendants therein (the plaintiff and his brother) pleaded a denial of delivery of part of the timber by them as alleged, and a denial of the contract. The jury found all the issues in favour of the plaintiffs:-Held, that the judgment was not conclusive, as it had not been pleaded by way of estoppel puis darrein continuance, as it might have been:-Held, also, that if pleaded it would not necessarily have been conclusive, for it shewed only that the two brothers were jointly liable upon this contract, and the plaintiff might have been so liable as a member of the firm by holding himself out as such. The evidence, set out, tended to shew the plaintiff alone en-titled to recover and the court of the contitled to recover, and the court, on appeal from the county court, refused to interfere verdict in his favour. Brown v. Yates, 1 A. R. 367.

Perjury. —In an action on a mortgage from defendant S. the defendant H. being in possession, the latter claimed that plaintiff was bringing the action for the benefit of S., who was therefore, as well as the plaintiff, bound by a judgment in a former action, in which IL. claiming title by possession, had succeeded against S. in having a lease from the latter to him set aside, the plaintiff, however, not being a party to the action, and having acquired his title prior thereto. S. pleaded that the judgment in question was obtained by the perjury of IL, stating the perjury:—Held, on demurrer, good. Slewart v. Sutton, S. O. R. 341.

Personal Representative.]-Where an action is brought against the personal representative of a testator or intestate, the estate, as an estate, is bound by the result of the action brought, just as the deceased would have been bound if in his lifetime it had been prosecuted against himself; and the judgment stands at law as conclusive against all the property of the deceased, whether it be ulti-mately realized out of the goods or lands; as against the heirs, however, it is only prima facie evidence. Where, therefore, in an action at law upon the covenant of the intestate against his administrator, judgment had been entered in favour of the plaintiff, who subsequently proceeded in the court of chancery to realize his judgment, the court held that it was not necessary for him to give any evidence as to the consideration upon which the judgment was founded; and the defendants, the heirs-atlaw, having refrained from calling witnesses to impeach the judgment, resting on their objection that the plaintiff was bound to give evidence of the bona fides of the judgment, in con sequence of which a decree was pronounced against them, the court on rehearing ordered a new hearing to take place with a view to affording the defendants an opportunity of disputing the validity of the judgment, upon payment by them of the costs of the hearing and rehearing. Eccles v. Lowry, 23 Gr. 167.

Personal Representative.] — A judg-medical gainst an executor upon a debt of the deceased, is conclusive evidence of the indebt-edness to the plaintiff as against all other creditors of the deceased, and is so in administration proceedings, though the administration is of goods and lands. Therefore where a judgment had been obtained against the executor of H. on certain promissory notes indorsed by him and maturing after his death, and upon H.'s estate afterwards being administered by the court the judgment creditor brought the judgment into the master's office and claimed upon it, and other creditors of H. thereupon asked to be allowed to adduce evidence as against the claim on the ground that no proper notice of dishonour had been sent by the holder of the promissory notes upon which the judgment had been obtained:—Held, that they could not be permitted to do so. Semble, that such judgment is only prima facie evidence as against heirs-at-law, and devisees of the deceased. Eccles v. Lowry, 23 Gr. 167, commented on. Re Hague, Traders' Bank v. Murray, 13 O. R. 727

Pleading.] — This action as originally brought was to take the plaintiff's accounts under a post-nuptial settlement, in which the plaintiff and the defendant D. J. R. were trustees, but after the hearing and before decree, a question was raised by amendment as to the liability of the defendant D. J. R. to pay certain moneys alleged to have been advanced by the plaintiff for the maintenance of his wffle and children, and on the argument of this question, judgment was given directing a reference as to such claim. Before the argument judgment had been rendered in the superior court of Quebec on the same question in D. J. R.'s favour, and on the reference D. J. R. proved this judgment, contending that it concluded the matter, as being res judicata, though not pleaded:—Held, reversing 10 P. R. 301, that D. J. R. had had no opportunity of pleading such judgment, and that it was therefore conclusive when set up in the master's office without being pleaded. Hughes v. Rees, 9 O. R. 1989 O. R.

Previous Decision.]—The Intercolonial Railway Act provides that no contractor for construction of any part of the road should be paid except on the certificate of the engineer, approved by the commissioners, that the work was completed to his satisfaction. Before the supplinat's work in this case was completed the engineer resigned, and another was appointed to investigate and report on the unsettled claims. His report recommended that a certain sum should be paid to the contractors. Held, that as the court in McGreevy v. The Queen, 18 S. C. R. 371, had, under precisely the same state of facts, held that the contractor could not recover, that decision should be followed, and the judgment dismissing the petition of right affirmed. Ross v. The Queen, 25 S. C. R. 564.

Promissory Note—Agreement, — Declaration, that in consideration that the plaintif, for the accommodation of the defendant, would sign a certain note made by C., payable to the defendant, for $100, defendant promised to obtain and deliver to the plaintiff accounts due to C. by different persons to that amount, as security: that the plaintiff signed the note, but the defendant did not obtain the accounts; by reason whereof the plaintiff was obliged to pay the note with interest, and the costs of a suit brought by the defendant thereon. Defendant plended, by way of estoppel, that in the suit by him on the note this plaintiff pleaded as a defence the same agreement now declared upon: that issue having been taken thereon the jury found that no such agreement was made, and that judgment entered on that verdict still remained in force:—Held, a good defence. Campbell v. Holmes, 21 U. C. R. 465.

Promissory Note—Fraud.]—Plaintif being indebted to defendant on a promissory note for $196$ and book debts, executed a mortigage to him for $50$. The land in laid mortigage to him for $50$. The land in laid mortigage to him for $50$. The land in laid mortigage to him for $50$. The land in laid mortigage to the property of the sum of $90$ to be applied on defendant's mortgage, on payment of which sum defendant executed a discharge thereof. Defendant subsequently sued the plaintiff in the division court for a balance on said note and book debts, and recovered judgment. Plaintiff now sued for fraud in defendant having sued him for said note, alleging that when said mortgage was given defendant agreed to give up said note when the mortgage was satisfied:—Held, that the plaintiff could not, after failing in the division court suit, maintain the action. Bigelow v. Staley, 14 C. P.

Promissory Note—Indurser:]—An action was brought against a firm in the firm name as makers, and an individual as indorser, of a note, and was dismissed as against the indorser on the ground that he had indorsed at the request of the holders for their accommodation, judgment being given against the firm:—Held, reversing 24 O. R! 497, that the dismissal of this action was an answer to an action on the judgment, in which it was sought to prove that the indorser was, as regards the plaintiffs, a partner by estomel and therefore bound by the judgment against the firm. Ray v. Isbister, 22 A. R. 12; 26 S. C. R. 79.

Promissory Note—Usury.]—Where the payee of a note indorsed the same to A. upon a usurious consideration, and A. afterwards failed in an action against the maker upon the ground of usury:—Held, that such payee might still recover against the drawer; and, semble, that the ground of the failure, in the former action, might be proved by any person present at the trial; and it was not necessary to prove a re-indorsement by the usurer to the payee. Bidwell v. Stanton, Tay, 366.

Quantum of Damages.]—The plaintiff company having brought an action against L on a mortgage, and claiming damages for having made a distress on F., the tenant of the premises, at the request of L, on the reference to ascertain what damage the company had properly sustained by reason of such distress, the master held that the amount of a judgment recovered by F. against the company was the proper measure, and was conclusive evidence of the amount, although it was proved before him that an offer had been made by L to the company to furnish witnesses and assist in the defence, and had been declined, and the witnesses when examined shewed that their evidence might materially have affected the verdict:—Held, that the ruling of the master was erroneous, and that the case must go back to him to revise his report. Peterborough Real Estate Investment Co. v. Ireton, 5 O. R. 47.

Quashing Search Warrant — Justification.]—A judgment on certiorari quashing a search warrant would not estop the defendant from justifying under it in proceedings to replevy the goods seized where he was not a party to the proceeding to set the warrant aside, and such judgment was a judgment inter partes only. Sletch v. Hulbert, 25 S. C. R. 620.

Quebec Judgment.]—Under 22 Vict. c. 5, s. 58, consolidated in C. S. L. C. c. 83, s. 53, s.-s. 2, a judgment may be recovered in the 55, 8, 2, a judgment may be recovered at the Province of Quebec, on a personal service in Ontario, in an action in which the cause thereof arose in Quebec, so as to render such judgment conclusive on the merits. A note made in Ontario, payable at a particular place in Quebec, is a contract deemed to be made in Quebec, the place of performance, and under C. S. C. c. 57, s. 4, is payable at the place anamed therein, C. S. U. C. c. 42, requiring the use of the restrictive words, "not other-wise or elsewhere," applying only to notes wise or elsewhere," applying of made and payable in Ontario. applying only to notes made and payable in Ontario. The note in this case was made in Toronto, payable at the Mechanics' Bank, Montreal, and was sent to Montreal, and there held until maturity, when The note it was presented for payment and dishonour-ed:—Held, that the contract being performable in Quebec, and the breach occurring there, the cause of action arose there, so as to bring the defendant within the operation of 22 Vict. c. 5, s. 58, and to make a judgment recovered c. o, s. 38, and to make a judgment recovered against him in Quebec, on a personal service in Ontario, conclusive on the merits; and the defendant was therefore precluded from set-ting up a defence on the merits, and was alto except to the jurisdiction only. Quere, whether the personal service referred to in R. S. O. 1877 c. 50, s. 145, refers to per-sonal service in Quebec. Court v. Scott, 32 C. P. 148.

Reasons for Judgment-Premature Action—second Action for Same Cause.]—The plaintiff, a mortgagee, took from the defendant, a mortgage ant, a mortgagor, an assignment of the covenant of a purchaser of the equity of redemp-tion to pay off the mortgage, and on receiving certain securities from him agreed not to sue him until certain other remedies against subburchasers had been exhausted. then sued the defendant on his covenant in the mortgage, but failed in the action on the ground that the remedies mentioned had not In this action on the same been exhausted. covenant :-Held, that the court might properly examine the pleadings, evidence and proccedings at the trial of the former action, and that the reports of the reasons given for the judgments might be looked at for the purpose of shewing what was decided; that the dismissal of an action on the ground that it was prematurely brought is no bar to another action on the same demand after time has removed the objection, and that the plaintiff having before this action was brought exhausted her remedies and made an arrangement with the purchaser of the equity of re-demption by which she was placed in the same position with respect to him as she was in before she received the securities mentioned, was entitled to recover from the defendant in this action notwithstanding she had retransferred the securities to the purchaser and agreed not to sue on his covenant, such agreement having reserved the defendant's right to sue the purchaser of the equity of redemption should the covenant be reassigned by the plaintiff to defendant. Barber v. McCuaig (2), 31 O. R. 593.

Revocation of Letters of Administration.]-The letters of administration to an infant as administrator, were revoked after the judgment against him in an action brought by him to recover certain assets of the estate, and new letters were granted to one P., who thereupon obtained an order of revivor in such action, directing the further proceedings to be carried on by P. as administrator and plain-tiff. Before P. could move against the judgment the order of revivor was rescinded. in this administration action attacked the validity of the securities which the former administrator had impeached in the action referred to, whereupon the plaintiffs (who had been defendants in that action) applied to have it ruled that the judgment in such other action was res judicata against P. in this administration proceeding:—Held, that by the discharge of the order of revivor in the action, in which the plaintiff by revivor was suing in autre droit, such action was left without a plaintif, and the judgment re-covered was not under the circumstances an estoppel against P. Merchants' Bank v. Monteith, 10 P. R. 467.

Right of Way.]—In an action for obstructing a right of way, the defendant denied the right of way claimed, and the plaintiff reelied, by way of estoppel, a judgment in his favour in a former suit with the defendant, in which the same right was in question, averrag the way claimed to be the same in both actions:—Held, a good replication, for if the right had been lost by anything occurring since the former action, the defendant should have shewn it. Johnson v. Boyle, 11 U. C. R. 101.

Right of Way.]—The third and fourth counts charged defendant with obstructing the plaintiff's right of way from his land over lot 14 to a highway, and back again from the highway over lot 14 to plaintiff's land. To a olea denying plaintiff's right to the way, the plaintiff replied, by way of estoppel, a former recovery against defendant for obstructing a right of way then claimed by the plaintif from her said land "over lot 14 to a highway, and back again from the highway over lot 14 to plaintiff's land:"—Held, on denurrer, replication good, for that the issue was as to the existence of any right of way in plaintif over lot 14, and that was determined by the former recovery. Dean v. Grey, 22 C. P. 202.

Set-off.]—Where A. is sued by B., and is setting to set off a demand for which he has already obtained a verdict against B.:—Held, that he is estopped by such verdict from bringing the same identical demand a second time before the jury by way of set-off. Russell v. Roxc, 7 U. C. R. 484.

Sheriff—Indemnity.]—Action on a bond from one A. C., defendant, to S., (sheriff) indemnifying him, &c., by reason of his paying over to A. C. $390, alleged to be due to defendant for rent of the premises on which the goods out of which the money was made were seized, (the rent not having accrued due at the time of seizure.) assigning as a breach that defendant did not indemnify, &c., but permitted one J., an execution creditor, (whose wift of fi. fa, was in S.'s hands at the time of the seizure.) to recover a judgment against him S., (which he had to pay) for not paying over the amount paid to defendant for rent:—Held, that J.'s judgment (of which an exemplification was put in) was an estoppel upon the defendants, and that defendants were rightly prohibited at the trial from giving evidence of the time at which the rent accrued due. Smith v. Cleghorn, 10 C. P. 520.

Sheriff—Sureties.]—Recovery against the sheriff for a false return of nulla bona after money made:—Held, a bar to an action against the sheriff and his sureties on their covenant, for not paying over such money. Miller v. Corbett, 26 U. C. R. 478.

Slander.]—In an action by husband and wife, for slander of the wife in accusing her of adultery, it appeared that the husband had sned the person accused of the adultery for charging which this action was brought, and recovered a judgment against him in an action of crim, con., and judgment had been given in chancery against the wife on the ground of adultery, in a suit brought by her against the husband for alimony:—Held, that under the circumstances the verdict entered for the plaintiff must be set aside when the husband, if so advised, might raise the auestion whether he was not dominus litis. Campbell V, Campbell 25 C. P. 368.

Technical Objection.]—A former suit had been instituted by the plaintiff which had been dismissed, as the plaintiff had not acquired the logal estate until after the bill was filed:—Held, that under such circumstances the question was not res judicata. Adamson v. Adamson, 28 Gr. 221.

Term of Credit not Expired.] — A plaintiff having failed upon a trial for a portion of his claim (goods sold) because the term of credit had not expired when he sued:

Administration — Proving Claim — Change in Position]—A receiver was appointed under the decree in this suit to collect revenue, and, after paying expenses, to pay the balances into court, which were to be, aid out on the report of the master to the parties entitled as found by him. 8, pursuant to advertisement for creditors, proved his claim. The master had not made his report, By 44 Vict. c, 61 (O.), the defendants were authorized to pledge the bonds or debenture stock to be issued thereunder, and the proceeds were to be paid out on the order of C. and F., who were appointed creditors trustees, in payment of all money necessary to be paid for the discharge of the receiver in this suit. An order of court was made on the application of the defendants, discharging the receiver without providing for the payment of claimants who had proved under the decree. The Act directed that all who came under it should take lifty cents on the dollar:—Held, that the position of affairs having altered since the time at which S, had proved his claim, he was not bound thereby, and should not be restrained from prosecuting an action for his debt to recover the full amount, if possible, Lee v. Credit Valley R. W. Co., 20 Gr. 480.

S. O. 1887 c. 227, s. 47. 1b.

Assessment — Payment of Taxes under Protest.]—The chamberlain of the city of St. John is authorized, without any previous proceedings, to issue execution for taxes if not paid within a certain time after notice. In order to avoid such execution the bank of New Brunswick paid their taxes under protest:—Held, that such payment did not preclude them from afterwards taking proceedings to have the assessment qualified. Ex parte Levin, 11 S. C. R. 484.

Moodie, 7 U. C. 11, 301.

Assignment for Creditors — Attack after Attending Mectings.]—After the execution of a desed of assignment for creditors the assignee called a meeting of the creditors, at which the defendant, a creditor, attended and assented to a resolution appointing him one of the inspectors to aid the assignee in winding up the estate; and a resolution was also passed to past certain arrears of wages; and he except a constant of the stock. A few days afterwards he brought an action on his claim against the debtors, recovered judgment by default, and issued execution, contending that the assignment was invalid:—Held, that the defendant had assented to the assignment and was estomped from denying its validity. Carriers - Mixing Goods.]-Declaration for breach of defendants' contract to carry 3.244 pounds of Canadian wool from T. to P. by rail, and thence to B. by steamboat or and deliver there to plaintiff, certain perils and casualties excepted, with a count in trover for the goods. The evidence was, that on the 6th September, 1864, plaintiff delivered to defendants thirteen sacks of wool, weighing 3,244 pounds, addressed to the consignees in B., to be sent subject to defendants tariff and to the conditions contained in the plaintiff's written request to defendants to receive same, defendants giving a receipt with similar conditions thereon. This wool was put into a car with wool from Michigan, consigned to one R., together with certain duti-able goods, and all arrived at Island Pond on the 18th September following, where they were detained by the customs authorities. The car subsequently took fire, and the sacks containing the wool were burnt. Some of the wool was also burnt, and some of it singed. In endeavouring to save it, the wool became mixed, and was carried in this state to P., where new sacks were obtained and the wool conveyed in them to B., and the thirteen sacks delivered to the consignees on 22nd October, but containing only 2,498, instead of 3,244, which the bill of lading shewed. On the de-livery of four additional sacks, the weight being still short by twenty-nine pounds, an examination of the wool was made, when it was found to consist of S73 pounds of Canada fleece, 1,160 pounds scorched Canada, and 1,168 pounds American fleece damaged by fire. This was sold on plaintiff's account, but did not realize as much, it was proved, as it would have brought had it arrived about a month earlier. It further appeared that 9%2 pounds Canada fleece had been delivered to R. The Judge charged the jury that defendants were not liable for the damage by fire, or for the not liable for the damage by fire, or for the delay at Island Pond, as they had not con-tracted to guard against this; and that the plaintiff was entitled to such damages as arose from defendants' neglect in delivering mixed instead of all Canadian fleece, and for the amount of short weight. The jury hav-ing found for the plaintiff:—Held, on motion for a new trial, that the plaintiff was not settemed by the taking of the American wool estopped by the taking of the American wool from shewing a conversion by defendants of the Canadian wool; but that had defendants pleaded that he took the latter in lieu of the former, or of so much thereof as was deficient, there was evidence to go to the jury to warrant a verdict for defendants to a certain extent, if not for all that really ought to have been delivered:—Held, also, that the proper direction to the jury would be, that defendants were not liable for the delay, or loss by fire; that they were liable for the wool belonging that they were hable for the wool beinging to plaintiff, which they carried to B. and did not deliver; but that if the plaintiff, with knowledge of all the circumstances, took the one kind for the other and sold it, when he might have had his own, and the damaged Canadian wool was delivered to the consignee of the American wool with plaintiff's consent. in consideration of his getting the American in lieu of it, then the plaintiff could not claim substantial damages either for breach of contract or for the wrongful conversion. Milligan v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 17 C. P. 115.

Carriers — Representation as to Residence.)—The plaintiff was at Indianapolis when the goods which he had given to defendants to carry, (except the missing box sued for) arrived there, and remained until some time in the month following:—Held, that he was resident there within the condition in the defendants' contract relating to residents beyond their line, and that having named himself as the consignee at that place he was estopped from denying such residence. La Pointe v. Grand Trank R. W. Co., 26 U. C. R. 479.

Certiorari. —The defendant in this case having had the certiorari directed to the magistrate who convicted was held to be estopped from objecting that the conviction was in reality made by three as appeared from the memorandum of conviction which was signed by them. Regina v. Smith, 46 U. C. R. 442.

Chose in Action—Admission of Funds.]

—The contractor for building a church, being indebted to D. for materials furnished therefor, gave him the following order on the defendants, who were the building trustees, of which they were duly notified: "Pay to the order of D. the sum of $306 out of certificate of money due me on 1st June for materials furnished to above church." This the defendants refused to accept, and on 31st May paid, out of moneys arising out of the contract, an order for a larger sum, made on that date in favour of another person, under an arrangement made by them with the latter alone:—Held, that there was a good equitable assignment in favour of D. of money due on the 1st June; and that defendants, by the payment of the other order, were estopped from denying that there were sufficient moneys then due to the contractor to cover his order. Bank of British North America v. Gibson, 21 O. R. 613.

Compromise of Claim. — The compromise of a claim upon the plaintiff's assertion that it is the only one, will not of itself form an equitable defence to another claim, the right to recover in respect of which is not otherwise contested. King v. Miller, 22 C. P., 450.

Contract—Boomage.]—F. McC. brought an action against G. B. for $4.164 as due him for charges which he was authorized to collect under 36 Vict. c. 81, (Q.) for the use by G. B. of certain booms in the Nicolet river during the years 1887 and 1888. G. B. pleaded that under certain contracts entired into between F. McC. and G. B. and his auteurs, and the interpretation put upon them by F. McC., the repairs to the boims are the and were, in fact, made by him, and that in consideration thereof he was a pleaded compensation of a sum of 80.620 for use by F. McC. The consumer of the consideration thereof he was bound to make :—Held. that was evidence that F. McC. had led G. B. to believe that under the contracts he was to have the use of the booms free in consideration for the use of the booms free in consideration for the plant of the dues he might otherwise have been authorized to collect:—Held, further, that even if F. McC. 's right of action was authorized by the statute the amount claimed was fully compensated for by the amount expended in repairs for him by G. B. Ball v. McCaffrey, 20 S. C. R. 319.

Criminal Prosecution—Adjournment at Defendant's Request.]—Held, that where an adjournment of the proceedings before the magistrate for more than one week had been made at the request of the defendant, who afterwards attended on the resumed proceedings, taking his chances of securing a dismissal of the prosecution, and urzing that on the evidence it ought to be dismissed, defendant had estopped himself from objecting afterwards that such subsequent proceedings on the prosecution were on this ground illegal. Regina v. Helfernum, 13 O. R. 616.

Cross-claims — Settlement.]—The plaintiffs sued defendant pleaded a set-off against L., one of the plaintiffs, accepted by L. in satisfaction. It appeared that defendant pleaded built a house for L., cross demands arose out of the contract, and their solicitors negotiated for a settlement; that the $150 was mentioned, and L. is solicitor offered to pay $650 in full of all matters, taking this $150 into account as a credit to L. Defendant refused to take less than $700, and sued L., whose solicitor, before he was aware of the suit, paid $150, and afterwards paid $50 into court, which was taken out. The jury were asked whether L. or his attorney agreed absolutely to allow the $100 as a payment on the contract, or only for the sake of a settlement, which was not arrived at; to which defendant objected, that if the negotiations proceeded on the supposition that the $150 was to be so allowed, and L. afterwards paid the $700 as lowed, and L. afterwards paid the $700 to allowed, and L. afterwards paid the $700 to allowed.

on a different understanding, he was bound so to state at the time:—Held, that the direction was right, and a verdict for the plaintiffs was upheld. Young v. Taylor, 25 U. C. R. 583.

Crown.]—The doctrine of estoppel cannot be invoked against the Crown. Humphrey v. The Queen, 2 Ex. C. R. 386.

Crown — Bond — Sureties—Mistake.]-In a case arising in the Province of Quebec upon a postmaster's bond, it appeared that the principal and sureties each bound themselves in the penal sum of $1,600, and the condition of the obligation was stated to be such that if the principal faithfully discharged the duties of his office and duly accounted for all moneys and property which came into his custody by virtue thereof the obligation should be void. The bond also contained a provision that it should be a breach of the bond if the postmaster committed any offence under the laws governing the administration of his office. It was objected by the sureties against the validity of the bond that it contained no primary obligation, the principal himself being bound in a penal sum and that the sureties were not therefore bound to anything under the law of the Province of Quebec :-Held, that there was a primary obligation on the part of the principal insomuch as he undertook to faithfully discharge the duties of his office, and to duly account for all moneys and property which might come into his cus-That as the bond conformed to the provisions of an Act respecting the securthe provisions of all Act respecting the secu-ity to be given by officers of Canada, 31 Vict. c. 37 (D.), 35 Vict. c. 19 (D.), and The Post-office Act, 38 Vict. c. 7 (D.), it was valid office Act, 55 Vict. c. 1 (12.7) it was valid even if it did not conform in every particular to the provisions of Art. 1131, C. C. L. C. It was also objected that the bond did not cover the defalcations of the postmaster in respect of moneys coming into his hands as agent of the savings bank branch of the post-office de-partment:—Held, that it was part of the duties of the postmaster to receive the savings bank deposits and that the sureties were liable to make good all the moneys so coming into his custody and not accounted for. The sureties upon a postmaster's bond are not dis-charged by the fact that during the time the bond is in force the postmaster was guilty of defalcations, and that such defalcations were not discovered or communicated to the sureties owing to the negligence of the post-office authorities. Nor is the Crown estopped from recovering from the sureties in such a case by the mistaken statement of one of its officers that the postmaster's accounts were correct, upon the strength of which the sureties allowed funds of the postmaster to be applied to other purposes than that of indemnifying themselves. The Crown is not bound by the doctrine of Phillips v. Foxall, L. R. 7 O. B. 666, inasmuch as it proceeds upon the theory that failure by the obligee to communicate his knowledge of wrong doing to the principal amounts to fraud, and fraud cannot be imputed to the Crown. The statute 33 Hen. VIII. c. 39, s. 79, respecting suits upon bonds, is not in force in the Province of Quebec. The Queen v. Black, 6 Ex. C. R. 236.

Damages—Attempts at Settlement.]—A company, to whose rights in this behalf the Crown had succeeded, had paid damages to the claimant's predecessor in title for injury resulting to the property in question from the construction of a railway. At the time when such damages were assessed there was no in-tention to construct an overhead bridge, and they were assessed on the understanding that there was to be a crossing at rail level :-Held, that the defendant was not, by reason of such payment, precluded from recovering compensation for injuries occasioned by the overhead bridge. The defendant, and a number of other persons interested in the manner in which the crossing was to be made, met the chief engineer of Government railways and talked over the matter with him. The defendant, who did not appear to have taken any active part in the discussion, and the other persons mentioned, wished to have a crossing at rail level with gates; but the chief engineer declined to authorize such gates, and it was decided that there should be an overhead crossing with a grade of one in twenty. Subsequently the defendant signed a petition to have the grade increased to one in twelve, as the interference with the access to his property would in that way be lessened. prayer of the petition was not granted: -Held, that by his presence at such meeting the defendant did not waive his right to com-pensation. The Queen v. Malcolm, 2 Ex. C.

Damages to Property—Claimant's Acquiescence.]—The suppliant sought to recover damages for the flooding of a portion of his farm, resulting from the construction of certain works connected with the Intercolonial Railway. The Crown produced a release un-der the hand of the suppliant, given subse-quent to the time of the expropriation of a portion of his farm for the right of way of a section of the Intercolonial Railway, whereby he accepted a certain sum "in full compensation and final settlement for deprivation of water, fence-rails taken, damage by water, and all damages past, present, and prospective arising out of the construction of the Inter-colonial Rallway." and released the Crown "from all claims and demands whatever in connection therewith." It was also proved that, although the works were executed subsequent to the date of this release, they were undertaken at the request of the suppliant and for his benefit, and not for the benefit of the railway, and that with respect to a part of them, he was present when it was being constructed and actively interfered in such construction:—Held, that he was not entitled to compensation. Bertrand v. The Queen, 2 Ex. C. R. 285.

Election to Sue in Ontario.] — The plaintiffs having filed their bill in Ontario, must be taken to admit that the court has jurisdiction in respect of the matters therein embraced; and the practice of the court requiring it, and a method having been provided for service of process out of the jurisdiction, the plaintiffs were bound to follow the practice if the objection were taken. Exchange Bank v. Springer, Exchange Bank v. Barnes, 29 Gr. 270.

Election of Remedies — Inconsistent Remedies,]—See Wood v. Reesor, 22 A. R. 57; Rielle v. Reid, 26 A. R. 54.

Evidence — Reference in Will Filed.]— The plaintiff having out in a will in which the testator spoke of H. as his wife, was held not estopped from denying the marriage. George v. Thomas. 10 U. C. R. 604. Fictitions Sale — Public Interest,—On an indictment for false pretences, it appeared that defendant held the title of certain land belonging to one A, who lived in the United States. A, exchanged it with H, (the prosecutor) for other land, and gave an order on defendant to convey to H. When H. presented this order, defendant represented that a claim having been made against him for A.'s debts, he had sworn that the farm belonged to himself; and to keep up the appearance of this being true, it was agreed between H. and defendant, that a certain sum should be paid over by H. to defendant on receiving the deed, as for the purchase money, and immediately returned. H. borrowed $700 for the purpose, and they, with H.'s brother and others, went to a solicitor's office, where the deed was drawn, with a consideration expressed of $3.150. The $700 was handed to defendant, and counted over by him as if it were $2.900, and notes given by H. and his brother for the balance $1,150. Defendant instead of returning the money and notes ran away with them:—Held, the public interest being concerned, that the principle of estoppel would not amply, so as to nevent H. from asserting that the baxment which he professed to make in good faith was in fact only a pretence. Region v. Eving, 21 U. C. R. 523.

Frand — Personal Representative.]—An executor or administrator is estopped by the fraud or criminal acts of the deceased person he represents from seeking to invalidate securities tainted by such fraud or criminal acts which such deceased person had given to his creditors during his lifetime. Merchants' Bank v. Monteith, 10 P. R. 467.

Guarantee-Forgery-Attempts to Settle.] -In an action on a guarantee to secure payment for goods furnished by plaintiffs to one W., alleged to have been made by defendant and one G., but afterwards proved to be a forgery, it appeared that the plaintiffs had no communication whatever with defendant during the currency of the account sued for; but that W. afterwards becoming in-solvent, one F. was sent to Kincardine, where certain creditors, W. lived, to represent amongst whom were plaintiffs, and at a meet ing at which defendant was present, F. asked W. what claims were guaranteed, and by whom, to which W. answered that plaintiffs' note, with certain others, was indorsed by defendant and G., and although defendant heard this, he said nothing. F., however, did not then appear to have been aware of the guarantee. After this W. absconded, and antice. After this W. absconded, and some time afterwards defendant and G. went to plaintiffs' office and tried to make a settle-ment, for a less amount, of W.'s liability. This the plaintiffs refused to do, alleging that they were fully secured, and produced G. at once said that he did not guarantee. guarantee. Q. at once said that he dat ab-believe it to be his signature; but defendant said nothing:—Held, that defendant was not estopoed by his conduct from denying his lia-bility. Turner v. Wilson, 23 C. P. 87.

Heirs Acquiescing in Continuance of Deceased's Business, —Heirs, being also next of kin, who lad been parties to the continuing of the business of the deceased with his assets and those of his partner, were—Held, precluded from objecting to payment by the estate of the losses incurred in continuing the business. Insolvency—Discharge.]—As to insolvent disputing a claim under an award after discharge, by attending the arbitration. See Pidgeon v. Martin, 25 C. P. 233.

Insolvency — Disputing Assignce's Status.]—Plaintiff having proved his claim before the assignee in insolvency, and having obtained an order in the Queen's bench to set asside the insolvent court, with costs to be paid to him out of the estate, is precluded from objecting that the assignee was not duly appointed. Allan v, Garratt, 30 U. C. R. 165.

Insolvency—Proving for Debt not Legally Provable.]—The plaintiff filed his bill on the 14th March, 1874. On the 31st of the same month an attachment in insolvency was issued by the defendant against the plaintiff. The decree dismissed the plaintiff's bill, with costs, in October, 1874. Defendant proved against the estate for the costs of the chancery suit, but did not take his dividend from the assignee in insolvency, and took no further steps for the recovery of his claim until after the order for discharge of the plaintiff (25th May, 1877), when he issued execution. On the application of the plaintiff, the Judge in chambers refused to set aside the execution, holding that defendant was entitled to issue it, and that the proving against the estate for the costs of the suit when the claim was not legally provable, did not operate as an estoppel in pais between the plaintiff and defendant. Stevenson, Sexemith, S. P. R. 280.

Insolvency—Receipt of Dividends—Adverse Claim by Insolvent to Land.]—An insolvent had obtained his discharge, and had acquired, as he contended, a title by length of possession to certain land belonging to the estate as against the assignee. Having bought up the claims of most of his creditors, he took proceedings to compel the assignee to wind up the estate, and the assignee sold the land up question under an order of the couring the land, and gave notice of the land, and gave notice of the insolvent subsequently of the land and gave notice of the insolvent subsequently are the land, and gave notice of the insolvent subsequently that the must be taken to have procured the action of the assignee, and could not be allowed to repudiate the sale, or to dispute the citie which had passed to the purchaser. Miller v, Hamlin, 2 O. R. 103.

Insolvency — Receipt of Dividends—Adverse Claim to Assets.]—F, being about to indorse notes for the accommodation of B, conveyed his real estate to O, who then conveyed to the wife of F. Afterwards F. became an insolvent under the Insolvent Act of 1875, and the assignee took proceedings to impeach the transaction, the result of which was, that it was declared fraudulent and void as against the assignee, who thereupon advertised the property for sale, and sold it as part of the estate of F, to the defendants. Pending these proceedings the plaintiff had obtained execution on a judgment against F.'s wife, on pro-missory notes made by her and F., under which the sheriff, after the sale by the assignee, sold all her right, title, and interest in the same property to the plaintiff. The plaintiff proved his claim on the notes and received a dividend in the insolvency proceedings against F.:—Held, (1) reversing 3 O. R. 523, that he was not estopped by the re-ceipt of the dividend nor by the decree obtained in the suit of the assignee (to which he had not been made a party) from asserting that the property belonged to F.'s wife and was exigible under his execution against her; but () that the conveyance to her being in fact shewn to be fraudulent and void against the assignee in insolvency, the plaintiff had acquired no title by the sheriff's sale to himself under the execution, and that the title of the defendants who were in possession under the assignee could not be impeached by the plaintiff. Miller v. Hamlin, 2 O. R. 103, as to the effect of the receipt of a dividend, distinguished. Becmer v. Oliver, 10 A. R. 656.

Justice of the Peace—Return of Conviction.]—In an action against a justice of the peace for a penalty for not returning a conviction to the quarter sessions:—Held, that the defendant having actually convicted and imposed a fine, could not except to the declaration, on the ground that it did not shew that he had jurisdiction to convict. Bayley q. t. v, Curtis, 15 C. P. 366.

Landlord — Abandoning Distress—Bond to Execution Creditor. —The fact of a landlord having joined in a bond that the goods distrained should be forthcoming to be sold upon a fi. fa., will not prejudice his claim for rent, nor will his having distrained as landlord, and afterwards having abandoned the distress, nor even his hidding at the sale of the goods. Bronen v. Ruttan, 7 U. C. R. 97.

Law Society — Maintenance of Osgoode Hall.]—Held, affirming 20 C. P. 490, that the Law Society were not released, under the facts and circumstances there set forth, from their covenant to repair and maintain the building known as "Osgoode Hall" for the accommodation of the superior courts of common law and equity; and that no estoppel arose in favour of the society against the Crown in consequence of the several Acts of the legislature that had been passed in relation thereto. Regina v. Law Society, 21 C. P. 229.

Lease.]—A tenant was held to be estopped from asserting that his possession of the land of which he was tenant, and his user of the way which was enjoyed in connection with it, were other than a possession and user by him as tenant. Re Vockburn, 27 O. R. 450.

Malicious Prosecution—Informant Disputing Magietrate's Aprisdiction.]—In a case for malicious prosecution before a magistrate: —Held, that defenant, by having caused the application to the magistrate as such, was not precluded from objecting that he had no jurisdiction, there being nothing to shew that defendant did not really believe him to have authority. Hunt v. McArthur, 24 U. C. R.

Mandamus—Demand.]—Though the demand proved, on an application for a mandamus, was not in form sufficient, the defendants having resisted the application on other grounds, effect was not given to the objection. Re Board of Education and Corporation of Perth. 39 U. C. R. 34.

Married Woman—Breach of Trust.]—
Quere, whether a married woman consenting to a breach of trust can afterwards complain of it; and, semble, if she make a representation and encourage another to act upon it, she will be compelled to make it good. Hope v.
Beard, 8 Gr. 380.

Misnomer.)—Where a party, by his own conduct and admission, has justified the caling him by a wrong name, he cannot object to the use of such name as a misnomer. Broune v. Smith, 1 P. R. 347.

Nuisance. |--Held, that a person having come to live within the scope of a nuisance after the same had been created, did not prevent his complaining of it as a public nuisance. Regina v. Breester, S. C. P. 208.

In 1861, while defendant was building a tannery on land adjoining the plaintiff's, the plaintiff encouraged defendant to proceed. The business was commenced the same year; in 1863 additions were made to the buildings with the plaintiff's knowledge and acquescence; and the plaintiff made no complaint until 1808, though all this time the business had been carried on, and the planntiff had resided on the premises adjoining:—Held, that he had debarred himself from relief in equity, on the ground of the tannery being a nuisance, Heenan v. Decara, 17 Gr. 638; 18 Gr. 438.

Partnership — Creditor's Knowledge,]—
When a person, not in fact a partner, authorizes his name to be used in the firm name of a partnership there is a holding out of himself as a partner to any one who knows or has reason to believe that this represents the name of the person so authorizing its use, but a partnership by estoppel or by holding out will not be created if the real position of affairs is known to the creditor. Judgment below, 21 O, R, 683, reversed in part. Melcan v. Clark, 20 A. R, 660.

Partnership.]-The defendant set up that the plaintiffs had elected to treat other members of his firm as their sole debtor, by reason of their having proved their claim with and purchased the assets of the partnership from the assignee thereof under an assignment for the benefit of creditors, in which it was recited that the other was the only person composing the firm; and that the defendant had relied and acted upon their conduct and election, and they were therefore estopped from suing him as a partner :- Held, that, even if there was evidence that the defendant had acted in any way by reason of the plaintiffs' action, no estoppel arose, because the plain-tiffs did nothing shewing an election not to look to him, and he had no right to assume an election from what they did, nor to act as if such an election had been made. Ray v. Ibister, 24 O. R. 497.

See this case in appeal, on another point, 22 A. R. 12, 26 S. C. R. 79. Patent — Assignment—Re-assignment.]— One C. assigned an undivided interest in a patent to B. with whom he entered into partnership. During the partnership B. retained the interest so assigned, and upon a dissolution re-assigned simply what he had received without giving any covenant and without asserting by recital or otherwise the validity of the patent:—Held, that B. was not estopped from disputing the validity of the patent. Grip Printing and Publishing Co. of Toronto v. Butterfield, 11 A. R. 145.

Patent—Licensee Disputing Validity,1— The holder of patents for improvements in certain agricultural implements agreed to assign to defendant the exclusive right to sell these implements, but not to manufacture them; and in certain contingencies he also agreed to assign the patents themselves. In fact the patents were invalid for want of novelty, and the defendant having reassigned any interest he had in the patents, claimed the right to manufacture the implements for his own benefit:—Held, that owing to the agreement between the parties, and their dealings with each other thereunder, the defendant was estopped from questioning the validity of the patents. Gillies v. Cotton, 22 Gr. 123.

Patent—Licensor Disputing Validity.]— During the existence of a license the licensor cannot dispute the validity of a patent obtained by him, and afterwards assigned by him for value to another. Whiting v. Tuttle, 17 Gr. 454.

Payment into Court.]—To an action of indebitatus assumpsit, defendant pleaded, I. As to all but £106 ls, 11d., non assumpsit, 2. As to £28 12s, 6d. parcel, &c., payment; as to £73 9s, 5d., residue, &c., payment into court. Plaintiff took issue on the first plea; traversed the payment alleged in the second; and as to the third plea, took out the money paid into court:—Held, that it was open to the plaintiff on the general issue to prove a charge not covered by the other pleas; and that the defendant, having sworn that he had paid in nothing on account of that charge, was precluded from shewing that the other items which the plaintiff was entitled to would not cover the money paid into court. Taylor v. Flood, 10 U. C. R. 438.

Proceeding at Law and in Insolvency.]—Certain debtors executed a deed of assignment for payment of creditors, but not in accordance with the Insolvent Act of 1804. The defendant, subsequently to this deed, issued a writ of execution against the debtors, and then took proceedings in insolvency, under the Act of 1844, against their estate, for the general benefit of creditors:—Held, affirming 16 C. P. 445, that the assignment was an act of bankruptcy and void. and could not be set up, on the issue joined, for any purpose; and that, therefore, the defendant, the execution plaintiff, though petitioner in insolvency, could, notwithstanding his proceedings in insolvency, founded on his judgment at law and the assignment, enforce his execution against the debtor's estate, to the postponement of the rest of the creditors. Thorne v. Torrance, 18 C. P. 29.

Recognizance—Disputing Commissioner's Status.]—Defendants, who Itad gone before one A., who was bona fide supposed to be a commissioner for the county of Lennox, and acknowledged a recognizance, were:—Held, not estopped from disputing the authority of A. as commissioner. Macfarlane v. Allan, 6 C. P. 496.

Reference.] — As to objecting to reference to a local master in chancery, on the ground of interest. See Cotter v. Cotter, 21 Gr. 159.

River Improvements—Joint User.]—Where a riparian owner of lands on a lower level had been permitted by the plaintiffs, for a number of years, to take water necessry to operate his mill through a thume he had constructed along the river bank, partition of half the expense of keeping with the plaintiffs and, connecting with the plaintiffs hand, connecting with the plaintiffs and these of keeping their mill-race and dam in repair, and these facts had been recognized in deeds and written agreements to which the plaintiffs, and their autenus, had been parties, the plaintiffs could no longer claim exclusive rights to the enjoyment of such river improvements or require the demolition of the flume notwithstanding that they were absolute owners of the strip of land upon which the mill-race and a portion of the flume had been constructed. City of Quebec v. North Shore R. W. Co., 27 S. C. R. 192, and Commune de Berther v. Denis, 27 S. C. R. 147, referred to. Lafrance v. Lafontaine, 30 S. C. R. 20.

Solicitor - Practising without Certificate Allowing Name to Appear as a Member of Firm.]—M., a solicitor who had not taken out the certificate entitling him to practise in the Ontario courts, allowed his name to appear in newspaper advertisements and on professional cards and letter heads as a member ressional cards and letter heads as a member of a firm in active practice. He was not in fact a member of the firm, receiving none of its profits and paying none of its expenses, and the firm name did not appear as solicitors of record in any of the proceedings in their professional business. The Law Society took professional business. The Law Society took proceedings against M. to recover the penalties imposed on solicitors practising without cer-tificate, in which it was shewn that the name of the firm was indorsed on certain papers filed of record in suits carried on by the firm : —Held, reversing 15 A. R. 150, that M. did not "practise as a solicitor" within the meaning of the Act imposing the penalties (R. S. O. 1877 c. 140), and that he was not estopped by permitting his name to appear as a member of a firm of practising solicitors, from shewing that he was not such a member in fact. Macdongall v. Law Society of Upper Canada, 18 S. C. R. 203.

Statutory Illegality. |—B, acted for the plaintiff, who owned a mare, which was matched to trot a race with another mare for $200 a side; and the match was made and the paper, stating the terms of it, signed by B, and by one C., who had no interest in the other mare. B. deposited $200 of the plaintiff's money with defendant as a stakeholder, for which the plaintiff sued:—Held, that the transaction was illegal, under 13 Geo. II. c. 19, C. not owning the horse to be run by him; and that the plaintiff was not estopped from shewing the other horse and the money to be his, for there could be no estopped against shewing the illegality created by statute; and that he was entitled to recover. Battersby v. Odell, 23 U. C. R. 482.

Tax Sale—Presence of Owner.]—It was proved that the owner was himself present at the sale in question, and purchased one lot which was ten or eleven ahead of the lot in question, and also another lot three below it on the list; but it was not shewn that he was present when the actual lot in question was sold;—Held, that he was not estopped by conduct from complaining of the sale:—Held, also, that the fact that the owner was informed within three months after the sale of the lot having been sold, when he night have redeemed it, would not deprive him of his right of action. Claston v. Shibley, 9 O. R. 451.

Trustees — Misappropriation — Surety — Knowledge by Cestui que Trust.]—Bayne v. Eastern Trust Company, 28 S. C. R. 606,

2. Bills of Exchange and Promissory Notes.

Acceptance — Disputing Signature of Drawers and Indorsers, [—Although plaintiff, by acceptance and payment, was estopped from disputing the signature of the company, the drawers, yet he was not estopped from denying their signature as indorsers, even though it was on the bill at the time of acceptance and payment. Ryan v. Bank of Montreal, 12 O. R. 39, 14 A. R. 533.

Forged Indorsements — Negligence.]— The plaintiff's valuator, one H., filled in the blanks in an application for a loan on statements of one S, who forged the names of J. B. and I. B. as applicants, and although H. had never seen the property or the applicants, he certified a valuation to the plaintiffs, who accepted the loan, and signed his name as witness to the signatures of the applicants. Cheques in payment thereof to the order of the supposed borrowers were obtained by S., who forged the name of the payees, indorsed his own name, and received payment of the cheques, which were drawn upon the de-fendants, through other banks, who presented them to the defendants and received payment in good faith. The fraud was not discovered for some time, during which the cheques were returned to the plaintiffs at the end of the month as paid, and the usual acknowledgment of the correctness of the account was duly signed:-Held, that the plaintiffs were not estopped from recovering the amount paid on the forged indorsements from the defendants by their agent's negligence, as it did not occur in the transaction itself, and was not the proximate cause of their loss. Agricul-tural Savings and Loan Association v. Fed-eral Bank, 6 A. R. 102, 45 U. C. R. 214. See Saderquist v. Ontario Bank, 14 O. R. 586, 15 A. R. 609.

Forgery — Ratification.] — Y., who had been in partnership with the defendants, trading under the name of the H. C. Company, but had retired from the firm and become the general manager of the company, but with no power to sign drafts, drew a bill of exchange for his own private purposes in the name of the defendants on a firm in Montreal, which was discounted by the plaintiff bank. Before the bill matured Y. wrote to defendants informing them of having used their name, but that they would not have to pay the draft. The bill purported to be indorsed by the company per J. M. Y. (one of the defendants), and the other defendant having seen it in the bank examined it carefully and remarked that J. M. Y.'s signature was not usually so shaky. J. M. Y. afterwards called at the bank and examined the bill very carefully, and in answer to a request from the manager for a cheque he said that it was too late that day, but he would send a cheque the day following. No cheque was sent, and a few days before the bill matured the manager and solicitor of the bank called to see J. M. Y., and asked why he had not sent the cheque. He admitted that he had promised to do so, and at the time he thought he would. Y. afterwards left the country, and in an action against the defendants on the bill they pleaded that the signature of J. M. Y. was forged, and on the trial the jury found that it was forged, and independent was given for the defendants:— Held, affirming I.5 A. R. 573, which reversed 13 O. R. 529, that though fraud or breach of trust may be ratified forgery cannot, and the bank could not recover on the forged bill against the defendants. Banque defendants. Banque Jacques Cartier v. Banque d'Epargne, 13 App. Cas. 118. and Barton v. London and North-Western R. W. Co., 6 Times I. R. 70, followed. Merchants' Bank of Canada v. Luccus, 18 S. C. R. 704.

Indersement — Admissions of Prior Indersement,—Plaintiff declared against L. and A. as indersers of a promissory note, payable to the order of L. avering that the defendants duly indersed the said note, and that A. delivered the said note so indersed to the plaintiff;—Held, on demurrer, that A. must be taken to be the immediate indorse of L. and could not deny L.'s indersement. Griffin v. Latimer, 13 U. C. R. 187.

Indorsement before Indorsement by Payees.]—A., being indebted to the plaintiffs, offered them a note with an indorser. The plaintiffs agreed to accept one, and A. made note payable to the plaintiffs, procured the defendant to indorse it in blank, and delivered it to the plaintiffs. The plaintiffs discounted the note, having indorsed it under the defendant's indorsement. The note having been dishonoured, the plaintiffs took it up, struck out their indorsement, and again indorsed it above defendant's name, adding to their own name "without recourse," and then sued defendant: -Held, that though the plaintiff's had not indorsed the note when defendant indorsed it. and though their indorsement, making them stand as first indorsers on the note, was not written on it until after action brought, vet that such indorsement was sufficient. Semble, also, that the defendant was estopped from denying that the plaintiffs' name was indorsed when it ought to have been. Peck v. Phippon, Indorsement by Agent.] — Defendant held estopped from repudiating indorsements made by his agent. Merchants Bank v. Bostwick, 28 C. P. 450.

Indorsement — Maker's Signature.] — Quare, as to how far an indorser is estopped from denying the maker's signature. Hanscome v. Cotton, 16 U. C. R. 98.

f Indorsement—Signature and Competence of Dautecr.]—The indorser of a bill is estopped by the fact of his indorsement, from denying either the signature of the drawer or her competence, being a feme covert in this case, to draw the bill. Ross v. Dixie, 7 U. C. R. 414.

Indorsement without Authority—Alleged Indorser Obtaining Time.]—In an action against the indorser of a note, it appeared that his name had been written by the maker, his nephew, and there was no evidence of express authority; but it was proved that defordant lad before and afterwards indorses to the plaintiffs, and to thin, he had asked for time, and the standard of him, he had asked for time, months afterwards, when the maker had absconded. His excuse was, that he kept no memorandum of his indorsements, and supposed it was right:—Held, that the defendant had precluded himself by his conduct from disputing his liability. Pratt v. Drake, 17 U. C.

Maker Admitting Signature. — Defendant, such as maker of a note by the independent where the matter of the property of the property of the paintiff, and induced the plaintiff to take it:—Held, that the subscribing witness need not be called, as defendant was estopped. Perry v. Lawless, 5 U. C. R. 514.

Partnership—Partner using Firm Name.]—Incfendants and one M, were in partnership in the lumber business. M, took to the plaintifing a not for $808. Biled up in his writing and purporting to be made by the firm, payable to himself and indorsed by him, which the plaintiffs took from him for value. This note was made for his own private purposes in fraud of the partnership. The plaintiffs manager swore that he relied on M.'s security, and did not inquire about the firm:—Held, that M., as between himself and his co-partners, was not authorized to sign the note in their name; and the plaintiffs having avowedly accepted it on the security of M., not of the firm, about whom they knew nothing and made no inquiries, the defendants were not estopped from setting up M.'s want of authority to bind them. Canadian Bank of Commerce v. Wilson, 35 U. C. R. 9.

Partnership—Indorser.]—See Ray v. Isbister, 22 A. R. 12, 26 S. C. R. 79.

Payment—Sale of Collateral Security.]— The plaintiffs held estopped from denying payment of certain notes sued on, when they had taken a mortgage as security for their payment, and under a power of sale therein had sold to third parties for the amount of the notes. Bank of British North America v. Jones, S. U. C. R. 86.

Unstamped Note—Acceptance in Payment.]—The note upon which this action was brought had not been properly stamped, and it was urged that it could not be a payment or satisfaction of one of which it was intended to be a renewal:—Held, that the plaintiff being aware of the objection to the unstamped note, and receiving it in lieu of the paper which he held, could not urge this as an objection, he having declared upon it as a pomissory note. Baillie v. Pickson, 7 A. R., 759.

3. Companies.

Acting as Shareholder.]—The plaintiff in this case sought to have his name removed from the list of shareholders:—Held, that though as against the company the plaintiff, had he come before the court in good time, might perhaps have had his contract rescinded, yet his having, as the fact was, acted at a meeting of the shareholders after knowledge of what he now charged against them, precluded him from asserting any such right now, and his bill must be dismissed with cests, Petrie v. Gucluh Lumber Co., 2 O. R. 218, 11 A. R. 33, 11 S. C. R. 450.

Amotion of Corporator — Defence of Heegal Merting, —The fact that the plaintiff had attended a meeting which had been the gally called, and had entered upon before the council, did not preclude him from atterwards filing a bill impeaching the proceedings as irregular and invalid. Marsh v. Huron College, 27 Gr. 965.

Bond—Incorporation.] — Semble, that defendants having joined in a bond to the plaintiffs as a corporation, would be estopped from denying the plaintiffs' incorporation. Queen Ins. Co. v. Royd, 7 P. R. 379.

Calls-Transfer.] - To an action brought Calls—Transfer.]— To an action brought for two calls on stock, one made on the 9th December, 1858, and the other on the 17th June, 1859, defendant paid into court the first call, and pleaded never indebted to the second. At the trial he admitted having held the stock, but alleged that on the 5th February, 1858, he had transferred it to M., and he accounted for having subsequently paid the first call sued for, by stating that he had given a bond to the plaintiffs to pay that call, and therefore did so notwithstanding the transfer. To prove the transfer the plaintiffs' transfer book was produced, in which it was entered, the transfer and acceptance being signed by D., who was then the plaintiffs' mansigned by D., who was then the plaintiffs' man-ager, as attorney for both parties, and their stock book was also produced in which the stock appeared in M.'s name since the 5th February, 1858. The powers of attorney were produced, but the plaintiffs secretary, who produced the books, said he believed they existed, and that all the papers were in the hands of the plaintiffs' attorney :- Held, that the of the plaintins attorney;—Hea, that the transfer was sufficiently proved for the pur-poses of this action, being signed by the plain-tiffs' officer as agent for both parties, and re-cognized in their books; that it was unnecessary to produce the bond given by defendant : and that defendant was not estopped by hav-ing paid the call made in December, 1858 from asserting that he had transferred the stock before the other call was made. Provincial Insurance Co. of Canada v. Shaw, 19 U. C. R. 533.

Contributory — Petition for Incorporation. I—Where in winding-up proceedings it appeared that an alleged contributory joined in the petition for incorporation, where it was untruly stated that he had taken 250 shares of the capital stock, whereas the shares he held, had, after incorporation, been voted to him by a resolution of the directors as paidup stock, for services in connection with the formation of the company: — Held, that in view of the provisions of the Ontario Joint Stock Companies' Letters Patent Act, he was liable to be held a contributory in respect of,
at the least, the number of shares voted to him. Semble, he was liable for the full number of shares mentioned in the petition. Re Collingwood Dry Dock Ship Building Co.,
Weddell's Case, 20 O. R. 107.

Debentures Issued in Blank.]—Under the authority of the Act, 38 Vict, c. 47, the defendant company issued debentures in blank, which were landed to the managing director, who subsequently handed them to the plaintiffs as security for a debt of the railway. In an action for an account of what was due under the debentures and public the company language of the was:—Helde the the company language of the was:—Helde in blank and handed them to the managing director, who was also secretary and treasurer, to be dealt with by him at his discretion, he was empowered to complete them by the insertion of the obligee's name, and that the company were estopped from relying on the fact that the name was not filled in until delivery to the plaintiffs. Bank of Toronto V. Cobourg. Peterborough, and Marmora R. W. Co, 7 O. R. 1.

Director Indirectly Invalidating Bonds. — Semble, upon the facts stated in the report of this case, that the plaintiff, one of the directors, should be estopped from alleging that M. was not properly qualified as a director, the effect of which would have been to injuriously affect the value of bonds of the company, to the issue of which the plaintiff was a party. Kiely v. Smyth. 27 Gr. 220.

Incorporated Company—Forfeiture of Charter.—In an action for repayment of tolls alleged to have been unlawfully collected by a river improvement company, it appeared that the plaintiff had treated the company as a corporation, used its works and paid tolls fixed by the commissioner, and the company had also been sued as a corporation:—Held, that the plaintiff was precluded from impugning the legal existence of the company by claiming that its corporate powers were forfeited. Hardy Lamber Company v, Pickered River Improvement Company, 29 S. C. R. 211.

Invalid Calls—Tender of Part.]—A gas company incorporated under 16 Vict. c. 173, by resolution of the directors made certain calls, to be paid on particular days named, but by the notice published they were made payable on different days. Defendant had written to the company, enclosing his note for four of the calls, saying that for the balance he would send his note soon, and requesting them to accept this offer, as he had been absent in Europe, and had no knowledge of any of the calls. The company, however, declined:— Held, that the calls were illegal, being unauthorized by the resolution, and that defendant was not estopped from disputing them, London Gas Company v. Campbell, 14 U. C. R, 143.

Misappropriation by Superintendent—Hennia of Status.]— Defendant being employed by plaintiffs as their locomotive and car superintendent, made use of their materials and men in doing work for a sewing machine manufactory, in which he was a partner, and untruly entered such time and materials as employed in the plaintiffs' service. The plaintiffs having sued him upon the common counts claiming in their particulars for goods furnished, but not for work and labour:—Held, that defendant was precluded by his own misconduct from setting up as a defence that the plaintiffs under their charter could not sue on such a cause of action. Northern R. W. Co. v. Lister, 27 U. C. R. 57.

Share Certificates.]-A company incorporated under the Ontario Joint Stock Com-panies' Letters Patent Act, R. S. O. 1887 c. 157, issued a certificate stating that a certain shareholder was entitled to twenty-two shares of the capital stock, as he in fact at the time The shares were not numbered or identified, but the certificate was numbered and contained the words "Transferable only on the books of the company in person or by at-torney on the surrender of this certificate." The shareholder assigned the shares to the plaintiff for value, and gave the certificate to him with an assignment indorsed thereon. The plaintiff gave no notice to the company, and did not apply to be registered as a shareholder until several months had elapsed, and in the meantime the shareholder executed another transfer of the shares for value to an innocent transferee, who was registered by the company as the holder of the shares without production of the certificate:-Held, that the transfer to the plaintiff, in view of the pro-visions of s. 52 of the Joint Stock Companies' Letters Patent Act, R. S. O. 1887 c. 157, conferred upon him a mere equitable title which was cut out by the subsequent transfer, and that while the company might have insisted upon production of the certificate they were not bound to do so, and were not estopped from denying the plaintiff's right to the shares, Smith v. Walkerville Malleable Iron Com-pany, 23 A. R. 95.

Shareholder.]—Where a statutory liability is attempted to be imposed on a party which can only attach to an actual legal shareholder in a company, he is not estopped by the mere fact of having received transfers of certificates of stock from questioning the legality of the issue of such stock. A mortgagee of the shares and not an absolute owner, who takes a transfer absolute in form and causes it to be entered in the books of the company as an absolute transfer, is not estopped from proving that the transfer was by way of mortgage. Page v. Austin, 10 S. C. R. 132.

Acquiescence of Corporation.]—A corporation may be bound by acquiescence as an individual may. Township of Pembroke v. Canada Central R. W. Co., 3 O. R. 503.

Arbitration—By-law not under Seal.]—
Debt on award made by arbitrators appointed to value the plaintiff's property, through which the defendants had by their by-law directed a road to be made:—Held, that the defendants having gone to arbitration, were estopped from objecting that the by-law was not averred in the declaration to have been under seal. Wilson v. Town of Port Hope, 10 U. C. R. 405.

Assessment—Error in Capitalization.]—
Deformed a county by-law to levy money for the general purposes of the year, alleging non-payment by defendants of the proportion to be raised by them. Plea, that in capitalizing the real property not actually rented, but held and occupied by the owners in the towns of N. (the defendants) and C. and the village of D. and in capitalizing the ratable personal property there for the year, the plaintiffs capitalized at ten instead of six per cent., as directed by law, and apportioned thereon among the several municipalities, whereby $1,000,000 was omitted from the capitalization, and the aggregate value of the ratable property in N., and the amount directed to be raised there, was erroneously and illegally made up:—Held, on denurrer, a good defence, for such capitalization was contrary to the statute, and though it lessened the defendants' assessment they were not precluded from objecting, for the planniffs could only create a debt by complying with the Act. County of Lincoln v. Town of Niagara, 25 U. C. R. 578.

By-law Incorporating Village—Application by Voter to Quash. [—The persons applying to quash a by-law incorporating a portion of a township as a village had all voted at the municipal elections holden for the village as incorporated by the by-law in question: one of them had been a candidate for the office of reeve, and another had been elected to the school board, but none of them had in any way promoted the passing of the by-law, or had any part in the taking of the census objected to:—Held, that the applicants were not estopped from moving to quash the by-law. Re Fenton v. County of Simeoc, 10 O. R. 27.

Contest as to Site - Restraining Payment.]—On a motion for injunction by W., a ratepayer, against a town corporation to restrain them from paying for a site for a postoffice, it was shewn that a vote of the ratepavers had been taken as to which of two sites (one owned by the town and the other by one McA.) should be chosen, that W. had taken an active part in support of the one owned by the corporation, and the majority of ratepayers had voted for the other. It was contended that W. was estopped by his conduct from maintaining the suit, and that McA, and the individual members of the corand that poration should have been made parties. having denied that he was aware that the site chosen was to be paid for by defendants, and no sufficient proof of that fact having been given:—Held, that he was not estopped, and for the purposes of the motion, that although McA, and the members of the corpor-ation might not, if joined, have been considered improper parties, still they were not necessary parties; and the injunction was granted. Wallace v. Town of Orangeville, 5 O. R. 37.

Debenture—Invalid By-law.]—A debenture issued by a nunnicipal council under their corporate seal, and signed by the head of such corporation, for payment of a debt due or loan contracted under a by-law which does not provide by special rate for the payment of such debt or loan, does not estop such nunnicipal council from setting up as a defence to an action on the debenture the invalidity and nullity of such by-law. Mellish v. Town of Brantford, 2 C. P. 35.

Debentures — Ultra Vires Agreement.]— Defendants having received the plaintiffs' debentures for a bonus granted to them on the faith of an agreement, were held estopped from objecting that such agreement was ultra vires. County of Haldimand v. Hamilton and North-Western R. W. Co., 27 C. P. 228.

Drainage—Action by Person doing Work under By-law.]—A ratepayer of a municipality cannot maintain an action, on behalf of himself and the other ratepayers, against the municipality for the improper construction of a drain authorized by by-law, when such ratepayer has himself been a contractor for a portion of the work, and has received his share of the money voted for the work in excess of the amount expended. Dillon v. Township of Raleigh, 14 S. C. R. 739, 13 A. R. 53.

Drainage.]—Owner of land affected acting so as to lead municipality to believe jurisdiction was not disputed. Gibson v. Township of North Easthope, 21 A. R. 504, 24 S. C. R. 707.

Quashing By-law—Applicant Expressing Opinion in its Favour.)—The applicant in this case was held not precluded from moving against a by-law by reason of his having expressed an opinion in its favour before its passage. In re Peck and Town of Galt, 46 U. C. R. 211.

Quashing By-law — Applicant Voting against it.]—Held, that the applicant had not by voting against the by-law disentitled himself to apply to the court to quash it, or to the costs of his motion. Re Armstrong and Township of Toronto, 17 O. R. 766.

Registrar—Receipt of Fees.]—Held, in a suit against a registrar by a municipal corporation for the proportion of fees to which the corporation was entitled under R. S. O. 1877 c. 111, that having received the money in question under the above Act he could not deny that he received it for the purposes therein provided. County of Hastings v. Ponton, 5 A. R. 543.

Relator a Candidate in Irregular Election. — Acquiescence of a candidate in an irregular election—how far it disqualifies him from afterwards becoming a relator. Regina ex rel. Mitchell v. Adams, 1 C. L. Ch. 203.

Relator Voting for Person Attacked.]

—The court will not set aside an election on the relation of a party who concurred in the election, and voted for the person whose election he afterwards attempts to set aside, Regima ex rel, Rosebush v. Parker, 2 C. P. 15.

A party cannot complain of the election of a candidate whom he has himself voted for, unless he can shew that he was at the time of voting ignorant of the objections which he desires to urge. Regina ex rel. Coleman v. O'Hare, 2 P. R. 18.

Relator Waiving Objection Conditionally. —A. had his dwelling house at Bowmanville, where his wife and family resided, but he had a saw mill and store, and was post-master, in the township of Cartwright, which occasioned him frequently to visit that place, and while there he used to board with one of his men in a house owned by himself. After voting at Bowmanville he went down to Cartwright, and voted there also at the election for township councillor, which was being held at the same time. It appeared that the relator, one of the candidates for Cartwright, objected to A.'s vote there, but said that it should be accepted if he would swear that he was a resident; and that A, took such oath, and his vote was thereupon recorded; —Held, that the relator's conduct could not estop him from afterwards objecting to the vote. Regina ex rel. Taylor v. Casar, 11 U. C. R. 441.

School Tax—Note to Trustees.]—Replevin for horses. Plea, justifying the taking under a warrant for school taxes. Replication, setting out facts to shew the rate illegal, and averring that the plaintiff, after seizure of the goods, at the request of the collector and trustees, gave his note for a sum named (not saying that it was the amount due by him), payable to bearer, which was accepted in satisfaction of the taxes:—Held, on denurrer, replication bad; for, the debt heing due to the public, even if the note had been alleged to be for a sufficient amount to pay the rate, yet the improper acceptance of it by the trustees would not prevent them from afterwards distraining. Spry v. McKenzie, 18 U. C. R.

School Trustees-Agreement to Hold New Election.]—Where certain persons were elected school trustees, and at a meeting of the board held subsequently to the election, were declared duly elected, but, proceedings having been meanwhile commenced to question the validity of the election, at a subsequent meeting of the board they acquiesced in the conclusion of the board to hold a new election, and became candidates again, and canvassed such, until the twenty days allowed for disputing the first election had elapsed (the proceedings formerly commenced for that purpose having been meanwhile dropped), were not elected at the second election :-Held, they could not afterwards maintain a suit to have it declared they were the duly elected trustees. Foster v. Stokes, 2 O. R. 590.

School Trustee—Attack on Co-trustee.]

—A trustee of a public school board is not precluded from becoming a relator in a quo warranto proceeding against another member of the board because he acquiesced in the payment of an account rendered for services which disqualified the member rendering the same from holding the office of trustee. Region ex rel. Stewart v. Standisk, 6 O. R. 408.

Successive Councils. —As to how far the municipal council of one year can be estopped by the acts in pais of the council of a preceding year: see Village of Ingersall v. Chadwick, 19 U. C. R. 286: Township of East Nissouri v. Horseman, 16 U. C. R. 583.

Treasurer—Accounts Adopted.]—In an action by a municipal corporation against their treasurer on his bond, alleging non-payment of moneys received, it appeared that in an account rendered to the council by defendant a sum of money which was in question was charged as paid to one E., and it was asserted that they had made se'besquent payments to him, assuming the account to be correct. The facts did not shew this to be the case, but semble, that the council would not have been bound by omitting to notice or object to this item, whatever might be the effect if the account had been regularly audited. Village of Ingersoil v. Chadwick, 19 U. C. R. 278.

See MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS.

5. Receipts.

Bank—Acknowledgment of Correctness of Balfance.]—The acknowledgment of the plaintiffs of the correctness of the account in their bank book at the end of the month, although a number of cheques drawn by them had been paid by the defendants on forged indorsements of the payess thereof, was held to be at most an acknowledgment of the balance on the assumption that the cheques had been paid to the proper parties. Agricultural Savings and Loan Association v. Federal Bank, 6 A. R. 192; S. C., sub nom. Agricultural Investment Co. v. Federal Bank, 45 U. C. R. 214.

Bills of Lading — Condition of Goods.]—Semble, that the Bills of Lading Act, 33 Vict. c. 19 (0.), creates no estoppel as to the condition in which goods are when shipped. Chapman v, Zealand, 24 C. P. 421.

Carriers-Mistake.]-Defendants gave receipts to one B, for 7500 barrels of flour as in store for them at Brantford, subject to his order. B. drew on the plaintiffs at Montreal, through the Bank of Montreal at Brantford. to whom he handed these receipts, and the bank agent there forwarded the bills, with a certificate that he held such receipts, to the head office in Montreal, where the plaintiffs accepted and paid them. Plaintiffs having received from defendants only 7308 barrels, sued them as for false and fraudulent representations to B. that they had received in store for him 7500 barrels, which representations they alleged defendants knew by the course of trade would be relied upon by persons dealing with B., and on the faith of which the plaintiffs made advances to the full value of that quantity. The jury were directed that as between themslyes and the plaintiffs, defendants were bound by their receipts, and liable in this action, though the error arose from mistake only:—Held, a misdirection: that their attention should have been drawn to the nature of the defendants' business, and the object of these receipts, and they should have been asked to say whether the error in this case arose from mistake or a design to deceive, or from such negligence as might lead to the conclusion of fraud. McLean v. Buffalo and Lake Huron R. W. Co., 23 U. C. R. 448. See, also, S. C., 24 U. C. R. 270, where a verdict for the plaintiffs was upheld.

Carriers - Statement of Weight.] - Certain bars and bundles of iron came by ship from Glasgow to Montreal, consigned to the plaintiff. His agent gave to defendants' agent an order to get them from the ship, and afterwards received from the latter a receipt, specifying the number of bars and bundles and the gross weight, but with a printed notice at the top of it, that "rates and weight entered in receipts or shipping bills will not be acknowledged." All the iron received by defendants for the plaintiff was delivered at Guelph, but there was a very considerable deficiency in the weight. So far as appeared. the iron had not been weighed either on being taken from the ship, or afterwards :- Held. that defendants were not estopped by their statement of weight in the receipt, and were not liable to the plaintiffs. Horseman v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 30 U. C. R. 130, 31 U. C. R. 535.

Discharge of Mortgage.]—A certificate of discharge of a mortgage, not being under seal.—Held, no estoppel against the recovery of the debt if not in truth paid. Bigelow v. Staley, 14, C, P, 276.

Insurance — Receipt in Policy.] — Held, that defendants were not under the circumstances of this case bound by their admission on the policy of the receipt of the premium. Western Assec. Co. v. Provincial Ins. Co., 5 A. R. 190.

Mortgage—Part Payment—Re-ademac.]
—Two years after a mortgage had been in part paid off, the mortgagor applied to the mortgage to re-borrow the money, agreeing verbally to return the receipts for the money paid, so that there should not remain any evidence of payment; and that the amount so re-borrowed should be considered as of the original charge created by the mortgage. Some but not all of the receipts were returned to the mortgage, and the money re-advanced by him upon the terms proposed by the mortgagor. Under this state of facts, the master in taking the accounts directed by the decree, allowed the mortgage the full amount of the mortgage. On an appeal from the master's report:—Held, that the principle upon which he had taken the account was correct; and that the mortgagor was estopped from proving the payment of any portion of the original sum advanced. Inglis vs. Gilchrist, 10 Gr. 301.

Railway Company — Fraudulent Receipt.]—Receipts issued by station agent for goods not received — Liability of company. See Erb v. Great Western R. W. Co., 3 A. R. 446, 42 U. C. R. 90; Oliver v. Great Western R. W. Co., 28 C. P. 143.

Warehouse Receipt.]—Defendants gave a receipt to C. H. & Co., stating that they had received and held on their (C. H. & Co.'s) account 500 bushels of wheat. Plaintiff relying upon this receipt, and the representations made by C. H. & Co., purchased from the said C. H. & Co. the supposed 500 bushels of wheat, and took an assignment of the said receipt as evidence of his purchase, and as authority to defendants to deliver the same to plaintiff. In fact, however, the defendants at the date of the receipt had only received some 270 bushels on account of C. H. & Co. —Held, that defendants having given their receipt for 500 bushels of wheat, were estopped from setting up that they had not at the date thereof the quantity of wheat mentioned therein in store for C. H. & Co. Hotton v. Sanson, 11 C. P. 606.

6. Sheriff.

Ca. Sa. after Return of Nulla Bona.]

—To an action gainst a sheriff for a false return of nulla bona to a writ of fi. fa., the bare fact that the plaintiff after such return such out a ca. sa. will be no defence, unless it be further averred in the plea that the plaintiff accepted the return of nulla bona with a knowledge at the time that it was false. Buys v. Ruttan, 6 U. C. R. 263.

Certificate.]—At the suit of one H. under a fi. fa. dated 28th April, 1859, the defendant p—73. (sheriff) seized the lands of W., deceased, and made his return "lands on hand to the value of £19." A ven, ex, was sued out, under which defendant sold and realized a portion of the amount: and under the same writ other lands were offered for sale, but there being no bidders, the sheriff, on the 1st May, 1890, indersed a return on the writ, that he had made £238, lands on hand for want of buyers to value of £5, and "no lands" for residue, which writ, with the return thereon, was retained by the sheriff till 1st July, 1802. On the 28th January, 1892, a fi. fa. lands was sued out by the present plaintiffs, and indorsed for £221, &c., and on the same day the defendant gave his certificate that he had no execution or extent in his hands against the lands of said W. (deceased). On the 20th february, 1802, a ven, ex, and it, fa. residue was sued out and delivered to the defendant at the suit of H. above mentioned for £346, &c. Under this writ, defendant notwithstanding such notice, duly sold under and applied the proceeds of sale upon H.'s execution. Defendant, notwithstanding such notice, duly sold under and applied the proceeds of sale upon H.'s execution. The plaintiffs execution expired on 20th January, 1803, and was returned "no lands." B., the attorney for the plaintiffs, was the assignee of plaintiffs, was returned "no lands." B., the attorney for the plaintiffs, was the assignee of plaintiffs, judgment, and beneficially interested therein. In an action against the defendant, the sheriff, for a false return: "Held, that the defendant was not estopped by his certificate of 28th January, 1822, from setting up H.'s writ as an answer to this action. Mein v. Hall, 13 C. P. 581.

Escape—Assignment of Bond.]—The sheriffer cannot admit a debtor to the limits except by statute. Where he does so on a bond not in accordance with the Act he is liable as for a voluntary escape, and a creditor by having required and taken an assignment of such a bond, is not estopped from looking to the sheriff. Kingan v. Hall, 23 U. C. R. 503.

Fi. Fa. Lands after Return.]—Case for false return of nulla bona to a fi. fa. Plea, that the plaintiff accepted such return knowing it to be untrue, and issued a fi. fa. lands upon it:—Held, no defence. Markle v. Thomas, 13 U. C. R. 363.

Invalid Sale.] — A sheriff having sold shares in a steamship company under execution, and received the money, can not return nulla bona on the ground that they were not properly saleable under the writ. Hewitt v. Corbott, 15 U. C. R. 39.

Official Capacity.]—There can be no estoppel on a sheriff, when sued as an individual, by reason of a deed executed by him exclusively as a public officer. Kissock v. Jarvis, 9 C. P. 156.

Prior Writ.]—In an action against the sheriff for a false return, it appeared that on the day before the plaintiffs' writ came in, he received a fi, fa, at the suit of one K. for more than the value of the debtor's goods, and gave a warrant to his bailiff, who only went to the debtor's shop and told him of it, because he thought more could be got by allowing him to go on with his business. On the plaintiffs' writ he did nothing. The plaintiffs' attorney wrote twice, urging him to act, and ruled him, and in February, 1866, he returned that writ nulla bona, K.'s writ having been previously renewed. The court being left to draw inferences of fact:—Held, that as a matter of fact the sheriff never seized, or that as a matter of law, he abandoned the seizure; and that, though his acts might not affect K. in an action between K. and the plaintiffs, yet they prevented him from setting up the first writ as a justification for his return to the second. The plaintiffs were, therefore, held entitled to recover, Foster v. Glass, 26 U. C. R. 277.

Ven. Ex. after Return of Nulla Bona.]

—To an action against a sheriff for falsely returning to a fi. fa, goods in hand to the value of sis, and nulla bona as to the residue, when crough had in fact been seized to satisfy the writ, the defendant pleaded by way of estopel, that the plaintiff requested him to return nulla bona and accepted and acted on that return, and took out a ven. ex., with a full knowledge of the facts:—Held, on denurrer, plea good. Miller v. Thomes, il U. C. R. 302.

See EXECUTION, SHERIFF.

7. Title to Property.

(a) Goods.

Assessment-Appeal - Seizure.] - The plaintiff being in possession of a stock of goods, was assessed therefor in his own name, against which he appealed to the court of revision, and to the county court Judge, when an indenture of assignment of the goods upon trusts for creditors was produced, and the plaintiff's name was erased and that of the ssignee substituted therefor. The plaintiff alleged, however, that his name was not struck out on his application, for that his ground of appeal was that the goods were not equal to the debts due upon them, and so were exempt. Defendants having distrained upon the goods, the plaintiff replevied, and defendants avowed as for taxes due to them by the plaintiff, whose name did not appear on the collector's roll. It was contended that the plaintiff having denied his title, and his name being erased from the roll, he was debarred from replevying the goods distrained; but-Held, that he was not estopped. Sargant v. City of Toronto, 12 C. P. 185.

Bailee.]—A bailee of goods held not estopped from disputing the bailor's title. White v. Brown, 12 U. C. R. 477.

Plaintiff had sold certain goods to M., which were at the time lying at defendants' railway station, and defendants were fully aware of the sale, but, notwithstanding, they contracted with the plaintiff to carry and deliver them as required, and gave him a shipping bill accordingly. In an action by plaintiff against defendants for the non-delivery:—Held, that defendants could not set up M.'s title to the goods as against the plaintiff, for a bailee setting up the right of a third person against his bailor, must be bond fide defending on the right and title of such third person. Brill v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 20 C. P. 440.

Chattel Mortgage and Confession of Judgment.—It. being indebted to L. gave him a chattel mortgage and confession of judgment, and after the mortgage became due made an assignment for the benefit of creditors to W. and S., who took possession of the goods. L. then put a writ of fi. fa. in the sheriff's hands, directing him to levy and make the amount of his debt out of the goods of R_* :— Held, that the fact of L_* having put an execution in the sheriff's hands at his suit, directing to levy of the goods mortgaged to him as the goods of R_* , did not estop him from setting up his title under the chattel mortgage. $Wake pled v_* Lpun, 5 C. P. 410.$

Chattel Mortgage—Consent to Sale.]—Sale by mortgagor without written consent—Mortgagee held estopped by verbal consent and conduct. See Loucks v. McSloy, 29 C. P. 54.

Distress—Bill of Sale.]—A landlord, when sued in trespass for an illegal distress, is precluded by the distress from claiming the goods as his own under a prior bill of sale. Gibbs v, Crawford, 8 U. C. R. 155.

Division Court Clerk—Money Paid to him for Specific Puppose.]—Plaintiff and others took out attachments against an abseconding debtor, and the goods seized being claimed the plaintiff indemnified the bailiff, who sold and paid over the money to defendant, the clerk of the division court. The claimants sued the plaintiff and the purchasers, and recovered from them the value of the goods, after which defendant distributed the money among the attaching creditors, of whom he himself was one, pro rata. Plaintiff thereupon sued defendant and his sureties as for money received to his use. Quere, whether the plaintiff, having procured the money to be paid to the defendant as that of the attaching creditors, could afterwards claim it as his own. Preston v. Wilmot, 23 U. C. R. 348.

Execution — thandaning Scigure.]—The execution of defendant in an interpleader is sue (the execution plaintiff) being in the sheriff's hands, the father of the execution debtor claimed the goods, whereupon the sheriff's hands, the father of the execution debtor claimed the goods, whereupon the sheriff's hands against both father and son, when the former gave him a mortgage on the goods, which the son had assigned to him, and the plaintiff thereupon withdrew his writ, and several months afterwards the sheriff again seized under defendant's writ. There was no evidence that defendant knowingly either did or said anything to induce plaintiff to alter his position. The jury were told that if defendant abandoned the seizure, and in consequence the plaintiff withdrew his writ and took the mortgage, defendant was estopped from disputing the validity of the mortgage. Held, a misdirection, and that there was no estoppel. Morse v. Thompson, 19 C. P. 94.

Execution—Claimant Purchasing at Sale.]
—Where the sheriff under a fi. fa. seized and sold certain goods claimed by plaintiffs:—Held, that the fact of one of the plaintiffs having attended and bid at the sale, did not estop them from complaining of the seizure of the goods as their own. Lancs v. Grange, 12 U. C. R. 209.

The owner of goods may, to prevent them being sacrificed, buy them in at the sheriff's sale, which does not debar him from setting up his title against the sheriff for selling. Haight v. Munro, 9 C. P. 402.

Execution — Withdrawing Claim.] — In trespass against the sheriff for taking goods, the plaintiff called the bailiff who made the seizure and sale. He swore that the plaintiff, after giving notice of his claim to the goods, withdrew it, and that the sale then went on. The plaintiff offered to disprove the withdrawal:—Semble, that if the plaintiff in fact withdrew his claim, and thus induced defendant to proceed with the sale, which was for the jury to decide, he would be estopped from recovering. Robinson v. Reynolds, 23 U. C. B. 550.

Fixtures — Execution.] — In trespass against the sheriff for seizing an engine and boiler under a fi, fa., it was held that the plaintiffs, having purchased them as chattels by verbal sale, were estopped from asserting that the execution did not attach because they were part of the realty. Walton v. Jarvis, 13 U. C. R. 616, 14 U. C. R. 640.

Fraudulent Representation of Title.]—Defendant went to England, leaving A., an agent, on his farm, who purchased corn from the plantiff to feed deredant's cattle. Extraors were issued against defendant, and to protect the cattle, assigned them to the plaintiff as if to pay the sum due to him for corn, but gave at the same time an undertaking that he would pay pasturage for them at the usual rates; and when the bailiff came to seize, the plaintiff claimed the cattle as his own:—Held, that he could not afterwards sue defendant for the pasturage for having concurred in the fraud by holding out the cattle as his own, he was estopped. Belt v. Peel, 15 U. C. R. 594.

In an action against the sheriff for goods sized and sold, the jury having twice found in plaintiff's favour:—Held, that although it seemed clear on the evidence that the plaintiff had never in fact purchased or paid for the goods, but had been set up as a purchaser merely to protect them from other creditors, yet as B. & Co. the execution plaintiffs and the real defendants in this action, had concurred in holding him out in false character, the court should not interfere. Cinq-Mars v. Moodie, 15 U. C. R. 601. The court on appeal intimated that they fully concurred in the view which the court below had taken. S. C., th. 610, note (a).

Hire Receipt—Possession.] — The plaintiffs sold to one R. an organ on credit, and received from him a conditional hire receipt, which acknowledged the receipt of an organ on hire. It contained a stipulation that the signer might purchase the organ for $130, payable in two equal annual instalments on the 1st February, 1875, and the 1st February, 1876, with interest; and it provided that it should remain the plaintiffs' property on hire until fully paid for, and that they might resume possession on default, although a part of the purchase money might have been paid, or a note or notes given on account thereof. This receipt, and a note dated the 17th February, 1874, payable four months after dute, were signed by R. Some days afterwards it was discovered the receipt bore no date, whereupon the plaintiffs' bookkeeper filled in the 25th February, 1874, the day on which the receipt and note were received by the planniffs. The plaintiffs discounted the note with their bankers, and at maturity obtained a renewal and returned it to R. The first instalment was paid, and renewals in whole or in part were given until September, 1875. In May, 1876, It ransferred the organ to G. &

B. as security for a debt. He represented that he had paid the purchase money, and produced as evidence the note of February 17th, 1874, which had been returned to him on its renewal, and they acted upon this misstatement. The note bore marks of having been discounted, but there was nothing to connect it with the organ, While the organ was in the possession of J. W. B., it was seized by the plaintiffs agent and removed to the express office, from which it was taken by G. B., the other defendant, under J. W. B.'s direction, and carried back to the house in which they both lived. Subsequently J. W. B. sold the instrument to G. B.'—Held, that the plaintiffs were not estopped, for there was no representation by the plaintiffs, and no noglect of any duty owing to the defendants. Held, also, that there was ample evidence of a joint conversion. Held, also, that the insertion of the date in the receipt was an immaterial alteration. Mason v. Bickle, 2 A. R. 291.

Insurance — Building — Chattel.] — The plantiff insured with defendants a barn as appurtenant to his freehold. After it was burned, he made a claim under the policy, still treating it as appurtenant to the freehold, but having failed in proving title to the land, he sought to recover on the ground that the barn was a chattel, and as such insured by him:—Held, affirming 30 U. C. R. 472, that he was precluded from setting up such a claim, and that he could not be heard to say the barn was a chattel, Sherboneau y, Beaver Mutual Fire Insurance Co., 33 U. C. R. 1.

Mortrage—Acquiescence,]—A mortgage-having commenced proceedings under a mortgage, one H. C. 8, professed to have a contract, one the property as an alleged permer of the mortgage. It appeared, however, that H. C. 8, was present when the mortgage was given, and knew all about the transaction; that the money which the mortgage was given to secure was partly for the purposes of a printing office, in which he claimed to be interested as such partner; and that he had, at the time of the transaction, and no objection and asserted no claim:—Held, that, under these circumstances, he was estopped from setting up any right or title as against the mortgagees, whose title was the same as if he had joined in the mortgage. Robinson v. Cook, 6 O. R. 590.

Mortgage from Execution Debtor—Claimant Purchasing at Sale.]—One W. devised all his personal estate to three trustees, of whom his widow was one, in trust to pay the interest and produce thereof to his widow during her life, for herself and his children. The widow after W.'s death remained on his farm, and in possession of the stock and personal perty, and the special control of the sale sold, and state the sale is the sale sold and the sale sold is the sale sold and the sale sold is sale; and while it was there the two other rustees took from her a mortgage of all the personal property for advances made by them to her. The sheriff afterwards seized under the writ, and the two trustees forbade the sale; but it went on, and one of them bought the goods, and took a bill of sale from the sheriff, against whom they then brought an action for the seizure:—Held, that they were not estopped by having purchased at the sale, but that having taken the mortgage from the tot that having taken the mortgage from the widow while the writ was in the sheriff's hands, they could not allege that the goods were not then hers; and therefore that they could not recover. Held, also, that the increase of the stock must be subject to the same rule as the stock. Peers v. Carrall, 19 U. C. R, 229.

Mortgage of Goods — Claim by Mortgagor, I—Action against the sherilf for seizing and selling goods. Pleas, not guilty, and not possessed. It appeared that the blaintiff had mortgaged the property to one M., and executions came into the sheriff's hands both against the plaintiff, who was in possession of the goods, and the mortgagee. The plaintiff told the sheriff that the goods were not his, but were under mortgage to M., and the sheriff seized and sold under the execution against M.:—Held, that the plaintiff was clearly not estopped from recovering, by having told the sheriff that the goods were not his,—that is, not his absolute property—but mortgaged to M., for he told only the truth, and the sheriff knew what M.'s interest really was. Henderson v. Fortune, 18 U. C. R. 520.

Mortgage of Goods by Wife-Knowledge of Husband.]-The plaintiff went to British Columbia nine years before this action. leaving his wife here to whom he wrote and occasionally sent money. She procured the defendant to indorse a note made by her for the price of furniture to carry on a boarding (which she subsequently carried on with the plaintiff's knowledge), and executed to defendant a chattel mortgage under seal in her own name on said furniture. The rent of the house being in arrear, and part of the mortgage money over due, the landlord dis-trained, and the defendant enforced his mortgage, and the plaintiff's wife not dissenting but rather assenting, the goods were sold and the balance, after the payment of rent and mortgage, was handed over to her. The plaintiff thereupon sued the defendant in trespass and trover :- Held, that as by this action the plaintiff ratified the conduct of his wife in purchasing the furniture, he should not be allowed to repudiate the mortgage, which formed part of the whole arrangement :- Semble, that the wife standing by and permitting the sale of the property under the mortgage, was some evidence under the plea of leave and license. Halpenny v. Pennock, 33 U. C. R. 229.

Purchaser at Sheriff's Sale Claiming Goods as His Own. — Assumpsit for goods bargained and sold by the plaintiff, as sheriff, to the defendant: —Held, that the defendant could not set up as a defence that the goods purchased by him as belonging to the execution debtor, were in fact his own. Ruttan v. Weller, 14 U. C. R, 44.

Rent—sheriff Acting on Landford's Statement.]—The sheriff having seized goods under a fi. fa., received a written notice from the plaintiff that there was then due to him "one-half year's rent' for the premises, not stating when the rent fell due, nor for what period it was claimed. The plaintiff afterwards went to the sheriff, and being asked when his rent fell due, said that he thought it would be on the following Monday or Tuesday. The sheriff thereupon ordered the goods to be removed and sold:—Held, that the plaintiff was bound by his own declaration, and could recover no damages from the sheriff, although it appeared that the rent was in fact payable quarterly, and that one quarter was due at the time of seizure. Tomlinson v. Jarvis, 11 U. C. R. 60.

Sale of Ship-Oral Agreement Inconsistent with Written.]-Assumpsit, on a note made by defendant jointly with A. and B. Plea, that the note was given for the purchase money of a schooner sold by plaintiff to A. and B., defendant being their surety; that the plaintiff on such sale guaranteed the vessel to be sound, but she was not sound, but unsafe and rotten, as plaintiff well knew; and said A. and B. immediately after the sale discovered the unsoundness, returned the vessel to plaintiff, and repudiated the sale. At the trial, the written instrument was produced. from which it appeared that the sale was to defendant alone, and no such guarantee as alleged was contained in it :- Semble, that the detendant could not shew, in the face of the writing produced, that the sale was to A. and ., not to himself. Henderson v. Cotter, 15 U. C. R. 345.

Tax Sale—Tenant's Acquiescence.] — Two mill stones were seized and sold for taxes, the tenant of the mill, who was assessed as occupant, being present at the sale and making no objection. In replevin by the owner of the mill against the purchaser:—Held, that the tenant's acquiescence was immaterial; for his possession, when proved to be merely as occupant, was no proof of property, and the plaintiff therefore was not prevented from disputing the sale, which was clearly illegal, the stones being part of the mill. Grimshawe v. Burnham, 25 U. C. R. 147.

Trade Fixtures-Acceptance of Lease.]-Declaration, that defendants being in possession of certain premises (described), as tenants of the plaintiff, wrongfully pulled down and carried away certain fixtures. Plea, that the premises were occupied by defendants as scale makers, having long before been let to defendants and others for carrying on their trade; that defendants and others, for such purpose, during their tenancies, put up the fixtures (describing the fixtures put up by each), and the others, during their tenancies, sold and conveyed their part of the fixtures to defendants, who took possession thereof and used them on said premises in their trade; and being so possessed, they, during their tenancy, pulled down and carried away said fixtures, doing no unnecessary damage. The third replication set up, by way of estoppel, a surrender in law by defendants of the premises to one C., the then owner in fee, and an acceptance of a new lease from C., and that C afterwards conveyed in fee to the plaintiff who then saw the new lease, and was informed and believed that the said fixtures formed part of the freehold; and that defendants afterwards became plaintiff's tenants. Equitable rejoinder, that before the conveyance by C. to the plaintiff, the plaintiff knew that defendants were in actual occupation, claiming and using all said fixtures as their own, and was told by C. that he did not own or claim then, and only sold to the plaintiff the premises without them; and that the plaintiff by reasonable care could have obtained full information from defendants, but negligently omitted to do so:—Held, that the replication was good, and the rejoinder bad. Pronguey v. Gurney, 36 U. C. R. 53.

Trover—Next Friend.]—In trover, where the plaintiff sued by his mother as his next friend, the court held that the latter, by allowing herself to be made guardian for bringing this suit, did not waive any right she might have had to the goods sued for, and that the consent of the mother to become prochein ami was no legal estoppel on her. Barker v. Tabor, 5 O. 8. 570.

Vendor Alleging Invalidity of Sale.]—In an action for seizing goods under division court attachments, it was proved that a few days before the seizure the goods had been sold by auction under the direction of one of the plaintiffs, who executed a bill of sale to the vendee, witnessed by the auctioneer:—Held, that this plaintiff could not afterwards set up that the sale was void because fraudulent as against the plaintiffs' creditors, and maintain trespass for seizing the goods as if they were his own. McPhatter v. Leslie, 23 U. C. R, 573.

Warehouseman's Certificate.]—A, by artifice obtained an order from B, directed to his agent, to deliver wheat to A, which order A, presented, not to the agent, but to the defendant, a wharfinger in whose warehouse B, had wheat. The defendant therehouse B, had wheat. The defendant therehouse bein his icertificate or bom for the wheat deliverable on demand, and A, after notice by defendant that he would not deliver, transferred his right to the wheat, but not the certificate, to the plaintiffs:—Held, that defendant was not estopped by his certificate from denying plaintiffs' title. Davis v. Brown, 9 U. C. R. 193.

(b) Land.

Acquiescence in Defective Deed, I—Divers lands having been devised to three sisters, P., A., and L., they in 1840 agreed to a partition, by which, amongst other things, P. was to have a certain lot 45, with the privilege of overflowing 46, and A. was to have 46, subject to that privilege. Conveyances were signed carrying out the partition, but the matter being transacted without professional advice, A. and L., who were married women, did not execute so as to pass any estate. All entered into possession of their several lands, and in 1841 P. executed to her son a voluntary conveyance of 45, with the privilege, and A. and her husband conveyed 46 to their son. The error in regard to the execution of the partition deed having been afterwards discovered, P., with A. and her husband and L.'s heir, (L. being dead,) in 1849 joined in a conveyance of all the lands to a trustee in order to carry into effect the previous partition; but by an oversight this new deed omitted to mention P.'s right of overflowing 46. A.'s son and P.'s son were active in getting this new deed executed, but were not parties to it. Immediately after its execution, A. and her husband executed to their son a new deed of 46; no new deed was executed to P.'s son, He thereafter, with the knowledge and acquiescence of A.'s son, built a mill in 1845, and placed his dam where it necessarily caused the overflowing of 46; and the mortgaged property was sold at the mortgaged suit, the two cousins alleging for the first time that the mortgagor had no right in respect of 46; the right was considered doubtful at the time, but the purchaser completed his purchase;—Held, in a subsequent suit by the purchaser against the mortgagor and his cousin, who owned 46, that the plaintiff had a right to overflow 46. Boyle v. Arnold, 16 Gr. 501.

Acquiescence in Agreement to Sell.]

—Where the owner of an estate stands by and allows a third person to appear as the owner, and to enter into a contract as such, the owner will be decreed specifically to perform such contract. Davis v Snuder. I Gr. 13.4

owner will be decreed specifically to perform such contract. Daris v. Snyder, I Gr. 134. Where the owner of an estate was present and permitted a third person to agree for the sale of his land, and the purchaser was let into possession, who made improvements, and being afterwards ejected by the owner of the property filed a bill for payment of the value of those improvements, the court allowed a demurrer for want of equity. Ib.

Acquiescence in Grant by Another.]
—A railway company took a deed from the plaintiff's father, by which, in consideration of the benefits which would result to bim from the construction of the road, and of ±27 10s., he agreed "to allow and permit the said company forthwith to take, occupy, possess, and enjoy of and through" the land in question. It appeared that the plaintiff had no title to the land, but had merely been allowed by his father to occupy it; that he had admitted in presence of his father, that it was with his father, and not with him, that the company must settle: and that he had worked under the defendant, a contractor with the company, in making the fence along the line through this land. After the deed, the plaintiff and his father forbade the defendant from entering. Afterwards the defendant entering the company must settle; and that he had worked under the defendant of the company in making the fence along the ine through this land. After the deed, the plaintiff and his father forbade the defendant from entering. Afterwards the defendant entering the set of the se

Where the registered owner of lands was present but took no part in a deed subsequently executed by the representative of his vendor granting the same lands to a third person, the mer fact of his having been present raises no presumption of acquiescence or ratification thereof. Powell v. Watters, 28 S. C. R. 133.

D.'s father died in 1847, having made his will, purporting to devise all his real estate to his wife in fee, but this will was not executed in the proper form, and therefore D. became entitled to the land as heir-at-law. Three months before D. became of age, he agreed with P. for the sale to him of the real estate for valuable consideration. A conveyance to P. was prepared by D., and executed by his mother, the devisee under his father's will, D. being the witness to it. P. afterwards sold and conveyed his interest, and D. brought ejectment against the purchaser. On a bill filed to restrain this action, it was shewn that

D, had, at various times acquiesced in the sale after he became of age:—Held, that D's conduct with reference to the sale to P., was fraudulent, and was to be considered as an assertion that his mother was entitled as devisee in fee, although he was then not of age; and that such conduct, and his subsequent acquiescence after his attaining majority, estopped him from denying the validity of the sale; and he was enjoined from proceeding with the ejectment, and ordered to execute a conveyance to the plaintiff, the vendee of P. Leary v. Rose, 10 Gr. 346.

A tenant in tail, who was supposed to have the fee simple, sold the property a few weeks before the passing of the Act respecting assurance of estates tail. The purchaser accepted the conveyance, and paid the purchase money, without seeing the will or having the title investigated. The eldest son of the vendor was not quite twenty-one at the time; he was aware of his interest, but was anxious that the sale should be effected, urged the purchaser to buy, and was privy to the completion of the purchase without giving any notice of his title or the defect in the father's right The purchaser went into possession and improved the premises, and had no notice of the defect in his title until after the death of the vendor:—Held, that he was entitled to hold the property in equity against the issue in tail. Re Shaver, 3 Ch. Ch. 379.

By a deed duly executed and registered, lands with a water frontage were vested in a man for life, remainder to his son in fee. The deed contained an agreement or stipulation that neither party should be at liberty to dispose of or incumber the property in any way without the consent of the other. The father, with the knowledge but without the consent of his son, sold portions of the water frontage, and the purchaser, with the knowledge of the son, improved thereon. After the death of the father, the son sold and conveyed the lands, including the water frontage, to W., whereupon a bill was filed by the vendee under the father against the son and W., claiming absolutely the part of the water frontage which had been conveyed by the father, on the ground of acquiescence by the son, and that had notice of the plaintiff's interest: Held, that the registration of the deed under which the father and son claimed, was actual notice of the son's title, and that his acquiescence or lying by could not affect his interest, but at most could only be construed into a consent by him to the sale by the father of his own interest; and, semble, that under the circumstances, if even registration were not actual notice, the acquiescence would not bind his reversionary interest; and that even if the plaintiff had acquired any equitable interest arising out of such acquiescence, he could not enforce it against W, without proving actual notice to him of such equitable interest. Bell v. Walker, 20 Gr. 558.

Boundary Run by Consent.]—T. was the owner of lot 9, and C. was the owner of lot 8 adjoining it on the south. Both lots had formerly belonged to one person, and there was no exact indication of the true boundary line between them. T. being about to build, employed a surveyor to ascertain the boundary. The surveyor went to the place, and asked C. where he claimed his northern boundary was. C. pointed out an old fence, running part of the way across the land between the lots and an old post, and said the line of the fence pro duced to the post was his boundary line. surveyor then took the average line of the fence and produced it till it met the post. staked out this line, C. not objecting. A few days afterwards T., with his architect and builder, went to the ground and, in the presence of C., the builder again marked out the ence of C., the builder again marked out the boundary by means of a line connecting the surveyor's marks, C. not objecting. Excavating was commenced according to that line immediately, and T.'s house was built according to the line on the extreme verge of T.'s land. The first time that C. raised any objection to the boundary so marked was when the walls of T.'s house were up and ready for the roof and considerable money had been expended in building :—Held, that C, was estopped from disputing that the line run by the surveyor was the true line. Grasett v. Carter, 10 S. C. R. 105,

Boundary—Misrepresentation by Vendor.]

—A vendor of land who wilfully misstates the position of the boundary line and thereby leads the purchaser to believe that he is acquiring a strip not included in the deed, is estopped from afterwards claiming such strip as his own property. Zwieker v. Feindel, 29 S. C. R. 516.

Dower — Concealment of Marriage.]—Where for ten years a wife concealed from the public her relation to her husband, and allowed him to live with another woman as his wife under an assumed name, the real wife living in the neighbourhood, and receiving from them her own support, it was held that she was precluded from claiming dower out of land purchased during this period in the husband's assumed name, and afterwards sold by him and his supposed wife to a purchaser, who bought in good faith, and without any notice of the real relation-hip of the parties. Hoig v. Gordon, 17 Gr. 399.

Dower—Doubtful Will—Widow's Statement.]—An intending purchaser of devised lands, doubting whether a provision made by the testator was in lieu of dower, asked the widow whether she had or claimed dower—Held, that even if her answer was in the negative, it afforded no ground for the purchaser applying to this court to restrain her action for dower, broaght on her being advised that under the will she was not put to her election. Fairweather y, Archibald, 15 Gr. 255.

Ejectment—Admission of Possession.]— In an action of tresposs to land:—Held, that the plaintiff, having sufficient possession to maintain trespass, was not estopped by having brought ejectment, as being an admission of defendant's possession. Heck v. Knapp, 20 U. C. R. 360.

Entry by Leave—Disputing Title.]—A, entered into possession of land under the authority of and by permission of B. who made him a verbal promise for a deed to be executed as soon as he himself should receive a conveyance from M., whose tenant at will he was, and who had in the meantime died:—Held, that A. having entered under B., his heirs were estopped from disputing B.'s title, and that they could be ejected by B. Armstrong v, Armstrong 21 C. P. 4.

Fraudulent Representation of Title.]

—An insolvent person sold his land to his brother; a creditor filed a bill impeaching the sale as fraudulent; part of the consideration was said by the defendants to be a pair of horses and waggon of the value of $200; but the parties had fraudulently given out after the sale that these horses were still the horses of the brother who had bought the land, and in this way had misled the plaintiff and other creditors—Held, that this brother was estopped from afterwards setting up against the creditor that the $200 had been paid in that way, and, the plaintiff's debt being less than that amount, he was held entitled to a decree for payment, or in default a sale of the land. McCarty v, McMarray, 18 Gr. 604, 18 Gr.

Invalid Sale at Instance of Heirs. |-In ejectment by the sons-in-law and daughters of an intestate, to recover possession of lands sold under an invalid fi. fa., it having appeared that the former, being tenants for life, had suggested and urged the sale in question for their own benefit; and that the party (a creditor of the estate of the intestate), for whose benefit the intended conveyance on such sale was made, had changed his position, and had assigned the judgment under which the sale took place, for the benefit of one of the maie plaintiffs, and at his request :- Held, an estoppel in pais which barred the male plaintiffs, particularly after the lapse of nearly, if not quite, twenty years, from disputing the val-idity of said conveyance; and that the bar was not removed by their having joined their wives with them in the action in which the validity of such conveyance was questioned. that there was no evidence of conduct on the part of the female plaintiffs to establish an estoppel against them, and that on the death of their husbands the only estoppel created would cease to operate against them. Ingalls v. Reid, 15 C. P. 490.

Lease to Wife with Husband's Assent.]—Assumpsi for money lent and money had and received. On the 6th September, 1842, the wife of the plaintiff, with his assent, in consideration of £70 paid (the money being the proceeds of the sale of her lands), obtained from the defendant a lease of certain premises to hold to her own use, during her natural life, the defendant covenanting at the expiration of the lease to pay Hannah Healey, her heirs or assigns, the sum of £50:—Held, that the plaintiff's remedy, if entitled to sue for the £50, must be under the lease in an action of covenant; and that having assented to the demise to his wife, he could not now sue for the consideration money paid, or as money had and received to his use. Healey v. Bongard, 1 C. P. 212.

Married Woman—Sale as Spinster.]—A married woman, owner of real estate, representing herself to be, and selling it as a spinster, is not entitled in equity to set up that the sale was void because of the conveyance not having been executed in conformity with the statutes as to the conveyance of land by married women. Graham v. Meneilly, 16 Gr. 661.

Mortgage—Adverse Claim by Witness.]— In 1870, the defendant, under agreement therefor with his father, the owner of a farm, went into possession of a certain portion thereof, and remained in possession sixteen years. The exact nature of the agreement did not appear, but it pointed to the ownership in defendant of the portion occupied. In 1876, the father executed a mortgage of the whole of the farm to a loan company, which was witnessed by defendant, who made the affidavit of execution on which the mortgage was registered. The defendant swore that he was not aware of the contents of the mortgage, nor that it included the portion of which he was in possession. In INS2 the father made a mortgage to the plaintiffs also of the whole lot, and on default the plaintiffs brought an action to recover possession of the portion occupied by defendant:—Held, that the evidence shewed that the defendant had been in exclusive possession of the land occupied by him for the statutory period so as to acquire a title thereto by possession; and that the fact of his being a witness to the mortgage to the loan company and its subsequent registration, under the circumstances, did not by virtue of s. 78 of the Registry Act R. S. O. 1877 c. 111, create an estoppel. Western Canada Loan Co., v. Garrison, 16 O. R. Sl.

Possession—Attempt to Purchase.]— In element:—Held, that it was no admission of the title of the party through whom paintiff derived title had, long after his title by possession had matured, filed a bill in chancery against the former for specific performance of an agreement for sale of the land in question to him. Mutholland v. Conklin, 22 C. P. 372.

Possession—Invalid Title, I.—L., a married woman, about the year 1830 assumed to devise certain land to her daughter P. and her husband O, for their lives, and thereafter to their children. T. tone of the children went into possession of part of it, at the instance of O., about 1855, and built thereon and remained in undisturbed possession for over twenty-eight years. Those who were entitled in remainder under the will the life estate having expired) brought an action to have the land partitioned or sold, and T. claimed his part by length of possession:—Held, that although T. might be estopped from denying that L. had transferred her title to those now claiming, and that as they claimed under the will of L. (a married woman), made in 1828, before there was poor to divise, and so void on its face, they had no title, and T. must succeed, Board v. Board, L. R. 3 Q. B. 48, and Paine v. Smith, 5 O. R. 639.

Possession—Right to Assert Title.]—In 1836, the plaintiff became the owner of and went to reside on lot 22, but by mistake occupied the four acres in question, being part of lot 23, as part of lot 22, and as such in 1838 cleared and fenced it. In 1868 the plaintiff's son, who land always resided on lot 22 with his father, and for many years had worked it, purchased with the plaintiff's knowledge and asset lot 25 which he worked foling the control of 25 to 12 with he worked foling the control of 25 to 15 to 15 which he worked foling the father to do 25 to the defendant, the land in question still and for a long time thereafter continuing within the plaintiff's fence. There was some evidence given to shew that the plaintiff had warned his son that he would never own the piece in question, but it did not clearly appear whether this was at the time of or after the purchase:—Held, that there was nothing in the evidence, more fully set out in the case, to shew that the plaintiff by his acts or conduct had ever led to the belief that he did not intent to assert his possessory title to the land in question, or that he had abandoned it, so as to estop him in equity from afterwards claiming it. Junkin v. Strong, 28 C. P. 498.

Land mortgaged by A., with the consent and approval of B., who was in possession. B. held estopped from setting up any title founded on his possession before the execution of the mortgage. Boys v, Wood, 39 U. C. R. 495.

In ejectment the plaintiff claimed the land as part of lot 3, and defendant as part of lot 4, each having a patent for their respective lots. It appeared, however, that the defendant, though his patent was subsequent to the plaintiff's, was the first to purchase from the Crown; and that he and the plaintiff had been occupying the respective lots for some years previous to the issue of either patent; that the piece in dispute was sold by the Crown lands agent to defendant as part of lot 4, and that he then took possession of it as such, continued to occupy it without any objection from plaintiff, and cleared a large portion thereof, and erected a house and barn thereon of much greater value than the land itself; that the plaintiff when applying for his patent, filed an affidavit made by defendant that there was no one in adverse possession of lot 3, upon which the lot, including this piece, was granted to the plaintiff:—Held, that the plaintiff was estopped in equity from setting up title to the land in question as being part of lot 3, and an directed to be added, and a verdict to be en-tered thereon for the defendant. Stevens v. Buck, 43 U. C. R. 1. equitable defence, setting out these facts, was Tenant—Offer to Give up Possession.]— Defendant had been tenant to the plaintiffs at a yearly rent, payable quarterly, for a term which expired on the 1st June, 1859. About that time a new lease was agreed upon between them at an advanced rent, but none was executed owing to objections raised by defendant to the draft. Defendant paid a year's rent, and another quarter having fallen due, the plaintiffs distrained, but they afterwards abandoned the proceeding, and on the 17th September, 1800, the plaintiffs' attorney served a written demand of possession on defendant, who told him that was just what he wished, and that the plaintiffs might have the place. He refused, however, to go at once with the attorney and give it up, saying that he wished first to remove some things. Nothing more was done, and the plaintiffs three weeks after having brought ejectment, defendant, besides denying their title, claimed to hold as their tenant: — Held, that the plaintiffs were entitled to recover, for, 1. The defendant, having denied their title, could not insist upon notice to quit; and 2. He was estopped by his offer to leave the place. Cartwright v. Mc-Pherson, 20 U. C. R. 251.

True Owner Allowing Title to be Claimed.]—If the true owner of goods so conduct himself as to enable another, who has the possession, but not the property, of such goods, to hold himself out to the world as the real owner, the true owner is estopped from denying the title of an innocent purchaser for value. The possession of property attached to the really, which thereby becomes realty, is a sufficient indication of ownership to estop the real owner as against an innocent purchaser for value. McDonald v. Weeks, 8 Gr. 297.

Trust—Denial of Interest.]—A, took a conveyance as trustee for B, B., in answer to a bill by a person claiming the property against both, was induced by A, to swear that he HB. had not any interest in the property:—Held, in a subsequent suit by B, against A., that B, was not precluded from shewing the trust.
