I. NEW AGREEMENT.

1. Between the Same Parties.

Agreement not Completed. —A plea to an action on an agreement alleged that defendant entered into a new agreement with the plaintiff, that defendant would pay a certain sum, and secure the same by his indorsed note, and that the plaintiff accepted same upon certain terms, and alleged a tender of such note by defendant, and a refusal by plaintiff: —Held, bad, on the ground that the delivery of the note was an essential part of the consideration; that the plaintiff was not bound by the agreement until he had accepted the note; and therefore he had created before he became bound. Stewart v. Huseson, 7 C. P.

Agreement not Completed.]—A. having taken a likeness for B. agrees to take in payment $20 in cash, and a cognovit for $70 the $20 at turne date. After receipt of the $20 at offer of the cognovit, defendant refused to deliver the picture. The plaintiff brought replievin:—Held, that the agreement for payment was a waiver of the right of lien, but did not amount to an accord and satisfaction. Dempsey v. Carson, 11 C. P. 462.

Bond—Legacy,]—Where a testator had bound himself by bond to pay to his mother £12 108, annually, and devised part of his land to his brothers on condition that they should pay to his mother £12 108, per annum and pay all his just debts, and made them his executors:—Held, that at law the legacy could not be considered as a satisfaction of the annuity in the bond, and that the mother was entitled to both. Code v. Cole, 5 0. 8, 748.

Collateral Security.]—Held, that the deal as set out in the pleadings in this case shewed clearly an intention on the part of the bank to take it as collateral security, and not as an assignment in satisfaction of the notes sued on. Bank of British North America v. Sherwood, 6 U. C. R. 552.

Composition by Parol. | — Defendants admitted the plaintiff's demand, but set up as defence an agreement after action between them and their creditors, the plaintiff being one, by which the creditors agreed to take cer-tain property of defendants, which was to be managed by assignees appointed by the credi-tors; and that they were ready and willing to make such assignment, but that sufficient time had not yet been allowed to complete the same. The plaintiff replied, that he and the same. The plaintiff replied, that he and the other creditors did not agree to take the assignment, &c., in satisfaction of their respective debts, nor that the plaintiff was not proceed against defendants for his debts: to proceed against defendants for his action— Held, that a composition where lands are not concerned, or an assignment of goods, which would not fall within the Statute of Frauds, is valid by parol: that it was no ob-jection that the satisfaction had not been given at the time of the plea; that an agreement as an accord was good by parol, though acceptance was not shewn, there being no default the part of the debtors; and that the plea after verdict must be held good, because it was in the nature of the circumstances that the mutual promises were (provioually) a satisfaction for the debt. Braskill v. Metealf, 2 C. P. 431.

Delivery of Good plaintiff may, after the far simple contract, legally agree the far simple contract, legally agree the former promise and of the damages accuring from the breach. But goods agreed to be accepted in satisfaction must be actually delivered; readiness to deliver will not do. Thomas v. Mallory, 6 U. C. R. 521.

Lease—Breach.]—After breach of the condition of a lease, the acceptance of some collateral thing in satisfaction cannot be pleaded in bar of the action on the lease. McIntyre v. City of Kingston, 4 U. C. R. 471.

Lease — Surrender,] — Quære, whether a surrender, besides necessarily discharging all undue rents, may not also be pleaded equitably by way of accord and satisfaction of rents over due Bradfield v. Hopkins, 16 C. P. 298.

Loan.]—A loan of money cannot be pleaded in satisfaction and discharge of a bond and condition. Prindle v. McCan, 4 U. C. R. 228.

Mortgage — Agreement to Conrey Other Land.]—M. executed a mortgage in Y.'s favour for CD, over lot No. 11, he then also holding a lease renewable in perpetuity of lot A. at a rental of £4 per annum. The rent being in arrear, judgment was obtained and execution issued by the lessor against M. therefor; Y. then agreed with M. to pay this execution, M. to assign to him the lease of lot A.; and further, it was agreed that if the lessors "will give to the party of the first part (Y.) a deed in fee simple, or a lease perpetually renewable at the present rent, he, the party of the first part, will discharge and release a mortgage. Ac., being that above mentioned. Y. afterwards obtained a conveyance from the lessors of lot A., but it did not appear that such was made for the sum contemplated at the time of the agreement between Y. and M. Y. afterwards pressed for payment of the mortgage debt, when M. made excuses for delay, and did not rely on the agreement as a bar to Y.'s claim, Y. having commenced an action of ejectment on his mortgage, M.'s bill to stay it and to have the agreement and subsequent purchase by Y. construed into a satisfaction of the mortgage debt, was dismissed with costs. Mc-Kenzie v. Yielding, II G. 406.

Mortgage—Release of Equity,]—Defendant purchased personal property from the plaintiff, and gave him back a mortgage on it to secure the purchase money, and agreed that in default he would give up the property, and plaintiff should self it to pay himself, and it is same time defendant gave the plaintiff his notes for the purchase money, which were not to be acted on if the property were given up. On default the property were given up. On default the property was given up and sold by plaintiff for less than the mortgage money, and an action was then brought on one of the notes to recover the difference:—Held, that it would not lie, the notes having been satisfied by the surrender of the property, according to the agreement. Smith v, Judson, 4 O, S. 134.

Security for Smaller Sum.]—The acceptance of a convexance by way of mort-gage for a simple contract debt of a larger amount than that secured and covenanted to be paid by the mortgage, is a satisfaction of the simple contract debt for the larger amount. Allen v. Alexander, 11 C. P. 441.

Substituted Mode of Payment.]—On the 26th June, P. and M. exchanged cheques for the accommodation of P., the cheque of P. being drawn on a bank in Hamilton, and the cheque of M. being drawn on private bankers in Toronto. It was agreed that the former cheque should not be presented before the 1st July, and it was alleged by P., but denied by M., that a similar restriction applied to the latter cheque. The private bankers suspended payment and private bankers suspended payment and such as the credit of M., and the drawn of dishonour given. The cheque of P. was presented and paid. Some time after the suspension of the private bankers, and after some negotiations between P. and M. as to the payment of M.'s cheque, P. signed a memorandum drawn up by M. in the following form: "Please take judgment when you think best against F. and L. (the private bankers), to include the amount of your cheque for $575 to me, upon the understanding that the same is to be paid me out of the first process of such judgment. You are to exercise your best discretion in the matter." M. then went on with his action, and entered judgment, but nothing was recovered:—Held, that this memorandum did not necessarily import an abandonment of P.'s claim upon the cheque, and the acceptance of a new and substituted mode of obtaining payment, and did not operate as an accord and satisfaction. Blackley v. McCabe, 16 A. R. (295.

Trust—Subsequent Conveyance.]—A man by an informal instrument assigned to a trustee all his estate and effects, on condition of the trustee paying to each of the children of the assigner $400. Subsequently the grantor conveyed to one of his sons a house and premises valued at $200:—Held, that the trustee could not set this up as a part satisfaction of the $400 mentioned in the first deed, and that declarations of the father made subsequently to the assignment in trust, and the conveyance to, and in the absence of, the son, were inadmissible to shew that the conveyance was made and intended to be in part satisfaction of the sum so secured to the son. Mulholland v. Merriam, 20 Gr. 152.

2. By Stranger.

Agreement not Completed.]—Covenant on a mortgage. Plen, that defendant conveyed to the plaintiff his equity of redemption in the land mortgaged, which the plaintiff accepted in satisfaction of the claim. It appeared that when the plaintiff commenced this action, defendant offered to convey the land in full satisfaction of the debt, but the plaintiff declined. Plaintiff's attorney afterwards, hearing that one G. would buy the land and pay the mortgage, told the plaintiff, who said it was all the same to him from whom the money came, and at G.'s wish the deed was made by defendant to the plaintiff instead of to G., and left with the attorney. Afterwards, however, it appeared that G. had referred to another lot owned by defendant, and he refused, therefore, to carry out the agreement: —Held, that the plea was not proved. Haar v. Henley, 18 U. C. R. 494.

Damages—Settlement by Third Person.]—To an action against attorneys for negligence in not registering a mortage from D, for £750 to plaintiffs within measurable from the registered before it, the defondants peaded that after breach the plaintiff accepted another mortgage from D, on other land of D, for £750 in full satisfaction and discharge of defendants' promise, and all damages accrued to the plaintiffs from the breach thereof:—Held, a good plea, it being no objection that the accord was by a third person, a stranger to the action, Lynch v. Wilson, 22 U. C. R. 226.

II. PAYMENT.

Agreement to Purchase Land Leased —Satisfaction of Rent by Payment of Purchase Money.]—See Forge v. Reynolds, 18
C. P. 110.

Damages,]—Payment to a person injured by an accident on a railway of the sum of ten dollars, and a receipt signed by him for "the sum of ten dollars, such sum being in lieu of all claims I might have against said company on account of an injury received on the 6th day of May, 1893," may constitute accord and satisfaction. Judgment in 26 O. R. 19 reversed. Haist v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 22 A. R. 504.

Judgment.]—Part payment of a judgment must, to be an extinguishment thereof, be expressly accepted by the creditor in satisfaction. Where, therefore, the production of the judgment creditor a bank draft, payable to the solicitor's order as payment "in full," and the solicitor indorsed the draft and obtained and paid over the moneys to the judgment creditor, but wrote refusing to accept the payment "in full," the judgment creditor was allowed to proceed for the balance. Day v. McLea, 22 Q. B. D. 610, applied. Section 53, ss. 7, Judicature Act, as to part performance of an obligation in satisfaction, considered. Mason v. Johnston, 20 A. R. 412.

Payment not Completed.] — Plaintiff holding defendant's note (not negotiable) payable no demand, for £500, in transactions with h. E. ta partner of defendant's, gave it to R. H. E. ta partner of defendant's, gave it to R. H. E. ta partner of defendant's, gave it to R. H. E. ta partner of the note of £1.000, for this and to the same point of the note of R. S. should be paid by defendant. In the solution obtained defendant's criginal note for £500, and turned defendant's original note for £500, to the defendant beaded satisfaction thereof by taking R.'s note for £1.000; — Held, that the facts did not amount to a payment, and that defendant was liable. Booth v. Riddev, S. C. P. 464.

Settlement of Action.]—The plaintiffs sued the defendants for $150, money lent, to which the defendants pleaded a set off against L. in satisfaction in 1 appeared that the defendants having build a house for L., cross-demands arose out of a lones for L., cross-demands arose out of an extendent in their solicitors negotiated for a settlement that their solicitors negotiated to a credit to L. The defendants refused to take less than $700, and sued L., whose solicitor, before he was aware of the suit, paid $650, and afterwards paid $50 into court, which was taken out. The jury were asked whether L. or his attorney agreed absolutely to allow the $150 as a payment on the contract, or only for the sake of a settlement, which was not arrived at: to which the defendants objected, that if the negotiations proceeded on the supposition that the $150 was to be so allowed, and L. afterwards paid the $700 on a different understanding, he was bound so to state at the time:—Held, that the direction was right, and a verdict for the plaintiff was upheld. Young v. Taylor, 25 U. C. R. 583.

Smaller Sum.]—Declaration on common counts, claiming under one promise £560, and laying the damages at £200. Plea, asymmetric for £250 in full satisfaction of the said promise, and also of all damages by reason of the non-performance thereof: — Held, bad. Thompson v. Armstrong, 3 U. C. R. 153.

Smaller Sum.]—The plaintiff declared in debt for £1,000 upon three counts, £500 work done, £100 money paid, and £400 necount stated. Plea, that the plaintiff agreed under scal to build a house for defendants according to specifications; that any extra work should be done under, and valued by their architect; that certain extra work was done and valued by him, as provided, at £355; that "such extra work is the cause of action in the declaration alleged, and for which this action was brought;" and that before action they unid to the ublaintiff the said sum of £355," in full satisfaction and discharge of the said extra work and of all damages and demands in respect thereof, being the said causes of action in the declaration mentioned:"—Held, plea bad, as amounting to a less sum being pleaded in satisfaction of a greater. Ritchey v. Bank of Montreal, 4 U. C. R. 222.

Smaller Sum.]—Declaration on common counts, laying the damages at £200. Plea, accord and satisfaction by payment of £3:—Held, bad. O'Beirne v. Gowin, 5 U. C. R. 582.

Smaller Sum.]—Plea of payment and acceptance of a less in satisfaction of a larger sum, held, bad:—Quare, whether a plea that the demand was unliquidated and disputed, and that it was agreed that plaintiff should receive a less sum in satisfaction of his alleged cause of action, could be supported. Holmes v. McDonell. 12 U. C. R. 469.

Third Person.]—S, conveyed lands to R, with full covenants. R, conveyed by a similar deed to plaintiff. S, died leaving a wife, who demanded her dower. R, paid plaintiff a certain sum in accord and satisfaction:—Held, that payment in accord and satisfaction by R, and acceptance, discharged plaintiff's claim against defendant, executor of S. Cuthbert v, Street, 9 C. P. 115.

III. PROMISSORY NOTES AND BILLS OF EXCHANGE.

on il social contract under seal, by which plaintiff was to do all the work on an extension of defendants' railway, alleging non-navement for work done, &c. Plea, as to $15,000, parcel, &c., that before action, at plaintiff's request, defendants delivered to plaintiff their acceptance of his bill of exchange for said sum, which bill was current at the commencement of the suit, and was afterwards paid:—Held, on denurrer, plea good, following Henry v. Earl, S. M. & W. 228, and Homer v. Dephagn. 12 O. B. 813, n. Shanly v. Midland R. W. Co, 33 U. C. R. 604.

Damages,]—Where an action is for tort, and the damages in the discretion of the jury:—Semble, that a promissory note may be taken in satisfaction; the principle that a less sum of money cannot be taken in satisfaction of a greater not applying. Lane v. Kingsmill, 6 U. C. R. 579.

Dishonour of Notes.]—Assumpsit for goods sold and delivered, and on account stated. Plea, that before suit defendant made and delivered three negotiable notes to the plainiffs, "who then accepted and received the same in full satisfaction and discharge of the sum of money and cause of action in the said declaration mentioned." Replication, that the notes were dishonoured at maturity, and still remain in plaintiffs' hands unpaid. Held, bad, for the plaintiffs, hands unpaid the notes in tull satisfaction and discharge of the original causes of action, had lost their remedy upon the latter. Loomer v. Marks, 11 U. C. R. 16.

Note not Accepted.]—Action for goods sold. It appeared that defendant, on application for payment, sent to the plaintiff his own note, with two indorsers; the plaintiff wrote acknowledging that it was received, and "placed to your credit, with thanks: the indorsers are not known to us, but on your stating that each one is good for the amount, we accept the note in settlement of your account to date." At the maturity of the note, defendant wrote expressing regret at his inability to meet it, and requesting plaintiff to draw upon him, and that he could hold the note until payment of the draft: he subsequently telegraphed him that he would remit in a few days;—Held, a question, on the evidence, for a Judge or jury, whether plaintiff had accepted the note in satisfaction or discharge, or not, and it having been found that he had not, the court refused to interfere. Greencood v. Feloy, 22 C. P., 352.

Note not Indorsed.]—First count, for goods soil and delivered. &c., second count, on a promissory note made by B. & S. payable to defendant or order, and by defendant indorsed and delivered to plaintiffs. Plea, that before action defendant "delivered the note in second count mentioned to the plaintiffs in full satisfaction and discharge of the cause of action in the said first count mentioned, and the plaintiffs then accepted and received the said note in full satisfaction and discharge of the said money, and the causes of action in respect thereof in the first count mentioned." Demurre, because the note in ouestion was payable to the order of defendant, and the plea does not aver that be indorsed it to plaintiffs:—Held, plea good, as the delivery and acceptance by obtaintiffs of the note in question, though not indorsed, was, under the authority of Hanscombe v. Macdonald, 4 C. P. 190, a good answer to the action. Jacques v, Beaty, 13 C. P. 327.

Note for Arrears of Rent, |—Defendant leased to F., from whom he took a note in payment of arrears of rent. F. let the plaintiff into possession of the premises, and the plaintiff made certain payments to defendant on account of rent, for which defendant or account of rent, for which defendant gave receipts as for premises leased to F. On plea of rien en arrière from F.:—Held, that the plaintiff could not insist upon the taking of the note as a discharge of the rent due from F. McLeod v, Darch, T. C. P. 35.

Note of One Joint Debtor.]—The note of one of two joint debtors is no satisfaction of the debt:—Held, plea bad on that ground, and as attempting to shew liability to a third party, an indorsee, when the note as pleaded was evidently not negotiable. Leonard v. Atcheson, 7 U. C. R. 32.

Note of One Partner.]—To an action against two partners for wharfage and ware-house-room of goods, defendants pleaded the delivery and acceptance of the promissory note of one of them in satisfaction. At the trial the plaintiffs' book-keeper said that he presented the account, and took the note made by one defendant in settlement, writing at the foot of the account, "received payment by note." The Judge thereupon directed a verdict for defendants:—Held, that the plea was good, but that it should have been left to the jury to find whether the note was accepted by the plaintiffs in satisfaction. Port Darlington Harbour Co. v. Squair, 18 U. C. 18, 523.

Note of Third Person.]—The delivery and acceptance of the negotiable promissory notes of a third person in satisfaction, though for a less sum in amount, is a good satistaction. Hanscombe v. Macdonald, 4 C. P. 190, Suspension of Remedy.]—A mortgage was made for £1.108, payable by instalments was made for £1.018, payable by instalments of which the third instalment was paid. For the first two instalments the mortgager gave two promissory motes, bearing even date with the mortgage. The color from the B. W. but the mortgage, and took the following receipt from the mortgage. The color from the B. W. but the first of June last, in full for the same amounts due on a mortgage made by him to me, maturing at same date. And the following indorsement was made on the mortgage: "Received from R. B. W. two notes of hand, indorsed by L. for £200 each to complete the two first payments on the within mortgage." The notes were not paid at maturity, and in a suit by the assignee of the mortgage to foreclose in default of payment of the first two instalments:—Held, that the right to recover upon the mortgage was only suspended and not discharged by the taking of the notes. Gibb v. Warren, 7 Gr. 439.

IV. SPECIAL PLEAS.

Account Stated.)—The pleas set up an account stated between plaintiff and defendant, and an acceptance by plaintiff of defendant's agreement to pay the sum found due:—Held, that the plaintiff, in his replication, might traverse both the accounting and the acceptance by plaintiff in satisfaction. Light v. Woodstock and Lake Eric R. W. Co., 13 U. C. R. 201.

Agreement After Breach.]—Action on the common counts. Plea, that after the promises, and before this suit, it was agreed that defendant should sell to plaintiffs, and plaintiffs then and there bought of defendant, twenty shares of certain stock, which defendant should hold for plaintiffs' use, and transfer to them when required; and that the plaintiffs should then and there accept defendant's said agreement, and the said shares so to be transferred, in full satisfaction of the said promises: that in pursuance of, and ever since such agreement, defendant had held, and still holds, such shares for the plaintiffs, and hath been and is ready to transfer them when required:—Held, plea bad, because it was not shewn whether the alleged agreement was before or after the breach of the promise sued on. Ross v. Heron, 12 U. C. II. 467.

Agreement Not Accepted.]—Plea, satisfaction and discharge, "by delivering to the plaintiff, according to agreement, a certain promissory note," &c.:—Held, bad, for not averring that the plaintiff accepted the note it satisfaction. Brown v. Jones, 17 U. C. b. 50.

Agreement Not Completed.] — Action of defendants' covenant to make a sufficient crossing on plaintiff's land. Defendants plended a former action on the same covenant, alleging that after issue joined therein it was agreed that defendants should pay and the plaintiff accepted £125, in full satisfaction of the cause of action, and that the £125 was thereupon paid and accepted, &c.; to which the plaintiff replied, traversing the payment and acceptance in satisfaction, &c. The plaintiff wished to shew that, besides paying the £125, defendants were to make the ditch to the lake:—Held, that under the replication the only question in issue was the payment of the £125, not the agreement to accept it in satisfaction. Utter v. Great Western R. W. Co., 17 U. C. R. 392.

Agreement Not Completed.)—Declaration, that on an accounting between them defendant's indebtedness to plaintiff was fixed at a certain sum, to be paid off as stipulated, one of which payments defendant undertook to make to A. & Co., to whom plaintiff was liable, it being also agreed that plaintiff should towards that liability provide an additional sum by a day named, to be repaid by defendant to him; and further, that any error in said accounting should be corrected, and plaintiff should give up to defendant all notes and securities belonging to detendant, which plaintiff before and at the time of the accounting held, except, &c. Breach, that although a reasonable time had clapsed, &c., defendant that not paid A. & Co. Pleà—after alleging that the sum agreed to be paid to A. & Co. was composed of various notes made by defendant to plaintiff—that after said necounting, and before action, plaintiff indorsed said notes to A. & Co., in settlement of their claim, of which A. & Co., had given defendant notice:—Held, plen bad, as not shewing that the notes, which had been indorsed away, had been given for the cause of action declared on. Jones v. Cameron, 16 C. P. 271.

Agreement Not Completed.] - To an action by husband and wife on a note for $600 made to the wife before marriage, defendant pleaded that the wife was formerly the widow of one C., to whom defendant had been indebted in $400; that she subsequently took out letters of administration to his personal estate; and that afterwards the defendant became indebted to her in $200; that the rote declared on was for these two sums; and that after its maturity, with the know-ledge and assent of her husband and co-plaintiff, she agreed with defendant to accept from him a conveyance in fee of certain lands in full satisfaction and discharge of her claim on said note; that defendant accordingly excented a proper deed of said lands to her, duly registered, and tendered the same to her before action, and that she never expressed any dissent from said agreement until after said tender:—Held, on demurrer, a bad plea; l. As not averring that there was no mar-riage settlement, so as to bring the case under the provisions of C. S. U. C. c. 73. 2. Because the accord and satisfaction attempted to be set up being, as to two-thirds of the amount, in respect of a sum due to the wife in her representative character, was not pleaded as having been made with her husband. 3. Because what was pleaded was the agreement to accept a deed in satisfaction, but the acceptance in satisfaction was not only not pleaded, but was shewn by the plea not to have taken place. Balsam v. Robinson, 19 C. P. 263.

Confusion of Dates.]—Plea of satisfaction held bad, on special denurrer, for inconsistency of dates. Phelan v. Fraser, 11 U. C. R. 94.

Covenant.]—Accord with satisfaction:— Held, to be a good plea in covenant. Bayard v Partridge, Tay. 558.

Damages.]—Case, for injury to plaintiff's reversionary interest in land leased by him to defendant. Plea, that it was agreed between them that if defendant would agree to pay him 662 Ibs, for the use of certain premises of his for one year, the plaintiff would accept such agreement in full satisfaction of the grievances complained of; that in pursuance of such agreement defendant agreed to pay, and plaintiff then accepted the said agreement in such satisfaction as aforesaid:—Held, a good plea of accord and satisfaction. Clark v. Ring, 13 U. C. R. 185.

Deed—Breach.]—Accord and satisfaction cannot be pleaded to a deed before breach. Robinson v. Flunigan, 22 U. C. R. 417.

New Firm.]—Declaration against R. & H. for goods sold. Plea by defendant H.. on equitable grounds, in substance, that he and R. purchased the goods while in partnership: that afterwards he retired, W. taking his place, and R. & W. assuming the debts of the old firm, including this claim: and that the plaintiff, being aware of this arrangement, took the note of the new firm R. & W., for his debt:—Held, a good plea. Watts v. Robinson, 32 U. C. R. 362.

The third plea alleged that the plaintiff had

The third plea alleged that the plaintiff had notice of the arrangement, as in the former plea; and that in consideration that W, would assume the liability of H, for this debt, the plaintiff accepted R, & W, in place of defendants, and took their note, and relinguished his claim against H:—Held, good,

The fourth plea averred satisfaction of the plaintiff's claim by the delivery and acceptance of the note of R. & W.;—Held, clearly good. Ib.

New Note Substituted.] — Declaration by administratrix of A. on a note for 8140, made by defendant, payable to A., or bearer, Plea, that at the making of the note, defendant owed A. 8150, and said note was by mistake made for 8140; that to correct the error, defendant immediately made a second note for 8150 at A.'s request, who received it in full satisfaction of the note sued on, which was inadverently left with A., and after his death came into the plaintiff shands; that the plaintiff also got the note for 8150, which she transferred to one F., who sued defendant on it, in the Division Court, which is still pending:—Held, on demurrer, a good plea, notwithstanding that the $150 note was not was averred to be negotiable. McHenry v. Crysdale, 25 U. C. R. 460.

Note after Breach.]-Action on a policy of insurance, alleging a total loss by fire, and that defendants had by resolution admitted the claim at £500, and promised to pay it. Plea, that after the accruing of the cause of action declared upon, it was agreed between defendants and the plaintiff, that the plaintiff detendants and the plantill, that the plantill should draw upon one C., requiring him to pay to the plaintiff's order 1500 at the Bank of Upper Canada, at Niagara, and that the plaintiff would accept and receive C.'s acceptance of said bill in full satisfaction and discharge of the said cause of action; that the plaintiff accordingly drew and C, accepted such bill; and the plaintiff then received the same from defendants in full satisfaction of said cause of action, and afterwards indorsed the same to the said bank, who then held the same. The plaintiff replied that neither defendants nor C. paid the bill, and that the bank before this suit delivered the same to the plaintiff, who still held it:—Held, on demurrer, plea good, for it alleged a simple conmurrer, plea good, for it alleged a simple con-tract given in satisfaction, not of an under-taking under seal before breach, but of the "cause of action," or damages accrued after, "cause of action," which did not arise from the deed only, but from the fire and compliance with the conditions of the policy:—Held, also, replication clearly bad, Brown v. Eric and Ontario Insurance Co., 21 U. C. R. 425.

Note Taken.]—Assumpsit on a note for £75. Plea, as to £50, another note taken on account, indorsed by plaintiffs and outstanding. Replication held bad in form, on special denurrer. Thompson v. Wilson, 1 C. P. 57.

Note Taken.]—To an action for goods sold and delivered, defendant pleaded in effect, that upon an accounting $60 and no more was found due on such accounts; and it was then agreed that defendant should, and he did deliver to plaintiff, who then accepted and received from defendant a certain note for $60, in full satisfaction and discharge of the several causes of action, and of all the plaintiff's costs of action, and of all the plaintiff's costs of suit:—Held, a good plea in accord and satisfaction. Freeman v. McCarthy, 19 C. P. 229.

Offer Not Accepted.] — Declaration by P.'s administrator on a note made by defendant, payable to P. Defendant pleaded, by way of accord and satisfaction, a certain proposition made to the plantiff and D. as curators of P.'s estate in Montreal, which was, in effect, that one R. would indorse defendant's notes for I's, 6d, in the f, payable at certain dates, on getting a full discharge; and the defendant averred that the plaintiff and D, as such creditors "agreed to and accepted the terms of the said proposition," and defendant made and R, indorsed his notes accordingly, and delivered the same to the agent of the said curators in full satisfaction and discharge, and as a composition of the causes of action sued for:—Held, plea bad, for not averring either that the notes or the agreement were accepted in satisfaction or discharge. Maclarane v. Ryan, 24 U. C. R. 474.

Part Payment.]—Covenant for non-payment of £300 by instalments. Plens, as to £50 parcel, &c., payment and acceptance of £50 in full satisfaction thereof:—Held, good. Fralick v. Huffman, 5 U. C. R. 502.

Agreement to Manufacture.) Patent -Patent — agreement to Manufacture.]—
The plaintiffs sold to defendant by deed the right to manufacture and sell their patent right for "Kinney's Metallic Wagon Seat," for the time in the patent mentioned. Defendant covenanted to manufacture at least twenty per day, and as many more as the demand should require, paying each of the plaintiffs one-half of a royalty of twenty-five on each seat, and further, to supply McK. & Co. with at least 200 seats per month at 95c, each, pursuant to an agreement between them and the plaintiffs, paying on these a them and the plaintiffs, paying on these a royalty of 20c, to the plaintiffs. There were other covenants by defendant to manufacture oner covenants by derendant to manufacture in a workmanlike manner, &c., and to make use of all means to introduce the seats and make them known. The declaration set out the deed, and assigned breaches of all the covenants. The third plea was, that after breach it was agreed between the plaintiffs and defendant that they should release each other from the performance of their respective covenants, and all rights of action in respect thereof, and in consideration thereof defendant agreed to manufacture thenceforth only so many seats as would supply the de-mand, and the plaintiffs accepted such agreemand, and the prantiffs accepted such agree-ment in satisfaction of the cause of action de-clared on:—Held, bad, as pleaded to the whole cause of action, whereas it could only be an answer to the breaches of the covenant and not to the covenant itself, for it shewed no release, but only an agreement for one, and no satisfaction by deed; and because the satisfaction was insufficient, the new agreement being merely to manufacture a less number of the same article in the same way, and on the same terms, McGiccrin v. Turnbull, 32 the same terms. U. C. R. 407.

Satisfaction After Breach.] — Declaration: that the plaintiffs, by deed, dated 18th April, 1874, covenanted to keep their mill in running order, using due diligence, during the senson of 1874; to saw, cull, draw, and pile all the pine lumber required to be cut thereat, as they might be instructed, and to draw the logs from a named point, the plaintiffs to give three days' notice of their requirement to have the logs delivered at said requirement to have the logs delivered at said point; and the defendant covenanted that if, after the said notice, the said logs were not so delivered, he would pay the cost of the mill hands kept idle in consequence, but such cost not to commence until the expiration of the three days' notice. And the plaintiffs averred that defendant failed to deliver logs after three full days' notice, whereby the hands were kept idle, &c. Fourth plea: that before the alleged breaches, the defendant gave the plaintiffs notice that he did not require any further logs cut or sawed at the mill during the season of 1874. Fifth plea, on equitable grounds, setting out, in substance, a parol agreement, under which the plaintiffs elected and agreed to saw certain logs known as the Boyd logs and other logs, not included in the first agreement, for their own benefit and profit, but on the express agreement and condi-tion that the defendant should not be liable for the costs and charges of the men being kept idle, pending the delay; and that the plaintiffs accordingly sawed the said logs on these terms; but the plea did not aver positively the acceptance of the substituted agreement, or the performance of it in satisfaction, &c.:—Held, on demurrer, fourth plea bad, for under the agreement defendant was not authorized of his own mere motion to put an end to it. Held, also, fifth plea good, as amounting to a satisfaction after breach, though it would have been more proper to have averred in express terms an acceptance in satisfaction, &c. Dinwoodie v. Smith, 25 C. P. 361.

Seduction—Agreement to Support Child.]—Declaration in seduction, by the father. Plea, in effect, that after the seduction it was agreed between plaintiff and defendant that agree between plaintiff and defendant that at his own costs, &c. plaintiff growth the same in full satisfaction and discharger; and that defendant did agree so to do, and plaintiff accepted said agreement in full satisfaction, &c. :—Held, on demurrer, plea good, as setting out an agreement on defendant's part, for which a sufficient consideration appeared in his undertaking a liability which le was not bound to assume, and that defendant was not obliged to shew that he had actually performed his agreement, as this was unnecessary to support the accord set up by the plea. Metught Crear, 18 C. P. 448.

Settlement of Action.1—The plaintiffs having filed a bill for specific performance of a contract by one R, to seel a certain mine and them, it was agreed between plaintiffs and T, them, it was agreed between plaintiffs and T, between them, it was agreed between plaintiffs and T, and the plaintiffs and purchase said nine from the plaintiffs. In purchase said nine from the plaintiffs is plaintiffs, and pay all costs incurred or to be incurred therein, or any other set to be incurred therein, or any other suit brought or defended by them respecting said mine, and pay all the moneys due for the purchase thereof, and allot to each of the plaintiffs a twentieth share therein, if they should succeed in getting a title through the suit; and that they would settle all claims of Messrs. E. & G. against the plaintiffs. The plaintiffs sued defendants on the last-mentioned covenant; and to a plea setting out the transaction, which was held void for champerty and maintenance, the plaintiffs replied, on equitable grounds, that in the Chancery suit defendants were added as plaintiffs, and defendants therein in their answer set up against them that this agreement was void for champerty, which they denied, and on the hearing the cause was compromised, and a decree made by agreement, by which defendants were allotted a certain portion of the land, for which they received a conveyance, and the agreement declared on was treated and acted upon by all parties, and by the court, as valid. Remarks by A. Wilson, J., as to the effect of this replication. Carr v. Tannahill, 30 U. C. R. 217.

Transfer of Property.]—In an action on the common counts, defendant A. pleaded that it was agreed between the plaintiff B., and the defendant A., and a third party, C., that C. should sell to B. all the claim, title and right of pre-emption which C. had to certain land, and that C. should execute a deed at B.'s request to D. in satisfaction of B.'s claim, and then averred that C. did, by the procurement of A., at B.'s request, execute a deed to D. of all the title C. had to the land:—Held, plea bad, in not averring that A. had a certain right and interest in the land, and of a certain value, and that the conveyance to D. was accepted in satisfaction. Fralick v. Lafferty, 3 U. C. R. 159.

Transfer of Property. |-Plea. that on, &c., defendant made to the infant son of the plaintiff a good and sufficient deed in fee of certain land, which the plaintiff accepted in full satisfaction, &c.:—Semble, that it should have been averred that defendant had some interest in the land conveyed in satisfaction. Phelon v, Froser, II U. C. R. 94.

Transfer of Property.]—Sci. fa. upon a judgment for $2,000 against defendant as administrator of M. on a bond in that sun, conditioned for the parment of $1,200 by instalments, with a suggestion that two instalments were due and unpaid. Plea, on equivable grounds, that before the sci. fa. issued it was agreed between the plaintiff and defendant, with several others the heirs at law of M., that they should convey to the plaintiff their interest in certain land of which as such heirs they were seized in fee, that the consideration therefor should be $2,000, and their interest should be read as so much in cash, which should be applied as a payment by the estate of M. to the plaintiff; that the defendant and others accordingly conveyed their interest in the land to the plaintiff; and the plaintiff accepted such conveyance as representing $2,000, and credited the estate of M. with the sum; that the only debt then due by the estate to the plaintiff was the said judgment, on which the total amount then due and accruing due was less than $2,000, whereby said judgment was satisfied; and such credit was the only consideration for the conveyance:—Held, on demurrer, that the plea shewed a good defence. Whiteford v. McLeod, 28 U. C. R. 349.

Transfer of Shares. — To an action on the common counts by plaintiffs as executors, defendant pleaded, on equitable grounds, that defendant and testator were partners in the purchase of certain lands in the United States of America, and also in some shares in a certain railway company for which they were to pay in equal proportions and were to share equally in the profits and losses, and that being so interested, it was after the death of the testator agreed between plaintiff and defendant that if defendant would assume and pay the calls on the railway shares, take the stock as his own, and relieve the plaintiff from all liability thereon, no claim should be made upon him for the balance due on the lands, but that plaintiffs should pay the same, and the payments so made should become a first charge upon the lands. The plea then averned performance of the agreement on the defendant's part:—Held, on demurrer, a good plea both as a legal and equitable defence, and that, if it was necessary to the validity of the agreement that there should have murrer that there are memory that there is a summed on the property of the agreement that there should have the plaintiff and the property of the agreement that there should have the plaintiff and the plaintiff of the agreement that there should have the plaintiff of the agreement that there should have the plaintiff of the agreement that there should have the plaintiff of the agreement that there should have the plaintiff of the agreement that there should have the plaintiff of the agreement that there should have the plaintiff of the agreement that there should have the plaintiff of the agreement that there should have the plaintiff of the agreement and the plain Trespass.]—In trespass q, cl, fr, defendant pleaded a reference after action, and payment and acceptance of 5s, in pursuance of the award, in full satisfaction of the damages and costs:—Held, a good plea of accord and satisfaction, all about the reference being surplusage. Hall v. Warner, 2 U. C. R. 392.

Interpleader.]—Held. in interpleader, that the claimant, a resident of the United States, having placed the goods here, would have been personally liable to the jurisdiction of this court in any question concerning them, even if he had not employed an attorney and made an affidavit to support his claim. Buffalo and Lake Huron R. W. Co. v. Hemmingway, 22 C. C. R. 562.

Levying War — Autrefois Acquit.] —
The prisoner being indicted under C. S. U.
C. c. 98, and charged as a citizen of the United States, was acquitted on proving himself to be a British subject. He was then indicted as a subject of Her Majesty, and pleaded autrefois acquit:—Held, that the plea was not proved, for that by the statute the offence in the case of a foreigner and a subject is substantially different, the evidence, irrespective of national status, which would convict a foreigner being insufficient as against a subject; and the prisoner, therefore, was not in legal peril on the first indictment. Regina v. McGrath,
26 U. C. R. 385.

Levying War—Evidence.]—The prisoner was convicted upon an indictment under C. S. U. C. c. 98, containing three counts, each charging him as a citizen of the United States. He was charged with levying war, and being in arms against Her Majesty. The Crown rested on the prisoner's statement that he was born in Ireland, and was a citizen of the United States. It was objected that the duty of allegiance attaching from his birth continued, and he therefore was not shewn to be a citizen of the United States, but:—Held, that though his duty as a subject remained, he might become liable as a citizen of the United States by being naturalized, of which his own declaration was evidence. Regina v. McMahon, 26 U. C. R.

Levying War-Evidence.]-In this case, the charge being the same as the last, it was shewn that the prisoner had declared himself to be an American citizen since his arrest, but a witness was called on his behalf who proved that he was born within the Queen's allegiance:—Held, that the Crown might waive the right of allegiance and try him as an American citizen, which he claimed to be, The fact of the invaders coming from the United States, would be prima facie evidence of their being citizens or subjects thereof. Regina v. Lynch, 26 U. C. R. 208.

Mortgage - Discharge, 1 - A foreign administrator cannot effectually release a mortgage on land in this province. Payment to him and a release by the heirs are not sufficient to entitle the owners to a certificate of title free from incumbrances under the Act for Quieting Titles. In re Thorpe, 14 Gr. 76.

Mortgage of Ship. |- The mortgagee of a British ship is not an owner within the meaning of Imperial statute 17 & 18 Vict. c. 104, and there is no provision in that statute to prevent an alien being a mortgagee, Comstock v. Harris, 13 O. R. 407.

Naturalization.]-On an application to prevent certificates of unturalization being is-sued by the Court of General Sessions of the Pence, to C. W., J. F., and B. K., under 31 Vict. c. 66 (D.), the grounds of opposition were, l. That the time of residence was not stated in the affidavit of residence: 2. That the certificate of the justices of the peace, read on the first day of the court, did not shew that on the first day of the court, did not shew that the requisite ouths of allegiance had been taken by the applicants. 3. That initial let-ters only were used in the heading of the affidavits, and not the full names of the appli-cants. These objections were overruled. In re Webster, 7 C. L. J. 39.

Bills of Sale. |- Effect of Bills of Sale Act. R. S. O. 1877 c. 119, where animal conveyed by one of two owners. See Gunn v. Burgess, 5 O. R. 685.

Conversion—Increase.]—In April, 1846, plaintiff's mares strayed to defendant's farm, who advertised them, and no owner appear-ing, he began to use them about a year afterwards. In July, 1846, the same mares, being supposed to be on the plaintiff's pasture, were sold by the sheriff, under an execution against soin by the sheriff, under an execution against plaintiff, to one Scott, who never obtained possession of them, but hearing, in 1852, that they had foaled and were in defendant's pos-session, made a written demand on defendant session, made a written demand on sentember of for them and their progeny in September of that year. A year afterwards S, made over his interest to the plaintiff as a gift, without any consideration or delivery. In 1855 the plaintiff made a demand on defendant for the plaintiff made a demand on defendant for the mares and colts, which was refused, and he brought trover:—Held, that the measure of damages in trover is the value of the property at the time of conversion, and consequently that even if the plaintiff had not been barred by the statute of limitations he had no claim ALIMONY.

C. P. 302.

C. P. 302. Scienter.]—Held, that upon a count in case, for injuries done by defendant's bull, alleging defendant's knowledge of the bulls viccous progensity, the fact that he had once admitted that his bull had done the injury, and offered the plaintiff $10. was properly submitted to the jury as evidence of such knowledge, with a caution, however, as to its weight, as in Thomas v, Morgan, 2 Cr. M. & R. 496. Mason v. Morgan, 24 U. C. R. 328.

Scienter, |—W. brought an action for injuries to her daughter committed by a dog owned or harboured by the defendant V. The defence was that V. did not own the dog, and had no knowledge that he was vicious. On the trial it was shewn that the dog was formerly owned by a man in V.'s employ, who lived and kept the dog at V.'s house. When this man went away from the blace he left the dog benind with V.'s son, to be kept until sent for, and afterwards the dog lived at the house, going every day to V.'s place of business with him, or his son, who assisted in the business. The savage disposition of the dog on two occasions was sworn to, V. being present at one and his son at the other. V. swore that he knew nothing about the dog being left by the owner with his son until he heard it at the trial:—Held, that there was ample evidence for the jury that V. harboured the dog with knowledge of its vicious propensities and that a nonsuit was wrong. Vaughan v. Wood, 18 S. C. R. 703.

II. CATTLE.

Trespass.] — Trespass is maintainable against the owner of a bull which has broken into the plaintiff's close and there killed his mare, the defendant being present or aware of the act. Mason v. Morgan, 24 U. C. R. 228.

III. Dog.

Municipal Control.]—The corporation of the city of Toronto have power from time to time, at their discretion, to make by-laws by which dogs found running at large within the limits and liberties of the said city, after proclamation of such by-laws, may be shot. McKenzie v. Campbell, 1 U. C. R. 241.

IV. Horse.

Agistment.]—Plaintiff sold two horses to defendant, who sent them back as not agreeing with an alleged warranty. The plaintiff gave him repeated notice to take them again, or that she should charge him for their keep. Defendant, in answer, insisted that he had a right to return them. The plaintiff having sued upon common counts for agistment and pasturage, the jury found that the horses belonged to defendant:—Held, that the plaintiff could not recover, for the mere fact of ownership would not make defendant liable, and the evidence as to his conduct, &c., tended to negative any implied request or promise to pay. Halliday v. White, 23 U. C. R. 503.

Agistment—Negligence,1—The plaintiff's mare, while in charge of the defendant under a contract of summer agistment, was killed by fulling through the plank covering of a well in the defendant's yard, the existence of which was known to the defendant, but not to the plaintiff, and to which yard the mare, with other horses of the defendant, had access from a field in which they were at pasture:— Held, that the plaintiff had, on proof of these facts, given sufficient prima facie evidence of negligence to cast the onus on the detendant of shewing that reasonable care which an agister is bound to exercise; and a nonsuit was set aside. Pearce v. Sheppard, 24 O. R. 167.

Blacksmith's Lien.]—Quere, as to a farrier's right of lien on a horse for services rendered. Aicolls v. Duncan, 11 U. C. R. 352.

Conversion.]—A. lent a horse to B. for a special purpose, and while B. was using him consistently with such lending, the horse was accidentally hurt, and consequently left at a public stable, of which B. gave A. immediate notice. A. having seen the horse, refused to take him, and went to B.'s residence (20 miles from where the horse was left), and demanded him back sound as received;—Held, that B.'s non-delivery of the horse after such demand, did not furnish evidence of a conversion, and that A. could not sustain trover. Wells v. Cree, 5. O. S. 209.

Damages for Immoderate Driving.!—Where in assumpsit for the immoderate riding of a mare loaned to the defendant, and not returning her, with a breach that she was not restored to plaintiff, but was so injured that she died, the defendant plended one plea as to returning her only, the plea was held a good answer to that part of the breach it professed to cover. Campbell v. Boulton. 2 U. C. R. 202

Damages for Immoderate Driving.)—Action against a bailee for killing a horse hired to him by carcless driving, and breaking the buggy and harness, and not returning them. Pleas: 3. That the horse was a runaway horse, and the damage occasioned thereby; 4. That the plantiff hired the horse knowing him to be a runaway, and that he ran away without the fault of the defendant; 5. That defendant did offer to return the buggy and harness after they were broken:—Held, pleas bad. McKay v. Cameron, 6. U. C. R. 340.

Damages—Innkeeper's Negligence.]—The plaintiff lent or hired his horse to S., who, while on a journey, put it up at defendant's im, and it was strangled in the stable there, owing, as the jury found, to the negligence of defendant's servant in tying it up in the stall:—Held, that the plaintiff might maintain an action therefor. Walker v. Sharpe, 31 U. C. R. 340.

Damages—Veyligence.]—Defendant, having chairs of the plaintint colt, too it to a blacksmith's show the first time, and having the lit there went time, and having the lit there went time, and having the lit. The plaintiff sued defendant for negligence in so tying the colt instead of having it held while being shod; and several witnesses were of opinion that what defendant had done was improper, while others thought he had adopted the proper plan:—Held, not a case in which there should be a nonsuit on the ground that the evidence was consistent either with the existence or non-existence of negligence, but that the question was for the jury. Cotten v. Wood, S. C.

B. N. S. 568, and Jackson v. Hyde, 28 U. C. R. 294, distinguished. Henderson v. Barnes, 32 U. C. R. 176.

Exemption. —A horse ordinarily used in the debtor's occupation, not exceeding in value 860, is a "chattel" within the meaning of the Exemption Act, 23 Vict. c. 25, s. 4, s.-s. 6, and is, therefore, not liable to seizure for debt, Davidson v. Repuolds, 16 C. P. 140.

Exemption.]—A person serving with or attached to a militin cavalry troop as quartermaster is an officer thereof, and his horse protected from distress under s. 31 of 18 Vict. c. 71. Daccy v. Carteright, 20 C. P. 1.

Hiring. |—The plaintiff charged defendant with taking his mare on loan, and using her improperly, whereby she died; and defendant pleaded that he obtained the mare on a contract for hire, not on loan:—Held, a good answer. Robertson v. Brown, 1 U. C. R. 345.

Horse Race.]—See Davis v. Hewitt, 9 O. R. 435.

Horse-thief. |—Reward for apprehension of horse-thief under 36 Vict. c. 48, s. 396 (O.). See In re Robinson, 7 P. R. 239.

Stolen Horse—Trexpass, 1—When a horse was stolen from the plaintiff and hought by defendant at public auction, but not in marker overt, and the plaintiff afterwards seeing the horse took possession of it, and defendant immediately retook it:—Held, that the plaintiff had a right to retake it, no property having passed to defendant by the sale; and that, although it was in his possession only for a moment, yet the property revested in him, and he could maintain trespass against the defendant for the retaking. Boveman v. Yielding, M. T. 3 Vict.

Vicious Horse—Pleading,1—Declaration that defendant was possessed of a wild, vicious, and mischievous horse, and it was unsafe and improper to permit the said horse to go or run at large on any public highway, yet defendant wrongfully and negligently permitted and suffered the horse, so being vicious, &c., to go at large on the public highway, where the plaintiff then lawfully was, whereby the horse ran at and junned upon the plaintiff, and broke his leg:—Held, bad, for knowledge of the animal's nature was not averred, and the allowing it to be at large on the highway was not a breach of any duty due from defendant to plaintiff. Chase v. McDonald, 25 C. P. 129.

Warranty—Damages.]— Defendant sold plaintiff a stallion, warranting him to be a good coverer and fonl-getter. The horse turned out worthless as a fonl-getter, and the jury gave £150 damages. The Court, although considering the damages too high, refused a new trial. Natrass v. Nightingale, 7 C. P. 269. See, also, County of Simcodarjeultural Society v. Wade, 12 U. C. R. 014; Craig v. Milter, 22 C. P. 348.

Warranty — Inday, I — A. and B. exchanged horses, and B. gave A. a note for difference in the exchange; A. sold the horse he got from B. almost immediately, and after two years, during which nothing appeared to have been done by either party, B. was sued upon the note by A.:—Held, that B. could not set up as a defence that the horse he received was unsound, although A. had declared him free from fault and blemish at the time of sale. Hall v. Coleman, 3 O. 8, 39.

Warranty—Pleading.]—In an action on the case on the warranty of a horse, the plea of not guilty puts the warranty in issue. Honeywell v. Davis, 2 U. C. R. 63.

V. SHEEP.

"Giving of Sheep to Double"—Statute of Frauds. —The Statute of Frauds closes not apply to a contract which has been entirely executed on one side within the year from the making so as to prevent an action being brought for the non-performance on the delivered sheep to the defendant within a year from the making of a verbal contract with the defendant under which the latter was to deliver double the number to the plaintiff at the expiration of three years:—Held, that the contract was not within the statute. Trimble y, Lanktee, 25 O. R. 109.

Protection of Sheep Act — Town.] — Held, that 32 Vict. c. 31 (O.), which requires municipalities to provide compensation to the owners of sheep killed by dogs, for the damage they have thereby sustained, is not confined to county municipalities and to municipalities within their jurisdiction, but applies also to towns which have withdrawn from the jurisdiction of the county. Williams v. Town of Port Hope, 27 C. P. 548.

Protection of Sheep Act. |—The owner of sheep killed or injured by a dog can, under R. S. O. 1887 c, 214, s. 15, recover the damage occasioned thereby without proving that the dog had a propensity to kill or injure sheep; and the Act applies to a case where the dog has been set upon the sheep. It did not appear upon the face of the conviction in question that the offence was committed within the territorial jurisdiction of the convicting justices of the peace, but upon the depositions it was clear that it was so committed;—Held, that the saving provision of s. S7 of R. S. C. 1886 c. 178 should be applied; and the order nist to quash the conviction was discharged. Regina v. Perrin, 16 O. R. 446.

Protection of Sheep Act—Procedure.1—The right of action given by R. S. O. 1887 c. 214. s. 15. to the owner of sheep killed by dogs. is to be prosecuted with the usual procedure of the appropriate forum. If, therefore, an action be properly brought in the County Court, it may be tried before a jury, and where it is so tried, they, and not the Judge, should apportion the damages, if an apportionment be required. Fox v. Williamson, 20 A. R. 610.

VI. WILD ANIMALS.

Damages — Separate Estate.] — Liability of wife of owner of an animal feræ naturæ for damages caused by its escape from premises forming part of her separate estate. See Shaw v. McCreary, 19 O. R. 39.

Right to Kill.;—The defendant killed upon his own land, which adjoined that of the plaintiffs and was unfenced, a deer, one of the progeny of certain deer imported by the plaintiffs and defendant, and allowed to run at large upon the land:—Held, that the deer was fere nature, and, having been shot by the defendant on his own land, belonged to him:—Held, also, that neither the Act incorporating the plaintiffs 29 & 30 Vict. c. 122, nor R. S. O. 1887 c. 221. s. 10, vested the absolute property in the deer in the plaintiffs. Re Long Point Co. v. Anderson, 19 O. R. 487. Reversed on the question of prohibition: 18 A. R. 491.

ANNUITY.

Annuity Acts. | — Quare, whether the English Annuity Acts are in force here; but if so, a bill to enforce an annuity deed need not allege the enrolment of a memorial as required by those Acts; and a defendant cannot at the hearing take an objection for want of such enrolment, unless he has set up such defence by his answer. Emmons v. Grooks, I Gr. 159.

Apportionment.] — An annuity payable annually during the annuitant's life is not apportionable, so that his administrator can recover nothing if the annuitant die within the year. Ausman v. Montgomery, 5 C. P. 364.

Apportionment.1—In consideration of $12.000 paid by plaintiff's testator to the defendants, they, by an instrument in writing, arreed to pay him $1.800 every year during his natural life, in equal ountrefty payments of $150 each. The terms "policy" and "annuity bond" were both used in the document itself as descriptive of its nature. The consideration was stated to be not only the $12.000, but "the application for this policy and the statements and agreements therein contained, hereby made a part of this contract," and it was provided that upon certain conditions "this policy shall be void." —Held, in an action by his executors, that the instrument was not a policy of assurance within the exception in R. S. O. 1887 c. 143, $5, but an annuity bond; and that the money payable by the defendants under it was apportionable within s. 2; and therefore the plaintiffs were entitled to recover a part of a quarterly instalment in proportion to the period between the last quarter day and the death of the testator. Cutabert v. North American Life Assurance Co., 24 O. R. 5.11.

Attachment.] — A testator having beoueathed 5500 per annum, payable out of the rents of his real and personal estate indiscriminately, for the support of his widow and family, (the widow having become sole excentrix), his separate creditors were held entitled to have her share of the annuity seveted and attached to satisfy their debts, subject, however, to the prior claims of the estate against mer as executrix, to be recoursed for breaches of trust and the like; and—Semble, that where there is no process whereby such a 1 und can be reached, thus court has power under 22 Vict. c. 22, s. 288, to apply a remedy; as in this case by equitable attachment. Bank of British North America v. Matthews, 8 Gr. 486.

Condition.]—T. C. S. devised his estate of Clark Hill, with the islands, lands and grounds appertaining, to his nephew M.—M. S. grandmother, by her will, directed her executors to pay him $2.000 a year so long as he should remain the owner and actual occupant of Clark Hill, "to enable nim the better to keep up, decorate, and beautily the property known as Clark Hill, and the islands connected therewith:"—Held, that the expropriation, under an Act of the Legislature, of part of the Clark Hill estate, did not in any way affect M.'s right to this annuity; and therefore in awarding compensation to M. for the lands expropriated, the arbitrators properly excluded the consideration of any contemplated loss by M. of this annuity. In re Macklem and Commissioners of Niagara Falls Park, 14 A. R. 20.

A failure by M. to reside and occupy, would be in the nature of a forfeiture for breach of a condition subsequent architecture for breach of a condition subsequent architecture annuity would continue absolute thing occurred to divest the estate, which must be by his own act or default; the vis major of a binding statute could not work a forfeiture. Upon the evidence the court refused to interfere with the amount of compensation awarded. Ib.

Interest. |—No interest is allowable in respect of arrears of an annuity. Goldsmith v. Goldsmith, 17 Gr. 213.

Interest.!—On the 18th October, 1856, the owner of real estate granted an annuity thereout of $40, with power of distress in case of default. Only one year's annuity was paid, and in October, 1877, the grantor, by writing, acknowledged the amount then due. On a bill filed by the annuitant claiming ten years' arrears, with interest thereon:—Held, that the power of distress was not such a penalty as took the case out of the general rule that interest will not be allowed on arrears of annuity; and that notwithstanding the written admission by the grantor of the amount due under the deed, the annuitant could recover only six years' arrears without interest, as against a puisne incumbrancer who had duly registered his conveyance. Crone v. Crone, 27 Gr. 425.

Interest. |—Interest on, as against assignee in insolvency. See Snarr v. Badenach, 10 O. R. 131.

Personal Liability,]—Where a devise of real estate is made subject to the payment of an annuity, and the devisee accepts the devise, he will be deemed to have assumed a personal liability to pay the amount which will be enforced by the court. Carter v. Carter, 26 Gr. 232.

Prior Mortgage. |—The owner of property mortgaged it, and then died, having devised one-half of the property to one son, and the other half to another, charging each half with an annuity to the testator's widow. One of the sons afterwards died intestate, and his widow paid off the mortgage and took an assignment to herself:—Held, that if she was willing to make the annuity a first charge on the property, the testator's widow could not insist on redeeming the mortgage. Long v. Long, 16 Gr. 239; S. C., 17 Gr. 251.

I. APPEAL GENERALLY.

Abatement,]—An administrator will not be allowed to revive a judgment in favour of his intestate, pending an appeal to the Court of the Governor-in-Council, or the King and Privy Council, in the original action, although it be proved by affidavit that the plaintiff, in whose favour judgment was given in the court below, died after judgment, and before the allowance of the appeal to the King in Council, though after the allowance of that to the Governor and Council, Washburn v. Powell, 2 O. S. 463.

Accounts.]—Decree directing accounts to be taken varied on appeal. Construction of decree in appeal and duty of master under it. Gilbert v. Jarvis, 20 Gr. 478.

Amount Involved.]—Although the Supreme Court cannot refuse to hear an appeal in a case where only $22 is involved, yet the bringing of appeals for such trifling amounts is objectionable, and should not be encouraged. McDonald v. Gilbert, 16 S. C. R. 700.

Amount Involved.]—It is not beneath the dignity of the court to determine an appeal where the amount involved is less than $40. Clarke v. Creighton, 14 P. R. 100.

Arbitration.]—Where an action in the division court by a school teacher against the trustees was referred by order of the Judge, with the consent of parties:—Held, that the arbitrator's decision could not be appealed from under 16 Vict. c. 185, s. 24. Chief Superintendent of Schools, Appellant, In re Milme and Sylvester, 18 U. C. R. 538.

Arbitration—Stated Case.]—On a reference at his prins the order required the arbitrator, at the request of either party, to state any special facts for the court, which was thereupon empowered to alter or amend the verdict as it might think proper. The arbitrator having stated a case, the court made a rule thereon:—Held, that no appeal would lie, and that as judgment had not been entered, error could not be brought. Mills v. King, 41 C. P. 223; 8. C., 3 E. & A. 120.

Consent Order.]—There can be no appeal from an order appearing on its face to be made by consent, unless by leave of the court or Judge making it, even though the appeal is on the ground that no consent was given: R. S. O. 1897 c. 51, s. 72. Re Justin, 18 P. R. 125.

Contempt—Motion to Quash Appeal.]—
The fact that a party to an action is in contempt is no bar to his proceeding with the action in the ordinary way; the contempt is only a bar to his asking the court for an indulgence.

And where the defendants received certain moneys in disobedience to an interim injunction, which was made perpetual by the judgment at the trial, a motion by the plaintiff to quash the defendants' appeal from the judgment was refused. Ferguson v. County of Elvin, 15 P. R. 339.

Conventional Forum.]—On the trial of an action against a railway company for injuries alleged to have been caused by negligence of the servants of the company in not giving proper notice of the approach of a train at a crossing whereby plaintiff was struck by the engine and hurt, the case was withdrawn from the jury by consent of counted for both narties and referred to the full court with power to draw inferences of fact, and on the law and facts either to assess damages to the plaintiff or enter a judgment of nonsuit:—Held, that as by the practice in the Suureme Court of New Bronswick all matters of fact must be decided by the jury, and can only be entertained by the court by consent of parties, the full court in considering the case pursuant to the agreement at the trial acted as a quasi-arbitrator and its decision was not open to review on appeal, as it would have been if the judgment had been given in the regular course of judicial procedure in the regular course of judicial procedure in the court. Canadán Pacific R. W. Co. v. Plenning, 28 S. C. R. 33.

Counsel's Duty. —Where upon the argument of an appeal the respondent omitted to point out in what respect the replications of the plaintiff were demurrable, the court refused to wade through the mass of pleading which had been filed in the court below, to find it out for themselves; and being of opinion, in the absence of argument, that the pleading was good, affirmed the judgment of the court below upon such pleadings. Quan v. Union Fire Ins. Co., S A. R. 376. Quin-

Court of Chancery. |- The right of appeal from Chancery is confined to orders or decrees made in a cause pending between parties. An appeal from an order directing the taxation of a solicitor's bill against his client in a particular mode, was therefore dismissed with costs. In re Freeman, 2 E. & A. 109.

Demurrer-Amendment not Made.]-The judgment in the court below (32 C. P. 131) overruled a demurrer on the assumption that a plea had been amended according to leave given, but as the appeal book did not shew the amendment to have been made, the defence as set out in the printed case was held bad on demurrer, and the appeal by the plaintiff was allowed with costs. Boswell v. Sutherland, S.A. R. 233.

English Decisions. |-- When a decision of the Court of Appeal in England is at variance with one of the Court of Appeal in this Province, the latter should be followed here, as the former court is not the court of ultimate appeal for the Province. Sutton v. Sutton, 22 Ch. D. 511, not followed. MacDonald v. McDonald, 11 O. R. 187. See McDonald v. Elliott, 12 O. R. 98.

Entering Verdict.]-Where leave reserved at the trial to move to set aside the verdict, and to enter a verdict for the plaintiff;—Held, that the Court of Appeal could order such verdict to be entered. Herbert v. Park, 25 C. P. 57.

Equal Division. |- The court being equally divided, the judgment of the court below was not altered. McLcod v. New Brunswick R. W. Co., 5 S. C. R. 281.

Equal Division. |- The prisoner was remanded for extradition by the Chancery Divi-sion of the High Court of Justice, which on appeal to this court was affirmed, the court being equally divided (8 A. R. 31). A second writ of habeas corpus was thereupon obtained, and the prisoner brought before the Common Pleas Division, when he was again remanded, whereupon he again appealed to this court, which appeal was dismissed with costs, as which appeal was dismissed with costs, as under such circumstances a second appeal could not be entertained. In re Hall, 8 A. R. 135. See S. C., 23 C. P. 498. Per Burton and Patterson, JJ.A. The grounds for the technical rule of practice of the House of Lords on an equal division have no existence in other appellate tribunals, although in the particular case the appellate court is the court of last resort. Ib.

The effect of an equal division in this court, as in a court of first instance, is simply that the rule or motion drops or the appeal is dismissed, and the judgment below remains undisturbed, but is not considered as a binding authority. Ib.

Per Patterson, J. A. By the effect of the Judicature Act, a decision of any one divi-sion is a decision of the High Court; this Per Patterson, J. A. matter had therefore been already disposed of on the former appeal. Ib.

Equal Division. |- The Court of Appeal for Ontario, composed of four Judges, pronounced judgment in an appeal before the court, two of the Judges being in favour of dismissing and the other two pronouncing no judgment. On an appeal from the judgment dismissing the appeal it was objected that there was no decision arrived at :-Held, that there was no decision arrived at; — Dear, that the appellate court should not go be-hind the formal judgment which stated that the appeal was dismissed; further, the position was the same as if the four Judges had tion was the same as it the four augges had been equally divided in opinion, in which case the appeal would have been properly dis-missed. Booth v. Ratté, 21 S. C. R. 637.

Habeas Corpus.]—Remarks as to the inconvenience, if not danger, of making the writ of habeas corpus a mere method of appealing from other tribunals on points more of practice than affecting the merits. In re Munn, 25 U. C. R. 24.

Habeas Corpus.]-The Act 29 & 30 Vict. c. 45, apparently substituted the right of appeal in habeas corpus cases for successive applications from court to court. In re Hall, S A. R. 135.

Interest. |- Where the Court of Appeal orders payment of money, and says nothing as to any antecedent interest thereon, such interest cannot afterwards be added by the Court of Chancery; at all events, in cases in which, though interest is usually given, it is not a matter of strict legal right, but of discretion. Box v. Provincial Ins. Co., 19 Gr. 48.

Interest. | - Interest when judgment is given in appeal for respondent in a personal action. See Quinlan v. Union Fire Ins. Co.,

Interim Injunction. | —Where, after the expiration by effluxion of time of an interim expiration by emixion of time of an interim injunction order, proceedings are taken against a party to the action to commit him for contempt for disobeying the order, an appeal by him against the interim order will lie. McLeod v. Noble, 24 A. R. 459.

Interlocutory Order — Arrest.] — Upon an appeal by the plaintiff from an order of the Judge of a county court, in an action in that court, discharging the defendant from the custody of his bail, it was objected by the custody of his bail, it was objected by the defendant that the order was not a final one, and that no appeal lay:—Held, that the court had, by Rule 1941, jurisdiction to discharge or vary the order, as explained in Elliott v. McCuaig, 13 P. R. 416. McVeain v. Ridler, 17 P. R. 353.

Interpleader.]-An appeal will lie from the judgment on an interpleader issue. Wilson v. Kerr, 18 U. C. R. 470.

Interpleader-Summary Order.]an application was made by a sheriff for an interpleader order in respect of goods seized by him under an execution against the plaintiff, and claimed by a brother of the plaintiff as purchaser of the goods, the Judge, assuming to act under Rule 1111, decided the question in favour of the claimant, without directing the trial of an issue, and made an order refusing the application, directing the sheriff to withdraw from possession of the goods, ordering the execution creditors to pay the sheriff's costs and possession money and the claimant's costs, and directing that no action should be brought by the claimant against the sheriff in respect of the seizure :-Held, that the execution creditors had the right to appeal against this order. Rondot v. Monetary Times Printing Co., 19 P. R. 23. Joint Appeal. |—Where defendants appealed jointly, and the court thought that all except one were entitled to be relieved from the decree, they reversed it, nowithstanding that as to one appellant the evidence was sufficient to establish the will under which the plaintiff claimed. Black v. Black, 2 E. & A. 419.

Jurisdiction of Dominion Parliament, |-Quaere, can the Dominion Parliament give an appeal in a case in which the Legislature of a Province has expressly de nied it. Danjou v. Marquis, 3 S. C. R. 251.

Law and Equity. —The Court of Error and Appeal sits as a court of law or equity according as the case comes from common law or chancery. Smith v. Norton, 7 L. J. 263.

Lis Pendens—Refusal to Vacate.]—No appeal lies, by virtue of s. 99 of the Judicature Act, R. S. O. 1897 c. 51, or otherwise, from an order of a Master or Judge dismissing a motion made under s. 98 for an order vacating a certificate of lis pendens. Hodge v. Hallamore, 18 P. R. 447.

Malicious Prosecution.] — Action for malicious prosecution, alleging a determination of the proceedings. Plen, that an appeal from such decision is still pending:—Held, good. Grijfth v, Ward, 20 U. C. R. 31.

Misunderstanding at the Trial.]—The appeal in this case was dismissed without any occision on the merits, there being a misunderstanding as to what took place at the trial. Holliday v. Ontario Farmers' Mutual Fire Insurance Co., 33 U. C. R. 558.

Party Not Appealing.] — Although a person affected by a decree does not appeal from it, the court upon the appeal of another party may give such relief as the court may think the parties entitled to. Sampson v. McArthur, 8 Gr. 72.

Presumption of Correctness.] — The general rule is, that the judgment of the court appealed against stands, unless the appellate court can say that it is clearly wrong. Keena v. O'Hara, 16 C. P. 435.

Provincial Arbitration.]—In an award made under the provisions of the Acts 54 & 55 Vict. c. 6, s. 16 (1)., 54 Vict. c. 2, s. 6 (O.), and 54 Vict. c. 4, s. 6 (O.), there can be no appeal to the Supreme Court of Canada, unless the arbitrators in making the award set forth therein a statement that in rendering the award they have proceeded on their view of a disputed question of law. Province of Outerior. Province of Quebec and Dominion of Canada—In re Common school Funds and Lands, 30 S. C. R. 306.

Special Case.]—The plaintiff having commenced an action in the County Court, at the transition of the county Court, at the transition of the county Court, at the transition of the county Court, and evidence should be stated as a special case for the Queen's Bench, on which the court might order a verdict for plaintiff or defendants, or, at the election of the plaintiff, a nonsuit or new trial, the court to draw inferences as a jury. This was argued as a special case in the Queen's Bench, and judgment given for the plaintiff, whereupon the defendants brought error. In the copy of the judgment roll transmitted, immediately after the pleadings and venire, the evidence was set out, and then a statement of the contention on either side and a formal entry of judgment for the plaintiff. The Court of Appeal refused to entertain the case, holding that if it was to be looked upon as an informal appeal from the County Court to the Queen's Bench, it was not a special case within ss. 130 or 157 of the C. L. P. Act, upon which error could be brought; that if it was to be treated as a cause in the Queen's Bench, then the agreement of the parties to the special case, and a Judge's order allowing it, should have appeared on the roll, the facts and not the evidence only should have been stated, and the agreement of the parties should have been absolute, not giving the plaintiff an option to take a nonsuit or new trial instead of being bound by the judgment, Holmey V. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 29 U. C. R. 294.

Special Leave on One Ground — No Right to Ruise Others.]—Where special leave to appeal is granted on the ground that the appellant desires to raise a particular question of great and general importance, he cainot be permitted at the hearing to say that no such question arises, and to argue that the case turns upon a question of fact on which the court below was in error. Accordingly the appellant town corporation was precluded from contending that, as matter of fact, the assessment in question had been confined to the land occupied by the road. Town of 8t. Johns v. Central Vermont R. W. Co., 14 App. Cas., 550.

Vacation — Judge — Arrest.] — A Judge when applied to in vacation, under 4 Will, IY. c. 10, s. 4, for the commitment of a debtor on the limits to close custody, disposes of the case without the power of appeal by declining to interfere. Shaw v. Nickerson— Gilespie v. Nickerson, 7 U. C. R. 541.

II. ABANDONMENT AND WAIVER.

Acquiescence in Judgment. — In an action in which the constitutionality c^{*} 36 Vict. c. 81 (O.) was raised by the defene nt, the Attorney-General for the Province of Quebec intervened, and the judgment of the Superior Court having maintained the plaintiff's action and the Attorney-General's intervention, the defendant appealed to the Court of Queen's Bench (appeal side), but afterwards abandoned his appeal from the judgment on the intervention. On a further appeal to the Supreme Court of Canada from the judgment of the Court of Queen's Bench in the principal action the defendant claimed the right to have the judgment of the Superior Court on the intervention reviewed:—Held, that the appeal to the Court of Queen's Bench from the judgment of the Superior Court on the intervention having been abandoned, the judgment on the intervention of the Attorney-General could not be the subject of an appeal to this court. Ball v. McCaffrey, 20 S. C. R. 319.

Acquiescence in Judgment.] — By a judgment of the Court of Queen's Bench the defendant society was ordered to deliver up a certain number of its shares upon payment of a certain sum. Before the time for appealing expired the attorney ad litem for the defendant delivered the shures to the plaintiff's attorney and stated he would not appeal if the society were paid the amount directed to be paid. An appeal was subsequently taken before the plaintiff's attorney compiled with the terms of the offer. On a motion to quash the appeal on the ground of nequiescence in the judgment:—Held, that the appeal would lie. Societé Canadienne-Française de Construction de Montreal v. Daveluy, 29 S. C. 11, 449.

Acquiescence in Order,] — The Divisional Court varied an order of a Judge ordering a father to take proceedings by petition instead of by labeas corpus for the custody of his children by making the habeas corpus to run concurrently with the petition: —Held, that the father had waived his right to appeal from the order directing the filing of the petition by having complied with such order. Re Smart Injunts, 12 P. R. 635; S. C., ib. 312, 435.

Acting on Order.]—If a party appeals from a judgment in his favour claiming relief inconsistent with that granted by the judgment appealed from, and, pending the appeal, proceeds upon the judgment and obtains the relief granted thereby, he will be deemed to have abandoned his appeal, which will be quashed at the instance of the respondent on a motion for that purpose. International Wrecking Co. v. Lobb, 12 P. R. 201.

Acting on Judgment.]—Right of appeal held to be waived. Videau v. Westover, 29 O. R. 1.

Compliance Under Protest.] — Compliance with an order for security for costs by giving security under protest, and with notice to the opposite party that it was under protest, and proceeding in the action:—Held, not such an acceptance of or acquiescence in the order as to waive the right of appeal. Duffy v. Donocan, 14 P. R. 150.

Cross-appeal—Enforcement of Order.]—
A respondent in an appeal to the Court of Appeal who desires to vary the decision appealed against, is in the same position as if he were an appellant, and whatever would be an answer to his contention if he had brought an independent appeal would also be an answer to the same contention when urged by way of cross-appeal. And where, before the hearing of an appeal, the respondent moved in Chambers for an order allowing him to enforce the order appealed against, without preindice to his cross-appeal. Held, that it was not for a Judge in Chambers, in advance of the appeal, to determine a question which might arise on the appeal itself, viz. whether the enforcement of the order would be an answer to the cross-appeal. Re Charles Stark Co., 15 P. R. 451.

Extension of Time for Compliance.]—By an order of a Judge in Chambers (12 P. R. 275). a motion by the defendant to set aside a judgment for irregularity was refused, but the defendant was let in to defend upon paying into court or securing 8700 within a month. The defendant moved for and obtained an order extending the time for paying the money, and then appealed from part of the order refusing to set aside the judgment.

ment for irregularity:—Held, that the defeudant had waived his right of appeal from the order by obtaining an enlargement of the time for complying with it. Pierce v. Palmer, 12 P. R. 398.

Nonsuit—Waiver.] — Where the verdict had been taken subject to the opinion of the court, and the respondents attended before a Judge to settle the case for appeal:—Held, that they were precluded from objecting that the case was not appealable. Held, however, that in this case the court below must be taken to have decided as upon a motion to enter a nonsuit, and that the right of appeal was clear. Boulton v. Smitn, 18 U. C. R. 458.

Part of Order. —Where two appeals in respect of matters wholly separate and distinct were disposed of by one order:—Held, that a party might appeal from the decision in respect of one of the appeals, while taking advantage of the decision in respect of the other. Clarke v. Creighton, 14 P. R. 100.

Reinstatement—Mistake.]—The defendants, after setting down an appeal for hearing by a few setting down an appeal for hearing by the setting down as struck out of the list. They afterwards was struck out of the list. They afterwards was struck out of the list. They afterwards was struck out of the stored to the list.—Held, that if the motion could be treated as one for leave to appeal notwithstanding the lapse of time, it would be incumbent upon the applicants to shew that primā facie the judgment below was wrong; and there being no error apparent on the face of the judgment, and no specific error having been pointed out, such an application must be refused. But, semble, the motion could not be so treated. The judgment below found that the defendants were trespassers and directed a reference as to damages. When the appeal was abandoned the defendants thought the claim of the plaintiffs would be much smaller than it subscuently appeared to be; and on learning the size of the claim, the defendants wished to renew their appeal:—Held, no ground for interfering. Union Bank of Canada v. Rideau Lumber Co., 19 P. R. 108.

Undertaking Not to Appeal.]—A judgment of the High Court of Justice contained an undertaking by the plaintiff not to appeal therefrom; notwithstanding which the plaintiff filed and served notice of appeal to the Court of Appeal, and also filed the usual bond for security for costs:—Held, that the action was not removed out of the High Court of Justice into the Court of Appeal; the notice and bond were irregular and unwarrantable proceedings, and the High Court, being still seized of the case, could interfere, by virtue of its inherent jurisdiction, to set them aside. Donovan v. Haldane, 14 P. R. 106.

III. APPEAL AGAINST FINDINGS OF FACT.

Burden of Proof. |—In an action against a railway company for damages for loss of property by fire alleged to have been occasioned by sparks from an engine or hot-box of a passing train, in which the court appealed from held that there was no sufficient proof that the fire occurred through the fault or negligence of the company, and it was not shewn that such finding was clearly wrong or erroneous, the Supreme Court would not interfere with the finding. Sénésac v. Central Vermont R. W. Co., 26 S. C. R. 641.

Contempt.] — While a power resides in any court or Judge to commit for contempt, it is the power or privilege of such court or Judge to determine on the facts, and it does not belong to any higher tribunal to examine into the truth of the case. In re Clarke and Hecrmans, 7 U. C. R. 223.

Controverted Elections.] — The judgment of the court below in an election case will not be reversed unless clearly wrong. Berthier Election (Dom.)—tienercux v. Cuthbert, 9 S. C. R. 102; Montealm Election (Dom.)—Magnan v. Dugas, ib, 93; Prescott Election (Ont.)—Cunningham v. Hagar, 1 E. C. 88.

Credit of Witness.]—Appellate courts will not, except under special circumstances, interfere with the finding as to questions of fact depending on the veracity and credit of witnesses. Halton Election—Harris v, Barber, 11 L, J, 273.

Damages.]—The Supreme Court will not interfere with the amount of damages assessed by a judgment appealed from if there is evidence to support it. Montreal Gas Co. v. St. Laurent, City of St. Henri v. St. Laurent, 26 S. C. R. 176.

Evidence by Commission. —Where the witnesses have not been heard in the presence of the Judge but their depositions were taken before a commissioner, a court of appeal may deal with the evidence more fully than if the trial Judge had heard it or there had been a finding of fact by a jury, and may reverse the finding of the trial court if such evidence warrants it. Mulsard v. Hart, 27 S. C. R.

Expropriation Proceedings — Interfering with Amount Awarded.]—See Arbitration and Award.

Improper Evidence.]—If in a case tried without a jury, evidence has been improperly admitted, a court of appeal may reject it and maintain the verdict if the remaining evidence warrants it. Merritt v. Hepenstal, 25 S. C. R. 150.

Inferences from Evidence.]—It is a point fairly open to inquiry in a court of appeal whether or not, as in this case, the inferences drawn from the evidence by the Judge who tried the case without a jury, were the reasonable and proper inferences to be drawn from the facts. Gallagher v. Taylor, 5 S. C. R. 308.

Inferences from Evidence. —It is the duty of an appellate court to review the conclusion arrived at by courts whose judgments are appealed from upon a question of fact when such judgments do not turn upon the credibility of any of the witnesses, but upon the proper inference to be drawn from all the evidence in the case. Russell v. Lefrancois, S. S. C. R. 355.

Irrelevant Evidence.]—Held, that the Master was the final judge of the credibility of witnesses examined before him, and that his report should not be sent back because some irrelevant evidence may have been given of a character not likely to have affected his judgment, especially as no appeal was taken from his ruling on the evidence. Booth v. Ratté, 21 S. C. R. 637.

Jury and Non-Jury Cases.]—An appeal court exercises different functions in dealing with a case tried by a Judge without a jury from those exercised in jury cases. In the former case the court has the same jurisdiction over the facts as the trial Judge, and can deal with them as it chooses. In the latter the court cannot be substituted for the jury to whom the parties have agreed to assign the facts for decision. Phanic Insurance Co. v. McCibec, 18 S. C. R. 61.

Jury.]—Held, that though the findings of the jury were not satisfactory upon the evidence, a second court of appeal would not interfere with them. Grand Trunk R. W. Co. v. Weegar, 23 S. C. R. 422.

Local Judge in Admiralty.]—On appeal from a judgment of a local Judge in Admiralty under s. 14 of the Admiralty Act, 1891, (54 & 55 Vit. e, 29), the court will not interfere with a finding of fact by the local Judge unless it is satisfied beyond a reasonable doubt that the evidence does not warrant such finding. Landry v. Ray, 4 Ex. C. R. 289.

Mixed Law and Fact.]—Remarks upon reversing the findings of a Judge or jury upon a question of fact or of mixed law and fact. Scribner v. Kinloch, 12 A. R. 367.

Maritime Law—Collision.]—In this case there was a conflict of testimony on two questions of fact material to the decision of the case, both of which were found by the local Judge in Admirally in favour of the defendants. The burden of proof in each case being upon the plaintiff, and there being evidence to support the findings, the court on appeal declined to interfere with the same, Inchmarce 8.8. Co. v. The "Astrid," 6 Ex. C. R. 218.

Penal Statutes, — In penal statutes questions of doubt are to be construed favourably to the accused, and where the court of first instance in a quasi-criminal trial has acquitted the respondent, the appellate court will not reverse the finding. North Ontario Election (Ont.)—McCaskill v. Paxton, H. E. C. 304.

Presumption of Correctness.]—When a judgment appealed from is wholly founded upon questions of fact, the Supreme Court of Canada will not reverse it unless convinced beyond all reasonable doubt that such judgment is clearly erroneous. Arpin v. The Queen, 14 S. C. R. 730.

Recorder's Court—Grounds of Judgment.]—Defendant was convicted at the recorder's court, on contradictory evidence, for obstructing a highway, the result of the verdict being to shew that he and several others whose houses and greenhouses had been standing for sixty years were encroaching upon the street. A new trial having been refused, on appeal only the evidence was returned to the Court of Queen's Bench, with a copy of the rule nisi. The court under these circumstances, considering the importance of the case, and that the grounds of the judgment below were not given to them, directed a new trial, contrary to the usual rule, which was affirmed, that such appeals will not be entertained upon questions of evidence. Regina v. McLean, 22 U. C. R. 443.

Second Appellate Court.]—The rule generally followed by the Court of Appeal is not to review the finding of the Judge of first instance, where his decision depends upon a balance of testimony; still, if the court in bane upon an application to it has reversed that finding, this court must be satisfied upon appeal, that the court in bane was wrong before it will interfere with that judgment. Hale v. Kennedy, 8 A. R. 157.

Second Appellate Court,]—Where a judgment upon questions of fact rendered in a court of first instance has been reversed upon a first appeal, a second court of appeal should not interfere to restore the original judgment, unless it clearly appears that the reversal was erroneous. Beners v. Montreal Steam Laundry Co., 27 S. C. R. 534 ortered

Trial Judge,]—A court of appeal should not reverse the finding upon matters of fact of the Judge who tried the cause and had the opportunity of observing the demeanour of the witnesses, unless the evidence be of such a character as to convey to the mind of the Judges sitting on the appellate tribunal the irresistible conviction that the findings are erroneous. Ryan v, Ryan, 5 S. C. R. 405.

Trial Judge.]—Where there is a direct conflict of testimony, the finding of the Judge at the trial must be regarded as decisive, and should not be reversed in appeal by a court which has not had the advantage of seeing the witnesses and observing their demeanour while under examination. Grasett v. Carter. 10 S. C. R. 105; Cook v. Patterson, 10 A. R. 645; Halton Election (Ont.)—Bussell v. Barber, H. E. C. 283.

Trial Judge, 1—The Judge who tried the case, in which the evidence was conflicting and irreconcilable, rested his conclusion in favour of the defendant on the documentary evidence and the probabilities arising in the case. The appellate court, while not differing from the Judge as to the credibility of the parties or their witnesses, having come to a different conclusion on the whole evidence, allowed the appeal and reversed the decision of the court below. Cameron v. Bickford. 11 A. R. 52. Reversed by the Privy Council. Not reported.

Trial Judge, |—T., a solicitor, brought an action against the officers of the Liberal-Conservative Association of the east riding of Northumbeland for services, all the conservative Association of the east riding of Northumbeland for services, all the consequence of the relative properties and consequence of the action the plaintiff swore that he was duly appointed solicitor to carry on the election petition by resolution passed at a meeting of the association, and that in consequence of such resolution he acted as such solicitor in the conduct of the petition. The defence to the action was that no such appointment was made, or if it was, that the plaintiff agreed to render his services gratuitously, and the evidence given for the defendants was that the plaintiff offered his services free of charge, and that it was decided to protest the election in consequence of such offer. The trial Judge held that no retainer of the plaintiff was proved, and dismissed the action. His decision was reversed by the Queen's Bench Division, and their decision in its turn was reversed by the Court of Appeal and the judgment of the trial Judge restored:—Held, that the question being purely one of fact which the trial Judge was the person most competent to determine from seeing and hearing the witnesses, and it not being clear beyond all reasonable doubt that his decision was erroneous, but, on the contrary the weight of evidence being in its favour, his judgment should not be interfered with on appeal. Titus v. Colvide, 18 S. C. R. 709.

Two Courts.]—The finding of two courts on a question of fact will not be interfered with by the Supreme Court. Schwersenski v. Vineberg, 19 S. C. R. 243.

Two Courts—Nonsuit.]—Held, that though the case might properly have been left to the jury, as the judgment of nonsuit was affirmed by two courts, it should not be interfered with. Headford v. McClary Manufacturing Co., 24 S. C. R. 291.

Two Courts.]—See also Secton v. King, 18 S. C. R. 712.

Two Courts—Gross Injustice.]—Although there may be concurrent findings on questions of fact in both courts below, the Supreme Court of Canada will, upon appeal, interfere with their decision where it clearly appears that a gross injustice has been occasioned to the appellant, and there is evidence sufficient to justify findings to the contrary. City of Montreal v. Cadiewa, 29 S. C. R. 616.

Two Courts.]—Where there does not appear to have been manifest error in the findings of the courts below they will not be disturbed on appeal. Paradis v. Municipality of Limoilon, 30 S. C. R. 405.

Two Courts.]—If a sufficiently clear case is made out, the court will allow an appeal on mere questions of fact against the concurrent findings of two courts. Arpin v. The Queen, 14 S. C. R. 736, Schwersenski v. Vineberg, 19 S. C. R. 243, and City of Montreal v. Lemoine, 23 S. C. R. 390, distinguished. North British and Mercantile Insurance Co. v. Tourville, 25 S. C. R. 177.

Witness discredited by Trial Judge.]
—See Grant v. British Canadian Lumber Co.,
18 S. C. R. 708.

IV. APPEAL ON QUESTION OF COSTS.

By-law in Question in Action Repealed, —After the rendering of judgment refusing to quash a by-law, the by-law in question was repealed:—Held, that the only matter in dispute between the parties being a mere question of costs, the Supreme Court would not entertain the appeal. Moir v. Village of Huntingdon, 19 S. C. R. 363.

Defendant Ordered to Pay all Costs.]

Where a defendant is ordered to pay the costs of the action, but no further relief is given by the judgment, an appeal from the judgment is not an appeal for costs within the meaning of s. 65, O. J. Act. A judgment is not an appeal for costs within the meaning of s. 65, O. J. Act.

ment ordering the defendant to pay the whole costs of the action cannot be supported unless the plaintiff is entitled to bring the action, Dick v. Yates, 18 Ch. D. 76, followed. Judgment below, 29 O. R. 547, allirmed. Fleming v. City of Toronto, 19 A. R. 318.

Erroneous Principle. —An appeal lies to a Divisional Court from the order of a trial Judge who has awarded costs on a wrong principle. McCausland v. Quebec Fire Ins. Co., 25 O. R. 330.

Erroneous Principle.]—The court will not interfere with the discretion exercised as to costs, unless the Judge whose order is appenled from has proceeded upon some erroneous principle of law or upon some mis-apprehension of the facts of the case. Young v. Thomas, [1892] 2 Ch. 134, followed. Campbell v. Wheter, 17 P. R. 289.

Erroneous Principle.]—Though an appear with a first part of costs only, yet where there has been a mistake upon some matter of law, or of principle, which the party appealing has an actual interest in having reviewed, and which governs or affects the costs, the party prejudiced is entitled to have the benefit of correction by appeal. Archbald v. deLisle, Baker v. deLisle, Mowat v. deLisle, 25 S. C. R. I.

Solicitor's Lien — Settlement.] — An appeal does not lie to the Court of Appeal, unless by special leave, from an order of a Divisional Court made upon appeal from an order in Chambers enforcing a solicitor's lien for costs. Walker v. Gurney-Tilden Co., 18 P. R. 471.

V. Appeal on Question of Judicial Discretion.

Absolute Discretion.] — Appeal dismissed at the hearing on the ground that an appeal will not lie from a decision resting only upon the discretion of the court below, and not upon matters of law. Cinq Mars v. Moodic, 15 U. C. R. 601, n.

Absolute Discretion.]—There is no appeal from a decision on a question which is by the practice purely within the discretion of the Judge. Chard v. Meyers, 3 Ch. Ch. 120.

Amendment—Parties.]—An action was brought ngainst two defendants, one of whom suffered judgment by default; the plaintiff proceeded against the other, claiming by virtue of an assignment from the first of his cause of action against the second, which was in the nature of a claim for indemnity against liability for the claim on which the judgment by default had been suffered. At the trial the action was dismissed against the second on the ground that the assignment was inoperative. Upon an appeal by the plaintiff to, a Divisional Court, an order was made directing that, notwithstanding the assignment, the first defendant should be allowed to amend the pleadinrs by claiming over against the second defendant, who was to be allowed also to amend, and further evidence was to be taken, if necessary:—Held, not a mere discretionary order, but one from which an appeal lay. Hately v. Merchants' Despatch Transportation Co., 12 A. R. 640, followed. Boult-bee v. Cochran, 17 P. R. 9. See Williams v. Leonard, 26 S. C. R. 406.

Costs.)—It is not intended by Rule 1170 (a), that the discretion of the appellate tribunal should be substituted for that of the judicial officer whose decision is appealed from. Campbell v. Wheler, 17 P. R. 289.

Damages.]—In an action of damages, if the amount awarded in the court of first instance is not such as to shock the sense of justice and to make it apparent that there was error or partiality on the part of the Judge (the exercise of a discretion on his part being in the nature of the case required), an appellate court will not interfere with the discretion such Judge has exercised in determining the amount of damages. Levi v. Reed, 6 S. C. R. 482.

Damages.]—A court of appeal should not interfere with damages awarded by a judgment under consideration in appeal unless they appear to have been calculated upon a wrong principle or arrived at without regard to considerations which ought to govern a tribunal in awarding damages. It is not sufficient if the Judges in appeal sitting as Judges in the first instance might have given, as some of the Judges in the court below in this case were disposed to give, larger damages. Mayor of City of Montreal v. Hall, 12 S. C. R. 74.

Damages — Increasing and Reducing.] — See Arbitration and Award—Damages, VIII.

Examination of Witnesses. — Where witnesses residing out of Ontario come within the jurisdiction and are about to return to their homes, an order may be made for their examination here before their departure.

Such an order is a discretionary one, and, where the witnesses have been examined under it, will not be reversed on appeal unless a very clamant case of error appears. Delap v. Charlebois, 15 P. R., 142.

Extension of Time for Appeal.]—See Abell v. Morrison, 14 P. R. 210.

Injunction.]—As to interfering with discretion of Judge on an application for an interlocutory injunction. See Hathaway v. Doig, 6 A. R. 264.

Municipal Election.] — Semble, that whether the court or a Judge before whom the relator brings his case, will go further than declare the election of the defendant void, and will proceed as well to seat the relator, is a matter of discretion not to be interfered with on appeal. Regiona ex rel. Clark v. McMullen, 9 U. C. R. 467.

New Trial. |-- Under C. S. U. C. c. 13, s. 26, there is no appeal to the Court of Error and Appeal, where a new trial is granted in the court below on a matter of discretion only; and an appeal in such case was, under s. 10, quashed with costs. Hall v. Hamilton, 24 C. P. 302.

New Trial.]—The plaintiff, being in possession of land as tenant of H., was evicted by the defendant, who claimed under an overdue mortgage. A nonsuit was entered at the trial, on the ground that the defendant was at law entitled to possession, evidence of equitable right to possession in the plaintiff having been refused. The Court of Queen's Bench in its discretion granted a new trial:—Held, that the Court of Appeal could not interfere. Robinson v. Hell, 6A R. 534.

New Trial. —The court will not hear an appeal where the court below, in the exercise of its discretion, has ordered a new trial on the ground that the verdied is against the weight of evidence. Eureka Woollen Mills Co. v. Moss, 11 S. C. R. 91.

New Trial.]—See Scott v. Bank of New Brunswick, 21 S. C. R. 30; and Trumble v. Hortin, 22 A. R. 51.

Refusal of Extension of Time to Appeal.]—See Township of Colchester South v. Valud, 24 S. C. R. 622.

Renewal of Writ.]—A writ issued from the High Court of Justice for Outario in June, 1887, was renewed by order of a Master in Chambers three times, the last order being made in May, 1890. In May, 1891, it was served on defendants, who thereupon applied to the Master to lave the service and last renewal set aside, which application was granted and the service and service and service and the service and service and service and the service and service and service and service and the service and service and service and the service in Chambers and the service in the Master, holding that the Master had jurisdiction to review his own order; that plaintiffs had not shewn good reasons, under Rule 238 (a), for extending the time for service; and the ruling of the Master having been approved by a Judge in Chambers and a Divisional Court. the Court of Appeal could not say that all the tribunals below were wrong in so holding:—Held, that for the reasons given in the Court of Appeal the alpeal to this court must fail and be dismissed with costs. Howland v. Dominion Bank, 22 S. C. R. 130.

Renewal of Writ. |—The renewal of a writ of summons after its expiration is matter of judicial discretion, and when a County of Court Judge had so renewed such a county of the Starma of the defeat the operation of the Starma o

Stamps.]—It appeared that the plaintiffs acquired knowledge of the particular defect in the obliteration of the stamps on the note sued on during the argument in the court below, but that no application to re-stamp the note had been made until after the judgment of the court had been pronounced, when it was refused:—Semble, that the judgment of the court below on such a question is not appealable. Banque Nationale v. Sparks, 2 A. R. 112.

Trustee's Accounts.] — The Supreme Court of Canada, on appeal from a decision affirming the report of a referee in a suit to remove executors and trustees, which report disallowed items in accounts previously passed by the Probate Court, will not reconsider the items so dealt with, two courts having previously exercised a judicial discretion as to the amounts and no question of principle being involved. Grant v. Maclaren, 23 S. C. R. 310.

Trustee's Compensation.]—What is proper compensation to be allowed to a trustee for his management of a trust estate is a matter of opinion, and even if, in granting the allowance, the court below may have erred on the side of liberality, that alone is not sufficient ground for reversing the judgment. Where the Master had allowed $125, which the court, on appeal, increased to $250, the Court of Appeal refused to interfere. MeDonaldt. Pavetson, 6 A. R. 320.

When Interfered With.] — Semble, where an appeal is made from the exercise of discretion by a Judge, the court should not review such discretion. Neill v. Travellers' Ins. Co., 9 A. R. 54; Regina v. Richardson, 8 O. R. 651; South Victoria Election (Ont.) —Roaden v. Methityre, 1 E. C. 182; Kennedy v. Braithweile, ib. 195.

When Interfered With.]—A court of appeal ought not to differ from a court below on matters of discretion, unless it is made absolutely clear that such discretion has been wrongly exercised. Jones v. Tuck, 11 S. C. R. 197.

VI. Appeal on Question of Practice or Procedure.

Practice.]—A judgment of the Court of Queen's Bench for Lower Canada (appeal side) held that a venditioni exponas issued by the Superior Court of Montreal, to which court the record in a contestation of an opposition had been removed from the Superior Court of the district of Iberville, under Article 188, C. C. P., was regular:—Held, that on a question of practice such as this the court would not interfere. Mayor of Montreal v. Brown, 2 App. Cas. 184, followed. Arpin v. Mcrchants Bank of Canada, 24 S. C. R. 142.

Practice.]—The Supreme Court will not interfere on a question of practice and procedure. Macdonald v. Ferdais, 22 S. C. R. 260.

Procedure.] — Decisions of provincial courts resting upon mere questions of procedure will not be interfered with on appeal to the Supreme Court of Canada except under special circumstances. Ferrier v. Trépannier, 24 S. C. R. 86.

Procedure—Amendment.]—The Supreme Court will not interfere on appeal with an order made by a provincial court granting leave to amend the pleadings, such orders being a matter of procedure within the discretion of the court below. Williams v. Leonard, 2 6 S. C. R. 406.

Substantial Rights. | - The Supreme Court of Canada will take into consideration questions of practice when they involve substantial rights, or the decision appealed from may cause grave injustice. Part of lands seized by the sheriff had been withdrawn before sale, but on proceedings for folle enchère it was ordered that the property described in the process verbal of seizure should be resold, no reference being made to the part withdrawn. The Court of Queen's Bench reversed the order on the ground that it directed a resale of property which had not been sold, results of property which had not been sold, and further, because an apparently regular sheriff's deed of the lands actually sold had been duly registered, and had not been annulled by the order for resale, or prior to the proceedings for folle enchère :- Held, that the Court of Queen's Bench should not have set aside the order, but should have reformed it by rectifying the error. Lambe v. Armstrong, 27 S. C. R. 309.

Taxation of Costs.]—See O'Donohoe v. Beatty, 19 S. C. R. 356; and McGugan v. McGugan, 21 S. C. R. 267.

VII. ERROR.

Proceedings in error in civil cases were abolished by the Ontario Judicature Act, 1881, 44 Vict. c. 5 (O.), Rule 472. The following are cases under the former practice: McNalley v. Stephens, Tay. 263: Pope v. Reatly, 29 U. C. R. 478, 495; Dickson v. Ward, 2 E. & A. 275; Thomas v. Hilmer, 4 U. C. R. 527; Grand Trunk R. W. Co, v. Amey, 20 C. P. 6; Barnes v. Cox, 16 C. P. 236.

VIII. NEW GROUNDS OR FURTHER EVIDENCE.

Action for Bodily Injuries-Excessive Damages. |—In an action for damages for bodily injuries received by the plaintiff, owing to the alleged negligence of the defendants, the plaintiff recovered a verdict for $3,300, which a Divisional Court reduced to $2,000, if the plaintiff would consent, and in the alternative directed a new trial. The plaintiff accepted the reduction, but the defendants declined to do so, insisting that the damages, even as reduced, were excessive, and appealed to the Court of Appeal. Their appeal being set down, they moved for leave to give further evidence to shew that the damages were excessive, and, in order to shew that the plaintiff had recovered his health, and that the injury he sustained had not been so serious or of so permanent a character as was anticipated at the trial, they asked that he might be ordered to submit to a bodily examination by a surgeon, under Rule 462:—Semble, that the examination under Rule 462 is for discovery only, and is not evidence of the character contemplated by Rule 498 (1):—Held, that as the only object in getting in the proposed evidence was to reduce the damages still further, or to obtain a new trial, it was not rea-sonable that the defendants, having refused the relief the court below offered, should be allowed to introduce this evidence on the apallowed to introduce this evidence on the appeal, and they did not make out a sufficiently clear case for its admission. Frascr v. London Street R. W. Co., 18 P. R. 370.

Controverted Election.]-No new evidence will be received by the court on the examination of a decision of a Judge in Chambers as to a contested election. Regina ex rel. Clark v. McMullen, 9 U. C. R. 467.

Controverted Election.]—The petitioner was not allowed to urze before the court a charge of corrupt practices against the respondent personally, which had not been specified in the particulars, or adjudicated upon at the trial of the petition. South Onterio Election—Farucell v. Brown, H. E. C. 420: sub nom. Fareacell v. Brown, 12 C. L. J. 216.

Costs.]—The appeal being allowed in this case on a ground not taken in the court below or assigned as a reason of appeal, the court refused the appellant his costs in appeal. Page v. Austin, 7 A. R. 1; Ellis v. Midland R. W. Co., 7 A. R. 464; Garrett v. Roberts, 10 A. R. 650.

Costs. |—The plaintiffs had succeeded in respect of the title made under the judgment in partition, and not for the estate of the grantor in the memorial; and the effect of that judgment seemed not to have been pressed in the court helow, and was not urged before this court until the second argument. Under the circumstances the appeal was dismissed without costs. VanVelsor v. Hughson, 9 A. R. 390.

County Court Appeal.] — Under Rule 48 the court may entertain an application to admit new evidence in a proper case on a County Court appeal, notwithstanding R. S. O. 1837 c. 55, s. 51, s.-s, 3, under which such an application must be made before the county court, and this although the time for applying for a new trial had expired. Butler v.McMicken, 32 O. R. 422.

Delay. —A cause had been carried down to trial in 1879, when it was postponed at the instance of defendants, and a trial took place in 1888, when a verdict was rendered in favour of the plaintiffs, which the Court of Queen's Bench refused to set aside. The defendants thereupon appealed to this court, and when the appeal came on to be heard (in 1882) an application was made by the defendants to be allowed to adduce evidence alleged to have been recently discovered, tending to relieve the defendants from liability, which evidence in appeared consisted mainly of entries in the books of the defendants, The court, being of opinion that proper diligence had not been used by the defendants, as in such case they must have discovered the evidence at a much earlier date, refused the application with costs. Murray v. Canada Central R. W. Co., 7 A. R. 646.

Document.] — Held, that a document which has not been proved nor produced at the trial cannot be relied on or made part of the case in appeal. Lionais v. Molsons Bank, 10 S. C. R. 427: followed in Exchange Bank of Canada v. Gliman, 17 S. C. R. 108.

Election in Court Below.]—At the trial the plaintiff put in two chattel mortgages, and the first being objected to for want of refiling, he relied upon the second only, both at the trial and on the argument in term. That mortgage was held to be invalid; and the Court of Appeal concurring in the decision, and thinking the plaintiff's case not one to be favoured, refused to allow him to rely upon the first mortgage. Boulton v. Smith, 18 U. C. R. 458.

Election in Court Below.]—On the appeal the defendants urged, amongst other grounds, one not taken in the rule nisi or raised by the pleadings, namely, that the evidence disclosed good cause for dismissal. When offered the opportunity at the trial to amend and raise such defence, counsel for the defendants declined to do so:—Held, that the defence could not be raised on appeal. Lash v. Meriden Britannia Co., 8 A. R. 680.

Election in Court Below.]—The case having been disposed of in the court below on an immaterial issue, and the appellants having chosen to rest their case upon a point which the Judge found against them, the appeal was dismissed. McKenzie v. Dancey, 12 A. R. 317.

Expense.]—On appeal from a decree in Chancery, leave to adduce further evidence was refused where the expense would be wholly disproportionate to the value of the subject matter in litigation. Craig v. Craig, 2 A. R. 583.

Formal Evidence.]—The court on the argument allowed the plaintiff, on terms, to give in evidence the proclamation bringing into force the Ontario Factories Act, Dean v, Ontario Cotton Mills Co., 14 O. R. 119.

Formal Evidence.]—On the argument of an appeal to a divisional court from the decision of the trial Judge where a by-law of the city of Toronto had been proved at the trial, but evidence was not given of the registration of the same, evidence tendered on the argument of the appeal shewing the fact and date of the registration of the by-law was admitted. Burfoot v. DuMoulin, 21 O. R. 583.

Formal Evidence.]—Evidence by affidavit of the loss of a policy received by a divisional court under Con. Rule 585. Dolen v. Metropolitan Life Insurance Co., 26 O. R. 67.

General Rule.]—Remarks on the reception of further evidence by appellate courts.

Merchants' Bank v. Lucas, 12 P. R. 526.

Irregularity in Procedure.]—Held, that the plaintiff could not object to the appeal as irregular, on the ground that, having been begun by both defendants, it was continued by only one. Arscott v. Lilley, 14 A. R. 283, Judges' Notes—Additions after notice of Appeal.]—Where a court had pronounced judgment in a cause before it, and after proceedings in appeal had been instituted certain of the Judges filed documents with the prothonotary purporting to be additions to their respective opinions in the case, such documents improperly form part of the case on appeal and should not be considered by the appellate court. Mayhew v. Stone, 26 S. C. R. SS.

New Case.]—On an appeal in a suit seeking to have the defendant declared a trustee of lands, it appeared that the evidence, if implicitly relied on, tended to make defendant a mortgagee rather than a trustee. A motion was then made to amend the bill in order to make that case; the Court of Appeal, however, refused the application as not being an exercise of sound discretion to permit the amendment at that stage of the suit. Mc-Manus v. McManus, 24 Gr. 118.

New Evidence.] — New evidence was allowed to be used upon appeal under Con. Rule 585, and the decision of a Judge in Chambers (13 P. R. 388), was reversed thereupon. The discovery of the new evidence after a sitting of the Divisional Court had passed was received as an excuse for delay. Leach v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co. (2), 13 P. R. 467.

New Trial—Discretion.]—Allowing a new trial on the ground of the discovery of new evidence is a matter of legal discretion, and where the subject matter of the action was of a trilling nature and a Divisional Court ordered a new trial on affidavits shewing merely the discovery of further evidence corroborative of the evidence at the trial, the order was set aside. Murray v. Canada Central R. W. Co., 7 A. R. 646, followed. Trumble v. Horton, 22 A. R. 51. See also Howarth v. Mctingan, 23 O. R. 396.

Notice Not Given.]—Quære, whether, on the argument, exceptions can be taken of which no notice has been given. Smith v. Muirhead, 13 U. C. R. 9.

Questions Not Discussed.]—The Legislature did not by 33 Vict. c. 7, s. 6 (O.), intend the court to decide upon the evidence questions not discussed before or decided by the Judge at the trial. Laurie v. Rathbun, 38 U. C. R. 255.

Questions Not Raised.]—As to giving effect in appeal to questions not raised in the court below. See Gray v. Richford, 1 A. R. 112. See also S. C., 2 S. C. R. 431.

Rejection of Evidence.]—In an action on a policy of insurance against fire on a stock of goods the verdict for the plaintiff was moved against on the grounds of its being against the weight of evidence and against the weight of evidence and respectively. The state of the state of the state of the state of the against the weight of evidence and the evidence tendered related to the fact that a quantity of unburnt matches and shavings had been found near the part of the premises in which the fire occurred where the bulk of the goods were alleged to have been burnt. The evidence was rejected by the trial Judge for the reason that there was no defence pleaded that the fire was incendiary, and on appeal to the full court below it was for the first time urged that it was admissible as shewing the nature and extent of the fire in the vicinity. The verdict for the plaintiffs was sustained by the full court:—Held, that the decision of the court below should be affirmed. Royal Insurance Co. v. Duffus, 18 S. C. R. 711.

Reservation of Rights.]—It was contended by the plaintiffs before the Divisional Court that the defendants were members of a de facto corporation in which they held shares that were not fully paid up, and that recovery could be had against them to the extent of the amounts remaining unpaid upon their shares, but no such case was made upon the pleadings or at the trial. The court treated this contention as not having been raised, and reserved leave to the plaintiffs to raise it in fresh actions, as they might be advised. Flatt v, Waddell—Townsend v, Waddell, 18 O. R. 539; LUnion 8t, Joseph de Montreal v, Lapierre, 4 S. C. R. 164.

Technical Grounds—Surprise. |—An appellate court will not give effect to mere technical grounds of appeal, against the merits and where there has been no surprise or disadvantage to the appellant. Gorman v. Dizon, 26 S. C. R. 87.

Technical Objection After Trial.]—An objection to the sufficiency of the traverse to a declaration will not be entertained when taken for the first time on appeal, the issue having been tried on the assumption that the traverse was sufficient. Mylius v. Jackson, 23 S. C. R. 485.

Uncontradicted Evidence.]—On the argument of an appeal evidence as to a prior action was admitted, and on this evidence and objection then taken the judgment below was reversed, without costs. Wood v. Recsor, 22 A. R. 57.

IX. PRACTICE AND PROCEDURE.

1. Costs of Appeal.

Administration — Indemnity.] — Held, that the bank, the respondents to this appeal, being the parties having the carriage of the proceedings in the Master's office and supporting the judgment of the Master for the zeneral benefit of the creditors, of whom they were one, should be reimbursed the costs of the appellant out of the estate, but not so as to prejudice the rights of the appellant, Re Hague—Traders' Bank v. Murray, 14 O. R. 630.

Appeal Too Late.]—When the court refused to hear an appeal, and ordered it to be struck out, because it had not been set down for argument within the time allowed by 34 Viet. c. 11, s. 4 (O.).—Held, that the respondent, who had appeared to answer the appeal, was entitled to his costs, for the appellant should have applied earlier for an extension of the time; and that the court had jurisdiction to grant costs, though the appeal had not been heard. Semble, that the respondent should have stated the lapse of time as one of his reasons against the appeal. Royal Canadian Bank v. Stevenson, 22 C. P. 562.

Authority Binding Court Below.]—
The appeal in this case was allowed without costs, as the bill had been filed on the authority of Boale v. Dickson, 13 C. P. 337, which was properly followed by the court below, but was overruled by this court. McLaren v. Calducell, 6 A. R. 459.

Authorities Not Cited Below.]—The appeal from a county court being allowed upon authorities not brought to the attention of the court below, no costs were given. Kelly v. Ottawa Street R. W. Co., 3 A. R. 616.

Both Parties in Fault.]—As the defendant had offered to give the plaintiff a decree for a charge on the land, which was all she was held entitled to, she was ordered to pay the costs up to and inclusive of the decree; but the appellant, not having taken the objection which was given effect to in his reasons of appeal, was refused the costs of the appeal. Armstrong v. McAlpine, 4 A. R. 250.

Conflicting Decisions.] — Where the Courts of Queen's Bench and C amon Pleus had given opposing judgments on the same question, this court, on affirming one of these judgments, dismissed the appeal without costs. Section v. Paxton, 2 E. & A. 219.

Consent Appeal.]—Three persons entered into several contracts in the name of one of the three, for the construction of portions of a railway, without any written agreement as to the share of each in the contracts, and a bill was fited by one to have an account taken, chaiming a larger share in the profits than the Master allowed him by his report, from which all parties appealed; and by arrangement the court below affirmed the finding of the Master with a view to appeal. The court, on affirming the order below, refused the costs of the appeal to either party. Nicholas v, McDonald, 8 Gr. 106.

Costs of Court Below.]—On appeal to the Court of Appeal the judgments of the Court of Chancery in favour of the plaintiffs respectively were affirmed with costs of appeal; and the defendants appealed to the Supreme Court. In the first case that court gave leave to the defendants (appellants) to amend their answer, saying nothing as to costs, and, upon such amendment being made, declared that the award upon which the bill had been filed should be null and void, but said nothing about costs. In the second case the Supreme Court ordered a new trial to be had between the parties, without costs to either party. The plaintiffs, having obtained orders of the Court of Chancery making the certificates of the Court of Appeal of the costs awarded in appeal:—Held, that the plaintiffs were not entitled to the costs of the appeal to the Court of Appeal; and the executions were set aside. Norreally Canada Southern R. W. Co., Canningham v. Canada Southern R. W. Co., 9 P. R. 339.

Discretion.]—Where the judgment was varied on a matter of discretion, no costs of appeal were given. Campbell v. Prince, 5 A. R. 330.

Divided Success.]—An appeal from a County Court having partially succeeded and partially failed, no costs were given. Shepley v. Hurd, 3 A. R. 549.

Divided Success.]—The appeal of one of the defendants, a bank, was allowed and the bill against them dismissed, but, as they set up a claim in their original answer which was urged on appeal and could not be maintained, they were held not entitled to their costs of defence or of the appeal Bailey v. Jellett, 9 A. R. 187.

Divided Success.]—Held, that inasmuch as the plaintiff succeeded in the only branch of the case argued before the Divisional Court she should get her costs of that appeal, but as to the rest of the suit, to save the expense and trouble of apportionment, no costs should be given or received. Gough v. Bench, 6 O. R. 699.

Division of Opinion. —Appeal dismissed without costs where the members of the court were all of the opinion for different reasons, that the order below was wrong, but did not agree as to the extent it should be modified or reversed. Schroeder v. Rooney, 11 A. R. 1975.

Equal Division. —The Court of Appeal being equally divided, the appeal was dismissed with costs. McKenzie v. Kittridge, 27 C. P. 66.

Equal Division.]—The court being equally divided, the appeal was dismissed, without costs, one member of the court, who was against the plaintiff on the merits, being of opinion there should have been a new triat. Moore v. Connecticut Mutual Fire Ins. Co., 3 A. R. 230.

Equal Division.]—An appen1 from the court of common pleas which ordered a non-suit after verdict for the plaintiff (31 C. P. 394), the court being equally divided, was dismissed with costs. Neitl v. Travetlers Ins. Co., 7 A. R. 570.

Equal Division.]—The plaintiff appealed from the decision of the common pleas division (12 P. R. 535) as to costs, and on the 5th March. 1889, judgment was given dismissing the appeal without costs, the Judges of the court of appeal being divided in opinion. Licernois v. Bailey, 13 P. R. 62.

Form of Order for Costs.]—Costs of appeal are not carried by the words "costs of suit as between solicitor and client," but require to be specially mentioned in the order for taxation. Re Monteith—Merchants Bank v. Monteith, 11 P. R. 361.

General Rule.]—The court on allowing an appeal gave the costs of it to the appellant. Herbert v. Park, 25 C. P. 57.

No Direction as to Costs.]—Costs where judgment of court below is reversed, but no directions given as to the costs of appal. Menzies v. Ridley, 2 Gr. 544.

Objection Not Taken Below.]—Where an appellant omitted to take an objection in the court below, the court of appeal, on allowing an appeal on that ground, refused him his costs of appeal. Garrett v. Roberts, 10 A. R. 650.

Payment into Court—Costs out of Fund—Revision.)—A sum of money was paid into court; as security upon the defendants' appeal to the cost of a speed, which was afterwards abandoned. If appeal, which was afterwards abandoned the paintiff's costs should be provided that the plaintiff's costs should be a revision of the taxifion of costs. Cousineau v. City of London Fire Ins. Co., 13 P. R. 36.

Quashing.] — Where an appeal was quashed for want of jurisdiction the costs imposed were only costs of a motion to quash. O'Sullivan v. Lake, 16 S. C. R. 636.

Quashing.]—Where the action abated by death of the plaintiff so that there was no cause before the court appealed to, the appeal was quashed without costs. White v. Parker, 16 S. C. R. 699.

Set-off.]—A decree had been made giving the plaintiffs relief, and ordering defendants to pay the costs, which were not paid. The plaintiffs appealed from a portion of the decree, which appeal was dismissed with costs, to be paid to one of the respondents; and thereupon the plaintiffs applied to set off the amount so ordered to be paid against the costs directed to be paid by the defendants in the court below to the plaintiffs, which was ordered accordingly. Bank of Upper Canada v, Thomas, 10 Gr. 633.

Stay.]—Security for costs of appeal, as well as those of court below, must be given before proceedings in the court below will be stayed pending an appeal. Heward v. Heward, 2 Ch. Ch. 245.

2. Leave to Appeal.

Acquiescence.]—A rule nisi for new trial was moved, among other grounds, for misdirection, and refused upon that ground. The plaintiff having taken and argued it upon other grounds, the court would not grant leave to appeal from the refusal. Bricker v. Ancell, 23 U. C. R. 481.

Bona Fide Intention—Misapprehension as to Practice—Time Extended.]—Johnston v. Toxen of Petrolia, 17 P. R. 332; Sieveweright v. Leys, 9 P. R. 200.

Bona Fide Intention—Expense Incurred —Security Given—Time Extended, 1—D'Ivry v. World Newspaper Co., 17 P. R. 543.

Bona Fide Mistake — Acquiescence of Respondent—Time Extended.]—Langdon v. Robertson, 12 P. R. 139.

Change in Rules—Judgment not Entered—Novel Question.]—By paragraph 7 of the schedule to the Law Courts Act, 1896, 8, 73 of the Judicature Act, 1895, was amended so as to enable a divisional court and the court of appeal, and any Judge thereof, to grant leave to appeal in cases where no absolute right to appeal exists, and where, under the law as it stood before the amendment, no such leave could have been obtained:—Held, that the amendment applied to pending actions. Watton v. Watton, L. R. 1 P. & M. 227, followed. 2. That where at the time the amending Act was passed the judgment of the court had been pronounced, but had not been entered, the action was still pending. Holland v. Fox. 3 E. & B. 977, and In re Clagett's Estate, 20 Ch. D. 637, followed. Leave granted to appeal for the court of appeal from an order of a divisional court affirming, but on different grounds, the judgment at the trial dismissing the action, where no larse of time had courred to prejudice the plaintiff's claim to the consideration of the court, the injury for which he sud being a serious one and there being no authority upon the question of law decided by the divisional court. Specace v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 17 P. R. 172.

Conflicting Decisions.] — Leave was given to appeal from the decision (12 O. R. 492), because of the importance of the question and of conflicting decisions. An appeal now lies to a divisional court from a discretionary order, by virtue of 49 Vict, c. 16, s. 39 (O.), but that enactment has not altered the rule that a very strong case must be made out to induce the court to reverse such an order. Powell v, Peck, 12 P. R. 34.

Construction of Statute.]—Where the question affected matters arising in the exercise of statutory powers, and was of general interest, leave was given to appeal, although less than $200 was at stake. G'Donohoe v. Whitty, 2 O. R. 424.

Sec. also, S. C., 9 P. R. 361.

Cross-appeal—Ignorance of Appellant's Intention—Time Extended, 1—Re Lake Superior Native Copper Co., 11 P. R. 36.

Defendants Lying by—Histane.]—Two defendants (legaties) in an administration suit appealed from the master's report, and succeeded in charging the plaintiff, an excention, with their shares of a sum of $1,000, which had been lost to the estate. The other defendants did not appeal, and as to them the report became absolute on the 24th March, 1887. Three of these, in September, 1887, after their co-defendants appeal had been successful, moved for leave to appeal and to extend the time, their excuse for the delay being that they had supposed the appeal of their co-defendants would curre to their benefit—Held, that the time should be extended, and these defendants let in to appeal, upon their placing the executor in as good a position as he would have occupied if they had appealed within the time allowed; although the $4,000 was lost to the estate by his innocent mistake, and that he had acted as he did under the instructions of the testator. Langdon v. Robertson, 12 P. R. 139, followed. Birds v. Rebry, 6 Madd, 49, distriguished. Re Gabourie, Casey v. Gabourie, 12 P. R. 252.

Delay Explained.]—A transferce of a judgment debtor was allowed to appeal from the order for his examination under 49 Vict. c. 16, s. 12 (O.), after the time for appealing had expired, his delay being satisfactority explained. Blakeley v. Blausc, 12 P. R. 565.

Delay without Special Excuse—Time not Extended.]—Miller v. Brown, 9 P. R. 542: Wilby v. Standard Fire Ins. Co., 10 P. R. 34, 40.

Executor—Construction of Will—Security for Costs—Status of Legatees as Appelants.]—Tuber Con, rule 938 (a), an executor applied in chambers and obtained a determination of a question affecting the rights of legatees under the will, which involved as distribution; but, upon appeal by residuary legatees, the order, in chambers was reversed by a divisional court, which rut a different construction upon the will:—Held, that the judgment of the divisional court was a sufficient prefection to the executor, and any aspeal to costs; and his application for leave to appeal to the court of appeal must be at his risk, as the state of the construction of the divisional court was to give a sufficient court, and to dispense with security. It was objected that the intervention of the divisional court, and to dispense with security. It was objected that the intervention of the applicants raised a question between contending beneficiaries, and that there was no jurisdiction to deal with such a question under the rule:—Held, that the question was one which a master, in taking the accounts and making the inquiries directed to be taken, would have jurisdiction to deal with; and if it should become necessary incidentally to place a construction on the will, he had jurisdiction to do so; and that the test of jurisdiction under the rule was whether the question was one which, before the existence of the rule, could have been determined under a judgment for the administration of an estate or execution of a trust. Leave to appeal granted and the security required reduced below the usual amount. Re Sherlock, 18 P. R. 6

Gross Delay, | — Judgment was given against defendant in H. T., 1861, on demurrer and special case. On granting leave to appeal the chief justice intimated that defendant's remedy, if any, would be in chameery. Defendant then sued there, and having failed applied for leave to give notice of appeal, not-withstanding the lapse of three years. The application was refused. Such leave may be given under C. S. U. C. e. 13, s. 24, after four-teen days from the decision complained of have elapsed. Regina v. Miller, 23 U. C. R. 206.

Important Point of Practice—Undertaking to Pay Respondent's Costs—Leave Granted.]—Greey v. Siddall, 12 P. R. 557.

Interlocutory Proceeding. |—Leave to appeal was refused on the merits, and also as a matter of discretion, where the proposed appeal was upon an interlocutory proceeding in the course of another appeal. Jones v. Macdonald, 14 P. R. 535.

Judgment Below Clearly Right.]— Leave to appeal from the decision of a divisional court refused, that decision appearing to be in accordance with well-established practice. Walker v. Garney-Tilden Co. (Limited), 18 P. P. 471.

Order Giving Leave to Appeal. —An order giving leave to appeal is an order from which an appeal does not lie; and leave to appeal from such an order does not lie; and leave to appeal from such an order will not be granted. Re Sarnia Oil Co., 15 P. R. 347, Ex. p. Stevenson, 1892 1 to B. 334, 609, and Kay v. Briggs, 22 O. B. D. 334, followed. Re Central Bank of Canada, 17 P. R. 395.

Oversight of Clerk.]—Where a solicitor's clerk, through forgetfulness, neglected to set down an appeal as required by G. O. 642 (Con. rule 849), the referee refused to extend the time for appealing, and on appeal his ruling was upheld. Dunnard v. McLeod, 8 P. R. 343

Refusal by Court Below—No Special Coromstances, |—Leave to appeal to the Coromstances, leaves to appeal to the court of appeal from an order of a divisional court affirming an order of a Judge in chambers, which set aside an order of a referee in chambers, whereby the proceedings in the action were stayed nending the determination of an action in England brought by some of the present defendants, and to which the present defendants, and to which the present defendants, and to which the present leave had previously been refused by the court whose decision was complained of, there being good grounds for supporting it and no special circumstances existing which s. 77 of the Judicature Act makes essential, and there were no special reasons for treating the case as exceptional. Great North-West Central R. W. Co v. Stevens, 18 P. R. 392.

Rejection of Evidence.]—Where evidence offered at a trial and rejected affected only the amount of damages, which were small, the court refused leave to appeal. Myers v. Curric, 9 L. J. 152.

Rescinding Leave.]—Where a defendant delayed to proceed in appeal for an unreasonable time, the court ordered the leave to be rescinded, unless he should within a month settle a case for appeal. Clissold v. Machell, 25 U. C. R. 546.

Second Appeal — No Special Circumstances.]—Where a motion to quash a municipal by-law was refused by the Judge who heard it, and his order affirmed by a divisional court, an application for leave for a further appeal was dismissed:—Held, that under s. 77 (4) (e) of the Judicature Act, upon such an application for leave, it must appear that there is some reasonable ground for doubting the soundness of the judgment, and in addition thereto that special reasons exist for taking a case out of the general rule which forbids more than one appeal to the same party. Re Reddock and City of Toronto, 19 P. R. 241.

Settling Practice—Alternative Granuls for Decision,—A divisional court of the High Court having see aside a judgment signed by the plaintiffs or default of defence in an action on a bond (19 P. R. 145), upon two grounds viz., cl. 1) that a motion for judgment was necessary, and (2) that the statement of claim had never been legally served upon the defendants, the posting up thereof in the office not being service because of the wais of summons before doing so:—Held, that leave to appeal should not be granted unless the plaintiffs could make a plausible attack upon both grounds, for if only one were demolished, the other would support the judgment, and leave to appeal will not be granted unless the could make a plausible attack upon both grounds, for if only one were demolished, the other would support the judgment complained of. And in this case the service of the statement of claim could not be supported, having regard to laufe 574, and it was in the discretion of the court below to give effect to the objection to its regularity, notwithstanding the defendants' delay in moving against the judgment. Appleby v. Turner, 19 P. R. 175.

Slip of Solicitor,]—The solicitor for the defendants (except L.) had given due notice of appeal, but through inadvertence set down the appeal on behalf of the defendants the gravel road company only. Under the circumstances stated in the judgment, the other defendants were allowed to set down their appeal. Levis v. Talbot Street Gravel Road Co., 10 P. R. 15.

Unnecessary Action.]—The court refused the plaintiffs leave to appeal from the decision of a divisional court, 18 P. R. 1, affirming an order staying proceedings in this action, deeming that the action was unnecessary. City of Toronto v. Canadian Pacific R. W. Co., 18 P. R. 451.

Winding-up Act — Successive Applications—Novel Question.]—Orders having been made in the matter of the winding-up of an insolvent bank for payment of certain moneys out of court to the executors of the purchaser from the liquidator of the assets, and the moneys having been paid out to them, the Receiver-feneral for Canada asserted a claim to such moneys under ss. 40 and 41 of the Winding-up Act. R. S. C. c. 129, and, not having been a party to the applications for payment out made by the executors, presented a petition for payment over to him by them or repayment into court of such moneys; or, in the alternative, for leave to appeal from such orders. This petition was dismissed, upon the ground that the petitioner was not entitled to complain, even if the moneys had been improperly paid out. Upon an application by the petitioner for leave to appeal to the Court of Appeal from the order dismissing his petition.—Held, that a Judge of the High Court had power to grant the leave sought, the application not being in effect a second application for leave to appeal from the orders for payment out. And, under all circumstances of the case, leave to appeal was granted, upon scerrity for costs being furnished, the question being a new and important one and the amount involved considerable. Re Central Bank of Canada, 17 P. R. 370.

Winding-up Proceedings — Leave to Appeal.]—See Company, X. 6 (a).

3. Notice of Appeal.

Effect.)—The appellants in their notice under the 27th appeal rule, merely stated that the judgment was erroneous as being against law and evidence, and because the jury were misdirected. The court held this insufficient, and ordered that execution might issue. Quere, however, whether the order was necessary, as such notice could not take effect as a supersedeas. Torrance v. Me-Pherson, 11 U. C. R. 200.

Effect.] — Having regard to the analogy of statutes which limit the neriod within which action shall be brought, the words "appeal brought" in s. 108, R. S. C. c. 43 (the Indian Act) would mean "appeal commenced," for under those statutes an action is held to be "brought" when it is commenced. The meaning of appealing is giving notice to your adversary of your intention to appeal by serving him with a notice of appeal. Regina v. McGauley, 12 P. R. 259.

4. Payment Out of Court.

Money in Court. —Paying money out of court pending appeal. Hill v. Rutherford, 1 Ch. Ch. 121.

Money in Court.]—Where a party appealed and paid into court the amount of costs taxed to a defendant in the court below, in lieu of giving a bond, and the appeal was allowed with costs, costs of the court below being reservee:—Held. that the party appealing was entitled to an order for payment out of money so paid in, notwithstanding defendant had given notice of appeal to the Supreme Court. Crossman v. Shears, 15 C. L. J. 111.

Money in Court.]—By the terms of a consent order, a sum of money was to be retained in court to abide the result of such proceedings as the plaintiffs might be advised to take to assert and enforce their rights and remelies with respect to a claim made by them, and such proceedings were to be commenced within four months. Substantially the sum of money was to represent that the sum of money was to represent the commenced within four months, and they were to have it if their chained and they were to have it if their chained and they were to have it if their chained and they were to have it if their chained and they were to have it if their chained and they were to have it if their chained and they were their claim, and carried it to the Court of Appeal, where it was dismissed. They then commenced an appeal to the Supreme Court of Canada:—Heid, that this appeal was one of the proceedings, or part of such proceedings, as the plaintiffs were at liberty to take under the order, and until its determination, the money should not be paid out. City of Toronto v. Toronto Street R. W. Co., 15 P. R. 358.

5. Powers of the Court.

Entering Verdict.] — Where leave was reserved at the trial to move to set aside the verdict and enter a verdict for the plain-tiff:—Held, that the Court of Appeal could order such verdict to be entered. Herbert v. Park, 25 C. P. 57.

Entering Verdict, |—The Judge, who tried the case without a jury, found a verdict for defendants. The Court of Queen's Bench held that defendants were liable, but as damages had not been assessed they ordered a new trial. The Court of Appeal, without deciding that it would have disturbed the finding at the trial:—Held, that no sufficient reason was shewn for reversing the decision of the Queen's Bench, which was the immediate subject of the appeal; but, the court below should have assessed the damages, and this the appellate court now did, and varied the rule by directing a verdict to be entered for the amount. Denny v. Montreal Telegraph Co., 3 A. R. 628.

Inferences of Fact. |—Power to draw inferences of fact, when given by consent, is not confined to the court below, but extends to the Court of Appeal. Hood v. Commissioners of Harbour of Toronto, 37 U. C. R. 72.

Mistake, |—The Judge, who tried the case without a jury, really found a verdict for defendant, as appeared from his notes, but a nonsuit was entered. The court below made a rule absolute to enter a verdict for the plaintiff, although no leave was reserved, and no consent was given:—Held, that the Court of Appeal had power to correct the entry by the Judge's notes, or vary the rule. Mc-Edwards v. Palmer, 2 A. R. 439.

6. Security for Costs.

Allowance, —It is not necessary to move for the allowance of the bond. If not moved against within fourteen days from notice of filing given, it stands allowed. Read v. Smith, 2 Ch. Ch. 326.

Allowance. |—The practice as to the perfecting of security to stay execution on appealing from the Court of Chancery is different from the practice on appeals at law. In Chancery no motion is necessary to allow the security: the onus of moving against the security being on the party objecting to it. Hecnan v. Dewar, 3 Ch. Ch. 199.

Amount, — Judgment having been given for the plaintiff; on motion to allow an appeal bond in a penalty of £100 it was objected that no appeal would lie, and that the bond should be not merely for costs, but to secure the judgment:—Held, that these objections must be decided by the court above. Semble, however, that it was sufficient in amount, the case being one in which, under C. S. U. C. c. 13, s. 16, s.-s. 4, there was no stay of execution. Gossage v. Canadian Land and Emigration Co., 24 U. C. R. 452.

Amount—Two Appeals.]—An application for leave to pay into court $400 as security for costs of an appeal from a certificate of title under the Quieting Titles Act Javing been granted by the referee ex parte, and it not having been brought to his notice that the appeal was as to two separate parcels of land, one claimed by a lusband and wife, and the other by the husband alone, it was held that the order was bad, as these facts should have been made known to the referee, and the order under such circumstances made upon notice. Re Howland, 4 Ch. Ch. 16, Bond—Affidarits in Answer.]—A party opposing the allowance of a surety's bond for security for costs of an appeal, may read affidavits in opposition to the surety's affidavit of justification. Campbell v. Royal Canadian Bank, 6 P. R. 43.

Bond—Affidavit of Justification.]—In the case of bonds for carrying a case to the Court of Appeal, an affidavit of justification is necessary under the order of the Court of Error and Appeal No. 8. Doncily v. Jones, 4 Ch. Ch. 48.

Bond—Condition—Affidavit of Execution —Affidavit of Justification.—The condition of a bond filed by the defendants as security for the costs of an appeal to the Supreme Court of Canada was that if the defendants "shall effectually prosecute their said appeal and pay such costs and damages as may be awarded against them by the Supreme Court of Canada, then this obligation shall be void; otherwise to remain in full force and effect;"
—Held, that the bond was not irregular. 2.
The affidavit of execution of such a bond need not be entitled in the cause. 3. A surety in such a bond, when justifying in the sum sworn to "over and above what will pay all my just debts," need not add "and every other sum for which I am now bail." Molsons Bank v. Cooper, 17 P. R. 153.

Bond—Uncertainty—Disalloneance.]— A bond filed as security for costs of an appeal to the Supreme Court of Canada stated that the sureties were jointly and severally held and jointly bound, instead of firmly bound, and "we bind ourselves and each of us by himself," instead of binds himself."—Held, that it must be disallowed for uncertainty as to whether it could be properly construed as a joint and several bond. Jamieson v. London and Canadian L. & A. Co., 18 P. R. 413.

Bond—Defect.]—A bond filed as security for costs of an appeal to the Supreme Court of Canada was disallowed on the ground of substantial error in the form—"by" instead of "binds" in the operative part. Jamieson v. London and Canadian L. & A. Co., 18 P. R. 413, followed. Young v. Tucker, 18 P. R. 449.

Bond—Intituling.] — The bond and the affidavits of execution and justification were all entitled in the name of the original plaintiffs, one of whom had died, and both were named as obligees in the bond:—Held, irregular, "McFarlane v. Dickson, 1 Ch. Ch. 377.

Bond—Intituling.] — An appeal bond is properly intituled in the cause in the court below. Campbell v. Royal Canadian Bank, 6 P. R. 43.

Bond—Intituling.]—The bond should be styled in the Court of Error and Appeal. The style of the cause in the court below, if adopted, should be the style in full, and the parties should be described as they become appellants and respondents, but they may be given in the same order as in the style of the original cause. Weir v. Matheson, 2 Ch. Ch. 73.

Bond—Objections, How Made.]—Where a bond for security for costs, or for the due prosecution of an appeal, is filed in an outer county, all objections to it or to the solvency of the sureties should be decided by the Master of that county. Brigham v. Smith, 1 Ch. Ch. 334.

Bond—Stamps.]—An appeal bond and the affidiavit of execution thereof are separate documents, and must be stamped as such when filed. The recent Act respecting law stamps has made no alteration in the practice of the court as to the mode of computing the proper amount of fees. Maebeth v. Smart, 1 Ch. Ch. 269.

Interest. |—Recovery back of money paid into court including costs as security for appeal—Interest. See Citizens' Ins. Co. v. Parsons, 32 C. P. 492.

Mortgage Actions. |—C. S. U. C. c. 13, s. 16, s.-s. 4, as to giving additional security pending appeal, does not apply to mortgage cases. Bank of Upper Canada v. Pottroff, S. L. J. 328.

Payment into Court,]—After the security for the costs of an appeal to the Court of Appeal from the Court of Chancery has been perfected by bond, the latter court has power to allow a deposit of money in court to be substituted therefor. Townships of Chatham and Dover East v. Eric and Huron R. W. Co., 7 P. R. 399.

Rescinding Allowance,]—Where security has been allowed under C. S. U. C. e. 13, s. 35, without objection, the court will not rescind the allowance for want of the proceedings required by ss. 33 and 34. The neglect by appellant to take the proceedings mentioned in ss. 36 and 37, is no ground for rescinding the allowance. Rowe v. Jarvis, 14 C. P. 244.

Surety—Solicitor.]—It is irregular for a solicitor to become security for costs of appeal for his client. Beckitt v. Wragg, 1 Ch. Ch. 5.

Surety.]—There should be two sufficient sureties, and if one die or become insolvent, another will be ordered to be substituted. Brigham v. Smith, 1 Ch. Ch. 334, overruled on this point. Saunders v. Furnivati, 2 Ch. 1509.

Surety.]—Where the statutory requirements are observed with respect to bonds given upon appeal, the bonds will not be disallowed on the ground that the sureties are "standing sureties" of the appellants, in the absence of satisfactory evidence of their insufficiency, Norval v. Canada Southern R. W. Co., (and three other cases), 7. P. R. 313.

Surety.]—An application for further security for costs of appeal on the ground of the insolvency of one or more of the sureties should be made to the court appealed from. Lumsden v, Davis, 10 P. R. 10

7. Staying Proceedings.

Amount Involved.] — Bills of costs amounting to $250.10 were on a taxation reduced to $187.10. The plaintiff contended that he was not liable to pay as much as $187.10, if any sum, and applied to the Master in Chambers for an order to stay an execution for $187.10 pending an appeal to the Court of Appeal, under s. 33 0. J. Act. This order was refused, and on appeal it was held that what was "in controversy on appeal" was a sum less than $200, and therefore that the order of the Master was right. O'Donohoe v. Whitty, 9 P. R. 361.

Appeal Too Late. |—A motion to stay proceedings pending an appeal may be made before filing a petition of appeal. But the applicant for a stay must be in a position to appeal. When, therefore, the appeal was from an interlocutory order, and it had become too late to give notice and get in the appeal within six months, the application was refused. Bridgman v. Smith, 3 Ch. Ch. 313.

Before Leave,]—The court refused to rescend the stay of proceedings on the execution, although no notice of the grounds of appeal had been served or formal leave to appeal asked, all parties having understood that the case would be appealed. Grant v. Great Western R. W. Co., S. C. P. 348.

Contempt. |—A defendant in equity having appealed from an order directing his committal for breach of an injunction, a stay of proceedings under the order pending the appeal was refused. Gamble v. Howland, 3 Gr. 281.

Contempt.]—A party who has been ordered by the court to attend for further examination after a refusal to answer questions, is in contempt if he does not so attend, but that is not a bar to his appealing from the order. Proceedings under the order will not be stayed pending the appeal. MacGregor v. McDonald, 11 P. R. 518.

Execution.]—Where the plaintiffs were appealing to the Priyy Council from a judgment of the Court of Appeal dismissing with costs an appeal from the judgment of the Queen's Bench Division in favour of the defendants with costs, and had given security in $2,000, as required in s. 2 of R. S. O. 1887.

c. 41:-Held, that the order of a Judge of the Court of Appeal, under s. 5, allowing the security should not have stayed the proceedings in the action, and so much of the order as related to the stay should be rescinded: Held, also, that the plaintiffs not having given security to stay execution for the costs in the courts below, and the stay being re-moved, if they now desired to have execution for such costs stayed, they should give security therefor as provided by Rule 804, which is made applicable by s. 4 of the Act: -Held, also, that if an order for payment out of the High Court of money therein, awaiting the result of the litigation, was "execution" within the meaning of s. 3, it was stayed by the allowance of the security, and required no order; if it was not execution, a Judge of the Court of Appeal had no jurisdiction to stay proceedings in the court below; and it was for the High Court to determine whether such an order was "execution, and if not. whether the money should be paid out. Mc-Master v. Radford, 16 P. R. 20.

Execution.]—Staying execution pending appeal. See Lewis v. Talbot Street Gravel Road Co., 10 P. R. 15.

Foreign Appeal.]—An action on a foreign judgment was stayed pending an appeal in the foreign state from the judgment sued on, although no stay of execution upon the original judgment was imposed by the foreign court. Terms as to diligence in prosecuting the appeal and preservation of the defendant's property in Ontario in statu quo were annexed to the order. Huntingdon v. Attrill, 12 P. R. 36.

General Rule.]—It is not usual to stay proceedings under a decree pending an appeal, and under the facts of this case it was refused. Heward v. Heward, 2 Ch. Ch. 242.

Injunction.]—The 27th section of the Court of Appeal Act, R. S. O. 1877, c. 38, does not apply to proceedings by injunction, whether the writ has been issued before or after decree in the cause. McLaren v. Calducll, 29 Gr. 438, Interim Stay, !—A rule nisi for a new trial having been discharged, defendant gave notice of appeal, and obtained an order to stay proceedings until the appeal bond should be entered into by the defendant, or until there should be a rule or order allowing the plaintiff to proceed. The appeal bond was marked "allowed" by a Judge in Chambers, after which the plaintiff entered judgment on his verdict. On motion to set aside this judgment:—Held, that the order ceased to stay proceedings after the appeal bond had been allowed; that such allowance was a supersedeas of execution only; and that the judgment, therefore, should be allowed to stand, subject to the decision in appeal. Robinson v. Gordon, 24 U. C. R. 285.

Interlocutory Appeal. — The trial of the action was stayed pending an appeal to the Supreme Court of Canada from the judgment of the Court of Appeal upon a question arising in the action as to the method of trial to of the issues in this and a cross-action. Commec v. Canadian Pacific R. W. Co., 11 P. R. 353.

Mandatory Order.]—By an order of the Court of Error and Appeal, the Hamilton and Milton Road Company were ordered to remove a bridge constructed by them which impeded the navigation of the Desjardius Canal, against which the road company appealed to the Queen in Council:—Held, that under the statute, the circumstance of the road company having perfected the security required by the orders of the Privy Council, was a sufficient answer to a motion for sequestration for non-compliance with the order requiring the removal of the bridge; and the road company having applied to this court for a stay of proceedings under the order, pending their appeal to the Privy Council, both motions were refused, but under the circumstances without costs to either party, Dundas v. Hamilton and Milton Road Co., 19 Gr. 455.

Manifold Judgment.]—The defendant in appealing to the Court of Appeal from a manifold judgment of the High Court in an action for specific performance, directing the execution by him or a convenance, the deliver of some for each section of the execution of some for each security for the costs of the action, gave security for the costs of the Court of Appeal and for payment of the costs of the cuttof Appeal but did not execute the conveyance, deposit the documents in court, or otherwise comply with the judgment or the provisions of Rule 804, s.-ss. 1, 2, 3:—Held, that upon the perfecting of the security, there was a stay of execution, amounting to a superseders, as to the costs of the action, by virtue of s.-s. 4 of Rule 804, although the defendant had done nothing with respect to the parts of the judgment falling under the other sub-sections; and garnishing proceedings taken for the purpose of collecting such costs were not sustainable. Viscon v. Northcote, 15 P. R. 17.1

New Trial.]—The plaintiff was permitted to proceed with a new trial pending an appeal, where he shewed that he had already been inconvenienced by delay, that further delay would prejudice him financially, and that by it he might lose important oral evidence. McDonald v. Murray, 9 P. R. 464.

Notice of Motion.]—On a motion for a story of execution pending an appeal it is not necessary to give fourteen days' notice. The ordinary notice is sufficient. Heenan v. Decar, 3 Ch. Ch. 199.

Payment Before Stay.]—Where costs collected by the sheriff had been posted on the evening of the 27th bowenher, addressed to the property of the 27th bowenher, addressed to the property of the property of the state of the property of the state of the property of proceedings bending their uppeal.—Held, that the money was constructively in the possession of the plaintiff's solicitor as soon as it had been duly mailed, and therefore a motion to refund was refused, with costs. McDonell v. McKay, 2 Ch. Ch. 254.

Reasons of Appeal Not Served.]—Where an appellant who had given the statutory notice of appeal to the Court of Appeal, but had not served his reasons, moved to stay execution under R. S. O. 1877 c. 38, ss. 27, 28, the court examined the pleadings to ascertain whether the appeal was frivolous, but ordered the appellant to pay the costs of application. Norral v. Canada Southern R. W. Co., 7 P. R. 462.

Rehearing.]—On motion to stay proceedings pending rehearing, the court will follow the practice laid down in the Error and Appeal Act with reference to staying proceedings pending an appeal to the Court of Error and Appeal. Campbell v. Edwards, 6 P. R. 159.

Replevin.]—Defendants having succeeded in replevin for a schooner, the plaintiff served notice of appeal, and applied to stay proceedings for a month to perfect his security, so that defendants might not in the meantime obtain a return of the vessel. The court, however, refused to interfere. Scott v. Carveth, 20 U. C. R. 435.

Security.]—Upon an appeal to the Court Appeal, upon security for costs being allowed in general the proceedings ought to be staved: but if it is made to appear in any case that the respondent may suffer injustice case that the respondent may surer injusts, by his execution being stayed, then the stay may be removed, upon terms which may be plaintiff recovered a money judgment against the defendants, a benevolent society incor-porated in a foreign country, but having mem-bers in Ontario who paid dues and assessments which were transmitted abroad. The defendants appealed from the judgment to the Court of Appeal, and gave security for costs. Upon an application by the plaintiff under Rule 827 to remove the stay of proceedings it was admitted by the defendants that they had no assets in Ontario, but they said that they were advised that they had good grounds for the appeal, and if it should fail, that the plaintiff's claim would be paid; and this was not contradicted:—Held, that the dues and assessments of members in Ontario, being assessments of members in Ontario, being voluntary payments, could not be reached by a receiver or by attachment; and there was no prejudice or injustice that the plaintiff was likely to suffer by the stay, as he already had security for costs, and the delay would had security for costs, and the deny would be compensated by interest on the judgment, if the appeal should be unsuccessful. Boyd v. Dominion Cold Storage Co. (1897), 17 P. R. 545, distinguished:—Held, also, that the costs of the unsuccessful motion should be costs of the unsuccessful motion should be paid by the applicant; there is no rule that costs of such a motion shall go to the suc-cessful party upon the appeal. Wintemute v. Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen, 19 P.

Security.]—Security for the costs in appeal, as well as below, will be required before proceedings below will be stayed pending an appeal. Heccard v. Heccard, 2 Ch. Ch. 245.

Security.]—The decree ordered payment of a sum of money by a railway company, and in default that a receiver should be appointed; from which the company gave notice of appeal, and moved to stay the appointment of the receiver and the enforcement of the debt until after judgment in appeal. The court refused the application unless security was given for payment of the debt in case the decree should be affirmed; and in any event ordered defendants to pay the plaintiff the costs of the motion. For v. Toronto and Nipissing R. W. Co., 26 Gr. 352.

Security—Ex parte Application.]—A stay of proceedings will not be granted pending an appeal unless security is given for the costs of appeal as well as for those in the court below. Applications for a stay should not be made ex parte. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., v. Ontario and Quebec R. W. Co., 9 P. R. 420.

Seizure Made.]—Where a fi. fa. has been acted upon before the writ of appeal has been allowed, there can be no stay of execution. The sheriff must sell and pay the money into court to abide the event of the appeal. Gilmour v. Hall, 10 U. C. R. 508.

Stay by Injunction.]—Interim injunction granted to stay proceedings at law pending the decision of the Court of Appeal. Cotton v. Corby, 7 Gr. 50.

Stay by Injunction.]—Pending an appeal from the Court of Chancery, an injunction was granted restraining a mortgagee from proceeding to the sale of the mortgaged premises under a power of sale contained in a deed, Commercial Bank v. Bank of Upper Canada, I Ch. Ch. 64.

Stay by Injunction.]—An interim injunction will not be granted in aid of a plaintiff, to preserve the subject matter of his action in statu quo long enough to enable him to obtain the decision of an appellate court on points already decided in other cases, against his contention, in courts of first instance. Wyld v. McMaster, 4 O. R. 717.

Suspending Decree,]—The court has full power, notwithstanding the Error and Appeal Act, 1857, to suspend the operation of its decree, so as to allow an appeal. Cotton v. Corby, 5 L. J., 67.

8. Time for Appeal and Extension of Time.

Application After Expiration of Time—Illness of Solicitor—Public Duties.]
—Where sufficient grounds are disclosed the time for leave to appeal from a judgment of the Exchequer Court of Canada prescribed by s. 51 of the Exchequer Court Act (as amended by 55 Vict. c. 55. s. 1), may be extended after such prescribed time has expired. [The application in this case was made within three days after the expiry of the thirty days within which an appeal could have been taken.] (2.) The fact that a solicitor who has received instructions to appeal has fallen ill before carrying out such instructions, affords a sufficient ground upon which an extension may be allowed after the time for leave to appeal prescribed by the statute has expired. (3) Pressure of public business preventing a consultation between the Attorney-General for Canada and his solicitor within the prescribed time for leave to appeal is sufficient reason for an extension heing granted, although the application therefor may not be made until after the expiry of such prescribed time. Clarke v. The Queen, 3 Ex. C. R. 1. See the next case.

On the trial in the Exchequer Court is 1887.

On the trial in the Exchequer Court in 1887 of an action against the Crown for breach of contract to purchase paper from the suppliant, no defence was offered, and the case was sent to referees to ascertain the damages. In 1891 the report of the referees was brought before the court, and judgment was given against the Crown for the amount thereby found due. The Crown appealed to the Supreme Court, having obtained from the Exchequer Court an extension of the time for appeal limited by statute, and sought to im-pugn on such appeal the judgment pronounced in 1887;—Held, that the appeal must be restricted to the final judgment pronounced in 1891; that an appeal from the judgment given in 1887 could only be brought within thirty days thereafter unless the time was extended as provided by the statute; and the extension of time granted by the Exchequer Court on its face only referred to an appeal from the judgment pronounced in 1891. The Queen v. Clarke, 21 S. C. R. 636.

Application Before Time Expires.]—
The fact of an application to extend the time for appealing being made before the expiry of a year from the decree on rehearing, was looked on as a cogent reason for extending the time. Tyler v. Webb, 3 Ch. Ch. 33.

Chambers Order.] — Where time to appeal to the Court of Error and Appeal from an order made in Chambers would expire before such appeal could be heard, a Judge in Chambers cannot extend the time. Wiman v. Brudstrect, 3 C. L. J. 102.

Change in Rules.]—Section 26 of R. S. O. 1877 c. 38, which came into force on the 1st January, 1878, provides that notice of appeal must be given within one month from the judgment complained of, or within such further time as the court appealed from or a Judge thereof may allow. Where a notice of appeal from a decree pronounced on the 1st November. 1877, was served under this section after office hours on the 31st January, 1878, the appeal bond having been filed on the 14th, and it was not shewn that the opposite party was prejudiced by the delay, or that the defence was not a meritorious one:—Held, assuming the Act to apply, that an application to allow the notice should be granted. Semble, however, that the above section would not apply where judgment has been pronounced before the coming into operation of the Act. Rose v. Hiekey, i P. R. 390.

Crown.]—Where an application was made by the Crown for an extension of time for leave to appeal a long time after the period prescribed therefor in s. 51 of 50 & 51 Vict. c. 16 (as amended by 53 Vict. c. 35), had expired, and the material read in support of such application did not disclose any special grounds or reasons why an extension should be granted, the application was refused. MacLean v. The Queen, 4 Ex. C. R. 257.

Decree on Reheaving, i—Where a cause has been reheard and the original decree affirmed, an appeal must be brought within a year from the original decree, or a special application for leave to appeal made. Macjardane v. Dickson, 1 Ch. Ch. 377; S. C., 2 Ch. Ch. 38.

Delay Accounted For.] — Such leave, after the time has elapsed, will not be granted if the delay is not properly accounted for. Bullen v. Renwick, 1 Ch. Ch. 204: Denison v. Denison, 2 Ch. Ch. 333; Duff v. Barrett, 3 Ch. Ch. 318.

Discretion.]—In an action by V. against a municipality for damages from injury to property by the negligent construction of a drain, a reference was ordered to an official referee "for inquiry and report pursuant to section 101 of the Judicature Act and Rule 552 of the High Court of Justice." The referee reported that the drain was improperly constructed, and that V. was entitled to $600 damages. The municipality appealed to a divisional court from the report, and the court held that the appeal was too late, no notice having been given within the time required by Con. Rule $48, and refused to extend the time for appealing. A motion for judgment on the report was also made by V. to the court, on which it was claimed on behalf of the municipality that the whole case should be gone into upon the evidence, which the court refused to do:—Held, that the appeal not having been brought within one mouth from the date of the report, as required by Con. Rule $48, was too late; that the renort had to be filed by the party appealing before the appeal could be brought, but the time could not be enlarged by his delay in filling it; and that the refusal to extend the time was an exercise of indicial discretion with which this court would not interfere. Township of Colchester South v. Valud, 24 8, C. R. 622.

General Rule—Merits.]—Upon an application to extend the time for an appeal, to do justice in the particular case is above all other considerations; and the expression "the justice of the case upon the undisputed facts of it. And where the plaintiff, desiring to appeal to the Court of Appeal from the judgment below 19 O. R. 639, was two months and twelve days late in filing his appeal bond, and offered no sufficient excuse for his delay, but asked to have the time extended as an indulgence, and it appeared that if the plaintiff were to succeed in his contention in the case, he would obtain and have at the expense of the defendant more than he could have had under his contract:—Held, that the justice of the case was against the plaintiff; and that an order of the Master in Chambers extending the time for appealing, though a discretionary order, was so clearly wrong that it should be reversed. Abelt v. Morrison, 14 P. R. 210.

Gross Delay.]—The court, although reluctant to shut out a party from the privilege of appealing, will not give leave to appeal after a long lapse of time, and where numerous sittings of the Court of Appeal have been held since the judgment. Davidson v. Boomer, 3 Ch. Ch. 375.

Judgment Not Drawn Up—Bonû Fide Intention to Appeal.)—The judgment at the trivial was pronounced on the 19th June, 1885, but was not drawn up and settled till the 11th September. The sittings of the Chancery Divisional Court (to which the defendant wished to appeal) began on the 3rd September:—Held, that the time for appealing under Rule 523, began to run from the 19th June, and that it was not extended by the neglect to draw up the judgment, although, as the judgment was not drawn up, the cause could not be set down under Rule 522. But, as there was a bonâ fide intention to appeal, instructions had been given, the defendant lived abroad, in Texas, the judgment was complex, and there were only twelve days exclusive of vacation during which it could have been settled, leave to set the cause down was granted on payment of costs. Hickey v. Storer, 11 P. R. 88.

Long Vacation.]—Upon the true construction of Rule 484, the period of long vacation is not to be reckoned in the time allowed by s. 71 of the Judicature Act for filing and serving notice of appeal to the Court of Appeal:—Semble, also, that under the circumstances of this case, if the notice had been late, the time would have been extended under Rule 485. Hexpeler v. Campbell, 14 P. R. 18.

Master's Report—Cross-Appeal.]—According to the true meaning of Rule 759, each party is precluded from appealing against the report or certificate of a Master unless he serves his notice of appeal within the fourteen days mentioned in the Rule; and notice of appeal given in proper time by one party does not prevent the report from becoming absolute as regards another party.

Stewart v. Ferpuson, B. P. R. 21.

Merits, —The decision appealed from was given on the 14th, and the notice of appeal on the 26th November, the first day of Michaelmas sittings being the 17th November:—Semble, that this was an appeal from a Judge, and not a substantive motion to rescind his order, and if so, and Rule 414 was to govern, the appeal was too late, but:—Held, even so, that the court would extend the time, as the merits were with the appellant. McLuren v. Marks, 10 P. R. 451.

Oversight of Solicitor.]—Application to extend the time for giving notice of intention to appeal, on the ground that the attorney for the party desiring to appeal had omitted to give the required notice within the prescribed fourteen days. There had been a delay of a month in making the application:—Held, that the mere statement of an unexplained "oversight" on the part of the attorney was an insufficient reason for granting the leave, though it might be otherwise if there were an important question of law involved, as to which there was a conflict between the courts, Gordon v. Great Western R. W. Co., 6 P. R. 300.

Precautionary Motion.]—The Rules applicable to appeals from the High Court to the Court of Appeal are to be applied, as far as possible, to appeals from reports of the Drainage Referee under the Drainage Act, 57 Vict. c. 56 (O.), and the Christmas vacation is to be excluded in the computation of the month within which, by s. 106 of that Act, such an appeal is to be made. Where the respondents' solicitors, by letter, insisted that the appeal was not regularly or properly brought, the appeal was not regularly or properly brought, the appeal has not regularly or properly brought, the appeal has not regularly on the proceedings taken, and were entitled to the costs of such motion, although it was, strictly speaking, unnecessary, because the proceedings were found to be regular. Re Township of Raleigh and Township of Harleich, 18 P. R. 73.

Railway Act. —An appeal under section 161 of the Railway Act. 51 Viet, c. 29 (D.), from an award need not be brought on for hearing within a month from notice of the award; an effective notice of appeal, given in zood faith, within the month, is sufficient. Re Potter and Central Counties R. W. Co., 16 P. R. 16

Special Facts.]—Leave to append given under special circumstances, after the time had elapsed, Bank of Upper Canada v. Wallace, 2 Ch. Ch. 169; Box v. Provincial Insurance Co., 2 Ch. Ch. 397; Butler v. Church, 3 Ch. Ch. 91.

Style of Cause.]—On an application for leave to appeal from the Court of Chancery, the proceedings were held to be rightly styled as in the Court of Chancery, although secrity for appealing had been perfected. Tyler v. Webb, 3 Ch. Ch. 33.

Technicalities.]—A party seeking leave to appeal after the time limited for appeal has expired, must account satisfactorily for the delay, and slew some rensonable grounds we have the delay and slew some rensonable grounds we have the seeking up a technical defence to defeat a claim just in itself. Where leave to appeal, after the usual time, was asked under circumstances which, in an ordinary case, would have been sufficient to sustain the application, but the case sought to be made by the appellant was strictissimi juris, and with the wiew of defeating an equitable claim, the motion was refused with costs. Gilbert v. Jarvis, 2 Ch. Ch. 259.

9. Miscellaneous Cases.

Appeal Books.]—Unnecessary length of appeal books remarked upon. Parsons v. Standard Ins. Co., 4 A. R. 326.

Different Courts. —It appeared that the Despatch Company, defendants herein, had given notice of appeal to the Court of Appeal, before the other defendants appealed to a divisional court: — Held, where there is a general judgment against several defendants. Rule 510 does not permit them to sever and appeal to different courts, but they were all bound to appeal to the tribunal to which the defendant taking the first step had appealed, and on this ground the appeal should be dismissed. Hately v. Merchants' Despatch Co., 4 O. R. 723.

Enforcing Judgment.] — Semble, a motion to make a decree of the Court of Appeal an order of the Court of Chancery may be made in Chambers if the order is to be in the terms of the decree, but if further directions or new terms are necessary to carry out the decree in appeal, the motion should be to the court. Weir v. Matheson, 2 Ch. Ch. 10.

Equal Division.]—The court being equally divided, the rule to enter a verdict for the plaintiff dropped, and the verdict for defendant stood; but to enable the case to be appealed, the rule was directed to be discharged. Miller v. Reid, 20 C. P. 576. See also Ryan v. Ryan, 29 C. P. 449.

Next Friend.]—Where a married woman defended a suit in Chancery without a next friend, it was held that the husband and wife could appeal to this court without any next friend. Butter v. Church, 18 Gr., 190.

Quashing.]—Where there is no right of appeal the respondent is not bound to move before the hearing to quash the proceedings. In re Freeman, 2 E. & A. 109.

Quieting Titles Act.]—An appeal from the decision of the referee, under the Act for Quieting Titles may be to a single Judge Armour v. Smith, 16 Gr. 380.

Quieting Titles Act.]—As to the practice on appeal under this Act. See Re Howland, 4 Ch. Ch. 58; S. C., ib. 90.

Subsequent Costs.]—The Court of Error and Appeal reversed an order of the Court of Chancery, and directed a petition to be dismissed with costs:—Held, that this did not entitle the appellants to costs of proceedings in the court below, subsequent to the order which was reversed. Re Goodhue, 6 P. R. S.

Taxation.]—The proper mode of appealing from the Master's certificate of taxation is by motion, not by petition. In re Ponton, 15 Gr. 355.

Third Party—"Party Affected by the Appeal." |—The defendants, alleging that another person was liable to indemnify them against the plaintiff's claim, caused him to be served with a third party notice under Rule 200. The third party appeared, and an order was made under Rule 213 that he should be at liberty to appear at the should be at liberty to appear at the rich and take such part as the Judge should direct and be bound by the result; that the question of his liability to indemnify the defendants should be tries after the trial control of the should be tried after the trial control of the should be tried after the trial control of the should be tried after the trial control. The Judge who tried the ease dismissed the action, but held the third party bound to indemnify the defendants against any costs they incurred in the action. The third party appealed from this indement to a divisional court, and the plaintiff appealed to the Court of Appeal:—Held, that the third party was a "party affected by the appeal" of the plaintiff within the meaning of Rules 709 (2) and SH, and it was the plaintiff's duty to give the notices therein provided for; but there his duty as regards the third party was not by the order made before the trial placed in the position of a defendant so as to entitle the plaintiff to relief against him, But as the defendants, for their own convenience, brought the third party into the action, and did not procure him to be made a defendant, they should, if they desired to retain him before the court for the purposes of the plaintiff appeal, do whatever might be necessary to that end beyond what was required of the plaintiff under Rules 70 and Writ.]—No writ of error or appeal is required. Section 32 of C. S. U. C. c. 13, abolishes it notwithstanding s. 64 affirming the orders of the court until altered. Where judgment of non pros. is authorized by s. 39, it is not necessary to obtain leave of the court to sign it. The statute and orders enable the respondent to press the case to a hearing. Rote v. Jarvis, 14 C. P. 244.

Consent Reference.]—A reference was by decree of the court made to W., one of the local masters in his individual, not official capacity: the decree expressing the same to be by consent, and that the award should be appealable in the same manner as a master's report; the reference being of all matters in the suit and also of questions in difference between two defendants:—Held, notwithstanding such consent, that the award could not be appealed from, and could only be moved against for cause in the same manner as an award of any other arbitrator; 39 Vict. c. 28 and 40 Vict. c. 8 (O.) not applying to suits in the court of chancery. Burns v. Chamberlin, 25 Gr. 148.

Consent Reference.]—The order of reference made by the presiding Judge at the assizes was: "Upon the consent of the parties I do order and direct that the matters in dispute between the plaintiff and defendant upon the issues joined in this action be referred." &c. It was urged that the action being one which involved the investigation of long accounts, the reference must be deemed to have been made compulsorily, and the consent to have been merely to the arbitrator named. It appeared that, as a matter of fact, the learned Judge exercised no discretion, but, on the parties announcing their consent, he made the order; and at the time suggested the insertion of a clause authorizing an appeal, if such were desired, but it was not required:—Held, that the reference was a consent reference, and there was no appeal. Webster v. Haggort, 9 O. R. 27.

Consent Reference.1 — Held. affirming the decision in 46 U. C. R. 225, that an appeal will lie from an award made pursuant to a consent reference at his prius under s. 205, C. L. P. Act. McEwan v. McLeod, 9 A. R. 239 sion in the submission that the proceedings should be the same as on a reference by order of the court, and that there should be a right of appeal from the award as under R. S. O. 1877 c. 50, s. 189. The arbitrator save an award in favour of the plaintiffs; a divisional court held that there was no appeal from the award on the merits, and as it was regular on its face refused to disturb it; the court of appeal held that there was an appeal on the merits but upheld the award. Held, affirming this judgment, that the arbitrator was justified in awarding the amount he did to the plaintiffs. Bickford v. Canada Southern R. W. Co., 14 S. C. R. 743.

Damages.]-On a reference being made to the official arbitrators of certain claims made by one H. against the government for damages arising out of the enlargement of the Lachine canal to land situated on said canal, the arbitrators awarded H. $9,216 in full and final settlement of all claims. On an appeal taken to the exchequer court by this amount was increased to $15,990. in cluding $5,600 for damages caused to the land from 1877 to 1884 by leakage canal since its enlargement, and the Judge re-served the right to H. to claim for future damages from that date:—Held, reversing the judgment of the exchequer court and con-firming the award of the arbitrators, that it must be taken that the arbitrators dealt with every item of H.'s claim submitted to them and included in their award all past. present, and future damages, and that the evidence did not justify any increase of the amount awarded. Gwynne, J., was of opinion that under 42 Vict. c. 8, s. 38, the supreme court had power (although the Cocon did not supreme to the supreme court had power (although the cocon did not supreme to the supreme court had power (although the cocon did not supreme to the supreme to th supreme court had power (atmough the Crown did not appeal to the exchequer court) to review the award of the arbitrators, and that in this case $1,000 would be an ample compensation for any injury that the claimant's land could be said to have sustained, which upon the evidence could be attri-buted to the work of the enlargement of the canal. Regina v. Hubert, 14 S. C. R. 737.

Damages—Conflicting Evidence.]—Where the evidence is conflicting as to whether damage or benefit has resulted to the party affected, by raising or lowering a street in front of his land, the court will not interfere with an award merely because it may think the weight of evidence to be against the view taken by the arbitrators. In re-Colquinoun and Town of Berlin, 44 U. C. R. 631.

Expropriation.]—In a matter of expropriation the decision of a majority of arbitrators, men of more than ordinary business experience, upon a question merely of value, should not be interfered with on appeal. Lemoine v. City of Montreal, Allan v. City of Montreal, 23 S. C. R. 390.

Expropriation.]—Where an award of the official arbitrators in an expropriation matter was not excessive in view of the evidence before them. the court declined to interfere with it. The Queen v. Carrier, 2 Ex. C. R. 101.

Expropriation.]—Where the official arbitrators in making their award have not proceeded upon a wrong principle, nor arrived at an estimate of value not warranted by the evidence, the court ought not to disturb such award. Re Macklem and Niagara Falls Park, 14 A. R. 20, and Re Bush, 14 A. R. 3, followed. Fellowes v. The Queen, 2 Ex. C. R. 428.

Expropriation—Judgment of Exchequer Court.]—The supreme court will not interfere with amount of award where the finding is not clearly erroneous. Town of Levis v. The Queen, 21 S. C. R. 31.

Full Court—Single Judge.]—Under 39 Vict. c. 28, s. 7 (O.), as amended by 40 Vict. c. 8 (O.), the appeal from the award of an arbitrator is directed to be made to the court in which the action was begun, and may heard before a single Judge of either of the superior courts of common law, in or out of term, and the practice to be observed on any such appeal, shall be the practice now observed on appeal from a report of a master in chancery, &c. An appeal having been made to a single Judge under the above section :-Held, that a further appeal to the full court in term would not lie, and that the reference to the practice on appeal from the master's report affected only the procedure to be observed on such appeal, and could not give any further right of appeal. Remarks as to the effect of the new right of appeal given by these Acts, and the extension of it contemplated by 40 Vict. c. 7 (O.). Manufacturers Merchants' Fire Ins. Co. v. Atwood, 28

Full Court—Simple Judge, 1—Section 3 of 41 Vict. c. 6 (O.) declares that the Legislature is not by that the self-shature is not by that the self-shature is not by that the construction which may by judicial construction or otherwise have been placed upon the language of any statutes included amongst the revised statutes—Held, nowithstanding this enactment, that s. 192 of R. S. O. 1877 c. 50, being not only in words but in effect the same as s. 7 of 39 Vict. c. 28 (O.), repealed but re-enacted by it, must receive the same construction as was placed upon the repealed enactment by the last case, and therefore that there could be no re-hearing by the court by way of appeal from the decision on an award made by a single Judge under the repealed enactment. Crain v. Trustecs of Collegiate Institute of the City of Ottaca, 43 U. C. R. 498.

Increasing Award, |—In a matter of expropriation of land for the Intercolonial Railway, the award of the arbitrators was increased by the Judge of the exchequer court from $4,155 to $10,824,25, after additional witnesses had been examined by the Judge;—Held, that as the judgment appealed from was supported by evidence, and there was no matter of principle on which such judgment was fairly open to blame, nor any oversight of material consideration, the judgment should be affirmed. Regina v. Charland, 16 S. C. R. 721.

Increasing Award, |—To warrant an interference with an award of value necessarily largely speculative, an appellate court must be satisfied beyond all reasonable doubt that some wrong principle has been acted on or something overlooked which ought to have been considered by the official arbitrators, and upon the evidence in this case this court restored the amount of compensation awarded by the official arbitrators, and reversed the judgment of the exchequer court which had increased it. Regina v. Paradis, Regina v. Beaulieu, 16 S. C. R. 716.

Increasing Award.]—In an arbitration within ss. 401 and 404 of the Consolidated Municipal Act, 55 Viet. c. 42 (O.), a Judge to whom an appeal is taken against the award can deal with the award on the merits, and can increase or reduce the amount or vary the decision as to costs. In re Christic and Toronto Junction, 24 O. R. 443, 22 A. R. 21, 25 S. C. R. 551.

Municipal Corporation—Compensation —Time.]—An award of compensation to a landowner for lands injuriously affected by reason of work done by a municipal corporation is an award which does not require adoption by the council, but is subject to an appeal to the high court, as provided by R. S.
O. 1897 c. 223, s. 465; and the practice as to the appeal is governed by R. S. O. 1897
c. 62, ss. 31, 34, 47. Where it is not shewn that such an award has been filed or that notice thereof has been served, an objection that an appeal therefrom is not in time cannot prevail. Re. McLetlan and Township of Chinguacousy, 18 P. R. 246.

New Grounds.]—In Nova Scotia, where the rule nist to set aside an award specifies certain grounds of objection, and no new grounds are added by way of amendment in the court below, no other ground of objection to the award can be raised on appeal. Oakes v. City of Halifar, 4 S. C. R. 640.

No Agreement for Appeal.]—In an action on a fire insurance policy, the Judge at the trial, by the consent of the parties, directed a reference, which did not contain any agreement allowing an appeal on the merits:—Held, that an appeal would not lie. Walker v. Beaver and Toronto Mutual Fire Ins. Co., 30 C. P. 211.

No Agreement not to Appeal.] - The plaintiff sued defendant on a bond, conditioned not to commence business as an hotelkeeper within three years in a certain town-At the assizes the case and all matters in difference in connection with it were referred. A verdict was taken for the pen-alty subject to the award, and a memorandum of reference indorsed on the record, signed by the attorneys. By this minute power was given to the arbitrator to examine the parties and their witnesses, certify for costs, and amend the pleadings; but it contained no agreement not to bring error, and no rule of reference had been drawn up. An award hav-ing been made in favour of the plaintiff, de-fendant moved to arrest judgment, on the ground that the condition was void, being in restraint of trade. The application was re-fused, on the grounds that the arbitrator might for all that appeared have decided the point now raised, as he had power to do, or the award might have been upon some other matter connected with the contract:—Held, no rule of reference having been drawn up, that it could not be assumed that defendant had referred on the ordinary condition not to bring error:—Held, also, that if the motion had been after verdict, without a reference, defendant must have succeeded, for the contract being in restraint of trade, it was necessary to shew a consideration, and none appeared in the declaration. Dawes v. Wilkinson, 19 U. C. R. 604.

Official Arbitrators.] — The court will not interfere with an award of the official arbitrators where there is evidence to support their finding, and such finding is not clearly erroneous. Samson v. The Queen, 2 Ex. C. R. 94.

Practice Court—Court of Appeal.]—An appeal lies from a judgment of the practice court to the court of appeal on a rule to set aside an award. Carrol v. Stratford, 7 P. R. 11.

Railway Act. — Amount.]—In a case of an award in expropriation proceedings under the Railway Act. R. S. C. c. 100, it was held by two courts that R. S. C. c. 100, it was held by two courts that resident and acted in good faith and fairness in considering the value of the property before the railway passed through it, and its value after the railway had been constructed, and that the sum awarded was to shock one's sense of justice. The Supreme Court of Canada refused to interfere. Braning v. Atlantic and X. W. R. W. Co., 20 S. C. R. 177.

Railway Act—Forum—Time.]—An appeal under s. 161 of the Railway Act. 51 Vict. c. 29 (D.) from an award need not be brought on for hearing within a month from notice of the award, an effective notice of appeal, given in good faith, within the month, is sufficient. Such an appeal should be brought on for hearing before a single Judge in court, not before a divisional court. In re Potter and Central Counties R. W. Co., 16 P. R. 16

Railway Act—Forum—Transfer to Proper Court.—The proper forum for the hearing of an appeal from an award under the Dominion Railway Act is a Judge in court, and not a divisional court: the provision of Rule 117 respecting proceedings directed by any statute to be taken before the court, and in which the decision of the court is final, is not applicable to an appeal of this kind. In re Potter and Central Countries R. W. Co., 16 P. R. 16, approved. Where an appeal was brought in the wrong court, an order was made under Rule 784 transferring it to the proper court, upon payment of costs. Re Montreal and Ottawa R. W. Co. and Ogilvie, 18 P. R. 129.

Submission Not Giving Right of Appeal, |—Where a voluntary submission to arbitration contained a provision that the agreement might be made a rule of court, and that the court might be moved to set aside or refer back the award:—Held, that this conferred no right of appeal under R. S. O. 1877 c. 50, s. 191, which, under s. 205, could only be conferred by the terms of the submission. In re Township of York and Willson, S. P. R. 313.

Time.]—In the case of a voluntary nisiprius submission to arbitration in which a right of appeal is reserved by consent, the procedure is governed by R. S. O. 1877 c. 50, ss. 191, 192, and 193, and the time for appealing from the award runs from the date of filing. McEwan v. McLeod, 9 A. R. 239, followed. Shepherd v. Canadian Pacific R. W. Co., 11 P. R. 517.

II. ARBITRATOR.

1. Disqualification.

Attorney of Party. |—The arbitrator appointed by one of the parties having refused to act. he appointed a new arbitrator, who formerly acted as his attorney, but not in this suit:—Held, that the submission must be revoked. Tully v. Chamberlain, 9 C. L. J. 237.

Contract—Engineer of Municipal Corporation.]—Inder a contract with a municipality for the laying of block pavements on certain streets, with a provision that "the decision of the city engineer on all points coming within this contract and specifications shall be final and conclusive, whether as to the interpretation of the various clauses, the measurements, extra work, quantity, quality, and all other matters and things which may be in dispute, and from his decision there shall be no appeal," the city engineer is not disqualified, in the absence of fraud or of bad faith, from deciding whether certain work is or is not extra work and does or does not fall within the plans and specifications. The possible bias of the engineer in favour of the plans and specifications drawn by him is not sufficient to disonalify him. Farquhar v. City of Hamilton, 20 A. R. 86.

Contract—Engineer—Staying Action.]—A clause in a contract for railway construction provided that in case any dispute arose as to the meaning of the agreement, price to be paid, &c., it should be referred to the engineer of the railway company, whose decision should be final. A dispute arising as to an alleged usage of allowing an increased percentage for earthwork in embankment, the contractor brought action for it:—Held, on motion to stay the proceedings, that, although the engineer had publicly and privately expressed himself to the effect that no such usage existed, yet as he swore that he would nevertheless give the plaintiffs' contention fair consideration should the matter come before him as arbitrator, the action must be stayed, Jackson v. Barry R. W. Co., [1892] 1 Ch. 238, specially referred to. Sherucood v. Balch, 30 O. R. 1

Contract—Superintendent of Work.]—By a contract between plaintiff and a city municipality for additions and improvements to its system of waterworks, it was provided that all differences, &c., should be referred to the award, order, arbitrament, and final determination of H., the superintendent in charge of the said work:—Held, that the fact of H. being such superintendent did not disqualify him from acting as arbitrator; and, on the evidence, that no cause existed to restrain him from proceeding with the reference. McNamee v. City of Toronto, 24 O. R. 313.

Counsel.]—Upon a motion to set aside an award of two out of three arbitrators, it was objected that one of the two, a Queen's counsel, was disqualified by reason of interest. It appeared that, for some years prior to the arbitration, he had from time to time acted as chamber counsel for the standing solicitor of a corporation, one of the parties to the arbitration, and had advised him with respect to matters affecting the corporation. It did not appear that he was the standing counding to the components of the corporation of the corporation of the corporation of the corporation.

sel for the corporation, nor for the solicitor in matters affecting the corporation, nor that he had advised or acted for the corporation or for the solicitor after his appointment as arbitrator, nor that there was any business connection between him and the corporation:—Held, that there was no such relation between him and the corporation as might give rise to bias or shew an interest which would invalidate the award. Vineberg v. Guardian Fire and Life Assurance Co., 19 A. R. 293, distinguished. Re Christic and Tonco of Toronto Junction, 24 O. R. 443, 22 A. R. 21, 25 S. C. R. 551.

Improper Appointment — Restraining from Acting.]—Before a submission has been made a rule of court, a court of equity has jurisdiction to restrain an arbitrator improperly appointed from entering upon the duties of such arbitration. Direct Cable Co. v. Dominion Telegraph Co., 28 Gr. 648, 8 A. R. 416, Insurance.]—Proceedings under R. S. O. 1887 c. 167, s. 114 (16), for the ascertainment of the amount of a loss under a bre policy, are proceedings in the nature of an arbitration and not of a valuation merely. Arbitrators must be indifferent, and an award made by arbitrators one of whom was at the time of arbitration sub-agent for an agent of the defendants in obtaining insurance risks, though he had acted as such to only a very small extent, was held void. Vincherg v. Guardian Fire and Life Assurance Co., 19 A. R. 293.

Interested Valuator—Waiver, |—By the terms of a written agreement on the sale of goods by the plaintiff to the defendant, the price was to be ascertained by three indifferent valuators, one to be appointed by the plaintiff, one by the defendant, and a third by the two so chosen, and in case of breach of the agreement the sum of $200 was to be recovered as liquidated damages. The valuators appointed by the parties were not indifferent, one being defendant's son, the other the plaintiff's brother-in-law, but they were accepted by the parties as unobjectionable, and a valuation was made. The vendor sued the purchaser to recover the $200, for breach of the agreement in not appointing an indifferent valuator: — Held, that having accepted the valuator so appointed as unobjectionable, he could not recover. Black v. Mottashed, 28 C. P. 259.

Offer of Solicitorship.]—The finding and certificate were set aside, because, pending the reference and before the finding, one of the arbitrators had received an offer of the solicitorship of the defendant company, and had after the finding accepted it, and was thus dissumilited from acting. Commer v. Canadian Pacific R. W. Co., 16 O. R. 639.

Solicitor.]—The high court has power to prevent a non-indifferent arbitrator from acting without waiting until the award is made, though perhaps the better course is to apply for leave to revoke the submission if another arbitrator be not substituted. Malmeshury R. W. Co. v. Budd, 2 Ch. D. 113, and Beddow v. Beddow. 9 Ch. D. 89, followed. A barrister and solicitor who had acted as counsel for the husband on an indictment and trial for obstructing an alleged highway claimed by his wife to be her property, and who had written a letter concerning the matter as solicitor for both husband and wife, was restrained from acting as arbitrator in an arbitration between the wife and the municipal corporation in which the highway was situate. Vineberg v, Guardian Fire and Life Assurance Co., 19 A. R. 293, followed. Township of Burlord v. Chambers, 25 O. R. 663.

2. Duties and Powers.

Altering Award.1—An arbitrator's authority ceases after he has executed an award, and he has no power to alter or amend such award. Helps v. Roblin, 6 C. P. 42.

Amendment.]—Power to amend by adding plaintiff. See Wright v. Creighton, 30 C. P. 5.

Amendment.]—An action on a bond for the performance by defendant P. of his duties as collector, was referred at nisi prius, with the same power to the arbitrator as the Judge had to amend the pleadings, and under this he allowed pleas to be added, one of which raised the defence that the sureties were relieved by an extension of time given for the collection, which question he referred to the court, with others:—Held, that the objection should not have been allowed by the arbitrator. Todd v. Perry, 20 U. C. R. 649.

Blank Filled in After Execution.]—
Arbitrators under the School Act executed an award, the description of the lot not being fully inserted, but a blank being left therefor, which was afterwards filled in, and the word "lot" altered into "gore:"—Held, that the award was bad. Ryland v. Amg, 12 C. P. 198.

Certifying for Costs.]—Where an order of preference gave the arbitrator "all the powers as to amendment and otherwise of a Judge sitting at nisi prius:"—Held, that he could certify for costs, and not having done so, the Judge in chambers refused an order full costs to be taxed. Little v. Lines, 7 P. R. 197.

Costs.]—Where upon an arbitration under s. 385 et seq. of the Municipal Act, 1892, the arbitrators made their award and directed that the costs should be paid by the landowners, but did not list the amount nor direct on what scale they should be taxed, as required by s. 339:—Held, that there was no authority for their taxation either upon the high court or the county court scale. But semble, that upon a proper application the award would be referred back to the arbitrators to complete it in the matter of costs. Re Village of Preston and Klotz, 16 P. R. 318.

Delegating Authority.] — Award held had for delegating to third parties, in awarding a division of property by persons to be selected by plaintiff and defendant. Harrington v. Edison, 11 U. C. R. 114.

Exceeding Authority.] — Where the Crown lands department, in deciding to allow one of two applicants to purchase land, directed that the amount properly payable by him to the other should be ascertained by arbitration; and the arbitrators found a certain sum due, but directed, in the event of the payee failing to deliver up possession to the other in two months, that $400 should be deducted from this amount:—Held, beyond their authority: their duty being simply to find the amount payable. Barnes v. Boomer, 40 U. C. R. 532.

Exceeding Authority, —Upon a reference of all matters in difference between the parties: —Held, that an award directing the delivery of a certain promissory note was, under the special circumstances, not an excess of authority. Lund v. Smith, 10 C. P. 443.

Exceeding Jurisdiction.]—Under a submission giving no power to award a vertici, the award was, "I am of opinion that the defendants are entitled to the verdict in this cause, and, by the authority vested in me as arbitrator, confirm this opinion, and decide the case accordingly: "—Held, that the award might be upheld as an informal expression of opinion in favour of defendants, there being no express direction to enter a verdict. Creighton v. Brown, I. P. R. 331.

Exceeding Jurisdiction — Lump Sum.]
—Action for injury to a water-course and mill-privilege. At the trial the cause and all matters in difference between the parties were referred, and the arbitrators were specially authorized to determine the value of the projectly alleged to be injured, as well as to award damages. A verdict was taken for £1.000; which it was agreed should stand as security for such value, as well as for any damages awarded, and should be reduced or increased according to the award. The arbitrators awarded that the plaintiff was entitled to a verdict, and assessed the damages in the cause at £500, and ordered the verdict to be reduced to that sum:—Held, that under the terms of the reference the verdict might stand as security for any damages in the power of the arbitrators to award, and therefore for those given, though the arbitrators took into consideration injuries caused before the first day laid in the declaration, and which perhaps, strictly, could not have been recovered for in the cause. (The award itself was clearly not bad on this ground):—Semble, that in the absence of any express agreement in the submission, it would be unnecessary to distinguish how much was awarded in respect of matters in difference in the cause, and how much for other matters. Williams v. Squair, 10 U. C. R. 24.

Exceeding Jurisdiction-Severable Provisions.]—A submission, after reciting that differences had arisen between plaintiff and defendant respecting, among other matters, the title to a lot of land, referred the matters in dispute to certain parties named. The arin dispute to certain parties named. bitrators awarded that "as to the right and interest of the parties respectively" in the defendant should pay to plaintiff land, &c., 8400 in full compensation for improvements made by plaintiff, and in full consideration and for the discharge of all his claims to and against the said land, the said $400 to be paid to defendant in three equal instalments, fixing the periods for payment and directing how the second and third instalments should be secured; and that so soon as the $400 had been fully paid, or secured as aforesaid, the plaintiff should give up possession of the land to defendant. The award then proceeded to provide that if defendant should not pay the first instalment on the 15th January, 1865, or secure the second and third instalments, he (defendant) should, on said 15th January, convey to plaintiff in fee all his right to said land, and that the plaintiff should, in consideration, pay two several annuities-one of $80 to defendant for life, and another of $20 to defendant's wife, during coverture, for her separate use, with certain directions as to increasing his or her annuity, according as the one survived the other, and as to the occupying a house on the land free of rent, &c. :-Held, that the alternative direction in the award in the event of defendant not pay-ing was in excess of the arbitrators' powers, as they were not authorized to make a bargain between the parties as to the terms on which the land should be sold by one to the other; and even if they were, they had no right to direct that a portion of the money which was to be paid to defendant for it, should be appropriated to his wife without his consent; but that the other alternative, an express direction to pay certain time and in a certain way, and being separable from the rest, might be upheld and enforced. Bond v. Bond, 15 C. P. 613.

Exceeding Jurisdiction. - By agreement between the plaintiffs and defendant, the plaintiffs agreed to draw and deliver certain logs on the ice for defendant on or before the 20th March then next, for which the defendant covenanted to pay so much per log. It was provided that, should the sleighing not hold good for four weeks thereafter, the plaintiffs should be bound only to draw such pro-portion of the logs as the time of sleighing should bear to the four weeks. By a submission under seal, reciting this agreement and that differences existed in respect thereof and of the advances made thereon by defendant to of the advances made thereon by derending to plaintiffs; all such differences were referred to arbitration. The arbitrators awarded that there was due from defendant to plaintiffs, in respect of said agreement, 8866. To an action on this award, defendants pleaded no award; and one of the arbitrators, as a witness for the defence, said the evidence satisfied them that, owing to the snow, the plaintiffs could not proceed with the work, and so notified the defendant, who told them to go on and they should lose nothing; and that on this understanding the arbitrators proceeded, and awarded to the plaintiffs the cost of drawing the logs, thinking they had a right to do so under the last clause of the agreement. No objection was made by defendant or his counsel to the reception of the evidence of such undertaking, or that it was a matter not covered by the reference :-Held, that the arbitrators had exceeded their jurisdiction in awarding money to the plaintiff for work done under the verbal agreement, which was not within the submission: that this amount not being separable from the rest, the award could not be supported; and that such excess of authority afforded a good defence to the action. Tully v. Chamberlain, 31 U. C. R.

Future Compensation.] — In proceedings under 16 Vict. c. 190 to ascertain the amount to be paid for materials for the construction of a road, the arbitrators cannot confer upon the company a prospective right by awarding an amount as a compensation for materials to be taken at a future time. Gibson v. Clephorn, 7 Gr. S3.

The arbitrators awarded damages for materials taken generally, not for the purpose of the road only:—Held, ultra vires. Ib.

Imposing Conditions.] — Defendants gave plaintiff and her husband a bond in £500, conditioned that if plaintiff should survive her husband, they would maintain her in her house during her life, &c. An action brought on this contract was referred. arbitrators awarded that defendants should pay plaintiff £500, on or before the 20th November, 1852, in full of the causes of action in the suit, and of all matters in dispute referred; and further, that the plaintiff should not enforce payment of said £500, provided defendants should respectively give the plaintiff good security on real estate for the payment to her of the following sums, that is to say, setting out certain mortgages to be given by each defendant on or before 1st December, 1852. Plaintiff declared on this in debt, as an award "that the defendants in debt, as an award "that the defendants should pay to the plaintiff £500 on or before the 20th November, 1853." Defendants denied the award as stated; and in another plea set it out and alleged that it was void, as beyond the authority of the arbitrators :- Held, that there was no absolute claim to the money on the 20th November, as stated in the declara-tion, but the right of action was suspended until the 1st December, and would then depend on the execution of the mortgages as directed:—Held, also, that the award was void, as the arbitrators had exceeded their power in giving damages not recoverable in the cause, and in imposing conditions beyond their authority. Hill v. Hill, 11 U. C. R. 262.

Indemnity.]—The submission referred the cause and all matters in difference to A., C., and G., or any two of them. C. and G. made an award reducing the verdict taken, and directed that the plannitif on request should execute a bond in a certain penalty conditioned to indemnify defendant against two suits specified:—Held, that the award of indemnity was authorized. In re Anderson v. Cotton, 2 P. R. 109.

Injury to Land—Retaining Well—Interim Bunnage, —An arbitrator to whom is referred a claim for compensation for injury to land by reason of the lowering of the grade of the adjoining highway by the municipality, has no power to direct the municipal corporation to maintain a retaining wall. The arbitrator has power to include in his award compensation to the landowner for injury to his land during the progress of the work by interference with the means of access thereto, and also the cost of work done to afford him such access. Re Burnett and Town of Durham, 31 O. R. 262.

Interest, I—Under a submission "to determine which of the several items of claim the estator, Mrs. B. is bound as matter of law horses."—Head, that the arbitrator was submission of the condition of the control of estate in the condition of the correctly find the amount due. Armstrong v. Capley, 2 Ch. Ch. 128.

Interest.]—In an action on an award it appeared that the plaintiff in April gave in a statement of his claim, with interest up to that time, at twelve per cent., the usual rate allowed in the dealings between the parties. Time was allowed defendant to prove his defence; and in making their award on the 6th October, the arbitrators added interest at the same rate up to the 1st September, on the sum claimed in April for principal and interest:—Held, that they had power to do this, and to award interest on the amount until paid. Stewart v. Webster, 20 U. C. R. 469.

Interest—Lands Injuriously Affected.]—Compensation for lands injuriously affected in the exercise of municipal powers is in the nature of damages, and interest should not be allowed thereon before the time of the liquidation of the damages by the making of the award. The distinction in this respect between such compensation and compensation for lands taken, or taken and injuriously affected, considered. Judgment below, 29 O. R. 685, reversed. In ve Leak and City of Toronto, 26 A. R. 351, 30 S. C. R. 321.

Majority.]—Where the submission as to some of the questions expressly states that the majority may award, this power, though not repeated throughout, extends to all matters referred upon which the arbitrators cannot agree. Thirkell v. Strachan, 4 U. C. R. 136.

Majority, —Where a submission to arbitration provides that the award thereunder shall be made by three arbitrators, the award to be valid must be made by the three unanimously. Re O'Connor and Fielder, 25 O. R. 568.

Mistake—Second Award.]—The arbitrators, having discovered a mistake in the amount awarded, destroyed their award and executed another. The court set the second award aside. Benson v. Lore, I. U. C. R. 398.

Municipal Act — Special Findings.] — Arbitration on erection of town into city. Making award retrospective and giving time for payment: — Held, authorized. Limiting the continuance of the award, and authorizing a ratable division of expenses instead of settling a sum to be paid:—Held, not authorized. In re County of Middlescx and City of London, 14 U. C. R. 334.

Not Bound by Strict Rules of Law.]—Semble, that upon a general reference at nisi prius, the arbitrators may, as to the amount of the verdict, be governed by matters in favour of defendant which could not have been brought in question at the trial. Also, that where the verdict is intended to be a final settlement between the parties, they may consider matters not embraced within the technical statement of the causes of action on the record, when advanced on the part of the plaintiff. Watson v. Toronto Gas Co., 5 U. C. R. 523.

Not Bound by Strict Rules of Law.]
—An action against a railway company for penning back water, and thus preventing the use of plaintiff's mills, having been referred, the arbitrators awarded £375 damages:
Held, that it could not be assumed from the fact that the annual rental of the plaintiff's mills was only £250, that the damages had been given for more than six months before the suit; and semble, that arbitrators, when not restrained by the submission, are not bound as Judges are in a court of law. Glen v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 2 P. R. 377.

Note to be Given,]—Arbitrators may order that notes be given in satisfaction of the sum awarded. Thirkell v. Strachan, 4 U. C. R. 136.

Note to be Given.]—An award directing that two defendants should give to plaintiff a good indorsed negotiable promissory note for the sum found due;—Held, unauthorized. George v. Smith, 4 C. P. 291.

Such an award means that they shall give

Such an award means that they shall give their own note, negotiable, with an indorser; a note made by one payable to and indorsed by the other, will not suffice. Ib.

Official Arbitrators, | — By a rule of court made on 7th March, 1888, it was ordered that, unless it was otherwise specially or ed that, unless it was otherwise specially or-dered, any matter pending before the official arbitrators when the Exchequer Court Act (50 & 51 Vict. c. 16) came into force that had been heard or partly heard by such ar-bitrators, should be continued before them as official referees and that their report thereon should be made to the court in like manner as if such matter had been referred to them by the court under the 26th section of the Prior to the making of this rule n claim had been referred by the Minister of Railways and Canals to the official arbitrators for investigation and award. This claim, however, was proceeded with and heard fore two of such arbitrators only, and a thereon in favour of the claimant was made by them to the court :- Held, that the hearing of the claim by two of the official arbitrators was not a hearing within the meaning of the rule, and that judgment could not be entered on the report. Rioux v. The Queen, 2 Ex. C. R. 91.

Partnership Accounts—Declaration of Lien. |—Arbitrators upon a reference to settle dispure between parties, found the balance declared in the award that this balance was a lien upon the assets to be paid out of them specifically:—Held, that they had the power to give this direction, and the partner in question had power to sell to satisfy the lien out of the specific property applicable of which he was joint owner. Redick v. Skelton, 18 O. R. 190.

Payment to Stranger,]—C. had sued B. on a contract by which he agreed to build for B. a dam, B. to find certain materials. On a reference of all differences relating to this contract—Held, that the arbitrators might consider chains by B. against C. arising out of the contract; but that a direction to pay money to E. a stranger to the reference, could make the pheld. In re Campbell v. Brown, 2

Public Rights—Joint Award]—Held, by the arbitrators appointed under B. N. A. Act, 1867, s. 142, that as that Act confers powers on the arbitrators appointed thereunder of a public nature, such powers may be exercised by the majority, and a joint award is therefore unnecessary. In re Provinces of Ontario and Quebec and Dominion of Canada, 6 C. L. J. 212.

Questions of Law,]—Where the reference was, "with power to the arbitrator, if either party requires it," to submit questions of law to the court:—Held, enabling only, not compulsory. Kesteven v. Gooderham, 20 U. C. R. 500.

Questions of Law, |—The reference was expressed to be "subject to such points of law as will properly arise on the pleadings and evidence:"—Held, that this rendered it imperative on the arbitrators to state for the court any legal point raised, and to distinguish, if required, the subjects for which they awarded in plaintiff's favour, if any legal question was raised applicable thereto. Ross v. County of Bruce, 21 C. P. 41.

The arbitrators having neglected their duty in this respect, the court refused to refer the matter back to them, and set aside the award. Ross v. County of Bruce, 21 C. P. 548.

Reconsidering Award. — Held, under the facts of this case, that arbitrators acting under the School Act had no power to resume consideration of the matter, and issue a warrant to levy, after having once made the award. VanBuren v. Bull. 19 U. C. R. 633.

Set-off, |—Held, that under the circumstances of this case the arbitrator was justified in allowing as a set-off the judgment of defendant against the plaintiff and another, as against any claim that plaintiff had against defendant. Latta v. Wallbridge, 7 L. J. 207.

Special Act—Damages—Interest.]—Arbitration as to land taken and damages done by water commissioners of Ottawa under 35 Vict. c. 80, s. 4 (O.)—Power of arbitrators to give damages and award interest on compensation money. See Re Collins and Water Commissioners of Ottawa, 42 U. C. R. 378.

Special Agreement-Action Pending to Reform it.]—By a consent judgment in an action between members of a certain pool association for the sale of lubricating oil, it was provided that "all matters which may hereafter come into dispute between the assohereatted in the control of directors relative to the member or members * * relative to the member of relative to the original agreement of association), or any alleged breach or association, or any alleged breach or the made, by the made, by or association, or any angeled breach or non-observance thereof, or of any of the rules or regulations made, or to be made, by the said board thereunder, and all matters of complaint by any member or members against any other member or members in respect of the premises," should be referred to arbitration as therein specified. Acting under the agreement, the board had fixed a sum of three cents per gallon to be paid to the association by the parties thereto. the sale of any lubricating oil. now arose on the motion of one of the members as to whether the three cents per gallon were payable on sales made by one member of the association to another, and whether the rate was payable upon the proportion of distilled petroleum used in making axle grease:

—Held, that these matters were properly —Held, that these matters were properly within the scope of the arbitrator under the above clause in the judgment, though they amounted to a dispute upon the construction of the agreement, and the rules made under it, and it was no objection that in the course of the reference it might be necessary to procure an injunction, which an arbitrator could not grant:—Semble, if it should be established to his satisfaction that the parties ought to be relieved from certain things covered by the agreement, the arbitrator might so relieve them:—Held, also, that the mere fact of an action to reform the agreement having been brought and being pending, did not paralyze the power of the arbitrator. Willesford v. Watson, L. R. H. 4E, 572, followed. Piercy v. Young, 14 Ch. D. 200, commented on, Woodward v. McDonald, 13 O. R. 671.

Special Submission - Costs-Severable Provisions.]—A submission to arbitration that a controversy existed between A. W., J. W., and M. in relation to the amounts due and paid on a certain mortgage made by M. to a loaning company, and as to the proportion of said mortgage paid by the said parties to the company, and submitted this controversy to the arbitrators; and the parties covenanted with each other to observe the award. The arbitrators awarded that M. had paid the company the amount he agreed with A. W. to pay on the mortage, and had overpaid his proportion by $627, in and and overpaid his proportion by 8021, in which sum A. W. was indebted to him; and that A. W. should pay that sum to him on or before the 1st June, 1882; and should also pay the costs of the reference, viz., 835. Nothing was said about J. W .: - Held, that the arbitrators had not exceeded their powers in directing payment by A. W.; (2) that the award was not bad for omitting to mention J. W., this being equivalent to an award that there was nothing due by him :-Held, that the finding as to costs was un-authorized, but was severable from the rest of the award. Whitely v. MacMahon, 32 C. P. 453.

Specific Claims.]—Where there was an agreement to submit to arbitration all controversies between the parties, and the submission provided that, inter alia, a number of specific claims were to be dealt with, and also all things connected with the matter, it was held that a general award of a sum due, accompanied by an affidavit that all the claims had been inquired into, was sufficient. McGreevy v. The Queen, 19 S. C. R. 180.

Stating Case,]—Upon a special case stated by an arbitrator, in an action for converting the machinery, &c., of plaintiff's foundry, the court refused to stay proceedings on condition of defendant restoring the machinery, &c., taken by him, and held to be fixtures; 1. because they considered it not to be a case in which they could properly take that course; and, 2. because submitted merely to obtain their opinion on certain legal questions, they had no power to make such an order. Gooderham v. Denholm, 18 U. C. R. 203, 214.

Stating Case, —When questions of law arise in the course of arbitration proceedings any party thereto may apply to the arbitrator under s. 41 of the Arbitration Act, R. 8. 0. 1897 c. 62, to state a case for the opinion of the court, and in the event of his refusal may apply to the court to compel him to do so. The application may be made before the arbitrator gives a ruling on the questions of law, and the making of an order is in each case a matter of judicial discretion, the order granting or refusing the direction to the arbitrator being subject to appeal. On the merits the judgment below refusing to order the arbitrator to state a case, was affirmed. In re Jenison and Kakabcka Falls Land and Electric Co., 25 A. R. 361.

Time for Payment.]—Where a reference is general, as of a contract and all matters relating to it, arbitrators can name a day for paying the money; but it is different where only a cause is to be decided upon. Addison v. Corbey, 11 U. C. R. 433.

Time for Payment.]—Held, in an action between school trustees and teacher, that the arbitrators exceeded their powers in awarding payment within thirty days. VanBuren v. Bull. 19 U. C. R. 633.

Time for Payment—Severable Provision.]—The sum awarded was directed to be paid forthwith, whereas the statute under which the reference was made allowed a year from the award, or from any rule of court ordering payment:—Held, that this part of the award, which was clearly bad, might be separated from the rest. In re City of Toronto v. Leak, 23 U. C. R. 223.

Time for Payment—Costs — Secrable Prorisions.)—Where the reference was only for the purpose of ascertaining and awarding the damages sustained by the plaintiff by a fire negligently set by the defendant, and the defendant agreed to pay the amount awarded; and it was provided that the costs of the arbitrators and award, &c., should be paid by the party entitled thereto, in whose favour the award should be made:—Held, that the arbitrators had no power to give a month for payment of the sum awarded, or to direct that the defendant should pay the costs, but that the self-endant should pay the costs, but that the award, and might be rejected. In such a case the proper course is to discharge generally a rule to set aside the award, not to make it absolute in part. Re Eglecton and Taylor, 45 U. C. R. 4.79.

Time for Payment-Entry of Satisfaction. | —G. recovered a judgment against M. and C., upon a note made by them. One J. was also said to have been interested with them, and liable for the debt it represented, though not actually a party to it. It was also said that he was in effect a partner with G. in the transaction. M. made large payments on the judgment, but C. paid nothing. Upon a reference of certain matters in dispute between J. and M., it was left to the arbitrator, amongst other things, to determine whether or not M. or J., or which of them, was liable, or to what extent, in respect of the judgment or the promissory note whereon the judgment was recovered, and to make any orders which the arbitrators should think proper to settle the liabilities of said parties in respect thereof. The arbitrators awarded that J., as between him and M., was liable to pay all the balance of money still unpaid upon the judgment, and that J. should pay and satisfy the same within one calendar month, and should cause the said judgment and writs of execution to be satisfied and discharged, and satisfaction to satisfied and descharged, and satisfaction to be entered on the roll of the said judgment:—
Held, that the latter part of the award (which was objected to) was authorized. In re McLean v. Jones, 2 C. L. J. 206.

Two Awards.]—Action against a municipal corporation upon an award in favour of the plaintiff for land taken from him for a road. It appeared that the plaintiff named one arbitrator, H., and the reeve another,

S.; and they being unable to agree upon a third, the county Judge appointed one B. B. and H. on the 30th June signed the award sned on, giving £40 to the plaintiff. Afterwards the council called another meeting of the arbitrators, when all three attended, and B. and S. afterwards executed another instrument as their award, by which the plaintiff was to have only £3 10s.;—Held, that the first award was good, and the plaintiff entitled to recover upon it: that under 16 Vict. c. 181, s. 33, it was sufficiently published when it was signed by the arbitrators; that defendants having appointed an arbitrator, it was unnecessary to prove any by-law for opening the road; that an action was clearly maintainable upon such an award; and that it was upon a submission to three arbitrators while two only executed the award, for the statute authorizes two to act. Harptel v. Township of Portland, 17 U. C. R. 455.

3. Proceedings Before.

Ex Parte Proceedings.] — Held, that upon the facts in the case, the arbitrator was justified in proceeding ex parte. Proctor v. Jarvis, 15 U. C. R. 187.

Ex Parte Proceedings-Notice Required -Wilful Absence.]-Before an arbitrator proceeds ex parte, he should satisfy himself by proper evidence that necessary notice of appointment has been served, so as to the appointment has been served so accepted the party notified to appear, and it clearly should be shewn that the absence of the party notified is wilful; nor should be proceed ex parte, unless the notice conveys information that ex parte proceedings will be taken if the party served does not attend, nor if a reasonable excuse is given for such nonattendance. The party prosecuting the arbitration ought to take care that all proper notices are served on the opposite party, and should be able to shew, if he desire to proceed ex parte, that the other party has been pro-perly notified, and that he wilfully absents party, therefore, who had not A hinself. A party, incretore, who had fulfilled his duty in this respect, was ordered to pay costs, and the case was referred back. In re Potter v. Krupp, 5 P. R. 197.

Ex Parte Proceedings — Notice Required.]—In an arbitration on an order made at nist prius, the plaintiff's attorney obtained an appointment from the arbitrator for the 17th November, 1875, and sent a notice to plaintiff with subpeans for his witnesses, but it was not received in time by the plaintiff, so that his witnesses who lived at a distance could not attend, and the attorney obtained an adjournment to the afternoon of the second day, when he still was not ready. The defendant, who was there with his witnesses brought from a considerable distance, objected to any further adjournment except on payment of costs, which plaintiff's attorney refused. The attorney refused to remain and hear defendant's evidence, though informed that the arbitration would be proceeded with, and the witnesses for the defence were then examined in his absence. Subsequently an opportunity was offered him of putting in his own evidence, and the award delayed a month for that purpose, but he did nothing, and the award was then made without his evidence: —Held, that before proceeding ex parte, the proper course is to give formal notice that the arbitration will proceed peremptorily at a time named, and as this was not done here the award was set aside, but only on payment of all costs by plaintiff. Ward v. Mc-Alpine, 25 C. P. 119.

Majority—Notice of Meeting—Consent.]
—When parties submit matters in difference to arbitrators to be decided by them or any two of them, all the arbitrators must be notified of their appointment and of the time of sitting. In re McCluny and Mortley, 6 L. J. 92.

If one of three arbitrators refuse to act the remaining two may proceed without him at any stage. Ib.

If two of the arbitrators award by consent in the absence of the third arbitrator, neither of the litigants can object afterwards. Ib.

Notice of Meeting.]—Where a cause has been referred, notice of the sitting of the arbitrators must be given to the attorney in the cause, not the party. Allan v. Brown, Tay. 335.

4. Third Arbitrator and Umpire.

Appointment.] — Appointment of third arbitrator by Judge under C. L. P. Act, on a reference to be held "in the usual manner." See Rowe v. Colton, 3 L. J. 116.

Appointment.]—Under a submission by four persons to two arbitrators, "and should they not agree, to choose an umpire:"—Held, that the umpire should have been appointed by the parties, not by the arbitrators. O'Dougherty v. Fretwell, 11 U. C. R. 65.

Appointment. — The provisions of a submission to arbitration in reference to the appointment of a third arbitrator must be strictly followed. Where, therefore, a submission provided that the third arbitrator should be appointed by writing indorsed thereon under the hands of the arbitrators therein named and the appointment was not so indorsed, the award was held invalid. Bruce v. Loutit, 21 A. R. 100.

Appointment Not in Writing.]—Appointment of umpire need not be in writing, if the reference does not in terms require it. Ray v. Durand, 1 C. L. Ch. 27.

Appointment Not in Writing.]—A submission was to K. and M., and sucn person as they should appoint. The affidavits were contradictory as to the fact of a verbal appointment of C., and there was no appointment in writing proved; but it was sworn that he was chosen by defendant, as one of two proposed by plaintiff, and that he sat with the others and voted in defendant's presence without objection. The court refused to interfere against an award by C. and K. Osborne v. Wright, 12 U. C. R. 65.

Form of Submission—Third Arbitrator not Executing Award.]—To an action for wrongful dismissal, and on the common counts, defendants pleaded an award, by which all matters in dispute between the parties had been settled. The submission was to S. and N., and such third person as "the said arbitrators" should appoint, "so that the said arbitrators or umpire" make his or their award * by &c., or such further day as "the arbitrators, or any two of them," might enlarge to. Before entering upon their duties, S. and N. appointed E. as third arbitrator, and the award was executed by S. and E. only, but professed, in the body of it, to be the award of the three:—Held, that E. was a third arbitrator, not an umpire; that the word 'umpire,' in the submission, must be rejected as surplusage; and the award was invalid, not having been made by all three arbitrators. Willson v. York, 46 U. C. R. 289.

Must Hear Evidence,]—After the arbitrators and umpire had heard the plaintiff's witnesses, the defendants refused to give their evidence, and their arbitrator would not concur in the award. The umpire, in consequence, gave notice to defendants to produce their witnesses, but the time which he gave was too short, and he awarded on the evidence already heard. The court set the award aside, Proudfoot v. Trotter, 6 O. S. 163.

Must Hear Evidence and Arguments. —Where a case is referred to the award of two persons, and in case of disagreement to the decision of a third, either as an umpire or as a third arbitrator, the parties have the right to insist that such third person shall have before him the evidence and witnesses produced before the two arbitrators, as well as the right to appear and state their case to such third arbitrator or umpire, before a binding award can be made. In re Soules v. Morton, 4 P. R. 249.

Opinion—Signing Award.]—Where arbitrators disagree in some items, and during the investigation call in an umpire to give his opinion thereon, and adopt it as their own, he need not sign the award. In re Cayley and McMullen, 3 U. C. R. 124.

Prior Disagreement.]—Where under a submission it was provided that arbitrators should appoint an umpire in case of disagreement, their appointing such an umpire was held, on motion to make the award a rule of court, sufficient evidence of their having disagreed, without any allegation of that fact on affidavit. White v. Kirby, 2 Ch. Ch. 452.

Prior Judgment of Two Arbitrators Necessary.]—The reference was to two arbitrators, with power for them to appoint an unpire, who was to make an award if the pointed seed, an unpire was accordingly appointed to the pointed seed of the prior of two arbitrators on the matters in difference, as a condition precedent to the umpire's authority coming into force, as well as their free judgment in the appointment of the unpire; and that one of the arbitrators holding private conferences with one of the parties was sufficient to avoid the award of the unpire. In re Lauxon v. Hutchisson, 19 Gr. S4.

Special Bond.]—Construction of submission bond, as to whether the umpire therein named had the power simply to report upon the state of certain premises, or, further than this, to estimate their value and make an award thereupon. McGill v. Proudfoot, 4 U. C. R. 40.

Time for Appointing—Delegation of Authority to Appoint.]—One of the stipu-lations in a contract between the plaintiff and defendant companies was, that if any dispute arose between them it should be referred to arbitration, each of the parties to name an arbitrator, and the two within ten days after the appointment of the one last named, to appoint an umpire; but if either party should neglect or refuse to appoint an arbi trator for the space of ten days after being requested so to do, or should appoint an arbi-trator who should refuse or neglect to act trator who should refuse or negact to act as such, then the arbitrator of the party making such request, should appoint an arbitrator on behalf of the other party. A notice by the defendant company requiring the plaintiff company to appoint an arbitrator was duly served on the 10th June, on the agent of the plaintiff company in New York, and on the 19th the plaintiff company, by cablegram from London, named one C. M. D., of New York, as their arbitrator. On the 28th of the same month S., the arbitrator of the defendant company, wrote to C. M. D. requiring him to join in the naming of an umpire, but he answered that he was about to leave the city, and would return ou the 30th; that having been only advised by cable of his appointment and that his commission would be mailed to him, he could not, until the 30th C. M. D. returned to his office, and then wrote to S. expressing his readiness to act, and at the same time confirmed a nominact, and at the same time confirmed a nomin-ation made by his partners, during his absence, of an umpire:—Held, affirming the decision in 28 Gr. 648, (1) that the facts did not establish any refusal or neglect on the part of C M. D. to act as arbitrator, such as would justify 8, in naming an arbitrator in his stead: (2) that the maning by the arbi-ni his stead: (2) that the maning by the arbitrators of an umpire was not such an act as required C. M. D. to take part in within ten days from his appointment, or in default that his appointment should be vacated, and S, have the right to name a substitute; (3) (28 Gr. 648) that the naming, by the arbitrators, of an umpire was a judicial act which could not legally be performed by the partners of one of the arbitrators, and his subsequent confirmation thereof was ineffectual. Direct United States Cable Co. (Limited) v. Dominion Telegraph Co. of Canada, S.A. R. 416; S. C., sub nom. Direct Cable Co. v. Dominion Telegraph Co., 28 Gr. 648.

Time for Making Award.)—An award of umpirage is valid, though made before the time limited for the award of the arbitrators, if they disagree and do not make an award afterwards. Ray v. Durand, 1 P. R. 27.

Umpire not Chosen.]—Where a submission is to two, and such third person as they shall choose before 'proceeding, an award by the two only, the third not having acted, is bad. Sloan v. Halden, 14 U. C. R. 495.

5. Witnesses and Evidence.

Compelling Attendance.] — An order compelling attendance of witnesses will be granted on an ex parte application, upon affidayit that the cause has been duly referred: that the arbitrator has appointed a day for proceeding; and that certain parties (giving their respective places of residence) are necessary and material witnesses for the party applying. Gallena v. Cotton, 3 L. J. 47; Carrall v. Butl, 3 L. J. 12.

Examination on Oath—Acquiescence.]
—Held, that under R. S. O. 1877 c. 50, s. 224, the witnesses on an arbitration must be examined upon oath, unless there is a positive agreement or consent to the contrary. Such consent or agreement may be shewn dehors the submission, and in this case, upon the affidavits filed, it was held to be sufficiently made out; but, semble, that it cannot be inferred from the absence of objection or mere acquiescence. In re Rushbrook and Starr, 46 U. C. R. 73.

Examination on Oath—Cross-examination.]—Where an arbitrator or assessor to whom a claim is referred by the Crown for report is empowered to take oral evidence, he cannot proceed to take such evidence without swearing the witnesses and giving each party an opportunity to cross-examine them. Pouliot v, The Queen, 1 Ex. C. R. 313.

Foreign Commission.]—A Judge of the court of appeal has no power to order the issue of a commission to take evidence abroad for use upon a compulsory arbitration pending before an arbitrator named by a Judge of that court, under s. 487 (1) of the Municipal Act, 55 Vict, c. 42 (O.) Such an arbitration is not a "reference by rule, order, or submission," within the meaning of s. 49 of the Act respecting Arbitrations and References, R. 8. O. 1887 c. 53; nor, even if it were a "matter" within the meaning of Rule 463, would a Judge of the court of appeal baxe any jurisdiction, by reason of his having appointed the arbitrator or otherwise. And semble, distinguishing Re Mysore West Gold Mining Co., 37 W. R. 794, it is not such a "matter," Re Macpherson and City of Tornoto, 16 P. R. 230.

Personal Knowledge.]—In an arbitration under C. S. U. C. c. 54, the arbitrators did not take or file any oral or documentary evidence under s. 358, s.-s. 13, but relied upon the knowledge which two of them had of the position of the municipalities towards each other with relation to money matters, and obtained the specific sums on which their award was based from the books of the county treasurer. These sums were shewn to the warden at the last meeting of the arbitrators, and their correctness was not disputed:—Held, sufficient. In re United Counties of Northumberland and Durham and Town of Coboury, 20 U. C. R. 283.

Production of Documents.]—On an application under 7 Will. IV. c. 3, s. 30, for an order on witnesses to produce documents before an arbitrator, it must be shewn that they are such as witnesses would be compelled to produce at a trial. Carrall v. Ball, 3 L. J. 122.

View of Premises—Opinion Evidence— Potential Value—Interest.]— A municipal corporation expropriated land for a road, under a by-law which described the land, and provided "that the same is hereby taken and expropriated for and established and confirmed as a public highway or drive," pu suant to which the corporation took posse Upon appeal from an award by which sion. the land-owners were allowed $5,505 as pensation for the land taken, and $10,095 for other lands injuriously affected, and interest on both sums from the date of the by-law:-Held, that where an arbitrator has viewed the premises, but has not proceeded upon his view, the court should not give any greater effect to his findings than if he had not taken a view. 2. As to the weight of evidence: there was ample testimony to warrant the arbitrator, if he gave credit to it, in his findings; and it was not for the court to say that he should have preferred the evidence of one set of witnesses to that of the other, in a matter especially where so much depends upon the opinions of persons conversant with the value of land, based upon their knowledge of actual transactions. 3. That the arbitrator was justified in taking into account the potential value of the property when improved, after allowing for the cost of improving it, as atter anowing for the cost of improving it, as a means of arriving at its actual value. Rip-ley v. Great Northern R. W. Co., L. R. 10 Ch. 435; Widder v. Buffalo and Lake Huron R. W. Co., 27 U. C. R. 425; and Boom Co. v. Patterson, 98 U. S. 403, followed. 4. That the whole sum allowed must be taken upon the face of the award to have been allowed as purchase money of the land taken. James v. Ontario and Quebec R. W. Co., 12 O. R. 624, 15 A. R. I. specially referred to. 5. That the land must, from the date of the passing of the by-law, be deemed to have been "taken" by the city corporation, and international control of the companion of the passing of the properties of the companion of the passing of the by-law, be deemed to have been "taken" by the city corporation, and international control of the passing upon the face of the award to have been Taken by the city corporation, and intersets was payable on the whole sum from that date. Rhys v. Dare Valley R. W. Co., L. R. 19 Eq. 93, and In re Shaw and Birmingham, 27 Ch. D. 614, followed. 6, That the arbitrator had jurisdiction to award interest. Re Macpherson and City of Toronto, 26 O. R. 558.

Witness Out of Jurisdiction.]—Upon a submission to arbitration being made an order of court, a suit is pending within the meaning of C. S. C. c. 79, s. 4, so as to enable the superior courts to issue process to compel the attendance of witnesses resident out of their jurisdiction. Elliott v. Queen City Assurance Co., 6 P. R. 30.

III. AWARD.

1. Construction of.

Annal Payment.]—Differences having arisen about defendant's going on the plaintiff's land to embank a stream on which defendant had a mill, defendant was directed to pay plaintiff £10 a year, so long as he should hold for his own use the premises on which he had such occasion to go, and which the plaintiff was directed to convey to him:—Held, that the payment was to be every year, as long as defendant's interest continued, although he might not have occasion to go on the plaintiff's land. Pickle v. Perrin, 1 U. C. R. 387.

Award Alone to be Looked At.]—The meaning of arbitrators, when an award is made, is not to be gathered from affidavits, or from any other source than the award itself. Keep v. Hammond, 9 L. J. 157; Smith v. Forbes, S L. J. 72.

Certainty, — When an award between the Great Western R. W. Co. and a person through whose lands the road passes awards a sum for damages, and on payment for the land taken directs a conveyance, the award will not be set aside for not setting out the land to be conveyed by metes and bounds:—Semble, that a conveyance is not necessary. Great Western R. W. Co. v. Rolph, 1 P. K. 50.

Certainty, |-All matters in difference between the plaintiffs and defendant having been referred, the award was that the defendant should stand fully acquitted and discharged of and from all such matters: —Held, certain, final, and conclusive. Ryan v. Pomron. 1 P. R. 59.

An award that the plaintiffs have no cause of action against defendant:—Held, sufficient, as meaning that at the time of submission they had no cause of action. Ib.

Certainty.]—All differences in the suit were referred; costs of the suit, reference, and award to abide the event of the award. The arbitrators, reciting in their award that they had heard the proofs concerning the premises, awarded thereupon concerning the same, that all proceedings in the cause should cease, and that defendant should pay to the plaintiff £33 12s. 1d., in full of all demands in the cause:—Held, that there was a sufficient determination in the cause, and a reasonable inference of a finding on each issue. Mullen v. Martin, 1 P. R. 191.

Certainty, |—An award respecting differences between plaintiff and defendants as to the diversion of a watercourse by defendants, directed that the defendants should turn the stream so that the plaintiff should have the same use of the water as he formerly had for the period of five years from the award, and that the plaintiff should pay defendants 5s. a year during that period:—Held, uncertain, and not final or conclusive. Bowen v. Samis, 2 P. R. 76.

Certainty, — Under the special circumstances of this case:—Held, that the award was bad: 1. For want of a finality as to chancery suit referred: for, by dismissing the bill as to W, only, the suit was left still undisposed of as to costs and otherwise as hetween the plaintiffs and the other defendants. 2. Because, as the sureties were directed to pay a large proportion of a gross sum. including accounts not arising under the lease, it was not clear that they were not declared liable for chaims for which they could not be held responsible. In re Wheeler v. Murphy, 2 P. R. 32.

Certainty.]—The submission recited an nection by plaintiff against defendant, and referred all matters and differences for damages between the parties; directing that "they were to go by the leases which will be produced, and also to take into consideration the wheat on the ground." The award gave plaintiff a sum for damages, "to be paid out of the amount awarded on the wheat hereinafter mentioned," and directed that the plaintiff should pay defendants "for a certain amount of wheat now in the grounds of lots 13 and 14, 2nd concession east, in the township of Toronto, to be paid as follows: viz., for the wheat that now is growing in summer fallow, to be paid for at the rate of £4 10s. per acre, and for wheat that is now growing in summer in low, and pea stubble, to be paid for at the rate of $\mathcal{E}$3 per acre." It appeared that the land had been leased by the plaintiff to defendants for six years from the 1st April, 1850:—Held, that, the award sufficiently disposed of the matters referred, and that it was unnecessary to specify the number of acres of wheat, the quantity not appearing to have been the matter in dispute, but the price. In re Montgomery and Moore, 2 P. R. 98.

Certainty.]—Declaration and award as to payment of money by instalments:—Held, sufficiently certain. Watson v. Sutherland, 1 U. C. R. 229.

Certainty, |—Where the arbitrators had power to award upon conveyances to be made between the parties, the amount of rent to the parties, the amount of rent to for:—Held, that am award directing "all necessary deeds for granting," &c., "and for securing payment of the rent to be executed," without saying what kind of conveyances, was bad. Beatty v. McIntosh, 4 U. C. R. 250.

Certainty,]—Declaration on the common counts. Pleas, non-assumpsit, payment, and set off. A verdict was taken for plantiff, subject to the award of W. H. "upon all matters in difference between them, as well in this suit as all other matters up to the commencement of this suit;" costs to abide the event. The arbitrator awarded that the plaintiff had good cause of action against the defendant in the said cause, and on the matter so submitted, and was entitled to a verdict therein; and assessed the damages to be paid by defendant to the plaintiff in said cause at £43 Ss.;—Held, that the award was good; that it disposed by necessary inference of all the issues in the cause, and was not uncertain. Charles v. Carroll, 9 U. C. R. 357.

Certainty. |—An award, after directing a certain sum to be paid to defendant for his interest in land, added: "We have taken it for granted in making this award, that the said C. H. shall have the right to cross the railway track from one part of his property to another: —Held, not sufficiently definite or certain. Great Western R. W. Co. v. Hunt, 12 U. C. R. 124.

Certainty.]—Where it is essential to determine whether a partnership was an ordinary one or not, an award not clearly deciding it is void for uncertainty. Jekyll v. Wade, S Gr. 363.

Certainty, 1—Two partners (plaintiff and defendant) having dissolved partnership, referred all disputes to three persons named. The award directed a certain sum to be paid by defendant to plaintiff, and then added that the same was "to be secured by such good security as may be requisite to save the said plaintiff harmless;"—Held, sufficiently final. Held, also, that the award directing that defendant should pay all debts due by the partnership was sufficiently certain, without determining the amount. McLean v. Kezar, 3 C. P. 444.

Certainty.]—Held, upon a reference of all matters in dispute between two parties, that an award directing the delivery of a certain promissory note, (which was not in dispute in this action, but was sued upon in the Queen's Bench,) and upon such delivery ordering releases between the parties, and thereby, as was contended, leaving the note unsettled, was not void. Lund v. Smith, 10 C. P. 443.

Certainty.]—Held, upon the award set out in this case, that the replevin suit and the right to the possession of the goods in question therein and of the other goods, were clearly and finally disposed of. Stinson v. Martin, 22 U. C. R. 154.

Certainty.]—A dispute arose between the orthorn R. W. Co. and the corporation of Northern R. Barrie, as to the construction of a branch line into the town, and it was agreed by both parties that a bill relating thereto, which was before parliament then in session, should be withdrawn, and all differences connected with the claim of the town against the company be referred to one H. The arbitrator awardthe ciaim of the town against are company be referred to one H. The arbitrator award-ed that there was in 1853 a valid agreement by the company with the town to construct this line, provided that suitable land should be procured by the town; that such land was so procured, but that the line had not been constructed; that the claim of the town to have such agreement performed still subsisted, "and if not performed their right to compensation in lieu thereof ought to be awarded." He then awarded as compensation for the non-performance, and in full satisfaction of said claim, that the company should pay to the corporation at a day and place named £5,000, and should, when requested by the town, convey to them in fee all the lands mentioned in a certain indenture made by one B. to the company; and should further, when so requested, release all claims in respect of the land and right of way conveyed to them by the several parties over whose lands the said branch line was to pass. On motion to set aside this award for defects apparent on the face of it:—Held, that it was not uncertain as to whether the agreement had been carried out, and whether the company had an option to pay the £5,000 or construct the branch line, but sufficiently shewed that it had not been performed, and that no such option was intended; that the direction as to the was intended; that the direction as to the conveyance and release was authorized, and the latter not objectionable for omitting to state to whom it was to be made: and that as to the amount, if, as contended, the corporation could claim no damages beyond what they had expended in procuring the land, &c., it should be assumed no more was given. In re Town of Barrie v. Northern R. W. Co., 22 U. C. R. 25.

Certainty.]—The award in this case for the purchase money of land taken for a railway was held had for uncertainty, in not stating the respective persons to whom the money should be paid, and the respective sums. Mitchell v. Great Western R. W. Co., 38 U. C. R. 471.

Damages—Finality.]—An action against a railway company for penning back water, and thus preventing the use of the plaintiff's mills, was referred, with power to the arbitrators to determine the damages already sustained, and to direct how the channel should be formed by the defendants, or fix a sum to be paid in lieu thereof at defendants' ontion, and a time within which to choose. They awarded £375 for such damages, and directed that within three months from the 1st July, 1858, defendants should construct a channel of specified size, or in lieu thereof should pay the plaintiff 8500 on or before the lst August, 1858;—Held, I. That it could not be assumed from the fact that the annual rental of the plaintiff's mills was only £250, that the damages had been given for more than six months before the commencement of the suit; and, semble, that this could form no objection, for that arbitrators, when not restrained by the submission, are not bound as Judges are in a court of law. 2. That the award in other respects was sufficiently certain and final, Glen v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 2 P. R. 377.

Delegation of Powers, — All differences concerning the renting of a farm by defendant to plaintiff and all other matters in dispute were referred to arbitrators, who awarded a division of certain crops and stock specified; and in order that an equal division should be made, they ordered that the defendant and plaintiff should select two disinterested persons from the neighbouring farmers, whose decision should be final: — Held, that the award was bad for the delegation to third parties, and for uncertainty. Harrington v. Edison, 11 U. C. R. 114.

Direction for Payment.]—An award found that on 1st September, 1860, defendant was indebted to plaintiff in 52,249, and ordered him to pay it accordingly, with interest half-yearly until paid. Quare, as to the intention and effect of this direction. Stewart v. Webster, 20 U. C. R. 439.

Fence Viewers. — The plaintiff and defendant occupying adjoining lots, having disputed as to the drainage of surface water, referred the question to fence viewers, who awarded that defendant should open a ditch from the line fence between himself and defendant, through the plaintiff's farm, of sufficient depth to carry off the water then in the ditch opened by defendant, about twenty rods in length, and that the plaintiff should make and keep open this same portion of ditch, commencing at the line fence, and of sufficient length, width, and fall to carry off the water; to be two and a-half feet deep at the line fence; said ditch to be made before the last October, 1865:—Held, following Murray, v. Dawson, 17 C. P. 588, that the award was bad, for not sufficiently defining the point of commencement and course and position of the ditch. Dawson v. Murray, 29 U. C. R. 4644.

Finality.] — Where certain matters between A. and B. were referred, and also all costs of suits by either party, civil our iminal, and the award was that B. should up a large sum to A., and also all costs of suits: — Held, sufficiently final, without stating that the suits should cease; and the award was upheld, though the court were strongly impressed against the justice of it. Ducat v. Green, 4 O. S. 110.

Finality.]—Where a verdict was taken for 1s. damages, subject to an award, and the award did not in any manner dispose of the verdict or cause:—Held, not final, and bad. Beatty v. McIntosh, 4 U. C. R. 259.

Finality.]—Arbitrators appointed to determine the value of land required for the railway, and the damages the owner might sustain thereby, awarded that the company should pay £50 per acre for the land, £31 5s. for damages to the said land, and £13 15s. for other damages. It was admitted that damages to other land were claimed at the arbitration:—Held, that the award was bad, not being final on the matters submitted. In re Great Western R. W. Co, v. Laderonte, 1 P. R. 23.

Finality. |- Where the reference was of matters in difference and actions between the parties, costs of the reference and award and of said actions to be in the discretion of the arbitrators, and power was given to the arbitrators to order and determine what they should think fit to be done by either of the parties respecting the matters referred; and the referees ordered, among other things, that certain sum should be paid and accepted " in full satisfaction and discharge of all the said actions and matters in difference; directing that no further proceedings should be taken in the suits:—Held, good, for it put an end to the actions, so that it was unnecessary to award upon the several issues, or find specifically upon the subject of costs. In re Brown and Overholt, 2 P. R. 9.

Finality. —On a reference of disputes as to the title to a lot of land:—Semble, that an award of $400, "in full consideration and discharge of all plaintiff's claims to and against the land," shewed that the arbitrators had decided that plaintiff had no further title to the land, and that it belonged to defendant. Bond v. Bond, 15 C. P. 613.

Finality, |—Assumpsit. Pleas, general issue, and set-off. A verdict was taken for the plaintiff, subject to a reference; and the arbitrators awarded, "that at the time of the commencement of the action, or at any time afterwards, the plaintiff had not any cause of action whatever against the defendant," and directed a verdict for defendant for £20 10s. 1d.—Held, that both the issues were sufficiently disposed of. Townscud v. Morton, 2 U. C. R. 100.

Finality.]—Remarks upon the inconvenience and loss occasioned by the neglect of arbitrators to dispose finally of the matters referred to them. Jones v. Hewson, 2 C. L. J. 107.

Finality. — Held, upon the award set out in this case, that the replevin suit was clearly and finally disposed of. Stinson v. Martin, 22 U. C. R. 154.

Finality. |—By a submission, after reciting that differences existed between the parties as to the disposition to be made by P. of certain funds collected by him from the tenants of certain lands, and that they had agreed to refer the same to S., the parties covenanted to abide by his award "of and concerning the premises aforesaid, or anything in any manner relating thereto." It appeared that one D. had conveyed to P., with full covenants, three undivided fifths of a certain lot, of which it afterwards turned out that he owned only one-lifth, and that P. had collected rents from the tenants of D. on the other lands, for the purpose, as he alleged, of repaying himself what he had paid D. for the two-fifths. The arbitrator found that the funds in P.'s hands were collected by him for that purpose, and awarded that he should retain for himself five per cent, on the sums collected, and should out of the balance repay himself two-thirds of the purchase money paid by him:—Held, that the award embraced all matters submitted: that there was no necessity and no power to direct a reconveyance of the two-fifths; and that it was sufficiently certain without specifying the amount to be repaid. In re Campbell, 44 U. C. R. 218.

Future Damages.] — Where arbitrators, to whom disputes arising from the overflowing of three acres of the plaintiff's land by water thrown back by defendant's mill were referred, awarded damages to the plaintiff for the injury, and that defendants should have a full fall of nine feet, and no more, for their mill-dam, provided that the water on the plaintiff's land was not raised thereby; and the defendants raised their dam to nine feet, and overflowed five acres more of the plaintiff's land:—Held, that the award did not prevent his recovery of compensation for such further injury. Vasler v. Ransom, 5 G. S. 513.

Inconsistent Amounts.]—An award for a certain sum, and that a verdict shall be entered for the said sum, naming a larger sum, is good for the smaller one. Charles v. Hickson, T. T. 34 Vict.

Interest.]—Where an award fixes no day for payment, a party suing on it, is not, as of right, entitled to interest. Bentley v. West, 4 U. C. R. 98, Issues not Disposed of.]—Where a cause with several issues joined, is referred, with costs to abide the event, and the arbitrators award a certain sum to the plaintiff, without saying anything about the issues, which are not necessarily from their nature determined by the award in favour of the plaintiff, the award is bad. Bernard v. Strachan, 2 U. C. R. 128.

Issues not Disposed of.]—Where in trespass to personal property, and several pleas pleaded, a verdict was taken, subject to a reference, and the award determined the cause in favour of the plaintiff, and reduced the verdict to £7 10s., the court refused to set aside the judgment on the award, on the ground that the award was void for not disposing of the issues. Wood v. Moodic, 3 U. C. R. 79.

Issues not Disposed of.]—Where a cause was referred at mis prius, under a rule of reference providing, "that the costs of the said cause shall be disposed of as follows; the costs on demurrer to be subject to the judgment of the court on the issues in law, upon which the arbitrators are to assess the damages sustained by the plaintiff, and the costs on the issues in fact and the costs on the issues in fact and the costs on the said reference shall be in the discretion of the said arbitrators," &c.; and the award said nothing respecting the issues in law, and no damages were assessed thereupon:—Held, good. Masccar v. Chambers, 3 U. C. R. 186.

Lump Sum.)—All matters in difference in this cause, and on the building agreement between plaintiff and defendant, were referred, costs of the cause and of the reference to abide the event. The award, after disposing of the different issues in the plaintiff's favour, assessed his damages on account of the non-performance by the de-fendant of the promises in the safd declaration mentioned, and on account of the matters in difference on the building agreement between the parties, over and above the plain-lists costs and charges, to the sum of £52 16s. 74gd:"—Held. I. no objection to the award right: Held, I, no objection to the award that a gross sum was given, without saying how much for non-performance of the promises declared on, and how much for the difference on the building agreement; 2, that it was unnecessary to determine what damages the defendant was entitled to on the building agreement, or the amount of extra work. Janes v. Reid, 1 P. R. 247.

Lump Sum. | — Where several parties jointly submit their claims, the award is final, though it does not distinguish the sum each one is to receive, McGill v. Proudfoot, 4 U. C. R. 40.

Lump Sum. |- The plaintiff sued defendants in case for certain injuries, specifically set forth in the declaration. The cause was referred, and a verdict taken for £1,000, sub to the award. By the reference, the trators had power "to take into conarbitrators had power sideration the various offers made by defen dants, and finally to settle and dispose of all the matters in difference, awarding, if they should think fit, the payment of an entire sum in full satisfaction of all past and future demands," &c. Upon this the arbitrators declared that, having taken into consideration the matters and things which they were empowered by the submission to consider, they increased the verdict to £1.287 10s., with costs to £46 10s., and they concluded the award thus: "And the said sums so to be paid as aforesaid, &c., we do award, &c., be, and the same are for all purposes to be taken and the same are for all purposes to be taken in full satisfaction of all past and future demands of the plaintiff against the said defendants, for or in respect of the subject matter or subject matters of the said cause, and all and every part thereof." The defendants moved to set aside the award, objecting—1. That the arbitrators, after hear ing evidence (as stated in affidavits filed), of other injuries than those mentioned in the declaration, did not make their award "of all matters in difference," as submitted by the matters in difference," as submitted by the reference, but confined it to the subject matter issuing out of the matter issuing out of the cause of action in 2. Because they did not distinguish in their award the sum allowed in the cause, from the sum allowed for the other cause, from the sum anowed for the other matters in difference:—Held, award good under the submission. Watson v. Toronto Gas Light and Water Co., 5 U. C. R. 523.

Public Rights.]-In dealing with awards made under 9 Vict. c. 37, and 10 & 11 Vict. c. 24, the court will be governed by the ordinary rules of law as applicable to awards between party and party. Commissioner of Public Works v. Daly, 6 U. C. R.

Question not Dealt With.]-C. had sued B, on a contract by which he agreed to build B, a dam—B, to find certain materials, Afterwards they entered into an agreement, reciting that differences had arisen between them in reference to this contract, and referring the same: Held, that the submission authorized the arbitrators to consider claims by B. against C. arising out of the p-4.

agreement; that the omission to dispose of the suit by the award was no objection, as it was not mentioned in the reference nor shewn to have been brought before the arbitrators; and that the award was good, except as to a direction to pay money to E., a stranger to the reference. In re Campbell v. Brown, 2 P. R. 291.

Question not Dealt With.]—Award held bad for failing to give any directions about the action. or the costs of it. Roddy v. Lester, 14 U. C. R. 259.

Question not Dealt With. |-Semble, that the award pleaded in this case was void for not disposing of all the points submitted in relation to the note sued on. Elliott, 1 C. P. 242.

Questions not Dealt With Separately.]—Upon a general reference to arbitrators of all matters in dispute between two parties:—Held, not necessary that the award should distinguish between the matters in dispute in the cause, upon which the reference is made, and general matters between the parties referring. Lund v. Smith, 10 C. P. 443.

Severable Provisions.]-Although the general principle is, that an award may be good in part and bad in part; still, where arbitrators found a sum due to a creditor, and directed the debtor to pay and the creditor to receive it in a certain specified manner, the creditor was not allowed to adopt the award in so far as it found the sum due, and reject that portion of it directing the mode of payment. Dalton v. McNider, 5 Gr. 501.

Special Award-Pleading. |-Held. under the special terms of the award in this case, that defendants were bound to pay monthly for the expense of a new wheel in a mill, in the same manner as for the other repairs; that the plaintiff had the right to judge of the necessity therefor; and that claring upon the award it was sufficient to varing upon the award it was summent to aver that it was deemed necessary, and that the plaintiff proceeded to put it in, as by the award he might do. Abbott v. Skinner, 20 U. C. R. 414. See S. C., 7 L. J. 158.

Special Finding.]-Plaintiffs declared on a bond conditioned that W., their treasurer, should pay over all moneys received since the 1st January, 1866, averring that on that day he had in his hands a large sum, and received further sums up to the 6th April, 1868, when he was dismissed; and that he accounted for all moneys received before that day, but not all moneys received before that day, but not for a large sum received since. Plea, alleging payment of all moneys since that day; and issue thereon. The case being referred, the arbitrator found that W, admitted $2,031 to be due by him on the 1st January, 1866; that he had accounted for all moneys received since; and that of all moneys received up to his dismissal, including the $3,031, the dismissal, balance was $1,806 :—Held, that as the breach was only in respect of moneys received since the 1st January, 1806, the plaintiff upon this finding could recover nothing. Township of Raudon v. Ward, 27 U. C. R. 609.

Surrender.]-Plaintiff held from defendant a lease of a farm for a term unexpired. Plaintiff and defendant, with D. and M., become bound to each other by bond, with a condition reciting that the parties had agreed to separate, and cancel all arrangements thereto made, and leave all controversies between them to the arbitration of T. and P., and should they not agree, to choose an um-pire whose decision should be final. The umpire awarded that defendant should release and give up to the plaintiff "the term of years, as agreed to in the submission, and also deliver up the stock of farming utensils in proper order, and without further delay, and that the lease then held by both parties said farm be immediately cancelled: that the bond was not in itself a surrender of the term; that even if so intended the term would not be surrendered, for the bond could not be held to be such a deed as is required by 14 & 15 Vict. c. 7, s. 4; that the award would not amount to a deed of surrender by the defendant; and therefore that the plaintiff could not eject the defendant. O'Dougherty v. Fretwell, 11 U. C. R. 65.

2. Drawing up and Executing.

Attorney Drawing Up.]—It is not desirable that the attorney of either party should draw up the award. Manley v. Anderson, 2 P. R. 354.

Execution at Different Times.]—
Three arbitrators on the close of the evidence agreed on their finding, and a minute thereof was made in writing by one of them but not signed, and it was understood that nothing further was to be done but have a formal award drawn up and executed. Next day the award was drawn up and executed by two of the arbitrators in the presence of each other, but in the absence of the third arbitrator, who two days afterwards executed it in the presence of one of the other arbitrators in the cut of the contract of t

Execution by Two—No Notice to Third.]—Under a submission to three, the award to be by any two, where the award was drawn up as though to be executed by the three, but was executed by two only, and no final meeting had of all three for settling the same, nor notice given to the one who did not sign it, until some days after:—Held, invalid. Martin v. Kergam, 2 P. R. 370.

Memorandum.] — Arbitrators having signed a memorandum of their judgment at the same time and place, may execute the more formal award separately and at different times, but within the time allowed. Williams v. Squair, 10 U. C. R. 24.

Memorandum.] — A memorandum in writing, signed by arbitrators, as instructions to a solicitor to draw an award:—Held, not to be a binding award. Shaw v. Morton, 13 C. P. 223.

Notice to Third Arbitrator.]—Held, under the circumstances stated in this case, that the notice to the third arbitrator of the meeting to make up the award was sufficient. Anderson v. Cotton, 2 P. R. 109.

No Notice to Third Arbitrator.]—Semble, that an objection that two of the arbitrators made the award without notice to the third, can be taken advantage of in an action on the award. Smith v. George, 12 U. C. R. 370.

No Notice to Dissenting Arbitrator.]
—The reference was before three arbitrators, and the award was executed by two of the three only. It appeared that at the meeting of the arbitrators a rough sketch of the award was drawn up and read over to them, and was agreed to and signed by two of them, but dissented from by the third, and on the following day the formal award in the terms of the draft was drawn up and signed by the two, without reference to the dissenting arbitrator:—Held, under s. 9, s. 8, 17, of the Railway Act, 1898, that the award was invalid; and semble, that it would be so apart from that Act. Anglin v. Nickle, 30 C. P. 72.

Separate Execution.]—Held, under the circumstances of this case, not a fatal objection that the award had been signed at different times, and when the arbitrators were not all present together. Jones v. Reid, 1 P. R. 247.

Separate Execution.]—An award excuted by two of three arbitrators, at different times and places, and after the time expired, cannot be supported. Helps v. Roblin, 6 C. P. 52.

3. Publication.

Notice that Award is Ready.—An award is published (for the purpose of regulating the time for an application to set it aside) when the parties have notice that it may be had on payment of charges. It is not needful that there should be notice of the contents of the award before it can be said to be published. Redick v. Skelton, 18 O. R. 100.

4. Time of Making.

Discretion.]—Though no power has been given by the reference, the court, notwithstanding, under 7 Will, IV, c. 3, s. 29, have power to enlarge in their discretion. Jones v. Russell, 5 U. C. R. 303.

Effect of Enlargement.]—A rule, issued as of Easter Term generally, to enlarge until the last day of the term:—Held, to relate back to the first day of term, and to operate as an admission that the time had not then expired. Hawke v. Daggan, 5 U. C. R. 636.

Enlargement,]—An award may be made before the time to which the arbitrators have enlarged. Tracey v. Hodgest, 7 U. C. R. 5.

Enlargement — Assent Necessary.]— Where the rule of reference and an enlargement were made rules of court, the court refused to attach for non-performance of the award, as the enlargement was not shewn to have been assented to by both parties. Ruthcen v. Ruthcen, 5 U. C. R. 273.

Enlargement—Consent.]—Where a verdict was taken subject to a reference, and before the time limited for the award expired it was enlarged by rule, and afterwards by consent again enlarged: — Held, that the award was good under the last submission, although it would have been invalid if made under the rule, and the enlargement by consent might have been made a rule of court, as being part of the original reference. Charles v. Hickson, T. T. 3. & 4 Viet.

Enlargement — Oral Assent.] — A rule making an enlargement ordered by the arbitrators a rule of court was set aside, such enlargement not having been consented to by both parties; but the award was upheld, the parties having verbally assented to enlargement, Ruhren v, Rutheen, 5 U. C. R. 276.

Enlargement—Oral Assent.]—Held, that a verbal consent to an enlargement of the time for making an award is sufficient under C. L. P. Act, s. 171. Jones v. Prentice, 2 C. L. J. 205.

Enlargement—Rule of Court.]—An agreement enlarging the time need not contain a consent that it may be made a rule of court, as well as the submission. Crooks v. Chukolm, 4 O. S. 121.

Enlargement — Rule of Court.] — The enlargement must be made a rule of court as well as the original submission. Masccar v. Chambers, 4 U. C. R. 171.

Expiration of Time.]—After expiration of the time limited, arbitrators cannot, without (even if they can with) the concurrence of both parties to the submission, make a binding award. Ruthven v. Ruthven, 8 U. C. R. 12.

Expiration of Time—Paral Submission.]—Where the time for making an award under a submission made an order of court has expired, and the parties afterwards meet by consent, such meetings operate as a mere paral submission, which is revocable; and if revoked, the time for making an award cannot afterwards be enlarged by the court; and the party making the revocation will not be restrained from merely prosecuting his suit from the point at which it was arrested by the reference. Ruthern v. Rossin, S Gr. 370.

Extending Time.]—Declaration, first count, that defendant, by bond, agreed that some C. should abide by an award respecting difference between C. and the plaintiff if made before the 6th June; that the arbitrators with the consent of C., of the defendant, and of the plaintiff, enlarged the time to the 1st July, and made their award on the 12th June, alleging non-performance of such award. Second count, that defendant requested plaintiff to extend the time, and plaintiff, on such request, and in consideration that the defendant promised him to continue bound, and that C. or the defendant would perform the award, agreed, for the convenience of said defendant and C., that the time should be extended; setting out the award, &c., as in the first count;—Held, on demurre, both counts bad, as shewing no valid enlargement. Sexton v. Woods, 15 U. C. R. 585.

Extending Time—Award Made.]—The court has jurisdiction under R. S. O. 1887 c. 55, s. 45, to enlarge the time for making an award upon voluntary submission, after the making of the award; and it is "good cause" for so enlarging that the arbitrators themselves, pursuant to their powers under the submission, did all they could to enlarge, but were unable at the time to get the original submission whereon to make the indorsement as to enlargement. Re Clement and Dixon, 17 P. R. 455.

Extending Time by Consent.]—In an action on contract, the matters in difference were, by rule of court by and with the consent of the parties, submitted to arbitration. By the rule of reference the award was directed to be made on or before the 1st May, 1877, or such further or ulterior day as the arbitrators might indorse from time to time on the order. The time for making the award was extended by the arbitrators till the 1st September, 1877. On the 31st August, 1877, the attorneys for plaintiff and defendants, by the attorneys for plaintiff and defendants, by the attorneys for plaintiff and defendants, by consent in writing, indorsed on the rule of reference, extended the time for making the award till the 8th September. On the 7th award in the sin september. On the divided in September the arbitrators made their award in favour of the plaintiff for the sum of $5,001.42, in full settlement of all matters in difference in the cause:—Held, that where the parties, through their respective attorneys in the action, consent to extend the time for making an award under a rule of reference, such consent does not operate as a new submission, but is an enlargement of the time under the rule and a continuation to the extended period of the authority of the arbitrators, and therefore an award made within the extended period is an award made under the rule of reference, and is valid and bind-ing on the parties. That the fact of one of the parties being a municipal corporation makes no difference. Oakes v. City of Halifax, 4 S. C. R. 640.

Extending Time—Death of Party—Statute of Limitations.]—Two persons submitted certain matters in dispute between them to the award of a barrister of character and standing. The submission provided that the death of either party should not operate as a revocation of the power and authority of the arbitrator; there was no provision for an appeal from his award. The arbitrator allowed the fome for making his award to allowed the form for making his award to allowed the time for making his award to call the survivor now applied to the court to enlarge the time. It appeared that the Statute of Limitations had so run since the submission as to bar portions of the applicant's claim:—Held, that the facts of the death and the absence of the right of appeal would not warrant the court in refusing to enlarge the time, and that under the circumstances no injustice would be done by enlarging it. Re Curry, 12 P. R. 437.

Extending Time—Loss of Papers.]—An arbitrator having failed, owing to the loss of the papers in the cause, to make his award within the time limited, a Judge extended the time under C. L. P. Act, s. 172. Johnston v. Anglin, 5 P. R. 62.

Extending Time—Production of Submission.]—On applying for an order to enlarge the time, the original submission should be produced, or if in the custody of the opposite party, it must be shewn that he refused to give it up; it is not sufficient that the party applying swears merely that he cannot procure it. Johns v. Furze, 1 Ch. Ch. 200.

Mistake as to Date. |—Submission by bond. On the day limited the arbitrators were prepared to award, but, all parties believing the time would not expire until next day, deferred the publication then at defendant's request, and heard further evidence no both sides next day, and then made their award:—Held, that the extension of time was a parol submission, and that assumpsit was maintainable thereon for not performing the award, although no action would lie on the bond. Halt V, Alveay, 4 O. S. 375.

Readiness to Deliver, —Where the submission is, that the award shall be delivered by a certain day, if it be ready for delivery by that day it is sufficient. Galbraith v. Walker, E. T. 2 View.

IV. COSTS AND FEES.

Abiding the Event—Entering Judyment.]—Where a cause was referred, costs to abide the event, and the arbitrators having made no award the parties agreed to refer the cause to any Judge of the district court who should first come to Perth, and such Judgeawarded that the plaintiff had no cause of action, and that judgment should be entered for the defendant:—Held, that the award was good, and that defendant might maintain assumpsit for the taxed costs of the cause, and was not obliged to enter judgment. Hale v. Matthison, 3 O. 8, 78.

Abiding the Event.]—All matters in digreence in this cause, and in a building agreement between plaintiff and defendant were referred, costs of the cause and reference to abide the event. The award after disposing of the issues in plaintiff's favour, assessed his damages on account of the non-performance by defendant of the promises alleged in the declaration, and of the matters in difference on the building agreement, and also the plaintiff's costs and charges, at £52 16s. 7d. The costs of the reference and award were then lixed by the award at £20. The costs of the suit were afterward taxas without notice to defendant:—Heat also were the history of the costs of the costs of the reference and no vertice had been taken the plaintiff was entitled to full costs. Jones v. Reid, 1 P.

Abiding the Event—Enforcing Payment.]—Where the costs of the cause were to abide the event, but no authority was given to direct a verifiet, and the award was silent as to costs:—Held, that attachment was the proper remedy for their recovery. A power of attorney from one of three defendants to demand the costs is sufficient. Shipman v. Shipman 2, P. R. 333.

Abiding the Event—Scale of Costs.]— Where a cause is referred, costs to abide the event, the plaintiff is not entitled to full costs if he is awarded anything, but to such costs only as he could have claimed if he had recovered the same amount. Watson v. Garrett, 3 P. R. 70.

Abiding the Event—Scale of Costs.]—A cause was referred, before trial, by Judge's order, costs to abide the event, and the arbitrator awarded £9 3s, 9d., the claim being originally of the jurisdiction of the county and reduced by set-off. The plaintiff applied for full costs, on affidavit shewing that he intended to enforce his award by rule of court, and execution under C. S. U. C. c. 24, s. 19. The application was refused for—Held, that he must be considered as obtaining final judgment without trial, and the case came within the rule of court No. 155. Watson V. Garrett, 3 P. R. 70.

Abiding the Event—Scale of Costs.]
—Where a cause was referred, costs of the cause to abide the event, and costs of the reference in the discretion of the arbitrator, and £4 was awarded to plaintiff, the taxing officer refused to tax only division court costs subsequent to the award, and his decision was upheld. Fluerynck v. Clitton, 3 P. R. 216.

Abiding the Event.]—Semble, that the rule of T. T. 24 Vict. applies in the case of a compulsory reference to the whole costs in the action, including the costs of the reference and award and proceedings subsequent thereto, and is not restricted to what may strictly be called the costs of the action:—Held, that under any circumstances such was the proper construction of this order of reference, by which "the cause and all matters in dispute therein were referred to arbitration, with power to the arbitrator to certify for costs in the same manner as a Judge at nisi prius, and that the costs of the cause, award, order and reference, subject to such certificate, should abide the event," Johnson v. Morley, 3 P. R. 217.

Abiding the Event.]—Costs of the award ordered to abide the event cannot be divided between the parties. Martyn v. Dickson, 2 C. L. J. 209.

Abiding the Event.]—By the reference the costs of the cause and award were to abide the event.—Held, that specific directions given as to the costs in the award were unobjectionable, as in effect they directed only what would have been the result without them. Johnston v. Anglin, 29 U. C. R. 272.

Abiding the Event.]—By an order of reference the arbitrator was empowered to certify and amend plendings and proceedings, and otherwise as a Judge at nisi prius, and costs of the reference, arbitration, and award were to abide the result of the award:—Held, that the arbitrator had no power to make any disposition of the costs, as they were provided for by the reference. Decanney v. Dorr. 4 O. R. 206.

Certifying after Award.]—At nist prius, in an action for unliquidated damages, a verdict was taken for $500, subject to a reference, with power to the referee to certify for costs as a Judge at nist prius. The referee reduced the damages to $53.50, and made his award without certifying:—Held, that he had no power to certify afterwards:—Quere, whether he had power to certify for the costs of the county or intermediate court. Smith v. Forbes, St. J. 7.2.

Certifying for Costs.]—When a rule is asked for to refer a case back for an arbitrator to certify to prevent defendant deducting costs, the arbitrator evidently intending that each party should pay his own costs, the rule will be made absolute without costs, the costs of taking the award again before the arbitrator to be borne by the applicant. Jordan v. Ambler, S.C. L. J. 67.

Certifying for Full Costs.]—Held—1. That a certificate for full costs, signed by arbitrators after they had made their award, and had finally separated, and when not all together, could not entitle plaining? to full costs of suit. 2. That after entry of judgment by plaining it is too late to move to refer back to emble an arbitrator to certify for costs. Keep v. Hammond, 9 L. J. 157.

Certifying for Full Costs, —A cause was referred at nis prins, and a verdict taken subject to the award. Costs of the cause were to abide the event, and the arbitrators had power to certify for costs as the Judge at the trial could have done. The award reduced the verdict to SiS, and directed that the defendant should pay the plaintiff costs according to the scale to be certified by the court:—Held, that the arbitrators having express powers to certify, and having omitted to do so, a Judge in chambers could not order full costs. Colder v. Gilbert, 3 P. R. 127.

Costs Not Mentioned.]—Where the costs of the reference are in the discretion of arbitrators, and the award says nothing about them, each party pays his own costs of reference, and the costs of the award are to be borne equally. Glen v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 2 P. R. 347.

Costs of the Cause, |—The phrase "costs of the cause "generally means the costs only of the party who is successful in the cause, But where the phrase was used in an award as follows: "We also order and award that plaintiffs and defendants shall each pay half the costs of the cause, and that the defendants shall pay all the costs of the reference and award, our costs of which reference and award, our costs of which reference and award, our costs of which reference and award as arbitrators we assess at the sum of $201.50 ":—Held, that "costs of the cause" meant the whole costs of both plaintiff and defendants. Scott v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 10 L. J. 72.

Costs of the Suit.] — Held, that the words "costs of the suit," as used in an award, have no reference to any particular scale of taxation, and so cannot, per se, be relied upon as entitling plaintiff to full costs of suit in a case where the amount awarded is within the jurisdiction of an inferior court. Keep v. Hammond, 9 L. J. 157.

Counsel Fees,]—In taxing the costs of an antitration upon the county court scale no larger fee for attendance of counsel before the arbitrators than $25 can be allowed even though the attendance is for several days. Re Montague and Township of Aldborough, 12 F. R. 142.

Counsel Fees.]—Item 153 of tariff A., Consolidated Rules of Practice, should be read as part of item 164; and the taxing officers at Toronto have authority to consider the question of increased counsel fees in the case of an arbitration where there is no cause in court and a reference to a local officer to tax costs has been made under R. S. O. 1887 c. 53. s. 24. Re McKeen and Township of South Gower, 12 P. R. 553.

Counsel Fees.]—In taxing the costs of an arbitration, a taxing officer has jurisdiction, in his discretion, to allow a second counsel fee. The provision of R. S. O. 1887, c. 53, s. 25, that not more than one counsel fee shall be taxed, is inconsistent with item 164 of the tariff of costs appended to the Consolidated Rules, 1888, and, by virtue of 51 Vict. c. 2, s. 4 (O.), must be taken to be repealed. Re McKeen and Township of South Gower, 12 P. R. 553, followed. Howard v. Herrington, 20 A. R. 175, and Arscott v. Lilley, 14 A. R. 283, distinguished, Re Pollock and City of Toronto, 15 P. R. 355.

County Court Judge.]—A county court Judge, on a reference to him under s. 158 of the C. L. P. Act, is not entitled to any fees as arbitrator. On a reference to him at the trial under s. 160, merely adding to his name the designation of county court Judge, but not referring the matter to him as such Judge, he will be entitled to his fees. Wood v. Foster, 6 P. R. 175.

Day's Sitting, |—Upon the proper construction of the schedules to R. S. O. 1887 c. 53, arbitrators are not entitled to charge as fees for a day's sitting which extends beyond six hours more than the maximum amount fixed by the schedules for a single day's sitting. Armstrong v. Darling, 6 C. L. T. 214, 22 C. L. J. 149, overruled. In retroun of Thornbury and County of Grey, 15 P. R. 192.

Excessive Fees. —The liability imposed on arbitrators by s. 29 of R. S. O. 1887 c. 53, in case of an overcharge of fees, to pay treble the amount of the fees charged or paid, is penal in its nature, and does not arise where a person entitled to take up the award has voluntarily paid the charges without any previous demand of the award by such person, followed by a refusal or delay to make, execute, or deliver the same by the arbitrator until payment of the excessive charges. Taxation of the fees is not a condition precedent to maintaining an action for the penalty. Jones v. Godson, 25 O. R. 444. See next case.

Excessive Fees.]—An arbitrator is not brought within the punitive provisions of s. 29 of R. S. O. 1887 c. 53, when the payment of the alleged excessive fees is made by charlest on a nagent who has authority to accept the notation of the arbitrator refuses to take the cheque of the alleged excessive fees is made by citator with the penalty there most after the expiration of the time named be either a demand upon him to make, execute, and deliver the award and a refusal to do so unless a larger sum is paid for fees than is permitted by the Act; or actual payment of such larger sum. The person desiring to take up the award may either have the fees taxed and then tender the amount, or he may pay the amount demanded and bring action for the penalty, which is a sum equal to treble the excess demanded and not equal to treble the whole amount of the fees demanded. Judgment below, 25 O. R. 444, affirmed. Jones v. Godson, 23 A. R. 34.

Extravagant Costs.] — An agreement that all costs shall be in the power of the arbitrators, &c., inserted after the condition of the bond, must be read as part of it. Extravagance in the amount of costs allowed under such a submission must be objected to by motion. Tousley v. Wythes, 16 U. C. R. 139.

Fixing Amount.]—When the costs of the reference are in the discretion of the arbitrators, it is the usual and most proper practice to fix a specified sum. Laurie v. Russell, 1. P. R. 65.

Fixing Costs.]—Where the costs of the cause, reference, and award were to abide the event of the cause, and the arbitrators assessed the costs of drawing up the award and their fees at a certain sum:—Held, that merely assessing the amount was no ground for setting aside the award. Boyle v. Humphreys, I. P. R. 187.

Fixing Costs. —Where the costs of the cause and reference were to abide the event, and the award fixed the costs of the reference and award: —Held, award bad as to that part. Jones v. Reid, 1 P. R. 247.

Fixing Fees.] — Arbitrators have no power to fix the amount of their own fees. McCulloch v. White, 33 U. C. R. 331.

Insurance.] — Costs of arbitration and award where proceedings stayed in an action on a policy pending arbitration as to amount of loss. See Hughes v. British American Ins. Co. and Hughes v. London Assurance Co., 7 O. R. 405; Hughes v. Hand in Hand Ins. Co., ib. 615.

Invalid Award of Costs.]—Held, in an arbitration between school trustees and teacher, that the arbitrators exceeded their powers in awarding costs. VanBuren v. Bull, 19 U. C. R. 633.

Misconduct of Party, —Where, owing to the misconduct of a party, arbitrators do not award, but an umpire does, costs will not be granted to the other party under a clause in the reference, "that if either party shall, by affected delay or otherwise wilfully, prevent the arbitrators or umpire from making their award, he shall pay such costs to the other as the court shall think reasonable and just." Proudtoot v. Trotter, 1 U. C. R. 388.

Note for Fees—Waiver of Right to Tax.]
—Where the master refused to tax an arbitrator's fee upon proof only that a note had been given to the arbitrator for the amount, a Judge in chambers refused to interfere. Tyrrell v. Ward, S.L. J. 21.

Order Silent as to Costs — Seccrable Provision.—In an arction on a bill of costs the parties consented that judgment should be entered for a certain sum, "subject to the award" of a named person. When the action came on for trial this consent was filed, and the trial Judge indorsed the record; "I order that judgment be entered for the plaintiff for the sum of, &c., subject to the consent filed herein." Nothing was said about costs, and they were not provided for in any way. The arbitrator or referee made his report or award finding that the amount of the judgment should be reduced to a named sum, and adding; "I do award to the plaintiff the costs of this action, including the costs of the reference and award." Judgment was entered in accordance with this award. Con. Rule 550 provides that "The court will not refer to arbitration:"—Held, that this Rule does not prevent any arrangement for the settle ment of an action entered into and acted upon by litigants from being sanctioned and enforced by the court; and therefore there was power to make a reference by consent in this way; but it was a reference to arbitration and not a reference under the Judicature Act, and the reference under the Judicature Act, and the referee had no power to deal with the costs. The award of costs was stricken out of the judgment, and an application afterwards made to the trial Judge to amend the indorsement on the record so as to provide for the costs was refused, although the omission to provide for costs was not intentional, Macdonell v. Baird, 13 P. R. 331.

Reference.]—It having been agreed on at the trial that if certain facts left to the jury should be found for plaintiff, the matters of account were to be referred, no mention having been made as to costs, the jury found for plaintiff:—Held, that the costs of reference were costs of the cause. Ruttan v. Boulton, 10 C. P. 417.

Renewal of Lease.]—Costs of reference to fix amount of rent on renewal of lease. See Smith v. Fleming, 12 P. R. 520.

Scale of Costs.]—Where a cause is referred by order of nisi prius, and a sum awarded within the district court jurisdiction—the court or a Judge may grant an order for full costs under the 9th rule of E. T. 11 Geo. IV. Elmore v. Coleman, 4 O. S. 321.

Scale of Costs.]—Where a verdict was taken subject to a reference, and the arbitrators awarded £10, reducing only the price and not the items of the account sued for, a suggestion to deprive the plaintiff of costs, under the Court of Requests Act, was refused, Stratford v. Shercood, 5 O. S. 103.

Scale of Costs.]—Where final judgment is obtained without a trial, a Judge in chambers has power to make an order for full costs. Quere—Should the order be exparte? Where a cause is decided by an award, the cause is one proper for an application of the kind. The order may be made unless it appear that the cause was one in which the plaintiff was bound to sue in an inferior court. A plaintiff, in order to bring his cause within the jurisdiction of an inferior tribunal, is not bound to give credits. It is his privilege to do so, but there is no legal obligation upon him to do so. Geroux v. Yager, St. J. 19.

Scale of Costs.]—Where an action is commenced in the King's Bench, and arbitrators upon a reference award damages under the jurisdiction of the district court, the plaintiff is not deprived of costs. Lang v. Hall, Tay, 215.

Scale of Costs.]—A cause having been referred by order at nisi prius, and a sum awarded within the county court jurisdiction, the court, on affidavit, granted an order for full costs, under the 9th rule of E. T. 11 Geo. IV. Morse v. Tectzel, 1 P. R. 375.

Scale of Costs.]—Where the transactions amounted to about $1,100 on one side, and about $800 on the other, and defendant paid into court $176, and plaintiff recovered $102.30 by the award:—Held, that full costs should be allowed to the plaintiff. Jones v. Herson, 2 C. L. J. 107.

Scale of Costs.]—Two actions for false imprisonment were referred at the assizes, no verdict being taken, costs to abide the event. In one the arbitrator found £20, in the other $10$. The plaintiff having proceeded by attachment on the award:—Held, that he was entitled to full costs without a certificate. Such a case is not within the 155th Rule of court, for the plaintiff cannot be considered as proceeding upon the final judgment. Cochrane v. Scott. Cochrane v. Cross. 2 P. R. 32. Moved against in full court of Common Pleas, but rule discharged.

School Act.]—The School Act, C. S. U. C. c. 64, does not provide for the payment of arbitrators, or of the costs of a reference thereunder. Weaver v. Bull, 10 C. P. 369.

Several Defendants—Demand by One defendants to demand the costs is sufficient, payment to one being payment to all. Shipman v. Shipman, 2 P. R. 393.

Shewing Cause—Costs not Mentioned.]

—The costs of shewing cause against a rule for setting aside an award, are costs in the cause, although no mention of them is made in the rule. County of Essex v. Parke, 12 C.
P. 150.

Special Jury.]—Where a cause has been referred by nisi prius order, an application for costs of special jury struck and called, must be to the Judge by whom the reference was made. Commercial Bank v. Pringle, 3 L. J. 28.

Submission—Reference.]—By a submission the costs of the "reference and award" were to be in the discretion of the arbitrators, and they directed that defendants should pay the costs of the "submission and award:"—Held, that the award was final, for that the costs of the submission included the costs of reference. The submission mal award being set out in full in the declaration, quere, whether this objection could be raised by plea, or whether defendant should not have denurred. Ellicood v. County of Middlecc, 19 U. C. R. 25.

Submission Silent as to Costs.]—
When the submission or order of reference is silent as to costs, arbitrators have no power to adjudicate upon them, but each party must bear his own costs and half those of the award. A direction as to the costs in such a case:—Held, severable from the rest of the award. Re Harding and Wren, 4. O. R. 605.

Taxation.]—Arbitrators' fees may be referred to the master for taxation. Scott v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 3 P. R. 276.

Taxation.]—Whether named in award or not. Laurie v. Russell, 1 P. R. 65.

Taxation.]—An order will not be made under 29 Vict. c. 32, s. 5, for the taxation of the costs of an arbitration until the submission has been made a rule of court. In re Coy and London Assurance Corporation, 7 P. R. 131.

Taxation by Deputy Clerk.1-A taxation by a deputy clerk of the Crown of costs under an award, on a reference to arbitration of two causes in different courts, together with all matters in difference, is not a nullity, as being beyond his jurisdiction, and probably not even an irregularity. In re Hotekkiss and Hall, 5 P. R. 423.

Taxing Officer's Discretion.]—Held, that the amount to be allowed per diem to arbitrators and counsel was a matter peculiarly within the province of the taxing officer, and his decision should not be interfered with. Re Hüllyard and Royal Ins. Co., 12 P. R. 285.

Travelling Expenses—Loss of Time.]—
Upon an appeal from the taxation of costs of an arbitration, which the plaintiffs were ordered to pay:—Held, that items in respect of the loss of time in travelling and travelling expenses of an arbitrator were properly disallowed. Re Hillyard and Royal Ins. Co., 12 P. R. 285.

V. ENFORCING AWARD.

1. By Action.

Attachment — Action.] — Proceeding by attachment on an award is no bar to subsequent action on the same award, though the court may stay the action so that the defendant be released from the attachment. Dexter v. Fitzgibbon, 4 L. J. 43.

Collateral Attack.] — Semble, that an objection that two arbitrators made the award without notice to the third, could be taken advantage of in an action on the award. Smith v. George, 12 U. C. R. 370.

Collateral Attack, |—First count of declaration on a promissory note of $400. 2nd. For $85.18, under an award founded on a submission, leaving all matters in difference, whether partnership or otherwise, to arbitration. Plens, 1. Payment. 2. Set-off on common counts. On motion to set aside a verdict for plaintiff, on the grounds; 1. That the arbitrators exceeded their authority in making their award. 2. That since the naking of said award money had been received by plaintiff to defendant's use:—Held, that as no defence had been set up to the award at the trial, and no action taken to set aside the award, the defendant could not now set up such a defence; and if moneys had been received by plaintiff to defendant's use, as alleged by the defendant one the award, defendant could not he pleadings have shewn the same at the trial. McKenzie v. Sommers, 14 C. P. 97.

Defence — Executing Jurisdiction.] — By agreement between the plaintiffs and defendant, the plaintiffs are defendant, the plaintiffs agreed to draw and deliver certain logs on the ice for defendant, on or before the 20th March then next, for which the defendants covenanted to pay so much per log. It was provided that, should the sleighing not hold good for four weeks thereafter, the plaintiffs should be bound only to draw such proportion of the logs as the time of sleighing should bear to the four weeks. By a submission under seal, reciting this agreement and that differences existed in respect thereof, and of the advances made thereon by defendant to plaintiffs, all such differences were referred to arbitration. The arrences were referred to arbitration. The bitrators awarded that there was due from defendant to plaintiffs, in respect of said agreement, 806. To an action on this award, defendants pleaded no award; and one of the arbitrators, as a witness for the defence, said the evidence satisfied them that, owing to the snow, the plaintiffs could not proceed with the work, and so notified the defendant, who told them to go on and they should lose nothing; and that on this understanding the arbitrators proceeded, and awarded to the plaintiffs the costs of drawing the logs, thinking they had a right to do so under the last clause of the agreement. No objection was made by defendant or his counsel to the reception of the evidence of such undertaking. that it was a matter not covered by the reference — Held, that the arbitrators had exceeded their jurisdiction in awarding money to the plaintiff for work done under the verbal agreement, which was not within the sub-mission; that this amount not being separable from the rest, the award could not be supported; and that such excess of authority afforded a good defence to the action. Tulty v. Chamberlain, 31 U. C. R. 299.

Defence — Misconduct of Arbitrator.]—
To an action on an award, the defendant pleaded, on equitable grounds, that the arbitrator proceeded ex parte, and without notice to the defendant, and refused to hear defendant and his witnesses, or allow him a reasonable opportunity of proving his case; and also examined the plaintiff and his witnesses privately and in the absence of the defendant, who had no opportunity of cross-examining them; that he never waived any of these irregularities, and was wholly izmorant until some time affair always repudiated the being made and always repudiated the being made and always repudiated the defendant, but should be set aside: —Held, alea bad, as setting up facts not the subject of defence by way of plea, but forming grounds for motion to set the award aside, the award, until set aside, being final between the parties. It was urged by defendant that as the declaration did not contain an averment that the submission contained any provision for making it a rule of court under 9 & 10 Will. HI. c. 15, or did not provide that it should not be made such rule, no other means of relief were afforded except by place but held otherwise, for defendant might still have relief by bill in equity. Peuchen y. Lanb., 25 C. P. 588.

Defence—Want of Title.]—In a declaration on an award that defendant should make, execute, and deliver to the plaintiff a good and sufficient conveyance in fee simple, with the usual covenants, of certain land specified. Breach that defendant never had any title, and so could not perform the award. Plea that defendant did, in pursuance of the award, execute and tender to the plaintiff such deed as in the declaration mentioned:— Held, on demurrer, plea good. Anderson v. Van Buscek, 18 U. C. R. 172.

Estoppel. —Suing on an award will estop a party from denying the authority of the arbitrators. Black v. Allan, 17 C. P. 240.

Evidence—Contribution.] — The declaration on a submission bond alleged an award that defendant should pay the plaintiff $540 and each pay their own costs of the submission, and that $60, other costs, should be paid by them equally. Pleas, denying the submission and award. The plaintiff proved the execution of defendant's bond, and gave secondary evidence of having executed a similar bond himself, which was given to defendant, and of the appointment of third arbitrator indorsed on it, having served a notice to produce on defendant's attorney, at 11 a.m., on the day previous, the commission day, defendant living seventeen miles off, at a place to which there was a daily mail:— Held, I, that the execution of plaintiff's bond being put in issue, it might be presumed to be in possession of defendant's attorney; and if it were not, that the notice under the circumstances was sufficient; 2, that the plaintiff having paid the 800, was not entitled to recover half of it from the defendant. Sulliran v. King, 24 U. C. R. 161.

Instalments—Dumages.]—Defendant became bound to plaintif in a penalty to abide by an award. The arbitrators awarded 8400 to be paid by defendant to plaintiff in three instalments, the two last to be secured by defendant upon real estate, and payable at a future day. Defendant neither paid the first instalment, nor secured the second and third in the manner directed:—Held, that plaintiff in the manner directed in the Month of the whole three instalments. Bond v. Bond, 16 C. P. 327.

Non-payment—Covenant.] — Where the plaintiff had been awarded a certain sum in accordance with the terms of an instrument under seal; for the non-payment of such an award the plaintiff should sue in covenant; he cannot sue in assumpsit unless some new consideration, apart from the written instrument, can be proved. Tait v. Atkinson, 3 U. C. R. 152.

Pleading. |—Separation of husband and wife. Reference to settle the allowance in fleu of alimony. Declaration on submission bond. Special demurrer. Beasley v. Steyman, Tay. 498.

Pleading.)—In debt on award that defendant should pay plaintiff £149 on a day mentioned, and that the plaintiff should deliver up a house to the defendant on the same day:—Held, that these were concurrent acts, and that the plaintiff must aver a readiness to perform his part. Baker v. Booth, Dra. 65.

Pleading.]—But it is sufficient to aver readiness to deliver up the premises without actual delivery, and vice versă, and where to a plea that the defendant demanded the award from the arbitrator on the 5th February, the plaintiff replied a publication and notice of the award on the 6th (the day when the award was to be made), the replication was held good. Baker v. Booth, 2 O. 8, 373.

Pleading.]—Declaration in debt on a submission bond, averring that the award was made on the day appointed. Plea—"no award." Replication—an award within the time—to wir, on a day and year different from the year stated in the declaration. Replication held sufficient on general demurrer. Judge v. Judge, 5 0. 8 692.

Pleading.]—Non-payment of the money awarded is a sufficient breach, without averring notice of an award. Turner v. Alway, 5 O. S. 45. Pleading. |—When the submission does not limit any time for the award, plaintif need not aver that it was made within a reasonable time, nor allege notice of the award, Aduns v, Hum, 5 U. C. R. 292.

Pleading.]—Money awarded was held, under the circumstances, not recoverable on the common counts. Holden v. McCarthy, 5 O. S. 99.

Pleading.]—In debt on bond to perform an award, a plea setting forth mere legal grounds of objection and concluding to the country is bad; and if there be two separate parts in the award, an answer to one part cannot be pleaded in bar of both; and if two breaches be assigned in the replication, it will be sufficient on general demurrer if one only be supported. Boyd v. Durand, 5 O. S. 122.

Pleading.]—In debt on an award in favour of the Kingston Bank Commissioners, ander 10 Geo. IV. c. 7, the declaration set out an award that defendant should pay 2900 in bills or notes of the bank, or bank certificates, or orders for stock, by a certain day; and assigned as a breach non-payment in the terms of the award, but did not negative payment in money:—Held, bad on general demurrer. Kingston Bank Commissioners v. Dalton, E. T. 3 Vict. T. 3 Vict.

Pleading.]—Plea of no award by arbitrators, or by umpire, duly appointed:—Held, bad on special demurrer. Croker v. Hoggan, 6 O. S. 508.

Pleading.] — Declaration in debt for £1,000, alleging a reference between plaintiff and defendant, by bonds with a penalty of £1,000, and setting out the award thereon, assigning breaches for non-performance, and concluding "whereby an action had accrued to recover the sum of £1,000 above demanded:"—Held, bad on special demurrer, as an informal declaration on the bond of submission. Simpson v. Mode, 6 O. 8, 511.

Pleading, —A set-off of a sum certain is a good plea in debt on a submission bond, assigning as a breach the non-payment of a sum certain awarded. Lindford v. Musgrove, 6 O. S. 642.

Pleading.]—Award to be made in writing. Plea, that the arbitrators did not award in writing under their hands:—Held, bad. Baby v. Davenport, 6 O. S. 643.

Pleading. — The effect of a repugnancy in a replication, setting out an award, to the submission set out on oyer, as regards the name of the arbitrator, Tevestey v. Dunlop, 1 U. C. R. 138.

Pleading.]—Where plaintiff and defendant refer all causes of action, and after an award given plaintiff sues defendant for a cause of action not brought before the arbitrators, on the ground that he then had no knowledge of it, an issue tendered as to such knowledge is material. Lusty v. VanVolkenburgh, I U. C. R. 214.

Pleading.]—Plaintiff declares in debt on bond for the performance of an award. Defendant pleads no award upon the premises. Plaintiff replies setting out the award. Defendant rejoins matter extrinsic of the award. and relies upon it for shewing the award void. The rejoinder is bad, as being a departure from the plea. Maxwell v. Ransom, 1 U. C. R. 219.

Pleading.]—Plea of performance, replication denying it only by inference:—Held, bad on special demurrer. Lymburner v. Norton, 1 U. C. R. 485.

Pleading.]-Debt on bond. Defendant set out the condition on over, which was for the performance of the award of arbitrators, to whom it was referred by the plaintiff and "upon and condefendant to arbitrate, &c., "upon and con-cerning the possession" of a certain lot of land, and also of and concerning all, &c., and all manner of action, controversies, and demands whatsoever, between the said parties, from the beginning of the world to the date of the said bond, and pleaded "no award made." The plaintiff replied, shewing an made." The plaintiff replied, shewing an award made by the arbitrators at the proper time, and with the proper formalities, "that the plaintiffs should pay to the representatives of one S. deceased, within one month, the amount due on certain notes of hand given by plaintiff to said S. in payment of the level, and that the defendant should give a land, and that the defendant should give to the plaintiff on such payment a sufficient deed in fee simple for said land, and that defendant should not transfer the said notes within the said month; and that the bond for a deed given by the said S. to the plaintiff should be delivered by defendant to plaintiff. The plaintiff then averred notice to defendant of the award, and assigned two breaches, 1. that the plaintiff tendered to defendant, the holder of the said notes, and to the defen-dant's wife, the executrix of S., the full amount of the notes, and demanded a deed, but that they refused to accept the money, and defendant refused to give the deed, al-though a reasonable time had elapsed; 2, that after the tender and refusal in the first breach mentioned, and before suit, to wit, &c., the plaintiff requested defendant to deliver to plaintiff the bond for a deed; and although a reasonable time had elapsed, defendant would not deliver the said bond. The defendant rejoined, setting out the award verbatim, and then demurred separately to each breach :-Held, 1. that under the general words of the submission authority was given to arbitrate as to the fee simple of the land, if it were a matter in difference between the parties, which must be presumed: 2. that the award was void for not deciding upon the matter expressly submitted to the arbitrators re-specting the possession:—Held, also, that the defendant could not, by thus setting out the award in his rejoinder by suggestion, make it a part of the plaintiff's replication, as in the case of a deed pleaded with profert; and that the defendant's demurrer should have been to the accenium is occurred should have been to the replication, and not to the several breaches assigned in the replication. But upon the whole record, judgment was given the defendant on the demurrer, because the award as set out by the plaintiff himself in his replication was void. Benedict v. Parks, 1 C. P. 370.

Pleading.]—Where a plaintiff proves such an award as stated in his declaration, its legal effect or validity is not involved under a plea of nul tiel award. Hartley v. Huntley, 4 C. P. 276.

Pleading.]—Plea in assumpsit on an award, held bad on special demurrer for not identifying the matters referred with the cause of action. Calvin v. McPherson, 4 C. P. 150.

Pleading.]—Plaintiff need not shew that the award was executed by the arbitrators at the same time. That is assumed in the first instance, but defendant may shew the contrary under a plea denying the award. Sullivan v, King, 24 U. C. R. 161.

Pleading.]—In an action founded upon a bond conditioned for the performance of an award:—Held, that under a plea of nul tiel award evidence is admissible to shew that the arbitrators took into their consideration and decided upon matters not referred to them. Carreth v. Fortune, 12 C. P. 309.

Pleading.]—Action by indorsee against executors on a note for $850, nade by testator, averring a promise by defendants as executrix and executor to pay. Pleas, 2. That defendant did not promise; 3 and 4. Want of consideration; 5 and 6. Fraud. Replication to all the pleas, by way of estoppel, an arbitration and award as to the inability of defendants as executors, &c., to pay the note, &c., tsetting out the terms of the submission and award).—Held, on demurrer, replication bad, as the matter of it did not estop defendants as to the second plea, and because it did not appear on the face of the submission or of the award, that the plainitiff at the time of the reference, and of the making of the award, was the holder of the note, Cleat v. Elliott, 1 C. P. 252.

Pleading.]—Covenant against the executors of a lessor for not rebuilding after loss by fire. The third plea set up an award as to the damages sought to be recovered between the plaintiff and one G. M., who, it was averred, was assignee of the premises under the will of the plaintiff slessor for a term in the said will mentioned; but it was not averred that the plaintiff had obtained satisfaction through the award:—Held, on denurrer, third plea bad, as shewing no defence. Proautfoot v. Trotter, 12 U. C. R. 226.

Pleading.]—Debt on submission bond. Seven pleas objecting to validity of award, all held bad on demurrer. Finkle v. Arnold, 6 U. C. R. 168.

Pleading.)—Declaration on a bond of submission to L and L, of an action brought by plaintiff against defendant, with other matters, with liberty, either before said arbitration or pending said reference, to appoint an umpire. The condition was, to abide by the award of the arbitrators, if made on or before the 16th Fune. 1855, or if they should not make their award by that time, then by the award of the umpire, if made on or before the same day. Plea, no award by arbitrators or umpire, on or before the 16th June. Replication, that the arbitrators so within the time limited for making the award by the umpire, to with on the 16th June. 1855, awarded that there was due from defendant to plaintiff £55 16s, 1d., upon balance of accounts, and also £5, costs of the arbitration, which sums they awarded defendant to pay to the plaintiff, &c.:—Held, on demurrer, replication bad, for, if the award could be supported at all, it could only be as the award of the two arbitrators, and should have a sum of the two arbitrators, and should enaward of the two arbitrators, and should enaward of the two arbitrators, and should have a sum of the supported at all, it could only be as the award of the two arbitrators, and should have a sum of the two arbitrators, and should have a sum of the two arbitrators, and should have a sum of the two arbitrators, and should have a sum of the two arbitrators, and should have a sum of the supported at all, it could only be as the award of the two arbitrators, and should have a sum of the supported at all, it could only be as the award of the two arbitrators, and should have a sum of the supported at all, it could only be as the award of the two arbitrators, and should have a sum of the supported at all, it could only be as the award of the two arbitrators, and should have a sum of the supported at all, it could only be as the award of the two arbitrators, and should have a sum of the supported at all the supported as all the supported as all the supported as all the supported as all the supported have been so set out, to make it in accordance with the submission. Roddy v. Lester, 14 U. C. R. 259.

Pleading.]—A manicipality by by-law opened a road across plaintiff's property, and arbitrators were appointed under 16 Vict. c. 181 to determine what compensation should be paid to him. Afterwards a resolution was passed by the council that the arbitrators so chosen should be instructed to take into consideration the damages to the plaintiff's crops and fences, so that all differences might be settled; and they awarded separate sums for opening the road and for damages, respectively. The plaintiff having brought debt on this award, defendants pleaded no award:—Held, that under this plea they could not dispute the arbitrators' authority to award the latter sum; but should have moved to set aside the award, or might have pleaded nunquam indebitati to that sum, which would have brought the submission in issue. Hodgson v. Town of Whitby! 17 U. C. R. 230.

Pleading. |—To an action on an award defendant pleaded a set-off for costs of defence in certain suits due to him by the same award. The award recited a submission of an action in the Common Pleas by plaintiff against defendant, and also of "all other matters of difference, action and actions, suits, and controversies whatsoever," and awarded that defendant should pay all costs of said suit, "and all other law costs occasioned by any suit or suits, action or actions, either at law or equity, had about and regarding the premises, and brought before the execution of said bonds of submission to arbitration; and we also order and direct that no further proceedings shall be had in any or either of said actions;"—Held, that the defendant could not under his plea recover for costs of suits in which judgment had been given before the reference, for they were not included in the submission or award:—Held, also, that the evidence of the arbitrators was rightly received to shew that such costs were not intended to be allowed. Campbell v. Howland, 39 U.C. R. 18.

Pleading.]—Declaration, a joint bond by defendant. M. and G. to perform an award concerning all differences between plaintiff and defendants avering an award that M., one of the defendants, was indebted to the plaintiff in a sum named, and directing him to pay it by a certain day. Pleas by the other defendant, G., that before the execution of the bond the plaintiff had sued defendants on a contract, which G. deniel being a party to: that to settle said action the bond was entered into, which recited the suit, and the matters referred were the said action and all differences between the plaintiff and defendants jointly, not either defendant singly; that the only matters brought before the arbitrators, or upon which they awarded, were the said action and the matters in question therein, and that the award was as follows (setting it out in substance as stated in the declaration):—Held, on demurrer, plea bad. Gerrie v. Methond!, 18 U. C. R. 146.

Pleading.]—An action on an award, to which the defendant pleaded performance only. At the trial a verdict was entered for defendant, with leave reserved, if he was not so entitled, to enter a verdict for the plaintiff for £26 9s. and interest:—Held, under the special circumstances set out in the case—1. That defendant was not entitled to a verdict in his favour, for though the award was unauthorized, yet he had not objected to it, but pleaded performance, which he had clearly failed to prove 2. That a verdict must go for the plaintiff for the £26 9s., as it had been so agreed at the trial, although under the circumstances the plaintiff was not necessarily entitled to that sum, the defendant having oftened to do all that he had a just claim to call upon him for. Anderson v. Van Buseck, 18 U. C. R. 172.

Pleading.]—Held, that s 171 of C. L. P. Act did not in any way after the pleadings in the case of awards; but that, the declaration shewing the submission on a certain day and the award within a few days thereafter, the court would intend it to have been within the stipulated time, and that it was certainly within a reasonable period, and within three months from the appointment of the arbitrator:—Held, also, not necessary to aver a demand to comply with the award, or that a reasonable time had elapsed before action. Reid v. Reid, 16 C. P. 247.

Pleading.]—The court had decided that one portion of an award was bad, but the other portion good. Plaintiff sued for non-compliance with the latter, but omitted to set out the former part:—Held, that the omission was immaterial; but that even the omission of a material part could not be objected to under a denial of the award in the declaration mentioned. Bond v. Bond, 16 C. P. 327.

Pleading.]—In an action against the makers of a joint and several note payable to R. or bearer, one defendant suffered judgment by default, and the other pleaded, that after the note fell due, and while it was in R.'s hands, disputes arose between R. and this defendant respecting it, among other matters which were referred; that the arbitrators awarded that defendant should pay R. a sum named, and that he and R. should execute mutual releases; and that the plaintiff took the note rifter it fell due, with notice of the factor of Pleading.]—The submission and award being set out in full in the declaration; quere, whether an objection that the award was not final, could be raised by plea, or whether defendant should not have demurred. Ellwood v. County of Middlesex, 19 U. C. R. 25.

Pleading.]—In assumpsit on an award the plea of nunquam indebitatus puts in issue the submission, the enlargement of the time, and the making of an award according to the submission. Abbott v. Skinner, 7 L. J. 158; S.C., 11 C. P. 309.

Pleading.]-Under a submission of all differences between plaintiff and defendant (not specifying any subject of dispute), with to determine what they should see fit io be done by either, the arbitrators by their award—after reciting that one G, by a writing indorsed on the submission, had agreed to submit to them a charge of £200 per annum, made for defendant by the management of certain property in Berlin, in which G, and the plaintiff were jointly interested—found that on the 1st September, 1880, defendant was indebted to the plaintiff in £3,249 17s. 8d., which they ordered him to pay accordingly, with interest half-yearly until paid. 2. As to the Berlin property, that as regarded the rights and liabilities of the plaintiff and defendant thereto, they did not find that any difference had arisen calling for to be done by either, the arbitrators by their find that any difference had arisen calling for their arbitrament, (further than as might their arbitrament, trurtner that regard the said amount claimed for manage-ment,) and they therefore made no adjudica-tion of the rights or liabilities. 3. As to tion on such rights or liabilities. 3. As to certain property in Gueiph comprised in a deed made by defendant to plaintiff, they ad-judged that the plaintiff should hold the same in fee by virtue of such deed, but that if he, or his heirs or assigns, should sell the same, or any part thereof, and should realize from such sale a larger sum than £1,105, he or they should account for such surplus to the defendant his covenies. We are defendant, his executors, &c. To an action on this award, defendant, after setting it out at length, pleaded:—1. That the arbitrators awarded upon matters not submitted, and which accrued after the submission, and upon accounts between the parties to a period long after the submission. 2. That the award was not final, in this, that the said matters re-lating to the Berlin property were matters in difference, and were submitted to the arbitrators, but that they did not award thereon, and in this, that they did not dispose of the difference respecting the value of the Guelph property, but left the same unsettled and dependent upon the sale thereof by the plainwhen only the amount to be accounted for to defendant could be determined :-Held, on demurrer, both pleas good; and as to the second plea, that the averment as to the Beriin property was a sufficient defence, and the plea therefore sufficient, although the award as to the Guelph land was not wanting in finality:—Held, also, that upon the evidence, set out in the case, the first plea was not proved :- Quære, as to the intention and effect of the direction in the award to pay the £3,249, and interest half-yearly until payment. Stewart v. Webster, 20 U. C. R. 469.

Pleading.] — Defendant, besides demurring to the declaration, pleaded setting out the whole award, as stated in the declaration and alleging that it was void on the face of it, for not deciding all the matters referred, for want of finality, and for excess of authority: —Held, plea bad, as putting in issue matter of law already brought up by the demurrer. Stinson v. Martin, 22 U. C. R. 154.

Pleading.]—Action on bond. Plea, that the bond was conditioned to perform an award, and no award made. Plaintiff must reply specially, denving the condition, or setting out an award and alleging a breach; he cannot take issue. Cowan v. White, 9 L. J. 131.

Pleading.]—The declaration, after reciting that certain differences had arisen between the plaintiff and the testator of defendant, and that said testator had entered into an arbitration bond with the plaintiff to refer said differences, several of which were set out; and that the arbitrators had published their award in writing in the lifetime of testator, and had awarded that said testator should pay plaintiff by a certain day 2100;—then averred nonpayment by testator or defendant;—Held, on demurrer, declaration good; for the action appearing to be on the award, and not on the bond, it was not necessary to set out the whole award, but only so much as would support the plaintiff's case. Proper form of declaration on bond conditioned to perform an award stated. Met allow v. McKinnon, 15 C. P. 561.

Pleading.]-Plaintiff declared on a bond of submission, alleging that the arbitrators heard the matters in difference, others, the costs of an action in the Common Pleas between the parties, and awarded that defendant should convey certain specified land to the plaintiff in fee, and should pay him all the costs of the reference and of the said action, and that they should execute mutual releases. Breach, non-payment of the costs. Defendant pleaded, I, non est faccosts. Defendant pleaded, 1 non est fac-tum; 2 that the arbitrators did not make any such award. The award mentioned no suit, but awarded the costs of reference, " and also all costs that may have been incurred by legal process through which the matter relating to this arbitration may have passed previous to the award." The plaintiff's attorney in the suit in the Common Pleas produced the bill of costs in that suit:—Held, that the award was sufficiently certain and final, if the existence and substance of the suit and its connection with the matters referred had been properly set out in the de-claration and proved; but that, on these pleadings, the suit and the fact of its reference might be taken to be admitted; erdict for the plaintiff was therefore upheld. Hibbert v. Scott, 24 U. C. R. 581.

Pleading.]—The second count averred that the defendants, a railway company, by their notice of arbitration, alleged that the plaintiff was entitled to no compensation; and that the arbitrations awarded him $10,000; and the plaintiff was considered and by force of the statute, defendant of the statute of the arbitration lable to day him the costs of the arbitration lable to day him the costs of the arbitration lable to day him the Cost of the arbitration lable to day him the cost of the arbitration lable to gravity of the statute of the lable of

The eleventh plea to the third count (a common count for money awarded) was that the award mentioned and the money claimed there and in the first count (a special count on the award) were the same:—Held, no defence, Ib.

Arbitrators having awarded compensation to the plaintiff for injuriously affecting his land, to an action on the award defendants pleaded, on equitable grounds, that the sum awarded was excessively and fraudulently exorbitant, and that the award was made by the fraud, covin, and misrepresentation of the plaintiff and the arbitrators making it:—Held, on demurrer, a good defence. Ib.

Pleading.]—The declaration for non-performance of an award set out in full a deed of submission to arbitration between plaintift and defendant, which deed provided that the award should be made on or before the 1st July then next, or such further time as the arbitrators by writing, indersed on the sub mission, might from time to time appoint. was then averred, that after the arbitrators had entered upon the reference, the plaintiff and defendant, by writing under their hands, enlarged the time for making the award to the 1st December, and the award was made on the 30th November. Fourth plea: that the enlargment mentioned was not made till after the 1st July, and when the arbitrators authority had ceased. Replication, setting out the indorsement enlarging the reference. and averring that the parties, with a full knowledge of the facts, appeared subsequently before the arbitrators, and proceeded without objection to the enlargement, and afterwards the award was made as in the declaration mentioned :- Held, upon demurrer, the action, if founded upon the deed, fail, the enlargement not being in accordance with the deed; but, 2, that setting out the deed in the declaration did not necessarily make it the basis of the action, for it might be treated as inducement; and the deed and the circumstances following it, read together, shewed a valid award on a parol submission by the parties, and afforded a good cause of The declaration was therefore held action. good, as regarded the enlargement, and the fourth plea bad:-Held, also, that the replication was not a departure; but that as the declaration shewed a new submission by the parties, the facts in the replication as to the attendance of the parties after the en-largement were immaterial, and the replica-tion therefore bad. McCulloch v. White, 33 U. C. R. 331.

Proof of Award. |—Semble, that the award was not admitted by the pleadings in this case' but—Held, that it was sufficiently proved by shewing that the defendants paid a portion of the sum awarded, and that their officers had stated in writing the particulars of the award, and the sum remaining due on it. Hundes v. Mutual Fire Ins. Co. of District of Newcastle, 9 U. C. R. 387.

Proof of Award. — The plaintiff and defendant having a dispute referred it to M. to determine, and M., having heard their statements, awarded that defendant should pay to the plaintiff £25. Subsequently, at the request of the plaintiff's attorney, he made a very consistent of the plaintiff's plaintiff having sued as upon a verbal supplied that the plaintiff having sued as upon a verbal supplied to the subsequently as it appeared from the testimony of the arbitrator that the verbal decision was in fact his award and so intended. Davis v. McGierre, 11 U. C. R. 112.

Proof of Award. |—In an action upon a submission bond, plen, non est factum, and subsequent suggestion of breaches by the plaintiff, it is sufficient to prove the bond and submission set out upon the record, and an award tallying with it. Lossing v. Horned, Tay. 219.

Proof of Award—Variance.]—In an action on an award, with the common counts, the submission to arbitration as set out in the declaration mentioned three defendants, and the award in reciting the submission only noticed two, but referred to the rule by which the submission was made as annexed to the award, in which rule the three defendants were named:—Held, that the variance between the submission set out in the declaration and that recited in the award was immaterial, as the submission itself agreed with the declaration. Hale v. Mattheson, 17m, 63.

Proof of Submission. —In debt on an award under bonds of submission, it is necessary to shew a mutual submission, and to prove the bonds executed by all the parties; but where the defendant at the trial accepted a credit without objection for money paid on the award, he was held precluded from objecting that the plaintiff had not proved his own execution of the bond. Skinner v. Hotcomb, 6 O. S. 336.

Proof of Submission.] — In debt on award the declaration recited a submission by bond, averring that under it the arbitrators had made an award upon one of the matters had made an award upon one of the matters having been by consent withdrawn, and that afterwards the other matters having been again submitted, the arbitrators made an award in favour of the plaintiffs. Defendant pleaded no such submission, and never indebted. At the trial the plaintiff proved the parol submission, but not the bond, and a point was reserved for the defendant to move upon that objection. The court on motion for a new trial (the verdet being in accordance with the justice of the case) refused to interfere. Baby v. Dacceport, 3 U. C. R. 13.

Proof of Submission.] — In an action on an award it is sufficient to produce the submission bond executed by defendant, without that executed by the plaintiff. Towsley v, Wythes, 16 W. C. R. 139.

Severable Excess.]—In an action on a bond of submission, an excess of authority in giving costs of the reference was—Held, no objection to the award, as those costs were not sued for. Roddy v. Lester, 14 U. C. R. 259.

Special Facts, —Held, under the special circumstances of this case, on demurrer on various grounds, that the declaration and award were good; that the other defendant was liable for non-payment of the $50, though it was a matter in difference between the plaintiff S. and defendant M. only. Stinson v. Martin, 22 U. C. R. 154.

Time—Publication—Interest.]—"Publication" of an award, signifying its completion so far as the arbitrator is concerned, is made when he executes it in the presence of a witness or does any other act shewing his final mind, upon which he becomes functus officie; and when an award is thus complete, an action may be brought upon it forthwith, though the defendant has the right to move against it within the proper time after "publication" to the parties; and a motion by the defendant to the parties; and a motion by the defendant of the award does not begin to run the amount of an award does not begin to run the amount of an award does not begin to run the defendant. Huyek v. Wilson, 18 P. It.

Variance.]—A variance in the names of arbitrators:—Held, no ground of nonsuit. Bentley v. West, 4 U. C. R. 98.

Variance.]—In an action on an award, the submission, as declared on, mentioned three defendants, and the award in reciting the submission only noticed two, but referred to the rule by which the submission was made as amexed to the award, in which rule the three were named:—Held, that the variance between the submission declared on and that recited in the award was immaterial, as the submission itself agreed with the declaration. Hale v. Mattheson, Pra. 63.

2. By Attachment.

(a) Generally.

Where executors submitted to arbitration, with a proviso that it should not be taken as an admission of assets, and the arbitrators a awarded that they should pay a certain sum, without stating that they had assets, a rule for an attachment against them for non-payment was refused. Gilbert v. Simpson, M. T. 7 Vict.

An attachment will be ordered against a party who files a bill in equity, contrary to his undertaking in a rule of reference, and in disregard of a rule of court made thereon. Manners v. Clarke, 1 U. C. R. 191.

The court will enforce performance of an award by attachment, though it extends to the delivery of possession of land. McPherson v. Walker, 1 P. R. 30.

An attachment will not be granted where a new arrangement has been made between the parties, subsequent to the award; but the successful party will be left to his action on the award. Thompson v. Macklem, 1 P. R. 293.

A party intending to attach should proceed with reasonable diligence. Dexter v. Fitzgibbon, 4 L. J. 43.

Where an award is vague, and defendants swar that it is impossible to comply with it, owing to the uncertainty, an attachment will be refused. In re Manley v. Anderson, 2 P. R. 106.

The execution by defendant of an assignment in trust for his creditors, by which the plaintiff is to be first paid, and the acceptance of such assignment by plaintiff, is no answer to an application for attachment on an award previously made for the same debt. McKenzie v. McKenzie V. McKenzie P. R. 157.

Where the costs of the cause were to abide the event, but no authority was given to direct a verdiet, and the award was silent as to costs:—Held, that attachment was the proper remedy for their recovery. Shipman v. Shipman, 2 P. R. 393.

(b) Practice.

The rule will not be absolute in the first instance, although the party consents by his counsel. Stewart v. Crawford, Tay. 409.

To obtain an attachment for non-payment of an award, the affidavit should shew that the person making the demand has a power of attorney for that purpose, and that the party on whom the demand was made was apprised of it. Powell v. McMartin, Dra.

To bring a party into contempt for not paying money awarded, the original rule and other papers should be shewn when the copies are served. Kent v. Sumner, T. T. 11 Geo.

It must appear distinctly by the affidavit that the demand was not made too soon. Barnes v. McMartin, 5 O. S. 143.

Where the award is made by an umpire, it must be shewn how he was appointed, and his appointment must be in writing. Carpenter v. Vanderlip, E. T. 3 Vict.

Where there was nothing to shew such appointment except the umpire acting as such, a rule nisi for an attachment was discharged, with costs; and the court refused to reserve leave of the plaintiff to renew the application next term. Quare, however, whether he would be prevented from such application. Reynolds v. Burkhart, 1 P. R. 213.

The affidavit must deny payment of any part of the sum demanded. Masecar v. Cham-bers, 4 U. C. R. 171.

An affidavit denying service of an award must be intituled in the cause, and not "The Queen v. Defendant," as it is an affidavit made before the attachment has been ordered. If the affidavit, however, contain a good ans-If the affidavit, however, contain a good answer upon the merits, the party will have leave to swear to an amended affidavit. Heathers v. Wardman. 4 U. C. R. I. 173.

The affidavit of execution of the award must shew that it was executed within the time limited by the submission. Ib.

must snew that it was a submission. Ib.
The allocatur in this case was held not objectionable as improperly embracing a moiety of the costs of reference. Ib.

In an application for an attachment for the non-payment of money awarded, the sub-mission being by bond, the rule nisi was in-tituled "in the matter of A. v. B." The affidavit of service was intituled in the same amagnetic way. The rule making the submission by bond a rule of this court, was intituled in this court, "A. v. B." The affidavit of the execution of the award was intituled in this court only :- Held, that the intituling of the rule nisi and the affidavit of service thereof was correct:-Held, also, that there was no material variance between the intituling of the rule nisi and the other previous papers. In re Beckett v. Cotton, 5 U. C. R. 271.

The original award must be brought into court, and the rule for attachment drawn up upon reading it:—Semble, that such rule may be granted on shewing service of a copy of the award, with the demand of performance; the original having before been shewn to defendant. McLean v. Kezar, 1 P. R. 125.

The rule for an attachment for non-payment of an award, is properly a four not a six day rule. Jones v. Reid, 1 P. R. 247.

To enforce performance of an award, the proper mode is to serve an order that the party do within a time therein to be limited perform the award; which order must be indorsed with the notice required by the 46th of the orders of 1853. An attachment issued for non-performance of an award, when no such order had been served, was set aside with costs; although an order making the award an order of court with such notice indorsed, had been duly served. Wilson v. Switzer, 1 Ch. Ch. 44.

A rule nisi for attachment, drawn "upon reading the rule of court, award, allocatur, and papers filed in the cause," is in-sufficient: the affidavits filed, and necessary to bring the party into contempt, should be specifically referred to. Dickey v. Mulholtand, 2 P. R. 169.

When a rule nisi on the face of it refers to papers and affidavits filed, this is sufficient in ordinary cases; but in applications touching awards, and in proceedings to bring a person into contempt, the particular materials moved upon should be specified. Hesketh v. Ward, 17 C. P. 667.

3. Other Cases.

Chancery.]-This court has jurisdiction to carry out the terms of an award which directs the payment of money, although the reference contained no submission to pay, where the reference has been made an order of the court, and will in such a case order a reference to the master, and not oblige the party to sue at law. Armstrong v. Cayley, 2 Ch. Ch. 163.

Entering Judgment.]-Where a cause was referred on a verdict taken by consent, and the award made in vacation, final judgment entered before the next term was to be irregular. Vincent v. McLean, Dra.

Entering Judgment.]-A plaintiff who takes a verdict subject to a reference, but does not proceed to an arbitration, owing partly to the fault of the arbitrators, partly to the delay of the defendant, cannot enter judgment on the verdict without first applying to the court. Mott v. Loucks, T. T. 1 & 2

Entering Judgment. |- And the court will not allow such judgment to be entered. Gould v. Freeman, 3 U. C. R. 270.

Entering Judgment.]-Where on a reference at nisi prius, a verdict is taken sub-ject to the award, and the cause only is referred, and an award made, judgment may be entered after the first four days of the succeeding term. But when the matters not included in the cause are referred, judgment cannot be entered until after the next succeeding term. Hawke v. Duggan, 5 U. C. R.

Entering Judgment.]—Where a cause "and all matters in difference" were referred:—Held, that judgment could not be entered until after the first four days of the term following the award: and semble, the defendant would have the whole term to move in Whilmans Wollmans with the semble. in. Williams v. McPherson, 2 P. R. 49.

Entering Judgment.]—A verdict was taken at the autumn assizes, subject to an award, which was made in May following, and the polanitiff, without waiting until after the fourth day of the next term, immediately entered up judgment thereon:—Held, regular, Laurie v. Russett, 1 P. R. 36.

Entering Judgment.]—Where a verdict is taken and the award not made until after the next term, the plaintiff need not wait to enter his judgment until after the first four days of the term following the award. Blauchard v. Suider, 28 U. C. R. 210.

Entering Judgment. — Semble, that under the submission in this case no judgment could be entered up for the sum awarded, without application to the court. Murphy v. Cotton. 14 U. C. R. 426.

Entering Judgment, |—Where a plaintiff, in whose favour an award is, dies after the award, but before judgment, the suit does not abare, but judgment may be entered under 17 Car. H. c. 8. No execution, however, can issue in the name of plaintiff's executor without reviving the judgment. Proctor v, Jarvis, 15 U. C. R. 187.
Where a verifict was taken, and an award

Where a verdict was taken, and an award made on the first day of the term following, on which judgment was entered soon after that term:—Held, not too soon. Ib.

Entering Judgment.]—An application to set aside a judgment, founded on a verdict which was taken for the plaintiff subject to a reference to arbitration, the judgment having been entered up before the expiration of four days succeeding the day of making the award, was refused. Van Norman v. Bridgeford, 2 C. L. J. 132.

Entering Judgment.] — Judgment may be entered upon an award made on a reference at nisi prius under the compulsory clauses of the C. L. P. Act, although no verdict has been taken, without the formalities formerly required in the case of an attachment for non-payment of the amount awarded. An order for leave to enter such judgment is not necessary. McNeil v. Laucless, 2 C. L. J. 190.

Entering Judgment.]—A county court and all disputes, were referred, and a sum of money awarded, to be paid by A. to B. after ten days' notice of the award. The notice was served upon the attorney who had acted for A. on the arbitration, but who disclaimed any right otherwise to represent him on application for leave to enter judgment for non-navment:—Held, that the service was insufficient. In re Burns v. Potter, 4 P. B. 61.

Forum—Particular Court named.]—When a submission to arbitration provides for making the submission a rule of any particular court, no suit or proceeding can be had in any other court to set aside the award, whether such submission has or has not been made a rule of the court named in it. Direct Cable Co. v. Dominion Telegraph Co., 28 Gr. 648.

Forum — Tribunal Outside Province.] — Where an agreement for a submission contained a clause that it should be made a rule of the Court of Queen's Bench, in England, and all proceedings thereunder should be governed, as in Great Britain, by the provisions of the English C. L. P. Act.—Held, that this formed no objection to the jurisdiction of the court of chancery in this Province. Direct United States Code Co. (Limited) v., Dominion Telegraph Co. of Canada, S.A. R. 416.

Municipal Act—Railway Act.]—The distinction between arbitrations under our Municipal and Railway Acts and the English Lands Clauses Consolidation Act pointed out, and remarks as to the right to enforce such awards summarily. In re Colquboun and Town of Berlin, 44 U. C. R. 631.

Order for Payment.] — The award in this case ordered certain securities to be assigned to a trustee, who was to dispose of them, and out of the proceeds pay a certain sum to the applicant:—Semble, not an award on which an order to pay would be granted. Re Thomas and Brooke, 2 P. R. 78.

Order for Payment.]—Semble, that the control, when applied to under C. S. U. C. c. 24, s. 19, for a rule to pay over money awarded, will exercise the same discretion as foamerly on motion for attachment, for which this remedy is now substituted. Watson v. Garrett, 3 P. R. 70.

Order for Payment.]—To obtain execution under that section it is not sufficient to make the submission a rule of court. The defaulter must be called upon to shew cause why he should not pay, specifying the sun, and a rule absolute obtained. Re Thomes and Brooke, 3 P. R. 78; Niagara and Detroit Rivers R. W. Co. v. Buckwell, 3 P. R. 82.

Order for Payment—Instalments,]— The award directed payment of a sum by monthly instalments, with a proviso that on default in any of them the whole should fall due. Quare, whether the court would order payment of the whole sum, unless it were shewn that defendant had notice of the award before default. Niagara and Detroit Rivers R. W. Co., V. Buckwell, 3. P. R. SZ.

Reference to Master.]—The court of chancery has jurisdiction to carry out the terms of an award which directs the payment of money, although the reference contained no submission to pay, when the reference has been made an order of the court, and will in such a case order a reference to the master, and not oblige the party to sue at law. Armstrong v. Cayley, 2 Ch. Ch. 163.

Specific Performance. —The court of chancery, when the relief given by the award is of a nature proper to be specifically performed, will decree that relief; and that too, although the court cannot specifically perform some part of the award, which is for the benefit of the plaintiff, but which portion the plaintiff consents to forego. Bell v. Miller, 9 Gr. 385.

Specific Performance.]—The plaintiff and defendant owned adjoining lots, through which a stream flowed freely in its course until defendant threw logs and refuse wood into it, which had the effect of damming back the water on the plaintiff's land, whereupon the plaintiff instituted proceedings at law, which action, with all matters in difference between the parties, was referred to arbitration, when the arbitrators decided that defendant should remove all the timber across the curve pay one-half the costs of the action at law. The defendant having refused to obey the award, the plaintiff filed a bill for the purpose the property of the property of the plaintiff of the property of the property of the plaintiff of the property remove all the timber across the creek, and pose of compelling obedience thereto. court, under the circumstances, made the decree as asked, and ordered the defendant to pay the costs of the suit. Hodder v. Turcey, 20 Gr. 63.

Specific Performance. |-- Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to specific performance of an award giving him damages for his lands taken by the defendants: that the sum awarded was not so excessive as to shew any fraudulent or improper conduct on the part of the arbitrators; and, quere, whether if shewn it would be a defence in such a pro-Norvall v. Time-Forum.]-In answer to a bill to enforce an award, the defendant by answer submitted to the court a number of matters as objections to the award, and that a reference back to the arbitrator, with certain instructions, or a reference to the master as to the matters in dispute, should be directed. At the hearing on bill and answer, the defendant objected (1) to the jurisdiction the submission and award should be made a rule of the Queen's Bench or Common Pleas: (2) that the filing of the bill was premature. the time for moving against the award not having expired:—Held, that a proceeding to enforce an award by summary application, must be taken after the time for moving against it has elapsed. Moore v. Buckner, 28 Gr. 606.

Quære, whether a proceeding for that purpose by action at law or suit in equity, can be taken before that time. Ib.

Held, that the objection to the jurisdic-tion would have prevailed if properly taken, as the parties to the submission had agreed upon their forum; but the defendant, having submitted to the jurisdiction by his answer, and himself asked the intervention of the court, could not now be heard to object. Ib.

It not appearing that there was any good reason for filing a bill instead of proceed-ing in the usual way, the court refused to the plaintiff any costs other than such as he would have been entitled to had he proceeded to enforce the award under the statute. Ib.

VI. REFERENCE BACK.

Absence of One Party. | - Objections not appearing on the face of the award can-not be raised against an application for attachment. But where, on such application, it appeared that defendant had not attended arbitration through some misapprehension, the matters were referred back. ker v. Loyall, 2 P. R. 14.

Award Valid on its Face.]-The effect of the C. L. P. Act, s. 164, enabling the court to refer back, is not in any way to alter the arbitrator's power or authority; and the court therefore refused to refer back upon an objection, not apparent on the face of the award, that, in considering the nature of the award, that, in considering the nature of the work claimed for, the arbitrator had not con-formed to the engineer's certificate, which it was contended bound the plaintiff. Read v. Weir, 20 U. C. R. 544.

Doubt as to Questions Decided.]— Where cross rules had been obtained for an attachment for non-performance of an award, and to set the award aside, and the affidavits were conflicting as to whether a particular question had been decided by the arbitrators, question had been decided by the arbitrators, and as to alleged mistake in calculation, the court, under s. 88 of the C. L. P. Act, 1856, referred back the matters in dispute, dis-charging the rule for attachment without costs. In re Smith v. Runney, 2 P. R. 82.

Act, so as to enable the court to re-open the award on the general merits, Quiere, whether the Act applies in any case to references entired into before its passage. The question of costs considered. Xagle v. Latonv, 27 C. P. 137.

Grounds of Decision. | - Where an award is good on its face, the court will not refer the matters back that the arbitrators may state the grounds of their decision, and thus enable a motion to be made against it if illegal, Wells v. Gzowski, 16 U. C. R. 42.

Investigation not Full. | - Held, that under the circumstances appearing in this not be said that the arbitrator had fully considered or really pronounced judgment on the questions submitted, and the matters were referred back. In re Ingersell and Ellwood, 3 P. R. 162.

Judgment Entered-Costs.]-After the entry of judgment by plaintiff, it is too late to ask to be allowed to set aside the judgment and have the cause referred back to the arbitrators to enable them to certify for full costs in proper form, assuming that the omission to so certify is a ground, but as to which quere. Keép v. Hammond, 9 L. J.

Mistake.]-An application to refer back on account of a mistake in charging the plaintiff with the same sum twice was refused, the mistake being denied on affidavit, though the arbitrator certified that in his opinion the case should be reopened, as he was not sure this was not the case. Latta v. Wallbridge, 3 P. R. 157. Mistake.] — An arbitrator, as appeared from his minutes taken on the arbitration and other evidence, having misconceived certain acts and misunderstood some alleged admissions by counsel, the award was referred back for re-consideration as to the particular item affected by this mistake, with special directions as to costs. Clancy v. Clancy, 5 P. R. 108.

Mistake—Costs.]—Where a rule is asked for a rot refer a case back to an arbitrator to allow him to certify to prevent defendant deducting costs, the arbitrator evidently intending that each party should pay his own costs, the rule will be made absolute without costs, the costs of taking the award again before the arbitrator to be borne by the applicant. Jordan v. Ambler, S. C. L. J. 67.

Mistake—Omission of Costs.]—An arbitrator intended to award that the costs of the reference and award, as well as of the cause, should be paid by the defendant; but by the mistake of the clerk of the paintiffs attorney, by whom the award was drawn, the costs of the reference and award were omitted. The award was remitted back for correction, but on payment of costs by the plantiff, as the mistake was not that of the arbitrator only. Stewart v. Beattie, 37 U. C. R. 538.

Mistake—Time.]—An award, by mistake, instead of directing that the plaintiff should pay his own and the defendant's costs of the reference, except $12 which the defendant should pay, directed that the defendant should pay, directed that the defendant should have a state of the state of the

New Evidence.]—Matters will not be referred back upon the same grounds, as to the discovery of new evidence, &c., as would support an application for a new trial. McClain v. Maitland, 2 P. R. 279.

New Evidence.]—An award will only be referred back on the same grounds that would formerly have justified its being set aside. The court refused to refer back on the ground of the discovery of new evidence. Latta v. Wallbridge, 7 L. J. 207.

New Evidence.]—Held, in this case that he case was made out for remitting the action to the arbitrator on ground of the discovery of fresh evidence, ground being shewn that the evidence could not have been obtained by reasonable diligence; nor on the ground of the absence of a material witness, of whose evidence the defendants were aware during the progress of the reference, and neglected to ask for a commission or postponeunt. Lemay v. McRac, 16 O. R. 301.

Points Not Submitted to the Court.]
—The award in an action on a building contract, was in favour of the plaintiffs, and one of the arbitrators, in compliance with the defendants' request, certified, without submitting any question, that the building contract was binding, and the engineer's certificate conclusive, and that the navard had been based on that assumption. The plaintiffs moved to refer back the award with a direction that the contract did not bind, or to refer back the certificate for amendment, by stating the facts; but held, that as the arbitrators had not chosen to submit any point for decision, and were not bound to do so, the court could not interfere. Kesteven v. Gooderham, 20 U. C. R. 500.

Rescission of Contract-Quantum Meruit.]—P. was a contractor with the Government of Canada for building a post office, and K. was sub-contractor to do the mason and brick work for a lump sum, the sub-contract consisting simply of an offer to give the work for the sum named and an acceptance by K. P., being dissatisfied with the work done by K., took the contract out of his hands before it was completed, and finished it himself. then brought an action for the value of the work done by him and on reference by the to arbitration an award was made in K.'s favour. The court of appeal set aside the award and remitted the case to the arbitrator award and remitted the case to the arbitrator for further consideration, holding that though the contract did not authorize P. to take over the work and finish it at K's expense, and the latter was therefore entitled to recover on the quantum meruit, yet the cost of completing the work was considerably in excess of the contract price:—Held, reversing this judgment, that as it appeared from the evi-dence that the arbitrator fully understood the matter and got all the information that could be obtained on the subject, and as no impropriety or mistake was shewn to have been committed by him, no benefit could result from sending the award back for reconsideration, and the judgment was not jus-fied. Kennedy v. Pigott, 18 S. C. R. 699. insti-

Second Reference Back.] — Under a submission giving power to the court to refer back upon any application to set aside the award:—Held, that the power might be exercised repeatedly. The arbitrators, on a reference back, having taken the evidence of professional witnesses without notice:—Held, that such notice was indispensable; but as the arbitrators seemed to have acted under mistake, and not from a settled intention to do injustice, the matter should be referred back a second time. In re Manley v. Anderson, 2 P. R. 354.

Strong Grounds Necessary.]—Where a reference contains a power to the court to refer back, it will be exercised only when it appears that the award is egregiously wrong, or not sanctioned by the evidence; and held, that no sufficient ground appeared in this case. In re Brown and Overholt, 2 P. R. 9.

Time.]—On a compulsory reference a motion to refer back the award may be made within the first six days of the term following its publication. Kesteven v. Gooderham, 20 U. C. R. 500.

Time—New Evidence.] — An application to remit a case back to arbitrators for reconsideration need not be made within the time limited for moving to set aside an award, but it must be made within a reasonable time, and delay must be satisfactorily accounted for. Leicester v. Grazebrook, 40 L. T. N. S. 883, approved and followed. Re-Citizens Insurance Co., and Henderson, 13 P.

In this case a reference of the claims upon certain insurance policies was made by surmission to two arbitrators, who disagreed, and in pursuance of the submission chose an who made his award on the 25th umpire. July, 1887. On the 29th May, 1888, the in-surers moved for a reference back on the ground that they had then recently discovered evidence that a quantity of goods saved from the fire were not credited by the assured in their proofs of loss and were fraudulently concealed:—Held, that there should be a reference back to the arbitrators to consider the new evidence and determine its bearing on the questions originally submitted to them. The reference back should be general and not limited to an inquiry as to what goods were not destroyed by fire. Ib.

Two Arbitrators Ignoring Third.]—
The arbitrators met and two agreed upon an amount, and told the third (who dissented) that they intended to award this amount, and afterwards, in the absence of the third, and without notice to him, they increased the award; the objection being that the same two arbitrators took evidence secretly and without notice to the third, by going to see a mill at the urgent request of defendant, but during his absence:—Held, sufficient ground to refer the case back, but defendant not wishing that:—Held, not sufficient to set aside the award. Hall v, Wilson, 7, C. P. 272.

Two Previous Awards set Aside.]—The arbitrators having made two previous awards, which had both been referred back to them, and great expense incurred, the court refused to refer the matter back to them, but ordered that it be remitted to the Judge of the county court, unless counsel could agree upon such facts as would enable the court to deal with the matters in dispute. In re Albemarle and Eastman, 46 U. C. R. 183.

VII. SETTING ASIDE AWARD.

Action Pending to Enforce.]—Where an action on the award is pending, an application to set aside the award will be refused if the grounds could be urged as a defence under the pleas. Smith v. George, 12 U. C. R. 370.

Additional Affidavits.]—When a rule nisi is obtained before the last day of the term in which an award must be moved against, the court may allow additional affidayits to be filed after that day. In re-Wheeler and Murphy, 2 P. R. 32.

Affidavit Evidence.]—Where the umpire closes upon a reference to arbitration had allowed an affidavit to be used in evidence; but remarked, when it was read, that he would not attach any weight to it, and swore that in adjudicating upon the matters in difference he did not take such affidavit as evidence, or attach any weight whatever thereto, the award, notwithstanding, was set aside, but, under the circumstances, without costs. McEdward v. Gordon, 12 Gr. 333.

Amendment—Discretion of Arbitrator.]—Where the arbitrator, having power to amend the plendings, allowed a plen to be added, and the parties affected, instead of applying to have the reference revoked, proceeded with it notwithstanding the amendment, which they contended was improper and unjust, and applied for relief against the award on this ground, it was refused although the court thought on the materials before it, if the same were before the arbitrator, that the amendment ought not to have been allowed. So, where the arbitrator, having power to allow or disallow a claim set up by one of the parties to the reference, in the exercise of his judgment decided to allow it, and his motives were unassailed, the court, though differing from him as to the propriety of allowing the claim referred to, would not set aside the award on the merits. Secera v. Cosparce, 2. C. L. J. I.1.

Arbitrator's Certificate,]—An action upon a policy of insurance on goods, was referred by a compulsory reference. On motion to set aside the award, the evidence and proceedings, with the exhibits, were annexed, with a certificate signed by the arbitrator, dated 11th Max, stating that he certified the same to enable the defendants to move against his award if so advised:—Semble, that the certificate could not be looked at, as it was written after the award. Ascuman v. Niapura District Matual Fire Insurance Co., 25 U. C. R. 435.

Argument not Heard.]—Where counsel had agreed to submit their views on a legal point in the case to the arbitrators in writing, and the arbitrators decided without waiting to hear from them, the award was set aside. Periet v. Periet, 15 U. C. R. 165.

Conflicting Facts. — A Judge in chambers will not interfere to stay proceedings on an award, in order that a motion may be made in term to set it aside, when the facts sworn to are conflicting, and for all that appears the award may be in accordance with the facts proved. McLeary v. Smith, 5 L. J. 212.

Creditor Acting as Arbitrator.]—The fact of one of the arbitrators being a creditor of one of the parties to the suit is not sufficient to make an award invalid. Hall v. Wilson, 7 C. P. 272.

Damages—Inferences.]—An award made under 9 Viet. c. 37, and 10 & 11 Viet. c. 24, awarded a certain sum to A. "for the damage done to his property in the village of Milles Roches, by the construction of the Cernwall canal," stating no further parti-culars of damage. Affidavits however were filed to shew that the sum awarded must have Best of Saw that the sun and the sun above a base given, from its amount, for consequential, and not direct, damage. But held, that such allowance not being stated in positive terms, and the award being silent on the subject, as it might be, the court could not assume the fact to be so, and upon that ground (if a valid one) set aside the award. Commissioner of Public Works v. Daly, 6 U.

Denial Conclusive.]—Facts relied on to set aside an award must be distinctly sworn to, and if denied the denial is conclusive. Slack v. McEathron, 3 U. C. R. 184.

Discussion by Correspondence.] -Discussion by Correspondence.]—Where an award was agreed upon between arbitrators, and afterwards one of them dissented, and the others, after discussing his new view by letter, published the award as first agreed upon, it was set aside, because they should have met for the discussion; a correspondence in such a case being insufficient, though the dissenting arbitrator did not object to that method. Jekkyli v. Wade. S Gr. 363.

Disputed Facts.]-On a motion to se had been twice charged against the plaintiff, being identical with a judgment also allowed against him, and the arbitrator certified that in his opinion the matter should be reopened, in his opinion the matter should be reopened, as he was not sure this was not the case. It was objected also that the judgment was improperly allowed, having been recovered against the plaintiff and another, and therefore not admissible as a set-off. In answer the mistake was denied, and it was shewn that the identity of the two sums had been expressly in dispute before the arbitrator, on a note made by the plaintiff, and indossed by another defendant, in a suit upon it for his accommodation. It was sworn also that on a note made by the by another defendant, in a suit upon it to by another defendant, in a suit upon it to be accommodation. It was sworn also that his accommodation. The application was refused. Quare, whether under the cir-cumstances the judgment was not properly allowed as a set-off. Latta v. Wallbridge, 3 P. R. 157.

Disputed Facts.]—An action upon a policy of insurance on goods was ordered to be referred, and the award was in favour of the plaintiff. The evidence and proceedings, with the exhibits, were annexed, with a certificate signed by the arbitrator, dated 11th May, stating that he certified the same to enable the defendants to move against his award if so advised. The main objection his award if so advised. The main objection was that the arbitrator had found due notice and account of the loss given, whereas it was disproved by the plaintiff's own evidence:— Held, that the objection, being to the arbitrator's finding on the evidence, was untenable unless misconduct could be inferred. Accuman v. Niagara Mutual Fire Insurance Co., 25 U. C. R. 435.

Dissenting Opinion.]—An award cannot be impugned for excessive damages, on the affiliative of one of the arbitrators, giving no data or basis for calculation to support his opinion against the majority. In referral Western R. W. Co. and Chauvin, 1 P.

Evidence not Heard.]—Where after the arbitrators had commenced their investigation, both plaintiff and his attorney requested delay, and understood that it had been granted, but the arbitrators awarded in favour of defendant without giving further time, and without hearing all the testimony that the plaintiff might have offered—the award was set aside without costs. Grisdale v. Boulton, 1 U. C. R. 407.

Evidence not Heard.]-Where the arbitrators refused to examine witnesses, the award was set aside, although before the submission was signed the arbitrators inauthorization was signed the arbitrators informed the parties that they would not allow either of them, or their autorneys or agents, to be present at their investigations. In reMcMullen and Cayley, 2 U. C. R. 175.

Evidence not Heard.]—Arbitrators refusing to give time to produce testimony cannot support their award by shewing that such testimony could have been of no service. In re Bull v. Bull, 6 U. C. R. 357.

Evidence-Fraud. 1-To an action brought by defice - Trans. |- To an action prougur upon an award of compensation to the plain-tif under the Railway Act for injuriously affecting his land, defendants pleaded that the sum awarded was excessively and fraudulently exorbitant, and that the award was obtained by the fraud, covin, and misrepresentation of the plaintiff and the arbitrators. sentation of the plaintiff and the arbitrators. At the trial, to support this plea defendants called several witnesses to prove that the sum was grossly excessive. None of the witnesses, however, had been brought forward at the arbitration, although defendants could have called them then as well as at the trial; the award was clearly sustained by the only evidence before the arbitrators; no attempt was reade to impose the credit of cover was made to impeach the credit of any of the witnesses who gave it; no misconduct was proved on the part either of the plaintiff or of the arbitrators; and the arbitrators, being sworn, denied any improper motive: heing sworn, denied any improper motive;—
Held, that under these circumstances the evidence as to value of witnesses not before the arbitrators was inadmissible in support of the plea. Quare, whether anything short of actual fraud could support such a plea.
Widder v. Buffalo and Lake Huron R. W.
Co., 24 U. C. 18, 520.
Upon appeal from this decision, a majority of the court held that such evidence could not be wholly rejected. Widder v. Buffalo and Lake Huron R. W. Co., 27 U. C. R. 425.

Exceeding Authority.]-Award on a submission of differences in two suits, set submission of differences in two suits, set aside for excess of authority in awarding payment by certain lessees to W. of any sum whatever, there being no claim by him against them embraced in either of the actions refer-red. In re Wheeler v, Murphy, 2 P. R. 32.

Exceeding Authority.]—Defendant sold land to one L., and took a mortgage for part of the purchase money. L. conveyed to the plaintiff, subject to this mortgage. Defendant still owned the adjoining land, and disputes as to the boundary having arlsen, the plaintiff brought trespass, which, with all matters in difference, was referred. The arbitrator awarded for the plaintiff, and directed that the defendant should discharge this work. that the defendant should discharge this mortgage: -Held, beyond his authority, the mortgage not being mentioned in the reference; and the award was set aside. Stewart v. Brown, 2 P. R. 158. Exceeding Authority.]—Where a reference was specific, of accounts rendered up to 31st December, 1864, and the award went far beyond this, the court, upon the application of the person against whom the award was made, denying any binding authority to thus extend the reference, and his oath being unanswered, set aside the award. In re Roberts and Lorimer, 2 C. L. J. I.

Exceeding Authority Counsel. | The rule for a reference, granted on reading the consent to refer indorsed on the record at nisi prius, stated that any question of law at the request of either party should be referred to the court, costs of cause, referhe referred to in court, costs of coar. The ence and award, to abide the event. The order of reference as made a rule of court, differed from this; 1. by directing that costs, &c., should be in the discretion of the arbitrator; 2. that he should not be required to reserve any legal questions. Messr & B. acted throughout as agents for defendants' attorney, and all the papers were served upon them; and W. was counsel for deupon them; and W. was cosmiss for de-fendants both at nisi prins and the arbitra-tion. It was proved that on an undertak-ing of W., as counsel for defendants, not to raise any question of law, the terms of the reference were altered as above by consent of W., and of counsel for plaintiffs. On motion to set aside the award:-Held, that tion to set aside the award, had authority either as counsel or as agent for defendants' attorney to bind the defendants; and the award was upheld. Wilson ts; and the award was upheld. Wilson United Counties of Huron and Bruce, 11 C. P. 548.

Exceeding Jurisdiction — Lump Sum.]
—When an arbitrator avards one sum in respect of matters, some of which are within, and some without his jurisdiction, the award must be set aside. Cockburn v, Imperiat Lumber Co., 26 A. R. 19.

Exceeding Authority—Amending Acard.]
—The bill in this case was filed to rectify an award made under a submission to arbitration between the parties, on the ground that the arbitrators considered matters not included in the submission, and had divided the sums received by the defendant from the plaintiffs, because defendant's brother and partner was a party to such receipt, although the partnership affairs of the defendant and his brothers were excluded from the submission. The bill prayed that the award might be amended and the defendant decreed to pay the amount due the plaintiffs on the award being rectified, and that, in other respects, the award should stand and be binding on the parties; there was also a prayer for general relief;—Held, that to grant the decree prayed for would be to make a new award which the court had no jurisdiction to do, but:—Held, also, that under the prayer for general relief the plaintiffs were entitled to have the award set aside. Vernon v. Oliver,
11 S. C. R. 156.

Exceeding Jurisdiction.] — Held, that on the facts set out in this case, nothing appeared to support the award as to a matter alleged to have been verbally submitted, but not included in the written reference. Martin v. Kergan, 2 P. R. 370.

Exceeding Jurisdiction.] — The court will not inquire into the grounds on which an award is made, even although it be suggested that the arbitrators have opened a final judgment of a competent court under a submission in the common form, if it does not clearly appear that they have reversed the judgment or gone into its merits. Mc-Lecey v. Vandecar, 6 O. S. 481.

Excessive Amount.] — An award, under 35 Vict. c. 80 (0.), regarding land required by the defendants, was objected to as excessive, but was upheld, there being evidence to justify the amount awarded, and no ground for imputing partiality or legal misconduct to the arbitrators. Re Collins and Water Commissioners of Uttawa, 42 U. C. R. 378.

Ex parte Arguments. — Where, on a reference by A. and B., A.'s agent attended, and after B. had given evidence of a claim to the amount of £200, retired, understanding from the arbitrators that the case was closed; and B., in his absence, induced two of the arbitrators to award him £1,000, the third retusing to consent—the award was set aside on payment of costs. VanEgmond v. Jones, 4 O. S. 119.

Ex parte Arguments, | — Where, after an arbitration was closed, the agent of one party sent letters to two of the arbitrators, containing statements and arguments in favour of his principal, which the other party did not see, the award was set aside. Williams v. Roblin, 2 P. R. 234.

Ex parte Communication.]—Any communication between one of the parties to an arbitration and an arbitration to the subject of the reference of which the other party and the other arbitrators are not aware, and at which they are not present, is llegal, and renders the award invalid—an arbitrator being a Judge, whose duty it is to be indifferent between the parties. Therefore, where it was shewn that one of several arbitrators had held interviews with the defendant pending the reference, and that the arbitrator in one at least of such interviews consulted the defendant as to the modes in which the award might be framed, and asked the defendant which he preferred, these facts being withheld from the other arbitrators, the court set aside the award, and ordered the defendant to pay the costs. Pardec v. Hold. 26 Gr. 574. Reversed by the court of appeal on the ground that the motion to set aside the award was too late: 5 A. R. 1. An appeal to the supreme court was dismissed. Cassels Dig. 35.

Ex parte Conferences.] - Where at the commencement of a reference, L., the arbi-trator for one side, conferred privately with the parties who nominated him on the matters in question, and on the evidence to be offered, and continued this course to the end: -Held, that the impropriety was not cured by shewing that after the reference had made some progress, the other arbitrator acted with some progress, the other arbitrator acted with similar irregularity on the other side. The reference was to two, with power to them to appoint an umpire, who was to award if they disagreed. An umpire was appointed, and made an award:—Held, that the irregu-larity of L.'s course in holding private conferences with one of the parties was suffi-cient to avoid the award of the umpire. After the two arbitrators had finally differed, the umpire had a private conversation on the subject of the reference with the arbitrator L., in the absence of the other arbitra-tor and of the parties:—Held, that as L. had acted as the agent for one side, private conversation with him was as injurious and objectionable as private conversation with the principals would have been. In re Lawson and Hutchinson, 19 Gr. 84.

The court allowed the party prejudiced to

The court allowed the party prejudiced to serve a supplementary notice embodying the objections as to the course of the umpire and arbitrator L. the same having come to light on cross-examination, and there being strong reason for apprehending that the award was not a fair award. Ib.

Ex parte Evidence. |—Held, no objection to an award by three arbitrators, but which might have been made by any two, that one arbitrator alone examined a witness without notice to the opposite party, it being sworm that the other two arbitrators were totally ignorant of such evidence when they made the award. Boyle v. Humphrey, 1 P. R. 188.

Ex parte Evidence. —Where a witness was examined in the absence of defendant the award was set aside. McNulty v. Jobson, Jobson v. McNulty, 2 P. R. 119.

Ex parte Evidence.]—Though the arbitrator stated that the evidence thus given had in no way influenced his decision. Waters v. Daly, 2 P. R. 202.

Ex parte Evidence.]—Where a witness for one party is examined in the absence of and without notice to the other party, the award will be set aside. Hickman v. Lawson, 8 Gr. 386.

Where two arbitrators took the evidence of B. in the absence of the plaintiff and of the other arbitrator, by which evidence it appeared the two were influenced in their award:—Held, that the award was invalid. It.

Ex parte Evidence.]—Held, that the award in this case was bad and must be set aside, as it appeared that the arbitrators had received the evidence of one of the parties in the absence of the others, and after the arbitration was supposed to be closed. White-ly v. McMahon, 32 C. P. 453.

Ex parte Offer, |—After the evidence had been closed the construction committee of the railway company wrote a letter addressed to H. agreement was the company who had been closed to H. agreement when the company before the award was made and by him to the unpire, but was not communicated to H. until after the award, which contained recitals of the benefits proposed by this letter, and assessed the compensation at the sum originally offered by the company. The award was not signed by H.'s arbitrator, who swore that the letter affected the award, and reduced the sum awarded, while the other two arbitrators swore it had no effect upon their inding:—Held, that the award was bad. Remarks as to the caution to be observed by arbitrators in such cases in considering or acting upon such agreements made pending the arbitration. Herring and Napance, Tameorth, and Quebec R. W. Co., 5 O. R. 243.

Ex parte Statements.]—In this case the arbitrator having received statements and information upon the subject in dispute, in the absence of one of the parties, without communicating to him that he had done so, the award was set aside with costs. In re Cruickshank and Corby, 30 C. P. 463.

Ex parte Statements.]—Upon a motion to set aside an award on the ground that the arbitrators improperly received statements from one of the parties in the absence of the other:—Held, that it is not necessary in such a case to impute any intentional impropriety of conduct to the arbitrators, nor to shew that their decision has been in any way influenced by what has occurred; it is only necessary to shew that their minds may possibly have been influenced against the applicant by the communications that have taken place. Re Ferris and Eyre, 18 O. R. 305.

Where it appeared that after the close of

Where it appeared that after the close of the evidence and while the arbitrators were considering it, some explanations in regard to an account were given to them by one party to the arbitration in the absence of the other on a certain evening, and that when the arbitrators and the parties all met the next morning, one of the arbitrators said that they had had an explanation about the account, and wanted to know what the other party had to say about it:—Held, that the award was bad, and must be set aside. Ib.

Ex parte Statement After Decision but Before Award Signed.]—In the conduct of arbitrations the rule is inflexible that the arbitrators must be scrupulously guarded against any possible charge of unfair dealing towards either party; therefore where one of the parties to a reference, who had been examined as a witness, after the evidence had been closed and the matter argued, sent by mail his affidavit explaining some portion of his evidence, to the arbitrator, but which was not received by him until after he had written out the view in accordance with which he subsequently made his award; the court affirmed the judgment of the court below setting aside the award. Race v. Anderson, 14 A. R. 213.

Explanatory Documents.]—The court will refer to papers delivered by the arbitrators simultaneously with the award, and intended to be explanatory of it, as a part of the award itself. Hall v. Ferguson, 4 O. S. 392.

Expropriation.]—In a railway expropriation case the responlent, in naming his arbitrator, declared that he only appointed him to watch over the arbitrator of the company, but the company recognized him officially, and subsequently an award of $1,974.25 damages and costs for land expropriated was made under Art. 5164, R. S. Q. The demand for expropriation, as formulated in their notice to arbitrate by the appellants, was for the width of their track, but the award granted damages for three feet outside of the fences on each side as being valueless: —Held, that the appointment of respondent's arbitrator was valid under the statute and bound both parties, and that in awarding damages for three feet of land injuriously affected on each side of the track the arbitrators had not exceeded their jurisdiction. Quebec, Montmorreny, and Charlevoix R. W. Co. v. Mathieu, 19 S. C. R. 426.

Fence Viewers' Award. |—The Court of Queen's Bench has no authority to set aside an award of fence viewers made under C. S. U. C. c. 37. In re Cameron and Kerr, 25 U. C. R. 553.

Form of Rule Nisi.]—The rule must be drawn up on "reading the award;" and the alleged defects in the award must be sufficiently pointed out. Grand River Navigation Co. v. McDougall, 1 U. C. R. 255; Wilkins v. Peck, 4 U. C. R. 263.

Form of Rule Nisi.]—A rule nisi, not drawn up "on reading the award," is sufficient if among "the affidavits and papers filed," on reading which the rule was drawn up, there is a copy of the award verified by affidavit. Tracey v. Hodgest, 7 U. C. R. 5.

Form of Rule Nisi.]—A rule nisi was discharged with costs, because not drawn up on reading the award or copy, nor the submission, nor the rule making it a rule of court. Jacobs v. Ruttan, 2 C. L. Ch. 138.

Form of Rule.]—A rule nisi to set aside an award must be drawn up on reading the award or a copy of ir. Re Johns and Montreal and City of Ottawa R. W. Co., 40 U. C. R. 339.

Formal Defects.]—An award will not be set nside because the style of the cause in which it is intituled is not set out correctly and at length, provided it can be sufficiently identified by reference to the body of the award as being in the cause referred. Creighton v. Broten, 1 P. R. 331.

Forum—Improper Execution.] — Semble, that an objection that two of the arbitrators made the award without notice to the third can be taken advantage of in an action on the award. The application to set aside an award under such circumstances should be made to the court in which the action is pending. Smith v. George, 12 U. C. R. 370.

Forum.]—An award having been directed to be made within a year by an order of the chancery division where the parties were littigating concerning it:—Held, that a motion to set it aside should have been made in that division, and should be transferred. In re Township of Muskoka and Village of Gravenhurst, 6 O. R. 352.

Frand—Concolment of Facts.]—The court will relieve against an award made between partners in ignorance, on the part of the arbitrators, and of the remaining partners, that important transactions had not been entered by the other, the managing partner, in the books of the firm, in consequence of which omission the award had been to a corresponding amount too favourable to such managing partner. An injunction to restrain proceedings on a judgment recovered at law upon an award alleged to have been made under these circumstances was continued to the hearing, in a case in which the ultimate success of the plaintiffs at the heaving was not considered as wholly free from question, the amount of the judgment heing ordered into court. Wilson v. Richardson, 2 Gr. 448.

Fraud—Arguments.]—Action on an award of compensation to plaintiff under the Railway Act, for injuriously affecting his land. Plea, that the award was procured by fraud and misrepresentation. The land in question was situate upon a navigable river, running down to high water mark, and defendants' railway was built upon cribs in the river, cutting him off from access to the water, which was the injury complained of. The jury were directed that if the plaintiff contended before the arbitrators that by law and under his deed he had such an exclusive right to the water in front of his land as would entitle him to damages, when he had not, this was evidence of fraud under the plea:—Held, a misdirection, for no argument used by the plaintiff to enhance his claim or place his case in the best light, could be a fraud. Widder v, Buffelo and Loke Huron R, W, Co., 24 U. C, R, 520; in appeal, 27 U. C, R, 425.

Fraud—New Evidence.]—An award may be remitted to arbitrators for reconsideration and redetermination under the Ontario statute though the result of the reconsideration may be to have the award virtually set aside by a different, or even contrary, decision of the arbitrators. The court is justified in remitting an award to the arbitrators if fraud or fraudulent concealment on the part of the persons in whose favour it is made is established, or if new evidence is discovered which, by the exercise of reasonable diligence, could not have been discovered before the award was made. Green v. Citizens' Ins. Co., 18 S. C. R. 338.

General Finding.]—The submission directed a specific finding on a particular issue, and the arbitrator gave only a general award for defendants. A summons to set aside the award on this ground was discharged, on condition that defendants should allow the costs of this issue to be taxed to the plaintiff. Creighton v. Brown, 1 P. R. 331.

General Rule—Award Valid on its Face.]—An award cannot be impeached on the ground that it is erroneous in either law or fact unless the error appears on the face of the award. The cases in which the court will interfere are confined to those where such an error so appears; or where there has been corruption, fraud, or excess of jurisdiction: or the arbitrators making the award admit the mistake. Re Grant v. Eastwood, 22 Gr. 563.

Grounds Already Passed Upon.]—The court will not set aside an award upon affidavits setting forth a party's just claim to the allowance of large sums of money upon grounds which the arbitrators had rejected. McMillan v. McLean, 4 O. S. 5.

Impossibility of Compliance.]—The inability of a company awarded against under their charter to expend their funds in paying the award, would be no ground for setting it aside. In re Town of Barrie v. Northern R. W. Co., 22 U. C. R. 25.

Improper Reception or Rejection of Evidence.]—The improper reception or rejection of evidence by an arbitrator, without any corrupt intent, does not amount to legal misconduct upon which an award will be set aside. Webster v. Haggart, 9 O. R. 27.

The evidence received consisted in state-

The evidence received consisted in statements made by the plaintiff ante litem motam in substance confirmatory of his evidence before the arbitrator; and the rejection consisted in the arbitrator's refusal to receive parts of the plaintiff's examination without the whole being received. It did not appear that the arbitrator was influenced by the evidence objected to, and he made no request to be allowed to reconsider his award:—Held, that while the evidence objected to was not strietly admissible, the award could not be interfered with on such ground, and especially so since R. S. O. 1877 c. 50, s. 28, when it did not appear to have occasioned any miscarriage on the merits. Ib.

Improper Reception of Evidence—
Mistake in Principle.]—Held, affirming 16 O.
If. 207, that where the action and all matters of account and counterclaim therein and all by consent referred to the state of a counter of a counter of a counter of a counter of a manel person and all counter of a cou

Inconsistent Provisions.]—An award that defendant should pay the plaintiff a certain sum, including the costs of the reference, and afterwards directing that each party should pay half the same costs, is bad for repagnancy. Shaver v. Scott, 5 O. S. 575.

Inconsistent Provisions.] — Held, that an award (in an action of replevin for a promissory note) that declared the defendant to have detained the note illegally, and at the same time awarded that it should be delivered up, upon payment of a certain sum, (which amount was due thereon), was not void for inconsistency, as it effected substantial justice between the parties. Lund v. Smith, 10 C. P. 443.

Interested Witness.]—When arbitrators without consent examined an interested witness, and afterwards awarded in favour of the party calling him, the award was set aside. Daris v. Birdsall, 2 U. C. R. 199.

Interim Finding—Wairer.]—By clause 2 of the order of reference, the referees were directed to make and publish their award in writing on or before the 3rd January. 1887, or such other day as they should appoint. During the reference it was agreed between the narties that the arbitrators should rescued to the ground and ascertain by their own examination the quantities of material movement to which the displayment of the findings, and all other needstons in the article of the ground and reference to the grant open; and pursuant to this agreement the arbitrators proceed to the grant open; and pursuant to this agreement the arbitrators proceed to the grant open; and pursuant to this agreement the arbitrators proceed to the grant open; and pursuant to this agreement the arbitrators proceed to the green of the arbitrators proceed to the green of the arbitrators because the state of the state of it an award within the meaning of s. 209 of the C. L. P. Act; but was merely a finding of facts pending the reference, to enable the arbitrators to make their award. Commet v. Canadian Pacific R. W. Co., 16 O. R. 639.

the making of the award; and therefore the objection that a motion against the finding was too late, failed. Ib.
Held, upon the evidence, that there was no waiver of the objections to the finding and that although the finding was not an award, the motion made against it by the plaintiffs was a convenient and proper one. Ib.

Invalidity Not Presumed.]—The court will not intend matter; such matter must be shewn affirmatively. Tracey v. Hodgest, 7 U. C. R. 5.

Irregularity — Costs.] — An award set aside for irregularity of the arbitrators, such as the examination of witnesses in the absence of the parties, will be set aside without costs, Campbell v, Boulton, 1 U. C. R. 407.

Irregularity — Waiver.] — Where either party to an arbitration objects to an irregularity in conducting it—as, for instance, against a certain person administering the out to the witnesses—and takes his chance of the award, he cannot afterwards, on the same ground, impeach the award. Slack v. McEathron, 3 U. C. R. 184.

Irregularity — Waiver.] — The party on whose motion an order of reference has been made a rule of court cannot, in opposing an application to set aside the award, object that the cause is improperly styled in such rule. Creighton v. Brown, 1 P. R. 331.

Letters Read and Rejected.]—The decision of an arbitrator being binding on the parties in matters of law as well as in fact, an award will not be set aside because letters are put in as evidence by one of the parties which are not legal evidence, if the circumstances and the conduct of the arbitrators are consistent with the supposition that they only read the letters for the purpose of judging of their admissibility as evidence, and it does not appear that they actually received them as evidence. Hotchkiss v. Hall, 5- P. R. 423.

Lump Sum—Dual Capacity,]—The plaintiff and defendant agreed to refer all matters touching and concerning all claims and demands whatsoever of the plaintiff against or in respect of the estate of the late T. P. (except as to a specific devise), and all accounts, claims, and demands whatsoever then existing between the plaintiff, and defendant as executor of T. P., or otherwise howsoever. The arbitrator awarded that $4.485 was due from defendant as executor of T. P., and otherwise, to the plaintiff in respect of the matters referred, which sum he directed to be paid, and that when paid it should be in full satisfaction of all demands by plaintiff against defendant as such executor, and otherwise, in respect to all the matters referred:—Held, no objection to the award, that it did not find separately the amount awarded against defendant as executor, and in his own right. Perrin v, Perrin, 32 U. C. R. 606.

Miscalculating Strength of Case.]—Where parties to a protracted reference thought their case so strong that it would be impossible for the arbitrator to find against them, and did not do all that it was in their power to do to repel the case of their opponent, relief against an adverse award was refused on the ground of surprise and discovery of new evidence. Severn v. Cosgrace, 2 C. L. J. II.

Misconduct.] — On application to set as the facts which are relied upon to establish charges of partiality and unfairness on the part of an arbitrator must be clearly averred. Hotchkies v. Hall, 5 P. R. 423.

Misconduct—Specific Charge,]—A charge of corruption and partiality against an arbitrator must be sustained by specific, not by general, affidavits. Burr v. Gamble, 4 Gr. 626.

Misconduct — Umpire. 1— The reference was to two arbitrators with power to them to appoint an umpire, who was to make an award if the two disagreed; an umpire was differing the umpire made an award:—Held, that each party was entitled to the free judgment of the two arbitrators on the matters in difference as a condition precedent to the umpire sutherity coming into force, as well as their free judgment in the appointment of the umpire; and that one of the arbitrators bolding private conferences with one of the parties was sufficient to avoid the award of the umpire. In re Lawson and Hutchinson, 19 Gr. 84.

Misconduct-Consent-Remitting Back.] —By s. 12 of R. S. O. 1897 c. 62, the court may set aside an award when an arbitrator has misconducted himself, and by 35 the court has the same powers as to references under order as are by the Act conferred on it as to references out of court. By Consolidated Rule 652 the court remit the case referred or any part back for further consideration. When an arbitrator appointed in court by consent of the parties improperly heard evidence behind the back of one of the parties which affected a portion of the award :-Held, that under the above sections Rule 652 does not apply to the case of an arbitration ordered by consent in court to an arbitrator selected and agreed on between the parties, and that the whole award must be set aside. Semble, s. 42 of the above statute gives a discretion to the court setting aside an award to deal with the costs. Kennedy v. Beal, 29 O. R. 599.

Mistake.]—An award will not be set aside for a mistake in law on the part of the arbitrators, not apparent on the face of the award. Town of Kingston v. Day, 1 P. R. 142.

Mistake.)—Where all matters in difference in law and equity have been referred, and the award is legal on its face, it will not be set aside, although it may seem that the arbitrators have mistaken the law, and the amount awarded is large. Hall v. Ferguson, 4 O. 8, 392.

Mistake.]—The alleged mistake in law and fact must appear on the face of the award, or be disclosed by some contemporancous writing. McDonald v. McDonald, 7 L. J. 297. In this respect there is no difference between awards made on compulsory reference under the C. L. P. Act and other awards. Ib.

Mistake, |—The rules as to setting aside awards are the same with respect to compulsory references as to others. The court, therefore, refused to interfere on affidavits tending to shew that the arbitrator was mistaken as to the law and fact. Sadler v. Carruthers, 20 U. C. R. 569.

Mistake—Delay.]—An award, by mistake, instead of directing that the plaintiff should pay his own and the defendant's costs of the reference, except $12, which the defendant should pay, directed that the historial pay, directed that the historial pay, directed to the test of the plaintiff was directed to pay. The award was made on the 17th May, 1873, the Saturday before Easter term, but nothing was done—which delay was not necounted for—until 2nd September, when defendant obtained a certificate from the arbitrator as to the mistake made, and on the 11th September obtained a summons in chambers to enlarge the time for making the award till the 1st October, and to remit the award back to the arbitrators for reconsideration. The summons having been enlarged till Michaelmas term, and heard before the full court:—Held, that the application was not too late, and the rule was made absolute. Connor v. McCormack, 23 C. P. 271.

Mistake—Initials—Amount,]—Held, that a mistake in the initial letters of the name of one of the parties is not fatal; and that an award for a certain sum, and that a verdict should be entered for the said sum, naming Charles v. Hickson, T. T. 3 & 4 Vict.

Mistake—Interest.]—A mistake in the calculation of interest was held no objection. Priestman v. McDougal, Tay. 451.

Mistake—Mutual.] — Declaration on a joint bond by defendants, M. & G., to perform an award concerning all differences between the plaintiff and defendants, averring an award that M., one of the defendants, was indebted to the plaintiff in a sum named, and directing him to pay it by a certain day. Plea, on equitable grounds, in substance, that the only matter in dispute in the action, besides the amount due by M., was whether G. was liable with him, and it was distinctly agreed that in case the arbitrators should award for G., such award should release him from all liability on the bond; that instructions were given to prepare an instrument to carry out said agreement, but by mutual mistake it was not so worded, and was executed without the error being discovered; and that upon the reference the plaintiff abandoned all claim upon G., and the arbitrators thereupon awarded as they dis:—Held, on denurrer, plea good. Gerric v. McDonell, 18 U. C. R. 146.

Mistake—Names of Parties.]—Where a verdict was taken for the plaintiff, subject to a reference, and the arbitrator awarded for defendant, but everywhere styled the plaintiff "John," instead of "Patrick,"-the court set the award aside, and granted a new trial. McManmon v. McElderry, H. T. 6

Mistake—Two References — Umpire Not Properly Appointed.]—Where a plaintiff, having two actions pending, one in a representative character and the other in his own right, referred both to arbitrators, who were to award by a certain day, or appoint an umpire in writing, and the arbitrators not being able to agree appointed, but not by writing, an umpire, who made an award, which the arbitrators adopted and published as their own before the time limited for making the award had expired, and awarded thereby a sum of money to the plaintiff in his representative character—the court, on affidavits of the umpire and of the arbitrators, that the money was intended for the plaintiff in his own right, refused an attachment for non-jayment of the sum awarded; and afterwards, on motion, set the award aside on account of the mistake, and because it was not the arbitrators' own award. Dennison y Sandlond, 3 O. S. 379.

New Evidence. |—Discovery of fresh evidence is no ground, unless it be shewn satisfactorily why it was not before obtained. Power v. Peterborough and Cobourg R. W. Co., 2 P. R. 79.

New Evidence.]—The court refused either to set aside or refer back for the discovery of new evidence. Latta v. Wallbridge, 7 L. J., 207.

Notice of Meeting.]—The court set aside an award made under 16 Vict. c. 181, s. 33, as to the damages to be paid to a party through whose land the municipality had opened a road, where it appeared that no notice had been given to the municipality of the meeting of the arbitrators, and that no one had attended on their behalf. In re Johnson and Township of Gloucester, 12 U. C. R. 135.

No Notice of Taxation—Severable Demands. I—All matters in difference in a cause and on a building agreement between plaintiff and defendant, were referred, costs of the cause and of the reference to abide the event. The award, after disposing of the different issues in plaintiff's favour, assessed his damages over and above his costs and charges at 524, and fixed the costs of the tefrence and award at £20. The costs of the suit were afterwards taxed without notice to defendant, and a demand made of the amount awarded, the costs of the award as fixed by the arbitrators, and the taxed costs:—Held, that the want of notice of taxation was not a ground for setting aside the award, but for withholding the attachment until the costs could be revised; that the demand upon which the attachment was moved for, though too large in including the costs of the award, was good as to the rest, each sum having been separately demanded. The rule for attachment was therefore made absolute, but the writ was ordered to lie in the office a month, to enable the defendant to get the costs of the suit and award taxed, and make payment. Jones v. Reid, 1 P. R. 247.

No Notice to Third Arbitrator.]—
Where the award was made in a hasty manner on the day of submission, the third arbitrator not being informed of the sitting, and there being a misapprehension on the part of the litigants as to what was referred, the award was set aside. In re McCluny and Motley, 6 L. J. 92.

Nova Scotia Mines Act.]—See Palgrave Gold Mining Co. v. McMillan, [1892] A. C. 460.

Omission of One Party to give Evidence.]—When the plaintiff's attorney had attended a meeting of arbitrators, the court refused to set aside the award, because the plaintiff had not attended to give his evidence according to the provision in the rule of reference, from the miscarriage of a notice sent to him by his attorney, and although the award proceeded principally upon the evidence of defendant. McDougall v. Camp. Tay, S7.

Omission to take Oath — Municipal Act.]—The failure of the arbitrator to take the oath required by s. 458 of the Municipal Act, R. S. O. 1897 c. 223. is fatal to his award; but when an award is moved against on the ground of such failure, it must be clearly shewn that the applicant was not aware of the omission until after the making of the award. Re Burnett and Town of Durham, 31 O. R. 262.

One Party Present at Deliberations—One Arbitrator not Executing—Form of Award.]—II. insured a stock of teas, &c., and having sustained loss by fire, the matter was referred to L. and C., and a third person to be appointed to the content of the them, the appraisement and the proposed of the content of the them to be binding. L. and C., and them, the term to be binding. L. and C., and the arbitrators, M., having drawn the document set out in the report, produced it at a meeting of the arbitrators, and read it as his finding. At the next meeting a document formally drawn up by the company's solicitor was produced and signed by M.; but for some reason it was abandoned. At this meeting the arbitrators permitted the manager and inspector of the company to be present and take part in the discussion as to the amount of the award and the fixing of the costs. L. and M. agreed on the amount, but C. said he would not sign such award, and an appointment was then made for the next day, C. being present, to meet and sign it. The award was accordingly made on the following day by L. and M., C. not attending:—Held, that under the circumstances C.'s absence formed no objection. Held, also, that permitting the officers of the company to be present and take part in the deliberations of the arbitrators was such improper conduct as to render the award bad. Held, that the document written and signed by M., and expressed throughout in the first person as his decision alone, without anything contained therein shewing it to be the decision of L., the other arbitrator also, although signed by L., could not be upheld as the award of two arbitrators. Re Hubbard y, Union Fire Ins. Co., 44 U. C. R. 231.

Order of Court.]—It is no objection to a motion to set aside an award, that the award has been made an order of court. In re Lawson and Hutchinson, 19 Gr. 84.

Order of Reference not Complied With.]—Award held invalid for want of a proper return of the evidence and facts as required by the rule of reference. Murphy v. Cotton, 14 U. C. R. 426; Ross v. County of Brace, 21 C. P. 548.

Original Award not Produced.]— Where it was sworn that the original was in the possession of plaintiff's attorney, who refused to give it up, a rule nist was granted, which was afterwards made absolute, on the production and verification of copy of the award served. Steen v. Glass, M. T. I Vict.

Partiality.]—Where the legal rights are not harsh, but the award disregards them entirely, it is void for inequality and partiality. Jekyll v. Wade, S Gr. 363.

Party Examined. — The award will be set aside if arbitrators examine one of the parties upon oath when not authorized to do so by the submission. Stocking v. Crooks. Tay, 492.

Points of Law not Reserved. |—On a submission to arbitration of cause and all matters in difference therein, subject to such points of law as should properly arise on the pleadings and evidence, a question arose as to the arbiteiency to bind one of the parties of certain evidence tendered respecting some extra work done outside of the scaled contract entered into between the parties, and the arbitrators, instead of reserving this for the opinion of the court, themselves decided that the evidence was quite sufficient, merely reporting what the legal objections were. The court, with very strong observations on the flagrant disregard of their plain duty under the submission, refused to refer the matter back to the arbitrators, but simply set aside their award and the verticit found by them in favour of the plaintiff. Ross v. County of Bruce, 21 C. P. 548.

Production of Award.]—The objections taken to the award were, that having been made ex parte, and without hearing witnesses, it was void, and it was urged that it might therefore he set aside without producing it; but held, otherwise. Re Hinton v. Mende, 24 L. J. Ex. 140, not followed. Re Johnson and Montreal and City of Ottawa R. W. Co., 40 U. C. R. 359.

Question not Dealt With.]—Where all matters in difference were referred to three arbitrators, the award to be made in writing by them, or any two of them, and it afterwards appeared that one of the three dissented from an award made by the other two, and that they had made no decision regarding a promissory note in difference, which had been brought under their notice, the award was set aside. Kemp v. Henderson, 10 Gr. 34.

Rejecting Evidence.]—Where an order of reference by consent provided that the arbitrator "shall have power to examine the parties and their witnesses upon oath or affirmation," it was held that he had no discretion to reject the evidence of one of the parties on his own behalf. Lister v. Ham, I. C. L. J. 298.

Revoking Submission.]—Upon a reference to determine the damage sustained by plaintiff by reason of the taking and detention by defendant of a certain schoener, the arbitrators awarded $2,200.65, and among other items $40 for travelling and law expenses. Upon a motion to set aside the award, the court, without admitting the legality of the charge, refused to interfere as the defendant should have applied to revoke the submission. Carreth v. Fortune, 12 C. P. 504.

Rule of Court.]—Where there is no provision in an order of reference at nisi prius to make it a rule of court, the court will not set aside the award. Cumming v. Allen, Tay. 205.

Severable Provision. —Where differences between the parties to a building contract as to extra work were referred, and the arbitrators awarded on matters in regard to the original contract not relating to extra work, and the bad part of the award could not be separated, the award was set uside. In re Knowlessen V. Inglis, 7 L. J. 124.

Severable Provision—Costs.]—When after action matters in dispute have been referred generally, without anything as to costs, and the arbitrators award a sum to the plaintiff, and direct that the costs of defence and of the award are to be deducted therefrom, the court will not set the award aside because of such deduction. Semble, that when arbitrators award the costs of the arbitration without authority to do so, if they are separable, the award is only bad as to that part. Faulkner v. Saulter, I. P. R. 48.

Costs awarded without power are separative.

Costs awarded without power are separable, and the award is only bad as to that part. Ib.; Jones v. Reid, I P. R. 247; Roddy v. Lester, 14 U. C. R. 259.

Severable Provision—Costs.]—Where costs were awarded without authority, and could not be separated from the sum awarded, the award was set aside. Webster v. Black, 6 O. S. 105.

Severable Provision — Delegation of Powers. |—All differences concerning the renting of a farm by defendant to plaintiff, and all other matters in dispute, were referred to arbitrators, who awarded a division of certain crops and stock specified; and in order that an equal division should be made, they ordered that the defendant and plaintiff should select two disinterested persons from the neighbouring farmers, whose decision should be financially and plaintiff by defendant;—Held, that the award was bad for the delegation to third parties, and for uncertainty; and that the plaintiff could not recover the £150, that part of the award not being separable from the rest, Harrington v. Edison, 10 U. C. R. 114.

Severable Provision—Time for Payment.]—On a reference under 16 Vict. c. 219, and 29 Vict. c. 89, the Toronto Esplanade Acts, the sum awarded was directed to be paid forthwith, whereas the statute allows a year from the award or from any rule of court ordering payment, but held, that this part of the award, which was clearly bad, might be separated from the rest. In recity of Toronto and Leak, 23 U.C. R. 223.

Statutory Finality.]—Awards under 9 Vict. c. 81, ss. 25 and 27, are final, and not subject to be set aside by the court. In re-Great Western R. W. Co. v. Light, 1 P. R. 378.

Statutory Finality.]—What objections are available against an award declared by statute to be final. Kennedy v. Burness, 15 U. C. R. 473.

Strong Grounds of Merits.] - The court will not set aside an award upon an affidavit of merits, except upon manifestly clear and strong grounds. Scobell v. Gilmour, 5 U. C. R. 48.

Supplementing Grounds.]—On a motion to set aside an award, the court allowed the party prejudiced to serve a supplementary notice embodying objections as to the course of the umpire and arbitrator, which had come to light on cross-examination, there being strong reasons for apprehending that the award was not a fair award. In re Lauson and Hutchisson, 19 Gr. 84.

Suppression of Facts.]—Where the defendant made a representation to the arbitrators which was to influence their conduct, but suppressed a material fact, the court set aside the award. Hickman v. Lawson, 8 Gr. 386.

Time for Moving.]—Too late after fourterms from the publication, and an attachment granted for non-performance. Crooks v. Chisholm, 4 O. S. 121.

Time.]—Where a verdict has been taken, subject to a reference, the award, unless under very peculiar circumstances, must be moved against within the first four days of the term after it was made. Campbell v. Cameron, 1 U. C. R. 29.

Time. —Where a cause and all matters in difference were referred:—Held, that judgment could not be entered until after the first four days of the term following the award, and, semble, the defendant would have the whole term to move in. Williams v. McPherson, 2 P. R. 49.

Time.]—Where a verdict was taken, and an award made on the first day of term, which defendant became aware of on the following Monday:—Held, that a motion on the last day of term was too late. Perley v. Loder, 2 P. R. 105.

Time.]—Held, that the undertaking set out in this case, given on the last day of term, was a waiver of an objection as to time, so that the motion might be made in the following term, McNulty v, Jobson, Jobson v, McNulty, 2 P. R. 119.

Time.]—It would seem that a motion to set aside an award in the court of chancery, must be made within the common law term following the publication of the award. Re Taylor and Bosteick, 1 Ch. Ch. 53.

Time.]—Held, that an application to set aside a judgment on an award after a lapse of two years was too late. Wood v. Moodie, 3 U. C. R. 79.

Time.]—The time given to move under 9 vol. c. 23, and 10 & 11 Viet. c. 24 — viz., one year—extends to Upper Canada as well as Lower Canada. Commissioner of Public Works v. Dally, 6 U. C. R. 33.

Time.]—An application was made during Easter term to set aside an award of the 9th December preceding, a term having classed after the making of the award:— Held, too late. In re Matthews and Webster, 1 P. R. 75.

Time.]—An award, under submission by bond, was made on the 31st January, and a notice mailed to the plaintiff on that day, which was received on the 2nd February, the first day of Hilary term:—Held, that an application in Easter term was too late. In re Cumming and Graham, 1 P. R. 122.

Time.]—An action of covenant was referred at mis prints, and on certain breaches assigned a verdict taken for specified sume, the damages on other breaches being resultantly, and one of the breaches particularly, a verdict was entered for £125, subject that the arbitrators should report in or with their award the evidence and facts on which they should find the damages awarded (if any) on either or both of these breaches, so as to enable the court to determine whether such evidence and facts would in law warrant the damages. The arbitrators awarded damages on each of these breaches, but omitted to return the evidence and facts and facts. A copy of the evidence only was found in court, not signed, or annexed to the award, or referred to in it; and the facts did not otherwise appear:—Held, that under the circumstances of the case and terms of the submission, the award might be moved against although the first term after it was made had expired. Murphy v. Cotton, 14 U. C. it. 426.

Time.]—The time for moving runs from the time the defendant is notified of the award having been made, not from the making. And when it is made under a rule of reference, the court, on good ground shewn, will not always hold the party to the strict rule of moving within the next term. Dexter v. Fitzgibbon, 4 L. J. 43.

Time.]—The delay in moving from the 21st August, when the award was made, until the 4th December, was held sufficiently accounted for by the loss of the nisi prius record and submission. Stewart v. Beattie, 37 U. C. R. 538.

Time.]—Held, that an application to set aside an award made under s. 45t. R. S. O. 1877 c. 174, and published before Trinity term, 1877, was too late on the 26th November following, though the full court did not sit in Trinity term, Re Moyle and City of Kingston, 43 U. C. R. 307; Stevart v. Beattie, 37 U. C. R. 538.

Such an award having been set aside by a single Judge, on motion made after Trinity term, the court gave effect to this objection though first taken on appeal from the rule setting aside the award. Ib.

Time.]—An award made under s. 160, C. S. U. C. e. 22, before Trinity term, must be moved against within the first four days of that term, even though the full court may not sit, as the motion can be made to a single Judge within the same period. Witson v. Richardson, 43 U. C. R. 365.

Time.]—On the 2nd December, 1878, the submission being within the 9 & 10 Will. III., the plaintiff moved to set aside an award made on the 13th August previously, accounting for his delay on the ground that the defendant had, on the 4th September, before the end of the next term, served a notice on him of his intention to appeal. It was not, however, sworn that he refrained from moving owing to this notice:—Held. reversing 26 Gr. 374, that the evidence did not shew that the delay was induced by the defendant, but that even if it had, it would have been no excuse for the delay. Pardee v. Lloyd, 5 A. R. 1. Affirmed by the Supreme Court: Cassels' Dig. 35.

Time Abolition of Terms.] -An award must be moved against within the term following its publication, or within the period which such term formerly occupied. when the term has been abolished, where an when the term has been abulshed, where al-tward was published on the 13th August, 1888, notice of appeal dared 7th September, 1888, but not served till 10th September, 1888, was:—Held, too late, Kean v. Two Arbitrators Deciding.]-The reference was to two, with power to appoint third, the award to be made by any two. T arbitrators met, and two of them determined the award in a particular way, afterwards told that it was or They were the award in a particular way, afterwards told that it was out of their power so to award; and they then, at a subsequent meeting, altered their decision. third arbitrator was not present at the last meeting, and it appeared that he had been notified of the intention to meet again, but no proper notice had been given to him of the time and place of meeting, nor of the in-tended alteration in the award:—Held, that the award must be set aside: that by sending notice to the third arbitrator of their intention to meet again, the two making the award had shewn that they did not consider his declaration of dissent as final, and therefore he should have had proper notice to enable the proposed change in the award. In re Mc-Donald and Presant, 16 U. C. R. 84.

Two Arbitrators Deciding.] — The three arbitrators, C., D., and M., having met and discussed all the matters referred, separated, unable to agree, M. expressing his dissent as final. On the next day the attorney for one party wrote to D., requesting that the amounts found on the different heads of claim might appear on the face of the award, so might appear on the face of the assault, that they might be able to obtain the opinion of the court, stating that the latter was in-tended for D.'s colleagues as well as him-self, and desiring that the claimant's attorney should be made aware of it. C. and D. con-sidered this communication, and determined sidered this communication, and active to disregard it, but no notice was given to M., and an award was made two days afterwards by C. and D., without further consulting him in any way:—Held, that it was the duty of the other two arbitrators to notify M. of this letter, and of their intention to settle and execute the award, and the award was therefore set aside on this ground. In re City of Toronto and Leak, 23 U. C. R. 223.

Unfair Conduct.]—An award set aside for unfair conduct of the arbitrators in the manner of hearing the evidence. Hamilton v. Wilson, 4 O. S. 16.

Whole Matter not Examined Into. -Although the court are bound not to set aside an award on the merits, yet they will interfere when they see that either party has not had an opportunity of explaining or examining into the whole matter submitted. Small v, Rogers, H. T. 4 Vict.

Withholding till Costs Paid, |—The count refused to set asid: an award on the ground that the arbitrators had desired it not to be delivered until the costs of making at were paid. Gev v. Attwood, Tay, 119.

Witness.]—Examination of arbitrator as witness on motion to set aside award. See In re-Christic and Toronto Junction, 22 A. R. 21.

Witnesses not Heard by Umpire.]— Held, that an award decided by an umpire who does not hear the witnesses himself, but takes their evidence from the notes taken by the arbitrators, and from their statements of the mature of it, will be set aside, unless there was an express consent to such a course by both parties. Morden v. Widdifield, 6 P. R. 179.

VIII. SUBMISSION AND REFERENCE.

1. Abortive Reference.

Conditional Verdict. — anse referred at nist prins, and verdict taken for the plaining, subject to a reference, award to be made by a certain day, with power to the arbitrations to enlarge the time; they did enlarge it once, but no award was made, and after that day was passed the defendant's attorney was asked by the plaintiff's attorney to consent to a further enlargement, and declined; no application had been made to the arbitrators. The court held they could do nothing more than set aside the conditional verdict. Monday, Egre, 5 V. C. R. 470.

Judgment, —Where a verdict has been taken by consent for plaintiff, subject to a reference, the court will not, on account of the failure to make an award, allow judgment to be entered for the verdict, though such failure be imputed to defendant. Watson v. Fotheryill, 5 O. S. 135.

Second Time—Costs.]—Where a case is referred at nisi prius and again taken down to trial, the reference proving abortive, the party succeeding will be entitled to the costs of the former occasion. McLellan v. London, 1 U. C. R. 95.

Second Verdict,]—Where a verdict had been taken in 1860, subject to a reference, which was never proceeded with, and a second verdict was taken in 1863;—Held, that the second verdict was irregular while the first remained, and must be set aside with costs. Kelly v. Henderson, 3 P. R. 198.

Second Verdiet.]—A cause was referred at his prins, the award to be made by the 1st July, with leave to the arbitrator to enlarge, but no verdiet was taken. He enlarged the time until the 2nd August, and, after hearing the evidence, adjourned till the 4th to enable defendants to procure their witnesses. Neither party attended again, nor took any steps to arocure a further enlargement, and the plainfull gave notice of trial for the autumn assizes. Defendants notified him that they would move against the proceedings, as the order of reference was yet in force, but the plaintif.

went on and took a verdict, defendants not appearing:—Held, that defendants, if they desired the reference to continue, should have applied for an enlargement before the verdict, and that by omitting to do so they had waived their right; but under the circumstances the verdict was set aside without costs, upon an adidavit of merits. Miller v, Hogg, 2 P. R. 209.

2. Agreement to Refer.

Condition Precedent to Action.]—
Upon a covenant in a lease that in case of fire a fair deduction should be made in the rent, to be assertained by arbitration as provided, where neither had appointed an arbitrator:—Held, that the teannt was not precluded from making a jury the medium by which a deduction was to be made. Quarre, if the landlord had offered to arbitrate, and the tenant had refused, could the reduction then be referred to a jury. McGill v. Proudfoot, 4 U. C. R. 33.

Condition Precedent to Action.]—
Defendant hired plaintiff to make for him certain machines and superintend their use in his manufactory for five years, unless before torminated as thereinafter provided; and in the committed as the perform fully the agreement, it might be perform fully the agreement, it might be perform fully the agreement, it might be performed as a superior of the manufacture of the full state of the superior of the superior of the full state of the superior of the machines or plaintiff sperformance of the agreement, the same should be referred to three arbitrators, chosen in the manner stated, their decision to be final. In an action for wronnful dismissal by the plaintiff:—Held, that the agreement to refer, being collateral, and not a condition precedent to the plaintiff's right to sue, could not bar the action. Grigos v. Billington, 27 U. C. R. 520.

Insolvency,]—By the terms of a contract between C. & Co. and the defendants, a railway company, it was agreed that all matters in dispute between the parties, arising or to arise out of or connected with the contract, should be settled by arbitration. C. & Co. became insolvent, and this suit was brought by their assignee in insolvency to recover the cost of the construction of the railway. On the application of the defendants under s. 167 of C. L. P. Act (C. & C. C. 22), an order was granted staying all proceedings in this suit, it being held that the insolvency of the contractor did not take the case out of the statute. Johnson v. Montreal and Ottawa R. W. Co., 6 P. R. 259.

Insurance—Valuation.]—By a condition indorsed on a noicy of insurance, the company reserved to itself the power of having the loss or damage submitted to the judgment of arbitrators. An action having been brought on the policy, and an application made under C. L. P. Act, s. 197, to stay proceedings:—Held, 1, that the arbitration intended by the condition was not merely a valuation. 2. That the agreement between the parties was not void for want of mutuality, and that the case came within the scope of the statute. 3. That the plaintiff was a "party" within the meaning of that section. Proceedings were accordingly stayed. McInnex v. Western Assurance Co., 5 P. R. 242, 30 U. C. R. 580.

B. was a feme covert, and questions having arisen between B. and C. as to the amount of the incumbrance to be horne by each, they by mutual bends, in which B. and her husband joined, agreed to refer such questions; and an award was made between these parties:—Held, that B. being a feme covert could not enter into such an agreement to refer; that the statutes as to conveyances by married women of their real estates, did not apply to such agreements; and that therefore the agreement and award were not binding on her. Bagley v. Humphries, 11 Gr. 118.

Master.]—At the trial the following order of reference was made: "Upon hearing the solicitors on both sides, and by their consent, I order that all matters in difference between the parties in this cause he referred to the certificate of the local master of this court at Orangeville, with all the powers as to certifying and amending of a Judge of the high court of justice, and that the costs of the suit and of the reference be in the discretion of the said local master:"—Held, that the caster was to act as an arbitrator under the C. L. P. Act, not as an officer of the court under se, 47, 48 of the O. J. Act, and that defendant might sign judgment on his report. Wallece V. Waldey, 9 P. R. 248.

Partner.]—In an action on a sealed agreement to abide by an award, it is no objection in arrest of judgment that the submission is not stated to be mutual. A declaration that defendant agreed with the plaintiffs to refer:—Held, not supported by an agreement by one plaintiff only on behalf of himself and the others, being his partners. French v. Weir, 17 U. C. R. 245.

Questions of Law.]—Where a cause and all matters in difference had been referred, and an award made:—Held, that all questions of law as well as fact were submitted: that a demurrer afterwards set down for argument must therefore be struck out of the paper; and that objections to the award as bad upon its face could not be raised as giving a right thus to proceed with the action. McCollum v. McKumon, 22 U. C. R. 175.

Reference at Trial.]—By an order made at nisi prius on the 4th November, 1886, upon the application of the defendants and without the consent of the plaintiffs, the action and all matters in question therein were referred to the award of the persons named, who were given all the nowers therein of a Judge of the high court of justice sitting for the trial of an action. By clause 2 of the order the referees were directed to make and publish their award in writing on or before the 3rd January, 1887, or such other day as they should appoint. By clause 6 it was provided that there should be the right of appeal in the same way as if the order was made under s. 189 of the C. L. P. Act; and by clause 8, that the reference should be considered as made in pursuance of s. 48 of the Judicature Act, 1881; and also, in so far as the same was applicable, as under the provisions of s. 189 of the C. L. P. Act;—Held, that the reference was a compulsory one, so far as the plaintiffs were concerned, and that it was not a reference under 9 & 10 Wm. III. c. 15, but under s. 48 of the Judicature Act and s. 189 of the C. L. P. Act. Comme v. Canadian Pacific R. W. Co., 16 O. R. 639.

Surety.]—A. being interested in a lease, R. becomes security for his performance of the covenants; D. and A. refer disputes connected with the lease;—Held, no objection on the part of D. to the bond of submission, that R. is not a party thereto. McGill v. Proudfoot, 4 U. C. R. 40.

4. Compulsory Reference and Reference under C. L. P. Act.

Account.]—An action for an account and delivery up of a trust estate was referred at the trial to the master at Picton, by an order drawn up on reading the pleadings and hearing counsel; the master to have all the powers of a Judge as to certifying and amending pleadings, &c., and to inquire and report as to the plaintiff's right to bring an action, the defendant to have the right to claim all such allowances for his care, &c., as in the master's opinion he should shew himself entitled to: costs to be in the master's discretion; and the whole report to be reviewed or appealed from, according to the statute in that behalf:—Held, a reference under s. 180 of the C. L. P. Act (not under ss. 44 or 48 of the Judicature Act), and that an appeal from the finding of the master was therefore regularly set down under the provisions of that Act to be heard before a single Judge in court. Cumming v. Long, 20 it. 499.

Action Entered for Trial.]—After a cause had been entered for trial it could not be referred under s. 84, C. L. P. Act, 1856, Shae v. O'Neil, 2 L. J. 229.

Common Counts.]—Held, on an application to refer to arbitration an action on the common counts, that where a material question of fact was in dispute, the case was not a proper one in which to make an order for compulsory reference. Gannon v. Gibb, 8 P. R. 115.

Consent. — Held, that an order of reference made upon "it appearing that the matters in dispute consist in part of matters in dispute consist in part of matters of more account " b to ascertain and certify what amount, if anything, the defendants should pay to the plaintiff under the policy in the plendings mentioned," after the negotiations set forth in the report, was not to examine the consistered as an order for compulsory reference under the C, L, P, Act, but rather as an order by consent for arbitration in pursuance that the policy is and the part of the conditions of the policy; and the part of the conditions of the policy; and the paintiff's claim was false and frauddent; and that although the arbitrator could not decide the case upon the ground of arson alone, or receive evidence thereon as an independent defence, yet he should not be fettered in his discretion as to receiving any such evidence incidentally appearing in support of the defence that the claim was utterly unfounded and frauddent. Anhalt v. Pharus Assurance Co., 7 P. R. 341.

Consent. — Quare, whether a reference by consent by rule of court or Judge's order is within s. 205 of the C. L. P. Act. Mc-Carthy v. Arbuckle, 31 C. P. 405.

Centract-Investigation of Accounts.] -Assumpsit for work upon a railway. The plaintiff contended that the written contract was determined by certain changes made in the work, and that he could recover upon a quantum meruit, while defendants insisted that the agreement was binding, and all the work in question done under it, it being admitted that if so plaintiff had been fully paid. It appeared to the learned Judge at the trial that the case would involve the investigation of long accounts, and he ordered a reference under s. 156 of the C. L. P. Act 1856, dir-ecting that the court should determine, upon the report of the arbitrators, how far the contract was in force:—Held, that the order must be set aside, for by the statute all the issues joined must be disposed of, either by reference or verdict, and the Judge cannot direct a reference making the award subject to the opinion of the court :—Semble, that as the necessity for going into accounts was dependent upon the existence of the contract, the more convenient course would have been, first, to take the necessary evidence for determining whether the plaintiff was bound by it, and the verdict of the jury upon that point, after applying the law to the facts proved, and then, if they found in plaintiff's favour, to refer the amount. U. C. R. 553. Wells v. Gzoreski, 14

It is for the Judge to determine whether the case will involve the investigation of a "long accounts," within the statute, subject to be reviewed by the court only when it can be said that he plainly did not exercise any discretion on this point, but applied the Act where it was altogether inapplicable; and held, that this was not, such a case, Ib.

Country Cause. — Under s. 158 of the C. L. P. Act a country cause may be referred to the arbitration of an officer of the proper court at Toronto, as well as to the county Judge. Bigelow v. Cleverdon, 6 P. R. 3.

Goods Sold.]—Where in an action on the common counts for goods sold, interlocutory judgment having been signed, the plaintiff desires a reference to the master under C. L. P. Act. 1856, s. 143, it must be shewn that no dispute is likely to arise either as to quality or price. Hutchison v. Sideways, 14 U. C. R. 472.

Insurance.]—Action upon a policy of insurance on goods: Pleas, denying the policy; setting up that the goods were not destroyed; that the plaintiff gave no notice of the loss as required; inserpersentation as to the value of the goods and mode of heating the premises; increase of risk by alteration. After the examination of one witness the Judge at nist prius ordered a compulsory reference:—Semble, that the compulsory reference was authorized; but held, that the defendants having attended at the arbitration without protest, were precluded from this objection. Accumany, Niagara District Mutual Fire Ins. Co., 25 U. C. R. 435.

Order Expressed to be by Consent.]— Held, that the reference in this case could not be treated by defendant as compulsory, being expressed to be by consent in the order of reference, which on his motion had been made a rule of court; and that if not by consent, he should first have had the order amended. Wilson v. Richardson, 43 U. C. R. 365.

Payment into Court.]—Where on a reference to arbitration, under R. S. O. 1877 c. 50, s. 189, before plea, the defendant wishes to plead payment into court as to a portion of the demand, the order should direct that the amount paid in be deducted from the plaintiff's claim. Dutt v. Cossett, 7 P. R. 330.

Right to Jury.]—No reference will be made under C. L. P. Act, 1856, s. 84, if it appear that defences are intended upon which the opinion of a jury is desirable. Evans v. Jackson, 3 L. J. 88.

Scope of Order, |—At nisi prius a certain question of fact in a cause was left to the jury: a verdict was taken for 1s.; and the other questions involving matters of account, it was ordered that "the plaintiff's claim in this cause, and all matters in difference between the parties in this cause, except the question decided by the jury, be referred to P. L. with nower to increase the verdict or order a verdict to be entered for defendant," who had pleaded a set-off. On motion against the award, it was objected that this was a reference of all matters in dispute between the parties, and therefore unauthorized:—Semble, that it referred only the matters in dispute in the cause; but it was clear that nothing more was intended or had been considered by the arbitrator, and no objection had been made to the order; and held, therefore, that if necessary the order would be amended. Blanchard v. Snider, 28 U. C. R. 210.

Venue.]—An action cannot, under C. L. P. Act, 1856, he referred to the Judge of any other county than that in which the venue is laid, unless by consent. McEdward v. Mc-Edward, 3 L. J. 75.

Waiver of Right to Object.]—On 7th April an order of reference was made in chambers, and served the same day on defendant's attorney. The arbitrator made an appointment for 16th May following, when the plaintiff attended with four witnesses to prove his account. An enlargement, applied for by defendant's attorney, until the 22nd, was opposed by plaintiff, but was afterwards consented to and allowed on the terms that, in on or before the 24th, defendant was to have up to the 26th inclusive to move against it, but if no award made on the 24th, defendant was not to be bound by the consent .. On the 21st defendant moved to set aside the order of reference. No notice was given to plaintiff of this intended motion, or that the enlargement sought for was to be without prejudice:

to move against the order. Darron v. Hu-bertus, 16 C. P. 440.

Woodcock v. Kilby, 4 Dowl. Pr. 730, re-ferred to, as indicating the course defendant should have taken to enable him to move; and semble, that if defendants had applied to the same or some other Judge, for a rescission of the order, and in case of failure had given notice of his intention to move the court as soon as it should sit, and renewed such notice when served with the arbitrator's appointment, protesting, in case he was forced on, against the proceedings, and if both plaintiff and arbitrator had been clearly informed of this,—he would have been in a position to make the motion, if the Judge ought not to have made the reference. Ib.

5. Revocation.

By s. 3 of R. S. O. 1897 c. 62, a submission to arbitration is irrevocable unless contrary intention is expressed therein, except by leave of the court or a Judge.]

Improperly Allowed.] -Held, that under the declaration in this case, which was on the common counts, the plaintiff clearly could not recover for damages of any kind; and the plaintiff's counsel having admitted this on the application for leave to revoke, the court would not revoke the submission on the ground, amongst others, that such a claim was being entertained by the arbitrators. Ross v. County of Bruce, 21 C P. 41.

Improper Allowance.]-Upon a reference to determine the damage sustained by planniif by reason of the taking and deten-tion by defendant of a certain schooner, the arbitrators awarded $2,200,65; and among other items, $40 for travelling and law ex-penses. Upon a motion to set aside the award, the court, without admitting the legal-ity of the charge, refused to interfere, it being the duty of the wary objection to annly to the duty of the party objecting to apply to the Judge upon affidavit to revoke the submission, and not to content himself with merely objecting to the allowance of the item by the arbitrator. Carveth v. Fortune, 12 C.

Leave of Court. |-On an application to be allowed to revoke a submission, the discretion of the court ought to be exercised in the case revocation was allowed. In re Wright and County of Grey, S L. J. 104.

Leave of Court-Pleading.] - Declaration on a bond of submission, allering a revo-cation of the submission, and non-perform-ance of the award. Plea, that defendant be-fore the award revoked the submission (not saying by an instrument under seal.) Repli-that the bond was executed after the C. L. P. Act, 1856, and contained nothing to shew an intention that it should not be made a rule of court: that the revocation in the declaration and plea mentioned is the same; wherefore, and by force of the statute, the ar bitrators were empowered to and did proceed notwithstanding, although defendant did not attend. Rejoinder, that neither the bond nor condition was at the commencement of this suit, nor at the time of the revocation, a rule of court, or in any way exempted from the effect of the said revocation: — Held, plea and rejoinder both bad. Wood v. Closter, 16 U. C. R. 490.

Semble, that the restraint upon revocation without leave of the court or a Judge, provided by 7 Will. IV. c. 3, s. 29, is extended by the C. L. P. Act, 1856, s. 97, to all submissions without words purporting that they are not to be made a rule of court. Ib.

Nisi Prius Order.]—A reference by order of nisi prius might be revoked by either party before award made. Burrell v. Mills, 2 O. S.

Railway-Larger Price.]-Where a railway company took possession of lands with-out consent of the owner, and held them for some time, and an arbitration was agreed on, by which it seemed probable that the price would be fixed at a sum very much larger than the company would be willing to pay:— Heid, that the company could not, on this ground, revoke the submission. Great Western R. W. Co. v. Miller, 12 U. C. R. 654.

Rejection of Evidence - Rentals of Adjacent Properties.]-It is not sufficient Adjacent Properties. |—1t is not sufficient ground for the revocation of a submission to arbitration to fix the renewal ground rental of a block of land bounded by streets that the arbitrators declined to receive evidence of the gross and net rentals derived from pro-perties on the other side of one of the streets. In re Small and St. Lawrence Foundry Company, 23 A. R. 543.

6. Rule of Court.

Agreement after Submission. | - An agreement to make the submission a rule of court, introduced afterward:—Held, invalid. In re Thirkell, 2 U. C. R. 173.

Amending Order of Reference. |-The court can amend the nisi prius order of reference after it has been made a rule of court. Laurie v. Russell, 1 P. R. 65.

Chambers.]-An application to make an award a rule of court can properly be made in chambers on notice. White v. Kirby, 2 Ch. Ch. 452.

Compelling Production of Submission.]—An award having been made, and de-fendant's bond of submission baying been given to him by mistake, the court ordered him to bring it in and that it should be made a rule of court. Hamilton v. Alford, 1 P. R. 13.

Condition Precedent. |- Where a case has been referred and an award made, such award must in all cases be made an order of the court before any other order in the cause can be made. Wadsworth v. McDougall, 5 Gr. 290.

Municipal Arbitration.]—in the case of an arbitration under the Municipal Act, R. S. O. 1887, c. 184, a municipal by-law and appointments in writing by the parties of the arbitrators constitute such a submission to arbitration by consent as may be made a rule of court under s. E. of R. S. O. 1887, c. 53, R. S. O. 1887, c. 184, s. 404, provides that every award made thereunder shall be subject to the jurisdiction of the high court as if made on a submission by a bond containing an agreement for making the submission a rule or order of such court—Held, upon the fanguage of this section, that the submission should be made a rule of court before the award is moved upon. Re City of Toronto Leader Lane Arbitration, 13 P. R. 196.

Oral Appeintment.]—The plaintiff and defendant agreed in writing to submit certain matters in dispute to an arbitrator, to be selected by a person named in the submission, who subsequently appointed the arbitrator verhally—Held, her Patterson and Morrison, J.J.A., affirming 30 C. P. 466, that the fact that the arbitrator was verbally appointed did not prevent the submission from being made a rule of court. Per Burton, J.A., and Armour, J., that the appointment not being in writing, it was a parol submission and could not be made a rule of court. Cruickshawk v, Corbey, 5 A. R. 415.

Proving Non-existence.]—The absence of a rule making the order of nisi prius a rule of court, when objected to, must be shewn by something more than mere inference from the affidavits filed. Hawke v. Duggan, 5 U. C. R. 636.

Railway Act, I.—A reference under the Railway Act, R. S. O. 1877 c. 165, s. 9, s. s., 15, as to the crossing of one railway by another:—Held, not a submission which could be made a rule of court. Re Credit Valley R. W. Co., and Great Western R. W. Co., 4 A. R. 529.

Right to Make-Effect of Making-Ex parte Application.]—Held, that any party to the submission has prima facie a right to have it made a rule of court; and according to the practice existing when the Consolidated Rules came into force, no person other than the applicant was entitled to be heard upon a motion for such an order; and there-fore by Con. Rule 526 there is no necessity for serving notice of motion, and an order can be made ex parte. Such an order is merely a necessary form in order to give the court jurisdiction over the award; it binds no one and concedes nothing; the granting of it is compulsory on the court upon the production of the proper affidavits; and the court can inquire into and adjudicate upon matters of substance when the award itself is sought to be attacked or enforced. Therefore, it was immaterial that upon an ex parte application for such an order it was not disclosed that there were certain matters in controversy between the parties as to enlargements of the time for making the award, Re City of Toronto Leader Lane Arbitration, 13 P. R. 166.

Submission out of the Jurisdiction.]

—The fact that a submission or award relative to personalty is made out of the jurisdiction of the court, is no objection to its being made an order of court, Re Coombe and Cockburn, 6 P. R. 158.

Time.|—An award made in pursuance of a reference by the court will be treated as a judicial act, and made an order of the court of chancery, as a matter of course. It is not necessary to wait until after a term before moving to make it an order of court. Allan v, O'Neal, 2 Ch. Ch. 452.

7. Scope of Reference.

Change by Consent, |— Jebt on a submission bond of all matters in difference. Plea, no award. The plaintiff replied, setting out an award on one matter, for the payment by defendant of a certain sum to plaintiff, and averred that the partices had agreed to withdraw all but that matter from the arbitrators, and to settle the other matters themselves; but if they could not, then to refer them back to the arbitrators, who, within the time for awarding under the submission, awarded on the other matters in favour of the plaintiff; and then set out as a breach the non-payment of the money under the awards. On demurrer:—Held, that the first award was clearly good; and semble, the second was good also. Baby v. Davenport, 2 U. C. R. 55.

Consequential Damages.] — Quare:— Have arbitrators the power, under 9 Vict. c. 37, and 10 & 11 Vict. c. 24, to award consequential damages. Commissioner of Public Works v. Daly, 6 U. C. R. 33.

Construction of Submission.]—Where a submission was made to an arbitrator "to determine which of the said several items of claim the estate of Mrs. B. is bound as matter of law to pay; "—Held, that this confined the authority to deciding the question of legal liability, and did not authorize the arbitrator to find sums payable. Armstrong v. Caulen, 2 Ch. Ch. 128, 163.

Damaces — Railway,] — The submission, and their line, so as to run across a portion of the land of the other party, and that disputes existed as to the value of the land required and also the damage the said party might sustain thereby, referred "all disputes and differences which exist between the said parties." The arbitrators included damages for slashing done or either side of the line taken by the coupanty.—Held, within their authority. Great Western R. W. Co. v. Chaurin, 1 P. R. 288.

Exceeding Anthority.]—In this case the arbitrators awarded a certain sum for the defendant's interest in the lands as lessee, "and for the lumber taken by the said company now piled upon that part of the wharf taken by the said company:"—Held, that the arbitrators had no power to award compensation for the lumber, Great Western R. W. Co. v. Hunt, 12 U. C. B. 124.

Exceeding Authority.]—The awards in these cases, making special provision with regard to the repairing and keeping up a mill-dam, &c., were held bad as beyond the submission and power of the arbitrators. In re-Haley v. Ennis, 1 P. R. 173; Abbott v. Skinner, 7 I. J. 158.

Exceeding Authority.]—Held, on a reference of dispute respecting the title to cermin land, that the arbitrators were not authorized to make a bargain between the parties as to the terms on which the land should be sold by one to the other; and even if they were, they had no right to direct that a vortion of the money which was to be paid to defendant for it, should be appropriated to his wife without his consent. Bond v. Bond, 15 C. P. 613.

Further Damages.]—As to the power of arbitrators, under a very general submission, to cancel an existing partnership agreement, and award prospective damages to the partner losing by such cancellation, see Crouse v. Parke, 6 U. C. R. 362.

Incidental Directions.]—Where a submission resident that A. agreed to give up his stock in trade to B., and to assign him all claims and debts due in respect thereof, on payment of such sums as arbitrators should degree; and they awarded that E. should pay a certain sum, and assume the payment and responsibility of debts due by A. on account of said stock:—Held, that the award was warranted by the submission. *Foucke v. Lister, E. T. 3 Vict.

Incidental Relief.]—Where arbitrators were authorized to dissolve a partnership:—Hebl, that they might, in order to adjust the terms of the dissolution, award upon disputes arising as to the partnership subsequent to the submission. Thirkell v. Strachan, 4 U. C. R. 136.

Representative Capacity.]—On a submission between A. and defendant, described as executor of B., of all matters in difference between the said parties in reference to the business carried on by said A. and B. in partnership, with liberty to the arbitrators to order and determine what they should think fit to be done by either of the parties respecting the matters referred:—Held, that the arbitrators could order a sum to be paid by defendant absolutely, not merely as executor. Mullogan v. Wright, 16 U. C. R. 408.

Special Questions Submitted.]—The parties to this suit referred the matters in difference between them, stating in the submission in the alternative what the arbitrators were to direct—either that defendants should be executed, embodying certain stipulations in the submission set forth. They awarded that a lease should be executed, and that, should it be deemed necessary for the mutual benefit of the parties that during the term certain work should be done, defendants should just one-fifth of the expense thereof:

—Held, that the arbitrators exceeded their power in ordering defendants to pay, &c.; they should, according to the submission, have directed a lease to be executed, containing such a stipulation. Abbott v. Skinner, 11 C. 1, 200.

Special Reference.]—Unior a special reference of disputes between the Northern R. W. Co. and the town of Barrie as to the construction of a branch line into the town; it was held, that the directions as to the conveyance of certain lands by the company, and a release of their claims as to other land, were authorized, and the latter not objectionable for omitting to state to whom it was to be made; and that, as to the amount awarded, if, as contended, the corporation could claim no damages beyond what they had expended in procuring the land, &c., it should be assumed no more was given. In re Town of Barrie and Northern R. W. Co., 22 U. C. R. 25.

Special Submission.]—Award of arbitrators, under a special submission, to determine the title to land in dispute and concerning certain suits:—Held, authorized. Excrett v. Whiteford, 4 U. C. R. 261.

Special Submission.]—Held, that under the general words of the submission in this case, authority was given to arbitrate as to the fee simple of land in dispute, if a matter in difference, which must be presumed. *Bene*dict v. Parks, 1 C. P. 370.

Verdict—Finality.] — Where a verdict was taken for 1s, damages, subject to an award, and the award did not in any manner dispose of the verdict or cause:—Hell, not final, and bad. Beatty v. McIntosh, 4 U. C. R. 259.

Verdict—Power to Reduce.]—Where a verdict was taken, subject to be reduced, the costs to abide the event, an award for defendant was set aside as beyond the submission, the arbitrators having power only to reduce the verdict, and the condition as to costs giving no authority by inference to deprive the plaintiff of them altogether, but applying only to the amount of costs to be taxed. Shaw v. Turton, 4 O. S. 100.

Verdict—Set-off.]—A verdict was taken for plaintiff, subject to be reduced, increased, or set aside, and a verdict or nonsuit to be entered for defendant, under the provisions of the C. L. P. Act. The award directed that the plaintiff's verdict should be set aside and a verdict entered for defendant; and it further awarded a sum of money as due and owing from plaintiff to defendant on a set-off:—Held, that the award did not in terms direct a verdict for defendant for any sum of money, but even that if it did such an award would be proper under the reference. Martyn v. Dickson, 2 C. L. J. 209.

Verdict—Set-off.]—Action on the common counts. Pleas, never indebted, payment, and set-off. A verdict was taken subject to be increased, reduced, or a verdict entered for defendant, by the award of an arbitrator, who directed a verdict in defendant's favour for $750, under the plea of set-off:—Held, that he had power to do so. Johnston v. Anglin, 29 U. C. R. 372.

IX. MISCELLANEOUS CASES.

Arrest.]—Right of defendant arrested to be discharged on reference to arbitration, Barry v. Eccles, 2 U. C. R. 383; Ruthven v. Ruthven, 5 U. C. R. 279.

Bills of Costs.]—Where plaintiff sued an attorney for the amount of an account, and defendant set off several bills of costs, including three in the county court, several in the division court, and some for insolvency and conveyancing, and the cause was referred; and after the reference, plaintiff, an unprofessional man, signed a memorandum as follows: "I admit the within account, subject to taxation of all items that are properly taxable by W. Northrup; and I agree and consent that the arbitrators in the within cause allow the within account in the arbitration, subject to taxation of all items, properly taxable as aforesaid, charged for costs in suits: "—Held, that not only were the costs in the county court suits taxable, but the costs in the division courts, insolvency fees, &c., were also taxable. Kelly v. Henderson, I C. L. J. 132.

Boundaries—Bornage—Arts. 941-945 and 1341 et seq., C. C. P.]—See McGoey v. Leamy, 27 S. C. R. 545.

Collateral Attack.]—A sheriff is liable to an action for the escape of a party attached for contempt in not performing an award, and it is not necessary that the party shall be brought up on the return of the writ of attachment, and formally committed by the court. In such an action the sheriff will not be allowed to deny the submission or the award, or to set up any defence which might have been taken in the proceedings upon the award. He cannot go behind the order authorizing the attachment. Huntley v. Smith, 4 U. C. R. ISI.

Collateral Attack.]—Where a married woman applied as devisee and legatee for an administration order by motion without bill, and it appeared that an award had been made professing to determine all matters between the executors and the legatees interested in the estate, and it was said that the husband and wife had been parties to the reference, the wife acting therein through her husband the wife detrig therein through her husband the validity of the award could not be tried on the motion, and that a bill must be filed, more especially as other legatees, not parties to the motion, were interested in maintaining the award. Nudell v. Elliott, 1 Ch. Ch. 326.

Collateral Attack.]—A defendant to an action at law pleaded, by way of equitable defence, an agreement by the plaintiff to defence and according to the plaintiff of the plaintiff, said a verdie was also force the arbitrator bad done more than make an appointment to attend before him, the defendant filed a bill to restrain the proceedings at law, on the same grounds as had been pleaded by him in the action. The court dismissed the bill with costs. Pomeroy v. Bosnedt, 7 Gr. 163.

Composition.]—After the assignment and discharge, defendant, the insolvent, permitted an arbitration on the plaintiff's claim to be proceeded with, personally attending it, and not setting up the deed as a bar:—Held, to preclude defendant from setting up such deed as a ground for setting up such deed as a ground for setting aside a fi. fa. against him issued on the award. Pidgeon v. Martin, 25 C. P. 233.

Contribution. —When an award directs two to pay each a certain sum, and one is obliged to pay the whole because the other refuses to pay his share, the party so paying can compel contribution by suing the other in covenant for non-performance of the award. Allen v. Cop. 7 U. C. R. 419.

Estoppel. |—A plaintiff in ejectment who, before action, has submitted the question of the possession of the premises to arbitration, is estopped by an award in favour of defendant. Doe d. Galbraith v. Walker, E. T. 2 Vict.

Estoppel.]—An award upon a question respecting real property, expressly referred, is binding upon the parties, so far as respects the rights of either to bring or defend an ejectment against the other. Doe d. McDondel v. Long, 4 U. C. R. 146.

Estoppel. |—A verdict or award for damages against one of two joint trespassers, is in itself a bar, whether paid or not, and has the same effect as a satisfaction by him in precluding any action against his co-trespasser. But in pleading an award to an action of debt, in which two are jointly bound, there, unless payment be averred, it is no bar. Adams v. Ham. 5 U. C. R. 292.

Estoppel.]—Debt on award made by arbitrators appointed to value the plaintiff's property, through which defendants had by their by-law directed a road to be made:—Held, that defendants, having gone to arbitration, were estopped from objecting that the by-law was not averred in the declaration to have been under seal. Wilson v. Town of Port Hope, 10 U. C. R. 405.

Estoppel.]—The finding of an arbitrator, when unimpeached, is treated as res judicata between the parties to the submission. Bell v. Miller, 9 Gr. 385.

Evidence—Account Stated.}—Held, that an award made after the time had elapsed could not be taken as evidence of an account stated. Ruthren v. Ruthren, S U. C. R. 12.

Evidence.]—A copy of a fence viewer's award, sworn to by the township clerk, was admitted in evidence under C. S. U. C. c. 32, s. 6. Warren v. Deslippes, 33 U. C. R. 59.

Interest—Verdict.]—Where a verdict is given subject to an award, 29 & 30 Viet, e. 42, s. 2, does not authorize the charging of interest on the sum awarded from the time of taking the verdict. Hope v. Beatty, 7 P. R. 39.

Interlocutory Judgment.] — When a case has been referred after interlocutory judgment signed, and all matters are submitted to the arbitrator, he is not compelled by such judgment to award for the plaintiff. Petch v. Jarris, 1 F. R. SI.

Parol Submission. |—Attendance before arbitrators and going into case by consent effect of as a parol submission. See Hall v. Alvey, 4 O. S. 375; Rutheen v. Rossin, 8 Gr. 370; McCullock v. White, 33 U. C. R. 331.

Pending Action.]—An award made pending a cause does not stay proceedings. If the plaintiff proceed defendant must plead the award puis darrein continuance. Fido v. Wood, E. T. 2 Vict.

Pleading Award.]—To an action of trespass defendant pleaded, 1. not guilty: 2. close not plaintiff's: 3. plaintiff not possessed:—Held, that an award as to the boundaries between the parties could not be given in evidence by the defendant under any of these pleas. Lake v. Briley, 5 U. C. R. 136.

Proceeding for the Same Cause—Award—Jution to Set aside—Appeal.]—
The word "proceeding" in Rule 1243 means order dismissing a motion to set aside an award made upon a voluntary submission is not a "proceeding for the same cause," within the meaning of Rule 1243, as an action to recover moneys in respect of certain matters included in the submission, but not dealt with by the award; and, although the costs of such appeal are unpaid, security for costs of the action will not be ordered. Caughell v. Broucer, 17 P. R. 438.

Proceeding in Chancery — Contempt.] — Semble, that it is a concempt of a court of common law to proceed in he court of chancery after a reference to arbitration under an order of that court, which orders the parties to perform the award. Pomeroy v. Bosuell, 7 Gr. 163.

Saw-logs Driving Act—River Improvements—Detention of Logs—Damages,— When logs being floated down a stream are unrepresently detained by reason of others being massed in front of them the owner is entitled to an arbitration under the Saw-logs Driving Act to determine the amount of his damages for such detention, and is not restricted to the remedy provided by s. 3 of that Act, namely, removing the obstruction. Judgment below, 26 A. R. 19, reversed. Cockburn & Sons v. Imperial Lumber Co., 30 S. C. R. 80.

School Trustees.1—School trustees cannot be held liable under 23 Vict. c. 49, s. 9, for wilffully neglecting or refusing to comply with an award, without being first afforded an opportunity of explaining or justifying such non-couplinnee. Graham v. Hungerjord, 29 U. C. R. 239.

Supreme Court of Prince Edward Island—Jurisdiction to Set Aside Award— Power to Remit—Land Purchase Act, 1875.] See Kelly v. Sullivan, 1 S. C. R. 1.

Surety, i—Where, after proceedings have commenced on a replevin bond, the parties to the replecin go to arbitration, without the consent of the surety, all further proceedings against the surety will be stayed;—aliter where the reference to arbitration takes place with his assent. Hut v. Gilledand, Hut v. Keith. I U. C. R. 540; Burk v. Glover, 21 U. C. R. 294.

Surety.]—The changing of a contract by an award, even though for the surety's benefit, without his consent, would release him from liability thereon. Titus v. Durkee, 12 C. P.

Sureties—Principals Interventuo,1—Under the special circumstances of this case:
—Held, that although the suit at law referred as against the sureties only, it was competent for the principals to move against the award in respect of it. In re Wheeler v. Murphy, 2 P. R. 32.

Treble Damages. — A reference to arbitration disentitles a plaintiff from recovering treble damages and costs in cases where he would otherwise be entitled to them under 2 Will. & M. c. 5, s. 4. The word "recover" used in the statute means "recover by the verdict of a jury." Clark v. Irucin, 8 L. J. 21.

Valuation. — By an agreement made between L, a builder, and the building committee of a religious body, all previous contracts and agreements were terminated and surrendered, and L, was to forego all right to compensation except under the agreement. One E, was to inspect and value the work already done on the building, and if not according to plans and specifications, L, was to rectify the same at his own expense. E, was to value the building in its present condition, and his award was to be final, and to be the sole amount due to L, to date; he was also to inspect and value the building material on the ground, which was to be paid for at the original cost:—Held, that the effect of the agreement was, that a price to be fixed by E, was to be paid for L.'s works; that E, was not an arbitrator; and that the agreement could not be made a rule of court as a submission to arbitration. In re Langman and Mortin, 46 U. C. R. 509.

Verdict.]—Upon a motion against a verdict on an award, the court will not go into the merits of the award. Thirkett v. Strachan, 4 U. C. R. 136.

Void Award — Account Stated. | — An award made after the time has elapsed, cannot be taken as evidence of an account stated. Ruthven v. Ruthven, S U. C. R. 12.

Waiver of Irregularity.]—An offer by defendant to refer a case to arbitration cannot be considered as a waiver of irregularity in service of the notice of trial. Grand River Navigation Co. v. Wilkes, S U. C. R. 249.

Witness — Compelling Proof.] — The attesting witness to an award may be compelled to attend and prove the award. Taylor v. Bostwick, 1 Ch. Ch. 23.

See Constitutional Law, II. 3—Insurance, III. 9 (f)—Municipal Corporations, IV.—Railway, XV. 5—Water and Water-coerses, IV.

ARCHITECT.

Erroneous Certificates.]—,Action by for services—Defendant may deduct loss caused by erroneous certificates. See Irving v. Marrison, 27 C. P. 242.

Negligence.]—Although an architect, employed by the owner for reward to superintend the construction of a house, may, as between the latter and the contractor by the terms of their own agreement, be in the position of an arbitrator, and his decision as between them unimpeachable except for fraud or dishonesty, yet as between himself and his employer he is answerable for either negligence or unskiftluness in the performance of his duty as architect. Irving v. Morrison, 27 C. P. 242, approved. Badgley v. Dickson, 13 A. R. 494.

ARMY, NAVY AND MILITIA.

Aiding Civil Power,]—The Act 31 Vict. c. 40, s. 27 (D.), as amended by 36 Vict. d6 (D.), and 42 Vict. c. 35 (D.), requires that a requisition calling out the militia in aid of the civil power to assist in suppressing a riot, etc., shall be signed by three magistrates, of whom the warden or other head officer of the municipality shall be one; and that it shall express on its fare "the actual occurrence of a riot, disturbance or emergency, or the anticipation thereof requiring such service:"—Held, that a requisition in the form set out in the case was sufficient. The statutes also provide that the municipality shall pay all expenses of the services of the militia when so called out, and in case of refusal that an action may be brought by the officer commanding the corps, in his own name, to recover the amount of such expenses:—Held, that where the commanding officer died pending such action the proceedings could be continued by his personal representative. CreacRead v. County of Cape Breton, 14 S. C. 18, S.

Band Instruments—Notice of Action.]
— In replevin for certain instruments of the band of a militia battalion, brought by the commanding officer, it appeared that the instruments had been purchased partly by money voted by the city corporation, partly by general subscription, and partly by donations of the officers and men of the battalion. Some difficulty having arisen announces the officers, one defendant refused to give up the instruments, alleging his right to hold possession as being president of the band committee, and the other defendant acted with him:—Held, 1. That under s. 48 of 27 Vict. c. 3, the instruments became the property of the commanding officer, who might maintain replevin for them; and that this section as to such property, was in no way McChondid, 32 1, 1, 6. Rep.
Held, also that defendants were not entitled to notice of action under 31 Vict, c. 40, s. 89, for that statute had no application, and if it

Held, also that detendants were not entitled to notice of action under 31 Vict. c. 40, s. 80, for that statute had no application, and if it had there could be no right to such notice in replevin; and the finding of the jury that defendants did not honestly believe that they had the power under the statute to do what they did, would also disentitle them to the notice. Ib.

Clothing. 1— A lieutenant-colonel of militia was held not to be liable for the price of clothing ordered by him for his men, he being merely a servant of the government. McIlderry v. Baldwin, 6 O. S. 31.

Exemptions.]—Plaintiff, under commission from the Governor-General, dated 28th May, 1850, was appointed quarter-master in a troop of volunteer milita cavalry:—Held, that under the general powers conferred by 22 Vict. c. 18, s. 16, the commander-in-chief might make such appointment, and that so long as he was serving with or attached to such troop, he was an officer thereof, and his horse protected from distress under 18 Vict. c. 17, s. 31. Dacety, Carneright, 20 C. P. 1.

Mess Accounts.]—The officers of a regimental mess are not liable for debts contracted by their messman without their authority. Sutherland v. Sparke, 6 O. S. 103.

Pay. |—No action will lie by an officer against the paymaster of his regiment for his pay, when the paymaster is directed not to pay it over by the commanding officer. Elliott v. Hall, H. T. 2 Vict.

Pledging Pay.] — Action by payee against the maker of a note. Plea, on equitable grounds, setting up that the plaintiff was captain of a rifle company, and an agreement to reduce the note by the moneys received from drills, and renew it, and that plaintiff wrongfully disbanded the company, so that no money could be received:—Held, no defence. Vidal v, Ford, 19 U. C. R. 88.

Satlor—Assisting to Desert.1—The Naval Discipline Act. 29 & 30 Vict. e, 100, s. 25, (1mo. details and therizes a summary conviction before majestrates for assisting sailors to desert, but the 191st section expressly preserves the power of any court of ordinary civil or criminal jurisdaction with respect to any offence mentioned in the Act. punishable by common or statute law, and:—Held, therefore, that the defendant ought to be indicted under C. S. U. C. c. 100, s. 2, Regina y, Patterson, 27 U. C. R. 142.

by common or statute law, and:—Held, therefore, that the defendant ought to be indicted under C. S. U. C. c. 100, s. 2. Regina v. Patterson. 27 U. C. R. 142.

The indictment charged that defendant "did receive, conceal, or assist" one W., a deserter from the navy:—Semble, not sufficiently certain and precise. Ib.

Security for Costs.]—A military officer on duty out of Canada, and suing as plaintiff, must, upon the usual affidavit, give security for costs. Tripp v. Fraser, 1 U. C. R. 253.

Soldier — Assisting to Desert] — Held, that a warrant of commitment, in which it was charged that the prisoner on the 20th June, 1864, "and on divers other days and times," at the city of Kingston, did unlawfully attempt to persuade one James Hewitt, a soldier in Her Majesty's service, to desert, was bad, for it was impossible to say upon reading the warrant how many offences he had committed, or how the punishment was awarded. In re McClimnes, I C. L. J. 15.

Taxation. | —Exemption of land from taxation. See Jarvis v. City of Kingston, 26 C. P. 526.

Tolls.]—Liability of officers to pay toll when travelling in a private carriage, though in uniform. Regina v. Dawes, 22 U. C. R.

See Constitutional Law, I.

I. ATTACHMENT OF THE PERSON.

1. For What Cause and Against Whom,

Award—Filing Bill.]—Where a verdict was taken at nisi prius subject to a reference, and the reference was afterwards made a rule of court, and contained the usual clause against filing any bill in equity, and defendant, against whom the award was, did not move in the court in the proper time, but filed his bill in equity, for which the court granted attachments against him and his solicitor, upon which attachments writs of habeas corpus were subsequently issued; the court refused to set aside those writs, or suspend proceedings upon them. Regina v. Maddock, 1 U. C. R. 322.

Commissioners of Court of Requests. |—See Rex v. McIntyre, Tay. 22.

Compelling Answer. — Where a plaintiff endorses on the copy of the subpsens served on the defendant the notice prescribed by the 75th order of the court of chancery, he cannot afterwards proceed by attachment to compel an answer. Megers v. Robertson, 1 Gr. 55.

Custody of Children.]—An order was made for the delivery of infant children by the father to the mother. On an application to commit the father for contempt in not obeying this order, it appeared that in his absence from home the children had been removed from his house, and taken to the United States by his son aged fifteen. They denied collusion, the son saying that he acted without his father's knowledge or consent; but the father took no steps to bring the children back, and did not offer to do so if time were given him. To the demand made for the children, the father replied that they were not in his custody:—Held, that he was not excused from obeying the order, and was in contempt. Regina v. Alten, 5 P. R. 453.

Deputy Clerk of the Crown.]—An attachment was granted against a deputy clerk of the Crown for having issued serviceable process without authority; and afterwards, on his appearance in term to answer interrogatories, the court ordered him to be dismissed from his office, and to pay the costs of the proceedings. Rex v. Fraser, 3 O. S. 247.

District Judge. —An attachment for not obeying a certiorari, will not be granted against a district Judge unless he is acting contumaciously. In re-Judge of Ningara District Court, 3 O. S. 437.

Examination as Debtor.]—An order to commit to close custody for not attending to be examined pursuant to a Judge's order, is to be looked upon as a commitment for contempt, not as a commitment in execution. Henderson v. Dickson, 19 U. C. R. 592.

Foreigner.]—Where a defendant, in default for non-compliance with a direction of a master, was resident out of the jurisdiction of the court:—Held, that an order for attachment against him could be properly made, Bloomfield v. Brooke, 6 P. R. 264.

Fraudulent Use of Mandamus Nisi.]

—The alfidaytis stated that M., who claimed the office of registrar, obtained a mandamus nisi, directed to H. to deliver up to him the books and papers: that he went to the office with two constables in H.'s absence, and demanded them of his wife, reading what purported to be a peremptory mandamus as his authority (it being only a mandamus nisi), but refusing to allow her or her solicitor to examine it; and they then took away the books, &c. Upon these affidavits the court granted a rule nisi for an attachment against M., but refused it against the constables there being nothing to shew that they were aware of the fraud. In re McLoy, 24 U. C. R. 54.

Husband and Wife.]—A married woman, defendant, living with her husband, was ordered to bring certain accounts, as administratrix, into the master's office, and having disobeyed the order an application to commit her for contempt was refused, the general rule being that the husband must answer for the wife's default, unless he shews some ground of exemption. Maughan v. Wilkes, 1 Ch. Ch. 91.

Husband and Wife.]—A married woman, a defendant, living with her husband, was ordered, as administratrix of a former husband, to bring certain accounts into the master's office, in a suit in which her husband was foined as a co-detendant. On an application and application of the suit of the master's office, in a suit in which her husband was foined as a co-detendant. On an application of the suit of the suit of the suit of the laid down in Manghan v. Wilkes, I Ch. Ch. Pl. 191, that the husband must answer for his wife's default unless he shewed some ground of exemption, was in effect abrogated by 35 Vict. c. 16 (O.), which renders married women liable for their separate engagements in certain cases:—Held, that s. 8 of that Act was not applicable in the present case, where the marriage took place before the passing of the Act, and that the other sections did not affect the rule. It was also contended that the reason for the rule in this instance was wanting, as it was shewn that the married woman was a woman of great force of character, and not in fact under the control of her husband—Held, that the husband must satisfy the court that he has used his best endeavours to get his wife to obey the order before he will be discharged from his liability to attachment. Murcheson v. Donohoe, 10 C. L. J. 106, 6 Pr. 138.

Insolvent.]—The fact of a person becoming bankrupt will not prevent his being arrested for contempt in not obeying an order of this court. Brewer v. Rose, 2 O. S. 6.

Justice of the Peace. |—Owing to a mistake in the Crown office a rule to return the writ of certiforari to remove a conviction, and afterwards a rule for an attachment, issued, although a return had in fact been filled. More than six months having thus expired since the conviction, the court was asked to allow process to issue against the justice for the illegal conviction as of a previous term, but the application was refused. Quere, whether the six months could be held to run only from the time of quashing the conviction. In re Joice, 19 U. C. R. 197.

Non-compliance With Order.]— A party is not in contempt for non-compliance with an order of court until the opposite narry by some step brings him into contempt: if such party omits this, he cannot urge the contempt in bar to a proceeding by the party so in default, or urge it in extenuation of his own laches. Gillespie v. Gillespie, 2 Ch. Ch. 267.

Non-payment of Costs.]—Attachment for non-payment of costs has been abolished; see R. S. O. 1897 c. 80, s. 5. The following are cases under the former practice; Regima V. Hinti, T. 4 & 5 Vict., R. & J. Dig, 287; Wilson v. Iditingham, 6 O. S. 337; Regima v. Redha (4 O. S. 152; Regima v. Guercon, 4 U. C. B. 165; McGill v. Sexion, 1 Gr. 311; Cortan, 1 C. S. 182; Marcha (1 College V. Merland), Valles, Tay, 33; Rousselt v. Hartwell, 1ra, 19; Plumb v. Miller, 5 O. S. 484; Culcer v. McDonell, T. T. Will, IV. R. & J. Dig, 280; Sanders v. McSherry, 6 O. S. 191; Marcy v. McDonell, T. Z. Vict., R. & H. Dig, 62; Morrison v. London, T. T. 2 & 3 Vict., R. & J. Dig, 281; Reseaster v. McEwen, E. T. 3 Vict., R. & J. Dig, 281; Hyatt v. Amger, E. T. 3 Vict., R. & J. Dig, 28; Hyatt v. Amger, E. T. 3 Vict., R. & J. Dig, 28; Hyatt v. Amger, E. T. 3 Vict., R. & J. Dig, 28; Hyatt v. Amger, E. T. 3 Vict., R. & J. Dig, 28; Hyatt v. Amger, E. T. 3 Vict., R. & J. Dig, 28; Hyatt v. Amger, E. T. 3 Vict., R. & J. Dig, 28; Hyatt v. Saxton, 1 Gr. 311.

Non-payment of Costs of Contempt.]

—An attachment to commit for contempt will not be granted merely for non-payment of the costs of the contempt. Dickson v. Cook, 1 Ch. Ch. 210.

Non-payment of Costs of Contempt.]

—The court will not hold a party, who has been in contempt for not obeying an order, in gad for non-payment of the costs occasioned by his contempt. Pherill v. Pherill, 2 Ch. Ch. 444.

Non-payment of Money.]—The court will not detain a person in gaol merely for the non-payment of money; but in order to punish any one guilty of a contempt of court, it may imprison him for a stated period, allowing him to be discharged if he pays the costs of his contempt before the expiration of such period. Harrisv. Huers, I. Ch. 229.

Non-payment of Money.]—The court will not commit for disobeying a decree, where the disobedience is in effect the non-payment of money. Male v. Bouchier, 1 Ch. (359); S. C., 2 Ch. Ch. 254. See however Roberts v. Donovan, 21 O. R. 535; Berry v. Donovan, 21 A. R. 14.

Receiver.]—Where an order is made upon a receiver for payment of a sum of money, the court, on default will commit for contempt of such order without requiring any further order to be served. McIntosh v. Elliott, 2 Gr. 396.

Return to Mandamus.]—No attachment will lie for making a return to a peremptory mandamus. It should be for not obeying the writ. Regina v. Trustees of School Section 27, in the township of Tyendinaga, 3 P. R. 43.

Treasurer. |—A mandamus nis! having been directed to "M S., treasurer of Belleville," and an attachment being moved for after he land ceased to be treasurer for not making a return to the same:—Held, that the proper direction would have been "To the treasurer," &c., generally, though the personal direction was not absolutely wrong, but that, as S. had ceased to hold the office, the attachment must be refused. Burdett v. Sawyer, 2 P. R. 398.

Witness.]—The Judge at nisi prius declined to commit a winness for not answering questions, when it was sought to elicit the admission of facts importing a seandal upon himself. Besides, the Judge thought the witness intoxicated, and by no means able to give evidence at all. Doe Marr v. Marr, 3 C. P. 36.

2. Practice and Procedure.

Accounts.1—A party in contempt to an attachment for not bringing accounts into the master's office of a reference, afterwards filed the same, but neglected to pay the costs of his contempt, and an exparte order to remove the accounts so brought in from the files, in order to proceed against him for the contempt was granted. Corbett v. Meyers, 1 Ch. Ch. 26.

Accounts.]—A party neglecting to produce accounts before the master when so required, will be ordered to pay the costs occasioned by his contempt, although no commitment has taken place. The notice required by s. 6 of general order 46, is not necessary in cases of orders misi for non-production. Berrie v. Moore, i Ch. Ch. 107.

Accounts.]—Where an order nisi has been duly served to enforce the filing of accounts in the master's office, and accounts are filed, but the master certifies that they are insufficient, it is the practice to grant an order absolute exparte: but if asked, an opportunity will be given to show the sufficiency of the accounts. Spencer v. Leeming, I Ch. Ch. 186.

Accounts.]—Where, on an application for not bringing in accounts in a master's office, for an order nisi, on the ground that the accounts brought in were insufficient, it appeared that the insufficiency consisted in the items being undated, the order nisi was refused. In such case, before applying a warrant should be obtained from the master, calling upon the parties to bring in better accounts. Merkley v. Castleman, I. Ch. Ch. 292.

Accounts.]—Where a party is in contempt for not bringing in accounts,, it is a sufficient clearing of his contempt to bring in such accounts, and the sufficiency of them will not be looked into. Clancy v. Patterson, 2 Ch. Ch. 217.

Accounts.]—When a party has been committed for not bringing in accounts, and it is shewn by certificate that the accounts have since been brought in, it cannot be urged on a motion for his discharge that the accounts are insufficient. Nor will the payment of costs be made a condition precedent to his discharge. Clark v. Clark, 3 Ch. Ch. 67.

Accounts.]—Where notice of motion had been given of an application to commit for not bringing in accounts, and four days interrence between the service and the motion, one one of which was Good Friday, during which the master's office had been closed, the secretary refused the application without costs. Wilson v. Gould. 2 Ch. Ch. 239.

Compliance After Notice to Commit.]

—Where an order is complied with after service of notice of motion to commit for disobedience of it, and before the motion comes on, an order to commit will not be granted, but the party will be required to pay to the applicant the costs of the motion within twenty-four hours after the amount has been settled. Malloch v. Plunkett, I. Ch. Ch. 381.

Costs.] — Where defendants had been brought into court upon an attachment, although they cleared themselves upon interrogatories of the imputed contempt, the court refused to allow costs against the prosecutor, even although he had omitted a fact in his adiabativ which might have affected their granting the attachment, and although one of the allidavits upon which the attachment was moved for was not filed early enough for them to nuswer by a counter affidavit. Rex v. Mckenzie, Tay. 70.

Custody of Children.]—A writ of attachment for contempt in not obeying the original order to deliver up the custody of children, under C. S. U. C. c. 74, was moved against for irregularity:—Held, that it was unnecessary to make the order for delivery of the children a rule of court before bringing the father into contempt, but that the proceedings should have been moved into and adopted by the court before an attachment could issue from it; and that this attachment therefore was irregular. In re Allen, 31 U. C. B. 450.

The Judge could by his own order have attached the party. Ib.:—Held, also, that such attachment was properly signed and sealed by the clerk of the process, and issued by the clerk of the Crown. Ib.

Delivery of Abstract.]—On moving to make an order nisi for not delivering an abstract of title absolute, it is necessary to shew that it has not been delivered to either party named in the order. Dick v. McNab. 1 Ch. Ch. 21.

Delivery of Possession.]—In moving to commit for a contempt in not delivering possession of mortgaged premises, in obedience to an order made in pursuance of order 32 of 1853, it must be shewn that the possession was demanded. Nevieux v. Labadic, 1 Ch. L13.

Ex Parte Application.1—An application to commit a witness for refusing to sign depositions made by him will not be granted ex parte. Blain v. Terryberry, 1 Ch. Ch. 255.

Forum.]—Motion for orders to commit for non-production are properly made in Chambers. Ross v. Robertson, 2 Ch. Ch. 66.

Indorsement of Order.] — A direction to do an act "forthwith" is a sufficient compliance with orders 288 and 293. Where under an order so endorsed a party was attached for disobedience, the attachment was held to be regular. Where the attorney of the parties directed to confess indigment at law, had been arrested for disobedience as well as the parties, he was discharged. Wallace v. Acre. Licingston v. Acre, 2 Ch. Ch.

Intituling Papers. —An affidavit to set aside an attachment must be intituded on the Crown side, and not in the names of the parties to the suit. Malloch v. Morris, T. T. 1 & 2 Vict.

Intituling Papers.]—Even although the attachment ordered has not issued. Garland v. Burrowes, T. T. 3 & 4 Vict.

Master's Certificate.]—A party moving to commit for disobedience of any order or direction of a master must shew by means of a certificate of the master, that the person moved against has disobeyed the order, and is in default. Paston v, Dryden, 6 P. R. S3.

It will be insufficient in Chambers to prove by any other means the service of the order, and that it has not been compiled with, as the master is the proper person to decide both these facts. Ib.

Non-execution of Conveyance,]—
Where an order to commit is sought for the non-execution of a conveyance directed to be kept at a solicitor's office for execution, it must be shewn that it was accessible for execution in such office. Bell v. Miller, 1 Ch. Ch. 370.

Non-payment of Money.]—The rule for attachment for non-payment of money awarded is properly a four, not a six day rule. Jones v. Reid, 1 P. R. 247.

Non-payment of Money.] — A party moving under 7 Vict. c. 3, s. 8, for his discharge from custody, must shew that he is in contempt for non-payment of money; and the notice of intention to move must be served on the opposite party, not on his attorney. Garrison v. Balkvell, 1 U. C. R. 2.

Non-production,] — A notice of motion for an order absolute for non-production in the registrar's office, under order 31 of the 6th February, 1865, requires personal service, by analogy to the former practice by order nist. Dickson v. Dickson, 1 Ch. Ch. 366.

Non-production.]—On a motion to commit for non-production of certain documents after an insufficient affidavit on production has been filed, it is not absolutely necessary that the notice of motion should specify what is demanded in addition to what has been produced, though the court considered such the better course. On such a notice, the court will grant the more limited relief, and order further production, but without costs. Fisken v. Smith, 2 Ch. Ch. 491.

Non-production.] — When a party neglects to comply with the terms of an order for the production of books and papers, the proper mode of proceeding is to serve personally a notice of motion to commit. Patterson v. Bouces, 4 Gr. 44.

Notice of Application.]—Four days' notice must be given of a motion to commit. Gray v. Hatch, 2 Ch. Ch. 12. Broughall v. Hector, 2 Ch. Ch. 434.

Notice of Application.]—Motions for attachment must be on notice. Morphy v. Feehan, 2 Ch. Ch. 53.

Notice of Reading Certificate, |—It is not necessary to state in a notice of motion that a certificate of an officer of the court will be read in support of the application. Such certificate can be read though no such notice be given. Malloch v. Plunkett, 1 Ch. Ch. 381.

Production—Time.]—A motion for production, with the alternative that the party be committed in default, being substantially a motion to commit, requires four clear days notice. Abel v. Hilts, 9 C. L. J. 363.

Purging Contempt.]—It is sufficient clearing of contempt if a party has done the act ordered and paid the costs. An order of court clearing his contempt need not be made unless he has been in custody. Duncan v. Trott, 2 Ch. Ch. 487.

Service of Notice.]—A rule nisi for an attachment must be personally served, and the original shewn. Cryster v. Campbell, 1 U. C. R. 416.

Service of Notice,]—A notice of motion for an order absolute under order 31 of 6th February, 1865, must be served at least four clear days before its return, by analogy to the former practice by order nisi. Kelly v. Smith, 1 Ch. Ch. 364.

Service of Notice. |—The notice of motion to take an affidavit on production off the files, and to commit for contempt, should be served on the defendant's solicitor, not on defendant personally. Ross v. Robertson, 2 Ch. Ch. 6d.

Service of Notice,]—Service of notice of motion to commit on the solicitor of the party charged with contempt, is good service. Gourlay v. Riddle, 2 Ch. Ch. 158.

Service of Notice.]—Notice of motion to commit a person not a party to a cause, under order 297, for contempt in disobeying an order which has been duly served, need not be personally served where the party has a solicitor. Wilson v. Wilson, 7 P. R. 57.

Service of Order, |—On a motion to commit for disobedience of an order of a master it will be insufficient in Chambers to prove by any other means than the certificate of the master, the service of the order and that it has not been complied with, as the master is the proper person to decide both these facts. Paxton v, Dryden, 6 P. R. 83.

Service of Order. |—A motion to commit defendant, or to take the bill pro confesso for non-attendance of defendant for examination pursuant to a special order, was refused where the order had not been previously served. McAvilla v. McAvilla, 6 P. R. 311.

Service of Order.]—An order to commit a party for disobeying an order will not be granted if it appear that there is any error or omission in the copy served. Lindsay v. Lindsay, 13 C. L. J. 197.

Testing Attachment—Variance in Description.]—An attachment for not obeying a writ of mandamus must be tested in term, on the same day as the rule on which it issues. Regina v. Trustees of School Section No. 27 in the Township of Tyendinaga, 3 P. B. 43.

The rule nisi called upon the trustees of the rule nisi called upon the trustees of smool section number 27, in the township of the rule of the rules of the rule rule rules of the rule rules of the rule rules of the rule rule rules of the rule rule rules of the rules of the Time Limited.]—Where an order limits a time to do an act, the order must be served before the time limited has expired, otherwise the party required to do the act will not be committed for disobedience. Wagner v. Mason, 6 P. R. 187.

Vacation, |—The court will entertain applications affecting the liberty of the subject during long vacation. Hurris v. Meyers, 2 Ch. Ch. 229.

Vacation.]—An attachment for not obeying an order to appear and be examined as to debts, cannot be issued in vacation. Greene v. Wood, 2 P. R. 165.

Warrant to Commit—Return Day.]—A warrant to the sheriff to commit a person is not irregular, though no return day is mentioned in it. Prentiss v. Brennan, 1 Gr. 497.

Witness to Execution of Cognovit.]—An attachment for refusing to swear to the execution of a cognovit will not be granted until a rule has been served on the witness ordering him to do so, and has been disobeyed. Ham v. Ham, 3 O. S. 176.

3. Miscellaneous Cases.

Bail to the Limits.]—A bond to the limits may be taken on an attachment for non-payment of money, and may be assigned. Montgomery v. Howland, E. T. 2 Vict.

Bail to the Limits, —Where upon application to commit a defendant to gaol under 22 Vict. c. 96, s. 13, the Judge ordered a ca, sa, to issue instead, as allowed by that section, and the defendant thereupon gave bail to the limits:—Held, that he could not again be committed to close custody under the first alternative of the same clause. Perrin v. Bouces, 2 P. R. 348.

Benefit of the Limits. —A prisoner in custody for contempt may have the benefit of the limits. Rex v. Kidd, H. T. 6 Will. IV.

Benefit of the Limits.]-A defendant in attachment for contempt for not paying over money pursuant to a rule of court, may be admitted to the limits, after being ordered to be committed upon his answers to interrogatories. Rex v. Kidd, 4 O. S. 415.

Benefit of the Limits.]—A party arrested upon an attachment issued out of this court, is entitled to the benefit of the goal limits, on production to the sheriff of the certificate from the clerk of the Crown of bail having been filed according to the provisions of 10 & 11 Vict. c. 15, which places prisoners in custody upon such attachment on the same footing as debtors. Davis v. Casper, 1 Gr. 354.

Breach of Injunction—Stay.]—A defendant in equity appealed from an order directing his committal for a breach of an injunction, and moved the court to stay proceedings under the order pending the appeal, which was refused. Gamble v. Hostland, 3 Gr. 281.

Constable.]—Quære, is an attachment of privilege at the suit of an attorney within the 9th clause of 2 Geo. IV. c. 1. And quære, would this doubt, or the want of an affidavit being annexed to a bailable process, prevent the defendant, a constable, from having the benefit of the 21 Jac. L. on the point of venue. Brouen v. Shea, 5 U. C. R. 141.

Contempt—Right to More Against Order, 1—A writ of attachment for contempt in not obeying the original order of a Judge to deliver up the custody of children, under C. S. U. C. c. 74, was by order of a Judge issued from the Court of Queen's Bench; and the husband moved against it for irregularity. It was objected that while in contempt by not having surrendered himself under it, he could not be heard; but—Held, that he might nevertheless defend himself by objections to the process if irregular. In re Allen, 31 U. C. R. 458.

Defensive Proceedings.]—A party may be in contempt although no attachment may have actually issued; the contempt consisting in the disobedience to an order of the court, and the fact of the disobedience having been made to appear to the satisfaction of the proper officer who has made an order for an attachment to issue. A party, though in contempt, is always allowed to take any defensive proceedings in the cause. Mitchell v. Mitchell, 22 Gr. 23.

Poverty.]—Poverty is no excuse for delay in making an application to the court, as in such case the party can apply in forma pauperis. Harris v. Meyers, 2 Ch. Ch. 229.

Quia Timet.]—Quere as to the right of a defendant in contempt for non-appearance to a subperan issued on an information of intrusion, but not actually arrested, to move quia timet to set aside the process issued against him. Attorney-General v. McLachlon, 5 P. R. 63.

Sheriff—Bail.]—Semble, that before the return of a writ of attachment for contempt the sheriff cannot properly take bail for the appearance of a party, without the order of a Judge! but after the return, if the party be upon attachment merely to compel the payment of money, the sheriff as of course loay take bail to the limits. Lanc v. Kingswill, 6. U. C. R. 579.

Semble, that if an attachment for contempt in not paying moneys is to be regarded as mesne process, it should be averred in a declaration for an escape that the sheriff had not the party in court to answer the exigency of the writ; and if the attachment is to be regarded as an execution, Semble, it then requires something in the nature of a judgment to support it. Ib.

ment to support it. Ib.

The merely averring that the plaintiff sued out an attachment for contempt, without stating what the contempt consisted in, or by what authority it had been determined the party was guilty of contempt, is insufficient; a good legal foundation for the attachment must be shewn on the record. Ib.

Sheriff—Escape.]—A sheriff is liable to an action for the escape of a party attached for contempt of court in not performing an award, and it is not necessary in order to this action that the party should be brought up on the return of the writ of attachment and formally committed by the court, Huntley v. Smith, 4 U. C. R. 181.

Sheriff's Liability.]—An action will lie against a sheriff for not arresting an attorney under an attachment issued for not handing over deeus, &c. to plaintiffs. Burnham v. Hall, 44 U. C. R. 297.

Stoppage in Transitu.]—The right of stoppage in transitu of goods consigned to a debtor who absconds, is not suspended by an attachment and seizure thereof at the instance of an attaching creditor. McLean v. Breithaupt, 3 C. L. T. 314.

Unnecessary Issue of Attachment.]—
It is improper to have recourse to an attachment when the object can be obtained without it. Where, therefore, a party who come into cown to execute it, although after the proper period, and the plaintiff's solicitor knowing these facts issued an attachment, it was set asside with costs. Mason v. Seney. 2 Ch. Ch. 220.

Waiver.]—An amendment of a bill by adding parties, requiring no answer from defendant, is a waiver of process of contempt for want of answer; and on an ex partemotion the defendant will be discharged. Thrasher v. Connolly, 1 Gr. 422.

Waiver—Vacation.] — In proceeding before the master a warrant was issued during long vacation for the defendant to bring in accounts, and the master having ruled it to be regular, an attachment thereupon was issued to compel the necessary production; and to escape the attachment the defendant did produce the required papers:—Held, that it was too late for the defendant afterwards to appeal against the master's ruling. Mitchell v. Mitchell, 22 Gr. 23.

II. CAPIAS AND ABSCONDING DEBTORS' ACT.

1. For What Cause and Against Whom.

Before Fi. Fa.]—Under what circumstances a ca. sa. may be sued out after issue and before return of a fi. fa. See Ross v. Bryan, 2 L. J. S9.

Ca. Re. Not Executed.]—Where the plaintiff, pending the suit, took out a ca. re.

upon which defendant was not arrested:— Held, that under 2 Geo. IV. c. l, a ca. sa. might issue after judgment upon the same affidavit. Semble, that such writ may include the costs, although the sum taxed will exceed that sworn to. Beatty v. Taylor, 2 P. R. 44.

Ca. Re. Not Executed.]—But under the C. L. P. Act, 1856;—Held, overruling the last case, that such a proceeding was irregular and should be set aside. The affidavit must relate to the present belief of the party making it, and must therefore be sworn at the time of issuing the writ. Moss v. Reid, 7 C. P. 429.

Costs of Defence.]—A defendant, in whose favour a verdict is rendered, is entitled, under the equity of the King's Bench Act, 2 Geo. IV. c. 1, to a ca. sa. for the costs of his defence. Thomson v. Leonard, 3 O. S. 151, 610.

Court in Term—Property—Mesne Procoss. I—Held, on an application by way of appeal from a Judge's order for the issue of a writ of ca. saa, that the court in term has power to review such order; but semble that an application made after the lapse of the succeeding term is too late:—Held, on the merits, that the order in this case ought not to be interfered with, as it sufficiently appeared from the affidavits before the Judge that the defendant had parted with his property or had made some secret or fraudulent disposal thereof to prevent its being taken in execution; and semble, that the affidavits also shewed that unless immediately apprehended defendant was about to quit apprehended defendant was about to quit
c. 24. s. 12, refers to personal as well as real property:—Held, also, that an application to discharge a defendant from custody under s. 31 of the Act, lies only when the arrest is under mean process, and not where he is in custody under final process. Kidd v.
O'Connor, 43 U. C. R. 193.

Criminal Charge—Pleading.1—Semble, a person in custody on a criminal charge may be detained in a civil suit. Palmer v. Rodgers, 6 L. J. 188.

Debt Not Due.]—Goods were sold to the defendant by the plaintiffs upon a five months' credit, and he refused to accept a bill of exchange at five months for their price. The plaintiffs, before the expiration of the five months, issued a writ of attachment against the defendant under the Absconding Debtors' Act, R. S. O. 1877 c. 68, on an affidavit that defendant was indebted to them for goods sold and delivered:—Held, that to bring a case within the statute, there must be a debt due and payable at the time of the issuing of the writ, and that in this case there was no such debt as sworn to. The attachment was therefore set aside. Semble, that in proceedings of this kind the existence of the debt itself may be inquired into. Kyle v. Barnes, 10 P. R. 20.

Debt under £10.]—A summons to set asde a ca. sa. on the ground that defendant had been arrested for a sum under £10, exclusive of costs, was discharged on the facts stated in this case. Baker v. McKay, 1 C. L. Ch. 73.

Delay. |—It is irregular to issue a ca. sa, upon a judgment more than a year old, even though a fi. fa. has been issued within the year, but not returned, without a sci. fa. Wilson v. Jamieson, 6 O. S. 481.

Devastavit.]—On a return of "devastavit," a ca. sa. does not issue as a matter of course without inquiry. Willard v. Woolcut, Dra. 211.

District Court.]—Where a Judge's order was necessary to hold to bail, an arrest could not be made in a district court. Ferris v. Dyer, 5 O. S. 5; Smith v. Jarvis, H. T. 3 Vict.

Execution in Force.]—Semble, that no ca. sa. can be acted upon while a fi. fa. on which proceedings have been taken remains out; and that where goods have been seized and a ven. ex. issued, they must be sold before defendant can be arrested for the residue. Billings v. Rapelje, 2 P. R. 200; Ross v. Cameron, 1 C. L. Ch. 21.

Execution in Force.]—The plaintiffs, having obtained a judgment against the defendant on the 7th June, issued a ca. sa on the judgment, directed to the sheriff of Oxford, but did not then place it in the sheriff's hands. On the 12th June they issued a fi. fa. goods to the same sheriff. which was on the same day returned nulla bona. On the 14th June they issued writs of fi. fa. lands to the respective sheriffs of Oxford and Haldimand. On the same day they filed a bill in chancery to charge certain equitable interests of defendant in lands which could not be directly reached through the writs at law. On the 16th September they, for the first time, placed their ca. sa. in the hands of the sheriff of Oxford, the writs against lands then being in his hands and the proceedings in chancery still pend-The ca. sa. was not properly styled in the cause, and was not tested in the name of the Chief Justice or the other Judge of the court from which it issued:—Held, that the plaintiffs' proceedings violated the spirit of the law, in charging defendant in secution on a ca. sa, whilst endeavouring to enforce a remedy against his lands through an execution issued since the ca. sa. and since a fi.
ia. goods returned nulla bona. Such being the case, the application to amend the writ of ca. sa. was refused, and the writ set aside for irregularity with costs, defendant under-taking not to bring an action for the arrest. Semble, the irregularities were amendable, and would, on terms, have been amended under ordinary circumstances. Curry v. Tur-ner, S L. J. 296.

Foreigner.]—Where both plaintiff and defendant were inhabitants of a foreign country, and had come together into this Province to remain only a few hours, and during their stay here the plaintiff made the usual affidavit and arrested the defendant, the arrest was held to be regular. Raynor v. Hamilton, M. T. 2 Vict.

Foreigner.]—Semble, that it is contrary to the policy of our laws of arrest to permit one foreigner to follow another to this country, and arrest him for a debt contracted abroad. Frear v. Ferguson, 2 C. L. Ch. 144.

Foreigner.]—Held, that the affidavits in this case did not sufficiently shew the plaintiff and defendant to be foreigners, and therefore that the arrest could not be objected to on that ground. Romberg v. Steenbook, 1 P. R. 200.

Foreigner.]—The plaintiff, a merchant iting in Toronto, arrested defendant, lately from England, on a bill accepted by him there. The arrest was moved against, on the ground that defendant was here for a temporary purpose only, and on business; but the plaintiff gave reason for believing that he had absconded from England to avoid proceedings there on this same bill, and the Judge under these circumstances refused to interfere. Brett v. Smith, 1 P. R. 309.

Foreigner.]—Defendant applied to be discharged from arrest for a debt contracted abroad, on affidavit that both plaintiff and he were foreigners, that he had come to this Province very lately, and had never any residence or home here; but it was not shewn under what circumstances or for what purpose he came, whether as a transient visitor or intending to become a resident, and on this ground the application was refused. Blumenthal v. Solomos, 2 P. R. 51.

Foreigner.]—The mere fact that both plaintiff and defendant are foreigners does not of itself warrant setting aside an arrest. Palmer v. Rodgers, 6 L. J. 188.

Foreigner.]—The property of a person usually residing in the United States, but who employs persons here and comes frequently to superintend their work, may be attached under 2 Will. IV. c. 5. Ford v. Lusher., 3 O. S. 428.

Foreigner, —Where a person usually residing in Scotland, while here to settle some affairs, referred some disputes concerning them, and an award was made against him, not payable until nearly two years after he had returned to Scotland:—Held, that he did not come within the Act. Taylor v. Nicholl, 1 U. C. R. 416.

Foreigner.]—Semble, that a debtor whose family resided in the United States, but who for several months was in this Frovince purchasing horses for the United States army, and contracting debts therefor, with the declared intention of moving permanently into Canada, was sufficiently a resident of Upper Canada to be within the Act. Higgins v. Brady, 10 L. J. 208.

Foreigner.]—The defendant absconded from Canada in 1896, being at the time largely indebted to the plaintiff. In 1877 he returned for a temporary purpose, having in the meantime acquired a domicile at Chicago, when he was arrested under C. S. U. C. c. 24. s. 5, for the debt due to the plaintiff.—Held, that the arrest was illegal, and defendant was discharged. Clements v. Kirby, 7 P. R. 103.

Foreigner.]—Held, on the evidence set out in the report, that the defendant could properly be treated as a resident of this Province. Cartwright v. Hinds, 3 O. R. 384.

Foreigner.]—The general rule that it is against the policy of our law to permit one foreigner to follow another into Ontario, and arrest him for a debt contracted abroad, is limited to cases in which the debtor is here on temporary business, and is about to return to his own country. Butler v. Rosenfeldt; Sweetzer v. Rosenfeldt, 8 P. R. 175.

Where the debtor has absconded from his own country to Ontario, and does not intend returning, or intends to go to some other country, the creditor may follow and arrest him here upon a ca. re. 1b.

Foreigner,]—A defendant having contracted a debt in the United States of America, his ordinary place of abode, and in the act of returning there after a visit to his parents in this country, cannot be arrested on a charge of leaving Ontario with intent to defraud his creditors. Smith v. Smith, 9 P. R. 511

Foreigner, —It is of no consequence where the domicile of a person may be, or to what country he is bound by allegiance as a subject or citizen, if he come to this Province, and reside here, and contract debts, and is about to quit the country (that is, in fact, to change he seidence to a foreign country, even though that country be his place of domicile) with the intent to defraud his creditors, he is subject to arrest as it provided in this Province. Kersterman v. McLellan, 10 P. K. 122.

Held, that a defendant cannot rely on a

Held, that a defendant cannot rely on a change of residence to a foreign country so as to avoid the law of arrest, to which he was subject in this Province at the time he incurred the debt upon which the action is brought, when that change of residence has been effected by a fraudulent flight to avoid arrest. Ib.

Foreigner.]—The plaintiff claimed $20,000 damages from the defendant, the cause of action being criminal conversation with the blaintiff's wife. The defendant lived in the United States, but was here for a temporary purpose when the plaintiff had him arrested under an order to hold to bail. The plaintiff in his affidavit sworn on the 30th January, on which the order was granted, stated that the defendant had arrived in Toronto that morning, and that he intended to leave for his own country that night, with intent to defraud the plaintiff of the damages he had sustained. Upon a motion for the defendant's discharge:—Held, that in leaving Ontario he was not doing so with intent to defraud the plaintiff, and was therefore entitled to be discharged. Exp. Gutierrez, 11 Ch. D. 298, specially referred to. Rice v. Fletcher, 13 P. R. 46.

Foreigner. —A foreigner, who contracts a debt in the country of his domicile and then comes to this Province to stay temporarily, cannot be arrested here in respect of that debt, when in good faith about to leave this Province to return home. Elgio v. Butt, 26 A. R. 13.

Foreigner.]—The defendants left the State of Pennsylvania and came to Ontario with the intent of defrauding their creditors. They stayed some time in London, Ontario, and left there with their wives, by train, booked for Toronto. One of their creditors left London by the same train, and while on the train, between London and Hamilton, he heard one of the wives say to her husband that she wondered what time they should reach Montreal. While waiting at Hamilton for the Toronto train, the creditor obtained an order for the defendants' arrest, and they were arrested:—Held, upon the evidence, that the defendants intended to leave Ontario with the intent of defrauding their creditors. Meyer Rubber Co. v. Rich, 14 P. R. 243.

Forfeiture of Recognizance—Crown.]
—Held, that the forfeiture of a recognizance to appear was a debt sufficient to support the application for attachment under the Absconding Debtors' Act, and that such writ may be granted at the suit of the Crown, where the defendant absociasts to avoid being arrested for a felony. Regina v. Stewart, 8 P. R. 297.

Goods Sold.]—For goods sold and delivered, must shew defendant's request, and the request being laid to other sums will not supply the defect. Watkins v. Liebschitz, H. T. 7 Will. IV. But this case is overruled by Ogilvie v. Kelly, 4 U. C. R. 393.

Goods Sold.]—It must be shewn that the goods were sold and delivered by plaintiff to defendant. McDonnell v. Kelly, 4 U. C. R. 374.

Intent to Defraud Creditors.]—It is not sufficient for a creditor applying for an order for arrest under R. S. O. 1897 c. 80, s. 1, to shew the existence of a debt and that the debtor is about to qui Ontario; he must shew some other fact or circumstance which, coupled with those facts, points to an intent to defraud. Shaw v. McKenzie, 6 S. C. R. 181; Toothe v. Frederick, 14 P. R. 287, and the opinions of Burton and Maclennan, JJ.A., in Coffey v. Scane, 2 A. R. 239, followed. The opinions of Hagarty, C.J.O., and Osler, J.A., in Coffey v. Scane, and of the latter in Robertson v. Coulton, 9 P. R. 16, dissented from. McVenin v. Ridler, 17 P. R. 353, discussed. Whether or not there is good and probable cause for believing that the intent to defraud exists, is a question of fact, And where the defendant believed that his wife had no claim against him for alimony:—Held, that he could not be intending to defraud her by leaving Ontario. Phair v. Phair, 19 F. R.

Intention to Leave.]—On an application to review the decision of a county Judge, it was held that defendant must be discharged; that the denial of the debt alone would not be sufficient, though the facts and circumstances relating to the claim might be important to consider as affecting the probability of his absconding; but that an apprehension of his leaving at some future period could not warrant the arrest, for the Judge must be satisfied that he is about to leave unless forthwith apprehended, that is, to leave forthwith. Boxers v. Florer, 3 P. R. 62.

Intention to Leave. |—Semble, the Judge to whom an application is made for an order to arrest has only to be satisfied of the existence of a cause of action, &c., and an intention on the part of defendant to abscond, with intent, &c. Damer v. Busby, 5 P. R. 254

Judge's Discretion—Intent to Defraud.]
—An application under Rule 1051 to discharge from custody is an original proceeding, independent of the order to arrest, and the Judge to whom it is made is invested with a very large discretion. If the appellate court has doubt as to the proper result of all the evidence, that doubt should lean in favour of personal liberty. Our statute 22 Vict. c. 96 differs from its original, the Imperial Act 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110, and was expressly enacted so as to restrain the freedom of those only who were believed to be contemplating fraud as against their creditors; under it, it cannot be said that a person indebted, without substance, who contemplates removing from Ontario to better his condition, is leaving with intent to defraud creditors; two things must concur before the statute operates-the quitting of Ontario, and an intent thereby to defraud creditors. Robertson v. Coulton, 9 P. R. 18, observed upon. Upon the evidence in this case, the court was not satisfied that the defendant had any intention to flee the country at the time of his arrest, or that there was such dealing with his property as was within the mischief of the statute, and affirmed an order of a Judge in Chambers discharging him from custody. Toothe v. Frederick, 14 P. R. 287.

Judgment for Costs.]—A ca. sa. cannot be issued in Upper Canada on a judgment for costs only. Under 22 Viet. c. 96, s. 13, on such judgment an order for committal for contempt only will be granted, and not for a ca. sa. Meyers v. Robertson, 5 L. J. 254.

Liquidated Amount.]—The court will only grant an attachment for sums certain, and where such an affidavit could be made as would enable a plaintiff without a Judge's order to sue out bailable process. Clock v. Alfield, 5 O. S. 504.

Malicious Arrest—Libel.]—An order to arrest was refused in actions for malicious arrest and libel. O'Connor v. Anon., and Darcus v. Hall, T. T. 2 & 3 Vict.

Money Lent.]—That A. and B. are indebted for money lent to A.:—Held, sufficient to authorize the arrest of A. Quaere, whether it would have supported an arrest of both. Ellerby v. Walton, 2 P. R. 147.

conus—Intent to Defraud—Former Absonains,—Upon an application by the defendant for his discharge from arrest under a ca. re., he did not dispute the existence of the debt alleged by the plaintift, nor that the debt alleged by the plaintift, nor that by a providing the expectation of the debt alleged have been country without paying or providing the total the controlled that he was not about to upon the total the was not about to upon the total the was not about to upon the was not about to the total the was induced by the defendant to purchase an interest. It was alleged, but disputed, that this was a fraudulent scheme. It was also alleged and denied that the defendant in 1803 absonded from this Province to the United States of America. The defendant was a citizen of the United States, and was in Ontario in 1803, and again in 1909, when arrested, for temporary business purposes. It was not shewn that he ever had any property in this Province, nor that he took any away with him in 1803, nor that at the time of his arrest he had any in his hands or under his control. The evidence did not shew that he was at the time of the arrest about to leave the Province hurriedly, but that he intended to stay till he had finished the business which brought him to the Province, and then to return to his swap country as of course:—Held, that the court could not, upon this application, try the question whether the defendant did or did not abscond in 1893; that the onus was upon the plaintiff to make out the fraudulent intent in the departure now proposed, by more than mere suspicion; and that, upon all the facts and merits discosed, the arrest could not be maintained, kersternan v, McLellan, 10 P. R. 1.22, disinguished. Beam v, Beatty, 19 P. R. 207.

Previous Departure — Temporary Retures, |—The plaintiff stated in her althavit, on which the order of arrest was made, that the defendant, taking advantage of their engagement, had seduced her, and, as soon as he discovered that she was with child, went to the United States, but subsequently returned to attend his father's funeral, and was then about to quit Outario with intent to defraud her. &c. The plaintiff's father also swore to the intent; while the defendant, though filing an athdavit, made no reference to his financial condition:—Held, that the aileged intent was sufficiently disclosed. Toothe v, Frederick, 14 P. R. 281, and Rogers v.
Knowles, ib. 290 n., distinguished. Vansuckle v. Boyd, 14 P. R. 439.

Possession of Goods.]—An affidavit that the defendant "took possession of this plaintiff's goods, and still keeps possession of them" is sufficient to warrant an order to hold to bail. Ingraham v. Cunningham, Dra. 116.

Previous Departure—Temporary Return
— Contradicting Plaintiff's Case — Imposing
Terms.]- An order for the arrest of the defendant was made on 16th March, 1892, upon an affidavit of the plaintiff, in which he al-leged that the defendant in March, 1891, absconded from this Province for the purpose of defrauding his creditors, and that, having lately returned to the Province, he was about to leave it again with a like purpose. The defendant applied, upon new material, to the Judge who made the order to set it aside and to be discharged from custody :- Held, and to be discharged from custody. Heat, that the affidavit of the plaintiff was, if true, a sufficient foundation for the order. Ker-sterman v. McLellan, 10 P. R. 122, followed. And the order could not be set aside by the Judge upon the new material contradicting Busby, 5 P. R. 356, and Gilbert v. Stiles, 13 P. R. 121, followed. The departure of the defendant from this Province in March, 1891, was open and public; he announced it at a public meeting to six or seven hundred per-sons along with the fact that he intended to sell his household effects before his intended departure; the newspapers in the place where he lived announced that he was going to Chicago, U.S., with his family to take a situation there which he had obtained; and his fellow townsmen gave him a public dinner, at which several of his creditors were present, before several of his creditors were present below. he left. He departed for Chicago, taking no property with him. The only piece of property which he possessed in Ontario was an unsaleable and heavily mortgaged house and lot, which, a year before he left, he had transnot, which, a year before he left, he had trans-ferred to a creditor as security for a debt. He had a permanent situation and residence in Chicago with his wife and family, and in March, 1892, returned to this Province for a merely temporary purpose. During the year he spent in Chicago he remitted considerable stus carned by him to his creditors in On-tario:—Held, that, under these circum-stances, the defendant could not be said to have left Ontario with intent to defraud his creditors, and that he should be discharged from custody under the oder for arrest. It is within the power of the court or 2 Judge, upon an application to discharge a defendant from custody, to impose upon him the term that he shall bring no action against the plaintiff; but it should only be imposed where the plaintiff is shewn to have been entirely frank and open in his application for the order for arrest, and to have had reasonable grounds for the statements he has laid before the Judge. The circumstances of this case did not warrant such a term being imposed; for the plaintiff was aware of the circumstances and the publicity of the defendant's departure in 1891, and conveyed a false impression when he swore that the defendant chapture in the control of the publication to be discharged from custody. Scane v. Coffey, 15 P. R. 112. See the next two cases.

Previous Departure - Temporary Return.]-In an action for damages for arrest under the order made in the above action the plaintiff recovered a verdict for $1,000. Upon motion to set it aside, made before a divisional court composed of Armour, C.J., and Falconbridge, J.:—Held, per Armour, C.J., that so long as the order for arrest stood, an action for maliciously and without reasonable and probable cause arresting the plaintiff could not be maintained. Erickson v. Brand, 14 A. R. 614, distinguished. 2. Where a creditor, by affidavit, satisfies the Judge that there is good and probable cause for believing that his debtor, unless he be forthwith apprehended, is about to quit Ontario, the inference is raised that he is about to do so with intent to defraud; for he is removing his body, which is subject to the jurisdiction of the courts of Ontario, and liable to be taken the courts of Ontario, and liable to be taken in execution, beyond the jurisdiction of such courts. Toothe v. Frederick, 14 P. R. 287, commented on and not followed. Robertson v. Coulton, 9 P. R. 16, approved and followed. 3. The facts that the plaintiff, being a resident of Ontario, and having numerous creditions of the court o tors therein, including the defendant, left the Province without paying them, and went to reside permanently in the United States, whether he left openly or secretly, and whether he announced his departure and intentions beforehand or concealed them, and that he came back to Ontario for a temporary purpose, intending to return to the United States, afforded reasonable and probable cause for and justified his arrest. 4. Considering the action as one for imposing upon the Judge by some false statement in the affida-vit to hold to bail, and thereby inducing him to grant the order for arrest, the fact falsely suggested or suppressed must be a material one for the Judge to consider in granting the order, and the burden is upon the plaintif of shewing that the Judge was imposed upon. 5. The word "absconded" truly described the going away of the plaintiff, whether he went away secretly or openly, and he was properly described as an absconding debtor. properly described as an absconding debtor. Falconbridge, J., adhering to the views expressed in Scane v. Coffey, 15 P. R. 112, was of opinion that the plaintiff had a cause of action, but thought there should be a new trial on the grounds of excessive damages and misdirection; and concurred pro forma in the decision of Armour, C.J. Coffey v. Scane, 25 O. R. 22.

See the next case.

Previous Departure — Temporary Return.]—Where a man, having numerous creditors in Ontario, leaves the Province openly to reside in the United States after publicly announcing his intention so to do, without paying his creditors, and after his departure it is found that statements made by him as to property available to pay his debts are false and that nothing is in fact available for that purpose, his arrest upon civil process upon his return to Ontario for a temporary purpose, intending to return to the United States, is justifiable. Judgment below, 25 O. R. 22, affirmed. Coffey v. Scanc, 22 A. R. 365

Promissory Notes,]—Arrest on notes secured by mortgage as collateral—action for malicious arrest. Blakely v. Patterson, 15 U. C. R. 189.

Recovery Back of Purchase Money.]

A plaintiff cannot arrest for purchase money paid for an est te conveyed to him by deed, upon the ground that the defendant, the vendor, was not lawfully seized; he must resort to his covenant. M'Lean v. Hall, Tay. 491.

Slander, I—In an action by husband and wife for a slander of the latter, not actionable without special damage, the affidavit stated only that persons not named had in consequence withdrawn their custom from her husband, who was a tailor. The learned Judge expressed surprise and regret that an arrest should have been ordered on such statements, but set it aside on the ground of irregularity only. Allman v. Kensel, 3 P. R. 110.

Specific Performance. —A writ of arrest will not be granted against the purchaser in a suit for specific performance, unless it be shewn by affidavit that the vendor's lien is insufficient. Actson v. Dajoe, 8 P. R. 332.

Summons.]—Under 12 Vict. c. 63, a bailable capias could not issue in a suit commenced by summons. Kelly v. Kelly, 1 C. L. Ch. 281.

Summons.]—After that Act commissioners could not issue bailable process under 2 Geo. IV. c. 1, s. 9. McIntyre v. Hutson, 8 U. C. R. 560.

Temporary Absence, | — Where the defendant's place of residence was in Ontario, and he was quitting the Province for a temporary purpose, leaving his wife and family behind, and intending to return before the end of the year, and it appeared that he had property, he was discharged from custody under an order of arrest, on the ground that it could not be said that he was going with intent to defraud creditors. Palmer v. Scott, 18 P. R. 368.

Trespass.]—A capias cannot issue upon a verdict in trespass without a Judge's order. McLeod v. Bellare, Tay. 273.

Trial Upon Affidavits.]—Under the old law neither the existence of the debt, nor the circumstances under which it was contracted, nor the conduct of the defendant, could be tried upon affidavits for the purpose of permitting an arrest, if the affidavit of debt and intention to leave the country was a positive one. Frear v. Ferguson, 2 C. L. Ch. 144.

Two Defendants, |---Where one defendant had been arrested, and the other served on mesne process, the court, after judgment, allowed a ca. sa. to issue against both, but to be executed only against the one arrested. McIntyre v. Sutherland, 5 O. S. 153.

Two Defendants.]—When a judgment is against two, a ca. sa. upon it must include both, or shew some reason for the omission. Turner v. Williams, 1 P. R. 360.

Unlawful Custody,]-By indenture defendant covenanted to pay purchase money for land conveyed to him by plaintiffs, and by him re-conveyed, together with other land as security therefor. There was a proviso as security therefor. There was a proviso that in default of any of the payments, the said land was to become the plaintiffs' ab-solutely. It was covenanted by the plaintiffs that they would put up certain mills on the property conveyed to defendant. The prop-erty was situated in the county of Grey, where defendant lived. The plaintiffs erected the mills. Defendant, about a year afterwards, having taken the machinery from the mill, and being in default on account of his purchase money, left the county. The plain-tiffs followed and arrested him without laying information against him, or having a warrant therefor. Afterwards they procured a warrant to issue against defendant in the county of Oxford, charging him with embezzlement in regard to the machinery, &c., in the mill. On this defendant was again arrested. While in such custody, the plaintiffs issued a capias against the defendant for the debt:—Held, that the first and second arrests were illegal:
—Held, also, that the arrest under the capias was illegal, as defendant was in custody un-lawfully, at the suit of the plaintiffs, at the time they procured it to issue. McGregor v. Scarlett, 7 P. R. 20.

Unliquidated Damages.] — An attachment will not be granted against an absconding debtor for unliquidated damages. Clark v. Ashfield, E. T. 7 Will. IV.

Use and Occupation.]—"That the defendant was indebted to the plaintiff in the sum of £50 for the use and occupation of a certain tenement:"—Held, sufficient. Ferguson v. Murphy, Tay. 206.

Work and Labour.] — For work and labour done, without stating a request, is defective. Hall v. Brush, T. T. 3 & 4 Vict.

- 2. Practice and Procedure.
- (a) Affidavits and their Contents.

Account Stated.] — On account stated, need not say that the account was had. Black v. Adams, E. T. 3 Vict.

Affidavit Before Event.] — Where an affidavit to hold to bail was made while defendant was in the United States, and was left here ready in case he should come over, the court set the arrest aside. Cozens v. Ritchic. Dra. 167.

Affirmation.] — Order to hold to bail granted on affirmation made by a quaker in New York, properly verified, &c., taken before the city recorder. Smith v. Lawrence, 3 O. S. 18.

Agent.]—Quare, whether affidavit must shew that the deponent is the attorney or agent of the plaintiff. Chamberlain v. Wood, 1 P. R. 195.

Alternative Allegation.]—It is sufficient to swear either fact, that the debtor has parted with his property to prevent its being taken in execution, or that he has made some secret or fraudulent conveyance for that purpose, &c:—Held, that in this case, under the facts stated, defendant was amply justified in swearing to the first alternative. Maxwell v. Ferrie, S C. P. 11.

Amount.]—The affidavit stated the amount in sterling, adding, to wit, the sum of £704 08. 7d., or thereabouts, of lawful money of Canada:—Held, not sufficiently precise and positive; but it is sufficient to state a debt due to a plaintiff in England in sterling money only, and the insufficient statement of the sum in currency would not vitiate; but the amount for which bail should be taken was ordered to be reduced to the true sum in currency, as it appeared that the amount given in the affidiavit was excessive. Pauson v. Hall, 1 P. R. 294.

Assignee of Plaintiff.]—An affidavit made by the assignee of the plaintiff's estate, that the defendant is indebted to the estate and deponent as assignee thereof, &c., and that he is about to leave, &c., 'to defraud the deponent, as such assignee as aforesaid, of the said debt:"—Held, sufficient. Ramberg v. Solomon, 2 P. R. 54.

Bill of Exchange.]—Must state it to be "payable." Smith v. Sullivan, Tay. 493; Andruss v. Ritchie, Dra. 6.

Bill of Exchange.]—Must state the default of the maker or acceptor. Ross v. Balfour, 5 O. S. 683.

Bill of Exchange.1—The defendant is indebted in £560 of sterling money on a bill of exchange drawn, &c., for the payment of £560, not saying of what somey:—Held, sufficient, Paueson v. Hell. P. R. 291.

The affidavit stated the bill to be "payable at a day now past," and presentment on the

The affidavit stated the bill to be "payable at a day now past," and presentment on the day and non-payment, and then, after stating the several sums for which it was intended to hold to bail, con wed—" and that the said several sums of money are now justly due and payable as aforesaid: "—Held, that it sufficiently appeared that the bill was still unusid. He

Defendant was stated to be indebted in the amount of the bill, and in £5 19s, 8d, of sterling money aforesaid, "for interest thereupon, being for principal money and interest the sum of £565 19s, 8d, of sterling money aforesaid;"—Held, that the claim for interest was insufficiently stated. If said:—Heid, that the claim for interest was insufficiently stated. Ib.

It is sufficient to describe a note as being "for the payment to," instead of "payable to," the plaintiffs, Ib.

Bill of Exchange.]—An affidavit stated that defendant was indebted to deponent in f1:217 16s. 5d. of lawful money of Canada, upon and on account of a bill of exchange for £1.000 sterling (describing the bill); and that the sum of 19s, sterling was paid by defendant for notarial charges in protesting the same:—Held, that the amount due for the bill was sufficiently distinguishable from the notarial charges, which ought not to have been included; and therefore that the arrest should not be set aside, but the amount to take bail for should be reduced by deducting such charges. Brett v. Smith, 1 P. R. 308.

The plaintiff need not state expressly that he is the holder of the bill at the time of making the affidavit to hold to bail. Ib.

Bond.]—That the defendant is indebted to the plaintiff upon a certain bond or obligation, is insufficient. Prior v. Nelson, Tay. 176.

Bond.]—An affidavit on a money bond must shew to whom the bond was made. Case v. McVeigh, T. T. 3 & 4 Vict.

Christian Name.]—The affidavit need not state plaintiff's second Christian name, where he is described as the above plaintiff. Perkins v. Connolly, 4 O. S. 2.

Copy of Affidavit.]—A certified copy of an affidavit filed in the office of the clerk of the Crown:—Held, sufficient to move upon. McKenzie v, Russell, 3 O. S. 343.

Copy of Affidavit.]—In this case an order for a ca. sa. was granted upon two affidavits; one that of the Toronto agent for the plaintiffs solicitors exhibiting a copy of an affidavit made by one of such solicitors, stating that he believed it to be a true copy, and that the original was stated to have been enclosed in a letter received by him that day, but was not so enclosed, but not stating that such an affidavit ever existed:—Held, that this could not be treated as forming any evidence upon which an order for arrest could be founded. Gilbert v. Stiles, 13 P. R. 121.

Grown—Affidavit by Crown Attorney.]—
In an action at the suit of the Crown, an order was made for a writ of attachment against defendant as an absconding debtor; —Held, that the affidavit of debt which in this case was made by the Crown attorney was sufficient. Regina v. Stewart, S P. R. 297.

Defective Form.] — Where the objection taken to an affidavit to hold to bail was new in this court, and the plaintiff followed a form given in Tidd's appendix, the arrest was set aside without costs, and on condition that no action should be brought. Ross v. Ballour, 5 O. S. 883.

Departure or Concealment.] — "Has left the Province, or is concealed within the same:"—Held sufficient. Totten v. Fletcher, T. T. 2 & 3 Vict.

Deponent's Name.] — Deponent's name must be set forth in words at length. Richardson v. Northrope, Tay. 331.

Deponent's Name.]—And his Christian names must be given in full. Westover v. Burnham, T. T. 3 & 4 Vict.

Deponent's Residence.]—On a motion to set aside an order to discharge prisoner from arrest, it appeared that the affidavit to hold to bail described the deponent's residence as at Canandaigua, State of New (York being omitted):—Held, description insufficient. Byard v. Read, Tay, 413.

Fraudulent Conveyance.]-An affidavit for a ca. sa. that the defendant has made some secret and fraudulent conveyance, &c.. and not some secret or fraudulent conveyance, is good under the statute. Ewing v. Lockhart, 3 U. C. R. 248.

Good Reason.]—An affidavit that the plaintiff "had reason to believe," not "good reason;"—Held bad, and arrest set aside. Meyers v. campbell, 1 C. L. Ch. 31.

Grounds of Belief. |- Where deponents reside far from the debtor they should state the grounds of their belief. Bank of Upper Canada v. Spafford, 2 O. S. 373.

Information and Belief.] — Should state the name of the parties informant, but if it shew facts sufficient to satisfy the mind of the Judge, this is sufficient; it need not copy the words of the statute. McInnex v. Macklin, 6 L. J. 14.

Information and Belief. |- In order to support an order to hold defendant to bail, the plaintiff need not disclose in his affidavit the names of the persons on whose informa-tion he founds his belief that defendant is about to leave the Province, where he files about to leave the Province, where he files also other affidavits, stating facts which would justify such belief; in that case, it is the same as if the plaintiff had stated that these deponents had informed him of the facts stated in their affidavits. Walson v. Charlton, 40 U. C. R. 142.

Information and Belief.|—The affi-dayit used stated that the deponent was credibly informed and believed certain facts. not stating the name of his informant nor the grounds of his belief:—Held, that this statement did not comply with Con. Rule 609, and was insufficient as proof of the facts stated, upon an application for such an order. Gibbons v. Spalding, 11 M. & W. 173, and Mc-Innes v. Macklin, 6 L. J. 14, referred to. Gilbert v. Stiles, 13 P. R. 121.

Insolvency.]—A ca. sa. cannot be issued since the Insolvent Act, 8 Vict. c. 48, on an affidavit filed before. Sewell v. Dray. 2 U. C. R. 179.

Intent to Defeat.]-The use in the affi-Laing v. Slingerland, 12 P. R. 366. arrest Intent to Defraud.]—Held, that an affidavit concluding that "Patrick Brady hath departed from Upper Canada, and hath gone to the United States, with intent to defraud (omitting 'me') of my just debts, or to avoid being arrested or served with so far as the conclusion was conprocess," so far as the conclusion was con-cerned, was sufficient, the Act as well as the affidavit being in the alternative, and the latter alternative alone being sufficient. Higgins v. Brady, 10 L. J. 268.

Intent to Defraud.]-It is sufficient to shew that the debtor intends to defraud the plaintiffs, without shewing an intention to defraud creditors generally. Wakefield v. Bruce, 5 P. R. 97.

Intention to Leave. 1 - An shewing sufficient to satisfy the Judge that the defendant, unless apprehended, is forthwith about to leave, will be sufficient, though it is only sworn that defendant is about to leave Upper Canada. Swift v. Jones, 6 L.

Intention to Leave.]-" That the plaintiff had reason to believe," instead of "is apprehensive that the defendant was about to depart this Province without paying," &c.: Held, insufficient, Choate v. Stevens, Tay, Intention to Leave.]-When an appliattention to Leave, when an appropriation is made for an order to arrest, the affidavit must contain the ordinary conclusion, that the deponent is apprehensive of defendant's departure from this Province. Wilkeev v. Bloor, E. T. 2 Vict.

Intention to Leave.]—"That defendant will leave the Province of Canada:"—Held, sufficient. Brown v. Parr, 2 U. C. R. 98.

Intention to Leave.]—Held, that the affidavit under C. S. U. C. c. 24, s. 5, must shew facts and circumstances to satisfy the Judge that there is good and probable cause for believing that the debtor, unless forthwith for believing that the debtor, unless forthwith apprehended, is about to quit, &c. Demill V. Easterbrook, 10 L. J. 246. Held, that an affidavit stating deponent's belief that the debtor, unless held to ball, would quit Canada, not saying when, or assigning any special reason for forthwith apprehending him, was sufficient. 1b.

Held, that the facts and circumstances laid before the county Judge in this case, to satisfy him that the debtor had at any time an intention to quit Canada, were insufficient.

Intituling.]-Where the order for bailable process was made upon two affidavits, one intituled in the Queen's Bench, and the other not in any court, and the process afterwards issued from the Common Pleas, the arrest was set aside with costs. Swift v. Jones, 6 L. J. 63.

ARLUMING. —A technical objection to the form of the affidavit must be made before the time for putting in bail expires. An objection that the affidavit is not initialed in any court, is such an objection. Palmer v. Rodgers, 6 L. J. 188. Intituling.]-A technical objection Intituling.]-An affidavit intituled in the district court, instead of in the Queen's Bench, is irregular, not void, Sanderson v. Cummings, M. T. 3 Will. IV.

Intituling.]-Arrest under the statute allowing an arrest under an alias writ, on a testatum writ issued to a different district. Affidavit held rightly intituled in the cause. Glass v. Colcleugh, E. T. 3 Vict.

Intituling.]—Where there is a cause pending, the affidavit must be intituled in it. Brown v. Palmer, 3 U. C. R. 110.

Intituling.] - Where the commissioner Intituling.] — Where the commissioner designates himself "A commissioner in B. R. &c.," it is no objection that the affidavit is not intituled in any court. Ellerby v. Walton, 2 P. R. 147.
Followed in Molloy v. Shaw, 4 P. R. 250, and Damer v. Busby, 5 P. R. 356.

Intituling.)—The affidavits for a writ of attachment against an absconding debtor should be intituled in the court Hart v. Rattan. 23 C. P. Gl3, citing Allman v. Kensel, 3 P. R. 110; Swift v. Jones, 6 L. J. 63.

Intituling.]-The name of the court must be inserted in the affidavit at the time of suing out the process. Allman v. Kensel, 3

Intituling.]—Affidavits for an attachment against an absconding debtor are not vitiated by being intituled before the issue of attachment. Wakefield v. Brace, 5 P. R. 77.

Intituling. — Held. following Ellerby v. Walton. 2 P. R. 147, not a valid objection to an order to hold to bail, that it was granted upon affidavits not intituled in any court. Molloy v. Shaw, 5 P. R. 250.

Intituling.]—The affidavit to hold to bail may be intituled in a court or cause, or one of them, or it may be altogether without a title. I 5 P. R. 356. Damer v. Busby, Black v. Wigle, Intituling-Residence of Debtor.]-The affidavits for a writ of attachment against an abscording debtor should be intituled in the absonding debtor should be intituled in the court: and semble, they must state that defendant is a resident of the Province, and passessed of real or personal property therein. Heart v, Ruttan. 23 C. P. 613.

Quare, whether the fact of defendant stating in an affidiavit used on an application to set aside the writ, that he was a resident and possessed of property, cured the defect. The court refused to interfere with an order setting aside the writ for want of such statements in the affidavits. Ib.

Intituling.]—The affidavits upon which the order for a writ of attachment against an absconding debtor was issued, were not styled in any court, although sworn before a commissioner for taking affidavits in the Q. B., who appended to his signature the words, "A Com, in B. R., etc."—Held, that the affidavits were sufficient. Ellerby v. Walton, 2 P. R. 147, followed. Hart v. Ruttan, 23 C. P. 613, not followed. Scott v. Mitchell, 8 P. E. 518.

Intituling.]—Where the affidavit for an order to arrest was intituled in the High Court of Justice but not in the proper division:—Held, that the objection was clearly amendable. Robertson v. Coulton, 9 P. R. 16.

Jurat. |-- Where a defendant was arrested under a commissioner's writ, and the com-missioner's name was not attached to the distances name was not attached to the injural at the time of the arrest, but was placed there before the motion to set the writ and arrest aside, the court held the proceedings irregular, and set them aside with costs. Black v. Halliday, T. T. 5 & 6 Yict.

Jurat.]—Under 7 Vict. c. 31, the jurat must state that the affidavit was duly read over and explained to deponent, and the omission of the word "duly" was held fatal. Theyer v. Hensley, 1 U. C. R. 335.

Lower Canadian Judge.]—A ca. sa. may issue on an affidavit sworn before a Judge in Lower Canada, whose signature is verified by affidavit here. Coit v. Wing, 4 O. S. 439.

Misnomer.]—An arrest was set aside, where defendant, whose name was "Patrick," was called "Peter" in the affidavit and writ. Botsford v. Stevart, E. T. 11 Geo. IV.

Misnomer-Lien on Land. 1-On a motion by the defendant to set aside an order for his arrest in an action for breach of promise of marriage, the plaintiff's affidavit promise of marriage, the plaintiff's allidavit on which the order was based was headed in the proper style of cause, and proceeded, "I Alberta Jane Boyd, the above named plain-tiff," her name being Alberta Jane Yansickle, and was signed "Berta J. Vansickle,"— Held, that the allidavit was not multity, but the mistake therein was merely an irregularity, and the objection thereto should have been expressly taken in the notice of motion. The writ of summons was indersed with a claim for a lien on certain land in Ontario. The defendant did not state in his affidavit that he owned any land; while the plaintiff's counsel stated that, notwithstanding the indorsement, he had no knowledge of the defendant's owning any land:—Held, that this was no ground for setting aside the arrest. Vansickle v. Boyd, 14 P. R. 469.

Money Lent.]—An attachment was set aside, the affidavit being for money lent, and not stating by whom. McKenzie v. Bussell, 3 O. S. 343.

Negativing Motive.]—The conclusion negativing any vexatious or malicious motive required by 2 Geo. IV. c. 1, s. 8, is not neces-sary where a Judge's order to hold to bail is obtained. McLachlan v. Wiseman, 5 O. S. 333.

Negativing Motive.]—And such conclusion is dispensed with by 8 Vict. c. 48, s. 44. Lee v. McClure, 3 U. C. R. 330.

Paragraphs.]—It is not necessary, under the 112th rule of T. T. 20 Vict., that an affidavit to hold to bail should be divided into paragraphs and numbered. Ellerby v. Wal-ton, 2 P. R. 147.

Plaintiff's Attorney.]—During a cause an affidavit to arrest defendant cannot be taken before the plaintiff's attorney. Burger v. Beamer, 3 U. C. R. 179.

Plaintiff's Attorney.]-But an affidavit before action comme Smith, 1 P. R. 309. commenced may be. Brett v.

Plaintiff's Attorney.] — In moving on this ground it should clearly appear that he was attorney at the time the affidavit was sworn. Demill v. Easterbrook, 10 L. J. 246.

Promissory Note.] — Must amount for which the note w Norton v. Latham, M. T. 3 Vict. shew note was drawn.

Promissory Note.]—That the defendant was indebted in a named sum due on a promissory note, due before the commencement of this suit, the affidavit having been made several days before the writ issued, was held insufficient as heing equivocal and unheld insufficient, as being equivocal and certain. Clarke v. Clarke, 1 U. C. R. 394.

Promissory Note.]—An affidavit for several different notes need not state the aggregate sum, but the amount of each note must be mentioned. The dates of the notes should be set out in words, but figures will not make the affidavit defective. Ross v. Hurd, 1 P. R. 158.

Promissory Note. |- An affidavit by the indorsed of a note must state that it was indorsed to the plaintiff, and by whom. Glass v. Baby, 1 P. R. 274.

Promissory Note. |- The affidavit must shew that the note is overdue, either by directly stating the fact or by giving the date of the note and the time it has to run. Racey v. Carman, 3 L. J. 204; Ross v. Hurd, 1 P R 158

Promissory Note.]—An affidavit stated that defendant was indebted to the plaintiff in $2,615, being the amount of four several promissory notes made by defendant, bearing date the 6th February, 1866, for $653.75 each, payable respectively at forty days, sixty days, three months, and four months after date; and that said notes were given by defendant for goods purchased by defendant from plaintiff. On motion to set aside the arrest, because this affidavit did not shew to whom the notes were payable, nor in what character the plaintiff held them:—Held, that it was sufficient. Jones v. Gress, 25 U. C. R. 594.

Proof of Indebtedness. |- The promissory notes, or the cause of action, being set out fully, the indebtedness of defendant is alleged with sufficient certainty. Wakefield v. Bruce, 5 P. R. 77.

Proof of Indebtedness-Medical Ser-Judge's order to hold to bail was founded, stated simply "that the defendant is justly and truly indebted to me (the plaintiff) in the sum of $250.90, for medicine, medical attendance, and services, and money lent, a detailed account of which I have some months ago delivered or caused to be delivered to him;" without averring either that the medicine was delivered, the medical attendmedicine was delivered, the medical attendance and service performed, or the money lent by the plaintiff to the defendant, or at his request:—Held, following Handley v. Franchi, L. R. 2 Ex. 34, affidavit insufficient, Semble, that the affidavit would be sufficient without the words "at his request," Diamond v. Cartwright, 32 C. P. 494.

Residence of Debtor.]—The affidavit must on the face of it shew that the debtor is or was a resident of Upper Canada. Higgins v. Brady, 10 L. J. 288, It is not sufficient to describe the debtor as "lately doing business" in Upper Canada; nor to describe him as having "departed from Canada, &c. Ib.

Residence of Debtor. |-The plaintiff need not swear that the debtor was residing within Upper Canada, if that fact is sworn to by others. Wakefield v. Bruce, 5 P. R. 77.

Sealed Instrument. | - When the debt arises on a written or sealed instrument, the affidavit need not set out the date or other particulars, if it shew distinctly the nature of the debt and the instrument on which it accrued. Clarke v. Clarke, 3 L. J. 149.

Second Application — Further Material.]—An application was made to a county Judge for an order to issue a writ of attachment under the Absconding Debtors Act; the Judge did not finally determine act; the Judge did not finally determine against the application, but gave leave to renew it upon a further affidavit:—Held, that there was no reason why the applica-tion should not afterwards be made to another Judge. Bank of Hamilton v. Baine (2), 12 P. R. 439.

Semble, that where a Judge refuses to grant an attachment or an order to hold to bail, successive applications may be made to successive Judges upon the same material. and an order granted by any one of them will be as valid as if it had been made by the first one; but in the case of a subsequent application upon the same or different material the Judge should always be informed of every previous application: this, however, more as a matter of propriety than of legal right, and an omission to do so would not be a ground for setting aside the order if the material warranted the granting of it. Ib.

Several Claims.]-An affidavit money lent, paid, and on an account stated, need not state the sum due on each account stated, Tannahill v. Mosier, 2 O. S. 449; Black v. Adams, E. T. 3 Vict.

Several Claims.]-An affidavit for £80, on a promissory note for that amount, and also for goods sold, not specifying the sum due on each account, nor whether the goods sold formed the consideration of the note:— Held, insufficient. McKenzie v. Reid, 1 U. C. R. 396.

Several Claims.]-An affidavit for £613. stated to be due as a distinct sum for each stated to be due as a distinct sum for each of three different causes of action, but concluding "that the said sum of £613 is still due and owing to this deponent by the said T. E.," &c.:—Held, insufficient. Barry v. Eccles, 2 U. C. R. 383.

Several Claims.]-Where more than one debt is mentioned, and they are not combined and the aggregate stated, the affidavit must clearly express the plaintiff's apprehension that defendant will leave with intent to defraud the plaintiff of the several debts men-tioned; any uncertainty as to which he apprehends he will be defrauded of will be fatal. Brown v. Palmer, 3 U. C. R. 110.

Several Claims. |-An affidavit that defendant was indebted in £100 on a note, and femant was moeted in 100 on a note, and in £28 for goods; that the two sums amounted to £128; and that the deponent believed the defendant was about to leave Upper Canada to defraud him of the said debt (instead of debts);—Held, sufficient. Romberg v. Steenbock, 1 P. R. 200.

Several Claims.]-Where the affidavit set out the cause of action for goods sold and delivered, and also upon an executed contract for the delivery of certain lumber, but stated only an aggregate amount due:—Held, sufficient. McIntyre v. Brown, 4 L. J. 85.

Several Claims.]-When some of the demands are well and others badly stated, the affidavit is not bad as to all; but the defendant will be released on putting in bail for the sum properly sworn to. Ross v. Hurd, 1 P. R. 158.

Stating Cause of Action.]—The same particularity in stating the cause of action is not required when a Judge has to make an order for a writ of attachment or to hold to bail, as was required in an affidavit to hold to bail, when no order of a Judge was required, nor as when personal liberty is involved, Bank of Hamilton v. Baine (2), 12 P. R. 439.

Statutory Requisites.] — Construction and effect of 7 Vict. c. 31. Bruce v. Schofield, 1 U. C. R. 1.

Strict Compliance.]—The affidavit to arrest in a special case requiring the sanction of a Judge to the issuing of the writ, need not follow so strictly the form prescribed by the Act, as where the creditor may sue out the capias as of right. Bordon v. Cawdell, Tay. 486; Neven v. Butchart, 6 U. C. R. 196.

Sunday—Deponent's Residence.]—It is irregular to make an affidavit of debt, or issue a writ, on Sunday; and in an affidavit of debt the proper place of residence of the deponent must be stated. Hall v. Brush, T. T. 3 & 4 Vict.

"Their said Debt."]—The defendant is about to leave Upper Canada to defraud the plaintiffs of "their said debt." is good, though the form given by the statute says, "the said debt." Pawson v. Hall, 1 P. R. 294.

Two Deponents Necessary.]—An attachment was refused where only one person besides the creditor swore to the absconding or concealment. Anan., 2 O. S. 292.
Affidavits should follow as nearly as possible the common affidavits of debt. Ib.

Word Misspelt,]—It is no ground for setting aside an arrest that the word malicious" is spelt with a "t" instead of a "c" in the affidavit of debt. Gardener v. Morrison, II. T. 4 Vict.

(b) Amendment.

After Arrest.]—Amendment of writ of ca. sa. granted on payment of costs without setting aside arrest of defendant under it. Gamble v. White, 2 L. J. 209.

Amount of Judgment.]—A ca. sa. omitting to state any sum for which judgment has been recovered is void, and cannot be amended after execution. Billings v. Rapelje, 2 P. R. 194, 200; Henderson v. Perery, 3 U. C. R. 252.

Form of Action.]—Error in the form of action in the body of a writ of capias may be amended after arrest upon payment of costs. Legear v. Lenox, 3 L. J. 89.

Form of Action.]—Amendment allowed in the address, cause of action, and teste of ca. re. Myers v. Rathbun, Tay. 127.

Form of Action.]—Refused in a bailable ca. re. Campbell v. Hepburn, Dra. 3.

Form of Action—Omission.]—Held, 1. That a copy of a capias after action should, like the original writ, shew the nature of the cause of action. 2. That in the note at the foot of the writ, the word "calendar" should precede the word "months," and the words, "including the day of such date," should follow the words, "from the date hereof," 3. That such defects both in the writ and copy served, when produced by defendant, may be amended on payment of costs. Hubbard v, Mihre, 1 C. L. J. 14.

Indorsement.]—Where the indorsement directed the sheriff to take bail for too large a sum, the court allowed it to be amended on payment of costs. Grantham v. Peters, E. T. 3 Vict.

Indorsement.]—Where a ca. sa. in debt has been issued on a judgment in assumpsit, and not indorsed as required by the rule of court, it may be amended. Keefer v Hawley, 1 P. R. 1.

Intituling—Rule Nisi.]—Where the rule nisi was not correctly intituled, the court allowed an amendment by the affidavits on payment of costs. Ball v. McKenzie, 1 U. C. R. 412.

Intituling Affidavits.]—Where the affidavit for an order for arrest was initiuled in the High Court of Justice, but not in the proper division:—Held, that the objection was clearly amendable. Robertson v. Coulton, 9 P. R. 16.

Irregularities.]—Held, under the facts of this case, that the plaintiffs had violated the spirit of the law in charging defendant in execution on a ca. sa. whilst endeavouring to enforce a remedy against his lands through an execution issued since the ca. sa., and since a fi. fa. goods returned nulla bona. An application to amend the ca. sa. was therefore refused:—Semble, the irregularities might on terms have been amended under ordinary circumstances. Curry v. Turner, 8 Misnomer.]—Amendment refused where one defendant's Christian name was wrong. Allison v. Wagstaff, M. T. 7 Vict.

Names of Plaintiffs.]—A variance between a writ and a copy in the names of the plaintiffs was corrected by amending the former so as to conform to the latter. Damer v. Busby, Black v. Wigle, 5 P. R. 356.

Teste. —On application to set aside an arrest, the plaintiff was allowed, on payment of costs, to amend the date of teste in copy served. Wilson v. Storey, 2 P. R. 304; 3 L. J. 50.

Teste.]—A writ of ca. sa. tested in the name of a retired chief justice, after his successor has been gazetted, but before acceptance of office by taking the necessary oaths of office:—Held, irregular, but amendable. Nelson v. Roy, 3 P. R. 226.

Wrong Form of Writ.]—The capias issued after action was in the form formerly used for the commencement of an action:— Held, amendable. Robertson v. Coulton, 9 P. R. 16

Wrong Sheriff.]—Where defendant was arrested on a writ issued and tested on 3rd January, 1852, and directed to the sheriff of the united counties of Wentworth and Halton, there being no such officer since 1st January:—Held, that though the writ might be amended the copy could not. Lyman v. Brethorn, 2 C. L. Ch. 108.

(c) Charging in Execution.

A ca. sa. lodged in a sheriff's office to charge the bail, is not a charging in execution. Dorman v. Rawson, Tay. 265.

Where a prisoner surrendered by his bail after judgment, applies for a supersedeas, the plaintiff not having charged him in execution in due time, he must shew when notice of render was given. Jennings v. Ready, E. T. 3 Vict.

The rule of T. T., 29 Vict., No. 99, applies to a defendant who, though not a prisoner at the time of the trial, is rendered by his bail during the same vacation. A defendant who has surrendered himself in discharge of his bail, during vacation, though not a prisoner at the time of the trial, will become supersedeable, unless the plaintiff charge him in execution during the term next succeeding such trial. Brash v. Latta, 5 L. J. 226.

The fact that a plaintiff has not charged in execution within two terms after judgment a debtor who has given bail to the action, is no ground for an exoneretur. Torrance v. Holden, 10 L. J. 298.

Where judgment was obtained on 14th January, defendant being on bail, and he was on 21st May following, in the vacation preceding Trinity term, surrendered by his bail, of which notice was given to plaintiff, and the whole of Trinity term allowed to elapse without his being charged in execution, defendant was superseded. Torrance v. Holden, 10 L. J. 332.

Defendant, having been at large on bail when the verdict was obtained against him. was rendered by his bail near the end of the ensuing term, and not having been charged in execution during that term, applied for his discharge: —Held, that he was not a prisoner, within the meaning of the rules of court, at the time of the trial, not having been in close custody, and the application was refused. Curry v. Turner, 3 P. R. 144.

Charging in execution is the process whereby a prisoner in actual confinement is detained in custody, whether at suit of the same or a different plaintiff. Hesketh v. Ward. 17 C. P. 667.

When a party, arrested under capias, pending action and before judgment, gives bail, and after judgment, and ca. sa. to fix bail returned non est inventus, is rendered to the sheriff's custody by his bail, in their own discharge, such prisoner is still held under mesne process, and is not confined in execution. Ib.

Quere, whether after voluntary return of an escaped prisoner a plaintiff cannot accept such return, and lawfully charge his debtor in execution by merely delivering a ca. sa. to the plaintiff. Ib.

A deputy Judge of a county court declined, on the ground that he was the partner of the plaintiff's attorney, to entertain defendant's application for a supersedean hecause he had not been "charged in execution within the term next after judgment?"— —Held, that he was entitled to be discharged from custody under a writ of habeas corpus. Reid v. Drake, 4 P. R. 141.

The vacation succeeding a term is not to be considered, for the purpose of charging a defendant in execution, as a part of the preceding term. The same rule governs in this respect in county courts as in the superior courts. Ib.

A defendant, committed to prison on mesne process, and charged in execution in the cause without a new affidavit, before 7 Vict. c. 31: —Held, not entitled to his discharge. Hamilton v. Mingay, 1 U. C. R. 22.

The ca. sa. lodged in the sheriff's office to charge the bail is not a charging in execution. Dorman v. Rawson, Tay. 265.

Quere, whether after the voluntary return of an escaped prisoner a plaintiff cannot accept such return, and lawfully charge his debtor in execution by merely delivering a ca. sa. to the sheriff. Palmer v. Rogers, 6 L. J. 188.

The plaintiff is not compelled to charge the defendant in execution in the county where the bail have surrendered him; he may be charged where the venue is laid. Beattle v. Robinson, 1 C. L. Ch. 217.

The defendant was arrested under a ca. sa. and afterwards admitted to bail. The trial was in the vacation before Michaelmas term, and the render in the vacation after that term. The plaintiff having omitted to charge the defendant in execution during Hilary term:—Held, on an application for a supersedens, that the render in Michaelmas vacation related back to the preceding term, which should count as one of the two terms within which the plaintiff must charge the defendant in execution, under Reg. Gen. H. T. 26 Geo. III. The defendant was therefore discharged. Golding v. Mackie, S P. R. 237.

Judgment was signed against defendant in Michaelmas term, and he was rendered in discharge of his bail in the vacation following;—Held, on application for a supersedeas, that the render related back so as to include Michaelmas as one of the two terms within which the plaintiff must charge the defendant in execution; and that not having been charged in execution until Easter term he was entitled to his discharge. Wheatley v. Sharpe, S. P. R. 307.

Where a person is once supersedeable for want of being charged in execution, he always continues so, even though he is afterwards charged in execution, before the application for a supersedens. Ib.

An application for a supersedeas was entertained although a similar application in the same case had already been dismissed. Ib.

(d) Costs.

Attaching Creditor. — Held, that the object of s, 20 of R. S. O. 1877 c. 88 is to save harmless the bonā fide attaching creditor, whose writ has had the effect of saving and protecting the debtor's property for the execution creditor. In this case there was a fund, not exigible under the execution, to which the attaching creditors alone were entitled, and several attachments, of which the plaintiff's was third in time, and the whole property had been seized and sold or retained under the first writ. The plaintiff, without disclosing these facts, obtained an order, under s, 20 of the Act, that all costs of his attachment should be paid out of the debtor's assets before the execution, and under it taxed his whole costs of suit. The order was set nside, for had the facts been disclosed it should not have been made, and in any event only the costs of suing out and executing the attachment were taxable. The application to set aside such order was held not to be an appear. Hughes v. Field, 9 P. R. 127.

Term of Dismissal.]—Where a judgment debtor disobeyed an order for his examination he was directed to pay the costs of an application for a ca. sa., although the notion was dismissed upon his giving sufficient excuse for his disobedience. Imperial Bank v. Dickey, 8 P. R. 246.

Defendant's Costs when Recovery less than Amount for which Arrest is Made.

Where a cause has been referred by order at his prius, but no verdict taken, defendant cannot deprive the plaintiff of costs. Powell v. Gott, 1 U. C. R. 418.

Semble, the words of the statute, "arrested and held to special bail," are satisfied by defendant being arrested and imprisoned. McGregor v. Scott, Tay. 56.

Where one of two or more defendants is arrested for an amount greater than the verdict afterwards obtained, an order will be granted under 49 Geo. III. disallowing the plaintiff his costs against him solely. Arnold v. Jonkins, 3 L. J. 133.

Held, that unless a defendant has been bedn "arrested" and actually "held to special ball," he cannot take the benefit of s. 222 of C. L. P. Act as to costs. Lyght v. Cannte, 6 P. R. 181.

Plaintiffs arrested for £106, and got a verdict for £5 f. g. dt.—Held, under the special circumstances set out in this case, that the plaintiffs had shewn "reasonable and probable cause," and had sufficiently explained their failure in recovering the full amount for which they had arrested. Goldie v. Camcron, 1 P. R. 29.

The plaintiff is allowed no costs where in a bailable action he recovers less than the sum sworn to, and the court will order defendant his costs; and the defendant is entitled to set off his costs against plaintiff's wedlet. Burrows v. Lee, E. T. 3 Vict. But see Higan v. Phelan, 1 P. R. 24.

Where a defendant arrested under a bailable writ has obtained a rule granting him ble costs under 49 Geo. II. c. 4, the plaintiff is not entitled to tax costs on entering the judgment. The effect of the first clause of this statute is to deprive the plaintiff of all ble costs of suit. And the word "recovered" in the latter part of this clause, as well as the word "recovered" in the former part, refers to the amount for which the verdict was given. Higson v. Phelan, 2 C. L. Ch. 7.

This point was considered at least doubtful in the same case, 1 P. R. 24.

The plaintiff cannot object to the notes of the Judge who tried the cause being referred to, for the purposes of this application. *Hig*son v. Phelan, 1 P. R. 24.

Semble, that one of two defendants, arrested for more than the sum recovered, cannot obtain costs of defence. Glass v. Curry, 1 P. R. 132.

A bailable capias having issued, the deputy sheriff went to defendant, and asked him to find bail. They both then went in search of bail, and a bail bond was executed:—Held. a sufficient arrest to entitle defendant to apply; but, that under the circumstances of this case, want of reasonable and probable cause was not shewn. Morse v. Teetsel, 1 P. R. 369.

Where evidence had been given in court of a larger sum being due to the plaintiff than he had arrested defendant for, and the case was then referred with other matters, and the arbitrators awarded the possession of a mill to the plaintiff, and £6 or £7 only in money, the court refused costs to defendant. McGregor v. Scott, Tay. 56.

Quere, under what circumstances the court will allow costs to a defendant under the statute where there has been a reference. Beard v. Orr. Dra. 40.

Where plaintiff arrested a defendant for upwards of £30 without allowing a set-off, of which he must have been aware, and a verdict being taken subject to a reference, the arbitrators allowed the set-off and awarded plaintiff only £20, defendant was held entitled to costs. Kendrew v. Allen, T. T. 4 & 5 Vict.

Where the plaintiff arrested for £20, and a yerdict was taken by consent for £50, subject to a reference, and the arbitrators awarded 11s, 3d, to the plaintiff, and it appeared by their affidavit that the plaintiff shewed a cause of action to no greater an amount, the court allowed defendant his costs. McLikking v. Speneer, H. T. 6 Vict.

Where a verdict has been taken subject to a reference, plaintiff may be allowed his costs; but, semble, not if the reference direct the costs to abide the event. Nicholson v, Allan, 60. 8. 252.

An application for costs under 49 Geo. III. c. 4, must be supported by affidavit stating that defendant was arrested without reasonable or probable cause. MeIntosh v. White, Tay. 57.

Where the difference between the amount recovered and that sworn was only £7, and in defendant's affidavits in support of an application a wrong Christian name was given to one of the plaintiffs in the style of the cause—the court refused to allow them to be amended, and discharged the rule. Rose v. Cook. 1 U. C. R. 5.

The rule was refused, because it nowhere appeared in the affidavits for what sum the plaintiff had a verdict. Powell v. Gott, 1 U. C. R. 415.

If the facts sworn to in the affidavits filed shew want of reasonable and probable cause, that is enough, without swearing to it in express terms. Laderonte v. Cullen, 1 P. R. 22.

Defendant was arrested and held to bail for a debt alleged by plaintiff to be $704, but the plaintiff recovered only $480. As to $89 which the plaintiff failed to recover, it was held, on the facts stated in the report of the case, that he had no reasonable ground for believing defendant to be liable, and he abandoned this portion at the trial, but as to the other portion, for which he failed, he had reasonable ground:—Held, that defendant was entitled to tax his costs of defence against the plaintiff under R. S. O. 1877 c. 5, s. 343. Porritt v. Frazer, 8 P. R. 430.

(e) Discharge and Setting Aside.

Affidavits, —Where the original affidavit to hold to bail was transmitted by the deputy clerk of the Crown to the cierk in chambers, at the request of defendant's attorney, without a Judge's order:—Held, that such original might be acted upon in moving to set aside an arrest, instead of filing a verified copy. Chamberlain v. Wood, 1 P. R. 195.

Agreement Not to Arrest, —Where a debtor leaves the Province and returns upon an agreement that he is not to be arrested, provided that he immediately proceeded to the settlement of his estate, and the creditors arrest him, alleging that he has broken the condition, the court will not discharge him, but will leave him to his action on the agreement. Sutherland v. Murphy, 4 U. C. R. 176.

Allegations Not Sustained.]—Where application was made for a discharge from custody under a capias upon the ground that the arrest was procured through a trick, by means of the use of criminal process, afterwards abandoned, and the affidavits in answer positively denied the trick and all collusion, the Judge, without inquiring into the legality of the arrest under the criminal process, discharged the summons. Glennie v. Ross, 3 P. R. 281.

Application to Set Aside Order.]—On an application to set aside the order for an arrest and the writ. &c., but not to be discharged out of custody, objections that the affidavit discloses no sufficient cause of action, or shews that the defendant is about to leave the Province, are not open. *Robertson v. Coulton, 9 P. R. 16.

Bail.] — Defendant was arrested on a capias, and gave bail. After judgment a ca. sa. was issued, and proceedings being had against the bail, the prisoner was rendered to the sheriff, but gave bail to him under C. S. U. C. c. 24, s. 29:—Held, on an application by the prisoner for his discharge from bail as not being worth 8.9. Kc. under C. S. U. C. c. 26, ss. 7, S. 13, that he was not confined "in close custody in execution," and had not been "arrested under a writ of ca. sa., though not confined to close custody, but has given bail;" and, therefore, that he was not entitled to be discharged. Hesketh v. Ward, 4 P. R. 158.

Bail Less Than Claim.]—An arrest will not be set aside because the direction to take bail is for less than the sum sworn to. Campbell v. Wood, 1 P. R. 199.

Bail to the Limits.]—Quere, whether defendant arrested on a ca. sa, having given bail to the limits is not precluded from a formal objection to the affidavit, such as the want of deponent's addition. Ewing v. Lockhart. 3 U. C. R. 248.

Breach of Promise - Corroboration. |--In an action for breach of promise of marriage the defendant was arrested under a ca. re., the order for which was granted upon an affidavit which did not swear to any amount of damage. Upon a motion to discharge the defendant from the custody of his baii, he denied the promise of marriage, and the plaintiff filed no affidavit corroborating her own. The intent of the defendant to leave the country rested on alleged admissions made by the defendant to the plaintiff, which he denied, and he also brought forward a strong fact against his likelihood to abscond from the Province:-Held, that, under these circumstances, the defendant should be dis-charged, and the bail bond delivered up to be cancelled. Donegan v. Short, 12 P. R.

Ca. Sa. after Ca. Re.]—Where a plaintiff such out a ca. re., and without executing it took a cognovit and entered common bail and jadgment against defendant, and arrested him on a ca. sa., without filing a fresh affidavit, the ca. sa. and arrest were set aside with costs. Brauen v. Bethune, 4 O. S. 331.

Cause of Action.]—On an application to set aside an arrest the Judge should not inquire into the particular form of the action, if satisfied that a cause of action exists. Butler v. Rosenfeldt, Succetzer v. Rosenfeldt, S P. R. 175.

Copy of Writ.]—The copy of a capias need not shew the debt on which the order authorizing the writ issued; nor need the writ shew the name of the county Judge who made the order. Swift v. Jones, 6 L. J. 63.

Copy of Writ.]—On an application to set aside an arrest for a variance between the original writ and the copy served, the writ was amended so as to conform to the copy. Damer v. Busby, Black v. Wigle, 5 P. R. 356.

County Court Judge.]—The Judge of a county court who orders the issue of a writ of attachment out of the High Court under s. 2 of the Absconding Debtors' Act, R. S. O. 1887 c. 66, has no jurisdiction to entertain an application to set aside such writ. Disher v. Disher, 12 P. R. 518.

County Court — Divisional Court.] — A divisional court has power under Con. Rule 1051 to set aside or vary an order for arrest made by a county court Judge in a county court action. Elliott v. McCuaig, 13 P. R. 416.

County Court — Divisional Court — Intent.1—Upon an appeal by the plaintiff from an order of the Judge of a county court, in an action in that court, discharging the defendant from the custody of his bail, it was

Court of Chancery. —A defendant confined in close custody under a writ of arrest, may apply to the court of chancery for his discharge under C. S. U. C. e. 26, s. 1. Lawson v. Crookshank, 2 Ch. Ch. 413.

Creditors.!—Proceedings had in suits an absconding debtor, contrary to the statutes, may be set aside at the instance of other creditors. Bank of Montreal v. Burnham, 1 U. C. R. 131.

Custody without Warrant.] — Where defendant was illegally detained in close custody, without warrant, at the instance of the plaintiff, on a charge involving the subject matter afterwards stated in the affidavit to arrest, as creating the demand for which the defendant was ordered to be held to bail in the cause, he was discharged from custody on entering a common appearance. Palmer v, Rodgers, 6 L. J. 188.

Date of Indorsement.]—The date of an indorsement on a capias, given in 12 Viet, c. 63, sched, 3, means the date of the Judge's order, not of the affidavit. Where the arrest is on affidavit no date need be indorsed. Romberg v. Steenbock, 1 P. R. 200.

Date of Execution of Writ.]—The omission to indorse upon the writ the day of execution thereof, as directed by the rule of court, is no ground for setting aside an arrest. Quare, whether such indorsement should be by the bailiff who makes the service, as he is not the person who has the execution and return of the writ. McNider v. Martin, 1 P. R. 205.

Debt not Due, |--Quære, when one Judge on a statement of facts has ordered a ca. sa. to issue, can another Judge, taking a different view of the same facts, interfere without any new matter being shewn? The question whether any debt is due or not will be entertained on an application to discharge an order for a ca. sa., but unless a very clear case is made out, the court or Judge will not interfere. McInnes v. Macklin, 6 L. J. 14.

Debt not Due.]—Where defendant was mrested on a ca. res, and it was doubtful whether the debt was actually due or not, the court refused to discharge the defendant, although the Judge who granted the order for the writ would not have done so, if all the facts had been before him. Willett v. Brown, S. P. R. 469.

Defective Material.]—After removal of the proceedings from an inferior court, the writ and arrest were set aside for a defect in the affidavit of debt, though a similar motion was pending in the court below. English v. Everett, 1 U. C. R. 336.

Defective Material. |—An arrest was made on the 2nd November, special bail put in on the 9th November, a verdict rendered some time before the 12th December, a render by the bail on the 5th January, an application to the county Judge on the 2nd January, and the discharge of that application on the 5th January, and the final judgment given some time in the same month. An application, upon a habeas corpus issued on the 8th March, to discharge defendant because the affidavits upon which the Judge made his order to arrest were not sufficient in law, was not entertained, as it might have been if the affidavits had been a nullity. Runciman v. Armstrong. 2 C. L. J. 165.

Defective Statement — Supplemental Affidavit.—The affidavit stated only that defendant was indebted in $116,69 on two promissory notes overdue; but defendant, who had left the country, did not deny that he was indebted, and the particulars were stated in the special indorsement of the writ of summons served on him. An affidavit stuting the particulars sufficiently was allowed to be filed in support of the order. Robertson v. Coulton, 9 P. R. 16

Defects not Disclosed.]—The irregularity complained of must be pointed out in the rule, or referred to in the rule as appearing in the athleavits. Cook v. Norton, T. T. — Vict.

Defects not Disclosed, |—A rule nist to set aside an arrest on grounds disclosed in affidavits filed was discharged because the defect was not apparent from the affidavits, but could only be ascertained by a reference to the writ which was annexed to them. McGann v. Howison, H. T. 7 Vict.

Defects not Disclosed.]—A rule nisi to set aside the order to hold to bail for alleged insufficiency in the plaintiff's affidavit must point out the objection specifically. Watson v. Charlton, 40 U. C. R. 142.

Defects in Warrant.]—An informality in the warrant of the builiff is not ground to set the arrest under it aside, especially where the writ itself is not produced. Hussey v. Link, E. T. 2 Vict.

Delay.]—The court refused to set aside upon motion a ca. sa, issued upon a judgment more than a year old without a sci. fa, to review it. The ca. sa, was clearly irresular, yet not void, but voidable, and the proper remedy would seem to be a writ of error. McNally v. Stephens, Tay. 263.

Delay.] — Where a plaintiff proceeded after more than a year from issuing his attachment, the proceedings were set aside and a supersedeas ordered. Bank of Upper Canada v. Spafford, 3 O. S. 78.

Delay.]—It was held no objection to an areas on a ca. sa. that several terms had clapsed after the return of the execution against goods before the ca. sa. issued, Glynn v. Dunlop. 4 O. S. 111.

Delay.]—Motion to set aside attachment and subsequent proceedings, under 2 Will.

ARREST.

IV. c. 5, because plaintiffs were not inhabitants of the Province, refused for delay in moving and insufficiency of affidavit. Fisher v. Beach, 4 O. S. 118.

Delay.]—Motion on the 2nd September to set aside a ca. sa. on which a party was arrested on the 6th August:—Held, not too late. Kecler v. Haucley, 1 P. R. 1.

Delay in Trial. |—When a defendant in custody on mesne process put off the trial at one assizes, and at the approach of the following assizes—after being apprized that the plaintiff had neglected to give notice of trial—pressed that the record might be entered low on the docket to give him time to procure a witness, and it was so entered, but could not be tried for want of time:—Held, that defendant was not supersedeable because the cause had not been tried within three terms. Gordon v. Fuller, 5 O. S. 34.

Denial of Charge.]—A party was arrested upon the affidavit of the plaintiff, stating that "from information I have received from various sources, and from my own personal knowledge, I have good reason to believe that the said J. R. is privately making away with his property, with the intention of realizing the same and leaving pper Canada, and that unless the said J. R. is forthwith apprehended he will leave Canada, and depart out of the jurisdiction of this honourable court. and for the express purpose of defrauding me of the damexpress purpose or defraiding me of the dam-ages I may recover against him." This was confirmed by similar affidavits from two others. Upon motion to set aside the capias or to discharge defendant:—Held, that the or to discharge defendant:—Held, that the court could not infer that plaintiff did not shew such facts and circumstances as satisthe Judge there was reasonable and probable cause for believing that defendant was about to leave the Province. But, inasmuch as defendant's own affidavit denied the charge of seduction, upon which he was ar-rested, most unequivocally, and shewed cir-cumstances by which it might be inferred he had no intention (then) of leaving the Province, the court ordered him to be discharged. out refused to set aside the capias and arrest. This decision is not to be referred to as upholding arrests upon affidavits such as were made in this case. Brown v. Riddell, 13 C.

Denial of Plaintiff's Case.]—On an application by a debtor arrested under a capias for his discharge, the Judge may receive affidavits denying the indebtedness, or his intention to leave, or any other facts relied upon in plantiff's affidavit. Demult v. Easterbrook, 10 L. J. 246.

Divisional Court,]—Held, that a divisional court may review the action of a Judge in setting aside a writ of ea. sa. and the artest thereunder, and also his action in making the order to arrest. Cartwright v. Hiods. 3 O. R. 384.

Divisional Court.]—A divisional court has power under Con. Rule 1051 to set aside for vary an order for arrest made by a county court Judge in a county court action. Elliot v. McCuaig, 13 P. R. 416.

Effect of Discharge.]—In debt on a judgment of a district court it is a good plea in bar that the plaintiff arrested the defendant on a ca. sa. and afterwards consented to his discharge. Fraser v. Bacon, 2 U. C. R. 132.

Excessive Claim.]—After an arrest for £613, and while defendant was in custody, all matters in difference were referred, and an award made for the plaintiff for £140. The defendant was discharged. Barry v. Eccles, 2 U. C. R. 383.

Excessive Claim.]—So where, under similar circumstances, the award was for a sum payable by instalments, one of which was due:—Held, that the prisoner, without shewing payment of the instalment due, was entitled to his discharge. Ruthcen v. Ruthven, 5 U. C. R. 279.

Executor.]—Where an executor alleged that he had kept money belonging to the estate for several years in his house, until the same was destroyed by fire, and the money lost, the court held the executor guilty of a breach of trust with respect to the money, and his affidavit as to the destruction being unsatisfactory, refused to discharge him from custody under a writ of arrest. Laucson v. Crookshank, 2 Ch. Ch. 426.

Failure to Deliver Statement of Claim—Extension of Time.]—Under the present practice there is power, after the expiration of the time appointed by Rule 1044 for the delivery of the statement of claim, where a defendant is detained in custody under an order for arrest, to extend the time. The case is within Rule 353, and the wording of Rule 100 of the Rules of Trinity Term, 1856, has been altered from "shall have been given" to "is given" in Rule 1044. Where the statement of claim was delivered two days after the month had expired, and the defendant moved for his discharge, an order was made validating it for all purposes, upon terms as to speedy trial and payment of costs, Winch v. Traciss, 18 P. R. 102.

Foreign Discharge.]—Where the person of an insolvent debtor is discharged from arrest by a foreign authority, this court will not set aside an arrest made under the process of this court for the same cause of action, it not being bound to model or restrain its course of proceeding by that of other countries. Brown v. Hudson, Tay. 390.

Foreign Discharge, 1—The court refused to discharge a defendant upon filing common bail, on the ground of his person having been discharged from arrest by an insolvent law of New York. Dascomb v. Hencecks, Tay, 438.

Foreigner, |—A person seeking to set aside an attachment against him, on the ground that he never lived nor was in this country so as to make him come under the Absconding Debtors' Act, should make those facts appear clearly; and the court discharged the rule where those facts were not distinctly made out, and the party had not described himself in his affidavit as the defendant in the suit. Smith v. Niagara Harbour and Dock Co., 6 O. S. 555.

Form of Affidavit.]—A statement in an affidavit of a defendant applying to set aside an order for his arrest, that B, and C, are copies of the affidavits filed on which the order to arrest was granted, &c., means all the affidavits filed. Demill v. Easterbrook, 10 L. J. 246.

Forum.]—An attachment issued by the order of a Judge in chambers may be set aside by another Judge. Howland v. Rowe, 25 U. C. R. 467.

Forum.]—Rule 536 does not apply to cases of ex parte orders for arrest, which are specially provided for by Rule 1051; and a county court Judge has no jurisdiction to set aside his own order for arrest. Where an order for arrest has been acted on by the sherift, it should not be disturbed. Jury v. Jury, 16 P. R. 375.

Fraud—Criminal Liability.]—Where defendant applied under s. 31 of C. S. U. C., c. 22, to be discharged upon the ground that be had no intention to quit Canada with intent. &c.; and it appeared that the debt had been created through fraud; and that he had no more ties in Canada than elsewhere, where he would not be criminally responsible for his fraud—the application was refused. Terry v. Comstock, 6 L. J. 235.

General Denial.]—Defendant swore that he had not at the time of his arrest, or of making his affidavit, any intention of quitting Canada with intent, &c., but he did not deny or explain any of the facts sworn to on obtaining the order: and the court, holding that these facts justified the arrest, refused his discharge. Jones v. Gress, 25 U. C. R. 794.

Imposing Terms.]—The court will in general impose terms on a defendant when an arrest is set aside for mere irregularity, or a trilling error; but where an arrest is made for more money than is due, and there is a substantial defect, or if a manifest injury has been sustained, the court will not interfere. Billings v. Rapetje, M. T. 4 Vict.

Imposing Terms.]—Where the defendnant in his notice of motion to set aside an order for his arrest and for his discharge, asked for costs, and an order was made in his favour with costs:—Held, that the Judge making the order had power to impose the term that the defendant should be restrained from bringing any action. Review of the English authorities. Adams v. Annett, 16 P.

Indigent Debtors' Act.]—Where a debtor is in custody under a writ of ca. sa., the court cannot make an order for his discharge except under the Indigent Debtors' Act. Gossling v. McBride, 17 P. R. 585.

Infant.]—Infancy is no ground for discharging a person from arrest. Clarke v. Clarke, 3 L. J. 149.

Insolvent.]—Right of insolvent to his discharge from arrest, though not entitled to a certificate of discharge. Hood v. Dodds, 19 (fr. 629)

Irregularity.]—The court will not set aside an arrest for irregularity in the affidavit, after the prisoner has escaped. Keefer v. Merritl, Tay. 490.

Judge in Chambers.] — A Judge in chambers has no jurisdiction at common law to discharge a defendant on the ground that he had no intention to quit Canada when the ca. sa. was issued. Bank of Montreal v. Campbell, 2 C. L. J. 18.

Judge in Chambers—Grounds for Discharge.]—A Judge in chambers has no power to set aside an order to arrest, though he may, on hearing both parties, discharge the prisoner, or, by virtue of his general jurisdiction over procedure, may set aside proceedings subsequent to the order, for irregularity. Demer v. Buaby, Black v. Wigle, o P. 15.

The order itself can be rescinded only by the court, but after arrest defendant may apply for his discharge on the ground of non-existence of the debt, or otherwise upon the merits, to any Judge in chambers, or to the county court Judge who granted the order. Such an application is not an appeal from the order to arrest, and new facts must be shewn to warrant the discharge of the prisoner, unless it be granted on account of manifest and vital defects in the original material. Ib.

material. Ib.

Either of these orders may be discharged or varied by the court, which possesses over the original order to hold to bail: I. A general appellate jurisdiction on the identical material which was before the Judge; 2. An express statutory jurisdiction to rescind the order, upon a motion to discharge the prisoner. In addition to this, the court has also co-ordinate jurisdiction with a Judge in chambers, or the county court Judge who granted the first order, to discharge the prisoner upon merits appearing in the affidavits of both parties. Ib.

Judge in Chambers.] — A Judge in chambers has no power to rescind his own order for a writ of ca. sa. or to discharge the defendant from custody after the order has been acted upon. McNabb v. Oppenkeimer, 11 P. R. 214.

Judge in Single Court.]—A Judge of the High Court sitting in single court has power to set aside an order for the issue of a ca. sa. issued by a local Judge of the High Court. Waterhouse v. McVcigh, 12 P. R. 676.

Local Judge.]—A local Judge of the High Court has no power to order the discharge of a defendant held in custody under a ca. sa. issued out of the High Court of Justice. Cochrane Manufacturing Co. v. Lamon, 11 P. R. 351.

Married Woman.] — Where defendant, a married woman, and known to be so by the plaintiff, was arrested on a ca. re., both writ and arrest were set aside with costs. Felow v. White. 2 C. L. Ch. 5.1

writ and arrest were set aside with costs. Foley v. White, 2 C. L. Ch. 51. When the writ of ca. re. is only against the wife, and is irregular against her, the husband cannot be compelled to appear. The Married Woman.]—Right of married woman to her discharge on application. Rennette v. Woods, 11 U. C. R. 29.

Merits.]—On an application to set aside an arrest under 22 Vict. c. 96:—Semble, that the existence of the cause of action may be inquired into, but that the absence of it must be very clearly shewn to warrant interference. Deliste v. Degrand, 3 P. R. 105.

Mesne Process.]—Section 31 of C. S. U. C. c. 22 applies only to writs of capias in the nature of mesne process. Bank of Montreal v. Campbell. 2 C. L. J. 18.

Misleading Statement.]—Held, that a statement in the affidavit on which the order to arrest as founded, that the defendant had made "an assignment of all his property," without adding for the general benefit of all his creditors, was of itself objectionable, as leading to the belief that the assignment was fraudulent, but apart from this there was sufficient stated to justify the issue of the order. Curturight v. Hinds, 3 O. R. 384.

Misnomer—No Statement of Affldarit.]—One of several defendants, Stephen Nathaniel Campbell, was arrested on a capias in which he was called Samuel N. Campbell; and on the copy served there was no direction to take bail. He was taken to the sheriff's office, and about an hour afterwards was served there with another copy, on which was indorsed, "take bail for £319 11s. 3d." not saying that this was the sum sworn to, nor was this stated on the original either. The next day he was served in gaol with a third copy, on which was indorsed the same direction, with "by affidavit" added. As to the misnomer, the plaintiff shewed that the defendant had represented his first name to be Samuel, but did not shew that he had said this was his only name, or that any inquiries had been made to learn what his second name was: — Held, arrest bad on both grounds. Pegy v. Campbell, 1 P. R. 328.

Misnomer, — Where a party by his own conduct and admissions has justified the calling him by a wrong name, he cannot object to the use of such name as a misnomer; and in this case defendant was precluded from raising the objection. Brown v. Smith, 1 P. R. 347.

Name of Issuing Officer.]—The name of the officer who issues a writ in the margin is not "a memorandum or notice subscribed to, or an indorsement on the writ," within 12 Vict. c. 63, s. 24, and therefore the omission of it in the copy served is not fatal. Januet v. Bush. 2 P. R. 42.

Name of Issuing Officer—Real.]—It is no objection to an arrest that the copy of the writ served does not contain the name of the clerk of the Crown, or a mark [L.S.] to shew that the original was issued by the proper authority, and sealed. Carrol v. Light, 1 P. R. 137.

Negotiation for Settlement.]—Held, that defendant had not, by proposals for settlement, &c., waired his right to a discharge because plaintiff had not declared in time. Tyson v. McLean, 1 P. R. 339.

New Affidavits.] — Quare, whether, on shewing cause to an application to set aside an arrest, affidavits can be received to support the original affidavits as to the cause of action. Diamond v. Cartwright, 22 C. P. 494.

New Material.]—Upon an application to set aside an order for a ca. sa. upon the ground that it is based upon insufficient material, as distinguished from a motion to discharge the defendant from custody upon the merits, no new material can be used. Damer v. Busby, 5 P. R. at p. 389, followed. Gilbert v. Stiles, 13 P. R. 121.

Non-existence of Cause.] — Quere, should a capias, or arrest thereunder, be set aside on the ground that there was not at the time of making the affidavit to hold to bail good and probable cause for believing that the defendant, unless forthwith apprehended, was about to quit Canada with intent, &c.; and, if so, cen a Judge is chambers entertain the application? Palmer v. Rodgers, 6 I. J. 188.

Non-joinder.]—The plaintiff having a judgment against defendant and C., and a fi. fa. upon it in the sheriff's hands, sued defendant alone on the judgment, and arrested him under a capias. Richards, J., refused to set aside the arrest or stay proceedings, but left defendant to plead the non-joinder and proceedings under the fi. fa. Ferrie v. McDiarmid, 2 P. R. 521.

No Return Day.]—A warrant to sheriff to commit a party is not irregular, though no return day is mentioned in it. Prentiss v. Brenaan, 1 Gr. 497.

Pending Action for Malicious Arrest. —An action for malicious arrest is not a waiver of objections to the affidavit upon which the arrest was made. Pawson v. Hall, 1 P. R. 294.

Previous Application.]—A Judge of a superior court will not interfere where the county court Judge has exercised his discretion. Molloy v. Shaw, 5 P. R. 250.

Previous Discharge.]—The court refused to set aside the attachment upon the ground that the debtor had been previously held to bail for the same cause of action, and the bail had been discharged by a reference to arbitration. Mosier v. McCan, 3 O. 8, 77.

Prior Action for Danages.]—Defendant was arrested on a ca. sa. It appeared that the officer who may a surject that the officer who may be a surject that the officer who may be a surject to the plaintiff that he had authority o aci. Defendant brought trespass against the plaintiff, and assessed damages. After such assessment, after giving bail to the limits, and nearly two months after the arrest, he applied to be discharged, and to have the bail bond cancelled. The coart refused the application. Kirby v. Finkle, 10 U. C. R. 365.

Prompt Application.] — The rule requiring prompt application for irregularity, is not strictly applied in the case of prisoners. Barry v. Eccles, 2 U. C. R. 383.

Reasonable Grounds.] — If a creditor has reasonable grounds for inferring his debtor's intention to defraud his creditors, a writ of attachment will not be set aside. Scott v. Mitchell, S P. R. 518.

Reluctance to Interfere.]—There must always be great reluctance to set aside the order of a county Judge directing bailable process, when there are reasonable grounds from which he might draw the conclusion that defendant was about to leave. Swift v. Jones, 6 L. J. 63.

Return of Debtor.]—A debtor having returned, and given the bond required by 2 Will. IV. c. 5, and put in special bail, a supersedeas was ordered. Clark v. Mallery, 3 O. S. 157.

Sale Before Attachment Set Aside,]

—Where property had been sold under the attachment, the court, on setting it aside, ordered the sheriff to pay over to defendant the moneys realized, and that no action should be brought for anything done under the attachment. Hart v. Ruttun, 23 C. P.
613.

Second Application.]—Where a defendant moved on the ground that the debt was paid, and the rule was refused:—Held, that he could not afterwards move for a defect in the affoliavit of debt. Smith v. Ross, T. T. 3 & 4 Vict.

Service of Copy.]—It is sufficient to serve a copy of the writ immediately after an arrest; and if defendant refuse to take such copy, he cannot afterwards object that it was not served upon him. McNider v. Martin, I. C. L. Ch. 205.

Setting Aside Order.]—Held, that in this case it was unnecessary to set aside the order for arrest as substantially the same object would be accomplished by merely discharging the debtor from custody, which was done. Demill v. Easterbrook, 10 L. J. 246.

Setting Aside Process.] — A defendant arrested on a ca. sa, was discharged from custody with costs, he undertaking to bring no action; and in the order leave was reserved to him to move the court to set aside the writ and arrest. The court discharged a rule for this purpose; for defendant being released, and procluded from an action, there could be no object served by setting aside the process. Broarn v. Brown, 10 U. C. R. 303.

Special Bail.]—When a defendant puts in special bail to an alias bailable writ, he is not thereby prevented from objecting to any irregularity in the arrest. Ross v. Balfour, 5 O. S. 683.

Special Bail Given.] — The affidavit complied with 2 Geo. IV. c. 1, s. 8, except in omitting the averment that the writ was not sued out from any vexatious or malicious motive; and defendant having put in special bail:—Held, that this defect was waived. Barrow v. Capred. 2 P. R. 95.

Special Bail Given.]—Where a defendant puts in special bail to an alias bailable writ, he may still object to an irregularity in the arrest. Ross v. Balfour, M. T. 2 Vict.

Special Bail Given.]—Putting in special bail after an application to set aside the arrest is a waiver. Racey v. Carman, 3 L. J. 204.

Special Bail Given. —Putting in special bail after having given a bond to the sheriff: —Held, not to preclude defendant from moving to rescind the order for his arrest. Bacters v. Flower, 3 P. R. 62. Special Bail Given.]—Does not waive objections not technical. Metruffin v. Ctine, 4 P. R. 134.

Statutory Requirements.]—There is a broad distinction, on an application to set aside an order for an arrest, between an order based on affidavits deficient in statutable requirements, and those containing statements from which different conclusions might fairly be drawn by different Judges. In a case coming under the latter head, a Judge in chambers declined to set aside an order for arrest, by a county court Judge of competent authority, preferring to leave it to the full court. Nor would be interfere, the evidence being conflicting, on the ground that it was not the intention of defendant to leave the country. McGuffin v. Clinc. 4 P. R. 134.

But as the order was granted for a sum greater than that warranted by the allega-

But as the order was granted for a sum greater than that warranted by the allegation in the affidavit, the amount for which defendant was held to bail was directed to be reduced to the correct sum, without setting aside the order. Ib.

Sum Not Specified.]—Where an arrest is made upon a Judge's order, and no sum is specified in the affidavit, the 2 Geo. IV. c. 1, s. 8, as to indorsements on the writ, does not apply. Sligh v. Campbell, 4 U. C. R, 255.

Supersedeas Bond.] — Bonds to obtain supersedeas under 2 Will. IV. c. 5, and 5 Will. IV. c. 3. Amount of penalty. Heather v. Wallace, 4 O. S. 131.

Supplying Defects.]—On an application to set aside the writ:—Held, that any defect in the materials on which it was granted, might be supplied by the affidavits used on such application. Regina v. Stewart, 8 P. R. 297.

Temporary Release.]—A mere release from custody under a ca. sa. for a given time, in order to make arrangements, if possible, to satisfy the debt, is not a discharge in law. Davis v. Cunningham, 5 L. J. 254.

Too Much Asked.]—Where a motion was made to set aside a writ and the arrest for irregularity, and to discharge the prisoner, or to deliver up the bail bond to be cancelled, as the case might be, the court made the rule absolute with costs, although more was asked than could be granted. Armstrong v. Scobell, 3 O. S. 303.

Trying Question of Intent.] — The cuestion as to the intent with which a person, whose property has been seized under a writ of attachment, left the Province, can be tried on affidavit, on an application to set aside the attachment. Jackson v. Randall, 6 P. R. 165.

Two Bailiffs.]—Where the warrant to arrest is addressed to two bailiffs, as if jointly, one may nevertheless arrest. Hetherington v. Whelan, 1 C. L. Ch. 153.

Two Defendants. —In a case where two defendants were in custody on a joint execution, and the plaintiff, having come to an arrangement with one defendant, discharged him:—Held, that this operated as a discharge of the other. Leahy v. McFarlane, 5 O. 8, 688,

Two Defendants. |- The discharge of one of two defendants in execution on a joint judgment, discharges both, Fisher v. Daniels, E. T. 2 Vict.

Two Defendants. |- An informality in arresting one defendant cannot be made a ground of objection by the other. Hetherington v. Whelan, 1 C. L. Ch. 153.

Two Defendants. |-Plaintiff having arrested A. and B. on a ca. sa. took a mortgage from B. and discharged him; but it was taken only as collateral security, and B. did not desire A. discharged :- Held, that A. was nevertheless entitled to it. Benjamin v. Foot, 2 P. R. 47

Two Persons Liable. |- Where the affidavit stated that two persons, trading under the name of "T. & Co.," were indebted, and process issued against one only, the other being within the jurisdiction, the arrest was set aside. Chisholm v. Ward, Dra. 490.

Undertaking to Give Bail.]—An undertaking to "cause special bail in this action to be put in for the defendant in due course of law," is not a waiver of any objection to the adildavit. Glass v. Baby, 1 P. R.

Waiver of Irregularities. |-Held, that defendant was precluded from moving to set aside the proceedings by having accepted service of the writ, with knowledge of certain alleged irregularities, and having delayed moving until after the time for pleading had expired. Regina v. Stewart, S.P. R. 297.

What Must be Shewn.]-Held, that on the affidavits set out in this case, the cause action and the circumstances to warrant the arrest were sufficiently made out. Semble, that defendant's own affidavit that he is not about to leave the Province would not alone, under any circumstances, be sufficient to set aside the arrest. Delisle v. Degrand, 3 P. R. 105

Wrong Sheriff.]-Where defendant was arrested on a writ issued and tested on the 3rd January, 1852, and directed to the sheriff of the united counties of Wentworth and Halton:—Held, that since the 1st Janmany, 1852, there was no such officer: and the arrest was set aside with costs:—Held, that the writ might be amended, but the copy The Judge declined permission to arrest not. on the amended writ. Lyman v. Brethron, 2 C. L. Ch. 108.

(f) Recovery and Distribution of Assets.

First Attachment. |- 2 Will. IV. c. 5 gave priority to the creditor suing out the first attachment under which the sheriff seized, to have his debt satisfied out of the goods in preference to other attachment creditors who might obtain judgment and execu-tion before him, where there were no lacnes on his part in the proceeding to judgment. Gamble v. Jarvis, 5 O. S. 272.

Fraudulent Cognovit. given by an absconding debtor to defeat claims of creditors was set aside on application of bona fide creditors, and the money made on execution under it ordered to be divided. Bergin v. Pindar, 3 O. S. 574.

Fraudulent Judgment. | - On application by an attaching creditor under C. S. U. C. c. 25, s. 22, to set aside the judgment and execution of the plaintiff for fraud and col-lusion:—Semble, that the plaintiff's ciaim need not be unfounded or fraudulent; a bona fide debt may be sued for, and the action brought in collusion, &c. White v. Lord. 15 C. P. 989.

Priority of Division Court Garnishee Summons. |-Where money comes hands of a division court clerk under a garnishee summons, and he is made aware of a writ of attachment under the Absconding Debtors' Act, R. S. O. 1887 c. 66, he must pay the money to the sheriff and not to the primary creditor, under the provisions of s. 16 of that Act. Re Moore v. Wallace, 13 P. 201.

Where after the service upon the garnishees where after the service upon the garnishees summons a of a division court garnishee summons a county court writ of attachment was placed in the hands of the sheriff, and the garnishees paid the amount owing by them to the primary debtor, to the sheriff, but the Judge in the division court ordered the sheriff to pay the money to the division court clerk, and the clerk to pay if out to the primary creditors in the division court:—Held, that the Judge was right in ruling that the money should have been paid by the garnishees to the division court clerk under s. 189 of the Division Courts Act, R. S. O. 1887 c. 51, and therefore his order upon the sheriff to pay it to the clerk could not be interfered with; but the order to pay. the order to pay out to the primary creditors was contrary to s. 16 of the Absconding Deb-tors' Act, R. S. O. 1887 c. 66; and prohibi-tion to restrain the clerk from so paying out the money was directed. Ib.

Priority of Execution.] - Where a party serves process on the debtor personally before attachments issue, and obtains judgment before the attaching creditor, his execution has priority. Bank of British North America v. Jarvis, 1 U. C. R. 182.

Priority of Execution.]—An attachment was issued against defendant on the Cith July, and on the same day a summons was served upon him abroad, at the suit of one G. Within six months the plaintiffs sued out another attachment. It did not another attachment, it did not appear whether the plaintiffs in the first attachment had obtained judgment, or whether that writ was issued or G.'s summons served first, but G. first obtained execution:-Held, that, so far as appeared, G. was entitled to the benefit of his fi. fa. as against these plain-tiffs. Caird v. Fitzell, 2 P. R. 262. Held, also, that the mere fact that defendant withdrew his plea, and allowed G. to get judgment by default, was no ground for imputing collusion in obtaining such judgment. Ib.

Priority of Execution.]-Where goods have been attached, a creditor obtaining a confession of judgment from the debtor without service of process, and execution upon it before the attaching creditors, does not obtain priority. Bird v. Folger, 17 U. C. 536

Held, that on the affidavits filed no case was made out for setting aside the judgment so obtained for fraud or collusion. Ib.

Priority of Execution.]-To entitle an execution creditor to priority over an attachment, he must not only obtain execution before the attaching creditor, but his action must have been commenced by process served before the attachment issued. Therefore, where the execution issued upon a confession given before the debtor absconded, without process served;—Hleld, that the attachment must prevail. Bank of Upper Canada v. Glass, 21 U. C. R. 39.

Priority of Execution.]—On the 2nd March. 1876, N. commenced an action by writ of summons against the defendant, who had abscended from the Province, having previously mortraged all his real estate, and, after attempting to effect personal service, served his wire. On the 20th April an order was obtained for leave to proceed as if personal service had been effected; and on the 4th Marchent and the effected; and on the 4th Marchent and Service had been effected; and on the 4th Marchent and De each issued writs of attachment against defendant, and on the 30th Norember following, placed a fi, fa, lands in the sheriff's hunds. On the 7th May, 1877, the mortragues sold under their power of sale, and realized more than enough to pay the mortgage—Held, that N's writ of summons was "served" within s. 20 of the Absconding Debtors' Act, before suing out the writ of attachment, and that, having writs of fi, fa, in the sheriff's hands first, he was entitled to be paid in full out of the surplus. Nicol v. Erin, 7 P. R. 331.

Priority of Execution.]—A. sued out a writ of summons against an absconding debeths a special property of the inrisdiction, served the special property of the inrisdiction, served the special property of the inrisdiction, served the special property of the inrisdiction before the first attaching creditor:—Held, that to entitle him to priority, he must also shew that his writ was served before the attachment issued, and no evidence being given to shew at what time of the day either event took place, that the attaching creditor's claim must prevail. Quare, whether a service out of the jurisdiction would be sufficient, even if made before the attachment issued. Daniel v. Fitzell, 17 U. C. R. 399.

Priority of Execution.]—D., a sheriff, between the 7th May and the 4th August, received several fi. Iss. against the goods of defendant. On the 16th August he received one upon which this action was founded. Between the 4th and 18th August, two attachments were placed in his hands, and after the 16th several more. The sheriff treated the plaintiff's fi. fa. as subsement to the attachments, and returned it mills bona, upon which this action was brought for a false return:—Held, that the writ of the 16th August having come into the differential forms of the 18th August having rome into the differential force in custodia legis, it attached plaintiff were in custodia legis, it attached and the statements, and ought to have been considered in the attachments, and ought to have been considered and first. Potter v. Carroll, 9 C. I.

See, also, Carroll v. Potter, 19 U. C. R. 346; 1 E. & A. 341; 7 L. J. 42.

Priority of Execution.)—On the 27th September, 1884, the sheriff seized certain goods of the defendant under two writs of execution. On the 30th a writ of attachment under the Absconding Debtors' Act was issued and placed in the sheriff's hands, under which he seized all the defendant's property.

credits, and effects. On the 1st and 2nd October two more writs of attachment were placed in his hands. On the 13th October sheriff sold under the executions and realized enough to satisfy them; the moneys realized enough to satisfy them; the moneys remaining in his hands pending these proceed-ings. On the 20th October the sheriff re-ceived a certificate under the Creditors' Re-lief Act, 1880, and another certificate on the 24th. On the 26th he sold the balance of the defendant's property seized by him. After this various certificates and executions were received by him. On the 14th October he had made the entry in the book under the Creditors' Relief Act. None of the attaching creditors had placed executions in the sheriff's hands:—Held, that as the pro-ceedings under the Absconding Debtors' Act had been commenced prior to the sale of the goods, and therefore prior to the sheriff being required to act under the Creditors' Relief Act, the latter did not supersede the former, so that the moneys realized were subject to such former Act, and must be distributed thereunder: that the proceedings under the latter Act were not well taken; and that the creditors who had certificates, to come within the former Act, must obtain judgment and execution in the ordinary mode. Mache v. Pearson, S O. R. 745.

Priority of Execution—Land not Bound till Science. —The mere fact that a writ of attachment against an absconding debtor is in the sheriff's hands does not bind the debtor's land, and the land is not bound until science. Robinson v. Bergin, 10 P. R. 127.

The sheriff's build went to and entered upon the land of the whole of the land of the property of the land would be sold, but he did no other act of seizure:—Held, that there was no seizure, and that writs of fis. fa. lands placed in the sheriff's hands subsequent to the writ of attachment, were entitled to priority. Ib.

Priority of Execution — Costs.] — On the 25th January, 1884, seven warrants of attachment at the instance of different plaintiffs were issued out of a division against the goods of the defendant, an absconding debtor, and under them the bailiff seized certain goods. Subsequently and on the same day a writ of attachment was is-sued by the plaintiff in this suit against the defendant as an absconding debtor, and the goods seized by the bailiff were delivered up by him to the sheriff pursuant to s. 16 of the Absconding Debtors' Act. Five other Act. division court attachments and one county court attachment were afterwards issued. Judgments were recovered by all the attaching creditors; executions were issued in the suits in the superior and county courts; and the clerk of the division court furnished the sheriff with a certified memorandum of the judgments in that court, by virtue of of the Judgments in that coart, or which each creditor mentioned in it was entitled for the purpose of sharing in the proceeds to be treated as a plaintiff who had obtained judgment and sued out execution. Pending this suit an order was made for the sale of the goods attached under the writ, and the goods were sold, and the proceeds of the sale paid into court. a motion for distribution of the moneys in court the plaintiffs claimed payment of their costs of suit in priority to all other claims. It was ordered that the costs of issuing the plaintiff's writ, and the fees and charges paid to the sheriff for executing, should be paid first out of the fund, because these costs and charges were necessarily incurred in seizing, recovering, and preserving the property, and that any fees which had been incurred in the division court in issuing the warrants of attachment on the 25th January, and seizing the property and holding it till it was delivered to the sheriff, should also be paid out of the fund, and also the costs of the order directing the sheriff to sell, and the costs of this application, and that, after payment of these charges, the fund should be distributed ratably among the creditors. Darling v. Smith, 10 P. R. 369.

Property in Hands of Third Person—believery to Sheriff.]—Where an attachment has issued against the property of an absconding debtor, an order may be made upon a third person for delivery to the sheriff of property of the debtor in the hands of such person. And where the debtor's solicitor was shewn by an affidavit of the plainitiff to have in his hands for collection certain promissory notes, the property of the debtor, and the solicitor did not deny the fact, such an order was affirmed. Buntin v. Williams, 16 P. R. 43.

Recovery of Debts by Sheriff.]—An order authorizing a sheriff to sue for debts due to an absconding debtor, to satisfy an attaching creditor's execution, under s. 53, C. L. P. Act, 1856, will be granted ex parte upon affidavit shewing clearly the plaintiff's right to make the application. Cleaver v. Fraser, 3 L. J. 107.

Recovery of Debts by Sheriff.]—Proceedings under 2 Will. IV. c. 5, by the creditor of an absconding debtor. Averments necessary in the declaration. Amount recovcrable. Thompson v. Farr, 6 U. C. R. 387.

Recovery of Debts by Sheriff.]—The plaintiff obtained execution against A., whose goods were then under seizure upon an attachment. The sheriff, under C. L. P. Act. 1856, s. 53, having sued and obtained payment of a sum due by one of A.'s debtors:—Held, that such money was not liable to the plaintiff's execution, but went to the attaching creditors. Cann v. Thomas, 17 U. C. R. 9.

Sheriff's Action to Recover Goods.]—Held, that the first count of the declaration, which was by a sheriff against a partner of the abscending debtor, for converting the joint property, was had: 1. for not stating that the plaintiff sued under that Act, as required by s. 26, though it did state that he had under s. 25 obtained the order of a Judge to bring the action; and 2. for not shewing that notice of the attachment had been served on defendant, or that the goods had been attached by the former sheriff during whose tenure of office the attachment had issued, or by the plaintiff, his successor, the averment being merely that defendant having property in his possession (which the sheriff might have seized, but did not seize, whilst the property was liable to seizure), converted it to his own use. Taylor v. Brown, 17 C. P. 287.

Semble, that the limitation under the statute of the defence to matters available against the debtor at the date of the attachment, refers to the prosecution of claims arising before the issue of the writ:—But held, that the count was not bad for not stating that the attaching creditor had proved his deb before judgment, or filed an affidavit of the sum justly due before the issue of execution, for that the maxim omnia rite esse acta, &c., applied. Ib.

Held, also, not necessary to allege that the property attached was insufficient to satisfy the execution, or what return the sheriff had made, for the suit having been brought by order of a Judge, it must be presumed that he was satisfied as to this. Ib.

Semble, that it was unnecessary to allege more than the fact of conversion, leaving it to be shewn that there was such destruction of the joint property as would make it between co-partners a conversion. Ib.

between co-partners a conversion. Ib.
Held, also, that it must be assumed, if there was any sheriff having the execution of the writ in this cause, that it was the plaintiff. Ib.

Sheriff Suing for Rent!—In an action brought by a sheriff under the Absconding Debtors' Act to recover rent due by virtue of a lease to the abscording debtor, the evidence given at the trial shewed an assignment of the reversion of the abscording debtor, and receipt of all and half a year's more rent than was due thereon. The bonn filter of the transaction between the absconding debtor and his assignee having been submitted to the jury, they found for defendant in this suit. Upon motion for a new trial:—Held, that as between parties themselves, liritgating their own disputes, the court would require a stronger case to disturb the verifiet than was made out in this instance; yet here the plaintiff being a public officer, suing in the right of his office and knowing nothing of the transactions between the defendant and the absconding debtor, and the circumstances of the case appearing somewhat suspicious, there should be a new trial on payment of costs. Republis v. Perrec, 14 C. P. 309.

Subsequent Executions. — Where a debtor assigned to a creditor property, which was seized by the sheriff on several executions received on the same day, and these writs were subsequently satisfied by the saice of other property of the debtor, but before they were satisfied, and a fortnight after the assignment, an attachment against the debtor's property came also into the hands of the sheriff:—Held, that the property assigned was secured to the assignee against the attachment, although it had been liable to the preceding executions. Hooker v. Jarvis, 6 O. S. 439.

Timber.]—The court will restrain the attaching creditors of an absconding defendant from selling timber improperly cut upon land mortgazed by defendant to plaintiff. Thompson v. Crocker, 3 Gr. 653.

Time when Writ takes Effect.]—A writ of attachment only takes effect from the time of seizure. Kingsmill v. Warrener, 13 U. C. R. 18.

Time when Writ takes Effect.]—The placing of a writ of attachment in the sheriff's hands does not of itself bind the goods; the writ must be levied on. Potter v. Carroll, 9 C. P. 442.

(g) Second Arrest and Alias Writ.

Alias Writ.]—Where a defendant was arrested on an ains writ under 2 Geo. IV. c. 1, and gave a bail bond to the sheriff after having entered an appearance to serviceable process, the bail bond was set aside with costs. Douglass v. Pouceli, M. T. 2 Will. IV.

Alias Writ.]—After the service of nonballable process a Judge's order obtained by defendant for the delivery of particulars, with a stay of proceedings, does not operate so as to prevent the plantiff from arresting the defendant on an alias writ. Wilson v. Wilson, 3 O. S. 297.

Alias Writ.]—A defendant cannot be arrested on an alias writ issued after appearance entered to serviceable process, where it is necessary to obtain a Judge's order for his arrest, as the statute allowing arrest on an alias writ after serviceable process, applies only to cases where the cause of action is a delt. Ross v. Uryuhart, 6 O. S. 556.

Alias Writ.]—And where a Judge's order is necessary, a defendant cannot be held to bail on an alias writ. Boreman v. Yielding, M. T. 2 Will. IV.; Ross v. Urquhart, 6 O. S. 556.

Alias Writ.]—An al. test, ca. sa, is still a justilled under the alias, and the plaintiff repited that the said writ had been set aside, and then proved a rule of court discharging the arrest under a ca. sa.:—Held, no variance. Robertson v. Meyers, 7 U. C. R. 423.

Charging in Execution.]—Where a defendant was arrested on mesne process and committed to prison, and afterwards charged in execution in the cause without a new adialacti, before 7 Vict. c. 31, the court held that he was not entitled to his discharge, as the plaintiff could issue a ca. sa. against him without a new affidavit, as well when he had been committed to prison on mesne process, as when he had been held to special bail. Humilton v. Mingay, 1 U. C. R. 22.

Deputy Clerk.]—An alias ca. sa. may be issued by a deputy clerk of the Crown in an outer district; and it is no ground for setting aside such writ that the deputy has not transmitted the affidavit and praceipe, within one month after they were filed, to the principal office, according to the statute. Scott v. Macdonald, M. T. 7 Vict.

Second Arrest—Bail.]—Where a justice takes bail for appearance at a fixed time, a second arrest for the same charge by the same complainant before the time appointed, is illegal. King v. Orr, 5 O. S. 724.

Second Arrest—Discontinuance.]—A second arrest was set aside, where the plainiff had been non-prossed in the first suit and had not paid the costs. McCayac v. Meighan, 2 O. S. 516.

Second Arrest—Mistake.]—A second arrest allowed where first set aside for a clerical mistake in the affidavit of debt, plaintiff having discontinued that action and paid the costs. Sheldon v. Hamilton, 3 O. S. 65.

Second Arrest — Supersedeas.] — A defendant discharged by supersedeas, the plaintiff not having charged him in execution in due time, cannot be arrested again on the same judgment. Burn v. Straight, 5 O. S. 523.

Second Arrest—Settlement not Carried Out.]—Second arrest upheid, where defendant had been discharged from the first on giving a joint note, and agreeing to pay the costs, the note having been dishonoured and costs not paid, although an action had been brought upon the note. McDonald v. Amm, E. T. 2 Viet.

Second Arrest. — Where a defendant was discharged for defects in the affidavit of debt, on entering a common appearance, and afterwards arrested on an alins writ, the arrest was set aside, the plaintiff having no right to make a second arrest in that cause, where the entry of an appearance is made a compulsory condition of discharge from the first. Roson v. Adams, E. T. 3 Vict.

Second Arrest after Judgment.]— Where an arrest on mesne process was set aside for irregularity, and the plaintiff afterwards proceeded to judgment:—Held, that he might again arrest defendant on a ca. sa. issued on a new affidavit. Gordon v. Sommercutle, M. T. 7 Vict.

Second Arrest — Mistake.] — Where defendant had been discharged from custody on a ca. sa. by the partner of the plaintiff's attorney under a mistaken supposition that the debt had been compromised by the acceptance of new securities by the plaintiffs, the court refused to order a new ca. sa. Bradbury v. Loney, 6 O. S. 291.

Second Arrest—Waiver.]—Where after an arrest set uside for irregularity in a district court, the plaintiff arrested the defendant in the same cause on an alias writ under the statute, and defendant then removed the cause into the Queen's Bench by habeas corpus, in order to set the second arrest aside, but subsequently took steps in the cause in the district court, and did not put in special bail in the Queen's Bench, the court refused to set the arrest aside, and ordered a procedendo. Garfield v. Simons, 2 U. C. R.

Second Arrest.]—A defendant discharged cannot be detained by the same plaintiff, upon a second writ issued upon an affidavit sworn while he was in custody upon the first. Barry v. Eccles, 3 U. C. R. 112.

Second Arrest—Different Court.]—The defendant, having been arrested in the county court, was discharged for insufficiency of the affidavit, but expressly without costs. The plaintiff then took out a rule to discontinue this suit on payment of costs, if any, and arrested defendant in the Queen's Bench for the same cause. Defendant was discharged, I. because, as the first arrest had been set aside for a substantial defect, there could be no second arrest; 2. because the first suit had not been effectually discontinued, the plaintiff having taken no step to tax or pay costs. Ellis v. James, 1 P. R. 153.

Second Arrest—Irregularity.]—A second arrest for the same cause may be made without leave where it appears not to be vexatious, and the first has been set aside for a very trivial irregularity. Gillespie v. Deming,

Second Arrest—Vallity.]—On a ca. re, to arrest T., a warrant was made to one G., a sheriff's officer, to execute. G. being unwell, gave it to another batiff, not named in the warrant to arrest. T. promised this bailiff to go to the sheriff's office and give bail, which he did. Subsequently, because the muse of the second balliff was not in the warrant, the Judge of the county court set aside the arrest. While the process was still current a second warrant was made out and T. arrested. Thereupon, in the county court set aside the arrest was set aside, as being a second arrest in the same cause without leave, and plaintiff brought covenant against the sheriff and his sureties. The first breach charged that the sheriff neglected to arrest T., &c., to which defendants plended that the sheriff arrest T. At the trial the issue was submitted to the opinion of the court:—Hele, that defendants were entitled to success, for untility the sheriff might still arrest while the process was current. Semble, that the first arrest was unnecessarily set aside. McIntosh v. Jarvis, S. U. C. R. 555.

Second Arrest under Same Writ.]—A person arrested under a ca. sa., and suffered to go at large by the sheriff for a limited time, with the consent of the attorney, may be re-arrested under the same writ. Davia v. Cunningham, 5 L. J. 254.

Second Arrest—Alios Writ.]—If defendant is arrested on a ca. sa, and gives bail, plaintiff cannot issue an alius ca. sa, and arrest him a second time. But where defendant had endeavoured after the arrest on the ca. sa, by a contrivance to escape, so as to relieve his bail and charge the sheriff, the court refused to set aside his arrest under an alias can. sa. Semble, before the issue of an alias under such circumstances, the original should be returned and filled. Brown v. Stevens, 6 I. J. S.9.

Second Arrest—Escape.]—After a voluntary escape from the sheriff of a prisoner held under mesne process, plaintiff may proceed with his action, and, semble, may issue a ca. sa, without affidavit, if he has had a capias pending action, or an alias ca. sa, if the ca. sa, to fix bail has been returned non est inventus, and take the defendant thereunder; and at all events the plaintiff may have a ca. sa, issued on a new affidavit and re-arrest defendant. Hesketh v. Ward, 17 C. P. 667.

Quere, whether, after the voluntary return of an escaped prisoner, a plaintiff cannot accept such a return and lawfully charge his debtor in execution, by merely delivering a ca. sa. to the sheriff. Ib.

(h) Miscellaneous Cases.

Alimony.]—Where the plaintiff in an alimony suit obtains a writ of arrest, and the defendant gives bail, and a breach of the bond is committed, the plaintiff is entitled to have the amount for which the writ was marked paid into court, to be applied from time to time in payment of the alimony and costs; and semble, that upon such payment the sureties are entitled to be discharged from their bond. Needham v. Needham, 29 Gr. 117.

Appearance — Special Bail.] — In an action at the suit of the Crown, an order was made for a writ of attachment against defendant as an absconding debtor. Service of the writ was accepted by his attorney, who entered an appearance to the writ: — Held, that this was a useless proceeding, and that the defendant should have put in special bail. Reginar v. Stewart. S P. R. 297.

Assignces of Contractors. —The plaintiff contracted to build a mill dam for defendants. While carrying on the work he assigned the contract to his sureties, and afterwards abscended, and an attachment was issued against him. The assignees carried out the contract, and then sued in his name for the money due. After action brought this attachment was withdrawn, and defendants released by the attaching creditors from any claim by them to the money that might be recovered in this action. Within six months another attachment was placed in the sheriff's hands, of which defendants were duly notified:—Held, that the assignees were entitled to recover as well for the work done by the plaintiff before as since his departure; and that the defendants paying would not be liable to the creditors of the plaintiff. Clarke v. Proudloot, 9 U. C. II, 290.

Attorney Holding Money, |—The court will not order an attorney to pay over money which has been attached in his hands as the property of an absconding debtor. Clark v. Stover, T. T. 3 & 4 Vict.

Bail too Large.]—If defendant be held to bail in too large a sum, this can be amended. Wakefield v. Bruce, 5 P. R. 77.

Date of Return.]—Where, by the operation of Provincial enactments, a plaintiff was unable to give a proper date to the notice at the foot of a ca. re., a general notice to appear on the first day of the term was held sufficient. Brown v. Smith, Tay, 187.

Date of Return.]—Semble, fifteen days need not clapse between the reste and return. Beatty v. Taylor, 2 P. R. 44; Beattie v. Mc-Kay, 2 C. L. Ch. 56.

Delay.]—Delay in issuing a ca. sa. to fix the bail, cannot be pleaded in bar to an action against them on the recognizance. Carroll v. Berryman, 16 U. C. R. 520.

Delivery to Sheriff.]—After an attachment has issued, a rule will be granted against any one in possession of the debtor's property, to deliver it up to the sheriff to whom the attachment is directed. Mullens v. Armstrong, M. T. 2 Vict.

Discharge of Surety.]—C., one of the obligors in a bond of indemnity to the sheriff for seizing under an attachment, obtained a final order for protection from process. Judgment was obtained in an action against the sheriff subsequently to the filing of the petition and the bond, but was not referred to in C.'s schedule thereto:—Held, that under 18 & 20 Vict. e. 93, C. was not discharged by such final order. Held, also, that the obligees were not entitled to set off against the sheriff's claim money which the sheriff had applied from the sale under the attachment to pay executions prior to such attachment. Moody v. Bull, 7 C. P. 15.

District Judge.]—Under 2 Geo. IV. c. 2, a Judge of a district court had no authority to order an arrest for a cause of action on a contract where the damages were not liquidated. Forris v. Dyer, 5 O. 8, 5.

Effect of Judicature Act.]—Notwith-standing the Judicature Act. s. 90 and Rule 5, a writ of capias may still be issued under R. S. O. 1877 c. 67, and the C. L. P. Act, before an action has been commenced by a writ of summons. Vetter v. Cowan, 46 U. C. R. 435.

Escape Warrants.]—The English statutes I Anne st. 2, c. 6, and 5 Anne c. 9, relating to escape warrants, are not in force in this Province. Hesketh v. Ward, 17 C. P. 667.

Exemptions, |—Semble, 23 Viet, c. 25, exempting certain articles from seizure, does not apply where the debtor has absconded leaving the goods with his family. Regina v. Davidson, 21 U. C. R. 41.

Filing Declaration.]—A plaintiff cannot, after takin, out his ca. re. in one district, file his declaration in another. Throop v. Cole, Tay. 214.

Form,] — Form of attachment under 2 Will. IV. c. 5. Meighan v. Pinder, 2 O. S.

Form of Order.]—Held, that the amount for which special bail is to be put in need not be mentioned in the order for the writ. Regina v. Stewart, S P. R. 297.

Form.]—"Oath for £—," instead of "bail for £— by affidavit." is sufficient. Gillespie v. Deming, 1 P. R. 387.

Form of Writ,1—Quere, whether it is sufficient, under the first rule of H. T., 13 Vict, to state in the margin of a writ the county where it was issued. The matters directed to be indorsed on a capins by 12 Vict, c. 63, sched. 63, may be at the foot of the copy served; and quere, whether they may not be written at the foot of the original instead of being indorsed. Chamberlain v. Wood, 1 P. R. 195.

Form of Writ.|—Where in the original the warning to defendant was at the foot of the writ, and in the copy was indorsed, though in the body of the copy it was referred to as "hereunder:"—Held, no objection. The signature of the clerk of the process was placed at the foot of the warning, not of the writ, that the writ had been issued by him:—Held, a sufficient signature of the writ. Gilmour v. McMillor, 2 P. R. 168, 3 L. J. 71.

Fraudulent Conveyance.] — The fact that a simple contract creditor has sued out an attachment, does not afford any ground for coming to the court of chancery to have a conveyance alleged to be fraudulent against the creditor must first establish his right to recover at law. Whiting v. Lawrason, 7 Gr. 903.

Indigent Debtors' Act.)—In an action for seduction, the defendant was arrested under a ca. re., and judgment' having been entered against him, a ca. sa. was issued, and he was surrendered by his bail to the custody of the sherifi:—Held, that the defendant was not in custody as a debtor, or on execution, but on mesne process as a wrong-doer, and that he was not entitled to an order for payment of a weekly allowance under the Indigent Debtors' Act. R. S. O. 1877 c. 63. Wheatly v. Sharp, S. P. R. 189.

No smarp. Ser. 16, 1835.
Held, that it is within the power of the clerk of the Crown in chambers to make an order for the payment of a weekly allowance to a debtor, under the above Act, where it can legally be made. Ib.

Inquiry in Chancery. — When it is necessary, in order to settle the priority of incumbrancers, to inquire whether a party sued was an absconding debtor within the Act, this court will do so; and that, too, although defendant in the action may not have taken any steps to set aside the attachment at law. And the bona fides of proceedings taken against an absconding debtor to obtain priority, can be questioned in this court at the suit of a creditor or third party. Bank of Montreal v. Baker, 9 Gr. 97, 208.

Interpleader.]—Form of interpleader issue between claimant and attaching creditor. Doyle v. Lasher, 16 C. P. 263.

Judgment by Default—Assessing Damages,)—The plaintiff had sued out an attachment against defendant, and went down to the county court to prove his claim, upon a record shewing interlocutory judgment signed for want of a plea. Defendant applied to plead never indebted, on the ground that such plea had been filed before signing the judgment:—Held, that the application was rightly refused, for defendant should have moved against the judgment if irregular, and could not plead until he had put in special ball. D#ay x Offoy, 26 U. C. R. 363.

Held, also, that although defendant had not put in special bail, his counsel should have been allowed to cross-examine the plaintiff's witness, and give evidence in mitigation of damages. Ib.

Judgment Debtor,]—When serving a defendant with an order to examine him as a judgment debtor it is not necessary to exhibit the original order unless demanded in order to entitle the plaintiff to move for a ca. sa. against him under R. S. O. 1877 c. 50, s. 305. Imperial Bank v. Dickey, 8 P. R. 246.

Mesne Process,]—An arrest by a constable on mesne process directed to the sheriff is not legal by 2 Geo, IV, c. 130, unless the affidavit of the debt he annexed to the process. Ross v. Winter, 5 U. C. R. 570.

Mesne Process.] — Where a party arrested under a capias pending action, and before judgment, gives bail, and after judgment and ca. sa. to fix bail returned non est inventus is rendered to the sheriff's custody by his bail in their own discharge, such prisoner is still under mesne process, and is not confined in execution. Hesketh v. Ward, 17 C. P. 667.

Name of Writ.]—Semble, that the writ of capins mentioned in 12 Vict. c. 63, s. 24, may properly be called a ca. r.e., as it is 16 Vict. c. 175, s. 3. Tyson v. McLean, 1 P. R. 239.

Notice to Appear.]—The service of a copy of ca. re. will be set aside, unless a notice to appear be written thereon pursuant to the statute. Quere, must this notice be indorsed on the copy of the writ: may it not be written on a piece of paper attached to it? McTierman v. McChesney, 5 U. C. R. 631.

Order to Proceed - Local Master.] -Local masters have no greater powers in matters coming before them in chambers under the jurisdiction given them in chambers under the jurisdiction given them by the Ontario Judicature Act (44 Vict. c. 5) and 48 Vict. c. 13, s. 21 (O.), than those conferred upon the master in chambers, and from these powers the power of referring causes under the Common Law Procedure Act is excepted. A local master has, therefore, no power to make an order to proceed against an absconding debtor, upon default after service of the writ of attachment, where such order conwrit of attachment, where such order contains a clause directing a reference under s. 197 of the C. L. P. Act (1877). It is intended by ss. 8 and 9 of the Absconding Debtors' Act. R. S. O. 1877 c. 68, that only one order shall be made under which the plaintiff may proceed to judgment, and, therefore, where an order of reference is necessary the order to proceed must be made by a Judge who has jurisdiction to refer causes. Bank of Hamilton v. Baine, 12 P. R. 418.

Payee of Notes, — The payee of two promissory notes for £25 each, having absconded, is not thereby disabled from suing the maker upon them on his return, because in his absence an attachment has been taken out against him by A., a creditor, for £21. Stattery v. Turney, 7 U. C. R. 572.

Pleading.]—Alias ca. re. averred in the declaration and a ca. re. produced at the trial:—Held, an immaterial variance. Wood v. Sherwood, 4 O. S. 128.

Posting up Copy of Process.]—Omission to put up in the Crown office a copy of the process under 2 Will. IV. c. 5. s. 6, and tile the affidavit required by 5 Will. IV. c. 5. s. 7, before taking out execution:—Held, irregularities only, and making void what was done under the execution. Doe d. Boulton v. Ferguson, 5 U. C. R. 515.

Practice, |-Practice in issuing testatum ca. re. Patterson v. Calvin, 1 U. C. R. 409.

Promissory Note—Discharge of One Defendant.]—The arrest upon a ca. sa. and subsequent discharge of one of several defendants by the plaintiffs in an action against the drawer and acceptors of a bill of exchange:—Held, not to be a satisfaction of the Judgment, so as to prevent the subsequent issue of a fi. fa. thereon against the other defendants. Hamilton v. Holcomb, 11 C. P. 93. See S. C. T. L. J. 40.

Promissory Note — Discharge of Some Discolarts.]—Held, affirming 12 C. P. 38, that where the holder of a bill of exchange or promissory note sues, under the statute, the drawers, acceptors, and indorsers in one action, he may discharge the drawers or indorsers (or accommodation acceptors) after an arrest under a ca. sat, without losing his remedies against the other defendants liable in priority to those discharged. Holcomb v. Hamilton, 2 E. & A. 230.

Purchase at Sale,]—Quere: When an attaching creditor purchases at sheriff's sale, and sues for trespass to the property purchased, should he prove a debt to support his attachment? Haydon v. Crawford, 3 O. S. 583.

Real Action.]—The ca. re. is not the first and original process in a real action, such as dower. Phelan v. Phelan, Dra. 386.

Real Estate.]—When real estate is attached, the sheriff must enter and keep possession, to give operation to the attachment against strangers. Doe d. Crew v. Clarke, M. T. 4 Vict.

Repeal of Act.]—S Vict. c. 48, except s. 44, was continued in force by 18 Vict. c. 85, till the 1st July, 1856, and no longer. The C. L. P. Act, which came into force on the 21st August, 1856, enacted that from the time when it should take effect, the 44th section of 8 Vict. c. 48 should be repeated:—Held, that this 44th section could not be considered as continued by the C. L. P. Act, though, no doubt, it was so intended, and therefore no arrest could take place under it after the 1st July. Barrow v. Capreol, 2 P. R. 95.

Return Day of Writ.]—Proceedings to fix sal cannot be maintained on a writ of ca. sa, which is made returnable immediately after the execution thereof; for such purpose it is necessary that the writ should be returnable on a day certain. Proctor v. Mackenzie, 11 A. R. 486.

Returned Debtor,]—A debtor returning after trial and before judgment:—Held, entitled to a new trial, under 2 Will, IV, c. 5. Robertson v. Burk, 5 O. S. 75.

Second Attachment,]—Where the creditor at whose suit the property is first attached fails in his action, or is satisfied his debt, and the goods are restored to the debtor's possession, who disposes of them:—Semble, that a second attachment will not defeat such disposition. Howell v. McFarlane, 16 U. C. R. 409.

Secured Creditor.]—The law of arrest considered, and amendments suggested to meet the case where the creditor holds security for all or part of his claim. McGreyor v. Scarlett, 7 P. R. 20.

Security for Loan With Which to Leave the Country, I — A security taken for a bonā fide loan of money to enable the borrower to leave the country in order to escape his creditors, is not fraudulent and void. Hall v. Kissock, 11 U. C. R. 9.

Seduction.]—10 & 11 Vict. c. 31, s. 3, applying only to persons in execution for debt:—Held, not to include a defendant in custody on a cn. sa. in an action for seduction. Merrall v. Fransom, 1 P. R. 230.

Service of Original Writ,]—Where a defendant moved to set aside the service of a writ of ca. re. for irregularity, and it appeared that the process served was a testatum, and not an original writ, the rule was discharged with costs. Tool v. Love, 2 U. C. R. 95.

Service of Writ.]—7 Vict. c. 16, s. 54: —Held, binding on the courts in Upper Canada as well as upon the courts in Lower Canada. MePherson v. McMillan, 3 U. C. R. 34.

Service on Friends,]—Writ of attachment directed to be served on the nearest friends of the absconding debtor, and a copy put up in the office of the deputy clerk of the Crown of the county where he resided. Baster v. Dennie, 3 L. J. 69.

Service at Residence.]—Upon affidavirs that endeavours have been made in vain to effect personal service of attachment, that affect digent inquiry no information can be abtained as to the place defendant has fled to, and that special bail had not been put in for him, the plaintiffs will be allowed to proceed as if defendant had appeared, and to serve papers by leaving them at defendant's last known residence in this Province. Clark v. McInoba, 2 L. J. 231.

Service by Sheriff,]—A ca. re. not bailable must be served by the sheriff or his officer, though the deputy sheriff be a party to the suit. Ruttan v. Ashford, 3 O. S. 302.

Service by Mailing.]—Leave granted to serve absconding defendant with writ of summons by mailing it to his address. Lyman v. Smith, 3 L. J. 107.

Service on Wife.]—When an attachment has been served upon the wife of a debtor, who has fled to parts where personal service cannot be effected, the plaintiff's damages may be ascertained by the clerk of the court under s. 161, C. L. P. Act, 1856. Chapman v. DeLorme, 5 L. J. 138.

Service on Wife,]—Service of an attachment on the wife of the debtor will be allowed as good, upon affidavit that after diligent inquiry plaintiff is unable to ascertain the debtor's whereabouts. McDougall v. Gilchirst, 3 L. J. 28.

Setting Aside Judgment, |—After judgment has been entered against an absconding debtor pursuant to the finding of a county court Judge on a reference under R. S. O. 1877 c. 68, s. 9, the master in chambers has no jurisdiction to set aside the judgment at the instance of another creditor who wishes to be let in to defend. Wills v. Carroll, 10 P. R. 142.

Several Writs.]—Where there have been several writs of ca. re, sued out and the last served, the plaintiff to have the action considered as being commenced by the first writ, must shew at the trial that it was returned. Semble, that the continuance between the intermediate writs may be entered at any time. McLean v. Knox, 4 U. C. R. 52.

Hesketh v. Ward, 17 C. P. 667.

Time.]—A plaintiff cannot take a step in a a cause founded on the attachment until the three months allowed for the defendant to put in bail have expired. Banker v. Griffin, 3 O. S. 163.

Time for Declaring.]—Where a defendant was committed to prison on a builable writ, and afterwards, and before the return day of the writ, was released on bail, and on the return day of the writ entered special bail, he was—Held, not entitled to be served with a declaration before the end of the term then next after such arrest. Glenn v. Box, 3 U. C. R. 182.

Time for Declaring.]—Under 12 Vict. c. 63, s. 24, a plaintiff is bound to file and serve a declaration against a defendant in custody before the end of the term next after the arrest. Tyson v. McLean, I. P. R. 339.

Time for Declaring. —So also under C. L. P. Act. s. 32, coupled with Rule 100 of 20 Vict. Glennie v. Ross. 3 P. R. 289. Held, that the fact that defendant had, during the term, made application for his

Held, that the fact that defendant had, during the term, made application for his discharge from custody, which application was refused before the end of the term, was no sufficient excuse for not declaring during the term. Ib.

Held, that a defendant once supersedeable is always supersedeable. Ib.

Time for Declaring.]—R. G. 100 is imperative that a prisoner arrested and in close custody must be declared against before the end of the term after his arrest, and it is no excuse that a summons was pending during the last week of the term to set aside the capias and arrest. Houtaling v. Cuttle, 6 P. R. 251.

Time for Return of Writ.]—Where a ca. sa. has been issued upon the judgment within the year it is not necessary to return and file the same within the year. Beninger v. Thrusher, 1 O. R. 313.

True Copy.]—A true copy of a non-bailable process must be served on a defendant. Scatt v. Heffernan, 5 O. S. 321.

III. NE EXEAT REGNO.

Act Abolishing Imprisonment for Debt. 1—7 Vict. c. 31, abolishing imprisonment in execution for debt, applied to cases where judgment was obtained before it passed. Bank of British North America v. Clarke, 1 U. C. R. 1.

Upheld in Bell v. Ley, 1 U. C. R. 9.

Breach of By-law, |—A breach of a city by-law for driving an omnibas without the license required thereby, does not justify the summary arrest of the offender, even though the officer arresting may have believed that he was acting legally and in the discharge of his official duty. Kelly v. Barton, 26 O. R. 608: Kelly v. Archibald, 26 O. R. 608. Affirmed in appeal, 22 A. R. 522.

Criminal Charge.]—Though an offender for whose arrest a magistrate's warrant is issued, be in a county different from that from which the warrant issued, and though he be a prisoner for debt in close custody in such county, he may be removed under writs of habeas and recipias. Regina v. Phipps, 4 L. J. 160.

Escape.]—In an action for an escape on final process, a plea of the insufficiency of the gaol is void. Rowan v. McDonell, H. T. 3 Vict.

Private Individual.]—A man assaulted by a person disturbing the peace in a public street may arrest the offender and take him to a peace officer, who need not be the nearest justice. Forrester v. Clark, 3 U. C. R. 151.

Private Individual.] — A private individual cannot arrest on suspicion of felony; he must shew a felony committed. Ashley v. Dundas, 5 O. S. 749.

Private Individual.]—When a privateperson takes upon himself to arrest without a warrant for a supposed offence, he must be prepared to prove, and affirm it unequivocally in his plea, that a felony has been committed; strong suspicions of it will not do. McKenzie v. Gibson, 8 U. C. R. 100. What Amounts to Arrest, |—In an action for malicious arrest, the arrest is not proved by shewing that the balliff to whom the warrant was directed went to the plaintiff's house and told him at the door that he had a writ against him, but did not enter the house, nor touch him, and afterwards left him on his promise to put in ball the next day, which he did. Perrin v. Jogec, 6 O. S.

What Amounts to Arrest,]—The deputy sheriff, having a ca. sa. to arrest a party, went to the house with the writ in his possession for that purpose; he told him of the process, and being assured that a friend of his (the debtor's) who was then from home, would go his bail, he returned home and did not insist on the effor counties that the debtor's house and told him, without laying his hands on him, that he must come to his, the sheriff's house and told him, without laying his hands on him, that he must come to his, the sheriff's house, which he did, and remained there till discharged, but not under actual constraint;—Held, that under these facts there had been no legal arrest of the debtor on the first visit of the sheriff; that the merely insisting on the debtor going to the sheriff's house on the second visit, did not of itself constitute an arrest; but that the debtor, in having gone to the sheriff's house as desired, and having remained there till discharged, though without constraint, had been duly arrested. McIntosh v. Demergy, 5 U. C. R. 343.

What Amounts to Arrest,]—A bailable capias having issued, the deputy sheriff went to defendant and asked him to find bail. They both then went in search of bail, and a bail bond was executed:—Held, an arrest. Morse v. Teetzel, 1 P. R. 339.

What Constitutes Imprisonment.]—
"Standing in front of the horses and car"riage driven by V.," although he was "thereby forcibly detained on the highway against his will," is not an imprisonment. See Regina v. McEllygott, 3 O. R. 535.

I. Appeals from Assessment and Actions to set Aside Assessments.

Appealable Decision.]—A county council, upon a petition for a revision of assessment under 24 Vict. c. 38, without hearing the petitioner further than reading his petition, dismissed it:—Held, that the dismissal of the petition was a sufficient decision to warrant an appeal to the county court Judge. In re Judge of County Court of Perth and J. L. Robusson, 12 C. P. 352.

Board of County Judges—Appeal to Court of Appeal—Practice.]—Notice of an appeal to the court of appeal, under s. 84 (6) of the Assessment Act, R. S. O. 1897 c. 224, against the decision of a board of county court Judges with respect to a municipal assessment, was served by the municipality upon the railway company whose assessment was in question, but the motion was not set down to be heard nor proceeded with in any way. Upon motion by the railway company for an order dismissing the appeal:—Held, that the appeal by force of s. 84 (6), was lodged in the court of appeal in like manner as an appeal from a decision of a county court in an ordinary action becomes lodged—when the proper proceedings have been taken—in a divisional court, in which case Rule 790 or Rules S21 and S22 applied, and a motion to dismiss was unnecessary; or if not, that the appeal was not in the court of appeal at all, and no order could be made. Re Toronto Railway Company and City of Toronto, 18 P. R. 489

Board of County Judges—Appeal to Suprime Court.)—By 52 Vict. c. 37, 8, 2 (1), amending the Supreme and Exchequer Court. Act, and appeal lies in certain from courts "of last resort created under provincial legislation to adjudicate concerning the assessment of property for provincial remaining the assessment of property for provincial are municipal purposes, in cases where the preson or persons presiding over such court is or are appointed by provincial or municipal authority. By the Ontario Act 55 Vict. c. 48, as amended by 58 Vict. c. 47, an appeal lies from rulings of municipal courts of revision in matters of assessment to the county court district where the property has been assessed. Held, that if the county court Judges constituted a "court of last resort," within the meaning of 52 Vict. c. 37, s. 2 (D.), the persons presiding over such court were not appointed by proximial or municipal authority, and the appeal was not authorized by the said Act. Held, also, that as no binding effect is given to the decision of the county court Judges, under the Ontario Acts cited, the court appealed from was not a "court of last resort," within the meaning of 52 Vict. c. 37, s. 2. City of Toronto v. Toronto fudical volumes. The victor of the ductor of the ductor of the county court Judges, within the meaning of 52 Vict. c. 37, s. 2. City of Toronto v. Toronto Ruliney & C., 27, S. C. R. 640.

Correcting Omissions, —The omission of the assessor to distinguish in his notice to a railway company between the value of the land occupied by the road and their other real property, as required by the Act, does not avoid the assessment. Such an omission may be corrected on appeal by the court of revision and county court Judge. Great Western R. W. Co. v. Rogers, 29 U. C. R. 235.

Extension of Time—Practice.]—Power of the court of revision to grant time for entering appeals beyond that prescribed by the Assessment Act. Practice in appeal cases. Notice of appeal and necessity for stating grounds as causes and matters of appeal. Right of counsel to be heard before courts of revision and all other courts. In re First Division Court in the County of Elgin, 6 C. L. J. 295.

Finality of Assessment.]—The court refused a mandamus to compel a municipal council to alter the assessment of the applicant's property as settled on appeal by a court of revision. They also declined to express any opinion as to the principle to be adopted in the taxation of property, whether the intrinsic value only should be regarded, or whether the amount which it could be or has been leased for or what it does in fact produce to the proprietor, should be considered. In re Dickson and Village of Galt. 10 U. C. R. 395.

Finality of Assessment,]—Under 16 Vict. c. 182, ss. 26 and 28, the decision of a county court Judge is final only as to such matters as are to be submitted to him, that is, as to any alleged overcharge, or the wrongful insertion or omission of any person's name, not as to whether only the land occupied by a railway is assessable, or the superstructure as well. Great Western R. W. Co. v. Rouse, 15 U.C. R. 168.

Finality of Assessment.]—Where the assessors illegally assessed the superstructure of a railway as well as the land occupied by it:—Held, that the company might defend an action as to the superstructure, although no appeal had been made to the court of revision, and although the whole was called land in the assessment. City of London v. Great Western R. W. Co., 17 U. C. R. 202.

Finality of Assessment, I—The plaintifies had for several years appealed from the assessment of their property to the court of revision, who had decided against them, and from thence to the county court Judge, who had reduced it one-third, on the ground that a large portion of their building was occupied by the courts. In 1864, the same assessment being repeated, they appealed to the court of revision, who said they would consult the city solicitor. The plannitiff's solicitor was told by the clerk of the court of revision that no judgment had been given, and found none in the book where their decisions were entered. The collector, in October, called upon the plaintiff's secretary, who supposing all was right paid the sum assessed. The mistake having been discovered in the following year:—Held, that they might recover it back, for the court of revision not having determined the appear, the roll, as regarded the plaintiffs, was not "finally passed," within s. Gl of C. S. U. C. c. 55, so us to bind them. Law Society of Upper Canada v. City of Toronto, 25 U. C. R. 199.

Finality of Assessment.]—Where property was assessed in the occupation of a Crown official and not appealed against, and taxes collected thereunder—upon replevin:—Held, that under such circumstances the party assessed need not appeal to the court of revision, the assessment being a nullity, Shaw v. Shaw, 12 C. P. 456; S. C., 21 U. C. R. 432.

Finality of Assessment,]—Held, following City of Toronto v. Great Western R. W. Co., 25 U. C. R. 570, that a person assessed for property exempt from taxation, who has appealed to the court of revision (but not to the county Judge), is bound by their decision. Scragg v. City of London, 26 U. C. R. 263.

Finality of Assessment,]—The Judge of the county court, on appeal from the court of revision, by which the assessment of a suspension bridge as land at $150,000 was affirmed, reduced the assessment to $1,000, on the ground that all except the land on which the towers stood was personal property:—Held, that his decision was final, though clearly erroneous, and could not be questioned in an action, for he had jurisdiction to reduce the assessment, and the wrong reason given could not make his judgment less binding. Niagara Falls Suspension Bridge Co. v. Gardner, 29 U. C. R. 194.

Finality of Assessment,]—Where bank stock not assessable, because owned out of the Province, was assessed, and such assessment confirmed by the court of revision and county Judge, it was—Held, on demurrer, in replevin for goods distrained, that the defect of want of jurisdiction was not cured. Nickle v. Douglas, 35 U. C. R. 126, 37 U. C. R. 63.

Finality of Assessment,]—In an action to restrain the defendants, the corporation of the township of Dysart and the members of the court of revision thereof, from increasing the assessment on the plaintiffs' lands in that township to $243,113.75, an increase of $132,000 over the previous year, and from levying taxes thereon, the plaintiffs alleged that the proceedings of the court of revision were all parts of a fraudulent and improper arrangement and conspiracy that had been entered into before the holding of the said court of revision by the members thereof in conjunction with others, to increase the assessment of the plaintiffs. No evidence was adduced as to the actual or assessable value of the lands, but the plaintiffs stated that the highest bid they had bad for them was $80,000. It was further alleged that the members of the court of revision had before their election as councillors complained that the company's assessment was not high enough, and had procured their election partly through announcing that if they were elected the assessment would be increased and that they had held a secret meeting with other persons and arranged for bringing on appeals to that court :- Held, affirming the appears to that court;—Held, amining the decision reported, 9 O. R. 495, that the matters complained of were not sufficient to affect the judgment of the court of revision so as to repder it void for fraud; and that the plaintiffs had no remedy other than by an appeal to the stipendiary magistrate of Haliburton, under R. S. O. 1877 c. 6, s. 23. Canadian Land and Emigration Co. v. Tournship of Dusart, 12 A. R. 80, Finality of Assessment.]—The plaintiffs, a mutual insurance company, carrying on business in London (Ont.), were assessed for the gross amount of their receipts after payment of the year's losses and expenses, from which assessment they appealed successively to the court of revision and the county Judge, both of whom sustained the action of the assessor, which was affirmed (11 O R. 502), on the ground that the decision of the county Judge was final; and an appeal to the court of appeal was on a like ground dismissed with costs. Where the assessor has jurisdiction to assess the property, his assessment can only be reviewed in the mode provided by the Act, viz., by appeal to the court of revision and the county Judge. London Mutual Insurance Co. v. City of London, 15 A. R. 629.

Finality of Assessment.]—The court of revision continued the assessment of a lot of land occupied by a railway company of $81,200 annual value, assessed the station built upon it at $81,500, ansessed the station, "subject to the question" whether it could be assessed in addition to the land, "and left for the determination of a higher court," whether, after the valuation of the land has been fixed in accordance with $8.30 of the Assessment Act, the building could be added:—Held, that this was in effect a confirmation of the assessment, the reservation being inoperative, and that the court had no power to review the decision. City of Toronto v. Great Western R. W. Co., 25 U. C. R. 570.

Finality of Assessment, |—Section 65 of the Ontario Assessment Act, R. S. O. 1887 r. 193, does not enable the court of revision to make valid an assessment which the statute does not authorize; and the plaintiffs having been illegally assessed, and having paid the taxes under protest, were held entitled to maintain an action to recover them back. Watt v. City of London, 19 A. R. 675, 22 S. C. R. 300.

Finality of Assessment,]—The decision of the Judge of a county court on a question of assessment is final, when he is dealing with property that is assessable at all. Confederation Life Association v. City of Toronte, 24 O. R. 643, 22 A. R. 196.

Finality of Assessment.]—A company carrying on business in London were assessed in Brantford in respect of certain assets held there for them by an agent. Held, that as there was no jurisdiction to assess them in Brantford the company were not bound to appeal to the court of revision, but could dispute the validity of the assessment in an action brought against them to recover the taxes. City of Brantford v. Ontario Investment Co., 15 A. R. 605.

Finality of Assessment.]—See Janes v. O'Keefe, 26 O. R. 489, 23 A. R. 129.

Forum. |—Where there is jurisdiction to assess, any appeal from a court of revision must be to the county Judge or stipendlary magistrate, as the case may be. Vivian v. Township of McKim, 23 O. R. 561.

North-West Territories.] — Appeal from court of revision in the North-West Territories. See Angus v. Calgary School Trustees, 16 S. C. R. 716.

Quashing Assessment,]—Action to have assessment quashed after payment of taxes under protest. See Ex parte James D. Lewin, 11 S. C. R. 484.

Restraining Collection, —Where a bill to restrain proceedings for collecting the township assessments of the year, on the ground of objections of form, and because of an overcharged assessment of small amount, was filed after it was too late to apply at law to quash the by-law complained of, the court dismissed the bill with costs. Grier v. 8t. Vincent, 13 Gr. 512.

Security for Costs,]—The clerk of the division court is not bound under s, 63, s, e. 3, of the Assessment Act, 32 Viet, c, 36 (O.), to receive an appeal unless the sum of $2 be deposited with him as security for costs; but if so disnosed he may give credit for the amount: and if he does so, the appeal is properly entered, and ought to be heard by the county Judge. A complainant to the court of revision is bound to appear and support his appeal; but if he fail to do so, the court may hear the complaint ex parte, and if they affirm the assessment the complainant may appeal to the Judge. In re Pain v. Town of Brantford, 9 C. L. J. 260.

Time for Appeal to County Judge.] —A county Judge in appointing a day subsequent to the first of August, for hearing an appeal from a court of revision, is not, under R. S. O. 1877 c. 180, s. 59, s.-s. 7, exceeding his jurisdiction, notwithstanding the terms of that sub-section. In re Ronald and Village of Brussels, 9 P. R. 232.

Time for Appeal to County Judge.]

—R. S. O. 1877 c. 180, s. 59, regulating appeals to the county Judge from the court of revision as to the assessment of property, provides (s.-s. 2) that the person appealing simil serve upon the clerk of the municipality within five days after the date limited by the Act for closing the court of revision a written notice of his intention to appeal: (8.-s. 3) that the Judge shall notify the clerk of the day he appoints for hearing appeals and (8.-s. 4) that the clerk shall thereupon give notice to all the parties appealed against. Section 56, s.-s. 19, provides that all the duties of the court of revision shall be completed, and the rolls finally revised, before the 1st day of July in each year. The court of revision heard the appeals in question on the 10th June, 1886, and rendered judgment on the following day. Notices of appeal dated the 15th June, 1886, were served upon the clerk on the 19th; the court of revision sat until the 5th July; on the 15th July the clerk notified the Judge that notice had been given of these appeals, and on the 26th July the Judge notified the clerk of the day that he had appointed for hearing the appeals, and the clerk notified the parties. Held, that the limitation in s. 59, s.-s. 2, should be construed to mean that notice of appeal should not be served after the expiration of five days from the closing of the court of revision; and also that the service in this case was within the five days, as the notices were in the hands of the clerk during the five days, and were acted upon by him; and further, that service prior to the expiry of the five days was good service. Scott v. Town of Listoucel, 12 P. R. 77.

Time for Appeal to Court of Revision. —Where an assessment roll was returned to the county clerk's office on the 1st May, but the certificate was neither signed nor sworn to till 4th May, and additions were made to the roll between the 1st and 4th May, and the notice to the parties assessed (signed) informed them that they must give notice of appeal within fourteen days from the latter date:—Held, that a notice of appeal given on 18th May was in time, because the roll was not "delivered to the clerk completed and added up with the certificates and affidiavits attached" before 4th May; and that the county Judge should not therefore have dismissed an appeal to him on the zound that the notice was not served within fourteen days from 1st May, as well as because that was not the ground taken before the court of revision:—Held, also, had the court of revision proceeded on that ground their decision would have been binding on the county Judge. A mandamus was therefore directed to the county Judge to try the appeal. In re Allan, 10 O. R. 110.

peat. In re Atlan, 10 O. R. 110. Semble, the county council having extended the time for the return of the roll to the 15th June, although that date was disregarded by all parties to this application, the amplicant had of right the power to appeal within fourteen days from such date. Ib.

Time for Notice of Appeal.]—The three days allowed for service of notice of appeal from assessment, are reckoned from the time of the decision of each case by the court of revision, and not from the day the court closes. In re Donney, S. C. J. J. 19.

Who may Appeal.]—The appeal from the court of revision to the county Judge in a case where such court allows an appeal by the party assessed, against an assessment, cannot be made by the assessor as such, nor as a ratepayer, but must be by the corporation itself. Re British Mortgage Loan Co. of Ontario, 29 O. R. 641.

II. ASSESSMENT.

Appointment of Assessors,]—The council by resolution appointed an assessor, who was sworn into office and made an assessment. The appointment was made by a vote of three against two. The election of one of the three was afterwards set aside, and by a subsequent vote the resolution was rescinded, and a by-law passed appointing another assessor. Both made assessments, and much confusion arose. Under these circumstances the court granted a quo warranto to determine the validity of the last appointment. In re McPherson and Becman, 17 U. C. R. 99.

Assessor's Neglect to Return Roll.]—The omission of assessors in a city to make and complete the roll until after the 1st May, does not avoid the assessment; and the person assessed, having appealed to the court of revision and county Judge, paid part of his taxes, and refused to pay the rest on a ground inconsistent with this objection, was held precluded from taking it. Nickle v. Douglas, 35 U. C. R. 126.

Average Value.]—Upon replevin to recover goods seized for taxes, the plaintiffs contended that their land was not assessed at the average value of land in the vicinity; that no proper notice was given of the assessment; and that the roll was not completed within the proper time. The defendant produced a letter written by the plaintiffs' solicitor, as follows; "In reply to yours of the 15th instant, addressed to the managing director of this company I am directed to inform you that the only real property owned by the company in the township of Maidstone, consists of the roadway of 106 acres, and 17 acres of extra or waste land. I have not the rate at which this land has been hitherto assessed, but I presume that the average value of I and in the locality cannot exceed £10 per acre." They also proved a notice of assessment delivered 9th July, 1856;—Held, that this letter did not fix £10 as the average value of the land, and that the notice of assessment, under which the plaintiffs' land had been assessed at £10 per acre, while the average value of the land through which the railway went was £10 per acre, while the average value for the revision of taxes had expired, was too late. The plaintiffs, therefore, were held entitled to succeed. Great Westera R. W. Co. V. Fernan, S. C. P. 221

Bank—Capital—Realty and Personalty.]
By s 25 of the St. John City Assessment Act of 1882, it is provided that "all rates and taxes levied and imposed upon the city of St.
John shall be raised by an equal rate upon the value of the real estate situate in the city and parts of the city to be taxed, and upon the personal estate of the inhabitants, and of persons deemed and declared to be inhabitants or residents of the said city.

* * * and upon the capital stock, income, or other thing of joint stock companies, corporations, or persons associated in business." And, after providing for the levying of a poll tax, such section goes on to say that or a port day, such section goes on to say that "the whole residue to be raised shall be levied upon the whole ratable property, real and personal, and ratable income, and joint stock, according to the true and real value amount of the same, as nearly as be ascertained, provided that joint stock shall not be rated above the par value there-Section 28 of the same Act provides that "all joint stock companies and corpor tions shall be assessed under this Act in like manner as individuals, and for the purposes of such assessment the president or any agent or manager of such joint stock com-pany or corporation, shall be deemed and taken to be the owner of the real and personal estate, capital stock, and assets of such company or corporation, and shall be dealt with and may be proceeded against according-ly." The president of the Bank of New Brunswick was assessed under the provisions of the above Act, on real and personal property of the bank, valued in the aggregate at $1,100,000. The capital stock of the bank at $1,190,000. The capital stock of the bank at the time of such assessment was only $1,000,000. and he offered to pay the taxes on that amount, which was refused. It was not disputed that the bank was possessed of real and personal property of the assessed value:—Held, that the real and personal property of the bank are part of its capital stock. and that the assessment could not exceed the par value of such stock, namely, $1,000,000, Ex p. James D. Lewin, 11 S. C. R. 484.

Bank Stock.]—Under 32 Vict. c, 36 (O.), bank stock is personal property liable to assessment. In re-Appeal from Court of Revision of City of Kingston, 9 C. L. J. 259.

Bank Stock,]—But in another case it was held not to be liable to assessment. In re Appeal from Court of Revision of Town of Cobourg, 9 C. L. J. 294.

Bank Stock, |—Bank stock held by a person as trustee is not assessable as against the trustee. In re Appeal from Court of Revision of Kingston, 9 C. L. J. 259.

Bank Stock—Void Assessment.]—Bank stock owned by a resident of Kingston in the Merchants' Bank, which had its chief place of business in Montreal, is personal property owned out of the Province, and therefore exempt from taxation; and the assessment of such stock being wholly unauthorized and void, the owner is not bound to appeal against it to the court of revision, and is not estopped by having so appealed. Nickle v. Douglas, 35 U. C. R. 126, 37 U. C. R. 51.

Business Carried on in Two Municipalities, 1—Section 15 of the Ontario Assessment Act R. S. O. 1887 c. 193, provides that "where any business is carried on by a person in a municipality in which he does not reside, or in two or more municipality in; the personal property belonging to such persons shall be assessed in the municipality in which such personal property belonging to such persons shall be assessed in the municipality in which such personal property is situated." W., residing and doing business in Brantford, had certain merchandize in London stored in a public warehouse used by other persons as well as W. He kept no clerk or agent in charge of such merchandize, but when sales were made a delivery order was given, upon which the warehouse keeper acted. Once a week a commercial traveller for W., residing in London, attended there to take orders for goods, including the kind so stored.

but the sales of stock in the warehouse were not confined to transactions entered into at London:—Held, affirming the deciston in 19 A. R. 675, that W. did not carry on business in London within the meaning of the section, and that his merchandize in the warehouse was not liable to be assessed at London, City of London v. Watt, 22 S. C. R. 300.

Change of Domicile.]—By the St. John City Assessment Act (59 Vict. c. 61), s. 2, "for the purposes of assessment, any person having his home or domicile, or carrying on business, or having any office or place of business, or any occupation, employment, or business, or any occupation, employment, a profession, within the city of St. John, shall be deemed * * an inhabitant and resident of the said city. J. carried on busi-ness in St. John as a brewer up to 1882, when he sold the brewery to three of his sons, and conveyed his house and furniture to his adult children in trust for them all. He then went to New York, where he carried on the business of buying and selling stocks and securities, having offices for such business and living at a hotel, paying for a room in the latter only when occupied. During the next four years he spent about four months in each at St. John, visiting his children and taking recreation. He had no business intaking recreation. He had no business in-terests there but attended meetings of the directors of the Bank of New Brunswick dur-ing his yearly visits. He was never per-sonally taxed in New York, and took no part in municipal matters there. Being assessed in 1897 on personal property in St. John, he appealed against the assessment unsuccessfully, and then applied for a writ of certiorari with a view to having it quashed:-Held, that as there had been a long continued actual residence by J. in New York, and as on his appeal against the assessment he had avowed his bona fide intention of making it his home permanently, or at least for an indefinite time, and his determination not to return to St. John to reside, he had acquired a new home or domicile, and that in St. John had been abandoned within the meaning of the Act. Jones v. City of St. John, 30 S. C. R. 122.

Character of Person Assessed.]—Section 16 of c. 100, C. S. New Brunswick, relating to rates and taxes, provides that "real estate where the assessors cannot obtain the names of any of the owners shall be rated in the name of the occupier or person having ostensible control, but under such description as to persons and property * as shall be sufficient to indicate the property assessed and the character in which the person is assessed." T. G., owner of real estate in Westmoreland county, N. B., died, leaving a widow who administered his estate and resided on the property. The property was assessed for several years in the name of the estate of T. G., and in 1878 it was assessed in the name of "Widow G."—Held, that the last named assessment was illegal as not comprising such description of persons and property as would be sufficient to indicate the property assessed and the character in which the person was assessed. Flanagan v. Elliott, 12 S. C. R. 435.

City and County.]—Held, that the effect of 29 & 30 Viet. c. 53 was to abolish the distinction between the mode of assessment in cities and counties both for the purposes of the Jurors' Act and otherwise. County of Frantense v. City of Kingston 30 U. C. R. 584, 32 U. C. R. 348.

Company—Head Office—Assets in Other Manipulatives 1—The defendant company arried on their business at London and were asset there. They purchased the mortages and other assets of the Brant Loan and Savings Company, a similar institution. After this the latter company cased to do business and the defendants left the mortages and assets which had been transferred to them with an agent in Brantford for officetion, but they had no branch office and did not carry on business there. The plaintiffs assessed them for personal property in Brantford, from which the defendants did not appeal to the court of revision, and the plaintiffs hought an action to recover the amount of the assessment:—Held, that the defendants were assessable in London for the property which the plaintiffs has assumed to tax, and that, as they had no branch office in Brantford and were not carrying on business there, the plaintiffs' assessment of them was illegal and void. City of Brantford v. Ontario Investment Co., 15 A. R. 605.

Description of Land.]—In describing lands for assessment, "the north-east part," even with the addition of the acreage, is an ambiguous description: and quere as to the effect upon the validity of a by-law. Red Jenkins and Township of Enniskillen, 25 O. R. 399.

Description by Plan—Change.]—Under the circumstances stated in the report, the municipal authorities at first assessed some of the lots as lying on Thomas street, sold them for non-payment, and conveyed upon non-relemption by that description. Upon their again becoming liable to sale for streams of taxes, the authorities made a change, designating the lots as being on side road, without any by-law authorizing such change, or anything to shew that it was made otherwise than upon the assessment rolls and other documents in relation to the collection of taxes:—Held, that the owner's such lots was bound to pay the taxes upon them, by whatever designation they were entered on the roll, and it was at his peril if he omitted to pay. Aston v. Innis, 26 Gr. 42.

Executors and Trustees,]—Where executors and devisees in trust of land were assessed as owners:—Held, that they were properly so assessed, and that their own goods might be seized for the taxes. Dennison v. Heary, 17 U. C. R. 276.

Finality of Roll.]—A municipal council has no authority to place names on the assessment roll after it is finally passed by the revising tribunal. Regina ex rel. Clint v. Upham, 7 L. J. 69.

Foreign Company,]—Held, that under s. 36 of 32 Vict. c. 36 (O.), the personal property of an incorporated company is not assessable against the corporation; and, therefore, personal property situate in this Province, and owned by a company incorporated in England under the Imperial Joint Stock Companies Acts of 1862 and 1867, and in the possession of and under the control of an agent of the company residing in this Province, is not liable to assessment under 32

Vict. c. 36 (O.) or 37 Vict. c. 19 (O.) Western of Canada Oil Lands and Works Co. v. Township of Enniskillen, 28 C. P. 1.

Foreign Company-Interest on Ontario Investments.]—The plaintiffs were a com-pany incorporated under the Imperial Com-panies Acts of 1862 and 1867, for the pur-pose of lending money on real estate or on mobilise and companies and companies and compublic securities, &c., the registered office of which was in the city of Aberdeen, Scot-land, but having an agency, and the only agency, of the company at Toronto, Ontario. All the income or profits of the company arising from the business in Ontario, after deing from the business in Ontario, after deducting expenses of management, were remitted by the general managers at Toronto to Aberdeen, where all dividends were declared, and paid to the shareholders, who were assessed for income tax under the laws of Great Britain. By 43 Vict. c, 27, s, 1 (O.), the personal property of an incorporated company (other than those mentioned in s, s, 2, namely, banks or companies investing all or the greater part of their means in works re-quiring the investment of the whole or prin-cipal part of their means in real estate, and which are exempt, shall be assessed against the company in the same manner as an unincorporated company, or partnership, which, under s. 30 of R. S. O. 1877 c. 180, is assessable against the firm at the usual place of business, and not against the individual partners; and by s. 3 of 43 Vict. c. 27, all personal property in the Province, the owner of which is not resident therein, shall be assessable like that of residents, whether in the possession or control or in the liands of an possession or trustee or not, and shall be assessable in the municipality in which such property shall happen to be, but by s.-s. 3 this section was not to apply to dividends or other choses in action owned by and standing in the name of a person not residing in the Province. The corporation of the city of To-ronto, under s. 3, assessed the plaintiffs for $100,000 of personal property, being the interest of moneys invested in Ontario, the interest of moneys invested in Ontario, and paid or payable to the agents at Toronto, or at the credit of the company at a bank, or being moneys lying at the credit of the company in a bank for investment:—Held, that s. 3 of 43 Vict. c. 27 (0.) was not ultra vires the Legislature, and that #he descriptions that assessment came within its provisions; this was not one of the companies mentioned ins. was not one of the companies mentioned in s.-s. 2 of s. 1 of the Act, nor were the personal property "dividends or other choses in action" under s.-s. 3 of that section. In re North of Scotland Canadian Mortgage Co., 31 C. P. 552.

Foreign Company—Insurance—Premiums.]—The plaintiff company was a foreign corporation, with its head office in England, but carrying on insurance business in Canada, with an agency office at Kingston, Ontario, and the head office for Canada at Montreal:—Held, that insurance premiums received at Kingston by the agent of the company there, for insurance business transacted through him as such agent, were, under 43 Vict. c. 27 (O.), assessable at Kingston as taxable income or personal property against the company and its said agent, although the agent paid taxes on his own income, which was partly derived from commissions on the premiums received, and the fact that the premiums, having been previously sent by the agent, after collection, to the head office in Montreal, were not in the municipality of Kingston when the assessment was made, did not make any difference. Physics Ins. Co. of London v. City of Kingston, 7 O. R. 313.

Forgery of Assessment Roll.]—An indictment will not lie for forging or altering the assessment roll for a township deposited with the clerk. Regina v. Preston, 21 U. C. R. 86.

Gas Company.]—Held, that the pipes of a gas company laid throughout and under the streets of a city could not be deemed "land," but rather personal property, within the Assessment Act, C. S. U. C. c. 55. In re Gas Company and City of Ottawa, 7 L. J. 104.

Gas Company—Mains and Pipes.]—The mains and pipes of the Toronto Gas Company laid under the public streets are assessable under the Consoidated Assessment Act, 1872, 55 Vict. c. 48 (O.), as appurtenant to the land owned by the company for the purposes of its business:—Semble, that the proper mode of assessment in a city divided into wards would be to value the concern as a whole and then apportion ratably to the wards so much of the value as falls to that part of the concern territorially situate in each locality, Consumers' Gas Co. of Toronto v. City of Toronto, 26 O. R. 722. See next two cases.

Gas Company—Mains and Pipes,]—The mains and pipes of the Consumers' Gas Company of Toronto laid under the public streets are assessable for municipal traxation under the Consolidated Assessment Act, 1892, 55 Vict. c. 48 (O.). Toronto Street R. W. Co. v. Fleming, 37 U. C. R. 116, considered. Judgment below, 26 O. R. 722, affirmed. Consumers' Gas Company of Toronto v. City of Toronto, 23 A. R. 551.

Gas Company—Mains and Pipes.]—Gas pipes which are the property of a private corporation laid under the highways of a city are real estate within the meaning of the Ontario Assessment Act of 1892, and liable to assessment as such, as they do not fall within the exemptions mentioned in the sixth section of that Act. The enactments effected by the first and thirteenth clauses of the company's Act of incorporation (11 Vict. c. 14), operated as a legislative grant to the company of as much of the land of the streets, squares, and public places of the city as might be found necessary to be taken and held for the purposes of the company and for the convenient use of the gas works, and when the openings where pipes may be laid are made at the places designated by the city surveyor, as provided in said charter, and they are placed there, the soil they occupy is land taken and held by the company under the provisions of the said Act of incorporation. The pipes so laid and fixed in the soil of the streets, squares, and public places in a city should be assessed separately in the respective wards of the city in which they may be actually laid, as in the case of real estate. Consumers Gas Co. of Toronto v. City of Toronto, 2.7 8. C. R. 4538.

Income.]—Where the appellant, who was manger of a bank in the incorporated village of St. Thomas, ceased to be such in February, 1890, was then paid $170.83, the balance of his salary, had not during 1890 derived income from any other source, and had not after the commencement of May, 1860, been a resident of the village:—Held, under C. S. U. C. c. 55, that he could not be assessed by the village for an amount greater than $170.83, and as that sum was under $200, the proper amount to enter on the assessment roll under s. 33, would be $100 only. In re Yorncood, 7 L. J. 47.

Income.]—Where the appellant, though in the village of St. Thomas at the time of assessment, was there only temporarily to wind up the business of an agency of the Bank of Montreal at that place, but his real place of residence was London:—Held, that he could not be taxed on his income in St. Thomas. In re Ashworth, 7 L. J. 47.

Income.]—Where a former resident of Vienna had taken a house at Ingersoll, in another municipality, whither the major part of his household effects had been removel, and his servant and most of his family resided when the assessment was taken, and he remained and slept in his former domicile during the night previous to the taking of the assessment, and was found on the following morning in the act of removing the last of his household effects, and taking his final departure, when the assessor came to assess:—Held, that his "residence," for the purpose of assessing his income under C. S. U. C. c. 55. s. 40, was at Ingersoll, his permanent residence, and not at Vienna. Marr v, Village of Vienna, 10 L. J. 275.

Income—Balance of Gain Over Loss.]—
The tax imposed by 31 Vict. c. 36, s. 4 (N. B.), upon "income," is leviable in respect of the balance of gain over loss made in the fiscal year, and where no such balance of gain has been made there is no income or fund which is capable of being assessed. There is nothing in the said section or in the context which should induce a construction of the word "income," when applied to the income of a commercial business for a year, otherwise than its natural and commonly accepted sense as the balance of gain over loss. Lawless v. Sullivan, 6 App. Cas. 373, reversing 3 8. C. R. 117.

Increase of Assessment Without Notice,]—The plaintiffs were served by the assessors of a municipality with a notice prescribed by 32 Vict. c. 36, s. 48 (O.), in which the amount of the value of their personal property, other than income, was put down at 82,500; but in the column of the assessment roll, as finally revised by the court of revision, the amount was put down at 825,000, thereby changing, without giving any further notice to plaintiffs, the total value of real and personal property and taxable income from 820,900 to 843,400;—Held, reversing the decision in 26 C. P. 323, which had reversed that in 25 C. P. 169, that the plaintiffs were not liable for the rate calculated on this last named sum, and that a notice to be given by the assessor in accordance with the Act is essential to the validity of the tax. Nicholls v. Cumming, 1 S. C. R. 395.

Insurance Company—Branch.]—The defendants were a life insurance company with their head office at H., in this Province, and transacted business by agents in K., who received applications for insurances which these forwarded to the head office, from which all politicise issued ready for delivery, the premiums on the same also being collected by the agents in K. In an action by the corporation of the city of K. to recover taxes assessed against the detendants on income, it was contended that the detendants' only place of business was in H., and that their business was of such a nature that they could not be assessed at K. and that they had elected under R. S. O. 1887 c. 193, s. 35, s. s. 2, to be assessed at H. on their whole income: —Held, reversing the decision in B. O. R. IS, that the agency at K. was not a branch business within the meaning of s. 35 above referred to, and that the premiums received year by year at K. were not assessable there. The ultimate profit represents the year's taxable income under the statute, but this could only be ascertained by placing the sum total of gains and losses against each other, together with the result of the volume of business done at the head office, and no distinct integral part of this income was referable to the K. agency, City of Kingston v. Canada Life Assurance Co., 19 O. R. 453.

Con. 19 O. K. 450. Semble, that notwithstanding s.-s. 10 of s. 2, "personal property" in ss. 35 and 36 of R. S. O. 1887 c. 193 is intended to cover only something readily and specifically ascertainable, and "income," an intangible and invisible entity, is not to be read into these provisions of the Act. Lawless v. Sullivan, 6 App. Cas. 373, specially referred to. 1b.

Insurance Company—Net Profits—Reserve Fund.]—The amount deposited by an insurance company with the Dominion Government for protection of policy-holders may properly be deducted from the gross income of the company in ascertaining the net profits liable to taxation under the assessment law of the city of St. John, 52 Vict. c. 27, s. 125 (N.B.)—The Act requires the agent or manager of such company to furnish the assessors each year with a statement under oath, in a prescribed form, shewing the gross income for the year preceding and the amount of certain specified deductions, the difference to be the net income, and if such statement is not furnished, the assessors may assess according to their best judgment. W. furnished a statement in which, in place of the deductions of one class specified, he inserted amount equal to seventy-five per cent. of the premiums received, as deposited with the Dominion Government for security to policyholders." The assessors disregarded this statement, and assessed the company in an amount fixed by themselves, and on application for certiorari to quash such an assessment, it was shewn by affidavit that the deposit of the company was equal to about seventy-five per cent. of the premiums:— Held, that the agent was justified in depart-ing from the form prescribed to shew the true state of the company's business: that the deposit was properly deducted; and that the assessors had no right to disregard the statement and arbitrarily assess the company as they saw fit. Peters v. City of St. John, 21 S. C. R. 674.

Insurance Company—Reserve Fund.]—Where the county court Judge had decided, on appeal from the court of revision, that the plaintiffs were liable under s. 34, and s. 2, ses. 10, of the Consolidated Assessment Act, 55 Vict. c. 48 (O.), to be assessed upon the interest arising upon investments of their reserve fund, although such interest was always added to the reserve fund and reinvested as part of it, and the plaintiffs now brought this action to have the assessment declared liberal:—Held, that, although the plaintiffs were bound by law to keep up the reserve fund upon a certain scale, the amount varying according to the values of the lives in-sured by them, as fixed by actuaries' tables, yet they were not bound to apply the income arising from the investments of the fund in keeping the fund at its proper level, but night make the necessary increase with any money whatever, and the Judge of the county court had full jurisdiction, and the matter was, therefore, res judicata. Confederation Life Association v. City of Toronto, 24 O. R. 643, 22 A. R. 169.

Insurance Company — Reserve Fund—Immeme — Divisible Profits.] — The net interest and dividends received by the Canada Life Assurance Company from investments of their reserve fund form part of their taxable income, though to the extent of ninety per cent. thereof divisible, pursuant to the terms of the company's special Act, as profits among participating policy holders and not subject to the control or disposition of the company. In re Canada Life Assurance Co. and City of Hamilton, 25 A. R. 312.

Lessee Not in Occupation.] — Semble, that a lessee of a house in a city cannot be assessed as occupier when he no longer occupies it, although his term continues. Mc-Carrall v. Watkins, 19 U. C. R. 248.

Lessees of Gravel Road.]—The gravel road in the county of Eigin, forming part of the London and Port Stanley Road, was granted by the Crown to the corporation of the county, and by them leased for a term of years to the appellants, who were not residents of the village of St. Thomas:—Held, under C. S. U. C. c. 55, that the interest of the appellants in the road, being a chattel interest, could only be assessed as personal property. 2. That, as the appellants did not reside in the village, they could not be assessed by the municipal council of that village in respect to their interest in the road. In re Appeal from Court of Revision of St. Thomas, 7 L. J. 46.

Lot Partly Occupied.]—In a suit to impeach a sale of land for taxes, it appeared that about twenty or thirty acres of the lot were cleared and fenced, and a barn was erected thereon, into which hay made on these twenty acres was stored in winter, by a person occupying the adjoining lot, under the authority of the proprietor; no one resided on the twenty acres; the owner was resided on the twenty acres; the owner was resident out of the country, and had not given notice to the assessor of the township to have his name inserted on the roll of the township:—Semble, that the lot should have been assessed as occupied. Bank of Toronto v. Fanning, 17 Gr. 514, 18 Gr. 391.

Lots on Irregularly Registered Plan.,—The plan of a survey of a portion of a town plot was registered in the proper registry office, but without being properly authenticated in the manner required by It. S O. 1877 c. 111, not being duly certified by a surveyor:—Held, notwithstanding their regularity, that the municipality had the right to assess these lots, and levy the taxes assessed by sale in the usual way. Aston v. Innis, 26 Gr. 42.

Names of Owner and Occupant.] — Section 24 of C. S. U. C. c. 55, requiring the names of owner and occupant to be entered, applies to the assessor's roll only, not to the collector's. Coleman v. Kerr, 27 U. C. R. 5.

Non-resident.]—Held, under 16 Viet, c. 182, that a non-resident owner of lands can only be rated on the assessment roll by name at his own request. Municipality of Berlin, V. Grange, 5 C. P. 211, 1 E. & A. 279.

Non-resident. — And that the entry of a party on the assessment roll as resident, when in fact he was a non-resident, did not render his assessment nugatory. De Blaquiere y, Becker, S. C. P. 167.

Non-resident.] — The term "lands of non-resident" means unoccupied land not assessed against the owner or occupant. Mace v. Ruttan, 7 L. J. 299.

Partnership.]—Held, under C. S. U. C. c. 55, that the personal property of a partnership must be assessed against it at its usual place of business. In re Hatt, 7 L. J. 16?

Place of Business.]—Held, that C. S. U. C. c. 55 requires every person to be assessed for personal property at his place of business or place of residence. Re Carturight and City of Kingston, 6 L. J. 189.

Presumption of Correctness.]—The east half had been assessed separately, and it was admitted that the whole of the lot had been granted together:—Held, under 13 & 14 Vict. c. 67, that it should be presumed the tax on the west half had been paid, and that it had therefore been properly assessed separately. McDonell v. McDoneld, 24 U. C. R. 74.

Quebec License Laws.]—By virtue of the first clause of a by-law passed under 55 & 56 Vict. c. 51 (Q.), an Act consolidating the charter of the city of Sherbrooke, the appellant was taxed five cents on the dollar on the annual value of the premises in which he carried on his occupation as a dealer in spirituous luquors, and in addition thereto, under cl. 3 of the same by-law, was taxed a special tax of $200 also for the same occupation. Section 55 of the Act 55 & 56 Vict. c. 51 (Q.) enumerates in Section 55 of the Act 55 & 56 Vict. c. 51 (Q.) enumerates in the same occupations, which was authorized to be imposed, s.-s. (f) in authorizing the imposition of a business tax on all trades, occupations, &c., based on the annual value of the premises, and s.-s. (g) providing for a tax on persons, among others, of the occupation of the petitioner. At the end of s.-s. (g) is the following: the wide of section 52 (R. S. P. Q.) limits the powers of taxation for any numicipal council of a city to $200 upon holders of licenses — Held, that the power granted by 55 & 56 Vict. c. 51 (Q.) to impose the several taxes was independent and comulative, and as the special tax did not exceed the sum of $200, the by-law was intra vires, the proviso at the end of s.-s. (g) not applying to the whole section. Webster v. City of Sherbrooke, 24 S. C. R. 268.

Railway — Average Value of Land in Locality—Fences.] — Held, that the average value per aere of the lots or farms through which the railway passes must be taken as the value per aere of the rondway occupied by the company. Also, that the value of the buildings on the farms should not be excluded from such average value. Also, that the railway fences are part of the superstructure, and as such exempt from assessment. Re Midland Railway and Townships of Uxbridge and Thorah, 19 C. L. J. 339.

Railway—Right of Way.]—The plaintiffs had a fleense to use and were using a right of way through the Queen Victoria Niagara Falls Park for their electric railway, under an agreement confirmed by 55 Viet. c. 96 (O.):—Held, that there was an actual, visible, continuous, and exclusive possession of the roadway for the profitable use and operation of the rialway for a term, and that the company was liable to taxation for the roadbed as an occupant is assessed in respect of property; but the property itself, being in the Crown or held by the public, was exempt, Niagara Falls Park and River R. W. Co. v. Town of Niagara, 31 O. R. 29.

Railway - Taxation - Bu-laws - Construction of Statute-Voluntary Payment-Action en Répétition.]—The statute 29 Vict. the Acts and Ordinances incorporating the city of Quebec, by s.-s. 4 of s. 21, authorizes the making of by-laws to impose taxes on perexercising certain callings, " and generally on all trades, manufactories, occupations. business, arts, professions or means of profit, livelihood or gain, whether here-inbefore enumerated or not, which now or may hereafter be carried on, exercised or in operation in the city; and all persons by whom the same are or may be carried on, exercised or put in operation therein, either on their own account or as agents for others: and on the premises wherein or whereon the same are or may be carried on, exercised or put in operation:"—Held, that the general words of the statute quoted are sufficiently comprehensive to authorize the imposition a business tax upon railway companies; and, further, that the power thus conferred might be validly exercised by the passing of a by-law to impose the tax, in the same genterms as those expressed in the statute: -Held, that where taxes have been paid to municipal corporation voluntarily and with knowledge of the state of the law and the circumstances under which the tax was imposed, no action can lie to recover the money so paid from the municipality. Judgment below (Q. R. 8 Q. B. 246) affirmed. Cana-dian Pacific R. W. Co. v. City of Quebec, Grand Trunk R. W. Co. v. City of Quebec, 30 S. C. R. 73.

Railway.]—Under 16 Vict. c. 182, s. 21, only the land occupied by a railway is subject to assessment, not the superstructure. Great Western R. W. Co, v. Rouse, 15 U. C. R. 168.

Railway.]—The omission of the assessor to distinguish, in his notice to a railway company, between the value of the land occupied by the road and their other real prop-erts, as required by the Act, does not avoid the assessment. Such an omission may be corrected on appeal by the court of revision and county court Judge. Seragg v. City of London, 20 U. C. R. 263, dissenting from Great Western R. W. Co. v. Rogers, 16 U. C. R. 500, approved of and followed on this point. Great Western R. W. Co. v. Rogers, 20 U. C. R. 245.

Railway, |- By 52 Vict. c. 27, s. 125 (N. B.), the agent or manager of any joint stock company or corporation established out company or corporation established out of the limits of the Province, who has an office in the city of St. John for such company or corporation, may be assessed upon the gross income received for his principals, with certain specified deductions therefrom, and to enable the assessors to rate such company or corporation the agent or manager is required, on 1st May of each year, to furnish them with a statement under oath, in a form prescribed by the Act, shewing such gross income for the year preceding, and the details of the deductions; in the event of neglect to furnish said statement the assessors may rate the agent or manager according to their best judgment, and there shall be no appeal from such rate. The general superintendent of the Atlantic division of the Canadian Pacific Railway had an office for the company in St. John, and was furnished by the assessors with a printed form to be filled in of the statement required by the Act: the form required him to state the gross and total income received for his company during the preceding year, as to which he stated that no such income had been re-ceived, and he erased the clause "this amount has not been reduced or offset by any losses. the other items were not filled in. was handed to the assessors as the statement required, and they treated it as neglect to furnish any statement, and rated the superininsi any statement, and rated the superin-tendent on a large amount as income received. The Supreme Court of New Brunswick re-fused to quash the assessment on certiorari: —Held that it was sufficiently shewn that the company had no income from its business in St. John liable to assessment; that the superintendent was justified in departing from the prescribed form in order to shew the true state of the company's business; and that the assessors had no authority to disregard the statement furnished and arbitrarily assess the superintendent in any sum they chose without making inquiry into the business of the company as the statute authorizes:—Held, further, that the provision that there shall be no appeal from an assessment where no statement is furnished only applies to an appeal against overvaluation under (N. B. c. 100, s. 60, and not to an appeal against the right to assess at all:—Held, also, that s. 125 of 52 Vict, c. 27 (N.B.) does not apply to railway companies. Times, City of St. John, 21 S. C. R. 691.

Residence Within Municipality.]—If the conters of personal property, within a particular municipality, be not themselves resident within that municipality, and have not a place of business within it, they cannot be properly assessed in respect thereof. Recontempted and City of Kingston, 6 L. J.

Roll Not Completed in Time.]—The omission of assessors to return their roll by the 1st May is not an indictable offence p.-0.

under s. 175 of the Assessment Act, 32 Vict. c. 36 (O.), and if it were, the two assessors would not be jointly liable. Regina v. Snider, 23 C. P. 330.

School Rates.]—An assessment for school purposes cannot be levied by an unequal rate in different wards in a city. In re Scott v. City of Ottawa, 13 U. C. R. 346.

School Rates—Inhabitants of School Section.]—Where several devisees and executors were rated to a school rate in respect of the property of their testator, as "John A, and brothers," which entry appeared to have been made at the instance of some of the plaintiffs, but two of them only had slept on the premises occasionally, although such was not their usual place of residence, and they had received the usual notice of assessment in that form without appealing, and the same two had paid taxes on an assessment on the township roll in their individual names:—Held, 1. That the facts afforded sufficient evidence to shew that the plaintiffs were "inhabitants of the school section," for the purposes of the rate, 2. That the parties were sufficiently named on the roll to render the rate lawful. Appelgarth v. Graham, 7 C. P. 171.

Separate Lots.]—It is the duty of the assessors to assess village lots, the property of non-residents, separately, placing opposite to each the value and amount of assessment. Black v. Harrington, 12 Gr. 175.

Steamboat.]—Held, under C. S. U. C. c. 55, that a steamboat was personal property, and properly assessable at one of the two places between which in summer it plied, and at which in winter it was laid up. In re Hatt, 7 L. J. 103.

Street Railway.]—Held (reversing the decision in 35 U. C. R. 264), that the Toronto Street Railway Company were not assessable for those portions of the streets occupied by them for the purposes of their railway, as being land, within the meaning of the Assessment Act, 32 Viet. c. 36 (O. 1 Toronto Street R. W. Co, v. Fleming, 37 U. C. R. 116.

Street Railway.]—A street railway company in Toronto was to be assessed in respect of repairs to the roadway traversed by the railway as for lecal improvements, which, by the Municipal Act, constitute a lien upon the property assessed, but not a personal liability upon owners or occupiers after they have ceased to be such:—Held, that after the termination of its franchise the company was not liable for these rates. City of Toronto v. Toronto Street R. W. Co., 23 S. C. R. 198.

Street Railway.]—By a by-law of the city of Montreal a tax of $2.50 was imposed upon each working horse in the city. By s. 10 of the appellants' charter it was stipulated that each ear employed by the company should be licensed and numbered, &c., for which the company should pay "over and above all other taxes, the sum of $20 for each two-horse car," and $10 for each one-horse for the tax of $2.50 on each and every one of their horses. Montreal Street R. W. Co. v. City of Montreal, 23 S. C. R. 250.

Street Railway. — The rails, poles, and wise of the Toronto Railway Company, used by them in operating their electric railway, and haid and erected in and upon the public highways of the city of Toronto, are subject to assessment under the Consolidated Assessment Stevenson Street R. W. Co. v. Fleming, 37 U. C. B. 116, has been overruded by Consumers' Gas Co. v. Toronto, 27 S. C. R. 453, In re Toronto R. W. Co. Assessment, 25 A. R. 135.

Street Railway—Rails, Poles, and Wires—Bridges—Road-bed—Adding Items on Appeal.]—Although a street railway is operated as a continuous system through all the wards of a city, the portions of the rails, poles, and wires, in each ward, must be assessed in that ward, and in making the assessment the rails, poles, and wires must be treated as material situate in the ward, and not as necessary portions of a going concern operated in several wards. Bridges built and used by a street railway as part of their system are subject to assessment, but must be assessed in the same way as the rails, poles, and wires, Consumers' Gas Co. v. Toronto, 27 S. C. R. 453, In re Bell Telephone Company Assess-ment, 25 A. R. 351, and In re Toronto Rail-way Company Assessment, 25 A. R. 135, applied. Upon an appeal to a board of county Judges from a court of revision coming on for hearing, the board, at the request of the city, and without any previous notice or the city, and winout any previous notice or assessment or application to the court of revision, added to the items of assessable property of a railway company, a certain amount as the value of the portion of the streets of the city "occupied" by the company:—Held, that the board of county Judges had no jurisdiction to make this addition, the amendment made by s. 5 of 62 Vict. c. 27 (O.) not then being in force. In re London 1 27 A. R. 83. Street Railway Co. Assessment, Sub-dividing Lot.]—The patent granted the lot by north and south halves. The patentee in 1853 conveyed the lot as a whole, so the lot as a whole, and the lot as a constant of 33 acres in 1858. In 1864, the sale of 33 acres in 1858. In 1864, the lot as a sessessed separately:—Held, not objectionable. For the next three years it was assessed as parately:—Held, not objectionable. For the next three years it was assessed in two parcels of 165 acres and 55 acres, and for the succeeding two years the north half, 100 acres, and the west part south half, 65 acres, were assessed, with a valuation of $330 on the whole:—Held, right. Edinburgh Life Assurance Co. v. Ferguson, 32 U. C. R. 253.

Sub-dividing Lot.]—For several years a parcel of land, containing 100 acres, was returned to the treasurer of the county as non-resident land. In 1860 fifty acres only of the 100 were returned to the treasurer as non-resident:—Held, sufficient to authorize the treasurer in sub-dividing the 100 acres for assessment purposes. Brooks v, Campbell 12 Gr. 520.

Sub-division of Taxes.]—A lot, previsually assessed as to the whole, was, on claim made to half of it, assessed as to this half, and the taxes of previous years apportioned between both halves:—Held, that there was no objection to this. Stewart v. Taggart, 22 C. P. 284. Suspension Bridge.] — The suspension bridge across the Niagara Falls at Clifton, with the stone towers, &c. supporting it:— Held, land and real property, within the Assessment Act of 1806, s. 3. Niagara Falls Suspension Bridge Co. v. Gardner, 29 U. C. R. 194.

Telephone Company—Poles, Wires, Conduits, and Cables.]—In assessing for purposes of taxation the poles, wires, conduits, and cables of a telephone company, the cost of construction, or the value as part of a going concern, is not the test; they must be valued, in the assessment division in which they happen to be, just as materials which, if sold or taken in payment of a just debt from a solvent debtor, would have to be removed and taken away by the purchaser or creditor. In re Bell Telephone Co. and City of Hamilton, 25 A. R. 351.

Time for Making Assessment—" May adopt."]—Ry s. 52 of the Assessment Act, R. 8. 0. 1887 c. 193, where the assessment in cities, towns, &c., is made by virtue of a by-law passed under that section, in the latter part of the year, such assessment may be adopted by the council of the following year:—Held, that 'may,' as used here, is permissive only, and that the council of the following year are given the option of having a new assessment. Overwhelmingly strong reasons of convenience in favour of having one assessment instead of two might justify the court in giving to 'may' the force of "must." Re Dueper and Town of Port Arthur, 21 O. R. 175.

Time for Making Assessment—Special Provisions for Taking Assessment in Autumn.]—The "special provisions" in reference to municipal assessment contained in s. 52 of the Consolidated Assessment Act, 1892, 55 Vict. c. 48 (O.), do not permit such assessment to be levied for the current year, but the assessment so taken at the end of the year may be adopted by the council of the following year as the assessment on which the rate of taxation for such following year may be levied. Dyer v. Town of Trenton, 24 O. R. 303.

Trustees—Non-resident Beneficiaries.]—
Trustees are liable to be assessed on all the income derived from the property of a trust fund coming into their hands within the Province, as though they were the actual owners thereof. The fact of the beneficiaries residing without the Province makes no difference. Re Appeal of Trustees of Grayson Smith, 35 C. L. J. 728.

Trusts—Minister's House.]—Held, that the assessors are not bound to inquire into trusts upon which lands are held, but to view each man's premises and find out whether or not he is assessable or comes under any of the exemptions allowed: and that the assessor upon seeing a dwelling house occupied as such by a minister of religion for his private residence, is bound to assess the occupant for it, no matter upon what trust the freehold in the land upon which the house stands is held. Franchon v. Toen of 8t Thomas, 7 L. J. 245.

Want of Notice.]—Invalidity of assessment for want of notice. See Bain v. City of Montreal, 8 S. C. R. 252.

Water Rates — Discrimination.]—Under the authority given to municipal corporations to fix the rate or rent to be paid by each aware or occupant of a building. &c., supplied by the corporation with water, the rates imposed must be uniform. A by-law of the city of Toronto excepting government instinutons from the benefit of a discount on rates paid within a certain time is invalid as regards such exception. Decisions below, 20 O. R. 19 and 18 A. R. 622 reversed. Attamagificaccal of Canada v. City of Toronto, 23 S. C. R. 514.

Wild Lands,]—Under 59 Geo. III. c. 7, it was the duty of the quarter sessions to assess the amount of taxes to be paid upon lands, not exceeding the sum of one penny in the pound of the statutable value; and where the treasurer of his own motion charged every wild for one penny in the pound of such value, the sale of land for such taxes was held invalid. Quarre, as to the manner in which wild lands of non-residents, not included in the assessment rolls, were to be rated under 50 Geo. III. c. 7; and semble, such lands were not assessable at all. Cotter v. Sutherland, 18 C. P. 357.

Windsor Water-works.] — The defendants were the owners of vacant land in the city of Windsor, abutting on streets in which mains and hydrauts of the plaintiffs had been placed. The defendants had a water-works system of their own, and did not use that of the plaintiffs, though they could have done so lad they wished. The commissioners imposed a water rate "for water supplied, or ready to be supplied," upon all lands in the city based upon their assessed value irrespective of the user or non-user of water:—Held, that this rate was, under 37 Vict. c. 79, ss. 11, 12 (O.), validly imposed. City of Windsor v. Canada Southern R. W. Co., 20 A. R. 388.

III. COLLECTION OF TAXES.

1. In General.

Application of Payments to Arreava.]—bledendant G. was collector of rates in the boan of B. for 1856-1858. One M. was charged on the collector's roll for 1857 with $27 taxes for 1855 remaining unpaid, together with $24 taxes for 1855 remaining unpaid, together with $24 taxes for 1855 remaining unpaid, together with $24 taxes for 1855, remaining unpaid, together with $25 taxes for 1857, the roll for 1855 was not shown to have been returned, by resolution, authorized G. to continue the collection of taxes on the roll for 1857, after the usual time:—Held, that G. had the right to appropriate the moneys collected by the sale of M.'s goods in January, 1858, to the laxes charged against him for 1855. McBride v. Gardham, 8 C. P. 206.

Delivery of Roll. — Section 120 of the Assessment Act. R. S. O. 1887 c. 193, provides that the clerk shall deliver the roll to the collector on or before the 1st October, or such other day as may be prescribed by hy-law of the local municipality; but no by-law was passed, and the roll for 1886 was not delivered by the clerk to the defendant until about the 1st January, 1887;—Held, that the provisions of s. 129 are directory, and not imperative; and the omission to deliver the roll within the prescribed time had not the effect of preventing the collector from proceeding to collect the taxes mentioned in the roll as soon as it was delivered to him, or of rendering such proceedings invalid. Lewis v. Brady, 17 O. R. 377.

Demand on One of Several Persons Liable, |--Where several devisees and executors were rated to a school rate in respect or their testator as "John A., and bribers," their testator as "John A., and bribers, their testator as "John A., and bribers, and their testator as "John A., and bribers, and their testator as "John A., and bribers, and they had received the usual notice of assessment in that form without appealing:—Held, that a demand made by the collector on "John A." was sufficient to bind the others, Applegarth v. Graham, 7 C. P. 171.

Extending Time for Payment,]—Section 364 of the Municipal Act, R. S. O. 1887 c. 184, relates to the period of the fiscal year for which the taxes are imposed and levied, and not to the extension of the time for payment of the yearly taxes which is done by by-law passed under the authority of s. 55 of the Assement Act, R. S. O. 1887 c. 183. Chamberlain v. Turner, 31 C. P. 460, and Carson v. Veitch, 9 O. R. 706, considered. Goldie v. Johns, 16 A. R. 129.

Future Owners and Occupants,]—The "future owners and occupants," mentioned in s. 24 of the Assessment Act, C. S. U. C. c. 55, are persons who become owners or occupants by purchase or otherwise between the making of the assessment and the return of the collector's roll. Smith v. Shaw, 8 L. J. 297.

Liquidation of Company—Taxes and Water Rates—Right to Prove.]—The right to prove a claim for taxes against an incor-porated company in liquidation depends upon the right to maintain an action therefor, which right of action only exists when the taxes cannot be recovered in any special manner provided for by the Assessment Act. as, for example, by distress, or sale of the land. Where, therefore, a claim was made for arrears of taxes against a company in liquidation, and it was shewn that before the date of the winding-up order the taxes might have been, but were not, recovered by distress, the claim was disallowed. A board of water commissioners, by s. 11 of 35 Vict. c. 80 (O.), were empowered to fix the water rates payable by the owner or occupant of any house or land which were to be a charge thereon; and by s. 13 to make and enforce all necessary by laws for the collection thereof, and for fixing the time or times and the places for payment, which, on default, was to be enforced by shutting off the water, suit at law, or distress and sale of the occupant's goods.
The rights and powers of the water commissioners, including the right to pass the necessary by-laws, were transferred to the municipal corporation of a city by 42 Vict. c. 78, and by s. 7, uncollected water rates were and by s. 7, uncollected water rates were made a lien on the premises and collectable by sale thereof. A by-law was duly passed by the corporation fixing the rates to be paid, and the company were from year to year duly assessed therefor:—Held, that a corporate liability was imposed on the company to pay such rates and a claim therefor constituted, on which the corporation could prove as or-dinary creditors. In re Ottawa Porcelain and Carbon Company, Limited, 31 O. R. 679.

Demand—Instalments—Leaving Bill.]—On the 2nd April, 1880, a by-law was passed by the corporation of the city of Toronto imposing a rate for that year, and on the same day another by-law was passed providing for the time and mode of payment, declaring that all taxes over $5 should be due on 4th June, and might be paid by three instalments, and that on prompt payment of the first instalment on the said 4th June, the time would be extended for the payment of the other instalments to days named, and so with the second instalment, &c., and on non-payment an additional charge of five per cent, was imposed. It was also expressly provided that nothing therein contained should affect or diminish the collector's right, when he should deem it expedient, after a proper demand made, to proceed at any time before the said several days to collect the said taxes by distress, &c. By the statute R. $0. 1877 c. 180 the right to distrain is given on neglect to pay in fourteen days after demand; and such demands shall be made by calling at least once at the party's residence and demanding the taxes. The statute also provides that all taxes levied for any year, should be considered to be imposed and to be due from the lst January, and end with the 31st December thereof, unless otherwise expressly provided by by-law. The tax collector, about 20th May, left with the plaintiff, whose taxes were over $5.5 a tax bill stating, in accordance with the above by-law, that the taxes were due on 4th June, but that payment could be made by instalments, &c.; and that by want of punctuality, the party would not only forfeit such right, but render his goods liable to distress on neglect to pay fourteen days after demand. After the 4th June, the plaintiff, not having paid any of the taxes, the tax collector, without any further demand, issued his warrant to his bailiff, who distrained the plaintiff's goods on the 12th June, and sold them on the 18th June:—Held, that the taxes were not due until the 4th June, and that no demand could be made until that date, and therefore the leaving a tax bill before that date, even if otherwise a demand, could not be deemed to be such; and quere, whether the mere leaving of such tax bill, even after the 4th June, could be deemed to be a demand. Chamberlain v. Turner, 31 C. P. 460.

Semble, that the rate and the time and mode of payment should more properly have Semble, that the rate and the time and mode of payment should more properly have been contained in the same by-law instead of separate ones as here, but as they were passed on the same day, even if an application to quash the latter by-law on this ground had been made, it would not be deemed invalid. The plaintiff was therefore held entitled to recover the value of the goods sold. Ib.

Demand.]—It was proved that the defendatom the 11th January, 1887, duly demanded the taxes distrained for:—Held, that this demand was sufficient to warrant the distress, and the fact that the defendant several times afterwards demanded the same taxes did not affect the validity of the first demand, which was the only one required. Levis v. Brady, 17 O. R. 377.

Demand.]-In December, 1886, the plaintiffs sold to one H., who was a tenant of the defendant G., of certain premises in the city of Stratford, a safe under the ordinary lien agreement. Under the lease H. was to pay taxes. In October, 1887, after the first instalment of purchase money had been paid, H. surrendered his lease to G., who took over the chattels of H. (including the safe), at a valuation, and assumed payment of the proportion up to that time of the taxes for 1887. G. then leased the premises to the defendant P., and sold to him the chattels (including the safe). The defendant J. was the collector of taxes for the city of Stratford, and the roll 1887 was delivered to him on the 26th October, 1887. It was provided by by-laws of the city that all taxes and assessments should be paid by the 31st December in each year, be paid by the 31st December in each year, and that five per centum should be added for non-payment and collected as if the same had originally been imposed and formed part of such unneild tax or assessment. On the 2nd November, 1887, J. served on P. a tax notice shewing the amount of taxes and requiring payment of these taxes on or be-fore the 31st December "according to city by-law; after that date 5 cents on the dollar will be added to the above amount." On the 9th March, 1888, the plaintiffs demanded from the defendants P. and G. possession of the safe, but possession was refused, and on the same day the defendant J., acting under the instructions of the defendant G., issued his warrant to the defendant T. to distrain, and the safe was seized on that day and sold on the 15th March to the defendant G. whose object in buying was to protect P. No demand for payment of the taxes other than the demand served on the 2nd November, 1887, had been made:—Held, that the sale (upon the evidence) was not made in good faith, and was void:—Held, also, that as to the other defendants, the sale was made in good faith and would have protected them if otherwise valid, but that it was bad as to all the defendants on the ground that no demand had been made by the by-law for payment of the taxes. Goldie y, Johns, 16 A. R. 129.

Discretionary Power to Distrain.]— Held, that the insertion in the by-law of the discretionary power to the collector to distrain was improper and unauthorized. Chamberlain v. Turner, 31 C. P. 440.

Distress for More Than Due.]—A collector having legal authority for the collection of three sums, being the rates for three science years due for taxes, distrained by shall for the amount of them with other sums not properly collectable. Upon replevin:—Held, that the three legal distresses were separable from the illegal ones, and until the sums due on them were paid replevin would not lie. Corbett v. Johnston, 11 C. P. 317.

Distress for More Than Due.]-One N S., the plaintiff's son, was assessed in 1868 as a freeholder for $450, on real estate, and $200 on personal property, and was on the collector's roll for county rate $2.75; schools, 87.02; township rate, $2.60; and dog tax 82.00; in all, $21.37. The rate did not appear $2.00; in all, $21.51. The rate of collector was on the collector's roll, and the collector was not aware how much was for real and how much for personal property. He demanded much for personal property. He demanded the taxes from the plaintiff, to whom N. S. had made an assignment in August, 1868, and the plaintiff offered to pay him the tax on the real estate only, but he tendered no money and required a receipt in full for the real The defendant thereupon seized on the premises goods which had belonged to N. E., and the plaintiff brought trespass: -Held, that he could not recover, for it was not shewn, and the court would not assume, that any part of the amount seized for was for personal property, except the $2 dog tax; and this sum being severable, and the other sums not tendered, his seizing for it with the rest would not vitiate the whole distress.

Squire v. Mooney, 30 U. C. R. 531.

Executors and Trustees.] — Held, that executors and devisees in trust of land were properly assessed as owners, and that their own goods might be seized for the taxes. Dennison v. Henry, 17 U. C. R. 276.

Failure to Distrain—Enforcing Payment in a Subsequent Year, J—Where during all the time the roll is in the collector's hands there are goods and chattels available to answer the taxes but the collector fails to distrain, the amount due cannot be added to the taxes for a subsequent year and then levied by distress upon the goods of the tax debtor. The provisions of s. 135 of R. S. O. 1887 c. 193, R. S. O. 1897 c. 224, s. 1471, requiring the collector to state the reason for his failure to collect taxes and to furnish a duplicate of his account to the clerk are imperative, and if they are not observed the amount due cannot be added to the taxes for a subsequent year and then levied by distress upon the goods of the tax debtor. Judgment below, 20 O. R. 16, affirmed. Caston v. City of Toronto, 26 A. R. 459, 30 S. C. R. 390.

Fixtures.]—Held, that a planing machine standing on the floor without fastening, with belts, and an engine to work it, was a chattel liable to seizure for taxes. Hope v. Cumming, 10 C. P. 118.

Goods of Stranger.]—No action on the case will lie against a collector of taxes for distraining the goods of a stranger without necessity, upon the allegation of there being goods enough of the defendant in the warrant out of which the money could have been made. McElhorn v, Menzies, 7 L, J, 244.

Goods of Stranger - Unreasonable Conduct.]-A bailiff having a warrant from the collector to distrain for taxes due by A. on his lands went to the premises, where A. pointed out to him property of his own amply sufficient to cover the amount due. The bailiff, however, insisted on seizing a pair of horses then in the stable, and which A. was at the time putting to a waggon in order to use them, but A. refused to let him take these, saving that they belonged to his son-in-law, who lived in the house, but was then away from home. The bailiff declared that he seized them for the taxes, though he did not The bailiff declared that he touch them, but A. drove them away, and three days after the bailiff returned and took them from the stable, no one being present, The owner repleyied, and it appeared on the trial that the horses belonged to the son-inlaw, who kept them in a part of the stable reserved for his exclusive use. There was no reserved for his exclusive use. evidence that the collector interfered in any way in the execution of the warrant. jury having found for the plaintiff against both defendants :- Held, that the horses were in the possession of A., and liable to seizure under 16 Vict. c. 182, s. 42; that the facts proved amounted to a distress; and that defendants therefore were entitled to succeed. though the bailiff might perhaps be liable in another form of action for his unreasonable conduct. Ourre, whether the collector in this case could be held liable for the acts of his bailiff. Fraser v. Page, 18 U. C. R. 327.

Goods of Stranger, I—By agreement between the plaintiffs and the Erie and Niagara R. W. Co., the plaintiffs were working the latter railway with their own engines and cars, and defendant as collector seized the plaintiffs' car on such railway for taxes due by the Erie and Niagara R. W. Co., in respect of other land belonging to that company:
—Held, that such seizure was unauthorized, for the car when taken was in the plaintiffs' possession and their own property. Great Western R. W. Co. v. Rogers, 29 U. C. R. 245.

Goods of Stranger.]—Premises in a city minicipality were occupied, as tenants, by a firm of auctioneers, who, however, were not assessed in respect to them. Goods of the plaintiff left with the auctioneers to be sold by auction were distrained by the defendants for the taxes payable upon the premises for the current year:—Held, that the distress was valid under s. 124 of the Consolidated Assessment Act, 1892, 55 Vict. c. 48 (O.) Aprile v. City of Toronto, 24 O. R. 297.

Goods on Another Lot.]—A lot of land heing in arrear for taxes for six years up to 1850, inclusive, during which it had been assexed as 'non-resident' land, was duly returned in 1865, under 27 Vict. c. 19, as occupied by the plaintiff, who had become tenant of it on the 1st April of that year. These axes were placed on the collector's roll, and in order to satisfy them he seized the plainriff's goods upon another loft in the same township—Held, that such seizure was unauthorlzed. Warne v. Coulter, 25 U. C. R. 177.

Incomplete Rolls.]—Defendant held two mis, each headed "Collector's Roll for the town of Belleville," one being also headed "Town Purposes," the other, "School Purposes," In the first, the column headed "Town or Village Rate," contained nothing, but in that headed "Total Taxes, Amount," $40 was inserted. In the other that column headed "General School Rate," contained nothing, but $16 was in the column headed "General School Rate,"—Held, in replevin for goods seized, insufficient, for there was nothing to shew for what purpose the sum not specified to be for school rate was charged. Sprv v. McKenzje, 18 U. C. R. 161, distinguished. Coleman v. Kerr, 27 U. C. R. 5.

The omission to set down the name in full of the person assessed was treated as immetrial. Ib.

Landlord and Tenant—Custodia Legis.]—There is nothing in the Assessment Act. R. S. O. 1897 c. 224, to warrant a municipal tax collector seizing for arrears of taxes, goods, which being under distraint by a landlord, are in custodia legis; and in this case subscutent rent having accrued due during the loint possession of the landlord and the collector, the landlord was also held to bave priority in respect to another distress made by him for such subsequent rent, City of Kingston v. Rogers, 31 O. R. 119.

Lessee.)—Semble, that a lessee of a house in a city cannot be assessed as occupier when he no longer occupies it, although his term continues; but held, that the plaintiff having omitted to appeal was liable to pay the sua assessed against him, and therefore could not replay his goods seized. McCarrall v. Watkins, 19 U. C. R. 248.

Municipality's Liability.]—Section 126 of the Assessment Act, 32 Vict. c. 36 (O.), directs, that when the county trensurer is satisfied that there is distress upon any lands of non-residents in arrear for taxes, he shall issue a warrant under his band and seal to the collector of the municipality to levy. The warrant was tested "Given under my hand and seal, being the corporate seal;" and the seal bore the same form, emblem, legend, &c., as the county seal. The collector sold the plaintiff's goods under it, but it was not shewn to have been authorized by the county council, nor had they received the proceeds of the sale:—Held, that they were not liable in trespass or trover. Snider v. County of Frontenac, 30 U. C. R. 275.

Non-residents.]—A statement and demand of taxes are not a condition precedent to a distress in the case of non-residents. DeBlaquiere v. Becker, S.C. P. 167.

Non-residents.] — Where lands, which had been assessed as non-resident, became occupied and assessed as such:—Held, not competent for the treasurer, under s. 126 of 32 Vict. c. 36 (0.), to issue his warrant to levy arrears accrued when the lands were non-resident, ss. 111 to 117 of the Act providing for that event. Snyder v. Shibley, 21 C. P. 518.

Note Given For Taxes.]-Replevin for Plea, justifying the taking under a warrant for school taxes, and alleging that they were delivered by the collector to defendant, an inn-keeper, to take care of until the Replication setting out facts to shew the rate illegal, and averring that the plaintiff after seizure of the goods, at the request of the collector and trustees, gave his note for a sum named (not saying that it was the amount due by him), payable to bearer, which was accepted in satisfaction of the taxes; that the collector released the property seized, and said note is still outstanding, and the plaintiff liable upon it, and that the seizure in the plea mentioned was made afterwards:-Held, on demurrer, replication bad, for, 1, the collector acting under a warrant legal on the face of it, would not be liable in trespass or trover, and therefore not in this action, nor the defendant for taking the horses from him to keep; and 2, even if the note had been alleged to be for a sufficient amount to pay the rate, yet the improper acceptance of it by the trustees would not prevent them from afterwards distraining. Spry v. McKenzie, 18 U. C. R. 161.

Person Authorized to Act as Collector—Extending Time for Collection.]—Section 132 of the Act provides that every collector shall return his roll to the treasurer on or before the 14th December in each year, or such day in the next year, not later than the 1st February, as the council of the municipality may appoint. Section 133 provides that in case the collector fails or omits to collect the taxes or any portion thereof by the day appointed the council may by resolution authorize the collector, or some other person in his stead, to continue the levy and collection of the unpaid taxes in the manner and with the powers provided for by the general levy and collection of taxes. On the 11th December, 1886, (before the roll was delivered to the collector), the council passed a resolution that the collector proceed at once to collect the taxes for 1886; on the 7th March, 1887, another resolution instructing P. B. (the defendant) to enforce the payment of the uncollected taxes at once; on the 14th November, 1887, a resolution that P. B., collector, be instructed to have the roll for 1886 returned by the 24th inst.; and on the 17th January, 1888, after the distress and before the repley(), a resolution that the time for the collection of the unpaid taxes for 1886 be extended until the 15th February, 1888, and that P. B. be authorized to collect until that date. The roll for 1886 remained in the hands of the defendant from the time of the delivery of it to him until after the distress and replevy:—Held, that the defendant was either the collector within the meaning of s. 152 when he made in the defendant authorized to make it and unreturned he made in the second of the delivery of the second of the delivery of the second of the second of the collector, by the resolution of the council to continue the levy and cellection under s. 133, which provides no limit of time in such case; and in either case the distress by him was valid. Levis v. Brady, 17 O. R. 377.

Held, also, that the appointment in December, 1887, of another person to collect the rates for 1887 had not the effect of removing the defendant from office; for it was an appointment to collect the rates for that year only, and by s. 12 of the Assessment Act the council might appoint such number of collectors as they night think necessary; but even if it had that effect, the roll for 1886 had not been returned by the defendant, and the resolution of the 17th January, 1888, authorized him to continue the collection under s. 133, and legalized the distress then made. Ib.

Replevin—Onus of Proof,]—The defendant, as collector of taxes of a village for the year 1886, on the 9th January, 1888, seized goods of the plaintiff as a distress for taxes assessed against the plaintiff upon the assessment roll for 1886. The plaintiff brought this action of replevin to recover the goods os seized:—Held, upon the evidence, that it was not shewn that the plaintiff was not duly and legally assessed for the taxes in respect of which the distress was made. Lewis v. Brady, 17 o, R. 377.

Return of Roll. |- In replevin defendant avowed, setting out the assessment of certain taxes in the city of Kingston for the years 1855 and 1859, the delivery of the collector's rolls to the collector for those years, and their return by him, with the taxes hereinafter mentioned appearing unpaid; that the defendant was duly appointed by resolution of the council, instead of the collector for those years, to collect certain taxes remaining unpaid after the return of said rolls; that certain persons named were set down and assessed on the said rolls as owner and occupant of certain real property for a sum mentioned. payment of which was duly demanded by the collector for those years; and that at the same time when, &c., (being in 1861) the defendant took the goods in question as a distress for such taxes, the same being in the plaintiff's possession on the premises so assessed :- Held, on demurrer, that the avowry shewed no defence, the council having under the circumstances no authority to make such appointment. The plaintiffs in answer to the avowry pleaded several pleas, denying the assessment of the several parties as alleged, to which the defendants replied, so far as it might be intended to rely on any error in said assessments, that the collector's rolls for said years were made out by the clerk from the assessment roll as finally passed, and the asessments in question correctly transcribed :-Held, on demurrer, replication bad. Holcomb
 v. Shaw, 22 U. C. R. 92.
 Under C. S. U. C. c. 55, after the collector's

Under C. S. U. C. c. 55, after the collector's roll for the year has been formally returned, the municipality cannot appoint any one to collect the unpaid taxes by distress; their collection belongs to the treasurer. Ib.

Return of Roll.]—In an action against a collector and his bailiff for an illegal distress, it was shewn that the distress had been made after the return of the roll; and no resolution authorizing the collector to continue to collect the taxes under R. S. O. 1877 c. 180, s. 192, was proved;—Held, that the distress was illegal; and that there was no presumption that the collector had received such authority merely because it was conceded that he acted as collector in directing the levy. Ounter, referring to Holcomb v. Shaw, 22 U. C. R. 92, whether even if such a resolution had been proved it would be ineffectual. Langford v. Kirkpatrick, 2 A. R. 513.

Seizure in Part Valid.]—Part of a levy for school taxes, being correct, was held not to make valid the whole seizure. Free v. Me-Hugh, 24 C. P. 13.

Subsequent Occupant.]—Held, that the goods of a subsequent occupant, who took was subsequent occupant, who took was in possession before the return of the all the subsequent of the property of the lector's roll, were liable to distress for taxes assessed in respect of the premises against the previous occupier, and this although the goods were not at the time on the property actually assessed. Anglin v. Minis, 18 C. P. 170.

Time.]—City and county councils cannot legally pass a resolution under s. 104 of C. S. U. C. c. 55, to continue the levy and collection of unpaid taxes by distress after the return of the collector's roll, and such roll must be returned at furthest by 1st March in each year. Smith v. Shaue, S. L. J. 297.

Time.]—Defendant was duly appointed collector of the municipality for the years 1895 and 1866;—Held, following Newberry V. Stephens, 16 U. C. R. 65, Chief Superintendent of Education V. Farrell. 21 U. C. R. 441, and McBride V. Gardham, S. C. P. 296, that he had authority in 1806 to distrain for the taxes of 1895 unon the owner of premises duly assessed. Coleman V. Kerr, 27 U. C. R. 5.

Time.]—Held, that a collector of school taxes might in 1861 collect by distress the taxes for 1859 and 1800, not having made his final return of such taxes as in arrear, and being still collector; and, semble, that in this case, the plaintiff, who complained of the seizure, having led to it by his own conduct, the proceedings should in the division court have been uppled at all events. Chief Superintendent of Education v. Farrell, 21 U. C. R. 441.

Time.1—The time for levying a school tax in the city of Kingston, imposed by by-law in December, 1855, was extended by the resolutions of the city council, under 18 Vict. c. 21, s. 3, until the 1st August, 1856, and again on the 22nd becember, 1856, to the 1st March, 1857;—Held, that the collector, who was the same person for both years, might distrain between the 1st August and the 22nd December, 1856, although no resolution extending the time was then in force. Aeuberry v. Stephens, 16 U. C. R. 65; McBride v. Gardham, 8 C. P. 296.

IV. COLLECTORS.

Appointment — Declaration of Office.]— By by-law providing for the assessment and levying of rates for 1885, passed by the council on 11th December, 1885, the defendant was appointed collector to collect the rates for 1885. On the 23rd December, 1886, the defendant entered into a bond with sureties as collector to the corporation of the village, which recited that he had been appointed coland on the same day a resolution passed by the council that the bonds of P. B. as collector be accepted, as presented to the council; but no other appointment of the defendant as collector was proved, and the defendant swore that he did not think he made any declaration of office for any year: Held, that the effect of the defendant not having made and subscribed the declaration required by s. 271 of the Municipal Act, R. S. O. 1887 c. 184, was not to make his acts void; and having been duly appointed by bylaw collector, he held office until removed by the council, even if what was done by the council on the 23rd December, 1886, did not constitute a good appointment. Lewis v. Brady. 17 O. R. 377.

Bond.]—Bond by collector of township rates after 6 Will. IV. c. 2, and before the repeal of 5 Will. IV. c. 8—Right of action on. McLean v. Shaver, 1 U. C. R. 189.

Bond-By-law Directing Payment in Instalments. |-To debt on bond against the collector of a township and his sureties for not paying over moneys collected in 1846, on or before the first Monday of December of that year, defendant pleaded a by-law of the council passed in May, 1843, that the collector should pay his moneys quarterly, which he did:—Held, bad, as no answer to the condition. Baby v. Drew, 5 U. C. R. 556.

Bond—Division of Municipality.]—The bond was taken to "The municipality of the township of Whitby," and afterwards the township was divided by 20 Vict. c. 113, into Whitby and East Whitby:—Held, that the bond was properly sued upon in the name of the corporation of Whitby. Township of Whitby v. Harrison, 18 U. C. R. 603.

Bond—Extension of Time to Collect—Roll not Certified — Oath not Taken.] — To an action against a surety for a collector of taxes for moneys received and not paid over, de-fendant pleaded that no roll properly certified was received by the collector, but that he col-lected the moneys wrongfully and without authority. It appeared that a roll was deauthority. It appeared that a roll was de-livered to him signed by the clerk, but not otherwise certified:—Held, sufficient author-ity. Township of Whitby v. Harrison, 18 U. C R. 603,

An extension of time for making the collection without the surety's consent does not discharge him, that being expressly allowed, and his liability retained by 18 Vict. c. 21. S. C., 18 U. C. R. 606.

C. 18 U. C. R. 606.

The fact that a collector of taxes received the money without any roll having been delivered to him, and without having taken the oath of office, forms no defence for his surety to an action for not paying over such money.

Bond-Non-disclosure.]-In an action by a municipal corporation against the sureties to the bonds of a defaulting collector of taxes, for the due performance of his duties for 1886 and 1887, it appeared that there had been great laxity on the plaintiffs' part, but that shortly before the collector absconded, in 1888, a majority of the members of the corporation had confidence in his honesty; while the defendants had not sought information the detendants had not sought information from the plaintiffs as to the way he had per-formed his duties in former years:—Held, that the non-disclosure by the plaintiffs to the defendants of a motion having been made in council in 1885 that if the roll for 1884 was not returned by the next meeting, an inquiry before the county court Judge would be asked for; or of a resolution in August, 1885, instructing the treasurer to take pro-ceedings against the collector and his sureties for the balance due on the 1884 roll un-less fully settled before 10th September next, which it was; or of another like resolution in 1886, in reference to the taxes of 1885, which were afterwards, in 1888, paid over in full by him, and of the non-return by him of the 1885 roll until 1888: were not such non-disclosures as amounted to constructive fraud, on the plaintiffs' part sufficient to relieve the de-fendants from liability on their bonds. Township of Adjala v. McElroy, 9 O. R. 580, specially considered. Town of Meaford v. Lang, 20 O. R. 42, 541.

Bond-Treasurer.]-Section 60 of 13 & 14 Vict. c. 67, requiring the collector to give a bond, as required by by-law, is directory, and not so imperative as to make the collec-tion of the taxes illegal where a bond from the collector's surety had been given to the treasurer instead of the town by its corporate name, and no by-law had been passed by the corporation under that section. Judd v. Read, 6 C. P. 362.

Commission.]—The jury, without any evidence to justify such finding, allowed the collector a commission of three and a half per cent. on the taxes collected by him: -Held, that this amount could not be allowed, and that the amount against the sureties must be increased by this amount, less a sum of $75, which appeared by a by-law, put in by leave on the motion, to be the proper amount of remuneration to the collector, on defendof remuneration to the collector, on derend-ants' pleading a plea which would justify plaintiffs in making such deduction. Town of Welland v. Brown, 4 O. R. 217.

Delivery of Roll to Collector. - By s. 119 of the Ontario Assessment Act, 55 Vict. c. 48, provision is made for the preparation every year by the clerk of each muni-cipality of a "collector's roll" containing a statement of all assessments to be made municipal purposes in the year, and s. 120 provides for a similar roll with respect to taxes payable to the treasurer of the Province. At the end of s. 120 is the following: vince. At the end of s. 120 is the following:
"The clerk shall deliver the roll, certified under his hand, to the collector on or before the first day of October." * * * *_
Held, affirming 21 A. R. 379, that the provision as to delivery of the roll to the collector was imperative, and its non-delivery was a special of the roll of the ro sufficient answer to a suit against the lector for failure to collect the taxes. Held, also, that such delivery was necessary in the case of the roll for municipal taxes provided for in the previous section as well as to that for provincial taxes. Town of Trenton v. Dyer, 24 S. C. R. 474.

Illegal Arrest-Respondent Superior.]-Issue of execution by the receiver of taxes for city of St. John and arrest in default of payment—Respondent superior. See McSorley v. City of St. John, 6 S. C. R. 531.

Ineligibility for Office.]—Under s. 18 of 1 Vict. c. 21, a collector of rates who had not naid over the amount collected by him and settled his accounts with the treasurer on or before the third Monday in December of the year for which he had been serving, was ineligible for any township office. Regina v. Ryan, 6 U. C. R. 296.

Liability for Bailiff's Act. — A collector is responsible for the acts of his bailiff holding legal authority (by warrant) from him so to act, and an action will lie against them jointly. Corbett v. Johnston, 11 C. P. 217.

Mandamus to Account.]—The treasurer of a town by authority of the corporation applied for a mandamus to the collector, commanding him to give an account in writing, for each of the seven years during which he had held office, of the taxes remaining due on his rolls, and the reason why he could not collect the same, by inserting in each case the words "non-resident," or "no property to distrain," and to make oath that the suns were unusuid. The court refused the writ, holding that as there were other remedies provided, under ss. 167, 170, 173, and 177 of the Assessment Act, C. S. U. C. c. 55, it must at least be shewn that they could not be used or would be of no avail. In re Quin, 23 U. C. R. 308.

Negligence—Roll not Certified.]—Held, that the roll not being "certified under the hand of the clerk," the collector was not liable to the corporation for negligence in not distraining on the goods of a party assessed. Township of Vienna v. Marr, 9 L. J. 301.

Summary Remedy against Defaulting Collector. 1—One M. was collector of a tomobility for 1844 and 1865. In January, 1855, he was authorized to continue the collection of the property of the p

On the 1st January, 1867, the Acts above mentioned were repealed, "saving any rights, proceedings, or things legally had, acquired, or done under them," Quere, whether the right to issue the warrant still existed. Bb.

Sureties—Entries on Roll.]—In an action against sureties for a town collector for his default in paying over the sum collected by him:—Held. (1) not necessary that the roll should be certified, but sufficient that it was signed by the town clerk; (2) that en tries made by the collector on his roll in the discharge of the duties of his office of taxes paid to him were evidence against the sureties. Town of Welland v. Brown, 4 O. R. 217.

Venue.]—A tax collector sued for damages in respect of acts done by him in the execution of his duty is entitled to the benefit of R. S. O. 1887 c. 73, and under s. 15 of that Act, and s. 4 of R. S. O. 1887 c. 55, a county court action against him for replevin of goods scized by him and for damages for malicious scizure, must be brought in the county where the seizure and alleged trespass took place. The Consolidated Rules as to venue do not override these statutory provisions. Legacy v. Pitcher, 10 O. R. 620, distinguished. Arscott v. Lilley, 14 A. R. 283, applied. Howard v. Herrington, 20 A. R. 175.

V. COURT OF REVISION.

Counsel.]—Courts of revision created under the Consolidated Assessment Act, 1892, are not obliged to hear counsel in support of an appeal against an assessment of property under that Act. Re Rosbach and Carlyle, 23 O. R. 37.

Notice—Waiver.]—An elector served the clerk of the municipality with notice that several persons had been wrongfully inserted on the assessment roll, and others omitted, or assessed too high or too low, and requested the clerk to notify them and the assessor when the matters would be tried by the court when the matters would be fried by the court of revision. On the 22nd May the court met, when it was objected for the parties named that six days notice had not been given, but only five. The court then adjourned until the 30th, directing proper notice to be given, which the clerk omitted to do, and in consequence they refused on the 30th to hear the appeal, and finally passed the roll. On application for a mandamus to compel them to hear and determine the matters :- Held, that they were right, the six days' notice being imperatively required by the Act: and that the appearance of the parties by their counsel to object to the want of such notice was not a waiver of it. Semble, that, if this were otherwise, the proper course would have been a mandamus to the mayor to summon the court of revision, under s. 55 of C. S. U. C. c. 55. Regina v. Court of Recision of Town of Cornwall, 25 U. C. R. 286.

Notice of Sitting—Finality of Assessment.]—A person appealing against his own assessment to a court of revision is not entitled to a personal notice of the time and place of the sitting of the court under s.s. 9 of s. 64 of the Consolidated Assessment Act. He is sufficiently notified by the publication of the advertisement required by s.-s. 7, and by the posting of the list under s.s. 4. Virian v. Township of McKim, 23 O. R. 561.

Persons Who May Complain. —It is competent for the court of revision to determine whether the name of any person wrongfully omitted from the proper column of the assessment roll, should be inserted therein, upon the complaint of the person himself, or of any elector, or ratepayer. In re Roman Catholic Separate Schools, 18 O. R. 606.

Raising Assessment Without Notice.]—The plaintiffs were entered upon the assessment roll for the year 1877, which was duly completed and delivered to the clerk of the municipality, for the total aggregate value of all their property and income at 88,000, and on the 28th April were served with the notice in accordance with 32 Vict. c. 36, s. 48 (O.), against which they did not appeal. At the first meeting of the court of revision on the 19th May, a resolution was passed in-structing the clerk to notify the plaintiffs, amongst others, that they were assessed too low, but it did not appear that the plaintiffs were ever so notified. On 26th May the court of revision again met, when a resolution was passed that the plaintiffs' assessment be laid over until the next meeting. After this second meeting the assessor, of his own motion, and without any authority therefor, altered the assessment to $10,000, and delivered to the plaintiffs a second notice notifying them thereof. The plaintiffs' clerk happened to be present at the second meeting and heard plaintiffs' names mentioned, and on afterwards receiving the notice supposed the mat-ter was settled, and thought no more about it. The court of revision, however, held a third meeting on 2nd June, and without any notice to plaintiffs, acting apparently under the betief that without such notice or an appeal by any one, they had authority so to do, raised the assessment to $12,000;—Held, that under the circumstances neither the assessor nor the the circumstances neither the assessor for the court had any authority to alter the assessment roll, and therefore the increase was illegal and void. Tobey v. Wilson, 43 U. C.

Remission of Taxes, |—The court of revision of a municipality is obliged to receive and decide upon a petition for remission of taxes, presented under s. 67 of 55 Vict. c. 48 (40.), notwithstanding that the municipality has not passed any by-law on the subject. Re Norris, 28 O. R. 636.

School Tax.]—Held, that the court of revision has jurisdiction, under R. S. O. 1887; c. 225, s. 120, s.-s. 3, on the application of the person assessed, or of any municipal elector (or ratepayer, as under R. S. O. 1887; c. 227; s. 48, s.-s. 3), to hear and determine the complaints, (a) in regard to the religion of the person placed on the roll as Protestant or Roman Catholic; and (b) as to whether such person is or is not a supporter of public or separate schools within the meaning of the provisions of law in that behalf; and (c), which appears to be involved in (b), where such person has been placed in the wrong column of the assessment roll for the purposes of the school tax. In re Roman Catholic Separate Schools, 18 O. R. 606.

 Voters' Lists.]—Compelling court of revision to hear voters' lists appeals. See Inre Marter and Court of Revision of Town of Gravenhurst. 18 O. R. 243.

VI. EQUALIZATION OF RATES.

Capitalization — Quashing By-law.]—Where the county council, in equalizing the assessments under that section, had intentionally capitalized the personal property in towns and villages at ten per cent. Instead of six, contrary to the express direction in s. 32, the court refused to quash the by-law on motion, though they intimated that it might be held insufficient if relied upon for protection. It was also objected that by this course the amount of ratable property in towns and villages was made much greater than it should have been, and so (in effect) that the amounts when in the last revised assessment; but, but had the amount of the property of the property

Capitalization—Quashing By-law.]—De-claration on a county by-law to levy money for the general purposes of the year, alleging nonpayment by defendants of the proportion to be raised by them. Plea, that in capitalizing the real property not actually rented but held and occupied by the owners in the towns of N. (the defendants), and C., and the village of D., and in capitalizing the ratable property there for the year, the plaintiffs capitalized at ten instead of six per cent., as directly ected by law, and apportioned thereon among the several municipalities, whereby $1,000,000 was omitted from the capitalization, and the aggregate value of the ratable property in N., and the amount directed to be raised was erroneously and illegally made up: -Held, on demurrer, a good defence, for such capitalization was contrary to the statute, and though it lessened the defendants' assessment they were not precluded from objecting, for the plaintiffs could only create a debt by complying with the Act. Held, also, that it was unnecessary to quash the by-law, for the court in their discretion might decline to do that, though they could not deny the defendants' right to contest their liability on any legal ground. County of Lincoln v. Town of Niagara, 25 U. C. R. 578.

Evasion of Law—Grants by County Council.]—A county council by bv-law granted moneys to different municipalities in the county to assist them in inaproving and repairing roads and bridges, &c. The assessment of two municipalities had been decreased, and that of two others increased, by the county Judge, after the equalization made by the county council, and it appeared that one object of the by-law was to make this up to the municipalities so increased, the two which were reduced receiving no grant by the by-law, and the grant to the other two being increased by the amount which the Judge had put on against them. Remarks upon such attempted evasion of the law. In re Strachan and County of Frontenae, 41 U. C. R. 175.

Finality.]—Upon an application to quash a by-law imposing a county rate, for disregard of the directions of s. 70, C. S. U. C.

c. 55. as to equalizing the rates:—Held, that except perhaps when a dishonest intention on the part of the council is clearly shewn (which was not the case here), the court have no authority to overrule the valuation on the ground of its alleged unfair or unequal effect. Remarks as to the proper mode of proceeding under the above section. The court refused a mandamus commanding the council to proceed as directed by the Act, as it was not clear that they had not complied with it by their law, Gibson and United Counties of Huron and Bruce, 20 U. C. R. 111.

Valuations.]—Held, that the aggregate value of municipalities, to form the basis for the calculation for equalization for county purposes, under s.-s. 2 of s. 71 of the Assessment Act, 32 Viet, c. 36, is the value of the municipality as returned in the last revised assessment roll, and that it is not in the power of county councils to vary such valuation. Town of Simcoe v. County of Norfolk, 5 C. L. J. 181.

Valuations.]—Held, in equalizing the rolls, although a difference is recognized by 32 Vict. c. 15, s. 71, between town and village property and county property, that as the valuation of the former is arbitrarily reduced by two-fifths, the duty of the county council is to increase or decrease the agregate valuations of townships, towns, and villages, as the rolls stand, as well as to make the statutory reduction with respect to the latter—town and village rolls being subject to equalization in the same way as townships. Statement of the mode of procedure adopted in bringing the question for consideration in this case before the Judge of the county court under s.-s. 3 of s. 71. Remarks upon the difficulty, under the present system of assessment, of arriving at a fair equalization of the assessment rolls in different townships. In re Appeal from County County of Sinceo, 5 C. L. J. 290.

VII. EXEMPTIONS.

Application of Amending Act.|—Ity s., 3 of the Assessment Amendment Act, 51 Vict. c., 29 (10.4), which came into force on 1st August, 1888, s. 7 of the Assessment Act, R. 8. 0. 1887 c. 193, was amended by adding to the exemptions: "All horses, &c., owned and held by any owner or tenant of any farm, and when carrying on the general business of farming or grazing." The defendant township was instituted under the Municipal Institutions Act for Algoma, Muskoka, &c., R. 8. 0. 1887 c. 185: s. 20 of which provided for the making of an assessment roll, which said roll, by s. 28, when finally revised, was to be the roll of the municipality until a new roll was making the subsequent roll at periods of not less than one nor more than three years, and the vear for the purposes of the Act was to commence on 1st January thereof; and by s. 364 of the Municipal Act (R. 8. 0. 1887 c. 184), the rates or taxes were to be considered as imposed on and from 1st January thereof; and by s. 364 of the Municipal Act (R. 8. 0. 1887 c. 184), the rates or taxes were to be considered as imposed on and from 1st January thereof; and by s. 364 of the Municipal Act (R. 8. 0. 1887 c. 184), the rates or taxes were to be considered as imposed on and from 1st January the provided. But the provided of the Municipal Act (R. 8. 0. 1887 c. 184), the rates or taxes were to be considered as imposed on and from 1st January the provided. But the provided of the Municipal Act (R. 8. 0. 1887 c. 184), the rates of the Municipal Act (R. 8. 0. 1887 c. 184), the rates of the Municipal Act (R. 8. 0. 1887 c. 184), the rates of the Municipal Act (R. 8. 0. 1887 c. 184), the rates of the Municipal Act (R. 8. 0. 1887 c. 184), the rates of the Municipal Act (R. 8. 0. 1887 c. 184), the rates of the Municipal Act (R. 8. 0. 1887 c. 184), the rates of the Municipal Act (R. 8. 0. 1887 c. 184), the rates of the Municipal Act (R. 8. 0. 1887 c. 184), the rates of the Municipal Act (R. 8. 0. 1887 c. 1887 c.

sessment for the year 1888 was made in the months of March and April, and the roll was returned to the clerk of the municipality on or about 1st May, and was finally revised by the council sitting as a court of revision on 16th June. On 4th August a by-law was passed directing a rate to be levied to meet the current expenses for the year:—Held, under the circumstances, the personal property mentioned was not exempt for the year 1888, Henderson v. Township of Stisted, 17 O. R. 673.

Canadian Pacific R. W. Co. |—By the charter of the Canadian Pacific R. W. Co. the lands of the company in the North-West Territories, until they are either sold or occupied, are exempt from Dominion, provincial, or municipal taxation for twenty years after the grant thereof from the Crown:—Held, that lands which the company have agreed to sell, and as to which the conditions of sale have not been fulfilled, are not lands "sold" under this charter:—Held, further, that the exemption attaches to lands allotted to the company before the patent is granted by the Crown. Lands which were in the North-West Territories when allotted to the company did not lose their exemption on becoming a firewards, a part of the Province of Manitoha. Municipality of Cornwellis v. Canadian Pacific R. W. Co., 19 S. C. R. 702.

Church and School.]—Section 8 of the Assessment Act of 1866 clearly exempts church and school property from local as well as other taxes. Haynes v. Copeland, 18 C. P. 150.

Crown.] — Plaintiff in 1853 purchased Crown lands through the agent at Chatham, taking a receipt for the first instalment. In January, 1854, the commissioner of Crown lands, in supposed compliance with 16 Vict. c. 182, s. 48, transmitted a list to the registrar of the county, (in the statement of the case set out). Plaintiff paid all the instalments on the land as they became due, but obtained no evidence of his right, except by this receipt. The lands had never been in the possession of any person, and the plaintiff had always resided out of the county in which they were situate. Plaintiff having paid the taxes from 1854 to 1859 under protest:—Held, that these lands were not subject to assessment, as they were vested in the Crown:—Held, that 16 Vict, c. 159, s. 24 (C. S. U. C. c. 22, s. 27, since repealed), was not intended for Upper Canada: that s. 13, C. S. U. C. c. 22, was mandatory and not permissive, and that a license of occupation should be issued to every person wishing to purchase, lease, or settle on any Crown land. Street v. County of Kent, 11 C. P. 255.

Crown.]—Property, whether leasehold or freehold, in the use or occupation of the Crown, or of any person or persons in his or their official capacity as servants of the Crown, is not assessable, either at present or as a charge upon the reversion. Shaw v. Shaw, 12 C. P. 456. See also Shaw v. Shaw, 21 U. C. R. 482.

Crown.]—Held, approving Shaw v. Shaw, 12 C. P. 456, that land leased to a commissariat officer on behalf of the secretary of state for war, and occupied by Her Majesty's troops, was exempt from taxation; and that a provision in such lease binding the lesses to ray all taxes to which the premises should be liable could make no difference. But where such land before the execution of the lease had been assessed to the lessor for that year:—Held, that it was not discflarged, but that as payment could not be enforced from the Crown, and the officer had paid to the collector under protest, the money might be recovered back. Principal Secretary of State for War v. City of Toronto, 22 U. C. R. 551.

Crown.] — Where the premises were so leased in April, having been previously assessed to the lessors, but the roll had not been returned:—Held, that the property was exempt as against the Crown for the taxes of that year. Principal Secretary of State for War v. City of London, 23 U. C. R. 476.

Crown.]—In 1808 an order in council was passed for a grant of land to W., the daughter of a U. E. Loyalist. In 1818 certain land was located thereunder, and a patent issued therefor. In 1819 W. petitioned the Governor-in-Council, stating that this was by mistake and without any authority from her; and in 1820 an order in council was passed allowing her to surrender the land and to locate other land in lieu thereof. In 1820, before the surrender, the surveyor-general furnished the treasurer with a list of lands in this district, specifying this lot as deeded to The land was thereupon assessed, and in W. The land was thereupon assessed, and in IS31, having been returned by the treasurer to the sheriff as in arrear for the taxes for the vears 1820-9, and liable for sale, it was in that year sold to S., and a tax deed given in IS32. In IS39 S, conveyed to N., who in IS40 conveyed to G., through whom the plaintiff chimed. In IS99 N, petitioned the Governor-in-Council, stating that he was the assignee of the tax purchaser; that he had assigned in the tax purchaser; that it and discovered that the surveyor-general's return was in error, the land having been surrendered, but that under the circumstances the tax sale was regular, and that it should be tax sale was regular, and that it should be confirmed, and a patent issued to him. In 1840 an order in council was passed, stating that if N.'s tax title was valid he did not require a patent, but if not, the government lad no power to make a free grant of the land. In 1898 the Crown granted the land to II., who conveyed to the defendant:—Held. (reversing 6 O. R. 504) that as, under 59 Geo, III. e, 7 and 6 Geo, IV. e, 7, only lands granted by the Crown were to be liable to granted by the Crown were to be liable to assessment and sale, and as, under the circumstances, the lands never passed out of the Crown and vested in W.—the formal surrendor being taken rather as a precautionary than as a necessary act, and the mistake of the surveyor-general in not giving notice of the surrender could not make the land liable to be sold for taxes as against the Crown-the tax sale was invalid, and nothing passed un-der it; and that the defendant, claiming under the subsequent patent, was entitled to the land :-Quære, also, whether the plaintiff had any claim against the Crown for the moneys any claim against the Crown for the paid at the tax sale; at all events after the tax sale the parties dealt with the land with parties of the difficulties that existed. Mofnotice of the difficulties that existed. Mojatt v. Scratch, 8 O. R. 147, 12 A. R. 157.

Crown—Trust.]—Certain lands, after the grant from the Crown, became by certain mesne conveyances the property of the Bank of Upper Canada, and upon the failure of that bank were conveyed to its trustees, and were subsequently, with the other assets of the bank, vested in the Crown by 33 Vict, c, 40 (D.) The Crown then sold them, and the purchaser gave a mortgage back to secure part of the purchase money. The mortgage contained the usual provision for payment of taxes, but the taxes were not unid and the lands were sold, this action being brought to set aside the tax sale:—Held, that the Act 33 Vict, c, 40 (D.) was intra vires, as dealing with "Bankruptey and Insolvency," or "Banking and Incorporation of Banks," That the lands were therefore properly vested in the Crown as mortgage and trustee could not be sold for arrears of taxes, but was exempt under R. S. O. 1887 c, 193, s. 7, s.-8, 1. Regina v. County of Wellington, 17 O. R. 421, See the next case.

Crown — Beacheial Interest in Land,] — Property of a bank became vested in the Dominion Government, and a piece of land included therein was sold and a mortgage taken for the purchase money, the mortgage taken for the purchase money, the mortgage occuranting to pay the taxes. Not having done so, the land was sold for non-nayment. In an action to set aside the tax sale:—Held, affirming 17 A. R. 421, sub nom. Regina v. County of Wellington, that the Crown having a beneficial interest in the land it was exempt from taxation as Crown lands. Quirt v. The Queen, 19 S. C. R. 510.

Crown.]—The Crown is not liable for municipal taxes assessed upon real property belonging to the Dominion of Canada. City of Quebec v. The Queen, 2 Ex. C. R. 450.

Dominion Official.]—Held, reversing 40 U. C. R. 478, that under the B. N. A. Act, 1887, a Provincial Legislature has no power to impose a tax upon the official income of an officer of the Dominion Government, or to confer such a power on the municipalities. Semble, that the Legislature of Ontario did not intend to include such an income in the exemptions mentioned in 32 Vict. c. 36, s. 9, s.-s. 12 (O.), as one derived "elsewhere out of this Province," Leprohon v. City of Ottawa, 2 A. R. 522.

Educational Establishment.]—In an action brought by appellants against respondents to recover the sum of $808.50 for three years' school taxes imposed on property occupied by them as a farm situate in one municipality, the products of which, with the exception of a portion sold to cover the expenses of working and cultivating, were consumed at the mother house, situate in another municipality:—Held, that as the property scale was not occupied by the responders used by the responders used to be a second to the control of the responder of the r

Educational Establishment.] — Action by the city of Montreal to recover the sum of $408 taxes for the years 1878, 1879, 1880, on property in the said city occupied by defendant. The property set out in the plaintiff's declaration was during the time mentioned therein occupied and used as a private maintained by the same of the same of the plaintiff of the same of

Extension of Limits.]—The lands owned by the defendants were originally part of the township of Sandwich West, and by a by-law of that township, confirmed by special legislation, were exempted from taxation for ren years from the 1st January, 1883. In 1888 the limits of the (then) town of Windsor were, under the provisions of R. S. O. 1887 c. 1844, s. 22, extended so as to embrace the lands in question:—Held, that assuming that the water rate in question was a species of taxation, the effect of R. S. O. 1887 c. 184, s. 34, was to put an end to the exemption. Municipality of Cornwallis v. Canadian Pacific R. W. Co., 19 S. C. R. 702, distinguished. City of Windsor v. Canada Southern R. W. Co., 20 A. R. 384

Gravel Roads.]—The Proof Line Gravel Road Company was incorporated under the Joint Stock Companies Act (C. S. U. C. c. 49), and constructed their road as a public highway or road allowance in the township of Biddulph. The township assessor assessed the property in the road against James Hamilton as secretary of the company:—Held, that the assessment was illegal, because, although the road was vested in the company by s. 60 of the Act, it was nevertheless a public highway and therefore exempt from taxation by 32 Vict. c. 36, s. 9, s.-s. 6; and that in any event the assessment should have been in the name of the company, and not in that of one of its officers. In re Hamilton and Tournship of Biddulph, 13 C. L. J. 18.

5. Harbour.]—Held, under C. S. U. C. c. 5. s. 3, that land covered with the waters of a harbour is not taxable, and therefore, that the Buffalo and Lake Huron R. W. Co. could not be taxed for the Goderich harbour. Buffalo and Lake Huron R. W. Co. v. Town of Goderich, 21 U. C. R. 97.

Hospital.]—A hospital carried on by and for the henefit of two medical practitioners, and used chiefly by patients paying fees, though to some extent by indigent patients, and in receipt of a government grant under the Charity Aid Act, R. S. O. 1807 c. 320, is a public hospital within the meaning of s.-s. 5 of s. 7 of the Assessment Act, R. S. O. 1807 c. 224, and eventut from traxation. Judgment below, 30 O. R. 116, affirmed. Struthers v. Town of Sudbarry, 27 A. R. 217.

Indian Lands.]—Land vested in Her Majesty in trust for the Indians was exempt from taxation under 13 & 14 Vict. c. 67; and the defendant here claiming such land under a sale for taxes imposed in 1852 and 1853, was held not entitled. Regina v. Guthvic. 41 U. C. R. 148; Regina v. McDonnell, ib 157.

Indian Lands—Surrender to the Croun—Patent to Locatee Before Sale.]—In 1854 a tract of land was surrendered to the Crown by the Indians, to whom the interest arising from the sales thereof by the Crown was to be paid. The lands were retained under the management of the Indian Department, and were called Indian lands, and after the passing of the B. N. A. Act, still continued under the management of this department, which was under the control of the Dominion Government, "Indians and land reserved for Indians," being by s. 91, clause 24, of that Act, exclusively assigned to the Dominion. In September, 1857, the lot in question, being a portion of such lands, was sold by the Crown, the first instalment of the purchase money being paid on the 15th February, 1858, and the last on the 29th July, 1867, when the lot was paid for in full, and on the 14th June, 1829, the patent from the Dominion Government issued therefor. In 1870 the lot in question was sold for the taxes assessed and accrued due for the years 1844-9:—Held, that upon the lands in question being surrendered to the Crown, they became ordinary unpatented lands within the meaning of the sale was therefore valid. Church v. Fenton, 28 c. P. 384, 4 a. R. 159, 5 s. C. R. 239.

Indian Lands.] — Held, that land in which the Indian title has been surrendered to the Crown and which has been afterwards sold or located, is liable to be sold for taxes imposed by a municipality, although while the title and interest are wholly in the Crown, the land is exempt from taxation. Church v. Fenton, 28 C. P. 384, 4 A. R. 159, 5 S. C. R. 230, referred to and followed. Totten v. Truaz, 16 O. R. 490.

Manufacturing Establishment—Cessation of Business.]—R. S. O. 1887 c. 184, s. 366, which gives municipal councils power to exempt manufacturing establishments from taxation, does not authorize such exemption when such establishments cease under liquidation to carry on business, and any exempting by-law will, in such event, cease to be operative. Polson v. Town of Owen Sound, 31 O. R. 6,

Municipal Elections—Exemption without Contract.]—In 1802 a city council passed a by-law exempting the property of the partnership of the respondent, who had been elected alderman, from taxation except as to school rates, for a period of seven years:—
Held, that the exemption, not being founded upon any contract, but being an exemption without a contract, as provided for by 56
Vict. c. 35, s. 4 (0.), there was no disqualification. Regina ex rel. Lee v. Gilmour, 8 P.
R. 514, distinguished:—Held, also, that the respondent was entitled to qualify upon his rating upon the assessment roll of 1895 as the joint owner of a freehold estate in the partnership property, four partners being rated for this property as freeholders to the amount of $10,000: 55 Vict. c. 42, ss. 73, 86 (0.) The words "exempt from taxation" in 56 Vict. c. 35, s. 4 (0.) mean exempt from payment of all taxes, including school rates. Regina ex rel. Harding v. Bennett, 27 O. R. 314.

Municipal Property.]—Land owned by a city, but leased by them to a tenant for his own private purposes, is liable to taxation, and the corporation may distrain for such taxes. Scragg v. City of London, 28 U. C. R. 457, 26 U. C. R. 263.

Nova Scotia Railway Act.]—By R. S. N. S., 5 ser., c. 53, s. 99, s.-s. 30, the roadbed, &c., of all railway companies in the Province is exempt from local taxation. By s. 1 vince is exempt from local taxation. By s, 1 the first part of the Act, from ss, 5 to 33 inclusive, applies to every railway constructed and in operation, or thereafter to be constructed, under the authority of any Act of the Legislature, and, by s, 4, part two applies to all railways constructed under authority of any special Act, and to all companies incorporated for their construction and working. By s. 5, s.-s. 15, the expression "the company" in the Act means the company or party authorized by the special Act to construct the railway:—Held, that part one of this Act applies to all railways constructed under provincial statutes, and is not exclusive of those mentioned in part two; that a company in-corporated by an Act of the Legislature as a mining company with power "to construct and make such railroads and branch tracks as might be necessary for the transportation of coal from the mines to the place of shipment, and all other business necessary and usually performed on railroads," and with other powers connected with the working of other powers connected with the working of mines "and operation of railways," and em-powered by another Act [49 Vict. c. 45 (N. 8.)], to hold and work the railway "for general traffic and the conveyance of pas-sengers and freight for hire, as well as for all purposes and operations connected with said mines in accordance with, and subject to the provisions of part two of c. 53, R. S. N. S., 5 ser. intituled 'Of railways,'" is a railway company within the meaning of the Act: and that the reference in 49 Vict. c, 145, s. 1 (N. S.). to part two does not prevent said railway from coming under the operation of the first part of the Act. International Coal Co. v. County of Cape Breton, 22 S. C. R. 305.

Officer on Half Pay.]—The plaintiff, a major in the regular army, went on half pay, and with the consent of the Horse Guards, accepted the appointment of Deputy Adjutant-General of Militia under the Dominion Government, with a salary and allowances, including rent, payable by them, and by whom his duties were prescribed. He was however, directed by the Imperial authorities to consider himself subject to the orders of the general officer of the regular army at Halifax, and was always subject to re-call, and after five years' service was re-called. His promotion in the regular army continued, first to the brevet, and afterwards to the full rank of lieutenant-colonel, the appointment here being recognized by the royal warrant of 1870 as one the service in which qualified him for such promotion:—Held, that during such appointment he was not an officer of Her Majesty's regular army in actual service, within s. 9, s.-s. 12, of 36 Yict, c. 36 (O.), so as to exempt from taxation the house occupied by him Jarvis v. City of Kingston, 26 C. P.

Preferential Exemptions—Some of a Class.]—Section 44 of 31 Vict. c. 30 (O.) empowers municipal corporations to exempt from taxation for not more than five years manufacturers of woollen. cottons, glass, paper, and such like commodities. Under this a by-law was passed, enacting that every person or firm thereafter commencing any manufacture of the nature contemplated by the section, who should employ therein more than $1,000, and pay to operatives more than $30 weekly, should be exempt for five years as to such property. It was provided that the property should nevertheless be assessed, but entered in a separate page of the assessment roll, and that the clerk was to post up a list of such property, and the court of revision should hear and determine complaint against such exemptions, and if they were sustained should place the property on the roll in the ordinary column. The persons claiming exemptions were also required to file yearly a statement, verified under oath, shewing the capital employed and the sum paid for wages: -Held, that the by-law was bad, for exempting new manufactures only in preference to those of the same kind already established, and for exempting only those persons doing a specified amount of business. Semble, how-ever, that all manufacturers of the same trade might be exempted, so as to give them an advantage over other trades:—Held, also, that the by-law would not have been bad for exempting manufactures instead of manufacturers, nor for requiring the oath, nor on account of the provisions as to the assessment of the property and the reference to the court of revision. Quære, whether it would have been revision. Quære, whether it would have been objectionable to empower the mayor or the clerk to decide upon applications for exemp-tion. Railway.]—The portion of the railway bridge built over the Richelieu river, and the railway track belonging to appellant company within the limits of the town of St. Johns, are exempt from taxation under ss. 326 and 327 of 40 Vict. c. 29 (Q.). although no return had been made to the council by the company of the actual value of their real estate in the municipality. 2. A warrant to levy the rates upon such property for the years 1880-83, is illegal and void, and a writ of injunction is a proper remedy to enjoin the corporation to desist from all proceedings to enforce the same. Central Vermont R. W. Co. v. Tonen of St. Johns, 14 S. C. R. 288, 14 App. Cas. 5300.

Railway.]—Under the Assessment Act of 1869, 32 Vict. c, 36 (O.) the lands of railways might be sold for the non-payment of taxes. Smith v. Midland R. W. Co., 4 O. R. 494.

Right to Repeal By-law.]—A by-law, on the faith of which land had been purchased and a manufactory erected, was passed by a municipal council, under s. 366 of the Municipal Act, R. S. O. 1887 c. 184, by which the property was exempted from all taxation, &c., for a period of ten years from the date at which the by-law came into effect. The council sub-sequently, within the period of exemption, on the alleged ground that it was "expedient and necessary to promote the interests of the ratepayers," passed another by-law repealing the exempting by-law. The court, being of opinion, on the facts as set out in the case, that the repealing by-law was passed in bad faith, to enable the council to collect taxes upon a property which was exempt under the section, and in the absence of any forfeiture by the applicant of his rights, quashed the by-law as not within the powers of the council. On this application a ground relied on by the council was that the applicant had erected more than two dwelling-houses on the exempted lands, whereby, under the terms of the by-law, the exemption ceased. This was done through oversight and on the applicant's at-tention being called thereto, and on his undertaking to pay taxes thereon, a by-law was passed agreeing thereto and validating the exempting by-law; but, through inadvertence, was not sealed. The dwellings were subsequently assessed, and the taxes paid on them:

—Held, that the corporation by their acts and conduct were precluded from now setting this up as a breach of the by-law. Semble, the words "manufacturing establishment" in the words "manufacturing establishment" in the exempting by-law included land and every-thing necessary for the business. Semble, also, the period of exemption was within the statute. Alexander v. Village of Huntsville, 24 O. R. 665.

Unpatented Land.]—When the surveyor-general returns a lot of land as described for grant, proof that the land was not so in fact described must be of a very positive and affirmative kind; the mere evidence of a clerk in the surveyor-general's office that he finds no trace of it, will not do. VIII. LOCAL IMPROVEMENTS.

Block Pavements—Liability to Repair—Reconstruction.]—A city corporation having, by by-law passed in 1888, adopted the local improvement system, a cedar block pavement was constructed as a local improvement in 1891, its "lifetime," as stated by the by-law for levying the nasessments therefor, being ten years. Sections 644 and 655 of the Municipal Act, R. S. O. 1897 c. 223, authorize the passing of by-laws providing for the construction of local improvements and the local limpose and the local limpose and the construction of local improvements and the local limpose and limp reconstruct the work or improvement, the cost of doing so should be defrayed by the owners of the property benefited by the work of reconstruction. Held, also, that this duty to repair is imposed upon the municipality for the benefit of those at whose expense the work or improvement has been under, and is not to be confounded with the public. Held, also, that this duty ends when it becomes necessary to reconstruct the work or improvement, and that whenever it is in such a condition that practical men would say of it that it is worn out and not worth repairing no order for repair can be made under the amendment to s. 696 contained in s. 41 of 62 Vict. sess. 2, c. 26. Semble, that if the dilapidated condition of the pavement were due to the municipality having in the past neglected the duty to repair, the result would be different, the amending Act of 1899 being applicable to cases where the breach took place before it was passed. Re Mediand and City of Toronto, 31 O. R. 243.

By-law—General and Special.]—The council of a city by a resolution confirming the report of the committee on works authorized the corporation to exter into an agreement with certain railway companies—who were liable to maintain and keep in repair the existing bridges over their tracks on a certain street—wherely the corporation were to build as a local improvement to be paid by the railway of the companient of the paid by the railway of the properties from the p

By-law—Variance between Notice and By-law.]—In carrying out a local improvement the council may either ascertain and provide for the cost of the work before it is actually commenced by imposing and confirming the assessment necessary for that purpose, or they may do the work first and make the special assessment after its completion. A by-law imposing assessments for local improvements initiated by the city was quashed where the work done and the times of payment therefor were different from those set out in the notice of intention to do the work. Per Osler, J.A.—The by-law was bad on the p-10 further grounds (1) that the notice given to the ratepayers was of an improvement costing the sums named therein, to be provided for by an assessment to be made and confirmed before the commencement of the work, while the by-law imposed an assessment for the cost of construction as ascertained after its execution; and (2) that a petition duly signed objecting to the performance of the work had been, within the proper time, delivered to the council. The motion to quash the by-law was dismissed by Gall, C.J., on the ground that it had been expressly validated by 54 Vict. c. 82, s. 14 (O.) While an appeal from the judgment was pending, 55 Vict. c. 90 (O.) was passed, s. 6 of which enacted that "nothing the property of the council of council of the council of council of the council of the council of the council of council of the council of council

By-law—Registration — Mode of Assessment.]—In constructing local improvements, a municipal corporation must either make an assessment of the probable cost, giving the ratepayers an opportunity of appealing, and then, if necessary, make a further assessment than the probable cost, giving the ratepayers an opportunity of appealing, and then, if necessary, make a further assessment same manner as the first, or they must defer the actual assessment until after the completion of the work, the ratepayers then having the right to appeal. They cannot proceed partly in one way and partly in another without giving any opportunity of appealing from a definite assessment. A municipal corporation, under the provisions of a general by-law respecting local improvements, determined to construct a sewer, and proceeded to assess the estimated cost on the property benefited. This assessment was confirmed by the court of revision. The council then passed a by-law authorizing the construction of the sewer to be proceeded with, and on its completion passed another by-law by which the actual content of the council of the sewer to be proceeded with, and on its completion passed another by-law is much greater than the assessed upon the property. The council and assessed upon the property. The council and could not be supported as a mere alteration of the estimated cost, or as a supplementary assessment. The provisions of a 351 of the Municipal Act, R. S. O. 1887 c. 184, are imperative and not merely directory, and if a local improvement tax. Re Farlinger and Morrisburg, 16 O. R. 722, distinguished. Succenty V. Town of Smith's Fall, 22 A. R. 429.

By-law—Directory Provision.]—The provision in R. S. O. 1897 c. 223, s. 685 (2), that it shall be sufficient to state in any by-law for borrowing money on the credit of a municipality, that the amount of the general debt of the municipality as therein set forth is exclusive of the local improvement debts secured by special Acts, rates, or assessments, is merely directory, and the omission to observe it is not fatal to a by-law otherwise valid on its face. Ward v. Town of Welland, 31 O. R. 303.

By-law—Division of Lots.]—Where under a local improvement by-law an nassessment is made of the lands benefited and chargeable with the cost of the improvement, and lands lawing a specified street frontage are thereafter charged with a specific amount of the cost of the improvement which is entered on the assessment and collectors' rolls, and such lands are subsequently subdivided, the whole rate cannot legally be charged against a portion of the lands so subdivided. The duty of the clerk of the municipality is to bracket on the roll the different subdivisions with the name of the persons assessed for each parcel and the annual sum charged against the original parcel as that for which the sub-lots and persons assessed for them are liable under the special rate. Capon v. City of Toronto, 25 O. R. 178.

Increase of Cost.]—The extension of a street was petitioned for as a local improvement by the requisit number of owners, and the content of the proposed of the purpose, the cost being estimated at $14,500, an assessment for that sum being adopted by the court of revision after notice to the persons interested. After some delay the council purchased the land required at a price much greater than the estimate, and passed a by-law levying over $36,000 for the work. No work was done on the ground and no notice of the second assessment was given:—Held, that an opportunity of contesting the second assessment should have been given, and that the by-law was invalid. Petman v. City of Toronto, 24 A. R. 53.

Mode of Assessment—County Court Judge—Prohibition.]—When a sewer is being constructed by a municipal corporation under the local improvement system, and land not fronting on the street in question is benefited as well as land fronting the theorem in the proper method of assessment is to determine what proportion of the cost the land fronting on the street shall bear, and what proportion the land not so fronting shall bear, and to assess the proportion payable by each class according to the total frontage of that class, and not according to the benefit received by the lots in that class inter se. Semble: Such an improvement and the assessment therefor must be carried out under the provisions of a special by-law, not under a general by-law passed pursuant to s. 607. Judgment below, 30 O. R. 158, affirmed. But held also, reversing that judgment, that after the county court Judge had, on appeal by an owner, given his decision, on a day subsequent to the argument, it was too late to obtain an order for prohibition against him. In re Robertson and City of Chatham, 20 A. R. 504

Repair of Streets—Double Tazation.]— By s. 14 of the Nova Scotia statute, 53 Vict. c. 60, the city council of Halifax was authorized to borrow money for paving the sidewalks of the city with concrete or other permanent material, one-half the cost to be a charge against the owners of the respective properties in front of which the work should be done and to be a first lien on such properties. A concrete sidewalk was laid, under authority of this statute, in front of L.'s property, and he refused to pay half the cost on the ground that his predecessor in title had in 1807, under the Act 24 Viet, c. 39, furnished the material to construct a briek side-walk in front of the same property and that it would be imposing a double tax on the property if he had to pay for the concrete side-walk as well. Held, that there was nothing dubious or uncertain in the Act under which the concrete side-walk was laid; that it authorized no exception in favour of property owners who had contributed to the cost of sidewalks laid under the Act of 1801; and that to be called upon to pay half the cost of a concrete sidewalk in 1891 would not be paying twice for the same thing, because in 1807 the property had contributed bricks to construct a sidewalk which, in 1891, had become worn out, useless, and dangerous. City of Halifax v. Litthope, 26 S. C. R. 336.

Sidewalks—Notice.]—Publication of an advertisement in a newspaper having a large circulation in the municipality stating that the corporation intend to construct sidewalks in certain named districts, is not sufficient notice to a property owner affected by the proposed work. The procedure to be observed in passing by-laws for the construction of a property of the construction of other construction of the construction of th

Special Act.]—Where a statute for the widening of a street directs that part of the cost shall be paid by the owners of property bordering on the street, the apportionment of the tax should be made upon a consideration of the enhancement in value accruing to such properties respectively and the rate levied in proportion to the special benefit each parcel has derived from the local improvement. Where an assessment roll covering over half a million dollars has been duly confirmed without objection on the part of a ratepayer that his property has been too highly assessed by a comparatively trivial amount, he cannot be permitted afterwards to urge that objection before the courts upon an application to have the assessment roll set aside. Judgment below, Q. R. 9 Q. B. 142, reversed; judgment of the superior court, Q. R. 15 S. C. 43, restored. *City of Montreal v. Belanger, 30 S. C. R. 574.

Special Agreement.]—A city municipality and a railway company and others entered into an agreement for the execution of certain work by the former, authorized by order in council under the Railway Act, the cost being apportioned between them, of which the railway company paid their share. The agreement provided that no party to it should be entitled to compensation for injury or damages to their lands by reason of the should be entitled to compensation for injury or damages to their lands by reason of the works, and the care to their lands by reason of the works are to the construction of a road towards and under the railway tracks. A portion of the roadway fronted on the lands of the railway company, and the city sought to charge the railway company with the cost of the construction of the roadway as a local improvement under the Consolidated Municipal Act, 1892, and passed a by-law for that purpose:—Held, that the work having been done under the agreement between the parties and the order in council, the local improvement clauses were not applicable and the by-law was void. In re Conadian Pacific R. W. Co. and City of Toronto. 23 A. R. 250.

Special Agreement.] — An agreement was entered into by the corporation of Toronto with a railway company and other property owners for the construction of a subway under the tracks of the company ordered by the Railway Committee of the Privy Council, the cost to be apportioned between the parties to the agreement. In connection with the work a roadway had to be nection with the work a readway had to be made, running east on King street to the limit of the subway, the street being lowered in front of the company's lands, which were, to some extent, cut off from abutting as before some extent, cut off from abutting as before on certain streets; a retaining wall was also found necessary. By the agreement the company abundoned all claims to damages for injury to its lands by construction of the works. The city passed a by-law assessing on the company its portion of the cost of the roadway as a local improvement, the greater part of the property so assessed being on the approach to the subway. Held, that to the extent to which the lands of the company were cut off from abutting on the street as before, the work was an injury and not a benefit to such lands, and therefore not within the clauses of the Municipal Act as to local improvements; that as to the length of the retaining wall the work was necessary for the construction of the subway and not assess-able; and that the greater part of the work, whether or not absolutely necessary for the construction of the subway, was done by the corporation under the advice of its engineer as the best mode of constructing a public work in the interest of the public, and not as a local improvement. Held, further, that as the by-law had to be quashed as to three-fourths of the work affected, it could not be maintained as to the residue which might retaining wall the work was necessary for the maintained as to the residue which might have been assessable as a local improvement if it had not been coupled with work not so assessable.—Notice to a property owner of assessment for local improvements under s. 622 of the Municipal Act cannot be proved 1322 of the Municipal Act cannot be proved by an affidavit that a notice in the usual form was mailed to the owner; the court must, upon view of the notice itself, decide whether or not it complied with the require-ments of the Act. In the result the judgment below, 23 A. R. 250, was affirmed. City of Toronto v, Canadian Pacific R. W. Co., 26 S. C. R. 682.

> IX. RECOVERY BACK OF TAXES, (See also Sub-Title I.)

Crown. — Held, that the Crown could not be prejudiced in its right to recover back taxes paid on land held on behalf of Her Majesty, by the mistake of the officer in charge in paying them. Principal Secretary of State for War v. City of London, 23 U. C. R. 476.

Excessive Rate—Voluntary Payment.]—
I a person overrated pay the overrate without remonstrance or compulsion, he cannot afterwards recover it back. Grantham v.
City of Toronto, 3 U. C. R. 212.

Invalid Assessment.]—Action to recover taxes paid under belief that assessment is valid. Bain v. City of Montreal, 8 S. C. R. Mistake as to Appeal. —The plaintiffs had for several years appealed to the court of revision, who had decided against them, and from thence to the county Judge, who had reduced the assessment one-third, on the ground that a large portion of their building was occupied by the courts. In 1894, the same assessment being repeated, they appealed to the court of revision, who said they would consult the city solicitor, and that the plaintiffs solicitor was told by the clerk of the court of revision that no judgment had been given, and found none in the book where their decisions were entered. The collector in October called upon the plaintiffs' secretary, who supposing all was right paid the sum assessed. The mistake having been discovered in the following year: —Held, that they might recover it back, for the court of revision not having determined the appeal, the roll, as regarded the plaintiffs, was not "finally passed," within s. 61 of C. S. U. C. c. 55, so as to bind them. Law Society of Upper Canada v. City of Toronto, 25 U. C. R. 199.

Payment after Seizure.]—When goods are seized, and money paid under protest to release them from seizure, an action will lie. Smith v. Shauc, S. L. J. 257.

Payment Misapplied—Second Payment under Protest.]—Where taxes were paid to the treasurer of the Home district on lands situated in the Ottawa district, for the purpose of their being transmitted to the treasurer of the Home district not having so transmitted the amount, the lands were duly advertised for sale, and the plaintiff, in order to save the lands, paid the taxes to the treasurer of the Ottawa district under protest:—Held, that he could not maintain an action for money had and received against him to recover them back. Baldwin v. Johnson, 2 U. C. R. 475.

Payment in Ignorance of Prior Sale.]—Land belonging to a trust estate having been sold for taxes, during the year allowed for redemption the trustees, who had been newly appointed, paid the taxes for the current year in ignorance of the sale, and subsequently on learning the fact decided not to redeem, as the arrears exceeded the value of the land:—Held, that they were not entitled to recover back the money as paid under a mistake of fact. Trust Corporation of Ontario v. City of Toronto, 30 O. R. 200.

Payment under Protest.]—Where lands were sold for taxes, and within a year the owner paid under protest to the county treasurer the sum required to redeem them, he having objected to the sale:—Held, that he could not recover this sum from the county as money had and received, for under s. 148 of C. S. U. C. c. 55, it was received, not for his use, but for that of the purchaser; and the nayment of redemption money, to deprive the purchaser of his rights, must be unqualified. Boulton v. United Counties of York and Peel, 25 U. C. R. 21.

Payment under Protest.]—Defendants having assessed certain lands as non-resident, the treasurer returned the same as in arrear and issued his warrant for their sale. The plaintiff, to avoid further expense, paid the taxes under protest. The lands were not patented, and not liable to be assessed:—Held, that the money having been paid under pressure and protest, the plaintiff was entitled to recover it back as money had and received. Street v. County of Simcoc, 12 C. P. 284, 2 E. & A. 211.

Payment without Prejudice.]—Certain lands were sold by the Crown to B. in 1853, which sale was cancelled in 1866, and the same lands sold to the plaintif, to whom the patent issued. The land, it was admitted, lad been legally assessed for certain taxes for 1863, 1864, and 1865. The plaintif, on application to the county treasurer, ascertained the amount due and paid it, stating that he did so under protest and without prejudice to his rights; but no demand had been made, nor any pressure exercised or threatened to compel such payment:—Held, that the money so paid could not be recovered back. Benjamin v. County of Elija, 26 t. C. R. 660.

Validating Act.]—The plaintiff paid certain taxes imposed by a by-law of a district council. This by-law was afterwards decided to be illegal in ejectment brought by this plaintiff to contest the validity of the sale of his land for these taxes, but it was not quashed by the court, because before the application was made for that purpose it had been repealed by the council who passed it. The plaintiff then brought this action for money had and received, &c., to recover back what he had paid. During this suit 16 Vict. c. 183 was passed, enacting that taxes imposed under certain by-laws, of which this was one, should be valid, &c. The action was held to be defeated by this statute, and it was unnecessary, therefore, to determine the point argued — whether money had and received would lie under the circumstances in which the payment was made. Metally, United Counties of Peterborough and Victoria, 12 U. C. R. 44.

Voluntary Payment.] — The plaintiff having remitted money through the county trensurer to pay taxes supposed to be due by him on unpatented lands in that county, on the terms stated in his letter (as shewn in the statement of case):—Held, that the circumstances created the trensurer the plaintiff's agent, and that the payment as made was a voluntary one with a full knowledge of the facts, and could not be recovered back. Strect v. County of Lambton, 12 C. P. 294.

X. SALE OF LAND.

1. Action to Set Aside or Enforce Sale.

Action to Obtain Conveyance—Pleading.]—In a declaration against a sheriff for not conveying lands sold under the assessment law, an averment that the sale took place on the 22nd July, IS30, and that "afterwards, and at the expiration of twelve calendar months from the time of such sale, to wit, on 22nd July, IS31, the plaintiff demanded a deed," was held sufficient on general denurrer:—Held, also, unnecessary to aver that there was no sufficient distress on the lands, or that a deed was tendered to the sheriff for execution. Spafford v. Sherwood, 3 O. S.

Administrator Ad Litem.]—The plaintiff was appointed under Rule 311 administrator ad litem of a deceased person's estate in a summary administration matter more than twelve months after the death:—Held, that he had no locus standl to maintain an action to set aside a tax sale of land belonging at the time of death to the estate of the deceased. Rodger v. Moran, 28 O. R. 275.

Costs.]—In a suit by the owner of land impeaching a tax sale deed as a cloud on title, the defendant disputed the right of plaintif, which was decided in his favour., The court ordered the defendant to pay the costs of the suit, notwithstanding the amount to which the defendant was found entitled as compensation for improvements was estimated at double the value of the land, and which the court ordered plaintiff to pay in the event of his preferring to take back the land rather than allow the defendant to retain it, paying its value. Aston v. Innex, 26 Gr. 42.

Ejectment by Tax Purchaser—Procedure by Owner.]—Where ejectment had been brought by the purchaser of lands alleged to have been illegally sold for taxes, the court declined to interfere by injunction to restrain the action. The proper course in such a case, in the event of the sale being found invalid, is for the owner to tender a deed to the purchaser for execution, and on his refusal to execute such a deed, to apply to the court for relief. Bamberger V. McKay 1, 5 Gr. 328.

Evidence—Treasurer's Books.]—In ejectment upon a sale for taxes, made under 16 Vict. c. 182:—Held, that the treasurer producing his official books, and shewing that the lands were charged with the taxes when the warrant issued, was sufficient proof of their being in arrear. Quere, whether the warrant alone would not suffice. Hall v. Hill, 22 U. C. R. 578.

Evidence—Treasurer's Books.]—It is not incumbent, under 33 Vict. c. 23 (O.), upon the tax purchaser, in order to bring himself within the protection of s. 1, in cases where he has paid eight years' taxes charged on the lands, to prove that the taxes so paid had been legally charged, but the production of the treasurer's books, shewing that such taxes had been charged and paid, is sufficient. Under that Act any person claiming under the tax purchaser may avail himself of the provisions of the Act. Fraser v. West, 21 C. P. 161.

Evidence — Treasurer's Books—Extract.]
—The extract from the treasurer's books, set out in this case, shewing credits against the taxes charged, required explanation, and was not sufficient proof of the taxes being unpaid. Kempt v. Parkyn, 28 C. P. 123.

Evidence—Treasurer's Books — Recitals.]
—In ejectment under a tax deed the plaintiff, to prove the taxes being in arrear, produced the treasurer's books containing such entry:—Held, sufficient primā facie evidence:—Held, also, that the recital in the tax deed, and the advertisement in the Gazette, were sufficient evidence of the amount of taxes due, but not of the warrant to sell. Hutchinson v. Collier, 27 C. P. 249.

Evidence.]—It was objected to a sale under 13 & 14 Vict. c. 67, that there was no proof of want of distress on the land, nor of the advertisement of sale; that the affidavit of the collector was insufficient: that the assessment was not proved; and that ss. 45 and 46 of the Act had not been compiled with; but these objections, upon the evidence set out in this case, were overruled. Street v. Fogul, 32 U. C. R. 119.

Evidence.]—Where a party relies on a tax set, it is not sufficient in equity, any more than at law, to produce the sheriff's deed. There must, among other things, be the proper legal evidence of the taxes having been in arrear for the necessary period; and such evidence is not dispensed with by 27 Vict. c, 19. Jones v. Bank of Upper Canada, 13 Gr. 74.

Evidence.]—A sale in 1880 of non-resident lands for taxes being inpeached on the ground of no taxes being due, the original non-resident collector's rolls for 1817, 1878, and 1879, were produced, shewing amounts in arrear for each year respectively, which with interest amounted to the sum for which the land was sold. The due preparation of the warrant to sell, and advertising in the Official Gazette, were also proved:—Held, sufficient proof of the taxes being due. Fitzgerald v. Wilson, 8 O. 18, 550, Evidence—Warrant for Sale.]—Where it is necessary to prove title under a deed given upon a sale of land for taxes, the production of the warrant directing the sale, issued by the treasurer to the sheriff, is sufficient evidence of the taxes having been in arrear for the periods therein mentioned. Clark v. Buchanan, 25 Gr. 550.

Imposing Terms. —Where the court is called upon to set aside a tax sale which is equally void at law and in equity, the court does so, if at all, only on such terms as are equitable. Paul v. Ferguson, 14 Gr. 230.

Jury's Findings of Sufficient Distress.]—Where the jury found that there was sufficient distress to satisfy the taxes, the court refused a new trial, although it might be doubtful whether much too high a value had not been put upon the distress. Duc d. Poucell v. Craig, 2 U. C. R. 464.

Jury's Finding.]—Held, that the jury, on the evidence set out in this case, were warranted in finding that there were no taxes in arrear for five years. Harbourn v. Boushey, 7 C. P. 462.

Parties to Action.]—To a suit by an owner to set aside a sale for taxes, the plaintiff offering to repay the purchase money, with interest, the corporation of the county municipality is not a necessary party. Smith v. Redford, 12 Gr. 316.

Parties to Action.]—The corporation of a local municipality is not a proper party to a bill impeaching a tax sale. Mills v. McKay, 14 Gr. 602.

Parties to Action.]—A municipal officer charged with irregularities in the performance of his duties, but not guilty of any fraud or intentional wrong, is an improper party to a bill to set aside a tax sale on the ground of such irregularities. Mills v. McKøy, 15 Gr.

Pending Action—Effect of New Act.]—An action of ejectment to try the validity of a tax title having been begun before 33 Vict. c. 23 (O.) was passed, the court, under s. 4, determined the objections taken to the sale, in order to settle the right to costs, as if the Act had not been passed. McAdie v. Corby, 30 U. C. R. 349.

Proof of Arrears.]—Defendant claimed under a sale for taxes, made in 1839, but the only proof that any taxes were imposed or in arrear was an extract from the treasurer's book, shewing that the taxes on the lot had been paid up to 1828;—Held, insufficient. Munro v. Grey, 12 U. C. R. 647.

Proof of Insufficient Distress.] — A sheriff's vendee bringing ejectment for land sold under 6 Geo. IV. c. 7, must prove that there was no sufficient distress on the premises to satisfy the arrears. Doe Bell v. Recumore, 3 O. S. 243; Doe d. McGillis v. McDonald, 1 U. C. R. 432.

Proof of Sufficient Distress.]—Proof that there were some few pieces of wood and timber that had been cut down by trespassers and left by them on the lot to be prepared for market:—Held, not sufficient evidence of distress. Doe d. Powell v. Rorison, 2 U. C. R. 201.

Proof of Warrant.]—Held, that s. 130 of 32 Vict. c. 36 (O.) does not dispense with proof of the warrant or cast the burden of negativing its existence on the objector to it. Hutchinson v. Collier, 27 C. P. 249.

Right of Purchaser from Owner to Attack Sale—Description.]—A parcel of land was described in the patent and in the books of the county treasurer as "the north part of lot number thirteen " * containing sixty acres of land, be the same more or less." The parcel contained in fact eighty-two acres. In 1808 there were sold for taxes fifty acres described thus:—"Commencing at the morth-east angle of said north part at the limit between said north part at the limit between said north part of lot number thirteen and lot number there are not considered to the control of the said north part of lot number there are not said north part of lot number there are not said north part of lot number there are not said north part of lot number there are not said north part of lot number there in regard to its length and breadth sufficient to make fifty acres of land." Then in 1871 there was sold for taxes a parcel described thus: "The whole of said southerly part of the north half of said lot number thirteen " * containing ten acres, and being part not sold for taxes in 1808:"—Held, that the sale of 1871 could not be limited to ten acres to be located by the court "in such manner as is best for the owner." but was, the taxes being properly chargeable against the whole of the unsold portion and could not, in consequence of the provisions of R. S. O. 1887 c. 193, s. 191, be attacked by the plaintiff, a purchaser from the owner after the time of the tax sale, who then had a mere right of entry. Application and effect of this section considered. Judgment below, 20 O. R. 351, reversed. Hyatt v. Mills, 19 A. R. 329.

Staying Action. —The Act 32 Vict. c. 35 (O.), staying actions impeaching sales for taxes, applies only to cases in which the validation of tax sale is called in question. If a plainting land by two titles, one only of which involves any question as to the validity of a tax sale, he may proceed as to the other branch of his case. Cameron v. Barnhardt, 2 Ch. Ch. 346.

Time for Action—New Statute.}—The sheriff's deed was given on the 19th May, 1866, and the action was not brought until the 13th January, 1871:—Held, that the plaintiff was not barred by 29 & 30 Vict. 53, s. 156, passed on the 15th August, 1866, which made valid all tax deeds before it, unless questioned within four years from their date; for that the effect of 32 Vict. c. 36, s. 155 (O.), passed on the 23rd January, 1869, was to give two years from the passing of that Act to all whose rights were not then barred. Booth v. Girdrocod, 32 U. C. R. 23.

Time for Action—Vew Statute.]—By the Assessment Act of 1866, owners had four years o impeach a tax deed. By an Act passed in 1889, all actions for that purpose were stayed until after the following session; and by another Act of the same session all previous Assessment Acts were repealed, amended, and consolidated, with a reservation of rights had or acquired under the repealed Acts. By one of the clauses of the amended Act the limit appointed for bringing actions was two years:—Held, that an owner who had less than two years of his four remaining when the Acts of 1869 were passed, had like others two years thereafter to bring his suit. Connor v. Metherson, 18 Gr. 607, 18 Gr. 607,

2. Certificate and Deed.

Assignee of Purchaser.]—The deed of land sold for taxes may be made by the sheriff to the assignee of the highest bidder. Doe d. Bell v. Orr., 5 O. S. 433.

Deed by Sheriff After Change in Law.)—On the 18th December, 1852, the sheriff, acting under 13 & 14 Vict. c. 67, sold a lot of land for taxes, but did not execute a conveyance therefor until the 9th January, 1856, after the passing of 16 Vict. c. 182, which repealed the first named Act:—Held, that the deed was invalid, as at the time it was executed the sheriff had not power to make a conveyance. McDougall v. McMillan, 25 C. P. 75.

Deed by Successor in Office.]—In ejectment defendant claimed through a sale under 6 Geo. IV, c. 7. The warrant relied on issued in 1837 to the then sheriff, M., who ceased to hold office in 1838; the return stated the sale to have been made in 1840; and M. executed the deed in 1841:—Held, clearly insufficient, for the sale and deed being made by a person out of office were primā facie unauthorized, and defendant proved no proceedings taken by M. which could be regarded as an inception of execution. If there had been such proof, quere, whether the law as to inception of execution or process applies equally to tax sales and to sales of land on judgments. McMillan v. McDonald, 26 U. C. R. 454.

Deed by Successor in Office.]—Semble, that a deed by the successor of the sheriff who made the sale, is good under 27 & 28 Vict. c. 28, s. 43. Bell v. McLean, 18 C. P. 416.

Description.]—Defendants claimed under two deeds from the sheriff, made upon different sales, one in 1841, the other in 1851, under a sale in 1846. One described the land as thirty acres of the lot, "to be measured according to the statute in that case made and provided," the other as "twenty-five acres" of the lot, giving no further description:— Held, that the first deed was sufficient, the second not. Fraser v. Mattice, 19 U. C. R. 159.

Description.]—" Eighty-nine acres of the south part of the east half of lot number twenty-five in the second concession of the township of Charlottenburg."—Held, insufficient, under 13 & 14 Vict. c. 67, as containing no statement of houndaries. McDonell v. McDonell, 24 U. C. R. 74.

Description.]—A description in the sheriff's deed of land sold under 6 Geo. IV. c. 7, "twenty-five acres of lot 31 in the 12th concession of the township of King:"—Held, insufficient. Cayley v. Foster, 25 U. C. R. 405.

Description.]—"75 acres of the front part of the west half of lot number five in the 1st concession of the township of Winchester:"—Held, sufficient, under 7 Will. IV. c. 19. Fraser v. West, 21 C. P. 161.

Description.]—Where a sheriff sold 185 acres out of 200 for taxes, and gave a certificate merely describing the land sold as the west part of the lot, comprising 185 acres, and no further intimation was given by the sheriff of the portion of the lot he was to convey until the deed was executed, the sale was held invalid. Knaggs v. Ledyard, 12 Gr. 320, 32 U. C. R. 30 (n).

Description.]—Land sold for taxes under C. S. U. C. c. 55, was described in the assessment roll, advertisements, and treasurer's warrant, as the south part of the west half of lot 17 in the 9th concession of Rawdon. 75 acres, and in the sheriff's deed by metes and bounds:—Held, that according to Knagss v. Ledyard, 12 Gr. 320, and McDonell v. McDonald, 24 U. C. R. 74, such description was insufficient:—Semble, such a defect would not be cured by 27 Vict. c. 19, s. 4, or by 29 & 30 Vict. c. 53, s. 166, or 32 Vict. c. 36, s. 155 (O.) Booth v. Girdwood, 32 U. C. R. 23.

Description.]—A certificate given for a portion of a lot sold for taxes on the 12th November, 1867, under 29 & 39 Vict. c. 53, stated it to be the "one-twenty-seventh part," without further describing it. The deed given on the 19th April, 1871, described the land by metes and bounds:—Held, that the deed was void. Williams v. McColl, 23 C. P. 189.

Description.]—In a tax deed by the sheriff in 1859 the land was described as follows: "The easterly fourteen acres of the westerly ninety acres of the north half of lot No. 2 in the 10th concession of the said township of Innisfil, butted and bounded as follows, that is to say; commencing at the northeast angle of the said ninety acres, then southerly along the eastern limit of the said ninety acres and always parallel to the western limit of the said lot, to the centre of the said centre of the said concession; thence westerly, along the said centre of the said fourteen acres; then northerly on a line parallel to the said western limit of said lot, to the northern limit thereof; then easterly along the said northern limit to the place of beginning, containing the said fourteen acres: "—Held, a sufficient description. Knaggs v. Ledyard, 12 Gr. 320, and Fraser v. West, 21 C. P. 161, distinguished. Austin v. Armstrong, 28 C. P. 47.

Description.] — Where there were two lots on a street with the same number, one on the south side and one on the north side, and neither the assessment nor the sheriff's deed on a tax sale thereof distinguished the one from the other, the sale was held void for meetrainty. Lount v. Walkington, 15 Gr. 202.

Description.]—A sheriff's deed for "about fifteen acres, more or less, being the whole of a block or piece of land adjacent to the Grand Trunk Railway, being a part of lot number twenty-seven in the first concession of South Easthope, now in the town of Stratford!"—Held, insufficient, under C. S. U. C. c. 55, and the deed void. Davidson v. Kiety, 18 Gr. 490.

Description.]—Held, that the words "be the same more or less," following the description of the quantity of land, improperly inserted in the sheriff's deed, might be rejected as surplusage. Nelles v. White, 29 Gr. 338.

Description.]—A sheriff's deed of lands sold at a tax sale described them as "forty-five acres of the south half of lot 17 in the 4th concession" of King; not 17 in the 4th concession of King; and exception and exception of the same forty-five acres sold for taxes; "—Held, that have a subsequent release of bands purchased at the tax subsequent release of bands purchased at the tax sale by the sheriff's vende to 8. had sufficient to operate upon and was reflectual as a release. Pearson v, Mukholland, 17. O. R. 502.

Effect of Certificate Before Deed.]—
Under the sheriff's certificate the purchaser is entitled to possession of the land sold for taxes; and being in part possession he can avail himself of such certificate as a defence to ejectment by the owner, even though he has not received a deed, or a valid deed, from the sheriff; and semble, he could maintain ejectment on such certificate against any one in possession under the former owner. Cotter v. Satherland, Stevens v. Jacques, 18 C. P. 351.

It is competent for the purchaser to set up a defence under the sheriff's certificate given at the time of sale, notwithstanding he has given it up on receiving the invalid conveyance. Ib.

Effect of Deed.]—Quare, as to the effect of a conveyance under 16 Vict. c. 182. Harbourn v. Boushey, 7 C. P. 464.

Sar. or in Sheriff's Certificate of Sale. —A sheriff's certificate of sale for taxes is made for the purpose of giving the purchaser certain rights, in order to the protection of the property, until it is redeemed or becomes his absolutely, and forms no part of his title. The description in it being defective does not invalidate the sheriff's deed, nor, semble, would its absence. Nelles v. White, 29 Gr. 338.

See S. C., sub nom. White v. Nelles, 11 S. C. R. 587.

Officers to Execute.]—The proper officers to execute the deed of land sold for taxes are the warden and treasurer at the time the deed is demanded, not the persons holding those offices at the time of the sale. Ferguson v. Freeman, 27 Gr. 211.

Repeal of Act.]—Certain land was sold for taxes in 1839, under 6 Geo. IV. c. 7, but owing to the loss of the certificate no deed was made by the sheriff until 1803. 13 & 14 Vict. c. 66, which was passed on the 10th August, 1850, and came into force on the 1st January, 1851, repealed 6 Geo. IV. c. 7, except so far as it might affect any taxes which had accrued and were due, or any remedy for the enforcement or recovery of the same:—Held, that this exception did not continue the power of the sheriff to convey, and therefore that nothing passed by his deed. Bryant v. Hill, 23 U. C. R. 96. Followed in Cotter v. Satherland, Stevens v. Jacques, 18 C. P. 357.

Repeal of Act.]—13 & 14 Vict. c. 67 allows three years for redemption before the sheriff can convey. It was repealed by 16 Vict. c. 182, which came into force on the Ist January, 1854, except in so far as it might affect. "any rates or taxes of the present year." 1853, "or any rates or taxes which have accrued and are actually due, or any remedy for the enforcement or recovery of such rates or taxes not otherwise provided for by this Act." The plaintiff purchased under 13 & 14 Vict. c. 67, in 1852; so that he was not entitled to a conveyance until the Act had been repealed:—Held, that as the exception in the repealing clause gave no power to complete inchoate proceedings, the sheriff could not convey, although such a result was clearly not intended. McDonald v. McDonald, 24 U. C. R. 424.

Time for Giving Deed, | — Held, that 3 Vict. c. 36 does not limit the period, within which a sheriff's deed for a sale for taxes may be given, to two years from the date of sale. Hamilton v. McDonaid, 22 U. C. R. 136, followed on other points. Weegan v. McDiarmid, 12 C. P. 499.

Two Descriptions — Lot Bounded by River, 1—The lot in question, fronting to the River, 1—The behavior, fronting to the River, 1—The shounded on the south by the River Thames. The sheriff, while 6 Geo, 1V. c. 7, was in force, sold 120 acres of the lot for taxes, and in his deed first gave a description by metes and bounds, which was not in accordance with the statute, and then added a general description of the land, as being 120 acres measured in the manner prescribed by the Act:—Held, that the latter description must govern:—Held, also, that according to the statute the rear line of the tract should correspond with the rear line of the whole lot, following the windings of the river. Meaning we will be the statute of the whole lot, following the windings of the river. Meaning we great Western R. W. Co., 17 U. C. R. 118.

 Conduct of Sale and Persons Entitled to Buy.

Agreements Between Purchasers.]— Agreements between intending purchasers at sheriff's sale. See Keefer v. Roaf, 8 O. R. 69. Bidders Acting Unfairly.] — Quare, whether a sheriff is justified in proceeding with a sale, when the audience evinces a determination to purchase nothing but entire lots, or act in any other way inconsistent with a proper sale. Scholfield v. Dickenson, 10 Gr. 224.

Lessee Purchasing.]—Purchase at tax sale by lessee during tenancy. See Heyden v. Castle, 15 O. R. 257.

Mayor.]—Semble, the mayor of a town or city cannot purchase at a tax sale of lands in his municipality. Greenstreet v. Paris, 21 Gr. 229.

Mortgagee Purchasing.]—It appearing on the evidence, though not mentioned in the pleadings, that the purchaser for taxes was a mortgage of the property:—Held, in dismissing a bill to set aside the purchase for undue practices at the sale, that it was unnecessary to reserve liberty to file a bill impeaching the sale on the ground that he was disqualified as mortgage to purchase for his own benefit. Scholfield v. Dickenson, 10 Gr. 294

Mortgagee Purchasing.]-Property subject to a mortgage, having been allowed to run into arrear for taxes, was offered for sale under the wild land assessment law, when the mortgagee purchased and obtained the deed from the sheriff. The mortgagee afterwards sued the mortgagor for the mortgage money and interest, whereupon the mortgagor filed a bill to restrain the action, asserting that the sale discharged him from the mortgage debt. The court refused the application, the effect of such purchase by the mortgagee being greater than a decree for foreclosure; where, if after a final decree the mortgagee proceeds to enforce payment of mortgage money, it will open up the foreclosure; and semble, that after such a sale the mortgagor might have treated the mortgagee as liable to be redeemed, and have filed his bill for that purpose. Smart v. Cottle, 10 Gr. 59.

Mortgagee Purchasing.]—Although a mortgagee may as well as a stranger purchase lands of which he is mortgagee, still, if he purchase as mortgagee, and make his interest in the land a ground for being allowed to purchase, he cannot set up his title thus obtained against the mortgagor's right to redeem. Kelly v. Macklem, 14 Gr. 29.

Land having been sold for taxes, a party interested therein as mortgagee applied to the vendee of the sheriff to be allowed to purchase, on the ground of his having an interest in the land, and was permitted to do so, his only interest in the land being as mortgagee: —Held, that the purchaser could not afterwards set up his title in opposition to the mortgagor's claim to redeem. IB.

Owner Purchasing.] — The party assessed may become the purchaser of the land sold for taxes. Stewart v. Taggart, 22 C. P. 284.

Part of Lot Offered.]—Where less than the whole lot is sold, the sheriff should designate in some way the portion sold or offered for sale, so that bidders may know what portion they are bidding for. Knaggs v. Ledyard, 12 Gr. 320, 32 U. C. R. 30 (n.)

Part of Lot—Treasurer's Duty of Selection.] — At a sale of land for taxes, the treasurer is bound under R. S. O. 1877 c. 180, s. 137, if he sells any particular part of a lot, to sell in preference such part as he may consider best for the owner to sell first, and s. 129 does not relieve him from this duty; and for such purpose he must obtain the necessary information to enable him to arrive at a sound judgment thereon. Section 129 applies to the duty of the treasurer before the sale; s. 138 to his duty at and after the sale, and before he grants his certificate. History of the provisions of these sections traced. Haisley v. Somers, 15 O. R. 275.

Semble, it is sufficient to sell so much of a lot as may be necessary to secure the payment of the taxes due, and the particular part need not be determined until the certificate is given to the purchaser. Ib.

Where the treasurer, before he granted his certificate, knew that there was a house upon the lot, and although within a few minutes walk of his office, did not take the trouble to ascertain on what part of the lot the house was situated, but gave his certificate describing the part sold so as to include the greater part of the house:—Held, affirming on this point, 13 O. R. 600, that the sale not having been fairly conducted was invalid. Ib.

Purchaser Inducing Others not to Bid — Forum.] — Defendants claimed title through one W. McC., who claimed under a sale for taxes. On the trial it was proced that W. McC. claimed the lot is question at the sale for taxes: and alleging that his title was imperfect, he asked the audience not to bid against him, which request they complied with and he became the purchaser thereof for £4 or £5. The jury found that McC.'s statement was false, and in consequence he purchased without competition:—Held, that the sheriff having duly conveyed the land to McC., the legal estate thereby passed, and if it was sought to impeach the sheriff's deed for fraud, the case must be taken into equity, where complete justice could be done to all parties concerned. Raynes v. Croade, 14 C. 2.111

Purchaser Inducing Others not to Bid—Sciling Officer Interested.]—The lot was first put up on the 10th April. 1839, when one M. offered to take 29 acres for the sum to be levied, but afterwards he refused to carry out the purchase; and the sheriff in July following put up the whole lot, 200 acres, which M. then purchased for the same sum, stafing at the sale that he had already acquired a title to the land, which he wished to have confirmed, and requesting the bystanders not to bid against him. This title came by deed from the treasurer, who had purchased from a person assuming to be heir of the patentee, but who was not in fact his heir; and M. had given back a mortgage to the treasurer to secure part of the purchase money.—Held, that the second sale of the whole lot was illegal, being unauthorized by the statutes, and improperly conducted. Semble, that the treasurer's connection with the land could not avoid the sale, he not having been in fact the purchaser. Todd v. Werry, 15 U. C. R. 614.

Purchaser Inducing Others not to Bid-Illegal Adjournment.]—The sheriff at a tax sale, on the 26th December, 1855, notified the purchasers that if they did not pay in two or three weeks he would sell the land again. Defendant having purchased portions of certain lots did not pay, and the lots were put up again as whole lots, not by Defendant then asked those present not to bid, as he had a title to the lots bid off by him at the first sale, which he wished to perfect. Accordingly no one bid against him, and he obtained the lots. What his title was did not appear. Semble, that the sale under such circumstances could not be supported; but no opinion was given on this supported: but no opinion was given on this point, as the plaintiff might, under Raynes v. Crowder, 14 C. P. 111, be compelled to go into chancery for relief on such a ground. McAdie v. Corby, 30 U. C. R. 349.

It was objected also that the land was sold for taxes which had accrued for more than twenty years, and that the sale was adjourned illegally, though a large number of bidders were present. Semble, that these objections could not be supported. Ib.

Reeve Purchasing.]—A reeve of the township in which the land sold for taxes is situate, is not disqualified, ex officio, from purchasing. Totten v. Truax, 16 O. R. 490.

Selling Officer's Ignorance of Value.] —A sheriff can and should ascertain, to a certain extent, the value of land sold for taxes. He cannot be heard to say that he cannot tell whether it is worth £2 12s., or £500. Henry v. Burness, 8 Gr. 345.

Selling Officer's Ignorance of Value.] The sheriff not having made himself acquainted with the land, was unable to correct an erroneous impression among the audience as to the value of a lot, in consequence of which property worth £400 was sold as if doubtfully worth $20:—Held, that such omission of duty by the sheriff was not a sufficient ground to disturb the sale to an innocent purchaser. Logie v. Stayner, 10

Selling Officer not Protectin Owner's Interests—Costs.]—The sheriff Protecting is to sell such portions of the lands offered as he may consider most for the advantage of the owners. Where, therefore, a sheriff so neglected his duty that very valuable lots of land were knocked down for trifling amounts of taxes, in pursuance of an agreement to that effect amongst the bidders, some of which lands were purchased by ballifs in his employ, and with his know-ledge, the court in dismissing the bill filed to set aside one of the sales to the balliff, as against the sheriff, refused him his costs. It is not sufficient that the sheriff does not participate in such arrangements for his own benefit. Massingberd v. Montague, 9 Gr. 92.

Stifling Competition. 1-By an arrangement between several of the parties bidding at the sale, it was agreed that each should be allowed to bid off a whole lot for the taxes due apon it; and others, not parties to this agreement, and others, not parties to this agreement, were prevented from bidding, by reducing the quantity to such a trifle as to reducing the quantity to such a trifle as to equitous said to be worth 4500, was thus bid off for £2 12s. The court set aside the bid off for £2 12s. The court set aside the purchaser was not a party to the complete processes and the purchaser was not a party to the complete processes and the purchaser was not a party to the complete processes and the purchaser was not a party to the complete processes and the purchaser was not a party to the complete processes and the purchaser was not a party to the complete processes and the purchaser was not a party to the complete processes and the purchaser was not a party to the complete processes and the purchaser was not a party to the complete processes and the purchaser was not a party to the complete processes and the purchaser was not processed by the purchaser. bination complained of. Henry v. Burness, 8 Gr. 345.

Stifling Competition-Costs.] - Where at the sale a lot of land was sold at a trifling amount, as compared with its value, by reason of a combination among some of the persons attending the sale to prevent competition; and although it was not shewn that the purchaser was any party to such combination, still he so acted as to prevent competition, the court in setting aside such sale ordered the purchaser to pay the costs of the suit; and the sheriff having been joined as a defendant, was, under the circumstances, the fused his costs. Davis v. Clark, 8 Gr. 358.

Stifling Competition.]-A., one of the sheriff's officers, conducted the sale, at which he knocked down without any competition to another officer of the sheriff a lot worth about £350, for less than £7 10s., which lot was subsequently, with the assent of the sheriff, entered in the sales book in the name of A. to enable the person to whom it had been knocked down to cheat his creditors. Upon a bill filed to set aside the sheriff's deed, it was shewn that by arrangement amongst the persons attending the sale it was understood a lot should be knocked down to each in turn, in pursuance of which the sale in question was effected. The court set aside the sale with costs as against the person to whom the conveyance was made. Massingberd v. Montague, 9 Gr. 92.

Stifling Competition - Undervalue.]-Twenty-four acres, worth £7 10s. an acre, were sold in 1859 for £5 1s. 9d., and purchased by one of the bailiffs in the employ of a former sheriff. Although there was no direct evidence of combination amongst the audience to prevent competition, still their conduct was such as to lead to that opinion. conduct was such as to lead to that which conduct was such as to lead to the following Massingberd v. Montague, 9 Gr. 92, and Henry v. Burness, 8 Gr. 345, set the sale aside upon payment of the amount which would have been required to redeem the land within the year, and interest since that time; or the amount might be applied in part payment of the amount due upon a mortgage created on the land by the purchaser at the sale for taxes. Templeton v. Lovell, 10 Gr. 214.

Stifling Competition. —Where at the sale practices were indulged in by the audience which checked fair and free competition, and the lands were sacrificed, the court, in the absence of any direct proof of combination, granted relief to the owner by setting aside the sale. Logic v. Young, 10 Gr. 217.

Stifling Competition.] - The cases where sales have been set aside for intimidation, or other undue practices preventing fair competition, approved of and con-curred in. Scholfield v. Dickenson, 10 Gr.

Stifling Competition.]—Semble, it is the duty of the sheriff, when he sees the intention of the legislature thwarted by improper practices indulged in by the audience, to declare to those guilty of them that he will not continue the sale, but will postpone it until a fair sale can be effected. Henry v. Burness, 8 Gr. 345; Logie v. Young, 10 Gr. 217.

Stifling Competition.]—Held, that it would not be inferred that a sale which took place in November, was necessarily affected by practices of the audience to prevent competition, which had been carried on at the sale in October preceding, and from which this sale in November was adjourned. Logie v. Stupner, 10 Gr. 222.

Township Clerk Purchasing.] — The purchase under a tax sale by the township clerk, is a voidable transaction. Beckett v. Johnson, 32 C. P. 301.

Treasurer's Duty.]—The duty of the county treasurer in reference to tax sales observed upon. Hall v. Hall, 2 E. & A. 569, and Haisley v. Somers, 13 O. R. 600, considered, Hall v, Farquharson, 15 A. R. 457.

Treasurer Purchasing.] — The county treasurer is not at liberty to become a purchaser. In re Cameron, 14 Gr. 612.

Treasurer Purchasing. — A purchase of land at a tax sale was made, nominally, by one G for the plaintiff, but was in reality made with the money and for the benefit of the plaintiff's husband, the treasurer of the county, who conducted the sale :—Held, in an action of trespass, that the treasurer's position absolutely debarred him from becoming a purchaser at the sale, and the sale and conveyance to the plaintiff were void; and as the land remained in the hands of the persons guilty of the original frand, the sale was not cured by the provisions of R. S. O. 1887 c. 193, s. 189, although it took place in 1883, and the action was not brought till 1889, Mooney v. Smith, 17 O. R. 644.

Undervalue, 1—Quære, whether a sheriff oto be sold in the first instance, where the value is greatly unproportioned to the taxes due, without adjourning the sale, or taking some steps to protect the interests of the owner. Scholfield v. Dickenson, 19 Gr. 226.

Undervalue.]—It is competent to sell the whole of a lot for taxes, and the court will not presume against a sale on the supposition that too much land was sold for a small amount. Cotter v. Sutherland, 18 C. P. 357.

Undervalue, |—The parchase money was $1, although the value of the land with the improvements was about $1,000, no inquiry having been made as to its value, and the township officials having apparently taken no pains to acquire any information about it beyond what appeared on the assessment roll. Semble, that the sale would be void as not having been under the circumstances openly and fairly conducted within the meaning of s. 155 of R. S. O. 1877 c. 180. Halt v. Farquhareson, 15 A. R. 457.

Untrue Representations. — Where a person, in order to purchase lands at the sheriff's sale, consented to representations which he knew to be untrue, and which prevented competition, and so was enabled to purchase at less than the value, the sale was declared void. Fop v. Merrick, 8 Gr. 323.

4. Objections to Validity of Sale.

(a) Assessment Invalid.

Description Void in Part.]—On a tax sale certain land assessed for taxes was described in the assessment as the north part of a certain lot containing 20 acres; and the certificate and deed were of the same piece:— Held, that this description included the most northerly thirty acres only, and that it and no other part was affected by the assessment. Of the thirty acres so assessed it appeared that portions thereof were vested in the Crown, in other owners, and occupied as gravel roads: —Held, that the assessment was void as to such portions; and being void as to part was void as to the whole; and that the deed made in pursuance thereof was void also. Ley v. Wright, 27 C. P. 522.

Effect of Issue of Patent.]—When, owing to land being patented in July, taxes are charged thereon only for half a year, yet that is in effect a taxation for the whole of the fiscal year, and so long as the patent issues before the assessment is completed, taxes for the whole of the year wherein such patent issues may be properly imposed, and the lands sold therefor if unpaid. Cotter v. Sutherland, 18 C. P. 357.

Improper Assessment,1—Held, that the district council had no power to impose a tax for repairing the roads and bridges generally, nor to confine such tax to unoccupied lands only, nor to impose a tax of so much per acre, instead of so much in the pound on the assessed value. The land having been sold for arrears accrued under the statute:—Held, that the sale was void. Quare, whether the district council could direct land to be sold for payment of taxes imposed not by the provincial statute, but by their by-Jaw. Doe d. McGill v. Lanaton, 9 ft. C. R. 32. Followed in Williams v. Taylor, 13 C. P. 219.

Improper Assessment.]—In a suit commenced by a bill in the court of chancery, asking for an account of damages sustained by certain trespasses alleged to have been committed by the defendant, for an injunction, and for possession, the principal question raised was whether a sale of the land for taxes, which took place on the 1st March, 1836, through and under which the plaintiff claimed title, was valid:—Held, that there was no evidence to shew that the land sold had been properly assessed, and, therefore, the sale of the land in question was invalid. McKay v. Cryster, 3 S. C. R. 436.

Insufficient Description — Assessment En Bloc Instead of According to Registered Plan.]—An assessment of lots as "Water Lots 436 x 600" is invalid as not identifying them. An assessment of lots en bloc after they have been subdivided by registered plan, and without shewing the known owner against whom particular parcels are assessable, is invalid as disregarding the essential requirements of R. S. O. 1887 c. 224, s. 13. The requirements of R. S. O. 1887 c. 224, s. 147, 152-5, inclusive, as to the duties of the collector, treasurer, clerk, and assessor, with reference to the list of lands liable to be sold, were held not to have been complied with in this case; and the defects were held not to have been complied with in this case; and the defects were held not to have been complied with in this case; and the defects were held not to have been complied with in this case; and the defects were held not to have been complied with in this case; and the defects were held not to have been complied with in this case; and the defects were held not to have been complied with in this case; and the defects were held not to have been complied with in this case; and the defects were held not to have been complied with in this case; and the defects were held not to have been complied with in this case; and the defects were held not to have been complied with in this case; and the defects were held not to have been complied to the control of the control could be sold for taxes due prior to 1st January, 1853. Jarvis v. Brooke, 11 U. C. R.

Non-Resident Land.]—Held, that under 13 & 14 Vict. c. 67, non-resident lands

Occupied Land.]—Under C. S. U. C. c. 55, the chamberlain and high bailiff in cities had power to sell the lands only of non-residents for arrears of taxes. A sale in 1865 of land belonging and assessed to a resident, was therefore held invalid. McKay v. Bamberger, 30 U. C. R. 95.

Occupied Land.]—Held, that under the facts stated in this case, the land was improperly assessed for the year 1858, as non-resident, being occupied, and that the sale being therefore for more than was due was entirely void. Allan v. Fisher, 13 C. P. 63.

Occupied Land.]—Under 13 & 14 Vict. c. 67. land was sold in 1852 for taxes of several years, including 1851, for which year the collector's roll had been returned to the treasurer, with his affidavit that the reason for not collecting the amount was that the land was non-resident. It was proved clearly, however, that from the 6th February, 1851, until long after the sale, the land had been occupied by defendant's father, who lived upon it with his family:—Held, that the sale was illegal. Street v. Fogul, 32 U. C. R. 119.

Occupied Land.]—An erroneous assessment of land as non-resident or unoccupied, is not a ground for impeaching a sale for taxes. The plaintiff purchased a lot in 1870, in which year and the preceding the lot had been returned as non-resident and unoccupied, though occupied by a tenant of the then owner. The plaintiff, however, made no inquiry or search as to taxes, but in succeeding years regularly paid them. In fact the taxes for 1869 and 1870 had not been paid, and the land was in due course sold for such arrears:—Held, following Bank of Toronto v. Fanning, 18 G. R. 391, that the sale was binding on the owner; and a bill filed after the expiration of a year from the time of sale to set it aside was dismissed with costs, although the court considered the case one of great hardship upon the plaintiff. Silverthorne v. Campbell, 24 Gr. 17.

Unpatented Land.]—Where the Crown land commissioner had erroneously returned certain lands to the municipal officers as patented, whereas, although a patent had been prepared, it had never been intended to be operative, nor been delivered to the grantee, B., who had paid only part of the purchase money, and the lands were afterwards sold for taxes:—Held, the tax sales were of no validity as against M., to whom a patent was subsequently issued. O'Grady v. McClaffray, 2 O. R. 309.

2 O. R. 309 Since 16 Vict. c. 182, s. 56, a tax sale of unpatented land conveys to a purchaser only such rights in respect of the land as the original locatee enjoyed. Ib.

(b) Procedure Invalid or Irregular.

Advertising.]—A defendant claiming under a sale for taxes under 6 Geo. IV. c. 7, need not shew that all the necessary formalities were attended to, such as advertising, &c. Doe d. Bell v. Orr, 5 O. S. 433.

Advertising.] — Held, under 13 & 14 Vict. c. 67, that a sale would not be invalid for want of due advertisement thereof in a newspaper published in the county where the lands are situated, as required by s. 50. Jarvis v. Brooke, 11 U. C. R. 299. But see Hall v. Hull, 22 U. C. R. 578, 2 E. & A. 569.

Advertising.]—Where a tax sale was advertised in the Canada Gazete for thirteen successive weeks before sale, but such thirteen weeks did not amount to three calendar months from the date of the first publication, it was held that the irregularity did not invalidate the sale. Connor v. Douglas, 15 Gr. 456. Followed in McLauchlin v. Pyper, 29 U. C. R. 526.

Advertising.]—Semble, that the advertisement of a sale made in 1855 was bad for not specifying whether the lands were patented or held under a lease or license of occupation. McAdie v. Corby, 30 U. C. R. 340

Alternative Description.]—A designation in the treasurer's list furnished under 32 Vict. c. 36, as "the N. or W. ½ 14:"—Held, sufficient. Stewart v. Taggart, 22 C. P. 284.

Amount of Arrears.)—The county council, by hy-law passed in June, 1866, directed the treasurer to collect all taxes on lands where the same were in arrear and unpaid on the 1st May, 1861—Held, that under this he should have sold-for the arrears due up to 1865. Thompson v. Colcock, 23 C. P. 505.

Arrears at Time of Previous Sale.]—
By 3 Vict. c. 45, certain sales for taxes made in June, 1839, were confirmed, and under the provisions of that Act the sheriff in 1842 conveyed to the plaintiff:—Held, that under the circumstances set out in the case there were in fact eight years taxes in arrear at the time of sale in June, 1839, for the warrant issued in 1829 for a previous sale was for taxes only up to the 1st July, 1828, though it might properly have been for another year in addition. Hamilton v. Me-Donald, 22 U. C. R. 136.

Assessment Including Too Much Land, I—The assessment of four lots, containing about 400 acres, in the name of the plaintiff, embraced seven acres already sold and separately assessed, of which fact the assessor was aware. The defendant purchased at a sale for taxes, and the plaintiff instituted proceedings impeaching the sale within two years thereafter:—Held, that the assessment was illegal, and vitinted the sale. Fleming v. McNabb, 8 A. R. 656.

Clerical Mistake in Acreage — Occupied Land assessed as Non-resident.]—
In the year 1875, a lot of land containing 200 acres and patented as one lot was assessed on the resident roll as lot 114, 200 acres, value $1,000. From 1876 to 1878 it was similarly assessed, lin 1879 it was also so assessed, except that the quantity of land was stated to be 100 instead of 200 acres. The whole 200 acres was occupied by a tenant who duly paid the taxes for each year including 1879. On the non-resident roll for 1879, the east half of the lot appeared assessed as 100 acres, value $800. By reason thereof it was returned to the county treasurer as in arrear for the taxes of 1879, and a sale thereof made:—Held, that the assessment on the resident roll for 1879 was of the whole lot upon which the taxes were paid, the mistake in stating the quantity of land to be 100 acres, not making such assessment less an assessment of the whole lot, while the error of putting the east half on the non-resident roll could not affect the owner's right to the land. Jeffery v. Heucis, 9 O. R. 364.

Collector's Neglect to Obtain Address.]-Held, that the neglect of the dress.]—Held, that the neglect of the collector to inquire with sufficient care for the address of the party assessed on his roll, order to transmit a statement by post under s. 41 of 16 Vict. c. 182, did not invalidate a sale of land made for non-payment of those taxes. Allan v. Fisher, 13 C. P. 63.

Collector's Return Delayed.]-Held, no objection to a sale that the collector was bound by the Act to make his return on the 14th December, but delayed till the 8th April following, for that it was a matter between him and the municipal council, which could not prejudice the title; and as they received the return without objection, it might be assumed that they had appointed the 8th April to make it on. McDonell v. McDonald, 24 U. C. R. 74.

Confusion of Lots.]-Where there were two lots on a particular street with the same number, one on the south side and one on the north side, and neither the assessment nor the sheriff's deed on a tax sale thereof distinguished the one from the other, the sale was held void for the uncertainty. Lount v. Walkington, 15 Gr. 332.

Confusion of Lots.]—Ejectment for village lot 4, south side of Catharine street, village of Ingersoll, part of lot 10 in broken front concession of N. Oxford. Defendant claimed through a sheriff's sale for taxes. It appeared that the village comprised parts of two townships, called N. and W. Oxford; of W. Oxford it contained a park lot 4 which was sale visibled time tillage love. which was sub-divided into village lots 4. which was sub-divided into village lots after the year 1854. The treasurer's warrant dated in June, 1860, contained two village lots 4 south of Catharine street, one being stated as in arrear for 1854 only, the other 1844-5 and 1858. The sheriff sold both to different purchasers, and conveyed the one distribution. In dispute to the purchaser as being the one charged with three years' taxes. Under the facts set out in the case, it was held that the warrant and evidence did not sufficiently define this lot as the one on which the three years' taxes were in arrear, or prove such arrears, and that the sale was bad. Town-send v. Elliott, 11 C. P. 217.

Confusion of Parcels — Different Owners.]—A. and H. were the respective owners of the north and centre parts of a certain lot, which were both occupied by H. un-id the year 1871, when the buildings were burned, and H. went out of possession. He subsequently paid the taxes up to 1873, when he left the neighbourhood, and did not return until 1883, and then found his part and that of A. had been sold for taxes, but he had received no notice of any taxes being m arrear. In an action by H. and his wife, who had subsequently acquired his title, it appeared that both pieces had been assessed separately in 1872, together in 1873, were not assessed at all in 1874, were assessed together as the "north-half of lot 13, one-tenth of an acre," in 1875, together as the "north part of lot 13" in 1876, in one parcel as "north part 13" in 1877, and that they had been sold for the taxes due on both parcels down to 1877, and for those on the north piece for 1878:—Held, that the tax sale was invalid and could not be sustained, and that the plaintiffs were entitled to recover possession. Hill v. Macaulay, 6 O. R. 251.

Copy of Collector's Roll not Furnished.]—The omission of a township treasurer to comply with s. 49 of 16 Vict. c. 182, by furnishing the county treasurer with a correct copy of the collector's roll, was not sufficient to invalidate a sale for taxes, which was properly conducted by him. Allan v. Fisher, 13 C. P. 63.

Delay in Paying Purchase Money.]-Held, that the fact that the purchase money was not paid for a week or two after the sale did not invalidate the sale. Haisley v. Somers, 13 O. R. 600.

Delay in Sale, |—A sale in 1839, under a warrant issued in 1837:—Held, valid, the sale having been delayed by 1 Vict. c. 20, passed in consequence of the rebellion. Todd v. Werry, 15 U. C. R. 614.

Delay in Sale.]—By 3 Vict. c. 46, certain sales for taxes made in June, 1838, were confirmed, and under the provisions of that Act the sheriff in 1842 conveyed to the plainiff:—Held, that, under the circumstances set out in the case, the warrant issued in 1836 had clearly not lapsed or become void before the sale. Hamilton v. McDonald, 22 U. C. R. 136.

Description Ambiguous. 1 - By the treasurer's warrant, dated in June, 1860, there appeared to be two village lots 4, south there appeared to be two village lots 4, south of Catharine street, in arrent for taxes, one being in arrent for the year 1854 only, the other for 1854, 5, and 8. The sheriff sold both, but only conveyed the one in dispute in this action to the purchaser:—Held, that the warrant did not sufficiently define the lot to be sold (although the sheriff had assumed it to be the one in question in this action), and that the sale was invalid. Townsend v. Elliott, 12 C. P. 217.

Description Indefinite.] — Held, in element, that a sale of land for taxes to defendant in 1865, the only description of which, in the Canada Gazette and in the treasurer's warrant, was "Pt. of S. pt. 111, 1st con. Tay, 40 acres, 812-95," could not be supported. Grant v. Gilmonr, 21 C. P. 18.

Description. |- In advertising lands for sale for taxes they were described as "Race ands. Paris Hydraulic Company," no further specification of the locality or quantity to be sold being given:—Held, that the description was insufficient and the sale void. Greenstreet v. Paris, 21 Gr. 229.

Description—Hore or Less.]—The land was described in the sheriff's deed as containing "100 acres more or less."—Held, a sufficient compliance with s. 65 of 16 Vict. c. 183. Crysler v. McKay, 2 A. R. 569. Reversed by the supreme court, 3 S. C. R. 436.

Description.]—A warrant describing the lands as "all patented" is sufficient. Brooke v. Campbell, 12 Gr. 526.
See, also, "all deeded." Cook v. Jones, 17

Description by Plan.]—In a survey of a nor blocks, with streets running through them, and the blocks were sub-divided into blocks, with streets running through them, and the blocks were sub-divided into blocks were sub-divided into large them. The survey of the survey

Description — Fractional Portions of Lot.]—On a sale of two adjoining town lots for taxes, the treasurer sold the easterly seven-eighths of the westerly lot and the westerly seven-eighths of the easterly lot:— Held, a sufficient description to enable the parties to ascertain and define the land sold. Aston v. Innex, 26 Gr. 42.

Distrainable Effects on Part of Lot.]—Where taxes have accrued upon the whole of a lot while it is undivided, and a distress could be made upon part, no portion could be sold for such taxes. Stafford v. Williams, 4 U. C. R. 448.

Distress—Want of Knowledge of Distrandle Effects.]—Under 16 Ver, c. 182, the sheriff might sell, unless he had good reason to believe that there was sufficient distress. A declaration, therefore, which charged him with neglect of duty in selling when there were goods on the land to distrain, but did not aver notice of the goods being there, was held insufficient. Foley v. Moodie, 16 U. C. R. 254.

Distress—Want of Knowledge of Distrainable Effects.]—In ejectment upon a sheril's deed for taxes the plaintiff shewed that the lot was all wild, with no one living on it, and that an inspection had been made but no distress found. Defendant proved that making sugar upon the root of the hold of used to leave there two kettles and their superroughs, which might have been worth the sum due:—Held, that such evidence could not be allowed to invalidate the sale. Frazer v. Mattice, 19 U. C. R. 150.

Distress—Goods Available after Inception of Sale.]—Where there was proved to have been ample distress on the premises between the receipt of the warrant and the day of sale:—Held, under 6 Geo. IV. c. 7, that the sale was invalid. Dobbie v. Tully, 10 C. P. 432.

Distress—Goods Available after Inception of Sale.]—Per McLean, C.J., the evidence of distress (set out in the case) having been left to the jury, their verdict for the plaintiffs must be taken as shewing that there was none at any time before the sale. Per Burns, and Hagarty, JJ., the existence of distress between the 17th April, 1839, when the land was first offered, and the sale on the 19th June, would form no objection, as the sheriff was not bound to search then. Quere, whether in any case a search could be required between the inception and completion of the sale. Hamilton v. McDowald, 22 U. C. R. 136.

Distress-Collector's Return Sufficient-Collector's Neglect.]-The defendant in ejectment claimed under a sale for taxes made on the 4th November, 1859:—Held, under C. S. U. C. e. 55 and 16 Vict. e. 182, that it was not the duty of an officer, after the return by the collector to the township treasurer, to search for distress upon the premises. Allan v. Fisher, 13 C. P. 63.
Held, also, that the neglect of the collector

Held, also, that the neglect of the collector to search for goods which with diligence he might have found, and which would have satisfied the taxes, did not invalidate the sale. Ib.

Distress—Collector's Omission to Levy.]
—Where land is assessed and taxes imposed, an omission by the collector to demand and levy the amount from property on the premises, cannot, since 32 Vict. c. 36 (O.), avoid the sale. Stewart v. Taggart, 22 C. P. 284.

Estoppel.]—Owner's presence at sale held not to estop him from complaining of irregularities in sale. See Claxton v. Shibley, 9 O. R. 451.

Excessive Amount.] — Where land has been sold for a larger amount of taxes than has been or can be lawfully imposed, such sale is void. Alan v. Fisher, 13 C. P. 63; Cotter v. Sutherland, Stevens v. Jacques, 18 C. P. 357; Doe McGill v. Langton, 9 U. C. R. 91.

Failure to Distrain—List of Lands—Nordelivery by Cierk to Assessor—Omission to Notify Occupants—Non-delivery by Assessor to Treasurer of Certified List.]—Where after a sale of land for taxes it appeared that there had been a failure to distrain, although sufficient goods were on the premises to have paid the taxes during each of the years they became due, and also that the account furnished by the collector did not, as required by s. 135 of R. S. O. 1887 c. 193 (R. S. O. 1897 c. 224, s. 147), shew the reason why the taxes had not been collected; that there was no delivery to the collector by the clerk of the list furnished him by the treasurer, as required by s. 141, R. S. O. 1887 c. 193 (R. S. O. 1897 c. 224, s. 135), and no notification, as also required by that section, by the collector had been collected by the occupant or owner of the land, while lived in the vicinity, and whose name earlier be sold for taxes; and no certificate certified by out, as required by s. 142, R. S. O. 1887 c. 193 (R. S. O. 1897 c. 224, s. 154); nor any list furnished by the clerk to the reasurer of were lands which had become occupied were increedly described, as required by s. 143, R. S. O. 1887 c. 193 (R. S. O. 1897 c. 224, s. 153): —Held, that the sale was invalid; and the S. O. 1887 c. 193 (R. S. O. 1897 c. 224, s. 159): —Held, that the sale was invalid; and the R. O. 1897 c. 193 (R. S. O. 1897 c. 224, s. 193 (R. S. O. 1897 c. 224, s. 193 (R. S. O. 1897 c. 224, s. 194 (R. S. O. 1897 c. 193 (R. S. O. 1897 c. 224, s. 194 (R. S. O. 1897 c. 193 (R. S. O. 1897 c. 224, s. 194 (R. S. O. 1897 c. 193 (R. S. O. 1897 c. 224, s. 194 (R. S. O. 1897 c. 193 (R. S. O. 1897 c. 294 s. 194 (R. S. O. 1897 c. 193 (R. S. O. 1897 c. 294 s. 194 (R. S. O. 1897 c. 294 s. 194 (R. S. O. 1897 c. 194 (R. S. O. 1897 c.

Half Lots.]—The patent granted the lot by north and south halves. The patentee, in 1832, conveyed the lot as a whole, and it continued in one owner until the sale of 35 acres in 1858. In 1858 and 1859, each half was assessed separately:—Held, not objectionable. For the next three years it was assessed in two parcels of 165 acres and 35 acres, and for the succeeding two years, the north half, 190 acres, and the west part south half, 65 acres, were assessed, with a valuation of $330 on the whole:—Held, right. Edinburgh Life Assurance Co. v. Ferguson, 32 U. C. R. 253.

In 1865 the 165 acres were sold for the taxes due for six years, including 1858, which was not covered by the warrant under which the 35 acres were sold in that year:—Held, that the sale as to 1858, could not be supported, for all or a part of each half should have been sold for the taxes due on it for that year, not-withstanding the sale of the 35 acres; and that as there were not five years due of any portion of the residue for which the warrant issued, the whole sale must fail. Ib.

Imperative and Directory Requirements, —Considerations as to what requirements of the tax Acts are imperative, and what are merely directory. Cotter v. Sutherland, 18 C. P. 357.

Inconsistency of Description in Warrant and Deed. —The land was called in the collector's return the east half 25, 2nd concession Charlottenburg, the word "front" before "2nd" being struck through with a pen, while in the warrant that word was written, and in the sheriff's deed it was omitted:—Held, immaterial, for that the identity of the land sold with that on which the tax was to be collected was sufficiently proved. McDonell v. Mc Keeping Accounts in Statutory Form. —It is not necessary that the treasurer should keep his accounts of taxes due according to the statute in order to validate the sale. Cotter v. Sutherland, Stevens v. Jacques, 18 C. P. 357.

Lands not Described in Warrant but in Attached List.] — The warrant authorized the sale of "the lands hereinafter mentioned." The lands were not mentioned in the warrant, but were contained in a list attached thereto which made no reference to the warrant; nor were the lists authenticated with the seal of the corporation and the signature of the warden, as required by s. 128 of 32 Vict. c. 36;—Held, that the description of the lands was a sufficient compliance with the above section, and that the want of the seal and signature on the lists was cured by s. 155. Church v. Fenton, 4 A. R. 159.

Sec S. C., 5 S. C. R. 239.

List of Arrears.]—The treesurer's list, under ss. 110 and 131 of 32 Vict. c. 36 (O.), is sufficiently furnished at any time during the month of February. The list need not contain the amount in arrear. Stewart v. Taggart, 22 C. P. 284.

List not Furnished to Clerk or Assessor.]—Where a township treasurer had neglected to furnish the clerk of the municipality with a list of lands liable to sale for taxes, and no such list or copy thereof was delivered to the assessor as provided by s. 108 of c. 189, R. S. O. 1877, and by reason thereof a lot worth $1,500 or $1,000 had been sold for $5.55, taxes due thereon, the court, old-with courts of the court, old-with courts of the court of the courts of the court of the courts of t

List Embodied in Warrant.]—By s. 128 of the Assessment Act, 32 Vict. c. 36, the warden is required to return one of the lists of the land to be sold for taxes transmitted to him, &c., to the tressurer, with a warrant thereto annexed, under the hand of the warden and seal of the county, &c.:— Held, that the section was merely directory, and was sufficiently compiled with by the list being embodied in the warrant, instead of being annexed thereto. Church v. Fenton, 28 C. P. 384.

See S. C., 4 A. R. 159, 5 S. C. R. 239,

Lot not Separately Assessed—Costs.]

—The assessor should asses village lots the property of non-residents separately, placing opposite to each the value and amount of assessment. Where, therefore, the assessor had included three village lots in one assessment, two of which only belonged to one person, the sale was set aside; but without costs, as the purchasers—defendants in the suit—had nothing to do with the irregular proceedings for which the sale was set aside. Black v. Harrington, 12 Gr. 175.

Lot not Separately Assessed—Costs.]—Where three distinct lots were assessed in bulk, and sold for taxes, the sale was set aside, and the purchaser having stated at the sale that his object in buying was to secure the property for the person entitled, and afterwards having claimed to hold the land for his own benefit, he was ordered to pay the costs of the suit. Christic v. Johnston, 12 Gr. 534.

Lot not Separately Assessed.] — The land in question in this case was not sold for its own arrears only, but was assessed with another lot, and the arrears charged against both:—Semble, that this would be fatal. Thompson v. Colcock, 23 C. P. 505.

Lots Separately Assessed Sold Together. —Where two half lots were assessed separately, a sale of the whole lot for the total amount was held invalid, notwithstanding 27 Vict. c. 19, s. 4. Yokham v. Hall, 15 Gr. 335.

Misdescription of Land.]—The north part of a lot called lot 1 in one survey, and lot 4 in another, of 100 acres more or less, was assessed variously as "number 1, N. half," &c. "Number 1, N. part," &c. "N. half lot number 1," &c., and "broken lots 1 and 4." The collector's roll shewed similar discrepancies:—Held, that though these irregularities indicated want of care and accuracy in the officers of the municipality, they did not invalidate the assessment, as the land was sufficiently pointed out. McKay v. Crysler, 3 S. C. R. 436, distinguished. Nelles v. White, 29 Gr. 338.

Misdescription—Tarses Paid but Credited to Wrong Lot.]—Plaintiff was the owner of a group of small islands in Lake Rosseau, in the township of Medora, containing in all less than lifty acres. The island in question was patented to one Pope by the description of island D. Plaintiff purchased it from Pope and called it by the fancy name of Oak Island, and built a house and made other improvements thereon, residing there for some months in each year. The assessor, having been errenceously informed that Pope was the owner of an island in Lake Rosseau called D, put down island D in the non-resident division of the assessment roll with the name "Robert T. Pope." This was done to distinguish it from another island D in the same lake and township. He did not know that this island D was one of the group belonging to the plaintiff, though he knew that the plaintiff.

was putting improvements on one of the islands, which was in fact island D or Oak Island. He supposed that the name of the improved island was Flora; and this was the name of one of the plaintiff's Islands, a small rock on which there were no improvements. The improved island was the one meant to be assessed, and actually assessed, though under a wrong name. The taxes so assessed were actually paid. In 1883 the island D was sold for arrears of taxes for the years 1879, 1880, 1881 and 1882;—Held, affirming 12 O. R. 598, that island D being identified as that intended to be assessed, and being as that intended to be assessed, and being that on which the improvements had been made, the owner was not affected by the mistake of the assessor in describing it as Flora Island; and that the taxes having been duly paid the sale was void:—Semble, that island D or Oak Island should have been assessed on the resident instead of the non-resident division of the assessment roll. Hall v. Farquharson, 15 A. R. 457.

Observations as to assessment of several parcels of non-resident land less than 200 acres for statute labour. Ib.

Mistake in Warrant.]-Under 59 Geo. 111. c. 7, lands returned in the surveyor-general's schedule in June, 1820, were liable to have taxes charged against them on the 1st July following, which taxes for the first year were to be then assessed for 1820, so that, if not paid, there would be eight years' taxes in arrear on the 1st January, 1828. Such lands having been sold under a warrant which described the taxes on them as being in arrear from the 1st July, 1820, to the 1st July, 1828, the sale was upheld: for, eight years' taxes being really due, the mistake in the time of commencement was unimportant, and could not vitiate the warrant. Doe d. Stata v. Smith, 9 U. C. R. 658.

No Arrears - Treasurer's Return Incorrect.]-The surveyor-general made a return to the treasurer of the London district, headed thus: "Township of Dorchester, southern division, broken front concessions A and B, south part to John Reilly, Jr., 100 acres, north part to Dudley McPhee, 200." The treasurer did not open his account in ac-The treasurer did not open his account in accordance with this return, but opened a separate account against "N. ½ of lot 22 in broken front B, 100 acres," and returned it as in arrear, upon which return it was sold. It was proved that the parties who had paid taxes on the lot, having tile to the whole 200 acres, had paid taxes on the the whole 200 acres, had paid taxes on the held, and have apparately on any paid of lot 22, made in 1850, was vaid because, notwithstanding, the 1830, was void, because, notwithstanding the return by the treasurer, there was no arrear in fact subjecting the land to sale. Doe d. Upper v. Edwards, 5 U. C. R. 594.

No Specific Description.]-It is not necessary at a sale of lands for taxes to desnecessary at a sale of lands for taxes to need to be sold, and therefore a sale of "89 acres" of a particular lot was held sufficient. Stewart v. Taggart, 22 C. P. 284.

Not Advertised for Three Months— Patented and Unpatented Lands not Distin-guished.]—The evidence shewed that there were thirteen advertisements in the Gazette, though not covering three months, the first being on the 18th July, and the last on the 10th October: that the warrant and advertise-ment did not distinguish between patents and unpatented lands; and that the descrip-tion in the deed was of "Broken lot, number 17, in the D concession of the township of Mariposa," describing it as containing seven acres, and professing to convey the whole lot, which was not shewn to contain more than seven acres. The Judge at the trial held, that the irregularity in the advertisement would not invalidate the sale, and that the description was sufficient; but that the patented and unpatented lands should have been distinguished. Kempt v. Parkyn, 28 C. P.

Omission of Duty by Assessor and Township Clerk.]—The duties of the as-sessor and township clerk, under ss. 109, 110, and 111 of R. S. O. 1877 c. 180, are imperative and not directory merely, and their performance is conditional to the validity of a tax sale. Donovan v. Hogan, 15 A. R. 432.

Paid Taxes Wrongly Included.]-Where land was sold for taxes including one year's assessment which had been paid, the sale was set aside, though the number of in arrear was greater than was required to warrant a sale. Irwin v. Harring-ton, 12 Gr. 179.

Part of Lot Sold - Variance Between Sale Book and Deed.]—At a sale of part of a certain lot for taxes the treasurer, who made the sale, marked in the sale book the part sold as the south one-tenth, but afterwards a certificate for the north one-tenth, and this was finally conveyed to the defendant on 5th December, 1884; the bid was for one-tenth of an acre only:-Held, that the above state of facts did not invalidate the tax sale and the title of the defendant to the north one-tenth. Haisley v. Somers, 13 O. R. 600.

Part of Taxes not Chargeable.]—Held, that, under the facts set out in this case, the sale was void, for that as a portion of the east half of the lot had been sold for taxes, part whereof had accrued upon the west half and was not chargeable on the east half, and as there were no means of apportionment, it was void as to all. Ridout v. Ketchum, 5 C.

Patented Lands Described as Unpatented.] — Certain patented lands, which were sold for taxes, were described in the advertisement as unpatented, and in the treasurer's deed as " all that," &c., "being composed of all the right, title, and interest composed of an the right, title, and interest of the lessee, locatee, licensee, purchaser from the Crown, in and to lot," &c.:—Held, that the treasurer by his deed having purported to sell the interest only of a locatee or purchaser from the Crown, the power he exercised was directed to that particular estate only, which being non-existent, there was nothing that the power could operate upon, and that the deed was invalid. Scott v. Stuart, 18 O. R. 211.

Payment Before Sale. |- If a writ has been issued for the sale of land for taxes, but before sale under it, the taxes are paid, the sale is illegal and void. Howe v. Thompson, M. T. 6 Vict.

Payment Before Sale.]—The lot was duly advertised by the sheriff on the 4th June. 1840, pursuant to 3 Vict. c. 46, but the taxes had been paid to him before sale:—Held. that, as the payment was made to the sheriff and not to the treasurer, 3 Vict. c. 46 was not applicable, and the sale was void. Doe d. Sherwood v. Matheson, 9 U. C. R. 321.

Payment Before Sale, —The land having been duly advertised in accordance with 3 Vict. c. 46, the sale was held valid notwithstanding a receipt produced for taxes for a portion of the time, the owner having failed to comply with the provisions of s. 3. Macdonald v. Rowce, 9 C. P. 76.

Payment to Acting Collector.] — To prove payment of taxes it is not necessary to shew that the collector was duly appointed; it is sufficient to shew that he acted and was acknowledged as such. Smith v. Redford, 12 Gr. 316.

Payments Wrongly Applied.]—A patent having issued for lot 8 and three-quarters of to 7, including the enst quarter, although the east quarter was not returned by the surveyor-general as described for grant, and the taxes on the whole of the grant having been paid, the treasurer credited such payment to the west three-quarters, and returned the east quarter as in arrear for taxes:—Held, that the east quarter could not be sold, the payments having been made on the part which included it. Peck v. Munro, 4 C. P. 363.

Proof Required.] — Strict proof should be given as to the legality of the tax and its actual imposition, but in matters concerning its collection unnecessary or unreasonable rigour in carrying out the clauses of the statute should not be exacted from the officials intrusted therewith. Cotter v. Sutherland, 18 C. P. 357.

Rates not Kept Separate.]—The provision requiring certain rates to be kept separate on the collector's roll is directory only; and where it had not been observed, a sale was held valid. Cook v. Jones, 17 Gr. 488.

Reasonable Accuracy. —The court will not be punctilious in adhering to the letter of the statute where there is reasonable accuracy, and no possible prejudice resulting from literal inaccuracy in the frame of the warrant to sell. Fitzgerald v. Wilson, 8 O. R.

Sale Before Three Years—Onus of Proof.]—On the 21st October, 1880, land was sold for taxes for the years 1877 and 1878, and on the 15th November, 1881, a tax deed executed. The patent from the Crown issued in 1878. There was no evidence as to the right of the patentee of the land previous to the issuing of the patent, nor that the Crown lands commissioner had made any return to the treasurer of the land having been treated as a free grant, sold agreed to the second of the land having been treated as a free grant, sold agreed to the second of the land having been treated as a free grant, sold agreed to the land having been treated as a free grant, sold agreed to the land having been treated as a free grant, sold agreed to the land having been treated as a free grant, sold agreed to the land agreed to the land agreed to the land the land agreed to the second of the land having been treated as a free grant. The second is the land tax deed were invalid. At the trial the plaintiff produced his patent. The defendant, in answer thereto, put in the tax deed.—Held, that the plaintiff by production of his patent made out a prima facie case, and the defendant, relying on his tax deed, was bound to prove the sale and arrears for three years, that is, that some portion thereof was in arrear for three years. Sterenson v. Traynor, 12 O. R. 804.

Sale After Return Day.] — Sales for taxes made after the return day of the writ to sell are valid. Stevenson v. Traynor, 12 O. R. 804; Cotter v. Sutherland, 18 C. P. 357.

Second Sale for Omitted Arrears.]—
After a sale of land for taxes for 1850 and following years, a subsequent sale for the taxes of 1858 was held invalid, and the purchaser under the first sale was held entitled to retain the land free from past taxes. Milis v. McKay, 15 Gr. 192.

Second Sale for Omitted Arrears.]—
On the 5th February, 1867, the lot in question was sold for taxes due for 1859 and 1860, and on the 28th December, 1867, it was again sold for the taxes due for 1862, 3, 45, and 6, these latter taxes being due at the time of the first sale:—Held, that the second sale was valid, for the fact of the subsequent taxes being due at the time of the first sale and not included in the warrant under which it took place, did not free the land from the payment thereof. Thompson v. Colcock, 23 C. P. 505.

Separate Columns in Roll.]—The provisions of s. 121 of the Consolidated Assessment Act as to entering on the roll by the clerk of the municipality, opposite to each lot or parcel, all the rates or charges with which the same is chargeable, in separate columns for each rate, are imperative, and non-compliance therewith renders such roll a nullity. And where the amount of such rates or taxes for one year was entered on the roll in one sum, and the roll was so transmitted to the treasurer of the county, a tax sale founded thereon was held invalid. The provisions of s. 141 of the said Act, which requires a true copy of the lists returned by the assessors to the clerk to be furnished to the county treasurer certified to by the clerk under the seal of the corporation, and that of s. 142, which requires an assessor's certificate to each list, are also imperative. The principle of the decision in Town of Trenton v. Dyer, 21 A. R. 379, 24 S. C. R. 474, followed. Love v. Webster, 250 C. R. 453.

Separate Lots.]—Semble, that where several lots are included in one grant, but dessectibed by separate numbers, a portion of each lot must be sold for the taxes due on it, and not a portion of the whole block, beginning at the boundary from which the lots are numbered, for the taxes due on the whole. Muaro v. Grey, 12 U. C. R. 647.

Separate Lots. |—Lot 18 and the west part of 19, containing together 200 acres, were granted to B. in one patent, and in the west granted to B. in one patent, and in the strainter the east part of 19, 156 acress was remarked to the strainter of the lot granted to 8; — Held, that the sale could not be upheld even as to that portion of 19 granted to 8, For lot 18 and the west part of 19 should each have been separately charged, and sold for its own arrears. McDonald v. Robillard, 23 U. C. R. 105.

Separate Lots.] — The north and south half of a lot having been assessed separately, and different amounts charged against each half, which were afterwards added together and charged against the whole lot, and a pornal charged against the whole lot, and a portion of the whole lot having been sold for the combined amounts:—Held, that such sale was illegal. Laughtenborough v. McLean, 14 C. P. 175.

Separate Lots.] — Where three distinct lots were assessed in bulk, and sold for taxes, the sale was set aside. Christic v. Johnston, 12 Gr. 534.

Time.]—The five years for which lands are to be in arrear for taxes, before they are liable to be sold, under 16 Vict. c. 182, must be before the delivery of the treasurer's warrant to the sheriff. Kelly v. Macklem, 14 Gr.

Time.]—When the first year's taxes had been imposed by a by-law passed in July, 1852, and the collector's roll was not delivered until after August, 1852; and the treasurer's warrant was dated 10th July, 1857;—Held, that the sale was invalid, for no taxes had been in arrear for five years. Connor v. Mc-Pherson, 18 Gr. 607.

Time.]—The collector's roll was delivered to him on 26th August, 1852, and the treasurer's warrant to sell was issued on 11th August, 1857:—Held, that, under s. 42 of the Assessment Act of 1853, no portion of the tax being due for five years on 11th August, 1857, the sale was void:—Semble, that the taxes of the preceding year, for the purposes of sale for arrears, are not in arrear till after the year in which they are imposed. Bell v. McLean, 18 C. P. 416.

Time.]—The taxes were unpaid for 1853, 4, 5, 6, and 7. On the 25th February, 1858, the treasurer issued his warrant to sell:—Held, that no portion of the taxes was due for five years, within C. S. U. C. c. 55. Ford v. Proudfoot, 8 Gr. 478.

Time.1—On the 18th July, 1873, a warrant issued, and on the 18th December following the land in question was sold for the taxes imposed in 1870:—Held, that under s. 18 of 32 Vet. c. 36 (O.), which makes the taxes due on and from the 18t January of the year in which they are imposed, the taxes for 1870 were due in that year for the first year, and consequently in 1872 for the third year, so that when the sale took place the taxes were due and in arrear for the third year, in accordance with s. 128 of the Act. Wapels v. Bull, 29 C. P. 403.

Time.]—Held, that the sale in 1855, of the land in one stion was valid, as the evidence, which is fully set out in the case, shewed that there were five years' arrears of taxes due at the time of the sale. Crysler v. McKay, 2 A. R., 563. Reversed by the supreme court, 3 S. C. R. 436.

Treasurer's Neglect.]—Where the taxes had been paid to the treasurer of the district, and a receipt obtained, a subsequent sale by the sheriff, as for taxes, in consequence of the treasurer having omitted to credit the payment on the lot, was held void, although the treasurer had returned the land as in arrear. Mycrs v. Brown, 17 C. P. 307.

Held, also, that such sale was equally void, where the taxes had, in accordance with 9 Geo. IV. c. 3, been paid to the treasurer of the district in which the owner resided. Ib.

Treasurer's List.]—Held, that 13 & 14 Vict. c. 67, ss. 46 and 47, did not make the p-11 list of taxes directed to be prepared by the treasurer binding, and that if the tax was not legally imposed, but merely debited against the lot by the treasurer, it was not made valid by being entered in such list. McAdie v. Corby, 30 U. C. R. 349.

Warrant not Directed to Any One.]—It was objected that the warrant was not addressed to any one. It recited that the treasurer has abunitted to the warden the land liable to be sold, and proceeded: "Now, I, the warden, command you," &c. This was given to the treasurer, was produced by him, and was acted on by him. The warrant purported to be drawn up pursuant to 32 Vict. c. 36, s. 128:—Held, that the warrant was sufficient. Fitzgerald v. Witson, S. O. R. 559.

Warrant not Distinguishing Patented Lands. —16 Vict c. 182, ss. 55 and 56, C. S. U. C. c. 55, requiring the county treasurer in his warrant for the sale of lands in arrent to distinguish those that have been patented, from those under lease or license of occupation, is compulsory; and sales effected under a warrant omitting such particulars are void. Hall v. Hill, 2 E. & A. 568, 22 U. C. R. 578.

Warrant not Sealed.]—A sale for taxes under a warrant issued without a seal:—Held, invalid, Morgan v. Quesnel, 26 U. C. R. 539.

Warrant with Schedule.] — Semble, that it is sufficient to state the lands to be sold in a schedule annexed to the warrant, if such schedule is expressly incorporated with it; but, quiere, if the warrant mention no lands and the schedule is not so incorporated. Hall v. Hill, 22 U. C. R. 578.

Warrant with Two Entries of Same Lot.|—The warrant contained two different entries of the same lot for taxes due for two successives. The sheriff sold the lot for the first years. The sheriff sold the lot for the first years, then adjourned the sale in consequence of the consequence of the second year's date sold the same lot twice, as if two wwong in entering the same lot twice, as if two words are properties, and that the warrant was wong and the properties, and that the sale was void; the properties of the propertie

(e) Statutory Finality.

Advertising.]—The advertisement of sale not having been inserted in a local newspaper in accordance with 16 Vict. c. 183:—Held, that the sale was not confirmed by said statute. Semble, that the statute being passed to give effect to a forfeiture, a strict compliance with its terms was necessary to bar the rights of owners of land sold. Williams v. Taylor, 13 C. P. 219.

Advertising.]—The omission of the treasurer to advertise the list returned by him to the court of quarter sessions, within one month thereafter, and to advertise such list in the official Gazette, and imperfections in the advertising:—Held, to be irregularities cured by 6 Geo. IV. c. 7, s. 22, and by analogy to the holding of the courts in the cases of sales under execution. Cotter v. Sutherland, Stevens v. Jacques, 18 C. P. 357.

The sheriff's advertisements of the sale and its postponement in the Gazette in these cases were held sufficient. 1b.

Application of Limitation Clause.]— The 32 Vict. c. 36, s. 155, limiting the time for bringing suits for setting aside a sale for taxes, applies only where an actual, though irregular, sale of lands has been effected. Greenstreet v, Paris, 21 Gr. 229.

Arrears not Due for Statutory Period. –In 1865 the land was sold for six years' taxes, including 1858; for that year the sale could not be supported, and as there were not five years due of any portion of the residue for which the warrant issued, the whole sale was held bad—and held, following Yokham v. Hall, 15 Gr. 335, that this defect was not cured by 27 Vict. c. 19, s. 4; 29 & 30 Vict. c. 58, s. 131; or 32 Vict. c. 36, s. 130 (O.) Edinburgh Life Assurance Co. v. Ferguson, 32 U. C. R. 230.

Description in Roll and Advertisement, —Land sold under C. S. U. C. c. 55, was described in the assessment roll, advertisements, and treasurer's warrant, as the south part of the west half of lot 17 in the 9th concession of Rawdon, 75 acres, and in the sheriff's deed by metes and bounds:—Held, insufficient; and,—semble, such a defect would not be cured by 27 Vict. c. 19, s. 4. or 29 & 30 Vict. c. 53, s. 146, or 32 Vict. c. 36, s. 155. Booth v. Girdwood, 32 U. C. R. 23.

It was objected that the description of the land on the roll and in the warrant as the N. ½ and W. pt. 8. ½, 155 acres, and the N. ½, 100 and W. pt. 8. ½, 165, acres, and the N. ½, 100, and W. pt. 8. ½, 65, was insufficient: and that the treasurer had improperly altered the roll so as to reduce the taxes by one-half, and make the description still more defective—but held, that these objections would be cured by 27 Vict. c. 19, s. 4, and 29 & 30 Vict. c. 53, s. 131. Ib.

Erroneous Description of Land Assessed.—Ejectment under a tax deed by the assignee of the purchaser, who was the township clerk. The sale was for the taxes alleged to be due for the years 1871 and 1872. In the assessment roll for 1871 the land was described as the "8, pt. 12, 53 acres;" and for 1872 as "8.E. pt. 12, 53 acres;" and it appeared that the land, whether taken as the south or south-east part, included portions of the lot owned respectively by F. and C., and only which they had paid their taxes; and also certain lots of a village laid out on part of 12:—Held, that the plaintiff's title failed; for that the assessment was illegal. Held, also, that the defect was not cured by s. 155 of the Assessment Act of 1888, 32 Vict. c. 36 (O.) Reckett v. Johnston, 32 C. P. 301.

Errors of County Clerk and Assessor.]

—Where it appeared that, us far as the county treasurer was concerned, all the steps taken by him in regard to the sale were regular, and authorized by 32 Vict. c. 36, and that the sale had taken place for taxes actually in arrear for the required length of time, followed by a tax deed thereafter, which had not been questioned within two years:—Held, that the sale and deed were not afterwards immeachable, although it was not clear on the evidence, whether the county clerk and assessor had or had not properly complied with the requirements of ss. 111 and 112 of the said Act. Smith v. Midland R. W. Co., 4 O. R. 494.

Error in Amount.]—Certain lands, worth from $600 to $800, having been sold in November, 1881, for $6.06 taxes, being one-eleventh in excess of taxes really due, the sale was on this ground set aside by Prondfoot, J., 9 O. R. 451, who held that R. S. O. 1877 c, 189, s, 155, did not cure the error, and that the maxim de minimis non curat lex did not apply; but, on appeal to a divisional court this judgment was reversed. Per Boyd, C.—In Yokham v. Hall, 15 Gr, 335, the excess of statute labour tax was clearly illegal, and its imposition being unjustifiable vitiated the sale. There was no illegal excess of tax originally imposed upon the land in this case, and the owner must be regarded as being notified by the advertisement of sale of the error in carrying forward the amount, and having taken no steps to have it remedied, pending the period allowed for payment or redemption, he cannot afterwards invoke its aid to annul the tax sale. Per Ferguson, J.—The difference of twenty cents and the calculation of interest and commission upon it must fall within the meaning of the words "error or miscalculation" mentioned in s. 150 f R. S. O. 1877 c. 190, and not be invalid. Yokham v. Hall, 5 Gr, 335, considered and distinguished. Claxton v. Shibley, 10 O. R. 295.

Excessive Sum.]—A tax sale of land for more than was due, is not rendered valid by 27 Vict. c. 19, s. 4. Yokham v. Hall, 15 Gr. 335.

General Effect.]—Semble, that several objections taken to the tax title, and set out in the report of this case, were cured by 33 Vict. c. 23 (O.) Davies v. Van Norman, 30 U.C. R. 437.

Half-lots—Sale En Bloc.] — Where two half lots were assessed separately, a sale of the whole lot for the total amount was held invalid, notwithstanding the Act. Yokham v. Hall, 15 Gr. 335.

Halifax Assessment Act.]-The Act provided that in case of non-payment of taxes assessed upon any lands thereunder, the city collector should submit to the mayor a state ment in duplicate of lands liable to be sold for such non-payment, to which statements the mayor should affix his signature and the seal of the corporation; one of such state-ments should then be filed with the city clerk, and the other returned to the collector with a warrant annexed thereto, and in any suit or other proceeding relating to the assessment on any real estate therein mentioned, any statements or lists so signed and sealed should be ments or lists so signed and scaled smould be received as conclusive evidence of the legality of the assessment, &c. In a suit to foreclose a mortgage on land which had been sold for taxes under this Act, the legality of the as-sessment and sale was attacked:—Held, that to make this provision operative to cure a defect in the assessment caused by feilure, to defect in the assessment caused by failure to defect in the assessment caused by failure to give a notice required by a previous section, it was necessary for the defendants to shew. affirmatively, that the statements had been signed and sealed in duplicate and filed as required by the Act, and the production and nor of o one of such statements was not suf-ficient. O'Brien v. Copsucell, 17 S. C. R. 420. Inaccurate Advertisement.] — Semble, the sale was not "fairly conducted," as the advertisement describing the lands as unparented, was of such a character as to damp the sale. Scott v. Stuart, 18 O. R. 211.

Indefinite Description in Sheriff's Deed.—Second Deed.]—The sheriff, on a sale of land for taxes in 1850, gave the purchaser a certificate of the land sold as "five acres of land to be taken from the south-west corner of the south-west quarter of lot 3 in the 11th concession of the township of East Zorra:" but made no further description thereof. Six years afterwards a new sheriff zave a deed, describing the land particularly by metes and bounds:—Held, affirming 41 U. C. R. 212, that the sale was invalid, and that therefore, no land having been sold, s. 155 of 32 Vict. c. 33 (0.) did not apply to validate the deed. Burgess v. Bank of Montreal, 3 A. R. 60.

Irregularities in Assessments.]—
Quare, as to the effect of the curative provisions of s. 156 of the Assessment Act, R.
S. 0. 1877 c. 180, since the decision of the supreme court in McKay v. Crysler, 3
S. C. R. 436, and whether a tax deed may be enestioned for irregularities in the assessment or in the proceedings prior to sale after the lapse of the two years. Jeffery v. Hewis, 9 O. R. 304.

Laches of Tax Purchaser.]—Quere, whether s. 155 of 32 Vict. c. 36 (O.) applies to make good a sale otherwise bad in favour of a purchaser for taxes who makes no claim for nearly twenty years, leaving the original owner in possession, and in ignorance of the sale. A new trial was granted to enable the defendant to raise this and other points not sufficiently taken at the trial. Austin v. Armstrong, 28 C. P. 47.

Land on Non-Resident Instead of Resident Roll—List not Scaled—List not Iteruned.]—Land was sold in January, 1871, for an arrear of taxes assessed in 1867, under a warrant for sale, dated 20th August, 1870. The land was but on the non-resident in place of the resident roll, and a list of lands liable to be sold, required by 32 Vict. c. 36, s. 128 (O.), to be sealed with the corporate seal and signed by the warden, and to be returned to the treasurer with the warrant for sale annexed, was not so sealed or signed or returned:—Held, that the land could be sold under 32 Vict. c. 36, s. 128, at any time after the taxes had been due for more than three years at the time of the warrant, as they were here: and that the placing the land on the wrong list and the omission to authenticate and return the list were defects carred by s. 155—more than two years having clapsed before this suit since the execution of the tax deed. No list was returned by the tax deed. In all any lands which have yet the clerk of the lands on which the search of the search of the suit was not the search of the suit was returned by the tax deed. In latter, as required we seed that the sale in this case was unauthorized, and that it was not made valid by ss. 130 or 155. Fenton v. McWain, 41 U. C. R. 239.

Land not Returned as Occupied.]—
It was objected to the regularity of the sale, that in 1881 neither the assessor nor the clerk returned the lands as occupied, as in fact they were, and further that the clerk did not examine the assessment roll when returned by the assessor as required by R. S. O. 1877 c. 180, s. 111:—Semble, that these are matters of procedure only, and would be cured by s. 155. Claston v. Shitley, 9 O. R. 451.

Non-Resident Land-Subsequent Occupation—No Notice of Intention to Sell.]— Unoccupied land divided into lots was assessed in the year 1879, and entered in the non-resident division of the assessment roll, but instead of being assessed by the numbers Dut instead or being assessed by the numbers and names of the lots alone, separately valued, and without the name of the owner, it was entered with the name of the owner prefixed, and valued en bloc. The taxes assessed against the whole, together with the name of the person taxed, were entered on the cell-bactor's well for the way inversal of a bactor's lector's roll for the year, instead of being entered on the non-resident tax roll, and transmitted to the county treasurer. The owner became also the occupant of the lands before the delivery to the collector of the col-lector's roll for 1879, and he paid the taxes so assessed to the collector in that year. The collector, notwithstanding, returned them to collector, notwithstanding, returned them to the clerk as non-resident taxes unpaid, and the township clerk returned them to the county treasurer in a "list of non-resident taxes returned from the collector's roll," and they were so entered in the treasurer's books. In the treasurer's list of lands liable to be sold for arrears of taxes in 1882, sent to the township clerk, the land in question was en-tered charged with the taxes of 1879. The land had in the meanting been regularly asland had in the meantime been regularly assessed, as occupied land, for the years 1880, 1881, and 1882, but the assessor neglected to 1881, and 1882, but the assessor herecust of give notice to the occupant that it was liable to be sold for the arrears of 1879, and the township clerk omitted to include it, as he should have done, in the return made by him to the county treasurer, pursuant to s. 111, in the list of non-resident lands which appeared, by the assessment roll of 1882, to have become occupied. The land was accordingly sold in December. 1882, for the taxes of 1879 —the owner having continued in occupation, and being ignorant of the sale or that the taxes were alleged to be in arrear:—Held, that the taxes having been entered in the collector's roll, with the name of the person assessed, the payment to the collector was valid, and consequently that there were no taxes in arrear for which the land could lawfully be sold. Semble, under the circumstances in evidence, the sale had not been properly conducted, and therefore the land had not been sold in pursuance of and under the authority of the Act so as to give operation to s. 155. Donovan v. Hogan, 15 A. R. 432.

No Notice to Owner.]—Though the owner of the land was known, he was not notified as required by R. S. O. 1877 c. 180, s. 199, of the assessment and liability to sale—Held, that this was an omission which was not cured by R. S. O. 1877 c. 180, s. 155. Haisley v. Somers, 13 O. R. 600.

No Taxes in Arrear.]—Held, that s. 155 of 32 Vict. c. 36 (O.) does not make valid a deed given in pursuance of a sale for taxes where there were in fact no taxes in arrear at the time of sale, but they had been regularly paid. Hamilton v. Eggleton, 22 C. P. 536.

Nothing Overdue for Statutory Period.]—Where it appears that no portion of the taxes has been overdue for the period prescribed by the statute under which the sale takes place, the sale is invalid, and the defect is not cured by s. 155 of 32 Vict. c. 36 (O.) McKuy v. Crysler, 3 S. C. R. 436; reversing 2 A. R. 569.

No Statement that Land Patented.]—It appeared that in the advertisement of the sale it was not stated whether the land was patented or unpatented:—Held, that R. S. O. 1877 c. 180, ss. 150, 155, did not cure this defect. Haisley v. Somers, 13 O. R. 600.

No Notice of Intention to Sell.]-By R. S. O. 1877 c. 180, ss. 108, 109, the county treasurer is to furnish the clerk of each municipality with lists of lands three years in arrear for taxes, and such clerks are to keep the lists in their offices for inspection, and are to give copies to the assessors, who are to notify the occupant and owner, if known, by means of the assessment notice, that the land is liable to be sold for arrears of taxes. By ss. 155 and 156 a tax deed is to be final and binding on the former owners and all claiming under them if the lands are not redeemed in one year, and the deed is to be valid against all persons if not questioned by some interested person within two years from the time of sale. The land in question was, in 1879, assessed as non-resident. De-fendant became the owner in 1878, and, having come to reside thereon in the former year, improperly paid these taxes to the collector instead of to the treasurer. No notice of arrears was given to the then owner and occu-pant, and they were not entered on the roll for 1882, as required by the Act. The defendant paid all taxes subsequently demanded, including those for 1882, but the land was, notwithstanding, put up and sold for the taxes of 1879, a trifling sum, on the 30th December, 1882. The treasurer's deed was dated the 15th February, 1884:-Held, that the sale could not be supported, as the notice required by s. 109, that the land was liable to be sold for taxes, had not been given, and that such ir taxes, had not been given, and that such irregularity was not cured by ss. 155 and 156 of the Act. Hutchinson v. Collier, 27 C. P. 249; Church v. Fenton, 28 C. P. At p. 404, doubted by Wilson, C.J.:—Per Armour, J.—The substantial compliance with the provisions of R. S. O. 1877 c. 180, ss. 108-111 inclusive, is a condition precedent to the right to sell non-resident lands for taxes:—Quere, per Wilson, C.J., whether there was not evidence that the land was not sold in a "fair." ence that the land was not sold in a "fair, open and candid manner." Observations on the impropriety of tax sales as now conducted under legislative authority. Deverill v. Coe, 11 O. R. 222.

No Notice of Assessment or of Intention to Sell.]—The Act provided that the deed to a our-chaser of lands sold for taxes should be conclusive evidence that all the provisions with reference to the sale had been complied with:—Held, that this provision could only operate to make the deed available to cure defects in the proceedings connected with the sale and would not cover the failure to give notice of assessment required before the taxes could be imposed:—Held, also, that the deed could not be invoked in the present case to cure any defects in the proceedings as it was not delivered to the purchaser until after the suit commenced: therefore a failure to give notice that the land was liable to be sold for taxes, which notice was required by the Act, rendered the sale void. O'Brien v. Cogsuell, 17 S. C. R. 420.

Occupied Lot Assessed as Unoccupied, —Held, that 27 Vict. c. 19, s. 4, curse all errors as regards the purchaser at a tax sale, if any taxes in respect of the land sold have been in arrear five years; and this rule applies where an occupied to thas been assessed as unoccupied. Bank of Toronto v. Fanning, 18 Gr. 391.

Occupied Land—No Notice.]—In 1882 a lot of land in the village of F., assessed for 1879 as "non-resident," was sold for the taxes of the latter year, the treasurer's deed therefor being executed in 1883. In an action of ejectment brought by the purchaser against the original owner in 1888, it appeared that in 1882 the list of lands liable to be sold for arrears of taxes required by s. 108, R. S. O. 1877 c. 180, and which contained the lot in question, was sent by the treasurer to the clerk of the village, but that it had been lost, and although the land was occupied," nor was the owner notified that it was liable to be sold for taxes as provided by s. 109, R. S. O. 1877 c. 180:—Held, that the sale was invalid, and that notwithstanding the lapse of time these defects were not cured by ss. 155 or 156. R. S. O. 1877 c. 180.—Per Proudfoot, J.—The want of notice to the defendant of the arrears and of the liability of his land to be sold for them was the want of an essential requisite to the power of sale. Per Perguson, J.—The land, having become occupied and having sufficient distress on it to satisfy the taxes, should, notwithstanding the errors of the municipal officers, be considered as if it had been returned "occupied," and the sale under such circumstances being forbidden by s. 130, R. S. O. 1877, c. 180, was not cured by s. 150 of that statute. Dalziel v. Mallory, 17 O. R. S0.

Proof of Arrears and Advertisement.]—Objection to a sale made in 1839, that the taxes were not shewn to have been properly imposed by the Q. S. under 59 Geo. III. c. 7, and later statutes, and that there was no sufficient evidence of the sheriff's advertisements of sale:—Held, under the evidence, to be cured by 29 & 30 Vict. c. 53. s. 150 (O.). And 32 Vict. c. 36, s. 155 (O.). The 33 Vict. c. 23, s. 2 (O.), was also applicable in favour of the sale, under the facts proved. Jones v. Cowden, 34 U. C. R. 345, 36 U. C. R. 495.

Proof of Due Advertisement.]—Under s. 155 of 32 Vict. c. 36 (O.), it is not essential to give evidence of lands sold for taxes having been duly advertised, where the two years have elapsed after the execution of the tax deed without its being questioned. Wapele v. Ball, 29 C. P. 403.

Proof that Taxes were Due.]—Where in order to sustain a party's case it is necessary to prove title under a sheriff's deed for taxes, he must shew that an actual sale did take place, and that at the time of the sale under which he claims there were some taxes due, notwithstanding the time limited by s. 155 of 32 Vict. c. 36 for questioning the deed has clapsed. Proudfoot v. Austin, 21 Gr. 506.

Sale Before Amending Act.]—Quere, whether the provisions of s. 155 of the Assessment Act of 1869 apply where a sale of land took place before the Act, but the deed was not executed until after; or whether it applies only to a case where both were before or both after the enactment. Ferguson v. Freeman, 27 Gr. 211.

Sale For Too Much.]—Quere, whether since 32 Vict. c. 36 (O.), and preceding statutes, when some taxes are in arrear, but a sale has been made for more, the defect is cured. Nelles v. White, 29 Gr. 338. See 8. C., sub nom. White v. Nelles, 11 S. C. R. 587.

Sale For More Thau is Due.]—Semble, a sale for more taxes than are actually due, cannot be supported under s. 137, where s. 155 does not apply in consequence of the sale not having been openly and fairly conducted. Yokham v. Hall, 13 Gr. 335, and Edinburgh Life Ins. Co. v. Ferguson, 32 U. C. R. 253, followed. Hall v. Farquharson, 15 A. R. 457.

Separation of Counties. —Where taxes had accrued due on certain lands in the county of Bruce, before the separation of that county from Huron:—Held, that the treasurer of the county of Huron, after the separation, could not advertise and sell such lands for the taxes. Held, also, that the sale was not made valid by 32 Vict. c, 23, 8, 155 (O.), for it only applies to deeds given by the sheriff or treasurer authorized to sell. Canada Permanent Building and Savings Society v. Agner. 23 C. P. 200.

Substantial Compliance -- Lists and Substantial Compliance — Lists and Warrant — Indian Lands.] — In September, 1857, a lot in the township of Keppel, in the county of Grey, forming part of a tract of land surrendered to the Crown by the Indians, was sold, and in 1869 the Dominion Government, who retained the management of the Indians lands, issued a patent therefor to the plaintiff. In 1870 the lot in question, less two acres, was sold for layes assessed and accrued due for the years. in question, less two acres, was sold for taxes assessed and accrued due for the years 1864 to 1869, to one D. K., who sold to defendant; and as to the said two acres, the defendant became purchaser thereof at a sale for taxes in 1873. The warrants for the sale of the lands were signed by the warden, had the seal of the county, and authorized the treasurer "to levy upon the various parcels of land hereinafter mentioned for the arrears of taxes due thereon and set opposite to each parcel of land." and attached to these warrants were the lists of lands to be sold, including the lands claimed by plaintiff. The cluding the lands claimed by plaintiff. lists and the warrants were attached together by being pasted the whole length of the top, but the lists were not authenticated by the signature of the warden and the seal of the county. By s. 128 of the Assessment Act, 32 Vict. c. 36 (O.), the warden is required to return one of the lists of the lands to be sold return one of the lists of the lands to be some for taxes, transmitted to him, etc., to the treasurer, with a warrant thereto annexed under the hand of the warden and seal of the county, &c.:—Held, (1) that upon the lands in question being surrendered to the Crown, they became ordinary unparented lands, and they became ordinary unpatence upon being granted became liable to assessment: (2) that the list and warrant may be regarded as one entire instrument, and as the cubarantial requirements of the statute had been complied with, any irregularities had been cured by s. 156 of R. S. O. 1877 c. 180. Church v. Fenton, 5 S. C. R. 239.

Time for Objecting.]—Held, that under s. 155 of 32 Vict. c. 36 (O.), the two years, after which the deed is made valid, must elapse after the execution of the deed and not from the time of sale. Hutchinson v. Collier, 27 C. P. 249.

Time When Right to Sell Accrues—Application of Limitation Clause.]—The land in question was sold for the taxes due for 1852, 3, 4, 5, and 6, under a warrant issued on the 6th July, 1857, the taxes for 1852 having been imposed by a by-law passed on the 25th September, 1852;—Held, that the sale was invalid, there being no portion of the taxes in arrarars for five years when the warrant issued, as required by 16 Vict, c. 182, s. 55; and that this defect was not cured by 32 Vict. c. 36, s. 155 (0.) Quære, whether that section will extend to defects in the deed, or to preliminary defects only. Kempt v. Parkyn, 28 C. P. 123.

Titue — Proceedings Under the Quieting Titlex Act.)—Under s. 1 of 37 Vict. c. 15 (O), a tax deed is valid and binding unless questioned based is valid and binding unless questioned to the process of th

Time.]—Held, following Hutchinson v. Collier, 27 C. P. 249, that the two years given by s. 156 of R. S. O. 1877 c. 180, within which a tax deed can be questioned, is to be computed from the giving of the deed and not from the time of the sale. The court, though not satisfied with the decision as arrived at in that case, considered they were bound by it. Lyttle v. Broddy, 10 O. R. 550.

Time.]—Held, that the two years limited by s. 156, R. S. O. 1877 c. 180, for impeaching a tax sale, run from the time of making the tax deed, not from that of the auction sale. The word "sale" in that section can be properly understood only in the sense of conveyance. Hutchinson v. Collier, 27 C. P. 249, and Church v. Fenton, 28 C. P. 204, approved of. The contrary view expressed in Smith v. Midland, 4. O. R. 494, Lyttle v. Broddy, 10 O. R. 550, Claxton v. Shibley, 10 O. R. 295, and Deverill v. Coe, 11 O. R. 222, dissented from. Donovan v. Hogan, 15 A. R. 432.

Validating Acts.]-Lands in Manitoba assessed for the years 1880-81, were sold in 1882 for unpaid taxes. The statute authorizing the assessment required the municipal council, after the final revision of the assesscouncil, after the nnai revision of the assessment roll in each year, to pass a by-law for levying a rate on all real and personal property mentioned in said roll, but no such by-law was passed in either of the years 1880 or 1881. The lands so assessed and sold were formerly Dominion lands which were sold and paid for in 1879, but the patent did not issue until April, 1881. The patentee weld the lawle and offer the law water a week. sold the lands, and after the tax sale a mortgage thereon was given to R., who sought to have the tax sale set aside as invalid. 45 Vict. c. 16, s. 7 (Man.), provides that every deed made pursuant to a sale for taxes shall be valid, notwithstanding any informality in or preceding the sale, unless questioned within one year from its execution, and 51 Vict. c. 27, s. 58 (Man.), provides that "all assessments heretofore made and rates struck by the municipalities are hereby confirmed and declared valid and binding upon all persons and corporations affected thereby: Held, that the assessments for the years 1880-81 were illegal for want of a by-law, and the sale of taxes thereunder was void. If the lands could be taxed the defect in the assessments was not cured by 45 Vict. c. 16, s. 7, or by 51 Vict. c. 27, s. 58, which would cure irregularities but could not make good a deed that was a nullity as was the deed here:

—Held, per Gwynne, J., Patterson, J., contra, that the patents for the lands not having issued until April, 1881, the said taxes accrued due while the lands vested in the Crown, and so were exempt from taxation:—Held, per Strong, J., following McKay v. Crysler, 3 S. C. R. 436, and O'Brien v. Cogswell, 17 S. C. R. 420, that the operation of 45 Vict. c. 16, s. 7, is restricted to curing the defects in the proceedings for the sale itself as distinguished from the proceedings in assessing and levying the taxes which led to the sale. Whelan v. Ryan, 20 S. C. R. 65.

Warrant Without a Seal.]—Land having been sold for taxes under a warrant issued without a seal:—Held, that the sale was invalid, and the defect not cured by 29 Vict. c. 26. Morgan v. Quesnel, 26 U. C. R. 539.

See the preceding sub-head,

5. Redemption.

Assignce of Owner.]—The assignce of the original owner of property (sold for taxes) is entitled to redeem under ss. 9 and 12 of 16 Vict. c. 183. Gilchrist v. Tobin, 7 C. P. 141.

Attachment of Moneys Paid to Redeem. |—Moneys paid by the owners of land sold for taxes within one year from the day of sale, as redemption money to the county treasurer for the use and benefit of the purchaser, and banked in the name of the county treasurer, cannot be attached at the instance of a creditor of the corporation of the county as a debt due by the bank to the corporation of the county. Wilson v. United Counties of Huron and Bruce, S. L. J., 135.

Deed Executed After Payment.]-The land was sold in October, 1860, for the taxes of 1855, 1856, 1857, and 1859, under a warrant dated 11th June, 1860, the amount paid by the purchaser being $31.51. In January. In January, 1861, the plaintiff applied to the treasurer to know the amount of taxes then due on the lot, and was told $37.48 for the years 1855 to 1860, inclusive, which he paid, and took a receipt as for the taxes of those years. The treasurer, in March, 1861, went to the sheriff's office and caused an entry to be made in the book of sales opposite to this lot, that the taxes had been paid within two months after the sale, that he would pay the purchaser the redemption money, and that no deed was to be given. The sheriff and the treasurer afterwards saw the purchaser and told him what had been done; but, for some reason not explained, the sheriff subsequently executed to him a deed:—Held, that the land had been redeemed, the plaintiff having substantially complied with C. S. U. C. c. 55, s. 148. Allan v. Hamilton, 33 U. C. R. 109.

Part of Lot.]—An entire lot having been sold, one C. paid the redemution money on the east half, and one P. on the west half, but it being represented that P.'s payment had been made by mistake, the treasurer applied the money by P.'s authority to another lot:—Iteld, that under C. S. U. C. c. 35, s. 113, the owner of part of a whole lot sold for taxes might redeem such part on paying the proportionate amount chargeable against it; and that the clause did not merely allow such payment before sale. The east half was therefore held to have been properly redeemed; but, quarre, if redemution of the whole had been necessary, as to the effect of P.'s nayment by mistake. Payme v. Goodycar, 26 U. C. R. 448.

Payment by Stranger.]—Payment and redemption by a stranger before the year is out after the sale will prevent the forfeiture, though done without the knowledge of the owner. Boulton v. Ruttan, 2 O. S. 302.

Payment Direct to Purchaser.]—If the owner, instead of paying the redemption money to the county treasurer for the sheriff's vendee, pays it to the latter personally, and he accepts it, the payment is, in equity, effectual. Cameron v. Barnhart, 14 Gr. 661.
So if the sheriff's vendee verbally agree to

So if the sheriff's vendee verbally agree to accept payment personnly at a distance from the county town, and the owner acts on this agreement, the other cannot afterwards, to the owner's prejudice, require the money to be paid for him to the treasurer, refuse to receive it himself when it is too late to pay the treasurer, and insist on holding the land as forfeited. Ib.

Where such an agreement was proved by a credible witness, but there was contradictory evidence as to whether what took place amounted to an agreement, the court holding that the presumption in a case of doubt must be in favour of fair dealing and not of forfeiture, gave the owner relief. Ib.

Tender Before Sale.]—The defendant, as treasurer, returned the plaintiff's land as part of a tract on which taxes were unpaid. The plaintiff tendered the amount of taxes on his own portion, which defendant refused to accent, and the land was sold:—Held, that an action would not lie against the treasurer for not accepting the redemption money, the tender to and refusal by the latter being equivalent to payment, and that therefore the plaintiff had not lost his land. Cunningham v. Markland, 5 O. S. 645.

Time.]—The time of redemption excludes the day on which the sale takes place; and the expression "from the time" may be held as either inclusive or exclusive of the day, according to the context in the statute and the bearing and object of its provisions. Boulton v. Ruttan, 2 O. S. 362.

Time.]—When a sale took place upon the 7th October, 1840, and the money was not paid to redeem until the 8th October, 1841:—Held, too late. Proudfoot v. Bush, 12 C. P. 52.

Time—Person to Pay.]—Held, that the redemption money had been paid within the three years required by 13 & 14 Vict. c. 67, namely, by 6th March, 1855; and that although this was after the repeal of that Act, yet under 29 Vict. c. 26, the payment was made good. Under 13 & 14 Vict. c. 67, the redemption money was to be paid by the owner:—Semble, that this would include a person in possession claiming title as purchaser. Mc-Dougall v. McMillan, 25 C. P. 75.

Treasurer's Certificate of Non-reademption.]—Held, that the certificate of the treasurer that the land was not redeemed is sufficient, and that an affidavit cannot be required from a nubil officer as to the proper discharge of his duty. More evidence may be required as between a vendor and purchaser than in a suit where the owner or those claiming under him are parties, Re Morton and Lot No. 6 on Plan No. 589 in the County of York, 7 O. R. 59.

Treasurer's Certificate of Redemption. —If the treasurer certify a redemption improperly he is liable, and not the sheriff refusing to make the conveyance. Boulton v. Ruttan. 2 O. S. 362.

6. Miscellaneous Cases.

Construction of Statutes.]—Tax statutes should not be construed as statutes creating a forfeiture, but rather in the same manner as statutes by which lands are sold under execution for debt, and the same rules which apply to sales under execution should govern ax sales. Cotter v. Sutherland, 18. C. P. 357.

Delay.]—Where the owner of land sold had paid no taxes thereon for ten years, and did not redeem within the year, and suffered four years after the sale to elapse before taking any steps to impeach the sale:—Held, that he was precluded by his laches from obtaining relief, supposing him to have been otherwise entitled to it. Scholfield v. Dickcrson, 10 Gr. 226.

Division of Districts.1—A sale of lands made before 8 Vict. c. 22, in the district of Colborne for arrens of taxes, part of which had accrued due before the division of the district of Newcastle (of which Colborne was formerly a part), is legal. Doe d. Earl of Mountcashel v. Grorer, 4 U. C. R. 23, Followed in Cotter v. Sutherland, 18 C. P. 237

Dower.]—A sale of land for taxes destroys the right of the widow of the owner to dower. Tomlinson v. Hill, 5 Gr. 231.

Improvements, |—Held, that the plaintiss in this case, claiming against the sale, were not bound to pay the value of improvements under 33 Vict. c. 23 (O.), for the sale was not void by reason of uncertain or insufficient description of the lands sold, and therefore not within the statute. Edinburgh Life Assurance Co. v. Ferguson, 32 U. C. R. 253.

Improvements and Purchase Money.]—Certain land was assessed, advertised for sale, described in the warrant, and sold at a tax sale, and conveyed, as part of lot S—it being in fact part of lot 5. The treasurer, who conducted the sale, described the locality of the land intended to be sold, and the taxes were due on it:—Held, a case within 33 Vict. c. 23, s. 9 (O.), where land having been legal is liable to be assessed, had been sold as for arrears of taxes, and such sale, &c., was invalid by reason of uncertain or insufficient description of the land; and that the purchaser was therefore entitled to his purchase money and interest and the value of his improvements, &c. Churcher v. Bates, 42 U. C. R. 466.

Improvements and Disbursements of Tax Purchaser.]—Held, that the defendant was entitled under R. S. O. 1877, c. 95, s. 4, though not under R. S. O. 1877, c. 180, s. 159, to compensation for improvements to the land under mistake of title, and also to be paid the amount paid for taxes, interest, and expenses. Haisley v. Somers, 13 O. R. 600.

Land Described for Patent.]—Where land was returned under 59 Geo. III. c. 7. s. 12, as described for patent, it was liable for taxes, and having been regularly sold therefor, it was held that the sheriff's deed must brevail against a patent subsequently issued to the original nominee or his representative. Charles v. Dulmage, 14 U. C. R. 585; Ryckman v. Van Voltenburg, 6 C. P. 385.

Limitations Act.]—The Statute of Limitations does not begin to run against a tax purchaser until the period of redemption has expired. Smith v. Midland R. W. Co., 4 O. R. 494.

Ottawa District.] — Quere, as to the effect of 3 Vict. c. 46, relating to tax sales in the Ottawa district, and of the payment of taxes made by defendant to the wrong officer, as stated in this case. Cushing v. Mc-Donald, 26 U. C. R. 605.

Patented Land.)—On the evidence set out in this case, to sustain a title under a tax sale made in 1839, it was held sufficiently shewn that the land had been returned by the surveyor-general as described for patent. Jones v. Courden, 34 U. C. R. 345.

Purchaser's Lien—No Arrears.]—R. S. O. 1877 c. 180, s. 165, does not apply in a case where there have been no taxes in arrear at the time of the sale of the land for taxes. Charlton v, Watson, 4 O. R. 489.

Purchase Money. |—Action by sheriff for purchase money—Right to maintain—Form of declaration. See Jarvis v. Cayley, 11 U. C. R. 282. Recovering Back Purchase Money. |—
Where lands not assessable were improperly sold for taxes: — Held, that the purchaser could not recover back the money in an action against the county. It did not apnear in this case whether a conveyance had been executed to the plaintiff or not, Austin v. County of Simcoc, 22 U. C. R. 73.

Retroactive Effect of Act.]—The 8 Vict. c. 22 is a declaratory Act, retrospective as well as prospective. Doe d. Earl of Mountcashel v. Grover, 4 U. C. R. 23.

Sale of Mortgaged Land—Purchase by Mortgagen, — Lands under mortgage were offered for sale by the municipality for arrears of taxes and purchased by the wife of the mortgage. The tax sale certificate was afterwards assigned to La, who obtained a dead from the municipality. In an action against the mortgager, his wife, and La, for foreclosure the mortgager, like wife, and La, for foreclosure the mortgager, like wife, and La, for foreclosure the mortgager, like wife, and La, for foreclosure the mortgage is dead of the dead of the contract of the contract

XI. STATUTE LABOUR.

Action to Recover Payment Under Protest.—The plaintiff, to prevent bis lands from heing sold for taxes as non-resident lands, paid under protest to the sheriff the sum claimed, including costs, and then sued the county to recover back part of the amount, consisting of commutation of statute labour, which he disputed:—Held, that he could not recover, for the sheriff was not the agent of the county of the dependency and there was nothing to shew that he had paid it over to their treasurer. The non-resident land fund is so far the property of the county, that they may be liable for it in such an artion. Robertson v. County of Wellingfon, 27 U. C. R. 336.

Commutation.]—Municipal corporations, under 12 Vict. c. 81, and 16 Vict. c. 182, could not fix the commutation for statute labour at a higher rate than 2s. 6d. per day. In re Till and City of Toronto, 13 U. C. R. 477.

Commutation.] — Held, that under 16 Yet, c. 182, and 22 Vict. c. 90, s. 400, statute labour was imposed on all persons assessed on the assessment roll of a town, whether residents or non-residents, and that in the case of the latter the commutation was fixed by the statute at 2s. 64, no by-law being necessary unless the municipality intended to fix it at a higher or lower rate. Robinson v. Town of Stratford, 23 U. C. R. 93 U. C. R. 93.

Expenditure of Commutation Receipts.]—A township council can provide for the performance of statute labour upon the roads of their township to the extent of the commutation tax charged in respect of non-resident lands, and for payment therefor out of the general funds of the municipality before such tax has been received from the county treasurer; and the performance of such work is not necessarily restricted to any particular statute labour division. In re Allan and Township of Amabel, 32 C. P. 242.

Fines.]—The municipality of a township by by-law enacted, that any person liable to perform statute labour, who, after being duly notified, should neglect or refuse to attend, should forfeit and pay 5s. for every day he should so neglect or refuse, and the payment of such fine should release such person from the performance of the duty required of him by the law:—Held, not an attempt to compel commutation at a rate exceeding 2s. 6d, per day; and that the by-law was good. In re Bannerman and Township of Yarmouth, 15 U. C. R. 14.

Fines. |—A by-law directing that the overseers of highways should bring any person refusing or neglecting to perform statute labour before the reeve or the nearest justice of the peace, who upon conviction should impose a fine of 5s, for each day's neglect, with costs, and adjudge that the payment of the said fine and costs should not relieve him from performance of the habour; and in default of nayment should issue a distress warrant:— Held, good. In re Stoddard and United Townships of Wiberforce, Grattan, and Fraser, 15 U. C. R. 193.

Imprisonment.]—Under C. S. U. C. c. 55, s. 86, a warrant may issue to imprison a person for non-payment of statute labour tax, without first summoning him to answer, or making a conviction. Regina v. Morris, 21 U. C. R. 392.

U. C. R. 392.

It is not necessary, under C. S. U. C. c. 126, to set aside such warrant before an action can be brought against the justice. It can be brought against the justice. Ib.

The point decided being new, the court discharged without costs a rule nisi obtained to quash the conviction. Ib.

Jurisdiction of County Judge.]—An island forming part of a municipality, but situated in no road division, and deriving no benefit from the roads of the municipality, having been assessed for statute labour, the owners appealed to the court of revision and thence to the county Judge, on the grounds of over assessment, and that the property was not liable to statute labour. On an application to stay proceedings before the Judge:—Held, that though a county Judge has authority to increase or reduce an assessment, or to rectify errors in or omissions from the roll, the question of liability for statute labour is beyond his jurisdiction. A writ of prohibition was accordingly granted. Township of Washington v. Long Point Co., 5 P. R. 279.

Non-resident Land.]—Observations as to assessment of several parcels of non-resident land less than 200 acres for statute labour. See Hall v. Farquharson, 15 A. R. 457.

Place.]—A party must perform his statute labour when called upon within the division of the township in which he resides. Gates v. Davenish, 6 U. C. R. 261.

Place.]—A proprietor of land cannot be compelled to do statute labour in the township in which the land lies, unless he is himself resident there. Moore v. Jarron, 9 U. C. R. 933 Road Company.] — The plaintiffs were incorporated by 10 & 11 Viet. c. 95, to make a road from the town of Streetsville to different points specified, and had the right to claim the statue labour, by commutation or otherwise, to the extent of one half concession on each side of their road, and to cell set if from the persons line. The control of the persons line of the persons of paintiffs, and, which ran through its line of persons of paintiffs, and, which ran through the persons of paintiffs were entitled to recover from the defendants, as money had and received, so much of this sum as was received in respect of persons or property forming no part of the village of Streetsville mentioned in the plaintiffs. Act of incorporation, but within half a concession on each side of their road, Streetsville Plank Road Co, v. Village of Streetsville Plank Road Co, v. Village of Streetsville persons or property forming the persons of the p Separate Lotts.]—Held, under 13 & 14 Vict. e. 67, where a non-resident owns several lats in the same township or county, that he is chargeable with the rate of commutation estimated with reference to the value of such loss separately, and cannot claim to have them rated according to their aggregate value. Canada Commany y. Howard, 9 U. C. R. 654.

Village.]—The municipal council of a village can impose the performance of statute labour, or a tax in lieu thereof, only on those inhabitants not otherwise assessed. In replicion v. Village of Galt. 9 U. C. R. 257.

Village.]—There is no liability to perform statute labour in a village municipality, and a by-law providing for its commutation was held ultra vires and void, and was quashed. In re Stapner, 46 U. C. R. 275.

XII. MISCELLANEOUS CASES.

Constitutional Law — Penalty for not Paying Taxes.]—The Municipal Act of Manitoba provides that persons paying taxes before 1st December in cities and 31st December in rural municipalities shall be allowed 10 per cent. discount; that from that date until 1st March the taxes shall be payable at par; and after 1st March 10 per cent on the original amount of the tax shall be added:—Held, that the 10 per cent. added on 1st March was only an additional rate of tax imposed as a penalty for non-payment, which the local Legislature, under its authority to begislate with respect to municipal institutions, had power to impose, and it was not "interest" within the meaning of s. 91 of the B. N. A. Act. Ross v. Torrance, 2 Legal News 186; overruled. Lynch v. Canada N. W. Land Co., South Dufferin v. Morden, Gibbins v. Barber, 19 S. C. R. 204.

Correction of Roll.]—One S., from 1858 to 1891, inclusive, occupied as lessee, a house and land adjoining on lot 24, part of which lot in 1854 had been laid out by his landlord into village lots, and a plan filed. He had been regularly assessed and had paid for the premises thus occupied by him, but the whole of lot 24 had during these four years been returned as non-resident. After the treasurer lad issued his warrant for sale to the sheriff, he was applied to to correct the mistake in the rolls, so as to except the part occupied by S. from that returned, but he refused to do more than allow the sheriff to deduct the amount paid by S., who to relieve his goods from seizure paid under protest the taxes on the remainder of lot 24, 8228. He then applied for a mandamus to the treasurer to make the correction, but the court refused to interfere. In re Secker and Paxton, 22 U. C. R. 118.

Effect of Plan.)—Quere, whether a person who has laid out land into town lots or village lots for sale cannot afterwards if he find he cannot dispose of them as such, or for any other reason, replace his land as it was before. In re Allen, 10 O. R. 110.

Fixtures, |—An engine and boiler in the hands of a receiver having been sold for taxes, and the establishment in which they were allowed to remain after the sale having been afterwards sold by order of the court in one lot as a going concern, it was held, under the facts stated in the case, that the purchaser of such chattels at the tax sale was entitled to a corresponding part of the purchase money realized at the chancery sale. Gibson v. Lovell, 19 Gr. 197.

Halifax Assessment Act.]—The Halifax City Assessment Act, ISSS, made the taxes assessed on real estate in the city a first lien thereon except as against the Crown:—Held, that such lien attached on a lot assessed under the Act in preference to a mortgage made before the Act was passed. O'Brien v. Cogsuell, 17 S. C. R. 420.

Lease-Building over Lane-Covenant to Pay Taxes. |—A lease made in pursuance of the Short Forms Act of specifically described a provision that premises contained essee might at any time build or extend any north of the premises hereby demised," the uilding or extension to be a being building building or extension to be at least nine feet above the ground, and the lesses covenanted to pay all taxes " to be charged upon the demised premises or upon the said lessor on account thereof," The lease also contained a provision that if the lessors elected not to renew the lease, they were to pay for the buildings which should at that time be erectbuildings which should at that the be retrieved "on the lands and premises hereby demised and over the said lane:"—Held, per Hagarty, C.J.O., and Burton, J.A., affirming 26 O. R. 489, that the covenant to pay taxes did not apply to the portion of the buildings for the same part of the part of afterwards erected over the lane. Per Osler and Maclennan, JJ.A., that the right to build was part of the subject matter passing by the lease, and that the lessee was liable to pay the taxes assessable against the por-tion of the building over the lane:—Held, also, however, that this was at all events a question of assessment, and that although the lessor had been assessed in respect of the lane for its full value as vacant land, and the lessee had been assessed in respect of the extension as merely assessed in respect of the extension as increases on much bricks and mortar, the lessor could not recover any portion of the taxes paid by him, the apportionment of the assessment being altogether a matter for the assessment department. Janes v. O'Kecfe, 23 A. R. 129.

Lease—Covenant to Pay Taxes.]—Upon a reference to settle the form of a lease, under a contract by a municipal corporation to demise land owned by it to a railway company for a long term of years with perpetual right of renewal, evidence of surrounding circumstances and the practice and usage of conveyancers is admissible to enable the referee to decide whether the lease should contain a covenant by the lessee to pay municipal taxes. In re Canadian Pacific R. W. Co. and City of Toronto, 27 A. R. 54.

Lease—Taxes of Former Years—Tenant Primarily Liable.]—By the Assessment Act, R. 8, O. 1857 c. 224, s. 26, any occupant may deduct from his rent any taxes paid by him if the same could also have been recovered from the owner, or previous occupant, unless there is a special agreement between the occupant and the owner to the contrary: —Heid, that under the above section a tenant is not at liberty to deduct from the rent, and to compel his landiord to pay, taxes for which the tenant and others were jointly assessed for a year prior to his existing tenancy. Heyden v. Castle, 15 O. R. 257, discussed. Mechan v. Pours, 30 O. R. 433.

List of Taxes.]—Held, that 13 & 14 Vict. c. 67, ss. 46 and 47, did not make the list of taxes directed to be prepared by the treasurer binding. MeAdie v. Corby, 30 U. C. R. 349.

Montreal Harbour Improvements. A by-law passed in 1889 under the Quebec statute 52 Vict. c. 79, s. 139, provided for a special loan in aid of the Montreal harbour improvements, and appropriated $13,750 thereof for the construction of a tunnel with approaches as shewn on a plan annexed from Craig street, in a line with Beaudry street to the tunnel, passing by the side of W.'s land, and subsequently a resolution was passed to open, alongside the open cut approach, a high open, alongside the open cut approach a man level roadway to give communication from Craig street to Notre Dame street, on the surface of the ground. These works consti-tuted, in fact, an extension of Beaudry street, from the line of Craig street, 77 feet in width, of which 42 feet constituted an open-cut approach to the tunnel, and the remainder the high-level roadway, as shewn on the plans, this prolongation being 42 feet wider than Beaudry street. The resolution provided that a portion of the expense should be paid by the parties interested and benefited as for local improvements made by the "widening" of Beaudry street. Upon proceedings to quash the assessment, the superior court held that it was authorized and legalized as an "existing roll," by the Act 57 Vict. c. 57, s. 1 (Que.), and this judgment was affirmed by the court of review. Held, that, notwithstanding the reference therein to "existing rolls," the represent the reliable to existing rous, the application of the latter Act should be restricted to the cost of the "widening" only of the streets therein named in cases where there were, at the time of its enactment, existing rolls prepared by the commissioners fixing the limits for that purpose, and these words could not have the effect of extending the nature and character of such works so as to include works manifestly forming part as to include works mannestly forming part of the harbour improvement scheme and chargeable against the special loan. White v. City of Montreal, 23 S. C. R. 677.

Non-Resident Land Fund.]—Held, that all moneys received by the county treasurer from non-resident land tax, either from the owners or from the proceeds of tax sales, do not become in his hands the moneys of any particular municipalities, so as to entitle them to sue him at once as for their moneys.

but that such funds must be considered as belonging to the county council, whose duty it is to appropriate them as by law directed; and therefore held, that an action for money had and received would not lie against the treasurer, at the suit of a township municipality, for moneys paid over by him, before such appropriation, to the township reeve, who had misapplied them. Quere, whether an action would lie against the treasurer in any case for non-payment, or whether he could discharge himself by payment to the reeve. Township of Notlawasaga v. Boys, 21 C. P. 106.

Non-Resident Land Fund.]—Sums were credited by the trensurer of a county in the corporation books to certain townships, in respect of the non-resident land fund. Portions thereof were paid over to the townships, and other sums were in the same books charged against one of the townships which the township considered itself not chargeable with. The trensurer's books, containing these entries, were audited and approved by the county council appropriating the fund:—Held, that the townships had no relief in equity. United Townships of Mara and Ruma v. County of Unatrio, 13 Gr, 347.

Payment by Sheriff. |—A sheriff returned to n ven. ex. and fi. fa. residue against goods that he had made $50, out of which be had paid a collector of taxes $48.39 chimed by the collector as taxes due by the defendant at the time of the seizure under the writ on land upon which the goods were, and of which the sheriff had notice prior to the sale, and that he had retained the balance towards his fees, &c. No distress had been made by the collector:—Held, that the sheriff must account to the execution creditor for the $50, because a distress by the collector is a necessary antecedent to obtaining the benefit of the statute. Adshead v, Girant, 4 P. R. 121.

Percentage on Arrears. |—Under C. S. U. C. c. 55, the 10 per cent. charged upon arrears of taxes due upon land is to be charged upon the whole amount due at each annual settlement, thereby making it a compound computation of 10 per cent. each year, and not upon the amount of each year's taxes separately. Gillespie v. City of Hamilton, 12 C. P. 426.

Possession—Tax Title.]—Sub-section 4 of s. 5 of the Real Property Limitations Act, R. S. O. 1887 c. 111. requiring twenty years' possession as to non-cultivated lands, only operates in favour of the patentee and those claiming under him, and not to a title acquired under a sale for taxes. Brooke v. Gibson, 27 O. R. 218.

Provision for Losses,]—Quare, whether a township council is at liberty to provide for abatements and losses which may occur in the collection of the county rate in respect of personal property. Grier v. St. Vincent, 13 Gr. 512.

Purchase by Life Tenant—Purchaser for Value without Notice.]—One Tripp, being owner of certain land, executed a marriage settlement, under which his wife was entitled to the land for her life; the taxes afterwards fell into arrear, and the land was sold by the sheriff to pay them. By arrangement with the purchasers Tripp's widow became entitled to their interests in the property; and she having sold it to the defendant G., the purchaser at sheriff's sale conveyed to G. In a suit by the assignee of Tripp's heirs to set aside this sale, G. claimed to be a purchaser for valve without notice. The same solicitor acted for the vendors and vendee, G., in the transaction of the sale to G., and this solicitor knew then and before that Tripp had been the owner, and that he had executed a marriage settlement under which his wife was tenant for life; but he did not know or suspect she was bound to pay the taxes for which the land was sold, and he did not communicate to G. that she was under any such obligation:—Held, that G., was not affected by constructive notice of the liability; and the bill against him was dismissed with costs. Monro v. Rudd, 20 Gr. 55.

Quieting Titles Act.]—Under the Act for Quieting Titles the court has no jurisdiction to grant a certificate unless all taxes except those for the current year have been paid. Exparte Chamberlain, 2 Ch. Ch. 352.

Seizure for Rent after Seizure for Taxes, I—C. owned a boiler and smoke pipe, which had been erected in a building of which he was sub-lessee. On the 19th February they were sold for city taxes due by him, and bought by the plaintiff; but the whole purchase money not being paid, they were left in charge of the city chamberlain. On the 25rd he settled the balance, and was removing the goods on the 26th, when they were seized for rent due to the original landlord;—Held, that they were liable to such seizure;—Held, also, that the goods could not be considered as in the custody of the law after the sale on the 19th February. Langton v. Bacon, 17 U. C. R. 559.

Sinking Fund.]—Remarks as to the practice of omitting to levy in each year for the full amount of the sinking fund required for loans, and its effect upon the rights of creditors, taken in connection with the doctrine against rating for debts past due. County of Frontenac v. City of Kingston, 30 U. C. R. 584.

Sinking Fund.]—Mandamus to municipal corporation to levy sinking fund. See Clarke v. Town of Palmerston, 6 O. R. 616.

Tax. |—Every contribution to a public purpose imposed by superior authority is a 'tax." Ecclésiastiques de St. Sulpice de Montreal v. City of Montreal, 16 S. C. R. 399.

Tenant for Life.]—Semble, a tenant for life of the whole estate of the testator, consisting of an improved farm and of wild lands, is bound to keep down the taxes upon the whole. Biscoe v. VanBearle, 6 Gr. 438.

Tenant for Life.]—A devisee of a life estator's property is bound to keep down the annual taxes on the land, and they form a first charge on the testator's interest. Gray v. Hatch. 18 Gr. 72.

Tenant for Life.]—As between a tenant for life in possession and a remainderman of property, part of which is productive and part unproductive, the life tenant will not be permitted to receive rents from part of the property while he allows taxes to accumulate on the vacant portion. Order made for a receiver of the estate of the tenant for life to pay the arrears of taxes out of the rents. Re Denison, Waldie v. Denison, 24 O. R. 197.

Title.)—The plaintiff, being in possession of a stock of goods, was assessed therefor in his own name, ngainst which he appealed to the court of revision and to the courty out of the goods to one R. M. upon trusts for creditors was produced, and the plaintiff's name was erased and that of R. M. substituted therefor. The plaintiff alleged, however, that his name was not struck out on his application, for that his ground of appeal was that the goods were not equal to the debts due upon them, and so were exempt. The defendants having distrained upon the goods, the plaintiff alleged, however are the plaintiff and the plaintiff that the plaintiff and the plaintiff replaintiff and the plaintiff replaintiff alleged, the plaintiff experience of the plaintiff and the plaintiff alleged, that under the assignment he had a right of possession in the goods, which, being coupled with actual possession, entitled him to maintain replevin under our statue: that he was not estopped; and that the plaintiff not being shewn to be indebted to defendants for taxes, the avowry failed. Sargant v. City of Toronto, 12 C. P. 185.

Vendor and Purchaser—Proof of Tax Title. |—The non-production of a certificate of no taxes in arrear is no objection to the title of a vendor. Thompson v. Millikin, 9 Gr. 359.

Vendor and Purchaser—Unpaid Taxes.]
Compensation was granted to the purchaser of land out of the purchase money, for taxes due on the land and unpaid. Stewart v.
Hunter, 2 Ch. Ch. 335.

Vendor and Purchaser—Rate not Struck.]—Under the Assessment Act, the assessment is for the purpose of designating the person to be charged, but no debt is due until the rate on the dollar is imposed, and the amount of taxes thus ascertained and fixed. By an agreement, dated 4th November, 1881, between one Q, and defendants for the sale of Q,'s business, after a recital to pay against, c. the defendant covenanted dues, and liabilities, whether due or accuring, contracted by said Q, in connection with said business, &c. Q, was assessed for goods sold under the agreement before the making thereof, but the rate was not imposed, and the amount of taxes ascertained and fixed until May, 1882, thereafter:—Held, that there being no debt until the rate was struck in May, 1882, Q, when he sold the goods should have applied to have the purchaser's name inserted instead of his own, or have expressly provided in his agreement that the purchaser should indemnify him against this amount; and that the said taxes were not a debt contracted in connection with said business within the terms of the agreement. Decanney v. Dorr, 4 O. R. 208.

Vendor and Purchaser—Evidence to Support Tax Decd.]—On an application under the Vendors and Purchasers Act, R. S. O. 1877 c. 109, to compel a purchaser to carry out a purchase, it was shewn that the vendor claimed through a tax sale, and had declined to produce any further evidence of the validity of the tax sale than the treasnrer's deed, and what might be obtained from the treasurer's books, returns, and warrants, to which fie referred the purchaser:—Held, that the treasurer's lists of lands in arrear for taxes furnished to the warden would be as valid evidence of the non-payment as the treasurer's warrant to the sherif under 16 Vict. c 182, s. 55, was held to be by the judgment in Clarke v. Buchanan, 25 Gr. 559; and that coupled with the warrant from the warden they would be conclusive, and would afford evidence of non-payment up to the time of the sale. Re Morton, 7 O. R. 59.

Vendor and Purchaser—Local Improvement Rates.,—In a contract for sale and exchange of certain lands free from incumbrances, it was provided that "unearned fire insurance premium, interest, taxes, and rental." should be "proportioned and allowed to date of completion of sale:"—Held, not withstanding, that special frontage rates imposed for local improvements and construction of sewers by by-law passed prior to the contract, the period for payment of which had not expired, were incumbrances to be discharged by the vendors respectively:— Held, also, that the vendors were likewise bound to discharge a special frontage rate imposed by a by-law passed subsequently both to the date of the contract and the date fixed for the completion of the sale, inasmuch as the work was actually done and the expenditure actually made before the contract, the council having first done the work and then passed the by-law to pay for it under 53 Vict. c. 50, s. 38 (O.) The substantial charge c. 5d, s. 38. (O.) The substantial charge as a whole came into existence upon the finishing of the work. Cumberland v. Kearns, 18 O. R. 151, 17 A. R. 281, commented on and distinguished. Re Graydon and Hammill, 20 O. R. 199.

Vendor and Purchaser-Local Improvement Rates.]—A contract for the sale of land provided for the payment of the purchase money in quarterly instalments; when half was paid the vendor was to convey and give the usual statutory covenants; the purchaser was to pay taxes from the date of the con-tract. In an action to recover instalments tract. In an action to recover instalments under the contract:—Held, that local im-provement rates imposed by municipal bylaws after, the work having been done before, the date of the contract, were incumbrances to be discharged by the vendor; but rates imposed and work done after the contract Re Graydon and Hammill, 20 O. R. 199, followed. Ecclésiastiques de St. Sulpice de Montreal v. City of Montreal, 16 S. C. R. 400, distinguished:—Held, also, that the covenant for payment of the instalments and the covenant against incumbrances were independent; and the vendor was entitled to judgment for the instalments; but the purchaser was entitled to shew the existence of incumbrances as an equitable ground of relief, and, the time for completion of the contract not having arrived, to pay into court so much of his purchase money as might be necessary to protect him against the incumbrances. McDonald v. Murray, 11 A. R. 191, and Tisdale v. Dallas, 11 C. P. 238, distinguished. Armstrong v. Auger, 21 O. R. 98.

Vendor and Purchaser—Taxes Due up to Time of Sale.]—A mortgages, under two mortgages, sold the land under the nower of sale in the second, and by his conditions of sale stipulated, amongst other things, that he was selling merely all his estate or interest under the second, subject to the first mortgare the second, subject to the first mortgare was taken to that if second repared to the second representation of the precise mortgage and interest; that if no objection was made within a certain time the vendor's title was to be held good and considered accepted by the purchaser, and the vendor entitled to the consideration; and further, that the first mortgage could be paid off:—Held, that taxes due up to the sale should be paid by the vendor. Re Wilson and Houston, 20 O. R. 532.

. Vendor and Purchaser—Local Improvements.]—Effect of local improvement rate created at the instance of covenantor (and others) upon his covenant against incumbrances. See Cumberland v. Kearns, 18 O. R. 151, 17 A. R. 281.

Vendor and Purchaser—Special Tas— Ex Post Facto Legislation.1—Assessment rolks were made by the city of Montreal under 27 & 28 Vict. c. 60, and 29 & 30 Vict. c. 46, apportioning the cost of certain local improvements on lands benefited thereby. One of the rolks was set aside and the other was lost. The corporation obtained power from the legislature by two special Acts to make new rolk, but in the meantime the property in question had been sold and conteved. New rolks were made assessing the lands for the same improvements and the purchaser paid the taxes and brought suit en garantie to recover the amount from the vendor. Held, that as two taxes could not both exist for the same purpose at the same time, and the rolks made after the sale were therefore the only rolks in force, no taxes for the local improvement had been legally imposed till after the vendor had become owner of the lands, and that the vendor was not obliged by her warranty and declaration that taxes had been paid to reimburse the purchaser for the payment of the special taxes apportioned against the lands subsequent to the sale. I. BY AND AGAINST WHOM AND FOR WHAT ATTACHING PROCEEDINGS MAY BE TAKEN.

Agent. | — May be attached when the garnishee resides out of the jurisdiction. Brown v. Merrills, 3 L. J. 31.

Agent—Foreign Corporation.]—But not where the garnishee is a foreign corporation, out of the jurisdiction, as the statute only allows an agent to be served with a writ of summons for the purpose of commencing an action. Lundy v. Dickson, 6 L. J. 92; Bank of British North America v. Laughrey, 2 C. L. J. 44.

Amount Actually Due, I.—A garnishee order binds only so much of the debt owing to the debtor from a third party as the debtor can honestly deal with at the time the zarnishee order nisi is obtained and served. Where a final order for payment over has been issued, and it afterwards appears that the debt was assigned before the attaching order was moved for, the final order should be reschided. Beaty v. Hackett, 14 P. 13. 395; Parker v. Methenia, 14 P. R. 34.

Annity—Breach of Trust.)—A testator hum, payable out of the rents, income, and profits of his real and personal estates indiscriminately for the support of his widow and family (the widow having become sole executivity). Here senarate creditors were held entitled to have her share of the annuity severed and attached to satisfy their debts, subject, however, to the prior claims of the estate against her as executrix, to be recouped for breaches of trust and the like; and, semble, that where there is no form of legal proceeding or process whereby such a fund can be reached, the court of chancery has power, under 22 Vict. c. 22, s. 288, to apply a remedy, as in this case by equitable attachment. Bank of British North America v. Matthews, 8 Gr.

But see next case, and see Blake v. Jarvis, 17 Gr. 203.

Annuity.]—A bill was filed by judgment creditors alleging that their debtor was devisee and executrix of her husband; that she was entitled to an annuity under his will, and was a creditor of his estate for advances she had made to pay his debts, and claiming that these debts and claims should be ascertained, the estate administered, and sufficient land of the testator sold to pay what the estate owed, or so much of it as would cover the judgment debt:—Held, that the plaintiff was not entitled to relief. Bank of British North America v. Matthews, 8 Gr. 486, overruled. Gilbert v. Jarvis, 16 Gr. 255.

Assignment After Attaching Order.]

—On 30th July, 1859, the garnishee executed a mortague for £200 to the judgment deltor. In the property of the mortage. An attaching order was obtained before the first instalment fell due, and this on 29th June, 1860, was followed by an order that the garnishee should pay to plaintiff £34 11s, 8d. in the following manner:—£16 13s. 4d. on 30th July, 1861, and £17 18s. 4d. on 30th July, 1862. An application was made to set aside these orders upon a suggestion that the mortgage had been assigned; but it appearing that the assignment, if any, was made after the attaching order land been served, the application failed. Worthington v. Peden, 8 L. J. 48.

Assignment Before Attaching Order,]—An order to pay over was made upon a summons of which the judgment debtor had no notice. It appeared, on motion to rescind such order, that the debt had been assigned before the order, of which the garnishees had notice before the summons was served on them, to which they did not appear, and before they paid over the money under the order. The order was rescinded, with costs to be paid by the judgment creditor, who was also aware of the assignment. Ferguson v. Carman, 26 U. C. R. 26.

It was alleged, but held not sufficiently proved, that the judgment debtor was insolvent when he made the assignment; and quere, whether the judgment creditor could set that up. Ib.

Assignment Before Attaching Order. —A debt duly assigned to another is not garnishable, and the attaching order will be set aside; and where the judgment creditor was aware that this answer would be made to his application by the judgment debtor, the latter was allowed the costs incident to such answer. Macaulay v. Rumball, 19 C. P. 284.

Assignment Before Attaching Order.]—Orders upon a garnishee to attach and pay over were set aside, on its being shewn that the debt in question had been assigned by the garnishee before the judgment creditor had obtained his judgment; but no costs were given, as the assignment but no costs were notice of the assignment to the garnishee. Grant v. McDonell, 33 U. C. R. 412.

Assignment Without Notice to Garnishee,1—Although an order is not intended to operate upon debts already assigned, yet, where the assignee had neglected to give the garnishee precise and distinct notice of the assignment, and his altorney stood by whilst such order was made, and the garnishee had paid the debt to the judgment creditor, the court relieved the garnishee from further proceedings taken at the instance of the assignee in the name of the judgment debtor. In re
Jones, Ex parte Kelly, 7, C. P. 149.

Assignees of Contract, |-N. had a contract with the corporation of Guelph for work, defendants being his sureties. After completing a portion he gave it up, and assigned to defendants all his interest in the contract, giving then power to finish the work and receive payment, the moneys to be applied to indemnify themselves and complete the work, and the residue to be paid to him. N. afterwards left the country, and they finished the job. The plaintiff, who had been N.'s forenan, and continued with defendants, recovered indgment against them for his services, and the defendants, having sued the corporation in N.'s name on the contract, obtained an award against them:—Held, that the plaintiff might attach the moneys which defendants, as assigness of N. were entitled to recover from the corporation. Aften v. Bosoner, 2.1. R. 18.

Assignee of Judgment Creditor.] — The assignee of a judgment creditor can proceed in his name to attach a debt. In re Smart v. Miller, 3 P. R. 385.

Attorney of Absconding Debtor.]—
The court will not order an attorney to pay over money which has been attached in his hands as the property of an absconding debtor.
Clark v. Stover, T. T. 3 & 4 Vict.

Award and Decree—Untaxed Costs.]—
A debt is garnishable where it consists of money due under an award and decree of the court of chancery, although the full amount is not ascertained by reason of the costs not having been taxed. When the amount in such a case is finally ascertained, execution may be issued against the garnishee, although he still disputes his liability, and the Judge is not bound to direct an issue. In re Sato
v. Hubbard, 8 P. R. 445.

Balance After Set-off. —In general, where there are opposite claims between the parties, only the balance can be attached. Nedley v. Buffalo, &c., R. W. Co., 3 L. J. 111.

Building Contract—Default.]—McLeod contracted with Hawkins to recet a house, for which he was to receive $1,225; $300 when the frame was up, $300 when the building was wholly enclosed, and the blahance when the work was all completed. The building was to be completed on or before the 3rd February, 1884. McLeod went on with the work and received the two sums of $300, but he had not completed the building on the 3rd February. 1884. He, however, continued the work till after that time, and until after the 1st April, when, the building being still unfinished, Hawkins entered, took possession, and completed it, McCraney & Son, having a judgment against McLeod, obtained and served an attaching order and garnishing summons on Hawkins, the garnishee, on the 15th March, 1884:—Held, that at the time of serving the attaching order no debt existed according to the terms of the contract, and no promise to pay had arisen by implication, and therefore there was nothing upon which the attaching order could operate. McCraney v. McLeod, 10 P. R. 539.

Claim in Litigation.]-Pending an appeal from the judgment herein by defendant, the amount thereof was paid into the court of common pleas under an order of that court. Before such payment, one F. obtained a garnishee summons in the division court against the plaintiff as primary debtor and the defendant as garnishee, but through some oversight no provision was made in the order for the result of the garnishee proceedings. After the appeal had been dismissed defendant applied for an order that the amount of the claim in the division court suit be retained out of the money in court, to abide the result of such suit. It was not shewn that this claim was a debt that could be garnished. or that the division court had jurisdiction in the matter, and it appeared that the plaintiff had assigned his claim to the money in court to a third party in ignorance of the garnishee proceedings, which he had not heard of until this application was made: -Held, that under these circumstances the defendant was not entitled to relief. Parkinson v. Clendinning, 7 P. R. 367.

Costs Not Taxed.]—By the judgment in this action the defendant was found to owe the plaintiff $115, and he was ordered to pay the plaintiff $155, and he was ordered to pay the plaintiff $15 and he was ordered to pay the plaintiff is the plaintiff plaintiff is the plaintiff is the plaintiff is the plaintiff is sued garnishment process from a division court, attaching all debts due from defendant to plaintiff. After the taxation of the defendant is interlocutory costs, the defendant paid $115 into the division court, having previously paid another sum of $115 to the sheriff to procure his release from arrest under a capias after judgment in this action: under a capias after judgment in this action: the plaintiff constituted an attachable debt before taxation, which was bound by the service of the garnishment process, and properly payable into the division court after it was ascertained by taxation; and the defendant could not object that his set-off was not ascertained at the time of payment into court, as it was by his own default; and therefore the money maid into court pursuant to the attachment was to be taken to be part of the money due to the plaintiff for costs, and not as representing the same debt as the money paid to the sheriff.

Crown.]—The garnishee clauses of the C. L. P. Act do not extend to the Queen. The Crown, therefore, cannot under them attach a debt. Regina v. Benson, 2 P. R. 350.

Damages. |—The garnishees had given the judgment debtors a bond conditioned that one A.. in their employment, should pay over all moneys received:—Held, that the liabilities incurred under this bond could not be attached. Griswold v. Buffalo, Brantford, and Goderich, R. W. Co., 2 P. R. 178.

Damages.]-A verdict against an insurance company for unliquidated damages, even moved against, and which the not atthough not moved against, and which the company had promised to pay without entry of judgment, cannot be attached until it becomes a debt by judgment. Boyd v. Haynes,

Damages. |—The sum to be garnished was money awarded, of which part was for work done under a contract, and the remainder for damages sustained by having the work taken out of the execution debtor's hands :- Held, that as the latter was not a debt until the award was made, only the attaching orders, after the award would bind it, and not those before. Tate v. City of Toronto, 3 P. R. 181.

Damages. 1—Claims for unliquidated dampamages. — Claims for unriquidated damages cannot be attached before judgment, by which alone they become debts. Bank of Toronto v. Burton, 4 P. R. 56; Gwynne v. Rees, 2 P. R. 282

Damages. |-The claim of a debtor to compensation for misrepresentations of parties in obtaining a patent of land, is not liable to be seized, attached, or sequestered, before the account is determined by decree or otherwise.

Roberts v. City of Toronto, 15 Gr. 236.

Damages.]—The judgment of the Judge who tries the cause, with a jury or without one, is now an effective judgment from the day on which it is pronounced; and where day and which it is pronounced; and where damages are awarded thereby, they are at-tachable as a debt without the formal entry of judgment. Holtby v. Hodgson, 24 Q. B. D. 193, followed. Davidson v. Taylor. 14 P. R.

Debt Due to Judgment Debtor's Wife. |—Held, that the debt alleged in the bill being under a bond to the wife of M., the Wife. |—Held, that the debt alleged in the bill being under a bond to the wife of M., the judgment debtor, and not to M. himself, was not such a claim as could be garnished under the C. L. P. Act. 81. Michael's College v. Merrick, 26 Gr. 216.

The plaintiffs had obtained a verdict at law against J. D. M., and a rule nisi to set aside the verdict was pending, when the bill in this suit was filed on behalf of all the creditors of J. D. M. to impeach a transaction whereby S. M., the wife of J. D. M., was substituted for him in a contract in which he was interested with one A. M. It alleged that J. D. M. was insolvent, and that he had induced A. M. to admit S. M. as a partner in his stead for the purpose of defrauding the plaintiffs in the recovery of their debt: that A. M. afterwards purchased J. D. M.'s interest, and agreed to pay S. M. $10,000 therefor (which sum was not due at the commencement of this suit): that S. M. was merely a trustee for her husband in respect of this agreement. And the bill prayed for an injunction to restrain A. M. from paying $10,000 to the property of the pro money might be applied to the payment of their debt. A demurrer for want of equity was allowed on the ground that the A. J. Act, 1873, required the plaintiffs to pursue the remedy sought by the bill in the court in which the action was pending. On appeal, the judgment below was affirmed, on the ground that the bill was not sustainable, as the moneys could not be attached in equity. S. C., 1 A. R. 520.

Debt Due to Two.]—A debt owing to two cannot be attached to satisfy a claim against one of them only. In re Smart v. Miller, 3 P. R. 385.

Debt Due to Two.]—A debt due to a judgment debtor jointly with another person cannot be attached. Macdonald v. Tacquah Gold Mines Co., 13 Q. B. D. 535, followed. Parker v. Odette, 18 P. R. 63.

Debt That May be Set Off. |- Any debt that a defendant could set off at law against his creditor may be attached. McNaughton v. Webster, 6 L. J. 17.

Discretion.]—Quere, has not a Judge a discretion, in the case of an attachable debt, to decline under special circumstances to make an order to pay over the amount, where such an order would be inequitable, or tend to give one creditor a preference, after the making by the judgment debtor of a general assignment in favour of his creditors without preference or priority. Lee v. Gorrie, 1 C. L.

Discretionary Interest in an Estate. —E. A. conveyed real and personal estate to one B. upon trust to convert the same into to convert the same into money and pay debts, &c., and as to any balance remaining, upon trust to pay the same to R. A., son of E. A., or if B. should same to R. A., son of E. A., or if B. should see fit he might invest the same in the pur-chase of a homestead, and convey the same to R. A. in fee:—Held, that there was no debt due from B. to R. A. which could be gar-nished by the creditors of R. A. McKindsey v. Armstrong, 10 A. R. 17.

Division Court Bailiff. |- Semble, that money in the hands of a division court bailiff may be attached. Lockart v. Gray, 2 C. L. J.

Division Court Jurisdiction.] - Semble, that debts of amounts within the jurisdicble, that debts of amounts within the jurisulction of division courts will not be attached by superior courts, under s. 194, C. L. P. Act, 1856. Topping v. Salt, 3 L. J. 14.

Dividend in Insolvency.]-Quere, can a debt be attached in the hands of an assignee for the payment of debts, before a dividend has been declared by him. Commercial Bank v. Williams, 5 L. J. 66.

Dividend in Insolvency. |-A judgment creditor, seeking to garnish funds due to his judgment debtor by S., served an attaching order upon the assignee of S. under an assignment for the benefit of creditors. At the signment for the benefit of creditors. At the time of the service the assignee had in his hands the greater part of the moneys belong-ing to the estate of S, but had not declared a dividend; and before he did so, but after the service of the attachment a dividend; and before he dis so, but after the service of the attaching order, the judgment debtor assigned to G. the dividends coming to him from the estate of S.:—Held, that the judgment creditor was entitled as against G. to the dividends from the insolvent estate based upon the amount that was in the hands of the assignee when the attaching order was made. McCranev v. McLeod. 10 P. R. 539, explained and followed. Parker v. Houce, 12 P. R. 351.

Equitable Debt.]—A debt due by a garnishee to a person who is a trustee for it for the judgment debtor, cannot be attached to satisfy the judgment debt; there must be a legal debt due by a legal debtor to a legal creditor. Boyd v. Haynes, 5 P. R. 15.

Equity of Redemption. |—Semble, that an equity of redemption in mortgaged premises cannot be sold upon a garnishment execution sued out against a mortgagor, in respect of the mortgage debt, at the suit of a creditor of the mortgage. Vannorman v. McCarty, 20 C. P. 42.

Executor.]—An order upon executors to pay a simple contract debt, pursuant to an attaching order, was refused, on the ground that they might be linble on specialty debts, after satisfaction of which they might have no assets, and before satisfaction of which they ought not to be ordered to pay a simple contract debt. The attaching order was also at the same time discharged. Ward v, Vance, 10 L. J. 209.

Executor.]—The mere fact of a garnishee being an executor is no ground for not ordering him to pay the debt due by him as such executor to the judgment creditor. Tiffany v. Bullen, 18 C. P. 91.

Foreign Corporation.]—Held, that the garnishees, being a foreign corporation, were not "within Ontario," and therefore not subject to the provisions of Con. Rule 935. Canada Cotton Co. v. Parmalce, 13 P. R. 308.

Foreign Corporation.]—Canadian banking corporations authorized by Parliament to do business in Ontario, although axing their head offices in another Province; deemed resident "within Ontario" within the meaning of Rule 285, and moneys deposited with them at branches within Ontario may be attached in their hands as debts due to the depositors. County of Wentworth v. Smith, 15 P. R. 375.

Foreign Corporation.]—A foreign corporation incorporated under the laws of one of the United States, and not shewn to carry on one of the principal parts of its business in this Frovince, is not "within Ontario" within the meaning of Rule 935, and is not subject to garnishment process under that Rule. Canada Cotton Co. v. Parmalee, 13 P. R. 308, followed. County of Wentworth v. Smith, 15 P. R. 372, distinguished. Macdonald v. Tacquah Gold Mines Co., 13 Q. R. D. 535, followed. Parker v. Odette, 16 P. R. 69.

Foreign Corporation.]—The garnishees, an English insurance company, had an agent or attorney and a chief agency in Ontario, and service of process could be made upon such attorney for the purposes mentioned in ss. 14 and 17 of 55 Vict. c. 39 the Ontario Insurance Corporation Act:—Held, that the garnishees were not "within Ontario," within the meaning of Rule 935. Canada Cotton Co. v. Parmalee, 13 P. R. 308, followed. County of Wentworth v. Smith. 15 P. R. 872, distinguished. Bosucil v. Piper, 17 P. R. 257.

Husband and Wife—Purchase of Land by Wife—Action to Set Aside Fraudulent Transfer, D-, having entered into an agreement to purchase land, had the conveyance made to his wife, who paid the purchase money and obtained a certificate of ownership from the registrar of deeds, D. having transferred to her all his interest by deed. sold the land to M. and executed a transfer acknowledging payment of the purchase money, which transfer in some way came into the possession of M.'s solicitors, who had it registered and a new certificate of title is-sued in favour of M. though the purchase money was not, in fact, paid. M.'s solicitors were also solicitors of certain judgment creditors of D., and judgment having been obtained on their debts the purchase money of aid transfer was attached in the hands of M., and an issue was directed as between the judgment creditors and the wife of D. to determine the title to the money under the garnishee order, and the money was by consent paid into court. The judgment creditors claimed the money on the ground that the transfer of the land to D.'s wife was voluntary and void under the statute of Elizabeth, and that she therefore held the land and was entitled to the purchase money on the resale as trustee for D.:—Held, that under the evidence given in the case, the original transfer to the wife of D. was bona fide; that she paid for the land with her own money and bought it for her own use; and that if it was not bona fide the supreme court of the Territories, though exercising the functions and possessing the powers formerly exercised and possessed by courts of equity, could not, in these statutory proceedings, grant the relief that could have been obtained in a suit in equity. Held, further, that even if the proceedings were not bonâ fide, the garnishee proceedings were not properly taken; that the purchase money was to have been paid by M. on delivery of deed of transfer, and the vendor never undertook to treat him as a debtor; that if there was a debt it was not one on which D., the judgment debtor as against whom the garnishee proceedings were taken, could maintain an action in his own right and for his own exclusive benefit; that D.'s wife was not precluded, by having assented to the issue and to the money being paid into court, from claiming that it could not be attached in these proceedings, and that the only relief possible was by an independent suit. Donohoe v. Hull, 24 S. C. R. 683.

Income from Estate. —The defendant's father devised his estate to trustess upon the trust, among others, "to pay my son A. (the defendant) the interest of the sum of $800 annually during the term of his natural life." An order was made by the master in chambers, directing the trustees to pay over the interest from time to time accruing, to the plaintiff, who was a judgment creditor of the son. Lloyd v, Wallace, 9 P. R. 335, Insurance Loss. — Moneys due or owing from an insurance company to a nolicy holder although unadjusted are garnishable under the enlarged provisions of Con. Rule 935. Webb v. Stenton, 11 O. B. D. 518, and Stuart v. Grough, 15 A. R. 299, considered. Canada Cotton Co. v. Parmalee, 13 P. R. 26, 308.

Insurance Loss. |—A claim under an insurance policy for a loss, the amount of which has been settled and adjusted, is not a debt which can be attached under s. 178 of R. S. O. 1887 c. 51.; and Con. Rule 935 does not apply to division courts. Semble, even if it did, that such a claim could not be attached as long as the insurance company's right to have the money applied in rebuilding was open. Simpson v. Chase, 14 P. R. 280.

Interest in Estate.]-G. was entitled under the will of C. to a life estate in land, and to the proceeds of personalty to be paid to ber by the executors. Judgment creditors of G. had had a fi. fa. goods returned nulla bona, but had not sued out a fi. fa. lands, when a receiver was appointed to the estate of C., whereupon the judgment creditors by petition, before the passing of the Ontario Judicature Act, applied for an order that the receiver might be directed to pay their judg-ment out of G.'s money in his hands; or that they might attach and sell G.'s life estate, or that the tenants of the realty might be directed to attorn to the petitioners and that they might be put in receipt of the rents and profits:—Held, that such petition had been properly dismissed, for the creditors were not in a position when they presented it either to garnish the personal estate, if that could have been done under the A. J. Act. 1873, or to seize the real estate under execution; and they had therefore no rights which the pointment of a receiver interfered with. But held, following Re Cowan's Estate, 14 Ch. D. 638, that the petitioners might now garnish the moneys in the hands of the receiver, and it being alleged that a fi, fa, lands had since issued, the court upon payment of costs grant ed leave to the petitioners, under the prayer for general relief, to sue out such writs as they might be advised. Leaming v. Woon, 7 A. R.

Interest in Estate. — The interest of a debtor in a trust estate consisting of the right to a share of the proceeds of the sale of such estate when made by the trustees, is not attachable under Rule 370 relating to the attachable under depth of a trustic solvendum in futuro, which is capable of attachment; moneys which may or may not become payable by a trustee to his cestui que trust are not debts. The case of Leaming v. Woon, 7 A. R. 42, is not to be followed, being founded on Re Cowan's Estate, 14 Ch. D. 638, which is now overruled by Webb v. Stenton, 11 Q. B. D. 530. The proper course in such a case is to obtain equitable execution against the debtor's interest by the appointment of a receiver. For this purpose it is now unnecessary that the creditor should issue writs of fi. fa. against goods or lands. Stuart v. Grough, 15 O. R. 66, 15 A. R. 290.

Judgment Debt.] — Where money, the proceeds of land belonging to some of the defendants, had been ordered to be paid into court, to meet a judgment held by plaintiff azainst one of these defendants, and the decree directed that the plaintiff should pay to the other defendants their costs of suit:—Held, that these defendants were entitled to a garnishee order against the money to be paid into court. Grant v. Kennedy, 2 Ch. Ch. 239.

Judgment Debt.]—A sum of money directed by a decree or order to be paid, is a debt which is attachable under C. S. U. C. c. 24, s. 19. Cotton v. Vansittart, 6 P. R. 96.

Judgment Debt. |—The recovery of a verdict for a debt which might have been attached before any action brought for its rep. 12 covery, will not make it less a subject of attachment. McKay v. Tait, 11 C. P. 72.

Judgment for Costs.]—A judgment creditor, whose judgment is for costs only, cannot examine his judgment debtor under R. S. O. 1877 c. 50, s. 304, nor garnish debts due to him. Ghent v, McColl, S P. R. 428.

Judgment for Costs.]—A defendant who has obtained execution upon a rule of court for the payment of costs of the day by the plaintiff, is, under R. S. O. 1877 c. 61, s. 12, and c. 65, s. 72, a judgment creditor, and entitled to garnish moneys due by the plaintiff. Elliot v. Capell, 9 P. R. 35.

Judgment for Costs.]—The person to receive payment under an order for payment of costs only, is entitled to an order attaching debts due or accruing due to the person to pay. Any doubt existing upon the English cases and the O. J. Act rules, is cleared up by R. S. O. 1877 c. 66, s. 72. Re Irvine, 12 P. R. 297.

Judgment for Costs—Assignee of Judgment.]—Under Rule 935 an order to attach debts may be founded on a judgment for costs only. Troutman v. Fisken, 13 P. R. 153, distinguished. Under the same Rule an assignee of a judgment, though not a party to the action, may apply to enforce the judgment by attachment. McLean v. Bruce, 14 P. R. 130.

Legacy.]—An order may be made attaching the amount, if any, coming to a judgment debtor as residuary legatee under a will, sulthough it is undetermined whether anything, and, if anything, how much, is due to him. Upon an inquiry as to whether anything is due to a judgment debtor as residuary legatee, where he also hus the character of executor, the legatees and creditors ought to be before the court; and the way to bring them before the court is by administration proceedings. Quere, whether the assignee of a judgment would be entitled to administration. The assignee of a judgment appointed receiver by way of equitable execution to receive whatever interest the judgment debtor might have as residuary legatee. MeLean v. Bruce, 14 P. R. 150.

Money in Court.]—The judgment debtors had leased from C. a lot of land on the river Humber, on which there was a stone quarry. I pon an arbitration under 20 Vict. c. 146, the Great Western R. W. Co. were directed to pay them £255 as a compensation for injury occasioned to them as such lessees by the erection of a permanent railway bridge over the river. Before the arbitration, one of them, being them sole lessee, had mortgaged to a building society his interest in the land, and all privileges as to cuarrying stone contained in the lease, and the railway company, being notified by the society not to pay to the judgment debtors the amount awarded, paid it into the common pleas. The judgment creditors, having obtained judgment in the Queen's bench, attached the claim, and asked to be allowed to take the money out of court, or for an order on the company to pay it:—Held, that the money being in the common pleas, the court could not interfere, but that if they had nower to dispose of it the mortgages would be entitled before the judgment credit tors. Quære, whether the company were authorized, under 16 Vict. c. 99, to pay such money into court, and whether such debt could be attached. French v. Levis, 16 U. C. R. 547.

On a subsequent application to the common pleas on behalf of the mortgagees, that court refused to interfere, on the ground that the company had no right to pay the money into court. Dr. 551, note.

Mortgage Surplus. —The surplus money arising from sale of mortgaged premises in the hands of the mortgagee, may be attached on a judgment against the mortgagor. Mc-Kay v. Mitchell, 6 L. J. 61.

Mortgage Surplus.]— The Trust and Loan Company held a mortgage from one O, with power of sale for eash or for credit, and under it, on the 22nd November, soil the land to C, who paid them part in eash and gave a mortgage for the balance. There was a mortgage to the balance. There was a mortgage to the balance one, executes the surplus of the whole purchase money had been supplied to D.'s assignee, out of the cash received, the surplus of the whole purchase money above their claim. The mortgage declared that they should stand seized of the proceeds of any sale in trust to apply it as there mentioned. A judgment creditor of O, having served his attaching order on the 25th November, sued the company as garnishees for such surplus:—Held, that he could not recover: for I, defendants were trustees, and could not be sued at law for the money, even if they had wrongfully vaid it over to D.: and, 2, they were instified in so paying, nowithstanding the jury found that D.'s mortgage was fraudulently kept alive for O.'s benefit, for defendants had no knowledge of such fraud, Smith v, Trust and Loan Co. of Upper Canada, 22 U. C. R. 525.

Partnership.1—Thomas F. Park was a member of two firms, Park & McLeod, and Park & Park (Theodore, J.) Park & Park recovered judgment against M., a judgment creditor of Park & McLeod:—Held, that Park & Park could not on their judgment attach the debt due by M. to Park & Park, McCornick y, Park, 9 C, P. 330.

Partnership.]—One A. P. McD. entered into a written contract with defendants to exceute certain work for them, and verbally agreed to give one A. McD. an interest in the contract. A. McD. did not sign the contract. and afterwards drew money on it under the authority of A. P. McD. and apparently as bis agent. Upon a writ to attach a sum of money due upon the contract. in a suit by plaintiffs v. A. P. McD.:—Held, that it was not a neartnershin debt, and therefore was attachable against A. F. McD. Bescoby v. Hamilton Water Commissioners, 9 C. P. St.

Promissory Note.]—A negotiable promissory note, not yet due, is not a debt which may be attached within the meaning of Rule 370 of the O. J. Act. Jackson v. Cassidy, 2 O. R. 521.

Promissory Note.]—Under the garnishee clauses of the C. L. P. Act of Prince Edward Island, transcripts of s., 60 to 67 of the English C. L. P. Act, 1854, an overdue promissory note in the hands of the payee is liable to be attached by a judgment creditor, and payment of the amount by the garnishee to the judgment creditor of the payee, in pursuance of a Judge's order, is a valid discharge. Roblee v. Rankin, 11 S. C. R. 137.

Promissory Note.]—The enlarged provisions of Rule 935 do not extend the right of attachment of debts to the case of money payable on negotiable securities; the claim of a judgment debtor to be paid the amount of a judgment debtor to be paid the amount debtor to be paid the amount dectrines of equilable executions. Which we have the dectrines of equilable executions which we have be garnished is not the note itself, but the money bayable thereunder; therefore the maker of the note, and not the person holding it for the judgment debtor, should be made garnishee; and there is no warrant in the practice for ordering the holder to hand the note over to the judgment ereditor. Ecley v. Deg. 15 P. R. 353. See the next case.

Promissory Note.]—After the discharge of the attaching order the plaintiff, two days before the maturity of the promissory note in question, obtained a new order attaching the same debt, making the holder of the note and the makers garnishees. Upon a motion for bayment over by the garnishees or for alternative relief, an order was made appointing the plaintiff receiver of all moneys due or accruing due upon the note, to apply on the judgment, and restraining the garnishees from naving over the moneys otherwise, and from parting with the note. Hyam v. Freeman, 35 Sol. J. 87, followed. Exley v. Dey (No. 2), 15 P. R. 405.

Rent.|—Where the debt was in respect of rent of land mortgaged with a power of sale, and nower to receive rent, &c. and no rent was in fact due, and electment had been commenced by the mortgages:—Held, not to be a case for an attaching order. McLaren v. Sadworth, 4 L. J. 23s.

Rent.]—Rent to become due at a future time cannot be attached. Commercial Bank v. Jarvis, 5 L. J. 66, Rent.1—The inere registry of a judgment against a husband's lands, before the massing of 22 Vict. c. 34 (Married Women's Protection Act), does not of itself give a right to the judgment creditor to garnish a debt due for rent of the wife's land since that Act. Burton v. Kelly, 7 L. J. 20.

Rent.]—R. S. O. 1877 c. 136, ss. 2-6, does not contemplate any alteration of the law where the case remains strictly between land-lord and tenant, but makes a severance where a third interest intervenes. And where a judgment creditor garnished rents accruing due from several tenants to the judgment debtors before any of the gaie days had arrived:—Held, that he was entitled to payment over upon the gale days of the proportion of the rents which had accrued due on the day of service of the attaching order:—Quere, whether the rents could be zarnished azainst a mortgage of the landlord. Massie v. Toronto Printing Co., 12 P. R. 12.

Rent. |—Rent accruing but not yet payable cannot be attached in the division court notwithstanding R. S. O. 1887 c. 143, s. 2. Massie v. Toronto Printing Co., 12 P. R. 19. not followed. Christie v. Casey, 15 C. L. T. Oce, N. 13.

Rent. 1-The plaintiff, having an unsatisfied judgment against the defendant in the high court, obtained from the master in chambers, ex parte, two orders, under Rules 935 ant certain rents owing by his tenants, the ant certain rents owing by his tenants, the garnishees, and summoning them to appear before a county court Judge to shew cause why such rents should not be paid over to the plaintiff. Upon the application, of a company, mortgagees of the demised premises, who had served notice upon the garnishees to pay the rent to them, the master made an order rescinding the attaching orders:-Held, that if the garnishees, upon the return of the sum-mons, neglected to suggest to the court the claim of the company, as provided by Rule 944, they would not be protected by an order to pay to the plaintiff. The Leader, L. R. 2 Ad. & Ec. 314, followed. And, therefore, the company was not a "party affected" by parte orders, within the meaning of 36. No fraud or imposition was prac-Rule 536. tised upon the court in not informing the master of the claim which might be set up by the garnishees or the company; it was a matter for hearing and adjudication before the county court Judge. Parker v. McIlwain, 16 P. R. 555. See the next case,

Rent-Mortgagee - Rights of Third Per-son. | -Held, reversing 16 P. R. 555, that mortgagees who had served notice upon tenants of the mortgagor, in occupation of the mortgaged premises, to pay the rents to them, and to whom such tenants had attorned, were, within the meaning of Rule 536, "parties affected" by ex parte orders obtained by a judgment creditor of the mortgagor attaching such rents as debts. And semble, that, even without that Rule, the practice would have warranted a substantive motion by a third party interested to discharge the attaching orders :-Held, also, that the attaching orders ought to be set aside; for (1) although the service of the notice upon the ten-ants was not in itself sufficient to cause the tenants subsequent to the mortgage to hold of the mortgagees, there was satisfactory evi-dence of an attornment by the tenants; and (2) the notice signed by the mortgagor under the words "I approve of the above," oper-ated as an assignment of the rents to the mortgagees. An attaching order binds only such debts as the debtor can honestly deal with without affecting the interests of third persons. Parker v. McIlwain, 17 P. R. 84.

Representative Capacity.]—A debt due by the garnishee to the judgment debtor as executor is not garnishable. Macaulay v. Rumball, 19 C. P. 284.

Representative Capacity.]—A debt due to an administrator as such cannot be attached to answer a debt due by him in his private capacity. Bowman v. Bowman, 1 Ch. (1779)

Revocable Gift.]—Money was sent by a father to his son, the judgment debtor, as a gift. through a bank. Before any communication by the bank to the judgment debtor, the execution creditor obtained an attaching order and summons on the benk to nay over. The order was issued on 17th August, thirteen days before the bank agency at the place where the debtor resided was advised of the deposit:—Held, that the amount could not be attached. Semble, that the father might revoke the gift, and therefore it was not a debt. Caisse v. Tharp, 5 P. R. 265.

Salary—Medical Officer.]—The salary of a physician of a municipal corporation, holding his appointment at their will, at an annual salary, payable quarterly, cannot be attached. Shanly v. Moor, 3 P. R. 223.

Salary - Municipal Officer - Advances.] -An order having been made attaching all debts due to a judgment debtor by a corporation, a person describing himself "paying teller" of the corporation made an affidavit in answer to the judgment cre-ditor's application for a garnishing order absolute, stating that nothing was due from the corporation to the debtor at the time of service of the attaching order. Cross-ex-amined upon his affidavit, the affiant said that the debtor was assessment commissioner for the corporation and in receipt of a salary. but that advances had been made to him on account of it, by the authority of the treasurer of the city, so that nothing was due, affiant declined to answer certain ques put to him on cross-examination :- Held, that the affiant should be compelled to answer all questions put to him bearing on the advances made in the past to the debtor, and those bearing on the affiant's authority to make them, and his motives in doing so if he were exercising a discretion:—Held, also, that the affiant should answer the question whether he had ever made advances on account of salary to any other employee of the city, and if he should answer it in the affirmative, he might be further interrogated as to the number of such instances, but he was not to be compelled to disclose the names of persons to whom such advances had been made:—Held, also, that the affiant was not compellable to produce any of the city by-laws, not being the custodian thereof. Wilson v. Fleming, 19 P. R. 203.

Salary—Police Magistrate.]—The salary of a judgment debtor, not actually due or accruing due at the time of service of the attaching order, but which may thereafter become due, cannot be attached to answer the judgment debt; and the enlarged provisions of Rule 935 have made no difference in this respect. The salary of a police magistrate appointed by the Crown, but paid by a municipality, cannot, on grounds of public police, be attached. Central Bank v. Ellis, 20 A. R. 364.

Sale of Lands—Interest of Tenant by the Curtesy—Action to Set Aside Fraudulent Transfer.]—A judgment debtor, having a supposed interest as tenant by the curtesy in certain land, which was not and never had been claimed by him, ioined in a conveyance therefore the control of the supposed of the latest the total earlier of the supposed of the suppose

C.I.—Assuming that the judgment debtor was tenant by the curtesy of the land sold, upon its sale he became entitled only to a life use of the purchase meney, and this use could not be reached by garnishee process in the manner attempted. Fer Street, J.—There was no debt due from the solicitor to the judgment debtor, nor could it be said that the moneys in the hands of the former were subject to any trust in favour of the latter, nor that any claim on his part affecting them existed. If he had an interest in the land, he, in effect, released it to his daughter without any consideration, and the money was hers unless the release to the should be set aside as voluntary and a fraud upon his creditors. Palmer v. Lovett, 14 P. R. 415.

Sheriff. —Money made by a sheriff under an execution is attachable in his hands for the debt of the execution creditor. In re Smart v. Miller, 3 P. R. 385.

Sheriff.]—Where an execution creditor has, under the statute of Anne, paid rent demanded by a landlord upon an execution against the tenant unon the premises of the former, and the sheriff levies as well for the rent as the execution debt, the sheriff becomes the debtor of the execution creditor for both sums, and liable to him in an action for money had and received, and so does a bailiff under the Division Courts Act; and therefore the execution money in his hands might be attached, to satisfy the demand of another execution claimant against the execution editor. Lockart v. Gray, 2 C. L. J. 163.

Surrender of Policy-Terms not Settled.]

—Where the judgment debtor, after making a general assignment for the benefit of creditors, surrendered a life policy of the shees at its value, the proceeds to be placed at the policy of the control of th

Tax Redemption Fund.]—Moneys paid by the owners of land sold for taxes, as redemption moneys, to the county treasurer, for the use of the purchasers, and banked in the name of the county treasurer, cannot be attuched by a creditor of the county as a debt due by the bank to the county. Wilson v. Counties of Huron and Bruce, S. L. J. 135; S. C., ib. 136.

Third Person Interested.]—Under a submission between one R, and the city of Toronto between one R. and the city of Toronto it was awarded that the corporation should pay R, 41,925, as compensation for any large of the submaners sustained by the construction of it, to be paid on or before the 28th January, 1858, on the title to the land taken being perfected in the corporation. On the 2nd January a notice was served on the city chamberlain that R, had assigned to H, all the damages awarded, and requiring the city to pay H. On the 9th an order was made attaching all debts due by the city to R, to answer a judgment recovered against him by one G., and a summons for them to pay; and on the 14th the garnishees were ordered to pay G. within ten days, or execution to issue. The attaching order and summons, and the order to pay, were duly served on the chamberlain, but no notice of them was given by him to the solicitor, or any member of the corporation; and on the 8th May an execution issued against the city, under which a levy was made. They then applied for relief on the above facts, and it was shewn that the land in question had been mortgaged for a large sum to one B., who claimed to receive the sum awarded: — Held, that this, being upon a claim for unliquidated damages, could not be attached before judgment obtained upon it: that the part assigned to H. could clearly not be garnished; and that all proceedings subsequent to the attaching order must be set aside, on payment of costs by the garnishees, the judgment creditor to be at liberty to apply for a summons on them to pay him the amount of his claim, under which all the parties claiming might be heard. Gwynne v. Rees, 2 P. R. 282.

Unsettled Partnership Accounts.] — An unsettled balance due by one partner to another cannot be attached; but otherwise if it has been fully ascertained. Campbell y, Peden, 3 L. J. 68.

Wife's Leraey. |—Where on a debt contracted in 1855, plaintiff on 26th November, 1864, recovered judgment against M. and others, he was held entitled to attach the interest of moneys arising out of a legacy deposited by the wife of M. in her own name in the bank of the garnishees, she having been married on the 28th May, 1859. Hope v. Muir, 1 C. L. J. 275.

II. EFFECT OF ATTACHING PROCEEDINGS.

Action by Debtor.] — Declaration for work and materials. The plea set up several attachment orders obtained by judgment creditors of the plaintiff, alleging as to one that it was directed that the creditor should be at liberty to proceed against defendants; and that the others were duly served upon defendant and plaintiff;—Held, bad. McGinnis v. Village of Yorkville, 21 U. C. R. 163.

Attaching Creditor is Not Creditor Of Garnishee. |—A judgment creditor does not, properly speaking, become a creditor of the garnishee to the garnishee continues to the garnishee to the garnishee to the continues to be debtor tote. The garnishee continues to be debtor to his own creditor, the judgment deltor, until he has naid the amount owing into court, or to the attaching creditor, after order so to pay, or a levy of the amount has been made of his property, when he ceases to be a debtor as to the amount paid or levied:—Held, therefore, that the plaintiff, who had obtained a garnishee order, garnishing a debt due from the Brockville and Ottawa R. W. Co. to W. S., his judgment debtor (which railway was now represented by the defendants), was not a "creditor" of the said company, holding a bona fide claim against it within 27 Vict. c. 57, s. 10 (D.) Wardrope v. Canadian Pacific R. W. Co., 7 O, R. 321.

Debt Not Attachable. | —To an action on the common counts defendants pleaded that before suit the plaintiff assigned the claim to one G.: that one H. recovered judgment aminst G., and obtained an order to attach all debts owing by defendant to G. to answer said judgment, and this debt then became bound in defendants' hands to answer the judgment. Plea held bad, the debt not being attachable as by law due to G. Arthur v. Clough, 17 U. C. R., 302.

Different Claimants.] - The garnishee was indebted to a railway company, the judgment debtors, on two negotiable bills accepted by him and not yet due, and they, in order to induce R., a creditor, to release a chattel mortgage which he held against them, promised to pay him out of the proceeds of these bills; there were also other claims by some of the directors of the company, which were to be paid in the same way. The judgment creditors obtained a summons on the garnishee to pay their claim, which was less than the amount due on the bills, and M., another creditor, subsequently obtained an order to attach the balance, but no summons had issued upon it. With the control of the balance upon it. With the assent of the judgment crethe judgment debtors, and the garniditors, the judgment debtors, and the garnishee, M. being no party to the arrangement, the acceptances were handed into court, and afterwards delivered to Z. on his paying in the money. These facts were stated on the return of the summons obtained by the judgment creditors, and the Judge in chambers was asked to determine what should be done with the surplus after paving the judgment The Judge refused to decide this, creditors. as he had no power to determine summarily as he had no power to determine summaring, between the claimants; and held that the money having been paid in without any authority, he could only order the surplus the surplus to the garnishee. Semble, to be returned to the garnishee. Semble, however, that M., who had obtained an attachment order, should be preferred to R. afficient order, should be preferred to R. and the directors. Semble, also, that the best course would have been for Z. to bay the claim of the judgment creditors, getting it indorsed upon the bills, and then the sum due to M., when he had obtained an order for psyment. Mcllish v. Buffelo, Brantford, and Goderich R. W. Co., 2 P. R. 171.

Execution Against Garnishee.]—Action on a mortgage for £309. Plea, non est facon a mortgage for £309. Flea, non escala-Second count, on a judgment in Queen's for £78. Third count, on a judgment in rommon pleas for £128. To the last bench for £78. the common pleas for £128. To the last two counts the defendant pleaded, on equitable grounds, that the judgments were obtained on confessions taken by plaintiff from defendant, while the plaintiff was defendant's attorney, by fraud, and given without consideration, and by undue influence; and—after setting out two judgments in the county court, amounting to £99, recovered against the plaintiff, by C. and M. respectively, that C. and M. had each obtained an order to attach all debts due to this plaintiff from defendant to satisfy said judgment, and had issued a fi. fa. lands on which the sheriff had taken in execution lands of defendant, more than enough to satisfy the said judgments recovered by them respectively; and that said judgments were in full force and unsatisfied,—the plea alleged that the indebtedness on the judgments in the two counts alleged (if any) due to the plaintiff had been attached to satisfy the other judgments. On demurrer held bad, 1. because pleaded in bar of the plaintif's whole cause of action on the second and third counts, whereas it only shewed a partial answer, if good as to that. 2. That it did not show any order requiring the garnishee to pay the judgment creditors. 3. For all that appeared on the pleas, the plaintiffs in the two attachments might issue execution and obtain satisfaction of their judgment against the present plaintiff, before defendant's lands could be sold under the executions. Blevins v. Madden, 11 C. P. 195.

Judgment Debt - Execution-Solicitor's Lien.]—A sheriff's return to a writ of fi, fa. goods set forth that he was notified that the amount of the judgment to be executed had been attached by a judgment creditor of the execution creditor, and that the execution debtor (the garnishee) had thereupon satisfied the claim of the garnishor. In fact there was only an order to attach and a summons to pay over, but no order absolute:—Held, that the return was insufficient in substance, because it shewed that the writ remained unexecuted without legal excuse; a garnishee order absolute would have operated as a stay of execution, but not so the attaching order and sum-mons: the duty of the garnishee was to pay the sheriff, advising him at the same time of the existence of the attaching order; and this would have been equivalent to payment into court. It appeared that the solicitor for the execution creditor had a lien for his costs upon the judgment obtained by his client, and also an assignment of the judgment, whereof the garnishor and garnishee both had notice: Held, that the garnishor and garnishee should not have settled the amount garnished between themselves; and that the solicitor should have intervened and had the attaching order set aside by disclosing the assignment to himself of the debt attached. Genge v. Freeman, 14 P. R. 330.

Money in Court.]—Where moneys have been voluntarily deposited by a garnishee in the hands of the prothonotary, and the attachment of such moneys is subsequently quashed by a final judgment of the court, there beins then no longer any moneys subject to a distribution or collocation, such moneys cannot be claimed by an opposition en sous ordre. Barnard v. Molson, 15 S. C. B. 719.

No Order to Pay—Payment into Court.]

—A garnishee is not discharged by payment to the judgment creditor merely upon the attaching order, without an order to pay. But he is, if, upon being served with a summons to pay, he forthwith pay the money into court. Clark v. Clark, S. L. J. 107.

Notice of Claim of Third Person.]— Land which had been mortgaged by the owner was taken by the township council for a road, and the compensation having been ascertained by award, the corporation paid the amount to a creditor of the mortgager, by whom it had been attached:—Held, that the mortgagee had the prior right; that his mortgage being a registered mortgage, the corporation must be taken to have acquired the land with notice of it; and that the mortgagee was entitled to recover the amount from the corporation with costs. Dunlop v. County of York, 16 Gr. 216.

Notice of Claim of Third Person.]— Upon A.'s insolvency in Montreal, T., a creditor residing in the county of Renfrew, proved his claim, and afterwards made an assignment. Subsequently F., A.'s assignee, not having heard of T.'s insolvency, collocated him on the dividend sheet for the amount due on his claim, whereupon certain creditors of took proceedings in the superior court at Montreal to garnish this amount. Upon receipt of a letter from B., T.'s assignee, demanding payment of the dividend, F. informed him that certain persons in Montreal were endeavouring to get payment of this dividend from him, but he neither mentioned who they were nor the nature of their claim. In ac-cordance with the practice of the courts in Quebec, F, made an affidavit of the position he occupied towards the principal debtor, in which he recited the above facts, but took no further action in the matter. He neither advised B. that this declaration had been made, nor held any further communication with him. opposition being offered, an order was le for the payment of the debt and costs by F, within fifteen days, and without waiting for the expiration of this period, or giving B. any notice, F. paid the amount:—Held, that B. was entitled to recover the dividend from F.; and that F. could not protect himself on ground that he had paid the money in obedience to the order of a court of competent jurisdiction, as under s. 125 of the Insolvent Act of 1875, the court had no authority to make such an order after T.'s assignment; and even if that court had possessed jurisdiction, the judgment could not defeat B.'s rights, as he was not a party to the proceedings or affected with notice thereof, and F, had been guilty of negligence in protecting himself. Re Fair and Bell, 2 A. R. 632.

Order in Favour of Sub-Contractor.]
—The judgment debtor, through his sub-contractors, delivered to the garnishees certain railway ties, and gave the sub-contractors an order on the garnishees for all moneys coming to him therefor. Subsequently, but before the garnishees had notice of this order, they were served with the attaching order in this case:—Held, that the order in favour of the sub-contractors operated as an assignment of the fund to them, although there was no notice of it to the garnishees, they not having been led by the want of notice to alter their position. Brown v. McGulfin, 5 P. R. 231.

Order For Payment Reversed on Appeal—Repayment.]—An appeal from the order of a county Judge directing nayment over to the planniff by a garnishee of moneys in his hands was allowed by the court in a former judgment (10 A. R. 17). It appeared that the garnishee had paid over the moneys in his hands before the appeal was initiated:—Held, that the certificate of the former judgment properly contained an award of restitution of the money so paid, which the court had authority to make under 45 Vict. c. 6 (O.) McKindsey v. Armstrong, 11 P. R. 200.

Overpayment by Garnishee—Recovery Back.]—Defendant, having a judgment against M. and others, obtained an order on C. and others, garnishees, to nay over, after deducting any contra claim they might have. The defendant received on this order $171, by cheque of the plaintiff's firm, the plaintiff alone being the assignee of C.s. estate. It was afterwards discovered that the order had been for too much, and it was therefore rescinded, except as to the proper sum, which the garnishees' admitted set-off more than covered, so that nothing in fact should have been paid:
—Held, that the plaintiff might recover the $171 from defendant as money had and received:—Held, also, that the fact of the nayment having been made by the cheque of plaintiff's firm, could not prevent the plaintiff alone from recovering, as the money was proved to have been the money of C.'s estate, in which the plaintiff's martners had no interest. Sessions v. Strachan, 23 U. C. R. 492.

Payment Not Made — Action by Judgment Behtor.]—It is no defence to an action for a debt that attaching orders have been served unon defendant for the claim, or that he has been ordered to pay it over. There must be newment on such orders, or execution levied on defendant. Sykes v. Brockville and Ottava R. W. Co., 22 U. C. R. 459.

Period of Credit.] — Where there has been a previous understanding that the garnishee should have a certain period of credit, he will not be ordered to pay until such period expires. Harding v, Barratt, 3 L. J. 31.

Priority—Order of Payment Determined by Service.]—Several judgment creditors proceeding against the same garnishee are entitled in the order in which their attaching orders are served, not ratably. Tate v. City of Toronto, 3 P. R. 181.

Priority—Railway Bondholders — Attaching Creditors.]—So long as a railway company is a going concern, bondholders whose bonds are a veneral charge on the undertaking have no right, even although interest on these bonds is in arrear, to seize, or take, or sell, or foreclose any neutr of the property of the company. Their remedy is the appointment of a receiver. The bondholders of the defendants in this case were held not entitled to the moneys claimed by them, which were the earnings of the road deposited in a bank, and which had been attached by judgment creditors of the road. Phelps v. St. Catharines and Niagara Central R. W. Co., 19 O. R. 501, reversing 18 O. R. 581.

Priority—Several Judgment Creditors,]—Although the plaintiff's judgment be subsequent to others registered against the land sold under the mortgage, still if he first attach the surplus of proceeds of sale, he is entitled to the exclusion of the prior judgment creditors, McKay v. Mitchell, 6 L. J., 61.

There is no priority in respect to debts due to a judgment debtor, in favour of any judgment creditor. Ib.

Receiver Appointed After Order and Before Payment. —After an order to pay over land been made upon a garnishee summors, but before the property had been sold been obtained by another judgment credit, under which a receiver was duly appointed, and notice thereof given to the garnishees (the trustees) and the attaching creditor. Notwithstanding this the garnishees subsequently without further compulsion or threat of execution paid the money to the attaching creditor without moving against the attaching order, and without notice to the receiver, or giving him an opportunity of doing so:—Held, that the equitable execution must prevail, and such payment did not discharge the garnishees. The effect of the order for a receiver was absolutely to preclude the judgment creditor from enforcing the order to pay over and the garnishees from disossing of the money when received by them (otherwise than by paying it to the receiver), without leave of the court. The duty of garnishees who have notice of circumstances affecting the right of the attaching creditor to enforce the order to pay over pointed out. Wood v. Dunn. 2 Q. B. D. 72, considered. The effect of the appointment of a receiver upon the rights of an attaching creditor considered. Hawkins v. Gathercole, 1 Drew. 12, and Ames v. Birkenhead Dock Co., 29 Beav. 332, acted on. Stuart v. Grough, 15 A. R. 299.

Set-off.]—Quære, what effect has an attaching order on the party's right to set off. McNaughton v. Webster, 6 L. J. 17.

Solicitor's Lien.] — An award for an amount, together with costs, caving been made in favour of a party, the eosts were taxed by consent, and the amount promised to be paid to the solicitor of the party ordered was subsequently obtained by a third costs were paid over to such third party, with notice, however, of the solicitor's lien for the costs were paid over to such third party, with notice, however, of the solicitor's lien for the costs. Under these circumstances a motion made to stay proceedings to enforce payment of the costs under the award, at the instance of the solicitor to whom they were payable, was refused with costs. McLean v. Beatty, 1 Ch. Ch. 138.

Solicitor's Lien.]—An atterney's lien for costs as between h.m and his chent, the judgment debtor, will not be allowed to stand in the way of an attachment, Revina v. Benson, 2 P. R. 350; Bank of Upper Canada v. Wallace, tb. 352.

Solicitor's Lien.]—Unon the application of a solicitor, having a lien in respect of a debt attached, the attaching order will be discharged as against him; but the party against whom such an order has been made is not entitled to its discharge on the ground of the existence of the lien in favour of his solicitor. Cotton v. Vansittart, 6 P. R. 96.

Solicitor's Lien.]—In garnishee proceedings a court of law will, as against the attaching creditor, protect an attorner's lien for costs of the action or suit in which, or by which, the debt attached has been recovered, where the garnishee has notice of the lien. Canadian Bank of Commerce v. Crouch, 8 P. II. 437.

A court of equity will restrain a creditor who has obtained an attaching order at law from enforcing it against a fund recovered by means of a suit in equity, to the prejudice of the attorney's lien for costs in that suit.

See also, Genge v. Freeman, 14 P. R. 330, ante, col. 362.

Validity of Assignment.]—Judgment was recovered by B. & Co. against defendant, against whom the plaintiff afterwards likewise recovered judgment. B. & Co. first and the plaintiff afterwards put a fi. fa. against defendant's goods into the hands of the sheriff, who returned the plaintiff's writ nulla bona. Plaintiff then obtained an order for defendant's examination, and very shortly after behavior of the plaintiff that is defendant assigned. In the control of the plaintiff of the control of the plaintiff of the control of the to set aside the order:—Held, that they had no right to intervene in the cause, and that they could not raise the question of the validity of the assignment to them on such an application. Rittinger v. McDougall, 10 C. P. 305.

III. PRACTICE AND PROCEDURE.

Action Pending Between Debtor and Garnishee.]—A suit was pending between the judgment debtor and the garnishees as to the claim sought to be attached:—Quare, as to the proper mode of procedure. Bank of Toronto v. Buston, 4 P. R. 56.

Agent's Affidavit. —An order founded on the affidavit of "the agent for the above defendant." without any affidavit by the judgment creditor or his attorney, is irregular; and such order was set aside, but, the point being new without costs. Semble, that it been affirmatively slewn that the denotations in fact the attorney of the judgment creditor, though not so described in the affidavit, the statute would have been compiled with Tiffany v. Bullen, 18 C. P. 91.

Appeal From County Court.] — See Sato v. Hubbard, 6 A. R. 546; Henderson v. Rogers, 15 P. R. 241; and Teskey v. Neil, 15 P. R. 244, post, COUNTY COURT.

Appeal From Order Directing Issue.]—Held, affirming 13° P. R. 26, that the garnishees had the right to appeal against an order directing the trial of an issue between the judgment creditors and a claimant of the moneys attached. Canada Cotton Co. v. Parmalce, 13 P. R. 308.

Attorney's Affidavit.]—The affidavit on which to obtain an attaching order may be made by the attorney of the indepent creditor or by a partner of the attorney. Semble, that proceedings on such order could not be prohibited on the ground that it was founded on a defective affidavit, that being a mere matter of practice. In re Sato v. Hubbard. S. P. R. 445.

Bill of Exchange—Proof as to Holder.]
—On an application for an order for a garnishee to pay over to the judgment creditor the amount of an acceptance due by him to judgment debtor, it should be shewn that at the date of the order (if made) the acceptance is in the hands or under the control of the judgment debtor, and not in the hands of some innocent third party. Mellish v, Buffalo, Brantford, and Goderich R. W. Co., 2 L. J. 230.

Chamber Order.] — A garnishee order granted by the court on an application in chambers is regular. Robertson v. Grant, 3 Ch. Ch. 331.

Collusion.]—The executor of the garnishee having on affidavit denied the debt, and imputed collusion between the judgment creditor and debtor, which was not denied, the attaching order was rescinded, and an issue directed, on payment of costs. Ward v. Vance, 3 P. R. 210.

Costs.]—A judgment creditor was not allowed the costs of a garnishee application, either against the judgment debtor or the gar-nishee, Bank of Montreal v. Yarrington, 3 L. J. 185.

Costs. |—But it is now the practice at law to grant such costs where there is a sufficient fund out of which to pay them, and this practice was concurred in in Chancery, reversing Evans v. Evans, 1 Ch. Ch. 248. Evans v. Evans, 1 Ch. Ch. 303.

Death of Garnishee.] — There is no power in the court or Judge to order or permit a suggestion to be entered of the death of a garnishee, so as to legalize execution against his executors or administrators. Ward v. Vance. 3 P. R. 323. See the next case.

Death of Garnishee.]—Where a summons to pay over was argued on one dax, and judgment deferred till the next day, when the summons was made absolute (the garnishee having died during the interim), on an application to set aside the order, on the ground that it was made after the proceedings had abated by reason of the death of the garnishee, leave was given to the judgment creditor to amend his order nunc pro tunc, without costs, the delay being the delay of the Judge and not of the party. Ward v. Vance, 9 L. J. 244, 4 P. R. 210.

Death of Judgment Debtor.]—A debt due to a deceased defendant cannot be attached without reviving the judgment against his personal representatives. Commercial Bank v, Williams, 5 L. J. 66.

Discretion to Refuse Order, |—Quere, has not a Judge a discretion, in the case of an attachable debt, to decline under special circumstances to make an order to pay over the amount where such an order would be inequitable, or tend to give one creditor a preference after the making by the judgment debtor of a general assignment in favour of his creditors without preference or priority. Lee v. Gorrie, 1 C. L. J. 75.

Evidence by Judgment Debtor.]—The judgment debtor is admissible as a witness on behalf of the plaintiff in an action under a garnishee order. Hutcheson v. Allen, 9 L. J. 24.

Ex parte Order.] — An order will be granted ex parte, upon affidavit that on an oral examination of the debtor, he swore that the garnishee was indebted to him. Macpherson v. Kerr, 3 L. J. 49.

Facts to be Proved. —An affidavit on which to ground an application for an order to attach debts under s. 194 of the C. L. P. Act, 1856, should shew that a judgment has been recovered, and to what amount it is still unsatisfied; that a person is indebted to defendant, and is within the jurisdiction of the court; and that the action is not against defendant as an absconding debtor. Bullen v. Lingham, 2 L. J. 230.

Facts to be Proved.]—An ex parte order to attach debts due to a judgment debtor will be granted in the first instance, upon affidavit that judgment has been recovered and is still wholly unsatisfied; that defendant has not sufficient goods to satisfy the same; and that third parties are indebted to defendant, and are within the jurisdiction. But, quere, whether such affidavit is sufficient. Connor v. McBride, 21. J. 232.

Final Order—Notice to Judgment Debtor.]—Where a judgment creditor obtains an order attaching debts due to the judgment debtor, notice of the application for a final order for payment over by the garnishee should be served upon the judgment debtor, Ferguson v. Carman, 26 U. C. R. 26, specially referred to. Beaty v. Hackett, 14 P. R. 335.

Form of Issue. |- The defendant, a member of the Legislative Assembly, received a sum of money from a person as an inducement or bribe to influence him in his course in the Assembly, which he handed to the Speaker of the Assembly to wait the action of the House with regard to the alleged bribery. The plaintiffs, judgment creditors of the de-fendant, issued an order attaching all debts due from the Speaker to the defendant, claiming that the money so handed to him became debt payable to the defendant. The court, without expressing any opinion on the merits, directed an issue to be tried, under Rule 373, O. J. Act, as to the garnishee's indebtedness. The form of the issue was subsequently settled by the registrar, namely, whether at the date of the service upon the garnishee of the attaching order, there was any debt due or accruing due from the garnishee to the de-fendant, which on appeal to the full court was held sufficient. Stuart v. McKim, S O. R. 739.

Fraud - Issue-County Court.]-Where it was charged by a judgment creditor that a fraudulent arrangement had been made between the judgment debtor and his employers, the garnishees, whereby a third person had been substituted for the debtor as the servant of the garnishees, and money paid to such third person, while the debtor continued to do the work:—Held, that the judgment creditor was entitled to have an issue directed, to which the third person should be a party, to determine whether there was at the time the service of the attaching order any debt due or accruing from the garnishees to the debtor: to entitle the creditor to an issue, it was not necessary to bring home a case of fraud to the persons against whom it was charged; it was sufficient to shew unexplained facts and circumstances so unusual as to create a strong suspicion that fraud had been practised:-Held, also, that the Judge of the county court in which the judgment has been recovered has power, when the amount claimed to be due from the garnishee is so large as not to be within the jurisdiction of a county court. to make the garnishing summons returnable before himself, even where the garnishee resides in another county:—Semble, that the proper construction of Rules 917, 918, and is, that the Judge of the county court in which a judgment has been recovered has power, when the amount claimed to be due from a garnishee residing in another county is within the jurisdiction of the county court or the division court, to order the garnishee to attend before the Judge of the county court or the clerk of the division within which he lives:—Held, also, that an order for a receiver should not be made in respect of a fund which may be reached by garnishing process. Millar v. Thompson, 19 P. R. 294.

Information and Belief, |—The affidavit required by s. 194 C. L. P. Act, 1856, will not be dispensed with: and must be positive and explicit. Under certain circumstances, however, an affidavit founded on belief will be sufficient. Cataraqui Road Co. v. Dunn, 3 L. J. 27.

Information and Belief.]-If sufficient grounds be shewn for such belief, it will be sufficient. Jones v. DeRergue, 3 L. J. 31.

Information and Belief. whether an affidavit of information and belief is sufficient:—Semble, an ex parte order will not at all events be granted on it, when no application for an oral examination of the defendant has been made. McLaren v. Sudworth, 4 L. J. 233.

Interpleader.]-An interpleader will not be granted to try the validity of an attaching order, or to determine amount due. Mc-Naughton v. Webster, 6 L. J. 17.

Interpleader.]—Where, on an application under the C. L. P. Act for a garnishee order, the debt alleged to be due to the judgment debtor is claimed by a third person, and on such ground the garnishee disputes his liability to pay it over:—Held, that in the absence of any power to direct an interpleader issue, or summon such third person before the court, the issue of a writ under s. 291 is the proper course to adopt; and that the garnishee, where there are rival claimants for the debt, may file a bill in equity calling upon the parties to interplead. Remarks as to the necessity in this country of provisions similar to those contained in the English Act, 23 & 24 Vict. c. 125, ss. 28-30. Speacer v. Conteg, 26 C. P.

Managing Clerk - New Affidavit.] Managing Cierk — New Agmanti.]
An affidavit for an attaching order under R.
S. 0. 1877 c. 50, s. 307, must be made by the execution creditor or his attorney, and an affidavit made by a managing cierk is insuffi-cient. Builder v. Kerr, T. P. R. 323.
Where the debt attached was still in the hands of the garnishee, and still in statu quo, the judgment creditor was allowed to file a proper affidavit nunc pro tune.

Nature of Indebtedness. |-The Judge should require the nature of the indebtedness to be fully stated; but where he granted an order without this the court refused to set the proceedings aside. Tiffany v. Bullen, 18 C. P. 91.

Notice to Garnishee.]-Where an application is made to compel a garnishee to pay over debts due by him to the debtor, which have been garnished, notice must be served on such garnishee. In re English, 1 Ch. Ch. 197.

Notice to Judgment Debtor.]-Notice of an application to garnish should always be given to the judgment debtor; but, quære, whether it can be imposed as a condition on the judgment creditor, the statute not requir-ing it. Ferguson v. Carman, 26 U. C. R. 26.

Plaintiff or Attorney's Affidavit.]—An order to attach should not be made without an affidavit either of the plaintiff or his attorney, stating the indebtedness of the garnishee. Boyd v. Haynes, 5 P. R. 15.

Prima Facie Case - Discretion as to Issue. — The plaintiff, after recovering judgment against the defendant, issued an attaching order upon moneys in the hands of the Canada Company, which were admittedly not the moneys of the latter, and which the plaintiff tiff swore he was informed and believed be-longed to the judgment debtor, but which were claimed by his son. There was nothing be-fore the Judge of the county court to support the assertion of the plaintiff, and the examination of the claimant taken at the instance of the plaintiff, failed to shew that there was any reason to believe that the claim was no well founded:—Held, that the Judge had under Rule 375 a discretion to direct or re Judge had fuse to direct the trial of an issue, and that such discretion was properly exercised in refusing to so direct and in rescinding attaching order:-Semble, if the plaintiff had attaching order:—Semble, if the plaintin had been able to suggest even a plausible ground for supposing that it was the money of the judgment debtors or to cast a suspicion upon the bona fides of the claim of the son, it would have been the duty of the Judge to direct an issue, if the plaintiff desired it. Johnson V. Moody, 12 P. R. 203.

Questioning Judgment.] - Semble, the question of the validity of a judgment should not be argued on the return of a garnishee summons, but should be raised on an tion to set aside the execution. Elliot v. Capell, 9 P. R. 35.

Security for Costs.]-Where one of the parties to an issue arising out of garnishment proceedings is out of the jurisdiction, there is power under Rule 375 to order security for costs. Canadian Bank of Commerce v. Middleton, 12 P. R. 121.

Security for Costs.] — The judgment creditor obtained an attaching order, which was set aside by the local Judge who granted it; the judgment creditor then appealed to a Judge in chambers unsuccessfully, and had given notice of a further appeal to a divisional court, when his proceedings were stayed by an order of the master in chambers requiring him to give security for costs, on the ground that he was insolvent and was proceeding for the benefit of another:—Held, that the order for security could not be sustained; the judgnent creditor was not proceeding either by action or petition; and there was no authority for ordering security. Re Rees, 10 P. R. 425, overruled. Palmer v. Locett, 14 P. R. 415.

Service of Order.]—23 Vict. c. 33 does not extend to the service of attaching orders, but only applies to the service of process, &c. Bank of British North America v. Laughrey. 2 C. L. J. 44.

Service of Order.]—An attaching order had been served by leaving a copy at the store and residence of the garnishee. Service of a summons to pay over was accepted for him a practising attorney, and this summons, h such acceptance indorsed, was afterwards served in the same way as the order. On the return of it, another attorney ap-peared for the garnishee, and objected that the acceptance was without authority, and the service insufficient:—Held, that personal ser-vice of the summons and order was not indisvice of the summons and order was not mus-pensable. The service if moved against would have been insufficient, as it was not shewn that personal service could not have been ef-fected, or that the papers had come to the fected, or that the papers and come to the knowledge of the garnishee; but held, also, that no such application having been made, the acceptance should be held sufficient, and that any defect in the service of the attach-ing order was thus cured:—Held, also, that the appearance of the garnishee by another attorney duly authorized was a waiver of any objection to the service. Ward v. Vance, 3

Adam Wilson, J., adhered to the above decision as to the service of the attaching order, and held that the new affidavits set out rather tended to sustain such service than otherwise. S. C., 3 P. R. 210.

Setting Aside Order, I—Where the garnishee (a deputy sheriff) after ten months applied to set aside an order to pay, upon the ground that when the garnishing order was made there was no such debt, and that he, the garnishee, was ignorant of the nature and effect of the proceedings taken against him, the applies tion was refused. Gordon v. Bonter, 6 L. J. 112.

Setting Aside Order.]—The attorney of the defendant moved to rescind an order to pay over, so far as it regarded a judgment recovered by his client against the garnishee, on the ground that the judgment had been on the ground that the judgment had been stigned to him as security for indorsements. The summons was served only on the judgment creditor:—Held, that all parties must have notice before the matter could be reopened on the ground of the assignment. Brok of Upper Canada v. Wallace, 2 P. R.

Setting Aside Order.] — Practice—Motion by judgment debtor to set aside order—Garnishing salary of clerk of the peace. Hanvey v. Stanton, 13 C. L. J. 108.

Setting Aside Order.] — An attaching order will not be set aside for irregularity on the argument of the summons to pay over, but only on a substantive application. Builder v. Kerr, 7 P. R. 323: 14 C. L. J. 159.

Stating Amount.]—An order to attach will be granted, though the amount be not stated; but it must be stated in a summons to pay over. Mcldrum v. Tulloch, 2 L. J. 184.

Stay of Execution—Security given on Appeal—No Right to take Attachment Proceedings.]—Vigeon v. Northcote, 15 P. R. 171, post, EXECUTION.

Staying Proceedings.] — In an action brought by an assignee in insolvency on a debt admitted to be due to the insolvent, defendants applied for a stay of proceedings and for an interpleader to try the rights of the assignee as aranes, various creditors of the insolvent, who had served attaching orders and garnishing summonses prior to the insolvency:—Held, that the defendants should have had the garnishment proceedings disposed of in the courts in which they had been taken, instead of making this application, which was therefore refused. The assignee having given no assistance to the court by affidavit, and having made no attempt to adjust the claims, was refused his costs. Picken v. Victoria R. W. Co., 44 U. C. R. 372.

Summary Trial.]—A Judge of the court will, when it appears proper, instead of directing an issue, himself try a question of fact arising on application before him in chambers. Robertson v. Grant, 3 Ch. Ch. 331.

Validity of Assignment.]—Where the debt is claimed by a third party as assignee, there is no power to direct an issue to try the validity of the alleged assignment. Kerr v. Fullarton, 3 P. R. 19.

IV. MISCELLANEOUS CASES.

Company — Agreement to Attach.] — A railway being indebted to a bank, the officers of the company arranged that the bank should proceed to garnish certain debts due to the company, the costs of which as between attorney and client the railway company was to pay:—Held, that the officers of the company had authority, without a resolution of the board of directors, to enter into such an agreement, and that the same need not be under the corporate seal. Hamilton and Port Dover R. W. Co., Gore Bank, 20 Gr. 190.

Injunction to Restrain Attaching Creditor. |—Proceedings were taken before a county Judge to garnish certain moneys, payable by the county to the plaintift, as elerk of the peace and county crown attorney, and which moneys that Judge ordered to be attached in favour of the creditor, the present defendant. Thereupon the debtor, then defendant in those proceedings, filed a bill in this court, seeking to restrain further action on such order: —Held, that this court had no jurisdiction to grant the relief asked; that the proper place to obtain such relief was by ampeal to the court of appeal; and, without determining whether the claim of the debtor against the country was such as could be garnished, the court refused the motion for injunction, with costs. Van Norman v. Grant, 27 Gr. 498.

Mistake — Similarity in Name—Recovery by Rightful Owner.]—In an action to recover a deposit of money to the credit of the plaintiff with the defendants, it appeared that the whole amount had been innecently but wrongfully naid by the defendants into court and also directly to the creditors of another person of the same name as the plaintiff, under garnishes proceedings in a division court:—Held, that there was nothing in such proceedings to bar the plaintiff of his right to recover, or to protect the defendants against his claim, and that the judgments in the proceedings to the plaintiff:—Held, also, that s. 195 of R. S. O. 1887 c. 51, only protects a garnishe against being called upon by a primary debtor to pay over again and does not protect him against any third person. Andrew v. Canadian Mutual Loan and Investment Co., 29 O. R. 365.

Mortgagee—Attaching Creditor is not an Incumbrancer, —A creditor of a mortgagee, who has sued out an attaching order against the mortgage debt, is not an incumbrancer within the terms of G. O. 448, of whose claim the master is to take an account. Crosbie v. Fenn, 28 Gr. 283.

Negligence of Attorney.]—Garnishee proceedings—Neglect of Attorneys in conduct of—Action for—Priority of orders—Service of—C. L. P. Act. s. 289, et seq. Succetman v. Lemon, 13 C. P. 534.

No Equitable Remedy Before Attachment. — A judgment creditor cannot attach or garnish by a suit in equity a debt for which he has not obtained an attaching order at law. But, semble, after obtaining and serving such an order, if a remedy in equity is needed for the realization of the debt so attached, the creditor is entitled to file a bill for the purpose. Blake v. Jarvis, 16 Gr. 295; 17 Gr. 201.

Proceeding in Equity.]—The plaintiff claimed to be a creditor of O., and as such filed a bill alleging that O. was mortgagee or otherwise entitled to some interest in the lands of M., and that O. was about to dispose of his interest therein in order to defeat the chim of the plaintiff, and prayed an account of what was due by O., and to restrain M. from paying O., and also an order for M. to pay plaintiff. At the hearing, the court made a decree referring it to the master to ascertain what was due by O. to the plaintiff, and if anything found due that O. should be ordered to pay the amount due to the plaintiff, with costs: but dismissed the bill as against M., with costs. Menzies v. Ogdvie, 27 Gr. 456.

Proceeding in Equity.]—The plaintiffs, who had recovered judgment against the defendant W., filed a bill alleging that W., being the owner of lands subject to a mortgage, conspired with his co-defendant whereby a second mortgage was executed by W. to one A., who paid the money to the co-defendant, which was held by him as agent or trustee for W. The lands were subsequently sold in a suit by the first mortgages, and realized sufficient to pay the two mortgages only. The plaintiffs proved their claim in that suit in the master's office, but received nothing. They alleged that they had been led to believe that the mortgage by W. to A. was bonk fide, but had ascertained that such was not the fact; and prayed that the co-defendants might be ordered to pay over the amount paid out of the proceeds of the land to satisfy the mortgage in favour of A.:—Held, that the bill was in effect one to garnish the money due to W. in the hands of his co-defendant, and under the content of the proceeds of the land to satisfy the mortgage in favour of A.:—Held, that the bill was in the hands of his co-defendant, and under the content of the proceeds of the land to satisfy the mortgage in favour of A.:—Held, that the bill was in the hands of his co-defendant, and under the content of the proceeds of the land to satisfy the mortgage in favour of A.:—Held, that the bill was in the hands of his co-defendant, and under the proceeds of the land to satisfy the mortgage in favour of A.:—Held, that the bill was in the hands of his co-defendant, and under the hands of his co-defendant, and under the more than the hands of his co-defendant, and under the mortgage has been also been also be a substantial to the mortgage hands and the hands of his co-defendant, and under the mortgage has been also been also be a substantial to the hands of his co-defendant and under the hands of his co-defendant and under the hands of his co-defendant and under the hands of his co-defendant and the hands of his co-defendant and the hands of his co-defendant and t

Security Held by Garnishee.]—A judgment creditor had attached a debt due to the defendant, as a security for which land had been conveyed to the defendant, and a suit for redemption was pending. The bill in that sait was afterwards dismissed for default in paying the money in pursuance of the report therein:—Held, that the property having thereby in effect become substituted for the debt, the creditor was entitled to a sale thereof in this court, and payment of the proceeds towards satisfaction of the judgment. Bank of Elgin v. Hutchinson, 13 Gr. 59.

Stop Order.]—The court has no jurisdiction to grant a stop order at the instance of a judgment creditor of a party entitled to funds in court. Lee v. Bell. 2 Ch. Ch. 114.

Stop Order.]—The fact that the judgment creditor has obtained a garnishee order, will not enable the court to grant a stop order. Purkiss v. Morrison, 2 Ch. Ch. 117.

Writ of Sequestration.] — A cceditor has a right under a writ of sequestration, to compel payment by a third party of a debt which he owes to defendant against whose estate the writ issues. McDowell v. McDowell Ch. Ch. 140.

Linii the sequestrator, or the party claiming ander the writ, take steps to obtain payment.

Until the sequestrator, or the party claiming under the writ, take steps to obtain payment of the money, the chose in action is not bound by reason of the writ being in the sheriff's hand. The Constitutional Questions.]—The questions in this case relating to the Fire Insurance Company Acts, so far as raised, were held not to be of such a constitutional character as to require notice to the Attorney-General of the Province, and the Minister of Justice of the Dominion. Goring v. London Mutual Fire Ins. Co., 11 O. R. 82.

Costs.]—In an action in the nature of an information filed by the Attorney-General, costs will not be allowed to the defendant against the Crown. Regina v. Mainwaring, 5 O. S. 670.

Costs.]—The Attorney-General is never made to pay costs even upon interlocatory applications. Gibson v. Clench, 1 Ch. Ch. 69.

Damages Against Relators — Pleading, —In an action brought in the name of the Attorney-General upon the relation of certain persons to restrain the defendants from collecting tolls or keeping their toll-gates closed upon their roads, the defendants alleged, by way of defence, certain wrongful acts of the relators, and by way of counterclaim asked damages against them:—Held, that the relators were not in any sense plaintiffs; and that the allegations against them must be struck out. Attorney-General v.

must be struck out. Attorney-General v. Vaughan Road Co., 14 P. R. 516.
See this case, 21 O. R. 507, 19 A. R. 234, as to the right of the Attorney-General to maintain such an action.

Default in Pleading.] — Where the Attorney-General is a defendant and does not answer, the proper course is to obtain an order that he answer in a week, or that the bill be taken pro confesso. Shea v. Fellower, 1 Ch. Ch. 30.

Delegation of Duty.]—On an indictment containing four counts for obtaining money by false prefences, was indersed; "I direct that this indictment be laid before the grand jury. Montreal, 6th October, 1880;—By J. A. Mousseau, Q.C.; C. P. Davidson, Q.C.; L. O. Loranger, Attorney-General," Messrs, Mousseau and Davidson were the two counsel authorized to represent the Crown in all the criminal proceedings during the term. A motion supported by affidavit was made to quash the indictment on the ground, inter alia, that the preliminary formalities required by $2.8 of 32 & 33 Vict. c. 29 had not been observed. The chief justice allowed the case to proceed, intimating that he would reserve the point raised, should the defendant be found guilty. The defendant was convicted, and it was held, that under 32 & 33 Vict. c.

29, s. 28, the Attorney-General could not delegate to the judgment and discretion of another the power which the legislature had attorney thin prevention of the control of the country that a bill of indication to reduce the grand jury; and it being admitted that the Attorney-General gave no directions with reference to this indictment, the motion to quash should have been granted, and the verdict ought to be set aside. Abrahams v. The Queen, 6 S. C. R. 10.

Drainage.]—To an action on a drainage by draw to compel a municipal corporation to complete a drain, and also to restrain a misapplication of moneys assessed, and for an account, the Attorney-General is not a necessary party. Smith v. Township of Raleigh, 3 O. R. 405.

Escheat.]—Held, affirming 26 Gr. 126, that the doctrine of seckents applies to Ontario; that the Attorney-General for Ontario is the proper person to represent the Crown and to appropriate the escheat to the uses of the Province; that the court of chancery has jurisdiction in such a case; and that it was proper for the Attorney-General to file a bill in the court of chancery to enforce the escheat. Attorney-General of Ontario v. O'Reilly, 6 A. R. 576.

Expenditure of Rates.]—A writ of certiorari lies to remove orders of sessions relating to the expenditure of the district rates and assessments, at the instance of the Attorney-General, without notice. Rex v. Justices of the Neucosatle District, Dra. 114.

Expropriation.]—The Attorney-General ordered to be made a party to a case involving the title to a rondway, in order to give protection to the Dominion Government in expropriating the land. See Re Trent Valley Caval.—"Re Water Street" and "The Road to the Whorf," 11 O. R. 687.

Highway. — Semble, but for the language used in Gueiph v. Canada Company, 4 Gr. 656, the proper frame of a suit by a municipality against a railway company for trespassing by running their track along one of the streets of the municipality without their consent would be by way of information in the name of the Attorney-General with the corporation as relators. Fendon Falls v. Victoria R. W. Co., 29 Gr. 4.

Information—Code of Civil Procedure, Art. 997—Power of Attorney-General to Discontinue.]—Article 1997 of the Civil Procedure Code relates on its true construction, not to every illegal act done by an association therein mentioned, but only to such acts as are professedly or manifestly done in the are professedly or manifestly done in the privilege not conferred upon it by law. Where an information under that article alleged that the respondent company had closed a public lane under the pretext that they had acquired private interests therein which entitled them so to do:—Held, that this did not amount to an allegation that they closed it in the exercise of any power, franchise, or privilege within the meaning of the article:—Held, also, that the court has jurisdiction under article 1997; but that after issue the Attorney-General is dominus litis, and can discontinue proceedings or control their conduct and settlement independently of any private relator. Casgrain v. Atlantic and North-West R. W. Co., [1895] A. C. 282.

Information—Pleading.1—The proceedings in an ex officio information may be either at the suit of the Queen or the Attorney-General, but the defendant cannot be called upon to plead in vacation upon a rule to plead given in vacation, but is entitled to a regular rule to plead, and an imparlance. Regina v. Burnham, 1 U. C. R. 443.

Information—Signature. 1—An information in the name of the Attorney-General not signed by him, but on which was indorsed a flat, "Let the within information be filled," signed by the Solicitor-General:—Held, irregular, Attorney-General v. Toronto Street Railtay Co., 13 Gr. 441.

There is no precedent for dispensing with the signature of the Attorney-General to an information. S. C., 2 Ch. Ch. 165.

Where in his absence from the Province an information was filed without his signature, but having indorsed thereon a fiat signed by the Solicitor-General, it was ordered to be taken off the files. Ib.

Where an information had been amended by merely adding a party by the direction of the court, a motion to take the amended information off the files because not signed by the Attorney-General, was refused. S. C., ib. 321.

Informations.]—See Mewburn v. Street, 21 U. C. R. 498; Attorney-General v. McLachlin, 5 P. R. 63; Attorney-General v. Harrison, 12 Gr. 406; Attorney-General v. Toronto Street R. W. Co., 14 Gr. 673.

Injunction.]—Breach of Charter.]—The defendants were incorporated by letters patent under the Street Railway Act, R. S. O. 1887 c. 171, which authorized them to construct and operate (on all days except Sundays) a street railway:—Held, that an action would not lie by the Crown to restrain the defendants from operating the road on Sunday, the restriction against their doing so being at most an implied one, and no substantial injury to the public or any interference with proprietary rights being shewn. Attorney-General v. Niagara Falls, Wesley Pork and Clifton R. W. Co., 19 O. R. 624; 18 A. R. 453.

International Bridge.] — Held, reversing 28 Gr. 65, that the Attorney-General for Ontario, as representing only a limited portion of the public, with whom, if at all, a contract existed for the construction of a bridge by a company incorporated by the Dominion Parliament, from Canada to the United States, across the Ningara River, had no locus standi. Attorney-General v. International Bridge Co., 6 A. R. 537.

See also S. C., 27 Gr. 37.

See also S. C., 27 Gr. 37.
The work being one within the jurisdiction of the Parliament of Canada, that Parliament, presumably with the knowledge of the state of the bridge, allowed debentures to be issued upon it:—Held, upon this ground also the Attorney-General of Ontario was not the proper party to file the information. S. C., 6
A. R. 537.

Joint Stock Company—Dominion Charter—Forfeiture.]—Proceedings to set aside the charter of a company incorporated by Act of the Dominion Parliament may be taken by the Attorney-General of Canada. Dominion Salvage and Wrecking Co. v. Attorney-General of Canada, 21 S. C. R. 72.

Navigation.]-Semble, a bill to remove Navigation.]—Semble, a bill to remove a fixed bridge across a navigable river as impeding navigation, and to erect instead a drawbridge, as provided for by statute, should be by the Attorney-General; the statute referred to, 16 Vict. c. 37, being passed for the seneral benefit of the public. Cull v. Grand Trank R. W. Co., 10 Gr. 491.

See Attorney-General v. Weston Plank Road.

Co., 4 Gr. 211; Attorney-General v. Walker, 25 Gr. 233.

Nuisance.]—As to the necessity for a public nuisance being moved against by the Attorney-General. See Hathaway v. Doig, 28 Gr. 461, 6 A. R. 204.

Ordnance Lands.]—To an information of intrusion filed by Her Majesty's Attorney-General for the Dominion, prosecuting for Her Majesty, the defendant pleaded that the lands mentioned were not ordnance property. ands mentioned were not ordinance property, or property in any manner under the control of the Dominion of Canada; but, on the contrary thereof, the said lands became upon the passing of the B. passing of the B. N. A. Act, 1867, and still are the property of the Province of Ontario, in which they are situate. Issue having been in which they are situate. Issue having been joined on this plea, the title at the trial was gone into, and a verdict entered for the Crown, with leave to defendant to move to enter it for him:—Held, that the Crown was enter it for him:—Held, that the Crown was clearly entitled to recover, for, among other reasons, the plea set up no title in defendant, and admitted the Crown title by stating the lands to belong to this Province; and the fact of the Attorney-General for Canada presecuting for the Crown could not shew that a Dominion title was necessarily claimed. 3ttorney-General v. Harris, 33 U. C. R. 94.

Patent of Invention.]-Semble, that on an application to question a patent under the Patent Act of 1872, the intervention of the Attorney-General is not essential. In re Bell Telephone Co., 9 O. R. 339.

Precedence.]—A patent from the Crown appointing a barrister a Queen's counsel, directed that he should take precedence next after another Queen's counsel who was subsequently appointed Attorney-General:—Held, that such patent did not then entitle him to precedence before the Solicitor-General. In re Boulton, 1 U. C. R. 317.

Provincial Rights.] — The Attorney-General of the Province is the proper officer to see in respect of all matters having locality in the Province. in the Province. See Attorney-General of Nova Scotia ex rel. Dickie v. Axford, 13 S. C.

Removal of Trustee.]—It is not necessary to make the Attorney-General a party to an action by an incorporated educational institute for the removal of one of the trustees for improper dealing with trust funds. Wilberforce Educational Institute v. Holden, 17 O. R. 439.

Res Judicata.]-Semble: There is no sound reason why the Government of the ment of a court of justice in a suit in which the Attorney-General, as representing the Government, was a party defendant, equally as any individual would be, if the relief prayed by the information is sought in the same interest and upon the same grounds as were adjudicated upon by the judgment in the former suit. Fonseca v. Attorney-General of Canada, 17 S. C. R. 612.

Status.]—The Provincial Attorney-General, and not the Attorney-General of the Dominion, is the proper party to file an information, when the complaint is not of an injury to property vested in the Crown as representing the Government of the Dominion, representing the Government of the Domnion, but of a violation of the rights of the public of Ontario. Attorney-General v. Niagara Falls International Bridge Co., 20 Gr. 34.

The Previncial Attorney-General is the proper person to file an information in respect of a nuisance, caused by interference with a railway, and he is the officer of the Crown who is considered as present in the courts of the Province, to assert the rights of the Crown, and of those who are under its protection. Ib.

AUCTION AND AUCTIONEER.

Acceptance of Goods.]-An offer by a purchaser at auction to sell to another person the goods purchased by him, does not constiout of the Statute of Frauds, Clarkson v. Noble, 2 U. C. R. 361.

Action by Auctioneer-Clerk's Entry. 1 Any auctioneer may maintain an action in s own name for goods sold by him at auction; and an entry by his clerk, who attended the sale, in the sales-book, is a sufficient memorandum of the contract within the Statute of Frauds. In this case the sales-book consisted of a file of sales-books, or sheets, fastened in a book, on the inside of which the conditions of sale were written, and at the end of the conditions it was stated and at the end of the conditions it was stated that the terms of payment would be found at the head of each sale. At the head of the sheet in this case was the following: "Sale of groceries, wines," &c. The terms of payof groceries, wines, "&c. The terms of payment were then given, and the entry of the sale was as follows: "Morrison—3 cases Booth & Co.'s gin, Terry, $5.35".

$15.75" and the evidence shewed that the name Morrison was that of the seller, and Terry of the purchaser:—Held, that the conditions of subrodusers. ditions of sale sufficiently referred to the sales-book or sheet, and that the evidence sufficiently shewed who was the seller and who the purchaser, so as to satisfy the statute. Coate v. Terry, 24 C. P. 571.

Agreement not to Bid.]-An agreement to pay money on a party's not bidding at a sheriff's sale is not void as being contrary to public policy, when the party making the agreement thereby insured the withdrawal of a claim from the land. Waddel v. McCabe, 4 O. S. 191.

Approved Notes—Period of Credit—Setoff, 1—Ity an auctioneer's conditions of sale, nurchasers to an amount exceeding £30, were to have "six months credit, giving approved indorsed notes;"—Held, that a purchaser over £30 upon these terms, was a purchaser unconditionally on credit, and could not be treated as a purchaser for eash upon his refused to furnish the indorsed note; and as he could not consequently be sued on the common count for goods sold and delivered until after the expiration of the credit, that to a special action brought by the auctioneer against the purchaser before the credit had expired, for not giving the indorsed note when requested, a plea of set-off would be inadmissible. Wakefield v. Gorrie, 5 U. C. R. 159.

Approved Notes—Statute of Frauds.]—
The conditions of sale required approved notes for the purchase money. The morning after the sale the purchase related on the seller and drew a note, signed by himself only, for the goods he said he had purchased. A dispute arose as to the goods to which he was entitled, and he went away leaving the note. Some days after he returned and offered another note with sureties, which was refused, and the seller on the same day sent back the first note:—Held, clearly insufficient to take the case out of the Statute of Frauds. Kaitling v. Parkin, 23 C. P. 569.

Assignce of Insolvent.]—A by-law of a county municipality passed under s.-s. 2 of s. 495 of the Municipal Act, R. 8. O. 1887 c. 184, enacted that it should not be lawful for any person or persons to act as auctioneers, or to sell or put up for sale any goods, &c., "by public auction," unless duly licensed;—Held, that the agent of an assignee of an insolvent estate, selling without a license the stock-in-trade of an insolvent who had carried on business in the county, was rightly convicted of a breach of the by-law, although it was the only occasion he had so acted in the municipality. Regina v. Reguson, 22 O. R. 467.

Authority to Bid.— Negligence.]—The plaintiff before the sale gave the sheriff memorandum authorizing him to bid on his account to the amount of the debt and costs in the suit. Under this the sheriff, instead of bidding gradually, bid at once the full amount, and bought in the land:—Held, that the plaintiff had clearly no ground of action against him for so doing; and—Quere, whether the writing could be construed as more than an authority, and whether, if the defendant had disregarded it altogether, any action could have been maintained. Markle v. Thomas, 13 U.C. R. 321.

Clerk's Signature.] — The auctioneer himself need not sign the purchaser's name, it may be done by his clerk at the time; and the clerk of the owner of the goods sold, acting openly at the sale for the auctioneer, is his clerk to bind the purchaser. Sandford v. O'Donohue, M. T. 4 Vict.

Clerk's Signature.]—The signature of the clerk of an auctioneer on behalf of a purchaser, is sufficient to charge the party purchasing, within the statute. Clarkson v. Noble, 2 U. C. R. 361.

Clerk's Signature.]—A paper used at the sale by auction of certain lands contained the conditions of sale, and the numbers of the lots bid off by the several purchasers, upon which their names were written in pencil opposite the lots purchased, and afterwards covered over with ink by the auctioner's clerk, it having been announced before the sale that he would sign for the several purchasers:—Held, a sufficient signing of the contract within the Statute of Frauds. Crooks v. Davis, 6 Gr. 317.

Compensation.] — Compensation in case of mistake as to quantity of land sold. See Cottingham v. Cottingham, 11 A. R. 624.

Conditions of Sale.]—Where the conditions of sale by auction are stated in the declaration as being imposed at the time of sale, the defendant cannot be discharged from them by an agreement before the sale; and a plea containing such defence is bad on general demurrer. Mead v. Hendry, 1 U. C. R. 238.

Conditions of Sale.]—The conditions of sale must be annexed to the list of purchasers, so as to make a complete contract to bind the vendee under the Statute of Frauds. Sandford v. O'Donohue, M. T. 4 Viet.

The signed list should shew the weight and

The signed list should shew the weight and value of the articles purchased, and the price given for them. Ib.

Conditions of Sale.]—A signed agreement expressed that the subscribers had purchased at auction the lots of land set opposite to their names respectively, according to the sale, and they agreed to the conditions of the sale, and they agreed to the condition of their having made the payments according to each of them individually, on condition of their having made the payments according to the conditions of sale. The conditions of sale, thus referred to, had been printed and distributed in hand-bills, and were read to the purchasers at the auction;—Held, that the conditions of sale with the signed agreement, so as to constitute a binding contract in writing, within the Statute of Frauds. Fautor. MeBride, 7 Gr. 288.

Conditions of Sale.]—The conditions of sale appeared in the printed bill of the sale, and were announced by the auctioneer. The purchaser's name was entered by the auctioneer's clerk on one of several sheets of paper used by him at the sale for entering the purchasers' names, but these sheets were not attached to the printed bill:—Held, that there was no contract within the Statute of Frauds. Kaitling v. Parkin, 23 C. P. 569.

Contract—Letters.)—Contract not signed by the vendor, but subsequently admitted by letters. See O'Donohoe v. Stammers, 11 S. C. R. 358.

Conversion of Goods—Chattel Mortgage.]—An auctioner who, at the instance and on the premises of the mortgagor, selfs at auction in the ordinary coarse the goods in a chattel mortgage, valid and in full force as regards the parties to it, and delivers possession of the goods to the purchaser, is liable to the mortgage for conversion of the goods, although the mortgagor may be void as regards creditors of the mortgagor or subsequent purchasers for value, Cochrane v. Rymill, 27 W. R. 776, 40 L. T. N. S. 744, followed. National Bank v. Rymill.

mill, 44 L. T. N. S. 767, and Barker v. Furlong [1891] 2 Ch. 172, distinguished, Johnston v. Henderson, 28 O. R. 25.

Declaration of Agency. —A person attended on a sale of land, and stated that he was buying on behalf of his brother's family, the effect of which was to prevent competition at such sale, and he became the purchaser, but he subsequently refused to admit the right of the plaintiffs, his brother's family, to redeem the property in his hands. The court declared the plaintiffs entitled to redeem, and ordered the defendant to pay all the costs of the suit. Watson v. James, 19 Gr. 355.

Factor.]—Power of factor to sell by auction for repayment of advances without special authorization. See Mitchell v. Sykes, 4 O. R. 501.

Inducing Persons not to Bid.]—When out of an addence or attendance at a sale of twenty-live or thirty persons, three or four were induced to refrain from bidding because they were informed that a person who was attending at the sale intended to buy the property for the family of the debtor, the court refused to set aside the sale which was made to such person upon a small advance upon the upset price, although the person purchasing did so for the benefit of persons other than the family of the debtor. Bronce v. Fisher, 9 Gr. 423

Lease of Premises as Dwelling and "bare 'Intrinshing Store''—Right to have !urtim Sales.|—By a lease under seal the defendant rented from the plaintif certain premises for three months. The lease contained a covenant that the lessee was not to use the premises for any purpose but that of a private dwelling and "gents' furnishing store'!—Held, that the carrying on by the lessee of auction sales of his stock, on the premises, was a breach of the covenant restrainable by injunction. Cockburn v. Quinn, 20 O. R. 519.

Leave to Bid.]—Liberty to mortgagee and trustee to bid at sale. See Ricker v. Ricker, 7 A. R. 282.

Leave to Bid.]—A master has no power to give leave to bid to a party conducting a sale; application must be made to the court. Re Laycock, McGillivray v. Johnson, S P. R. 548

Lien.]—An auctioneer has no lien on maps being regarded as title deeds, which are quasi part of the land. Blackburn v. Macdonald, 6 C. P. 389.

Loss on Re-sale.]—Where goods were sold by auction, but being left by the purchaser were re-sold at a loss, and were purchased by a partner of the auctioneer, though manother business totally distinct from that of the auctioneer; and an action was afterwards brought by the auctioneer to recover from the first purchaser the loss on the re-sale:—Held, that it was no good ground of objection to such action that the goods on the re-sale had been purchased by such partner. Clarkson v. Noble, 2 U. C. R. 361.

Misrepresentations.] — As to effect of misrepresentations in sale of land by auction. See Stammers v. O'Donohoe, 28 Gr. 207; S. A. R. 161; S. C. sub. nom. O'Donohoe v.

Stammers, 11 S. C. R. 358; Re Murray and Kerr, 13 O R 414.

Manicipal Corporation—Right to Lesue License, 1—Section 495, s. 2, of the Municipal Corporation 495, s. 2, of the Municipal Corporation of the Cor

Municipal Act—"Regulating and Governing."]—Neither under s. 580, nor under s. 583 (2), of the Municipal Act, R. S. O. 1897 c. 223, can the municipal council of a city prohibit an auctioner from carrying on his business in the public markets of the city in respect of any commodities which may properly be sold there. Bollander v. City of Ottawa, 30 O. R. 7; 27 A. R. 335.

Negligence.]—An action will lie against an auctioneer for selling goods at a ruinous sacrifice, if the jury find that he has acted negligently and disregarded his duty; and it is no misdirection to tell the jury that the low price obtained is evidence to go to them of negligence. Cull v. Wackfield, 6 O. S. 178.

Part Payment—Re-sale.]—Where at a sale by auction defendant purchased goods on the condition of furnishing indersed notes for the amount, with the option of obtaining a discount of ten per cent. for cash, and that if the conditions were not complied with the goods were to be re-sold at the risk of the purchaser, and after the sale the defendant paid £15 on account, but performed no other part of the conditions, and the plaintiff re-sold the goods at a loss:—Held, that the part payment took the case out of the Statute of Frauds, so as to dispense with the necessity of proof of a written contract: and that such payment could not be considered as depriving the plain tiff of the right to re-sell and make the defendant responsible for the loss on the re-sale. Furniss v. Saucers, 3 U. C. R. 77.

Puffing — Fictitious Bids.] — A sale of lands by auction being about to take place, an intending purchaser, in conversation with a person who had previously purchased a portion of the same property, was told by him that he intended buying additional portions between the same property, which is a person of the same property, which is the before, and that he expected the property would fetch about £70 or £80 an acre, and that he was prepared to go as high as £100 per acre for that portion which he intended to buy. It was shewn that by an arrangement between the owner of the estate and this person it was agreed that he should have the lots desired by him at the same price as he had paid for his first purchase, no matter at what price they might be knocked down to him; and they were accordingly bid off by him at a rate much higher than that formerly paid by him:—Held, that this was not pulling, although it might have the effect of misleading the intending purchaser, who swore that he had reliance on the opinion of this party; but as he did not swear that he had been influenced by the example of this person or the information thus given by him, the court decreed a specific performance of the contract for the purchase of certain portions of the estate bid off by him at the auction. Crooks v. Davis, 6 Gr. 317.

Purchase Money of Land-Statute of Frauds, 1—In an action on the common count for land sold, it appeared that the land in question was put up at auction under hand bills signed by the plaintiffs, and having been knocked down to the defendant, his name was entered as purchaser in a book by the auctioneer's clerk, and he paid the deposit required down, but he afterwards refused to pay the subsequent instalments. A bond to convey had been executed by the plaintiffs, and left ready for defendant, with a bond for pay-ment of the money, which defendant did not execute:—Held, that the plaintiffs could not recover, for the land was not conveyed, and therefore an action on the common count would not lie:-Held, also, that there was no contract for sale sufficient to satisfy the Statute of Frauds, Thomas v. Ross, 19 C. P.

Refusal to Accept Bid. |—An auction-eer is not bound to accept all bids, as a matter of course, from persons present at auction. An action, therefore, will not lie for refusing to accept such bids unless by reason of some special condition or terms of the sale. Holder v. Jackson, 11 C. P. 543.

Representations as to Objects of Sense.]—By the advertisement of an intended sate of land in lots, it was stated: "The soil is well adapted for gardening purposes, and a considerable portion of the property is covered with a fine growth of pine and oak, which will yield a large quantity of cordwood, and the remainder is covered with an ornamental second growth of evergreen and various other kind of trees." A purchaser at the sale, which took place on the property, set up as a defence to a suit for specific performance that the soil was not such as represented, and was unfit for gardening purposes, and that the trees upon the property were not of the des-cription set forth in the advertisement: were not of the des-Held, that these representations having been made in respect of matters which were objects of sense, and as to which an intending purchaser ought in prudence to have examined for himself, formed no ground for relieving the purchaser from the contract. Crooks v. Davis, 6 Gr. 317.

Representations and Warranty.]— See Coate v. Terry, 26 C. P. 35.

Revocation of Authority.] are sent to an auctioneer to sell, and the principal afterwards directs him not to sell, but the goods remain in his possession, and are purchased bona fide by a third party, who has no notice whatever of the revocation of the authority, such sale is good. Gunn v. Gillespie, 2 U. C. R. 151.

Set-off by Purchaser Against Vendor. See Wakefield v. Gorrie, 5 U. C. R. 159, post Set-off, I.

Sheriff's Sale - Signature by Sheriff or Bailiff.]-A sale of goods by the sheriff or his bailiff under execution is within s. 17 of the Statute of Frauds, and either of them may sign for the purchaser the memorandum in writing, in the same manner as an auctioneer or his clerk. Flintoft v. Elmore, 18 C. P. 274.

P. 274.

The entry of defendant's agent as the purchaser is sufficient, if the defendant afterwards acknowledge the agent's authority, as was done here. It.

In this case a person requested by the bailiff to act as his clerk noted in pencil on the back of a letter the name of each purchaser, the article sold, and the amount bid: and after the sale was over, but on the same day, the bailiff made out a more extended memorandum headed "List of goods sold and by whom bought, 17th October, 1866," and containing the article, the purchaser's name and the price. This he signed "D. Howard, bailiff:"—Held, insufficient, for it did not appear who the seller was, or the terms of sale, and the second memorandum could not bind. for the bailiff's authority continued only during the sale. Ib.

The purchaser after the sale wrote to the deputy sheriff, speaking of the engine, one of the articles alleged to have been sold to him, as being on his lot, which belonged to him, and having been bid in for him by Mr. T. (the agent who had purchased at the sale), and saying that he had heard the sheriff's fees had not been paid, and that he intended to sell again:—Held, insufficient, for it did not shew the terms of the sale, and it was not evidence of a delivery to satisfy the statute, which the other evidence tended strongly to disprove.

Spoiling Sale - Damages. |-In a bill filed by a mortgagor against his son, a bidder at the sale by another of the defendants, a loan company, to which bill the company and one B. were also defendants, it was alleged that it had been agreed between the son and B. that in consideration of the son's securing to B. a debt of the plaintiff, B. would advance the deposit necessary to enable the son to buy the land at the sale; that the son should at-tend and buy in the land, which he accordingly did; that in consequence of B.'s refusal to make the promised advance, the son was unable to carry out the sale: that the bidding the son deterred others present from ding, and that B. afterwards privately bidding, bought the land at a great undervalue to the loss of the plaintiff:—Held, on demurrer, that the bill sufficiently, though inartificially, alleged that by reason of B.'s agreement and refusal to make the advance agreed upon, he had occasioned an abortive sale, and profited thereby to the loss and damage of the plaintiff. Campion v. Brackenridge, 28 Gr. 201.

Warranty in Catalogue. |- In a printed catalogue of articles for sale a bull was stated to be "a sure stock-getter," but at the commencement of the sale the auctioneer publicly announced that the seller (defendant) warranted nothing :- Held, that the plaintiff (the purchaser) in an action as for a breach of warranty, was obliged to shew that the warranty, if any, contained in the catalogue was imported into the sale at auction at which he bought. Craig v. Miller, 22 C. P. 348.

Warranty of Title. |-An auctioneer at an attempted sale of goods warranted them, saying they were his own, and he would stand between the purchaser and loss. Having sold the property by auction a few days subsequently to a bidder on the former occasion, and the goods having been claimed and taken a third party under a chattel mortgage by a third party under a chatter mortgage which covered them, the auctioneer, upon an action for money had and received, was held responsible to the purchaser. Somers v. O'Donohoe, 9 C. P. 208.

I. BAIL TO THE LIMITS.

[See Rule 1057 of Con. Rules 1897.] D-13

1. By Whom Given.

Attachment.]—A bond to the limits may be taken on an attachment for non-payment of money, and may be assigned. Montgomery v. Howland, E. T. 2 Viet.

Attachment.]—Semble, that before the return of the attachment for contempt the sheriff cannot properly take bail for appearance without the order of a Judge; but after the return, if the party is in upon an attachment merely to compel the payment of money, the sheriff, as of course, may take bail to the limits. Lane v. Kingsmill, 6 U. C. R. 579.

Attachment.]—A party arrested upon an attachment out of this court is entitled to the gaol limits under 10 & 11 Vict. c. 15. Davis v. Casper, 1 Gr. 354.

Quere, whether this Act would repeal 11 Geo. IV. c. 3. Ib.

Certificate to Sheriff.]-As to when the court would direct the clerk of the Crown to give a certificate under 10 & 11 Vict. c. 15, to the sheriff to admit to the limits. Mills v. James, 5 U. C. R. 216.

Certificate to Sheriff.]—Where a sheriff returns cepi corpus to a writ of ca. sa., and the plaintiff rules the sheriff to bring in and the plaintiff rules the sheriff to bring in the body, and the sheriff not complying with the terms of the rule, the plaintiff then ob-tains a rule for an attachmenta the sheriff for not bringing in the body of the sheriff for not bringing in the body of the fendant at the return of the rule to that effect:—Held, that it is a good answer to such rule for an attachment, to shew by affi-davit that the defendant was arrested under a case, and plaged in close custody, and was dayit that the defendant was arrested under a ca. sa. and placed in close custody, and was afterwards discharged from close custody and admitted to the limits by virtue of a certificate from the clerk of the Crown and pleas annexed to the affidavit, and that he had not since been committed to close custody by any process whatever. White v. Petch, 7 U. C. P. 1 R. 1.

Contempt.] — A prisoner in custody for contempt may have the benefit of the limits. Rex v. Kidd, H. T. 6 Will. IV.

Contempt.1—A sheriff may, under s. 302, C. L. P. Act. 1856, take a bond to the limits from a prisoner in close custody under an attachment for contempt in non-payment of money pursuant to an award, and a Judge of a county court may, if such bond be taken, allow it pursuant to s. 25 and 26 of C. L. P. Act, 1857. In re T. D. v. A. H., 4 L. J. 285.

Gaol.]-It is not necessary under C. S. U. C. c. 24, that a debtor be actually conveyed to gaol before bail can legally be taken by the sheriff. Smith v. Foster, 11 C. P. 161.

Mesne Process. |- Debtors in custody on mesne, as well as on final process, may have the benefit of the limits. Montgomery v. Howland, E. T. 2 Vict.; Clegg v. McNab, 1 P. R. 150.

Person not in Custody.]—A bond conditioned that a debtor shall confine himself to the limits of the gaol is void under 23 Hen. VI. c. 9, if at the time of its execution the debtor was not in custody nor on the limits. Campbell v. Lemon, 2 O. S. 401.

2. Bond.

(a) Allowance.

Bail Absconding. |—Λ rule for allowance was refused, where since their justification one of the bail had absconded. Billings v. Loucks, 5 O. S. 78.

Certificate of Allowance.]—A, being arrested on a ca. sa, gave bail to the limits by hond to the scheins, and afterwards entered into a recognizance under 16 Vict. c. 175, with B. & D. as sureties, which was improperly allowed, being defective in form, and executed before a person not authorized. The plaintiff having failed in his suit against the sureties in the recognizance, sued the sureties in the bail bond to the sheriff, having first obtained an assignment from him:—Held, that they were released from liability by the filing of the certificate of allowance under 16 Vict. c. 175, although the recognizance itself was void and ought not to have been allowed. McFarlanc v. McWhirter, 9 C. P. 334, See also, Macfarlanc v. McWhirter, 9 C. P. 334, See also, Macfarlanc v. Man, 6 C. P. 496.

Objections to Form.] — Bail to the limits — Allowance of—Insufficiency of affidavit of justification as to amount—Venue in bail piece omitted. Ross v. Bryan, 2 L. J. 91.

Recognizance not in Accordance with Notice.]—Where the notice given to the plaintiff was that special bail had been put in, and the recognizance produced was only for defendant remaining on the limits, the application for allowance was refused with costs. Clegg v. McVab, I P. R. 150.

Right of Action. |—Under 10 & 11 Vict. c. 15, and 16 Vict. c. 15, it was not necessary to an-action on recognizances to the limits, that the bail should be allowed. Kerr v. Reid, 18 U. C. R. 254.

Setting Aside Allowance.]—Defendant being arrested gave bail to the sheriff, under 16 Vict. c. 175, s. 7; within thirty days a recognizance was entered into as bail to the limits, and a certificate of its allowance given by the deputy clerk. An action was commenced on the recognizance but failed, it having been entered into before a person not authorized to take it. The plaintiff then got a Judge's order to set aside the certificate of allowance. This order was rescinded by this court. Macarlaine, Macarliare, S. C. P. 76.

Time.]—Section 25 of the C. L. P. Act, 1857, requiring the condition of allowance of bond within thirty days, applies to the county as well as to the superior court. Arnold v. Murgatroyd, S.C. P. 87.

Time.]—The fact of the bond not having near allowed within the thirty days would not make the sheriff liable for an escape where the debtor remained on the limits. Dougall v. Moodie, 19 U. C. R. 598.

(b) Assignment of Bond.

Death of Sheriff.] — The plaintiff declared, as assignee of G., the sheriff of Middlesex, on a bond to the limits given to H., the late sheriff, alleging that after the making of the bond H. died, and that the defendant on several occasions departed from the limits; but it was not stated whether the departure was before or after the death of H. or the appointment of G., or whether the bond had been allowed:—Held, that the declaration was bad, as for all that appeared the departure might have been at such a time as to render the late sheriff liable, and if so his successor could not assign the bond. Osborne v. Cornish, 20 U. C. R. 47.

Permission to Leave Limits, |—To action by the assignee of the sheriff under 16 Vict. c. 175, averring a departure, it is a good defence that the debtor left the limits by the leave and license of the plaintiff. Such a plea need not allege that the departure allowed is the departure complained of. Whittier v. Hends, 18 U. C. R. 295. See S. C., 19 U. C. R. 170, 172. Hicks v. Godfrey, 15 C. P. 262.

Time.]—In an action by the assignees of the sheriff against the sureties of one S. on a bond to the limits under 15 Vict. c. 175;— Held, that the bond continued in force after the expiration of the thirty days, and might be assigned and sued upon for a breach committed by departure after that period. Brown v. Paxton, 19 U. C. R. 426.

Witness.]—The deputy sheriff is, under 4 Anne c. 16, s. 20, a credible witness to the Anne c. 16, s. 20, a credible witness to the Anne c. 16, s. 20, a credible witness to the a bond to the limits. Whittier v. Hands, 19 U. C. R. 172.

(c) Breach of Bond.

Cancellation of Bond.]—To debt on a bond by the sheriff's assignce, it is a good plea, that after breach and before assignment to the plaintiff, the sheriff delivered up the bond to the debtor to be cancelled; but a surrender after breach is not if the bond were not cancelled. Le Mesurier v. Smith, 2 0. S. 479.

Interrogatories—Default.]—The declaration upon a bond to the sheriff conditioned that the debtor should observe and obey all notices, orders, and rules of court touching and concerning him or his answering interrogatories, &c., assigned as a breach that the said debtor being released from close custody, the plaintiff duly filed certain written interrogatories for the purpose, &c., and caused a copy to be served on said debtor, requiring him to file his answers under outh thereto, within ten days after service thereof * * * and the temporal to the said time; yet said debtor did not file his said answers within the said time, whereby the bond became forfeited, and the sheriff assigned said bond to the plaintiff:—Held, on demurrer, declaration bad; 1. because the only breach shewn was the omission to comply with the notice requiring the defendant to answer the interrogatories within ten days, which was not authorized by the statute; and, 2. That inasmuch as no sufficient breach was shewn, the sheriff could not assign the bond, so as to enable the assignee to site in his own name. Hicks v. Godfrey, 15 C. P. 202.

Semble, that the failure of the debtor to answer interrogatories or to attend to be examined, upon notice given by the plaintiff of his own mere motion, would not forfeit the bond; but that there must be a Judge's order or rule of court requiring the debtor so to answer or attend. Ib.

Mistake as to Limits.]-Semble, that a bond to the limits is not broken where the debtor has not willingly withdrawn, but has been misled as to their extent. Lewis v. Grant, 1 U. C. R. 290.

Mistake as to Limits.]—Where a defendant has left the limits, it is no defence that he was informed and believed that the place he went to was within his limits, unless such was the general impression, or the boundary was disputed. Hedden v. Gregory, 10 U. C. R. 334.

Negleet to Tax Costs.]—A rule to tax costs was taken out on the 26th June, 1855, and served on the 26th February, 1856, under the provisions of 18 Vict. c. 69, which pro-vides for relief of buil which have been sued by reason of the debtor having travelled from one county to another of a union of counties, or continued to reside in one county after the dissolution, by enacting that the proceedings dissolution, by chacting that the proceedings shall be discontinued on payment of costs. The plaintiff not having produced his bill the defendant, on the 28th February, 1856, taxed a nominal bill. On the 17th March, 1857, the plaintiff made up and delivered his bill, and demanded payment, which was refused. In Easter term, 1857, relief was sought by plaintiff by application to set aside the taxation and all subsequent proceedings, which was enlarged by consent of the parties till Easter term, 1858:—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to succeed, notwithstanding the Macdonell v. Farewell, 8 C. P. 54.

Obedience to Speaker's Warrant.]-To an action on the bond, alleging a departure, defendants pleaded that the debtor, virtue of a warrant of the speaker of hause of assembly, then in session, was required to attend as a witness before said house, and that to obey the warrant he left the limits and remained away ten days:— Held, no defence, as it was not shewn that the speaker knew the debtor to be on the limits, or what occasion there was for requiring his attendance, or that any process had issued by which he was placed in custody of any officer while absent. Brown v. Paxton, 19 U. C. R. 170.

Obedience to Writ.]—Debt on bond to the limits. Plea, that defendant was taken from the limits by the sheriff, in whose cus-tody he was, under a writ of habeas corpus ad test, issued on the equity side of the county court and directed to said sheriff:—Held, a good defence, for the writ was valid; and if not, the departure was involuntary, and there-fore not a breach. Ross v. Reid, 18 U. C. If 631

Plaintiff's Permission.] — The plaintiff's attorney cannot authorize a departure from the limits when committed on a ca. sa.: Semble, that if defendant departs by plain-tiff's permission, and returns, the bond is not thereby gone. Whittier v. Hands, 19 U. C.

The debtor applied to the plaintiff's attorney for permission to go to Toronto and obthan the money, and the attorney told him he would take no advantage if he wished to go for that purpose. He thereupon went, returned without effecting his object, and after remaining some time left the Province. plaintiff then sued upon the bond:—Held, that there was no evidence to sustain a plea that the debtor departed with plaintiff's leave, and that it was unnecessary to new assign the second departure. Whittier v. Hands, 19 U. C. R. 172.

Return to Limits.]—In an action by the assignee of the sheriff of a bond to the limits, a voluntary return, and a surrender before action and before assignment, are not good pleas in bar. Ecans v. Shaw, Dra. 14.

Return to Limits.]—It is no defence by the sureties, that the debtor before the assign-ment left the limits for an hour without their knowledge or consent, and afterwards and be-fore action returned to the limits, and still continued thereon. McMahon v. Masters, 6 O. S. 579.

Separation of Counties.]—The limits of the gaol of the united counties of York, Ontario, and Peel, mean the limits for the time being, and when Ontario was separated.

time being, and when Ontario was separated, a debtor on the limits continuing in that county, his bail were held liable. Ross v. Farecell, 5 C. P. 101.

Under 18 Vict. c. 60, s. 5, defendants in actions on bail bonds, where the breach has arisen by the separation of counties by the legislature, are entitled to have all proceedings stayed upon payment of costs. Ib.

(d) Form.

Statutory Requirements.]—Section 29 of C. S. U. C. c. 24. (taken from 22 Vict. c. 33) does not repeal s. 25. (taken from 19 Vict. c. 45, and 29 Vict. c. 57), and the two are not so inconsistent as to be incapable of standing together, in some respects at least. The 25th governs where the bond was taken before the 4th May, 1859, the 29th after; and where the two are at variance the latter must prevail. Section 29 therefore does not contain all that is required in the condition of bonds since that date, but the requirements of s. 25, where not inconsistent, must be in-corporated with it. Kingan v. Hall, 23 U.

C. R. 503.

The sheriff cannot admit a debtor to the limits except by statute, and where he does so on a bond not in accordance with the Act.

Where, therefore, in the condition the words, "to be examined viva voce or otherwise," were omitted:—Held, that the bond afforded no justification:—Held, also, that the creditor by having required and taken an assignment of such a bond was not estopped from looking to the sheriff. Ib.

The introduction in the condition of a bond given since the 4th May, 1859, of a provision that the debtor should remain within the that the debtor should remain within the limits, which that section says the condition "shall not contain:"—Held, fatal. Ib.

The omission of the word "close" before "custody" in such condition:—Held, immaterial. Ib.

3. Commitment to Close Custody.

Committal Order.]—An order for such committal should be directed to the sheriff, and follow the form in the statute. Hamilton v. Anderson, 2 U. C. R. 452.

Demand of Effects.]—The demand on a debtor on the limits for a statement of his effects, if in writing, must be signed by the plaintiff or his attorney, and the rule nisi for his commitment personally served. Meighan v. Reynolds, 4 O. S. 19.

Escape—Re-arrest.]—A prisoner on bail to the limits, having been rendered to the sheriff, made his escape while the officer in whose custody he was placed was otherwise engaged:—Held, that the sheriff was justified in re-taking and committing him to close custody; and that when the defendant endeavoured to shew he was improperly held, he must swear positively there was no process, and not leave it to be inferentially inferred. Arnold v. Andrews, 8 C. P. 467; Scatcherd v. Andrews, ib. 473.

Offer to Assign.]—Where a defendant on the limits offered to assign his whole property for all his creditors, but refused to give up any part to the plaintiff alone, he was committed to close custody under 4 Will. IV. c. 10. Bruneau v. Joyce, 6 O. S. 479.

Right of Appeal.]—A Judge, when applied to in vacation under 4 Will. IV. c. 10, s. 4, for the commitment of a debtor on the limits, disposes of the case without the power of appeal by declining to interfere. Shaw v. Nickerson, Gillespie v. Nickerson, 7 U. C. R. 541.

Unsatisfactory Answers.]—A defendant on the limits re-committed for unsatisfactory answers under 4 Will. IV. c. 10. Kirby v. Mitchell, 1 C. L. Ch. 137; Leavens v. Ostrom, ib. 261.

4. Proceedings on Bond.

Assessing Damages.] — The plaintiff must assess his damages after interlocutory judgment, in debt on a bond to the limits. Callapher v. Strobridge, Dra. 158.

Assessing Damages.]—A recognizance of bail to the limits is not within 8 & 9 Will. III. c. 11; and when there is no plea, but a breach is assigned in the declaration, the plaintiff may enter final judgment without assessing damages. McNamee v. Reilly, 13 U. C. R. 197.

Attorney's Liability.]—An attorney will not be ordered to pay costs of suit on a bond to the limits signed by him on behalf of an obligor. Leonard v. Glendennan, M. T. 1 Will. IV.

Consolidating Actions.] — Several actions having been brought on a bond to a sheriff for the gool limits, the court granted a rule to consolidate them. Leonard v. Merritt, Dra. 190.

Contribution.]—Where judgment is recovered against two parties jointly liable, and at the instance and for the benefit of one of them, who pays the debt without the costs, the plaintiff proceeds to enforce payment of the whole amount from the other party—the court will order the damages assessed by a jury on the breach assiened, in an action on a limit bond given by that other party, to be reduced to the costs and charges in the original action. Gooderham v. Chalmers, 1 U. C. R. 172.

Neglect to Have Bond Allowed.]—
Bail to the limits had been given under s.
302, C. L. P. Act, 1856. The bail omitted to have the bond allowed as required by s. 25 of C. L. P. Act, 1857, and plaintiffs took an assignment of the bond and sued upon it.
The bail applied to stay proceedings upon their getting the bond allowed and on payment of costs, which was refused, but leave was given to apply to the full court after verdict. Barber v. 8t. Amone, 4 L. J. 138.

Particulars of Breach.]—In debt on bond to the limits, an order for particulars of breach will be granted. Church v. Barn-hart, Dra. 213.

Pleading.]—A blank having been left in the bond, which was afterwards filled up with the consent of the debtor, although not in his presence, was held no variance on non est factum. Leonard v. Merrit. Dra. 281.

Where in declaring on a bond the condition set out was, that the debtor should not depart from the limits, and the defendant on over shewed the condition to be that the debtor would remain on the limits until the debt was paid or he should be legally discharged from the limits, and demurred:— Held, a fatal variance. McGuire v. Pringle, M. T. 3 Vict.

The declaration on a bond to the limits given by a debtor in execution must shew the judgment, writ, and arrest of the debtor, and the execution of the bond while he was in custody; and the recital of those facts in the bond set out will not suffice. Leonard v. McBride, 3 O. S. 1.

An averment that the justices in quarter sessions assigned limits to the gaol is sufficient on general demurrer; and the bond is not avoided altogether because part of the condition is contrary to the statute. Stebbins v. O'Grady, 5 O. S. 742.

It should be shewn expressly, and not by implication, that the defendant became bound, and where it did not so appear and no profert of any bond was made, a plea of nil debet was held good. Douglass v. Murchison, 6 O. S. 48.

In an action by a sheriff on a bond to the limits, if defendants plead that the debtor left the limits, but afterwards returned to them, and always remained on them after his return, the sheriff may take issue on the subsequent remaining, and need not new assign: but he cannot do so if defendants by their plea do not admit the bond to have been broken before the debtor's return, as the plea to be a subsequent remaining, and need not new as the left the limits in February, as a strict left the limits in February as a strict left the limits in February as a strict left the limit in November, and that the debtor entired him in November, and that the debtor entired and always afterwards remained thereon: and the plaintiff replied that he did not always afterwards remain, on which issue was joined, and the plaintiff obtained a verifict, the court refused to arrest the judgment, the verdict, according to the time stated, being consistent with the plaintiff's right, and the issue having been in fact on the subsequent remaining only. Cameron v. McLeod, T. T. 4 Vict.

A plea by bail to an action on their recognizance that they did not become bail, concluding to the country, is bad on special demurrer; and on pleas of nul tiel record to the judgment and no ca. sa., a judgment varying in the term from that stated in the declaration, and a ca. sa. in a form of action different from that stated in the replication, constitute a fatal variance. Burns v. Grier, 5 O. 8, 500.

Debt on bail bond. Plea, that the principal put in bail to the action according to the condition. Replication, that he did not cause special bail to be put in for him in said action:—Held, an issue of nul tiel record, which could not be tried by a jury. Dusolme v. Hamilton, 15 U. C. R. 183.

A plea that after a ca. sa. against their principal the plaintiff gave notice to the sheriff not to arrest him, is bad on general demurrer. Burns v. Donelly, 5 O. S. 495.

Principal Going Beyond Limits.— Where in an action on a bond to the limits, it was proved that the principal had been seen fifty yards beyond the limits, and the jury notwithstanding found for the defendant, a new trial was granted on payment of costs. Chesley v. McMillan, E. T. 3 Vict.

Principal Going Beyond Limits].— An admission by a debtor on the limits that he had gone beyond them, is not admissible to charge his sureties, Freeland v. Jones, 6, 0, 8, 44.

Quantum of Damages.]—In an action by a sheriff on a limit bond it is not necessary to shew actual pecuniary damage. Kingsmill v. Gardiner, 1 U. C. R. 223.

Quantum of Damages.]—In an action by the assignees of a sheriff against the sureties of one F., on a bond that F. should remain within the limits:—Held, that the measure of damages was the amount for which the debtor was in custody, with interest thereon, notwithstanding the debtor was insolvent from the time of the arrest until the breach of the condition. Kerr v. Fullarton, 10 C. P. 250.

Quantum of Damages.]—In an action by the assignees of the sheriff against the sureties of one S. on a bond to the limits under 16 Vict. c. 175:—Held, that the plaintiffs were not entitled as of course to the full amount of their debt and costs, but only to the loss actually sustained by the breach; and that in this case, as it was proved that the debtor was insolvent from the time of his arrest till his death, the verdict should be reduced to nominal damages. Calcutt v. Ruttan, 13 U. C. R. 220, commented upon. Brocen v. Pazton, 19 U. C. R. 426.

Relief Against Forfeiture.] — The court cannot relieve against forfeiture of a bail bond by neglecting to procure its allowance within thirty days, according to the C. L. P. Act, 1857, s. 25. McKay v. Hudson, 2 P. R. 229.

Representative Capacity.]—Where in debt on a bail bond, taken in a suit brought by an executrix, the declaration shewed the cause of action to have accrued and the bond to have been given to the plaintiff as executrix.

and on a plea of non est factum it appeared that the bond was given to the plaintiff in her individual right:—Held, that she could not recover. Haw v. Montgomery, T. T. 3 & 4 Vict.

Suggesting Breaches.]—Where the condition of a bond is set out on oyer, and it appears on the record by that means that the bond is within 8 & 9 Will, III. c. 11, the plaintiff ought to suggest his breaches before trial, and cannot take a verdict for the penalty, and suggest breaches afterwards. Campbell v. Lemon, 2 O. S. 401.

5. Sheriff's Duties and Liabilities.

Bail Not Given—Proceeding With Action.]—Semble, that the plaintiff though the defendant will not put in bail, may go on with his action against him, and pursue his remedy against the sheriff at the same time. Regina v. Sheriff of Hastings, 1 C. L. Ch. 230.

Benefit of the Limits.]—The sheriff cannot of his own mere motion allow a prisoner charged in execution, and in his custody, the benefit of the limits. A debtor who is admitted to the limits on giving a bond to the sheriff under 16 Vict. c. 175, is bound to enter into and file the recognizance required by 10 & 11 Vict. c. 15, within a month from such bond. If he does not, the sheriff must re-commit him to close custody or he will be liable as for an escape. If the certificate of filing such recognizance, &c., be not delivered to the sheriff within a month, the bond to him is forfeited:—Semble, the sheriff must take a bond under 16 Vict. if the sureties are sufficient. Calcutt v. Ruttan, 13 U. C. R. 220.

Bond Wrong in Form.] — The sheriff cannot admit a debtor to the limits except by statute, and where he does so on a bond not in accordance with the Act he is liable as for a voluntary escape. Kingan v. Hall, 23 U. C. R. 503.

Where, therefore, in the condition the words
"to be examined viva voce or otherwise," were omitted:—Held, that the bond afforded no justification:—Held, also, that the creditor, by having required and taken an assignment of such a bond, was not estopped from looking to the sheriff. Ib.
Until the bond has been allowed the credi-

Until the bond has been allowed the creditor may either take an assignment of it or hold the sheriff responsible. The mere taking the bond, therefore, without allowance, is no defence for the sheriff; he must shew that the debtor has fulfilled its condition. Ib.

Loss of Bond—Bond Not Allowed,]—One L. was arrested under an attachment for certain interlocutory costs, and gave the usual bond to the limits. He had never left the limits, but neglected to get the bond allowed within thirty days, and the plaintiffs thereupon called upon the sheriff to assign the bond. Having lost it, the sheriff was unable to assign by indorsement in the usual form, but he offered to prove the loss, and execute a separate assignment, or to give the plaintiffs adhority to sue in his name. The plaintiffs declined this, and brought an action against him, alleging in one count refusal to assign, and in another charging an escape. Defendant pleaded to the first count that he was always ready to assign, but that the plaintil's never required or tendered to him any assignment for execution, and that he gave them notice that they might sue on the bond in his name: and to the other count not guilty. On leave reserved to move to enter a verdict for the plaintiffs, if the court, drawing the same inferences as a jury, should think them entitled to recover:—Held, that the defendant was entitled to a verdict on the first count, for titled to a verdict on the first count, for though the plea might be immaterial, because the sheriff is bound to prepare the assignment himself, yet the plaintiffs had not demurred, but taken issue; and the action being without merits, if the jury had found for defendant judgment non obstante would not have been granted. But, semble, that the issue was not immaterial, for the plea might be taken to deny that the plaintiffs required the sheriff to assign, and the evidence shewed that on such an issue defendant should succeed:— Held, also, that on the second count the plaintiffs could not recover, for the fact of the bond not having been allowed within the thirty days would not make the sheriff liable for an escape where the debtor remained on the limits, Dougall v. Moodie, 19 U. C. R. 568

Sheriff's Action.]—A sheriff may sue bail to the limits for the escape of a debtor before he has been sued or paid the money for which the debtor was in execution. Ruttan v. Wilson, M. T. 3 Vict.

Sheriff's Action—Forum.]—Semble, that the sheriff, if suing on a bail bond, is not restricted to the district court of the district in which the bond was taken, but may sue in the court of Queen's Bench. Hamilton v. Shears, 5 U. C. R. 306,

Sheriff's Costs. |—Where one of the bail to the limits, hearing of the debtor's escape, paid to the sheriff the debt and costs for which he was imprisoned, exclusive of the sheriff's own fees, and the sheriff nevertheless sued the other obligor in the limit bond to recover the costs in an action which the plaintiff in the original action had brought against the sheriff :—Held, that after the receipt by the sheriff of the money paid by the other of the bail he could not recover for those costs, since he ought to have paid over the money, and not defended the action nor allowed it to proceed. Corbett v, Lake, 5 U. C. R. 434.

6. Miscellaneous Cases.

Certificate of Clerk of Crown.]— Quaere, should the clerk of the Crown and pleas grant a certificate until he is satisfied that due notice of bail has been given to the plaintiff in the cause. White v. Petch, 7 U.
C. R. 1.

County Court.]—The provisions of 10 & 11 Vict. c. 15, s. 5, as to gaol limits, apply to cases in which county court ca. sas. are issued under 13 & 14 Vict. c. 52, to the sheriffs of other counties than that in which judgment has been obtained. Gibson v. Thomas, 7 C. P. 163.

Toronto Limits.]—The gaol limits of the city of Toronto do not include the liberties of the city. King v. Latham, 5 O. S. 488.

II. BAIL BOND.

Form.]—A bail bond conditioned that the defendant shall enter special bail at the return of the writ, or surrender himself to the sheriff, is bad, though the first part of the condition alone would be good. Wilson v. McCullough, 5 O. S. 680.

Process not Bailable.]—A bail bond is irregular in a case where the action was commenced by process not bailable, and the arrest made on bailable process after appearance entered. Douglass v. Poucell. 2 O. S. 219.

III. BAIL PIECE.

Amendment of Names.]—A bail piece in which the plaintiff or defendant is incorrectly named may be amended with the consent of the bail. Daniell v. James, 2 P. R. 195.

Form.]—The bail piece need not set out the writ on which the defendant has been arrested; it is not therefore necessary that the certificate of the clerk of the Grown and pleas, of the defendant having filed a recognizance of bail, and affidavit of the justification of bail, under 10 & 11 Vict. c. 15, s. 5, should state the writ on which the defendant has been arrested. White v. Petch, 7 U. C. R. 1.

Irregularity in Names. |—Where there are two plaintiffs with the same surname, the non-repetition of the surname after the Christian name of each in a bail piece is only an irregularity, and will not warrant the plaintiffs in taking an assignment of the bail bond. Meiphan v. Brown, Dra. 167.

Issuing District.]—A bail piece may be intituled of a term preceding that in which the ca. re. is returnable: but the bail niece must state in the margin the district from which the process issued with that in which the bill is taken, as thus: "Testatum from the Home district to the Niagara district." Ward v, Skinner, 3 O. S. 163.

Place of Filing.]—In the warning to defendant in a writ of capins it is proper to direct the bail piece to be filed in the office of the clerk or deputy clerk of the Crown and pleas for the county from which process issued, although a county different to that in which the arrest is made or bail given. Hubbard v. Mine, 1 C. L. J. 14.

Transmitting.] — According to the old practice, a bail piece must have been transmitted from the country to a Judge of the King's Bench. Whitney v. Stone, Dra. 235.

IV. DISCHARGE OF BAIL.

1. Acts of Plaintiff or Principal.

Delay.]—Where plaintiff agreed to discharge the bail on certain terms, and after three years, the conditions not having been performed, proceeded against the bail:—Held, that they were not entitled to an exonereur for laches. McQueen v. Pratt, 2 P. R. 196.

Delay. |- The fact that a plaintiff has not charged in execution within two terms after judgment a debtor who has given bail to the action, is no ground for an exoneretur. Torrance v. Holden, 10 L. J. 298.

Enlargement by Principal. —Where a verifict was taken for plaintiff subject to a reference, and the time for making the award was afterwards enlarged beyond the time when the plaintiff would regularly have been entitled to judgment:—Held, that the bail were not therefore entitled to an excuercur. Whiting v. Nicoll, E. T. 3 Vict.

Enlargement.]—The acceptance of a cognovit with stay of execution until a period not later than the plaintiff could in the ordinary course have obtained execution will not discharge bail. Carter v. Sullivan, 4 C. P. 288.

Enlargement by Bail.]—The court refused to allow an exoneretur on the ground of laches, where an agreement, out of which the laches grew, had been entered into with the assent of the bail, and was such that a length of time must necessarily have elapsed before the principal could complete it. Spencer v. Gifford, E. T. 3 Vict.

Enlargement by Principal.]—Where the trial of an action of replevin had been postponed at the instance of the defendant, but without the direct assent or concurrence of the bail:—Held, that the bail were discharged. Canniff v. Bogert, 6 C. P. 474.

Irregularity.]—Where the plaintiff, after service of notice of application, allowed an exoneretur to be entered on the bail piece without opposition, and then, six years afterwards, applied to rescind the order for the exoneretur for irregularity, the application was refused on the ground that the plaintiff's acquiescence in the order for six years must be considered as waiving the irregularity and discharging the bail. Roberts v. Fox, 1 C. L. Cl. 146.

Waiver.]—The defendant in the original action having given bail to the sheriff, the plaintiff went on and obtained judgment:— Held, that he had waived bail above, and could not afterwards take an assignment of the bail bond and proceed against the bail. Dusolme v. Hamilton, 15 U. C. R. 574.

2. Discharge in Insolvency of Principal.

An exoneretur may be entered on the bail piece (for the limits), where the defendant has been discharged by order of the insolvent court, and the debt in the action included in the schedule. McCarthy v. Leonard, 1 C. L. Ch. 135.

Leave to enter an exoneretur upon a final order of discharge in bankruptcy of a debtor on the limits was refused, and the bail were left to plead it. Wilson v. Downing, 3 L. J. 49.

The fact of a defendant on the limits having obtained his discharge from the insolvent court, is no ground for entering an exoneretur. Nordheimer v. Grover, 2 P. R. 167.

An interim order of protection under the Insolvent Debtors' Act, does not prevent bail from surrendering their principal; nor does the final certificate discharge them from liability if the bail he previously fixed. Ross v. Brooks, 3 L. J. 110.

The defendant B, having been arrested gave bail. A verdiet was rendered against him in the suit, and a ca. sa, issued was returned non est inventus. A writ of summons was then issued on the recognizance against J, his surety, but prior to the service upon J., the defendant B, applied under 19 Vict. c. 93, as an insolvent debtor, and on the 16th February, obtained the interim order to protect him from arrest; on the 17th J, was served. It was contended that the ca. sa, having been received and the return made after the interim order, the bail were not fixed by the return non est inventus;—Held, that the bail were liable. Ross v. Brooks, 7 C. P. 306.

3. Surrender of Principal.

Attempt to Surrender.]—The bail before action took the debtor to an office some distance from the court house, where the deputy sheriff transacted business with practitioners, and there tendered him in their discharge. The deputy referred them to the sheriff's office, where they went, but found only a clerk, who had no authority in such matters. They then tendered him to the gaoler's wife at the gaol, the gaoler being absent, but she refused to receive him. Afterwards the plaintiff sued on the recognizance. Defendants applied without success in chambers to stay proceedings, and at the end of three months surrendered the principal. A verdict having been found for the plaintiff's:—Held, that the court could not interfere. Read v. Scovill, 16 U. C. R. 453.

Certificate of Sheriff.]—The court will not allow an exoneretur, where bail have surrendered their principal, without a certificate from the sheriff to whom he was rendered. Lindey v. Checseman, Dra. 53.

Copy of Bail Piece.]—Where a defendant is arrested by a sheriff under a ca. re, and after verdict is surrendered by his bail to the same sheriff upon an action being commenced against them, the sheriff is not entitled to a copy of the bail piece before receiving the prisoner into custody; and where such refusal was given, the sheriff was compelled to pay the costs of an application to stay proceedings, and an order was made to extend the time for surrender. Grierson v. Corbett, 8 P. R. 517.

Costs.]—When bail surrender within the time allowed after return of process against themselves, they are not liable for costs. Lewis v. McDonald, T. T. 2 & 3 Vict.

Doubt as to Surrender.]—Where there is any doubt as to the validity of the surrender, a Judge in chambers will not order an exoneretur, but will leave the bail to plead it. Blackman v. O'Gorman, 5 L. J. 161.

Insolvent Debtors' Act.] — An interim order of protection under the Insolvent Debtors' Act does not prevent bail from surrendering their principal. Ross v. Brooke, 3 L. J. 110.

Judge in Chambers—Place for Surrender.]—Under C. L. P. Act, s. 37, a Judge in chambers cannot order an exoneretur unless he be "a Judge of the court in which the action is pending." Roszel v. Strong, 2 C. L. J. 48.

A surrender to the sheriff elsewhere than at the gaol, if within his county, is sufficient for the purposes of that section. Ib.

Ne Exeat Provincia.]—The sureties on a statutory bail bond under a writ of ne exeat provincia have no power to surrender their principal as at common law. An application by sureties for discharge from a bond and for repayment of the money paid to the sheriff as collateral security was refused. Richardson v. Richardson, 8 P. R. 274.

Order for Exoneretur. |-The defendants were special bail for one S, upon a recognizance in an action by the plaintiffs against S. The proceedings in the original action were begun and carried on in the county of Middlesex, and the condition of the recognizance was that S, would, if condemned, satisfy, &c., or render himself to the custody of the sheriff of Middlesex; or the cognizors, the present defendants, would do so for him. R. S. O. 1877 c. 50, s. 40 (Con. Rule 1062) provides for the render of the defendant to the sheriff of the county in which the action against such defendant has been brought; and s. 42 of the same Act (Con. Rule 1004) provides that special bail may surrender their principal to the sheriff of the county in which the principal is resident or found, and that upon proof of due notice to the plaintiff of the surrender, and production of the sheriff's certificate thereof, a Judge shall order an exoneretur to be entered on the bail piece, and there-upon the bail shall be discharged. The deagon the ball shall be discharged. The de-fendants on the 7th February, 1888, rendered S, to the sheriff of Norfolk, S, being found in that county, and obtained from the sheriff a certificate of such render, but obtained no order for the entry of an exoneretur. The writ of summons in this action upon the recognizance was served on the defendants on the 10th April, 1888, and on the 16th April, 1888, the defendants served on the plaintiffs a notice of the render of S, to the sheriff of Norfolk:—Held. that the bail were not entitled to be discharged. and that the plaintiffs were entitled to bring this action upon the recognizance, because no order for an exoneretur had been obtained. notwithstanding the notice of render; but that, the substantial duty of rendering the principal having been performed, the defendants should be relieved upon terms. court ordered that upon the defendants filing an order for an exoneretur within two weeks and paying the costs of the action within ten days after taxation, the judgment for the plaintiffs should be set aside and all further proceedings stayed; otherwise judgment to be entered for the plaintiffs with costs. Laing v. Slingerland, 17 O. R. 392.

Pretended Surrender.]—A debtor on the limits comes to the sheriff's office and tells the clerk there that he wishes to surrender himself; the clerk tells him to remain till he finds the sheriff or his deputy, and leaves the debtor in the office, but before he finds the sheriff and returns, the debtor absconds:— Held, that this being a mere pretended and fraudulent render, it could not fix the sheriff and support a plea of remedy by the bail. Kennedy v, Brodie, 4 U. C. R. 189. Proceeding after Surrender. —Where a defendant presented himself to the sheriff in discharge of his ball before the return of the ca sa., which had been lodged in the office merely to fix the bail, and the plaintiff nevertheless proceeded against them, the court set the proceedings aside. Ward v. Stocking, Tay. 216.

Proceeding after Surrender. — Bail surrendered their principal and gave due notice within eight days after the return of proceedings on recognizance: the plaintiffs nevertheless proceeded to judgment. The court stayed proceedings without exacting costs up to the notice. Wright v. Tucker, 6 U. C. R. 24.

Right to Surrender, |—The sureties in a bond taken under C. S. U. C. c. 24, s. 29, may surrender their principal under the power given by s. 24. Kingan v. Hall, 23 U. C. R. 503,

Time.]—Bail are fixed after eight days in full term after the return of process against them, and the court will not relieve by allowing a render. McPherson v. Mosier, 2 O. S. 491.

Time.]—Rail have eight days in full term after the return of process against themselves to surrender their principal, and the plaintiff is bound to stay proceedings on receiving notice of the render, although the costs be not paid. Ices v. Robinson, M. T. 2 Viet.

Time.]—Held, that under s. 35, C. S. U. C. c. 22, read with s. 37, if the bail render their principal to the sheriff of the county in which the action is brought they are entitled to have an exoneretur entered on the bail piece, and it is immaterial whether the render be before or after judgment. Ballantyne v. Campbell, Ballantyne v. Martin, 13 C. L. J. 224.

Time.]—Where there is any doubt as to the legality of the render, proceedings on a bail bond will not be stayed under R. G. 88, simply on payment of costs. The render had been made to an acting sheriff at the sheriff's office, within eight days after action, and was refused on the ground that the ca. sa. had been returned. An order was made staying proceedings on the bail rendering their principal within eight days, and on payment of costs. The ca. sa. had been lodged with the sheriff on the 26th October, and returned on 1st November:—Held, that it had been long enough in his hands to charge the bail. Potts v. Baird, 7. P. R. 113.

Vacation.] — In case of a surrender after judgment, plaintiff must proceed to execution within two terms after the surrender and notice, and a render in vacation is to be deemed as of the preceding term, so as to make that term count as one. Torrance v. Holden, 10 L. J. 332.

Where judgment was obtained on 14th Jan-

Where judgment was obtained on 14th January, defendant being on bail, and he was on 21st May following, in the vacation preceding Trinity term, surrendered by his bail, of which notice was given to plaintiff, and the whole of Trinity term allowed to elapse without any thing being done towards execution, defendant was superseded. Ib.

4. Miscellaneous Cases.

Escape.]—Where a sheriff is requested to return non est inventus, he need not seek the debtor, but if he do, and arrest him, the bail are discharged: and if the debtor escape, no matter from what cause, their liability does not revive. Reid v. Hills, 4 U. C. R. 175.

Repeal of Act.]—Under 7 Vict. c. 31, the recognizance was not forfeited by the non-payment of the condemnation money on the recovery of judgment, unless the alternative condition was not complied with. The legislature having made no provision in the Act repealing 7 Vict. c. 31, for continuing the proceedings commenced under it, no proceeding can now be taken against bail under such recognizance. Hardy v. Hall, 2 U. C. R. 253

Repeal of Act.]—Since the repeal of that Act:—Held, that the recognizances taken under it are not binding, except where the debtor has been notified, and has made default while the Act was still in force. Macdonald v, Wecks, 3 U. C. R. 441.

Second Arrest.]—Where a defendant had been arrested by one of two plaintiffs for £18, and was afterwards arrested in the name of both for £18 10s., the former amount being included in the second, the court ordered the bail bond to be cancelled. Ransom v. Donagher, Tay, 403,

V. INDORSEMENT OF BAILABLE WRITS.

A bailable writ must be indorsed with the sum sworn to. Armstrong v. Scobell, 3 O. S.

Although it be sued out by an attorney in person. Washburn v. Walsh, 4 O. S. 322.

The claim must also be indorsed on the bailiff's warrant, as well as on the writ, Steele v. Lameux, E. T. 6 Will. IV.

Semble, that an alias bailable writ must be indorsed. Ross v. Balfour, 5 O. S. 683.

A rule to set aside process for want of an indorsement of the plaintiff's claim was refused, where the omission had been supplied two hours after the arrest, and before bail was put in. Smith v. Smith, 4 O. S. 10.

The arrest was set aside, although the omission was supplied immediately after it. Gibbs v. Kimble, 1 U. C. R. 408.

On such an application, the defendant must show by affidavit that the cause of action is a debt. Leggatt v. Marmott, E. T. 3 Vict.

Where the indorsement directed the sheriff to take bail for too large a sum, the court allowed it to be amended on payment of costs. Grantham v. Peters, E. T. 3 Viet.

Semble, if the sum be mentioned in the affidayth and written in the margin of the writ, that would be sufficient, without indorsing it on the writ. Sligh v. Campbell, 4 U. C. R. Where a ca. sa. in debt has been issued on a judgment in assumpsit, and not indorsed as required by the rule of court, it may be amended. Keefer v. Hawley, 1 P. R. 1.

VI. JUSTIFICATION.

The affidavit of justification cannot be sworn before defendant's attorney. Koyle v. Wilcox, 2 O. S. 113.

Bail may justify by the affidavit made at the time of the acknowledgment, though an exception to them be entered, where nothing is shewn to repel such affidavit. Duggan v. Derrick, 5 O. 8, 75.

Since 4 Will. IV. c. 5, bail excepted to in vacation must justify in vacation, and have not till the term. McKenzie v. Macnab, E. T. 2 Vict.

It is not sufficient ground to reject one of two bail, that one of his creditors agreed to compound for his debt for 2s. in the pound. Daniell v. James, 2 P. R. 195.

VII. PROCEEDINGS AGAINST BAIL.

Action on Bill or Note.]—The bail of any of the parties who are sued upon a bill or note or any persons who pay the bill or note on account of any of the parties, become on payment holders; and they hold as upon a transfer from the person for whom they made the payment, not as a transfer from the person they have paid: and they stand, with respect to other parties to the bill or note, in the situation of the party for whom they have made the payment; and consequently unless he could have sued upon the bill or note, they the standard they have made the payment; and consequently unless he could have sued upon the bill or note, they the standard they have made the payment; and consequently unless he could have sued upon the bill or note, they they have the standard they have the standard they have the standard they have the sum of the standard they have the standard they have they have the standard they have they have they have they have they have the standard they have have they have have they have the have the hard have they have t

Action on Bond—Pleading.]—The plaintiff having arrested the defendant, proceeded in the suit and obtained a verdict. After verdict, the plaintiff obtained an order to set aside the recognizance of bail and to take the same off the files, on account of an alteration made after filing. The plaintiff, not-withstanding his proceeding in the action, had taken an assignment of the bail bond from the sheriff, and sued upon it as well; and the defendant in this action pleaded that special bail had been entered in the original action and demanded a replication, and the plaintiff not replying, signed judgment of non pros.;—Held, that such judgment was regular. Caspar v. Herscherg, 1 P. R. 175.

Almony.]—Where the plaintiff in an alimony suit obtains a writ of arrest and the defendant gives bail, and a breach of the bond is committed, the plaintiff is entitled to have the amount for which the writ was marked paid into court, to be applied from time to time in payment of the alimony and costs; and, semble, that upon such payment the sureties are entitled to be discharged from their bond. Needham, Needham, 29 Gr. 117.

Allowing in to Defend.]—Where judgment and execution have been obtained against bail by returns of nihil to sci. fas. without their knowledge, the court, although they cannot set aside the proceedings, will let them in to defend upon payment of costs. Read v. Hilts, 4 U. C. R. 175.

Alteration of Bond.]—In an action on a bail bond the defence was that it had been altered after execution, and that it was not in the form required by the statute:—Held, that the defendant having refused to call the attesting witness to the bond, who was their counsel in the case, the defence as to the alteration, alleged to be in the attestation clause, could not succeed, Woodworth v. Dickie, 14 S. C. R. 734.

Held, that the objection as to the form

Held, that the objection as to the form of the bond being merely technical and unmeritorious, could not be taken for the first time before this court. Ib.

Attorney Acting Without Authority,—Defendant was arrested and gave bail, who to relieve themselves put in special bail. The attorney for the bail gave notice, and signed himself "defendant's attorney." and all the subsequent papers in the cause were served on him. Judgment was obtained, and defendant arrested on ca. sa., when it was shewn that defendant had never employed the attorney. The court set side the whole proceedings. McMartin v. McKinnon, 5 O. 8, 72.

Ca. Sa. Not Returned.]—It is no ground for setting aside or staying proceedings on a fi. fa, against bail, that the ca. sa. against their principal has not been returned and filed. Hugilt v, McCarthy, 2 O. S. 495.

Commissioner—Fistoppel.] — Defendants had gone before one Allan, who was bona fide supposed to be a commissioner for the county of Lennox, and acknowledged a recognizance: —Held, there was no estoppel to prevent the defendants from disputing the authority of Allan as commissioner, and that the court would not favour an amendment for the purpose of slutting out evidence, and by estoppel preventing the truth being known. Macfarlane v. Allan, 6 C. P. 496.

Declaration.]—Where a defendant was committed to prison on a bailable writ, and afterwards, and before the return day of the writ, was released on bail, and on the return day of writ entered special bail, he was held not entitled to be served with a declaration before the end of the term then next after such arrest. Glenn v, Box, 3 U. C. R. 182.

Defendant Misled. —Where a defendant had neglected to put in special ball upon the plaintify representation that it was unnecessary (they being about to compromise), proceedings on the bail bond were stayed for one month to let him put in such bail. Myers v. Rathburn, Tay, 202.

Delay.]—This court will set aside a recognizance roll not warranted by the proceedings after comperuit ad diem pleaded to an action on the bail bond. McDonnell v. Rutter, 2 O. 8, 340.

Delay.]—Where there was an irregularity both in the special bail piece and in the notice of bail, and the plaintiffs took an assignment of the bail bond and obtained judgment and execution, the court refused to set aside the proceedings on the bail bond on payment of costs, the defendant in the original action being insolvent, and the plaintiffs having lost two assizes. Lyman v. Binge, H. T. 5 Vict.

Delay.]—Delay in issuing a ca. sa., to fix the bail, cannot be pleaded in bar to an action against them on the recognizance. *Car*roll v. Berryman, 16 U. C. R. 520.

District Court.]—Where an action was brought on a recognizance of bail taken in a district court, and on application to set aside proceedings facts were shewn upon which the court might have ordered an exoneretur to be entered on the bail piece, if the original action had been brought in this court:—Held, that the application should have been made to the court below. Morgan v. Mosier, T. T. + & 5 Vict.

District Court. —In an action upon a bail bond given in a district court, the plaintiff of the plaintiff in the original action) should sue in the district court; and if he sue in the Queen's Bench, the defendant may take advantage of the error in one of three ways—either by applying to the court to set aside the proceedings, or by pleading in abstraction to the jurisdiction, or by demurring generally to the declaration; he cannot have a repleader. Hamilton v. Shears, 5 U.C. R.

In order to proceed against the bail, the ca. sa. must be in the hands of the sheriff four days (exclusive) before the return day. Ib.

Enrolling Recognizance.]—Where a recognizance is not enrolled until after nul tiel record pleaded, the plaintiff must pay the costs of plea, and the defendant be at liberty to plead de novo. Smith v. Morcton, 5 O. 8. 551.

Forum—Pleading.]—In debt on a recognizance, the declaration will be bad if it appear that the plaintiff is suing in an outer district, upon a record of this court remaining in Toronto. Manning v. Proctor, 7 U. C. R.

The declaration must shew the recognizance to have been filed where it was taken. Ib.

Joint and Several Recognizance, one may be sued alone. A plea that defendant was jointly bound means that his undertaking was joint only, not several. Ross v. Jones, 15 U. C. R. 598.

Misapprehension by Surety.]—Where one of the bail to the sheriff had, in consequence of defendant leaving the Province, and under an apprehension that he would not return to defend the cause, given a cognovit in his own name to the plaintiff, the court, upon an affldavit of merits, stayed the proceedings upon the cognovit. Roberts v. Hasieton, Tay, 32.

Money in Court.]—Where a party is entitled to an assignment of a bond, and to realize it for his own benefit, his rights are the same in regard to money deposited; and where in an alimony suit the statutory bond under a writ of ne exeat has been given, the plaintiff is entitled to have the moneys deposited as collateral security therefor, paid into court, and applied in discharging arrears of alimony. Richardson v. Richardson, S. P. R. 274.

BAIL. 406

Plaintif's Delay and Waiver.]—The court will stay proceedings on a bail bond after judgment and execution, on payment of costs, where the plaintiff has delayed for three years to proceed against the bail; and they will not keep the bail to terms accepted by them when obtaining a Judge's order, which was abandoned and never acted upon. Young v, Shore, 2, O. S. 314.

Plea in Abatement.]—Where in an action on a recognizance the declaration shewed that others besides defendant were jointly bound, the objection was held fatal without a plea in abatement. Mills v. Mc-Bride, 10 U. C. R. 145.

Plea in Abatement.]—The declaration alloged that the defendant by a recognizance became bail for C. to the limits of, &c. Plea, and tiel record. On the recognizance roll, it appeared that C. had also joined with defendants, which was objected to as a variance:—Held, that the objection, if any, should have been taken by plea in abatement. McFarlanc v. Allen, 6 C. P. 143.

Pleading.]—When bail rely upon performance of their undertaking, they must plead it; they cannot apply for summary interference, Mitchell v. Noble, 1 C. L. Ch. 284.

Held, declaration bad on special demurrer, in not averring that the recognizance was filed in the office of the deputy clerk of the Crown in which it was taken, as directed by s. 40. 2 Geo. IV. c. 1. Gillespie v. Grant, 3 U. C. R. 400.

Mistake in averment of indorsement of ca. sa. as to amount:—Held, no ground of special demurrer. Easton v. Longchamp, 3 U. C. R. 475.

Held, not necessary to aver, in an action by the assigness of a ball bond, that the sheriff did not receive the money after the assignment; nor that the defendant had notice of the assignment. Ib.

Debt on a recognizance of bail. Plea, no en. sa. Replication, setting out a ca. sa. directed to the sheriff of the Newcastle district, avering that the venue had been had there, and concluding with a giving a day for that purpose. Rejoinder, traversing the venue been hald in the Victoria district:—Iteld, on demurrer, rejoinder good. Robertson v. Goin, 5 U. C. R. 72.

Debt on a recognizance entered into in a district court.—Plea, no ca. sa, sued out of that court.—Replication, that the plaintiff did sue out and prosecute a ca. sa, setting it out, and praying that a day might be given to bring in the record. The record certified to this court, by the Judge of the district court, agreed with the replication:—Held, therefore, 1. that under the issue no objection could be taken to the ca. sa, as varying from the judgment. 2. No objection that it did not appear upon the record that the ca. sa, had lain four days in the sheriff's hands before the return day, this being matter of practice of another court. Cochrane v. Eyre, 6 U. C. R. 594.

Debt on a recognizance of bail:—Held, on special demurrer to the pleas, that it was sufficiently averred in the declaration that the recognizance was entered into in a suit then pending between the plaintiff and the principal; and that the defendants were therefore estopped from pleading that at the time of making the recognizance there was no such action. Plea of render and discharge as an insolvent debtor:—Held, bad on special desmurrer, Mitchell v. Noble, 9 U. C. R. 555.

The plaintiffs issued a writ of capias, irregular and contradictory in its provisions.

million plaintiffs issued a writ of enjas, Trailar and contradictory in its provisions. It purported to be issued in a pending action in which judgment had been recovered, and claimed the amount of the judgment and further costs. It required the defendant to put in special bail, which by its recognizance ment an undertaking by sureties to pay the condemnation money, in which the defendant "shall be condemned in this action." The claim indorsed upon the writ and the requirement as to special bail were alone applicable to a pending action on the judgment. The bail to the sheriff undertook that special bail would be put in, and special bail was put in:—Held, that the defendant and his sureties had, by putting in special bail, treated the writ as one issued in an action on the judgment, and had placed the defendant in the same position as if he not provided the control of the contro Principal's Attorney.] — Semble, that bail are not bound by what the attorney for their principal may choose to do, as being the attorney for the principal. Mitchell v. Noble, 1 C. L. Ch. 284.

Quantum of Damages.]—A Judge's order to hold to bail in the sum of $300, was obtained in an action of tort, in which the plaintiff swore to a cause of action for $500. The bail piece was in the usual form, stating: "Bail for $300 by order of," etc. The recognizance of bail was in the words of the statute, namely: "You," the bail "do jointle and severally undertake that if "the feetent in the original action the costs and condemned, then he shall end to the statute, namely: "Tought he costs and condemned, then he shall end to the costs and condemned, then he shall end to the costs and condemned of the shall end to the shall end the shall end to the shall end the shall end to the shall end the shall end the shall end the shall en

Quantum of Damages.]—Held, that under Rule 89 of T. T. 1856, (Con. Rule 1085) the liability of bail is limited to the amount of their recognizance; and the plaintiff having recovered in the original action the whole sum sworn to in the affidavit of debt, his recovery against the bail should not in any event be more than the former amount. Laing v. Slingerland, 17 O. R. 329.

Recognizance — Principal Debtor not Joinnay. 1—The principal debtor need not be joined in a recognizance under 10 & 11 Vict. c. 15, nor need the sum for which the debtor was arrested be mentioned. The averment of enrolment in the declaration was held sufficient. McFerlance v, 4Hen. 4 C. P. 438.

Return Day.]—Proceedings to fix bail cannot be maintained on a writ of ca. sa. which is made returnable immediately after the execution thereof. For such purpose it is necessary that the writ should be returnable on a day certain. Proctor v. Mackenzie, 11 A. R. 486.

Setting Aside Ca. Sa.]—Bail need not move to set aside a ca. sa. against their principal until proceedings are instituted against them. Beattle v. McKay, 2 C. L. Ch. 56. On an application to set aside a ca. sa.

On an application to set aside a ca. sa. in the original action, or proceedings against bail, the affidavits are rightly entitled in the action against the bail. Ib.

Stay After Action. — Plaimiff had R. arrested on mesne process on 14th November, 1869. P. and H. becoming his bail to the sheriff. On 25th November plaintiff took an assignment of sheriff's bail bond, and brought an action upon it. Special bail was put in and perfected upon 28th November, and notice given:—Held, that the bail were entitled to have the proceedings stayed on payment of costs. Hall v. Remily, 4 P. R. 177.

Summary Relief to Batl.]—When bail rely upon performance of their undertaking they must plead it: they cannot apply for summary interference. Mitchell v. Noble, 1 C. L. Ch. 284.

Time for Return. —There must be fifteen days between the teste and return of a ca. sa. to charge bail. Ferrie v. Mingay, M. T. 5 Vict.

But see Beatty v. Taylor, 2 P. R. 44.

Time for Stay.]—Bail must not only be put in, but perfected, before moving to stay proceedings upon the bail bond on the usual terms. Gould v. Birmingham, 3 O. S. 298.

Variance.]—Variance between a recognizance of bail, entered into in a toreign country, as stated in the declaration, and proved:—Held, fatal. Short v. Kingsmill, 7 U. C. R. 550.

VIII. MISCELLANEOUS CASES.

Affidavit of Taking Recognizance. —
A commissioner who takes a recognizance cannot himself make the affidavit of such taking. Walbridge v. Lunt. Tay. 462.

Constable Taking Bail.]—A constable who arrests under a commissioner's writ may refuse to take bail, and if he does take bail the sheriff may reject them as the constable's duty under such a writ is only to deliver the defendant to the sheriff; but if the sheriff accept them, the bail bond is good. Price v. Sulliran, 6 O. S. 640.

Conveyance to Surety to Enable Him to Justify. |-The owner of real estate being under arrest upon civil process conveyed his lands to a person for the purpose of enabling the grantee to justify as special ball in the action, and after the same had been settled the lands were reconveyed, but in the meantime a writ against the lands of the grantee had been placed in the hands of the sheriff, and a sale was effected thereunder after such reassignment, and a conveyance made to the purchaser (the plaintiff in the writ), who had notice of the claim set up by the original owner:-Held, that the transaction was one owner:—Held, that the transaction was one against public policy and morality, and that the court would not lend its aid to the grantor in getting back his estate: but the purchaser at sheriff's sale having in his answer dis-claimed any interest in the lands other than a lien thereon for the full amount of his judg-ment and expenses, the court decreed the plaintiff relief upon the terms of his paying the full amount of such judgment and expenses, together with interest and the costs suit; and the defendant having also by his answer alleged that the conveyance was made for the purpose of enabling the grantee therein to justify as bail, and that he did justify as such bail upon the lands so con-veyed, and submitted that "the plaintiff under the circumstances ought to be estopped and precluded from saying that the said lands are not the lands" of the grantee:—Held, also, that although the defendant did not ebject that the act was against public policy. there was sufficient stated to enable the court to give effect to the objection of illegality, notwithstanding the answer did not state that such use would be made of the facts stated. Langlois v. Baby, 10 Gr. 358, 11 Gr.

Costs Paid by Bail.]—Bail who have paid the costs of an action against themselves, cannot recover them from their principal as money paid; they must declare specially. Shore v. Burrill, M. T. 3 Vict.

Custody on Mesne Process.]—A defendant rendered by his bail after the return of non est inventus to the capias ad satisfaciendum, is not in custody on mesne process, nor is he charged in execution so as to obtain the weekly allowance. Lyman v. Vandecar, M. T. 2 Vict.

Two Defendants.] — Bailable process issued against two, the plaintiff allowed to proceed against one. Laing v. Harvey, Tay. 414.

BAILIFF.

Escape.]—An action for escape should be brought against the sheriff, not against the bailiff who arrested, unless the act complained of amounts in effect to a rescue. Wilson v. McCullough, M. T. 2 Vict.

False Affidavit of Service.]-An action on the case was held to be maintainable against a bailiff of a court of requests for falsely swearing to the service of a summons, which had not been served, whereby judgment was given against the plaintiff; and the comwas given against the plantur; and the com-mon law remedy is not taken away by the action given against the bailiff on his cove-nant under the Court of Requests Act. Cline v. McDonald, E. T. 2 Vict.

Indemnity by Plaintiff's Attorney.]

The attorney for an execution creditor, who indemnified the bailiff who executed the who indemnined the balling who executed the half, far, is not responsible over to an assistant whom the bailiff employed, for damages recovered against such assistant by a person who claimed the goods seized as his property, Eadus v. Dougall, 14 C. P. 352.

Negligence.]—An action on the case lies in favour of a sheriff against a bailiff for negligence in allowing a prisoner to escape, in consequence of which the sheriff is sued by the creditor, and a verdict recovered against him for nominal damages; and semble, that in such an action the sheriff is allowed to recover both the costs of the action against himself and his own costs, although no notice of that action had been given to the bailiff by the sheriff, the bailiff not being concluded by the former verdict, if he had no opportunity of defending in the sheriff's name. Ruttan v. Shea, 5 U. C. R. 210.

Under the plea of not guilty the bailiff can only prove that he was not guilty of the neglionly prove that he was not guilty of the negli-gence. He cannot give in evidence any special contract of service. Ib.

Sale — Statute of Frauds...] — A sale of goods by a sheriff or his bailiff under execution is within s. 17 of the Statute of Frauds, and either of them may sign for the purchaser the memorandum in writing, in the same manner as an auctioneer or his clerk. Flintoft v. Elmore, 18 C. P. 274.

Statutory Protection.]-Action to recover the value of a mare which had been taken and the plaintiff arrested by defendant as a bailiff, acting under a search warrant against the plaintiff issued by a justice of the peace, which commanded the bailiff to take and safely keep the mare until he was ordered and safely keep the mare until ne was ordered to deliver up the same by due course of law. The indictment against the plaintiff having been ignored by the grand jury he was discharged, and the defendant then being instructed by the Crown counsel to deliver the mare to the plaintiff, refused to do so, saying he had given her to his brother, taking a bond to indemnify himself from loss. The plaintiff The plaintiff then obtained a copy of the bond and sued thereon in the name of defendant, which the defendant as the obligee stayed:—Held, that the facts as proyed raised a question of bona or mala fides of the defendant acting in the discharge of his duty as a bailiff, which was properly left to the jury, and that the jury having found against him, he had no right to invoke the aid of the statute. McCance v. Bateman, 12 C. P. 469.

Tax Collector.]-A collector of taxes is responsible for the acts of his balliff, holding legal authority (by warrant) from him so to act, and an action will lie against them jointly, Corbett v. Johnston, 11 C. P. 317.

But see, also, Fraser v. Page, 18 U. C. R. Trespass.]—If a stranger having no legal process goes to a defendant in execution, and takes down in his presence a list of his goods, and tells him he must not remove them, and does nothing more, he cannot be sued in trespass. So if, instead of a stranger, a bailiff has so acted under a legal process, he may have bound the property as against other writs, but he cannot be sued in trespass, as writs, but he cannot be sued in trespass, as he neither removed, detained, nor handled the goods. Cameron v. Lount, 4 U. C. R. 275. The writ of fi. fa. and warrant to the bailif must be proved, or its production accounted for, in order to charge the plaintiff in the execution with an act of trespass committed by the bailiff. 1b.

Volunteer.]—A person acting in aid of a bailiff may plead the general issue by statute, but not if he be a mere volunteer interfering from the interest which he has in the process. Dale v. Coon, 2 P. R. 150.

Warrant to Two.]—When the warrant to arrest is addressed to two bailiffs as if jointly, one may, nevertheless, arrest. Hetherington v. Whelan, 1 C. L. Ch. 153.

See Division Courts, IV.

BAILMENT.

Action Against Wrong-Doer.] - A mare was in the plaintiff's field, where it was killed by defendant's bull which had broken into the plaintiff's close; the mare had been put there by plaintiff's father, who said he had given it to the plaintiff. Semble, that the right of property was immaterial, as the plaintiff, even if only a bailee, could recover its value against a wrong-doer. Mason v. Morgan, 24 U. C. R. 328.

Agency.]-Where possession is changed it need not be given personally to the creditor, purchaser or mortgagee; it may equally be given to a trustee or bailee for him, and the debtor may increase the claim of such bailee or may charge the goods with further sums in favour of other persons. McMaster v. Garland, 31 C. P. 320.

Agreement to Return—Damage Occaby Unforeseen Accident.]-Where there is a positive contract to do a thing not in itself unlawful, the contractor must per-form it or pay damages for non-performance, form it or pay damages for non-performance, although in consequence of unforeseen causes the performance has become unexpectedly burdensome or even impossible. The defendants hired the plaintiff's scow and pile-driver, at a named price per day, they to be responsible for damage thereto, except to be responsible for damage thereto, except to the engine, and ordinary wear and tear, until returned to the plaintiff. While in the de-fendants' custody, by reason of a storm of unusual force, the scow and pile-driver were driven from their moorings and damaged:— Held, that the defendants were liable for the damages thus sustained, and for the rent dur-ing the period of repair. Taylor v. Caldwell, 3 B. & S. S26, followed. Harvey v. Murray, 136 Mass. 377, approved. Grant v. Armour, 25 O. R. 7.

Crown.]—Liability of Crown as bailee for goods stolen from customs warehouse. Corse v. The Queen, 3 Ex. C. R. 13.

Delivery of Seed on Contract to Plant—Damages to Land from Impurity of Seed.)—Where seed is delivered by one person to another without any warranty, honestly believing it to be clean, to be grown on the land of the latter, the produce thereof to be returned and paid for at a fixed price per bushel, the transaction is a bailment and not a sale; and damages arising from other innocuous seed having been mixed therewith, and on harvesting having become scattered on the ground and coming up the following year on the land, are too remote, and not within the rule laid down in Hadley v. Baxendale, 9 Exch. 341, and Cory v. Thames Ironworks Co. L. R. 3 Q. B. 181, McMullen v. Free, 13 O. R. 57, and Smith v. Green, 1 C. P. D. 92, distinguished. The plaintiff, having received seed from the defendant to be grown under the circumstances and conditions above mentioned, became aware while it was growing that vetches were coming up with it, but did not inform the defendant, and was paid for it:—Held, that he could not recover damages for an injury which his own conduct was responsible for. McCollum v. Davis, S. U. C. R. 150, specially referred to. Stevent v. Scutthorp, 25 O. R. 544.

Disputing Title.]—A bailee of goods is not estopped from disputing the bailor's title. White v. Brown, 12 U. C. R. 477.

Jus Tertii — Eriction by Title Paramount.]—Where a bailee accepts a bailment and undertakes to redeliver to his bailor, but is evicted by title paramount, he is not, unless there is a special contract or he is in some way to blame for the loss, responsible to the bailor for injury suffered by the latter. Biddle v. Bond, 6 B. & S. 225, followed. Ross v. Edwards, 11 R. 574.

Just Tertii.]—M. & Co., at Guelph, bought a car load of wheat on commission for C. They paid for it themselves, and shipped it by defendant railway, taking the maleay relative to their own, taking the maleay relative to their own, taking the maleay relative to their own the care of C. at Water-down; M. & Co. being aware that it was to be ground there for C. The receipt was indorsed by them to the order of the Canadian Bank of Commerce. Through this bank they drew upon C. at fifteen days sight for the price, with their commission and bank charges, and discounted the draft with the receipt attached as collateral security. At Waterdown, the wheat was delivered by defendants upon C.'s order to his brother, who had a mill there. It was missed by him with other wheat and ground, and fifty-live barrels of flour, the equivalent for it, were delivered by him to defendants for C. C. became in-solvent before the draft matured, and M. & Co. took it up and got the railway receipt reindorsed to them. C.'s assignee having sued the defendants in trover and detinue for the flour, they in privity with M. & Co., denied the plaintiff's right to it, and set up the title of M. & Co.:—Held, that the defendants were entitled to set up the title of M. & Co. as a defence. Mason v. Great Western R. W. Co., 11 U. C. R. 73.

Jus Tertii.]—Plaintiff had sold certain goods to M., which were at the time lying at defendants' railway station, and defendants were fully aware of the sale, but notwithstanding they contracted with plaintiff to carry and deliver them for him as required, and gave him a shipping bill accordingly. In an action by plaintiff against defendants for the non-delivery; — Held, that defendants could not set up M.'s title to the goods as against the plaintiff. It further appeared that though M. had notified defendants of his claim and made a demand for the goods, he had in fact sued plaintiff and recovered his whole claim from him. Held, also that the case could not be brought within the principle of a bailee setting up the jus tertii against the plaintiff, for they were not bona fide defending in right of such third person. Brill v, Grand Trank R. W. Co., 20 C. P. 440.

Jus Tertii.] — The defendant, who held the wheat in question in store, on receiving a delivery order signed by A. D., undertook to hold the wheat for the plaintiff, and negotiated with him for the purchase of it, but afterwards repudiated the plaintiff's title on being indemnified for A. D., and refused to give the wheat up to the plaintiff:—Semble, that the defendant, after what he had done, could not be permitted to set up A. D.'s title against the plaintiff. Murphy v. Ycomans, 29 C. P. 421.

Jus Tertii.]—T. sold to plaintiff 2,000 ont of 3,000 bushels of wheat owned by him and lying in two bins in the warehouse of S., whose weetigs he held for the same, and which he indorsed to plaintiff who paid him for the quantity sold to him. The wheat remained in the warehouse for some time. T. and S. left the country, when defendants seized and converted the whole quantity to their own use, and plaintiff sued them in trover and detinue. The evidence of T., so far from shewing that he repudiated the sale, fully upheld it, and proved that he told S, to appropriate all the wheat in one of the bins to plaintiff, and S. stated that he would not, after the notice of the sale to plaintiff, have delivered any of the wheat in one of the bins to plaintiff and S, stated that he would not, after the notice of the sale to plaintiff, and edivered any of the wheat in the two bins to any one but plaintiff, without retaining enough to satisfy plaintiff 2,000 bushels. Quarre, whether defendants, as wrong-doers, could set up the objection of the property not passing by reason of non-appropriation or non-severance. Coffey v. Quebce Bank, 20 C. P. 110.

Liability of Gratuitous Bailee.]—It is not illegal to deliver a money letter to a private friend on his way, journey, or travel, provided such letter be delivered by such friend to the party to whom it is addressed. Such friend, as a gratuitous bailee, would be bound to take as much care of the letter as he would of his own; but if lost, where he does take such care, he is not responsible. Tindall v. Hayward, 7 L. J. 245.

Lien.]—A factor has no lien on goods assigned to him until they actually come into his possession. Clark v. Great Western R. W. Co., S C. P. 191.

Milling Wheat—Claim in Insolvency.]
—The insolvent, a miller, agreed to grind wheat for the claimants, and to deliver to them a barrel of flour of a specified quality for so many bushels of wheat, and he thus became liable to deliver to them 955 barrels of flour, as equivalent for wheat received by him and made away with:—Held, that this was a bailment only of the wheat, which remained the claimants', to the insolvent: that such bailment was determined by the conversion of the wheat, so that the claimants might maintain trover for it either as wheat or as flour if ground: that they might waive the tort and sue for the value of the goods when they should have been delivered; and that the they should have been delivered; and that the claim therefore was provable as being a debt within the Insolvent Act, not a claim for un-liquidated damages. In re Williams, 31 U. R. 143.

Negligence.]—The plaintiff had been for some time a guest of the defendant, an innkeeper, and on leaving the inn, after paying his bill, was allowed to leave a box containing his bill, was allowed to leave a box containing some papers and books alleged to be of value to the plaintiff, in the room of the inn used for storing baggage, &c. The plaintiff in-tended to take it away the day following, but owing to libress he did not call for it for sev-eral weeks afterwards, when it was dis-covered that the box was lost. There was no other evidence of any negligence in the mat-ter:—Held, that the plaintiff could not re-cover. Palin v. Reid, 10 A. R. 63.

Negligence. |-Plaintiff sued the defend-Negligence.]—Plaintiff sued the defend-mins for the value of a portable engine and holler which had been hired by the defend-ants, and which boiler had exploded when in their possession immediately after they had legun to use it, and while in charge of a competent engineer:—Held, that as the lessor of a chattel for hire impliedly warrants that it is reasonably fit for the purpose for which it is let, the plaintiff, in the absence of negli-gence on the part of the defendants, could not recover. Reynolds v. Roxburgh, 10 O. R. 649. R. 649.

Negligence.]—The defendant hired a tug from the plaintiff by a contract signed by both parties in these words, "I agree to charter tug." to tow two barges from "a for which I agree to pay " owner to supply engineer and captain " The tug on the voyage was run on a recit through the negligence of the captain:—Held, not a demise of the tug, but a contract of hiring, and that the defendant was not liable for the damage. Thompson v. Fowler, 23 O. R. 644.

Storage of Wheat—"At Owner's Risk"

Loss by Fire.]—A quantity of wheat was delivered by the plaintiff to the defendant, a miller, under a receipt stating that the same was received in store "at owner's risk," and that the plaintiff was entitled to receive the correct project price these few shapes and the state of t that the plaintiff was entitled to receive the current market price therefor when he called for his money. The wheat to the plaintiff's knowledge was mixed with wheat of the same grade and ground into flour. The mill with all its contents was subsequently destroyed by fire, but there had always been in store a sufficient quantity of wheat to answer plaintiff's receipt:—Held, that the receipt and the facts in connection therewith constituted a bailment of the wheat and not a sale. South Australian Ins. Co. v. Randall, L. R. 3 C. P. 101, distinguished. Clark v. McClellan, 23 O. R. 485. O. R. 465.

Warehouseman — Collapse of Ware-ouse.] — A building erected for a billiard table manufactory was converted into a ware-house and used as such for about nine months, when the rear portion of it collapsed through the breaking of a beam supporting the ground floor, occasioned by dry rot in one of the beams, and a quantity of goods stored therein was damaged. No negligence was shewn in the construction of the building or the selection of the material used therein, or in not discovering the existence of the dry rot, and except therefor the building would have been capable of sustaining the weight put on it, as the front portion with a greater weight in it remained intact. In actions for weight in it remained intact. In actions for the damages sustained to the goods ware-housed in the building:—Held, that the de-fendant was not liable. Page v. Defoc, Brown v. Defoc, Ashdown v. Defoc, 24 O. R. 569.  - 1. Assignee's Liabilities and Rights.

Accounts—Costs.]—It is the duty of a trustee to use reasonable diligence to have the accounts of the trust ready, and to render them within a reasonable time after they are asked for on behalf of the cestuis que trust; and where a trustee wholly neglected this duty, though he offered his books for inspection by the parties interested, he was charged with the costs of suit up to the hearing. Randall v. Burrowes, 11 Gr. 304.

Accounts — Costs.] — Where a creditor brought an action for an account against the assignee for the benefit of creditors of his debtor after demanding copies of the assignee's accounts, but without expressing any desire or making any attempt to inspect the accounts, and without waiting a reasonable time for preparation of copies, the assignee was allowed his costs as between solicitor and client out of the balance of the estate in his hands, and in case of deficiency the plaintiff was ordered personally to pay it. Sandford v. Porter, 16 A. R. 565.

Action by Creditor for Account— Parties.]—Where a bill was filed by one of several creditors of a debtor, who had assigned his estate for the benefit of his creditors, against the debtor and the trustees, seeking an account of the estate and payment, without making any other creditor a party, the court overruled an objection for want of parties, on the ground of the absence of any such creditor. Wood v. Brett, 9 Gr. 78.

An assignment having been made to trustees for the benefit of creditors, a bill was files against the assignound his trustees by the second of the trust extraction of the plant of the plant of the trust extraction of the plant of the plant of the trustees under the assignment. Ib.

Action to Impeach Assignment.]— Where a bill is filed to impeach a conveyance to the trustees for the benefit of creditors, whether such an assignment is or is not in insolvency, the trustees are necessary parties: therefore where the cause of demurrer assigned was, that one G., to whom it was alleged in the bill that M. had conveyed his estate and effects for the benefit of his creditors, was not made a party, the court allowed the demurrer. Wylie v. McKay, 20 Gr. 421.

Agreement to Give Security—Notice.]
—As against an assignee for the benefit of creditors, an oral agreement, of which he has notice, by the assignor to give to an indorser a chattel mortgage to secure him against liability, will be enforced. Kerry v. James, 21 A. R. 338.

Attacking Preference.] — A creditor's assignee, not himself a creditor, cannot sustain an action to set aside a frauduent conveyance or transfer made by the debtor, prior to the assignment under which he claims to be such assignee. Lumsden v. Scott, 4 O. R. 323.

Book Debts.]—An assignee for creditors under R. S. O. 1887 c. 124 and amendments, is not in the position of a purchaser for value without notice, and takes no higher rights under the assignment than his assignor had. Where, therefore, certain book debtors were notified by the assignee for creditors under the Act, of the assignment to him, before notification by certain creditors to whom such debts had been previously assigned, it was held that he did not gain priority thereby. Thibundeau v. Paul, 26 O. R. 385.

Bound by Equities.]—In the absence of a statutory title to sue as representing creditors, such as is conferred by bankruptcy and insolvency statutes, an assignee in trust for creditors can only enforce the same rights as the person making the assignment to him could have enforced; therefore the defendant could not, by a plea in his own name, ask to have a conveyance, made by the debtor to the plaintiff prior to the assignment under which defendant chimed, rescinded or set aside as fraudulent against creditors. The nullity of a deed should not be pronounced without putting all the parties to it en cause en declaration de judgment commun:—Semble, that plaintiff being a second purchaser in good faith and for value, acquired a valid title to the property which he could set up even against an action brought directly by the creditors. Burland v. Moflatt, 11 S. C. R. 76. But see Portcous v. Reynar, 13 App. Cas.

Chattel Mortgage—Renewal.]—An assignee for the benefit of creditors, under a general assignment made and registered pursuant to the Assignments and Preferences Act, R. S. O. 1887 c. 1244, may renew a chattel mortgage made in favour of his assignor, without the execution and registration of a specific assignment of that mortgage. A renewal statement, in itself in proper form, alleging title through the assignment for the benefit of creditors, is sufficient. Fleming v. Ryun, 21 A. R. 39.

Chattel Mortgage—Renewal.]—Section 2 of 55 Vict. c. 26 (O.), does not enable an assignee for the general benefit of creditors to question the validity of the renewal of a chattel mortgage. Tallman v. Smart, 25 O. R. 661.

Chattel Mortgage.] — An assignee for the general benefit of creditors is, by virtue of 55 Vict. c, 26, s. 2 (.0.), entitled to take advantage of irregularities or defects in a chattel mortgage made by the assignor to the same extent as an execution creditor, where such mortgage is by reason of such defect "void against creditors." Kerry v. James. 21 A. R. 338.

Chattel Mortgage — Possession.] — N. executed a chuttel mortgage of his effects, and shortly afterwards made an assignment to one of the mortgages, in trust for the lenefit of his creditors. The assignee took possession under the assignment—Held, that there was no delivery to the mortgages under the mortgage, which transferred to them the possession of the goods. Reid v. Creighton, 24 8. C. R. 69.

Chattel Mortgage — Possession.] — By the Act relating to chattel mortgages, R. S. O. 1887, c. 125, a mortgage not registered within five days after execution is "void as against creditors," and by 55 Vict. c. 26, s. 2 (O.) that expression is extended to simple contract creditors, and to the mortgagor or bargaintor suing on behalf of themselves and other creditors, and to any assignee for the general benefit of creditors within the meaning of the Act respecting Assignments and Preferences, R. S. O. 1887, c. 124. By s. 4 of 55 Vict. c. 26 (O.) a mortgage so void shall not, by subsequent possession by the mortgage of the things mortgaged, be made valid "as against persons who became creditors" — Held, reversing 22 A. R. 138, that under this legislation a mortgage so void is void as against all creditors, those becoming such after the mortgage and the time possession is taken, simple contract creditors who have commenced proceedings to set it aside, and an assignee appointed before the mortgage was given; that the words suing on behalf of themselves and indicate the mortgage was given; that the words suing on behalf of themselves and indicate that in the mending the executions in the sheriff's hands of before in the mending the contract creditors who have commenced proceedings to set it aside, and an assignee appointed before the mortgage was given; that the words suing on behalf of themselves and indicate that in the mending the executive to set the mortgage was given; that the words of the mortgage was given; the mortgage will not be made valid by subsequent taking of possession. Clarkson v. McMaster, 25 S. C.

Commission and Expenses — Deputy Resident out of Ontario.]—Where an assignment for the benefit of creditors is made by a resident of Ontario to an assignee residing in Ontario, but all the work in connection with the assignment is done by the assignee's partner residing out of the Province, the assignee cannot recover as against the assignor or retain out of his estate any commission or expenses. Tennant v. Macewan, 24 A. R. 132.

Compromise of Claim.]—A plaintiff, a creditor, served a notice on an assignce for creditors, pursuant to R. S. O. 1887 c. 124. s. 7, s.-8. Z. requiring him to take proceedings to set aside a certain bill of sale made by the insolvent, and afterwards served on him a notice of motion for an order giving him, the creditor, permission to bring the action. After being served with the notice, however, the assigne, believing that he had authority to do so, with the approval of a majority of the inspectors and creditors present at a meeting called for the purpose, made a settlement with the grantee of the bill of sale, which settlement, it also appeared, was advantageous to the estate. The plaintiff then, pursuant to his notice of motion, obtained an order from a Judge, giving him leave to bring this action impeaching the bill of sale, without, however, the settlement being brought to the notice of the Judge:—Held, that the settlement was valid and binding. Keyes v. Kirkpatrick, 19 O. R. 572.

Contempt.] — As to power of Judge to issue attachment against assignee for contempt. See Re Pacquette, 11 P. R. 463.

Costs.]—An assignee for the benefit of creditiors may be ordered to pay the costs of the action personally as any other unsuccessful litigant may be. Macdonald v. Balfour, 20 A. R. 404.

Costs.]—An assignee for the benefit of creditors, on instructions of the inspectors, contested the plaintiff's claim, who then brought an action, which was dismissed with costs, but, on appeal to the divisional court, this decision was reversed, with costs to be paid by the defendant, the assignee. The creditors, after taking counsel's opinion, resolved to appeal to the court of appeal, but the appeal to that court was dismissed with costs. The assignee charged against the estate the total sum he had to pay in respect of the costs of these proceedings:—Held, that he was entitled so to do. Smith v. Beal, 25 O. R. 368.

Costs — Litigation with Preferred Creditor, I—W, assigned all his estate by deed to B_s, one of his creditors, in trust for his creditors generally. Afterwards, at a meeting of creditors generally. Afterwards, at a meeting of creditors it was resolved, with B.'s consent, that M., as an execution creditor of W., should bring an action on behalf of all the creditors of W., to contest the validity of a certain chattel mortgage made to H. & Co., by W., prior to the above assignment to B., the costs of which the creditors present agreed should be borne by the estate. H. & Co. were not present at the meeting. This action by M. was dismissed with costs, and B., who had retained the solicitor and really managed and controlled the action, paid the defendants H. & Co.'s costs of that action, and also the costs of the solicitor who acted for M., out of the moneys of the estate, $402 in all. H. & Co. acceptions of W., now brought this action, asking that the executors of M. should pay the $402 to B. to be distributed among the creditors of W. There was no evidence of M. or his executors having requested B. to pay the $402 to B. to be distributed among the creditors of W. There was no evidence of M. or his executors having requested B. to pay this to the solicitor could be implied, for M. did not retain the solicitor or manage the proceedings, but merely allowed his name to be used as plaintiff, and M. was not liable to the solicitor as to those costs, and therefore the plaintiff failed as to that sum though, semble, B. had no authority to each of the plaintiffs could not succeed as to the balance, $162, for there could be no reasonable doubt that they knew that this $162, which was paid to them by B. as their costs of defence, was moneys of the estate of which B. was trustee, and must be held to have assented to its being so paid. Hyman v. Horcell, 313 O. R, 400.

Costs of Action—Remuneration and Disbursements—Indemnity.]—An assignee for the benefit of creditors, under the Assignments Act, cannot charge creditors personally with the costs of an action brought by him on behalf of the insolvent estate, unless upon a direct or implied promise of indemnity, but must look to the assets of the estate; and so, too, with regard to his remuneration for, and disbursements in, winding up the estate. Johnston v. Dulmage, 30 O. R. 233.

Costs—Taxation of Bill of Costs by Assignee for Creditors of Client.]—The parties who initiate and intervene upon the taxation of a solicitor's bill of costs become personally liable to pay the costs of taxation. And where solicitors rendered to the assignee of an isolvent, and the assignee taxed the bill and had it reduced by more than one-sixth:—Held, that he had a right personally cover from the solicitors he personally cover from the solicitors when the taxation, and had the personal cover from the solicitors in the solicitors from their bill. Re Rogers and Farewell, 14. R. 38

Greditor Assignee,]— The defendant, who was assignee for creditors of the mortgagor, was threatening to remove certain of the property comprised in the mortgage, netting, as he said formed an injunction to restrain him. In his defence he alleged that he was the constant of the mortgago at the time of the execution of the mortgago at the time of the execution of the mortgago in question, and that after the commencement of this suit he recovered a judgment for the amount of his debt, and he claimed a right to the property taken by him as against the plaintiffs as such creditor:—Held, that he was entitled thus to avail himself of his position as a creditor at the date of the mortgage, notwithstanding the fact that in removing the goods he alleged that he had acted for the benefit of the creditors, and although he did not recover his judgment and execution before the commencement of the suit. Robinson v. Cook, 6. O. R. 590.

Declaration of Trust—By-law—Colls—Forfeiture of Stock.]—The plaintiff sued as an assignee for creditors under an assignment which excepted shares in companies not fully paid up, and in which his assignor was declared a trustee for the plaintiff, to transfer the shares in such a way as he should direct. In this action the plaintiff, to transfer the shares in such a way as he should direct. In this action the plaintiff sought to have it declared that he was the owner of certain shares, standing in the name of his assignor, in a company incorporated under R. S. O. 1897 c. 191, and that he was entitled to pay the balance of ealls made thereon:—Held, that he was not entitled to call on the company where the amount payable on a call is not paid within the time limited by the special Act incorporating the company, or by the letters patent, or by a by-law of the company, Where, therefore, no time was limited in the statute, or letters patent, or in the by-law making the call, such call was held to be illegal and an attempted forfeiture of the stock ineffectual. Armstrony v. Merchants' Mantle Manufacturing Co., 32 O. R. 387.

Different Estates.]—The firm of R. & Co., consisting of three members, supplied goods to the defendants, and subsequently one of the members retired, and transferred his interest in the assets of the firm to the remaining partners, who continued to carry on business under the same firm name, and afterwards made an assignment to E., under 48 Vict. c. 26 (O.), for the benefit of their creditors. E. as assignee, sold to the plaintiff the debt supposed to be due from the defendants to R. & Co., for the price of the goods supplied, and also the interest of R. & Co. in any goods supplied and charged to anyone, remaining unsold, and the plaintiff brought this action to recover the same. The goods in question, however, were not purchased by defendants, but were consigned to them for sale by R. & Co., by whose instructions the proceeds of the goods actually sold, were remitted to H. & Co., to whom they had been assigned by R. & Co. At the trial it appeared from the cyidence that the defence was undertaken and conducted for the defendants by H. & Co. The learned Judge found that no debt had ever existed from the defendants to R. & Co., ever existed from the detendants to R. & Co., and dismissed the action, refusing to add H. & Co. as parties. The plaintiff moved by way of appeal from this judgment, seeking to make H. & Co. and E. parties, and to charge the defendants in the character of bailees of the residue, remaining unsold, of the goods consigned to them by R. & Co., in which he claimed an interest, subject to the right of H. & Co., if the transfer to them should be up held, or absolutely if that transfer should set aside as a fraudulent preference :-Held, 1. That these questions were "questions involved in the action" within the meaning of Rule 103, Ontario Judicature Act (Con. Rule 324) having regard to the manner in which the defence was conducted, and to the fact that the transfer to H. & Co. was set up in the defence, and that the plaintiff should be allowed to amend under that Rule, but that the amendment must be confined to the plain-tiff's possible rights. 2. That by s. 7 of 48 Vict. c. 26 (O.), E. was the only person en-Vict. c. 20 (O.), E. was the only person en-titled to enforce the right of the creditors of II. & Co. to set aside the transfer to H. & Co., but that transfer was not made by the same firm of R. & Co. which assigned to E.; that the two estates were distinct, and the creditors of the original firm, not the creditors of the new firm, were those only against whom a fraudulent preference by the original firm could be declared void; that the plaintiff could have no higher right than E., through whom he claimed, and could not therefore attack the assignment to H. & Co. The plaintiff was granted leave to amend by adding II. & Co. as defendants, his claim against them to be limited to an account of their debt, and of payments on account thereof, and, as against the original defendants, to obtain the unsold goods as soon as the debt due H. & Co. should be satisfied; and by adding E. as a plaintiff be satisfied: and by adding E. as a plainting upon filing his consent, payment by the plaintiff of the defendant's whole costs to be a condition precedent. Adams v. Watson Manufacturing Co. (Limited), 15 O. R. 218; 16 A. R. 2.

Discovery.]—In an action by creditors of a firm to establish the liability of the defendant as a partner therein, it appeared that the assignee of the firm for the benefit of creditors (who had received all the papers of the action, had more than the being brought, and was provided matter in the improvements, &c., to the plaintiff, between of documents, &c., to the plaintiff, between the prosecution:—Held, that although efficient in the result, he was to be regarded for the purposes of discovery as a quasi-plaintiff, and the defendant was entitled to have production of all documents in the possession of the assignee, and to examine him for the purpose of such production. Frothingham v. Isbister, 14 P. R. 112.

Fraudulent Sale of Assets of Estate.]
-Section 7 of the Assignments Act, R. S. O.

1887 c. 124, applies only to transactions made or entered into by the insolvent; and a creditor of the insolvent has a right of action in his own mame against the assignee to set aside a sule by the latter of the assignee to set aside, as translated, Reid v. Shurpe, 28 O. R. 156, in, followed, Hargyare v. Elliol, 28 O. R. 152.

Mortgage Debt-Priority-Costs.]-The mortgagee filed his bill against the assignee of the mortgagor, whose title was that of an assignee for the benefit of the creditors under assigned for the behalf of the creation of the rest as a trust deed, excluding all preference and priority, praying that the trust estate might be first applied in payment of his specialty debt, and asking an account against the trustee, with the view of charging the trustee with all payments made by him to simple contract creditors before satisfying specialty debts. He then asked a sale of the mort-goged premises to make up any deficiency. The trustee, instead of filing a memorandum disputing the debt, put in his answer contesting the right of the mortgagee to the relief prayed for against the trust estate, and sub-mitting that the mortgagee was only entitled to the usual foreclosure or sale decree, but not to the costs other than as on a præcipe decree :-Held, that as the trust deed excluded all preference and priority as to the payment of the debts, the rules applicable to the administration of the estates of intestates did not apply, and the mortgagee, for any-thing beyond what his mortgage would realize, could claim only the same as other creditors and as the mortgagee could have obtained all the relief he was entitled to by a decree on pracipe he was declared entitled only to the costs of such a decree, and was ordered to pay to the trustee his costs of defending the trust estate. Gore Bank v. Sutherland, 1 C. L. J.

Mortgage Foreclosed before Assignee's Action.]—Where in an action by the assignee of C. for the benefit of his creditors under 48 Vict. c. 26 (0.), stated to be brought for the benefit of one of such creditors, the F. Bank, to set aside a mortgage made to the defendants, as fraudulent and preferential, a judgment for foreclosure of the mortgage obtained against the plaintiff was plended as a bar to the action, and a counterclaim was asserted for payment by the F. Bank of certain moneys alleged to be due to the defendants, a motion to strike out such defence and counterclaim was refused, and the plaintiff was left to demur:—Semble, that the counterclaim was not inadmissible. Glass v. Grant. I 2P. R. 480.

Negligence.]—A., being accommodation indorser for B. to a large amount, obtained from him, as indemnity, a confession, upon which Judgment was entered up and dolly registered. C. also recovered a Judgment was the same day, contemporaneously with the confession. B. also assigned to A. all his chattels and effects, and all debts due him. On hearing of the assignment C. notified A. that he would be holden accountable for what was assigned to him, but A. nevertheless permitted B. to use the property, and to receive the debts, just as if no assignment had been made, whereby C. was deprived of any benefit. On the usual reference to the master in a suit for foreclosure of lands of B., A. and C. both proved their debts, and in settling priorities the master reported A. prior to C. On appeal by C. from the report, the court declared A. to be a trustee of the property assigned for C., and that having by his negligence permitted the property to become lost, A. ought to be postponed as to the lands, the common fund of both. Huntingdon v. VanBrocklin, 8 Gr. 421.

Payment of Unpaid Purchase Money.]

—A mortgage of unpatented land, after judgments were reissisted against link assigned all his estate for the late of the mean creditors. The trustee paid the government out of the trustee paid the government out of the trustee paid, that in respect of the purchase money:—Held, that in respect of the sum so paid, he was entitled to priority over the judgment creditors. McIntyre v. Shaw, 12 Gr. 295.

Personal Liability to Pay Claims. The declaration charged that the plaintiff, having recovered judgment against A. & Co., had seized and was about to sell their goods under a fi. fa., and in consideration that the plaintiff would withdraw his writ defendants promised to pay the amount. A count was added for money had and received. It appeared that A. & Co., being indebted for rent. and three executions, of which this was one, having issued against them for other claims, an assignment to the defendants of made all their goods, in trust out of the proceeds to pay the landlord and these executions, according to their legal priority, then to pay two preferential creditors named, and lastly to divide the surplus money among the other creditors executing the assignment. This assignment was executed by the defendants, but not by the plaintiff. It was put in at the trial by the plaintiff, and it was proved that the defendants had received moneys under it. but no promise was shewn by them except what was contained in the deed, in which it was recited that the defendants had agreed to pay the claims above mentioned out t of the proceeds of the property assigned, cient:—Held, that the plaintiffs could not re-cover; that the first count was not proved, the only promise made being that contained in the deed, which was to pay out of the pro-ceeds of the goods; and upon the second count, defendants, as trustees, could be liable only in equity, or if at law in a special action on the deed. Harris v. Buntin, 16 U. C. R. 59.

Personal Liability to Pay Claims.]—
F. had a demand against one T. on notes and acceptances of about $20,000. The plaintiffs agreed to transfer to him certain bank stock worth $2,550 as a loan, to secure which he agreed to assign, and afterwards delivered to them, $14,250 of these notes, all of which were negotiable, but some only were indorsed by F. T. failed in Lower Canada, and F. obtained these notes from the plaintiffs to collect for them there. F. subsequently executed an assignment to the defendant for the benefit of creditors, including these notes in the schedule attached to it, but stating in the deed that they were held by the plaintiffs as security for their loan. All the money recovered from T. on F.'s whole claim against him (about $300 excepted) came into the defendant hands:—Held, that the plaintiffs might recover from the defendant, as money had and received to their use, the amount of their loan out of the money received on the notes delivered to them as security; and if the amount paid by T. was paid generally on F.'s whole claim against him, then a sun founded on the proportion of such notes to the whole of T.'s debt. Lee v. Woodside, 22

Pledge—Right of Curator—Quebec Law.]
—See Société Canadienne Française de Montreal v. Daveluy. 20 S. C. R. 449; Rolland v. Caisse d'Economie de Quebec, 24 S. C. R. 405.

Pledge of Goods—Banking Act.]—The plaintiff, a creditor of an insolvent, alleged that in regard to certain pledges made by the latter to a bank, there had been no contemporaneous advances, and that the pledges were invalid under s. 75 of the Banking Act, 53 Vict. c. 31 (D.), and claimed to be entitled to obtain moneys received through disposal of the plades and to obtain moneys received through disposal of the pledges and to apply them in payment of creditors' claims, by virtue of the provi-sions of s. 1 of 58 Vict. c. 23 (O.):—Held, that the words "invalid against creditors" should be treated as limited to transactions invalid against creditors, quâ creditors, and not as extending to transactions declared valid for reasons other than those designed to valid for reasons other than those designed protect creditors. Held, also, that the last named Act did not apply, because the money had been received by the bank before it was passed, and it was not retrospective. The inpassed, and it was not retrospective. solvent had been in the habit of buying hops from time to time, and giving the bank his own warehouse receipts or direct pledges for the purpose of raising money to pay for them. Then, at the request of the bank, he constituted his bookkeeper his warehouseman, and the latter issued warehouse receipts to the bank in substitution for the securities or receipts theretofore held, there being no further advance made when the new securities were given:—Held, that this exchange of securities should be treated as authorized under s.-s. 2 of s. 75 of the Banking Act. The plaintiff asked for a declaration that advances made by the bank upon a mortgage by the insolvent to a third person, and by him assigned to the bank, were contrary to the Banking Act, and that the property was free from the mortgage :-Held, that no such declaration should be made in the absence of the mortgagee, who was liable to the bank as indorser of a promissory note of the insolvent, collateral to the mortgage. Conn v. Smith, 28 O. R. 629.

Pledge of Goods—Banking Act.]—As to assignee's right to attack: See Halsted v. Bank of Hamilton, 27 O. R. 435, 24 A. R. 152, 28 S. C. R. 235.

Power of Attorney. —The assignment, in addition to the conveyance of the property, contained a power of attorney to the assignee to take and hold it, but was void under the statute as an assignment for want of filing: —Held, that the assignee's right could clearly not be sustained under the power of attorney. Wilson v. Kerr, 18 U. C. R. 470.

Previous Agreement — Change in Statute Luc.]—An unregistered agreement by a debtor to give to his creditor upon default in payment, or upon demand, a chattel mortgage upon his "present and future goods and chattels" confers no title upon the bredit or creditors, who takes possession before a chattel mortgage is given. Kerry v. James, 21 A. R. 338, considered. After judgment in the assignee's favour the Act 59 Vict. c. 34 (O.) was passed, and the agreement in question was registered:—Held, that this did not validate it. Hope v. May, 24 A. R. 16.

Principal and Agent—Replevin—Equitable Title.]—If an agent is intrusted by his principal with money to buy goods the money will be considered trust funds in his hands and the principal has the same interest in the goods when bought as he had in the funds producing it. If the goods so bought are mixed with those of the agent the principal has an equitable title to a quantity to be taken from the mass equivalent to the portion of the money advanced which has been used in the purchase, as well as to the unexpended balance. The equitable title is enforceable against the agent's assignee for the benefit of creditors. Under the present system of procedure in Ontario an equitable title to chattels will support an action of replevin. Larter v. Long. 26 S. C. R. 430, 23 A. R. 122.

Purchasing Goods.]—A., doing business under the name of J. A. & Sons, assigned all his property and effects to H. for benefit of creditors. H., by power of attorney, authorized A. to collect all moneys due his estate, &c., and to carry on the business if expedient. A. continued the business as before, and in the course of it purchased goods from F., to whom, on some occasions, he gave notes signed "J. A. & Sons. H. trustee per A." All the goods so purchased from F. were charged in his books to J. A. & Sons, and the dealings between them after the assignment continued for five years. Finally, A. being unable to pay what was due to F. the latter brought an action against H. on notes signed as above, and for the price of goods so sold to A .: Held, that the evidence at the trial of the action clearly shewed that the credit for the goods sold was given to A. and not to H.; that A. did not carry on the business after the assignment at the instance or as the agent of H. nor for the benefit of his estate: that A. was not authorized to sign H.'s name to notes as he did; and that H. was not liable either as the person to whom credit was given, or as an undisclosed principal. Held, further, tha if H. was guilty of a breach of trust in allow ing A. full control over the estate, that would not make him liable to F. in this action. Hechler v. Forsyth, 22 S. C. R. 489.

Purchase of Trust Property. I—A purchase by the assignee for the benefit of creditors of the assets of the estate, made by him at the request of the inspectors of the estate after futile efforts to sell at nuction and by private tender, and after a circular letter had been sent by the inspectors to each creditor stating that the sale would be made unless objection were taken, was set aside, there being evidence that at the time of the purchase the assignee knew of and was negotiating with a possible purchaser to whom he afterwards resold at a large profit, and had not disclosed this information to the inspectors. Morrison v. Watts, 19 A. R. 622.

Recovery of Debts. |—M. had a contract to supply wood to a railway company, for which he was to be paid when it had been inspected and accepted. While 152 cords were lying in the company's yard for inspection he assigned all the wood that belonged to him, with other property, to the plaintiff for the benefit of his creditors. He at the same time made over his interest in the contract to the defendant, who completed it, and the company afterwards by mistake paid defendant for these 152 cords as well as for what he had himself supplied:—Held, that the plaintiff might recover this sum as money had and received. Held, also, that defendant could not object that the assignment to the plaintiff was not properly filed. Scott v. Kelly, 17 U. C. R. 306.

Removal of Assignee.]—Where a Judge of a county court, acting under R. S. O. 1887 c. 124. s. 6, orders the removal of an assignee, he exercises a statutory jurisdiction as persona designata, and has no power to order payment of costs. The proceedings in such payment of costs. The proceedings in such a case are not in any court; and Rule 1170 (a) does not apply to them. Re Pacquette, 11 P. R. 463, followed. Re Young, 14 P. R.

Sale after Agreement to Assign.]-A trader being in insolvent circumstances, at a meeting of his creditors entered into a written agreement that he would execute an assignment to trustees, for the benefit of his creditors, of all his real and personal estate and effects, (except certain policies of life insurance,) and on the second day afterwards he did execute the deed agreed upon, which the trustees accepted, and several of his creditors joined in and executed the same. wards it was discovered that on the day inwards it was discovered that on the day in-tervening between the date of the agreement to assign and the execution of the deed of assignment, the debtor had sold a valuable portion of his stock in trade at a credit running over three years, and had accepted as security the promissory notes of the pur-rounser. Thereupon the trustees filed a bill seeking to have this sale set aside as fraudu-lent and void as against them:—Held, that the trustees, being in the position of pur-ticular and the security of the position of pur-ticular and the security of the security of the trustees, being in the position of purchasers, could claim only such rights as the debtor was legally entitled to at the date of the execution of the deed of trust, and that the sale being binding upon the debtor and those claiming under him, the trustees were not entitled to the relief prayed. But, semble, that this sale would not have been sustained as against a judgment creditor who had sued out execution. McMaster v. Clare, 7 Gr. 550.

Selling Estate of Insolvent by Auction. |—A by-law of a county munici-pality passed under s.-s. 2 of s. 495 of the Municipal Act, R. S. O. 1887 c. 184, enacted that it should not be lawful for any person or persons to act as auctioneers, or to sell or put up for sale any goods, &c., "by public auction" unless duly licensed:—Held, that the agent of an assignee of an insolvent estate the agent of an assignee of an insolvent estate selling without a license the stock-in-trade of an insolvent who had carried on business in the county, was rightly convicted of a breach of the by-law, although it was the only occa-sion he had so acted in the municipality. Regina v. Rauxaon, 22 O. R. 467.

Sheriff-Statute of Frauds.]-A sheriff, selling lands as assignee for creditors, under R. S. O. 1887 c. 124, cannot, as when selling under an execution, sign a memorandum which will bind a purchaser under the Statute of Frauds, for he is not, as in the latter case, agent for both vendor and purchaser. Melatyre v. Faubert, 26 O. R. 427.

Sheriff-Death.]-An assignment for the Saeriff—Death.]—An assignment for the benefit of creditors made to a sheriff under R. S. O. 1887 c. 124, is made to him as a public functionary, and on his death the care and administration of the estate assigned devolves upon his deputy, and thereafter upon his successor in office. It is not competent to the sheriff to disclaim or decline to act as such assignee. Brown v. Grove, 18 O. R. 311.

Time for Realizing — Administration.]

—Where a debtor assigned his estate to trustees on trust to sell for the benefit of creditors; and the trustees were guilty of delay in selling, and of other misconduct. It was held that the court had jurisdiction at the suit of a creditor to execute the trusts of a deed. Quebec Bank v. Snure, 16 Gr. 681.

Time for Realizing.]-The duties of an assignee under such an instrument as the one in question in this case are analogous to those and trustees administering executors estates, and the court will consider that a year is the proper time within which the sale of the property assigned is to be made, where the assignment leaves the time and manner of such sale in the discretion of the assignee. the sale be not made within a year the onus will be cast on the assignee of satisfying the court of his bona fides in seeking further delay. Ontario Bank v. Lamont, 6 O. R. 147.

Title Passing.]—An assignee for the benefit of creditors takes only such title as his assignor had to the property. Robinson v. Cook, 6 O. R. 590.

See Sub-Head S, "Preferential Transactions."

2. Construction and Effect of Assignments.

Benevolent Society-Interest of Debtor in Fund.]—An assignment by a debtor of all his estate for the benefit of his creditors under R. S. O. 1887 c. 124, is a voluntary assignment in the sense that it is optional with the debtor whether he makes it or not; but the form in which it is made and the effect of such form not being optional with him, in this sense it is not voluntary; and having regard to the provision of s. 11 of the Benevolent Societies Act, R. S. O. 1887 c. 172, such an assignment does not pass to the assigned to be not high pass to the assigned the benefit to which the debtor is entitled in the fund of a society properly incorporated under that Act. Re Unitt and Prott, 23 O. R. 78,

Confined to Personal Estate.]—An assignment for the benefit of creditors though confined in terms to the assignor's personal estate, professed to be drawn under 48 Vict. c. 26 (O.):—Held, it was not within the Act; and an action brought by the assignee to set aside a chattel mortgage was dismissed. Blain v. Peaker, 18 O. R. 109.

It is clear it was intended under the Act to bring all the estate of the assignor into the hands of the assignee for general distribution.

Covenant of Indemnity.]—The benefit of a covenant by a third person to indemnify the assignor against a mortgage made by him does not pass to his assignee under an assignment for the general benefit of creditors, at all events not where there has been no breach of the covenant before the making of the assignment. Even if the covenant passd, the assignee would hold it as bare trustee for the assigner, or for the mortgagees if subsequently assigned to them by the assignor. Ball v. Tennant, 21 A. R. 602, reversing 25 O. R. 50.

Creditors Named in Schedule.]—The plaintiffs assigned all their effects to defend-ant, to sell the same and pay all their creditors, a list of whom was handed to defendant on the execution of the deed of trust. Subse-quently the plaintiffs turnished another sche-dule of their liabilities, embracing several persons not mentioned in the original list.

Defendant had paid several of those first named, and in doing so had expended a sum greater than he had collected, and had become answerable for more than the residue of the estate would realize. He refused to recognize the claims of the additional parties in the second list, and thereupon the plaintiffs filed a bill praying an account of the defend-ant's dealings with the estate and for an execution of the trusts of the deed; alleging that had not any estate other than that assigned to defendant, and that they were insolvent and personally unable to pay any-thing. The court, in view of the facts that no fraud or improper conduct was alleged, that even if the whole estate were realized, defendant would still be a loser, that all the defendant had done, up to a date shortly be-fore the filing of the bill, had been approved of by the plaintiffs, and that he had received but a small sum since, and not enough to re-pay himself,—refused the relief prayed, and dismissed the bill with costs. In such a case the defendant sought to shew that the creditors mentioned in the original schedule were the only ones he had agreed to pay, and that such was the agreement between himself and the plaintiffs on his acceptance of the trust: -Held, that he was not at liberty to shew this, not having asked for a reformation of the deed of trust; and that even if he had. the absence of the parties sought to be ex-cluded from the benefits of the trust, was an insuperable barrier to the defendant being permitted to do so. Liddell v. Deacon, 20 Gr.

Creditors' Relief Act.]—See Roach v. McLachlan, 19 A. R. 496, and Breithaupt v. Marr, 20 A. R. 689, post, Execution.

Crown — Chose in Action.] — Where a chose in action was assigned, inter alia, for the general benefit of creditors, all the parties interested being before the court, and the Crown making no objection, the court gave effect to such assignment. Quarer, in the absence of acquiescence in such an assignment, are the assignee's rights thereunder capable of enforcement against the Crown? The Queen v. McCurqly, 2 Ex. C. R. 311.

Interest as Mortgagee. |-- On the 26th May, 1880, two chattel mortgages were executed by the plaintiff to one J. G. One mort-One mortgage was to secure $215 and interest: the other being a security for certain promissory notes of the mortgagor indorsed by the mortgagee, which had been discounted by the defendant, who was the holder thereof. On 24th July, both the mortgages, together with the goods and chattels comprised therein, were assigned to defendant by J. G. On the 22nd July, previously, R. G. and J. G., who had been trading in partnership, assigned to O. & K., upon trust for the benefit of creditors, amongst other things, all mortgages and all other personal estate wheresoever situate of the said assignors, or either of them, or in which any of them had any right or interest: —Held, that the terms of the deed of assign ment to O. and K. were sufficient to include these mortgages and the goods comprised in these mortgages and the goods comprised in them, and therefore, as regarded the first-named mortgage, there being no contrary in-tention, it passed under the deed, so that the subsequent assignment of that mortgage to the defendant was of no avail: but as re-garded the other mortgage, the defendant be-ing the beneficial owner thereof, as holder of the notes secured thereby, and the mortgage having no interest therein, there could be no intention that it should pass under the deed, and therefore it passed to the defendant under the assignment to him. Sutton v. Armstrong, 32 C. P. 11.

Lease—Forfeiture.]—The provisions of s. 11 of R. S. O. 1887 c. 143, do not extend to a forfeiture of the term under a stipulation in the lease that if the lessees should make any assignment for the benefit of creditors the term should immediately become forfeited, and such forfeiture is therefore enforceable without notice served upon the lessees. Argles v. McMath, 26 O. R. 244; 23 A. R. 44.

Lease—Firtures, I—A tenant may remove from the demised premises such articles, commonly known as trade fixtures, as are brought on the demised premises by him for the purpose of his business, even though they are fastened to the building, provided, however, the removal can be effected without substantial injury, and the covenant in the Short Leases Act, R. S. O. 1887 c. 106, to leave the premises in repair, does not restrict this right. Where the determination of a lease depends upon an uncertain event, such as an election to forfeit upon the making of an assignment for the benefit of creditors, a reasonable time for the removal of trade fixtures must be allowed after the election to forfeit. Arales v. McMath, 26 O. R. 221, 23 A. R. 44.

Life Insurance. —Quere: Are the words
"all bills, bonds, notes, securities, accounts, books, book debts, and documents securing money," contained in a general assignment for the benefit of creditors, sufficient to pass a policy at the time existing on the life of the assignor and held by him for his own benefit. Lee v. Gorrie, 1 C. L. J. 76.

Mistake in Creditor's Claim.]—A trader assigned his estate and effects to trustees for his creditors, some of whom were declared to have preferred claims, and to be paid in full. The claim of one was stated by the debtor to be "33,500, or thereabouts," no account having been settled between the debtor and the creditor for a long time; and this sum was stated in the schedule as the amount, and the several creditors executed the assignment. The creditor afterwards, on balancing his account, ascertained that his claim was 55,062, which the trustees refused to pay; whereunon the creditor filed a bill to reform the deed, by introducing this sum as his claim, on the ground that the words "or thereabouts," were sufficient to include it. The court dismissed the bill with costs. Chapin v. Clark, 7 Gr. 75.

Omission of Property.]—A debtor conveyed his lands to a trustee for his creditors, and a schedule annexed purported to contain the whole thereof, but it was afterwards discovered that, either designedly or by mistake, some of the lands had been omitted:—Held, that a bill would lie to correct the schedule, on the ground of fraud or mistake. Gillespie v. Groeer, 3 Gr. 558.

Reservation of Remedies.]—An assignment for the benefit of creditors generally, which contains a clause reserving all rights and remedies against third parties, but releasing the assignor from his liability, operates only as a covenant not to sue, and not as a release. Hall v. Thompson, 9 C. P. 257.

Reservation of Rights.]-Declaration arnon by R. H. & Co., upon one J. C., pay, able to and indorsed by defendant. Defendable to and indorsed by defendant. Defend-ant pleaded, J. Payment. 2. An assignment made by J. C. to one T. P., for the benefit of his creditors, with plaintiffs' assent and con-currence, and that T. P., with the consent of J. C. and his other creditors, conveyed and assigned certain property to the plaintiffs, and plaintiffs accepted such conveyance and assignment in full satisfaction of the causes of action in the declaration. The plaintiffs replied, on equitable grounds, that the property assigned was not equal to the whole of J. C's indebtedness to plaintiffs, and that plaintiffs accepted the same on account of such indebtedness with defendant's assent, and that the proceeds of such estate are still applicable to pay a portion of the causes of action against defendant, to wit, £500, with a nolle prosequi as to that portion; and defend-ant promised to pay the residue of defendant's indebtedness to plaintiffs over and above the said 4500. Upon demurrer, held, that the excenting of an assignment by the holder of a bill, without a special reservation of rights as to sureties, discharges them; and that the pleadings shewed it was the plaintiffs' duty duly to administer the assets of J. C., in their hands to be applied upon the bills declared on, and until they had done that no cause of action accrued against the defendant. that was shewn by the pleadings, the assets in plaintiffs' hands might cover the bill sued apon, and therefore the replication was bad. Commercial Bank of Canada v. Wilson, 11 C P 581

Right to Stand in Preferred Creditor's Place. |—E. L., being embarrassed, in June, 1857, assigned his goods, lands, &c., to trustees, giving preference to certain creditors. Afterwards, wishing to resume business, he proposed that the personal estate should be re-conveyed to him, and time given under certain conditions for payment of the debts, the lands being conveyed to two creditors in trust for all. This was agreed to by the trustees and most of the creditors, and reconveyances executed. The plaintiffs were indoresrs on paper of E. L. held by M., a creditor preferred in the first assignment. M. refused to reconvey unless the plaintiffs renewed their liability to him on the paper then evendue, which they did, and M. then signed the re-conveyances. Plaintiffs had afterwards to pay the notes held by M., whereupon they fled their bill, claiming to stand in the place of M. as preferred creditors under the original assignment:—Held, that they could not claim such priority, or the priority provided for them by the first assignment, but must rank pari passu with the other creditors. Lausson v. Maffatt, 10 Gr. 328.

3. Creditors.

(a) Entitled to Rank on Estate or Attack Transactions.

Attacking Assignment.] — Certain creditors, with the concurrence of the debtor, and after notice of an assignment by him of everything for the benefit of his creditors pair justs, entered up judgment, seized goods overed by the assignment, and refused to execute or have anything to do with it. It having been subsequently decided that the assignment was valid as against their esecution, they desired to rank as creditors under the deed, and the trustee refusing to consent, and having divided most of the trust funds amongst the creditors, the excluded creditors filed a bill to have the benefit of the deed, the debtor being willing, and on the coming in of the answers moved for payment into court of the halance in the trustees' hands unappropriated; but the court considered the plaintiffs' equity so doubtful, that they refused the motion with costs. McKey v. Fariek, I Gr. 333.

Attacking Assignment.] — The mere fact that a creditor disputes the validity of an assignment made by his debtor for the general benefit of his creditors, is no ground for the assignee refusing to pay such creditor his dividend out of the money realized from the extate; the assignment having been sustained in the action brought by the creditor to impeach it. The law on this question under assignments for the benefit of creditors prior to 22 Vict. c. 96, and the cases thereunder, considered. Klocyfer v. Gardner, 14 A. R. 60 15 S. C. R. 390; reversing 10 O. R. 415.

Creditor Not Executing.] — A creditor who does not execute an assignment, but does seme act which amounts to acquiescence, is entitled to the benefit of the deed. Pyper v. McDonald, 5 L. J. 162.

Creditor Not Executing.)—The assignment contained three parties, C. B., the assignor, being the party of the first part, the defendants, the assignees, of the second part, and "the several other persons whose names and seals are hereunto subscribed and fixed, creditors of the said C. B., of the third part." No creditor executed the assignment, but the defendants (assignees) admitted part of the plaintiff's claim by letter:—Held, that such admission made him a party to the assignment, although he had not executed it, and that they were liable for money had and received. Burrous v. Gates, S. C. P. 121.

Creditor Not Executing Within Time Limited. |-An assignment was made for the such creditors as should execute within a time named in it. One creditor, instead of executing, sued the debtors, and an interpleader issue having been found against him, a motion for a new trial was refused. Thereupon after the time limited for signing, the trustees allowed him to execute the deed. Upon a bill filed by a creditor who had previously recovered judgment and registered the same against the trust estate, the court de-clared the plaintiff entitled to payment of his claim out of the proceeds of the estate in the hands of the trustees; and that the creditor who had tested the validity of the deed, had thereby forfeited all right to participate in the benefit of the assignment. Joseph v. Bostwick, 7 Gr. 332.

Creditor Not Executing Within Time Limited. |—In a suit instituted by the creditor of the setate of a deceased debtor who had made an assignment for the benefit of his creditors, certain other creditors, who had not signed or accepted the deed of assignment, sought to come in under the decree and partake of the benefit of the trusts. The trust deed had been made in 1857. The assignor had died in 1848, and the assignment was to be executed by the creditors within two months of its date. The accountants declined to receive proof of the claims; and an application in chambers for leave to come in and sign the deed, and participate in the residue of the estate, was refused. Schreiber v. Fraser, 2 Ch. Ch. 271.

Creditor Not Executing Within Time Limited. |- Where a debtor made an assignment to trustees for the benefit of those creditors only who should execute it within one year, or notify the trustees in writing of their assent to it; and where one creditor had been aware of the terms of the deed, and neglected to sign it, but had notified one of the trustees of his assent; and another creditor had not been aware of the deed, but had taken no proceedings hostile to it, and had given his assent it when it came to his knowledge; and another, though aware of the deed and its provision, had neither executed it nor notified the trustees of his assent to it, but had never acted contrary or taken proceedings hostile to it :- Held, that they were entitled to come in and prove their claims equally with those creditors who had executed the deed in accordance with its terms, although they had allowed more than ten years to elapse, being objected that the application was made by petition in chambers, and not by a separate suit:—Held, that it was properly made in chambers by petition in the original suit. The statute of limitations being urged against the admission of the claims:-Held, that the relation of trustee and cestui que trust had been established between the assignees and the creditors who had acquiesced in the deed, as well as those who had actually executed it, and that therefore the statute was inoperative. There was also the additional reason ir two cases that the statute had never begun to run, owing to the creditors' right of action having arisen after the debtor had absconded. Gunn v. Adams, S C. L. J. 211.

Damages.] — A conveyance made by a debtor in good faith, of his assets to pay his existing debts, cannot be impeached by one who at the time has a right of action against him for a tort and subsequently recovers judgment, even though the conveyance is made because of the threatened action. Judgment in 18 O. R. 520, reversed. Cameron v. Cusack, 17 A. R. 489.

Damages.]—One who has a right of action for tort and subsequently recovers judgment is not a creditor within the meaning of the Assignments and Preferences Act, so as to be in a position to attack, under that Act, a transaction entered into by the tort feasor before the action was commenced. Ashley v. Broven, 17 A. R. 500; and see Gurofski v. Harris, 27 O. R. 201; 23 A. R. 710;

Damages.]—A person claiming damages against the assignor for breach of contract is not a creditor within the meaning of the Assignments and Preferences Act. R. S. O. 1887 c. 124, and cannot, after the assignment, bring an action to ascertain the damages and rank for the amount against the estate in the hands of the assignee. Grant v. West, 23 A. R. 7522

Contingent Claim — Advertising Contract.] — Where an estate is being administered under the Assignments and Preferences Act, R. S. O. 1887 c, 124, claims depending upon a contingency cannot rank, but only debts strictly so called. An advertising contract gave the advertiser in consideration of the sum of $1,000 the right to use certain advertising space in a newspaper at any time within twelve months, the advertiser agreeing to pay at the end of each month for the space used in that month, and at the expiration of twelve months, whether the space had been used or not, to pay $1,000 less such sums as might have in the meantime been paid. The advertiser before using any space, and before the expiration of twelve months, made an assignment for the benefit of creditors pursuant to R, S, O, 1875, c. 124;—Held, reversing the judgment below, 28 O, R, 326, that the $1,000 would not not necessarily become due by effluxion of time, and that the newspaper company could not rank, Grant v, West, 23 A, R, 533, applied, Mail Printing Co, v, Clartson, 25 A, R, I.

Loan to Pay Creditor. |—If a person borrow money from an innocent lender, and employs it in preferring a creditor, the lender sis not debarred from suing for its repayment; and if he holds security, such as the mortgage in this case, he can charge the money so lentuce on such security. Court v. Holland, 4 O. R. CSS.

Other Securities, —Where a trust deed for the benefit of creditors contains no release clause, creditors who subsequently sue the settlor on both securities are not thereby precluded from claiming the benefit of the trust deed. Andrews v Maulson, 1 Ch. Ch. 316.

Promissory Note—Indexer—Incomplete Instrument — Suretyship — Maturity atter Assignment for Creditors! — The plaintiffs, being creditors of an incorporated company, accepted an offer made by the company's president in a letter addressed to the plaintiffs to 'personally guarantee payment' of the company's debt, upon an extension of time being given, and, in order to carry out the arrangement, promissory notes were made by the company payable to the order of the plaintiffs, and indorsed by the president, who nade an assignment for the benefit of his creditors, under R. S. O. 1897, c. 147, before the maturity of three of the notes, in respect of which the plaintiffs sought to rank upon his estate in the hands of the defendant as assignee:—Held, following Jenkins v. Coombert, [1808] 2 Q. B. 198, that, upon the Statute of Frauds, no action could be maintained on the notes against the president, as to whom the instrument was incomplete. And although the correspondence and the notes taken together established an agreement of Suretyship, notwithstanding the Statute of Frauds, yet proof could not be made upon such a contract when the notes guaranteed land not matured at the date of the assignment. Grant V. West, 23 A. R. 533, and Purefoy, V. Purefoy, I Vern, 28, followed. Clappetron v. Matchmer, 30 O. R. 559.

Secured Creditor.]—H., a creditor of S., in respect of a debt for which he held security on the lands of S., sought to have a chatted mortgage made by the latter declared void as a fraudulent preference:—Held, that in the absence of proof that the security held by him was inadequate he could not succeed. Clark v. Hamilton Provident and Loan Society, 9 O. R. 173.

Simple Contract Creditor.]—Held, following Macdonald v. McCall, 12 A. R. 593, that a creditor to maintain an action to set aside a mortgage as a fraudulent preference, need not be a judgment creditor. Rue v. Me-Donald, 13 O. R. 352.

Simple Contract Creditors—Debt not Inuc.]— C., who was in insolvent circumstances, made a chattel mortgage of his stockin-trade to the defendants M. & Co., to secure a debt, and afterwards executed a general assignment to the defendant F. for the benefit of his reditor of the first who we thought the defendant F. tiffs, who we those debts were not due, forought this action on behalf of themselves and all other creditors of C. except the defendants M. & Co., to have the mortgage declared void under R. S. O. 1877 c. 118:—Held, affirming 9.0 R. 185, that the mortgage was void under the said statute; that the plaintiffs could maintain the action, and it was no objection that they did not include the mortgages smong the creditors, on whose behalf they professed to sue. Longeway v. Mitchell, 17 Gr. 190, followed. Macdonald v. McCull, 12 A. R. 503; S. C. sub. nom. McCull v. McDonald, 13 S. C. R. 247.

Ideal, also that the circumstances that C's equity of redemption in the goods had been assigned to F. did not deprive the plaintiffs of the right to mutatian the action to avoid the mortgage. The goods having been sold by consent, pending the action, and the money paid into court, the judgment in the court below directed the payment out of the money to F. the assignee, for distribution by him under the trusts of the assignment. The judgment in this particular, was varied on the ground that the goods had not passed to F, by the assignment and the money was left to be dealt with by the court below on application of the parties claiming it. By Unliquidated Claim — Double Value for rholding Tenant.]—A claim for damages against an overholding tenant for double the yearly value of the land under 4 Geo. II. c. 28, s. 1, is an unliquidated claim, and therefore is not provable against an estate in the lambs of an assignee for creditors under R. 8, 0, 1897 c. 147. Magann v. Ferguson, 29 0, IR 235.

Wife.]—Claim by wife of insolvent for money lent and used in his business. See Warner v. Murray, 16 S. C. R. 720.

(b) Proof of Claims.

Action to Enforce Claim.] — Assignment in trust for creditors—Action by creditor squains trustees for plaintiff's claim—Transfer of suit to Chancery—A. J. Act, 1873 ss. 2, 9. See Leys v. Withrow, 38 U. C. H. 601.

Action to Prove Claim—Jurisdiction.]

—An action asking for a declaration of right to rank on an insolvent estate is not within the jurisdiction of the county court, Whidden v. Jackson, 18 A. R. 439.

Claim Known but not Proved.]—A deltor, being unable to pay his creditors in full, unde an assignment to defendant for their benefit. Defendant advertised in the Cutario Gazette and a local paper, under R. S. O. 1877 c. 107, as amended by 46 Vict. c. [1 (O.1., for all creditors to send in their claims and by his clerk sent notices to each creditor from a list furnished by the assignor to said clerk, which list he said must have contained the names of the plaintiffs and C. & Co., who had assigned a claim they had to the plaintiffs. No claim was sent in under the notice by either the plaintiffs or C. & Co., and the defendant distributed the estate without regard to the plaintiffs or C. & Co. At the trial it appeared that defendant had the debtor's books, in which there was a credit to the plaintiffs and C. & Co.: that the debtor told him before he divided the estate that C. & Co. had sued him, and on the day of the division he received a letter from plaintiffs' solicitor notifying him. No proof was given of the posting of the individual notices to either plaintiffs or C. & Co.:—Held, that the defendant had notice of the plaintiffs for their and C. & Co.'s proper dividend on the estate. A trustee is not exomerated by the Act if he had actual notice of the claim before distribution, even though he may have sent the notice prescribed, and received no response to it. Carling Brewing and Malting Co. v. Back, 6 O. R. 441.

Creditor Confined to Affidavit.]—A creditor is confined, in an action to establish his contested claim, to the quantum and items set out in the affidavit of claim filed with the assignee. Grant v. West, 23 A. R. 533.

Form of Judgment.]—Proper form of judgment in an action establishing a right to rank on the estate of an insolvent explained. Grant v. West, 23 A. R. 533.

(c) Rights and Liabilities.

Action by Creditors—Right to Continue after Assignment.] — An action begun by creditors of an insolvent to set aside a transaction in fraud of creditors, before an assignment by the insolvent for the benefit of creditors under R. S. O. 1887 c. 124, can be prosecuted by the creditors after an assignment has been made; for the assignment has not the effect, under s. 7, s.-s. (1), of transferring the existing cause of action to the assigne. Section 7, s.-s. (2), may be read so as to apply to pending litigation instituted by the assignee or into which he has been introduced; and an order was made under that enactment in an action begun by creditors before an assignment, in which the assignee was after the assignment added as a co-plaintiff, authorizing the original plaintiffs and other creditors to continue the action as constituted for their own benefit, upon indemnity to the assignee. Gage v. Douglas, 14 P. R. 126.

Action by Creditors — Repayment by Creditors Paul Out of Turn. —Trustees made payment to one class of creditors over whom another class had priority, without providing for the prior class; and a suit for the administration of the trust estate having been instituted, the creditors paid were ordered to repay, and the unpaid creditors were held entitled to a lien on the trust funds in court in priority to the claims of the trustees, and all subsequent creditors, for debt and costs. Wood v. Brett. 14 Gr. 72.

Action in Assignee's Name—Compromise by Assignee.]—Where a creditor obtains an order under s.-s. 2 of s. 7 of the Assignments and Preferences Act, R. S. O. 1887 c. 124, authorizing him to bring an action in the assignee's name, the action as brought must be such as is justified by the scope of the order. A creditor suing in the name of the assignee under this sub-section cannot attack the bona fides of a compromise, entered into before his action was brought, between the assignee and the defendant, when the defendant cannot be restored to his original position. Whether s.-s. 2 is not confined to cases in which an exclusive right of suing is given to the assignee by s.-s. 1: quaere. Campbell v. Hally, 22 A. R. 217.

Action in Assignee's Name — Amount of Recovery, 1—1f a preferential security is successfully attacked by a creditor suing on his own behalf under an order of the court in the name of the assignee he can recover no more than his own claim and costs. A creditor cannot, after obtaining such an order, increase the amount that he can recover by acquiring the claims of other creditors who have not been willing to take part in the proposed proceedings. The rights of a creditor saing in the assignee's name are not affected by acts done before action by the assignee in his personal capacity. MacTavish v. Rogers, 23 A. R. 17.

Action in Assignee's Name — Undisclosed Assets—Release.] — A creditor may, after an assignment for the benefit of creditors, and after the execution by him and the other creditors of the assigner of a release of their debts in consideration of payment of a composition, bring an action in the assignee's name to recover goods fraudulently concealed by the assignor at the time of the assignment. Such an action may be brought with the assignee's consent in his name without any order under s.s. 2 of s. 7 of the Assignments Act, but without such an order the recovery will be for the benefit of the estate. Doult v. Kopman, 22 A. R. 447.

Action in Assignee's Name—Right of Attacked Creditor to Shape in Proceeds,—When proceedings are taken under s. 7, 8-8, (21, of R. 8. 0, 1887 c. 124, by a creditor, on behalf of himself and all those who, within a limited time, should come in and contribute to the risk and expense of an action to set aside a security held by another creditor, the latter may, while defending his security, join with the attacking creditor in indemnifying the assignee, so that, in the event of his failing to retain his security, he may participate in the fruits of the littgation. Barber v. Crathern. 28 O. R. 6115.

Adding Subsequent Assignce As Plaintiff. |—The action was brought to set aside a conveyance as fraudulent against creditors. The plaintiffs sued on behalf of themselves and all other creditors of the defendant R. W., and began this action in July, 1888. The statement of defence filed in December, 1888, alleged that in August, 1888, R. W. executed an assignment for the benefit of his creditors under 48 Vict. c. 26 (O.), whereby the exclusive right of action became vested in the assignee. In February, 1889, the plaintiffs obtained an order under R. S. O. 1887 c. 124, s. 7, s.-s. 2, giving them leave to take proceedings, in the name of the assignee but for their own exclusive benefit, to set aside the conveyance in question; and then applied for an order adding or substituting the assignee as plaintiff in this action. The consent of the assignee was not filed;—Held, that the assignee could not be filed;—Held, that the assignee could not be added as a plaintiff without his consent in writing being filed, under Con. Rule 324 (b); but that the plaintiffs had the right to proceed under the order they had obtained by bringing a new action in the name of the assignce, to which his consent would not be necessary. Bank of London v. Wallace, 13 P. R. 176.

Administration—Reheaving,1—In a suit for the administration of a debtor's estate under an assignment for the benefit of creditors, creditors who come in under a decree may rehear the cause, and this is the proper course where the alteration is such as might be effected in that way by a party to the cause. Mulholland v, Hamilton, 12 Gr. 413, Attack on Assignment.)—An assignment was made for the benefit of creditors. Some of the creditors signed it; others suad out attachments and placed them in the sheriff's hands. Others obtained executions and sought to enforce them against the signing and attaching creditors. The assignment was submitted to a legal tribunal and declared invalid. The staning creditors applied to have the deed upheld, and the other creditors to pay their own costs:—Held, that the deed should be upheld; and that the attaching creditors having sought to enforce their legal rights should have their costs, but not the execution creditors, they having sought to enforce their priority. Harris v. Beatty, 5 L. J. 18.

Attacking Preference, I—The defendant W., who was an executor under the will of one d., made in favour of himself and the decided of the desired of the second of the desired of the second of trust moves improperly used by W., in breach of trust. W. was at the time this morigange was given, and continued to be, in insolvent circumstances, but had made no assignment for the benefit of his creditors. The plaintiffs, execution creditors of W., attacked the mortgage—Held, that no assignment having been made, an execution creditor might attack the security and take advantage of s. 2 of the Act, R. S. O. 1887 c. 124. Held, that neither H., nor H. and W. as executors, were, in the strict sense of the word, creditors of W., and that the mortgage therefore could not be set aside as having been given with intent to prefer, or as having he effect of preferring, one creditor to another. Molsons Bank v. Halter, 16 A. R. 223, 18 S. C. R. 88.

Composition - Fraud - Contestation of Claim — Dissentient Creditor — Promissory Note—Indorsement. |—An insolvent made a compromise with his creditors, borrowing from his wife the money to pay the composition. She borrowed the money from one of his creditors, agreeing to pay a bonus of a large amount and giving to the creditor for his composition payment and the bonus her promissory notes indorsed by her husband, with a mortgage on her real estate, and a chattel mortgage on his stock, as collateral The creditor signed the composition security. agreement, nothing being said about the bonus to the other creditors, who knew, however, that some arrangement had been made with this creditor for the supply of the necessary The insolvent, after carrying on busifor some time and incurring further liabilities, made an assignment for the benefit of his creditors:-Held, per Burton, C.J.O., agreeing with the judgment of MacMahon, J at the trial, that the transaction with the wife was valid and not a fraud on the composition, and that the creditor was entitled to rank upon the notes against the estate in the hands of the assignee as far as this question was concerned. But the notes in question having been made by the insolvent's wife, payable to the creditors. The and thing been indorsed the creditors of the and thing been indorsed the creditor of the angular than the creditor contains the court, that the insolvent was not liable as indorser and that the creditor condit not rank on his estate. Semble, per Barton, C.J.O. An objection on either ground to such a claim to rank cannot be taken under s. 9 of the Act by a dissentient creditor for his own benefit against the wishes of the assignor and the majority of the creditors, and an order purporting to be made under that section allowing the dissentient creditor for contest the claim in the assignce's name is invalid. Small v. Henderson, 27 A. R. 492.

Death of Assignee—Subsequent Action by Creditor. —Where an assignment under the statute had been made to a sheriff, who died shortly after, and proceedings were subsequently taken in their own names by judgment creditors of the assignor to set aside a transfer of property as fraudulent:—Held, that the plaintiffs, suig alone, had no locus standi to maintain the action. Brown v. Groce, 18 O. R. 311.

Duty to Give Information—Costs.]—Where a bond fide transaction takes place between a failing debtor and a favoured creditor, it is the duty of the creditor to employ all practicable means to free the transaction from undeserved suspicion, and afford to the other creditors reasonable satisfaction, as to the moral character of the transaction; and, if this duty is neglected, the favoured creditor may have to bear his own costs of afterwards establishing the transaction, if impeached in this court by the other creditors whom it disappointed. Healey v. Dinaich, 14 Gr. 633.

Election of Remedies — Inconsistent Remedies. — A creditor cannot take the benefit of the consideration for a transfer of goods and at the same time attack the transfer as fraudulent. An assignee for the benefit of creditors has no higher right in this respect. A creditor suning in the mame of the assignee obtained judgment against third persons, for the payment to him as part of the debtor's estate of the proceeds of promissory notes given to the latter for part of the purchase money of his stock-in-trade:—Held, that it was then too late for him to attack the safe transfer in the payment of the process of the process of the proceeds of promissory notes given to the latter for part of the purchase money of his stock-in-trade:—Held, that it was then too late for him to attack the safe payment of the process of the proces Estoppel.]—A creditor who attended a meeting of creditors after the execution of a deed of assignment, and assented to be appeared an inspector to nid the assignee in winding up the estate was—Held estopped from afterwards denying the validity of the assignment. Gardner v. Kloepfer, 7 O. R. 603, See Kloepfer v. Gardner, 14 A. R. 60, 15 S. C. R. 303.

Estoppel.]—As to the effect of receipt of a dividend See Miller v. Hamlin, 2 O. R. 103; Beemer v. Oliver, 10 A. R. 656.

Preferred Creditors—Money Paid under Voidable Assignment — Levy and Sale

under Execution.]—Where an assignment has been held void as against the statute, 13 Eliz. c. 5, and the result of such decision is that a creditor who had subsequently obtained judgment against the assignor, and, notwithstanding the assignment, sold all the debtor's personal property so transferred, becomes entitled to all the personal property of the assignor levied upon by him under his execution, such creditor has no legal right and no equity to an account or to follow moneys received by the assignee or paid by him under such assignment in respect to which he has not secured a prior claim by taking the necessary proceedings to make them exigible. Cummings 48 Sons v. Taylor, 28 S. C. R. 337.

Purchase of Assets.]—Semble, that a private sale by an assignee to any creditor, without the consent of the others, would be open to objection. Thompson v. Clarkson, 21 O. R. 421.

Purchase of Insolvent Estate -Liability to Account. —An insolvent trader having made an assignment of all his estate for the benefit of his creditors, under R. S. O. 1887 c. 124, his stock-in-trade was purchased by his wife from the assignee: the defendants, who were creditors of his, and one of them the sole inspector of the estate, becoming re-sponsible to the assignee for payment of the purchase money, and, by a secret arrangement made beforehand, receiving security from the wife upon the goods purchased by her, not only for the amount for which they had be-come responsible, but also for the full amount of their claims as creditors of the full amount of their claims as creditors of the husband. In an action by another creditor for an account:—Held, that the estate was entitled to the benefit of whatever advantage the de-fendants derived from the transaction, and that they should account to the assignee the difference between the amount of their claims and the amount they would have re-ceived by way of dividend from the estate:— Held, also, that the assignee was a necessary party to the action. Segmenth v. Anderson, 23 O. R. 573. Upon appeal to the court of appeal this judgment was reversed, 21 A. R. appeal this judgment was reversed, 1 3. K.
242, but upon further appeal to the supreme court of Canada the plaintiffs were held entitled to relief and the defendants were ordered to account for the profit, if any, derived by them from the transaction. 24 S. C. R. 699.

Surplus After Settlement by Certain Creditors.]—A trust was created for the benefit of creditors pro rata, in consideration of their discharging the debtor; all the creditors, except the plaintiffs, accepted from two creditors who had become responsible for the fidelity of the trustee, twenty-five per cent, of their demands in full: the estate yielded more:—Held, that the plaintiffs had no right to the whole of the difference. Baldwin v. Thomas, 15 Gr. 119.

(d) Valuing Security.

Accommodation Maker of Note.]—A partner who has individually joined as a maker in a promissory note of his firm for their accommodation is not "indirectly or secondarily liable" for the firm to the holder within the meaning of 59 Vict. c. 22. s. 1, s.-s. 1, but is primarily liable, and in claiming against his insolvent estate in administration the holder need not value his security in respect to the firm's liability. Bell v. Ottawa Trust and Deposit Company, 28 O. R. 519.

Bank Notes Discounted by Customer.]-The debtor agreed with the Bank of Montreal for a line of credit to be secured by the discount of certain bills and notes which he had himself discounted, and which he indorsed and delivered to the bank. He also arranged with the Merchants' Bank to discount his own notes to be secured by the deposit of his customers' notes as collateral. He then failed, being largely indebted to both banks, and made an assignment for the general benefit of his creditors. In proving their claims on his estate before the assignee, the banks contended that they were only bound to give credit on the amount of their claims for sums received on the collateral securities up to the date of the assignment. In an action by another creditor, entitled to share under the assignment, against the banks and the assignee, it was held, following Rhodes v. Moxhay, 10 W. R. 103, that a reditor is entitled to prove for the whole amount of his debt, and to take a dividend upon the whole, without prejudice to his rights against securities he may hold, subject to the qualification that he must not ultimately receive more than 20s, in the £. The state of the accounts, at the time the claim is put in, is that which forms the basis of the dividend sheet, and the amount is to be fixed by the assignee, as at that date. Any moneys re-ceived prior to that from collaterals are to be credited; those received afterwards from such sources need not to be taken into account, unless they, with the dividend, bring up the amount received by the creditor to 100 cents on That substantially both banks were fn the same position as to the securities in their hands. That there was a distinct contheir hands. That there was a distinct con-tract for a line of credit to the debtor by the Bank of Montreal, and as long as that line was not exceeded, the bank could prove on the footing of that contract as the original debt, and hold the customers' notes discounted in pursuance of it as securities. Eastman v. Bank of Montreal, 10 O. R. 79.

Chattel Mortgage.]—The plaintiff, the holder of a chattel mortgage with a covenant for payment, was not scheduled in proceedings in insolvency under the Act of 1875, but he was aware of the proceedings, and the insolvent obtained a final discharge:—Held, that the debt under the chattel mortgage was not extinguished. A subsequent common law assignment for the benefit of creditors was made by the debtor of all his property to the defendant in trust to pay expenses, &c., and "to apply the balance in or towards payment of the debts of the assignor in proportion to their respective amounts without preference or priority:—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to sue for the whole, and that he was not bound to value his security and rank for the balance only. Beaty v. Samuel, 29 Gr. 105.

Chattel Mortgage—Collocation—Joint and Neveral Liabhility,—A creditor who by way of security for his debt holds a portion of the assets of his debtor, consisting of certain goods and promissory notes indorsed over to him for the purpose of effecting a piedge of the securities, is not entitled to be collocated upon the estate of such debtor in liquidation under a voluntary assignment for the full amount of his claim, but is obliged to deduct any sum of money he may have received from other parties liable upon such notes or which he may have realized upon the goods. Benning v. Thibeaudeau, 20 S. C. R. 110.

Distinct Securities for Distinct Debts.]—W. made an assignment to trustees for the benefit of his creditors prior to 1884. In July, 1884, H. filed a claim against the estate, claiming (1) upon two mortgages on land: (2) upon an open account and certain notes made by W.; (3) upon certain notes made by T. in favour and for the ac-commodation to W., and indorsed and deliv-ered by W. to H. as a general collateral security for W.'s indebtedness to H. After filing the claim the mortgage debts were paid to II, who had thereupon assigned the mortgages, and the T. notes were also paid by T. to H., and T. had thereupon filed a claim in respect to them against W.'s estate, and received a dividend thereon. The mortgages had been given to secure payment of entirely sepa rate and isolated debts from W. to H. afterwards made an assignment to trustees for his creditors, and these latter brought this action, claiming that notwithstanding all the above circumstances, they were still entitled to rank on, and receive a dividend from, the W. estate on the whole of the above indebtedness, and on H.'s claim as originally filed :- Held, that as to the mortgage debts they were not entitled to receive a dividend, these being separate and distinct debts, but that as to the other indebtedness, they were still entitled to rank for the full amount, notwithstanding the payment in full of the T. notes, on the authority of Eastman v. Bank of Montreal, 10 O. R. 79, provided that they did not in all receive more than 100 cents on the dollar; and this did not prevent T. also ranking in respect to the sum he had paid as accommodation maker. Young v. Spiers, 16 O. R. 672.

Where a mortgagee is also a creditor in resect to a simple contract debt, he cannot tack the simple contract debt to the mortgage debt, and the creditor does not by reason of his debtor having made an assignment for the benefit of his creditors, acquire any higher position in this respect than he occupied at the time of or immediately prior to the assignment. Ib.

Dividend from Another Estate.]-The plaintiffs supplied the debtor with goods on a guarantee. The guarantor made an assignment for the benefit of creditors under 48 Vict. c. 26 (O.) The debtor assigned in like manner a few days after. The plaintiffs proved their claim for the full amount on the guarantor's estate, and stated that they held as security their claim against the debtor's estate, but did not value it. The debtor effected a composi-tion with her creditors, and gave composition notes therefor. The guarantor's assignee refused to pay a dividend to plaintiffs they had valued their security on the debtor's estate. Upon a special case being stated for the opinion of the court, it was held, that by the debtor's assignment his estate was placed in custodia legis, protected from judgments and executions, and made available for the creditors who were thus potentially seized of their proper proportion of the assets. original personal claim was thus transmitted into a claim in rem, and so could fairly be regarded as in the nature of a security, which the plaintiffs were bound to value under s. 18, 8, 8, 4 (b). Wyld v. Clarkson, 12 O. R. 589.

Guarantee. |-A deceased person, of whom the plaintiff was executor, gave the defendants a guarantee in respect of goods sold and to be sold to another in the following terms:—"I hereby undertake to guarantee you against all loss in respect of such goods sold or to be sold, provided I shall not be called on in any event to pay a greater sum than $2,500." The principal debtor being indebted to the defendants in $5,500, made an assignment under R. S. O. 1887 c. 124, and the defendants filed a claim with the assignee but did not in the affidavit proving the claim state whether they held any security or not. At a later date the plaintiff paid the defendants the $2,500 and filed a claim with the assignee. The dividends from the estate were insufficient to pay the balance of the defendants' claim:—Held, that the guaranty was not a security which the defendants were required to value under the Act, and that the omission from their claim of a piece of information which could not affect it did not render it invalid:—Held, also, that this was a guaranty, not of part, but of the whole of the debt, limited in amount to $2,500, that is a guaranty of the ultimate balance after all other sources were exhausted; and the plaintiff was not entitled to rank upon the estate in respect of the $2,500, nor to recover any part of any dividend which the defendants had received. Hobson v. Bass, L. R. 6 Ch. 792, distinguished; and Ellis v. Eman-uel, 1 Ex. D. 157, followed. Martin v. Mc-Mullen, 19 O. R. 230.

Reversed 20 O. R. 257; restored 18 A. R. 559.

Party Primarily Liable.]—The provision of s. 20 of the Assignments Act, R. S. O. 1867, 1417, that "every creditor in his proof the state whether he holds any security shall state whether he holds any security is on the estate of the chorr, or on the estate of a third party for whom such debtor is only secondarily liable, he shall put a specified value thereon," means that if, as between the debtor and the third party, the latter is primarily liable, and the debtor only secondarily liable, the creditor must put a specified value upon his security. The substance not the form of the transaction is to be looked at, to ascertain whether the third party is primarily liable; and if it be found that he is, the debtor is then only secondarily liable.

Right of Retainer.] — Under their father's will, two of his sons were to receive a share of the proceeds of certain land to be sold on the death of his widow, who was still alive. They also owed the testator a certain debt, which, by the will, was to be payable in five yearly instalments from the time of his death. About two years subsequent thereto the sons made an assignment for the benefit of their creditors under R. S. O. 1887 c. 124; — Held, (1) that the effect of the assignment was by virtue of s. 20, s.-s. 4, of that Act, to accelerate payment of the debt due to the extate. (2) That the executors, being also trustees of the land of which the sons were to receive shares when sold under the will, held security for their claim within the meaning of that Act, having (because of the Devo lution of Estates Act) the right to impound the sons' shares under the will as against their debt to the estate. This security the executors and trustees should value pursuant to R. S. O. 1887 c. 124. Tillie v. Springer, 21 O. R. 589.

4. Execution and Requisites of Assignments.

Affidavit of Bona Fides.]—It is no objection to the affidavit of bona fides of an assignment of goods that the commissioner prepared the assignment. Noell v. Pell, 7 L. J. 322.

Affidavit of Bona Fides—Preferences— Distribution of Assets—Arbitration — Conditions of Deed—Statute of Elizabeth—13 Eliz. c. 5.]—Maguire v. Hart, 28 S. C. R. 272.

Assent of Creditors.]—A trader, who was in embarrassed circumstances, made an assignment for the benefit of creditors of all his estate, real and personal, to the plaintiff, who held a mortzage on a part of the realty as security against his indorsement for the assignor of notes then current. No creditor joined in the conveyance, nor was the consent to or knowledge of it by any creditor shewn:—Held, that the property was liable to seizure under execution, for under the mortgage the trustee was not a creditor; but—semble, that had the trustee been beneficially interested in the proceeds of the property, his assent would have rendered the deed irrevocable. Cooper v. Dison, 10 A. R. 50. Sec Andrew v. Stuart, 6 A. R. 495.

Assent of Creditors. |—A conveyance of property for the benefit of creditors may create a valid and irrevocable trust, although none of the creditors are either parties or privy to the deed; and when in its inception it is not so, subsequent dealings or communications between the debtor or his trustees and the creditors may render the trusts irrevocable. Goodeve v. Manners, 5 Gr. 114.

Assent of Creditors, |—If the assignee he not a creditor, the assignment is void against an execution coming in before any creditor has executed. Maulson v. Topping, 17 U. C. R. 183.

Assent of Creditors.]—The mere fact that certain creditors had notice of an assignment does not make the deed irrevocable. Spooner v. Jones, 3 Ch. Ch. 481.

Where the assignee afterwards re-conveyed to the grantor, some of whose creditors had been informed of such assignment, but had done no act to alter their position, and the land was afterwards sold for taxes:—Held, that the assignment was revoked, and did not affect the title. Ib.

Assent of Creditors.]—The meaning of R. S. O. 1887 c. 124, s. 3, s. 2, is that an assignment executed without the consent of the requisite number of creditors shall have the same effect as if it had been executed with such consent until and unless it be superseded by an assignment executed with such consent; and the words which occur through the Act, "an assignment for the general benefit of creditors under this Act," are to be governed by this construction:—Held, therefore, that a sheriff who had seized goods of insolvent

debtors under execution was not justified in refusing to give them up to the debtors' assignee, who was not a sheriff, and the assignment to whom had not been assented to by the number of creditors required by R. S. O. 1887 c. 124, s. 3; but held, also, that as the goods were covered by a chattle mortgage, the sheriff could set up the rights of the mortgage in answer to an action by the assignee to restrain the sale of the goods under the execution. The assignce having failed in the action, because the mortgage's rights disentitled him to succeed, and the sheriff having contested the assignce's rights on the other ground, which was declared to be untenable, no costs were given to either party. Anderson v. Glass, 16 O. R. 532;

Assent of Greditors, 1—1t is sufficient under R. S. O. 1887 c. 124, s. 3, s.cs. 5, if the consent of creditors to an assignment is given subsequently to the assignment being made, provided that it is given before any assignment is made to the sheriff of the county. Hall v. Fortye, 17 O. R. 435.

Assent of Greditors.]—Where such an assignment has been acted upon by the creditors, it is not open to the objection, even if made by an execution creditor, that no creditor executed it. Cooper v. Dixon, 10 A. R. 50, distinguished. Ball v. Tennant, 25 O. R. 50. Reversed in appeal on another ground, 21 A. R. 662.

Assent of Creditors. —An assignment for the benefit of creditors is reveable until the creditors either execute or otherwise assent to it. Where creditors refused to accept the benefit of an assignment under R. S. O. c. 124, and the assignment under R. S. O. c. 124 and the assignment had not been registered, an action for damages was properly brought in the name of the assignor against a mortgage of his stock in trade who sold the goods in an improper manner. Rennie v. Block, 26 S. C. R. 356.

Bills of Sale Act.]—Held, overruling Robertson v. Thomas, 8 o. R. 20, that assignments for the benefit of creditors were until 48 Vict. c. 26 (O.), within the Act relating to Chattel Mortgages and Bills of Sale, R. 8. O. 1877 c. 119. Whiting v. Horcy, 13 A. R. 7. See also S. C., sub nom. Hovey v. Whiting, 14 S. C. R. 515.

Company.)—The directors of a joint stock company formed under 32 & 33 Vict. c. 13 (D.), cannot, without being authorized by their shareholders, make a voluntary assignment in insolvency. Ponly v. Holmwood, 30 C. P. 240; 4 A. R. 455.

Company.)—The directors of an incorporated trading company have power to authorize the execution of an assignment for the benefit of creditors of the company, and the defendants, execution creditors, as strangers to the company, cannot object that the authority of the shareholders was not given or that they had not ratified the deed. Donly v. Holmwood. 4 A. R. 555, distinguished. Whiting v. Horey, 13 A. R. S. Affrined by supreme court, sub nom. Hovey v. Whiting, 14 S. C. R. 575.

Description of Property.]—See Nolan v. Donnelly. 4 O. R. 440; Whiting v. Hovey, 13 A. R. 7.

Execution by Trustees.]—Execution by all the trustees is not absolutely necessary for the validity of an assignment. Haight v. Munro, 9 C. P. 462.

Filing Copy.]—Under 20 Vict. c. 3, a copy of an absolute assignment or bill of sale may be filed, as well as of a mortgage. See Carseallen v. Moodic, 15 U. C. R. 92; Harris v. Commercial Bank, 16 U. C. R. 437.

Form of Affidavit.]—The affidavit stated that the assignment was not made for the purpose of enabling the assignor (instead of the assignee) to hold the goods against creditors:—Held, bad. Semble, that assignees in trust for creditors cannot properly take the affidavit required by 13 & 14 Viet. c. 62. Olmstead v. Smith, 15 U. C. 18, 421.

Form of Affidavit.]—An affidavit that the assignment was made bona fide, omitting the words "for good consideration:"—Held, had, Mason v. Thomas, 23 U. C. R. 205.

the words "for good consideration;"—Held, bad. Mason v, Thomas, 23 U. C. R. 305. That it was made "for the purposes and trusts therein set forth," and not for the purpose of holding &c., "the estate and effects," mentioned therein, instead of "the goods," as in the statute:—Held, sufficient. Ib.

Goods in Bond—Household Furniture— Change of Possession.]—See Carscallen v. Moodie, 15 U. C. R. 92; Harris v. Commercial Bank, 16 U. C. R. 437.

Partner.]—Held, that one co-partner in trade cannot, without the express consent of his co-partner, execute a deed disposing of all the stock-in-trade, effects, and assets of the firm to a trustee to dispose of the same for the general benefit of the creditors of the partnership. Cameron v. Stevenson, 12 C. P. 389.

Partner.]—A partner of a mercantile firm has no power, either during the existence or after the dissolution of a partnership, to make an assignment of the property and effects of the firm to a trustee for the benefit of creditors. Stevenson v. Brown, 9 L. J. 110.

Partner. —The assignment in this case was executed by one partner, at the request of his co-partner, in the partnership name, and was made at the request of several creditors:—Held, that the assignment was properly executed, and that there was sufficient assent of the creditors. Notan v. Donnelly, 4 O, R, 440.

Partner.]—The assignment was executed by one of the partners for a co-partner under verbal instructions from the co-partner before leaving for England to sign for him, if an assignment became necessary; and also under a cablegram received from him while in England, to the same intent:—Held, that though authority to execute a deed must be by deed, this would not affect goods of which the assignee took actual possession, namely the stockinstrade in the assignors' store; nor goods warehoused for and held by a bank, where the bank was notified and agreed to hold the surplus, after paying the bank's claim, for the assignee, which was equivalent to taking possession, and which were the only goods in question here. Netles v. Matlby, 5 O. R. 263.

Registration.]—Registry Act, 35 Geo. 111. c. 5. See Accson v. Eastwood, 4 U. C. R. 271.

Registration.]—An assignment or sale of personal property upon trust to pay creditors for upon other trusts) is within the statutes requiring registration. Hencurd v. Mitchell, 11 U. C. R. 625.

Held, that the assignment in this case (the particulars of which are set out in the report) must be considered as an absolute sale, not a mortgage, and therefore did not require to be relied under 12 Vict. c. 74. Ib.

Relating Back.]—Where an assignment for the benefit of creditors is filed within the five days allowed by law, it relates back to its date, so as to prevent the effect of an execution placed in the sheriff's hands within the five days. Melanes v. Benedict, 8 L. J. 22.

5. Inspectors.

Disposing of Estate.]—The inspectors of an insolvent estate have no power, unless specially authorized by the creditors, to bind the latter by anything they do in disposing of the estate. The disposal of it is in the hands of the creditors, and in default of directions by them, in the hands of the Judge of the county court. Marrison v. Watts, 19 A. 15, 622.

Payment for Consent.]—An agreement for a payment to an inspector of an insolvent estate to influence his consent to an arrangement which is not for the general benefit of the creditors is a bribe, which is, in itself, sufficient reason to adjudge the transaction, to induce which it was given, corrupt, fraudulent, and void. Brigham v. Banque Jacques Carlier, 30 S. C. R. 429.

Purchase by Inspector—Trust.] — An inspector of an insolvent estate is a person having duties of a fiduciary nature to perform in respect thereto, and he cannot be allowed to become purchaser, on his own account, of any part of the estate of the insolvent. Davis v. Kerr. 17 S. C. R. 235, followed. Gastonguay v. Naroic, 29 S. C. R. 613.

Purchase of Estate.]—An inspector of an insolvent estate, appointed by the creditors under R. S. O. 1887 c. 124, who acts towards the assignee in an advisory capacity, cannot become a purchaser of the estate at a private sale thereof. Thompson v. Clarkson, 21 O.

Sec. also. Segsworth v. Anderson, 23 O. R. 573, 21 A. R. 242, 24 S. C. R. 699.

6. Liens, Executions, and Privileged Claims.

Attachment of Debt.]—An assignment for the benefit of creditors by a primary debtor after a garnishing summons has been duly served upon him and the garnishee, and judgment has been obtained thereon against the debtor, does not intercept or take precedence of the attachment of the debt, and the primary creditor may obtain judgment against, and enforce payment thereof by, the garnishee. Wood v. Joselin, 18 A. R. 59.

Attachment of Debt.]—An assignment by an insolvent for the general benefit of his creditors does not oust a prior attachment by a creditor of the insolvent of a debt due to him. Wood v. Joselin, 18 A. R. 59, followed. Re Thompson, 17 P. R. 257.

Costs of Pending Proceedings.]—A petition was presented by the husband of D. to the petition was presented by the husband of D. to the petition be wife a lumatic, which was possed by the petition D. I was a perition of the petition D. The court dismissed the petition. D. The court dismissed the petition of D. S. so the payment by the assignee in priority to the claims of the creditors:—Held, that the costs of opposing the petition might be classed as necessaries which the wife is liable to pay out of her separate estate, and for which that estate is liable in the hands of her assignee, but that they could not be put on the footing of maintenance. Such costs should be paid ratably out of the assets, and costs subsequent to the assignment should not rank in competition with creditors before the assignment. Re Dumbrill, 10 P. R. 216.

Company—President and Vice-President —Wages—Priority,—Claims for arrears of salary, made by persons occupying the position of president and vicusying the position of president and vicusying the position of president and company, such salary being made payable under resolutions duly passed therefor, are valid; and upon the liquidation of the company are payable in priority to the claims of the general body of creditors. Fayne v.
Langley, 31 O. R. 254.

Grown.]—On the 3rd February, ISS7, R., a coal merchant, made an assignment to the plaintiff for the benefit of his creditors. At the time of this assignment there was due by B. a large sum for duty on coal that had been previously imported by him and sold. The Crown claimed payment from the plaintiff, as assignee of B., of the amount due for duties in priority to the payment of the claims of the general creditors of the estates. Held, that the Crown was not entitled to such priority and that if it elected to come in under the assignment it was bound by the terms thereof and could take only ratably and proportionately with the other creditors, Clarkson v. Attorney-ficiencial of Canada, 15 O. R. 632, 16 A. R. 202.

By an agreement entered into before action, the Crown was placed in the same position as if a writ of extent had been issued against B. on the 19th February, 1887, for the recovery of the duty payable by B:—Held, that a writ of extent so issued would have availed the Crown nothing as far as any property covered by the assignment was concerned. Ib.

Execution.]—A writ of fi. fa. against the lands of one H. had been in the sheriff's hands since 1880. In 1887 the sheriff sold under it and received the purchase money. Afterwards, and before payment over by the sheriff to the execution creditors, H. assigned for the henefit of his creditors under R. S. O. 1887 c. 124. The assignee then claimed the accept in the sheriff s hands:—Held, that the first hands in the sheriff s hands:—Held, that the first hands in the second second of the se

O. 1887 c. 124, before certain prior execution creditors land established their claims in the Master's Office to the balance of purchase money, after satisfying the amount of the mortgage:—Held, that the assignee for creditors was entitled to such balance freed from any liability to satisfy the executions out of it. Carter v. Stone, 20 O. R. 340.

Execution. — Under R. S. O. 1887 c. 124, s. 9, the costs for which the execution creditor has a lien are the costs not of the execution only but all the usual costs which could be recovered from the debtor under an execution. Ryan v. Clarkson, 16 A. R. 311, 17 S. C. R. 251.

Execution. |—The lien of a plaintiff for corts by virtue of s. 9 of R. S. O JAST c. 124, under an execution in the sheriff's hands, against an insolvent, at the time of an assignment by him for the benefit of creditors under that statute, is not superseded by such assignment, and the sheriff is entitled to proceed and sell for the amount of such costs. If he does not do so, and the plaintiff loses his lien:—Held, per Armour, C. J., that he is not entitled to rank on the insolvent's estate as a preferential creditor. Per Street, J.—That even if so entitled, it could only be on the net funds available after payment of the proper charges incurred in the management of the estate. Gillard v. Millipan, 28 O. R. 645.

Judgment.|—The precedence given to an assimment for the general benefit of creditors by R. S. O. 1887 c. 124, s. 9, over "all judgments and all executions not completely executed by payment." does not extend to a judgment for almony registered under R. S. O. 1887 c. 44, s. 30, against the lands of a defendant prior to the registration of an assignment by him; and a plaintiff in such a judgment is not obliged to rank with the other creditors of the defendant. Abraham v. Abraham, 19 O. R. 256; 18 A. R. 436.

Lien.] — The plaintiff was employed to manufacture bricks for another in a brickyard belonging to the latter, of which, however, the plaintiff held possession for the purpose of his contract, and remained and was in possession of the bricks at the time of their seizure by the sheriff under an execution against the owner of the brickyard, who, immediately after such seizure, made an assignment for the benefit of creditors:—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to a lieu upon the bricks in priority to the execution and assignment for the benefit of creditors, and also in priority to the claim of a chattel mortgagee, though his mortgage covered brick in course of manufacture during its continuance. Roberts v. Bank of Toronto, 25 O. R. 194; 21 A. R. 629.

Rent. |- The defendant made a lease under seal to R., dated the 8th November, 1884, for five years from the 12th November, at the rent of 8400, payable half-yearly in advance on the 12th November, and May, in each on the 12th November, and May, in on the 12th November, and May, in year. The lease contained a covenant that, year, and assignment for if the lessee shall make any assignment for the benefit of creditors, * the said term shall immediately become forfeited and void, and the full amount of the current yearly rent shall be at once due and payable." R. paid shall be at once due and payable. R. paid the first half-year's rent. On the 5th May, 1885, R. made an assignment for the benefit of greditary. of creditors; and on the 8th May, the defendant, claiming to do so under the above coven-ant, distrained for the half-year's rent, which, in the regular course of time, would have been in the regular course of time, would have been payable in advance on the 12th May:—Heid, that the distress was valid; for that under the above covenant it might be held that the money reserved as rent accrued due at the same instant as the lease terminated, and not thereafter; but, even if that construction could not be given to it, the distress would nevertheless be valid, although made for money claimed for rent falling due after the expiration of the term, by reason of the lessee's express personal covenant declaring and constituting the sum as rent; and the covenant, which was binding on the tenant, was equally binding on the plaintiff as his assignee. Graham v. Lang, 10 O. R. 248.

Rent.]-Defendants, in 1881, by indenture under the Short Forms Act, leased certain premises to O., for ten years, at a yearly rent, payable quarterly in advance, with a covenant that if the lease should be taken in execution, or if the lessees should make an assignment for the benefit of creditors, the lease should immediately become forfeited and void, and the next ensuing one year's rent should be at once due and payable. There was also a proviso for re-entry on non-payment of rent, or seizure or forfeiture of the term for any of the causes aforesaid. In August, 1883, O. assigned to B., as trustee for the benefit of creditors, who went into possession, whereupon defendants distrained for six months' rent then in arrear, and one year's rent payable in consequence of the assignment. Three executions were soon after placed in the sheriff's hands, and the solicitors for the plaintiffs under the first and third executions paid the rent claimed to prevent the sale of the goods rent claimed to prevent the sale of the goods by defendants and B., though not admitting defendants' right to it. The sheriff after-wards sold for less than the executions, and repaid the solicitors:—Held, that the distress was illegal, for the statute 8 Anne c. 14, s. 6, applies only to cases where the tenancy has been determined by lapse of time, and not by forfeiture; and that the plaintiff B. was entitled to recover the amount received by defendants. Graham v. Lang, 10 O. R. 248, not followed. Per Armour, J.—The year's rent became due only by virtue of the forfeiture, the distress was an unequivocal act indicating the intention to forfeit, and evidence of each an intention previously formed; so that before the distress defendants had elected to treat the term as forfeited, and having done so their right to distrain was at an end. Moreover they had not distrained during the possession of the tenants from whom the rent became due, and even if defendants had a right to distrain, the provision making one year's rent payable was fraudulent as against creditors:—Quere, per Wilson, C.J., as to this later point. Per Armour, J.—The execution creditors for whom the money was paid, in order to enable the sheriff to seize under their executions, might also recover; Wilson, C.J., doubting. But held by the court of appear that the money so paid could not be recovered hack, either by the execution creditors, on whose behalf it was paid, or by B. as assignee, Boher v. Atkinson, II O. R. 755; 14 A. R.

Rent.] — The tenant of certain freehold premises executed an assignment under 48 Vict. c. 26 (O.), and afterwards, but before passession of the tenant's property had been taken by the assignee, or such property removed from the demised premises, the landlord distrained for arrears of rent past due before the making of the assignment:—Held, that the landlord's right of distress was not affected by the assignment:—Held, also, that goods so assigned were not to be therefore deemed in custodia legis. Eacrett v. Kent, 15 O. R. 9.

Rent. |— B., by lease dated the 28th November, 1887, was lessee for five years from the 1st February, 1888, of certain premises at a yearly rental of $370, payable quarterly in edgance, the lease containing a presiston of the property of Rent — Acceleration Clause — "Current Quarter."]—By a lease made on the 31st October, 1895, certain premises were demisel for a term of three years from the 1st Novem-ber, 1895, at a yearly rent of $480, payable, in advance, in even portions monthly on the first day of each month, the first payment to be made on the 1st November, 1895. The lease contained the usual statutory covenants and provisoes, and an express power of entry and distress for rent in arrear, and also the fellowing provision:—"If the lessee shall make any assignment for the benefit of creditors * * * the then current quarter's rent shall immediately become due and pay-able." On the 31st January, 1896, the lessor, who also held a chattel mortgage on the goods on the demised premises as collateral security for the payment of certain indebtedness of the lessees, took possession both as mortgagee and by way of distress for rent in arrear, only $40 having up to that time been paid to her on account of rent. On the same day the lessees made an assignment for the benefit the lessees made an assignment for the benefit of creditors and by consent the goods on the demised premises, which were of far more value than $200, were sold by the lessor and were removed from the demised premises before the last day of February. The lessor retained out of the proceeds of the goods $200, were few December 1895, and Langary, Edw. tained out of the proceeds of the goods $200, rent for December, 1895, and January, February, March and April, 1896;—Held, per Burton, C.J.O., and Maclennan, J.A.—That s.-s. 1 of s. 3 of 58 Vict. c. 26 (O.), now R. S. O. 1897 c. 170, s. 34, s.-s. I, is a restrictive provision, and limits the landlord's lien even though in the lease under which he claims there is an acceleration clause wider in its there is an acceleration clause wider in its terms than the statutory provision, and that it does not give to the landlord an absolute right to three months' rent upon an assign-ment for the benefit of creditors being made. Clarke v. Reid, 27 O. R. 618, disapproved, Per Burton, C.J.O.—That the acceleration clause in the lease in question had no application, though even if the words "current quarter" could be read "current three quarter" could be read "current three months" the clause would not help the lessor, as the current three months ended on the 31st January, 1896; but that a lessor apart from an acceleration clause is entitled to the rent, not exceeding three months' rent in advance, which becomes in arrear while the assignee remains in possession and while there are sufficient goods on the demised premises subsufficient goods on the demised premises subject to distress, so that in this case the lessor was entitled to the rent which fell due on the 1st February, 1896. Per Osler, J.A.—That the acceleration clause in the lease had no application, but that if it had, then a quarter's rent became in arrear under it within three months after the assignment for the benefit of creditors and while the assignee was in possession and there were sufficient goods upon the demised premises subject to distress. upon the demised premises subject to distress, so that the lessor would be entitled to the amount claimed; but that apart from an amount claimed; but that apart from an acceleration clause a lessor is entitled to the rent which becomes in arrear subsequent to the assignment and for three months thereafter, whether there are goods subject to distress or not, so that in this case the lessor was entitled to the rent which fell due on the 1st February, 1st March, and 1st April, 1896. Per Maclennan, J.A.—That "curreut quarter" in the acceleration clause meant a quarter of a year, or three months, but that the clause did not avail in this case because the current three months ended on the 1st February, 1836; but that a lessor, apart from an acceleration clause, is entitled to the rent, not exceeding three months' rent in advance, which becomes in arrear while the assigneremains in possession and while there are sufficient goods on the demised premises subject to distress, so that in this case the lessor was entitled to the rent which fell due on the 1st February, 1896. In the result the judgment below allowing the lessor rent for the months of February, March, and April, was varied by disallowing rent for March and April, Marquey v. Meir, 25 A. R. 372.

Rent—No Distrainable Effects.]—A landlord has no preferential claim for rent against an estate in the hands of an assignee for creditors if there were no distrainable goods on the premises at the time of the assignment. Magann v. Ferguson, 29 O. R. 235.

Rent-Distress.]-By the terms of a lease shop premises, the rent was payable quarterly in advance. There was also a proviso in the lease that if the lessee should make any assignment for the benefit of creditors, the then current quarter's rent should immediately become due and payable and the term forfeited and void, but the next succeeding current quarter's rent should also nevertheless be at once due and payable. Thirteen days after a quarter's rent in advance had become due, the lessee made an assignment for the benefit of his creditors. Held, that the expression "arrears of rent due * * * for three months following the execution of such assignment" in s. 34 of the Landlord and Tenant's Act, R. S. O. 1897 c. 170, means "arrears of rent becoming due during the three months following the execution of such assign-' and the landlord was therefore apart from the proviso, in addition to the current quarter's rent, entitled to the quarter's rent payable in advance on the quarter day next after the date of the assignment. Held, also, that the expression "the preferential lien of the landlord for rent" in s. 34 has the same the landlord for rent" in s. 34 has the same meaning that it had under the Insolvent Acts; and the landlord was entitled to be paid the amount found due to him, as a preferred creditor, out of the proceeds of the goods upon the premises at the date of the assignment which were subject to distress, although there was no actual distress. Lazier v. Henderson, 29 O. R. 673.

Rent—leceleration Clause.]—A lease, under which the rent was payable quarterly in advance, contained a provision that if the lessee should make an assignment for the benefit of creditors, the then current and next ensuing quarter's rent and the current year's taxes should immediately become due and payable as rent in arrear, and recoverable as such:—Held, on the lessee making such an assignment, that the lesser was entitled to recover by distress and had a preferential lien tor—in addition to a quarter's tent due and in arrear for the quarter preceding the making of the assignment—the rent of the current quarter in which the assignment was made, which was also due and in arrear, as well as a further quarter's rent, together with the taxes for the current year. Langley v. Meir, 25 A. R. 372, commented on I Lazier v. Henderson, 29 O. R. 673, followed. Few. V. Teronto Sacrings and Loan Company, 30 O. R. 76.

A lease of a store was made for five years, at the yearly rental of $700, payable by even portions quarterly in advance, with the statutory covenant that the lessee should not assign or sublet without leave, and with a proviso that if the lessee should make an assignment for the benefit of creditors, the then current and the next quarter's rent and the taxes for the then current year should immediately become due and payable as rent in arrear and be recoverable by distress or otherwise. Dur-ing the term, on the 24th January, 1898, the lessee made an assignment for the benefit of his creditors to the plaintiff, who sold the stock of goods in the store to the defendant. By the terms of the agreement of sale the defendant was to assume the rent and taxes and to arrange with the landlord of premises as to tenancy. On the 14th February, 1898, the defendant's husband went into possession of the store and of the stock into possession of the store and of the store of goods, which had remained therein, and continued thereafter in possession of the store. On the 5th April, 1898, the lessors distrained the goods of the defendant in the store for 8644, made up of 8175 rent due on the 1st October, 1897, 8175 rent due on the 1st January, 1898, 8175 for "the next quarter's rent," by virtue of the proviso in the ter's rent," by virtue of the proviso in the lease, and $119 for the taxes for 1898, in respect of which sums they claimed to be preferred creditors on the estate of the lessee, The plaintiff paid the claim and costs under protest, and brought an action against the lessors to recover back $319.32 of action was dismissed on the 14th December, action was dismissed on the 14th December, 1898. On the 17th December, 1898, the lessors made a lense of the store to the defendant's husband to hold for free years from the 14th February, 1898. In this action the plaintiff alleged that he was entitled to be paid by the defendants 8322, being the proportion of the rent from the 14th February to the 1st July, 1898, which the defendant agreed to assume and pay, At the trial it appeared that the lessors never consented in writing to the assignment of the demised premises to the plaintiff, and that the plainnever assigned the premises to the defendant, and that the lessors never recognized as rightful the occupation of the premises by the defendant. The plaintiff did not give notice to the lessors, under R. S. O. 1897 c. 170, s. 34, s.-s. 2, electing to retain the store for the unexpired term, or any portion of it: —Held, that the lessors, by granting the lease of the 17th December, 1898, elected to avoid their former lease, they having done nothing in the meantime to waive the forfeiture thereof incurred by the assignment to the plaintiff. The distress was no waiver of forfeiture, for it was for rent and taxes which became due by virtue of the provisions of the lease on the date of the assignment. election to forfeit the original lease referred back to the time when the breach of the terms of that lease occasioning the forfeiture took place, that is, the date of the assignment. place, that is, the date of the assignment. The plaintiff might have avoided the fer-feiture of the lease and the acceleration of the payment of the rent and taxes by giving, within one month from the execution of the assignment, a notice in writing to the lessors electing to retain the store for the unexpired term or a portion of it. Held, also, that the condition in the agreement of sale between the plaintiff and defendant, that the latter was to assume the rent and taxes and to arrange with the landlord as to tenancy, did not mean that the defendant was to assume any part of the rent and taxes which by virtue of the provision of the lease had become due on the previous 24th January, but rather that the defendant should arrange with the landlord as to tenancy and assume the rent and taxes payable in virtue of the commer so arranged. Text v. Routley, 31 O.

Stock Exchange.] — Power of Toronto Stock Exchange to pass by-laws giving preference to the claims of the exchange, and of members of the exchange for debts arising out of the stock exchange transactions, on moneys realized from the sale of insolvents' seats at the board. See Clarkson v. Toronto Stock Exchange, 13 O. R. 213.

Trust.]—Where C., an insolvent, had assigned all his assets and stock-in-trade to S., a trustee for creditors, and the plaintiff claimed a specific lien on the same to the extent of certain trust moneys, which had come into C's hands, as trustee and executor for the plaintiff, under the will of his (the plaintiff) and the will of his (the plaintiff) the plaintiff and the plaintiff as against S. was only entitled to a dividend with the other creditors, on the full amount, with interest down to the time of the assignment, Culmar v. Stuart, 6 O. R. 97.

Trust.1—When an agent purchases goods for his principal with money supplied by the latter there is a trust impressed upon the goods in the principal's favour, and this trust is enforceable against the agent's assignee for the benefit of creditors, even though the agent has, while purchasing for the principal, also purchased goods of the same kind for himself and has not set aside specific portions of the goods to make the principal's claim. 7. Partnership and Separate Estate, Attempt to Give Separate Assets to Partnership Creditors.]— Two partners dissolved and divided their assets. Subsequently one of them being sued by an individual creditor, made an assignment of all his estate, real and personal, for the benefit of his creditors, and by the terms of the assignment, placed his partnership and individual creditors on the same footing. In an action by the individual creditor (after he had obtained judgment) to set aside the assignment, it was:—Held, that after the dissolution and division of assets, the share of the partner who was sued became his separate property, and could not be assigned for the benefit of his partnership creditors until his individual disse were first paid, and that the assignment aside, but that a debtor may give a preference to one creditor over another under the Statute of Elizabeth, and that the assignment as to realty was good. Martin v. Evans, 6 O. R. 2005.

Separate Creditors. — Under an assignment by a firm in trust for creditors, the assignee was directed to distribute the proceeds of the property assigned "ratably and proportionably among all the creditors of the assignment of t signors in payment and satisfaction as far as possible of their just debts, having due regard to the rights of partnership and private creditors, and distributing the same as between them according to law!—Held that the assignment was valid, for it provided for the payment, both of the partnership and separate creditors, out of the respective estates appointed for that purpose according to law, the meaning of which is well known. Nelles v. Maltby, 5 O. R. 263.

Dissolution of Firm.]—On the dissolution of a partnership between L. and W., the latter transferred all his interest in the partnership to L., who subsequently became insolvent and assigned all his estate, including that part of it which had formerly been assets of the partnership, to the defendant, in trust to pay "the claims of his creditors ratably and proportionately, and without preference or priority, recognizing such liens, claims, charges, and priorities as the law directs:"—Hield, that under the terms of the ded there was no priority between the separate creditors of L. and the joint creditors of L. and V., all being creditors of L., and that both classes of creditors were entitled to be paid part passu. Moorehouse v. Bostwick, 11 A. R. 76; reversing 5 O. R. 104.

Dissolution of Firm.] — Where an assignment for the benefit of creditors is made by an assignor carrying on business by their self, creditors having claims against him for goods sold to a firm in which he was formerly a partner are entitled to rank against his estate ratably with creditors having claims for goods sold to the assignor alone. Section 5 of R. S. O. 1887 c. 124, does not apply to such a case, but only to the case of an assignor who has both separate estate and joint estate. Macdonald v. Ballour, 20 A. R. 494.

Fusion of Estates.]—Two partners, before the Insolvency Act, assigned their joint and separate estates together, for the beneit of their joint and separate creditors, pari passu. An assignee under the Act, afterwards appointed, filed a bill to set aside these assignments on the ground that, to put the separate creditors of each on an equality with the joint creditors in respect of the joint property and of the separate property of the other partner, was a fraud on the joint creditors. But it appearing by evidence that both the separate estates were solvent, and that the equality complained of was an advantage to the joint creditors, the bill was dismissed with costs. McDonald v. McCallum, 11 Gr. 469.

Property Passing.] — A deed was executed by John N. Kline & Son, of the first part, whereby, after reciting that they had proposed and agreed to assign all their personal estate and effects to certain parties of the second part, they conveyed and assigned to the said parties "all and singular the stock-in-trade, goods, merchandise, sum and sums of money, bills, bonds, drafts, mortgages, books of account of what nature or kind soever, belonging to or due or owing to the said parties of the first part, and which are set forth in the schedule hereto annexed, marked with the letter A., and subscribed by the parties hereto of the first and second parts; and all the personal estate whatsoever, of the said parties of the first part, and all their estate and interest therein." No schedule was attached to the deed at the time of execution, but sche dules were afterwards annexed, signed John N. Kline & Son, John N. Kline, jr., Anthony Kline:—Held, that, independently of the schedule, the words of the assignment were large enough to include both the individual and joint personal property of John N. Kline. Heveard v. Mitchell, 10 U. C. R. 535.

Property Passing.]-A testator gave all his estate, real and personal, to his executors in trust, empowering them to continue his business, which they accordingly did for several years, and in doing so had acquired eral years, and in doing so had acquired a large amount of property, and subsequently assigned the same, as well that portion remaining left by the testator (about one-ninth) as that acquired since his death, to certain trustees for all creditors of the estate, and each executor severally assigned for the benefit of individual creditors. The trustees took and continued in the possession of the chattels assigned under the several convey-ances. The trusts declared were for the benefit pari passu of creditors coming in, and who were not bound to release their claims. A judgment having been recovered against the executors individually, upon a note made by them as executors, the judgment creditors claimed a right to seize the goods in the hands of the trustees, notwithstanding the assign-In an interpleader ments thereof. brought to try the question, the court below determined that the assignments were sufficient to pass and did pass the property to the ustees, who were therefore entitled as plaintiffs to a verdict; and that the judgment creditors were entitled, if their judgment and execution were against the executors, to claim as creditors upon the estate assigned by them as such, and if necessary on the separate estate of each, the joint estate being exhausted. Kerr v. Haldan, 2 E. & A. 382; affirming Haldan v. Kerr, 12 C. P. 620.

Property Passing.] — An assignment under R. S. O. 1887 c. 124, for the general benefit of creditors, made by the members of a trading partnership, in the words mentioned in s. 4, vests in the assignee all the properties of each of the partners, several as well as joint. Ball v. Tenant, 25 O. R. 50; 21 A. R. 602.

 Preferential Transactions under R. S. O. 1877 c. 118, and Amending Acts.

Absence of Fraud-Payment.]-In an action by a creditor for an amount due on a mortgage, and to set aside a conveyance of personal property, in which the Judge who tried the case found that the transaction complained of was not made with intent to defeat the claims of creditors, or to give a preference, and that no collusion or fraud was proved, it was:—Held, that as none of the creditors were judgment and execution creditors, in the absence of fraud, the plaintiffs could not set aside the transaction under the statute of Elizabeth, and that although under 48 Vict. c. 26, s. 2 (O.), it might possibly be that the transaction should be held to be void as against creditors as having the effect of dedelaying, or prejudicing creditors, feating. yet as the sale was not a sham, or a colour-able one, but was a real transaction and bona fide, that the plaintiffs failed on that branch of the case. Part of the purchase money of the goods was arranged by the substitution of a note of the defendants for the notes of the defendant J. P., which had been transferred to a banker, and which note was, on the subsequent sale to the defendant F., paid by him:—Held, that the transaction was a bona fide payment under 48 Vict. c, 26, s, 3 (O.), Building and Loan Association v. Palmer, 12 O. R. 1.

Advances Contemporaneous Agreement.] —On April 26th, 1886, M. A. V., in pursuance of a written agreement of the same date, gave a mortgage to the plaintiffs on her furniture and stock-in-trade, present and future, to secure advances of goods to be made by the plaintiffs within seven months, to the extent of $1,000 in value; and at the same time she executed a mortgage on the same goods to secure a past indebtedness to the plaintiffs. The advances were made, pursuant to the mortgage, to the extent of about $600. M. A. V. was insolvent at the time, $600. M. A. V. was insolvent at the time, but not to the knowledge of the plaintiffs. and the transaction was an honest one throughout. Over a year after, the goods were seized in execution by the defendant, At that time the past indebtedness secured by the mortgage relating thereto had all been paid off. It did not appear that the payments were made out of the new goods :-Held, by divisional court, upon the evidence, that there were two agreements-one to secure a past indebtedness, and the other to secure the future advances; and that the mortgage to secure future advances was a valid security within s. 6 of R. S. O. 1877 c. 119. Coyne v. Lee, 14 A. R. 503, cited and followed:— Held, also, that the transaction had not the effect of giving a preference under 48 Vict. c. 26, s. 2. The mortgage was not void under 48 Vict. c. 26, s. 2, for substantially it was given by way of security for a present actual bona fide sale and delivery of goods, within the exception to that section; and it was not a preference of the plaintiffs over other credi-tors, as but for it the plaintiffs would never have become creditors at all; and there was no question under s. 3 (1), as to the goods bearing a fair and relative value to the consideration therefor, inasmuch as it was not an absolute conveyance or transfer, but a mortgage, and would attach only to the exact extent to which value was given therefor, by the delivery of goods. Goulding v. Deeming, 15 O. R. 201.

Advance to Pay Creditor.]—W., being in insolvent circumstances, and pressed by one of his creditors, G., procured his wife to convey her house and lot to G., who, by consent of Mrs. W., applied part of the purchase money in payment of W.'s debt to him, and paid the bulance to W., who made a chattel mortrage on his stock-in-trade to his wife for the amount of the purchase money which she should have received:—Held, that the chattel mortrage was void as against W.'s creditors under R. S. O. 1887 c. 124, and that it did not come within any of the exceptions in s. 3, the necessary preference of a particular creditor placing the transaction outside of the class which it was the intention of the Legislature to protect. Stoddart v. Wilson, 16 O. R. IT.

Advance to Pay Creditor.]—A solicitor, acting for a creditor, obtained for the debtor on the security of a chattel mortgage a loan from another client who was ignorant of the purpose for which the loan was required. The solicitor, by direction of the debror, out of the moneys advanced paid off the creditor in 1ull, and shortly afterwards the deltor assigned:—Held, that the mortgage was one to secure a present actual bona fide advance, and could not be impeached. Stoddart v. Wilson, 16 O. R. 17, questioned. The question of notice to the solicitor as affecting the client discussed. Gibbons v. Wilson, 14 O. R. 230, 17 A. R. 1.

Agreement to Give Security.]—G. & E. bakers, on the 18th May, 1880, agreed with the defendants that if the latter would supply them with flour they would give them a chattel mortgage on their horses, waggons, and baking utensils. Defendants accordingly delivered from day to day a quantity of flour to G. & E. On 26th May, the chattel mortgage not having been executed, the defendants wrote to G. & E. to have it done. The mortgage was accordingly drawn, covering the sales made, and was executed by the mortgagors only on 10th June, 1880, and filed on the 12th. & E. absconded on the 12th, and on the 14th defendants took possession under a clause in the mortgage which allowed them to do so in case the mortgagors "should attempt so in case the mortgagors "snould attempt to sell, dispose of, or in any way part with the possession of said goods," and removed them to their own warehouse. The mortgage also contained a redemise clause. The jurat also contained a redemise clause. The jurat of the athicavit of bonn fides was not signed by the commissioner. The detendants swore that they would not have advanced the flour it this security had not been promised, and that they had no intention of getting a pre-jectnee over other creditors. The plaintiff's writ of attachment issued on the 17th June, and the sheriff seized the goods under it on the 30th June:—Held, that the mortgage must be considered as having been given when the contract to give it was entered into, viz., when the flour was first sold on credit on the 18th May, to enable defendants to carry on their business; and therefore there was under R. S. O. 1877 c. 118, no preference of defendants, who became creditors only by this contract: — Held, also, the property having passed by the bill of sale, and the defendants being in actual possession when the plaintiff's attachment issued, that they had a right to retain the goods as against the plaintiff, subject to the mortgagors right of action, if any, for taking possession before default:— Semble, however, that under the clause in the mortgage above mentioned, defendants were justified in taking possession when the mort-gagors abscouded, leaving no one in charge of the goods. Robins v. Clark, 45 U. C. R.

Bona Fide Belief in Ability to Carry on Business. |—A company being indebted to L. & B. in a large amount, and believing that their charter did not allow a mortgage on their property to secure an overdue debt, made an agreement to give such mortgage for an advance of a larger sum, agreeing to return the amount of the debt to the mortgages. At the time of this transaction the company believed that by getting time from this creditor they would be able to carry on their business and avoid failure. This hope was not realized, however, as the company were subsequently compelled to stop payment, and the respondents, who were also creditors, obtained judgments and issued executions against the goods secured by the mortgage:—

Held, reversing 7 O. R. 154, and 12 A. R. 137, that inasmuch as the company bona fide believed that by giving this mortgage and getting an extension of time for payment of plaintiffs, debt they would be able to carry on their business, the mortgage was not a preference of this debt over those of other creditors, and not a fraudulent preference under R. S. O. 1877 c. 118. Long v. Hancock, 12 S. C. R. 532.

Book Debts—Insolvency.]—One N. owed defendants a sum of money which he was unable to pay in full, and he assigned to defendants all his book debts and accounts, the assignment providing that the book debts should be placed in the hands of a firm of financial agents for collection, who should account to the defendants for the proceeds, less the commission, and whatever amount remained in defendants hands after the N. Plaintiffs, judgment creditors of N., brought an action to set aside this assignment as haxing the effect of hindering, delaying, and defending them in the recovery of their claim and criving defendants a preference over other creditors, and so being void under R. S. O. 1877 c. 118. as amended by 48 Vict. c. 26, s. 2 (O.):—Held, affirming 15 A. R. 324, and 14 O. R. 288, that N. being unable to meet the deemed insolvent within the meaning of the said Act; that book debts are a species of property included in the provisions of 48 Vict. c. 26, s. 2 (O.), and that the assignment by N. to the defendants was void under that section. Kloepfer v. Warnock, 18 S. C. R. 701.

Book Debts—Account.]—When an assignment of book debts is set aside as a preference in an action by an assignee for the benefit of creditors, the preferred creditor must pay to the assignee moneys collected by him under the preferential security before the attack upon it. Meharg v. Lumbers, 23 A. R. 51.

Breach of Trust—Revocation of Transfer—Post Office Act.]—The transfer by the defaulting treasurer of a municipality to the bankers of the municipality of the accepted cheque of a third person for the amount due by him to the municipality cannot be impeached under the Assignments and Preferences Act, the duty to make good his wrong being sufficient to protect the transaction. The cheque was sent by the treasurer by post in a letter to the bankers and this letter was received by the bankers in the afternoon, but the amount was not credited in the bank books to the municipality till next morning, and before this was done an assignment for the benefit of creditors had been made by the treasurer:—Held, that the property passed as soon as the cheque reached the bankers and that the assignment was not a revocation of the transfer. Per Ferguson, J.—The property in the cheque passed irrevocably by virtue of the provisions of the Post Office Act, R. S. C. c. 35, s. 43, as soon as the letter was posted. Halwell v. Township of Wilmot, 24 A. R. 628.

Chattel Mortgage—Advances of Money—Schictor's Knowledge of Circumstances.]—In order to give a preference to a particular creditor, a debtor who was in insolvent circumstances, executed a chattel mortgage upon his stock-in-trade in favour of a money lender by whom money was advanced. The money, which was in the hands of the mortgagee's solicitor, who also acted for the preferred creditor throughout the transaction, was at once paid over to the creditor, who, at the same time, delivered to the solicitor, to be held by him as an escrow and dealt with as circumstances might require, a bond indemnifying the mortgagee against any loss under the chattel mortgage. The mortgagee had previously been consulted by the solicitor as to the loan, but was not informed that the transaction was being made in this manner to avoid the appearance of violating the Act respecting assignments and preferences and to bring the case within the ruling in Gibbons v. Wilson, 17 A. R. 1; —Held, that all the circumstances, necessarily known to his solicitor in the transaction of the business, must be assumed to have been known to the mortgagee and the whole affair considered as one trans-action contrived to evade the consequences of illegally preferring a particular creditor over others, and that, under the circumstances, the advance made was not a bona fide payment of money within the meaning of the statutory exceptions. Burns v. Wilson, 28 S. C. R. 207.

Compulsory Release. | - An insolvent debtor informed his creditors of his difficul-ties, and on the 19th March, 1885, all but two of the creditors signed a memorandum to the effect that the best thing he could do was to sell out his stock and effects for a sum named and agreed to be paid by one of the creditors, and which would pay all his creditors fifty cents in the dollar on certain terms, and those who signed agreed to accept fifty cents in full of their claims. The debtor cents in full of their claims. The debtor afterwards accordingly, by bill of sale dated the 9th April following, sold and conveyed his assets to one of the creditors, who had signed the memorandum, for the sum and on the terms named therein, which were that the money was to be paid in four and eight months, and the purchaser was to indorse the vendor's notes, so that he could transfer them to the creditors. The bill of sale referred to the previous agreement, and recited that "the creditors" had agreed to accept these notes "in full satisfaction and discharge of their respective claims" against the debtor, and respective claims" against the debtor, and also provided that the balance, if any, "after deducting the debt of the purchasers," (who were among those agreeing to accept the fifty cent composition), should be paid to the deb-tor:—Held, that this amounted in effect to a condition that any creditor receiving the fifty cents in the dollar of his claim, should release the debtor, and that the sale was therefore void as against the two non-assenting creditors under R. S. O. 1877 c. 118, s. 2. Jennings v. Hyman, 11 O. R. 65.

Concurrence of Intent, —In order to create a fraudulent preference under the startute of Elizabeth as interpreted by R. S. O. 1877 c. 95, s. 15, not only must there exist a fraudulent intent in the mind of the mortgager, but also in that of the mortgagee. In this case, which was that of a mortgage of goods: —Held, that no such intent was shewn on the part of the mortgager; nor semble, on the part of the mortgager. Hepburn v. Park, 6 O. R. 472.

Concurrence of Intent.]—The weight of authority greatly preponderates in favour of the view that in order to work a fraudulent preference of a creditor, under R. S. O. 1877 c. 118, there must be a concurrence of intent so to do on the part of both debtor and creditor: and the rule of the court is not to act upon mere suspicion in the absence of affirmative evidence of fraud, or of controlling circumstantial evidence leading to that conclusion. Lancey v. Merchants' Bank, 10 O. R. 163, (note), followed in preference to Ivey v. Knox, 8 O. R. 635, 648. Burns v. Mackay, 10 O. R. 167.

Concurrence of Intent.] - A chattel mortgage given as security for a bona fide debt cannot be avoided under R. S. O. 1877 c. 118, by simply shewing that the debtor was insolvent, and intended to give the mortgagee a preference, but there must be knowledge on the part of the creditor taking the mortgage so as to constitute a concurrence of intent on the part of the debtor and creditor; and the amendment made by 47 Vict. c. 10, s. 3 (O.) does not affect the matter. Burns v. McKay, 10 O. R. 167, followed. In this case there was no knowledge on the part of the mortgagee of the debtor's insolvency; and it also appeared that the mortgage was given in pursuance of a previous promise to give security for the debt. The mortgage was therefore upheld:—Quere, whether, where the statute may be defeated by shewing an antecedent promise to give security, it must be such as the promise indicated, McRoberts v. Steinoff, 11 O .R. 369.

Confession of Judgment.]—A withdrawal of defence under s. 113 of the Division Courts Act, R. S. O. 1887 c. 51, is not a confession of judgment or cognovit actionem within the menning of s. 1 of the Assignments and Preferences Act, R. S. O. 1887 c. 124. Battley v. Bank of Hamilton, 21 A. R. 136.

Consent Judgment.]—Under C. S. B. C. c. 51. s. 1. a consent judgment obtained by a bank against an insolvent tramway company, with intent to defeat or delay the creditors of the latter, was held to be null and void against them. So long as the intent is proved, it is immaterial whether consent was given under pressure. Edison General Electric Company v. Westminster and Vancouver Tramway Company, [1897] A. C. 193.

Consent to Order Striking out Defence. |—The defendant, a creditor of O., who was in insolvent circumstances, commenced an action on the 25th May, 1882. By arrangement with O., who appeared, pleaded to the plaintiff's statement of claim, and consented to an order striking out his defence, a judgment was obtained the next day. The plaintiff commenced proceedings immediately after the defendant, and in due course obtained independent; all the course obtained independent; Held, following the deciration of the plaintiff commenced proceedings immediately of the defendant's judgment came in question of interpleader: Held, following the deciration of the plaintiff commenced proceedings the defendant's judgment was valid. In the fendant's judgment was valid, the three plaintiff contained to the plaintiff of the plainti

Defending One Action—Book Debts.]—
Aman in insolvent circumstances was sued about the same time by two creditors, one of the plaintiffs being his son. To the one action he entered a defence, while to the other, that brought by his son, he made no defence, by reason of which judgment was obtained therein and all his effects sold, which were bought in by an agent of the son, the whole realizing less than the debt, interest, and costs. In order to make up sufficient to satisfy the balance of his son's claim, the defendant in the action was urged to make an assignment to his son of all his book debts, which he did, thereby denuding himself of all property:—Held, that as the book debts could be seized under an execution, the assignment thereof was a fraudulent preference within the Act; and the assignment being declared void, the son was ordered to account for the moneys received thereunder. Under the circumstances no costs were allowed to either party. Labatt v. Bisel, 28 Gr. 553.

Defending One Action. —The defendant C. defended an action brought against him by the plaintiffs, white in an action brought against him by defendant S, he entered an appearance and filed a plea some days before the plea was due, and on the same day filed a relicta verificatione, whereupon judgment was signed and execution issued:— Held, that these proceedings did not offend against the provisions of the Act R. S. O. 1877 c. 118, s. 1; following in this the decision in Young v. Christie, 7 Gr. 312; McKenna v. Smith, 10 Gr. 40; Labatt v. Bixell, 28 Gr. 53; and Mackedie v. Watt, decided in appeal 28th November, 1881. Heaman v. Seale, 29 Gr. 278.

Delivery of Horse in Satisfaction of Claim.]— One Clamberlain being in insolvent circumstances, and indebted to K. in 8120, was pressed by him for payment, when he agreed to sell K. a horse for $110, in part payment; and about the 15th August, 1885, delivered the horse in pursuance of such agreement. K. kept possession of and worked the horse for one day, and then he lent him to Chamberlain, who continued to use him in his business until the early part of October following, when he returned the horse to K., who thenceforward retained possession of him. On the 31st October, Chamberlain executed an assignment to the plaintiff in pursuance of the Act 48 Vict. c. 25 (O.) respecting assignments for the benefit of creditors, which came into force on the 1st September, 1885. In an action against K. to recover the horse, on the ground of fraudulent preferented, that the safe having been made before the definition of the production of the safe of the left of the left of the production of the safe of the left of the left Effect of Transaction the Test.]—A company, incorporated in the state of Michigan, while in insolvent circumstances, had given a mortgage upon chattels in Ontario to defendant, a Michigan creditor, to secure previous cash divances made to the company under verbal promises by two directors that security would be given. The effect of the mortgage was to delay and prejudice other creditors and give defendant a preference over them:—Held, that under 48 Vict. c. 26 (O.) without regard at all to any question of bona fides, pressure, or knowledge of the company's financial position by its officers, or by defendant, the effect alone of the transaction avoided it:—

Held, also, that this mortgage was not given in pursuance of any antecedent contract or promise of the company, but even if it were that it could not be upheld, because it was not shewn to have been given in consideration of a money advance made in the bona fide belief that such advance would enable the debtors to continue business and pay their debts in full. River Stave Company v. Sill, 12 O. R. 557.

Effect of Transaction the Test.]—Per Burton, J.A., s. 2 of 48 Vict. c. 26 (now R. S. O. 1887 c. 124, s. 2), should be read as intended to invalidate any act fraudulent in the sense of being a violation of the statute if it has the effect of defenting or delaying creditors or giving one or more of them a preference over others. Kennedy v. Freeman, 15 A. Sendele per Osler, J.A., the meaning of Semble, per Osler, J.A., the meaning of z is, that when a person is in insolvent circumstances, if either the intent or the effect of the transaction is to prefer the creditor, that is all that is necessary to avoid it. Ib.

Following Proceeds.]—Semble, where one creditor, having obtained property from his debtor in fraud of other creditors, has realized the property, and received the proceeds in a shape that cannot be earmarked, another creditor who has thereby been defrauded, cannot make the preferred creditor account for the said proceeds, and has no other remedy than that prescribed by 13 Eliz. c. 5, s. 2. Davis v. Wickson, 1 O. R. 369.

Following Proceeds. — A favoured creditor, with the connivance of an insolvent debtor, procured a third person to purchase the debtor's entire stock-in-trade, for which the purchaser gave his note to the debtor, who immediately indorsed it to the favoured creditor, who discounted it with a bank. The debtor did not execute any assignment for the benefit of creditors. In an action by the other creditors to compel the preferred creditor to share ratably with them:—Held, that as the preferred creditor had disposed of the note to a bonâ fide holder for value no relief could be given. Robertson v. Holland, 16 O. R, 532.

Fraudulent Scheme—Colourable Securius.—Land stood in the name of a son who was in embarrassed circumstances, and the same was conveyed by him to his father, who asserted that he had advanced the money wherewith to pay the consideration, and he created mortgages thereon to secure his own liabilities in favour of bond fide creditors, with the sanction of the son. The court being satisfied that this was a scheme adopted for the purpose of defeating and delaying the creditors of the son, declared the conveyance Knox v. Traver, 24 Gr. 477.

Although a debtor may be at liberty under the statute of Elizabeth to prefer a creditor by creating a mortgage in his favour, still, if the preference given is only colourable to secure that creditor, and in reality for the fraudulent purpose of defeating other creditors, and such purpose is known to be considered creditor, who lends himself not for the purpose of obtaining scurity for his debt, but of aiding the fraudulent purpose of his debtor, the element of bona fides is wanting, which is necessary for the protection of the transaction under the Act. 1b.

Further Advances—Creditor's Notes under Discount.]—C., a retail trader, being indebted to H. & Co., wholesale merchants, gave them a clattel mortgage to secure such inindebtedness, and also a further sum of about the same amount, advanced to him by H. & Co. at the time of the giving of the mortgage, which C. represented was sufficient to pay off in full all his other creditors. C.'s indebtedness to H. & Co., was covered by his promissory notes, which, at the time of the execution of the mortgage, were on discount with H. & Co.'s bankers. During the currency of the mortgage, C. having allowed his property to be seized for rent, H. & Co. took possession under their mortgage. C. being unable to pay his creditors, the plaintiffs, who were creditors, but had not recovered judgment or exection, took action to set aside the chattel mortgage:—Held, that under the evidence set out in the report there was no fraud, and following Hepburn v. Park, 6 O. R. 472, that the fact that the notes in question were held by the mortgages' bankers on discount did not invalidate the mortgage. Hyman v. Cuthbertson, 19 O. R. 443

Future Acquired Chattels.]—A mortgage by an insolvent person on future acquired chattels to secure the repayment of the price of such chattels to the vendor thereof is binding, notwithstanding 48 Vict. e. 26, s. 2 (O.) Goulding v. Deeming, 15 O. R. 201.

Hindering and Delaying Creditors—Statute of Elizabeth.]—In an assignment for the benefit of creditors one preferred creditor was to receive nearly $300 more than was due him from the assignor on an understandable the control of the Husband and Wife - Advances-Pres sure.] — The plaintiff was married in 1876 without any marriage contract or settlement, being possessed of about $1,500 derived from the estate of a former husband, which she lent at different times to her husband, directly or in paying his debts, a small portion having been lent prior to their marriage. In January, 1879, on a further advance of $200, she obtained from her husband a chattel mortgage of certain goods, farm stock, implements, and of certain goods, farm stock, implements, and other chattels, which was duly registered but not renewed. In November, 1879, she insist-ed upon and obtained from her husband a bill of sale of other goods, for the expressed con-sideration of $300. The plaintiff and her husband continued to reside together, and apparently had the use of the goods in much the same way as prior to such bill of sale being made, she and her sons working the farm on which the parties resided, and which had been conveyed by her husband to a trustee for the benefit of the plaintiff, the husband working or not as pleased himself. The evidence esor not as pleased himself. The evidence established the bona fides of the claims set up by the plaintiff, and for the purpose of securby the plaintiff, and for the purpose of secur-ing a creditor of the husband she executed a chattel mortgage in her own name on the goods:—Held, that the bill of sale and chattel mortgage were not open to objection as being given direct to the wife by the husband; and that even if her title under the chattel mortzage could not be supported for want of a sufficient change of possession, she could claim under the bill of sale, which, being obtained by pressure, was not a fraudhent preference under R. S. O. 1877 c. 118. Totten v. Bowen, S. A. R. 602.

Insolvent — Computation of Assets and Limbities.] —The meaning of R. S. O. 1877 c. 118, as amended by 48 Vict. c. 26, 8, 2 (O.), is that a conveyance of property which has the effect of defeating, delaying, or prejudicing his creditors, or of giving a preference, is utterly void when made by a person at a time when he is in insolvent circumstances, or unable to pay his debts in full, or knows that he is on the eve of insolvency. Rac v. McDondid, 13 O. R. 352.

Insolvent. —A man may be deemed in "insolvent circumstances," within the meaning of 48 Vict. c. 26, s. 2, if he does not pay his way, and is unable to meet the current demands of creditors, and if he has not the means of paying them in full out of his assets demands of creditors, and if he has not the means of paying them in full out of his assets realized upon a sale for cash or its equivalent. Rae v. McDonald, 13 O. R. 352, discussed. Warnock v. Kloepfer, 14 O. R. 288, 15 A. R. 324.

Insolvent.]—On 19th December, 1885, a transfer of certain book debts was made by the firm of B. M. & Co., to defendant, under a contract therefor, made on the 16th August. 1884, whereby defendant lent the firm $15,000, which was to be repaid on six months' notice, and defendant to be employed as a clerk at $2,000 a year. The firm subsequently made an assignment under 48 Vict. c. 26 (O.), to the plaintiff, for the benefit of their creditors. The plaintiff alleged that at the time of the transfer the firm was insolvent, and therefore the transfer was invalid as giving, or having the effect of giving, the defendant a preference. At the time of the transfer the value of the firm's stock of goods at the ordinary selling value was nearly double the amount of the firm's liabilities; but when they were sold by the plaintiff, some two months afterwards, they only realized a third of the ordinary selling price, and much less than the liabilities:—Held, that the firm were not insolvent at the time of the transfer; and the transfer was therefore valid. Clarkson v. Sterling, 14 O. R. 460.

Insolvent.]-Under a judgment recovered Insolvent.]—Under a judgment recovered and execution issued thereon in February, 1887, certain goods and chattels of C. were seized. These goods were covered by a chattel mortgage made on 18th December, 1886, in favour of the defendant. The evidence shewed that at the time of the mortgage there was a surplus of about 813,000 of assets over liabilities. All the assets were either mortgaged or under warehouse receipts:—Held, that C. could not be deemed to be insolvent at the time of the making of the mortgage within that C. could not be deemed to be insolvent at the time of the making of the mortgage within 48 Vict. c. 26 (O.) Dominion Bank v. Coran. 14 O. IR. 465.

There is no wider meaning to be given to the words "unable to pay his debts in full" than to "insolvent circumstances;" but both expressions refer to the same financial condition, that is, to a condition in which a debtor is placed when he has not sufficient property, subject to execution, to pay all his debts if subject to execution, to pay all his news it sold under legal process at a sale fairly and reasonably conducted. Ib.

The fact that all the assets were either mortgaged or under warehouse receipts is not alone sufficient to render a debtor insolvent.

Knowledge of Insolvency-Advances.] —A transaction entered into by a person in insolvent circumstances is not impeachable, insolvent circumstances is not impeachable, unless the person claiming the benefit of the transaction had notice or knowledge of the insolvency and did not act in good faith. Johnson v. Hope, 17 A. R. 100. And see Ashley v. Brozen, 17 A. R. 500.

A security given by a person in insolvent circumstances to secure an actual advance made without notice or knowledge of the insolvency, and in good faith, is not impeachable, because the moneys advanced are, purable the control of the cont over to one of his creditors, who thereby obtains a preference. Stoddart v. Wilson, 16 O. R. 17, disapproved. Ib.

Knowledge of Insolvency.]-A farmer mortgaged his farm to secure a debt due by him to the mortgagee and a small sum advanced at the time the mortgage was made. the knew at the time he made the mortgage was made. He knew at the time he made the mortgage that he was unable to pay his debts in full, and that he was giving the mortgagee a preand that he was giving the mortgagee a pre-ference over his other creditors. The prac-tical effect was that the mortgagee was paid in full and that the rest of the creditors re-ceived nothing. The mortgagee, however, was not aware at the time he took the mortgage that the mortgagor was in insolvent circumstances:—Held, following Johnson v. Hope, 17 A. R. 10, that the mortgage was not void against creditors, under s. 2 of R. S. O. 1887 c. 124. Gibbons v. McDonald, 19 O. R. 290, 18 A. R. 159.

Knowledge of Insolvency.] — Held, following Johnson v. Hope, 17 A. R. 10, that an assignee for the benefit of creditors under R. S. and unable to pay his debts in full. Lamb v. Young, 19 O. R. 104.

Knowledge of Insolvency.]-The fact Knowledge of Insolvency.]—The fact that the grantors in a deed were to the knowledge of the grantee insolvent at the time of making the deed, is in itself insufficient to cause the deed to be set aside as a fraudulent preference under R. Powell v. Calder, S O. R. 505.

Partial Avoidance.]—Section 2 of R. S. O. 1887 c. 124, which makes void a transfer of goods, &c., by an insolvent with intent to, or having the effect of, hindering, delayto, or naving the effect of, findering, dealy-ing, or defeating creditors or giving one or more creditors a preference over the others, does not apply to a chattel mortgage given in consideration of an actual bona fide advance by the mortgagee without knowledge of the insolvency of the mortgagor or of any inteninsortency of the mortgagger or of any inter-tion on his part to defeat, delay, or hinder his creditors. If part of the consideration for a chattel mortgage is a bonâ fide advance and part such as would make the conveyance void as against creditors, the mortgage is not void as a whole, but may be upheld to the extent of the bona fide consideration. Commercial Bank v. Wilson, 3 E. & A. 257, decided under the statute of Elizabeth, is not law under the Ontario statute. Decision of the court of appeal, 18 A. R. 646, sub nom. Campbel v. Roche, McKinnon v. Roche, following that case, overruled, but the judgment sustained on the ground that it was proved that no part of the consideration was bona fide. Campbell v. Patterson, Mader v. McKinnon, 21 S. C. R. 645. void as against creditors, the mortgage is not Parties.]—The debtor is not a proper party to an action by his assignee against a creditor to set aside a preferential transfer. Beattie v. Wenger, 24 A. R. 72.

Payment of Money.]—Where the plaintiff sought to invalidate certain payments of money made by an insolvent debtor within thirty days prior to his making an assignment under 48 Vict. c. 26 (O.), but before it came into force:—Held, on demurrer, that the claim could not be sustained either upon the ground that the statute was retrospective, or upon the ground that what the plaintiff sought to obtain was defined and given by $3, 8.8.3, of the statute, *Clarkson v, Ontario Bank, 13 O. R. 663.

Payment of Money.]—Per Burton and Patterson, JJ.A., Chapter 3 of 8, 4 of 48 Vict, c. 26 (now repealed) did not vest in an assignee the right to maintain an action to recover back moneys paid by a person in insolvent circumstances within one month of an assignment by blin under the Act. Clarkson v. Ontario Bank, 15 A. R. 193.

Payment of Money.]—The handing by a debtor to his creditor of the cheque of a third person upon a bank in the place where the creditor lives, the maker of the cheque having funds there to meet it, is a "payment of money to a creditor" within the meaning of R. S. O. c. 124, s. 3, s.-s. 1. Armstrong v. Hemstreet, 22 O. R. 330.

Payment of Money.]—Indorsing and giving to a creditor the unaccepted cheque of a third person in the debtor's favour is not a payment of money to the creditor by the debtor within the meaning of s. 3 of R. S. O. 1887 c. 124. Armstrong v. Hemstreet, 22 O. R. 336, overruled. Davidson v. Frascr, 23 A. R. 439, 28 S. C. R. 275.

Payment of Money—Cheque.]—A trader in insolvent circumstances sold his stock-intrade in good faith and directed the purchaser to pay as part of the purchase money a debt due by the trader to his bankers, who can the stock-in-trade. The part of the mortage on the stock-in-trade. The part of the mount of their claim, there being funds at his credit to meet the cheque—Held, that this was a payment of money to a creditor and not a realization of a security, and that the bankers were not liable, in a creditor's action, to account for the amount received. Davidson v. Fraser, 23 A. R. 439, 28 S. C. R. 272, distinguished, on the ground that the cheque never was the property of, or under the control of, the insolvent. Gordon Mackey & Company v. Union Bank of Lander, 23 A. R. 135.

Payment—Secret Agreement—Onus—Assignee for Creditors—Pricity.]—In an action by certain creditors of an insolvent and by his assignee for the general benefit of creditors to recover from the defendants, who were also creditors of the insolvent, certain sums of money paid by the insolvent to the defendants before the assignment, under the terms of an alleged secret agreement:—Held, that the onus of proof was on the plaintiffs. Held, also, that, the payments not being procured by unjust oppression or extortion on the part of the defendants, but being voluntary, the assignee could not recover. Review of English cases on this point. Nor could the other plaintiffs, not being the whole body of creditors, recover, even when using the name of the assignee as plaintiff by virtue of an order under R. S. O. 1897 c. 147; and no privity such as would give a right of action was established between the creditor plaintiffs and the defendants by an agreement for an extension of time for payment entered into by these plaintiffs and defendants and the insolvent, before the alleged secret agreement, Langley v. Van Allen, 32 O. R. 240.

Pressure—Collusion.]—The plaintiff was suing the defendant F., who was in insolvent circumstances, when the defendant M. applied to him, and by threats of action to enforce his claim, and a promise to give time to F. if he acceded to his request, induced F. to execute a cognovit whereby M. obtained priority over the plaintiff. Both parties placed writs of execution in the sheriff's hands. Pressure. |- In March, 1879, the defendant E., a milliner, removed her business to the village of Tara, and in the November following changed her then residence and place of business to a shop owned by her co-defendant, adjoining to and under the same roof as his own. In the spring of 1880 the defendants commenced other business transactions, when her co-defendant lent E. $120 to enable her to purchase stock for her business, she promising to give him security for its repayment by executing in his favour a mortgage on every thing she had. The parties continued their business relations, T. advancing E. moners from time to time, till in November, 1880, she was indebted to him in the sum of $403.73, was indepred to him in the shop, a bill including one year's rent of her shop, a bill of E.'s for medical attendance, and a sum for interest accrued due, and for which she executed a chattel mortgage, covering all stock-in-trade and household effects. Both defendants swore that E. refused to execute the security, notwithstanding her promise to do so, until after the receipt by her of a letter from T.'s solicitors demanding payment, or in default an action would be brought. The security was upheld at the trial and this judgment was affirmed by an equal division. Brayley v. Ellis, 1 O. R. 119; 9 A. R. 565.

Pressure.] — Where certain persons who were liable as indorsers of certain promissory notes not yet due, knowing the maker's insolvent circumstances, under threat of suit, induced him to give a cognovit actionen, whereon they entered judgment and issued execution:—Held, not such pressure as exempted the cognovit and subsequent proceedings from being collusive, fraudulent and vold within R. S. O. 1877 c. 118. Meriden Silver Co. v. Lee, 2 O. R. 451.

A mercantile firm obtained from their debtor promissory notes for the amount of his indebtedness, which notes they indorsed to third parties; before the notes were due and while they were still outstanding in the hands of third parties they applied to the debtor to give a cognovit actionem, knowing at the time that he had recently given a chattel mortgage on his stock-in-trade and was hopelessly insolvent—and under threat of suit the debtor give the cognovit, upon which judgment was entered and execution issued;—Held, a fraudulent preference, and that the judgment and execution were fraudulent and void under R. S. O. 1877 c. 118;—Held, also, that the transaction could not be supported on the ground of pressure. Ex parte Hall, 19 Ch. D. 580, followed. Ib.

Pressure—Following Proceeds.]—Where T., being then insolvent, transferred to A., one of his creditors, all his estate and effects, and it appeared that the impelling cause of the transfer was the application of A. to be paid or protected, and the present plaintiff, also a creditor, sought to set aside the said transfer as a fraudulent preference:—Semble, the transfer was not "woluntary" within R. S. O. 1877 c. 118, and could not be set aside, Before the present proceedings A. had transferred the said effects for value to a bona fide purchaser:—Held, that A. could not, in any event, be called on to make good the value of the goods, as if he were a debtor of the plaintiff. Stuart v. Tremain, 3 O. R. 190.

Pressure — Knowledge of Involvency,]— R. being a creditor of A., applied to him to give security for his debt, and, under threat of suit, procured from him a chattel mortgage on his stock-in-trade. Although R. knew A. to be in difficulties, and had also the means of learning that he was insolvent, it did not appear that he actually knew that A. was insolvent when he obtained the mortgage; while the mortgagor sought to gain time and to go on with his business:—Held, that the mortgage given under such circumstances was not a frandulent preference within R. S. O. 1817
o. 118. Segsworth v. Meriden Silver Plating
Co., 3 O. R. 413.

Pressure. |—Held, in this case, that inasmuch as the mortgager was coerced into making the second mortgage, the making of such mortgage could not be regarded as a fraudulent preference. Tidey v. Craib, 4 O. R. 636.

Pressure, |—L. being in insolvent circumstances went to A. and asked A. to procure discount of the which A. agreed to do on the condition that he she had been desired to be depressed to be an apply it to the indubteness of L. to him, and to several other creditors whom he A., represented. This was agreed to and acted on, and certain securities were thus transferred to A. by L. L. also at the same time, requested A. to sell some leather for him, which A. agreed to do on similar terms as to the application of the proceeds, and the leather was duly transferred to A. who was aware of L.'s circumstances. On an action being brought impeaching the transfer as made was proposed by A., and he and not L., was the originator of the scheme, whereby he and the creditors represented by him were preferred, and with intent '10 gives uch creditors, and with intent '10 gives uch creditors, and with intent '10 gives uch creditors, and with intent '10 gives uch creditors and with intent '10 gives uch creditors where over the other creditors within the member over the other creditors within the scanner.

Pressure.]—Where it was sought to set aside a bill of sale of personal property as fraudulent and void, as against the creditors of the grantor, and the evidence shewed that it was reluctantly given by the debtor, who only yielded after some delay, and to a continuous insistence on the part of his creditors, his intent being to escape his creditor's importunity, and that the demand of the creditor was made bona fide, with no intent but to obtain the security, which she was advised she ought to have:—Held, that the bill of sale was not void under R. S. O 1877 c. 118, s. 2. Slater v. Oliver, 7 O. R. 158.

Pressure. —Pressure will not validate a security unless it be bonâ fide pressure to secure a debt, and without a view of obtaining a preference over the other creditors. Powell v. Calder, S. O. R. 505.

Pressure.]—V., who was a practising attorney, and also clerk of the peace and county attorney, and also clerk of the peace and county attorney, having been ordered to pay over certain moneys, or in default be struck off the roll of attorneys, made an assignment of his emoluments as county attorney to H. W. and J., that he would been ordered to pay their client, at the same time telling H. W. and J., that he would leave it to them to hand him back such part as they chose on which to live, such an assignment being generally executed at the beginning of each quarter, upon which they drew the amount coming from the county and handed V, back a portion to live on. Subsequently V, recovered a judgment in favour of a client, on which costs were taved in his favour at $164, which he also assigned to secure the same claim. About a month afterwards the plaintiff G., an execution creditor, obtained an attaching order:—Held, that the existence of the order held by H. W. and J., was a sufficient pressure to prevent the assignment executed by V, being considered a preference within the meaning of the Act R. S. O. 1877 c. 118. Grant V. VanNorman, 7. A. R. 526.

Pressure — Collusion.] — The jury having found that T. was, to his own knowledge and that of the preferred creditors, unable to pay his debts in full, and that assignments to certain creditors of two policies of insurance and moneys secured thereby, after the larger portion of the property insured had been destroyed by fire, had been made under simulated pressure with the intent on the part of T. to give, and on the part of the preferred creditors to obtain, a preference over the other creditors of T.:—Held, that the assignments were null and void under R. S. O. 1877 c. 118, s. 2, as against the other creditors of T. Ivey v. Knox, S. O. R. 635.

Pressure.]—An assignment obtained by pressure, of all the trader's goods, in trust to secure the plaintiff in preference over other creditors, and to pay the residue to such trader, is not fraudulent, possession having been changed consistently with the deed. McPherson v. Reynolds, 6 C. P. 491.

Pressure.] — The doctrine of pressure which obtained before the insolvency laws now occupies the same position since their repeal. Brayley v. Ellis, 1 O. R. 119, 9 A. R. 565.

Pressure — Criminal Liability—Trustee.]
—R. S. O. 1887 c. 124, s. 2, makes void any conveyance of property by a person in insolvent circumstances made "with intent to defeat, delay or prejudice his creditors, or to give to any one or more of them a preference over his other creditors or over any one or more of them, or which has such effect;"— Held, affirming 16 A. R. 323, that the words "or which has such effect "in this section ap-ply only to the case of "giving any one or more of (his creditors) a preference over his other creditors or over any one or more of them:"-Held, further, that the preference provided against in the statute is a voluntary preference, and a conveyance obtained by pressure from the grantee would not be within its terms. W. having become insolvent, and wishing to secure to an estate of which he was an executor moneys which he had used for his own purposes, gave his co-executors a mortgage on his property for the purpose, and proceedings were taken by a creditor to set aside this mortgage under the above section:—Held, that the mortgage was not void under the statute, for there was no section :preference, as the persons for whose benefit the security was given were not creditors of the grantor, but stood in the relation of trustee and cestui que trust :-Held, also, that the grantor, being criminally re sponsible for misappropriating the anoney of the estate of which he was executor, the fear of penal consequences was sufficient pressure on him to take from the mortgage the character of a voluntary preference. Molsons Bank v. Halter, 18 S. C. R. 88.

Pressure — Voluntary Conveyance—Consideration.—Untrue Statement of Consideration.]—Where there was evidence of a request made to a person in embarrassed circumstances by one who had indorsed notes for him, for a conveyance of an equity of redemption in land, to secure the indorser against his liability, and the first proceeding taken to impeach the conveyance was a seizure of crops upon the land under an execution against the grantor, more than sixty days after the transfer was made:—Held, that, there having been pressure, the conveyance could not be impeached as a preference. But, the statement of the consideration in the conveyance being untrue, the onus was upon the grantee to prove beyond reasonable doubt that there was some other good consideration, and his own unsupported statement that such existed was insufficient, and the conveyance must be treated as voluntary, and therefore void under the statute of Elizabeth. Gignac v. Her, 29 O. R. 147; 25 A. R. 303.

Pressure — Agreement to Give Security.]

—Where a preferential security, given while

R. S. O. 1887 c. 124, as amended by 54 Vict,
c. 20, was in force, is attacked within sixty days, evidence of pressure is not admissible to rebut the presumption of intent to give a preference. An agreement to give security, made in good faith, may, even though it is indefinite in its terms, avail to rebut the presumption of intent to prefer, but where the giving of security is deliberately postponed in order to avoid injury to the debtor's credit, or to avoid the statutory presumption, the agreement to give the security is of no avail.

Webster v. Crickmore, 25 A. R. 97.

Pressure — Intent.]—By the Manitoba Act, 49 Vict. c. 45, s. 2. "Every gift, conveyance, &c., of goods, chattels or effects * * made by a person at a time when he is in insolvent circumstances * * with intent to defeat, delay or prejudice his cieditors, or to give to any one or more of them a preference over his other creditors or over any one or more of them, or which has such effect, shall as against them be utterly void ":—Held, that the word "preference "in this Act imports a voluntery preference, and does not apply to a case where the transfer has been induced by the pressure of the creditor:—Held, further, that a mere demand by the creditor, without even a threat of legal proceedings, is sufficient pressure to rebut the presumption of a preference. The words "or which has such effect" in the Act apply only to a case where that has been done indirectly which, if it had been ended to be a such as a such effect, and the state of the statute. The preference of the convithing the statute. The preference, the instruments to be avoided as having the effect of a preference are only those which are the spontaneous acts of the debtor. Molsons Bank v. Halter, 18 S. C. R. 88, approved and followed. Stephens v. McArthur, 10 S. C. R. 446.

Pressure — Knowledge of Insolvency.]—A mortgage given by a debtor who knows that he is unable to pay all his debts in full is not void as a preference to the mortgagee over other creditors if given as a result of pressure and for a bonh fide debt and if the mortgagee is not aware of the debtor being in insolvent circumstances. Molsons Bank v. Halter, 18 S. C. R. 88, and Stephens v. McArthur, 19 S. C. R. 446, followed. Gibbons v. McDonald, 20 S. C. R. 587, affirming 18 A. R. 159.

- Collusion.]-In an action to have a chattel mortgage made by a debtor to certain creditors declared fraudulent and void as against other creditors, it was found at the trial that at and before the time of the exe-cution of the mortgage, the debtor was in insolvent circumstances and unable to pay his debts in full, as he well knew; that the mort-gagees were well aware of the fact and took the mortgage with full knowledge of it; that their object in taking the mortgage was to obtain security for their debt; that the necessary effect was to defeat, delay, and prejudice the creditors of the mortgagor, and to give the mortgagees a preference over the other creditors; and that the mortgagees at and before the execution of the mortgage knew that it would have such effect. It also appeared that the property covered by the chattel mortgage was all that the debtor had, and that he knew that he had many creditors who could not be following Molsons Bank v. Halter, 18 S. C. R. 88, that the mortgage was not assailable under R. S. O. c. 124, s. 2, not-withstanding the findings of fact, because the mortgagess had requested the debtor to give them the security. Davies v. Gillard, 19 A. R. 432, reversing 21 O. R. 431.

Pressure.]—The doctrine of pressure may still be invoked in order to uphold a transaction impeached as a preference, when it is not attacked within sixty days, or when an assignment for the benefit of creditors is not made within that time. Beattie v. Wenger, 24 A. R. 72.

Presumption.] — Where an instrument made by a person in insolvent circumstances has the effect of giving one creditor a preference over others, and the instrument is attacked within sixty days after it is made, there is under the amended enactment, 54 Vict. c. 20 (40.), an incontrovertible statutory presumption that the instrument has been made with intent to give an unjust preference and it is void. Cole v. Porteous, 19 A. R. 111.

Presumption.]—Held, per Hagarty, C.J. O. (hassitante), and Burton, J.A.—The presumption spoken of in s.-ss. 2 (a) and 2 (b) of s. 2 of R. S. O. 1887 c. 124, "An Act respecting Assignments and Preferences by Insolvent Persons," as amended by 54 Vict. c. 20 (O.), is a rebuttable one, the onus of proof being shifted in cases within the sub-sections. Per Maclennau, J.A.—The presumption is limited to cases of pressure, and as to that is irrebuttable. Per Osler, J.A.—The presumption is general and is irrebuttable; but the security in question is supportable under the previous promise. Cole v. Porteous, 19 A. R. 11. distinguished. Judgment below, 22 O. R. 474, affirmed. Lauson v. McGcoch, 20 A. R. 474, affirmed. Lauson v. McGcoch, 20 A. R.

Previous Agreement.]—A chattel mortgage given in pursuance of a previous agreement therefor to cover an antecedent debt and advance made at the time of the agreement, both the mortgager and mortgages believing the former to be solvent when the mortgage was actually made, was impeached within the sixty days provided for by 8, 2, s.s. (a.) of 54 Vict. c, 20 (O.), amending R. S. O. 1887 c. 124:—Held, that the mortgage was valid. Laucson v. McGeoch, 22 O. R. 474; 20 A. R.

Previous Agreement.]—Certain creditors, believing their debtor to be insolvent, but not desiring by taking a chattel mortgage to bring down upon him his other creditors, precured from him an agreement in writing to give on default of payment or on demand, a chattel mortgage to secure the debt. About four months after, pursuant to the agreement, the debtor gave a chattel mortgage, within sixty days from the date of which he made an assignment for the benefit of his creditors:—Held, that notwithstanding the agreement, the Act 54 Vict. c. 20 (O.), amending the Act relating to fraudulent preferences by insolvent persons, applied, that the doctrine of pressure was not applicable, and that the fraudulent intent must be presumed. Bresse v. Knoz. 24 A. R. 203.

Previous Agreement — Threatened Action for Tort.]—One of the defendants, when threatened with an action on behalf of the plaintiff to recover damages for slander, conveyed his farm to his co-defendant, his son, the alleged consideration being the son's agreement, not so that the second server of the son's agreement, not so that the son's agreement, not so that the son's agreement and the son's and then attacked the deed, and in that action it was proved that such an agreement had in good faith been made:—Held, that the previous agreement, although not proved with sufficient clearness to have enabled either party to it to enforce specific performance, was an answer to the charge of fraud. Mont-genery v. Crobit. 24 A. R. 311.

Promise to Give Security — Presumption—Rebutal—Pryagent — Transfer of 86-carity—Cheque—Promissory Notes—Discount by Third Person, [—10. April. 1898, a firm of traders, desiring to purchase goods, obtained from a bank accommodation to the extent of about 88,200 for the purpose of buying them, upon promissory notes indorsed for their accommodation by the defendant, a brother of one of the partners: they promising him to retire the notes out of the proceeds of the sale of the goods. The proceeds were not so applied, to the defendant's knowledge, and the notes were from time to time renewed in full, the defendant indorsing them upon each renewal. He was satisfied by a general promise that they would secure him, but no security was ever definitely mentioned, nor did he ever press for it. On the 27th May, 1899, the firm sold out their assets for nearly $11,000, their liabilities being about $19,000. Before the sale was carried out the defendant became aware that the firm was insolvent. The purchase money was paid to the firm, $1,000 in cash, $5,000 by a cheque to their order, and the remainder by promissory notes. The firm handed over the cash to the defendant, and indersed the cheque and some of the notes to him, and he with the cash and the notes to him, and he with the cash and the proceeds of the cheiue and notes, the latter being at his request indorsed and discounted for him by a stranger, retired all the notes upon which he was liable, and paid, besides, some rent, taxes, and other debts due by the firm. On the 2nd June, 1899, the firm as-signed to the plaintiff for the benefit of their signed to the plaintin for the benefit of their creditors; and this action was afterwards brought to recover from the defendant the amount applied in retiring the notes, upon the ground that he had been unjustly preferred:

—Held, that the promise to give the defendant security could only mean that the firm, being unable to pay or secure the notes for bringing on immediate insolvency. of would pay or secure them in the future in case their affairs should become desperate, and such a promise was not sufficient to rebut and such a promise was not sumcent to rebut the statutory presumption of a preference. The payment of $1.000 in cash to the defend-ant could not be attacked, and that should be treated as having formed part of the sum of $5,200 paid to retire two of the notes. The $5,000 cheque transferred to the defendant was not a payment in cash, but was the transwas not a payment in each, but was the trans-fer of a security, and he was liable to repay the proceeds of it, less the portion expended in paying debts, &c., of the firm. The notes indorsed by the firm, and handed to the defendant for the purpose of procuring the payment of the remaining note which he had in-dorsed for them, were handed by him to the stranger in pursuance of that purpose, and what the latter did was done for the defendant, and not for the firm, and must be treated as if done by the defendant himself. Armstrong v. Johnston, 32 O. R. 15.

Purchase of Debt Before Assignment—Set-off.]—Before an assignment for the benefit of creditors, a person indebted to the assignor, and who was aware of his insolvency, purchased from a creditor of the insolvent a debt due to the former by the latter, which the purchaser claimed to set off against his debt to the insolvent:—Held, that under R. S. O. 1887 c. 124, s. 23, in connection with the general law of set-off, he was entitled to do so. Thibaudeau v, Garland, 27 O. R. 391.

Purchase of Goods—Set-off of Debt.]—
A trader who was in insolvent circumstances and for whom the plaintiff D. was liable as indorser on notes discounted at a bank and then current, was urged by him for a settlement and security, which, however, he refused to give, but offered to sell E. the whole of his stock-in-trade, household furniture, &c. E.
accordingly bought it, paying the vendor
$1,400, the excess in value of the goods over and above the notes, which he retired the same day. Next day the vendor absconded, but the evidence failed to satisfy the court that E. intended to commit any fraud in the arrangement so carried out:—Held, that although E. was aware that the debtor was in pecuniary embarrassment, the transaction, in the absence of proof of mala fides, was not liable to be impeached as a fraudulent preference. Lewis v. Brown, Elliott v. Brown, 10 A. R. 639.

Sale at Indorser's Instance,]—J. M., who was in insolvent circumstances, with the concurrence if not at the instance of his brother, who was liable as indorser on some of the insolvent's paper held by the defendants S. & M., effected a sale of all his (J. M.'s) stock-in-trade, book debts, &c., to a bonâ fide purchaser at 60c, in the dollar; the proceeds of the sale he paid to S. & M., and they credited a portion thereof on the notes indorsed by the brother:—Held, that this was not liable to be impeached as a fraudulent preference of S. & M. Harvey v. McNaughton, 10 A. R. 616.

Security to Creditor Assuming Other Claims, "one S, a trader who was in enhancerased circumstances, on consultation with W, one of his creditors, was advised by him to make an assignment of all his stock-intrade and effects, which he did to his wife, in whose name the business was afterwards carried on, she obtaining from the plaintiffs agreeing to settle the claims of two other creditors, which they did, she executed to them a chattel mortgage on all the effects in her shop. The sheriff having seized the goods under an execution at the suit of another creditors, the plaintiffs instituted interpleader proceedings: —Held, that the mortgage to them was a fraudulent preference, and as such void against creditors. Boyl v. Class, S. A. R. 632.

Security Given Up.]—The liability of the indorse of a promisery note made by the deltow held by the creditor for part of his delt, is not a "valuable security" within the meaning of s.-s. 3 of s. 3 of R. S. O. 1887 c. 124, and if such a note is given up by the creditor to the deltor in consideration of a transfer of goods impenched as a preference the liability cannot be "restored" or its value "made good "to the creditor, or the indorser compelled to again indorse. What is referred to in this sub-section is some property of the deltor which has been given up to him or of which he has had the benefit; some security upen which the creditor, if still the holder of it, would be bound to place a value under s.es. 4 of s. 19 of R. S. O. 1887 c. 124. Beattie v. Wenger, 24 A. R. 7. 2

Service Out of Jurisdiction—Preferential Transfer of Goods.]—An action by an assignee under R. S. O. 1887 c. 124 against persons residing in the Province of Quebec to set aside a transfer of goods effected in this Province, as a fraudulent preference, which goods have afterwards been removed to Quebec, is founded on a "tort committed within the jurisdiction," within the meaning of Rule 271 (e), as amended by Rule 1300. Clarkson v. Dupré, 16 P. R. 521.

Subsequent Dealings by Voluntary Grantee, 1—On 4th April, 1863, M. and his wife (to bar dower) mortgaged the lands in question to C. On 21st May, 1867, M. being in insolvent circumstances, conveved the said lands to W. to the use of M.'s wife. In 1808 and 1872 M. executed two other mortgages to C. for the debt originally secured by the first mortgage, On 20th December, 1874, M. and his wife (to bar dower) mortgaged the said lands to C. All the above deeds were registered about the time of their respective executions. On 6th March, 1876, G. assigned to the plaintiff, but the deed was not registered. On 7th June. 1876, M. and his wife jointly mortgaged the same lands to the plaintiff by deed registered 15th July. 1876. On 21st May, 1874, W. and M. and his wife granted and released the said lands to C. until payment of the mortgage of 1872, and on payment thereof to the use of M. in fee. This, hear thereof to the use of M. III 4th August, however, was not registered till 4th August, 1881. The plaintiff had no notice that the conveyance from M. of 21st May, 1867, was invalid, nor of the conveyance of 21st May, 1874, but he had notice of the three mortgages 1814, but he had noted to the three to C., and that C. claimed the whole debt against the land, and also that there was a defect in C.'s title under the second and third mortgages:—Held, that the plaintiff, being bound by such notice, could not avail himself of any defect in title arising from M. executing the latter two mortgages to C., although still being the owner of the equity of redemption, that the plaintiff acquired his title with knowledge that C. claimed a debt represented by the three mortgages, and took his mortgage, subject to such claim by C.:—Held, also, the deed from M. of 21st May, 1867, was either voluntary or a fraudulent preference, and in either case void; and that the fact that M.'s wife joined to bar dower, in the two last mortgages to C. after she had apparently become the owner of the equity of redemption, constituted her a party to the accounting which took place with C. in respect to the continuing debt, and bound her in her character of assignee of the equity of redemption if she could be so considered. Edwards v. Morrison, 3 O. R. 428.

Supplemental Conveyance.]—A formal defect in a chattel mortgage may be cured by a conveyance at any time before an execution reaches the sheriff's hands; but such conveyance, whether effected by a deed or by delivery only, has no retroactive operation, and if void for intent to prefer under R. S. O. 1877 c. 118, would not suffice to cure the defects. The intent to prefer is a question of the control of the county Judge setting aside the jury's verdict in favour of the execution creditor was reversed, but a new trial was directed in order that evidence might be given to shew that the bill of sale was made in order to carry out honestly the original mortgage contract. Smith v. Fair, 11 A. R. 755.

Surety.]—To avoid a transfer as a fraudulent preference under R. S. O. 1887 c. 124, s. 2, the person to whom it is made must be a creditor in respect of the transaction attacked; and a surety for an insolvent who has not paid the debt for which he is surety is not a creditor within the meaning of the Act. Hope v. Grant, 20 O. R. 623.

Surplus Proceeds of Mortgaged Goods. —A trader carrying on business in two establishments mortgaged both stocks-in-trade to B. as security for indorsements on a composition with his creditors, and for advances in cash and goods to a fixed amount. The composition notes were made and indorsed by B. who made advances to an amount considerably over that stated in the mortgage. A few months after the mortgagor was in default for the advances, and a portion of overdue notes, and there were some notes not matured, and B. consented to the sale of one of the mortgaged stocks, taking the pur-chaser's notes in payment, applying the amount generally in payment of his overdue debt, part of which was unsecured. A few days after B, seized the other stock of goods covered by his mortgage, and about the same time the sheriff seized them under execution. and shortly after the mortgagor assigned for the benefit of creditors. An interpleader issue between B. and the execution creditor resulted in favour of B., who received, out of the proceeds of the sale of the goods, under an order of the court, the balance remaining due on his mortgage. (Horsfall v. Boisseau, 21 A. R. 663.) The assignee of the mortgagor then brought an action against C. to recover the amount representing the unsecured part of his debt which was paid by the purchase of the first stock, which payment was alleged to be a preference to B. over the other creditors : —Held, that there was no preference to B. within R. S. O. 1887 c. 124, s. 2: that his position was the same as if his whole debt, secured and unsecured, had been overdue and there had been one sale of both stocks of goods realizing an amount equal to such debt, in which case he could have appropriated a portion of the proceeds to payment of his se cured debt, and would have had the benefit of the law of set-off as to the unsecured debt under s. 23 of the Act; and that the only remedy of the mortgagor or his assignee was by redemption before the sale, which would have deprived B. of the benefit of such set-oif. Stephens v. Boisseau, 23 A. R. 230; 26 S. C.

Title Not to Pass. |- It appeared on the trial of an interpleader issue, that the claimant had agreed in writing with the execution debtor, an insolvent, to furnish material to the latter for the manufacture of carriages, from time to time, for one year, the ing provided that no property in such goods should pass, but that notwithstanding any improvement or work upon the same, or change of form or addition thereto or use thereof, the same and every part thereof should be and remain the goods and property of the claimant. The material was supplied and manufactured into carriages by the execution debtor, which were seized by the defendants, execution creditors of his, and the claimant claimed the same, more being owing to him for the material supplied than the above agreement was not one which could be said necessarily to have the effect of defeating or delaying creditors, and in the absence fraud the claimant was entitled to succeed on the issue :- Held, also, that the fact that the claimant, thinking that the above agreement was lost, from time to time took mortgages from the execution debtor upon the carriages manufactured by him, made no difference; for even if this had the effect of vesting the property therein in him that could only be subject to the lien of the claimant to be paid out of them. Moreover the mortgages having been taken, not to supersede the original writing, but under the error that that being lost (as supposed) would be no longer available, the rights of the parties were still subject to the original agreement. Wellbanks v. Hency, 19 O. R. 549.

Transfer of Goods in Trust—Distribution Imagest Creditors—Action by Assignee to Recover Creditor's Share.]—Within sixty days of the making of an assignment for the benefit of creditors, the insolvent transferred to a person in trust for certain of his creditors a quantity of butter, which was sold, realizing $1,800, and the proceeds were distributed amongst such creditors in proportion to their claims, whereby they acquired a preference. The assignee then sued one of the creditors to recover back the moneys paid him as his share, the amount so sought to be recovered being within the jurisdiction of the division court:—Held, that the transfer was divisible into as many parts as there were shares, and the division court had jurisdiction to entertain the action. Beattie v. Holmes, 29 O. R. 264.

Unearned Profits.]—An assignment by way of security of the profit expected to be made out of a contract to do work does not come within the Act respecting Assignments and Preferences, and cannot be set aside under that Act. Blakely v. Gould, 24 A. R. 153; 27 S. C. R. 687.

Waiving Period of Credit—Premature Issue of Execution.—On the 28th March, 1882, a writ was issued by C, et al., respondents, against one M., for the recovery of the sum of 832,155.33, and said writ was duly indorsed, in accordance with the provisions of the Judicature Act, with particulars of the claim of the respondents for the said sum of 832,155.33 on an account previously stated and settled between C, et al. and M., such amount being arrived at by allowing to M. a discount of five per cent, for the unexpired balance of the term of credit to which M. was entitled on the purchase of the goods. No appearance was entered by M. to the writ, and on the 8th April indegment was recovered for the amount, and on the same day writs of execution were issued. M. et al., appellants, creditors of M., instituted an action against him on the 8th April, 1885, and on the 8th April, 1885, and on the same day writs of execution were issued. The stock-in-trade was sold by the sheriff at public auction, under all the executions in his hands, to the respondents, who were the highest bidders:—Held, affirming 2 O, R. 243, and 10 A. R. 92, that what the debtor did did not constitute a fraudulent preference prohibited by R. S. O. 1877 c. 118, and that the premature issue of the execution of the respondents was only an irregularity, and not a nullity. Macdonald v. Crombie, 11 S. C. R. 107.

9. Validity of Assignments.

Absolute or Conditional Release.]—

R. being indebted to B. and V., the plaintiffs, in 8179.76, gives his note in September, 1850, at six months, payable at the Bank of Montreal, in Geolph, with current rate of exchange, on New York. In June, 1860, R. made an assignment, to which the plaintiffs were exceed to the second of the plantiffs were exceed by R.'s creditors after reciting an agreement by R.'s creditors after reciting an agreement by R. to pay that sum—contained an absolute release of R. from all those executing it. The plaintiffs before secuting it. The plaintiffs before secuting this instrument claimed the promised indorsed notes, or to hold the original note till the compromise was paid. On the 6th August, 1860, another assignment was made by R., in trust till he should pay his creditors their dividend, and was sent to the plaintiffs for execution, with the statement that he (R.) could not get the security wanted, "the party that promised to become a partner drew back." This assignment the plaintiffs did not sign, because when the first offer fell through they sold the original note, and claimed to nothing more to do with the matter: Held, that the giving of the notes by R. was not a condition precedent to the delivery of not a common precedent to the envery or the first assignment, and that the execution and delivery of it, as it contained an absolute release, operated as a discharge of the original debt. 2. That the deed of the 6th August did not annul the former assignment. 3. That did not annul the former assignment. this action for goods sold, the consideration for the original note, being brought prior to the 1st January, 1861, (when the first instalment became due on the assignment) and the release in the instrument being absolute, the non-payment of that instalment did not remit non-payment of that instalment and not remit the parties back to their original position, and the validity of the original assignment was not in question. Benedict v. Rutherford, 11 C. P. 213.

Assent of Creditors - Preferences.] B., an insolvent debtor, made a deed of his stock-in-trade and lands to the plaintiff, in trust to convert the same into money, pay the expenses of the trust, retain ten per cent, of moneys received by way of compensation, and pay the present execution and other priviand pay the present execution and other privi-leged creditors, if any, according to priority, next to divide the balance pari passu amongst all other creditors, and to pay the surplus, if any, to B. The plaintiff took possession under the deed. The trustee was not a credi-tor, and there was no evidence of any acceptance of the deed by, or communication of it to, any of the creditors. The defendants seized under an execution a few days after the deed: -Held, that the deed was a revocable, volun-—Held, that the deed was a revocable, voluntary instrument, the relation of trustee and cestui que trust not having been established between the plaintiff and the creditors, and therefore void as against the defendants:—Held, also, that it was void under R. S. O. 1877 c. 118, s. 2, as it did not provide for paying the plaintiff and the proposition of the provide stable, and of the provide for paying the plaintiff of the provider of the provid ing ratably and proportionably, and without preference or priority, all the creditors, but gave a preference to others besides execution creditors. Andrew v. Stuart, 6 A. R. 495.

Benefit Restricted to Certain Creditors. | When property is conveyed in trust to pay debts, it cannot be considered as a fraudulent conveyance against creditors not included with the creditors for whom the trust is declared. Doe d. Laurason v. Canada Company, 6 O. S. 428.

Benefit Restricted to Certain Creditors. |- Under what circumstances an assignment to one or more creditors for themselves and others, may be upheld against another creditor, who has seized the same goods in execution upon a judgment confessed to him before the assignment: See Farish v. McKay, 5 U. C. R. 461.

Benefit Retained. |-On an interpleader issue to try the validity of an assignment in trust for creditors, the court being left draw the same inferences as a jury :- Held, that it was fraudulent for the assignor to assign on the understanding that he should keep possession of his household furniture, Wil-son v. Kerr, 17 U. C. R. 168; 18 U. C. R. 70.

Considerations not Expressed, on the 4th January, 1858, conveyed his real estate absolutely to defendants in considera-tion of 5s.; this deed was not executed by de-ton of 5s.; this deed was not executed by defendants, and was registered on the 6th. On the 5th A. made an assignment for creditors generally, which deed was executed by the defendants and other creditors of the assignor, but was not registered, and in the latter deed the trusts, on which the real estate was conveyed by the former one, were fully declared:

—Held, the conveyance being impeached on the ground of fraud, that it was competent to the ground of radia, that it was competent to those upholding it to shew the existence of considerations other than the 5s. expressed, although the common words, "and for other considerations," were omitted. Bank of To-ronto v. Eccles, 10 C. P. 282.

Fraudulent Assignment of Lease.] The assignment of a lease by the lessee to a trustee, for a bona fide creditor of the assignor, with the intention of thereby evading signor, with the intention of thereby evading the claims of the creditors of the cestul que trust, is not a fraudulent assignment within 5 Will. IV, c. 3, s. 8. Doe d. Biggard v. Millard, E. T. 3 Vict.

Illegal Mode of Disposition.] - A debtor conveyed his real estate to trustees for the benefit of his creditors, to be disposed of by the trustees, first, by a lottery, and failing in that plan of disposition, then in trust to sell as the trustees should deem most advantageous:-Held, that although the deed was void as to the trust for a lottery, it was valid as to the other trusts therein declared. Goodeve v. Manners, 5 Gr. 114.

Lands.]-Held, that a deed of assignment Lands, 1—Held, that a deed of assignment of lands in trust for creditors, under the cir-cumstances of this case, was not void under 13 Eliz. c. 5; and that s. 18 of the Indigent Debtors' Act. R. S. O. 1877 c. 118, s. 2, does not refer to real property. McNab v. Peer, 32 C. P. 545.

Limited to Creditors Executing.]— Under 22 Vict. c. 96, an assignment is invalid if made only for the benefit of creditors who execute it. Burritt v. Robertson, 18 U. C. R. 555.

Limited to Creditors Executing.]-A provision appointing a time within which creditors must come in and execute, in order to receive the benefit of the trusts, does not render the deed void under 22 Vict. c. 26. Metealf v. Keefer, 8 Gr. 392. Semble, 22 Vict. c. 26 has not altered the law except as to preferential assignments.

Money Consideration not Necessary
—Acceptance of Trust Sufficient.]—C. S. U.
C. e. 45 does not require a money consideration. Noell v. Pell. 7 L. J. 322.

An assignment for the general benefit of creditors, as far as the effects will go, together with the acceptance of the trust by the assignees, who swear they are creditors, is a sufficient consideration. sufficient consideration to support the assign-

Named Crediter.]—An assignment of all the assignor's property, including book debts. &c., in trust to pay, first, all executions in the hands of the sheriff or of any bailiff of any nands of the sheriff or of any bailiff of any division court in the county, and, secondly, all debts due to the persons named in the sche-dule nanexed, and all other creditors omitted there, but who should in due time come into the assignment; but in case (after satisfying the executions) there should not be enough to pay the same in full, then to distribute prorata among the persons named in the schedule, and return the surplus, if any, to the assigner:—Held, void, under C. S. U. C. c. 26, s. 18, as not being for the purpose of paying all creditors without preference. Watts v. Howell, 21 U. C. R. 255.

No Schedule of Goods and Debts.]-W. being indebted to B. and to the plaintiff, absconded, and B. attached his goods; but he absconded, and B. attached his goods; but he afterwards returned, and made an arrange-ment, on which the attachment was with-drawn. W, then executed an assignment to the plaintiff, which recited that he was in-dehed to him "in a large sum of money," and assigned "all and singular his stock-in-trade, chattels, debts," &c., and "all his per-tange. sonal estate and effects whatsoever and wheresomil estate and effects whatsoever and where-seever, upon trust to sell and pay the plain-tiff (the assignee) all indebtedness and moneys due and owing by W. to him, and to pay the surplus, if any, to W. He left the Province again next day; the plaintiff took possession of the goods, and the defendant some weeks after sued out an attachment for a debt due to him by W. On an interpleader a debt due to him by w. Oh an interpretage issue the jury found that the assignment was made in good faith to secure a debt due:— Held, that the assignment could not be up-held, for it neither specified the amount secured, nor gave any schedule of the goods and this; and a new trial was granted. Howell McFarlane, 16 U. C. R. 469. Semble, that the second attachment could not prevent the assignment. Ib.

Omission of Claim from Schedule.] For the expressed purpose of making a fair and equitable distribution of his property and effects amongst all his creditors, a trader in insolvent circumstances executed a deed of assignment of all his property, real and sonal, in trust to sell the same, and out of (1) to pay in full the several debts due or to become due by the assignor to the assignee, and the several other persons and firms designated in a schedule annexed there-to, and if insufficient for that purpose, to distribute the proceeds ratably amongst the several persons and firms named in the said scheeral persons and firms named in the said sche-dule; and (2) to return any surplus to the assignor. A claim for $26.86, which the court below held to be established, was in ignorance or by inadvertence omitted from such schedule, and the defendant, a scheduled creditor, obtained judgment for $1,780.75; and under this execution the sheriff seized the goods. The common plens division held (32 C. P. 524) the deed to be invalid in consequence of the omission of such claim for $26.86. On appeal, the court of appeal being equally divided, the appeal was dismissed, with costs (10 A. R. 405.) In the supreme court it was held, reversing the judgment of the court below, that the consideration for the deed, as expressed on its face, was that there should be a distribution of the estate of the insolvent among all his creditors, and the assignee was not bound to confine such distribution to the not bound to confine such distribution to the creditors named in the schedule. Per Strong, J.—That the assignee was confined to the schedule. But effect must be given to the word "intent" in the statute, and as the evidence shewed that a bona fide effort was made to ascertain the names of all the creditors before the execution of the deed, it did not appear that the insolvent intended to prefer the schedule creditors, and the deed, therefore, was dule creditors, and the deed, therefore, was not void under R. S. O. 1877 c. 118, s. 2. McLean v. Garland, 13 S. C. R. 366.

Omission of Part of Estate.] that the omission of some part of the assignor's estate from the assignment or the postponing the making of the assignment until certain favoured creditors had obtained judgment and execution, did not invalidate it. Nelles v. Maitby, 5 O. R. 263.

Parol Assignment.] — A composition where lands are not concerned, or an assign-D-16

ment of goods which would not fall within the Statute of Frauds, is valid by parol. Brunskill v. Metcalf, 2 C. P. 431.

Partnership and Separate Creditors.] —Two persons carried on business under the name of "G. & W." Having become unable to pay their liabilities, they made an assign-ment to the plaintiffs of all their partnership effects and of all the personal effects of G.,
"other than wearing apparel," in and about the dwelling-house of G., in trust to pay all the creditors of "G. & W.;"—Held, affirming 32 C. P. 68, that the deed was void, in consequence of providing for the payment of part-nership creditors only; and parol evidence was not admissible to prove that the object of the parties, in making the assignment, was to provide for the payment of separate as well as partnership creditors. Mills v. Kerr, 7 A. R. 769.

Partnership and Separate Creditors. —W. and W. made an assignment of all their assets, both separate and partnership pro-perty, to the plaintiff, in trust to realize and pay "all the just debts of the said creditors of the said debtors ratably and proportion; ably, and without preference or priority. There was a proviso that the trustee might pay any creditor in full whose debt constipay any creditor in full whose debt consti-tuted a lien on any part of the assets, when-ever he deemed it advisable so to do. It ap-peared that one of the partners had no pro-perty, and owed but $110; that the other had some household furniture which was seized for rent, which it satisfied; that he owed less armet selberts had been satisfied;—Held, that the assignment was not void in providing for navment of partnership creditors only: payment of partnership creditors only:— Held, also, that the provision that the trustee might pay off any lien or charge on the assets, did not invalidate the assignment:—Held. also, that there was, under the facts stated in the report of the case, an actual and continued change of possession. Kerr v. Canadian Bank of Commerce, 4 O. R. 652.

Partnership and Separate Creditors —Interest.]—McP. Bros., a firm composed of two partners, by deed assigned to the plaintiff two partners, by deed assigned to the plantiff the partnership property and assets only, upon trust to pay the joint creditors only. The deed authorized the plaintiff to pay creditors' claims either with or without interest. On the day before the assignment the sheriff had seized the partnership property under two writs of execution (one of which he swore at the trial he thought was against one of the partners only, but these was no further proof of this), and put the plaintiff in possession as his balliff. McP. Bros. then determined to assign to the plaintiff, and it was arranged between the sheriff and the plaintiff arranged between the sheriff and the plaintiff that on the execution of the assignment the plaintiff should retain possession subject only to these executions:—Held, that the deed was not void under R. S. O. 1877 c. 118, for intent to prefer the partnership creditors; nor for intent to prefer particular creditors; even if such intent were shewn by the arrangement between the plaintiff and the sheriff, inasmuch as the assignors were not parties to such arrangement; nor by reason of the provision for payment of creditors' claims with or without interest. Ewart v. Stuart, 12 A. R. 99.

Power to Carry on Business.]—An assignment in trust for creditors of a small stock of goods valued at about $230, and some land, made to a person not a creditor, con-tained a provision empowering the assignee, without consulting the creditors, to carry on the business, and wind it up, no time being stated therefor: to pay all salaries, wages, &c., and all advances made in goods and money for conducting said business in the winding up thereof, to the best advantage, which advances he was authorized to make, and also to sell the said land as to him should seem meet, and to retain a reasonable compensation for the execution of the said trusts: —Held, that the assignment was void, as containing provisions hindering and delaying creditors, and such as they could not reasonably be required to agree to. Gallagher v. Glass, 32 C. P. 641.

Power to Carry on Business.]—Where an assignment provides for the carrying on of the business of the insolvent debtor by the assignee, but only as subsidiary to the winding up of the same, this is not unreasonable, and does not invalidate the assignment. Outario Bank v. Lamont, 6 O. R. 147.

Power to Carry on Business] .- A deed of assignment for the benefit of creditors gave "until the said trustee shall deem it advisable to dispose of the said business, to carry on the same, employing any person or persons as his agent or agents for such purpose if he deemed it best, paying him or them such reasonable allowance therefor as may be agreed upon, and to supply the said agent or agents with such goods or merchandise as may be requisite for such purpose," and the trusbe requisite for such purpose, tee was not to become liable for the debts or losses of the said business in any way except for the distribution of the moneys come to his hands under the deed. There was no evidence of any intentional dishonesty on the part of the assignor:—Held, that this provision did not invalidate the deed under R. S. O 1877 c. 118. Alexander v. Wavell, 10 A. R.

Power to Carry on Business—Power to Employ Assignment.—By a deed of assignment for the henelit of creditors the trust was declared to be "to sell and dispose of such rions of the said estate as each time to be a such as the said best the said estate as each of the said business the said business the said business " and to stand possessed of the said moneys, &c., and all profits and increase arising therefrom, in trust to pay," &c., and a subsequent part of the deed provided that the assignee "shall have power to employ the said party of the first part (the insolvent) or any other person in winding up the affairs of the said trust estate, in collecting and getting in his estate and effects hereby assigned, and in carrying on his said trade:"—Held, that the provisions above set forth did not invalidate the deed. Jennings v. Moss, 19 A. R. 639.

Power to Carry on Business—Power to Employ Assignor, —The paintiffs claimed under an assignment by M., the execution debtor, to them of all his real and personal property upon certain trusts. This deed provided for payment—first, to certain privileged creditors of the sums mentioned; and next, to pay a ratable proportion to the same creditors of the residue of their demands, and also a ratable proportion to all creditors executing within two months. There were also provisions, that if the trustees should think it advisable, and a majority in value of the creditors signing the deed should consent, they might carry on the business for the benefit of such creditors, employing M, for this purpose, and making him an allowance: that from time to time out of the proceeds realized they might purchase new stock, but the business to be wound up, at all events, within two years; and that the trustees might permit M, to use such portions of his household furniture for such time and on such terms as they should think proper. The furniture was left in M.'s possession, being used in rooms over the shop, where he continued to live. The deed was registered with the clerk of the county court, but there was no afflavit verifying any debt:—Held, first, that it was properly left to the jury to say whether they believed that the assignment was in truth made for the benefit of the creditors, and that the plaintiffs had taken possession, and were acting bond fide under it. Secondly, that none of the provisions above mentioned could be considered as illegal or affording evidence of fraud. Taylor v. Whittemore, 10 U. C. R. 440.

Power to Carry on Business—Power to Employ Assignor, 1—The assignment, made before 22 Vict v. 98, provided that the assign spirit carry on the business for the benefit of the creditors executing, and employ the debtor to manage it, at such salary as might be agreed on, and supply goods to keep up the stock and for the more beneficial management of the business in the interest of the creditors, and pay for such goods out of the trust estate. Quere, whether this would make the executing creditors partners in the business. Crapper v. Patterson, 19 U. C. R. 160.

Power to Carry on Business—Power to Employ Assignor.]—Held, that an assignment after 22 Viet. c. 96, purporting to be for the general benefit of creditors, with power to the assignees to make advances for conducting and winding up the business, no time being limited within which it was to be wound up; such advances to be the first charge upon the assets, with ten per cent. profit upon all moneys received as compensation for the advances and for the trouble in winding up, with power to employ the assignor at a salary in their discretion, was void as against subsequent quelgment creditors. Hendry v. Harty, 9 C. P. 520.

Power to Carry on Business—Delay.]

—A provision for carrying on the business so as to render the creditors partners with the trustees quond third nersons, or one which may cause unreasonable or prejudicial delay to the creditors, renders the deed void. Metcall v. Keefer, S Gr. 392.

Power to Employ Assignor—Remuneration to Trustees, 1—Neither an allowance of a reasonable remuneration to the trustees, though they may be creditors, under 13 Elizabeth, nor a provision for the employment of the assignor at a reasonable remuneration, renders the deed void under 22 Vict. c. 26. Metcalf v. Keefer, 8 Gr. 392.

Power to Employ Assignor—Release Clause.]—An assignment (duly filed) for the general benefit of creditors, containing a power to employ the assignor in winding up the business, giving those a share who should execute, and containing a release clause, except where those executing should add the words, "without release," amounts to a provision for the ratable payment of all the assignor's debts, and is valid. Feehan v. Lee, 10 C. P. 385.

Power to Employ Assignor—Power to Defer Realization.]—A retail merchant assigned all his property real and personal to a trustee, then his clerk on a salary of £175 a year. The assignment provided that the assignee, as soon as conveniently might be, should collect the debts, and sell so much of the goods, as should not be required to wind up the business, and afterwards should sell the lands on such terms as he might think best. He was authorized to employ the assignor at not exceeding £250 a year, and to allow him to use the household furniture until the other property should be exhausted. With the money he was directed, after paying expenses of the assignment, salaries, &c., and retaining ten per cent for his own trouble, to pay the creditors ratably. The assignment was executed only by the assignor and the assignee, who was a creditor, but some other creditors had signified their assent. The debts to be collected amounted to $2,2877, and were due by a decidency of the debts and was postponed till after collection of the land was postponed till after collection of the debts. Cornual v. Gault, 23 U. C. R. 46.

Power to Make Purchases.]—An assignment gave the trustees power from time to time, as they should deem expedient, "to purchase stock for the purpose of enabling them to assort and sell off the present stock to the best advantage, for the benefit of the estate:"—Held, that creditors executing would not by this become partners in the business, and that the clause was not objectionable. Maulson v. Peck, 18 U. C. R. 113.

Power to Sell on Credit—Licus.]—An assignment in trust for creditors, amongst other things, authorized the trustees to sell for cash or on credit, and if on credit, with or without security for the balance of purchase money remaining unpaid, and also to pay in full any debts which constituted a lien on the assets where deemed advisable in the interests of the trust:—Held, affirming 2 O. R. 525, that the introduction into the trust deed of power to sell on credit, which was so given in good faith, did not invalidate the assignment:—Held, also, that the discretion vested in the trustee to pay such liens in full did not invalidate the deed. O'Brien v. Clarkson, 10 A. R. 603.

Power to Sell on Credit.]—In a deed of assignment for the benefit of creditors, the following clause was inserted; "And it is hereby declared and agreed that the party of the third part, the assignee, shall, as soon as conveniently may be, collect and get in all outstanding credits, &c., and sell the said real and personal property hereby assigned, by auction or private contract, as a whole or in portions, for cash or on credit, and generally on such terms and in such manner as he shall deem best or suitable, having regard to the object of these presents." No fraudulent intention of defenting or delaying creditors was shewn:—Held, affirming the judgment of the court below—Badenach v. Slater, S.A. R. 402—that the fact of the deed authorizing a sale upon credit did not, per se, invaling date it, and the deed could not on that account be impeached as a fraudulent preference of creditors within the Act R. S. O. 1877 c. 118, s. 2. Slater v. Badenach, 10 S. C. R. 296.

Preference—Release Exacted—Resulting Trust.]-A deed of assignment of property in trust for the benefit of creditors provided for the distribution of the assets by the assignee as follows: first, to pay certain named credias ichows: first, to pay certain named credi-tors in full; secondly, if sufficient assets remained after such payment to pay certain other named creditors in full, or, if the assets should not be sufficient, to distribute the same should not be sufficient, to distribute the same pro rath among such second preferred credi-tors; thirdly, to divide the remaining assets among all the creditors not preferred in equal proportions according to their respective claims; and, fourthly, to pay the balance remaining after distribution to the assignor. The deed required all creditors executing it to release the assignor from any and every claim of the executing creditor against him, and provided that the assignee should not be liable to account for more money and effects than to account for more money and enects that he should actually receive, nor be responsible for any loss or damage to the trust, except such as should happen through his own wil-ful neglect:—Held, that the deed was one to which it was unreasonable to expect unpre-ferred creditors to become parties, and therefore, and because it contained a resulting trust in favour of the debtor, it was void under the statute, 13 Eliz. c. 5. Whitman v. Union Bank of Halifax, 16 S. C. R. 410.

Preference—Hindering and Delaying Creditors.]—In an assignment for the benefit of creditors one preferred creditor was to receive nearly $300 more than was due him from the assignor on an understanding that he would pay certain debts due from the assignor to other persons amounting in the aggregate to the sum by which his debt was exceeded. The persons so to be paid were not parties to nor named in the deed of assignment:—Held, that as the creditors to be paid by the preferred creditor could not enforce payment from him or from the assignor who had parted with all his property, they would be hindered and delayed in the recovery of their debts and the deed was, therefore, void under the statute of Elizabeth. McDonald v. Cummings, 24 S. C. R. 321.

Prior Transfer of Part of Assets—Release.]—Where it was sought to set aside an assignment of real and personal property made by an insolvent debtor to a trustee for creditors, on the ground that the assignor had, before the execution of it, satisfied some of his creditors in full by transferring goods of his to them in a manner alleged to be preferential, but the instrument impeached did not require the creditors to submit to any conditions, and did not provide for a release of the debtor in any manner:—Held, that the instrument was valid, and could not be set aside, and the case was distinguishable from those American cases which embody the principle that a debtor shall not be allowed to dispose preferentially of part of his estate, and as part of the same scheme to turn over the remainder of it to trustees for creditors by an instrument which provides for his discharge:—Semble. that where in such an instrument to goods are transferred, subject to the payment of rent, to a prior mortgage, this does not invalidate the instrument. Ontario Bank v. Lamont, 6 O. R. 147.

Registration—Right to Prefer.]—An assignment or sale of personal property upon trust to pay creditors (or upon other trusts) is within the statutes requiring registration. The consideration for such assignment is "bonā fide" within those Acts, though some creditors may thereby lose their debts; for a debtor may pay his creditors in such order as he may think proper. Heward v. Mitchell, 11 U. C. R. 625.

Release Exacted.] — Debtors having obtained from their creditors an extension of time, covenanted to pay all the debts in full, and not to part with their effects except for the benefit of their creditors generally. Subsequently they made an assignment to one creditor for the benefit of all, the deed containing a release from all further indebtedness by the creditors executing. The court declared such assignment to be in contravention of the agreement, and that the creditors were entitled to participate ratably in the proceeds of the trust effects without releasing the balance of their claims. Taylor v. Mabley, 6 Gr. 570.

Release Exacted.] — Assignments held fraudhent before 22 Vict. c. 96, s. 19, C. S. U. C. c. 26, s. 18, for exacting a release in full from those executing. Wilson v. Kerr, 17 U. C. R. 168, 18 U. C. R. 470; Maulson v. Topping, 17 U. C. R. 183; McDonald v. Putnam, 7 Gr. 395.

Release Exacted-Subsequent Waiver.] B. on the 31st March, 1859 (after 22 Vict, c. 96), assigned all his personal estate to trustees in trust for all his creditors; but the assignment contained a release to him from all further liability, and it was declared that any creditor refusing or neglecting within six months after notice to execute the deed or otherwise to discharge the assignor, should lose all benefit therefrom; and that the trustees might pay the amount of his claim to the as-This deed was executed by B. and the signor. trustees, both of whom were creditors. Afterwards, and before the defendants' execution was placed in the sheriff's hands, B. executed a deed-poll, authorizing the trustees to pay all creditors unconditionally, without requiring them to execute the assignment or discharge him :-Held, that the assignment was void as against defendants, execution creditors, and that its validity was not restored by the that its Valuaty was not restored by second deed. Remarks as to the effect of a release in assignments before 22 Vict. c. 96. Burritt v. Robertson, 18 U. C. R. 555.

Release Exacted.]—Where a debtor, before 22 Vict. e. 96, assigned his estate and effects to trustees for the satisfaction of his debts, without reserve:—Held, affirming 10 C. P. 282, that he might, under the then state of the law, stipulate for a release to himself from all further liability:—Held, also, that such release may still be insisted upon without any reference to the amount of the dividend to be naid by his estate, Bank of Toronto v. Eccles, 2 E. & A. 53.

Release Exacted.]—An assignment for such creditors as should execute it within thirty days, and agree to release the assignor:
—Held, void under 22 Vict. c. 96, s. 19. Darling v. McIntyre, 19 U. C. R. 154; Crapper v. Patterson, 19 U. C. R. 160.

Release Exacted - Reservation in Assignor's Favour. |—The debtor, by deed, ex-ecuted by two of his creditors, conveyed all his real and personal estate, except his household furniture to trustees for payment of his debts, stipulating that after paying all expenses, and until the trusts should be carried out or the property exhausted, the trustees should, before payment of any of the debts, pay to him, out of the moneys realized from the estate, the sum of £375 a year for the support of his wife and family; that creditors, to have the benefit of the deed, must execute it within a limited time; that no dividend should be paid to the creditors till a sum had been realized sufficient to pay them 2s. 6d. in the £, and that the creditors should release the debtor from all future liability. Two creditors only executed, and subsequently the debtor made another deed to the same trustees, containing a similar release from his creditors who should become parties to it, and upon similar trusts, with the exception of the reservation in his own favour, which was considered questionable. The trustees acted under the second deed, and though both were inoperative to pass real estate, they proceeded to sell the lands, and the plaintiffs, the City Bank, became the purchasers, but the purchase was afterwards abandoned because of this defect in the deed of assignment. Afterwards a creditor, who had lodged an execution in the sheriff's hands subsequently to the deed of assignment, filed a bill praying to have the first deed set aside, or, in the alternative, that he might be allowed to share in the proceeds of the estate without complying with the stipulation for a release:—Held, (in accordance with Bank of Toronto v. Eccles, 2 E. & A. 53), 1. that the stipulation for re-lease did not invalidate the deed. 2. That the provision for the payment of a dividend might, under certain circumstances, be considered unreasonable and fraudulent; and 3, that the second deed was not objectionable by reason of anything appearing on its face: although the validity of the first deed might be open to question. Under these circumstances the plaintiff was allowed to share under the deed in such portions of the property as had not already been divided among the creditors assenting thereto, upon his executing the deed; all other creditors who had not deprived themselves of the right to come in to be admitted on same terms. Mulholland v. Hamilton, 10 Gr. 45.

Right to Prefer.]—Where a debtor, before 22 Vict. c. 96, assigned his estate and effects to trustees for the satisfaction of his debts without reserve:—Held, affirming 10 C. P. 82, that he might, under the then state of the law, stipulate for the payment of some of his creditors in full and a ratable distribution as to the rest. Bank of Toronto v. Eccles. 2 E. & A. 53.

Right to Prefer.]—In 1857 A, made an assignment for the henefit of his creditors, and thereby provided for the preferential payment of all sums which other persons were liable for as sureties or indorsers for him:—Held, that the creditors to whom these secured sums were due were entitled to the benefit of this provision, and would not lose it by executing the deed of assignment, though it contained a clause releasing the debtor. Mulholland v. Hamilton, 15 Gr. 53; Thorne v. Torrance, 16 C. P. 445, 18 C. P. 29; Squire v. Watt, 29 U. C. R. 328.

Right to Prefer -- Indemnity to Assignee. |-Though an assignment contains pre ferences in favour of certain creditors, yet if it includes, subject to such preferences, a trust in favour of all the assignor's creditors, it is an assignment for the general benefit of ditors" under s. 10 of the Nova Scotia Bills of Sale Act, R. S. N. S. c. 92, and does not require an affidavit of bona fides. Durkee v. Figure 19 N. S. Rep. 487, approved and fol-lowed; Archibald v. Hubley, 18 S. C. R. 116, distinguished. A provision in an assignment for the security and indemnity of makers and indorsers of paper not due, for accommodation of the debtor, does not make it a chattel mortgage under s. 5 of the Act, the property not being redeemable and the assignor retaining no interest in it. An assignment is void under the statute of Elizabeth as tending to hinder or delay creditors if it gives a first preference to a firm of which the assignee is a member and provides for allowance of interest on the claim of the said firm until paid, and the assignee is permitted to continue in the same possession and control of business as he previously had, though no one of these provisions taken by itself would have such effect. A provision that "the assignee shall only be liable for such moneys as shall come into his hands as such assignee unless there be gross negligence or fraud on his part" will also avoid the assignment under the statute of Elizabeth. Authority to the assignee not only to prefer parties to accommodation paper but also to pay all "costs, charges and ex-penses to arise in consequence" of such paper is a badge of fraud. Kirk v. Chisholm, 26 S. C. R. 111.

Ulterior Motive.]—A debtor, by deed, reciting that he had become embarrassed by indorsing and as security for others, assigned all his property, both real and personal, including land worth about £1,500, in trust to pay—first, the parties named in a schedule annexed, being those to whom he had become indebted on his own account, whose claims did not exceed £110; and, secondly, the other creditors who should execute the assignment. There was no evidence of more than a few trifling debts, amounting to about £150;—Held, that there was nothing in the nature of the trusts created for which the deed could be held void in law; but the jury having found in favour of it the court granted a new trial, considering that there was much ground for suspecting that the few direct claims had been made a pretence for tying up all the debtor's property, and defeating other creditors. Balkwell v. Beddome, 16 U. C. R. 203.

10. Miscellaneous Cases.

Act of Bankruptey.]—As a general rule, an assignment for the benefit of creditors will be taken as a declaration of insolvency and its properties of the state of

for his making the assignment of his estate. Harrold v. Wallis, 9 Gr. 443.

Amendment.]—Held, that all reference to the real estate having been struck out from the form used for making the assignment, the omission was not a "mistake, defect, or imperfection" within s. 10 of R. S. O. 1887, c. 124, and capable of amendment under that section. Blain v. Peaker, 18 O. R. 109.

Application of Act.] — The defendant, who was employed as financial manager of a firm, advanced to them a large sum of money, to be repaid on his giving six months' notice demanding payment, on default of which the firm covenanted to assign certain securities. This notice was given on 15th January, 1885, but although repeated demands for payment were made by defendant, nothing was done until 19th December, 1885, when a transfer to him of certain securities was made by the firm, who within two months made an assignment under 48 V. c. 26 (O.), which came into force on 1st September, 1885. In an action by the assignee under that statute to recover back the amount realized from the securities, it was:—Held, that whether or not the firm were in Insolvent cfroumstances at the time were in Insolvent cfroumstances at the time transfer made as this was in pursuance of a pre-existing binding agreement for valuable consideration, and valid under the then state of the law. Quere, whether the effect of the statute is to alter the law in this respect. Clarkson v. Sterling, 15 A. R. 234.

Application of Act.]—54 Vict. c. 20, the "Act to amend the Act respecting Assignments and Preferences by Insolvent Persons," R. S. O. 1887 c. 124, is not retrospective, and does not apply to any gift, transfer, &c., made before the passing thereof, and no inference that the Legislature intended it to be retrospective is to be drawn from the language of s. 3, providing that nothing therein should affect any action pending, &c. Ormsby v. Jarvis, Chapman v. Jarvis, 22 O. R. 11.

Bank of Upper Canada—Payment in Notes of Bank.]—K. was trustee for sale of certain lands belonging to M. Two parcels were subject to a mortgage to the Bank of Upper Canada for more than the value thereof. The trustee agreed for the sale of these parcels to a purchaser; the bank, before because the first insenting the sale of the sale and received the first insenting the sale of the sale and received the first insenting the sale of the sale and received the first insenting the sale of the sale and received the first insenting the sale of the sale and received the sale of the sale of Company—Voluntary Assignment—Winding-up.)—Section 9 of the Dominion Windingup Act gives a wide discretionary power to the court to grant or refuse a winding-up order: and where upon an application for such an order, it appeared that the company had previously made an assignment for the benefit of creditors, and that it was the desire of the great majority in number and value of the creditors that liquidation should be proceeded with under the assignment, the application was refused Wakefield Rattan Co. v. Hamitton Whip Co., 24 O. R. 107.

Company—Voluntary Assignment—Windipp, —Where the insolvency of the company is admitted, the court has no discretion under 30 of the Windington Windington 22, the Windington Windington Corder on the petition of a creditor who has a substantial interest in the estate, although the company has made a voluntary assignment for the benefit of its creditors, and most of them are willing that the windington should be under such assignment. Duress.]—Assignment obtained by duress and improper use of the criminal process. See Shorey v. Jones, 15 S. C. R. 398.

Evidence.]—A bill was filed by A. and B. to enforce certain registered judgments. B.'s interest was as assignee of A. The assignment was for the benefit of creditors, but it did not appear that any creditor was party or privy to the assignment; and the assigne had sworn, in one of the affidavits filed, that his only interest was as trustee for A:—Held, that any evidence admissible against A. was admissible against both plaintiffs. McDonald v. Wright, 12 Gr. 552.

Examination.] — "Transfer" used in Con. Rule 928 is not intended to cover an assignment for the general benefit of creditors, valid and sufficient under R. S. O. 1887 c. 124, and an assignee under that Act is not one of the persons to be subjected to examination under that Rule. British Canadian Loan and Investment Company v. Britnell, 13 P. R. 310.

Examination—Separate Estate of Partner—Right to Examine Former Employee of Firm.]—When a partnership has been dissolved a former employee or servant of the firm may be examined, under the Assignments and Preferences Act, R. S. O. 1897 c. 147, s. 34, by the assignee of the separate estate of one of the partners, as to the affairs of such estate. Re Guinane, 18 P. R. 208.

Examination of Insolvent Debtors— County Court Judge—Power to Commit.]—A ceunty court Judge has no jurisdiction to commit an insolvent debtor for unsatisfactory answers on his examination under the Assignments and Preferences Act, R. S. O. 1897 c. 147, ss. 34, 36. In re Rochon, 31 O. R. 122.

Firm Cheque—Overpayment.]—Defendant having a judgment against M. and others, obtained an order on C. and others, garnishees, to pay over after deducting any contractain they might have. Defendant received on this order 8171, by cheque of the plaintiff a firm, the plaintiff alone being the assignment of the state. It was after the satisfactors of the satisfactors of the satisfactors received, except as to the proper norm, which the garnishees admitted serioff more than covered, so that nothing in fact should have been paid:—Held, that the plaintiff might recover the 8171 from defendant as money had and received:—Held, also, that he fact of the payment having been made by the cheque of plaintiff's firm, could not prevent the plaintiff alone from recovering, as the money was proved to have been the money of C.'s estate, in which the plaintiff's partners had no interest. Sessions v. Strachan. 23 U. C. R. 492.

Indorsement to Secure Payment of Composition.]—Right of Indorsers to take Possession of Stock-in-Trade if Debtor in their Opinion Incapable of Carrying on Business—Facts Justifying Formation of such Opinion—Assignment by Debtor after Possession Taken. See Francis v. Turner, 25 S. C. R. 110.

Interest]—The rule in bankruptcy that interest should not be allowed after the date of the commission does not apply in the case of voluntary assignments for the benefit of creditors. Stewart v. Gage, 13 O. R. 458.

Interpleader Issue.] — An interpleader issue to determine the rights of a claimant under a chattel mortgage and an execution creditor is a "proceeding" taken to impeach the mortgage. Cole v. Porteous, 19 A. R. 111.

Moneys Paid under Voidable Assigument.]—In an action to have a deed of assignment for the benefit of creditors set aside by creditors of the assignor on the ground that it is void under the statute of Elizabeth, neither moneys paid to preferred creditors nor trust property disposed of in good faith by the assignor or persons claiming under him can be recovered, nor can persons holding under the deed be held period liable for moneys or property. Purchase of Insolvent Estate—Completion of Purchase after Judgment—Special Damages—Res Judicat.]—A merchant in Ottawa, Ont., purchased the assets of an insolvent trader in Hull, Que, but refused to accept delivery of the same. The curator of the estate brought an action in the superior court of Quebec to compel him to do so and electricity Judgment, whereupon he accept the curator subsequently brought another action in Ontario for special damages alleged to have been incurred in the care and preservation of the assets from the time of the purchase until the delivery:—Held, that under the law of Quebec, by which the case was governed, the curator was entitled to recover the expenses and disbursements which, as a prudent administrator, he was obliged to make for the safe-keeping of the property. Held, also, that these special damages, most of which could not be ascertained until after the purchase was completed, could not have been included in the action brought in the Quebec courts, and the right to recover them was not res judicata by the judgment in that action. Hyde v. Lindsay, 29 S. C. R. 595.

Quebec Law—Promissory Note—Hlegal Consideration.]—A secret arrangement whereby the provisions of the Code of Civil Procedure respecting equal distribution of the assets of insolvents are defeated and advantage given to a particular unsecured creditor is a fraud upon the general body of creditors notwithstanding that the agreement for the additional payment may be made by a third person who has no direct interest in the insolvent's business.—A promissory note given to secure the amount of the preferences payable under such an arrangement is wholly void. Brioham v, Banque Jacques Cartier, 30 S. C. R. 429.

Quebec Law—Retrait Successoral—Sale by Curator before Partition.]—See Baxter v. Phillips, 23 S. C. R. 317.

Sale of Assets — Extinguishment of Iribit.]—An assignment of the assets of a portnership was duly made pursuant to the provisions of the Assignments and Preferences Act, and the assignments and transferred the assets to a nominee of the plaintils and two other creditors of the firm in consideration of the payment to the other creditors of the firm in consideration of the payment to the other creditors of the firm in consideration of the payment to the other creditors of the firm and the payment of the payment of the purchaser covenated with the assignee to settle the claims of these three creditors and to indemnify him therefrom:—Held, that the claims of these three creditors were thus made part of the purchase money, and were extinguished by the transfer of the assets. Dueber Watch Case Manufacturing Co. v. Taggart, 26 A. R. 295, 30 S. C. R. 373.

Scheme of Distribution — Appeal — County Court Judge—Persona Designata.]—
By s. 30 of the Assignments Act, R. S. O.
1897 c. 147, an assignee for the benefit of creditors is enabled to take the proceedings authorized by s. 32 of the Creditors' Relief Act, R. S. O.
1897 c. 75, and, if he does so, the previsions of ss. 32 and 33 of that Act are to apply, mutatis mutandis, to proceedings for the distribution of moneys and determination of claims arising under an assignment:—Held, that an order of a county court Judge dismissing an application by a claimant, under s. 30, to vary the scheme of distribution made by the assignee of a debtor, was made by him as persona designata, and there was no appeal therefrom either by virtue of s. 38 of the Creditors' Relief Act, or of s. 52 of the county courts Act, R. S.
O. 1897 c. 55, or otherwise. In re Pacquette, 11 P. R. 463, and In re Young, 14 P.

P. R. 462, R. 1895.

Set-off—Judgments.]—After recovery of judgment by the defendants against the plaintiff for a debt and costs, the plaintiff recovered judgment against the defendants in a separate action for damages for malicious prosecution and costs. Before the verdict for damages was actually given, the plaintiff executed an assignment to a trustee for the benefit of his creditors of the amount of any verdict which he might recover, but this assignment was not delivered until after the verdict had been rendered and an order for the entry of judgment upon it made by the trial Judge:—Held, that at the time the assignment was delivered the claim to damages had become a judgment debt, and, as such, a debt which should be set off under the principle of s, 23 of R, S, O, 1887, C, 124; and, upon the application of the defendants, an order directing a set-off was made, Moody v. Canadian Bank of Commerce, 14 P, R, 258.

Set-off.—Sale of Debts.]—R. S. O. 1887 c. 124, s. 20, s.-s. 5, which provides that where a claim against the estate is contested by the assignce the same shall be for ever barred of any right to rank thereon if an action is not brought against the assignce to establish the claim within a limited time, only applies to the right to rank on the estate, and does not affect the right to sate off the claim so barred in an action against the claimant by the assignce of the estate, or any one claiming through him. Johnston v. Burns, 23 O. R. 179, 582.

II. COMPOSITION AGREEMENTS.

Acceptance of Composition.]—The defendant a trader, being in insolvent circumstances, wrose to the plaintiff, a creditor in creditors, wrose to the plaintiff, a creditor in giving him a statement of his account and informing him of his intention to make some arrangement with his creditors, and that plaintiff must rank with the others on his estate, which he stated would not pay more than fifty cents in the dollar, to which the plaintiff replied expressing no dissent; and, again, that he was satisfied if there was no preference given. In the meantime defendant had effected an arrangement with his creditors for a composition of thirty cents in the dollar, on his representation that the plaintiff would accept it, without which the whole arrangement would have fallen through, and the defendant must have gone into insolvency. Defendant on the same day, by letter, informed the plaintiff of the arrangement: to which the plaintiff of the arrangement; the received the instalments of the composition sent to him, and on the receipt of the last instalment of your indebtedness to me:"—Held, that the plaintiff must be deemed to have accepted the composition with the other creditors, and the could not sue defendant or the balance. Remarks as to the form of plen in such a case. Mitchell v. Mitchell, 27 C. P. 160.

Acquiescence—Waiver of Time Clause.]
—Upon default to carry out the terms of a deed of composition and discharge, a new arrangement was made respecting the realization of a debtor's assets and their distribution, to which all the executing creditors appeared to have assented:—Held, that a creditor who had benefited by the realization of the assets, and by his action given the body of the creditors reason to believe that he had adopted the new arrangement, could not repudiate the transaction upon the ground that the new arrangement was not fully understood, without at least a surrender of the advantage he had received through it. The debtor's assent to such repudiation and the grant of better terms to the one creditor would be a fraud upon the other creditors, and as such inoperative and of no effect. Howland v. Grant, 26 S. C. R. 372.

Composition Arrangement—Penalty.]
—An instrument in writing whereby a debtor transfers all his assets to an assignee for the purpose of paying a fixed sum on the dollar to the creditors, and of securing to the debtor ment. It is not seen to be the debtor ment by way of composition, and not an absolute assignment under R. 8. O. 1887 c. 124, although stated in the instrument to be under that Act; and an action for penalties against the assignee for not advertising and registering such an instrument, pursuant to that Act, will not lie. Gundry v. Johnston, 28 O. R. 147.

Conditional Release. —The creditors of an insolvent debtor, by deed, absolutely released him; but it appeared by a memorandum on the instrument that such release was intended to be in consideration of the debtor delivering to them certain indorsed notes, which, however, he stated he was unable to procure, and in fact they were not delivered as agreed upon: —Held, that the creditors were entitled in this court to enforce payment of their original claim, notwithstanding that the debtor offered to pay the sum for which it was stipulated by the deed of composition that the notes should be given, or to give the notes agreed upon; and although the court of common law had held the right of the creditors to recover was gone. Hill v. Rutherford, 9 Gr. 207.

Creditor Understating Claim.]— A creditor under a composition deed, either under the Insolvent Act or otherwise, cannot give a general release and subscribe for a particular sun, as being apparently his whole claim, and afterwards advance other demands as not included in this discharge, for this would be a fraud on the other creditors. Fourler v. Perrin, 16 C. P. 358.

Demand Upon Surety.] — Declaration that the defendants undertook to give their promissory notes payable at certain periods, for 10s. in the pound of the debts due by one P. to such of his creditors as should within two months after the date of the deed express their consent to accept such composition. The 5th plea alleged that the plaintiffs did not demand of defendants to execute and deliver the said note:—Held, that defendants not being bound to anybody by name, and it not being averred that defendants had notice that these plaintiffs were creditors, or that as such they had consented to accept the composition, or what the debts of F. were, a demand was necessary; and the plea was therefore held good. Matheeson v. Henderson, 13 C. P. 96.

Informal Authority.]—To an action by L. against A. the defence was release by deed. On the trial it was proved that A. had executed an assignment for the benefit of creditors and received authority by telegram to sign the same for L. The deed was dated Sth October, 1881, and afterwards with knowledge of it, L. continued to send goods to A., and on 5th November, 1881, by wrote to A. as follows: "I have done as you desired by telegraphing you to sign deed for me, and I feel confident that you will see that I am protected and not lose one cent by you. After you get matters adjusted I would like you to send me a cheque for $800." In April, 1885, A. wrote a letter to L., in which be exist: "In one year more I will try again for myself and hope to pay you in full." in November, 1886, the account sued upon was stated:—Held, that the execution of the deed on his behalf being made without sufficient authority L. was not bound by the release contained therein and never having subsequently assented to the deed, or recognized or acted under it, he was not estopped from denying that he had executed it. Laurence v. Anderson, 17 S. C. R. 339.

Liability of Trustees.]—A trader in insolvent circumstances made an assignment of his property to several of his principal creditors, in trust for the henefit of his creditors generally. Afterwards it was agreed that the creditors should accept twenty per cent. of their demands, and discharge the debtor, whereupon the plaintiffs and other creditors excuted a deed to carry out this agreement. Fefore payment of the composition, however, the trustees re-assigned the property to the debtor on his undertaking to pay the several creditors the amount of their claims, which he

Loan to Effect Payment—Secret Agreement.]—On the 20th December, 1883, the creditors of one L. resolved to accept a composition payable by his promissory notes at 4, 8 and 12 months. At the time L. was indebted to the Exchange Bank (in liquidation), who did not sign the composition deed, in a sum of $14,000. B. et al., the appellants, were at that time accommodation indorsers for $7,415 of that amount, but held as security a mortgage dated the 5th September, 1881, on L's real estate. The bank having agreed to accept $8,000 cash for its claim, B. et al., on the 8th January, 1884, advanced $3,000 to L. and took his promissory notes and a new mortgage and the security of the securi

Parol Composition.]—Action on three notes. Plea to the further maintenance of the action, a composition with the plaintiff and creditors, whereby it was agreed by the defendants with the plaintiff and their other creditors, that after assigning a certain building contract to the Bank of Upper Canada, in discharge of the bank's claim against them, defendants were to convey all their other estate, effects and contracts, to two persons in trust for the plaintiff and the other creditors, &c. The assignment, as completed after the action, was executed by many creditors, but not by the plaintiff. The subject matter assigned appeared to have been goods, chattels, and choses in action, far exceeding £10 in value, and yet at the time of the composition pleaded no part was delivered or accepted, no earnest paid, nor part payment made; nor was the agreement or composition pleaded in writing; and moreover the Bank of Upper Canada, a corporation, one of the alleged parties to the agreement, did not appear to have contracted under their seal:—Held, upon these grounds, that the plea was not supported. Brunskill v. Metcelfe, 3 C. P. 143.

Partial Failure of Consideration.]— Where J. H., R. M., and F. H. had agreed to give their promissory notes to the creditors of (who had already made an assignment for their benefit) in composition for the debts of E. F., at 10s. in the £, and for the benefit of the creditors had executed a deed to that effect, but in the expectation and faith that would receive back from the assignees one-half of the stock of goods assigned by him, one-half of the stock of goods assigned by him, and that C. would receive the other half, he and E. F. thus becoming co-partners in the goods; and the goods were afterwards all delivered to C. with the knowledge and assent of E. F.:—Held, that the deed of J. H., R. M., and F. H. could not be avoided on the ground of fraud because there was subsequently a partial failure in the arrangement quenty a partial failure in the arrangement on the faith of which they had made the deed. Matthewson v. Henderson, 15 C. P. 90. If a deed be obtained by fraud, a person innocently taking under it for valuable con-sideration will be protected. Ib.

Partnership - Judicial Abandonment-Dissolution.] A partner in a commercial firm which made a judicial abandonment was indebted to the firm at the time of the abandonment in a large amount overdrawn upon his personal account. Subsequently he made and carried out a composition with the creditors of the firm, and with the approval of the court the curator transferred to him, by an assignment in authentic form, "all the assets and estate generally of the said late firm,"

"as they existed at the time the said curator was appointed." At the same time the creditors discharged both him and his partners from all liability in respect of the partnership :- Held, that the effect of the judicial abandonment was to transfer to the curator not only the partnership estate, but also the separate estates of each partner as well as the partners' individual rights as between themselves;—Held, that the assignment of the estate by the curator and the discharge by the creditors, taken together, had the effect of releasing all the partners from the firm debts, but vested all the rights which had been trans-ferred by the abandonment in the transfer-personally and could not revive the individual rights of the partners as between themselves, and that in consequence, any debt owing by and that in consequence, any debt owing by the transferee to the partnership at the time of the abandonment became extinguished by confusion. Payment not Made at Time Fixed— Double Payment.]—B. & Co. discounted with defendants a draft drawn by the former on the plaintiff for the amount of his indebted-ness, which plaintiff accepted, but did not pay at maturity. Subsequently B. & Co. material assignment for the benefit of their creditors, assignment for the benefit of their creditors. and afterwards plaintiff also becoming embar-rassed, procured his creditors, including B. & Co.'s estate, to execute a deed of composition and discharge whereby plaintiff's creditors and discharge whereby plantals cleaned agreed to accept fifty cents on the dollar on their respective debts, payable thirty days from the date of the deed, one D. being surety for the said payment within the time limited. There was a covenant by plaintiff and his surety to pay the composition to the several surety to pay the composition to the several creditors on or before a fixed date, and by the creditors with plaintiff not to sue for their several debts, and if plaintiff and his surety should observe and perform the covenants, &c., on their part, the creditors would release and deliver up the bills and notes, &c., heid by them; and if any of the creditors should by them; and it any of the creditors should sue for their debts the deed might be pleaded in bar. The defendants refused to execute the deed of composition. They proved for the the deed of composition. They proved for the amount of the draft with other indebtedness amount of the draft with other indebtedness against B. & Co.'s estate and received a dividend of fifty cents and threatened to sue plaintiff, and he not knowing that they had received the dividend, paid them the amount of the draft which they applied on B. & Co.'s general indebtedness and were thus paid in full, but on discovering the facts he brought this action to recover the amount received by them. The plaintiff had not paid B. & Co. the fifty cents of the control of the draft of the draft of the covenant of the control of the covenant of the control of the covenant with the covenant of the covenant with the covenant of the covenant as a covenant of the covenant as a bar to the action; that the defendants were trustees for B. & Co. to the extent of fifty cents in the dollar of the amount received from plaintiff, and that B. & Co.'s estate could compel the defendants to refund such amount to them, and therefore plaintiff had no right of action against the defendants. Release of Debt-Promise to Pay.]advance of money by a creditor to a debtor whose debt has been released by a composition agreement is sufficient consideration for notes given by that debtor and his partner to the creditor for part of the released debt. A consideration is necessary to support a subse quent promise to pay a debt or the balance of a debt which has been released by the creditor a debt which has been released by the creditor of or discharged by a deed of composition or discharge. Representation as to Ownership of Property.] — Where a debtor, in order to effect a compromise with his creditors, offered a mortgage on certain property, which property he represented as belonging to another person who desired to assist him, and the creditors accepted the offer and took the mortgage, but afterwards discovered that before it was executed the debtor had obtained a conveyance of the property to himself:—Held, that such conveyance was, under the circumstances, subject to the mortgage. Fraser v. Sutherland, 2 Gr. 442.

Resolution of Creditors—Fraud.]—A resolution passed and signed by creditors at a meeting called to consider the debtor's position, that the debtor be allowed as extlement at six, nine, and twelve months, at the rate of twenty-five cents in the dollar in equal payments without interest "does not, in itself, operate as satisfaction of their claims. Payment in accordance with its terms is essential. A creditor who assents to and signs the resolution, but before doing so makes a secret bargain with the debtor for payment of his claim in full, is not debarred from suing the debtor for the original indebtedness upon default in payment of the composition according to the terms of the resolution, the debt not being in fact released or otherwise discharged. Weese v. Banfield, 22 A. R. 489.

Secret Advantage.]—A. guaranteed to The rule in respect of compositions between notes, which B. was to indorse for the other creditors of C. B. represented to one or more of the creditors, before the composition was agreed to, that he (B.) was to accept a like composition himself, but he had a secret bargain with C. that he should be paid in full:—Held, on grounds of public policy, that this secret bargain vitated the whole transaction, and that A. was not liable to B. on this guarantee. Clarke v. Ritchey, 11 Gr. 499.

Secret Advantage—Secured Creditor.]—
The rule in respect of compositions between a debtor and his creditors is, that a creditor cannot appear to concur in the composition and sign the deed, and at the same time stipulate for a separate benefit to himself outside thereof. However, where upon an agreement between a debtor and his creditors for an extension of time for payment of his liabilities, the deed of agreement stated that it should not "affect any mortgage, hypothee, lien, or collateral security held by any such creditor as security for any of said debts:"—Held, that a creditor whose claim was fully secured by a mortgage on real estate and other collaterals, was not bound to communicate that fact to the other creditors at the time of, or before, executing the deed of extension. Henderson v. Macdonald, 20 Gr. 334.

Security to Take Effect if all Creditors Consent,—Various proposals having been made for a composition by all the creditors of an insolvent person, A. executed a deed to a trustee, reciting that an agreement to that effect had been come to, and conveying certain property to the trustee to secure any person or persons who might indorse the composition notes which the debtors were to receive. B., a creditor, indorsed the notes of the other creditors, but was to receive payment in full of his own demand:—Held, that the trust deed was not a security for the notes he indorsed, the deed being available only if the composition was accepted by all the creditors. Clark v. Ritchey, 11 Gr. 4590.

Signature by Bank Manager.]—At a meeting of the defendant's creditors, at which the plaintiffs were not represented, an arrangement was made to accept forty cents on the $, on the amount of the claims. A deed of composition with a covenant to accept the or composition with a covenant to accept the forty cents was prepared, and was executed by C. N., the manager of the plaintiffs' branch at L. The execution was "for Bank of Commerce, C. Nicholson," opposite to which was an ordinary seal. At the time the manager executed the deed, there were two creditors mentioned in the schedule who had not exemption. mentioned in the schedule who had not exe-cuted. Before either of these creditors had executed, and before the composition notes had been tendered to the manager, he wrote defendant's solicitor withdrawing from the arrangement. It did not appear that the head office had repudiated the manager's authority. The composition notes were subsequently tendered to the manager, but he refused to accept them. By the plaintiffs' Act of incorporation the management of the bank's affairs was to be by the directors, who had authority to open branches and to appoint the officers. The chief place of business was to be at corporate seal was kept :where the that the deed was not binding on plaintiff corporation, not being under the corporate seal, nor under a signature or sign manual whereby it executed documents:—Held, however, on the evidence, that the manager had authority to agree to accept less than the whole of the claim, and did so agree, and that the debtor performed his part by tendering the notes; and that under R. S. O. 1887 c. 44, s. 53, s.-s. 7, the agreement was irrevocable. Bank of Commerce v. Jenkins, 16 O. R. 215.

Strict Compliance.]—The rule that the terms of a deed of composition must be strictly complied with, considered and acted on. Hill v. Rutherford, 9 Gr. 207.

Surplus. — A trust was created for the benefit of creditors pro rata, in consideration of their discharging the debtor; all the creditors, except the plaintiffs, accepted from two creditors who had become responsible for the fidelity of the trustee, twenty-five per cent. of their demands in full. The estate yielded more: —Held, that the plaintiffs had no right to the whole of the difference. Baldwin v. Thomas, 15 Gr. 119.

Voluntary Composition.]—A deed of composition and discharge made without any proceedings in insolvency (before or after), without any assignce being appointed, and apparently wholly outside the insolvent court, is not a bar to non-assenting creditors. Green v. Sucan, 22 C. P. 307.

III. IMPERIAL AND FOREIGN BANKRUPTCY PROCEEDINGS.

Effect of English Bankruptey. —An English bankruptey carries all the real and personal property of the bankrupt in any part of the British dominions; the theory of the English Enakrupt Acts being that when once a forum had been established for the windingup of an estate it is expedient that the whole property of the bankrupt should be brought there in order that it may be ratably divided amongst all his creditors; and the assets of the bankrupt having been thus taken away from him, creditors will not be allowed to harass him with unnecessary litigation. The defendants in these actions carried on business in England and Canada, and had creditors in both countries, the plaintiffs being Canadian creditors. The defendants became subject to the English bankruptcy laws, and a subject to the English bankruptcy has, and a trustee in bankruptcy was appointed, to whom the plaintiffs presented their claim against the estate of the defendants, which claim included the amount claimed in these actions, which were begun in Ontario. The actions, which were begun in Ontario. The English court made an order on the application of the trustee restraining the plaintiffs from further prosecuting these actions; and upon the application of the defendants an order was made in chambers here staying proceedings in them:—Held, affirming 13 P R. 84, specially referring to Howell v. Dominion of Canada Oils Refinery Co., 37 U. C. R. 484; Regina v. College of Physicians and Surgeons of Ontario, 44 U. C. R. 564; Ellis v. McHenry L. R. 6 C. P. 228, that it was the duty of the court here to aid the English court; and that the plaintiffs by putting in their claim before the trustee had precluded themselves from objecting to the authority of the selves from objecting to the authority of the English court; and therefore that the order made in chambers here was a proper order under the circumstances. Liberty was re-served to the plaintiffs to apply for leave to proceed here after obtaining leave in England. Maritime Bank v. Stewart, 13 P. R. 262, 491.

Effect of Scotch Bankruptcy.]-To an action on notes against the makers, who were members of a firm carrying on business here and in Glasgow, one defendant pleaded, on equitable grounds, in substance, that proceedings in bankjuptcy had been commenced against them in Scotland, in the proper court there, and sequestration of their estates awarded, and a warrant of protection granted awarded, and a warrant of protection granted to them; and that in such proceedings, which were still pending, the plaintiff duly proved his claim against them, including these notes. Another defendant set up a similar defence, but averring only that the plaintiff, who had notice of the proceedings, could and ought to have proved and still might prove therein for the notes declared on:—Held, on demurrer, both pleas bad, for that a sequestration and warrant of protection, under the Bankrupt of the country of the proceedings, the country of th

Foreign Bankruptey - Real Estate.] Bankruptcy proceedings in a foreign country will not affect real estate in Canada.
 The insolvent, who owned lands in Canada, residing and carrying on business in the State resuling and carrying on business in the State of New York, was, with his co-partners, adjudicated a bankrupt by the court of that State on the 15th November, 1873, and, in accordance with a resolution passed by the creditors under a provision of the bankrupt key of the United States, the bankrupts on the 14th February, 1874, conveyed their estates to a trustee appointed by the creditors, for the EUTROSS of winding my the extate. The deed to a trustee appointed by the creditors, for the purpose of winding up the estate. The deed was styled "In bankruptey," and purported to "convey, transfer, and deliver all their and each of their estate and effects" to the trustee, to be applied for the benefit of the creditors in like manner as if the bankrupts lad, at its date, being duly adjudged bankrupts, and the trustee appointed assignee in bankruptey under the Bankruptey Act of the United States. On the 26th August, 1874, a writ of execution against the inselector's leader. writ of execution against the insolvent's lands in Canada was placed in the sheriff's hands by the defendants, who had, in the meantime recovered a judgment against him. Subsequently, the insolvent, by way of further assurance, executed a conveyance of all his lands in Canada to the same trustee for the said creditors. The plaintiff, the substituted trustee, filed a bill to compel the removal of trustee, filed a bill to compel the removal of the writ of execution, on the ground that it formed a cloud on his title to these lands:— Held, reversing 24 Gr. 356, that the plaintiff was not entitled to relief, for that the deed of the 14th February, merely vested in the trus-tee the estate which would have passed to an assignee by operation of the bankruptcy law; and there was no evidence of any intention to pass more. Macdonald v. Georgian Bay Lumber Co., 2 A. R. 36. On appeal to the supreme court this judg ment was affirmed, and:—Held, that a bank-rupt assignment made under the provisions of an Act of the Congress of the United States an Act of the Congress of the United States of America will not transfer immovable property in Canada. Also, that the deed of the 14th February, 1874, was not effectual either as a deed of bargain and sale, or a deed of grant, to pass any legal title or interest in the lands of D. in Canada. S. C., 2 S. C. R. 364.

Foreign Discharge.] — A foreign law authorizing the discharge of an insolvent debtor must be directly proved, and the court debtor must be directly proved, and the court will not listen to an application for the discharge of such person after he has allowed judgment to go by default, and is in execution. Brown v. Hudson, Tay. 346.

Where the person of an insolvent debtor is discharged from arrest by a foreign authority, this court will not set aside an arrest made under the process of this court for the same cause of action, it not being hound to made under the process of this court for the same cause of action, it not being bound to model or restrain its course of proceeding by that of other countries. Ib. 390.

Foreign Discharge.]-To an action on a rorigin Disonarge.]—Lo an action on a promissory note made in the United States, defendant pleaded his discharge under the bankrupt laws there; to which the plaintiff replied, that by such law the discharge was fraudulent and void, because the defendant, in the schedule attached to his petition, had fraudulently, and with intent to prevent the plaintiff from sharing in his estate or oppositude by discharge control any marine of the ing his discharge, omitted any mention of the plaintiff or his claim. The omission was proved, and the law of the United States was stated to that such omission, unless fraudulent and be, that such omission, unless fraudulent and wilful, would not avoid the discharge; but it was not shewn whether the assent of a cer-tain number of creditors or the payment of a certain dividend was requisite, or whether there was any provision which would shew a motive for the omission. The defendant swore that his reason for the omission was, swore that his reason for the omission was, because he thought the claim was paid; that in 1865 he had left property with one C. to sell and pay it, among other debts, and told plaintiff's brother, who then held the note, that he had done so; and that as late as 1808 he had seen him, and he never mentioned the subject, nor had he at any time been asked for the money. The brother, in answer, said he had asked the control of sion, unexplained, might afford some evidence of fraudulent intent, yet this was repelled by the undisputed facts sworn to by defendant. Foster v. Taylor, 31 U. C. R. 24.

Foreign Discharge.]-Plaintiff sued on a foreign Discharge, — Plaintin such on a foreign judgment recovered against defendant, who pleaded never indebted, and that he had never been served with proceedings in the foreign court. During the progress of the suit defendant obtained a discharge in bankruptcy in the district court of the northern district of Ohio, and at the trial obtained leave to plead this discharge as a plea puis darrein continuance, on which issue was taken. Defendant proved that such a discharge would release defendant from all his debts provable against his estate in the United States, including the debt to the plaintiff. Plaintiff's only evidence in reply was, that defendant resided in Canada for two years previous to the discharge, and that he (plaintiff) had no notice of defendant's bankruptcy in the United States; and he contended that, as the Bankruptcy Acts required the bankrupt to reside or carry on business in the state where he filed his petition, and the defendant resided in Canada, the court in Ohio had no jurisdic-tion to grant a discharge, and that the one produced was therefore bad:—Held, that the discharge was a bar to plaintiff's suit :-Held, also, that it was not necessary for defendant to prove that all proper steps had been taken to obtain the discharge, but that the discharge itself was prima facie evidence of this. Ohele-macher v. Brown, 44 U. C. R. 366.

IV. INDIGENT DEBTORS' RELIEF.

1. Allowance.

The prisoner is sufficiently described in the affidavit as a prisoner in execution of the Midland district, at the suit of the plaintiff. Shuck v. Cranston, Tay. 370.

An affidavit that defendant is not worth £5, besides necessary wearing apparel, is sufficient. Malone v. Handy, 5 O. S. 75.

The court will not grant an order for arrears which accrued pending an unsuccessful application for discharge. Moran v.

Service of an order for allowance, under 2 Geo. IV. c. 8, s. 3, was not considered a service under 8 Geo. IV. c. 8. Shuck v. Cranston, Tay. 437.

Payment to a person acting as turnkey is good. Hyde v. Barnhart, Dra. 53.

After a rule for allowance, plaintiff cannot file fresh interrogatories and suspend the payment, although he hear of property supposed to have been made away, of which when filing the first interrogatories he had no knowledge. Ib. 54.

Where a defendant after obtaining his allowance goes on the limits, he must give notice of his return to custody before he is entitled to further payment.—S. C., Dra. 201.

A defendant rendered by his bail after the return of non est inventus to a ca. sa, is not in custody on mesne process, nor is he charged in execution, so as to obtain the weekly allowance. Lyman v. Vandecar, M. T. 2 Viet.

A debtor in custody on a criminal charge cannot obtain a rule for the weekly allowance in a civil suit. Thompson v. Hughson, M. T. 6 Vict.

The court will order the weekly allowance to a party imprisoned for non-payment of costs. Doe d. Vancott v. Reid, 4 U. C. R. 125.

A Judge in chambers cannot order the allowance for prisoners charged in execution on final process. Low v. Melvin, 1 C. L. Ch. 25.

Weekly allowance—How to be paid—Suggested fraud. Spence v. Drake, 2 L. J. 91.

2. Discharge.

The court will not grant a rule absolute in the first instance for discharge for non-payment, unless the affidavit state that no interrogatories have been filed by the plaintiff. Williams V. Crosby, Tay. 10.

To detain a prisoner who has applied for his discharge, the affidavit must not only state his possession of property obtained since his imprisonment, (or his obtaining his allowance), but also that he has secreted or fraudulently parted with it. Williams v. Crosby, Tay. 18.

The court refused to discharge a defendant where the plaintiff died, and the allowance was tendered by a person who had usually paid it, although no administration had been granted. Beard v. Orr, Dra. 241.

Affidavits may be received contradicting the answers of a prisoner to interrogatories filed to deprive him of the allowance, and in answer to an application for his discharge; and the court will not discharge the prisoner unless they are satisfied that he has no means of support, and has not fraudulently secreted or conveyed, &c. Montgomery v. Robinet, 2 O. S. 506.

Payment of the allowance after answers filed to the plaintiff's interrogatories is a waiver of any objections to the answers, and the plaintiff cannot file further interrogatories without leave. Malone v. Handy, 5 O. S. 310.

The answers of a defendant in custody to interrogatories by the plaintiff after an order for the allowance, must not only be full, but satisfactory. Sanderson v. Cameron, E. T. 2 Vice

The plaintiff may file interrogatories after his default in payment of the allowance, and before defendant has applied for his discharge. Elwood v. Monk, Butler v. Thomas, M. T. 3 Vict.

It is no excuse for not paying the allowance, that the defendant had it paid at the suit of another plaintiff, or that a co-defendant is not in custody, and has put in bail after the order granted. Truscott v. Walsh, 5 O. S. 79.

Where a defendant is arrested and has the allowance ordered in several causes, he is, under s. 4 of C. S. U. C. c. 25, entitled to one sum of 10s, a week, but in default of payment he can properly claim to be discharged in all the causes. The fact of non-payment of the costs of a former application dismissed with costs, is no reason for refusing a second application made upon sufficient materials. McInnes v. Webster, 8 L. J. 21.

Answers to interrogatories were filed and served in Toronto on Friday, 20th August; the allowance was not paid in Barrie on Monday 23rd:—Held, upon a summons to discharge the prisoner for non-payment, that a reasonable time had not elapsed between the filing of the answers and the non-payment. Regina v. Heathers, 1 C. L. Ch. 52.

An application for discharge must be supported by an affidavit of the turnkey that the money has not been paid, if the sheriff employ one: if not his affidavit should shew it. Carpenter v. Tout, 3 L. J. 151.

A prisoner in execution for seduction is not entitled to weekly allowance, or at all events not to be discharged for non-payment of it. Upthegrore v. Winters, 6 L. J. 88; Parcell v. McKeown, 3b. 58.

Held, that upon the affidavits and facts in this case, it sufficiently appeared that an order for the allowance had been served, and default made in payment, so that defendant was entitled to his discharge. Hutchinson v. Jackson, 2 P. R. 276.

An insolvent debtor charged in execution for seduction:—Held, entitled to relief. Perkins v. O'Connelly, 5 O. S. 80.

A defendant in custody under a ca, sa, for not answering satisfactorily interrogatories on a judgment in an action of seduction:— Held, a debtor, entitled to his discharge under C. S. U. C. cc. 24, 26. Boyd v. Bartram, 3 P. R. 28.

A defendant in custody in execution for a sum not exceeding £100 is not entitled to his discharge unless he has been six months in confinement in gaol. Denham v. Talbot, 5 0, 8, 79.

If not exceeding £20 he is entitled to his discharge on satisfying the court that he has been imprisoned more than three months, but the rule is not absolute in the first instance. King v. Keogh, 5 O. S. 326.

The notice required of intention to apply for discharge may be given before the full period of imprisonment has expired. Mc-Pherson v. Campbell, T. T. 4 & 5 Vict.

The debtor must shew that he has given the notice. Averill v. Baker, M. T. 5 Vict.

A prisoner in execution for debt cannot, by assigning his effects in trust for such creditors as choose to come in and on receiving a dividend discharge him, make himself an insolvent debtor within 10 & 11 Vict. c. 15. Gillespie V. Nickerson, 6 U. C. R. 628.

A debtor applying for his discharge must show that he has not since judgment so disposed of his effects as to defeat the creditors' remedy. An assignment, after judgment, for the benefit of creditors generally, will therefore prevent his discharge. Quære, whether it would affect his claim to the privilege of gaol limits. Aitkin v. Bullock, 11 U. C. R. 19.

On Saturday, the 14th August, a debtor applied for his discharge, under 10 & 11 Vict. c. 15, s. 3; on the 30th the plaintiff filed interrogatories:—Held, that the plaintiff filed interrogatories:—Held, that the plaintiff had all Monday, the 30th, to file his interrogatories. Semble, also, that they must be filed before the expiration of the fifteen days limited by the Act. Bulkley v. Grigge, 1 C. L. Ch. 50.

A prisoner applying to be discharged from custody under s. 300 of the C. L. P. Act, 1856, should shew, in addition to the other requirements of that section, that he has been in close custody for three successive calendar months. McLeod v. Buchanan, 2 L. J. 229.

A debtor in custody on mesne process will not be discharged under s. 295 of the C. L. P. Act, 1856, for default in payment of weekly allowance, until he has answered the interrogatories filed under s. 296, even after such default made. Corcoran v. Taylor, 2 L. J. 233.

Since the repeal of 10 & 11 Vict. c. 15, no insolvent debtor can apply to be discharged upon the mere affidavit of his not being worth £5, exclusive of wearing apparel. Proceedings must for that purpose be had under s. 300 of C. L. P. Act, 1856. Travis v. Wanless, 3 L. J. 89.

Prisoner in custody on mesne process cannot obtain his discharge by applying under s. 300, C. L. P. Act, 1856. Wright v. Huil, 3 L. J. 108.

Held, 1. Upon the answers of defendant to interrogatories and his oral examination, that, notwithstanding the statements of the debtor to the contrary, it sufficiently appeared he had wilffully contracted the debts for which the judgments were recovered, without having had at the time a reasonable assurance of being able to pay or discharge the same. 2. That it was the duty of the Judge to whom application was made for discharge of the debtor, on the ground that he was not worth each of the debtor, on the ground that he was not worth extended that the debtor of the debtor, and the second of the debtor, on the ground that he was not worth the contract of the debtor, and he was the second of the debtor, and he was the debtor of the debtor, and he was desired, it should be a condition of the discharge before Michel et al. (as the debtor should assign his interest in the assets and effects of the firm of which he was a member. Winks v. Holden, Ogiley v. Holden, 1 Co. L. J. 100.

An affidavit for discharge from close custody must, under s. 8 of C. S. U. C. c. 26, be positive to the effect that the debtor is not worth $20, exclusive of his necessary wearing apparel, &c. Dougall v. Yager, 1 C. L. J. 133.

Before a debtor can be discharged on interrogatories, he must disclose what he has done with his property by answers which are in the opinion of the Judge sufficient, that is, full, complete and true. A disposition of property, though not necessarily a moral fraud, may be fraudulent as against, and calraudo, may be transment as against, and car-culated to injure, his creditors, and therefore militate against the discharge. Dougall v. Yager, 2 C. L. J. 161. Further explanations and a transfer of certain claims to the creditor were required. Ib.

Where a defendant in close custody under a ca. sa. in an action of crim, con, has not answered interrogatories, and appears to have the means of satisfying a large portion of the means of satisfying a large portion of the judgment, he is neither entitled to be discharged under C. S. U. C. c. 26, s. 8, nor to be re-committed under s. 11 for twelve months, and then discharged. Glennie v. Ross, 15 C. P. 536.

Where a defendant applies for his discharge under 10 & 11 Vict. c, 15, affidavits may be received from the plaintiff contradicting the answers to interrogatories, or shewing that they cannot be true. Clarkson v. Hart, 9 U. C. R. 348.

It was held otherwise in Campbell v. Anderson, 1 C. L. Ch. 91.

The expression in s. 9 of the Indigent Debtors' Act, R. S. O. 1897 c. S1, "if the matter thereof is deemed satisfactory"—referring to the examination of the debtor-means, " if he fully and credibly gives the information called for by viva voce questions." The object of the statute and the examination is to test the statute and the examination is to test the verity of the statement that the debtor has not wherewith to pay—that he is in fact an indigent debtor—and if he fully and fairly discloses his dealings with his property so as to make it appear that his affidavit is correct, and that he has in truth no means in his possession or under his control to pay any part of the claim, then he should be discharged from custody, even though he may have fraudulently disposed of his property and although his manner of dealing therewith may have been unsatisfactory for that son:—Held, also, that affidavits could be looked at upon a motion for discharge of the defendant, to supplement the examination, but only as an indulgence where filed after the appeal was launched. People's Loan and Deposit Company v. Dale, 18 P. R. 338.

The answers of a prisoner being styled in The answers of a prisoner being styled in the cause, and initiuled in the proper court, were headed "The answers upon oath of," &c., and proceeded thus: "To the first interrogatory, he saith," &c. 2. To the second interrogatory, &c., not adding "he saith," To the fiteenth interrogatory only the figures "15" were prefixed. The jurat stated that the deponent was sworn, &c., " and made oath that the foregoing answers were true, on this 8th day of March, 1854:"—Held, that the forms of the answers and the jurat were defective. Addy v. Brouse, 1 P. R. 234.

The provisions of 5 Will. IV. c. 3, s. 6, not having been re-enacted in the Consolidated Statutes, the law has been changed, and the Statutes, the law has been changed, and the debtor is now entitled to his discharge if he give the information called for by interrogatories or examination vivâ voce, and it appears that he is not worth $20 exclusive of his articles exempted, unless his case is brought within the provisions of C. S. U. C. C. 25, s. 11. Wallis v. Harper and Gibson, 3 c. 26, s. 11. Wallis v. Harper and Gibson, 3

 P. R. 50.
 This case, upon the result of the interrogatories and examination viva voce as stated in the report, was held not within any of the provisions in that section, and the debtor was discharged; but it was made a condition that he should assign to the plaintiff certain claims, Ib.

The provisions of the C. S. U. C. c. 26. apply to the court of chancery, and a debtor confined under a writ of arrest may apply for his discharge under s. 7. Lawson v. Crookshank, 2 Ch. Ch. 413.

Under 7 Vict. c. 31, s. 6, the court would not punish defendant by commitment unless upon his examination the cause of action and the circumstances would clearly warrant such a course, and in this case it was refused. McCue v. Todd, 1 U. C. R. 278.

3. Miscellaneous Cases.

Attacking Judgment.] - A defendant, after having been discharged from custody as an insolvent debtor by the order of a Judge in chambers, will not be allowed to take ex-ceptions to the judgment previously obtained in the same cause, though if the discharge be made on the consent of the plaintiff only, it may be different. Dexter v. Fitzgibbon, 4 L. J. 43.

V. INSOLVENT ACTS BEFORE 1864.

1. In General.

Act of Bankruptcy.]—Deed of assignment by bankrupt to one of his creditors, with a right of preference—Annexing of schedule a right of preference—Annexing of schedule to deed—Assignment on the face of the instrument of all bankrupt's estate to one creditor, an act of bankrupt's estate to one creditor, an act of bankruptey per se. Ousere, anything short of this such an act. Kerr v. Coleman, 6 U. C. R. 218.

Construction of Bankruptey Act, 7 Viet. c. 10, clauses 2 and 19, also of proviso to clause 19, and also of clauses 37 and 38. as to the necessity the Act imposes upon the assignee of a bankrupt seeking to invalidate an assignment to a particular creditor, to prove that the assignment was voluntary, besides being made in contemplation of bank-sides being made in contemplation of bank-ruptcy, with the knowledge of the creditor, and for the purpose of a preference. Ib. Semble, that a jury finding "that the as-signment was executed in contemplation of bankruptcy, and that defendant knew when he took it that the other creditors would not be paid their debts," is sufficient to satisfy the Act, and avoids the assignment, without any direction or finding upon the assignment being voluntary. Ib.

Application of English Act.] — See Maulson v. Commercial Bank, 2 U. C. R. 338.

Costs of Proving Claim.]—See In re Wallace, 2 O. S. 233.

Creditor's Refusal to Redeem-Action Against Insolvent]—A debtor made an assignment of certain real estate to B., a creditor, the deed being absolute in form, but intended as a security for the debt, and the vict. c. 10. Many years subsequently he filed a bill against the mortgagee's administrator for an account. The administrator, being for an account. The administrator, being ignorant of the bankruptcy, consented to a decree referring it to the master to take the necessary accounts on the footing of the as-signment being a security; but on afterwards discovering the fact of the bankruptcy, he filed a petition setting up the bankruptcy and claiming relief against the decree:—Held, that the consent to the decree was no bar to relief, and that the decree should be set aside, and the bill dismissed with costs, unless the assignee in bankruptcy was willing to adopt the suit and to become bound by it. The plaintif swore that at the meeting of the creditors B. refused to give up the property without receiving from the creditors payment in full of his debt; and that they refused to pay:—Held, that this did not put an end to their right to the property or authorize to their right to the property, or authorize the bankrupt to sue for it to his own use. Hatch v. Ross, 15 Gr. 96.

Defendant Becoming Bankrupt.]—A plea, "that after the making of the promise, and after the action had accrued, defendant became a bankrupt:"—Held, good on special demurrer. Short v. McMullen, 6 U. C. R. 407.

Ejectment for Property Sold.]—Where a bankrupt whose property had been sold under a commission of the court in Montreal, brought ejectment for the same land:—Held, that be was barred by 7 Vict. c. 10, and 9 Vict. c. 30. Bradbury v. Wasley, 9 C. P. 490

Interest.]—Where the estate of a bankrupt is sufficient to pay in full, and a surplus remains, interest must be allowed on all debts proved under the commission, where the debt, by express contract or by statute, bears interest, or where a contract to pay it is implied, but on no other debts will interest be allowed. Re Langstaff, 2 Gr. 165.

Payment Before Bankruptcy.] — See Moore v. Cook, 9 U. C. R. 261.

Plaintiff Becoming Bankrupt.]— Where a plaintiff commences an action, and pending the proceedings becomes a bankrupt, he may, under 7 Vict, c. 10, ss. 31 and 32, continue the suit in his own name, unless the assignees intervene. Ircland v. Wagstaff, 4 U. C. R. 231.

Preferential Assignments.] — Semble, 22 Vict. c. 26 has not altered the law except as to preferential assignments. Metcalf v. Keefer, 8 Gr. 392; 7 L. J. 270.

Prior Assignment.]—The effect of a legal assignment to trustees for creditors is, that it diverts the beneficial interest of the property assigned from the assignor, and subsequent assignees of his estate under the bankrupt laws do not take it as his assignees, for they acquire a legal interest in such property only as can be applied to the payment of his creditors generally under the bankrupt laws. Anderson v. Gamble, 8 U. C. R. 437.

Promissory Note Not Due.]—A note indorsed by the bankrupt before commission issued though not due until after, may be proved as a debt, and the plea of bankruptcy is a defence to it. Wood v. Hutt, 9 U. C. R. 344.

Proving Act of Bankruptcy.]—Act of bankruptcy must be stated in affidavits filed with Judge. In re Gillespie, 2 O. S. 2.

Proving Act of Bankruptey.] — A party suing out a commission of bankruptey, under 7 Vict. c. 10, must prove before the Judge or commissioner, not only the act of bankruptey, but also the trading. Such evidence cannot be afterwards received to uphold a commission issued without the proof having been given. In re Rose, 2 O. S. 14.

Right of Action for Negligence.]— Under S Vict. c. 48, the right to sue an attorney for negligence, vests in the assignee of an insolvent. Alexander v. A. B. & C. D., 5 U. C. R. 329.

Right of Action.]—Where a bankrupt, thirty days before the commission, bonâ fide assigned part of his interest in a bond to A. B. (viz., to £400 out of £500):—Held, that the bankrupt, and not his assignee, should sue for the interest A. B. had in the bond, Hughes v. Newcastle District Mutual Fire Ins. Co., S U. C. R. 315.

Setting Aside Commission.]—Commission of bankruptcy superseded on application to the vice-chancellor in the first instance, and not by way of appeal. In re Merritt, 1 O. S. 283.

Trader.]—Defendant was a trader, within 7 Vict. c. 10, but first became so after the expiration of that Act, and became insolvent before 19 & 20 Vict. c. 93:—Held, that he was clearly within the latter Act. Boulton v. Nourse, 15 U. C. R. 555.

Wife's Interest.]—Where the wife of a bankrupt in Lower Canada had a remainder in lands in Upper Canada, expectant on the death of her mother:—Held, that there was no interest which could vest in the åssignee, and that his not disclosing such interest was not fraudulent. Phillips v. Masson, 9 U. C. R, 20.

2. Composition and Discharge.

Bond.]—Debt on bond made by defendant and one W., as sureties for one S., conditioned that if said S. should not from time to time, &c., well and truly pay unto the plaintiff each and every of ten promissory notes on the respective days on which the same became due and payable, according to the tenor and effect of the said promissory notes respectively, then, if defendant and said W., or either of them, should well and truly, absolutely and at all events, pay or cause to be paid unto the plaintiff each and every of the said ten promissory notes on every of the said ten promissory notes on the respective days on which the same became payable, then, &c.; otherwise, &c., assigning based as to the last six notes. Plea, that S, did not pay the first and second of the said ten notes when the same became due and payable according to the tenor and effect thereof, and that thereupon the bond became forfeited; and that afterwards, and while the said notes remained due and unpaid-to wit, on, &c .- said S. became bankrupt; and that afterwards, and while the said notes remained due and unpaid, and after the said writing obligatory had become forfeited, the defendant became bankrupt, &c., and that said debt accrued due and was payable before the defendant became bankrupt:—Held, on demurrer, that the bond being forfeited before defendant's bankruptcy, therefore the penalty be-came a debt which the plaintiff might have applied to have retained in the hands of the defendant's assignee till the contingency happened, and then have proved; and that the defendant was discharged, and the plea consequently good. Perrin v. Hamilton, 5 C.

Bond.]—C., one of the obligors in a bond of indemnity to the sheriff under a writ of attachment, obtained a final order for protection from process; indement was obtained in an action against the sheriff, subsequently to the filing of the petition and the bond, but was not referred to in C's schedule there-to-Held, that C. was not discharged by such final order, the claim not being one which could have been proved against his estate either in insolvency or bankruptcy. Moody v. Bull, 7 C. P. 15.

Bond.]—Action on a bond to the limits against F and his sureties, Sixth plea, that by an order made according to 8 Vict. c. 48, and 19 & 29 Vict. c. 93, the defendant F, was duly discharged from the cause of action for which the arrest took place. Seventh plea, that before the said F, departed from the limits, and after his arrest and bail given, an interim order for protection was given to him, which was in full force at the time of his departure as alleged. Eighth plea, that before his suit, a petition for protection of said F, was presented to W. S., county Judge, and filed in the insolvent court, and thereupon a final order for protection and distribution was made by said W. S., duly authorized: and that the debt for which the attachment issued, on which F, was arrested, was contracted before the filing of said petition:—Held, on demurrer, pleas bad. Meyers v. Francis, 15 U. C. R., 505.

Composition—Advantage to One Creditor. |—A commission of bankruptey issued against J. V., one of two joint makers of a promissory note to plaintiff. J. V. desired to compromise with his creditors, and the plaintiff agreed to this, provided the residue of the note was secured to him. Defendant gave plaintiff a bond to secure it on real estate:-Held, that the bond was void. Smith v. Dittrick, S U. C. R. 589.

Covenant to Indemnify.]—Covenant to indemnify "generally and without exception" against a charterparty which defendants had assumed:—Held, under the circumstances of this case, not to be discharged by defendants' bankruptey and certificate. Jarvis v. Walker, 9 U. C. R. 136.

Defending One Action and Allowing Judgment by Default of Another.]—
The fact that a debtor defends one action brought against him by a creditor, and allows judgment by default for want of an appearance in another suit, is not such an undue preference of one creditor as will render the judgment void under 22 Vict. c. 96, ss. 18 and 19. Young w. Christic, 7 Gr. 312.

Discharge.] — The final order under 8 Viet. c. 48, must be as well for the distribution of the effects of the bankrupt, as for protecting his person and goods from process. Ferric v. Lockhart, 4 U. C. R. 477.

The Judge's order under the insolvent law

The Judge's order under the insolvent law need not be confirmed by the court of review, to operate as a discharge from actions. Ib.

Discharge.]—To an action on a note defendant pleaded that after contracting the debt, and before this suit, a petition for protection from process was duly, and according to the statute, presented by him to a county Judge, and filed in the insolvent court; and that thereupon, before action, a final order for protection and distribution was made by, &c.; and that the said debt was contracted before the date of filing said petition. The plaintiff replied that the promise was made, and the cause of action accrued, after the petition was presented—concluding to the country:—Held, on demurrer, replication bad; plea good. March v. Alexander. 10 U. C. R. 435.

Discharge. | — Quere, whether a person having failed before the Bankruptey Act, 7 Vict. c. 10, but continuing a trader, and unable to meet his engagements, and so being able to avail himself of the Insolation Could still take advantage of the Insolation of the Act, 8 Vict. c. 48. But held, that Lamberd Corder obtained under the above circumstances was conclusive, and not to be questioned in an action brought for a debt barred by it, Stevenson v. Green, 11 U. C. R. 452, 12 U. C. R. 200.

Discharge.]—The order recited the petition, and that the debtor was entitled to protection, and then certified that "this final order" was granted under 19 & 20 Vict. c. 93: the operative words of the order being omitted:—Hield, that the order was insufficient. The effect of the order under 19 & 20 Vict. c. 93. is not confined to debts specified in the schedule. Commercial Bank v. Cuvillier, 18 U. C. R. 378.

Facilitating Judgment on Specially Indorsed Writ.)—Where the application is really in the interest of a subsequent judgment creditor, the mere fact that the judgment debtor makes an affidavit in support of the application, is not enough to make him the party applying. Where the debt is bond fide due, the circumstance that the debtor facilitates the plaintiff's recovery of a judgment on a specially indorsed writ, even in pursuance of a previous understanding, while he defends suits brought against him by other creditors, is not enough to constitute fraud. The C. S. U. C. c. 26, s. 17, which avoids judgments obtained on cognovits delivered under circumstances therein mentioned, does not extend to judgments obtained under specially indorsed writs. Quarer, is the fact that the debtor agrees to expedite the creditor's recovery of a just debt by judgment, under any circumstances, a collusive, a fraudulent, or a wrongful proceeding. White v. Lord, 13 C. P. 289, in this respect doubted. McKenzie v. Harris, 10 L. J. 213.

Interlocutory Judgment Before Discharge. — Though a certificate of bankruptey he no discharge tilt confirmed, an interlocutory judgment entered before confirmation will be set aside to allow the bankrupt to plead his certificate, or the court will relieve him by staying the execution of the fig., on a proper application after judgment and execution issued. Commercial Bank v. Culross, 3 U. C. R., 176.

Judge in Chambers.]—A Judge in chambers will not in general entertain or enter into a question as to the validity of an order or discharge for insolvency in the nature of a bankrupt's certificate, under 19 & 20 Vict. c. 95, but will rather let the point be determined by way of audita querela. Schofield v. Bull, 3 L. J. 204.

Lower Canadian Discharge,]—Under Viet, c. 10, s. 74, a certificate of discharge under the ordinance passed in Lower Canada, is a discharge from debts in Upper Canada which were provable under the Lower Canada commission. McDonald v. Dickenson, 1 U. C. R. 15.

Not Entering Defence.]—A debtor while indebted to one creditor, and alleged to be insolvent, assigned a note to another creditor for a bond fide debt. Subsequently both creditors sued for their respective demands, but to enable one of them to obtain a first judgment no defence was entered to his action, while the other action was defended. The court, following Young v. Christie, 7 Gr. 312, refused to restrain the first judgment creditor from enforcing his execution. McKenna v. Smith, 10 Gr. 40.

Order Under 19 Viet. c. 93.]—Declaration on a note, and common counts. Plea, that defendant had been a trader in Typer Canada within the Baukrupt Act 7 Vict. c. 19, and since the expiration thereof became insolvent, &c., but not stating that he was insolvent at the passing of 19 & 20 Vict. c. 95, whereunder he filed his petition, and chaimed to be exempt:—Held, not sufficient under 19 & 20 Vict., and that the clause in the order, "and it appearing that the said defendant by virtue of the statutes in that case (19 Vict.), made and provided, is entitled to the protection of his person," &c. could not be constructed as an adjudication by the court that the petitioner was insolvent at the passing of the Act. Smith v. Dempsey, 10 C. P. 515.

Pleading Lower Canadian Certificate.]—The certificate obtained by a bankrupt under the ordinance of Lower Canada, 2 Vict. (3) c. 36, prior to 7 Vict. c. 10, might be given in evidence under the general form of plea allowed by s. 64. Phillips v. Masson, 9 U. C. R. 20.

So might fraud by the bankrupt in obtaining his certificate. Ib.

Refusal of Certificate.]—Where a trader had requested one of his creditors to sue out a commission of bankruptcy against such trader, and upon the promise of being afterwards paid his debt in full the creditor sued out the commission, and the Judge below had refused to grant the bankrupt his certificate, the court of review refused to interfere. Exparte Deltor, 1 O. 8. 278.

Scheduled Debt.]—Where such an order is pleaded in bar of a debt, it must be averred that such debt was included in defendant's schedule. Boulton v. Nourse, 11 U. C. R. 452.

Scheduled Debt.]—The plaintiff took defendant's note for advances made, for £366, on the 19th March, at three months. On the 19th defendant obtained his final order for discharge under 8 Vict. e. 48. the plaintiff being mentioned in his schedule as a creditor for £150:—Held, that the order was not a bar to the note, even as to the £150, if included in it. Greencood v. Farrell, 17 U. C. R. 490.

Staying Certificate.]—K. having become a bankrupt, and passed the several examinations required by the 7 Vict. c. 10, before the Judge of the Niagara district court, and obtained from the commissioner his certificate, a petition was presented to the vice-chancellor by several of his creditors, praying a stay of the certificate, on grounds of fraud. &c.:—Held, that the commissioner of bankrupts is the only person who can exercise any discretion in granting or refusing the certificate to the bankrupt, under the statute. In re Kieseck, 1 O. S. 225.

Withdrawing Appearance.] — Defendants being insolvent, the plaintiffs on the 7th January, issued a writ, which was served on the 12th. On the 17th an appearance was entered and a consent given two days after to withdraw the same, which was filed on the 23rd, and judgment entered for want of appearance on the same day. Execution was issued on the 30th. On the 12th January, defendants dissolved partnership, and on the 23rd, L., one of the defendants, absconded from the Province. A creditor of defendants sued out an attachment against the goods of L. under C. S. U. C. c. 25, s. 2, and applied under s. 22, to set aside the judgment and execution of plaintiffs for fraud and collusion in obtaining same between plaintiffs and defendants.—Held, that the withdrawal of the appearance we have the defendants free defendants of the appearance with the second of the motion, shewed sufficient grounds for setting aside the execution for fraud and collusion. White v. Lord, 15 C. P. 289.

Withdrawing Plea.] — An attachment issued against defendant on 6th July. On the same day a summons was served on him abroad at the suit of G. Within six months the plaintiff sued out another attachment. It did not appear whether the plaintiff in the first attachment had obtained judgment, or whether that writ was issued, or G.'s summons served first, but G. first obtained execution:—Held, that so far as appeared G. was entitled to the benefit of his fi. fa. as against these plaintiffs, and that the mere fact that defendant withdrew his plea and allowed G to get judgment by default, was no ground for imputing collusion in obtaining such judgment. Caird v. Fitzell, 2 P. R. 262.

3. Effect on Executions.

The seizure and levy in execution under 7 Vict. c, 10, s, 37, to avoid the effect of a commission subsequently issued, mean only the seizure, and not the actual levying of the money. Hales v. Tracy, 1 U. C. R. 541.

If a seizure be made without notice of a If a seizure be made without notice of a prior act of bankruptey, the sheriff may proceed and sell, and pay the proceeds to the execution creditor, though the commission be placed in his hands before sale. Maulson v. Commercial Bank, 2 U. C. R. 338.

Where a party had confessed judgment to check before the bankrupt law, with the a bank before the bankrupt law, with the understanding that it would not be enforced on payment of a certain sum every fortnight; and it was agreed, after several payments, that the confession should stand also as a security for notes to be discounted for the security for notes to be discounted for the party; and proceedings having been threat-ened by other creditors, the bank issued exe-cution and sold:—Held, that the assignees of the bankrupt, on a commission issued after the seizure, but before the sale, could not recover the proceeds in an action for money had and received against the bank. Ib.

To support an application by an insolvent to set aside an execution, a levy must be shewn upon some property not vested in the assignee, who would otherwise be the proper party to apply. Mullens v. Burke, 1 P. R.

A fi. fa. placed in the sheriff's hands before A h. I. placed in the sherin's manus below the commission was sealed, but on the same day on which it was completed and delivered to the sheriff, has priority over the commission. Beckman v. Jarvis, 3 U. C. R. 280.

Quære, what course is the sheriff to pursue upon an execution against the goods of one of two partners under the circumstances of one being a bankrupt, and the other not. O'Neill v. Hamilton, 4 U. C. R. 294.

A notice to the execution creditor in general terms before the sheriff could have levied, without specifying any particular act of bankruptcy, is sufficient to protect the debtor's property for all his creditors. French v. Kingsmill, 5 U. C. R. 30.

Notice of a declaration of insolvency having been filed, is notice of an act of bankruptcy from the time of its filing, provided a com-mission shall issue upon it within two months, and that the execution creditor or his attorney was aware of the fact before suing

Ib. out execution.

Where defendant had obtained his certifior determinent had obtained his certificate of discharge after judgment and before execution, the execution and all subsequent proceedings were set aside with costs. Harris v. Bunnell, 2 P. R. 103. 4. Preferential Transactions.

Advance and Pre-existing Debt. person in embarrassed circumstances applied to one of his creditors to supply him with goods to enable him to carry on his business, which the creditor agreed to supply on obtaining security therefor, as also for his pre-existing debt; and a chattel mortgage for this purpose was accordingly given, and the goods supplied:—Held, that this was not such a preference as rendered the chattel mortgage void. Risk v. Sleeman, 21 Gr. 250.

Assignment of Judgment-Notice to Debtor-Lien for Costs. G. recovered a judgment against D., and afterwards, though insolvent, assigned it by two assignments to his attorney, one for costs due him by G., and the other for a debt due to R. by G. Afterwards, C. obtained a judgment against G., and attached the debt so due to him by D., and gave notice of the attachment to D, before the assignee of G, had given notice of his assignment. D. paid the moneys due to G, by himself to the sheriff, under an execution at the instance of the assignee of G.:—Held 1. That the mere fact of C. having been the first to give notice could not entitle him to priority over the assignee of G., but that by reason of the insolvency of G., the assignments were void under 22 Vict. c. 26. 2. That the solicitor of C. must be restricted to the costs incurred or C. must be restricted to the costs incurred by him in the action brought by G. against D., and that R. must stand as an ordinary creditor. Davidson v. Douglas, 15 Gr. 347.

Cognovit.]-A cognovit given, payable immediately, for a just debt, is not a voluntary or fraudulent procuring of the debtor's goods to be taken in execution in contemplation of bankruptcy, within the meaning of 7 Vict. c. 10. Beekman v. Workman, 1 U. C. R. 531.

Cognovit.]-A cognovit given in contemplation of bankruptey, and to give defendant a preference, is a security within s. 19, and therefore void. Brent v. Perry, 7 U. C. R.

Cognovit-Estoppel.]-Where a cognovit has been given by a bankrupt in fraud of the bankruptcy law, and it is therefore, with all steps taken under it, void, the assignee of the shelf the difference of the sheriff, must be looked upon as contending for the interest of the creditors, and not merely as representing the person or estates of the bankrupt; they therefore will not be estopped, as the bankrupt might, from disputing the validity of the cognovit and subsequent proceedings on the ground of fraud. Ponton v. Moodie, 7 U. C. R. 301.

Confession of Judgment.]-Trover by the assignees of a bankrupt. Plea, justifying under a judgment and execution against the bankrupt before bankruptcy, Replication : that the judgment was recovered on a confes-sion of judgment given "in contemplation of bankruptcy, and for the purpose of giving one bankruptcy, and for the purpose or giving one of several creditors a preference, and with the intent to delay and defeat other, creditors:"—Held, sufficient, without adding that it was given within a month of the commission. Breat v. Perry, 5 U. C. R. 538.

And see S. C., 7 U. C. R. 24.

Contemporaneous Security.]-One A. sold to B. his interest in certain land, there being an amount due thereon, to obtain a title, part of which A., and the remainder B., was part of which A., and the remainder B., was to pay. B. gave to A. personial property worth £100, and among it the horse in question in this suit, for his interest in the land; but to secure the payment by A. of his share (£2 lbs. 4d.,) B. took from A. a mortgage on the horse. An execution having been is said out of the division court against A., the horse was sold under it, and purchased by the horse was sold under it, and purchased by the plaintiff. B. being present and protesting against the sale. B. subsequently got peace-able possession of the horse, and this action of replevin was brought to obtain possession of it from him, the plaintiff claiming it under the division court sale:—Held, that the mortthe division court sale:—Held, that the mort-gage was not void, as being a preferential as-signment under s. 18 of C. S. U. C. c. 26, it being a contemporaneous security for the purchase money of property taken at the time of the sale. Ross v. Elliott, 11 C.

Creditor's Knowledge.] - An assignment made bonn fide by a person about to be-come a bankrupt to a creditor thirty days before commission issued, is good, if made without the creditor's knowledge of any act of bankruptey, or that bankruptey was in con-templation. Armour v. Phillips, 4 U. C. R.

Insurance Loss.] - Where a fire policy was after a loss verbally assigned to a credi tor by an insolvent person, in satisfaction of a debt not yet due, and in consideration of an advance of money at the time, the assignment was held void, as a fraudulent preference within C. S. U. C. c. 26, s. 18, Bank of Montreal v. McTavish, 13 Gr. 395.

Pre-existing Obligation.]-22 Vict. c. 26, s. 18, against preferences, does not apply to a conveyance of real estate sold by the debtor before his insolvency, but not paid for. Carradice v. Currie, 19 Gr. 108.

Pressure.]-Held, that a mortgage by an insolvent, or by one on the eve of insolvency, executed under pressure by the creditor, as for instance, a threat of a criminal prosecu-tion, but given to secure a pre-existing debt, was not a fraudulent preference under C. S. U. C. c. 26, s. 18, the pressure used rebutting the presumption of a fraudulent intention on the part of the debtor to prefer the creditor. The intent with which the instrument is given being a question for the jury, the circum-stances of pressure attending its execution, ought not to be withdrawn from them. Bank of Toronto v. McDougall, 15 C. P. 475.

Pressure.]-A mortgage of chattels to a creditor by a person in insolvent circum-stances, not made with the intent of giving such creditor a preference, but under pressure, and to obtain an extension of time, under the expectation of being thereby enabled to pay all his creditors in full, is not void under 22 Vict. c. 26. Gordon v. Young, 12 Gr. 318.

VI. INSOLVENT ACTS OF 1864, 1865, 1869, AND 1875.

1. Application and General Effect.

Acceptance of Assignment. |-- A voluntary assignment to an official assignee under the Insolvent Act of 1864, s. 2, is not valid unless accepted by the assignee. Yar-rington v. Lyon, 12 Gr. 308.

Acquiring Priority by Registration. Acquiring riverse in solvency cannot acquire priority over a prior vendee of the insolvent by prior registration of the instrument appointing such assignee. Colleer v. Shaw, 19 Gr. 599.

Assets in Different Counties or Pro-Assets in Different Counties or Fro-vinces.]—Where a trader in Ontario be-comes insolvent and an attachment in insol-vency is issued to the sheriff of the county in which he resides, the county Judge can issue another attachment to the sheriff of any county in Ontario, or of any district in Que-bec, in which the insolvent has property. Re Beard, 15 Gr. 441.

Assignment.]-A debtor, being in diffi-Assignment.—A debtor, being in aim-culties, assigned all his property to a creditor, who agreed to pay a composition of 40 cents in the $ within a year. This had been paid, except to defendant, who refused to accept, and issued execution. On an interpleader be-tween the assignee and the defendant, to try the title to the goods assigned, the jury having found the transaction bona fide: -Held, that such assignment was not avoided by the In-solvent Act, s. 8, for that the statute applies solvent Act, s. S. for that the statute applies only where proceedings are taken, and as against a person claiming, under it:—Held, also, that the assignment was not invalid under C. S. U. C. c. 26, s. 18. Squire v. Wett, 29 U. C. R. 328.

Assignment by One Partner.] - One of two partners, a few days before an attach-ment against both under the Act of 1864 had issued, assigned his estate for the benefit of his creditors:—Held, void as against the official assignee. Wilson v. Stevenson, 12 Gr.

Assignment Not in Accordance with the Act.]-An assignment for the benefit of creditors, not made in accordance with the Act, is an act of insolvency, and void as against an execution creditor, or the official assignee appointed in compulsory proceedings assignee appointed in compulsory proceedings under that Act, after such proceedings are taken, if finally sustained. Wilson v. Cramp, 11 Gr. 444, approved of. Thorne v. Torrance, 16 C. P. 445; 18 C. P. 29. Such proceedings render the assignment absolutely void as against creditors of the insolvent, so as to let in intermediate execu-tion creditors. S. C., 16 C. P. 445.

Assignment.]-Upon the death of one member of a firm, and the subsequent insolvency of the surviving partners, the joint estate passes to their assignee in insolvency. But where the capital of surviving partners having been lost, they, while the estate was supposed to be solvent, conveyed the same to a trustee for creditors upon the request of the executrix of a deceased partner in consideration of a release by her from all lia-bilities; and the executrix afterwards, upon obtaining probate, conveyed her interest to the trustee; and subsequently through a shrinkage in value the estate became insuffi-cient to meet the liabilities, it was:—Held. that by the assignment to the trustee, at the request of the executrix, for valuable consideration, they had parted with all interest in the estate, and nothing passed to the plaintiff, as assignee, under proceedings in insolitiff, as assignee. vency taken on the supposition that the assignment to the trustee was an act of insolvency, and that the assignment to the trustee not being questioned on the ground of fraud, the assignee of the survivors was precluded from any inquiry. Davidson v. Papps, 28 Gr.

Banker.]—A banker is a trader within s.-s. 2 of s. 3 of the Act of 1864. Bagwell v. Hamilton, 10 L. J. 305.

Banker and Broker.]-A banker, and exchange and money broker, and a dealer in foreign and uncurrent money, and buying and selling stocks:—Held, a trader within the Act of 1869. Duncan v. Smart, 35 U. C. R.

Barber.]—A barber is not a trader within the Act of 1869. Thomas v. Hall, 6 P. R. 172. And the sale of perfumery, being merely incidental to his business; and a purchase of tobacco nine months before his assignment, which he sold again immediately, being an isolated transaction; were held, upon the evidence, insufficient to bring him within the Act. 1b.

Barrister.]-One C., a practising barrister, dealt largely in land transactions, but it was not shewn that he depended thereon for his living. Becoming insolvent, proceedings under the Insolvent Act of 1875 were taken against him. The plaintiff was assignee of a mortgage made by C., and brought suit thereon against H., the assignee in insolvency of C. and D. and others, the owners of parts of the mortgaged lands. It was objected by D. the mortgaged lands. It was objected by D. that C. should have been made a party:—Held, that C. was not a trader within the meaning of the Insolvent Act and that nothing passed to the assignee in the insolvency proceedings. C. was therefore declared to be a necessary party, and leave was given to add him as a defendant. Joseph v. Haffner, 29 Gr. 421.

Debt not Due. |- Under the Insolvent Acts of this Province a creditor, whose debt has not matured, may commence proceedings against his debtor who is insolvent, in like manner as he might have done if his debt had been overdue at the time. In re Moore, 18 C. P. 446.

Earnings after Insolvency.]-An assignee in insolvency is entitled to all the earnings of an insolvent which are earned after the assignment in insolvency, and before discharge, over and above what is necessary for the reasonable maintenance of the insolvent and his family. Therefore, where an insolvent, pending his discharge, applied part of his earnings in the purchase of land for the benefit of his wife:—Held, that to the extent of earnings so applied the assignee was entitled to a lien on the land. Clarkson v. White, 4 O. R. 663.

Effect on Action.]-Declaration on note made by defendant, payable to plaintiff. Plea, on equitable grounds, in bar to the further maintenance of the action, averring the pendency of proceedings commenced by plaintiff against defendant, under the Insolvent Act of 1864, for the same cause of action, subsequently to the declaration in this cause:— Held, bad. Baldwin v. Peterman, 16 C. P.

Execution Creditor also Attaching.) Execution Creditor also Attaching.)
—Two assignments were made by the debtors on the 1st and 5th June, 1865, to the plaintiff, a creditor, for the benefit of creditors. On the 6th June, 1865, defendant, another creditor of the debtors, obtained judgment against them, and placed a fi. fa. in the sher-iff's hands, and on the 1st July, 1865, he also caused a writ of attachment under the Le caused a writ of attachment, under the In-solvent Act of 1864, to be issued against solvent Act of 1864, to be issued against them. The goods assigned to plaintiff were seized under a fi. fa.—Held, that the defendant, although the attaching creditor, was not put to his election, but might proceed in insolvency as well as upon his fi. fa. Thorne v. Torrance, 16 C. P. 445.

See S. C., in appeal, 18 C. P. 29.

Foreigner.]—The plaintiff had been engaged in business in Canada, though not permanestly resident there. He was arrested by defendant, a constable, who took possession of money found on him, and being discharged, he sued the defendant for the money. A writ of attachment having issued against him, one M. was appointed official assignee, and applied, under s. 4, s.-s. 9, of the Insolvent Act of 1864, to be allowed to intervene and represent the plaintiff in the suit. The plaintiff was not liable to the insolvent laws. The point being one of great practical importance, raised for the first time, the court, with a view to have it properly brought up, left the assignee to sue the defendant for the money, so that the defendant might apply under the Interpleader Act, and the question be presented on the record in a feigned issue. Mellon v. Nicholls, 27 U. C. R. 167.

Husband and Wife-Costs.]-In an action on a foreign judgment, it appeared from the roll that the judgment was on a bill of complaint brought in the State of New York, against S. and his wife, by one Saxton (the now defendant), to set aside a certain conveyance made to the wife as fraudulent, and that such bill was dismissed with costs to be paid by the plaintiff (the now defendant). It appeared also that the suit was substantially against the wife, her property being in dispute, and that her husband was joined for conformity only. An assignment of the judg-ment was produced from S. and wife to the now plaintiff, and a previous assignment, dur-ing the pendency of the foreign suit, of all costs accrued or that might accrue. It was admitted on behalf of the now plaintiff, that at the execution of the assignment S. was an insolvent under the Act of 1869, and that the now plaintiff was the attorney of S, and his wife in the foreign court :- Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to recover, for prima facie the costs for which the judgment was recovered were incurred and recovered by the wife, and did not pass to the assignee of her husband. Hughitt v. Saxton, 42 U. C. R. 49.

Innkeeper.] — An innkeeper is not a trader within the meaning of the Insolvent Act of 1869. Harman v. Clarkson, 22 C. P. 291.

Lease-Forfeiture.]-The lessees under a lease containing a covenant not to assign without leave, in the statutory form, made a voluntary assignment in insolvency on 17th May, 1869. The assignee sold the stock-intrade of the insolvents, who were dry goods merchants, and the purchaser took possession of the premises from him on the 27th May, the assignee also occupying a room there for the management of the estate:—Held, that such assignment was a breach of the covenant, and a forfeiture: for the term passed to the assignee under the provisions of the Insolvent Act, and if any election to accept it were necessary on his part, it was shewn by his conduct. Magee v. Rankin, 29 U. C. R. 257.

Limitations Act.]—Held, affirming 1 O. R. 107, that an assignment under the Insolvent Act, 1875, by an insolvent mortgager, does not stop the running of the Statute of Limitations so as to keep alive the claim of the mortgagee against the land. Court v, Walsh, 9 A. R. 294.

Married Woman.]-Under the Insolvent Act of 1875 a married woman may make her-self liable to be placed in insolvency. At a meeting of the insolvent's creditors a sale of his estate was made to his wife, who was not present at the meeting and took no personal part in its inception or completion. It was arranged that the purchase should be in her name, and that she should give her promissory notes for the price, secured by a mortgage on her separate real estate. It appeared that it was understood by every one engaged in this transaction that its object was to enable the husband to continue the business. After the hashand to continue the business. After the security had been given the shop was re-opened; the same sign-board remained over the door, and the business appeared to be carried on precisely as before. Purchases of goods were made in her name, for which she signed notes, but the orders were always given by her husband, and the correspondence, al-though conducted in her name, was written and signed by him without any communication with her. As soon as he obtained his discharge he substituted his own name for his wife's in correspondence and in notes. Upon a writ of attachment issued against her after her hus-band's discharge:—Held, that even if the stock-in-trade was her separate property, she never employed it in trade separate from her hashard, but allowed him to employ it in a business really his own; she was, therefore, not a trader within the Act of 1875. In re Gearing, 4 A. R. 173.

Mortgagor's Right of Set-off.]—A mortgagor and mortgagor dealt together for some years without having any settlement of accounts, and the former became insolvent. At the date of the insolvency there existed a right of set-off in favour of the mortgagor for the balance due him on their general dealings:

—Held, that such right of set-off passed the official assignee of the mortgagor, and that a transferce of the security took it subject to the equity. Court v. Holland, 29 Gr. 19.

Newspaper.]—See Pinkerton q. t. v. Ross. 33 U. C. R. 508, in which printing and publishing a newspaper was held to constitute the partners employed in it a partnership for trading purposes, within 33 Viet, c. 29, s. 10, and liable to the penalty for not registering such partnership.

Procuring Goods to be Taken in Execution.]—Refraining from entering an appearance to an action by a creditor on a specially indorsed writ, whereby he obtains judgment and a priority over other creditors, is not in itself a procuring of his goods, &c., to be seized or taken in execution within the meaning of the Act; but it is open to the creditors to satisfy the Judge that the taking in execution was through the procurement of the insolvent. Worthington v. Hamilton, 10 L. J. 304.

Promissory Note—Indorsement Abroad.]

—The payee of a promissory note made and payable in Ontario, who had absconded to Michigan, while there, and after a writ of attachment in insolvency had issued against him in Ontario, indorsed the note for good consideration to the plaintiffs, who took it bond fide. Evidence was given to prove that by the law of Michigan the indorsement was sufficient to pass the note to the plaintiff:—Held, that the plaintiffs could not recover, as the title to the note had vested in the assignce before the indorsement, and that his rights thereto could not be affected by the law of Michigan. Jenke v. Doran, 5 A. R. 558.

Purchasing Claim.]—A bonâ fide purchase for value of a claim against an insolvent, made by a creditor for the express purpose of increasing such creditor's demand to an amount sufficient to issue a writ of attachment under s. 9 of the Act of 1875, is valid. Carrier v. Allin, 2 A. R. 15.

Repeal of Act.]—The repeal of the Insolvent Act does not affect any insolvent whose estate has vested in the assignce prior to the repeal. Cooper v. Kirkpatrick, 8 P. R. 248.

Repeal of Act.]—Held, that the repeal of the Insolvent Acts by 43 Vict. c. 1 (b.), before claim made, was no bar thereto, the estate of the insolvent having vested in the assignee before lst April, 1889, and there having been no reconveyance of the property to the insolvent who had, however, obtained his discharge before action brought. Clarkson v. White, 4 O. R. 663.

Representative Capacity.]—Section 27 of the Insolvent Act of 1865, does not enable the creditors of a deceased person to put his executors or administrators into insolvency in their representative character. In re Sharpe, 20 C. P. 82.

Retroactive Effect.]—The Act of 1864 has not a retrospective effect, so as to make an act of insolvency committed before 1st September, 1864, sufficient to support an attachment issued after that day. Worthington v. Hamilton, 10 L. J. 304.

Reversionary Interest.]—An insolvent's reversionary interest in an estate passes to his assignee, and entitles the assignee to maintain a suit in a proper case for the appointment of new trustees, and for an account of the estate; but the court refused to make an order for the sale of such reversionary interest. Gray v. Hatch, 18 Gr. 72.

Rights of Action—Personal Wrong.]—
The plaintiff, having held the defendant in the suit to bail, recovered a verdict for slander, for enticing away and detaining his wife, and for assaulting her. Before recovering judgment he made an assignment under the Insolvent Act, and he then sued the bail on their recognizance, not having yet obtained his final discharge. The defendants set up the rights of the assignee:—Held, on demurrer, that the plaintiff was entitled to recover, for the causes of action, being for purely personal wrongs, did not pass to the assignee. Semble, also, that the proceeds of the suit when recovered could not be claimed by the assignee, and that he therefore could not in any way interfere with the suit. White v. Elliott, 30 U. C. R. 253.

Rights of Action-Personal Claim.]-On the 10th February, 1873, defendants obtained an order to stay proceedings until security was given for costs, on the ground that the plaintiff had become insolvent. The declara-tion contained three counts: 1. On a fire policy. 2. In trover, alleging as special damage that plaintiff's business was stopped, and he lost customers. 3. In trespass to goods, alleging similar special damage. No objection was made in chambers that the causes of action in the second and third counts did not pass to the assignee. On application to the court:—Held, that the causes of action under the first and second counts passed to the assignee, for as to the second, as the conversion, sighce, for as to the scool, as the primary cause of action, passed to the assignee, the special damage dependent upon it could not be sued for by the debtor; but that the cause of action in the third count did not pass, being for a personal claim of the debtor independent of his right of property:— Held, therefore, that as to the third count the order should not have been made: that being made without authority it might be rescinded as to that count; and that the action might be stayed on one count, leaving it to proceed on the others. Smith v. Commercial Union Insurance Co., 33 U. C. R. 529.

Rights of Action for Creditors' Benefit.] — The first count was for trespass quare clausum fregit, and carrying away plaintiff's goods and expelling him. second count alleged that defendants by deed covenanted to sell the plantifi certain lands and premises with the saw mill and machinery thereon and the rights and appurtenances thereto, for $2,523.79, together with all sums of money which defendants might, after the date of said deed, expend in and upon said lands, with interest at eight per cent, thereon; all such principal moneys and interest to be fully paid up and satisfied, and the agreement completed before the 8th June, 1874, and upon payment at the times specified defendants should convey the premises to the plaintiff, and should suffer for the payment of the purchase money, de-fault in payment; and all conditions were fulfilled, &c., yet after the making of the deed and before the expiration of the time limited for the payment of the purchase money, defor the payment of the purenase money, de-fendants entered and evicted plaintiff. Fourth count: trover. Plea: that after the accru-ing of the causes of action plaintiff became insolvent under the Act of 1869, and being such insolvent duly made an assignment to W., in whom, as such assignee, all the plain-tiff's estate, debts, assets, and effects, and the tiff's estific, dents, assets, the curve of action, &c., became vested. To this plaintiff replied that the action was brought for the benefit of plaintiff's creditors, who had given security for defendants' costs here. in :—Held, replication good, for the plaintiff having, before the appointment of the as-signee, rightly sued in his own name, he might continue to do so long as the as-signee did not intervene and have his name inserted; but that there was a formal defect, which might be amended, in not stating, as the plea was to the further maintenance of the action, that the action was continued since the appointment of the assignee for the benefit of the creditors, instead of that it was so brought. Semble, that the plaintiff, even after the assignee's appointment, might have sued in his own name for the causes of action in the first and second counts, if not for those in the fourth count: but that he might also, if he pleased, give the benefit of such causes of action to his creditors. Quarre, as to whether there was any necessity for the replication. Dunn v. Irvin, 25 C. P. 111.

Sale by Undischarged Insolvent.]—
To a declaration on the common counts, defendant pleaded that the plaintiff before action assigned under the Act of 1875 an official assignee, in whom the alleged cause of action became vested. Replication, that the cause of action became vested. Replication, that the cause of action was for goods bargained and sold by plaintiff to defendant after the assignment, and that the assignee had not interfered or required the defendant to pay him:
—Held, good. Graham v. McKernan, 42 U. C. R. 308.

Set-off.)—By a lease, made by the defendant to the insolvents, the lessees were "to get pay for improvements at a fair valuation, and to have the right of purchase during the term by paying the lessor, first, all claims by way of notes, or otherwise, he holds, or may hold, against the said lessees, and the sum of $255.15, as purchase money." &c. In January, 1875, an attachment under the Insolvent Act of 1869 was issued; and in March defendant field his claim, which included a note for $500, most of which sum had been expended in improvements, and had been obtained for that purpose. There had been a valuation of the improvements at the end of the term in 1877, at $275, in which defendant field not take part, and the assignee sued defined that the note formed an equitable fit gastes and the second of the term of the sum of the claim; that the right considered the formed an equitable fit gastes the feet of 1859; and the defendant was not precluded by having proved framework of defendant's claim was not a condition precedent to his paying for improvements. Mason & M cedent to his paying for improvements, Mason v. Macdonald, 45 U. C. R. 113.

The difference between our insolvent law, as to set-off, and that in England and the United States, remarked upon. Ib.

Subscription for Stock.]—Railway— Subscription for stock—Property in the stock held not to pass to assignee. See Benison v. Smith, 43 U. C. R. 503.

Trader—Evidence.].—The fact of the trading as well as the act of insolvency must be proved by the affidavits of two credible witnesses, in addition to the affidavit of the creditor, to support an attachment issued on the act of insolvency, created by s.-ss. 2, 3, and 4 of s. 3. Boguecil v. Hamilton, 10 I. J. 305.

A trader who had ceased to trade before 1st September, 1864, cannot be proceeded against under s.-ss. 2, 3, and 4. But it is not necessary for the plaintiff expressly to state in his affidavits for the attachment that the defendants were traders since the Act came into force. Ib.

Trader.]—Upon an application to set aside a writ of attachment, it appeared that the affidavit on which the order for the at-

Inchment was granted made no reference to the debtor's occupation or business, except that it described him in the style of cause as a merchant, and afterwards stated that the deponent believed the debtor was insolvent within the meaning of the Act of 1875;—Held, that the heading of an affidavit is merely descriptive, and not an allegation of fact. Held, also, that the affidavit in question was defective in not stating facts sufficient to satisfy the Judge who granted the order that the debtor was a trader within the meaning of the Act. Re Creen, 15 C, L, J, 35.

Watch.]—An insolvent has no right to retain a valuable and expensive watch from his assignee on the ground that it is necessary and ordinary wearing apparel. Re Sanborn, 14 C. L. J. 241.

Watch.]—But a watch and chain which an involvent had been in the habit of wearing, and of no great value, were not ordered to be given up to the assignee. Re Robinson, 15 C, L. J. 287.

2. Assignce's Liabilities and Rights.

Acceptance of Assignment.]—A volumbary assignment to an official assignce under the Insolvent Act of 1864, s. 2, is not valid unless accepted by the assignce. Yarrington v. Lyon, 12 Gr. 308.

Every material allegation in a bill should be positive; and an allegation, that so far as the polaritifs know, an assignee has not accepted the assignment executed by an insolvent, was held insufficient. Ib.

Accounting — Remored Assignee, 1—J. was appointed official assignee of B. under the Insolvent Acty of 1844 and 1865. After the Insolvent Act of 1859 came into force, the treditors removed him and appointed another assignee in his place. Before his removal, J. rendered an necount of his receipts and disbursements, with which the creditors were disastisfied, and presented a petition to the Judge to examine the account, to settle and adjust it, and to order J. to produce the books, papers, and vouchers of the estate, and to pay over all moneys which might be found to be in his hands. The Judge held that the assignee, having already rendered an account, must be taken to have "fully accounted" within the meaning of the Act of 1864; that he had no jurisdiction over the removed assignee under that Act; and that he could not proceed under that Act; and that he could not proceed under the Act of 1869, as the relief sought was not a "matter of procedure merely," and he dismissed the petition:—Held, on appeal, 1. That the summary remedies given by the Act of 1863 are applicable to assignees appointed under the Acts of 1864 and 1895; 2. That the Judge had jurisdiction, even under the Act of 1864, to examine into and decade upon the correctness of the items of an assignee's account, and to adjust such account; 3. That this jurisdiction exists over a removed assignee until he has "fully accounted" for his acts and conduct while he remained assignee; 4. That an assignee has not fully accounted within the meaning of the Act by rendering an account merely, but that the expression necessaryly means accounting and paying over; 5. That the duties of an assignee may be a summarily enforced by washer either Act be summarily enforced by under either Act be summarily enforced by the Judge, and a removed assignee remains subject to this jurisdiction until he has fully accounted for his acts and conduct while he remained assignee. In re Botsford, 22 C. P. 65.

Advertisement.]—By assignees in insolvency for the sale of property. See O'Reilly v. Rose, 18 Gr. 33.

Advertisement of Sale.]—The rule of law which requires a mortgage selling under a power of sale in his mortgage to observe the terms of such power, is also applicable to sale by a trustee or quasi trustee acting under a power. The power must be followed, and the rule applies with equal force to sales by an assignee of an insolvent estate, under the Act of 1898, s. 47, who in such cases acts under a statutory power authorizing a sale, "but only after advertisement thereof for a period of two months." In re Jarcis v. Cook, 29 Gr. 303.

An assignee proceeded to sell the lands of the insolvent without giving notice of such intended sale "for a period of two months" as prescribed by the Act, no sanction of the creditors thereto having been given:—Held, a good objection to the title by a vendee of the purchaser at such sale. 1b.

Appointment — Board of Trade — Resolution.] — Held, that the London board of trade, which was an organized body in operation before the Insolvent Act of 1864, had power, though not incorporated, to appoint official assignees under that Act; and that such appointment was properly made by resolution. Churcher v. Cousins, 28 U.C. R. 540.

The transmission of a copy of such resolu-

The transmission of a copy of such resolution to the clerk of the county court, under s. 4, is directory only; and the omission to send it will not invalidate the appointment.

Appointment—Board of Trade.] — Offician assigness cannot be appointed by unincorporated boards of trade formed after the passing of the Insolvent Act. Newton v. Ontario Bank, 13 Gr. 952, 15 Gr. 283.

Appointment—Board of Trade—County Judge, 1—The county Judge of a county, in which no board of trade existed, appointed an official assignee for the county within three months after the Insolvent Act of 1899 came into force:—Held, that such appointment was valid under s. 31 of the Act, although a board of trade existed in an adjoining county but had not appointed an assignee. Blakely v. Hull, 21 C. P. 138.

v. Hall, 21 C. P. 138. Quære, can a board of trade appoint an official assignee under s. 31 after the lapse of three months from the time when the Act

S., of, &c., president of the board of trade of the city of London, to be paid to him as president of the said board, his successors and assigns, and ex-ecuted by the sureties, but not by the asecuted by the sureries, but not by the signes:—Held, sufficient, under s. 4. s.-s. 2. Churcher v. Cousins, 28 U. C. R. 540. Quære, whether a defect in such security, or the absence of it altogether, would avoid the assignee's appointment. Ib.

Bond - Official Assignee - Creditors' Assignce. |-Held, that where an official assignee in insolvency had given a bond as such with sureties, pursuant to the Insolvent Act of 1875, and amending Acts, and the creditors had duly appointed the same individual to be creditors' assignee under s. 29 of that Act but had not required him to give security as such creditors' assignee, the sureties under the bond given by him as official assignee remained liable for his dealings with the estate, and were not discharged by reason of such appointment as creditors' assignee. Armstrong v. Forster, 6 O. R. 129.

Semble, that one who brings an action against an official assignee in insolvency for default in dealing with a certain estate, upon his bond given as security against such defaults, is not bound to ascertain if the assignee is in default as to other estates; and the sureties to the bond are discharged by payment to any one who recovers judgment against them. 1b.

Bond → Official Assignce → Creditors' Assignee. |-Held, that where an official assignee under the Insolvent Act of 1875 has taken possession of an insolvent estate in that capacity, and subsequently the creditors have, by a resolution passed at a meeting of the creditors, continued him as assignee to the estate without exacting any further security, and while acting as such assignee he makes default to account for moneys of the estate, the creditors have recourse upon the bond given for the due performance of his duties as official assignee. Letourneux v. Dansereau, 12 S. C. R. 307.

Chairman at Meeting. |-It is improper for the official assignee at the first meeting of creditors to act as chairman. Re Harris, 12 C. L. J. 251.

Collateral Attack on Status.] - Declaration by plaintiff as assignee in insolvency McM., on the common counts. Plea, that McM. was not a trader within the meaning of the Insolvent Act of 1869. Replication by way of estoppel, setting out in full the proceedings and adjudication in the insolvent court, shewing that an attachment in insolvency issued against McM., that he petitioned the Judge to set it aside on the ground, among others, that he was not a trader within the Act, that the Judge decided that he was a trader, and that such decision was affirmed on appeal:—Held, on demurrer, plea good; though the more formal plea would have been one denying that the plaintiff was assignee of McM. in manner and form, &c.:-Held, also, replication bad, as such adjudication and proceedings were not conclusive, at all events as against a debtor of McM., but were subject to question in this court. Groves v. McArdle, 33 U. C. R. 252.

Leave to take issue on the plea, reply specially, and demur, was refused. S. C., 9 C. L. J. 126.

Commission-Purchase at Percentage.]-An offer by a creditor to purchase the estate at twenty cents in the dollar, exclusive of the claim of a bank, was accepted. The bank was fully secured by the purchaser's indorsation :- Held, that the assignee was not entitled to a commission on the bank's claim. Re Smith & Co., 1 A. R. 480.

Disagreement Between Majority in Number and Majority in Value—Official Assignce-Residence Out of County.]-When the majority of creditors in number vote one way as to the appointment of an assignee, and the majority in value another way, there is not a "default of appointment," and under the circumstances of this case it was properly brought before the Judge, under s. 102 of the Act of 1875, to decide as to who should be assignee. A person properly selected as assignee is not ineligible because he is not an official assignee, or a resident of the county. Re Harris, 12 C. L. J. 251.

Dividend.]-An action may be brought against an assignee for a dividend on a duly collocated and advertised claim which has not been objected to. Simpson v. Newton, 4 C. L. J. 46.

How Far He Represents the Estate. —The official assignee of an insolvent's estate is appointed for the conservation of the estate, and his powers and duties are only pointed out in s. 16 of the Act of 1875. Where, therefore, a person claiming to be a purchaser of the assets petitioned the Judge in insolvency to have them restored to him. to which petition the official assignee appeared, and on discussion the Judge ordered a restoration of the estate to the alleged purchaser:-Held, that the insolvent estate was not represented in such proceeding, and that there had not been any valid adjudication upon the questions raised in this suit. Smith v. McMillan, 26 Gr. 300.

Invalid Appointment-Right of Creditor to Object. —Where a debtor assigns to an official assignee who has not been duly appointed, but the creditors generally accept and act upon the assignment :- Quære, whether the irregularity in the appointment can be set up by an individual creditor as rendering void the assignment. Newton v. Ontario Bank, 13

Invalid Appointment-Sale.]-Sale of goods by assignee not duly appointed.—Warranty of right to sell.—Liability. Johnston v. Barber, 20 C. P. 228.

Joint and Separate Creditors.]-At a meeting of creditors held to give their advice upon the appointment of an official assignee. it was held that the creditors of the individual partners had the right, as well as the creditors of the firm, to vote in the choice of an assignee. Luxton v. Hamilton, 10 L. J. 334.

Judge's Control Over Assignee.]-A Judge's Control Over Assignee.]—A demand for wages was made as a preferred claim to an assignee. The creditors at a meeting passed a resolution authorizing the assignee to pay all claims for wages, but the assignee refused payment of the claim as made. At this time no dividend sheet had been prepared. A summons was subsequently issued by the county Judge, calling on the assignee to shew cause why he should not pay the claim, and the assignee not appearing, evidence was taken before the Judge, and an order made for payment forthwith, with costs, of a sum less than the original demand. assignee afterwards paid the claim as reduced, but refused to pay any costs; upon which the Judge's order was made a rule of court, and execution issued thereupon against the goods of the assignee. Upon his application for a writ of prohibition to prohibit further proceedings on the writs or orders, &c. : -Held, 1, that the assignee should not have been ordered, so far as appeared, to pay costs; 2. that the power given to the Judge by s. 4, s.-s. 16, of the Act of 1864 to control the assignee, is in the nature of giving him perassigned is the harder of gring him per-sonal directions as to his duties, enforceable by imprisonment on default, but that the Judge has no power to enforce his orders by judgment and execution, though he might pos sibly compel an assignee to pay costs incurred solly compel an assignee to pay costs incurred by his disobetilence, by making it a condition that he should pay them before he could be considered purged of his contempt; and that the only remedy of the assignee was to apply for a prohibition. In re Clephorn and Munn, 2 C. L. J. 133.

List of Creditors.]—A list of creditors need not be appended to an assignment to an official assignee. Hingston v. Campbell, 2 C. L. J. 299.

Money Deposited by Insolvent—Non-production of Deposit Receipt, 1,—M. deposited a sum with the plaintiffs, and soon afterwards absconded. The plaintiffs had given him a receipt, stating the money was payable on the production of that document. A writ of attachment issued against the depositor's property as an absconding insolvent debtor under the insolvent Acts; and the defendant Little was appointed official assignee. He demanded the money without producing the receipt, which never came into his possession, but the plaintiffs for the money. The action was relating to the plaintiffs for the money, who will be a populated by an interim injunction issued in this suit, in which the plaintiffs required the defendant Little and another claimant of the macy, whose claim accrued after the attachment interplead. The court, under the circumstances,—Held, that the plaintiffs ought to have produced that they should pay it, with the circumstances of the they should pay it, with the costs occasioned to the estate by their refusal. Bank of Montreal v. Little, 17 Gr., 315.

Notice of Action.]—An official assignee in insolvency sued for trespass in taking and selling goods, is not entitled to notice of action. So held in accordance with the cases deciding that a sheriff is not entitled to such notice. Archibald v. Haldan, 30 U. C. R. 30.

Objecting to Appointment—Estoppel.]
—The plaintiff having proved his claim before the assignee and having obtained an order in this court to set aside the insolvents' discharge in the insolvent court, with costs to be paid to him out of their estate, was precluded from objecting that the assignee was not duly appointed. Allan v. Garratt, 30 U. C. R. 163.

Proof of Status.] — See Creighton v. Chittick, 7 S. C. R. 348.

Putting Status in Issue.]—In an action by plaintiff, describing himself as "the official assignee of the estate and effects of M. according to the statute in force concerning insolvents," against defendant, for a wrongful sale of goods seized by him under a distress warrant:—Held, that a plea denying the goods to be the goods of the plaintiff as such assignee, did not put in issue the plaintiff so official character as assignee. Me-Edwards v. McLean, 43 U. C. R. 454.

Reconveyance of Estate.]—After a deed of composition and discharge had been agreed upon, but before it was actually executed, the assignee, at the request of the inspectors, surrendered the estate to the insolvent, but never re-conveyed it. The insolvent afterwards refused to pay the assignee's fees in the insolvency proceedings, whereupon the assignee petitioned the Judge for an order on the insolvent to pay, and in default for permission to resume possession of the estate. Section 49 of the Insolvent Act of 1875 provides that in every case a deed of composition shall be on condition, whether the same be carried out the one of the condition of the estate. Section 49 of the Insolvent Act of 1875 provides that in every case a deed of composition shall be on condition, whether the same be carried out the open of the confirmation of such composition. Section 59 declares that the composition may be either payable in cash or on terms of credit, and the payment secured or not, according to the pleasure of the creditors signing it, and the discharge, either absolute or conditional upon the composition being paid, and the deed of composition and discharge should cease to have effect, the assignee has no power to resume possession of the estate:—Held, that under s. 59 the assignee has no power to resume possession of the estate:—Held, that under s. 59 the assignee has no power to resume possession of the tast that it it applied here the assignee had lost that life it applied here the assignee had lost that life it applied here the assignee had lost that life it applied here the assignee had lost that life it applied here the assignee had lost that life it applied here the assignee had lost that life it applied here the assignee had lost that life it applied here the assignee had lost that life it applied here the assignee had lost that life it applied here the assignee had lost that life it applied here the assignee had lost that life the possession.

Relation Back of Assignee's Title.]—The title of the official assignee appointed under compulsory proceedings does not, under the Act of 1864, relate back to the assignment, which is held to be the act of insolvency; his appointment vests in him only the estate and effects of the insolvent "as existing at the date of the issue of the writ of attachment, in the same manner and to the same extent as if a voluntary assignment under the provisions of the Act had been at that date executed in his favour by the insolvent." Thorne v. Torrance, 16 C. P. 445; 18 C. P. 20.

Replevin.]—Goods are repleviable out of the hands of a guardian in insolvency, notwithstanding C. S. U. C. c. 29, s. 2. Jameson v. Kerr., 6 P. R. 3. Replevin.)—Where the goods of A. having been seized by the sheriff under an execution against B., had been handed over by the sheriff to an assignee, to whom the debtor had made a voluntary assignment in insolvency: against the assignment and the repering against the assignment of 1863, could not apply against the plaintiff, who was not a creditor or in any way interested in the estate of the insolvent Act of the Made and the plaintiff, who was not a creditor or in any way interested in the estate of the insolvent. Burke v. McWhirter, 35 U. C. R. 1.

Replevin. |—An official assignee appointed under the Insolvent Act of 1875, is an officer within C. S. U. C. c. 29, s. 2, and goods in his possession as such assignee cannot be replevied. Barclay v. Sutton, 7 P. R. 14.

Residence. |—The Act of 1865, s. 2, does not authorize a voluntary assignment to an official assignee in any part of either Upper or Lower Canada; but means only that it may be made to any official assignee entitled to take it under the Act of 1894, without compliance with the formalities mentioned therein. White v. Cuthbertson, 17 C. P. 377.

Residence—Adoption of Invalid Appointment.]—Held, following Himston v. Campbell, 2 C. L. J. 299, and White v. Cuthbertson, 1.7 C. P. 3.77, that a voluntary assignment to an official assignee must be to one resident in the county within which the insolvent has his place of business; but a semble, that the creditors may acquiesce in an assignee, and thus constitute him their assignee, and thus constitute him their assignee. McWhirler v. Learmouth, 18 C. P.

Defendant's execution was handed to the sheriff on the 28th June, the assignment to the plaintiff made on the 16th July, and the meeting of creditors, at which defendant attended, by his attorney, who examined the insolvent and did not object to the assignment, and at which it was agreed to discharge the insolvent, was held on 28th August following:—Held, that even if the creditors had adopted plaintiff as their assignee, which did not appear, it would not have divested defendant of his rights under the execution, as their ratification of the assignment related back only to the date of the meeting, not to that of the assignment. Ib.

Restraining Proceedings against Surety, !—This court will not interfere by injunction to restrain proceedings instituted against the sureties of a defaulting assignee in insolvency, notwithstanding several actions may have been brought against them, and the aggregate amount sought to be recovered greatly exceeds the amounts for which they had become security. The proper mode of proceeding in such circumstances is as pointed out in Sinchair v. Baby, 2 P. R. 117. Craig v. Milne, 25 Gr. 259.

Revivor.]—When a defendant becomes insolvent after the service of the bill upon him, (but before the time for answering expires), and the suit is thereupon revived against the assignee in insolvency, it is necessary to serve the assignee with the bill as well as with the order to revive, or an order pro confesso cannot be obtained. Smith v. Lines, 1 Ch. Ch. 398.

Rights Higher than those of Execution Creditor.]—An assignee in insolvency may assert rights to the estate of the insolvent which cannot be enforced at the instance of an execution creditor. Fisken v. Brooke, 4 A. R. S.

Security for Costs.]—An assignee in Insolvency bonâ fide suing in discharge of his duty as such assignee will not be required to give security for costs on the ground that he is without means and not beneficially interested in the suit. Vars v. Gould, 8 P. R. 31.

Selecting Solicitor.]—The assignee has the sole right to select his own professional adviser, and cannot be made to change him, except upon reasonable ground. In re Lamb, 17 C. P. 173.

Setting Aside Judgment.] — Where final judgment in default of appearance to a special middle of very large special managers and execution issued on the 30th of same mouth, and a writ of attachment under the Insolvent Act of 1864 issued on the 3rd February, an application on the 28th March, at the instance of the official assignee, to set aside the judgment as irregular for a defect in the affidavit of service, was held to be too late. Dunn v. Dunn, 1 C. L. J. 239.

Leave to the official assignee to defend on the merits, which, if granted, would have had the effect of destroying plaintiff's priority as against the attaching creditors, was refused, and the official assignee left to his remedy, if any, in term, as against the judgment on the ground of fraud. The solicitor Assignee.]—The plaintiff, an atterney, was the official assignee of an insolvent estate. He brought an action on behalf of the estate and used his own name as the attorney on the record. The plaintiff obtained a verdiet:—Held, that under s. 32 of the Insolvent Act of 1815, he was entitled to tax disbursements only against the defendants. Agnew v. Ross. S.P. R. 67.

Taxation of Solicitors' Costs,]—An assignee in insolvency employed a firm of attorneys to perform certain services in connection with the estate. Subsequently he resigned the position and gave these attorneys the money of the estate remaining in his hands, with instructions to pay their own costs first, and then to hand the balance to the new assignee. This they did and rendered their bill of costs:
—Held, that the estate of the insolvent was, within the meaning of C. S. U. C. 236, s. 38, the "party liable to pay," though "not chargeable as a principal;" and the second assignee was entitled to have the bill taxed. In re A. 6 B., 6 P. R. 68.

Technical Objections to Chattei Mortgage. — Under s. 39 of the Insolvent Act of 1875, an assignee represents the creditors for the purpose of avoiding a mortgage for want of compliance with the Chattel Mortgage Act. Re Andrews, 2 A. R. 24.

Technical Objections to Chattel Mortgage,—A chattel mortgage, given to secure the mortgagee against his indorsements for a mortgagor, must show on its face that the notes indorsed, or any renewals thereof, will fall due within the year, otherwise the mortgage will be void against creditors or purchasers, but not against the assignee in insolvency. Ontario Bank v. Wilcox, 43 U. C. R. 460.

Technical Objections to Chattel Mortgage. —The assignee of an insolvent mortgagor can, for the benefit of creditors, impeach a chattel mortgage for non-compliance with the Chattel Mortgage Act. Re Barrett, 5 A. R. 206.

Technical Objections to Chattel Mortgage. —In trover for goods against an assignee in insolvency: —Held, following the last case, that the assignee may object to the absence of a bill of sale on an alleged sale by the insolvent just as an execution creditor or subsequent purchaser for value may do. Saurr v. Smith, 45 U. C. R. 156.

Technical Objections to Chattel Mortgage—Transfer of Right to Attack.] On December 3rd, 1875, M. & D. mortgaged to the plaintiffs, amongst other goods, a stumping machine and lumber waggon comstunping macronic and funder wagon complete, blacksmith's tools, lumber, &c., on the mortzarors' premises, which were described, with defeatance on payment of $1,255 on 1st June, 1876. There was a covenant that the mortgagees might enter and take possession and sell on default, or on any attempt by the mortgagors to sell or part with the possession of the goods without the mortgagees' but no provision for the mortgagors remaining in possession until default. The affidavit of bona fides stated that the mortgage was not made for the purpose of protecting the goods against the creditors of M. & D. not adding, or either of them-or preventing not adding, or either of them—or preventing the creditors obtaining their claims against him, instead of them. On the 27th March, one F. issued an attachment in insolvency against M. & D., and on the 26th April, H. was appointed assignee. On the same day, H. in consideration of $300, assigned to F. all his right and interest as assignee to and in all the personal estate, &c., of said insolvents; and on the 26th April, F., after reciting the above purchase, in consideration of ing the above purchase, in consideration of 8708, assigned to defendant, out of whose possession the plaintiffs, on the 17th May, 1876, replevied the goods in question, claim-1876, replevied the goods in questions ing them under the mortgage:—Held, that the plaintiffs were entitled to succeed; that in the absence of evidence of the creditors canction the sale by the assignee could not be supported; that it could not be assumed that the assignee intended to pass any title to the goods free from the mortgage; that neither F. nor defendant was in a position to raise objections to the mortgage; and that the plaintiff had a right to replevy, though the mortgage was not due. Quære, whether an assignee in insolvency can raise technical objections to a mortgage not impeachable under the Insolvent Acts. Per Gwynne, J.—If the assignee could have avoided the mortgage the assignee could have reditors, he could not transfer such right. The learned Judge at the trial found that the description of the goods in the mortgage, and the affidavit, were sufficient; that the mortgage was not invalid as creating a preference or under the insolvent law; and that s. 125 of the Insolvent concurred in these findings. Bertram v. Pen-dry, 27 C. P. 371.

Transfer of Right to Attack.]—On the 7th December, 1874, one L. made an assignment under the Insolvent Act of 1860, and the plaintiff was appointed assignee, On the 28th December, defendants filed their claim for $132,721.43, setting out certain warehouse receipts held by them as security, valued at $8,627.43, and other securities, also valued, which reduced the claim for proof to $99,458. At a meeting of creditors held on the same day, a proposal of a firm of L. & Co. to purchase the estate en bloc for $50,000, was accepted. On the 29th December, by to purchase the estate en bloc for $50,000, was accepted. On the 29th December, by resolution of the inspectors, defendants were authorized to retain these receipts at their valuation. On the 13th January, 1875, at a meeting of creditors, it was resolved that further inquiry should be made as to the validity of the receipts, and that the resolution of the inspectors be rescinded; but nothing more was done under it. On the 3rd Feb-ruary, 1875, a deed was executed by the assignee, by which, after reciting the agree-ment for sale to L. & Co., the assignee con-veyed certain real estate specified "and all regain real estate specified "and all the entire estate, stock-in-trade, book debts and effects of said insolvent, of every nature and kind soever, and all the interest of the creditors in the said estate and effects," to hold "the same, and all benefit that can or may be derived therefrom, unto said purchasers," L. & Co. were creditors of the estate, and had been present at all the meet-After this conveyance a ings of creditors. dividend was declared and advertised, which no objection was made, and the bank which no objection was made, and the bank received it on the reduced amount, $99,458, proved for by them. Subsequently L. & Co. brought this action in the name of the assignee for the goods covered by the ware-house receipts, on the ground that the receipts were invalid. The assignee, however, stated that he had never objected to their validity, and had intended to allow defendants to retain them; and had given no consent to this action being brought in his name, except what was contained in the transfer; and there was no further evidence shewing that the assignee sold or intended to sell, or L. & The assignee som of information is in or L. & Co., to purchase, the property in dispute:—

Held, that the action would not lie, for the claim did not pass under the transfer by the assignee, who had not authorized the suit, and the court refused to substitute the names of L. & Co. as plaintiffs. Quere, whether, after what had been done by the assignee and inspectors, the claim could have been assigneed. Mason v. Merchants' Bank, 27 C. P. 383.

Title of Firm's Assignees as against Creditor of Partner, I—V. and J. D. being in partnership, J. D. went out, and his father, D. D., took his place in the firm. About six months after this V. assigned to D. D. all the stock-in-trade, but the possession was not changed nor the assignment filed. The plaintiffs subsequently became assignees of the firm under the Insolvent Act of 1864, and of each of the partners. In an interpleader issue to try their right as against an execution creditor of V. alone, the execution being after the assignment to D. D., but whether before or after plaintiffs' title accrued did not appear:—Held, that they must succeed; that they were clearly entitled to the goods themselves, for defendant, as creditor of one partner, could not seize them out of the proseession of the assignees of the firm, although he might have a right to V.'s share of the proceeds. If any, after paying the partnership debts. Wilson v. Vogt, 24 U. C. R. 635.

3. Composition and Discharge,

(a) Conditions and Objections,

Aiding Creditor to Obtain Judgment. —The mere fact of a person in insolvent circumstances not defending one action, and defending and thus delaying another than the second of the secon

Assent of Majority-Surety.]-By deed of composition and discharge made be-tween the insolvents of the first part, and the several persons, firms and corporations who were creditors of the insolvents, thereinafter called the creditors, of the second part,
—after reciting the insolvents' inability to pay their liabilities in full, and their agreement with their creditors for a composition and discharge upon the terms and in manner thereinafter mentioned, under the provisions of the Act of 1875, and the insolvents' agreement to secure the payment of the creditors thereinafter mentioned by their notes,-it was witnessed that in consideration of their indebtedness, and of the discharge thereby given, the insolvents covenanted and agreed with all their creditors collectively, and severally, to pay to them and to each of them the amount of the composition specified and agreed upon by several instalments; and for securing the payment of the last three instalments the insolvents covenanted to have conveyed to the assignee the composition notes given to one G. T. G. T., who was not a creditor but a surety to the plaintiffs for defendants' debt, without paying their claim, and without their consent, proved as a creditor and signed the composition deed, and without him there would not have been a sufficient statutory majority:—Held, on demurrer to the pleadings set out in the report: I. that under ss. 10 and 61 of the Act of 1875, a nonunder ss. 10 and 61 of the Act of 1875, a non-assenting creditor need not have proved his claim to entitle him to the benefits of the deed; 2. that the deed was absolute, and not conditional on a delivery of the composition notes being made, the creditors' remedy be-ing on the insolvents' covenant; 3. that the deed was not open to objection as providing only for the partnership debts, for that it applied both to the joint and separate credi tors: 4. that under s. 2, s.-s. h, and ss. 49-52 of the Act of 1875, the consent to the deed of a majority of those creditors who have proved claims of $100 and upwards, and representing three-fourths in value of such claims proved, is required; 5, that G. T. had no right to prove. Lewis v. Tudhope, 27 C. P. 505.

Assent of Required Number of Creditors Surety-Fraud. |—The plaintifs, were creditors of the defendants, insolvents, for $10,800, and not having proved, T., who was surety for the plaintiffs, without having paid the debt, proved therefor, fearing, as he alleged, that, if compelled to pay, he would have no recourse against the estate. One R., a surety for other creditors, in like manner proved. The proof of these claims was not contested, and a deed of composition and discharge was entered into, which was executed by T. and R., it being admitted that without computing one or the other of these claims there were not creditors to three-fourths in value executing; and on the production to the Judge of the assignee's certificate of there being the proper number and value of creditors executing, the deed was confirmed. The composition was to be paid by instalments, for which the insolvents were to give their promissory notes, and it was provided in accordance with a stipulation to that effect by the creditors, that the three last payments to the creditors, except T., were to be secured by the assignment of the dividends on the notes to be given to T., and such notes were accordingly assigned by him as such security, and the proceeds thereof applied meeting a deficiency in such payments. After the deed had been confirmed and the estate handed back to the insolvents, the plaintiffs sent in proof of their claim, valuing their security, which the assignee refused to accept, because the estate had passed out of his hands, and he referred plaintiffs to the insolbut nothing further was done. vents. plaintiffs sued defendants on the common counts for the whole debt, and on a special count for the amount of the composition, alleging neglect in the defendants to give them the composition notes, or pay their debt :-Held, that the plaintiffs could not recover under the common counts, for that the deed of composition and discharge constituted good defence thereto; and the special replications thereto, set out in the report, were not proved: for that even if the plaintiffs' debt were excluded therefrom there would still be the three-fourths in value of creditors exe-cuting; that defendants did not, as was alleged, procure T. to prove so as to defeat the plaintiffs, for that he did it of his own accord for the reason above stated, nor did the giving the notes to T. diminish the proportion each creditor was entitled to, nor had the assignment of the notes as such security the effect of postponing the time of payment of the notes. Held, however, that the plaintiffs were entitled to recover the amount of the composition, after deducting the value of their security; that no demand of the notes was necessary, it being defendants' duty to give them; nor, in case of composition, for the plaintiffs to have proved their claim that what was done by plaintiffs amounted to a specification and valuation of their secubut, if not, defendants under the circumstances should not be permitted to set this up as a defence. Lewis v. Tudhope, 30 C. P.

Assignce's Refusal to Act.] — Held, following Yarrington v. Lyon, 12 Gr. 308, that a voluntary assignment to an official assignce under the Act of 1864, s. 2, is not valid when the assignce has refused to accept or act under it; and in such a case a discharge obtained by the insolvent could have no effect. Becher v. Blackburn, 23 C. P. 207.

Assignment Invalid—No Accounts.]— Discharge refused, because assignment not made to the assignee where insolvent carried on business, and was not in duplicate, and insolvent had kept no proper accounts. In re Sultican, 5 C. L. J. 71.

Books Not Kept.]—Under ss. 56 and 57 of the Insolvent Act of 1875, a Judge has no power to grant an insolvent his discharge, where he has failed to keep a cash book and account books suitable for his trade, even although such omission may not be due to any fraudulent intention. Re Gooding, 5 A. R. 643.

Books Not Kept.]—Where an insolvent omits to keep books of account suitable for lis trade, he is not entitled to an immediate discharge under the Insolvent Act of 1875 though such failure may not be owing to any improper motive. In this case, however, as the insolvent had kept certain books, which although imperfect were honestly meant as a husiness reord, his discharge was only suspended for three months. Re Bullivant, 5 A. R. 638.

Books Not Kept.]—In order to absolutely disentitle an insolvent to his discharge on the ground of failure to keep proper books of account, where the case is not one of a commercial business, the party opposing the discharge must shew that there were no books; or, if there were, in what respect they were defective. Re Russell, 7. A. R. 737.

Books Not Kept—Deficiency not Ac-counted For.]—The insolvent, nine months before his insolvency, stated to the contestant that he had a surplus of $40,000. When he failed it appeared that there was a deficiency of about that amount, the difference not being satisfactorily accounted for. He did not produce all his books, but it was proved that were kept in such a manner that they would not shew the true state of his affairs. The cash book had never been balanced, and were discounted which did not appear in any of the books, and goods were transferred from his wholesale to his retail place of business without entry in the books that were kept: Held. 1, that though an insolvent may be guilty of the offence of not fully, clearly, and truly stating the causes of his insolvency, that is no ground for refusing the discharge, even after a conviction for the offence; 2. that the omission to keep any books prevents the Judge from granting a discharge, whether the in-tent be fraudulent or not; but, 3, when they have been kept, it is not essential, on the one hand, that they should be kept in the most approved form nor are they sufficient, on the other, however carefully kept in some respects, if they fail to exhibit the insolvent's species, it they fall to exhibit the insolvent's exact position; 4, that under the facts in this case the insolvent was not entitled to his discharge. Liberty to the insolvent to renew the application was given, if he should be so advised, on his producing the remainder of his books. In re Hill, 7 A. R. 634.

Concealment of Assets.]—Where an insolvent before the meeting of his creditors concealed a portion of his stock.—Held, (under the Insolvent Act of 1864) that his discharge was thereby avoided, and that it was not the less a fraud because he had valued his lesses at a sum sufficient to cover the goods so concealed. The plaintiff, therefore, though he had signed a deed of composition and discharge, and the discharge had been confirmed, was held entitled to recover for his debt. Mc-Lean v. McLellan, 29 U. C. R. 548.

Concealment of Assets—Partnership.]

A final order of discharge obtained by an insolvent upon a deed of composition and discharge duly confirmed, will be vacated by this court, on bill filed by a creditor, party to the insolvency proceedings, where such discharge had been obtained by a fraudulent concent-ment of assets. An insolvent firm, on September 16th, 1878, made an assignment under the Insolvent Acts. On October 2nd, under the insolvent Acts. On October 2nd, 1878, a deed of composition and discharge, under the said Acts, was executed, whereby the said firm covenanted to pay a certain dividend, and on February 28th, 1879, the Judge in insolvency made an order for its confirmation, a sworn statement of the assets and liabilities of the firm having been first duly filed by the members thereof. afterwards one of the creditors, who had conafterwards one of the creditors, who had con-sented, on payment of a certain dividend, to assign his claim to S. as trustee for the in-solvent firm, and for the purpose of executing the said deed, though he himself refused to execute it, discovered that C., one of the members of the firm, had fraudulently concealed some of his assets, and he filed a bill in this court to have the said deed of composithis court to have the said deed of composi-tion, and the order confirming the same, de-clared void as against him:—Held, that the deed and order of confirmation must be va-cated as regarded C., and the insolvency proceedings reopened, so that there might be due administration of the assets thus wit held, and the assignment to S. must be prevented from being set up as a bar to such relief. McGee v. Campbell, 2 O. R. 130; reversing 28 Gr. 308.

Held, also, inasmuch as the assets fraudulently concealed were C's private property, and not the property of the partnership, the discharge should only be vacated as to private estate of C. Ib.

It also appeared that among C.'s assets was a had a claim, from a certain raum received by him, or to which he had a claim, from a certain railway company as compensation for services rendered as temporary acting president:—Held, that C. was bound to return as an asset the portion of the compensation payable for services rendered up to the date of the assignment in insolvency, but not the remainder. Ib.

rency, but not the remainder. Ib.

It appearing that part of C's assets was certain railway stock, obtained by him on a contract that he was to retain one-half if he could give the stock a marketable value, but that if he could not do so within a certain time, extending beyond the period of the insolvency proceedings, the transaction was to be void, and he was to re-transfer:—Held, that the shares should have been returned in his sworn statement as part of his assets, for the language of the statute was large enough to cover such an interest. It was a valid executory contract, and as such passed on insolvency to the assignee. Ib.

Consent of Creditors.]—The provisions of s. 11 of the Act of 1864, with reference to notices, do not apply to an insolvent who has a consent from his creditors to his discharge or has procured the execution by the requisite number of his creditors of a deed of composition and discharge, and who is applying for a confirmation of discharge. Section 9. s.-ss. 6 and 10, point out all that is to be done by the insolvent, to enable him to bring his applying the property of the confirmation of the confirmati cation before the Judge. In re Waddell, 2 C. L. J. 242.

Continuing Business After Insolvency.]—A trader, after discovering that he could not pay in full, continued his business, in the hope, which was not shewn to have been, absurd or unreasonable, that he would thereby be able to do so; and in the course of the business so continued contracted some new debts; but was unsuccessful, and found it necessary to assign under the Act:—Held, that he was not thereby disentitled to his discharge. In re Holt, 13 Gr. 568.

In such a case it may or may not be his duty to discontinue his trade, according to circumstances; continuing may be a fraud but is not necessarily so. Ib.

Debt Contracted by Fraud.]—Fraud in contracting debts before the Act (1864), is not to be excluded from consideration on an application to confirm the discharge. In re Oneans, 12 Gr. 500.

Deficiency not Accounted For. —The absence of any satisfactory statement how it came that a credit balance of $15,000 a short time before the insolvency was turned into a debit balance of nearly $13,000; the loan of $17,000 by the insolvent to his bother, to carry on a business which failed, and which was carried on without capital; the receipt of $1,250 by the insolvent a few months before his insolvency without any reasonable account of what had become of it; were considered to be circumstances which shewed that the insolvent was not entitled to his final certificate. Hood v. Dodds. 19 Gr. 639.

Explanation of Loss.]—Where creditors are called upon to accept a composition, they are entitled to know where the goods and money entrusted to the debtor are gone, and to what causes the loss is to be attributed. Hood v. Nodds, 19 Gr. 639.

An insolvent may be entitled to his discharge from arrest, though his conduct in trade may have been such as to disentitle him to a certificate of discharge from his debts. It

Failure to Pay Dividend.]—Held, that the insolvents were not entitled to a discharge under s. 65 of the Insolvent Act of 1875, as the facts, set out in the report of the case, did not shew that their failure to pay a dividend of ifty cents in the dollar was caused by circumstances arising more than one month after the mailing of the declaration of insolvency, for which they could not be justly held responsible within the meaning of the third proviso to that section. Quare, as to the effect of neglecting to mail such declaration to each creditor, as required by that section. In re-Galbraith and Christic, 5 A. R. 358.

False Representations as to Assets.]

—Where a trader, all whose property was heavily mortgaged, and who had large over-due debts which he could not pay, obtained credit from Montreal merchants, concealing his true position, falsely alleging that he was worth $4,000 more than he owed, and that he had no engagements he could not meet; this was held such fraud as disentified him to his discharge. In re Ouens, 12 Gr. 560.

Fraud.]—To a plea of discharge, confirmed by the Judge, the plaintiff replied a corrupt agreement between the insolvent and D. & Co., parties to the deed of composition and discharge, that in consideration of executing it D. & Co. should receive an additional sum above the composition, for which the insolvent gave them his note; and that the plaintiff and other creditors had no knowledge of such agreement until after the confirmation:—Held, a good answer, the confirmation not being made conclusive by the Act under such circumstances. Thompson v. Rutherford, 27 U. C. R. 205.

Fraud.]—In an action on a promissory note, with a plea of discharge under the Insolvency Act, and replication that the discharge was obtained by fraud, inasmuch as defendant had concealed from the assignee certain promissory notes, it appeared from his own evidence that defendant, several months own evidence that defendant, several months of the property of the state of the property of the prope

Fraud—Pleading.] — A declaration, after declaring on two bills of exchange in separate counts, proceeded to aver that the debt for which the bills were given was contracted under such circumstances as to render the defendant liable to imprisonment under s. 136 of the Insolvent Act of 1875. To this averment defendant demurred, treating it as a third count, on the ground that it was defective in not alleging certain facts necessary to bring defendants within the provisions of the Act:—Held, that this averment was not the subject of either a plea or demurrer. Rutherford v. Eakins, 27 C. P. 55.

Fraud—Pleading.] — Where a defendant was sued for a debt, and, under ss. 92 and 93 of the Act of 1849, was charged in the declaration with fraud committed in incurring such debt:—Held, that such fraud might be proved in an action and defendant declared guilty, whether the case was tried by a common jury or by a Judge without a jury. Regina v. Kerr, 26 C. P. 214, distinguished, as having been an indictment for an offence under s. 147. The defendant in such a case may plead or demur to that part of the declaration which charges the fraud. Elley v. Pratt, 41 U. C. R. 365.

Fraud.]—To a plea of a discharge under the Act of 1875, confirmed by the Judge, the plaintiff replied that defendant purchased the goods sued for on credit at a time when he knew himself to be unable to meet his engagements, which fact he concealed from the plaintiffs with intent to defraud the plaintiffs of the said goods Section 63 of the Act of 1875 declares, inter alia, that a discharge under the Act shall not apply without express consent of the creditor to any debt for enforcing payment of which the imprisonment of the debtor is permitted by the Act. Section 136 enacts that a person guilty of what was charged in the replication shall be guilty of a fraud, and liable to imprisonment, "provided always that in the suit or proceeding taken for the recovery of such debt the defendant be charged with such fraud, and be declared guilty of it by independent rendered in such suit or proceeding. The case was tried without a jury, and the Judge left it for the court to say whether, upon the facts as found by him, the defendant was guilty of fraud:—Held, affirming 10 U. C. R. 306, that the judgment referred to in s. 136 is the verdict of the jury, or the judgment given at the trial by the Judge, if the case is tried without a jury; and that the replication must fail, as the defendant had not been found guilty of fraud at the trial. Roomey v. Lyons, 2 A. R. 53.

Frand.)—The plaintiff sued the defendant, an insolvent, who had obtained his discharge under deed of composition and discharge, for deed alloged to have been contracted for the defect of the fractional of the debtor for enforcing payment is permitted by s. 136 of the Insolvent Act, 1875; —Held, reversing 42 U. C. R. 409, that the plaintiffs had not precluded themselves from enforcing the claim by having proved it in the ordinary way, and not as a debt contracted by frauld or by having taken notes made by the defendant and his sureties for the composition, and received payment of one of them. The term "dividend from the estate" in s. 63, includes a payment under a deed of composition and discharge. McMaster v. King, 3 A. R. 108.

Gambling.]—Gambling by a person who subsequently claims the benefit of the Act, is not fraud within the meaning of the Act of [864] and quere, whether gambling is fraud at all under that Act. In re Jones, 4 P. R. 317.

Indorsement of Notes.]—The mere independent of renewal notes by a person in insolvent circumstances is not a violation of s. S. s.* 7, of the Act of 1864. In re Jones, 4 P. R. 317.

Joint and Separate Creditors—Assent of Each Class Necessary.]—Where there are joint and separate creditors, a deed of composition and discharge, although providing for all the creditors and dealing with all the estates, is invalid under s. 56 of the Act of 1875, unless the assent of the requisite proportion of the creditors of each class, joint and separate, is obtained. In re Code and Crain, 3 A. R. 555.

Joint and Separate Creditors.]— A deed of composition and discharge made only with an insolvent's partnership creditors is not binding on an individual creditor; and even if the deed could be held to extend to individual creditors, the fact of its purporting to be made, not with all the creditors, but only with those executing the deed, would prevent it affecting a non-executing creditor. Pidgeon v. Martin, 25 C. P. 233.

No Assets.] — On application for a discharge:—Held, on the facts set out, that the insolvent had an estate to be administered under the Insolvent Act. Quere, whether, if there had been no estate, proceedings could have been taken by the debtor. In re Smith.

No Assets.]—The defendant having been arrested under a ca. sa. in April, 1873, applied for a discharge from custody, on the ground that when the order was made, and for a long time previous, he was an insolvent under the Act of 1899. It appeared that being sued by the plaintiff, who was his only creditor, the defendant, in September, 1873, made a voluntary assignment under the rate of the most of the plaintiff, who was the property of the pro

No Assignment.]—Under s. 9 of the Act of 1864, a consent to a discharge is operative even without an assignment, provided the insolvent files an affidavit that he has no estate or effects to assign. In this case the only notice given was the notice to discharge. In re Perry, 2 Ct. I. J. 75.

No Notice by Assignee—No Assets.]— The other provisions of the Act being complied with, a discharge cannot be refused because of the neglect of the assignee to give notice, as required by s. 11, s.-s. 1, of the Act of 1864, or because the insolvent had no estate. Re Thomas, 15 Gr. 1904.

Non-assenting Creditors not Parties—Estopped by Acceptance of Composition—Secured Debt.]—Held, 1. That a deed of composition and discharge under s. 9 of the Insolvent Act of 1864, purporting to be between the majority of the creditors of $100 and upwards of the first part, and the insolvents of the second part, is valid, though the non-assenting creditors were not specially made parties to the deed. 2. A creditor who has accepted the terms of a deed of composition cannot afterwards contest the confirmation of the discharge. 3. The debt of a secured creditor who has elected to accept his security in full of his claim, and obtained the consent of the assignee to such election, is not to be estimated in considering the amount of indebtedness. In re Lausson, 5 C. I. J. 232.

Notice of Objections to Discharge,]—
It is not necessary, under s. 54 of the Insolvent Act, 1875, to give the insolvent notice of the facts upon which the objecting creditors intend to contest the confirmation of a deed of composition and discharge. Re Walker, 2 A. R. 265.

Omission of Contingent Interest.]—
An insolvent had the possibility of an interest under a will (the construction of which was incidentally considered for the purpose of the appeal) which, however, was omitted from his schedule of assets, as being of no value:—
Held, that this omission was not an act of fraud. In re Jones, 4 P. R. 317.

Omission to State Causes of Insolvency.]—The insolvent swore to an affidavit verifying the statement of liabilities and assets, but inadvertently omitted the statement of the causes to which he attributed his insolvency, which, however, he made verbally at the first meeting of creditors, where the contestant was present. The defect was not pointed out for more than a year, and after the discharge had been applied for, and the insolvent then swore to another affidavit supplying the omission:—Held, that the omission to furnish the statement within seven days from turnish the statement within seven days from the assignment under s. 17 of the Insolvent Act, 1875, was immaterial, as it expressly gave the right to correct or supplement the statement, which had been done:—Held, also, that under s. 57, the omission complained of would not disentitle the insolvent to his dis-charge, as it was an affect. charge, as it was not wilful:-Held. alvo that under the circumstances more fully set out in the report of the case, the opposing creditor was estopped from objecting to the omission. Re Martin and English, 5 A. R. 647

One of Two Insolvents.]-Where a deed of composition made by one of two insolvents provided for his release on payment of a composition by him to the creditors, and directed a re-transfer to him of the estate, it was held invalid. Re Walker, 2 A. R. 265.

Preference-No Accounts.] - Giving up part of stock to a creditor—Evidence of fraudulent preference—Discharge refused—Condi-tional discharge—Effect of insolvent not keeping proper books of account. In re Beare, 3

Preference-No Accounts.] - The Judge Preference—No Accounts.1 in insolvency refused an insolvent his dis-charge on the grounds, 1. That he had made a charge antial assignment in 1857. 2. Had preferential assignment in 1857. 2. Had kept no books of account shewing receipts and disbursements of cash, and other books suitable for his trade:—Held, that the first ground was not sufficient, for there was no law against it when made; and that as to the latter, considering that some three months only had intervened between the Act of 1864 and the application for discharge, and the incon-siderable nature of his business, the insolvent should not have been so severely dealt with, though this was wholly in the discretion of the But as the Judge, though doubtful as to it, had not inquired into the bona fides of the assignment of 1857, and the disposition of his property under it, the case was referred back to him for re-consideration on these points. In re Parr, 17 C. P. 621.

Semble, that such assignment, being valid when made, could be impeached, under s.-s. 6 of s. 9 of the Insolvent Act, 1864, only upon the grounds that by it the insolvent had fraudulently retained and concealed some portion of his estate, or had been guilty of evasion, &c., in his examination as to his effects. Ib.

Quere, whether fraud committed before the Act is fraud within the meaning of the Act, so as to be a valid ground of opposition to a discharge. Ib.

Preference - No Accounts-Compliance with Act. |-It appeared, on an application by an insolvent for his discharge under the In-solvent Act of 1864, that he had within three months before his assignment paid one of his creditors in full under such circumstances as were considered to amount to a fraudulent preference, and had neglected to keep proper cash books or books of account suitable to his trade, The county Judge granted a discharge suspensively, to take effect four months after the order. In re Lamb, 4 P. R. 16.

Upon appeal from this order by a creditor. the Judge in chambers thought that the Judge below had acted with extreme leniency, and though he would not interfere with the order, dismissed the appeal, but without costs. Ib. Remarks upon the breach of duty in not keeping proper books of account. Ib.

The requirements of the Act on debtors asking for their discharge should be peremptorily insisted on. 14.

Preferential Payments - Impossible Conditions.]—It appeared that the assignment was made on the 10th June, 1868; that on the 15th April previous the insolvents had paid to their father two promissory notes, made by them in July and August, 1867, at three months, for $934. The father in his examin-ation swore that these notes were given by the insolvents for their respective private debts bona fide due to him for money lent and paid. and for their board between 1863 and 1866; and that he had no knowledge of their business until the 27th April, 1868, when he was asked by one of them for an advance of $2,000, which he refused, not being satisfied with the statement of their affairs then produced to him. His statement was confirmed by the insolvents. The learned county court by the insolvents. The learned county court Judge upon this evidence decided that the payments to the father were preferential, and he made the discharge of the insolvents within three years conditional upon their payment of the amount so paid. Upon appeal:—Held, 1. That the evidence could not be assumed to be untrue, and that the payments therefore could not be treated as preferential. 2. That if this were otherwise, the order could not be upheld, for the statute only authorizes conditions within the power of the insolvents to comply with. In re Wallis, 29 U. C. R. 313.

Previous Application Refused. |-It is no objection to an application by an insolvent for a discharge under ss. 64 and 65 of the Insolvent Act, 1875, that a previous application under s. 56 to confirm a deed of composition and discharge had been refused, where it ap-peared that the ground of refusal was that the deed was not executed by a sufficient number of creditors who had proved claims. sell, 7 A. R. 777.

Quære, whether an assignee would be justified in reconveying the estate to the insolvent under the direction contained in a deed so insufficiently executed. Ib.

Purchase When Insolvent.] - A purchase of goods by persons unable to pay their debts in full is not fraudulent within s. 8 of the Insolvent Act, 1864, or a reason for refusing the discharge, unless such inability is concealed from the creditor with intent to defraud him. In re Garratt, 28 U. C. R. 266.

Retention or Concealment of Pro-perty. — Upon his appointment the assignee took an inventory of the property, but owing to the execution of the deed of composition and discharge, afterwards declared inopera-tive, did not remove it:—Held, not a retention or concealment by the insolvent, so as to disentitle him to his discharge; in such a case the retention and concealment necessary to disentitle an insolvent to his discharge must be wilful and fraudulent. Re Russell, 7 A. R. 777.

Secret Benefit to One Creditor — Costs.]—Where, under the Act of 1875, credi-tors of the insolvent signed a deed of composition and discharge upon the assignee giving them his note to cover certain law costs which they had incurred in endeavouring to recover the claim, and there was not a sufficient number in value of creditors signing without them:

- Held, that the deed was invalid, even though the act of the assignee was unauthorized by the insolvent. In re McRae, 1 A. R. 387.

Settlement in Good Faith. |- A post naptial settlement upon his wife was made by an insolvent at a time when he was not aware of his inability to meet his liabilities, and while he had contracts on hand from which he might reasonably have expected to make a might reasonably have expected to make a profit, though they afterwards proved unsuccessful:—Held, no ground for refusing the insolvent his discharge. Re Russell, 7 A. R.

Unfavourable Conduct Without Fraud. |—Held, that the facts set forth in this case, though unfavourable to the insolvent were distinguishable from acts or other misconduct constituting fraud, and that unless the latter be shewn, the insolvent is entitled to the benefit of the statute. In re Smith. 4

(b) Effect of Discharge.

Claim for Costs, |- To an action for at-Claim for Costs.]—To an action for attentive sorts defendant plended his discharge under the Act of 1864, alleging that the plainiff's name and residence, with a statement of defendant's indebtedness to him being for a balance of costs in two suits specified, were stated in his schedule filed, and that he was not aware before obtaining his discharge of the exact amount of such indebtedness. The tioned in the schedule for any sum or amount whatever :- Held, on demurrer, that the debt whatever:—Heid, on demurrer, that the debt due to the plaintiff was, under the circum-stances, sufficiently stated in the schedule. Cameron v. Holland, 29 U. C. R. 506. The statute (Act of 1864) is substantially complied with if the debt is set out in such a manner as cannot mislead, and leaves no doubt as to the debt referred to, and the amount is capable of being ascertained by the creditor.

Claim not Mentioned in Schedule-Indefinite Reference.]—To an action of covenant contained in a mortgage the defendant pleaded a discharge in insolvency under a deed plended a discharge in insolvency under a dece-of composition and discharge, but to which the plaintiff was no party. Neither the plain-tiff's name nor debt was mentioned in the sworn statement exhibited at the first meeting of creditors, nor was there any supplementary statement, as provided for by the Act, subsequently furnished containing any such reference, but it was urged that a couple of lists containing very indefinite references thereto, and furnished to the assignee prior to the meeting, and from which the sworn statement was made, might be deemed to be such supplementary statements :-Held, that they could not so be considered, and more especially so, appeared from the evidence that the plaintiff's name and debt had been intentionally omitted from the sworn statement. Sanderson v. Dixon, 29 C. P. 377.

Claim not Provable. | - Declaration : first count, on the covenant for right to convey in a deed of three lots of land by defend and to plaintiffs, alleging that at the time of making the conveyance, defendant had granted one of the lots to S. Second count, on the covenant for quiet possession in the same deed. Breach, that before making it defendant had mortgaged one of the lots to S, in fee, and afterwards S. proceeded against the plaintiffs in chancery and foreclosed his mortgage, by which the plaintiffs lost this lot. Third count, that defendant being possessed of a lot of land, mortgaged it to 8, for £258 in fee, and afterwards conveyed his equity of redemption in this and other lots to the plaintiffs in fee, for $22,400, before then advanced by plaintiffs to defendant, and in this conveyance cove-nanted to pay off the mortgage to S., and in-demnify plaintiffs against it; but that he neglected to do so, and S. obtained a decree of foreclosure against the plaintiffs, whereby they lost their security and the land and were put Fourth count, common money count. Plea: that after the time when defendant is alleged to have become indebted and liable to the plaintiffs, and after the Inand hable to the plaintills, and after the in-solvent Act of 1864, defendant made an as-signment under it, and in his schedule the alleged claim of the plaintiffs, which was then, if they ever had any claim, provable against defendant's estate, was included; and that afterwards defendant duly obtained an absolute discharge under said Act from the claim of his creditors, including the plaintiffs, which was duly confirmed:—Held, plea bad, as to the was universimal.—Tried, piet sad, as to the first three counts; for the plaintiffs' claim under these counts could not, under the Act of 1864, have been proved against defendant's estate—not being a debt due and payable, or due but not then payable, nor upon a contract dependent on a condition or contingency which had not happened before the first dividend, but for unliquidated damages—and the discharge therefore did not release it. Burrowes v. De-Blaquiere, 34 U. C. R. 498.

Conclusive Effect. |- Evidence, which is fully set out in the judgment, was given to prove that the deed of composition and discharge pleaded was not executed by the requisite proportion of creditors in number and value, owing to a claim having been impro-perly withdrawn:—Hald, that the confirma-tion of the deed was final and conclusive, and that this court could not go behind the Judge's order. Semble, that, under the evidence stated in the case, the claim could not be considered as withdrawn. Rooney v. Lyons, 40 U. C. R. 366; 2 A. R. 53.

Condition Requiring Consent of Creditors.] — A deed professing to be under the Act of 1875 was made between the insolvent of the first part, certain sureties of the second part, and "the several firms, persons, and corporations who are creditors of the parties of the first part, and are also men-tioned in the annexed list, of the third part."
It provided for the payment of a composition of 75 cents in the dollar, which payment was guar-anteed by the sureties, and concluded with the following clause:—"This deed shall be ineffectual unless and until completed by all creditors having claims for over one hundred dollars :"-Held, that this clause only applied to creditors mentioned in the annexed list, and that certain other creditors refusing to exe-cute the deed did not prevent it from being operative. Gault v. Baird, 4 A. R. 436.

Debt not Mentioned in Schedule-Judgment Summons.]-A discharge under the Judgment Summons.]—A discharge under the Insolvent Act does not prevent a party from being committed upon a judgment summons under the Division Courts Act. If it did, a party applying for protection from arrest should shew clearly that the name of the plaintiff was in his schedule, and this is not sufficiently done by putting in a copy of the schedule, without swearing that the plaintiff's name is there. In re Mackay v. Goodson, 27 U. C. R. 263.

Debt not Mentioned in Schedule.]—Plea to a promissory note, an absolute discharge duly obtained under the Act of 1864, from the Judge, from plaintiff's and all other debts. Replication, that plaintiff's name, as a creditor, and the said note and cause of action, were not mentioned in defendant's schedule annexed to his assignment, nor in any supplementary schedule, as required by law, and the debt was never proved against the estate:—Held, on demurrer, replication good; that it is still necessary under the Insolvent Acts to have a schedule of creditors prepared or annexed to the deed of assignment; and that the effect of the discharge obtained under the Insolvent Act of 1864 by an insolvent, is limited to the debts and causes of action set forth in his schedule, either originally or by supplement. King v. Smith, 19 C. P. 319.

Debt not Mentioned in Schedule—Indirect Description]—To an action of covenant in a mortgage to pay money, defendant pleaded that, becoming insolvent after execution of the mortgage, he made an assignment; that plaintiff's claim was known as that of the "Wood Estate," and was sc described in the schedule submitted to the assignee and creditors; that the plaintiff resided abroad, and was represented in Canada by M., who had notice of the appointment of said assignee; that on the expiry of a year defendant obtained his discharge absolutely, by which he was discharged from plaintiff's claim, Replication, that the order for discharge was made before 1st September, 1889, and that the plaintiff's chaim was known as that of the "Wood Estate" (plaintiff representing and being entitled to said estate) and was so entered in the schedule filed by defendant with assignee, and that the plaintiff was represented by M., who had notice, &c.;—Held, on demurrer, rejoinder good, King v. Delay and Acquiescence.]—Some nine years after defendant had obtained his discharge in insolvency, the plaintiff, a schedule creditor, issued a fi. fa. against defendant's goods on a judgment recovered before the discharge, contending that the discharge was void, because defendant had, previous to his assignment, fraudulently allowed a judgment to be recovered against him, and his assets taken; and also because, his assets being so taken, there was nothing at the time of the assignment on which it could operate. It appeared, however, that the plaintiff consented to the assignment, and did not appeal from the order of discharge: nor did he, when the discharge was being granted, raise the objection of no assets:—Held, that the fi. fa. must be set aside; and that the plaintiffs remedy, if any, was by action on the judgment. Semble, however, that the plaintiff, by his conduct and the lapse of time, was precluded. Parke v. Day, 24 C. P. 619.

Estoppel.)—In this case, after the assignment and execution of the deed of composition and discharge, defendant, the insolvent, permitted an arbitration on the plaintiff's claim to be proceeded with, personally attending the arbitration, and not setting up the deed as a bar:—Held, that this would preclude defendant from afterwards setting up such deed as a ground for setting aside a fi. fa. against him issued on the award. Pidgeon v. Martin, 25 C. P. 233.

Execution Creditor Refusing to Assent.)—In August, 1872, the plaintiff issend a fi. fa. against defendant's lands, a portion of which defendant, in November, sold to one K. On the 1st May, 1873, defendant made an assignment in insolvency, and on the 31st obtained a deed of composition and discharge from the necessary proportion of his creditors. On the 12th August this was confirmed by the county Judge, and on the 15th August defendant's estate was re-convoyed to him by the assignee. The plaintiff was one of the duly scheduled creditors, but took no part in the insolvency proceedings, and although requested to remove his writ refused to do so, and advertised the lands for sale, contending that the sale to K. was a withdrawal of those lands from the defendant's assets, so that they never passed to the assignee:—Held, that the plaintiff's debt was discharged by the insolvency proceedings; that the fact of the sale to K. could not alter the plaintiff position; and that his only remedy was under the composition and discharge. The proceedings on the fi. fa. after the assign ment were therefore set aside. Davidson v. Perry, 23 C. P. 346.

Forum.]—The court of chancery will not entertain a suit to set aside a composition and discharge in insolvency for fraud, or upon any other grounds which are open to creditors before the Judge in insolvency, unless special circumstances intervene in the case. Close v. Mara, 24 Gr. 53.

Where a bill was filed for that purpose, alleging as ground for the relief sought fraud or evil practice in procuring the consent of the creditors to the discharge of the insolvent, or their execution of the deed of composition or discharge, a demurrer for want of equity was allowed. Ib.

Praudulent Discharge—New Creditors —Priorities—Costs.]—An insolvent having compounded with his creditors and had his goods restored to him, resamed business, with the knowledge of bis assigness and creditors, and contracted new debts. It was subsequently discovered that he had been guilty of a fraud which avoided his discharge, whereupon he absconded, and an attachment, under the Insolvent Act of 1809, was sued out against him by his subsequent creditors:—Held, that they were entitled to be paid out of his assets in priority to the former creditors. Buchanan v. Smith, 17 Gr. 208: 18 Gr. 41.

In such a case the assignee, as representing

In such a case the assignee, as representing the former creditors, was ordered to pay the costs of a suit brought by the subsequent creditors to enforce their rights. S. C., 18 Gr. 41.

No Assets—Judgment for Seduction and Breach of Promise, I—In 1866 judgment was recovered against the defendard in this action for desired against the defendard in this action for desired for seduction. The defendant then make an assignment under the Insolvent Act, 1864, having no assets, and his only creditors length the plaintiffs in the two actions. No creditors appeared, and after twelve months the petitioned for his discharge. The application was duly advertised, and no opposition being made, was granted. He subsequently acquired some property, and execution was then issued in this action:—Held, that the want of assets at the time of making the assignment could not be set up on the application as a ground for avoiding the discharge, but as a matter for the consideration of the insolvent court upon the application therefor, and that unless attacked for fraud it was a complete answer to the plaintiff's claim :—Held, also, that the plaintiff's claim was one which was barred by the discharge. Thomas y. Hall, 6 P. R. 172, and Parke v. Day, 24 C. P. 619, commented upon. Forrester v. Thrasher, 9 P. R. 383; 20 R. 383.

Privileged Claim.]—To an action by a commercial traveller for wages, defendants plended a deed of composition and discharge in insolvency. The plaintiff replied that the claim was privileged:—Held, reversing 45 U. C. R. 188, that privileged claims are not within the class of debts mentioned in s. 63 of the Insolvent Act of 1875, to which a discharge does not apply without the consent of the creditor. Frper v. Shields, 6 A. R. 57.

Reservation of Rights as to Collateral Security.]—After an assignment in insolvency in 1875, a deed of composition and discharge was executed, by which the insolvent covenanted to pay 30 cents in the 8 and give each creditor indorsed notes therefor, and the creditors in consideration thereof released him from all their respective claims, "saving and reserving the rights which any of them may have against any other person, or in respect of any security held by them, or may of them." A. & Co., who were creditors executing the deed, had a claim amounting to 82,758, for $850 of which they held collateral security in the shape of promissory notes, all over due except one for $852. The composition on their claim, amounting to $827, having been placed in the assignee's hands for them:

—Held, that A, & Co. were entitled to it in full, and to retain their securities, and were not bound to value said securities. In restrens 37 U. C. R. 206.

Schedule of Debts—Security not Mentioned.]—In schedule of debts appended to a deed of arrangement between a debtor and his creditors, a claim was inserted under the lead of "Merchant's account:"—Held, that the claim was not improperly described, although at the time of entering into such deed the account was fully secured by a mortgage on real estate and other securities. Henderson v. Macdonald, 20 Gr, 334. Seduction.]—Under the Insolvent Act of 1804. s. 9, s.-s. 5, a discharge in insolvency would form no answer to proceedings upon a judgment against the defendant for seduction. Benninger v. Thrasher, 9 P. R. 206, 1 O. R. 313.

Unpaid Calls on Stock.]—The plaintiffs sued defendant as a shareholder in their bank for calls, and defendant pleaded his discharge under the Acts of 1869 and 1875, the assignment having been made under the former, and the deed of composition and discharge filed under the latter, Act. It appeared that the only mention of the plaintiffs' claim in defendant's statement of affairs and schedule was this entry in the statement of assets, "25 shares St. Lawrence Bank stock amount paid up $300," (the plaintiffs' name having been changed from St. Lawrence Bank):—Held, that the plaintiffs' claim was discharged. The replications were also held defective in not shewing that the plaintiffs had no notice of the proceedings, Standard Bank of Canada v. Johnson, 42 U. C. R. 16.

(c) Form of Discharge and Procedure.

Assignee Not a Party.]—It is not necessary that an assignee in insolvency should be a party to a deed of composition and discharge. Dredge v. Watson, 33 U. C. R. 165.

Execution by Insolvents.]—A deed of composition and discharge under s, 8, s.-s. 4, of the Act of 1864, purporting to be between the insolvents of the first part, and a majority of the creditors of $100 and upwards, of the second part, was held invalid, because not executed by the insolvents. In re Garratt, 28 U. C. R. 266.

Execution by Insolvents — Execution for Procuration.)—G. & Co. having made an assignment on the 4th July, 1868, a deed of composition and discharge, dated 8th August, was filed on the 14th September, 1868, not be was fired on the Figure Spirither, 1988, 160 being then signed by the insolvents. It was confirmed by the county Judge on the 2nd December, 1868, but the confirmation was reversed in this court in March following, on the ground that the insolvents had not executed it. Afterwards in the same month the insolvents executed the deed, without any previous leave from the Judge, and without refiling it; and they then set it up as a dereming it and they then see it up as a see it op as a see it op a insolvent firm had individual creditors, and it provided only for partnership debts. Per Richards, C.J. The deed was invalid also because not properly executed by the insolvents. Per Wilson, J. Such execution was not an alteration of the deed, for the insolvents being named in and parties to the deed were only perfecting, not altering, it by executing; but the deposit of such deed with and notice thereof by the assignee, under s. 9, s.-s. 2, of the Act of 1864, were necessary after the execution by the insolvents, and for want of this, it was ineffectual:—Held, also, that it was no objection that some of the assenting creditors had executed in the name of their firms and by procuration, and that no power of attorney was proved, for they had accepted the composition under it:—Held, also, that the plaintiff was not prevented, by having proved his claim before the assignee, from going on with this action. Allan v. Garratt, 30 U. C. R. 165.

Firm.]—The only composition which the Act of 1875 provides for in the case of an insolvent firm is one extending to all the partners, and including both the creditors of the firm and of the individual members. Re Walker, 2 A. R. 265.

Gazette.]—Notice of application for discharge in Canada gazette, and not in local gazette:—Held, sufficient. In re Huffman, 5 C. L. J. 71.

Insolvent's Examination. —On an aplication for discharge, the insolvent is entitled to read his own examination, though taken at the instance of a friendly creditor; and the only question is as to the weight to be attached to it. In re Holt and Gray, 13 Gr. 508.

Notice to Creditors.]—On an application for a discharge under s. 9, s.s. 10, of the Act of 1864:—Held, unnecessary to mail notices to creditors under s. 11, s.s. 1. In re Starting, 2 C. L. J. J. 303.

Opposition by Unscheduled Creditor. — A creditor, although not aamed in the schedule annexed to the assignment, may oppose the confirmation of discharge. The insolvent should be present when application is made for confirmation. In re Stevenson, 1 C. L. J. 52.

Partnership and Separate Creditors.]
—Such a deed to be operative, must provide for the separate creditors of each partner, as well as those of the firm. In re Garratt, 28
U. C. R. 266.

Proving Claims.]—Insolvency—Composition and discharge—Unnecessary for creditors to prove debts to enable them to execute deed of—Schedules conclusive—Confirmation refused. In re Langs, 4 C. L. J. 283.

Time.]—Semble, that if an insolvent obtains the consent of the required number of creditors, or the execution of a deed of composition and discharge, he may at once make the application without waiting for the expiration of a year; he is not precluded however, from applying after the expiration of a year, under s. 64 of the Insolvent Act, 1875. In re Hill, 7 A. R. 634.

(d) Miscellaneous Cases.

Application of New Act.]—Held, that the Act of 1869 regulates the procedure, after its passage, in insolvency proceedings commenced under the Act of 1864, and consaquently that the discharge of an insolvent, who had made an assignment under the Act of 1864, initiuded "The Insolvent Act, 1869," was valid. Cannegie v. Tucr, 6 P. R. 165.

Construction—Partnership and Separate Creditors.—Action of debt by the plaintiff claiming under a deed of composition and discharge, as assignee of the assignee in insolvency of a co-partnership, whereby the debt in question was assigned to him. Plea, setting out the deed whereby the plaintiff covenanted with all the creditors, collectively and severally, to pay them and each of them fifty cents on the $ of their respective claims against the said insolvent firm, and on confirmation of the deed to pay the costs respecting the insolvent firm's estate * * and the preferential claims against the said firm, in consideration of which "the said creditors released to the insolvents their claims against them, and directed a conveyance of the insolvent firm's estate to them, and plaintiff averring that at the time of the assignment of the debt to the plaintiff there were separate debts of the insolvent, or one of them, unpaid and unsatisfied, which were not provided for by the deed:—Held, that the deed provided for the payment of firm creditors, and did not include separate creditors. and therefore that the plaintiff's title to the debt failed. McKitrick v. Haley, 46 U. C. R. 246.

Discharge From Arrest.]—An insolvent may be entitled to his discharge from arrest, though his conduct in trade may have been such as to discntitle him to a certificate of discharge from his debts. Hood v. Dodds, 19 Gr. 639.

Notice of Intention to Reconvey.]-Declaration on the common counts. that the plaintiff before action made an asunder the Insolvent Act of 1869, to an official assignee, in whom the causes of action became vested. Replication, that before action the assignee, in conformity with a deed of composition and discharge duly executed, transferred to the plaintiff all the estate, &c., theretofore belonging to the plain-tiff and then vested in the assignee. Re-joinder, that after the deposit of the deed of composition and discharge with the assignee by the plaintiff, the assignee did not imme-diately give notice of such deposit by advertisement as required by the Act:-Held, on demurrer, rejoinder good, for by the statute the giving of such notice is a condition pre-cedent to the reconveyance by the assignee, which, without it, does not bind non-assenting creditors. Held, also, replication good, for under the averment that the assignee duly reconveyed, the plaintiff would be bound to prove such notice, in the absence of a confirmation by the Judge. Nicholson v. Gunn, 35 U. C. R. 7.

Pleading-Discharge.]-To an action on a promissery note and on the common money counts, defendant pleaded, 1. that after making the note and incurring the liability he became insolvent, and a deed of composition and discharge, under the Insolvent Act of 1869, was entered into and executed by a majority of creditors, whereby defendant was discharged, which discharge was confirmed by the county court Judge: 2, that after making the note defendant became insolvent, assigned to an official assignee, and duly set forth plaintiff's claim, which plaintiff duly proved, after which a majority in number of creditors consented in writing to a discharge, which was duly confirmed, &c. Replication, to first plea, setting out the deed of composition, acknowledging the receipt from assignee of defendant's estate of certain promissory notes, indorsed, for certain amounts, and payable at certain dates, and accepting same in payment, and stating that the creditors therein named, (of whom plaintiff was not one) accordingly discharged him, and authorized the restoration of the estate to him. Replication to second plea, that the alleged consent in writing was the deed of composition and discharge in the above replication set out, and that, in pursuance of said deed, said assignee restored to defendant his estate. Replication, on equitable grounds, that the composition was not made in good faith, nor for as large an amount as it should have been, as defendant well knew:—Held, on demurrer, that the replications to the 1st and 2nd pleas were good, the deed of composition as set out being insufficient, and that the first plea was lad that the 2nd plea was not open to the objections taken to it, set out in the case, though, quere, whether good in all particulars against objections not taken:—Held, also, that the equitable replication was bad. Shaw v. Massic, 21 C. P. 266.

Pleading — Discharge.] — To an action upon notes by the payee against the maker the defendant pleaded that after giving the note he made a voluntary assignment in in-solvency, and thereby obtained a discharge by a deed of composition and discharge duly executed under the Insolvent Act of 1869, in the schedule to which the plaintiff appeared as a creditor. The plaintiff replied, setting out the composition deed verbatim. It purported to be made between defendant of the second part, and twenty-eight persons of the first part, described as "all the creditors of said insolvent, constituting more than the majority in number of those of the creditors of said insolvent who are respectively eredi-tors of said insolvent for sums of $100 and upwards, and representing more than three-fourths in value of the liabilities which are subject to be computed in ascertaining the proportion in number and value of his credi-tors who have executed these presents." From tors who have executed these presents." this it appeared that three creditors were named in the schedule for an aggregate amount of $1,276, who were not named in the deed as parties, though two of them had executed it. The replication was demurred to, and exceptions taken to the plea: -Held, that the plea was bad in not shewing that the deed was made for the benefit of all the creditors; and that the replication to it, shewing that the deed was in fact not so made, and that it had not the assent of those creditors who represented three-fourths of the value of the liabilities which were subject to be com-puted for that purpose, was good:—Held, also, that the plea was defective in not shewing that defendant was a trader; but that the replica-tion setting out the deed in which he was described as merchant, cured this defect :- Held, also, that it was not necessary here, though in some cases it would be, to aver that the parties to the deed were creditors within the meaning of the Act, or to negative the plaintiff being a special creditor, it appearing suffi-ciently from the nature of the claim sued for that he was not. Dredge v. Watson, 33 U. C. R. 165,

Pleading — Discharge — Objections.] for T. H. and F. H. Fifth plea, in substance, that T. H. and F. H., being co-partners in trade, on the 5th March, 1873, made an assignment in insolvency; that on the 17th a deed of composition and discharge was excented by the proper number and value of their creditors on certain terms, which were duly carried out by the insolvents: that there were no separate creditors of either of the insolvents: that the deed was duly confirmed by the Judge: that two notes became due in December, 1872, made by the plaintiff for the insolvents' accommodation, and were dis-honoured, and were then and up to the payment of the composition held by the Bank of British North America: that the liability of the insolvents to the bank was set out in the statement of their affairs at the first meeting of creditors, in which these notes were stated to have been made by the plaintiff for their accommodation: that the bank after the assignment delivered to the assignee their claim against the insolvents, and proved for the full amount of the two notes, and were creditors until they received the notes for the composition agreed upon: that they executed the deed and received the composition: and after they had proved their claim the plaintiff, as surety for payment of the notes, was obliged to pay to the bank the amount of the notes, less the composition received by the bank; and part of the plaintiff's claim herein pleaded to is for the said money so paid by him to the bank. The sixth plea was the same as the fifth down to the last averment—of payment by the plaintiff to the bank—which was omitted; and it was alleged that it was agreed between the plaintiff and the bank, in respect of the same two notes. that the plaintiff should pay the bank one-half of them, and that the bank in order to realize the other half, should proceed against the insolvent estate for the whole: that the plaintiff accordingly paid one-half of said notes to the bank, and the bank proved for and received the composition upon the whole, and the money so paid by the plaintiff to the bank is part of the claim sued for and now pleaded to. The seventh plea was to differ-ent sums from those already pleaded to. It followed the fifth plea down to and including the averment of the confirmation of the composition and discharge; and then alleged that the plaintiff had notice and knowledge of all said facts and of those hereinafter mentioned: that a note for $750 made by the plaintiff to and indorsed by the insolvents, and held by the Bank of Montreal, became due and was dishonoured in November, 1872, and another similar note for $1,184, in December, 1872, held by the Ontario Bank: that these notes were made for the accommodation of the in-solvent, of which the banks had notice: that plaintiff before the assignment paid the said notes to said banks, and took them up, and was a creditor of the insolvents therefor until the deed of composition: that part of the plaintiff's claim in this suit, and herein pleaded to, is for the money so paid: that all knowledge of such payments was purposely withheld from the insolvents by the plaintiff until after the first meeting of creditors after the assignment: that the liability of the insolvents for said two notes was mentioned in the statement of their affairs exhibited at said meeting; and the liability of the insolvents meeting; and the hability of the insolvents to the plaintiff for the amounts so paid by the plaintiff was shewn by a supplementary list of creditors previous to the discharge, and in time to permit the plaintiff obtaining the same dividend as the other creditors; that the plaintiff at the time of the assignment owed the insolvents $179, which the assignee head the right to the control of the c had the right to set off, and the insolvents were always ready to give notes for the com-position of plaintiff's claim as required by the deed, but the plaintiff has always refused to prove his claim against the estate: that forthwith after the insolvents became aware of the plaintiff having paid said notes, they deposited with the assignee notes for the composition on plaintiff's claim in accordance with the deed, after deducting said $179, which notes remain ready for the plaintiff; and all things have been done, &c., necessary to make said deed binding on the plaintiff as if he were a party thereto. Second replication, to the three pleas: that there were separate creditors to each of the insolvents at the time of the assignment and of the deed of composition and discharge, and that the plaintiff was not a party to nor did he execute said deed:-Held, on demurrer, that the traverse of there being no separate creditors, as alleged in the pleas, was proper; but that the averment that the plaintiff did not execute the deed was no answer to the pleas, for under the facts there stated execution by him was unnecessary. Third replication, to fifth plea: that the moneys pleaded to were paid by plaintiff to the bank before the bank had proved their claim on the notes, and the plaintiff at the date of the deed of composition was a creditor in the deed of composition was a creator in respect thereof; and the insolvents never men-tioned their liability to the plaintiff therefor in any statement of their affairs, or supplementary list, or in the deed; and said claim was never proved against the estate :- Held, no answer to the plea, for that, upon all the facts set out, enough was not shewn to make the dealings of the assignee and of the insolvents with the bank as holders of the note unavailing. The fourth replication to the sixth plea was the same as the third replication, and was held also bad. Fifth replication to the seventh plea: that the plaintiff's name as a creditor, and the claim in that plea men-tioned, were not mentioned in the statement exhibited at the first meeting of creditors, or in any supplementary schedule furnished in time to permit plaintiff to obtain the same dividend as other creditors:—Held, replication good: that, under the Act of 1869 there must be a statement of the creditors exhibited at the first meeting of creditors, as well as of the insolvent's affairs; but that the state-ment presented at the first meeting, as set out in the plea, did sufficiently describe the plaintiff as a creditor; and as the plea therefore alleged that he was so specified, the plaintiff had a right to traverse it. Preston v. Hunton, 37 U. C. R. 177.

Pleading Discharge.]-To a declaration on the common counts, defendant pleaded that the plaintiff before action assigned, under the Act of 1875, to an official assignee, in whom the alleged cause of action became vested. Second replication, that before action the assignee, in conformity with a deed of composition and discharge duly executed by the requisite proportion in number and value of the plaintiff's creditors, by deed duly trans-ferred to the plaintiff all the estate vested in the assignee. Rejoinder, that the discharge was not duly confirmed by the court or a Judge:—Held, on demurrer, replication bad, for not shewing that the discharge was confirmed, without which, by s. 66 of the Act, it could have no effect; and that the rejoinder was good. Semble, that the replication should have alleged also that the creditors signing had proved their claims and represented at least three-fourths in value of the claims of $100 and upwards which had been proved, as required by ss. 49 and 52. Graham v. Mc-Kernan, 42 U. C. R. 368.

Promise to Pay Discharged Debt. |-An antecedent debt in respect of which an in-solvent has duly received his discharge under the Insolvent Acts of 1864 and 1869, is a continuing debt in conscience, and a sufficient consideration for a new promise to pay it. Austin v. Gordon, 32 U. C. R. 621.

Promise to Pay Discharged Debt. |-Held, that a promise to pay a debt from which a discharge under the Act of 1869 had been obtained, is founded on a good considera-tion, and may be enforced. Adams v. Wood-land, 3 A. R. 213.

Revivor of Criginal Claims.]-Two traders, E. & R., having become insolvent, an agreement was entered into between them and their creditors, whereby it was stipulated that R. should retire from the partnership, and that E. & G. should form a new co-partnership, and that the creditors of E. & R. should accept the notes of the new firm for fifteen shillings in the pound of their claims. By the deed of composition it was expressly agreed that in the event of E. & G. becoming insolvent before the notes securing the fifteen shillings in the pound were paid, their original debts should revive against E. G. and R., and that the creditors should be entitled to rank on the estate of E. & G. for the full amount of their respective claims against the firm of E. & R., less any sum which might have been paid to them by E. & G. on account of said debts. Before the notes were all satisfied E. & G. were compelled to make an assignment in insolvency :- Held, that the creditors were entitled to prove against the estate of E. & G. for the full amount of their original claims against E. & R., giving credit for such sums as had been paid to them by E. & G. in respect of the composition notes; and that the agreement for the revivor of the original demands was not in the nature of a pen-alty. Watson v. Mason, 22 Gr. 180. Reversed on appeal, ib. 574.

Surety—Assignee of Judgment.]—On 2nd May, 1867, defendant B. made an assignment under the Insolvent Acts; and on the 27th, a deed of composition and discharge was executed by B., and by R. (who had been sued as B.'s surety) and other creditors, as well as b, s surety) and other creditions, as was by the plaintiff, who, however, reserved his rights against any surety for his debt. On 10th February, 1868, plaintiff obtained judgment. On 13th February, IR, took an assignment. ment of the judgment from the plaintiff, paying part only of the judgment debt. On an application by defendant B. to have his name struck out of the proceedings and the judgment stayed as against him, on the ground that the plaintiff was a party to the deed of composition and discharge:—Held, that B. was entitled to this relief as well against the plaintiff as against R., and that he had ac-counted for his delay by a reasonable sup-position that the plaintiff was proceeding on the judgment to recover the balance of the debt from defendant R. Semble, that the assignee of a judgment can not enforce it, if his assignor could not. Marten v. Brumell, 4 P. R. 229.

Sureties-Pleading - Understatement of Claim.]-Declaration, on a joint and several note made by defendants payable to plaintiff. Plea, (by two defendants) that the note was made by them as sureties for the other defendant, with notice thereof to plaintiff, who took the same upon the express agreement that they should be liable thereon only as that they should be hable thereon only as such sureties: that the plaintiff, while holder of said note, without their knowledge or con-sent, after the accrual of the alleged claim, and before action, by deed released the other and neture action, by used released the other defendant, the said release being headed as follows: "Insolvent Act of 1864," &c. The release, also, in the body of it, referred to the "Insolvent Act of 1864;"—Held, plea bad; for the court was bound to look upon the plea as setting up a discharge under the Insolvent Act, and by s. 9, s.-s. 4, of that Act, the plaintiff's rights were expressly preserved to him against all other persons liable for or with the insolvent:—Held, also, that if it was desired to rely on the release as valid at com-mon law, it should have been accompanied with such averments as would have shewn it to be operative, or it should not have been set out in hac verba, but its legal effect only should have been stated, and its efficacy left to be established by such facts as it was contended contributed thereto. Semble, that a creditor under a composition deed, either under the Insolvent Act or otherwise, cannot give a general release, and subscribe for a particular sum, as being apparently his whole claim, and afterwards advance other demands as not included in this discharge, for this would be a fraud on the other creditors. Four-ler v. Perrin, 16 C. P. 258.

Voluntary Payment after Discharge, |—The mere fact that an insolvent, after having obtained his final order for discharge, makes a voluntary payment on a claim existing against him before his insolvency and which is extinguished by such discharge, is not sufficient to revive the debt, for that purpose an express undertaking to pay the amount must be proved. McDonald v. Notman, 25 Gr. 608.

4. Creditors.

(a) Who may Claim.

Damages—Builment,]—The insolvent, a miller, agreed to grind wheat for the claimants, and to deliver to them a barrel of flour of a specified quality for so many bushels of wheat, and he thus became liable to deliver to them 955 barrels of flour, as equivalent for wheat received by him and made away with:
—Held, that this was a bailment only of the wheat, which remained the claimants', to the insolvent; that such bailment was determined by the conversion of the wheat, so that the claimants might maintain trover for it either as wheat or as flour if ground; that they might waive the tort and sue for the value of the goods when they should have been delivered; and that the claim therefore was provable as being a debt within the Insolvent Act, not a claim for unliquidated damages;—Held, also, that a claim for compensation as to a certain number of barrels not of the quality agreed for was clearly a claim for unliquidated damages, and could not be proved. In the Williams, 31 U. C. R. 143.

Debt not Due.]—A creditor whose debt is not yet due may proceed against his debtor who is insolvent, as he might have done if his debt had been overdue. But, in this case, it appearing that the debtor did not owe more than $100 beyond this debt, none of which was at the time due, and a portion not payable for several years, the court directed that he should be allowed further time to shew, if he could, that he was not in fact insolvent, and so not liable to have his estate placed in compulsory liquidation. In re Moore v. Luce, 18 C. P. 446.

Debt Revived.]—By an agreement between a debtor and one of his creditors, the latter agreed to accept, by way of composition, certain notes of the debtor, payable at specified dates; and it was provided that the debtor should also give his note for the whole debt, and that if he were guilty of any default in paying the composition notes, the creditor should rank on his estate for the whole debt. The notes were given accordingly, the debtor made default, and afterwards was proceeded against under the Insolvent Act of 1864:—Held, that the stipulation as to the whole debt was not illegal, and that there having been default, before the insolvency, the creditor was entitled to prove for the whole debt. In re McRea, 15 Gr. 408.

Wife — Costs.] — The claimant was the wife of the insolvent, and claimed to prove against his estate for money lent and interest thereon. The contestants disputed the claim. The Judge having found all questions of fact in favour of the claimant being the wife of the insolvent did not debar her from proving against his estate as a creditor, but that under the circumstances the question was a fair one for judicial inquiry, and no costs were allowed the claimant. In re Dangerfield, 13 C. L. J. 42.

Wife.]—A married woman, married in 1829, transferred certain shares, which formed part of her separate estate, to her husband, the insolvent, in 1871, for the purpose of being used in his business, upon a promise of repayment by him:—Held, that she was entitled to prove as a creditor. Clear and convincing evidence of the bona fides of such a claim, and of the actual creation of the debt at the time of the alleged loan, should be given before admitting it to proof. Re Miller, 1 A. R. 393.

(b) Rights and Liabilities.

Agent of Creditor.] — Appointment of agent for a creditor claiming to advise in the choice of an assignee must be in writing, and filed of record. In re Campbell, 1 L. J. 135.

Contestation of Claim.]—The creditors of an insolvent consented, by an agreement, that the plaintiff, as guardian of the estate, and the defendant should sell certain timber manufacture to the probability of the guardian dependent giving to the guardian his bond to repay the same, or so much as defendant might not be entitled to; defendant (if was said in the agreement) claiming such timber, or a lien on it, and the creditors insisting that the estate owned or had some claim thereon. The bond recited this agreement, and the condition was that the defendant should repay such portion of the $5,500 as he should not be entitled to. The plaintiff sued on this bond, averring the sale of the timber and payment to defendant of the $5,500; and that defendant was not entitled to the same, but had not repaid it. Defendant pleaded that he duly established his right to the $5,500 by filing with the assignee the particulars of his claim thereto, duly verified, as provided by the Insolvent Act of 1869. The plaintiff replied, setting out the particulars of defendant's claim and verification thereof (which shewed it to be the claim in question), and alleged that such claim had not been placed on any dividend sheet, nor in any manner adjudicated or awarded upon. To this the defendant rejoined, that it had not been contested or objected to, and that plaintiff, as assignee, had not prepared any divi-dend sheet of the estate:—Held, rejoinder good; for that, looking at the position of the parties, and the agreement, the meaning of the bond was, that defendant should repay what, after a contestation of his claim, it might apppear that he was not entitled to rank for; and the action, therefore, was premature. Hall v. Dunsford, 32 U. C. R. 1.

Proof of Debts.]—Debts must be proved before the assignee and not before the Judge. In re Stevenson, 1 C. L. J. 52.

Sale after Action by Two Creditors. -In ejectment plaintiff claimed title under a deed from the assignee in insolvency of P. D. Prior to the issue of the writ of attachment in insolvency P. D. had conveyed the property to his brother L. D. Two of the creditors claimed that the deed was fraudulent, and made a demand under s. 68 of the Insolvent Act of 1875 on the assignee to take proceedings to have the deed set aside, which the assignee, on instructions from the creditors, refused to do, whereupon the two creditors obtained from the Judge an order under that section authorizing them to take the proceedings on their own behalf. Proceedings were thereupon own behalf. Proceedings were thereupon taken and the deed set aside. The land was advertised, the period therefor being shortened by the Judge, and was sold to F., but in reality to the plaintiff, to whom F. conveyed. The assignee was notified of the sale and requested to execute a conveyance to the purchaser, which, under instructions from the creditors, he refused to do, whereupon an or-der was obtained from the Judge directing the assignee to execute the deed, the assignee's solicitor attending and opposing the making of the order. Under s. 68 the "benefit derived from such proceedings shall belong exclusively to the creditor instituting the same for his benefit;" and under s. 75, no sale is to be completed unless it "has been sanctioned by the creditors at their first meeting, or ed by the creditors at their many subsequent meeting called for the purpose or by the inspectors:" and also the period of the advertisement might be shortened "by the creditors with the approval of the Judge: -Held, that the sale and the deed thereunder was valid. Donovan v. Herbert, 9 O. R. 89; S. C., 12 A. R. 298.

An appeal to the supreme court was dismissed. Cassels' Dig. 653.

(c) Secured Creditors.

Collateral Security to Indorser— Rights of Holders of Paper.]—In February, 1858, S. &. B. and E. B. became accommodation indorsers for A. B. for 815,000, and E. B. and indorsed for an additional sum of $5,000, A. B. giving a chattel mortgage on his personal effects, including certain bills, notes and overdue accounts, as security against their liability as indorsers. At the same time, E. B. executed to S. & B. a mortgage on his farm to secure them to the extent of $5,000 or so much as might remain unpaid of such $15. so much as might remain unpaid of such eva-000 after applying the proceeds of the chattel property so mortgaged in payment thereof. In July following, A. B. executed another in-denture or trust deed, reciting such mortgage, and he thereby assigned all outstanding debts due or owing to him, including all bills, notes, judgments, and book accounts, to enable the indorsers "to pay, satisfy, and discharge the indorsers to pay, satisfy, and discharge the said accommodation paper so indorsed by them as aforesaid." In 1862, the indorsers who had the management of the securities, had reduced the $20,000 indebtedness to about $6,900, when E. B.'s farm was sold and the sum of $5,000 secured thereon was paid to the banks, who held the accommodation paper, thus reducing the claim of the banks to $1,900, for which they accepted the composi-tion notes of S. & B. at 8s. 9d. in the £, they having about this time made a composition with their creditors. Nearly all of these com-position notes S. & B. subsequently paid. Some time afterwards and before default in payment of any of the composition notes, S. & B. became insolvent: an assignee of their estate was duly appointed, and the banks proved upon their estate for the unpaid composition notes. About a month afterwards A B. became insolvent, and at the time of the present proceedings E. B. had also become in-Amongst the effects so assigned by solvent. the deed of July was a judgment against the defendants, the railway company, recovered against the defendants, the railway company, recovered against them by A. B., which together with one recovered against the company in the names of S. & B. and E. B., was compromised at $1,500:—Held, that the deeds of assignment did not create a trust of the moneys received upon such compromise in favour of the banks: and that under the rule in Ex parte Waring, 19 Ves. 345, their only right was to rank upon the estate of S. & B. for the composition notes remaining in their hands. Allchin v. Buffalo and Lake Huron R. W. Co., 23 Gr. 411.

Collateral Security to Accommoda-tion Indorser — Rights of Holders of the Paper.]-R. made a mortgage on certain lands in favour of M. & B., with a provise to be "void on payment of $20,000, or such other sum or sums as might be due such other sum or sums as might be due and owing to M. & B., by reason of their having to pay, take up, or retire, any notes or bills indorsed or accepted by them for R. M. & B. indorsed notes for R.'s accommodation, which were discounted by the plaintiff bank, and while several of them, amounting in all to $24,000, were outstanding, R., as also M. & B., became insolvent:-Held, that as to the extent of such accommodation paper as the bank held they were entitled to the benefit of the mortgage, and to have it realized, and the proceeds applied to retire the notes, in priority to other creditors; but that in respect of any notes held by the bank which had been given by M. & B. in liquidation of the debts due them, the bank could only prove against the estates of the insolvents. Ex parte Waring, 19 Ves. 345, approved of and followed. Molsons Bank v. Blakeney, 25 Gr. 513.

 $\begin{array}{c|cccc} \textbf{Collateral} & \textbf{Security} & \textbf{to} & \textbf{Lender} & \\ Rights & of & Holder & of & Paper. \end{bmatrix} & - \textbf{M}. & \text{borrowed} \\ $1,500 & \text{from} & \textbf{M}. & \textbf{Co., giving} & \text{them} \\ \end{array}$

as security a chattel mortgage, and his promissory note at three months, which they discounted at Molsons Bank. No assignment of the mortgage was ever made to the bank, nor did they deal with M. & Co. in reliance on it. When the note became due M. & Co. paid $5000, and renewed for $900. Shortly afterwards, both M. and M. & Co. became insolvent, and the bank claimed the benefit of the mortgage:—Held, that the bank was not entitled to a prior claim upon the security over the assignee of M. & Co., in respect of the $500, and the rule in Ex parte Waring, 10 Ves. 345, gave them no assistance. In re Morton v. MucCrae, 3 A. R. 202.

Collateral Security.]—When the plaintiff proved his claim against the insolvent's estate he held, as collateral security, certain overdue notes, which he did not mention, and he afterwards received certain payments on them:—Held, that such payments could not be allowed as a set-off in this action on a note given for a composition agreed on under R. S. O. 1877 c. 50, s. 142. Fitch v. Kelly, 44 U. C. R. 554.

Effect of Retaining Security.]—When an assignee in insolvency elects, under s. 84 of the Insolvent Act, 1875, to allow a creditor to retain, at a valuation, the property which he holds as security for his debt, the creditor becomes a purchaser at that valuation, freed from any right or equity to redeem on the part of the insolvent or his estate. Bell v. Ross, 11 A. R. 458.

Election to Rely on Security.]—The insolvent, in February, 1808, executed a mortague on lands and an assignment of goods to trustees for the benefit of B. G. & Co., and other creditors ammed; and in August following be made a voluntary assignment under the Insolvent Act. The trustees after this assignment sold part of the read estate under the power of sale and received part of the proceeds of the goods. B. G. & Co. then claimed to prove against the estate for the balance due to them above what they had received from the trustees. The official assignee held that they had lost their right, having elected to look to their security instead of bringing it in under s. 5, s.-s. 5, of the Insolvent Act of 1864; and his award was confirmed by the county Judge on appeal:—Held, that the mere fact of the sale did not necessarily exclude them from proof, but that the securities sold might yet be valued, and if the estate had not been prejudiced or were recompensed for any loss thereby, they should still be allowed to prove. In re Hurst, 31 U. C. R. 118, lowed to prove. In re Hurst, 31 U. C. R. 118.

Mortgagee's Power of Sale.]—Where a mortgage is not compelled to go in under the Act, but may proceed under his power of sale. Gordon v. Ross, 11 Gr. 124.

Options of Secured Creditor.]—A creditor holding security from the insolvent max under ss. 84 and 106 of the Act of 1875, assume any one of three positions:—either release his security and prove as an unsecured creditor, or he may value his security and prove for the whole debt less the valuation, or he may outside of insolvency proceedings realize his security in any manner authorized by law. The plaintiff, who was mortgagee of lauds of the insolvent, obtained against the assignee the usual decree for sale with a special direction that he should be at liberty to prove against the estate for any deficiency: —Held, that under ss. 84 and 106, the plaintiff was not entitled to prove for such deficiency. In re Hurst, 31 U. C. R. 116, commented on, and questioned. Deacon v. Driftl, 4 A. R. 235

Partners Claiming Inter se on Dissolution of Firm. |—See Hall v. Lannin, 30 C. P. 204. Post, Partnership and Separate Estate, col. 591.

Realizing Security.]—Under the Insolvent Act of 1875, a creditor holding security at the time of the insolvency, cannot realize the security, and prove on the estate for the balance. In re Hurst, 31 U. C. R. 116, commented on. Re Beatty, 6 A. R. 40.

Rectification of Mortgage after Valuation. |- In proceedings in insolvency mortgagees claimed to rank upon the insolvent estate for the excess of their claim over the value placed by them upon the mortgaged prevalue placed by them upon the mortgaged pre-mises, after which they discovered that cer-tain property intended to be included in the security had, by mutual mistake, been omitted therefrom, whereupon they filed a bill in the court of chancery to have the mortgage rectified and the security realized :-Held, that the fact of the mortgagees having so proceeded in insolvency formed no objection to the relief asked, and the court ordered a rectification of the instrument as prayed; as this was relief de-hors the administration of the assets in which the Judge in insolvency could not give adequate relief, remitting the parties back to the insolvency proceedings with a view of the same or a new value being placed by the mortgagees on their security, in order that the assignee and creditors might proceed under the statute; and in the event of those proceedings resulting in the security being retained by the mortgagees, the court directed the bill to be retained to enable them to resume proceedpurpose it would be necessary simply to file a petition stating shortly the proceedings taken and their result. Cameron v. Kerr, 23 Gr, 374.

Reducing Valuation.] — Two secured creditors duly proved their claim, valuing their security; and the assignee elected to allow them to retain such security. Upon the application of these creditors, after such election, for leave to withdraw their proof and reduce the value placed on their security, and prove against the estate for the sum by which it should be reduced, on the ground that the valuation was excessive, and had been made inadvertently:—Held, that they were bound by the value stated in their affidavit of claim. Re Street, 15 C. L. J. S.

Separate Debt Secured by Partner-ship.]—Where a creditor holds security on the partnership estate for the individual liability of an insolvent member of the firm, he is entitled to prove against the separate estate without putting a value on such security. Re Jones, Ex parte Consolidated Bank, 2 A. R. 626.

Taking Over Security.]—The assignee in insolvency, under the Insolvent Act of 1865, of the plaintiffs' mortgagor, in 1869 conveyed in part satisfaction of his claim, without covenants on either side, the mortgaged property to a subsequent mertgage, who had valued his security, the piantiffs' mortgages being referred to in a recital. The subsequent mortgages shortly afterwards conveyed the property to a third person, but not-withstanding this conveyance continued to pay interest to the plaintiffs till within ten years of this foreclosure action:—Held, on a case stated in the action for the opinion of the court, with liberty to draw inferences of lew and fact, that it was proper to infer that the provisions of s. 19 of the Insolvent Act of 1865 had been compiled with; that under that section the subsequent mortgagee taking over his security would be primarily bound to pay off the prior incumbrances; and that therefore his payments kept alive the plaintiffs' rights. Trust and Loan Co. v, Steccason, 20 A. R. 65, reversing 21 O. R. 571.

Time and Mode of Electing to Retain.] — Where the secured creditor has valued his security for the purpose of proof, the policy and express language of the Insolvent Act, 1875, require that the decision of the assignee shall be promptly made. A formal resolution of the assignee allowing the creditor to retain the property is not necessary. Therefore, where the assignee had ample means of knowing the value of the assets be fore the creditor proved his claim and valued his security in January, 1879, and where no meeting of creditors was held after that date till the 30th July following, and the estate was sold without any reference to the security; and where nothing further was done by the assignee until the 13th October following, when he wrote to the creditor: "Your claim as filed shews a balance over security of $3,091.13, but Mr. Leitch (the purchaser of the estate) disputes your claim to any divi-dend, on the ground," &c., it was:—Held, that the assignee had signified his election to allow the creditor to retain the security, and his abandonment of any right to redeem it for the estate. Bell v. Ross, 11 A. R. 458.

5. Fraudulent and Preferential Transactions.

Acceleration of Delivery of Goods.]-S. on the 25th November, 1864, agreed to deliver certain timber to plaintiff at T. in New York, in May, June, July, and August, 1865, 81,500 payable down, the same sum on the 15th January, 1st March, and 1st April. 1865, and the balance on delivery at T. the 14th December following he assigned the timber of L., as security for certain advances in goods which L. agreed to make to enable him to get it out, and on the 27th February, 1865, formally delivered it to La's son, who, after consulting with S., wrote to the plaintiff that S. desired to deliver the timber to the plaintiff, but was in difficulty; that some of his creditors refused to wait until he could complete his contract, and had commenced actions, and recommending that the plaintiff should anticipate their action by taking a delivery before they could interfere. On the 11th March the plaintiff accordingly paid L.'s claim, and took a delivery. On the 3rd March L. had served a writ on S., telling him it was to secure precedence; and an execution was obtained in this suit, under which the sheriff seized. On the 14th April S. made an assignment under the Insolvent Act of 1864 to the defendant. He admitted that he was insolvent on the 11th March, and long previous, though he said he did not then know it, and had not informed the plaintiff of it:—Semble, that these facts shewed the delivery to the plaintiff to be a transfer by S., "in contemplation of insolvency," the effect of which was to give him "an unjust preference over the other creditors," and that it was therefore void under s. S. s.-s. 4. of the Insolvent Act of 1804. Adams v. McCall, 25 U. C. R. 219.

Advance and Antecedent Debt.]-A banking firm in Toronto, having become embarrassed by gold operations in New York applied to the plaintiffs, to whom they owed $50,000, to advance them $15,000 more; and, in order to obtain the advance, they offered to secure both debts by a mortgage of the real estate of one of the partners, worth $30,000. The plaintiffs agreed, made the advance, and obtained the mortgage. In less than three months afterwards the debtors became insolvent under the Act. They were indebted beyoud their means of paying at the time of executing the mortgage, but they did not consider themselves so, nor were the mortgagees aware of it. The mortgage was not given from a desire to prefer the mortgagees over other creditors, but solely as a means of ob taining the advance which they thought would enable them to go on with their business and pay all their creditors :- Held, that as respects the antecedent debt the mortgage was valid as against the assignee in insolvency. Royal Canadian Bank v. Kerr, 17 Gr. 47.

Advances in Good Faith — Onus of Proof.]—Where the court is satisfied that an arrangement for advance on mortgage within the thirty days, between a creditor and his debtor, is entered into bond fide, in order to aid the debtor with the view of enabling him to discharge his obligations, such arrangement will be sustained, notwithstanding that its effect is to give such creditor a preference over other creditors for the full amount of his claim, including a prior indebtedness, and that the debtor became insolvent within thirty days from the time of entering into such arrangement. In such a case the onus of proving the bona fides of the transaction is cast upon the creditor claiming the benefit of the security. Smith v. McLean, 25 Gr. 567.

Advances of Goods and Antecedent Debt.!—A person in embarrassed circumstances applied to one of his creditors to supply him with goods to enable him to carry on his business, which the creditor agreed to supply on obtaining security therefor, as also for his pre-existing debt; and a chattel mortgage for this purpose was accordingly given, and the goods supplied:—Held, not such a preference as rendered the chattel mortgage void. Risk v. Sleeman, 21 Gr., 250.

After Acquired Property,]—Although the rule at law is, that an instrument intended either to assign or charge chattles of which the assignor has not the possession, is imperfect without some subsequent act of the assignor, the same is not the case in equity; neither does it prevail in insolvency proceedings, where the court is bound to work out the equities between the parties. Under the circumstances of this case, the mortgagee was held entitled to after acquired property as against the assignee in insolvency. Re Thirkell, Perrin v, Wood, 21 Gr. 492, 21 Gr. 492,

Agreement to Give Security.] — In 1869 C. lent money to N. on an express agreement that it was to be secured by mortgage on certain property; and on the 3rd July following the mortgage was given accordingly; and on the 2nd August the mortgagor became insolvent:—Held, that the mortgage was valid. Allan v. Clarkson, 17 Gr. 579.

Agreement to Give Security.]—Held, under the circumstances set out in the report, that the promise to give security on a certain ship "in case anything should happen" could only mean "in case the party should go into insolvency," and that the transfer was void under s. 133 of the Insolvent Act of 1875:—Held, also, that the provisions of the Merchants' Shipping Act did not prevent the property in the ship passing to the assignee under the Insolvent Act. Jones v. Kinney, 11 S. C. R. 708.

Assignment of Moneys Payable under Contract.]—The plaintiffs, who were sub-contractors for the stone and brickwork of a public school, and who were to receive payment from the principal contractors, who alone were recognized by the public school board, procured an assignment to themselves of the balance due them by the contractors for their completed work, and payable to the contractors by the board. The contractors were at the time unable to pay their debts, which the plaintiffs knew, and an attachment in insolvency issued against them within three months after the assignment of the claim:—Held, that the transaction was an unjust preference under s. 133 of the Insolvent Act of 1875; and, semble, that it was also within the meaning of ss. 130 and 132, and the plaintiffs could not maintain a suit to enforce payment of the balance assigned to them. Grifpts v. Perry, 6 A. R. 672.

Bonus to Indorsing Creditor.]—Upon the arrangement for a deed of composition and discharge, the creditors required security for payment of the composition, and one Meikle, a creditor, agreed to indorse the composition notes upon receiving a mortgage upon the property settled upon the insolvent's wife, securing him in respect of his indorsations, and on payment of $250 in addition to his composition:—Held, not a fraudulent preference within the meaning of the Act. Re Russell, 7 A. R. 777.

Collateral Security to Discount.]—
A bank having cashed a bill of exchange, and taken by way of collateral security a bill of sale of certain goods of the drawer, this transaction was held not invalidated by the drawer's insolvent circumstances at the time. Newton v. Ontario Bank, 13 Gr. 652, 15 Gr. 288.

Contemplation of Insolvency.]—K. had a line of discount with the defendants of $29,000, for which $5,000 collaterals were deposited as security. Some time afterwards his indebtedness to the bank was nearly doubled, when the agent insisted upon obtaining additional security by deposit of further collaterals, and which some months before the insolvency were deposited. This was impeached by the assignee in insolvency of K. as being an unjust preference of the bank:—Held, affirming 28 Gr. 449, that the transfer to the defendants of the securities as collateral was valid, the plaintiff having failed to establish that K. contemplated insolvency:—Held, also, that the want of knowledge by the defendants' manager would not have availed the defendants, if the insolvent had, in fact, made the transfer in contemplation of insolvency. Nelles v. Bank of Montreal, 7 A. R. 743.

Another transfer had been made to the bank within thirty days of the insolvency, which was also impeached, but upon the faith of which the bank had made advances to K. exceeding the value of the securities so transferred, which would not otherwise have been made:—Held, that the bank had not thereby obtained an unjust preference, and therefore the transaction could not be impeached. Ib.

The insolvent made a cash payment of $1,000 to the bank a few days before his insolvency, but it was sworn that he had been allowed to overdraw upon an agreement to cover it by this payment, and it was not shewn that the bank manager had, at that time, probable cause to believe in his inability to meet his engagements in full:—Held, that this money could not be recovered back. Ib.

Contemplation of Insolvency.] - W., the respondent, was a private banker who had had various dealings with one D., and had discounted for him at an exorbitant rate of interest notes received by D. in the course of his business. D.'s indebtedness on new transactions amounted to a large sum of money, but, being a man of very sanguine temperament, he had entered into a new line of business, after obtaining goods on credit to the amount of $4,000 or $5,000, upon a representation to the parties supplying such goods that, although without any available capital, he had experience in business. About twelve days after he had commenced his new twerve days after he had commenced his new business, being threatened by a mortgagee with foreclosure proceedings, he applied to W., who advanced him $300, part of which was applied in paying the overdue interest was applied in paying the overdue interest on the mortgage, and the surplus in retiring a note of D.'s held by W. D. executed a mort-gage in favour of W. and was granted a re-duced rate of interest on his indebtedness, and was told he would have to work carefully to get through. D. became insolvent about four months afterwards. In a suit by McR., as assignee, impeaching the mortgage to W., it was:—Held, affirming 7 A. R. 103, that McR. had not satisfied the onus which was cast upon him by the Insolvent Act, of shewing that the insolvent at the time of the execution of the mortgage in question contemplated that his embarrassment must of necessity terminate in insolvency. McCrae v. White, 9 S. C. R. 22.

Contemplation of Insolvency.] — To avoid a transaction under s.-s. 4 of s. 8, not only must there be a contemplation of insolvency, but coupled with it a fraudulent preference of the creditor to whom the transfer or payment is made over the other creditors. McWhitter v, Thorne, 19 C, P. 302.

Contemporaneous Advances—Surety.]

—A mortgage is a "contract" within the meaning of the Insolvent Act of 1875, s. 130:—Held, under the circumstances stated in the report of this case, that the defendant might hold a mortgage in his favour created by a person in insolvent circumstances for certain advances made by the mortgages contemporaneously with the execution of the incumbrance, and also for future advances intended to be secured thereby, though it was not shewn that such advances were made for the purpose of enabling the mortgagor to carry on his business, but that such mortgage was not a valid security for antecedent advances made by the mortgagee, nor for notes indorsed by the mortgagee for the mortgagor, but not paid, in respect of which therefore he had been a surety only, not a creditor. Smith v. Harrington, 29 Gr. 502.

Contemporaneous Liability.] - Declaration in detinue and trover for goods. Plea, that one J., the owner, being a debtor un-able to meet his engagements, and in contemplation of insolvency, mortgaged the goods to the plaintiff, and within thirty days thereafter made a voluntary assignment in insolvency to the defendant, the official assignee; that the mortgage was made to the plaintiff as a creditor of and surety for J., whereby the plaintiff obtained an unjust preference over J.'s other creditors, who were thereby injured and obstructed, wherefore the mortgage was void, and defendant as assignee took the goods. The plaintiff replied that J. being a retail dealer, and wanting goods to carry on his business, asked the plaintiff to indorse notes to enable him to purchase them: that the plaintiff consented, on condition that J. on receiving the goods should secure him against loss by a mortgage thereon, and on the other goods in J.'s store, who was to sell them at his store only, and out of the proceeds retire the notes, and if he should sell otherwise the plaintiff might sell the goods for his own protection: that the plaintiff ac-cordingly indorsed, and J. with the notes purchased goods, which he mortgaged to the plaintiff, as agreed on, with other goods, for the bona fide and sole consideration of perfecting the said agreement; that J. afterwards, without the plaintiff's consent, assigned to the defendant, who took with notice of the mortgage, and was proceeding to sell the goods, when the plaintiff forbade him and demanded them :-Held, that the replication was good, for that the plaintiff only became a creditor by the actual transaction, in which he gave the equivalent in the new goods—urchased pro-cured on his credit; and under these circum-stances, the plaintiff being ignorant of J.'s position, the mortgage was not avoided by the Insolvent Act (s. 8, s. 1, 3, 4), though its effect might be to del creditors. Quere, whether it was voidable under s.-s. 2. Mathers v. Lynch, 27 U. C. R. 244.

Held, that the mortgage in this case, given under circumstances fully set out in 27 U. C. R. 244, was good as against creditors, the jury having found it to be bonā fide; and that notice to the official assignee of the mortgage's claim was immaterial. S. C., 28 U. C. R. 354.

C. C. R. 354.

Conveyance Before the Act.]—The Act of 1864 does not invalidate conveyances previously executed, and valid when executed. Gordon v. Young, 12 Gr. 318.

Creditors Not Obstructed—Contemplation of Insolvency.]—A transfer of property by a debtor, which gives a creditor a preference over the other creditors, is not necessurily void as one by which creditors are injured, obstructed, or delayed; and where such a preference was not made in contemplation of insolvency, and was not unjust, it was held valid. The insolvent, six months before an attachment issued against him, conveyed his equity of redemption in certain lands to the defendant, upon trust to sell the same, and apply the proceeds, after payment of the mortgage, in payment of the pre-existing debts due to the defendant and one T. and to pay over the surplus, if any, to the insolvent. The insolvent had previously failed to effect a sale of the land for more than the mortgage debt. It did not appear clearly what other property the insolvent had at the date of the deed, or what other debts he owed. The extate, however, which came into the hands of the assignee, consisted of a watch, while the claims proved amounted to $277.80. The evidence did not shew that the deed was made in contemplation of insolvency. The learned Judge at the trial found that there was no fraud or preference in the making of the deed, and that it was a bonh fide transaction:—Held, reversing 28 C. P. 132, that the deed was not void under ss. 133 or 132 of the Act of 1875, as the evidence did not shew that the creditors were injured, obstructed, or delayed; nor under s. 133, as it did not appear that it was an unjust preference, or made in contemplation of insolvency. McEdicards v. Pelmer, 2 A. R. 439.

Equitable Assignment—Intention.]—A debtor had executed several chattel mortgages to secure indorsers of his paper, and afterwards a power of attorney to their appointse to sell and pay the mortgage debts. The registration of chattel mortgages was disputed and not decided, it being held, that the power was in effect an equitable assignment: that the transaction was neither a mortgage nor a sale: that the instrument did not require registration; and that it was a valid assignment under the insolvent law, on the ground of having been executed to give effect to what was intended by the mortgages as understood by the parties thereto. Patterson v. Kingsley, 25 Gr, 425.

Exchange of Cheques.]—A., a private banker, exchanged cheques with B. for mutual accommodation. A. used B.'s cheque. A cheque of A.'s had been dishonoured, and the holder called at A.'s office the same day, and a clerk, in the ordinary course of business, gave the holder B.'s cheque to pay the dishonoured cheque. The next day A. stopped payment:—Held, following McWhirter v. Thorne, 19 C. P.' 302, that the transfer was not a fraudulent preference under the Insolvent Act of 1869. City Bank v. Smith, 20 C. P. 93.

Exchange of Securities — Relation Back.]—M. had in his warehouse 2.500 bushels of rye, belonging to T. & W. They owed him $1.400, made up of money due for storing that and other grain, for grain supplied to them, and for balance of account. T. & W. were insolvent, and their creditors pressing them, of which M. was aware. They demanded the grain more than once, alleging that it would enable them to meet their creditors' immediate demands, but M. refused, saying it was his only security; and in the end T. offered, if M. would give it up and a receipt of the debt due to him by T. & W., to assign to M. his interest in a vessel, then worth about $1,600. This M. assented to, and on the 20th November, T. executed a bill of sale of his interest to M., and received the grain. This transfer, however, being informal, was returned by the custom house authorities, and another one executed on the 5th December. On the 7th January an attachment in insolvency issued against T.:—Held, that as M. had demarded payment, and the transfer was made on the express condition that the rys should be given up, the transaction must be regarded as not a voluntary one, and therefore not one by which M. had obtained an unjust preference. Held, also, that the transaction must be looked at as if carried out on the 28th November. McFarlanc v. McDonald, 21 Gr., 319.

Expenditure for Wife Before and Africa Marriage. —The insolvent had convered by way of settlement to his intended wife a lot of land on which he had commenced a house, but which was not completed after the marriage. On a bill filed by the pssignee in insolvency, the court declared that for so much of the buildings as was completed after the marriage the creditors had a claim on the property; but gave the wife the right to elect whether she would be paid the value of her interest without the expenditure after marriage, or pay to the assignee the amount of such expenditure; and it subsequently appearing that the husband had created a mortgage prior to the settlement the wife was declared entitled to have the value of the improvements made after marriage applied in discharge of the mortgage in priority to the claims of the creditors. Jackson v. Bourama, 14 Gr. 136.

Following Proceeds.] - A conveyance void against creditors was made in December, 1868, through a third party, to the owner's wife; the husband in November, 1869, became insolvent, and in June, 1870, joined his wife in a sale of the property to a purchaser witha conveyance to the purchaser was executed and registered, and the purchaser gave the wife a mortgage for part of the purchase money, and paid her the residue in cash. On a bill by the assignee in insolvency he was declared entitled to the mortgage, and to any of the money which still remained in the wife's hands, and to any property, real or personal, which she had purchased with the residue, and still owned; but the court refused to direct an inquiry whether she had separate estate, in order to charge the same with any of the residue which had been spent by her, or with the costs of the suit. Saunders v. Stull, 18 Gr. 590.

Fraudulent Purchase—Repeal of Act.]
—Where a judgment has been recovered for a dobt without fraud being charged under s. 130 of the Insolvent Act of 1875, the plaintiff is barred by such recovery from bringing another action against the debtor charging the fraud, even although the judgment was recovered by default, for the plaintiff might have declared, averring such fraud, and had the question tried. Lightbound v. Hill, 32 C. P. 249.

Quere, whether, where an insolvent's estate vested in an assignee under the Insolvent Act before its repeal, the action for the alleged fraud was a proceeding that might be continued thereunder under the terms of the repealing Act, 43 Vict. c, 1 (D.), or of the Innerportation Act, 31 Vict. c, 1 (D.); and whether, also, s. 136 of the Insolvent Act of 1875 was ultra vires the Dominion Parliament. Remarks as to the difference between s, 138, and the corresponding provision in s. 92 in the Insolvent Act of 1869. Its.

Good Faith.]—In December, 1874, D. executed a mortgage for $2,000 in favour of his sons, to secure moneys advanced by them for the erection of buildings on the mortgage premises, and in July following he conveyed the same property, with other lands, to his daughter in trust for his wife, who had advanced $700 for the same purpose. Subsequently the sons, intending to benefit their mother, executed a statutory discharge of their mortgage. In July, 1876, D. having become insolvent, his assignee instituted proceedings impeaching the conveyance to the wife as a fraud upon creditors, and which she admitted on her examination, though denied by her answer, to have been by way of security only. The court negatived fraud in both transactions, and made a decree for redemption, declaring the wife entitled to be paid the two sums of $700 and $2,000, and her costs. The maxim "Ignorantia juris neminem excusat" treated of and explained. Smith v. Drew, 25 Gr. 188.

Good Faith - Indefinite Promise.] - In May, 1874, A., a manufacturer, opened an account with a bank, representing himself as being in good circumstances with a capital of $20,000 over all his liabilities, which was believed by C., the bank agent, who thought him doing a flourishing business, and A. then promised to keep C. always well supplied with collaterals for any accommodation afforded him. In December, 1875, A. applied to C. for assistance, and proposed that he should warehouse his goods as manufactured, and pledge the receipts of the warehouseman to the bank for advances to be made to him; which proposal was acceded to by C. Adwhich proposal was acceded to by C. Advances were accordingly made, for which receipts were deposited with C. on the 19th January, 25th January, 1st February, and 7th February. On the 26th February, A., in compliance with a demand by some of his creditors, executed an assignment in insolvency. On a bill filed to impeach these transactions as an unjust preference, the court, being satisfied that they all took place in good faith, and not in contemplation of insolvency: -Held, that the bank was entitled to hold their lien on such of the receipts as were so deposited more than thirty days before the assignment in insolvency, but in respect of such of them as were deposited within the thirty days the bank could not claim any lien or priority. Held, also, that the same rule was applicable to promissory notes deposited with the bank as collateral security. The promise, however, to keep C. well supplied with collaterals was of too vague and general a character to entitle the bank to retain any But where advances were to be made on goods manufactured remaining unsold (without specifying any quantity), and C. was to judge of the amount of the advances to be made:—Held, that this agreement was not so vague or uncertain as to prevent the bank obtaining security for advances.

Merchants Bank, 24 Gr. 365. Suter v.

It is incumbent on a party seeking to impeach as an unjust preference, a transaction between a debtor and his creditor occurring more than thirty days before insolvency, to prove that such transaction took place in contemplation of insolvency. A. owned a barley mill, which he was endeavouring to sell to one T., whose notes he was to accept in payment, and in December, 1875, he arranged with C. that these notes were to be handed over in security for all his notes then under discount. Subsequently, and on the 7th February, 1876, the sale to T. having fallen through, he executed a memorandum in writing transferring to C. "as collateral security against paper discounted for me, my right, title, and interest in a barley mill " " keeping the privilege of disposing of the same and handing to you the promissory notes of the "purchaser:—Held, that this was not an unjust preference: that the bank having made advances on the faith of having the proceeds of the sale handed over, it was no extension of their security, on the sale falling through, to obtain an assignment of the mill itself. Ib.

Intent to Defeat Creditors.]—F., an hotelkeeper, being largely indebted, sold to A. B., his principal creditor, on the 19th January, 1875, by notarial deed, duly registered, certain movable and immovable property, being the bulk of his estate, comprising the hotel and turniture, for $15,409.50. The immovable property, valued by official assessors at $22,000, was sold for $10,000. The sale was also made subject to a right of redemption by F. on re-imburshuz, within three years, the stipulated price of $15,409.55. and interest at the case of insolvency or default of payment, this right of refered to the case of insolvency or default of payment, this right of refered should cease. No delivery took place, and ten menths later F., who remained in possession of the property under a lease from A. B. of the same date as that of the sale, also became bankrupt. In the mentime A. B., with F.'s consent, had leased the furniture to T. and J., in whose hands it was when appellant (F.'s assignee) revendicated it as part of the insolvent estate. T. and J. did not plead but A. B. intervened and claimed the effects under the deed of sale above mentioned. The assignee contested the intervention, alleging that deeds passed on the 19th January, 1875, had been made by F. in fraud of his creditors:—Held, that there was sufficient evidence to prove that the object of the transaction was to defeat F's creditors generally, and therefore the deed; of sale and lease of 19th January, 1875, were null and void under Arts, 1033, 1035, 1040 and 933 C. C. L. C., and s., 86 and 88 of Insolvent Act of 18875, and s. 86 and 88 of Insolvent Act of 1875, and s. 86 and 88 of Insolvent Act of 1875.

Mortgage, — Two mortgages were created by a debtor in favour of a creditor, whose claim consisted of promissory notes then current. It appeared that the debtor was in insolvent circumstances, and the court considered that both the debtor and creditor contemplated the debtor going into insolvence, which he did shortly afterwards. On a bill filled by the assignee in insolvency to set aside these mortgages, the court held them void as an "unjust preference" under the Insolvent Acts of 1864 and 1869. Payne v. Hendry, 20 Gr. 142.

Mortgage of Goods to Venãor.]—The plaintiff claiming under a chattel mortgage for $2.000, as against an execution creditor, called the mortgagor, who swore that when it was given he was not insolvent, having real estate, and a claim against a railway company for which two years previously he had refused $100,000; but there were several unsatisfied judgments and executions against him. He stated also, that the mortgage was given for the price of the property covered by it, household furniture, which he had bought from the plaintiff; and that the terms of his purchase were cash, but being disappointed in getting the money to pay, he had offered either to let the plaintiff take back the furniture or give him a mortgage on it, which latter the plaintiff accepted. The jury having found that this mortgage was given by the mortgagor being insolvent, with intent to give the plaintiff a preference over his other creditors:—Held, that there was evidence to go to them of the mortgagor's insolvency, but that if the mortgage was given under the circumstances stated by him, it was not a preference. A new trial was therefore granted. Hersee v. White, 29 U. C. R. 232.

Mortgage within Thirty Days.]—An insolvent, within thirty days of his insolvent, executed a mortgage to the defendant for alleged money advances. A composition was agreed upon, and as a collateral security therefor defendant assigned this mortgage to the assignee. The composition was apparently not carried out, and the plaintiff, the assignee brought ejectment to recover the mortgaged premises, claiming both under the assignment in insolvency, and that the mortgage was fraudulent against creditors:— Held, upon the evidence set out in the case, that the mortgage was rightly found to be fraudulent as against creditors, and that the plaintiff was entitled to recover. Davidson v. House, 43 U. C. R. 592.

No Knowledge of Insolvency.]—C. & P. carrying on business in partnership, being indebted to the plaintiff's firm for money advanced to carry on their business, in consideration that the firm would indorse a note held by C. & P., agreed to execute a mortgage securing their indebtedness, and for the indemnity of the firm against this and other indorsements. Eighteen months after the execution of such mortgage C. & P., became insolvent:—Held, in the absence of evidence of knowledge on the part of the mortgages of the inability of C. & P. to meet their engagements or of any mala fides in entering into the agreement, that the security could not be impeached under either the 130th, 131st, 132nd, or 133rd section of the Act of 1875. Cook v. Rogers, 26 Gr. 599.

Onus of Proof - Pressure - Insurance.] In this case the insolvent, about two months before the attachment against him and his assignment consequent thereupon, assigned to defendant, a creditor, a policy of insurance upon merchandise in security for a debt about upon merchandise in security for a new about to be placed in suit, and the insurance com-pany upon a fire paid over the proceeds of the policy to the creditor to the extent of his debt. The plaintiff claimed as assignee to recover back this amount, and he called the insolvent, who swore that when he assigned the policy he had no contemplation of insolvency: that his intention was, with the remaining assets and the residue of the moneys from the policy after paying defendant, to re open his business, but that he was driven into insolvency by the act of a creditor, who, though he had promised him time, sued out a writ of attachment against him :-Held, that the onus being upon the plaintiff of proving that the transfer of the policy was made by the debtor in contemplation of insolvency, (it not having been made within thirty days of the issue of attachment, or of the execution of the deed of assignment), the evidence produced by him failed to establish this fact, and that the verdict, therefore, for the defendant was right:—Held, also, that there was no fraudulent preference, it not being pretended that the assignment of the policy was the spontaneous act of the debtor, but the fair income being that it was made in consequent of pressure by the creditor:—Held, the property of the construction of the c

Onus of Proof. — The insolvent on the 17th September, 1877, gave a mortgage to the defendant, the alleged consideration being a prior debt of 8600 and an advance in cash of $1500. On the 18th October the writ of attachment issued. It was not pretended that any money was paid before the 1st October:— Held, that the onus of supporting the transaction was upon the defendant, and that the evidence was wholly insufficient, and on a bill filled by the assignee in insolvency the mortgage was set aside. Rice v. Bryant, 4 A. R. 542.

Onus of Proof—Corroboration.]—The bill was filed by the assignee in insolvency of ene T, to set aside a mortgage given by him schorly before bis insolvency, alleging that the decidant T. N., who was indorser of a note for $2,000 made by T., procured the mortgage in question for that amount to be made in the name of the product of the Payment. |—On the 18th October the insolvents soid goods to one C, taking his note for the price, which on the same day was taken by C, and by the defendant, and one of the insolvents, to a bank, and there left to be applied in payment of notes made by the insolvents and indorsed by defendant. On the 20th the insolvents made a voluntary assignment, being pressed to do so by threats of compalsory liquidation:—Held, that the transaction being within thirty days before the assignment, was a transfer to defendant by way of payment, giving him an unjust preference, and therefore void under s. S. s.s. 1: that there was evidence also that it was made by the insolvents when unable to pay, with a person knowing such inability, and therefore made with intent to defendant under s.-s. 5:—Held, also, that under s.-ss. 4 and 5 the assignee might recover in trover for the goods sold, though before his title accrued the note had been discounted and the proceeds applied on defendant's indorsations. Churcher v. Cousins, 28 U. C. R. 540.

Payment — Creditor no Knowledge,] — Held, that a payment by an insolvent after attachment against him, on account of a draft discounted by defendants for him, and dishonoured by non-acceptance, was recoverable back by the official assignee, though the defendants were ignorant of the insolvency when they received the money from him. Roe v. Royal Canadian Bank, 19 C. P. 34; followed in Roe v. Bank of British North America, 20 C. P. 351.

Payment-Valuable Security Given Up.1 —Action by the assignee of B. & P., to re-cover back $190 paid by them to defendant within thirty days next before the assignment, they being then unable to meet their engagements in full, and defendant knowing such inability, or having probable cause for believing it to exist. Plea, on equitable grounds, that before the alleged payment, B. & P., being retail merchants, requested defendant to lend to them for the purpose of carrying on their business, and he did lend, from time to time, various sums of money, upon the express agreement that such moneys should be repaid to defendant out of the proceeds of the daily sales of goods thereafter made by B. & P., and that such proceeds should be held by B. & P. upon trust to repay, and should be charged with and applied in repaying, the defendant the amount lent by him; that at the time of the payments defendant was the creditor of B. to an amount not less than the $190, for moneys advanced upon the said express agreement, and the moneys paid to defendant by B. & P. were paid out of and formed part of the proceeds of said daily sales, and were applied by defendant upon and on account of the moneys lent to defendant upon the said agree-ment, and not otherwise:—Held, on demurrer, plea good; for that the agreement between B. & P. and defendant, gave defendant an equitable claim and mortgage on their goods, which, under the proviso to s. 90 of the Insol-vent Act of 1869, was a "valuable security given up in consideration of such payment," and which must be restored to defendant be-fore a return of the payment to him could be demanded. Churcher v. Johnston, 34 U. C. R.

Payment of Indorsed Note.]—A trader being in embarrassed circumstances, sold out his business, and out of the proceeds satisfied a promissory note on which his brother was indorser, before it had become due, and shortly afterwards went into insolvency. The evidence did not shew that the indorser was aware or was a party to the payment in any way, and it was by no act of his that the note was so paid:—Held, under the circumstances, that the assignee in insolvency had no right to call upon the indorser to refund the amount of such note. But, where the payment of a note had been procured by the indorser, he was, under s. 89 of the Insolvent Act of 1869, (in effect the same as section 133 of the Act of 1875), held liable to make good the amount thereof. Botham v. Armstrong, 24 Gr. 216.

Payment of Money—No Knowledge of Insolvency.)—A payment by an insolvent in the ordinary course of business within thirty days before an assignment or the issue of a writ of attachment, is not void under s. 134 of the Act of 1875, unless the payee knows of the insolvent's inability to meet his engagements in full, or has probable cause for believing the same to exist. Held, also that a money payment not avoided under that section cannot be avoided under s. 133 by shewing that it was made in contemplation of insolvency, and that it gave the debtor an unjust preference, as a payment in money does not come within that section. Ex parte Simpson, 1 DeG, 9, distinguished. Smith v. Hutchinson, 2 A. R. 405.

Payment of Note at Request of Suretteels.—The insolvent paid a note to the holder at the request of his sureties, who had given a mortgage to secure the amount of the note, within thirty days of his being placed in insolvency. It appeared that when the sureties made this request neither they nor the creditor who held the note and mortgage knew or had probable cause for believing that the insolvent was unable to meet his engagements in full:—Held, that the payment was not void within 8, 134 of the Act of 1875, and that the assignee had no right to have the mortgage reinstated as against the sureties. Nelles v. Paul. 4 A. R. 1.

Payment by Agent-Valuable Security Given Up.]—A., carrying on business at St. Catharines, sold out his whole stock-in-trade and book debts, the purchasers assuming certain of the liabilities and paying an amount in cash. The sale was arranged and carried out by R., a creditor of A. and the father of one of the purchasers, into whose hands the purchase money was paid. A. was indebted to defendant in two notes given for goods pur-chased from defendant. These were paid by defendant. These were paid by R. within thirty days of A. being declared an insolvent, and out of the purchase money in R.'s hands. The payment was effected by drafts drawn by defendant on R., accepted by R., and discounted by defendant at a bank, to whom R. paid the amount thereof. The plaintiff, as assignee in insolvency of A.'s estate, sued defendant to recover back the moneys so paid to him, and the learned Judge. who tried the case without a jury, found that defendant knew or had probable cause for believing that A. was insolvent. The defend-ant set up that the drafts were drawn and the money paid by R. under a personal undertaking by him contained in certain letters written to defendant. The learned Judge at the trial found for the plaintiff, and on motion to enter the verdict for the defendant, the court being equally divided, the rule dropped, and the verdict stood; but for the purposes of appeal the rule was directed to be discharged without costs. Miller v. Reid, 29 C. P. 576.

20 C. P. 576.

Held, affirming the above judgment, that the plaintiff was entitled to receiver; that the evidence shewed that defendant had probable cause for believing, to be insolvent when he received the metal. R. ande such payment out of the control of the Payment of Discounted Note.]—The defendants discounted at a bank a promissory note which A. had given them, and on maturity it was paid to the bank out of A.'s moneys within thirty days of his insolvency. In an action by the assignee to recover the amount from the defendants as being a payment within s. 134 of the Insolvent Act of 1875:—Held, that they were not liable, as the payment was not made to them, but to the bank, who were the actual creditors. Miller v. Harrey, 6 A. R. 203,

Payments to Surety.]-G., in 1878, being unable, on account of depression in bus to meet his liabilities, applied to his creditors for an extension of time for the payment for an extension that of $6,000, after deduction of his bad debts. The creditors consented to grant his request, and agreed to accept G's notes at 4, 8, 12 and 16 months, on condition that the last of them should be indorsed to their satisfaction. N. (the respondent) agreed to indorse the last notes on condition that G. should deposit in a bank in his (N.'s) name $75 per week to secure him for such indorsation, and G. signed an agreement to that effect. Thereupon N indorsed G.'s notes to an amount of over $4,000, and they were given to G.'s creditors 83,000, and they were given to G. S creatiors.
On 31st July, 1879, G., after having deposited $2,007.87 in N.'s name, in the Ville Marie Bank, failed, and N. paid the notes he had indorsed, partly with the $2,007.87. B., as assignee of G., brought an action against N., claiming that the payments made to N. by G. were fraudulent, and praying that the money so deposited might be reimbursed by N. to B for the benefit of all G.'s creditors :- Held, that the arrangement between G. and N., by which the moneys deposited in the bank by G became pledged to N., was not void either under the Insolvent Act or the Civil Code; there was no fraud on the creditors, nor such an abstraction of assets from creditors as the law forbids, but a proper and legitimate appropriation of a portion of G.'s assets in furtherance, and not in contravention, of the rights of the creditors, giving at the most to the surety a preferential security which could not be said to have been in contemplation of insolvency or an unjust preference. Beausoleil v. Normand, 9 S. C. R. 711.

Pressure—Belief as to Continuance of Business.—The Insolvent Act (1864) forbids mortgages of real estate to a creditor by way of preference. Curtis v. Dale, 2 Ch. Ch. 184. But where the mortgager did not believe

But where the mortgagor did not believe he was insolvent (though the mortgage feared he was so) and made a mortgage of real estate under pressure on the part of the mortgagee, and in the belief that he (the mortgagee, would thereby be enabled to continue his business and pay his liabilities in full, the mortgage was held valid as against his assignee in insolvency. Ib.

Pressure—No Knowledge of Insolvency—Whole of Assets Mortagued.]—The insolvent, an innkeeper, on the 12th August, 1868, gave the plaintiff a mertgage upon the whole of his property, payable in six months, tor an overdue debt. The attachment in insolvency issued on the 6th December following, and the assignee seized and sold the goods. The evidence shewed that the mortgagor knew or had strong reasons to believe himself to be insolvent when he gave the mortgage, but that the defendant did not know it, and that the mortgage was given under pressure by defendant, and not with intent to defent or delay creditors:—Held, that under these circumstances it was not void under the Insolvent Act as against the assignee. Archibald v. Haldan, 31 U. C. R. 295.

Pressure—Part of Assets—No Knowledge of Insolveny.]—A mortgage was obtained by pressure from an insolvent person, a miller, three months before he executed an assignment in insolveny; the mortgage was for an antecelent date and was not enforceable for two years; it comprised the mortgagor's mill only, and left antouched about one-third of his assets; was not executed with intent to give the mortgagor's preference; and at the mortgagor's insolvency. In a suit by the mortgagor's insolvency, in a suit by the mortgagor's insolvency, in a suit by the mortgagor was held to be valid. Mc11 kirter v. Royal Canadian Bank, 17 Gr. 480

The mortgagees, shortly after obtaining this mortgage, became aware of their debtor's desperate circumstances, and obtained from him by pressure a mortgage on his chattels used in his business. This mortgage was held void against the assignee in insolvency. Ib.

Pressure — Advances.] — On the 11th September, M. H. and R. H. her husband husband made a chattel mortgage to the Dominion Bank to secure a previous indebtedness of R. H. to the bank. No future day was named for the payment, and the proviso for possession until default was struck out. A writ of attachment in insolvency was issued against R. H. on the 4th October, 1875, and the assignee took possession of the mortgaged chattels then in the debtor's possession. The bank claimed the chattels under the mortgage, which the assignee contended was void against the creditors. The bank thereupon petitioned for an order directing the assignee to deliver up the goods. It appeared that the debtor had long previously been embarrassed; most of his paper was under protest; that his real estate was also mortgaged to the bank and others, and no pressure was shewn to obtain the mortgage, and no promise was made of any future advance. The Judge in made of any future advance. insolvency declined to grant the order petitioned for, holding the mortgage void under ss. 130 and 133 :- Held, under these circumstances, after an elaborate review of the English and Canadian authorities bearing on the subject, that the chattel mortgage was fraudulent and void as against creditors, and the appeal was dismissed, with costs. In re Pressure — Threats of Criminal Proceedings—Simulated Pressure.] — A preference which a debtor is induced to give by threats of criminal or other proceedings, is not void under 22 Vict, c. 96, or the Insolvent Act of 1864. But to sustain the preference the pressure must have been real, and not a feigned contrivance between the debtor and creditor to wear the appearance of pressure, for the mere purpose of giving effect to the debtor's desire and intention to give a preference. Clemone v. Converse, 16 Gr. 547.

Pressure—Presumption.]—Two cousins, II. and R., entered into partnership in trade, II. furnishing all the capital (about $1,400). After eighteen months IR. retired from the business, assigning as a reason therefor his having become possessed of the family homestead, the management of which it was necessary for him to superintend. On IR.'s retirement he sold his interest to S., a brother of II., for about $1,230, and paid partly by two promissory notes, one for $80 at a short date, and the other for $1,080 at a year, indorsed by two other brothers, and the residue by $70 in cash, supplied by one of the indorsers. S. in cash, supplied by one of the indorsers, S. having been without any means of his own. Shortly afterwards (about three or four months) S. withdrew from the business, making way for J., a brother-in-law of H. and S., who put $1,000 into the business, but paid nothing to S. for the transfer of his interest. The smaller note was duly paid, but the larger note was not met at maturity, and it was alleged that there was an understanding for an extension of time for payment: R. omitted to give the indorsers notice of dis-honour, and some months afterwards, claim-ing that the partnership effects were, under the circumstances and a prior verbal arrange ment, answerable for the note, applied to H and J. (the new firm) for payment thereof, and they being unable to meet the demand assigned to R. certain accounts, and executed in his favour a chattel mortgage on nearly the whole of their assets, as security for its ultimate or their assets, as security for its ultimate payment. Withis thirty days after the execu-tion of these instruments H. and J. were placed in insolvency by other creditors: Held, that such assignment and mortgage Held, that such assignment and mortgage were void, as an unjust preference made in contemplation of insolvency, within s. 80 of the Act of 1889 (32 & 33 Viet. c. 16). The court divided upon the question whether the presumption referred to in s. 89 of the Act of 1869, is or is not a rebuttable one. But per curiam, mere pressure will not, under any circumstances, validate such transactions. Davidson v. Ross, 24 Gr. 22.

Pressure.]—Traders, who had been in business for about eight months, and were at the end of that time in insolvent circumstances, had sent an order for goods to their largest creditor, whose account against the firm land increased to double the amount it was originally agreed that it should be, which goods were packed un, but not sent for some days, when one of the firm waited on the creditor, taking with him a list of debts due the firm, intending, by arrangement with his partner, to offer to assign to the creditor should select, and which he accordingly did offer on being asked if he could pay any money on account, and a transfer thereof was accepted by the creditor:—Held, that this was sufficient pressure on the part of the creditor to prevent the assignment being considered a preferential one within the Act. Keays v. Broun. 22 Gr. 10.

Pressure.]—Held, that even if pressure had been proved in the case, it could not, under the ruling in Davidson v. Ross. 24 Gr. 22, have validated the assignment. Davidson v. McInnes, 22 Gr. 217, 24 Gr. 414.

Presumption—Onus of Proof—Pressure.]—Under s. 89 of the Insolvent Act of 1869, the presumption that transactions within thirty days next before the assignment, &c., were made in contemplation of insolvency, is not conclusive, but may be rebutted. In this case the creditor, who lived twenty miles from the insolvent, had a mortgage on the insolvent's house for $800, of which $400 was due. On the 8th February he wrote to the insolvent to call and arrange matters the cext time he was in, and on the 9th he purchased from the insolvent about $1.400 worth of pork, on condition that $600 should go upon the mortgage, and he paid the balance of the purchase money to other creditors. An attachment in insolvency issued on the 3rd March, and the assignee brought this suit against the creditor to avoid the transaction. The creditor said he did not wish to press the debtor in any way, but wanted his money. The debtor oved about $3.000, and his property produced only $1.000. There was contradictory evidence as to defendant knowing or having probable cause for believing that the debtor was unable to meet his engagements, and as to whether the property mortgaged was worth more than the balance left due upon it. The jury having found in favour of the defendant, the creditor, the court held that the transaction was not avoided by force of the statute; and upon the facts they refused to interfere:—Held, also, that the insolvent could not, under the circumstances, be said to have acted voluntarily, within the meaning attached to that word by the decided cases. Campbell v. Barrie, 31 U. C. R. 279.

Principal and Agent-Evidence.]-The plaintiff purchased barley from R., telling him to consign it to C. and draw on C. for the purchase money. C. was to keep the barley as plaintiff's agent until the plaintiff directed him to sell, the plaintiff paying him such a sum as he might require by way of margin to protect himself against a fall in price. C., to reimburse his advance on R.'s draft, obtained a discount from the bank on his own note secured by the warehouse receipt for the barley, which he transferred to the bank. While C. held the barley the plaintiff paid to him $540 as margin to hold it. The barley was shipped by plaintiff's instructions to Oswego, to the order of the bank, where it was sold; and the bank received the proceeds on the 2nd December, having previously had notice that plaintiff owned the barley. About the 17th November C. left the country, and an attachment in insolvency having issued against him, an interpleader was directed to try whether the balance of such proceeds above the bank's advances belonged to his assignee or to the plaintiff:—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to it, for the barley was his, and the money the proceeds of its sale, never came into C.'s hands, or was mixed with his general C. had advanced by paying R.'s draft assets. more than the proceeds of the barley, and it was contended therefore that there was no surplus available for the plaintiff but held, that the plaintiff was entitled to deduct from such advance the sums paid by way of margin. After C. had absconded the plaintiff went to his office to ask about his barley, and there saw R. the manager of C's business, who went with him to the bank and had a conversation with the cashier :- Held, that their evidence of what passed was clearly admissible. Cotter v. Mason, 30 U. C. R. 181.

Probable Cause for Knowledge of Insolvency.]— The learned Judge found, under s. 130 of the Act of 1875, that the mortgagee did not know of the insolvents' inability to meet their engagements, but that it was notroitous, and that he had probable cause for believing it, so that the mortgage must be presumed to be made with intent to defraud creditors; and as a conclusion from these facts, he found that such intent was known to the mortgage, and that s. 132 also applied:—Held, that the finding of the facts required by s. 130 was sustained by the evidence; but that the conclusion from these facts was not warranted, and that s. 132 therefore did not apply. Re Andrews, 2 A. R. 24.

Sale for Pre-existing Debt.]—A person being insolvent sold his property to a creditor, the consideration being a pre-existing debt, and a sum in addition sufficient to make up the price agreed upon as the value of the property sold; the amount so received by the debtor being by him paid over, with the knowledge of the purchaser, to another creditor; and three months after this sale the debtor made an assignment under the Insolvent Act. On a bill filed by a creditor, the sale was set asside and a re-sale of the property ordered, the proceeds to be applied in payment of the plaintiff's claim, and the residue, if any, to be paid over to the assignee in insolvency. Coates v. Joslin, 12 Gr. 524.

Sale of Stock-in-trade—Notes Handed to Creditor—Pressure.]—A trader, who was indebted to the amount of $8,000, and claimed to have assets, consisting of stock-in-trade, book, and other debts due to him, to the amount of about $8,500, agreed with one of his creditors to sell off his entire stock-in-trade, procure notes therefor, and hand the same over to the creditor in discharge of his claim, which was accordingly done by the debtor to an amount of about $8,5000; leaving only the book debts, which it was shewn would pay not more than twenty-five per cent. on the claims of the remaining creditors. At this time about one-half of the claim of the creditor so paid off was not due:—Held, that under the circumstances this was a preferential assignment within the meaning of the Insolvent Act, and as such fraudulent and void against the general body of creditors; and that it could not be supported as having been procured by pressure. Davidson v. McInnes, 22 Gr. 217; 23 Gr. 417; 23 Gr

Sale of Stock-in-trade at a Sacrifice.]—The plaintiff, who lived in Stirling and carried on business there, went to Belleville, about twenty miles distant, where he saw for the first time about mid-day one G., who was in business there. They discussed the purchase by the plaintiff of G.'s stock-in-trade, amounting to something over $4,000, but concluded no bargain. The plaintiff then went home, realized all his available assets, part at a sacrifice, returned to Belleville between nine and ten the same night with his son, at once commenced taking stock with G., finished next evening between five and six, and then, without making any inquiry as to G.'s position or taking any advice on the subject, according to his own statement, purchased the stock at 90 cents on $, and paid over to G. in cash the purchase money, $4.279. G., who was insolvent at the time, being indebted in about $17,000, with less than $5,000 of assets, absconded that night with the money. Other evidence went to shew that the plaintiff in fact purchased the business at 35 per cent. discount, i. e., for $2,700, and there were other circumstances of suspicion:—Held, that the jury properly found the sale to be fraudulent and void under ss. 86 and 88 of the Insolvent Act of 1869:-Held, also, that even if the plaintiff were innoceni of wrongful intent, the sale of his whole stock-in-trade was in itself an act of bankruptcy. Brooks v. Taylor, 26 C. P. 443.

Sale or Transfer Within Thirty Days
—Presumption—Accommodation Acceptor.}—
Where a sale or transfer of goods is made to a creditor within thirty days before the issuing of a writ of attachment in insolvency:—
Held, that the statutory presumption raised by s. 133 of the Act of 1875, that it is done in contemplation of insolvency, is not displaced by merely shewing that the sale or transfer was bond fide, or that the creditor did not know or had not probable cause for believing the insolvent was unable to mee his engagements. In this case the good of the contemplation of the insolvents and protested for non-payment, upon the defendant agreeing to take up the draft, which he did. The only evidence as to the condition of the insolvents' affairs was, that within three days after the delivery of the goods the insolvents made an assignment in pursuance of the Act, their liabilities being upwards of $147.000;—Held, under these circumstances, that the sale must be deemed to have been made in contemplation of insolvency, and there being no evidence displacing such presumption, the defendant, if a creditor, must be assumed to have obtained an unjust preference notwithstanding the jury expressly found otherwise:—Held, however, that an accommodation acceptor who has not paid the draft is not a creditor within the meaning of $1.215 of the Act, so as to avoid a sale made in good faith and in the ordinary course of business. *Lean v. Ross. 20 C. P. 121.

Substitution of Debtors.]—Knox being indebted to one Kyle, and Kyle to defendant, it was arranged that defendant should take Knox as his debtor, defendant crediting Kyle with the amount which Knox owed to Kyle, and Kyle discharging Knox; and Knox accordingly gave defendant his note for the amount. This took place within thirty days before Kyle made an assignment in insolvency, and his assignee brought trover for the note, contending that the transaction was avoided by s. S. s.s. 4, of the Insolvent Act of 1864; but held, not, for the note never was the insolvent's property, and so never passed to the assignee; and even if it was a transfer or payment by Kyle within the Act, and so avoided, this would not entitle the plaintiff to the note. McGregor v. Hume, 28 U. C. R. 380.

Threat of Criminal Proceedings—Foreign Country.]—An insolvent absconded to the United States, taking money with him.
He was followed there by the agent of a person in this country who had become surety for him, and, by the threats of criminal proceedings, induced to pay the amount of the security. A bill, by the official assignee, to recover the money from the surety, was dismissed with costs. Roe v. Smith, 15 Gr. 344.

Threat of Criminal Proceedings.]—
A preference which a debtor is induced to give by theats of criminal or other proceedings, is not void under the Indigent Debtors Act of 1859, or the Insolvent Act of 1864. Clemmow v. Converse, 16 Gr. 547.

Transfer of Goods to Creditors—Procedure.]—The prisoners were indicted under s. 147 of the Insolvent Act of 1869, for having within three months preceding the execution of an assignment in insolvency pawned, pleticed, and disposed of, otherwise than in the way of trade, certain goods which had remained unpaid for during the said three months. The goods, which had been purchased on credit, the period of which had not expired when the prisoners were indicted, were given on the day of assignment, but before its execution, to a clerk on account of salary due to him, and to indemnify him against accommodation indorsements, to a carter in their employment, in satisfaction of a sum of money previously deposited with them, and to a person who had given them accommodation notes. The indictment was found on the 23rd October, but the information had been haid and the prisoners arrested before the 1st September, when the Insolvent Act of 1875, came into force:—Held, that the disposal of the goods as above was an offence within s. 147; and that it was no objection that such disposal was not to their own use, but to satisfy creditors, and that the time of credit on which the insolvents had purchased the goods had not expired when defendants made their assignment. Regina v. Kerr, 26 C. F. 214.

By s. 149 of the Act of 1875, the Act of 1869 was repealed, but there was a saving

By s. 149 of the Act of 1875, the Act of 1869 was repealed, but thers was a saving clause as regarded proceedings commenced and pending thereunder, and as regarded all contracts, acts, matters, and things made and done before such repeal, to which the said Act of 1869 would have applied:—Held, that the prosecution as well as the offence came within the saving clause, the laying of the information being the commencement of the prosecution, while the said disposal was a contract, &c., done before such repeal, 1b.

formation being the commencement of the pro-secution, while the said disposal was a con-tract, &c., done before such repeal. Ib.
Section 148 of the Act of 1809 provided that all offences punishable under that Act should be tried by a special jury. Section 141 of the Act of 1875 directed that all offences punishable under that Act should be tried as other offences of the same degree; and by s. 159, as respects matters of procedure merely, the provisions of that Act should supersede the Act of 1869. In this case, before the trial, the Crown gave notice of and struck a special jury, who were in attendance at the trial, but the Crown, notwithstanding, elected to call and try the case by a common jury. The prisoners' counsel objected thereto, and the case proceeded, the prisoners entering into a full defence, but subject to such objection, which was renewed at the close of the case, with the further objection that there had been a mistrial:-Held, that the case should have been tried by a special jury, for the offence was not punishable under the Act of 1875, and the matter was not one of procedure within s. 149; that there had therefore been a mistrial, and the prisoners under the circumstances had not waived their right to insist upon their objection; and that this was a "question of law which arose on the trial." which might properly be reserved, and not an objection to be raised by challenge to the jury.

Transfer by Partner to Co-partner of Interest in the Firm. —A partnership existing between two persons was within three months of the issue of the writ of attachment in insolvency dissolved, and one of the partners transferred his interest in the partners sindividually, were insolvent, which they were sindividually, were insolvent, which they were aware of or had probable cause for believing. Afterwards the remaining partner and the firm were placed in insolvency by compulsory liquidation, and a different assignee appointed for each:—Held, that he transfer was fraudulent and void, and that nothing passed under it; and that the assignee of the firm, therefore, and not of the separate partner, was entitled to the effects of the partnership; and an order made by the county Judge for the transfer of such property from the separate to the joint assignee was confirmed:—Held, also, that even if the partnership creditors could prove against the effects in the hands of the separate assignee, so that all that was required was a direction to that effect, as the making of the order was purely a matter of discretion the court would not interfere. In re Caton, 26 C. P. 308.

Transfer of Insurance Loss.]-G. & C., a manufacturing firm, being unable to meet a note given to plaintiff in the course of their business, at the plaintiff's request gave him a chattel mortgage for $1,500 and interest, on certain machinery and tools in their manufactory, payable in eleven months, the mortgage containing a covenant by the mortgagors to insure against fire, and on demand to assign the policy to the plaintiff. No insurance was effected after the mortgage was executed, and shortly thereafter the property was destroyed by fire. The mortgagors, however, held several insurances on the property, one of which was on the chattels, but was invalid, and another in a mutual company, was on the building only in which these goods were, not on the goods. Some days after the fire G. & C., the mortgagors, with the knowledge that they were in insolvent circumstances, and within thirty days of being declared insolvent, gave the plaintiff an order on this company for a certain amount of money:—Held, that the order was void, under s. 133 of the Act of 1875. Smyth v. Morton, 30 C. P. 566.

Warehouse Receipts - Unregistered Chattel Mortgage.]—On the 13th September. 1866, S. agreed to deliver on account of K. at a railway station when wanted, 600 boxes of factory cheese, at a certain rate per pound, and to keep the same insured until wanted. The weight had not then been ascertained, in fact all had not been manufactured. quently, two warehouse receipts, dated respecquently, two warenouse receipts, under respec-tively 21st September and 9th October, were given to K., one for 330, the other for 230 boxes, signed by S. and specifying the weight of the cheese. On the 22nd October, K. mortgaged to plaintiffs 400 boxes of cheese, purchased by him from S. on or about the 13th September, and then in the curing house of S to secure moneys advanced to him by plaintiffs, upon the security of part of the cheese. This mortgage was not filed. S. became insol-This mortgage was not nied. S. became K. bevent on the 19th October following, and K. bevent on the 19th October following day. The came aware of it on the following day. plaintiffs replevied 341 boxes of cheese :-Held, that even if the property did not pass before that even if the property did not pass before the 21st September, the subsequent insolvency of S. did not affect K.'s right; for that the In-solvent Act of 1844, S. S. s. s. 2, did not apply, as there was no evidence of obstructing or in-juring creditors, but the contrary, the pro-perty having been sold at its full value; but, even if the case were within that clause the contract would be voidable only under the order of a competent tribunal, upon such order of a competent tribunal, upon such terms as to the protection of the person from actual loss or liability as the court might direct:—Held, also, that the mortgage to the plaintiffs was valid, having been taken "by way of additional security for a debt contracted to the bank in the course of its busiand therefore within C. S. C. c. 54, ness," and therefore within C. S. C. c. 54, s. 4: that it could not be impeached by any one for want of filing but an opposing creditor of K., and that as S. could not impeach it, neither could the defendant, his assignee in insolvency. 17 C. P. 506. Bank of Montreal v. McWhirter, Warehouse Receipts.]—Debt secured to bank by invalid warehouse receipts—Payment thereof by another bank and substitution of new receipts — Validity of the transaction under the Insolvent Act of 1876, Milloy v, Kerr, 43 U. C. R. 78; 3 A. R. 350; 8 S. C. R. 474.

ievied thereunder by, a bailing of such courts, although the section speaks only of executions delivered to the sheriff. Patterson v. McCarthy, 35 U. C. R. 14.

It was objected that defendant received the money only as clerk of the court, but it appeared that the sale had taken place after the assignment, and held, that there being no lien created by the mere seizure, which took place before the assignment, the plaintif was entitled to the money as part of the insolvent's estate, no matter in whose hands it might be. Ib.

Execution—Assignment not in Accordance with the Act.1—On 30th January, 1865. W. B. executed before a notary public in Lower Canada, to the plaintiff Rose, an instrument which purported to be an assignment under the Act of 1864, but which was informal in several particulars. On the 24th February following, defendant issued execution against the goods of W. B. and gave it to the sheriff. On the 10th March following, the other plaintiffs issued an attachment under the Insolvent Act, under which an official assignee was appointed by the county Judge, and on the same day the sheriff seized the goods of W.B., after the issue of the attachment, but under the defendant's execution:—Held, that the execution must prevail; for that the subsequent proceedings in insolvency avoided the assignnent to Rose, and the execution being in the sheriff's hands before the issuing of the attuchment, bound the goods at common law from its date, and under the Statute of Frauds from its delivery to the sheriff. Rose v. Brown, 16 C. P. 477.

Execution—Assignment not in Accordance with the Act.] — Proceedings in compulsory liquidation taken after the execution of an assignment for the benefit of creditors not made in accordance with the Act of 1864, render it absolutely void as against creditors of the insoluent, so as to let in intermediate execution creditors. Thorne v. Torrance, 16 C. P. 445; 18 C. P. 20.

Execution.] — Where an attachment under the Absconding Debtors Act was received by a sheriff and acted upon, and afterwards writs of fi. fn. were placed in his hands, and he subsequently received an attachment under the Insolvent Act of 1864; —Held, that defendant's property passed to the official assignee, but that he must give the execution creditors the priority to which they would be entitled. Henry v. Douglass, i C. L. J. 108.

Execution-Time. 1-Judicial proceedings and statutes take effect in law from the earliest period of the day upon which they are respectively originated and come into force, M. recovered a judgment and issued a fi. fa. goods against R. The writ was given to the The writ was given to the sheriff at half-past ten and a levy made about It a.m. On the same day, but after the levy, C. sued out against R. an attachment in insolvency, which the sheriff received at 11.30 On the same day, also, the Insolvent Act of 1865 came into force (the Royal assent being given thereto on the same day, but not till the afternoon), by which in effect this execution, unless theretofore issued and delivered to the sheriff, was postponed to the attachment:—Held, that the fi. fa. could not be considered as having been so issued and delivered, and therefore, by virtue of the Act, the at-tachment prevailed over the execution:— Held, also, that the execution creditor was not entitled to any lien for his costs. Semble, that the issuing of the attachment was a that the issuing of the attachment was a judicial act, and by it the property of the insolvent vested in the assignee by relation before it was seized under and before any lien attached by virtue of the execution. Converse v. Michie, 16 C. P. 167.

Execution—Costs.] — A stay of proceedings was given to a sheriff on an execution in his hands by the attorney for the execution creditors:—Held, that the execution, under which they claimed priority over an official assignee, had not been placed in the sheriff's hands for execution until too late to give them priority as regarded the balance due thereon, the assignment having been made within thirty days after the time the writ was given to the sheriff for execution; but that the execution creditors were entitled to their costs of suit to be proved as a privileged claim. In the Fair and Buits, 2 C. L. J. 216.

Execution.] — Judgment creditors having executions in the sheriff's hands under which a seizure had been made, signed an agreement giving the defendant an extension of time for payment on certain conditions therein mentioned. Upwards of thirty days afterwards defendant assigned under the Insolvent Act; the conditions of the agreement having been so far performed:—Held, 1. That the writs were not in the sheriff's hands for execution, and that the assignment made more than thirty days after their delivery to the sheriff took priority. 2. That the seizing creditors had no lien for their costs under ss. 3, 12, 13, of the Act of 1805, the lien there given applying solely to the law of Quebec. [But see next case.] 3. That the sheriff had no lien or claim on the goods seized for his fees. In re Ross, 3 P. R. 394.

Execution.]—Held, overruling the above case, that under s. 13, a judgment creditor who had an execution in the sheriff's hands at the making of the assignment, was entitled to rank for his costs of the judgment as a privileged creditor against the insolvent. In re Heyden, 29 U. C. R. 262.

Execution. — Defendant's execution was handed to the sheriff on the 28th June, the assignment to the plaintiff make on the 16th June and the sheriff of the 16th June and the sheriff of the 16th June and 16th June Execution.]—M., under a fi. fa. at his own suit against D., which was the first in the sheriff's hands, purchased certain land in September, 1867. D. had in April previous made a voluntary assignment, under the Insolvent Act of 1894, to an official assignee, who claimed the proceeds of the sale, under the amending Act, 29 Vict. c. 18, s. 17. M. claimed a conveyance from the sherifi, crediting the purchase money on his judgment. The court, under these circumstances, discharged with costs an application by M. for a mandamus to compel the sheriff to convey, to which the assignee was no party. In re Moffatt, 27 U. C. R. 52.

Execution.]—On the 10th May, 1873, K. executed a voluntary assignment to the official assignee, who, on being told of it, advised a private arrangement in order to save expense, On the 12th the plaintiff recovered judgment, and issued an execution against K. to defendant, a division court bailiff, who seized a pair of horses, and took a bond for their forthcoming. On the 2nd June defendant, having again taken the horses, advertised them for sale under the execution. The assignment on the 7th June, and claimed the horses from defendant and the the total content of the co sulted to the plaintiff. Brown v. Wright, 35 U. C. R. 378.

Execution.]—The plaintiff issued a fi. fa. Instands on the 7th June, 1865, and renewed it from time to time until 4th June, 1867. On 30th March, 1867, defendant obtained his discharge in insolvency. Plaintiff had proved his claim for the full amount of the judgment in the insolvent court, and had never attempted to take any proceedings under the writ, which he refused to withdraw, although requested to do so. The court set the fi. fa. aside with costs. Dickinson v. Bunnell, 19 C. P. 216.

Execution—Chattel Mortgage,]—An execution against an insolvent debtor is superseted by an attachment in insolvency, and a chattel creditor, but good against an execution creditor, but good against as execution solvency, prevails over an execution so superseded. Ontario Bank v. Wilcox, 43 U.C. R. 460.

Execution—Interpleader.]—An execution was delivered to a sheriff against the goods of the defendant, upon which he seized certain goods. These goods were claimed by the guardian in insolvency of the estate of the defendant, against whom a writ of attachment under the Insolvent Act had also issued to the same sheriff. The sheriff applied for relief under the Interpleader Act:—Held, that under 28 Vict. c. 19, s. 2, he was entitled to protection, and an issue was directed. Burns v. Steet, 2 C. L. J. Iso.

Execution — Mortgage Action.] — The mortgagor of land having made an assignment in insolvency, subsequent, however, to the execution of the plaintift, and it appearing that there was a surplus after payment of all claims proved against the lands in the suit by the prior mortgage, it was held that, in the absence of proof of waiver by the plaintiff of his rights, the plaintiff was entitled to priority as against the creditors of the mortgagor under the assignment in insolvency. Darling v. Wilson, 16 Gr. 255.

Execution — Money Realized.] — Held, under s. 13 of the Act of 1865, that where before the assignment the money had been made by the sheriff under a fi, fia. against the insolvent, the execution creditor was entitled to it; for that the section applied only where, but for its provisions, a lien would have existed on the property in question at the execution of the assignment, and not where it had been converted into money which belonged to the execution creditor:—Held, also, that under the circumstances of this case, the money must be treated as received under the execution. Sinclair v. McDougoll, 29 U. C. R. 388.

Execution—Sale.] — Where a sale has been made under an execution against a judgment debtor, who after the sale makes an assignment in insolvency, the proceeds of the sale are not vested in the official assignee, but go to the judgment creditors. Brand v. Bickle, 4 P. R. 191.

A sheriff has a right to an interpleader in such a case, when the proceeds are claimed by an official assignee. Ib.

Execution—Sale.]—By s. 13 of the Insolvent Act of 1865, the divesting of any lien or privilege, (i. e. priority of right) extends only to the levying upon or seizing under the execution, not to the sale thereunder. In this case an execution had been placed in the sheriff's hands on the 15th March, 1866, and on the 26th a sale thereunder, commenced at 10 a.m., was completed at 11 a.m., at which hour a writ of attachment was placed in the sheriff's hands against the defendant;—Held, that the attachment could not prevail over the execution. Converse v, Michie, 16 C. P. 167, distinguished. Whyle v. Treaductl, 17 C. P.

Mortgage—Trespass.]—The defendant as official assignee, having taken possession of certain goods and premises, and being sued by a mortgage, claimed a deduction from the plaintill's damages for rent. insurance, and taxes paid by him out of the proceeds of sales:—Semble, that it should have been allowed only if due when he took possession: but this did not appear, and under the circumstances the court refused to interfere. Mathers v. Lynch, 28 U. C. R. 334.

Mortgage—Trespass.]—An official assignee, sued for trespass in taking and selling goods, pleaded (relying upon s. 50 of the Insolvent Act of 1869), that before the writ of attachment hereinafter mentioned, one C. mortgaged the goods to the plaintiff: that while said goods were in C.'s possession, the mortgage providing that he should retain them until default, the sheriff seized the goods until default, the sheriff seized the goods under an attachment in insolvency issued at the suit of M., and placed them in the custody of defendant, being an official assignee and guardian, and defendant being afterwards duly made assignee of C.'s estate, sold the goods—which are the alleged trespasses:—Held, a bad plea, for only negativing a default by C. when the attachment issued, not when the defendant received and sold the goods. Archibidt y, Haldam, 30 U. C. R. 30.

Semble, that the section referred to only restrains a suit by creditors who had proved, or can prove, on the estate, and does not prevent a mortgagee from suing in trespass for a wrongful taking of the goods. Ib.

Mortgagee not Entitled to Take Goods.]—Where goods were mortgaged, and after default remained with the mortgagor, who made an assignment of the mortgagor, who made an assignment of the mortgage could not take them out of the assignee's possession, but must enforce his claim under the Insolvent Act, and that he was a trespasser in so taking them. Dumble v. White, 32 U. C. R. 601.

Mortgagee — Distraining for Interest.]
—One M., in May, 1873, mortgagel land to defendants to secure payment of money by instalments, and it was provided that in case of default defendants might distrain. M. made an assignment under the Act of 1809, and the planintiff, as his assignee, entered on the land, which was in M.'s possession, and took possession of certain goods there belonging to him. Afterwards, an instalment on the mortgage being overdue, defendants distrained therefor on these goods, which were still upon the mortgaged premises: —Held, that defendants' only remedy was by application under s. 50 of the Insolvent Act, and that they had no right to distrain. Murro v. Commercial Building and Investment Society, 36 U. C. R. 464.

Mortgagee of Goods in Possession.]—Goods and chattels in the possession of a mortgagee of them cannot be seized and sold, and the proceeds paid over to a sheriff acting under a writ of attachment in insolvency against the mortgagor. Held, also, that the possession of the defendant, to whom such goods had been sent by the plaintiff, the goods had been sent by the plantill, the mertragee, to be sold, and their proceeds paid over to him, was the possession of the mort-gagee; and defendant having in such case assented to the seizure by the sheriff, and, paid ever the proceeds, was liable to repay them to the mortgagee. Watson v. Hender-son, 25 C. P. 562. acting under his directions, sold the goods and Priorities.1—Seizure under division court executions—Claim under chattel mortgage— Attachment in insolvency—Priorities as betrachment in insolvency—Priorities as between assignee, execution creditor, and the mortgage—Action by plaintiff, claiming under chattel mortgage—Hight of plaintiff to avail himself of assignees title. O'Callaghan v. Cocan, 41 U. C. R. 272.

Rent. |- A landlord, in case of his tenant's insolvency, has no privilege or preference for rent over any other claim; his only protection lies in his right to a preferential lien on property on the demised premises. On the facts set out in this case, it was held, that there was no ground for ordering the assignee to place the claim for rent as a privileged one, there being no proof that he (the assignee) had obtained goods which might have been distrained sufficient to pay it; and such order was therefore set aside on appeal. In re Kenwas therefore set aside on appeal. In re-nedy, Mason v. Higgins, 36 U. C. R. 471.

Rent. | - Defendant, in consideration of the yearly rents, covenants, and conditions in the lease contained, leased certain premises to one M. at an annual rent, and as one of the covenants or conditions, in consideration of which the demise was made, after reciting that M. had agreed to pay $700, by way of additional rent, for the purchase of the good-will of the demised premises, M. covenanted to pay the $700 in ten quarterly payments of 870 each, with a proviso that in case of breach of any of his covenants, the said $700, due and payable by way of rent, with a fur-ther covenant that if the term granted should be seized under execution or on attachment against M., or if M, should make an assignment or become bankrupt or insolvent, or take the benefit of any Insolvent Act, the then current quarter's rent should immediately become due and payable and the term become void. M. failed to pay any portion of the 8700, and after the accrual of the third quarterly payment became insolvent :- Held, that defendant had the right to distrain upon the goods on the demised premises for the three quarterly payments of $70 each that had accrued due before the insolvency, but that, notwithstanding the different provisions con-tained in the lease, he could not, having regard either to the common law, the statute 8 Anne c. 14, s. 6, or s. 14 of the Insolvent Act of 1865, distrain for the whole $700. Griffith v. Brown, 21 C. P. 12.

Rent-Distress.]-Section 81 of the Insolvent Act of 1869 restricts the landlord to one year's rent, even where he has distrained for more before the insolvency of the tenant. Griffith v. Brown, 21 C. P. 12, distinguished. Mason v. Hamilton, 22 C. P. 411, reversing 22 C. P. 190.

Rent.]-Under the Insolvent Act, 1875, 88, 74-125, the assignee is bound to recognize the claim of the landlord, although he may not have distrained, as a "preferential lien" with respect to the goods on the demised premises, for whatever rent became due during the year before the assignment or attachment, the year before the assignment or attachment. The lease, dated 15th December, 1875, for ten years, made the first year's rent payable in advance, and contained a proviso that in the event of insolvency "the term shall immeevent of insolvency "the term shall immediately become forfeited and void, but the next succeeding current year's rent shall, nevertheless, be at once due and payable." The assignment in insolvency took place on the 22nd September, 1876:—Held, that the landlord was entitled to the first year's rent, as a preferred claim, but that the proviso was void as being a fraud on the Insolvent Act, and that he therefore could not prove for the second year. In re Hoskins and Haweley, 1 A. R. 379.

Rept.] - One E. agreed to rent certain premises for ten years on condition that certain improvements were made. The agreement was evidenced by a letter from the land-lord, to the terms of which E. assented. After the alterations were completed E. entered, and while still in possession under this agree-ment became insolvent. The inspectors cancelled the lease, and delivered up the premises at the end of the current year, whereupon the landlord claimed to be allowed damages under the 70th and three succeeding sections of the Insolvent Act, 1875:—Held, that these sec-tions are not limited to leases valid at law, but they apply equally to leases valid in equity: that here the execution of a formal equity: that here the execution of a formal lease could have been compelled; and that the landlord was therefore entitled to prove for damages for the cancellation. Re Erly, 2 A. R, 617.

Rent.]-Where the landlord distrained for six months' rent while the goods were in the tenant's possession, and afterwards, the goods being in the hands of the bailiff, an attachment in insolvency issued against the tenant: -Held, that the assignee was not entitled to the goods without paying or tendering rent, and that not having done so, the landlord was entitled to proceed and sell. Mason v. Hamilton, 22 C. P. 411, distinguished. Mc-Edwards v. McLean, 43 U. C. R. 454.

Rent.]—Upon the insolvency of the lessee, the assignee in insolvency sold the insolvent estate, including the goods upon the demised premises, on credit, without paying the rent due thereon:—Held, that the landlord was entitled to an order for immediate payment of the arrears. Remarks as to the personal liability of the assignee under such an order. In re McCraken, Dallas v. Stinson, 4 A. R.

The landlord is not a privileged creditor, but is only entitled to a Hen upon the pro-ceeds of the goods of the insolvent which he might have distrained. Ib. If the assignee sells the goods upon credit he must arrange with the landlord before the goods are removed, otherwise he becomes liable to an order for immediate payment. Ib.

If the creditors or inspectors order him to make such a sale, and do not provide him with the means of satisfying the landlord, he should apply to the Judge for directions.

Whenever the assignee remains in possession unreasonably long without realizing and paying the landlord, the latter may invoke the summary jurisdiction of the court. Ib.

Sheriff in Possession—Costs.]—When an assignment is made under the Insolvent Act of 1869, it is the duty of a sheriff, who has seized goods under a fi. fa. against the insolvent, to surrender the goods to the assignee, leaving the execution plaintiff to assert his privilege for costs, if any he has, in the proceedings in insolvency. Blakely v. Hall, 21 C. P. 138.

Taxes—Distrainable Effects. — Upon the insolvency of the lessees, there were goods upon the premises belonging to them, and other goods stored with them, sufficient to pay the taxes in arrear; and a warrant being issued, the bailliff notified the assignee, but forbore to distrain, on the assignee's promise to pay, which promise was confirmed by the inspectors of the estate. The goods having been afterwards removed, an order was made directing the assignee to pay the taxes forthwith, with all costs. In re Boxes, 5 A. R. 353.

Vendor's Lien.]—On the sale of a woollen factory and machinery, it was stipulated that, until the purchase money should be fully paid, the vendees were not to remove the machinery. The vendors afterwards executed a conveyance to the purchasers, and the latter, to secure the unpaid purchase money, executed a mortgage which purported to be of the factory only, and did not mention the machinery. The purchasers resold, the vendee subsequently became insolvent:—Held, that the covenant against removing the machinery remained in force and that the vendee's assignee in insolvency, was not at liberty to remove the machinery by reason of non-registration under the Chattel Mortgage Act or otherwise. Urantoford v. Findlay, 18 Gr. 51.

Wages—Dividend Sheet.]—A demand for wages was made as a preferred claim to an assignee. The creditors, at a meeting, passed a resolution authorizing the assignee to pay all claims for wages, but the assignee refused payment of this claim as made. At this time no dividend sheet had been prepared, A summons was subsequently issued by the county Judge, calling on the assignee to shew cause why he should not pay the claim, and the assignee not appearing evidence was taken before the Judge, and an order made for the payment forthwith, with costs, of a sum less than the original demand:—Held, that the direction by the creditors to pay these preferential claims without putting them on the dividend sheet, was illegal, In re Clephorn and Munn, 2 C. L. J. 133.

7. Partnership and Separate Estate.

Assignment Limited to Partnership Assets.]—The insolvents, who were partners, made an assignment expressed to be in puruance of the Insolvent Act, but attempted to limit its operation by inserting after the general description of property in the statutory form the words "of and belonging to the said co-partnership." Each of the partners had co-partnership, and separate creditors. The assignee, acting under advice, only took possession of the partnership estate. Shortly afterwards M., a brother of one of the in-Shortly solvents, offered to purchase the partnership estate, and upon sufficient in number and value of the joint creditors signing a deed of composition and discharge, the assignee transferred the estate to him, without any authority from the creditors, and without calling any meeting under s. 49, to take the deed into consideration. At a subsequent meeting of the joint creditors, resolutions were passed approving of the deed, of the sale to M., and of the action of the assignee. The dissentient joint creditors petitioned the county Judge to order the assignee to take possession of the separate estates, and to account for any loss occasioned by his omission to take possession of them, and for the value of the estate transferred to M. The learned Judge ordered the assignee to take possession of the separate estates, but did not deal with the other subjects of the petition. From this order the petitioners appealed:—Held, that the deed was void as to the appellants; and that it could not be supported under s. 38, being a sale en bloc within the meaning of the proviso prohibiting such a sale without the previous sanction of the creditors. Held, also, that the assignee was liable to account for any loss the dissentient joint creditors might sustain in consequence of such sale. The appellants were allowed their costs of appeal; and the assignee's costs, in view of all the facts, were allowed out of the estate. Re MeLaren and Chalmers, 1 A. R. 68.

Dissolution of Firm-Partners Claiming Inter Sc.]—Upon the dissolution of a partnership between W. and McC., it was agreed that all the partnership property and assets should be vested in W., who was to collect all the debts and pay the liabilities of the firm, and that an account should be taken of the co-partnership business to ascertain the respective shares or interest of the partners therein, or the amount payable by either to the other, W. to be charged with the value of the assets and to be credited with the liabilities, and all that remained to be done was to ascertain, by taking an account, indebtedness existing between them. then carried on business on his own behalf, and becoming insolvent, made an assignment to the plaintiff as assignee in insolvency. It was claimed that upon taking accounts be-tween McC. and W., a balance would be found due to W., for which he was entitled to rank upon McC.'s estate:—Held, that W.'s claim was an equitable debt, capable of being ascertained by the court, and for which therefore he was entitled to so rank on McC.'s estate. Hall v. Lannin, 30 C. P. 204.

Double Proof.]—The appellants, in the matter of C. & Co., insolvents, had a claim upon a note made by C. & Co., payable to C., one of the firm, and by him indorsed to the appellants. They proved against the firm on the 3rd July, 1869, but afterwards withdrew it, and proved on the 11th January, 1870, under s. 60 of the Act of 1869, specifying and putting a value on the separate liability of C .: - Held, that the appellants, under the Act of 1864, could not rank both upon the the Act of 1864, could not rank both upon the separate estate of C. and on the estate of the firm. but must elect; but that they might prove against the joint estate for their whole chim, without deducting from it the value of C's separate liability:—Held, also, that the appellants could trent the payee and indorser: as having incurred a separate liability by his indorsement, distinct from his joint liability as a maker :- Held, also, that the Act of 1869 could not apply, for the case was pending before it, and the question in dispute as to the right to prove was not a matter of procedure only, exempted from the exceptions in the repealing clause. In rc Chaffey, 30 U. C. R. 64.

Double Proof.] - The doctrine against double proof applies only when both estates are being administered in insolvency. A creditor who has proved in insolvency upon a promissory note made by an insolvent firm, can prove as a creditor in an administration suit against one of the parties deceased who has separately indorsed the note. Re Baker, 3 Ch. Ch. 499.

Double Proof.]-W. carried on business separately and as a member of the firm of W. & S. The joint and several notes of W. W. & S. The joint and several notes of W. & S. and W. were given to secure debts due by the firm, and shortly afterwards both W. & S. and W. made assignments in insolvency:-Held, that under s. 84 of the Insolvent Act of 1875, the holder of these notes was entitled to prove against the partnership was called to place against the partnership sestate for his claim, less the amount at which he valued the separate liability of W. and (the partnership not having assumed the liability) against W.'s estate for the full amount of the debt. The rule against double proof in such cases was abrogated by s. 60 of proof in such cases was abrogated by s. 60 of the Insolvent Act of 1899, which contained the same provisions as s. 84 of the Act of 1875. Re Dedge and Budd, 8 C. L. J. 51, commented on, and not followed. In re-Chaffey, 30 U. C. R. 64, distinguished. In re-Wilson, Carter v. Woodruff, 3 A. R. 151.

One Partner Continuing Business.]-Where, upon the dissolution of a firm, the business is continued by one of the partners, who assumes the liabilities, the joint assets who assumes the liabilities, the joint assets remaining in specie are primarily applicable to the payment of the joint creditors of the firm. Re Walker, 6 A. R. 169.

Held, that under s. 88 of the Insolvent Act of 1875, if the dividend is derived wholly out of joint estate, the joint creditors alone can share until fully paid; if wholly out of separate estate, it belongs entirely to separate creditors till they are paid, and if partly out of each class of assets, it should be divided pro rata between each class of debts. Ib.

Partnership After Composition.]—On the insolvency of C. & Coombe the requisite proportion of creditors granted C. his dis-charge, and sold him the insolvent estate at a certain price, for which he gave his promissory notes payable at intervals. Shortly afterwards he entered into partnership with one M., and a memorandum was executed by them, by which they agreed that this estate them, by which they agreed that this estate should form their stock-in-trade, and become their property equally, and they equally as-sumed the liability for the amount of the composition notes. While the greater part of these notes was still unpaid, they made an assignment in insolvency. From their assets sufficient was realized to pay their partnersufficient was realized to pay their partner-ship creditors in full, and leave a surplus. During the partnership of C. & M., M. had advanced $500 to the firm, and C. had drawn out of the business $88.26 in excess of his share. The creditors of C. claimed that the whole of the surplus should be applied toward the payment of the composition notes; but, held, that M. was first entitled to be paid the $588.26 with interest upon the $500, as that was a loan to the firm, but no interest upon the overdraft; and that C., and through him his creditors, had a right to insist upon the composition notes being paid before any of the residue of the surplus was divided between C. & M. Re Cleverdon, 4 A. R. 185.

Retiring Partner - Subsequent Insolvency of Continuing Partners.]—The creditors of a partnership consisting of three partners, consented to give them an extension on several conditions, one being that one of the partners should retire from the firm. When the dissolution took place a sum of $1,198 stood in the books of the partnership to the credit of the retiring partner, but nothing was said at the time in reference to this claim :- Held, that this claim was not provable against the estate of the continuing partners on their insolvency. In re White and Gibbon, 4 A. R. 416.

Separate Estate Solvent. |-Two partners, before the Insolvency Act, assigned their joint and separate estates together, for the benefit of their joint and separate creditors, pari passu. An assignee under the Act, afterpari passu. An appellant in insolvency must apply promptly.

Death of Appellant. |-When an insolvent, who has appealed from the decision of a county Judge refusing to set aside an attachcounty Judge rerusing to set aside an attachment against him, dies during the pendency of this appeal, and no personal representative has been appointed, the appeal fails. Laurie v. McMahon, 6 P. R. 9.

Decision of Assignee.]-A demand for wages was made as a preferred claim, to an assignee. The creditors at a meeting passed a resolution authorizing the assignee to pay all claims for wages, but the assignee refused payment of this claim as made. At this time no dividend sheet had been prepared. A summons was subsequently issued by the county Judge, calling on the assignee to shew cause why he should not pay the claim, and, the assignee not appearing, evidence was taken before the Judge, and an order made for the payment forthwith, with costs, of a sum less than the original demand. The assignees afterwards paid the claim as reduced, but refused to pay any costs; upon which the Judge's order was made a rule of court, and execution issued thereupon against the goods of the assignee. Held, that the county Judge had no power to adjudicate upon the claim until it had been decided upon by the assignee, and in this case there was no decision of the assignee to appeal from. In re Clephorn and Munn, 2 C. L. J. 133.

Delay.] — A writ of attachment issued against R. & Co. on an acceptance in the name of the firm given for a debt contracted before G, became a member thereof. A bill of exchange for this debt had been accepted in the firm's name after G. joined it, in con-sideration of which an extension of time was given, and it passed through the books, and was never repudiated by G. This acceptance matured after G, had retired from the firm. (which change, however, was not registered in compliance with R. S. O. 1877, c. 123,) and being unpaid, the acceptance upon which the writ of attachment issued was given. Seven weeks after the writ of attachment had been served upon him, G. moved to set it aside, accounting for his delay on the ground that the solicitor whom he had instructed to move had been called away by urgent business :-Held, without deciding whether such an application can be made after the five days prescribed by s. 18 of the Insolvent Act of 1875. that the appeal could not be entertained, for that the delay was not sufficiently accounted for. Discharge — Time—Material—Security.]
—The decision of a county court Judge on an application by an insolvent for his discharge from imprisonment, is appealable. Hood v. Dodds. 19 Gr. 639.

A petition of appeal from the decision of a county court Judge, acting in insolvency, need not set out all the evidence, documents and materials used before the Judge. What is needed is, that either the petition, or the notice accompanying it, should shew to the opposite party the objection which is taken to the proceedings appealed from, and the materials to the proceedings appealed from, and the materials to the proceedings appealed from, and the materials to An order of the argument of the appeal. Findings of Fact.]—The appellate court will, on appeals from the Judge's ruling in insolvency—as on appeals from other courts in cases where the evidence is contradictory, be governed in a great measure by the opinion of the Judge who has seen the witnesses give their testimony; yet where giving full credence to all the witnesses relied on by the Judge, the court differed in opinion from him as to the effect of that evidence, the court reversed the finding of the Judge. Re Weeks, 23 Gr. 252.

In proceedings before the county court Judge a claim was put in by the mother of the insolvent, which the creditors opposed the allowance of, on the ground that the mother was indebted to the son in a greater sum than her claim—such claim being distinctly proved by the claimant, her husband, and the insol-The Judge allowed the claim, from which allowance the inspectors of the estate appealed, and then sought to impeach the claim of the mother altogether as being fraudulent-the only objection suggested in opposition to the evidence stated being the fact that the money said to have been deposited in the bank by the claimant was in gold (sovereigns), which the court was asked to assume was so improbable and incredible as to be evidence of fraud. The court, however, on the ground that the Judge who saw the parties give their evidence had thought the proof of the bona fides of the debt sufficiently established and had allowed the claim, agreed in the conclusion at which the Judge had arrived, and dismissed the appeal with costs. Ib.

Leave.]—On an application to a Judge in chambers for the allowance of an appeal from the decision of the Judge in insolvency, an order was made referring the matter to the appellate court, without directing a special case to be settled between the parties, but no objection was made on this ground:—Held, that this was only an irregularity which might be waived, and if not vaived ought to have been objected to by a rule to set aside the proceedings on that ground, in accordance with in re Parr, 17 C. P. 621; and that as the petition of appeal had been filed by permission of the court, and the appellant authorized to serve notice of hearing of appeal for a day named, the case was properly before the court for adjudication. In re Sharpe, 20 C. P. 82.

No Formal Order.]—An insolvent had been refused an absolute discharge by a county Judge, from whose decision he appealed. The Judge gave his reasons in writing, and concluded, "I must refuse his discharge absolutely, and must deny the prayer." &c:—Held, an order which could be appealed from, no formal order having been drawn up and signed. In re Jones, 4 P. R. 317.

Non-production of Books. |- An insolvent was ordered by a county Judge to produce certain books and papers. These were at the time at Bruce Mines, and the insolvent did not feel called upon to go there for them, and an order was made ex parte for his com-mittal for disobedience of the order. The insolvent had, however, in the meantime, taken the books to Montreal and given them to one H. to hand to the assignee. He was then arrested, and subsequently applied for his discharge, which was refused. The books were afterwards handed over to the proper person, The books were though in a mutilated condition, which mutilation the insolvent said must have been done at Montreal. He then again applied for his discharge on the ground that he had complied with the order, and that the imprisonment was for compulsory purposes only. The county Judge, however, made an order refusing the application, and the insolvent then appealed from this last order to a Judge in chambers at Toronto. It was urged that the warrant of arrest was insufficient on its face: that no demand was made of the books, or refusal to give them shewn, and therefore no contempt, and that the power of imprisonment was only to enforce compilance with the order, and not in penanii—Held, under the Acts of 1864 and 1855 that the Judge at Toronto had no right to inquire into the legality or propriety of the warrant for arrest, or as to the nature or object of the imprisonment authorized by the statute, or whether the warrant was an order, and so an appealable matter under the Acts: that the last order of the county Judge was not improperly made, and the appeal was merely from that order. (b) Granting and Setting Aside Attachment.

Intention to Dispose of Property— Property Required.—The mere intention on the part of a debtor to dispose of his property, and the apprehension of his sole creditor that he will not then, although perfectly able, and owing no one else, pay the creditor, does not bring the debtor within s. 3, clause c., of the Act of 1864. Sharpe v. Matthews, 5 P. R. 10.

In intituling affidavits for an attachment under this Act, form F, should be followed. Ib. And if he can shew that the writ never should have been issued, he is entitled not only to have the attachment made under a writ set aside, but also the writ itself, in like manner as a creditor is entitled under s. 14. McDonald v. Clcland, 6 P. R. 289.

Right to Withdraw.]—A creditor issuing an attachment under the Act of 1864, cannot after five days from the return day of the writ withdraw the attachment, so as to prevent another creditor from intervening for the prosecution of the cause. Worthington v. Taylor, 10 L. J. 333.

Substitutional Service.] — A Judge in insolvency has power to rescind an order made by him for substitutional service of a writ of attachment; and in this case the court, on appeal, refused to interfere with an order for such rescission. Eaton v. Shannon, 17 C. P. 592.

Action Anthorized Against Wishes of Majority.]—The county Judge has a general jurisdiction in matters of insolvency, and may sanction a suit in the name of the assignee for the benefit of the estate, notwith-standing a majority, both in number and value, of the creditors pass a resolution forbidding further proceedings. In re Lambe, 13 Gr. 291.

In re Hicks, 5 P. R. 88.

Complaining of Sale — Forum.]—In case of a sale by an assignee in insolvency being open to objection on the part of the creditors, the remedy of objecting creditors is by an application to the county court Judge, not by suit in chancery in the first instance. O'Rictly v. Rose, 18 Gr. 33.

Disagreement Between Majority in Number and Majority in Value.]—A disagreement laving arisen between the majority in numer of the creditors, a motion to adjourn, under s. 11, s.s.; 2, of the Act of 18tf. was opposed by the latter; whereupon application was made to the county Judge to dispose of the matter, who ordered that the majority in number might proceed in chancery, in the assignce's name, against the majority in value:—Semble, that neither party could legally oppose the adjournment, if insisted upon by the other, as the objecting party might thus prevent the Judge from adjudicating between them, as intended by the Act; but that such adjournment should have followed as of course, and upon a similar division of opinion the Judge should have decided between the two sets of resolutions, and might then have directed the assignee to proceed in chancery, or otherwise contest the claim of those creditors whose deby was disputed. But held, that the Judge had power to make the order in question, and it was not, therefore, advisable to interfere with it. In re Lumb, 17 C. P. 173.

Foreclosure of Mortgage.]—Under the Act of 1863, the jurisdiction of the court of chancery to decree foreclosure upon a mortgage is not taken away, and a mortgage must still proceed in that court to obtain such relief against the official assignee of the mortgagor, there being no proper machinery in the insolvent court under which foreclosure can be obtained or for serving parties out of the jurisdiction, or for calling in parties to establish their claims upon the mortgaged premises. Henderson v. Kerr, 22 Gr. 91.

Funds Payable to Incumbraneers.]— Certain funds had come to the hand of an official assignee, but were payable to incumbraneers under claims arising before the insolvency; the Judge in insolvency under the Act of 1864, had ordered certain costs of the insolvent to be paid thereout. On appeal such order was reversed. Re Stewart, 3 Ch. Ch. 95.

Jurisdiction of Insolvent Court.]—The object of the Legislature in creating the insolvent court, is to administer the estates of insolvents, and the court of chancery will not, unless in a very exceptional case, interfere with the jurisdiction thus created. Therefore, where a bill was filled for the purpose of winding up the affairs of an insolvent insurance company, a demurrer for want of equity was allowed, although the bill prayed, amongst other things, for the appointment of a receiver to get in the assets and wind up the affairs of the company, McNeil v. Reliance Mutual Fire Ins. Co., 26 Gr. 567.

Jurisdiction of Insolvent Court.]—
In 1875, J. M. and D. M. entered into partnership, certain assets of J. M. being transferred to the partnership but nothing being said as to his liabilities. In 1876, the firm having become insolvent, B. was appointed assignee, The partnership creditors were paid in full, and a surplus remained. D. M. then petitioned the county Judge in insolvency to divide the said surplus between him and J. M. B. then commenced this suit against D. M. to have it declared that the said partnership deed was not binding upon him as such assignee, but that the partnership deed might be declared fraudulent and void, and that the court might take an account of the partnership property and make division, and for an injunction restraining D. M. from further proceeding with his petition:—Held, that the insolvent court had jurisdiction to deal with the matter, and this heing so, was the proper tribunal to do so, and this court would not interfere. Bell v. McDongell, 2 O. R. 618.

Partners in Different Counties—Juvisiletion.]—E., living at Brantford, and James and John G., living in Dundas, carried on business at Brantford under the name of E. & Co.; and James and John G. had also a separate business at Dundas, in which E. had no interest. On the 14th December, 1809, James and John G., as individuals, and as partners in the firm of James and John G., and as individual members of the firm of E. & Co., excetued an assignment under the Insolvent Act of 1809, in Mentworth, of their and each of their estates to one F., an official assignee in that county. On the following day E. made an assignment of his estate, under the Act, to an interim assignee in the county of Brant, and F. was afterwards appointed assignee by the creditors. K. & Co., excelliors of E. & Co., filed a claim in Brant under E.'s assignment, which other creditors objected to, and the assignee, having heard the parties, made his award:—Held, that the county Judge of Brant had jurisdiction to hear an appeal against such award, although James and John G., the co-partners of E., had not joined in his assignment; and a mandamus was ordered directing him to hear and determine such appeal. In re McKenzie, 31 U. C. R. I.

Petition—Procedure.]—The Insolvent Acts of 1804 and 1805, do not require the petition in appeal to be signed by the insolvent or his attorney. Notice must be served on the assignee of the day for presenting the petition to the court. The petition must be addressed to the court, not to the chief justice: but this irregularity may probably be corrected. The neglect by the assignee to file the papers on or before the day of presenting the petition is no reason for rejecting the appeal, though it may be for enlarging the bearing, and proceeding against the assignee for his neglect or contempt. Points not taken in the court below are not open to parties in appeal. Semble, that the more proper mode of raising such technical objections is to move a rule to set the proceedings aside, instead of urging the objections on the argument of the merits. In re Parr, 17 C. P. 621.

Place and Time of Meetings—Records.]—Under the Act of 1864, the county town of the county in which the assignment is filed is the place where the assignee should call all meetings. Not less than two weeks should intervene between the first publication of the notice and the day of meeting. The notice must be published in a newspaper at or nearest the place where the meeting is to be held. All papers and minutes of proceedings in insolvency should be forthwith filed and entered of record in the proper office. In reAlkins, 2 C. L. J. 25.

Privilege—Creditor.]—A person summoned as a witness cannot refuse to give evidence respecting his own dealings with the insolvents, by alleging that he is a creditor. In re Hamilton, 1 C. L. J. 52.

Sale Advertisements.]—Advertisements by assignees in insolvency for the sale of property of the insolvent should describe the property and state the title with the distinctness required in equity in the case of advertisements by trustees and other officials. O'Rielly v. Rose, 18 Gr. 33.

Sale of Book Debts.]—Under s. 67 of the Insolvent Act of 1875, all debts exceeding $100 must be soid separately, unless where there is a sale of the whole estate en bloc; and the purchaser of such a debt, otherwise than the section directs, cannot reover against the debtor. Fisken v. O'Neill, 6 A. R.

Sale—Jurisdiction of Insolvent Court.]—
The summary jurisdiction of the Insolvent Court under ss. 28, s.-s. b, and 125, of the Act of 1875, only applies to creditors who are entitled to prove on the estate, or to persons who have an interest in the assets of the estate. The insolvent court has no jurisdiction to entertain a petition by a purchaser, who is not a creditor, to recover from the assignce a deposit paid upon a purchase at auction of the insolvent's estate. It was objected that the sale of the insolvent's estate. It was objected that the sale of the insolvent's estate. It was objected that the sale of the insolvent's estate in the sale of the insolvent's conditions prescribed by either s, 75 (as amended) or s, 67 of the Insolvent Act of 1875;—Held, that such an interest is not "real estate" within the meaning of s, 75; that s, 67 did not apply to the sale of a single asset, such as a mortgage; and that the sale was within s, 38, under which the assignee had acted, and with which, under the circumstances set out in the report, he had sufficiently complied. Action to Set Aside Settlement — Parties.]—A bill was filed by assignees under the Act to set aside a settlement by the insolvent, on the marriage of his daughter, with a secret trust in his own favour. charged that the insolvent defendant was in the enjoyment of the property, and prayed costs against all defendants. A demurrer by the insolvent, on the ground that he was not a proper party, was allowed. Wilson v. Chisholm, 11 Gr. 471.

Constitutional Law. |-Held, that s. 50 of the Act of 1869 was not beyond the power of the Dominion Parliament, as being an in-terference with property and civil rights, but was within their exclusive authority over bankruptey and insolvency. Crombie v. Jackson, 34 U. C. R. 575.

Constitutional Law - Fraudulent Pur-Constitutional Law — Fraudulent Purchase out of Jurisdiction.]—P. et al., merchants carrying on business in England, brought an action for $8,000 on the common counts against J. S. et al., and in order to bring S. et al. within the purview of s. 136 of the Insolvent Act of 1875, by a special count alleged in their declaration that a purchase of goods was made by S. et al. from them on the 13th March, 1879, and another purchase on the 29th March of the same year; that when S, et al, made the said purchases they had probable cause for believing themselves to be unable to meet their engagements and concealed the fact from P. et al., thereby becoming their debtors with intent to de-fraud P. et al. J. S. (appellant) amongst other pleas pleaded that the contract out of which the alleged cause of action arose was made in England and not in Canada. To this plea P. et al. demurred. It was agreed the pleadings were to be treated as amended by alleging that the defendants were traders and British subjects resident and domiciled in Canada at the time of the purchase of the goods in question and had subsequently become insolvents under the Insolvent Act of 1875, and amendments thereto. Per Ritchie, C.J., and Fournier, J., —1. That s. 136 of the Insolvent Act of 1875 is intra vires the Parliament of Canada. 2. That the vires the Parliament of Canada. 2. That the charge of fraud in the present suit is merely a proceeding to enforce payment of a debt under a law relating to bankruptcy and insolvency over which subject matter the Parliament of Canada has power to legislate. 3. Although the fraudulent act charged was committed in another country beyond the territorial juris-diction of the courts in Canada, the defend-ant was not exempt for that reason from liability under the provisions of s. 136 of the Insolvent Act, 1875, and therefore the plea demurred to was bad and the appeal should be dismissed. Per Gwynne, J.:—The demurrer did not raise the question whether s, 136 of the Insolvent Act of 1875 is or is not ultra vires the Dominion Parliament, for whether it be or not, the plea demurred to is bad, inasmuch as it confesses the debt for which the action is brought, and that such was incurred under circumstances of fraud, and offers no matter whatever of avoidance or in bar of the action; therefore, if the appeal be entertained it must be dismissed. Per Strong, Henry and Taschereau, JJ.:— There being nothing either in the language or object of s. 136 of the Insolvent Act to warrant the implication that it was to have any effect out of Canada, it must be held not to extend to the purchase of goods in England by defendant, stated in the second count of the declaration. In this view, it is unnecessary to decide as to the constitutional validity of the enactment in question, and the appeal should be allowed. The court being equally divided, the appeal was dismissed without costs. Shields v. Peck. 8 S. C. R. 579; S. C., sub nom. Peck v. Shields, 6 A. R. 639; S. C., Declaration of Partnership in Action by Assignee of Firm.]—Upon a bill filed by the plaintiff, as assignee in insolvency of the firm of S. J. & Co., seeking to have defendant declared a member of the firm, and to vest his property in the plaintiff as such assignee, the Judge of the county court of Brant, sitting for the Chancellor, made a decree as asked. Objection to the jurisdic-tion of the court of chancery to entertain such a bill was taken for the first time in the reasons of appeal:—Held, that the court of chancery had jurisdiction under general order 538 to declare defendant a partner, as upon proof of the partnership the plaintiff could have asked to have the partnership accounts taken; but that it had no power to vest defendant's property in the plaintiff. Botham v. Keefer, 2 A. R. 595.

Plea of Insolvency — Discharge not Pleaded—Judgment after Certificate Grant-ed.]—T. J. W. sued F. B., and, on 9th June, 1873, F. B. assigned his property under the Insolvent Act of 1869. On 6th August, F. B. became party to a deed of composition. On the 17th October, F. B. pleaded puis darrein continuance, that since action commenced he duly assigned under the said Act, and that by deed of composition and discharge executed by his creditors he was discharged of all liaby insertion 19th November, 1873, the insolvent court confirmed the deed of composition and F. B.'s discharge, but F. B. neglected to plead this confirmation. Judgment was given in favour of T. J. W. on the 30th Jan-uary, 1874. On 30th May, 1876, an execution under the judgment was issued, and on the 28th June, 1876, a rule nisi to set aside proceedings was obtained and made absolute:

—Held, that F. B., having neglected to plead his discharge before judgment, as he might have done, was estopped from setting it up afterwards to defeat the execution. Wallace v. Bossom, 2 S. C. R. 488.

Interest.]-After payment by an insolvent's estate of 100 cents in the dollar the out of a surplus in the hands of the assignee:

—Held, that notwithstanding the provisions of s. 99 of the Insolvent Act, interest was payable on all debts originally bearing interest by contract or otherwise, but not where it was claimable by law as damages only:— Held, also, that the claim to such interest was properly brought before the court by petition filed by the inspectors, who, acting under a resolution of creditors, had requested the assignee to pay such interest. In re Mc-Dougall, 8 A. R. 309. See Stewart v. Gage, 13 O. R. 458.

Lease — Re-assignment.] → The plaintiff sued defendant for the use and occupation of a store from the 1st April to the 1st July, 1875. Defendant had made an assignment under the Act of 1869, on the 20th April, but the assignee only occupied the shop while removing the goods to another store which the defendant owned, when he returned the key to the defendant. On the 1st May a deed of composition and discharge was executed, which directed the assignee to deliver up and convey the estate to the insolvent upon its confirmation. The deed was confirmed on the 14th June, when defendant was allowed to continue on his own account the business which, since his assignment, he had nominally conducted on behalf of the assignee: but no written re-conveyance was ever made. It was proved, however, that people who wished to see the store applied to defendant and were shewn over it by his son; that the plaintiff's agent had recognized defendant as having possession by sending people who inquired about the shop to him as being the person who had it to dispose of: that the defendant had claimed the fixtures in the shop as part of the assets that reverted back to him in consequence of the deed of confirmation, and had tried to dispose of them to an incoming tenant. plaintiff resumed possession on the 1st July: Held, that the action for use and occupation would lie against defendant, withstanding the assignment, as the evidence shewed an occupation with the mutual recognition of the plaintiff as landlord and the defendant as tenant, and a sufficient transfer from the assignee to defendant. Blackburn v. Lawson, 2 A. R. 215.

Previous Unsuccessful Action by Creditor. |-To a bill filed by the assignee in insolvency of P. D., for the creditors other than D. & J. S., to impeach a sale of real estate to the defendant, the answer set that before the proceedings in insolvency a bill was filed by D. & J. S. as execution creditors, on behalf of themselves and all other creditors who should contribute to the expenses of the suit, for the purpose of avoiding the conveyance in question as a fraud upon creditors, and that the bill was dismissed upon the It was further alleged, that the case made by the two bills was substantially the same, and that the defendant believed the evidence in this suit would be similar in effect to that upon which the decree re-fusing relief was founded:—Held, that the that the decree was not a bar to this suit. Held, also, that the bill (set out in the report) sufficiently averred the delivery of the alleged deed, and that the defect, if any, was removed by the answer. Smith v. Doyle, 4 A. R. 471.

Undischarged Insolvent Indorsing Over Note. |—The defendants, in ignorance of one P, being an undischarged insolvent, made a promissory note to him, which P, indorsed for value to the plaintiff, who was fully aware of P.'s insolvency:—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to recover. Perkins v. Beckett, 29 C. P. 395.

VII. MISCELLANEOUS CASES.

Administration — Costs of Proving Claim.]—In case of a deficiency of assets, the costs of creditors in proving claims are to be added to the debts, and paid proportionately, and are not entitled to be paid in priority to the debts, In re Etna Insurance Company of Dublin, 17 Gr. 150.

Administration — Executions.]—In case of a debtor dying leaving insufficient to pay his debts, execution creditors whose writs are in the sheriff's hands do not lose their priority; nor does a creditor who has a sequestration in the hands of the sequestrators lose the advantage of it. Meyers v. Meyers, 19 Gr. 185.

Administration-Joint and Separate Estate.]—The rule in equity as well as in bankruptcy is, that the separate estate of a part-ner is to be applied first in discharge of his separate debts; and in applying this rule, money paid by co-partners on a liability created by the fraud of the partner towards them, is treated as a separate debt provable and payable pari passu with the other separate creditors of such partner in case of his death insolvent. The mere liability so fraudulently created cannot be proved against the separate created cannot be proved against the separate estate as a debt until the liability is paid, or until something equivalent to payment takes place. While the fraud was in the use of the partnership name on bills, the other partners becoming insolvent, the bolders of the bills proved them against the partnership extra the excimpe is a superscript. nership estate; the assignee in a suit for administering the separate estate of the guilty partner claimed to prove the amount against the separate estate; but the master restricted the proof to the expected dividend from the partnership estate and the separate estate of the surviving partners; and the court held that the assignee was not entitled to prove for a larger sum. Baker v. Dawbarn, 19 Gr. 113.

Administration — Paid Creditors Accounting to Unpaid Creditors.]—Where certain creditors of a deceased insolvent sued his executor, recovered judgment and sold his real estate, and got paid in full:—Held, that they were still bound to account, and that the other creditors of the insolvent were entitled to have the whole estate distributed pro rata under the Act 29 Vict. e. 28. Bank of British North America v. Mallory, 17 Gr. 102.

Administration — Wife's Mortgage.] — Where a wife joins in a mortgage, she is not entitled, on the death of her husband insolvent, to have the debt paid in full out of the assets to the prejudice of creditors. Baker v, Dawbarn, 19 Gr. 113.

Agreement to Arbitrate.]—By a contract between C. & Co. and the defendants, it was agreed that all matters in dispute connected with the contract should be settled by arbitration. C. & Co. became insolvent, and this suit was brought by their assignee in insolvency to recover the cost of the construction of the railway. Upon the application of defendants under s. 167 of the C. L. P. Act (C. S. U. C. c. 22), an order was granted staying all proceedings in this suit, it being held, that the circumstance that the contractor had become insolvent did not take the case out of the statute. Johnson v. Montreal & Ottava R. W. Co., 6 P. R. 230.

Constitutional Law.] — Held, that the statute 33 Vict. c. 40 (D.), which recites the insolvency of the Bank of Upper Canada, vests the property of the insolvent estate in the Crown as trustee for the creditors, and provides for its realization in order that the debts may be paid, is within the powers of the Dominion Parliament, under s.-s. 21 of s. 91 of the B. Crown.] — Priority of the Crown over other creditors to payment of moneys deposited in a bank that has become insolvent. See Regina v. Bank of Nova Scotia, 11 S. C. R. 1: Liquidators of the Maritime Bank v. Regina, 17 S. C. R. 657.

Dower. |—Under the Devolution of Estates Act, land of an intestate was sold by the administrator, with the approval of the official guardian, and, by consent of the widow, freed from her dower, upon the footing that she was to get out of the proceeds of the sale a sum in gross in lieu of dower. The estate was practically insolvent, and but little was left for the sustenance of the widow and children:—Held, that, notwithstanding the opposition of creditors, the widow should be allowed a gross sum. Re Rose, 17 P. R. 136.

Foreign Assets — Bankruptey.] — A bill was filed in this court for the purpose of administering an estate in the Province of Quebec, which had been assigned by an incenter debtor to trustee for the trustees. In the debtor should eat as manager for the trustees, and that all moneys received by him on account of the estate were to be deposited in a bank in Ontario to the credit of the trustees. A demurrer was filed on the ground of want of jurisdiction. The court overruled the demurrer with costs, giving to the defendants permission to answer, on their undertaking to afford the plaintiff facilities for going to a hearing at the then approaching sittings. Grant v. Eddy. 21 Gr. 45, 568.

Fraudulent Succession.] — Acceptation of an insolvent succession—when obtained by fraud. See Ayotte v. Boucher, 9 S.C. R. 460.

Insolvent.] — Remarks as to the meaning of the term "insolvent." Sutherland v. Nixon, 21 U. C. R. 629. See also Hersee v. White, 29 U. C. R. 232; Groves v. McArdle, 33 U. C. R. 252.

Insolvent.]—Construction of words "insolvent" and "bankrupt" in a by-law. See Temple v. Toronto Stock Exchange, S.O. R. 705.

Insolvent Insurance Company — Deposit.]—The deposit required to be made by foreign fire insurance companies is intended for the security of Canadian policy holders; and on the insolvency of any such company, the general creditors of the company are no entitled to share the deposit with the policy holders. In re-Eina Insurance Company of Dublin, 17 for, 190.

Insolvent Next Friend.]—A bill was field on behalf of a married woman by her next friend, who was procured by her solicitor so to net, but without her privity; the next friend being at the time insolvent, and no security for costs being given, and no written consent of the next friend being filled with the bill. On an application to take the bill off the files, it was ordered that unless the plaintiff's bill be amended by substituting a proper person as the next friend, the bill should be taken off the files, and costs were allowed to defendant. Waters v. Peters, 8 L. J. 328.

Insurance Company — Government Deposit.]—An insurance company had been licensed under 31 Vict. c. 48 (D.), to transact fire and inland marine insurance business, although its original charter authorized the transaction of fire and marine insurance, without distinction of ocean from inland marine. The holders of ocean marine policies, though resident in Canada, were held not entitled to rank as creditors on the fund deposited with and remaining in the hands of the government, in the event of the commany becoming insolvent. Mortgage.]—As to effect of extinguishment of mortgage after assignment in insolvency by mortgagor. See In re Music Hall Block, Dumble v. McIntosh, S. O. R. 225.

Partnership and Individual Creditors—Prevention of Preference.1—This court has jurisdiction, and it will exercise it, to prevent the creditor of one partner obtaining an undue preference over the creditors of the firm by means of proceedings in this court. When, therefore, a purchaser at sheriff's sale of the interest of one partner filed his bill for an account and receiver, and the receiver obtained possession of the stock in-trade, leave was granted to a creditor of the firm to take proceedings in insolvency, and the receiver was directed to hand over the assets to the assignee in insolvency when he should be appointed. Felan v. McGill, 3 Ch. Ch. 63.

Plaintiff's Insolvency.]—When a suit becomes defective by the insolvency of the plaintiff, subsequent proceedings are not wholly void, but on the fact being brought before the court such order will be made as may be just. McKenzie v. McDonell, 15 Gr. 442.

Where a suit was commenced in the name of a person who had previously assigned his interest to a creditor by way of security, and the plaintiff became insolvent before decree, but the cause proceeded to a hearing without any change of parties, and a decree for the plaintiff was pronounced, the court made an order at the instance of the defendant staying proceedings until all proper parties should be brought before the court. Ib.

Plaintiff's Insolvency.]—A motion by a defendant to dismiss after an abatement caused by the bankruptcy of a sole plaintiff and before revivor was refused; his proper course being to serve the assignee of the plaintiff in insolvency with notice to revive within a limited time. Cameron v. Eager, 6 P. R. 117.

Representative Action.]—A large body of creditors may be represented by one or more of the number, but the bill must disclose a sufficient reason for this course. Where a bill stated that the creditors of the said L. entitled to the benefit of the said indenture are too numerous to make it practicable to prosecute this suit if they were all made parties:—Held, that such statement was too general. Quare, whether necessary to furnish proof of such statement, and whether in a creditor's suit any decree can be made without previous proof of his debt. Michie v. Charles, I Gr. 125.

Trustee's Insolvency. |- The insolvency of a trustee, or his leaving the country in debt to reside in a foreign country, is a sufficient ground to remove him from the trust. Gray v. Hatch, 18 Gr. 72.

Agent-Excess of Authority.]-An agent of a bank, who was also a member of a business firm, procured accommodation drafts from a customer of the bank, which he dis-counted as such agent, and, without indorsing the drafts, used the proceeds, in violation of the gratts, used the proceeds, in violation of his instructions from the head office, in the business of his firm. The firm having become insolvent, executed an assignment in trust of all their property by which the trus-tee was to pay "all debts by the assignors or either of them due and owing" to the said bank as first preferred creditor, and to the bank as first preferred creditor and to the makers of the accommodation paper, among others, as second preferred creditors. The estate not proving sufficient to pay the bank in full, a dispute arose as to the accommodation drafts, the bank claiming the right to disavow the action of the agent in discounting them and appropriating the proceeds in breach of his duty as creating a debt due to it from of his duty as creating a debt due to it from his firm, the makers claiming that they were really debts due to the bank from the insol-vents:—Held, that the drafts were "debts due and owing" from the insolvents to the bank and within the first preference created by the deed. Merchant's Bank of Halifax v. Whidden, 19 S. C. R. 53.

Agent - Representation - Advantage to other than Principal.]—Where an agent does an act outside of the apparent scope of his authority, and makes a representation to the person with whom he acts to advance the private ends of himself or some one else other vate ends of himself or some one the than his principal, such representation cannot be called that of the principal. In such a case it is immaterial whether or not the person to whom the representation was made D-20 believed the agent had authority to make The local manager of a bank having received a draft to be accepted induced the drawer to accept by representing that certain goods of his own were held by the bank as security for the drafts. In an action on the draft against the acceptor:—Held, that the bank was not bound by such representation; that by taking the benefit of the acceptance it could not be said to adopt what the manager said in procuring it, which would burden it with responsibility instead of conferring a benefit; and that the knowledge of the manager with which the bank would be affected should be confined to knowledge of what was material to the transaction and the duty of the manager to make known to the bank. Richards v. Bank of Nova Scotia, 26 S. C. R. 381.

Agreement to Deliver Cheque.] - A bank manager is not acting without the scope of his authority in accepting the cheque of a customer to deliver to another customer on a particular day or on the happening of a specified event. Grieve v. Molsons Bank, 8 O. R. 162.

Committee of Shareholders.] - Held, that the defendant (sued jointly with others as a member of a committee) was not re-sponsible for the salary of a person employed by the committee (under a joint stock banking charter) prior to the time of his becoming a stockholder in the bank, and a member of the committee. Director-False Statements.]-The plaintiff sued defendant as director of a bank, alleging in substance that in a report made to the shareholders in 1866, and a statement accompanying it, the defendant falsely and fraudulently misrepresented the condition of the bank, over estimating the assets and under estimating the liabilities, thereby inducing de-fendant to believe it sound and to purchase stock:—Held, upon the evidence set out in the case, 1. That there was no evidence of fraud sufficient to maintain the action-that is, of false statements knowingly made by de-fendant with a fraudulent intent. The nature fendant with a fraudulent intent. The nature of the fraud required to sustain such a charge considered, and the authorities reviewed. 2. That the report was not a representation within C. S. U. C. c. 44, s. 10, so as to require it to be signed by defendant. 3. That if the statements were false and fraudulent, defendant would be liable, allthough they were made to the stockholders, for they were intended and used for public information. Parker v. McQuesten, 32 U. C. R. 273.

Directors - Loss Occasioned by Illegal Act.]—The directors and managers of incor-Act. — The directors and managers of incor-porated banks are quasi trustees for the gen-eral body of stockholders, and if any loss should accrue to the bank by their infringing the statute against usury, they would be liable individually to make it good. Drake v. Bank of Toronto, 9 Gr. 116.

Giving Guarantee.]—Liability of bank on guarantee of local agent. See Dobell v. Ontario Bank, 3 O. R. 299, 9 A. R. 484.

Indorsement of Note.] — Indorsement of note by bank manager—Sufficiency of. See Small v. Riddel, 31 C. P. 373.

Municipal Treasurer Acting Bank Agent. One S. was treasurer of the county of Middlesex and agent of the Gore Bank, having his office for both purposes in the same building. The council had no account with the bank, and did not direct S, where to keep his funds as treasurer, and he had always received enough to meet all disbursements for the county. He did, however, open an account with the bank, without the knowledge of the council, and having misapplied the moneys of the council, overdrew that account, without the knowledge or authority of the bank, nearly £8,000, to pay debts due by the county for interest on debentures and other claims, which he ought to have paid out of the moneys received by him as treasurer. The coupons on some of these debentures were stamped by S. as paid by the Gore Bank. S. having absconded, the bank sued the council for the amount thus overdrawn, as money paid to their use:

—Held, that no portion of it could be recovered. Gore Bank v. County of Middlesex, 16 ered. Gore B U. C. R. 595.

Municipal Treasurer Acting as Bank Agent.] — A treasurer of a municipality should not be permitted to act also as agent of a bank, Town of Ingersoll v. Chadwick, 19 U. C. R. 278.

President and Directors — Corporate Seal. —A bond may be given up to be cancelled by the president and directors of a banking corporation, without their assent being signified under the corporate seal. Bank of Upper Canada v. Widmer, 2 O. S. 222.

Sale.]—Sale of land by manager—Authority.—See Dominion Bank v. Knowlton, 25 Gr. 125.

Teller's Action for Shortage.]—Plaintiff was teller of a bank at which a note of defendant became due. Defendant paid in to plaintiff a sum afterwards discovered to be £25 short, and plaintiff was compelled to make it good to the bank:—Held, that he could recover it from defendant as money paid to his use. Rivers v. Roe, 4 C. P. 21.

II. BANK NOTES, CHEQUES, AND NEGOTIABLE INSTRUMENTS.

Accommodation Indorsements.]—Remarks as to the practice in this country of taking notes for discount, not from the last indorser, but from the maker, who brings them indorsed, thus suggesting not a business transaction, but accommodation indorsements, Bank of Montreal v. Reynolds, 25 U. C. R. 352.

Accommodation Note.] — Discount by bank of note made and indorsed for accommodation of D., their solicitor—Fraud and neglect of D.—Liability of bank. See Canadian Bank of Commerce v. Green, 45 U. C. R. Sl.

Alteration of Cheque—Negligence.]—
The plaintiff, a merchant and customer of defendant bank, having a note payable there on the 28th January, 1873, made a cheque payable to himself or bearer, and left it with defendants to meet the note. The cheque, however, was not used for that purpose nor returned to the plaintiff, but the note was paid by defendants and charged to the plaintiff's account. The cheque was afterwards, on the 31st January, 1874, presented to the defendants by some one unknown, the year having been changed from 1873 to 1874, and it was paid by defendants without noticing the alteration, and charged to the plaintiff's account. How it got out of defendant bank was not ascertained:—Held, that the alteration avoided the cheque; that defendants therefore were not warranted in paying it; and that the plaintiff was entitled to recover back the money. Quere, whether, if the cheque had not been void, the defendants, on the ground of negligence, would, on the facts more fully stated in the case, have been liable to the plaintiff for paying it. Per Wilson, J., the cheque must be considered to have been paid when the note for which it was given was handed over by defendants to plaintiff, and on that ground defendants could not have been made liable upon it. Beltz v. Molsons Bank, 40 U. C. R. 253.

Application of Proceeds.]—The plaintiffs drew upon J. a bill for £200, payable to their order, which he indorsed to the Gore Bank, by whom it was sent to the agent of defendants, the Bank of Upper Canada, for collection. When it fell due, J., with the agent's consent, drew upon the plaintiffs to meet it, but the preceeds of the draft, contrary to J.'s directions, were placed to his credit with defendants against other acceptances of his, and the plaintiffs paid both drafts:—Held, that they might recover the proceeds of the second bill from defendants as money had and received. Riddelt v. Bank of Upper Canada, 18 U. C. R. 139.

Bill of Lading given up on Acceptance of Draft.]—A bill of exchange was sent by a banking institution in the United States, to a bank in Toronto, for "collection and remittance," &c., accompanying which was a bill of lading for 10,000 bushels of wheat, which, on the bill of exchange being accepted by the drawces, was delivered over to them, they being the consignees named in such bill of lading:—Held, that it was not the duty of the bank here, as the agent of such foreign bank, in the absence of special instructions, to retain the bill of inding until the bill of exchange was paid. Wisconsin Marine and Fire Ins. Co. Bank v. Bank of British North America, 21 U. C. R. 284; 2 E. & A. 282. Evidence having been given as to the custom Evidence having been given as to the custom of merchants in such cases both in the United States and Canada:—Held, that the latter only could be material. S. C., 21 U. C. R. 984

Bill of Lading given up on Acceptance of Draft.]—A. having shipped grain to Oswego on behalf of one P., to the care of L. W. & Co., drew against it, and gave the draft and bill of lading to defendants, with the following indorsement on the latter, "Deliver to I. & J. Lewis, Oswego, subject to a draft drawn by me at 30 days from the 10th August, for S2,259,10." Signed, "per R. A. G., D. E. McL." The defendants discounted the draft, and upon acceptance thereof, handed over the bill of lading to the acceptors, who failed to pay the draft at maturity:—Held, that the defendants, under the circumstances, were not responsible for the loss. Goodenough v. City Bank, 10 C. P. 51.

Bill of Lading given up on Acceptance of Draft. |—C. shipped four to the same time drew account of L., and at the same time drew seed and delivered to the bank the lank, indexed and delivered to the bank the lank, indexed and delivered to the bank to the lank to the lank of the lank to sell the flour, applying the proceeds to pay the draft, and to place the property in charge of any respectable broker or warehouseman, without prejudice to the bank's claim upon any party to the draft:—Held, that the bank though bound to retain the flour until the bill was accepted, might then, if they chose, deliver the flour to L., the fair construction of the agreement being that the retaining of possession until payment was optional with the bank. Clark v. Bank of Montreal, 13 Gr. 211.

Cheques—Rights of Payer Indorsing for Collection.] — The Dominion Government having a deposit account of public moneys with the Bank of Prince Edward Island upon which they were entitled to draw at any time, the Deputy Minister of Finance drew an official cheque thereon for $30,000, which, together with a number of other cheques, he sent to the branch of the Bank of Montreal at Ottawa, at which branch bank the Government had also a deposit account. The said branch hank thereupon placed the amount of the cheque to the credit of the Dominion Government on the books of the bank, the manager thereof indorsing the same in blank and forwarding it to the head office of his bank at Montreal. The cheque was then sent forward by mail from the head office of the Bank of Montreal to the Bank of Prince Edward Island for collection, but was not paid by the latter bank, which, subsequently to the presentment of the cheque, suspended payment generally:—Held, (1). That the Bank of Montreal were mere agents for the collection of this cheque, and that, although the proceeds of the cheque, and that, although ment had also a deposit account. The said the proceeds of the cheque had been credited to the Government upon the books bank, it never was the intention of the bank to treat the cheque as having been discounted to treat the cheque as naving been discontinuous by them; consequently, as the bank did not acquire property in the cheque, and were never holders of it for value, they were entitled on the dishonour of the cheque to reverse the entry in their books and charge the amount thereof against the Government. Giles v. Perkins, 9 East 12; Ex parte Barkworth, 2 Det. & J. 194, referred to. (2) That the mode of presenting a cheque on a bank by transmitting it to the drawee by bank by transmitting it to the drawee by mall, is a legal and customary mode of pre-sentment. Heywood v. Pickering, L. R. 9 Q. B. 428: Prideaux v. Criddle, L. R. 4 Q. B. 455, referred to. (3) That although a collecting bank cannot enlarge the time for presentment by circulating a bill or cheque amongst its branches, yet, if it has been in-dersed to and transmitted through them for collection, the different branches or agencies are to be regarded as sevarate and independent were, as regards the drawer, only called upon to shew that there was no unreasonable delay in presentment and in giving notice of non-payment; and, no such delay having occurred, the Crown was not relieved from liability as drawer of the cheque. (5) In a letter from the manager of the Bank of Montreal, at Ottawa, to the Deputy Minister of Finance, which the defendants put in evidence as a notice to the Crown—the drawer—of the dishonour of the cheque by the drawes—the Bank of Prince Edward Island, the fact of non-payment was stated as follows: "I am now advised that it has not yet been covered by Bank of Prince Edward Island. In case of it being returned here again unpaid I deem it proper to notify you of the circumstances, as I will be required in that event to reverse the entry and return it to the Department." Held, that the words "not covered," as used in this letter, were equivalent to "not paid" or to "unpaid;" and, being so construed, the letter was a sufficient legal notice of dishonour. Bailey v. Porter, 14 M. & W. 44; Paul v. Joel, 27 E. J. Exch. 283, referred to. The Queen v. Bank of Montreal, 1 Ex. C. R. 154.

Clearing House.]—A customer having a deposit account with the plaintiff bank frew a cheque upon that bank payable to cash or bearer for five dollars and had it "marked" by the ledger-keeper. He then altered it so as to make it apparently a cheque for five hundred dollars, it being in such form as to enable this to be done readily, and then deposited it with the defendant bank, obtaining from them by his cheques upon them the sum the defendant bank is the defendant bank, obtaining from them by his cheques upon them the sum the defendant bank is the defendant bank of the defendant bank at once gave notice to the defendant bank and demanded payment of four hundred and ninety-five dollars:—Held, that the alteration of the cheque by the drawer after it had been "marked" was forgery; that the plaintiff bank was not responsible on the ground of negligence for the subsequent fraud of the drawer; that even if the adjustment of the bank was not responsible on the ground of negligence for the subsequent fraud of the drawer; that even if the adjustment of the bank of the cheque, the notice given on the following day before the defendant bank altered its position or lost any recourse against other parties was in time, and that therefore the plaintiff bank was entitled to recover. London and River Plate Bank v. Bank of Humdron v. Imperial Bank, 27 A. R. 500.

Company—Discount by President—Right to Debit Company's Account, j—Where the president of an incorporated company made a promissory note in the company's name without authority and discounted it with the company's bankers, the proceeds being credited to the company's acount, and paid out by cheques in the company's name to their creditors, whose claim should have been paid by him out of moneys which he had previously misappropriated, the bankers, who took in good faith, were held entitled to charge the amount of the note when it fell due, against the company's account, Bridgewater Cheese Factory Co. v. Murphy, 23 O. R. 327; 23 A. R. 66; 26 S. C. R. 443.

Debiting Note to One Account and Crediting it to Another.]—Defendants were the bankers of both the plaintiff and one E., and E. having given a note payable to the plaintiff at the defendants' bank, the plaintiff, about two weeks before its maturity left it with the defendants for collection, and to be protested if not paid. On 4th December, the day of its maturity, the ledger keeper debited E.'s account and credited the plaintiff's with the amount of the note, and on the plaintiff calling at the bank next morning he received his pass book with an entry crediting him with the amount of the note. Subsequently the manager, on the ground that the entry had been made by the clerk in mistake, and without authority-as E.'s account was then overdrawn—caused the entry to be reversed, and refused to pay the plaintiff the amount of it. E. stated that he always gave authority to pay each particular note, which he did not do here; and the manager stated that without such authority it was not custom of the bank to pay any note:-Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to recover the amount of the note from the bank; that by the general law the plaintiff, by making the note payable at defendants' bank, authorized them to pay it; and that the act of the ledgerthem to pay it; and that the act of several the keeper in charging it to E.s account and crediting it to the plaintiff in his account and pass-book, amounted to a payment of the note, and was irrevocable. Violitingule v. City and was irrevocable. Nighti Bank of Montreal, 26 C. P. 74.

Delay in Presentment. — The plaintiff having a bank account with defendants' agency at 8t. Catharines, deposited with them on Saturday morning, about 11.30, a cheque of C. on another bank in the same place, for $530, payable to the plaintiff or bearer, and not indorsed. The sum was credited in the plaintiff's pass book as cash, and the cheque stamped with a stamp used by defendants as "The property of the Quebec Bank, St. Catharines." On Monday morning it was presented for payment, and dishonoured; but it would have been paid if presented on Saturday before the bank closed, which was about one o'clock. Defendants having charged the amount of the cheque to the plaintiff, he sued them for money had and received and money lent:—Held, that he could not recover, for defendants were not guilty of laches; and semble, that they could have recovered back the amount from the plaintiff, even if they had paid it to him. Discens v. Quebec Bank, 30 C. C. R. 382.

Discount for Special Purpose.]—A. & H., a firm doing business in Hamilton, had a draft for $1,200, accepted by B. at Montreal for their accommodation, falling due on the 27th April. II., in order to obtain funds to meet it, on the 26th April procured a draft on B. for $600 to be discounted by the plaintiffs, telling them that it would be accepted, and the proceeds of it were placed to the general credit of the firm. This draft was sent to B for acceptance, and H. on the same day wrote for acceptance, and H. on the same day wrote to him enclosing the firm's cheque for $1,200 on the Bank of Montreal, to take up the $1,200 draft, and requesting him to accept that for $800. On the 27th B. duly paid the draft for $1,200. On the 28th A. and H. had a difference, and A. hearing from H. that the firm were in difficulties, and that he intended using their funds in paying B. and another person. A. thereupon on the 29th drew out on the cheque of the firm their balance in the the cheque of the firm their balance in the plaintiff bank, consisting of the proceeds of the draft for $600, of which A. knew nothing, and of other moneys, and handed it to their solicitor, for the benefit of the creditors generally, Between the 25th and 29th, both the debtor and creditor side of the firm's account had been dealt with, and the balance increased in their favour. H., on the 29th, on hearing what A. had done, wrote to B., that in consequence the cheque sent him could not be paid. and B. then refused to accept the draft. On the 2nd May the firm became insolvent, and an assignee was appointed, to whom the solicitor handed over the moneys deposited with him. The plaintiffs, however, claimed the amount of the $600 draft, contending that it was only discounted on the faith of its being accepted, and that as one of the partners had caused its non-acceptance by his letter to the drawee, there was a failure of consideration, and that they were therefore entitled to follow the money in the assignee's hand; but held that they were not so entitled; that the case was the ordinary one of the discount of a draft on the belief that it would be accepted; and that the money formed part of the firm's general assets and passed to the assignee. 'anadian Bank of Commerce v. Davidson, 25

Dishonour of Cheque—Charging Back—"Payable at par" at named Bank.]—The plaintiffs were the holders for value of a cheque drawn by the Mahon Bank on the Bank of Montreal, at London, on the face of which appeared the words "payable at Bank of Montreal, Toronto, at par." The cheque was deposited by the plaintiffs to their own credit with their bank at T., and in the usual course of business was sent by that bank to the Bank of Montreal at T., and by the latter bank was credited to the former. It was then forwarded to L., where it was dishonoured, and in due course was charged back by the Bank of Montreal to the plaintiffs' bank, and again by the latter to the plaintiffs' bank and again by the latter to the plaintiffs. It appeared that the above words were habitually used by the Mahon Bank on their cheques with the assent of the Bank of Montreal:—Held, that the whole effect of the words was, that the Bank of Montreal at T., would make no charge for cashing the cheque, and that they did not assume the risk of there being funds to meet it, and that they did not lose the right to charge it back on ascertaining there were no funds. Rose-Bellord Printing Co. v. Bank of Montreal, 12 O. R. 544.

Exchange of Cheques.]—A., a private banker, exchanged cheques with B. for mutual accommodation. A. used B.'s cheques. A cheque of A.'s had been dishonoured, and the holder called at A.'s office on the same day, and a clerk in the ordinary course of business gave the holder R.'s cheque to pay the dishonoured cheque. Next day A. stopped payment:—Held, that the holder could ecover against B. on his cheque:—Held, also, that under a plea of not the bodder. B. could not set up any supposed right in A.'s assignee, no could not possibly under any pleading on these facts. City Bank v. Smith, 20 C. P. 193.

Failure of Bank—Return of Bank Motes.]—A person receiving bank notes in payment of property, or in exchange for cash, or on deposit to the credit of the payer, has the right, in case of failure of the bank, to return the notes, if he does so within a proper time after receipt. In this case the plaintiff deposited $1,000 of the notes of the Mechanics' Bank, which he believed to be good, to his credit with defendants, at Stratford, on the 28th May, about 11 a.m. About 4 p.m. defendants' agent at Stratford became aware that the Mechanics Bank had stopped payment. On the following day he sent these bills to defendants at Montreal, where the Mechanics Bank had their headquarters, and on the 31st he charged the amount to the plaintiff, having informed him on the evening of the 30th that he would do so:—Held, that defendants should have tendered back the notes to the plaintiff on the 28th or 29th; that for the want of such tender they had made them their own; and the plaintiff was therefore entitled to recover. Quarre, whether, if the defendants had presented the notes for payment at the bank at Montreal on the 29th or 30th, and had given the plaintiff notice of dishonour on the 30th or 31st, it would have been sufficient, without tendering the notes back. Com v. Merchants Bank of Canada, 30 C. P. 380.

Forged Cheques — Acknowledgment of Monthly Balance — Fictitious Payee.] — The plaintiff's valuator, one II., filled in the blanks in an application for a loan on statements of one S., who forged the names of J. T. B. and I. B. as applicants, and although H. had never seen the property or the applicants, he certified a valuation to the plaintiffs, who accepted the loan, and signed his name as a witness of the signatures of the applicants. Cheques in payment thereof to the order of the supposed berrowers were obtained by S., who forged the names of the payees, indersed his own name, and received payment of the cheques which were drawn upon the defendants, through other banks, who presented them to the defendants and received payment in good faith. The fraud was not discovered for some time, during which the cleques were returned to the plaintiffs at the end of the month as paid, and the usual acknowledgment of the correctness of the account was duly signed:—Held, alliening 45 U. C. R. 214, that the plaintiffs were not estopped from recovering from the defendants by their agent's need the plaintiffs of the correctness of the account in the transactions as it did not occur in the transactions from the defendants by their agent's need the plaintiffs of the correctness of the account was duly signed:—Held, allow that the account is feelf, and was not the proximate cause from the defendants by their agent's needing from the defendants by their agent's nections from the defendants to the correctness of the account the cheques were made payable to fectitions payees, and were therefore payable to bearer. Agricultural Sexings and Loon Association v. Edered Bank, 6 A. R. 1922.

Forged Note.]—A forged paper purporting to be a bank note is a note, and equally so if there is no such bank as that named. Regina v. McDonald, 12 U. C. R. 543.

Forgery.]—Action to recover back amount paid by acceptor on a forged bill.—Denial of signature of drawer and indorser. See Ryan v. Bank of Montreal, 12 O. R. 39; 14 A. R. 553.

Indorsement by Manager.] — Indorsement of note by bank manager—Sufficiency of. See Small v. Riddel, 31 C. P. 373, 383.

Indorsement of Cheque — Course of Dealing, — A bank cashed a cheque payable to the order of a company upon the indorsation of the secretary alone, who had on several previous occasions cashed other cheques in the same way, and acted as general agent of the company :—Held, in an action by the company against the bank to recover the amount of the cheque, that the bank was justified in cashing the cheque, although the by-laws of the company required that the cheque should be countersigned by the president. Thorold Manufacturing Co, v. Imperial Bank, 13 O, R. 330.

Letter of Credit—Forgery of Payee's Name.1—The Bank of British North America in England received money there to be transmitted to A. in Upper Canada, and sent a letter of credit by post to A. to receive the money at a branch of the bank in Toronto. The letter was taken out of the post office in Canada, (A. having in the mentime died) and A.'s name forged on the letter of credit, and the money received by some person unknown:—Held, that A.'s executrix was entitled to recover the money from the branch at Toronto, as money had and received to A.'s use. Gissing v. Hopper, 6 O. S. 505.

Letter of Credit.—Negotiable Instrument.].—A bank cannot deal in such securities as a "letter of credit" signed by an executive councillor without the authority of an order in council, which is dependent upon the vote of the legislature, and therefore not a negotiable instrument within the Bills of Exchange Act, 1830, or the Bank Act, R. S. C. c. 120, ss. 45 and 60. Jacques-Cartier Bank v. The Queen, 25 S. C. R. 84.

Lien on Assets — Priority of Note Holders, — Under s. 79 of the Bank Act, R. S. C. c. 120, the note holders have the first lien on the assets of an insolvent bank in priority to the Crown. Liquidators of the Maritime Bank v. Receiver-General of New Brunswick, 20 S. C. R. 695.

Lost Cheque.]—Where the plaintiff's agent had paid into an agency of the Gore Bank at Simcoe a sum of money, partly in cash and partly by cheque on the Commercial Bank at Toronto, to be placed to the credit of the plaintiff with the Gore Bank at Hamilton, and the agent at Simcoe took upon the whole sum the usual commission of a quarter percent, for transmission, but the cheque was lost in being sent from Hamilton to Toronto, and was never paid by the Commercial Bank or credited to the plaintiff.—Held, that the plaintiff could not maintain an action against the Gore Bank for the amount of the cheque as money had and received to his use. Todd v. Gore Bank, I U. C. R. 40.

Marking Cheque—Liability of Drawer.]
—The payees of a cheque took it to the bank on which it was drawn on the afternoon of the day on which they received it from the drawer and got it marked "good," the amount being charged to the drawer's account. They then took it mays without demanding payment. The bank, on the evening of the same day, suspended payment, and on the following day, on presentation of the cheque payment was refused:—Held, that the drawer of the cheque was discharged from all liability thereon. Bopd v. Nasmith. 17 O. R. 40.

Non-presentment of Note.]—Held, under the evidence in this case, that the bank were liable to the plaintiffs for want of presentment of a note indorsed to them by the plaintiffs for collection, notwithstanding a notice issued by them, which the plaintiffs had collection should be wholly at the risk of the persons leaving them, and that they (the defendants) would be responsible only for moneys actually received in payment of such notes, but not for any omissions, informalities, or mistakes, in respect of such notes. Browner, Commercial Bank, 10 U. C. R. 129.

Notice of Dishonour.]—Negligence in not giving notice to indorser. See Steinhoff v. Merchants Bank, 46 U. C. R. 25.

Partner Indorsing.]—Power of partner to indorse his partners' names on cheques. See Manitoba Mortgage Co. v. Bank of Montreal, 17 S. C. R. 692.

Partnership—Fraud Against Partner,]—E. was a member of the firm of S. C. & Co., and inso a member of the firm of E. & Co., and in order to raise money for the use of E. & Co., and in order to raise money for the use of E. & Co. had it in the signed with the name of the other firm, and indersing it in the name of E. & Co. had it indersing it in the name of E. & Co. had it discounted the note knew the hand which discounted the note knew the name with the same that it is sufficient to the control of E. with whom the bank had had frequent dealings. In an action against the makers of the note C. pleaded that it was made by E. in fraud of his partners, and the jury found that S. C. & Co. had not authorized the making of the note, but did not answer questions submitted as to the knowledge of the bank of want of authority:—Held, that the note was made by E. in fraud of his partners and that the bank had sufficient knowledge that he was using his partners' names for his own purposes to put them on inquiry as to authority. Not having made such inquiry the bank could not recover against C. Creighton v. Halifag Banking Co., 18 S. C. R. 140.

Post-dated Cheque—Dishonour, I—A cheque here may be post-dated, though in England it is prohibited by the Stamp Acts. Where such cheque is payable on demand, no days of grace are allowed. Where, on the same day that the cheune was dishonoured, defendant paid £150 to the holder on account of it:—Semble, sufficient to excuse notice of non-payment, though he declared that he was then ignorant of such dishonour:—Held, under the evidence, that the pleas setting up want of consideration, and denying plaintiff's property in the cheque, were not proved. Wood v. Stephenson, 16 U. C. R. 419.

Presentment of Cheque.]—On the 26th June, P. and M. exchanged cheques for the accommodation of P., the cheque of P. being drawn on a bank in Hamilton, and the cheque of M. being drawn on private benkers in Toronto. It was agreed that the former cheque should not be presented before the 1st July and it was alleged by P. but denied by M. that a similar restriction applied to the latter cheque. The private bankers suspended payment and closed their doors about noon on the 27th June, having a large balance in their hands at the credit of M., who, on that day, served a writ on them in an action to recover this balance. (the amount of the cheque being included). His cheque was never presented for payment nor was any notice of dishonour given. The cheque of P. was presented and paid:—Held, that even assuming there was no agreement to postpone presentment, P. had the whole of the 27th June to present M.'s cheque, and therefore had not been guilty of laches up to the time of the suspension would not in itself excuse non-presentment and want of notice of dishonour before action, yet this event and the bringing of the action by M., which operated as a countermand of payment, would do so. Blackley v. McCabe, 16 A. R. 295.

Principal and Agent—Bills of Exchange —Payment—Set-off.]—Bankers are subject to the principles of law governing ordinary agents, and, therefore, bankers to whom as agents a bill of exchange is forwarded for collection, can receive payment in money only, and cannot bind the principals by setting off the amount of the bill of exchange against a balance due by them to the acceptor. Bonogh v, Gillespie, 21 A. R. 292.

Protest Improper — Damages.] — The declaration alleged that L. & Co. drew a bill of exchange for $69.72 on the plaintiff, parable to the order of themselves at defendant bank, and indorsed it to the defendants and that it was duly presented by the defendants to plaintiff, and was duly accepted by the plaintiff, and was duly accepted by the plaintiff, and was duly accepted, negligently and without reasonable or probable cause afterwards caused the said bill to be protested for non-acceptance by the plaintiff, whereby the plaintiff was injured in his credit and business with the drawers and others; and his business was thereby impeded, &c.:—Held, on demurrer, that no cause of action was shewn, for there was no negligence shewn between plaintiff and defendants nor any privity on which a duty or contract might arise; and that the action, if maintainable at all, must be for a false representation knowingly made, which had injured the plaintiff in his business, and the declaration in this view was insufficient. Irvine v. Canadian Bank of Commerce, 23 C. P. 599.

Refusal to Pay Cheque — Ledger Balance Incorrect.]—If a bank refuse to pay a cheque having sufficient funds of the drawer for the purpose, the holder can compel payment in equity. But the fact of there being sufficient at the drawer's credit in the bank ledger when the cheque was presented, is immaterial, if the ledger did not shew the true state of the account. Gore Bank v. Royal Canadian Bank, 13 Gr. 423.

The Royal Canadian Bank held a draft pay-

The Royal Canadian Bank held a draft payable in Buffalo, and accepted by a firm there, and for which they held in security certain flour. On the day before the draft matured, it being suggested by the drawer that the flour had not been sold, the bank agreed to discount a renewal draft on the same parties and on the same security, and passed the proceeds of the renewal to the credit of the drawer, but neglected to charge him with the original draft. Before the letter from the bank to their Bufalo correspondents respecting the transaction reached Buffalo, the flour was sold and the original draft paid by the drawers, and they therefore did not accept the renewal.—Held, from the bank the proceeds of renewal; and that the holder of the cheque

Unaccepted Cheque — Action Against Bank! — The holder of a cheapue by the mere fact of its being drawn in his favour, nequires no right of action in equity, as upon an equitable assignment, against the person upon whom it is drawn. Calducell v. Merchants Benk of Canada, 26 C. P. 294.

To an action by plaintiff against defendants

To an action by plaintiff against defendants for their refusal to pay a cheque drawn by plaintiff and one W. on them, defendants bleaded, on equitable grounds, that before the drawing or presentment of the cheque in question the plaintiff and W. had drawn and devivered to various persons certain other cheques, mounting in all to the whole of their funds in defendants' hands, which were presented before this cheque; that neither at the time of the drawing or presentment of the first-drawn cheques on the cheque in question, had defendants more than sufficient funds in their hands to pay the first-drawn cheques as the plaintiff and W. well knew; and that afterwards, and before the commencement of this action, defendants paid the holders of the first-drawn cheques the amounts thereof, and thereby paid and disbursed all the plaintiff's and W.'s moneys in their hands, and afterwards settled with the plaintiff and W. their banking account in full:—Held, plea bad, for the previous presentment and dishonour of the first-drawn cheques the creating any lien on the funds, and it being admitted that at the time of the presentment of the cheque in question there were sufficient funds to meet it, such funds were applicable to its payment; and, moreover, it was quite consistent with the plean that at the time of the presentment of the first-drawn cheques defendants had no funds to meet them, and that after their dishonour they were placed in funds, when the cheque in question was presented and dishonoured, and that the first-drawn cheques were then presented a second time and honoured. Ib.

Unpaid Acceptances—Implied Right to Charge Indexer's Account.) — The plaintiff opened an account with defendants, as bankers, by getting them to discount for him two acceptances for $500 each, payable to and indexed her him, and to place the proceeds to his credit. He afterwards paid in a further sum, and had drawn out by cheques all except $400, when the two hills were returned dishonoured:—Held, that defendants were entitled to apply the tabance in hand in part payment of the continues of the

III. COLLATERAL SECURITY.

1. In General.

Bank Stock.] — The Exchange Bank in advancing money to F. on the security of Merchants Bank shares caused the shares to be assigned to their managing director, and an entry to be made in their books that the managing director held the shares in question on behalf of the bank as security for the loan. The bank subsequently credited F, with the dividends accruing thereon. After this the managing director pledged these shares to another bank for his own personal debt and absconded:—Held, that upon repayment by F, of the loan made to him the Exchange Bank was bound to return the shares or pay their value. The problibition to advance upon security of shares of another bank contained in the amendment to the general Banking Act applies to the bank and not to the borrower. Assuming that the subsequent amendment of such security by any bank, the amendment of such security by any bank, the amendment did not alter the charter of the Exchange Bank, 35 Vict. c. 51 (D.), under which the Exchange Bank had power to take the shares in question in its corporate name as collateral security. To take such security may have become an offence against the banking law, punishable from the beginning as a misdemeanour and subject to a pecuniary penalty, but it was not ultra vires. Article 14 C. C., which declares that prohibitive laws import nutility, has no application to such a case. Exchange Bank

Contemporaneous Advance — Renewal Notes—Goods not in Specie, 1—T., a miller, of Notes-Goods not in Specie.]-T., gave warehouse receipts for wheat plaintiffs, attached to notes made by him, pay-able to their order, to take up his overdue notes which were secured by like receipts. The receipts were in the following form; "Received in store in my warehouse or mill from farmers, 2,000 bushels of wheat, to be delivered to the order of myself, to be indorsed hereon. This is to be regarded as a receipt under the provisions of statute 43 Vict. c. 22. The said wheat is separate from and will be kept separate and distinguishable from other The receipts were indersed in blank. T. did not keep the wheat covered by the re-ceipts distinct, but ground some of it into flour and allowed the remainder to be mixed with wheat subsequently brought in by farmers and others. Before assigning in trust for creditors, he pointed out to the plaintiffs one carload of flour made from the wheat covered by the receipts, and admitted that the wheat and flour in his mill were covered by the re-ceipts, and the next day the bank took posses-sion. The evidence shewed that there was ers and others. Before assigning in trust for about the same quantity of wheat and flour in and about the mill at the date of the last receipt as there was in dispute in this in-terpleader. T. subsequently assigned, and the inst feeelp as the even was a signed, and the defendants afterwards recovered a judgment against him. In an interpleader action to try the right of the bank under their warehouse receipts as against the defendants under the same of th their execution:—Held, that a special indorse-ment of the receipts to the plaintiffs was not essential, and that the indorsement in blank of the receipts satisfied all the requirements of the Banking Act, that Act not specifying any particular mode in which the property in the receipt is to be transferred, and that the the receipt is to be transferred, and that the notes and receipts attached might be read together:—Held, also, that the mode of acquiring the receipts, viz., by delivering up the overdue notes with receipts, was unobjectionable, the transaction being in fact a negotiation of the notes by the surrender of the antecedent lieu upon the wheat of T.; or at any rate there was a mere substitution or continuation of securities according to the original understanding of the parties:—Held, also, that T., having undertaken to keep "the grain separate and distinguishable from other grain," and having failed to do so, it became his duty to enable the failed to do so, it became his duty to enable the plant its equivalent, and having done this while able to dispose of his property, the warehouse receipts attached upon the property so indicated by him, and the plaintiffs were entitled to succeed against the execution creditors. Bank of Hamilton v. John T. Noye Manufacturing Co., 9 O. R. 631.

Contemporaneous Advance — Renewal of Notes.]—The simple renewal of notes by a bank is not a "negotiation" within the meaning of s. 55, s.-s. 4, of the Bank Act, R. S. C. c. 120, so as to validate a warehouse receipt taken as collateral security therefor, no such new advance being made, and no such valuable consideration being given or surrendered contemporaneously by the bank as would represent the inception of a new transaction, and no change being wrought in the condition of the parties except the mere giving of time, Dominion Bank v. Oliver, 17 O. R. 402.

Contemporaneous Advance — Renewal —Substitution of Securities. —A renewal of a note is not a negotiation of it within the meaning of s. 75 of the Bank Act, 53 Vict. 23 (1.0.), so as to support a security taken at the time of the renewal in substitution for a previously existing security. Contemporaneous Advance—"Invalid Against Creditors"—Warchous Receipts—Exchange of Securities.]—The plaintiff, a creditor of an insolvent, alleged that in regard to certain pledges made by the latter to a bank, there had been no contemporaneous advances, and that the pledges were invalid under s. 75 of the Bank Act, 53 Vict. c. 31 (D.), and claimed to be entitled to obtain moneys received through disposal of the pledges and to apply them in payment of creditors' claims, by virtue of the provisions of s. of 5 Vict. c. 31 (D.)—Held, that the world invalid against creditors, and not as extending to transactions invalid against creditors, and not as extending to transactions declared invalid for reasons other than those designed to protect creditors—Held, also, that the last named Act did not apply, because the money had been received by the bank before it was passed, and it was not retrospective—The insolvent had been in the habit of buying hops from time to time, and giving the bank his own warehouse receipts or direct pledges for the purpose of raising money to pay for them. Then, at the request of the bank, he constituted his bookkeeper his warehouseman, and that he bookkeeper his warehouseman, and that he substitution for the securities or secupits theretofore held, there being no further advance made when the new securities were given:—Held, that this exchange of securities should be treated as authorized under s.-s. 2 of s. 75 of the Bank Act.—The plaintiff asked for a declaration that advances made by the bank upon a mortgage by the insolvent to a third person, and by him assigned to the bank, were contrary to the Bank Act, and that the property was free from the mortgage:—Held, that no such declaration should be made in the absence of the mortgage, who was liable to the bank as indoser of a promissory note of the insolvent, collateral to the mortgage. Conn v. Smith, 28 O. R. 629.

Discount of Promissory Notes-Accessory Securities.]—A tradesman sold goods to customers, taking promissory notes for the price and also hire receipts by which the property remained in him till full payment was The notes were discounted through the medium of a third person by the plaintiffs, who were made aware, when the line of dis count was opened, of the course of dealing, and of the securities held. They were not, how-ever, put in actual possession of the securities, and there was no express contract in regard to them. In an action to recover the securities, or their proceeds, from the assignee for credi-tors of the tradesman:—Held, that the securities were accessory to the debt; that in equity the transfer of the notes was a transfer of the securities; that the defendant was in no higher position than his assignor, and could not resist the claim to have the receipts accompany the notes; and that it was not material that the relation of assignor and assignee did not immediately exist between the tradesman and the plaintiffs. Central Bank v. Gardand, 20 O. R. 142; 18 A. R. 438.

Insolvency-Preference.]-In May, 1874. A., a manufacturer, opened an account with a bank, representing himself as being in good circumstances with a capital of $20,000 over all his liabilities, which was believed by C., the bank agent, who thought him doing a flourishing business, and A. then promised to keep C. well supplied with collaterals for any ommodation afforded him. In December, 1875, A, applied to C, for assistance, and proposed that he should warehouse his goods as manufactured, and pledge the receipts of the warehouseman to the bank for advances to be made to him; which proposal was acceded to by C. Advances were accordingly made, for which receipts were deposited with C. on the 19th January, 25th January, 1st February, and 7th February. On the 26th February, A., in 7th February. compliance with a demand by one of his creditors, executed an assignment in insolvency. On a bill filed to impeach these transactions as an unjust preference, the court being satisfied that they all took place in good faith, and not in the contemplation of insolvency: Held, that the bank were entitled to hold their lien on such of the receipts as were so de-posited more than thirty days before the assignment in insolvency; but in respect of such of them as were deposited within the thirty days the bank could not claim any lien of priority :- Held, also, that the same rule was applicable to promissory notes deposited with the bank as collateral security. Suter v. Merchants Bank, 24 Gr. 365.

The promise, however, to keep C. well supplied with collaterals was of too vague and general a character to entitle the bank to retain any lien. But where advances were to be made on goods manufactured remaining he made on goods manufactured remaining unsold (without specifying any quantity), and C was to judge of the amount of the advance to be made:—Held, that this agreement was not so vague or uncertain as to prevent not so vague or uncertain as to prevent the bank obtaining security for advances. Ib. The Dominion Act, 34 Vict. c. 5, s. 47, en-ables a party making advances to a manufacturer to stipulate for obtaining a lien on warehouse receipts to be subsequently granted to the manufacturer. Ib.

Pledge Right of Curator to Impugn.]—
L. berrowed a sum of money from a savings bank which he agreed to repay with interest, transferring in pledge as collateral security letters of credit on the government of Quebec. having become insolvent the bank filed its claim for the amount of the loan, with interest, with the curator of the estate, and on apest, with the curator of the estate, and on ap-peal the applicants, as creditors of L., con-tested on the ground that the said securities were not of the class mentioned in the Act relating to savings banks, R. S. C. c. 122, s. 20, and the bank's act in making said loan was ultra vires and illegal:—Held, that L., having reselved good and valid consideration for his promise to repay the loan, could not, for ms promise to repay the loan, could not, nor could the applicants, his creditors, who had no other rights than the debtor himself had impugn the contract of loan, or be admitted to assail the pledge of the securities. Assuming that the act of the bank in cooling the noney on the pledge of such securities, was altra vires, although this might affect the pledge as regards third parties interested in the securities, it was not, of itself and ipso for a place of such the securities. Assuming that the act of the bank in lending facto, a radical nullity of public order of such a character as to disentitle the bank under a character is to dissentific the bank under Articles 1989 and 1990 C. C. from claiming back the money with interest. Bank of Toronto v. Perkins, S. S. C. R. 903, distinguished. Rol-land v. Caisee d'Economie Notre Dame de Quebec, 24 S. C. R. 405.

Timber Limits-Sale at Undervalue.]-Timber Limits—Sale at Undervalue.]—
The plaintiff, being indebted to the defendants as indorser in the sum of about $7,000, and being pressed for payment, which he was unable to make, transferred to the defendants certain timber limits, which he stated had cost him $25,000, to hold as security for his indebtedness, and for the purpose of enabling them to sell it and realize their debt. The regulations of the Crown Lands Department, however, forhadd the recognition of any conhowever, forbade the recognition of any conditional transfer, and therefore the assignment was in terms absolute. The defendants, with-out adopting any means of ascertaining the probable value of the limits, offered them for sale by public auction, with the assent of the plaintiff, when, no sufficient offer having been made, they were withdrawn, and, without having made any further inquiry as to value, they were sold by private sale, without consulting the plaintiff, for $6,000. The limits were subsequently sold by the purchaser for a large sum. Previous to the attempted sale by auction the defendants had received several auction the defendants had received several offers of sums more than sufficient to pay off their claim. In an action brought by the plaintiff against the defendants for selling at a grossly inadequate price, judgment was given in favour of the plaintiff, with $19,-654.38 damages. Prentice v. Timber Limits—Lien—Invalid Mortgage Subsequent Valid Mortgage, 1—Section 28 Subsequent of the revised regulations respecting the sale and management of timber on Crown lands in Quebec, provides that "limit holders, in order to enable them to obtain advances necessary for their operations, shall have a right to for their operations, shall have a right to pledge their limits as security without a bonus becoming payable," and it further provides that "if the party giving such pledge shall fail to perform his obligations towards his creditors, the latter * may obtain the next renewal in his or their own name subject to payment of the bonus, the transfer being then deemed complete." In 1875 and 1876 one F., who was now represented by the plaintiffs, procured for the purposes of his business operations as a lumberman, certain pecuniary advances from the defendants, the National Bank, through B., their local manager, and to secure repayment gave to the defendants certain promissory notes and valuable securities, and as collateral security also gave a written pledge, dated 21st September, 1876, of certain timber limits in Quebec, which pledge purported on its face to be "for advances made and to be made" to him. In 1877, with the consent of B., F. cancelled this supposed pledge, and gave what purported to be a new pledge of the licenses to the National Bank, which simply stated that he thereby pledged all his rights, titles, and interests in the licenses to the defendants, and which new pledge was indorsed on subsequent renewals of the licenses. The defendant did not at tain promissory notes and valuable securities, of the licenses. The defendants did not at any time bind themselves to make any further advances to F., but as a matter of fact in 1877, 1878, and 1879, F. continued to receive advances from the defendants. In 1882, F. being still indebted to them in a large sum, and the pledge of the timber limits still in and the pienge of the timeer minds stin force, the defendants, pursuant to the above section of the regulations, obtained an issue of the licenses directly to themselves. The plaintiffs now brought this action for discovery of the securities held by the defendants on account of F.'s indebtedness, and for redemption, and for a declaration that the de-fendants had no lien on the timber limits in question :- Held, that as to the advances made before the pledge was given the security was valid, but that as to the future advances, the valid, but that as to the future advances, the pledge of the timber limits was invalid as being in contravention of 34 Vict. c. 5, s. 40 (1).:—Held, however, that inasmuch as the defendants, although they had obtained the issue of the licenses directly to themselves, and thus procured a complete title to the property, under the above section of the regula-tions, nevertheless voluntarily restricted their claim to a lieu upon it for the whole amount of F.'s indebtedness, they were entitled to judgment declaring such lieu, and that on payof such indebtedness the defendants should convey the property to the plaintiffs: should convey the property to the plaintiffs:— Held, further, that it was open to the plain-tiffs in this action to object to the transaction as centravening the Bank Act, and it was not necessary for the purpose of such objec-tion that the proceedings should be by the Crown. Grant v. Banque National, 9 O. R.

Semble, that if a mortgage upon lands be given to a bank as security for future advances in contravention of the Bank Act, and after the debt had been contracted or advances made, another mortgage be executed upon the same property as additional security for the debt so contracted or advances made, the second mortgage will be valid. 2. Bills of Lading.

Equitable Title — Agreement made in Province of Ontario.]—A bank in this Province, under an agreement with a customer, choniciled here, advanced money to him to enable him to buy cattle in this Province, which, under the agreement, when purchased were to be forwarded by rail by him to Montreal, and to be shipped by steamship thence to Liverpoot, the bank having no control over the cattle until they reached the vessel, when they were to be received by the steamship for the bank, and the customer's possession and control over them was to end; bills of lading therefor in favour of the bank being then signed. The cattle were purchased and sent to Montreal as agreed on. On arriving at the steamship, and before the bills of lading had been made out, a creditor of the customer attached the cattle under a writ of saisie-arret, but the steamship owners, disregarding the writ, sirned the bills of lading and conveyed the cattle to their destination. The creditor subsequently recovered a judgment for the value of the cuttle, in the Province of Quebec, against the steamship owners, which the latter, having paid, sought to prove for on the extate of the bank in winding-up proceedings:

—Held, that apart from the Bank Act, R. S. C. c. 120, by virtue of the agreement between the bank and its customer the possession and a special property in the goods passed to the bank, of which the steamship owners were aware, and having assented thereto upon receipt of the cattle, before any process was served, must be taken to have held the cattle for the bank. The agreement having been made, and the parties to it being domiciled in this Province, the rights of the parties to it must be determined by the laws of this Province and not those of Quebec, which, however, were not shewn to be different:—Held, also, that the rights of the parties were entirely governed by the provisions of the Bank Act, and following, though not altogether approving, Merchants Bank v. Suter, 24 Gr. 356, that under s. 53, s.-s. 4, of the Act, the bank had, under the agreement and the facts proved, an equitable lieu upon the cattle from the time of the making of the agreement, which prevailed over the attachment:—Held, lastly, that the bank "acquired" the bills of lading within the meaning of the Bank Act as soon as the cattle were received by the steamship, although it did not at that time actually "hold" the bills. Re Central Bank, Canada Skipping Co. S. Case, 21 O. R. 515.

Sale—Warranty of Title.]—The plaintiffs sued a bank to recover the price paid the bank for certain goods which, owing to a customs seizure and forfeiture, the plaintiffs never received. The bank were never in actual possession of the goods, but a bill of lading was indorsed to them as security for advances, and this bill of lading was indorsed and delivered by the bank directly to the plaintiffs. The jury found that it was the bank which sold the goods to the plaintiffs; that they professed to sell with a good title; that they had not a good title; and that the plaintiffs could not by any diligence have obtained the goods:—Held, that upon these findings and the evidence, and having regard to the provisions of the Bank Act, R. S. C. c. 120, the transaction must be regarded as a sale by the bank as pledgees with the concurrence of the pledgor, and not as a mere transfer of the interest of the bank under the bill of lading; and that the plaintiffs were entitled to recover the price as upon an implied warranty of title and a failure of consideration. Morley v. Attenborough, 3 Ex. 500, commented on and distinguished. Peuchen v. Imperial Bank, 20 O. It 325.

3. Mortgages.

Additional Security.]—Held, that the mortrage of goods to the plaintiffs, taken under the circumstances stated in this case, was valid, having been taken by way of additional security for a debt contracted to the bank in the course of its business, and therefore within C. S. C. c. 54, s. 4. Bank of Montreal v. McWhirter, 17 C. P., 506.

Chattel Mortgage—Antecedent Debt.]—Held, that the bank had the right to take the chattel mortgage in question. Sections 45-48 of the Bank Act. R. S. C. c. 120, do not prohibit a bank from taking security upon real, or as in this case upon personal property, and making such arrangements for its sale and disposition as they may think proper. What is forbidden is, the investing the money of the bank in trading. The transaction in question in this case was not a buying and selling of goods by investing the bank money therein, but was merely taking security for a debt already incurred, and the carrying out of an arrangement for the sale and realization of the property mortgaged for payment of the debt. In re Hainy Lake Lumber Co., Stewart v. Union Bank of Lower Canada, 15 A. R. 749.

Consideration — Notes not Stamped.) Notes not properly stamped taken by a bank are invalid if the bank does not attach double stamps and properly cancel the same when it first receives the notes, and will not support a chattel mortgage. Ontario Bank v. Wilcox, 45 U. C. R. 490.

Contemporaneous Loan.]—B., on the 19th January, 1876, transferred to the bank of T. (appellants) by notarial deed a hypothec on certain real estate in Montreal, made by one C. to him, as collateral security for a note which was discounted by the appellants and the proceeds placed at B.'s credit on the same day on which the transfer was made. The action was brought by the appellants against the insolvent estate of C. to set aside a prior hypothec given by C. and to establish their priority:—Held, that the transfer of B to the bank of T. was not given to secure a past debt, but to cover a contemporaneous loan, and was therefore null and void, as being a contravention of the Bank Act. 34 Vict. c. 5, 40 (D.) Bank of Toronto v. Perkins, 8 S. C. R. 603.

Equitable Mortgage—Contest as to Indebtedness Secured.]—The customer of a bank created a mortgage in favour of the institution of the contest of the deposit of title deeds. In a suit to realize the deposit of title deeds. In a suit to realize the deposit had been paid off; the bank, one collect of the bank, one contest and given by the debtor to secure all his indebtedness, past as well as future, and a memorandum indorsed at the time of the deposit on the envelope containing the deeds was to the same effect. The court, in the view that the deposit, if made as alleged by the bank, was lawful, while if made for the purpose stated by the debtor it would have been illegal, made a decree in favour of the bank with costs. Royal Canadian Bank v. Cummer, 15 Gr. 627.

Foreclosure.]—The chartered banks of the Province have a right to a decree of foreclosure upon a mortgage held by them as security. Bank of Upper Canada v. Scott, 6 Gr. 451.

Indorser—Assignment by him to Bank of Mortgage Security, 1—A mortgage upon land given to securic indorsations upon negotiable paper to be made by the mortgage for the benefit of the mortgagor becomes operative only upon the indorsements being made; and an assignment of such mortgage to a bank before the making of the indorsements is not a violation of s. 45 of the Bank Act, R. S. C. 120. Re Essex Land and Timber Co., Trout's Case, 21 O. R. 367.

Release of Security—Rights of Surety.]
—The plaintiffs, who held a number of promissory notes of a customer, indorsed by various parties, and also a mortgage from the customer on certain lands to secure his general indebtedness, sued the defendant as indorser of one of the notes. Before action brought, they had released certain of the mortgaged lands, without the consent of the defendant;—Held, that the plaintiffs were entitled to judgment against the defendant for the amount of the note, but without prejudice to the right of the latter to make them account for their dealings with the mortgaged property when the security had answered its purpose, or the debt had been paid by the sureties, or when in any other event the application of the moneys from the security could be properly ascertained. Decision below, 25 O. R. 503, modified. Molsons Bank v. Heilig, 26 O. R. 276.

Runing Account. — M. & Co., being desirous of obtaining additional advances from a bank, executed a mortgage to secure a large sum for which they were liable on the 31st December, 1873, on commercial paper of the firm and its customers which had been discounted by the bank. The mortgage provided that it should continue a security for the said sum and all renewals or substitutions therefor, and all indebteness of M. & Co. in respect thereof. After the mortgage was given M. & Co.'s line of discount was increased, but no separate account of the liabilities secured by the mortgage and these further advances was kept, the proceeds of the discounts and cash deposits being carried to M. & Co.'s credit in one open current account, against which they drew cheques to retire the notes secured by the mortgage as they matured. M. & Co. became insolvent on the 12th August, 1875, their indebtedness in the meantime never having been reduced:—Held, reversing 7 P. R. 265, that this mode of keeping the accounts had not operated as a discharge of the mortgage debt. Cameron v. Kerr, 3 A. R. 30.

Surety—Independent Security—Mistaken Belief as to Indebtedness.]—In May, 1873, H. & B. being indebted to plaintiffs' bank in $60,000, B. executed a mortgage for $40,000 as security therefor, reciting that it was for money lent on notes made by B. and indorsed by the firm, by defendant, and by Mrs. P. In October, the indebtedness having increased to $90,000, the bank required as further security a mortgage from the defendant for $25,000, and one from Mrs. P. for a like amount. The mortgages were smilar in form, and recited that the firm's indebtedness, being for moneys previously advanced on promissory notes made and indorsed as before stated, exceeded $25,000, and that such mortgage was given as collateral security for that sum, part of said indebtedness, whether represented by the notes then under discount, or by renewals, or by substitutions therefor, and similarly made and indorsed. There was a covenant for the payment of the indebtedness represented by said actes when due, or by any renewals or substituted notes. B. had been signing de-fendant's and Mrs. P.'s names as indorsers to the notes with their consent, as he alleged, but which defendant denied; and to prevent the bank noticing any difference between the the bank noticing any difference between the signatures to the notes and to the mortgage, B., with defendant's assent, signed defendant's and Mrs. P's names to the mortgages, which they subsequently acknowledged before a witness to be their signatures. Defendant alleged that he then believed the indebtedness to be only $60,000, being told so by B., but about three weeks afterwards he discovered it to be $90,000, and he then said nothing to the bank about it. After the mortgages were executed, the notes were renewed from time to time down to the insolvency of the firm in 1877, by B. writing defendant's and Mrs. P.'s names as indorsers, as he stated with their consent, but which defendant denied. The bank brought actions respectively against defendant personally, and as executor of Mrs. P., who had since died, on the covenant in the respective mortgages, and also on the indorse ments. After action commenced, the bank realized $35,000 on B.'s mortgage, and $6,300 from the firm's estate. The jury found that the defendant did not authorize B. to indorse for him, and that defendant when he gave the mortgage supposed the debt to be only $60,000 :—Held, affirming 28 C. P. 450, that the evidence shewed that each mortgage was intended to be an independent security for $25,000; and that the finding of the jury that the defendant supposed the debt to be $60,000 was wholly immaterial, as the mere fact that he thought it was only that amount could not, under the circumstances, relieve him from liability upon the mortgage either wholly or partially. Merchants Bank v. Bostwick, 3 A.

4. Warehouse Receipts.

Antecedent Advance - Goods not in Possession at Time of Agreement.1—34 Vict. c. 5, ss. 46 and 47 (D.), permits the permits the (D.). transfer to a bank of a bill of lading, or warehouse receipt, to secure an antecedent debt, where the understanding at the time of contracting such debt was, that the bill of lading should be transferred as collateral security. In this case it appeared that the bank agreed to make advances to S. & Co. to purchase coa and stone, to be secured by bills of lading and warehouse receipts for such coal and stone when received. The transfer of such receipts when received. to the bank, after the arrival of the goods, was held to be authorized; and it was held no objection that the agreement was to give a receipt for goods of which, at the time, the person was not possessed. Six months had person was not possessed. Six months had elapsed after the giving of the receipt before seizure of the goods by the creditors of S. & Co., but the bank had taken possession of these goods with the consent of S. & Co., and were selling them in order to repay their advances:—Held, under 34 Vict. c. 5, s. 59 (D.), that they were entitled to hold the goods notwithstanding the lapse of time. Royal Canadian Bank v. Ross, 40 U. C. R. 406.

Antecedent Debt-Insolvency-Receipt - Warehouseman.] - The Canada Car Company had, for some years, been doing business with the Royal Canadian Bank, and with its successors, the Consolidated Bank, and had obtained discounts to the amount of $23,000 on security of warehouse receipts given by one C. on 14,000 car wheels and 350 tons of pig iron. When these receipts were given C. was not in possession of either the goods or the premises in which they stored. A lease of the premises was subsequently made to him, but he refused to renew the receipts and gave up the property. At the institution of the Consolidated Bank, to enable the plaintiff to give warehouse receipts, a lease of the premises at the rent of 85 per month was made to him for a year, and he gave a warehouse receipt to the company for 14,000 car wheels and 350 tons of pig iron, receiving an indemnity from the bank that the property would be forthcoming when required. This receipt was indorsed over to the Standard Bank by the Car Wheel Company, under signature of its manager and president, and an advance obtained thereon of $23,000, which went to pay the Consolidated Bank, who, as it was found, were aware of the company's insolvency. In February, 1877, an attachment in insolvency issued against the company, and the defendants, as their assignees in insolvency, took possession of the goods covered by the receipt, claiming them as part of the assets of the estate. The plaintiff then the assets of the estate. The plaintiff then sued the defendants in trespass and trover for the taking:—Held, that defendants were entitled to the goods; that had the Consolidated Bank been assignces of the receipt they would have had no title to the goods, as upon the evidence the receipt would not have been given, as required by the Act, 34 Vict. c. 5 (D.), to secure a present advance or debt; and that the Standard Bank could be in no better position, for that the evidence, set out in the case, shewed that the advance by them was not made as an original and independent transaction with the Car Wheel Company, but at the request and for the benefit of the Consolidated Bank, and upon its express or implied guarantee of indemnity. Held, also, that the lease to the plaintiff was not open to objection as being merely a gratuitous one. Quære, whether M., as regarded the premises leased, could be considered a warehouseman, or a keeper of a yard within that title. Quare, also, whether there could be a valid legal transfer of the warehouse receipt, except under the corporate seal; but held, that this was immaterial as this objection would not in equity defeat the plaintiff's claim. Held, that if plaintiff had had a legal title to the goods, he would not be compelled to resort to the insolvent court under s. 125 of the Insolvent court index s. 123 of the Insolvent Act, but might maintain this action. Milloy v. Kerr, 43 U. C. R. 78.

On appeal it was—Held, affirming the above judgment, that the plaintiff was not entitled to recover; that he had neither possession of nor property in the goods in question; and that he was not a warehouseman of the goods within the meaning of 34 Vict. c. 5 (D.) Quære, if the receipt had been valid, as given by a warehouseman in the ordinary course of business, whether the transaction, as set out in the evidence, could be considered as fraudulent within the Insolvent Act. Semble, that to sustain this view certain inferences of fact must be drawn, which had not been found at the trial. Quere, also, whether, under the facts more fully set out in the report, the two banks were so identified that the transaction must be regarded as an attempt to secure an antecedent debt from the Consolidated Bank by means of a warehouse receipt. S. C., 3 A. R. 350. An appeal to the supreme court was dismissed thore being an equal districts. dismissed, there being an equal division of opinion: 8 S. C. R. 474.

Bills of Sale Act.]-The execution debtors, C. & Son, bought the oats in question from persons who shipped them to Toronto consigned to their (the sellers') own order, or to the order of some bank other than the plaintiffs, sending the shipping receipt with draft for the price of the oats attached to C. & Son at Toronto. The latter then took the shipping receipt to the plaintiffs, who advanced the money thereon to pay the draft, returning the shipping receipt to C. & Son for the purpose of obtaining the oats from the carriers, after taking from C. & Son a receipt in these words: "Received in Son a receipt in these words: "Received in trust from the Dominion Bank bill of lading for — bushels oats, and I hereby undertake to sell the property specified for said bank and collect the proceeds of sale or sales there-

Extending Time.]—The consent required by s, 50 of 34 Vict. c, 5 (D.), to extend the time for which the transfer of a warehouse receipt in security to a bank shall remain valid, may be given at any time after incurring the debt or liability to the bank; and, semble, that such consent need not be in writing. McCrae v. Molsons Bank, 25 Gr. 519.

Following Proceeds.]—A miller gave a warehouse receipt to a bank on some wheat "and its product," stored in his mill, for advances made to hin, and died hosolvend beauty and the product of the flour. Re Goodfellow, Traders Bank v. Goodfellow, 19 O. R. 299.

Foreigner — Transaction Valid under Foreign Law.]—C. & Co., carrying on business in Chicago, in the state of Illinois, for the manufacture of mill machinery, etc., had certain machinery manufactured for them in Stratford, Ont., which was warehoused with M. & T., at Woodstock, Ont. C. & Co. being pressed by plaintiffs, their bankers in Chicago, for collateral security for two of their notes of $5,000 each, discounted by the plaintiffs, indorsed over to the plaintiffs the warehouse receipts for these goods. At the maturity of the notes, C. & Co. not being able to retire them, in pursuance of an arrangement to that effect the warehouse receipts were cancelled and new ones, dated 12th October, 1883, were made out direct to the plaintiffs. On 3rd September, 1883, C. & Co. had made an assignment to a trustee in Chicago for the benefit of creditors. On 22nd November defendant placed writs of execution in the sheriff's hands against C. & Co., under which these goods were seized. No fraudulent preference or intent was proved:—Held, that the plaintiffs, a foreign corporation, could hold personal property in Ontario; that C. & Co. being residents of the state of Illinois, the transfer must be governed by the law of that state, according to which the transfer was valid and effectual; that, even if dealt with as subject to the law of Ontario, wh. M. & T.

gave the warehouse receipts direct to the bank they held the goods for the plaintiffs, and there was therefore a transfer of both property and possession in the goods to the plaintiffs, subject to the trustees rights, if any; and the goods being in the hands of third parties and not of C. & Co., the Bills of Sale Act did not apply; and also that the Act as to banks and banking, and warehouse receipts, did not apply to the plaintiffs, a foreign corporation. Commercial National Bank of Chicago v. Corcoran, 6 O. R. 527.

Owner Issuing Receipts.]—Although warehouse receipts granted to itself by a firm which has not the custody of any goods but its own are not negotiable instruments within the meaning of the Mercantile Amendment Act, R. S. C. 1887 c. 122:—Held, that the Dominion Bank Act, R. S. C. 120, while it was in force, dispensed with that limitation, validated such receipts, and transferred to the indorsees thereof the property comprised therein. Tennant v. Union Bank of Canada, [1894] A. C. 31; affirming 19 A. R. 1.

Pork Packers.] — Warehouse receipts — Who may give—Curers and packers of pork— Receipts for property wrongfully obtained— Confusion of property. Great Western R. W. Co. v. Hodgson, 44 U. C. R. 187.

Present Advance — Form of Receigt — Indorsement, 1—M. & Co. being indebted to plaintiffs on certain overdue notes, it was agreed that plaintiffs should discount a further note for them, with the proceeds of which the overdue paper should be retired; and that M. & Co. should hand over to them certain warehouse receipts for wool stored in their warehouse a collateral security. This note was accordingly, on the 23rd January, 1868, discounted by plaintiffs, and the old notes duly returned, an agreement being signed by M. & Co., reciting that they had indorsed over the receipts as collateral security for the note, &c. The receipts, nearly all in the same form, were as follows:—"Warehouse Receipt.—Heecived in store in our warehouse, at * * * from sundry parties, 17,900 pounds butting to be delivered pursuant to the order of the Bank of British North America, to be indorsed hereon, &c." Neither M. & Co. nor the bank indorsed the receipts:—Held, that they were not warehouse receipts under C. S. C. c. 54, 24 Vict. c. 23, and that the bank therefore, could not claim the property covered by them. Semble, also, that the transaction of the 23rd January was not, in substance, though in form, a present advance to M. & Co., but merely a mode adopted of paying off an already existing debt. Bank of British North America v. Clarkson, 13 C. P. 182.

Present Advance—Form of Receipt—Indexement.]—The plaintiffs on the 20th September, received a note for $5.800, payable to and indorsed by L. with L's warehouse receipt for wool attached, which they discounted on the 4th October, 1867. On the 21st October, $1,179 only remaining due, they took a note for this sum from M., the maker of the previous note, with his receipt for some wool, in addition to a receipt from L. for what remained of the wool covered by L.'s previous receipt. It was not discounted, however, on that day, because M. did not pay the discount, and on the 5th December, M. made another note for the same sum, at ten days, in place of it, which was discounted with the same two warehouse receipts attached. It was renewed on the 24th with the same receipts, and not being paid, the plaintiffs in April sold the wool, through a broker who was unable to get it; and they thereupon replexied on the 9th Mays:—Held, following British North America v. Cheld, following British North America v. Cheld, being taken 1872. That the being taken to be bank, and not by indorsement, were not within C. S. C. c. 54. s. S. and that the plaintiffs therefore could not recover. Held, also, that the transaction of the 5th December might be considered as a new one, and that the plaintiffs therefore had not held the wool more than six mouths, so as to defeat their title, under s. 9. If they had, defendants might shew that fact under a plea of not possessed. Royal Canadian Bank v. Miller, 28 U. C. R. 503; 29 U. C. R. 266.

Specific Sum Secured—Excessive Sale.]
—The defendants, a bank, advanced to F. &
McL. 82,250, on a warehouse receipt for 3,000 bushels of wheat, valued at 75 cents per bushel. F. & McL. subsequently paid in 81,229, which they had obtained from the plaintiffs, who were in reality the owners of the wheat, for whom F. & McL. were allowing the leaving a balance due of 8330. The plaintiffs notified the bank of their ching that the wareleaving a balance due of 8330. The plaintiffs notified the bank of their ching that the wareleaving a balance due of 8330. Suppose the plaintiffs notified the bank of their ching that the wareleaving a balance due of 8330. The plaintiffs notified the bank of their ching that the theat in disregard thereof continuing security for E. McL.'s general balance, which at that time exceeded 82,256, shipped it off for sale, incurring wharfage fees thereby, and the whole of the wheat was sold:—Held, that the evidence, set out in the report, shewed that the warehouse receipt was not a continuing security to 82,250, but only for the repayment of that specific sum. Held, also, that under the circumstances the claim for wharfage could not be entertained. Held, also, that the plaintiffs might maintain trover against defendants; for that the fact of there being some part of the 82,250 due at the time of the sale did not justify the sale of the whole of the wheat, it being capable of division, so that enough to satisfy the amount due need only have been sold. Gibbs v. Dominion Bank, 30

Surety—Bank's Agreement to take Receipts from Primary Debtor. [—Upon the evidence in this case it was held to have been rightly found at the trial that the defendant indersed the notes sued on on the understanding and agreement with the plaintiffs, by whom they were to be discounted, that the proceeds should be applied in the purchase of pork, on which the plaintiffs were to take and hold security for the payment of the notes: which was of greater value than the amount of the notes; and that the plaintiffs through their negligence lost such security, the makers either having been allowed to sell the pork and receive the proceeds, or such proceeds having been received by the plaintiffs and applied to other liabilities of the makers:— Held, that the defendant was discharged. between these parties it was held unnecessary to discuss the right of the makers to give valid warehouse receipts for such pork to the plain-tiffs, there being enough shewn to create a valid pledge of the pork, for the special purpose of the agreement, and to provide a fund to which the defendant looked for protection. The alleged impracticability of the bank attending to the sale and disposition of such property in their ordinary course of business was held immaterial, there being an express agreement as above stated. Molsons Bank v. Girdlestone, 44 U. C. R. 54.

Surplus. |—The Moisons Bank took from H. & Co. several warehouse receipts as collateral security for commercial paper discounted in the ordinary course of business, and having a surplus from the sale of the goods represented by the receipts, after paying the debts for which they were immediately pledged, claimed under a parol agreement to hold that surplus in payment of other debts due by H. & Co. H. & Co. having become insolvent, T., as one of the creditors, brought an action against the bank, claiming that the surplus must be distributed ratably among the general body of creditors. H. & Co. were not made parties to the suit:—Held, that the parol agreement was not contrary to the provisions of the Bank Act, R. S. C. c. 120, and that after the goods were lawfully sold the money that remained, after applying the proceeds of each sale to its proper note, could properly be applied by the bank under the terms of the parol agreement. Thompson v. Molsons Bank, 10 S. C. R. 664.

Title by Indorsement-Form of Receipt — Warehouseman — Constitutional Law.] — The appellants discounted paper for a trading firm, on the understanding that a quantity of coal purchased by the firm should be consignto them, and that they would transfer to the firm the bills of lading, and should receive from one of the members of the firm his receipt as a wharfinger and warehouseman for the coal as having been deposited by them, which was done, and the following receipt was given: "Received in store in Big Coal House warehouse at Toronto, from Merchants House warehouse at Toronto, from Merchants Bank of Canada, at Toronto, fourteen hun-dred and fifty-eight (1,458) tons stove coal, and two hundred and sixty-one tons chestnat coal per schooners "Dundee," "Jessie Drum-mond," "Gold Hunter," and "Annie Mulvey," to be delivered to the order of the said Merchants Bank to be indorsed hereon. This is to be regarded as a receipt under the provisions of the statute 34 Vict. c. 5 (D.)—value $7,000. The said coal in sheds facing esplanade is separate from and will be kept separate and distinguishable from other coal. (Signed.) W. Snarr. Dated 10th August, 1878. The partnership having become insolven The partnership having become insolvent, the assignee sought to hold the coal as the the assigne soight to noid the coal as the goods of the insolvents, and filed a bill im-peaching the validity of the receipt:—Held, reversing 8 A. R. 15, that it is not necessary to the validity of the claim of a bank under a warehouse receipt, given by an owner who is a warehouseman and wharfinger, and has is a warehouseman and whartinger, and has the goods in his possession, that the receipt should reach the hands of the bank by indorsement, and that the receipt given by W. S. in this case was a receipt within the meaning of 34 Vict. c. 5 (B.) 2. That the finding of fact at the trial, of W. S. being a person authorized by the statute to give the receipt in question, should not have been reversed as there was callenge that W. S. we ceipt in question, should not have been re-versed, as there was evidence that W. S. was a wharfinger and warehouseman. 3, (Per Fournier, Henry, and Taschereau, JJ.,) that ss. 46, 47 and 48 of 34 Vict. c. 5 (D.) are intra vires the Dominion Parliament. Mer-chants Bank of Canada v. Smith, S. S. C. R. 512.

Warehouseman — Invalid Receipts — Effect of Taking Possession.]—In proceedings taken in the master's office to administer the estate of M., which was insolvent, the M. and D. banks brought in their claims as creditors. Other creditors opposed these claims on the grounds that the banks had been paid large sums in reduction of their debts by assets of the deceased, which they had taken after his death and before administration. The banks set up their right to the assets so taken under warehouse receipts therefor, signed by H. and held by them. It appeared that M., who was a provision merchant, in his lifetime had obtained advances from the banks on the faith of the receipts being valid securities, he representing to them that he had rented the cellar of his warehouse to H. as warehouse-man, and that as such H. had sole charge of Before the receipts matured, M. disappeared and was subsequently found dead. Before his death became known, H, and his solicitor took possession of the cellar and the property covered by the receipts, and posted up in the cellar a notice stating that H. held the property therein as warehouseman of the banks, to whom he had granted receipts. Two days after taking possession, H. refused to be any longer responsible for the property, to be any longer responsible for the property which was subsequently taken by the banks under their receipts, and as it was rapidly de-teriorating was sold by them. At the time of the sale there was no personal representative to M.'s estate, nor was there any execution creditor. It appeared by the evidence of H. craditor. It appeared by the evidence of H. that he had signed the receipts at M.'s request and as a matter of form, but that he had not leased the cellar, nor had he any control over it nor the property contained in it: -Held, that the receipts were good between the parties and by the result of the subsequent dealings they were rehabilitated so as to be valid against creditors by the act of intervention on H.'s part during the life of M., but in any event, there being no creditor who had any locus standi when the banks sold un-der the receipts, they had the right to apply the proceeds to reduce their claim against M.'s estate. Per Boyd, C.—There are two classes of persons authorized to issue warehouse receipts by s. 7 of 43 Vict. c. 22 (D.), (substituted for 34 Vict. c. 5, s. 45 (D.).) viz., bailees of goods and keepers of a warehouse, &c., and the same sort of proof is not required in the case of the latter as in the former. The test of their validity does not necessarily depend upon proving that the hecessarily expend upon plan warehouseman was actually, visibly, and continuously in possession of them from first to last. Per Proudfoot, J.—That section authorizes persons who are not warehousemen alone, but who may have other business also, to give receipts, but these are comprised in the definition of "warehouse receipts," previously given in the statute, which requires the goods to be in the "actual, visible, and continued possession of the ballees." Re Monteith, Merchants' Bank v. Monteith, 10 O. R. 529.

IV. DEPOSITS AND DEPOSIT RECEIPTS.

Accepting Deposit After Decision to Suspend Payment. — Where a deposit was made in a bank, and it was shewn that at a directors' meeting, held the previous day, the necessity of seeking outside assistance or suspending payment had been considered and a resolution passed to suspend payment if such assistance were refused, and that when the bank closed on the day the deposit was made, it did not open again, and notice of suspension of payment was given on the following morning:—Held, that the depositors were entitled to be repaid the amount of their deposit as obtained from them by fraud, and the liquidators were ordered to pay the same with interest from the date of the deposit. Quære, whether motion by petition was the proper mode of procedure in a case like this. Re-Central Bank of Canada, Wells and Mac-Murchy's Case, 15 O. R. 611.

Assignee in Insolvency — Non-production of Receipt.]—M. deposited a sum with the plaintiffs, and soon afterwards absconded. The bank had given him a receipt, stating that the money was payable on the production of that document. A writ of attachment issued against the depositor's property under the Insolvent Acts, and the defendant Little was appointed official assignee. He demanded the money without producing the receipt, which never came into his possession, but the plaintiffs had notice of the attachment and of his appointment. He then sued the plaintiffs the plaintiffs required the defendant Little and later in figure the state of the plaintiffs that and another required the defendant Little and another claimant of the money, whose claim accrued after the attachment, to interpied, the court, under the circumstances:—Held, that the plaintiffs ought to have paid over the money to the assignee, and decreed that they should pay it, with the costs occasioned to the estate by their refusal. Bank of Montreal v. Little, 17 Gr. 313.

A condition, on a bank deposit receipt, that the receipt should, on payment, be given up to the bank, may not be void; but it does not entitle the bank to retain the money in case the receipt is not forthcoming; the depositor is entitled, on proof of loss and indemnity (if required), to relief in equity. Deposit After Suspension.]—A person who makes a deposit with a bank after its suspension, the deposit consisting of cheques of third parties drawn on and accepted by the bank in question, is not entitled to be paid by privilege the amount of such deposit. Ontario Bank v. Chaplin, 20 S. C. R. 152.

Equitable Transfer — Negotiability.]—

To an action on the common money counts and account stated, defendants pleaded, by way of equitable defence, setting out a deposit receipt for moneys from them to plaintiff, to be active to the plaintiff of the property of them to plaintiff, to be active to the plaintiff of the plaintiff, and, in substance, the plaintiff had, for good and valuable consider plaintiff had, for good and valuable consider plaintiff, the plaintiff, title, and intent the transferred all his right, title, and intent the transfer had been defendants had paid over to the transfer his defendants had paid over to the transfer his defendants had paid over to the transfer his defendants did not bond fide pay the amount of the claim, to a person or persons to whom plaintiff had, for good consideration, transferred all his right, title, and interest in equity, to receive and demand payment of the fund, but that he parted with the security under circumstances which, at best, gave the transferces an equitable charge upon the fund, but that the parted with the security under circumstances which, at best, gave the transferces an equitable charge upon the fund, but extent of which had to be determined by certain acts to be done by them; and that they having taken no steps to ascertain the extent of the charge, the plaintiff, before the alleged further transfer by them to certain parties (set up by the plea) and before payment by defendants, notified them that he disputed the validity of the equitable charge, and not to recognize it or pay any of the fund in respect of it, which defendants agreed not to do, but afterwards paid the same:—Held, a good replication, Mander v. Royal Canadian Bank, 20 C. P. 125.

Deposit receipts for money, given by a bank, are not negotiable instruments in equity any more than at law, so as to entitle the holder to demand payment of the fund secured by them. It.

Forgery—Delay.)—The plaintiff, a Norwegian by birth and almost totally ignorant of the English language, in September, 1884, deposited with the defendants at one of their branch offices a sum of money and received from the bank the usual deposit receipt, at the time signing his name on the stub or counterfoil of the receipt for the purpose of enabling the bank to identify him at any time the money might be demanded. For the purpose of safe-keeping, plaintiff, being about to proceed to work elsewhere, left the receipt with S. About seven months afterwards plaintiff returned, when he was informed by S. S. that he had withdrawn the money from the bank but promised to return it. The plaintiff being ignorant of the manner in which the money had been paid out and of his rights as against the defendants took no steps whatever against them, and S. S. absconded from the country in August, 1885, heavily in-debted. In the month of December following, the plaintiff having been informed as to his rights against the bank consulted a solicitor who undertook to attend to the matter, but omitted to take any steps, and in the month of April following (1886) the plaintiff through another solicitor made a demand on the bank for payment which was refused. The demand so made was the first notice the bank had of the fraud which had been practised on them:—Held, affirming 14 O. R. 568, 1, that the plaintiff in entrusting the receipt to S. S. was not guilty of any act of negligence; 2. that his delay in notifying the defendants of the fraud perpetrated on them was not a breach of any legal duty on them was not a breach of any legal duty of his part so as to estop him from recovering the amount of his deposit. Merchants Bank v. Lucas, 13 O. R. 520, distinguished. Sader-quist v. Ontario Bank, 15 A. R. 609. Form of Receipt — Negotiability,]—An incorporated bank, by its cashier, issued deposit receipts in the following form: "Received from the sum of 8 which this bank will repay to the said or order, with interest at four per cent, per annum, on receiving fifteen days' notice. No interest will be allowed unless the money remains with this bank six months. This receipt to be given up to the bank when payment of either principal or interest is required:"—Held, that it was competent under the Bank Act, R. S. C. c. 120, to issue such deposit receipts, and that even if they did not possess all the incidents of promissory notes, yet being meant to be transferred by indorsement, they were so far negotiable as to pass a good title to a bona fide purchaser for value, taking without notice of any infirmity of title. Re Central Bank, Morton and Block's Claims, 17 O. R. 574.

Semble, that these deposit receipts were negotiable instruments under which the holders were entitled to recover as upon a promissory note made by the bank. Voyer v. Richer, 13 L. C. Jur. 213, 15 L. C. Jur. 122, L. R. 5 P. C. 461, specially referred to. Ib.

Payment After Depositor's Death-Pleading.]—Action by plaintiff as administra-trix of one L., to recover the sum of $100 deposited by L. in his lifetime with defendants. Second plea: that the moneys were claimed under a deposit receipt, which, after L's death and before defendants had any notice or knowledge thereof, was duly presented to de-fendants properly indorsed by L., and defendants in due course of business, and in their usual mode of dealing with such receipts, paid the sum mentioned therein to the person presenting the same with L's indorsement thereon, and defendants took up and have ever since held the same, as they were entitled to Third plea: after stating that the moneys were claimed under the deposit receipt, alleged that L., in his lifetime, indorsed and delivered said receipt to B. L., his wife and afterwards his widow, who being possessed thereof by virtue of the indorsement presented it to devirtue of the indorsement presented it to de-fendants, who without any notice or know-ledge of L.'s death, duly paid the same to her: —Held, second plea bad, for there was no allegation of the delivery of the receipt, or of any intention to pass the property therein, the expression "indorse," which in negotiable instruments imports a delivery and transfer to the indorsee so as to pass the title thereto, having no such effect in a non-negotiable instrument of this character; further that the strument of this character; further that the allegation of payment in ignorance of L's death, and in due course of business, &c., could not help defendants, and the plea should have alleged a payment to L's personal representative or to some person shewing a right to the money:—Held, also, third plea bad, that is did no executive. it did not constitute a good legal defence, for, notwithstanding the alleged indorsement and delivery, the depositor still continued entitled to the money; neither did it constitute a defence in equity, for it alleged neither an equitable assignment of the receipt or of the money secured thereby, nor a donatio mortis causa, nor a gift thereof. Lee v. Bank of British North America, 30 C. P. 255.

Set-off — Depositor's Promissory Note—Ranking on Insolvent Estate of Deccased Maker.]—A testator, having a deposit to his credit in a bank at the time of his death, was indebted to the bank on a note under discount, which had not then matured. The deposit remained with the bank until after the maturity of the note, when the bank brought an action on it against the executors of his insolvent estate, who claimed that the bank should rank on the estate for the full amount of the note and give credit upon the dividend for the amount of the deposit:—Held, that the deposit not having been withdrawn or demanded before the maturity of the note, the bank was entitled to set off the debt on the note against the deposit, and to rank for the balance. Ontain Bank v. Routhlier, 32 O. R. 67.

Succession Duty—Foreign Donicitle.]—Succession duty is payable upon the amount held under deposit receipts issued by banks in this Frovince, payable here to a person whose donicile was in a foreign country at the time of his death. Attorney-General of Outario v. Newman, 31 O. R. 340.

Transfer of Deposit by Husband to Wife. |- See Sherratt v. Merchants Bank of Canada, 21 A. R. 473.,

Strust Funds.]—One McE., who was the assigner of an insolvent estate, kept the estate account as well as his private account, at the defendant bank. Certain notes of the estate were deposited by him with defendants for collection, and the proceeds placed to the credit of the estate, which McE., as assignee, drew out by cheque, and redeposited with defendants to his private account, and then used for his own purposes. It did not appear that the bank derived any benefit from the transfer, or that McE. was indebted to them:—Held, that defendants were not liable to repay the amount to the estate. Clench v. Consolidated Bank of Canada, 31 C. P. 169.

Trust Funds.]—S. G. acquired during the life of his first wife, M. A. B., certain immovable property which formed part of the communauté de biens existing between them, At his death, after his marriage with II. his second wife, he was greatly involved. His widow H. S., having accepted sous benefice d'inventaire the universal usufructuary legacy made in her favour by S. G., continued in possession of her estate as well as that of M. A. B., the first wife, and administered them both, employing one G. to collect, pay debts, Shortly afterwards, at a meeting of the creditors of S. G., of whom the respondents were the chief, a resolution was adopted authorizing H. S. to sell and licitate the properties belonging to the estate of S. G., with the advice of an advocate and the cashier of the respondents, and promising to ratify anything done on their advice, and the creditors resolved that the moneys derived from the sale or licitation of the properties should be deposited with the respondents, to be apportioned among S. C.'s creditors pro ratâ. G. continued to collect the fruits and revenues and rents, and acted generally for H. S. and under the advice aforesaid, and deposited both the moneys derived from the estate of S. G., and those derived from the estate of M. A. B., the first wife, with the respondents, under an account headed "Succession S. G." A balance remained after some cheques thereupon had been paid, for which this action was now brought by the heirs and representatives of Dame M. A. B.:—Held, by an equal division of opinion, affirming the judgment below, that as between the heirs B, and the bank there was no relation of creditor and debtor, nor any fiduciary relation, nor any privity whatever; and as the moneys collected by G, belonging to the heirs of B. were so collected by him as the agent of H. S., and not as the agent of the bank, and received by the bank in good faith, as applicable to the debts of the estate of S. G., and as the representatives of H. S. were not as the representatives of H. parties to the action, the appellants could not recover the moneys sued for. Giraldi v. Banque Jacques Cartier, 9 S. C. R. 597.

Trust Funds—Charging up Cheques.]—
The plaintiff placed in the hands of one J., a practising solicitor, a mortgage given to the plaintift by one R., together with a discharge thereof duly executed, for the purpose of enabling J. to receive payment of the mortgage money, which R. was borrowing from a loan company, and which it was arranged, between the plaintiff and J., in the presence of the local manager of a bank of which J. was the solicitor, should be deposited by the solicitor in such bank to the credit of the plaintiff, and a deposit receipt obtained therefor. J. did receive the money by a cheque of the loan company, amounting with interest to $0.455, which he deposited in the bank to his private account. About ten days afterwards he drew upon his account for $3,000, which he deposited in the same bank to the credit of the plaintiff, obtained a deposit receipt therefor in favour of the plaintiff and transmitted the same to the plaintiff on the 26th August, 1881, telling the plaintiff in his letter that "the balance will be sent next week." He drew upon the fund for his own purposes, and died, without rendering any account, on the 4th September followine:—Held, that the bank was not affected with notice of the money so deposited being trust moneys, so as to render the bank lable for J.'s misappropriation thereof.

Bailey v. Jellett, 9 A. R. 187.

After the deposit of the plaintiff's money J. recovered a sum of $1,182,35 for the defendant S., as her solicitor, which he also deposited in the same account on the 24th August, 1881. Up to the time of J.'s death the amount at his credit always exceeded this sum:—Held, at his credit always exceeded this sum:—Iraca, that the moneys so deposited by J. had been held by him in a fiduciary character, and might be followed by B. & S.; but as between the plaintiff and S., that S. had a first charge upon the sum at the credit of J. for the full amount of her deposit, and that the balance was applicable to the discharge of the plain-tiff's demand. Ib.

The bank claimed the right to charge against the account in priority to the claims of the plaintiff and S. cheques and notes of J. of the plaintiff and S. cheques and notes of a presented or maturing after notice to the bank of J.'s death:—Held, that they could not do so, and in consequence of having made such claim both in this court and the court below, they were refused their costs. Ib.

Creditor's Right to Enforce Double Liability.]—A bill will lie in equity at the suit of a creditor to enforce the double liability of the shareholders of an insolvent bank. Brooke v. Bank of Upper Canada, 16 Gr. 249. But such a bill must be on behalf of all the creditors. Ib.

The trustees of the bank were held necessary parties to a bill by creditors to enforce the double liability of shareholders. S. C., 17

Inspection of Books.]-A stockholder Inspection of Books, —A stockholder merely as such has no right to inspect the stock or other books of the bank nor will the court grant a mandanus for that purpose, although they have the power, unless some special ground be disclosed sufficient to warrant it. In re Bank of Upper Canada v. Baldwin, Dra. 55.

Lien-Understatement of Amount.] - A bank agent being about to make advances on the security of certain stock of another bank, applied to the bank officers to ascertain what claims the bank held against such stock, when he was informed that there was overdue paper to the amount of $500; but before completing the transfer of the stock, another claim, which was then current in one of the agencies of the bank, was returned unpaid:—Held, that the bank, was returned unpaid:—Held, that the bank had a right to retain its lien on the stock for the additional sum before allowing the transfer of the stock to be carried out in their books. Cook v. Royal Canadian Bank,

The owner of bank stock being about to assign the same, procured from one of the agents of the bank a memorandum on the back of a power of attorney for the transfer of the stock in the words; "No liability at Galt office:"— Held, that this was not such a representation, made to the intending transferee, as bound the bank: and that the bank was entitled to hold the stock for a draft of $500, which had been discounted at the Galt office, and then in the hands of an agency in Montreal. Ib.

Loan.]—Loans made on deposit of stock. See Carnegie v. Federal Bank of Canada, 5 O.

Purchase of Share to Bring Action. —The plaintiff in order to qualify himself to sue as a shareholder of a bank, purchased one share of the stock thereof, which he swore he paid for with his own money and bought of his own motion, for the purpose of testing the legality of a transaction into which the bank was about to enter :- Held, that this gave him a locus standi in court, although the circumstances were suspicious, the rule being that where in such a case the plaintiff is shewn to have a substantial interest the court will not refuse relief, although there may be room to suppose he may have other objects in view which could not be approved of. J. v. Imperial Bank of Canada, 23 Gr. 262. Jones

Sale of Shares-Execution.] - Sale of shares in execution—Application for order under 34 Vict c. 5 (D.)—Execution of fi. fa. by bailiff. See In re Bank of Ontario, 44 by bailiff. 8 U. C. R. 247.

Sale of Shares — Double Liability—Indemnity.]—The plaintiff sold and transferred his shares in a bank to C., a broker, who sold them on the stock exchange to the defendant, also a broker, in ignorance that the latter was acting for a customer. The transfer in the bank books from C. was effected by leaving the transferee's name blank, and marking the shares in the margin of the transfer as subject to the order of the defendant, who similarly marked them subject to the order of his principal, whose name was filled in as transerce, and who duly accepted the transfer. Within a month from the sale by the plaintiff, the bank was ordered to be wound up, and in the liquidation the plaintiff was compelled, as a contributory, to pay the double liability under ss. 70 and 77 of the Bank Act, R. S. C. c. 120. The plaintiff recovered judgment against C. for the amount he had paid, and afterwards took an assignment from C. of his right to indemnity against the defendant. an action to enforce this right :-Held, that the obligation to indemnify arose from the purchase, and not from the transfer; that a broker acting in his own name, for an undislosed principal, assumes the liability of the latter, and the fact that the transfer was executed in a form intended to enable the defendant to pass the shares to the ultimate purchaser did not relieve the defendant from his liability. That, although C. had not sathis liability. That, although C, had not satisfied the judgment, he was entitled to in-demnity from the defendant, and, after judgment, to assign his rights to the plaintiff, who could enforce them:—Held, also, that the count entorce them:—Held, also, that the mere existence of a liability to indemnify the plaintiff gave no right of action to C., and that the Statute of Limitations did not begin to run in favour of the defendant until the recovery of judgment against C. Sutherland v. Webster, 21 A. R. 228, and Eddowes v. Argentine Loan Co., 63 L. T. N. S. 364. fol-lowed:—Held, further, that the plaintiff's right against C. first accrued when the liquidators became entitled to immediate payment. Before this action, the plaintiff sued the defendant and C. on an assignment to him of C.'s claim against the defendant, made before the plaintiff's judgment against C, which action was dismissed against the defendant, on the ground that C had not before judgment been damnified, and the defendant sought herein to set up that dismissal in bar of this action:—Held, no defence to this action. A by-law of the stock exchange, not authorized by their Act of incorporation, provided that all disputes between members, arising out of transactions on the exchange, should be referred to arbitrators:—Held, that they had no right to pass such a by-law ousting members from their right to resort to the courts of the Province. Essery v. Court Pride of the Dominion, 2 O. R. 596, considered. Boutthee v. Grancki, 28 O. R. 285; reversed, 24 A. R. 562; restored in the supreme court, 29 S. C. R. 54.

P. in trust, and which the said W. G. P. one of the grevés and manager of the estate had pelaged to respondents for advances made to him personally. J. H. P. et al., appellants, representing the substitution, by their action demanded to be refunded the money which they alleged H. J. P., one of them, had paid by error as curator to redeem shares belonging to the substitution. The shares in question were not mentioned in the will of William Petry, and there was no inventory to shew they formed part of the estate; and no acts d'empioi or rempioi to shew that they were assuired with the assets of the estate;—Held, that the debt of W. G. P. having been paid by the curator with full knowledge of the facts, the appellants could not recover. Articles 1047, 1048 C. C. That bank stock cannot be held as regards third parties in good faith to form part of substituted property on the ground that it has been purchased with the moneys belonging to the substitution without an act of investment in the name of the substitution and a due registration thereof. Winding-up—Transfers.]—After a winding-up order has been made, it is too late for holders of shares, entered as such in the books of the bank, to escape liability by shewing irregularities in transfers to more or less remote predecessors in title. A loan company which advances money on the security of shares, which are transferred to it, and accepted by it, in the ordinary absolute form, cannot escape liability on the ground that it is merely a trustee for the borrower. In re Central Bank of Canada, Home Sacings and Loan Company's Case, 18 A. R. 489.

VI. SPECIAL CHARTERS.

Bank of British North America.]—An action is not maintainable against the manager of this bank under 7 Will. IV. c. 34, in his individual character, for a cause of action accrued against him only as manager. White v. Hunter, E. T. 4 Vict.

This bank is entitled to sue in Upper Canada in its corporate name. Bank of British North America v. Browne, 6 U. C. R. 490.

There is nothing in their charter which prevents their becoming parties as creditors to an assignment for the benefit of creditors. Patton v. Foy, 9 C. P. 512.

The local agents of the bank cannot grant powers of attorney to third parties to receive money ordered to be paid to the bank by a decree of the court. Bank of British North America v. Rattenbury, 1 Ch. Ch. 65.

Bank of Upper Canada.]—The president, not being an officer of the bank, within s. 16 of 6 Vict. c. 27, may vote by proxy at the annual election of directors. Regina v. Bank of Upper Canada, 5 U. C. R. 338.

The bank under 6 Vict. c. 27, s. 19, could not hold vessels for any purpose as security. McDonell v. Bank of Upper Canada, 7 U. C. R. 252.

And as a consequence no implied assumpsit can arise against them as ship owners, nor could any express promise be binding. Lyman v. Bank of Upper Canada, 8 U. C. R. 354.

Semble, they might take mortgages upon real estate to secure debts previously contracted. McDonell v. Bank of Upper Canada, 7 U. C. R. 252.

Held, that under 6 Vict. c. 27, s. 19, the bank may take mortrages upon real estate as collateral security, for sums advanced bona fide in the way of their business, and that such debts need not have been contracted previously, but the advance and the security may be contemporaneous acts. Commercial Bank v. Bank of Upper Canada, 7 Gr. 250, 423.

And, held, that all chartered banks have the same power. S. C., ib. 423.

It would be a question of fact for a jury

It would be a question of fact for a jury to determine whether the mortgage was in truth taken to secure the transaction on the bill or note discounted, or the bill created for the mere purpose of upholding and giving colour to, the mortgage. Ib.

A mortgage was created as collateral security for £2,800, debts then past due to one of the chartered banks, and also £1,000 then advanced by the bank to the mortgagor, who afterwards created a second mortgage to the bank for £750, and interest; which instrument expressly provided, that it and everything therein contained should be subject to the payment by the mortgagor of the amounts mentioned in the former mortgage:—Held, that the first mortgage was void as to the £1,000, but valid to secure the £2,800, notwith-standing that the notes held by the bank at the date of the mortgage had been retired by the discount of other paper from time to time; and also that the second mortgage was an existing security as to the £1,000, though void as to the £750 advanced at its execution.

One P, having agreed to build certain cars for the Grand Trunk R. W. Co., it was stipulated in the contract that the payments were to be made to the satisfaction of the Bank of Upper Canada, who were to act as receivers. On the 24th September, 1860, the bank and the railway company entered into an agreement reciting the contract, and that the bank had made large advances on account of it, and had agreed to advance the necessary sum to complete it and acquire the title to the cars. company then assigned all their interest in the agreement and cars to the bank, and the bank leased them back to the company for three years at a rent named, with a proviso that on payment of their debt to the bank, the cars should revert to the company. After this P, received moneys from the bank on account of the contracts:—Held, that the bank were not precluded by their charter from taking security upon them; and that they were entitled therefore as against an execution credi-tor of P. Bank of Upper Canada v. Killaly. 21 U. C. R. 9.

Held, that under 19 & 20 Vict. c. 127, s. 21, the bank had a right to purchase goods at a sheriff's sale other than on an execution at their own suit, if in that way they wished to acquire an outstanding claim or charge on the property of a debtor of the bank. Kinasanil v. Bank of Upper Canada, 13 C. P. 600.

A debtor of the late pretended Bank of Upper Canada at Kingston having called upon the bank commissioners to arbitrate under 10 Geo. IV. c. 7, an award was made for £900, to be paid in notes and other securities of the bank:—Held, that the debtor had a right to pay in notes for which no certificates had been issued pursuant to the Act. Dalton v. Mc-Nider, 5 Gr. 501.

K, was trustee for sale of certain lands belonging to M. Two parcels were subject to a mortgage to the bank for more than the value. The trustee agreed for the sale of these parcels to a purchaser; the bank, before becoming insolvent, assented to the sale, and received the first instalment of the purchase money. The purchaser went into possession, but made default; defendants were his assignees. By the trust deed which the bank executed on becoming insolvent (which deed was afterwards confirmed by statute), it was made the duty of the trustees to accept in payment of any debt due to the estate the notes or bills of the bank. On a bill by the trustees for payment, it was held that, as the money was coming to the bank, the trustees were bound to accept payment in the notes of the bank at par. Trustees of the Bank of Upper Canada v. Canadian Navigation Co., 16 Gr. 479.

Imperial Bank of Canada.]—The Imperial Bank of Canada, by virtue of its Act of incorporation, 36 Vict. c. 74 (1)., and the provisions of the Bank Act, 34 Vict. c. 5 (D.), has a right to purchase debentures of municipalities. Jones v. Imperial Bank of Canada, 23 Gr. 262.

Royal Ganadian Bank.]—Held, that the plaintiffs, a bunking institution, having stipulated for and retained, in discounting a more interest at a larger rate than seven the provisions of their Act of incorporation, 27 & 28 Vict. c. 85. s. 21, allowing them to charge the same rate after maturity that they had charged on discounting the note, supposing the original charge to have been not more than seven per cent., which was held to be the meaning of the Act; and that, therefore, the note bearing no rate of interest on its face, they were not entitled to more than six per cent, from its maturity. Royal Canadian Bank v. Shaue, 21 C. P. 455.

VII. WINDING-UP.

Appointment of Liquidators—Right to Appoint Another Bank.]—The Windingup Act provides that the shareholders and creditors of a company in liquidation shall severally meet and nominate persons who are to be appointed liquidators, and the Judge having the appointment shall choose the liquidators from among such nominees. In the case of the Bank of Liverpool the Judge appointed liquidators from among the nominees of the creditors, one of them being the defendant bank:—Held, affirming 22 N. S. Rep. 97, that there is nothing in the Act requiring both creditors and shareholders to be represented on the board of liquidators; that a bank may be appointed liquidator; and that if any apneal lies from the decision of the Judge in exercising his judgment as to the appointment, such discretion was wisely exercised in this case. Forsuthe v. Bank of Nova Scotia, In te Bank of Liverpool, 18 S. C. R. 707.

Liquidators' Commission on Set-off.]

—In fixing the liquidators' commission or compensation in the winding-up proceedings of an insolvent bank, it is proper to take into consideration amounts adjusted or set off, but not actually received by the liquidators; and in this case a commission of two and a quarter per cent. having been allowed on the gross amount of moneys actually collected, a further commission of one and a quarter per cent. on a sum of $231.000, consisting of amounts adjusted or set off was allowed. So far as possible, the amount allowed as compensation to liquidators in such winding-up proceedings should be evenly spread over the whole period of the liquidation, so as to ensure virilance and expedition at all stages of the liquidation, as well as a proper distribution among the liquidators, when more than one. In re Central Bank, Lye's Claim, 22 O. R. 241.

Money Paid Out of Court—Jurisdiction to Compel Repayment.]—The liquidators of an insolvent bank passed their final accounts, and paid a balance remaining in their hands into court. It appeared that by orders issued either through error or by inadvertence the balance so deposited had been paid out to a person who was not entitled to receive the money, and the receiver general for Canada, as trustee of the residue, intervened and applied for an order to have the money repaid in order to be disposed of under the provisions Winding-up Act. Held, affirming 24 A. R. 470, that the receiver general was entitled so to intervene, although the three years from the date of the deposit mentioned in the Winding-up Act had not expired :-Held, also, that even if he was not entitled to intervene, that even if he was not entitled to intervene, the provincial courts had jurisdiction to com-pel repayment into court of the moneys impel repayment into court of the moneys improperly paid out. Mogaboom v. Receiver General of Canada, In re Central Bank of Canada, 28 S. C. R. 192.

The judgments of the court of appeal and the supreme court in this case (24 A. R. of the supreme court in this case (24 A. R. 470, 28 S. C. R. 192), are conclusive on the point that the money repaid into court in this matter, pursuant to those judgments, was the property of the receiver general of Canada, under R. S. C. c. 129, s. 41, subject to the liability of paying it over to the persons critical thereto. In re-Central Bank of Canada, 30 O. R. 320.

Failure of Bank-Service of Process.]-Process was served upon A. as president of a bank; he having been elected in June, 1866, for one year. No election of president or directors had taken place since then, and A. in fact never resigned his office. In September, 1866, the bank suspended specie payments, and before sixty days thereafter assigned their property to trustees, and ceased to do business as a bank. It was provided by the charter that a suspension of specie payment for sixty days, or an excess of the debts of the bank by three times the paid up stock and deposits, &c., should operate as a forfeiture of the charter, &c. :-Held that the total annihilation of the bank was not contemplated by these provisions, and it did not follow from the loss of the charter that there must from the loss of the charter that there must be a dissolution for all purposes: that some formal process was still necessary finally to determine and put an end to all the functions of the corporation; that the bank was still a corporate body, liable to have its property sold or administered for the satisfaction of debts; and that A. must still be looked upon and that A. must still be looked upon as president; and an application to set aside the service upon him was discharged with costs. Mistake—Over-credit by Bank—Repay-ment. —The plaintiffs, under telegraphic in-structions from one of their branches, telephoned from the head office to one of their sub-agencies to credit the defendant with $2,000. The sub-agency, however, by some misunderstanding, credited him with $3,000, which he drew out. The $2,000 had been paid into the branch bank in the first instance by into the branch bank in the first instance by way of an advance on the shipping bills of certain cattle bought from the defendant for about $2,890, but of this the plaintiffs had no notice. The defendant, however, refused to repay the difference between the $2,000 and the price of the cattle, on the ground that in faith of the payment to him he had allowed them to be shipped abroad, which by his agreement for sale was not to be done till payment of the price in full:—Held, that the defendant was bound to repay the excess over the $2,000. Rank of Toronto y. Hamilton. the $2,000. Bank of Toronto v. Hamilton, 28 O. R. 51.

Proof of Foreign Law.]-The president of a bank in a foreign country, whose business it is to deal with money therein, though nors it is to deal with money therein, though not a lawyer, is an admissible witness to prove the law of that country as to what is money there. Third National Bank of Chicago v. Cosby, 43 U. C. R. 58.

Sale-Warranty.]-By the Bank Act, 34 Sale—Warranty.]—By the Bank Act, 53 (Vict. c. 5 (D.), banks are prohibited from buying and selling goods or merchandise:—Held, therefore, that an action would not lie against an incorporated bank for breach of warranty on the sale of a horse-power machine. Radford v. Merchants Bank, 3 O. R.

Savings Banks.]-Defendants associated themselves together to conduct a savings bank, but before they were organized under 4 & 5 Vict. c. 33, their treasurer received a deposit from B. of £75, which he swore was deposit from B. of £75, which he swore was made by B. with the express understanding that any person producing his pass-book should receive it. B. died, and this sum was afterwards paid to a connection of his, who presented the pass-book. The payment, it appeared, was made in pursuance of certain rules adopted by defendants, but which were not filed according to the statute for some months after:—Held, that defendants were liable to B.'s administrator for the money. Hunter v. Wallace, 14 U. C. R. 205.

Counsel Fees.]—Counsel in this Province have the right to maintain an action for their fees. McDougall v. Campbell, 41 U. C. R. 332.

Affirmed on appeal, 14 C. L. J. 213.

Defendant having presented a bill to the Senate for a divorce from his wife, the plaintiff was retained by the wife as counsel before the committee of the Senate to oppose the bill. The defendant being informed that he must pay from day to day into the committee the costs of his wife's defence, promised the plaintiff that if the plaintiff would not insist on defendant so paying his fees, he would pay them to the plaintiff when taxed. The committee having reported the preamble of the bill not proven, the wife applied to the Senate for a divorce and for mainteance, and retained the plaintiff to support such application: —Held, 1. The Senate could have no power to award alimony, and the plaintiff could not recover for his fees in promoting a bill for that purpose; 2. if counsel fees could not be recovered by a counsel from his client, the plaintiff here could not recover upon this express contract; 3. the count upon such express agreement, set out in the report, sufficiently shewed a right of action in the plaintiff against the defendant. S. C., 41 U. C. R. 332.

Counsel Fees.]—Note taken as security for counsel fees.—Right of action on. See Robertson v. Furness, 43 U. C. R. 143.

Counsel Fees.] — Barrister employed in attorney's office at a salary—Right to counsel fees. See Gordon v. Adams, 43 U. C. R. 203.
