Counsel Fees - Crown. |- The suppliant. an advocate of the Province of Quebec, and one of Her Majesty's counsel, was retained by the Government of Canada as one of the counsel for Great Britain before the Fishery Commission, which sat at Halifax pursuant to the Treaty of Washington. There was contradictory evidence as to the terms of the re-tainer, but the learned Judge in the exchequer tainer, but the learned Judge in the exenequer court found "that each of the counsel en-gaged was to receive a refresher equal to the retaining fee of $1,000, that they were to be at liberty to draw on a bank at Halifax for $1,000 a month during the sittings of the Commission, that the expenses of the suppliant and his family were to be paid, and that the and his faling were to be paid, and that he final amount of fees was to remain unsettled until after the award." The amount awarded by the commissioners was $5,500,000. The suppliant claimed $10,000 as his remuneration, in addition to $8,000 already received by him :-Held, per Fournier, Henry, and Tasch ereau, JJ., that the suppliant, under the agreement entered into with the Crown, was entitled to sue by petition of right for a reasonable sum in addition to the amount paid him, and that $8,000 awarded him in the exchequer court was a reasonable sum. Per Fournier, Henry, Taschereau, and Gwynne, JJ.: By the law of the Province of Quebec, counsel and and of the Produce of Quenes, commer and advocates can recover fees stipulated for by an express agreement. Per Fournier, and Henry, JJ.: By the law also of the Province of Ontario, counsel can recover such fees. Per Strong, J.: The terms of the agreement, as established by the evidence, shewed (in addition to an express agreement to pay the suppliant's expenses) only an honorary and gratuitous undertaking on the part of the Crown to give additional remuneration for fees beyond the amount of fees paid, which undertaking is not only no foundation for an action, but excludes any right of action as upon an implied contract to pay the reasonable value of the services rendered: and the suppliant could therefore recover only his expenses in addition to the amount so paid. Per Ritchie, C.J.: As the agreement between the suppliant and the Minister of Marine and the suppliant and the Minister of Marine and Fisheries, on behalf of Her Majesty, was made at Ottawa, in Ontario, for services to be per-formed at Halifax, in Nova Scotia, it was not subject to the law of Quebec: that in neither Ontario nor Nova Scotia could a bar-rister maintain an action for fees, and therefore that the petition would not lie. Regina v. Doutre, 6 S. C. R. 342.

Held, on appeal to the Privy Council, that in the absence of stipulation to the contrary, express or implied, the suppliant must be deemed to have been employed upon the usual terms according to which such services are readered, and that his status in respect both of right and remedy was not affected either by the lex loci contractus or the lex loci solutionis. S. C., 9 App. Cas. 745.

Per Gwynne, J.: By the Petition of Right

Per Gwynne, J.: By the Petition of Right Act, s. 8, the subject is denied any remedy against the Crown in any case in which he would not have been entitled to such remedy in England, under similar circumstances. By the laws in force there prior to 23 & 24 Vict. c. 34 (Imp.), counsel could not, at any time, in England, have enforced payment of counsel fees by the Crown, and therefore the suppliant should not recover. S. C., 6 S. C. R. 342.

in pagadon, and emored payment of compliant should not recover. S. C., 6 S. C. R. 342. Held, further, that the Petition of Right (Canada) Act, 1876, s. 19, s.-s. 3, does not in such case bar the remedy v. Brown, 13 C. B. N. S. commented upon. S. C., 9 App. Cas, 745.

Counsel Fees — Liability of Client to Caused.]—In this Province a counsel's right of action for his fees for services in the nature of advance, is against the client of the solicitor retaining him, and not against the solicitor, unless by special agreement, or when there is evidence of credit having been given to the solicitor lone, or of money in the solicitor's hands to answer the claim; and a solicitor so employing counsel has implied authority to pledge his client's credit for the payment of counsel fees. Armour v. Kitmer, 28 O. R. 618, Court of Revision.]—Right of counsel to be heard before courts of revision and all other courts. In re First Division Court of Elgin, 6 C. L. J. 295.

Division Court.]—No person except a barrister or attorney duly qualified, is entitled to prosecute or defend suits in the division courts. In re Judge of County of York, 31 U. C. R. 267.

Duty at Nisi Prius.]—Observations on the duty of counsel when dissatisfied with the ruling of a Judge at Nisi Prius. Parsons v. Queen Ins. Co., 43 U. C. R. 271.

English Barrister.]—To entitle an English barrister to practise at the bar of Her Majesty's courts in Ontario, he must be admitted to practise through the Law Society of the Province. In re De Sousa, 9 O. R. 39.

Giving Evidence.]—An attorney cannot act at the trial of the cause both as an advocate and a witness. Benedict v. Boulton, 4 U. C. R. 196.

Giving Evidence.]—Where a counsel, upon stating to a jury the facts he himself could prove, was reminded by the Judge that he could not act both as an advocate and a witness, and then immediately sat down, ceased to act as counsel, and gave evidence in the cause, the court refused to set aside the verdict. Cameron v. Forsyth, 4 U. C. R. 189.

Giving Evidence.]—Right to give evidence when acting as counsel. See Davis v. Canada Farmers' Mutual Ins. Co., 39 U. C. R, 452.

Insolvent Act.] — Practising barrister dealing largely in land transactions, but not deliwn to be dependent thereon for his living: —Held not a trader under the Insolvent Act. Joseph v. Haffner, 29 Gr. 421.

Law Society's Jurisdiction.]—Exercise of disciplinary jurisdiction by Law Society for professional misconduct. See Hands v. Law Society of Upper Canada, 16 O. R. 625, 17 O. R. 300, 17 A. R. 41.

Negligence.] — The plaintiff declared in contract against an attorney, for negligence

in conducting a suit for him against one P P. pleaded a set-off on a promissory note, yet defendant improperly denied the making of such note, whereas the plaintiff had paid it; and also, that although defendant had notice of this a reasonable time before the trial, and that the payment could be proved by two witnesses named, yet he neglected to subpena them, and took the case to trial without instructions; and also, that de-fendant did not instruct counsel to act for the plaintiff at the trial and inform him of the facts above mentioned, but acted as counsel himself, and neither applied for an amendment of the replication, nor suggested to the court that he could prove payment of the note, which he could have done, as the said witnesses were then there attending to other duties—wherefore the set-off was allowed. Defendant pleaded, as to so much of the declaration as alleged that he did not instruct counsel, but acted as such himself, that he was a barrister in Upper Canada, and that the plaintiff never objected to his so acting; and he demurred to so much as alleged that he did not while so acting apply to amend or offer to prove payment, on the ground that for his conduct as counsel no action would lie. Plaintiff denurred to the plea as no answer:—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to judgment, for the defendant by acting as counsel himself could not escape liability for producting as course. liability for neglecting as an attorney to give proper instructions. Leslie v. Ball, 22 U. C.

Quere, whether, considering the union of the profession in this Province, and the right of counsel in some cases to recover fees, the same exemption from liability can be claimed here as in England, even when the same person does not act in both capacities, Ib.

Queen's Counsel Presiding at Trial—Malicious Prosecution.]—Where, in an action on the case for a malicious prosecution, it was alleged in the declaration that the trial of the indictment took place before a court of over and terminer, and the indictment was at general gool delivery:—Held, that the variance was amendable, and that the trial of the indictment being through a Queen's counsel did not deprive the plaintiff of the right of action against the real prosecutor. Carr v. Proudfoot, E. T. 3 Vict.

Queen's Counsel—Precedence.]—A patent from the Crown appointing a barrister a Queen's counsel, directed that he should take precedence after another Queen's counsel, who was subsequently appointed attorney-general:—Held, that such patent did not then entitle him to precedence before the solicitor-general. In re Boulton, 1 U. C. R. 317.

Retaining Fee.]—No retaining fee will be allowed to a solicitor who is himself also counsel. In re McBride, Farley v. Davis, 2 Ch. Ch. 153.

Suspension — Domestic Tribunal — Procedure.]—In pursuance of statutory powers, the bar of Montreal suspended a practising advocate after holding an inquiry into charges against him which, however, had been withdrawn by the private prosecutor before the council had considered the matter. It did not appear that witnesses had been examined upon oath during the inquiry, and no notes in writing of the evidence of the witnesses had been taken, the effect of such absence of written notes being that the appellant had been deprived of an opportunity of effectively prosecuting an appeal to the general council of the bar of the Province of Quebec:—Held, affirming Q. R. 8 Q. B. 26, that the local council of the bar of Montreal had jurisdiction to proceed with the inquiry in the interest of the profession notwithstanding the withdrawal of the charge by the private prosecutor; that a complaint in any form suffi-cient to disclose charges against an advocate of improperly carrying on trade and commerce and unduly retaining the money of a client, contrary to the by-laws of the local section of the bar, is a matter over which the council of the bar had complete jurisdiction; and further, that the omission to preserve a complete record of the proceedings upon the inquiry held by the council, or to take written notes of the evidence of witnesses adduced, constituted mere irregularities in procedure which were insufficient to justify a writ of prohibition. Honan v. Bar of Montreal, 30 S. C. R. 1.

Unfair Conduct at Trial.]-A., a counsel at nisi prius, represented to B., another counsel, that a cause was undefended; B, thereupon took a brief from the plaintiff, and A. afterwards appeared for the defence and obtained a verdict. The court set aside the verdict for the want of good faith in defendant's counsel, and made him pay the costs of the application and trial. Hamilton v. Notman, T. T. 3 & 4 Vict.

BASTARD.

Affidavit of Affiliation-Form-Evidence of Filing.]—In an action for the maintenance of an illegitimate child, under C. S. U. C. c. 4, it appeared that the plaintiff was a married woman, and that the affidavit, filed by the mother, stated that the defendant was the father of such child, not "really the father," as required by the Act:—Held, 1. That the plaintiff could not sue, for it must be presumed that the necessaries furnished were her husband's; and that she must fail on never indebted, no plea in abatement being requisite. 2. That the omission in the affi-davit was fatal. A nonsuit was therefore ordered. The affidavit was produced from the office of the city clerk, and purported to be sworn before the police magistrate of Toronto, where she resided:—Held, sufficient evidence to go to the jury that it was deposited by her in the proper office. peared probable from the statement of the mother that she was liable to the plaintiff for the demand sued for:—Held, that the jury should have been told that if she was so liable, her unsupported testimony would not sustain the action. Jackson v. Kassel, 26 U. C. R. 341.

Custody.]-A mother, some months before her death, consigned her illegitimate child, ner death, consigned her lifegitimate child, seven years of age, whose reputed father was dead, to the custody of a Protestant institution, she being a Roman Catholic. Immediately before her death she signed a paper expressing her desire to have her child delivered up for nurture to a Roman Catholic institution: - Held, that the court had not power to compel the delivery up of the child, and that the express wish of the mother was no ground for interference. In re Smith, 8

Custody.]—It is in the discretion of the court to decide who shall have the custody of an illegitimate child; and the putative father, the mother being dead, is prima facie entitled to such custody as against the maternal grand-father, and where on application by the maternal grandfather against the putative father. it was sworn that the child had been entrusted to the grandfather's care by the mother before her death, and that it was taken from his custody by the father by improper means, but appeared that the arrangement made by the father for the maintenance of the child was one for the best interests of the child, the court refused to interfere with it. In re Brandon, 7 P. R. 347.

Review of the law relating to the custody of illegitimate children. Ib.

Custody.]-On a writ of habeas corpus to bring up an illegitimate child, issued for the bring up an inegitimate conditions and in section with a father, a Judge will not interfere where it is shewn that the father obtained the child by agreement with and by the assent of the mother, and not by force or fraud. In re Regina v. Arm-strong, 1 P. R. 6.

Custody.]-The mother of an illegitimate child is not entitled to all the rights of guardian for nurture; the mother differs from a stranger only in this, that during the period of nurture (under seven) the child may not be separated from the mother by force or fraud. But when she has abandoned the child, and others have adopted it, or if she has placed it under the protection of others, and afterwards claims it as its mother or guardian for nurture, the court will not recognize such claim as a legal right, but will refuse to interfere if the interests of the infant will thereby be best protected. In re Holeshed, 5 P. R. 251.

Custody—Necessaries.]—The father of an illegitimate child has the right to the custody illegitimate child has the right to the custony and care thereof, except as against the mother, who has the right against the father. O'Rourke v, Campbell, 13 O. R. 563,

To an action under R. S. O. 1877 c. 134, s. 1, by the plaintiff, the maternal grandmother of an illegitimate female child, for food, clothing, lodging, and other neces-saries, supplied to the child at the mother's request, the defendant set up as a defence that he demanded the child from the plaintiff and from the mother, and informed them that he would support the child, and had always been ready and willing to do so, and to furnish her with food, etc., yet the plaintiff and the said mother have refused, and still refuse to deliver up the child or allow the defendant to support her:—Held, on demurrer, that this constituted no answer to the action, Ib.

Damages for Death. |- Right of mother to recover damages against a railway com-pany for death of her illegitimate child occasioned by the construction of an overhead bridge. See Gibson v. Midland R. W. Co., 2 O. R. 658. Devise. —Devise to illegitimate child, who dies during lifetime of testator, leaving legitimate issue. See Hargraft v. Keegan, 10 O. p. 272

Evidence of Illegitimacy.]-Whenever it is sought to bastardise a child, if it only appear that the child may be the offspring of the mother's husband, or of another man, the law presumes in favour of legitimacy, and does not sanction a discriminating in-cuiry upon the subject. The presumption in and does not subject. The presumption in this case was sought to be negatived by proof of non-access. The facts adduced in evidence are fully given in the report:—Held, that evidence offered of general reputation of interrourse with some person other than the husband three months before marriage, was properly rejected. The husband committed suicide five months after the marriage:—Held, that proof of the report in the neighbourhood as to its cause was also properly rejected:—Held, also, that it was in the discretion of the Judge to refrain from committing the alleged father, who was examined as a witness, for contempt in not answering, because it was sought by questions put to him to elicit an admission of facts importing a scandal upon himself. Besides, the Judge thought him intoxicated, and unfit to give evidence at all. Evidence of the resemblance of the child to the alleged father, if relevant to the issue, is admissible, but can only become relevant after a sufficient foundation has been laid to raise suspicion; and held, that such foundation appeared to have been laid, and the evidence was therefore admissible. Doe d. Marr v. Marr, 3 C. P. 36.

Evidence of Illegitimacy.]—In an action for the seduction of the plaintiff's daughter it appeared by the evidence that defendant had had intercourse with her in January and up to June, 1860, but that she married one C. in October, 1860, and that the child was born on the 11th February, 1861. The plaintiff having obtained a verdict:—Held, that the child having been born in lawful wedlock the mother's evidence was inadmissible to prove it illegitimate, and a new trial was granted. Ryan v. Miller, 21 U. C. 202.

the monter's evidence was madmissible to prove it illegitimate, and a new trial was granted. Ryan v. Miller, 21 U. U. R. 202. At a second trial the fact that defendant was father of the child was attempted to be proved by his admissions, and the jury again found for the plaintiff:—Held, that the verdict was not supported by the admissions stated in the case, and semble, no evidence could be received to rebut the presumption of legitimacy, the evidence being consistent with the fact of access by the husband before marriage. 8. C., 22 U. C. R. 87.

Evidence of Illegitimacy—Declaration of Deceased,—In answer to a claim of heirship to one S., a witness, who had known him in England as a boy, before of Canada, alleged that S. had always been reputed to be illegitimate, and had been left by his mother on the parish, and that he had also known his reputed father, who bore a different surname. Another witness stated that S. had told him that one H. was his father, and that S. on his return from a visit to England said he had seen the place where his mother met with her misfortune:—Held, sufficient evidence of illegitimacy to displace the claim of heirship. In re Stavety, Attorney-General v. Brunsden, 24 O. R. 324.

Maintenance.]—An action will lie against the representatives of a deceased father for the maintenance of his illegitimate child during his lifetime, under C. S. U. C. c. 77, s. 4. Monokan v. Okc, 1 A. R. 268.

Procuring Woman to Make False Affidavit of Affiliation.]—Attempting to bargain with or procure a woman falsely to make the affidavit provided for by C. S. U. C. c. 77, s. 6, that A. is the father of her illegitimate child, is an indictable offence. The attempt proved consisted of a letter written by defendant, dated at Bradford, in the county of Simcoe, purporting but not proved to bear the Bradford post mark, and addressed to the woman at Toronto, where she received it:— Held, that the case could be tried in York. Regina v. Clement, 29 U. C. R. 297.

Costs.]—If there be two indorsers, and the holder bring several actions against them, he will be entitled to his full costs in only one suit, and his disbursements in the others. Shuter v. Dec, 1 U. C. R. 292.

Where the plaintiff sued separately the acceptor and indorser, and the acceptor paid the claim against him, but without the costs, and judgment was entered and execution issued against him for their amount and the costs of the suit against the indorsers, the execution was restrained to the costs against the acceptor alone. Gillespie v. Cameron, 3 U. C. R. 45.

A., at the assizes in Toronto, sues B. as one of the indorsers on two notes—one for £27, and the other for £76. A. recovers on the for £27, but having mislaid the note for £76, he enters a nolle prosequi as to that part of his claim. A. also brings another action in the district court of the Niagara district against C., the maker, and D., another of the indorsers, on the note for £27. On motion under 5 Will. IV. c. 1, to restrain plaintif from recovering more than the full costs of one suit:—Held, that the Act did not apply, Geddes v. Rogers, 5 U. C. R. 1.

Nor does it apply where one of the parties to the note not sued with the other, is at the commencement of the suit out of the jurisdiction. Bank of British North America v. Elliott, 6 L. J. 16.

Where separate actions were brought against the maker and indorsers of a note, and upon a demurrer to the replication judgment was given for defendants, and the plaintiffs made one application to amend in the three cases:— Held, that defendant was only entitled to the costs as for one case, in attending to oppose it:—Held, also, that as to the ordinary fee disbursed to counsel, to argue the demurrer in the three cases, and the ordinary taxable costs occasioned to defendant by the demurrer in each case, that they might be allowed to defendant. Bank of British North America v. Ainley, 7 U. C. R. 521.

Currency of Place of Contract.]—A note made here payable at a place in the United States, but not "not otherwise or elsewhere," is payable generally, and the law and currency of the place of contract must govern. Hooker v. Leslie, 27 U. C. R. 295.

Damages and Exchange on Foreign Bills. |—A foreign bill may be referred to the master for computation. Commercial Bank v. Allan, 5 O. S. 574.

Ter per cent. damages under 51 Geo. III. c. 9, s. 2. cannot be recovered on a foreign bill returned for non-acceptance, nor can reexchange, unless declared for specially; although postage may under a count for money paid. O'Neill v. Perrin, M. T. 3 Vict.

Under 51 Geo. III. c. 9, s. 2, the ten per cent. damages allowed on protested bills is not to be considered as a substitute for the difference of exchange, but is to be paid in addition to the sum paid for the bill, which would always include exchange. Nichols v. Raynes, 6 U. C. R. 273.

Where a bill is drawn in Upper Canada addressed to a resident there, and payable in England, ten per cent, on it can be collected under 12 Vict, c. 76. Ross v. Winans, 5 C. P. 185.

Six per cent. damages held chargeable upon a protested bill drawn and accepted in Upper Canada, payable in the United States, upon the authority of the above case. American Exchange Bank v. McMicken, 8 C. P. 59.

A note made in Upper Canada, payable in Glasgow, not adding, "and not otherwise or elsewhere," is payable generally; and the plaintiff cannot recover the difference of exchange on such note. Wilson v. Aitkin, 5 C. P. 376.

Under 12 Vict. c. 76, ten per cent. damages are recoverable on all bills drawn in Upper Canada on England, and protested for nonpayment. Royal Bank of Liverpool v. Whittemore, 16 U. C. R. 429.

Action on a sterling bill drawn by plaintiffs in London upon defendants in Upper Canada, accepted by defendants in London, (one of them being at the time in London) syayable in London:—Held, that the plaintiffs were entitled to recover the current rate of exchange. Greatorex v. Score, 6 L. J. 212.

A note made here, payable in New York, but not there only, is not within s. 3 of 12 Vict. c. 76, so as to entitle the holder to four per cent. damages on protest for nonpayment. Meyer v. Hutchinson, 16 U. C. R. 476.

In an action on a sterling bill, drawn by the plaintiffs in London upon the defendant living in Upper Canada, accepted in this Province payable in London, and returned to England—Held, that no damages could be recovered, as the bill could not be said to have been negotiated in Upper Canada, but only the value of the bill at 24s. 4d. to the pound sterling. Foster v. Bouces, 2 P. R. 256.

White v. Baker, 15 C. P. 292, followed as to the damages, in the shape of exchange, to which the holder of the bill is entitled against the acceptor. Stephens v. Berry, 15 C. P. 548.

Damages which may be claimed on nonpayment of a bill cannot be so claimed on its non-acceptance. Bank of Montreal v. Harrison, 4 P. R. 331.

Foreign Currency—Value at Time of Maturity,—On a note made and payable in Oxdensburg, N.Y., which matured on the 9th August, 1861, the Act of Congress making United States treasury notes a legal tender in the United States not having there become law until the 25th July, 1862:—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to the sum made payable by the note at the time it matured, without reference to the rate of exchange existing between this Province and the United States at the time of the trial. Judson v. Griffin, 13 C. P. 350.

Foreign Currency — Value at Time of Maturity—Pleading.]—To the first and second counts of a declaration on two notes, dated respectively 11th September and 29th November. 1860, for the respective sums of 8,560,24 and 838-835, payable six months after date, the defendant pleaded that the notes were sixued and entered into in the State of Illinois, one of the United States of America, to be paid when due in United States currency, and alleged a tender by defendant before action of $606,12 of lawful money of Canada, which was at the time last aforesaid equal to plaintiff's claim, and a refusal by plaintiff to accept same:—Held, on demurrer, plea bad; firstly, for alleging the amount tendered to have been equal to the plaintiff's claim on the day of tender, before action brought, instead of at the time of the maturity of the notes sued upon, with subsequent interest, &c.; and. secondly, for alleging that the amount tendered was equal to plaintiff's claim, instead of "equal in value to a certain sum of the currency of the United States," &c.; though, semble, this might be only ground of special demurrer. White v. Baker, 15 C. P. 202.

Interest.]—Interest made payable by a note is part of the debt, not merely damages for detaining it. Crouse v. Park, 3 U. C. R. 458.

Interest is recoverable on a note at the rate specified in it till payment. Howland v. Jennings, 11 C. P. 272.

And the jury should be directed, as a matter of law, to allow such rate when allowing interest in the nature of damages, from the maturity of the note to the entry of judgment. Montgomery v. Boucher, 14 C. P. 45.

The agreement between the parties fixes the rate of interest recoverable as damages, however exorbitant it may be. Young v. Fluke, 15 C. P. 360.

A loan of money was made for two months at two per cent. a month, at the expiration of which time it was contemplated a new arrangement would be made. After the two months, no other arrangement having been effected, the court held the lender entitled to claim interest at the rate originally agreed upon, and to sell the notes held by him as security to repay himself the amount of his claim; subject only to the question whether he had sold the notes for the best price that could be obtained for them, and as to which the court directed an inquiry before the master. O'Connor v. Clarke, 18 Gr. 422.

Though interest does not usually run until demand made upon such a note, yet where payments have been made on account the jury should presume that they were made in consequence of a demand, and interest on the balance will then accrue. Hard v. Palmer, 21 U. C. R. 49.

Interest at the rate allowed by our law is chargeable upon a note dated and made payable in the United States. Griffin v. Judson, 12 C. P. 430.

Where a day is named for payment of a note with interest at a rate specified, a claim for interest after that day is a claim for damages for breach of the contract, not as upon an implied contract, and is in the discretion of the court or jury. Dalby v. Humphrey, 37 U. C. R. 51.

Where a note was made, in British Columbia, payable 150 days after date, with Interest at two per cent. a month, the court, under the circumstances stated in the case, allowed only six per cent. after maturity. Ib.

Note made and payable in New York, discounted here:—Held, to be a Canada contract, and governed by our law as to interest. Cloyes v. Chapman, 27 C. P. 22.

Interest Post Diem.]—A note dated 11th January, 1802, payable to and indorsed by one S. H., was for $3,000, with interest at the rate of two per cent, per month until paid. By a covenant for payment contained in a mortzage deed of the same date, given by the defendant to the plaintiff as a collateral security for the payment of this note, the defendant covenanted to pay "the said sum of $3,000 on the 11th July, 1862, with interest thereon at the rate of twenty-four per cent, per annum until paid." A judgment was recovered upon the note, but not upon the covenant. The master allowed for interest in respect of this debt six per cent, only from the date of the recovery of the judgment:—Held, that the proper construction of the terms of both the note and the covenant as to payment of interest was that interest at the rate of twenty-four per cent, should be paid up to the 11th July, 1862, and not that interest should be paid at that rate after such day if the principal should then remain unpaid, $t. dohn v. Rykert, 26 Gr. 249, 4 A. R. 213, 10 S. C. R. 278.

A promissory note was dishonoured at maturity, but was not protested by the holders (a banking corporation) because of a waiver by the indorsers of presentment and notice:—Held, that the indorsers were not liable to pay interest thereon as a debt. Nor could a contract to pay interest be deduced from a usage of banks to charge interest on overdue debts, and to collect it if possible. Semble, the indorsers would be liable to pay interest as damages for breach of their contract. Re McDougall, 12 A. R. 265.

2. Evidence and Onus of Proof.

Absconding Debtor. |—In an undefended action against an absconding debtor (the maker of a note) the plaintiffs, A., P. & A., proved the handwriting of the defendant, but could not shew that J. W. P. & Co., the parties to whom the note was made payable, were the three plaintiffs in the suit. A verdict was taken subject to the opinion of the court as to this point:—Held, that in the absence of any cause shewn by defendant the debt was sufficiently proved to satisfy 8. 7 of the Absconding Debtors' Act, 2 Will, IV. c. 5. Appleton v. Duger, 4 U. C. R. 247.

Admissions.]—The admissions of the holder of an overdue note are admissible, without calling him, against a person suing upon the note, to whom he has subsequently transferred it. Myers v. Cornell, 2 U. C. R. 279.

Admissions.]—Defendant, sued as maker of a note by the indorser, had before the indorsement admitted his making to the plaintiff, and induced the plaintiff to take it:—Held, that the subscribing witness need not be called, as defendant was estopped. Perry v. Lawless, 5 U. C. R. 514.

Admissions.] — Defendant made a note payable to T. or bearer. T. died before it matured. His widow married one P., and they sold the note to G., who transferred it to the plaintiff. One D. administered to T.'s estate, and took proceedings against P. and his wife to recover the assets. A bill was flied by defendant to restrain this action, and in his answer the plaintiff swore that in consequence of the difficulties with the administrator, he had returned the note to G. before this action. The plaintiff and returned of this action. The plaintiff attorney swore, on the other side, that both the plaintiff and G. instructed the suit, and the plaintiff and G. instructed the suit, and the plaintiff and Recognized it, saying that he was indemnified by G.:—Held, I. That the plaintiff's answer in chancery, though very strong evidence, was not conclusive: 2. That admissions by G. were improperly rejected, he being, according to the plaintiff's statement, the person on whose immediate behalf the action was brought: 3. That upon the evidence the plaintiff should have been found to be the holder. Ancona v. Marks, 7 H. & N. 68%, distinguished. Contes v. Ketty, 27 U. C. R. 284.

Bona Fides.]—Where the indorser indorsed the note while in blank, there being no maker's name attached to it, nor any sum nor payee expressed in it, and it appeared that the name of the maker was afterwards signed without authority:—Held, that the indorsee suing must shew himself a bona fide holder for value. Hanscome v. Cotton, 15 U. C. R. 42.

Bona Fides.]—In an action by indorsee against maker and indorser, a verdict was found in favour of the maker, on the ground that his name had been signed to the note without authority, and against the indorser; and a new trial was granted as to the indorser only:—Held, that the jury at such trial were rightly directed that the fact of the maker's name having been used without authority was a fact material for them to consider in connection with other evidence offered to shew that the plaintiff took the note with knowledge of the circumstances. Hanscome v. Cotton, 16 U. C. R. 98.

Cancellation of Signature.]—Where an indorsee suing the indorser upon a note produces it at the trial from his own custody, with defendant's indorsement thereon, cancelled, not as if by any accident, but in the most unequivocal manner, some explanation must be given the jury for rejecting the inference that the note had been satisfied by defendant whose name is thus cancelled. Peel v. Kingsmill, 7 U. C. R. 364.

Cheque Not Evidence of Money Lent. |—The production of a cheque is not even prima facie evidence of money lent by the drawer. Foster v. Fraser, M. T. 4 Vict.

Compounding Felony.]—To support a plea that a note was given in consideration of forbearance to proceed in a prosecution for felony, the particular nature of the charge should be proved. Henry v. Little, 11 U. C. R. 200.

Consideration.]—In an action on a note, where defendant pleads no consideration, upon which issue is joined, the defendant must impeach the consideration; the plaintiff need not prove it in the first instance. Sutherland v. Patterson, M. T. 6 Vict.

Consideration.]—Parol evidence is admissible to deny the receipt of value for a bill or note, but not to vary the engagement to pay. Davis v. McSherry, 7 U. C. R. 490.

Consideration.]—Where in an action on a note payable to Λ_n , it was proved that B. indersed it, and then brought it to Λ_n , who indersed it merely for accommodation, never having received any value for it:—Held, that want of consideration could not on these facts, be inferred, as between the maker and B, and that the plaintiff was not obliged to prove the consideration. Mair v. MeLean, 1 U. C. R. 455.

Consideration. |—Indorsee against maker and tirst and third indorsers of a note. The third indorser let judgment go by default, Flea, by maker and first indorser, that the note was made and indorsed by defendants, esting out the circumstances, owing to which, before the note was indorsed by the plaintiff, and before suit, the defendant, by agreement with R. G. and O. G. (the second and third indorsers), made, and indorsed and delivered to them another note, which was accepted in full satisfaction and discharge of the note seed upon but which note remained in the lands of the said R. G. and O. G. without the fault of the defendants—with an averment that there never was any value or consideration for the indorsement by the said R. G. and O. G. to the plaintiff. Replication, that the plaintiff took the note for a good and and consideration, and became and is the lodder thereof in good faith:—Held, that on this the introductory facts were admitted, and the proof of consideration lay on the plaintiff. Maulson v. Arrol, 11 U. C. R. S1.

Denial of Indorsement.]—Admissibility of evidence as to circumstances connected with the indorsement where the indorser denies his indorsement. See Bank of Hamilton v. Isaacs, 16 O. R. 450.

Discovery.]—Where several persons severally liable on a note or bill are jointly sued ri law by the holder, out of the defendants in the action at law cannot obtain discovery against the plantiff at law and the other defendants; the defendants as between themselves not being littating parties, but witnesses; a bill filled for the purpose is demurable. Handlon v. Phipps, 7 Gr. 482.

Estoppel. —Quere, as to how far an inderser is estopped from denying the maker's signature. Hanscome v. Cotton, 16 U. C. R. 98.

Estoppel. —In an action against the inderser of a note, it appeared that his name had been written by the maker, his nephew, and there was no evidence of express authority but it was proved that defendant had before and afterwards indorsed for his nephew on purbases by him from these plaintiffs, and that when payment of this note was demandel from him be had asked for time, and had not denied his indorsement until some Filing Note Before Verdict.]—In an action on a note, where the making of the note is admitted, for instance by a plea of payment, quere, whether the plaintiff must produce and file the note before having his verdict recorded.

Mulholland v. Mortey, 7 L. J. 323.

Filing and Serving Copy of Note.]—
Where the holder of a note proceeds under 5
Wm, IV. c. 1, he must prove at the trial that copies of the note were annexed to the declarations filed and served. Malloch v. Norton, M. T. 2 Vict.

Joint Liability—Evidence—Interest.]—
Plainiffs sued W. upon two promissory notes signed by T. E. and W. The notes were dated at Halifax and were made payable to plainiffs order in Boston, United States. The notes were unstamped, but before action brought double stamps were affixed, and no contract as to interest appeared on the face of the contract of the state of the contract of the contrac Mistake in Date.]—Where a note is declared on, an error in its date when given in a bill of particulars is immaterial. Barney v. Simpson, 6 O. S. 96.

Marksman.]—See Hand v. Agnew, 32 U. C. R. 559.

Notice to Produce.)—Before parol or secondary evidence can be given of a note being received by the plaintiffs in satisfaction of claim for work done, defendant must prove notice to the plaintiff to produce the note. Heward v. McDougall, 3 O. S. 647.

Notice to Produce.]—The plaintiff, in opening the case, stated that the notes were left by plaintiff with defendant as security, and had been given up by him to the makers improperly, before any demand on defendant or refusal by him to return them:—Held, that no notice to defendant to produce was necessary; and that the plaintiff was entitled to prove the contents of the notes without laving any foundation for secondary evidence. Tilly v. Fisher, 10 U. C. R. 32.

Notice to Produce.]—Where to an action on a note against the makers, defendants pleaded fraud:—Held, that the note must be proved, and that, as defendants had given no notice to produce, and it was not shewn that the plaintiffs or their attorney had the note in court, the defence could not be gone into, Bank of Montreal v. Snyder, 18 U. C. R. 492.

Parol Agreement.]—The terms of a note cannot be varied by parol agreement. Harper v. Paterson, 14 C. P. 538.

Parties as Witnesses.]—The notes of cases relating to the competency of parties to bills and notes as witnesses in suits upon such instruments, are omitted, as 3.3 a. no person is now excluded from factors, 2.3 a. no person is now excluded from factors, 2.3 a. no person is now excluded from factors, which was a superson of interest. Particulars.]—A note declared on need not be mentioned in a bill of particulars. Street v. Cameron, H. T. 2 Viet.

Pleading. —In assumpsit for goods sold and delivered, the defendant pleaded that he made his note to the plaintiffs for part, and paid the note when due; and the plaintifs replied, that when the note became due the defendant only paid part, to wit, 293, in money, and gave an acceptance on A. for the residue £50, which was dishonoured when due, of which due notice was given, concluding with a special traverse; and the defendant reiterated the defence in the plea:—Held, that he could not on the trial show that the plaintiffs had made the £50 acceptance their own through laches, but was bound to shew actual payment. Ross v. McKindsay, 1 U. C. R. 507.

Pleading.]—Semble, that under the pleas it his case, given in the report, the concellation of the first note, by the substitution of the second, could not be given in evidence. Curillier, Frascr, 5, U.C. R. 152.

Pleading.]—Declaration by the holder of a note payable to A. B. or bearer, against the maker. Plea, that A. B. and others in collusion with him, obtained the note declared upon by fraud, &c.;—Held, that evidence was properly rejected that the original note for which the note sued upon had been substituted, had been fraudulently obtained from the testator, (the executor having given the note sued upon), by a party who had no connection with the note in suit. Dougall v. Post, 5 U. C. R. 554.

Pleading.]—Action upon a note made by defendant payable to non M., and indorsed by M. to the plaintiffs. Third plea, that the note was made for the accommodation of M., and before suit was paid by M. to the plaintiffs. At the trial it appeared that defendant made the note for M.'s accommodation, of which the plaintiffs were aware, and that there was an agreement between the plaintiffs and M. to which defendant was not a party, and by which, if on a final settlement of accounts the plaintiffs were indebted to M., such balance bould be applied first in liquidation of this and other notes, and in the event of a loss, it was to be borne pro rath by the several indorsers. It also appeared that there had been a settlement between M, and the plaintiffs, signed by them, by which M, was found to be indebted in a large sum; but M, in his evidence stated that he had not got credit in the balance for some of his timber taken by plaintiffs. Defendant offered evidence to prove that under the accounts between M, and the plaintiffs there was a balance due to M, which under the agreement referred to would shew this note to be paid by M. Per Morrison, J.—Such evidence was properly rejected, and could not be given under the plea of payment by M, but the agreement and facts relied on should have been pleaded specially. Per Wilson, J.—The evidence was admissible, and it was competent to defendant to open up the account between M, and the plaintiffs. Rocket v, Kempt, 33 U. U. R. 387.

Proof of "No Funds," |—In an action upon an overdue promissory note payable at a particular place, it is not necessary to shew that there were not funds at the place named wherewith to retire the bill; all that is necessary in such case, even as against an indorser, is to shew presentment, non-payament, and notice of dishonour. McDonald v, McArthur, 8 A. R. 553.

Signature.]—In assumpsit to recover the amount of a note, the declaration contained the common money counts only. Judgment having gone by default, the plaintiffs, on assessing damages, proved that a copy of the note was attached to the declaration fisled, and to the copy sent to the sheriff to be served, without sproving defendants signature:—
Held, sufficient under 5 Wm, IV, c. 1. Suxon v, McFartane, 5. O. 8, 142.

Value of American Currency.]—It is not necessary in an action on a note, due and payable in the United States, to prove the value of dollars and cents in the States, we laving a corresponding currency, and no par value for the American currency being fixed by law. Ciriffin v. Judson, 12 C. P. 430.

Weight of Evidence.]—Where in an action against the maker of a note, the plaintiff the property of the propert

3. Loss of Instrument.

Pleading.]—Payee against maker. Plea. loss of the note by plaintiff before suit, and that he hath been and is unable to produce the same. Replication, denying the loss only:— Held, good. Campbell v. McCrea, 11 U. C. R. 93.

Promise to Pay.]—Where the plaintiffs declared against the drawer of a lost bill payable to plaintiff's order, on a promise to pay it, but did not state any new consideration for the promise, nor allege that the bill was mindorsed at the time of the loss, the declaration was held had on general demurrer. Russell v. McDonald, 1 U. C. R. 296.

Secondary Evidence.] - Where a note had been indorsed to an attorney's clerk in the course of business, and mislaid:—Held, that secondary evidence of it could not be given, without calling the clerk, although the attorney was called and swore to his belief of its loss. Grove v. Clarke, 5 O. S. 208.

Security-Judgment by Default.]-Where Security—Judgment by Default.]—Where in a suit to enforce payment of promissory notes that had been lost, after maturity, the defendant allowed the bill to be taken pro-confesso, and omitted to make any demand for security against the notes, the court made a decree for payment without requiring the plaintiff to give security. Abell v. Morrison, Suing on the Original Considera-tion. The object of s. 292, C. L. P. Act, 1856, is to aid a bill holder and to prevent the loss of it being set up as a defence when the holder is prepared to give ample security; but when the plaintiff declares on the original consideration, and not on the bill, the case is not within the enactment. J. H. v. G. B., 4 L.

Tender of Indemnity.]-A person suing on a lost note should, before action, tender an indemnity to the maker. If he neglect this, it will be at the risk of costs to defendant. ques Cartier Banque v. Strachan, 5 P. R.

4. Pleading.

The statement in a declaration that a promissory note was duly presented and dis honoured, is a sufficient averment of non-payment as against the maker, and probably as against the indorser also. Sed quære. Nimmo v. Flanigan, 3 L. J. S.

To an action on a note, defendant pleaded To an action on a note, detendant pleaded that it was given on agreement by plaintiff to pay one M. a certain sum, which he had not done:—Held, that such defence was not divisible, and that as the note was not given wholly on such consideration the plaintiff must fail altogether. Matthewson v. Car-man, 1 U. C. R. 266.

Where the plaintiff declared against the drawer of a lost bill payable to plaintiff's order, on a promise to pay it, but did not state any new consideration for the promise, nor allege that the bill was unindorsed at the time of the loss, the declaration was held bad on general demurrer. Russell v. McDonald, 1 U. C. R. 296.

A replication to a plea stating that a bill of exchange had been taken "in full satisfaction and at all hazards" by the plaintiff, that the bill was dishonoured when due, is bad on general denurrer. Goldie v. Maxwell, 1 U. C. R. 495.

A declaration on a note payable to bearer, need not aver that the note was "assigned over" and delivered to the plaintiff. Duggan v. Borland, 5 O. S. 461.

Where in an action against the maker and inderser, under 5 Will, IV. c. 1, and 3 Vict. c. 8, the plaintiff declared in the form given by the later statute, but did not aver present-ment and notice:—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to judgment against the maker, and the indorser to judgment against him. Small v. Rogers, 5 O. S. 476.

Declaration against makers and indorsers of a note under 3 Vict. c. S. with no allegation of time to the indorsement:—Held, insufficient. Grant v. Eyre, 2 U. C. R. 426.

Due notice must be averred. Commercial Bank v. Cameron, 3 U.C. R. 363.

The rule making the plea of non-assumpsit to a bill or note bad, is confined to cases where the action is between the parties to the bill or note; it does not extend to executors, &c. Masson v. Hill, 5 U. C. R. 60.

The plaintiff sues the executors of the inderser of a note which had not become due till after the decease of the testator, averring due weight to the avectors of disheaver and the weight of the avectors of disheaver.

due notice to the executors of dishonour, and then stating that by reason thereof they be-came liable to pay the note, and being so liable, they afterwards, as executors, promised liable, they afterwards, as executors, promised to pay on request. Plen, as to so much of the declaration as alleges that they promised to pay the plaintiff, &c., that they did not promise, &c:—Held, bad as raising an immaterial issue, their promise to pay being implied from the facts averred in the declaration, and not denied in the plea. Ib.

Declaration, payee against the maker of a note for £50, dated 24th December, 1844, payable three months after date. Plea, as to £24 parcel, &c., accord and satisfaction, by deparcel, &C., accord and satisfaction, by defendant accepting an order on the 6th March, 1847, in favour of J. C. S. as required by plaintiff; and as to the residue, a set-off:—Held, plea bad; 1. in leaving unanswered the plaintiff's claim for damages for nonpayment of the amount for which the order was given, during the two years and more which had elapsed between the maturity of the note and the time of giving the order; and, 2. in not giving at length the Christian names of J. C. S., or stating that he was so described in the order. Playter v. Turner, 5 U. C. R.

Plea, that in consideration of certain notes I rea, that in consideration or certain notes of a certain party being deposited with the plaintiff as a security, the plaintiff agreed not to sue upon this note until the others should become due:—Held, upon general demurrer, plea bad. Durand v. Stevenson, 5 U. C. R.

Declaration on a note for £100, claiming £200 damages for non-payment. Plea, as if to the whole cause of action, a defence applicable to the £100 and not to the £200 damages; _Held, bad. Clapp v. Murdoff, 5 U. C. R.

Where in an action against maker and the Where in an action against maker and the indorsers, under the statute, the defences clash, or the facts set up are not equally a defence to all the parties, they should plead separately: therefore, a plea by all the defendants that there was no consideration for the making of the note, nor for the respective indorsements, nor either of them, and that plaintiff holds the note without any consideration or value, is bad. Hauke v. Salt, 3 C. P. 97. Traverse by maker and indorser of due notice as alleged in two counts on separate notes:—Held, good on special demurrer, being distributive. Tompkins v. Scott, 9 U. C. R.

In declaring upon a note made payable to and indorsed by a firm, it is necessary to aver that the maker promised to pay "to certain persons, using the name and style of," &c., and then that the said persons so using the name and style, &c., did by such name and style, &c., indorse, Moffatt v. Vance, 7 U. C. R. 142; City Bank of Montreal v. Eccles, 5 U. C. R. 508; Gooderham v. Garden, 12 U. C. R. 521.

Wherever, in pleading, one Christian name shall be given to a party in full, with a capital letter before or after it, besides the surmame, the court will not assume that the party so described has anything more of a name than is given to him, and this without distinction between vowels and consonants. C. R. 145. The plaintiffs declare against drawer and acceptors of a bill under £100. The acceptors sign as parties jointly liable. An averment that the parties became jointly and severally liable:—Held, bad. Ib.

It is not necessary, after stating the defendant's promise, to aver his legal liability to pay the bill or note to the plaintiff. Acheson v. McKenzie, 4 U. C. R. 230.

A payee or indorsee declaring upon a note against the maker, need not aver any express promise in addition to that set forth as in the note itself, nor any liability to pay. Whitney v. Woods, 5 U. C. R. 572.

Declaration against maker and indorser of a note, under 3 Vict. c. S. stating "whereby the defendants became liable," &c.:—Held, bad on special demurrer, in not alleging, according to the form in the Act, a joint and several liability. Nordheimer v. O'Reilly, 6 U. C. R. 413.

In an action by indorsees against indorsers, the declaration need not aver that defendants promised to pay. Ib. But see Aitkin v. Leonard, 11 U. C. R. 98.

If the party sued be the executor of the inderser, and the note has become due after the death of his testator, a promise to pay by the executor must be stated. Bank of British North America v. Jones, 7 U. C. R. 166.

Averment of liability—Joint and several makers and indorsers—Special demurrer—Declaration held sufficient. Gibb v. Dempsey, 3 C. P. 437.

In an action against maker and indorser of a note it is unnecessary to aver a joint liability. Chapman v. Dubrey, 21 U. C. R. 244.

In declaring on a note drawn in a foreign language, it is not necessary to declare in such language, and where a foreign word is used, its meaning in English may be averred without any introductory statement. Gibb v. Morisette, 4 U. C. R. 205. The indorsee declares against the maker,

The indorsee declares against the maker, "for that the defendant made his note and thereby promised to pay B. or order the sun of two hundred louis current money, meaning thereby the sum of two hundred pounds of lawful money of Canada:"—Held, on demurrer for unwarrantably extending the meaning of the word "louis," that the declaration was good. Ib.

It is no ground of demurrer that a declaration upon a bill or note does not conform to the new rules, if it be otherwise good in itself. Acheson v. McKenzic, 4 U. C. R. 230.

A. makes a note, payable to his own order—B. sues him as indorsee, claiming by indorsement of A. made subsequent to the note:—Held, bad on special demurrer. Brown v. Skaver. 5 U. C. R. 621.

Averment that note duly presented held to mean within a reasonable time. Hall v. Francis, 4 C. P. 210.

In an action on a note payable to plaintiff or bearer, brought in the name of the plaintiff, under the Division Courts Act, s. 152, by a person who had obtained execution against him in that court, defendants pleaded, among other pleas, that the plaintiff was not the legal holder. It appeared that the note had been seized by the bailiff in the hands of one T., to whom the plaintiff had handed it for collection:—Held, that it was not indispensively the second of the collection of the collection

In averring the making or indorsement of a note it is sufficient to describe the party by the initials of his Christian names, without alleging that the making or indorsement was by such initials. Andrews v. Talbot, 13 U. C. R. 188.

Where a note not signed by any one was indexed by defendant, and delivered by him to the plaintiff, upon condition that A. and B. should sign it as makers, and it was signed only by C. —Held, that these facts might be shewn by defendant under a plea denying his indorsement. Austin v. Farmer, 30 U.C. B.

Where plaintiff, the holder of a note made by one defendant and indorsed by the other, sued both in one action, under C. S. U. C. c. 42, s. 23, and at the same time declared from money paid and on account stated, the latter counts on defendants' application were struck out. Biggar v. Scott, 3 P. R. 268.

Isochration on a note alleged to have been made by the defendants under the name of A. R. & Co. Plen by A. B., that he did not make. Hearrer, that defendants being sued as joint makers, it is no answer for one of them to say that he did not make the note:—Held, plen clearly good. City Bank v. Kellar, 2 C. P. 508.

A, the indorsee, sues B. the indorser, alleging that after the note became due, to wit, on, &c. B. indorsed to A. There was no averment of presentment or of notice. B. plended that he did not indorse as alleged:—Held, that under this plea the indorsement only, and not the time, was in issue;—Held, also, that the note being indorsed when over due was no excuse for non-presentment, and so the declaration shewed no cause of action; but, nevertheless, as the plaintiff had been nonsuited for not proving the time of indorsement, the nonsuit must be set aside. The court, however, in such a case, may grant a new trial without costs, and allow the plaintiff to amend. Davis v. Dunn, 6 U. C. R. 37.

Declaration against maker, payee, and second indorser of a note. Plea by the payee as second indorser, that they did not indorse it in manner and form:—Held, bad, on special denurrer. Rossin v. White, 12 U. C. R. 634.

Declaration against L. and A. as indorsers of a note payable to the order of L., averring that defendants duly indorsed said note, and that A. delivered it so indorsed to plaintiff:—Held, on demurrer, that A. must be taken to be the immediate indorsee of L., and could not deny L.'s indorsement. Griffin v. Latimer, 15 U. C. R. 187.

Where on an assessment of damages on a note stated in the declaration to be for £40, a note for £42 was proved, an amendment was refused, but a verdiet allowed for the note as set out. Bank of Upper Canada v. Crauford, 4, O. S. 301.

Where a foreign bill had been so declared upon as not to shew it to have been a foreign bill:—Held, not a variance upon which a nonsuit could be granted. Boyes v. Joseph, 7 U. C. R. 505.

Plaintiff declared against defendant as maker of a note, and produced at the trial a bill of exchange drawn by defendant, and indersed to plaintiff:—Held, not amendable under 7 Will. IV. c. 3. Vizard v. Gilchrist, 13 U. C. R. 695.

To an action on a note against two defendants usury was set up, the plea being that plaintiff lent defendants 2200, payable in a reach of the theoretic for (250) was given used to the defendant only, and that the loan was to the defendant only, and that the other size of the defendant only, and that the other to the surfous contract:—Held, and was no next to the surfous contract:—Held, a fatal variance. Fartey v, Gibert, 1, 1 et. C. R. 147.

After motion to arrest judgment on a note, which as declared on was not negotiable, there having been no defence at the trial, the plaintiff was allowed to amend on payment of costs. Martin v. Wilber, 9 C. P. 75.

Declaration on a note payable to G. or order. Plea, non fecit. The note when produced was payable to G. or order, "for the use of M.:"—Held, no variance, for it was declared on according to its legal effect. Munro v. Cos., 30 U. C. R. 363.

To an action on a cheque by the bearer against the maker, defendant pleaded that the cheque was given to one B., who had always been the lawful bearen to see B., who had always been the lawful bearen the see that the plaintiffs held the same as his agents; that it was given for bills of exchange drawn by B. on H. & Co., and since overdue and dishonour-ed, whereof B. had notice; that the cheque was held by plaintiffs as B.'s agents, and B. was liable to pay defendant, as drawer of said bills, the amount of said cheque, and defendant of fered to set off the same;—Held, on demurrer, plea bad, for not alleging that the bills were dishonourd before the commencement of this suit. Wood v. Stevenson, 16 U. C. R. 527.

To an action on a bill of exchange by a remote indorsee, alleging the prior indorsements against the drawer and acceptor, the latter being under terms to plend issuably, pleaded that he was induced to accept by the fraud, covin, and misrepresentation of the drawer and indorsers, and without any consideration or value being given to him for his acceptance, and that the last indorser indorsed to the plaintiffs without any consideration or value being given by the plaintiffs to said indorser. The plaintiffs signed judgment, treating the plea as not issuable, and on application in chambers, which was supported by an affidavit of merits, the judgment was set aside for irregularity with costs, the learned Judge holding the plea to be issuable. The plaintiff then moved to rescind this order. The court refused to interfere, because, as merits had been sworn to in chambers, it was right at all events to relieve defendants from the judgment, and the only question was therefore one of costs. Quare, whether the plea was issuable or not. Bank of Montreal v. Cameron, 17 U. C. R. 46.

To displace a defence to a note by shewing the lex loci contractus is different from the law of our courts, such foreign law must be replied and set out on the record. Hope v. Caldwell, 21 C. P. 241.

Per Wilson, J., the plea in this case, setting up that the note sued on was given in Quebec for services to be rendered by the payees as attorneys, was bad for not alleging that the note, under the facts stated, was void by the law of Quebec, by which the validity of the note must be decided. Robertson v. Caldwell, 31 U. C. R. 402.

5. Practice and Procedure Generally.

Action After Banking Hours on Last Day of Grace. —An inderse of a note ney-able at a bank, having taken it there or the last day of grace, arrested defendant at five o'clock on the same day:—Held, not too soon. Semble, that under 14 & 15 Vict. c. 94, s. 1, he would have been also entitled to sue at any time after three o'clock, had the note been payable generally. Sinclair v. Robson, 16 U. C. R. 211.

Action Before Expiration of Days of Grace.]—Declaration, that the defendant on the 9th March made his note payable to the plaintiffs, six months after date, which period had elapsed before this suit. In the commencement of the declaration the writ was stated to have been issued on the 10th September:—Held, on denurrer, declaration bad, for it appeared that the action had been commenced before the days of grace had expired. Hill v. Lott, 13 U. C. R. 463.

Counterclaim.] — Upon an application under Rule 127 (b), O. J. Act, a counter-claim for libel and slander against the plaintiffs in an action on a promissory note was struck out. Gentral Bank of Canada v. Osborne, 12 P. R. 160.

Foreign Note.]—A note made in Albany, U. S., may be declared on under the common counts, under the statute of Anne. Kirk v. Tannahill, Tay, 619.

Forum.]—A note payable in the United States, in American currency, and all the parties to which reside in this country, may be sued upon here. Greenwood v. Folcy. 22 C. P. 352. Followed in Third National Bank of Chicago v. Cosby. 43 U. C. R. 58.

Frivolous Demurrers.] — For instances of frivolous demurrers in actions on bills or notes, see Bank of Montreal v. Hopkirk, 1 U. C. R. 418; Commercial Bank v. Denucoodie, 1 C. L. Ch. 32; Bank of Montreal v. Down. 1 C. L. Ch. 37; Milburn v. Smith, 1 C. L. Ch. 54; Ward v. Street, 1 C. L. Ch. 172; Parker v. Clark, 1 P. R. 133.

Holder Using Payee's Name.]—Where a person in possession of a note sued in the name of the payee, the court refused to set aside the proceedings after judgment, upon an affidavit by the supposed payee that he had never possessed such a note, the defendant at the same time not swearing that he had never given such a note. Taylor v. Rausson, Tay. 481.

Joinder of Parties.]—Quare, whether C. S. U. C. c. 42, ss. 23, 28, authorizes the drawer of a bill to be sued in the same action with the executors of the acceptor. Commercial Bank v. Woodruff, 21 U. C. R. 602.

Joint Contractors.]—The plaintiff proceeding upon a note against several defendants as joint contractors, chargeable on the same contract and in the same capacity, must prove a case against all of them. Sifton v. McCabe, 6 U. C. R. 394.

Joint Makers. | -5 Will. IV. c. 1, does not apply to parties signing notes as joint makers. Sifton v. McCabe, 6 U. C. R. 394.

Judgment by Default.]—Where the defendant neglects to appear to a specially indorsed writ in an action on a promissory note, the plaintif is entitled to sign judgment without the production of the note; and a mandamus was granted to the county court to sign such judgment. In re Oliver v. Fryer, 7 P. R. 325.

New Trial.]—In an action against the makers and indosers of a note, it is not necessary that all the defendants should concur in an application for a new trial. Maulson v. Arrol, 11 U. C. R. Sl. New Trial.)—In an action against the maker and indorser of a note, a new trial was granted as to one defendant, leaving the verdict to stand as to the other. Hanscome v. Cotton, 15 U. C. R. 42.

Note not Duc.]—Where one of several notes was not due until near the end of the term in which process had been issued and returnable, but was due before filing the declaration, which was intituded generally of the term:—Held, that such note could not be recovered on in the action. Kerr v. Jennings, M. T. 4 Vict.

Partners.]—Where three or four partners declared on a bill as indorsees, and averred an indorsement to themselves "trading under" the partnership name, and the bill was indorsed in blank.—Held, that the non-joinder of the other partner was not a ground of non-suit. Anderson v. Macualay, 6 O. S. 537.

Set-off by one Defendant.]—Action on a note made by M. and indorsed by C. Pleas by M., general issue and set-off, and by C., general issue, set-off, and release. See Robin-son v. Moore, 6 O. S. 646.

Special Indorsement.]—A writ of summons may be specially indorsed as for a balance due on a bill of exchange, even though some of the items forming part of the amount are unliquidated, there being a balance due on the bill itself. Bank of Montreal v. Harrison, 4 P. R. 331.

Special Indorsement.]—A writ of summons was specially indorsed for interest on the balance of an account, and for protest charges on an unaccepted draft:—Held, that the indorsement was right as to the interest, but not as to protest charges. Bank of Montreal v. Harrison, 4 P. R. 331, explained. Sinclair v. Chisholm, 5 P. R. 270.

Striking out Defence.]—Upon a summary application under Rule 1322, to strike out defences on the ground that they disclose "In reasonable answer," the court is never the superiority of the superiority and the superiority defences the superiority deprived of a ground of substantial defence by the summary process of a judgment in chambers. And in an action upon a promissory note, alleged by defendant to have been taken by plaintiffs after maturity, defences of payment, estoppe by conduct, and a claim for equitable protection arising out of agreement, were allowed to remain on the record. Bank of Hamilton v. George, 16 P. R. 418.

Striking out Pleas.]—The C. L. P. Act. R. S. O. 1877 c. 50, s. 120, empowers the court or a Judge to strike out pleas not merely where they are embarrassing, because confused in terms and so difficult to understand, but where they combine several defences in one plea, or are repetitions of a defence, already pleaded, and may thus be embarrassing or prejudice a fair trial. In this case, being an action on promissory notes, the defendant having pleaded total failure of consideration, added other pleas repeating that defence, and setting up besides another agreement, not necessarily connected with the notes, and so stated as to leave it uncertain whether it was intended as a separate defence or as supporting the other defence:—Held, that such pleas were properly struck out. Abell v. McLarea, 31 C. P. 517.

Two Defendants—Vonsuit.]—Where in an action against the maker and indorser of a note under 5 Will. IV. c. 1, one defendant pleader the general issue, and the other allowed indement to go by default, and at the trial the plaintiff was nonsuited as to both, and the plaintiff was nonsuited as to be been right as to the one pleading, and it was therefore set aside on payment of costs. Saudt v. Pouch, 1 U. C. R. 427.

Two Makers—Failure Against One.]—Where an action is brought against the two makers of a joint and several note if it fail against one it must fail as to both. Horner v. Kerr, 6 A. R. 30.

Variance.]—In an action against the acceptor, on an averment that it was directed to and accepted by him, it was held no variance that the bill was directed to and accepted by a firm in which the defendant was a partner. Stackweather v. Andrews, 6 O. S. 135.

Variance,]—A promissory note made payable p. John Souther & Son was sued on by John Souther & Co.—Held, that it being clear by the evidence that the plaintiffs were the persons designated as payess, they could recover. Walkee v. Souther, 16 S. C. R. 717.

II. CONTRIBUTION AND INDEMNITY BETWEEN PARTIES TO BILLS AND NOTES.

Accommodation Accoptor Paying After Execution Against Primary Debtor, —The holder of certain accommodiation drafts, after having obtained judgment and execution against the payee thereof, was poid the amount of them by the accommodation acceptor, and thereupon expressed his intention of directing the sheriff to credit that sum on the execution in his hands, the amount of which he had made by sale under execution of the goods of the payee for whose accommodation the bills had been negotiated. The acceptor hearing of this gave the sheriff notice of his claim, and filed a bill to compet the payment of the amount which he had advanced:—Held, that as surety the acceptor lad a right to receive the amount of his claim out of the proceeds of the execution, to the exclusion of the subsequent execution creditor. Rigney v. Vancandt, 5 Gr. 494.

Agent's Negligence.]—Where the defendant drew two bills on England for the accommodation of the plaintiffs' bankers, who may be a substitute of the plaintiff of the plaintiff of the defendant of the plaintiff of the plaintiff of the drawe of the bills, and transmitted to the drawe of the bills, and transmitted to the drawe of the bills, and transmitted to the drawe of the bills, and the money placed by him with the public moneys left in his charge, from whence part of it was stolen; and in consequence, one of detendant's bills came back protested and was paid by plaintiffs;—Held, that although it was an accommodation transaction, the drawe was defendant's, not plaintiffs', agent, and the defendant was responsible to them for the amount of the bill. Truscott v. Billings, 5, 0, 5, 529.

Assignment of Judgment.]—G. made a note to S., who indorsed it. DeG., D., and W., also indorsed it. B. discounted the note, which was sued, and judgment and execution obtained against all the parties to it. W. satisfied the execution, whereupon G. and D. paid him (he having been a mere accommodation indorser) S. and DeG. contributing nothing towards the payment. General States of the payment of —Where certain securities have been assigned as collateral for the payment of a promissory pot for $1,000, which note has been partly paid and a new note given, such security may be held until the debt is discharged by payment. Wiley v. Ledyard, 10 P. R. 182.

Collateral Security — Substitution of Notes, 1—The accommodation indorser of several bills and notes obtained from the maker and acceptor thereof a conveyance of certain lands by way of indemnity against such indorsations. Certain of these bills were subsequently indorsed by another, and were discounted; and such subsequent indorser, on the bills maturing, was obliged to retire them. On a bill by the second indorser claiming to have the benefit of the trust by having the estate administered, and the amount so paid by him to retire the notes refunded:—Held, that he was not entitled to such relief; and, quere, whether, under the circumstances, he had a right to claim such relief, subject to the grantee in the deed being relieved from all liabilities incurred on the faith of it. Smith v. Fralick, 5 Gr. 612.

Collateral Security — Substitution of Notes, —Plaintiff indorsed notes for W. B., since deceased, which were discounted at two different banks. To indemnify plaintiff against these indorsements W. B. mortgaged certain real and personal property to him. The notes were subsequently paid when due, at these banks, with the proceeds of other notes of W. B., indorsed by plaintiff, and discounted at a third bank:—Held, that the indemnity secured plaintiff against his indorsements at W. B.'s request, on paper discounted at the third bank to keep outstanding the amounts of the former notes. Burnham v. Burnham 10 Gr. 485.

at the third bank to keep outstanding the amounts of the former notes. Burnham v. Burnham, 10 Gr. 485.

Semble, that the indemnity given to an indorser will protect him against liability on any other securities, in whatever shape, to which he may become a party at the request of the maker to keep the amounts of the notes outstanding. Ib.

costs.]—Where the maker and indorser, being sued together under 5 Will. IV. c. 1, join in a defence, the second indorser may recover from the first the costs of such suit, without a special count or any further proof of an express request to defend. Fox v. Soper, 18 U. C. R. 258.

Defendants inter se.]—C. S. U. C. c. 42, which permits the holder of a note or bill to sue all parties liable upon it in one action, does not affect the rights and liabilities of defendants as between themselves, but leaves them as if they had been sued separately. Hamilton v. Phipps, 7 Gr. 483.

Indemnity-Pleading.] - Defendant having been arrested, requested the plaintiff to join him as maker of a note to M., his creditor, for the debt, which he did, and the plaintiff was obliged to pay the same with costs, &c. The plaintiff then sued to recover this amount, alleging in his declaration that in consideration of the plaintiff joining the defendant in signing as maker, a note jointly and severally promising to pay M., or order, the sum of, &c., for defendant's use and bene fit, defendant promised the plaintiff to in-demnify him, and that he did join him accord-ingly:—Held, that the making of the note by plaintiff was not put in issue by the plea of non-assumpsit, Blake v. Harvey, 2 C. P. 310.

Indorser against Debtor. | - Rights of indorser against principal debtor. See Harper v. Culbert, 5 O. R. 152.

Indorsers inter se. !- A second accommodation indorser who has paid a note discounted at a bank for the benefit of the maker. may maintain an action on the note against a prior accommodation indorser, and may indorse it over after it is due. Breeze v. Baldwin, 5 O. S. 444.

Indorsers inter se.]-Action by one of veral accommodation indorsers against another for contribution on special agreement-Statement of consideration, and cause of action—Special demurrer—Declaration held insufficient. Dempsey v. Miller, 3 C. P. 431.

Indorsers inter se.]-An indorser of a note cannot pay the amount of a judgment obtained thereon against a previous indorser. and enforce it for his own benefit. It was contended in this case that the judgment was not enforced for the benefit of the indorser, but of a person to whom it had been assigned, but held, that upon the affidavits and facts stated this was not made out. Carr v. Coulter, 2 P. R. 317.

. Indorsers inter se.] -As between accor modation indorsers, the court will enforce the right of contribution, as in cases of other co-sureties. Clipperton v. Spettigue, 15 Gr. 269.

Where a firm of two or more indorse in the partnership name, the liability as sureties is a joint liability, and not the several liability of each partner. Ib.

Indorsers inter se.]-Where two persons indorse a note for the accommodation of the maker, and the second indorser knows when he indorses that the first indorser is, like himself, an accommodation indorser, he must share equally the loss occasioned by the maker's default. Cockburn v. Johnston, 15 Gr. 577.

Indorsers inter se.] - Accommodation indotsers, like other co-sureties, are liable to mutual contribution, unless this liability is controlled by contract; but such a limitation, if stipulated for, is binding. Mitchell v. English, 17 Gr. 303.

Indorsers inter se.]—A note, indorsed B. and C. for the accommodation of the maker. being overdue, the maker, to provide funds for taking it up, procured another person, D., to indorse for his accommodation a new note, and on applying to his former indorsers for their signatures, untruly stated that he had sold goods to D., who would be in that he had sold goods to D., who would be in funds to take up the note at maturity. The note was taken up by D., who was the first in-dorser:—Held, that he was entitled to con-tribution. McKetvey v. Davis, 17 Gr. 355.

D.'s suit for contribution was not brought for five years, nor until C. had become insolvent:—Held, that B. must share with D. the loss: that he might have had his liability ascertained, and might have paid the amount before D. sued. Ib.

Indorsers inter se.]-The successive indorsers of a note, merely on proof that it was made for the accommodation of the maker, are not necessarily to be regarded as cosureties, and so liable to contribution; but in the absence of any agreement to the contrary, the parties on such proof may be considered as having entered into a contract considered as having entered into a contract of suretyship in the terms in which the note and the indorsement are known to create; and the first indorser having paid the note, can not recover contribution from the second.

Ianson v. Paxton, 23 C. P. 439, reversing 22

Indorsers inter se.]-A third person holding a note for the benefit of one joint indorser, cannot maintain a joint action against the co-indorsers under R. S. O. 1877 c. 116, ss. 2, 3, as indorsers for the full amount of the 2, 3, as indorsers for the rat, the parameter as a special note, but must sue each separately in a special note, but must sue each separately in a special action for his share of the contribution. Act does not refer to partnership transactions.

Small v. Riddel, 31 C. P. 373.

Quære, whether the indorsement as made by the manager, was sufficient. Ib.

Indorsers inter se.]-Held, that upon payment of the amount of the note by the plaintiff to the original holder, the plaintiff being liable as indorser to such holder, the plaintiff became entitled to the note and to enforce his rights against the other parties to it; and, as it appeared that two of the defendants had indorsed the notes as sureties to rendants and morsed the notes as sureries to the plaintiff for the makers, he was entitled to recover against them, although the note was made payable to his order. Wilkinson v. Unwin, 7 Q. B. D. 636, followed. Pegg v. Howlett, 28 O. R. 473.

Mortgage to Indorser.]—Securing in-dorser by chattel mortgage. See Barber v. Macpherson, 13 A. R. 356.

Surety.]—Action on a note for $1,500, dated the 25th July, 1872, made by defendant payable to the order of S., and alleged to have been indorsed by S, to the plaintiffs. It appeared that one M., on the 17th January, 1872, had given his bond to the assignee in insolvency of S., conditioned, if S. should fail to pay forty-three cents in the $ by the 10th July, to pay to the assignee $500, or so much as should be required to make up the deficiency. S. got the defendant to make this note for his accommodation, and got E. to indorse it afterwards, in order to give it to M. as security against his bond, which he did. M. having been sued on this bond, compelled F. to pay him the crownth of the compelled of the pay him the amount of the note, and F. and his partner then sued defendant as maker:-Held, that the relationship of co-sureties between F. and defendant was not established, so as to prevent the plaintiffs from recovering from defendant more than half the amount of the note:—Held, also, that M. held the note on a good consideration as between himself and the other parties thereto. Fisken v. Mechan, 40 U. C. R. 146.

Suretyship as Between Makers.]—
The payee of a joint and several note, made by two, can only be treated as holding one as a surety for the other upon his express consent to do so at the time of taking the note. Ball v, 6ilvon, 7 C. P. 531.

Surety Compelling Maker to Pay.]—
Accommodation indorsers, after the note on which they were liable had matured, filed a bill against the holder and maker to enforce payment by the latter. The relief prayed was granted, and the maker was ordered to pay the costs both of the plaintiff and of the holder of the note. Cunningham v. Lyster, 13 Gr. 575.

Surety Paying.]—A, and B, gave a joint and several note to C., who indorsed it to D., B, signing as surety for A.; and an action was brought by the holder against A., B., and C., for the amount of the note, which was paid by B., together with the costs of suit:—Held, that B, was entitled to recover the amount paid by him, being a mere surety, and also a moiety of the costs as jointly liable. Blake v. Harvey, 1 C. P. 417.

III. FORM.

Agency.]—"A. & Co., by A. junr.," prima facie imports that A. signs the note for, and not as one of, the firm. Dowling v. Eastwood, 3 U. C. R. 376.

Agreement to Give Mortgage.]—"Ten data after date, we promise to pay to M. N. 585 15s., for value received," upon which, when given, was indorsed, "It is agreed that this note is to be paid by a lawful mortgage, with interest on the same, having three months to run;"—Held, not a note as between the original parties, nor evidence of an account stated. Newhorn v. Lawrence, 5 U. C. R. 359.

Quare, would it be a note in the hands of an indersee, who took it as a note for value? Ib.

Agreement to Give Security.]—Plaintiff declared on the common counts, and upon the two instruments following: "Frankfort, 20th November, 1861. Six months after date. 1 promise to pay P. Turley, or bearer, $125 for value received; and I also agree with said Turley to give him at any time he requires it any security he requires that is in my power to give at my cost and charges, for the payment of the above amount of $125; and should I not comply with his request, then the above mentioned amount to be due to him from the date of such refusal." "Frankfort, 27th November, 1861. One year after date, I promise to pay P. Turley, or bearer, $80, with interest for value received; and if said Turley should require any additional security for the payment of the above amount, I hereby agree to do so at my expense, and should I not comply with this request, then this note to be considered due from said date: "Held, that if notes at all, the plaintiff could not recover upon them as such, as they would only become due as notes at the expiration of six and twelve months, which times had not expired; and that in the absence of a special count, stating the facts, with evidence to support it, the action must fail. Turley v. Rosebush, 12 C. P. 380.

Agreement to Pay in Lumber.]—"Toronto, 12th May, 1858. Six months after date, we promise to pay to J. B., or order, $400.
—N. J., W. W. B., E. W. D. The above note is to be paid in merchantable lumber, to be delivered in Toronto at cash price, and an additional quantity of lumber sufficient to pay the freight is to be sent in. If not so paid within the time, then the same is to be paid in eash." This memorandum was written on the face of the note when it was signed:—Held, not a note:—Held, also, that defendants were clearly not estopped from denying that it was a note by having, in addition to the plea of non fecerunt, denied in other pleas their liability to pay "the said promissory note." Boulton v. Jones, 19 U. C. R. 517.

Alternative Payee,] -- "Three months after date we, or either of us, promise to pay E. S. R. (the plaintift,) or J. F. his guardian, at the post office, Embro, £119 17s. cy., value received, in rent of farm," adding a count on an account stated. It was proved that the defendant had been in possession of the plaintiff's farm before and after the note was made, which was given for rent due; and that the plaintiff was abroad at the time of making the note:—Held, that the writing was not a note, but would support a recovery under the account stated. Reed, V. Reed, 11 U. C. R. 26.

Alternative Time of Payment.]—
"Seventeen months after date, I promise to pay to H. or order, £50, without interest, or three years and five months after date, with two years interest, for value received:"—Held, a valid note, being payable certainly at the latest day. Hogg v. Marsh, 5 U. C. R. 319.

American Currency.] — A note made here, promising to pay V. or order, at Chicago, $893, American currency:—Held, a good promissory note. Third National Bank of Chicago v. Cosby, 41 U. C. R. 402.

To an action on such note, alleging it to be for the payment of $893 "American currency, to wit, lawful money of the United States of America," defendants pleaded that American currency was and is certain paper notes or debentures issued by the government of the United States, which by their law passed current for certain purposes only and not universally; nor was the said American currency at the time of making said alleged note, nor is it, lawful money of the United States, nor of any fixed or certain value:—Held, a good plea, as denying the averments in the declaration that American currency was lawful money of the United States of America, and tendering a good issue as to matter of fact. Ib.

Held, that a promissory note made in Canada and payable in the United States, and in the currency thereof, without the words "and not otherwise or elsewhere," was a good promissory note, for that it was payable generally and might be sued on here. Bettis v. Weller, 30 U. C. R. 23, overruled, and Greenwood v. Foley, 22 C. P. 352, followed. S. C., 43 U. C. R. 58.

American Currency.]—It is no objection to the validity of a promissory note that it is for payment of a certain sum in currency. Currency must be held to mean "United States Currency," when the note is payable in the United States. Wallace v. Souther, 16 S. C. R. 71.

Canada Bills.]—"Due J. G., or bearer, $482 in Canada bills, payable fourteen days after date," &c.:—Held, not a note; for such bills (issued under 29 & 30 Vict. c. 10) though currency, are not specie or money. Gray v. Worden, 29 U. C. R. 553.

Cash or Mortgage.]—A promise to pay "in eash or mortgage upon real estate," is not a note, not being an absolute promise to pay money; and it does not become a note by the maker's election to pay in eash. Going v. Barreick, 16 U. C. R. 45.

Collateral Security.]-The plaintiff had signed notes for the accommodation of M., and declined to continue doing so, or to renew such paper, unless M. would give him a guarantee. Defendant, M.'s wife, had been in the habit of signing blank notes for M. when asked, and M, having a blank form of note signed by her, filled it up as follows, for the amount of the plaintiff's paper then falling due :—" April 3, 1871. Four months after date I promise to pay to William Hall, or order, $1,264, at the Bank of Toronto here. This note to be held as collateral security. Value received." The words in italics were inserted at the plaintiff's The defendant had no communicarequest. tion with the plaintiff:-Held, that the defendant was not liable, for the instrument was not a promissory note, not being for the payment of money absolutely; and if a guarantee, there was nothing to shew that she ever signed or intended to sign such a contract, or authorized the conversion of the note into it. Hall v. Merrick, 40 U. C. R. 566.

Collateral Security.]—Held, that the note in this case was not a negotiable promissory note, not being made payable absolutely and at all events, but only as collateral security for plaintiff's guarantee. Sutherland v. Patterson, 4 O. R. 505.

Condition Indorsed before Signature.]—An indorsement on a note of a condition, made before the note is signed, is part of such note. If made after the signing, it will be considered merely as a memorandum to identify the note. McKinnon v. Campbell, 6 L. J. 58.

Contingency.]—"In the Queen's Bench. The municipal council of the county of Perth, plaintiffs, v. Thomas Smith, defendant. Please pay E. R., attorney for the plaintiffs in this cause, the sum of £125, on account of plaintiffs' claim in this suit. Wm. Smith." addressed to and accepted by A. MeGi, county treasurer:—Held, not a bill of exchange, the amount payable being dependent upon the plaintiffs' claim in the suit, and therefore subject to a contingency:—Held, also, that if a bill, the attorney only could sue upon it as payee, not the plaintiffs in the suit named. County of Perth v. McGregor, 21 U. C. R.

Current Funds.] — Quære, whether an instrument purporting to be a bill of exchange, payable in New York, "with current funds," if it mean other than lawful money of the United States, is a bill of exchange. Stephens v. Berry, 15 C. P. 548.

Current Funds of United States.]—Held, that a note made in this Province, payable in current funds of the United States of America, was not a promissory note Bettis v. Weller, 30 U. C. R. 23.

The plaintiff haying declared upon such

The plaintiff having declared upon such note, defendants pleaded, setting it out in hace verba, and alleging that it was made in this Province; that the current funds mentioned were paper notes issued by the United States government, and current there as money, but that the dollar named in them was not equal to the dollar of our money, nor of any fixed value; and that, except by indorsement of said notes by defendants, there was no contract between them and the plaintiff:—Held, that the plea was good, and not objectionable as varying the written contract by parol. 1b.

Debentures.] — Debentures or coupons cannot be considered promissory notes where the company which issues them have no authority to make notes. Geddes v. Toronto Street R. W. Co., 14 C. P. 513.

Description of Payees.] — An indorsement to pay to the trustees of an insolvent firm, without naming them, is sufficiently certain. Auldjo v. McDougall, 3 O. S. 199.

Direction as to Application of Proceeds, —A note payable to C. or bearer, adding the words, "which when paid is to be indorsed on the mortgage, bearing even date with this note:"—Held, a negotiable promissory note. Chesney v. St. John, 4 A. R. 150.

Direction as to Application of Proceeds.]—Declaration on a note payable to G. or order. Plea, non feeit. The note when produced was payable to G. or order "for the use of M.:"—Held, no variance, for it was declared on according to its legal effect. Equitable plea, setting out facts which, if true, shewed that M. was not entitled to the money, and allexing that the plaintiff, the indorse of G., took it with notice:—Held, that the fact of the note being expressed to be for the use of M. was no evidence of such notice; for this shewed only M.'s right as against G, whereas the plea was in denial of his right. Munro v, Cox, 30 U. C. R, 363.

Due Bill.)—Held, that an instrument in this form, "Good to Mr. Palmer for $850 on demand," was not a promissory note, and so requiring a stamp; but that without any evidence of the circumstances under which it was given, it was primā facie evidence to go to a jury of an account stated. Palmer v. Mc-Lennan, 22 C. P. 565; 23 C. P. 258.

Equitable Assignment. —One E., who had a contract with the defendant for certain carpenter's work, gave to the plaintiff an order on the defendant in the following form:—"Please pay to H. the sum of $138.40 for flooring supplied to your buildings on D. road, and charge to my account:"—Held, that this was not an equitable assignment, but a bill of exchange, and that in the absence of written acceptance by her, the defendant was not liable. Hall v. Prittie, 17 A. R. 306.

Exchange.]—A promise to pay a certain sum "with exchange on New York:"—Held, not a note, the amount being rendered uncertain by the uncertainty of exchange. Palmer v, Fahnestock, 9 C. P. 172.

Exchange. |—It was held, also, in an action on a note in the above form that there was no right of action against the indorser as upon a guarantee. Fahnestock v. Palmer, 20 U. C. R. 307.

Exchange.]—Held, following Palmer v. Falmestock, 9 C. P. 172, that an instrument purporting to be a promissory note, with the worls, "with exchange not to exceed one-half per cent," was not a note. Saxion v. Stevenson, 22 C. P. 503. See, also, Wood v. Young, 14 C. P. 250; Grant v. Young, 23 U. C. R. 381; Cushman v. Reid, 20 C. P. 147.

Husband or Wife.]—A note payable to 'a "or to his wife, and to no other person," is the same as if payable to A. alone, and his executors may sue upon it. Moodie v. Rowatt, 14 U. C. R. 273.

Inland Note.]—A note made in Upper Canada payable at Montreal, is an inland note, being in effect payable generally, under 7 Will, IV, c. 5, and may be properly protested the day after the third day of grace. Bradbary v. Doole, 1 U. C. R. 442.

Instalments — Agreement to Postpone Postment, — For value received I promise to pay James McQueen and Jacob McQueen, or their order, the sum of £102 15s, ey, to be paid in verify proportions: — Held, that the effect of this was to give two years for payment; and that no pariol evidence could be abuilted of an agreement that the money should not be payable for four years, or until after the death of the plaintiff's father. McQueen, M.C., C. R. 536.

Instalments.]—An action for the first instalment due on a promissory note for $400, loyable in three annual instalments, is for an amount ascertained by the signature of the defendant, and may be brought in a division ourt before the maturity of the second instalment. "In three annual instalments" in such a note means equal instalments. In re Babacek v. Ayers, 27 O. R. 47.

Lien Note.]—An instrument in the form of a promissory note, given for part of the price of an article, with the added condition "hat the title and right to the possession of the property for which this note is given shall remain in (the vendors) until this note is paid "is not a promissory note or negotiable instrument, and the holder thereof takes it subject to any defence available to the maker against the vendors. Dominion Bank v. Wiggins, 21 A. R. 275.

Particular Fund.)—"Mr. O.—Mr. B. want 22s, twelve o'clock this day, i.e., 15th of Februar, 1890. I want you to get it him immediate, out of 8.'s money." Signed by H. and seepted by defendant:—Held, not a bill, because payable out of a particular fund; and that the plaintiff could not recover upon it under the common counts. Ockerman v. Blacklack, 12 C. Y. 362.

Patent Right.]—A promissory note, made before the coming into force of the Bills of Exchange Act, 1890, the consideration of which was the purchase money of a patent right, without having the words "given for a patent right" written or printed across its face when taken by the payee, or when transferred by him, as required by R. S. C. 123, ss. 12, 14, was held void in the hands of an indorsee for value, with notice of the consideration. Johnson v. Martin, 19 A. R. 502.

Patent Right.]—Where part of the consideration for the transfer of a patent right from one partner to another was the giving, at the plaintiffs suggestion, of the notes of the firm for the individual debt of the transferor to the plaintiffs:—Held, that under s.-s. 4 of s. 30 of the Bills of Exchange Act, 53 Vict. c. 33 (D.), the words "given for a patent right" should have been written across the notes so given; and in the absence thereof the plaintiffs could not recover. Samuel v. Fairgriere, 24 O. R. 486.

This decision was reversed by the court of appeal, 21 A. R. 418, but was restored by the supreme court, sub nom. Craig v. Samuel, 24 S. C. R. 278.

Patent Rights. —The statute R. S. C. c. 123, ss. 12. 14, which requires notes given for the purchase of a patent right, before being issued to have the words "given for a patent right" written or printed thereon, provides that the indorse or transferce of a note with such words thereon shall have the same defence as would have existed between the original parties, and subjects to indictment any one issuing, selling or transferring such notes without such words written thereon. One of the plaintiffs gave two notes to the defendant for the purchase money on the assignment of a patent right on which the required words were written. These notes were subsequently cancelled, and in lieu thereof the notes in question were given, made by both plaintiffs without having the said words thereon:—Held, that the notes were enforceable by defendant, these words not being required as between maker and payee, and, even if they were, the makers had the right to, and did, waive having the same thereon. Girvin v. Burke, 19 O. R. 204.

Payable to Order.]—A note made payable to a person or his order, or to the order of a person, means the same thing. Myers v. Wilkins, 6 U. C. R. 421.

Payee and Successor.]—Held, that an instrument promising to pay "to J. P., Esq., treasurer of the building committee of the congregation of St. John's church, in the town of Prescott, and his successor duly appointed," was a note, and might be sued upon by his administratrix. Patton v. Melville, 21 U. C. R. 2432

Payee or Successor in Office.]—"We, or either of us, promise to pay to A. B., treasurer of, &c., or to his successor or successors in office. or order, &c.:"—Held, a good note, the words, "or to his successor or successors in office." being void. McGregor v. Daly. 5 C. P. 126.

Promise Omitted.] — "Three months after date, pay to the order of W. T., at Port Hope, £228 7s. 6d., for value received:"— Held, not a note, for want of a promise to pay: nor a bill, for want of a drawee. Forward v. Thompson, 12 U. C. R. 103.

Scal.]—Assumpsit upon a note, alleged to have been made by the Wolf Island Railway and Canal Co., payable to defendants, and indorsed by them to plaintiffs. Plea, that the writing sued on is an instrument under the seal of the company, and not a promissory note, or negotiable as such:—Held, on demurrer, plea good:—Held, also, declaration good, as the court could not assume that this company were not authorized to make notes. Merritt v. Maxwell, 14 U. C. R. 30.

Scal.)—"For value received, we jointly and severally promise to pay to W. P. O. or bearer, the sum of £50 cy., in manner following," &c. "As witness our hands and seals, this 29th day of April, 1856.—M. M. Patman —[LS.] E. H. Gates—[LS.] Signed, sealed, and delivered, in presence of R. S. "—Held, clearly not a note, but a specialty. Wilson v. Gates, 16 U. C. R. 278.

Signature by Holder under Maker's Name, |--Where a promissory note commencing "I promise to pay," and signed by two makers, was afterwards discounted by the plaintiff for the holder thereof, the money being paid to him on his agreeing to become responsible for the payment of the note, he signing his name under those of the makers:—Held, per Boyd. C., and Ferguson, J., that the liability of the person so signing was that of surety, and that the validity of the note was not affected by the manner in which it was signed. Per Meredith, J.—He was liable as maker of a new note. Kinnard v. Teussley, 27 O. R. 398.

Subscriptions to Church.]—Defendant with others signed the following, his subscription being $100:—"We the undersigned do hereby severally promise and agree to pay to F. W. T., Esq. (the plaintiff.) agent of the Bank of Montreal in Goderich, the sums set opposite our respective names, for the purpose of building an Episcopal church and pose of building an Episcopal church and rectory in the town of Goderich." The declaration thereon alleged that in consideration that W. and others would promise defendant to pay the plaintiff certain specified sums for the purpose, &c., and that plaintiff would pay $100 for the same purpose, defendant promised to pay plaintiff $100 therefor; that W. and others did promise and pay accordingly, and that plaintiff paid $100, yet defendant had not paid. At the trial the plaintiff's promise to contribute $100 was not proved :-Held, that on this ground defendant was en-titled to succeed:—Held, also, that the instrument was the several promissory note of each subscriber; and as it seemed that the plaintiff was entitled to recover, though not upon these pleadings and evidence, a new trial was ordered on payment of costs, Grace, 15 C. P. 462. Thomas v.

Time of Payment—Equitable Assignment.]—The contractor for a building gave to the plaintiff, a lumber merchant, the following order: "On completion of contract on building now in course of erection, pay to the order of (plaintiff) $400 value received and charge to account of " (contractor). And the defendant accepted thus: "Accepted, payable at Ningara Fulls, Ont., as payment for lumber used in my building." After this the defendant paid to the contractor more than $400. The contractor made default before the completion of the building, when more than $400 of the contract price had yet to be earned, and the defendant put an end to the contract and completed the building, the cost being more than the contract price:—Held, that the order was not a bill of exchange because the time of payment was indefinite, nor an equitable assignment because the fund out of which payment was to be made was not specified, but was merely a promise to pay upon the completion of the contract by the contractor, or some one on his behalf, and that by reason of his default no liability arose. Brice v. Bannister, 3 Q. B. D. 509, distinguished. Thomson v. Huggins, 23 A. R. 191.

Two Makers—"I promise."]—"I promise to pay," signed by two, is joint and several. Creighton v. Fretz, 26 U. C. R. 627.

Undertaking.]—Judgment was recovered in a division court for $108.63 being $100 balance due and $8.83 interest a document of the court of the court

Work.]—An agreement to pay a certain sum in carpenter's or joiner's work, such as might be required, cannot be declared on as a note. Downs v. McNamara, 3 U. C. R. 276.

IV. NOTICE OF DISHONOUR.

1. Form and Requisites.

Cheques-Presentation by Post-Sufficiency of Notice of Dishonour.]-The Dominion Government having a deposit account of public moneys with the Bank of Prince Edward Island upon which they were entitled to draw at any time, the deputy minister drew an official cheque thereon for $30,000, which, together with a number of other cheques, he sent to the branch of the Bank of Montreal at O., at which branch bank the Government had also a deposit account. The said branch bank thereupon placed the amount of the cheque to the credit of the Dominion Government on the books of the bank, the manager thereof indorsing the same in blank and forwarding it to the head office of his bank at Montreal. The cheque was then sent forward by mail to the head office of his bank at Montreal. to the Bank of Prince Edward Island for collection, but was not paid by the latter bank, which, subsequently to the presentment of the cheque, suspended payment generally:-Held, (1.) That the Bank of Montreal were mere agents for the collection of this cheque and that, although the proceeds of the cheque had heen credited to the Government upon the books of the bank, it never was the intention of the bank to treat the cheque as having been discounted by them; consequently, as the bank did not acquire property in the cheque, and were never holders of it for value, they were entitled on the dishonour of the cheque to reverse the entry in their books and charge the verse the entry in their books and charge the amount against the Government. Giles v. Perkins, 9 East 12; Ex parte Barkworth, 2 DeG. & J. 194, referred to. (2.) That the mode of presenting a cheque on a bank by transmitting it to the drawee by mail, is a transmitting it to the drawer by main, is a legal and customary mode of presentment. Heywood v. Pickering, L. R. 9 Q. B. 428; Prideaux v. Criddle, L. R. 4 Q. B. 455, referred to. (3.) That although a collecting bank cannot enlarge the time for presentment by circulating a bill or cheque amongst its branches, yet, if it has been indorsed to and transmitted through them for collection, the different branches or agencies are to be regarded as separate and independent indersers gardet as separate and independent indorsers for the purpose of giving notice of dishonour. Clode v. Bayley, 12 M. & W. 51; Brown v. London & N. W. R. W. Co., 4 B. & S. 326; referred to. (4.) That the defendants, whether considered as mere agents for the collection, or as holders, of the cheque for value, were, as regards the drawer, only called upon to shew that there was no unreasonable delay in presentment and in giving notice of non-payment; and, no such delay having occurred, the Crown was not relieved from lia-bility as drawer of the cheque. (5.) In a letter from the manager of the Bank of Montreal, at Ottawa, to the Deputy Min-ister of Finance, which the defendants put in evidence as a notice to the Crownthe drawer-of the dishonour of the cheque by the drawees—the Bank of Prince Edward Island, the fact of non-payment was stated as follows:—"I am now advised that it has not yet been covered by the Bank of Prince Edward Island. In case of it being returned here again unpaid I deem it proper to notify you of the circumstances, as I will be required you of the circumstances, as I will be required in that event to reverse the entry and return it to the department:"—Held, that the words "not covered," as used in this letter, were equivalent to "not paid" or to "unpaid;" and, being so construed, the letter was a suffi-cient legal notice of dishonour. Bailey v. Porter, 14 M. & W. 44; Paul v. Joel, 27 L. J. Ex. 383, referred to. The Queen v. Bank of Montreal, 1 Ex. C. R. 154.

Foreign Bill—Copy of Protest.]—A notice that a foreign bill has been returned protested, is a sufficient notice of non-acceptance, without sending a copy of the protest with the notice. C'Neil v. Perrin, M. T. 3 Vict.

Implication of Non-payment—Notice Battel on Nanday.]—Held, that the following notice of non-payment:—"London, Novemble 22, 1846. Sir,—The promissory note of leter Bowen for twenty pounds, at three mentles from the 19th of August, 1846, on which you are indorser, is due this day, unpit, of therefore give you notice that as the bodier of the said note I look to you for payment thereof. W. B."—given by the indorsee to the indorser, was sufficient, without stating that he note had been presented for payment, the note heing payable at the plaintiff's office in London:—Held, also, that the notice being dated on Sunday—the note falling due on the Saturday, and the notice being delivered on the Monday—was no objection. Blinn y. Dixon, 5 U. C. R. 580.

Informal Notice.]—The following notice held sufficient: — "Strathroy, 13th of October, 1857. John Ham Perry, Esq., Whitby, C. W. Sir,—A certain note for 2350, and interest, given on the 10th day of April last, in favour of John Ham Perry, and indorsed by you, and signed B. F. Perry, in favour of Hiram Dell, of Strathroy, fell due on 10-13th instant; you will, in consequence of non-payment, he held responsible for all costs or damages for non-payment." Harris v. Perry, S. C. F. 407.

Mistake in Amount.]—A notice of nonpayment received by defendant, the first of four indorsers, stated the date and parties correctly, but described it as for £28, instead of £25. It was shewn that after the notice defendant had promised to pay. The jury was directed that the notice was insufficient, and that the subsequent promise could not avail, as it was not averred in the declaration:— Held, a misdirection on both points. Thompson v. Cotterell, 11 U. C. R. 185.

Mistake in Date.]—Where the notice stated the amount accurately, but stated in-correctly the day when the note became due;—Held, sufficient, defendant not having been misled. Thorn v, Sandjord, 6 C. P. 462.

Mistake in Date.]—Where a note was properly presented and protested, but the notice being dated 20th November, stated the note to have been on that day presented and protested, whereas in fact it was on the 19th:—Held, not sufficient to mislead the indorser, who was therefore not released. Love v. Owcen, 12 C. P. 101.

Mistake in Date.]—Where a note fell due on the 25th July, 1873, on which day it was duly presented for payment and protested, but the notice of protest, dated on the 26th, incorrectly stated that the note was this day presented and protested:—Held, that the notice was sufficient, as it did not appear that the indorser was misled by the mistake. Cassidy v. Mansfield, 20 C. P. 383.

Place—Holders.]—The following held sufficient, the note being payable at the bank:—
"Sir: The note of A. B. for £50, at ninety days from the 20th January, 1841, indorsed by you and due this day, remains unpaid. You are therefore hereby notified that the bank looks to you for payment." Bank of Upper Canada v. Street, 3 U. C. R. 29.

Presentment and Non-Payment to be Averred. — A notice to the indorser must, either in express terms or by necessary intendment, shew that the note has been presented for payment, and that payment has been refused. Bank of Upper Canada v. Street, M. T. 5 Vict.

Presentment not Averred.]—A notice to an indorser stated that the note was duly protested for non-payment, not saying that it was presented:—Held, sufficient. Blain v. Oliphant, 8 U. C. R. 473.

Question of Law.]—What is a sufficient notice of dishonour, when the facts are undisputed, is a question of law. Bank of Upper Canada v. Smith, 4 U. C. R. 483.

2. How and To Whom Given.

Accommodation Indorser—No Effects.]—Defendant C. had drawn on one S. C. in England, who had no effects, and did not accept, and the bill was protested for non-acceptance and non-payment. Defendant B. was an indorser for C.'s accommodation. Notices of non-acceptance and non-payment were duly given to the drawer, but of non-payment only to the indorser B:—Held, that B. was discharged by the want of notice of non-acceptance, and that the facts of there having been no effects in the hands of the drawee, and of B. having indorsed for accommodation, made no difference. Gore Bank v. Craig, 7 C. P. 344.

Cheque of Third Person — Delay]—
Where the cheque of a third person is received from a debtor as conditional payment of an antecedent debt, the creditor mas antecedent debt, the creditor mass antecedent debt, the creditor debt debt of the first is dishonoured notify the debtor of the fact and claim recourse against him on the original indebtedness. Unless this is done the creditor will be taken to have accepted the cheque in payment of the debt and the debtor is discharged. Sawyer v. Thomas, 18 A. R. 129.

Death—Knowledge of Subsequent Holder.]
P. he appellants discounted a note, made by P. and indorsed by S., in the Bank of Commerce.
S. died, leaving the respondent his executor, who proved the will before the note sexecutor, who proved the will before the note matured. The note fell due on the 8th May, 1879, and was protested for non-payment, and the bank, being unaware of the death of S., addressed notice of protest to S. at Toronto, where the note was dated, under 37 Vict. c. 47, s. 1 (D). The appellants, who knew of S.'s death before maturity of the note, subsequently took up the note from the bank, and, relying upon the notice of dishonour given by the bank, sued the defendant:—Held, reversing 5 A. R. 458, and 45 U. C. R. 32, that the holders of the note sued upon, when it matured not knowing of S.'s death, and having sent him a notice in pursuance of 37 Vict. c. 47, s. 1, gave a good and sufficient notice to bind the defendant, and that the notice so given enured to the benefit of the appellants. Cosgrace v. Boyle, 6 S. C. R. 163.

Death.]—The indorser, a married woman, died intestate during the currency of a note which she had indorsed as surety for her husband, and notice of protest was sent to "James Bell, executor of the last will and testament of M. A. Bell, Perth." and received by the husband, who resided with his children in the house which his deceased wife had occupied. No letters of administration had been granted:—Held, that the notice was sufficient. Merchants Bank v. Bell, 29 Gr. 413.

Death — No Representative.] — The first count against an administrator stated that defendant's intestate indorsed a note (which was set out, payable at a particular place.) and died before it became payable. The count shewed a due presentment, and averred that "at the time the said note became due, no letters of administration to the estate and effects of the intestate had been granted to any person, nor had any person administered thereto." There were other counts, and the declaration concluded with an averment that afterwards, &c., "the defendant, as administrator as aforesaid, in consideration of the premises respectively, promised the plaintiff to pay him the said several moneys on request."—Held, on demurrer, that assuming the excuse for the omission of notice to be insufficient, (and semble, that it was so,) the promise alleged must be taken to be an experse promise, and was supported by a sufficient consideration. Brown v. Marsh, 1 C, P, 438.

Death-No Representative. |- In a similar case the count, after averring due presentment and non-payment, continued, "of all which due notice was given by placing a notice of non-payment in the post office of the city of Toronto, (being the place mentioned in the said promissory note, where the same was payable,) directed to 'the intestate' at Richmond Hill, being the place where, before and antil his death, he resided, and being his last place of residence." The count also shewed that administration was afterwards granted to the defendant, and stated a resulting legal liability on defendant's part as administrator. concluding with an averment that the defendant, "in consideration thereof, then promised the plaintiffs to pay them the amount of the said note on request:"—Held, that even if the averments as to notice were insufficient. the promise bound defendant as administrator. Remarks as to notice requisite in such cases. Gillespie v. Marsh, 1 C. P. 453.

Delay—Delivery by Private Hand.]—It is sufficient if the indorser receive notice when he would have received it by post, although it was sent to him by private hand, and might have been delivered a day sooner. Nassau v. O'Reilly, H. T. 2 Vict.

Delay—Misdirection.]—A letter giving notice of the dishonour of a bill, though from misdirection it has been delayed, is nevertheless sufficient if, being posted sooner than was necessary, it has in fact been received within the period allowed by law. Bank of British North America v. Ross, 1 U. C. R. 199.

Delay — Holder in Foreign Country.] — Held, that a notice to the drawer from the holder living in Illinois, through his agent living in this Province, of the bill being unpaid, by the latter calling upon him with the bill on the 24th December, the bill having been presented in New York on the 19th November, could not be considered, under the facts of this case given in the report, as laches, on the part of the holder. Boyes v. Joseph, 7 U. C. R. 505.

Delivering to Servant.]—Delivering notice to an indorser by leaving it with an outdoor servant cutting fire-wood, not known and proved to have been an inmate in the family, is insufficient. It will be a question, however, for the jury, whether the subsequent conduct of the indorser shews him to have received the notice in due time; and where they find for the plaintiff, though rather against the Judge's charge, the court will not set aside the verdict if the indorser file no affidavit denying notice. Commercial Bank v. Weller, 5 U. C. R. 542.

Designating Place.]—Where it is intended to designate under the provisions of R. S. C. c. 123, s. 5, a place to which notice of dis-bonour may be sent other than the place at which the bill or note is dated it is sufficient if the name of a place is written under or beneath the signature of the party. "Under his signature" does not mean that the name of the place must be written by the party's son if that other person had in any manner any kind of authority from the party to write it. Hay v. Burke, 16 A. R. 463.

Where a place has been so designated by any party, the holder of the instrument may seen notice to that place, even if he has reason to think or even knows that such place is not the party's place of residence or place of business. Cograve v. Boyle, 6 S. C. R. 165, considered and applied. It

Executor. — A notice of non-payment addressed merely "to the executrix or executor of the late Mr. Jones, Toronto," is bad. Bank of British North America v. Jones, S U. C. R. 81.

Executor-Receipt of Notice.]-In an action against the executors of a deceased indorser of a note, it appeared that some of the notices of a lose, a appeared that some of the notices of dishonour were addressed, "Admin-istrator of William Stinson's estate, Belle-ville, Ont.," while others were similarly ad-dressed, "Canifton," the latter having been testator's place of residence. It was proved that the notices were posted in due time; and as to the receipt of them, one of the executors as to the receipt of them, one of the executors stated that he had received two, one several weeks after the maturity of the note, from testator's widow, who got it at Canifton, the other from his co-executor, but whether a day or a fortnight after the protest he could not say; while his co-executor stated that he had never received any notice at all, but was shewn one by the other as having been received by him :-Held, that the reasonable inference to be drawn was that the notice had been received in due course. McKenzie v. Northrop, 22 C. P. 383.

Guarantor, |—Where defendant had guaranteel certain advances of goods and money, to be made to A. by the plaintiff, and the plaintiff took the note of A. payable at a particular place, for the amount:—Held, that he could maintain no action against defendant without proving presentment there, and notice of non-payment to the defendant. Driggs v. Watte, 80, 08, 310.

Guarantor.]—The defendant owing the plaintiff, delivered to him a note for $100, made by one John McGee, payable to defendant or bearer, on the back of which defendant since the payable to defend the following guarantee: "In consideration of the sum of one hundred dollars, I marante the payment of the within note:" I related that the guarantee was sufficient within a 4 of the Statute of Frauds; for although no promisee was named in it, yet the reference to "the within note," made it a promise enuring to the benefit of the bearer. Semble, that the guarantee created an absolute promise to pay in all events, and that defendant was not entitled to notice of dislomar; but there was no plea raising this guestion. Quare, whether defendant could be treated as a joint maker. Palmer v. Baker, 25 C. P. 202; C. P. 202;

Holder for Collection.]—Where a note payable at a bank is sent there for collection, the protest and notice may properly be given by them. Wilson v. Pringle, 14 U. C. R. 230.

Illegible Signature-Imitation.]-A notary at Montreal, Quebec, protested a note upon which the defendant, an attorney practising at Belleville, Ontario, was indorser. The notary could not read the defendant's signature, but made an imitation of it upon the notices and in the superscription of letter which was addressed to "Belleville, P. O.," i.e., Province of Ontario. The defendant was well known at, and constantly re-ceived letters from the Belleville post-office. There was proved to be a Belleville in New Brunswick. Other notes with defendant's indorsement thereon had been protested by the same notary. The defendant swore that he had never received the notice; but his clerks, who were accustomed to take his letters from the post-office, were not called. The notice to another indorser, addressed to "Belleville, P. O.," was received by him :- Held, that if the imitation of the defendant's signature put upon the notice addressed to Belleville, was an exact imitation of defendant's signature upon the note, and such notice was posted at Montreal, it would have been sufficient, whether it reached its destination or not. But, held, that upon the facts in evidence, there should be a new trial. Upon a new trial judgment was given discharging the indorser, which judgment was given discurring the indorser, which judgment was upheld in the court of appeal. Baillie v. Dickson, 46 U. C. R. 167; 7 A. R. 759, 765.

Instalments.] — A promissory note was payable in eighteen months after date, with interest at seven per cent. per annum, payable half yearly:—Held, that in order to bind the indorser, it was necessary to present the note for each instalment of interest and give him notice of dishonour. Jennings v. Napance Brush Co., 4 C. L. T. 595.

Lower Canada Law.]—Where a bill is drawn and indorsed in Upper Canada, but payable in Lower Canada, the law of Lower Canada governs the time within which notices may be sent. Matthewson v. Carman, 1 U. C. R. 259.

In an action on a note drawn and payable in Lower Canada, the law of Lower Canada must govern as to the sufficiency of the notice of non-payment. City Bank v. Ley, 1 U. C. R. 192.

The law of Lower Canada, with respect to giving notice, is to govern where the note is made payable and presented there, though the indorser reside in Upper Canada. Smith v. Hall, 3 U. C. R. 315.

Malling Notice.]—A notice deposited in the post-office of the city of Toronto. for any indorser residing there, is as good as if left at his residence. Commercial Bank v. Eccles, 4 U. C. R. 336.

Mailing Notice.]—The Merchants Bank of Halifax as holders of promissory notes indorsed by McN., brought an action against him for their amount. The notes were dated at Summerside. and were payable at the agency of the Merchants Bank of Halifax, Summerside. The defendant resided at the town of Summerside, and his place of business was there. Notices of dishonour were given to defendant by posting such notices, addressed to the defendant at Summerside, at 1 o'clock p.m. on the day after the day on which the notes matured, the postage on such notices being duly prepaid in both cases. There is no local delivery by letter carriers from the post-office in Summerside. No evidence was given by defendant that he did not receive the notices of dishonour, nor was any evidence given by the plaintiffs that the defendant had received them:—Held, that since the passing of 37 Vict. c. 47, s. 1 (D.), the notices given in the manner above set forth were sufficient. Merchants Bank of Halifax v, McNutt, 11 8, C. R. 126.

Partner Indorsing—Notice to Firm.]—The following notice held insufficient, the note having been indorsed by defendant in his own name only, although he was one of the firm: "Messrs P. M. Grover & Co. Gentlemen:—Take notice that the promissory note," &c., "on which you are indorsers, due this day, remains unpaid. Therefore the holders look to you for payment thereof as such indorsers." Bank of Montreal v. Grover, 3 U. C. R. 27.

Posting—Adjoining Post-office.]—In order to charge the indorser, the holder need not prove the notice to have been absolutely received. Due diligence in putting a letter into the post-office though the post miscarry, is sufficient. Though there is a post-office in the township in which the indorser resides, the holder need not direct his notice to that office, if there he a nearer office in the adjoining township to which the indorser's letters are generally sent. Bank of Upper Canada v. Smith, 3 U. C. R. 358.

Prior Indorsers. —Where the holder is suing the drawer of a bill upon which there have been several intermediate indorsers, he need not in the first instance shew notice from each indorser to the other within the regular period, but only to the defendant. Boyes v. Joseph, 7 U. C. R. 550:

Several Payees.]—Where a note is payable to and indorsed by several persons not partners, notice to one is notice to all. Bank of Michigan v, Gray, 1 U. C. R. 422.

Sureties Joining as Makers.]—The defendants made a joint and several promissory note with one II., as sureties for him, payable to the plaintiff:—Held, that in default of payment at maturity their liability to pay became absolute: and that it was no defence for them that the plaintiff neglected to present the note for payment, or give notice of non-payment by III. of which they were ignorant, and that believing the note had been paid by II. they took no steps to recover from him, although he was able to pay, and before they became aware of such non-payment H. had become insolvent. Wilson v. Brown, 6 A. R. 87.

Time—No Daily Mail.]—Plaintiff and defendant resided about three miles, apart; the mail ran between both places, and closed where plaintiff resided on Monday, Wednesday, and Friday in each week; the bill was presented for payment on Monday the 4th, being the last day of grace, and not paid; there being no mail on the 5th, notice was served on defendant by a special messenger on the 6th, before it could have reached him had it been mailed on that day:—Held, in good time. Chapman v. Bishop, 1 C. P. 432.

Time.]—Notice of non-payment mailed in the proper post-office between eight and nine in the evening of the day after protest:— Held, sufficient, though the post-mark upon it was of the following day. Wilson v. Pringle, 14 U. C. R. 230.

Time—Place of Mailing.]—A note was presented for payment on the 9th March at G., where the indorser lived, and the notice was mailed on the following day at M., a village five miles distant, but not received at G. until the 13th:—Held, sufficient. Taylor v. Grice, 7 T. U. C. R. 222.

Township.]—Held, that a notice of nonpayment sent to an indorser through the pasoffice, addressed to him in "York township." in which he resided, was sufficient, there being no evidence as to whether there was one or more post-offices in that township, nor any proof that a letter for any other person would have been usually addressed in a different manner, or ought in the common course to have been directed to any certain post-office in the township, or in any other township near him. Bank of Upper Canada v. Bloor, 5 U. C. R. 619,

3. Proof of.

Denial of Receipt — Summary Judgment, 1.—In an action against the maker and indorsers of a promissory note, in answer to a motion under Rule 80, O. J. Act, for judgment, the defendants, the indorsers of the note, who it was said were accommodation indorsers, swore that they had received no notice of dishonour. The protest of the note was not produced by the plaintiffs on the first return of the motion:—Held, that as there was no evidence that the defendants had received notice of dishonour, and a distinct denial by them of such notice, the metion should be refused. Ontario Bank v. Burke, 10 P. R. 561.

The protest having been produced after an enlargement: — Held, that being only presumptive evidence of the posting of the notice, it was not sufficient, in the face of the denial.

The note was dated "Prince Arthur's Laning," and since the making of the note the place so called was incorporated under the name of Port Arthur, the limits of the two places not exactly corresponding. One of the indorsers C. C. B. resided at Bowmanville:—Held, that the sufficiency of a notice addressed to C. C. B. at Port Arthur, was open to argument, upon which the defendant was entitled to have a trial, and on this ground judgment should not have been ordered. Ib.

Entries in Office Register, |—To prove notice of dishonour to defendant, an indorser of a note, the receipt of which he denied, the notary's clerk stated that he had no independent recollection of the matter, but that he had no hout of having mailed the notice to the address given by the defendant, from the statement to that effect in the protest which was in his hand writing, and from the entries in the notarial register kept in the office, which was produced, and which contained the particulars of the entry, and the day and hour of mailing the notices. His practice, he said, was to make the entry just before mailing, when he would look at his watch, note the time, and go to the post-office:—Held, sufficient evidence of the mailing of such notice, and the jury having found for the defendant a new trial was ordered. Merchants Bank v. McDougall, 30 C. P. 236.

Foreign Protest.]—Notice of dishonour of a foreign bill is not proved by producing the protest of the bill in which the notary certifies that he has given the parties notice. Ewing v. Cameron, 6 O. S. 541.

Lower Canadian Protest.]—The certificate of a notary in Lower Canada, at the feat of the protest, that he had put a notice into the post addressed to the indorser, is evidence of that fact under 7 Vict. c. 4, s. 2. Smith v. Hall, 3 U. C. R. 315.

New York Protest.]—In an action on a note, dated and payable at Ogdensburg, in the State of New York:—Held, that a protest of a notary of that state was no evidence of the facts therein stated; our statute, under which a protest is made prima facie evidence of those facts, only applying to protests made by notaries of Upper and Lower Canada. Griffan v. Judson, 12 C. P. 430.

Notary Uncertain.]—Where a notary (who had protested the note sued upon) under a plea of no notice, stated first that notice had been given, but upon referring to his book of notarial entries, and finding no notarials charged, stated that he felt "rather staggered, as to his having sent the notice:"—Held, that the jury were warranted in finding for the defendant. McDougall v. Wordsworth, S. C. P. 400.

Partners—Judgment by Default Against Onc.]—The of two indorsers, who at the time of indorsing were partners, plended that neither he nor his partner had due notice non-payment;—Held, that the fact of the partner of the partner of the partner as an admission of notice as against the defendant plending. Pengnet v. McKenzie, 6 C. P. 308.

Postmark.] — A foreign postmark on a letter is prima facie evidence of the time when the letter was mailed. O'Neill v. Perrin, M. T. 3 Vict.

Protest.] — Assumpsit on two notes against the indorsers. Plea by one defendant, "no notice of non-payment." A separate protest of each note was produced. One protest was dated on the day when the note fell due, and the other on the day after. They both certified that the indorsers had been notified, but did not state when:—Held, notice sufficiently proved as to both notes. Wood v. Hutt, 9 U. C. R. 344.

Protest.]—The defendant, a married woman, was entitled to dower in the lands of a former husband who died in 1886, but dower had not been assigned to her. After the death of her said husband she continued to reside on the lands till 1882, when she indorsed a note for the accommodation of her son, and to an action thereon she set up that she had no separate estate, but even if she had, being an accommodation indorser only, she was not liable. A judgment having been rendered against her, she moved for a new trial, alleging in addition to her former defence, want of notice of dishonour. That application having been refused she appealed to this court, when the ruling of the learned Judge below was affirmed, as the production of the protest for non-payment was sufficient evidence of the notice of dishonour, and there was not any merit in the other defence sought to be raised. Southam v. Hanton, 9 A. R. 530.

4. Waiver of Notice and Excuse for not Giving.

Collection-Negligence of Bank.] - The plaintif, a customer of the defendants' branch bank at Chatham, handed to the manager there for collection a note made by G. C. to, and indorsed by, T. C., both of whom lived at Detroit, where the note was made and payable. The Chatham branch stamped above payane. The Chatham oranca stampes above the indorsement of T. C. a special indorse-ment to themselves, but the Chatham manager, without indorsing the note, sent it to their Windsor branch for collection—Windsor be-ing their nearest branch for Detroit—without any instructions as to the place of residence of the indorser, who, however, was well known in Detroit. The manager of the Windsor branch indorsed it to the cashier of the First National Bank, their agent there, and sent Payment having it to him for collection. been refused upon presentation they handed it to a notary, who duly protested it but inclosed the notice for T. C., the indorser, in the envelope containing the notice to the Windsor branch, addressed to the manager of that branch, addressed to the manager of that branch. A clerk in the Windsor branch sent the notice for T. C. to the Chatham branch; which was duly posted at Windsor, but was never_received from the Chatham post-office, and T. C., the indorser, never received any notice. The Chatham manager received the notice. The Chatham manager received the protest by due course of mail, and could have seen from it, in time to rectify the mistake, that the notice for T. C. had been addressed to the Windsor agent. The indorser having been sued in Detroit escaped on the ground of want of notice, and, the maker being worth-less, the payee sued defendants for neglect with regard to such notice. It appeared that in Detroit it was the custom for the notary to send notices for the indorsers to the bank from which the note was received. It was contended for defendants that the branches contended for derenants that the branches were for this purpose distinct; that the notice was properly sent to Windsor, and thence to the Chatham branch, whence the note came; and that but for the neglect of the post-office the notice would have been duly received at Chatham and sent to the indorser. But held, that the defendants were liable: that on sending the note to their Windsor agent they should have given proper information as to shound have given proper information as to the residence of the indorser for the guidance of the notary: and that the Chatham branch having notice from the protest, which they should have examined, that the notice for the indorser had been sent to Windsor, they should at once have had a proper notice ser-ved in Detroit, which they could have done in time. Steinhoff v. Merchants Bank, 46 U. C. R. 25.

Collection—Notary's Negligence.] — Contract with express company to carry and present notes for payment—Delivery to notary—Failure by notary to notify indorser of non-payment—Company not liable. McQuarrie v. Fargo, 21 C. P. 478.

Evidence.]—A statement by the indorser of a dishonoured note to the holder that he would see the maker about it, and his subsequent statement that he had seen the maker who promised to pay as soon as he could, with a request not to "crowd the note," are not in themselves sufficient evidence of waiver of notice of dishonour. What is sufficient evidence of such waiver discussed. Britton v. Milsom, 19 A. R. 96.

Fraud of Notary.] - Defendants were maker and indorser respectively of a promissory note for the accommodation of D., who discounted it with the plaintiffs, they having knowledge of the facts. On the maturity of the note plaintiffs handed it to D., who was their solicitor, for protest. D. did not protest or notify defendants of its dishonour, but delivered it to them, adding that he had paid it. About three months after its maturity D. absconded in insolvent circumstances and after that defendants were for the first time notified of the non-payment of the note. In an action against defendants on the note they pleaded, on equitable grounds, the above facts, and that by the laches of the plaintiffs they were prevented from obtaining indemnity from D., and that if compelled to pay the note, they would be defrauded out of the note, they would be defrauded out of the amount:—Held, a good defence, and that the defendants were discharged, Canadian of Commerce v. Green, 45 U. C. R. 81. Canadian Bank Indorser Stating that Maker is Insolvent.)—Whenever the indorser writes to the holder to make him believe it unnecessary to give him notice of non-payment, especially where he states the maker to be insolvent, such a letter, though written before the note has matured, will be construed as a dispensation of notice. Beckett v. Cornish, 4 U. C. R. 138.

Part Payment—Cheque—Post-dating.]—A chosuse in this country may be post-dated, though in England that is prohibited by the stamp Acts. Where such cheque is payable on demand no agy series are allowed. Where on the same day for the country of the Pleading—No Effects.]—In a declaration against the drawer of a bill, notice of dishonour must be averred, and if to excuse such notice want of effects be averred, it must be shewn that there were no effects from the time of drawing the bill; and notice must also be averred where the defendant is only a guarantor of the bill. Goldie v. Maxwell, I U. C. R. 425.

Promise to Pay.]—A promise to pay made after action is as available as if made before. A conditional promise by an indorser to pay in land, or see that the plaintiff should lose nothing, waives any objection as to notice. Burke v. Elliott, 15 U. C. R. 610.

Promise to Pay.]—Where there has been a subsequent unconditional promise to pay, with a knowledge of a default on the part of the holder, the evidence of notice is dispensed with; and such promise supports the averment in the declaration that due notice of dishonour has been given. Bank of British North America v. Ross, 1 U. C. R. 139.

Promise to Pay.]—Where defendant, an indorser, knowing that notice had not been given, promised to pay:—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to a verdict on a plea denying notice. Semble, that it is only necessary to plead that notice was dispensed with, when an agreement to that effect had been made before the time for giving it. Shaw v. Salmon, 19 U. C. R. 512.

Promise to Pay.]—Upon a plea denying notice of non-payment, it appeared that the notice, though carelessly mailed by the notary on the day of protest to a wrong address, had been received by the defendant about a week after, and there was some slight proof of his having applied to the plaintiff for further time for payment. The jury were directed that the evidence was insufficient, but they found for the plaintiff; and the court, though agreeing with the direction, refused to interfere. Leith v. O'Ncill, 19 U. C. R. 233.

Promise to Pay.]—In an action by indorsee against indorser of a note, an averment of presentment and notice is supported by proof of a subsequent promise to pay, although it appears that there was in fact no proper presentment or notice. So held, in accordance with Kilby v. Rochussen. 13 C. B. N. S. 357. McCarthy v. Phelps, 30 U. C. R. 57.

Promise to Pay—Jury's Finding.]—The plaintiff in this case having to shew an agreement to waive presentment and notice, or a promise to pay, the jury, upon the evidence offered, which is set out in the case, found for defendant, and the court refused to interfere. Red v. Mercer, 16 C. P. 270.

Request for Time. —Where no notice of dishonour was proved, but it was sworn that defendant, the indorser, had asked for time, and promised to pay, although he said he had received no notice, the court refused to disturb a verdict for defendant. Bank of Upper Canada v. Cooley, 4 O. S. 17.

Request for Time.]—The plaintiffs sued the drawer of a bill for $1,000, upon it and two notes, for $1,000 and $500 respectively. No notice of dishonour of the bill had been given, but the plaintiffs' agent swore that after its maturity, in conversations with him respecting the whole liability, defendant appeared willing to pay if time were given, and said that if he and his brother (the acceptor) got time it would be all right. He said, however, that this bill was never particularly mentioned, and no promise made relating to it specifically:—Held, not sufficient to warrant a verdict for the plaintiffs, and a new trial was granted unless the plaintiffs would consent to a stet processus on the count upon the bill. Bank of Montreal v. Scott, 24 U. C. R. 115.

Wrong Address Given by Agent of Indorser, |—G. R. indorsed a note in blant. His agent being asked by plaintiff's agent where he, G. R., resided, gave an erroneous direction, which plaintiff's agent wrote in pencil under the indorser's name. Notice of non-payment sent to such place held sufficient. Vagaden v. Ross. 8 U. C. R. 506.

Wrong Address Given by Agent of Indorser.]—A. proposed to give his note, inforsed by defendant, in payment for goods, stating that defendant lived at Lindsay, and he subsequently transmitted such note to his creditor at Toronto:—Held, that he must be considered as the agent of the indorser: that his statement rendered further inquiry unnecessary; and therefore that a notice mailed to Lindsay was sufficient:—Held, also, that the above facts supported an allegation of due notice. McMurrich v. Powers, 10 U. C. R. 481.

V. PRESENTMENT.

1. How made and To Whom.

Acceptance After Date—Place.]—It is not necessify to present a bill drawn payable after slate, for acceptance before it be due; and where a bill is made payable at a particular place, presentment there for payment on the day it falls due is sufficient to charge the drawer, or to enable the person who took the bill to sue on his original cause of action. Releatation v. Danieles, 5 0, 8, 671.

Change of Residence-Diligence.]-The plaintiffs sued on a note made by one C., payable at no particular place, and indorsed by defendant. The note was left at the bank in Cobourg, where C. then resided, for collection; and the clerk who was to present it, that before the note became due heard that the maker had left Cobourg: that on its becoming due he went to the house in which C. had resided, but could get no information respecting him. He inquired of more than one person who had known C. well, but their answers as to where he had gone were conflicting. Witnesses for the defence, of whom C.'s partner was one, stated that no secret was made of his intended de-parture; that his furniture was advertised; and that they could at any time have given correct information as to his place of residence:—Held, that at least application should have been made at the places to which C. was said to have gone; that due diligence had not been used to discover his residence; and that the plaintiffs could not recover. And semble, that the question of diligence is not wholly a question for the jury. Browne v. Boulton, 9 U. C. R. 64.

thange of Residence — Bank's Liability—Held, that under the evidence, the bank were liable to the plaintiffs for want of presentment of the note mentioned in the last case, which had been indorsed to them by the plaintiffs for collection, notwithstanding a notice issued by them, and which the plaintiffs had received, that all notes delivered to them for collection should be wholly at the risk of the persons leaving them, and that they (the defendants) would be responsible only for moneys actually received in payment of such notes, but not for any omissions, informal-notes, but not for any omissions, informal-notes, but not for any omissions, informal-notes, but not for any omissions, informalities or mistakes, in respect of such notes. Browne v. Commercial Bank, 10 U. C. R. 129, Cheque—Suspension of Bank.]—Non-presentment of cheque before suspension of bankers. See Blackley v. McCabe, 16 A. R. 295.

Delay.]—A bill drawn in Toronto, on the 6th August, 1849, by a party dealing in bills, upon a party living in New York, payable at sight, in favour of a party living in Illinois, to be sent there as a remittance and for circulation. was presented in New York on the 16th November following:—Held, that the delay could not, under the circumstances, be held to be laches on the part of the holder. Boyes v, Joseph, 7 U. C. R. 505.

Foreign Country.]— Where a bill is made payable at a particular place in a foreign country, and there is no evidence of presentment there, nor of the law of that country on the subject, the necessity for presentment must be determined by our law. Buffalo Bank v, Truscott M. T. 2 Vict.

Holiday—Former Law.]—See Holmes v. Ward, T. T. 1 & 2 Vict.

Lower Canadian Law—Delay.] — The law of Lower Canada is the same as the law here and in England, that as between the holder and indorsers a note must be presented, so as to bind them, on the day the statute makes it payable, and at the place where it is payable; but, as between holder and maker, it is enough to present it any time within the period fixed by the Statute of Limitations, and before action. McLellan v. McLellan, 17 C. P. 109.

In this case, between holder and maker, the

In this case, between holder and maker, the note was made in Upper Canada, payable at the Bank of Montreal, in Montreal, and was not presented until five years after maturity, though before action:—Held, sufficient. It.

Non-presentment to Accommodation Maker.]—A. made his note payable to B., or order, who indorsed to defendants, and defendants to plaintiff, who averred in his declaration a presentment of the note to B. instead of to A. The note was made solely for the accommodation of the defendants, without any consideration to A., the maker. The plaintiff compromised with A. for a portion of the note, discharging him, and striking his name out of the note. The jury gave a verdict against defendants for the balance of the note—Held, verdict right. Sifton v. Anderson, 5 U. C. R. 305.

Particular Place.]—A note payable at a particular place must be presented there on the day it falls due, or the holder cannot recover against the indorser. Truscott v. Lagourge, 5 O. S. 134.

Particular Place,]—On a note payable at a particular place, without the words "and not elsewhere," it is sufficient to present it either at the place named, or to the maker himself. Commercial Bank v. Johnston, 2 U. C. R. 126, Particular Place.]—Semble, that even for the purpose of evidence, it is not necessary, in order to charge the indorser, since 7 Will. IV. c. 5, to shew presentment at the particular place. Bank of Upper Canada v. Parsons, 3 U. C. R. 383.

Particular Place.]—A promissory note payable at a particular place need not be presented there at maturity in order to charge the maker, although there are funds to meet it, and the Bills of Exchange Act, 1890, has made no difference in this respect. The duty of the maker of such a note is not only to lave sufficient funds at the place of payment at maturity, but also to keep them there until presentment:—Semble: The only effect of non-presentation before action, when sufficient funds have been kept at the place of payment, is to disentitle the plantiff to costs. Merchants Bank of Canada v. Henderson, 28 O. R. 360.

Payable at "Residence."]—Held, that a note made payable at the residence of D., at Strathrov, "only and not otherwise or elsewhere," did not require any special form of presentment, it being proved to have been on the day it matured at that place with D. Harris v. Perry, S. C. P. 407.

Pleading.]—In an action on a note, the declaration must aver presentment where it is payable. Ferrie v. Rykman, Dra. 61.

Pleading.]—An averment that the note was "duly presented" for payment to the maker, without specially stating either time or place, is sufficient to charge an indorser. Bank of Upper Canada v. Parsons, 3 U. C. R. 383; Commercial Bank v. Cameron, 3 U. C. R. 363.

Pleading.] — Indorsees sued defendants separately as payees and indorsers of a note payable at a particular place. The declaration averted a joint indorsement by the defendants, and a due presentment, "of all which defendant had notice," and the liability of the defendant. Demurrer, because a joint liability with another indorser is shewn on the face of the declaration, and no excuse alleged for omitting him; and because due notice is not alleged: —Held, declaration good upon the first, but had on the second ground. Commercial Bank v. Cameron: Commercial Bank v. Cameron: Commercial Bank v. Calero, 3 U. C. R. 363.

Representative of Maker — Temporary Office.]—Held, that the evidence set out in this case warranted the jury in finding that there had been a sufficient presentment of the note in question, for that the person who, on the day when it fell due, was at the place where defendant had carried on business, and to whom it was presented, was there as representing the maker, and the place was the maker's office for the day. Fitch v. Kelly, 44 U. C. R. 578.

Special Act.]—12 Vict. c. 22. as to presentment of notes, does not apply to Upper Canada. Ridout v. Manning, 7 U. C. R. 35.

2. Proof of.

Division Court.]—Semble, that recovery should not be allowed in a division court against an indorser of a note without proving either presentment or notice. Siddall v. Gibson, 17 U. C. R. 98.

Letter Refusing to Accept.]-In assumpsit by indorsees of a note against the maker, defendant pleaded that the only consideration for the note was a bill drawn by J. H. & Sons on one R. S. in Bacup, Lancashire, England, payable in London, which bill J. H. & Sons knew they had no right to draw, but imposed on defendant; and that the plaintiffs took the note with full knowledge of the facts; and that the bill was duly pre-sented to R. S., who refused to accept, and was duly protested for non-acceptance. the trial, to prove the presentment, R. S. defendant, put in a protest, which set out the bill, and a letter from the son of R. S., stating that his father was disappointed in not receiving funds from J. H. & Sons, in consequence of which he declined to accept. The notary stated in this protest, that B. H. & Co., producing the bill, together with a certain original letter of which a copy was given, requested him to protest the said bill for nonacceptance, declaring that they had forwarded the said bill to R. S., Esq., Bacup, Lancashire, upon whom it was drawn, but had received it back unaccepted as by said copy of letter appeared, wherefore, &c., signed and sealed by the notary:—Held, that the presentment was not sufficiently proved. Goodcrham v. Hutchison, 6 C. P. 231.

Pleading.]—Where a note is made payable by A. B. at a bank, a plea denying presentment to A. B. is good. Bank of Upper Canada v. Sherwood, S. U. C. R. 116.

3. Waiver of, and Excuse for Non-Presentment.

Absence from the Country.]—Assumpsith is against maker and inderser of a note. The first count alleged that the maker had absconded, and was absent from Canada when the note fell due. The second count averred as an excuse for presentment the absence of the maker and the plaintiffs' inability to find him. Pleas to first count, 1. That the note was not duly presented for payment; 2. That it was not duly presented at the maker's last place of abode. To second count, that the maker's last place of abode was well known to the plaintiffs when the note fell due:—Held, pleas bad. Forward v. Thompson, 12 U. C. R. 194.

Indorser's Watver.]—Immediately before the note fell due, the payee and first indorser wrote to the plaintiff requesting him to waive protest, and agreeing to hold himself liable just as if the note had been presented:—Held, that though the indorser was precluded by this from setting up want of presentment, the maker was not. McLellan v. McLellan, 17 C. P. 109.

No Funds.]—A note must be presented, although the maker had no funds at the particular place, but as between the payee and maker presentment there at any time before action will be sufficient, if there were no funds at the day. Henry v. McDonell, H. T. 3 Viet.

Pleading.] — A., the indorsee, sues B., the indorser, alleging that after the note became due, to wit, &c., B. indorsed to A. There was no averment of presentment or of notice.

B. pleaded that he did not indorse as alleged:
—Held, that under this plea the indorsement only, and not the time, was in issue:—Held also, that the note being indorsed when overdne was no excuse for non-presentment, and so the declaration shewed no cause of action; but nevertheless, as the plaintiff had been nonsuited for not proving the time of indorsement, the nonsuit must be set aside. The court, however, in such a case, may grant a new trial without costs, and then allow plaintiff to amend. Davis v. Dunn, 6 U. C.

Request for Time.]—Where defendant, an absconding debtor, on the day a note became due, wrote to plaintiffs stating his inability to pay, and requesting further time:
—Held, to render presentment unnecessary, although the note was payable at a particular place. McDonnell v. Loury, 3 O. S. 302.

Subsequent Promise to Pay.]—Where a joint note was made payable at a particular place, and it was not shewn that it was presented there when due, but one of the makers afterwards promised to pay it:—Held, sufficient evidence of presentment to go to the jury. Macaulay v. McFarlane, T. T. 3 & 4 Vict.

Subsequent Promise to Pay.]—Where a note was made payable at a particular place, although no averment of its being presented there for payment appeared upon the record, the court, after verdict for the plaintiff, and proof at the trial of a subsequent promise, refused a nonsuit. McIver v. Mc-Parlanc, Tay. 113.

Subsequent Promise to Pay.]—Upon the issues of non-presentment and non-payment, the holder of a note will be entitled to recover against the indorser by proving his subsequent express or implied promise to pay, even though the promise be made after the action brought and after issue joined. McCunniffe v. Allen, 6 U. C. R. 377.

VI. PROTEST.

Certificate on Adjoining Half Sheet.]

—The certificate of a notary on the adjoining half sheet of the protest, that he had served on the indorser a notice of non-payment is sufficient evidence of such notice. Russell v. Crofton, 1 C. P. 428.

Certificate Indorsed.]—Such certificate indorsed on the protest instead of being written at the foot of or embodied in it, sufficiently complies with 7 Vict. c. 4. Lyman v. Boutton, 8 U. C. R. 323.

Copy of Note.]—The annexing of a copy of the note to the protest, or affixing it to the notarial act, is sufficient. Lyman v. Boulton, S U. C. R. 323.

Damages for Wrongful Protest.]—
The declaration alleged that L. & Co. drew a bill of exchange for 80,72 on the plaintif, payable to the order of themselves at defendant bank, and indorsed it to defendants, and that it was duly presented by defendants to plaintiff, and was duly accepted by the plaintiff; that the defendants, with full knowledge of the plaintiff having so accepted, negligently, and without reasonable or probable cause, afterwards caused the said bill to be protested for non-acceptance by the plaintiff was injured in his credit and business with the drawers and others, and his business was thereby impeded, &c.:—Held, on demurrer, that no cause of action was shewn; for there was no negligence shewn as between plaintiff and defendants, nor any privity on which a duty or contract might arise; and that the action, if maintainable at all, must be as for a false representation knowingly made, which had injured the plaintiff in his business, and the declaration in this view was insufficient. Irvine v. Canadian Bank of Commerce, 23 C. P. 500.

Evidence, |—7 Vict. c. 4, s. 2, makes a certificate of a notary primă facie evidence of the protest; and s. 3 makes the protest primă facie evidence of presentment. Codd v. Leicis, 8 U. C. R. 242.

Protest.]—See Ross v. McKindsay, 1 U. C. R. 507: Commercial Bank of Canada v. Brega, 17 C. P. 473.

Seal.]—Semble, a seal is not necessary to a protest. Goldie v. Maxwell, 1 U. C. R. 424.

Scal.]—A protest without seal is admissible as evidence of the facts therein contained, under 13 & 14 Vict. c. 23, s. 6. Russell v. Urofton, 1 C. P. 428.

Time.]—A note made in Upper Canada payable at Montreal, is an inland note, being in effect payable generally under T Will. IV. c. 5, and may be properly protested the day after the third day of grace. Bradbury v. Boole, 1 U. C. 43, 442.

VII. Special Defences. 1. Alteration and Forgery.

Additional Maker.]—A promissory note made by two persons, one signing for the accommodation of the other, was, after maturity, signed by a third person:—Held, on the evidence, that this third person signed as an additional maker and not as an indorser and that there was, therefore, a material alteration of the note discharging the accommodation maker. Carrique v. Beaty, 24 A. R. 302, reversing 28 O. R. 175.

Addition of Maker's Name — Non-apparent Alteration—Holder in Due Course.]
—In an action on a promissory note against several parties as makers it appeared that the name of one of the alleged makers was not signed by him or with his authority, but was added to the note after some and before others of the makers had signed it before the note came to the hands of the plaintiff, a holder for value: — Held, that the plaintiff being the holder of the note in due course and the alteration not being apparent he could avail himself of it as if it had not been altered under the proviso to s. 63 of the Bills of Exchange Act 1890, 53 Vict. c. 33 (D.). Reid v. Humphrey, 6 A. R. 403, distinguished. Cunnington v. Peterson, 20 O. R. 346.

Amount Filled in.]—Where the defendant signed, as maker, a printed form of note, and handed it to A., by whom it was filled up for $855, and plaintiff afterwards became indorse of it for value without notice:—Held, that the defendant was liable, though it might have been fraudulently or improperly filled up or indorsed. McInnes v. Milton, 30 U. C. R. 489.

Cheque-Marking by Bank-Alteration-Forgery — Clearing House.] — A customer having a deposit account with the plainbank drew a cheque upon that bank payable to cash or bearer for five dol-lars and had it "marked" by the ledgerkeeper. He then altered it so as to make it apparently a cheque for five hundred dollars, it being in such form as to enable this to be done readily, and then deposited it with the defendant bank, obtaining from them by his cheques upon them the sum of five hundred dollars. The following day the defendant bank sent the cheque to the clearing house in the usual course of business, and there in adjusting the balances if was charged against the plaintiff bank as a cheque for five hundred dollars. On the next morning, when in the usual course of banking business at the place in question, the "marked" cheques received on the previous day from the clearing house were being checked with the deposit ledger, the alteration was discovered, and the plaintiff bank at once gave notice to the defendant bank and demanded payment of four hundred and ninety-five dollars :- Held, that the alteration of the cheque by the drawer after it had been "marked" was forgery; that the plaintiff bank was not responsible on the ground of negligence for the subsequent fraud of the drawer; that even if the adjustment of the balances in the clearing house constituted payment of the cheque, the notice given on the following day before the defendant bank altered its position or lost any recourse against other parties was in time; and that therefore the plaintiff bank was entitled to recover. London and River Plate Bank v. Bank of Liverpool, [1896] 1 Q. B. 7, considered. Judgment below, 31 O. R. 100, affirmed. Bank of Hamilton v. Imperial Bank, 27 A. R. 590.

Cheque. | - See Beltz v. Molsons Bank, 40 U. C. R. 253.

Conditions Erased. |-Action on a note made by defendant, payable to H. or bearer, and by him delivered to plaintiffs. Pleas, 1. That the note was made to secure the last instalment of purchase money of land sold by said H. and others to defendant, and when made was subject to a condition written thereon, that if the persons named should convey to the defendant said land, according to a certain bond given by them, then the note should be valid, but otherwise should be void; that they did not convey, and that said note that they did not convey, and this said now was altered by H. by erasing the condition so as to obtain for it currency, and not to cor-rect any mistake; 2. That at the delivery of said note to defendant there was written or indorsed thereon, with defendant's consent, a condition, &c., (as in the first plea); that the land was not conveyed; that H. afterwards fraudulently obliterated said condition, so as to render the note negotiable; and that plaintiff received the same with notice of the premises-Held, both pleas good; and that the agreement must be looked upon as part of the instrument. Campbell v. McKinnon, 18 U. C. R. 612.

Date.]—Held, that the alteration of a note by the holder (by placing the figure 1 before the figure 4 in the date, after it had become due, vitiated the same, and that the amount could not be recovered from either the makers or indorsers. Gladstone v, Dew. 9 C. P. 439.

Date. |—The changing by the payee of the date of a demand note, payable with interest, to a later date, is a material alteration and makes it void, though the effect of the alteration may be to benefit the maker by reducing the amount of interest chargeable against him. Boulton v. Langmuir, 24 A. R. 618.

Date and Amount Filled in.]—Where the payee and indorser of a note indorsed it for the accommodation of the maker, leaving the date and sum blank, which was afterwards filled up by the maker, and the note dated of a time later than the blank was indorsed, but prior to the time when the note was actually filled up:—Held, that the note was good against the indorser, notwithstanding the alteration. Sanford v. Ross, 6 O. S. 104.

Date and Time.] — A., the holder, sued B., the acceptor, and C., the indorser, as upon a bill dated "1st June, 1847, payable three months after date," which, when produced, appeared to have been in fact dated "November, 1841," and "payable four months after date," and to have been altered by erasure to read as declared upon:—Held, that the alteration was fatal to the holder's recovery, though an indorsee for value, and not in any way privy to it:—Held, also that the alteration as to time of payment was properly given in evidence under the pleas "did not accept," and "did not indorse." But, quere, as to the alteration in the date. Mercdith v. Culrer, 5 U. C. R. 218.

Destroying Restrictive Indorsement -Bona Fides.]-D. gave C. two promissory notes, payable to C. or bearer, but having indorsed on them contemporaneously with their making, and in the case of one of them on the edge of the paper, the words "the within notes not to be sold," which indorsement the evidence shewed formed part of the contract between the parties. The notes were transferred to S., with the word "not" in the above indorsement, in the case of one of them erased, and the whole of the said indorsement in the case of the other, in which it was written along the edge torn off, but without destroying any part of the face of the note :- Held, that whether the words of the above indorsement were underwritten or indorsed was immaterial, they being part of the original contract, and the effect of it was to prevent C. disposing of the notes to a holder for value, so as to preserve to the makers all defences and equities, as against the first holder and volunteers under him, thus qualifying their negotiability. Swaisland v. Davidson, 3 O. R.

Held, that the notes having been altered in a material part, D. was discharged, and S. could not be protected on the ground of any negligence on D.'s part in respect to the note in which the indorsement was written along the edge of the paper, inasmuch as the notes were issued in a perfected shape, and the doctrine of negligence does not apply to such perfected instruments. Ib.

perfected instruments. Ib.

It appeared that S. was a private banker; that he had been informed before taking the notes that they were given in purchase of patent rights; that he noticed the erasure in the one of them first purchased, and that he paid much less than the commercial value of them, while they both bore marks of infirmity and indeed of knavery:—Held, S. could not be considered an innocent holder of the notes.

Forgery.]—Forging indorser's name to a promissory note, no maker's name being thereto at the time. See Regina v. Fee, 13 O. R. S.

Forgery—Estoppel.]—Forgery of name of defendants to bill of exchange—Estoppel from denying liability by conduct of defendants prejudicial to the plaintiffs. See Merchants Bank v. Lucas, 13 O. R. 520, 15 A. R. 573, 18 S. C. R. 704.

Forgery—Estoppel.]—The plaintiff made an arrangement in T. with Y., an employee of a certain company, to discount their draft on B. & Co., for $4,989.65, at three months, and in pursuance of this arrangement a draft was drawn in H. by Y. in the company's name, on plaintiff payable on demand to their own order, for $4,800, dated 23rd July, 1883. This draft was taken by Y. to defendants' banking house at H., and there discounted by banking house at 11., and there discharged him, and the proceeds drawn by cheques in the name of the company. The draft was then forwarded by the defendants to their branch in T., and by them presented to the plaintiff for acceptance and payment. Plaintiff then discounted the first mentioned draft with the defendants at T., and with the proceeds paid the draft for $4,800. Plaintiff, about 11th September, 1883, discovered that both drafts had been forged by Y., and immediately notified defendants, at the same time demanding payment of the amount of the forged draft for $4.800, which was refused by defendants. Plaintiff paid the first mentioned draft at maturity: - Held, that although the plaintiff, by acceptance and pay-ment, was estopped from disputing the signature of the company, the drawers, yet he was not estopped from denying their signature as indorsers, even though it was on the bill at the time of acceptance and payment:— Held, also that defendants, having no title to the bill, the indorsement being a forgery, were not entitled to receive payment, and having not entitled to receive payment, and having been paid plaintiff was entitled to recover back the amount so paid:—Held, that plain-tiff had not lost his right of action by his delay in discovering the forgery, there being no actual genuine party on the bill against whom defendants could have recourse, and no remedy having been lost by them by such delay. Bun v. Rank of Montreal, 12 O. R. delay. Ryan v. Bank of Montreal, 12 O. R. 39, 14 A. R. 533.

Forgery of Prior Indorsements.]—In an action by the last indorsee against the last indorser of a promissory note, it is no defence that the names of the prior indorsers are forged. Eastwood v. Westley, 6 O. S. 55.

Interest Added.] — A printed form of note, with all the blanks filled in and complete in every respect, except that it had not been signed by the intended makers, was handed by them to defendant, indorsed by defendant for their accommodation, and handed back to them, when they, without defendant's knowledge, added, after the words "value received," the words "with interest at ten per cent. per annum," then signed it, and transferred it for value to plaintif:—Held, that defendant was discharged. Halcrow v. Kelly, 28 C. P. 551.

Interest Added—Assent.] — Held, that even if the note sued on—given for a composition agreed upon with the creditors of an insolvent, of whom the plaintiff was one—was altered after the indorsers had signed it, by adding the words "with interest at seven per cent," there was ample evidence (set out in the report of the case to shew that it was so altered while in the hands of the assignee, to conform to the original intention and agreement of the parties, and that the indorsers subsequently assented to it. Fitch v. Kelly, 44 U. C. R. 578.

Joint Made Joint and Several.] — Where a note originally joint was altered to joint and several without the consent of one of the makers, who was afterwards sued alone by an indorsee: — Held, that the plaintiff could not recover on the note on account of the alteration, nor on the money counts, as there was no privity between the maker and him. Samson v, Yager, 4 O. 8, 3

Payee's Name Added as Maker,]—After a promissory note, made by three persons, in these words: "We, either three of us, promise to pay D. P. or bearer," had been transferred to the plaintiff's testator, the payees mame was added to the foot of the note, apparently as maker. It did not appear note, apparently as maker. It was not his signature of the came three, but it was not his signature of the control of the second of the control of th

Place of Making and Payment Changed.]—A note when made by defendant was dated at Watford, and payable "at the Thomas Fawcitt's Bank, Watford;" and without defendant's knowledge or consent it was altered, by dating it at Alvinston and making it payable "at my" (defendant's) "place of business, Alvinston:"—Held, such a material alteration as to avoid the note. McQueen v. McIntgre, 30 C. P. 426.

Pleading.]—The plaintiff declared upon a note as made by the defendants jointly and severally. Quære, whether the interlineation of the words "jointly and severally," of which no explanation was offered, could be taken advantage of under non fecit, or whether a special plea was requisite. Leslie v. Emmons, 25 U. C. R. 243.

Signature after Indorsement.]—It is no objection to the validity of a note, that when indorsed to the plaintiffs it was not signed by the maker; the subsequent filling up of the maker's name, or of the amount, or of a payee's name, will be treated as if made before the indorsement. Rossin v. McCarty, 7 U. C. R. 100.

Time of Payment Changed—Ratification.]—After the making of a promissory note, it was altered by the maker as to the time of payment, without the consent of the indorser, who, however, but without knowledge of the alteration, promised to pay it:—Held, in an action against the indorser, that the alteration having been made without his authority rendered the note void, and that no subsequent promise by him to pay could have the effect of ratifying it. Held, also, that without actual knowledge of the alteration the promise to pay amounted to nothing, the means of knowledge alone being insufficient. Westloh v. Broven, 43 U. C. R. 402.

2. Consideration.

(a) Accommodation and Failure of Consideration.

Accommodation.] — See Bank of Nova Scotia v. Fish, 24 S. C. R. 709; St. Stephen's Bank v. Bonness, 24 S. C. R. 710.

Acts to be Done.]-Assumpsit on a note for £50 by payee against makers. Plea, that defendants were in partnership, and it agreed that they should admit the plaintiff into their firm on his advancing £1,000; that defendants in part performance caused alterations to be made in their store, and the plaintiff afterwards became proprietor of the same, and advanced £50 on account thereof; and to assist defendants in making such alterations, and for securing the same to the plaintiff defendants, on the understanding that said note was to form part of the consideration money for accepting plaintiff as a partner, signed said note for the accommodation of the plaintiff, and have always been ready to receive plaintiff as a partner on his paying the balance of said money; but plaintiff has always refused to pay such balance, or become a partner, or pay for the alterations made in consequence of the agreement :-Held, plea clearly bad, as setting up three defences repugnant to each other, and a parol agreement at variance with the note. Adams v. Forde, 13 U. C. R. 485.

Advance of Less Than Amount of Note.! — Indorses against maker: Plea, as to part of the sum, that defendant made the note only for the accommodation of the payee, and that the indorsee gave only a certain sum for it, to secure which it was transferred to him. The plaintiff replied that that sum was to be paid at a particular time, but if not so paid, the plaintiff was to hold the note for the whole sum secured by it: — Held, replication bad in substance, as the defendant being only an accommodation maker, could not be charged with more than the plaintiff gave for the note. Strathy v. Nicholls, I U. C. R. 32.

Antecedent Debt and Advance.]— Defendant indorsed a note for $1,230, for the purpose of enabling the maker to obtain, as an additional advance from an estate of which the plaintiff was receiver, the difference between that sum and a loan of $918, advanced to him before the making of the note, which additional advance was, however, not made:— Held, that defendant was not liable as indorser for the $918 originally loaned, and that a plea setting up the above facts was good.
Greenwood v. Perry, 19 C. P. 403.

Benefit of Value Given by Prior Holder.]—An indorsee without value is entitled to recover on a bill or note if any intermediate party is a holder for value. Wood v. Ross, S.C. P. 299.

Collateral Security — Renewals.]—The defendants made a note for $200, to one M. to assist M. in retiring paper in which defendants were interested. M. discounted his own note for $200 with the plaintiffs, depositing with them the defendants' note as collateral. When M.'s note fell due, the defendants' note being then overdue, he paid $25 and gave a renewal for $175. leaving defendants' note with the plaintiffs. Per Wilson, C.J.—Defendants' note was not an accommodation note; but assuming it to be so:—Held, that the proper inference from the evidence was that it was transferred to the plaintiffs as security for the debt represented by M.'s note, not for the note specialty; and that defendants remained liable. Canadian Bank of Commerce v. Woodward, S.A. R. 347.

Collateral Security.]-One M. made a note on the 17th November, 1868, payable to T. or order, at three months, at the Quebec 1. or order, at three months, at the Quebec Bank, for $4,000, which was indorsed by T. and the plaintiff, and discounted by the bank for T. On the 24th November, 1808, a note for $1,500 made by W. payable to T., and indorsed by M. for T.'s accommodation, was handed by the bank to T. as collateral security for the $4,000 note, and the bank also advanced on it $1,000 to T. This note, when it fell due on the 27th January, 1869, was retired by the note sued on, which was for $1,500, at two months, made by W., payable to T. and indorsed by T. and by M. to the bank, and was given, as the bank manager swore, for the same purpose as the previous $1,500 note. The bank received $1,200 from T. on account of the $4,000 note, and the plaintiff paid the balance on the understand-ing that the bank would hold the $1,500 note for his benefit, and they afterwards, at his request, gave it to their solicitor to sue. In an action on this note by the plaintiff against W. and M.:—Held, that he was entitled to recover; for, 1. he was the holder of the note; 2. the note being deposited with the bank as collateral security for the $4,000 note, and not merely for the $1,000 advanced on it, the bank held it for the full amount; 3, if the note could not be said, when taken on the 27th January, 1869, to be a security for value because the $4,000 note had not then matured, it became so when the latter note fell due on the 20th February, 1869, and value arising at any time during the currency of a note is sufficient. Blake v. Walsh, 29 U. C. R. 541.

Collateral Security - Subsequent Holder.]-The M. manufacturing company, in the usual course of their business, took from their agents, notes for machines supplied to them, which were transferred by the M. company as collateral security to a bank where they had a line of credit. The agreement with the agents was that upon their substituting their customers' notes for their own, they were entitled to the delivery up of the latter. defendant, who was the agent, had given notes for machines supplied to him, which were handed to the bank by the company, He afterwards transferred to the company a large number of the customers' notes. The bank manager finding some of the defendants' notes overdue, demanded that they should be replaced by fresh paper, and the company then applied to the defendant, who gave the notes sued on without getting an adjustment of accounts between them, though there was but a small balance due to the company; and these notes were transferred to the bank and the old notes given up. The M. company got into difficulties, and the bank sued B., their president, and another who, jointly with the M. company, had guaranteeed the company's account to the extent of $50,000. B., in order to protect himself, resigned the presidency, and undertook to pay off the company's in-debtedness to the bank, and take all their securities. A resolution of the board was passed approving of this, and the M. company directed the bank to transfer to B. the company's securities on payment. B. applied to the plaintiff for the money, and he advanced requisite amount, having obtained the same by pledging stock and other securities to a loan company, and took all the notes held by the bank to hold for collection to pay exby the bank to hold for collection to pay ex-penses, repay the advances, pay their indebt-edness to the loan company, and to account to B. The notes sued on were amongst those transferred to the plaintiff, who took them without notice of their character, or the state of the account between the defendant and the M. company: - Held, that he stood in the place of the bank, and succeeded to all its rights, and that the defendant was liable to the full amount of his notes in the plaintiff's hands. Cowan v. Doolittle, 46 U. C. R. 398.

Conditional Sale of Goods — Loss of Goods by Fire.]—The plaintiffs sold and delivered certain machinery to the defendant, receiving part of the price in cash and part in notes, and by the contract of sale it was provided that no property in the machinery should pass to the defendant until it was paid for. The machinery was destroyed by fire before the notes were paid. In an action on one of the notes:—Held, that the defendant had the possession and use of the machinery and an interest in it; that there was not a total failure of consideration for the note or a partial failure which was assertained, and that the plaintiffs were entitled to recover. Coldic and McCulloch Co. (Ltd.) v. Harper, 31 O. R. 284.

Conditional Satisfaction.] - Assumpsit against the indorser of two notes made by B. Plea, that the plaintiff held a judgment and execution against B., and it was agreed that on the indorsement of said notes by the defendant he should discharge B. from all liability upon said judgment and execution, &c., which he did not do, &c. On a special case stated, it was admitted that B. arranged with the plaintiff that upon these notes being given the execution should be withdrawn; that defendant indorsed the notes and enclosed them to the plaintiff with a letter, stating that he was informed by B, that the plaintiff held an execution against him which the plaintiff had agreed "to discharge by his giving you the agreed "to discharge by his giving you the notes," that he indorsed them on that understanding, and if not so, his indorsements must standing, and if not so, his indorsements must be crassed. The plaintiff answered, acknow-ledging the receipt of the notes "on account of an execution against B." and stating that further proceedings against him would be suspended during their currency, but in default of payment he should feel himself in a position to enforce execution. No further communica-tion took place between them. These notes having been protested, the plaintiff issued an alias B. fa. upon his judgment:—Held, that the plea was not proved. Wightman v. Daniels, 13 U. C. R. 487.

Debt Due to Estate.]—A debt due to a bankrupt estate, is a good consideration for notes given to the trustees and assignees of the estate. Gates v. Crooks, Dra. 459.

Debt of Third Person.]—A note given by A. to B. for a debt due by C., upon no consideration of forbearance, and upon no privity shewn between A. and C., cannot be enforced. McGillieray v. Kecfer, 4 U. C. R. 456.

Debt of Third Person.]—Semble, that a debt due by a third party, but not yet payable, may form a valid consideration for a note. Dickenson v. Clemon, 7 U. C. R. 421.

Debt of Third Person.] — Where the debtor died owing more than he had the means of paying, and a month afterwards his mother, who wished to pay all his debts, was induced to give a note to one of the creditors for an amount which was less than one-eighth the value of her property, it was held, that in the absence of fraud, the note, though given without professional or other advice, could not; be impeached in equity. Campbell v. Belfour, 16 Gr. 108, Discounting.]—Remarks as to the practice in this country of taking notes for discount, not from the last indorser, but from the maker, who brings them indorsed—thus suggesting not a business transaction, but accommodation indorsements. Bank of Montreal v. Repnolds, 25 U. C. R. 352.

Evidence.]—Held, that upon the evidence set out in this case, those pleas were supported which set up as a defence that the note was made and indorsed for plaintiffs' accommodation. Bouces v. Holland, 14 U. C. R. 316.

Exchange of Cheques—Pleading.]—A., a private banker, exchanged cheques with B. for mutual accommodation. A. used B.'s cheques. A cheque of A.'s had been dishonoured, and the holder called at A.'s office on the same day and a clerk in the ordinary course of business gave the holder B.'s cheque to pay the dishonoured cheque. Next day A. stopped payment:—Held, that the holder could recover against B. on his cheque:—Held, also, that under the plea of not the holder, B. could not set up any supposed right in A.'s assignee, nor possibly under any pleading on these facts. City Bank v. Smith, 20 C. P. 93.

Exchange of Horses—Breach of Warranty]—A. and B. exchanged horses, and B. gave A. a note for difference in the exchange.
A. sold the horse he got from B. almost immediately, and after two years, during which nothing appeared to be done by either party,
B. was sued upon the note by A.:—Held, that
B. could not set up as a defence that the horse he received was unsound, although A. had declared him free from fault and blemish at the time of sale. Hall y. Coleman, 3. O. S. 39.

Failure to Plead—Relief in Equity.]—
Where the maker of a note was sued thereon, and instead of raising the defence at law, that the note had been given without consideration, save as to part, pleaded that the plaintiff in the action was not the holder of the note, and a verdict was rendered against the defendant for the full amount thereof, for which execution against lands was sued out and placed in the sheriff's hands, whereupon the defendant in the action filed a bill to restrain proceedings at law. A demurrer for want of equity was allowed. Leitch v. Leitch, 11 Gr. 81.

Giving Time — Pleading.] — Declaration upon a promissory note. Third plea—"That the defendant made the said note with and for the accommodation of one W. C., at the request of the plaintiffs, in respect of a pre-existing debt, then due to the plaintiffs by the said W. C. alone, and the said note was drawn payable on demand, with interest at 10 per cent., and except as aforesaid there was never any value or consideration for the making or payment of the said note by the defendant." ourth plea-On equitable grounds. That the defendant made the note jointly and severally with W. C. for his accommodation, and as his surety only, to secure a debt due to the plainsurety only, to secure a debt due to the plain-tiffs, and that after the note became due the plaintiff gave W. C. an extension of time for the payment of the note: — Held, that the third plea was good, for it shewed that no ex-tension of time had been given, and therefore that there was no consideration; and that the fourth was not an equitable plea and must be amended by striking out the words, "upon equitable grounds," and the jury notice served with it allowed to stand. Merchants Bank v. Robinson, 8 P. R. 117.

Gurantee of Price of Goods—Indorsement of Bill for Larger Amount.]—The defendant agreed with the plaintiff that whatever goods P. should order of the plaintiff would become surety for. P. sent a written order to the plaintiff, who in addition to the goods ordered, sent others, and the whole consignment was invoiced at prices higher than those quoted by the plaintiff and than those at which P. had ordered some of the goods. Without disclosing these facts to the defendant, but in perfect good faith, the plaintiff presented a bill of exchange upon P. for signature by the defendant, who signed the same supposing that it was for the price of the goods ordered. P. accepted the bill and kept the goods:—Held, reversing 45 U. C. R. 386, that the defendant was liable to the extent of the goods ordered, and that the consideration for the bill failed as to the excess only. Barber v. Morton, 7 A. R. 114.

Infancy.]-To an action on four promissory notes made by the defendant and one H. payable to the plaintiff, the defendant set up that the notes were given for the purchase of the plaintiff's interest in certain home-stead lands in the State of Michigan, H. being the purchaser and defendant surety; that under the laws of Michigan only persons of 21 years of age could homestead lands; and that the plaintiff was under that age. There was no representation that plaintiff was of age, and II. obtained from plaintiff a surrender of his interest in the land whereby he was enabled to have himself located in his stead, which he otherwise might have had difficulty in doing, and he got the same rights which he would have got if the plaintiff had been of full age :- Held, that it could not be said that there was no consideration for the notes, nor any misrepresentation; and the plaintiff was therefore held entitled to recover. Fletcher v. Noble, 8 O. R. 122.

Insurance Loss.]—A note was given by defendant, secretary of an insurance company, for a loss, the policy having been marked "cancelled," and left in the possession of the company, and the note was not payable until three days after the loss would be payable by the policy. Semble, that this shewed a sufficient consideration; but there was other evidence of plaintiff being a holder for value. Armour v. Gates, 8 C. P. 548.

Lease—Death of Lessor, I—A, being seized in fee of lands, made jointly with B. a lease of those lands to C., tarking notes from C. for the rent, payable as it would become due. The day after the execution of the lease A, died intestate, and then B, died, and B.'s executors such C. on the notes:—Held, that they could not recover, the consideration for which the notes were given having failed. Mervien v. Gates, E. T. 7 Will, IV.

Loan From Joint Fund. — A member of a joint stock company, not incorporated, lending, with the assent of the company, a sum of money out of the joint fund to another member, and taking from him a note payable to himself, individually, for re-payment, can recover on the note, notwithstanding that the funds were advanced from the common stock. Comer v. Thompson, 4 O. S. 256.

Partial Failure.]—Partial failure of consideration is no defence to a note. Dixon v. Paul, 4 O. S. 327; Hill v. Ryan, 8 U. C. R. 443.

Partial Failure.]—Nor that the consideration proved less beneficial than was represented. Dalton v. Lake, 4 O. S. 15.

Partial Failure. |-To an action on promissory note for $498, made by the defendant to the plaintiff, the defendant pleaded, on equitable grounds, that by an agreement be-tween the parties a partnership which had existed between them was dissolved, and the defendant was to give the plaintiff the promissory note in question, and to pay certain debts and liabilities of the firm, and in consideration therefor to become the sole owner of certain property of the firm, and to have assigned to him by the plaintiff all the plaintiff's interest in certain debts and accounts due to the firm as well as certain debts and accounts due to the plaintiff personally; that the defendant had performed his part of the agreement by giving the note and paying such debts and liabilities, but the plaintiff, although requested so to do, had neglected to perform his part by giving the defendant such a power of attorney or assignment as would enable him to sue for the said debts and accounts, whereby he was prevented from obtaining payment of the same: that, except as aforesaid, there was no consideration for the making of the said note; and that such debts and accounts were equal to the plaintif's claim on the said note:—Held, plea bad, as shewing only a partial failure of consideration; and that defendant's remedy was by cross action. Kilroy v. Simkins, 26 C. P. 281.

Pleading.]—Plea of accommodation and no consideration. Replication, traversing no consideration, but not the accommodation:— Held, bad on special demurrer. Gilmore v. Edmunda, 2 U. C. R. 419; Brown v. Wheeler, 6 U. C. R. 393; Allen v. Skead, 9 U. C. R. 217. Indorsee against maker. Plea, that the note was made and delivered to plaintiff in payment of 200 hats and caps, to be delivered by plaintiff to defendant, and that they remained undelivered, but not averring any request for their delivery:—Held, bad on denurrer. Anderson v. Jennings, 2 U. C. R. 422.

A plea that defendant indorsed without consideration from the maker or the plaintiff, is bad. Bank of British North America v. Sherveood, 6 U. C. R. 213.

A plea that defendant made the note to the plaintiff as a gratuity, and that defendant never received any consideration therefor, is good. Poulton v. Dolmage, 6 U. C. R. 277.

Where the plaintiff sets out the consideration on which defendant's promise was made, a plea that there was never any consideration for the promise is bad. Bradford v. O'Brien, 6 U. C. R. 417.

Defendant pleaded that he made the note on account of payment of a piece of land, which the plaintiff then agreed to sell and convey to him, and to which the plaintiff then professed to have a title; whereas the plaintiff never had any right in or to the said land, and could not, and did not, convey the same to defendant pursuant to the agreement; and that there never was any consideration for making said note, except as aforestable—Held, on demurrer, plea bad, for not skewing when a title was to be made, or what the agreement was. Blanchfield v. Birdsall, 7 U. C. R. 141.

Payee against maker. Plea, note made for plaintiff's accommodation without consideration. Replication need not shew what the consideration was. Gravely v. Jones, 8 U. C. R. 606.

Payee against maker. Plea, that the note was given for plaintiff's title to land, and that he had no title at the time of making the note or since, and so there was no consideration for the note:—Held, on demurrer, plea bad, for for all that appeared the plaintiff might have got all he expected, and it might be assumed that plaintiff had conveyed by deed with covenants, in which case, there would not be an entire failure of consideration. Landy v. Carr, 7 C. P. 371.

It is no defence by the maker that the plaintife indersee, gave no value to the inderser for his indersement, or that he took the note knowing that it was indersed for accommodation of the maker, without denying that he is a holder for value. Miller v. Ferrier, 7 U. C. 15, 540.

Declaration against maker of a note payable to bearer, and delivered by defendant to plaintiffs. Pica, that the note was made for the accommodation of A. and C.; that there hever was any consideration or value for the payment of it by defendant; and that the plaintiffs held and hold the same without value or consideration:—Held, bad. Muir v. Cameron, 10 U. C. R. 356.

In an action on a note by payee against maker, plea that there was never any value or consideration for the making the said note or paying the same, is bad on demurrer; it should state the circumstances under which the note was given, and deny that there was any other consideration than alleged. Osborne v. Pierson, 36 U. C. R. 457.

Pre-existing Debt.]—A pre-existing debt is a good consideration in whole or in part for a note or bill. Gooderham v. Hutchison, 5 C. P. 241; Hillis v. Templeton, 7 L. J. 301.

Pre-existing Debt.]—And not the less so from a mortgage on real estate having been taken to secure the same debt. Bank of Upper Canada v. Bartlett, 12 C. P. 238.

Pre-existing Debt.]—Semble, that there is no distinction as regards consideration, between a note given for a pre-existing debt and for a new consideration. Evans v. Morley, 21 U. C. R. 547.

Presumption of Value-Onus of Proof.] —In an action upon a promissory note the only fact shewn by the defendants, an incoronly fact snewn by the defendants, an incor-porated company, as the basis of a defence, was that they made the note for the accom-modation of one of their directors. They did not shew that the plaintiffs were not holders for value in due course without notice; while the plaintiffs swore that the note was dis-counted before maturity in the usual course of their banking business; and it was admitted that one of the trustees for the defend-ants, who were insolvent, had offered to the plaintiffs the compromise of fifty cents on the dollar, which the undoubted creditors were accepting:—Held, upon a motion for summary judgment under Rule 739, that the defence alleged was not founded upon any known facts, but was mere guess work, and unless the defendants paid into court a sub-stantial portion of the plaintiffs' claim as a condition of being allowed to defend, the mo-tion should be granted. The presumption that value has been given may be done away with in the case of notes, which have had their origin in actual fraud, but not in the case of notes made for the accommodation of others; and even where accommodation notes are made by an incorporated company, the onus of shewing value is not shifted over to the plaintiffs. Re Peruvian Railways Co., L. R. 2 Ch. 617, followed. Millard v. Baddeley, 118841 W. N. 98, and Fuller v. Alexander, 47 L. T. N. 8, 443, distinguished. Merchants National Bank v. Ontario Coal Co., 16 P. R.

Prior Payment.]—Assumpsit on a bill drawn by one defendant on the other two, and accepted. Fourth plea, that the bill was delivered by the acceptors to Messrs. II., who transferred it to one G. as security for flour to be sold by him to them; that G. refused to deliver said flour, and in consequence Messrs. II. were entitled to receive back the bill, and G. held it without consideration, and as their agent; that while he so held it the acceptors made their note payable to the drawer, or order, which was duly indorsed, and delivered by the acceptors to Messrs. H. in satisfaction of the bill: that H. afterwards, in fraud of defendants, directed G. to deliver the bill to the plaintiff, and that he thereupon, and without consideration from the plaintiff, and as the agent of H., delivered said bill to the plaintiff, who received it without consideration, and after it was due. The fifth plea was, that the bill was indorsed to G. in part payment for the flour; that after G.'s refusal to deliver he held without consideration, and while it was so in his hands defendants paid it, as alleged in the last plea: that the acceptors were then entitled to re ceive it from G., and that he thereafter held as agent for them, and that it was overdue when it came into the plaintiff's hands: Held, upon the evidence set out in the case, that the plaintiff must recover; that the defendants had acted negligently in paying as they did, and that neither of the pleas was proved; for, as to the fourth, G. did not receive the bill as security, but rather in part payment for the flour, nor did he deliver the bill to the plaintiff by Messrs. II.'s directions: and as to both pleas, he could not be said to hold the bill after refusal to deliver the flour as the agent of Messrs. H., and without consideration, because they had not treated the contract for the sale of the flour as rescinded but had assumed to hold him liable upon it by making over his flour acceptance; and, as he was a bona fide holder for value, it was of no consequence whether the plaintiff taking from him knew that the bill had been paid by Messrs. H. or not. Clarkson v. Lawson, 14 U. C. R. 67.

Renewal of Barred Note.]—Action on a promissory note. Plea, no consideration, as it was given in renewal of another note on which plaintiff's remedy was barred by the Statute of Limitations:—Held, no defence. Wright v. Wright, 6 P. R. 295.

Sale of Goods—Inferiority.]—Defendant proved that the note had been given by him to the plaintiff for the balance of purchase money on a sale of some hams warranted good by the plaintiff, and that many of the hams were bad. The jury found for defendant on the ground that the hams were not worth more than the money paid:—Held, that the partial failure was no defence, without evidence of fraud. Kellogg v. Hyatt. 1 U. C. R. 445.

Sale of Goods - Definite Decrease in Value.]—K., acting as agent for the plaintiff company, his wife, but which was in reality a trading name for his own business, fraudulently represented that certain goods manufactured by himself, possessed curative or medicinal qualities and were saleable, and thereby induced the defendant to buy a quantity and to give his promissory note therefor, In an action on the note by the plaintiff company, the defendant counterclaimed for part of the amount of the note, which he had been obliged to pay to an innocent holder. The jury found that the articles sold were valueless; that the defendant had been induced to purchase by the misrepresentations; and that he had received no consideration for the note, except as to some of the pads, which he had sold:—Held, that the plaintiff could not recover, for the partial failure of consideration, being for an amount capable of definite computation, could be set up as an answer pro tanto, and the consideration received had been more than covered by the sum paid: -Held, also, that the defendant was entitled to recover against the plaintiff company the damages sustained, without having previously offered to return the goods. Star Kidney Pad Co. v. Greenwood, 5 O. R. 28.

Sale of Goods - Definite Decrease in Value.]—The defendants purchased the stockin-trade of one C. for $5,500, and an agreement under seal was executed by the parties whereby defendants covenanted to pay the said sum. The agreement also provided that a portion of the consideration should be securby four promissory notes of $1,100 each. After the last note became due, C. indorsed it "without recourse" to the plaintiff. To an action on the note the defendants pleaded that the value of the goods had been misre-presented to them by C. and that before said note became due, C. agreed to allow a reduction of $500 from its face value, and that plaintiff took the note after it had become They paid 8626.50 into court, being the balance due on the note with interest. At the trial the plaintiff, in his evidence, admitted that he did not claim to occupy any different position from C. The defendants' evi-dence shewed a verbal agreement to make the reduction of $500, but C. swore he had never made the agreement. The Judge at the trial found that C. had promised to make the reduction, and that the plaintiff stood in the same position as C., and he dismissed the ac-tion with costs:—Held, that the defendants had a right to enforce the agreement for the allowance of $500, there being a partial failure of consideration for an ascertained and liquidated amount. McGregor v. Bishop, 14 O. R. 7.

Sale of Land.]—To an action on two notes, defendant pleaded that they were given for the assignment to him of the plaintiff's right to two lots of Crown land, of which the plaintiff falsely and fraudulently represented that he was locatee: that the plaintiff had no claim to said land, and the notes were obtained from defendant by fraud: — Held, that on shewing the plaintiff's tile to one of the lots to have been bad, without proving fraud, the defendant was entitled to succeed as to that part of the claim for which the consideration had failed. Such a defence, however, should properly be pleaded only to that part of the demand covered by it. O'Brien v. Ficht, 18 U. C. R. 241.

Sale of Land-Defective Title.]-One W as agent for J., sold to defendant two lots of land for $1,000, receiving $100 down and taking defendant's notes for the balance. This land had been purchased from the Crown in 1854, by one W., who had assigned his right to C., and C. to J. The instalments had all been paid to government, and W. told defendant that when he did the settlement duties he could get the patent. He also handed to defendant the assignments and receipts, with an assignment from J. to defendant. The lots were then vacant, and defendant soon after went into possession and performed the settlement duties, but when he applied to the Crown lands department for his patent, he was informed that the original sale to W. had been cancelled, as having been obtained in fraud of their regulations; and to avoid losing the land he again purchased it from government for $550. In an action brought by J.'s agent upon the notes, W. swore that he believed what he told the defendant to be true, and had no doubt J. also believed it, and there was no proof to the contrary:—Held, that there was no evidence to sustain a defence on the ground of fraud; that there was not a total failure of consideration; and that the plain-tiff therefore was entitled to recover. Walker v. Ironglas, 23 U. C. R. 9.

Sale of Land.]—To a declaration on a note, the defendant pleaded as to £157 19s., part, &c., that the plaintiff represented that be owned certain lands, and was the equitable owner of lot 14, &c., through one R., who held it as trustee for him; and that defendant was induced by his false and fraudulent representations to buy the same from plaintiff, whereupon the plaintiff conveyed all his interest in said lands to the defendant; that defendant paid part down, and gave his two notes for the balance, one of which is the note declared upon; that the plaintiff had no interest in said lot, and that R. refused to assign his interest in said to to the defendant:—Held, no answer to the action, the contract being entire, and the failure of consideration not being definite as to this note. Coulter v. Lec. 5 C. P. 201.

Sale of Land—Rescission.]—C. having purchased Y.'s interest in certain lands which were in the city of Montreal, and upon which were in the city of Montreal, and upon which mortales of $80,000, gave his promissory notes mortales professory. The production of the p

Sale of Ship.]—Assumpsit on a note made by defendant jointly with A. and B. Plea, that the note was given for the purchase none; of a schooner sold by plaintiff to A. and B. Hear, that the hear was given for the purchase mone; of a schooner sold by plaintiff to A. and B., defendant being their surety: that the injuritif, on such sale guaranteed the vestigation of the sold A. and B., imministiff well knew, and the said A. and B., imministiff well knew, and the said A. and B., imministiff well knew, and the said A. and B., imministiff well the sale. At the trial the written instrument was produced, from which it appeared that the sale. At the trial the written instrument was produced, from which it appeared that the sale was to defendant alone, and no such guarantee as alleged was contained in it. It was proved that A. and B., after keeping the vessel a fortnight, tendered her back to the plaintiff, but she was refused, and they went on using her:—Semble, that the facts did not shew a total failure of consideration, and therefore formed no defence. Henderson v. Cotter, 15 U. C. B. 345.

Sale of Ship.1—Where an action was brought for breach of contract in refusing to sign certain notes, the sale and delivery to defendants of shares in a schooner being alleged as the consideration for the promise; and it appeared that the plaintiff had surrendered his interest to the defendants; and that they had continued in exclusive possession of the vessel; but that no assignment had been made as the statute directs, and no transfers indorsed on the registry, nor any new certificate of ownership granted; the court ordered a nonsuit. But if the defendants had given their notes, they could not have resisted payment on the ground that they had not received a valid title, for there would only have been a partial failure of consideration. Orser v. Mounteny, 9 U. C. R. 382.

Sale of Timber. |- Declaration by payees against makers of a note for $1,000, payable at three months. Plea, on equitable grounds, that the plaintiffs falsely and fraudulently represented to the defendants that they had the right to cut hardwood timber under a Crown license on certain lands of which they gave defendants a list; that defendants, wishing to purchase such right, had all the lots examined, and thereupon, relying upon and believing plaintiffs' said representations, and being induced thereby, as plaintiffs well knew, defendants agreed with the plaintiffs to pur-chase the right for $2,800, of which $1,800 was paid down, and this note given for the balance; that defendants relying, &c., cut balance: that detendants relying, &c., cut and made timber on the lots; that the plain-tiffs had no such right in respect of a large quantity of said lands, by reason whereof defendants' rights acquired under said agreement, were worth less by more than $1.000 than the plaintiffs represented they were possessed of and pretended to sell: that defend-ants first became aware of the fraud after they had paid the money and given the note, and expended a large sum, and they are likely to lose the money expended by them in manufacturing a large quantity of the timber cut by them: and defendants prayed that it might be declared they were not liable to pay the note; and that the plaintiffs might be required to pay them a fair compensation for their loss by reason of such representations:-Held, on demurrer, plea bad; that it shewed only a partial failure of consideration, and not of any definite sum: that it was not a case of either legal or equitable set-off; and that the defendants could not prevent the plaintiffs' recovery until their right to damages or compensation, and the amount of it, had been ascertained; and, semble, that it should have shewn a tender of or readiness to pay the value of, or an offer to give up to plaintiffs, the timber cut by them on the lots to which plaintiffs had no right; and perhaps, that since discovering the fraud they had cut no timber on such lots. Georgian Bay Lumber Co. of Ontario v. Thompson, 35 U. C. R. 64.

Special Agreement as to Part.]—The plaintiff suce upon a bill drawn by A. upon B. for £30. payable to his own order, accepted by B., by A. indorsed to C., and by C. to the plaintiff. A. pleaded as to £15, part, that the plaintiff accepted the bill from him on an undertaking that he was to collect it and apply £15 out of the proceeds to pay that amount due to the plaintiff, wherefore, except as to £15, there was no consideration for the bill:—Held, plea bad. Brown v. Garrett, 5 U. C. R. 243.

Special Agreement.] — Indorsee of an overdue note against maker. Plea, setting out the special circumstances under which the note was originally given, and denying thereupon the right of the payees to negotiate the note:—Held, plea no defence as to a certain portion of the note, but a good defence as to the balance. Rennie v. Jarvis, 6 U. C. R. 329.

Subscription to Diocesan Fund.]—A note promising to pay the Church Society of the diocese of Toronto or bearer, £50, with interest, towards providing a fund for the support of a Bishop of the western diocese of Canada, who should be appointed in pursuance of an election by the clergy and laity:—Held, to be founded upon a sufficient consideration, and recoverable in the hands of a bond fide holder. Hammond v. Small, 16 U. C. R.

Substitution of Notes.]—The payee of a note given for goods sold by C. to the maker, and indorsed by the payee and C. for the maker's accommodation, and discounted by C. at a bank, may sue the maker on non-payment of the note, although he has himself paid it only by giving new notes (to which the maker is not a party) in satisfaction, which are unpaid, and no consideration ever passed between the maker and him. Latham v. Norton, 6 O. S. 82.

(b) Fraud and Illegal Consideration,

Agreement Not to Prosecute.]—An agreement not to proceed in a prosecution for permitting unlawful gambling in a tavern, is an illegal consideration for a promissory note. Dieight v. Elisworth, 9 U. C. R. 539.

Antecedent Debt.]—Held, that an antecedent debt is a good consideration for a note transferred as collateral security for the debt, so as to enable a bona fide holder without notice to enforce it, though void for illegality as between the maker and payee, Caundian Bank of Commerce v. Gurley, 30 C, P, 583, Bad Faith of Holder-Conspiracy.]indorsed a note for the accommodation of the maker, who did not pay it at maturity, but having been sued with P. he procured the latter's indorsement to another note, agreeing to settle the suit with the proceeds if it was discounted. He applied to a bill broker for the discount, who took it to M. a solicitor, between whom and the broker there was an agreement by which they purchased notes for mutual profit. M. agreed to discount the note. M.'s firm had a judgment against the maker of the note, and an arrangement was made with the broker by which the latter was to delay paying over the money so that proceedings could be taken to garnish it. This was carried out; the broker received the proceeds of the discounted note, and while pretending to pay it over was served with the garnishee process, and forbidden to pay more than the balance after deduction of the amount of the judgment and costs; and he offered this amount to the maker of the note, which was refused. P., the indorser, then brought an action to restrain M. and the broker from dealing with the discounted note, and for its delivery to himself :- Held, that the broker was aware that the note was indorsed by P. for the purpose of settling the suit on the former note: that the broker and M. were partners in the transaction of discounting the note, and the broker's knowledge was M.'s knowledge; that the propert in the note never passed to the broker, and M. could only take it subject to the conditions under which the broker held it; that the broker, not being the holder of the note, there was no debt due from him to the maker, and the garnishee order had no effect as against P.; and that the note was held by M. in bad faith, and P. was entitled to recover it back. Millar v. Plummer, 22 S. C. R. 253.

Compounding Felony.]—To support a plea that a note was given in consideration of forhearance to proceed in a prosecution for felony, the particular nature of the charge should be proved. Henry v. Little, 11 U. C. R. 296.

Compounding Felony.] — Action on more Delay that they were given to compromise a charge of felony committed in a foreign country—Evidence of such agreement and of the foreign law—Obligation to prosecute. See Toponce v. Martin, 38 U. C. R. 411.

Compounding Felony. —In an action on two promisory notes, it appeared that the defendant's son had committed forgery, and it was found by the jury that the consideration for which defendant gave the notes was to prevent the scandal of forgery becoming public: —Held, that the plaintiff could not recover. Dople v. Carroll, 28 C. P. 218.

Compromise of Criminal Charge.]—
The defendant R, having been charged with misapplying fines paid into his lands as a justice of the peace, and proceedings instituted against him in respect thereof, the plaintiff, pending an investigation of the charge, volunteered his aid to assist R, in effecting a settlement of the amount claimed by the numeripality, which he undertook is promissory note for the amount, indosed by his wife. The plaintiff thereupon settled the amount claimed by giving his note therefor, which he alleged he had subsequently paid, and the defendants joined in a promissory note in the manner proposed by the plaintiff:
—Held, affirming 2 O, R, 25, that the transaction in effect amounted to a compromise of a criminal charge, and therefore that plaintiff was not entitled to recover on the note given by the defendant. Bell v, Riddell, 10 A, R, 544.

Conspiracy to Defraud.]—Action on a bill drawn by K. upon and accepted by defendant C., indorsed by K. to E., by E. to D., and by D. to plaintiffs. Plea, by C., that he was induced to accept by the fraud and misrepresentation of said K. E., and D., and without any consideration, and that D. indorsed to the plaintiff without any consideration or value given by them to him:—Held, good, without averring that the plaintiffs were holders without value. Bank of Montreal v. Cameron, 17 U. C. R. 633.

Counterclaim.] — Counterclaim alleging fraud in obtaining note. See Morrison v. Earls, 5 O. R. 434; Garland v. Thompson, 9 O. R. 376.

Debt to Municipality.]—A note made payable to the treasurer of, and indorsed by him to, a municipal corporation, to secure a balance due the corporation on a past transaction, is not void under the Municipal Acts. Town of Belleville v. Fahey, 5 C. L. J. 73.

Discount of Bill Without Reason to Believe it Would be Accepted.]—J. H. & Sons in Toronto had been in the habit of drawing on their correspondent in England, and of covering such bills by shipments of flour and remittances. They had largely overdrawn, and their correspondent had repeatedly requested them to desist from drawing. In December, 1854, they drew several bills, which they sold or exchanged for notes, and amongst others the note such upon; this note they gave with several others in payment of their account to G. H. & Co., and a few days afterwards failed. The bill for which the note was given was returned dishonoured, and T. H., the maker of the note, set up that it was procured from him by fraud without consideration:—Held, that there was evidence that the note had been procured by fraud; that if J. H. & Sons drew the bill for which the note was given, having no expectation or right to expect that it would be honoured, they practised fraud in procuring the note, Gooderham v. Hutchison, 5 C. P. 241.

Election Law.] — S. (appellant's husband) brought an action against St. L. Bros. on a promissory note for $4,000, a renewal of a note for the same amount made by S., indersed by him and handed to St. L. Bros., alleging that the original note had been made and discounted for the accommodation of St. L. The evidence shewed that the proceeds of the note were paid over to one D., as agent for S., to be used as a portion of a provincial election fund controlled by S:—Held, that the plaintiff could not recover, even assuming a promise to pay on the part of St. L. Bros., the transaction being illegal under 38 Vier, c. 7, s. 250 (Q.), R. S. Q. Art. 425, which makes void any contract, promise or undertaking, in any way relating to an election under the said Act. Dansercau v. St. Louis, 18 S. C. R. 581.

Filling in Amount.]—Where the defendant signed as maker a printed form of a note, and handed it to A., by whom it was filled up for 8855, and the plaintiffs afterwards became indorsees of it for value without notice:—Held, that the defendant was liable, though it might have been fraudulently or improperly filled up or indorsed. McInnes v. Milton, 30 U. C. R. 489.

Foreign Law.]—Action on a bill of exchange drawn by McC. & McK., and accepted by defendant, payable to the plaintiffs. Fifth plea: that the said bill was drawn and accepted for the purpose of carrying on gambling contracts or speculations on the rise and fall of the price of pork in the city of Chicago, in the State of Illinois, which said contracts are, by the laws of the said state, illegal and void; and, except as aforesaid, there never was any consideration for the drawing or acceptance of the said bill, of all of which the said McC. & McK. and the planniffs had notice. Sixth plea, repeating the allegations in the fifth plea, down to the accement of notice, and alleging that McC. & McK., and the plaintiffs are suing for their benefit, and into totherwise:—Held, both pleas bad, for that the contract which was made in this country, was legal therein, and it was no defence that the purpose for which the money advanced was to be used was illegal by the laws of a foreign country, Bank of Toronto McLongold, 28 C. P. 345.

Fraud.]-Discount by bank of note made and indersed for the accommodation of D., their solicitor — Fraud and neglect of D.— Liability of bank. See Canadian Bank of Commerce v. Green, 45 U. C. R. 1.

Fraudulent Preference.]—A promissory note to secure the amount of a fraudulent preference given by an insolvent to a particular creditor is wholly void. Brigham v. Banaue Jacques Cartier, 30 S. C. R. 429.

Gambling. — In an action against the maker of a note for value, payable to bearer, and transferred to the plaintiff, for value also after it was due, it is no defence that the note was assigned to the plaintiff's transferor in payment of a gambling debt and through fraud. Burr v. Marsh, M. T. 4 Vict.

Gambling.]—Assumpsit on a note made by A. payable to B., indorsed by B, to C., and by C. to plaintiff. A. pleaded—5. That he gave the note to the payee as part of the consideration for the purchase of a lottery ticket, contrary to the statute; and, 6. The same defence, with the averment that the plaintiff became indorsee with full knowledge:—Held, both pleas bad. Held, also, that under the facts and pleadings there was no defence under the statutes against gambling. Wallbridge v, Becket, 13 U. C. R. 355.

Gambling.] — Declaration on a note for £15, payable to G., or bearer. Pleas: 1. That G. corruptly and against the statute held a lottery of land, and disposed of the tickets for £15 each, and defendant purchased one, for which this note was given. 2. The same facts, adding, that the plaintiffs took the note with knowledge of the premises, and after it fell due, without consideration. 3. That the note was given for land, which was won by unlawfully gaming and playing, contrary to the statute. 4. That defendant was induced to make the note by the fraud of said G. and others, and that plaintiffs took it after it became due, without consideration, and with full knowledge of the premises:—Held, on demurrer, first and third pleas bad, second and fourth pleas good. Evans v. Morley, 20 U. C. R. 236.

Held, affirming the last case, that under 12 Geo. II. c. 28, securities given for the price of tickets are not void in the hands of a bona fide holder for value. S. C. 21 U. C. R. 547.

Where the jury found that the plaintiffs had no notice of the illegality, the court refused a new trial, holding the defence not one to be favoured. Ib.

Gambling — Bonâ Fide Holder.] — A cheque given in settlement of losses at matching coppers is a note of hand given in consideration of a gambling debt within s. 53, s.s. 3, R. S. 0, 1877 c. 47, and such a security is void under 9 Anne c. 14, even in the hands of a bonâ fide holder for value. In re Summerfeldt v. Worts, 12 O. R. 48.

Gambling—Lex Loci.]—Defendant, while temporarily in New York, drew a bill of exchange upon a firm of merchants in Toronto, payable to the order of a New York firm of commission merchants. The domicil of the defendant was, at the time, in Ontario, and the drawes were also domiciled there. The draft was profested for non-acceptance, and upon the payees using the defendant, he set up that the draft was given for a debt due from him in respect to certain gambling transactions on the New York Stock Exchange, and that, as such, it was, under the law of New York, an illegal contract and invalid:— Held, upon a special case directed to decide the point of law, that the matter must be governed by the law of New York, although the defendant was domiciled in Ontario, and although the drawers were also domiciled in Ontario, for the contract of the drawer was to pay the money at the place where he entered into the contract, in default of the drawer paying, and the domicil of the drawer did not affect the rule as stated. Story v. McKay, 15 O. R. 169.

Improper Application of Accommodation Note.] - Defendant B. indersed a promissory note made by defendant C., for the purpose of renewing a former note also in-dorsed by him for C.'s accommodation. C., instead of retiring the former note, parted with the renewal to plaintiff, a creditor of his, who was at the time aware that B. had been assisting C. in money matters. After the note had been indorsed by C. to plaintiff, C. procured B.'s indorsement of another note at a shorter date, stating that the holders of the original note would not accept the first renewal, and promising to return the latter with the original note. It was found that there was no bad faith on plaintiff's part in taking the note:—Held, that C. had B.'s authority to indorse the note to the plaintiff, and that the only notice the law would impute to plaintiff taking the note from C., the maker, was that B. was surety for him, and perhaps, an indorser without value for his accommodation: and therefore, held, that plaintiff was entitled to recover against B. Cross v. Currie, 43 U. C. R. 599, 5 A. R. 31.

Misrepresentation as to Share in Company.]-In an action against the maker a note, evidence was given to shew that defendant was induced to give the note upon misrepresentations, on the part of the payer and indorser, as to the formation of a pany for the sale of a patent right controlled by the payee, the note being given in consideration of a share which defendant was to have in such company, of which plaintiff's testator was alleged to be one; but it was doubtful whether any such company existed at all, or if so, whether defendant was ever placed in position of becoming a shareholder: Held, that the defendant not having repudiated and rescinded the contract under which the note was given, did not preclude him from setting up the defence that it had been obtained from him by the fraud of the payee, with notice; and that the latter had in-dorsed it without value to the testator; for that from the nature of the transaction there was nothing on defendant's part to be re-pudiated or rescinded. Waddell v. Jaynes, pudiated or rescinded. 22 C. P. 212.

Note Not Used for Intended Purpose.]—A note intended as the renewal of another note, but not so used, having been left in the maker's hands with an indorser's name upon it, was received by the plaintiff from the maker for value before it became due. The indorser was held liable. Larkin v, Ward, 5 O. S. 661.

ed: —B. indorsed a promissory note made by ed. j—B. indorsed a promissory note made by ed. for the purpose of retiring another similar note which he had previously indorsed for C's accommodation, and gave it to C. Instead of retiring this note, however, C. handed it to the plaintiff in payment of a debt, who took it in good faith, but made no inquiry, respecting C's title to the note or his authority so to deal with it:—Held, affirming 43 U. C. R. 599, that the plaintiff was entitled to recover against B. Cross v. Curric, 5 A. R. 31.

Sale on Sunday.]—Under 8 Viet. c. 45, 8. 2. a note made on Sunday in payment of goods sold on that day, is void, as between the original parties, but not as against an indorsee for value and without notice. Houliston v. Parsons, 9 U. C. R. 681; Crombie v. Overholtzer, 11 U. C. R. 55.

Settlement of Prosecution for Assault.]—The defendant C. being in prison in due course of law on a charge of assaulting the plaintiff, for which an indictment was laid against him charging him with an assault occasioning actual bodily harm, and with common assault, and a civil action for the assault having also been brought against him, a settlement was effected by defendant C. giving a note indorsed by defendant B., for $1,000 for the damages sustained by plaintiff, which was held not to be disproportionate to the injury sustained, and a fine was inflicted for common assault merely, the former charge in the indictment being withdrawn. The set-tlement was made and the note accepted by plaintiff at defendant's instance, and under the sanction and advice of his counsel, without plaintiff having urged it or taken advantage of the imprisonment to procure it; and the Judge, in sentencing defendant, forebore to imprison because defendant had made compensation to the plaintiff. To an action on the note, the defendant set up fraud, duress, and illegality of consideration:-Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to recover: there was no evidence of fraud; nor under the circumstances could there be deemed to duress; and further, that there was no illegality of consideration, for the settlement was merely for the plaintiff's private damage, and in no way affected the public interest, the law having been vindicated by the imposition of substantial punishment. Kneeshaw v. Collier, 30 C. P. 265.

Substitution of Forged Note.]—A. gave B. and C. a note signed by himself, which they discounted. When it matured B. and C. delivered to the holder, by way of renewal, a note purporting to be made by A., like the other note, and which such holder on that faith accepted, and delivered up the old note. It being afterwards alleged that the renewal was not signed by A., but by another person of the same name, unknown to the holder, and resident in a foreign country:—Held, that A. could not take advantage of this fraud; that his liability in respect of the note still existed in equity; and that the holder could see within six years from the discovery of the fraud. Irvin v. Freeman, 13 Gr. 405.

Threats of Prosecution.]—Quare, as to the effect upon the validity of the note, of the threats to prosecute defendant, to avoid which the note was given, if it had been shewn that the plaintiffs were entitled to recover the money for which it was given. Canada Farmers Mutual Ins. Co. v. Watson, 25 C. P. 1.

Threats of Prosecution—Suspension of Civil Remedy.]—To an action on five promissory notes the defence was that the plaintiff, in Utah Territory in the United States, had charged defendant with felony, (receiving cattle stolen from the plaintiff) and that in consideration of the plaintiff consenting to withdraw and abstain from prosecuting the charge, defendant agreed to make the notes; and that in pursuance of such agreement the notes were made, and the plaintiff abstained from prosecuting the charge. Upon the evidence set out in the report of the case, the court, differing from the learned Judge before whom the case was tried without a jury:— Held, that an agreement was made that, in consideration of the notes being given, the criminal proceedings which the plaintiff had threatened to take against the defendant should not be prosecuted; and that the plaintiff therefore could not recover on the notes. Semble, that a mere threat to prosecute for a criminal offence unless a note be given for money the debtor actually owes, will not avoid the note. It is of no consequence whether a charge has been formally preferred or not; it is equally an offence to compound in either Held, also, no difference between our own law and that of Utah having been shewn, that the effect of compounding a felony must be presumed to be the same in both countries.

Toponce v. Martin, 37 U. C. R. 411.

Ultra Vires Demise of Tolls.]-Commissioners of a turnpike trust, appointed under a statute limiting their powers with respect to demises and to the collection and appropriation of rent when due, make a de-mise beyond the scope of these powers; the tenant is put into possession and enjoys his term; the commissioners, at the expiration of the term, take a promissory note from the tenant for the rent, giving time for payment; Held, that the commissioners, by their clerk, could not sustain an action upon such note, because the promise to pay the note arose upon an illegal consideration, viz., the illegal demise. Ireland v. Guess, 3 U. C. R. 220.

Held, also, that the commissioners by their clerk, could not sustain an action upon such note, because they had no power, though the demise were legal, to give time for payment of rent already due, Ib.

Usurious Transaction Between Payee and Holder - Drawer Liable to Payee.] -Where the payee of a note indorsed the same to A. upon an usurious consideration, and A. afterwards failed in an action against the maker upon the ground of usury:—Held, that such payee might still recover against the drawer; and, semble, that the ground of the failure, in the former action, might be proved by any person present at the trial; and it was not necessary to prove a re-indorsement by the usurer to the payee. Bidwell v. Stanton,

3. Contemporaneous Agreement and Qualifying Indorsement.

Dispute as to Time of Payment.]holding B.'s note, agreed to take collateral security by mortgage on road stock, and give security by mortgage on road stock, and give one year's time on the note. B. mortgaged the stock and assigned it to E., but for two years instead of one. E. refused to carry out this arrangement, and sued on the note, at the same time holding the security, and refusing to transfer it:—Held, that it was for the jury to say whether E., by retaining the security, did not consent for two years, Evans v. Bell, S.C. P. 378.

Mistake in Form—Transfer to Plaintiff r Benefit of Defendant. |—Indorsee against Benefit of the indorser. Plea, that the note was intended the micorser. Piea, that the note was intended to have been made to the plaintiff or order, and indorsed by him to the defendant, to secure a debt due to the defendant by the maker, but by mistake it was made payable to the defendant or order; and the thereupon indorsed it to the plaintiff, in order to enable him to sue the maker, and on the understanding that the plaintiff should have no recourse against him as indowser.—Hold a recol deagainst him as indorser:—Held, a good defence. Blain v. Oliphant, 9 U. C. R. 473.

Not Indebted to Full Amount.] Payee against maker on a note for $101.50. Plea, that when defendant gave said note he Plea, that when detendant gave san force me owed plaintiff 875, and plaintiff then re-quested him to make this note, and agreed to pay him the difference, and plaintiff then accepted the note on that condition, but did not pay the said money, or any part thereof; and defendant says that plaintiff is not en-titled to recover upon that count of the declaration a greater sum than $75:—Held, on demurrer, a bad plea, as shewing no de-fence. Kelly v. Lisk, 18 U. C. R. 418.

Not to be Enforced.] - Where in assumpsit by the holder of a note payable to A. or bearer on demand, the maker pleaded an agreement with A. when the note was made, that it should be held by A. as a security for the settlement of their future accounts, and that it was retained by A. after it was due, and then transferred to the plaintiff, and that on settlement A. was largely indebted to the defendant:—Held, bad on general demurrer, as shewing an agreement contrary to the note; and because no demand of payment was alleged, so as to shew the note overdue. Harvey v. Geary, 1 U. C. R. 483.

Not to be Enforced Pending Ascertainment of Rights. |—A. being the owner of a schooner, mortgaged it to different persons, including the plaintiff and defendant sons, including the blainth and defendant respectively. A. failed, and B. was appointed his assignee; and a suit was commenced in chancery to ascertain the rights of the parties. During the pendency of the suit, all the parties thereto agreed to sell the schooner the parties increase in the issues to one C., without prejudice to the issues raised, for the sum of £1.350, for which sum of £1.350, for which sum of £1.350, for which sum of participating in C.'s securities to the sirous of participating in C.'s securities to the strong th amount of £400, was allowed by the other mortgagees to take C.'s notes to that amount. on condition that he substituted notes of his own, indorsed in blank by D., for the same amount, which he did. These notes, it was agreed, should abide the result of the chancery suit. The result of the chancery decree was the rejection of all the mortgagees except the plaintiff; the plaintiff then sued the defendant on his notes. The defendant, after plea pleaded, but, before trial, appealed from the chancery decree. He did not plead the appeal puis darrein continuance:—Held, on the agreement and other evidence produced, that the plaintiff was entitled to recover against the defendant on his notes. Coleman v. Sher-scood, 3 C. P. 372, 381.

Not to be Enforced.]—To an action upon two notes against the maker by the indorsee of the payee, K., the defendant pleaded that the notes were given when he and the plaintiff and K. were in partnership, and in respect of transactions between defendant and as partners and of matters involved in the said partnership, and with the understanding and agreement between defendant and K. and the plaintiff, that the notes were to be held by K. and the plaintiff merely as evidence of such transactions, &c., and as security for any sums which might be found due to K. or the plaintiff, on accounts being taken and settlement made between them and defendant as partners, and upon the terms and condition of such an account being taken at or after the dissolution of the partnership; but that the partnership had since been dissolved, and no such account taken or settlement made :-Held, on demurrer, plea bad, for it admitted a good consideration for the notes, and did not allege expressly that they were not to be sued upon. Semble, that it was also defective in not negativing any other consideration than that appearing on its face, Stultzman v. Yeagley, 32 U. C. R. 630.

Not to be Liable.]—A plea setting up a parol agreement that defendant should not be liable, inconsistent with the indorsement on the note, is bad. Hart v. Dacy, 1 U. C. R. 218.

Not to be Liable.]—Where a man draws a bill to pay a debt, he cannot set up against the indorsee that the bill was given unon a prior verbal understanding between himself and the plaintiff, that the drawes would not pay unless they chose, and that in that event he was not to be liable as drawer. Adams v. Thomas, 7 U. C. R. 249.

Not to be Liable.]—The jury having found for defendant, on evidence improperly received, of an alleged understanding that defendant should be called upon for the interest only, a new trial was granted. It was objected that the Church Society had no power to hold or transfer notes; but held, immaterial, the note being payable to bearer. Hammond v. Small, 16 D. C. R. 371.

Not to be Liable.]—Declaration upon a note payable to defendant or order, and indorsed by defendant to plaintiff after it became payable. Plea, acting up a collateral agreement that defendant should not be liable, not allezing it to have been in writing:— Held, bad. Hall v. Francis, 4 C. P. 210.

Not to be Liable—Acting for Company.]
To an action upon a note by an indorse against the maker, who signed the note in his private capacity, a plea that the defendant made the note as president, &c., of a company, to be binding only upon the company, and on the understanding with the payce that there was to be no recourse upon the defendant:—Held, bad as setting up a verbal understanding contrary to what the maker's signature to the note would import. Event V, Weller, 2 U. C. R. 610.

Not to be Liable—1eting for Company.]
—A plea that the note was taken for a hisbility of the company, as secretary of which the defendant signed, and with the understanding that they were to pay the same:— Held, bad, as setting up a contemporaneous verbal agreement. Armour v. Gates, 8 C. P.

Not to be Liable-Evidence of rances.]—To an action by the executors of V., on a note made by defendant payable to V. or bearer, defendant set up as defence, that by his last will V. devised to each of his children. of whom defendant's wife was one, £250, to be paid by his executors as soon as possible; and declared that in case he should advance money during his life-time to any of his children on account of such legacies, a receipt therefor should be sufficient as payment of so much on account of the sum bequeathed; that on the 4th of April, 1856, the testator advanced to defendant £100 on account of the sum devised to his wife, and defendant then delivered to him the note sued on as evidence of such advance, it being agreed between them that defendant should not be called upon to pay said note, but that it should be held as a receipt for so much of the legacy; and defendant alleged that he had always been willing, and had offered to sign a receipt for that sum. The will when proa receipt for that sum. duced was in the terms alleged, but a codicil was added, made after the note, directing that none of the legacies should be paid until the completion of payments on certain lands due by his son:—Held, that the plaintiff must recover, for verbal evidence could not be received of such an agreement as alleged, and the statement of the will in defendant's plea was incorrect. Street v. Beckwith, 20 U. C.

Not to be Liable.]—Declaration on a note by payee against maker. Plen, that the note was made under an agreement with the plaintiff that he should get the same discounted, but should never call upon defendant to pay it; and further, that after it became due it was agreed that defendant should sell to plaintiff certain lands at their cash value, in full satisfaction of all demands by plaintiff against defendant, and the plaintiff accepted said agreement in full satisfaction of the note:—Held, on demurrer, plea had, for the first defence set up was a verbal agreement inconsistent with the note; and, as to the second, the agreement to sell the land was not alleged to be in writing. Moore v. Sullivan, 21 U. C. R. 445.

Not to be Liable to Full Amount. |-To an action on a note for $800, defendant pleaded, in substance, that D. & Co. had contracted with defendant for delivery to him of plaster to the value of $1,000, for which defendant agreed, on delivery, to pay by accepting D. & Co.'s draft at three months, payable to their own order; that D. & Co., after having delivered but $200 worth of plaster, requested defendant to accept, and he agreed to accept and did accept their draft, upon their agreement that defendant should, upon its maturity, pay no more of it than he had received value in plaster; that, thereupon D. & Co., being indebted to plaintiffs in $50,000, in-dorsed and delivered the draft so accepted to plaintiffs, who received it as security for and on account of said debt, with the full knowledge and notice of the facts hereinbefore stated; that when said draft matured, D. & Co. had delivered to defendant no more plaster then the said value of $200, and plaintiffs and D. & Co. agreed that defendant should only D. & Co. agreed that derendant should only pay $200, and that defendant should make and deliver to D. & Co. or order, and D. & Co. should indorse and deliver to plaintiffs, said note for $800, and that said note should be taken and received by D. & Co. and plaintiffs upon the same agreement and terms, as to delivery of plaster, as the draft for $1,000 had been made and delivered upon:—Held, on denurrer, a bad plea. Royal Canadian Bank v. Minaker, 19 C. P. 219.

Parol Evidence — Satisfaction of Liability. I — it is a good defence to an action by the personal representatives of the payee against the maker of a promissory note for value received, that at the time of the maker of of the note an oral agreement was entered into between the payee and the maker which has been fully performed, that if the latter would pay interest on the note, and, although not liable to do so, would support for life a relative of the former, the note should be considered paid; and evidence to the above effect was held admissible in an action on the note brought after the complete performance of the agreement by the defendant, McGuarriev, Ramad, 28 O. R. 69.

Payment Out of Special Fund. |-Action by payee against the maker of a note Plea, on equitable grounds that the plaintiff was captain of a rifle company organized according to law; that defendant being member of it and a tailor, was employed to make the uniforms, which it was agreed be-tween plaintiff and defendant should be paid for out of the moneys coming to the said company for their drills according to the statute; that in order to raise the necessary sum at once, it was also agreed that a note should be discounted, to be reduced from time to time by the moneys so received, and re-newed until paid off; that in pursuance of such agreement a note was made by defendant payable to plaintiff, which was discounted, and reduced by payment of the money de-rived from the first ten days' drill, and renewed by the note declared upon, which it was understood should be in the same way reduced, and renewed, or paid off by the pro ceeds of the second drill; that before said drill the plaintiff wrongfully disbanded the company, so that they were unable to draw any more pay, whereby, owing to the plaintiff's wrongful act, it became impossible to perform said agreement and retire said note: —Held, that the plea afforded no defence. Vidal v. Ford, 19 U. C. R. 88.

Postponing Payment.]—Parol evidence cannot be received to shew that a bill of exchange accepted payable three days after sight, was not to be paid till a further time had elapsed. Bradbury v. Oliver, 5 O. S.

Postponing Payment.]—Plea, that in consideration of certain notes of a certain party being deposited with the plaintiff as a security, the plaintiff agreed not to sue upon this note until the others should become due:

—Held, upon general demurrer, plea bad. Durand v, Stecenson, 5 U. C. R. 330.

Postponing Payment.]—The plaintiff declared on the following, as a note: "Three months after date, we, or either of us, promise to pay to Elias S. Reed (the plaintiff or John Fraser, his guardian, at the jost office, Embro, £119 17s, cy., value received in rent of farm;" adding a count on an account stated. It was proved that the declarate had been in possession of plaintiff's farm before and after the note was made, which was given for rent due, and that the plaintiff was abroad at the time of making the note:—Held, that evidence was inadmissible of a verbal understanding that the note was not to be enforced until the plaintiff's return, or until he could send a power of attorney to some one to collect it. Reed v, Reed, 11 U. C. R. 26.

Postponing Time for Payment.]— Held, that evidence of a parol agreement to extend for two years the time for the payment of a note payable on demand, was not admissible. Portcoux v. Muir. S. O. R. 127.

Postponing Time for Payment — Renewals.]—On the 29th August, 1877, defendant R. made a note of that date for $700, at eighteen months, in favour of D., and for his accommodation, which R. gave to D. without any restriction as to its use. D, indorsed the same and handed it to the plaintiff; and at the same time gave the plaintiff his, D.'s, own note of the same date at three months, taking from plaintiff the following receipt: ceived from R. a note indersed by D., payable eighteen months after date, for $700, which note is given me only as collateral security note is given me only as collateral security for the payment of certain note indorsed by me for D., and when said note is fully paid, I agree to return same." On the 24th Sep-tember, a statement of account took place between the plaintiff and D., when D. took up the note of the 29th August, by giving plain-tiff another note for the like amount at three manuals.—I hald that the propropressions. the another flow for the true construction of months:—Held, that the true construction of the agreement was, that D. should have eighteen months, or so much thereof as the plaintiff chose to give him, in which to pay of the $700; and that D.'s note might be renewed from time to time, so long as payment was not extended beyond the eighteen months: and that under the circumstances the note of the 24th September could not be deemed to have been taken as a payment of the note of 29th August. Devanney v. Brownlee, S A. R. 355, distinguished. Healey v. Dolson, S O. R. 691.

Qualified Indorsement.] - D. indorsed two promissory notes, pour aval, at the same time marking them with the words "not ne-gotiable and given as security." The notes were intended as security to the firm of A. & R. for advances to a third person on the publication of certain guide-books which were to be left in the hands of the firm as further security, the proceeds of sale to be applied towards reimbursement of the advances. It was also agreed that payment of the notes was not to be required while the books remained in the possession of the firm. The notes were protested for non-payment, and A. having died, R. as surviving partner of the firm and diet, it is said the notes, sued the maker and indorser jointly and severally for the full amount. At the time of the action, some of the books were still in the possession of R. and it appeared that he had not ren-dered the indorser any statement of the financial situation between the principal debtor and the firm :-Held, that the action was not based upon the real contract between the parties and that the plaintiff was not, under the circumstances, entitled to recover in an action upon the notes. Robertson v. Davis, 27 S. C. R. 571.

Renewal.]—The maker cannot set up an alleged parol agreement by the holder to renew the note upon being paid half the amount. Hayes v. Daris, 6 U. C. R. 396.

Renewal.]—Action on a note. Plea, an agreement that when it became due plaintiffs would renew it for one-half, and give three months for the other half; but that they claimed the whole instead of half, which the defendants were ready to pay:—Semble, no defence. Bank of Upper Canada v. Jones, 1 P. R. 185.

Renewal.]-Action on a note, to which defendants pleaded, in substance, that the plaintiff, who at the time held a note for the same amount, agreed on certain conditions to renew it from time to time for three years: and it was repeatedly renewed as agreed; and that when the note sued on became due, a renewal note and the interest were then tendered and refused, though the three years had not expired. At the trial it was shewn that previous renewals had been made by leaving the renewal note at the agency of the Bank of Montreal in Cobourg, paying the interest and taking up the old note, and when the note now sued upon became due, a renewal note and the interest were tendered to M., the agent of the bank, who refused to accept the same alleging he had no instructions. All the renewals except one, which was made with the testator personally, were made at said bank: —Held, that the tender of the renewal note and the interest to M., the agent of the Bank of Montreal, where the note was payable, was a sufficient tender, as all the other renewals were made there; and that defendant was not bound to tender another renewal and the interest, at the expiration of the three months from the last tender, as the plaintiff had, by his refusal to accept the former tender, repudiated the agreement, and defendant was not informed that he would accept such renewal :- Held, also, on demurrer, that the pleas were bad, as varying the note by parol agreement prior to it. Harper v. Paterson, 14 C. P. 538.

Set-off.]—Evidence of a verbal agreement to allow the price of land sold by verbal agreement, to be set off against a note:—Held, inadmissible. McCollum v. Jones, Tay. 442.

Special Purpose.]—Payee against maker. Plea, that defendant made and plaintiff received the note from him, and thence hitherto held the same, on certain terms and for a special purpose only, to wit, that the plaintiff should take care of it for him, and should not negotiate or part with it to any other person, and that there never was any value or consideration for the note except as aforesmit—Held, a good defence. Wismer v. Wismer, 22 U. C. R. 446.

4. Merger.

Cognovit.]—A cognovit payable immediately given by the maker of a note before it fell due, and judgment entered upon it and registered, forms no defence for the indorser. Bank of Montreal v. Douglas, 17 U. C. R. 208.

Judgment by Prior Holder. |—Declaration by a note made by A., payable to B., (defendant) indorsed by him to C., who indorsed to D., who indorsed to plaintiff; and on the common counts. Pleas, that said note before it became payable was indorsed by plaintiff to one J. H. C., who indorsed to S. H. H., who indorsed it S.

Bank, who were the holders when it matured, and until the recovery by defendant of a judgment in an action brought by the said bank; and that the notice of dishonom alleged to have been given by plaintiff to defendant is an alleged notice said to have been given by the Commercial Bank to defendants in their suit, and no other notice; and that defendant in the suit between the bank and himself recovered a judgment against the bank, and that plaintiff had notice of the action between the bank and defendant, before he became holder of the note:—Held, on demurrer, bad, the action between the bank, the original holder, and the defendant being no answer to an action by any other party on the note who was a subsequent holder to the defendant. Smith v. Button, 11 C. P. 273.

Judgment by Prior Holder.]—It is no defence to an action by indorsee against the maker of a note, that a prior indorsee, while the holder and before the plaintiff took it, recovered judgment against defendant and the payee. McLennan v. McMonies, 23 U. C. R. 114.

Judgment by Prior Holder.]—Indorsee against indorser. Plen, that the payee had before sued defendant and the maker, and obtained a verdict against the maker, and that by a rule of court it was declared that the payee was not entitled to recover against defendant. The evidence shewed that the payee having sued the maker and defendant, the Judge ruled that he could not recover against defendant, whereupon defendant's name was ordered to be struck out of the record:—Held, that neither the payee nor the plaintiff, who sued on his behalf, was barred from prosecuting this action. Smith v. Richardson, 18 C. P. 210.

Judgment—Pariners,]—Action on a note and bill against two of the special partners of a partnership formed under the Limited Limity A 12 vict. c. 75, who had joint a comparation of the partners of the partners of the common partner. Defendant pleaded a prior judgment recovered upon and taken in full satisfaction of all the causes of action in the declaration mentioned, against the general partner alone:—Held, that the recovery against one of several joint contractors operated as a merger at law of the inferior remedy of action for the same debt. Hollowell v. Macdonell, S. C. P. 21.

Judgment for Note and Legal Interest - Further Action for Higher Rate.]-Plaintiff sued defendant as maker and A. as indorser of two notes, adding a count for in-terest; and at the trial, to support this count, he offered in evidence a written undertaking signed by defendant, and a similar one by A., to allow him interest at the rate of thirty per cent. until payment, in consideration of the The plaintiff allowing three months time. learned Judge ruled that, the action being joint, evidence of a separate liability against either defendant could not be received, and the plaintiff then took a verdict against both defendants for the amount of the notes and interest at six per cent. After judgment had been entered upon this and satisfied, he sued defendant on his undertaking, to recover twenty-four per cent., the balance of interest agreed to be paid by him: -Held, that the judgment recovered was a bar to any further claim for interest upon the same notes. Mc-Kay v. Fee, 20 U. C. R. 268.

Judgment.]—Upon an action by the indorses against the third indorser of a bill:—Held, that final judgment in a previous action on the same bill, in which all parties thereon were sued and served, (and judgment of non pros. not signed, or a discontinuance entered as to any.) but in which the special indorsement and judgment only shewed a cause of action against the drawer and acceptor, did not prevent a separate action against the indorser. Bank of Upper Canada v. Lizars, 11 (C. P. 176)

Mortgage.]—Where a person, having a note of a third party indorsed by the debtor as security for a portion of his debt, takes a mortgage from his debtor for the whole sum due, not referring to, and payable after, the note, and with the usual covenant to pay the money:—Held, that the remedy against the debtor on the note is extinguished. Matthewson v. Bronce, 1 U. C. R. 272.

Mortgage.]—Indorsee against the maker of a note. Plea, that with the note a mortgage was taken by the payee, with a proviso for its payment according to the tenor of certain notes bearing even date therewith, payable to the payee, of which this was one, and was indorsed to the plaintiff after it was due:

—Held, bad, as by the terms of the mortgage, it was evidently taken as collateral security only. Marray v. Miller, 1 U. C. R. 353.

Mortgage.]—Held, on the facts stated in this case, that the mortgage was clearly no merger, the right to sue on the note being expressly reserved. Commercial Bank v. Cuvillier, 18 U. C. R. 378.

Mortgage.]—Defendant indorsed to the planntiffs a note, made by one P., due on the 18th May, 1857. On the 18th April P. executed to the plaintiffs a mortgage, payable on the 1st November, 1857, for a sum including the note; but it was expressly agreed in the mortgage that it should operate as a collateral security only.—Held, that the plaintiffs might stie upon the note when due, although the mortgage was not yet payable. Shave v. Cruclord, 16 U. C. R. 101.

Mortgage.]—Defendant owing plaintiff a large sum on bills, some overdue, some maturing, gave him a mortgage on land, reciting the debt on the bills, and the plaintiff's agreement to accept further security by way of mortgage, and containing a proviso that it should be void on payment of the bills, and that on default of payment for twelve months the plaintiff might, on giving six months' notice, enter and sell the lands. The mortgage also contained a covenant to pay the bills. In an action on such covenant, with counts upon the bills—Held, that there was clearly no merger of the claim upon the bills. Gore Bank v. Eaton, 27 U. C. R. S322

Mortgage.]—Held, that the mortgage in this case being expressed to have been given as further security, and providing that it should stand as security for any renewal of the bills sued on, was collateral only, not a merger. Gore Bank v. McWhirter, 18 C. P.

Held, also, that the remedy on the specialty and simple contract not being co-extensive or between the same parties, the doctrine of merger did not apply. Ib.

Mortgage.]—Held, upon the deeds, pleadings, and facts, as given at length in the statement of the case, that the defendants, indorsers, were discharged from the notes used upon, (though not so intended by the plaintiffs, by the plaintiffs having taken from the maker a mortgage of certain steamboats, with a power of sale in case of default in the payment of the notes, and upon which the plaintiffs had sold the boats to third parties for the amount of the defendants' liabilities on the notes, giving credit to the purchases for the purchase money, and taking their notes and a mortgage on the same boats as security, Bank of British North America v. Jones, 8 U. C. R.

Mortgage—Equitable Effect.]—The effect in equity of the instruments which came in question in the last case considered, and held by the Chancellor to be the same as that case decided it to be at law. Per Esten, V. C.—The effect in equity is a mere transfer of the rights of the bank as mortgages. Per Sprage, V. C.—The effect in equity is prima facie an absolute sale of the notes and steamboat, not subject to redemption: and the plaintiffs to do away with this effect must impeach the deed, which was not done by the bill in this case. Sherwood v. Bank of British North America, 3 Gr. 457.

Mortgage.]—The holder of a mortgage security may take in addition a noie from the mortgagor with an indorser; and the fact that the time mentioned for the defeasance of the mortgage is a period beyond the maturity of the note is, in the absence of fraud, no defence to the indorser. Bank of Upper Canada v. Sherwood, S. U. C. R. 116.

Mortgage.]—To a declaration on five bills by indorsee against the drawer and acceptor, the drawer, W., pleaded that after one of the bills became payable, and while the others were running, it was agreed that W. should mortgage certain lands to secure all the bills, and that twelve months from the date of the said debenture should be given to defendant for payment of the same, and all interest, damages, &c., by reason of the non-payment. The plea then set out the mortgage, whereby, —after reciting that the defendant W. had drawn bills upon, which were accepted by, defendant P., and of which a portion was overdue, which bills were indorsed by W. to the plaintiffs; and that the defendant, being unable to pay said bills, had agreed to make this security to M. (one of the plaintiffs) to secure them against the non-payment of the said bills,—in consideration of the premises and of 5s. W. conveyed to M. (one of the plaintiffs) certain leasehold property, subject to a proviso that if said W. should reture the said bills, and pay unto the said firm of the plaintiffs, or the parties legally entitled, all sums of money, damages, &c., by reason of said bills, within twelve months from the date of the said indenture, and if he should then indennify the plaintiffs of and from all payments, &c., by reason of the permises, then the mortgage should be void, &c.; containing also a covenant by W. to perform the covenants in the said proviso, and a proviso for possession until default:—Held, that such mortgage was only a collateral security for the bills; that there was no merger; and that the plaintiffs might sue upon this bill before the expiration of the twelve months. Ross v, Winans, 5 C. P. 185.

Mortgage.]—A debtor gave to his creditor a mortgage and notes for the same debt, the latter payable at the same times as the instalments of the mortgage and no allusion was made in either instrument to the other. The creditor subsequently passed both instruments to separate parties, as collateral securities for debts. Upon ejectment for an instalment on the mortgage, the defendant proved the facts, and that he had paid the note given for the instalment:—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to recover. Semble, that the note merged in the higher security. Fairman v. Maybec, 7 C. P. 407.

Mortgage—Reservation of Rights.]—B., to the plaintiff's knowledge when he because the holder thereof, indorsed a promissory note for $1,400, dated 7th November, 1876, payable four months after date, as surety for H., the maker. On 3rd February, 1877, before the maturity of the note, the plaintiff, without B.'s knowledge, accepted a chattel mortgage for the amount secured by the note and for some additional items, with a proviso for redemp-tion on 3rd February, 1878, with interest at ten per cent., and with the usual covenants for The mortgage did not on its face payment. refer to the note, but it was proved that it was the understanding between the plaintiff and H. that it was to be received as collateral security only, and not to affect the plaintiff's remedy on the note:—Held, that B., the surety, was not discharged; that the mortgage did not operate as a merger of the note, not being by the same parties and for the same debt as the note; and that the reservation of the remedy on the note, notwithstanding the giving of time by the mortgage, might be shewn by parol evidence, without appearing on the face of the mortgage. Quære, whether the taking of a specialty security from one of two joint debtors on a simple contract will operate as a merger; and whether Loomis v. Ballard, 7 U. C. R. 366, can be followed since Sharpe v. Gibbs, 16 C. B. N. S. 527, and Bonler v. Mayor, 19 C. B. N. S. 76. Currie v. Hodgins, 42 U. C. R. 601.

Mortgage.]—The plaintiffs took a mortgage from one M., to secure the payment of certain promissory notes made by him and indorsed to them by the defendant. The mortgage was subject to a proviso to be void on payment of $4,300 with interest in one year, "the said sum of $4,300 being represented by certain promissory notes now under discount, and held by the said mortgages, and any renewals or substitutions therefor that may hereafter be given for the same. All to be paid within one year from this date: "—Held, affirming 40 U. C. K. 529, that there was no merger, and the mortgage was merely collateral security, and did not suspend any right of action on the notes. Molsons Bank v. McDonald, 2 A. R. 102.

Mortgage.]—The plaintiff holding defendant's note, takes a chattel mortgage, intending it as a collateral security:—Held, that the right to sue on the note was extinguished. Parker v. McCrea, 7 C. P. 124.

Mortgage.]—The plaintiffs sued defendants, H. M. and S., as joint makers of a note. H. and M. did not appear and judgment was rigned by mistake against all, but aftervards set aside as against S., who pleaded: 1. A mortgage given for the same money by M., M. and S. beng sureties for H.:—Held, that the giving a mortgage by M., one of the two sureties, did not of itself discharge S., the other surety. Kerr v. Hereford, 17 U. C. R. 158.

Mortgage.]—H. & Co. holding several notes of F., all overdue except one, take a mortgage for the total amount thereof:— Held, that the remedy on the notes was extinguished. Frascr v. Armstrong, 10 C. P. 506.

Mortgage.]—Held, that in taking a mortgage for $1,300, and subsequently a note for $1,353.75, there could be no merger. Bank of Upper Canada v. Bartlett, 12 C. P. 238.

Mortgage -Collateral Security - Discharge.]—A. and B., partners in business, bor-rowed money from C., giving him as security their joint and several promissory note and a mortgage on partnership property. The partnership having been dissolved, A, assumed all the liabilities of the firm, and continued to carry on the business alone. After the dissolution C. gave A. a discharge of the mortgage, but without receiving payment of his debt, and afterwards brought an action against B. on the promissory note:—Held, affirming 20 A. R. 695, that the note having been given for the mortgage debt C. could not recover without being prepared, upon payment, to convey to B. the mortgaged lands, which he had incapacitated himself from doing:-Held. also, that by the terms of the dissolution of partnership the relations between A. and B. were changed to those of principal and surety, and it having been found at the trial that C had notice of such change, his release of the principal, A., discharged B., the surety, from the liability for the debt. Allison v. McDon-ald, 23 S. C. R. 635.

Mortgage.]—Action on a note for $350. Pleas, that the note had been taken as colleteral to a mortgage, in satisfaction of which defendant and plaintiff had come to a settlement, and defendant had given a new mortgage for what he owed the plaintiff, in which the note having been taken by the plaintiff as payment of part of the mortgage, and thus separated from the mortgage debt, the plaintiff was entitled to recover; and that from the evidence stated in the case it appeared that the note was given for a sum quite distinct from the mortgage debt. Boulton v. McNab, 14 C. P. 598.

Mortgage.]—Defendant owing the plaintiff on bills and notes, executed to him a mortgage for the amount, which the plaintiff accepted on defendant's representation that it was a first claim on the land, but on searching at once he found a prior incumbrance, and told defendant he would not accept the mortgage:

—Held, that plaintiff could not thereupon sue on the original cause of action, but should at least have tendered a re-conveyance. Adams v. Nelson, 22 U. C. R. 199.

Proceedings in Insolvency.]-Deciaration on a note by defendant payable to plaintiff. Plea on equitable grounds, in bar to the further maintenance of the action, averring the pendency of proceedings commenced by plaintiff against the defendant, under the Irsolvent Act of 1864, for the same cause of action, subsequently to the declaration in this cause:—Held, on demurrer, plea bad. Baldwin v. Peterman, 16 C. P. 310.

5. Payment and Satisfaction.

Bond.1—Jeclaration on three notes given by testator in his lifetime. Plea, that after testator died and the notes fell due, the plainifi and defendants accounted together and struck a balance, for which defendants gave their bond, to pay out of the first moneys they should receive from the estate within eighteen months:—Held, bad, as not shewn to be given in satisfaction of the notes or of cross demands, and therefore only a payment protanto for the amount of it. Muir v. Lauerie, 11 C. P. 252.

Charging Up in Bank Account.]--Note given by E., payable to the plaintiff at the bank of defendants, who were brakers for both E. and the plaintiff—Note charged to E.'s account and credited to the plaintiff:—Held, a payment and irrevocable. See Nightingale v, City Bank of Montreal, 26 C. P. 74.

Conditional Payment—Summary Judgment.]—At maturity of certain promissory notes made by the defendants, and held by the plaintiffs, the defendants, and held by the plaintiffs a proposal for a renewal in part, accompanied by a cheque for part of the amount due and two renewal notes for the balance, the total amount including a sum for interest on the renewals. The plaintiffs returned the renewal notes, but retained the cheque, and brought this action upon the original notes, giving credit to the amount of the cheque.—Held, refusing a motion for judgment under Rule S0, that although there was no obligation on the part of the creditors to assent to the debtors' proposal, yet by receiving the cheque and keeping it they must be taken to have applied it in the manner in which the debtors when tendering it stipulated, and as it included interest in advance upon the renewals, the creditors were bound to give the debtors the benefit of the time for which the renewals were drawn:—Held, on appeal, that on the state of facts presented the plaintiffs were not entitled to the induitions of a speedy judgment and execution. London v. Martin, 12 P. R. 496.

Covenant.]—To an action on a joint note made by M. and K., each pleaded separately, that after the note fell due, M. by indenture covenanted with the plaintiff to pay him $319, ta sum less by $2.80 than the amount of the note, with interest at fifteen per cent, in one year, and delivered said indenture to the plaintiff, who accepted it: and that the money mentioned in the declaration and in the indenture was the same:—Held, pleas good, though the indenture was not alleged to have been accepted in satisfaction, and the sum secured by it was less than the note. McLeod v. Mc-Roy, 20 U. C. R. 258.

Dishonour of Bill Taken in Satisfaction. |-- A replication to a plea stating that a bill had been taken in full satisfaction and at all hazards by the plaintiff, that the bill was dishonoured when due, is bad on general demurrer. Goldie v. Maxwell, H. T. 4 Vict.

Evidence.]—Action by indorsees on a note made by L. payable to defendant G. W., and indorsed by him to defendant F. W. The pleas were, in substance, that the plaintiffs accepted from G. W. another note in satisfaction of the note sued on:—Held, on the evidence stated in the case, that this defence was not proved. Whittemore v. Lines, 7 C. P. 403.

Evidence.]—To an action on certain notes and bills of exchange, and on the common counts, against the defendant as jointly liable with one H., defendant pleaded satisfaction and discharge of plaintiff's claim before action, by executing with H. an assignment of their joint effects to plaintiff and another for the benefit of creditors, and that plaintiff accepted this in full satisfaction and discharge of the causes of action in question. At the trial parol testimony was admitted of the agreement to accept the assignment in satisfaction and discharge:—Held, that it had been properly received, the effect of it being not to vary the terms of the writing, but merely to prove a collateral fact. Whitney v. Wall, 17 C. P. 474.

Evidence — Stamps.]—In an action by plaintiff as administratrix of Mrs. T., widow of T., deceased, against defendants, T.s administrators, on two promissory notes alleged to have been made by T. to Mrs. T., there was no evidence of the wife having given any value for the notes, or of being possessed of or claiming any interest in them in her lifetime, nor that they came to the plaintiff among papers in Mrs. T.'s possession at the time of her decease, while the reasonable presumption from the evidence was that if Mrs. T. ever had any claim on them it had been paid. It also appeared that prior to the commencement of this action, on the payment by the defendants, as administrators of T., to the plaintiff of a sum of money owing to her as said administratirk, she executed a release of all claims against the estate—Held, that under these circumstances the plaintiff clearly could not recover. One of the notes had no stemps affixed to it, while the other was insufficiently stamped, and both were in this condition during Mrs. T.'s lifetime and for nearly six years after they became due:—Held, that the invalidity of the notes would also prevent the plaintiff from recovering; and that the privilege of affixing double duty should not on the facts be allowed to the plaintiff as such administratirs. Denham v. Breuster, 28 C. P. 607.

Garnishee. |—Plea of payment to garnishee. See Roblee v. Rankin, 11 S. C. R. 137.

Intention — Partners.] — A promissory note for $6,200, made by the president and secretary of a syndicate formed for completing the Hamilton and Dundas street railway, in favour of O., S., and the defendants, was indorsed by them to the Bank of Commerce or order. On the day the note fell due O. and S. respectively paid the same, O. paying $2,000 and S. $4,200, the remaining sum due thereon, S. at the time directing the bank agent to indorse it to the plaintiff, who it appeared gave no value for it. The agent indorsed it as follows: "Pay to J. S.," the plaintiff "or order. D. Hughes Charles, manager." The plaintiff thereupon sued the defendants as indorsers:—Held, that the plaintiff could not recover, for the evidence shewed that S. by his payment intended to satisfy the note, which being made for a purpose directly relating to and not collateral to the partnership of which S. and defendants were pertners, S. could not recover against defendants thereon, and as the plaintiff was found to have only the same right as S., neither could be recover. Small v. Riddel, 31 C. P. 273.

Judgment and Execution Against Other Makers.] — The plaintiff sued de-fendants, H., M. and S., as joint makers of a note. H. and M. did not appear and judgment was signed by mistake against all but afterwards set aside as against S., who pleaded, that a judgment had been obtained in this suit against all three defendants, and set aside as against S, but under the fi. fa. sued out upon it the sheriff had seized goods of H. and M. more than sufficient to satisfy the judgment and costs, and that he had made thereout $50, and still held the rest of the goods, out of which he could make the residue :- Held, that an application to strike out the names of H. and M. from the record, so that they might be called as witnesses for S., was properly refused. That the second plea was not sup-ported, the evidence being that all the goods ported, the evidence being that all the goods seized brought only £9 at the sale. Quere, whether the plea formed a good defence. That if by taking judgment against the defendants not appearing, the plaintiffs under C. L. P. Act, s. 66, had lost their remedy against S., that objection could not be taken at the trial, but the proper course was to move to stay proceedings. Semble, however, meaning of that clause to proceed against the others separately, the judgment against the having been set aside. Kerr v. Hereford, 17 U. C. R. 158.

Judgment against Indorser.]-To a declaration on a judgment recovered against defendant in the court of Queen's bench for damages and costs, defendant pleaded that the judgment was recovered upon a note made by defendant, payable to the order of one Scott, who indorsed to one Scanlon, who indorsed and delivered to plaintiffs, who became and were the holders at the time of the recovery of said judgment; that defendant made the note and Scanlon indorsed for Scott's accommodation, and as his surety, to secure a debt due from him to plaintiffs, and that when the note was made, indorsed, and delivered, it was agreed between defendant, Scott, Scanlon, and plaintiffs, that defendant and Scanlon should be liable thereon to plaintiffs as sureties for Scott, and that except as aforesaid there was no value or consideration for the making, indorsing, or payment of the note by defendant or Scanlon; that Scott having made default in payment of his debt, plaintiffs sued Scanlon as inderser, and recovered judgment against him, being the same debt for which the judgment declared upon in this action was recovered, and Scanlon afterwards and before action satisfied the amount of the said judgment and costs by payment to plaintiffs, and therewith and there-by paid and satisfied plaintiffs' claim in respect of the cause of action in the introductory part of the plea mentioned:—Held, on demurrer, a bad plea. Bank of Upper Canada v. Mercer, 18 C. P. 300.

Notes Given Back to Maker.]—Where in a deed of separation the husband covenanted to pay his wife £150, and appointed trustees, who, being indelied to the husband in the amount, gave him their separate notes for payment to his order, which he indorsed in blank, and returned to them for the beneit of his wife, and one of the trustees then gave to the wife the notes signed by him, with an indorsement that they were not to be sold by her, and she assigned them to the plain-tiff:—Held, that he could not recover against the trustee on the notes, as they having been returned by the husband to the trustee were cancelled; and that the wife had, at any rate, no power to transfer them. Wilson v. McQueen, E. T. 3 Vict.

Order in Favour of Third Person.]—Declaration, payee against the maker of a note for £50, dated 24th December, 1844, payable three months after date. Plea, as to £24 percel, &c., accord and satisfaction, by defendant accepting an order on the 6th March, 1847, in favour of J. C. Spragge, as required by plaintiff; and as to the residue, a set-of:—Held, plea bad; 1, in leaving unanswered the plaintiff's claim for damages for non-payment of the amount for which the order was given, during the two years or more which had elapsed between the maturity of the note, and the time of giving the order; and, 2, in not giving at length the Christian names of J. C. Spragge, or stating that he was so described in the order. Playter v, Turner, 5 U. C. R. 555.

Payment by Drawer.]—In an action by the indorsee against the acceptor of a bill not appearing to have been accepted for the accommodation of the drawer, a plea of payment by the drawer is no defence, unless shewn to have been made on the acceptor's account and adopted by him at the time of payment or subsequently. Bank of Montreal v. Armonr, 9 C. P. 401.

Payment to Prior Holder.]—Declaration on a note made by defendant payable to the order of S. T. & Co., and indersed by them to plaintiff. Pleas: A that the note was made by defendant for the accommodation of the defendant for the accommodation of the defendant for the accommodation of the state of the defendant of the state of the defendant of indorses to C., who indorses to D.; D., the holder, dies, leaving B. one of his executors; it the executors of D. sue C.:—Held, that D. having made B. his executor, B. was discharged, and that there was no remedy against the subsequent indorser. Jenkins v. McKenzie, 6 U. C. R. 544.

Purchase of Stock — Forfeiture.] — Where a stockholder in a joint stock company had given notes for his stock, which he afterwards forfeited by not complying with the conditions of the association:—Held, that he could not set up such forfeiture as a defeace to an action on the notes for the benefit of the company. Glassford v. McFaul, T. T. 3. & 4 Vict.

Renewal Note Substituted.]—Where a note overdue has been retired and settled by a renewal note, it is cancelled, and cannot be put in circulation again even by the payee who has taken up the renewal note out of his own funds. Curillier v. Fraser, 5 U. C. R. 152.

Renewals.]—Payment by giving renewals. See Dominion Bank v. Oliver, 17 O. R. 402; Blackiey v. Kenney, 19 O. R. 169.

Running Account.]—Where A., the indense of a note, sued B. the payee, and it was proved by C., the maker, that the note was made an item in the current account between A. and C. (the maker): that it was long before charged to the maker as a debt due by him, and that when it was so charged the balance was in the maker's favour:—Held, that he note must be taken to have been paid by the maker, and that it must be so taken as soon as subsequent credits are admitted by A. sufficient to cover the note, though when the note was charged the balance was not in C.'s favour. McGillivray v. Kecler, 4 U. C. R. 342.

Set-off Against one Holder.]—A., being sued upon a note by the executors of W., as bearer, pleaded that F., the acting executor, being the holder, accepted an order drawn by one P. on him, in favour of M., for £50, and that M. being the defendant's agent, it was agreed between F. & M. that the note should be paid out of the £50, and F. thereupon cancelled said note. The evidence shewed that defendant went with the order to F., which F. said he would accept, and pay the note out of it, but there was no acceptance in writing, the note was not given up, and the order was obtained again some months after by M.'s executor:—Held, that the plaintiffs were entitled to recover. Williams v. Marshall, 20 U. C. R. 230.

Substitution of Liability.] — Assumpsit on rommon counts. Pleas, as to £227, purel, &c., that the plaintiffs in payment of that sum drew on intestate in favour of M. or order. Thich defendant as administratrix accepted; and that after such acceptance, and while M. was the holder, he. M., cancelled the said bill and returned it to defendant. Replication, that M. received such bill as plaintiff's agent; that while he held it, defendant being entitled to certain insurance moneys for the loss of the goods for which said bill was drawn, and it being customary for plaintiffs in such cases to receive the insurance moneys, and apply them in the payment of the goods.

aud M. being aware of such custom, and presuming that the insurance moneys would be received by the plaintiffs, returned the said bill to the defendant as cancelled, without intending to discharge defendant unless such insurance moneys should be paid; that said insurance moneys were not paid to plaintiffs; and the price of said goods and the bill still remain unpaid; — Held, replication bad. Waters v. Lyon, 15 U. C. R. 184.

Substitution of Notes.] — Defendants made the note sued on, payable to D, or bearer, for $348.40, with interest at 15 per bearer, for $348.40, with interest at 15 per cent. The note was made to D. and deliver-ed to him as reeve of the township, for money loaned by the latter, and was left with S., the treasurer, for plaintiffs. Subsequently the defendant Moore gave his own note for $278, payable to S. (but not to order), S., without authority from plaintiffs, giving up to him the former, the difference between the two notes being a loan to S. himself, though included in defendants' note. S. having died, his accounts with plaintiffs were adjusted by plaintiffs with his surety, who was charged with the note sued on, which he arranged by giving the note for $278 and his own note for $70; the note for $2.78 and his own note for $40; and a balance of $183 was, as agreed to by plaintiffs, paid by and a receipt therefor given to him in full of plaintiffs' claim against S. After this settlement, plaintiffs, by a resolution in council, recognized this note for $278 as amongst their existing securities, thus shewing that they were aware of its having been received in substitution of the note sued on :- Held, that, taking the whole transaction together, there was such a ratification of the acts of S. by plaintiffs in the subsequent adjusting of his accounts with his surety that, coupled with the receipt of the note for $278 with other notes and money in full satisfac-tion of all claims on the note sued upon, it was evidence to go to the jury of the payment of this note under a plea of payment. Held, also, that the plaintiffs could enforce payment of the note for $278 in the names of the representatives of S. Township of North Gwillimbury v. Moore, 15 C. P. 445.

Substitution of Notes.]—Plaintiff holding defendant's note, (not negotiable,) payable on demand, for £500, in transactions with one R., (a partner of defendant) gave it to R., taking in return his note for £1,000, for this and other transactions. In dissolving partnership, it was arranged that this £1,000, or note of R.'s, should be paid by the defendant. R. being subsequently called upon for payment, obtained defendant's called upon for £500, and returned defendant's original note for £500 to plaintiff in payment of the note for £1,000. Upon an action brought for the amount of the note of £500, defendant pleaded satisfaction thereof by the taking of R.'s note for £1,000:—Held, that the facts did not amount to a payment, and that defendant was liable. Booth v. Ridley, S. C. P. 463.

Surrender of Property.] — Where defendant purchased personal property from the plaintiff, and gave him back a mortgage on it to secure the purchase money, and agreed that if default were made in the payment he would give up the property, and plaintiff should sell it to pay himself, and give the overplus, if any, to defendant, and at the same time defendant gave the plaintiff his notes for the purchase money, which were not to be acted on if the property were given up; on default having been made the property was given up and sold by the plaintiff for less than the mortgage money, and an action was then brought on one of the notes to recover the difference:—Held, that it would not lie, the notes having been satisfied by the surrender of the property according to agreement. Smith v. Judson, 4 C. S. 134.

Transfer of Notes after Agreement to Give Them Up. -- Where, in trover for notes against the maker, it appeared that the notes had been given by him on a purchase of land: that the payee afterwards agreed to deliver them up to him on a good consideration: that afterwards, and before their deli-, the payee assigned them by deed to the plaintiff, the notes themselves being in the possession of a third party; and that the defendant afterwards received them, having first had notice of the assignment; and, no fraud having been shewn, the jury found for the defendant :- Held, on motion for a new trial, that as these facts would have constituted a good defence in an action by the payee on the proof of fraud. A new trial was therefore refused. Small v. Bennett, T. T. 3 & 4 Vict.

6. Plaintiff not the Bona Fide Holder.

Collateral Security — Indemnity.] — Held, on demurrer to the equitable plea set out in the report of this case, that apart from the objection as to a perpetual injunction not being obtainable, the holder of notes, transferred by the payee as collateral security against a future liability on the holder's part for the payee, can collect the notes at maturity before the liability arises, and that the payee cannot enlarge or vary the maker's liability to pay them :-Held, also, that the plaintiff, who held the notes, indorsed to him in blank, as his father's agent, could, as such agent, sue upon them in his own name. Ross v. Tyson, 19 C. P. 294.

Coroner.]-The plaintiff, as coroner, sued upon a note made by defendant payable to B. or order, alleging that while it remained unpaid one M. recovered a judgment against B., , and D., and issued a fi. fa. directed to the plaintiff, under which he seized the note. Defendant pleaded, that after the making of the note, and before this suit, B., being the owner and holder of said note, delivered it to C. to receive the amount thereof, and pay with it a demand made by the owners of a certain vessel against B. & Co., and band over the residue to the Commercial Bank. And further, that in the suit in which said judgment was recovered, an order was made for de-fendents to appear and be examined before the Judge of the county court as to the debts due them, &c., and the note was then filed in the court of common pleas; that the plaintiff and M. had notice of the premises, and said note was taken out of the said court by the fraud of the plaintiff, and others in collusion with him, and the plaintiff, at the commencement of this suit was the holder of the said note by fraud:—Held, on demurrer to the plea, declaration good, for it must be assumed that the writ was properly directed to the coroner, as it might be under 20 Vict. c. 57, s. 22; plea bad, as shewing no defence. Brown v. Gordon, 16 U. C. R. 342.

Division Courts Act-Pleading.]-In an action on a note payable to plaintiff or bearer. action on a note payable to plaintiff or bearer, brought in the name of the plaintiff, under the Division Courts Act, s. 152, by a person who had obtained execution against him in that court, defendants pleaded, among other pleas, that the plaintiff was not the legal holder. It appeared that the note had been seized by the bailiff in the hands of one T., to whom the plaintiff had handed it for collection :-Held, that it was not indispensable that the de-claration should shew the suit to be brought under the statute; but that defendants were entitled to succeed on the plea, for the plain-tiff was not in fact the holder, and to en-title the real plaintiff to shew his right under the statute to sue in the name of the nominal plaintiff, the facts should have been specially replied. It is safer in such actions to aver replied. It is safer in such actions to aver and prove a judgment to support the execu-tion, but semble, that it is not essential. Mc-Donald v. McDonald, 21 U. C. R. 52.

Finder of Note.]-To an action on a note by plaintiff as bearer against the makers, de-fendants pleaded that after the making of the note, and before it became due the plaintiff, for a valuable consideration, delivered it to certain persons to defendants unknown, who lost the said note, and the same came into the hands of the plaintiff by finding, and not by assignment or delivery for consideration; and assignment or delivery for consideration; and that the said persons unknown were and still are entitled to said note, and the money due thereon:—Held, a good defence. Wanzer v. Stoutenburgh, 13 U. C. R. 181.

Indorser—Estoppel.]—In an action by indorsee against maker and indorser, a verdict was found in favour of the maker, on the ground that his name had been signed to the note without authority, and against the indorser; and a new trial was granted as to the indorser only: — Held, that the jury at such trial were rightly directed that the use of the maker's name without authority was a fact material for them to consider in connection with other evidence offered, to shew that the plaintiff took the note with knowledge of the circumstances. Hanscome v. Cotton, 16 U. C. R. 98, Quere, as to how far an indorser is estopped from denying the maker's signature.

Nominal Plaintiff-Solicitor's Clerk.] --A firm of solicitors, in whose hands a note had been placed for suit, got the authority of the plaintiff, who was then a clerk in their office, to use his name for the purpose of the suit:—Held, that he was the lawful holder. Shepley v. Hurd, 3 A. R. 549.

Pleading.]—Replications to pleas setting up defence that plaintiff not the holder— Form of. See Morton v. Thompson, 1 U. C. R. 178; Bank of British North America v. Ainley, 7 U. C. R. 33.

Pleading.]—Plea, that before the note became due, plaintiff indorsed it to a person unknown, who is the holder. Replication, that plaintiff was when suit brought, and is the holder, without this, &c.:—Held, bad, on special demurrer. Brunskill v. McGuire, 3 C. P. 408.

Pleading.]-Payee of a bill against the drawer. Plea, that the plaintiff at the commencement of this suit, was not the holder, without averring specifically an indorsement to some one else:—Held, bad. Boyes v. Joseph, 8 U. C. R. 273.

Title through Undischarged Insolvent.—Note made to an undischarged insolvent.—Right of indorsee for value to recover, though aware of the insolvency, and grounds on which the maker is liable. See Perkins v. Beckett, 20 C. P. 330.

Wife's Legacy—Reduction into Possession—Defendant delivered to the wife, since deceased, of the plaintiff, a note in payment of a legacy bequeathed to her, and she died wife as payce of the note had died before pinntiff had reduced the legacy or note into possession, and that he had not administered insband's action on the note. Robinson v. Cripps, 6 C. P. 381.

7. Release.

Accommodation Acceptor.]—The holder of a bill for value, though having subsequently became aware of its being an accommodation bill, may release the drawer without releasing the acceptor. City of Glasgow Bank v. Mardock, 11 C. P. 138.

Accommodation Maker—Time Giren to Indorser, I—Indorsee against maker. Special plea on equitable grounds, held good on demurrer, on the authority of Bailey v. Edwards, 9 L. T. N. S. 646, as averring that the plaintiffs gave time to an indorser, knowing that defendant was only an accommodation maker. Bank of Upper Canada v. Ockerman, 15 C. P. 363.

Accommodation Maker—Time Given to Primary Debtor.]—A married woman signed a note in blank, and gave it to her son "to be used as he liked." He filled it up for $1/200, signed it, and transferred it to the plaintiff, who was not made aware of the circumstances under which it had been signed. It was renewed twice without the married woman's name, the original note remaining in the plaintiff's hands:—Held, that the married woman was a surely in respect of the note for her son; and that the authority to the son as to using the note did not extend to keeping it afloat after maturity without her knowledge; and that she had been discharged by the extension of the time of payment. Becausey v. Broundee, S. A. R. 355.

Accommodation Maker — Time to Induces [—] beclaration on a note made by defendant and indorsed by one M. to plaintiffs. Please, on equitable grounds, that the defendant was surety for M., and made the note for his became aware after they became the holders thereof, and after notice thereof gave time to M., and thereby released defendant. On demurre, held, bad. Bank of Upper Canada v. Thomas, 11 C. P. 515.

Assignment to Plaintiff by Acceptor.]

—Beharation upon four bills of exchange for Gou each, drawn by R. H. & Co., upon one

J. C., payable to and indorsed by defendant.

Hefendant pleaded, I. payment: 2 an assignment made by J. C. to one T. P., for the benefit of his creditors, with plaintiffs' assent and concurrence, and that T. P., with the consent of J. C. and his other creditors, conveyed and assigned certain property to the plaintiffs, and plaintiffs accepted such conveyance and assignment in full satisfaction. The plaintiffs and plaintiffs accepted such conveyance and assignment in full satisfaction. The plaintiffs replied, on equilable grounds, that the property assigned was not equal to the whole of J. C.'s indebtedness to plaintiffs, and that plaintiffs accepted the same on account of such indebtedness with defendant's assent, and that the proceeds of such estate are still applicable to pay a portion of the causes of action against defendant, to wit, £590, with a nolle prosequi as to that portion; and defendant promised to pay the residue of defendant promised to pay the residue of defendant promised to a pay the residue of defendant indebtedness to plaintiffs over and above the said £500. Upon demurrer, held, that the executing of an assignment by the holder of a bill, without a special reservation of rights as to sureties, discharges them; and that the pleadings shewed it was the plaintiffs' duty duly to administer the assets of J. C. in their hands to be applied upon the bills declared on, and until they had done that, no cause of action accrued against the defendant. For all that was shewn by the pleadings, the assets in plaintiffs' hands might cover the bills seed upon, and therefore the replication was bad. Commercial Bank of Canada v. Wilson, 11 C. P. 581.

Discharge of some Defendants.]—Held, affirming Hamilton v. Holcomb, 12 C. P. 38, that where the holder of a bill or note sues, under the statute, the drawers, acceptors, and indorsers, in one action, he may discharge the drawers or indorsers (or accommodation acceptors) after an arrest under a c. sa., without losing his remedies against the other defendants liable in priority to those discharged. Holcomb v. Hamilton, 2 E. & A. 230.

See, also, Hamilton v. Holcomb, 11 C. P. 93, to same effect.

Evidence.]—The appellant claimed that he was only a surety for his co-defendants, and that he was discharged by time being given to the principal to pay the note:—Held, that he fact of time being so given being negatived by the evidence, it was immaterial whether appellant was principal or surety. Judgment below, 20 N. S. Rep. 509, affirmed. Wallace v. Souther, 16 S. C. R. 17.

Indorser—Time Given to Maker.]—A plea by indorser of time given to the maker must shew that the plaintiff was then the holder. Commercial Bank v. Johnston, 2 U. C. R. 126.

Indorser—Time Given to Maker.]—One A., holding a note indorsed by defendant, agreed with the maker that upon payment of an extra amount of interest he would take another note at a longer date; all the extra interest except 83 was paid. The note being then sent, was refused, on account of the non-payment of the balance of interest. The maker of the note afterwards declined giving the note. Upon an action brought the holder against the indorser of the original Lote, beld, that he was released. Arthur v. Ler, 8 C. P. 180.

Indorser — Time Given to Maker.]— Declaration against the Oshawa Manufacturing Company as makers, and G. as an indorser of a note. Plea by indorser, that it was agreed between plaintiff and the makers, by their president, without the consent or knowledge of the indorser, that the payment should give the makers time for payment of the note, in consideration of interest at £14 per cent, which the makers, by their president, agreed to pay for the extension:—Held, a good defence. Farrell v. Oshawa Manufacturing Co., 9 C. P. 230

Indorser Released by Release of Maker.]—The holder of a note recovered judgment thereon against the makers and indorsers, which was duly registered so as to create a lien on the real estate of the makers; subsequently he accepted from the makers of the note a composition of fifty per cent. and discharged their lands from further liability, expressly retaining the right to go against their personal assets, and he proceeded to execution against the goods of the indorser:—Held, a discharge of the indorsers from further liability; and a perpetual injunction was granted restraining further proceedings in such action. Mellish v. Green, 5 Gr. 655.

Interest Accepted Beyond Due Date.]
—An indorsement on the back of a note of the payment of interest up to a future date beyond the maturity of the note, in the absence of evidence of mistake, is to be deemed an extension of time for the payment of the note to such date, so as to discharge a party thereto who is merely a surety for the payment thereof. Ryan v. McKerrall, 15 O. R. 460.

Joint Acceptors—Time to One.]—A joint acceptor of a bill cannot be heard to say that he was surety for the other acceptor and is on that account discharged by time given to his principal. Nafts v. Soules, 2 C. P. 412.

Joint Makers—Time to One.]—One of two joint makers of a note cannot plead that he made the note with the knowledge of the plaintiff, the indorsee, only as surety for the other maker; that the plaintiff gave time to the other maker; that the plaintiff gave time to the other maker without his knowledge or consent; and that he was thereby discharged. Davidson v. Bartlett, I U. C. R. 50.

Joint Makers—Time to One.]—Action on a note made by defendants payable to T. or bearer, and by her delivered to plaintiffs. Plea, on equitable grounds, by one of the defendants. M., that he made the note as a surety for the others; that after it became due. T., in consideration of a certain sum paid to her, gave time to them without his, M.'s, consent: and that plaintiff took the note after it became due, with knowledge of the premises:—Held, good. Perley v. Loney, 17 U. C. R. 279.

Joint Makers—Pleading.]—Plea, setting up a similar defence:—Held, bad, as shewing only a mere forbearance to principal debtor, not a binding agreement to give time. Thompson v. McDonald, 17 U. C. R. 304.

Payment by Indorser.]—In an action by a second indorser against the maker and prior indorser on a note, the maker suffered judgment by default, and the indorser pleaded that the note was given by the maker to one H., to whom the maker was indebted, and indorsed by himself and plaintiff as sureties for the debt, and that upon action brought by H. against all the parties thereto, the plaintiff paid the same, and thereby released all the other parties from their common liability. Upon demurre::—Held, no defence, for the facts shewed no release. The question of contribution between plaintiff and defendant as co-sureties did not arise upon the pleadings. Millock v. McGregor, 12 C. P. 566.

Pleading. |--In an action by indorsees for value, against the firm of M. & C., on a bill drawn by S. & Co., in their own favour, accepted by the defendants and indorsed by 8, & Co. to plaintiffs, the defendant C. pleaded that the bill was accepted by his partner M. in the name of the firm as an accommodation for S. & Co., and without his, C.'s, authority, and was not within the scope and objects of the partnership business, and that the plaintiffs took it with notice. tiffs took it with notice. Also, equitably, that the plaintiffs after the bill had matured, having notice of the accommodation acceptance, agreed with S. & Co., the drawers, without the consent of defendants to accept a composition from S. & Co., which composition was paid to plaintiffs, who thereupon discharged S. & Co. from liability; and that defendants were discharged in equity thereby. On demurrer :- Held, 1. That the first plea was insufficient in not stating that the acceptance had no reference to any dealing between S. and the firm of M. & C. 2. That the equitable plea was bad, for the plaintiffs, having notice only after the bill matured, might release the drawers without releasing the ac-commodation acceptors. City of Glasgow commodation acceptors. City Bank v. Murdock, 11 C. P. 138.

Reservation of Rights.] — The acceptance by a creditor of part of his demand against his debtor, and agreeing not to sue him, with a reservation of the creditor's rights against a surety of such debtor, will not discharge the surety. Where, therefore, the holders of a bill received from the acceptor a composition of the debt, and executed a deed to that effect, but expressly reserved their rights against the drawer:—Held, that the drawer was not discharged. Wood v. Brett. 9 Gr. 452.

Reservation of Rights.)—The payee of a note indorsed for the accommodation of the maker, having obtained judgment against the maker and indorser, released the maker, reserving all his rights against the indorser:— Held, that he was entitled to do so, and might still enforce the judgment against the indorser. Bell v. Manning, 11 Gr. 142.

Reservation of Rights.]—A replication that when the time complained of was given it was expressly understood and agreed that the plaintiffs should reserve all their rights against the acceptor:—Held, good on demurrer. Bank of Upper Canada v. Jardine. 9 C. P. 332.

Reservation of Rights.] — Declaration on a note made by defendants P., W., and D., jointly and severally, payable to plaintiffs. Equitable pleas. I. By defendant D., that he made the note as surety for defendant P., of which the plaintiff was aware when he took it, and that after it became due, the plaintiff, without his knowledge, by deed released P. therefrom. 2. By defendant W., that he and defendant D. made the note for the accommodation of P., as his surety, to secure a debt due to the plaintiff solely from P.; that it was delivered to and accepted by the plaintiff from the defendants upon an express agreement that W. and D. should be liable only as sureties, and that the plaintiff without W.'s consent, deed released P. Equitable replications: That the pleas each refer to the same deed that at the time of making it P. was indebted to the plaintiff in $250 on an account stated as well as for the amount of the note; that it was intended and agreed only to release the $250, and not the note; that for the purpose of so confining the deed the plaintiff added after his signature thereto, "$250, not any sureties on this;" and that the note was not included, or intended by defendant P. or by the plaintiff to be included, in the debts released by the deed. 2. That the release was drawn and executed by mistake, the intention of the parties thereto being to execute a consent only to a discharge of P. under the Insolvent Act of 1864, and it should have been drawn so as to operate in that way only, and not as a discharge of any suretics :- Held, on demurrer, that at law the first replication would be bad, for the words added formed no part of the release, and it therefore set up oral matter to qualify the deed; but that on equitable grounds it was sufficient:—Held, also, that the second replication was bad. Fowler v. Perrin, 25 U. C. R. 227.

Reservation of Rights.]—After the maturity of a note for $300, and after an action had been commenced against the defendant, one of the indorsers thereof, alleged to be a surety, the principal debtor executed a document whereby he acknowledged his liability on the note, notwithstanding that defendant had been sued solely thereon, the Statute of Limitations or any legal or equitable defence that might be set up; and he covenanted to pay the note and interest by half-yearly payments of $50 each. There was contradictory evidence as to the acceptance of the document by the plaintiff;—Quere, whether the document, if accepted by plaintiff, constituted a discharge of the surety by the giving of time; and whether the statement of the pendency of the action against defendant could be looked upon as a reservation of plaintiff's rights against him. Prire v. Wyld, 11 O. R. 422.

Reservation of Rights.]—The holders of certain promissory notes agreed with the maker thereof, and certain of the indorsers, to extend the indorsers, to extend the index payment. The agreement expressly reserved all rights and remedies against persons other than parties to the agreement:—Held, that under these dirementances a subsequent indorser, not privy to the said agreement, was nevertheless not released thereby, for that his rights against the maker and prior addorsers were not prejudiced, inastended to the control of the rights of the holder against him, involved the reservation of his rights against the others. Conadian Bank of Commerce v. Northwood, 14 O. R.

Held, also, that the fact that the agreement between the holders of certain notes with the maker thereof, and certain of the indorsers, provided that upon payment and satisfaction of the holders certain collateral securities were to be assigned to one of the other parties to the agreement, did not discharge the subsequent indorser, for the arrangement was not absolute but limited to those who were parties to it as between themselves only, and did not affect the subsequent indorser's claim to the possession of the securities if he paid the holders. Ib.

Surety—Giving Time.]—The holder of a note, to which one of the defendants was a surety, accepted a new note from the principals without his knowledge or consent, payable after the maturity of the old note, on the understanding that he would not proceed on the original note, which he retained, unless the fresh note was not paid at maturity:—Held, that the surety was discharged, and that there was no reservation of the remedy against him. Shepley v. Hurd, 3 A. R. 549.

The fact that a party joins is a note as a

The fact that a party joins $\mathfrak h$ a note as a surety to enable the principals to raise money to apply towards the discharge of certain obligations to him does not prevent his being a surety. Ib.

Surety—Discharge of Maker.]—Where the holder of a promissory note had agreed to accept a third party as his debtor in lieu of the maker:—Held, affirming 20 A. R. 298, sub nom. Holliday v. Hogan, that as, according to the evidence, there was a complete novation of the maker's debt secured by the note, and a release of the maker in respect thereot, the indorsers on the note were also released. Holliday v. Jackson, 22 S. C. R. 479.

Time Given to Maker After Judgment Against Maker and Indorser.]—The holder of a note sued maker and indorser, and after execution placed in the sheriff's hands against both, the plaintiff, upon the application of the maker, extended the time for payment of the amount, without the consent of the indorser:—Held, a discharge of the indorser. VanKoughnet v. Mills, 5 Gr. 653.

8. Set-off.

Accommodation.]—Held—1. That set-off by indorsees against the holder, was no defence at law or equity, upon a note given for the accommodation of the indorser. 2. That the indorse of an overdue bill or note is liable to such equities only as attach to the bill or note itself, and to nothing collateral due from the indorser to the maker, or indorsee to payee. Wood v. Ross, S. C. P. 299.

Bank — Action Against Shareholder.]—An action was brought by a bank against the appellant on a promissory note, to which he pleaded set-off of a draft made by the plaintiffs and indorsed to him; to this there was a replication that the defendant was a contributory on the stock-book of the bank, and knew that the bank was insolvent when the draft was purchased; the defendant demurred on the ground that the replication did not aver that the debt for which the action was brought was due from the defendant in his capacity as shareholder or contributory:—Held, that the replication was bad in law. Ings v. Bank of Prince Edward Island, 11 S. C. R. 265.

Collateral Security.]—When the plaintiff proved his claim against the insolvent's estate he held, as collateral security, certain overdue notes, which he did not mention and he afterwards received certain payments on them:—Held, that such payments could not be allowed as a set-off in this action under R. S. O. 1877 c. 50, s. 142. Fitch v. Kelly, 44 U. C. R. 578.

Collateral Transactions.]—In an action against the maker and indorser:—Held, that neither could plead separately a set-off hot arising out of or connected with the note, Hughes v. Snure, 22 U. C. R. 597.

Damages.]—Held, that an equitable plea to an action upon a note, that the plaintiff had covenanted to pay defendant's debts, which covenant he had broken, whereby defendant was damnified to an amount equal to the amount of the note, is bad, and will be struck out as embarrassing. Griffith v. Griffith, 6 P. R. 172.

Damages—Counterclaim.]—A promissory note made by the defendant had been held by a bank, and after its maturity, the defendant transferred certain timber limits to the bank as collateral security for the payment of the note, which limits the bank sold. The plaintiffs became holders of the note for value after dishenour, and after the timber limits transaction, and brought this action upon the note, A counterclaim against the plaintiffs and the bank by the defendant, setting up that the bank had sold the timber limits without authority and for an insufficient price, and were thereby guilty of a breach of trust, and claiming that the defendant should be permitted to set off so much of his claim therefor against the bank as would satisfy the balance claimed upon the note, was held bad, and struck out, as not being properly a counterclaim. Canadian Securities Co. v. Prentice, 9 P. R. 324.

Damages—Counterclaim.]—In an action by the plaintiffs as indorsees of a bill of exchange, the defendant (the acceptor) set up that the bill was part of the price of goods bought by them from H. & G., the drawers, and filed a counterclaim against the plaintiffs, and H. & G. as defendants by counterclaim, claiming that the bill was transferred to the plaintiffs after maturity, with full notice and knowledge of the facts, and claiming $10,000 damages from H. & G. for breach of contract in respect of the goods, and asking for the delivery up and cancellation of the bill, and other bills in the same transaction. Upon the application of H. & G. the master in chambers struck out the counterclaim, and the names of H. & G. as defendants:—Semble, that as against the plaintiffs, the defence should have been pleaded as a defence to the claim on the bill. Torrance v. Livingstone, 19 P. R. 29.

Different Capacities.]—Action against executors on a note by testator payable to 8, or bearer, and by him transferred to plaintiff. Plea, that the note was transferred to the plaintiff after the death of testator, and that 8, at the commencement of the suit was and still is indebted to defendants as executors in an amount equal to the note, for, &c.:—Held, plea bad. Smith v. Nicholson, 19 U. C. R. 27.

Fees Payable to Maker.]—Where a note of a Judge of a district court was placed in the hands of an attorney for collection, and he agreed to give the Judge credit on the note for fees payable by him for business done in the court, and did indorse part on the note as payment, and subsequently the whole amount was paid by such fees, but the attorney refused to credit more than the sum first indorsed, and afterwards absconded:—Held, in an action by the owner of the note, that the Judge could not give the payment by fees in evidence against the plaintiff. Ketchum v. Powell, 3 O. S. 157.

Joint and Separate Debts.] — If the holder of a note sue the maker and indorser in a joint action, under 5 Will. IV. c. 1, the separate debt of the plaintiff to the maker or indorser cannot be set off under a joint plea of set-off. Paterson v. Howison, 2 U. C. R. 139.

Judgment Against Plaintiff and Others.] — Upon action by A. against M. on a note for $340, in the county court, the defendant pleaded, on equitable grounds, a joint and several note made by the plaintiff and three others, payable to defendant for $1,000, avering a suit brought against the makers thereof, and offering to set off and allow so much of A.'s liability upon this instrument as would cover his claim. Upon demurrer:—Held, that the maxim "Nemo debet bis vexari pro und et eådem causå," did not apply against the plea, and that it was good. Moore v. Andrews, 13 C. P. 405.

Note Due After Writ.]—A note made by the plaintiff to the defendant, falling due after the service of the plaintiff's writ, but before declaration filed, may be set of in the action. Thorne v. Haight, H. T. 6 Vict.

Note for Purchase Money—Damages.]
—On a sale of lands the purchaser gave his note for the balance of purchase money, and received a conveyance containing the usual covenants. There was a mortgage on the property at the time for a sum less than the note, and the purchaser claimed to set off against the note damages he had sustained by being unable to re-sell the land in consequence of the mortgage:—Held, not allowable. Stevenson v. Hodder, 15 Gr. 570.

Partial Failure of Consideration.]—
A. sold to B. certain goods, and a claim on one C. of £25, taking a horse in payment for the goods, and B.'s note for the claim. B. took from A. an order for the goods on the warehouseman in whose charge they were, but on presenting the order he was unable to obtain them:—Held, in an action by A. against B. on the note, that was defendant might set off the value of the see. Wright, Cook, 9 U. C. R. 005.

Plaintiff Colluding with Third Person.]—In an action by indorsee against maker and indorsers, a plea that the note was made and indorsed to third parties, who sent it to plaintiffs for collection: that such third parties before it fell due, were and are indebted to defendants in more than the amount of the note, and became insolvent, and plaintiffs are suing for and in collusion with them to deprive defendants of their set-off:—Held, bad, on the authority of Ould v. Harrison, 10 Ex. 572. Metropolitan Bank v. Snure, 10 C. P. 24.

Pleading.]—Action on a joint and several note. Set-off by agreement of a separate demand. Demurrer. Equitable pleading. Holmes v. McLean, 9 L. J. 216.

Pleading.]—To a plea of set-off on a note:—Held, that the plaintiff, under a replication of nunquam indebitatus, might shew that the note was given by him to the defendant while they were in partnership, to raise money to pay off a debt of the firm. Miller v. Thompson, 10 U. C. R. 391.

Set-off Between Indorser and —Held, 1. That set-off by indorsees against the holder, was no defence at law or equity, upon a note given for the accommoda-tion of the indorser; 2. That the indorsee of an overdue bill or note, is liable to such equities only as attach to the bill or note itself, and to nothing collateral due from the indorser to the maker, or indorsee to payee. Wood v. Ross, S C. P. 299.

Set-off More Than Claim.]—Held, that in this action against maker and indorsers of a note, upon a plea of set-off by two of the ina note, upon a pies of second by two of the management of the conservation of the cons

Special Agreement.]-To an action on a note the defendant pleaded a set-off for goods sold and delivered, but the evidence goods sold and delivered, but the evidence shewed that the set-off claimed was for goods sold to plaintiff by defendant on a special agreement that the plaintiff should pay a third party for them, and not the defendant:— Held, that the goods so delivered could not form the subject matter of a set-off, but that the plaintiff ought to have been sued on the special undertaking. Matthewson v. Carman, 1 U. C. R. 266.

Work. |-To an action on notes against maker and indorser, the latter pleaded a setoff in the common form for work done by him for the plaintiffs,—a plea held bad on de-murrer in Hughes v. Snure, 22 U. C. R. 597. The plaintiffs, however, did not demur, but took issue, and on the trial the jury found the plea proved. A verdict having been directed for the plaintiffs, with leave to move to re-duce it by the amount of set-off proved, a rule was obtained by the defendants on this leave, and a cross rule by the plaintiffs for a new trial on the evidence. This court made the latter rule absolute, but on payment of costs by the plaintiffs, as the whole difficulty had been caused by their going to trial on an insufficient plea:—Semble, that if the evidence had supported the plea, the rule to reduce would have been made absolute, and the plaintiffs allowed to move for judgment, non obstante,—following Lumby v. Allday, 1 C. & J. 301. Commercial Bank of Canada v. Harris, 27 U. C. R. 526.

9. Statute of Limitations.

Account Stated.]-It was proved that. in 1872, when the note sued on was given, an account was stated between plaintiff and defendant, the sum found due being $4,000, the amount of the note, which was made up of the principal sums advanced from time to time, and of the interest on those sums, which it was then agreed should be converted into principal -Held, sufficient to take the case out of the Statute of Limitations, as an acknow-ledgment of a new debt, and to enable the laintiff to recover upon an account stated :-Held, also, however, that the statute never ap phiel at all, as it was proved that in 1896, before the lapse of six years, the plaintiff and defendant met together and stated an account in writing, at $1,923, and that when the second accounting took place in 1872, be ing within six years of the former account-ing, it was agreed that in the new account the former account should constitute an item. the written acknowledgment of which was given up to the defendant and burned. House v. House, 24 C. P. 526.

Acknowledgment.]—Held, that the following expressions of the defendant, "The notes are genuine; that is, I made them; but I am under the impression that they were paid through Messrs. A. and B., and I don't think I am called upon to have any further conversation with you about them," were not sufficient to take the case out of the statute. Grantham v. Powell, 6 U. C. R. 494.

Acknowledgment.]—In assumpsit on a note, defendant pleaded the Statute of Limi-tations. At the trial, the plaintiff proved the following acknowledgment by the defendant:
"I received your letter dated January 31.
1 am sorry to say I cannot do anything for you at present, but shall remember you as soon as possible:"—Held, not sufficient to import a promise to pay on request. Gemmell v. Colton, 6 C. P. 57.

Acknowledgment to Payee — Subsequent Holder.]—Held, that a memorandum in writing signed by the maker of a note, admitting the amount to be due to the payee, which in the opinion of the court was sufficient in an action by the payee to prevent the operation of the statute, enured to the benefit of a subsequent holder of the note. Marshall v. Smith, 20 C. P. 356.

Bearer.]-The right of action on a note Bearer. — The right of action on a note payable to A. or bearer, does not accrue to a third person as bearer till an actual delivery to him; and when C., being in the United States, purchased a note payable to bearer, and on his coming into this Province got possession of it:—Held, that the cause of action accrued to him when he received the note, and not when he made the purchase. Shaw v. Matthison, 3 O. S. 74.

Due Date—Time When Statute Begins to Run.]—The bill of exchange in this action fell due on 1st December, 1875, and the writ issued on 1st December, 1881.—Held, that the statute began to run on 2nd December, 1875, and therefore this action was commenced in time. Sinclair v. Robson, 16 U. C. R. 211. remarked upon. Edgar v. Magec, 1 O R. 287.

Held, that the plaintiff, under the facts stated in the report of this case, had established his right to sue upon the bill. Ib.

Lower Canada Limitation. that the parties being residents in Upper Canada when the notes payable in Lower Canada ada when the notes payable in Lower Canada were made, when they became due, and when they were dishonoured, 12 Vict. c. 22, s. 31, did not bar the plaintiffs' recovery; and that that statute applies to the remedy, and not to the contract itself. Hervey v. Pridhem, 11 C. P. 329.

Lower Canada Limitation.] dorser of a note, made, indorsed and payable in Lower Canada, who was resident in Upper Canada, was sued there as such indorser, after a lapse of five years from the maturing of the note: the period prescribed as that within which an action must be instituted upon a note or bill of exchange in Lower Canada:— Held, that the plaintiff was not entitled to recover; the lapse of time under the statute operating as an extinguishment of the debt, without suit, not as a bar to the remedy only, Sheriff v. Holcombe, 13 C. P. 590, 2 E. & A. 516.

Lower Canada Limitation.]—To an action on a note made by defendant payable to A. H., and by him indorsed to the plaintiffs, defendant pleaded that it was made in covered and pleaded that it was made in covered and pleaded that it was made and covered and that the suit was not brought within five years after it fell due. The plaintiffs replied that when the note was made and indorsed to them. A. H. lived in Upper Canada, and at the time of said indorsement one plaintiff lived in Upper Canada, and the other in the United States. Defendant rejoined that after the note fell due, while A. H. held it, and more than five years before suit, A. H. carried on business in Lower Canada, that he and defendant met at Montreal, and A. H. might then have sued him:—Held, on demurrer, that by 12 Viet, c. 22, the note, owing to the lapse of time, must be taken to be absolutely paid and discharged; and that the plaintiffs could not recover. Herrey v. Jacques, 20 U. C. R. 396.

Lower Canada Limitation.]—A., residing in Upper Canada, made a note there payable to B., also a resident of Upper Canada, at the Bank of British North America in Montreal, and B. indorsed it to the plaintiffs, who carried on business in Montreal. Neither A. nor B. had ever resided in Lower Canada. 12 Vict. c. 22, s. 31, enacts that all notes payable in Lower Canada shall be held and taken to be absolutely paid and discharged, unless sued upon within five years after they become due:—Held, reversing the decision below, founded upon Hervey v. Jacques, 20 U. C. R. 306, that the plaintiff, suing here after the lapse of five years, was not barred. Darling v. Hitchook. 28 U. C. R. 439.

See also S. C. 25 U. C. R. 463.

Payment by One of Two Makers.]—
After the death of one maker of a joint and several promissory note signed by two, the deceased being a surety only, a payment upon it out of his own moneys and on his own account was made by the surviving maker who was also the sole executor of the deceased comaker:—Held, that such payment did not take the debt out of the Statute of Limitations as regards the estate of the latter. Paxton v. Smith, 18 O. R. 178.

Payment by Third Person.]—Action on a note made by defendant and L. payable to C., and by him indorsed to plaintiff, due in July, 1850. Pien, Statute of Limitations. To take the case out of the statute, the plaintiff proved that one T. C., owing the defendant $30, got an order with defendant's assent from C., who then held the note, on L., requesting L. to pay defendant $30, which he, C., would credit on the note; and this sum was accordingly so paid, and credited:—Held, clearly a payment by L. on his own account, and not by or for defendant, so as to take the case out of the statute as against defendant. Coxing v. Vincent, 29 U. C. R. 427.

Payment—Joint and Several Makers.]— Payments made by one of two joint and several makers will not take the case out of the statute as against the other, unless made expressly as his agent and by his authority, and such agency must be proved by the plaintiff apart from the fact of payment. In this case, there being no such proof, a nonsuit was ordered as to one of the two joint makers, and the verdict allowed to stand as against the other. Creighton v. Allen, 26 U. C. R. 627.

Pendency of Administration Proceedings — Champerty.]—O. brought in a claim in certain administration proceedings on promissory notes assigned to him by H. & Co., under an agreement between them, which, however, was held void for champerty, and O.'s claim on the notes disallowed. O. thereupon redelivered the notes to H. & Co. The six years allowed by the Statute of Limitations had exoired before the notes were thus delivered to H. & Co. but not before the date of the administration order, nor before O. tried to prove on them in the administration proceedings:—Held, that the order for administration prevented the barr of the Statute of Limitations:—Held, also, that H. & Co. might now assert their title to the hotes, and prove on them, notwithstanding the former champertors agreement with O. Re Cannon, Oates v. Cannon (2), 13 O. R. 703

Pleading.]—The limitation provided by 12 Vict. c. 22, s. 31, as to debts due in Lower Canada, must be specially pleaded, and cannot be proved under a plea of payment. King v. Glassford, 11 C. P. 490.

Promise to Pay—Identity of Note.]—Where a witness, the payee of a note payable to bearer, and transferred to the plaintif, proved a promise by the defendant, the maker, sufficient to take the note out of the statute, but could not identify the note as the one to which the promise applied, and it was not alleged or suggested that there was any other note in existence between the parties:—Held, that the not having identified the note was no legal defect in the evidence of the witness as to the promise to pay, and that the identity of the note was to be presumed. Reynolds v. O'Brien, 4 U. C. R. 221.

Promise to Pay—Joint and Several.]— A promise to pay by one of several joint and several makers of a note, will take the case out of the Statute of Limitations. Sifton v. McCabe, 6 U. C. R. 394.

Set-off — Pleading.] — See Parsons v. Crabb, 31 U. C. R. 435, 34 U. C. R. 136.

10. Technical Objections as to Parties.

Acceptance by Drawee.]—A defendant cannot be charged as an acceptor of a bill that has already been accepted, though conditionally, by the drawee; and to make him liable for money received for the payee's use, it must be shewn that he did receive money which he could and ought to have applied by paying the acceptance. Spalding v. McKay, 5 O. S. 659.

Fictitions Payee.]—Where a note is payable to a fictitious payee, and not to his order or bearer, a person receiving it from a third party for value cannot declare against the maker as on a note payable to bearer. Williams v. Nozon, 10 U. C. R. 290.

Guarantee.]—"I guarantee the payment of the within," indorsed on a note, over the signature of the payee, treated as an indorsement of the note, and not as a guarantee or collateral engagement for its payment. Waker v. O'Keilly, 7 L. J. 300.

Indorsement Before Delivery to Payee. — A. made his note payable to B. or bearer; before delivery to B., D. indorsed it; B. sued both A. and D., averring that A. made the note, &c., and a delivery to D., who became the lawful bearer thereof, who then, as such, indorsed and delivered to B.:—Held, that D., the indorser, was liable to B. as the holder of the note. Vanleuven v. Vandusen, 7 U. C. R. 176.

Indorsement Before Delivery to Payee. — A note made by A., payable to B., or order, and indorsed by C. in blank, cannot be declared upon by B. as a note made by C. to him, the plaintiff. Wilcocks v. Tinning, 7 U. C. R. 372.

Indorsement Before Indorsement by Payee. —Where A. made a note payable to E., or order, and C. wrote his name on the back, without B.'s first indorsement:—Held, that C. could not be considered as a new maker; and that the note would not support a recovery against him by B. on the common counts. Steer v. Adams, 6 O. S. 60.

Indorsement of Note Payable to Bearer, I—A. makes a note payable to B. or bearer, and delivers it to B. B. indorses to C. The holder sues B. on his indorsement:—Held, that the action would lie. Booth v. Barclag, 6 U. C. R. 215; Scott v. Douglass, 5 0, 8, 207.

Indorsement of Note Payable to Bearer, —A party indorsing a note payable to A, or bearer, may be sued as indorser. He may also be sued jointly with the maker, under 3 Vict. c, S. Ramsdell v. Telfer, 5 U. C. R. 508.

Indorsement by Stranger.]—Declaration, that S. & R., being indebted to plaintiffs, on, &c., by their note now overdue, promised to pay to the order of the plaintiffs £150, three menths after date; and for the better and more perfect securing and guaranteeing the payment thereof to the plaintiffs, delivered the said note to defendant, who indorsed the same to the plaintiffs, averring presentment, dishenour, and notice:—Held, bad, as shewing no cause of action. Moffatt v. Rees, 15 U. C.

Indorsement by Stranger.]—Where a promissory note payable to a named payee is indorsed by another person before delivery of the note to the payee, the former is liable as indorse to a holder in due course by virtue of se, 56 and 88 of the Bills of Exchange Act, 53 Viet, e, 33 (D.). Duthie v. Essery, 22 A. R. 191.

Indorsement before Payee.] — The defendant put his name on the back of a promissor; note before it was indorsed by the plaintiffs, the payes; who then indorsed it "without recurse," and sued him on it: — Held, that he was not liable either as indorser or as sardy or otherwise. Canadian Bank of Commerce v. Perram, 31 O. R. 116.

Indorsement before Payee.] — The notes in question having been made by the insolvent's wife, payable to the creditor's order, and having been indorsed by the insolvent before they were handed to the creditor: —Held, that the insolvent was not liable as indorser and that the creditor could not rank on his estate. Small v. Henderson, 27 A. R. 492.

Indorsement of Non-negotiable Note.]—An indorser of a note not negotiable, or if negotiable not indorsed by payee, cannot be sued as indorser by the payee. West v. Boucn. 3 U. C. R. 290.

Indorsement of Non-negotiable Note.]

—W. made a note payable to plaintiffs, but not negotiable, which defendants indorsed. It was proved to have been given for money lent to W. by the plaintiffs in defendants' presence, and for which they agreed to become security; that one of them had paid interest on it, and that both had promised to pay the note, when spoken to:—Held, that defendants could not be held liable as upon a note, nor as on an account stated. Quare, whether plaintiffs could have recovered as upon a guarantee. Skilbeck v. Porter, 14 U. C. R. 430.

Indorsement of Non-negotiable Note.] Defendant having indorsed in blank, as surety for the maker, a note payable to plaintiff, but not negotiable:—Held, that he was not liable as maker. McMurray v. Talob, 5 C. P. 157.

Indorser—Non-acceptance—Estoppel.]—
The indorser, like the drawer of a bill, is liable to the holder the moment the drawee has refused acceptance. Ross v. Dixie, 7 U. C. R.

The indorser is estopped from denying either the signature of the drawer or her competence, (being a feme covert in this case,) to draw the bill. Ib.

Maker Indorsing.]—A note payable to the maker's own order, and indorsed by the maker cannot be declared upon as payable to the plaintiff or bearer. Burns v. Harper, 6 U. C. R. 509; Wallace v. Henderson, 7 U. C. R. 88.

Maker Indorsing.]—Semble, that a note in this form when indorsed by the maker becomes a note payable generally to bearer, but not to any particular person. Burns v. Harper, 6 U. C. R. 509.

Maker Indorsing.]—But to declare upon such a note that he (the maker) made an instrument in writing promising to pay to his own order, would be bad. Wallace v. Henderson, 7 U. C. R. SS.

Maker or Indorser—Intention.]—A promissory note, for value received, at three months, was made by one of the defendants to the order of the testator of the plaintiffs. Some years afterwards the maker conveyed his farm to his son, the other defendant, on a verbal understanding, unknown to the payee, that the son was to pay the father's debts, including the note. After the conveyance, the payee having pressed the father for security, the son, without any indorsement of the note by the payee, wrote his name on the back of it, all parties supposing that he had thereby rendered himself liable as indorser. Subsequently he made a payment on account to the payee. In an action against father and son:—Held, that no liability attached to the son, either as indorser or guarantor, or as trustee of the property conveyed to him. Robertson v. Lonsdale, 21 O. R. 6000.

Maker or Indorser — Intention.] — W. having agreed to become security for a debt, wrote his name upon the back of a promissory note drawn in favour the reditors and signed by the debtor. The tet was not indorsed by the payees and no notice of the distormance of the payees and no notice of the distormance of the payees and no notice of the distormance of the note industrial payers. An action was brought against W. as maker of the note jointly with the debtor, on the trial of which a nonsuit was entered with leave reserved to plaintiffs to move for judgment in their favour, if there was any evidence to go to the jury as to W.'s liability. Held, that there was no evidence to go to the jury that W. intended to be liable as a maker of the note, and plaintiffs were rightly nonsuited. Ayr American Plough Co., Wallace, 21 S. C. R. 236.

Named Payee.]—Two trustees, desiring to purchase a new school site, petitioned the township council for a loan of $400, which was granted and secured by two instruments, as follows:—'We, the undersigned trustees of school section No. 11, do hereby promise to pay the treasurer of the corporation of Toronto township on.' &c., signed M. & D., money was expended for the purpose mentioned:—Held, 1. That the township corporation could not recover on the notes, for they were payable to the treasurer, not the plaintiffs, and were not negotiable: 2. That the defendants were not personally liable upon them. Township of Toronto v. McBride, 29 U. C. R. 13.

Order of Liability.]—Parties to notes are now held liable, centrary to the older cases, in the order on which they stand on the note; and the last holder may so treat them, notwithstanding any agreement among themselves, and although some one of the later parties may be the person for whose accommodation it was made, and who, therefore, is ultimately liable upon it; and this even when the holder is aware of the facts. Elder v. Kelly, S. U. C. R. 240.

Order of Names. —Plaintiff declared on a note as nude by K. to M., and indorsed by M. to sefendam who indorsed to plaintiff. Plea, that defendant did not indorse to plaintiff. Plea, that defendant did not indorse to plaintiff. as alleged. The name of defendant appeared as indorser on the note before that of M.:—Held, however, that on the pleadings this was immaterial, for M.'s indorsement to defendant was not denied, and his name appearing before defendant's could not affect the right of recovery. Brightly v. Rankin, 25 U. C. R. 257.

Payee Indorsing.]—A note payable to the order of the plaintiff, need not be indorsed by the plaintiff to himself to give it the effect of a note payable to him. Meyers v. Williams, 6 U. C. R. 421.

Payee Indorsing. |—The payee of a note indorsed in blank cannot, by merely writing his name above that of the indorser, maintain an action as indorsee against the latter, unless he shew authority from the indorser so to do, with the express object of creating between them the relationship and consequent liability of indorser and indorsee. Robertson v. Hueback, 15 C. P. 298.

Plaintiff Liable Over. — Where in an action by the payee against the maker and indorser of a note, it appeared that the indorser put his name on it as a surety for the maker: — Held, that the plaintiff could not recover against him, as he was a party to the note subsequent to the plaintiff himself. Jones v. Askeroft, 6 0. S. 154.

Plaintiff Liable Over.]—Semble, that though, under Bishop v. Hayward, 4 T. R. 470, where a plaintiff suing is liable over to the defendant by reason of a prior indorsement, he cannot recover; yet if he sue with others as an executor he may. Jenkins v. McKenzie, 6 U. C. R. 544.

Plaintiff Prior Indorser.]—Declaration on a note made by P. payable to F. & F. or order, indorsed by them to defendant, and by defendant to the plaintiffs. Plea, that F. & F. are the plaintiffs, and no other persons. Replication, that at the time of making said note and indorsement by defendant, the maker was indebted to the plaintiffs, and it was thereupon agreed between them, that in consideration that the maker would procure defendant to indorse said note and become surety thereof to the plaintiffs, the plaintiffs would give time to the maker until the note matured; that the note was made in pursuance of such agreement, and defendant for the accommodation of themaker indorsed it to the plaintiffs, with the intention of thereby becoming surety to them as indorser; that the maker delivered the note so indorsed to the plaintiffs, who thereupon gave time to him as agreed on, and that the debt is unpaid:—Held, replication good. Foster v. Fareucell, 13 U. C. R. 449.

Plaintiff Prior Indorser.] — Declaration, by 6, M. & Co., on a note made by 8, & R. payable to G. M. & Co., or order, indorsed by them to defendant and by defendant to plaintiffs. Plea, that G. M. & Co. are the plaintiffs, and payees of the note, and the same persons who indorsed it to defendant, and are liable to defendant as such indorsers, if he should be made to pay. Replication, that the plaintiffs ames were used as payees for form only; and it was understood by all parties to the note, that, although nominally made payable to the plaintiffs, it was substantially to be paid to defendant, because, by a special agreement between plaintiffs and defendant notwithstanding the form of the note, the plaintiffs were not to become liable to defendant by indorsing to him. The evidence shewed that the note was given to enable the makers to get goods on credit from the plaintiffs, and that defendant knew he was indorsing for that purpose:—Held, that the plaintiffs could recover. Moffatt v. Rees, 15 U. C. R. 527.

Plaintiff Prior Indorser.] — W., the first indorser of a note, sued M., the second indorser, and proved that the note had been given by the maker, one C. R., upon the dissolution of a partnership between himself and the plaintiff, as security to the plaintiff for the amount of the note due to him upon such settlement, and with the understanding that an indorsement would be given. M. indorsed the note after the plaintiff, with notice of these facts:—Held, that he was liable to the prior indorser. Wordsworth v. Macdougall. S. C. P. 403.

Plaintiff Prior Indorser. — Declaration by G. against M. & W. on a note for $100, made by M., payable to G. or order. by G. indorsed to W., and by W. to the plaintiff. Plea. by W., that G., the payee and indorsee, and the plaintiff is the same person, and as such payee indorsed to defendant W. Replication, that before the making of said note the plaintiff agreed to lend to defendant M. $100, provided he would procure W. to indorse aid note as surety for the payment thereof to the plaintiff: that in pursuance of such agreement M. made, and W., for his accommodation, indorsed, and M. delivered said note to the plaintiff so indorsed, and Annual Held, replication good. Gunn v. Me-Pherson, 18 U. C. R. 244.

Plaintiff Prior Indorser.] — Plaintiff, pave and first indorser of a note, sues a subsequent indorser, and calls him to prove the realication that he indorsed with the intention to become liable to plaintiff as indorser and surety for maker. &c. Defendant expressly denies this. There being no other evidence.—Held, that there was nothing to go to the jury to warrant a finding for plaintiff. Mickle v. Oliver, 11 C. P. 363.

Plaintiff Prior Indorser.] — Indorsee against indorser. Plea, that the note was indorsed by payee without consideration by defendant to him; that defendant, for the accommodation of maker and payee, indorsed in blank and delivered it to payee, and there never was any consideration for the indorsement of the note to defendant; and that payee, in fraud of defendant, and elivered the note to plaintiff without value or consideration, and solely for the purpose of endeavouring, through plaintiff's agency, to recover against defendant, the evidence shewed that the maker, being indebted to the payee, procured defendant to indorse it as surety to the payee, who had previously into read the payer, who had previously the read that the independent of the payer of the payer Possession by Indorser—Indorsement Strack Out.]—The possession of bills of exchange by the indorser after he has specially indorsed them, is prima facie evidence that he is the owner of them, and that they have been returned to him, and taken up in due course of time unon their dishonour, although there he no re-indorsement; so that by the possession he is remitted to his original rights.

be no re-indorsement; so that by the possession he is remitted to his original rights. Black v, Strickland, 3 O. R. 217.

In July, 1877, W. drew a bill of exchange on the defendants, payable to his own order, and the latter accepted it. The bill was first specially indorsed to the Bank of O., which specially indorsed to the Bank of O., which specially indorsed it for collection, to the Bank of C. It was dishonoured and protested, and came again into the hands of the Bank of O., which returned it to W. on or before December, 1877. Afterwards, but how did not appear, it got back into the hands of the Bank of O. In 1881 the plaintiff, who was W.'s agent, got it from the Bank of O.

along with other papers of W., and W., in November, 1881, indorsed it to the order of the plaintiff, who now sued the acceptors. When produced the bill appeared with all the special indorsements struck out, leaving only the signature of W., to the first special indorsement, and with the last indorsement to the order of the plaintiff. There was no reindorsement from the Bank of O. to W. or to the plaintiff:—Held, that in the absence of other evidence it was to be inferred that W. had satisfied any claim of the Bank of O., and had thereby procured or had the right to make the cancellation of previous special indorsements. Callow v. Lawrence, 3 M. & S. 95, followed, Ib.

Re-indorsement.]—A, being indebted to the plaintiffs, offered them a note with an indorser. The plaintiffs agreed to accept one, and A, made a note puyable to the plaintiffs, procured the defendant to indorse it in blank, and delivered it to the plaintiffs. The plaintiffs discounted the note, having indorsed it under the defendant's indorsement. The note having been dishonoured, the plaintiffs took it up, struck out their indorsement, and again indorsed it above defendant's name, adding to their own name "without recourse," and them sued the defendant:—Held, that though the plaintiffs had not indorsed the note when the defendant indorsed it, and though their indorsement, making them stand as first indorsement, making them stand as first indorsement making them. Semble, also, that the defendant was estopped from denying that the plaintiffs' name was indorsed when it ought to have been. Peck v. Phippon, 9 U. C. R. 73.

Signature by Holder under Maker's Name.]—Where a promissory note commencing "I promise to pay," and signed by two makers, was afterwards discounted by the plaintiff for the holder thereof, the money being paid to him on his agreeing to become responsible for the payment of the note, he signing his name under those of the makers:—Held, that the liability of the person so signing was that of surety, and that the walldity of the note was not affected by the manner in which it was signed. Kinnard v. Teucaley, 27 O. R. 398.

Third Person Signing.]—Where, after a note is completed, so far as the intention of the parties is concerned, it is signed by a third person, or is so signed by him after maturity, without any consideration moving directly to such third person, or any agreement to extend the time of payment, such third person is not liable thereon. Crofts v. Beale, 11 C. B. 172, followed: and Currie v. Misa, L. R. 10 Ex. 153, 1 App. Cas. 554, and McLean v. Clydesdale Banking Co., 3 App. Cas. 95, distinguished. Ryan v. McKerral, 15 O. R. 400.

11. Transfer after Maturity.

Agent.]—Where an agent of the holder disposes of a note over due, without authority, though for good consideration, the person taking from him obtains no title as against the principal. West v. Maclanes, 23 U. C. R. 357.

Agreement to Give Time.]-A valid agreement to give time is an equity which attaches to a bill as against a person taking it after maturity. Britton v. Fisher, 26 U. C. R. 338.

Agreement not to Negotiate.]—To an action against the maker and indorser of a note, the maker pleaded, on equitable grounds, that there was an agreement not to negotiate the note after maturity; and that the note was first indorsed to the plaintiff, as in the declaration alleged, after maturity, with notice of its being an accommodation note:—Held, plea good, the agreement alleged being an equity attaching to such note after maturity, Grant v. Winstanley, 21 C. P. 257.

Defendant also pleaded that the note was Defendant also pleaded that the note was indorsed by the payee during its currency to one R., who had notice of its being an accommodation note, and that defendant was only security for the payee; that R, held it till at and after maturity, but did not notify the payee as indorser, who never received notice of dishonour, and defendant was thereby discharged; and that the note was indorsed to plaintiff after maturity, with notice that it was an accommodation note:—Held, on demurrer, plea bad, for the want of notice could not prejudice defendant, Ib.

Agreement not Part of Original Consideration.]—The plaintiffs sued as bearer of a note made by defendant payable to one McL., or bearer. Defendant pleaded, on equit-McL, or bearer. Derendant pleaded, on charable grounds, that McL, being the holder of said note, deposited it with one McD, as collateral security for the payment by said McL. of a certain note of the said McL, then held of a certain note of the said act. filed here by said McD., which said note McD. trans-ferred and delivered to the plaintiffs, and deposited the note in the declaration mentioned with the plaintiffs, after it became due, as collateral security; and that the said McL. did, before the commencement of this suit, retire, pay, and satisfy his said note, and was and is entitled to a return of the note now sued on, so held by the plaintiffs as collateral security, and is the lawful holder of said note:—Held, on demurrer, plea bad, for, 1. the terms upon which the note was transferred to McD., which formed no part of the original consideration for which it was given and to which the defendant was no party, did not constitute an equity attaching to the note in the plaintiffs' hands of which defendant could take advantage; and, 2. that even if it were assumed that the plaintiffs had no better title than McD., still McD., being the holder at maturity, had a vested right of action against the defendant. Canadian Bank of Commerce v. Ross, 22 C. P. 497.

Collateral Security.] — Action by indorse against maker of a note. A plea on equitable grounds that a note was given as collateral security for a mortgage for the same amount, and was indorsed over after it became due by the original holder and mortgage, who was proceeding to foreclose the mortgage in fraud of the defendant, with full knowledge:—Held, no defence either in law or equity. Shaw v. Boomer, 9 C. P. 458.

Discount After Maturity for Improper Purpose. —Where a note indorsed generally was put into the hands of A. to get it discounted for the maker, B., and, instead of this B. owing him (A.), a debt, he discounted it for his own benefit, and, as found by the jury, after the note had matured:—Held, in an action by indorsee against maker and indorser, that the plaintiff could not recover. Kerr v. Straat, S U. C. R. 82.

Existing Equities.]—A transferee of an overdue note takes subject to then existing equities affecting the note itself; but his right to sue is not subject to be defeated by any after act of the person who had the joint right to sue, and no notice of transfer is necessary to perfect the title of a transferee. Ferguson v. Stewart, 2 L. J. 116.

Failure to Carry out Bargain.]—In assumpsit upon a note, transferred by the passe to plaintiff after it begame due, on non assumpsit the defence set up was that the defendant and payee had a settlement, when defendant and payee had a settlement, when defendant ngreed to convey a lot of land within six months, to give over certain stock, and to give this note, the payee agreeing to deliver to the plaintiff certain notes, according to a schedule: that the defendant delivered the stock, gave his note, and mutual receipts were exchanged; and that it then appeared the payee had only part of the notes in the schedule, which the defendant refused to accept. It did not appear that the land had since been conveyed, nor which of the notes were wanting; but the jury found that the payee at the settlement concenled from defendant that he had not all the notes:—Held, a defence to this action on his note. McCollum v. Church, 3 O. S. 356.

Fraudulent Conversion—Innocent Holder for Value.]—A bond fide holder acquiring commercial paper after dishonour takes subject not merely to the quitties of prior parties to the paper, but also to those of all parties having an interest therein. In re European Bank, Ex parte Oriental Commercial Bank, L. R. 5 Ch. 358, followed. Young v. MacNider, 25 S. C. R. 272.

Particular Purpose.] — An agreement between the maker and payee of a promissory note that it shall only be used for a particular purpose, constitutes an equity which, if the note is used in violation of that agreement, attaches to it in the hands of a bond fide holder for value who takes it after dishonour. MacArthur v. MacDowall, 23 S. C. R. 571.

Postponing Payment.]—Action by indorsees against the maker of a note payable to J. W., by him indorsed to G. W., and by G. W. to plaintiffs. Plea, that J. W. indorsed the note to G. W. for safe-keeping only, and not to be negotiated, and G. W. so received it; but after it fell due, and without J. W.'s authority, he indorsed it to the plaintiffs, who then had notice of the premises; and that wnile J. W. held it, and after it fell due, he, for value, gave time to defendant for payment until a day after the commencement of the suit:—Held, after verdict, a good plea. Britton V. Fisher, 26 U. C. R. 338.

Set-off.]—Where the plaintiff, indorsee of a note payable on demand, had taken it two years after its date, and was cognizant of an agreement between the holder, from whom he took it, and the defendant, (the maker), that the same should be set off against a bond, of which the defendant was obligee, and the holder obligor:—Held, that a plea stating these facts was good upon general demurrer. Brooke v. Arnold, Tay. 25.

Set-off. —In an action on a promissory note it was shewn that after maturity, and while the payee continued to be the holder, the maker supplied the payee and others with board, etc., the value of which it was agreed should be applied in payment or reduction of the note:—Held, that a subsequent transfer of the note could only be made subject to the claim of the maker for such board, etc.; and that such claim was an equity which attached to the note in the plaintiff's hands. Ching v. Juffery, 12 A. R. 432.

Traver for Notes—Transfer After Agrement to Give Them Up.]—Where, in trover for notes against the maker, it appeared that the notes had been given by him on a purchase of land; that the payee afterwards agreed to deliver them up to him on a good consideration; that afterwards, and before their delivery, the payee assigned them by deed to the plaintiff, the notes themselves being in the possession of a third party; that the defendant afterwards received them, having first had notice of the assignment, and no fraud having been shewn, the jury found for the defendant:—Held, on motion for a new trial, that as these facts would have constituted a good defence in an action by the payee on the notes, the verdict was right in the absence of proof of fraud; a new trial was therefore refused. Small v. Bennett, T. T. 3 & 4 Vict.

VIII. SPECIAL PERSONS.

1. Agents.

Adding Word "Agents."] — McC. & Bross, acting as agents for L. T. & P., purchased a load of coal, without stating to the vendor that they were acting as agents, and upon receipt of the coal sent in payment A draft drawn by them, and accepted by their principals, to which they signed their own names as drawers, adding the word "Agts:"—Held, that they were personally liable as drawers. Reid v. McChesney, 8 C. P. 50.

Assignee for Creditors—Personal Liability.]—An assignee of a partnership, conducting the business under a trust deed for the benefit of the creditors, gave promissory notes to the plaintiffs for goods supplied to him in connection therewith, and signed them in the firm name, followed by his own, with the word "assignee" added. The deed gave him no authority to make notes or accept bills on behalf of the firm, and the plaintiffs had previously refused to draw on the latter, requiring his own acceptance:—Held, that under these circumstances, and having regard to s. 20 of the Bills of Exchange Act, he was personally liable on the notes. Boyd v. Mortimer, 30 C. R. 230.

Authority.]—It was proved that one D. was clerk or agent for the defendant keeping a store at L. and that defendant had sanctioned his purchasing certain goods:—Held, that the circumstances gave no implied authority to D. to sign the defendant's name to negotiable paper, and that the jury were warranted in finding that the defendant had given D. no authority to purchase goods of the plaintiff. Heathfield v. Van Allan, 7 U. C. R.

General Power of Attorney. —A general power to an agent to sign bills, notes, &c., and to superintend, manage, and direct all the affairs of the principal, gives him a power to indorse notes. Auldjo v. McDougall, 3 O. S. 199.

Indorsement "Per Pro."]—Where an agent accepts or indorses "per pro," the taker of a bill or note so accepted or indorsed is bound to inquire as to the extent of the agent's authority, and where an agent has such authority, his abuse of it does not affect a bona fide holder for value. Bryant v. Banque du Peuple; Bryant v. Quebec Bank, [1893] A. C. 170.

Principal's Name not on Bill.]—No action lies upon a bill except against those who are in some shape parties to it. Where, therefore, A. drew upon B. in his own favour, and indorsed it to C., who in her own name indorsed to the plaintiffs; and it appeared that C. was a lady residing in Buffalo, for whom, though not a partner, or in any way transacting business in his name, she had negotiated bills at banks and with merchants: it was held, in an action against D., upon an averment "that A. indorsed the said bill to one C., the agent of this defendant, or her order, and delivered it so indorsed to her as such agent, and that the said C., then being the agent of the defendant in that behalf authorized for and on behalf of the defendant, then indorsed and delivered the same to the plaintiffs;" that the action could not be sustained, D.'s name not appearing unon the bill in any shape. Ross v. Codd, 7 U. C. R.

2. Companies and their Officers.

Beneficial Interest.]—The plaintiffs declared against the acceptor on a bill as drawn in their favour, but which was payable to the order of Thomas G. Ridout, Esq., cashier. It was indorsed, "Pay to John Smart, Esq., cashier, or order. Thomas G. Ridout, cashier," but the name of Thomas G. Ridout had been struck out. At the trial the plaintiffs were allowed to amend by alleging that the bill was payable to the order of Ridout, who indorsed to Smart, and that they, R. & S., being the plaintiffs' agents and cashiers, received the bill for them and as their property:
—Held, that the plaintiffs could not recover, for the beneficial interest which they were alleged to have in the bill would not entitle them to sue on it in their own name. Bank of Upper Canada v. Rutlan, 22 U. C. R. 451.

Building Society,] — Declaration on a note made by defendants, a building society, incorporated under G. S. U. C. c. 53:—Held, good on demrer, for they might legally make notes under certain circumstances. Snarr v. Toronto Permanent Building & Savings Society, 29 U. C. R. 317.

Countersigning.] — Held, that a bill drawn by one defendant as secretary on, and accepted by the other defendant as president of, a railway company, did not come within s. 13 of 18 Vict. c. 182, as being accepted by the president and countersigned by the secretary; and that they were personally responsible. Bank of Montreal v. Smart, 10 C. P. 15.

Descriptive Words—Liability of Members.—The manager of an incorporated company, in payment for goods purchased by him as settle, gave a promissory note begings and active date we promise to pay an action against the individual members of the company the defence was that R, alone was liable on the note and that the words "manager," &c., were merely descriptive of his business:—Held, that as the evidence established that both R, and the payees of the note intended to make the company liable; and as R, had authority as manager to make a note on which the company would be liable; and as R, had authority as manager to make a note on which the company would be liable; and as R, hed authority as manager to make a note on which the company would be liable; and as R, hed authority as manager to make a note on which the company would be liable; and as the form of the note was sufficient to effect that purpose; the defence could not prevail and the holders of the note were entitled to recover. Fairchild v. Ferguson, 21 S. C. R. 484.

Discount of Non-negotiable Note. |—II. a director of a joint stock company, signed, with other directors, a joint and several promissory note in favour of the company, and took security on a steamer of the company. The note was, in form, non-negotiable, but that fact was not observed by the officials of the bank who discounted it and paid over the proceeds to the company. II. knew that the note was discounted, and before it fell due he had in writing acknowledged his liability on it. In an action on the note by the bank against H.:—Held, affirming 9 O. R. 655, that although, in fact, the note was not negotiable, the bank, in equity, was entitled to recover, it being shewn that the note was intended by the makers to have been made negotiable, and was issued by them as such, but by mistake or inadvertence, it was not expressed to be payable to the order of the payee. Harvey v. Bank of Hamilton, 16 S. C. R. 714.

Discount—Company's Benefit.]—One S., president and treasurer of a cheese company, kept an account with the defendants, private bankers, on behalf of the company, "S., president of B. Cheese Company," headed which he drew from time to time by cheques signed "S., president." The account being overdrawn, the defendants, in good faith, at the request of S., discounted a note in their own favour signed "S., president," with the seal of the company attached (but made without the knowledge or authority of the directors, by whom with the president under the by-laws of the company its affairs were to be managed), and placed the proceeds to the credit of the account, and the proceeds were afterwards chequed out by S. to pay creditors of the company. At this time S. was a defaulter to the company to a larger amount than the note. In the meanwhile after two renewals the note was charged up by the defendants to the account with the by the detendants to the account with the consent of S. but without the authority of the directors, who were unaware that S. was a defaulter, but knew that he kept the bank account in his own name as president, depositing therein the proceeds of sales of cheese and drawing upon it to pay the company's creditors. The company now sued to recover the amount of now sued to recover the amount of the note from the defendants, who did not plead fraud, but alleged they had fully ac-counted: — Held, that the plaintiffs were bound to affirm or disaffirm the transaction altogether and could not repudiate the liability upon the note and at the same time take the

Effect of Acceptance.]—Where a bill is drawn by a person signing as agent of a company, the acceptance admits the signature and authority of the agent, and precludes any technical objections as to the company, or their ability to draw the bill. Bank of Montreal v. DeLatre, 5 U. C. R. 362.

Indorser—Estoppel.]—Held, that the indorser of a promissory note, purporting to be made by a corporation, is estopped from alleging that the note was ultra vires the makers. Held, also, that the instrument in question in this case having been declared on as a promissory note, and not satied to have been under seal, it could not be assumed, in favour of the indorser, that it had been so executed as to deprive it of its negotiable character, but that if under seal the point should have been raised by plea. Merchants Bank v. United Empire Club, 4 U. C. R., 498.

Informal Authority.]—A company incorporated by C. S. C. c. 65, were empowered to horrow money for purposes specified, and to horrow money for purposes specified, and the president, acting upon a resolution of the directors, signed the note in question, but it appeared that the directors had not been appointed as required by the Act:—Held, that the resolution sufficiently compiled with the Act; and that, as the statute empowered the directors to authorize the president to sign notes, and the plaintiff had accepted such notes in good faith, and the proceeds had been applied for the benefit and purposes of the company, it might be presumed that the proper authority had been given. Currier v. Ottawa Gas Co., 18 C. P. 202.

Inspector.]—The defendant, the inspector of an insurance company, having arranged with the plaintiff so to the amount of the plaintiff sclaim for loss, amount of the plaintiff sclaim for loss, and the following bill:—"8875. To the Benver and Toronto Fire Insurance Company. Toronto, 6th November, 1876. Three months after date pay to the order of John Hagarty, at the Ontario Bank here, $875, being parment in full of his claim under policy No. 71.514, for loss and damage by fire on the 27th of October last. (Signed). A. Squier, Inspector." It was found as a fact that the plaintiff did not suppose that defendant would be, nor did defendant intend to make himself, liable: that the actual bargain was, that the plaintiff should get a bill on which the company would be, but that there was no express agreement or understanding that defendant was personally liable. Hogarty v. Squier, 42 U. C. R. 105.

Mining Company — Scal.] — A mining company incorporated under C. S. C. c. 63. s. 57, has not, as a necessary incident, the right to draw, accept, or indorse, bills of exchange for the purposes of their business; and the power of "selling or otherwise disposing of their ores as the company may see fit." in their articles of association, will not give such right by implication. Bills directed to the secretary of the company, and so describing him, are in effect drawn on the company, and authorize him to accept on their behalf, if he has authority to bind them; and it is unnecessary to put the seal of the company to heressary to put the seal of the company to the acceptance. His authority, and the power of the company to accept, are put in issue by a traverse of acceptance by the company. by a traverse of acceptance by the company. Where there is no mention in the bills or acceptances of the amount of the capital stock the trustees, under C. S. C. c. 63, s. 57, are personally liable; but only where but for such personally lander, but only where but for such omission the company would have been liable, which here they would not have been. Gilbert v. McAnnany, 28 U. C. R. 384.

Name of Real Makers Omitted.] -Action against the defendant as the maker of a promissory note. Before the defendant's a promissory note. Before the detendant's signature was, as alleged, the word "per," and underneath was the name "William Stockdale, manager," The alleged note was given in renewal of a note made by the Toronto Patent Wheel and Waggon Company, and was brought to the defendant by plaintiff for the purpose of having it executed by the company, when defendant, who was the secretary of the company, signed it, the intention being that the company's name should be filled in over defendant's by the company's manager, by stamping it with defendant's stamp, but which was not done. After the note became due, the plaintiff proved on it against the company who had gone into insolvency, and obtained a dividend:—Held, that the defendant was not liable:—Held, also, that the provisions of s. 79 of 40 Vict. c. 43 that the provisions of s. 79 of 40 Vict. c. 43 (D₂, did not apply to this note, as it did not purport to be a note signed by or on behalf of the company, Brown v, Howland, 9 O. R. 48. Affirmed, on the ground that the instrument had never been perfected or delivered as a promissory note, 15 A. R. 750.

President.]—Upon a bill drawn "C. P. belatre, Esq., President Niagara Dock and Harbour Company, Niagara, C. W.," and accepted thus,—"Accepted, nayable at the office of the Bank of Upper Canada, Niagara,—Signed, P. C. Delatre, Pres't N. H. & D. Co."—Held, in an action by the payees, that the acceptor was personally liable, Bank of Montreal v. DeLatre, 5 U. C. R. 362.

President. |- The charter of the Midland Railway Company, 16 Vict, c. 241, s. 5, gives them power to become parties to bills and notes, and enacts that any bill accepted by the president, with the counter-signature of the secretary, or any two of the directors, and under the authority of a majority of a quorum of the directors, shall be binding on the company, and every bill accepted by the president as such, with such counter-signature, shall be presumed to have been properly accepted for the company, until the contrary be shewn: that the seal shall be unnecessary, nor shall that the seal shall be unnecessary, nor snall the president, &c., so accepting any bill, be individually liable. A bill of exchange addressed, "To the president, Midland Railway," was accepted in these words, "For the Midland Railway of Canada, accepted, H. Read, secretary; Geo. A. Cox, president;"—Held, that defendant C. (who was admitted that the the westdarth was presonally liable. to be the president), was personally liable, the bill not being drawn upon the company, Madden v. Coz., 44 U. C. R. 542. Affirmed in appeal, upon an equal division of opinion: 5 A. R. 473.

President—Secretary—Seal.]—Upon a hote signed "Geo, H., Cheney, Pres't Gr. Trunk Telegraph Co., F.C. A. Whitney, Sec-retary C. Grand Trunk Telegraph Co.," with the seal of the company affixed :- Held, that the seal of the company affixed:—Held, that the makers were not personally liable. City Bank v. Chency, 15 U. C. R. 400.

The charter of the company enacted that all evidences of debt issued by them, shall be issued and signed by the president and trea-surer:—Semble, per Robinson, C. J., that this is directory merely. Per Burns, J., that the seal dispensed with the signatures. Ib.

President of Club.]—The plaintiffs sued defendant in the first three counts of the declaration as maker of three several promissory notes in the following form: Two months after date, the Carleton Club promise to pay to the order of B. $497.66, for value received. Signed by defendant, president of the club, and by the secretary. The fourth count al-Signed by decemant, The fourth count al-and by the secretary. The fourth count al-leged that defendant promised the plaintiffs that he had authority from the members of the club to make the said notes, and that if the plaintiffs would discount them, they should be paid by said members; that the members never authorized defendant to make the said notes; and that they had refused to pay or be held responsible therefor. There was no evidence of any promise except what might be inferred from defendant's signature as president, and it was not shewn that the club had ever repudiated their liability:—Held, that defendant was not liable on the fourth count, for even if, as the plaintiffs contended, 37 Vict. c. 34 (O.), under which the club was incorporated, did not authorize the making of notes, this was a matter of law known to the plaintiffs as well as to defendant, and upon which they could exercise their judgment. Bank of Ottawa v. Harrington, 28 C. P. 488.

Secretary.]-G., being the secretary of an insurance company, gave this note for a loss;

"£1000 currency.—Sixty days after date I promise to pay to the order of W. £1000, value received by the Ontario Marine and Fire Insurance Company, payable at the Gore Bank in Hamilton." Signed "C. Horatio Gates, Secretary O. F. Company:"—Held, that he was personally liable thereon. Armour v. Gates, 8 C. P. 548.

Secretary.]-In an action against defendant as acceptor on the following bill of ex-change:—" $800.—Montreal, 19th Feb., 1869. change :—" 8800.—Montreal, 19th Feb., 1860.
—Two months after date pay to the order of myself at the Jacques Cartier Bank in Montreal, eight hundred dollars, value received, and charge the same to account of E. E. Gilbert. James Glass, secretary, Richardson Gold Mining Company, Belleville, Ontario," and accepted "The Richardson Gold Mining Company and Glass Secretary. thrio, and accepted The Richardson Gold Mining Co., per James Glass, Secretary: "Held, on demurrer, not to be the acceptance of defendant, and that he was not personally liable. Robertson v. Glass, 20 C. P. 250.

Treasurer—Seal.]—Defendant accepted a Treasurer—Seal. |—Derendant accepted a bill drawn upon him as treasurer of the Wolf Island Railway and Canal Co., thus—"Accepted, W. A. Geddes, Treas, W. I. R. W. & C. Co.," adding the company's seal:—Held, that he was personally liable. Foster.v. Geddes, 14 U. C. R. 239.

Treasurer.]-The Canada Southern Railway Company being indebted to one H, for way company being independ to one II, 100 cordwood supplied to them, II, agreed to accept for a portion of the price thereof the bill of the company. To effect this intention the defendant, who was the company's treasurer, filled in one of the printed forms of bills used by him as such treasurer for the company's acceptances, the bill being stated to be drawn on defendant as, "M. H. Taylor, Tr. C. S. Ry. Co., Sr., Thomas," and it was acceptated by him as "M. H. Taylor, Tr. The bell was received by H. as the company's acceptance, and he signed the company's acceptance, and he signed the company's relative to the plaintiffs, who also the forvalue to the plaintiffs, who also the plaintiffs, who also the plaintiffs, the discount of the plaintiffs, and the property of the company, and the bill being drepton and accepted by him personally and only or for the company, and the bill being drepton and accepted plaintiffs did and the property of the company, and the bill being drepton and accepted by him personally and the property of the company, and the property of the company and property of the plaintiffs of the chose in action or which it was founded, so as to entitle any plaintiffs to sue thereon:—Held, also with be bound by the actual bargain between them, which was the acceptance of the company, and not of the defendant, the plaintiffs, and sound fide holders for value of a megotiable instrument, were entitled to look to the defendant, the only person libble upon it. Laing v. Taylor, 26 C. P. 416.

3. Executors and Administrators.

Authority, I — Plaintiffs sued defendant, who was an executor of E., as indorser of three notes payable to "the executors of the late E.," two being the late E.," and the third of the executors of the late E.," two being the late E.," and the third of the executors late E., ber pro B. B. held a power of attorney from the executors by which they as executirs and executors authorized him (among other things) for them as such executirs and executors authorized him (among other things) for them as such executirs and executors authorized him (among other things) for them as such executirs and executors to make and indorse all such promissory notes as might be requisite in the conduct and management of the estate. These notes, it appeared, were received by B. from the makers for debts due to the estate, and given by him, indorsed as above, to M., one of the executors, who was largely indebted to the estate, and was in difficulties. M. telling him that he wanted to get them discounted on his own account. They were so discounted by the plaintiffs, to whom M. owed a large sum, and who made no inquiries as to the extent of B.; a nuthority, or the circumstances under which M. obtained them. Defendant knew nothing of the matter until after the notes fell due. The court being left to draw inferences of fact, and the question being the personal liability of the defendant; — Held, 1. That the indorsements were sufficient in form; but, 2. that not being for the purposes of the estate they were not within the authority given to B., the extent of which it was the plaintiffs duty to ascertain; and a nonsuit was ordered. Gore Bank v. Crooks, 26 U. C. R. 251.

Collateral Attack. — It is no ground for impeaching the indorsement of an administrator, that the debtor at the time of the intestate's death resided out of the jurisdiction of the surrogate court, by which the letters of administration had been granted. Wright v. Meriam, 6 O. S. 463.

Foreign Grant.] — Where a note was made by defendant, a resident of Upper Canada, payable to P., who died in New York with the note in his possession:—Held, that his administrators appointed in that state might indorse the note so as to enable the indorses to sue upon it in this country, without their having administered here. Hard v. Palmer, 20 U. C. R. 208.

Promise to Pay.]—Where in an action on a note against defendant as administrator of the maker, who died before the note fell due, it was left to the jury to say on the whole evidence whether defendant at any time after the note was due, promised without condition, or only in reference to the assets of the estate, to pay the note; and the jury found for the defendant, the court refused to disturb such finding. Adams v. Capner, 6 C. P. 277.

Purchase of Goods.]—The defendants as executors purchased goods of the plaintiffs, and gave notes, "—months after date we, as executrix and executors of the late B. P., romise," &c., signed by defendants, "executrix and executors of B. P., deceased:"—Held, that they were nersonally responsible. Kerr v. Parsons, 11 C. P. 513.

4. Husband and Wife.

Attorney.]—Where by a document indorsed "procuration générale et spéciale." a wife being sole owner constituted her husband "son procureur général et spécial," to administer her affairs, specifying such acts as drawing bills of exchange and making promissory notes:—Held, that the wife's liability extended to all promissory notes granted by the husband, and was not limited by Article 181 of the Civil Code to such notes as were required for the purposes of the administration. Banque D'Hochelaga v. Jodoin, [1895] A. C. 612.

Authority.]—Power of husband to sign notes. Evidence of authority from wife. See Cooper v. Blacklock, 5 A. R. 535.

Husband's Liability on Wife's Indorsement.]—Semble, that a defendant's indorsement made by his wife, though in her own name, but afterwards recognized by defendant, would make him liable to an action on the bill. Ross v. Codd, 7 U. C. R. 64.

Husband's Liability on Note by Him to Wife. |—Declaration on a note made by defendant, payable to D. or order, and by D. indorsed to plaintiffs. Plea, that D. when the note was made was, and still is, defendant's wife. Replication, that defendant made the note with the intent that D. should indorse it away, and that she indorsed it to the plaintiffs by his authority:
—Held, had on demurrer. Mcleer v. Desnison, 18 U. C. R. 619.

5. Partners.

Admissions.]—In an action against a member of a joint stock company, his admissions that he was a partner are sufficient to prove his liability, without producing the partnership deed; and when a company is formed for purposes which do not render drawing and accepting of hills of exchange and notes necessary, it will be sufficient to establish the liability of a partner, on bilis and notes drawn or accepted in the name of the company by their secretary, that while he was a partner the secretary was in the habit of so drawing and accepting bills, which were afterwards paid with his concurrence and admission of liability. Lee v. McDonald, 6.0. 8, 130.

Company's Suppressed Notes.]—A potential results of which are suppressed by 7 Will. IV. c. 13, having retired their notes which were in circulation after the suppression, cannot put them into circulation again so as to bind the partnership. Hall v. Buck, T. T. 2 & 3 Vict.

Indorsement of Cheque — Acquiescence. — Power of partner to indorse cheque in absence of express authority — Estoppel by acquiescence in bank account. See Manitoba Mortsage Co. v. Bank of Montreal, 17 S. C. R. 632.

Judgment Against Firm—Lishiity of Reputed Partner—Agreement with Inderser.]——here promissory notes are signed by a person who holds himself out to the partners are person who holds himself out to the partners are person who holds himself out to the partners are person who holds himself out to be partners are person who holds himself out to be partners are person who holds himself out to be partners are proposed and as the partners are proposed and as a proposed and as the partners are proposed as a proposed and as a person who had a proposed as a proposed Limited Partnership.] — Quare, whether under a plea of non fecit to a note signed by the firm, defendant was entitled to shew a limited partnership; but where he was allowed to do so:—Held, that the plaintiff might, in answer, object to the description of the business; and, semble, that he might has object that the special partner had not paid in his share. Renedict v. Van Allen, 17 U. C. R. 234.

One Partner Making and Other Indersing.]—Where a non-negotiable promissor, note, siven for money lent to a firm, is made by one member thereof and indorsed by the other, the character in which the indorsement is made will be implied from the purposes for which the note is given, and the indorsement obtained, and the particular circumstances of the case, which were here held to make such indorser liable as guarantor. Methec with the CPR (19, 0, R. 603.

Use of Firm Name.]—E. was a member of the firm of S. C. & Co., and also a member of the firm of E. & Co., and in order to raise money for the use of E. & Co. he made a promisory note which he signed with the name of the other firm, and indorsing it in the name of E. & Co. had it discounted. The officers of E. & Co. had it discounted the note knew the handwriting of E., with whom the bank had had frequent dealings. In an action against the makers of the note C. pleaded that it was made by E. in fraud of his purtners, and the jury found that S. C. & Co. had not authorized the making of the note, but did not answer questions submitted as to the knowledge of the bank of want of authority:—Held, that the note was made by E. in fraud of his partners, and that the bank had sufficient knowledge that he was using his partners' names for his own purposes to put them on inquiry as to authority. Not having made such inquiry the bank could not recover against C. Urciphton v. Halifax Banking Co., 18 S. C. R. 140.

6. Miscellaneous.

Advance of Money—Privity.]—On the maturity of a bill of exchange the drawers thereof, thinking the acceptor would be unable to meet it, telegraphed him that if unable to pay it he should draw on them for the amount. The acceptor took the telegram to the manager of the plaintiff bank, who on the faith of it discounted a sight bill drawn by the acceptor on the drawers, with the proceeds of which he retired his acceptance which was held by another bank. The drawers refused to accept the bill so re-drawn:—Held, that the telegram having been sent for the purpose of inducing persons to advance money on it, and to take the bill so drawn in pursuance of it, a privity was created between the plaintiffs and the defendants, senders of the telegram, entitling the former to maintain an action against the latter for the money so advanced:—Held, also, that no time being mentioned in the telegram an authority to draw at sight would be implied. Bank of Montreal v. Thomas, 16 O. R. 503.

Bail.]—The bail of any one sued upon a bill or note, or any persons who pay it on account of any of the parties, become on payment holders; and they hold as upon a transfer from the person for whom they pay, not as from the person they have paid; and they stand with respect to other parties to the bill or note in the situation of the party for whom they pay; and, consequently, unless he could have sued upon the bill or note, they cannot. Hutchinson v. Munro, S. U. C. R. 103.

Buffalo, &c., R. W. Co.]—The Buffalo, Brantford, and Goderich R. W. Co. have no power under their charter or under the general Railway Act, to make notes. Topping v. Buffalo, Brantford, and Goderich R. W. Co., 6 C. P. 141.

Foreign Bank.]—A foreign corporation, to wit, a bank, cannot maintain an action upon notes discounted and received by them in the course of conducting banking business in this Province, although they may maintain an action for money had and received to their use against the party for whom such note was discounted, and to whom money was advanced upon it. Bank of Montreal v. Bethune, 4 O. S. 341.

Kingston Marine R. W. Co.]—Under 1 Vict. c. 30. the Kingston Marine R. W. Co. may give and receive notes in transacting their legitimate business. Kingston Marine R. W. Co. v. Gunn, 3 U. C. R. 368.

Municipal Corporation — Discount.]— Where a corporation having a debt to pay, which it was to their advantage to discharge immediately, raised money upon an accommodation note of an individual, and applied the money to the payment of the debt, promising to protect the note or to repay; relief was given in this court against the corporation upon a breach of the promise. And if the corporation could have been compelled to pay the debt, the person so giving his note will be entitled to stand in the place of the corporation. 2005 [161]

Mutual Insurance.]—Held, that a promissory note made in 1871, payable to the order of a mutual insurance company, or its officers, in respect of a policy, was negotiable. Gore District Mutual Ins. Co. v. Simon, 13 U. C. R. 556, commented upon. Mc4rthur v, Smith, 1 A. R. 276.

X. MISCELLANEOUS CASES.

Absconding Debtor. |—The payee of two notes for £25 each, having absconded, is not thereby disabled from suing the maker upon them on his return to the Province, because in his absence an attachment had been taken out against, him for £21, by a creditor. Stattery v. Turney, 7 U. C. R. 578.

Agent — Action for Money Received by Him on Note; —Plaintiff, as executor, sued to recover money received by defendant for his testator on a note payable to the testator. The maker swore that he had paid defendant, who handed him the note, which was still in his possession, though with the name torn off: —Held, not necessary to produce the note. Van Allan v. Frymere, 14 U. C. R. 579.

Agreement to Take Note—Tender.]—Where a plaintiff contracts to receive for work done at its completion, a certain sum of money, and then agrees to accept from the defendant the note of B. for the sum, he may sue for the money, if the note be not tendered at the time specified; a subsequent tender of the note refused, will be no defence to such action. Fisher v. Ferris, 6 U. C. R. 534.

Collateral Security—Conversion.]—Action for converting certain notes, with a special count, alleging in substance that defendants held the notes as collateral security for certain paper in their hands to which the plaintiff was a party, and after they had collected part of them, and the paper had been retired, they collected and applied to their own use the remaining notes, to which they had ceased to have any claim. Defendants pleaded, on equitable grounds, that after receiving the notes they were applied to by the plaintiff to accept in payment of a debt due by him to them, the note of one A. D., for $1,147, would indorse it: that J. D. would not indorse without security, and the plaintiff thereupor without security, and the notes in decrease of the notes collected on the note for $1,147; that J. D. to be a secure of the process of the notes collected and which defendants accepted in payment, and which defendants accepted in payment, and which was renewed from time to timely the process of the notes collected and the plaintiff thereupor and the plaintiff thereupor tion as remained, as they lawfully might, and were bound to do:—Held, on demurrer, that the plea was good, as shewing a legal defence. Maybee v. Bank of Toronto, 29 U. C. R. 566.

Collateral Security—Negligence in Collecting.]—Where promissory notes of third persons were transferred by the defendant atthem indorsement as collateral security for a debt due by him to the plaintiff, who now such the defendant for the amount of the debt and the defendant raised the objection that the plaintiff had been guilty of laches in proceeding for the payment of the collateral notes, and that he had not notified the defendant ant of their non-payment:—Held, that if the defendant had been injured by such laches or want of notice, and to the extent to which he had been injured, he should be exonerated from payment, but not otherwise; and that the trial Judge had pushed the law too far gainst the plaintiff in holding that having found the laches and want of notice as a matter of fact it was a conclusion of haw that detriment had followed to the defendant. Rgua v. McConnell, 18 O. R. 409.

Discount for Special Purpose.)—The plaintiffs drew upon J. a bill for £200, payable to their order, which they indorsed to the Gore Bank, by whom it was sent to the agent of defendants, the Bank of Upper Canada, for collection. When it fell due, J., with the agent's assent, drew upon the plaintiffs to meet it, but the proceeds of this draft, contrary to J.'s direction, were placed to his credit with defendants against order acceptances of his, and the plaintiffs paid both drafts.—Held, that they might recover the proceeds of the second bill from defendants as money had and received. Riddell v. Bank of I pur Canada, 18 U. C. R. 139.

Foreign Note.]—A note made and indorsed in a foreign country, is negotiable here, within the statute of Anne. Thompson v. Slam, M. T. 2 Vict.

Forged Note.]—A forged paper purporting to be a bank note is a note, and equally so, if there is no such bank as that named. Regina v. McDonald, 12 U. C. R. 542.

Guarantee.]—A guarantee indorsed on a bote at the time of its execution in the following words, "We guarantee the payment of the within note," does not shew a sufficient consideration for the promise, the case being within the Statute of Frauds. Lock v. Reid, 6.0.8, 295.

Guarantee.]—The defendant owing the plantiff delivered to him a note for $100, made by one John McGee, payable to defendant or bearer, on the back of which defendant sixed the following guarantee: 'In consideration of the sum of one hundred dollars, I guarantee the payment of the within note:' —Held, that the guarantee was sufficient within s. 4 of the Statute of Frauds; for although no promisee was named in it, set the reference to "the within note," made it a promise enuring to the benefit of the bearer:—Semble, that the guarantee created an absolute promise to pay at all events, and that defendant was not entitled to notice of dishnour; but there was no plea raising this quare, whether defendant could be treated as a joint maker. Palmer v. Baker, 23 C. P. 302.

Holder Taking up Note.]—Where a plaintiff takes up a note which defendant had given him, and which he was bound to pay at maturity, he may recover against the defendant as for momey paid. McNab v. Wagstaff, 5 U. C. R. 588.

Letter of Oredit — Negotiable Instrument.] —A bank cannot deal in such securities as a "letter of credit "signed by the Provincial Secretary of Quebec without the authority of an order in council, which is dependent on the vote of the Legislature, and therefore not a negotiable instrument within the Bills of Exchange Act of 1800 or the Bank Act, R. S. C. c. 120, ss. 45 and 60. Jacquez Cartier Bank v. The Queen, 25 S. C. R. S4.

Mental Incapacity.]—J., an infant, gave to M. a promissory note for the purchase money of a buggy, indorsed by his father, who was of unsound mind, and unable to understand what he was doing. The father received no consideration, and M. was not aware of his condition: — Held, that the father's estate was not liable. Re James, 9 P. R. 88.

Payment in "Good Notes."]—Payment in "good notes." does not necessarily mean "good negotiable notes." McArthur v. Winslove, 6 U. C. R. 144.

Purchase of Note—Agreement to Renew—Indersement.]—In a action on an agreement by which, in consideration of the plaintiff giving defendant his note for $438, payable four months after date, as the purchase money for a note for $730, made by T. & Son, having then ten months to run, payable to defendant's order—defendant agreed to keep the plaintiff's note renewed until the maturing of T. & Son's note; and at the maturity of T. & Son's note, "to procure the said T. & Son to renew their said $730 note, by giving their seven notes for equal amounts payable to my order, and payable in one, two, and three months," &c.:—Held, that the words "payable to my order," did not necessarily import an unconditional indorsement by defendant of the seven notes, but might mean only such an indorsement as would pass the property in them to the plaintiff; that evidence of conversations between the parties before making the agreement, and of the surrounding circumstances, was therefore admissible to shew its true meaning; and it appearing that the note for $730, also payable to defendant's order, was indorsed by defendant "without recourse," and that the plaintiff designedly left the agreement doubtful, so as to insist upon an unconditional indorsement as to the others:—Held, that he could claim only that these notes should be indorsed as the first one was. McCarthy, V. Vine, 22 C. P. 458.

Res Judicata.]—Declaration, that in consideration that the plaintiff, for the accommodation of the defendant, would sign a certain, note made by C., payable to the defendant, for £100, defendant promised to obtain and deliver to the plaintiff accounts due to C. by different persons to that amount, as security; that the plaintiff signed the note, but the defendant did not obtain the accounts; by reason whereof the plaintiff was obliged to pay the note, with interest, and the costs of a suit brought by the defendant thereon. Defendant pleaded, by way of estoppel, that in the suit by him on the note this plaintiff pleaded as a defence the same agreement now declared upon: that issue having been taken thereon the jury found that no such agreement was made, and that the judgment entered on that verdict still remained in force:—Held, on demurrer, a good defence. Campbell v. Holmes, 21 U. C. R. 465.

Sale of Land — Notes for Purchase Money.]—The vendor on the sale of land took notes for the purchase money, indorsed and sold some of them, and was liable on these in case of non-payment by the makers:—Held, that on the sale of the property these were entitled to priority of payment over the notes retained by the vendor. O'Donoghue v. Hembroff, 19 Gr. 95.

In such a case notes indorsed without recourse are payable pari passu with the retained notes, Ib.

Satisfaction of Indebtedness by Note—Pileading.] — Declaration, that on an accounting between them, defendant's indebtedness to plaintiff was fixed at a certain sum, to be paid off in a stipulated manner and at a stipulated imme one of which payments defendant undertook to make to A. & Co., to whom plaintiff was liable to that amount, it being also agreed that the plaintiff should towards that liability provide an additional sum by a day named, to be repaid by defendant to him; that it was further agreed that any manner of the state of the corrected, and plaintiff should give up to dedeendant linces and securities belonging to defendant linces and securities belonging to defendant and the securities before and at ke. Breach, that although a reasonable time and elapsed, &c., defendant had not paid A. & Co. Plea,—after alleging errors in the said accounting, specifying them; that after said accounting, and before action, plaintiff indorsed said notes to A. & Co. in settlement of their claim of which A. & Co. had given defendant notice:—Held, on demurrer, plea bad, as not shewing that the notes, which had been indorsed away, had been given for the cause of action stated in the declaration. Jones v. Cameron, 16 C. P. 271.

Telegraphing Acceptor to Draw Cross-bill—Advance by Bank on Faith of This.]—On the maturity of a bill of exchange the drawers thereof, thinking the acceptor would be unable to meet it, telegraphed him, that if unable to pay it he was to draw on them for the amount. The acceptor took the telegram to the manager of the plaintiff bank, who on the faith of it discounted a sight bill drawn by the acceptor on the drawers with the whole was held by another bank. The cross-sective of the drawers with which was held by another bank. The cross-refused to accept the bill so redrawn:—Held, that the telegram having been sent for the purpose of inducing persons to advance money on it, and to take the bill so drawn in pursuance of it, a privity was created between the plaintiffs and the defendants, senders of the telegram, entitling the former to maintain an action against the latter for the money so advanced:—Held, also, that no time being mentioned in the telegram an authority to draw at sight would be implied. Bank of Montreal v. Thomas, 16 O. R. 503.

I. APPLICATION OF THE ACTS.

Advances to Get Out Stone—Lieu.]—One R. agreed with defendants to quarry and get out for them a quantity of stone for works in progress. To carry out the agree with the control of the stone of the sto must be registered unless there is a sufficient change of possession. Carscallen v. Moodie, 15 f. C. R. 92; Maulson v. Joseph, S. C. P. 15 floward v. Mitchell, 10 U. C. R. 535, 11 f. C. R. 625; Harris v. Commercial Bank, 16 U. C. R. 437.

Assignment for Creditors.] - Assignments for the general benefit of creditors

Assignment for Creditors.]—Held, coverring Robertson v. Thomas, 8 O. R. 29, that assignments for the benefit of creditors were until 48 Vict. c. 26 (O.), within the Act relating to Chattel Mortgages and Bills of Sale, R. S. O. 1877 c. 119. Whiting v. Hocce, 13 A. R. 7.

signment for Creditors.]—An assignment of personal property in trust to sell the same and apply the proceeds to the payment of debts due certain named creditors of the assignor is a bill of sale within s. 4 of the Nova Scotia Bills of Sale Act, R. S. N. S. 5th ser. c. 92, it not being an assignment for the general benefit of creditors and so excepted from the operation of the Act by s. 10. Archibald v. Hubbey, 18 S. C. R. 116.

Assignment for Creditors.]—Though an assignment contains preferences in favour of certain creditors, yet if it includes, subject to such preferences, a trust in favour of all the assignor's creditors it is "an assignment for the general benefit of creditors" under s. 10 of the Nova Scotia Bills of Sale Act, R. S. N. S. c. 92, and does not require an affidavit of bona fides. Durkee v. Flint, 19 N. S. Rep. 487, approved and followed: Archibald v. Hubbey, 18 S. C. R. 110. distinguished.—A provision in an assignment for the security and indemnity of makers and indorsers of paper not due, for accommodation of the debtor, does not make it a chattel mortgage under s. 5 of the Act, the property not being redeemable and the assignor retaining no interest in it. Kirk v. Chelolon, 26 S. C. R. 1111.

Book Debts.]—K. having become security for repayment by H. of $600. an agreement in writing was entered into that in consideration thereof H. did assign to K. "all states of the state of the said stock, shall be made up of the book debts then on the books of H." This agreement was not registered. H. subsequently made an assignment for the benefit of his creditors to C., at which time only about $20 worth of the stock was the same as had been in the store at the time of the said agreement, and K.'s administratrix now more state of the stock was the same as had been in the store at the time of the said agreement, and K.'s administratrix now more state of the stock and book debts of H.. (C. as well as H. F. & Co., creditors of H. Wah lad excured the assignment to C., being made parties defendant with H.):—

The state of the stock and book debts were consequently as a state of the state of the Book Debts.]—Book debts are not within the Chattel Mortgage Act. R. S. O. 1887 c. 125, and amending Act. 55 Vict. c. 26, and a transfer of them does not require registration. Thibaudeau v. Paul., 26 O. R. 385.

Conditional Sale.)—On sale of goods upon credit to a trader, the purchaser covenanted by deed with one E. F., a clerk of the vendors, to buy all his goods from them, and that E. F. should be at liberty, at any time while such business was carried on, to enter into the place of business and take possession of the goods and premises, and wind up the affairs. The business was carried on for two years and a half, during which time the vendors delivered goods to a large amount under the agreement:—Held, that the covenant not to purchase elsewhere was not binding on the purchaser; but that as he had received goods under the agreement, there was a sufficient consideration for the covenant, so as to entitle the vendors to the remedies given by the deed; and that this was not such an agreement as required to be registered under the Chattel Mortgage Act, to enable the vendors to hold as against subsequent purchasers with notice. Fisken v. Rutherford, S Gr. 9.

Conditional Sale—After Acquired Property.]—J. R. by an instrument in writing, agreed to sell his business and stock-in-trade to his sons, and by it provided that all the existing stock was to remain his property until it was paid for; that all after-street the stock was to remain his property until it was paid for; that all after-street the stock was to remain the existing stock was come his property by way of security for the purchase money, and that on default he should have the right to re-enter and take possession. Some seven years afterwards, default having been made, he took possession and began selling off by auction. The sons then made an assignment for the benefit of creditors. In an action brought by the assignee and some creditors of the sons to restrain J. R. from selling, it was held, that the legal operation of the instrument of sale was to retain the property in the existing stock in the vendor, and to confer upon him an equitable title in the stock to be afterwards acquired, and to give him the right to take possession for default in payment. Default having been made, and possession taken before the rights of the assignee or of any execution creditor arose, that act clothed J. R. with the legal title in the after acquired goods, which was not affected by the assigned of any execution creditor arose, that act clothed J. R. with the legal title in the after acquired to be registered to make it operative, against subsequent creditors, the Bills of Sale and Chattel Mortgage Act, R. S. O. 1887 c. 125, not covering the case of agreements creating equitable interests in non-existing and future-acquired property. The effect of the transaction in this case and the advisability of making provision for giving publicity by registration commented on. Banks v. Robinson, 15 O. R. 618.

Crops.]—The mortgage covered growing crops:—Held, that such crops being incapable of delivery or change of possession without change of occupation of the land, the mortgage as to them was not within the Chattel Mortgage Act. Hamilton v. Harrison, 46 U. C. R. 127.

Crops.]—A mortgagor after default is, as far as crops growing upon the mortgaged land are concerned, in the position of a tenant at sufferance, and cannot by giving a chattel mortgage upon the crops confer a title thereto upon the chattel mortgage to the prejudice of the mortgagee of the land, or any one claiming under him, who has entered into possession of the land before the crop is harvested. Laing v. Ontario Loan and Savings Co., 46 U. C. R. 114, explained. Bloomfield v. Hellyer, 22 A. R. 282.

Crops.]—As to growing crops comprised in chattel mortgages. See, also, Laing v. Ondario Loan and Sarings Co., 46 U. C. R. 114: Grass v. Austin, 7 A. R. 511; Cameron v. Gibson, 17 O. R. 233.

Foreign Contract.]—Held, following Rycors Stave Co. v. Sill. 12 O. R. 557, that goods which were in Ontario at the time of the execution of a document of hypothecation of them were subject to the provisions of R. S. O. 1887 c. 125, although the parties thereto were at the time domiciled in a foreign country. Marthinson v. Patterson, 20 O. R. 720: 19 A. R. 188.

Future Liabilities.]—A mortgage under C. S. U. C. c. 45, s. 5, may be given as security against past or concurrent, but not against future, indorsements or liabilities. If it did not apply to past liabilities, then a mortgage to secure against them would not be avoided by the Act for want of compliance with its provisions. Mathers v. Lynch, 28 U. C. R. 354.

Goods in Bond.]—Where the goods forming the subject of a chattel mortgage are in bond, it is not necessary that the mortgage should be registered. May v. Security Loan and Savings Co., 45 U. C. R. 106.

Goods in Customs Warehouse.]—As to certain goods belonging to the assignor, but lying in the customs warehouse subject to duties, no change of possession having taken place, and no compliance being shewn with the formalities of the Customs Act, 10 & 11 Viet, c. 31:—Held, that such goods did not pass by the assignment. Per Robinson, C. J.—The statute requiring registration does not apply to such goods, as they are not capable of delivery, and they would therefore have passed if the directions of the Customs Act had been followed. Harris v. Commercial Bank, 16 U. C. R. 437.

Goods in Course of Manufacture.]—
On an interpleader to try the title to two locomotives, it appeared that when they were half finished, plaintiff verbally agreed to buy them from the manufacturer for a certain sum, for which he was to finish them:—Held, that the Chattel Mortgage Act did not apply, a change of possession being impossible under the circumstances. Burton v. Bellhouse, 20 U. C. R. 60

Indorsement.]—A mortgage to secure the mortgage against indorsement or contingent liabilities, unless there is a delivery and change of possession, must be registered; and the liability for which it is given must accrue due within one year from its date. Turner v. Mills, 11 C. P. 306.

Indorsement.]—A mortgage, given to secure the mortgagee against liability on notes to be indorsed by him, is valid at common law, and not being provided for by the Chattel Mortgage Act, C. S. U. C. c. 45, is excluded from its operation, and not avoided by it. Paterson v. Maughan, 39 U. C. R. 371.

Landlord and Tenant.]—The relation of landlord and tenant may be created by proper words between mortgagee and mortgagor for the bona fide purpose of further securing the debt without being either a fraud upon creditors or an evasion of the Chattel Mortgage Act. Trust and Loan Co. v. Laucrason, 6 A. R. 286; 10 S. C. R. 679.

Leaseholds.)—Held, that 32 Vict. c. 74, applies only to mortgages of movable goods, and that there was therefore no necessity to register a mortgage of a term for years. Frazer v. Lasier, 9 U. C. R. 679.

Mare Held by Joint Owners crease.]-A. having purchased from B. a half interest in a celebrated brood mare, paid in his purchase money $50 more than the half interest was worth, on the understanding that B, was to keep and take care of the mare for a year, when A. was to have her, and her expenses were thereafter to be shared equally between them. The bargain was, that they were to keep her for breeding purposes and share the profits equally. During the year, and while in B.'s possession, she was seized and sold by the sheriff under an execution against B., but notice of A.'s claim was given to the sheriff and publicly at the sale. sequently the mare had a colt which was in gremio at the time of the sale. In an action gremio at the time of the sale. In an action by A. against C., the purchaser at the sheriff's sale, in which C. contended that the Bills of Sale Act, R. S. O. 1877 c. 119, avoided the plaintif's title as against the execution, it was:—Held, that the Act was intended to apply to personal chattels susceptible of speci-fic ascortinators. fic ascertainment and of accurate description, and capable of being transferred and pos-sessed in specie, and did not apply to an in-divisible chattel like that in the present case; that A. and B. were tenants in common of the mare; that B.'s possession of the mare the mare; that B,'s possession of the mare was not his sole or exclusive possession, but the possession of both; that the sheriff's sale passed only B,'s interest in the mare, and C, by his purchase became a co-owner with A; and that the property in the colt followed that of its dam, and that A was an owner of an undivided moiety in both. Gunn v. Burgess, 5 O, R, 685.

Marriage Settlement.] — By an antenuptial settlement executed 25th March, 1885, made between J. C. of the first part. M. H. (the plaintiff) his intended wife of the second part, and one M. of the third part, in consideration of the intended marriage, certain lands and the goods in question consisting of horses, cows, and several articles of household furniture, described as being in end upon and around the premises and appurtenances used and occupied by the said J. M. and being city number, &c., were conveyed and assigned to M. to hold to the use of J. C. until the marriage, and thereafter to the use of the plaintiff, her heirs, executors, administrators, and assigns. The marriage took place on the 27th March. Within five days from the execution of the assignment it was duly registered in the proper office as a bill of sale. The athidavit of bona fides was made by the plaintiff after the marriage, she being described therein as the bargainee. The goods were afterwards seized by an execution creditor of the husband and the plain-tiff claimed them:-Held, that the plaintiff's beneficial interest in and possession of the property was sufficient to enable her to mainproperty was suncent to enable her to main-tain her claim in the issue. Schroder v. Harnott, 28 L. T. N. 8, 702, followed. (2) That the plaintiff was a person who, as bar-That the plainful was a person who, as our-gainee, might properly make the affidavit of bona fides. (3) That the goods were suffi-ciently described and identified:—Semble, that a marriage contract or settlement in the form of the instrument in question, was not a sale of personal property within the Act a safe of personal property within the Act and that registration therefore was not necessary. Per Patterson, J. A.—(1) That the transaction was within the statute; and (2) transaction was within the statute; and (2) that the legal title to the goods was in the plaintiff. Whiting v. Hovey, 12 A. R. 119, bominion Bank v. Davidson, 12 A. R. 90, referred to. Connell v. Hickock, 15 A. R.

Nova Scotia Act - Fixtures.] - The "fixtures" included in the meaning of the expression "personal chattels" by s. 10 of expression "personal chattels" by s. 10 of the Nora Sectia Bills of Sale Act, are only such articles as are not made a permanent portion of the land and may be passed from hand to hand without reference to or in any way affecting the land, and the "delivery" referred to in the same clause means only such delivery as can be made without a trespass or a tortious act .- An instrument conveying an interest in lands and also fixtures thereon does not require to be registered under the Nova Scotia Bills of Sale Act, R. S. N. S. 5 ser. c. 92, and there is now no distinction, in this respect, between fixtures covered by a licensee's or tenant's mortgage and those covered by a mortgage made by the owner of the fee. Warner v. Don, 26 S. C.

Policy of the Act.]—Remarks upon the policy of the Chattel Mortgage Act. See Barker v. Leeson, 1 O. R. 114.

Power of Attorney to Enforce Mortgages, |-A debtor had executed several chattel mortgages to secure indorsers of his paper, and afterwards a power of attorney to their appointee to sell and pay the mortgage debts: mortgage nor a sale, and that the instrument did not require registration. Patterson v. Kingsley, 25 Gr. 425.

Ship.]—Held, that the furniture, glass, crockery, table linen, beds, &c., on board a steamboat used for carrying passengers on Lake Ontario, passed under a mortgage of the vessel with all her apparel, furniture, &c., as part of the vessel; and that the mortgage, being of a registered vessel, was exempt from registry under the Chattel Mortgage Act. Patton v. Foy, 9 C. P. 512.

Timber -- Property not in Existence.]The plaintiff and W. made an agreement, by which plaintiff was to make advances to W. which plaintiff was to make advances to to enable him to draw out and to make and get to market a quantity of timber. It was agreed that the timber then made, and all thereafter made, should be delivered to the plaintiff as security, and in proof of such delivery should be marked as specified, and that it should be refuel to market valuer. We is it should be rafted to market under W.'s directions. The timber was seized by defendant as sheriff under an execution against and the plaintiff, claiming under this deed, replevied:—Held, that W. could not be looked upon merely as agent of the plaintiff, and the timber regarded as the plaintiff's from the first, for that would be inconsistent with the deed:—Held, also, that the statute requiring registration could apply only to that part of the timber in existence as timber, and owned by W. at the execution of the instrument, but that it clearly applied to that portion, and therefore for want of registration the deed must be held void altogether; but, at all deed must be held void altogether; but, at all events, it could have operated to pass only the timber made and capable of delivery at the time of its execution, and such as, being made afterwards, was delivered to the plain-tiff and marked for him. Short v. Ruttan, 12 U. C. R. 79. See, also, Ruttan v. Short, 12 U. C. R. 485.

- Property not in Existence.]-Timber -The plaintiffs held a mortgage from one C 700 pieces of timber, "together with w ever quantity of squared timber the party of the first part may manufacture dur-ing the remainder of the season." The tim-ber made after this mortgage was marked as it was got out, with the plaintiffs' mark, but remained in C.'s possession, and was seized by the defendant, an execution creditor:— Held, that the plaintiffs could not recover for it under their mortgage. Cummings v. Morgan, 12 U. C. R. 565.

Timber.]-Semble, that a sale of growing timber does not come within the operation of the Bills of Sale and Chattel Mortgage Act. Steinhoff v. McRae, 13 O. R. 546.

II. CHANGE OF POSSESSION.

Assignment for Creditors - Assignor Continuing to Sell. |—Where a debtor, just before several executions issued against his before several executions issued against his property, assigned it all to trustees for the benefit of his creditors, delivering to the agent of the trustees one article in the name of all, and then took down his name from over his shop door, but remained with his clerks in the possession of the goods, selling them as if his own, but accounting to the trustees for the proceeds; and the property was taken under the executions by the sheriff: —Held, in trespass by the trustees against the sheriff, the jury having negatived their possession, that a verdict for the defendant was correct. Armstrong v. Moodie, 6 O. S.

Assignment for Creditors-Assignor's Clerk in Possession.] — The plaintiffs, as-signces for the benefit of creditors, proved clearly a delivery of the goods; but it was shewn that they had employed the assignor's clerk as their agent to keep and sell the goods in the shop, and that he had in some in-stances, without their knowledge, permitted stances, without their knowledge, permitted the proceeds to be applied in payment of some small claims against the assignor, and once had paid money into the bank to the credit of the assignor, that he might draw a cheque for it immediately, to pay a privileged claim which they had instructed their agent to pay; but the teleprotes were their of the descripbut the plaintiffs knew nothing of the deposit in the bank, or of the drawing the cheque. It also appeared that their agent took no It also appeared that their agent took no steps to give public intimation of the change of possession, either directly or by removing the assignor's name as the party carrying on the business, though he made weekly returns of sales to the assignees; and this seemed to have been done at the solicitation of the assignor, who represented to him that he hoped to make arrangements again to resume the business. It appeared, too, that the fact of any change having been made was generally unknown in the neighbourhood:—Held, that upon this evidence it was properly left to the jury to say whether there was an actual and continued change of possession, and that they were warranted in finding that there was. Foster v. Smith, 13 U. C. R. 243.

Assignment for Creditors—Assignor's Carle in Possession.]—As to the goods in the warehouse of the assignor, C., who had been his clerk and book-keeper, was employed by the plaintiffs, assignees for the benefit of creditors, as their agent to dispose of the stock, and collect the debts due, &c.; and he took possession accordingly, opened new books in the name of the assignees, and sold and collected the assets under their instructions, but continued in the same place, the name of the assignor remaining above the door as usual:—Held, a sufficient change of possession within the meaning of the Act. Harris V. Commercial Bank, 15 U. C. R. 437.

Assignment for Creditors — Assignor in Control.—The assignor remained in his store after the assignment, having the same clerk, and his sign remained over the door, nor were any goods removed. There was no evidence of change of possession that could be apparent to others than parties concerned, and the bill of sale was not filed:—Held, not sufficient change of possession. McLeod v. Humilton, 15 U. C. R. 111.

Assignment for Creditors — Assignor Continuing on the Premises,]—In considering whether a sufficient change of possession has taken place to satisfy the statute, regard must be had to the nature and purposes of the assignment, and the circumstances of the case; and when made by a merchant for the benefit of his creditors, it is not to be expected that the assignees should remove the goods or take exclusive possession, as in the case of an ordinary sale. The assignor may continue upon the premises, and assist in disposing of the goods, without vitiating the assignment in law, but it is a fact for the jury as evidence to shew that the transfer was colourable:—Held, that here the jury was warranted in finding a sufficient change. Maulson v. Commercial Bank, 17 U. C. R. 30.

Attempt to Take Possession.] — The defendants esized goods in the possession of McL. under an execution against him; and the plaintifs, the Bank of M., claimed the goods as assignees under an unregistered bill of sale given by McL. to one F., as collateral security for indebtedness. There was no change of possession. Afterwards McL. agreed with the bank to hold the goods as tenant at will at a rental, and subsequently the bank made an ineffectual attempt to take possession:—Held, that the attempt to take possession of the goods was not sufficient to satisfy R. S. O. 1877, c. 119, and that the defendant was therefore entitled to succeed. Parkes v. St. George, 10 A. R. 496, distinguished. McKellar v. McGibbon, 12 A. R. 221.

Consignment to Auctioneer—Orders to Pay Proceeds.]—B., a dry goods dealer in Ottawa, consigned his stock-in-trade to S. S. & Co., auctioneers in Toronto, for sale, the proceeds to be applied (1st) in payment of $800 advanced to B, by S, S, & Co., and (2nd) in payment of $250 advanced by McM, & Co. After the goods had reached the warehouse of S, S, & Co., B, gave other orders on the proceeds, which they accepted conditionally. After the sale had been advertised, but before the time appointed for selling, the sheriff levied on the goods under an execution sued out by the defendants, who, on ascertaining the nature and amount of S, S, & Co.'s claim, paid the same to them, and the sale by arrangement was allowed to proceed, the amount realized therefrom being paid into the hands of the sheriff to hold the same until the rights of all parties were ascertained. The sheriff thereupon caused the several claimants to interplead:—Held, affirming 31 C, P, 320, that the several orders on S, S, & Co. operated as equitable assignments of the goods or their proceeds; that the consignment to S, S, & Co. was as complete and continuous a change of possession as under the circumstances it was possible to effect, and therefore no necessity existed under the Chattel Mortgage Act for registering the orders, if that could be done; and that the defendants having by their payment to S, S, & Co. been subrogated to their rights, were entitled in priority to all the other claimants to rank upon the proceeds for the sum so advanced. McMaster v. Garland, S A, R, 1, Evidence.]—Held, that the change of possession in this case was sufficient, and being complete before the defendants' fi. fa. was placed in the sheriff's hands, the plaintiffs were entitled to recover. Taylor v. Commercial Bank, 4 C. P. 447.

Evidence.]—Held, under the facts of this case, that if the mortgage had come within the Act it would have been void, not having been kept in force by registration or accompanied by change of possession. Frazer v. Lazier, 9 U. C. R. 679.

Evidence.]—The evidence, as stated in this case, was held not sufficient to shew an actual and continued change of possession. Heveard v. Mitchell, 10 U. C. R. 535.

Evidence.]—Held, that the facts, stated in this case, did not shew a sufficient change of possession to dispense with filing. Wilson v. Kerr, 17 U. C. R. 168.

Evidence.]—Held, under the facts stated in this case, that there was no sufficient change of possession to dispense with registration. Ontario Bank v. Wilcox, 43 U. C. R. 460.

Evidence.]—Held, reversing 9 O. R. 314, that in this case there had been such an actual and continued change of possession as to defeat the executions against the company. Parkes v. St. George, IO A. R. 496, and Scribner v. Kinloch, 12 A. R. 367, followed. Whitning v. Horey, 13 A. R. 7. See S. C., subnom. Horey v. Whiting, 14 S. C. R. 515.

Gift.]—It was alleged that the plaintiff, who was living with his mother, gave the horses in question to her for his board, but no price was fixed for them, and they were kept at the house and used by the plaintiff as before:—Held, that there was no sufficient change of possession to dispense with a registered bill of sale, and the sale was void as against the assignee in insolvency of the plaintiff. Snarr v. Smith, 45 U. C. R. 156.

Goods in Possession of Third Person.]—One Robins agreed to make for Ruthren, the execution debtor, an iron fence for which Ruthren furnished him with the iron, and paid a certain sum on account of the work. Being unable to pay the balance, G. advanced the money, taking Ruthren's note, and the fence, which was then in Robins' yard, was delivered by Ruthren to him to hold for G. until payment of the note, but there was no written agreement. When the note fell due Ruthren authorized G. to sell the fence, but it remained until it was seized under an execution against Ruthren:—Held, that the execution could not prevail against G.'s claim. Gurney v. James, 19 U. C. R.

Goods in Vendor's Hands More Than Reasonable Time.]—Plaintiff, on the 31st May. 1841, purchased and paid for a carriage from F., a carriage maker, for $175, but did not remove it from the shop. Shortly after the plaintiff's wife saw another carriage which she preferred, and it was agreed that the plaintiff should have it if he chose, for an additional sum, the one first purchased to be his if he did not take the other. At the time of the sale the defendant, as sheriff, held an execution against F., of which F. had notice, and he received another after the sale. F. carried on business as usual, with defendants consent, and the defendant did not seize till the 11th June:—Held, that the plaintiff, having left the carriage in the vendor's hands more than a reasonable time for its removal, the sale came within the Act, C. S. U. C. 45, and there being no delivery and change of possession, nor any bill of sale filed, the property remained in F.'s hands liable to seizure. Carruthers v. Reynolds, 12 C. P. 596.

Goods not Mentioned in Mortgage,]—Some goods not mentioned in the schedules were delivered by one of the mortgagors to the plaintiff's agent, on the 4th May, 1863; the sheriff received the execution on the 27th:—Held, that such delivery was good against the sheriff. Milds v. King, 1 C. P. 223.

Grain in Possession of Warehouse-man. |—The defendants, warehousemen, holding certain grain for one M., gave him a warehouse receipt, which on the 3rd September he indorsed to the plaintiff, who had purchased the grain either from or through him. On the 5th September, the sheriff received a fi. a. against M., under which he seized, and M. having on the 22nd made a voluntary assignment in insolvency, the sheriff gave an order for the grain to the assignee. The plaintiff brought detinue and trover against defendants, who had shipped a portion of the grain to him on the 23rd October, but revained the rest:—Held, that he was entitled to recover; that the grain passed to the plaintiff by the sale; and there was a sufficient change of possession, and the only one that the nature of the case permitted, in the fact that upon and after the sale the defendants beld the grain for the plaintiff, instead of for M., who was not himself in actual possession when he sold. Richardson v. Gray, 29 U. C. R. 300.

Land and Chattels.]-Where the land and buildings on which the chattels are, are conveyed by the same deed as the chattels, the assignee, though held to be in possession of the land by virtue of his deed, is not to be looked upon as having taken possession of the chattels also, so as to dispense with filing the assignment; he must either actually take possession of the buildings, or the assignor must chattels also, so as to dispense with filing the assignment; he must either actually take possession of the buildings, or the assignor must go out. Carscaller v. Moodie, 15 U. C. R. 92.

C. owning a mill, with the machinery in it, assigned the whole property, both real and personal, including the lumber, stock-in-trade, &c., on the premises, to the plaintiff, in trust for himself and other creditors. The deed was registered on the day of execution, but not filed in the county court, when, on the day after the execution, the sheriff seized the machinery, &c., under a fi. fa. against goods; nor was the deed afterwards filed. The assignor did not leave the mill, but continued to work it with his men for the benefit of the assignee:—Held. 1. That there was not an actual and continued change of possession; and, 2. that for want of filing the assignment the fi. fa. must prevail. 1b.

Lease.]—Oral lease of farm and chattels —Delivery and change of possession. See Oliver v. Newhouse, 32 C. P. 90, 8 A. R. 122.

Marking Sheep.]—Plaintiff bought from R. a number of sheep, paying him part of the price at the time and the balance within a few days. Upon the first payment being made plaintiff marked the sheep with red paint as his property, and they were then placed apart from the latter's farm, where they were to remain until required by plaintiff. Plaintiff was a butcher, and it appeared to be the custom among butchers to leave with farmers stock purchased from them until convenient to remove it. This had also been the course of dealing between plaintiff and R. on previous occasions. The sheep thus remained on R.'s premises until seized under an attachment against R., as an absconding debtor:—Held, that the mere marking of the sheep, or the removal of them from one field of the seller to another, did not constitute a sufficient delivery or change of possession:—Held, also, that there was no evidence of a sufficiently established custom or mode of dealing among farmers of treating as their own, property really belonging to others, to put third parties upon inquiry as to the actual ownership. Quere, whether such inquiry would be admissible in a case arising under the statute in question. Doyle v. Lasher, 16 C. P. 203.

Material in Hands of Workmen.]—M., a ship builder, carried on his business in a yard leased from A. The plaintiff sent two vessels there to be repaired, but M. not having sufficient means, it was agreed that the plaintiff should furnish the materials, and he purchased from M. for the purpose, some oak timber then in the yard. The plaintiff's foreman took possession of it, and a portion had been worked up by the plaintiff's and M.'s men, when A. distrained both it and the vessels for rent:—Held, there had been a sufficient change of possession of the timber to dispense with a registered assignment, and that both it and the vessels were exempt from distress. Gildersleeve v. Ault, 16 U. C. R. 401.

Partial Change.]—Held, that although the deed in this case, for want of registration could have no effect with respect to the furniture, of which there had been no sufficient change of possession, yet that it was not thereby avoided as to those goods which went into and remained in possession of the assignees. Taylor v. Whittemore, 10 U. C. R. 440

Partial Change.]—An interpleader issue is to be taken distributively, and an assignee should succeed as to any part of the goods of which there has been a change of possession, though as to the rest the assignment may be void for want of registration. Fechan v. Bank of Toronto, 10 C. P. 32.

Partial Change.] — Quere, whether, when as to part only of the goods assigned there had been no change of possession, the assignment, unless filed, is void altogether. Olmstead v. Smith, 15 U. C. R. 421.

Possession to Trustee or Ballee—lucreasing Claim.]—Where possession is changed it need not be given personally to the creditor, purchaser, or mortgagee; it may equally be given to a trustee or ballee for him; and the debtor may increase the claim of such ballee, or may charge the goods with further sums in favour of other persons. McMaster v. Garland, 31 C. P. 320. See 8. C., S. A. R. I.

Purchaser from Mortgagee.]—Semble, that a purchaser from a mortgage under the power of sale contained in a mortgage, leaving the mortgage in possession, is protected so long as the mortgage under which he bought has the protection given it by registration; but when the term of the mortgage expires the purchaser is no longer protected, unless he takes actual possession, or procures and registers a bill of sale from the mortgage. Carlisle v. Tait, 32 C. P. 43.

Question of Fact.]—It is not a question of law, but for the decision of a jury, under all the circumstances, whether there has been an immediate and continued change of possession sufficient to satisfy the statute. Waldev. Grange, 8 C. P. 431.

Registration.]—Of the household furniture there had been no change of possession, and the court being left to draw the same inferences as a jury would:—Held, per Robinston, C. J., that notwithstanding the registration of the assignment, such furniture did not pass.—Per Burns, J., that it did not pass, because the assignment was not properly registered by filing a copy only. Harris v. Commercial Bank, 16 U. C. R. 437.

Timber.]—To make valid against creditors of the vendor a sale of timber to be cut down by him, there must be an actual delivery to the purchaser, after the timber is cut down, followed by an actual and continued change of possession, as in the case of other chattels. McMillan v. McSherry, 15 Gr. 133.

Transfer from Husband to Wife.]—A sale of chattels, consisting of household furniture in their residence, between a married woman and her husband, living and continuing to live together, without a duly registered bill of sale, is void as against creditors, for in such a case there cannot be said to be an actual and continued change of possession open and reasonably sufficient to afford public notice thereof as required by the Bills of Sale Act. Hogodboom v. Graydon, 25 O. R. 298.

Vacant Building—Key,1—Where goods in a shop or other unoccupied building under lock and key, are sold by the owner, and the key delivered to the purchaser, who goes to the place and examines and checks over the goods, and then locks up the place again:— Held, that this constitutes an actual and continued change of possession, so as to satisfy the statute, and the purchaser need not either personally or by some one for him remain in possession or remove the goods. McMartin v. Moore, 27 C. P. 337.

Vendor Acting as Purchaser's Clerk.]

—The purchaser of the stock of a trader, where the change of ownership is open and notorious, may employ the former owner as a clerk in carrying on the business, and not-withstanding such hiring there may still be "an actual and continued change of possession," as required by R. S. O. 1877 c. 119, s. 5 Ontario Bank v. Wilcox, 43 U. C. R. 460, distinguished. Kinloch v. Seribner, 44 S. C. R. 77; 8. C., sub nom. Scribner v. MeLaren, 2 O. R. 265; 8. C., sub nom. Scribner v. Kinloch, 12 A. R. 367.

III. CONSIDERATION AND BONA FIDES.

Bill of Sale Really a Mortgage,]—
The facts that a bill of sale, on the face of it absolute, is in truth only a mortgage, and that the vendor after the sale is allowed to remain in possession of the goods, are badges of fraud to be weighed by a jury, not conclusive proofs of fraud. Hunter v. Corbett, 7 U. C. R. 75.

Debt Disproportionate to Property.]—Where a debtor mortgaged all his personal property, including the most trifling articles, to secure a debt very small in proportion to their value:—Held, that although no evidence of value was given, and the bonn fides of the debt was not disputed, it should have been left to the jury to say whether these circumstances were not sufficient to shew that the deed was made, not for the security of the assets of the debtor, and to shield his property from other creditors, Helming v. McNaughten, 16 U. C. E. 194.

Discount of Draft.]—Part of the consideration of the mortgage was covered by a draft drawn by the mortgage, a merchant, in the course of business, on the mortgagor, a customer, and discounted at a bank:—Held, that the mere fact of the draft having been discounted at the bank would not justify the court in assuming that the debt represented by the draft was paid, and that the remedy on the draft was to be alone looked to; and therefore that the amount of the indebtedness in the mortgage could not be said to be untruly stated. Meriden Silver Plating Co. v. Lee. 2 O. R. 451, commented on Mepburn v. Park. 6 O. R. 472. Followed in Hyman v. Cuthbertson, 10 O. R. 443.

Erroneous Statement of Consideration.)—The consideration in the mortgage was stated as $1,148; but it appeared in evidence that the amount actually owing was only $1,030.90:—Held, that the erroneous statement of the consideration did not avoid the mortgage as a matter of law, but was a circumstance for the jury to consider when deciding the issue of fraud or no fraud. Hamilton v. Harrison, 46 U. C. R. 127.

Erroneous Statement of Consideration.]—Held, that the fact that as to part of the consideration for their mortgage the defendants had not made an actual advance, but were merely liable on promissory more did not invalidate the mortgage, I. S. O. 1877 c. 119, not requiring, as does the corresponding English Act, that the consideration should be truly expressed. Tidey v. Craib, 4 O. R.

Erroneous Statement of Consideration. — A misstatement of the consideration in a chattel mortgage is not, in the absence of bad faith, ipso facto a fatal defect. It is merely an element to be considered in dealing with the question of bona fides. Hamilton v, Harrison, 46 U. C. R. 127, and Jaffray v, Robinson, C. A., 16th September, 1878,
(not reported), considered. Marthinson v.
Patterson, 19 A. R. 188.

Erroneous Statement of Consideration *treditor.]—Held, following Parkes v. St. George, 10 A. R. 496, that the plaintiffs not being execution creditors, could not maintain an action to set aside a chattel mortgage on the ground that the debt was incorrectly stated therein. Hyman v. Cuthbertson, 10 O. R. 443.

Evidence, |-- Interpleader to try the right of plaintiff to goods scized under an execution against one Lafter at defendant's suit. A verdict was given for plaintiff for the part of the goods contained in a mortgage to one Lawrence. The judgment debtor nortagaged certain goods to Lawrence, under a power of sale in which mortgage the goods were sold to F., as agent for plaintiff and defendant. It was held, upon the facts and was not sustained, there being reason to interest in the goods to Lafter; and a new trial was granted on payment of costs. May v. Routedge, 14 C. P. 534.

Fixed Sum and Upwards.]—The consideration in the mortgage being stated at £10,000 and upwards:—Held, good, the amount being certain as to £10,000, and it not being shewn that there were more goods than would satisfy that amount. Metee v. Smith, 9 C. P. S9.

Fraud — Possession—Onus.] — The due registration of a bill of sale prevents the inference of fraud being drawn from the retention of possession of the goods by the bargainor. Cookson v. Swire, 9 App. Cas., at pp. 64-5, specially referred to. Belanger v. Menard. 27 O. R. 209.

Implied Agreement to Retain Furniture. —In an interpleader issue, the court being left to draw the same inferences as a jury:—Held, that it was fraudulent for the assignor to assign on the understanding that he should be allowed to keep possession of his household furniture. Wilson v. Kerr, 17 U. C. R. 198; 18 U. C. R. 470.

Jury's Finding.]—The plaintiff claimed goals under a mortgage duly filed. The main question was the consideration for such mortgage. The plaintiff proved that it arose mainly for goods left in the mortgagor's possession by the plaintiff's grandfather. The jury laving found for the plaintiff, the court refused to interfere. Harrington v. Marsh. S. C. P. 227.

Mortgagor Selling.]—By the mortgage the mortgagor was to continue in possession, selling the goods, and accounting to the mortgage for the proceeds on demand:—Held, not to invalidate the mortgage, or afford per se any evidence of fraud. Ross v. Conger, 14 U. C. R. 525.

Nominal Consideration — Contemporaneous Unregistered Trust.]—A bill of sale (registered) for the consideration of 5s., with a separate declaration of trust referred to and forming part of the instrument (not registered) is invalid; the conveyance registered must shew the true and full consideration for which it is given. Arnold v. Robertson, 8 C. P. 147. Followed in Fraser v. Gladstone, 11 C. P. 125.

Note for Part of Consideration.]—A mortgage was given for $1,070. It afterwards appeared that the amount was made up in part of a note made and given by the mortgage to the mortgage, and not paid for some months afterwards:—Held, that in the absence of fraud the mortgage was valid. Walker v. Niles, 18 Gr. 210.

Oral Agreement.]—Under 20 Vict. c. 3, a mortgage cannot be supported which is given in great part for a debt not existing, but for advances which the mortgagee has merely promised verbally to make, and had not made when the mortgage was executed or the affidavit for registry made. Robinson v. Paterson, 18 U. C. R. 55.

Partnership Effects to be First Sold.]

—A provision that the household furniture of one partner is not to be sold for the purposes of the deed until the partnership effects are exhausted, is in law no badge of fraud. McGee v. Smith, 9 C. P. S0.

Pleading—Mortgage to Secure Sum to be Ascertained—Refusal to Ascertain Amount— Damages.]—See Garland v. McDonald, 41 U. C. R. 573.

Present Debt Payable in Future.]—
The mortgage shewed the debt in the proviso as only becoming due and payable at a future day, but the consideration was stated to be money acknowledged to be paid for the transfer of the property, and the evidence shewed it was given to secure an overdue debt:—
Held, that the mortgage could be upheld, regarding it as given for a present debt to be paid at a future day. Farlinger v. McDonald, 45 U. C. R. 233.

Presumption of Consideration.]—In an action against the sheriff for goods seized, the plaintiffs claimed under a mortgage of the 12th November, 1837, and defendant under an execution of the 18th. The time for payment had not arrived, but the mortgage provided that if the mortgage might take possession; and the plaintiffs, who were in possession at the seizure, claimed to have taken the goods under this condition, though the breach of it and the plaintiffs' entry therefor were not proved:—Held, that the plaintiffs need not proved the consideration for their mortgage in the first instance, but that it must be presumed until impeached. Squair v. Fortune, 18 U. C. R. 547.

Separate Debts — Joint Mortgagees.] — Where a bill of sale was made to two jointly, and filed on an affidative of bona fides by one, but the evidence shewed that the consideration was made up of two debts, due to the vendees separately: — Held, sufficient. McLeod v. Fortune, 19 U. C. R. 100.

Separate Debts-Joint Mortgagees.]-F. owed the plaintiff and M. $200 and $100 respectively for goods supplied by them, and had given a chattel mortgage on his property to Flint for $600. Being pressed by Flint, he applied to the plaintiff and M. for the money, offering them a chattel mortgage theremoney, offering them a chattel mortgage there-for as well as for what he already owed them, which they agreed to but not having the money at the time they borrowed it from J., giving him their note indorsed by F., and Flint was paid off and his mortgage dis-charged. F. gave to the plaintiff and M. the contexts it muestion which was in the usual mortgage in question, which was in the usual form, the expressed consideration being $900. The affidavit of bona fides was made by the plaintiff alone, and stated that the mortgagor was justly and truly indebted to him and M. e mortgagees therein named in the sum of $900 mentioned therein, &c.: and on the renewal of the mortgage the affidavit was made by plaintiff in like manner. The plaintiff and M. were not connected in business. The note was renewed several times, F. being a party to only one of the renewals. Some months after the mortgage was given the plaintiff and M., to protect themselves, bought in the goods at a bailiff's sale for rent and taxes, and they were subsequently seized on an execution at the defendant's suit, when the plaintiff and M. claimed, and an interpleader was directed :-Held, that the mortgage was valid: that the evidence, more fully set out in the report, shewed that it was given for a present advance by the mortgagees, and not merely as security for a liability incurred as accommodation makers of the note, so as to bring the transaction within s. 6 of the Chattel Mortgage Act :- Held, also, that the fact of part of the consideration of the mortgage consisting of separate debts to the plaintiff and M. did not prevent the plaintiff mak-ing the affidavit of bona fides, the first sec-tion of the Act not being limited to cases of joint mortgagess connected in business, &c.:—Held, also, that the plaintiff and M. acquired a good title as purchasers at the bailiff's sale, and that such sale was not within the Act so as to require the registration of in the Act so as to require the registration of a bill of sale, or an actual and continued change of possession; but, semble, that the plaintiff and M. could also rely on the mort-eage:—Held, therefore, that the plaintiff and M. were entitled to recover. Severn v. Clarke, 30 C. P. 363, and Corby v. Clarke, ib. 368.

Separate Debts — Mortgage to One — Effect of Taking Possession.] — A chattel mortgage made by D. to McL. was given to secure a sum made up of debts due to McL. and two other persons: McL. made the usual affidavit of bona fides, asserting that the whole sum was due him; no trust of any kind appeared upon the mortgage, though the intention was that McL. should hold it as trustee for the other two. The mortgage was filed within the proper time after its execution. McL. assigned the mortgage to the plaintiffs, who afterwards obtained judgment against D. and under the execution the sheriff seized the property covered by the mortgage. After this seizure the plaintiffs in structed the sheriff to withdraw, and then took and held possession of the property under the mortgage. The defendants placed writs of execution against the goods of D. in the hands of the sheriff after the plaintiffs had taken possession under their mortgage. D. was solvent when he gave the chattel mortgage, but insolvent when the plaintiffs took possession:—Held, that the fact that no trust was declared on the face of the mortgage was nothing more than an informality, and was cured by the taking possession before the rights of creditors had attached on the chattels; and neither the insolvency of the mortgagor at the time of taking possession, nor the fact of the seizure under execution before taking possession, affected the position of the plaintiffs:—Held, also, that the taking possession could not be viewed as a preference within 48 Vict. c. 26, s. 2. Bank of Hamilton v. Tamblyn, 16 O. R. 247.

Unstamped Notes.]—See Ontario Bank v. Wilcox, 43 U. C. R. 460.

IV. FORM AND CONSTRUCTION.

1. In General.

Clerical Error.]—Party of "first" part, instead of "second" part in the assignment:—Held, immaterial. Taylor v. Commercial Bank, 4 C. P. 447.

Date of Actual Execution.]—The date in a bill of sale is immaterial if it is registered after its actual execution within the time required by R. S. O. 1897 c. 148, the Bills of Sale and Chattel Mortgage Act. On a bonâ fide sale of goods, it is not necessary that the bill of sale shall be completed by execution of the instrument in any particular time after the actual sale. McDonald v. Gaunt, 30 O. R. 308.

Seal.]—A chattel mortgage need not be under seal. Paterson v. Maughan, 39 U. C. R. 371.

See also, Halpenny v. Pennock, 33 U. C. R. 229.

Time for Payment.] — Where the payments to be made on a chattel mortgage extend over a year from its date, it is void as contrary to the policy of the Act respecting chattel mortgages. O'Neill v. Small, 15 C. L. J. 114. See next case.

Time for Payment.]—Where a chattel mortgage is taken to secure a debt, the time for payment may be extended beyond a year. Kerry v. James, 21 A. R. 338.

2. Affidavit of Bona Fides.

Adherence to Statutory Form.]—The omission of the date and the words "before me" from the jurat of an affidavit accompanying a bill of sale under s. 4 of the Nova Scotia Act makes such affidavit void and the defect cannot be supplied by parol evidence in proceedings by a creditor of the assignor against the mortraged goods. Archibald v. Hubley, 18 S. C. R. 116.

Adherence to Statutory Form.] — Where an affidavit of bona fides to a bill of sale states that the sale was not made for the purpose of holding or enabling the bargainee to hold the goods mentioned therein against the creditors of the bargainor, while the form given in the statute uses the words "against any creditors of the bargainor," such violation does not avoid the bill of sale as against execution creditors, the two expressions being substantially the same. The statute requires the adidavit to be made by a witness to the execution of the bill of sale, but as attestation is not essential to the validity of the instrument its execution can be proved by any competent witness. Emerson v. Bannerman, 19 s. C. R. J.

Adherence to Statutory Form. |—Ry I. N. S. 5th ser, c. 12, s. 4, every chattle norrange must be accompanied by an affidavit of boun fides, "as nearly as may be." in the form given in a schedule to the Act. The form of the jurat to such affidavit in the form given in a schedule to the Act. The form of the jurat to such affidavit in the form of the jurat to such affidavit in the form of the jurat to such affidavit was "sworn to at Middleton this 6th day of July, A. D. 180], "&c., without naming the country, the mortgage was void, notwithstanding the affidavit was headed "in the county of Annapolis." Archibald v. Hubbey, 18 S. C. R. 116, followed: Smith v. McLean, 21 S. C. R. 355, distinguished. Morse v. Phinney, 22 S. C. R. 555, distinguished. Morse v. Phinney, 22 S. C. R. 565, 563.

Adherence to Statutory Form.]—The Bills of Sale Act, Nova Scotia, R. S. N. S. Softh ser. c. 92. by s. 4 requires a mortgage sheat to secure an existing indebtedness to be accumulated by an affidavit in the form prescribed in a schedule to the Act, and by s. The secure of the secure and selection of the secure and selection and the secure of the secur

Affidavit Sworn Before Execution.]

Where the affidavit of bona fides to a chattel mortange was sworn to before the execution of the mortgage, the mortgage was held invalid. Reid v. Gowans, Court of Appeal, 15th October, 1885, (not reported), followed. Building and Loan Association v. Betzner, 10 C. L. T. Occ. N. 112.

Agent.]—13 & 14 Vict. c. 62, requires that the mortgagee binaself shall make the affidavit; therefore a mortgage filed upon an affidavit of his agent was held void. Holmes v. Vancamp, 10 U. C. R. 510.

Agent.]—Held, reversing 32 C. P. 43, that it need not appear in the affidavit, or the mortgage, or the papers filed therewith, that the agent of the mortgage, making the affidavit was aware of the circumstances connected with such mortgage. Carlisle v. Tait, 7 A. R. 10ch

Clerical Error—Incomplete Affidavit.]—
The affidavit of bom fides in a chattel mortgage taken to secure the mortragee against his inforsement of two promissory notes, which were referred to in a rectial, stated that the mortrage "was executed in good faith and for the express purpose of securing me, the said mortragage therein named, against his indorsement of a certain promissory note for (sic) or any renewal of the said recited promissory notes;"—Held, that "his indorsement" might be read "my indorsement," as this was clearly a clerical error, but that even with this correction, the clause remained vague and incomplete, and that the affidavit was therefore fatally defective. Boldrick v.
Ryan, 17 A. R. 255.

Commissioner—Draftsman of the Instrument.]—A person who prepared the assignment may take an affidavit as commissioner. Noell v. Pell, 7 L. J. 322.

Commissioner's Addition Omitted.]—
The affidavit of bona fides in a chattel mortgage purported to be sworn before "T. B. F.".
B. F. T. B. T

Commissioner's Addition — Solicitor's Power to Take 'Afidavit.]—An affidavit of bona fides in a chattel mortgage sworn before a person who is in fact a commissioner authorized to take affidavits in and for the high court, but we fidavits in and for the high court, but when the second the property of t

Commissioner's Signature Omitted.]

—Where the signature of the commissioner to the affidavit of bona fides to a chattel mortgage was omitted through inadvertence, the instrument was held invalid as against a subsequent execution creditor, although it was satisfactorily proved that the oath was in fact administered. Nisbet v. Cork, 4 A. R. 200.

Company—President.]—The president or of the principal officer of a corporation taking a mortgage for and in the name of the corporation does not act as its agent, but as principal in the exercise of its corporate powers; and may therefore make the affidavit of bona fides under C. S. U. C. c. 45, without authority in writing. Bank of Toronto v. McDougall, 15 C. P. 475.

Company — Manager.] — The affidavit of bona fides of a chattel mortgage was made by the manager of a loan society, no written authority to him being filed with the mortgage, nor any statement contained in the affidavit as to his knowledge of the circumstances:—Held, insufficient. Bank of Toronto v. McDougall, 15 C. P. 475, distinguished. Freehold Loan and Savings Co. v. Bank of Commerce, 44 U. C. R. 284.

Company—Officer — Agent — Authority.]
—Where the affidavit of bona fides of a chattel mortgage to an incorporated trading company was made by the secretary-treasurer, who was also a shareholder in the company and had an important share in the management of its affairs, there being, however, a president and vice-president:—Held, that the affiant was to be regarded not as one of the mortgagees, but as an agent, and, as no written authority to him was registered, as required by R. S. O. 1887, c. 125, s. 1, the mortgage was invalid as against creditors. Bank of Toronto v. McDougall, 15 C. P. 475, distinguished. Freehold Loan and Savings Co. Bank of Commerce, 44 U. C. R. 284, followed, Greene and Sons Co. v. Castleman, 25 O. R. 113.

"Creditor" "Instead of Creditors."]
—That the mortgage was not made to prevent "the creditor." (instead of creditors) "of such mortgagor obtaining payment of any claims against him:"—Held, insufficient. Harding
v. Knowkson, 17 U. C. R. 564.

Departure From Form.]—An affidavit that the "bill of sale was executed in good faith and for good consideration," instead of "that the sale is bonh fide and for good consideration:"—Held, under the circumstances of this case, insufficient. Boynton v. Boyd, 12 C. P. 354.

Deponent's Addition.]—" Secretary of the Board of Arts and Manufactures:"—Held, a sufficient addition. Noell v. Pell, 7 L. J. 322.

"Due or Accruing Due."]—That the mortgage was executed for the purpose of securing the payment of the money so justly "due or accruing due:"—Held, sufficient, being in the terms of the Act. Squair v. Fortune, 18 U. C. R. 547.

"Due or Accruing Due."]—The affidavit annexed to a chattel mortgage omitted the words, "or accruing due." after those "so justly due:"—Held, that the debt might be stated as due when it really was due, and that it need not be necessarily stated as either due or accruing. Farlinger v. McDonald, 45 U, C. R. 233.

Error in Description.] — An affidavit that the deed was not made to enable the assignor (instead of the assignee) to hold the goods against creditors:—Held, bad. Olmstead v. Smith, 15 U. C. R. 421.

"Estate and Effects" Instead of "Goods.")—That it was made "for the purposes and trusts therein set forth." and not for the purpose of holding, &c., "the estate and effects mentioned therein." instead of "the goods," as in the statute:—Held, sufficient. Mason v. Thomas, 23 U. C. R. 305.

Indemnity.]—A mortgaged to B. for a debt due by C., and C., to secure A. gave him a chattel mortgage conditioned to be void on his paying the amount of the debt either to A. or B., or indemnifying A. against his conditioned to A. or B., or indemnifying A. against his ki-ly viet. C. 122. on an effect of the condition of the cond Jurat.]—The jurat to an affidavit on a chattel mortgage was as follows: "Sworn before me at the Brantford of — in the—county of Brantford, this 13th day of October, A.D. 1855; George W. Malloch, a commissioner for taking affidavits in the Queen's Bench, in and for the said county of Brant: "—Held, sufficient. DeForrest v. Bunnell, 15 U. C. R. 370.

Liability "of" Instead of "for."]—
An affidavit that the mortgage was made to secure the mortgage against the payment of such liability "of," instead of "for" the mortgagor, by reason of the notes to secure against the indorsement of which it was given:—Held. sufficient. Mathers v. Lynch. 28 U. C. R. 354.

Money not Actually Advanced.)—The affidavit of bona fides attached to a chattel mortgage, duly executed and filed, stated that the nortgagor was justly and truly indebted was made in good faith upon the securities of the chattel mortgage, but the money was not paid over for five days after the affidavit was made. In an action by the assignee for the benefit of creditors of the mortgagor under a subsequent assignment, to set aside the mortgage:—Held, reversing 27 O. R. 545, that the mortgage was valid. Martin v. Sampson, 24 A. R. 1.

Omission. —An affidavit that the mortgage was executed in good faith, and not for the purpose of protecting the goods and chattels mentioned in the said mortgage, or preventing the creditors of the said L. (the mortgagor), from obtaining payment of any claim against him:—Held, insufficient, for not stating that it was not made to protect the goods "against the creditors of the mortgagor." as required by the Act, 20 Vict. c.
3. Boulton v. Smith, 17 U. C. R. 400, 18 U.
C. R. 408.

Omission.]—An affidavit stated that an assignment for the benefit of creditors was made "bona fide," omitting the words, "for good consideration:"—Held, bad. Mason v. Thomas, 23 U. C. R. 305.

Omission.]—An affidavit that the mortgage was not executed for the purpose of preventing the creditors of such mortgagor from obtaining payment of any claim against —not saying against whom: —Held, clearly not a compliance with the Chattel Mortgage Act. Re Andrews, 2 A. R. 24.

Omission.]—The affidavit of bona fides stated that the mortgage was not made for the purpose of protecting the goods against the creditors of M. and D.—not adding, or either of them—or preventing the creditors of them:—Held, sufficient. Bertram v. Pendry, 27 c. P. 371.

Omission.]—The omission of the word "him" at the conclusion of the affidavit of bona fides registered with a chattel mortgage, has the effect of destroying the security as against an execution creditor who has seized while the goods remained in statu que, but does not impair the instrument as between the parties. Duris vy. Wickson, 1 O. R. 399.

One of Several Bargainees.]—An affidavit made by one of several bargainees or assignees of goods (before 20 Vict. c. 3):— Held, sufficient. Balkwell v. Beddome, 16 U. C. R. 203; Heward v. Mitchell, 11 U. C. R. 625.

One of Several Mortgagees.] — It is sufficient if one of several mortgagees make the affidavit required by R. S. O. 1877 c. 119, s. 2. Tidey v. Craib, 4 O. R. 696.

One of Two Bargainees,]—Where a bill of sale was made to two jointly, and filed on an affidavit of bona fides made by one, but the evidence shewed that the consideration was made up of two debts, due to the vendees separately:—Held, sufficient, McLeod v. Fortune, 19 U. C. R. 100.

Partner.]—One partner can make the affidayit of bona fides. Ross v. Dunn, 16 A. R. 552.

Plural Instead of Singular.]—H. and L being indebted to a bank, save to T., the agent of the branch at H., and to the other plaintiff, their general manager, as trustees, a mortiag or oscure the debt. T. had no explaintiff, their general manager, as trustees, a mortiag of the same of the transaction repudiated it. The mortigues, made by H., I., and S., of the first part, recited that they were indebted to the mortigues, and had agreed to secure payment of their indebteness, but H. alone assigned the goods, and there was a proviso that the mortigues, and band agreed to secure payment of their indebteness, but H. alone assigned the goods, and there was a proviso that the mortigue should be void if they should pay. The affidavit was that H., I., and S., "the mortigagors," were indebted, that the instrument was not executed for the purpose of protecting the goods against the creditors of the said H., I., and S., "mortgagors therein named, or preventing the creditors of the said unortgagors," &c.:—Held, that describing the three as mortgagors, when only H. conveyed anything, was not a fatal objection. Taylor v. Alanki, 19 C. P. 78.

Reference to Mortgage.]—An affidavit that the mortgagor was justly and truly indefined to the mortgage in the sum of £800, or thereabouts, as fully set forth in the mortgage; that the mortgage was executed in good faith, and for the express purpose of securing the payment of the money so justly due as aforesaid, and of securing the mortgagee for his said indorsement, and not for the purpose of protecting the goods against the creditors of the mortgagor:—Held, sufficient, under Baldwin v. Benjamin, 16 U. C. R. 52. Valentine v. Smith, 9 C. P. 59.

Singular for Plural.]—Held, that recitals which used the singular instead of the plural number, and an affidavit which stated that the conveyance was not for the purpose of enabling "the bargainee to hold." &c., there being two bargainees, did not vitiate the instrument. Tyas v. McMaster, 8 C. P. 446.

Singular for Plural.] — The affidavit stated that the mortgage was not granted for the purpose of protecting the goods and chattels against the creditors of the two mortgagors, naming them, or preventing the creditors of the said mortgagor from obtaining payment for any claim gainst him, the said mortgagor :—Held, sufficent, for that the word "mortgagor" would mean each of the mortgagor gorgors previously mentioned. Farlinger v. McDonald, 45 U. C. R. 253.

Statement of Consideration.] — The affidavit of bona fides in a bill of sale, which the evidence shewed was taken in satisfaction of a previous loan from the bargaine to the bargainor, stated that the sale was bona fide and for good consideration, namely. 8830 (which was the consideration expressed in the bill of sale), advanced by the bargainee by way of a loan:—Held, that the affidavit substantially complied with s. 5 of R. S. O. 1887. c. 1255, and that the addition of the words "advanced, etc., by way of a loan," did not render the affidavit defective. Ormsby v. Jarvis, Chapman v. Jarvis, 22 O. R. 11.

Statement of Indebtedness.] — The mortgage did not state the amount of the indebtedness; and the affidavir of bona fides was equally defective, as it merely stated that the mortgagors "are fully indebted to me," no sum being mentioned:—Hed, void as against the plaintiffs, the amount of indebtedness existing or created by the mortgage not being mentioned therein, and in the affidavir of bona fides as required by ss. 1 and 2 of R. S. O. 1877 c. 119. Stevens v. Barfoot, 9 O. R. 682; 13 A. R. 366.

Statement of Indebtedness.]—A mortgagee under a chattel mortgage to secure an existing indebtedness made the alfidavit of bona fides required by s. 6 of R. S. O. 1887 c.
125, for a mortgage to secure future advances instead of the alfidavit required by s. 2.:—
Held, that the alfidavit was defective in not stating "that the mortgager was justly and truly indebted to the mortgage," and that the mortgage could not be looked at to aid the alfidavit in this requirement. Milland Loan and Savings Co. v. Coxcisson, 20 O. R.
583.

Technical Forms.]—It is not necessary in affidavits sworn under a statute to conform to the technicalities required by rules of court. De Forrest v. Bunnell, 15 U. C. R. 370; Moyer v. Davidson, 7 C. P. 521.

Time of Making.]—Affidavits under 13 & 14 Vict. c. 62, need not be made on the day the mortgage is executed. Perry v. Ruttan, 10 U. C. R. 637.

Trustee-Conversion of Goods.]-A chattel mortgage to secure a debt was made to a nominee of the creditor, as trustee for him. In an action by an assignee of the mortgage against the assignee for the general benefit of creditors of the mortgagor, for conversion of the mortgaged chattels, it was contended that the mortgage was invalid because the mortgagee could not properly make the usual affidavit of bona fides, as there was no debt due to him: — Held, notwithstanding there was nothing on the face of the mortgage to was nothing on the face of the mortgage to shew the fiduciary position of the mortgage, that the mortgage was valid. Brodie v. Rut-tan, 16 U. C. R. 200, applied and followed. At the time the goods were taken by the de-fendant out of the plaintiff's possession, they were in the hands of the bailiff of the latter for sale under the power contained in the mortgage, and when the defendant intervened and sold as assignee, the same bailiff conducted the sale, and the amount realized was the same as would have resulted from a sale under the power:—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to recover as damages for the conversion no more and no less than was re-alized by the sale. A part only of the goods which the defendant took out of the possession of the plaintiff's bailiff was sold: from the of the plainth s ballin was soid; from the remainder of them the defendant realized no-thing, claims having been made to them by other persons, which the defendant did not contest, though he did not actively take part in handling them over to the claimants. The in handing them over to the claimants. The plaintiff, having in his pleading limited his plaintiff, having in his pleading filmited his claim to the goods actually sold, was at the trial refused leave to amend by adding a claim for the other goods. Light v. Hawley, 29 O.

Two Deponents.] — The words "sworn and adirmed," without saying which of the two deponents swore, and which affirmed, and omitting the word "severally" in the affidavit to a mortgage:—Held, sufficient. Moyer v. Davidson, 7 C. P. 521.

Two Mortgagors — "Or Either of Them."]—That a mortgage by two was not executed to secure the goods against the creditors of the mortgagors, nor to prevent such creditors from recovering, &c., is sufficient, without adding "or either of them," as regards the mortgagors, or "or any or either of them "as regards the creditors. Fraser v. Bank of Toronto, 19 U. C. R. 381. Followed in Taylor v. Ainalie, 19 C. P. 78.

Variations from Statutory Form—Liability of Indorser—Payment of Notes by Mortgauec—Change in Form of Security.]—The affidavit of bona fides made by the mortgage in respect of a chattel mortgage given to secure him against liability in respect of his indorsement of certain promissory notes for the mortgagor, contained the expression, "and truly states the extent of the liability intended to be created by such agreement and covered by such mortgage," instead of the statutory words, "and truly states the extent of the liability intended to be created and covered by such mortgage," It also contained the covered by such mortgage," It also contained the statutory words, "and for the express purpose of securing me, the said mortgage therein named, against the payment of the amount of such notes indorsing liability for the said mortgagor:" instead of the words, "and for the express purpose of securing the mortgage against the payment of the amount of his liability for the mortgagor:"—letted, that the mortgage was not void as against creditors by reason of these variations from the statutory form. Boldrick v. Ryan, 17 A. R. 253, distinguished. The mortgage, having paid the notes during the currency of the mortgage herore the expiration of a year took and filed a new mortgage upon the same goods for the amount paid by him and interest, changing the form of the instrument so as to make it appropriate to an actual advance of money, but not rectifing the prior mortgage or the payment. Within sixty days of this, the mortgage made an assignment for the benefit of creditors:—Held, that executions in the sheriff's hands before the second mortgage was filed, but subsequent to the prior mortgage, did not gain priority over the second; and the statutory presumption that the latter was made with intent to prefer was rebutted by the circumstances. Rogers v. Carroll, 30 O. R. 328.

3. Affidavit of Execution.

Affidavit in Form Right but in Fact Wrong.]—Where a witness to a mortgage by two swears that he saw both execute, when in fact he only saw one, and the mortgage has been registered on such affidavit, it is sufficient. DeForrest v. Bunnell, 15 U. C. R. 370.

Date of Instrument and of Execution.]—Held. no objection that the affidavit of execution did not state the date of the bill of sale or on what day it was executed. McLeod v. Fortune, 19 U. C. R. 100.

Deponent's Addition.] — The want of deponent's addition is no objection to an affidavit made for registration of a chattel mortgage. Brodie v. Ruttan, 16 U. C. R. 207.

Mayor of Foreign Town.]—An affidavit of execution sworn before the mayor of a foreign town is useless. DeForrest v. Bunnell, 15 U. C. R. 370.

Name of Deponent.]—It is no objection that the second Christian name of a deponent to an affidavit of the execution of a chattel mortgage is not written in full, but the initial only given. DeForrest v. Bunnell, 15 U. C. R. 370.

Subscribing Witness, 1—Held, under 12 Vict. c. 74, that it was not essential that the affidavit of execution should be of a subscribing witness; and that where the original had no subscribing witness, but in the copy flied the name of the person who made the affidavit was inserted as a witness, the variance was not material. Armstrong v. Ausman, 11 U. C. R. 498.

4. Description of Goods.

After Acquired Goods.]—A description in a chattel mortgage of after acquired goods as "all other ready-made clothing, tweeds, trimmings, gents' furnishings, furniture and fixtures and personal property, which shall at any time during the currency of this mortgage be brought in or upon the said premises or in or upon any other premises in which the said mortgagor may be carrying on business," is sufficient, and binds goods of the kinds mentioned in premises to which the mortgagor moves after making the mortgage.

and the amending Act, 55 Vict. c. 26 (O.), has not made any difference in this respect. Horsfall v. Boisseau, 21 A. R. 663.

After Acquired Goods.]—The mortgage in this case clearly could not pass after acquired goods, for though after acquired goods, for though after acquired goods may be affected in equity, it could only be when the mortgage shews an intention to do so. Muson v. Macdonald, 25 C. P. 435.

After Acquired Goods.]-Although the rule at law is, that an instrument intended either to assign or charge chattels of which the assignor has not the possession, is imperfeet without some subsequent act of the assignor, the same is not the case in equity, meither does it prevail in insolvency proceedings, where the court is bound to work out the equities between the parties. On a sale the equities between the parties. On a safe by a partner of his interest in the partner-ship effects to his co-partner, and for the purpose of securing the amount due on such purpose of securing the amount due on such purchase, the purchaser, T., executed a mortgage to the vendor on "all the stock-in-trade, consisting of drugs, chemicals, * * * m-trade, consisting of drugs, chemicals, and in fact everything in stock or held by the late firm of T. & P. in connection with their business * * * and now in possession of the said party of the first part [the purof the said party of the first part the pur-chaser | in or upon the shop or premises oc-cupied by him on the north side of Ken street, in * * * and also any stock purchased hereafter by the said T., and which may be in his possession upon said premises during the continuance of this security or any re-newal thereof." Afterwards T. executed a newal thereof." Alterwards 1, eaceded a renewal of this mortgage, describing the pro-perty substantially as above, and as being in his possession on the date of the first mort-gage, and "also any stock purchased by the said mortgagor thereafter and now in his said mortgagor thereafter and now in his possession; and also any stock purchased hereafter by the said mortgagor, and which may be in his possession, upon the said premises, at any time during the continuance of this security or any renewal thereof:"—Held, (1) that stock acquired by T. after the execution of such second mortgage, as well as that acquired by him after the date of the first and before the execution of the second mortgage, was bound by such second mortgage, and that the bound by such second mortgage, and that the mortgage was entitled to retain the same as against the assignee in insolvency of the wortgager; and (2) that the property was sufficiently described in the mortgage both as to its nature and locality. Re Thirkell, Perrin v. Wood, 21 Gr. 492.

After Acquired Property.]—Held, that the terms of the agreement in this case were not sufficiently comprehensive to cover the substituted, renewed, or added stock-in-trade. Kitching v. Hicks, 6 O. R. 739.

After Acquired Property — Executions. |—A chattel mortgage conveyed to the plaintiff the stock-in-trade of the mortgagor, which purported to be enumerated in a schedule and was described as being on certain namel premises. The schedule after setting out the goods proceeded: "And all goods to the goods proceeded: "And all goods be such as a such mortgagor, notwithstanding that their writs were in the hands of the sheriff at the time when such stock was brought into the business; the equitable right of the mortgagee under such agreement attaching immediately on the goods reaching the premises. Coyne v. Lec, 14 A. R. 503.

Animals—Age.]—In a bill of sale certain goods were described as "one brown stallion, ten years old; one bay horse, eight vears old; one black mare, nine years old;"—Held, a sufficient description. Corneill v. Abell, 31 C. P. 107.

Books of Account — Schedule.]—N. & Co. by deed assigned to M. all and singular the "furniture and effects of them, the said N. & Co., and which will be more particularly mentioned and described in the schedule to these presents hereafter to be annexed, marked A., and all other their personal estate and effects whatsoever and wheresoever situated." The schedule was not filled up at the time of executing or filing the assignment, but was afterwards filled up by a third person without reference to the assignors, and the books in question were mentioned in it, but remained in their possession. Afterwards N. & Co., by another deed, assigned to the plaintiff all the debts owing to them, giving him power to examine and take extracts from their accounts for the purpose of making up and adjusting such debts properly. The books were handed to the plaintiff by N. & Co., in pursuance of this deed, and having been taken from him by defendant, he replevied. Defendant set up M.'s right:—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to recover, for the schedule to the first assignment, filled up as it was, could have no effect, and the books did not gas under the operative words. Crauford v. Brown, 17 U. C. R. 126.

Chattels—Animals.]—What is a sufficient description of chattels and animals discussed. See Boldrick v. Ryan, 17 A. R. 253. See Connell v. Hickock, 15 A. R. 518.

Crops—Error in Description of Land.]—
M., owning parts of lots 13 and 14 in the 2nd concession of Murray, gave a chattel mortgage of certain crops, grain, hay, &c., described as "now being on the premises situate on the north-east half of lot 14 in the 2nd concession, and north half of lot 14 in the said concession of Murray:"—Held, that crops and hay upon lot 13 could not pass. Grass v. Austin, 7 A. R. 511.

Crops.]—Crops to be grown may be covered by a chattel mortgage, and a chattel mortgage of "crops which may be sown during the currency of this mortgage," covers crops sown after the mortgage falls due but remains unpaid. Canada Permanent Loan and Savings Co. v. Todd, 22 A. R. 515.

Definite Quantity.] — "14,415 feet of prepared moulding:"—Held, a sufficient and full description under the statute. Noell v. Pell, 7 L. J. 322.

Erroneous Description of Dwelling-house—Falsa Demonstratio.]—Goods intended to be included in a chattel mortgage were described therein as those mentioned in the schedule, the property of the mortgagors, situate upon the premises on the north-east corner of certain streets in a township. The schedule contained a list of the goods, which consisted of household furniture, each article being described, and the articles in each room set out under a heading describing the room. The mortgage contained a covenant that if the mortgages should part with the possession of the goods, the mortgage was to be entitled to take possession. One of the mortgagors was described as an "esquire:"—Held, that, having regard to these provisions, it was to be taken that the mortgaged goods were the property of the mortgagors, in their possession, and contained in the building described in the mortgage; that that building described in the mortgage; that the building was the dwelling-house of the mortgagors; and that the goods were the household furniture in use by the mortgagors. Hovey v. Whiting, 14 S. C. R. at p. 559, referred to. And, although when the mortgage was executed, the goods were in the house at the north-west corner, and not the north-east corner, the mortgage was not void; the erroneous part of the description might be rejected, and the statement that they were contained in the mortgagors' dwelling-house would remain. Accountant of the Supreme Court of Judicature v. Marcon, 30 O. R. 135.

Furniture — Locality.] — Goods were described in a chattel mortgage as "one kitchen table, four chairs, all contained in and about the dwelling-house and barn of the mortgagor, situate at or on lots," &c.:—Held, sufficient. Natiross v. Phair, 37 U. C. R. 153.

General Words.]—The words "one single buggy," in a chattel mortgage:—Held, not a sufficient description to satisfy R. S. O. 1877 c. 119, s. 23. Holt v. Carmichael, 2 A. R. 639.

General Words.]—In an assignment the goods were described as "all the household furniture, goods, chattels, and effects belonging to and being in the dwelling-house of the said Burrowes, and which are enumerated and set forth in the second schedule hereunto annexed: and also the stock in trade, implements of business, and machinery in the said schedule enumerated and set forth." In the margin of the schedule different localities were mentioned, and opposite to them the goods specified, the articles in question being as fol-lows:—"Stable and coach house; three horses, three sets harness, one straw-cutter, one cow, one cutter, two buggies, &c. Lumber yard: two waggons, one pair bob-sleighs, four wheelbarrows, trestles and scaffolding, old lumber, &c., two thousand feet of oak and hardwood plank and boards, sixty thousand feet of prime assorted sizes, two thousand feet flooring, one pair of timber wheels, one hand cart, two yard dogs, cut stone:"-Held, that the articles in italics were sufficiently described. and passed as stock-in-trade, and that the description as to the others was insufficient. Haworth v. Fletcher, 20 U. C. R. 278.

General Words — Articles Capable of Specific Description.]—The goods and chattels were described in a chattel mortgage as follows:—Certain specific articles were first enumerated in the mortgage, and the description then proceeded, "also the stock of gold and silver watches, jewellery, and electro-silver plate, which, at the date hereof, is in the possession of the mortgagor in his said store" (being a certain store of the mortgagor thereinbefore specified). The evidence shewed the electro-plated goods and watches were numbered, and might have been identified thereby:—Held, a sufficient description of the goods mortgaged. Segsworth v. Meriden Silver Plating Co., 3 O. R. 413.

General Words — Locality.] — "Seven horses, three lumber waggons, one carriage, one pleasure sleigh, all the household furniture in possession of the said party of the first part, and being in his dwelling-house, all the lumber and logs in and about the saw mill and premises of the said grantor, and all the blacksmith's tools now in possession of the said party of the first part, six cows and four stoves:—Held, a sufficient description as to the household furniture, lumber and logs, and insufficient as to the other goods. Rose v. Scott, 17 U. C. R. 385.

General Words — Locality.]—"One set of double harness, four cows, one yoke of steers, four yearling calves, eighteen sheep, one sow and bigs, two waggons, one cutter, one sleigh, two ploughs, one harrow, one cultivator, one straw cutter, three stoves, two dozen chairs, four tables, five bedsteads, bed and bedding, two bureaux, one sideboard, two carpets," called goods, chattels, furniture, and household stuff, without stating where they were situate or in whose possession:—Held, insufficient; but semble, that the mortgage was good to pass other property properly described. Hiscott v. Murray, 12 C. P. 315.

General Words—Locality.] — The Consolidated Statutes of Manitoba, c. 49, s. 5, enact: "All the instruments mentioned in this Act whether for the sale or mortgage of goods and chattels, shall contain such a full goods and chatters, small contain such a full and sufficient description thereof that the same may be thereby readily and easily known and distinguished:"—Held, that where goods in a chattel mortgage, were described as "all and singular the goods, chattels, furniture, and household stuff hereinafter particularly mentioned and described and particularly mentioned and described in the schedule hereunto annexed marked A.; all of which goods and chattels are now situate, lying, and being, etc." (particularly describlying, and being, etc." (particularly describing the premises), without stating that such goods were all the goods on the said premises, there was not a full and sufficient description within the meaning of the above enactment, and the mortgage was void as against execution creditors. McCall v. Wolff, 13 S. C. R.

General Words—Locality—Schedulc.]—A chattel mortgage described the goods as "all the goods, chattels, furniture and household stuff whatsoever, the property of the said mortgagor, situate and being in and upon the hotel, stables and premises known as Strong's Hotel, in the said city of London; which said goods and chattels, furniture and household stuff, are more particularly, but without restriction to the above description, described and set out in the schedule hereto annexed marked A.—that is to say, any goods and chattels, furniture and household stuff, in and upon the said hotel, stables and premises, not included in the said schedule are not to be excluded from this security." In the schedule was contained: "Yard and stables, one omnibus, two bay horses, aged * * the whole of this above named property, goods, and chattels, household furniture, horses, and wargons, now being in and upon the premises known as Strong's Hotel," on, &c. At the time of giving the mortgage the mortgagor owned only two horses for the use of the ominus, one of which was not a bay horse:—Held, that this horse would not pass by the description in the schedule, but that it passed by the general words in the mortgage, as being in and upon the stables and premises; and that the omnibus passed. Fitzgerald v. Johnston, 41 U. C. R. 440.

General Words — Specific Locality.]—
The goods were specified as particularly mentioned in a schedule annexed, in which they were described as one buggy, one cutter, one lorse, one chaff cutter; and the following household furtiture, namely, in the small parlour, one stove, &c., enumerating the articles in different rooms:—Held, sufficient as to the furniture, but insufficient as to the other goods, Sukerland v. Niron, 21 U. C. R. 623.

General Words — Specific Locality.]—
"All the horses, mares, cows, heifers, calves, sheep, lambs, pigs, waggons, buggy, harness, farming utensils, hay, household furniture, books, and every other article or thing on or about the south half of lot 24, in &c.;"— Held, sufficient. Balkwell v. Beddome, 16 U. C R, 203.

General Words — Specific Locality.] —
All the goods, &c., of the assignor being in and about his warehouse on Y, street, and all his furniture in and about his dwelling-house on W, street, and all bonds, bills, and securities for money, loans, stock, notes, &c., whatsever, and wheresoever, belonging, due, or owing to him:—Held, sufficient. Harris v.
Connected Bank, 16 U. C. R. 437.

General Words - Specific Locality . Stock-in-Trade.]—In a deed of assignment the property was described as "all the real estate, lands, tenements, and hereditaments of the said debtors (company) whatsoever and wheresever, of or to which they are now seized or entitled, or of or to which they have any estate, right or interest of any kind or description, with the appurtenances, the particulars of which are more particularly set out in the schedule hereto, and all and singular the personal estate and effects, stock-in-trade, goods, chattels * * and all other the per-sonal estate and effects whatsoever and wheresoever, whether upon the premises where the debtors' business is carried on or elsewhere, and which the said debtors are possessed of or entitled to in any way whatever. The schedule annexed specifically designated the real estate and included the foundry, erections and buildings thereon erected, and all articles such as engines, &c., in or upon said premises:—Held, that this was a sufficient description of the property intended to be conassrrphin of the property intended to be conveyed to satisfy s. 23 of R. S. O. 1877 c. 119.

McCall v. Wolff, 13 S. C. R. 130, approved and distinguished. Horey v. Whiting, 14 S. C. R. 515. See S. C., sub nom. Whiting v. Horey, 13 A. R. 7, 9 O. R. 314.

Semble, a description of property in a bill of sale or chattel mortgage as "the stock-intrade" of the grantor in a specified locality, such as his store or warehouse in such a place or street is sufficient. Nolan v. Donelly, 4 0, R, 440, observed upon. McCall v Wolff, 13 8, C, R, 130, followed. Ib.

Goods "In Bond."]—Semble, that the description of goods as "in bond," means in the customs warehouse, and is a sufficient description as regards locality. May v. Security Loan and Savings Co., 45 U. C. R. 106.

Goods not on Described Premises.]—A description of the goods as "being now on the premises occupied by the "mortgagors" in the town of Peterborough, being lot," &c., "and being composed of one stumping machine, one prize buggy, one lumber waggon complete," &c.:—Held, sufficient as to all the goods, though the stumping machine and waggon were not on the premises. Bertram v. Pendry, 27 C. P. 371.

Individual and Joint Property.]—A deed was executed by J. N. Kline & Son, of the first part, whereby, after reciting that they had proposed and agreed to assign all their personal estate and effects to certain parties of the second part, they conveyed and assigned in the said parties "all and singular the stock-in-trade, goods, merchandise, sum and sums of money, bills, bonds, drafts, mortgages, books of account, of what nature or kind soever, belonging to or due or owing to the said parties of the first part, and which are set forth in the schedule hereto annexed, marked with the letter "A.," and subscribed by the parties hereto of the first and second parts: and all the personal estate whatsoever of the said parties of the first part, and all their estate and interest therein." No schedule was attached to the deed at its execution, but schedules were afterwards annexed, signed John N. Kline & Son, John N. Kline, junr., Anthony Kline:—Held, that independently of the schedule, the words of the assignment dividual and joint personal property of John N. Kline. Heward v. Mitchell, 10 U. C. R. 535.

Life Assurance Policy.] — Quere, are the words, "all bills, bonds, notes, securities, accounts, books, book debts, and documents securing money," in a general assignment for the benefit of creditors, sufficient to pass a policy on the life of the assignor held by him for his own benefit. Lee v. Gorrie, 1 C. L. J. 76.

Locality, I—An assignment of "all the stock-in-trade, merchandise, goods, and effects," in the shop occupied by the assignor, situate of the south safe of King street, in the city of the south safe of King street, in the city may be sufficiently and known and numbered 77, which safe and safe of the safe particularly mentioned in the safe of the safe of Locality.]—The goods were described as "all the goods in the house of the mortgagor; in bedroom No. 1, one bureau," &c., describing the articles in each room, and adding, "all the hereinbefore described goods and chattels being in the dwelling house of the party of the first part, situate on Queen street, in the town of Brampton; also, one bay mare, one covered bugsy," &c., "being on the premises of the party of the first part on said Queen street; also the following goods and articles, being in the store of the party of the first part, on the corner of Queen and Main streets, in the said town of Brampton: that is to say, eighty-five gallons of vinegar." giving a long list; "and also the following goods, being of the stock-in-trade of the party of the first part, taken in the month of April last; that is to say, sixteen pieces of tweed." &c.: —Held, that all the goods were sufficiently described, for the last parcel of goods might be taken as described to be in the store. Mathers y, Lyuch, 28 U. C. 354.

Remarks as to the insufficiency of description of goods by locality. Ib.

Locality—Goods in Possession of Third Person. | —C. and J., by mortgage, dated 6th Person. 1—C. and J., by morigage, dated our February, 1803, conveyed certain goods, men-tioned and described in schedules attached thereto, to the plaintiff. Some of the goods mentioned therein were in possession of the mentioned therein were in possession of the manufacturer, one R.; other portions were in certain rooms in the American and Bur-lington hotels. The description given merely designated a portion of the property by locality, giving no particular description, and was as follows: "All and singular the goods and chattels, furniture, household stuff, and articles particularly mentioned and expressed in the schedule hereunto annexed, and which are now in the warehouse of James Reid, in the city of Hamilton, and are about to be placed in the building known as the Burlington Hotel." The schedule began: "Schedule mentioned and referred to in the annexed indenture: one set parlour furniture. Re. (describ-ing some articles), "in parlour II. One wal-nut bedstead," Re. (describing several artic-les) "in parlour C.:"—Held, J. Upon the authority of Fraser v. Bank of Toronto, 19 U. authority of Fraser v. Bank of Toronto, 19 U. C. R. 381, and Powell v. Bank of Upper Canada, 11 C. P. 303, that all the goods in the schedule described as having been in certain rooms in either of the hotels, passed by the mortgage; 2 that all the goods described as being in certain rooms, and which were not in those rooms at the time, did not pass: 3, that goods described specifically (as one omnibus, &c.), without any local description, passed, under the authority of the same cases; passed, under the authority of the same cases; a also, because the description would be suffi-cient in detinue; 4, that all the goods which were made at the time of executing the mortgage, and were the property of the mortgagors in Reid's warehouse, passed under the mortgage as a distinct grant from those in the schedules. Mills v. King, 14 C. P. 223.

Locality Limited. |- In an action against a sheriff for false return the defence was that the goods seized and subsequently, on his being indemnified, abandoned by him, and which were on Bald Lake, Buckhorn Lake, Sandy Creek, and Squaw River, were covered by a chattel mortgage to a bank, the goods in which mortgage were described as being "now in and upon the waters of Mud Lake, Pigeon Creek, Pigeon Lake, Sturgeon Lake, and Scu-gog River, and the shore adjacent thereto." The evidence shewed that the former waters were well known as such, and as distinct from and forming no part of the latter, and that no part of the goods seized had ever been "in and upon" the latter:—Held, that the words in the mortgage, "now in and upon, 'expressly limited the goods to which they referred to those goods which were then upon the waters mentioned in the mortgage, and the shore adjacent thereto, and could not include the goods seized. Donnelly v. Hall, 7 O. R. 581.

Locomotives.]—Held, if it were necessary to determine that point, that the two locomotives sold were sufficiently described in the deed set out in this case. Burton v. Bellhouse, 20 U. C. R. 60.

Piano.] — "One piano, Dominion make, numbered 2773," is a sufficient description in a bill of sale. Field v. Hart, 22 A. R. 449.

Saw-Logs — Lumber.] — A mortgage on savelogs will bind the lumber into which they are sawn, but the mortgage must prove that such lumber was made out of them. White v. Brown, 12 U. C. R. 477.

Schedule.]—All the goods, chattels, furniture, and household stuff "now in Sword's Hotel, Toronto, or particularly mentioned and expressed in a certain schedule marked A. hereunder written or hereunder annexed," will not include goods not in the schedule. Kingston v. Chapman, 9 C. P. 130.

Schedule.] - In a chattel mortgage the goods conveyed were described as follows: All of which said goods and chattels are now the property of the said mortgagor and are situate in and upon the premises of the London Machine Tool Co. (describing the premises) on the north side of King street, in the city of London;" and in a schedule referred to in the mortgage was this additional de-scription: "And all machines * * * in course of construction or which shall here-after be in course of construction or completed while any of the moneys hereby secured are unpaid, being in or upon the premises now occupied by the mortgagor which are now or shall be on any other premises in the said city of London:"—Held, that the description in the schedule could not extend to goods wholly manufactured on premises other than those described in the mortgage, and if it could the description was not gage, and if it could the description was no sufficient within the meaning of the Bills of Sale Act, R. S. O. 1887 c. 125, to cover machines so manufactured. Williams v. Leo-nard & Sons, 26 S. C. R. 406.

Schedule.]—Plaintiff claimed under an assignment which had a schedule of goods attached, intended to be passed thereby. The goods in question had gone into the store prior to the execution of the assignment, and were not in the schedule:—Held, that the assignment only passed what was contained in the inventory. Gunn v. Ruttan, 7 C. P. 516.

Schedule—Locality.]—The property was described as "the goods, chattels, furniture, and household stuff expressed in the schedule hereunto annexed." which schedule was headed, "An inventory of goods and chattels in the possession of one J. R." on a named day. It proceeded to mention certain rooms and the articles therein contained: then jewellery, blankets, household linen, silver, &c., the locality of the house in which the goods, &c., were contained not being mentioned:—Held, sufficient. Powell v. Bank of Upper Canada, 11 C, P. 303.

Schedule—Rooms.]—The goods were described as set forth in the schedules annexed. Schedule C. was headed, "Household furniture in J. E. W's residence," and specified the several articles in detail, giving a list of those contained in each room, from which the sheriff said he had no difficulty in identifying them: — Held, sufficient. Schedule D. was headed, "Household furniture and property of J. R. McDermott," and the several apartments containing the furniture were specified: —Held, also sufficient, as it might be assumed to refer to the party's residence. Frascr v. Bank of Toronto, 19 U. C. R. 381.

Schedule-Change of Place of Business.] Where persons carrying on business as manufacturers of hoops and staves at their fac-tory at B., and also as general storekeepers at L., in the same county, made a chattel at L. in the same county, made a chattel mortgage conveying their goods and chattels to defendant, as set forth in two schedules annexed thereto, schedule A. covering the machinery and other goods and chattels in the factory, and which, after describing them, extended to all other goods and chattels thereafter purchased or manufactured or brought on the premises, whether for the business of on the premises, whether for the business of stave manufacturing or not, or into or upon any other premises thereafter to be occu-pied by the mortgagors, or either of them, it being understood that all logs, staves and bolts manufactured and timber brought on the premises or not, after the execution of the mortgage, should be covered thereby; the other schedule, B., covering the goods and chattels in the general store, and extending to goods and chattels thereafter brought into the said store premises:—Held, that the provision in schedule B. as to after acquired goods referred only to goods brought into the store in which the business was then being carried on, and not to goods brought into the store at B., to which that business had been subsequently removed; and that the provision as to after acquired goods in schedule A, did not apply to the after acquired goods brought into the store at B., for the reference thereto was only to goods of the character referred to in that schedule. Milligan v. Sutherland, 27 O. R. 235, Shares—Expressio Unius.]—All the assignors "stock-in-trade, wares, merchandise, groories, household furniture, and movable personal property in, upon, or belonging to his store, dwelling, warehouse, wharf, and tenement in Ontario street, in the city of Kingman and State of the State of the Ship's Furniture.]—Held, that the furniture glass, crockery, table linen, beds, &c., on beard a steamboat used for carrying passenger on fake Ontario, passed under a morten of the vessel with all her apparel, furniture, &c., as part of the vessel; and that the mortgage, being of a registered vessel, the mortgage of the passed of the pas

Ship—Piano.]—Semble, that a piano on board of a vessel would not pass to a mort-gage under the words "with her boats, guns, amountion, small arms, and appurtenances," St. John v. Bullicant, 45 U. C. R. 614.

Stock-in-Trade.] — "All my stock-intrade, goods, wares, and merchandise in my store situate at," &c.:—Semble, not sufficient; but it was unnecessary to decide the question, as there had been a change of possession. Hutchison v. Roberts, 7 C. P. 470.

Stock-in-Trade,]—" All and singular his stock-in-trade, chattels, debts," &c., and "all his personal estate, and effects whatsoever and wheresoever:"—Held, as there had been a change of possession, that 20 Vict. c. 3 did not apply, otherwise the description would have been insufficient. Howell v. McFarlane, 16 U. C. R. 469.

Stock-in-Trade, |—In a deed of assignment for the benefit of creditors, goods and chattels were described as all the stock-in-trade, goods and chattels, &c., including, among other things, all their stock-in-trade which they, the assignors, "now have in their store and dwelling in the village of Renfrew:"—Held, description insufficient, in that the kind of stock-in-trade should have been mentioned. Notan v. Donnelly, 4 O. R. 440.

Stock in Trade—General Words.]—"All and singular the stock-in-trade of the said W.," the assignor, "situate on Ontario street, in the said town of Stratford, and also all his other goods, chattels, furniture, household effects, horses, and cattle, and also all bonds, bills, notes, debts, choses in action, terms of years, leases, and securities for money:"—Held, insufficient as to all the goods. Wilson V. Kerr, 17 U. C. R. 168, 18 U. C. R. 470.

Stock-in-Trade—"In Course of Delivery."]—A trader, in consideration of a debt, by deed assigned to the plaintiff all his stock-in-trade, &c., on certain premises, "or in course of delivery to hin."—Held, to pass his interest in goods lying at the wharf in the town where he resided, but not actually delivered to him. McPherson v. Reynolds, 6 C. P. 491.

Stock-in-Trade—Locality.]—Held, before 20 Vict, c. 3, that goods in a mortgage were sufficiently described as "all the stock of dry goods, hardware, crockery, groceries, and other goods, wares, and merchandise in the store and premises occupied by the mort gazor at. "&c., if it were clearly made out that those in question were in the mortgagor's store, and his, at the execution of the instrument; and, held, also, that the evidence of identity in this case was sufficient. Ross v. Conger, 14 U. C. R. 525.

Stock-in-Trade—Specific Locality.]—Section 6 of the North-West Territories Ordinance provides that: "All the instruments mentioned in this Ordinance whether for the mortgage or sale of goods and chattels shall contain such sufficient and full description thereof that the same may be readily and easily known and distinguished." The description in a chattel mortgage was as follows: "All and singular the goods, chattels, stock-in-trade, fixtures, and store building of the mortgagors, used in or pertaining to their business as general merchants, said stock-in-trade consisting of a full stock of general merchandise now being in the store of said mortgagors on the north-half of section six, town-ship nineteen, range twenty-eight west of the fourth principal meridian:"—Held, affirming 1 N. W. T. Rep. No. 1, p. 88, that the description was sufficient. McCail v. Wolff, 13 S. C. R. 130, distinguished. Hovey v. Whiting, 14 S. R. C. 515. followed. Thomson v. Quirk, 18 S. C. R. 695.

Tools—General Words.]—In a chattel mortgage made by M. & Co., the goods were described as "Two sets of blacksmithing and one set of waggon maker's tools complete, together with all their floating capital, stockin-trade, to the value of $1,000, connected with the business they carry on in the said village of Waterdown, as waggon and carriage builders, general blacksmiths, &c. under the name and firm of M. & Co.:"—Held, an insufficient description as regarded the tools. Mason v. MacDoundl, 25 C. P. 435.

5. Indorsements and Advances.

Advances-Agreement.]-A mortgage purported to secure $1,600, acknowledged to have been paid by the mortgagees, the property mortgaged being 2,500 logs, and the proviso for redemption being on payment of $1,600, at seven per cent., on or before 1st of September, or by delivering lumber of first and second classes, as agreed between the parties, to that value. The agreement, which was of even date, declared that in consideration of the $1.600 then paid and advanced to the mortgagors by plaintiffs, "which sum is col-laterally secured to the parties by chattel laterally secured to the parties by chattel mortgage bearing even date herewith," &c., the mortgagors agreed to deliver to plaintiffs all the first and second class lumber made at their mill on or before 1st October then next; and plaintiffs agreed to pay at the prices named, or, if the advance now made is not exhausted, to allow them for the lumber so de-livered at rates aforesaid." The affidavit of the mortgagees was in the usual form under s. 2 of the Chattel Mortgage Act:—Held, that the mortgage was one within ss. 1 and 2. and not s. 5, of the Chattel Mortgage Act: for not truly shewing the real transaction befor not truly snewing the real transaction between the parties; and that the affidavit was sufficient. Baldwin v. Benjamin, 16 U. C. R. 52, followed. Beecher v. Austin, 21 C. P. 334.

Advances - Cheque for Advance to be Drawn Against — Partner,] — A mercantile firm to whom a customer was indebted on unmatured paper, part of which was under discount at a bank, in good faith and in the honest belief that it would enable him to carry on his business agreed to make a fresh advance to him of about one-half of his indebtedness to them, and took from him to one of the firm a chattel mortgage for the whole amount. the mortgagee making the usual affidavit of bona fides. When the mortgage was executed bona fides. a cheque for the fresh advance was given to the customer, who, pursuant to a subsequent arrangement, did not use it, but afterwards drew at intervals on the firm until the amount of the cheque was paid, when it was returned:

-Held, that even if the mortgage was defective under the Chattel Mortgage Act yet the plaintiffs, execution creditors, were not entity led to succeed, because the mortgagee had taken actual possession of the goods before the delivery of the writ to the sheriff :- Held, also, that the mortgage was valid, for under the Chattel Mortgage was valid, for under the Chattel Mortgage Act, though the debt was due to the partnership, one partner could properly take the mortgage and make the affidavit of bona fides, and it was a mortgage to secure a present actual advance, and not future advances so as to come within s. 6 of the Act:—Held, also, that even if the mortgage had been invalid and the mortgagee had taken possession and sold after the delivery of the writ an action for an account of the proceeds would not lie against him at the suit of the execution creditor. His only remedy would be to follow the goods, and seize them under his execution. Ross v. Dunn, 16 A. R. 552.

Advances — Present and Future.] — The mortgage, besides being a security for $1.400 actually advanced, provided that it should also be a security for further advances, if necessary, of goods and merchandise to enable the mortgagor "to carry on business,"—not "to enter into and carry on "as in the statute,—which should "be repaid on demand at any time within one year from the date hereof, or such other time as the parties may agree thereto:" — Held, that the omission of the words "to enter into" could not render it unnecessary to register the mortgage, as regarded the $1.400. Quære, whether the clause for future advances was not void as enabling payment to be delayed beyond the year. MeLean v. Pinkerton, 7 A. R. 430.

Advances—Subsequent Change in Time.]
—Where advances were to be made in sums and at times specified, and a mortgage taken to secure their payment:—Held, that a departure from the agreement in the times and manner of such advances could not alone defeat the mortgage, though it might be urged to the jury as against the bonn fides of the transaction. Strange v. Dillon, 22 U. C. R. 223.

Advances in Goods.]—Quære, whether a mortgage to secure advances in flour is within C. S. U. C. e. 45, s, o, or whether only advances in money are intended:—Semble, that the Act extends to advances either in money or goods. Sutherland v. Nixon, 21 U. C. R. 629.

Advances in Goods.]—The "advances" referred to in R. S. O. 1877 c. 119, s. 6, need not be pecuniary. Goulding v. Decming, 15 O. R. 201.

Affidavit Going Too Far.]-In November, 1881, a chattel mortgage was made to secure the plaintiff as indorser of a promissory note of the mortgagor, dated 4th October, 1881, at two months. A recital in the instrument stated that it had been given "as security to the mortgagee against his indorsement of said note, or any renewal thereof that shall not extend the liability of the mortgagee beyond one year from the date thereof; and against any loss that may be sustained by him by reason of such indorsement of said note, or any renewal thereof." The affidavit stated it was made "for the express purpose of securing the mortgagee against the payment of such his liability for the said mortgagor by reason of the promissory note therein recited, or any future note or notes which he may indorse for the accommodation of the mortgagor, whether as renewals of the said note or gagor, whether as renewals of the said note otherwise:"—Held, that as the mortgage itself was good, and the affidavit covered all that is required by the Act, that part of the affidavit from "or any future note" to the amdavit from "or any future note" to the end was unnecessary, and could not vitiate the security. Keough v. Price, 27 C. P. 309, remarked upon. Driscoll v. Green, 8 A. R. 366. Agreement Not Set Out.]—Semble, it is not essential to the validity of a chattel mortgage to secure the mortgagee against the indorsement of any bill or note, &c., under s. 6 of R. S. O. 1877 c. 119, that it should set forth fully the agreement between the parties and the amount of the liability intended to be created, and that the liability which it professes to secure should be truly stated. Barber v. Macpherson, 13 A. R. 356.

Agreement Set Out-Possible Extension. |-A chattel mortgage to indemnify an indorser or to secure the mortgagee against liabilities otherwise incurred for the gagor, if given in good faith in pursuance of an antecedent absolute promise, is not avoided by the Act relating to assignments and pre-ferences by insolvents, merely because it was not given contemporaneously with the indorsement or other liability. The requirements of s. 6 of the Chattel Mortgage Act, R. S. O. 1877 c. 119, as to setting forth an agreement in the mortgage apply only to mortgages to secure future advances for the purposes therementioned. In the case of a mortgage under that section as security against liabilities incurred by indorsing, or in any other way, all that is necessary is that the liability shall be one not extending for a longer period than one year from the date of the mortage, and shall be sufficiently described or identified therein. The reference in such a mortgage to a possible future renewal or extension of the liability, which has not been agreed to and which the mortgagee is not bound to grant, does not invalidate the mortgage if in other respects sufficient. Embury v. West, 15 A. R. 357.

Agreement Set Out.]—A chattel mort-gage recited that the mortgagee had indorsed, at the request and for the accommodation of the mortgagors, a certain promissory bearing even date therewith, and payable three months after date to C. B., or order, for $1,000. The proviso and covenant were to pay the said note at maturity, and save harm-less the said mortgagee against his indorseness the said mortgagee against his indorse-ment thereof. The affidavit of the mortgagee stated that he had indorsed the promissory note in the mortgage named: "that the said mortgage was executed in good faith, and for the express purpose of securing the due payment of the said promissory note, and security and indemnity to me against the said indorse ment or any loss thereby, and not for the purpose of protecting the goods and chattels mentioned in the said mortgage against the creditors of the said mortgagors therein named, or preventing the creditors of such mortgagors from obtaining payment of any claim against the said mortgagors:"—Held, that if necessary the agreement between the parties was sufficiently set forth in the mortgage and verified in the affidavit; but, quære, whether this is required except in the case of an agreement for future advances:—Held, also, that the addidavit was otherwise sufficient, though not in the exact words of the statute. O'Donohoe v. Wilson, 42 U. C. R. 329.

Antecedent Advance—Affidavit of Bona Fide,—The mortgagor had agreed to delived.—The mortgagor had agreed to delived being the plaintiff, at specified prices, up to September, 1870, which plaintiff was only bound to pay for as delivered, and not to make advances; but at the date of the mortgage plaintiff had advanced about $250 beyond the value of the lumber delivered, and to assist the mortgagor still further he advanced $450 more, on his agreeing to execute the mortgage to secure both amounts, which were to be repaid by lumber or money in two months, the security covering the goods in dispute as well as the lumber:—Held, that the mortgage was an independent contract, an advance of money to be repaid at an earlier date than that named for the delivery of the lumber: that it was not invalid, as not shewing the true dealing between the parties; that the affidavit, which was in the common form as for a debt due, was sufficient. Clarke v. Bates, 21 C. P. 348.

Form of Recital.]—A recital that the plaintiff had indorsed three notes made by J., giving the dates, sums, and the time of payment, for the accommodation of J., and that J. had agreed to enter into the mortgage to indemnify and save harmless the mortgage of and from payment of said notes, and from all liability or damage in respect thereof:—Held, clearly sufficient. Mathers v. Upnch. 28 U. C. R. 354; Robinson v. Paterson, 18 U. C. R. 55.

Notes Not Payable Within a Year.]— A mortgage to secure the plaintiff as indorser of notes not payable within a year:—Held, invalid. May v. Security Loan and Savings Co., 45 U. C. R. 106.

Renewals Not Limited to Year.]—In a chattel mortgage to secure the plaintiff, the mortgagee, against certain notes on which he was an indorser, the notes were set out, and were all payable within the year; but in the recital the mortgage was stated to be executed not only as security against these notes, but also against any note or notes thereafter to be indorsed by the plaintiff for the mortgagor's accommodation by way of renewal of the said recited note, or otherwise howsoever. proviso was, for the payment of the said notes, and all and every other note or notes which might thereafter be indorsed by the mortgagor for the plaintiff by way of renewal of the aforesaid note, or otherwise; and the covenant was to pay the said note, and all future and other promissory notes which the said mortgagee should thereafter indorse for the accommodation of the mortgagor. Semble, that the mortgage was on its face invalid, in not shew-ing that the liability of the mortgagor was limited in duration to one year, as required by C. S. U. C. c. 45, s. 5; but the affidavit made on re-filing the mortgage shewed that no such restriction was intended, the notes having been several times renewed, and only a small sum paid on them; and on this ground therefore the mortgage was held bad :-Held, also, that the mortgage was invalid, in consequence of the affidavit of bona fides not stat-ing the amount of the liability intended to be created and covered; for the covenant shewed that it was intended as a security against the specified, and any other notes which might be indorsed, and the affidavit stated that it was executed to secure against the payment of such liability. Quære as to the effect of the word note, instead of notes, being used in the affidavit and mortgage. A second mortgage for the same reason was also held bad. A third mortgage, subsequently given, contained nearly all the notes referred to in the above mortgages, while it not only appeared that none of such notes were then in existence, they having all been renewed several times and reduced in amount, but that it also contained a further note which was not indorsed at all:—Held, that this mortgage was also bad, as it could not be said to contain a true statement of the plaintiff's liability. Keough v. Price, 27 C. P. 309.

Substitution of Indorser's Notes.] The mortgage was given, as appeared by the recitals in it, to secure the plaintiff against indorsements for the mortgagors, and before the re-filing he had taken up most of the notes and renewed them by his own notes, to which the mortgagors were not parties:—Held, that the mortgage was not thereby invalidated. Fraser v. Bank of Toronto, 19 U. C. R. 381.

Terms Not Set Out.]—L. mortgaged to the plaintiffs for £140 2s. 5d., reciting that he was indebted to them in £214 10s. 11d.; and that they had become security for him as in-dorsers of a note for £25 11s. 6d., making to-gether £240 2s. 5d., for £100 of which he had previously given them another mortgage. In trespass against the sheriff for seizing the goods under an execution:—Held, that the goods under an execution:—Held, that the mortgage was defective in not shewing the terms, nature, and effect of the liability in-curred by indorsing. Boulton v. Smith, 17 U. C. R. 400, 18 U. C. R. 458.

Time Limitation - Consideration.] - A chattel mortgage, given to secure the mort-gagee against his indorsements for a mortgagor, must shew on its face that the notes indorsed, or any renewals thereof, will fall due within the year, otherwise the mortgage will be void against creditors or purchasers, but not against the assignee in insolvency. Notes not properly stamped, taken by a bank, are invalid if the bank does not attach double stamps and properly cancel the same when it first receives the notes, and will not support a chattel mortgage. Ontario Bank v. Wilcox, 43 U. C. R. 460.

V. REGISTRATION.

Copy.]—Under 20 Vict. c. 3, a copy of an absolute assignment may be filed, as well as of a mortgage. Harris v. Commercial Bank, 16 U. C. R. 437.

Followed in Perrin v. Davis, 9 C. P. 147.

Declaration of Trust.] - Held, that a bill of sale (registered) for the consideration of 5s., with a separate declaration of trust referred to and forming part of the instrument (not registered) was invalid, and that the conveyance registered must shew the true and full consideration for which it is given.

Arnold v. Robertson, 8 C. P. 147.

Followed in Fraser v. Gladstone, 11 C. P.

Delay.]-Held, that the assignment in this case was not avoided by a delay of eight days in registering it. Balkwell v. Beddome, 16 U. C. R. 203.

Execution Before Registration.]-Before 20 Vict. c. 3, an execution coming in be-fore the filing of an assignment is entitled to prevail, though a reasonable time for filing may not have elapsed. Carscallen v. Moodie, 15 U. C. R. 92.

Instrument Not Within the Act. |-If the mortgage is one which the statute does not provide for, or the affidavit cannot possibly be made, then the mortgage is not avoided by the Act for want of registration, or of the recitals required by the Act, but the Act does recitals required by the Act, but the Act goes not apply at all, and the mortrage stands as at common law. Baldwin v. Benjamin, 16 U. C. R. 52; Brodie v. Ruttan, ib. 207; Walker, V. Niles, 18 Gr. 210; Mathers v. Lynch, 28 U. C. R. 354; Paterson v. Maughan, 39 U. C. R. 371; Burton v. Bellhouse, 20 U. C. R. 60.

Place.]-The description of the mortgagor in the mortgage is at most only prima facie proof of his residence; and, held, that in this case, upon the evidence set out, the jury were warranted in finding that he had changed his residence to the county in which the mortgage was registered, though he had left his family in the county as of which he was described.

Mellish v. Van Norman, 13 U. C. R. 451.

Relation Back.] - Held, that the registration of a mortgage does not cause it to relate back to its date. Feehan v. Bank of Toronto, (a) C. P. 32; Shaw v. Gault, 10 C. P. 236;
 (b) Haight v. McInnes, 11 C. P. 518.
 (c) But see, contra, Fechan v. Bank of Toronto, 19 U. C. R. 474.

Removal to Another County. |-- Goods covered by mortgage were removed from the county, either on an alleged sale by mortgagor, or against his will, or stolen from him, and were sold in another county to defendant, the mort.gagor being, at all events, no party to the removal. Just over two months from removal, the mortgagee, on hearing where they were, went and demanded them from defendant:-Held, that such a removal was not within the statute, requiring a copy to be filed within two months of the permanent removal of the goods from the county. Clarke v. Bates, 21 C. P. 348.

Sheriff's Bill of Sale.]—Under 12 Vict. c. 74, and 13 & 14 Vict. c. 62, a bill of sale of an execution debtor's goods, executed by a sheriff to a purchaser, whether plaintiff in the execution or not, need not be filed. Kissock v. Jarvis, 6 C. P. 393, Sunday.]—A chattel mortgage was duly executed on the 12th July, and filed on the 18th, the 17th having been Sunday:—Held, that such registration was too late, the Act, R. S. O. 1877 c. 119, requiring the same to be effected within five days from the execution of the instrument; that Sunday counted as one of such five days; and that Rule 457, O. J. Act, did not apply. McLean v. Pinkerton, 7 A. R. 490.

VI. RENEWAL.

Affidavit of Execution.]-The affidavit of execution need not be repeated, or any copy of it filed, on re-filing a mortgage. Beaty v. Fowler, 10 U. C. R. 382.

Affidavit Supplementing Statement. The statement annexed to the affidavit filed with the copy of mortgage, did not give distinctly all the information required by the Act, but the affidavit and statement together contained all that was necessary:—Held, sufficient. Walker v. Niles, 18 Gr. 210.

Affidavit Supplementing Statement.]
—Held, following Walker v. Niles, 18 Gr.
210, and dissenting from O'Halloran v. Sills.

12 C. P. 465, that on the renewal of a chattel mortgage the statement and affidavit may, when they refer to each other and are meant to be read together, be so read; and that if together they contain the particulars required by the statute the renewal is sufficient. In ing the amount still due on a chattel mortgage made by, &c., (mentioning the names of the parties, and date of registration); amount of mortgage, $685; one year's interest at 20 per cent., $137; amount still due, $822;" and subjoined was an affidavit by the mortgagee verifying a copy of the mortgage annexed, and stating, "the above statement shews truly stating, "the above statement shews truly and correctly the interest I still have in the said mortgage and the amount still due thereon, * * The said mortgage has not been and is not kept on foot for any fraudulent purpose: "—Held, sufficient. Barber v. Maug-han, 42 U. C. R. 134.

Affidavit Supplementing Statement-Immaterial Errors.]—Where the statement and affidavit filed upon renewal of a chattel and affidavit filed upon renewal of a chattel mortgage, when read together, give all the information required by R. S. O. 1877 c. 119, s. 10, the renewal is sufficient. Sloan v. Maughan, 3 A. R. 222.

The statement was that "the interest of the mortgage in the goods described in the mortgage, of which the annexed is a true copy, and made by C. and dated the 13th March, 1876, is as follows: The amount still due to me, S., on said mortgage for principal is $200." The mortgage's affidavit stated that the above statement, was correct stated that the above statement was correct and true, that the mortgage had not been assigned by him, and was not kept on foot assigned by him, and was not kept on foot for any fraudulent purpose :—Held, sufficient, OHalloran v. Sills, 12 C. P. 465, remarked upon and distinguished. The copy filed gave the date of the mortgage as the 13th March, 1877, instead of 1876. Held, immaterial, as the mistake could have misled no one. Ib.

Affidavit Verifying Statement.] - No affidavit is necessary to verify the statement of the mortgagee's interest required by the Act on re-filing. Armstrong v. Ausman, 11

Assignee for the Benefit of Creditors. |- An assignee for the benefit of creditors under a general assignment made and registered pursuant to the Assignments and Preferences Act, R. S. O. 1887 c. 124, may re-new a chattel mortgage made in favour of his assignor, without the execution and registration of a specific assignment of that mortgage. A renewal statement, in itself in proper form, alleging title through the assignment for the benefit of creditors, is sufficient. Fleming v. Ryan, 21 A. R. 39.

Continuing Duty.]—A mortgagee, to re-tain his priority, must, under 12 Vict. c. 74, continue to re-file his mortgage after the first re-filing at the end of the first year. Kissock v. Jarvis, 9 C. P. 156.

Coutinuing Duty.]—Kissock v. Jarvis, o C. P. 156, as to the necessity of the re-over a provided of a chattel mortrage from year to your approved of and followed, notwithstand-ing the subsequent legislation contained in R. S. O. 1877 c. 119. Beaumont v. Cramp, 45 U. C. R. 355.

Fixtures—Sale Subject to Mortgage— Naw Mortgage by Purchaser.]—The owner of land upon which there are fixtures, such as machinery in a mill, has the right to sever the chattels from the realty; and therefore a mortgage by him upon the fixtures was held not to be prejudiced by his subsequent mortgage of the land. The mortgage was not re-filed within the year, but within the year, the mortgagor having sold the fixtures, the purchaser gave the mortgagee a mortgage of the same in substitution of the original mortgage, containing a recital of that mortgage, and of the sale of the fixtures to him subject thereto, and that he had obtained an extension of time on condition of giving this mort-gage for the sum unpaid:—Held, that the omission to re-file did not give the mortgagee omission to re-file did not give the mortgagee of the land priority, for he could not be considered a "subsequent mortgagee in good faith for valuable consideration," within the statute; and that the prior severance of the fixtures continued down to the giving of the second mortgage, which carried it on by its recitals and legal effect. Semble, that if the chattel mortgage were paid off, the mortgage of the realty would then be entitled to the fixtures. Rose v. Hope, 22 C. P. 482.

Immaterial Mistakes. |-- An immaterial variation between a mortgage and the copy filed does not invalidate the re-filing. Walker v. Niles, 18 Gr. 210.

A mistake in the copy in the number of the lot where the chattels were, was held to be immaterial under the circumstances.

Improper Charge.]—The statement contained an item of $2.25, as paid for re-filing, which the mortgagee had no right to charge: —Held, not to avoid the re-filing. Walker Niles, 18 Gr. 210.

Indorsement—Note not Paid within the Year. —In November, 1881, the plaintiff in-dorsed a note for the accommodation of M. for 8550 at three months, and as indemnity against any liability in respect thereof, or of any renewal, took from M. a chattel mortagainst any innitry in respect thereon, or of any renewal, took from M. a chattel mortgage which was only renewed once, although the note remained unpaid until the 4th November, 1882, when $$50$ was paid by M. on account, and a new note at six months was given for $$500$, in which the plaintiff joined as maker instead of as indorser, and after this note became due and remained unpaid for six months the plaintiff obtained a second mortgage from M., reciting that he had indorsed a note for $$550$, which had not been paid, and that plaintiff was still liable thereon, or on the renewal thereof, and was liable to be called upon at any time to pay the amount, and the plaintiff was called upon to pay, and actually did pay the note and interest amounting to about $$500$. In an interpleader proceeding at the instance of an execution creditor of M.:—Held, that the mortgage was yold as against such creditor. The distinction between mortgages under s. 1, The distinction between mortgages under s. The distinction between mortgages under s. 1, and under s. 6 of the Act, considered and acted on. The distinction between the two classes of cases provided for by s. 6 considered. Keough v. Price, 27 C. P. 309; O'Donohoe v. Wilson, 42 U. C. R. 320; Ontario Bank v. Wilcox, 43 U. C. R. 463, commented on. Barber v. Macpherson, 13 A. R. 356.

Insufficient Information.] - "Statement of amount still due from the mortgagor named in the original bill of sale by way of mortgage, of which the annexed is a true copy: that is to say, $212 for principal, and the sum of $12.50 for interest, amounting in the whole to the sum of $224.50:"—Held, not to sufficiently exhibit the interest of the mortgagee in the goods claimed, nor shew the principal and interest due thereon. O'Halloran v. Sills, 12 C. P. 465.

Interest Calculated in Advance.]—A statement made on the 28th January, stated the amount due for interest as it would be on the 31st, the day of re-filing:—Held, no objection. Fraser v. Bank of Toronto, 19 U. C. R. 381.

New Act.]—Mortgages filed under 12 Vict. c. 74, held not to require re-filing under 20 Vict. c. 3, which repeals it. Culloden v. McDowell, 17 U. C. R. 359; Grand Trunk R. W. Co. v. Lees, 9 C. P. 249.

Omission to Renew—Subsequent Assignment for Creditors.]—One T. B. being indebted to J. B., the plaintiff, gives bim a mortgage, covering the goods in question in this interpleader, to secure 8640, dated the 5th February, 1858, which was filed on the 8th, and was not subsequently re-filed. On the 12th February, 1858, T. B. executed an assignment to R. and C. for the benefit of creditors, subject to this mortgage. On the 29th January, 1859, T. B., made an absolute bill of sale to J. B. of the same goods, which was filed on the 2nd February, 1859. B. and A., the defendants in this suit, recovered a judgment against T. B. on the 12th September, 1861, Jupon which a fi. fa. was issued, and the goods in dispute seized on the 30th December, 1861. J. B., the mortgage, never had possession of the goods in question:—Held, I. That J. B. never having taken possession of the property, and no copy of the mortgage having been filed within thirty days before the year expired from its first filing, it ceased to be valid against the creditors of T. B., or any subsequent purchaser or mortgage in good faith for value. 2. That the due execution and proper filing of the assignment for the benefit of creditors made it a valid instrument, and that upon the expiration of the series of the sale of the 29th January, 1850, vested no title in the plaintiff, inasmuch as the interest of the grantor was vested in the trustees for creditors, from whom the plaintiff did not purchase bonn fide and for value. The verdict for defendants was therefore upheld. Boynton v. Boyd, 12 C. P. 334.

Omission to Renew — Possession — Execution.]—A mortgage having omitted to renew a chattel mortgage, delivered to his bailiff, after the time limited for such renewal, a warrant directing the seizure of the goods, which the bailiff accordingly seized, but left them in the possession of the mortgagor's son, who resided with his father on the premises, and his son-in-law, who resided on the adjoining premises, taking from them an instrument under seal, wheefby they acknowledged that they had received the goods under and by virtue of the warrant from him, and undertook to deliver them to him on demand. Subsequently the sheriff, at the suit of a creditor who had obtained execution against the mortgagor's goods, seized the goods in question:—Held, that what had taken place did not constitute such a taking of possession as is required by the statute. Per Meredith, C.J.—In any event, the act of taking possession after the time for renewal has expired must amount to a new delivery or new transfer by the mortgager. Per Meredith, C.J., also.—A creditor, prior to the placing of his execution in the sheriff's hands, has no locus standi to attack a mortgage invalid for want of renewal. Clarkson v. McMaster, 25 S. C. R. 96, commented on. Per Meredith, C.J., also.—Sections 38 and 40 of 57 Vict. c. 37 (O.), do not apply to a mortgage which has ceased to be valid for want of renewal. Heaton v. Flood, 29 O. R. S7.

Possession Taken.] — Where possession has been taken under default in the mortgage within a year from its filing, re-filing is not necessary. Ross v. Elliott, 11 C. P. 221.

Possession Taken.]—One S., on 25th March, 1838, executed a mortrage to plaintift, payable the following October, with a provise that on default the plaintiff, instead of selling the goods, might take possession as absolute owner. On default being made plaintiff accordingly went through a form of taking possession, without, however, any change in the possession, or any assignment of the mortgagor's interest taken or registered, and executed a lease of the goods to the mortgagor After default, and before this taking of possession by plaintiff, an execution against the goods was placed in the sheriff's hands, but no seizure was made until November, 1809, after the expiration of the mortgage, which had not been renewed:—Held, that the transaction between the parties was void, and that the execution bound the goods. Chamberlian v. Green, 20 C. P. 304.

Renewal Statement—Assignment between Making and Filing.]—A chattel mortgage does not cease to be valid as against creditors, &c., if otherwise regularly renewed, because a renewal statement, made and verified by the mortgagee before an assignment by him of the mortgage, is not filed until after such assignment. Daniel v. Daniel, 29 O. R. 493.

Sale.]—R. the customer of a bank, executed a chattel mortgage on his household effects, by way of collateral security, in favour of the bank, which was allowed to run into default, whereupon the mortgages proceeded to a sale, and appointed W. their bailiff for that purpose, who had the property appraised and sold it to the plaintiff, a creditor of B., by private sale for $900; and executed a bill of sale thereof. The plaintiff, in his evidence, swore that B. owed him about $1,000, and he thought there was ample security for the $900 and also additional security for B.'s indebtedness to himself, and that the goods seemed to be worth about $5,000; and the plaintiff, without disturbing in any way the possession of B., rented the property to him, and he remained, as he had theretofore been, in possession. In order effectually to carry out the proposed arrangement with B., the bank by special power appointed their local manager agent to accept the chattel mortgage and as such agent to make the affidavits required to be made by mortgagees.—Held, that as under the circumstances stated the chattel mortgage was satisfied quoad the goods, the mortgage was satisfied quoad the goods, the mortgage could not properly be re-filed; and notwith-standing the continued possession of the mort gagor it was not necessary for the plaintiff to file a bill of sale from the bank to himself in order to preserve his rights as against execution creditors of, or bona fide purchasers from, the mortgagor. Carlisle v. Tait, 7 A. R. 10.

Sale after Time for Renewal.]—A chattel mortgage which has expired by effluxion of time under R. S. O. 1877, c. 119, s. 10, and has not been renewed or re-filed, ceases to be valid as against all creditors of the mortgagor then existing; and a sale on default in good faith, made by the mortgage, with the consent of the mortgagor, though good as between the parties to the mortgage, only passes to the purchaser a title subject to the rights of any creditors who may take steps to follow the goods. Barker v. Lecson, 1.0, R. 114.

Statement Insufficient—Affidavit taken by Quebex Notary.]—The statement on the renewal of a chattel mortgage, attached to a copy of the original mortgage, was merely: "E. S. R. in account with M. M. R." (the mortgages); and then, "To amount of money secured by chattel mortgage, $2,200; interest thereon for one year at the rate in said mortgage and the said thereon for one year at the rate in said mortgage and said and said and said and said and said and said mortgage; that the above statement shewed her interest in the property claimed by virtue of the said statement, there will be due and owing to me this deponent, on the 6th February next, from E. S. R., the mortgager, &c., the sum of $2,464, being the $2,200 mentioned therein, and $264 as the interest thereon, under the terms of the said bill of sale," &c.: that no payment on account of either principal money or interest had been made to her or to any one on her behalf: "that the said statement is correct;" and that the said mortgage had been kept on foot for the purpose only of securing the payment of the money owing to the deponent by the terms thereof, and not for any fraudulent purpose. The affidavit was sworn before a notary public in the Province of Quebec:—Held, that the statement and affidavit were insufficient, as the statement of the amount due for principal and interest, nor did the athleavit allege that the statement of the amount of the statement, it was insufficient for that purpose. Held, on appeal, without expressing any opinion as to the other points, that the affidavit was bad, as the notary public in Quebec had no power to take it. Reynolds v. Williamson, 25 C. P.

Subsequent Purchasers.]—The subsequent purchasers and mortgagees mentioned in s. 10 of the Chattel Mortgage Act, R. S. O. 1877 c. 119, are those becoming such after the expiration of a year from the filing of the mortgage. Where therefore the mortgage was registered in August, 1878, and the plaintiff purchased the property in March, 1879, and the mortgage was not re-filled;—Held, that the plaintiff was not entitled, as against the defendant, who took the property from him in December, 1879. Hodgins v. Johnson, 5 A. R. 449.

Subsequent Purchasers—Time.]—The plaintiff held a chattel mortgage made by one G., which was dated 9th May, 1879, and filed 13th May. Defendants' mortgage from the same mortgagor was dated in the December following. On the 12th April, 1880, the plaintiff made affidavit of the amount due up to the 10th April, and re-filed the mortgage under R. S. O. 1877 c. 119, s. 10. The defendants were landlords of the mortgagor and illegally distrained for rent, whereupon the plaintiff brought trover for goods levied upon by them and contained in his mortgage:—Held, that the defendants were neither creditors nor subsequent purchasers or mortgages within the statute, and therefore could not object to the mortgage because the affidavit verifying the statement of the amount due was not made within the thirty days next preceding the expiration of the year. Semble, that such affidavit and statement should be made within the thirty days. Griffin v. McKenzie, 46 U. C. R. 93.

Sufficient Statement.]—The statement set out in this case, filed upon the renewal of a mortgage, was held sufficient. Saulter v. Carruthers, 9 L. J. 158.

Time.]—Where a mortgage was re-filed forty-seven days before a year from the first filing, it was held insufficient, the statute requiring that such re-filing shall take place "within thirty days next preceding" the expiration of one year. Beaty v. Fouler, 10 U. C. R. 382.

Time.]—Held, that where the first filing was on the 15th May, 1852, a re-filing on the 14th May, 1853, was clearly in time. Armstrong v. Ausman, 11 U. C. R. 498.

Time.]—The ordinance of the North-West Territories relating to chatted mortgages, Ordinance of 1881 No. 5 provides by 8. 9. 10 that "every mortgage plot provides of this ordinance shall cease to be said as against the creditors of the person making the same after the expiration of one year from the filing thereof, unless a statement, &c. is again filed within thirty days next preceding the expiration of the said term of one year." A chattel mortgage was filed on August 12th, 1886, and registered at 4.10 p.m. of that day. A renewal of said mortgage was registered at 11.49 a.m. on August 12th, 1887;—Held, that the renewal was filed within one year from the date of the filing of the original mortgage as provided by the ordinance. In computing the time mentioned in this section the day of the original filing should be excluded and the mortgage would have had the whole of the 12th August, 1887, for filing the renewal. Thomson v. Quirk, 18 S. C. R. 695.

VII. RIGHTS AND LIABILITIES OF MORT-GAGOR AND MORTGAGEE,

1. In General.

Accounting for Profit.]—One D. held a mortgage with a power to sell upon default, the mortgagor still to be responsible for any balance. Upon default he sold and re-purchased some of the goods, which be subsequently exchanged for land. Upon an action for the balance over the amount realized by the original sale, the defendant contended that the plaintiff must be considered a trustee for him in the re-purchase, and having sold at an advance must account for the balance:-Held, that to obtain relief, application must be made to equity. Annes v. Dornan, 10

Auctioneer - Conversion of Goods.]-An auctioneer who, at the instance and on the premises of the mortgagor, sells at auction in the ordinary course the goods in a chattel mortgage, valid and in full force as regards the parties to it, and delivers possession of the goods to the purchaser, is liable to the mortgagee for conversion of the goods, although the mortgage may be void as regards although the mortgage may be void as regards creditors of the mortgage may be void. Rymill, 27 W. R. 776, 40 L. T. N. S. 744, followed. National Bank v. Rymill, 44 L. T. N. S. 767, and Barker v. Furlong, [1891] 2 Ch. 172, distinguished. Johnston v. Henderson, 28 O.

Bailiff Seizing for Rent.]-A bailiff seized certain goods under a landlord's war-rant, for rent in arrear, but did not remain in possession, or take any further steps to execute it, except that, as the jury found, the tenant was constituted the landlord's agent to take possession of the goods for him under the warrant. After more than a month, a person having a mortgage on the goods took possession under it, and removed the goods, for which the landlord replevied:—Held, that the zetion could not be maintained. Roc v. Roper, 23 C. P. 76.

Damages for Seizure-Mortgagee's Action.]—A mortgagee may maintain an action against a person seizing and selling the property mortgaged, the right of possession of the goods at the time of such sale being rightfully in the mortgagor, and the reversionary estate in the plaintiff as mortgagee. McLeod v. Mercer, 6 C. P. 197.

Execution - Equity of Redemption.]-Semble, that under an execution against a mortgagor, the sheriff may seize goods in the possession of the mortgagee, so that he may expose them to view, although he can sell only the equity of redemption. Smith v. Co-bourg and Peterborough R. W. Co., 3 P. R.

Execution — Mortgagee's Interest.]—M. sold goods to P., and took back a mortgage on song goods to F., and took back a mortgage on them for the price, together with P.'s note. Afterwards, and after 22 Vict. c. 96, M., who was then insolvent, assigned the mort-gage to F., and F.'s agent received possession of the goods, most of which, if not all, had been originally purchased by M. from F., and were still unpaid for. The goods having been seized under an execution against M., an inter pleader issue was directed between F. and the judgment creditor:—Held, that the assignment of the mortgage to F, was void under 22 Vict. c. 96; but that, putting it aside, M., as mortgagee, had no interest which aside, M., as mortgagee, and no merees when could be sold under execution, and that F., therefore having possession, was entitled to hold the goods as against the execution creditor. Ferrie v. Cleghorn, 19 U. C. R. 241.

Foreclosure - Chattels and Realty.] -The mortgagee of chattels, like the mortgagee of real estate, is entitled to a foreclosure in default of payment of the amount secured by the mortgage. Cook v. Flood, 5 Gr. 463. Where a party held a mortgage on chattel property, and also mortgages on real estate, the court refused to make a decree for sale of the chattels and of foreclosure as to the realty. 1b.

Insurance Pursuant to Covenant— Assignment of Mortgage.]—Promissory notes for the purchase money of goods were secured by a chattel mortgage given on behalf of the purchasers containing a covenant to insure for the benefit of the mortgagee, who discounted the notes with the plaintiffs and assigned the chattel mortgage but did not transfer the insurance to them, the loss under which was payable to himself. The policy was afterwards renewed by the purchasers' firm, but it did not appear that the renewal was assigned to the mortgagee, or the loss made payable to him. Subsequently a fire occurred and the purchasers' firm assigned the insurance money to the plaintiffs, with whom they kept an account, as security for their general indebtedness, and the plaintiffs received and applied it on the notes above mentioned, but afterwards sought to apply it in payment of other indebtedness of the purchasers :—Held, that the plaintiffs were bound to apply the insurance money, for the benefit of the mortgagee, who was the equitable assignee of the policy under which the money was paid, and entitled to have it applied in payment of the notes to pay which, as between him and the purchasers, it was primarily ap-plicable, and the plaintiffs took the money subject to the equitable rights of the mortgages of which they had notice. W. Bank v. Courtemanche, 27 O. R. 213. Western Merger.]—A. C., owner of certain lands, mortgaged them to a loan company, and afterwards executed two successive mortgages to cne H. Afterwards, in 1887, A. C. sowed a quantity of fall wheat, and in January, 1888, made a chattel mortgage of this wheat to G., made a chattel mortgage of this wheat to to, which chattel mortgage was properly regis-tered. On 4th April, 1888, before the har-vest under pressure from H., A. C. conveyed to H. the lands for a consideration equal to what was due on the three mortgages, and a small additional unsecured debt due from him to H. On the 5th April, 1888, H. leased the property to A. J. C. for a year. When the fall wheat was ripe, A. J. C. cut and harvested it, but G. sent and seized it under his chattel mortgage, and A. J. C. now brought this action to recover its value:—Held, that on his taking the conveyance from A. C., the rights of H., as mortgagee, were merged, for the evidence pointed strongly against an intention on his part that the mortgage debts should remain, and therefore G.'s right as chattel remain, and therefore G.'s right as chattel mortrague became prior in point of time to the title of H., and the action must be dismissed. As mortgagee, H. would no doubt have had the right to take possession of the crops as part of his security. Cameron v. Gibson, 17 O. R. 233.

Mortgagee Carrying on Business.] The plaintiff, carrying on the business of a druggist, mortgaged his stock-in-trade to the defendant; the instrument by which it was effected, stipulating that the defendant should take possession of the stock and premises, to hold for four months in order to secure repayment of money advanced, and power was given to the mortgagee to add new stock so as to keep up the business. Default was made in payment, and thereafter a large amount of stock was added, some of the money being expended by the defendant with the assent of the plaintiff; other money being part of the profits of the business was thus reinvested in new stock; some of the old stock remaining in specie. The matter was reremaining in specie. The matter was referred to the master at Belleville, to take the accounts of the dealings between the parties. Before the master made his report, the plainiff applied on petition for the appointment of a receiver, on the ground that the mortgage had been paid in full:—Held. (1) that as the had been paid in full:—Held. new stock belonged to the mortgagee himself and the plaintiff could therefore have no claim upon it, and as the master had not yet found which party was indebted to the other, his finding would not be anticipated by the appointment of a receiver; (2) that although the defendant's right on default, was to sell the original stock en bloc after notice, still the defendant was at liberty to add further capital and stock to the business, but not to the prejudice of the mortgagor so as to improve him out of his estate; and so long as the plaintiff chose to allow the business to go on under the defendant's control, he had the right so to conduct it, subject to being called on to account. Foster v. Morden, 29 Gr. 25.

Negligence—"Staughter Sale."]—A mortgaged in possession who sells the mortgaged goods in a reckless and improvident manner is liable to account not only for what he actually received, but for what he might have obtained for the goods had he acted with a proper regard for the interest of the mortgagor. Rennie v. Block, 26 S. C. R. 356.

Priorities—Chattel Mortgage not Filed— Subsequent Assignment for the Benefit of Creditors.]—See McAllister v. Forsyth, 12 S. C. R. I.

Priorities—Execution — Assignee in Insolvenu,]—An execution against an insolvent debtor is superseded by an attachment in insolvency, and a chattel mortgage void against an execution creditor, but good against an assignee in insolvency, prevails over an execution so superseded. Ontario Bank v. Wilcox, 43 U. C. R. 460.

Priorities — Execution.] — On the 9th January M. & Co. mortgaged goods to R., which on the 19th the sheriff seized under a fi. fa. On the 22nd February, while the sheriff was in possession, M. & Co. made a bill of sale to the plaintiff. The mortgage to R. was satisfied after the seizure, and before the sale by the sheriff, (which took place by consent of all parties,) but whether before or after the execution of the bill of sale to the plaintiff did not appear:—Held, that the fi. fa. was entitled to prevail over the plaintiff's claim. Taylor v. Jarvis, 15 U. C. R. 21.

Priorities—Execution.]—H. and I. being indebted to a bank, arranged with the plaintiff T., the bank's agent at H., where the debt arcse, that in order to secure the same a mortgage should be given to him and the other plaintiff, the bank's general manager in Canada. T. had no express power to bind the bank to take this security, and his co-plaintiff was at the time absent from the country, and ignorant of the transaction. A mortgage was accordingly drawn up, dated 22nd June. 1867, and purported to be made between H., I., and S., of the first part, and the plaintiffs, as trustees for the bank, of the second part, re-D-27 citing that the parties of the first part were indebted to the bank in certain bills of exchange, and witnessing that H, in consideration, &c., assigned to the plaintiffs the household furniture in his residence, with a proviso that the mortgage was to be void on payment by parties of the first part of the bills of exchange. On the court of directors in England being apprised of the transaction both by T. and his co-plaintiff, in a report made to them by the latter in condemnation of it, they at once repudiated it, and on 22nd August following wrote T. distinctly to that effect; and when their letter reached him, on the 5th September, the goods were still in H.'s possession, and nothing had been done under the mortgage beyond recording it. On the 7th September T, resigned his position in the bank, and on 16th September defendant's execution against the goods of H. and I. was placed in the sheriff's hands. In the following October the bank instructed T.'s successor to realize the security:—Held, that the bank by their repudiation of the mortgage had let in defendant's execution, and that their subsequent ratification of T.'s acts and adoption of the security could not defeat the writ, Taylor v, Ainslic, 19 C. P. 78.

Priorities—Execution.]—Where a sheriff seizes goods under writs of execution, and a mortgage lays claim to them under a chattel mortgage, the fact that he subsequently directs the sheriff to sell under the executions, does not necessarily amount to a waiver of his claim under the mortgage. Segsworth v. Meriden Silver Plating Co., 3 O. R. 413.

Priorities — Rent.] — The plaintiff was membragee of certain goods of one F. G., a tenant of his father, the defendant C. G. The landlord on 17th February, 1883, went to the house of the tenant, and declared that he seized everything for rent. He touched nothing and made no inventory. On 24th February he went again and told the tenant's wife that the property had been seized for rent and to let un one take anything away, when she promised to do her best for him. On 5th March the plaintiff, hearing that the goods were going to be seized for rent, took possession under his mortgage and removed the goods. Av bailiff went the next day for taxes in arrear, and the landlord gave him a distress warrant to take goods for rent. The bailiff then took the goods which had been removed, and on the tenant waiving an inventory, advertising, &c., sold them within two days to a nephew of the landlord;—Held, that the landlord's two visits of the 17th and 24th February, did not amount to a distress:—Quære, whether a tenant can waive all statutable formalities as to inventory, &c., as regards the mortgagee. Whimseli v. Giffard, 3 O. R. 1.

Removal of Gas Fixtures.]—T. K. & Co. carrying on business as gas fitters and plumbers, contracted verbally with D., an hotel-keeper, to supply a new hotel he was erecting with various articles in the way of their trade, which were to be paid for as the work progressed. D. afterwards left this Province on account of ill-health, having previously executed a power of attorney to one S., authorizing him to carry on his business during his absence. T. K. & Co, having discovered that D.'s estate was greatly involved, refused to proceed with their contract unless secured for their work and materials; whereupon S., with a view of inducing them to complete their contract, in pursuance of a previous arrangement, escented and such attorney a chartel morragae except and such attorney a chartel morragae them payment of their demand. At the time of the escention of this instrument D, was dead, but this fact was not known to the parties until some time after the completion of the work:—Held, that T. K. & Co. were not under this morragae entitled to remove any of the fittings put in the hotel; their only remedy being for the price of their work and material under their contract with D. Jacques v. Worthington, 7 Gr. 192, distinguished and approved of. McQuesten, v. Thompson, 2 E. & A. 167.

Sheriff Seizing—Order for Possession.]

—A mortgage having taken possession, as he alleged, under the mortgage, the sheriff seized the property under an execution against the mortgager, and the mortgage then applied for an order to have it delivered up to him again:—Held, that there was no power to make such order. Smith v. Cobourg and Peterborough R. W. Co., 3 P. R. 113.

Trespass — Jus Tertii.]—In an action against a division court bailiff for selling under execution a horse which the plaintif claimed to be exempt, it appeared that at the time of the seizure and sale the horse was included in a chattel mortgage given by the plaintiff to one M.:—Held, that the defendant could not set up the right of the mortgage as a defence. McMartin v. Hurlburt, 2 A, R. 146.

Trespass—Agent.]—The treasurer of an insurance company, for whom he has taken a mortgage in his own name, may sue a wrong doer for taking the goods mortgaged, although he has no beneficial interest in them, Brodie v, Benjimin, 16 U. C. R. 207.

See, also, Baldwin v. Benjamin, ib. 52.

Trespass—Mortgagee not in Possession.]—A mortgagee who has not taken actual possession, is not liable in trespass for an injury occasioned by the goods mortgaged. Campbell v. Reid. 14 U. C. R. 305.

M. & Co. having wrongfully placed a quantity of stone on the plaintiff's land, afterwards mortgaged it with other property to defendant. Default had been made in payment, but the defendant had not taken possession, or interfered in any way with the stone; when asked to remove it, however, he had refused, and forbade the plaintiff doing so himself:—Held, that as mortgage he was not liable to the plaintiff in trespass for allowing the stone to remain. B.

Trespass—Sheriff.]—An action of trespass will not lie by a mortgagee against a sheriff for seizing goods which were subject to a mortgage, but of which the mortgagors had possession. Street v. Hamilton, 5 O. S. 658.

Trespass — Sheriff.]— B. mortgaged to plaintiff certain goods, with a covenant that in case of default in payment, or of B.'s attempting to dispose of the goods, the plaintiff might take possession and sell or retain them for his own use, but there was no clause authorizing B. to remain in possession until default:—Held, that the plaintiff had a sufficient right to possession to maintain trespass against the sheriff seizing under a fi. fa. against B., the jury having found the mortgage to be bonâ fide. Porter v. Flintoff, 6 C. P. 335.

Trespass—Sheriff.]—Plaintiff owning a stock of goods and some furniture and shop fixtures, sold out to one S., taking a mortgage in security, which was duly filed. S. continued to carry on business, bringing in other goods, till be became involved and absconded, when the sheriff under an attachment seized all the property being distinguishable, that the sheriff was liable for trespass. Boys v. Smith, S. C. P. 248.

The sheriff being in possession under the attachment refused to execute a writ of replevin at the suit of the plaintiff, two instalments of whose mortgage were overdue:—Held, that the sheriff was liable for not executing the writ. S. C., 9 C. P. 27.

2. Possession.

Absence of Re-demise Clause - Contracts by Mortgagor.]—S., who was engaged in the lumber business, becoming indebted to the suppliants in a large sum of money, mortgaged to them by two separate instruments certain lumber, logs, and timber as security for the payment of such indebtedness. The first mortgage was executed on the 18th December, 1876, and the second on the 11th May, By a collateral arrangement made at the time the first mortgage was executed, and by a proviso contained in the second inden-ture, S. was allowed to remain in possession of the property, and to attend to its manufacture and sale for the benefit of the suppliants. On the 15th May, 1878, S. became insolvent, but prior to such insolvency the suppliants had taken possession of the lumber, logs, and timber, and thereafter obtained a release of S.'s equity of redemption from his assignee. On the 6th June, 1877, while S. was in possession of the property in the manner above mentioned, by a letter addressed to the Minister of Inland Revenue he offered and agreed to pay the Government the sum of $2 per 1,000 ft. b.m on all lumber to be shipped by him through the canals during the then current season, and also the whole amount of his indebtedness for canal tolls and dues then in arrear. This offer was accepted by the Government, and the agreement was acted upon by S. during the season of 1877. In 1878, after the suppliants had taken possession of the property and begun to ship the lumber for themselves without paying the sum agreed upon between S. and the Government, the collector of slide dues refused to allow such lumber to pass through the canals, and caused the same to be seized and detained until the amount due upon it in respect of said agreement was fully paid:—Held, there being no re-demise clause or proviso in the mortgage of the 18th December, 1876, whereby the mortgagor might have remained in possession until default, the Judge, sitting in the court of exchequer, not as a court of appeal, but in an Ontario case to administer the law of Ontario, was bound by the decisions in McAulay v. Allen, 20 C. P. 417, and Samuel v. Coulter, 28 C. P. 240, to hold that, upon the execution of such mortgage, the suppliants were entitled to immediate possession of the property granted thereby, and might, if they had pleased, at any time have exercised their right to sell thereunder without the mort-gagor's intervention or consent. But, while the terms of the second mortgage reserved to the suppliants the right to dictate into what description of lumber the logs should be man ufactured, with whom alone contracts for the sale thereof might be entered into, and to whom upon sales it should be consigned, it was expressly provided therein that the business of such manufacture and sale should be transacted through the intervention of the mortgagor for the benefit of the suppliants. The effect and intent of the second mortgage, therefore, was to make the suppliants princi-pals and S., the mortgagor, their agent in carrying on the business thereafter with their property, and for their sole benefit, until the property, and for their sole benefit, until the property should be sold or they were paid their claim. (2) As such agent S, must be held to have had sufficient authority to bind the suppliants by his agreement with the Government, which, under all the circumstances, was a reasonable and proper one and made in the interest of the suppliants. (3) But whether S. was, or was not, authorized to make such an agreement with the Government, the suppliants adopted, ratified, and confirmed the agreement by acting under it and advancing moneys to pay the Government in accordance with its terms after they must be held to have had full knowledge of the nature and effect of it. Merchants Bank of Canada v. The Queen, 1 Ex. C. R. 1.

Breach of Agreement.]-Plaintiff mortgaged to defendant, with a proviso for re-demption on payment of £125 on the 20th October, and an agreement that the plaintiff should account to defendant for the price of any of the goods sold by him in the course of business before that day, and that on default, or in case plaintiff should attempt to sell or dispose of the goods without defendant's con-sent in writing, defendant might enter and take said goods. On the same day defendant gave the plaintiff a writing authorizing him to proceed to sell the goods that day mortgaged to him, "and to continue selling the same until further notice in writing, subject nevertheless to the proviso of the said bill of sale in other respects." The plaintiff, on of she in other respects. The planta, va-the 17th October, mortgaged the same goods to one C. to secure a debt:—Held, a viola-tion of the agreement between plaintiff and defendant, and that defendant was entitled to enter and take possession of the Closter v. Headley, 12 U. C. R. 364. the goods.

Collateral Agreement.]—The plaintiff gave a chattel mortgage to H. to secure certain money, with a proviso enabling the mortand money, with a provise enabling the mort-gages to take possession and sell in case the goods should be taken in execution by any creditor of the mortgager. The goods were so taken, and the defendant, to whom the mortgage had been assigned by H., took pos-session and sold under it, for which the plaintiff sued in the action, alleging that H., the mortgagee, verbally agreed to pay these executions which were made part of the money secured :- Held, that defendant as assignee, took subject to such agreement (which did not took subject to such agreement (which did not right the terms of the mortgage), though without notice of it; and that the plaintiff was therefore improperly nonsuited. Martin v. Berman, 45 U. C. R. 205.

Evidence of Identity.] - The mortgage contained a proviso that in case the mort-gagor should attempt to sell or part with the gagor should attempt to sen or part with the possession of or remove out of the county the goods, or any part of them, the mortgagee might take possession of and sell them, and break open doors, &c., for that purpose. The mortgagee, claiming under this proviso, brought trover for the goods, which defendant had seized under a distress for rent. It are had seized under a distress for rent. It appeared that the goods were seized in October in the house mentioned in the mortgage, which had been executed in the previous August, and were of the same kind and description as those set out in the mortgage:—Held, sufficient evidence that they were the same goods as those mortgaged. Nattrass v. Phair, 37 U. C. R. 153.

U. C. R. 153.
The defendant, it appeared, in order to seize the goods under the distress, broke into the house by forcing open the window. Quaere, as to the right of action of the plaintiff (the mortgagee) therefor. A new trial was granted, in order to ascertain the facts more fully.

Immediate Possession.] - A chattel mortgage need not be under seal; and when it contains no re-demise, the mortgagee may take immediate possession. Paterson v. Maughan, 39 U. C. R. 371.

Immediate Possession.]—Held, following McAulay v, Allen, 20 C. P. 417, that an action will not lie by a mortgagor of chattels against the mortgagee, for seizure thereof before default in payment, where there is no re-demise clause. Samuel v. Coulter, 28 C. P. 240.

Implied Right to Possession.] - A Implied Right to Possession. A chattel mortgage in the usual form on cer-tain goods to secure the payment of $1,700 by half-genryl instalments, contained no re-demise clause. It was provided, however, that on default of payment, &c., or in case of the mortgagor attempting to sell or part with the possession of the goods without the mortgagee's consent in writing, &c., the mort-gagee might enter and take the goods, and sell the same; and also on default of payment the mortgagee might distrain; and further, that it should not be incumbent on the mortgagee to sell and dispose of the goods, but in case of such default should peaceably and quietly have, hold, and occupy the said goods without the let, &c., of the mortgagor. Before any default was made the mortgagee entered and seized and sold the goods, for which the mort-gagor brought an action, the first and second counts being in trespass and trover, and the third count being for seizing and selling the goods without the plaintiff's consent before default made, whereby the plaintiff was deprived of his right to redeem, &c.:—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to recover on the third count, the plaintiff being entitled to the restitution of his property on the performance of the condition on which he mortgaged it, which the condition of which he mortgaged it, which the mortgagee by his wrongful act had pre-vented from being accomplished. Bingham v. Bettinson, 30 C. P. 438. See Boys v. Smith, 9 C. P. 27, affirmed on appeal, 6 L. J. 182.

Implied Right to Possession.]-In a chattel mortgage containing no re-demise clause there may be an implied contract that the mortgagor shall remain in possession until default, of equal efficacy with an express clause to that effect; and such an implied contract necessarily arises from the nature of the instrument, unless it be very expressly excluded by its terms. Porter v. Flintoff, 6 C. P. 335, distinguished. Dedrick v. Ashdown, 15 S. C. R. 227.

Jus Tertii.]—The plaintiff mortgaged his goods to A., of whom the defendant was administratrix. The goods came into the possession of defendant, but under what circumstances did not appear. The mortgage contained an agreement that on default the mortgage might take possession, and a statement that delivery of possession was given at the time of executing the mortgage. There was no evidence that the mortgage money had been paid. The plaintiff afterwards executed three other mortgages of the same goods to other parties, each containing a similar agreement as to default, and a similar statement as to delivery of possession:—Held, that the plaintiff could not recover either in trover or detinne, and that the defendant might, as against him, set up the right of the other mortgagees. Ruttan v. Reamish, 10 C. P. 90.

Mortgagor Selling-Verbal The plaintiff mortgaged to H. B. certain goods, the mortgage containing a proviso for a defeazance on payment within a year, and covenants for payment, and for entry on nonpayment, or in case the mortgagor should sell, &c., the goods or any of them without the mortgagee's written assent. The usual statement as to putting the mortgagee in possession was struck out. H. B. assigned to defendant. Subsequently the plaintiff claiming to have the defendant's yerbal assent, which the defendant wholly denied, sold some of the goods to H. B., whereupon defendant took the goods and removed them off the premises but they were forcibly brought back by plaintiff, and seized by his landlord for rent. Defendant then replevied the goods and sold them by auction. The plaintiff having sued defendant for the taking and conversion, the jury found that defendant verbally consented to the sale:—Held, that defendant was entitled to take the goods; that even if in equity a verbal assent would be sufficient if admitted or clearly proved to have been given and acted upon, the evidence here failed to establish such assent :- Held, also, that even if plaintiff could recover it would only be to the extent of his interest in the goods. Quare, as to the effect of the absence of the re-demise clause on the particular form of this mort-gage. Bunker v. Emmany, 28 C. P. 438.

Mortgagor Selling—Verbul Assent.]—A chattel mortgage contained a proviso that in case the mortgagor should attempt to sell, &c. the mortgaged goods, or any selling the mortgaged goods. The mortgagor, without such written consent, the mortgagor, without such written consent, sold a pair of horses, part of the mortgaged goods, to the plaintiff, when the defendant, the mortgage, entered and took them, and after keeping them for four days returned them to the plaintiff, who was not subsequently disturbed in his possession. The plaintiff having sued the defendant for the taking:—Held, that he was entitled to recover, for that the evidence, as set out in the case, shewed that the defendant either verbally consented to the sale or acted in such a manner as estopped him from denying that the property passed to the plaintiff. Bunker v. Eamany, 28 C. P. 438, distinguished:— Held, also, that the plaintiff could only recover damages for the four days' detention, and not for the value of the horses in addition. Loucks v. McSloy, 29 C. P. 54.

Mortgagor Attempting to Sell.]—The chattel mortgage contained no re-demise clause, but did contain a clause that the mortgage might take the goods if the mortgagor attempted to sell, dispose of, or part with the possession of the goods:—Held, that the mortgage had the right under the circumstances of this case to take the goods, although default in payment had not been made. Whimselv v. Giffard, 3 O. R. 1.

Mortgagor Attempting to Sell.]—In a chaitel mortgage of the stock-in-trade and business effects of a trader there was a proviso to the effect that if the mortgagor should attempt to sell or dispose of the said goods the mortgage might take possession of the same as in case of default of payment:—Held, that this proviso only prohibited the sale of goods other than in the ordinary course of business. Dedrick v. Ashdown, 15 S. C. R. 227.

Note Outstanding - Refusal to Allow Redemption.]—H., in consideration of his relieving C. from executions against him, procured from C. and his wife, the plaintiff, a promissory note for the amount thereof, and also a chattel mortgage on the goods of both as collateral security. He discounted the note at a bank, and with the proceeds paid off the executions. Afterwards, but before the maturity of the note, and while it was in the bank's hands, claiming that there was a breach of the mortgage by the removal of certain goods, which was disproved, and refusing to allow the mortgagors to redeem, he took the goods thereunder, and sold them, selling goods beyond the amount required satisfy the mortgage, including the plaintiff's own goods to the amount of $137.50. In an action by the plaintiff to recover the damage thereby sustained, the jury gave $275:— Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to recover: 1. The note being the principal security, and the chattel mortgage merely collateral, H. could not proceed on the mortgage while the note was thus outstanding. 2. The sale was illegal by reason of the refusal of sale was hegal by reason of the retusal of redemption. 3. Even if the sale were merely irregular in selling for a supposed breach, the plaintiff was entitled to recover the value of the excess of the goods sold, and other damages beyond nominal for her interest in the goods; and the verdict was held not excessive. A removal of goods to justify a seizure under a chattel mortgage must be seizure under a chattel mortgage must be by the mortgagors or on their behalf, and not wrongful removal by others. Cochrane v. Boucher, 3 O. R. 462.

Omission to Renew.]—E. mortgaged a horse to defendant in April. 1864, with a proviso that if he should attempt to dispose of it defendant might take possession and sell. E. did dispose of the horse to the plaintiff within a few weeks. The mortgage was not re-filed, but the defendant took another in February, 1865, for the same money with other advances. In July, having first discovered the sale, he seized under the proviso:—Held, that having neglected to re-file the mortgage and taken another, he had lost his right to seize. Courtis v. Webb, 25 U. C. R. 576.

Science before Default—Damages.]—Held, following Porter v. Flintoff, 6 C. P. 335, and Ruttan v. Beamish, 10 C. P. 90, that an action will not lie, at the suit of the mortgage of chattels against the mortgage, for science of the chattels before default in payment, where there is no proviso in the mortgage for possession by the mortgager until default; and that even if an action would lie, the jury should be told that the plaintiff could recover only to the extent of his interest in the goods and for the damage done to such interest, instead of, as in this case, for their full value, as in the case of a wrong-doer. McAulay v. Allen, 20 C. P. 417.

Time.]—A. and S. mortgaged to the plaintiff with a provise for redemption if they should within twelve months pay the plaintiff a certain debt, and duly retire and pay a certain protested bill of exchange indorsed by the plaintiff, &c., but in default of either of said provisoes, the plaintiff might enter and take possession and sell. A. and S. did not retire the bill:—Held, that the plaintiff had a right to enter and take possession without waiting for the twelve months. Eccles v. Small, 6 C. P. 479.

VIII. SPECIAL PERSONS.

Agent.]—A person advancing money belonging to others, but for which he is responsible, may take a mortgage for it in his own name. White v. Brown, 12 U. C. R. 477.

Agent.]—The fact that the debt is not due to the mortgagee himself for his own benefit, does not prevent the mortgage from being registered under the statute. Brodie v. Rutton, 16 U. C. R. 207. See, also, Balducia v. Benjamin, ib. 52.

Bank.]—Right of bank to take chattel mortgage. See In re Rainy Lake Lumber Co., Stewart v. Union Bank of Lower Canada, 15 A. R. 749.

Crown.]—The Sovereign may take a chattel mortgage from any subject, (under our Acts.) through and in the name of the head of the department to which the debt is due. McGee v. Smith, 9 C. P. S9.

Husband and Wife.]—Husband absent from the country—Mortgage by wife on furniture purchased by her—Right of husband against mortgagee. See Halpenny v. Pennock, 33 U. C. R. 229.

Husband and Wife—Security for Bar of Dover.]—A husband executed to his wife a chattel mortgage to secure her against loss by reason of her having barred her dower in certain mortgages of land. The goods were seized by his execution creditors, clammed by her, and sold pending interpleader proceedings. The husband was still living:—Held, that the money, the proceeds of the goods, must remain in court to abide further order, so that the wife could have the same security that she had by the mortgage; and if she could not hereafter become entitled to the money, it would be available to the husband's creditors:—Held, also, that the chattel mort-creditors:—Held, also, that the chattel mortgage was valid, notwithstanding anything in R. S. O. 1887 c. 125, s. 6. Morris v. Martin, 19 O. R. 564.

Partner, —One partner of a firm authorized the other to obtain an indorser, in order to raise money from a bank:—Held, that if express authority was required, this empowered the partner to mortgage all the stock-in-trade of the firm to secure such indorser, Paterson v. Maughan, 30 U. C. R. 371.

Partner, |—Where an arrangement had been entered into between the partners of a firm whereby, although moneys were to be a firm whereby, although moneys were to be a firm whereby, although moneys were to be taken in the individual name of each partner according as each was willing to accept the security of the person seeking to borrow:—Held, that a chattel mortgage so taken was valid as against creditors, and that the mortgage could properly make the affidavit of bona fides:—Semble, there is no legal objection to a loan being made by one member from the moneys of a firm, and the taking as a security therefor a chattel mortgage to himself. Hobbs Hardware Co. v. Kitchen, 17 O. R. 363.

Treasurer of Company.]—A treasurer of a mutual insurance company may take a mortgage to himself for a debt due to the company; but it is more proper to make it to the company, and they have power to take it. Brodie v. Ruttan, 16 U. C. R. 207.

IX. WHO MAY IMPEACH.

Assignee in Insolvency.]—The assignee of an insolvent mortgagor can, for the benefit of creditors, impeach a chattel mortgage for non-compliance with the Chattel Mortgage Act. Re Barrett, 5 A. R. 200.

Assignee in Insolvency.]—In trover for goods against an assignee in insolvency:—Held, following the last case, that the assignee may object to the absence of a bill of sale on an alleged sale by the insolvent, just as an execution creditor or subsequent purchaser for value may do. Snarr v. Smith, 45 U. C. R. 156.

Assignee for Creditors.]—The plaintiffs took a chattel mortgage from W., who the next day assigned to the defendant in trust for the benefit of his creditors. The defendant was not a creditor, and before any creditor had been informed of the assignment the plaintiffs, who had omitted to register their mortgage, demanded of the defendant he goods contained in it, which was refused, whereupon this action was brought. Upon the application of the defendant, with the consent of M., a creditor of W., the master in chambers ordered M. to be added as a party defendant, in order to test the validity of the plaintiffs' mortgage:—Held, that the defendant was not entitled to the order, for when the plaintiffs demanded the goods the creditors had no right, and they could not by a subsequent assent make good their claim under the assignment. Hyman v. Bourne, 5 O, R. 430.

Assignee for Creditors.]—Section 2 of 55 Vict. c. 26 (O.), does not enable an assignee for the general benefit of creditors to question the validity of the renewal of a chattel mortgage. Tallman v. Smart, 25 O. R. 661.

Assignee for Creditors.]—An assignee for the general benefit of creditors is, by virtue of 55 Vict. c, 26, s, 2 (0.), entitled to take advantage of irregularities or defects in a chattel mortgage made by the assignor to the same extent as an execution creditor, where such mortgage is by reason of such defect "void against creditors." As against such an assignee an oral agreement, of which he has notice, by the assignor to give to an indorser a chattel mortgage to secure him exainst liability, will be enforced. Kerry v. James, 21 A. R. 338.

Assignee for Creditors—Agreement to give Mortgage—Registration of Agreement.] An unregistered agreement by a debtor to give to his creditor upon default in payment, or upon demand, a chattel mortgage upon his "present and future goods and chattels" confers no title upon the creditor as against the debtor's assignee for the benefit of creditors, who takes possession before a chattel mortgage is given. Kerry v. James, 21 A. R. 338, considered. After judgment in the assignee's favour the Act 59 Vict. c. 34 (9.) was passed, and the agreement in question was registered:—Held, that this did not validate it. Hope v. May, 24 A. R. 16.

Assignee for Creditors-Agreement to Give Mortgage.]—Certain creditors, believing their debtor to be insolvent, but not desiring by taking a chattel mortgage to bring down upon him his other creditors, procured from him an agreement in writing to give, on default of payment or on demand, a chattel mortgage to secure the debt. About four months after, pursuant to the agreement, the debtor gave a chattel mortgage, within sixty days from the date of which he made an assignment for the benefit of his creditors:-Held, in an action by the assignee, that notwithstanding the agreement, the Act 54 Vict. 20 (O.), amending the Act relating to fraudulent preferences by insolvent persons, applied, that the doctrine of pressure was not applicable, and that the fraudulent intent must be presumed. Breese v. Knox, 24 A. R. 293.

Creditors—Impeaching Judgment.]—The mortgage in this case was filed upon an insufficient affidavit. The defendant was shewn to be a creditor of the mortgagor when the mortgage was given:—Held, therefore, that it was void as against him at the first; and the court refused, on the suggestion of the mortgage, to question the regularity of the defendant's judgment entered after the date of the mortgage, or an attachment issued upon it. Holmes v. Vancamp, 10 U. C. R.

Greditors—Possession.]—Q. and A. carrying on business as licensed victuallers were indebted to the defendant S., a wine merchant, to the amount of $1,551,66; and being desirous of obtaining further advances to aid them in carrying on their business, applied to S. therefor, which S. agreed verbally to make upon receiving security for such advances as well as such prior indebtedness, and Q. and A. accordingly on the 24th January, 1882, executed a mortgage to S. on all their stock-in-trade, securing $2,400, S. agreeing to make the further advances in money and goods, as they should require them in the course of their business, and he did in fact between the date of the execution of the mortgage and the 3rd March following, advance to them $300 in money and goods, and the balance of the further advance was ready to be given to them at any time during that period. The affidavit of indebtedness in the sum of $2,400 was in the usual form, and the mortgage was duly registered. On the last mentioned date Q. and A. executed a deed of assignment for creditors to the defendant C. of all their estate, whereupon S., treating this assignment as a breach of the covenant against selling or parting with possession of the goods, seized them in the hands of the assignee and sold the same, undertaking to hold the proceeds subject to the order of the Thereupon the plaintiff, a simple concourt. tract creditor of Q. and A., upon a demand due at the date of the mortgage, instituted proceedings seeking to recover payment of his claim for $101.94 and interest, and also seeking, on behalf of all the creditors of Q. and A., to have the mortgage declared void, and the amount realized on the sale of the goods paid to the assignee:—Held, that even if the fact of the mortgage being expressed on the face of it to be made for a sum greatly in excess of what it was proved was due, was such an objection as might render the security void under R. S. O. 1877 c. 119, as against creditors, yet it being clearly shewn that everything between the parties in con-nection therewith was done bona fide, and there being no creditor in a position to seize the goods if the mortgage were set aside, the plaintiff could not succeed, and the court reversed the judgment of the court below, 2 O. R. 342. Parkes v. St. George, 10 A. R.

Creditors.)—Held, that though an assignee for the benefit of creditors could not take advantage of the want of registration, yet creditors themselves might, although not creditors by judgment and execution at the time of the assignment; and following Parkes v. St. George, 2. O. R. 342, and Meriden Silver Co. v. Lee, 2. O. R. 451, that the assignment did not prevent them from impeaching it. Kitching v. Hicks, 6. O. R. 739.

Creditors.] — Held, following Parkes v. St. George. 10 A. R. 496; that the plaintiffs, not being execution creditors, could not maintain an action to set aside the mortgage on the ground that the debt was incorrectly stated therein. Hyman v. Cuthbertson, 10 O. R. 443.

Creditors.]—Where a sheriff seized goods under a writ of execution placed in his hands subsequently to the making of an unregistered chattel mortgage, and subsequently also to the mortgage having, under the power therein in that behalf, taken possession of the goods, and having sold them to a purchaser, who had also gone into possession:—Held, on interpleader, that the goods were not exigible by the sheriff, as against such purchaser. "Actual and continued change of possession," which by 55 Vict. c. 20, c. 3 (O.), is to be "open and reasonably sufficient to afford public notice thereof," has reference only to the "actual and continued change of possession" mentioned in as. I and 5 of the Chattel Mortgage Act, R. S. O. 1887 c. 125, and does not refer to possession taken by a mortgage after default. The words "persons who become creditors" in 55 Vict. c. 26, s. 4, mean persons who become execution creditors as provided for in s. 2 of that Act, unless they are simple contract creditors suing on behalf of themselves and other creditors as provided for in s. 2. Gillard v. Bollert, 24 O. R. 147.

Creditors.]—"Void as against creditors" in s. 2 of 55 Vict. c. 26 (O.), which extends the provisions of the Act respecting Mortgages and Sales of Personal Property to simple contract creditors suing on behalf of themselves and other creditors, must be read "voidable as against creditors," and a sale of the mortgaged goods by the mortgagee before an election is made by the simple contract creditors commencing proceedings to attack the mortgage cannot be impeached. Whether such an action can be brought by a simple contract creditor whose debt is not due, quarec. Merdian Britannia Co. v. Braden, 21 A. R. 352.

Creditors-Assignce for Creditors-Agreement not to Register.]—By the Act relating to chattel mortgages, R. S. O. 1887 c. 125, a mortgage not registered within five days after execution is "void as against creditors," and by 55 Vict. c. 26, s. 2 (O.), that expression is extended to simple contract creditors of the mortgagor or bargainor suing on behalf of themselves and other creditors, on behalf of themselves and other creditors, and to any assignee for the general benefit of creditors within the meaning of the Act respecting Assignments and Preferences, R. 8. 0. 1887 c. 124. By s. 4 of 55 Vict. c. 26 a mortrage so void shall not, by subsequent taking of possession by the mortgage of the things mortgaged, be made valid "as against persons who became creditors "before such taking of possession". "Held, reversing 22 A. R. 138, that under this legislation a mortgage so void is void against all the substance of t lation a mortgage so void is void against all creditors, those becoming such after the mortgagee has taken possession as well as before, and not merely as against those having executions in the sheriff's hands at the time possession is taken, simple contract creditors who have commenced proceedings to set the mortgage aside, and an assignee appointed before the mortgage was given; that the words "suing on behalf of themselves and other creditors," in the amending Act, only indicate the nature of proceedings necessary to set the mortgage aside, and that the same will enure to the benefit of the general body of creditors; and that such mortgage will not be made valid by subsequent taking of possession. Held, also, that where a mortgage is given in pur-suance of an agreement that there shall be neither registration nor immediate possession, such mortgage is, on grounds of public policy, void ad initio. Clarkson v. McMaster, 25 S.

Liquidator.]—Quære, whether the liquidator of a company under the Winding-Up Act of Canada, R. S. C. e. 129, can object to the want of registration or other formal defects in a chattel mortgage as an execution creditor or subsequent mortgage could do. In re Rainy Lake Lumber Co., Stevart v. Union liank of Lover Canada, 15 A. R. 749.

Prior Lienholder.]—The plaintiff sued for conversion of certain "withes lying on the island in the mouth of the river Moira." claimed by him under a written instrument, not under seal, whereby A., the owner, as sumed to assign the withes to the plaintiff, as security for money lent. The defendants asserted a lien on the withes for advances to A., and also alleged that there had been an actual delivery thereof to them, under which they had taken possession prior to the plaintiff's mortgage:—Held, that the instrument was a good mortgage, though without seal, and was not void for want of registration as against the defendants claiming under the alleged prior delivery. The alleged lien for advances could not be enforced against the plaintiff, who was found by the jury to be an innocent mortgagee for value; and the jury having upon contradictory evidence found against the alleged prior delivery, the refusal to disturb the verdict was affirmed. Paterson v. Maughan, 39 U. C. R. 371, approved of and followed. Hall v. Collins Bay Ralting and Forwarding Company, 12 A. R. 65.

Purchaser, —A purchaser of goods from the maker of a chattel mortgage in consideration of the discharge of a pre-existing debt is a purchaser for valuable consideration within s. 5 of the Bills of Sale Act. Williams v. Leonard & Sons, 26 S. C. R. 406.

Purchaser with Notice.]—A mortgage not sufficiently describing the goods is void as against subsequent purchasers in good faith, and notice of such mortgage to the purchaser will not affect his right. V. Coulson, 19 U. C. R. 341.

Purchaser with Notice, |—Section 9 of the Chattel Mortage Act. C. S. U. C. c. 45, provides that in the event of the permanent removal of the goods mortgaged into another county, a certified copy of the mortgage shall be filed in such county within two months from such removal, otherwise "the mortgage shall be null and void as against subsequent purchasers and mortgagees for valuable consideration, as if never executed:"—Held, that the words "in good faith," found in ss. 3 and 4 of the Act could not be imported into this section after "mortgagees;" and that a purchaser for value of the goods, though with notice of the mortgage, was entitled as against the mortgagee. Morrow v. Rorke, 39 U. C. R. 500.

Subsequent Mortgages—Consideration.]

—A defect in a chattel mortgage is not cured, as against a subsequent mortgage, by taking possession of the chattels, where the subsequent mortgage was made before such possession, although at the time of the seizure there was no default under the subsequent mortgage, and the mortgagor was by the terms of it entitled to retain possession until default. Where the full amount mentioned in a chattel mortgage is not actually advanced at the date at which it is given, it should, nevertheless, in the absence of frauduent intent or bad faith, stand as against a subsequent mortgage as a security for the amount actually advanced at the time when the subsequent mortgage as a security for the amount actually advanced at the time when the subsequent mortgage's rights accrued. Marthinson v. Patterson, 20 O. R. 125. See the next two cases.

Subsequent Mortgagee—Consideration,]—Held, that the plaintiff could not under his prior chattel mortgage, by taking possession of the mortgaged chattels, after the execution and filing of a subsequent chattel mortgage to the defendant, although before the time at which the defendant could have taken possession, hold the mortgaged goods against the defendant, where the plaintiff's mortgage did not comply with the Act, if the defendant's mortgage had complied therewith. Judgment in 20 O. R. 125, affirmed on this point. But where the amount of the consideration for the defendant's mortgage was less than the amount expressed therein and sworn to by the defendant in his affidavit of bona fides as the true amount :- Held, that the defendant's the true amount:—Then, that the elements mortgage did not comply with the Act, and the plaintiff, by reason of taking possession as before mentioned, could hold the goods against the defendant. Robinson v. Paterson, 18 U. C. R. 55, followed. Hamilton v. Har-rison, 46 U. C. R. 127, not followed. Judg-ment in 20 O. R. 125, reversed on this point. Held, also, that the "subsequent purchas-ers or mortgagees" referred to in s. 4 of R. S. O. 1887 c. 125, are those whose purchases or mortgages are accompanied by an imme-diate delivery and followed by an actual and continued change of possession, or who have complied with the provisions of the Act, and as neither the plaintiff nor the defendant came within the words, the plaintiff, being prior in point of time, had priority; but if the defendant could be treated as a subsequent mortgagee, he was not a subsequent mort-gagee in good faith, by reason of the falsity of his mortgage.—Held, lastly, doubting, but following, Moffatt v. Coulson, 19 U. C. R. 341, that notice of the plaintiff's mortgage when he took his own was not a reason for depriving the defendant of the status of a subsequent mortgagee in good faith. Marthinson v. Pat-terson, 20 O. R. 720. See the next case.

Subsequent Mortgagee — Consideration, I Taking possession of the mortgaged chattels does not make good a defective chattel mortgage as against a subsequent validly registered bond fide chattel mortgage existing at the time such possession is taken. For Burton and Maclennan, J.J. A.—It is immaterial whether the subsequent mortgage has been validly registered or not, or whether there has or has not been notice of the prior mortgage. Per Hagarty, C. J. O.—If neither mortgage has been validly registered, that which is prior in date will prevail. Per Hagarty, C. J. O., Osler, and Maclennan, J.J.A.—A misstatement of the consideration in a chattle mortgage is not, in the absence of bad faith, ipso facto a fatal defect. It is merely an element to be considered in dealing with the question of bona fides. Hamilton v. Harrison, C.A., 16th September, 1878 (not reported), considered. Judgment in 20 O. R. 720, reversed, and that in 20 O. R. 125, restored. Marthinson v. Patterson, 19 A. R. 188.

Subsequent Mortgagees With Notice, I-Where two mortgagees, the defendants in this action, took a fauntiel mortgage to themselves to secure certain moneys, acting at the time knowledge of a pre-existing debt from the mortgagor to T., and of a prior, but unrenewed, chattel mortgage to T. to secure the same:—Held, that such conduct did not amount to mala fides, and that T.'s unrenewed mortgage was void as against them under R. S. O. 1877 c. 119. Tidey v. Craib, 4 O. R. 696.

Subsequent Purchaser.]—A purchaser of goods who neglects to comply with s. 6 of the Bills of Sale Act cannot invoke its provisions as against a subsequent purchaser in good faith, and the latter, even though he also has not compiled with the Act, obtains priority. Winn v. Snider, 26 A. R. 384.

X. MISCELLANEOUS CASES.

Curing Formal Defects.]—A formal defect in a chattel mortgage may be cured by a conveyance at any time before an execution reaches the sheriff's hands, but such conveyance, whether effected by a deed orby delicery only, has no retroactive operation, and if void for intent to prefer under R. S. O. 187; c. 118, would not suffice to cure the defects. Smith v. Fair, 11 A. R. 755.

Discharge in Insolvency.]—The plaintiff, the holder of a chattel mortgage with a covenant for payment, was not scheduled in proceedings in insolvency under the Act of 1875, but he was aware of the proceedings, and the insolvent obtained a final discharge: —Held, that the debt under the chattel mortgage was not extinguished. Beaty v. Samuel, 29 Gr. 105.

Effect of Taking Two Mortgages. On the 18th July, 1851, one M. gave the plaintiff a mortfage on certain goods, which was duly registered on the following day. On the 18th July, 1852, he executed another mortgage, but to secure a smaller sum, the goods mortgaged being, with a few exceptions, the same as the first; this was registered on the 19th. On the same day, and before the registration, a fi, fa, against M. was placed in the sheriff's hands. There was not in the case of either mortgage any actual delivery of prevail; that the first mortgage was waived by taking the second, and was therefore out of the question, though in any case it would have ceased to be in force after the 18th of July, and the second filing would have been too late. McMartin v. McDougall, 10 U. C. I., 309.

Fixtures.] — The owner of land upon which there are fixtures, such as machinery in a mill, has a right to sever the clattles from the realty; and therefore a mortgage by him upon the fixtures was held, not to be prejudiced by his subsequent mortgage of the land. Ross v. Hope, 22 C. P. 482.

Hire Receipts—Transfer of Rights—Conditional Nale of Chattels.]—The purchaser of a piano under a hire receipt (by which the property was to pass to him only on completion of certain payments on account) before he had paid the required sum, agreed with his wife that she should purchase his interest and pay the balance due the vendors. There was no bill of sale registered nor such charge of possession as required by the Bills of Nale and Chattel Mortgage Act, R. S. O. 1897 c. 148:—Held, that the transaction was invalid as against execution creditors under s. 37 of that Act, and was not within s. 41, s.s. 4, which is intended to except only conditional sales of chattels within R. S. O. 1897 c. 149, which this was not:—Held, however, that the wife was entitled to be subrogated to the rights of the vendors of the piano to the extent of the payments made by her. Eby v. McTarish, 32 O. R. 187.

Insurance — Assignment — Condition Against—Chattel Mortgage—Effect of.]—See INSURANCE, III. 3 (b).

Substitution of Mortgages.] — Held, that the mortgage was entitled to fall back on a previous mortgage covering the same chattels, given to secure him against his independent of certain notes, of one of which one of the two notes referred to in the later mortgage was a renewal, there being evidence that when the later mortgage was taken it was not intended to abandon the earlier one. McMartin v. McDougall, 10 U. C. R. 399, commented on. Boulton v. Smith, 17 U. C. R. 400, 18 U. S. R. 458, efferred to. Smale v. Burn LR. 90, B. 17, distinguished. Boldrick v. Ryan, 17 A. R. 253.

Taxes — Purchase from Mortgagee.]— Goods purchased from the chattel mortgagee thereof are not "claimed * * by purchase, gift, transfer, or assignment "from the mortgager within the meaning of R. S. O. 1897 c. 224 s. 135, s.-s. 4 (b), so as to make them liable in the purchaser's hands to distress for taxes due by the mortgagor. Judgment below, 21 O. R. 301, affirmed. Horsman v. City of Toronto, 27 A. R. 475.

Transfer—Examination of Transferee.]—A chattel mortgage is a transfer of property and effects within the meaning of 49 Vict. c. 16, s. 12 (O.) Blakely v. Blaase, 12 P. R. 505.

I. CONSIDERATION.

Duress — Hiegality, 1—A bond to secure the payment of the cost of maintaining at an industrial school a boy under fourteen years of use, convicted of larceny, and who otherwise came within the requirements of s. 7 of the Act respecting Industrial Schools, given in oursequence of the Judge's statement that in atfault the boy would be sent to the reformatory, is void, this being in law duress. Per Osler, J. A.—The bond was also illegal and void on the ground that not being required by law, it was given in order that the law might be put in force, which ought to have been put in force and acted upon without it. City of St. Thomas v. Yearsley, 22 A. R. 340.

Fraud.]—The obligor of a bond which by the plaintiff's own shewing is clearly fraudulent, need not plead fraud to prevent a recovery. Smith v. Dittrich, S U. C. R. 589.

Indemnity by Alleged Owner of Stealing a horse was brought up on a warrant before a magistrate, who investigated and dismissed the charge. The suspected individual pretended no right to the horse, and the magistrate, after dismissing the charge, restored the horse to its supposed owner (the prosecutor) but before doing so took a bond of indennity:—Held, that such bond was not necessarily void as contrary to the general policy of the law. Ballard v. Pope, 3. U. C. R. 317.

Indemnity to Sheriff by Execution Debtor.]— The sheriff, holding executions against defendant at the suit of different parties, took from him a bond recting that he had seized his goods, and indemnifying the sheriff "against any loss, damage, or liability, which may be incurred by reason of the execution, the wrongful execution, or non-execution of the said writ."—Semble, that such a bond would be void at common law, as being an indemnity to the sheriff for disobeying the command of the writ. Corbett v. Hopkirk, 9 U. C. R. 479.

Stifling Prosecution.]—In an action on a bond executed by J. to secure an indebtedness of L. to plaintiff bank, the evidence shewed that L., who had married an adopted daughter of J. was agent of the bank and having embezzied the bank funds the bond was given in consideration of an agreement not to prosecute:—Held, that the consideration for said bond was lilegal and J. was not liable thereon. People's Bank of Halifax v. Johnson, 20 S. C. R. 541.

II. CONSTRUCTION AND EFFECT.

Agent for Sale. — One M. and his sureties gave a bond to F., the plaintiff, reciting that F. had "appointed the above bounden M. his agent to sell certain articles and things which the said F. is to manufacture and send to the said M. for that purpose, at and for the prices the said F. may put upon such articles and things in his instructions to said M., and has also appointed the said M. his agent to collect and receive all moneys arising cut of such sales to the use of said F." The condition then was, "that if the above bounden M. shall in all things well and faithfully carry out the said agency on his part, and shall well and truly make correct and faithful returns to the said F. of all moneys arising out of the said agency of any of the articles or things aforesaid, and of all other moneys the said M. may at any time during the continuous of the said M., then," &c.:—Held, that the words in italics did not refer only to such moneys as were to be derived from the proceeds of sales effected by M., and that upon default for other moneys than those arising from such sales collected by hin the surreics were liable to F. Fleury v. Moore, 34 U. C. R. 319.

Alteration of Will.] — The defendant gave plaintiff a bond conditioned not to alter his will, by which, as recited in the bond, he had devised to the plaintiff certain land. He afterwards sold and conveyed the land to one C:—Held, that the condition was broken. McCarnick v. McRac, 11 U. C. R. 187.

Breach—Demand.]—Debt on bond, conditioned that defendant should "pay to the plaintiff £43 15s, in building stone, at 15s, per cord, to be delivered for that using the town of Hamilton, at such times und in such these as should be required by plaintiff onces as should be required by plaintiff cords to be delivered by the 29th September then next, and the remainder in one year. Plea, that from the making of the bond until the expiration of one year, defendant had always been ready and willing to deliver the said stone at such times and places as should be required by plaintiff, &c., yet that the plaintiff did not, within one year from the date of the bond, require him to deliver the said stone or any part three of:—Held, on demurrer, a good defence. Stinson v. Branigan, 10 U. C. R. 210.

Breach—Demand.)—It is a condition precedent to the liability of the sureties in a bond conditioned for the delivery up by the principal on demand of all moneys received and not paid out by him, that a personal demand of payment should be made on him. And where the principal in a bond so conditioned dies before any demand for payment is personally made on him, a demand on his personal representatives is insufficient to charge the sureties. Port Elgin Public School Board v. Eby, 26 O. R. 73.

Condition — Inconsistency.]—The condition of a bond must be construed as a whole, and any apparent repugnance may be reconciled by giving it effect according to the intent apparent on the whole instrument. Nicolls v. Madill, 6 U. C. R. 115.

Condition-Mutuality.]-il. tendered for the construction of a line of railway pursuant to an advertisement for tenders, and his offer was conditionally accepted. At the same time H. executed a bond reciting the fact of the tender and conditioned, within four days, to provide two acceptable sureties and deposit five per cent. of the amount of his tender in the Bank of Montreal, and also to execute all necessary agreements for the commencement and completion of the work by specified dates, and the prosecution thereof until completed. These conditions were not performed and the contract was eventually given to other persons:—Held, affirming 18 A. R. 415, that the agreement made by the bond was unilateral; that the railway company was under no obligation to accept the sureties offered or to give H. the contract; that the bond and the agreement for the construction of the work were to be contemporaneous acts, and as no such agreement was entered into H. was not liable on the bond. Brantford. Waterloo, and Lake Eric R. W. Co. v. Huffman, 19 S. C. R. 336.

Contemporaneous Agreement.] — To an action on a bond, defendant cannot set up a separate contemporaneous agreement not under seal, varying the condition from that which the bond itself imports. Cramer v. Hodgson, 3 U. C. R. 174. Continuing Security, —Where defendant agreed to lend the plaintiff $2,000, to be advanced as it might be required, and received from plaintiff a conveyance of land to secure the advances, and gave back a bond recting the agreement, and binding himself to reconvey the lands on re-payment of the sum advanced on a certain day, and defendant before that day made further advances to £10,000, and received timber, &c., on account to £7,000:—Held, that the bond was a continuing security, and that defendant was not obliged to re-convey on payment of the £2,000 first advanced. Wells v. Ritchie, 6 O. 8, 13, Maintenance — Penalty—Right to Susfor Support.]—The liability of the obligor in a bond in a fixed penal sum conditioned for the payment of future maintenance is not limited to and is not satisfied by payment of the amount of the penalty, and the obligee has the right to sue for her support as it accues from time to time. Baker v. Trusts and Guarantee Co., 29 0, R. 456.

Omission — Payee not Named.]—The omission to say expressly to whom money payable is to be paid, may be supplied by intendment. Allen v. Cop. 7 U. C. R. 419.

Omission — Conclusion of Condition.]— So may the conclusion of the condition, "then this obligation shall be void." Day v. Spafford. 5 O. S. 57.

Penalty.]—A bond without a penalty may be good as a covenant or agreement. Mewburn v. Mackelcan, 19 A. R. 729.

Recital.]—A condition will not be restricted by the recital, unless the intention of the parties as apparent on the whole instrument requires it. Canada P. B. & S. Society v. Levis, S. C. P. 352.

A bond recited that L. had mortgaged to plaintiffs certain premises held by him by lease; and that doubts had arisen whether the lessor was authorized to grant such lease, and the condition was to indemnify the plaintiffs against any loss which they might sustain by reason of the non-payment of the mortgage:

—Held, that the recital did not so qualify the condition as to avoid that part of it providing for payment of the mortgage. Jb.

Security—Moneys not Received.]—In an action for the breach of a condition, assigned in the words used in the bond, "in not having duly rendered all accounts which ought to have been rendered," the plaintiff may recover whatever moneys defendant ought to have received, though in fact he received none. Small v. Stanton, 3 U. C. R. 148.

Several or Joint.]—A bond to a municipal corporation. "We, G. B., &c., are jointly and severally held and firmly bound &c., unto &c., in the several penal sums of money hereinafter mentioned, that is to say, the said G. B. in £3,000, the said J. P. in £500, the said J. H. W. in £500, (and all the rest in £500 each, for which several payments &c., we and each of us bind ourselves, and each and every one of our heirs, executors, and administrators," &c.:—Held, a several, not a joint, or joint and several, bond. County of Essex v. Bullock, 11 C. P. 323.

Successors in Office.]—A bond by a collector to the "treasurer of a town and his successors in office:"—Held, valid, without naming any individual therein. Judd v. Read,

III. PRACTICE AND RIGHTS IN ENFORCING BONDS.

1. In General.

Agent—Contribution—Costs of Defence.]
Defendant was a creditor of one T. H., and at defendant's request one L., on receiving the at detellatin's request one L. on receiving the bond of indemnity such on in this action, ex-ceuted a power of attorney to defendant to collect certain rents due by T. H. to L. De-fendant then requested L. to sign a distress warrant against T. H., which L. did, and defendant placed it in plaintiff's bands with instructions to seize certain property which defendant had caused to be placed on the dedeformant had caused to be placed on the de-mised premises, as well as some other property elsewhere. The plaintiff seized, and shortly afterwards obtained a bond of indemnity from The property was claimed by J. H., a of T. H., but was sold by defendant's instructions, who became the purchaser of a large portion. J. H. brought an action against large portion, J. H. brought all action against L. and the plaintiff, and recovered against them. Plaintiff paid the damages and costs, and commenced an action against L. on his bond. This L. settled by conveying to plainbond. This L. settled by conveying to plain-tiff a lot of land, and assigning to plaintiff by deed defendant's bond, and the plaintiff then sued defendant on this bond:—Held, that the defendant was liable, for although the distress warrant was executed by L., yet it was done at defendant's request, who assumed the entire direction of the seizure and sale. Wallace v. Gilchrist, 24 C. P. 40.

sale. Wallace v. Gilchrist, 24 C. P. 40.
Held, also, that L. was damnified, in having to settle the plaintiff's action against him by conveying the land and assigning defendant's bond; and that he was not bound to defend the suit, for the plaintiff having acted under express instructions from L's agent, and having been guilty of no wifel neglect or default. ing been guilty of no wilful neglect or default,
L. had no defence. Ib.

Held, also, that as the plaintiff's act in seizing and selling was done under defendant's direction, and in good faith, and was not apparently illegal in itself, the rule of no contribution among wrongdoers did not apply. Ib.

Held, also, that J. H. had a right of action against plaintiff and L., and it mattered not whether T. H. or J. H. was injured, so long as the plaintiff acted under the warrant, and was in consequence made responsible. Ib.

Held, also, that the plaintiff was entitled to recover the costs of defence incurred by him and L. Ib.

Annual Payments.]—Defendants gave a bond to plaintiff for £45, conditioned to pay him £45 a year so long as he should continue the minister of a certain congregation. paid him without suit for the first two years. For the next four years plaintiff sued them, declaring upon the bond as a covenant, and obtained judgments, which were satisfied without any question raised. He then sued for the seventh year, and the question of defendants' liability was left to the court without pleadings :- Held, that covenant clearly would not lie; but that to a declaration on the bond the former payments, not having been paid or re-ceited in satisfaction of the penalty, could form no defence; and that the defendants therefore were entitled only to have satisfaction entered on payment of the penalty and costs. Niven v. Jardine, 23 U. C. R. 470.

Assessment of Damages.]-In an action upon a bond with a penalty conditioned for the payment of a sum of money by instal-ments, with interest in the meantime on the unpaid principal, by Rule 580 the provisions of 8 & 9 Wm. HI. c. 11 as to the assignment or suggestion of breaches, and as to judg-ment for the penalty standing as a security for damages in respect of future breaches, are in force in Ontaris but in All as assignment. in force in Ontario, but in all other respects the practice and proceedings are the same as in an ordinary action, and subject to the Rules. The claim in such an action is not the subject of c. subject of a special indorsement under Rules 138 and 603, but is in the nature of a claim for damages. Upon the defendant in such an action making default in delivering a defence, judgment is to be obtained by the plaintiffs by motion under Rule 593, and should be for the penalty, and for assessment of damages for the breaches assigned, or to be sugin such way as may be thought proper under Rules 578, 579. Where the action comes for assessment of damages before a Judge sitting for the trial of actions, he can do no more than assess the damages in respect of the breaches of the bond for which execution is to be issued. Star Life Assurance Society v. Southgate, 18 P. R. 151.

Assessment of Damages.] - An action against the sureties in an appeal bond to re-cover the plaintiffs' costs of an appeal is in the nature of a claim for damages requiring assessment (see Rule 580), and a special indorsement of the writ of summons is inappropriate, and a judgment for default of appearance or default of defence is a nullity not curable by delay or acquiescence. The defendants in this case not having appeared, the plaintiffs filed and posted up copies of a statement of claim, without filing the writ of summons and affidavit of service :- Held, that the posting of the statement could not, having regard to Rule 574, be treated as a service upon the defendants. But, even if it could be so treated, a motion for judgment thereon and an assessment of damages would be necessary. Star Life Assurance Society v. Southgate, 18 P. R. 151, followed. Appleby v. Turner, 19 P. R. 145.

Assessment of Damages.]-To debt on bond for £400, setting out the condition and assigning breaches, defendant craved over and demurred, and the plaintiff having succeeded on the demurrer, entered judgment for the penalty and issued execution. Defendant then moved to set aside the proceedings, but the plaintiff had leave to amend, by substituting an inter-locutory for the final judgment, and entering an award of venire to assess damages, and in-quire of further breaches, although three years had elapsed from the entry of judgment. Douglass v. Powell, 2 O. S. 87.

Assessment of Damages. |-Where non est factum is pleaded, and breaches assigned in the declaration:—Semble, no special entry of the declaration:—Semble, no special entry of ven. fac. to assess damages is necessary, but if required the court will allow it to be made afterwards. Corrigal v. Boulton, 16 U. C. R. 520.

Breach-Demand of Payment at Named Place and Time.]-The plaintiffs sued for interest on two bonds made by defendants on the 27th January, 1855, for the payment to the plaintiffs or order of the principal money named, on the 1st November, 1855, at the agency of the Bank of Upper Canada in Hamilton, together with interest thereon. Both counts alleged that although defendants paid the principal on the 29th January, 1861, with interest up to the 1st November, 1855, yet they had not paid any interest after that day, In the second count it was averred that the bond was in defendants' possession and can-celled by them, and the plaintiffs therefore could not present it on the day appointed for payment; and that on that day defendants had no money at the agency, and gave no instruction to the manager there to pay. instruction to the manager there to pay. Defendants pleaded, to the first count, that they were always ready to pay the principal and interest according to the bond, and did pay the same when presented, but that the bond was not presented at the said agency on the day appointed for payment, nor at any other time; and that defendants never owed nor covenanted to pay the plaintiffs interest after that day, when they were ready to have paid both principal and interest. And to the second count, that they had money at the said agency to pay the bond, but the plaintiffs had no one there, nor was anyone there on that day or at any time after to receive the same; and that they never owed, &c.. (as in the last plea) :-Held, on demurrer, both pleas good; and that the omission to aver presentment in the first count was cured by the plea. the first count was cared by the piea. The eighth plea was leave and license; and was held bad, as no answer to an action of covenant. McDonald v. Great Western R. W. Co., nant. McDonald 21 U. C. R. 223.

At the trial it appeared that the bonds declared on in the first count had never been in the plaintiffs' custody, having been retained at their request by defendants' solicitor, and it was proved that when the bonds fell due, and up to July, 1857, defendants had funds at the agency out of which they would have been paid if presented:—Held, that the pleas were proved; that defendants were not liable to pay interest after the bonds matured; and the Judge properly directed a verdict in their Charitable Subscription.] - A voluntary bond to a charity, purporting to bind the obligor and his heirs, and payable six months after the obligor's death, cannot be enforced against the obligor's lands. Anderson v. Paine, 14 Gr. 110.

Demand of Payment at Named Place.]—The bonds produced acknowledged defendants to be "indebted to the holder hereof in the sum of £---, and do hereby promise to pay the same to such holder at the agency of the Bank of Montreal, at Ottawa, on, &c., on the surrender of this bond, with interest, at the rate of, &c., payable, &c., upon presentation of the several warrants or coupons hereunto annexed, at the agency of the Bank of Montreal at the city of Ottawa aforesaid. The declaration stated that defendants, by their bond, sealed, &c., became bound to the holder thereof in the sum of, &c., with interest. &c., to be paid to such holder thereof, op, &c., and the plaintiff became holder thereof, &c., yet said sum with interest had not been paid. It was admitted at the trial that the bonds were not presented at the place where they were made payable; and it proved that if they had been so presented, defendants had not funds there to meet them :-Held, that there was no variance between the bonds declared on and those produced, in the former being stated as payable to holders generally, while the latter were payable only on surrender and at a particular place. Held, also, that it was not necessary for plaintiff, as a condition precedent to his recovery, to aver and prove presentment at the particular place, and a tender of the surrender of the bonds, or a readiness to surrender them. Fellowes v. Ottawa Gas Co., 19 C. P. 174.

Destroyed Bond. |- The jurisdiction of equity in the case of lost bonds exists also in the case of bonds which have been destroyed.

County of Frontenac v. Breden, 17 Gr. 645.

Division of Municipality.]-The bond was taken to "the municipality of the town-ship of Whitby," and afterwards the town-ship was divided by 20 Vict. c, 113, into Whitby and East Whitby:—Held, that the bond was properly sued upon in the name of the corporation of Whitby, Township of Whitby v. Harrison, 18 U. C. R. 603.

Estoppel.]-Evidence of being executed in blank—estoppel from denying execution. See Regina v. Chesley, 16 S. C. R. 306.

Instalments-Interest.] - Sci. fa. on a bond conditioned to pay $2,782.68, in five the whole amount from time to time remaining due, on the 1st June in each year. The declaration recited that the first instalment and interest, due on the 1st June, 1862, had been paid: that on 30th November, 1864, damages were assessed for the second and third instalwere assessed for the second and third instan-ments, and interest on the unpaid principal, $2,226, up to 1st June, 1864, which were paid on 15th April, 1865; that there was after-wards a further breach by non-payment of the fourth instalment of principal on the 1st June, 1865, with interest on the said $2,226. from 1st June, 1864, to 15th April, 1865, and interest from said 15th April, on the principal remaining unpaid on that day, to 1st June, 1865. The plaintiffs claimed execution for the damages to be assessed on this further breach :-Held, that interest on the $2,226 could not be recovered, for the plain-tiffs on their sci. fa. for the second and third instalments should have assessed all damages for non-payment of such instalments up to the date of that sci. fa., 30th November, 1864. which would include interest; and their execution for such damages would bear interest also :- Held, also, that the objection might be taken by demurrer to so much of the breach as claimed such interest, for the award of execution being claimed for three separate sums, each claim might be treated as the assignment of a separate breach. Randall v. Burton, 25 U. C. R. 9.

Action on bond payable by instalments. Judgment was entered for the penalty. Proceedings were had from time to time by sci. fa.:-Held, that defendants were bound to pay the expense of levying the sum due, but that the whole amount the plaintiffs were entitled to recover was limited to the penalty.

Randall v. Burton, 4 P. R. 9.

The plaintiff may not charge interest on the penalty, or amounts remaining due thereon. 1b.

Instalments Due After Action.] — Where in debt on bond for the payment of money in two instalments only one was due Instalments Not Due.1—Defendant gave a bond to plaintiff to abide by the award of arbitrators. The arbitrators awarded $400 to be paid in three instalments, the two last to be secured by defendant upon real estate, and payable at a future day. Defendant neither paid the first instalment, nor secured the second and third in the manner directed:—Held, that plaintiff was entitled to assess his damages for the whole three instalments, although the last two were not due. Bond v. Bond, 16 C. P. 327.

Instalments Not Due.]—Action on a lord conditioned to pay move by instalments, to recover the first instalment. Pleas, non est factum and payment. After issue joined, defendant paid the sum then due; and to another suit for the second instalment, he pleaded in abatement the former action:—Held, that he was entiled to succeed; for I, the plaintiff might have proceeded with the previous action and obtained judgment, as the payment after action could not cure the breach; and, 2, the cause of action, which is the penalty, was the same in both suits. Randell v. Burton, 23 U. C. R. 208.

Interest.]—A plaintiff on a bond of indemnity cannot recover interest in the nature of damages beyond the amount of the penalty. McMahon v. Ingersoll, 6 O. S. 301.

Interest.]—The bond contained a stipulation that in the event of any sum being found due by M. to the bank, interest should be payable thereon from the time an account of the baimee due was delivered to the parties to the bond by the bank, and judgment was given in the court below in excess of the penalty:

—Held, however, as the law would not allow a verifier against the obligors for a greater sum than the nemalty, interest could not be computed on that amount until after judgment, Erchange Bank v, Springer; Exchange Bank v, Barnes, 13 A. R. 390.

Interest—Damages in Lieu of Interest.]— See The Queen v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 2 Ex. C. R. 132.

Judgment as Security.]—The plaintiff had recovered £16 as damages for breach of the condition, the penalty being £500. Judgment had been entered for the debt and damages, and duly registered. An application, shewing payment of the damages and costs, to have satisfaction entered, was refused with costs, as the plaintiff was entitled to the judgment as a security for further breaches. Hill v. Hill, 1 P. R. 208.

Limiting Execution.]—On a bond for the conveyance of land, the verdict was taken for the planniff for 81,000, and 20 cents for the detention, no evidence of damage having been given. Defendant moved to restrain the execution to 1s. damages, the bond being within S & 9 Will. III. c. 11:—Held, that such application before the entry of judgment was premature. Greer v. Johnson, 32 U. C. R. 77.

Misnomer.]—An obligor who is called by a wrong name in a bond, but executes it by his right name, must be sued by his name in the bond. Ketchum v. Brady, M. T. 3 Vier.

Municipal Treasurer.]—Section 60 of 13 & 14 Vict. c. 67, requiring the collector to give a bond, as required by by-law, is directory, and not so imperative as to make the collection of the taxes illegal where a bond from the collector's surety had been given to the treasurer instead of the town by its corporate name, and no by-law had been passed by the corporation under that section. Judd y, Read, 6 C. P. 362.

Municipal Treasurer.}—In an action on a bond given to T., the plaintiff, describing him as treasurer of the municipality of F., for the performance by defendant P. of his duties as collector:—Held, approving Judd v. Read, 6 C. P. 362, that the action might be maintained by the plaintiff as treasurer, though the statute directs that the bond shall be taken to the municipality. Todd v. Perry, 20 U. C. R. 649.

Non-production.]—Where the plaintiff was nonsuited in an action upon a bond which had been filed as an exhibit at a previous trial, because he was unable to produce it, the nonsuit was set aside and a new trial granted on payment of costs, the bond having been afterwards found. Muirhead v. McDougult, H. T. 2 Vict.

Obligor's Attempt to Destroy Bond.]—Trover may be unintained against the obligor of a bond for securing the fidelity of a clerk, the obligor having torn off the seal (and this although the bond might be considered as still subsisting and sufficient to sustain the action of debt), and damage may be recovered against the obligor to the amount of the penalty. Bank of Upper Canada v. Widmer, 2 O. S. 222.

Plaintiff Author of His Own Damage—Fraud—Pleading.]—Debt on a bend, conditioned to save the plaintiff harmless from all damages or suits regarding the plaintiff, and advanced by one of the plaintiff, which was also claimed to have been paid to the plaintiff by one C., and to be now due and owing to C. Plea, that the plaintiff, if damnified, was damnified of his own wrong. Replication, setting out as a breach the recovery of judgment and execution against plaintiff by C., for the said sum. Rejoinder, that the judgment was recovered by the fraud and covin of the plaintiff, upon which issue was joined. It was shewn that the recovery of the said of the plaintiff at the secution of the bond:—Held, not sufficient to support the plea; and the plaintiff having recovered a verdict, the court refused to interfere. Powell v. Boulton, 2 U. C. R. 487.

The plaintiff having in the last case assigned two breaches, setting out a judgment for the sum of money in the condition mentioned, and not specifying any particular sum for which judgment had been recovered:— Held, sufficient, on motion in arrest of judgment. Poxell v. Boutlon, 3 U. C. R. 19.

Priorities.]—A. gave a voluntary bond to B. for £5,000 and a few days afterwards a like bond to C.: neither was given for any frauduent purpose. C. recovered judgment on the second bond; and the obligor had not property enough to pay both bonds:—Held, that B., whose bond was prior in date, had no equity to restrain proceedings by C. to enforce the judgment recovered; nor to set aside a conveyance made by A. of land of less value than the judgment, and which C. had accepted in discharge thereof. Acceenham v. Mountcashel, 19 Gr. 530.

Production.]—Where a bond is pleaded with a profert, the admission of its execution, under a Judge's summons, does not dispense with its production at trial. Lesslie v. Leahy, 5 O. 8, 482

Purchase Money—Plea Denying Tender of Conveyance,]—In a netion on a bond for the payment of purchase money of land taken by a railway company, no suggestion having been made as to any defect in title, and plaintiff's comes offering to deliver at once a conveyance of the land to the company, the court refused to allow a plea to be added denying tender of conveyance before action. Masson v. Robertson, 44 U. C. R. 323.

Representative Capacity.] — Plaintiff sued as executrix on a bond made to her in her own right:—Held, that she could not recover, and nonsuit entered. Have v. Montgomery, T. T. 3 & 4 Vict.

Seal.]—Defence to an action on a bond against sureties that the bond when executed had no seals. See Marshall v. Township of Shelburne, 14 S. C. R. 737.

Second Action-Time to Plead.]-Defendant executed in favour of plaintiff a bond in the penal sum of £700, conditioned to pay £350, with interest, by instalments. Plaintiff obtained a verdict on the bond for the penalty, ls. damages for detention, and £21 damages, assessed on breaches assigned, after which defendant paid the damages and costs. Instead of entering judgment for the penalty as a security for future breaches, the plaintiff commenced a second action for another in-stalment and interest. Defendant without Defendant without intimating that he intended to plead in abatement, as a favour asked plaintiff for further time to plead, which was granted. Sixteen days after declaration defendant pleaded the pendency of the former action, and prayed judgment whether plaintiff ought a second time to implead him for the same cause of action, attaching to the plea an affidavit of its truth. The plea was set aside with costs, and plaintiff allowed to sign judgment by default unless defendant should pay costs and plead within four days. Carlisle v. Hostel, 7

Set-off. — Non est factum and a set-off may be pleaded together, to debt on bond. Atkins v. Clark, 6 O. S. 33.

Set-off.)—Defendant pleaded a set-off of a judgment recovered in debt on hond for £233 15s. 3d., being £290 debt, 1s. damages, and £15 14s. 3d., costs. The plaintiff replied nul tiel record, and the judgment appeared to be for the recovery of the debt, damages, and costs, and also £55 15s. for damages assessed on account of breaches of the bond:—Held, no variance. Bowerman v. Brown, 2 U. C. R. 409.

Special Indorsement.]—A, and B., having become sureties for C., the receiver in a suit in chancery, and who was to account yearly, were sued for C.'s default on a specially indorsed writ, and judgment signed for £400 10s. 10d.:—Held, upon a motion on all-davit, as to the facts, that £92 11s, 9d. was all that was due; and that the claim was not such that a judgment upon a specially indorsed writ could be signed. Buell v. Whitney, 11 C. P. 240.

Successor in Office.]—Where the plaintiff declared in debt on bond as "Governor-General of Canada and Judge of the court of probate in Upper Canada," on a bond made by the defendants to "Sir John Colborne, at the time of the execution thereof being Lieutenant-Governor of Upper Canada, and Judge of the court of probate therein, and to his successor in office," and assigned as a breach, the non-payment of the penalty to the said "Sir John Colborne or any other person or persons whatever," whereby an action had accrued to the plaintiff as "Governor-General, and Judge of the court of probate, and successor of Sir John Colborne," the declaration was held bad on special demurrer, for not shewing where or when the plaintiff became the successor of Sir John Colborne, and for not negativing payment of the penalty to plaintiff, and for averring that the action had accrued to the plaintiff as "Governor-General and Judge of the court of probate." Bagot v. McKenzie, 6 O. S. 580.

Verdict for Penalty.]—In debt on bond, where breaches have not been suggested or assigned in the replication, and the bond comes clearly under 8 & 9 Will. III. c. 11, it is irregular to take a verdict for the penalty, and the verdict may be set aside. Brock District Council v. Boven. 7 U. C. R. 471.

Semble, that the breaches may be suggested even after verdict, and then the plaintiff may go down before a jury and assess his damages. Ib.

2. Pleading.

In debt on bond, a plea that the plaintiffs had not made a conveyance according to agreement, was held bad on special demurrer, for not shewing what the agreement was, although it was referred to and its contents might be collected from the condition of the bond as set out on oyer. McGilvray v. McDonnell, Tay, 139.

Where the plaintiff declared upon a penal bill, and proved a bond with a condition:— Held, not a sufficient variance to set aside the verdict. De Riviere v. Grant, Tay. 473. In debt on a bond conditioned on delivery

In debt on a bond conditioned on delivery of good merchantable grain to deliver a certain quantity of whiskey, an averment in the declaration of a delivery of good distillery grain, but that defendants did not deliver the whiskey, was held bad on general demurrer. Concer v. Fairman, 3 O. S. 568.

Debt on bond against two defendants, conditioned that A., as a bank agent, should account as often as called upon. Pleas: that before action brought A. ceased to be agent, and that while he was agent he kept all the clauses, &c., in the condition: 2. that A. paid the plaintiffs the amount of the penalty in the bond:—Held, bad on general demurer, the first plea not answering the condition, and the second not being pleaded as accord and satisfaction, nor any release shewn, Bank of Upper Canada v. Boulton, 4 O. S. 158.

Debt on bond conditioned that "the defendant, his heirs and assigns, should permit the plaintiff to cut down and carry away all the inewood from certain lands, without let, suit, hidrance, &c." Plea, that defendant always permitted, &c. Replication, that defendant ant conveyed the land in fee to a stranger, who would not permit plaintiff to cut the wood, &c.—Held, bad, on demurer, as shewing no breach, the bond being a license under seal binding on defendant and his vendee, and not revocable by parol, and the plaintiff having shewn no actual obstruction. Foeke v. Fotlergill, 4 O. S. 185.

In an action on a bond, where the plea is that the bond was conditioned to perform an award, and no award made, the plaintiff must either deny the condition as alleged, or reply specially setting out an award and assigning a breach. He will not be permitted to take issue on the plea under s. 108 C. S. U. C. 22, and such a replication will be struck out under s. 119, as embarrassing. Covan v. White, 9 L. J. 131.

To debt on an indemnity bond defendant pleaded non damnificatus, and the plaintiff having replied, shewing how she was damnified, defendant rejoined that the injury arose through plaintiff's own fraudulent act. The rejoinder was held a departure, and bad on general demurrer. Hamilton v. Davis, 1 U. C. R. 490.

The plea of non damnificatus to a declaration on a bond containing specific conditions, not to indemnify generally, is bad. Kingsmill v. Gardiner, 1 U. C. R. 223; McDonald v. Mag. 5 U. C. R. 68.

Defendant may plead that the payment by the obligee was without necessity, and made in his own wrong. Hamilton v. Davis, 1 U. C. R. 176.

Where in debt on an indemnity bond defendant pleaded that if the plaintiff was damified she was damnified of her own wrong, on which the plaintiff took issue, and did not assign any breach:—Held, that the issue was on the plaintiff. Hamilton v. Davis, 2 U. C. II. 137.

In debt on bond for the performance of the duty of deputy sheriff for six months, and for such period as the sheriff and deputy should agree upon and indorse upon the bond, in answer to a plea of performance the plaintiff replied that the period had been extended, not all leging during the six months:—Held, bad. Hamilton v. Anderson, 2 U. C. R. 452.

Where the condition requires something to be performed after the making of the bond, a plea of performance will be sufficient if it appear that the thing must necessarily have been performed after the making of the bond, though these words be not used. The condition was to pay over moneys. Plea, payment of all moneys collected, without shewing how much collected:—Held, sufficient. Denison v. Donnelly, 2 U. C. R. 395, Condition, to account once in six months. Pica, that defendant did account, not alleging once in every six months:—Held, bad, on special demurrer. Small v. Beasley, 3 U. C. R. 40.

A.. upon being appointed clerk of the market to the board of police of London, entered into a bond to pay a certain sum in compenied to the market tolks which the board allowed him the market tolks which the board allowed him to the sum of th

Debt on a bond, conditioned to make certain payments at the times stated in the condition. Breach, that £125, parcel of the sum demanded, was not paid, &c.:—Held, bad, in not negativing the payment of the money mentioned in the condition. Beckett v. Oill, 4 U. C. R. 489.

Where the plaintiff has bound himself to advance money to A. upon certain conditions, and defendant has in the same bond guaranteed the repayment, the plaintiff in suing on the bond should set out with certainty the conditions on which A. was to obtain the money. The averment that A. had not kept all the conditions on his part, without stating them, is bad. A plea also that the plaintiff them, is bad. A plea also that the plaintiff when the plaintiff was either to where appeared what they were, its bad. Where the plaintiff was either to "secured and advanced," is that he had not "secured and advanced," is bad. Wright v. Benson, 5 U. C. R. 249.

The plaintiffs, who had taken from defendants a bond for the due performance of a collector's duty, with a condition in it prescribed by certain municipal by-laws, declared upon it as upon a common money bond, without setting out the condition; the defendant pleaded non est factum:—Held, not a fault variance. It would have been better, however, for the plaintiffs to have set out the condition in their declaration, and assigned breaches. Brock District Council v. Boucen, 7 U. C. R. 471.

The plaintiffs, by the name of the "Council of the District of Brock," declared on a hond, which when produced at the trial, was found to be given to "the Municipal Council of the Brock District." The bond was not set out on oper:—Held, variance not fatal. Brock District Council v. Boucen, 7 U. C. R. 471.

So where a bond was sued upon in the name of the "Trent and Frankford Road Company," and upon being produced was in the name of the "President and Directors of the Trent and Frankford Road Company," Trent and Frankford Road Company v. Marshall, 10 C. P. 329.

Action on a bond. Plea, that it was obtained by H. and others in collusion with him, by fraud. &c. Replication, that it was not obtained by fraud of H. and others, &c.:—Held, good, though not in the disjunctive. Turner v. Ham. 9 U. C. R. 255.

Debt on bond given by C. and R., conditioned for the due performance by one D. of the office of secretary and treasurer of the Brantford building society. 7th plea: the office is an annual one; that the said D. was appointed for one year; that the defendants became sureties for the term of one year and no longer; and that during such term D. faithfully performed the duties. Replication; that the defendants did not become sureties for the period in the plea mentioned, or for any other specified time. 9th plea: that D. did not, before his appointment, become bound in a bond for the due performance of his office, in pursuance of the statute, 9 Vict. c, 90. 10th plea: that the said bond is not a c. 90. 10th plea: that the said bond is not a security taken in pursuance of the statute, by a bond entered into by the said D. with two sufficient sureties:—Held, on demurrer, both pleas had for uncertainty. 11th plea: that the rules of the society did not provide that the trensurer or other principal officer should, once in every year, prepare a general statement of the funds and effects, according to the statute. Replication: that the rules of the society did provide that the statement referred to in the plea, should be made at least once in every year according to the form of the statute:—Held, on demurrer, replica-tion good. Wilkes v. Clement, 9 U. C. R. 339.

To debt by an executor on an annuity bond made by defendant to the testator, payable during the lifetime of testator, defendant pleaded: 2. that before the commencement of this suit, to wit, on the first November, he paid to the testator all and every the sums of money which before then were due, &c. The plaintiff replied that defendant did not pay testator all sums of money at any time before the commencement of this suit due &c., by virtue of &c. Defendant pleaded: 3. that before the commencement of this suit he owed plaintiff upon the said writing obligatory £35, and that the testator at the time of his de-cease was, and plaintiff, since the death of testator, still is indebted to defendant in £100, for use and occupation, &c., which he offered to set off. Plaintiff replied that he was not nor is indebted modo et formă. Issue was joined on these pleas. No breach was alleged in the declaration nor assigned in the replicain the deciaration nor assigned in the replica-tion, nor suggested under the statute 8 & 9 Will. III. c. 11, s. 8; nor was there an award of venire to ussess damages. The jury found for the plaintiff, and assessed the damages cenerally:—Held, that the issues tendered by the replications were sufficient, and that the allegations in the pleadings were sufficient to warrant the assessment. Smith v. Muirhead, 13 U. C. R. 9.

The plaintiffs sued defendants H. and D. as having jointly executed a bond to secure payment of rent by H. which being set out in the plea it appeared that T. was also named in its sobligor but had not executed. It appeared that at the execution of the bond T. was not present, and defendant D. told the plaintiff that he could not conveniently attend, but would sign it at any time. T., however, afterwards, on being applied to by the plaintiffs, refused to execute, and no objection had been made by D. although aware of the refusal:—Held, that the non-execution by T. was no defence under a plea of non est factum by H., as shewing a variance between the bond declared on and that set out. Sidney Road Company v. Holmes, 16 U. C. R. 268. But see County of Huron v. Armstrong, 27 U. C. R. 533.

Action on bond by collector of taxes for the performance of his duties—Form of declaration. Judd v. Petrie, 6 C. P. 48.

Declaration on a bond whereby defendants covenanted to pay R., or the holder, at &c., £200 on &c., and interest thereon semi-annually on the delivery at the Gore Bank of the warrants therefor to the bond annexed, and that the plaintiffs became the holders, and have always been ready and willing to deliver said warrants at &c., but £12 for interest is now due:—Held, bad, in not averring an actual delivery of, or an offer to deliver, the warrants at the bank. Osborne v. Preston and Berlin R. W. Co., 9 C. P. 241.

A bond is, ex vi termini, taken to be a deed; therefore, a declaration that a defendant became bound &c., whereby the said bond became forfeited, sufficiently discloses an obligation by specialty; though the mer expression "bound" would not. Provincial Insurance Co. v. Walton, 16 C. P. 62. See also, Leith v. Freeland, 24 U. C. R. 132.

Debt on bond conditioned to deliver to plaintiff certain wood. Breach, non-delivery. Defendant pleaded, as to part of the breach, payment of $25 into court, and as to the remainder, performance:—Held, on demurre, a bad plea. Thompson v. Kaye, 13 C. P. 231, distinguished. Love v. Morice, 19 C. P. 123.

IV. RELEASE AND SATISFACTION.

Security Taken.]—The owner of a steamboat sold ten of the shares in her, taking the bond of the vendee for a portion of the price. The vendee sold the same subject to this bond, and the shares were afterwards transferred in trust for the benefit of the original owner of the vessel, who still held the bond; notwithstanding which proceedings were taken by him to enforce payment of the bond. The court restrained further proceedings thereon, and ordered the bond to be delivered up to be cancelled, with costs. Thompson v, Wilkes, 5 Gr. 594.

Treasurer of Company.]—Debt on bond given by defendant as one of five joint and several obligors, for the discharge, by one A., of his duties as secretary and treasurer. Pleas, 2. Not damnfied; 3: if plaintiffs damnified, Not defended by their own default; 5. that the affairs of the plaintiffs were managed by certain directors; that until the 31st January, 1850, A. fulfilled the condition; that from that time till A. ceased to be secretary and treasurer, plaintiffs managed the affairs of the said society contrary to its rules, &c., whereby his liability was greatly increased; by reason whereof he became discharged; 7. the affairs were managed, &c., that said directors, without defendant's consent, ordered that one of the obligors should be released which order became binding the properties of the condition was qualified or affected by some matter existing and in the hoservance of the condition was qualified or affected by some matter existing and in the knowledge of both parties when bond given. Seventh plea bad, as shewing no release properly authorized in law. Farmers and Mechanics Building Society v. Canpstaff, 9 U. C. R. 183. Building Society v. Canpstaff, 9 U. C. R. 183.

Treasurer of Company.]—Action on a similar bond to that in the last case—Plen of performance—Replication, assigning breaches for money received and not paid over, and for fraudulently inducing plaintiffs to grant a certain loan:—Held, good on special demurrer. Furmers and Mechanics Building Society v. Whittenore, 9 U. C. R. 297.

Treasurer—Change of Office.]—A plea that the bad sued on was given for the due performed of the duties of plaintiffs' secretaries of the duties of plaintiffs' secretaries of the performed of the duties of plaintiffs' secretaries of the duties of plaintiffs' president and director:—Held, bad, for not shewing that the offices were incompatible, by alleging that the plaintiffs were incorporated under C. S. T. C. c. 49, if that Act would make them incompatible or otherwise. Admitting them to be incompatible, quere, would the acceptance of one vacate the other. Treat and Frankford Road Co. v. Marshall, 10 C. P. 229,

V. MISCELLANEOUS CASES.

Bankruptey after Breach. — Debt on a solid for the payment by S. of ten notes, assiming breaches as to the last six. Plea, that S. did not pay the first two notes, whereupon the bond became forfeited, and afterwards S. became bankrupt, and afterwards defendant became bankrupt; — Held, that the bond, being forfeited before defendant's bankruptey, the penalty became a debt, which the plaintiff might have applied to have retained in the hands of defendant's assignce till the contingency happened, and then have proved; and that the plea was good. Perny v. Hamilton, 5 C. P. 57.

Cancellation—Bank.]—A bond may be given up to be cancelled by the president and directors of a banking corporation, without the appointment of an attorney. Bank of Upper Canada v. Widmer, 2 O. S. 2225.

Husband and Wife.]—By husband to wife. See Glass v. Burt, S O. R. 391.

Municipal Bonus.]—Forfeiture of condition in bond and mortgage to carry on a factory for twenty years, &c., in consideration of receiving a municipal bonus. See Village of Brussels v. Ronald, 4 O. R. 1; 11 A. R. 605.

Official Bonds.]—See Regina ex ret. Ford v. McRac, 5 P. R. 309; Canada Agricultural Ins. Co. v. Watt, 30 C. P. 350.

Pork Inspector.]—Sci. fa, on a bond to the Queen for performance of duty by a perk inspector. The assignment of breaches shaded an agreement to refer pork to the inspector for his inspection, and then alleged that he wrongfully branded pork of inferior quality with the words. "prime mess pork." Ac., contrary to the statute and to his duty. Denutrer, for not alleging that the acts complained of were breaches of his duty or were done by him knowingly, willingly, or designedly, or that he did not in respect of such matters use the best of his skill, judgment and additive—Held, that the breaches were sufficiently assigned. Regina v. Houest, 3 C. P. 228.

Supersedeas.]—Bonds to obtain supersedeas under 2 Will. IV. c. 5, and 5 Will. IV. c. 3. Amount of penalty. Heather v. Wallace, 4 O. S. 131.

Railway Company - Provisional Directors—Bonus.]—By the bond of a railway company, executed by its provisional direc-tors, in consideration of a bonus in aid of the railway, the company agreed to erect and maintain workshops in a certain town dur-ing the operation of the railway. The company, after certain changes of name, amalgamated with other companies and formed a larger one under another name, which latter company, although it had agreed to do so, ceased to so maintain the workshops. This last mentioned company subsequently amalgamated with and became part of the de-fendants' system, and by the amalgamation the defendants became responsible for all liabilities of the other companies:—Held, that the bond of the provisional directors was a corporate act binding on its successors, and by consequence, on the defendants, who had acquired the road; that the road, though it formed part of a larger railway connection represented by the defendants, was still in operation, and, as the contract was to maintain the workshops during the operation of the railway, it remained a binding engagement; and a reference to ascertain the damages, if any, for breach of the covenant, was directed. Town of Whitby v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 32 O. R. 99.

BOUNDARY.

Acquiescence.]—Defendants claimed under a lease of 50 acres, described as commencing in the rear of 150 acres of the lot, and running back 43 chains 75 links, executed in 1824 by S., who in 1826 conveyed the remaining 150 acres to one 1., describing it as commencing in front on lake Erie at the remaining 150 acres to one 1., describing it as commencing in front on lake Erie at the 1828, and 25 links. I. had a survey made 11828, and 25 links. I. had a survey made in 1828, and 25 links. I. had a survey made his north boundary, and the planted to mark his north boundary at the planted to mark his north boundary. When the planted the planted his north force further back, which gave rise to this action:—Held, that the defendants, who appeared to have their full 50 acres according to the old limits, must shew their right to change the boundaries so long acquiesced in, and that it was unnecessary for the plaintiff in the first instance to prove his claim by actual survey. Her v. Nolan, 21 U. C. R. 309.

Acquiescence.]—Trespass, to try the boundary line between plaintiff and defendant; the former claimed title to part of N. W. part of lot No. 20 in the sixth concession of South Dumfries, by metes and bounds; the defendant claimed the east half. descriptions in the deeds did not conflict. line was originally run for the prior holders of the property, one of them at the time claiming title through the original patentee, under an agreement for purchase, but was not acquiesced in by the plaintiff. In 1849, one M. at plaintiff's request ran a line supposed to be acquiesced in by defendant, but upon the erection of a fence thereon by the plaintiff the defendant objected, and it was removed. In 1863 one P. ran a line, claimed by the plaintiff as the true line, and which caused this dispute. and two surveyors being present at the time on defendant's behalf, concurred in opinion that this line was correct. The jury having found for the plaintiff :- Held, that the line originally run, and now contended for by defendant, was not binding upon the parties, and that the evidence shewed the line run by P and acquiesced in by the defendant, to be the correct one; and therefore the verdict was right. McNaught v. Turnbull, 13 C. P. 426.

Agreement.]—Held, that while two persons are in difference about the boundary, and shew by their conduct that they are uncertain about the true line, but agree with each other to have it ascertained, and to hold accordingly, either party may make a conveyance to a third person, which will enable the alience to hold according to the true boundary, though at the time of the conveyance there might be some of his land in the possession of the other, in consequence of the line between them having been mistaken. Doe Beckett v. Niphtingde, 5 U. C. R. K. 518.

Agreement.]—Estoppel of adjoining proprietor from disputing line run by surveyor with his acquiescence after building operations had been commenced. Grasett v. Carter, 10 S. C. R. 105.

Deed—Estoppel.]—In trespass q. c, f. it appeared that defendant conveyed to the plaintiff 19 acres of lot 2 in the 5th concession of Barton, described by metes and bounds, commencing at the north-east angle of the lot. This starting point upon the ground was undisputed, and it was admitted that the description given enclosed the land claimed by the plaintiff—Held, that defendant was estopped by his deed, and could not set up any question as to boundary between lots one and two. Crossthwaite v. Gage, 32 U. C. R. 1996.

In trespass q, c, f, it appeared that about twelve years before one W., defendant's tenant, having moved the fence between plaintiff and defendant, an agreement in writing was entered into between W. and the plaintiff, that they would employ B., a surveyor, to establish the original line between lots one and two, and would be bound by it; and defendant by a memorandum, signed by him at the foot of this agreement, agreed to abide by it. The land in dispute was then in W.'s possession, and it was alleged that B. had not completed his survey:—Held, no evidence to support defendant's plea of leave and license. Ib.

Description. —A road company incorporated to make a road from the town of Sandwich to the town of Windsor:—Held, not authorized to go beyond the entrance of Windsor from Sandwich. Held, also, that as no limits had been assigned to the town of Windsor when the defendants were incorporated, the court would look to what the proprietor of land on which a part of what was commonly called Windsor stood, had designated Windsor on a plan which he had filed in the registry office, and referred to in giving deeds: and to the popular understanding as to what constituted Windsor, Donagall v, Sandwich and Windsor Road Co., 12 U. C. R. 59.

Highway—Changes.]—J. L. conveyed to a L. a piece of land extending 103 ft, 6 in. along the south side of Wellington street easterly, from its intersection with Elgin street, covenanting that should the line of Wellington street be shifted to the north lewould grant to G. L. any land thus left intervening between that street so changed and the land now granted. The south side of Wellington street was shifted about 23 feet to the north, and as Elgin street intersected it at an acute angle, the intersection was about 11 feet further west than before. G. L. having obtained a conveyance in accordance with the covenant:—Held, that he was entitled to have his eastern boundary produced on its original course, at right angles to Wellington street, though he would thus have more than 103 feet 6 inches on the street; for the intention was to give all the land in front of that first conveyed to him, and between it and the street as altered. Lang v. Mathewam, 32 U. C. R. 120.

Possession.]—Trespass q. c. f., describing the locus in quo by metes and bounds, and as part of "what has heretofore been known as lot 15, first concession, Delaware." The defendant gave no evidence of title. The plaintiff claimed by virtue of his possession, and it appeared that more than twenty years ago, relying on an erroneous survey, he had fenced in a part of the defendant's lot 14 in the broken front concession. This fence, if continued, would have included the part in question, but it had never been extended to any part of lot 14 in the first concession:—Held, that the plaintiff could not be considered as having any such possession of the locus in quo as would entitle him to recover. Weld v. Scott. 12 U. C. R. 537.

Possession.]—In the case of a disputed boundary line between two farms, conflicting evidence was given as to how far an old line, which was admitted to have been part of the original survey of the township, extended. Defendant proved acts of ownership by himself and predecessors over the locus in quo in putting up a brush fence more then twenty years before action brought, and cutting timber since, but the jury found in favour of the plaintiff. The question as to possession having been fairly left to the jury, and the weight of evidence as to the true boundary, appearing to be in the plaintiff savour, the court refused to interfere. Creighton v. Chambers, 6 C. P. 226.

Possession.]—Trespass q. c. f. The division line between two lois being in dispute, the plaintif proved that the line he contended for had been run by a surveyor and fenced for about forty rods fifty years ago, and that it had been the recognised boundary between the parties. Lately defendant employed a surveyor who ran a different line (probably right, although not done in strict accordance with the statute), and defendant moved his fence in accordance with it. The jury having found for defendant, the plaintiff moved for a new trial on affidavits that the fence moved had been standing more then twenty years. The court granted a new trial on payment of costs, the Chief Justice stating, that "compacts and arrangements of old standing, the maintenance of which prevents litigation, should be favourably viewed." BROKER.

Disobedience of Instructions.] — Action against defendants, stock-brokers at Toronto, for breach of duty in not buying certain stock for the plaintiff. On 25th March, the plaintiff by telegraph instructed defendants to buy the stock at 114 or less, which defendants by letter in reply agreed to do, but said that the telegram was received too late to enable them to act on it that day. On Monday following, the 27th, defendants telegraphed plaintiff that they had cancelled his order in the meantime, as there were unfavourable rumours about the stock, and that they were writing. The plaintiff received this about noon the same day, but did not answer it, waiting for the letter, which he received about five o'clock the following day, the 28th, being to the same effect as the telegram, and asking the plaintiff to repeat the order if he wished defendants to buy for him. The plaintiff on the receipt of the letter wrote, that from defendants' telegram he expected something more tangible and definite than mere general unfavourable impression and suspicion for not filling his order, and therefore waited for defendants' letter; that he had given a positive order to buy, &c.:—Held, (1) that the cor-respondence shewed that the plaintiff ratified or assented to the defendants' course of conduct in disobeying his instructions and exercising their discretion; that the construction cising their discretion; that the construction of the correspondence was for the court and not for the jury; (2) that at all events no damage was proved, as on the Monday when the plaintiff became aware that defendants had decided not to buy, the stock was still at 114. Smith v, Forbes, 32 C. P. 571.

Gaming Contracts.] - Article 1927 of the Civil Code does not differ substantially from 8 & 9 Vict. c. 109, s. 18 (Imp.), and renders null and void all contracts by way of gaming and wagering. A broker was em-ployed to make zetual contracts of purchase and sale, in each case completed by delivery and payment, on behalf of a principal whose object was not investment but speculation: Held, that these were not gaming contracts within the meaning of the Code. Forget v. Ostigny, [1895] A. C. 318.

Insolvent Act.]-A banker and exchange and money broker, and a dealer in foreign and uncurrent money, and buying and selling stocks:—Held, a trader, within the Insolvent Act of 1869. Duncan v. Smart, 35 U. C. R.

Sec, also, Bagwell v. Hamilton, 10 L. J. 305.

Margins - Fictitious Transactions.]-Plaintiff employed F. as his broker to pur-chase shares in Federal Bank stock and to carry the same for him until 1st December on margin, depositing with him a large sum of money for that purpose. F. transferred his business to the defendants in July and with it paid over to them the whole of the money which had been left in his hands by the plaintiff and they assumed F.'s contract with the latter. On the 10th August they informed him of this by letter. On the 12th October defendants called upon plaintiff to pay $2,000 additional margin, the stock having fallen in value, and on default they professed to sell and represented to him that they had to self and represented to him to they all sold his shares at a loss and charged him with the difference thereon—upwards of $2,000. It appeared that F, had never bought shares for the plaintiff; that he had not transferred, and that the defendants had never received, any shares from him for the plaintiff. The alleged sale of these shares with the loss or difference on which the defendants had charged the plaintiff was a mere pretence, defendants never having had any shares of the plaintiff to sell, and the broker with whom they had made the arrangement to become the pre-tended purchaser having bought none from them:—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to recover the money he had deposited with F, and which the defendants had received from him, as money had and received. Suther-land v. Cox. 6 O. R. 505, 15 A. R. 541. Affirmed by the supreme court, 24 C. L. J. 55.

A contract by a broker to purchase stock for a customer is not satisfied by the broker holding himself liable to account for the market value of the stock when the customer calls upon him to do so or then purchasing stock to comply with the demand. If any such custom existed among brokers, of which there was no evidence, it would not be binding on the customer, unless he knew of it and specially submitted to its conditions. Ib.

Margins-Sale-Damages.]-The plaintiff pledged with the defendants certain shares of bank stock as security for a loan, under an agreement in writing providing that he was to keep up a cash margin of not less than ten per cent, above the market price of the stock, and authorizing the bank, in the event of default, "to sell or dispose of the said security without notice, and to apply the proceeds in liquidation of the said advance." The plaintiff claimed that before default was made, the bank wrongfully loaned or sold his stock without his knowledge or consent, and that he was entitled to credit for the amount realized and to a return of interest paid, and damages for being compelled to give additional security. The defendants alleged that although the stock was transferred backwards and forwards by way of loan, it was never sold until default was made:—Held, that if the stock was sold before default made, such sale was tortious, and, following Ex parte Dennison, 3 Ves. 552, that a loan of the stock was a sale; and that the plaintiff might elect, either to claim damages, or to affirm the sale and claim the proceeds and profits made by the bank; one element of the measure of damages being the highest point of the stock market between the conversion and the next default. But that if default was made, the bank was entitled to sell the stock without notice; but only for the purpose of liquidating the advance, and that credit must be given for the proceeds at the current rates of the days on which the transfers were made, until the shares had been transferred. Carnegie v. Federal Bank of transferred. Canada, 5 O. R. 418.

In his pleadings, in an action for an ac-count the plaintiff set up that on 23rd April. 1878, he transferred to the defendant 160 shares of a certain bank, as a security for a loan, and that pending the loan the defendants had sold the said stock and realized more than the indebtedness, whereof he claimed an account, and the parties went to trial on admissions that the bank stock was in the defendants' hands at the said date. In the master's office, the plaintiff sought to raise an issue as to whether the defendants actually did hold the bank stock on that date, or whether, having held it previously as security for another loan, they had not parted with it before the said date, and falsely represented to the plaintiff that they still held it, and whether they were not liable to be charged with its market value as of that date:— Semble, that inasmuch as it appeared that the defendants held at the date of the loan 160 shares of the bank in question; and inasmuch as the particular shares were not identified or earmarked in any way, it could not be considered proved that the defendants had not 160 shares applicable to the plaintiff's loan on the date in question. S. C., S O. R. 75.

Pledge of Shares-Re-pledge by Brokers.]—The plaintiff obtained from a loan company an advance on the security of certain shares in a joint stock company not numbered or capable of identification, which were transferred by him to the managers of the loan company "in trust." The managers were also brokers, and were as brokers carrying on stock speculations for the plaintiff, and he transferred to them as security for the payment of margins certain other shares in the same company, the transfer being in the same form "in trust." The loan company were paid off by the brokers at the plaintiff's request and the brokers continued to hold the first shares as well as the others as security. The brokers subsequently on the security of all the shares obtained a loan from the shares of all the shares obtained a loan from the shares of th

Pledge of Stock—Re-pledge by Broker—Alleged Custom.] — The plaintiff, a broker, pledged certain stock with the defendants, brokers, for advances, and it was agreed that the plaintiff might call for his stock or the defendants for their money on two days notice. The defendants being in need of that stock immediately used it for the purpose of filling their own engagements. Subsequently the defendants and leged that the plaintiff was in default, and the plaintiff, not being aware that they had disposed of his stock, gave them his promissory notes for the amount chaimed by the defendants. He subsequently discovered that they had sold the stock. The defendants set up in defence to this action for the wrongful sale an alleged custom of theolers that upon stock being pledged to a border of the left of the same stock—Held, that no such custom was proved, nor would such a custom be valid; that the parties might have agreed to be bound by such manner of dealing, but in this case no such agreement was proved. Mara v., Cav., 6 O. R. 359.

might inve agreed to be bound by such manner of dealing, but in this case no such agreement was proved. Mara v. Cox. 6 O. R. 359.

Held, that the defendants might lawfully have repledged the stock to enable them to raise the advances to the plaintiff, but that the sales and other dispositions of the stock by the defendants without notice to the plaintiff, and when he was not in default, were wrongful, and that the plaintiff was entitled to recover from the defendants the prices at which they sold the stock. Ib.

The jury found that the settlement which resulted in the plaintiff giving notes to the defendants was made by him with full knowledge of his rights, but under pressure, and on this and other findings a verdict was returned for the defendants. The court, being of opinion that the plaintiff was entitled to a verdict but for this finding, and that the finding was against law and evidence, directed a new trial. Ib.

Sale of Shares—Inability to Deliver.]—
A firm of brokers purchased twenty shares of bank stock for the defendant, the latter agreeing to repay to the former the price paid therefor on demand with interest, the brokers to hold the stock as collateral security and receive a ten per cent. margin and one-quarter per cent. commission. The brokers took the stock in their own names, and then transferred it to a loan company together with other stock of the same character, the transfer by them, though absolute in form, being in fact a pledge to secure the repayment of a much larger amount than the sum payable by the defendant. The pledge had no reference to the transection with defendant, but was for the brokers' own purposes. The defendant was not informed of the transfer, and calls for further margins were made from time to time as the stock fell. On the 27th June, 1884, the brokers suspended payment, at which date the stock had fallen considerably; and on the 26th December they made an assignment for the benefit of creditors to the Neither at the time of the suspenplaintiff. sion or assignment, was any unpledged or un-hypothecated stock held for or by the brokers, nor was any transferred to the plaintiff, there being only a right in him to redeem any stock undisposed of by the pledgees. On the 4th On the 4th August, 1885, after the stock had, by legislative enactment, been reduced to one-half its original par value, or from $100 to $50 per share, the plaintiff offered to transfer twenty shares of the reduced stock, which the defendant refused to accept. The plaintiff then brought this action against defendant to recover the alleged balance due on the stock: Held, there could be no recovery, for that the delivery of the stock and payment of the price were concurrent acts, and the brokers were not in a position after the time of insolvency to deliver the same, while at the time of the plaintiff's offer there was no stock of the nominal value per share of that which the brokers purchased for the defendant. Clarkson v. Snider, 10 O. R. 561.

Sale of Shares—Undisclosed Principal— Marginal Transfer—Indemnity.]—The plaintiff sold and transferred his shares in a bank the sold and transferred his shares in a bank to C., a broker, who sold them on the stock exchange to the defendant, also a broker, in ignorance that the latter was acting for a customer. The transfer in the bank books from C. was effected by leaving the transfrom C. was enected by leaving the transferee's name blank, and marking the shares in the margin of the transfer as subject to the order of the defendant, who similarly marked them subject to the order of his principal, whose name was filled in as transferee, and who duly accepted the transfer. Within a month from the sale by the plaintiff, the bank was ordered to be warned. month from the sale by the plaintiff, the bank was ordered to be wound up, and in the liquid-ation the plaintiff was compelled, as a con-tributory, to pay the double liability under ss. 70 and 77 of the Bank Act, R. S. C. c. 120. The plaintiff recovered judgment against C. for the amount he had paid, and afterwards took an assignment from C. of his afterwards took an assignment from right to indemnity against the defendant. In that the obligation to indemnify arose from the purchase, and not from the transfer; that a broker acting in his own name, for an undisclosed principal, assumes the liability of the latter, and the fact that the transfer was executed in a form intended to enable the defendant to pass the shares to the ultimate renant to pass the snares to the utilinare purchaser did not relieve the defendant from his liability. (b) That, although C, had not satisfied the judgment, he was entitled to in-demnity from the defendant, and, after judgment, to assign his rights to the plaintiff, who could enforce them :-Held, also, that the who could enforce them:—Held, also, that the mere existence of a liability to indemnify the plaintiff gave no right of action to C., and that the Statute of Limitations did not begin to run in favour of the defendant until the to run in favour of the defendant until the recovery of judgment against C. Sutherland v. Webster, 21 A. R. 228, and Eddowes v. Argentine Loan Co., 63 L. T. N. S. 364, followed:—Held, further, that the plaintiff's right against C. first accrued when the liquidators became entitled to immediate payment. Before this action, the plaintiff sued the defendant and C. on an assignment to him of C.'s claim against the defendant, made before the plaintiff's indgment against C, which action was dismissed against the defendant, on the ground that C, had not before judgment been damnlied, and the defendant sought herein to set up that dismissal in bar of this action.—Held, no defence to this action. A by-law of the stock exchange, not authorized by their Act of incorporation, provided that all disputes between members, arising out of transactions on the exchange, should be referred to arbitrators:—Held, that they had no right to pass such a by-law ousting members from their right to resort to the courts of the Province. Essery v. Court Pride of the Dominion, 2 O. R. 596, considered. Boultbev. V. Growski, 28 O. R. 285. Reversed in the court of appeal, 24 A. R. 502; and restored in the supreme court, 29 S. C. R. 55.

Special Contract.]—Held, that when to the ordinary business of a broker, some special employment and undertaking is superadded by express contract, his liability results from such contract, and not simply from his character of broker. Deady v. Goodenough, 5 C. P. 163.

Action against defendant as broker and commission agent, for negligence in delivering goods to the purchaser without the price being paid, and for not using due care that the purchaser was solvent. Evidence—Verdict for plaintiff—New trial granted on payment of costs. Ib.

Stock Exchange.] — The defendant in giving authority to the plaintiffs to do business on the stock exchange must be taken in the absence of evidence to the contrary, to have employed them on the terms of the stock exchange, and, therefore, to have authorized the sale of his shares on failure to supply them with the requisite funds. Fire Limits.]—By the Municipal Act the corporation of Toronto was authorized to pass by-laws, among other things, to prevent the erection of wooden buildings within such parts of the city as the corporation might define. The city conucil accordingly passed a by-law defining what were termed the fire limits of the city, and prohibiting the erection of any building within such limits other than of stone, brick, iron, or other material of an incombustible nature:—Held, that the by-law was void, as not being confined to wooden buildings, and therefore unauthorized. Atterney-General v. Campbell, 19 Gr. 299.

Hiegal Building — Damages.]—On the 26th September, 1817, 8, contracted to erect a proper and legal building for W. on his (W.'s) land, in the city of 8t. John. Two days after, a by-law of the city of St. John, under the Act of the legislature, 41 Vict. c. 6, "The St. John Building Act, 1877," was passed, prohibiting the erection of buildings such as the one contracted for, and declaring them to be nuisances. By his contract, W. reserved the right to alter or modify the plans and specifications, and to make any deviation in the construction, detail, or execution of the work without avoiding the contract, &c. By the contract it was also declared that W. had engaged B. as superintendent of the erection his duty being to enforce the conditions of the contract, furnish drawings, &c., make estimates of the amount due, and issue certifi-cates. While W.'s building was in course of erection, the centre wall, having been built on an insufficient foundation, fell, carrying with it the party wall common to W. and McM., his neighbour. On an action by McM. against W. and S. to recover damages for the injury thus sustained, the jury found a verdict for thus sustained, the july found a vertice type the plaintiff for general damages, $3,352, and $1,375 for loss of rent:—Held, that at the time of the injury complained of, the contract for the erection of W.'s building being in contravention of the provisions of a valid by-law of the city of St. John, the defendant W his contractors, and his agent (S.), were all equally responsible for the consequences of the improper building of the illegal wall which caused the injury to McM. charged in the declaration. That the jury, in the absence of any evidence to the contrary, could adopt the actual loss of rent as a fair criterion by which actual loss of real as a lar criterion of the damage sustained, and therefore the verdict should stand for the full amount claimed and awarded. Insurance.]—A tug is not a "building" within the meaning of the 10th statutory condition of an insurance policy. Mitchell v. City of London Fire Ins. Co., 12 O. R. 706.

Lateral Support.]—The plaintiff owned a dwelling house for 20 years, and the defendant intending to erect a house on her land adjoining, employed an architect, who drew the plans whereby trenches to lay the foundation were to be dug adjoining the plaintiff's foundation wall, and the depth of the trenches was shewn. This work was let out to a contractor, and through his negligence in digging the trenches, &c., the wall of the plaintiff's house fell:—Held, that the plaintiff by twenty years' user, his house having been built for that time, had acquired, if that were necessary to maintain this action, the right to support for his house from defendant's adjacent soil:—Held, also, that the defendant was liable, for the damage arose not in a matter collateral to, but in the performance of the very act which the contractor was employed to perform. Butler v. Hunter, 7 H. & N. 826, and Bower v. Peate, L. R. 1 Q. B. 321, commented upon. Wheelhouse v. Darch, 28 C. P. 263.

Lateral Support.]—Plaintiff, tenant for years, sued for injury to his stock-in-trade, caused by his wall falling from defendant's excavation on an adjoining lot. The wall was over twenty years old, but there had been unity of seisin of both lots for a year, about the middle of the period. Then plaintiff's landlord sold defendant's lot in fee:—Held. that no easement had been acquired by lapse of time:—Held, also, that there was evidence of negligence in fact, causing damage, and that the plaintiff could therefore recover, irrespective of any acquired easement:—Held, also, that lateral support to land in its natural state is a right of property; that the right to support for buildings is an easement; and that such an easement is not within the Prescription Act. Quære, whether, on the authorities, the landlord, when he conveyed defendant's lot, did, by implication of law, reserve the right to support to his then existing wall, and the grantee thereby assented to such reservation Remarks on the law as to damages, where the land is weighted with buildings. Lessor and Lessee-" Buildings and Fix-Lessor and Lessee — Buttaings and Fig-tures."]—The Crown, represented by the Com-missioner of Public Works for the Province of Quebec, in the year 1851, demised certain lands in the city of Montreal to the plaintiff's predecessors in title for the purpose of being used for the construction of a dock and shipyard for the building, reception, and repair The lease contained a proviso for its cancellation, under certain circumstances, upon the lessors or their successors in office paying to the "lessees, their executors, ad-ministrators or assigns, the then value (with an addition of ten per cent. thereon) of all the buildings and fixtures that shall be thereon exceed and belonging to the said lessees:

—Held, that the words "buildings and fixtures" in the proviso were large enough to include not only what were buildings, in the mediae not only what were butterings, in the dock itself, but also whatever was accessory to, and necessary for the use of, such buildings and dock. Grier v. The Queen, 4 Ex. C.

Negligence-Fall of Wall.]-In an ac-Negligence—rall of 11 and 11 the includer 10 & 11 Vict. c. 6, by an administratrix for negligently causing the death of her husband, the declaration stated that the defendant was possessed of a close, and one T. A. was possessed of a crose, and one ing the defendant's; that upon defendant's close a wall was standing, which before and at the times when, &c., was to the knowledge of defendant in a dilapidated and dangerous state, and leaning towards the close of T. A., by reason whereof it became the duty of the defendant to take reasonable precautions to prevent the wall from falling; but, that well knowing the premises, he wrongfully per-mitted the wall to remain in that state, and that afterwards, by reason of such neglect, and while, &c., the said wall fell upon the close of T. A. and in falling killed deceased, who was then lawfully in the said close of A. Defendant pleaded not guilty:-Held, that the declaration disclosed a legal liability that the declaration disclosed a legal liability in defendant, and that the evidence (which is set out in the report) warranted a verdict for the plaintiff. Semble, that under this issue defendant was at liberty to shew that the accident was caused either wholly or in part by the negligence of the deceased, or of others for whom the defendant was not responsible, and that a reasonable time for repairing the wall had not elapsed before the occurrence; and that, supposing the state of the wall as alleged in the declaration to be admitted in the pleadings, yet the defendant might, in evidence, shew its actual condition, as bearing upon the question of negligence. Party Wall-Covenant to Pay.]-C. and the defendant were owners of adjacent lots, being about to build on his lot agreed by writing under his seal to erect a party wall on the dividing line, and equally upon both Defendant agreed to pay for the half of the front forty feet thereof when erected, and for the rear portion thereof whenever the defendant should require to use it. Subsequently C. sold and conveyed his lot to the plaintiffs in fee by deed containing the usual statutory covenants, and the plaintiffs entered into possession. Some years later defendant erected a building on his lot, making use of the rear part of such party wall, by reason of which he became liable to pay $98.65 and interest therefor, and did accordingly pay the same to C. In an action by the plaintiffs, as assignees of C.'s interest in said land, against the defendant to recover the sum so due in respect of such wall:—Held, that the plaintiffs were not entitled as vendees of C. to recover, the right to payment of the sum stipulated to be paid for the wall under the covenant with C. not having passed under the conveyance by C. to the plaintiffs. Party Wall—Improper User—Damages.]
—The plaintiff was the surviving trustee under the will of one J. B. of certain land on which was erected a two-storey brick house, the westerly wall of which formed the boundary of one L.'s land, immediately adjoining the plaintiff's on the west. L. leased to F., who erected a large brick building, using the plaintiff's westerly wall as a party wall, inserting joists therein, and building thereon so as to raise it two storeys higher, thereby weakening the plaintiff's wall. F. mortgaged to a building society, who, on default, sold to the defendant:—Held, that the plaintiff, under the Ontario Judicature Act, Rule 95, was entitled to maintain an action as representing the estate, without making the cestuis que trust parties; and that he was entitled to a decree that the defend-ant should desist from further using the wall built on the plaintiff's wall, or the ends of the joists which he had placed therein, but not to a direction that the defendant should pull down such wall, which the defendant had not erected:—Held, also, that the plaintiff was entitled to recover as damages the expense of removing such wall, so erected on his wall, and the damages occasioned by his wall being weakened, but not damages for the loss of a sale of the property by reason of the erection. Brooke v. McLean, 5 O. R. 209.

Party Wall — Easement — Extension of User.]—The plaintiffs claimed that the wall between their and the defendant's buildings was a party wall; that defendant had, with-out plaintiffs' consent, raised it a foot above the plaintiffs' premises, and altered the roof from a flat to a slanting one, whereby water was discharged on the plaintiffs' premises and injured them, for which they claimed damages; and also asked for a declaration that the wall was a party wall; that defendant should be restrained from preventing plaintiffs from using the wall, together with the new part, on payment by plaintiffs of half the cost thereof, and also from allowing the water to be discharged on plaintiffs' premises, The wall was proved to be wholly on the de-fendant's land. The part constituting the cellar foundation projected some seven inches. upon which the plaintiffs had rested the joists of their building in the cellar, the joists of the upper floors being let into the joists of the upper noors being it into the wall. The jury found that the wall was a party wall, and that the plaintiffs had sustained $35 damages:—Held, that the wall was not a party wall, nor was there any evidence from which a grant of, or the right to use, a part thereof, could be presumed; that it was misdirection in the learned Judge to tell the jury that the user of the wall for the said purposes for over twenty years constituted it a party wall, for at most it would merely give an easement for such purposes. This, however, was not in question, as plaintiffs' claim was not to continue such use, but to extend it; and that there was also not to extend stating that the defendant would be bound by any arrangement made between the plaintiffs predecessors in title and the tenant of the defendant's predecessors in title under a twenty years' building lease, and whereby the lessor, at the expiration of the term, took the buildings at a valuation, for there was nothing to shew that the defendant's predecessors were parties to the arrangement. James v. Clement, 13 O. R. 115.

Party Wall—Municipal Powers—Internal Walls.]—Sub-section 18 of s. 496 of the Municipal Act, R. S. O. c. 184, does not apply to internal walls separating buildings belonging to the same owner, for to constitute party walls they should separate the adjoining properties of different owners. Region v. Copp. 17 O. R. 738.

Party Wall — Declaration of Right.]— Action to have verbal agreement relating to party wall put in writing and executed for the purpose of registration. See Brooks v. Conley, 80, R. 549.

Removal of Building—Trover.]—The plaintiff contracted to sell a lot of land to A, who agreed to build a house upon it. A put up the house, but the plaintiff refused to open certain streets, as he had agreed to do, and the lot was in consequence inaccessible. A then assigned to defendant, who removed the house to another lot, which he also had agreed to purchase from the plaintiff; and after such removal the plaintiff executed a deed to defendant of this latter lot, with all the buildings thereon:—Held, that notwithstanding the deed the plaintiff might maintain trover for the house so removed; but the jury having given only nominal damages, the court under the circumstances refused to interfere. Cleaser v. Cullodon, 15 U. C. R. 582.

Removal of Building-Mortgage--Damfiled his ages. |-The plaintiff, a mortgagee, filed his bill for foreclosure and for an injunction to restrain the vendee of the mortgagor from removing a building erected on the property. The court thought that though the building had been actually removed, it was a proper case for a mandatory injunction; but it appearing that the building had been removed piece-meal, and that there might be difficulty in restoring it, an inquiry was directed to ascertain the value thereof, as sufficient for the justice of the case. Meyers v. Smith, 15

Trespass.]-R. brought an action against II. for having erected a brick wall over and upon the upper part of the south wall or upon the upper part of the south wall or cornice of appellant's store, pierced holes, &c. II. pleaded, inter alia, special leave and license, and that he had done so for a valulicense, and that he had done so for a valuable consideration paid by him, and an equitable rejoinder alleging that plaintiff and those through whom he claimed had notice of the defendant's title to this ensement at the inner they obtained their conveyances. In 1859 one C., who then owned R.'s property, granted by deed to H. the privilege of piercing the by doed to H. the privilege of piercing the south wall, carrying his stovepipe into the flues, and erecting a wall above the south wall of the building to form at that height the north wall of respondent's building, which was higher than R's. R. purchased in 1872 the property from the Bank of Nova Scotia, who got it from one F., to whom C. had con-vered it—all these conveyances being for valuable consideration. The deed from C. to H. was not recorded until 1871, and R's solicitor, in searching the title, did not search under C s name after the registry of the deed by which the title passed out of C in 1862, and did not therefore observe the deed creating the easement in favour of plaintiff. There was evidence, when attention was called to it. that respondent had no separate wall, and that respondent had no separate wan, and the northern wall above appellant's building could be seen:—Held, that the continuance of illegal burdens on R.'s property since the fee had been acquired by him, were, in law, fresh and distinct trespasses against him, for which he was entitled to recover damages, unless he was bound by the license or grant of C. Ross y. Hunter, 7 S. C. R. 289.

Vendor and Purchaser—Party Wall.]

M. having purchased lot 14 for a building lot resisted completion of the contract on the ground that a party wall of the width of nine inches had been built on the line between lots 14 and 15, which at some places came over on to lot 14 to the extent of six inches, and at another place to the extent of nine inches, and that he could not get rid of the wall with out engaging in a lawsuit with the owner of lot 15, and that the party wall was not suitable to the class of buildings which he desired to put up, and was worse than useless to him. The evidence shewed the wall did not depreciate the value of the land:-Held, that this being so, and under all the circumstances of this case, specific performance must be dethis case, specing performance must be de-creed, though the matter complained of might have been proper for compensation, had such been sought under the condition of sale relat-ing thereto. Imperial Bank of Canada v. Metcalfe, 11 O. R. 467.

Vendor and Purchaser—"Solid Brick Houses."]—Two houses were built with extensions in rear in a terrace or row, the outside walls of the terrace and the extensions being brick, but the inside walls between the houses themselves and the adjoining houses, and also between the extensions and the main houses to the height of the roofs of the extensions, being of wood, and the outside rear walls of the houses, above the roofs of the extensions, were brick resting upon timbers at the top of the wooden wall below. In an action for specific performance:—Held, not to be "solid brick" houses. Semble, they were not "brick houses." Stevenson v. Me-Henry, 16 O. R. 139.

BUILDING SOCIETIES.

Action-Plaintiffs.]-Under 9 Vict. c. 12, the president and treasurer of a building society may sue in their proper names without further description. Doe d. Barwick v. Clement, 7 U. C. R. 549.

But the president and treasurer suing must be such when commencing the action. Doe d. Morgan v. Boyer, 9 U. C. R. 318.

Building societies may sue in their corporate name. Farmers and Mechanics' Building Society v. Langstaff, 9 U. C. R. 183; Canada Permanent Building Society v. Bank of Upper Canada, 10 Gr. 203.

Plaintiffs, under a power in a mortgage to them by B., sold the land to L., who paid the president, but had received no conveyance; and the president, with his concurrence, then brought ejectment in the name of the society against the mortgagor, to enable them to give against the mortgagor, to enable them to give the purchaser possession. Defendant, after verdict, applied to set aside the proceedings as brought without the plaintiffs' authority: —Held, that there was clearly no pretence for such an application. Administration of Assets—Parties.]— A decree was obtained in a suit by a share-holder on behalf of himself and all other shareholders, for the administration of the assets of the society, and charging the directors with losses sustained:—Held, that persons who had iosses sustained:—Held, that persons who had ceased to be directors before the suit could not be made parties in the master's office. Rolph v. Upper Canada Building Society, 11

Authority to Agent to Sell.]—It is not necessary that the seal of a building so-ciety should be affixed to an authority to its agent to sell under a power of sale in a mort-gage; the entry in the books of the society is sufficient for that purpose. Osborne v. Farmsufficient for that purpose. Osborne v. Farmers' and Mechanics' Building Society, 5 Gr.

Collateral Security.]—But even before 22 Vict. c. 45, they might take a bond as additional security for money overdue on mortgage. Hope v. Glass, 23 U. C. R. 86, Fines.]-A by-law provided that any member neglecting to pay his monthly dues should be fined a specified sum per share each month until the end of the year, when the share or shares in default shall be declared forfeited to the society;" that a month before the ex-piration of such year, the secretary should notify the defaulter, calling his attention to the by-law; that in case of the defaulter being a borrower, these fines should be trebled, and that at the end of six months' default the mortgage should be liable to foreclosure, and to be declared forfeited :-Held, that the bylaw being penal should be construed strictly; and that the fines could be imposed on borrowers only for twelve, and on non-borrowers for six, months, the right to forfeit or to fore-close being then substituted:—Held, also, that such fines could not be recovered on a common count, but that the declaration should set out the by-law. Ottawa Union Building Society v. Scott, 24 U. C. R. 341.

Fines.]—A rule of the society declared, that, in case of default in the monthly subscriptions, the defaulter should pay a fine of 3d, per share for the first month, 6d for the second month, and 1s, for the third month, doubling the fine for each succeeding month, till the expiration of the first six months; and that after that time the share should become forfeired;—Held, that no fine was chargeable after the first six months. Such a rule cannot be waived by the directors. Wilson v. Upper Canada Building Society, 12 Gr. 206.

Where the members ceased paying their monthly subscriptions in ten years after the establishment of the society, under the supposition, on the part of all, that the society should then terminate, and did not resume paying, but it was subsequently found that, from mismangement and losses, further payments were necessary:—Held, that the rule as to fines was not to be enforced as regarded monthly subscriptions falling due after all had ceased to pay. monthly subscriptions paid. Wilson v. Upper Canada Building Society, 12 Gr. 206.

Loan to Person not a Member.]—Held, under C. S. U. C. c. 53, s. 40, and 30 Vict. c. 104, s. 9 (D.), that the plaintiffs, a loan and savings society, were empowered to make loans by way of mortgage of real estate to a person not a member thereof, and to take as collateral security therefor the promissory note of a person also not such member. Frechold Loan and Savings Society v. Farrell, 31 C. P. 453.

Moneys Deposited upon Savings Bank Account—Petition—Costs.)—A person died in the United States of Americal having moneys to his credit deposited upon savings bank account with two building societies doing business in Ontario, incorporated under R. S. O. 1887 c. 169. An administrator appointed by a court in the foreign country applied to the building societies to have the moneys transferred to him, but the societies, entertaining doubts whether the words of s. 47 of R. S. O. 1887 c. 199. "share, bond, debenture, or obligation," applied to a savings bank account, petitioned the court under s. 49:—Held, that the word "obligation" covered the liability of the petitioners to repay the amount deposited with them:—Held, also, that the doubts of the petitioners were reasonable and they were entitled to costs. Re Ging, 20 O. R. 1.

Mortgage to Officers — Successors.]—A mortgage was made, pursuant to 9 Vict. c. 90, to the president and treasurer of a building society, their successors and assigns, in trust for the society. The society having subsequently exercised the power of sale, the then president and treasurer, successors of the original mortgages, conveyed to the purchaser by a deed under seal not being the society's seal. The purchaser sold to G., who objected to the title:—Held, that the lands were conveyed in fee simple to the president and treasurer by the mortgage, and that these officers for the time being had the power to convey in fee, that the power was duly exercised by them, and G. was bound to accept the title. Rules-Interest.]- By one of the rules of a savings and loan society, which were subscribed by all members on obtaining loans or advances of shares, it was provided that when a payment off of a mortgage was made before it became due, the present value of future repayments should be calculated to the end of the term, and discounted at such rate of interest and on such terms as the directors might determine; and by another of the rules the directors, on default, were empowered to sell the mortgaged estate, and on such sale to retain and apply so much of the purchase money as should be necessary to redeem the property pursuant to the provisions contained in the foregoing rule:—Held, that the master proceeded on an erroneous principle in calculating interest on the sum advanced at nine per cent. from the date of its advance until the day appointed for payment; and that he was bound to ascertain the amount necessary to discharge the mortgage by the same rules and on the same principle, as the directors of the society computed the same. Crone v. Crone, 26 Gr. 459.

Rules-Interest-Costs.]-By s. 3 of 37 Vict. c. 50 (D.), borrowers from building so-cieties incorporated under C. S. U. C. c. 53, cheries incorporated under C. S. U. C. C. 55, though not members of the society or signing the rules, are made subject to all rules in force at the time of becoming borrowers, so that by virtue of such rules the society, on a sale of land under a mortgage given by such borrower to the society on default before the expiration of the term fixed by the mortgage, are not restricted to the amount originally advanced with the then accrued interest, but are entitled in addition thereto to discount the future repayment at such rate of interest, and on such terms as the directors determine. The costs of sale and commission thereon were held to be properly chargeable, but not a charge for insurance and survey, or the costs of an action on the covenant, coming within the rules. Green v. Hamilton Provident Loan Co., 31 C. P. 574.

Rules—Redemption.]—By one of the rules of a building society it was provided that "If any member shall desire to have his property value of future repayments, calculated to the end of the term, and discounted at such rate of interest and on such terms as the directors may determine." The effect of a person ob-taining a loan from the society was, that he became a member of the society, and as such assented to all the rules thereof. Therefore, where a suit was instituted upon a mortgage by reason of default having been made in repayment, the court held the society had the right to say upon what terms the future repayments should be computed, and that if the society saw fit to do so they could insist on repayment of the whole amount of the mortage, which included the principal sum and interest for the whole period the mort-gage had to run. Western Canada Loan and Sacings Society v. Hodges, 22 Gr. 566.

Rules-Subsequent Changes-Representations. — A circular was issued, with the know-ledge of the directors of the defendant com-pany, which, amongst other things, set out that "loans can be paid at any time and a discharge of the mortgage will be given, the rule of the society being, when this privilege is taken advantage of, to charge three months' additional interest. additional interest at the same rate at which the loan was made." The plaintiff saw this circular exposed in the office of an appraiser of the company through whom the loan was effected, and was thereby induced to mortgage his land for twenty years, the loan to be re-payable on the instalment plan:—Held, that the plaintiff could insist on redeeming mortgage according to the terms set forth in the circular, such right being sustainable either on the footing of the contract evidenced by the mortgage, the effect of which was to incorporate the rules of the society, the evidence shewing that what was put forward in the circular as the rule of the society was one of the rules referred to in the mortgage; or on the footing of a collateral and independent contract. Hodgins v. Ontario Loan and Debenture Co., 7 A. R. 202.

Held, that although the mortgage recited that the mortgagor was a member of the society, having subscribed for eighty-eight shares of the stock, which the society had agreed to pay him in advance on receiving that security pay him in advance on receiving that security therefor, &c., yet without express stipulation to that effect, the mortgagor could not be affected by rules made subsequently to the execution of the mortgage, even if he could under the system under which the operations of the society were carried on be considered a member when he had received the amount of his shares; but that at all events his liability could not be extended beyond the clear words of his contract, which did not point to any but the then existing rules. Ib.

Shares-Forfeiture.]-In January, 1864, a non-borrowing member died intestate. No one administered until June, 1869. In that interval his shares ran into arrear, and in consequence the society in November, 1865, de-clared them forfeited, and carried the amount thereof to the credit of the profit and loss ac-count. After the society had been, or been supposed to have been, wound up, and the assets distributed, letters of administration were obtained, and the administrator applied to the society to be admitted as a member thereof, but was refused:—Held, 1. that the proceeding of the society to forfeit the shares in the absence of a personal representative was illegal; 2. that the plaintiff (the administrator) was entitled to relief, and that the lapse of time between the attempted forfeiture and the procuring letters of administration was no answer to the claim. Glass v. Hope, 16 Gr. 420, in appeal from S. C., 14 Gr. 484.

-Payment.]-Where a building so-Sharesciety should, if properly managed, have terminated in ten years, but did not:—Held, that borrowing as well as non-borrowing members were bound to continue paying their monthly subscriptions, if necessary, until they reached the amount of their shares. Wilson v. Upper Canada Building Society, 12 Gr. 206.

Treasurer-Bond.]-Under 9 Vict. c. 90, it is not essential to a bond for the performance of the treasurer's duties, that he should join in it with his sureties. Two pleas intended to set up this defence were held bad for uncertainty. If the plea, that the rules of for uncertainty. 11th plea, that the rules of the society did not provide that the treasurer or other principal officer should, once at least in every year, prepare a general statement of the funds and effects, according to the statute.

Replication, that the rules did provide that the statement referred to in the plea should be made at least once in every year according to the form of the statute, &c.:—Held, replication good. Wilkes v. Clement, 9 U. C. R. 339.

Act to Prevent Frauds against Cheese Factories. |—The "Act to Provide against Frauds in the supplying of Milk to Cheese or Butter Manufactories," 51 Vict. c. 32 (O.), though penal in its nature, does not deal with criminal law within the meaning of s. 91, s.-s. 27, of the B. Contract to Sell Product — Persons Liable.]—A cheese factory called the Tin Cap Factory, having been established by a number of persons called patrons—namely, persons sending milk to the factory, and receiving in return either cheese or the price of its sale, in proportion to the quantity of milk delivered—they met together, and appointed three of their number, the defendants H. M., G., and C., to be a committee to manage the business, and another, the defendant A. M., to look after the sales and report to the committee. It did not appear to whom the factory building belonged. A. M., acting under instructions from the committee, entered into a contract to sell to the plaintiff the season's cheese, stating: "We have this day sold the cheese manufactured at the Tin Cap Factory," &c., signed by A. M. only. The evidence was contradictory as to whether his instructions were limited to the July supply or extended to the season; but it appeared that the committee, after they were informed of it, assisted in the deliveries after July:—Held, in an action by plaintiff against the committee and A. M., for not delivering the cheese, that the patrons were part-owners of the cheese made at the factory; and that he and the committee were liable on the contract. Quere, whether all the other patrons were not liable also; but there being no pien in abatement, it was unnecessary to decide this question. A. M., on being sued alone, plended the nonjoinder of the other defendants. Per Galt, J., he was precluded from insisting that he was not liable if they also were not liable with him. Gill v. Morrison, 26 C. P. 124.

he was not hable if they also were not made with him. Gill v. Morrison, 26 C. P. 124.

The contract after agreeing to sell the cheese, stated; "We commenced making on the 1st July. Have now on hand — cheese, Will make until 31st October. Will have 800 to 900 in number:"—Held, that this was not a contract for from 800 to 900 boxes, but a representation only of what the factory was expected to produce. Ib.

Evidence of Occupation - Refusal to Carry.]—The plaintiff proved a receipt signed by defendants contracting to carry, on certain by detendants contracting to carry, on certain conditions, and that they had carried fish for one witness called, as well as for the plaintiff, on an arrangement made by their agent in their office for a month. This witness also said the other fishermen in G. had arrangements with defendants for the carriage of fish:—Held, some evidence that defendants were carriers, and that if so, they were liable to an action at common law for refusine to to an action at common law for refusing to carry except upon conditions limiting their common law liability:-Held, also, that to support such action it must be shewn that the plaintiff tendered the goods to be carried, as well as the fare:—Held, also, that the con-tract to be inferred from the evidence stated in the case, was a limited not a general one as declared upon. Leonard v. American Express Co., 26 U. C. R. 533.

Express Company — Discrimination in Customers—Charges.]—An express company is not bound to carry except according to its profession, and is entitled to discriminate as to its customers, and is not confined by any rule or regulation as to the charges it may make, providing they are reasonable. An action by a rival company which collected together small parcels for the carriage of which it charged a rate much smaller than the defendants an express company, did for similar parcels, packed them together in one large parcel, and sought to compel the defendants, at great loss, to carry such parcel by size and weight rate, was dismissed. Johnson v. Dominion Express Company, 28 O. R. 203.

Forwarder.]-A forwarder is a common carrier, and not liable for loss from the act of God or the King's enemies. Smith v. Whiting, 3 O. S. 597.

Lumberman Carrying Lumber.] lumberman agreeing to carry lumber for hire at the request of the owner thereof, does not thereby become a common carrier. Re Coumbe, Cockburn, and Campbell, 24 Gr. 519.

Person Transporting Goods for Hire. -A person engaging to transport goods for hire is not, by virtue of such engagement merely, a common carrier. Benedict v. Arthur, 6 U. C. R. 204.

Warehousemen.]—When in an action gainst common carriers from Kingston to Montreal, it was proved that the plaintiff had sent his goods to defendants at a season when they could not be forwarded, and defendants received them into their store at Kingston to be forwarded at the earliest opportunity, and before the navigation had opened, or time for transportation had arrived, they were de-stroyed in defendants' storehouse without their stroyed in detendants storehouse without their default, by an accidental fire, and a verdict was found for the plaintiff:—Held, that it ought to have been distinctly left to the jury to find whether the defendants received the goods only as warehousemen until the opengoods only as warenousemen until the open-ing of navigation, or whether their liability as carriers commenced from the moment of their receipt; and it not having been so left to them, the court granted a new trial.

Ham v. McPherson, 6 O. S. 360.

Han v. McPherson, 6 O. S. 330.

Held, on a subsequent trial, that it was a question for the jury whether defendants received the goods as carriers or warehousemen, and that the circumstance of the navigation being closed by the ice every year at the season of the receipt of the goods, and also at the time of the fire did not warehousement. the time of the fire, did not necessarily determine, as a matter of law, that the defendants must be looked upon as having acted in their character of warehousemen only. S. C., H. T. 6 Vict.

Warehousemen.]-Where flour was delivered to defendants, who were warehouse-men and carriers, with directions to sell as much of it as they could during the winter, and put the remainder in transitu for plaintiff in the spring, and some sales having been made before navigation opened in the spring, an accidental fire destroyed the remainder, without any default or negligence of de-fendants:—Held, that as the flour at the time of the fire was in the hands of defendants as warehousemen, and not as common carriers, they were not responsible. Thirkelt v. McPherson, 1 U. C. R. 318.

Warehousemen. | — When a shipper stores goods from time to time in a railway warehouse, londing a car when a car-lond is ready, the responsibility of the railway company in respect of such of the goods as have not been specifically set apart for shipment is not that of carriers but of warehousemen, and in case of their accidental destruction by fire, the shipmer has no remedy against the company. shipper has no remedy against the company.

Milloy v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 21 A. R. 404; reversing 23 O. R. 454.

II. BILLS OF LADING.

Advances.]-Per Burton, J.A.-Bills of lading are not intended as a representation to the public that they may safely advance their money upon them, but are mere contracts between the carrier and the shipper. Erb v. Great Western R. W. Co., 3 A. R. 446. Per Patterson, J.A.—Bills of lading are not only intended as an assurance to the shipper, but as a representation to the "banker or private person" with whom the statute deals, that they may act on the faith of them, and advance their money. Ib.

Assignment to Bank-Re-assignment by Bank to Shippers. |-M. & Co., at Guelph, bought a car load of wheat on commission for They paid for it themselves, and shipped it by defendants' railway, taking the railway receipt in their own names as consignees. The car was addressed to the care of C. at Waterdown, M. & Co, being aware that it was intended to be ground there for C., and the receipt was indorsed by them to the order of the Canadian Bank of Commerce. Through this bank they drew upon C. at fifteen days' sight for the price, with their commission and bank charges, and discounted the draft with the receipt attached as collateral security. At Waterdown the wheat was delivered by defendants upon C's order to his brother, who had a mill there. It was mixed by him with other wheat and ground; and 55 barrels of flour, the equivalent, was delivered by him to defendants for C. C. became insolvent before the draft matured, and M. & Co. took it up and got the railway receipt re-indorsed to them. C.'s assignee having sued the defendants in trover and detinue for the flour, they, in privity with M. & Co., denied the plaintiff right to it, and set up the title of M. & Co. The case having been tried without a jury: Held, that M. & Co., on the re-indorsement by the bank to them, were in as of their former title, not as assignees of the bank with the rights given to the latter by the statute, and that their rights must be considered as if the bank had never intervened. Mason v. Great Western R. W. Co., 31 U. C. R. 73.

Connecting Lines-Through Contract. -The plaintiff agreed with the M. D. T. Co. for the conveyance of butter from London in Ontario to England. The butter was carried from London to the Suspension Bridge by the G. W. Ry. Co., from the Bridge to New York by the N. Y. C. R. R. Co., and from New York to England by the G. W. Steamship Co., bills of lading being given at London to the plaintiff by a person who signed as agent severally and not jointly for the M. D. T. Co., the G.W. Ry. Co., and the G. W. Steamship Co. The plaintiff sued for damage sustained by the butter, joining the three companies as defendants under the O. J. Act, s. 91. It appeared that the damage occurred while the butter was on a lighter of the N. Y. C. R. R. Co. in New York harbour, and before it was actually delivered at the pier or on board a vessel of the steamship company:—Held, that the M. D. T. Co., by virtue of its through contract was liable for the damage; that the responsibility of the steamship company had not attached until after the damage was done, one of the terms of the bill of lading being that "this contract is executed and accomplished and the liability of the G. W. Ry. and its connections as common carriers thereunder terminates on the delivery of the goods or property to the steamer or steamship company's pier at New York, where the responsibility of the steamship company commences, and not before;" and that inasmuch as the butter had been received in England by the consignees without objection, the steamship company would have been protected by conditions which by the bill of lading were made part of the contract, one of which was to the same effect as the condition in question in Moore v. Harris, 1 App. Cas. 318. The judgment in 4 O. R. 723, as to the defendants the Merchant's Despatch Company was affirmed. Hately v. Merchant's Despatch Transportation Co., 12 A. R. 201.

Custom of Port.]—A trade custom in order to be binding upon the public generally must be shewn to be known to all persons whose interests require them to have know-ledge of its existence, and, in any case, the terms of a bill of lading, inconsistent with and repugnant to the custom of a port, must prevail against such custom. Parsons v. Hart, 30 S. C. R. 473.

Quebec Contract.]—Held, that the fact of the bill of lading laving been made in the Province of Quebec, did not deprive plaintiffs of the benefit of R. S. O. 1877 c. 116, for not only was this not set up by the pleadings, but also it did not appear that the Quebec law was different from that of Ontario; and in the absence of proof it would be assumed to be the same. Langdon v. Robertson, 13 O. R. 497.

Shipping Agent—Alteration of Terms.]

—A shipping agent cannot bind his principal by receipt of a bill of lading after the vessel containing the goods shipped has sailed, and the bill of lading so received is not a record of the terms on which the goods are shipped Where a shipper accepts what purports to be a bill of lading, under circumstances which would lead him to infer that it forms a record of the contract of shipment, he cannot usually, in the absence of fraud or mistake, escape from its binding operation merely upon the ground that he did not read it, but that conclusion does not follow where the document is given out of the usual course of business and seeks to vary terms of a prior mutual assent. N. W. Transportation Co. v. McKenzie, 25 S. C. R. 38.

Shipping Note-Railway-Signature by Agent.]—The plaintiffs sued for non-delivery Agent.)—The plaintiffs sued for non-delivery of certain goods received by defendants from one G. W., to be carried from Paris, Ont., to St. John, N. B., and there delivered to one R. W., or to such person as he should direct, alleging that the said R. W. duly indorsed the shipping note of the said goods in manner and form provided by statute to the plaintiffs, who then became and are the lawful and bona fide holders of the same for valuable consideration, and entitled to the possession of the said goods. Plea, setting out the alleged shipping note verbatim, which was in the usual form, dated at Paris station, was in the usual form, dated at Paris station, G. T. R., acknowledging the receipt of the goods from G. W., addressed to R. W., St. John, subject to the terms and conditions stated. It was signed "W. S. Martin, Agent, G. T. R.," and on the face of it was written, "Deliver to order of Royal Canadian Bank—R. Wallace." The plea then averred that the indorsement to the plaintiffs mentioned in the declaration was that mentioned in the plea on the face of the shipping note, and that there was no other indorsement; and that G. did not, at any time before this suit, deliver the flour in the said shipping note mentioned, or any part thereof, to the defendants, in manner and form as in the declaration and shipping note mentioned:—Held, on demurrer, that the plea was bad, not being either in denial of the plaintiffs' title as indorsees for value, or of the defendants having signed or given the shipping note as alleged; and that it was not so framed as to enable the court to determine whether the defendants were estopped from denying the delivery to them of the goods mentioned in the bill of lading, which was the point argued. Royal Canadian Bank v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 23 C. P. 225

Semble, however, that the shipping note was a bill of lading within 33 Vict. c. 19, s. 3 (O.); and that the insertion of the word "train" in the Act (not found in the English statute, 18 & 19 Vict. c. 111) clearly makes it applicable to engineers.

In the Act that count in the English statute, 18 & 19 Vict. c. 111) clearly makes it applicable to railways. Ib. Semble, also, that it was unnecessary to allege in the declaration that the plaintiffs, being bankers, acquired the shipping note as collateral security, as authorized by 34 Vict. c. 5 (D): though the plaintiffs would have the see, this under a denial of the indorse-

Semble, also, that under the Interpretation Act. 31 Vict. c. 1, s. 7, s. s. 9 (O.), the defendants, though a corporation, would be "persons signing" the bill of lading, if signed by their authorized agent. Ib.

Signing — Indorsement — and dupli-amages 1—B, held a bill of lading in dupli-Danages, |—B. held a bill of lading in dupli-cate for 100 barrels of flour on board the steamer "Corinthian," consigned to his order at Kingston. He sold the flour to H. at 87 with him to the plainat Kingston. He sold the flour to H. at 87 per barrel, and went with him to the plain-tiff bank, where he indorsed the two bills in blank, and gave them to H. H. attached one to his draft for $500, which he discounted, and applied the proceeds towards paying B. The duplicate bill of lading H. kept, and the next day he got B. to write on it, over his indersement, "Deliver to order of H." This duplicate got into the possession of defendants at Kingston, not indorsed, and they obtained the flour there from the wharfinger by repre-senting that they had B.'s order. Plaintiffs brought trover, and the jury found that there had been no sale of the flour by H. to defendants. On objections taken to the plaintiffs' title: — Held, 1. That the bill of lading was valid, though signed by the purser, not by the master; 2, that the indorsement of the bill of lading in blank was sufficient, without speci-fying that it was indorsed to secure the note discounted; 3, that the alteration, by convert-ing the general into a special indorsement, was immaterial; 4, that under the circum-stances, the indorsement by B, to the bank was sufficient without H.'s indorsement, either because B, was in truth the owner, or because H. having so represented to the plaintiffs, he and defendants claiming under him estopped; 5, that the plaintiffs were entitled to recover the full value of the grain, not merely the $500 advanced by them. Royal Canadian Bank v. Carruthers, 28 U. C. R. Canadian Bank v. C 578; 29 U. C. R. 283.

Transfer of Property.]—The declaration alleged that the plaintiff by his agents delivered to the defendants 8,000 bushels of his corn, to be carried from Chicago to Stratford, &cc., and to be delivered to the Bank of Montreal or their assigns; that the bank assigned the corn to the plaintiff, yet that defendants neglected for an unreasonable time to carry and deliver it, whereby the plaintiff lost a market and was afterwards obliged to sell for a less price than he would otherwise have done. It appeared that the corn was shipped by M. & Co. "as agents and forwarders," on account of whom it might con-cern, to be delivered to the Bank of Montreal or their assigns, and the bill of lading was indorsed by the agent of the bank to the plaintiff, with whom the defendants treated as the owner, and delivered it to him after some delay caused by a charge made and afterwards remitted by them. It was objected that only the consignor or consignee could sue upon the consignor or consignee could sue upon this contract, not the plaintiff; that the bank could not assign to him; and if they could, could not assign would not pass. There the right of action would not pass. There was no evidence to shew what interest the bank had in the corn :- Held, there being no plea denying plaintiff's property in the corn, that he was admitted to have been the owner when it was shipped; that the bill of lading when it was simpled; that the bit of hank, in did not transfer the property to the bank, in whom no other right was shewn; that their indorsement was therefore unnecessary; and that he was entitled to maintain the action. Semble, however, that if he had first acquired his title by such indorsement, he might have use care by such indorsement, he might have sued defendants for any negligence occurring after they had recognized him as owner. Kyle v. Buffalo and Lake Huron R. W. Co., 16 C. P. 76.

A bill of lading is not conclusive proof of the change of property, like a bill of sale; it is a question of evidence whether such an operation should be given to it. Ib.

III. GOODS AND ANIMALS.

Animals — Knowledge of Special Purpose.]—Where dogs were delivered to an express company to be carried to a city for the purpose, made known to the company, of being exhibited at a dog show, and were not delivered at the address given until ten hours after their arrival in the city, and were thus too late to compete, their owner was held entitled to damages against the company, including anticipated profits. Kennedy v. American Express Co., 22 A. R. 278.

Change of Destination — Agent's Potents,—The plaintiff, a dealer in grain, &c., in Canada, consigned to his correspondent in Liverpool. England, a quantity of clover seed, and delivered the same to the agent of the defendant company at Waterford in Ontario, for the purpose of being carried to Liverpool, receiving from such agent the usual bill of lading. Before the seed had left the American frontier for the sea-board the plaintiff desired to change the consignee, and appeared to the company, resiphent of the additional fragrees, who, on a fresh bill of lading, agreeing to earry sused to London. The change of destination was duly communicated by B. to the agent of the company at Black Rock, whose duty it was to have made the necessary changes in the instrument securing the passage of the goods duty free through the United States, but this he omitted to do, in consequence of which the seed went to Liverpool, so that instead of being delivered in London on the 12th February, it did not reach there until the 23rd March, too late for the sowing trade, so that the seed had to be sold at a henry loss:—Held, affirming 1 O. R. 47, (11) that the Toronto agent was authorized to make the change in the destination of the seed, and (2) that the destination of the seed, and (2) that fendants were bound to indemnify the plaintiff against the loss sustained by reason of the fall in the market value of the seed, together with the additional sum paid for the freight from Liverpool to London:—Semble, that the same rule applies where the goods are not intended for immediate sale at their place of destination. Monteith v. Merchants' Despatch and Transportation Co., 9 A. R. 282.

Condition Limiting Liability—Part of Line in Foreign Country.)—The Railway Act of Canada is not applicable to a railway situate in a foreign country, though operated by a company incorporated by or under the authority of the Parliament of Canada. Therefore, where goods shipped from Scotland to be delivered at Fortland, Maine, U.S., to the Grand Trunk Railway Company, and by that company to be forwarded thence to the palantiffs at Toronto, were destroyed by fire on the line of that company in New Hampshire, U.S., by negligence from which they were protected from liability by the terms of the contract for carriage:—Held, that the provisions of s. 246 of 51 Vet. c. 25 (D.), disabiling a railway company from relieving itself from liability for its own negligence or that of its servants, were not applicable to the defendants' contract; and an action to recover damages for the loss of the goods failed. Maedonald v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 31 O. R. 663;

Connecting Lines-Authority of Agent.] —E., in British Columbia, being about to purchase goods from G., in Ontario, signed, on request of the freight agent of the Northern Pacific Railway Company in British Columbia, a letter to G. asking him to ship goods via Grand Trunk Railway and Chicago and N. W. R. W. Co., care Northern Pacific Railway Company at St. Paul. This letter was forwarded to the freight agent of the Northern torwarded to the freight agent of the Northern Pacific Railway Company at Toronto, who sent it to G. and wrote to him, "I enclose you card of advice, and if you will kindly fill it up when you make the shipment and send it to me. I will trace and hurry them through and advise you of delivery to consignee. shipped the goods as suggested in this letter deliverable to his own order in British Columbia:—Held, affirming 21 A. R. 322, and 22 O. R. 645, that on arrival of the goods at St. Paul the Northern Pacific Railway Company was bound to accept delivery of them for carriage to British Columbia and to expedite such carriage; that they were in the care of said company from St. Paul to British Columbia; that the freight agent at Toronto had authority so to bind the company; and that the company was liable to G, for the value of the goods which were delivered to E. at British Columbia without an order from G. and not paid for. Northern Pacific R. W. Co. v. Grant, 24 S. C. R. 546.

Connecting Lines — Special Contract — Loss by Five in Warchouse.]—In an action by S., a merchant at Merlin, Ont., against the Lake Erie and Detroit River Ry. Co., the statement of claim alleged that S. had purchased goods from parties in Toronto and elsewhere to be delivered, some to the G. T. R. Co., and the rest to the C. P. R. Co. and other companies, by the said several companies to be, and the same were transferred to the Lake Erie Co., for carriage to Merlin, and that on receipt by the Lake Erie Co. of the goods it became their duty to carry them safely to Merlin and deliver them to S. There was also an allegation of a contract by the Lake Erie Co. for storage of the goods and delivery to S. when requested, and of lack of proper care whereby the goods were lost. The goods were destroyed by fire while stored in a building owned by the Lake Erie Co. at Merlin :- Held, that as to the goods delivered to the G. T. R. Co, to be transferred to the Lake Erie Co. as alleged, if the cause of action stated was one arising ex delicto it must fail, as the evidence shewed that the goods were received from the G. T. R. Co. for carriage under the terms of a special contract contained in the bill of lading and shipping note given by the G. T. R. Co. to the consignors, and if it was a cause of action founded on contract it must also fail as the contract under which the goods were received by the G. T. R. Co. provided among other things, that the company would not be liable for the loss of goods by fire; that goods stored should be at sole risk of the owners; and that the provisions should apply to and for the benefit of every carrier :-Held, further, that as the goods delivered to the companies other than the G. T. R. Co. to be delivered to the Lake Erie Co., the latter company was liable under the contract for storage; that the goods were in its possession as warehousemen, and the bills of lading contained no clause, as did those of the G. T. R. Co. giving subsequent carriers the benefit of their provisions; and that the two courts below had held that the loss was caused by the negligence of servants of the Lake Erie Co, and such finding should not be interfered with :- Held, also, that as to goods carried on a bill of lading issued by the Lake Erie Co., there was an express provision therein that owners should incur all risk of loss of goods in charge of the company as warehousemen; and that such condition was a reasonable one, as the company only undertakes to warehouse goods of necessity and for convenience of shippers. Lake Erie and Detroit River R. W. Co. v. Sales, 26 S. C. R. 663.

Consignee not Found.] — Obligation as to delivery of goods, where the consignee cannot be found. Close v. Beatty, 28 C. P. 470.

Contract — Damages.]—Where the only evidence of the contract to carry was that the foreman of the freight department at one of the defendants' stations agreed to have certain trees forwarded to a station not on the defendants' line, but on one connecting therewith:—Held, that this was evidence to be submitted to a jury of a contract to that effect binding the defendants, and that a non-suit was wrong. The measure of damages against carriers for non-delivery of trees considered. McGill v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 19 A. R. 245.

Damages—Illusory Tender of Goods.]—Action for the value of 50 kegs of butter delivered by plaintiff to defendants to carry from G. to T. Defendants relied upon a tender of the butter to plaintiff, as preventing the recovery of more than nominal damages. The tender was made in writing by defendants' solicitor, two days before the Assizes, offering for plaintiff's acceptance the 50 kegs of butter, which had been sold by plaintiff to M., and for which M. had recovered against the plaintiff's own risk:—Held, wholly illusory, plaintiff's own risk:—Held, wholly illusory, and not to partake of any of the incidents of a legal tender, and that plaintiff was entitled to recover the full value of the property. Brill v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 20 C. P.

Delivery Beyond Limits.]-A parcel was left with an express company's agent, c. o. d. The consignee lived beyond the express company's limits. The parcel was received by the agent without objection, and forwarded by him, and delivered to the consigner without the sum due being collected:-Held, that the company were liable, nett v. Vickers, 12 C. L. J. 51,

The extent of the authority of an agent of an express company, and the liability of the latter under the circumstances set out in this case, discussed. Ib.

Discretion of Carrier.]-Construction of a contract entered into between the consignor and forwarder of goods, as to the discretion the forwarder may use in the time, mode, and place of shipping the goods. Four-ter v. Hooker, 4 U. C. R. 18.

It is no defence for a forwarder deviating from his instructions, that after the deviation he told the plaintiff's agent he had done so, and no objection was made by the agent. Aliter, if he had told the agent of his intention before the deviation, and could shew that the agent had any discretion in the matter.

Express Company—Conditions Precedent
Pleading.] — Where an express company gave a receipt for money to be forwarded with the condition indorsed that the company the condition indorsed that the company should not be liable for any claim in respect of the package unless within sixty days of loss or damage a claim should be made by written statement with a copy of the contract annexed:—Held, that the consignor was oba condition precedent to recovery against the express company for failure to deliver the parcel to the consignee. Richardson v. Can-ada West Farmers' Ins. Co., 16 C. P. 430, distinguished.—In an action to recover the value of the parcel, on the common count for money had and received, the plea of "never indebted" put in issue all material facts necessary to establish the plaintiff's right of action. Northern Pacific Express Co. v. Martin, 26 S. C. R. 135.

Negligence-Stowage-Fragile Goods.]-The chartering of a ship with its company for a particular voyage by a transportation com-pany does not relieve the owners and master from liability upon contracts of affreightment during such voyage where the exclusive control and navigation of the ship are left with the master, mariners and other servants of the owners and the contract had been made with them only. The shipper's knowledge of the manner in which his goods are being stowed under a contract of affreightment does not alone excuse shipowners from liability for damages caused through improper or insufficient stowage. A condition in a bill of lading, providing that the shipowners shall not be liable for negligence on the part of the master or mariners, or their other servants or agents is not contrary to public policy nor prohibited by law in the Province of Quebec. When a bill of lading provided that glass was carried only on condition that the ship and railway companies were not to 0 - 29 be liable for any breakage that might occur, whether from negligence, rough handling or any other cause whatever, and that the owners were to be "exempt from the perils of the seas, and not answerable for damages and losses by collisions, stranding, and all other accidents of navigation, even though the damage or loss from these may be attributable to some wrongful act, fault, neglect, or error in judgment of the pilot, master, mariners, or other servants of the shipowners; nor for breakage or any other damage arising from the nature of the goods shipped," held that such provisions applied only to loss or damage resulting from acts done during the carriage of the goods and did not cover damages caused by neglect or improper stowage prior to the commencement of the voyage. Glengoil Steam-ship Company v. Pilkington; Glengoil Steam-ship Company v. Ferguson, 28 S. C. R. 146.

Particular Route — Damages.]—Breach of contract to carry by a particular route. Recovery of damages caused by consequent payment of higher rates. See Langdon v. Robertson, 13 O. R. 497.

Production of Shipping Bills - Contributory Negligence.]—The plaintiffs knowing that the defendants sometimes delivered goods without production of the shipping bills goods without production of the simpling one where not consigned "to order," consigned certain goods to the "I. C. Company," not yet incorporated, and the defendants delivered them to an individual carrying on business in that name and at the ostensible office of the company, without production of the bill:company, without production of the bull;— Held, that the defendants were not liable for misdelivery. There is no law in this Pro-vince requiring carriers to take up shipping bills before the delivery of goods. Conley v. Canadian Pacific R. W. Co., 32 O. R. 258.

Reduced Rate-Release of Company.]-Where the finding of the jury as to the grounds of negligence in an action against a railway company for damage to goods were based on mere conjecture, the verdict for the plaintiffs was set aside, but as it could not be said that there was no evidence of negligence on other grounds, a new trial was directed. on other grounds, a new trial was directed. The plaintiffs' agent shipped a quantity of plate glass by defendants' railway, signing an agreement that in consideration of the defendants receiving the goods at a reduced rate of twenty-three cents per 100 pounds they should not be responsible for any damage arising in the course of the transit, including negligence. The defendants had two rates, namely, the twenty-three cents, a third class rate, and a double first class rate of sixty cents, which they contended were in accordance with the Canadian Joint Freight Classification, adopted by them and approved by the Governor in Council under s. 226 of 51 Vict. c. 29 (D.), "The Railway Act," the said classification stating that, the third class rate applied where the goods were "shipped at owners' riskshipper signing special plate glass release form." The plaintiffs' agent was aware of the two rates and signed the agreement assenting to the lower rate, under the belief that the ing to the lower rate, under the belief that the defendants could not, under s. 246, take advantage of the provision absolving them from liability where the damage was occasioned by negligence. No by-laws approving of the company's tariff under which these rates were charged had been approved of by the Governor in Council, although a by-law fixing a first class rate of sixty-six cents and a third class rate of fifty cents had inter alin been so approved:—Held, per Meredith, C.J., that notwithstanding the payment of the lower rate, and the age-ment signed by the agent, the defendants could not, under s. 246, relieve themselves from liability when negligence was proved. Per Rose, J.—The third class rate was the only rate "lawfully payable." If sonly one rate is fixed the provision in the freight classification as to release was ultravires as contrary to the provisions of s. 246. Per MacMahon, J.—No by-law fixing the rate at sixty cents having been approved of by the Governor in Council, there was no freight "lawfully payable," without which there could be no alternative rate, and the release, which would otherwise have been valid, was inoperative. Cobban v, Canadian Pacific R. W. Co., 26, O. R. 732. Affirmed in appeal, 23 A. R.

Representation as to Receipt.]-The declaration alleged that the defendant before the committing of the grievance, &c., was carrier and express agent; that the plaintiff delivered to one W. a sum of money to be handed to defendant, to be carried and de-livered to S., and that defendant falsely and fraudulently represented to the plaintiff that W. had delivered said money to him, whereby the plaintiff was satisfied of the fact, whereas in truth it had not been so delivered, but ap-propriated by W. to his own use; and by reason of such false and fraudulent repre-sentation W. obtained time to and did ab-soond, and the plaintiff lost said money, which he would otherwise have recovered from W. -Held, on demurrer, that a sufficient cause of action was shewn; that it was unnecessary to allege that defendant knew the representations to be false, the words falsely and fraudu-lently being equivalent to knowingly; or that defendant was a carrier at the time when, &c., for the ground of action being the fraud, his being a carrier was immaterial. Foung v. Vickers, 32 U. C. R. 385.

Ship-Perishable Goods-Transhipment.] -If a chartered ship be disabled by excepted —If a chartered snip be disabled by excepted perils from completing the voyage the owner does not necessarily lose the benefit of his contract, but may forward the goods by other means to the place of destination and earn the freight. The option to tranship must be exercised within a reasonable time, and if repairs are decided upon they must be effected with reasonable despatch or otherwise the owner of the cargo becomes entitled to his goods. Quare-Is the shipowner obliged to tranship? -If the goods are such as would perish before repairs could be made the shipowner should either tranship, deliver them up, or sell, if the cargo owner does not object, and his duty is the same if a portion of the cargo, severable from the rest, is perishable. And if in such a case the goods are sold without the consent of the owner the latter is entitled to recover from the shipowner the amount they would have been worth to him if he had received them at the port of shipment or at their destination at the time of the breach of duty. Owen v. Outerbridge, 26 S. C. R. 272.

Special Contract — Limitation of Liability.—By s. 246 (3) of the Railway Act, 1888, 51 Vict. c. 29 (D.), "every person aggrieved by any neglect or refusal in the premises shall have an action therefor against the company, from which action the company shall not be relieved by any notice, condition or declaration, if the damage arises from any negligence or omission of the company or of its servants:"—Held, that this provision does not disable a railway company from entering into a special contract for the carriage of goods and limiting its liability as to amount of damages to be recovered for loss or injury to such goods arising from negligence. Vogel v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 11 S. C. R. 612, and Bate v. Canadian Pacific R. W. Co., 15 A. R. 388, distinguished. The Grand Trunk Railway Co. received from R. a horse to be carried over its line, and the agent of the company and R. signed a contract for such carriage which contained this provision: "The company shall in no case be responsible for any amount exceeding one hundred dollars for each and any horse," &x::—Held, that the words "shall in no case be responsible" were sufficiently general to cover all cases of loss however caused, and the horse having been killed by negligence of servants of the company. R. could not recover more than $100, though the value of the horse largely exceeded that amount. Robertson v, Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 24 S. C. R. 611; affirming 21 A. R. 204, and 24 O. R. 75.

Wrong Address.]—Address on packages differing from that on abstract—Action for negligence in going by the latter. See Hunter v. Borst, 13 U. C. R. 141.

IV. PASSENGERS AND LUGGAGE.

Assault on Passenger—Scope of Employment.]—The plaintiff, who had purchased a special excursion ticket from Toronto to Niagara and return on the same day by a steamer of the defendants, and which had been taken up by the purser on that day, claimed the right to return by it on the following day under an alleged agreement with the purser, which the latter denied. On the purser demarding the plaintiff's fare, and the latter refusing to pay it, the porter, by the purser's direction, laid hold of a valise which the plaintiff was carrying, and attempted to take it and hold it for the fare, whereupon a scuffle ensued, and the plaintiff was injured:—Held, that the purser was not acting within the scope of his duty in thus forcibly attempting to take possession of the valise, and the defendants were not liable for his act. Emerson v. Niagara Navigation Company, 2 O. R. 528.

nis act. Emerson V. Naggra Navigation Company, 2 O. R. 528. It appeared that the purser bad been summoned by the plaintiff before a magistrate for the assault, and a fine imposed, which he paid. Held, that this, under 32 & 33 Vict. c. 20, s. 45 (D.), though a release to the purser, did not constitute any bar to the present action against the company. Ib.

Held, also, that the alleged imprisonment of the plaintiff by the purser in his office for non-payment of his fare, not being an act which the defendants themselves could leadly have done, the defendants were not liable for it. Ib.

Connecting Lines—Negligence—Passeuger—Cuttle Drover—Free Pass.]—A contract was made by a railway company for the carriage of cattle to a point on the line of a connecting railway company at a fixed rate for the whole journey. The contract provided that the shipper (or his drover) should accompany the cattle; and that the person in charge should be entitled to a "free pass," but only "on the express condition that the railway company are not responsible for any negligence, default, or misconduct of any kind on the part of the company or their servants."—Held, that the condition was valid and could be taken advantage of by the connecting railway company, who therefore were not liable to the shipper for injuries suffered by him in a collision caused by their servants. The condition of the shipper for injuries suffered by him in a collision caused by their servants. Co. I. R. 10 Q. B. 437, applied. Bicknell v. Genad Trank R. W. Co. 28 A. R. 431.

Continuous Journey—Break in Railway
—Imaibus Transfer.|—The plaintiff was a passenger by the defendants' railway under a contract by which the defendants were to carry him by continuous journey from Harrisburg to Stratford, via Gait and Berlin. There was a break in the line of the defendants railway at Gait, the distance the properties of the conbeing three-forest described by the defendants, but Negligence—Driver of Coach.]—In an action against a coach proprietor for injury to a passenger by upsetting, it is no misdirection to tell the jury that unless the driver exercised a sound discretion at the time the necident happened the owner is respansible; and if he could have exercised a sounder judgment or better discretion than he did, as by driving slower or faster, or by directing his passengers to get out at any dangerous or difficult passage, the proprietor is liable. Stanton v. Weller, H. T. 6 Vict.

Negligence—Driver.]—In an action against the proprietors of a railroad car drawn by horses, for an accident to the plainful by the carelessness of the driver, an avenment that the contract was to carry safely, is supported by proof that the accident area from the driver's want of care and skill. Thompson v. Macklem, 2 U. C. R. 300.

Negligence—Several Defendants.]—In an action against four, the declaration stated that defendants were proprietors of a stage coach for carrying passengers; that they received the plaintiff as a passenger for reward; and by reason thereof it became and was their duty to use due care in conveying him; yet they, not regarding their duty, did not use due care, &c., but by reason of the carelessness and improper conduct of the defendants, by their servant, he was thrown off and injured, &c.:—Held, that upon this declaration a verdict might be given against three of the defendants, and for the other. Gunn v. Dickson, 10 U. C. R. 461.

Negligence—Contributory Negligence.]—
The plaintiff, standing on the front platform of one of the defendants' cars, which was crowded, was thrown off by a jolt and injured, but it did not appear whether, at the time of the accident, he was holding on to the iron rail on the platform or not:—Held, that the fact of the plaintiff not proving affirmatively that he was so holding on was not a ground for nonsuit. Cornich v. Toronto Street R. W. Co., 23 C. P. 355.

Negligence — Climatic Conditions.] — Where the breaking of a rail is shewn to be due to the severity of the climate and the suddenly great variations of the degrees of temperature, and not to any want of care or skill upon the part of the railway company in the selection, testing, laying, and use of such rail, the company is not liable in damages to a passenger injured by the derailment of a train through the breaking of such rail. Canadian Pacific R. W. Co. v. Chalifoux, 22 S. C. R. 721.

Ship—Breach of Contract to carry Passengers—Action in Rem.]—The plaintif, for an alleged breach of a contract to carry him from Liverpool to St. Michaels and thence to the Yukon gold fields, took proceedings against the ship and obtained a warrant for her arrest:—Held, that even if the breach alleged were established, the plaintiff was not entitled to a lien on the ship. Cook v. The Manauence, 6 Ex. C. R. 193.

Special Contract-Exemption from Liability.]—The Commercial Travellers' Association of Ontario, by written agreement with the defendant company, obtained for its members for the season of 1885 special privileges in travelling by the company's boats, one of the terms of the agreement being that the members should receive tickets at a reduced rate "with allowance of 300 lbs, of baggage free, but the baggage must be at the owner's risk against all casualties." This agreement was continued during 1886 by verbal agreement between the manager of the company and the secretary and traffic manager of the association. D., a commercial traveller, obtained a ticket for a passage on one of the company's boats under this agreement, paying the reduced fare, and took on board three trunks containing the usual outfit of a traveller for a jewellery house, valued at about $15,000. The trunks were checked in the usual way and no intimation was given the usual way and no intination was given by D. to any of the officials on the boat as to their contents. On the passage the contents of the trunks were damaged by the negligence of the officers of the company and an action was brought by D. and his employers to recover damages for such injury:—Held, affirming 15 A. R. 647, that the agreement between the association and the company was in force the association and the company was in force in ISSG; that the term "baggage" in the agreement meant not merely personal baggage, such as every passenger is allowed to carry without extra charge, but commercial baggage, and would include the outfit in this case; and that in the expression "must be at owner's risk against all casualties," the words "against all casualties" do not limit, control, or destroy, but rather strengthen, the protection which the former words "at owner's risk" afforded the defendants. Dixon v. Richelieu Navigation Co., 18 S. C. R. 704.

Special Contract — Reduced Fare.] — The plaintiff purchased from an agent of the defendant company at Ottawa what was called a landseeker's ticket, the only kind of return ticket issued on the route, for a passage to Winnipeg and return, paying some thirty dollars less than the single fare each way. The ticket was not transferable and had printed on it a number of conditions, one of which limited the liability of the company for baggage to wearing apparel not exceeding $100 in value, and another required the signature of the passenger for the purpose of identification and to prevent a transfer. The agent obtained the plaintiff's signature to the ticket explaining that it was for the purpose of identification but did not read nor explain to her any of the conditions, and having sore eyes at the time she was unable to read them herself. On the trip to Winnipeg an accident happened to the train and plaintiff's baggage, valued at over $1,000, caught fire and was destroyed:—Held, reversing 15 A. R. 388, and 14 O. R. 625, that there was sufficient evidence that the loss of the baggage was caused by defendants' negligence, the special conditions printed on the ticket not having been brought to the notice of plaintiff she was not bound by them and could recover her loss from the company. Bate v. Canadian Pacific R. W. Co., 18 S. C. R. 697

Ticket-Condition Printed on Face-No Stop Over.]—The suppliant, who was a manufacturers' agent and traveller, purchased an excursion ticket for passage over the Intercolonial Railway between certain the Intercolonial Kaliway between certain points and return within a specified time. On the going half, printed in capitals, were the words, "good on date of issue only," and immediately thereunder, in full-faced type, "no stop over allowed." He knew there was "no stop over allowed." He knew there was printing on the ticket, but put it into his pocket without reading it. pocket without reading it. He began the journey on the same day he purchased the journey on the same day he purchased to ticket, but stopped off for the night at a station about half-way from his destination on the going journey. The next morning he on the going journey. The next morning he attempted to continue his journey to such destination by a regular passenger train. Being asked for his ticket he presented the one on which he had travelled the evening before, and was told by the conductor that it was good for a continuous passage only. On his refusal to pay the prescribed fare for the rest of the going journey, the conductor put him off the train at a proper place, using no unnecessary force:—Held, that issuing to the suppliant a ticket with the conditions upon which it was issued plainly and distinctly printed upon the face of it was in itself reasonably sufficient notice of such conditions; and if, under the circumstances, he saw fit to put the ticket into his pocket without reading it he had nothing to complain of except his own carelessness or indifference. Coombes v. The Queen, 4 Ex. C. R. 321. See the next Ticket—Right to Stop Over.]—By the sale of a railway ticket the contract of the railway company is to convey the purchaser in one continuous journey to his destination; it gives him no right to stop at any intermediate station. Craig v. Great Western R. W. Co., 24 U. C. R. 509; Briggs v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 24 U. C. R. 516; and Cunningham v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 9 L. C. Jur. 57, 11 L. C. Jur. 107, approved and followed. Coombes v. The Queen, 26 S. C. R. 13.

Ticket—Condition—Vià Direct Line.]—A condition in a railway ticket as to travelling "vià direct line" was rejected as meaningless, each of three possible routes being circuitous, though one was shorter in point of milenge than the others. Semble, in this country it is not the law that a passenger rightfully travelling upon his ticket is bound to pay fare wrongfully demanded, or to leave the train on the conductor's order, at the peril of not being able to recover damages for an assault committed in expelling him by force. The American cases on the subject considered and not followed. Judgment below, 20 O. R. 603, varied. Dancey v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 19 A. R. 664.

Ticket—Production of,]—The contract between a person buying a railway ticket and the company on whose line it is intended to be used implies that such ticket shall be produced and delivered up to the conductor of the train on which such person travels, and if he is put off a train for refusing or being unable so to produce and deliver it up, the company is not liable to an action for such ejectment. Grand Trunk R. W. Co. v. Beaver, 22 S. C. R. 498; reversing 20 A. R. 476, and 22 O. R. 937.

V. MISCELLANEOUS CASES.

Criminal Charge Pending.]—In an apricial against a carrier for non-delivery of a package of money, defendant pleaded not guilty. The plaintiffs' witness, their agent, proved that within a week after his delivering the parcel to defendant he found that he had absconded; that he then sued out an attachment against him as an absconding debtor; and that, as he believed, defendant was at the time of the trial in gnol, charged with stealing the money:—Held, that this evidence sufficiently shewed a felony, as defendant upon it might, as a balieve, be predicted by a supersonal properties of the property convicted of larveny under C. S. C. c. 92, s. 55, and a noneult was ordered. Liting-stone v. Massey, 23 U. C. R. 156. See Reyins v. Massey, 13 C. I. 484.

Crown.]—Held, under the circumstances of this case Her Majesty could not be held liable as a common carrier. Regina v. Mc-Farlanc, 7 S. C. R. 216.

Crown.] — Liability as carrier. See Lavoie v. The Queen, 3 Ex. C. R. 96.

Crown.]—Crown's liability for injuries to passengers on government railway. See Dubé v. The Queen, 3 Ex. C. R. 147.

Excess.]—Claim of carrier for excess in quantity named in bill of lading. See Murton v. Kingston and Montreal Forwarding Co., 32 C. P. 366.

Express Company.]—Right to the facilities afforded by railways in the conduct of their business. See Vickers Express Co. v.

Canadian Pacific R. W. Co., 9 O. R. 251, 13 A. R. 210.

Freight—Cross-claim.]—It is an established rule of English law that negligence or breach of duty cannot be set up as a defence in action for the recovery of freight, where the defendant has derived a partial benefit under the contract, but defendant must bring a cross action for damages. Brown v. Muckle, 7 I. J. 1989.

Such rule must be taken to prevail in division courts, notwithstanding the provisions of the Division Courts Act enabling the Judge to decide according to equity and good con-

A different rule prevails in several states of the neighbouring republic, and is highly convenient as calculated to prevent multiplicity of suits. Ib.

Freight — Payment to Wharfinger.] — Assumpsit on the common counts for work and labour, &c., by plaintiffs, who were common carriers by water. Plea, setting forth a delivery of the goods carried by plaintiff to a wharfinger at T., to whom defendants, according to the custom and usage of forwarders and carriers at T., paid the plaintiffs 'claim:—Held, plea bad, for not averring notice of the custom to the plaintiffs. Torrance v. Hayes, 2 C. P. 238; 3 C. P. 274.

Declaration for work and labour by carriers by water. Plea, that a wharfinger, to whom goods were delivered by plaintiffs for defendants, was agent of plaintiffs to receive payment, and that they paid him accordingly:—Held, that from the course of dealing between such parties, as set out in the evidence, the wharfinger was such an agent. Held, also, that after delivery of the goods without exacting freight, the wharfinger still continued plaintiffs agent to demand and receive the freight till his authority was revoked. S. C. 3 C. P. 278.

Interpleader—Grain—Inability to Deliver Specific Property—Unim for Unliquidated Damages.]—Where grain was shipped over a railway under a contract which provided that it might be deposited in the railway company's elevators in common with other grain of like grade, and at its destination was claimed by the indorsee of the bill of lading, and also by an investment company claiming under a mortgage from the shipper, an interpleader order was made, upon the application of the railway company as carriers or bailees, notwithstanding that the specific grain could not be delivered, owing to its having been mixed with other grain in the elevator, as permitted by the contract, and notwithstanding that the investment company's claim was, as contended, one for unliquidated damages for conversion of the grain. Attenborough v. St. Katharine's Dock Co., 3 C. P. D. 450, followed. Recandin Pacific R. W. Co. and Carruthers, 17 P. R, 277.

Letters Delivered.]—Held, 1. That it is not illegal to deliver a money letter to a private friend on his journey, provided such better be delivered by such friend to the party to whom it is addressed; 2. that such friend as a gratuitous bailee would be bound to take as much care of the letter as he would take of his own; 3. that if lost where he does take such care he is not responsible. Tindall y. Hayacard, 7 I. J. 243.

Loss of Letter.]—Held, that the stage coach proprietor (who was also the contractor for carrying the mail) was not liable, under the facts of this case, for the loss of a letter containing a note. Holman v. Weller, 8 U. C. R. 202.

Officer of Ship—Liability of Owners.]—
Where a person delivers a parcel to carry to a person on board a boat, not as to a servant of the owners, but to be carried by such person himself, either for reward or otherwise, the person so engaging to carry it is alone responsible for its loss. McLeod v. Eberts, 7 U. C. R. 244.

If, however, the parcel is delivered to the person on board to be carried, not on any private undertaking, but as an officer of the boat, the owners of the boat would be chargeable with the loss, though they were to have no reward for carrying; but then, to establish the liability of the owners, it would be necessary for the jury to find gross negligence in the owners or their servants, or at least a want of that ordinary care which a prudent man would take of his own goods. Ib.

Pleading.]—Action against several defendants charged as common carriers, in case. A traverse of the delivery to the defendants of the parcel, without saying "or any or either of them:"—Held, good. Park v. Davis, 6 U. C. R. 411.

In an action on the case (by the plaintiffs in ejectment) against defendants as common carriers, for not delivering within a reasonable time the record of nisi prius at the assize town:—Held, that defendants could not put in issue the plaintiffs' title to the land. Ib.

Promissory Note — Non-presentment.]—Plaintiff sued defendant, an agent of an express company, on an alleged undertaking to take and carry a copy of a lost note and present it for payment, and in case of non-payment to notify the indorsers. Breach, that defendant did not present or notify, in consequence of which the indorsers refused to pay the note. The evidence shewed no demand by the plaintiff upon the indorsers for payment, no refusal by them to pay:—Held, that without such evidence, &c., the plaintiff could at most recover only nominal damages; but that defendant was entitled to a verdict, for that on the evidence he had fulfilled his contract by carrying the note to the place agreed upon, and placing it in the hands of a notary for presentment and protest. McQuarrie V. Pargo, 21 C. P. 478.

Sunday.]—Conveying travellers on Sunday. See Regina v. Daggett, Regina v. Fortier, 1 O. R. 537; Attorney-General ex rel. Hobbs v. Niagara Falls, Wesley Park, and Clifton Transcay Co., 19 O. R. 624; Attorney-General v. Hamilton Street Railway Co., 24 A. R. 170.

Venue.]—In an action on the case against carriers, the venue cannot be changed on the common affidavit. Ham v. McPherson, M. T. 6 Viet.

I. IN CIVIL PROCEEDINGS.

1. In General.

Arrest.]-Certiorari granted to remove a cause, defendant having been arrested. Wina-ker v. Pringle, 1 P. R. 357.

Judgment in Inferior Court.] - A certiorari must have been delivered to the proper officer before the entry of final judgment, or, after interlocutory judgment, before the jury have been sworn on the assessment: one may nave been sworn on the assessment; otherwise a procedendo will be ordered, even though the record has been returned and filed in the court above. Barnes v. Cox. 16 C. P. 236.

Patent Act.]—A motion for a writ of certiorari to bring up into this court all the proceedings, &c., before the Minister of Agriculture, including his decision therein, on an application made before him to have a patent declared yoid for noncompliance with the provisions of s. 28 of the Patent Act of 1872 was refused. In re Bell Telephone Company, 9 O. R. 339.

Railway Act.]-Held, that the divisional court had no power to remove proceedings by certiorari in order that the decision of a judge might be quashed or rescinded as made in excess of his authority as a special tribunal under the Railway Act. Re McQuillan and Guelph Junction R. W. Co., 12 P. R. 294.

2. County Court.

Interpleader.]-A certiorari does not lie to remove an interpleader issue. If such a writ do improvidently issue, the application should be to quash the certiorari, and not for a procedendo. Jones v. Harris, 6 L. J.

Mortgage Action.]—Section 57 of the County Courts Act, C. S. U. C. c. 15, does not authorize the removal of a case to the court of chancery, where such removal is desired on account of the existence of a subsequent mortgage upon the premises exceeding the jurisdiction of the court. Mitchell v. Martin, 2 C. L. J. 249.

Plaintiff Applying - Replevin.] - A brought replevin in the county court and obtained a verdict, which was set aside because title to land came in question. Nothing was said in the rule about a new trial, but he served another notice of trial, and the cause was made a remanet. The surety being sued in this court on the replevin bond for not prosecuting the suit with effect, moved for a mandamus to compel the county court to proceed with the action, or a certification remove it, and in the meantime to stay proceedings in this court; but the court refused to interfere. Semble, that a certiorari im-ports jurisdiction in the inferior court, and will not lie to determine whether it exists, at least not at the instance of the plaintiff who sued there. Meyers v. Baker, Hargreaves v. Meyers, 26 U. C. R. 16. 23 Vict. c. 44, prohibits a certiorari unless the debt or damages claimed exceed $100.

Quære, therefore, whether replevin is within the Act. Ib.

The mandamus was refused, among other reasons, because the applicant had a remedy by appeal from the rule in the county court setting aside the verdict. Ib.

Title to Land.]-Where in replevin in a county court the plaintiff shewed clearly that he had reason to believe that the title to the land would be brought in question by defendant, a certiorari was granted. Heaton v. Cornwall, 4 P. R. 148.

Want of Jurisdiction.] - Where an action has been brought in the county court beyond its jurisdiction, or when being rightly brought there the jurisdiction has been determined by matter of pleading or evidence, the whole proceedings are coram non judice and void, and they cannot be removed by continuing the continuing of the continuing t

3. District Court.

Judgment. |- The court set aside a certiorari, to remove proceedings from a district court after judgment and execution, and witnout any application to this court or a judge, laying any especial ground. Douglas v. Hutchinson, 5 O. S. 341.

Judgment for Defendant.] - A judgment for defendant cannot be removed from a district court into the King's Bench under 19 Geo. III. c. 70. Gregory v. Flannegan, 2 O. S. 518.

Right to.]—A certiorari under 19 Geo. III. c. 70, may issue to remove a cause from a district court into the Queen's bench. Baldacin v. Roddy, 3 O. S. 166.

Verdict.]-A certiorari will not lie to an inferior court—e. g. a district court, after verdict, although this court may be of opinion that evidence rejected should have been received. Tully v. Glass, 3 O. S. 149.

4. Dicision Court.

Agreement of the Parties.]—Where a certiorari is regularly isued for the removal of a cause from the division court after new trial granted, a previous alleged understanding between the parties that the cause should be tried in the division court is no ground for interfering with the certiorari.
Lucas, 8 L. J. 184. Help v.

Case Partly Heard. |- After the hearing of a cause has been proceeded with before the Judge, though no jury is sworn, it is too late to serve a writ of certiorari. Gallagher v. Bathic, 2 C. L. J. 73.

A cause was heard and evidence taken, and judgment was postponed to be given at and jugament was postponed to be given at the clerk's office on a future day. After-wards, and before that day, a writ of cer-tionari was served:—Held, too late, and a procedendo was awarded. Ib.

Interpleader.]—An interpleader issue in a division court held not within s. 51 of the Division Courts Act, and so not removable by certiorari. Russell v. Williams, S. L. J. 277.

Intituling Affidavits.] — Affidavits under 13 & 14 Viet. c. 53, s. 85, to remove a cause from the division court, must be intituled in the court in which the motion is made, not in the division court. Smyth v. Micholls, 1 P. R. 355.

Held, that in this case no sufficient ground for a removal was shewn. 1b.

Judge Wrong in Law. |-Held, that a Judge of a division court having expressed an erroneous opinion in a case, is no ground for removal. Holmes v. Reeve, 5 P. R. 58.

Judgment - New Trial.] - A certiorari will not be granted after judgment and execu-tion regularly issued and money made and pade dover, although a new trial may have been granted subsequently in the division court. McKensie v. Keene, 5 L. J. 225.

Legal Question.]-A suit will be removed upon its being shewn that questions of law as to the Statute of Limitations will arise at the trial. Ridley v. Tullock, 3 L. J.

Legal Questions.]—A suit brought by an incorporated company will be removed, if it be shewn that difficult questions of law will arise as to the powers conferred by the Act of incorporation. Cataraqui Cemetery Co. v. Burrowes, 3 L. J. 47.

Legal Questions — Residence.] — A cer-tiorari was granted under 13 & 14 Vict. c. 53, where defendant resided in a part of the Province far distant from the division in which the suit was commenced, and also on account of a difficult question of law. Augent v. Chambers, 3 L. J. 108.

Plaintiff Applying.]-A plaintiff is not entitled to remove his own plaint from a division court. Prudhomme v. Lazure, 3 P.

Taking Chance. | - Where a defendant knows all the facts before the trial, but, nevertheless, argues the case and obtains an opinion from the Judge, the case should not be removed, even though the Judge desire it. Holmes v. Reeve, 5 P. R. 58.

Taking Chance.]-This case was tried before the division court Judge, who gave his decision in favour of the plaintiff, but formdecision in favour of the plaintiff, but formally reserved the giving of judgment to a subsequent day, to enable the defendants to move for prohibition or certiorari. In the meantime the defendants gave the required notice:—Held, that the defendants could not thus wait and take the chances of a decision thus wait and take the chances of a decision in their favour, and finding it adverse, apply for a writ of certiorari and properly obtain it. Black v. Wesley, S. L. J. 27, Gallagher v. Bathie, 2 C. L. J. 73, and Holmes v. Reeve, 5 P. R. 58, followed. In re Knaph v. United Tornships of Medora and Wood, 11 O. R. 138; 14 A. R. 112.

Verdict.]—Held, that the Imperial sta-tute 43 Eliz. c. 5, applies to cases in divi-sion courts, and a certiorari was held too late where a jury was empanelled by the Judge, and verdict rendered before delivery of certiorari to the Judge. Black v. Wesley, S L. J. 277

Semble, the Act in spirit applies to cases where plaintiff's witnesses are sworn, although no jury is called. Ib.

5. Proceedings after Removal.

Costs-Judgment Set Aside.]-Where the judgment of a court of requests had been re-moved into this court by certiorari, and set aside upon defendant's application, without any interference by plaintiff, the court re-fused an attachment against him for nonpayment of costs of removing the proceedings. Cramer v. Nelles, Tay. 36.

Costs-Scale.]-An order for a certiorari to bring up a case into a superior court, entitles defendant to the full costs of that court, if he succeeds in the action, without court, it he succeeds in the action, without any certificate of the Judge who tries the cause. Costs for superfluous or irrelevant matter introduced into affidavits will not be allowed, and in extreme cases the Judge will disallow costs for the whole affidavit. Corley v. Roblin, 5 L. J. 225.

Costs of Removal. | - Where the case was removed from the division court into the common pleas by defendant, who obtained a verdict, and the order for the certiorari was silent as to the costs, defendant, on entering judgment, was not allowed the costs of removal. Kerr v. Cornell, 1 C. L. J. 326.

Directions to Proceed.]-The court will not direct how proceedings are to be carried on after the removal of a cause from a district court to the Queen's bench. Copping v. McDonell, 5 O. S. 311.

Filing Papers-Venue.] — Where cases have been brought up from the division court of an outer county, into one of the superior courts at Toronto, by certiorari, the papers should be filed in the Crown office at Toronto; but the venue need not be laid in the county of York. Chambers v. Chambers, 3.1, J. 205.

New Cause of Action.]—Held, I. That although a plaintiff may, after removal of his plaint from a fiviseen after removal of his plaint from a fiviseen removal of action, he cannot declare for a different cause of action; 2, that if he vary his cause of action; 2, that if he vary his cause of action; 2, that where plaintiff sued for injuries done to a filly by defendant's bull, and afterwards declared in the superior court for entry by defendant on plaintiff's land with the bull, and tearing up the soil, &c., the cause of action was varied, Mason v. Morgan, 3 P. R. 325.

New Gause of Action. — A claim in the division court for 840, for detention of plain-tiff by defendants on a journey from Toronto to Detroit and back, (the journey occurring between 28th November, when he started from Toronto, and 3rd December, when he got back.) was removed by certiorari into the Queen's bench, where the declaration was in contract for $500 for delaying the plaintiff in his journey, in not starting the train at the time named. An application to set aside the declaration was refused, the two claims being held sufficiently similar, considering the want of technicality in division court plendings. Hunter v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 6 P. R. 67.

Option to Proceed.]—A Judge, having all the material facts before him, has a right to grant a certiorari and impose such terms as he may think fit, but not to deprive the plaintiff of his legal right in regard to the position of the cause. When a defendant removes a cause, the plaintiff has the option to proceed or not, but if the pleadings be removed and stand as pleadings in the superior court, the defendant will be in a position to compel the plaintiff to proceed. The plaintiff must declare de novo. A Judge has no power to change the venue by the order granting the writ of certificary; it should be a substantive motion, when the plaintiff has shewn where he will lay his venue after the cause has been removed. Patterson v. Smith, 14 C. P. 525.

Plaintiff Applying.]—Where the plaintiff, pending an issue in law, removed the case by certiorari to the Queen's bench, and defendant refused to enter an appearance after notice, an order to compel him to do so, or to assist the plaintiff to proceed, was refused, Quere, as to the plaintiff's right to remove his own cause under such circumstances. Dennison v. Knox, 3 P. R. 150.

Pleading.]—Where a cause is removed from the county court after issue joined:— Semble, that the plaintiff should declare de nove. In this case the plaintiff did so declare, and signed judgment, though defendants had not appeared. Defendants moved to set aside the judgment, but made no objection for the want of appearance:—Held, that they were precluded from afterwards objecting on that point. Hankey v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 17 U. C. R. 472.

Pleading.]—A case being at issue in the county court, was removed into the Queen's bench by certiorari, and the plaintiff proceeded upon the pleadings as they stood, filing no new declaration, and entering no appearance above:—Held, that defendants having gone to trial without objection could not object after verdict. Fulton v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 17 U. C. R. 428.

Proceeding in Court Below.]—An application made below after the removal to set aside the limit judgment entered, because the claim was unliquidated, had been refused, because, having compiled with the certiorar, the Judge had no longer jurisdiction in the cause:—Held, that the subject matter of the suit being within the jurisdiction of the Judge below, his judgment could not be reviewed on the proceedings before this court; but, semble, that if it appeared on the face of the record that the judgment was final when it ought to have been interlocutory, a writ of error would lie. Semble, that any proceedings in the court below after removal of the cause into this court, could not be sustained:—Held, also, that after the return of the record, &c., under the proceedendo, to the court below, the Judge there had no power to set aside the judgment and let defendant in, upon terms, to plend. Barnes v. Cox, 16 C. P. 236.

II. IN CRIMINAL PROCEEDINGS.

1. In What Cases.

By-law.]—Held, following Re Bates, 40 U. C. R. 284, that the conviction being for the breach of a by-law the writ of certiforar was not taken away by R. S. O. 1877 c. 74. Regina v. Washington, 46 U. C. R. 221.

Cheese Factory Act.]—The right to certain a right and taken away in cases arising under the Act to provide against frauds in the supplying of milk to cheese and butter manufactories, 51 Vict. c. 32 (O.), but even if it were the court would not be justified in refusing to examine the evidence to see if the magistrate had jurisdiction. Regina v. Dowling, 17 O. R. (398).

Committal for Trial — Discharge on Baill.—Where a defendant has been committed for trial, but afterwards admitted to hail and discharged from costody, a superior court of law has still power to remove the proceedings on certiforar, but in its discretion it will not do so where there is no reason to apprehend that he will not be fairly triel. Regina v. Adams, 8 P. R. 462.

Conviction—4ppcal.] — Where a defendant, having been convicted of evading toll, appended to the quarter sessions, where he was tried before a jury and acquitted, this court refused a certiforari to remove the proceedings, the effect of which would be to put him a second time upon his trial. Stewart v. Blackburn, 25 U. C. R. 16.

Conviction—Appeal.]—Where a conviction affirmed on appeal to the sessions, was brought up by certiorari, contrary to 32 & 33 Vict. c. 31, s. 71 (D.), as amended by 33 Vict. c. 27, s. 2, which enacts that in such case no certiorari shall issue:—Held, that the court could not quash the couviction (the case being one in which the magistrate had jurisdiction), though it was clearly bad, and no motion had been made to quash the certiorari. Regina v. Johnson, 30 U. C. R. 423.

Conviction.]—A conviction having been brought up by certiorari, when, under 32 & 33 Vet. c. 31 (D.), no such writ could issuc—Fer Richards, C.J., and Morrison, J., it could not be quashed, but the court could only discharge the defendant. Semble, per Wilson, J., that being before the court it night be quashed. Regina v. Levecque, 30 U. C. R. 500

Conviction—Appeal.]—Notice of appeal given, but insufficient—Certiorari therefor not taken away. Regina v. Caswell, 33 U. C. R. 203.

Conviction—Appeal. |—Conviction — Appeal under 38 Vict. c. 11 (O.). — Delay — Transmission of papers—Return to certiorari —Dury of justices of the peace. See Regina v. Slaven. 38 U. C. R. 557.

Conviction Quashed. |—A. engaged B. and his hired man C. to build a bouse for him, and agreed to pay B. his ordinary wages, and $$1 per diem for C. A. making default, was convicted before a magistrate under the Masser and Servant Act, and ordered to pay B. $15.56 for C.'s services. A. appealed, out the appeal was adjourned to another session when the conciction was quashed. B. then obtained a summon to she we cause why a certiforari should not issue to return the order quashing the conviction, &c., in the Queen's bench:—Held, that the applicant had a right to the certiforari; but, semble, that the proceedings to reinstate this conviction were unnecessary. In re Doyle and McCumber, 4 P. R. 32.

Coroner's Inquisition.]—The improper reputation of evidence is no ground for a certograri to bring up a coroner's inquisition. Regina v. Ingham, 5 B. & S. at p. 260, specially referred to. Regina v. Sanderson, 15 O. R. 196.

Depositions.]—Quere, as to the power of a Judge in chambers, on an application of a prisoner for his discharge on a bad warrant, to remand him, and in aid of the prosecution to order a certiorari to bring up the depositions, &c. In re Carmichael, 10 L. J. 325.

Evidence Rejected.] — Refusal to hear witnesses for defence under 36 Vict. c. 43 (O.). Certiorari not taken away by s. 35. See Re Holland, 37 U. C. R. 214.

Evidence Rejected.]—Held, that a defendant is not entitled to remove proceedings by certiorari, to a superior court from a police magistrate or a justice of the peace after conviction, or at any time, for the purpose of moving for a new trial for the rejection of evidence, or because the conviction is azamst evidence, the conviction not being before the court and no motion made to quash it. But held, that even had the conviction in this case been moved to be quashed, and an order misi applied for upon the maxistrate and prosecutor for a mandamus, to the former to hear further evidence which he had reach both motions would have been discussed in the best of his judgment and not seed to the best of his judgment and not seed to the best of his judgment and not prosecuted to the best of his judgment and not make the properties of the properties of the properties of the properties.

which the court would not interfere. Regina

v. Richardson, S. O. R. 651.

The writ of certiorari is not taken away by s. 28 of 32 & 33 Vict. c. 32 (D.). S. C., 11 P. R. 95.

Illegal Adjudication—Appeal.]— The divisional court of Queen's bench has power to quash a conviction for an illegal adjudication of punishment, although it has been appealed against and affirmed in respect to such adjudication; and s. 71 of 32 & 33 Viet. c. 31 (D.), does not take away the certiorari in such a case. McLellan v. McKinnon, 1 O. R. 219.

Indictment. —An indictment cannot be removed by certiorari from the court of general quarter sessions to the Queen's bench after verdict, even by consent of the parties. Reguna v. Lafferty, 9 U. C. R. 306.

Indictment.]—Nor from the assizes after judgment pronounced, for the purpose of applying for a new trial. Regina v. Smith. 10 U. C. R. 99; Regina v. Crubbe, 11 U. C. R. 447.

Indictment — Acquittal.] — After an acquittal in a criminal case, the court refused a certiforari to remove the indictment with a view of applying for a new trial or to stay the entry of judgment, so that a new indictment might be preferred and tried without prejudice. Regina v. Whittier, 12 U. C. R. 214.

Indictment—Acquittal.]—After acquittal for nuisance a motion was made for a certiorari to remove the indictment, with a view to new trial, no ground being shewn by affidavit; and the new trial was moved for on the same day, being the fourth day of term:—Held, that the certiorari, after acquittal, could not issue as of course; but that if it could, it would have been unnecessary to move for a new trial within the first four days of term. Regina v. Gzoveski, 14 U. C. R. 591.

Indictment.]—See Regina v. Ottawa and Gloucester Road Co., 42 U. C. R. 478.

Magistrate no Jurisdiction.]—Held, that the defendant appearing, on the evidence returned, to have bond fide asserted a claim to the land which he had enclosed, it was not a proper case for the adjudication of the mayor of B., under ss. 72 or 185 of 12 Vict. c. S2; and that consequently the mayor's summary conviction of the defendant, under that Act, might be quashed by certiorari. Regina v. Taylor, 8 U. C. R. 257.

Magistrate not Qualified.]—The only evidence offered in proof of an objection that the magistrate before whom the recognizance in this case had been taken, was not properly qualified, was a certificate, purporting to be under the hand and seal of the clerk of the peace, that he did not find in his office any qualification filed by the magistrate:—Held, insufficient. Regina v. White, 21 C. P. 354.

Sessions—District Rates.] — A certiorari lies to remove orders of sessions relating to the expenditure of the district rates and assessments, at the instance of the attorneygeneral, without notice. Rex v. Justices of Newcastle, Dra. 114.

Sessions—Reasonable Doubt.]—Where it is shewn to a Judge in chambers that there is a reasonable doubt as to the legality of a conviction under the Master and Servant Act, he will order a certiorari for the removal of the conviction, notwithscanding the confirmation of it by the sessions on appeal. In re Sullican, S. L. J. 276.

Sessions—Jurisdiction of Justices.]—Defendant was convicted under 8 Vict. c. 45 for working on Sunday at his ordinary calling. He appealed to the quarter sessions, where the question was tried before a jury and the conviction affirmed. The proceedings having been removed by certiorari to this court—Held, that a certiorari would lie, not to examine the finding of the jury on the facts, but to determine whether the justices had exceeded their jurisdiction. Hespeter v. Shaw, 16 U. C. R. 104.

Sessions.]—The proper proceeding to reverse a judgment of the court of quarter sessions on an indictment is a writ of error, not certiorari and habeas corpus. Regina v. Powell, 21 U. C. R. 215.

Sessions — Recognizance to Appear.]—Held, that a recognizance to appear for trial on a charge of perjury at the sessions was wrong, as the court had no jurisdiction in perjury, but a certiorari to remove it was refused, as the time for the appearance of the party had gone by. Regina v. Currie, 31 U. C. R. 582.

Sessions.]—It is improper to call on the court of general sessions to shew cause to a rule for a certiorari. Re Nash and McCrackea, 33 U. C. R. 181.

Sessions.]—In the case of a conviction for an offence, not being a crime, affirmed on appeal to the sessions, the writ of certiorari is not taken away by 38 Vict. c. 4 (O.). In re Bates, 40 U. C. R. 284.

Sessions—Appeal.] — Quære, whether the right to a certiorari was taken away by an appeal to the quarter sessions. Regina v. Sparham, S O. R. 570.

Sessions—typeal.]—The defendants having been convicted by a police magistrate of an offence against the provisions of C. S. C. 95, appealed to the quarter sessions, and the convictions were affirmed. Defendants now applied for a certiorari to remove the convictions, notwithstanding that 32 & 33 Vict. c. 27, s. 71 (D.), as amended by 33 Vict. c. 27, s. 2 (D.), expressly takes away the right to certiorari where there has been an appeal to the sessions:—Held, that where the magistrate has jurisdiction over the offence charged, and the right to certiorari is taken away, the court cannot examine the evidence to see if the magistrate had jurisdiction to convict, and the certiorari was refused. Regima v. Scott, 10 P. R. 517.

Sessions—Appeal.] — Held, that though not expressly so enacted, 49 Vict. c. 49 (D., is retrospective in its operations and applies to convictions whether made before or after the passing of the Act, and that under s. 7 the right to certiorari is taken away upon service of notice of appeal to the sessions, that being the first proceeding on an appeal from the conviction. Regina v. Lynch, 12 O. R. 372.

Sessions - Appeal - Rejection of Evidence. |— The defendant was convicted by two justices of the peace under the Weights and Measures Act, 42 Vict. c. 16, s. 14, s. s. 2 (D.), as amended by 47 Vict. c. 36, s. 7 (D.), of obstructing an inspector in the discharge of his duty, and was fined $100 and costs, to be levied by distress, imprisonment for three months being awarded in default of distress. At the hearing before the justices the de-fendant tendered his own evidence, which was The defendant appealed to the excluded. quarter sessions, and on the appeal again tendered his own evidence, which was again excluded, and the conviction affirmed. On motion for certiorari :- Held, that the conviction having been affirmed in appeal certiorari was taken away except for want or excess of jurisdiction, and that there was no such want or excess of jurisdiction, inasmuch as the justices and the quarter sessions had jurisdiction to determine whether the defendant's evidence was admissible or not, and that such determination, even if erroneous in law, could not be reviewed by certiorari. Regina v. Dunning, 14 O. R. 52.

Temperance Act — Absence of Jurisdiction.]—Semble, that although the Temperance Act of 1894, 27 & 28 Vict. c. 18, s. 36, takes away the right of certiorari and appeal, a certiorari may be had when there is an absence of jurisdiction in the convicting justice, or a conviction on its face defective in substance, but not otherwise. In re Watts, In re Emery, 5 P. R. 267.

2. Notice of Application.

Conviction in Court.] — Held, that a conviction once regularly brought into, and put upon the files of the court, is there for all purposes, and a defendant may move to quash it, however or at whosesoever instance it may have been brought there. Where, therefore, on an application for a habeas corpus, under R. S. O. 1877 c. 70, a certiorari had issued, and in obedience to it the conviction had been returned, the conviction was quashed on motion, though there had been no notice to the magistrate, or recognizance. Regina v. Levecque, 30 U. C. R. 509, distinguished. Regina v. Wehlan, 45 U. C. R. 398.

Discharge Asked for.]—Quere, whether the certiorari in this case was properly issued without the notice, &c., required by 13 Geo. II. c. 18, though the object was to obtain the prisoner's discharge, not to quash the conviction. Regina v. Munro, 24 U. C. R.

Grounds of Objection.]—Semble, that in a notice under 13 Geo. II. c. 18, of application to remove a conviction the grounds of objection to such conviction need not be stated. In re Taylor v, Davy, 1 P. R. 346.

Magistrate.]—Notice of application for a cartiorari must be given to the convicting magistrate, and the want of it is good cause against a rule nisi to quash the conviction. Regina v. Peterman, 23 U. C. R. 516.

Private Prosecutor.]—The affidavit of service of a notice of motion for a certiorari to remove a conviction, must identify the magistrates served as the convicting magnstrates. But an affidavit defective in this respect was allowed to be amended, the time for moving for the certiorari not having expired. Such an objection was held not to be waived by the attorney having accepted service for the convicting justices, and undertaken to shew cause. The notice need not be served on the private prosecutor. Re Luke, 42 U. C. R. 206.

Prosecutor's Application.] — Where the application for a certiorari is made by the prosecutor, no notice to the justice is necessary. Regina v. Murray, 27 U. C. R. 134.

Second Application.]—Where, on an application made after notice to the convicting justices for a rule for a certiforari, the rule was refused, and on a subsequent exparte application on the same material the rule was obtained, it was—Held, that the notice of the first application would not enure to the benefit of the defendant on his second application, and that the certiforari was irregularly obtained for want of notice to the convicting justices. Regina v. McAllan, 45 U. C. R. 402.

Sessions.]—Notice of application for a certiorari to remove a conviction continued by the quarter sessions, must be given to the chairman and his associates, or any two of them, by whom the order affirming such conviction was made; and where a certiorari had been obtained without such notice, and a rule nisi obtained to quash such conviction and order, the certiorari was set aside. Regina v. Ellis, 25 U. C. R. 324.

Sessions.]—Held, that, under the circumstances of this case, no notice to the chairman of the sessions of the defendant's intention to move for a certiorari was necessary. Regina v. Casucell, 33 U. C. R. 330.

Time—Waiver.]—A preliminary objection, that the magistrate had not six full days notice of the application for the writ of certorari taken on the return of the motion to make absolute the order nist to quash the conviction, was overruled, on the ground that the magistrate, on the facts appearing in the case, had waived the right to take the objection. Regina v. Whitaker, 24 O. R. 437.

3. Practice and Procedure in General.

Amending Conviction.]—Held, that an amended conviction cannot be put in after the return of a writ of certiorari. Regina v. MacKenzie, 6 O. R. 165.

Amending Conviction.]—A magistrate can amend his conviction at any time before the return of the certiorari. Regina v. Mc-Carthy, 11 O. R. 657.

Conclusive Effect of Return.] — The definiant having been convicted for sellinguar without a license, the depositions returned to the court by the convicting magistate under a certiforar shewed that there was no evidence of a license produced before him, while the affidavits filed on the application to quasi stated that the party had a license in fact, and produced evidence of it before the magistrate, who, moreover, himself swore that he believed a license was produced, but it was not proved or given in evidence:— Held, that the return to the certiorari was conclusive, and that the court could not go behind it. Regina v. Strachan, 20 C. P. 182.

Costs.]—Where an indictment for obstructing a highway had been removed by certiorari, at the instance of the private prosecutor, into this court, and the defendant had been acquitted:—Held, that there was no power to impose payment of costs on such prosecutor. The court, however, has power to make payment of costs a condition of any indulgence granted in such a case, such as the postponement of the trial or a new trial. Regina v. Hart, 45 U. C. R. 1.

Disputed Facts — Jurisdiction.]—Where the proceedings before a magistrate are removed under 29 & 30 Vict. c. 45, the Judge is not to sit as a court of appeal from the findings of the police magistrate upon the evidence which that officer has taken; if any fact found by the magistrate is disputed, and he would have no jurisdiction had he not found that fact, then the evidence may be looked at to see whether there was anything to support his finding upon it; but if the jurisdiction to try the offence charged does not come in question as a part of the evidence, then the jurisdiction having attached, his finding is not reviewable as a general rule excent upon an appeal. Regina v. Green, 12 P. R. 375.

Evidence Omitted.]—Semble, that if material evidence be given before a magistrate, but unintentionally omitted from his return, an amendment may be allowed to supply it, but only with the concurrence of the parties, and of the witness by whom the deposition was signed, in the correctness of the additions, but it cannot be supplied by affidavit. Regina v. McNaney, 5 P. R. 438.

Evidence Required.] — Where a certiferari simply requires a return of the evidence, the magistrate need not return the conviction or a copy of it. Regina v. Mc-Nancy, 5 P. R. 438.

Evidence set out.]—Where a magistrate, on a summary trial, took no written depositions, but the conviction returned to a certiorari set out the evidence:—Held, in a certiorari set out the evidence:—Held, in that the return must be taken to be a true and full statement. Semble, that had there been proof of any other or different evidence given, the magistrate might have been required to return it, or to amend the conviction by setting it out. Regina v. Flannigan, 32 U. C. R. 503.

Intituling Papers.]—On application for a certiforari to remove conviction of one J. B., for selling liquor without license:—Held, 1. That the rule nisi was properly intituled "In the matter of J. B.;" and that it need not state into which court the conviction was to be removed, this being sufficiently shewn by the intituling it in the court in which the motion was made. In re Barrett, 28 U. C. R. 559.

Irregularity.]—In shewing cause to a rule nisi to quash a conviction, objection may be taken to the regularity of the certiorari, and a separate application to supersede it need not be made. Regina v. McAllan, 45 U. C. R. 402.

Mistake in Time.]—Owing to a mistake in the Crown office, a rule to return the certiorari, and afterwards a rule for an attachment issued, although a return had in fact been filled. More than six months having thus expired since the conviction, the court were asked to allow process to issue against the justice for the illegal conviction as of a previous term, but the application was refused. Quare, whether the six months could be held to run only from the time of quashing the conviction, In re Joice and Anglin, 19 U. C. R. 197.

Objections Open.]—Held, that the defendant having had the certiorari directed to the magistrate who had convicted was estopped from objecting that the conviction was in reality made by three justices as appeared from the memorandum of conviction which was signed by them. Regina v. Smith, 46 U. C. R. 442.

Objections to be Stated.]—A defendant applying for a certiorari to remove an indictment from the sessions must shew that it is probable the case will not be fairly or satisfactorily tried in the court below, and if difficulties on points of law form the ground of application, they must be specifically stated. In re Kellett and Porter, 2 P. R. 192.

Practice After Removal.]-A certiorari issued on the 12th April, 1872, on notice of defendant to a police magistrate, to return a conviction for selling liquor without a license. The writ was returned on the 21st May, in Easter term, with conviction and recognizance, and both defendants appeared to it by taking out rules. The prosecutor then obtained a rule nisi to quash the certiorari, and for a procedendo to the police magistrate. But up to this time there had been no motion to quash the conviction:-Held, that the proper practice appearance to the certiorars should be filed in the Crown office, and the case set down on the paper, so that either party might move for a conviction. That the defendant was in default in not having moved to quash the conviction, or set down the case on the paper. Semble, that an affirmance of the conviction by the prosecutor is necessary to obtain the costs, and further, as this was not done, the court declined to estreat the recognizance. procedendo was awarded, it being thought more advisable that the police magistrate should enforce the conviction than the court above. Regina v. Flannigan, 9 C. L. J. 237.

Quashing Certiorari.]—Where the recognizance to prosecute a certiorari, returned after allowance of the latter by the conviction justices together with the conviction, is substantially and clearly bad, and the conviction may possibly be upheld, the allowance of the certiorari may be quashed on the return of the rule nisi to quash the conviction, without a substantive motion for that purpose; but otherwise, where the objection is a trivial one, or the conviction is clearly defective and must inevitably be quashed. Regina v. Cluff,
46 U. C. R. 565.

Recognizance—Irregularity,]— In sheating cause to the rule nisi to quash the conviction, it was objected that the recognizance was irregular, being dated before the conviction, but held, that this was ground only for a motion to quash the certiorari, or the allowance of it. Regina v. Hoggard, 30 U. C. R. 152.

Recognizance.]—Held, that on the return of a writ of certiorari, a recognizance is unnecessary. Regina v. Nunn, 10 P. R. 395.

Recogniannee.]—Held, that since the passing of the Dominion statute 39 Vict. c. 49, s. 8, there is no longer necessity for a defendant, on removal by certiorari of a conviction against bim, to enter into the reconstrate as to costs formerly required:—Held, also, that the words "shall no longer apply" in s. 8 mean that from the day of the passing of the statute the Imperial Act 5 Geo. II. c. 19, shall no longer apply, not that the Insperial Act shall cease to have application in Canada upon a general order being passed under s. 6 of the Dominion Act. Regina v. Swalucell, 12 O. R. 391.

Recognizance—Form.] — Where the affidancy and another for a rule nisi to quash a conviction did not negative the fact of the sureties being sureties in any other matter, and omitted to state that they were worth $100 over and above any amount for which they might be liable as sureties, it was held insufficient. The rule in force as to recognizances prior to the passing of the Criminal Code is still in force. Regina v. Robinet, 16 P. R. 49.

Remedy for False Return.]—The only remedy for a false return to a certiorar is by action on the case at the suit of the aggrieved party, or by criminal information. Regina v. Arnold, S. C. L. T. Occ. N. 271.

Supreme Court of Canada-Inquiring into Merits.]—Application was made to the Chief Justice of the supreme court of Canada in chambers, on behalf of a person arrested on a warrant issued on a conviction by a magistrate, for a writ of habeas corpus, and for a certiorari to bring up the proceedings before the magistrate, the application being based on the lack of evidence to warrant the conviction. The application was dismissed.
On appeal to the full court:—Held, the conviction having been regular, and made by a court in the unquestionable exercise of its authority and acting within its jurisdiction, the only objection being that the magistrate erred on the facts, and that the evidence did not justify the conclusion at which he arrived as to the prisoner's guilt, the supreme court could not go behind the conviction and in-quire into the merits of the case by the use of writ of habeas corpus, and so constitute itself a court of appeal from the magistrate's decision. In re Trepanier, 12 S. C. R. 111.

The only appellate power conferred on the court in criminal cases is by s. 49 of the Supreme and Exchequer Court Act, and it could not have been the intention of the legislature while limiting appeals in criminal cases of the highest importance, to lunpose on the court the duty of revisal in matters of fact of all summary convictions before police or other magistrates throughout the Dominion.

Section 34 of the Supreme Court Amendment Act of 1876, does not in any case authorise the issue of a writ of certiorari to accompany a writ of habeas corpus granted by a Judge of the supreme court in chambers; and as the proceedings before the court on habeas corpus arising out of a criminal charge are only by way of appeal from the decision of such Judge in chambers, the said section does not authorize the court to issue a writ of certiorari in such proceedings; to do so would be to assume appellate jurisdiction over the in-

To Whom Directed.]—On a motion to quash a conviction by a justice of the peace which had been appealed to the county Judge, an objection that the writ of certiforari was improperly directed to, and returned by the clerk of the peace and county attorney, instead of the county Judge or magistrate, was overruled. Regina v. Fraucley, 45 U. C. R.

Vacation.]—The certiorari to bring up the depositions cannot properly be issued in vacation, returnable before a Judge in chambers. In re Burley, 1 C. L. J. 34.

CHAMPERTY AND MAINTENANCE.

I. IN GENERAL, 921.

II. STATUTE OF MAINTENANCE, 925.

I. IN GENERAL.

Administration — Acquiring Claim.]— 6, assuming that the firm of T. & O. of which he was a member had a small claim of about $500 against the estate of A. M. C., a deceased intestate, ascertained that H. & Co. had a large one of over $7,000 on promissory motes, and tried to induce H. & Co. to join him in an action for the administration of A. M. C.'s estate, which they declined to do. H. a Co. offered to sell their claim to him for $2,900, which offer O. refused to accept, but hadls, without the payment of any valuable consideration, obtained an assignment of H. & Co.s claim for the purpose of collecting it, under an agreement by which he was to pay II, & Co. one-half of the amount collected on said claim after payment of costs. II, & Co. did not make themselves responsible for any costs. O. obtained an administration order against M. E. C. the administratrix of A. M. C., who, not knowing anything of the claim on the H. & Co. notes, did not resist the making of the order; but when the facts were elicited in the master's office, and when O.'s own claim was disallowed by the master, filed a petition to have the order set aside on the grounds of champerty:—Held, that as a decree of administration is for the benefit of all the creditors, and as another creditor had established a claim under it, the administration order could not be set aside:—Held, also, that the agreement between O. and H. & Co. was champertous or so strongly savouring of it that it could not be maintained, and that O. could not prove on the notes in this administration suit. Reynell v. Sprye, 1 D. M. & G. 671, and Hutley v. Hutley, L. R. S Q. B. 112, considered. Re Cannon, Oates v. Cannon, 13 O. R. 70. See the next case.

Administration—Acquiring Claim—Reassignment.]—O. brought in a claim in certain administration proceedings on promissory notes as signed to him by H. & Co., under an agreement between them, which, however, was held void for champerty, and O. & claim on the notes disallowed: (See the preceding case).
O. through the claim of the contest of H. &
Co., through the claim of the contest of H. &
Co. through the claim of the contest of H. &
Co. through the claim of the contest of the date of the administration order, not before O. tried to prove on them in the administration proceedings:—Held, that the order for administration proceedings:—Held, that the order for administration provented the bar of the Statute of Limitations:—Held, also, that H. &
Co. might now assert their title to the notes, and prove on them notwithstanding the former champertous agreement with O. Re Cannon, Outes V. Cannon (2), 13 O. R. 705.

Assignee of Mortgage Attacking Prior Mortgage.]—Where an assignment was executed by a puisne incumbrancer to another, for the purpose of filing a bill to impeach a prior mortgage for fraud, and which bill was accordingly filed; the court, without determining what might have been the result of a suit brought simply to redeem, or one instituted by the puisne incumbrancer himself, dismissed the bill with costs, notwithstanding the right to redeem formed one alternative of the prayer, it being evident that the alleged fraud was the ground upon which the plaintiff principally relied, and the agreement between the parties savouring strongly of champerty and maintenance. Muchall v. Banks, 10 Gr. 25.

Assignment of Judgment — Action by Assignce.]—See Cole v. Bank of Montreal, 39 U. C. R. 54.

Discovery — Pleading.]—Discovery was not enforceable in equity in cases of champerty and maintenance, nor should it be under the equivalent remedies given by the Judicature Act; and a plaintiff should not be compelled on examination to answer questions touching an alleged champertous agreement. Semble, that the rigorous rules which obtained in earlier days in England are not to be imported into her dependencies without some modification. Ram Coomar v. Chunder, 2 App. Cas., at p. 210, specially referred to.

To an action under Lord Campbell's Act the defendants pleaded that it was brought and mantained under a champertous agreement which disentitled the plaintiff to sue:—Held, that this defence should not be struck out; if proved, it was for the court to say what effect should follow. Welbourne v. Canadian Paccific R. W. Co., 16 P. R. 343.

Election Petition — Contribution to Costs. —It is not a champertous transaction that an association of persons, with which the petitioner was politically allied, agreed to pay the costs of the petition. Even if the agreement were champertous, that would not be a sufficient reason to stay the proceedings on the petition. North Simcoe Election, Eduvards v. Cook, 1 H. E. C. 617; 10 C. L. J. 232.

Execution Creditors-Third Person Aid-The plaintiffs having a judgment against B. and P., agreed with defendant that if such judgment, or any portion of it, should be realized from property to be pointed out by him, he, defendant, should have one-third of the amount so realized; "all costs that may be incurred in endeavouring to make the money to be payable by him if successful, and the amount of such costs to be the first charge en any proceeds; the net balance to be divided." Goods pointed out by defendant divided." Goods pointed out by defendant having been seized, were found, on an interpleader issue, to be the claimant's. The plaintiffs thereupon sued defendant on the agreement, for their costs of defence in the inter-pleader, &c.:—Held, that if such agreement extended to these costs, it was illegal as being contrary to public policy, if not within the definition of champerty; and if it did not so extend the plaintiffs could not recover. Kerr v. Brunton, 24 U. C. R. 390.

Judgment Creditor of Mortgagor Suing Mortgagee. Where one having obtained an assignment of a judgment against a mortgagor brought an action in his own name against the mortgagee, who had sold under the power of sale, to make him account for certain surplus moneys left in his hands after such sale:—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled so to sue, and that such assignment of judgment was not in contravention of the law respecting champerty and maintenance. Harper, v. Culbert. 50. R. 152.

Litigious Rights.] — The plaintiff admitted himself to have been a mere speculative purchaser, buying for less than one-sixth of its value a piece of land which he knew to be in the occupation of another person who claimed to be the owner, from a vendor whom he sought out, and who did not pretend to be the owner of the subject of the purchase, whom the plaintiff agreed to indemnify against the costs of the litigation which both anticipated, and who was to share in the fruits of the contemplated iaw suit:—Held, that this contract savoured of maintenance and champerty, and was not that honest bona fide purchase which alone the registry law was intended to protect. Wigle v. Setterington, 19 Gr. 512.

Litigious Rights.)—B. became holder of forty shares upon transfers from D. et al., in the capital stock of the St. Gabriel Mutual Building Society. At the time of the transfers the shares in question had been declared forfeited for non-payment of ducs. Subsequently by a superior court judgment ren-dered in a suit of one C., other shares, which had been confiscated for similar reasons, were declared to be valid and to have been illegally declared to be valid and to have been linegary forfeited. Thereupon B. by a petition for writ of mandamus asked that he be recog-nized as a member of the society and be paid the amount of dividends already declared in favour of and paid to other shareholders. B.'s action was met, amongst other pleas, by one setting forth that B. had acquired under the transfers in question litigious rights, and that by law he was only entitled to recover from the respondents the amount he had actually paid for the same, together with legal interest thereon, and the cost of transfers: Held, that at the time of the purchase of said shares, B. was a buyer of litigious rights within the provisions of Art. 1583 Civil Code (Q.), and under Art. 1582 could only recover from the liquidators the price paid by him with interest thereon.—Also, that the excep-tion in Art. 1584, s. 4, of C. C. only applies to the particular demand in litigation which has been confirmed by a judgment of a court, or which having been made clear by evidence is ready for judgment. Brady v. Stewart, 15 S. C. R. 82.

Purchase Pending Action for Specific Performance.) — The plantiffs having filed a bill for specific performance of a contract by one R, to sell a certain mine to them, it was agreed between plantiffs and T., one of the now defendants, pending such suit, that certain persons should purchase said mine from the plantiffs; that they should deposit the money required for the security for costs which the plaintiffs that they should deposit the money required for the security for costs which the plaintiffs had been ordered to give in said suit, and pay all costs incurred or to be incurred therein, or in any other suit brought or defended by them respecting said mine, and pay all moneys due for the purchase thereof, and allot to each of the plantiffs a twentieth share therein, if they should succeed in getting a title through the suit; and that they would settle all claims of Messrs. E. & G. against the plaintiffs. The plaintiffs having sued defendants on the last mentioned covenant:—Held, upon demurrer to a plea setting out the transaction, that the agreement was void for champerty and mair tenance, and they therefore could not recover. Carr v. Tannahill, 30 U. C. R. 217.

The plaintiffs replied to the plea on equit-

The plaintiffs replied to the plea on equitable grounds, that in the chancery suit defendants were added as plaintiffs, and defendants therein in their answer set up against them that this agreement was void for champerty, which they doxied, and on the hearing the cause was compromised, and a decree made by agreement by which defendants were allotted a certain portion of the land, for which they received a conveyance, and the agreement declared on was treated and acted upon by all parties and treated by the court as valid. Remarks as to the effect of this replication.

The plaintiffs having amended their declaration, it was held on demurrer to be still bad, for the promise as stated was not based on the transactions subsequent to the agreement which had been held void for champerty, but that agreement was alleged to be part of the consideration, and being bad avoided the whole contract. S. C., 31 U. C. R. 201.

Held, also, that the denial by these defendants, in their answer in chancery, that the agreement was illegal, could not estop them from asserting such illegality here. Ib.

Representative Capacity—Indemnity.;

—After the hearing and before the appeal was argued, a motion was made to strike the case out of the list, on the ground of maintenance, and it was shewn that one of the defendants did not wish to proceed with this suit; but that as he was pressed to do so by his vestry and churchwardens, he allowed his mane to be used as appellant upon being medemnified by the latter as to costs. Per Boyd, C.—There was maintenance in the suit though not in the criminal sense, and the case should be struck out. Per Proudfoot, J.—There was no maintenance. Langtry v. Dumontin, 7 O.

Right to Call Trustee to Account.]—An heir-at-law being supposed to have a right to call trustees to account and to impeach sales made by them, such supposed right being considered very doubtful and being one which could only be reached through a suit in this court, he, being himself unwilling to litizate the question, assigned his interest to a third person; and by the agreement, the consideration for such an assignment was only to be paid in case of success:—Held, that a merely speculative purchase of this kind savouring of maintenance or champerty, could not be enforced in equity. Little v. Hauckins, 19 Gr. 957

Security for Costs.]—In ejectment the plaintiff claimed under a sealed instrument executed in his favour by one M., and witnessing that in consideration of prior indebtedness for professional services, and to secure the plaintiff for future services of the same kind, and of £25 already paid and advanced by plaintiff to him, &c., he (M.) covenanted, granted, and agreed that he would stand seised and possessed of the land in question to the use of plaintiff, his heirs, and assignable way of charge the property of the plaintiff of the property of the property of the plaintiff of the property of the property of the property of the property of the plaintiff o

Solicitor Prosecuting Claim.] — An agreement by a solicitor to prosecute a claim to judgment at his own expense in consideration of his receiving one-fourth of the amount which should be recovered is champertous and void. O'Connor v. Gemmill, 29 O. R. 47, 26 A. R. 27.

II. STATUTE OF MAINTENANCE,

The mortgagor being in possession at the time of a conveyance in fee by the mortgage, is no objection to the conveyance, the doctrine of disselsin not applying as between the mortgagor and mortgage. Doe d. Dunlop v. Mc-Nab, 5 U. C. R. 289; Doe d. Dunlap v. Mc-Dougal, Tay, 464.

A continuance in possession of land, under an erroneous impression that it was their own, of intruders, as against the King, after grant made, was not a disseisin of the grantee. Doe d. West v. Howard, 5 O. S. 462.

Held, that while two persons are in difference about their boundary, and shew by their conduct that they are uncertain about the true line, but agree with each other to have it ascertained, and to hold accordingly, either party may convey to a third person so as to enable the alience to hold according to the true boundary, though there may be some of the land in possession of the other, in consequence of the line between them having been mistaken. Doe d. Beckett v. Nightingule, 5 U. C. R. 518.

To bring the giving of a note in payment of land within 32 Hen. VIII. c. 9, care must be had to allege enough to meet the provisions of the statute. Where, therefore, the defendant merely averred that the plaintiff was not, for a year next before the bargain, "in receipt of the rents and profits," without saying that he was not "in possession of the land, or of the reversion or remainder thereof: "—Held, plea bad. Nicolls v. Madill, 6 U. C. R. 415.

A mere verbal bargain for the sale of land would not subject a person to the penalty under 32 Hen. VIII. c. 9, for buying a pretended title. Aubrey q. t. v. Smith, 7 U. C. R. 213.

A person could not be convicted merely on his own admission, that he had taken a deed from a party out of possession; some evidence allunde must be adduced of the existence of such a deed. Ib.

A tenant holding over is in no case a disseisor. Doe Charles v. Cotton, S U. C. R.

A deed by the reversioner was good, though another person, holding under the life estate of the tenant by the curtesy, was in actual possession. Doc Burnham v. Bowyer, S U. C. R. 697.

An action will not lie for knowingly prosecuting a false claim before the heir and devisee commission, to the plaintiff's injury and with knowledge of his claim. One M., in 1829, having a right of purchase of a lot from the Crown, mortgaged to DeB, to secure payment of a sum by instalments, the last of which would fall due in 1849. Soon after the mortgage, M. gave to B. a bond for a deed, on certain conditions to be fulfilled by B., who took possession. In 1850, the plaintiff went in under an agreement for purchase from B., who had not fulfilled the conditions of his bond. In 1851, the defendant took an assignment of DeB.'s mortgage, and in the same year he claimed before the heir and devisee commission, making the usual affidavit of ignorance of any adverse claim, and obtained a patent. The plaintiff thereupon brought an action on the case, alleging in the first and second counts that the defendant, maliciously contriving and intending to injure him, represented himself as assignee of the original nominee of the crown and claimed as such before the commission; and in order to defraud the plaintiff, and not having himself any well founded claim. and knowing the plaintiff's claim, made affidavit that he was not aware of any adverse claim, and procured his own claim to be allowed—whereby, &c. The third and fourth counts, founded on the statute 32.

Hen, VIII. & 9, were for buying M.'s pretended right, the defendant being in possession claiming title:—Held, that on the evidence the allegations were not supported; and that admitting them all to be true, no ground of action would be shewn. Shields v. De-Blaquiere, 12 U. C. R. 386.

A, the owner of lands, conveyed to the plaintiff by deed, which was never recorded; the plaintiff conveyed to others, who registered their deeds; the defendant, A.'s son and heirat-law, subsequently released to S., the release being recorded; the defendant had never been in possession, but the persons to whom the plaintiff conveyed were. The plaintiff sued defendant for the penalty under 32 Hen. VIII. c. 9, for selling a pretended right; —Held, that 14 & 15 Vict. c. 7, would not apply in defendant's favour, for that only allows the sale of a right of entry, and as his father's deed was binding upon him, he had no such right; but held, also, approving Major q. t. v. Reynolds, H. T. 6 Vict., that by the registration of the deed to S, the conveyance to the plaintiff became frandulent in its inception, and therefore he could not recover. Semble, that the effect of 14 & 15 Vict. c. 7, is to repeal 32 Hen. VIII., and not merely to permit the sale of a right of entry subject to the penalty. Baby q. t. v. Watson, 13 U. C. R. 531.

Held, in ejectment, that the defendant being in possession of the land at the date of the deed to the plaintiff, 16th March, 1842, nothing passed to the plaintiff by that deed, as the statute authorizing the conveyance of a right of entry was not then passed. Bishop of Toronto v, Cantwell, 12 C. P. 607.

Where the grantors were in possession of half the property conveyed, and had an undisputed life estate therein, but their title to the remainder in fee, subject to such life estate, was disputed:—Held, that the rule laid down in Prosser v. Edmonds, 1 X, & C. 7, did not apply to their grantee of such half, and that the grantee might maintain a bill therefor. In such a case, an objection taken at the hearing to a bill by the grantors and grantees against the adverse claimant of the whole property was disallowed. Mason v. Seney, 11 Gr. 447.

The plaintiffs were heirs-at-law of M. A. M., a married woman, to whom in 1849, her husband, G. S. M., joining in the deed, one G. conveyed five acres of land, part of a lot of 100 acres conveyed to him in 1841 by the patentee under a Crown grant of the year 1828. G. S. M. was in possession of four acres of the five acres in question for some time before 1835, when he married, and then he and his wife remained in possession of the four acres till 1849, and then of the four acres and the additional one acre till the wife's death in 1864:

—Held, affirming 21 O. R. 281, that the deeds from the patentee to G. and from G. to M. A. M. might be upheld, notwithstanding the Statute of Maintenance, 32 Hen. VIII. c. 9. Per Hagarty, C. J. O., and Osler, J. A.—The statute applies only to cases of adverse possession, and there being no evidence one way or the other, the court was not bound to draw the inference that the possession of G. S. M. was adverse to the patentee. If it did apply and G, had only a pretenced title, still that pretenced title had been lawfully acquired by M. A. M. to the strengthening of her possessory title, there being nothing in the statute avoiding such a transaction. Per Maclennan, J. A.—The statute did not apply because the possession of G. S. M. having begun (as Maclennan, J. A. upon the evidence held) while the title was in the Crown, was not then adverse, and would not become so without a subsequent ouster by him of which there was no evidence. Burton, J. A., agreed on that point with Maclennan, J. A., but held that there was no evidence of his prior possession. Marsh v. Webb, 19 A. R. 564. See the next case.

In 1828 certain land in Upper Canada was granted by the Crown to King's College. 1841, while one M., who had entered on the land, was in possession, King's College conveyed it to G. In 1849 G. conveyed to the wife of M., and M. signed the conveyance though not a party to it. In an action by the successors in title of M.'s wife to recover possession of the land, the defendants, claiming title through M., set up the Statute of Limitations, alleging that M. had been in possession twenty years when the land was conveyed to his wife, and that the conveyance to G., in 1841, the grantor not being in possession, was void under the Statute of Maintenance, and G. had, therefore, nothing to convey in 1849; -Held, that it was not proved that the posession of M. began before the grant from the Crown, but assuming that it did, M. could not avail himself of the Statute of Maintenance. as he would have to establish disseisin of the grantor, and the Crown could not be dissejsed: nor would the statute avail as against the patentee, as the original entry, not being tortious, the possession would not become adverse without a new entry :- Held, further, that if the possession beg. n after the grant, the deed to G. in 1841 was not absolutely void under the Statute of Maintenance, but only void as against the party in possession, and M. being in possession, a conveyance to him would have been good under s. 4 of the statute, and the deed to his wife, a person appointed by him, was equally good. Further, M. by his assent to the conveyance to his wife, and subsequent acts, was estopped from denying the title of his wife's grantor. Webb v. Marsh, 22 S. C. R. 437.

I. ASSIGNABILITY AND MODE OF ASSIGNING.

Alimony.]—A bond to secure payment of alimony to the wife, was held, not to be assignable. Reiffenstein v. Hooper, 36 U. C. R. 905.

Bill of Exchange.] — Defendant purchased goods from L., who said he would draw on the defendant through the Merchants Bank, and did so; and the manager of the bank swore that he discounted the bill for L. on the faith of L.'s representation that defendant owed him the money and would call and accept it:—Held, that this was not sufficient to constitute an equitable assignment of the debt by L. to the bank; and that the payment of the draft by the defendant to the bank after L.'s insolvency, was therefore no defence against a purchaser of L.'s estate from the official assignee, in an action for the price of the goods. Lamb v. Sutherland; Lamb v. Allen, 3T U. C. R. 143.

Bill of Exchange—Letter.]—Where a party gave a draft on a corporation indebted to him, but the proper stamps were not on the draft when it was discounted, and the holder neglected to put on double stamps as required by the statute, it was held not to constitute an equitable assignment of the fund of the drawer in the hands of such corporation, but the drawer having written to the corporation, but the drawer having written to the corporation directing them to pay such draft from the fund coming to him, such letter was held to constitute a good equitable assignment. Robertson v. Grant, 3 Ch. Ch. 331.

Bill of Exchange.]—One E., who had a contract with the defendant for certain carpenter's work, gave to the plaintiff an order on the defendant in the following form:—"Please pay to H. the sum of $138.40 for flooring supplied to your buildings on D. road, and charge to my account:"—Held, that this was not an equitable assignment, but a bill of exchange, and that in the absence of written acceptance by her, the defendant was not liable. Hall v. Prittie, 17 A. R. 306.

Cheque.]—The holder of a cheque by the mere fact of its being drawn in his favour, acquires no right of action in equity as upon an equitable assignment against the drawee. Caldwell v. Merchants Bank of Canada, 26 C. P. 294.

Contract—Estappel.]—The contractor for building a church, being indebted to D. for materials furnished therefor, gave him the following order on the defendants, who were the building trustees, and of which they were duly notified: "Pay to the order of D. the sum of $306 out of certificate of money due me on 1st June for materials furnished to above church." This the defendants refused to accept, and on 31st May paid, out of moneys arising out of the contract, an order for a larger sum, made on that date in favour of another person, under an arrangement made by them with the latter alone:—Held, that there was a good equitable assignment in favour of D. of money due on the 1st June; and that defendants, by the payment of the other order, were estopped from denying that there were sufficient moneys then due to the contractor to cover his order. Bank of British North America V, Gibson, 21 O, R. 613.

Contract—Evidence of Intention.]—The contractor for the erection of a building for the defendants during its progress gave to the defendants of the defendants. Please pay to D. M. the sum of $\mathbb{S}_{\text{--}}$ and oblige (signed) T. F. H., contractor: —Held, that these orders were not in themselves good equitable assignments of portions of the fund in the hands of the defendants. Hall 't, Prittie, 17 A. R. 306, followed. The evidence, however, shewed that there was only one fund out of which the directors could be expected to pay the orders; that the nature of that fund and its origin were well known to all the parties; that when the contractor promised the persons with whom he dealt orders upon the directors, he meant to give, and these persons expected to get, orders which were to be paid out of the contract price; and that the directors understood the orders as intended to deal with portions of the contract price, and to be payable only out of that parties if the transaction, and give effect to it, by declaring that the contractor did make an equitable assignment to each of the orderholders of a portion of the fund. Lane v. Inngannon Agricultural Driving Park Association, 22 O. R. 264.

Covenant — Assignment of Covenant by one Joint Covenantee to his Co-covenantees, 1 — One joint covenantee can by virtue of the Mercantile Amendment Act, R. S. O. 1887 c. 122, assign to his co-covenantees his interest in the covenant, and they can then sue upon it without joining him as palantiff. A conveyance of the equity of redemption to one of several joint mortgages, he convenanting to pay off the mortgage, does not extinguish the mortgagor's liability on his covenant for payment of the mortgage debt. Scarlett v. Nattress, 23 A. R. 297.

Debentures.]—Assignment of debentures and coupons for interest. See McKenzie v. Montreal and Ottawa Junction R. W. Co., 27 C. P. 224: 29 C. P. 333.

Grain to be Shipped. |-One W., plaintiff's tenant, being in arrear for rent, and having wheat in the barn, had a settlement with plaintiff, when plaintiff told him he must give him security before he would allow him to ship his grain. It was agreed that plaintiff should see defendant, to whom W. had been in the habit of shipping his produce, and ascertain whether he would accept an order from W. for the grain. Defendant agreed to accept the order, which he drew out mentioning, however, no amount. Plaintiff and W. then saw defendant, when W., in defendant's presence, signed an order on de-fendant for $299.85 in the plaintiff's favour, which defendant said he would pay as soon as he realized on the grain. There was conflicting evidence as to whether plaintiff did or did not tell defendant that unless he got the order he would not let the grain go; but he admitted that he drew the order, and its execution by W., and that he told plaintiff he would pay it. The grain had not at that time been, but was on the 4th of October following, shipped to defendant, who subsequently sold it and paid the preceeds to W., who had verbally instructed him before the receipt of the grain not to pay the order in plaintiff's favour, though written instructions to that effect did not reach him until after its receipt:—Held, that plaintiff was not entitled to recover as an assignee of a chose in action under R. S. O. 1877 c. 116; but, held, that the property was stamped with the equitable right, and that defendant was not merely cognizant of such claim, but had promised to co-operate in enforcing it, and that when the property reached his hands he was bound to carry out the trust, and no interference on W.'s part could relieve him from the obligation. Mitchell v. Goodall, 44 U. C. R. 398, 5 A. R. 164.

Insurance — Covenant in Mortgage.]—
Held, that the usual covenant to insure contained in a mortgage executed under the Act respecting short forms of mortgages operates as an equitable assignment of the insurance when effected. Greet v. Citizens' Ins. Co.; Greet v. Royal Ins. Co., 5 A. R. 596; 27 Gr. 121.

Insurance—Assignment before Loss.]—
The interest of the insured in a policy of insurance upon chattels may, before loss, be validly assigned by him to a person who has no interest in them at the time of the assignment, the insured remaining owner of the chattels. McPhillips v. London Mutual Fire Ins. Co., 23 A. R. 524.

Judgment.]—Assignment of foreign judgment. Fowler v. Vail, 27 C. P. 417.

Money Payable under Award.] — Plaintiff sued on an arbitration bond, alleging an award that defendant should pay the plaintiff a sum of money, and convey to him certain lands, and assigning as breaches nonpayment and neglect to convey. Defendant pleaded as to the first breach, that since 35 Vict. c. 12 (O.), the plaintiff had assigned to one B. the money awarded, of which defendant had notice:—Held, a good plei; for that such assignment of the money alone, without the bond, was valid under the Act. Wellington v. Chard, 22 C. P. 518

Non-acceptance by Debtor.] — Where a person having a demand against another, gave to a creditor of his own an order on his debtor for a portion of his demand, which order the debtor was notified of, but did not accept:—Held, notwithstanding, that the order and notice formed a good equitable assignment of the portion of the claim which it covered. Farquhar v. City of Toronto, 12 Gr. 186.

Negligence.]—A ciaim by a client for negligence against a firm of solicitors in directing the distribution of moneys in the sheriff's hands was assigned by him to another, and by the latter to the piaintiff.—Per Armour, C.J.—The claim did not by virtue of R. S. O. 1887 c. 122, s. 7, pass to the plaintiff so as to enable him to maintain an action therefor in his own name, but in any event no negligence was proved. On append to the divisional court the judgment was affirmed on the ground of the absence of any proof of negligence, but per Mac-Mahon, J., if negligence had been proved, the plaintiff could properly have maintained the action in his own name. Laidlaw v. O'Connor, 23 O. R. 636.

Parol Assignment.] — A parol assignment of a chose in action is valid, notwithstanding s. 7 of the Mercantile Amendment Act, R. 8, O. 1887 c. 122. Trusts Corporation of Ontario v. Rider, 24 A. R. 157; affirming 27 O. R. 592.

Parol Assignment—Subsequent Written Assignment.]—A present appropriation by order of a particular fund not yet realized operates as an equitable assignment, and a promise or executory agreement to apply a fund in discharge of an obligation has the same effect in equity. A married woman, as agent of her husband who was indebted for costs to a firm of solicitors, instructed one of the firm, after its dissolution, to sell certain land and retain the costs out of the proceeds as a first charge. The land was sold by a new firm, in which one of the old firm was a member:—Held, that the wife's instructions amounted to an equitable assignment, and that the solicitors were entitled to the proceeds of the sale as against an assignee under a written assignment of the same, subsequently made. Held, also, that the transaction was not a contract concerning land, but an agreement to apply the proceeds of land when sold. Heyd v. Millar, 29 O. R. 735.

Partner.]—D. C., one of two partners, in consideration of $100 paid to him, assigned to the plaintiff a debt of $118, due to the firm for goods sold to the defendant in the ordinary course of business, by a deed made and executed in his individual name, without his partner's knowledge, but by which he professed to transfer all debts due to the two partners, naming them, from the defendant, Ar the trial his partner swore that he considered himself bound by the assignment, and that he thought that D. C. had authority to make it:—Held, that the assignment was within the scope of the partnership business, and covered by the agency of one partner for the other. Held, also, that, even in the absence of implied authority, the subsequent ratification was sufficient. Held, also, that the transfer being by deed did not deprive it of its effect as a written contract. Howell v. McCarland, 2 A. R. 31.

Power of Attorney to Sell.]—A debtor had executed several chattel mortgages to secure indorsers of his paper, and afterwards a power of attorney to their appointee to sell and pay the mortgage debts:—Held, that the power was in effect an equitable assignment. Patterson v. Kingsley, 25 Gr. 425.

Purchase Money.] — While the defendant J. for the purchase of his stock of goods, the plaintiffs presented to C. & E. an order upon them for part of the anticipated purchase money, which order they had obtained from J. in payment of a debt due by him to the plaintiffs. This order C. & E. refused to pay or accept. The sale was subsequently completed, and the price paid in full to J.—Held, that no charge on the purchase money had thus been created, and payment therefore could not be enforced against C. & E. Mitchell v. Goodall, 5 A. R. 164, and McMaster v. Garland, 8 A. R. 1, observed upon and explained. Brown v. Johnston, 12 A. R. 199.

Work to be Done. —It is no objection to an assignment in equity of a claim against a third person, that the work upon which the claim is to arise has yet to be performed. Buntin v. Georgen. 19 Gr. 167.

A printer being about to execute a contract of printing for a customer, applied to a paper maker for a supply of paper, which he refused to supply unless secured therefor; thereupon a memorandum was signed with the printer's name, by one, with the cognizance of the other, of two persons having the general management of the printer's business, agreeing to hand over to the manufacturer a draft upon their customer for the amount of the account, payable at three months from the completion of the work:—
Held, that such document was a sufficient assignment of the claim in equity, and that the giving thereof was within the general authority of the managers of the business.

The customer, after having been notified of this arrangement, paid the amount to the printer:—Held, that such payment was made in his own wrong; and he was ordered to pay the amount to the plaintiff, the assignee, Ib.

II. EFFECT OF ASSIGNMENT.

Absolute Assignment — Secret Defeasance—Subsequent Assignment for Value without Notice, j—Where a non-negotiable chose in action is absolutely transferred by writing for value, and the transferre again absolutely assigns it for valuable consideration to another person, who takes without notice, he obtains a valid title to it, free from any latent equity between the original assignor and assignee. In re Agra and Masterman's Bank, L. R. 2 Ch., at p. 397, specially referred to. Quebec Bank v. Taggart, 27 O. R. 162.

Attorney for Sale of Land—Advance——Attorney Purchasing.)—The attorney under an irrevocable power from the owner for the sale or other disposition of certain lands, and entitled in the event of sale to a share of the proceeds after payment of charges, agreed to pay out of the owner's share of the proceeds, when received, the amount of a further charge made by the owner, and subsequently proceeds when received, the lands himself:—Beld, that he was not personally liable to pay the amount of the charge. Judgment below, 27 O. R. 511, reversed. Execution of the document creating the further charge was proved by affidavit, and attached to it but approved by affidavit, and attached to it but agreement by the attorney to pay the charge and a transfer by the charge to the plaintiff of the charge, and all the documents were accepted by the registrar and registered:—Held, affirming the judgment below, 27 O. R. 511, that the defect in registration was cured by s. 80 of the Registry Act, R. S. O. 1887 c. 114, and that the attorney, who subsequently became the purchaser of the lands in question, was affected with notice of the plaintiffs rights. Armstrong v. Lye, 24 A. R. 543.

Contract—Subsequent Assignee.]—The plaintiff being liable as surety for P., P. gave him an order for the amount on the government, for whom P. was working. This order P. countermanded before any acceptance by the government. The debt having been paid by a sale of the plaintiff's property, and P.'s contract having been assigned to M., who received from the government the money due upon it:—Held, that M. was bound to pay the amount of the order. Foote v. Matthews, 4 Gr. 366,

Contract—Cross-claim.]—Held, that to an action by an assignee of an account for the price of lumber and staves delivered by the assignor to the defendant under two certain contracts therefor, the defendant under R. S. O. 1877 c. 116, set. defendant 127, can set up as a defence a claim for damage for the non-delivery by the assignor to the defendant of certain other timber and staves specified in the contracts, and for the inferior quality of those delivered. Per Osler, J., his right to do so depended wholly upon R. S. O. 1877 c. 116, s. 10. In this case the learned Judge, at the trial, having refused to entertain the former defence, a new trial was ordered. Exchange Bank v. Stinson, 32

Contract—Right of Contractee to Make Deductions.]—A contract between the defendants and the plaintiff's assignor for the paving of a certain street provided that the former might deduct and pay the price of any materials unpaid for by the latter. The contractor assigned to the plaintiff all moneys to become due under the contract of which the defendants were duly notified. Subsequently the defendants deducted from the contract moneys the amount of a claim for materials furnished to the contractor, and paid the same:—Held, that they had a right so to do, the plaintiff's assignment being necessarily subject to the provisions of the original contract. Farquhar v. City of Toronto, 26 O. R. 356.

Contract-Default.]-The contractor for a building gave to the plaintiff, a lumber merchant, the following order: "On completion of contract on building now in course of erection, pay to the order of (plaintiff) $400 value received and charge to account of (contractor)," and the defendant accepted Accepted, payable at Niagara Falls, Ont., as payment for lumber used in my build-After this the defendant paid to the contractor more than $400. The contractor made default before the completion of the building, when more than $400 of the contract price had yet to be earned, and the defendant put an end to the contract and completed the building, the cost being more than the con-tract price:—Held, that the order was not a bill of exchange because the time of payment was indefinite, nor an equitable assignment because the fund out of which payment was to be made was not specified, but was merely a promise to pay upon the completion of the contract by the contractor, or some one on his behalf, and that by reason of his default no liability arose. Brice v. Bannister, 3 Q. B. D. 569, distinguished. Thomson v. Huggins, 23 A. R. 191.

Contract - Designation of Funds.] - A contractor, having done work under his con-tract with the defendants, and having brought an action against them for the contract price an action against them for the contract price and for extra work, gave the plaintiff the following order:—"S. Baltzer, Esq., Reeve Col. South. Please pay William Jackson Quick the sum of $100 on account of my contract on the Richmond drain outlet. Nearly a year afterwards—the action having been in the meantime referred and another action brought by the contractor against the defendants for damages for overflowing his land—he gave the plaintiff a secord order, as follows:—"To the Reeve, Deputy-Reeve, and Councillors of Colchester South. Sirs.— Will you kindly pay to W. J. Quick the sum of $144.25, and charge to my contract on Richmond drain outlet or damage suit." Shortly after this, the referee made his report finding $139.44 to be due to the contractor, after deducting money paid by the defendants before action and the amounts of certain other orders given by him in favour of a number of persons, not including the plaintiff. Each party having appealed from the report, a settlement of both actions was agreed upon and carried out, by which, inter alia, the balance of $139.44 was to be applied towards payment of the defendants' costs of the action for damages. Before the making of the agreement the defendants had notice of both the orders given to the plaintiff :-Held, that both the orders were good equit-Held, that both the orders were good spin-able assignments; the second being an assign-ment of either of two specific funds, and the defendants being bound to treat it as an assignment of the one which did arise. The agreement, carried out as it was, established conclusively that the defendants were indebted to the contractor in $139.44, and, having had notice of the orders before the agreement, they were bound to apply that sum to them, instead of in the manner provided in the agreement. Quick v. Township of Colchester South, 30 O. R. 645.

Debenture — Creditors of Assignor.] —
The holder of a debenture issued by the trustees of a Methodist church, transferred it without consideration, by signing an indorsement as follows: — "Pay to J. G. or order" —and delivered the same to the indorsee:—Held, that such transfer did not vest the debt in the transferee so as to prevent the claims of the creditors of the original holder attaching upon it. Gott v. Gott, 9 Gr. 105.

Equities—Fraud.]—A bond was executed for the conveyance of real estate, which by the contrivance of the agent of the obligee, falsely stated that the purchase money agreed upon had been all paid to the obligor, which bond the obligee transferred to a bond fide assignee for value, who filed a bill to enforce the execution of a conveyance. The court, however, following the rule that the assignee of a chose in action takes subject to all equities affecting the same, refused a decree except upon the terms of payment of such sum as might, on taking an account, be found due to the obligor in respect of the purchase money. Gould v. Close, 21 Gr. 273.

Equities — Mortgage.] — The assignee of a mortgage, like the assignee of a note (after maturity) or other chose in action, takes the same subject to all equities, as well those of third parties, as those of the parties to the instrument. Elliott v. McConnell, 21 Gr. 276.

Equities. |—The plaintiff gave a chattel mortgage to H. to secure certain money, with a proviso enabling the mortgagee to take possession and sell in case the goods should be taken in execution by any creditor of the mortgage. The goods were so taken, and defendant, to whom the mortgage had been assigned by H., took possession and sold under it, for which the plaintiff sued in this action, alleging that H., the mortgagee, verbally agreed to pay these executions, which were made part of the money secured:—Held, that the defendant, as assignee, took subject to such agreement (which did not vary the terms of the mortgage), though without notice of it; and that the plaintiff therefore was improperly nonsuited. Martin v. Bearman, 45 U. C. R. 205.

Equities.]—Held, that the fact that L had assigned to his wife his claim against the company for payment for services rendered by him after the winding-up order had been acted on, made no difference to a claim of the company against him for a debt based upon a breach of trust, since any such assignment would be subject to all the equities against such claim, and against the assignor as a director and trustee of the company's funds in the proceedings under the winding-un order. Re Bott and Iron Co., Lixingston's Case, 14 O, R. 211; 16 A. R. 397.

Life Insurance.]—A debtor, or trustee of a fund, is not responsible to an assignee of the creditor, or payee of the fund, for dealing with the latter persons without reference to the assignment unless it is found either that at the time of so dealing he actually knew of the assignee's title, or that he had previously received a notice sufficiently distinct to give him an intelligent apprehension of the fact that the assignee had acquired an interest in the claim or fund. A life insurcompany issued two policies upon man's life, one policy being payable generally and the other to his wife. an assignment for the benefit of his creditors, and the assignee, who at the time knew only and the assignee, who at the time knew only of the policy payable generally, wrote to the company referring to this policy by number and informing them of the assignment. The assured's wife had died before the assignment was made and the policy in her favour had become part of the assured's estate and had passed to the assignee. A few weeks after potice of the assignment had been given to the company the assured informed them of his wife's death, and obtained from them the surrender value of the policy in was named as beneficiary. There in which she was no imputation of bad faith, and the officers of the company swore that they had, at the time, no recollection of notice of the assignment for the benefit of creditors having been given :- Held, that under the circumstances the company were not responsible for paying the surrender value of the policy to the husband. Crawford v. Canada Life Assurance Company, 24 A. R. 643.

Mortgage—Interest.]—The Trust and Lean Co., being the holders of a mortgage bearing 8 per cent. interest, transferred the same to a private individual:—Held, that the assigne was entitled to enforce payment of the stipulated interest, notwithstanding that at the time of the creation of the incumbrance the company only could legally have reserved such a rate of interest. Reid v. Whith end, 10 Gr. 446.

Payment after Notice.]—By the terms of a deed of surrender of a lease of a farm to the plaintiff, the lessee W, was to have the privilege of reaping or selling the fall wheat sown, on payment of the rent in advance, or securing it by first of October, 1878. On that dat arriving without such payment or security, the plaintiff refused to allow its removal, whereupon W, offered to give plaintiff an order for $290.85, the amount of rent alleged to be due, on the defendant, accounties on order has been described by the defendant would accept it. The plaintiff accordingly saw defendant, who said he would accept it if it was all right, and drew up an order in plaintiff's favour, which W, signed. The grain tens shipped to defendant, and sold by him before the grain arrived, or at all defendant requiring written notice, W, worte defendant tating that he had found plaintiff second in the plaintiff without further instructions. The defendant thereupon, although expressly notified by the plaintiff's solicitor that the plaintiff without further instructions. The defendant thereupon, although expressly notified by the plaintiff's solicitor that the plaintiff without of the order to W:—Held, alfirming 44 C. C. R. 398, that there was a good equitable assignment, and the plaintiff was therefore entitled to recover. Mitchell v, Goodall, 5. A. R. 164.

Set-off — Estoppel.] — Defendant having pleuded a set-off to an action upon a covenant for the payment of money, the plaintiff replied on equitable grounds, in substance, that the deed declared on, and the money sued for, were before this action, and before the alleged set-off had accrued, duly assigned for value by plaintiff to D., and by D. to R.; that defendant had notice of and assented to both assignments, and that this action was brought for B.'s benefit, the plaintiff being a nominal plaintiff only; that after the said assignments and notice thereof B. sued defendant in the plaintiff's name on the same covenant for another breach, to which defendant pleaded non est factum, and a verdict and judgment were recovered against him, which he paid; and it is inequitable that he should now set up the defence pleaded:—Held, on demurrer, replication good. Dennison v. Knox, 24 U. C. R. 119.

Set-off.]—By an agreement for the dissolution of a firm, it was provided that all claims and demands, notes, bills and book accounts belonging to the firm were to be collected by the plaintiffs, who were to be the owners thereof, and by virtue of which the plaintiffs used defendant for a balance alleged to be due for goods sold and delivered by the firm to defendant, who set up a claim for damages for non-delivery of goods by the firm, which arose before the dissolution of the partnership:—Held, a valid assignment of a debt due by defendant to the plaintiffs; and that the defendant could set off the claim for damages arising by reason of a breach of the agreement under which the debt arose. The difference between the Imperial and Ontario Choses in Action Act referred to. Sevijang v. Mann, 27 O. R. 631.

III. PERSON TO BRING ACTION.

Action by Assignee—Adding Assignor, —An assignee of a chose in action having improperly sued, an amendment by adding rhe name of the assignor as a plaintiff, was refused on appeal after trial, as such an amendment could only have been made on payment of all costs, and this would have been of no practical advantage to the assignor, who could still sue in his own name. Wood v. McAlpine, 1 A. R. 234.

Agreement to Convey Land.] — Land having been conveyed in consideration of the grantee agreeing to convey a certain portion to a third person, who was no party to the transaction, it was held that this person could maintain a suit in his own name for such portion. Shaw v. Shaw. 17 Gr. 282.

Assignor Trustee.]—A party may assign a trustee for the assignee, and give the latter the right to use his name to collect the debt. Ham v. Ham, 6 C. P. 37.

Collateral Security — Action by Assignor,]—Where an assignment of a chose in action is made by way of security, the assignor retaining a beneficial interest, he may, notwithstanding the assignment, maintain an action in his side of the second of the sec

Contract—Sale of Goods—Non-delivery.]
—Defendants agreed with R. to sell and deliver to him a quantity of lumber by a certain day. After that day R., with defendants assent, assigned the contract and all his interest in it to plaintiff, and defendants afterwards told the plaintiff sagent they would carry out the contract, and delivered some of the lumber to plaintiff.—Heid, the suit being commenced before 35 Vict. c. 12 (O.), that the plaintiff was only the assignee of a chose in action, and could not sue defendants for not delivering the rest of the lumber. Eakins v. Gaucley, 33 U. C. R. 178.

Costs—Absolute Assignment.]—B. and D. having a claim against a company, B. assigned his interest in it to D. upon certain trusts, in which, however, B. had no interest:—Held, that the assignment was absolute and B. entitled to sue:—Held, also, that B. having been president of the company when the costs were incurred was no objection. Duff. v. Canadian Mutual Fire Insurance Co., 9 P. R. 202.

Covenant to Pay for Buildings.]—Lessor covenanted with lessee that he would at the expiration of the term pay him his heirs or assigns a valuation for his buildings on the land devised:—Held, that the assignee of the term and of all claims under the covenants in the lease could as the assignee of a chose in action, sue in his own name the executors of the covenantor under R. S. O. 1877 c. 116, s. 7. In re Haisley, 44 U. C. R. 345.

Covenant—Judgment—Estoppel.] — One had recovered three judgments against different persons, one in the county court and two in the Queen's bench. The defendants, being assignees of these judgments, received payment of and discharged the county court judgment, and afterwards by deed assigned to one F. the said several judgments, covenanting that they had received no payment thereon, and had not released any part thereof. F. assigned to M. "the said several judg-ments," and said assignment to him, "and all benefits to be derived therefrom, either at law or in equity." And M., by deed, indorsed on the assignment to himself, assigned to the plaintiff "all his right, title, interest, and claim to and in the said several judgments referred to in the within assignment there-of:"—Held, that the plaintiff could, in his own name, sue the defendants on their cove-nant, either as assignee of the covenant under 35 Vict. c. 12 (O.), or as having an equitable right to enforce the covenant, against defendants for a "purely money demand," under s. 2 of the A. J. Act of 1873; and that it could not be said that there being no judgment to assign, the covenant could not be assigned as incident to it, for defendants by their deed and covenant were estopped from asserting that the judgment had then been paid. Held, also, that there was clearly no champerty or maintenance in the assignment from F. to M., or from M. to the plaintiff. Cole v. Bank of Montreal, 39 U. C. R.

Creditor Assigning to Himself and Partner. |—B. assigned to his partner and to himself a debt due from defendant to himself for goods sold, &c.:—Held, that under 29 Vict. c. 28, and 35 Vict. c. 12 (O.), B. and his partner could sue for this debt in their joint names. Blair v. Ellis, 34 U. C. R. 496.

Damages—Action Quia Timet,]—Upon a covenant by an incoming partner to indemnify and save harmless a retiring partner against the liabilities, contracts, and agreements of the firm, no cause of action accrues to the covenantee merely because an action to recover unliquidated damages for an alleged breach of agreement has been brought against the firm. Mewburn v. Mackelean, 19 A. R. 729, and Leith v. Freeland, 24 U. C. R. 132, distinguished. Such a covenant is not assignable by the covenantee to a plaintiff suing the firm so as to enable him to join the covenantor as a defendant in the action to recover against him the damages for which the firm may be ultimately held responsible. Sutherland v. Webster, 21 A. R. 228.

Damages—Solicitor—Negligence.]— A claim by a client for negligence against a firm of solicitors in directing the distribution of moneys in the sheriff's hands was assigned by him to another, and by the latter to the plaintiff:—Per Armour, C.J., at the trial.—The claim did not by virtue of R. S. O. 1887 c. 122, s. 7, pass to the plaintiff so as to enable him to maintain an action therefor in his own name, but in any event no negligence was proved. On appeal to the divisional court the judgment was affirmed on the ground of the absence of any proof of negligence, but per MacMahon, J., if negligence had been proved, the plaintiff could properly have maintained the action in his own name. Laidlaw v. O'Connor, 23 O. R. (996.

Insurance Moneys.]-C. by instrument under seal assigned to defendant, as security for moneys due, his interest in certain policies of insurance on which he had actions pending. C. afterwards gave to B. & Co. an order on defendant for the balance of the insurance money that would remain after paying his debt to defendant. B. & Co. indorsed the order and delivered it to plaintiff by whom it was presented to the defendant. who wrote his name across its face. B. & Co. afterwards delivered to plaintiff a document signed by them stating that having been in-formed that the indorsed order was not negotiable by indorsement, to perfect plaintiff's title and enable him to obtain the money in defendant's hands, they assigned and transferred their interest therein and appointed plaintiff their attorney, in their name, but for his own use and benefit, to collect the same. The defendant having received the amount due C. on the insurance policies in-formed plaintiff, on his demanding an account, that there were prior claims that would absorb it all. Plaintiff then filed a bill in equity for an account and payment of the amount found due him to which defendant demurred for want of parties, alleging that the order, though absolute on its face, was, in fact, only given as security, and that an account be-tween B. & Co. and C. being necessary to protect C.'s rights, C. was a necessary party to the suit. The demurrer was overruled and the judgment overruling it not appealed from, and the same defence of want of parties was set up in the answer to the bill:-Held, that the question of want of parties was res judicata by the judgment on the demurrer and could not be raised again by the answer. Even if it could the judgment was right as C. was not a necessary party. As between plain-tiff and defendant the order was an absolute transfer of the fund to be received by defendant, and was treated by all the parties as a negotiable instrument. Defendant had nothing to do with the equities between C. and B. & Co., or between B. & Co. and plaintiff, but was bound to account to plaintiff in accordance with his undertaking as indicated by the acceptance of the order. McKean v. Jones, 19 S. C. R. 489.

Mortgage.]—Where an assignment of a mortgage on land is absolute in form, though as a matter of fact the assignor retains a right to part of the money, an action on the covenant in the mortgage must be brought in the name of the assignee. Ward v. Hughes, S O. R. 138.

Nominal Assignee,]—An assignee, in order to obtain the benefit of 35 Vict. c. 12 (O.), must take the beneficial interest in the claim assigned. He cannot sue in his own name where the assignment has been made only in order to enable him to bring the action. An amendment by adding the name of the assignor as a plaintiff was refused at this stage. Wood v. McAlpine, 1 A. R. 234.

Notice of Assignment.] — The Revised Statutes of Nova Scotia, 4 ser., c. 94, s. 355, authorizes the assignee of a chose in action in certain cases to sue thereon in the supreme court as his assignor might have done, and s. 357 provides that before such action is brought a notice in writing, signed by the assignee, his agent or attorney, stating the right of the assignee and specifying his demand thereunder, shall be served on the party to be sued. Pursuant to this section the assignee of a debt served the following notice:— "Ficton. Nov. 21st, 1878. Alex. Grant, Esq.: Admin. Estate of Alexander McDonald, deceased. Dear Sir.—Vou are hereby notified in accordance with c. 94 of the Revised Statutes, s. 357, that the debt due by the above estate to Findlay Thompson has been assigned by him to Alexander D. Cameron, who hereby claims payment of twelve hundred dollars, the amount of the said debts assigned to him. S. H. Holmes, Atty, of Alex. D. Cameron:"—Held, that the notice was sufficient compliance with the statute. Grant v. Cameron, 18 S. C. R. 716.

Notice of Transfer — Condition Precedent to Right of Action—Quebec Law.]—See Murphy v. Bury, 24 S. C. R. 668.

Proceeding in Equity.]—To enable the assignee of a chose in action to proceed in equity for its recovery, he must shew the existence of some difficulty or obstacle to prevent him from recovering at law. Ross v. Musro, 6 Gr. 431.

Purchaser—Money Due to Vendor.]—K, owned a propeller which had been employed by government, for whom S, was acting as agent. He sold her to the plaintiff, and addressed the following letter to S: "Dear Sir—A downer of the pro.' S. C. Ives, now employed by you on account of the Canadian government in conveying materials to Point au Pelé light house, I beg to inform that I have this day conveyed to E. J. Sterling, Esq., of Cleveland, all my right to the payment of moneys for services performed by said boat under our contract. You will therefore, after presentation of this, account to him or his agent for such sums as said boat may be entitled to on account of work performed under our contract." At the foot of this the plaintiff signed an order to pay the money to the captain of the vessel. This money was afterwards seized by the sheriff under an attachment against K., which was subsequently set aside. Whether it was so seized in the hands of S. or of the captain did not appear:—Held, reversing 17 U. C. R. 361, that the plaintiff could not maintain an action for the money in his own name against the sheriff. Sterling v. McEucen, 18 U. C. R. 466.

Quebec Law—Moneys Entrusted for Investment — Transfer — Prête-nom.] — See Moodie v. Jones, 19 S. C. R. 266.

Quebec Law — Personal Right — Invalid Assignment.] — See Demers v. Duhaime, 16 S. C. R. 366.

Re-assignment.] — Under the provisions of R. S. O. 1887 c. 122, in order to enable the assignee of a chose in action to sue in his own name, the assignment must be in writing, but a written instrument is not required to restore the assignor to his original right of action.—Where creditors refused to accept the benefit of an assignment under R. S. O. 1887 c. 124, and the assignor was notified of such refusal and that the assignment had not been registered, an action for damages was properly brought in the name of the assignor against a mortgagee of his stock-in-trade who sold the goods in an improper manner. Rennie v. Block, 26 S. C. R. 356.

Receiver.]—A receiver has no right to sue in his own name for a debt due to the person or corporation whose assets he has been appointed to receive; nor can that right be conferred on him by order. But where by an ex parte order made in the action in which the plaintiff was appointed receiver, he was authorized to bring action in his own name for the collection of debts due to a certain grange, and brought this action pursuant thereto, it was held, that an amendment should be made adding the grange as co-plaintiffs without security being given for their costs, they being insolvent. If there was no person in whose name the action could be brought, there would perhaps be jurisdiction to direct it to be brought in the name of the receiver. McGuin v. Fretts, 13 O. R. 639.

Receiver.]—S. recovered a judgment against S. S., and plaintiff was appointed the receiver in that suit to receive S. S.'s share of his father's estate which he was entitled to under the will of the latter. The share not being paid over plaintiff brought action in his own name against the father's executors to recover the amount. The defendants demurred on the ground that the cause of action, if any, was vested in S. S., and that plaintiff had no right to bring the action:—Held, that the right of action was in S. S. and not the plaintiff by his appointment the plaintiff became entitled to receive the amount, and the defendants, the executors, having notice of his appointment, could not safely pay over the money to any other, and in case of their refusal to pay, the plaintiff's duty was a second of the safely pay over the money to any other, and in case of their refusal to pay, the plaintiff's duty was safely pay over the money to any other, and for the safely pay of the Security, I—On an award directing defendant to pay to the plaintiffs $220, one of the plaintiffs $220, one of the plaintiffs $220, one of the plaintiffs, IL, indorsed the following memorandum:—"I hereby assign the within award in this matter to W. N., to secure payment of the sum of $130, this day lent and advanced by him to me, and I hereby authorize him in my name to take all necessary steps for the collection of the amount of said award for me, and retain thereout his $130." B., the other plaintiff, indorsed a memorandum under seal on the award confirming the above assignment:—Held, that the assignment did not, under $5 Vict. c. 12, s. 1 (O.), enable the assignment so the inhibitory of the sum of the assignment sum, and the words of the assignment sum, and the words of the assignment shewed that the assignment of the such right. Hostrausser v. Robinson, 23 C. P. 350.

Security—4.signor Sning.]—On the 21st June, 1876, the plaintiff assigned to one S. all his claim under the lease, with power to use is name for the collection of the same; but it was proved that this assignment was intended as security only for money lent by S. to the plaintiff;—Held, following Hostrawser v. Itohinson, 23 C. P. 350, that the plaintiff, notwithstanding 35 Vet. c. 12 (O.), might sue in his own name. Daucson v. Graham, 41 U. C. R. 532.

IV. PLEADING.

An averment in a declaration that a chose in action "was duly assigned in the manner required by the Act:"—Held, sufficient. Cousins v. Bullen, 6 P. R. 71.

A plea of assignment of the debt sued before action should state the name of the assignee or allege that it is unknown to defendant. Ferguson v. Elliott, 12 C. L. J. 249.

In an action brought by the assignees of a chose in action, a plea that the assignment was made without consideration was ordered to be struck out. Bain McCarthy, 13 C. L. J. 298.

To an action on the common counts, defendant pleaded that before action plaintiff, by an instrument in writing, assigned the debt and causes of action in the declaration mentioned to F. and A. Replication, that before action said F. and A., by an instrument in writing, duly re-assigned the said debt, &c., to the plaintiff:—Held, replication good, and not a departure from the declaration. O'Connov y. McVamec, 28 C. P. 141.

A declaration on the common counts, by the Postmaster-General, alleged that defendants were indebted to one M., who assigned such debt or chose in action to the plaintiff:— Held, sufficient, under 38 Vict. c, 7 (D.), without alleging that the debt was connected with plaintiff's office, that being a matter of evidence. Postmaster-General v. Robertson, 41 U. C. R. 375.

Declaration, that D., by writing, for valuable consideration, duly assigned to plaintiff the sum of $500, money due and to become due to D. by defendants, whereof defendants had notice in writing, and at the time of and after said assignment, and after said notice, and before action, defendants were indebted to D. in money sufficient to pay the sum so rssigned to plaintiff. &c.:—Held, on demurrer, bad, as not setting forth any fact from which the existence of and promise to pay a debt would be implied by law. Mittell V. Goodall, 44 U. C. R. 398, and Brice v. Bannister, L. R. 3 Q. B. 599, distinguished. Smith v. Ancaster Townskip, 45 U. C. R. 86, The second count stated that D., being largely indebted to plaintiff, and being pressed

The second count stated that D., being largely indebted to plaintiff, and being pressed by him for payment, it was agreed that D. should assign to plaintiff, to accure part of said debt, $500 due and to become due to D. by defendants for work done by D.: that D. gave plaintiff an order upon defendants to pay same to plaintiff an order upon defendants to pay same to plaintiff: that plaintiff notified defendants, who represented to plaintiff that if he would present said order as soon as they had examined said work, which would be before December, 1879, they would pay the $500 to him: that by said representation plaintiff was prevented from proceeding against D. to recover said $500 to that afterwards and before said December, defendants being liable to pay said sum, and well knowing that plaintiff, relying on said representation, refrained from such proceedings, paid the same over to D., in fraud of plaintiff, and defendants thereafter wrongfully refused to pay same to plaintiff:—Held, good, as disclosing a cause of action upon an assignment of a debt due by defendants to D. for work and labour performed for them by D., and a promise on their part to plaintiff to pay such debt. 1b.

V. MISCELLANEOUS CASES.

Act Retrospective.]—Held, that 35 Vict. c. 12 (O.), applies to assignments made and causes of action accrued before as well as after the passing of the Act; and that the declaration in this case shewed a sufficient assignment. Wallace v. Gilchrist, 24 C. P. 40.

Conditional Assignment.] — Although an order operates as an equitable assignment of a debt due to the drawer, and that without any acceptance by the drawer; still, if the person to whom the order is given accepts it conditionally, agreeing only to give up his claim against the drawer on the order being accepted and paid, and if not paid to return the order, and he subsequently proceeds against the drawer, in respect of such claim, he cannot afterwards enforce his equitable claim against the drawee. Muir v. Waddell, 14 Gr. 488.

Crown.]—Where a chose in action was assigned, inter alia, for the general benefit of creditors, all the parties interested being before the court and the Crown making no objection, the court gave effect to such assignment. Quere, in the absence of acquiescence in such an assignment, are the assignee's rights thereunder capable of enforcement against the Crown? The Queen v. McCurdy, 2 Ex. C. R. 311.

Execution.] — Writs of execution only bind moneys, choses in action, or securities for money from the time of seizure by the sheriff, and not from the time either of the issue of the writs or delivery thereof to the sheriff. McDowell v. McDowell, 10 L. J. 48.

Execution — Equitable Interest of Purchaev under Contract. — The equitable interest of an assignee from the purchaser of a contract for the slot of lands, is exigible under a writ of each racins against the lands of such assignee, and the purchaser at a sheriff's sale of such interest is entitled to specific performance of the contract. He Prittie and Trawford, 9 C. L. T. Oce, N. 45, declared to larve been inadvertently decided or reported. Word v. Archer, 24 O. R. 650.

Re-assignment.)—The plaintiff transferred a covenant for the payment of $4,000, executed by four persons in his favour, to the defendant by an absolute assignment, as security for $2,000; the defendant giving to the plaintiff a separate agreement to "reassign" on payment of the loan and interest. On a bill to obtain a re-assignment, alleging that such loan had been repaid, the court made a decree for redemption in favour of the plaintiff with costs; the defendant having set up a claim to be entitled to hold the security as absolute purchaser thereof. Livingston v, Wood, 27 Gr. 515.

Separation of Counties.]—A recovery by one of two counties, after dissolution, for moneys paid during the union:—Held, to be allowed by 12 Vict. c. 78, s. 15, notwithstanding the technical rule of law against assignment of debts. County of Wellington v. Township of Wilmot, 17 U. C. R. 82.

Succession—Acceptation of by Minor Subsequent to Action.]—The acceptation of a succession subsequent to action and pendente lite on behalf of a minor as universal legatee has a retroactive operation. Martindale v. Powers, 23 S. C. R. 507.

See Parties, II. 1.

CHRISTIANITY.

Attack on Christian Doctrines.]—
Held, that Christianity in general, and not simply the tenets of particular sects, is part of the recognized law of this Province; and therefore that to an action for breach of contract to let a public hall, a plea setting up that the purpose for which said hall was intended to be used was for the delivery of certain lectures containing an attack upon the fundamental doctrines of Christianity, was a good defence. Pringle v. Town of Napance, 43 U. C. R. 285.

I. CHURCH OF ENGLAND. 1. In General.

Church Society—Synod.] — The church society of the diocese of T. had become united to and incorporated with the synod of the diocese by Act of parliament. A bond for security for costs of appeal, &c., had been filed, and a motion made to allow such bond, which was objected to on the ground that such bond could not be properly executed without the concurrence of at least one-fourth of the diocese, and unless at least one-fourth of the congregation were represented:—Held, that the synod was bound by what had been done by the proper officers of the former corporation, without waiting for the action of the synod, and that there was an implied authority in the Act authorizing them to take such a proceeding as that in question on behalf of and in the name of the synod; and a stay of proceedings, pending the appeal, was granted. Boulton v. Incorporated Synod of the Diocese of Toronto, 2 Ch. Ch. 377.

Church Society.]—By the Act of incorporation, 7 Vict. c. 68, the church society of Toronto is enabled to hold real estate without any license for that purpose. Church Society of the Diocese of Toronto v. Crandall, 8 Gr. 34.

Church Society—Breach of Trust.]—A bill will lie by a member of the corporation of the church society of the diocese of Toronto, on behalf of himself and all other members of the society, to correct and prevent alleged breaches of trust by the corporation: and to such a bill the attorney-general is not a necessary party. Boulton v. Church Society of the Diocese of Toronto, 15 Gr. 450; S. C., 14 Gr. 123.

Clergy Reserves.]—The 18th clause of 4 & 5 Vict. c. 100, does not apply to clergy reserves. Byers v. Moore, 5 U. C. R. 4: Doe d. Weisenberger v. McGlennon, 5 U. C. R. 128

See Martyn v. Kennedy, 4 Gr. 61.

Commutation Fund — Alteration of By-law.]—The sum received for commutation under the Clergy Reserve Act was paid to the Church Society of the Diocese of Huron, upon trust to pay to the commuting clergy their stipends for life, and when such payment should cease then "for the support and maintenance of the clergy of the Diocese of Huron in such manner as should from time to time be declared by any by-law or by-laws of the synod to be from time to time passed for that purpose," In 1860 a by-law was passed providing that out of the surplus of the commutation fund, clergymen of eight years and upwards active service should receive each $200, with a provision for increase in certain events. In 1873 the plaintiff became entitled under this by-law, and in 1876 the synod (the successors of the church society) repealed all previous by-laws respecting the fund, and made a different appropriation of it:—Held, affirming 9 A. R. 411, which reversed 20 Gr. 348, that under the terms of the trust there was no contract between the plaintiff and defendants; the trustees had power, from time to time, to pass by-laws regulating the fund in question and making a different appropriation of it, for the support and maintenance of the clergy of the diocese, and the plaintiff must be assumed to have accepted his stipend with that knowledge and on that condition. Wright v, Incorporated Synod of the Diocese of Huron, 11 S. C. R. 95.

Diocesan Fund.]—The Diocesan Church Society of Nova Scotia, holds a fund for distribution among the Church of England clergymen of the Province, and one of the rules governing its distribution is that no clergyman receiving an income of $1,000 and upwards from certain named sources shall be entitled to participate:—Held, affirming 21 N. S. Rep. 309, that a rector was not debarred from participating in this fund because the salary paid to his curate, if added to his own salary, would exceed the said sum of $1,000, his individual income being less than that amount. Diocesan Synod of Nova Scotia v. Ritchic. 18 S. C. R. 705.

Evidence.]—As to evidence to prove the contents of a canon of the church society or synod. See Langtry v. Dumoulin, 7 O. R. 499.
As to evidence to establish the status of certain rectors. See S. C., 7 O. R. 499.

Excommunication - Injunction.] - An attendant at an Episcopal church, and one of the lay members of the synod therefrom. filed a bill against the incumbent of the church praying, amongst other things, that the defendant might be restrained from refusing to allow the plaintiff to partake of the Lord's Supper, and from suspending or excommunicating the plaintiff as a member of that congregation or church:—Held, that, although the facts were as alleged by the bill—though denied by the answer—this court had not any jurisdiction to enforce the claim of the plaintiff, as no civil right of the plaintiff had been invaded, the office of lay representative giving only an ecclesiastical, not a civil status. But the court being of opinion that all the grounds of defence, other than that of want of jurisdiction, had signally failed, on dismissing the bill, refused the defendant his costs. Dunnet v. Forneri, 25 Gr. 199.

Incumbent — Refusal to Convey.] — The incumbent of a church, without the consent of the bishop or churchwardens, took a deed of land in his own name as such incumbench the property having been previously tracted for by the bishop and certain members of the congregation for the site of a church, and on his retirement refused to execute such a release of the estate; and, as his conduct had been unreasonable, refused him his costs, although in strictness the bill, so far as it sought a conveance, ought to have been dismissed, title having already vested in his successor. Sanson v. Mitchell, 6 Gr. 582.

Incumbent—Removal — Trial—" Immorality."]—The Rev. J. H. being the incumbent of a parish in the Diocese of Ontario, which was endowed, and having acted in such capacity and performed the duties thereof for several years, discontinued the services in two eral years, discontinued the services in two other churches which were attached to his parish. A commission was issued by the bishop under the canon in that behalf of the synod of the said diocese No. S. "To enquire into the causes which led to the closing of the said churches, and to report whether there was lawful excuse for the said Rev. J. H.'s discontinuance of the exercise of his ministerial offices in said churches, and to report whether there was sufficient primā facie ground for instituting further proceedings against the said Rev. J. H. as provided by said canon." The commissioners reported said canon." The commissioners reported that the churches had been closed "because the members of the church refused to attend and provide for the ministrations of the Rev. J. H. in these churches:" that an estrangenent existed between the said Rev. J. H. and his parishioners, and they declined his minis-trations. But that in the opinion of the commissioners, the proofs adduced were not of such a nature as could be relied on to procure a conviction in an ecclesiastical court: and they declined to recommend the prosecution of further legal action, although they believed there was no hope of a restoration of his ministerial usefulness there, and that there was a primâ facie ground for instituting further proceedings against him as provided by the canon; but they were of opinion that without the production of other and much stronger evidence than that adduced, the institution of further proceedings would not result in a charge of breach of discipline under the said canon being sustained. After the making of this report, and upon the said Rev. J. H. refusing to resign his said incumbency, the bishop, by an instrument under seal, revoked, or purported to revoke, his li-cense, and appointed the Rev. A. E. T. as his successor, and the synod declined to pay him (the Rev. J. H.) the annual proceeds of the endowment. Upon an action being brought endowment. Upon an action being brought by the Rev. J. H. to compel the synod to pay him such proceeds:-Held, that the offences (if any) came within the second section of the canon; that any one charged with such an offence has the right to be tried, under section one, by the diocesan court, and has the right of appeal to the metropolitan, under section thirteen; that the bishop had not the power to cancel and annul the license of the plaintiff, either without or for cause, without a trial by the diocesan court; and that the plaintiff must succeed:—Held, also, that the general word "immorality" as used in the canon was not restricted by the words following, specifying particular offences, for such offences were not of the same nature as the general word. *Halliwell v. Incorpor-*ated Synod of the Diocese of Ontario, 7 O. R. 67.

Incumbent's Salary — Liability of Churchwardens.]—The churchwardens of an Anglican congregation which has adopted the free seat system, and in which the only the venue is derived from the voluntary contributions of the members, are not liable to the incumbent for the payment of his salary except to the extent of contributions received by them for that purpose. Judgment below, 28 O. R. 452, affirmed. Daw v. Ackerill, 25 A. R. 37.

Pew-Grant—Secret Trust — Ejectment.]—
I-befendant, being the holder of pews in the church of St. James in Toronto, belonging to the Church of England, conveyed the same by deed to plaintiff, a member of that church.
The deed was in reality so made to plaintiff in trust for a corporation, to secure a bon by them to defendant, and several members of the corporation belonged to other religious denominations. Plaintiff was not described in the deed as a member of the Church of England, but the evidence at the trial shewed that he had been in the habit of attending the services of that church:—Held, that there was sufficient evidence that the plaintiff belonged to the Church of England, and that it was not necessary that he should have been so described in the deed. Ridout v.
Herris, 17 C. P. SS.

Held, also, that the deed, even if clothed with an unexpressed trust in favour of a corporation incapacitated under the Church Temporalities Act from being pew holders, by reason of their not belonging to the Church of Encland, was nevertheless not void in the eye of a court of law because it was apparently good on its face, and it was therefore binding between the parties. Semble, that a court of equity would set aside the deed on account of the existence of such secret trust, but that a court of law would not recognize it even if it were set out. Ib.

Held, also, that plaintiff could not maintain ejectment for pews because he was not entitled to the exclusive possession of them, his possession being limited to the special purpose of attending divine service, at which pose of attending divine service, at which time alone he had the right to enter; and because such right was of an incorporeal nature, and possession of it could not be given by the sheriff. Ib.

Case is the proper remedy for the disturbance of the right to occupy a pew. Ib.

Definition of the words "absolute purchase," contained in s. 7 of the Church Tem-poralities Act. Ib.

The court in bane, after verdict and exception taken, amended the record in ejectment by adding the words, "lands and premises," to the property sued for. Ib.

Presentation to Living, 1—By 31 Geo. III. c. 31, his Majesty and his successors were cuprevered to authorize the governor of the proposers of Quebec to erect parsonages or rectories desired according to the experiment of the rectories of England; and in pursuance thereof Sch of England; and in pursuance thereof Sch of England; and in pursuance thereof Sch of England; and provincial statute the church society of the diocese of T. was incorporated, and by a later statute the right of presentation was vested in it. Subsequently the legislature erected the diocese of O. out of the diocese of T. and the bishop, clergy, and laity of the diocese of G. and the bishop, clergy, and laity of the diocese of O. out of the diocese of Ontario." Who, by a by-law in 1802, invested the then bishop with the right to appoint to all rectories during his incumbency. The bishop afterwards, on the death of the incumbent, presented to the rectory of K.; whereupon an information was filed by the attorney-general, on the relation of certain of the parishioners, against the bishop and the rector, praying to have such by-law of the synod declared void and set aside. A demurrer by the bishop and rector for want of equity was allowed, the court considering that under the several Acts and proceedings which had been passed and taken the right of presentation was vested in the bishop during his ingumbency. But, quere, if the church society of the dioces of T., before the setting off of the dioces of O, had passed a by-law similar to the one passed by the synod of O, whether the right to make such presentation did not remain with the bishop of T. Attorney-General v. Lauder, 9 Gr. 461.

Presentation to Living—Consultation.]
—By one of the canons of the Episcopal church in this Province it was provided "that on the vacancy of any rectory, incumbency, or mission within the diocese * the apor mission within the diocese pointment to the vacancy shall rest in the Lord Bishop of the diocese; * that before making such appointment the bishop shall consult with the churchwardens of said parish or mission, and with the lay representatives of the same:"—Held, that the consultation here referred to was not intended to be by correspondence, but in a personal interview with the churchwardens and lay representatives, so as to afford an opportunity of stating reasons for or against any nominee to fill such vacancy; the suggestion and discussion of other names; the state of the congregation, its likings and dislikings; what would be for the advantage of the church, the circumstances of the locality, and all the numberless particulars that might or ought to have an influence in guiding the opinion of the bishop in filling such vacancy. But, quære, if after such consultation it is not left discretionary with the bishop to comply with the wishes of the delegates, and exercise his own judgment as to what is best for the congregation, even in contravention of the wishes of the delegates. Held, also, that the facts in this case did not shew that any consultation had been had with the representatives of the congregation as to the appointment of the plaintiff to the incumbency, before it was made. Johnson v. Glen, 26 Gr.

Rector—Representative Capacity.]—Upon an application by the churchwardens of St. James' church for leave to appeal from the judgment of the chancery divisional court (7 O. R. 644) in their own names, or in the name of the rector, the defendant (who declined to carry the case further) as their trustee:—Held, that the rector was not a trustee for the applicants, but would himself, if the contention should prevail, be beneficially entitled to the fruits of the litigation; and that the applicants had not such an interest as entitled them to be made parties to the action, and the application was therefore refused. The event rendered it unnecessary to consider whether or not the application should have been made in this court or in the court below. Langtry v. Dumoulin, 11 A. R. 544. See S. C., sub nom. DuMoulin v. Langtry, 13 S. C. R. 258.

Temporalities Act.]—3 Vict, c. 74, for the management of the church temporalities, is not confined to parish churches, but embraces all churches in communion with the united church of England and Ireland, Sanson v. Mitchell, 6 Gr. 582.

Will—Time—Bishop and Rector.]—A will is in contemplation of law a "conveyance."

Therefore under the words of s. 16 of 3 Vict. Therefore under the works of s. 10.13 ct. c. 74. "by deed or conveyance," a person may devise, as well as grant by deed, lands to the church of England for the purpose of that Act. Doe d. Baker v. Clark, 7 U. C. R. 44.

A. made his will in 1843; in 1846 he added a codicil merely appointing a new executor "of his will written above:"—Held, that the codicil was a confirmation and not a revocation of the will, which must be still considered as a will made in 1843. Held, that a will as a conveyance is perfect at the time of its execution, though its effect cannot be of the execution, though its elect children felt till the death of testator, and that therefore the condition of s. 16 of 3 Vict. c. 74, requiring "a deed or conveyance to be made and executed six months at least before the death of the person conveying the same," might be complied with in the case of a will.

A devise under 3 Vict. c. 74, made to the bishop and the rector, is good, notwith-standing the statute speaks of a conveyance to the bishop or rector, &c. 1b.

2. Churchwardens,

Action-Change of Churchwardens.] - A bill was filed by the churchwardens, and during the progress of the suit the churchwardens were changed at the vestry meeting; the new churchwardens were not made parties. suit not being brought to a hearing within the time required by the practice, it was held that a notice to dismiss the bill served on the plaina hottle to plants the bill served the plants tiffs' solicitor was regular. Quære, was it necessary to make the new churchwardens parties. McFecters v. Dixon, 3 Ch. Ch. 84.

Bequest to Incumbent - Action by Churchwardens.]-Where a testator bequeathed unto the incumbent of a certain church all the property he might die possessed of, to be used for the relief of the poor of church, to be dispensed by the said incumbent, and the churchwardens brought an action, on behalf of themselves and all the members of the congregation, against the executors, to have the estate administered, and for a declaration that the incumbent was entitled to distribute the fund, and an order for payment over of all such sums as should have been distributed by the incumbent among the poor of the church :- Held, on demurrer to the statement of claim, that it was bad in substance, for the churchwardens had no title to maintain the action, since they could not be said to represent the incumbent, to whom the bewas made, and who was not a member of the congregation in the same sense as the plaintiffs and the other members, and s. 6 of the Church Temporalities Act, 3 Vict. c. did not authorize them to sue. McClena-ghan v. Grey. 4 O. R. 329.

Semble, that the said section gives churchwardens authority in certain specified matters, in which all the members of the church are interested, but here the bequest was only to a particular class, viz., the poor of the church, and therefore not within the section. church, and therefore not within the section. Clowes v. Hilliard, 4 Ch. D. 413, and New Westminster Brewing Co. v. Hannah, 24 W. R. 899, followed, and Werderman v. Société Générale d'Electricité, 19 Ch. D. 246, distinguished. Ib.

Contract by Predecessors. |-Under the Church Temporalities Act, 3 Vict. c. 74, ss. 2, 3, 6, a vestry capable of electing churchwardens, forming a corporation under the Act, so as to be capable as such of suing or being sued, must be composed of persons holding pews in the church by purchase or lease, or holding sittings therein by lease from the churchwardens. The churchwardens of a church where the sittings were wholly free, were therefore held not liable on a contract made by their predecessors for building the church. Anderson v. Worters, 32 C. P. 659.

Election - Persons Entitled to Vote.]-The court has jurisdiction to set aside an improper election of a churchwarden, and for that purpose to carry on a scrutiny of votes. A party so complaining is not compelled to resort to proceedings by mandamus, the remedy in this court being speedy, and there being nothing in the machinery or practice to prevent the decision being equally accurate. Tully v. Farrell, 23 Gr. 49.

Under the Church Temporalities Act (3 Vict. c. 74, s. 2), all persons of either sex thelding pews, whether as owners or lessees thereof, or holding sittings therein under certificates or other memoranda from the churchwardens, are entitled to vote at vestry meet-ings held for the election of churchwardens.

Where a person claims to be entitled to a vote as holder of a sitting in a pew, the voter must, if required so to do, produce a certificate shewing that the voter holds by leave of the churchwardens; but no particular form of certificate is necessary; a receipt for the rent of such sitting is sufficient. This, how-ever, is not necessary in the case of the lease of a pew; there a verbal lease suffices. Ib.

or a pew; there a verbal lease sumees. 10.

In a proceeding to set aside the election of a churchwarden:—Held, that it was too late, at the hearing, for the defendant to object that the bill should have been on behalf of the plaintiff and such of the members of the vestry as voted for him only; not on behalf

On the 29th March, the day of the election of a churchwarden, application was made to rent a pew for three months from the 1st April following, and the application was granted:—Held, that this did not confer a right on the applicant to vote at such election.

Where the absolute owners of pews authorize the churchwardens to lease the same or rent sittings therein, the lessees or occupiers are entitled to vote for churchwardens.

Where on an election of churchwardens several votes of women were taken in favour of the defendant, and the plaintiff, the unsuccessful candidate filed a bill to set aside the election on this, amongst other grounds, the court though it dismissed the bill, refused to make any order as to costs; the unusual course adopted of females voting having in-vited inquiry, and the court being of opinion that, under the circumstances, the defendant ought to maintain the right to vote at his own expense. 1b.

The absolute purchase of a pew in a church creates in the purchaser a fee simple, which is not subject to forfeiture by reason of a is not subject to forteiture by reason of a change of residence of the purchaser, or his censing to frequent such pew; and he may bargain, sell, or assign his interest to another, being a member of the Church of England; or the pew may be apportioned into sittings amongst several grantees or assignees, either for value or without consideration, each of whom will have a voice in the election of churchwarden; so also the owner of a pew may devise the same, and in the event of intestacy, his interest therein will, like his other freeholds, descend to his heirs-st-law. Ib.

Incumbent's House—Rent.]—Upon an action against two churchwardens, (by name.) describing them as "the churchwardens of Christ's church, in the village of W.," &c., for the use and occupation of a house rented by the previous churchwardens for the rector:
—Held, that under s. 6 of 3 & 4 Vict, c. 74, the action was properly brought; 2, that the taking of the premises and occupation by the chergyman under the previous churchwardens, with the sanction of the vestry and the defendants, was sufficient to bind them as churchwardens. Maynard v. Gamble, 13 C. P. 55, 467.

Incumbent's Salary.]—Plaintiff sued defendants as churchwardens for his stipend as the incumbent of a church. It appeared that several resolutions were adopted in vestry as to the salary of the clergyman, but only one subsequent to the defendants' acceptance of office, which related to an old balance:—Held, that as plaintiff's claim rested on a voluntary undertaking of the vestry, and the evidence shewed no contract between plaintiff and defendants founded upon a consideration between them, the defendants were entitled to judgment. Carry v. Wallace, 12 C. P. 372.

Incumbent's Salary—Voluntary Contribations.]—Where the free pew system has been adopted in an Anglican church, and the voluntary contributions of the congregation are the only means of meeting the expenses, no personal responsibility rests upon the churchwardens in respect of the incumbent's salary; the measure of their liability to him is the extent to which they receive moneys whereout to pay his salary. Daw v. Ackerill, 28 to R. 452; 25 A. R. 37.

3. Rectory Lands.

Adverse Possession.]—A rector is not barred by adverse possession of the glebe land for twenty years, unless he has been incumbent during the whole of that time. Hill v. McKinnon, 16 U. C. R. 216.

Ejectment.] — In ejectment by a rector for glebe land, he must prove presentation, institution, and induction. Doe Creen v. Friesman, 1 U. C. R. 420.

Ejectment.]—Quare, in the case of successive incumbents, as to the necessity of such proof in the case of each. Henderson v. White, 23 C. P. 78.

Lease.]—Lease by rector—Covenant as to cutting timber and clearing—Construction. Lundy v. Tench, 16 Gr. 597.

Lease. |—One G., a rector, in 1861, leased land to plaintiff for twenty-one years, at an annual rent, with a proviso for re-entry on non-payment. Semble, that such lease was binding on the rector and those claiming under lim until forfeited. O'Hare v. McCormick, 30 U. C. R. 567. Lease—Insurable Interest of Lessee.)—A tenant of glebe lands, under a lease containing a covenant for further renewal, continuing in possession after the death of the lessor, and after the induction of his successor, against the latter's will, has no insurable interest, the successor not being bound by the covenant. Shaw v. Phanix Ins. Co., 20 C. P. 170.

Leases—Rights and Powers of Rectors.]
—On the 19th January, 1824, the Crown granted to O. S., G. M., and J. M., in fee, certain land, which had formerly been set apart for a rectory, and on which a church had been erected, in trust to confirm all existing leases, and to grant new leases, and apply the rent first to the payment of any money borrowed for erecting a new church, and then to pay the rent to the clergyman of such church; with a proviso for the appointment of new trustees by the three grantees, or the of new trustees by the three grantees, or the survivors or survivor of them, and a further proviso, that whenever the governor should erect a parsonage or rectory in Kingston, and duly present an incumbent thereto, the trustees should by instrument under their hands and seals, attested by two credible wit-nesses, convey the land to such incumbent and his successors forever, upon the same trusts thereinbefore expressed. On the 21st Janu-ary, 1836, letters patent issued erecting a rectory in Kingston. Before the 10th May, 1837, the trusts of the patent of 1824 had been fulfilled, and on that day by deed poll, after reciting the two patents above mentioned, and the induction of the said O. S. into the said rectory, the said G. M. and J. M., the two other grantees in the first patent mentioned, other grantees in the first patent mentioned, in fulfilment of the trust, conveyed the land to the said O. S., as rector and incumbent, to hold to him and to his successors, subject to and under the uses and trusts set forth in the letters patent to them. To this was appended another deed poll of the same date, executed by O. S., and declaring for himself and his heirs, that as one of the trustees named in the patent of 1824, he agreed to this assign-ment, and held the same in his capacity of rector and incumbent of Kingston, and not otherwise. In 1842 O. S. leased the land for twenty-one years, with certain covenants for building and renewal. In this lease he was described as rector, and it recited the two patents of 1824 and 1836. The successor of patents of 1824 and 1836. The successor or O. S. brought ejectment against defendants, claiming under this lease:—Held, on the authority of Doe d. Bowyer v. Judge, 11 East 288, that the conveyance of 1837 passed two-thirds to the plaintiff, and that he was en-titled to recover for that: for, semble, in a court of law the ground that the trust to conbeing joint was incapable of severance could not arise, the legal estate only being in question. Lyster v. Kirkpatrick, 26 U. C. R.

But for that decision, semble, that if the appointment of O. S. as rector rendered him inso facto incapable of acting in the trusts of the patent of 1824, it could not divest him of the estate, or prevent him from joining in a conveyance to any new trustee substituted for him; nor could the deed poil of 1837, excuted by him, pass the estate, vested in him in trust in his natural capacity, to himself as a rector and corporation sole; that whether the grantees in the patent were to be treated as taking a power or as trustees owning the fee, the conveyance by two only of the three was inoperative; and, semble, that they were trustees. Ib.

The two-thirds having passed to O. S. as rector by the conveyance, he still held the remaining third in his natural capacity, and the joint estate was thus severed, for as rector he could not be joint tenant with a natural person. Ib.

The law of England in respect to the rights and powers of rectors as to the land vested in them as such, is in force in this country; and in this case the provisions in the defendants' lease respecting renewal were not binding on the plaintiff, as the successor of O. S., the lessor and first rector, Ib.

Held, that defendants were not estopped by the lease from denying the power of O. S. to lease, for the recitals professed to shew what title he had. Ib.

By letters patent dated in January, 1824, certain lands were granted to three parties upon the trust, amongs others, to convey the same to the incumbent whenever the governor should erect a parsonage or rectory in K. and duly appoint an incumbent thereto, such conveyance to be upon trusts similar to those thereinbefore expressed. In January, 1836, a rectory was created in K. In May, 1837, the trusts for which the patent of 1824 had been issued having been carried out, and one of the trustees named therein appointed rector, the other two joined in a conveyance to him as such rector, to hold to him and to his successors, subject to the uses and trusts set forth in the grant to them. In 1842 the incumbent created a lease for twenty-one years (under which the plaintiffs claimed), whereby he covenanted for himself and his successor to pay for certain improvements made by the lessee on the premises, or that he or they would execute a renewal lease on terms to be agreed upon, and that until such payment for improvements or renewal of lease, the lessee should retain possession of the premises:— Held, that the incumbent, either as trustee or rector, had no power to bind his successors to pay for improvements, or to enter into any agreement which a priori would extend the lease beyond the twenty-one years. Espatrick v. Lyster, 13 Gr. 323; 16 Gr. 17.

Held, also, that the mere demand of rent by the successor of the lessor (after the expiration of the twenty-one years) was not such an affirmance of the covenants in the lease as would estop him from disputing them. S. C., 13 Gr. 323.

Rectory Endowment.]—Under the Constitutional Act, 31 Geo, 11L. c. 31, and the royal commission, Sir J. C., the lieutenant-governor of U. C., had authority to create and endow rectories without any further instructions. The public events in the Province of Upper Canada between 1826 and 1836, were not sufficient to warrant the presumption that such authority had been revoked or suspended, Attorncy-General v. Grasett, 5 Gr. 412; 6 Gr. 200.

Under 31 Geo, III. c. 31, a patent establishing and endowing a rectory or parsonage is not void for want of a grantee being named in it; nor for not defining the limits of the parish within which the rectory was to be, it being established in and for a certain township. Ib.

Rectory Endowment.] — Certain land was granted by patent from the Crown, dated

26th December, 1817, to D. B., J. B. R., and A., as trustees, for the sole use and benefit of the parishioners of the town of York for ever, as a churchyard and burying ground for the inhabitants of the said town of York, and appurtenant to the church then built thereon. This patent was surrendered to the Crown, and another, dated 4th September, 1820, was issued to the same trustees, reciting the terms of the former patent, and that it was intended that so much only of the said land as was necessary for the purposes of a churchyard and burying ground should be so appropriated, and that such part of the said land as was not so required for the use of the parishioners should be held upon and for the trusts and uses hereinafter stated, which trusts were as follows:—"In trust to hold the same for the sole use and benefit of the resident clergyman of the said town of York, and his successors appointed or to be appointed rectors of the Episcopal church therein to which the said land is appurtenant, to make lease of the same with the assent of the incumbent, and to receive the rents due or to grow due therefrom to his use, when a rectory was erected, and an incumbent appointed * * "the trustees should convey to such incumbent * * and his successors for ever as a corporation sole to and for the same uses and upon the same trusts. Certain other lands were also granted by another parent from the Crown, dated 26th April, 1819, to W. D. P., J. B., and J. S., upon trust to observe such directions, and to consent to and allow such appropriation and disposition of them, and to convey the same in such manner as should thereafter be directed by order in council. These lands were sub-sequently conveyed by W. D. P., J. B., and J. S. to the other trustees, D. B., J. B. R., and W. A., by deed dated 4th July, 1825, reciting an order in council dated 2nd December, 1824, requiring the grantors to convey the said lands to the grantees for the use of the church and of the clergyman incumbent thereon for the time being (which recital was the only evidence of the contents of the order in council), "upon trust, nevertheless, that the should hold the lands for the sole use and benefit of the resident clergyman of the town of York, and his successors appointed or to be appointed incumbent of the parsonage or rectory of the Episcopal church, according to the rites and ceremonies of the Church of England therein, to which the said lands are appurtenant," which deed contained a proviso for conveyance by the trustees, upon the erection of a parsonage or rectory and presentation thereto, in the same terms as that con-tained in the patent of the 4th September, 1820. The town of York was subsequently in-corporated as the city of Toronto, and by letters patent, dated 16th January, 1836, a par-sonage or rectory was erected and constituted in the said city of Toronto, designated as the first parsonage or rectory within the township of York, otherwise known as the parsonage or rectory of St. James, and 800 acres of land were set apart as a glebe or endowment, to be held appurtenant with the said parsonage or rectory, and the Hon, and Rev. J. S. was duly presented to be the incumbent of the said parsonage or rectory of St. James, and by deed poll, dated the 10th February, 1841, reciting the patent of the 4th September, 1820, the the patent of the 4th September, 1829, the deed of the 4th July, 1825, and the presenta-tion of the Hon, and Rev. J. S., the said J. B. R., W. A., and J. G. S., the then trustees, granted the said lands described in the said patent and deed to the said the Hon. and Rev. J. S., rector of St. James, and his successors in the said rectory for ever as a corporation in the said rectory for ever as a corporation sole, to and for the same uses and upon the same trusts as are mentioned and expressed in the patent and deed. The Rev. H. J. G. succeeded the said Hon, and Rev. J. S. as incumbent on the 16th February, 1847, and was in possession of the said lands, and in receipt of the rents and profits thereof until the time is big death, which hannened on the 20th. of the rents and profits thereof until the time of his death, which happened on the 20th March, 1882. In the year 1866 the statute 20 Vict, e. 16, intilued, "An Act to pro-pose for the Sale of Rectory Lands in this Province," was passed by the parliament of Canada, which gave the incorporated synod of my diocess of the United Church of Eng-land and Ireland in Canada, or the church society, with the consent of the synod where the synod was not incorporated, "full power and authority to sell and absolutory discose." and authority to sell and absolutely dispose of any lands granted by the Crown in such diocese, as a glebe of, or as appurtenant or belonging to, or appropriated for, any rectory of the said church in such diocese, by what-ever name the same may be called, or in whomsoever the title thereto may be vested. In a suit brought by the incumbents of several rectories which were subsequently erected in the said city of Toronto, and the synod of the diocese of Toronto, to have the lands covered by the patent of 1820, and the deed of 1825, divided under the provisions of that Act, it was held, affirming 7 O. R. 499, that the was bein allifful of the Research of the Act; that prior to the year 1866 there were rectory lands derived directly from the clergy reserves, and lands specially granted to trustees, which were treated as endow-ments for rectories, and that the legislature intended to deal with both classes; that the delivery up and cancellation of the patent of 1817, being to correct an error, could not be held to be such a consideration as would make the patent of 1820 a grant as would make the patent of 1820 a grant for value; that Crown grants which were of a quasi public character were different from private gifts, and the synod in the case of the former, had petitioned for and obtained the power they desired; that 14 & 15 Vict. 175, s. 2 (C. S. C. c. 74), afforded strong evidence that prior to the year 1866 there had been endowments for rectories out of the public domain, as well as out of the clergy reserves. Landary v. Dumonlin, 7 0. clergy reserves. Langtry v. Dumoulin, 7 O.

Held, affirming the judgment of the courts below, that the lands in question in this case, were rectory lands within the meaning of the Act 29 & 30 Vict. c. 16, initialed "An Act to provide for the sale of rectory lands in this Province." Held, also, that the lands were held by the rector of the church of St. James, Toronto, as a corporation sole for his own use, and not in trust for the vestry and churchwardens or parishioners of the rectory or parish of St. James, and such vestry and churchwardens had therefore no locus standin curia with respect to said lands. Dumoulin v. Langtry, 13 S. C. R. 258.

Rectory Endowment.]—The church of 8th James was erected into a rectory "at the city of Toronto within the said township (York)," by patent under 31 Geo, III. c, 31, s, 38, in 1836, and was endowed at different times with lands situate, some in the city of Toronto, and some in the township of York. When the lands were sold under 29 & 30 Vict. c, 16, and the proceeds had to be distributed by the synod of Toronto under 41 Vict. c. 69, there were incumbents of parishes in the city of Toronto and in the township of York, and it was contended that only the incumbents of the city parishes were entitled to participate in the distribution. On a special case being stated for the opinion of the court, it was—Held, that the city of Toronto was, for the purposes of the grant erecting the rectory, to be considered as being within and a part of the territory of the township of York, and the grant was for the benefit of both the township and the city as one territory, and that the incumbents of the churches in the township must, under 41 Vict. c. 69, s. 2, be included among the participants in the fund:

—Semble, there would appear to have been no authority for the creation of a rectory in this Province other than a rectory for a township. Incorporated Spund of the Diocese of Toronto v. Levis, 13 O. R. 738. Synod of Huron v. Smith, 13 O. R. 738.

II. CHURCH OF ROME.

Bishop—Borrowing Power.]—Held, that the R. C. bishop of S., incorporated by S Vict. c. S2, as "The Roman Catholic Episcopal Corporation of the Diocese of Sandwich in Canada," had no power to borrow so as to bind his successor; and therefore that the plaintiff, having lent money to such bishop, which was used in the construction of the episcopal residence and for the purposes of the church, and taken security for repayment under the corporate seal, was not entitled to recover against the corporation. Ruits v. Roman Catholic Episcopal Corporation of the Diocese of Sandwich, 30 U. C. R.

The bishop was described in the instrument as "R. C. bishop of Sandwich;"—Held, that this variance from the corporate name was immaterial. Ib.

III. PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH.

Union Act—Constitutionality—Dissent.]
—The Act of Union of the Presbyterian churches (38 Vict. c. 75) professes to deal with the funds of colleges at Montreal and at Quebec and with other funds outside of the Province of Ontario:—Held, that although, in respect of these matters, the Act was ultra vires, this did not invalidate the whole Act. Coran v. Wright. 23 Gr. 616.

vires, this did not invalidate the whole Act. Cowan v. Wright, 23 Gr. 616.

The Act passed for the union of the several Presbyterian churches named therein (38 Vict. c. 75) provides (by s. 2) that any congregation in connection or communion with any of them may, at a meeting of the constitution of such congregation or the practice of the church with which it is connected, determine, by a majority of the votes of those entitled to vote, not to enter the union, and in such case the congregational property of such congregation shall remain unaffected. By the "model constitution" of one of the churches, by which certain congregations, who had assumed to vote themselves out of the culion, were governed, such meetings are to be called by public intimation after divine service on at least one Sabbath ten days previous to the day of meeting, and the decisions are to be by a majority of votes of the male persons present of the full age of twenty-one who are members or adherents of the church and who reside with-in the bounds of the same. The meeting at which a congregation had attempted to vote itself out of the union was called on the 12th and held on the 13th, and the voting thereat was confined to the male communicants over the age of twenty-one years :-Held, that the vote was invalid, and that the congregational property was vested in the congrega-tional property was vested in the trustees for the use of the congregation of the united body. In the case of another congregation such vote was taken not at any meeting of the congregation but by depositing votes in the collection plate for two successive Sundays:-Held, that this vote was also invalid, and the same results followed as to the property of the congregation. Ib.

Where the members of a congregation of the Presbyterian Church had attempted to vote themselves out of the union of the churches effected by the statute (38 Vict. c. 75) but by reason of their irregular proceedings had failed to do so, an injunction was granted at the instance of the members of the body who had gone into the union to restrain the dissenting portion of such congregation from interfering with their use of the church, 1b.

Union Act-Dissent.]-Held, under the circumstances appearing in this case, that the anti-unionists had not properly voted themselves out of the union within the six months prescribed in the statute respecting the union of the Presbyterian churches, 38 Vict. c. 75 (O.), and that the property in question, belonged to the Presbyterian Church in Canada, the meeting at which they had assumed to yote themselves out having, according to the by an announcement from the pulpit on Sunday for the following Tuesday; which announcement was made by a minister who had formally dissented from the union, then performing divine service therein, though not duly appointed to the church, the congrega-tion being what is termed a "vacant congregation." Observations on the meaning of practice of the church," and the "co practice of the church," and the "consti-tution of the congregation" mentioned in the second section of the Act. Semble, that immediately upon the consummation of the Act of Union, the congregational property of the various churches composing the union be-came subject to the jurisdiction of the united body, and that the right of dissentients was merely one of withdrawing the property from the union in the manner indicated in the Act. McRae v. McLeod, 26 Gr. 255.

Union Act-Dissent.]-In pursuance of notices duly given from the pulpit by the officiating clergyman, a member of the united Presbyterian body and belonging to the presbytery, a meeting of the congregation was held, at which the members unanimously pass-ed a vote of dissent from the union:—Held, that such dissent entitled the congregation to hold its property as it had held it before the Act of the Legislature was passed for the purpose of uniting several bodies of Presbyterians in Canada. Decks v. Davidson, 26 Gr.

Union Act-Minister's House.]-In 1836, by letters patent, lands were granted to trustees in fee, to hold the same to and for the benefit of the Presbyterian minister for the time being, incumbent of the Presbyterian Church of Scotland then erected in the township of Eldon. The defendant, who had al-ways been a member of such Presbyterian body, was duly inducted as incumbent of the said church and so continued when, in 1875. an Act of the Legislature of Ontario was passed for the union of the several Preshyterian churches then existing in Ontario, but the members of this church voted themselves out of the said union as provided by the Act. notwithstanding which the defendant gave in his adherence to the union :-Held, under these circumstances, that the lands granted by the said patent, as also the church and other buildings erected thereon, belonged to and were the property of the congregation; and that the defendant having joined the union was no longer entitled to hold possession or receive the benefits of the same, Me-Pherson v. McKay, 26 Gr. 141; 4 A. R. 501.

Union Act - Pecuniary Interest.] - In a suit for a declaration of the invalidity of the Quebec Act and relief :- Held, that the plain-Quebec Act and rener:—Here, that the pumper tiff, as a contributor to the fund affected by 22 Vict. c. 66, was entitled to sue, and that his suit was not barred by reason of the Quebec Act having been passed in conformity with the resolution of a synod of the church to which he belonged. Dobic v. Temporalities Board, 7 App. Cas. 136.

Union Act.

IV. RELIGIOUS INSTITUTIONS GENERALLY.

1. Acquisition and Sale of Property.

Form of Deed.]-A deed of church property ought to shew how the successors to the trustees named are to be appointed. In re Baptist Church Property of Stratford, 2 Ch. Ch. 388.

Minister's Residence. |-Land vested in trustees for the use of, and as a place of residence for, a minister of a religious body, and for such other purposes as the minis-ters of such body, at their general conference, might from time to time appoint, is not "land held by trustees for the use of a congregation or religious body" within C. S. U. C. c. 69. In re Methodist Episcopal Church Property in Churchville, 1 Ch. Ch. 305.

Registration of Deed.]—A deed to come within 24 Vict. c. 43, extending the time for registration of deeds to religious institutions, must have been registered within a year after the passing of it. In re Baptist Church Property of Stratford, 2 Ch. Ch. 388.

Repeal of Act.]—36 Vict. c. 36, s. 18, after repealing C. S. U. C. c. 69, and other Acts, contained the following words: "Saving any rights, proceedings, or things legally had, acquired or done under the said Acts, or any of them:"—Held, that these words preserved to rights, proceedings, and things completely had, acquired or done, the efficacy which they had under the Act repealed, but did not continue the operation of the repealed Act for the purpose of perfecting rights, proceedings or things not completely had, acquired or done. Re United Presbyterian Congregation of London, 6 P. R. 129. Where there was a material error in a confirmation deed of lands sold with the sanction of the court under C. S. U. C. c. 69, an application made after the repeal of that Act for an order authorizing the execution of a new deed was refused. Ib.

Sale—Congregation's Powers.]—Under 12 Vict. c. 91, the trustees of lands held in trust for the benefit of peligious bodies, with the consent of the governing body, can alone exercise the powers given by the Act. A contract for the sale of such lands made in compliance with a resolution of the congregation, by a member of a committee appointed to dispose of such lands, is invalid. Irving v. McLachlon, 5 Gr. 625.

Sale — Congregation Ceasing to Exist—
Sanction of County Judge, 1—In an application under the Vendor and Purchaser Act, R.
S. 0. 1887; c. 112, in which the surviving trustee of a congregation, which had separated and ceased to exist, was making tile to land belonging to the said congregation, but useless for its original propose; —Held, following Attorney-General v. Jeffrey, 10 Gr, 273, that the trust had not come to an end; —Held, also, that the sanction of the sale and the approval of the deed by the county Judge as provided for by R. S. O. 1887; c. 237, s. 14, s., 3, is sufficient in flew of all that is required by sess. I and 2; —Held, also, that the statute 9 Geo. IV. c. 2, s. 1, gave to the trustees "the corporate attribute of succession," and so created them a corporation, and estate in fee simple and had power to sell.
Re Wansley and Brown, 21 O. R. 34.

Sale—Daily Paper,]—Trustees in selling some church property under R. S. O. 1887; c. 237, s. 13, advertised on the same day of the week for four successive weeks in a daily paper:—Held, not a sufficient compliance with the provision of the statute directing publication in a "weekly paper," to make a proper sale of the lands, and that the purchaser had good gound for refusing to accept the title offered. Re East Presbyterian Church and McKau, 16 O. R. 30.

Sale—Terms.]—To effect a sale by trusties under the Act respecting the property of religious institutions in Upper Canada. it is essential that all the requirements of the statute should be complied with, and therefore that the public notice should state the terms of the intended sale. In re Second Congregational Church Property, Toronto, 1 Ch. (h. 349; Re Baptist Church Property of Stratford, 2 Ch. Ch. 288.

2. Special Trust for Church Purposes.

Change in Church Government.]—
Where real property was given by deed in trust for the Methodist Episcopal Church in Canada, according to the rules adopted by the general annual conference, and that when any of the trustees or their successors should cease to be a member of that church, such trustee should vacate his trusteeship; and at a general conference the majority did away with episcopacy, and having appointed new trustees, claimed the property from the old trustees on the ground that, as they had not conformed to the rules of the general conference, they had ceased to be trustees according to the terms of the trust deed, and the new trustees took possession of the property.

—Held, on ejectment brought by the old trustees, that they were entitled to recover, the conference having no power to do away with episcopacy, and the old trustees by continuing in the original church having complied with the terms of the deed. Doe d. Trustees of Methodist Episcopal Church v, Bell, 5 O. S. 344. But this decision was afterwards overruled in Doe d. Reynolds v, Flint, M. T. 4 Vict., (not reported,) which was upheld in Doe d. Methodist Episcopal Trustees v, Brass, 6 O. S. 437.

Change in Church Government.]—
The owner of land agreed to sell a site for a burial ground and church, in connection with the Free Church of Scotland, if a congregation thereof could be gotten together. A church was built thereon, and a congregation in connection with the Free Church assembled and performed divine service therein. Several years afterwards the great body of the congregation abandoned their connection with the Free Church; and they, in conjunction with the Free Church; and they, in conjunction with the vendor, assumed to hold possession of the church; and they, in conjunction with the vendor, assumed to hold possession of the church to the exclusion of the church to the exclusion of the church to the exclusion of the church of the manner of the Advanced Church (Free Church, had become absolute, and that so long as even one member remained to claim the site and church on behalf of the Free Church, the right of that body continued, notwithstanding the change of opinion in the body of the members; and, under the circumstances, an injunction was decreed restraining any further interference with such right, and also a specific performance of the contract, with costs. Attorney-General v. Christie, 13 Gr. 495.

Change in Doctrine.)—In 1821 J. Boul joined in conveying cortain lands to three persons, trustees of the West Lake meeting of friends, appointed by the monthly meeting to secure the titles of meeting house lots, and burying grounds, "to have and to hold said parcel of land hereby granted unto the aforesaid trustees of said monthly meeting for the time being, and for their successors in trust as said meeting, and for their successors in trust as said meeting, and for the successors in trust as said meeting," and in 1833 Bowerman executed a further conveyance of a portion of those lands of which he had been the owner to two of the said trustees, "and to their successors in trust for said meeting so long as the members constituting it shall remain and be from time to time continued in religious unity with the yearly meeting of friends (called Quakers) as now established in London, Old England, and no longer;" habendum "unto the aforesaid trustees of the said monthly meeting, and to their successors in trust for the time being as said meeting shall from time to time see cause to appoint, for the only use, behoof, and benefit of the said mouthly meeting." The defendants contended that the identity of the existing monthly meeting with that described in these deeds had been lost by reason of departures from the principles which governed the society of friends at the time the trusts were created, as well in matters of discipline and practice as in points of faith and doctrine, and that the plaintiffs were consequently no longer entitled to the use and possession of the land:—Held, reversing 7

O. R. 17, that the criterion as to the monthly meeting was not adherence to the doctrines and practices which prevailed at the time the trusts were created, but its continued existonce as a monthly meeting of the organization of the society of friends to which it belonged at those times, and possibly to its members continuing in religious unity with the London yearly meeting; and that the defendants, never having been recognized by or in connection with the Canada yearly meeting, had no rights as an organization which a court of law could recognize or enforce. Dorland v. Jones, 12 A. R. 543; S. C., sub nom. Jones v. Dorland, 14 S. C. R. 53.

Change in Doctrine-Secession of Members.]—The civil courts will deal with questions of church doctrine and beliefs only in so far as it becomes necessary so to do to determine civil rights. Where a dispute arises as to which of two bodies represents a particular church in trust for which property has been granted a question of ecclesiastical identity arises, and those who claim that the trust has been violated must shew that their op-ponents have so far departed from the fundamental principles of the church in question as to be in effect no longer members thereof. provision that "no rule or ordinance shall at any time be passed to change or do away with the confession of the faith as it now stands is not violated by mere alterations in expression or fuller and clearer statements of doc-Where the constitution of a church provides that there shall be no alteration therein "unless by request of two-thirds of the whole society," alterations initiated by the governing body and assented to at a regularly constituted general conference of the whole church and by two-thirds of those of the members who have voted thereon, all members have been asked to vote, are valid. vious request is necessary, nor is it necessary to have the assent of two-thirds of all the members. Itter v. Howe, 23 A. R. 256.

Congregation Ceasing to Exist-Division. 1-In 1833 lands situate in Cobourg were "the kirk conveyed to certain parties, and "the kirk session of the Presbyterian Church of Canada in connection with the Church of Scotland in Cobourg," upon trust for the use of that congregation, who erected a church thereon and used and enjoyed the same until the disrup-tion of the Presbyterian Church of Canada in 1844, similar to that which had previously occurred in Scotland. In Canada, as there, the Presbyterian Church became divided into two churches, one retaining its identity with the Presbyterian Church of Scotland in connection with the Church of Scotland; the other forming a new church, called "The Presbyterian Church of Canada," similar in principle to the Free Church of Scotland; to which the congregation at Cobourg almost unanimously adhered; and they continued to use the same church as hitherto until 1857. there being in the interval no congregation of the Presbyterian Church of Canada in connection with the Church of Scotland. In this year certain residents professing to belong to that church applied to the surviving trustees to have the trust estate devoted to the purposes intended by the donor, by allowing them the use thereof for the purpose of religious worship, which was refused. On an informa-tion and bill filed by the Attorney-General and certain persons so claiming to be entitled to the use of the said trust estate, the court declared that the only persons entitled to the use of the said church were those in communion with the Church of Scotland, and the fact that there had ceased to be a "kirk session" at Cobourg was immaterial:—Held, also, that the congregation for the use of whom the trust had been originally created having ceased to exist, any new congregation in connection with the Church of Scotland which might be afterwards organized was a proper object of the gift; and to be such, it was not necessary that it should be a continuation of any previously existing congregation. Attorney-General v. Jeffrey, 10 Gr. 273.

3. Trustees' Appointment, Liabilities, and Rights.

Action Against Co-trustee. —Trespass was held to be maintainable by the trustees of a Methodist chapel against a person who was a trustee, but having ceased to be a member of the society could not hold the trust under the provisions of the deed which created it; and some of the plaintiffs, who were not the original trustees, but had been elected as their successors under the same provisions, were pronerly joined in the action. Exerctive, Horeelt, 5 O. S. 592.

Appointment.]-Land was conveyed to the plaintiff C. and four others as "the trus-tees of the congregation of the Independent Methodist Episcopal Church," with a provision, in case of death or ceasing to be a memsion, in case of death or ceasing to be a mem-ber of the said church, for the appointment of a successor or successors. The congregation, acting under the directions of what was called the "book of discipline," which provided for an annual election of trustees, elected annually trustees for the property in question, and, among others, the plaintiffs. One of the original trustees under the deed died, and all the others, except the plaintiff C., ceased to be members of the church. Subsequently three of the defendants accepted a lease of the property from C. In ejectment by C. and his co-plaintiffs:—Held, that these co-plaintiffs had been improperly joined with him, for that having been elected trustees under the "book of discipline," and not under the pro-visions of the trust deed, in place of deceased or disqualified members of the church, they were illegally elected and never in fact became were inlegally elected and never in fact because trustees, and their names were therefore ordered to be struck out of the record:—Held, also, that C. was entitled to recover against the defendants, who entered under the lease from him, as they could not deny his title, and there was sufficient evidence of disclaimer on their party to dispense with a notice to quit:—Held, also, that if the deed did not create the grantees, by virtue of R. S. O. 1877 c. 216, a corporation, and they were to be regarded merely as natural persons, the legal estate was in C. and the other three surviving grantees under the deed, and C. was entitled to recover an undivided fourth part of the land; but that if the grantees were created a corporation, then the legal estate was in the corporation, or in the trustees in a corporate capacity, and C. was the only corporator, the others having either died or ceased to be corporators by reason of their having ceased to be members of the church. Objection having been made on the argument, for the first time, that the action should have been brought in the corporate name, or at any rate under the designation in the deed, the court allowed the record to be amended in this respect, and the verdict to stand in favour of the plaintiff C. Coleman v. Moore, 44 U. C. R. 328.

Appointment.]—Semble, that R. S. O. 18-77. C. 218 is. 10, as to the appointment of trustees of lands by religious bodies, does not remove at lands by religious bodies, does not removed at one meeting and the appointment fixed made at another. Both things may be done at the one meeting. Dorland v. Jones, 7, O. R. 17.

Borrowing Powers—Chattel Mortgage.]
—Held, under the circumstances of this case, that the trustees of a congregation of the Methodist Church had power to borrow money and secure it by chattel mortgage. Brown v, Sweet, 7 A. R. 725.

Corporate Capacity.] — Ejectment cannot be maintained on a demise of a Methodist church, as a corporate body: the demise must be in their names as individuals. Doe d. Methodist Trustees v. Carnein, T. T. 1 & 2 Viet.

Corporate Capacity.]—Where, by deed of bargin and sale, land was conveyed to certain persons named as trustees, and "to others" not named, and their successors, to bodd to the persons as named, and "to others, trustees as aforesaid, and their successors in office in fee simple absolute forever, to the only proper use and behoof of the said (the persons named), and others, trustees as aforesaid, and their successors in office for ever, for the use of the minister of the Presbyterian Church, Galt, in connection with the Church of Scotland, and his successors in office," &c.:

—Held, that no action would lie on a demise in the name of the trustees of the Presbyterian Church at Galt, as in a corporate capacity, but that a demise might be laid by those maned in the deed, though they were not in fact trustees as the deed assumed them to be, Doc d, Trustees of Presbuterian Church in Gult v, Bain, 3 U. C. R. 198.

Corporate Capacity.] — Held, that the trustees under C. S. U. C. c. 69, may maintain electment in their individual names with the subjoined description, "as trustees." &c., stating the name of the congregation for whom they are trustees. At the trial, evidence was tendered to shew that the congregation named in the deed, which was made to the trustees on their appointment in 1804, had ceased to exist before the execution of the deel:—Held, that this was properly rejected; as also evidence to shew that defendant held under the obligees of a bond, in discharge of which the deed was executed. Humphreys v. Hunter, 20 C. P. 456.

Corporate Capacity, |—Where plaintiffs seed in their individual names, describing themselves as trustees of the Wesleyan Methodist Church of Brussels, an amendment was allowed at the trial by striking out the names and allowing them to sue as a corporation incorporated under C. S. U. C. c. 69:—Held, that the amendment was authorized. Trustees of Ainleyville Congregation of Wesleyan Methodist Church in Canada v. Grever, 23 C. P. 533.

Corporate Capacity.] — The plaintiffs sued as "The trustees of the Toronto Berkeley Street Congregation of the Wesleyan Methodist Church in Canada in connection with the English Conference," alleging that in consideration that they would take down or remove the church held by them for the purposes connected with the trusts set out in the deed conveying the land to them on which it stood, and would rebuild it so as better to answer the purposes of said deed, defendant promised to pay them $160 to assist them in so doing:—Held, I. That under non-assumpsit only the defendant could not deny that the plaintiffs were a corporation, or had a right to sue set contract in a quasi corporate capacity, but that he should have put that fact in issue by a plea; and that the plaintiffs therefore were not bound to produce their deed, 2. That the plaintiffs being entitled to sue in such capacity, their individuality was merged therein, and the objection for that plaintiffs could not arise. 3. That the promise being voluntary was no objection, for that plaintiffs, on the faith of it and of other prominent subscriptions. had rebuilt the church and incurred obligations which would form a sufficient consideration. 4. That the evidence, set out in the case, warranted a finding that defendant's promise was made to the plaintiffs. Trustees of Toronto Berkeley Street Church v. Stecens, 37 U. C. R. 9.

Corporate Capacity.]—Where a bill was filed in the name of "The Trustees of the Franklin Congregation of the Methodist Church of Canada" against persons claiming under a deed from their grantor, for the purpose of setting aside such deed as a cloud upon the title of the plaintiffs:—Held, that the suit was properly instituted by the trustees as such; and that neither their grantor nor the Attorney-General was a necessary party thereto; and semble, that the effect of the statute was to constitute the trustees a corporation; but at all events they had a right to sue in their collective name in the same manner as a corporate body would sue. Trustees of the Franklin Church v. Maguire, 23 Gr. 102.

Covenant — Personal Liability.] — The duly appointed trustees of a religious congregation, to whom by that description the site for a church has been conveyed, and who by that description give to the vendor to secure part of the purchase money a mortgage with the ordinary covenant for payment, are a corporation and are not personally liable upon the mortgage although it is signed and scaled by them individually. Beaty v. Gregory, 28 O. R. 60; 24 A. R. 325.

Incumbent's Salary.] — The plaintiff sued five defendants, describing them as the committee of the Presbyterian church at P. for his salary as minister from January, 1857 to August, 1858. It was proved by verbal evidence of different members of the congregation, that the committee usually consisted of eight persons chosen annually; and that a record of their proceedings was kept, that at a meeting of the congregation in 1856, it was agreed to give the plaintiff a call, and afterwards, at another meeting, that he should receive £100 a year, to be paid to him from the pew rents, which it was customary for the committee to collect half-yearly. It was not shewn who composed the committee in 1856, or that all the defendants were members of it in 1857 or 1858 :- Held, that the action could not be maintained. Stewart v. Martin, 18 U. C. R. 477.

Property Vesting in Successors.]-In a deed conveying land to trustees for a dwelling house for the use of the Methodist minisfor the time being, there was provision made for a new appointment in the case of a trustee ceasing to belong to the Methodist Episcopal Church:—Held, that upon the happening of that event in the case of the last surviving trustee, the estate did not ipso facto become divested, but the intention of the grantor plainly being that it should go over to new trustees, this could only be effected by the surviving grantee conveying to them. Hambly v. Fuller, 22 C. P. 141.

Removal - Appointment.]-The land in question was conveyed to five persons as trus-tees of the Coloured Wesleyan Methodist Church in Canada, to hold to them and their successors according to the rules and disci-pline of the said church. The deed provided that when any of the trustees should die or cease to be a member of said church, a succes-sor should be nominated by the Coloured Wesleyan minister or preacher having charge of the station in which the land was, and thereupon appointed by the surviving trustee or trustees, if they should think proper to ap-point the person so nominated; and that if it should happen at any time that there should be no surviving trustee, then it should be lawful for the coloured minister in charge of the station to nominate, and for the quarterly meeting of the station, if they should approve of the nomination, to appoint, the requisite number of trustees; and the persons so appointed should be the legal successors of those named in the deed. The Wesleyan Methodist Church assumed control over this church, alleging that the deed was intended for the coloured members of their church, there being no such body as the Coloured Wesleyan Methodist Church. Four of the original trustees were living, but two were absent, having left this congregation, by which, according to the rules of the Wesleyan Methodist Church, they ceased to be trustees; one had joined another body; and the fourth, one of the defendants, had been expelled from that church. The plaintiffs were then nominated as trustees by one W., a minister appointed by the Wes-leyan Church to take charge of this chapel, but not a coloured man, and their appointment was confirmed at a quarterly meeting. They thereupon brought ejectment against A., one of the original trustees named in the deed, and a person who had taken possession under him: Held, that they could not recover, for the expulsion of A, from the Weslevan Methodist Church could not deprive him of his character of trustee under the deed; and the plaintiffs were not properly appointed, not having been nominated by the coloured minister in charge of the church, as required by the deed. Small-wood v. Abbott. 18 U. C. R. 564.

Removal - Appointment,] - 36 Vict. c. 135, ss. 10-12 (O.), respecting the property of religious institutions, authorizes only the appointment of successors to trustees dead or legally removed, and does not empower the congregation to remove trustees competent and The three plaintiffs in this willing to act. case claimed title under a conveyance to two of them, and to H., one of the defendants, as a trustee of a congregation named, alleging that H. had been since removed from the office of trustee, and the plaintiff T. appointed in his stead. Defendants denied the plaintiffs' title. The conveyance contained no clause for the removal of trustees or the appointment of new ones, and the congregation, under the statute above mentioned, had assumed to appoint the plaintiff T. in place of H.:— Held, that the plaintiffs must wholly succeed or wholly fail as to the title alleged, and that the appointment of T. being invalid, a non-suit must be entered. Lage v. Mackenson, 40 U. C. R. 388.

4. Miscellaneous Cases.

Disturbance in Place of Worskip. |-Defendant, a justice of the peace, convicted the plaintiff under C, S, U, C, c, 92, s, 18, of making a disturbance in a place of worship, and committed him to gaol without first issuing a warrant of distress, whereupon the plaintiff brought trespass. It appeared at the plaintil brought trespass. It appeared at the trial that the plaintiff was well known to the defendant, and a boy living with his parents, and having no property:—Held, that the action would not lie, for defendant was authorized by C. S. C. c. 103, s. 59, to commit in the first instance, that statute applying to this frequently. Moflat v. Barnard, 24 U. C. R.

Disturbance in Place of Worship.]-Action for assault and battery against four-teen defendants. Special plea of justification teen defendants. Special plea of justification on the ground that defendants were committing a disturbance in church. Reid v. Inglis, 12 C. P. 191.

1 Will, & M. c. 18, relating to disturbances in church, &c., is in force in this Province, and not superseded by C. S. U. C. c. 92. Ib.

Power to Hold Land.]—As to power to hold land. See London and Canadian Loan and Agency Co. v. Graham, 16 O. R. 329; Me-Diarmid v. Hughes, 16 O. R. 570.

Religious Denominations-Marriage.] -"The Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints" is a religious denomination within the meaning of R. S. O. 1887 c. 131, s. 1; and a duly ordained priest thereof is a minister authorized to solemnize the ceremony of marriage. Upon a case reserved, a conviction of such a priest for unlawfully solemnizing a marriage was quashed. Semble, the words of the statute "church and religious denomination" should not be construed so as to confine them to Christian bodies. Regina v. Dickout. 24 O. R. 250.

Expulsion of Minister — Domestic Forum. —The court cannot interfere with the action taken by the duly constituted tribunals of a church in expelling a minister, when these tribunals have proceeded in accordance with the rules, regulations and discipline of the church, and the accused has had the opportunity of defending himself. Ash v. Methodist Church, 27 A. R. 602.

Pew-holder's Rights—Refusal to Continue Lease.]—Plaintiff, an elder and member of the contrevation of St. Andrew's Church. Montreen Ind been a pew-holder in the church continued to the contrevation of St. Andrew's Church. St. Montreen Ind been a pew-holder in the church continued 1872 he occupied pew No. 68, and received for the rental of 1872 a receipt in the following words: "Montreal, January 5th, 1872. 866.50. Received from James Johnston the sum of sixty-six dollars and fifty cents, being rent of first-class pew No. 68 in St. Andrew's Church, Beaver Hall, for the year 1872. For the trustees, J. Clements." On the 7th December, 1872, the trustees notified plaintiff that they would not let him a pew for the following year. Plaintiff thereupon tendered them the rental for the next year, in advance. On several occasions in 1873, and while still an elder and member of the congregation, he was disturbed in the possession of pew No. 68 by the respondents, the pew having been placarded "for strangers," strangers seated in it, his books and cushions removed, &c. For these torts he brought an action against respondents, claiming $10,000 dam-ages:—Held, that plaintiff being an elder and member of the congregation of $t. Andrew's Church, Montreal, as such lessee, having tendered the rent in advance, was, under the by-laws, custom and usage, and constitution of $t. Andrew's Church, entitled to a continuance of his lease of the pew for the year 1873, and that reasonable but not vindictive dam-ages should be allowed, viz., $200. Johnston v. $t. Andrew's Church, 1.8 C. R. 225.

Revoking Appropriation.]—An order in comed was made after 7 Will. IV. c. 118, and before 4 & 5 Vict. c. 100, appropriation land to certain religious purposes:—Held, that under s. 27 of the latter statute, the governor in council had power to revoke such appropriation. Simpson v. Grant, 5 Gr. 207.

Subscription — Change of Plan.]—The plaintiff had subscribed to aid in the erection of a parish church in Toronto, with a view of enabling the churchwardens to erect it on the old site, so as to avoid leasing off portions of the land about it used as a burying ground. Subsequently, at a meeting of the vestry, the plan of the building was changed, by reason of which, in excavating for the foundation of the church, the graves of several members of the plaintiff's family were disturbed. Thereupon the plaintiff wrote to the vestry clerk annulling his subscription, and being sued in the division court for such subscription, he moved for an injunction to stay such action. The court, under the circumstances, refused the application, with costs. Heward v. Harres, 5 (fr. 226.

Subscription—Pew.]—The church of St. James having been destroyed by fire, it was agreed that the pew-holders who had purchased the right to their pews, subject to a ground rent, should pay a certain sum and be reinstated as nearly as circumstances would permit in their pews in a new church, to be built on the site of that destroyed After the new church was built, one of such pew-holders refused to pay the sum of £25, agreed to be subscribed by him towards rebuilding the church, and for which he had given his note; whereupon the churchwardens, in pursuance of a resolution of the vestry, removed the door from the pew claimed by him, and the holder thereof instituted an action on the case against the churchwardens for the disturbance of his easement:—Held, that he was not entitled to recover. Brunskill v. Harris, I. E. &. A. 322.

CLUB.

Committeemen-Co-contractors.]-Where credit is given to an abstract entity such as a club, the creditor may look to those who in fact assumed to act for it and those who authorized or sanctioned that being done, at all events where he did not know of the want of authority of the agent to bind the club. Review of English cases on this sub-ject. The liability in such cases is not several, but joint. By analogy to the old practice where a plea in abatement for nonjoinder of co-contractors was pleaded, a de fendant now moving to stay proceedings until the co-contractors are added as parties should shew by affidavit the names and residences of the persons alleged to be joint contractors whom he seeks to have added, and the sam liability as to costs, in case persons are added who turn out not to be liable, should be entailed upon him. In an action begun against an unincorporated company, as a part nership, to recover a sum for costs paid by the plaintiffs, an order in chambers, allowing the plaintiffs to amend by adding as defendants certain members of the executive committee of the company, and to charge them in the alternative as personally liable by reason of their having sanctioned the arrangement between the plaintiffs and the association, was affirmed without prejudice to the defendants applying to add parties. Aikins v. Dominion Live Stock Association of Canada, 17 P. R. 303.

Expulsion of Member — Evidence — Notice:]—The directors of a club in exercising disciplinary jurisdiction under a by-law providing that "any member unity of conduct which, in the opinion of the board, merits such a course, may be expelled," are not bound by legal rules of evidence, and their decision, arrived at after a fair investigation of the facts, will not be interfered with, because they have admitted as part of the evidence in proof of the charge, the informally sworn statement of one of the persons concerned in the transaction. Where the charge has been made, discussed, and replied to, in the public prints, it is not necessary to give to the accused person who has taken part in such discussion, when calling upon him to shew cause against his proposed expulsion, specific particulars of the accusation; a general statement is sufficient. COLLATERAL SECURITY.

Acceleration of Right of Action.]—Where sonds were given for the payment of a certain sum of money and interest in twenty years, and also mortgages of lands, redeemable in ten years, as security for the payment of the principal money of the bonds:—Held, that a breach of covenant to pay interest on the bonds did not accelerate the right of the mortgages to proceed upon the mortgages; but they were entitled to a decree for sale of other bonds given as collateral security. Great Western R. W. Co., v. Galt and Guelph R. W. Co., S. Gr. 283.

Assignment Over.]—The plaintiffs had obtained a mortgage from one of defendants as collateral security for a debt, which they had assigned to a bank. The court directed that judgment for a declaration of lien for debt and costs, and sale to realize it, was to be entered for the plaintiffs only on the production of the mortgage, and a reconveyance or discharge thereof to the mortgagor. Sarnia Agricultural Implement Manufacturing Co. v. Hutchinson, 17 O. R. 670.

Building Society.] — Right of building societies to take collateral securities. See Freehold Loan and Savinas Society v. Farrell, 31 C. P. 453.

Composition — Non-disclosure.] — The rule in respect of compositions between a debtor and his creditors is, that a creditor cannot appear to concur in the composition and sign the deed, and at the same time stipulate for a separate benefit to himself outside thereof. However, where upon an agreement between a debtor and his creditors for an extension of time for payment of his liabilities, the deed of agreement stated that it should not "affect any mortrage, hypothec, lien, or collateral security held by any such creditor as security for any of said debts:"—Held, that a creditor whose claim was fully secured by a mortrage on real estate and other collaterals, was not bound to communicate that fact to the other creditors at or before executing the deed of extension. Henderson v. Macdonald, 20 Gr. 334.

Consideration — Value Arising Buring Currency, 1—One M. made a note on the 17th November, 1898, payable to T. or order, at three months, at the Quebec Bank, for $4,000, which was indersed by T. and the plaintiff, and discounted by the bank for T. On the 24th November, 1898, a note for $1,500 made by W. payable to T., and indorsed by M. for T.'s accommodation, was handed to the bank by T. as collateral security for the $4,000 note, and the bank also advanced on it $1,000 to T. This note, when it fell due on the 27th January, 1890, was retired by the note sued on, which was for $1,500, at two months, made by W., payable to T., and indorsed by T. and by M. to bank, and was given, as the bank manaer swore, for the same purpose as the previous $1,500 note. The bank received $1,200 from T. on account of the $4,000 note, and the plaintiff baid he bank would hold the $1,500 note for his benefit, and they afterwards, at his request, gave it to their solicitor to sue. In an action on this note by the plaintiff against W. and M.:—Held, that he was entitled to recover; for, 1. he was the holder of the note;

2. the note being deposited with the bank as collateral security for the $4,000 note, and not merely for the $1,000 advanced on it, the bank held it for the full amount; 3. if the note could not be said, when taken on the 27th January, 1893, to be a security for value because the $4,000 note had not then natured, it became so when the latter note fell due on the 20th February, 1893, and value arising at any time during the currency of a note is sufficient. Bluke v. Walsh, 20 t. C. R. 541.

Continuing Security.] — A mortgage was given by the maker of certain notes as collateral security to an accommodation indorser, which notes were duly retired by the maker. Subsequently the mortgager gave other notes to the mortgagee, when it was verbally agreed that the mortgage should be retained by the indorser as an indemnity for such subsequent notes:—Held, that the indorser was entitled to retain such security to the exclusion of other creditors of the merigagor. Morrison v. Robinson, 19 Gr. 480.

Crediting Proceeds—Suspense Account—Planks.]—A bank gave a customer "a line of credit to $150,000, to be secured by collections deposited."—Held, that the bank was bound to credit the customer with the payments made from time to time to the bank by the customer in accordance with the terms of the memorandum, and could not hold the payments in a suspense account until the muturity of the customer's own paper given to the bank to cover the line of credit, and take judgment against the customer for the full amount of that paper. Judgment below, 26 S. C. R. 611, affirmed by the Judicial Committee. Molsons Bank v. Cooper, 26 A. 8. 571.

Discharge.]—A, and B., partners in business, borrowed money from C., giving him as security their joint and several promissory note, and a mortgage on partnership property. The partnership having been dissolved, A, assumed all the liabilities of the firm, and continued to carry on the business alone. After the dissolution C, gave A, a discharge of the mortgage, but without receiving payment of his debt, and afterwards brought an action against B, on the promissory note:—Held, affirming 20 A, R, 695, which reversed 23 O, R, 288, that the note having been given for the mortgage debt C, could not recover without being prepared upon payment to convey to B, the mortgaged lands, which he had incapacitated himself from doing. Held, also, that by the terms of the dissolution of partnership, the relations between A, and B, were changed to those of principal and surety, and it having been found at the trial that C, had notice of such change, his release of the principal, A,, discharged B,, the surety, from liability for the debt. Alliaon v, McDonald, 23 S, C, R, 635.

Discount of Promissory Notes—Right to Icerssory Securities.]—A tradesman sold roads to customers, taking promissory notes for the price, and also hire receipts, by which the property remained in him till full payment was made. The notes were discounted through the medium of a third person by the pinning, who were made aware when the line of discount was opened of the course of dealing, and of the securities held. They were not, however, put in actual possession of the securities, and there was no express contract in regard to them. In an action to recover the securities, or their proceeds, from the assignee for creditors of the tradesman:

—Held, that the securities were accessory to the debt; that in equity the transfer of the notes was a transfer of the securities; that the defendant was in no higher position than his assignor, and could not resist the claim to have the receipts accompany the notes; and that it was not material that the relation of assignor and assignee did not immediately exist between the tradesman and the plaintiffs. Central Bank v. Garland, 20 O. R. 142; 18 A. R. 438.

Double Security.] — B., the holder of £2,000 government debentures, assigned them to defendants, and delivered to them his bond to secure the interest, upon which they passed the full amount to his credit. Subsequently defendants obtained from B. security by mortgage for the principal as well as the interest, and for another debt which he owed them. B., about the same time, assigned his interest in the debentures to G. S. B.; and the defendants afterwards accepted a release of part of the mortgaged property in part payment of the amount secured by the mortgage. The mortgaged property was then sold by defendants for much less than the amount of the debentures, which were afterwards paid in full by the government. It appeared, from the defendants' books, and their communications with the government, that they did not consider themselves entitled to both sums:—Held, that the plaintiff, who was the assignee of G. S. B.'s interest in the debentures, was entitled to the proceeds of the property sold. Covert v. Bank of Upper Canada, 3 Gr. 246.

Foreclosure—Consideration.] — A decree was made for the foreclosure of a mortgage of £100 with interest. It appeared by defendant's evidence in the master's office that no money was advanced by the mortgagees; and the court held, chiefly on the conduct of the parties, and the circumstances of the case, that the mortgage was intended as a scurity for a note of the mortgagor's indorsed by the mortgages contemporaneously with the execution of the mortgage, and for any subsequent transactions with the mortgagor growing out of it. Brownlee v. Cunningham, 13 Gr. 586.

Foreclosure—Sale.] — A person holding mortgages in trust for sale to indemnify him against loss on account of the mortgagor, is not entitled to foreclose in case of default; the only decree to which he is entitled is to sell, allowing the mortgagor the usual time for redemption. Paton v. Wilkes, S Gr. 252.

Insurance—Action by Assignor.]—Where an assignment of a chose in action is made by way of security, the assignor retaining a beneficial interest, he may, notwithstanding the assignment, maintain an action in his own name to recover the debt, the assignee being a proper but not a necessary party. Where there is separate insurance in different companies in favour of mortgagee and mortgage, the latter, in an action on the policy effected by him, is not bound by a settlement of the amount of the loss between the mortgage and his insurers although as sented to by the mortgagor. Prittie v. Connecticut Fire Insurance Company, 23 A. R. 449.

Jus Tertii.]—B., as trustee for H. C. & Co., deposited with D. twelve bonds of the M. C. & S. Railway Company, as collateral security, to be availed of only subsequent to the failure of the Government to pay $10,000 subsidy, previously transferred to D., and obtained a receipt from D. that on the subsidy being paid D. would return these bonds to B. The subsidy was paid and B. sued D. to recover back the twelve bonds. H. C. & Co. did not intervene: — Held, that B., being a party personally liable on the bills held by D., which the Government subsidy of $10,000 transferred was intended to pay, and having complied with all the conditions mentioned in the receipt entitling him to recover possession of the bonds, was, as against D., the legal owner of the bonds. Drummond v. Boylis, 2 S. C. R. 61.

Merger.]—Action on a note for $350. Plea, that the note had been taken as collateral to a mortgage, in satisfaction of which defendant and plaintiff had come to a settlement, and defendant had given a new mortgage for what he owed the plaintiff, in which the note had thus become merged:—Held, that the note having been taken by the plaintiff as payment of part of the mortgage, and thus separated from the mortgage debt, the plaintiff was entitled to recover: and that from the evidence stated in the case it appeared that the note was given for a sum quite distinct from the mortgage debt, Boulton v. McAubb, 14 C. P. 598.

Semble, that defendant's remedy (if any), should be either to have the settlement repended on the ground of mistake or fraud, and get the amount of the note added to the mortgage debt, and extended for ten years, or to treat the settlement as evidence of everything having been paid, which latter defence would be covered by a plea of payment. Ib.

Mortgage — Redemption by Judgment Creditor—Collaterals.]—A judgment creditor coming in to redeem a mortgage incumbrancer is entitled, upon payment of the amount due to the mortgagee, to an assignment not only of the mortgaged premises, but of all collateral securities, whether the same be subject to the lien of the creditor under the judgment or not. Therefore where judgment had been recovered and duly registered against a party who had a contingent interest in real and personal property, subject to a mortgage executed by way of security for advances, and the debtor having effected an insurance upon his life, which he had also assigned to the same person as an indemnity against loss in respect of a bond executed by him as surety for the debtor:—Held, that the judgment creditor of a bond executed by him as surety for the mortgage in respect of its liability as surety, was entitled to a transfer of the policy of insurance, and also of the mortgage upon the contingent interest, and to foreclose the mortgage in the respect of the mortgage upon the contingent interest, and to foreclose the mortgage in default of payment. Gilmour v. Cameron, 6 Gr. 290.

Multiplicity of Actions.]—Mortgagees proceeded on the same day to foreclose the property of the mortgagor and his sureties by several bills upon their respective mortgages, and to sue at law, in different actions, the same parties on notes held by the plaintiffs, to which the mortgages were collateral:

—Held, that only one suit in equity was necessary, as all parties might have been brought before the court therein, all remedies given which might have been obtained at law, and all rights more conveniently adjusted between the parties in one than in several suits, and the court would not be deterred from granting relief by the circumstance of a decree being complicated. Merchants Bank v. Sparks, 28 Gr. 108.

Negligence in Realizing.]—Where mortgages or other evidences of debt are assigned as collateral security by a debtor to his creditor, the latter is bound to use due diligence in enforcing payment thereof; and if through his default or laches the money secured thereby is lost, it will be charged against the creditor, and deducted from his demand. Synod v. De Blaquiere, 27 Gr. 536; 550 (n). Affirmed by the supreme court. Cassels' 1916, 539.

Negligence in Realizing.]—Sale, at a grossly inadequate price, of timber limits held by a bank as collateral security. See Prentice v. Consolidated Bank, 13 A. R. 69.

Negligence in Realizing.]—Effect of lates of holder of notes given as collateral security in not proceeding for payment of same or notifying principal debtor. See Ryan v. McConnell, 18 O. R. 409.

Payment—Estoppel.1—An action at law having been brought upon a promissory note, the defendant pleaded that it had been given as collateral security for another debt which are the collateral security for another debt which are the collateral security for another debt which can be considered to the stablish this fact.—Held, in on evidence, to establish this fact.—Held, in one evidence to wards instituted in the court of chiracteristic wards instituted in the court of chiracteristic enforce the charge of the judgment against lands, that he was precluded from shewing any payment prior to the time of plea pleaded. Carpenter v. Commercial Bank, 2 E. & A. 111.

Pledge-Transfers "In Trust."] - The plaintiff obtained from a loan company an advance on the security of certain shares in a joint stock company not numbered or capidentification, which were able of identification, which were trans-ferred by him to the managers of the loan company "in trust." The managers were also brokers, and were as brokers carrying on stock speculations for the plaintiff, and he transferred to them as security for the pay-ment of "margins" certain other shares in the same company, the transfer being in the same form. "in trust." Subsequently the same form. "in trust." Subsequently the loan company were paid off by the brokers at the plaintiff's request, and the brokers continued to hold the first shares as well as the others as security. Upon all the shares the brokers then obtained advances from a bank, transferring them to the cashier "in trust and from time to time changed the loan to other banks and financial institutions, each transfer being made from and to the man-ager thereof "in trust." An allotment of new shares was taken up by the then holders of the pledged shares at the request of the brokers. Subsequently the brokers on the security of the old and new shares obtained a loan from the defendants of a much larger amount than the amount due by the plaintiff to the brokers, the shares being then transferred by the then holders to the defendants: — Held, reversing 19 O. R. 272, that the defendants were entitled to hold the stock as security for the full amount advanced by them to the brokers; and that the words "in trust" in the transfer meant that the various transferees were holding the shares "in trust" for their respective instinations. Ducoan v. London and Canadian Lone and Agency Co., 18 A. R. 305. Reversed by the supreme court, 20 S. C. R. 481. but restored by the judicial committee, [1893] A. C. 506.

Primary Debt Maturing after Security, | — Held, on demurrer to the equitable plea set out in the report of this case, that apart from the objection as to a perpetual injunction not being obtainable, the holder of notes, transferred by the payee as collelateral security against a future liability on the holder's part for the payee, can collect the notes at maturity before the liability arises, and that the payee has no control over them so as to enlarge or vary the maker's liability to pay them. Ross v. Tyson, 19 C. P. 294.

Primary Debt Maturing before Security.—Defendant indorsed to the plainrilf's a note made by one P. for $125, due 13th May, 1857. On the 13th April P. executed to the plaintiff's u mortgage, payable on the let November. 1857, for a sum including the amount of the note; but it was expressly agreed in the mortgage that it should "operate and take effect as a collateral security only:"—Held, that the plaintiff's might sue upon the note when it fell due, although the mortgage was not yet payable. Shave v. Cractord, 16 U. C. R. 101.

Proceeding for Breach of Terms of Security before Debt Due.]—Proceeding on a chattel mortgage for breach of its terms before the note is due, for which the mortgage was held as collateral security. See Cochrane v. Bucher, 3 O. R. 462.

Purchase Money — Prescription.] — Where notes have been given as collateral security for the price of sale of a property, and the property has not been paid for, the plea of prescription as to the notes can not avail against an action for the price. Mitchell v. Holland, 16 S. C. R. 687.

Renewal of Note.]—Where certain securities have been assigned as collateral security for the payment of a promissory note of $1,000, which note has been partly paid and a new note given, such securities may be held until the debt is discharged by payment. Wiley v. Ledyard, 10 P. R. 182.

Sale — Damages.] — Land scrip was deposited with a party as collateral security, who sold the same at a discount:—Held, that if on taking an account it should appear the sale had been effected before any default in payment, he must be charged with the amount of the present value, but if after default, then with the value at the time of the sale. Hart v. Bown, 7 Gr. 97.

Satisfaction of Security. |—D. J. indexed a promissory note for the accommodation of W. J., who discounted it, and gave D. J. a mortgage on certain land to indemnify him against his liability as indorser on the note.

W. J., during the currency of the note, abseconded, after obtaining from M. by false pretences a cheque for a large sum, which he cashed, and gave part of the proceeds to D. J. to take up the note, which D. J. did before maturity. W. J. toid D. J. that he had got the money from M., with whom he had dealings, as D. J. knew, but D. J. had no notice of any wrong doing in connection with the money:—Held, affirming 19 O. R. 1, that the mortgage ceased-to be an incumbrance on the land when the note was retired; that M. could not follow his money into the note; and was therefore not entitled to stand in the shoes of D. J. as to the security held by him, even if it had been a mortgage to secure the payment of the note. Jack v. Jack, 12 A. R. 476.

Security or Satisfaction.]—Held, that the deed as set out in the pleadings in this case shewed clearly an intention on the part of the bank to take it as collateral security, and not as an assignment in satisfaction of the notes sued on. Bank of British North America v. Sherwood, 6 U. C. R. 552.

Statute Barred Debt.]—Though the remedy of a creditor to recover a debt be barred by the Statute of Limitations, he may hold the collateral securities for such debt until paid. Wiley v. Ledgard, 10 P. R. 182.

Surety.]—Action by II. against M. on a gasained by M. to H. Plea, on equitable, grounds, that the mortgage was given by G. as collateral security for two notes of £100 each, made by G. to one W., and indorsed by him, and that said notes were given to H. (plaintiff) with the mortgage, and that one note having become due H., without notice of presentment and dishonour, and without defendant's consent, gave G. time, for a valuable consideration: — Held, on demurrer, good, and that defendant as surety was therefore discharged. However, Mills, 10 C. P. 194.

Surety—Primary Ureditor not Realizing Mortgaged Property.]—To an action on a promissory note, the defendant, an indorser, pleaded, "that he indorsed the note as surety for the makers; that it was agreed that the makers should transfer to the plaintiffs, as security for the payment of the note, by way of mortgage, a certain schooner, and that the of mortgage, a certain schooler, and that the plaintiffs agreed to hold the said vessel for the benefit and indemnity of the defendant; that in pursuance of such agreement the vessel was assigned to the plaintiffs, and it thereby became the duty of the plaintiffs, when requested by the defendant, to sell the vessel, under a power of sale contained in the mortgage, for the benefit of the defend-ant: that the defendant requested plaintiffs to sell said vessel: that the plaintiffs refused and neglected to comply with such request, and that the vessel was subsequently whereby the defendants lost the benefit of the security of the said vessel:—Held, that if the plea intended to assert that wherever a creditor takes a mortgage from a principal debtor with power of sale, accompanied with the personal obligation of a surety, it becomes an imperative duty imposed upon the comes an imperative duty imposed upon the mortgage creditor, upon the request of the surety at any time, to sell the mortgaged pro-perty upon default committed, at the peril, if he does not do so, of losing the benefit of the contract of surelyship, such proposition cannot be sustained in law; and that if the defendant intended to rely on an express agreement to this effect, the evidence would not sustain such contention, Bank of Montreal v. Davy, 21 C. P. 179.

Surety—Assigning Securities.]—A person who is surety for another, and holds collateral securities, is not bound to wait until he has paid the debt of the principal before he assigns such securities, but may do so at any time to the creditor in discharge, of his liability. Paton v. Wilkes, 8 Gr. 252.

Surety - Benefit of Collaterals.] - A debtor gave a mortgage to his creditor as collateral security for a debt for which another person (H.) was surety. The creditor afterwards obtained judgment against the surety (H.) for the debt, and placed an execution in the sheriff's hands against his goods. A creditor of the surety subsequently placed an execution in the same sheriff's hands; and, there not being goods enough to pay both executions, he paid off the first execution and took an assignment of the mortgage :- Held, that he was entitled to hold the mortgage to the extent of such payment, against the plaintiff, to whom the surety, H., after both executions were delivered to the sheriff, had assigned his interest in the mortgage to secure another debt. Garrett v. Johnstone, 13 Gr. 36.

Surety. |-Note given as collateral security to secure an indorser. Effect of giving time to maker. See Healey v. Dolson, 8 O. R. 691.

Surety-Release of Part of Security.]-The plaintiffs, who held a number of promissory notes of a customer, indorsed by various parties, and also a mortgage from the customer on certain lands to secure his general indebtedness, sued the defendant as indorser of one of the notes. Before action brought, they had released certain of the mortgaged lands, without the consent of the defendant:
—Held, that the plaintiffs were entitled to —Held, that the planning were childed to judgment against the defendant for the amount of the note, but without prejudice to the right of the latter to make them account for their dealings with the mortgaged property when that security had answered its purpose, or the debt had been paid by the sureties, or when in any other event, the application of the moneys from the security could be properly ascertained. Decision in 25 O. R. 503, modified. Molsons Bank v. Heilig, 26 O. R. 276.

Surety-Satisfaction of Principal Debt.] -A creditor may by express reservation preserve his rights against a surety notwithstanding the release of the principal debtor, the transaction in such a case amounting in effect to an agreement not to sue, but if effect of the transaction between the creditor and the principal debtor is to satisfy and discharge and actually extinguish the debt, there is nothing in respect of which the credithere is hoom in respect of which the creminary for can reserve any rights against the surety, Judgment below, 22 O. R. 235, reversed, Holliday v. Holow, 22 A. R. 298.

Afterned by the supreme court, sub nom. Holliday v. Jackson, 22 S. C. R. 479.

Suspense Account. |- If a merchant obtains from a bank a line of credit on terms of depositing his customers' notes as collateral security the bank is not obliged, so long as the paper so deposited remains uncollected, to give any credit in respect of it, but when any portion of the collaterals is paid it operates at once as payment of the merchant's debt and must be credited to him. Cooper v. Molsons Bank, 26 S. C. R. 611. Affirmed by the judicial committee, 25 A. R. 571. See S. C., in the courts below, 26 O. R. 575, and 23 A. R. 146.

Tacking.]—Where R. assigned a certain mortgage to M. to secure payment of two promissory notes of less amount than the mortgage debt, and M. having procured an assignment to himself of a certain judgment against R., the sheriff, pursuant to writs is-sued under the said judgment, seized the mortgage so assigned, and M. refused to execute a reassignment thereof to R., until not only the amount due on the promissory notes, but also the balance due under the said mortgage was paid:—Held, that R. was entitled to a reassignment on payment of what was due on the notes only, for the plaintiff's interest in the mortgage was not properly exigible by the sheriff under R. S. O. 1877 c. 66, Ross v. Simpson, 23 Gr. 553, distinguished. Rumohr v. Marx, 3 O. R. 167.

Transfer at Debtor's Request.]-Action for converting certain notes, with a special count, alleging in substance that defendants held the notes as collateral security for certain paper in their hands, to which the plaintiff was a party; and after they had collected part of them, and the paper had been retired, they collected and applied to their own use the remaining notes, to which they had ceased to have any claim. Defendants pleaded, on equitable grounds, that after receiving the notes, they were applied to by the plaintifs to accept in payment of a debt due by him to them the note of one A. D. for $1,147, which they refused to do unless one J. D. would indorse it; and J. D. would not indorse without security, and the plaintiff thereupon got defendants' agent to write to J. D., agreeing to hold the notes in question to apply when collected on the note for $1,147; that J. D. on the faith of this, indorsed said note, which defendants accepted in payment, and which was renewed from time to time by the proceeds of the notes collected, and reduced in July, 1862, to a note for $477, which note J. D. took up, and defendants thereupon transferred to him such of the notes in question as remained, as they lawfully might and were bound to do :- Held, plea good, as shewing a legal defence. Quære, whether it could be supported as an equitable plea, for J. D. would have been a necessary party to a bill by the plaintiff for the recovery and account of the notes. Maybee v. Bank of Toronto, 29 U. C. R. 566.

Transfer of Note after Maturity.]-The plaintiff sued as bearer of a note made by defendant payable to one McL., or bearer. Defendant pleaded, on equitable grounds, that McL, being the holder of said note, deposited it with one McD. as collateral security for the payment by said McL. of a certain note of the said McL, then held by said McD., which said note McD. transferred and delivered to the plaintiffs, and deposited the note in the declaration mentioned with the plaintiffs, after it became due, as collateral security; and that the said McL. did, before the commencement of this suit, retire, pay, and satisfy his said note, and was and is entitled to a return of the note now sued on, so held by the plaintiffs as collateral security, and is the lawful holder of said note:—Held, on demurrer, plea had for, I. the terms upon which the note was transferred to McD., which formed no part of the original consideration for which was given, and to which the defendant was if was given, and to constitute an equity attaching to the note in the plaintiffs' hands of which defendant could take advantage; and, that even if it were assumed that the plain-tiffs had no better title than McD., still McD., tills had no better title than McD., sain McD., being the holder at maturity, had a vested right of action against the defendant. Cana-dian Bank of Commerce v. Ross, 22 C. P. 497.

Transfer of Shares—Indebtedness of Transferor, [—A by-law of a building society tappellants required that a shareholder should have satisfied all his obligations to the society before he should be at liberty to transfer his shares. One P., a director, in contravention of the by-law, induced the secretary to countersign a transfer of his shares to the Banque Ville Marie as collateral security for the amount he borrowed from the bank and it was not till P.'s abandonment or assignment for the benefit of his creditors that the other directors knew of the transfer or assignment for the benefit of his creditors that the other directors knew of the transfer to the bank, although at the time of his assignment P, was indebted to the appellant society in a sum of $83,744, for which amount under the by-law his shares were charged as between P, and the society. The society immediately paid the bank the amount due by P, and took an assignment of the shares and of P,'s debt. The shares being worth more than the amount due to the bank, the curator to the insolvent estate of P, brought an action claiming the shares as forming part of the insolvent's estate, and with the action tendered the amount due by P, to the bank. The insortent's estate, and with the action tender-ed the amount due by P. to the bank. The society alleged the shares were pledged to them for the whole amount of P.'s indebted-ness to them under the by-laws:—Held, that ness to them under the by-laws;—Held, that the shares in question must be held as having always been charged under the by-laws with the amount of P.'s indebtedness to the society, and that his creditors had only the same rights in respect of these shares as P. him-self had when he made the abandonment of his property, viz., to get the shares upon pay-ment of P.'s indebtedness to the society. Societé Candicinne Francisce de Construction de Montreal v. Daveluy, 20 S. C. R. 449.

Trover by Debtor — Overpayment.] — Certain sale notes were deposited with defendants as collateral security for the payment of a note indorsed by the plaintiff, for the accommodation of one M., and discounted by defendants for M. The collaterals were of the same value as the principal note, and were of the same value as the principal note, and were to be paid into the bank, and applied on the note, so that when they were paid, the note also was to be paid, and the plaintiff's lia-bilities to cease. After the principal note bebilities to cease. After the principal note be-came due, defendants denied that they held the sale notes as collaterals, and refused to give the plaintiff any information as to what had been paid on them, and the plain-tiff then paid the note in full, and demanded an assignment of the collaterals. The plain-tiff's payment being made by a part payment in cash, and his note for the balance, which he paid at maturity:—Held, that the plaintiff could not maintain trover against defendants for the collaterals; for although under 26 Vict. c. 45, s. 2, he was entitled to the immediate possession of them, he had not, until assignment, any property in them vested Cornish v. Niagara District Bank, in him. Cornish v. Niagara District Bank, 24 C. P. 262.

Semble, that the plaintiff's remedy would be by a special action on the case for not assigning the notes to him after demand duly made.

Held, however, that the plaintiff was en-Held, however, that the plaintiff was entitled to recover as money had and received to his use, the amount paid to defendant on the collaterals, and the fact of his only paying part of the principal note in cash, and giving his note for the balance, did not take away his right. Ib.

Semble, also, that his right would not be affected even if the payment on the collaterals was after his payment. Ib.

Annulment of Charter.] — The appellant company by its Act of incorporation, 44 Vict. c. 61 (D.), was authorized to carry on business provided $100,000 of its capital on masness provided $100,000 of its capital stock was subscribed for, and thirty per cent, paid thereon, within six months after the passing of the Act, and the Attorney-General of Canada having been informed that only $40,500 had been bond fide subscribed prior to the commencing of the operations of the company, the balance having been subscribed for by G. in trust, who subsequently sur-rendered a portion of it to the company, and that the thirty per cent, had not been truly and in fact paid thereon, sought at the instance of a relator by proceedings in the superior court for Lower Canada to have the company's charter set aside and declared forfeited:—Held, 1. That this being a Dominion statutory charter, proceedings to set it aside were properly taken by the Attorney-General of Canada. 2. That such proceedings taken by the Attorney-General of Canada under Articles 997 et seq. C. C. P., if in the form authorized by those articles, are sufficient and valid though erroneously designated in the pleadings as a scire facias. 3. That the bonâ fide subscription of $100,000 within six months from date of the passing of the Act of incorporation, and the payment of the thirty per cent. thereon, were conditions precedent to the legal organization of the company with power to carry on business, and as these con-ditions had not been bona fide and in fact complied with within such six months the Attorney-General of Canada was entitled to have the company's charter declared forfeited. Dominion Salvage and Wrecking Co. v. Attorney-General of Canada, 21 S. C. R. 72.

Annulment of Charter, —Where it appeared that the defendants and others had been incorporated by letters patent, issued under the Great Seal of the Province of Quebec, which letters had been obtained by a fraudulent representation that the defendants and others had petitioned for the same, and a writ of scire facias was issued on an information by the Attorney-General against the company, its liquidator, and its judgment creditor, to shew cause why the letters patent should not be declared fraudulent, null and void, "at least in so far as the said defendants were concerned;"—Held, under the C. C. P. 1034 and 1035, that the Code does not authorize a partial annulment of letters patent; that they ought to be entirely annulled; and that the terms of the prayer were wide enough to authorize an order to that effect. Banque d'Hochelaga v. Murray, 15 App. Cas. 414.

Change of Name.]—Held, that the Act abolishing districts did not take away from defendants the name given to them by their charter. Hughes v. Mutual Fire Insurance to, of the District of Newcastle, 9 U. C. R. 387.

Change of Name.]—Where, between the time of obtaining an order for service out of the jurisdiction and the service, the name of a town thefore the mayor of which the additional of service was directed to be made) had been changed, a certificate of the town clerk sealed with the corporate seal of the town, under its new name, was received as proof of the fact of such change having taken place. Relph v. Cahoon, 2 Gr. 623.

Change of Name.]—Changing the name of a company by statute does not affect its right to maintain actions in like manner as if the name had not been changed. Provincial Insurance Co. v. Cameron, 31 C. P. 523.

Change of Name.]—A deed to defendant company described it by its original name of P. H. L. & R. R. Co., when in fact its name had then been changed:—Held, a sufficient descriptio personae to enable the company to take, though it might not be sufficient to sue in. Grand Junction R. W. Co. v. Midland R. W. Co., 7 A. R. 681.

Corporate Existence.]—See Queen Ins. Co. v. Boyd, 7 P. R. 379.

Evasion of Act — Payment of Percentage. [—The Act 22 Vict. c. 122, incorporating the Northwest Transit Company, enacted that it should not be lawful for the company to proceed with their operations under the Act until £50,000 of the capital stock should have been subscribed, and ten per cent. paid thereon, Subsequently, and before £50,000 had been subscribed, or the percentage paid thereon, a proposition was made by one C. to certain stockholders in the enterprise, that C. should sell a steam vessel belonging to him to the company for £5,000, and that in that event he should become a subscriber to the amount of £50,000, and that the steamer should be paid for by taking her as a payment of ten per cent, on the £50,000, which was acceded to, and the subscription and purchase made accordingly, in compliance with a resolution of the company:—Held, that this was an evasion of the statute, and an injunction was granted on motion, restraining the company from proceeding with any of the operations thereof until the conditions pointed out by the statute had been complied with. Hoveland v. McNab, 8 Gr. 47.

See Goodwin v. Ottawa and Prescott R. W. Co., 13 C. P. 254.

Evidence, !— Action by a joint stock road company, under 12 Vict. c. 84, against stage promictors, for tolls. The plaintiff proved that defendants had used the road with their stage conches, and had paid tolls, and had aparotiated for settling this claim:—Held, that the incorporation of plaintiffs was sufficiently shown as against the defendants. Paris and Dundas Road Company v. Weekes, 11 V. C. R. 56.

Forfeiture of Charter.]—Process was served upon A. as president of a bank, he having been elected in June, 1866, for one year. No election of president or directors had taken place since then, and A. in fact never resigned his office. In September, 1806, the bank suspended specie payments, and before sixty days thereafter assigned their property to trustees, and ceased to do business as a bank. It was provided by the charter that a suspension of specie payment for sixty days, or an excess of the debts of the bank by three times the paid up stock and deposits, &c., should operate as a for-feiture of the charter, &c.:—Held, that the total annihilation of the bank was not contemplated by these provisions, and it did not follow from the loss of the charter that there must be a dissolution for all purposes: that some formal process was still necessary finally to determine and put an end to all the functions of the corporation: that the bank was still a corporate body, liable to have its property sold or administered for the satisfaction of debts, and that A. must still be looked upon as president; and an application to set aside the service upon him was discharged with costs. Brooke v. Bank of Upper Canada, 4 P. R. 162.

Infant Corporator.] — Held, that by reason of the infancy of one of the five subscribers, the company, which was formed for the purchase of a road under R. S. O. 1877 c. 152, had no legal existence at the time of the registration of their declaration of incorporation, and that no subsequent ratification by him after attaining majority could validate his contract. Hamilton and Flumborough Road Co. v. Townsend, Hamilton and Flumborough Road Co. v. Flatt, 13 A. R. 534.

Married Woman Corporator.]-Quere, whether a married woman can legally be one of the five members required by R. S. O. 1877 c. 152, to form a joint stock company for the purpose of purchasing a road. Hamilton and Flamborough Road Co. v. Tocnsend, Hamilton and Flamborough Road Co. v. Flatt, 13 A. R. 534.

Misnomer—Pleading.]—Where, in styling the lessors of the plaintiff,—"The Chancellor, President and Scholars of King's College at York, in the Province of Upper Canada" in the consent rule, appearance, and plea in ejectment.—the words "in the Province of Upper Canada," were omitted, the omission was held not material, or, at all events, not a nullity, and might be cured by laches, Pac d, Chancellor, éc., of King's College v. Roe, 1 C. L. Ch. 111.

Misnomer—Pleading.]—The plaintiffs declared on a bond to "The Beverley Municipal Council," there being no such corporation in existence. Defendants did not deny the making of the bond, but pleaded over. On demurrer,—Held, that by not pleading non est factum, defendants were debarred from taking the objection to the form of the bond as pleaded. Township of Beverley v. Barlow, 10 C. P. 178.

Misnomer.]—A bond sued upon in the name of "The Trent and Frankford Road Company" was in the name of the president and directors of the Trent and Frankford Road Company:—Held, no objection. Trent and Frankford Road Co. v. Marshall, 10 C. P. 329.

Misnomer, |—The name of the defendant as sole corporation by the statute, was "The Roman Catholic Episcopal Corporation of the Diocese of Sandwich in Canada." The instruments declared on were in the name of the "Roman Catholic Bishop of Sandwich!" —Held, that the variance was immaterial Ruitz v, Roman Catholic Episcopat Corporation of the Diocese of Sandwich, 30 U. C. R.

Misnomer.]—Misnomer of High School Trustees—Acquiescence in erroneous name. See In re Trustees of Port Rowan High School and Township of Watsingham, 23 C. P. 11.

Misnomer.]—A bill by a corporation using a wrong name is liable to a demurrer for want of equity. Cornish Silver Mining Co. v. Bull, 21 Gr. 592.

Misnomer.] — Defendants, a company, were styled in the bill "The Ontario Wood Pavement Co." Certain other defendants alleged to be directors of this company, when brought up to be examined for discovery, denied all connection with it and refused to answer any questions relating to "The Ontario Wood Pavement Company of Toronto." This latter name the plaintiff's solicitor stated to be the true corporate name of the company, intended to be described by the bill; but there being no further evidence of this fact, an application to compel the defendants to answer the questions put to them was refused. Dickey v. Ontario Wood Pavement Co., 6 P. R. 93.

Mode of Testing Existence.]—As to the proper mode of testing the existence of a corporation composed of school trustees. See Askew v. Manning, 38 U. C. R. 345.

Nominal Corporation—Partners.]— In the case of a nominal corporation which has no legal status as such, the ostensible corporators are partners; and their liability as partners on the contracts of the company is a joint, and not a joint and several, liability. Glidersleeve, Balfour, 15 P. R. 293.

Objection Not Pleaded.] — Where defendant pleads over, and takes no exception to the declaration, the court cannot take judicial notice of the want of legal authority in the plaintiffs to sue in their corporate capacity. Bank of British North America v. Sherwood. 6 U. C. R. 213.

"Persons Signing" Bill of Lading.]
—Semble, that under the Interpretation Act, 31 Viet. c. 1, s. 7, s. s. 9 (O.), the defendants, though a cornoration, would be "persons signing" the bill of lading, if signed by their authorized agent. Royal Canadian Bank v.
Grand Trank R. W. Co., 23 C. P. 225.

Pleading. |—In an action by the trustees of a church for defendant's subscription towards rebuilding:—Held, that under non assumpsit defendant could not deny that the plaintiffs were a corporation. Trustees of the Toronto Berkeley Street Congregation of the Wesleyan Methodist Church in Canada v. Stevens, 37 U. C. R. 9.

Pleading. |—The plaintiff sued "The Commissioners of the Cobourg Town Trust," in whom the harbour at Cobourg is vested in fee by 22 Vict, c. 72, for damages for loss of his vessel, caused by the negligence of defendants, who by their plea merely traversed the negligence. At the trial plaintiff was nonsuited, on the objection that defendants were sued as a corporation, but were not so under the statute:—Held, that this objection should have been raised by plea, and was not open to defendants on this record; and semble, that if open, defendants were a corporation. Leave was granted to amend, if desired, by substituting the names of the commissioners, Meckerry v. Commissioners of the Cobourg Town Trust, 45 U. C. R. 249.

Town Commissioners. |—Held, that the commissioners for the town of Peterborough, appointed by 24 Vict, c, 61, are not a corporation, and cannot be sued as such. Upon this objection to the declaration, the action was held, not sustainable, this court being of opinion that they should be sued by name, adding their statutory designation. Commissioners of the Peterborough Town Trust v. Cochrane, 13 C. P. 111.

II. CONDUCT OF BUSINESS.

By-law Operating Unequally.]—A bylaw or resolution of a joint stock company which operates unequally towards the interests of any class of the shareholders is invalid and ultra vires of the company. North West Electric Co. v. Wolsh. 29 S. C. R. 33.

By-law Without Penalty. |—Where a corporation is empowered by statute to enact by-laws and impose a penalty for their infraction, not exceeding a certain amount, a by-law is bad which annexes a penalty to an offence but does not declare its amount, Peters v. President and Board of Police of London, 2 U. C. R. 543.

Changing Head Office.]—The Act incorporating a company provided that the head office might be changed from Ottawa to such other place as might be determined by the shareholders at any one of the general meetings. At the general annual meeting a resolution was passed authorizing the directors to consummate arrangements for the removal of the head office from Ottawa to Toronto. The directors made the change, and the subsequent annual meetings were held at Toronto, at the first of which so held, the bylaw referring to the place of holding the annual meetings was amended by substituting Toronto for Ottawa:—Held, that the change was effectually made. Union Fire Ins. Co. v. Shoolbred. 4 O. R. 339.

Discretion.] — A company incorporated for the purpose of improving the navigation of a river, is bound to ascreise its powers reasonably, so as to avoid doing any unnecessary injury to neighbouring proprietors. The court will reluctantly interfere with a company's discretion where amongst engineers there may be a difference of opinion; but as it appeared that the damage complained of by the plaintiff might be avoided by certain alterations of the company's works, suggested by an eminent engineer to whom the matter was referred by the court, which alterations the company said they would have made if suggested before suit, the court decreed the makens and the court decreed the makens and the court decreed the makens and the court decreed the makens are the court decreed the makens and the court decreed the makens are considered to the court decreed the court d ing thereof. Moore v. Grand River Navigation Co., 13 Gr. 560.

Dominion Jurisdiction.] — Held, that 37 Viet, e. 103 (1.)., which created a corporation with power to carry on definite kinds of business within the Dominion, was within the legislative competence of the Dominion Parliament. The fact that the corporation close to confine the exercise of its powers to one Province and to local and provincial objects did not affect its status as a corporation or operate to render its original incorporation illegal as ultra vires the said parliament. Colonial Building and Investment Asca v. Attorney-General of Quebec, 9 App. Cas. 155.

Heid, that the corporation could not be prohibited generally from acting as such within the Province, nor could it be restrained from doing specified acts in violation of provincial law upon a petition not directed and adapted to that purpose. Ib.

Majority—Ratification.]—The court will not interfere with the doing of an act by a company which should have been sanctioned by a majority of the shareholders before the act was done, if such sanction can be afterwards obtained. Pardom v. Ontario Loan and Debenture Co., 22 O. R. 597.

Repeal of By-laws.]—As to the right to repeal by-laws to the prejudice of parties who have obtained rights under such by-laws. See Wright v. Incorporated Symod of the Diocese of Raylor of the Raylor

Reserve Fund—Dissentient Minority.]—An ordinary trading company can, without special authority, set apart a reserve fund, but the majority of the shareholders cannot, against the wishes of the minority, accumulate out of the profits a reserve fund which is far larger than is required to provide for all liabilities of, and vicissitudes in, the business; and where such a fund had been accumulated and portions of it had from time to time been invested, by the directors elected by the majority, in unauthorized and hazardous investments, the court, at the instance of the minority, ordered a reasonable proportion to be set aside as a reserve fund and the balance to be distributed among the shareholders as undrawn profits. Earle v. Burland, 27 A. R. 540.

III. DIRECTORS.

1. Dealings with the Company.

Debentures to Director.] — The judgment in an action by the Bank of Toronto against the C. Railway Company, directed a reference as to who, other than the plaintiffs, were the holders of bonds of the defendant company of the same class, and an account of what was due to such bondholders, and it appeared before the master that the managing director of the company had issued a great number of debentures of the same class as the plaintiffs' to J. H. S., G. J. S., and J. B., who were themselves directors of the company, at a discount of twenty-live per cent., in satisfaction of their chains against the company. The plaintiffs, who had obtained their debentures subsequently, thereupon contended that these parties could only claim the amount actually advanced by them, and that they could not as directors sell the debentures to themselves at a discount:—Held, that insamuch as the company did not complain of the transaction, nor any shareholders, and inasmuch as the transaction was not ultra vires, it was not competent for the holders of the debentures of the same class, such as the plaintiffs were, to impugn the position of J. H. S., G. J. S., and J. B. If the directors abused their position so as to get an advantage at the expense of the company, it was for the corporation or its corporators to complain. To permit the plaintiffs to attack them on this ground would be to recognize the validity of the transfer of a right of action to complain of a fraud, actual or constructive, Bank of Toronto v. Cobourg, Peterborough and Marmora R. W. Co., 10 O. R. 376.

Mortgage to Director.]—Where a vote of the shareholders of an incorporated company had authorized the directors to raise money on the security of the company's lands, and one of the directors afterwards, by arrangement with the other directors, advanced money for the use of the company, and took a mortgage on their lands, it was held that a third party, who subsequently became the purchaser of the mortgaged estate, could not resist the claim of the mortgagee, on the ground that a mortgage to a director was invalid. Greenstreet v. Paris Hydraulic Co., 21 Gr., 220.

Pledging Credit for Company—Transfer of Shares in Consideration Thereof—Ratification.)—In the absence of agreement, there is clearly no duty or obligation on the part of directors to pledge their own credit for the benefit of the company. Christopher v. Noxon, 4 O. R. 67:

Where certain shares were allotted to one of the directors of a company at par, in consideration of which he offered to supply funds to meet a pressing demand upon the company, and he voted on these shares at a general meeting of the shareholders, and no opposition was at the time made to his so doing:—Held, that the shareholders must be considered to have ratified the transfer, and could not afterwards object to it as improper. Ib.

It was alleged that he thus acquired such stock in order to obtain control of the company:—Semble, that this would not be improper, if no improper means were used by him; but that had he made a profit thereby, the company might perhaps have claimed it.

An allotment of shares to a director, if a questionable act, may be ratified by the company, and for this purpose, as for all other acts within the power of the corporation, the approval of a majority of shareholders is sufficient. Ib.

Purchase from Company.] — Where a voidable contract, fair in its terms and within the powers of the company had been entered into by its directors with one of their number as sole vendor: — Held, that such vendor was entitled to exercise his voting power as a shareholder in a general meeting to ratify such contract; his doing so could not be deemed oppressive by reason of his individually possessing a majority of votes, acquired in a manner authorized by the constitution of the company. North-West Transportation Co. v. Beatty, 12 App. Cas. 589; reversing 6 O. R. 300, and 12 S. C. R. 598, and restoring 11 A. R. 205.

Purchase from Company. I—A director of a joint stock company, having a judgment and coeution of its own against the property of the company, arting in good faith, purchased the same at a sale by mortgages under a power of sale, for 88,400, and sold it in the following year for 823,000:—Held, in winding-up proceedings, that he could not purchase for his own benefit, but held the land as trustee for the company and was accountable for any profit received on a resale, and by reason of his refusing to pay over or account for such profits, and in fact by his appearing as a bidder at the sale and so damping the bidding, was guilty of a breach of trust within it. S. C. c. 129, s. S3. Re Iron Clay Brick Manufacturing Co., Turner's Case, 130 C. R. 113.

Purchase from Liquidator of Company, —Upon the appointment of a liquidator for a company being wound up under R. S. C. c. 129 (The Winding-up Act), if the powers of the directors are not continued as provided by s. 34 of the Act, their fiduciary relations to the company or its shareholders are at an end, and a sale to them by the liquidator of the company is valid. Chatham National Bank v. McKeen, 24 S. C. R. 348.

Salaried Office.]—Where an Act of incorporation provides that no by-law for the payment of the president or any director, shall be valid or acted on until the same has been confirmed at a general meeting of the shareholders, this applies only to payment for the services of the president as presiding officer of the board. Where a company appoints the directors to various salaried offices without a by-law fixing the amount of the salaries as required by the Act of incorporation, and such appointments are afterwards confirmed by legislation, they are entitled to prove in the winding-up for a quantum meruit for services rendered. Re Ontario Express and Transportation Co., Directors' Case, 25 O. R. 587.

Solicitor—Right to Costs.]—See Re Mimico Sever Pipe and Brick Manufacturing Co., Pearson's Case, 26 O. R. 289.

2. Election and Appointment.

Hlegal Election—Effect of Acting,1— Where an election of directors in a joint stock company was clearly illegal—the voters having been each allowed only one vote, whereas each share should have been given a vote —but the parties chosen had for more than eight months discharged the duties, the court refused to interfere by mandanus for a new election. Quare, whether mandamus or quo warranto would be the proper remedy. In re Moore and Port Bruce Harbour Co., 14 U. C. R. 365.

Purchase of Shares for Voting Purposes.]—An election of officers obtained by a trick or artifice cannot be considered a bond fide election, but when shares have been actually purchased and paid for, the fact of their being purchased with a view to influence the election is no objection, Toronto Brewing and Malting Co. v. Blake, 2 O. R. 175.

Qualification.]—See Kicly v. Smyth, 27 Gr. 220.

Scrutineers.]-At a meeting of the shareholders of a company, the capital stock of which was held by a few, a chairman was elected by a majority of the votes of those present, without regard to the stock held by them. Two of the shareholders who were also them. Two of the snareholders who were also provisional directors, and who were candi-dates for re-election, were appointed scru-tineers in the same manner, and directors were then elected, excluding the plaintif. The plaintiff was president of the company. and held a large amount of stock, sufficient with that held by those who were favourable to him to have controlled the vote if it had been taken according to shares. It was the duty of the scrutineers to decide as to what votes were valid, and they also, with the aid of legal advice, interpreted an instrument under which the plaintiff had advanced a large sum of money to start the company, and which provided for the future disposition of the shares of the company, held by the plaintiff as security for his advances, and allowed certain persons to vote as being cestuis que trust of a portion of such shares:—Held, that the duty of the scrutineers was so plainly in conflict with their interest as candidates for the directorate that they were disqualified from so acting, and the election was set aside, and a new election ordered, with costs to be paid by the defendants. Dickson v. McMurray, 28 Gr. 533.

Setting Aside Election — Sharcholder's Action.]—The court of chancery has jurisdiction to set aside an election of directors by persons who are subscribers nominally and not bond fide. Davidson v. Grange, 4 Gr. 377. A mit to set aside an election of directors of a corporation on the alleged ground of fraud, may be brought by some of the shareholders on behalf of all, and need not be in the name of the corporation ristelf. Ib.

Shareholder Succeeding to Office.]—The Act of incorporation of the Toronto Street Railway Company provided that there should not be less than three directors, each of whom should be a shareholder. The corporation consisted of three shareholders, who were the directors. Upon the death of one of them a meeting was called to appoint a new director, when one S., to whom the deceased director had bequeathed his shares, was declared elected by one of the two directors, although the other refused to concur in the appointment:—Held, reversing 25 Gr. 455, that no election was necessary to make S. a director, there being only three shareholders, each of whom was qualified to be a director. Kiely v. K.iely, 3 A. R. 438.

Special Meeting for Election — Quorum.]—The plaintiffs were a company incorporated under the Canada Joint Stock Companies Act, 40 Vict. c. 43. By s. 29, the directors were to be elected by the share-holders in general meeting assembled, at such loiders in general meeting assembled, at such times as the by-laws of the company should prescribe; and by s. 30, in default of other express provision therefor in the letters patent or by-laws, such election should take place yearly, upon notice; that at all general meetings each shareholder who had paid all calls should be entitled to yot on each share ball by him; and that all questions should held by him; and that all questions should be determined by the majority of votes. By s. 31, the failure to elect directors at the proper time should not dissolve the company; but such election should take place at any general meeting of the company duly called for the purpose, the retiring directors to continue in office until the election of their successors. lifty s. 32, power is given to the directors to pass by-laws for, amongst other things, the time, &c., of the holding of the annual meet-ing of the company, the calling of meetings, regular and special, of the directors and of the company, the quorum at such meetings; but every such by-law, unless confirmed at a general meeting of the company, should only be in force until the next annual meeting thereof; one-fourth in value of the shareholders could at all times call a special meeting for the transaction of such business as night be specified in the notice given therefor. By a by-law passed by the directors the last Tuesday in September was fixed as the date of the annual general meeting, and the quorum for such meeting was to consist of five members; but at a special meeting they were required in addition to represent one-third of the capital stock. In 1884 there was no election of directors at the appointed time, owing to the office where the meeting was to have been held therefor being locked up and the defendant refusing to attend the meeting or give up the books, &c.; and in October a special general meeting of the shareholders was held, called on notice, stating the object thereof, on a requisition by one-fourth in value of the shareholders, and directors were elected, who ap-pointed a new secretary. At the meeting there were present three-fourths of the quali fied vote and one-third of the subscribed capttal, but considerably less than that amount of the nominal capital. In an action by the company against defendant for the non-delivery of the books, &c., to the new secretary, the defendant set up as a defence that he was still secretary, because, as he alleged, the directors who appointed the new secretary were not duly elected, and that there was not a quorum at the meeting to transact business; Held, under the circumstances, there was authority to call the special general meeting for the election of directors; and that it was duly called by the proper number of shareholders:—Held, also, that the directors could by by-law determine the quorum and all other formal proceedings for the control and con-duct of the meeting of the board and shareholders; that there was a proper quorum present at the meeting under the by-law; and if the by-law had required such one-third to be of the whole capital stock it would have been ultra vires as opposed to s. 32:—Held, also, that on the evidence the defendant must be deemed to have unlawfully detained the books, &c., that there was an election of directors de facto, and a suit in the company's name; and an officer of the company could not the permitted to withhold what belonged to the company. In any event the defence set up was not the proper way of testing the election of directors, which should have been by motion to stay or set aside the proceedings. Austin Mining Co. (Limited) v. Gemmill, 10 O. R. (50).

Statutory Provision for Retirement.]
—Where in a prior statute the two directors having the smallest number of votes of the five chosen in a former election were declared to be ineligible at any subsequent election, and by a subsequent statute the number of directors was fixed at seven, and the persons named who were to constitute the board until the next election—the court held that two of the board having vacated their seats by non-residence, rendered it unnecessary for two of the remaining five to vacate their seats. Rex v. Welland Canal Co., Tay., 300.

Term of Office — Shortening.] — At a meeting of the directors of a company a bylaw, under s, 37 of R. S. O. 1887 c. 157, was passed, and subsequently confirmed by the shareholders, providing that the directors should hold office for one year and until their successors were appointed: — Held, that the by-law so passed could only be repealed at the next annual general meeting of the company, and therefore a by-law passed during the directors' year of office, by the shareholders at a special meeting of the company, providing that the appointment should be terminable by resolution, was invalid. Stephenson v, Vokes, 27 O. R. 691.

3. Liabilities.

Administration — Past Directors.]—A decree was obtained in a suit by a shareholder of a building society, suing on behalf of himself and all other shareholders, for the administration of the assets of the society, and charging the directors with losses which had been sustained:—Held, that persons who had ceased to be directors before the suit was commenced could not be made parties in the master's office. Rolph v. Upper Canada Building Society, 11 Gr. 275.

Bills and Notes.]—See BILLS OF EXCHANGE, VIII. 2.

Corporate Name—"Limited"—Abbreviation in Contract., —A bill of exchange drawn by the plaintiffs upon the Burford Canning Company (Limited) was addressed to "The Burford Canning Co.," and accepted by the Burford Canning Co., and accepted by the drawees by the signature "The Burford Canning Co., Ltd." This was a few days after the royal assent had been given to the Ontario Act 60 Vict. c. 28, s. 22 of which provided that in the case of contracts by limited limbility companies the word "limited" should be companied to the companies the word "limited" should be companied to the com the "Burford Canning Co." in the draft was the first place in which the name of the company appeared in the contract, but that the fact of its having been so written there by the plaintiffs did not disentitle them to recover: -Held, also, that no stay was created by 61 Vict. c. 19, s. 4, of any action but one brought under 60 Vict. c. 28, s. 22 (1), and the cor-responding section of the revision of 1897, so that, upon this view of the effect of 52 Vict. c. 26, s. 2, the plaintiffs were entitled to recover. If, however, the use of the contraction "Ltd." was a compliance with the last mentioned section, the plaintiffs were still entitled to recover, because the contract was made some days after the passing of 60 Vict. c. 28, s. 22, which required the unabbreviated word "limited" to be used; and the plaintiffs, upon the execution of the contract by the Burford Canning Company (Limited), became and remained entitled to look to the directors per-sonally, and had a vested right of action, with which the "stay" clause, s. 4 of 61 Vict. c. 19, could not interfere, there being nothing in it which required the court to hold it to be restrospective. Howell Lithographic Company (Limited) v. Brethour, 30 O. R. 204.

False Reports-Person Induced to Take The plaintiff sued defendant as director of a bank, alleging in substance that in a report made to the shareholders in 1866, and a statement accompanying it, the defend-ant falsely and fraudulently misrepresented the condition of the bank, overestimating the assets and underestimating the liabilities, thereby inducing defendant to believe it sound and to purchase stock :-Held, upon the evidence set out in the case, 1. that there was no evidence of fraud sufficient to maintain the action-that is, of false statements knowingly made by defendant with a fraudulent intent. The nature of the fraud required to sustain such a charge considered, and the authorities reviewed. 2. That the report was not a representation within C. S. U. C. c. 44, s. 10, so as to require it to be signed by defendant. 3. That if the statements were false and fraudulent, defendant would be liable, although they were made to the stockholders, for they were intended and used for public information. Parker v. McQuesten, 32 U. C. R. 273.

Fraudulent Acceptance of Transfer.] When the shareholders of a certain company brought an action against the company and certain of its directors, alleging that the latter, being a majority of the directorate, had negotiated a transfer of a number of their own shares to one C., who subsequently be-came manager, knowing him to be a man of no sufficient means to pay calls thereon, but wishing to escape liability for certain impending calls; and claimed that the said directors should make good to the company or to them snould make good to the company or to them the amount of calls due upon the shares so transferred to C. and unpaid by him: and the said directors alleged acquiescence and laches on the plaintiffs' part in respect of the matters complained of: and the plaintiffs proved the transfer as alleged:—Held, reversing 6.0. R. 291, that the defendant directors in allowing the transfers complained of, were upon the evidence guilty of no fraud towards the shareholders, and that such act was within the scope of the prescribed powers and duties of directors, and as neither fraud nor a of directors, and as neither traud nor a breach of trust was proved, the action was dismissed with costs, Thompson v. Canada Fire and Marine Ins. Co., 9 O. R. 284.

Guarantee.]-One E. advanced $4,000 to I. and M. on the guarantee of the defendant company, clearly acting ultra vires, who obtained, as security for such guarantee an order from I. and M., on the waterworks company, for the amount. I. and M. afterwards induced the defendants to give up the order on replacing it by orders for half the amount, recovered judgment by default against the defendants, and by sci. fa. realized the amount of his loan :- Held, that B., who was one of the directors of the defendant company, and who had been instrumental in procuring the above guarantee, was properly charged with the amount the defendants had lost through the delivery up of the order on the waterworks company; but that he was not liable for the balance of the claim of E., since it had been made up to the defendants by the moneys realized on the orders by which the order so delivered up had been replaced. Walmsley v. Rent Guarantee Co., 29 Gr. 484.

Misapplication of Funds — Action in Company's Name.]—Where the directors of an incorporated company misappropriate the funds of the corporation, a bill against them and the company, in respect of such misappropriation, cannot be sustained by some of the stockholders on behalf of all except the directors; the company must be made planniffs whether the acts of the directors are void or only voidable, and the stockholders have a right to make use of the name of the company as plaintiffs in such proceedings. Hamilton v. Desjardina Canall Co., 1 Gr. 1.

Personal Liability — Ultra Vires Contract, 1 — Certain persons, seven in number, defendant being one, were incorporated as the Amherstburgh and St. Thomas Railway Co, with power, among other things; to obtain a certain amount of stock. As soon as it was obtained, a meeting of the stockholders was to be called to organize the company. These resolution, authorizing one M. R. to retain counsel to prosecute a suit in chancery on their behalf, and on the same day the board of directors, which had been previously chosen by the stockholders, passed a resolution to the same effect. The plaintiffs were thereupon retained, and proceedings in chancery instituted, for the costs of which this action was brought:—Held, that the resolution being an illegal act, and the responsibility arising therefrom not being removed by the resolution of the general board of direction, the defendant as well as the others who authorized retaining the plaintiffs, was liable personally. McDonald v, Macbeth, 11 C. P. 224.

Personal or Representative Capacity.]—The plaintiff seed the defendant for lumber furnished on the occasion of the provincial agricultural society's meeting at Hamilton. The defence was, that the society, which was an incorporated body, was liable, and not the defendant personally. The learned Judge at the trial left it to the jury to find upon the evidence whether the defendant had contracted with the plaintiff personally, or as one of a committee of gentlemen who undertook to superintend, in either of which events he held him to be personally liable; but the jury were told, that if he contracted as only representing or on behalf of the corporation, he would then not be personally liable:—Held, that the ruling was correct. Simpson v. Carr, 5 U. C. R. 326.

Personal or Representative Capacity.—Assumist for work and labour. The plantiff part in a paper headed, "Memoranda of an agreement made and entered into this 2rd of March. 1854, between the directors of the Victoria Bridge. Comparison of the Victoria Bridge. Comparison of the Victoria Bridge. Comparison of the Victoria Bridge. The plaintiff of the brigge of the party of the plaintiff of the certain work for specified prices, which "the party of the first part hereby agree to pay," &c., and was signed by defendant, describing himself as "Pres. V. B.," and by the plaintiff. It appeared that the company had been duly incorporated, and that the plaintiff had received £350 from them on account of his work:—Held, that defendant was not personally liable. Johnson v. Hamilton, 12 1. C. R. 211.

Personal or Representative Capacity — Guarantee.]—In consequence of arrangements for uniting the Grand Trunk Telegraph Company with the British North Americal Company of the British North American Capacition, the superintendent of the former company, on the 19th December, 1854, and the company in its operations) to cease his competion with it on the 31st December, 1854, on the company guaranteeing to him his competion with it on the 31st December, 1854, on the company guaranteeing to him his competion with it on the 31st December, 1854, on the company guaranteeing to him his competion with the only of the superior of your favour of this date, upon the subject of your favour of this date, upon the subject of your favour of this date, upon the subject of your perining from the office you now hold under us. We will be happy to meet you in the way set forth; and we hereby pledge ourselves to carry out the provisions mentioned in your behalf, (Signed), G. H. Cheney, president, on behalf of myself and the directors of the G. T. T. Co., "—Held, that the president is supply amounted to a personal guarantee. By repl. amounted to a personal guarantee. By repl. amounted to a personal guarantee.

Personal or Representative Capacity—Finding of Fact.]—Plaintiffs used defendants for breach of an agreement by which defendants bound themselves to carry lumber for the plaintiffs from Peterborough to Port Hope at a stipulated price. The agreement set out, which was dated in November, 1865, resited that defendants were engaged in rumming the Fort Hope, Lindsay and Benverton the Fort Hope, Lindsay and Benverton of the defendants were engaged in rumming the Fort Hope, Lindsay and Benverton the first the defendants were resent and the other manging director. The jury were asked to find whether the agreement was made by defendants acting as agents for and directors of the company, of which plaintiffs had notice, and having found in the negative and assessed damages in favour of plaintiffs, the court refused to interfere with their verdict, as contrary to law and evidence. McDougall v. Covert, 18 C. P. 119.

Wages.]—A person employed as foreman of works, who hires and dismisses men, makes out pay-rolls, receives and pays out money for wages, and does no manual labour, and in addition to receiving pay for his own services at the rate of 85 a day, payable fortnightly, is pail for the use of machinery belonging to lim and of horses hired by him, is not a labourer, servant or apprentice within the meaning of s, 68 of the Joint Stock Companies Letters Patent Act, R. 8, O. 1887, c. 157, and cannot recover against the directors personally. Welch v. Ellis, 22 A. R. 255.

Wages — "Labourers, Servants, and Apprentices" — Mining Companies Act.]—The plaintiff, the manager of a mining company, paid out of his own moneys the amount due for wages by the company to certain labourers, and having obtained assignments of their chims, recovered a judgment against the company for the amount, together with a sum of money owed to him by the company for services. After an execution against the company had been returned unsatisfied, he brought this action on behalf of himself and the labourers against two of the directors under s. S of R. S. O. 1897 c. 197, the Ontario Mining Companies Corporation Act, to make them personally liable for the amount due on the execution:—Held, that the action brought against the company was not such a one as is contemplated under the section, and there being no dispute as to the facts, this action was dismissed on a motion under Con. Rule 616. The manager of a mining company is not a "labourer, servant, or apprentice" within the meaning of s. S. Herman v. Wilson, 32 O. R. 60.

4. Meetings.

Place—Notice.]—Five of the nine of the provisional directors of a railway company being a quorum, four of them met at Winnipeg pursuant to a valid notice under the statute, and adjourned to a day named, when six met at Toronto in alleged pursuance of such adjournment without advertisement or notice under the statute:—Held, that the meeting of the six directors did not constitute a duly organized meeting of directors, though land all the directors who were at the meeting at Winnipeg attended pursuant to the adjournment it might have cured the irregularity. McLaren v. Fisken, 28 Gr. 352.

Quorum—Casting Vate.]—R. S. O. 1877 c. 150, requires that companies incorporated thereunder shall have not less than three directors, who shall not be appointed directors unless they are shareholders, and it was provided by the by-laws of the plaintiff company that a director should not only be qualified when elected, but that he should continue to be so. The plaintiff company was managed by three directors, and one of them disposed of his stock:—Held, that he thereupon ceased to be a director, and the directorate then became incomplete and incompetent to manage the affairs of the company. Semble, also, even assuming that a quorum (2) of the directors could manage the business, yet, where neither the statute nor the by-laws gave the president a casting vote, resolutions passed by such vote, at a meeting attended only by the president and one other director, were invalid. Toronto Brewing and Matting Co. v. Blake, 2 O. R. 173.

5. Powers and Rights.

Assignment for Creditors,]—The directors of a joint stock company incorporated under the Caunda Joint Stock Companies Letters Fatent Act. 1893, 32 & 33 Vict. c. 13 (D.), and subject to the provisions of the Insolvent Act of 1875, cannot, without being authorized by the shareholders make a voluntary assignment in insolvency. Douley v. Holmwood, 30 C. P. 240, 4 A. R. 555.

Assignment for Creditors.] — An assignment by the directors of a joint stock company of all the estate and property of the company to trustees for the benefit of creditors is not ultra vires such directors, and does not require special statutory authority or the formal assent of the whole body of shareholders. Howey v. Whiting, 14 S. C. R. 515; S. C., sub nom. Whiting v. Howey, 13 A. R. 7.

Borrowing Money.]—Held, that the directors of a mutual insurance company may under R. S. O. 1877 c. 161, s. 29, borrow money on promissory notes or debentures without passing a by-law under seal. Victoria Mutual Fire Ins. Co. v. Thompson, 32 C. P. 476.

Contract - Sale of Undertaking 1-The plaintiff was employed by one of the provisional directors of the defendant railway company to do certain work on behalf of the company in advertising and promoting its under-taking. The evidence established that this director was intrusted by the company with the performance of the various duties necessary for the purpose of promoting and furthering the undertaking, and that he did this, from time to time, without any specific in-structions from his co-directors at formal meetings of the board, everything being done in the most informal manner; but that they were fully cognizant of what he did, and of his manner of doing it, and vested in him. either tacitly or by direct authorization, the right and authority to transact the business of the company :- Held, that the plaintiff was of the company:—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to recover from the company the value of his work. Mahony v. East Holyford Mining Co., L. R. 7 H. L. 869, followed. Wood v. Ontario and Quebec R. W. Co., 24 C. P. 334, commented on. The undertaking having been sold by the provisional directors, free of all liens and incumbrances, for a certain sum of money, which was paid to them, and a portion of which was paid into court under an order in which was paid into court under an order in another action, all the provisional directors being parties in the action, and two of them submitting to the order of the court and being willing that the judgment debt should be paid out of the fund in court, an order was made, notwithstanding that the purchasers were not parties, directing payment of the plaintiff's debt and costs, and of the costs of the two directors, out of such fund. Allen v. Onsorio and Rainy River R. W. Co., 29 O. R. 510.

Covenant in Assignment of Mortgage, 1—The defendants in the deed of assignment covenanted that the mortgages were good and valid charges on the lands, and that the defendants had not done or permitted any act, &c., whereby the mortgages had become released or discharged in part or in entirety. It appeared that certain of the lands comprised in these mortgages had been sold for taxes:—Held, that the covenant was not ultra vires the company or the directors; and that the plaintiffs were entitled thereunder to recover the value of the lands so sold. Real Estate Investment Co. v. Metropolitan Building Society, 3 O. R. 476.

Delegation.]—A board of directors cannot delegate to its officers or to third parties statutory powers to allot stock, or make calls. Re Bolt and Iron Co., Hovenden's Case, 10 P. R. 434.

Execution — Sheriff Becoming Director.]
—A writ of fi. fa. against a railway company, which was directed to a sheriff, before he became a director in the company, was held properly returnable by him, and that his becoming a director before the return of the writ, did not invalidate it. Smith v. Spencer, 12 C. P. 277.

Illegal Payments.]-In a company consisting of seven shareholders, the plaintiffs, four of the shareholders holding twenty-five per cent. of the stock, claimed that there had been mismanagement of the company's funds in the payment out of large sums to the president and secretary, for salaries or services, without any legal authority therefor, and in the failure to declare any dividends though the company had made large profits, and that no satisfactory investigation or statement of the company's affairs could be obtained though frequently applied for, and that it was impos sible to ascertain the company's true financial standing. Under these circumstances an instanding. Under these circumstances an investigation of the company's affairs was directed. At a meeting of four of the directors, constituting the majority, held after proceedings taken by the minority to disallow the illegal payments made to the president and secretary, and without proper notice to the minority of such meeting or its object, a resolution was passed ratifying the payments made to the secretary, and at an adjourned meeting, of which also the minority received no notice, by-laws were passed ratifying the payments made to the president and secretary: -Held, that the resolution and by-laws were invalid, and could not be confirmed by the shareholders, and an injunction was granted restraining the company from acting there-under, or from holding a meeting of shareholders to ratify and confirm the same. W dell v. Ontario Canning Co., 18 O. R. 41.

Issuing Shares at a Discount.]—Held, that the action of the directors in issuing shares at less than their nominal value was ultra vires. Melnuyre v. Medraken, 1 A. R. 1. Sec S. C., 1 S. C. R. 479.

Issuing Shares at a Discount.]—The directors of a joint stock company incorporated in Manitoba have no powers under the provisions of the Manitoba Joint Stock Companies Incorporation Act, to make allotments of the capital stock of the company at a rate per share below the face value, and any by-law or resolution of the directors assuming to make such allotment without the sanction of a general meeting of the shareholders of the company is invalid. North-West Electric Co. v. Walsh, 20 S. C. R. 33.

Issuing Shares Without Payment.]
—Held, that it was not ultra vires of the directors to take defendant's subscription for stock without at the same time receiving payment of 10 per cent. thereon. Denison v. Lesslie, 3 A. R. 536.

Payment of Costs—Collection of Debts.]

—A bank having executions against a railway company in the hands of the sherif, the secretary of the company, in order to avert a seizure of a quantity of railway iron, signed a letter agreeing that the bank, out of moneys coming to their hands from certain garnishee proceedings taken by the bank against debtors of the company, might retain "a sufficient amount fully to cover all your solicitor's costs, charges, and expenses against you or against you and us, as between attorney and client or otherwise, as well as the costs, charges, and expenses of your bank, of what nature or kind soever, and after the payment of such, in the second place, to hold the surplus, if any, to apply on your executions against us." This letter was signed without any authority from the board of directors of the company, although two members of the board were aware of it, and one of them, the vice-president of the company, authorized it:—Held, that this was not such an act as the officers of the company were authorized in the discharge of their duties to perform; and that, although the bank granted the time asked for, they could not enforce payment of the amounts stipulated for. Hamilton and Port Dover R. W. Co., Gore Bank, 20 Gr. 190.

A reilway company being indebted to a bank, the officers of the company arranged that the bank should proceed to garnish certain debts due the company, the costs of which, as between attorney and client, the railway company was to pay:—Held, that the officers of the company had authority, without a resolution of the board of directors, to enter into such an agreement, and that the same need not be under the corporate seal. Ib.

Payment of Creditors.] — By the bylacs of an incorporated company the board of directors was to consist of three persons, row of whom constituted a quorum. At a meeting, at which two of the directors, C., and G., the plaintiff, were present, one being the company, a resolution was passed that "the company, a resolution was passed that of the company was considered, and the sum of $1,000 each be ordered to be placed to their respective credits in the books of the company was considered, and the sum of $1,000 each be ordered to be placed to their respective credits in the books of the company for services rendered during the year 1895 in addition to their regular salary, and to be charged to their salary account." C., as a matter of fact, had not been appointed editor, or G. advertising solicitor, the object of the resolution being to appropriate all the funds of the company, and to prevent a stockholder, who owned the greater part of the stock, and had made a claim against the company, being paid:—Held, that the resolution could not be gustained, nor could any moneys received under it be retained. Gardner v. Canadian Manufacturing Publishing Co., Limited, 31.0.

Pledge of Assets.]—In a sheriff's interpleader, the Merchants Bank claimed the property in question as security for advances made by them to a certain company incorporated under R. S. O. 1877 c. 150, by virtue of warehouse receipts covering the property, and deposited with them by the said company as security. Under R. S. O. 1877 c. 150, c. 28, "The directors shall have full power in all things to administer the affairs of the company and the second of contract may make an any may, by law, enter into;" and by s.-s. 2 of some description of contract the sanction of a by-law approved of by not less than two-thirds in value of the shareholders, to hypothecate and pledge the real and personal property of the company to secure any sum borrowed, &c. There was no by-law in his case but the board of directors was well aware of the nature and extent of the transaction with the bank and the hypothecation of the goods, and adopted what was done:

-- Held, that the property in the goods passed to the bank, and inasmuch as the company could not have resumed possession thereof without satisfying the bank's lien, neither could the execution creditors, who had no higher rights as to property seized than the original debror:—Held, also, that even if a by-law were, strictly speaking, requisite in such a case, yet where no complaint had been made by the company, or any of its shareholders, because of any irregularity or informality in what was done, as was the case here, an execution creditor could not be allowed to interfere, there being no imputation of fraud or illegality in its broad and culpable sense:—Held, however, upon the evidence in this case, the depositing of the goods in a warehouse, and the raising of money upon the security thereof, seemed to be an important constituent for the successful presecution of the company's business, and to be such a matter as would fall within the competence of the directors to cause to be done through their manager, as was the course of dealing here, Merchants Bank of Canada v, Hancock, 6 O. R. 255.

Purchase of Land — Adoption of Contract.]—A company was formed in England with a limited liability, for the purpose of carrying on business in Oshawa in this Province. The managing director at Oshawa, without authority, contracted for the purchase of some real estate for the use of the company at Oshawa, and signed the contract as "managing director." For convenience, the conveyance was made to the director personally, and he executed a mortgage for the unpaid purchase money, and went into possession and used the property for the purposes of the company. The purchase was immediately communicated by him to the English directors, and they disapproved thereof, but did no act repudiating the purchase: on the contrary, they directed the buildings to be insured:—Held, that this conduct was an adoption of the contract by the directors; that they had power to adopt it, and had the power of binding the company, are company, and that the company were liable to the vendor for the purchase money. Comant v. Miall, 17 Gr. 574.

IV. OFFICERS, AGENTS, AND PROMOTERS.

Agent for Proposed Company.]—The plaintiff sued defendant on an alleged agreement, that in consideration that the plaintiff would make a promissory note payable to the defendant's order for $500, and deliver it to defendant to be negotiated, defendant promised that the plaintiff should at any time before the maturity of the note have the option of subscribing for one share of $500, in a company to be incorporated under the Joint Stock Companies Letters Patent Act, 1874, and called the Aldershott Match Company; and that, if the plaintiff should before such maturity decline to take said share, the said company would take up the note and indemnify the plaintiff against it. The declaration averred that the plaintiff delivered the note to defendant, who negotiated it; that before its maturity the plaintiff delivered the note to defendant, who negotiated it; that before its maturity the plaintiff delivered the neither the defendant nor the company took up the note, and the plaintiff delined to take the share, and so notified defendant, but that neither the defendant nor the company took up the note, and the plaintiff also to pay it. Defendant pleaded, on equitable grounds, that he was one of, the projectors and secretary of said company, and as such before the issue of the letters patent applied to the plaintiff to take a share, which the plaintiff agreed to do on the terms of the following receipt then given by him to defendant :- " Hamilton, 13th April, 1876. Mr. Thomson has given me his note for 8500 for one share in the Aldershott Match Company, which he has the privilege of declining at the expiry of the note; and if so, this company will take up the note. C. Feeley, secretary:" that defendant then gave his note accordingly; that afterwards the company was incorporated; that the defendant was a shareholder and the secretary, and in that capacity only indorsed the note to the company, which accepted it on the terms of the receipt and discounted it; that before its the plaintiff notified the company that he declined to take the share, but afterwards withdrew such notice and paid the note at maturity, and was treated as a shareholder, voted and acted as such at meetings of shareholders; that it was not the intention of either plaintiff or defendant that defendant should be personally bound by the receipt, or in respect of said note or share, but they both intended that the plaintiff should look only to the company in his dealings under the receipt in respect of said share, and defendant was described in the receipt as secretary in order to exempt him from personal liability; and he denied any fraud (which was charged in the second count), and denied that he con-tracted with the plaintiff as alleged:—Held, that the defendant was prima facie personally liable, there being at the time when he signed the receipt no company, and therefore no principals whom he could bind. That part of the plea was proved alleging the intention of the parties to have been that defendant should not be personally bound by the receipt, but that the plaintiff should look only to the company. Semble, that this could form no defence, being in contradiction of the written agreement. But the parties having gone to trial on the plea, and there being a verdict for the plaintiff, the verdict was ordered to be entered for defendant on that branch of the plea, and the plaintiff left to move in arrest of judgment, unless defendant should elect to amend his plea. Suggestions as to a form of plea which might shew a good defence. Thomson v. Feeley, 41 U. C. R. 229.

Agent to Take Investments.]-L. arranged with the Canada Agency Association, an English company investing money in Canada, and having defendant R. as their manager, and defendant H. as one of their local directors, for a loan of money. After paying off a prior mortgage on the lands of L., and the expenses, &c., the manager sent to his order a cheque for the balance of $89.95, signed by R. and H. the defendants. L. having made a claim for a larger amount, brought an action against R. and H. to recover the amount he claimed to be due him :-Held, that defendants were not liable, as they never received any money to the use of the plaintiff, having no control over the money except as manager and director of the Canada Agency Association, and were in no wise acting as in-dividuals on their own behalf, but solely as officers of the company; that the evidence did not establish any privity between the plaintiff and the defendants in respect of the money claimed, and without such privity the action would not lie. Heward v. Logan, 14 C. P.

Appointment of Agent.]—The defendants wishing to introduce an ore, called "blue ore," into Pennsylvania, corresponded with the plaintiff at Pittsburg. Through the plaintiff's intervention an agreement was made between O. & Co. and defendants for the sale of 15,000 tons, to be delivered before the 1st August, 1872, with an option to O. & Co. to order any number of tons, from 10,000 to 30,000, during the five years from the 1st February, 1873, and a formal contract was subsequently executed. On the above sale being effected, C., defendants' managing director, wrote plaintiff that a commission of 15 cents per ton would be paid him on the sale, and that he would make him the following offer for the future:—"I will give you a commission of 10 cents per ton for all ore introduced to any furnace, that is, for the first sale made to any furnace; and a commission of 5 cents per ton for all blue ore for the years 1873, 4, 5, 6, 7, that is, for five years from the 1st January, 1873; and I make you the sole agent for the sale of blue ore for Western Pennsylvania;"—Held, that proof merely that C. was defendants' managing director was not sufficient evidence under 16 Vict. c. 253, ss. 10, 20, of C.'s authority to enter into the contract with plaintiff; but it should have been shewn that his act was it should have been shewn that his act was in accordance with the powers conferred on him:—Held, also that the plaintiff was not an agent within s. 17, so as to require his appointment by by-law. Taylor v. Cobourg. Peterborough, and Marmora Railway and Mining Co., 24 C. P. 200, Appointment of Agent.] - The defendant company was a foreign corporation, whose directors had authority to appoint such whose directors has attended to appear as the business of the corporation might require. By power of attorney under the corporate seal, they appointed a general agent at Toronto, to take charge of, conduct and manage the business of the agency at Toronto, and of its sub-agencies, giving him power to do everything necessary and requisite to all intents and pur poses as fully as the company could do. appointed the plaintiff a sub-agent for a year, and at the end of that and each succeeding year he renewed the appointment for a year. The plaintiff was paid $15 a week and a commission on sales. He was summarily dismissed. Evidence was given for the defence that the corporation were in the habit of ap pointing their agents and sub-agents at will: -Held, that the appointment from year to year was clearly within the authority of the directors, that the general authority was delegated to the general agent, and that the plaintiff had a right to rely upon the authority so Howarth v. Singer Manufacturing Co., 8 A.

Appointment of Officers — Scal.]—A resolution passed by defendants, that the plaintiff be engaged for the society's office as a clerk, "for three months, on trial, at a salary of $890 per annum!"—Held, clearly not to support a count alleging his employment for a year. Held, also, looking at the statutes incorporating defendants, C. S. U. C. c. 53, 37 Vict. c. 59 (D.), the duration and character of plaintiff's employment, and the circumstances of his appointment, as set out in the report, that the contract, so far as executory, must be under the defendants corporate seal. Hughes v. Canada Permanent Loan & Savings Society, 39 U. C. R. 221.

for Municipal Aid Canvasser Railway. |—Held, under 34 Vict. c. 48, the Act incorporating the Ontario and Quebec R. W. Co., and the Railway Act of 1868, that the defendants were empowered to appoint an agent to negotiate for and obtain municipal aid, and that for that purpose a resolution of the board of directors, or an entry or minute in their record of proceedings, would have been sufficient, without the formality of a bylaw or the seal of the company. The plaintiff sued defendants for services performed by him as their agent in obtaining bonuses from the different municipalities through which the defendants' railway was to pass, and the only evidence of his appointment was a letter written by one of the directors, stating that at a meeting of the board he was directed to make arrangements with the plaintiff to work up the bonuses, and requesting him to proceed forthwith. It was shewn also that the president had recognized and adopted his services, and partially paid therefor:—Held, that this was not sufficient proof of the plaintiff's engagement, or of the acceptance of his services by the company; but a new trial was granted without costs, to enable him to supply proper evidence if possible. Wood v. Ontario and Quebec R. W. Co., 24 C. P. 334.

Committee—Pre-existing Indebtedness.]——Held, that a member of a committee is not responsible for the salary of a person employed by the committee (under a joint stock banking charter, before he became a stock-holder in the bank and such member. Mingaye v. Burton, J O. C. P. 69.

Complaint Against Management.]— Bill by shareholder in railway company complaining of managing director's misconduct— Frame of bill—Partics—Demurrer. See Mc-Murray v. Northern R. W. Co., 22 Gr. 476; 8. C., 23 Gr. 134.

Company not Legally Incorporated—Costs of Actions.)—Actions brought in the name of a road company against the present plaintiffs were dismissed with costs, on the ground that the company had never been incorporated according to law. The present actions were brought against four of the corporators of the company, three of them compessing the firm of solicitors who had conducted the former actions on behalf of the supposed company, and all four having expressly authorized the bringing of the former actions, execution therefor against the company having been returned nulla bona:—Held, that, in the absence of malice and want of reasonable and probable cause in bringing the former actions, the present actions were not maintainable against the defendants as curporators or as solicitors bringing actions on behalf of plaintiffs who had no legal existence. Platt v. Waddell, Townsend v. Waddell, 18 O. R. 539.

Contract.]—An agreement was made between defendant and the plaintiff, described as "President of the Fort Burwell Harbour abelia to the Port Burwell Harbour, and company of Port Burwell Harbour," and under the seals of defendant and plaintiff—Held, that the plaintiff could sue in his own name. Saxton v. Ridley, 13 U. C. 18, 522.

Conflicting Claimants to Office.]—The court may interfere by mandatory injunction on an interlocutory application, but the right must be very clear indeed. Where there are conflicting chaimants to the position of president of a company, and one claimant takes forcible possession of the company's premises, the other claimant, at all events when he is at the time the acting president, can bring an action to restrain him in the name of the company, though it be uncertain who is the rightful president. Toronto Brewing and Malting Co. v. Blake, 2 O. R. 173.

Director — Convasor—Remancration.]
—The plaintiff, one of the provisional directors of defendant company, named as such, the converse of defendant company, named as such, the converse of the provisional converse of the con

Director—Solicitor—Right to Costs—Setoff.)—Where a director, who was also president, of a company was appointed by the board of directors and acted as solicitor for the company:—Held. in winding-up proceedings, that he was entitled to profit costs in respect of causes in court conducted by him as solicitor for the company, but not in respect of business done out of court, and was entitled to set off the amount of such costs against the amount of his liability as a shareholder, Cradock v, Piper, I Macn. & G. 664, followed. Re Mimico Seucer Pipe and Brick Manufacturing Co., Pearson's Case, 26 O. R. 289.

Domestic Forum.] — Where an association has a code of laws, as also rules for the government of members, which point out what course a member shall pursue if he finds himself aggrieved, he must exhaust the remedies thus provided before applying to the cours of law for redress; and such rules of the association may require to be more rigidly enforced in the case of a secretary, treasurer, or other officer of the association, than they would be in the case of an ordinary member. Field v. Court Hope of Ancient Order of Foresters, 25 Gr. 467.

Expenses Before Incorporation.]—A proposed corporator in a joint stock company, who, in advance of the incorporation, takes a practical part in the prosecution of the intended business of the company, or who sanctions or ratifies the conduct of affairs by some act, not being a mere subscription to shares, is liable to contribute, with other subscribers to stock in a like position, to a liability properly incurred in carrying out the objects of the projected company, and the proportionate amount of contribution by each depends on his share subscription irrespective of the amount paid on the shares. Sandusky Coal Co. v. Walker, 27 O. R. 677.

Expenses Before Incorporation.]—
The defendant and one H., in order to utilize an engine in which they were interested, arranged to have a steam vessel built, which was to be the property of the company to be formed under the Ontario Joint Stock Act of 1874, with a capital of $30,000, in shares of $100 each. The vessel was built and registered in defendant's name, and several gages given by him upon her. In March, 1876, the plaintiffs, at the solicitation of the defendant and H., and upon their agreement to use the plaintiff's wharf at a wharfage of $300 for the season, agreed to take stock in the projected company, executed a document prepared for intending stockholders, and gave two notes for $250 each, the first of which the plaintiffs paid, but not the second. Some $900 stock was subscribed, and a meeting of intending stockholders held, at which resolutions were passed as to the formation of the company, and appointing trustees to receive a conveyance of the vessel in trust for the company until formed. The company was never formed, and it was admitted that the Ontario Act did not authorize its formation, nor was there ever a conveyance to the trus-The plaintiffs not having been paid the $300, the wharfage for 1876, which was charged against the vessel, sued defendant as the legal owner: — Held, that they were entitled to recover; that their subscription did not constitute them joint owners or co-partners in the vessel, nor could defendant set off the amount of the unpaid stock note, for not had the consideration therefor wholly failed, but it could only be a matter between the plaintiffs and the company, if formed. Sylvester v. McCuaig, 28 C. P. 443.

License to Overflow Land.]—Case for overflowing land of the Cannada Company. The defendant produced a letter to one 8., under whom he claimed, from the plaintiffs' agent, saying that the land would be sold to him for the purpose of erecting a saw mill, on certain specified conditions—two of which were, that the mill should be in operation within twelve months, and that he should furnish the company, or their settlers, with lamber at a reasonable rate:—Held, that this letter could not be construed as a license to the defendant to overflow the plaintiffs' land to any extent necessary for working his mill, without clearly shewing that the probable effect of building the mill and putting up the dam was known to and contemplated by the parties at the time:—Held, also, that the plaintiffs, as a corporation, could not be bound with respect to such an injury as was shewn in this case, by any thing done by their ordinary agents without special authority. Canada Company v. Pettis, 9 U. C. R. 669.

Manager of Club—Keeping Liquor for Sale.]—Section 50 of the Liquor License Act, R. S. O. 1887 c. 194, which forbids the keeping or having in any house, &c., any liquors for the purpose of selling by any person unless duly licensed thereto under the provisions of the Act, does not justify a conviction of the manager of a club incorporated under the Ontario Joint Stock Companies Letters Patent Act who has the charge or control of the liquor merely in his capacity of manager, the act of keeping, &c., being that of the club and not of the manager. Regina v. Charles, 24 O. R. 432, distinguished. Regina v. Slattery, 26 O. R. 148.

Manager—Receipt of Premium.]—By an application for life insurance, the interim receipt and the policy, it was provided that no policy was to be in force until actual payment of the first premium to an authorized agent and the delivery of the necessary receipt signed by the general manager of the company. The general manager, who was paid by commission, made an agreement with an applicant for a policy that work done by the applicant for himself personally would be taken in payment of the first premium, and gave him a receipt for it without, however, paying the company;—Held, that the company was not bound. Tiernan v. People's Life Insurance Company, 26 O. R. 596; 23 A. R. 342.

Medical Examiner—Authority of Agent.]
—The medical staff of the Equitable Life Assurance Society at Montreal consists of a medical referee, a chief medical examiner and two or more alternate medical examiners. In 1888 L. was appointed an alternate examiner in pursuance of a suggestion to the manager by local agents that it was advisable to have a French Canadian on the staff. By his commission L. was entitled to the privilege of such examinations as should be assigned to him by, or required during the absence, disability or unavailability of, the chief examiner. After L. had served for four years it was found that his methods in holding examinations were not acceptable to applicants, and he was requested to resign, which he refused to do, and another French Canadian was appointed as an additional alternate examiner, and most of the applicants thereafter aminer, and most of the applicants thereafter went to the latter. L. then brought an action against the company for damages by loss of the business and injury to his professional reputation by refusal to employ him, claiming that on his appointment the general manager had promised him all the examinations of French Canadian applicants for insurance. He also alleged that he had been induced to insure his own life with the company on the understanding that the examination fees would be more than sufficient to pay the premiums, and he asked for repayment of amounts paid by him for such insurance:—Held, that by the contract made with L. the company were only to send him such cases as they saw fit, and could dismiss him or appoint other examiners at their pleasure; that the manager had no authority to contract with L. for any employment other than that specified in his commission; and that he had no right of action for repayment of his premiums, it being no condition of his employment that he should insure his life, and there being no connection between the contract for insurance and that for employment. Laberge v. Equitable Life Assurance Society, 24 S. C. R. 595.

President—Inspector—Salary.]—An objection was raised to the president of an insurance company acting as such, because he acted as the inspector of the company for which he was paid a salary:—Held, that no weight could be given to it, because three directors formed a quorum of which the president need not be one, and a quorum may have acted without him; and, moreover, for all that appeared it might be that he only received an additional allowance as president while discharging the duties of inspector.

President — Railway Subsidy.]—Where money is granted by the Legislature and its application is prescribed in such a way as to confer a discretion upon the Crown, no trust is imposed enforceable against the Crown by petition of right. The appellant railway company alleged by petition of right that by virtue of 51 & 52 Vict. c. 91, the Lieutenant-Governor in Council was authorized to grant 4,000 acres of land per mile for 30 miles of the Hereford Railway; that by an order-in-council dated 6th August, 1888, the land salleidy was converted into a money subsidy, 5 of said c. 91, 51 & 52 Vict., enacting that "it shall be lawful." &c. to convert; that the company completed the construction of their line of railway, relying upon the said subsidy and order-in-council, and built the milway in accordance with the Act 51 & 52 Vict. c. 91 and the provisions of the Railway Act of Canada, 51 Vict. c. 29, and they claimed to be entitled to the sum of $40,000, latince due on said subsidy. The Crown demarks only, and by exception pleaded into alia, that the money had been paid by dere-in-council to the sub-contractors for work necessary for the construction of the road: that the president had by letter agreed to accept an additional subsidy on an extension of their line of railway to settle difficulties and signed a receipt for the balance of $8,500 due on account of the first subsidy:—Held, that the statute and documents relied on did not create a liability on the part of the Crown to pay the money voted to the appellant company enforceable by petition of right; but assuming it did, the letter and receipt signed by the president of the company did not discharge the Crown from such obligation to pay the subsidy, and payment by the Crown of the sub-contractors' claim out of the subsidy money, without the consent of the company, was a misappropriation of the subsidy. Hereford R. W. Co. v. The Queen, 24 8. C. R. I.

President — Salary,]—The president and vice-president of a company drew for several years, thout proper authority but with the acquisesence of their codirectors, elected by, and closely connected with, the majority of the shareholders, large sums, ostensibly as salaries as general manager and managing director respectively:—Held, that the propriety of the payments could be inquired into at the instance of dissatisfied shareholders, algabance them. Earle v. Burland, 27 A. R. 540.

President—Secret Profit.]—The president of a company cannot, unless with the consent of all the shareholders, make a profit by selling to the company a property which he knows the company requires, and which he buys with that knowledge for the express purpose of selling to it. Earle v. Burland, 27 A. R. 540.

President and Vice-President — Wages, |—Claims for arrears of salary, made by persons occupying the position of president and vice-president of a company, such salary being payable under resolutions duly passed therefor, are valid; and upon the liquidation of the company are payable in priority to the claims of the general body of creditors. Promoters — Fraud and Misrepresentation.]—A suit was brought against a joint stock company, and against four of the shareholders who had been the promote decompany. The bill all properties the defendacts, other than the beautiful the defendacts, other than the beautiful the defendacts, other than the business as partners and had become multiply that they then concocted that the sole object of the proposed company; was to relieve the members of the firm from personal liability for debts incurred in the said business and induce the public to advance money to carry on the business; that application was made to the government of Ontario for a charter, and at the same time a prospectus was issued, which was set out in full in the bill; that such prospectus contained the following paragraphs among others, which the plaintif alleged to be false: 1. The timber limits of the company, inclusive of the recent purchase, consist of 222½ square miles, or 142,400 acres, and are estimated to yield 200 million feet of lumber. 2. The interest of the proprietors of the old company in its assets, estimated at about $14,0000 over liabilities, has been transferred to the new company at $105,000, all taken in paid up stock, and the whole of the proceeds of the preferential stock will be used for the purposes of the new company. 3. Preference stock not to exceed $75,000 will be issued by the company to guarantee eight per cent. yearly thereon to the year 1880, and over that amount the net profits will be divided amongst all the share-holders pro rata. 4. Should the holders of preference stock so desire, the company binds itself to take that stock back during the year 1880 at par, with eight per cent, per annum, on receiving six months' notice in writing. 5. Even with present low prices the company, owing to their superior facilities, will be able to pay a handsome dividend on the ordinary as well as on the preference stock, and when the lumber market improves, as it must soon do, the profits will be correspondingly in-The bill further alleged that the plaintiffs subscribed for stock in the company on the faith of the statements in the prospectus; that the assets of the old company were not transferred to the new in the condition that they were in at the time of issuing the prospectus: that the embarrassed condition of the old company was not made known to the persons taking stock in the new company, nor was the fact of a mortgage on the assets of the old company having been given to the Ontario Bank, after the prospectus was issued but before stock certificates were granted; that the assets of the old company were not that the assets of the old company were not worth $140,000, or any sum over liabilities, but were worthless; and prayed for a rescis-sion of the contract for taking stock, for repayment of the amount of such stock, and for damages against the directors and promoters for misrepresentation. There was evidence to shew that the promoters had reason to believe the prospects of the new company to be good, and that they had honestly valued their assets. On the argument three modes of assets. On the argument three modes of relief were suggested: 1. Rescission of the contract to subscribe for preference stock. 2. Specific performance of the contract to take back the preference stock during the year 1880 at par. 3. Damages against the directors and promoters for misrepresentation. The company having become insolvent the plaintiffs put their case principally on the third ground —Held, affirming 2 O. R. 218, and 11 A. R. 336, that the plaintiffs could claim no relief against the company by way of rescission of the contract, because it appeared that they had acted as shareholders and affirmed their contract as owners of shares after becoming aware of the grounds of misrepresentation: aware of the grounds of misrepresentation. Held, also, as to the action against the defendants other than the company for deceit, that the evidence failed to establish such a case of fraudulent misrepresentation as to entitle plaintiffs to succeed as for deceit:— Held, also, as to the alleged concealment of the mortgage to the Ontario Bank, it having the mortgage to the Ontario Bank, it having been given after the prospectus was issued, it could not have been in the prospectus, and, moreover, that the shareholders were in no moreover, that the shareholders were in moy any damplied thereby, as the new company would have been equally liable for the debt if the mortgage had not been given; and as to the concealment of the embarrassed condition of the old company, the evidence shewed that the old firm did not believe themselves to be insolvent; and in neither case were they liable in an action of this kind. Bondholders — Construction of Act.]—

A statute gave the bondholders of the Cobourg and Peterborough Railway Company an option to convert their bonds into stock, and nay new secret bond stock, and any new secret converted bond stock, and dividends of eight per cent, per antitled to dividends of eight per cent, per antitled to priority to any dividend to the ordinary share holders. By a subsequent Act the company was authorized to unite with another company, and it was declared, that the two companys, and those who should become share holders in the new company in the new company in the deed of union, should constitute the new company — Held, that the union did not estinguish the right of the bondholders to elect. Capley v. Cobourg, Peterborough, and Marmora Railway and Mining Co., 14 Gr. 571.

The Act authorizing the union of two incorporated companies declared, that any deed the companies executed under the Act should be valid to "all intents and purposes in the same manner as if incorporated in the Act:"—Held, that this provision enabled the companies to bargain together in respect of the rights which each had, and to make such arrangements as their union rendered necessary; but did not give them legislative authority over the rights of other persons. Ib.

A statute authorized two companies to unite into one company by either a complete or partial union; and either of joint or separate, or absolute or limited liabilities to third parties. The companies agreed to an absolute union, and made no provision for limiting the liability of the new company in respect of past transactions of the old companies:—Held, that the new company thereby assumed all the liabilities of the old company to third persons. The declaration stated that defendants, by their bond, sealed, &c., become bound to the holder thereof, in the sum of, &c., with interest, &c., to be paid to such holder thereof, on. &c., and the plaintiff became holder thereof. &c., yet such sum with interest had not been paid. It was admitted at the trial that the bald. It was admitted at the place where bonds were not presented at the place where they were made payable; and it was proved that if they had been so presented, defendants had not funds there to meet them:—Held, that there was no variance between the bonds declared on and those produced in the former being stated as payable to holders generally, while the latter were payable only on surrender and at a particular place:—Held, also, that it was not necessary for plaintiff, as a condition precedent to his recovery, to aver and prove presentment at the particular place, and a tender of the surrender of the bonds, or a readiness to surrender them. Loan Company - Debenture Holders-Depositors. |—The company being in liquida-tion under the Dominion Winding-up Act, a claim was made on behalf of holders of the company's debentures that they were entitled to a charge on the assets of the company in priority to depositors. The company was formed on the 19th October 1871, under C. S. U. C. c. 53, by s. 38 of which the right of a society formed under it to borrow money, if society formed under it to borrow money, it authorized by its rules to do so, was recog-nized. By rule 7 of the company, passed under the authority of s. 2 of c. 53 C. S. U. C., the directors were authorized to borrow money for the use and on the assets of the company, to receive money on deposit, and to "loan" or invest such money either on mort-gage on real estate or in any other way they might think best for the interests of the in-stitution:—Held, that the company was in-vested with the power to borrow money for its purposes, and to give security upon its assets for the payment of the money borrowed. Murray v. Scott, 9 App. Cas. 519, followed. And this power to pledge the assets was one And this power to piedge the assets was one which might be delegated to the directors under C. S. U. C. c. 53, s. 5. The debentures upon which the claimants relied were headed "Land Mortgage Debenture," and contained a promise by the president and direc-tors to pay to the person named a certain sum at a particular time and place, with in-terest, and were signed by the president and secretary, under whose signatures were the following words: "The payment of this debenture and the interest thereon is guaranteed by the capital and assets of the company invested in mortgages upon approved real estate in the Dominion of Canada:"—Held, that these instruments created a charge upon the property of the company. Per Rose and MacMahon, JJ., that such charge was upon the capital and assets of the company invested the capital and assets of the company invested in mortgages on approved real estate situate in the Dominion of Canada at the date of the wiseling-up order. Per Meredith, C.J., that the charge was such as entitled the debenture holders to be paid out of the assets of the company in priority to the depositors and other creditors. Lean to Company to Pay Debts.]— Where a corporation having a debt to pay, which it was to their advantage to discharge immediately, raised money upon an accommodation note of an individual, and applied the money to the payment of the debt, promising to protect the note or to repay, relief was given in this court against the corporation upon a breach of the promise. And if the corporation could have been compelled to pay the debt, the person so giving his note will be entitled to stand in the place of the corporation creditor. Burnham v. Peterborough, 8 Gr. 366.

Loan to Enable Borrower to Pay Liabilities to Company, —Held, that the plaintiff was not precluded from recovering money advanced to B. for the liquidation of liabilities by B. to the Niagara Harbour and Dock Co., or from enforcing any security for its repayment, because that company, in such transactions, exceeded the power conferred on it by its charter. Cayley v. McDonnell, S U. C. R. 454.

Money Received under Ultra Vires Contract.—The defendants, a street railway company, entered into an agreement on the 29th December, 1874, before their road was in operation, with the Grand Trunk Railway Co., to carry freight for that company between the town of Sarnia and Point Edward, and in April, 1875, their road being still unfinished, they, in order to fulfil their contract, agreed with the plaintif, a steamboat owner, for the transportation of merchandise by water between these points until their railway should be opened. The plaintiff performed the service, and the defendants received payment from the G. T. Railway Co. therefor. It was objected that the defendants had no power to make the contract with the plaintiff, and that he therefore could not recover; but:—Held, that to the extent to which the defendants had so benefied by the plaintiff's services they were liable to him, and should not be allowed to raise the objection of ultra vires. Clarke v, Sarnia Street R. W. Co., 42 U. C. R. 39.

Money Received under Ultra Vires Contract. —The defendants desiring to raise money drew a bil! and requested the plaintifs to indorse for their accommodation, which the plaintiffs did, and defendants having discounted and failed to meet it, the plaintiffs paid it to the bank:—Held, that assuming that defendants had no power to draw the bill, they were nevertheless liable to the plaintiffs as for money paid for them. Brockeille and Ottawa R. W. Co. v. Canada Central R. W. Co., 41 U. C. R. 431.

Money Received under Ultra Vires Contract.]—A company receiving money on deposit, which is placed to its credit at a benk, is liable for the money so received, though the taking of money by deposit be ultra vires; and if the officers of the company use such money in other ultra vires transactions, that may be a proper matter for the shareholders to charge those officers with but it is not one with which the depositor has anything to do. Fardom v, Ontario Loan and Debenture Co., 22 O. R.

Mortgage to Secure Purchase Money of Chattel.]—An insurance company was by its charter authorized to hold real estate for the immediate accommodation of the company, "or such as shall have been bona fide mortgaged to it by way of security, or conveyed to it in satisfaction of debts previously contracted in the course of its dealings, or purchased at sales upon judgments which shall have been obtained for such debts; and having sold and conveyed a vessel, took from their vendee mortgages on real estate to secure the purchase money :- Held, a transaction within the Act of incorporation, the price of the vessel being a debt existing previously to the execution of the mortgages; and, semble, that under these words of the Act it was not, as with banking institutions, necessary to the validity of such a mortgage that any previous indebtedness should exist. Westn Assurance Co. v. Taylor, 9 Gr. 471. An arrangement with the plaintiff, such as

An arrangement with the plaintiff, such as was customary in carrying out objects like those defined in a company's incorporation Act, and as was conducive to the attainment of those objects, having been duly carried out:
—Held, that the arrangement could not afterwards be declared to have been beyond the powers of the company or its directors, so as to entitle the company to keep for their own use, without compensation to the plaintiff, the whole benefit which the arrangement had afforded the company. Ib.

Mortgage to Secure Purchase Money.]

—Where a company has power to acquire land for the purposes of its incorporation, it has the power to give a mortgage for, and to bind itself by covenant to pay, the purchase money. Where the power to contract exists, a person contracting with the company need not inquire whether the proper formalities of execution by the company have been compiled with in a contract under its corporate seal. Sheppard v. Bonanza Nickel Mining Co., 25 O. R. 305.

Railway Aiding Another Railway.] -The Great Western Railway shareholders resolved in 1857, to advance £150,000 stg., to the Detroit and Milwaukee Railway Company, and again, in 1858, a further sum of £100,000 The first loan was expressly sanctioned by parliament, and they also had parliament-ary authority to use their funds "by way of loan or otherwise, in providing proper connections, and in promoting their traffic with railways in the United States." These two loans were to be expended by the managing and financial directors of the lenders. The latter applied to the plaintiffs, then being the bankers of the Great Western Railway Company, to advance money under these resoluions; all traffic receipts of the Detroit and Milwaukee Company to be deposited with the plaintiffs, and exchange on the Great Western Railway's London board to be given monthly to cover any deficiency. The account was opened by the plaintiffs as "Detroit and Milwaukee Railway account, Great Western Railway," and kept distinct from the Great Western Railway account proper. Large advances were made, and exchange drawn; the business was carried on for two years, and moneys advanced by the G. W. R. Co. to the D. & M. Co., beyond the amount of the two loans, the result being a large balance in favour of the plaintiffs. It was proved that of the two loans only about $700,000 was paid to the plaintiffs by exchange or traffic receipts.

Difficulties arose, defendants insisting that credit was not given to them, but either to the D. & M. Co., or to the individual directors negotiating the arrangement, and the plainiffs sued for the balance overdrawn, amounting to about $1,000,000. At the trial many objections were taken:—that credit was not given to defendants; that they could not be bound except under seal; and that all advances to the foreign company were ultra vires, as the plaintiffs well knew. Leave was reserved to move for a nonsuit, and it was left to the jury to say (among other things) to whom credit was given, who reaped the benefit of the expenditure of this money, and whether the plaintiffs had any notice of the loans being exceeded. The jury found all these points in favour of the plaintiffs:— Held, that the plaintiffs as bankers could under the special circumstances recover, al-though there was no evidence of a debt under seal; that the objection of the advances being ultra vires could not prevail under the peculiar facts of the case; that it was a question of fact for the jury whose credit was actually pledged and to whom credit was given; nedged and o whom create was given; and that there was evidence to support the finding for the plaintiffs. The evidence as to the alleged misre-presentations was conflicting:—Held, reversng 9 O. R. 385, that this was in effect a common law action of deceit, and the misrecommon law action of decert, and the misre-presentations alleged required proof of the clearest kind; and, therefore, that the long delay, the conduct of the plaintiffs, and their dealings with the subject matter disentitled them to relief upon the evidence submitted:---Semble, if the plaintiffs had succeeded, the measure of damages would have been a portion of the profits of the contracts, as repretion of the profits of the contracts, as represented by the defendants, proportioned to the plaintiffs shares of the capital stock of the compans. Per Hagarty, C.J.O., the action was wrong in its framework; it should have been brought in the name of the company, or on behalf of all its shareholders. Per Burton, J.A., the action could not have been maintained by the company upon representations made to the plaintiffs. Beatty v. Necton, 12 A. R. 50; 13 S. C. R. 1.

Fraud and Misrepresentation — Resistant,—The plaintiffs, a company formed for the purpose of colonizing lands in the North-West Territories, represented to define the property of the property of the company of a "compare thoice tract of land" in the said territories, "comprising 2,000,000 acres, for the purpose of settlement, free from the use of intovienting liquors. The defendant, on the faith of these representations, desiring to send his son to a place where he would be precluded from the use of intoxicating liquors, entered into two agreements with the company, agreeing in each "to purchase and pay for $20 acres of land, in the order of choice, from the odd numbered sections of our lands as procured or to be procused from the Dominion," and paid certain instalments thereon. It was proved that the company never had, and could not obtain, the choice compact tract stated, nor any special privileges as to the exclusion of liquors:—If-bil, that these were material misrepresentations; and defendant, having been induced to enter into the agreement thereby, was therefore entitled to have them rescinded, and to recover back the money paid by him. Temperance Colonization Co. v. Fairfield, 16 O. R. 544.

Mining Company—Compensating Explorer, 1—M. was aware of a valuable mining icention on Lake Superior, and was regarded by other explorers in that region as entitled to it. He made known this location to an incorporated mining company, under an agreement that he should be compensated, for the commonication, but the mode of compensation was not determined. The communication lawing proved valuable to the company, it was held that M. was entitled to compensation in the manner usual in such cases. The usual mode was proved to be by receiving a share or partnership interest in the mine when the patent is procured:—Held, that this mode was not ultra vires of the company or the directors. McDonald v. Upper Canada Mining Co., 15 Gr. 179.

Provisional Contract.]—The plaintiffs were the owners of certain boats, docks, &c., and being desirous of giving up their business proposed to sell all their rights in their charter, beants, &c., to a company to be thereafter incorporated as the "Thames River Navigation Co." The proposal was assented to by the defendants and others subscribing to the stock of the new company, and the purchase money was to have been paid out of the funds of the latter when formed. Upon this understanding the vessels were delivered to the defendants on behalf of all parties, and the sum of $3,500 on account of such purchase was paid out of the money paid in by persons subscribing for shares in the new company. Before the completion of repairs necessary to render the boats serviceable, one of them was destroyed by an unexpected flood, in consequence of which, proceedings for the incorporation of the new company were abandoned:—Held, reversing 9 O. R. 754, that the defendants were not liable for the balance of the purchase money, as the circumstances shewed there had never been a completed sale and purchase. The only contract proved was a provisional one to take effect upon the incorporation of a new company, and the delivery which had taken place was not in pursuance of a contract of sale, but simply to enable the repairs upon the vessels to be effected. Themes Navigation Co. (Limited) v. Reid, 13 A. R. 303.

Road Company — Making Rond—Pleaging Tolls.]—Defendants being a joint stock road company under C. S. U. C. c. 49, contracted with the plaintiff to build for them four additional miles, an extension of the road originally contemplated, and to pay him by the tolls to be collected there and on three other miles of the road. This mode of payment was not authorized by the Act (s. 32), but the plaintiff built the road, the defendants accepted it, and levied tolls upon it, and, after handing them over to him for some time, refused to allow him to receive more, or to pay him for the work done:—Held, that they were liable upon the common counts. Thornton v. Sandwich Street Plank Road Co., 25 U. C. R. 591.

Speculative Purchases.]—An incorporated company, by its charter, was authorized to carry on business in the management of real and personal property; to guarantee rents thereof; to collect rents, etc., and purchase of houses, mortgages, stocks and other securities, "and generally to transact every description of commission and agency business, except the business of banking, and the issue of paper money or insurance:"—Held, that this did not confer any power upon the company to discount notes guaranteed by their indorsement; neither had they the right to speculate in the purchase of mortgages or other securities, although they might have been justified in investing any surplus capital or accumulation of profits until the same was required. Walmsley v. Rent Guarantee Co., 29 Gr. 484.

Ultra Vires Contract — Consent Judgment, 1—A company incorporated for definite purposes has no power to pursue objects other than those expressed in its charter or such as are reasonably incidental thereto, nor to exercise their powers in the attainment of authorized objects in a manner not authorized by the charter. The assent of every shareholder makes no difference.—If a company enters into a transaction which is ultra vires and litigation ensues in the course of which a judgment is entered by consent, such judgment is as binding upon the parties as one obtained after a contest and will not be set aside because the transaction was beyond the power of the company. Charlebois v. Delap, 26 S. C. R. (221. See the next case.

Ultra Vires Contract — Consent Judgment.]—Where by contract, ex facie legal and regular, the appellant company purported to incur liability to the respondent for rail-way construction in an amount which was in reality calculated to cover the amount of bonus and of price of issued shares payable by agreement between the respondent and all the shareholders of the company irrespective of either actual or estimated cost of construction:—Held, that the contract was ultra vires of the company. Held, further, that a consent judgment obtained on the contract declaring the respondent's lien on the commany's railway and other property, the question of ultra vires not having been raised either in the pleadings or on the facts stated was of no greater validity Jan the contract. Great Vorth-West Central R. W. Co. v. Charlebois, [1895] A. C. 114.

Wrongdoer Objecting to Frame of Action.]— Defendant being employed by plaintiffs as their locomotive and car superintendent, made use of their materials and men in doing work for a sewing machine manufactory, in which he was a partner, and untruly entered such time and materials as employed in the plaintiffs' service. The plaintiffs having sued him upon the common counts, claiming in their particulars for goods furnished, but not for work and labour—Held, that defendant was precluded by his own misconduct from setting up as a defence that the plaintiffs under their charter could not sue on such a cause of action. Northern R. W. Co. v. Lister, 27 U. C. R. 57.

(b) Seal.

Accepting Benefit—Architect.]—Where work done for a corporation is such as was evidently contemplated by their charfer, and they have accepted and availed themselves of it, they cannot refuse to pay on the ground that there was no contract under seal:—Held, therefore, that the Hamilton and Gore Mechanics' Institute were liable to the plaintiff for services rendered by him as an architect upon a verbal agreement, in preparing plans and superintending the erection of a hall for their accommodation. Clark v. Hamilton and Gore Mechanics' Institute, 12 U. C. R. 178.

Action at Law. — The objection that a corporation cannot be bound unless under the corporate seal, is applicable only to actions at law. Breusster v. Canada Co., 4 Gr. 443.

Appointment of Solicitor.]—Where the directors of a company had power to appoint officers and agents and dismiss them at pleasure:—Held, that their appoinment of a solicitor need not be under the corporate seal, Clarke v. Union Fire Ins. Co., Caston's Case, 10 P. R. 339.

Bank—Guarantec—Accepting Benefit.]—
D, on the suggestion of R, and the Bank of O, that he should purchase certain lumber held by the bank as security for advances made to R., required a guarantee from the bank that the lumber should be satisfactorily culled and any deficiency paid for by the bank. The directors of the bank thereupon resolved to submit the lumber to a culler, and if he reported satisfactorily, to give the guarantee. Their local agent, however, with the approbation of their head manager, without previously employing a culler to report, gave a guarantee in writing, but not under seal. "on behalf of the bank," that the lumber should be satisfactorily culled previously to shipment:—Held, that no seal was required, and if the bank wished to repudiate it they should repay the money paid to them by D, for the lumber. Dobell v. Ontario Bank, 3 O. R. 299: 9 A. R. 484.

Building Engine.]—Assumpsit held not maintainable against defendants for the nonperformance of a parol agreement to build an engine for a steambout. Hamilton v, Niagara Harbour and Bock Co., 6 O. 8, 381.

Building Society—Authority to Sell.]— It is not necessary that the seal of a building society should be affixed to an authority to its agent to sell; the entry in the books of the society is sufficient for that purpose. Ordorne v. Farmers' and Mechanics' Building Society, 5 Gr. 326, Churchwardens. —In an action against churchwardens for the use and occupation of a house rented by the previous churchwardens for the rector:—Held, no objection that there was no contract under the corporate seal of the churchwardens. Maynard v. Gamble, 13 C. P. 56.

Executory Contract—Use and Occupation.]—There is a broad and well marked distinction between contracts executed and contracts executory in the case of incorporated companies whether trading or not, and where a contract is executory a company is not bound unless the contract is made in pursuance of its charter or is under its corporate seal. The defendant company, who had occupied certain premises under a verbal agreement and paid rent for a year, continued in possession after the year and then went out paying rent for the time they were actually in possession:—Held, that as there was no lease under seal, the company were not liable as tenants from year to year but only for use and occupation while actually in possession. Finlay v. Bristol and Exeter R. W. Co., 7 Ex. 469, discussed and followed. Gurland Manufacturing Co. v. Northamberland Paper and Electric Co. (Ltd.), 31 O. II.

Gas Company.]—A special contract for continuing to supply gas will not be binding on the company unless in writing, under the corporate seal. Smith v. London Gas Co., 7 Gr. 112.

Insurance Company — Arbitration.]— Held, on demurrer to a plea setting up the absence of the corporate seal, that a parol agreement entered into by "the duly authorized agents" of an incorporated insurance company, to refer to arbitration the question of the legal liability of said company to bear any portion of the expenses of raising and repairing a vessel insured by them and subsequently lost, was not binding upon the company, as not being a contract relating to the purposes for which the company was incorporated. Calcin v. Provincial Insurance Co., 20 C. P. 267. See the next case.

Insurance Company—Contract to Raise Icssel,—Declaration, that a certain vessel insured in the Provincial Insurance Company was sunk, and that defendant, whe was the agent of the company that the selection account of vent of the company and the selection of the company to the damaged, in consideration than a said assuming to be the selection of the company, to raise the vessel for Sci.100, the question of of the liability to pay said sum to be referred to arbitration, promised the plaintiffs that he was authorized by the company to enter into said contract as their agent, as follows, (the contract was then set out, made between the plaintiffs and the company, and signed by the defendant for the company; that the plaintiffs entered into such contract with defendant for the company; that the plaintiffs entered into such contract with defendant was not authorized by the company to make such contract, and refused to pay the plaintiffs the S3.100, or to refer the question of liability to pay the same to arbitration, by reason whereof the plaintiffs could not enforce the contract against the company, and were put to expense, &c. Plea—that the plaintiffs were unable to enforce the contract, not because defendant was not authorized to provide and, as the plaintiffs well knew, not under the corporate seal of the company;—Held, on denurrer. 1. That there was no assertion in the declaration of defendant being the agent inconsistent with the allegation of his want of authority. 2. That the plea shewed no defence, for if defendant had been authorized as he represented, the company, only the lead of the contract. Calrin v. David-son, 31 U. C. R. 396.

Insurance — Restraining Company from Setting up Defence.]—Held, that the settling up of "the want of a seal" as a defence to an action on an assurance policy which had been treated by all parties as a valid policy was a fraud which a court of equity could not refuse to interfere to prevent, without knoring its functions and its duty to prevent and redress all fraud whenever and in whatever shape it appears; and, therefore, the respondent was entitled to the relief prayed, as founded on the facts alleged in her equiable replication. London Life Assurance Co. v. Weight, 5 S. C. R. 466; 5 A. R. 218; 29 C. P. 221.

Insurance—Mistake.] — The Acts of incorporation of the Sun Mutual and London Insurance Companies, required insurance contracts to be under seal and signed and contresigned as by the Acts directed. The policies in these cases were not under seal, but were signed and countersigned as required, and on the printed forms of policies issued by these companies for some years previously. The attestation clause of the Sun Companies policy acknowledged it to be under seal, while in the London Company it merely professed to be signed, &c. —Held, that under the circumstances, more fully set out in the case, the omission to affix senls must be deemed to be through mutual mistake; and that the plaintiffs were entitled to equitable relief, either by a reformation of the policies by the addition of seals, or by debarring the defendants from setting up such defence. An equitable replication setting up the facts was therefore allowed to be added, and a new trial upon it was refused. Wright v. Sun Mutual Ins. Co., 29 C. P. 221, 5 A. R. 218.

Lease.]—Although a lease by an incorporated company may be void, in consequence of the same having been executed without the corporate seal, still if the lessee enters and holds thereunder he will be liable for all rents reserved thereby during the time he so holds: and where an instrument was so executed by the agent of an incorporated bank, under very large of the season of the companion of the term demised, the buildings on the essees entered and occupied, but, but the lessees entered and occupied, but, but the lessees entered and occupied, but, but the lessees were destroyed by fire, and the lessee entered and occupied, but, buildings on the lessee entered and occupied, but, but the lessees entered and occupied, but buildings of the lessees entered and occupied, but the buildings of the lessees entered and occupied. Finlayson v. Selliott, 21 Gr. 325. Finlayson v.

In such a case the property had been conveved by the owner to the bank to secure an indebtedness, which had been fully paid by the proceeds of the insurance effected on the buildings, and the bank continued to hold the property simply as trustee for their assignor, and refused to take, or suffer the assignor to take, any proceedings in their name against their lessees to enforce payment of the rent. The court, under the circumstances, made a decree for payment of the amount in favour of the party beneficially entitled. Ib.

Mining Company — Commission.] — M., being aware of a valuable mining location, made it known to defendants, under an agreement that he should be compensated. The mode of compensation was not determined, but the usual mode was found to be by receiving a share or partnership interest in the mine. The agreement was not under the corporate seal. The company received $5,500 for their claim to the property by way of compromise, from a director who had availed himself of the plaintiff's communication to the directors to obtain secretly a grant of the property to himself personally:—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to share this sum and that the want of a seal was no defence, McDonald v. Epper Canada Mining Co., 15 Gr. 179; affirmed on rehearing.

Parol Contract.]—Review of the cases as to the liability of a corporation by parel, both at law and in equity. Davis v. Canada Farmers Mutual Insurance Co., 39 U. C. R. 452.

Parol Contract.] — City corporation — Work done in improving a road on parol contract—Liability. See Gibson v. City of Ottawa, 42 U. C. R. 172.

Performance. |—Contracts not under the corporate seal, made with trading companies, relating to purposes for which they are incorporated, if partly performed, and of such a nature as would induce the court to decree specific performance if made between ordinary individuals will be enforced against them. Ontario and Western Lumber Co., v. Citisens.

Telephone and Electric Co., 16 C. L. T. Occ.

Performance - Adoption.] - A corporation is liable on an executed contract for the performance of work within the purposes for which it was created, which work it has adopted and of which it has received the benefit though the contract was not executed under its corporate seal, and this applies to municipal as well as other corporations. Ber-nardin v. Municipality of North Dufferin, 19 S. C. R. 581.

Railway-Agreement to Attach Debts.] -A railway company being indebted to a bank, the officers of the company arranged that the bank should proceed to garnish certain debts due to the company, the costs of which as between attorney and client the railway company was to pay:—Held, that the officers of the company had authority, without a resolution of the board of directors, to enter into such an agreement, and that the same need not be under the corporate seal. Hamilton and Port Dover R. W. Co. v. Gore Bank, 20 Gr. 190.

of Another Railway — Construction of Another Road. — The defendants being unable to finish their railway, and the plaintiffs desiring to have it in operation as a feeder to their line, a correspondence was had between the two companies, and resolutions passed by the plaintiffs, and communicated to defendants, authorizing an arrangement by which the plaintiffs should work the road for a certain period and share the profits with defendants. No formal agreement was made, and the terms were not definitely settled, but the plainterms were not definitely sected, but the plain-tiffs went on and completed defendants line, and ran it for some time at a loss. They then sued defendants for the money expended above the receipts:—Held, not recoverable. for the agreement relied upon, being special in its terms, was invalid for want of a corporate seal. Great Western R. W. Co. v. Preston and Berlin R. W. Co., 17 U. C. R. 477.

Semble, that defendants, under the circumstances, should have been held to have accepted the work done, if there were not the other objection to the plaintiffs' recovery. Ib.

Semble, also, that a valid agreement in the terms of the resolution would not have created a partnership between the parties. 1b.

Railway-Construction of Road.] - The managing director of a railway company en-tered into a contract in his own name, ad-ing, "acting on behalf of the company," with a person for the construction of the road, and for keeping it in repair. Under this the contractor completed the greater portion, when the company stopped the works, alleging that they had not been aware of the terms of the contract, which they asserted were most extravagant in respect of the prices agreed to be paid:—Held, that the contract did not require the common seal to render it binding: that the company must be presumed to have had notice of the terms and stipula-tions of the contract: and that the company were bound to pay for the work at the prices agreed upon. An enquiry was directed as to the damage sustained by the contractor by reason of the stopping of the works, and the loss of the contract. Whitehead v. Buffulo and Lake Huron R. W. Co., 7 Gr. 351. On appeal, the decree made in accordance with the above indgrammt was varied as far ve to have had notice of the terms and stipula-with the above judgment was varied so far as it allowed damages to the contractor for not being allowed to complete the contract. S. C., 8 Gr. 157.

Railway-Crossings.] - The plaintiff declared in assumpsit, setting out that he had brought two actions against defendants, the first for not giving him a crossing with cattle-guards over their road as agreed, and the guards over their road as agreed, and the second, for an alleged injury occasioned by them: that while both actions were pending the plaintiff and defendants, by their said attorney, then duly authorized in such behalf, made an agreement in writing, setting it out of which the terms were, that the plaintiff was to receive £175 for all claims against the company, the company to pay costs, and to make the cattle-pass and complete the crossing by the 16th July then next; the suits to be withdrawn; the agreement to be carried out by the Messrs. M. (plaintiff's attorneys) on plaintiff's account, and M. R. on behalf of the company, as soon as the court was over the company, as soon as the court was over (this was signed by M. R. for the company); that in consideration of the premises, and that the plaintiff at defendants' request would perform said agreement on his part, defendants promised to perform on their parts: that confiding in such promise, he withdrew that confiding in such promise, he withdrew the actions, and did all that was to be done on his part, but that, although defendants in part performance paid £75 and costs, yet they did not make the cattle-pass nor complete the did not make the cattle-pass nor complete the crossing:—Held, on demurrer to the declaration, that it must be assumed from the averments that M. R. had been authorized under the defendants' corporate seal to make the agreement; but that no promise of the corporation, such as was declared upon, could be implied therefrom: that the proper construction of the agreement was, that it required a proper legal covenant by the company to bind them to the terms which they had authorized him to accept, and that they had authorized him to accept, and that they could not be charged as liable through him on a parol agreement to do that which they could only have bound themselves under seal to perform. Doran v. Great Western R. W. Co., perform. Doran 14 U. C. R. 403.

Rallway—Fencing Line.]—To an action on the common counts brought by T. and W. M. against the C. C. R. Co. to recover money claimed to be due for fencing the line of C. C. railway, the C. C. R. Co. pleaded never indebted, and payment. The agreement under which the fencing was made is as follows:—"Memo. of fencing between Muskrat river east to Renfrew. T. and W. M. to construct seme next spring for C. C. R. Co., to be equal to 5 boards 6 inches wide, and posts 7 and 8 feet apart, for $1.25 per rod. company to furnish cars for lumber. T. & W. M., A. B. F." F. controlled nine-tenths of the stock, and publicly appeared to be and was understood to be, and acted as managing director or manager of the company, although be tor or manager of the company, although he was at one time contractor for the building of the whole road. T. and W. M. built the fence and the C. C. R. Co. have had the benefit thereof ever since. The jury, in answer to certain questions submitted by the Judge, found that T. and W. M., when they contract-ed, considered they were contracting with the ed, considered they were contracting with the company through F., and that there was no evidence that the company repudiated the contract till the action was brought, and that the payments were made as money which the company owed, not money which they were paying to be charged to F., and a general verdict was found for T. and W. M. for $12.

218.51:—Held, affirming 7 A. R. 646, that it was properly left to the jury to decide whether the work performed, of which the C. C. R. Co. received the benefit, was contracted for by the company through the instrumentality of F., or whether they adopted and ratified the contract, and that the verdict could not be set aside on the ground of being against the weight of evidence. 2. That although the contract entered into by F. for the company was not under seal, the action was maintainable. Canada Central R. W. Co. v. Marray, 8 S. C. R. 313. Special leave to appeal to Her Majesty in Council refused, 8 App. Cas. 574.

Railway-Purchase of Material.]-The plaintiff, acting under a written contract for the delivery of 12 toise of stone for the piers of a bridge which defendants were building over a river on their line of railway, deliv-ered the amount, and was paid by defendants therefor, as well as for an additional toise and a half, and some sand subsequently ordered by the inspector. The inspector then ordered the plaintiff to deliver some more stone and sand, stating that he did not know what quantity of stone was required, but telling plaintiff to go on drawing until told to stop, and the plaintiff then delivered some 2614 toise of stone and a quantity of sand, defendants having furnished the men and teams to assist the plaintiff in doing so. tenns to assist the paint in the property of the conserving about 8th May, that defendants had stopped work on the bridge, the plaintiff ceased delivering. About the 12th May, he was paid for what had been delivered up to that time, an account being made up by some one acting for defendants, and the bire of teams and men furnished by them being deducted in it from the price allowed, which was diluted in it from the price allowed, which was $2 a toise more than that in the written con-tract. On the work being renewed, and on being ordered by the inspector to continue delicering, he delivered 25 further toise and some more sund. The defendants, however, re-fused to pay for the latter delivery, contend-ing that they were not liable:—Held, I. ing that they were not liable:—Held, I, that there was sufficient evidence of authority on the part of the inspector to bind the defendants, and of their having adopted his acts: 2. that the contract was not required to be in writing to satisfy the Statue of Fraults; because the stone and any in openion by the best described in the state of sand now in question had been delivered under the order to go on drawing until told to stop, and part of the stone delivered under that and part of the stone delivered under that order had been accepted and paid for: 3. that the contract did not require to be under the corporate seal, it being one directly connected in its nature with the purposes of defendant company. O'Brien v. Credit Valley R. W. Co., 25 C. P. 275.

Retainer.]—Solicitors who began an action in the name of a public school board and an individual as plaintiffs were retained for the board by a special committee appointed by resolution of the board, not under the corporate east; the purposes of the appointment, as stated on the face of the resolution, embraced the action that the commencement of any action respecting the matters referred to and the employment of counsel, the subject of the action being one of such matters:—Held, that this was not proper authority from the school board to the solitions to bring the action, and the defendants had the right to have the name of the board as plaintiffs struck out. Town of Bar-board as plaintiffs struck out. Town of Barrie v. Weaymouth, 15 P. R. 95, followed. Barric Public School Board v. Town of Barric, 19 P. R. 33.

Substituted Contract.]—Where a corporation had contracted under seal with the plaintiff for certain work, which was afterwards departed from by their orders, with the plaintiff's consent:—Held, that assumpsit would lie for the value of the work done under the substituted contract. Davis v. Grand River Nacyation Co., 6 O. 8, 59.

Trading Company—Purchase.]—A trading company entered into a written contract, but not under its corporate seal, for the purchase of a quantity of barrels:—Held, the contract being executory, that defendants, though a trading corporation, were not liable for refusing to accept barrels not then manufactured, nor for refusing to allow the plaintiff to continue to manufacture barrels according to the agreement. Wingate v. Enniskillen Oil Refining Co., 14 C. P. 379.

Trading Company — Purchase.]—The defendants, by resolution of the board of directors, authorized their manager to purchase from the plaintiff, on certain terms of credit, a machine necessary for the carrying on of the defendants' business. The defendants manager bought the machine, but on different terms, the plaintiff having no knowledge of the board's resolution; and the defendants received and used the machine:—Held, that the purchase was within the scope of the manager's authority, and that the defendants were liable for the price of the machine. Thompson v. Brantford Electric and Operating Company (Liwited), 25 A. R. 340.

Trading Company—Sale of Products.]

—The plaintiffs were a company Incorporated under C. S. C. c. 63, and 24 Vict. c. 19, for the manufacture and sale of cheese, &c. On the 10th August, 1878, a written agreement was entered into between one C., the plaintiffs secretary and salesman, and one M., on behalf, as was stated, of the plaintiffs and defendants respectively, which was signed by C. and M., for the sale of the whole of the plaintiffs' July cheese, as also of their August, September, and October cheese, at prices named:—Held, that the plaintiffs being a trading corporation, and the contract one specially relating to the objects and purposes of the company, it was binding upon them, though not under seal. Albert Cheese Co. v. Leeming, 31 C. P. 272.

Trading Company—Work.]—To a declaration alleging that the plaintiffs entered into an agreement with the defendants to perform certain stone work, which they partly performed, and averring as a breach that the defendants had prevented them from carrying out and completing the work, whereby, &c., the defendants pleaded the plaintiffs were an association incorporated under R. S. O. 1877 c. 158, and that the agreement was not under the plaintiffs being a trading corporation, enough was not shewn to make the absence of a seal fatal to the validity of the agreement. Ontario Co-operative Stone Cutters' Association v. Clarke, 31 C. P. 280.

Water Company.] — Assumpsit held maintainable against defendants for the non-performance of a special parol agreement with plaintiff for the supply of water to the Toronto baths. Blue v. Gas and Water Co., 6 U. C. R. 174.

4. Delegation.

Railway—Lease. |—A railway or canal company cannot lease the concern or delegate its powers for a specified term without the sanction of the legislature. This principle was held applicable to a railway company which had no power of taking land compulsorily, but had other special powers and privileges under its Act of incorporation. Hinckley v. Gidlerslevee, 19 Gr. 212.

Railway-Lease.]-The Canada Southern Railway Company, by its charter and amendments thereto, has authority to enter into an agreement with any other railway company with respect to traffic arrangements or the use and working of the railway or any part there-of, and by the Dominion Railway Act of 1879 it is authorized to enter into traffic arrange ments and agreements for the management and working of its railway with any other railway company, in Canada or elsewhere, for a period of twenty-one years :-Held, revers a period of twenty-one years:—Head, revers-ing the decision below, sub nom. Wealleans v. Canada Southern R. W. Co., 21 A. R. 297, that authority to enter into an arrangement for the "use and working" or "management and working" of its road conferred upon the company a larger right than that of making a forwarding agreement or of conferring running powers; that the company could lawfully lease a portion of its road to a foreign company and transfer to the latter all its rights and privileges in respect to such portion, and the foreign company in such case would be protected from liability for injury to property occurring without negligence in its use of the road so lensed, to the same extent as the Canada Southern Railway Company is itself protected. Michigan Central R. W. Co. v. Wealleans, 24 S. C. R. 309.

5. Expulsion of Members.

Domestic Forum.] — Members of charitable and provident societies should not be allowed to litigate their grievances in courts of law until they have exhausted every possible means of redress afforded by the internal regulations of their societies. Therefore, where the plaintiff being expelled from the Ancient Order of Foresters, filed his bill for restitution thereto on the ground of illegal expulsion, but it appeared that the rules of the society provided certain internal tribunals to which he might have appealed for redress, but had not, this court refused to interfere. Essery v. Court Pride of the Dominion, 2 O. R, 500.

Jurisdiction of Court—Special Meeting—Notice of Purpose. —Where a member of a college council complains that he has been improperly expelled from the council, the court of chancery, under the Administration of Justice Act, has jurisdiction in a proper case to decree relief, that Act giving jurisdiction to the court of chancery "in all matters which would be cognizable in a court of law." although the remedy in such a case in a court of law would be sought by mandamus. Marsh v. Huron College, 27 Gr. 605. One of the by-laws of an incorporated college provided, amongst other things, that spe-cial meetings of the council might be convened as the president should deem necessary or upon the requisition of any three members of the council, the notices of which special meetings should specify the business to be brought forward, and that no business should be introduced at any special meeting in addition to that specified in the notice. The plaintiff, as one of the members of the council. having acted in such a manner as in the opinion of the president merited his dismissal or expulsion from the body, a meeting for that purpose was ordered to be convened by the president, and notices were accordingly sent to all the members of the council stating that a meeting would be held "for special business" but omitting to say what such special business was. At the meeting so called, at which the plaintiff was present, a resolution was unanimously adopted, by the other members of the council present, expelling the plaintiff from the council:—Held, that the notice calling such meeting was invalid, because it did not specify the business intended to be brought before the council, and a decree was pro-nounced declaring that such resolution of expulsion had been illegally and improperly passed, and that the plaintiff continued to be and was a member of the council. But the court being of opinion that the plaintiff had wittingly and designedly left the members of the council under a false impression, as to his conduct in regard to the matters which had been the subject of inquiry before the council-if he did not designedly produce such impression-refused the plaintiff the costs of the proceedings. Ib.

The fact that the plaintiff had attended a meeting which had been illegally called, and had entered upon a defence before the council, did not prevent his afterwards filing a bill impeaching the proceedings as irregular and invalid. Ib.

The wrong (if any) complained of being

The wrong (if any) complained of being a personal wrong on the part of the members of the council who voted for the resolution:—Quere, if costs were adjudged to the plaintiff, whether they should not be paid by those members. Ib.

The reasons for which alone members of a

The reasons for which alone members of a municipal body may be disfranchised, do not apply to the members of the governing body of an educational institution whether incorporated or not. Ib.

Quere, what would form a sufficient ground for the expulsion of a member of such a body as the council of Huron college. Ib.

Restraint of Trade—Illegality—Militia Act.)—The plaintiff, a musician and a member of the Active Militia of Canada and of the band of a militia regiment, became of the plaintiff of the militia regiment, became of the plaintiff of the militia regiment, became of the militia regiment, became of the militian of the militan of t ciation, the following: "No member of this association shall play on any engage-ment with any person who is playing an instrument, unless such person can shew the card of this association in good standing. This by-law shall not apply to oratorio or symphony concerts, bands doing military duty, or amateurs, * * ". After the passing of this by-law, the plaintiff and the other the regimental band to which he belonged played at a concert, in uni-form, under the direction of the bandmaster, and with the permission of the commandant and officers of the regiment. For so playing (some of the band not being members of the association) a fine was imposed on the plaintiff by the executive committee of the defendants, and, in consequence of its not being paid within the time prescribed, he was expelled from membership: - Held, that at the time the plaintiff joined the association, it was a legal society, its objects being of a friendly and provident nature; but the amendment was unreasonable and in restraint of trade, and for that reason, and also because contrary to the Queen's Army Regulations and the Militia Act of Canada, was illegal, and the plaintiff's expulsion was invalid, and he was entitled to an injunction and damages. Righy v. Connol, 14 Ch. D. 482; Mineral Water Bottle, &c., Society v. Booth, 36 Ch. D. 465; Swaine v. Wilson, 24 Q. B. D. 252; and Chamberlain's Wharf, Limited v. Smith, [1900] 2 Ch. 695, considered. Parker v. To-Musical Protective Association, 32 O.

Special Meeting—Notice of Purpose.]-By one of the by-laws of the defendants' as sociation they were empowered to expel any for refusing to submit a question arising between members to arbitration, but it was provided that such expulsion should take place only after the case should have been submitted to a meeting of the association, due notice having first been given to the parties that such a meeting would be held. & Co., members of the association, had a claim against the plaintiff, who was also a member, consisting of three items: $1.06 for balance of purchase money of grain; $397.41 for freight on same grain which they had paid under protest; and a sum for costs incurred in an action brought by them to recover back the freight so paid. The plaintiff paid the first item, but disputed the balance of the account, whereupon W. & Co. applied for and obtained a resolution by defendants that there should be an arbitration, to which the plaintiff submitted, and he afterwards admitted his liability for the amount claimed for freight, and offered his note at twelve months for it, which W. & Co, declined. Upon a submission, however, being tendered him covering the three items, he refused to sign it as the the three items, he retused to sign it as the first two items were no longer in dispute. In consequence of his refusal, the defendants expelled him at a meeting, called "to receive a report from the committee regarding the con-duct of a member:"—Held, affirming 27 Gr., 23, that the plaintiff was improperly expelled. and was entitled to be reinstated in his rights of membership. Cannon v. Toronto Corn Ex-change, 5 A. R. 268.

Stock Exchange—Insorcency.]—The defendants' Act of incorporation provided for the appointment of a committee of management to manage the affairs, etc., of the corporation, and, under a by-law, the committee were to consider and report on all offences under the by-laws, if submitted to them, and to call a special meeting of the corporation to pass judgment thereon. Power was also given by the Act of incorporation to expel members as by the by-laws should be deter-mined. By by-law 13 all complaints to the committee or corporation were to be in writing. By by-law 21 any member complained against, might have a hearing before the corporation, and if the complaint were proved, a vote should be taken by ballot, by a twothirds majority of those present, and voting being required, first, for the forfeiture of the seat, and then if lost for suspension. By bylaw 24 a member becoming bankrupt or insolvent, should not be entitled to take his seat as a member of the corporation, or be present at any meeting thereof; and such seat should revert to the corporation to be sold by them, if the member be not readmitted within six if the member be not readmitted within six months from the date of insolvency, and the proceeds applied as directed therein. In November, 1883, without any complaint in writing or notice to the plaintiff or hearing before the corporation, but on the chairman neutror the corporation, but on the chairman and secretary, whom the committee had in-structed to make inquiries, reporting that plaintiff was offering to compromise with his creditors, the secretary, by order of the com-mittee, wrote to plaintiff, calling his atten-tion to by-law 24; and on the same day the list of mombers was alread by such list of members was altered by striking out the plaintiff's name. Nothing further was the plaintiff's name. done until March following, when in consequence of a correspondence between the plaintiff's solicitors and the defendants, those members who had previously reported on plaintiff's condition, made a written complaint to the president complaining of the plaintiff having been insolvent in October and November, and of his disqualification thereby under by-law 24, and asking for an investigation by the corporation, which was had, and by an open vote of 15 to 6, the complaint was held be proved, the two complainants voting with the majority, No steps were taken to declare the seat forfeited or for suspension: -Held, that insolvency under by-law 24, dia not refer to a condition of insolvency, but to a definite act of insolvency under a bankrupt or insolvent Act, e.g., by an assignment or the issue of a writ of attachment; and there-fore plaintiff did not come within its terms; but apart from this the defendants' proceedings were clearly illegal and void, for in November there was no complaint that gave the committee jurisdiction to interfere; and as the defendants' affairs were to be managed by the committee, they were responsible for the committee's acts; while the complaint made in March was not a bona fide one, but merely an attempt to support the previous ilmerely an attempt to support the previous li-legal act; and also the vote should have been by ballot:—Held, also, that though de-fendants' proceedings were abortive to de-prive plaintiff of his seat, the erasure of his name was an act most detrimental to the plaintiff, as it prevented him from carrying on his business as a broker; and he was therefore entitled to recover damages for the loss he had sustained thereby. Remarks as to the impropriety of the two complainants acting as judges on their own complaint; and if deemed present there would not be the redeemed present there would not be the re-quisite two-thirds majority, but otherwise if deemed neither present nor voting. Temple v. Toronto Stock Exchange, 8 O. R. 705.

Stock Exchange—Sale of Seat.]—F. & L., brokers in partnership, were both members of the Toronto stock exchange, being each the owner of one seat at the board. They assigned to the plaintiff for the general benefit of creditors in December, 1884. ronto stock exchange by their by-laws provided that in case of a member becoming insolvent and not procuring a release from his creditors within a named period, the exchange should have power to realize the seats by sale, and the proceeds in such case were to be applied, first, in payment of fines and dues to the exchange; secondly, in payment of claims arising out of stock exchange transof claims arising out of stock exchange trans-actions of creditors, being members of the exchange; and thirdly, the balance, if any, to be paid to the insolvent, or his legal re-presentative. The seats of F. & L. were sold under the by-laws of the exchange and the proceeds remained in the hands of the ex-Certain members of the Toronto change. stock exchange claiming to be creditors of F. & L. prior to their insolvency, for debts arising out of stock exchange transactions, filed claims under the by-laws prior to the sale of the seats. The plaintiff, on the other hand, claimed to be entitled to the seats and to the moneys arising from their sale under the assignment to him for the benefit of creditors. All parties concurred in the sale of the seats, subject to their respective rights. This action was brought by the plaintiff, as assignee for the benefit of creditors of F. & L., against the Toronto stock exchange for payment to him of the money realized from the sale of the seats:—Held, 1. that it was competent for the Toronto stock exchange to pass the for the Toronto stock exchange to pass the by-laws in question giving the preference to the claims of the exchange, and to claims of members of the exchange for debts arising out of stock exchange transactions, 2. That the plaintiff was the legal representative of the insolvents and entitled to the payment to him of the balance of the moneys arising from the sale of the said seats after payment of fines and fees due to the exchange and claims of creditors, members of the exchange, arising out of stock exchange transactions. 3. That as the by-laws of the exchange did not provide any means for ascertaining or deciding a contest as to what deductions might properly be made from the proceeds of sale of the said seats that it was proper to refer this matter for inquiry to the master. Clarkson v. Toronto Stock Exchange, 13 O. R. 213.

Ultra Vires Attempt to Expel—Damages.)—The plaintiff being a member and a vice-president of the Commercial Travellers' Association, incorporated by 37 Vict. 6. 96 (D.), was charged with using abusive language towards the president and other members, and with improper conduct at a meeting of the directors. A committee of seven was appointed, of whom the plaintiff chose three, to investigate those charges, and four of the committee made a report finding the charges proved. This report was adopted by the association, and the directors afterwards passed a resolution expelling the plaintiff. The plaintiff appealed to the next general monthly meeting, which decided to let the appeal drop, and to sustain the action of the directors; but at a subsequent general meeting the resolution of expulsion was rescinded. The railway companies had been notified by the defendants of the plaintiff removal, by which he was compelled to pay higher fares than if he had been a member. The plaintiff published a paper purporting to be on behalf of the association, in which the whole matter was discussed in an address from himself, and very offensive and violent language was used towards the president and other members; and the directors, in reference to this, passed a resolution repudiating the publication as being on behalf of the association, and censuring the plaintiff in strong language for its appearance. The plaintiff having sued the association for the expulsion, and for the lihel contained in the resolution:—Held, that the plaintiff could not recover; that the expulsion by the directors, without having themselves tried the matter, and without notice to the plaintiff, was informal and void; that the plaintiff was informal and void; that the plaintiff therefore was not expelled, as alleged, so that there was no cause of action therefor; that any loss sustained was the loss of his employers, not his own; and that the alleged libel was privileged, Cutheter v. Commercial Travellers' Association of Canada, 39 U. C. R. 578.

6. Holding Land.

Agreement to Sell. |- The plaintiffs, a loan company, who, by the terms of their charter, were bound "to sell any real estate acquired in satisfaction of any debt within five years after it shall have fallen to them, otherwise it shall revert to the previous owner, or his heirs or assigns," acquired the equity of redemption in certain land from a mortgagor by deed, in which was contained a provision against the merger of the legal and equitable estates. By agreement made within the five years the plaintiffs sold to a purchaser, on whose default they resumed possession of the property. In an action for specific per-formance against a subsequent purchaser who objected to the title on the ground, among others, that the plaintiffs had not sold the land within five years from its acquisition: —Held, that the form of conveyancing by which the plaintiffs acquired the land did not give them greater rights of retention than if they had foreclosed, but :- Held, that any bona fide agreement to sell was sufficient to prevent a forfeiture where the sale was not carried out through the default of the purchaser:—Held, also, that it was unnecessary to procure a release from the former purchaser whose contract and the determination thereof should, as a matter of conveyancing, be recited in the deed from the plaintiffs to defendant. London and Canadian Loan and Agency Co. v. Graham, 16 O. R. 329.

Expiration of Charter.]—Where a corporation, constituted under C. S. C. c. 63, and 29 Vict. c. 21, had purchased lands, and, without having disposed thereof, allowed the period named in the declaration of the shareholders for the continuance of the company to expire, it was—Held, that the corporators ceased to have any interest in the lands, and could not maintain any suit in respect thereof; and that the lands had reverted to the grantors. Lindsay Petroleum Co. v. Pardee, 22 Gr. 18.

Forfeiture—Crown.]—A conveyance of lands to a corporation not empowered by statute to hold lands is voidable only and not void under the Statutes of Mortmain, and the lands can be forfeited by the Crown only, McHaraid v. Hughes, 16 O. R. 570.

Where a corporation is empowered by statute to hold lands for a definite period, without any provision as to reverter, and holds beyond the period, only the Crown can take advantage of the breach, and it is not a constant of the control of a company that the defence to an action of ejectment that the lands were acquired by the plaintiff from the corporation after the period fixed by the Semble, the Dominion parliament has power to enact that a license from the Crown power to enact that a ficeless from the Crown shall not be necessary to enable corporations to hold lands within the Dominion; and a Dominion Act enabling a Quebec corporation to hold lands in Ontario would operate as a license. Ib.

VI. PROCEEDINGS AGAINST AND BY COM-PANIES.

Account of Dealings.] - The court of count of Deatings. — The court of chancery will grant a decree for an account of the dealings of an incorporated trading company, at the instance of a shareholder company, at the instance of a snarenofder therein, although there is no allegation that the company is insolvent. Phillips v. Royal Niagara Hotel Co., 25 Gr. 358.

Acting President — Use of Company Name. — Where there are conflicting claimants to the position of president of a company, and one takes forcible possession of the company's premises, the other claimant, at all events when he is at the time the acting president, can bring an action to restrain him in the name of the company, though it be un-certain who is the rightful president, To-routo Brewing and Malting Co. v. Blake, 2 O. R. 173.

Alternative Claim.]-The plaintiff being in doubt as to which company was liable, there having been a separate contract with each, joined both as defendants:—Held, that the plaintiff had a right to do so. See Harvey v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 7 A. R. 715.

Answer—Scal.] — A corporation cannot file an answer without scal, except by con-sent. Gildersleeve v. Wolf Island Railway and Canal Co., 3 Ch. Ch. 358. Where a stay of proceedings was asked to where a stay of proceedings was asked to enable defendants to apply at law for a man-damus to compel the head of the corporation to affix the corporate seal, but it was not shewn that the majority of the shareholders approved of the answer, the application was refused with costs. Ib.

Assault. |- The plaintiff during his initiation as a member of the defendant lodge, in the presence of the principal officers and a number of members, constituting a full and perfect meeting, was injured through the rough usage of some of the members. It rough usage of some of the members. It appeared that this and other proceedings were taken with the knowledge of all those who were present, and that somewhat similar pro-ceedings had happened on the occasion of other initiations, and that they were allowed and not checked:—Held, that they must be taken to have been done with the consent of the corporate body, and that the defendants were liable in damages for the injuries sustained. Kinver v. Phanix Lodge, I. O. O. F., 7 O. R. 377.

Attachment.]—A debt due by a corpora-tion having its head office in England cannot be attached by service of the attaching order upon an agent of the corporation in Upper Canada. Bank of British North America v. Laughrey, 2 C. L. J. 44.

Bank—Double Liability.] — The trustees of the Bank of Upper Canada were held necessary parties to a bill by creditors to enforce the double liability of shareholders. Brooke v. Bank of Upper Canada, 17 Gr. 301.

Bill Pro Confesso.] — See Counter v. Commercial Bank, 4 Gr. 230; Cameron v. Upper Canada Navigation Co., 4 C. L. J. 77.

Certiorari.]-A suit brought by an in-corporated company will be removed, if it be shewn that difficult questions of law will arise as to the powers conferred by their Act of incorporation. Cataraqui Cemetery Co. v. Burrowes, 3 L. J. 47.

Conflicting Rights.]-An interlocutory injunction having been granted to restrain defendants, who were carrying on business in partnership as an electric light company under license from a municipal corporation, from running their lines in such a way as to interfere with the safe and efficient working of the business of the plaintiffs, an incor-porated telephone company, also licensees of the corporation, under authority granted two years previously to the defendants' license:— Held, that, although the circumstance that the plaintiffs were in possession of the ground, and had their poles erected about two years before the defendants put up their poles, did not give them the exclusive possession or right to use the sides of the road on which they had placed their poles, yet, their possession being earlier than that of the defendants, the defendants had not the right to do any act the defendants had not the right to do any act interfering with or to the injury of the plain-tiffs' rights. Held, also, that independently of the provisions of R. S. O. 1877 c. 157, ss. 59 and 70, as extended to electric light com-panies by 45 Vict. c. 19, s. 3 (O.), the plain-tiffs were entitled to relief on the general ground upon which protection and relief in cases of this kind are granted. Quere, whether defendants were liable to indictment. Bell Telephone Co. v. Belleville Electric Light Co., 12 O. R. 571.

Criminal Liability-Defamation-Production of Documents-Indictment.]-A person is protected against answering any question, not only that has a direct tendency to criminate him, but that forms one step tocriminate him, but that forms one step to-wards doing so; the person, however, or, in the case of a corporation, an officer, must pledge his oath to his belief that such would or might be the effect of his answer, and it must appear that such belief is likely to be well founded. The statute, R. S. O. 1887 c, 61, s. 5, has merely embodied the existing law as to the protection of a witness against answering questions tending to criminate, though including the case of a party examined as a witness or for the purpose of discovery. In regard to affidavits of documents the same privilege exists as in regard to questions put to a witness or party. The proposition that a corporation is not liable to an indictment for libel is at least so doubtful that it would for fibel is at least so doubtful that it would not be proper to compel a newspaper pub-lishing corporation to make production of documents on oath which might tend to subject them to a criminal prosecution. Pharmaceutical Society v. London and Provincial Supply Association, 5 App. Cas. 857, specially referred to. Legislation suggested, similar to 32 & 33 Vict. c. 24 (Imp.), to afford an easy means of proving by whom a newspaper is published. DIrry v. World Newspaper Co. of Toronto, 17 P. R. 387.

Criminal Liability—Lord's Day Act.]—A company incorporated for the purpose of operating street cars does not come within the Lord's Day Act, R. S. O. 1887 c. 203, s. I. Judgment below, 27 O. R. 49, affirmed. Attorney-General v. Hamilton Street Railway Company, 24 A. R. 170.

Criminal Liability.] — A justice of the peace cannot compel a corporation to appear before him nor can he bind them over to appear and answer to an indictment, and he has no jurisdiction to him over the prosecutor or person who intends to present an indictment against them. Re Chapman v. City of London, 19 O. R. 33.

Debentures.—A bill being filed by the holder of debenures, issued by the defendants and payable to bearer, to enforce payment of the debentures, the company by answer objected that the person to whom the debentures were issued was a necessary party to the suit, but did not name the person:—Held, that the company must be presumed to know who the person was: that there was no presumption that the plaintiff knew him; and that, the person not being named in the answer, the objection could not be insisted on at the hearing. Woodside v. Toronto Street R. W. Co., 14 Gr. 409.

Deceit—Misrepresentations Inducing Purchase of Stock.]—An action for deceit will lie against a corporation, Moore v. Ontario Investment Association, 16 O. R. 269.

Demurrer to a statement of claim for damages against a company, wherein it was alleged that the plaintiff was induced by fraudulent statements in the annual reports, and in letters written to him by the president, to purchase stock practically from the company, which stock was valueless, overruled with costs. Ib.

Semble, that if the plaintiff had been induced to buy the stock from a private holder by the false representations aforesaid, the corporation would not have been liable, but only the individual officers; but that if the vendor of the shares was privy to the representations, the plaintiff could also recover against him. Ib.

Decit — Misropresentation Inducing Purchase of Stock—Rescission.]—In an action by a shareholder of an investment association to have it declared that his subscription for shares had been obtained by fraud and misropresentation, and that it was not binding upon him, and for other relief, it appeared that in 1882 the said association had amalgamated with a loan society, and under the terms of the amalgamation the shareholders in the latter became entitled, on payment of a premium of seventeen per cent., to an equivalent number of shares of the former. It was thus the plaintiff became entitled to his shares in the association, having previously been a shareholder in, and manager of, the loan society; and he was an assenting party to the amalgamation, which he now attacked as ultra vires, and brought about by misrepresentation and fraud. But it was proved that there were many material misrepresentations, falsely and fraudulently made, in a certain report of the association, dated December 31st, 1888, which had been an important factor in bringing about the assent to the amalgamation by the society, and in inducing the plaintiff to subscribe for the shares in the association, and that the plaintiff had not become aware of their falsity until shortly before bringing this action. After the amalgamation the association borrowed large sums of money upon debentures, &c., on the faith of the apparently existing state of affairs, but it was not shewn that the association was in-solvent, or on the eve of insolvency:—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to a rescission of the contract made by his subscription for stock in the association:—Held, also, that the fact of the plaintiff having sold some of his shares would not prevent rescission as to the remainder of them. Nelles v. Ontario In-vestment Association, 17 O. R. 129.

Evidence—Notice.]—A corporation aggregate is not bound to appear at the trial as witnesses under a notice served on their attorney under 16 Vict. c. 19, s. 2. Dunneich School Trustees v, McBeath, 4 C. P. 228.

Examination.]—See as to Examination of Officers of, and Discovery by, Companies: EVIDENCE—JUDGMENT DEBTOR, False Imprisonment.]—A corporation may be liable for false imprisonment under an order of its agent acting within the scope of his authority. Lyden v. McGee, 16 O. B. 105.

Fictitious Incorporation — Election of Remedies.]—When a limited liability company has been regularly formed in accordance with the Ontario Companies Act, for the purpose of taking over and carrying on the business of a trader who is insolvent, the conveyance of the assets of the latter to the company, though ft may be open to attack on the ground that it is fraudulent and void as against creditors under the statute of Elizabeth or the Assignments and Preferences Act, cannot be set aside at the instance of his creditors on the principle of the company being merely his alias or agent. Salomon V. Salomon, [1897] A. C. 22, applied. A creditor cannot take the benefit of the consideration for a conveyance and at the same time attack the conveyance as fraudulent, and therefore where creditors seized shares in a company allotted to their debtor in consideration of the conveyance by him of his assets to the company it was held that they could not attack the conveyance, Wood v. Reesor, 22 A. R. 57, applied. Judgment below, 28 O. R. 497, reversed. Ricelle v. Reid, 26 A. R. 54.

Forfeiture of Charter—Estoppel.]—In an action against a river improvement company for repayment of tolls alleged to have been unlawfully collected, it was alleged that the dams, slides, &c., for which tolls were claimed, were not placed on the properties mentioned in the letters patent of the company; that the company did not comply with the statutory requirement that the works should be completed within two years from the date of incorporation, whereby the corporate powers were forfeited; that false returns were made to the commissioner of Crown lands upon which the schedule of tolls was fixed; that the company by its works and improvements obstructed navigable waters contrary to the provisions of the Timber Slide Companies Act, and could not exact toll in respect of such works. By a consent judgment spect of such works. By a consent judgment in a former action between the same parties it had been agreed that a valuator should be appointed by the commissioner of Crown lands, whose report was to be accepted in place of that provided for by the Timber Slide place of that provided for by the Timber Slide Companies Act, and to be acted upon by the commissioner in fixing the schedule of tolls: —Hold, that the above grounds of impeach-ment were covered by the consent judgment and were res judicata. Held, further, that the plaintiffs having treated the company as a corporation, using the works and paying the tolls fixed by the commissioner, and having in the present action sued the company as a corperation, were precluded from impugning its legal existence by claiming that its corporate powers were forfeited. By R. S. O. 1887 (10), s. 54, it was provided that if a company such as this did not complete its works within two years from the date of incorporation in two years from the date of incorporation it should forfeit all its corporate and other powers. "unless further time is granted by the county or counties, district or districts, in or adjoining which the work is situate, or by the commissioner of public works." Semble, the non-completion of the work within two years would not, ipso facto, for-feit the charter, but only afford grounds for proceedings by the attorney-general to have a forfeiture declared. Another ground of ob-jection to the imposition of tells was that the commissioner, in acting on the report of the valuator appointed under the consent judg-ment, erroneously based the schedule of tolls upon the report as to expenditure instead of as to actual value, and the statement of claim asked that the schedule be set aside and a scale of tolls fixed: — Held, that under the statute the schedule could only be allowed or varied by the commissioner and the court could not interfere, especially as no applica-tion for relief had been made to the com-missioner. Hardy Lumber Company v. Pick-ced River Improvement Company, 29 S. C. R.

Goods Sold.]—For goods supplied to an inchoate company. See Seiflert v. Irving, 15 O. R. 173.

Information by the Attorney-General.]—See Casgrain v. Atlantic and North-West R. W. Co., [1895] A. C. 282.

Libel.]—The defendant published of the directors of the plaintiffs, an incorporated building society, in a newspaper, a notice stating, amongst other matters, that "certain persons representing themselves to be directors of the society had been self-appointed by the most despicable, foul and fraudulent means, and in consequence, all business transacted by them   is wholly and entirely contrary to rules and regulations and law:"—Held, that the paragraph was capable of the meaning attributed to it, namely, that the business of the society was being illegally transacted, and as such it was defamatory of the plaintiffs, Oucen Sound Building and Savings Society V. Meir, 24 O. R. 199.

Libel.] — An action will lie at the suit of an incorporated trading company to recover damages for a libel calculated to injure their reputation in the way of their business. South Hetton Coal Co. v. North Eastern News Association, [1894] I Q. B. 133, followed. Journal Printing Co. v. Mac-Lean, 25 O. R. 509, approved. Journal Printing Co. v. MacLean, 23 A. R. 324.

List of Shareholders—Duplicate—Penalty,—A list of shareholders transmitted to the provincial secretary contained the name of a person as holding a certain amount of stock in a joint stock company, while in the list posted up in the head office of the company the shareholder's name was inadvertently deleted:—Held, that the lists were not duplicates within the meaning of R. S. O. 1897 c. 191, s. 79, the Ontario Companies Act, and that the company were liable to a penalty under the Act. Circumstances considered in moderating the amount of penalty. Towner v. Hiswatha Gold Mining and Milling Company of Ontario, 30 O. R. 547.

Proof of Seal.]—Where a witness stated that he had good opportunities, which he described, of observing and knowing the seal of a corporation, and that he believed the seal to be their seal, both from the impression itself and from the signature of the party attached to it, with which he was acquainted:
—Held, sufficient to go to a jury to authenticate the seal. Doe d. King's College v. Kennedy, 5 U. C. R. 57f.

Proof of Seal.]—The seal of a corporation having been proved by satisfactory legal evidence:—Held, that the production of a document within the powers of the corporation, with the seal attached, is sufficient prima facie evidence of its proper execution, Woodkilt v. Sullivan, 14 C. P. 265; Fell v. South, 24 U. C. R. 196.

Proof of Seal.]—Some of the parties excenting a deel were corporate bodies, and the witnessing clauseways expressed, "In witness was expressed, "In witness was a parties hereto have hereman of their hands and seals," &c., and the seals were all simple wafer seals:—Held, sufficient, in the absence of evidence shewing these not to be the proper corporate seals. Ontario Salt Co. v. Merchants' Salt Co., 18 Gr. 551.

See, also, Hamilton v. Dennis, 12 Gr. 325.

Purchase of Share to Qualify.]—Purchase of one share to enable plaintiff to sue—Locus standi. See Jones v. Imperial Bank of Canada, 23 Gr. 262.

Realizing Assets—Foreign Proceedings.]
—The holder of bonds of a joint stock company (limited), after instituting proceedings in chancery in England, for the sale of the partnership property, which was situated in Canada, and after appointment of a receiver in England of the estate in England and Canada, filed a bill in this court for the like purpose, and this court appointed the agent of the receiver receiver here; after which it appeared that the company went into liquidation, the liquidator being the same person as had been appointed receiver in England. The plaintif, after an amendment of his bill stating these proceedings, moved for a decree in the terms of the prayer of the bill; but the court refused to make such a decree until it was shewn what the position of matters was in England, and the steps about to be taken there, so as to avoid any conflict between the two courts, and mould the order here to give the appropriate relief, without interfering with the steps which were being taken in England for the same object. Louth v. Western of Canada Oil Lands and Works Co., 22 Gr. 557.

Relators.]—Parties who for many years had the chief use of a canal, and had always resisted payment of tolls demanded by the lessee, were held to have such an interest as entitled them to maintain a bill to which the attorney-general was defendant, to have the lease declared void. Hinckley v. Gildersleeve, 19 Gr. 212.

Restraining Payment of Dividends.] —Where a registered shareholder of a com-pany, finding the annual reports of the company misleading, applies after notice for a writ of injunction to restrain the company from paying a dividend, and upon such application the company do not deny even generally the statements and charges contained in the plaintiff's affidavit and petition, there is sufficient probable cause for the issue of such writ, and consequently the defendant, who upon the merits has succeeded in getting the injunction dissolved, has no right of action for damages resulting from the issue of the injunction. Montreal Street Railway Co. v. Ritchie, 16 S. C. R. 622.

Shareholders Joining as Plaintiffs.] Where certain shareholders in a company joined with the company as plaintiffs, as a precautionary measure merely in case it should transpire that their co-plaintiffs, the company, were not entitled or unwilling to sue, the court refused to allow a demurrer for want of equity, as the objection was purely of a formal nature. City Light and Heating Co. of London v. Macfic, 28 Gr. 363. A demurrer to a bill filed by shareholders

A denurrer to a bill lifed by surfamentaria of an incorporated company, on behalf of themselves and all other shareholders except the defendants, in which the company were joined as co-plaintiffs, attacking a transaction whereby all the shareholders including some of the those whom the plaintiffs assumed to represent, received shares in the transaction sought to be impeached, was allowed. Ib.

Trespass to Property - Nova Scotia School Act.]—See Trustees of School Section v. Cameron, 2 S. C. R. 690.

Withdrawing from Litigation — Improper Conduct of Majority, — A corporation has the same right as an individual to withdraw its name from litigation to which it has been made a party plaintiff, but of which it does not approve. International Wrecking Co., Vaurphy, 12 P. R. 423.

The company itself is the proper plaintiff in actions for injury to the corporate property.

actions for injury to the corporate property, and such an action by shareholders alone, shewing no reason why the company has not instituted the proceedings, cannot be sustain-

But where the complaint was that a majority of the shareholders had obtained posses sion of the company's name and the control of its affairs, and were using it improperly for their own benefit, and causing injury to the company's property:—Held, that an action could be sustained in the name of one or more others, on behalf of themselves and all others, except the defendants, against the company and the majority of the shareholdVII. SHARES.

1. Allotment and Subscription.

Agent's Subscription.] - A bona fide subscription for stock in a corporate company by one person in his own name, but really as trustee and agent for another who had re-quested such stock to be subscribed for, is valid. Davidson v. Grange, 4 Gr. 377.

Agent's Subscription.]—In addition to fifty shares personally subscribed by the de-fendants O. and S., upon which they were held liable, the plaintiffs claimed that they were holders, respectively, of seventy-five and sixty shares, for which they had not sub-scribed:—Held, on the evidence, set out in the report, that O. was not such holder, but that S. was, and was therefore liable there-on. Union Fire Ins. Co. v. O'Gara, Union Fire Ins. Co. v. Shoolbred, 4 O. R. 359.

Authority to Secretary to Subscribe.] — Defendant had taken shares in a road company, for which he subscribed his a road company, for which he subscribed his name, and the secretary called to solicit a further subscription. Defendant told him he would take another £100, and the secretary afterwards, in defendant's absence, put down his name for these shares:—Held, not sufficient to charge defendant. Ingersoil and Thamesford Gravel Road Co. v. McCarthy, 10 C. R. 162.

10 The C. R. 162.

11 The C. R. 162 is the shares should be in writing; but, semble, that a verbal authority would be binding. Ib.

Company Subscribing.] - The holding of shares by one trading corporation in another trading corporation is not ultra vires. Canada Life Assurance Co. v. Peel General Manufacturing Co., 25 Gr. 477.

Conditional Agreement.]—The plain-tiff, suing as assignee of an appeal bond given by the defendants to G. & M. on an appeal, which was dismissed, by S. and the N. R. H. company from a judgment recovered by G. & M., claimed the amount of the judgment with costs and interest, less a sum realized by the sheriff on G. & M.'s fi. fa. goods by the sale to the plaintiff of a mill and fixtures erected by the N. R. H. Co., on Crown lands, which the company occupied under a letter of license from the commissioner of Crown lands. The defendants were shareholders in the company, and after the sheriff's sale they and the plaintiff agreed to take steps to reorganize the company, the plaintiff to accept shares in satisfaction of his claim. This agreement, which the plaintiff had refused to carry out, was relied on as a defence to this action. At the trial the learned Judge held that the agreement was too vague for specific performance, and was therefore no defence; and being of opinion that nothing passed by the sheriff's sale to the plaintiff, he gave judgment for the whole amount of the original judgment of G. & M. with costs and interest, against the wish of the plaintiff, who claimed only the reduced amount. The defendants moved against the judgment respecting the agreement, and a divisional court of two Judges, while agreeing that it was too vague for specific performance, differed as to its affording a defence to the action. The plaintiff also moved to reduce his judgment by deducting the amount of his bid at the sheriff's sale; but that order, by reason of the Judges disagreeing, was not granted:—Held, that the agreement was only to accept shares in case the company was reorganized, and such agreement afforded no defence to this action; and that the judgment could properly be varied by entering it for the reduced amount. Brundage v. Howard, 13 A. R. 337.

Conditional Agreement.] — Where a conditional agreement to take shares in a company is broken the shareholder is freed from liability on such shares. But where the agreement is collateral the shareholder is libble on such shares, but has a right of action for indemnity or dumages against such company. Clarke v. Enion Fire Ins. Co., Casion's Case, 10 P. R. 359.

Conditional Subscription—Payment in foods—Acceptance of Stock.]— Defendants subscribed under seal for certain shares in the capital stock of the plaintif company, promising and agreeing with each other and with the plaintiffs to pay the full amount of the shares as and when payable—Held, that the evidence, set out in the report, shewed only a collateral agreement or representation by the president of the provisional board that a subscription conditional on agoods, and not a subscription conditional on agoods, and not a subscription conditional on agoods, and not condition made verbally, it could not have varied the unqualified subscription under seal, or bound the company. The defendants after such subscription paid ten per cent, on the stock being advised, as they alleged, by the plaintiffs that it was their best course to get rid of the stock by a system of the payment:—Held, clearly an irrevocable adoption of the stock, Kingston Street Railway v. Foster, 44 U. C. R. 552.

Formal Acceptance — Admissiona,] — Shares had been assigned in the company's books by the managing director in his own anne, as turney for another, as tury, shows and as attorney for another, as tury, shows and as attorney for another, as tury, shows and defendant, who did not sign the usual format defendant, who did not sign the usual format descriptions are also fitted to the signature of the president, vice-president, and secretary of the company was sent to him, extrary of the company was sent to him, extrary of the company was sent to him, extra the twenty shares; and defendant had, in a bill filed against a third party for fraudulently inducing him to purchase the shares, for which he had paid $500, admitted that he had paid $500 and the signal acts were required to be done on the part of the defendant to constitute him a share-holder he could be directed to perform them. Howe y Mackar, $0, R. 417.

Issue at a Discount.]—Held, that the action of the directors in issuing shares at less than their nominal value was ultra vires, McIntyre v. McCraken, 1 A. R. 1. See S. C., 1 S. C. R. 479.

New Stock—Allotment by Sharcholders— Right of Directors to Allot.]—Where a bylow is passed at the annual general meeting of a joint stock company providing for the allotment of certain new stock by the shareholders, the directors have no power to pass a by-law directing its repeal and providing for the allotment by themselves. Stephenson v. Vokes, 27 O. R. 691.

Notice of Allotment-Conditional Subscription.]—The plaintiff, a creditor of a rail-way company, sued the defendant, as a share-holder therein, for unpaid stock. The deholder therein, for unpaid stock. The de-fendant had signed the stock-book which was headed with an agreement by the subscribers to become stockholders for the amount set opposite their respective names, and upon allotment by the company "of my or our said respective shares," they covenanted to allotment by the company "of my or our said respective shares," they covenanted to pay the company ten per cent. of the amount of said shares and all further calls. A resolution was subsequently passed by the company instructing their secretary to issue allotment certificates to each share-holder for the shares held by him. The secremonter for the shares near by him. The secre-tary accordingly prepared such certificates, the one for the defendant representing that the company "in accordance with your appli-cation for fifty shares," &c., "have allotted you shares amounting to $5,000." These certificates were not sent to the shareholders, but were handed to the company's brokers for delivery to them. The brokers published a derivery to them. The brokers published a notice in a daily paper that these certificates were lying at their office, but did not send written notices to the subscribers. The de-fendant never called for or received his certificate of allotment and never paid the ten per cent. He swore that he signed upon a verbel agreement with one L., a promoter and a provisional director of the company, that he and another should receive the contract for building the road, which was never awarded to them; and that he never had any notice of the allotment having been made to him. The learned Judge at the trial was unable to say whether the defendant received actual notice of allotment, but found that the company sent notices to him of calls; and that his name was published as a shareholder in a newspaper to which he was a subscriber. only evidence of the notices being sent to the defendant was the general statement of the secretary, that he directed notices to be sent ten months after the allotment, to those shareholders likely to pay, that their calls were due:—Held, that the defendant was not liable as the evidence was not sufficient to prove notice of allotment to him :-Held, also, that if he had received notice of allotment, fact that the contract was not awarded, as promised, would have formed no defence, as L. had no power to bind the company by annexing such an agreement to his subscription. Nasmith v. Manning, 5 A. R. 126, 5 S. C. R. 417.

Preferential Stock.] — The defendants, a company incorporated under the Ontario Joint Stock Companies Letters Patent Act, R. S. O. 1877 c. 150, as amended by 41 Vict. c. S. s. 16, with a capital stock of $300,000, in shares of $1,000 each, acting under s. 17a of the Act, which authorized the issue of any part of the capital stock as preference shares, passed a by-inw in 1877 for the issue of $75,000 as such preference shares, which were to have preference and priority as respects dividends and otherwise as therein declared, namely: "1. The company guarantees eight per cent, yearly to the extent of the preference stock, up to the year 1880, and over that amount (eight per cent.) the net dividends will be divided among all the share-holders pro rata. 2. Should the holders of preference bonds so desire, the company binds itself to take the stock back during the year 1880, at par, with interest at eight per cent, per annum, on receiving six months' notice in writing, &c." The plaintiff subscribed for and was allotted five shares amounting to $5,000, which he paid up, but contending that the by-law was ultra vires by reason of the above conditions, and the issue of shares therefore void, brought an action to recover back the money paid there-for: Held, that the first condition of the by-law was not ultra vires, as its proper con-struction was, not that the interest was to be paid at all events, and so possibly out of capital, but only if there were profits out of which it could be paid; but that the second condition was ultra vires, for that the Act neither expressly nor impliedly authorized the company to accept a surrender or cancel the shares, repaying the amount thereof :- Held, however, that the plaintiff could not recover, for notwithstanding one or both of the conditions were invalid, the shares themselves were valid, there being authority to issue pre-ference shares, and the plaintiff having subscribed for preference shares, and having got them, he became a shareholder of the c pany. Long v. Guelph Lumber Co., 31 C. P.

Substitution of Applicant—Calls—Setoff.]—Defendants were an incorporated com-pany, the capital of which was $30,000, in 100 shares of $300 each, ninety of which had been subscribed for, and paid up in full by duly made calls thereon. Subsequently the defendants employed the plaintiff to take charge of their business, and he was appointed president, at a salary of $1,200. He subscribed for seven shares of the unallotted stock, debited himself with the amount thereof, $2,100, in the company's books, and afterwards paid this sum. Afterwards, desiring to obtain control of the company, he arranged with four of the stockholders for the transfer to him of their stock, but one of them, M., to enable him to remain a director, was to, and he did, subscribe for the three remaining shares unallotted. Subsequently the plaining snares (manotten). Subsequently the phan-tiff wished to withdraw from this arrange-ment, and the parties agreed to cancel it; but M, was to be relieved of the three shares, and M.'s name was accordingly crased, and the plaintiff's inserted as subscriber for these shares, the substitution being made either by plaintiff himself or by the book-keeper by his direction. It was also arranged between the plaintiff and the other directors, that this stock should be entered in the stock book as stock should be entered in the stock book as paid up in full, but the plaintiff was to be debited with the $900, to be paid out of his salary as president. Accordingly the plain-tiff, with his knowledge and assent, was so debited, and from time to time, as his salary became payable, it was set off against the debt, and a balance afterwards struck in the books on this basis. There was no by-law regulating calls or transfers of stock, and no calls were made on the plaintiff for either amounts subscribed by him, and no transfer from M. to plaintiff, except in the manner stated:—Held, that no transfer was necessary, as the plaintiff's subscription must be held to be an original one, nor were any calls required, for the plaintiff by his conduct had impliedly agreed that none need be made, and both he and the company were estopped from denying his own-ership of the shares. The plaintiff having company were estopped from denying its own-ership of the shares. The plaintiff having sued defendants for his salary:—Held, that defendants were entitled to set off the amount due on this stock. Held, also, that they were entitled to have judgment in their favour for the excess of the set-off over the plaintiff's claim, and that for such purpose no special prayer or conclusion in their plea of set-off was necessary. Smart v. Bowmanville Machine and Implement Co., 25 C. P. 503.

2. Calls.

Blank Subscription — Receipt of Dividends, I—lield, that the evidence in this case shewed that the appellant never entered into a contract to take fifty shares, that the receipt given for a dividend of ten per cent, on the amount actually paid (montant versé), was not an admission of his liability for the larger amount, and he therefore was not estopped from shewing that he was never in fact holder of fifty shares in the capital stock of the company, Coté v. Stadacona Ins. Co., 6 S. C. K. 1933.

Capital Not Subscribed — Allotment Not Made. — Defendant subscribed for shares in plaintiff company, incorporated under 27 & 28 Vict. c. 23, and bound himself to pay as required by the board. Somewhat over half the capital stock was thus subscribed:— Held, no answer to plaintiffs' call on defendant, that there had been no allotment of shares, and defendant was not therefore a shareholder. Loke Superior Navigation Co.

shareholder. Lake Superior Navigation Co. v. Morrison, 22 C. P. 217.

The statute provided for the issue of letters patent on half the capital being subscribed, though no express provision was made as to when the company should commence business; but the plaintiffs had commenced business with defendant's full knowledge, and he was in fact elected and acted as a director, and never resigned his position as such:—Held, that he could not set up as a defence that all the stock must be subscribed before calls could be made; and that the directors were warranted by the Act in commencing business, one-half the stock being subscribed, and in making the necessary calls therefor.

Charter Members.]—Persons named in the charter of a company as shareholders are liable as such for calls which may be afterwards made upon the stock stated in the charter to be held by them, and no further act of the directors in allotting such stock or giving them notice of allotment is necessary. In re London Speaker Printing Co., 16 A. R. 508, followed. In re Haggert Bros. Manufacturing Co., Parker and Runions' Case, 19 A. R. 582.

Creditor's Right to Have Calls Made.]—Where a trading company, incorporated by statute, became insolvent:—Held, that one of the partners, being also a judgment creditor of the company, was entitled to a decree compelling the directors to make calls upon the stock of subscribers, notwithstanding a clause in the statute declaring the shares of defaulters should be forfeited, the forfeiture being cumulative to all other remedies to which a creditor was entitled. Harris v. Dry Dock Co., 7 Gr. 450.

Delay in Incorporation—Minute as to Forfeiture.]—Actions for calls under 1 Will. IV. c. 12, incorporating the plaintiffs, against the defendant as one of the stockholders:—Held, that the said Act was not obsolete for nonuser; that the clauses of the said Act requiring the books of subscription to be opened within two months was only directory; that the subscription books subsequently opened within two months was only directory; that the subscription books subsequently opened might be considered as in connection with those previously opened, and that all the proceedings from the beginning might be taken together; that the omission in the new books of the name of H. one of the original petitioners for the Act, the being dead) did not render the proceedings of the company invalid, nor was it fatal to the plaintiffs; that the sanction for the opening of the new subscription books of the two surviving petitioners to parliament for the Act of incorporation was sufficient; that the names of the petitioners in the said Act named need not necessarily be signed to the new subscription books; and that defendant was not discharged from his liability by a minute made at a meeting of the directors, and entered in their minute book, declaring that the names of all stockholders who were in arrear should be erased from the subscription stock book of the company. Marnour Foundry Co. v. Murney, 1 C. P. 29.

Evidence.]—Under the circumstances set out in the report:—Held, that secondary evidence of the contents of the minute book of the company, shewing the making of certain calls, was improperly rejected. Ross v. Machar, 8.0. R. 447.

Former Member.]—Assumpsit for calls on shares. Plea, that defendant was not when action brought, nor is, the holder of said shares:—Held, bad, for by 10 & 11 Vict. c. 68, s. 13. incorporating defendants, a person ceasing to be stockholder after the call was made would still be liable. Montreal Mining Company v. Cuthbertson, 9 U. C. R. 78.

Fraud Inducing Subscription.] — A plea that defendant became holder of the shares by subscription, and was induced to become so by the fraud of the company, and that he has received no benefit from, and has repudiated the shares:—Held, good, on demurrer, Provincial Ins. Co. v. Brown, Provincial to. Co. v. Denroche, 9 C. P. 286.

Illegal Discount.]—Where shares in the capital stock of a joint stock company have been illegally issued below par the holder of the shares is not thereby relieved from liability for ealls for the unnaid balances of their par value. Judgment below, 11 Man. L. R. 629. reversed. North-West Electric Co. v. Walsh, 29 S. C. R. 33.

Inconsistent Agreement.]—Where certain shareholders of the G. L. Company sought to restrain a call on stock, on the ground that it was being made in contravention of the terms of a certain unwritten agreement alleged to have been entered into between all the promoters, when the G. L. Company was formed:—Held, that evidence of such agreement was inadmissible, since it was contradictory of the written agreement entered into by the plaintiffs when subscribing for their shares, viz., to take stock and pay the calls when duly made. Christopher v. Noxon, 4 O. R. 672.

Informalities — Partiality — Excluding Vote.]—Where a by-law making a call on stock was confirmed at a general meeting of shareholders, purporting to be the annual meeting, but not held on the proper day for such annual meeting, as prescribed by the by-laws of the company:—Held, that one who, as a director, had seconded a resolution of the directorate that the meeting should be held on the day it was held on, was estopped from objecting to the calls on this ground, and so, therefore, were all those who were co-plaintiffs with him in an action to restrain the said with the call of the call of this with him in an action to restrain the said call. Christopher v. Nozon, 4 O. R. 672. Where shareholders have assisted in making and approved of calls, they cannot afterwards object that the calls were improperly made. Ib.

Where a call is made upon all stockholders without discrimination, or partiality, the court will never interfere to determine whether it was necessary, or not. Ib.

Semble, however, that if calls were made in such a way as to favour one set of stockholders, and impose an unequal burden upon others, an equity might, perhaps, be found for interference. 1b. Held, that, under R. S. O. 1877 c. 150, ss. 37, 41, a shareholder, who is in arrear for unpaid calls, is absolutely debarred from voting at a shareholders' meeting; and in any subsequent action by him to restrain a call, the by-law for which was ratified at such a meeting, on the ground that his vote was wrongfully excluded, the above objection can be taken advantage of by the company, though that was not the ground assigned at the time for excluding the vote. 1b.

Instalments—Time—Resolutions—Partiality—Interest.]—The plaintiffs by their Act of incorporation were authorized to call in the stock by instalments as the directors should appoint, subject to a proviso that "he called for or become expected ten or set than thirty days after the called in the set of the called for every district where stock may be held: "—Held, per Sprage, C.J.O., and Hagarty, C. J., that the times fixed for the payment of instalments med not be thirty days apart; but that instalments might be made payable at any time, provided no call exceeded ten per cent, and thirty days intervened between the date of notice of the call and the day on which it was payable. Per Burton and Patterson, J.J.A., that no instalment could lawfully be made payable in less than thirty days from the day for payment of the next preceding instalment. Provincial Ins. Co. v. Worts, 9 A. R. 56; S. C., sub nom. Provincial Ins. Co. v. Cameron, 31 C. P. 523.

Held, that the resolution of directors and not the notice made the call; and that a variation in the days of payment between the resolution and the notice invalidated the call, but not as to defendant Cameron, or her testator, who had made payments on, or promised to pay, such calls. $8.\ C.\ 31\ C.\ P.\ 523.$ It was objected that the calls had been res-

It was objected that the calls had been resinded by resolutions subsequently passed, and set out in the case:—Held, that such resolutions referred only to the terms or time of payment. Ib.

holders as to invalidate the calls. Ib.

Interest was allowed from the time when the last call became due. Ib.

Instalments—By-law — Resolutions.] — The plaintiffs' Act of incorporation enabled the directors to make calls at such times as they might deem requisite, provided that successive calls should be made at intervals of not less than two months between such calls, that no call should exceed ten per cent, and that thirty days' notice should be given of every such call: —Held, not necessary that the calls should be made by by-law, but that a resolution was sufficient, and that the resolution need not sumcent, and that the resolution need not name the place of payment of the calls, but that this could be done in the notice. Union Fire Ins. Co. v. O'Gara, Union Fire Ins. Co. v. Shoolbred, 4 O. R. 359.

A resolution was passed by which a call A resolution was passed by which a call was made of ten per cent, payable on the last March, and it was thereby further resolved that a further cail of ten per cent, be made payable on the last September:—Held, clearly not a call of twenty per cent, but two calls of ten per cent, each; and that the fact of the second call being illegal did not invalidate the first call, because contained in the same resolu-

An alleged third call was objected to as being a fourth call, in that the illegal call before referred to had not been abandoned, but, held, that the evidence clearly shewed such abandonment. Ib.

Insurance Company-Revocation of License—Receiver.]—In these cases, which were actions for calls on stock, an objection was taken that there was no power to sue, because the company's license under 42 Vict. c. 25 (O.), had been revoked, but it was shewn that one B, had been appointed receiver, and was especially required by order of the chancery division to prosecute all members in arrears for calls; and that he had adopted these actions, and was prosecuting them as receiver: —Held, that the objection was not tenable. Union Fire Ins. Co. v. Fitzsimmons, Union Fire Ins. Co. v. Shields, 32 C. P. 602.

Irregularity in Incorporation - Nonpayment of Percentage.] — An instrument under 12 Vict. c. 84, was signed by defendant and others for the formation of a road company, defendant agreeing to take three shares. The directors named met on the 27th May, 1850, and called in four instalments, each of ten per cent. on each share. The six per cent, required by the statute was at the same meeting paid by the promissory note of the directors to the treasurer, who then signed a receipt for the money, and afterwards registered the instrument. By the 20th November, tered the instrument. By the 20th November, 1850, the treasurer had received, by means of the call, a sum equal to the six per cent., and he then destroyed the note. On the 13th January, 1854, another call was made, payable by six instalments; and this action was brought for the four instalments of the first call, and the first three instalments due on the second: -Held, that the first call could not be recovered, for when it was made the six per cent, had not been in fact paid, but that the plaintiffs might recover the second call, for on the 13th January the six per cent, had been actually paid; and the company having pro-ceeded bona fide in the construction of this road, the irregularity in registering the instrument of incorporation before such payment ment of incorporation before such payment was cured by 16 Vict. c. 190, s. 55. Nelson and Nassagaweya Road Co. v. Bates, 12 U. C. R. 586; approving as to the first point, Niagara Falls Road Co. v. Benson, 8 U. C. R. 307.

Limitations Act. |-Under ordinary circumstances there is no liability to pay for shares until a call is made, and notice thereof given to a shareholder, and until that time the Statute of Limitations does not begin to run against the company. Therefore persons named in the charter issued in 1880 as shareholders were in 1891 held liable to pay the amount of their shares, no formal call having in the meantime been made. In re Haggert Bros. Manufacturing Co., Peaker and Run-ions' Case, 19 A. R. 582.

Marmora Foundry Act.]—By the Marmora Foundry Act, 1 Will. IV. c. 11, the stock subscribed for "shall be due and payable to the said company" in the manner mentioned in the Act; and in case of non-payment such shares shall be forfeited and sold: — Held, that the company were not restricted to the that the company were not restricted to the remedy by forfeiture; but might sue a share-holder for calls. Marmora Foundry Co. v. Jackson, 9 U. C. R. 509.

Notice.]—The notice of two calls, one payable on the 27th July, the other on the 27th August, was mailed at Montreal, on the 27th June, addressed to the firm at Ottawa, which was received by one of the defendants. There was not any affirmative evidence that it was not communicated by him to his co-partner; -Held, that such notice was insufficient as "not less than thirty days' notice" was required; and, therefore, the mailing of a notice on the 27th June, requiring a call to be paid on the 27th July, was not in time; otherwise the notice was sufficiently established. National Ins. Co. v. Egleson, 29 Gr. 406.

Notice.]-Per Spragge, C.J.O., and Hagarty, C.J.—Notice of a call published in a newspaper in one district is sufficient to render the shareholders residing in that district liable to pay the call, notwithstanding that the notice may not have been published in other districts where stock is held. Per Burton and Patterson, JJ.A., the enactment as to notice ought to be construed strictly; particularly if by a literal reading of the other provision calls were held valid though payable at shorter intervals than thirty days. Provincial Insurance Co. v. Worts, 9 A. R. 56; S. C., sub non. Provincial Insurance Co. v. Camer-on, 31 C. P. 523.

Notice.]-A call was made by resolution of the 3rd August, payable on the 6th September, and notice of it was mailed at Toronto on the 5th August, addressed to the defendants at Ottawa, but not received until the 8th:— Held, sufficient. Union Fire Insurance Co. v. O'Gara, Union Fire Ins. Co. v. Shoolbred, 4 O. R. 359.

Notice.]-The charter of a company, 35 Vict. c. 104 (D.), provided that one month's notice of calls "shall be given:"—Held, that sending such notice by post was not a compliance with this provision. Ross v. Machar, 8 O. R. 417.

Notice.] — 37 Vict. c. 93, s. 7 (O.), under which the calls sued for were made, der which the calls sued for were made, provided that thirty days notice of every call should be given. The resolution making the call, was passed on the 3rd August, 1881, the call to be payable on the 6th September. Notice to the defendants, F. & B., was mailed in Toronto, on the 5th August, and would reach Ottawa post-office, where F. & B. lived, at 7 p.m. on the 6th. The post-office closed at 7.30 p.m., but the letter could not have been obtained on that evening without personal application to the postmaster. It was received on Monday the Sth August:—Held, that the notice must be deemed to have been given upon the mailing, and therefore it was good. For Wilson, C.J.—If the thirty days were to be computed from the time when the notice had or should have reached its destination, they should begin on the Monday. Union Fuc Ins. Co. v. Fitzisimmons, 32 C. P. 902.

The defendant, S., it appeared, had made an assignment in insolvency, but the stock had not been returned by him as part of his assets, and the assignee had never accepted it. The notice of call was sent to the assignee, but he directed his bookkeeper to forward it to S., which he stated he had done, but the defendant denied its receipt. The plaintiffs' manager stated that after the call was due, he pail S. a dividend on the stock, and S. then said the call would be paid:—Held, that S. was still a stockholder, and must be deemed to have had notice. 1b.

Partners-Specific Shares.]-The defendants, as partners, had been appointed agents ants, as partners, and been appointed agents of the plaintiffs, on condition that they should become holders of 200 shares of the capital stock of the company. In pursuance of this narpeement they were entered in the stock register of the company for that number of shares, under the partnership name; and 200 shares of the original stock were allotted to them and the usual certificate sent. They did not, however, formally subscribe for the stock. A draft upon the firm for the first call was accepted and paid, as arranged with one of the defendants. Subsequently E, wrote to the plaintiffs that he was about retiring from the firm, and desiring to be informed as to the position of the "stock subscribed for by signing the letter as "senior partner, them, signing the letter as senior partner, &c.:—Held, in an action for calls, that the defendants were liable, and could not be heard to say that they had not subscribed for the stock :- Held, also, that it was unnecessary to shew that any specific shares had been allotted to the defendants; or that the calls were made by properly constituted directors. National Insurance Co. v. Egleson, 29 Gr. 406.

Place of Payment.] — The plaintiffs' charter provided that stockholders should pay up their shares "by such instalments and at such times and places as the directors of the said corporation shall appoint." It provided also for the appointment of a managing director, "to whom shall be delegated the special management of the business of the society." The directors passed a resolution, ordering a call, payable in two payments on days specified, and directing the secretary to notify the stockholders according to the Act. A notice signed by the managing director "by order," was published, and a circular signed by him sent to each shareholder, in which the place of payment was mentioned; but there was no meeting of directors between the passing of the resolution and the day named for payment. In an action for this call:—Held, a faital objection that the directors had appointed no place of payment, the advertisement and circular being the act of the managing director only, Provident Life Assurance and Investment Co. v. Wilson, 20 U. C. 53.

Pleading.]—Sufficiency of declaration for calls under the statute 1 Will. IV. c. 12, incorporating the plaintiffs. Marmora Foundry Co. v. Murney, 1 C. P. 1; Marmora Foundry Co. v. Bosucell, ib. 175; Marmora Foundry Co. v. Dougall, ib. 194.

Procedure — Action — Forum — Notice, — As to the right of action — the form of declaration in such a case — the defences available — the finality of the order and right of appeal therefrom — the service of notices required to be served by the company upon the subscribers—the liability as past or present member. Proof of Transfer, | — To an action brought for two calls, one made on the 9th December, 1858, and the other on the 17th June, 1859, defendant paid into court the first call, and pleaded never indelted to the second. At the trial he admitted having held the stock, but alleged that on the 5th February, 1858, he had transferred it fo M., and he necounted for having subsequently paid the first call sued for, by atating that he had given a bond to the plaintiffs to pay that call, and therefore did so notwithstanding the transfer. To prove the transfer the plaintiffs' transfer book was produced, in which it was entered, the transfer and acceptance being signed by D., who was then the plaintiffs' manager, as attorney for both parties, and their stock book was also produced, in which it stock appeared in M.'s name since the 5th February, 1858. The powers of attorney were not produced, but the plaintiffs' secretary, who produced the books, said he believed they existed, and that all the papers were in the hands of the plaintiffs' affecting;—and septimentally proved for the purposes of this action, being signed by the plaintiffs' officer, as agent for both parties, and recognized in their books; that it was unnecessary to produce the bond given by defendant; and that defendant was not estopped by having paid the call made in December, 1858, from denying that he had transferred the stock before the call was made. Provincial Insurance Co, of Canada v. Shake, 19 U. C. R. 533.

Quorum of Directors — Majority.]—A call of four per cent. on the first instalment of five per cent. on the capital stock, made by a quorum only, and not by a majority of the directors:—Held, a good call, under s. 9 of 12 Vict. c. 166, plaintiffs' Act of incorporation. Ontario Marine Insurance Co. v. Ireland, 5 C. P. 139.

Shares Vested by Act.]—Claim: calls upon shares for which the defendant's testator had subscribed, and upon which he had paid ten per cent. at the time of subscription. Defence: by a by-law of the plaintiff company no subscriber of stock should be a shareholder until the same had been allotted to him by order of the board. The testator subscribed for fifty shares, or any portion thereof which might be allotted to him, but no allotment was ever made:—Held, on demurrer, bad; for the by-law did not extend to a case in which a person on subscribing paid the necessary deposit, in whom the shares would vest under 39 Vict. e. 93, s. 2 (O.), the plaintiff company's Act of incorporation. Union Fire Ins. Co. v. Lyman, 46 U. C. R. 453.

Special Act.]—Held, that the Lake Superior Navigation Company, incorporated under 27 & 28 Vict. c. 23, were entitled to call in all the unpaid stock at one time, as the Act did not prevent their so doing. Lake Superior Navigation Co. v. Morrison, 22 C. P. 217.

Statutory Action—Resolution—Notice— Time.]—The gas company of Toronto such stockholders in separate actions of debt, founded upon 11 Vict. c. 14. The plaintiffs' charter authorizes actions for calls made by the directors of the company, "under and by virtue of the power and directions of that Act." It was proved that the secretary, acting under a resolution merely of the directors, passed before 11 Vict. c. 14 came into force, notified the stockholders that a call of ten per cent. would be made on the 1st May, June, July, and August:—Held, that the action would not lie. Gas Company v. Russell, 6 U. C. R. 567.

Subscription Before Incorporation.] The defendant with others agreed to apply for a patent for a company for manufacturing purposes, under R. S. O. 1877 c. 150, and signed a stock list subscribing for certain shares, and agreeing to pay therefor as provided by the Act and the by-laws of the com-Subsequently a petition purporting to pany. be by thirteen of the subscribers, but omitting the defendant's name, was presented to the Lieutenant-Governor of Ontario for a patent incorporating the petitioners and "such others as might become shareholders in the company thereby created a body corporate," &c. stock list, however, subscribed by the defendant, appeared to have been filed in the office of the Provincial Secretary. The petitioners the Provincial Secretary. The petitioners were accordingly incorporated, "and each and all such other person or persons as now is or are, or shall at any time hereafter become a shareholder or shareholders in the said company under the provisions of the said Act," &c. The defendant did not subsequently to the incorporation subscribe for stock, but on the contrary repudiated his former subscription: - Held, that the defendant was not a stockholder, and was, therefore, not liable for calls on the shares which he purported to have subscribed for. Tilsonburg Agricultural Man-ufacturing Co. v. Goodrich, 8 O. R. 565.

Subscription Before Incorporation.]—P. signed a subscription list undertaking to take shares in the capital stock of a company to be incorporated by letters patent under 31 Vict. c. 25 (Q.), but his mame did not appear in the notice applying for letters patent, nor as one of the original corporators in the letters patent incorporating the company. The directors never allotted shares to P. and he never subsequently acknowledged any liability to the company. In an action brought by the company against P. for $10,000 alleged to be due by him on 100 shares in the capital stock of the company it was:—Held, that P. was not liable for calls on stock. Magog Textile and Print Co. v. Dobell, 14 S. C. R. 664.

Subsequent Act Widening Powers. -To an action for calls, alleged to be due by defendant to the Canada Car and Manufacturing Co., defendant pleaded, on equitable grounds, that he subscribed for the shares and became a shareholder in a company, called the Canada Car Co., incorporated by letters patent for certain specified purposes and not otherwise; that afterwards, and without the assent and against the will of defendant, that company applied to the Dominion legislature and obtained an Act constituting the shareholders therein a body corporate, under the name of the Canada Car and Manufacturing Co., the now plaintiffs: that by the said Act greater powers were conferred upon plaintiffs than were possessed by the Canada Car Co., and the nature of the business was varied and extended, and the undertaking rendered more hazardous than was contemplated by the Canada Car Co., or the defendant when he became a shareholder thereof; and that defendant never agreed to become a shareholder of or invest his money in a company possessing the powers of the plaintiffs; whereby defendant is relieved from lia-bility:—Held, plea clearly bad; for the Act was binding on all the shareholders, whether assenting or not to the application for it; and this court had no jurisdiction to relieve de-fendant from a liability which the statute expressly declared that he should continue to be subject to. Canada Car and Manufactur-ing Co. v. Harris, 24 C. P. 380.

Time.]—Where calls on stock were to be made "at periods of not less than three months' interval," and one call was made payable on the 10th August and another on the 10th November:—Held, that an interval of three months had not elapsed between the two calls, and that the second call was therefore bad. Stadacona Fire and Life Ins. Co., v. Mackenzie, 20 C. P. 10s.

Time—Intervals.]—Where the directors of a railway company at one meeting made several calls, payable at intervals of two months from each other:—Held, bad, for the calls cannot be made at less intervals than two months; and that a stockholder who had paid the first call thus made, and then transferred his shares, was not responsible for the subsequent calls thus illegally made. Moore v. McLaren, 11 C. P. 534.

Time — Notice Inconsistent with Resolution, I.—A gas company incorporated under 16 Vict. c. 173, by resolution of the directors made certain calls to be paid on particular days named, but by the notice published they were made payable on different days. Defendant had written to the company, enclosing his note for four of the calls, saying that for the bulknee he would send his note soon, and requesting them to accept this offer, as he had been assent in Europe, and had no knowledge of any of the calls. The company, however declined: — Held, that the calls were illegal, being unauthorized by the resolution, and that defendant was not estopped from dispating them. London Gas Company v. Campbell, 14 U. C. R. 143.

What a Call Is.]—A call upon shares under the Joint Stock Companies Act, R. S. O. 1887 c. 157, means a call made by the directors in pursuance of the powers given to them by s. 44 of that Act. Ontario Investment Association v, Sippl, 20 O. R. 440.

See the next sub-head.

3. Cancellation, Forfeiture, and Surrender.

Benefit of Shareholders.]—The powers given the directors of a joint stock company under the provisions of "The Companies Act" as to forfeiture of shares for non-payment of calls is intended to be exercised only when the circumstances of the shareholders render it expedient in the interests of the company and cannot be employed for the benefit of the shareholders. Common v. McArthur, 29 S. C. R. 259.

Board Not Legally Constituted.]—
When on the 31st May, 1889, the directors of a company passed a by-law reducing the number of the directorate from five to three, and this was confirmed at an adjourned general meeting of shareholders on the 1st June, 1889, and a new board of three forthwith appointed, but, it appeared, no notice had been given either before the original, or the adjourned meeting of the intention of making any such change in the directorate:—Held, that the appointment of the new board was not a legal one, and a resolution by them to forfeit stock for non-payment of calls was invalid:—Held, also, that the company were properly made parties to an action to restrain such forfeiture, the reduction of the directorate to a board of three being its act. Christopher v. Nozon, 4 O. R. 672.

Conditional Forfeiture.]—In an action for unpaid calls the shares held by the defendant Cameron as executrix and in her own right, were transferred under powers of attorney, which were not produced:—Held, that there was sufficient evidence to shew the existence of such powers, and to let in secondary evidence thereof, the defendant and the testator having fully admitted their liability as owners of the shares; and that the evidence also shewed that there had been no forfeiture, as was urged, of such shares, the alleged forfeiture having been conditional and never completed:—Held, also, that the change in the corporate name of the plaintiffs, as set out in the report, could under the circumstances form no objection to their recovery. Provincial Ins. Co. v. Cameron, 31 C. P. 523. It was urged that the shares of certain other shareholders had not been legally forfeited the directors under the original chartes.

It was urged that the shares of certain other shareholders had not been legally forfeited, the directors under the original charter having the power to do so:—Hield, that they had such power; but that in any event this could not affect the liability of these defendants. Ib.

Death—No Personal Representative.]—In January, 1844, a non-borrowing member of a building society died intestate. No one administered until June, 1867. In that interval his shares in the building society ran into arrear, and in consequence the society, in November, 1865, declared them forfeited, and curried the amount thereof to the credit of the profit and loss account. After the society had been wound up or was supposed to have been wound up, and the assets distributed, letters of administration were obtained, and the administration applied to the society to be admitted as a member thereof, but was refused:—Held, I. That thereof, but was refused:—Held, I. That the proceeding of the society to forfeit the shares in the absence of a personal representative was illegal; 2, that the plaintiff (the administrator) was entitled to relief, and that the lapse of time between the attempted forfeiture and the procuring letters of administration was no answer to the claim. Glass v. Hope, 14 Gr. 484; 16 Gr. 429.

Default in Payment—Notice.]—The plaintiff on becoming a member of the defendant company, agreed to accept his shares subject to the rules of the company. Rule 6 was to the rules of the company. Rule 6 was to the first that the company of the rules of the company. It was a considered and the rules of the Misrepresentations.]—The defendant, an original stockholder in a joint stock company, his stock being fully paid up, was elected a director, after a statement prepared by the company's secretary had been published by them, setting forth that the company was in a flourishing condition earning a ten per cent, dividend. On the faith of such statement defendant subscribed for new shares in the company, but soon afterwards suspecting that the statement was incorrect, he threatened legal proceedings to compel cancellation of the stock, whereupon a resolution was passed directing the books to be examined, and on such examination the statement was found to be false, and the company practically insolvent. A meeting of the shareholders was then called, and a by-law passed cancelling the stock. After the defendant's subscription for the new stock, and before the cancellation, as also before the defendant became aware of the falsity of the statement, the plaintiff be-came a creditor of the company, The plaintiff after such cancellation, issued a writ and obafter such cancellation, issued a writ and obtained a judgment against the company, and then sued defendant for the amount of the new stock unpaid by him:—Held, that the plaintiff could not recover; that there was power to cancel the stock; that the cancellation was duly made; and that the defendant was not guilty of any lackes. Wheeler and Wilson Manufacturing Co. v. Wilson, 6 to 10 to O. R. 421.

Misrepresentations - Power to Compromise.]—A trading corporation has authority as an incident of its existence to comity as an incident of its existence to com-promise all bond fide claims made against it, and therefore has power to compromise claims made by a shareholder to be relieved of his shares either by reason of fraud or misrepresentation or any other cause which would enable the court to decree such relief; but as the court, if a shareholder were to make a claim against the corporation for compensation in damages in respect of some matter not connected in any way with the validity of the shares held by him, could not decree a cancellation pro tanto of those shares, so the corporation itself cannot validly compromise a claim for damages against it by accepting the surrender of, and by cancelling shares of, its capital stock held by the claimant. Lic-ingstone v. Temperance Colonization Society, 17 A. R. 379. tion in damages in respect of some matter not Notice in Writing.]—By 54 & 55 Vict. c. 110, s. 4 (D.), power was given to any shareholder of the company to surrender his stock by notice in writing within a certain time. A shareholder, desiring to surrender his stock, transferred it within the time by an ordinary assignment to the president "in trust," both intending the transfer to operate as a surrender: — Held, a valid surrender. Harte v. Ontario Express and Transportation Company, Kirk and Marling's Case, 24 O. R. 340.

Optional Remedy.]-Held, that the company were not restricted to the remedy by forfeiture, but might maintain an action against a shareholder upon calls of stock subscribed. Marmora Foundry Co. v. Jackson, O U. C. R. 509.

Shareholder Setting Up Forfeiture. —To a declaration for calls under s. 10 of plaintiffs' charter, 12 Vict. c. 166, defendant pleaded, that by non-payment of said calls the shares became forfeited in pursuance of the statute, and that defendant acquiesced in such statute, and that defendant acquisesed in sact forfeiture, of which plaintiffs had notice:— Held, bad, for defendant could not thus for-feit the shares. Ontario Marine Ins. Co. v. Ireland, 5 C. P. 135.

Time. —Under s. 35 of R. S. O. 1897 c. 191, stock may be forfeited by the company where the amount payable on a call is not paid within the time limited by the special Act incorporating the company, or by the letters patent, or by a by-law of the company. Where, therefore, no time was limited in the statute, or letters patent, or in the by-law making the call, such call was held to be illegal and an attempted forfeiture of the stock ineffectual. Armstrong v. Merchants' Mantle Manufacturing Co., 32 O. R. 387.

4. Increasing Capital.

Conditions - Subscription Stock. —The Ontario Wood Pavement Company, incorporated under 27 & 28 Vict, c. 23, pany, meorporated under 27 & 28 Viet, c, 23, with power to increase by by-law the capital stock of the company "after the whole capital stock of the company shall have been allotted and paid in, but not sooner," assumed to pass a by-law increasing the capital stock from $130,000 to $250,000 before the original capi-tal stock had been paid in. P. et al., execu-tion creditors of the company, whose writ had been returned unsatisfied, instituted proceedings by way of sci. fa. against A. as holder of shares not fully paid up in said company, It appeared from an examination of the books that the shares alleged to be held by A. were that the shares alleged to be held by A. were shares of the increased capital and not of that originally authorized:—Held, affirming 7 A. R. I., which reversed 30 C. P. 108, that as there was evidence that the original nominal capital of $130,000 was never paid in, the directors had no power to increase the stock of the company, and as the stock held by A. consisted wholly of new unauthorized stock, P. et al. were not entitled to recover. Page v. Austin, 19 S. C. R. 132.

Notice of Increase - Provincial Secretary-Mandamus.]-Held, affirming 11 O. R. 414, that the duty of the provincial secretary of Ontario in issuing the notice of the increase of the capital stock of an incorporated crease of the capital stock of an incorporated company required to be given under 27 & 28 Vict. c. 23, s. 5, s.-s. 18, is merely ministerial, and that on the requirements of the Act being complied with he has no discretion in the matter, but must issue the notice. Re Massey Manufacturing Co., 13 A. R. 446. Held, that the power conferred of increas-ing the capital stock by s.-ss. 16, 17, and 18 of s. 5, is a general power not limited to a single occasion. Ib.

Held, that there is nothing in the Act which makes a prior subscription and payment of the new stock, or a part of it, a prerequisite to the right of the company to have the notice published. 1b.

Held, that mandamus was the proper mode of enforcing the issue of the notice. S. C., 11 O. R. 444.

5. Mortgage, Sale, and Transfer.

Assignee for Creditors-Declaration of Trust.]- The plaintiff sued as an assigned for creditors under an assignment which excepted shares in companies not fully paid up, and in which his assignor was declared a and in which his assignment as the shares in such way as he should direct. In this action the plaintiff sought to have it declared that he was the owner of certain shares, standing in the name of his assignor, in a company incorporated under R. S. O. 1897 191, and that he was entitled to pay the bal-ance of calls made thereon:—Held, that he was not entitled to call on the company to account to him for the shares or any dealings therewith. Armstrong v. Merchants Mantle Manufacturing Co., 32 O. R. 387.

Blank Transfer — Usage of Stock Exchange. |—The registered owner of shares in a company gave to her brokers, for the purpose of selling the shares, the certificate of ownership upon the face of which the shares were stated to be transferable on the books were stated to be transferable on the books of the company in person or by attorney upon surrender of the certificate and upon which was indorsed a transfer and power of attor-ney, signed by her, and having a blank left for the name of the transferee. The brokers improperly deposited the certificate as security for advances to them with a bank, who received it in the ordinary course of business without any notice of the owner's rights.
There was evidence at the trial that, according to the usages of the stock exchanges of Ontario and Quebec, such a share certificate so indorsed passes from hand to hand and is recognized as entitling the holder to deal with recognized as entitling the holder to deal with the shares as owner and pass the property in them by delivery, or to fill in the blank with his own name and have the shares so registered on the books of the company:— Held, that the bank was entitled to hold the shares as against the owner. France v. Clark, 26 Ch. D. 257, distinguished. Smith v. Ropers, 30 O. R. 256.

Certificates—Estoppel.]—A company in-corporated under the Outario Joint Stock Companies Letters Patent Act, R. S. O. 1887 c. 157, issued a certificate stating that a cer-tain shareholder was entitled to twenty-two shares of the capital stock, as he in fact at the time was. The shares were not numbered or identified, but the certificate was numbered and contained the words "Transferable only on the books of the company in person or by attorney on the surrender of this certificate." The shareholder assigned the shares to the plaintiff for value, and gave the certificate to him with an assignment indorsed thereon, The plaintiff gave no notice to the company, and did not apply to be registered as a share holder until several months had elapsed, and in the meantime the shareholder executed another transfer of the shares for value to an innocent transferee, who was registered by the company as the holder of the shares withthe company as the holder of the shares without production of the certificate:—Held, that the transfer to the plaintiff, in view of the provisions of s. 52 of the Joint Stock Companies Letters Patent Act, R. S. O. 1887 c.
157, conferred upon him a mere equitable title which was cut out by the subsequent transfer, and that while the company might have insisted upon production of the certificate they were not bound to do so, and were not estopped from denying the plaintiff's right to the shares. Smith v. Walkerville Malleable Iron Company, 23 A. R. 95.

Deficiency-Specific Performance.]-The rule that, in the absence of fraud on the part of a vendor of land, a deficiency in quantity small in proportion to the quantity sold and not necessary to the enjoyment of what the vendor can make title to—is not a bar to specific performance at the suit of the vendor, with compensation to the purchaser, applies also to sales of stock or shares in a trading company. Therefore, where a contract was entered into for the sale and transfer of 300 out of 400) shares of stock in such a company, and upon a bill being filed on behalf of the vendors, which in effect was to enforce the sale and purchase, it appeared that the D-34 plaintiffs could validly assign 343 out of the 360 shares, the court at the hearing held the vendors entitled to a decree for the sale and payment of the number of shares they could so make a good title to. Canada Life Assur-ance Co. v. Peel General Manufacturing Co., 26 Gr. 477.

Duty to Prepare Transfer.] - Sale of stock in a railway company—Duty to prepare transfer—Note for purchase money, Action on—Plea, refusal to transfer—Practice under A. J. Act, 18 U. C. R. 402. 1873. See Boulton v. Hugel, 35

Insolvency of Transferee.]—Held, that the insolvency of the assignee was no objec-tion to the transfer, the only condition for a valid transfer being the payment of all calls. Moore v. McLaren, 11 C. P. 534.

Marginal Transfer.]—No special directions as to the transfer of shares had been formally adopted by the directors, but the transfer book had been prepared for, and adapted to, the system of marginal transfer. One C. transferred certain shares in blank, subject, by marginal note, initialled by C. to the order of a broker, and subject by a subsequent marginal note, initialled by the broker, to the order of B. B. signed an acceptance of the order of B. B. signed an acceptance of the shares immediately under the transfer in blank signed by C., and was entered in the books of the bank as the holder of the shares, the intermediate transfers to and from the broker being omitted. The transfer to B., and the acceptance by him, took place within a month of the time of the suspension of the bank:—Held, affirming 16 O. R. 293, that this transfer and acceptance were a sufficient compliance with, or at least not in any way a violation of, the statutory provisions, and that B. became the legal holder of the shares, and was liable as a contributory. In re Central Bank of Canada, Baines' Case, 16 A. R. 237.

Negligence of Mortgagee.] - Duty of mortgagee to take proceedings against purchaser of stock sold by him at auction to complete the purchase. See Daniels v. Noxon, 17 A. R. 206.

Percentage not Paid.]—An otherwise valid transfer of shares allotted to the transvalid transfer of shares allotted to the trans-feror upon which he has not paid anything, no calls having been made at the time of transfer, is not invalid because the ten per centum upon allotted stock directed by s. 45 of the Act to be "called in and made payable within one year from the incorporation of the company" has not been paid. The last men-tioned section is directory merely. Ontario Investment Association v. Sippi, 20 O. R.

Percentage not Paid—Transfer without Acceptance.]—Where ten per cent. was not paid at the time of original subscription of bank shares, nor within thirty days there-after, as required by the Bank Act, R. S. C. c. 120, s. 20, but was paid before the first transfer took place, and was accepted by the bank:—Held, that subsequent transferees of bank:—Held, that subsequent transferees of the shares were properly placed upon the list of contributories in winding-up proceedings. In re Central Bank of Canada, Baines' Case, Nasmith's Case, 16 O. R. 293, 16 A. R. 237. The provision as to payment is for the protection of the public, and till payment is made the person subscribing may not be able to deal with the stock, but he is at least to deal with the stock, but he is at least equitable owner, and may become legally en-titled on making the prescribed payment. Ib. Where it appeared that in one such case the transferred did not sign the acceptance, but that he subsequently dealt with the shares by selling and transferring them:—Held, that the transferrees from him were properly placed upon the list of contributories, notwithstanding anything in the Bank Act, R. S. C. c. 120, s. 29. Ib.

Pledge - Transfers "In Trust."] - The plaintiff obtained from a loan company an advance on the security of certain shares in a joint stock company, not numbered or capable of identification, which were transferred by him to the managers of the loan company "in trust." The managers were also brokers and The managers were also brokers and were as brokers carrying on stock speculations for the plaintiff, and he transferred to them as security for the payment of "mar-gins" certain other shares in the same pany, the transfer being in the same form "in pany, the trust." Subsequently the loan company were paid off by the brokers at the plaintiff's request, and the brokers continued to hold the first shares as well as the others as secu-Upon all the shares the brokers then obtained advances from a bank, transferring them to the cashier "in trust," and from time to time changed the loan to other banks and financial institutions, each transfer being made from and to the manager thereof "in trust." An allotment of new shares was taken up by the then holders of the pledged shares at the request of the brokers. Subsequently the brokers on the security of the old and new shares obtained a loan from the defendants of a much larger amount than the amount due by the plaintiff to the brokers, the shares being then transferred by the then holders to the defendants: — Held, reversing 19 O. R. 272, that the defendants were en-titled to hold the stock as security for the full amount advanced by them to the brokers; and that the words "in trust" in the transfer and that the words "in trust" in the transfer meant that the various transferees were hold-ing the shares "in trust" for their respective institutions. Duggan v, London and Cana-dian Loan and Agency Co., 18 A. R. 305, Reversed by the supreme court, 20 S. C. R. 481, but restored by the judicial committee, 11883 A. C. 506. [1893] A. C. 506.

Qualification - Acquiescence - Formalities.]-The stock of an incorporated street railway company, consisting of 2,000 shares, was owned exclusively by two brothers (G. and W.). The charter of the company required that there should be a board of directors consisting of not less than three members, each of whom should hold stock to the amount of not less than $100. It having become necessary to raise funds for the purpose of carrying on the business of the company, the two brothers agreed that they should convey to M. (their father) one share each in order to qualify him as a director, which they did accord-ingly assign: the father from thenceforth acted as the third director, and the funds for the construction and improvement of the road, were obtained and expended thereon. By his will the father bequeathed these two shares to his daughter S., who, after the death of her father, continued to exercise when necessary, After some time G. the functions of director. the functions of director. After some time G, became dissatisfied with the manner in which S, discharged her duties as director, alleging that she acted simply as the nominee of W., and finally asserted that the shares had been originally assigned to the father for the avowed purpose of qualifying him to act, but in reality as trustee for G. and W., and that he had not power to dispose of them by will and filed a bill seeking to have it declared that M. during his lifetime, and S. since his death, had held these shares simply as trustee of G. and W., and that S. might be ordered to reassign them. The court, under the circumstances, dismissed the bill, with costs. Kiely v. Smyth, 27 Gr. 220.

The charter of the company provided that the stock "shall be transferable in such way the directors shall by by-law direct: Held, that this did not prevent the transfer of the stock until such a by-law should be passed, but left it as at common law, so that might be transferred by word of mouth.

Upon the facts stated in the report of this case :- Held, that a transfer was sufficiently 11 shewn.

Semble, that the plaintiff, one of the directors, was estopped from alleging that M. was not properly qualified as a director, the effect of which would have been to injuriously affect the value of bonds of the com-pany, to the issue of which the plaintiff was Held, in this case, that the transfer to M. was not without consideration, the agreement by the two brothers with each other to make it being sufficient. Ib.

Refusal to Accept Transfer.]-A company incorporated under 27 & 28 Vict. c. 23, has not power to refuse to allow a transfer of shares of its stock without assigning a sufficient reason therefor. In re Smith v. sufficient reason therefor. In re Smith v. Canada Car Co., 6 P. R. 107.

Refusal to Accept Transfer.]—Bank of L. brought an action against S., the appellant (defendant), as shareholder, to recover a call of ten per cent. on twenty-five shares held by him in that bank. By the 7th plea, and for defence on equitable grounds, the defendant said, "that before the said call or notice thereof to the defendant, the defendant made in good faith and for valid consideration in that behalf, a transfer and assignment of all the shares and stock which he had held in the Bank of L. to a person authorized and qualified to receive the same, and the de-fendant and the transferees of the said shares or stock did all things which were necessary for the valid and final transferring of the said shares or stock; but the said plaintiffs, without legal excuse and without reason, refused to record such transfer, or to register rused to record such transfer, or to register the same in the books of the bank, or to recog-nize the said transfer. And the defendant prays, that the said Bank of L. shall be com-pelled and decreed to make and complete the said transfer, and to do all things required on its part to be done to make the said transfer valid and effectual, and the said Bank of L. be enjoined from further prosecution of this suit." The plaintiffs filed no replication to suit." The plaintiffs filed no replication to this plen, but at the trial of the action, they attempted to justify the refusal to permit the transfer of the shares upon the ground that at a special general meeting of the shareholders of the Bank of L. held on the 26th June, 1873, it was resolved "that, in the opinion of the meeting, the Bank of L. should not be allowed to go into liquidation, but that steps should be taken to obtain a loan of such sum as may be necessary to loan of such sum as may be necessary to enable the bank to resume specie payments, and that the shareholders agree to hold their shares without assigning them until the principal and interest due on such loan shall be fully paid, and to execute, when required, a bond to that effect." The defendant was not present at the meeting when this resolution was passed, and it appeared from the evid-cine that the Bank of L. effected a loan of $80,000 from the Bank of S. upon the secu-rity of one B., who to secure himself, took bonds to lesser amounts from other sharebonds to lesser amounts from other snare-holders, including the defendant, whose bond was released by B. when the defendant sold his shares. This he did in 1877 to certain persons then in good standing, and powers of attorney, executed by defendant and the purchasers respectively, were sent to the manager of the Bank of L., in whose favour they were drawn, to enable him to complete the transfer. The directors of the Bank of L. re-fused to permit the transfer, but the defendant was not notified of their refusal, nor did they make any claim against him for any did they make any claim against him for any indebtedness on his part to the bank; and it appeared also from the evidence that subse-quently to the resolution of the 26th June, 1873, and prior to the sale by defendant of his shares, a large number of other shares had been transferred in the books of the bank. In October, 1879, the Bank of L. became insolvent, and the Bank of S., the respondents, obtained leave to intervene and carry on the action: Held, that the resolution of the 26th June, 1873, could not bind shareholders not present at that meeting, even if it had been acted upon, and under the facts disclosed in evidence the defendant could not be deprived of his legal right under the Bank Act to transfer his shares and to have the transfer recorded in the books of the bank; and the 7th plea was therefore a good equitable defence to the action. Smith v. Bank of Nova Scotia, 8 S. C. R. 558.

Refusal to Register Transfer—Collateral Claim — Damages.]—In an action against a harbour company, for refusing to register a transfer of stock by one S. to the plaintiffs:—Held, that although S., being president of the company, might perhaps have registered the assignment himself, yet the refusal of the secretary to do so formed a good ground for an action against the company, McMurrich v. Bond Head Harbour Co., 5 U. C. R. 333.

Held, also, that the company had no legal lien on the stock for harbour tolls due by S. to them, and could not therefore on that ground refuse to register the assignment. Ib.

Held, also, as to four shares, of which there appeared only an entry of credit to S, in a ledger, but which were not standing in his name in the stock book, that the plaintiffs were not entitled to recover in respect of such shares. Ib.

shares. Ib.
Held, also, as to the shares for which the plaintiffs were entitled to recover, that they were strictly entitled only to their value at the time of demand and refusal to transfer; but the jury having allowed a larger sum, and this question not having been pressed on the argument, the court did not reduce the verdict. Ib.

Held, that registration in the books of the company is necessary in order to complete the transfer. Ib.

Unregistered Transfer. — An assignment of stock in the defendant company, duly executed by assignor and assignee, for a good consideration, with proper notice to the company, is valid without further registration, provided the assignor is not indebted to the company and owes no calls. Crawford v. Provincial Insurance Co., S C. P. 263.

Witness — Colourable Transfer.] — See Bank of Michigan v. Gray, 1 U. C. R. 422.

6. Seizure and Sale under Execution.

Bond Head Harbour Co.]—See Brock v. Ruttan, 1 C. P. 218.

Building Society.]—Stock in a building society may be taken in execution under 12 Vict. c. 23; but, held, also, that under the circumstances of this case, set out in the report, the stock in question was not property belonging to the execution debtor, which the sheriff was bound to seize. Robinson v. Grange, 18 U. C. R. 200.

Demand of Transfer-Form of Writ of Execution—Mundamus.) — Upon na pplication to compel a railway company by mandamus to register a transfer of stock, it appeared that the stock had been soid under an execution recovered against "the mayor, aldermen, and commonalty of the city of Ottawa" and by C. S. U. C. c. 54, the name of the corporation was changed to "the corporation of the city of Ottawa".—Held, that the writ properly followed the judgment as recovered, and was sufficient, the corporation being formerly known by the name therein given:—Held, also, that a demand for the transfer of stock upon the secretary and treasurer of the company, and a notice of facts served upon him in the name of the company, were sufficient, the court being of opinion that service and demand upon the president were not indispensable. In re Goodwin and Ottawa and Prescott R. W. Co., 13 C. P. 254.

Several demands to transfer the stock having been made, and delays and evasive answers given without in direct terms refusing:—Held, that a sufficient refusal was shewn to justify the issue of a mandamus to compel the transfer. Ib.

Held, also, that a mandamus may be directed to the company, without naming the officers. Ib.

On application for such a mandamus:—Held, that a demand and refusal after service of the attested copy of execution was essential, under C. S. C. c. 70. The execution debtor was the president of the company, and on shewing cause, he asserted payment of the execution before the sale, &c.:—Held, that this could not justify the company in refusing to transfer, for they had no concern with the transactions between the execution plaintiff and defendant, or between defendant and the sheriff. Quare, as to the effect of a delay in serving the attested copy beyond the ten days after the sale prescribed by the Act. In re Guillot and Sandwich and Windsor Gravel Road Co., 26 U. C. R. 246.

Scizure Before Acceptance.]—Certain stock in the British America Assurance Co. was transferred, and the transfer entered in the stock ledger, so that the shares stood in the name of the transferee, but before any acceptance had been signed the shares were seized under an execution against the transferor:—Held, that the transfer was complete and the seizure illegal. Woodruff v. Harris, 11 U. C. R. 490.

Service of Copy of Writ.]—In an action by a purchaser of stock at sheriff's sale, claiming a mandamus to the company to enter the plaintiff as a shareholder:—Held, that C. S. C. c. 70, as well as C. L. P. Act, ss. 255, 256, must be obeyed; and that as no copy of the writ had been served on defendants with the sheriff's certificate, the plaintiff must fail. Goodwin v. Ottuwa and Prescott R. W. Co., 22 U. C. R. 186.

Time from which Excention Binds.]—The stock of an incorporated company is only bound from the time when the notice of the writ is given to the company by the sheriff, under C. S. C. c. 70, ss. 3, 4, and not from the time of the delivery of the writ to the sheriff. Hatch v. Roueland, 5 P. R. 223.

Unregistered Transfer.] — Defendant, as sherifi, by his deputy, levied under a fi fa. on twenty-five shares of the stock of the Bond Head Harbour Co., in the books of the said company appearing to be the property of W. H. B. Having written to the plaintifi in this suit to say that he had done so, he afterwards returned the writ nulla bona: — Held, that the shares not having been transferred in the books of the company, were at the time of the levy at the order and disposition of said W. H. B., and liable to execution as being his property, and did not pass to his trustees under a deed of assignment to them. Brock v. Ruttan, 1 C. P. 218.

Unregistered Transfer.] — A bonh fide assignment or piedge for value of shares in the capital stock of a company incorporated under R. S. O. 1887 c. 157 is valid between the assigner and the assignment or transfer is made in the books of the company; and, as only the debtor's interest in the property seized can be sold under execution, the rights of a bonh fide assignee cannot be cut out by the seizure and sale of the shares, under execution against the assignor, after the assignment. R. S. O. 1887 c. 157, s. 52, considered and construed. Semble, that nothing passes by such a sale under execution; for the words "goods and chattels" in s. 16 of the Execution Act, R. S. O. 1887 c. 64, do not include shares in an incorporated company so as to authorize the sale of the equity of redemption in such shares. Morton v. Cowan, 25 O. R. 529.

VIII. SHAREHOLDERS.

1. In General.

Assessing Shareholders.1—As to power of the court of chancery to make an assessment on policy holders in the solvent branches of a mutual insurance company, for the purpose of paying off the liability due to the guarantee stockholders. See Duff v. Canadian Mutual Ins. Co., 6 A. R. 238.

Attaching Judgment against Company. —The court refused to set aside a judgment obtained against a company for a valid claim, at the instance of a shareholder against whom a sci. fa. upon it had been issued, there being no proof of fraud or collusion between the plaintiff and the company in obtaining such judgment. English v. Rent Guarantee Co., 7 P. R. 108.

Breach of Trust.]—A bill will lie by a corporator of the Church Society of the diocese of Toronto, on behalf of himself and all other members of the society, to correct and prevent alleged breaches of trust by the corporation. To such a bill the attorney-general is not a necessary party. Boulton v. Church Society of the Diocese of Toronto, 14 Gr. 123; 15 Gr. 450.

Directors — Misapplication of Funds.]—
Where the directors of an incorporated company misappropriated the funds of the corporation, a bill against them and the company, in respect of such misappropriation, cannot be sustained by some of the stock-the company must be made plaintiffs whether the acts of the directors are void or only old able, and the stockholders have a right of make use of the name of the company a plaintiffs in such proceedings. Hamilton v. Designations Canal Co., 1 Gr. 1.

Where by the Act of incorporation the government is authorized to purchase the corporate estate on payment of its full value, the attorney-general is not a necessary party to a bill by the stockholders against the directors.

Where by the Act of incorporation the government is authorized to purchase the corporate estate on payment of its full value, the attorney-general is not a necessary party to a bill by the stockholders against the directors complaining of improper conduct on the part of the latter in dealing with the corporate funds. In such case the defendants having answered, admitting certain moneys to have been received by the directors, a motion to pay the amount into court was refused, but the costs of the motion were reserved. Ib.

Individual Liability.] — The declaration, at the suit of a corporation, named the individuals composing it, and also described them in their corporate capacities. The breach was in their names as individuals only:— Held, a non pros. might be signed and execution issue against them in their private capacities. Markland v. Dalton, Tay. 125.

Individual Liability.] — Where four parties described, not by their own names and personal description, but as a collective body not shewn to be corporate, signed and sealed a deed in their own names and seals, they were held to be individually bound. Cullen v. Nickerson, 10 C. P. 549.

Inspection of Books.] — A stockholder is not entitled, as a matter of right, to inspect the stock-book or other books of a bank. In re Bank of Upper Canada v. Baldwin, Dra. 55.

The court will not, although they have the power, grant a mandamus for the inspection of the stock-book or other books of a bank, unless some special grounds be disclosed to warrant it. Ib.

Loan of Company Funds.]—A member of a joint stock company, not incorporatel, lending with the assent of the company out of the joint fund to another member, and taking from him a promissory note payable to himself individually for repayment, can recover on the note. Comer v. Thompson, 40. S. 256.

Misapplication of Funds.]—A suit will lie by an individual corporator complaining of an illegal diversion of the funds which the corporation holds as trustee, though the plaintiff may himself have no pecuniary interest in the funds so alleged to have been diverted:

but he must sue on behalf of himself and all other corporators, Armstrong v. Church Society of the Diocese of Toronto, 13 Gr. 552.

Negotiable Instruments—Admissions.]—In an action against a member of a joint stock company, his admissions that he was a primer are sufficient to prove his liability, and then a company is formed for purposes which do not render the drawing and accepting of bills and notes necessary, it will be sufficient to establish the liability of a partner on bills or notes drawn or accepted in the name of the company by their secretary that while he was a partner the secretary was in the habit of so drawing and accepting bills, which were afterwards paid with his concurrence and admission of liability. Lee v. Me-Bonald, 6 0, S. 130, O. S. 130.

Proposed Adventure not going On.]

—A party contributing to a mining joint stock adventure, which does not go into effect, may recover back his money as money had and received; but the court must see that the circumstances give him a just right: — Held, that in this case no such right was shewn. Glipin v. Greene, 7 U. C. R. 586.

Suppressed Notes.]—A partner in a joint stock company, the notes of which are suppressed by 7 Will, IV. c. 13, having retired their notes which were in circulation after the suppression, cannot put them into circulation again so as to bind the partnership. Hall v. Buck, T. T. 2 & 3 Vict.

2. Liability to Creditors of the Company.

Fictitious Action.]—The defendant, a shockholder in a company against which he had a claim for goods sold, obtained a note from the company, and transferred it to one from the company, and ransferred it to one part and obtaining indicates using the company and obtaining indicates using the control of the company and obtaining indicates and defendant, and defendant then paid him the amount of his unpaid stock, which amount F. then held as defendant's trustee:—Held, that the payment to F. was not a payment of defendant's stock, and was no answer therefore to an action brought against defendant by a creditor of the company, who had also obtained judgment and a return of nulla bona. McGregor v. Currie, 26 C. P. 53.

Foreign Company.]—In an action under do vict. c. 43, s. 47 (D.), brought in Ontario against a shareholder their resident, of a company whose head office was in another province, where judgment had been obtained by the plaintiff against the company, and execution thereon had been returned unsatisfied:—Held, reversing 7 O. R. 435, that the cause of action against the shareholder was complete without the return unsatisfied of an execution against the company in Ontario. Brice v. Munro, 12 A. R. 455.

Imperial Act.)—Section 68 of the Imperial statute, 7 & 8 Vict. c. 110, provides a summary proceeding whereby a creditor who has obtained a judgment or decree against any company incorporated thereunder, may call on any shareholder, by motion or otherwise, according to the practice of the various courts, to pay his claim. Upon such an application against shareholders resident in this country by a creditor who had obtained a decree:—Held, that the statute did not apply to proceedings in our courts. *Penley v. Bea*con Assurance Co., 10 Gr. 422.

Invalid Transfer.]—Where, without any transfer in writing being executed, certificates of shares issued as paid for by alleged certificates of shares issued as paid for by alleged and all holder to the company, and new certificates were issued at his request by the company to the alleged transferee, it was held, having regard to s. 48 of R. S. C. c. 19, and the bylaws of the company, that the original holder had not divested himelf of liability to a judgment creditor of the company suing under s. 55 of that Act. Union Bank v. Morris, Union Bank v. Code, 27 A. R. 396.

Joint and Several Liability.]—C. S. U. C. c. 63 enacts that the stockholders of any company incorporated thereunder shall be "jointly and severally liable " for all debts and contracts made by the company:—Held, nevertheless, that a creditor might sue one, or any number more than one, of the stockholders, McKenzie v. Dewan, 36 U. C. R. 512.

Paid-up Stock—Moneys of Company in Hands of Shareholders.]—Where the defendants agreed to take stock in a company about to be incorporated, and arranged that their interest in certain land acquired in maximum by the company should be spin in payment of their stock, and the land acquired in maximum of their stock, and the land acquired that of their stock, and the land acquired that considerably beyond that at which it was acquired by the offendants, yet no fraud being shown, it was: — Held, that the shares of stock issued to the defendants, pursuant to the arrangement, upon the incorporation of the company, as fully paid-up shares, must be treated as such in an action by an execution creditor of the company seeking to make the defendants liable upon their shares for the amount unpaid thereon. The law upon that subject is the same in this Province as that of England prior to the Companies Act, 30 & 31 Vict. c. 131. The plaintiff sought also to recover from the defendants moneys shewn to be in their hands which were really the property of the company:—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to judgment against the defendants for payment to him of such moneys; but the company were necessary parties to the action; and their consent to being added as plaintiffs not having being filed as required by Rule 324 (b), at 325, for dispensing with service upon the company, as the defendants principal shareholders in the company, Jones v, Miller, 24 O, R. 268.

Payment for Services.]—Where shares in a company incorporated under the Dominion Joint Stock Companies Act, R. S. C. c. 119, were applied for, and the applicants paid to the company an amount equal to the face value of the shares, but at the same time received from the company a portion of the price as alleged consideration for services to be rendered by them to the company at a future date, it was held, in a judgment creditor's action, that the shares, to the extent of the amounts so allowed, must be treated as unpaid shares. Union Bank v. Morris, Union Bank v. Ode, 27 A. R. 396.

Payment.]—The plaintiff, a creditor of a company incorporated by letters patent, sued defendant, a shareholder, who pleaded that there was nothing due upon his stock. appeared that there were nine shareholders, two of whom held a patent right under which the company were to work. The defendant held $5,000 stock, on which he had paid in cash $1,000. It was arranged between the patentees and the other shareholders, that the latter should pay an additional ten per cent, on their stock, making twenty per cent, in consideration of which the patentees, who were said to have a large cash claim against the company for their patent right, were to pay up the balance of the unpaid stock of the seven shareholders, equal to $28,000, out of this claim. In pursuance of this arrange-ment, each of the seven gave his cheque to ment, each of the seven gave his cheque to the secretary for the balance of his unpaid stock, which the secretary passed on to the patentees, who accepted the cheques and gave receipts to the company for the amount. The patentees then handed back the cheques and receipts to the secretary, who returned the cheques to the shareholders by whom they were given, it having been agreed beforehand that they were to be so returned, and not used:—Held, that this transaction was not a payment in full of the stock, and that defendant was liable. Scales v. Irwin, 34 U. C. R.

Payment—Registration of Certificate—Pleading.|—In an action against defendants as stockholders of a joint stock company incorporated under C. S. C. c. 63, for debts incurred by the company to plaintiffs, the declaration averred that the whole amount of the capital stock had not been paid in, nor a certificate to that effect, signed and sworn to by a majority of the trustees of the company, registered in the registry office of the company, registered in the registry office of the county, nor had the defendants paid up the full amount of their shares, nor made nor registered a certificate to that effect as required by the Act:—Held, good, for it was unnecessary to negative the registration of a certificate, under s. 46, of the payment in full of the capital stock, and the requirements of s. 35, which were negatived, could not be dispensed with in the case as stated in the declaration. McKenzie v. Kittridge, 24 C. P. 1. Quere, as to the application and meaning of s, 46. Ib.

The defendants' first plea alleged that they were not, at the respective times when the debts were made or contracted, or at any time from thence until the commencement of this suit, stockholders in the company:—Herd, good, not being open to objection as tendering an immaterial issue, whether defendants were stockholders at the commencement of this suit, for the averment as to that could not preindice or embarrass the plaintiff. Ib.

prejudice or embarrass the plaintiff. Ib. The replication to the first plea alleged, that although the defendants did transfer the shares to other parties, the balance due there shares to other paid in, as required by the Act and not been paid in, as required by the Act and how the paid in, as required by the Act and previous cub how for under ss. 29 and 30, if all previous cub how many stocked ante might ransfer, and without such payment they could of transfer, and would remain stockholders.

main stockholders. *Ib.*The second plea alleged that within five years after incorporation defendants paid up their full shares, and thereafter and before suit, namely, 1st October, 1873, a certificate to that effect was signed and sworn to by a majority of the trustees, including the president, before the registrar, and was on the same day duly registered, as prescribed by the Act:—Held, good, without alleging that it was filed within thirty days, for that the limit, prescribed by s. 35, applies to the general payment in full of the stock, not to payment by one individual shareholder; and that it was unnecessary to shew that the defendants paid up within the time mentioned in the declaration of incorporation, or that the certificate was filed before the contracting of the debts sued for. Ib.

Under s. 33. as soon as a shareholder has pulp his full shares, and registered the certificate prescribed, his liability ceases, except in the cases specific in the Act; and this notwithstanding s. 34, which, owing to the manner in which the previous statutes have been consolidated, is apparently inconsistent.

Under the C. L. P. Act, s. 97, to make a plea a good plea to the further maintenance of the action, it is sufficient if it disclose on its face matter which arose after the commencement of the action; no formal commencement is necessary. Therefore in an action by creditors against shareholders of a company, a plea setting up the payment of their shares in full by defendants, not saying before the suit, and that a certificate to that effect was drawn up, sworn, and registered after the commencement of the suit, was:—Held a good plea of a defence arising after suit, the defence being incomplete without the registry, S. C., ib. 145.

Payment — Registration of Certificate — Pleading,]—In an action by the creditors of the company against five of the shareholders, the declaration, after setting out an unsatisfiel judgment recovered by the plaintiffs against the company, alleged that the defendants before the debt was contracted, and before this suit, were stockholders and had not paid up their shares in full, whereby defendants became liable to pay said judgment. Three of the defendants pleaded that they were not stockholders when the contract in respect of which the notes were given was made, nor from thence until, nor at, the commencement of this suit. The plaintiffs replied that these three defendants were trustees of the company, and omitted to make the annual report required by the statute, whereupon they became individually liable for the debts of the company:—Held, that the replication was a departure, in alleging a different ground of liability from that taken in the declaration, and a ground which applied only to three out of the five defendants; and that in this latter respect there was a misjoinder. McKenzie v.

respect there was a misjoinder. McKensie v. Debrenn, 38 i. C. R. 32.

The second plea, by two of the defendants, alleged that within five years from the incorporation of the company they paid up their full shares, and before this suit, to wit, on the 1st October, 1873, a certificate to that effect was made, &c., and was duly registered, &c., "in the manner required by the statute in that behalf:"—Held, following pro formathe decision in McKenzie v. Kittridge, 24 C. P. 1, that the plea was good, though not shewing that the certificate was registered before the debts on which the judgment was recovered were contracted. This court, however, did not agree with that decision, but considered, taking together ss. 33, 34, and 35, that to protect himself from liability a shareholder must register his certificate of payment; and that if registered within thirty days from the payment the exemption would relate back to the time of payment, but if not, would begin only with the registry, Ib.

The fifth replication to the second plea was, that the defendants were original stockholders; that the whole capital stock had never been paid it; and that the debt in the declaration mentioned was contracted by the company before the payment in full of defendants shares, and before registration of the certificate—Held, good; and that under s. 33, a shareholder complying with the requirements is discharged from liability, though the full capital stock is not paid up. Ib.
Sixth prediction: that the carrifactor.

Sixth replication: that the certificate of payment mentioned was not made and sworn to nor registered within thirty days after such payment, as in the said plea alleged, in the manner by the said Act directed:—Held, bad, for the plea did not allege a registration within thirty days, and if before the contracting of the debt it would discharge the defendants, of the deaf if would discharge the detendants, though not within the thirty days. Ib.

Another defendant, O., pleaded that he had paid up his shares in full, and had made and registered a certificate as required by the Act, and had done the same in the time and after the manner required by the Act to free him from personal liability for the debts of the company. The third replication to it was the same as the fifth replication to the second plea, and was held good;—Held, also, that both pleas were improper in form, in pleading matter of law—that the certificate was duly registered, &c.—instead of alleging the facts, when it was registered or when he paid up that the facts of the control of the control full, &c., which the jury could try. Tb.

The fourth replication to O.'s plea was similar to the sixth replication to the second plea.

The defendant O. rejoined, on equitable grounds, that before the debt in the declaration mentioned was contracted, and before this suit, he had paid his shares in full, of which the plaintiffs had notice, and that he registered the certificate of payment as soon as he knew that it was required by the Act:

—Held, that the rejoinder was bad, as being a departure from the plea; but that otherwise a departure from the plen; but that otherwise is shewed a good answer on the merits. Ib.

On appeal to the court of appeal, Draper, C.J., and Patterson, J., were of opinion that the judgment of the court of common plens—namely, that under C. S. U. C., c. 63, ss. 53 and 35, a shareholder, on paying up his shares and registering a certificate thereof, even though after the expiration of the thirty of the court was except from all liability or future oned, was except from all liability or future of the court was except from all liability or future oned, and the court being of the court being of the court being country to register the exception it was necessary to register the exception it was necessary to register the exception it was necessary to register the extinction that therefore should be reversed. The court being equally divided, the appeal was dismissed with costs. McKenzie v. Kittridge, 27 C. P. 63.

Payment—Registration of Certificate.]—
In an action brought by McK. under the provisions of the C. S. C. c. (33, against K. et al., as stockholders of a joint stock company incorporated under said Act, to recover the amount of an unpaid judgment they had obtained against the company, the defendants, K. et al., pleaded interails, that they had polai up their full shares and thereafter and before suit had obtained and registered a certificate to that effect—Held, that under ss, 33, 34, and 35, C. S. C. (35, as soon as a shareholder has paid up his full shares and has registered, although not until after the thirty days mentioned in s. 35, a certificate to that effect, his liability to pay any debts of the company then existing or thereafter contracted ceases, excepting always debts to employees, as specially mentioned in s. 36. McKenzie v. Kittridge, 4 S. C. R. 368; 27 C. P. 65; 24 C. P. 1.

Payment on Shares — Appropriation of Payment by Company. 1—N. a director and shareholder of a railway company, agreed to lend the company $100,000. taking among other securities for the loan 168 shares held by B., which were to be paid up. B. was allowed to the security of the loan 168 shares held by B., which were to be paid up. B. was dead to see that the loan 168 shares held by B., which were to be paid up. B. was dead to see that the loan 168 shares held to see that the loan 168 shares held to see that the loan 168 shares had be company agreed to true the loan 168 shares, and B. consented to trasfer that number to N. as suly paid up. N. agreed to this and B. signed a suly paid up. N. agreed to this and B. signed a transfer had been part of directors authorizing the appropriation of the money paid by B. A. properties of the loan 169 directors authorizing the appropriation of the money paid by B. A. was allowed the loan 169 directors authorizing the appropriation of the money paid by B. A. properties of the loan 169 directors authorizing the appropriation of the money paid by B. A. properties of the loan 169 directors of the same part of the loan 169 directors of the money paid by B. was invalid for want of a formal resolution authorizing it:—Held, reversing 18 A. R. 658, that the company having got the benefit of the loan by N., were estopped from disputing the application of the money paid by B. in such a way as to constitute N. the holder of the 75 shares, upon the security of which the loan was made, and creditions, not having been prejudiced, were bound in the same way; and the transaction being binding between B. and the company, and not objectionable as regarder creditors, N. could accept the 75 shares in lieu of the 168 he was entitled to. Nector v. Toen of Thorold, 22 S. C. R. 330.

Persons Acting as Shareholders.]—In 1872 five persons filed in the registry office a declaration that they were desirous of forming a joint stock company, under C. S. U. C. c. 63, by the name of the Dominion Safety Gas Company, for the object of "the manufacture and (or) sale of the machinery and materials for the manufacture or production of gas from evaporating fluids, and gas fixtures of all kinds, and such other articles as may from time to time be deemed advisable; and also the lighting of cities, towns, villages, streets, capital buildings, steamboats, coaches, and street and railroad cars with gas," with a capital stock of $50,000, in 300 shares of $20 each, and three of the defendants were stated to be trustees. Subsequently these trustees met and passed by-laws as to the government of the company. On 17th February, 1873, a meeting of the shareholders was held, when an agreement was entered into for the purchase of a patent for the manufacture of gas, and a resolution was passed that the shareholders should pay on their stock enough to make a working capital of $1,250. An agreement was made that the stock should be divided up between the five defendants in proportions stated, and these defendants, as shareholders, subsequently met, increased the number of trustees from three to five, and elected themselves such trustees. No stock was ever subscribed for or anything ever paid thereon, the money required to carry on the business being raised from time to time by contribution. The company, in 1874, put up a gas machine in the plaintiff's residence, which, on 12th February, 1874, exploded, and injured the plaintiff, for which he sued the company and recovered damages, and on 29th February, 1876, judgment was entered, and a fi. fa. goods is sued against the company, which was returned nulla bona. This action was then brought against defendants, as shareholders, for the amount of the unpaid stock, and also as trustees on their individual liability under the Act for neglecting to publish within twenty days after the 1st January, 1875, as required by the Act, a report stating the amount of the capital stock actually paid and of the then existing debts of the company, or to insert therein plaintiff's claim as one of such existing debts. — Held, that the company was duly incorporated under C. S. U. C. 63, for though the Act did not authorize the formation of a company for lighting cities, &c., with gas, it did for the other objects stated, and the corporation could exist for such objects alone:—Held, that the evidence set out in the case was sufficient to shew such incorporation. Osler v. Bowell, 43 U. C. R. 40.

Held, that the defendants were not liable as shareholders in the company to the plain-tiff, as a creditor; for to create such liability, under the statute, there must be a subscription for stock; and the fact that they had acted and been treated as shareholders would not enable a creditor to proceed against them as such. Held, also, that neither were they liable as trustees for neglecting to make the report, for the plaintiff's claim was not an existing debt at the time of such neglect, nor until the entry of his judgment. Ib.

Prior Action Pending.]—In an action brought against a stockholder by a creditor of the company to recover amounts due and unpaid on certain shares, the defendant pleaded that prior to the issuing of the writ in this action certain other actions had been commenced against him to enforce payment of the same amounts, and that they were still pending:—Held, no defence, as it did not shew payment to some one or more entitled to it. Perry v. McCraken, 7 P. R. 32.

Quebec Law—Payment in Cash—Price of Property Sold.]—The shares of promoters of a company incorporated under the Revised Statutes of Quebec having been credited as paid in full under an arrangement by which half the amount thereof was paid in cash and half by receipts on account of the purchase price of the property acquired by the company:—Held, that under art. 4722, par. 1 (originally enacted as s. 1 of 47 Vict. c. 73 (Q.), reproducing s. 25 of the English Companies Act. 1867), the shares were rightly so credited; the promoters having acted in good faith and the purchase price being fair. Spargo's Case, L. R. S. Ch. 407, approved. Larocque v. Beauchemin, [1887] A. C. 358.

Security — Shares in Form Paid Up.1— In an action by way of sci. fa. by plantiff, a judgment creditor of the Ontario Wood Pavement Company, incorporated under 27 & 28 Vict. c. 23, against defendant as a shareholder thereof for unpaid stock, it appeared by oral evidence that the stock was transferred by one A. to defendant as collateral security for a debt due to defendant by A., but the transfer was on its face absolute, and there was nothing in the books of the company to shew that A. had any interest in it:
—Held, that under s. 5, s.-s. 19, the fact of the stock being transferred as collateral security should have appeared in the books of the company; and, semble, also in the transfer itself, and that defendant therefore was not exempt under s.-s. 29:—Held, also that the defendant was liable, although the shares were entered in the company's books and in the certificate as fully paid up, inssmuch as he was informed and knew that they were in fact unpaid, Page v. Austin, 30 C. P. 108.

Security — Transfer Absolute in Form.]
— Where a statutory liability is attempted to be imposed on a party which can only attach to an actual legal shareholder in a company, he is not estopped by the mere fact of having received transfers of certificates of stock from questioning the legality of the issue of such stock:—Held, that although A., a mortgage of the shares and not an absolute owner, had taken a transfer absolute in form and caused it to be entered in the books of the company as an absolute transfer, he was not estopped from proving that the transfer of the shares was by way of mortgage. Page v. Austin, 10 S. C. R. 132; 7 A. R. 1.

Set-off of Debt Due by Company.]—Action against defendant as a shareholder in the company of the company of the company. Action against defendant as a shareholder of the company, alleging a judgment recovered and fi. far. returned nulla bona. Plea, on equitable grounds, a set-off due to defendant by the company, on the common counts, and on a judgment recovered by the defendant against the company, on which a fi. fa. had been returned nulla bona: — Held, that the plea formed no defence, for the plaintiff was not claiming in right of the company, but by virtue of a specific statutory remedy; and the decision in Macbeth v. Smart. 14 Gr. 298, was in principle applicable, notwithstanding the fact of defendant having a judgment and execution. Benner v. Currie, 38 U. C. R. 411.

Set-off.]—After plaintiff had commenced an action against the defendant to recover from him in respect of his unpaid stock in a joint stock company, the sum of $442,29, being the amount of an unsatisfied judgment recovered by the plaintiff against the company, for $4,333,08, and assigned it to one G, who assigned part of the money recovered to the extent of $500, the amount of the defendant sassigned part of the money recovered to the extent of $500, the amount of the defendant was to give him priority over the plaintiff's claim:
—Hield, that the procuring of such assignment by defendant being for such purpose, and being a voluntary act on the defendant part, and with notice of plaintiff's claim, did not constitute a defence to it; but semble, if the set-off had accrued to the defendant in his own right, although after action brought, it would have been otherwise. G, assigned the remainder of his judgment to M., who after the commencement of the plaintiff's action, and with knowledge thereof, recovered a judgment against defendant for $520.21 without defence, and to give M. a preference in respect of his unpaid stock, which defendant paid to M., who released the company from their liability on the judgment so recovered against them to the extent of $500:—Held, that the judement so recovered, and the payment there-under, constituted a good defence to the plaintiff's claim; and that the prior commencement of the plaintiff's action was immaterial. Field v. Galloway, 5 O. R. 502.

Shares in Name of Third Person.]—A charring order was made against stock in a miway company to which a party was entitled, but such stock it was shewn had, by its direction, been issued to his son, so that in a suit against the father the sheriff could not dispose of it under execution; whereupon a bill was filed against the father and son stating these facts, and charging that the son gave no consideration for the stock; that the same was issued to him to hold for the use of the father, and was so issued to defeat, hinder, and delay the plaintiffs and other creditors of the father. At the hearing no evidence was given in support of the plaintiffs' case other than the pleadings and proceedings in the suit against the father and in which such charging order had been made; but the depositions of the son, who had been examined in that suit, were not read:—Held, that as the son had not been a party to that cause he was not bound by the evidence theres, in; the court, therefore, refused to make any decree against him, and as any decree against the father would not give the plaintiffs any greater benefit than they had by the charging order, dismissed the bill with costs. Allow, Phelps, 23 Gr. 395.

Shares in Name of Third Person.]—
The Imperial statute, 1 & 2 Vict, c. 110, if in force in this province, authorizes the issuing of a charging order against stocks standing in the name of a debtor "in his own right or in the name of any person in trust for him," but does not apply where such stocks have been fraudulently assigned in order to avoid execution. Caffrey v. Phelps, 24 Gr. 344.

Shares Issued at a Discount—Purchase in Good Faith as Paid-Up,]—Certain shares in a company incorporated by letters patent! issued under 27 & 28 Vict. c. 23, were allotted by a resolution passed at a special general meeting of the shareholders to themselves, in proportion to the number of shares held by them at that time, at 40 per cent. discount deducted from their nominal value, and scrip issued for them as fully paid up, G. under this arrangement was allotted nine shares, which were subsequently assigned to the appellant for value as fully paid up. Appellant inquired of the secretary of the company, who also informed him that they were fully paid up shares, and he accepted them in good faith as such, and about a year afterwards became a director of the company. The shares appeared as fully paid up in the certificate of transfer, whilst on each conterfoil in the share book the amount mention was "Shares, two at $300-$000?"—Hold, eversing 1 A. R. 1, which had reversed shares in good faith without notice from an original shareholder under 27 & 28 Vict. c. 23, as a great of the company whose execution creditor of the samount unpaid upon the shares. McCraken v. McIntyre, 1 S. C. R. 479.

Shares Taken in Payment.] - The plaintiff performed certain work, amounting to $465, for defendants, a joint stock company, incorporated under R. S. O. 1877 c. 150, under an agreement for payment in shares of the capital stock of the company;—Held, that the agreement was not ultra vires of the company; and that the plaintiff's acceptance of the shares under such agreement would not render him liable to pay the amount thereof to creditors of the company;—Held, also, that the plaintiff could not sue on an implied assumpsit to recover the value of the work so performed in money, unless it was shewn that defendants were unable or had refused to deliver the shares. Inglis v. Wellington Hotel Co., 29 C. P. 387.

Statutory Liability.]—On sci. fa. to render the individual members of a company formed under the general Act 16 Vict. c, 191, liable for its debts:—Held, that in the absence of any express provision in such Act, they were not so liable, and even if they were, quare, whether they would not have been exempted by the operation of 12 Vict. c, 10, s. 5, s.*s. 24. Emerson v, Flint, 7 C. P. 161.

Ultra Vires Transaction. |—In an action by way of sci. fa. against a shareholder in an incorporated company, against which the plaintiff had recovered a fruittess judgment, the defendant alleged as defences that the judgment was recovered upon certain promissory notes which the plaintiff procured the company to make to him, without consideration, when insolvent to his knowledge; that the notes were made in fraud of the creditors and contributories, and were ultra vires of the company; and that the company had a good defence to the action on the notes, but allowed the plaintiff to take judgment by default:—Held, that these defences might have been raised in the original action, and were not available in this; and they were struck out. Shaver v. Cotton, 16 P. R. 278. See 27 O. R. 131, 23 A. R. 426.

Unregistered Transfer — Statutory Change. I—Judgment creditors of an incorporated company, being unable to realize anything on their judgment, brought action against H. as a shareholder, in which they failed from inability to prove that he was owner of any shares. They then brought action against G. in which evidence was given, not produced in the former case, that the shares once held by G. had been transferred to H., but were not registered in the company's books. On this evidence the court below gave judgment in favour of G.:—Held, that the shares were duly transferred to H. though not registered, as it appeared that H. had acted for some time as president of, and executed decuments for, the company, and the only way he could have held shares entitling him to do so was by transfer from G. Held, also, that although there appeared to be a failure of justice from the result of the two actions, the inability of the plaintiffs to prove their case against H. in the first could not affect the rights of G. in the subsequent suit. The company in which G. held stock was incorporated in 1889, and empowered to build a certain line of railway. In 1890 an Act was passed intituled "An Act to Consolidate and Amend" the former Act, but authorizing additional works to be constructed, increasing the capital stock, appointing an entirely different set of directors, and giving the company larger powers. One clause repealed all Acts and parts of Acts inconsistent therewith. G. had transferred his shares before the latter Act came into force. The judgment against the company was recovered in 1895;—Held, that G. was never a shareholder of the company against whom such judgment was obtained, Hamilton v. Grant, 30 S. C. R. 566.

Winding-up Act.]—No action maintainable by creditor against shareholder after winding-up order is made. Shaver v. Cotton, 27 O. R. 131; 23 A. R. 426.

IX. SPECIAL COMPANIES AND CASES.

1. Foreign Company,

Agents.]—The general agents in Canada of a foreign company must be regarded in the same light as the general agents at the head office in the foreign country. Campbell v. National Life Ins. Co., 24 C. P. 133.

Attachment.]—A debt due by a foreign corporation to a resident of Upper Canada cannot be attached by service of the order to attach upon the agent of the corporation in this Province. Lundy v. Dickson, 6 L. J. 92.

Bank.]—A foreign corporation, such as a bank, cannot sue upon notes received and discounted by them in the course of banking business here, although they may maintain an action for money had and received against the person for whom such notes were discounted and to whom money was advanced on them. Bank of Montreal v. Bethune, 4 O. S. 341.

Bank Shares—4 sects.]—Held, that Ontario bank shares, though subscribed for at Montreal and at one time registered there, but transferred to Bowmanville during the testator's lifetime, and appearing in the stock register there only, were Ontario assets. Bloomfeld v. Brooke, S.P. R. 269.

Bond.] — A foreign corporation may sue here on a bond taken to secure the payment to them of premiums received by their agent in conducting an insurance business in this Province. Washington County Mutual Ins. Co. v. Henderson, 6 C. P. 146.

Contracts.]—Contracts with foreign corporations. See Canadian Pacific R. W. Co. v. Western Union Telegraph Co., 17 S. C. R. 151.

Forum.]—Leave was given to sign final judgment under Rule SO O. J. Act against a commany incorporated in England, having its head office there, and in process of liquidation there. but doing business and having assets and liabilities in Ontario. Plummer v. Lake Superior Native Copper Co., 10 P. R. 527

Goods Sold.]—Action by a foreign corporation, incorporated in the United States, against residents of this Province, on the common counts. Plea, that defendants are subjects of this Province, and the plaintiffs are a foreign corporation, and cannot sue in this Province. On demurer:—Held, that although the plaintiffs might not sue for goods bargained and sold on a contract made wholly in Upper Canada, they could for goods sold and delivered; and as in this case the plea must be taken to apply distributively to each cause of action stated in the count, that the account stated in Canada must be taken to have been of and concerning the taken to have been of and concerning where the right of the corporation to be a party to such proceedings could not be denied, Union India Rubber Co. v. Hibbard, 6 C. P. 77.

Insurance Company.] — The plaintiffs were a conjunny chartered by the state of New York to carry on mutual insurance in the county of Genesse. Their charter gave to the property insured, and so the property insured, and so the property is stated. The left of the land on which such the left stood:—Held, that the company, from the very nature and object of its charter, was incapable of carrying on its business in this Province, Genesee Mutual Ins. Co. v. Westman, S. U. C. R. 487.

man, S. U. C. R. 487.

Quære, whether any foreign corporation can under its foreign charter assume to carry on business here. Ib.

Lex Loci. |—The locality of the forum of litigation determines whether a corporation is foreign or not. A contract executed in Ontario and delivered by the agent of the contractor to the contractee in New York is governed by the laws of Ontario. Clarke v. Union Fire Ins. Co., 10 P. R. 313.

Personal Property—Bank Acts.]—Held, that the plaintiffs, a foreign corporation, could hold personal property in Ontario, Commercial National Bank of Chicago v. Corcoran, 6 O. R. 527.

Commercial Automotory coran, 6 O. R. 527. Held, the Act as to banks and banking, and warehouse receipts, did not apply to the plaintiffs, a foreign corporation. Ib.

Promissory Note.]—A foreign corporation may sue in this country on a promissory note given to them here for goods furnished by them to the maker. How Machine Co. v. Walker, 35 U. C. R. 37.

Review of authorities as to the right of a foreign corporation to contract and carry on Semble, that they may also, under certain circumstances, maintain an action for breach of an executory contract entered into here in the ordinary course of their business. Ib.

Replevin.] — Defendant in writing acknowledged the receipt from the plaintiff, described as assistant manager of the Howelmerhed as assistant manager of the Howelmerhed as assistant manager of the Howelmerhed as assistant manager of the Machine Company, of a sewing machine, on hire for nine months at $5 a month in advance. He agreed to pay $45, the value of the machine, in the event of its being injured or not returned; and in default of payment of the machine, in the event of the being injured or the machine should be deemed by the lessor to be in jeopardy, the plaintiff or the company might resume possession of it; and defendant waived all right of action for trespass, damages, or replevin, by reason of any action taken by the plaintiff or the company in resuming such possession. The plaintiff said he had possession of the machine before it was delivered to defendant; that he was responsible to the company, a foreign corporation; and had no property in it except as their agent:—Held, that the plaintiff under the agreement might maintain replevin in his own name for the machine, on non-fulliment of the conditions. Coguillard v. Hunter, 36 U. C. R. 316.

Service of Process. —Service on a foreign insurance company doing business in Ontario. See Wilson v. Ætna Life Ins. Co., S P. R. 131.

Taxation. |—Liability of foreign corporations to municipal assessment. See In re North of Scotland Canadian Mortgage Co., 31 C. P. 552: Phornix Ins. Co. of London v. the City of Kingston, 7 O. R. 343.

Telegraph Company — Comity of Nations. — In 1869 the E. & N. A. Ry. Co., owning the road from St. John, N. B., westward ing the road from St. John, N. B., westward to the United States boundary, made an agreement with the W. U. Tel. Co. giving the latter the exclusive right for ninety-nine years to construct and operate a line of telegraph over its road. In 1876 a mortgage on the road was foreclosed and the road itself sold under decree of the equity court of New Brunswick to the St. J. & M. Ry. Co., which company, in 1883, leased it to the N. B. Ry. Co. for a term of 909 years. The telegraph line was constructed by the W. U. Tel. Co., under the said agreement, and has been continued ever since without any new agreement thinder the sain agreement, and has been continued ever since without any new agreement being made with the St. J. & M. Ry. Co. or the N. B. Ry. Co. The W. U. Tel. Co. is an American company, incorporated by the state of New York, for the purpose of constructing and operating telegraph lines in the state. Its charter neither allows it to engage, or prohibits it from engaging, in business outside of the state. In 1888 the C. P. Ry. Co. completed a road from Montreal to St. John, for a percent a road from agontreal to Sc. John, for a portion of it having running powers over the line of the N. B. Ry. Co., on which the W. I. Tel. Co. had constructed its telegraph line. The N. B. Ry. Co. having given per-mission to the C. P. Ry. Co. to construct an-other telegraph line over the same road, the W. U. Tel. Co. applied for and obtained an other telegraph line over the same road, the W. U. Tel. Co. applied for and obtained an injunction to prevent its being built:—Held, I. that the agreement made in 1869 between the E. & N. A. Ry. Co. and the W. U. Tel. Co. is binding on the present owners of the road. 2. That the contract made with the W. U. Tel. Co. was consistent with the purposes of its incorporation, and not problitted by its charter nor by the local laws of New Brunswick and its right to enter into such a conwick, and its right to enter into such a conwhen, and its right to enter into such a contract and carry on the business provided for thereby is a right recognized by the comity of nations. 3. The exclusive right granted to the W. U. Tel. Co, does not avoid the contract as being against public policy, nor as being a contract in restraint of trade, Canadian Pacific R. W. Co. v. Western Union Telegraph Co., 17 S. C. R. 151.

Winding Up in Foreign Court.]—A fire insurance company incorporated in the state of New York and carrying on business in this Province, cannot be allowed to do so after proceedings have been taken, necording to the law of its domicile, with a view of winding up the affairs of the company, and that irrespective of what the result of the proceedings may be as to solvency or insolvency of the company. Douglas v. Atlantic Mutaul Light Ins. Co., 25 Gr. 339.

2. Special Charters.

Canada Company.]—Process to compel an appearance by the company could not be served on their attorneys here, the directors and a common seal being in England. Cooper v. Canada Company, Dra. 413.

Held. 1. that the recitals in the Imperial statute 6 (so. IV. c. 75, were sufficient proof of the charter of the company; 2. that the company had power to appoint a special seal for the execution of deeds by their commissioners here, and the proof of such seal given in this case was sufficient; 3. that the production of a document within the powers of the corporation, with the seal attached, is sufficient prima facie evidence of its proper execution. Woodkill v. Sullivan, 14 C. P. 265.

Under 27 & 28 Vict. c. 100, a deed from the company, dated 17th February, 1835, in the form given by the Imperial Act, 9. Geo. IV. c. 51, and under the seal of the attorneys of the company, was held proved by its mere production, and sufficient to pass the fee. Fell v. South, 24 U. C. R. 196.

The company, by their charter, are not exempted from giving to purchasers of the lands granted to them by the Crown the usual covenants against their own acts; and as to lands purchased from private individuals, the company will be required to give the same covenants as another vendor. Scarlett v. Canada Co., 1 Ch. Ch. 90.

Consumers' Gas Company of Mont-real—Right to Stop Supply.]—By the true construction of the Canadian Act, 12 Viet. c. 183, s. 29, the Montreal Gas Company is authorized to cease supplying a customer with gas at any of his houses on his neglect to pay its bill for any one of them. Montreal Gas Company v. Cadicux. [1890] A. C. 589, reversing 28 S. C. R. 382.

Consumers' Gas Company of To-ronto.]—The defendants, an incorporated company, carrying on business in the city of Toronto as manufacturers and suppliers of gas, in 1887 obtained an Act, 50 Vict. c. 85 (O.), whereby they were empowered to increase their capital stock from $1,000,000 to $2,000,000, such additional stock to be sold by public auction, and the Act provided that the surplus realized over the par value thereof should be added to their reserve fund, which they were thereby authorized to maintain, unthey were thereby authorized to maintain, until the same should equal one-half of their paid-up capital, and that such reserve fund might be invested in Dominion or Provincial stock, municipal debentures, etc.; that a plant and buildings' renewal fund should be created out of the defendants' earnings, to which out of the detendants' earnings, to which fund should be placed each year five per cent, on the value of plant and buildings, against which all usual and ordinary renewals and repairs should be charged; and that any surplus of net profit from any source whatever, including premiums on sales of stock after the establishment of the reserve and renewal fund, payment of directors, and a ten per cent, dividend, should be carried to a special account, and on such account becoming equal to five cents per 1,000 cubic feet on the quan-tity of gas sold in the previous year, the price of gas during the then current year should be reduced by at least that amount. In an action brought by the plaintiffs on behalf of themselves as well as all other consumers of themselves as well as all other consumers of gas:—Held, that defendants were obliged to include in the rest or reserve fund (a) the moneys standing to the credit of the profit and loss account at the time of the passing of the Act, (b) the moneys to the credit of the contingent account at the same time, (c) and the moneys received from the premiums on the sale of the stock until the fund amounted to fifty per cent. of the paid-up capital; that the provision as to the nature of the invest-ment of the reserve fund was obligatory, and it was ultra vires of the defendants to invest it, or any part of it, in the purchase or construction of plant or buildings, or in the business generally; or to invest the premiums on the sale of stock, or any part thereof, in the erection of buildings until the rest or reserve fund equalled one-half of the paid-up capital: -Held, also, that the five per cent, directed to be carried to the plant and buildings' re-newal fund should be so carried, notwith-standing that the usual and ordinary repairs did not amount to that percentage, and no obligation rested on the defendants to invest any unemployed part of this fund:-Held, the defendants had no right to also, that write off sums from profits for depreciation write on sums from pronts for depreciation in plant:—Held, lastly, that the plaintiffs could properly maintain the action, and that the Attorney-General was not a necessary party. Johnston v. Consumers' Gas Co., 27 O. R. 9. But reversed on the ground that plaintiffs had no locus standi; 23 A. R. 566. See the next case.

Where by an Act extending the powers of the respondent company certain duties and obligations were imposed on it for the benefit of its customers, with a view to the reduction of the price of gas contingent on the amount of surplus net profit, but no pecuniary penalty was imposed for default and no right of action given to persons aggrieved, provision however being made for its accounts being audited by direction of the mayor of the corporation with whose assent the company was originally established:—Held, that no individual customer had a right of action against the company for non-compliance with the provisions of the Act. Such a right only arises where given by the Act, and especially so where the Act as in this case is in the nature of a private legislative bargain, and not one of public and general policy. Johnston and Toronto Type Foundry Company v. Consumers' Gas Company of Toronto, [1889]

See also Watson v. Gas Co., 5 U. C. R. 262, as to liability for nuisance.

Go-operative Association. —The plaintiffs supplied goods to a co-operative association, formed under 20 Vict. c. 22 on the order of their manager. The terms of purchase were said to be cash, but it appeared that according to the course of dealing between the parties, before payment the invoices were laid before a board meeting, and if found correct, the treasurer was ordered to pay. These goods were ordered in January, and not paid for, and in July the plaintiffs sued:—Held, not a cash transaction within the 14th section of the Act, and that the plaintiffs could not recover. Semble, that the defence should have been specially pleaded, and the plea was allowed to be added. Fitzgerald v. London Co-operative Association, Limited, 27 U. C. R. 605.

Held, that R. S. O. 1877 c. 158, s. 15, an Act respecting co-operative associations, which requires the business there referred to to be a cash business, does not prevent an association formed to carry on a "labour" or "trade," from entering into contracts on credit necessary for and incidental to such labour or trade—other than contracts of buying or selling—such as contracts for work or services. Ontario Co-operative Stone Cutters' Association v. Clarke, 31 C. P. 280.

The plaintiff sued the officers and directors of a co-operative association, incorporated under R. S. O. 1887 c. 1056, for the price of goods sold to it on credit, which, by the statute incorporating it, the association was forbidden to buy in that way:—Held, that he could not recover, as no action could be maintained upon an implied representation or warranty of authority in law to do an act; and, moreover, the plaintiff must be taken to have known of the statutory inability:—Held, also, that, although the proceeds of a re-sale of the goods by the association were applied to relieve the defendants from a personal liability for other goods purchased by the association, they could not be said to have derived a personal benefit from the plaintiff's goods, and, therefore, the latter could not recover on this ground:—Held, lastly, that, although one of the defendants accepted, on behalf of the association, the plaintiff's drafts drawn on it for the goods, he was not liable upon an implied representation or warranty of authority in law of the association so to accept. Struthers v. Mackenice, 28 O. R. 381.

Gas Company.]—In an action against a gas company for a nuisance, a plea of justification containing the averment that they are now managing their works carefully, and that the vapours complained of unavoidably arise, is bad, as applying the defence to the time of pleading, and not of action brought. Watson v. Gas Co., 5 U. C. R. 262.

Semble, that a declaration would be good

Semble, that a declaration would be good in charging defendants generally with causing offensive vapours to arise, &c., without assigning the particular cause of the vapours; but the defect would be cured by the plea undertaking to describe the causes, &c., and to justify them. Ib.

Quere, can the gas company of the city of Toronto, under their Act of incorporation and their lease from the city, carry on their work of manufacturing gas, &c., without liability for nuisances injurious to private rights, so long as they occasion no nuisance which they could by due care have avoided. Ib.

A gas company incorporated under C. S. C. 65, inving made a charge for a special illumination, which was disputed, refused to supply gas to the same premises for paid refused to supply gas to the same premises for paid refused to the same premises to the same paid refused to the same premises for the same paid refused to the same paid refused t

A company incorporated under 16 Vict. c. 173, for supplying a city with gas, will be restrained during the currency of a quarter from cutting off the gas from a house, the occupant of which had paid the rent for the preceding quarter. Smith v. London Gas Co., 7 Gr. 112.

The declaration represented the plaintiffs and one C. to have individually associated themselves together to procure a charter 8s a gas company, which they obtained, for which and other services they had acquired a claim against the company; that they individually owned books, &c., relating to the company; and that they agreed to and did surrender to defendant and one H., at their request, 1, their said claim; 2, the subscription list; 3, the books; 4, as far as they lawfully could their right, title, interest in, or control over, the assets of the company, and the charter, for all of which defendant and H. agreed to pay the plaintiffs $2,000:—

Held, declaration good; for the sale alleged was not of the franchise and charter of the company, but of the mere claims of the plaintiffs thereon, and their personal rights and interests in the concern. Miller v. Thompson, 15 C. P. 186.

Grafton Road Company.]—The Grafton Road Company, under 10 & 11 Vict. c. 93, s. 35, may make contracts by parol. Turley v. Grafton Road Co., S U. C. R. 579.

Huron College.]—By their Act of incorporation. 26 Vict. c. 31, Huron College is authorized to take, hold, and convey lands sold, given or granted to it provides the sold provides and provided, also, that it may acquire any other real estate, by gift, devise or bequest, and hold the same for seven years, to revert to the person from whom it was acquired if not disposed of within that time. The plaintiff in ejectment claimed as assignee of a mortrage executed to the college in 1864, and assigned by them to him in the same year; and it was objected that they had no power either to take or assign such mortrage:—Held, that under the first part of the clause the college could take the land; and if prevented from holding it by the first proviso, that the Crown only could take advantage of their disability, and they could convey their defeasible title. Becher v. Woods, 16 C. P. 20.

International Bridge Company.]—By Acts of the legislature of Canada and the state of New York respectively, a company was incorporated in either country for the purpose of constructing a suspension bridge across the river Niagara, for railroad and other purposes, with compulsory powers as to the taking of lands, &c., and having the right to impose tolls for the user of the bridge. The two companies so incorporated joined in a lease of the upper or railway floor of the bridge for the term of their charters, to a railway companies to the lessees might arrange with:—Held, that such assignment was ultra vires and void. Such as a subjection of the property of the superference of the company to the lessees the subject of the property of the superference of the superference of the superference of the subject of

The Erie and Nigara Railway Company had, by statute, authority to arrange for the passage over such bridge from Canada into the United States; but it was alleged that the lesses refused them permission to cross the bridge. Thereupon an information by the Attorney-General of Ontario, at the relation of the Erie and Niagara Company, and a bill by that company, were filed against the two bridge companies and their lessess, complaining of such refusal; and praying a declaration, I, that the lense of the bridge was ultra vires; 2, that the Erie and Niagara Company were entitled to the use of the bridge on paying reasonable tolls; and for an injunction restraining the defendants from preventing the Erie and Niagara Company using the bridge. The evidence shewed that the Erie and Niagara Company had not effected any actual connection with the bridge, and that it was not clear they could do so without passing over lands of the lessees; and that by their charter the American Bridge Company had the power of making a lease to one railway company exclusively. Under these circumstances, as the damage, if any, to the Erie and Ningara Company was only prospective, and they could not be said to have sustained any actual damage by the refusal of the defendants to recognize their right to use the bridge, the court, at the hearing, dismissed their bill as against all the defendants, and also dismissed the information as against the American Bridge Company with costs; defendants of the court, at the hearing, dismissed their formation as against the Canadian Bridge Company with costs; defendants that even if the Erie and Niagara Company had established a complete title to relief as against the Canadian Bridge Company, still, as this court had no authority to interfere with the American Bridge Company, and could only have compelled the other defendants to permit the cars of the Erie and Niagara Company to cross as far as the Canadian Bridge Company's charter extended, i. e., to the centre of the bridge, and was thus unable to afford any effectual assistance, the court on this ground also would have refused to interfere. Ib.

An information alleged that the International Bridge Company had constructed and completed the said bridge, and the same was adapted to the passage of railway trains and foot passengers; but that the defendants prevented "persons on foot to cross the said bridge, although willing and offering to pay the lawful tolls provided by the said Act." and that the defendants' intention was "to maintain the said bridge as a railway bridge only, and not as a carriage or foot bridge;" and prayed an injunction to restrain the defendants "from preventing Her Majesty's subjects from using the footway of the said bridge at their will and pleasure on the payment of lawful tolls," or preventing then from using in the same manner the footpaths thereof. The information also prayed the religious tructed in the manner contemplated in the Act of incorporation. In view of the fact that a large sum of money had been expended in the construction of the bridge so far as it was built, and which had been so built in accordance with the provisions of their Act of incorporation, the court allowed a demurrer for want of equity; but, in so far as the information shewed an unlawful exclusion of the bridge, the demurrer was overruled; but, under the circumstances, without costs to either party. To such an information a railway company who had become lessees of the bridge were held to be proper parties. Aftorney-General v. International Bridge Co., 27 Gr. 37.

The defendants were a company incorporated by the Dominion Parliament for the construction of a bridge from Canada to the United States, across the Niagara river, which was to be as well for the passage of persons on foot, and in carriages, and otherwise, as for the passage of railway trains. The company completed the bridge for railway purposes only. The time limited by the charter for the completion of the work having elapsed, an incompetion of the work having enjased, an in-formation was filed seeking to restrain the use of the bridge by a railway company to which the bridge had been leased, until put into condition for ordinary traffic, or for the removal of the bridge as a nuisance, and to compel permission of its use by foot passengers on payment of the statutory tolls. bridge owing, it is said, to engineering difficulties, could not be adapted to the use of carriages and foot passengers :- Held, reversing 28 Gr. 65, that the abandonment of that portion of the work relating to foot passengers and carriages did not make the bridge a public nuisance, and the Act of incorporation was not a contract with the public, but merely gave conditional powers creating correlative duties, and was permissive; and that specific performance thereof would not be enforced. Attorney-General v. International Bridge Co., 6 A. R. 537.

Held, that the Attorney-General for Ontario, as representing only a limited portion of the public, with whom, if at all, such contract existed, had no locus standi. The work being one within the jurisdiction of the Parliament of Canada, that Parliament, presumably with knowledge of the state of the bridge, allowed debentures to be issued upon it:— Held, upon this ground also that the Attorney-General of Ontario was not the proper party to file the information. Ib.

Held, also, that as the bridge extended beyound the limits of the Province, part only being therein, it would be unavailing for the court to give the public the right to pass over that part of the bridge only which was within its jurisdiction; and for this reason also, the court would not interfere. Ib.

Held, that the International Bridge Company was under Canadian Act, 20 Vict. c. 227, 8. 16, entrusted with a general and unqualified power of making by-laws and regulations as to the use of its bridge and the terms on which it should be used in point of payment; and that there is nothing in s. 2 of the amending Act (22 Vict. c. 124), when read and construed together with the principal Act, which cuts down that power as to the regulation of the use of the bridge and as to the terms on which it may be used by railway trains. As to the reasonableness of charges, the principle is not what profit it may be reasonable for a company to make, but what it is reasonable to charge to the person who is charged. Canada Southern R. W. Co., V. International Bridge Co., 8 App. Cas. 723; 7 A. R. 226; 28 Gr. 114.

Lake Superior Navigation Company.]—Defendant subscribed for certain shares of plaintiffs' stock, an incorporated company under 27 & 28 Vict. c. 23, and bound himself to pay as required by the board of directors. Somewhat over half the enjital stock was subscribed for in this way:—Held, no answer to plaintiffs' call on defendant for the amount of his stock, that there had been no allotment of shares, and defendant was not therefore a shareholder:—Held, also, that plaintiffs were entitled to call in all the unpaid stock at one time, as the Act did not prevent their so doing. Lake Superior Navigation Co. v. Morrison, 22 C. P. 217.

The statute provided for the issue of letters patent on half the capital being subscribed, though no express provision was made as to when the company should commence business; but the plaintiffs had commenced business with defendant's full knowledge, and he was, in fact, elected and acced as a director and never resigned his position as such:—Held, that he could not deny his liability to pay his stock on the ground that all the stock must be subscribed before cails could be made; and that the directors were warranted by the Act in commencing business, one-half the stock being subscribed, and in making the necessary calls therefor. Ib.

Marmora Foundry Company.]—Action for calls under 1 Will. IV. c. 11, against the for calls under 1 Will. IV. c. 11, against the defendant as one of the stockholders:—Held. that the stockholders in the said corporation were admissible as witnesses for the plaintiffs under 12 Vict. c. 70; that the said Act was not obsolete for non-user; that the clauses requiring the books of subscription to be opened within two months was only directory; that the subscription books subsequently opened might be considered as in connection with those previously opened, and that all the proceedings from the beginning might be taken together; that the omission in the new books of the name of II., one of the original peti-tioners for the Act, (he being dead) did not render the proceedings of the company invalid, nor was it fatal to the plaintiffs; that the sanction for the opening of the new subscription books of the two surviving petitioners to Parliament for the Act of incorporation was sufficient: that the names of the petitioners in the said Act named need not necessarily be signed to the new subscription books; and that defendant was not discharged from his liability by a minute made at a meeting of the directors, and entered in their minute book, declaring that the names of all stockholders who were in arrear should be erased from the subscription stock book of the company. By the Marmora Foundry Act, 1 Will. IV. c. 11, it is provided that the stock subscribed for "shall be due and payable to the said company" in the manner mentioned in the Act: and that in case of neglect or refusal to pay the instalments due on shares, such shares shall be forfeited and sold:—Held, that the company were not restricted to the remedy by forfeiture: and that they might maintain an action against a shareholder upon calls of stock subscribed. such forfeiture, of which plaintiffs had notice: —Held, plea bad, in that it did not rest with defendant to forfeit the shares. Ontario Marine Insurance Co. v. Ireland, 5 C. P. 135.

A call of four per cent, on the first instal-ment of five per cent, on the capital stock of the company, made by a quorum only, and not by a majority of the directors, is a good call under 12 Vict. c. 166, s. 9, the Act of incor-poration. S. C., ib. 139.

Provincial Insurance Company.]-Held, that an assignment of stock in the P vincial Insurance Company, duly executed by vancia insurance company, duly executed by assignor and assignee, for a good considera-tion, with proper notice to the company, was valid without further registration, provided the assignor was not indebted to the company and owed no calls, 22 Vict. e, 63 did not affect this case, Crawford v, Provincial Ins. Co., S C. P. 263.

Trust and Loan Company.] — The Trust and Loan Company, being the holders of a mortgage bearing 8 per cent, interest, transferred the same to a private individual: Held, that the assignee was entitled to en-force payment of the stipulated interest, not-withstanding that at the time of the creation of the incumbrance the company only could legally have reserved such a rate of interest. Reid v. Whitehead, 10 Gr. 446.

The purchaser of lands in Canada from the The purchaser of lands in Canada from the company cannot insist upon a conveyance under the corporate seal. Trust and Loan Company v, Monk, 14 Gr, 385.

But the company should provide and annex to the conveyance executed by the commissioners referred to in 25 Vict. c. 72, a certified copy of the instrument authorizing them to act for the company. Ib.

An execution by one of two or more commissioners is not a compliance with the Act.

An assignment to the company of a valid existing mortgage bearing more than eight per cent, interest, is not necessarily void. Trust and Loan Co. of Canada v. Boulton, 18 Gr.

Welland Canal Company.]—Where in the statute incorporating the Welland Canal Company, 4 Geo. IV. c. 17, s. 29, the two direchaving the smallest number of votes of the five chosen in a former election were declared to be ineligible at any subsequent election, and by a subsequent statute the number of directors was fixed at seven, and the persons named who were to constitute the board until the next election—the court held that two of the board having vacated their seats by non-residence, rendered it unnecessary for two of the remaining five to vacate their seats. Rex v. Welland Canal Co., Tay. 300.

X. WINDING-UP.

1. Application of Acts and Making of Order.

Adverse Proceedings.]-The court will not allow its administration of assets to be interfered with by other proceedings, affecting the estate; and creditors of such estate bring their rights with them into the master's office, which the court substitutes for proceedings at law. Clarke v. Union Fire Ins. Co., Caston's Case, 10 P. R. 339.

Bank.]—Sections 2 and 3 of the Winding-up Act, 47 Vict, c. 39 (D.), providing for the winding-up of insolvent companies, do not apply to banks, but an insolvent bank whether in process of liquidation or not at the time it is sought to bring it under the Winding-up Act, must be wound up with the preliminary proceedings provided for by ss. 99-102 of 45 Vict. c. 23 (D.), as amended by 47 Vict. c. 39 (D.). Mott v. Bank of Nova Scotia, In re Bank of Liverpool, 14 S. C. R. 650.

Carrying on Business.] — The paramount object of the Ontario Winding-up Act is the division of the company's assets among its creditors and members with all reasonable speed. The power to carry on the business after winding-up proceedings have been commenced, and thus to postpone the final wind-ing-up, is one which is not to be exercised unless a strong case of necessity for doing so exists. That the mortgagees of the company's works, who have foreclosed their mortgage, will be enabled to dispose of the works to greater advantage, and that by affording facilities for procuring repairs to the purchasers ittes for procuring repairs to the purchasers of the machinery manufactured by the company, the chances of obtaining payment of outstanding purchase notes will be improved, are not sufficient grounds to justify the carrying on of the business. In re Haggert Brothers Manufacturing Co., 20 A. R. 597.

Conduct of Proceedings.]-Under the facts stated in the report an order having been obtained in chambers by one creditor for winding up a company, the conduct of the proceedings was given to three creditors who had also applied for such order. Re Joseph Hall Manufacturing Co., 10 P. R, 485.

Constitutionality.] — Held, that the Winding-up Act, 45 Vict. c. 23 (D.), is intra vires the Dominion Parliament, and is in the nature of an insolvency law, and applies to all corporate bodies of the nature mentioned in it all over the Dominion, nature mentioned in it all over the Dominion, and that the company in question in this case, though incorporated under a Provincial charter, was subject to its provisions. English Injunction.]-Order by Judge in bankruptcy in England enjoining plaintiffs from proceeding in the high court of justice for Ontario. See Maritime Bank v. Stewart, 13 P. R. S6.

Evidence of Insolvency-Allegations in Petition. 1—On an application for an order for the winding-up of the B. company under 45 Vict. c. 23 (D.), and amending Acts, and as evidence of the insolvency of the company, the applicant shewed that, being entitled to the beneficial interest in a certain policy on the life of her deceased husband, she had demanded payment thereof from the company, but it had been refused; that the suspension of the company had been announced papers, and that the manager of the head office in Canada had stated that he was instructed from the head office in England not to make any payments on behalf of the company. It appeared, however, that the policy provided for payment in three months after proof of the death of the insured had been received by the company, while the above demand for payment was made a fertnight after the death. and no other demand had ever been made :-Held, that the debt was not due when the demand was made, and therefore non-payment was not evidence of insolvency within the meaning of 45 Vict. c. 23, ss. 9, 10, 11 (D.), nor would the fact that the company had not paid claims amount to an acknowledgment of insolvency within s. 9 (d) of that Act, nor otherwise was there sufficient evidence here of the insolvency of the company, and the petition must be dismissed:—Held, also, that as a matter of pleading, if it had been intended to rely upon the acknowledgment of insolvency, it should have been stated in the petition. In re Briton Medical and General Life Association (Limited), 11 O. R.

Semble, that even if a general manager of a company positively agreed that any windingup proceeding that should be necessary should be taken in Ontario rather than elsewhere, this would not bind the company, for the business of the manager is to manage a going concern. It is no part of his duty nor within his power to arrange about putting an end to it. Ib.

Acc Central Bank, Baxter v. Central Bank, 20 O. R. 214.

Insurance Company — Deposit.]—Canadian policy holders petitioned for distribution of the deposit made by this company, a foreign corporation, with the Minister of Finance under 31 Vict. c, 48 (D.), and 34 Vict. c, 9 (D.), the company being insolvent:—Held, that they were entitled to the relief asked, notwithstanding that proceedings to wind up the company were pending before the English courts. Re Briton Medical and General Life Association (Limited) (2), 12 O. R. 441.

Jurisdiction of Court of Chancery.]

—This court will not, unless in a very exceptional case, interfere with the jurisdiction of the insolvent court by winding up the affairs of an insolvent company. Therefore, where a bill was filed for the purpose of winding up the affairs of an insolvent insurance company, a demurrer for want of equity was allowed, although the bill prayed, amongst other things, for the appointment of a receiver to get in the assets, and wind up the affairs of the company. McNeil v. Reliance Mutual Fire Ins. Co., 25 Gr. 567.

Ontario Incorporation.]—The Act applies to an insurance company incorporated by the Province of Ontario, notwithstanding that R. S. O. 1877 c. 160, provides a separate mode of distributing the deposit made by the company with the Provincial treasurer. Re Union Fire Ins. Co., 7 A. R. 783.

Ontario Incorporation.]—Semble, notwithstanding the Act, 52 Vict, c. 32 (D.), amending the Dominion Winding-up Act, the Ontario Winding-up Act, R. S. O. 1887 c. 183, does not apply to a company incorporated in Ontario where application to wind up is made on the ground of insolvency, because local legislatures have no jurisdiction in matters of bankruptey or insolvency. ing up the company. In re Chapel House Colliery Co., 24 Ch. D. 259, distinguished. In re Georgian Bay Ship Canal and Power Aqueduct Co., 29 O. R. 358.

Restraining Action.]—After a windingup order had been made P., a resident of Ontario, brought an action against the company in the State of Michigan, with a view of attaching a steamer wintering there, which was the property of the company. It was shewn that representations that the company was perfectly solvent had been made by both the secretary and managing director to P., and P., sware that but for these representations he would have taken proceedings before he did, which might have enabled him to obtain a judgment before the winding-up order was made. In an action for an injunction to Retroactive Effect of Act.]—Held, affirming 10 O. R. 489, that 47 Vict. 239, a 2 (1b.), is not limited in the pilention to comtain the pilention of the companies in liquidation, i. e., insolvent, though not technically being wound up, and against which proceedings are being taken to realize their assets and pay their debts. Re Union Fire Ins. Co., 13 A. R. 209.

Retroactive Effect of Act.]—J. I., the appellant, gave to one Q. his note for $5,000, which was indorsed to the Bank of P. E. I.; the Union Bank of P. E. I.; the Union Bank of P. E. I.; the Union Bank of P. E. I. at the time held a cheque or draft, made by the Bank of P. E. I. for nearly the same amount, and this draft the appellant purchased for something more than $250 less than its face value; being sued on the note he set off the amount of such chaque or draft, and paid the difference, the trial he admitted he had purches to the trial he admitted he had purches to the trial he admitted he had purches to the trial that the could succeed in his set-off and another party conditions. And he also admitted that if he could succeed in a similar transaction, the Union Bank would get their claim against the Bank of P. E. I., which had become insolvent, paid in full. The Judge on the trial charged that if the draft was indorsed to the defendant to enable him to use it as a set-off, he could not do so, because he was contributory within the meaning of s. 76 of the Canada Winding-up Act, and that the Act, which came into force on the 12th May, 1882, was retrospective as regards the indorsements made before it was passed, but within thirty days before the commencement of the proceedings to wind up the affairs of the bank:—Held, that appellant having purchased the draft in question for value and in good faith prior to 26th May, 1882, the Canada Winding-up Act, 45 Vict. c. 23, was not applicable, and therefore the appellant was entitled to the benefit of his set-off, and that the Winding-up Act was not retrospective as to this indorsement. Ings. v. Bank of Prince Edward Island, 11 S. C. R. 265.

Shareholder's Application.] — On a petition by certain shareholders of the company praying for a winding-up order under R. S. C. c. 129.—Held, that R. S. C. c. 129, like the Insolvent Act of 1875, which provided for the winding up of incorporated companies, is intended to be put into operation at the instance of creditors only. In re Union Ranch Co. of Canada (Limited), 15 O. R. 307.

Shareholder's Application.]—A shareholder who has fully paid up his shares in a company is a "contributory" within the meaning of s. 5 of R. S. O. 1887 c. 183, so as to entitle him to initiate winding-up proceedings. Re Macdonald and Noxon Brothers' Manufacturing Co. (Limited), 10 O. R. 308.

Voluntary Assignment — Wishes of Creditors.]—Section 9 of the Dominion Winding-up Act gives a wide discretionary power to the court to grant or refuse a winding-up order; and where, upon an application for such an order, it appeared that the company had previously made a voluntary assignment for the benefit of creditors, and that it was the desire of the great majority in number and value of the creditors that liquidation should be proceeded with under the assignment, the application was refused. Wakefield Rattan Co. v. Homilton Whip Co., 24 O. R. 107.

Voluntary Assignment.] — Where the insolvency of a company is admitted, the court has no discretion under s. 9 of the Winding-up Act. R. S. C. c. 129, to refuse to grant a winding-up order on the petition of a creditor who has a substantial interest in the estate, although the company has made a voluntary assignment for the benefit of its creditors, and most of them are willing that the winding-up should be under such assignment. Wakefield Rattan Co. v. Hamilton Whip Co., 24 O. R. 107, not followed. Re William Lamb Manufacturing Co. of Ottawa, 32 O.R. 243.

Voluntary Winding-up.]—An order for compulsory winding-up may be made under 41 Vict. e. 5, s. 5 (O.), notwithstanding a resolution has been passed by the shareholders of the company, providing for the voluntary winding-up of the affairs thereof under the supervision of the directors of the company, and a committee of shareholders appointed by them for that purpose. This not being an extraordinary resolution under s. 4, s.-s. 3, under the circumstances appearing in the judgment:—Held, that the discretion of the Judge appealed from had not been improperly exercised. Re Union Fire Ins. Co., 7 A. R. 783.

Voluntary Winding-up — Compulsory Liquidation—" Doing business in Canada."]—There is no clashing between s. 3 of the Winding-up Act. R. S. C. c. 129, and s. 3 of the Winding-up Amendment Act, 52 Vict c. 32 (D.); the latter Act provides for the voluntary winding-up of the companies falling within its provisions, and not for their compulsory liquidation, which is provided for by the former. A company incorporated under an Act of the Province of Ontario, and carrying on business in Ontario, is "doing business in Canada" within the meaning of s. 3 of the original Act. Re Ontario Forge and Bolt Co., 25 O. R. 407.

Crown.]—Priority of the Crown over other creditors for payment of moneys deposited in a bank that has become insolvent. See Regina v. Bank of Nova Scotia, 11 S. C. R. 1: Liquidator of Maritime Bank v. Regina, 17 S. C. R. 657.

Joint and Several Debtors, |— Held, that a creditor is not entitled to rank for the full amount of his claim upon the separate estates of insolvent debtors jointly and severally liable for the amount of the debt, but is obliged to deduct from his claim the amount previously received from the estates of the other parties jointly and severally liable therefor. A person who has realized a portion of his debt upon the insolvent estate of his co-debtors cannot be allowed to rank upon the estate (in liquidation under the Winding up Act) of his other co-debtors jointly and severally liable, without first deducting the amount he has previously received from the estate of his co-debtor. Rent.]—The winding up of a company under 45 Vict. c, 23 (D.), commences from the time of the service of the notice under s. 12, and therefore, under s. 69, a landlord's claim to be paid preferentially for overdue rent after such service is invalid. An undertaking by a provisional liquidator in possession to pay such a claim is by ss. 20 and 21 void unless the permission of the court is first obtained. Fuches v. Hamilton Tribune Co., 10 P. II, 409.

Rent—Quebec Law.]—There is nothing in s. 56 of the Dominion Winding-up Act which alters or interferes with the lex loci contractus in the case of a claim. Where a lease of property situate in the Province of Quebec, and entered into there, contained a provision making the same void, at the option of the lessor, on the insolvency of the lessee, and by the law of that Province, Civil Code. Article 1002, on such insolvency the rent not yet exigible by the terms of the lease, becomes so, a claim for the whole rent, taxes, etc., to the end of the term was, on the insolvency of the lesses company, allowed to the lessors in liquidation proceedings under the Dominion Act. Taxation of Costs of Company's Solicitor. —In proceeding on a judgment for winding-up a company, the former solicitor of the company brought in a claim for bills of costs alleged to be due him which the master referred to one of the taxing officers to tax:—Held, that the master had authority to direct such reference. Clarke v. Union Fire Ins. Co., Caston's Case, 10 P. R. 333.

On such a reference the taxing officer gives his opinion as to whether the fees and charges claimed should be allowed or disallowed, and on that opinion the master makes his adjudication. Ib.

The taxing officer has a discretion as to the attendance of parties claiming a right to attend at such taxation, and his discretion will not be lightly interfered with. His allocatur is sufficient proof that the business charged for was done by the solicitor. Ib.

The rule requiring special circumstances to warrant the reopening or taxation of a bill of costs after twelve months does not apply where the bill has been delivered after the company has been ordered to be wound up.

Taxes and Water Rates.]-The right to prove a claim for taxes against an incorporated company in liquidation depends upon right to maintain an action therefor, which right of action only exists when the taxes cannot be recovered in any special manner provided for by the Assessment Act. as, for example, by distress, or sale of the land. Where, therefore, a claim was made for arrears of taxes against a company in liquidation, and it was shewn that before the date of the winding-up order the taxes might have been, but were not, recovered by distress, the Deep, but were not, recovered by distress, the claim was disallowed. A board of water commissioners, by s. 11 of 35 Vict. c. 80 (O.), were empowered to fix the water rates payable by the owner or occupant of any house or land, which were to be a charge thereon; and by s, 13 to make and enforce all neces-sary by-laws for the collection thereof, and for fixing the time or times and the places for payment, which, on default, was to be enforced by shutting off the water, suit at law, or distress and sale of the occupant's goods. The rights and powers of the water goods. The rights and powers of the water commissioners, including the right to pass the necessary by-laws, were transferred to the municipal corporation of a city by 42 Vict. c. 78, and by s. 7, uncollected water rates were made a lien on the premises and collectible by sale thereof. A by-law was duly passed by the corporation fixing the rates to be paid, and the company were from year to year duly assessed therefor:—Held, that a corporate liability was imposed on the company to pay such rates and a claim therefor constituted, on which the corporation could prove as ordinary creditors. Acquiescence.]—C. purchased shares in a certain company in 1878, but the papers required to make a formal transfer to him in the books of the company were not furnished the company till 20th December, 1881. On 11th February, 1882, C.s. name was entered on the list of the company till 20th December, 1881. On 11th February, 1882, C.s. name was entered in the company till 1881. On the list of the company till 1881. On the company till 1881, 1882, C.s. was notified of a call on the shares for which he was sued, and defended the action, but the action, for some reason not explained, was not proceeded with. This was the first intimation C. received that the papers furnished by him had been acted upon, but he appeared to have made no inquiries from the company subsequently to 20th December, 1881. The company ceased to do business on 13th May, 1883, and the winding-up order was made on 9th October, 1883, It did not appear that C. had taken any steps to repudiate his position as a shareholder before these winding-up proceedings; nor did he shew any prejudice resulting to him from the failure of the company to notify him that the transfer to his name had been actually exactled, that under the above circumstatess C. was rightly placed on the list of contributories in the winding-up proceedings. The Act incorporating the Alliance Company vested the shares of the company in the persons who should subscribe for the same. Before any stock was actually allotted to K. the Alliance Company was amalgamated, by 46 Vict. c. 58 (O.1. with the Standard Insurance Company, which company was ordered to be wound up:—Held, that K, was rightly made a contributory. Assimit v. Manning, 5 S. C. R. 417, distinguished. It was contended that K, never agreed to become a shareholder in the Standard Company, but held, that the statute answered this objection, and that being within the jurisdiction of the local legislature, it could not be objected to as unjust. Re Central Bank, J. D. Henderson's Case, 17 O. R. 110.

B, signed a power of attorney to subscribe for stock under the same circumstances as Turner, but was asked by letter to fix the time to suit himself to pay the ten per cent, call, and he added to the power a cluuse that "the ten per cent, was to be payable in one year from date." He was also notified by the secretary of the company that he was a shareholder, and a notice of a meeting was sent to him. There was no evidence to shew that he made the formation of the board a condition precedent to his becoming a shareholder; —Held, that the entry by the accountant of B,'s name as a shareholder was equivalent to an entry by C,, to whom the power was given, and was no delegation of any discretionary power, but a mere ministerial act; —Held, also, following National Insurance Co. v. Egleson, 29 Gr. 406, that it was not material that the name was not entered in the subscription book, nor that there was no specific allotment of stock; and that B, was properly placed on the list. Reversed on appeal, 12 A. R. 486.

C. signed the power of attorney on the understanding that he was to be solicitor of the company in Toronto, and that he was to pay no cash on his stock, but to get credit for his services. A certificate that he was a holder of ten shares was sent to him, and was in his possession for some years; and he was appointed solicitor under the seal of the company, received notices of meetings and calls, and did not expressly repudiate his liability:
—Held, that he was properly made a contributory. S. C., Caston's Case, 7 O. R. 448. Affirmed on appeal, 12 A. R. 486, 12 S. C. 488. Gitt.

Conditional Agreement.]-C. subscribed for 160 shares in the H. company, the subscription list being headed: "We subscribe for and agree to take the number of shares of the capital stock of the H. company shares of the capital stock of the 11, company set opposite our signatures, and to pay on account thereof fifty per cent, to the secre-tary-treasurer of the company in quarterly payments of 12½ per cent, each of the amounts subscribed for by us respectively, the first of such payments to be made on 1st February, 1882. C, was at the first shareholders' meeting elected a director, and remained so until the final winding-up of the company. One of the by-laws of the company provided for the calling of the second fifty per cent, of the stock subscribed at any time after 1st November, 1882, on thirty days' notice. In August, 1883, the president of the company arranged with C. that he should sign for eighty shares on the terms of a new stockbook which had been opened, and that C original stock was to be treated as cancelled. C. accordingly signed the new book. rangement with C. was never communicated to the shareholders of the company. In January, 1884, a winding-up order was made, and C. was subsequently declared a contributory to the amount of 160 shares. C. now appealed, claiming to be a contributory only to the amount of eighty shares, on the ground that the arrangement of August, 1883, was a valid compromise, entered into with him because he subscribed originally on the understanding, (1st) that the company was not to go into operation before all the stock was subscribed for; and (2nd) that only fifty per cent, of his subscription would have to be paid:—Held, that whether directors have inherent power to compromise with shareholders or not, there was odding to manyor the compromise here set up. As a still the compromise here set up. As a still the compromise here set up. As a still the subscription was unconditional, and though expressly providing for payment of fifty per cent, it was not inconsistent with the balance being paid when required. Moreover the hylaws, at the adoption of which C, was present, recognized the right to call up the whole stock, and C, appeared to have made no dissent. Fuche v. Hamilton Tribue Printing and Publishing Co., Copp's Case, 10 O. R. 497.

Illegal Increase of Capital-Discount Surrender of Shares. |-The charter of the company provided that the capital stock might be increased, if and when the original stock had been paid in full. When twenty per cent. had been paid in till. When twenty per cent, had been paid on tile latter, a by-law allowing a discount of eighty per cent, was passed, and then another by-law increasing the capital stock. By subsequent Act, 54 & 55 Vict. c. 110 (D.), the "reorganization" of the company was recited, and the company, "as now organized," was declared capable of doing business:—Held, in winding-up proceedings, that though the issue of the increased stock was irregular and illegal, yet the Act last referred to had validated it, and the holders of the new stock were liable as contributories. Section 4 of the said Act provided that any shareholder might surrender his shares within a time limited, and that the said shares should be forfeited, and his liability in respect there-of should cease:—Held, in winding-up proceedings, that those who had thus surrendered their shares were not liable as contributories even to the extent of the ten per cent, which they ought to have paid at the time of subscription, but had not. In re Ontario Express and Transportation Co., 24 O. R. 216. See the next case.

Illegal Increase of Capital-Discount-Validating Act.] - To attempt to make partially Paid-up shares in the capital stock of a company paid-up shares by an allowance of a discount to the holders thereof, is prima facie illegal, and a proviso in the Act of incorpora-' that no by-law for the allotment or sale of stock at any greater discount than what has been previously authorized at a general meet-ing" is not wide enough to impliedly authorize the allowance of such a discount on shares which were originally subscribed for at their full nominal value. An Act of Parliament recting that a company had been 'duly organized,' had ceased its operations, and had been 'reorganized;' and declaring that the charter is in force and the company "as now organized" capable of doing business. does not give legislative sanction to an illegal increase of the capital stock so as to make holders of shares of the illegally issued stock liable as contributories in winding-up pro-ceedings. Offer not Accepted—No Allotment.]—A contract between a company and a person who makes application for shares must be dealt with as ordinary contracts; there must be an offer by the one to take shares, and an acceptance of such offer by the company. One H, subscribed for shares in a company, but no shares were formally allotted to him by the directors. Calls were made by the general manager, and notices of such calls were sent by the secretary to, and received by H,, but the calls had never been authorized by the directors:—Held, that the unauthorized acts of the officers named could not be construed to be an allotment, or a notification of an allotment of stock, so as to bind the company or prove an acceptance of H.'s subscription for stock. Petition for Incorporation — Estoppel.]—Where in winding-up proceedings it appeared that an alleged contributory joined in the petition for incorporation, wherein it was untruly stated that he had taken 250 shares of the capital stock, whereas the shares he held had, after incorporation, been voted to him by a resolution of the directors as paid-up stock, for services in connection with the formation of the company: —Held, that in view of the provisions of the Ontario Joint Stock Companies Letters Patent Act, he was a contributory in respect of, at the least, the number of shares voted to him Semble, he was liable for the full number of shares mentioned in the petition. Promoter—Fiduciary Relation.]—Shares in a joint stock company may be paid for in money or money's worth, and if paid for by a transfer of property they must be treated as fully paid up; in proceedings under the Winding-up Act the master has no authority to inquire into the adequacy of the consideration with a view to placing the holder on the list of contributories. There is a distinction between a trust for a company of property acquired by promoters and afterwards sold to the company and to the company and the company and the company and the company and the company with the company and the company, which exists as soon as the latter is formed. A promoter who purchases property with the intention of selling it to a company to be formed does not necessarily hold such property in trust for the prospective company, but he stands in a fiduciary relation to the latter and if he sells to them must not violate any of the duties devolving upon him in respect of such relationship. If he sells, for instance, through the medium of a board of directors who are not independent of him, the contract may be rescinded, provided the property premains in such a position that the parties may be restored to their original status. There may be cases in which the property may be regarded as being bound by a trust either ab initio or in consequence of ex post facto events; if a promoter purchases property for the company when formed, and by a secret arrangement in the part of the price, when the agreement is carried out, comes into the hands of the promoter, that is a secret profit which he cannot retain; and if any part of such secret profit consists of paid-up shares of the company issued as part of the purchase price of the property, such shares may, in winding-up proceedings, be treated, if held by the promoter, as unpaid shares for which the promoter may be made a contributory. Purchase by Company of its Own Shares—Transfer to "Manager in Trust"—Liability of Manager as Contributory.]—The manager of an insurance company, authorized by the directors, with the moneys of the company purchased from the holder thereof, who was ignorant of the object intended, a number of partly paid-up shares of the company on which calls were in arrear, for the purpose of concellation, taking the transfer to himself as "manager in trust." The company had no power to deal in its own stock. The shares were never cancelled, the dividends thereon being credited to the company:—Held, in liquidation proceedings, that in the absence of knowledge by the transferor that the purchase was for an illegal purpose, the manager was properly placed on the list of contributories. Re Union Fire Ins. Co., McCord's Case, 21 O. R. 294.

Qualification Shares.] - Appeal from Qualification Shares. — Appeal from master's report, which placed certain parties on the list of stockholders as contributories to the extent of their unpaid stock. C., hav-ing been communicated with by the president the company, agreed to act as a director, and gave his note for $500, in order to obtain a qualification. The president subscribed for fifty shares for him, on which the $500 would pay ten per cent. C. then acted as a director for some time without (as he alleged) knowing that any stock had been subscribed for him. Subsequently he was notified of a five per cent, call on fifty shares, and he at once communicated with the presi-dent, who told him not to mind, and that the secretary would be instructed, and he was not troubled again about it. During this time his note had been carried by the company, and he had paid nothing. The president then abscond-ed, and C. was notified of a five per cent. call, and gave a note for $250 in payment of same not (as he alleged) because he was liable, but because he was told that would settle his total liability, and he did not wish to enter into a suit:—Held, that he was properly placed on the list of contributories. Re Standard Fire Ins. Co., Chisholm's Case, 7 O. R. 448.

Repudiation of Shares.]—After the issue of letters patent in 1880 incorporating the company and naming certain persons as shareholders, these persons stated to certain of the directors of the company that they would not accept their stock, and would have nothing more to do with the company, but no proceedings were taken by them to relieve themselves from liability; and no proceedings were taken against them until the company was wound up in 1891;—Held, distinguishing Nicol's Case, 29 Ch. D. 421, that as these persons had not a mere inchoate right to receive shares, but were actually shareholders and members of the company by virtue of the charter, mere statements of this kind, and the lapse of time, and the failure of the directors to enforce payment of the shares, did not relieve them from their liability as shareholders. In re Haggert Bros. Manufacturing Co., Peaker and Runions' Case, 19 A. R. 582.

Subscription before Incorporation.]

—P. signed an instrument purporting to be a subscription for shares in a company "proposed to be incorporated" under the Ontario Joint Stock Companies Letters Patent Act, in which he agreed with the company and the signatories thereto, to take the number of shares set opposite to his name. B. signed an instrument purporting to be an agreement to accept shares in a company not at the time incorporated. P. and B. were not corporators named in the letters patent, and no shares were in fact ever allotted to them, but they were entered in the books as shareholders, and notices of meetings and demands for payment of calls were sent to them, and in winding-up proceedings they were placed on the list of contributories:—Held, that there being no company in existence when the instruments in question were signed, they did not constitute binding contracts to take shares so as, without more, to make P. and B. liable as contributories. In re London Speaker Printing Co., Pearer's Case; In re Speight Manulacturing Co., Boultbee's Case, 16 A. R. 508,

The shareholders at the date of the issue of the letters patent are those persons only who are named therein and to whom stock is allotted thereby; and it is these persons and others who may afterwards become shareholders who constitute the company. Subscription before incorporation—Change in Amount of Capital,—One D. signed his name as subscriber for a certain number of shares at the foot of a prospectus of a proposed company, in which it was stated that the capital was to be $75,000. Without D's knowledge or acquiescence, the company, as afterwards incorporated, had a capital of the company, D. paid up half the amount of his shares. There was no allotment of stock to D., no entry of his name in any stockbook, and no acting on his part as shareholder. The company being in process of liquidation, it was claimed that D. was a contributory:—Held, that the change made in the capital of the company was a material one, and there being no acquiescence or lackes on D's part, he was not liable as a contributory; Pitchford v, Davis, 5 M. & W. 2, specially referred to. Stevens v. London Steel Works Co., Delano's Case, 15 O. R. 75.

Subscription without Allotment.]—In winding-up proceedings, the master placed the subscribers to the stock-book upon the list of contributories. The contributories appealed upon the ground that although they were subscribers for stock still no stock had been allotted to them by the directors:—Held, that the master was right; that the contract signed was an unqualified taking of shares; and that the Act R. S. O. 1877 c. 150, contemplates two modes of acquiring stock, by subscription and by allotment. In re Queen City Refining Co. of Toronto, 10 O. R. 264.

No re-transfer was made, and the defendant remained in ignorance that the shares stood in his name until the association became financially embarrassed:—Held, that he was lable as a contributory. Voidable Dealing with Shares.]—
Where the shares which had been transferred to a person placed on the list of contributories had been previously held by the cashier of the bank in trust, as alleged, for the bank, which it was objected was thus trafficking in its own shares:—Held, that even if the cashier did hold the shares in trust for the directors of the bank, this would not be necessarily illegal, as he might hold such shares, under s. 45 of the Bank Act, as security for overdue debts; and, besides, this was a matter which, though it might give the appellant a right to rescind during the currency of the banking institution, became of no moment after the rights of creditors represented by the liquidators arose. The matter was not an absolute mullity, but, at most, one which the shareholders could waive as voludable, and it became, by the suspension, of unimpeachable validity as between the appellant and the liquidators. Action in Company's Name, I—Action by plaintiffs to recover the price of an implement manufactured by them. A winding-protein and previously been obtained against plaintiffs, and a liquidator appointed. An objection was taken at the trial, after the evidence had been given, that the action should have been brought in the name of the liquidator and with the approval of the court, under s. 31 off R. S. C. e. 129. The order authorizing the liquidator to sue either in his own name or in that of the plaintiffs was put in after the hearing:—Held, that the objection was too late and must be overruled:—Semble, the proper course is to move in chambers to dismiss the action for want of authority to sue; and semble also as the plaintiffs under the statute had power to sue, they could do so without the authority of the court, if they chose to run the risk of costs. Sarnia Agricultural Innolement Manufacturing Co. v. Hutchinson, 17 O. R. 679.

Calls — Majority,] — By 41 Vict. c. 58 (1), in the three plannitifs were appointed "joint assignees" of the Canada Agricultural Insurance Company for the purpose of winding-up under 41 Vict. c. 21 (D.). Two of the plaintiffs, the third being unable to attend through illness, met on the 2nd of January, 1879, and made the 4th and 5th calls of ten per cent. each on the stock of the company:—Held, that the assignees must all join in making calls, and that these calls were therefore invalid:—Held, also, that a meeting of the three joint assignees on the 27th January, after notice of the 4th and 5th calls had been mailed on the 13th January, purporting to confirm the action of the two assignees of the 2nd January, had not that effect. Ross v. Machar, S. O. R. 417.

Chattel Mortgage.] — Quere, whether the liquidator of a company can object to the want of registration or other formal defects in a chattel mortgage as an execution creditor or subsequent mortgages could of. In real Rainy Lake Lumber Co., Stewart v. Union Bank of Lower Canada, 15 A. R. 749.

Commission — Set-off.] — In fixing the liquidators' commission or compensation in the winding-up proceedings of an insolvent bank, it is proper to take into consideration amounts adjusted or set off, but not actually received by the liquidators; and in this case a commission of two and a quarter per cent, having been allowed on the gross amount of moneys actually collected, a further commission sion of one and a quarter per cent, on a sum of $231,000, consisting of amounts adjusted or set off, was allowed. So far as possible, the amount allowed as compensation to liquidators in such winding-up proceedings should be evenly spread over the whole period of the liquidation, so as to ensure vigilance and expedition at all stages of the liquidation, as well as a proper distribution among the liquidators, when more than one. In re Central Bank, Lyés Claim, 22 O. R. 247.

Oreditors' Choice.]—Under ss. 98 and 90 of the Winding-up Act, R. S. C. c. 129, meetings of shareholders and creditors, respectively, of a bank, were held, at which the shareholders recommended the appointment of C. G. and S. as liquidators, and the creditors, or the shareholders recommended the appointment of the court for the proposition to the double liability of shareholders would be necessary to satisfy the claims of creditors under R. S. C. c. 120, s. 70:—Held, that the choice of the creditors, they having the chief and immediate concern in realizing the assets, should be adopted. Re Central Bank of Canada, 15 O. R. 309.

Preference should be given to one who is neither a creditor nor a shareholder, the general rule being that it is desirable that liquidators should be disinterested persons. Ib.

Discovery — Examination before Statement of Claim.]—An official liquidator cannot as an officer of the court be called upon to make discovery unless he is representatively in the position of an adverse litizant to the party requiring the discovery. Where certain shareholders of an insolvent bank were suing the directors for negligence and misfeasance, and had made the bank defendants for conformity without asking any relief against them, an application by the plaintiffs under Rule 506 for leave to examine one of the liquidators for discovery before statement of claim was refused. Henderson v. Blain, 14 P. R. 308.

Insolvent Bank—Right to Appoint Another Bank.]—The Winding-up Act provides that the shareholders and creditors of a company in liquidation shall severally meet and nominate persons who are to be appointed liquidators, and the Judge having the appointment shall choose the liquidators from among such nominees. In the case of the Bank of Liverpool the Judge appointed liquidators from among the nominees of the creditors, one of them being the defendant bank:—Held, affirming 22 N. S. Rep. 97, that there is nothing in the Act requiring both creditors and shareholders to be represented on the board of liquidators; that a bank may be appointed liquidator; and that, if any appeal lies from the decision of the Judge in exercising his judgment as to the appointment, such discretion was wisely exercised in this case. Forsythe v. Bank of Vora Scotia, In re Bank of Liverpool, 18 S. C. R. 707.

Liability for Costs. |- Under an order for winding-up an insolvent company under 45 Vict. c. 23 (1).), the proceedings to enforce the liability of shareholders must be taken by the liquidators, and not by the petitioner for the winding-up order. When proceedings are so taken by the liquidator, and are unsuccessful, costs may be awarded against him personally, leaving him to apply to be allowed such costs out of the assets of the company. Re Bolt and Iron Co., Hovenden's Case, 10 P. R. 434.

Liability for Costs.]-After the action was at issue, an order was made by a Que-bec court directing the winding-up of the defendant company and appointing a liquida-tor. The plaintiff then obtained leave from that court to proceed with this action. Afterwards the liquidator obtained an order from that court authorizing him to intervene and defend this action in his own name as liquidator; he then applied to this court in this action, and obtained an order that the action proceed in the name of the plaintiff against the company and the liquidator:—Held, that the liquidator having thus intervened and made himself a party to the action, and having appeared by his counsel at the trial and contested the claim of the plaintiff, the latter, having succeeded upon his claim, was entitled to a judgment for his costs both against the company and the liquidator personally. This court had no authority to direct that the liquidator might reimburse himself out of the assets; that was a question for the court in the Province of Quebec having control of the assets, Boyd v. Dominion Cold Storage Co., 17 P.

Notice of Appointment.]—It is a substantial objection to a winding-up order appointing a liquidator to the estate of an insolvent company under 45 Vict. c. 23 (D.), that such order has been made without notice to the creditors, contributories, shareholders or members of the company as required by s. 24 of the Act, and an order so made was set aside, and the petition therefor referred back to the Judge to be dealt with anew. Rules for Choosing.]—Upon a context for the appointment of liquidator in a winding-up proceeding it is desirable to follow the rules for guidance to be found in the English cases under the Winding-up Acts. The court abstains from laying down any such rule as that the nominee of the petitioning creditor should have a preference. The court will consider the condition of affairs to ascertain what parties are most interested in the due administration of the estate in liquidation, and other things being equal will act upon their recommendation. Re Alpha Oil Co., 12 P. K.

Where upon an application under the Dominion Act, the creditors were those whose interests were most to be regarded, and the great bulk of them favoured the appointment of the sheriff of Lambton, and opposed the nominee of the petitioning creditors, and the sheriff resided in the county where the company's operations were carried on, and where all its books and assets were, was already de facto liquidator under voluntary proceedings taken pursuant to the Ontario Act, and was otherwise well qualified for the position, the court appointed him liquidator. Three Liquidators—Commission.]—The intention of s. 28 of the Winding-up Act is that the remuneration is not necessarily to be that the remuneration is not necessarily to be increased because three are to be paid instead of one. The recompense for services is usu-ally a percentage based on the time occu-pied, work done, and responsibility imposed, and when fixed goes to the liquidator, and, if more than one, is distributed amongst them. 5. Preferential Transactions.

Payment—Cheque on Third Person's Ac-count, |—The bank suspended payment 15th September, 1883. Winding-up proceedings were commenced 22nd November, and an order made 5th December. R. & G. H. purchased a stock of hardware held by the bank, on which they owed $14,000 at the time of the suspen-sion. The bank wishing to close the account sold the balance of the stock to A. H. & Co. for $5,700, and agreed to accept in payment cheques of the defendant drawn on his deposit cheques of the defendant drawn on his deposit account, which were drawn on and necepted by the bank on 31st October. For these cheques A. H. & Co. gave their accept-ances which were duly paid. Before the stone was delivered R. & G. H. settled the balance of their debt to the bank. In an action by the liquidators of the bank against the defendant to recover back the amount thus paid tendant to recover back the amount thus paid on the defendant's cheuses, under 45 Vict. c. 23, s. 75 (D.), it was:—Held, that the plain-itfs could not recover, for the defendant had received no valuable consideration from the hank which he should be ordered to repay. Exchange Bank of Canada v. Stinson, 8 O. 1, 1877 R. 667.

On 19th November, defendant sold his cheque for $320 to his uncle, C., who was the local head of the bank, which cheque was negotiated and accepted by the bank on 23rd November, (after winding-up proceedings had commenced):—Held, that, although it probably was an invalid transaction as far it probably was an invalid transaction as far as the person who received the money was concerned, there was no payment to the de-fendant of anything within the scope and meaning of s. 75 of the Act. Ib.

Payment—Cheque on Third Person's Ac-count.]—The bank suspended payment 15th September, 1883. Winding-up proceedings were commenced 23rd November, and an or-der made 5th December. The defendants C. & S. being depositors in the bank drew a cheque for $4,000 on 1st November, on their deposit account, which was given to D., a debtor of the bank on notes maturing the fol-lowing December and January. D. gave mortlowing December and January. D. gave mort-gage security to defendants for the cheque on about 5th October, although the security was not given until the 31st, and the cheque was not presented to the bank until 23rd Novem not presented to the bank that your Assember, when it was accepted as payment of the maturing notes. In an action by the liquidators of the bank against the defendants, to which D. was not a party, to recover the tors of the bank against the defendants, to which D. was not a party, to recover the amount thus paid on the cheque as having been paid to defendants after the winding-up proceedings were commenced, and being an unjust preference, &c.:—Held, that upon the facts there was no payment by the bank to the defendants, and that the transaction there-the defendants, and that the transaction there-fore was not within the statute 45 Vict, c. 23, s. 75 (D.). Exchange Bank of Can-ada, v. Counsell, 8 O. R. 673. C., who was being sued by the bank, ob-tained defendants' cheque for $2,118, giving security therefor on 21st November, and re-tired the notes in suit on 23rd November:— Held, that the defendants could not be ordered to repay the amount of the cheque as being a to repay the amount of the cheque, as being a wrongful payment under the Act. Ib.

Presumption—Rebuttal.]—A mortgage of land made by an incorporated company in favour of a creditor within thirty days prior to the beginning of winding-up proceedings, was attacked by the liquidator as being void under some of the provisions of ss. 68 to 71, inclusive, of the Winding-up Act. R. S. C. c., 129:—Held, notwithstanding the fact that the mortgage was given upon demand of the mortgage, that the transaction must be avoided under s. 69, the mortgage being a conveyance for consideration, respecting real property, by which creditors were injured or property, by which creditors were injured or obstructed, made by a company unable to meet its engagements; and it was not mameet its engagements; and it was not ma-terial under this section whether the mort-gages was or was not ignorant of such inability; but the transaction, being with-in the thirty days, was voidable, and should, therefore, be set aside, that being the effect of the words "may be set aside:"— Held, also, that the words of s. 69, "upon such terms as to the protection of such persuch terms as to the protection of such person from actual loss or liability by reason of such contract, as the court orders," were not applicable to the giving of a mortgage as security for a past debt. Held, also, that none of the other sections relied on applied so as to avoid the mortgage: and, following Lawson v. McGeoch, 22 O. R. 474, 20 A. R. 464, and distinguishing Webster v. Crickmore, 25 A. 6. Procedure and Practice.

(a) Appeal.

Appointment of Interim Liquida-tor.]—An order was made in the chancery division of the high court directing the wind-ing up under 45 Vict. c. 23 (D.), of a fire insurance company incorporated by the Legis-lature of Ontaria and against which lature of Ontario, and against which proceedlature of Ontario, and against which proceedings had previously been taken under R. S. O. 1877 r. 160, and the Joint Stock Companies Winding-up Act (O.). This order appointed the receiver in the former proceedings interim liquidator, &c., and further referred it to the master to appoint a liquidator, &c. and to settle the list of contributories; and further provided that certain accounts and inquiries which had been made under the previous proceedings, should be incorporated with and used in the winding-up proceedings under the Dominion statute, in so far as they could properly be made applicable:—Held, that this was an order from which an appeal would lie under s. 78 of the Act of 1882. Re Union Fire Ins. Co., 13 A. R. 268.

Divisional Court — Notice Without Leave.,1—The divisional courts are not constituted appellate courts under the Dominion Winding-up Act and an appeal does not lie to a divisional court from an order of a Judge in chambers in a proceeding under that Act. The master in chambers, or other subordinate judicial officer, has no jurisdiction, unless by delegation, to make an order in a proceeding under that Act. Where a notice of appeal to the court of appeal from an order of a Judge in such a proceeding has been given, but leave to appeal has not been obtained, it is not necessary to have the notice set aside. Donovan v. Haldane, 14 P. R. 106, distinguished. Re Sarnia Oil Co., 15 P. R. 182.

Final Order.]—An order of the county court under the Ontario Winding-up Act approving of the sale of the assets is a "final order." as nothing further remains to be done under it and therefore is the subject of appeal. In re D. A. Jones Co., 19 A. R. 63.

Leave—Time Extended after Argument.]
—After a case under the Winding-up Act was argued the appellant, with the consent of the respondent, obtained from a Judge of the court below an order to extend the time for bringing the appeal, and subsequently before the time expired he got an order from the registrar of the supreme court, sitting as a Judge in chambers, giving him leave to appeal in accordance with s. 76 of the Winding-up Act, and the order declared that all proceedings had upon the appeal should be considered as taken subsequent to the order granting leave to appeal. Ontario Bank v.
Chaplin, 20 S. C. R. 152.

Leave—Successive Applications.]—Where an application for leave to appeal to the court of appeal from a decision in a matter under the Winding-up Act, R. S. C. c. 129, has been made under s. 74, and refused by a Judge, a fresh application will not be entertained by another Judge. The cases in which successive applications to successive Judges have been favoured, are not pertinent to a case where the right to appeal, upon leave, is sought under a special statute. Re Sarnia Oil Co., 15 P. R. 347.

Leave—Successive Applications.]—Orders having been made in the matter of the winding-up of an insolvent bank for payment of certain moneys out of court to the executors of the purchaser from the liquidator of the assets, and the moneys having been paid out to them, the Receiver-General for Canada asserted a claim to such moneys udder ss. 40 and 41 of the Winding-up. Act, R. S. C. c. 129, and, not having been a party to the applications for payment out made by the executors, presented a petition for payment over to him by them or repayment into court of such moneys; or, in the alternative, for leave to appeal from such orders. This petition was dismissed upon the ground that the petitioner was not entitled to complain, even if the moneys had been improperly paid out.

Upon an application by the petitioner for leave to appeal to the court of appeal from the order dismissing his petition:—Held, that a Judge of the high court had power to grant the leave sought, the application not being in effect a second application for leave to appeal from the orders for payment out. And, under all the circumstances of the case, leave to appeal granted, upon security for costs being furnished, the question being a new and important one and the amount involved considerable. Re Central Bank of Canada, 17 P. R. 370.

Petition.]—The trial of a petition before a dudge at the assizes, praying that a liquidator might be ordered to deliver up certain lumber claimed by a bank, is not the trial of an action, and therefore no appeal lies to the divisional court. Re Rainy Lake Lumber Co., 12 P. R. 27.

Security.]—An appeal under the Act respecting the winding up of Joint Stock Companies, 41 Vict. c. 5, s. 27 (O.), cannot be entertained when security has not been given within eight days from the rendering of the final order or judgment appealed from. Re Union Fire Ins. Co., 7 A. 18, 783. Where a bond good in form with proper

Where a bond good in form with proper sureties was filed with the clerk of the county court, on the last of the eight days, though not allowed by the Judge:—Held, to be within the words, "given security before a Judge," and a sufficient compliance with the Act, though a person thus filing a bond without allowance risks being deprived of his right of appeal in the event of the bond proving defective. Ib.

Setting Aside Order.]—A winding-up order under 45 Vict. c. 23 (D.), winding up a foreign company doing business in Ontario, made by one Judge, will not be set aside by another. An application for that purpose must be made to the divisional court. In re Lake Superior Native Copper Co., Re Plummer, 9 O. R. 277.

(b) Appointment of Solicitor.

Oreditors' Solicitor.]—Upon a reference for the winding-up of a company, the referee appointed a firm of solicitors to represent the general body of creditors, and ordered that they should be notified to attend whenever he so directed, and that their costs, as between solicitor and client, should be paid out of the assets:—Held, that this class of order and liability was not favoured by the courts, and should be invoked and attendants special question on which there was any special question on which there was of some one to represent the creditors was desirable; that attendances and services should not be paid for out of the assets except where contemporaneously approved of by the referee; and it was not proper practice to extend this at the close of the proceedings by obtaining a certificate from him that, had he been applied to from time to time, he might have provided for other attendances and services. Re Drury Nickel Co., 16 P. R. 525.

Independent Solicitor.]—It is preferable to have the proceedings under an order for winding up a company under 45 Vict. c. 23 (D.), conducted by solicitors who are totally unconnected with the company to be wound up. Re Joseph Hall Manufacturing Co., 10 P. R. 485.

Liquidator's Solicitor.|—In p proceeding for the winding-up of a company, a solicitor who is acting for claimants whose claims must be contested by the liquidators, cannot obtain the sanction of the court to his netting also as solicitor for the liquidators. Now will the court sanction the appointment of a special solicitor to act for the liquidators the matter of the contested claim. The winding-up must be prosecuted by one disinterested solicitor, whose services will not be divided by the assertion of antagonistic claims. ReCharles Stark Co., 15 P. R. 471.

(c) Costs.

Security for Costs.]—A contributory of the company, petitioning to set aside a winding-up order, was required to give security for the costs of the company, and a creditor opposing the petition, where it appeared that the contributory, although he had a nominal interest as the holder of stock upon which nothing was paid, was not in such a position that anything would be made out of him upon execution, and was petitioning merely in the interest of other persons who lived out of the jurisdiction, and who had indemnified him as to costs, Re Rainy Lake Lumber Co., 11 P. R. 314.

Security for Costs—Intercening Share-holder out of the Juridiction.]—An order was made by the court delegating the powers exercisable by the court for the purpose of winding-up a company, to a referee, pursuant to R. S. C. c. 129, s. 77, as amended by 52 Vict. c. 32, s, 20 (D.):—Held, that power was delegated to the referee to order security for costs and to stay proceedings till security should be given by a shareholder resident out of the jurisdiction, who intervened:—Held, also, that the liquidator and others opposing the applications made by the intervening shareholder were not barred of their right to security by not applying till after the original applications of the shareholder had been dismissed, and appeals taken; but that the security should be limited to the costs of the appeals. Re Sarnia Oil Co., 14 P. R. 335.

(d) Jurisdiction of Courts and Officers.

County Court—Personal Order against Liquidator for Costs.]—An order was made by a county court, under R. S. O. 1887, c. 1887, c. 1887, i.e. 1888, for the winding-up of the companies, and a liquidator was appointed, who brought in list of contributories. The contributories shewed cause to their names being settled upon the list, and the court made an order in the case of each of them, recting that it appeared there was no jurisdiction to make the winding-up order, and that all proceedings were irregular or null, and ordering that each contributory should have his costs of shewing cause, to be paid by the companies and the liquidator:—Held, that if there was jurisdiction to make the winding-up order, the contributories could not defend themselves by shewing that it was irregular or erroneous; and if there was no jurisdiction, the court being an inferior one, to order the liquidator or the companies to pay the costs. And even if there was jurisdiction, in the circumstances of this case it should not have been exercised against the liquidator. Rule 1256 does not apply to proceedings under the Winding-up Act, either by virtue of s. 34 of the Act or otherwise. Re Cosmopolitan Life Association, Re Cosmopolitan Casualty Association, 15 P. R. 185.

Delegation of Powers—Officers of the Court.1,—The Dominion Winding-up Act, 45 Vict. c. 23, as amended by 47 Vict. c. 33, as thorizes the master in chambers, the master in ordinary, or any local master or referee to exercise the powers conferred upon the court in Ontario for the purpose of winding-up insolvent companies. The master in ordinary and the master in ordinary and the master in ordinary to settle the list of contributories, take all necessary accounts, make all necessary inquiries and reports, and generally to do all necessary to the said company—Held, (1) that the powers vested in the judicial officers named in the Act were conferred upon each of them as persona designata, which they were not authorized to delegate to others or to each other: (2) that the reference was not authorized by the Judicial to officers in chambers; (3) that the jurisdiction of the master in ordinary under the order of reference would be delegated jurisdiction as the substitute or deputy of the master in ordinary under the order of reference and purpose of the provincial Acts, and could not be proceeded on. In re Queen City Refining Co., 10 P. R. 415.

Delegation of Powers—Officers of the Court, —It is not competent for the master in chambers to make an order under s. 77 of 45 Vict. c. 23 (D.), as amended by 47 Vict. c. 39, s. 5 (D.), referring the winding-up to the master in ordinary. That may be done by a Judge, as in conformity with the usual course of proceedings in other causes and matters, but it is not the practice, save in one or two exceptional cases, to have references ordered by the master in chambers to the master ic ordinary. The intention of the Act is that the master in chambers, or local master, or master in chambers, or local master, or master in ordinary, may grant a winding-up order, and conduct all the proceedings necessary therefor in his own office and before himself as a judicial officer. demption, the court has jurisdiction to make the usual order for foreclosure or sale. It is a matter of discretion with the court whether an action will be directed or summary proceedings sanctioned. Re Essex Land and Timber Co., Trout's Case, 21 O. R. 367.

Master—Insurance Act of Ontario.]—A master of the high court has no authority, under the provisions of the Insurance Corporations Act, 1892, to direct security to be given by an officer of a company being wound up, in place of an insufficient security already given by such officer. Section 54, s.-ss. 5 and 7, merely provide for the giving of security as interim receiver, which may be made a condition of retention in that office, but default in giving which cannot be punished by imprisonment for contempt. Re Dominion Provident, Benevolent, and Endowment Association, 24 O. R. 416.

Master—Insurance Act of Ontario.]—The master has power under that Act to settle schedules of creditors, which implies power to adjudicate upon the claims of officials of a company for services to ascertain whether they shall appear as creditors in the schedules, but he cannot adjudicate upon the question whether they have been guilty of such conduct as deprives them of their right to claim as creditors. He has also power to settle schedules of contributories, but cannot adjudicate upon the question whether officials of the company have been guilty of such a breach of duty as to make them flable for any loss by reason thereof. Such matters can only be determined by action. Re Dominion Provident, Benevolent, and Endowment Association, 25 O. R. 619.

Payment Out of Court — Right of Receiver-General to Compel Repayment.]—
Where the liquidators of an insolvent bank have passed their final accounts and have paid into court the balance in their hands, and that balance is by inadvertence paid out of court to a person not entitled to it, the Receiver-General has such an interest in the fund that he may, even before three years from the time of payment in have expired, apply to the court for an order for repayment into court of the fund. The court has also inherent jurisdiction to compel the repayment into court off money improperly obtained out of court. In re Central Bank of Canada, Hogaboom's Case, 24 A. R. 470. Affirmed sub nom. Shootbred v. Clarke, Re Union Fire Ins. Co., 17 S. C. R. 205; S. C., sub nom. Re Clarke and Union Fire Ins. Co., 16 A. R. 161.

Scotch Court's Order.] — Order by Scotch court granted in proceedings for winding-up the plaintiff company, ordering defendant, the officer of the court, to deliver up certain books, etc., and in case of default authorizing the liquidator to take proceedings against him in the courts of Ontario. See British Canadian Lumbering and Timber Co. v. Grant, 12 P. R. 301.

(e) Sale of Assets.

County Court.]—The liquidator of a company which was being voluntarily wound up under the Ontario Winding-up Act, sold the assets thereof en bloc, without the sanction of the contributories, to a private individual, and then obtained from the county court an order approving of the sale, and making certain provisions for the disposition of the purchase money:—Held, that the order was made without authority, and that it was a nullily. In reb. A. Jones Co., 19 A. R.

Peremptory Sale.]—The words "peremptory" or "peremptorily" do not always mean "absolutely final," there being a discretion in the court under special and urgent circumstances whether they shall have that meaning or not. A sale by tender (not saying that the property will be sold to the highest bidder' is a mere at empt to ascertain whether an offer can be obtained within such a margin as the seller is willing to adopt. In winding-up proceedings of a joint stock company, tenders were advertised for for the purchase of the company's property, to be received by a certain time when the sale was to be "peremptorily closed." At the time fixed one tender only had been received, and the referee enlarged the time for the arrival of a train which was late. Two more tenders were received by that train: one on behalf of the largest beneficiary under the mortgage been to be a support of the conference which the sale was being bald.

of the largest beneficiary under the mortgage to enforce which the sale was being held, and the other by a stranger, which was a little higher than that of the beneficiary. The latter then by his agent handed in a much higher tender, whereupon the referce instructed notice of the last tender to be given to the other tenderers, and on a subsequent day accepted the last which was the highest tender:—Held, that he was justified in so doing, Re Alger and Sarnia Oil Co., 21 O. R. 440, 19 A. R. 446.

Procedure.] — The chancery practice in same supplies to sales under the Dominion Winding-up Act; and under such practice it is usual before offering property for sale to have an inquiry whether a sale by auction, or under private contract, would be the most advantageous to the estate. When a sale by private contract is directed, an afficiary of the actual value of the property should be produced, so that such value may be compared with the price offered. Re Bolt and Iron Co., 10 P. R. 437.

Purchase by Director.]—Upon the appointment of a liquidator for a company being wound up under R. S. C. c. 129, the Windingup Act, if the powers of the directors are not continued as provided by s. 34 of the Act, their fiduciary relations to the company or its shareholders are at an end and a sale to them by the liquidator of the company is valid. Chatham National Bank v. McKeen, 24 S. C. R. 348.

Rate on Dollar of Claims.]—The liquidator of an insolvent company brought in for approval an agreement with certain parties for the sale to them of its assets at a price equal to twenty-five cents on the dollar of the claims of the creditors of the company "as may be admitted or adjudicated," in addition to the costs of the liquidation proceedings to be taxed by the taxing officer, and the remuneration of the liquidator to be settled by the Master. There was no mode of admitting or adjudicating on such claims provided in the agreement. The agreement was opposed by certain creditors, and thereupon the proposed purchasers withdrew from it:—Held, 1. that if the creditors' claims were to be admitted by and between the parties the agreement was conditional, and the purchasers by withdrawing before ascertainment left the agreement imperfect; 2. that by not providing a mode of admitting or adjudicating upon the creditors' claims, the agreement was ambiguous, and parol evidence would have to be adduced to explain it; 3. that for these reasons the agreement was incapable of being enforced, and could not be approved:—Quere, whether an agreement to purchase the assets, of a company at a certain rate in the dollar of the unascertained claims of the creditors of such company would be valid. Re Bolt and Iron Co., 10 P. R. 437.

Contributory.]—A contributory of an insolvent company, who is also a creditor, cannot set off the debt due to him by the company against calls made in the course of winding-up proceedings in respect of the double liability imposed by the Bank Act, R. S. C. c. 120. Liquidators of the Maritime Bank v. Troop, 16 S. C. R. 456.

Debtor—Contributory.]—By ss. 75 and 76 of 45 Vict. c. 23 (D.), it is provided that if a debt due or owing by the company has been transferred within thirty days next before the commencement of the winding-up under that Act, or at any time afterwards, to a contributory who knows, or has probable cause for believing, the company to be unable to meet its engagements or to be in contemplation of insolvency under the Act, for the purpose of enabling such contributory to set up by way of compensation or set-off the claim so transferred, such debt cannot be set up by way of compensation or set-off against the claim upon such contributory:—Held, that the sections in question only apply to actions against a contributory when the debt claimed is due from the person sued in his capacity as contributory. Ings v. Bank of Prince Edvard Island, 11 S. C. R. 265.

Debtor—Contributory.]—Y. in making a deposit on a government contract, gave a marked cheque on the Central Bank, in which he was a shareholder, which cheque was subsequently cancelled and a deposit receipt issued by the bank, substituted therefor. Y. gave his note to the bank to cover the amount of the receipt. The bank went into liquidation on 3rd December, 1887, and on 20th January, 1888, Y. having been required by the government to take up the deposit receipt and replace it with other security, took an assignment of the receipt and notified the bank. On being threatened with a suit on the note, he filed a petition asking for leave to set off the deposit receipt against the note:—Held, following the last case, that Y. as maker of the note to the bank was a mere debtor and not a contributory, and although also a shareholder, and so liable as a contributory, he was not a contributory quoad the debt, which arose out of an independent transaction, and for that reason s. 73 of R. S. C. c. 129 did not apply. In re Central Bank of Canada, Yorke's Case, 15 O. R. 625.

Held that the prohibition in the Act against Held that the prohibition in the Act against limited to the case of purpose of set-off is limited to the case of contributories: as to debtors the law of set-off as administered by the courts is applicable as if the company was the courts in applicable as if the company was considered to the company was the courts and following the Moseley, a consideration of the company was not become the company was not by reason of dealings given to the winding-up order, but of dealings prior thereto, because the engagement was to give security to the satisfaction of the government, and in taking up the deposit receipt and supplying better security Y, was only fulfilling that which he was obliged to do by a prior bona fide engagement. Ib.

Director — Remuneration — Breach of Trust — Assignment of Claim.] — By-law 17 of the B. & I. Company provided that the managing director should be paid for his services such sums as the company "may from time to time determine at a general meeting." The only provision made at a general meeting was on 27th January, 1883, as follows: "The salary of the managing director was fixed until 31st October, next, as at the rate of 84,000 per annum." L., the managing director, sought to recover for services rendered as such subsequent to 31st October, 1883:—Held, that he could not do so. Re Bolt and Iron Co., Licingstone's Case, 14 O. R. 211; 16 A. R. 397.

The position of L. as managing director

The position of L. as managing director rendering services for which remuneration was given, was not that of a servant hired by the company, but of a working member of the company, whose rights as to payment were to be measured by the provisions of the charter and by-laws of the company. Ib.

L. having withdrawn from the moneys of the company a certain sum on the assumption that he was entitled to it in payment of his services:—Held, that this was a breach of trust on L's part, and the amount thus withdrawn formed a debt based on a breach of trust, recoverable by the liquidator, under the special provisions of R. S. C. c. 129, and as to which no set-off was permissible against any debt or dividend due from the company to L. Ib.

Held, also, that the master had jurisdiction under s. 83 of the Act to investigate this transaction in these proceedings, which were for the winding-up of the company, and no formal objection should be allowed to affect formal objection should be allowed to affect the proper operation of that section. Ib. Held, further, that the fact that L. had assigned his claim against the company to his wife, after the winding-up order had been acted on, made no difference, since any such assignment would be subject to all the equities against such claim, and against the assignor as a director and trustee of the company's funds in the proceedings under the winding-up order. Ib.

English Winding-up—Action here for Salary.1—To an action by the plaintiff for salary against a company incorporated under the Imperial Joint Stock Companies Acts, defendants pleaded a set-off. It appeared that the plaintiff and one H. held shares which had been issued as paid up, but that fact not having been registered as required by the statute, he had been placed on the list of contributories under the Winding-up Acts in England, as liable for the debts of the company to the extent of their shares. The plaintiff also held similar shares in his own name:—Held, that under a special equitable plea the defendants might set off the alleged unpaid shares held by the plaintiff, but not those held by the plaintiff, but not those held by the plaintiff and H.: and that their proper remedy, therefore, was to apply to stay the action under the equity of the Imperial Acts, which application might be madetothis court. Semble, that the action should be stayed, and all matters concerning the company left to be dealt with under the Winding-up Acts in England. Howell v. Dominion of Canada Oils Refinery Co., 37 U. C. R. 484.

Maker of Cheque.]—On 15th November, 1887, the day before the suspension of the Central Bank, one D., having sufficient funds to his credit, drew a cheque payable to C., who deposited the same in the Dominion Bank, and obtained an advance upon it, and the Dominion Bank claimed upon it in the winding-up proceedings, having presented it for payment on 17th November, when, however, the Central Bank had suspended payment. On 23rd November, 1887, the Central Bank marked the cheque good, debting D.'s account and crediting the Dominion Bank with the amount thereof. Afterwards, however, the liquidators claiming the right to set off certain subsequently accruing liabilities of D. against the cheque, the Dominion Bank withdrew their claim upon it, and the master in ordinary disallowed it. Subsequently, and after the first dividend had been paid, C. heard of this, and filed a claim on the cheque, on 13th September, 1887. The master, however, held that the time for filing claims having elapsed, he had a discretion as to allowing the claim, and allowed it only subject to the said set-off:—Held, that there was no right to set off as claimed, and that the allowance of the claim was ex debito justifie, and not discretionary. The fact of the Central Bank having accepted the cheque, and credited the amount to D., shewed conclusively that at that time the Central Bank was not a creditor of D.; nor did the case come within the meaning of any of the claimes in the Windingup Act relating to fraudulent preferences. CONSTABLE.

Arrest—Pleading—Protection.]—It is not necessary to the execution of a warrant of commitment by a constable that he should netually lay hands on or physically interfere with the person to be arrested. It is an arrest if the person to be arrested. It is no arrest if the person to be arrested asks for and persues the warrant and agrees to accompany the constable; and, semble, it is sufficient if he agrees to accompany the constable on his statement that he has the warrant in his possession. A constable in an action against him for wrongfully arresting the plaintiff without a proper indorsement of the warrant by a magistrate of the county in which the arrest is made, is entitled to plead "not guilty by statute." A constable is not entitled to the protection of 24 Geo. II. c. 44, s. 6, unless there is want of jurisdiction in the magistrate issuing the warrant. Alderich v. Humphrey and Young, 29 O. R. 427.

Arrest — Unnecessary Violence.]—A constable claiming the benefit of a statute in justification of an alleged breach of the law must plead it specially. Clear proof of a warrant to arrest must be given in an action for assault and battery, but its production will not justify gross and unnecessary violence in the execution of it. Belch v. Arnott, 9 C. P. 68.

Arrest in Civil Proceedings.]—Semble, that a constable in a civil proceeding has no colour or pretence for arresting without authority specially given by some process. Bronen v. Shea, 5 U. C. R. 141.

Attachment of Goods.]—A constable of any town within the county in which a warrant of attachment against goods from the division court is issued under 12 Vict. c. 69, s. 1, has authority to execute such warrant. Delany v. Moore, 9 U. C. R. 294.

Attachment of Person.] — Quere, 1. is an attachment of privilege within the 9th clause of 2 Geo, IV. c. 1; and, 2 would this doubt, or the want of an affidavit being annexed to a bailable process, deprive the defendant, a constable, of the benefit of 21 Jac. I. on the point of venue. Brown v. Shea, 5 U. C. R. 141.

Attachment of Person.] — Quere, whether a constable can be compelled to execute a warrant of attachment sued out in a county court from a commissioner, as it is not directed to him but to the sheriff, and the statute gives him no fee. But if he undertake the service and arrest the defendant, he is liable for an escape. Story v. Durham, 9 U. C. R. 316.

Chief Constable — Common Gaming House.]—Section 575 of the Criminal Code, authorizing the issue of a warrant to seize gaming implements on the report of "the chief constable or deputy chief constable" of a city or town, does not mean that the report must come from an officer having the exact title mentioned, but only from one exercising such functions and duties as will bring him within the designation used in the statute. Therefore, the warrant could properly issue on the report of the deputy high constable of the city of Montreal. The warrant would be good if issued on the report of a person who filled de facto the office of deputy high constable though he was not such de jure. O'Neil v. Attorney-General of Canada, 26 S. C. R. 122.

Chief Constable—Paying over Fees.]—
The plaintiffs appointed the defendant chief of police of the town of Stratford, at a named salary, but stipulated that he should act as county constable within the town only, and account for and pay over to the plaintiffs all fees received by him from the county as a reward for services performed by him as a county constable:—Held, that under 5 & 6 Edw. VI. c. 16, and 49 Geo. III. c. 126, the agreement to account for such fees was invalid. Town of Stratford v. Wilson, 8 O. R. 104.

Quere, whether the plaintiffs or the board of police commissioners, had the power to appoint the defendant; and whether, apart from the statutes above mentioned, it was not ultra vires the plaintiffs to burgain with the defendant for the accounting to them for the fees of another office not under their control. Chief Constable — Salary.]—A county council is not liable for the salary of the high constable. Bryan v. County of Ontario, 15 C. L. J. 288.

Chief Constable—Salary.]—Under C. S. U. C. c. 54, s. 402; it is for the city council, not for the commissioners of police, to determine the renumeration to be paid to the police force. Where, therefore, the commissioners, thinking the salary of the chief constable fixed by the council insufficient, had estimated a higher rate, the court refused a mandamus to the city to pay it. In re Prince and City of Toronto, 25 U. C. R. 175.

Chief Constable — Tenure of Office.] — Under R. S. O. 1887, c. 184, s. 445, the chief constable for the municipality can only hold office during the pleasure of the council, and this although he may have been appointed for one year by a by-law passed by the council. Vernon v. Town of Smith's Falls, 21 O. R. 331.

Debtor Allowed at Large.] — Semble, that a constable may allow a debtor whom he has arrested to go at large, so long as before the return of the writ he deliver him to the sheriff. Koss v. Webster, 5 U. C. R. 570.

Defective Warrant.] — Arrest by constable under defective warrant. See Regina v. King, 18 O. R. 566.

Felony.]—To a declaration for imprisoning the planntiff, defendant pleaded that when he made the arrest he was a peace officer for the county, and as such was informed that the plaintiff had committed a felony, and was then a fugitive from justice therefor; that, as he lewfully might, he arrested the plaintiff, and immediately caused him to be brought before the nearest justice to answer the said felony, and that the plaintiff was detained in the police station by said magistrate, which is the trespass complained of:—Held, plea, good. Rogers v. VanValkenburgh, 20 U. C. R. 218.

At the trial it appeared that the plaintiff had committed a gross fraud in Detroit, in the Inited States: that the defendant having received a telegram from a public officer there, arrested him in this Province, and took him to the police station in Loudon; and that after three days' detention he was discharged, the offence not being within the Ashburton Treaty. Defendant had been chief of police in London, and afterwards appointed, from year to year, constable for the county. He had acted for the present year, and there was some evidence of his having been sworn in, but his name was not upon the list of the clerk of the peace of those appointed for that year. The jury were told that defendant having no warrant, and not being a peace officer at the time, the arrest was not strictly legal, and the plaintiff, therefore, entitled to recover. They found, however, for defendant, and the court refused to disturb the verdict. S. C., ib. 220.

Handcuffing.]—Liability in trespass for unjustifiable handcuffing. See Hamilton v. Massic, 18 O. R. 585.

Illegal Warrant.] — Where defendant justified under a warrant from the president and board of police at Cobourg, under the Cobourg Police Act, for the non-performance of statute labour by the plaintiff, the justification was held bad because the plaintiff was imprisoned after part of the fine had been paid, and the warrant to imprison being for an absolute time, without any reference to the earlier payment of fine and costs, was illegal and void. Trigerson v. Board of Police of Coboury, 6 O. S. 405.

Impounding Sheep.] — Liability in replevin for improperly impounding sheep. Notice of action. See Ibbottson v. Henry, 8 O. R. 625.

Maliefous Arrest—Honest Belief.]—In an action for malicious arrest the jury found a general verdict for the plaintiff, with $200 damages. They also specially found, in answer to a question put to them, "that the defendant honestly believed that his duty as constable called upon him to make the arrest." The learned Judge they on the theorem and the second of the property of the learned Judge that the defendant should have received notice of action. The general issue by statute R. S. O. 1877. C. 73, was not pleaded, and the statement of defence was not framed so as to enable the defendant to avail himself of it: and the court were of opinion under the facts set out in the case, that there was no evidence on which the special finding of the jury could be supported:—Held, that the nonsuit must be set aside, and judgment entered for the plaintiff, with $200 damages as assessed. If the statute has not been pleaded honest belief is no defence, if there existed no reasonable ground for such belief. McKay v. Cummings, 6 O. R. 400.

Mesne Process.]—An arrest by a constable on mesne process directed to the sheriff is not legal by 2 Geo. IV. c. 1, s. 9, unless the affidavit of the debt be annexed to the process. Ross v. Webster, 5 U. C. R. 570.

Pleading in Actions Against Constables.]—To a plea of "son assault demesne," a replication that defendant committed a breach of the peace, and that the plaintiff being a constable, and having view thereof, arrested him, is a good answer. Fido v. Wood, 5 O. S. 558.

Plea justifying arrest, as a constable, without a warrant, under the Hawkers and Pedlars' Act, 58 Geo. III. c. 5—Requisites of. See Oriatt v. Bell, 1 U. C. R. 18.

Quære, whether to a declaration for arresting, bruising, beating, and illtreating the plaintiff, a justification of the mere arrest will be sufficient. Jones v. Ross, 3 U. C. R. 328. Semble, not. Beamer v. Darling, 4 U. C. R. 211.

Declaration for assault, &c., and false imprisonment. A., one defendant, justfield, alleging that upon suspicion that the plaintiff had stolen his goods, he laid his information before a justice of the peace, who granted a warrant to the constable; that B., another defendant, being the constable, searched the plaintiff's house, found the goods, and arrested the plaintiff, and at the request of A. carried her before a magistrate:—Held, plea bad, in assuming to answer the whole injury, and yet not denying nor confessing or avoiding the arrest. Jones v. Ross, 3 U. C. R. 328.

A defendant in trespass for false imprisonment cannot urge that he arrested as a constable, and that the action was brought in a wrong county, if he has omitted to insert in the margin of his plea, "by statute," unless the court can say upon the facts proved at the close of the plaintiff's case, that the defendant was acting as constable. Brown v. Shea, 5 U. C. R. 141.

Production of Warrant.]—Where the plaintiff demanded from the constable the perusal and copy of the warrant:—Held, no excuse for non-compliance, that he had lodged it with the gaoler. On the argument in term, it was urged for the first time that the defendant, the constable, being placed by such non-compliance in the same position as the convicting magistrate, was bound to produce the conviction; but:—Held, that as the conviction could probably have been produced if such objection had been raised at the trial, its non-production could not now be allowed to prejudice the defendant. Arnott v. Bradly, 23 C. P. I.

Proof of Warrant.]—The proof by the plaintif of an admission by a constable, sued in trespass with two justices, that a paper produced at the trial was a copy of the warrant under which he acted, is not sufficient evidence as against the justices to entitle the constable to an acquittal under 24 Geo, II. c. 44, s. 6. Kalar v. Coruvall, 8 U. C. R. 168.

Receiving Payment of Fine.]—A constable executing a warrant issued under the Fishery Act, 31 Vict. c. 60 (D.), directing him to convey plaintiff to gool, and the gaoler to hold him for 30 days (absolutely, and not until the fine, &c., be sooner paid for the non-payment of which the warrant was issued), has no authority to receive the money and discharge the prisoner. Arnott v. Bradly, 23 C. P. 1.

Search Warrant.]—Held, that the direction of a search warrant to the constable of Thorold, not naming him, to execute the warrant in the township of Louth, was good. Jones v. Ross., 3 U. C. R. 328.

Taking Bail.]—A constable who arrests under a commissioner's writ cannot take bail, but if he do, and the sheriff accept the bail, the bond is good. Price v. Sullivan, 6 O. S. 640.

Witness at Inquest.]—L., the constable to whom the corner delivered a summons for the jury, was at the inquest sworn in as one of the jury, and was sworn and gave evidence as a witness:—Held, that the fact of L. being such constable did not preclude him from being on the jury, nor did either of such positions preclude him from giving evidence. Region v. Winegarner, 17 O. R. 208.

I. APPLICATION OF IMPERIAL ENACTMENTS.

The Criminal Law of England was established in this Province when forming part of the Province of Quebec, by the Imperial statute, 14 Geo. III. c. 83. By the Provincial statute 32 Geo. III. c. 1, the law of England was adopted in all matters of controversy relative to property and civil rights.]

Accidental Fire.]—The statute 14 Geo. III. c. 78, s. 86, which is an extension of 6 Anne c. 31, ss. 6 and 7, is in force in the Province of Ontario as part of the law of England introduced by the constitutional Act 31 Geo. III. c. 31, but has no application to protect a party from legal liability as a consequence of negligence. Canada Southern R. W. Co. v. Phelps, 14 S. C. R. 132.

Affidavits Made in England.] — The statute 5 Geo. 11. c. 7, s. 1, respecting affidavits to be made in England for proof of debts sued for in this Province, is not repealed by the Provincial statutes regulating the introduction of the law of England or of evidence. Gordon v. Fuller, 5 O. S. 174.

Apprenticeship.]—An indenture of apprenticeship is not void, but voidable, when contrary to 5 Eliz. c. 4; and that statute is not in force in this Province. Fish v. Doyle, Dra. 328; Dillingham v. Wilson, 6 O. 8, 50.

Attorneys Act.]—22 Geo. III. c. 46, which relates, among other things, to attorneys sharing their business with persons not admitted, though repealed in England, is in force in this country. Dunne v. O'Reilly, 11 C. P. 404.

Bankruptcy.]—Under the 75th clause of our Bankruptcy Act, s. 108 of the British statute 6 Geo. IV. c. 16, is not in force in Upper Canada. Maulson v. Commercial Bank, 2 U. C. R. 338.

Bankruptcy.]—This action was begun in March, 1887, to recover $220,000 from the defendants. The defendants having become subject to proceedings in bankruptcy, the plain-tiffs presented their clafm and lodged it with the assignee in bankruptcy in England in September, 1887. The Judge in bankruptcy in England made an order enjoining the plain-tiffs from proceeding with this action in the high court of justice for Ontario; and subsequently an order was made in this action by the master in chambers staying the proceedings for ever. Quere, whether there was power under the English Bankruptcy Act, 1883, to grant the Injunction referred to? But held, that there was power in this court to make the order, either under s, 10 of the English Act, or by reason of the equity of the case and the power of the court to administer that equity, and the order of the master in chambers staying proceedings was affirmed. Howell v. Dominion of Canada Olis Refinery Co., 37 U. C. R. 484; Regina v. College of Physicians and Surgeons of Ontario, 44 U. C. R. 564; Ellis v. McHenry, L. R. 6 C. P. 228, specially referred to. Martime Bank v. Stewart, 13 P. R. 86, 262, 491.

Bubble Acts.]—The Bubble Acts. 6 Geo. I. c. 18, and 14 Geo. II. c. 37, are not in force in this Province, and banks chartered by Act of the Provincial Parliament could not come within the provisions of those Acts. Bank of Montreal v. Bethune, 4 O. S. 165, 193.

Buying and Selling of Offices—Sher-if],—5 & 6. Edw. VI., against buying and selling of offices, is in force in this country under 40 Geo. III., c. 1, as part of the criminal law of England. Any act done in contravention of that statute is indictable, though not specially made so. Quære, per Robinson, C.J., whether it was also introduced by 32 Geo. III. c. 1, which adopts the law of England "in all matters of controversy relative to property and civil rights." 49 Geo. III. c. 126, clearly extends 5 & & 6 Edw. VI. to Upper Canada, and to the office of sheriff. Foot v. Rullock, 4 U. C. R. 480, approved. Regina v. Morce, 7, 17 L. C. R. 562; Regina v. Moodie, 20 U. C. R. 389.

The defendant agreed with R., then sheriff of the county of Norfolk, to give him £500 and an annuity of £300 a year, if he would resign; R. accordingly placed his resignation in defendant's hands. The £500 was paid, and certain lands conveyed to secure the annuity; and it was further agreed, that in the event of the resignation being returned, and R. continuing to hold office, the money should be repaid and the land re-conveyed, but R. did not undertake in any way to assist in procur-ing the appointment for defendant. The defendant having been appointed by the government in ignorance of this agreement, an information was filed against him, and sci. fa brought to cancel his patent:—Held, an illegal transaction within 5 & 6 Edw. VI., and that an information might be sustained under that Act without reference to 49 Geo. III., which clearly prohibited and made it a misdemeanour. Semble, that the agreement would also have been an offence at common law. The ignorance of the government, which was averred in the information, as to the illegal agreement, was immaterial. Ib.

Canada and New Brunswick Boundary, — Under the Imperial statute, 14 & 15 Vict. c. 63, regulating the boundary line between Canada and New Brunswick, the whole of the Bay of Chaleurs is within the present boundaries of the Provinces of Quebec and New Brunswick, and within the Dominion of Canada and the operation of the Fisheries Act, 31 Vict. c. 60. Therefore the act of drifting for salmon inthe Bay of Chaleurs, although that drifting may have been more than three miles from ether shore of New Brunswick, or of Quebec abutting on the bay, is a drifting in Canadian waters and within the prohibition of the last mentioned Act, and of the regulations made in virtue thereof. Moneat v. McFec, 5 S. C. R. 36.

Copyright.]-The B. N. A. Act was not ed to curtail the paramount authority of the Imperial Parliament as respects any of the matters assigned by the Act to the ex-clusive jurisdiction of the Dominion Parlia-ment, or of the Provincial Legislatures. All that the B. N. A. Act intended to effect by s. 91, s.-s. 23, as to copyright, was to place the right of dealing with colonial copyright within the Dominion under the exclusive control of the Parliament of Canada, as distinguished from the Provincial Legislatures, in the same way as the Act has transferred the power to deal with banking, bankruptcy and insolvency, and other specified subjects, from the Provincial Legislatures, and placed them under the exclusive jurisdiction and control of the Do-minion. The Parliament of the Dominion has no greater power to deal with the subject of copyright than was possessed by Provincial Legislatures prior to Confederation. The Im-perial Copyright Act, 5 & 6 Vict. c, 45, was in force in Canada at the time of Confederation, and is in force in Canada still. It is not affected by the Canadian Copyright Act of 1875, which Act is also in force. Smiles v. Belford, 1 A. R. 436; 1 Cart, 576.

Declaration of Execution.]—The court refused a mandamus to compel a registrar to register a deed on a declaration of its exection made in England under 5 & 6 Will. IV. c. 62, substituting declarations for oaths, as that Act does not apply to such a case. In re Lyons, 6 O, S. 627.

Disturbing Public Worship.]—I Will. & M. c. 18, relating to disturbances in church, &c., is in force in this Province, and not supersceled by C. S. U. C. c. 92. Reid v. Inglis, 12 C. P. 191.

Escape Warrant.] — The English statutes, I Anne st. 2, c. 6, and 5 Anne c. 9, relating to escape warrants, are not in force in this Province. Hesketh v. Ward, 17 C. P. 667.

Extradition.]—Held, that the Ashburton Treaty contains the whole law of surrender as between Canada and the United States; the statute 3 Will, IV. c. 6, being superseded by the Ashburton Treaty and the Imperial Act 6 & 7 Vict. c. 76, and the Provincial status 12 Vict. c. 19; though in relation to other foreign powers, with whom no treaty or conventional arrangement existed, the statute 3 Will. IV. c. 6, is still in force. Regina v. Tubbec, 1 P. R. 98.

Quere, how far the United States, Lower Canada. or England, would respect the statute 3 Will. IV. c. 6, if a fugitive surrendered by Upper Canada to a foreign power were taken through those countries. Ib.

Extradition.]—The Imperial Extradition Act of 1870 is in force in Canada, notwithstanding that the B. N. A. Act, previously passed, gives to the Canadian Parliament jurisdiction to carry out obligations resulting from extradition treaties. Ex parte Worms, 22 L. C. Jur. 109; 2 Cart. 315.

False Entry of Verdict.]—16 Car. I. c. 10, was intended only to apply to the court of star chamber and other courts therein mentioned, and not to such tribunals as the recorder's court for the city of Hamilton. Therefore an action against the mayor, acting as president of such court, charging that he falsely and knowingly caused a verdict of guilty to be recorded against the defendant on his trial for larceny, and claiming to recover therefor the penalty of £900 sterling, imposed by the sixth clause of the statute, was held not sustainable; and, at all events, the record being unreversed, would have protected the defendant. Stark v. Ford, 11 U. C. R. 303.

Foreign Enlistment.]—The Imperial statute 50 Geo. III. c. 480, against procuring and endeavouring to procure enlistments in States.—Held, to be in force in this Province, and a conviction under it substanted. Regina v. Schram, Regina v. Anderson, 14 C. 1: 318

Imperial Court — Power to Impose District on. — The Dominion Parliament has power to confer additional jurisdiction on the Court of Vice-Admiralty at Halifax, although that Court was created by an Imperial Act. Attorney-General of Canada v. Flint, 16.8. C. R. 707; 4 Cart, 288.

Informer.]—Held, that 48 Eliz. c. 5, which enacts that an informer shall sue either in person or by attorney, is in force in this Province, and therefore the plaintiff, an infant suing by his next friend, could not maintain an action fo: a penalty under the Election Act. Garrett v. Roberts, 10 A. R. 659.

Insurance—Rebuilding.]—14 Geo. III. c. 78, s. 83, as to rebuilding by insurance companies in case of loss, and s. 86, as to liability for accidental fires, is in force here. Gaston v. Wald. 19 U. C. R. 586; Stinson v. Penneck, 14 Gr. 604.

Insurance—Rebuilding.]—Held, following Stinson v. Pennock, 14 Gr. 604, that 14 Geo. 111. c. 78, s. 83, entitling the mortgage to have the insurance money expended in rebuilding the burned buildings, is not merely of local application, but extends to this Province and was applicable to the present case. Car v. Fire Assurance Association, 14 O. R. 487.

Judge's Conduct in Office—Commission.]—Certain charges having been preferred against a county court Judge, a commission was issued under the great seal of Canada, reciting the facts and the provisions of 22 Gea. H1. c. 75 (Imp.) and directing the commissioners to examine into the charges, and for that purpose to summon witnesses and require them to give evidence on onth and produce papers; and to report thereupon. The inquiry proceeded, and a motion was made for a prohibition:—Held, that inquiries under the Imperial Act should be made before the Governor-General in council, and the authority could not be delegated, nor inquiry upon oath authorized by commission:—Held, also, that the commission could not be supported at common law, for it created a court for hearing and inquiring into offences without determining. Re Squier, 46 U. C. R. 474.

Justices of the Peace.]—The Imperial statute 28 Geo. 111. c. 49, s. 4, enabling justices of the peace for countries at large to act as such within any city, being a county of itself, situate therein or anjoining such county, is local in its character, and is not in force in this Province. Regina v. Rosc, 14 C. P. 307.

Lottery.]—The Imperial statute against lotteries, 12 Geo. II. c. 28, is in force in this country. Cronyn v, Widder, 16 U. C. R. 35c; Corby v, McDaniel, 16 U. C. R. 378; Marshall v, Platt, 8 C. P. 156; Loyd v, Clark, II C. P. 248; Cronyn v, Griffiths, 18 U. C. R. 396.

Lunacy.]—The court is bound to take notice that the Imperial Act 11 Geo. IV, and 1 Will. IV, c. 60, enables lands in this Province held in trust by a person of unsound mind, to be conveyed by a committee appointed by the high court of chancery in England. Thompson v. Bennett, 22 C. P. 393.

Mandamus.]—Held, that in this country there can be no demurrer to a return to a mandamus, the statute allowing it in England, 6 & 7 Vict. c. 67, not being in force here. Regina v. Wells, 17 U. C. R. 545.

Marriage Act.] — Quære, whether the English Marriage Act, 26 Geo. II. c. 33, is in force in this Province. Regina v. Secker, 14 U. C. R. 604. it is not. Regina v. Bell, 15 U. C. R. 287.

Marriage Act. |—26 Geo. II. c. 33, except, perhaps, the 11th clause, is in force in this country. Hodgins v. McNeil, 9 Gr. 305, 32 Geo. III. c. 1, introduced the law of marriage as it existed in England at that date, except, perhaps, some clauses of 26 Geo. II. g. 33. 1t introduced 25 Hen. VIII. c. 12, and 32 Hen. VIII. c. 78. Hen. VIII. c. 16, and 12 Hen. VIII. c. 38, so far as they remained in force, and so much of the canon law as had been adopted by the law of England. Ib. 5 & 6 Will. IV. c. 54, does not extend to this Province. Ib.

Marriage Act.)—Semble, that s. 11 of 26 Geo, III. c, 33, is not in force here, and that a marriage by license where either of the parties is under twenty-one, without consent of parents or guardians, is therefore not void. Regina v, Roblin, 21 U. C. R. 352.

Marriage of Minor. |—Held, that s. 11 of 26 Geo. 11. c. 33 (Lord Hardwicke's Act), by which the marriage of a minor by license, without the consent of parent or guardian, was absolutely void, is not in force in this Province. Laucless v. Chamberlain, 18 O. R. 206.

Medical Practitioner—Registration.]—
Imperial Parliament having enacted since Confederation that any person registered as a medical practitioner under the English Medical Act (21 & 2 Vict. c. 90), shall be entitled to be registered in any colony upon payment of the fees required for such registration and that the term "colony" shall include any of Her Majesty's possessions which have a legislature, the enactment was held to apply to Canada and to override Provincial regulations for the examination of applicants for registration, notwithstanding the Confederation Act and the exclusive power given thereby to the Provinces to legislate in relation to education. Regina v. College of Physicians and Surgeons, 44 U. C. R. 564; 1 Cart. 761.

Military and Naval Service.]—The Parliament of Canada has, under the B. N. A. Act, exclusive jurisdiction in matters relating to militia, military and naval service, and defence, and consequently, the provisions of the Imperial Army Act. 1881, do not apply to Canada, so as to make persons not connected with the active militin of the Dominion liable in respect of acts which are offences under the Imperial Act, but not under the Militia Act of Canada. Holmes v. Temple, 8 Q. L. R. 351; 2 Cart. 396.

Mortmain.1—The statute 9 Geo. II. c. 36, relating to charitable uses, is in force in this Province. Doe d. Anderson v. Todd, 2 U. C. R. 82; Hallock v. Witson, 7 C. P. 28; Mercer v. Heeston, 9 C. P. 349; Davidson v. Boomer, 15 Gr. 1, 218; Hambly v. Fuller, 22 C. P. 141.

Mutiny Act.]—Per J. Wilson, J., the Imperial Mutiny Act does not override C. S. C. 100, but the latter Act was passed in aid of it, and is therefore in force. Regina v. Sherman, 17 C. P. 167.

It, and is therefore in force. Region 1, Section 11, 18 and 18 therefore in force. Region 2, Per A. Wilson, J., the punishment by fine and imprisonment imposed by the provincial Act stands abolished so long as the Mutiny Act is in force, and the imprisonment can in no case exceed six calendar months, but the power of trial by the court of oper and terminer under the provincial Act has not been taken away by the Mutiny Act. 1b.

Nullum Tempus Act.]—The Nullum Tempus Act, 9 Geo. III. c. 16, is in force in this Province, but it does not apply to the unsurveyed waste lands of the Crown. Regina v. McCormick, 18 U. C. R. 131.

Probate, | — The 6th section of 38 Geo. III. c. 87 (Imp.), prohibiting the grant of probate to infants under the age of twenty-one is in force in Ontario, either as a rule of decision in matters relating to executors and administrators (R. 8. O. 1877 c. 40, ss. 34 and 35), or as a rule of practice in the Probate Court in England (R. 8. O. 1877 c. 40, s. 32), Merchanté Bank v. Monteith, 10 P. R. 334.

Rectory Lands.]—The Act 29 & 30 Vict. c. 16, being an Act to provide for the sale of the rectory lands of this Province, is intra vires and valid, the Imperial Act 17 & 18 Vict. c. 18, having removed the restrictions upon legislation upon such subject matter formerly existing by force of 31 Geo. III. c. 31, and Imp. Act 3 & 4 Vict. c. 35. Langtry v. Dumoulin, 7 O. R. 499.

Sale of Land.]—As to Imperial statute, 5 Geo. II. c. 7, authorizing the sale of land in equity for the payment of debts in British colonies, see Kearney v. Creelman, 14 S. C. R. 33.

Sale of Liquor.]—The British statute 24 Geo. II. c. 46, disallowing the sale of spirituous liquors at one time in quantities of less value than 20s. to be consumed out of the shop, is not in force here. Heartly v. Hearns, 6 O. S. 452; Leith v. Willis, 5 O. S. 101.

Sale of Liquor.]—No penalty can now oe recovered for selling liquor without a license from the Governor on Lieutenant-Governor, under the Imperial Act 14 Geo. III. c. 88, for since 1 & 2 Will. IV. c. 23, the issue of such licenses has been regulated by the Colonial Legislature, and now depends upon the municipal Act, 22 Vict. c. 99. Andrew V. White, 18 U. C. R. 179.

Ship—Loss of Goods by Fire.]—The Imperial statute 26 Geo. 111. c. 86, s. 2, enacting that owners of ships should not be liable for any loss or damage which may happen to any goods shipped on any such vessel by reason or means of any fire happening to such ship, is in force in this Province. Turrance v. Rmith, 3 C. P. 411; Hearle v. Ross, 15 U. C. R. 259.

Treason.1—The Imperial statute 11 & 12 Vict. e. 12, for the better security of the Crown and government of the United Kingdom, does not override 3 Vict. c. 12, of this Province, to protect the inhabitants against aggression from foreigners, for the latter is re-enacted by the consolidation of the statutes, which took place in 1850. Regina v. Slavin, 17 C. P. 205.

Treating Act.] — Quære, whether the Treating Act 7 Will. III. c. 4 is in force in this Province. Dundas Election, Cook v. Broder, 1 H. E. C. 205.

Wages of Servants.]—Semble, the statute of 5 Eliz. c. 4, is not in force in Upper Canada, but 20 Geo. II. c. 19, is in force; and under the third and fourth clauses of the latter statute, jurisdiction is given to two or more justices, and cannot be exercised by one, and the party cannot be arrested on the complaint; he must be summoned. Shea v. Choat, 2 U. C. R. 211.

II. BRITISH NORTH AMERICA ACT.

1. In General.

General Rule.]—Sections 91 and 92 of the R. N. A. Act of 1807 must in regard to the classes of subjects generally described in s. 91 be read together, and the language of one interpreted and, where necessary, modified by that of the other so as to reconcile the respective powers they contain and give effect to all of them. Each question should be decided as best it can without entering more largely than is necessary upon an interpretation of the statute. Citizens Ins. Co. v, Parsons, 7 App. Cas. 96; 48 S. C. R. 215.

General Rule.)—The first step to be taken with a view to test the validity of an Act of a Provincial Legislature under the B. N. A. Act is to consider whether the subject-matter of the Act falls within any of the classes of subjects enumerated in s. 92, which states the legislature powers of the Provincial Legislatures. If it does not come within any of such classes, the Provincial Act is of no validity. If it does these further questions may arise, viz., whether the subject of the Act does not also fall within one of the enumerated classes of subjects in

s. 9.1, which states the legislative powers of the Dominion Parliament, and whether the power of the Provincial Legislature is or is not thereby overborne. Dobie v. Temporalities Board, 7 App. Cas. 136; 1 Cart. 351.

General Rule — Delegation.] — Subjects which in one aspect and for one purpose fall within s. 92 of the B. N. A. Act, 1867, may in mother aspect and for another purpose fall within s. 91. Russell v. The Queer, 7 App. Cas. 829, explained and approved, Held, that the Liquor License Act of 1877, R. S. O. 1877, c. 181, which, in respect of s. 4 and 5, makes regulations in the nature of police or municipal regulations of a merely local character for the good government of taverns, &c., does not in respect of these sections interfere with the general regulation of trade or commerce, but comes within Nos. 8, 15 and 16 of s. 92 of the Act of 1807, and is within the powers of the Provincial Legislature. Held, further, that the Provincial Legislature had power by the said Act of 1867 to entrust to a board of commissioners authority to enact regulations of the above character, and thereby to create ofences and annex penalties thereto. Hodge v. The Queen, 9 App. Cas. 117; 3 Cart. 144.

General Rule.]—The general power of legislation conferred upon the Dominion Parliament by s. 91 of the B. N. A. Act in supplement of its therein enumerated powers must be strictly confined to such matters as are unquestionably of national interest and importance; and must not trench on any of the subjects enumerated in s. 92 as within the scope of provincial legislation, anless they have attained such dimensions as to affect the body politic of the Dominion. Dominion enactments, when competent, override but cannot directly repeal provincial legislation. Whether they have in a particular instance effected virtual repeal by repugnancy is a question for adjudication by the tribunals, and cannot be determined by either the Dominion or Provincial Legislature. Attorney-General for Ontario v. Attorney-General for Ontario v. Attorney-General for the Dominion, [1896] A. C. 348; 5 Cart. 225.

Crown's Priority.]—The Queen is the beauty of the constitutional government of Canada, and in matters affecting the Dominion at large her prerogatives are exercised by the Dominion government. The prerogative privilere of priority over other crossing the Dominion of Canada, when claiming the Dominion of Canada, when claiming a provincial corporation in a payed or or provincial Corporation as a provincial Corporation of the Crown o

Crown's Priority.]—The Queen is the head of the constitutional government of Canada, and in matters affecting the Dominion at large her prerogatives are exercised by the Dominion Government. The prerogative privilege of priority over other creditors of equal degree belongs to the Crown as representing the Dominion of Canada when claiming as a creditor of an insolvent bank. Maritime Bank v. The Queen, 17 S. C. R. 657. 4 Cart. 409.

Debts Created under Local Legislation. —Provincial legislatures are not restricted to legislation respecting property, such as bonds, held in the Province, and where debts and other obligations are authorized to be contracted under a local Act, passed in relation to a matter within the power of a local legislature, such debts may be dealt with by subsequent Acts of the same legislature, notwithstanding that by a fiction of law they may be domiciled out of the Province. Jones v. Canada Central R. W. Co., 46 U. C. R. 250; I Cart. 777.

Debts of Province of Canada—Deferred Liabilities—Toll Bridge.]—A toll bridge with its necessary buildings and approaches was built and maintained by Y. at Chambly, in the Province of Quebec, in 1845, under a franchise granted to him by an Act (8 Vict. c. 90) of the late Province of Canada, in 1845, on the condition therein expressed that on the expiration of the term of fifty years the works should vest in the Crown as a free bridge for public use and that Y₁, or his representatives, should then be compensated therefor by the Crown, provision being also made for ascertaining the value of the works by arbitration and award. Held, affirming 6 Ex. C. R. 103, that the claim of the suppliants for the value of the works at the time they vested in the Crown on the expiratime they vested in the Crown on the expira-tion of the fifty years franchise was a lia-bility of the late Province of Canada coming within the operation of s. 111 of the British North America Act, 1867, and thereby North America Act, 1867, and thereby imposed on the Dominion; that there was no lien or right of retention charged upon the property; and that the fact that the liawas not presently payable at the date of the passing of the British North America Act, 1867, was immaterial. Attorney-General of Canada v. Attorney-General of Ontario, [1897] A. C. 199; 25 S. C. R. 434, followed. Held, also, A. C. 199 (25 S. C. R. 45), followed: Hell, also that the arbitration provided for by the third section of the Act, S Vict. c. 90, did not im-pose the necessity of obtaining an award as a condition precedent, but merely afforded a remedy for the recovery of the value of the works at a time when the parties interested could not have resorted to the present remedy by petition of right, and that the suppliants' claim for compensation under the provisions of that Act, (8 Vict. c. 90) was a proper of that Act, (8 yet, 2, 30) was a proper subject for petition of right within the Juris-diction of the exchequer court of Canada. The Queen v. Yule, 30 S. C. R. 24. The judicial committee of the Privy Council re-fused leave to appeal from the judgment in this case.

Dissolving Federal Company.]—A Provincial Legislature of Canada has no power to pass an Act transferring to a new company, or otherwise, a federal railway, with its appurtenances, property, rights and powers, or to dissolve a federal company, or to substitute for it a company to be governed by, and subject to, provincial legislation. Bourgoin v. Compangie du Chemin de Fer de Montreal, Ottava et Occidental, 5 App. Cas. 381, 1 Cart. 233.

Dominion Corporation.] — Held, that the Act 37 Vict. c. 103 (D.), which created a corporation with power to carry on certain definite kinds of business within the Dominion, was within the legislative competence of the corporation chose to confine the exercise of its powers to one Province, and to local and provincial objects, did not affect its status as a corporation, or operate to render its original incorporation illegal as ultra vires the said Parliament:—Held, further, that the corporation illegal as ultra vires the said poration could not be prohibited generally from acting as such within the Province; nor could it be restrained from doing specified acts in violation of the provincial law upon a petition not directed and adapted to that purpose. Colonial Building and Investment Association v. Attorney-General of Quebec, 9 App. Cas. 157.

Executive Councillors.]—The members of the executive council of a Province, under the B. N. A. Act, represent the Sovereign, and cannot be sued in the civil courts of the Province for acts performed by them in the discharge of their official duty. Molson v. Chapleau, 6 Legal News 222; 3 Cart. 360.

Incidental Subjects.]—The B. N. A. Act in assigning either to the Dominion or Provincial Legislatures, power to legislate on any particular subject, gives at the same time all the incidental subjects of legislation necessary to the exercise of the power so assigned. Bennett v. Pharmaccutical Association of Quebec, 1 Dorion 336; 2 Cart. 250.

Legislative Power.]—An Act of the Provincial Legislature, if within its powers as defined by the B. N. A. Act, is supreme as to the courts and people of the Province, and cannot be objected to as contrary to reason or justice. In re Goodbuc, 19 Gr. 306. See also, Toronto and Lake Huiron R. W. Co. v. Crookshank, 4 U. C. R. at p. 318.

Lieutenaut-Governor — Representative of the Queen—Provincial Government.]—The Lieutenaut-Governor of a Province is as much the representative of Her Majesty the Queen for all purposes of provincial government as the Governor-General himself is for all purposes of the Dominion government. Attorncy-General of Canada v. Attorncy-General of Ontario, 23 S. C. R. 458.

Pardoning Power — Provincial Penal Legislation.]—The local legislature have the right and power to impose punishment by fine and imprisonment as sanction for laws which they have power to emet: B. N. A. Act, s. 92, s.-s. 15. The Lieu anti-Governor of a Province is as much representative of Her Majesty the Quee for all purposes of Provincial government as the Governor-General himself is for all purposes of the Dominion Government. Inasmuch as the Act 51 Vict, c. 5 (O.), declares that in matters within the jurisdiction of the Legislature of the Province all powers, &c., which were vested in or exercisable by the Governors or Lieutenant-Governors of the several Provinces before Confederation shall be vested in and exercisable by the Lieutenant-Governor of that Province, if there is no proceeding in dispute which has been attempted to be justified under 51 Vict, c. 5 (O.), it is impossible to say that the powers to be exercised by the said Act by the Lieutenant-Governor are unconstitutional. Quaere: Is the power of conferring by legislation upon the representative of the Crown, such as a colonial governor, the precipative of pardoning, in the Imperial Parliament only, or, if not, in what legislature does it reside? Attorney-General of Canada v, Attorney-General of Ontario, 23 S. C. R. 458, 5 Cart, 517; affirming 19 A. R. 31; and 20 O. R. 2222.

Powers of Province.] — The British North America Act, 1867, has not severed the connection between the Crown and the Provinces. The relation between them is the same as that which subsists between the Crown and the Dominion in respect of the powers, executive and legislative, public property and revenues, as are vested in them respectively. In particular, all property and revenues reserved to the Provinces by ss. 169 and 126 are vested in Her Majesty as sovereign head of each Province. Liquidators of Maritime Bank of Canada v. Receier-General of New Brunswick, [1892] A. C. 437; 5 Cart. I.

Powers of Province.]—The Government of each Province of Canada represents the Queen in the exercise of her prerogative as to all matters affecting the rights of the Province. The Queen v. Bank of Nova 80-cia, 11 S. C. R. 1, followed. Liquidators of Maritime Bank of Canada v. Receiver. General of New Brunswick, 20 S. C. R. 695.

Provincial Objects.]—The term "Provincial objects" in the B. N. A. Act refers to local objects within a Province, in contradistinction to objects which are common to all Provinces in their collective or Dominion quality. Clarke v. Union Fire Ins. Co., 10 P. R. 313.

Provincial Subsidies-Interest. 1-By s. 111 of the British North America Act Canada is made liable for the debt of each Province existing at the Union. By s. 112, Ontario and Quebec are jointly liable to Canada for any excess of the debt of the Province of Canada at the time of the Union over $62,500,000 and chargeable with five per cent, interest there-on. Sections 114 and 115 make a like pro-vision for the debts of Nova Scotia and New Brunswick exceeding eight and seven millions respectively, and by s. 116, if the debts of these Provinces should be less than said amounts, they are entitled to receive, by halfyearly payments in advance, interest at the rate of five per cent, on the difference. Section 118, after providing for annual payments of fixed sums to the several Provinces for support of their governments, and an additional sum per head of the population, enacts that "such grants shall be in settlement of all future demands on Canada and shall be paid half-yearly in advance to each Province, but the Government of Canada shall deduct from such grants, as against any Province, all sums chargeable as interest on the public debt of that Province in excess of the several amounts stipulated in this Act." The debt of the Province of Canada at the Union ex-ceeded the sum mentioned in s. 112, and on appeal from the award of arbitrators appointed to adjust the accounts between the Dominion and the Provinces of Ontario and Quebec:—Held, that the subsidy of the Provinces under s. 118 was payable from the 1st of July, 1867, but interest on the excess of debt should not be deducted until 1st January, 1808; that unless expressly provided interest is never to be paid before it accrues due; and that there is no express provision in the British North America Act that interest shall be deducted in advance on the excess of debt under s, 118. By 36 Vict. c. 30 (D.), passed in 1873, it was declared that the debt of the Province of Canada at the Union was then ascertained to be $73,006,088.84, and that the subsidies should thereafter be paid according to such amount. By 17 Vict. c. 4, in 1884, it was provided that the accounts between the Dominion and the Provinces should be calculated as if the last mentioned Acts had directed that such increase should be allowed from the coming in force of the British North America Act, and it also provided that the total america to the half-yearly payments which would have been made on account of such increase from 1st July, 1867, to 1st January, 1873, with interest at five per cent, from the day on which it would have been so paid to 1st July, 1884, should be deemed capital owing to the respective Provinces bearing interest at five per cent, and payable after 1st July, 1884, as part of the yearly subsidies:—Held, that the last mentioned Acts did not authorize the Dominion to deduct interest in advance from the subsidies payable to the Provinces half-yearly, but leaves such deduction as it was under the British North America Act. Dominion of Canada v. Provinces of Ontario and Quebec, 24 S. C. R. 498.

Repeal of Statutes.]—The powers conferred by the British North America Act 1867, s. 129, upon the Provincial Legislatures of thatio and Quebec, to repeal and alter the statutes of the old Parliament of Canada, are precisely co-extensive with the powers of direct legislation with which those bodies are invested by the other clauses of the Act of 1867.—Held, that 22 Vict. c. 66 (of the Parliament of Canada) which created a corporation, laving its corporate existence and rights in the Provinces of Ontario and Quebec, could not be repealed or modified by the Legislature of either Province or by the conjoint operation of both, but only by the Parliament of the Dominion;—Held, further, that the Quebec Act, 38 Vict. c. 64, which assumed to repeal and amend the said 22 Vict. c. 66, and (1) to destroy a corporation created by the Canadian Parliament and substitute a new one; (2) to alter materially the class of persons interested in the corporate funds, and the mergly to impose conditions upon the transaction of business by the corporation within the Province, was invalid. Citizens' Insurance Company of Canada v. Parsons, 7, App. Cas. 96, approved and distinguished. Dobe v. Temporalities Board, 7 App. Cas. 136; 1 Cart. 351.

Settlement of Estate.]—A testator had devised the residue of his estate in trust for such of his children as should be living at the decease of his widow, and for the children of any of them who should then be dead. Before the widow's death, and on her application and that of the testator's children (all of whom were living), the Provincial Legislature of Ontario passed an Act (34 Vict. c. 99) for dividing the property among the testator's children forthwith: — Held, that such an Act was within the competence of the Provincial Legislature; but the court held further, that the testator's grandchildren not having been expressly named in the Act, and there being no express and explicit enactment specifically referring to and barring their rights, their interests remained unaffected by the Act. In re Goodhue, 19 Gr. 393; 1 Cart. 599.

Statute Before Conrederation.]—An Act of Canada passed before 1867, made void any contract referring to or arising out of a Parliamentary election, even for payment of lawful expenses; the Dominion Parliament passed an Act respecting Dominion elections, but not containing this or any like provision:—Held, that this provision not having been repealed, was in force in Quebec as respects Dominion elections under ss. 41 and 129 of the B. N. A. Act, and that therefore a promissory note given for the expenses of a subsequent Dominion election was void. Willett v. DeGrosbois, 17 L. C. Jur. 203, 2 Cart. 332.

Witnesses Before Legislature. |-- Provincial Legislatures have, as incident to their express powers under the B. N. A. Act, the right to summon witnesses, and to punish persons who disobey such summons, this right being necessary to the proper exercise of their powers of legislation, and the control assigned to them in respect of the administration of public affairs. The provisions of the Act of the Quebec Legislature, 35 Vict, c. 5, regulating inhis right, are valid. Ex parte Dansereau, 19 L. C. Jur. 210, 2 Cart. 165.

2. Adulteration of Food.

Act to Prevent Frauds Against Cheese Factories.]—The Act 52 Vict. c. 43 (D.), an Act to provide against frauds in the supplying of milk to cheese factories, &c., is intra vires the Dominion Parliament. Regina v. Stone, 23 O. R. 46. Sec Regina v. Wason, 17 A. R. 221.

Regulation of Sale of Articles of Pood.]—A Provincial Legislature is entitled to legislate with a view to regulate within the Province the sale of whatever may injuriously affect the lives, health, morals, or well-heing of the community, whether it be intoxicating liquors, poisons, or unwholesome provisions, if such legislation is made bond fide with the object of regulation alone, even though to a certain extent trade and commerce are affected thereby. Keefe v. McLennan, 2 Russ. & Ches. 5, 2 Cart. 400.

3. Arbitrations Between the Provinces.

Appointment of Arbitrators.] - The British North America Act provided (s. 142) that "the division and adjustment of the debts, credits, liabilities, properties and assets of Upper Canada and Lower Canada shall be referred to the arbitrament of three arbitrators, one chosen by the Government of Ontario, one by the Government of Quebec and one by the Government of Canada; and the election of the arbitrators shall not be made until the Parliament of Canada and the Legis-latures of Ontario and Quebec have met; and the arbitrator chosen by the Government of Canada shall not be a resident either in On-tario or Quebec:"—Held, that no appointment once made under this provision could afterwards be revoked by the Government by whom it was made, and that a majority of the arbitrators could continue the proceedings and make a valid award notwithstanding the ab sence of the third arbitrator, who had affected to resign, and an attempted revocation of his appointment by the Government appointing In re Arbitration between Ontario and Quebec, 4 Cart. 712.

Majority—Prohibition of Proceedings.]— Held, by a majority of the arbitrators, that as the B. N. A. Act, 1807, confers powers on the arbitrators appointed thereunder of a public nature, such powers may be exercised by the majority, and an award by all is therefore unnecessary. In re Arbitration between Ontario and Quebec, 6 C. L. J. 212. The jurisdiction of the courts of one of

The jurisdiction of the courts of one of the litigant Provinces to interfere to stay the proceedings on the arbitration by writ of prohibition considered, and held that there is none. Ib.

Upper Canada Improvement Fund-School Fund.]—The arbitrators appointed in 1879, under s. 142 of the B. N. A. Act, were authorized to "divide" and "adjust" the accounts in dispute between the Dominion of Canada and the Provinces of Ontario and Quebec, respecting the former Province of Canada. In dealing with the Common School Fund established under 12 Vict. c. 200 (Can.), they directed the principal of the fund to be retained by the Dominion and the income therefrom to be paid to the Provinces:

— Held, that even if there was no ultimate
"division and adjustment," such as the statute required, yet the ascertainment of the amount was a necessary preliminary to such "division and adjustment," and therefore in-tra vires of the arbitrators. Held, further, that there was a division of the beneficial interest in the fund and a fair adjustment of the rights of the Provinces in it which was a proper exercise of the authority of the arbitrators under the statute. By 12 Vict. c. 200, s. 3 (Can.), one million acres of the public lands of the Province of Canada were to be set apart to be sold and the proceeds applied to the creation of the "Common School Fund," provided for in s. 1. The lands so set apart were all in the present Province of Ontario. Held, that the trust in these lands created by the Act for the Common Schools of Canada did not cease to exist at Confederation, so that the unsold lands and proceeds of sales should revert to Ontario, but such trust continued in favour of the Common Schools of the new Provinces of the Common Schools of the new Provinces or Ontario and Quebec. In the agreement of reference to the arbitrators appointed under Acts passed in 1891 to adjust the said ac-counts, questions respecting the Upper Can-ada Improvement Fund were excluded, but the arbitrators had to determine and award upon the accounts as rendered by the Dominion to the two Provinces up to January, 1889, Held, that the arbitrators could pass upon the right of Ontario to deduct a proportion of the school lands the amount of which was one of the items in the accounts so rendered. Ontario and Quebec v. Dominion of Canada, In re Common School Fund and Lands, 28 S. C. R. 609.

4. Attorney-General.

Enforcing Rights of the Public,]—
The attorney-general of the Province is the officer of the Crown who is considered as present in the courts of the Province to assert the rights of the Crown, and of those who expended the rights of the Crown, and not the attorney-general of the Province, and not the attorney-general of the Dominion, is the proper party to file an information where the complaint is not of an injury to property vested in the Crown as representing the government of the Dominion, but of a violation of the rights of the public of the Province, even though such rights are created by an Act of the Parliament of the Dominion. The attorney-general of the Province is the proper person to file an information in respect of a muisance caused by interference with a railway. Though the power of making criminal laws is vested in the Bominion Parliament, the attorney-general of the Province is the proper officer to enforce those laws by prosecution in the Queen's courts of justice in the Province, Attorney-General v. Niagara Falls International Bridge Co., 20 Gr. 34, 1 Cart. 813.

Enforcing Rights of the Public— Nuisance.]—An Act of the Dominion Parliament incorporating a company for the purpose of constructing a bridge across the Niagara river from Canada to the United States, directed that the bridge should be "as well for the passage of persons on foot, and in carriages, and otherwise, as for the passage of railway trains." The bridge was completed for railway purposes only, and the time limited by the charter for completing the work having elapsed, an information was filed in the name of the attorney-general of Ontario, seeking to enforce the terms of the charter, or for the removal of the bridge as a nuisance:—Held, reversing 20 Gr. 34, that the bridge as constructed not being a public nuisance, the attorney-general of Ontario was not the proper officer to file the information, Attorney-General v. International Bridge Co., 6 A. R. 537, 2 Cart. 559.

Intrusion. —To an information of intrusion filed by Her Majesty's attorney-general for the Dominion, prosecuting for Her Majesty: the defendant pleaded that the lands mentioned were not ordnance property, or property in any manner under the control of the Dominion of Canada; but, on the contrary thereof, the said lands became upon the passing of the B. N. A. Act, 1807, and still are the property of the Province of Ontario, in which they are situate. Issue having been joined on this plea, the title at the trial was gone into, and a verdict entered for the Crown, with leave to defendant to move to enter it for him:—Held, that the Crown was clearly entitled to recover, for, among other reasons, the plea set up no title in defendant, and admitted the Crown title by stating the lands to belong to this Province; and the fact of the attorney-general for Canada prosecuting for the Crown did not shew that a Dominion title was necessarily claimed. Attorney-General v. Harris, 33 U. C. R. 94.

Setting Aside Letters Patent.]—Proceedings in the nature of a scire facias, to set aside letters patent of invention issued under the Dominion statute, 35 Vict. c. 29, cannot be instituted in the name of a provincial attorney-general, and can only be legally brought by the attorney-general of Cannada. Mousseau v. Bate, 27 L. C. Jur. 153, 3 Cart. 341.

5. Bankruptcy and Insolvency.

Bank of Upper Canada.] — Certain lands, after the grant from the Crown, became by certain mesne conveyances the property of the Bank of Upper Canada, and upon the failure of that bank were conveyed to its trustees, and were subsequently, with the other assets of the bank, vested in the Crown by 33 Vict. c. 40 (D.). The Crown then sold them and the purchaser gave a mortgage back to secure part of the purchase money. The mortgage contained the usual provision for payment of taxes, but the taxes were not paid and the lands were sold, this action being brought to set aside the tax sale:

—Held, per Hagarty, C.J.O., and Osler, J.A., that the Act, 32 Viet, c. 40 (D.), was intratires, a dealing with "Bankruptcy and Insolvenic," or "Banking and Incorporation of Banks." That the lands were therefore properly vested in the Crown as trustee, and the interest of the Crown as mortgagee and trustee could not be sold for arrears of taxes, but was exempt under R, S. O. 1887 c. 193. s. 7, s.-s. 1:—Per Burton, J.A., that the Act was ultra vires as an interference with "property and civil rights in the Pro-vince" and that the lands results. trustees subject to taxation. That even if the Act was intra vires, still the lands, being vested in the Crown in the place and stead of the trustees voluntarily selected by the shareholders of the bank, were not exempt from taxation:—Per Maclennan, J.A., that the Act was altra vires and the lands subject to taxation, but that, upon the evidence, the sale was fraudulent and void as far as the interest of the Crown was concerned. Judgment be-low, 17 O. R. 615, affirmed. Regina v. County of Wellington, 17 A. R. 421. See the next

Bank of Upper Canada.]-In 1866 the Bank of Upper Canada became insolvent and assigned all its property and assets to trus-tees. By 31 Vict. c. 17, the Dominion Parlia-ment incorporated said trustees, giving them authority to carry on the business of the bank so far as was necessary for winding-up the same. By 33 Vict, c. 40, all the property of the bank vested in the trustees was transferred to the Dominion Government, who beferred to the Dominion Government, who became seized of all the powers of the trustees:

—Held, affirming 17 A. R. 421, sub nom.
Regina v. County of Wellington, that these Acts were intra vires the Dominion Parliament. Quirt v. The Queen, 19 S. C. R. 510, 5 Cart. 456.

Bill of Sale.]-An Act of the Legislature of New Brunswick, providing that as against the assignee of the grantor under any law relating to insolvency, a bill of sale should only take effect from the time of the filing thereof, was held to be within the competence of the Legislature. In re De Veber, 21 N. B. Rep. 401, 2 Cart, 552.

Building Societies.] - An Act of the Dominion assuming to provide for the liquidation of all building societies in the Province of Quebec, whether solvent or not, was held to be beyond the competence of the Dominion Parliament. McClanaghan v. St. Ann's Mu-tual Building Society, 24 L. C. Jur. 162, 2 Cart. 237.

Canada Gazette.]-Notice of application for discharge in insolvency in the Canada gazette, and not in the local gazette:—Held, sufficient under the Insolvent Act of 1864, the B. N. A. Act, and 31 Vict. e. 6 (O.). In re Huffman, 5 C. L. J. 71.

Debtor's Discharge.] — By an Act in force in the Province of Nova Scotia at the Union, every debtor imprisoned under process from any court was entitled to apply for and obtain his discharge. When this Act was passed there were no county courts in Nova Scotia. In 1878 an Act of the Provincial Legislature was passed, making the above provisions applicable to persons imprisoned under process from the county courts, and this enactment was held to be valid. Johnston v. Poyntz, 2 Russ, & Geld. 193, 2 Cart. 416.

Debtor's Discharge.] — An Act which provides for the examination of a debtor before a Judge, and which authorizes the Judge to grant the debtor a discharge from gaol or the limits as to the suit for which he was confined, on proof that he is unable to pay his debts, and that he has made no fraudulent transfer or undue preference, is an Insolvent Act which a Provincial Legislature has no power to pass, since the B. N. A. Act came into force, and the assent of the governorgeneral does not make such an enactment valid. The Queen v. Chandler, 1 Hannay 556, 2 Cart. 421.

Dominion Winding-up Act.] — Held, that the Winding-up Act, 45 Vict. c. 23 (D.), is intra vires the Dominion Parliament, and is in the nature of an insolvency law, and applies to all corporate bodies of the nature mentioned in it all over the Dominion, and that the company in question in this case, though incorporated under a provincial charter, was subject to its provisions. Allen v. Hanson, 18 S. C. R. 667, 4 Cart, 470.

Fraudulent Debtor's Committal. |-A Provincial Legislature has power to pass an enactment for the imprisonment of a person making default in payment of a sum due on a judgment, in case, (a) he has had since the date of the judgment or order, the means to pay the sum in respect of which he has made default and neglects or refuses to pay it; or in case (b) the liability was incurred by obtaining credit under false pretences, or by means of any other fraud, or by the commission of an act for which he might be proceeded against criminally. Ex parte Ellis, 1 Pugs. & Burb, 593, 2 Cart, 527.

Fraudulent Purchase of Goods.]-The Dominion Parliament by its Insolvent Act of 1875, enacted that any person who purchased goods on credit, knowing or believing himself to be unable to meet his engagements, and concealing the fact with intent to defraud, and who does not afterwards pay the debt, shall be held guilty of a fraud and be liable to imprisonment for two years unless the debt and costs are sooner paid, provided that in the suit for the recovery of the debt, the defendant is charged with the fraud and declared guilty of it by the judgment rendered in the suit. The plaintiff sued for goods sold and delivered to the defendants, who afterand delivered to the detendants, who arter-wards became insolvent under the Act, and charged them with fraud in the terms of the Act:—Held, by a majority of the judges of the common pleas, by two judges of the court of appeal, and by three judges of the supreme court (the other three giving no opinion on this point), that the enactment is within the competence of the Dominion Parliament. Peek v. Shields, 6 A. R. 639, 3 Cart, 266.

Gol Limits.]—The Legislature of New Brunswick prior to the Union, passed an Act extending the gool limits. The Act was not to come into operation until 1st April, 1808, and before that date, but after the Union, it was repealed by a subsequent enactment:—Held, that the subject of gool limits does not so relate to insolvency as to make the repealing Act ultra vires. McAlmon v. Pine, 2 Pugs. 44, 2 Cart. 487.

Imprisonment for Debt. —An Act of the Legislature of New Brunswick, abolishing imprisonment for debt, was held not to be ultra vires as respects a party not shewn to be a trader or subject to the Dominion Insolvent Act. Armstrong v. McCutchin, 2 Pugs. 381, 2 Cart. 494.

Insolvent Society, — The Act of the Legislature of Quebee (43 Vict. c. 58) for the relief of the appellant society, then (as appeared on the lace of the Act) in a state of extreme financial embarrassment, is within the legislative capacity of that Legislature. The Act was held to relate to a matter of a "merely local or private nature in the Province," which by s. 92 of the B. N. A. Act, 1867, is assigned to the exclusive competency of the Provincial Legislature; and not to fall within the category of bankruptcy and not to relievancy, or any other class of subjects by s. 91 of the B. N. A. Act reserved for the exclusive legislative authority of the Parliament of Canada. LiThion 8t, Jacques de Montreal v. Belisle, L. R. 6 P. C. 31, 1 Cart, 63.

Insurance Company — Deposit.]—The Dominion Parliament provided that insurance companies doing business in Canada should make a deposit with the minister of finance for the security of Canadian policy holders:
—Held, that the legislation was valid, and that the Canadian policy holders of an insolvent company were entitled to a distribution of the deposit, although proceedings for the winding-up of the company were pending in the English courts. Re Briton Medical and General Life Association (Limited), 12 O. R. 441, 4 Cart. 639.

Nova Scotia Railway Arrangement Act. |—An Act of the Nova Scotia Legislature for facilitating arrangements between railway companies and their creditors, provided that a company might propose a scheme of arrangement between the company and its creditors and file the same in court, and that thereafter the court might, on application by the company, restrain any action against the company on such terms as the court might think fit. The Act also provided that notice of filing the scheme should be published, and that thereafter no execution, attachment, or other process against the property of the company, should be available or be inforced without leave of the court:—Hol, that the propersy on related to bankruptey and onsolvency, and tere in excess of the powers vested in a Provincial Legislature. Nova Scotia Railway Arrangement Act.]—Under the provisions of an Act of the Legislature of Nova Scotia, "to facilitate arrangements between railway companies and their creditors," the Windsor and Annapolis R. W. Co. proposed an arrangement whereby the so-called B debenture stock of the company then bearing interest at the rate of 6 per cent, was "abrogated and determined," and in lieu thereof the holders of said stock were to receive allottments of new stocks were to receive allottments of new stocks of created, nearling long rates of interest, created, nearling long rates of interest, created, nearling long rates of interest, companies of the confirmation of the proposed scheme was within the legislative authority of the Legislature of Nova Scotia. Re Windsor and Annapolis Railway, 4 Russ. & Geld. 312, 3 Cart, 387.

Nova Scotia Winding-up Act.]—By an Act of the Legislature of Nova Scotia, provision was made for the winding up of companies in general, where a resolution to that effect was passed by the company, or that effect was passed by the company on a contributor, on its being made to appear a contributor, on its being made to appear that such order was just and equitable. The Act could be enforced although no debts were due by the company, but could not be called into operation by a creditor:—Held, that the Act did not partake of the character of an insolvent law, and was within the legislative authority of a Provincial Legislature. In re Wallace Huestis Grey Stone Co., Russ. Eq. Rep. 461, 3 Cart. 374, 3

Ontario Assignments Act.]—Held, following Broddy v. Stuart, 7 C. L. T. Occ. N. Io, that 48 Vict. c. 26 (O.), is intra vires the Provincial Legislature. Clarkson v. Ontario Bank, 13 O. R. 666.

Ontario Assignments Act.]—There being no statute of the Dominion on bankruptcy and insolvency, an Act was passed by the Ontario Legislature for the purpose of enabling insolvent debtors to place their creditors on an equal footing, but not relieving the debtor from arrest or interfering with his after acquired property:—Held, that the Provincial Act was intra vires. Clarkson v. Ontario Bank, Edgar v. Central Bank, 15 A. R. 166. 4 Cart. 499.

Ontario Assignments Act.] — Held, that the provisions of s. 9 of the Act respecting Assignments and Frederences, R. S. Og. Assignments and Frederences, R. S. Og. The Peace of the Peace of Procedure in Bankruptcy.] — Per Spragge, C.J.O., and Morrison, J.A.: Section 136 of the Insolvent Act, 1875, dealing with matters of procedure incident to the law of bankruptcy and insolvency, was within the jurisdiction of the Parliament of Can-nda to cuact. Peck v. Shields, 6 A. R. 639; See S. C. sub nom. Shields v. Peak, 8 S. C.

Per Burton, J.A.: Section 136, which gives Per Barton, J.A.; Section 139, which gives certain creditors an additional remedy in the provincial courts for the recovery of their debts in full, is ultra vires the Parliament of Canada; but s. 8, s.-s. 7, of the Insolvent Act of 1844, to the same effect, is still in force, the Parliament of Canada having no force, the Fariament of Canada naving no power to repeal it. Ib. Per Patterson, J.A.: It is immaterial whether s. 136 is ultra vires or not; for if the Fariament of Canada had the power to deal with the subject of that section, it would be binding, but if not, then the same enactment in s. S. s.-s. 7, of the Act of 1864, is unrepealed and in force. Ib.

Procedure in Insolvency.]-The B. N. A. Act, 1867, s. 91, in assigning to the Do-minion Parliament the subjects of bankruptcy and insolvency, conferred on it legis-lative power to interfere with property, civil rights and procedure within the Provinces, so far as these might be affected by a general law relating to those subjects: consequently the Dominion enactment, 40 Vict. c. 41, s. 38. the Fommion enactment, 40 vict. c. 41, s. 55, providing that the judgment of the court of appeal in matters of insolvency should be final, i.e., not subject to the appeal as of right to Her Majesty in Council, allowed by the Lower Canada Civil Procedure Code, Art. 1178, is within the competence of the Dominion Parliament and does not infringe the minion Parliament and does not infringe the exclusive powers given to the Provincial Legislatures by s. 92 of the Imperial statute; nor does it infringe the Queen's prerogative, for ir only limits the right of appeal as given by the Code. The section according to the true construction of the word "final" therein. reaconstruction of the word "nnal" therein, excludes appeals to Her Majesty, but contains no words which purport to derogate from the prerogative of the Queen to allow such appeals as an act of grace. It, therefore, does not interfere with the prerogative of the Crown; and, quære, what powers may be possessed by the Parliament of Canada so to do. Cuvillier v. Aylwin, 2 Knapp's P. C. 72, reviewed. Cushing v. Dupuy, 5 App. Cas. 409: 1 Cart. 252.

Procedure in Insolvency,]of the Insolvent Act of 1869, which provided that claims by and against assignees in insolvency might be disposed of by the Judge of the county court or by the county court or petition, and not by any suit, attachment, opposition, seizure or other proceeding what-cver, was held not to be beyond the power of the Dominion Parliament, because the right to legislate on the subject of bankruptcy and insolvency belongs exclusively to that Parliament, and because at the passing of the B. N. A. Act there was a system of proceeding in insolvency in force in the former Provinces of Upper and Lower Canada very similar to the one established by the Act of 1869. Crombie v. Jackson, 34 U. C. R. 575; 1 Cart. 685.

Restricting Execution.]-Section 59 of the Dominion Insolvent Act of 1869 provided that no lien or privilege upon the property of an insolvent should be created for a judgment debt by the issue or delivery to the sheriff of an execution, or by levying upon or seizing thereunder the effects or estate of an insol vent, if, before the payment over to the plainof the moneys levied, the estate of the debtor had been assigned or placed in liquidation under that Act:—Held, to be within the competence of the Dominion Parliament. 6. Banks and Banking.

Warehouse Receipts.] - The Dominion Parliament has power to legislate with respect to property and civil rights, so far as necessary for the exercise of its jurisdiction over the subjects assigned to it by the B. N. A. Act. The Dominion Act, 34 Vict. c. 5, s. 46, which authorizes the transfer of warehouse receipts to banks by direct indorsement, is within the powers assigned to the Dominion Parliament and is valid. Smith v. Merchants' Bank, 28 Gr, 629, 8 A. R. 15, 8 S. C. R. 512, 1 Cart. 828.

Warehouse Receipts.]-The Bank Act is intra vires of the Dominion Parliament. Section 91, s.-s. 15, of the British North America Act, 1867, gives to that Parliament power to legislate over every transaction within the legitimate business of a banker, not-withstanding that the exercise of such power interferes with property and civil rights in the Province, and confers upon a bank privi-leges as a lender which the provincial law does not recognize. The legislation of the Dominion Parliament, so long as it strictly relates to the subjects enumerated in s. 91, is relates to the subjects enumerated in s. 91, is of paramount authority, even though it trenches upon the matters assigned to the Provincial Legislature by s. 92. 7. Bills of Lading.

Action by Consignee — Evidence. — A Provincial Act to the effect that all rights of suit should pass to the consignee of goods named in any bill of lading, or to the in-dersee thereof, to whom the property in the goods should be transferred by such consigngoods should be transferred by such consign-ment or indorsement, and that every such in-strument representing goods to have been shipped should, in the hands of a consignee or indorsee for value, be conclusive evidence of shipment as against the person signing the instrument, was held not to be beyond the powers of the Provincial Legislature as being an Interference with trade and commerce. Beard v. Steele, 34 U. C. R. 43; 1 Cart. 683.

As to validity of R. S. O. 1877 c. 116, s. 5, respecting bills of lading. See Hately v. Merchants' Despatch Co., 2 O. R. 385.

8. Courts and Civil Procedure.

Appeal.]—Quere, can the Dominion Parliament give an appeal in a case in which the Legislature of a Province has expressly denied it. Danjou v. Marquis, 3 S. C. R. 251.

Appeal to Supreme Court.]—Section 43. O. J. Act (1881), which provides that in cases where the amount in controversy is under $1,000, no appeal shall lie from the decision of the court of appeal to the supreme court of Canada except by leave of a Judge of the former court, is ultra vires of the Ontario Legislature, and not binding on the supreme court. Clarkson v. Ryan, 17 S. C. R. 251; 4 Cart. 439.

Commissioner to Hold Assize.]—The provisions of the B. N. A. Act have not superseded the prerogative right of the Crown to issue a commission to the Judge of the provisional judicial district of Algoma to hold a court of oyer and terminer and general gaol delivery, for trial of felonies, &c.; and such a commission by the deputy of the Governor-General was held to be legal. Per Wilson, J.—The Lieutenant-Governor, as well as the Governor-General, has the power to issue commissions to hold courts of assize. Regina v. Amer, 42 U. C. R. 391; I. Cart. 722. See also Amer v. Regina, 2 S. C. R. 592.

Commissioners to Try Small Claims.]

—By an Act of the Legislature of New Brunswick since Confederation, 39 Vict. c. 5, it was provided that courts should be established for the trial of civil causes before commissioners appointed by the Lieutenant-Governor in Council. The jurisdiction of the commissioners was limited to $40 in actions of debt, and $16 in actions of tort; and was further restricted in special cases. On an application to set aside a judgment obtained before a commissioner appointed as above provided, on the ground that since the passing of the B. N. A. Act, a Lieutenant-Governor had no power to appoint Judges of any kind, the New Brunswick Act was held to be valid. Ganong v. Bayley, I Pugs. & Burb. 324: 2 Cart. 569.

Costs in Actions Against Justices.]— Quare, whether the Dominion Act, 32 & 33 Vict. c. 29, s. 134, relating to costs in actions against justices, is not ultra vires of the Federal Parliament as relating to procedure in a civil matter. Whittier v. Diblec, 2 Pugs. 243; 2 Cart. 492.

County Court Judge.]—By the B. N. A. Act. 1867, s. 96, the Governor-General is authorized to appoint the Judges of the county courts, and the Provincial Legislature of Ontario land no power to pass an Act authorizing the removal's of county court Judges by the Lieutenant-Governor for incapacity or misbehaviour and had not power to pass an Act abolishing the court of impeachment, which existed in Canada before the B. N. A. Act, for the trial of charges against county court Judges. A county court Judge may be removed by the Governor-General in Council, under the Imperial Act, 22 Geo. III. c. 75, but there is no power under that Act, or

C. S. C. c. 13, or under the common law, to issue a commission for a preliminary inquiry under oath with respect to such charges. Re Squier, 46 U. C. R. 474; 1 Cart. 789.

County Court Judge.]—An Act of the Ontario Legislature provided that the county Judge of one county might preside at the sessions in a county other than that of which he was Judge:—Held, that this enactment was not within the competence of the Legislature, Gibson v. McDonald, 7 O. R. 401; 3 Cart. 319.

District Magistrates.] — Under the B. N. A. Act, the right to appoint magistrates, such as district magistrates, in the Province of Quebec, is vested in the Provincial executives: and this right is not affected by the provisions contained in ss. 90 and 130 of that Act. Regina v. Horner, 2 Stephen's Dig. 450: 2 Cart. 317.

Division Courts.]-Pursuant to the Local Courts Act, R. S. O. 1877 c. 42, s. 16, et seq., the counties of Middlesex and Lambton were proclaimed by the Lieutenant-Governor as a county court district. By s. 17, in such a district the several county courts, division courts, &c., shall be held by the Judges in the district in rotation. By the Division Courts Act, R. S. O. 1877 c. 47, s. 19, the division courts shall be presided over by the county court Judges in their respective counties. order for the committal of the defendant was made by the Judge of the county court of the county of Lambton, sitting in a division court in the county of Middlesex under the provisions of the Local Courts Act. A motion for prohibition was made on the ground that that enactment was ultra vires:—Held, that the Provincial Legislature has complete jurisdiction over the division courts, including the appointment of officers to preside over them; that the learned Judge acted in the Middlesex division court as one of the persons designated by the Legislature to preside over it, and having regard to the enactment in question, solely in its bearing on division courts, it was not ultra vires. In re Wilson v. McGuire, 2 O. R. 118: 2 Cart. 665.

Dominion Officer—Scizure of Salary.]— A Provincial Legislature has no power to declare liable to seizure the salaries of employees of the Federal Government. Frans v. Hudon, 22 L. C. Jur. 268; 2 Cart. 346.

Evidence in Foreign Actions.]—The Dominion Parliament can confer authority upon courts and Judges in Canada, to make orders for the examination in the Dominion of any witness or party in relation to any civil or commercial matter pending before any orders for the examination in the Dominion Act, 31 Vict. c. 76, which contains provisions for this purpose, was therefore held to be valid. Ex parte Smith, 16 L. C. Jur. 140; 2 Cart. 330.

Evidence in Foreign Actions.]—The taking of evidence to be used in an action pending in a foreign tribunal is of extra-provincial pertinence, and does not fall within the exclusive legislative authority of the Provinces; the Dominion Act, 31 Vict. c. 76, providing for the taking of such evidence by Provincial courts, was therefore held to be valid. Re Wetherell and Jones, 4 O. R. 713; 3 Cart. 315.

Inland Revenue.]-So much of s. 156 of infland Revenue Act, 1867, 31 Vict. c. 8, as gives the court of vice-admiralty jurisdiction in prosecutions for penalties and forfeitures incurred thereunder, is intra vires, notwithstanding such court is established in notwritstanding such court is established in Canada by Imperial authority. Valin v. Langlois, 3 S. C. R. 1; 5 App. Cas. 115, dis-cussed and followed. Attorney-General of Canada v. Flint, 16 S. C. R. 707.

Insurance Act of Ontario—Powers of Master.]—The Ontario Legislature has power to confer upon the master the powers given by the Insurance Corporations Act of 1892. Re Imminon Provident, Benevolent, and Endowment Association, 25 O. R. 619.

Justices of the Peace-Penalties.]-By the Act 32 & 33 Vict. c. 31, s. 78 (D.), it is provided that penalties against justices of the peace for the non-return of convictions may be recovered in an action of debt by any person suing for the same in any court of record: -Held, that this provision was within the competence of the Dominion Parliament, and that a Provincial enactment declaring that county courts should not have jurisdiction in such actions was thereby overborne. v. Reed, 22 N. B. Rep. 279; 3 Cart. 405.

Justices of the Peace. |-The Crown has the prerogative right to appoint justices of the peace within the Dominion of Canada and each of its Provinces, but it derogated from that right by assenting to the B. N. A. Act, which conferred upon either the Parliament of Canada or the Legislatures of the Provinces the power to pass laws providing for the appointment of justices of the peace. Such laws are in relation to the administra-Such laws are in relation to the administra-tion of justice, and upon the proper construc-tion of ss. 91 and 92 of the B, N. A. Act are exclusively within the power of the Provincial Legislatures under s. 92, paragraph 14. Ad-ditional weight is given to the construction placed upon these sections, by the Parliament of Canada having from time to time since the B. N. A. Act passed laws recognizing the right assumed by the Provincial Legislatures to pass such laws and the appointments made under them. An order nisi to quash a conviction made by a police magistrate appointed by the Lieutenant-Governor of Ontario under 48 Vict. c. 17 (O.), on the ground that such statute is ultra vires, was, therefore, discharged, with costs. Regina v. Bush, 15 O. R. 398; 4 Cart. 690.

Maritime Court.]-The Act 40 Vict. c. 21 (D.), establishing a maritime court, with jurisdiction limited to the Province of Ontario, is within the powers of the Dominion Parliament. The Picton, 4 S. C. R. 648; 1

Patent Actions — Forum.] — The Dominion Parliament, having in the year 1872 passed an Act respecting patents of invention, which by s. 28 provided that all patents were to be subject to certain conditions non-com-pliance with which should render them void, and that the minister of agriculture or his deputy should have authority to finally determine any dispute as to whether a patent had or had not become void:—Held, that a court or judicial tribunal for the determination of the matters referred to in the said section was thereby constituted and that the constitution of such a court was within the competence of the Dominion Parliament. In re Bell Telephone Co., 7 O. R. 605; 4 Cart. 618.

Patent Action—Venue.]—Held, that s. 24 of 35 Vict. c. 26 (D.), the Patent Act, is not ultra vires the Dominion Parliament, Aitcheson v. Mann, 9 P. R. 473.

Police Magistrates.]-An Act of the old Province of Canada authorized the Governor to appoint police magistrates; the Act was temporary :- Held, that an Act of the Ontario Legislature, continuing the same in force, was valid. Regina v. Reno, 4 P. R. 281: 1 Cart. 810.

Police Magistrates.]-The right of the Provincial Legislatures to legislate in relation to the administration of justice, includes a right to make provision for the appointment of police magistrates and justices of the peace by the Lieutenant-Governor. Regina v. Bennett, 1 O. R. 445; 2 Cart. 634.

Police Magistrates.]-Held, that the appointment of police magistrates is not ultra vires the Legislature of Ontario. Regina v. Bennett, 1 O. R. 445, followed. Regina v. Lee, 15 O. R. 353.

Police Magistrates.] - Held, that the power to appoint police magistrates is vested in the Lieutenant-Governors of the Provinces under s. 92 of the B. N. A. Act. Richardson v. Ransom, 10 O. R. 387; 4 Cart. 630.

Queen's Counsel.]-A Provincial Legislature has no power to authorize the Lieuten-ant-Governor to appoint Queen's counsel, or to grant to any member of the Bar a patent of precedence in the courts of the Province. The question arose on an appeal by Queen's counsel appointed by the Lieutenant-Governor under Acts of the Provincial Legislature, the respondent being a Queen's counsel appointed by the Governor-General: and Strong, Four-nier, and Taschereau, JJ., were of opinion that the Provincial Acts under which the ap-pellants were appointed were not intended to affect the precedence of Queen's counsel appointed by the Governor-General; and it was therefore held, per Strong and Fournier, JJ.:

That as this court ought never, except in cases when such adjudication is indispensable to the decision of a cause, to pronounce upon the constitutional power of a Legislature to pass a statute, there was no necessity in this case for them to express an opinion upon the validity of the Acts in question. Lenoir v. Ritchie, 3 S. C. R. 575; 1 Cart. 488.

Queen's Counsel.]—The Lieutenant-Governor in Council has the right to appoint members of the Bar of Ontario to be Her Majesty's counsel, and to give such members Majesty's counsel, and to give such memoers the right of pre-audience in the courts of the Province. Lenoir τ. Ritchie, 3 S. C. R. 575, has been in effect overruled by later decisions of the judicial committee. Per Burton, J.A.: The Lieutenant-Governor in Council has the The Lieutehant-Governor in Council has the exclusive right to make such appointments. Per Street, J.: The Governor-General in Council has the power to appoint Queen's Counsel for Dominion courts, and to regulate the right of pre-audience in those courts. In re Queen's Counsel, 23 A. R. 792.

Queen's Counsel.]—According to the true construction of the B. N. A. Act, s. 92, s.-ss.

1, 4, and 14, the Act R. S. O. 1877 c. 139, which empowers the Lieutenant-Governor of the Province to confer precedence by patents upon such members of the Bar of the Province as he may think fit to select, is intra vires of the Provincial Legislature. Attorney-General for the Dominion of Canada v. At-torney-General for the Province of Ontario. [1898] A. C. 247.

Speedy Trials Act. |-The power given to the Provincial Governments by the B. N. A. Act, s. 92, s. s. 14, to legislate regarding the constitution, maintenance, and organization of Provincial courts includes the power to define the jurisdiction of such courts territorially as well as in other respects, and also to define the jurisdiction of the Judges who con-stitute such courts. The Acts of the Legislature of British Columbia, C. S. B. C. s. 14, authorizing any county court Judge to act as such in certain cases in a district other than that for which he is appointed, and 53 Vict. c. 8, s. 9, which provides that until a county court Judge of Kootenay is appointed the Judge of the county court of Yale shall act as and perform the duties of the county court Judge of Kootenay, are intra vires of the said Legislature under the above section of the B. N. A. Act. The Speedy Trials Act, 51 Vict. c. 47 (D.), is not a statute conferring jurisdiction but is an exercise of the power of Parliament to regulate criminal procedure. By this Act jurisdiction is given to "any Judge of a county court," to try certain criminal offences: — Held, that the expression "any Judge of a county court," in such Act, means any Judge having, by force of the Provincial law regulating the constitution and organization of county courts, jurisdiction in the particular locality in which he may hold a "speedy trial." The statute would not authorize a county court Judge to hold a "speedy trial" beyond the limits of his territorial jurisdiction without authority from the Provincial Legislature so to do. if Parliament had power to pass those sections of the Act 54 & 55 Vict. c. 25, which empower the Governor-General in Council to refer certain matters to this court for an opinion. 9. Criminal Law.

Appeals from Summary Conviction.] —An Act of the Parliament of Canada pro-vided in regard to appeals from summary convictions made by justices of the peace, that the parties might dispense with a jury if they though fit, and submit themselves to the judgment of the court appealed to without a jury : —Held, that this enactment was not an inter-ference with the "constitution" of the court (in relation to which the Provincial Legislatures have exclusive jurisdiction), but that it related to criminal law and procedure in criminal matters, and therefore was within the jurisdiction of the Dominion Parliament. Regina v. Bradshaw, 38 U. C. R. 564; 2 Cart.

Assault and Battery - Bar of Civil Remedy.]—Sections 865 and 866 of the Criminal Code, 1892, whereby it is enacted that a person who has obtained a certificate of the justice who tried the case, that a charge against him of assault and battery has been dismissed, or who has paid the penalty or suffered the imprisonment awarded, shall be released from all further proceedings, civil or criminal, for the same cause, are intra vires the Dominion Parliament. Flick v. Brishin. 26 O. R. 423.

Bigamy.]-The Dominion Parliament by R. S. C. c. 161, s. 4, enacts that "Every one who being married marries any other person during the life of the former husband or wife whether the second marriage takes place in Canada or elsewhere, is guilty of felony and liable to seven years' imprisonment," and that "nothing in this section contained shall extend to (a) any second marriage contracted elsewhere than in Canada by any other than a subject of Her Majesty resident in Canada and leaving the same with intent to commit the offence." The original Act containing in substance this enactment was passed in 1841, and its validity was subsequently affirmed by the court of Queen's bench in Lower Canada; -Held, that the enactment in the Revised Statutes was valid; and that having in substance been in force in Canada for some years prior to the passing of the B. N. A. Act, it was confirmed by s. 129 of that Act if any Imperial confirmation was required. Regina Regina v. Brierly, 14 O. R. 525; 4 Cart. 665, Compelling Accused to Testify.]-An information under an Ontario Act for selling intoxicating liquors on Sunday was held to be so far a charge of a criminal character that the defendant could not be compelled to give evidence against himself. Regina v. Roddy, 41 U. C. R. 291; 1 Cart. 709.

Conspiracy to Bribe.]-The legislative assembly of Ontario has no criminal jurisdic-tion, and therefore has no jurisdiction in case of a conspiracy to bribe members to vote against the Government considered as a criminal offence. Regina v. Bunting, 7 O. R. 524.

Enforcement of Provincial Laws—Loquo License Act, — A Provincial Legislate Laws—Loquo License Act, — A Provincial Legislate with respect to offences of a criminal nature, except where such legislate of the direct enforcement of a law of the Province made in relation to matter coming within its exclusive jurisdication. In legislating in regard to a matter within Provincial Jurisdiction, a Provincial Legislature has no power to enforce its law by provisions respecting the trial and punishment of offenders in respect of acts which would be criminal offences at common law. Section 57 of the Liquor License Act of Ontario, R. S. O. 1877 c. 181, by which it was provided that any person who, on any prosecution under that Act, tampered with a witness or induced or attempted to induce any such person to absent himself or to swear falsely, should be liable to a penalty of $50, was therefore held to be invalid. Regina v. Laurence, 43 U. C. R. 104; 1 Cart. 742.

Enforcement of Provincial Laws.]—A Provincial Legislature has power to regulate procedure affecting penal laws which such Legislature has authority to enact. Breach of a Provincial statute is not a "crime" within the meaning of s. 91, s.-s. 27, of the B. N. A. Act. Pope v. Griffith, 16 L. C. Jur. 169; 2 Cart. 291.

Enforcement of Provincial Laws.]—A Provincial Legislature has power to requisite procedure affecting penal laws which such Legislature has authority to enact. A statistic of Quebec having provided that no proceedings in civil matters before a district muzistrate should be removed to any other court by certiforari or otherwise, it was held that a proceeding before a district mazistrate for the enforcement of penalties under the License Law of the Province was a civil proceeding within this enactment, and that the right to certiforal was taken away. Enforcement of Provincial Laws.]—A Provincial Legislature has power to require procedure affecting penal laws which such Legislature has authority to enact. Page v. Griffith, 17 L. C. Jur. 302; 2 Cart. 308.

Enforcement of Provincial Laws.]—A Provincial Legislature has power to regular procedure affecting penal laws which such Legislature has authority to enact. An ensement of the Quebec Legislature prescribing the mode in which penalties for violations of a statute of the Province (41 Vict. c, 3) are to be enforced was held to be valid. Coté v. Chuuceus, 7 Q. L. R. 258; 2 Cart, 311.

Evidence. |—Notwithstanding the reservation of criminal procedure to the Dominion Parliament in s.-s. 27 of s. 91 of the British North America Act, a Provincial Legislature has power to regulate and provide for the course of trial and adjudication of offences against its lawful enactments, in this case a breach of The Liquor License Act, even though such offences may be termed crimes; and therefore to regulate the giving of evidence by defendants in such cases, which has been done by R. S. O. 1877 c. 62, s. 9, providing that where the proceeding is a crime under the Provincial law, the defendant is neither a competent nor compellable witness. Regina v. Bittle, 21 O. R. 605.

Fine and Imprisonment.] — Power of Provincial Legislature to authorize punishment of same offence by both modes. Exparte Papin, 15 L. C. Jur. 334; 2 Cart. 320.

Forgery, —Procedure in criminal matters, which by the B. N. A. Act, s. 91, s.-s. 27, is assigned exclusively to the Parliament of Canada, includes the trial and punishment of the offender: and therefore s. 2 of 53 Vict. c. 18 (O.), which authorizes police magistrates to try and convict persons charged with forgery is ultra vires the Provincial Legislature. Regina v, Toland, 22 O. R. 505.

Forgery.] — The power granted by the British North America Act, s. 92, s.-s. 14, to the Provincial Legislatures to constitute courts of civil and of criminal jurisdiction, necessarily includes the power of giving jurisdiction to those courts, and impliedly includes the power of enlarging, altering, amending, and diminishing the jurisdiction of such courts. The Act 53 Vict. c. 18, s. 2 (O.), so far as it provides that the courts of general sessions of the peace shall have jurisdiction to try any person for any offence under any of the provisions of ss. 28 to 31 of R. S. C. 165, an Act respecting forgery, is within the powers of the Legislature of Ontario, as being in relation to the constitution of a Provincial court of criminal jurisdiction, and does not in any way trench upon the exclusive authority given to the Parliament of Canada by s. 91, s.-s. 27, to make laws in relation to criminal law and criminal procedure. Regina v. Levinger, 22 O. R. 690.

Habeas Corpus.]—Quere, is s. 51 of the Supreme and Exchequer Courts Act, which confers power on Judges of the supreme court to issue writs of habens corpus, ultra vires. In re Sproule, 12 S. C. R. 140.

Imprisonment—Hard Labour.]—Quare, whether under B. N. A. Act, s. 92, s. s. 14, the Provincial Legislature has power to impose imprisonment at hard labour. Regina v. Black, 43 U. C. R. 180.

Imprisonment—Hard Labour,]—"Imprisonment" in No. 15 of s. 92 of the Act of 1847 (B. N. A. Act) means imprisonment with or without hard labour. Hodge v. The Queen, 9 App. Cas. 117; 3 Cart. 114.

Jupors—Attendance.]—The Acts relating to the attendance of grand and petit jupors at the county courts (courts of criminal jurisdiction over all crimes which are not capital), are within the powers of the Local Legislature, under the B. N. A. Act, 1887, s. 92, as pertaining to the "Administration of Justice," and the "Constitution and organization of Provincial courts," and do not belong to the Parliament of Canada, under s. 91, as "Procedure in criminal matters," Regina v. Foley, Stevens' Dig. 381; 2 Cart, 635 (n).

Jurors-Mode of Selecting.]-By the Dominion Act 32 & 33 Vict. c. 29, s. 44, the selection of jurors in criminal cases is authorized to be in accordance with the Provincial laws, whether passed before or after the coming into force of the B. N. A. Act, subject, however, to any provision in any Act of the Parliament of Canada, and in so far as such laws are not inconsistent with any such Act. By the Provincial Acts 42 Vict. c. 14, and 44 Vict. c. 6, the mode of selection of jurors in criminal cases, as provided by C. S. U. C. c. 31, as amended by 20 Vict. c. 44, was changed by excluding the clerk of the peace as one of the selectors, and requiring the selection to be made only from those qualified to serve as jurors whose surnames began with certain alphabetical letters, instead of from the whole body of those competent to serve as previously required. The jury in question were selected under these Provincial Acts:—Semble, that the 32 & 33 Vict. c. 29 (D.), was not ultra vires the Dominion Parliament as being a delegation of their powers, and that the selection made in accordance with the Provincial Acts was valid. Regima v. O'Rourke, 32 C. P. 388.

Quere, whether the selection and summoning of jurors is a matter of procedure, or relates to the constitution and organization of criminal courts. Ib.

Jurors — Mode of Selecting.]—By a Dominion statute "for avoiding doubt," it was declared and enacted, "that every person qualified and summoned as a grand juror or as a petit juror in criminal cases, according to the laws which may be then in force in any Province of Canada, shall be held to be duly qualified to serve as such juror in that Province, whether such were laws passed before, or be passed after, the coming into force of the B. N. A. Act, 1867, subject always to any provision in any Act of the Parliament of Canada, and in so far as such laws are not inconsistent with any such Act." Acts were afterwards passed by the Ontario Legislature changing the mode of selecting jurors in that Province:—Held, that the Dominion enactment was not an unconstitutional delegation of legislative authority and was not ultra vires, and that a selection of jurors made in the manner prescribed by the Ontario Acts was valid for the purpose of a criminal trial. Regina v. O'Rourke, 1 O. R. 404; 2 Cart. 644.

Lottery.] — The Provincial Legislatures have no jurisdiction to permit the operation of lotteries forbidden by the criminal statutes of Canada. L'Association St. Jean Baptiste v. Brault, 30 S. C. R. 598.

North-West Territories Procedure Act.)—Held, that 34 & 35 Vict. c. 28, which authorizes the Parliament of Canada to provide for "the administration, peace, order, and good government of any territory, not for the time being included in any Province," vests in that Parliament the utmost discretion of enactment for the attainment of those objects. Accordingly Canadian Act. 43 Vict. c. 25, is intra vires the Legislature. Section 76, s.-s. 7, which prescribes that full notes of evidence be taken, is literally complied with when notes are taken in shorthand. Riel v. The Queen, 10 App. Cas. 675; 4 Cart. 1.

Provincial Penal Legislation.] — The local Legislatures have the right and power to impose punishments by fine and imprisonment as sanction for laws which they have power to enact. Attorney-General of Canada v. Attorney-General of Ontario, 23 S. C. R. 458.

Returns of Convictions.] — Semble, that the right to legislate on returns of convictions and fines for criminal offences belongs to the Dominion, and not Provincial, Legislature. Clemens q. t. v. Bemer, 7 C. L. J. 126, Returns of convictions and fines for criminal offences being governed by the Dominion statute 32 & 33 Vict. c. 31, s. 76, and not by the Law Reform Act, 1888, are only required to be made semi-annually to the general sessions of the peace. 10. Education.

Separate Schools.]—A Provincial Legislature may legislate in regard to separate schools provided that the rights or privileges with respect to denominational schools which any class of persons had by law in the Pro-vince at the time of Confederation are not prejudicially affected by such legislation. The B. N. A. Act provides by s.-s. 3 of s. 93 that Where in any Province a system of separate or dissentient schools exists by law at the Union, or is thereafter established by the Legislature of the Province, an appeal shall lie to the Governor-General in Council from any Act or decision of any Provincial authority affecting any right or privilege of the Protestant or Roman Catholic minority of the Queen's subjects in relation to education: Held, that this enactment gives an appeal in respect to those decisions alone which are legislative acts, or their equivalents, and not in respect of matters affecting merely the every-day detail of the working of a school, In election matters separate schools have the same right of appeal to a county Judge as public schools have. Separate School Trustees of Belleville v. Grainger, 25 Gr. 570; 1 Cart. 816.

Separate Schools.]—The provisions contained in s. 93 of the B. N. A. Act, that nothing in any law made by a Province in relation to education "shall prejudicially affect any right or privilege with respect to denominational schools which any class of persons have by law in the Province at the Union," protect those legal rights and privileges only which existed in each Province at the Union by virtue of positive legal enactment, and not privileges enjoyed under exceptional and accidental circumstances, and without legal right. At the Union the law with respect to the schools in the Province of New Brunswick was governed by the Parish School Act, under which no class of persons had any legal right or privilege with respect to denominational school and the subsequent Act, 34 Vict, c. 21, providing that the schools conducted therefore held to describe the constitutionality of the Act 34 Vict, c. 21, cannot be affected by any regulations of the owner of education made under its authory; and semble, if the board of education have made regulations which they sought not to have case falls within s.-s. 4 of s. 93 of the B. N. A. Act. Ex parte Renaud, 1 Pugs. 278; 2 Carr 11. Elections.

Appeal to Judicial Committee.]-The petitioner having been declared duly elected a member to represent the electoral district Montmanier in the Legislative Assembly of the Province of Quebec, his election was afterwards, on petition, declared null and void by judgment of the superior court, under the Quebec Controverted Elections Act, 1875, and himself declared guilty of corrupt practices, both personally and by his agents. He now applied for special leave to appeal to Her Majesty in Council:-Held, that such application must be refused. Although the prerogative of the Crown cannot in general the taken away except by express words, and the 90th section of the above Act providing that "such judgment shall not be susceptible of appeal," does not mention either the Crown or its prerogative; yet the fair construction of the Act was held to be that it was the intention of the Legislature to create a tribanal for the purpose of trying election petitions in a manner which should make its decision final for all purposes, and should not annex to it the incident of its judgment be-ing reviewed by the Crown under its prerogative; and the Act having been assented to on the part of the Crown, and the Crown being therefore a party to it, there was held to be no prerogative right to admit an appeal contrary to the intention of the Act. The-berge v. Landry, 2 App. Cas. 102; 2 Cart. 1.

Bribery at Elections—Civil Action.]—
The jurisdiction of the Provincial Legislatures over "property and civil rights" does not preclude the Parliment of Canada from giving to an informer the right to recover, by a civil action, a penalty imposed as a punishment for bribery at an election. The Dominion Elections Act 1874, by s. 109, provides that all penalties and forfeitures (other than fines in cases of misdemenour) imposed by the Act shall be recoverable, with full costs of sait, by any person who will sue for the same, by action of debt or information, in any of Her Majesty's courts in the Province in which the cause of action arose, having competent jurisdiction:—Held, affirming 32 C. P. 632, that this enactment was valid. Doyle v. Bell, 11 A. R. 326; 3 Cart. 297.

Dominion Controverted Elections — Forum — Procedure. — Held, that 37 Vict. c. 10 (D.), by which the trial of controverted elections to the House of Commons was referred to the court of common pleas, or any Judge there, amongst the other courts named in this Province, was not ultra vires of the Dominion Parliament; and a preliminary objection raising this question was disallowed with costs:—Held, also, that the Dominion Parliament had power to enact the procedure to govern the courts in relation to such trials, and that the Act 37 Vict. c. 10 (D.), in this respect also was not ultra vires. A preliminary objection raising this question was therefore in like manner disallowed. Re Niagara Election Case, Plumb v. Huches, 29 C. P. 261, See Re South Ontario Election Case, McKay v. Glen; Re West Hastings Election Case, Wallbridge v. Bosen, d. 270.

Dominion Controverted Elections Act. |—The Dominion Controverted Elections Act of 1874, 37 Vict. c. 10 (D.), does not contravene s. 92, s.-s. 14, of the British North D—37 America Act, 1867. The said sub-section does not relate to election petitions, while s. 41 of the same Act reserved to the Parliament of Canada the power of creating a jurisdiction to determine them. The Parliament of Canada has power to commit such jurisdiction to existing Provincial courts. Valin v. Langlois, 5 App. Cas. 115, 3 S. C. R. 1; 1 Cart. 158.

Electoral Franchise Act.]—There is no jurisdiction in the high count of justice to issue a writ of prohibition to a revising officer to compel him to abstain from "performing any duty under the Electoral Franchise Act." The legislation in regard to such matters does not trench upon, nor is the question one of "property and civil rights in the Frovince." Re Simmons and Dalton, 12 O. R. 505, not followed. Re North Perth, Hessin v. Lloyd, 21 O. R. 538.

12. Escheats.

Land.]—Lands in the Province of Ontario escheated to the Crown tor defect of heirs belong to the Province and not to the Dominion. At the date of passing the B. N. A. Act the revenue arising from all escheats to the Crown within the then Province of Canada was subject to the disposal and appropriation of the Crown. Although s. 102 of the Act vested in the Dominion the general public revenues as then existing in the Provinces; yet by s. 109 the casual revenue arising from lands escheated to the Crown after the Union was reserved to the Provinces—the words "lands, mines, minerals and royalties" therein including, according to their true construction, royalties in respect of lands such as escheates. Attorney-General v. Mercer, 8 App. Cas. 767; 5 S. C. R. 538, 6 A. R. 576, 26 Gr. 125, 3 Cart. 1.

13. Indians.

Indian Annuities.] - In 1850 the late Indian Annuties.]—In 1859 the late Province of Canada entered into treaties with the Indians of the Lake Superior and Lake Huron districts by which the Indian lands were surrendered to the gov-ernment of the Province in consideration of a certain sun paid down and an annuity to the tribes, with a provision that "should to the tribes, with a provision that "should all the territory hereby ceded by the Indians at any future period produce such an amount as will enable the government of this Province, without incurring loss, to increase the annuity hereby secured to them, then, and in that case, the same shall be augmented from time to time." By the B. N. A. Act the Dominion of Canada assumed the debts and liabilities of the Province of Canada, and s. 109 of that Act provided that all lands, &c., belonged to the several Provinces in which the same were situate, "subject to any trust existing in respect thereof, and to any interest other than that of the Province in the same. The lands so surrendered are situate in the Province of Ontario, and have for some years produced an amount sufficient for the payproduced an amount sufficient for the payment of an increased annuity to the Indians. The Dominion Government has paid the annuities since 1867 (from 1874 at the increased amount) and claims to be reimbursed therefor:—Held, that the provision in the treaties as to increased annuities had not the effect of burdening the lands with a "trust in respect thereof" or "an interest other than that of the Province in the same," within the meaning of said s. 109, and therefore Ontarlo held the lands free from any trust or interest, and was not solely liable for repayment to the Dominion of the increased annuities, but only liable jointly with Quebec as representing the Province of Canada. Province of Outario v. Dominion of Canada and Province of Quebec, In re Indian Claims, 25 S. C. R. 434.

Indian Annuities.] — By treaties in 1850 the Governor of Canada as representing the Crown and the Provincial Government, obtained the cession from the Ojibeway Indians of lands occupied as Indian reserves, the beneficial interest therein passing to the Provincial Government, together with to the Provincial Government, together with the liability to pay to the Indians certain perpetual annuities:—Held, that these lands being within the limits of the Province of On-tario, created by the B. N. A. Act, the benefi-cial interest therein vested under s. 109 in that Province. The perpetual annuities hav-ing been capitalized on the basis of the amounts specified in the treaties, the Dominion assumed liability in respect thereof under s. 111. Thereafter the amounts of these annuities were increased according to the treaties :- Held, that liability for these increased amounts was not so attached to the ceded lands and their proceeds as to form a charge thereon in the hands of the Province, under s. 109. They must be paid by the Dominion with recourse to the Provinces of Ontario and Quebec conjointly, under ss. 111, 112, in the same manner as the original annuities. Attorney-General for the Dominion of Canada v. Attorney-General for Ontario, Attorney-General for Quebec v. Attorney-General for Ontario, [1897] A. C. 199.

Indian Annuities. — The award complained of by the Province of Quebec determined that certain payments made by the Dominion of Canada in virtue of the Huron and Superior Treaties with the Ojibeway Indians for arrears of augmented annuities and interest from 1867 to 1873, and for increased annuities necessory of the fixed annuities with interest paid subsequently, should be taken into account and Canada mentioned in the 112th section of the British North America Act, 1867: — Held, alfirming the decision of the arbitrators, that the question of these contingent annuities had been considered and decided by Her Majesty's Privy Council in the case of Attorney-General of Canada v, Attorney-General of Ontario, [1807]. A. C. 199, and that the payments so made by the Dominion were recoverable from the Provinces of Ontario and Quebec conjointly in the same manner as the original annuities. Province of Quebec v. Dominion of Canada, In re Indian Claims, 39 S. C. R.

Indian Lands.]—Those "lands reserved for the Indians." which by s. 91, s.-s. 24, of the B. N. A. Act, are placed under the exclusive legislative jurisdiction of the Parliament of Canada, are those Indian lands only which have not been surrendered by the Indians, and have been reserved for their use, and do not include lands to which the Indian title has been extinguished. The Ontario Legislature has power to tax against a vendee unpatented lands which the Indians have surrendered for the purpose of being sold; all unpatented lands, whether Indian lands or Crown lands, when once agreed to be sold, being upon the same footing as respects liability to municipal taxation. Church v. Feston, 28 C. P. 384; 4 A. R. 159; 5 S. C. R. 239; 1 Cart. S31.

Indian Lands.]—Section 109 of the B. N. A. Act, of 1867, gives to each Province the entire beneficial interest of the Crown in the entire beneficial interest of the Crown in all lands within its boundaries, which at the time of the union were vested in the Crown, subject to such rights as the Dom-inion can maintain under ss. 108 and 117. Attorney-General of Ontario v. Mercer, 8 App. Cas. 767, followed. By royal proclama-tion in 1763 possession was granted to certain Indian tribes of such lands "parts of our dominions and territories" as, not having been ceded to or purchased by the Crown, were reserved, "for the present," to them The proclamaas their hunting grounds. tion further enacted that all purchases from the Indians of lands reserved to them must be made on behalf of the Crown by the Governor of the colony in which the lands lie, and not by any private person. In 1873 the lands in suit, situate in Ontario, which had been in Indian occupation until that date under the said proclamation, were, to the extent of the whole right and title of the Indian in-habitants therein, surrendered to the Gov-ernment of the Dominion for the Crown, subject to a certain qualified privilege of huning and fishing:—Held, that by force of the proclamation the tenure of the Indians was a personal and usufructuary right dependent upon the goodwill of the Crown: that the upon the goodwill of the Crown; that the lands were thereby, and at the time of the Union, vested in the Crown, subject to the Indian title, which was "an interest other than that of the Province in the same," within the meaning of s. 100. Held, also, that by force of the said surrender the entire beneficial interest in the lands subject to the privilege was transmitted to the Province in terms of s. 109. The Dominion power of legislation over lands reserved for the Indians is not inconsistent with the beneficial interis not inconsistent with the beneficial interest of the Province therein. St. Catherine's Milling and Lumber Co. v. The Queen, 10 0. R. 196, 13 A. R. 148, 13 S. C. R. 577, 14 App. Cas. 46, 4 Cart. 107.

Surrender of Indian Lands—Special Provisions in Treaty—Precious Metalea, — A treaty of surrender of Indian territory to the Dominion of Canada in 1873, provided that certain lesser reserves in the lands surrendered, were to be defined and set aparta and thereafter to be administered to the administered of the Indians treat defined, sold, feed of otherwise disposed of by the Dominion for the benefit of the Indians. Part of one of these lesser reserves so set apart, and situate in the Province of Ontario, was in 1886 surrendered to the Queen under the Indian Act of 1889, 43 Vict. c. 28 (D.), in trust to sell the same upon such terms as the Dominion might deem most conducive to the welfare of the Indians; and of this, the lands in question were parented by the Dominion to the plaintiffs, including the precious metals therein. The defendants asserted title in fee to the same lands by virtue of an Ontario patent of 1899. It appeared that in negotiating the treaty in 1873, the Dominion commissioners represented to the Indians that they would be entitled to the benefit of any minerals that might be discovered on any of the lesser reserves to be thereafter delimited;—Held, that after the surrender in 1886, title to the land and to the precious metals therein could be obtained only from the Crown as represented by the Province of Ontario. With the royal mines and minerals the Indians had no concern; nor could the Dominion make any valid stipulation with them which could affect the rights of Ontario. Semble, a Province is not to be held bound by alleged acts of aquilescence of various departmental officers which are not brought home to or authorized by the proper executive or administrative organs of the Provincial government, and are not manifested by any order in council or other authentic testimony. Ontario Mining Co., v. Sephold, 31 O. R. 386, 32 O. R. 301.

14. Insurance.

Deposits.]—The Acts 31 Vict. c. 48 (D.), and 34 Vict. c. 9 (D.), relating to insurance companies are not ultra vires the Dominion Parliament. Re Briton Medical and General Life Association (2), 12 O. R. 441.

Dominion Conditions. 1-The defendant. a mutual insurance company, was incorporated by an Act of the Dominion Parliament, 41 Vict. c. 40, by s. 28 of which it is provided that "any fraudulent misrepresentation contained in the application therefor, or any false statement respecting the title or the ownership of the applicant or his circumstances, or the concealment of any incumbrance on the insured property, or the failure to notify the company of any change in the title or ownership of the insured property, and to obtain the written consent of the company thereto, shall render the policy void: Held, on demurrer, that the matters provided for by the above section were subject matters of the Fire Insurance Policy Act of Onjurisdiction; and although they might be proper subjects of legal contract, they would have no force or vitality through the Dominion no force or vitality through the Dominion Act per se, but only by being used as required or modified by said Ontario Act, namely, in the manner provided for variations to the conditions therein contained. Cltizens' Ins. Co. v. Parsons and Queen Ins. Co. v. Parsons, 7 App. Cas. 96, commented upon. Goring v. London Mutual Fire Ins. Co., 11 O. R. 82.

Incorporation before Confederation. |-38 Vict. c. 65 (D.), to amend the law relating to fire insurances, is not ultra vires, so far as it affects companies incorporated by Acts of the Legislature of Canada.
As to any such company transacting business in Ontario, on any subject within the powers of the Provincial Legislature, that body may impose what condition it pleases on the operations of the company. Billington v. Provincial Ins. Co., 24 Gr. 299; 3 S. C.
R. 182; Dear v. Western Assurance Co., 41
C. R. 553.

Insurance License.)—Held, that the Ontario Act, 39 Vict. c. 24, is not inconsistent with Dominion Act, 38 Vict. c. 20, which requires all insurance companies, whether incorporated by foreign, Dominion or Provincial authority, to obtain a license to be granted only upon compliance with the conditions prescribed by the Act. Citizens' Insurance Company of Canada v. Parsons; Queen Insurance Co. v. Parsons, 7 App. Cas. 96, 4 S. C. R. 215.

Provincial Incorporation.] — A company incorporated by a Provincial Legislature for the business of insurance possesses the same capacity and franchises within the jurisdiction creating it as a company incorporated by the Imperial or Dominion Parliaments; and may enter into contracts outside the Province wherever such contracts are recognized by comity or otherwise. The term "Provincial objects" in the B. N. A. Act refers to local objects within a Province, in contradistinction to objects which are common to all Provinces in their collective or Dominion quality. Clarke v. Union Fire Ins. Co., 10 P. R. 313; 3 Cart. 335.

Statutory Conditions.]—The power to legislate upon the subject of insurance is not vested in the Dominion Parliament by virtue of its power to pass laws for the regulation of trade and commerce under s. 91 of the B. N. A. Act, but belongs to the Local Legislature. 39 Vict. c. 24 (R. 8. 0. 1877 c. 162), is not therefore ultra vires of the Ontario Legislature: and it applies to companies incorporated by the Dominion Parliament before Confederation, as well as to those incorporated by the Legislature of Ontario. Chris v. National Insurance Co., 42 U. C. R. 141; Parsons v. Citizens' Insurance Co., 4 A. R. 36; Parsons v. Queen Insurance Co., 4 A. R. 36; Johnston v. Western Assurance Co., 4 A. R. 281.

Statutory Conditions — Foreign Companies] —In No. 2 of s. 91 the words "regulation of trade and commerce," include political arrangements in regard to trade requiring the sanction of Parliament, regulation of trade in matters of inter-provincial concern, and it may be general regulation of trade affecting the whole Dominion; but do not include the regulation of the contracts of a particular business or trade, such as the business of fire insurance in a single Province, and therefore do not conflict with the power of legislating respecting property and civil rights conferred by s. 92, No. 13, Citizens Ins. Co. v. Parsons; Gucen Ins. Co. v. Parsons, T app. Cas. 86, 4 8 C. R. 215, T Cart, 235.

30 Vict. c. 24 (O.), which deals with policies of insurance entered into or in force in the Province of Ontario for insuring property situate therein against fire and prescribes certain conditions which are to form part of such contracts, is a valid Act applicable to the contracts of all such insurers in Ontario, including corporations and companies whatever may be their origin, whether incorporated by British authority or by foreign or colonial authority. 15. Interest.

Percentage on Overdue Taxes.]—The general law having limited the rate of interest, in the besence tagreement between the set, in the besence tagreement between the comparation of the set of the set former enactment was effectually repealed, and that the new enactment as to increase was invalid. Ross v. Torrance, 2 Legal News 186, 2 Cart. 352.

Percentage on Overdue Taxes.]—The Municipal Act of Manifoba provides that persons paying taxes before 1st December, in cities, and 31st December, in rural municipalities, shall be allowed 10 per cent. discount; that from that date until 1st March, the taxes shall be payable at par; and after 1st March 10 per cent, on the original amount of the tax shall be added;—Held, that the 10 per cent, added on 1st March was only an additional rate or tax imposed as a penalty for non-payment which the local Legislature, under its authority to legislate with respect to municipal institutions, had power to impose, and it was not "interest" within the meaning of s. 91 of the B. N. A. Act. Ross v. Torrance, 2 Legal News 186, overruled. Lynch v. Canada N. W. Land Co., South Dufferin v. Morden, Gibbins v. Barber, 19 S. C. R. 204, 5 Cart. 427.

Rate of Interest.]—The general law having provided that on any contract or agreement any person may stipulate for any rate of interest or discount which may be agreed on, an Act of the Quebee Legislature, authorizing a company to pay such rate of interest for advances as might be agreed, and to make arrangements allowing such interest either by selling obligations bearing a lower rate of interest below par, or by issuing them at par, bearing the agreed rate of interest, was held to be within the competence of the Provincial Legislature. A Provincial Legislature may give local corporations authority to borrow money at any rate of interest already legalized as to other persons having the right to borrow. Royal Canadian Insurance Co. v. Montreal Warchousing Co., 3 Legal News 155, 2 Cart. 361.

16. Intoxicating Liquors.

Brewer's License,]—A brewer licensed as such by the Government of Canada under 31 Vict. c. 8 (D.), requires no license under the Tavern and Shop License Act of Ontario, 32 Vict. c. 32, s. 1, as amended by 33 Vict. c. 28, for selling ale manufactured at his brewery. Whether the statute, if applicable to licensed brewers, would have been within the power of the Provincial Legislature, was a question raised, but not decided. Regina v. Scott. 34 U. C. R. 20

Brewer's License.]—The Dominion authority alone has power to tax and regulate the trade of a brewer, which is a branch of trade and commerce, and having done so, the Ontario Legislature has not the power to restrain it, unless in a qualified nanner, and for the mere purposes of police. Regina v. Taylor, 30 U. C. R. 183.

The prohibition to keep, have, or sell beer, by a brewer, unless under a license and the payment of a tax for a license, is an excess of power by the Provincial authority, and is a restraint and regulation of trade and commerce, and not the exercise of a police power. Ib.

The restriction imposed by the Ontario Legislature on brewers not to sell by retail, as defined by the Act of 1874, is not ultra vires, because it is a mere repetition and renewal of the legislation which was in force before and at the time of Confederation. Ib.

The right conferred on the Ontario Legislature to deal exclusively with shop, saloon, tavern, auctioneer, and other licenses for the purposes of revenue, does not extend to licenses on brewers and distillers, over which the general government only, and at all times, exercised jurisdiction, and which are of a higaer and different class than the licenses of retail dealers which are mentioned; and the "other licenses" have reference to those kind of licenses before stated, such as on billiard tables, livery stables, &c., which are chiefly enumerated in the municipal Acts. Ib.

The Ontario Legislature has a right to license or prohibit the sale of liquors in shops and taverns, and in other places of the like kind, because it has the exclusive power over municipal institutions, and the regulation of these institutions required before and at the time of Confederation the exercise of such powers, and because the exercise of such powers, considered in connection with s. 92, s.-8. 16 of the Confederation Act, is now a matter of "a merely local or private nature in the Province." That power is in restraint of trade as well as a matter of police. The general regulation of trade and commence, which is vested in the Dominion Government, must be considered to be modified by the powers which the Ontario Legislature, acting in relation to municipal institutions, may properly exercise. Ib.

Brewer's License.]—S., after the passing of the Act 37 Vict. c. 32, (O.), intituled "An Act to amend and consolidate the law for the sale of fermented or spirituous li-quors," then being a brewer licensed by the Government of Canada under 31 Vict. c. 8 (D.), for the manufacture of fermented, spirituous and other liquors, did manufacture large quantities of beer, and did sell by whole sale for consumption within the Province of Ontario a large quantity of said fermented liquors so manufactured by him, without first obtaining a license as required by the said Act of the Legislative Assembly of Ontario. The Attorney-General thereupon filed an information for penalties against S. On demurrer to the information, the special matter for argument was that the Legislature of the Province of Ontario had no power to pass the statute under which the penalties were sought to be recovered, or to require brewers to take out any license whatever for selling fermented or malt liquors by wholesale, as stated in the information:—Held, that the Act of the Provincial Legislature of Ontario, 37 Vict. c. 32, is not within the legislative capacity of that Legislature. 2. That the power to tax and regulate the trade of a brewer, being a restraint and regulation of trade and commerce, falls within the class of subjects reserved by s. 91 of the B. N. A. Act for the exclusive legislative authority of the Parliament of Canada; and that the license imposed was a restraint and regulation of trade and commerce, and not the exercise of a police power. 3. That the right conferred on the Ontario Legislature by s.-s. 9, s. 92, of the said Act, to deal exclusively with shop, saloon, tavern, auctioneer, and "other shop, shoon, cavern, auctioneer, and one-licenses," does not extend to licenses on brevers or "other licenses" which are not of a local or municipal character. Regina v. Tay-lor, 36 U. C. R. 183, overruled. Severn v. Regina, 2 S. C. R. 70, 1 Cart. 414. Brewer's License.]—The inspector of li-censes for the revenue district of Montreal, charged a drayman in the employ of certain brewers duly licensed under the Dominion stante, 43 Vict. c. 19, before the court of special sessions of the peace, at Montreal, with having sold beer outside the business premises of the brewers, but within the said revenue district in contravention of the Que-be: License Act of 1878. Thereupon the brewers claiming inter alia that being licensed brewers under the Dominion statute they had the right to sell beer by and through their employees and draymen without a Provincial license, and that the Quebec License Act and its amendments were ultra vires, and if constitutional did not authorize the complaint, caused a writ of prohibition to be issued out of the superior court enjoining the court of special sessions of the peace from further proceeding:—Held, per Ritchie, C.J., and Strong, Fournier, and Henry, JJ., that the Quebec vires, and that the court of special sessions of the peace at Montreal, having jurisdiction to try the alleged offence, and being the pro-per tribunal to decide the question of fact and per tribunal to decide the question of fact and of law involved, a writ of prohibition did not lie. Per Taschereau, and Gwynne, JJ., that the case was one which it was proper for the superior court to deal with by proceedings on prohibition. Per Gwynne, J., the Quebec Lleense Act of 1878 imposes no obligation on brewers to take out a Provincial license to enable them to sell their beer, and therefore the court of special sessions of the peace had as invidicition, and ropolibition, should beare no jurisdiction, and prohibition should issue absolutely. Semble, a license from the Dominion Government granting authority to a brewer to manufacture beer, does not confer the right to sell the beer manufactured under such license elsewhere than on the brewer's premises. Molson v. Lambe, 15 S. C. R. 253, 4 Cart. 334.

Brewer's License.]-Section 51 (2) of the Liquor License Act, R. S. O. 1887 c. 194, which requires brewers licensed by the Government of Canada to take out licenses under that Act, is intra vires Provincial legislation, Severn v. The Queen, 2 S. C. R. 70, has been in effect overruled by more recent de-cisions of the judicial committee. Regina v. Halliday, 21 A. R. 42.

Brewer's License.] — The Ontario Act, R. S. O. 1887 c. 194, s. 51, s.-s. 2, requiring every brewer and distiller to obtain a license thereunder to sell wholesale within the Province, is intra vires of the Provincial Legislature, (a) as being direct taxation within s. 52, s. s. 2, of the B. N. A. Act; Bank of Toronto v. Lambe, 12 App. Cas. 575, followed; (b) as comprised within the term "other licenses" in s.-s. 9 of the same section. Brevers and Maltsters' Association of Ontario v. Attorney-General for Ontario, [1897] A. C.

Canada Temperance Act.]-Held, that Canada Temperance Act. |—Heid, that the Act of the Parliament of Canada, 41 Viet. c. 16, "An Act respecting the Traffic in Intoxicating Liquors" cited as the "Canada Temperance Act, 1878." is within the legislative capacity of that body. and be brought into force in one part of the Dominion and not in the other. Ib. Under s.-s. 2 of s. 91. B. N. A. Act, 1867, "regulation of trade and commerce," the Par-liament of Canada alone has the power of prohibiting the traffic in intoxicating liquors in the Dominion or in any part of it, and the court has no right whatever to inquire what motive induced Parliament to exercise its powers. 1b.

Canada Temperance Act. |-Held, that the Canada Temperance Act, 1878, which, in effect, wherever throughout the Dominion it is put in force, uniformly prohibits the sale of intoxicating liquors, except in wholesale quantities, or for certain specified pur-poses, regulates the traffic in the excepted cases, makes sales of liquors in violation of the prohibitions and regulations contained in the Act criminal offences, punishable by fine, and for the third or subsequent offence by imprisonment, is within the legislative competence of the Dominion Parliament. Russell v. Regina, 7 App. Cas. 829, 2 Cart. 12.

The objects and scope of the Act are general, viz.: to promote temperance by means of a uniform law throughout the Foundary.

They relate to the peace, order, and good government of Canada, and not to the class of subjects, "property and civil rights." Providence of the Act to sion for the special application of the Act to particular places does not alter its character as general legislation, Ib.

Canada Temperance Act,]—Held, that the Ontario legislation, R. S. O. 1877 c. 181, ss. 92, 93, 105, 100; 41 Vict, c. 14, ss. 6, 8; 44 Vict, c. 27, ss. 11, 12, 13, 14, 16; 47 Vict, c. 34, s. 14; 50 Vict, c. 33, which represent a body of legislation relating to municipalities brought under the Canada Temperance Act, by which ways and means are provided for the enforcement of the Act by the application of local funds raised by local taxation or otherwise in the county, are not ultra vires the local Legislature; and that the plaintiffs were entitled to recover from the defendants were entitied to recover from the derenanties of the expenses of carrying out the provisions of the Temperance Act in the license district of F. formed out of a part of the county of F. License Commissioners for Frontenae v. County of Frontenae, 14 O. R. 741, 4 Cart.

The general law as to prohibition respect-ing all Canada, which can only be enacted by the Dominion, being localized by municipal suffrages, its enforcement becomes also a matter of local importance in the Province, within the meaning of B. N. A. Act, s. 92, item 16, and it may be enforced through the medium of provincial officers, to be appointed and paid according to provincial legislation under the B. N. A. Act, s. 92, item 4. Ib. The legislation in question might also fall within the scope of B. N. A. Act, s. 92, item 8, as pertaining to municipal institutions in the Province. License Commissioners of Prince Edward v. County of Prince Edward, 26 Gr. 452, License Commissioners of the North Riding of the County of Norfolk v. Corporation of Norfolk, 14 O. R. 749, con-curred in. Ib.

Compromise of Offence.]-The Legislature of Ontario having passed an Act to regulate tavern and shop licenses, 32 Vict. c. 32, under the power given to them by the B. N. A. Act, 1867, s. 92, s.-ss. 9, 16:—Held, that they had power under s.-s. 15, to enact that any person who, having violated any of the provisions of the Act, should compromise the offence, and any person who should be a party to such compromise, should on conviction be imprisoned in the common gool for three months; and that such enactment was not opposed to s. 91, s.-s. 27, by which the criminal law is assigned exclusively to the Dominion Parliament. Regina v. Boardman, 30 U. C. R. 553.

Forum.] — Defendant was convicted for selling liquor without license under R. S. O. 1877 c. 181. s. 51, and appealed to the sessions, which dismissed the appeal, on the ground that under s. 71, it should have been made to the county Judge in chambers, without a jury:—Held, refusing an application for a mandamus to the sessions to try the appeal, on the ground that s. 71, R. S. O. 1877 c. 181, was ultra vires the Ontario Legislature, that R. S. O. 1877 c. 75, and c. 181, s. 71, constituted the county Judge, sitting in chambers without a jury, a court of appeal in such cases, within the meaning of 40 Vict. c. 27 (D.). Regina v. Clark, 44 U. C. R. 385, 27 (D.). Regina v. Clark, 44 U. C. R. 385.

Hours of Closing.]—Powers of Provincial Legislature as to restricting the hours within which billiard rooms in taverns may be kept open. See Regina v. Hodge, 46 U. C. R. 141, 7 A. R. 246, 9 App. Cas. 117.

Liquor License Act of New Brunswick.]—Provincial Legislatures can impose fines and penalties for selling liquor without license. Regina v. McMillan, 2 Pugs. 110, 2 Cart. 489.

Liquor License Act of New Brunswick. I—By the New Brunswick Liquor License Act, 1887, applications for licenses must be endorsed by the certificate of one-third of the ratepayers of the district for which the license is asked. No holder of a license can be a member of the municipal council, a justice of the peace, or a teacher in the public schools:—Held, that the Legislature could properly impose these conditions to the obtaining of a license, and the provision is not ultra vires the local Legislature as being a prohibitory measure by reason of the ratepayers being able to prevent any licenses being issued; nor is it a measure in restraint of trade by affixing a stigma to the business of selling liquor. Danaher v. Peters. O'Regan v. Peters, 18 S. C. R. 44, 4 Cart. 425.

Liquor License Act of Ontario.]—
Quere, as to the power of the local Legislature to limit or authorize municipalities to limit the number of licenses and as to the effect of the decision of the supreme court in City of Fredericton v. The Queen, 3 S. C. R. 505. Regina v. Howard, 45 U. C. R. 346.

Liquor License Act of Ontario.] — Section 84 of the Ontario Liquor License Act, R. S. O. 1887 c. 194, is ultra vires the Ontario Legislature. Regina v. Lawrence, 43 U. C. R. 164, followed. Regina v. Holland, 14 C. L. T. Occ. N. 294.

Liquor License Act of Ontario.]— Subjects which in one aspect and for one purpose fall within s. 92 of the British North America Act, 1867, may in another aspect and for another purpose fall within s. 91. Russell v. The Queen, 7 App. Cas. 829, explained and approved:—Held, that the Liquor License Act, R. S. O. 1877 c. 181, which in respect of ss. 4 and 5, makes regulations in the nature of police or municipal regulations of a merely local character for the good government of taverns, etc., does not in respect of those sections interfere with "the general regulation of trade or commerce," but comes within Nos. 8, 15, and 16, of s. 92 of the Act of 1867, and is within the powers of the Provincial Legislature. Hodge v. Regina, 9 App. Cas. 117.

Held further, that the local Legislature had power by the said Act of 1867, to entrust to a board of commissioners authority to enact regulations of the above character, and thereby to create offences and annex penalties thereto. Ib.

Liquor License Act of Quebec.]-The B. N. A. Act in conferring legislative jurisdiction over particular subjects, must be held to have given at the same time the powers needed for the effective exercise of the jurisdiction granted; consequently, the right conferred on Provincial Legislatures to make laws in relation to shop, saloon, tavern, auctioneer and other licenses includes the right of imposing penalties for violating the provincial laws in relation to those subjects. Provincial enactments by which persons who sell liquor by wholesale are required to take out a license are not invalid as an interference with trade and commerce. Ex part Leveille, 2 Stephen's Dig. 445, 2 Cart. 349.

Liquor License Act of Quebec.]—The Quebec License Act, 41 Vict. c. 3, is intra vires of the Legislature of the Province of Quebec. Hodge v. The Queen, 9 App. Cas. 117, followed. Sulte v. City of Three Rivers, 11 S. C. R. 25.

Local Option.]—By-laws passed by municipal corporations wholly prohibiting the sale of spirituous liquors in shops and places other than houses of public entertainment, and limiting the number of tavern licenses to nine:—Held, valid, as being within the power of the corporation, under 32 Vlet. c. 32 (O.): and that it was within the authority of the Provincial Legislature to confer such power, under the exclusive legislative authority given to them with regard to "municipal institutions," and to "matters of a merely local or private nature in the Province," and was not an interference with "the regulation of trade and commerce," assigned exclusively to the Dominion Parliament. In re Slavin and Village of Orillia, 30 U. C. R. 150, 1 Cart. 688.

Local Option.]—The state of things existing in the Confederated Provinces at the time of Confederation, and more particularly that which was recognized by law in all or most of the Provinces, is a useful guide in the interpretation of the meaning attached by the Imperial Parliament to indefinite expressions employed in the B. N. A. Act. At the time of Confederation, the right to prohibit the sale of intoxicating liquors was possessed by the municipal authorities under the laws in force respecting municipal institutions in the then Province of Canada and in Nova Scotia, and consequently is to be deemed included in the provision as to "municipal institutions" contained in s. 92, s.-s. 8, of the B. N. A. Act. The Provincial Legislatures have the power for the purposes of municipal institutions to pass a prohibitory liquor law, or a liquor law which is prohibitory except under certain conditions; this power is not incompatible with the right of the Dominion Parliament to pass a prohibitory liquor law for the whole Dominion. Corporation of Three Rivers v. Sulte, 5 Legal News 330, 2 Cart. 280, 11 S. C. R. 25.

Local Option.]-A New Brunswick statnte, 36 Vict. c. 10, empowered the general sessions of the peace to grant licenses as in their discretion they should think proper, and they having refused to grant a license to any person whatever, a mandamus was granted for the purpose of compelling them to issue a for the purpose of compening them to issue a license to the applicant. The Legislature of New Brunswick by an Act subsequent to Con-fesieration declared that "no license for the sale of spirituous liquors shall be granted or issued within any parish or municipality in the Province when a majority of the ratepayers, residents in such parish or municipality, shall petition the sessions or municipal council against issuing any license within such parish or municipality." Prior to Con-federation, there had been no legislation of this character in New Brunswick, and this enactment was held by the supreme court of that Province to be beyond the competence of the Legislature. Regina 2 Pugs. 553, 2 Cart. 499. Regina v. Justices of Kings,

Local Option.]-Section 18 of 53 Vict. c. 56 (O.), allowing, under certain conditions, municipalities to pass by-laws for prohibiting the sale of spirituous liquors, is intra vires the Ontario Legislature, as is also s. 1 of 54 Vict. c. 46, which explains it, but the prohibition can only extend to sale by retail. In re Local Option Act, 18 A. R. 572. Approved in Huson v. Township of South Norwich, 24 S. C. R. 145. But see the next

Local Option.]—1. A Provincial Legislature has not jurisdiction to prohibit the sale, either by wholesale or retail, within the Province, of spirituous, fermented, or other in-toxicating liquors, 2. A Provincial Legislature has not jurisdiction to prohibit the manufac-ture of such liquors within, or their importa-tion into, the Province. 3. The Ontario Legislature had not jurisdiction to enact s. 18 the Act 53 Vict, c. 56 (O.), as explained by 54 Vict, c. 46 (O.). In re Provincial Juris-diction to Pass Prohibitory Liquor Laws, 24 S. C. R. 170.

Prohibition-Canada Temperance Act.] The Canada Temperance Act, 1886, so far as it purported to repeal the prohibitory clauses of the old provincial Act of 1864, 27 & 28 Vict. c. 18, was ultra vires the Dominion. Its own prohibitory provisions are, however, valid when duly brought into operation in any provincial areas, as relating to the peace, order, and good government of Canada: Russell v. Regina, 7 App. Cas. 829, followed. But not as regulating trade and commerce sell v. Regina. within s. 91, s.-s. 2, of the B. N. A. Act. Citizens Insurance Co. v. Parsons, 7 App. Cas. 98, distinguished, and Municipal Corporation of Toronto v. Virgo, [1896] A. C. 93, followed. Held, also, that the local liquor prohibitions authorized by the Ontario Act, 53 Vict. c. 56, s. 18 (O.), are within the powers of the Provincial Legislature. But they are inoperative in any locality which adopts the provisions of the Dominion Act of 1886, Attorney-General for Ontario v. Attorney-General for the Dominion, [1896] A. C. 348.

Regulation of Sale - Penalty.] - The Legislature of Ontario having passed an Act to regulate tavern and shop licenses:—Held, that they had power to enact that any person who, having violated any of the provisions of the Act, should compromise the offence, and any person who should be a party to such compromise should, on conviction, be imprisoned in the common gaol for three months; and that such enactment was not opposed to s. 91, s. 27, of the B. N. A. Act, by which criminal law is assigned exclusively to the Dominion Parliament. Regina v. Boardman, 30 U. C. R. 553, I Cart. 676.

Regulation of Sale.]—Provincial Legislatures can make laws regulating the sale of liquors in taverns and public places, in order the better to maintain peace and good order, but they cannot directly or indirectly prohibit the manufacture or sale of spirituous liquors, or other articles of commerce, or confer authority for that purpose on municipal councils. De St. Aubyn v. Lafrance, 8 Q. L. R. 190, 2 Cart. 392.

Regulation of Sale-License.]-A statute of Nova Scotia, passed after Confederation, imposed penalties for retailing intoxicating liquors without a license, and provided that licenses should only be granted upon the recommendation of the grand jury, concurred recommendation of the grand Jury, concurred in by two-thirds of the members present and accompanied by a petition for the license from two-thirds of the ratepayers of the polling district in which the tavern was to be estab-lished. Enactments not essentially different were in force in the Province before Confederation:—Held, that the Act in question was not ultra vires of the Legislature:—Held, further, that if the restrictions were ultra vires, the proper course was to apply for a mandamus to compel the granting of a license, and that a refusal to grant Heenses did not justify selling without a license or release from the statutory penalty thereby incurred.

A Provincial Legislature is entitled to legislate with a view to regulate within the Province the sale of whatever may injuriously affect the lives, health, morals or well-being of the community, whether it be intoxicating liquors, poisons, or unwholesome provisions, such legislation is made bona fide with the object of regulation alone, even though to a certain extent trade and commerce are affected thereby. Keefe v. McLennan, 2 Russ. & Ches. 5, 2 Cart, 400.

Regulation of Sale.]-The former Province of Canada by an Act incorporating the city of Three Rivers conferred on the council authority to make by-laws for restraining and prohibiting the sale of intoxicating liquors or for authorizing such sale subject to such conditions as might be deemed expedient. In 1875 the Legislature of Quebec by a consolidation Act repealed the above and other Acts relating to Three Rivers and re-enacted the former provisions as to the sale of intoxicating liquors:—Held, that the Act of Three Rivers, 11 S. C. R. 25, 4 Cart. 305.

Revenue.]-The jurisdiction of a Provincial Legislature to legislate respecting licenses is not confined to the object of raising a revenue. Regina v. Frawley, 7 A. R. 246, 2 Cart.

Shops Regulation Act.]-Closing shops under the Shops Regulation Act, 51 Vict. c. 33 (O.). See Regina v. Flory, 17 O. R. 715.

Sunday Closing.)—The Provincial Legislatures may make reasonable regulations for the preservation of good order in the municipalities under their control, and may, for this purpose, restrict the sale of spirituous liquors. The provision of the Quebec statute, 38 Vict. c. 74, s. 4, ordering houses in which spirituous liquors are sold, to be closed on Sundays, and on every day from eleven of the clock at night until five of the clock in the morning is within the competence of a Provincial Legislature. Blonin v. Corporation of Quebec, 7 Q. L. R. 18, 2 Cart. 368.

Sunday Closing.]—The Provincial Legislatures have authority to prohibit or regulate the sale of liquors in saloons or taverns on Sundays, or at special times. The statute 42 & 43 Vict. c. 4 (Q.), which requires houses in which spirituous liquors, &c., are sold, to be closed during the whole of Sunday, and on every other day between 11 p.m. and 5 a.m., is valid. Poulin v. Corporation of Quebec, 9 S. C. R. 185, 3 Cart. 258, 3 Cart. 259.

Tampering with Witness.]-By s. 57 of R. S. O. 1877 c. 181 (the Liquor License any person who in any prosecution under the Act tampers with a witness either before or after he is summoned or appears as such witness on any trial or proceeding under the Act, or by the offer of money or by threats. or in any other way induces or attempts to induce any such person to absent himself, or montee any such person to absent himself, or swear falsely, shall be guilty of an offence under the Act, and liable to a penalty of $50; and by s. 59, such penalty is recoverable in default of distress by imprisonment not to be a such as a such as a such a such as a utra vires of the such Legislature, for the acts declared by s. a long to the such the criminal offences at company or one switch criminal offences at common law, and within the exclusive jurisdiction of the Dominion Legislature, and were not brought within the Legislature, and were not brought within the jurisdiction of the local Legislature by s.-s. 15 of s. 92 of the B. N. A. Act, either as coming under municipal institutions, or as being enumber of the property of the propert actments to enforce the law as to shop, saloon, &c., licenses, in order to raise a revenue for provincial, local, or municipal purposes. A conviction, therefore, under the Act for inducing a witness to absent himself, &c.. was quashed. Regina v. Laurence, 43 U. C. R.

Temperance Act of 1.864.]—The B. N. A. Act in assigning to the Parliament of Canada the exclusive legislative authority over "the regulation of trade and commerce," did not thereby repeal "The Temperance Act of 1804," of the late Province of Canada, 27 & 28 Vict. c. 18, and did not deprive municipal corporations of the power thereby given to prohibit the sale of intoxicating liquors. Nocl v. County of Richmond, 1 Dorion 333, 2 Cart. 246.

A Provincial Legislature cannot repeal or modify those sections of the Temperance Act of 1864 (27 & 28 Vict. c. 18), which conferred on municipal councils the power to pass by-laws for prohibiting the sale of intoxicating liquors. Hart v. Corporation of the County of Missiaguoi, 3 Q. L. R. 170, 2 Cart. 382; Cocey v. Municipality of Brome, 2 Cart. 382;

The Temperance Act of 1864, of the late Province of Canada, prohibited the sale of liquors by retail wherever the Act was brought into force, and provided special proceedings and punishments for offences against the Act; the Provincial Legislature of Ontario afterwards enacted that the sale of liquor in such localities should also be a contravention of the Provincial Acts against selling without a license; these Acts provided other punishments and proceedings:—Held, that under the Temperance Act the matter was one of criminal law; and that the legislation of the Provincial Legislature was ultravires. Regina v. Prittie, 42 U. C. R. 612, 2 Cart. 696; Regina v. Lake, 43 U. C. R. 515, 2 Cart. 616.

Acts of the Ontario Legislature provided that local boards of commissioners, and inspectors appointed by the lieuteannt-governor, should perform certain duties in their respective localities for the enforcement of the statute of the late Province of Canada, called "The Temperance Act of 1894," and that a certain proportion of the expenses attending the execution of these duties should be naid by the municipalities concerned. The Temperance Act provided for prosecution by private persons, as well as others, for offences against the Act:—Held, that the Ontario enactments were within the competence of the Legislature. An enactment of an expost facto character by a Provincial Legislature is not void on that ground. License Commissioners of Prince Edward v. County of Prince Edward v.

A Provincial Legislature cannot repeal these sections of the Temperance Act of 1864, which relate to the prohibition of the sale of intoxicating liquors. Griffith v. Rioux, 6 Legal News 211, 3 Cart. 348.

17. Land.

Land Investment Company.]—Held, that the Canadian Act, 37 Vict, c. 103, which created a corporation with power to carry on certain definite kinds of business within the Dominion, was within the legislative competence of the Dominion Parliament. The fact that the corporation choose to confine the exercise of its powers to one Province, and to local and provincial objects, did not affect its status as a corporation, or operate to render its original incorporation illegal as ultra vires of the said Parliament:—Held, further, that the corporation could not be prohibited generally from acting as such within the Province; nor could it be restrained from doing specified acts in violation of the provincial law upon a petition not directed and adapted to that purpose. Colonial Building and Investment Association v. Attorney-General of Quebec, 9 App. Cas, 157, 3 Cart, 118, reversing S. C., sub nom. Loranger v. Colonial Building and Investment Association, 5 Legal News 116, 2 Cart, 275.

Mortmain.]—An Act of the Dominion Parliament, incorporating a company and purporting to enable the company to hold lands, may operate as a license from the Crown for this purpose. Such an Act would not prevent the Province from passing a law preventing altogether or restricting the holding of lands by corporations in the Province. McDiarmid v. Hughes, 16 O. R. 570, 4 Cart. 701.

Ordnance Lands.] - Where land then forming part of the Ordnance lands of the old Province of Canada had been granted to the corporation of the city of Toronto in the year 1858, it was held that after the passing of the British North America Act the power to vary the trusts contained in the grant was vested in the Legislature of the Province and not in the Parliament of the Dominion. Kennedy y. City of Toronto, 12 O, R. 211, 4 Cart. 649.

Ordnance Lands—Chain Reserve Along Nugara River.]—The "chain reserve" along the bank of the Niagara river, and the slope between the top of the bank and the water's edge, were not originally set apart for military or ordnance purposes, and on Confederation did not pass to the Domision Government as "Ordnance Lands," but remained part of the public domain of the Province of Ontario. Commissioners for the Queen Victoria Niagara Falls Park v. Howard, 23 O. It, 1, 23 A. R. 355.

Ownership of Land.]—So far as abstract competence is concerned the Ontario Legislature has power to change the ownership of land within the Province with or without compensation. Land which had been dedicated by its owner for a public burying ground was used for many years for such purpose. The municipality in which the ground was situate procured an Act of the Ontario Legislature authorizing the closing of the burial ground, and the removal of the dead, thereafter vesting the land in the corporation; the Act providing for compensation for all parties likely to be affected by the carrying out of its provisions, and for payment of the value of the lot to the dedicator or those claiming under him, to be fixed by arbitration:—Held, that the Act was within the competence of the Legislature. Re Me-Doccell and Town of Palmerston, 22 O. R. 522

See also, Re Goodhue, 19 Gr. 366.

Precious Metals.]—Held, reversing 14 S. C. R. 245, that a conveyance by the province of British Columbia to the Dominion of "public lands," being in substance an assignment of its right to appropriate the territorial revenues arising therefrom, does not imply any transfer of its interest in revenues arising from the prerogative rights of the Crown. The precious metals in, upon, and under such lands are not incidents of the land but belong to the Crown, and, under s. 199 of the British North America Act of 1867, beneficially to the Province, and an intention to transfer them must be expressed or necessarily implied. Attorney-General of British Columbia v. Attorney-General of Canada, 14 App. Cas. 295, 4 Cart. 241.

Public Land in Railway Belt in British Columbia.]—By s. 11 of the order in council admitting the Province British Columbia into Confederation, British Columbia into Confederation, British Columbia angreed to convey to the Dominion Government, in trust, to be appropriated in such manner as the Dominion Government, in trust, might deem advisable, in furtherance of the construction of the Canadian Pacific Railway, an extent of public lands along the line of railway. After certain negotiations between the governments of Canada and British Columbia, and in order to settle all disputes, an agreement was entered into, and on the 19th December, 1883, the Legislature of British Columbia passed the statute 47 vict. c. 14, by which it was enacted inter alia as follows:—"From and after the passing of this Act there shall be and there is hereby granted to the Dominion Government for the purpose of constructing and to aid in the construction of the portion of the Canadian Pacific Railway on the main land of British Columbia, in trust to be appropriated as the Dominion Government may deem advisable, the public lands along the line of railway before mentioned, wherever it may be finally located, to a width of twenty miles on each side of said line, as provided in the order in council, s. 11, admitting the Province of British Columbia into Confederation." On the 20th November, 1883, by public notice, the Government of British Columbia reserved a belt of land twenty miles in width along a line by way of Bow River Pass. In November, 1884, the respondent in order to comply with the provisions of the Provincial statutes, filed a survey of a certain parcel of land, situate within the said belt of twenty miles, and the survey having been finally accepted, on 13th January, 1885, letters patent under the great seal of the Province were issued to F. for the land in question. The attorney-general of Canada by information of intrusion sought to recover possession of said land, and it was held that at the date of the grant the Province of British Columbia had ceased to have any interest in the land covered by said grant and that the title to the same was in the Crown for the use and benefit of Canada. Regina v. Farwell, 14 S. C. R. 392.

Public Lands in Railway Belt in British Columbia.]—On 10th September, 1883, D. et al. obtained a certificate of pre-emption under the British Columbia Land Act, 1875, and Land Amendment Act, 1879, of 640 acres of unsurveyed lands within the 20-mile belt south of the Canadian Pacific Railway, reserved on the 29th November, 1883, under an agreement between the two Governments of the Dominion and of the Province of British Columbia, and which was ratified by 47 Vict. c. 14 (B.C.). On 29th August, 1885, this certificate was cancelled, and on the same day a like certificate was issued to respondents, and on the 31st July letters patent under the great seal of British Columbia were issued to respondents. By the agreement, ratified by 47 Vict, c. (D.), it was also agreed that three and a half million additional acres in Peace River District should be conveyed to the Dominion Government in satisfaction of the right of the Dominion under the terms of union to have made good to it, from public lands contiguous to the railway belt, the quantity of land that might at the date of the conveyance be held under pre-emption right or by Crown grant:
—Held, affirming 3 Ex. C. R. 293, that the land in question was exempt from the statutory conveyance to the Dominion Government, that upon the pre-emption right granted to D, et al. being subsequently abandoned or cancelled, the land became the property of the Crown in right of the Province, and not in right of the Dominion. The Queen v. Demers. 22 S. C. R. 482.

Timber.]—The Act, 61 Vict. c. 19 (0.), making applicable to timber licenses the condition approved by order-in-council of the 17th February, 1897, that all pine timber cut under such licenses shall be manufactured into sawn lumber in Canada, is intra vires, and applies to licenses issued after the passing of the Act in renewal of licenses in force at the time of its passage. The rights acquired under sales and licenses of timber limits under "The Crown Timber Act" considered. Judgment below, 31 O. R. 202, affirmed. Smylie v. The Queen, 27 A. R. 172.

18. Local Works and Undertakings.

Connecting Railway Within Prevince. |—By an Act of the Province of New Brunswick, passed prior to Confederation, the plaintif company was incorporated for the city of St. John, in that Province, westward to the boundary of the United States. After Confederation another Act (32 Viet, c. 54) was passed for the purpose of removing doubts respecting the liability of subscribers for shares in the company, and this latter Act was held to be within the competence of the Provincial Legislature. The fact of the Legislature of a foreign country authorizing the construction of a line of railway in that country for the purpose of connecting with a Provincial railway, does not in any way affect the authority of the Legislature of the Province to legislate with respect to the railway within the bounds of the Province. European and North American R. W. Co. v. Thomas, 1 Pags. 42, 2 Cart. 439.

Distinct Works in Different Provinces.]—All works which are wholly with-in one Province, whether the undertaking to which they belong be for a commercial purpose or otherwise, are within the control, and subject to the legislation of, the Province in which they are situate, unless they are by the Parliament of Capada declared to be for the general advantage of Canada, or for the advantage of two or more of the Provinces. The Dominion Parliament cannot without such declaration, authorize a company to establish in two or more Provinces, works needing special legislative authority, which are in their nature local in each Province, the jurisdiction in such case to give the need ed authority being determined by the loca-tion and object of the works, and not by the circumstance that the company is authorized to make them in several Provinces. A company was incorporated by Act of the Dominion Parliament for the purpose of establishing telephone lines in the several Provinces of the Dominion, but not of connecting two or more Provinces by telephone lines, nor was the undertaking declared to be for the general advantage of Canada, or of two or more of the Provinces, and in the absence of these conditions it was held that the Act, so far as it professed to confer a right to erect poles in the streets of cities and towns, was invalid. Regina v. Mohr, 7 Q. L. R. 183, 2 Cart. 257.

19. Municipal Institutions.

Fines and Penalties.]—The Provincial Legislatures have the right to appropriate fines to numicipal or other corporations; Bennett v. Pharmaccutical Association of Quebec, 1 Dorion 336, 2 Cart. 250.

Fire Commissioners.]—By the statutes of the Quebec Legislature, 31 Vict. c. 22, and 32 Vict. c. 29, fire commissioners or marshals were appointed, with power to investigate the origin of any fires occurring in the cities of Quebec and Montreal; to commissioners or the commission of the commission of pel the attendance of witnesses, and examine them on oath; and to commit to prison any witnesses refusing to answer without just cause:—Held, that these statutes were within the competency of the Provincial Legislature, The Queen v. Coote, L. R. 4 P. C. 599, 1 Cart. 57.

Market Licenses, I—An Act which authorized the corporation of the city of Montreal to impose a license tax on butchers keeping stalls or shops in the city for the sale of meat, fish, &c., elsewhere than on the public markets, was held not to be ultra vires of the Provincial Legislature, as an interference with trade and commerce. Augers v. City of Montreal, 24 L. C. Jur. 259, 2 Cart. 353; Mallette v. City of Montreal, 24 L. C. Jur. 253, 2 Cart. 340.

Market Licenses.]—The council of the city of Montreal is authorized by s.-ss. 27 and 31 of s. 123 of 37 Vict. c. 51 (Q.), to regulate and license the sale in any private stall or shop in the city outside of the public meat markets, of any meat, fish, vegetables or provisions usually sold in markets:—Held, that the sub-sections in question are intra vires the Provincial Legislature. Also that a by-law passed by the city council under the authority of the above-named sub-sections fixing the license to sell in a private stall at $200 in addition to the 7½ per cent, business tax, levied upon all traders under another by-law, which the appellant had paid; is not invalid. The words "other licenses" in s.-s. 9 of s. 92 of the B, N. A. Act include such a license as the Provincial Legislature has empowered the city of Montreal to impose by the terms of the statute now under consideration. Bank of Toronto v. Lambe, 12 App. Cas. 575, and Severn v. Regina, 12 S. C. R. 70, distinguished. Pipcon v. Recorder's Court and City of Montreal, 17 S. C. R. 435, 4 Cart. 442.

Municipal Elections—Master in Chambers.]—Held, following the principle of Re Wilson v. McGuire, 2 O. R. 118, that the Provincial Legislature had power to invest the master with authority to try controvered municipal election cases. Regina v. Birkett, 21 O. R. 162.

Nuisance.]—The power of the Parliament of Canada to enact a general law of nuisance, as incident to its right to legislate as to criminal law, is not incompatible with a right in the Provincial Legislatures to authorize municipal corporations to pass by-laws against nuisances hurtful to public health, as incidental to municipal institutions. Ex parte Pallone, 27 L. C. Jur. 216, 3 Cart. 357.

Peddlers.]—The provision contained in the Municipal Act of Ontario, authorizing city councils to pass by-laws "for preventing criers and vendors of smallwares from practising their calling in the market, public streets and vacant lots adjacent thereto," is not ultra vires of the Ontario Legislature, as being a regulation of trade and commerce. In giving jurisdiction to the Provincial Legislatures in all matters relating to municipal institutions, the intention must have been that these Legislatures should have power to alter and amend all the existing laws with respect to such institutions, and especially to enlarge the scope of a power existing in the Municipal Carlot of the Car

Regulation to Chinamen, who are aliens or naturalized subjects, establishes a statutory prohibition which is within the exclusive authority of the Dominion Parliament conferred by s. 91, s.-s. 25, in regard to "naturalization and aliens." Booms in Navigable River.]—A Provincial enactment authorizing the erection of booms in a navigable ver does set conflict with respect to navigation the Professor of Canada (1998). The province of the Professor of Canada (1998) and the Professor of Canada (1998) and the State of the Imperial Parliament section in the sense in which they are used in the several Acts of the Imperial Parliament relating to navigation and shipping, and in the Act of the Parliament of Canada, 31 Vict. c. 58, viz., as giving the right to prescribe rules and regulations for vessels navigating the waters of the Dominion, and not as excluding for all purposes Provincial jurisdiction over navigable waters. McMillan V. Southeest Boom Co., 1 Pugs. & Burb. 715, 2 Cart. 542. Cart.

Booms in Navigable River.—Professing to act under the powers contained in their Act of incorporation, 45 Vict. c. 100 (N. B.), the Q. R. B. Co. erected booms and plers in the Queddy river which impeded navigation—the locus being in that part of the river which is tidal and navigable:—Held, that the Provincial Legislature might incorporate a boom company, but could not give it power to obstruct a tidal navigable river, and therefore the Act 45 Vict. c. 100 (N. B.), so far as it authorizes the acts done by the company in erecting booms and other works in the Queddy river obstructing its navigation, was ultra vires the New Brunswick Legislature. Queddy River Driving Boom Co. v. Davidson, 10 S. C. R. 222, 3 Cart. 243.

Bridge — Obstruction to Navigation.]—
The title to the soil in the beds of navigable rivers is in the Crown in right of the Provinces, not in right of the Dominion. Dixson v. Snetsinger, 23 C. P. 235, discussed. The property of the Crown may be dedicated to the public and a presumption of dedication will arise from facts sufficient to warrant such an inference in the case of a subject. By 23 Vict. c. 2, s. 35, power was given to the Crown to dispose of and grant water lots in rivers and other navigable waters in Upper Canada, and the power to grant the soil carried with it the power to grant the soil carried with it the power to grant the soil carried with it the power to dedicate it to the public use. The user of a bridge over a mavigable river for thirty-five years is sufficient to raise a presumption of dedication. If a Province before Confederation had so dedicated the bed of a navigable river for the purposes of a bridge that it could not have objected to it as an obstruction to navigation, the Crown as representing the Dominion, on assuming control of the navigation, was bound to permit the maintenance of the bridge. An obstruction to navigation cannot be justified on the ground that the public benefit to be derived from it outweighs the inconvenience it causes. It is a public nuisance though of very great public benefit and the obstruction of the slightest possible degree. The Queen v. Moss, 26 S. C. R. 322.

Ferry—Municipality.]—By 39 Vict. c. 52, s. 1, s.-s. 3 (Q.), the city of Montreal is authorized to impose an annual tax on "ferrymen or steambeat ferries." Under the authority of the said statute the corporation of the said statute of $200 on the proprietor of proprietors of each and every steamboat ferry conveying to Montreal for hire travellers from any place not more than nine miles distant from the same, and obtained from the recorder's court for the city of Montreal a warrant of distress to levy upon the appellant company the said tax of $200 for each steamboat employed by them during the year as ferry-boats between Longueuil and Montreal. In an action brought by the appellant company, claiming that the Provincial Legislature, and that the by-law was ultra vires the corporation, and asking for an injunction, it was:—Hield, that the provincial legislation was intra vires. 2. That the by-law was ultra vires as the words used in the statute only authorize a single tax on the owner of each ferry, irrespective of which the ferry should be worked. 3. That the jurisdiction of the harbour commissioners of Montreal within certain limits does not exclude the right of the city to tax and control ferries within such limits. Longueuil Navigation Co. v. City of Montreal, 15 S. C. R. 566, 4 Cart. 370.

Ferries.]—The authority given to the Legislative Assembly of the North-west Territories, by R. S. C. c. 50, and orders in council thereunder, to legislate as to "municipal institutions" and "matters of a local and private nature" (and perhaps as to license for revenue) within the Territories includes the right to legislate as to ferries. The town of Edmonton, by its charter and by "The Ferries Ordinance" (Rev. Ord. N. W. T. C. 28), can grant the exclusive right to maintain a ferry across a navigable river which is not within the territorial limits of the municipality; and as under the charter the powers vested in the Lieutenant-Governor in Council by the Ferries Ordinance are transferred to the municipality, such right may be con-ferred by license and a by-law is not necessary. A club or partnership, styled "The Edmonton Ferry Company," was formed for the purpose of building, establishing and operating a ferry within the limits assigned in the license by the municipality granting exclusive rights to ferry across the river in question, the conditions being that any person could become a member of the club by signing the list of membership and taking at least one share of $5 therein, which share entitled the signer to 100 tickets that were to be received in payment of ferry service according to a prescribed tariff, and when ex-pended could be renewed by further subscriptions for shares ad infinitum. The club sup-plied their ferryman with a list of member-ship and established and operated their ferry, without any license, within a short distance of one of the licensed ferries, thereby, as was claimed, disturbing the licensee in his exclusive rights:—Held, that the establishment of the club ferry and the use thereof by members and others under their club regulations was an infringement of the rights under the license, and that the licensee could recover damages by reason of such infringement, Diance v, Humberstone, 26 S. C. R. 252.

Foreshore of Harbour.]—G. (defendant) was in possession of a part of the foreshore of the harbour of Summerside, and had erected thereon a wharf or dock at which vessels might unload. H. et al. (the plaintiffs) brought an action of ejectment to recover possession of the said foreshore. H. et al.'s title consisted of letters patent under the great seal of Prince Edward Island, dated 30th August, 187t, by which the Crown as representing the Province, and assuming to act in exercise of authority conferred by a provincial statute, 25 Vict. c. 19, purported to grant to plaintiff in fee simple the land sought to be recovered in the action:—Held, that under B. N. A. Act, s. 108, the soil and bed of the foreshore in the harbour of Summerside belonged to the Crown, as representing the Dominion of Canada, and therefore the grant under the great seal of Prince Edward Island to H. et al. was void and inoperative. Holman v. Green, 6 S. C. R. 707, 2 Cart. 147.

Foreshore of Harbour—Grant from Local Government.]—After the British North America Act came into force the government of Nova Scotia granted to S. a part of the foreshore of the harbour of Sydney, C.B. S. conveyed this lot, through the C. B. Coal Co., to the S. & L. Coal Co. S. having died, his widow brought an action for dower in said lot to which the company pleaded that the grant to S. was void, the property being vested in the Dominion Government:—Held, that the company having obtained title to the property from S., they were estopped from saying that the title of S. was defective. After the conveyance to the defendant company an Act was passed by the Legislature of Nova Scotia ratifying and confirming the title of the defendant company to all property of the C. B. Coal Co.:—Held, that if the Legislature could by statute affect the title to this property which was vested in the Dominion Government, it had not done so by this Act in which the Crown is not expressly named. Moreover the statute should have been pleaded by the defendants. Sydney and Lowisbury Coal and R. W. Co. v. Sword, 21 S. C. R. 152.

Foreshore of Harbour.]—The Dominion statute, 44 Vict. c. 1, 8. 18, gave the Canadian Pacific Railway Company the right to take and use the land below high water mark in any stream, lake, etc., so far as required for the purposes of the railway:—Held, that the right of the public to have access to a harbour, the foreshore of which had been taken by the company under this Act, was subordinate to the rights given to the company thereby, and the latter could prevent by injunction an interference with the use of the foreshore so taken, City of Vancouver v. Canadian Pacific R. W. Co., 23 S. C. R. 1.

Harbour Commissioners.]—Held, following the case of Commissioners of the Cobourg Town Trust, 22 Gr. 377, that the commissioners of the Toronto Harbour were entitled to compensation for their services, and this, whether the farbour belonged to the Dominion or Provincial Government, as in the event of it being found to belong to the Dominion, it must be assumed that the Dominion Government intended the commissioners to be subject to the law of the Province in which the trust was to be administered. Re Toronto Harbour Commissioners, 28 Gr. 195; 1 Cart. 825.

Interference with Navigation — Exchequer Court.]—An information at the suit of the Attorney-General to obtain an injunction to restrain defendant from doing acts that interfere with and tend to destroy the navigation of a public harbour is a civil and a criminal proceeding, and the exchequer court has concurrent original jurisdiction over the same under 50 & 51 Vict, c, 16, s, 17 (d), (2) A grant from the Crown which derogates from a public right of navigation is to that extent void unless the interference with such navigation is authorized by Act of Parliament, (3) The Provincial Legislatures since the Union of the Provinces cannot authorize such an intereference. (4) Wherever by an Act of a Provincial Legislature passed before the Union authority is given to the Crown to permit an interference with the public right of navigation, such authority is exercisable by the Governor-General and not by the Lieutenant-Governor of the Province. The Queen v. Fisher, 2 Ex. C. R. 365.

Private Harbour — Navigation or Fishing—Exchapter Court. 1—The harbour of the city of St. John is not one of the public har-bours which by virtue of s. 108 and sched. 3 of the British North America Act, 1867, became at the Union the property of Canada. It is vested in the corporation of the city of St. John, who are the con-servators thereof, and who have certain rights of fishing therein for the benefit of the inhabitants of the city. Notwithstandthe inhabitants of the city. Notwithstanding such ownership of the harbour by the corporation of the city of St. John and their rights therein, the Attorney-General of Canada may file an information in this court to restrain any interference with, or court to restrain any interference with, or injury to, the public right of navigation or fishing in such harbour. Semble, that while an exemption granted by the Minister of Marine and Fisheries under 31 Vict. s. 60, s. 14, s.-s. 2, may be a good defence to a prosecution for the penalty therein prescribed, it would not afford a good answer to an information to restrain any one from throwing any poisonous or deleterious substance into waters frequented by fish if the act complained of constituted an injury to or interference with some right of fishing existing in such waters. Held, that whilst the Legislature of New Brunswick could not at the time of the passing of the Act of Assembly 40 Vict. c. 38, legalize such an interference with or injury to the right of navigation or fishery as would amount to a nuisance, they could authorize the construction of a drain to carry the refuse water from the defendants' works to the harbour, and so long as the discharge of such refuse water through the drain did not amount to a nuisance there was no ground upon which to enjoin the defendant company to remove their sewer or to abandon the use of it. The Queen v. St. John Gas Light Co., 4 Ex. C. R. 326.

Provincial Navigation Company.] — The power to incorporate a navigation company the operations of which are limited to a particular Province, belongs exclusively to the Legislature of such Province. Macdongal v. Union Navigation Co., 21 L. C. Jur. 63: 2 Cart. 228.

Public Harbours - Navigable Waters-Riparian Rights—Fishery Licenses and Regu-lations. |—The beds of public harbours not granted before Confederation are the property of the Dominion of Canada. Holman v. Green, 6 S. C. R. 707, followed. The beds of all other waters not so granted belong to of all other waters not so granted belong to the respective Provinces in which they are situate, without any distinction between the various classes of waters. Per Gwynne, J.— The beds of all waters are subject to the jurisdiction and control of the Dominion Pariament so far as required for creating future harbours, erecting beacons or other public works for the benefit of Canada under public works for the benefit of Canada under Piriish North America Act, s. 92, item 10, and for the administration of the fisheries. R. S. C. e. 92, "An Act respecting certain works constructed in or over Navigable Rivers," is intra vires of the Dominion Par-liament. The Dominion Parliament has power to declare what shall be deemed an interference with navigation and to require its sanction to any work in navigable waters. A Province may grant land extending into a lake or river for the purpose of there being built thereon a wharf, warehouse or the like, built thereon a wharf, warehouse or the like, and the grantee on obtaining the sanction of the Dominion may build thereon subject to compliance with R. S. C. c. 92. Riparian proprietors before Confederation had an exclusive right of fishing in non-navigable and in navigable, non-tidal lakes, rivers. streams and waters, the beds of which had been granted to them by the Crown. Robertson v. The Queen, 6 S. C. R. 52, followed. The rule that riparian proprietors own ad medium filum aque does not apply to the great lakes or navigable rivers. Where beds of such waters have not been granted the right of fishing is public and not restricted to waters within the ebb and flow of the tide.
Where the provisions of Magna Charta are not in force, as in the Province of Quebec, the Crown in right of the Province may grant exclusive rights of fishing in tidal waters, except in tidal public harbours in which, as in except in tidal public harbours in which, as in public harbours, the Crown in right of the Dominion may grant the beds and fish-ing rights, Per Strong, C.J., King, and Girouard, J.J. The provisions of Magna Charta relating to tidal waters would be in force in the Provinces in which such waters with (except Chuber), where graceled by exist (except Quebec) unless repealed by legislation, but such legislation has probably been passed by the various Provincial Legislatures; and these provisions of the charter so far as they affect public harbours have been repealed by Dominion legislation. Dominion Parliament cannot authorize the giving by lease, license or otherwise the right of fishing in non-navigable waters, nor in navigable waters the beds and banks of which are assigned to the Provinces under the British North America Act. The legislative authority of Parliament under s. 91, item 12, is confined to the regulation and conservation of sea-coast and inland fisheries, under which it may require that no person shall fish in public waters without a license from the Department of Marine and Fisheries, may impose fees for such license and prohibit all fishing without it, and may prohibit particular classes, such as foreigners, unconditionally, from fishing. The license as required will, however, be merely personal conferring qualification, and give no exclusive right to fish in a particular locality. Section 4 and other portions of R. S. C. c. 95, so far as they attempt to confer exclusive rights of fishing in provincial waters, are ultra vires. Per Gwynne, J.—Provincial Legislatures have no jurisdiction to deal with fisheries. Whatever comes within that term is given to the Dominion by the British North America Act, s. 91, item 12, including the grant of leases or licenses for exclusive fishing. Per Strong, C.J., Taschereau, King, and Girouard, JJ.

-R. S. O. 1887 c. 24, s. 47, and ss. 5 to 13 and 19 to 21 of the Ontario Act of 1892, are intra vires, but may be superseded by Dominion legislation. R. S. Q. Arts. 1375 to 1387 are also intra vires. Per Gwynne, J.— R. S. O. 1887 c. 24, s. 47, is ultra vires so far as it assumes to authorize the sale of land covered with water within public harbours. The margins of navigable rivers and lakes may be sold if there is an understanding with the Dominion Government for protection against interference with navigation. The Act of 1892 and R. S. Q. Arts. 1375 to 1378 are valid if passed in aid of a Dominion Act for protection of fisheries. If not they are ultra vires. In re Jurisdiction over Provincial Fisheries, 26 S. C. R. 444. See the next case.

Public Harbours - Fisheries.] - Whatever proprietary rights vested in the Provinces at the date of the B. N. A. Act, remained so unless by its express enactment transferred to the Dominion. Such transfer is not to be presumed from the grant of legislative jurisdiction to the Dominion in respect of the subject matter of those pro-prietary rights. The transfer by s. 108 and the 5th clause of its schedule to the Dominion of "rivers and lakes improvements," operates on its true construction in regard to the improvements only both of rivers and lakes, and not in regard to the entire rivers. Such construction does no violence to the language construction does no violence to the language employed, and is reasonably and probably in accordance with the intention of the Legis-lature. The transfer of "public harbours" operates on whatever is properly comprised in that term, having regard to the circumstances of each case, and is not limited merely to those portions on which public works had been executed. With regard to fisheries and fishing rights:—Held. (1) that s. 91 did not convey to the Dominion any proprietary rights therein, although the legislative jurisrights therein, although the legislative jains-diction conferred by the section enables it to affect those rights to an unlimited extent, short of transferring them to others. (2) A tax by way of license as a condition of the right to fish is within the powers conferred by s.-ss. 4 and 12. (3) The same power is conferred on the Provincial Legislatures by s. 92. (4) R. S. C. c. 95, s. 4, so far as it empowers the grant of exclusive fishing rights empowers the grant of exclusive Issuing rights over Provincial property, is ultra vires the Dominion. (5) R. S. O. 1887 c. 24, s. 47, is with a specific exception intra vires the Province. As regards the Ontario Act, 55 Vict, c. 10, the regulations therein which control the manner of fishing are ultra vires. Fishing regulations and restrictions are within the exclusive competence of the Dominion: see B. N. A. Act, s. 91, s.-s. 12. Secus with regard to any provisions relating thereto which would properly fall under the headings "Property and Civil Rights" or "The Management and Sale of Public Lands:"—Held, further, that the Dominion Parliament had power to pass R. S. C. c. 92, intituled "An Act respecting certain works constructed in or over navigable waters," Attorncy-General for the Dominion of Canada v. Attorncy-General for the Provinces of Ontario, Quebec and Nova Scotia, Attorncy-General for the Province of Ontario v. Attorncy-General for the Dominion of Canada, Attorncys-General for the Provinces of Quebec and Nova Scotia v. Attorncy-General for the Dominion of Canada, [1898] A. C. 700.

Public Harbours.]—Held, that the locus in quo, a small bay in Lake Simcoe, at which there was a wharf where, with the permission of the owner, vessels used to call, but no meoring ground and little shelter except from wind off the land, was not a public harbour within the meaning of the British North America Act, and that the plaintiff's grant from the Province was valid. McDonald v. Lake Simcoe Ice and Cold Storage Company, 26 A. R. 411.

Riparian Right of Fishing-Ungranted Lands of Crown. |-- On 1st January, 1874, the Minister of Marine and Fisheries of Canada, purporting to act under the powers conferred upon him by s. 2, c. 60, 31 Vict, executed on behalf of Her Majesty to the suppliant an instrument called a lease of fishwhereby Her Majesty purported to lease ery, whereby Her Majesty purported to the suppliant for nine years a certain portion of the south-west Miramichi river in New Brunswick for the purpose of fly-fishing for the purpose of the purpose of the fishing for the purpose of the p salmon therein, the locus in quo being thus described in the special case agreed to by the parties:—" Price's Bend is about forty or forty-five miles above the ebb and flow of the tide. The stream for the greater part from this point upward is navigable for canoes, small boats, flat-bottomed scows, logs and timber. Logs are usually driven down the river in high water in the spring and fall. The stream is rapid. During summer it is in some places on the bars very shallow." Certain persons who had received conveyances of a portion of the river, and who, under such conveyances, claimed the exclusive right of fishing in such portion, interrupted the suppliant in the enjoyment of his fishing under the lease granted to him, and put him to certain expenses in endeavouring to assert and defend his claim to the ownership of the fishing of that portion of the river included in his lease. The supreme court of New Brunswick having decided adversely to his exclusive right to fish in virtue of said lease, the suppliant presented a petition of right and claimed compensation from Her Majesty for the loss of his fishing privileges and for the expenses he had incurred. By special case certain questions, which are given in the report, were submitted for the decision of the court, and the exchequer court held inter alia that an exclusive right of fishing existed in the parties who had received the conveyances, and that the Minister of Marine and Fisheries consequently had no power to grant a lease or license under s. 2 of the Fisheries Act of the portion of the river in question, and in answer to the 8th question, viz.: "where the lands (above tidal water) through which the minis (above than water) throng which the said river passes are ungranted by the Crown, could the Minister of Marine and Fisheries lawfully issue a lease of that portion of the river "—Held, that the Minister could not lawfully issue a lease of the bed of the river, but that he could lawfully issue a license to lish as a franchise apart from the ownership of the soil in that portion of the river. The appellant thereupon appealed to the supreme court of Canada on the main question: whether or not an exclusive right of fishing did so exist:—Held, Ist, the general power of regulating and protecting the lisheries under the British North America Act, 1867, s. 91, is in the Parliament of Canada, but that the license granted by the Minister of Marine and Fisheries of the locus in quo was void because said Act only authorizes the granting of leases "where the exclusive right of inshing does not already exist by law," and in this case the exclusive right of fishing belonged to the owners of the land through which that portion of the Miramichi river flows. Regina v. Robertson, 6 S. C. R. 52; 2 Cart. 65.

Although the public may have in a river, such as the one in question, an easement or right to float rafts or logs down and a right of passage up and down in Canada, etc., wherever the water is sufficiently high to be so used, such right is not inconsistent with an exclusive right of fishing or with the right of the owners of property opposite their respective lands ad medium filum aque. Ib.

The rights of fishing in a river, such as is that part of the Miramichi from Price's Bend to its source, are an incident to the grant of the land through which such river flows, and where such grants have been made there is no authority given by the B. N. A. Act, 1867, to grant a right to fish, and the Dominion Parliament has no right to give such authority. It.

Per Ritchie, C.J., Strong, Fournier, and Henry, J.J., ungranted lands in the Province of New Brunswick being in the Crown for the benefit of the people of New Brunswick, the exclusive right to fish follows as an incident, and is in the Crown as trustee for the benefit of the people of the Province, and therefore a license by the Minister of Marine and Fisheries to fish in stream running through provincial property would be illegal. Ib.

River as Boundary, —The control over navigation conferred on the Dominion Parliament by the B, N. A. Act does not prevent the Provincial Legislatures from exercising municipal and police control on navigable rivers; consequently the Quebec Act, 43 & 44 Vict. c. 62, extending the limits of the town of St. John's to the middle of a navigable river was held to be valid, and to confer the right to tax property within the added limits. Central Vermont R. W. Co. v. 8t. John's, 14 Sc. C. R. 288:14 App. Cas. 590; 4 Cart. 326.

Vice-Admiralty Court.]—The Dominion Parliament can confer on the vice-admiralty courts jurisdiction in any matter of navigation and shipping within the territorial limits of the Dominion. When an Act of the Parliament of Canada is in part repugnant to an Imperial statute, effect will be given to the former so far as its provisions do not conflict with those of the Imperial enactment. The Farewell, 7 Q. L. R. 380; 2 Cart. 378.

Water Lot.]—The government of the Province of Quebec having by letters patent granted a water for extending into deep water to be a superior of the province o

Water Lots Granted by Crown Prior to Confederation.]—Claimants' title to a water lot at Lévis, in the harbour of Quebec, was based on a grant from the Lieutenant-Governor of Quebec prior to Confederation. The grant contained, inter alia, a provi-sion that upon giving the grantee twelve months' notice, and paying him a reasonable sum as indemnity for improvements, the Crown might resume possession of the said water lot for the purpose of public improvement :- Held, the property being situated in a public harbour, this power of resuming possession for the purpose of public improvement would be exercisable by the Crown as represented by the Government of Canada. Holman v. Green, 6 S. C. R. 707, referred to.
(2) Inasmuch as the Crown had not exercised this power, but had proceeded under the expropriation clauses of the Government Railways Act, the claimants were entitled to recover the fair value of the lot at the date of expropriation. That value, however, should be determined with reference to the nature of the title. Samson v. The Queen, 2 Ex. C.

Business and Professional Qualifications. |- A Provincial Legislature has authorto determine the age or other qualifications which shall be required on the part of persons resident in the Province, to entitle them to manage their own affairs, or to exercise certain professions or branches of business attended with danger or risk to the public. laws on these subjects incidentally affect trade and commerce, this incidental power must be deemed to be included in the right to deal with those matters which are specially placed under Provincial control. The Quebec Pharmacy Act of 1875, so far as it requires certain qualifications on the part of persons ex-ercising the business of selling drugs and medicines, is valid. The Provincial Legislatures have the right to appropriate fines to municipal or other corporations. Bennett v. Pharmaceutical Association of Quebec, 1 Dorion 336; 2 Cart. 250.

Civil Rights—Contract.]—In No. 13 of s. 92 the words "property and civil rights in the Province" include rights arising from contract (which are not in express terms included under s. 91), and are not limited to such rights only as flow from the law, e. g., the status of persons. 23. Railways.

Construction of Road.]—By the true construction of B. N. A. Act, s. 91, s. 8. 29, and s. 92, s.-s. 10, the Dominion Parliament has exclusive right to prescribe regulations for the construction, repair, and alteration of the appellant railway; and the Provincial Legislature has no power to regulate the structure of a ditch forming part of its authorized works. But the provisions of the municipat code of Quebec, which prescribe the cleaning of the ditch and the removal of an obstruction which had caused inundation on neighbouring lands, are intra vires of the Provincial Legislature. Canadian Pacific R. W. Co. v. Corporation of Notre Dame de Bonsecours [1899]

Construction of Road.]—The Provincial Legislatures in Canada have no jurisdiction to make regulations in respect to crossings or the structural condition of the roadbed of rail-ways subject to the provisions of "The Rail-way Act" of Canada. Canadian Pacific R. W. Co. v. Corporation of Notre Dame de Bonsecours, [1899] A. C. 367, followed, Grand Trunk R. W. Co. v. Therrien, 30 S. C. R. 485.

Construction of Road.]—The provision in the British Columbian Cattle Protection Act, 1891, as amended in 1895, to the effect that a Dominion railway company, unless they erect proper fences on their railway, shall be responsible for cattle in juried or killed thereon is ultra viter by the construction of the control of the control of the control of Notre Dame de Bonsecours, [1899] A. C. 397, distinguished. Madden v. Nelson and Fort Sheppard R. W. Co., [1899] A. C. 626.

Crossings—Railway Committee.] — The Legislation of the Parliament of Canada with reference to the guarding of the crossings of a railway, which under s.-s. 10 of s. 92 of the British North America Act is under the exclusive legislative authority of Parliament, is within the scope of necessary legislation. Under ss. 11, 18, 21, 187, and 188 of the Railway Act of 1888, Parliament conferred upon the railway committee the power to order that gates and watchmen should be provided and maintained by such a railway at crossings of highways traversing different adjacent municipalities; to decide which municipalities are interested in the crossings; to fix the proportion of the cost to be borne by the different municipalities; to vary any order made by adding other municipalities in the control of the control of the committee and the decision of the nonmittee amount is never when the committee in the control of the committee in the committee in the committee in the committee in decision and the orders of the committee in the same way as private individuals. Re Canadian Pacific R. W. Co, and Cannty and Township of York, 27 O. R. 550. See next case.

Crossings — Railway Committee.] — The Railway Committee of the Privy Council, on the application of the city of Toronto, ordered the Canadian Pacific Railway Company to put up gates and keep a watchman where the line of railway crossed a highway running from the city of Toronto into the township of York, the line of railway being at the place in question the boundary between the two municipalities, and ordered the cost of maintenance to be paid in equal proportions by the railway company and the city. On a subsequent application by the city representing that the township was equally interested and asking for contribution from the township, the township brought in the county, and an order was made by the railway committee that the county and township should contribute in certain proportions:—Held, per Burton, C.J.O., and Maclennan, J.A.—That, assuming the validity of legislation conferring jurisdiction on the railway committee, their powers were limited to persons or municipalities invoking the exercise of their jurisdiction, and that their order was invalid so far as it imposed a burden upon the township and county. Per Osler, J.A.—That the legislation was intra vires, and that the township and county were persons interested within the meaning of the Act, and subject to the juris-diction of the railway committee. Per Meredith, J.—That the legislation was intra vires, but that the county was not a person interested, not being under any responsibility for the maintenance of the highway in question. Per Curiam .- That the decision of the railway committee upon a subject, and in respect way committee upon a subject, and in respect of persons, within its jurisdiction, cannot be reviewed or interfered with by the court. In the result the judgment below, 27 O, R. 559, was reversed as to the county of York, and affirmed as to the township of York, In re-Canadian Pacific R. W. Co, and County and Totenship of York, 25 A. R. 65.

Crossings — Railway Committee.]—Sections 4, 306, and 307 of the Railway Act, 51 Vict. c. 29 (D.), enacting that the plaintiffs and other railways, and any railways whatever crossing them, are works for the general advantage of Canada, and are to be subject thereafter to the legislative authority of Parliament, and 56 Vict. c. 27, s. 1, (D.) enacting that no railway shall be crossed by any electric railway whatever unless with the approval of the railway committee, are intravires, and therefore the committee could empower the defendant railway, contrary to the provisions of its Provincial Act of incorporation, to cross the plaintiff railway at grade, against the will of the latter. Crossings-Railway Committee.]-In an action to restrain the defendants from acting action to restrain the detendants from acting upon an order of the railway committee of the privy council, made under s. 14 of the Railway Act of Canada, giving them the option to open a new street, by means of a subway, across the property and under the tracks of a Dominion railway company, but without compensation, and requiring the company to pay a portion of the cost of construction, and meanwhile allowing a temporary crossing for foot passengers only, and making certain other provisions upon the subject:—Held, that the Provincial Legislature alone had power to confer upon the defendants legal capacity to acquire and make the street in question. has conferred such capacity. 3. In virtue of its power over property and civil rights in the Province, the Provincial Legislature has power to authorize a municipality to acquire and make such a street, and to provide how and upon what terms it may be acquired and made. 4. But that power is subject to the supervention of federal legislation respecting works and undertakings such as the railway in question. 5. The manner and terms of acquiring and making such street, and also the prevention of the making or acquiring of such a street, are proper subjects of such supervening legislation. 6. Such legislation may rightly confer upon any person or body the power to determine in what circumstances, and how and upon what terms, such a street may be acquired and made, or to prevent the acquiring and making of it altogether, and therefore s. 14 of the Railway Act is not ultra vires. 7. Such legislation, in virtue of its power over such railway corporations, as well as such works and undertakings, may confer power to impose such terms as have in this case been imposed upon the plaintiffs, and to deprive such corporations of any right to compensation for lands so taken or injuriously affected; and has conferred such power on the railway committee, under s. 14, in such a case as this. 8. Such legislation has not conferred upon the committee power to give the temporary foot-way in question. 9. Nor any authority to delegate its powers. 10. The work it directs must be constructed under the supervision of an official appointed for that purpose by the committee. 11. The railway company may, if they choose, construct the works directed, under such supervision, instead of permitting the municipality to do so. Grand Trunk R. W. Co. v. City of Toronto, 32 O. R. 120.

Crown Lands.]—Rights of railways to enter Crown lands. See Booth v. McIntyre, 31 C. P. 183.

Expropriation — Reviewing Award.]—Quare, the land having been taken under an Act of the Dominion Parliament, whether the finding of the arbitrators could be reviewed under 38 Vict. c. 15 (0.) Norvall v. Canada Southern R. W. Co., 5 A. R. 13.

Limitation of Actions.]—The Dominion Parliament having by a general railway Act, applicable to all railway companies over which the Parliament had jurisdiction, limited to six months the time for bringing actions against railway companies for any injury caused by peason of the railway —Held, by a division of opinion, affirming the court below, that this enactment was valid. McArthur v. Northern and Pacific Junction R. W. Co., 17 A. R. 86; 4 Cart. 559.

Negligence.]—The legislation of the Dominion Parliament forbidding the defendants contracting against liability for their own negligence is not ultra vires. Vogel v. Grand Trank R. W. Co., 10 A. R. 162.

Nova Scotia Railway.]-Under the B. N. A. Act, 1867, s. 108, read in connection with the third schedule thereto, all railways belonging to the Province of Nova Scotia, including the railway in suit, passed to and be-came vested on the 1st July, 1867, in the Do-minion of Canada, but not for any larger interest therein than at that date belonged to the Province. the date of the statutory transfer, subject to an obligation on the part of the Provincial Government to enter into a traffic arrangement with the respondent company, the Dominion Government, in pursuance of that obligation, entered into a further agreement relating thereto, of the 22nd September, 1871. Quaere, whether it was ultra vires of the Dominion Parliament, by an enactment to that effect, to extinguish the rights of the respondent company under the said agreement. held, that Dominion Act, 37 Vict. c. 16, did not, upon its true construction, purport so to do. And although it authorized a transfer of the railway to the appellants, it did not enact such transfer in derogation of the respon-dents' rights under the agreement of the 22nd September, 1871, or otherwise. Western Counties R. W. Co. v. Windsor and Annapo-lis R. W. Co., 7 App. Cas. 178; 1 Cart. 397.

Packing Frogs. |—The Province of Ontario passed an Act to make provision for the safety of railway employees and the public, such provision having reference to the construction and maintenance of railway frogs, &c. Per Spragge, C.J.O., a Provincial Legislature has no power to pass such a law with reference to a Dominion railway situate locally within the Province. The other Judges of the court of appeal expressed no opinion upon the point, being of opinion that the Act was not intended to apply to Dominion railways, and for that reason did not apply to the Dominion railways, company in question. Monkhouse v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., S A. R. 637; 3 Cart. 289.

Prohibited Contract.]—See Macdonald v. Riordon, 30 S. C. R. 619.

Provincial Railway Crossing Dominion Railway, —Where it is necessary for a Provincial railway in Ontario to cross a Dominion railway, the company desiring to effect such crossing must procure the approval of the commissioner of public works for Ontario, as well as the approval of the railway committee of the privy council of the Dominion; and the railway companies cannot by agreement waive this provision. Credit Valley R. W. Co. v. Great Western R. W. Co., 25 Gr. 507; I Cart. 82:

Workmen's Compensation for Injuries Act. |—The Ontario Legislature by R. S. O. 1887 c. 141, gave to workmen injured in the course of their employment, the right, under certain conditions, to recover compensap—38 tion therefor from their employers:—Held, that this enactment was valid and applied to the defendant company as well as other railways under the legislative control of the Dominion Parliament. Canada Southern R. W. Co. v. Jackson, 17 S. C. R. 316; 4 Cart. 451.

Workmen's Compensation for Injuries Act.]—Section 289 of the Dominion Railway Act. 51 Vict. c. 29, giving to any person injured by the failure to observe any of the provisions of the Act a right of action "for the full amount of damages sustained" is intra vires, and the limitation of amount mentioned in the Workmen's Compensation for Injuries Act does not apply to an action by a workman or his representative under this section. Curran v. Grand Trunk R. W. Co., 25 A. R. 407.

24. Taxation.

Bank Reserve.]—The Local Legislature has authority to enact a law imposing a tax on the Dominion notes held by a bank as portion of its cash reserve under the Dominion Act relating to "Banks and Banking" (34 Vict. c. 5, s. 14.) Windsor v. Commercial Bank of Windsor, 3 Russ. & Geld. 420; 3 Cart. 377.

Business Tax.]—Held, that the Quebec Act, 45 Viet. c. 22, which imposes certain direct taxes on certain commercial corporations carrying on business in the Province, is intravires the Provincial Legislature. A tax imposed upon banks which carry on business within the Province arrying in amount with the paid-up capital and with the number of its offices, whether or not their principal place of business is within the Province, is direct raxation within clause 2 of s. 92 of the British North America Act, 1867, the meaning of which is not restricted in this respect by either clause 2, 3, or 15 of s. 91. Similarly with regard to insurance companies taxed in a sum specified by the Act. Bank of Toronto v. Lombe, 12 App. Cas. 575; 4 Cart. 7.

Pominion Official's Income.] — Held, reversing 40 U. C. R. 478, that under the B. N. A. Act, 1807, a Provincial Legislature has no power to impose a tax upon the official income of an officer of the Dominion Government, or to confer such a power on the municipalities. Semble, that the Legislature of Ontario did not intend to include such an income in the exemptions mentioned in 32 Vict. c. 36, s. 9, s.-s. 12 (O.), as one derived "elsewhere out of this Province." Leprohon v. City of Ottawa, 2 A. R. 522: 1 Cart. 592.

Filing Exhibits.]—The Quebec Act, 43 & 44 Vict. c. 9, which imposes a duty of ten cents upon every exhibit filed in court in any action depending therein, is ultra vires the Provincial Legislature. Attorney-General for Quebec v. Reed, 10 App. Cas. 141; 3 Cart. 190.

Foreign Companies.]—Section 3 of 43 Vict. c. 27 (O.), amending the Assessment Act, is not ultra vires the Ontario Legislature. In re North of Scotland Canadian Mortgage Co., 31 C. P. 552.

Indian Lands.]—It was contended that the Ontario Legislature, having repealed the Act of 1866, had, after Confederation, no power to levy the taxes in question, the land having been withdrawn from their jurisdiction being Indian land; but:—Held, that s. 91, clause 24, of the B. N. A. Act, applied only to Indian lands not surrendered and reserved for their use; and, moreover, that this land being ratable and assessed at the time of Confederation, such liability was not affected thereby. Church v. Fenton, 28 C. P. 384; 4 A. R. 159; 5 S. C. R. 239; 1 Cart. 831.

Manufacturing and Trading Li-censes. — The provisions of the Quebec sta-tute, 55 & 56 Vict. c. 10, as amended by 56 Vict. c. 15, do not involve a regulation of trade and commerce, and the license fee thereby imposed is a direct tax and intra vires of The license required by the the Legislature. statute to be taken out is merely an incident to the collection of the tax and does not alter Where a tax has been imposed its character. by competent legislative authority the want of uniformity or equality in the apportionment of the tax is not a ground sufficient to justify the courts in declaring it unconstitu-Bank of Toronto v. Penalty for not Paying Taxes.]—The Municipal Act of Manitoba provides that persons paying taxes before 1st December in cities and 31st December in rural municipalities shall be allowed ten per cent. discount; that from that date until 1st March the taxes shall be payable at par; and after 1st March ten per cent. on the original amount of the tax shall be added:—Held, that the ten per cent added on 1st March is only an additional rate or tax imposed as a penalty for non-payment which the local Legislature, under its authority to legislate with respect to municipal institutions, had power to impose, and it was not "interest" within the meaning of s. 91 of the B. N. A. Act. Ross v. Torrance, 2 Legal News 186, overruled. Lynch v. Canadad N. W. Land Co., South Dufferin v. Morden, Gibbins v. Barber, 19 S. C. R. 204.

Railway Aid.]-An Act of the Provincial Legislature of New Brunswick, 33 Vict. c. 47. intituled "An Act to authorize the issuing of debentures on the credit of the lower district of the parish of St. Stephen, in the county of Charlotte," which empowered the majority of the inhabitants of that parish to raise, by local taxation, a subsidy designed to promote the construction of a railway extending beyond the limits of the Province, but already authorized by statute, was held to be within the legislative capacity of the Legislature. A Provincial Legislature can, under the B. N. A. Act, s. 92, art. 2, impose direct taxation for a local purpose upon a particular locality within the Province. The Act in question was held to relate to a matter of "a merely local or private nature in the Province, which, by s. 92 of the B. N. A. Act, is assigned to the exclusive competency of the Provincial Legislature, and not to relate to a railway or any local work or undertaking within the excepted subjects mentioned in art. 10, s.-s. (a) of the said section. L'Union St. Jacques de Montreal v. Belisle, L. R. 6 P. C. 31, approved. Dow v. Black, L. R. 6 P. C. 272; 1 Cart. 95.

Registration Fees.]—The plaintiffs sued the defendant for the portion of fees received by the defendant as registrar, to which they were entitled under R. S. O. 1877 c. 111, ss. 98 to 193. The defendant demurred to the declaration on the ground that these sections were ultra vires the local Legislature, as they imposed an indirect tax and not a tax for raising a revenue for Provincial purposes:—Held, that having received the money in question under the above Act, the defendant could not deny that he received it for the purposes therein provided:—Held, also, that if a tax at all, it was clearly a direct tax, and intra vires. County of Hastings v. Ponton, 5 A. R. 543.

Stamp Act—Licenses.]—The clauses of the Act, 39 Vict. c. 7 (passed by the Legislature of Quebec), which impose a tax upon certain policies of assurance and certain receipts and renewals, are not authorized by the B. N. A. Act, 1867, s. 92, s.-s., 2, 9. A license Act by which a licensee is compelled neither to take out, nor pay for a license, but which merely provides that the price of a license shall consist of an adhesive stamp, to be paid in respect of each transaction, not by the licensee, but by the person who deals with him, see, but by the person who usus was more is virtually a stamp Act and not a license Act. The imposition of a stamp duty on policies, renewals, and receipts with provisions for avoiding the policy, renewal, or receipt in a court of law, if the stamp is not affixed, is not warranted by the terms of an Act which authorizes the imposition of direct taxation. Legislature passing the Public Schools Act, 1890. Section 22 of the Act of 1870 authorizes the Provincial Legislature, exclusively, to make laws in relation to education so as not to "prejudicially affect any right or privilege with respect to denominational schools which any class of persons have, by law or practice, in the Province, at the Union: "Held, that the Act of 1890, which abolished the denominational system of public education established by law since the Union, but which did not compel the attendance of any child at a public school, or confer any advantage in respect of attendance other than that of free education, and at the same time left each denomination free to establish, maintain, and conduct its own schools, and to contravene the above proviso; and that, accordingly, certain by-laws of a municipal corporation which authorized assessments under the Act were valid. Governor-General in Council.]

Where the Roman Catholic minority of Manicha appended to the Governor-General in Council against the Manitoba Education Acts of 1800, on the ground that their rights and privileges in relation to education had been affected thereby:—Held, reversing 22 S. IV. MISCELLANEOUS CASES.

Abdication of Sovereignty.]—It would be unconstitutional for the Parliament of Canada to pass an Act rendering Canadian subjects and Canadian corporations subject to such laws as might be passed by the Congress of the United States; in fact an abdication of sovereignty inconsistent with the relations of Canada to the empire of which it forms a part. International Bridge Co. v. Canada Southern R. W. (Co., 28 Gr. 114.

Asylum - Agreement before Confederation.]-A petition of right set out an agreement made in 1866, between the petitioners and the Queen, represented by the commissioner of public works of Canada, for the performance and completion by the 1st September, 1868, of the carpenter's work required on certain additions to the provincial lunatic asylum at Toronto, and complained that owing to the delay in proceeding with other work, which the said commissioner promised to have done in time, they were delayed and unable to finish their work before July, 1870, and thereby put to great expense. They then alleged that their work was performed under the superintendence and control of the commissioner of public works for Ontario, and for the sole benefit of, and paid for by, that Province: and that by an arbitration held Province: and that by an arbitration held under s. 142 of the B. Case Stated by Governor-in-Council.] See In re County Courts of British Columbia, 21 S. C. R. 446.

Case Stated - Certificate of Attorney-General.]-The Attorney-General certified his opinion, pursuant to s. 3 of R. S. O. 1897 c. 91, that the decision of the high court quashing a conviction made under an Ontario statute involved a question on the construction of the British North America Act, and an appeal from such decision was brought on in the regular way; but, as it plainly appeared to the court of appeal that the decision involved no such question, and the certificate of the Attorney-General appeared to have been granted inadvertently, in consequence of an authentic copy of the reasons for the judgment of the court below not having been for the brought before him, the appeal was quashed and with costs to be paid by the prosecutor, the appellant, whose proceeding was in the nature of a qui tam action. Regina v. Reid, 26 A. R. 181.

Case Stated —Justice of the Peace.]—A case can be stated by a justice of the peace under 52 Vict. c. 15, s. 5 (O.), for the judgment of the court of appeal, only when the constitutional validity of the statute under which he has acted is called in question, and not when the constitutional validity of some other statute, such as a statute regulating procedure or evidence, is collaterally attacked. Regina v. Edwards, Regina v. Lynch, 19 A. R. 706.

Case Stated—Justice of the Peace.]—A case can be stated by a justice of the peace under R. S. O. 1897 c. 91 s. 5, for the judgment of the court of appeal only when the constitutional validity of a statute is involved and not when the decision depends merely upon whether the statute is or is not applicable to the defendants. It was held, therefore, that an appeal by way of stated case, would not lie from the decision of the police magistrate of the city of Toronto that the Toronto Railway Company were bound by a by-law of the corporation, passed under the authority of the Municipal Act, directing them to put vestibules on their cars, the company contending that the by-law and the Municipal Act did not apply because their line crossed the lines of Dominion railways, thus making their undertaking a work for the general advantage of Canada and subject only to Dominion regulation. Regina v. Toronto Railway Co., 20 A. R. 491.

Executive Councillors—Letter of tredit—Ratification by Levislature.]—The provincial secretary of Quebec wrote the following letter to D, with the assent of his colleagues, but not being authorized by order-in-council:

—Jai Thomeur de vous informer que le gouvernement fera voter, dans le budget supplémentaire de 1891-92, un item de six mille plastres qui vous seront payées immédiatement après la session, et cela à titre d'acompte sur l'impression de la Liste des terres de la cur l'impression de la Liste des terres de la

Couronne, concédées depuis 1763 jusqu'au 31 decembre 1890, dont je vous ai conflé l'impression dans une lettre en date du 14 janvier 1891. Cette somme de six mille plastres sera payée au porteur de la présente lettre, revêtue de votre endossement. D. indorsed the letter to a bank as security for advances to enable him to do the work:—Held that the letter constituted no contract between D, and the government; that the provincial secretary had no power to bind the Crown by his signature to such a document; and that a subsequent vote of the Legislature of a sum of money for printing "liste desterres de la Couronne," etc., was not a ratification of the agreement with D., the government not being obliged to expend the money though authorized to do so and the vote containing no reference to the contract with D. nor to the said letter of credit. Jacques-Cartier Bank v. The Queen, 25 S. C. R. Sł.

Extra-territorial Legislation.]—The legislative enactments of a country have no binding force proprio vigore in another country, and a legislature cannot authorize corporations created by it to carry on business in a foreign country. Where, however, a legislature assumes so to do, such authority is only a legislature assumes so to do, such authority is only a legislature and the comparation of the corporators to transact their business abroad as well as at home. Clarke v. Union Fire Ins. Co., 10 P. R. 313.

Governor-in-Council — Statutory Power of the Approach—Minister of the Crown.]—By the sixth section of the Liquor License Act, 1883, the boards of license commissioners for the various license districts in the Dominion, were empowered to fix the salaries of license inspectors, subject to the approval of the Governor-in-Council:—Held, that such approval could not be given by a minister of the Crown. Burroughs v. The Queen, 2 Ex. C. R. 293; 20 S.C. R. 420.

Legislative Assembly — Contempt.] — The House of Assembly has the power of imprisoning persons guilty of contempt in answering or refusing to answer questions before a select committee. McNab v. Bidwell, Dra. 144.

Legislative Power.]—Act No. 22 of 1828, of the Indian Legislature, which excludes the jurisdiction of the high court within certain specified districts, is not inconsistent with the Indian High Courts Act (24 & 25 Vict. c. 104), or with the charter of the high court, and is in its general scope within the legislative power of the Governor General-in-Council. The 9th section of that Act, which confers upon the Liedenberg of Governor of Bengal they part of it, shall be accepted to the section of the conference of the section of the conference of the section of the section lature. It is restricted in the area of its powers, but within that area it is unrestricted. Held, that the Customs Regulation Act of 1879, s. 133, was within the plenary powers of legislation conferred upon the New South Wales Legislature by the Constitution Act (scheduled to 18 & 19 Vict. c. 54, ss. 1 and 45). Held, further, that duties levied by an order-in-council issued under s. 133, are really levied by authority of the legislature and not of the executive. Also that under s. 133 "the opinion of the collector," whether right or wrong, authorizes the action of the Governor, Powell v. Apollo Candle Co., 10 App. Cas. 282; 3 Cart. 432.

New Zealand — Proceedings against Absentees.]—Held, that 15 & 16 Vict. c. 72, on its true construction, empowers the Legislature of New Zealand to subject to its tribunals persons who are neither by themselves nor their agents present in the colony:—Held, further, that a law of the local legislature authorizing the local courts in any case of contracts made or to be performed in the colony to decide whether they will or not proceed in the absence of the defendant is intra vires and reasonable. Whether a judgment against an absentee without service of the writ will be enforced by the courts of another country is a matter for those courts to determine, and does not affect the validity of the local law. Ashbury v. Ellis, [1885] A. C. 339; 5 Cart. 633.

Notice to Attorney-General.]—The questions arising in this case as to the conditions of a mutual ire insurance policy were held, not to be of such a constitutional character as to require notice to the Attorney-General of the Province, or the Minister of Justice of the Dominion. Two days after the House resolved that in preferring the charge without sufficient evidence to sustain it, W. was guilty of a breach of privilege. On the 30th April, W. was ordered to make an apology dictated by the House, and having the control of the c and, having refused to do so, was declared, by another resolution, guilty of a contempt of the House, and requested forthwith to withdraw until such apology should be made. W. declined to withdraw, and thereupon another clined to withdraw, and thereupon another resolution was passed ordering the removal of the said W. from the House, by the sergeant-at-arms, who, with his assistant, enforced such order and removed W. W. brought an action of trespass for assault against the speaker and certain members of the House, and obtained a verdict of $500 damages. Held, that the Legislative Assembly of the Province of Nova Scotia has, in the absence of express grant, no power to remove one of its members for contempt, unless he is actually obstructing the business of the House, and W. having been removed from his seat, not because he was obstructing the business of the House, but because he would not repeat the apology required, the defendants were liable. Kielly v. Carson, 4 Moo. P. C. C. 63, and Doyle v. Falconer, L. R. 1 P. C. 328, commented on and followed. Landers v. Woodworth, 2 S. C. R. 158.

Nova Scotia Legislative Assembly— Immunities of its Members.]—The Nova Scotia House of Assembly has statutory power to adjudicate that wilful disobedience to its order to attend in reference to a libel reflecting on its members is a breach of priviselecting on its members is a breach of privi-ize and contempt, and to punish that breach by imprisonment. In an action for assault and imprisonment against members of the Assembly who had voted for the plaintiff's imprisonment:—Held, that the sections of the beal Revised Statutes, 5th series, c. 3, which create the jurisdiction of the House and indemnify its members against legal pro-ceedings in respect of their votes therein, are a complete answer to an attempt to enforce a compare answer to an attempt to emore civil liability for acts done and words spoken in the House. Those sections, except so far as they may be deemed to confer any criminal jurisdiction, otherwise than as incriminal jurisdiction, otherwise than as in-cident to the protection of members, are intra-vires of the local Legislature, as relating to the constitution of the Province within the meaning of s, 92 of the British North America Act, 1867, or under the authority of s, 5 of the Colonial Laws Validity Act, (28 of s. 5 of the Colonial Laws Vandity Act (28 & 29 Vict. c. 63), which was recognized by the Act of 1867, s. 88. Quebec Turnpike Debentures. 1-Held. Quebec Turnpike Debentures. 1—Held, that the debentures in suit which had been issued under the authority of the Canadian Act (16 Vict. c, 235), by the trustees of the Quebec turnpike roads, appointed under Cultimane, 4 Vict. c, 17, and empowered thereby to borrow moneys "on the credit and the could be completed to the could be completed." security of the tolls thereby authorized to be imposed, and of other moneys which might come into the possession and be at the dis-posal of the said trustees, under and by virtue of the Ordinance, and not to be paid out of or control of the desired in the principal of the control of the control of the principal or interest thereof. Regina v. Bildon, 7 App. Cas. 473; 7 S. C. R. 53.

Held, further, that the Province of Canada had not by its conduct and legislation recognized its highly statement of the principal or interest thereof.

nized its liability to pay the same. The 7th section of the Act, 16 Vict., expressly took away the power which had been conferred by the 27th section of the Ordinance to make advances out of provincial funds for the payment of interest, and by its provise distinguished these debentures from those which had a provincial guarantee. Ib.

Railway Grant before Confedera-tion.]—The Legislature of Canada, by an Act set apart a certain quantity of land along the line of a projected railway running through Quebec and Ontario, to be granted to the company on completion of the railway; and a proportionate part of such lands on the completion of 20 miles of the railway. The company having completed a portion of the line of railway in Ontario to an extent of more than 20 miles, applied for a grant of the proportion to which, under the Act, they claimed to be entitled, which was refused. The company thereupon presented a petition of right against the Province of Ontario. It was alleged that the Province of Ontario had not along the line of the road sufficient lands to make the grant desired :-Held, that this formed no ground for the Province of Ontario insisting that the Province of Quebec should have been made a party to the proceeding. Canada Central R. W. Co. v. Regina, 20 Gr. 273

Right of Action Against Imperial Department.]—Can the Provincial Legislature constitutionally give a right of action against a board of ordnance, a military department of the Imperial government? Tully v. Principal Officers of Her Majesty's Ordnance, 5 U. C. R. 6.

Senate - Divorce - Alimony-Costs.]-Counsel in this Province have the right to maintain an action for their fees. Defendant having presented a bill to the Senate for ant naving presented a bill to the Senate for a divorce from his wife, the plaintiff was retained by the wife as counsel before the committee of the Senate to oppose the bill. The defendant being informed that he must pay from day to day into the committee the costs of his wife's defence, promised the plain-tiff that if the plaintiff would not insist on defendant so paying his fees, he would pay them to the plaintiff when taxed. The comthem to the paintin when taxed. The committee having reported the preamble of the bill not proven, the wife applied to the Senate for a divorce and for maintenance, and retained the plaintiff to support such application:—Held, that the Senate could have no tion:—Reid, that the Senate could have no power to award alimony, and the plaintiff could not recover for his fees in promoting a bill for that purpose. McDougall v. Campbell, 41 U. C. R. 332.

Supreme Court Deciding Questions of Constitutionality.]— The supreme court ought never, except in cases when such adjudication is indispensable to the decision of a cause, to pronounce upon the constitu-tional power of a Legislature to pass a stat-ute. Lenoir v. Ritchie, 3 S. C. R. 575.

Territorial Rights — Great Scal — Exchequer Court.]—The Crown, in right of the Dominion, has a right to take proceedings to restrain an individual from making use of a provincial grant in a way to embarrass the Dominion in the exercise of its territorial Dominion in the exercise of its territorial rights. The rights of the Crown, territorial or prerogative, are to be passed under the great seal of the Dominion or Province (as the case may be), in which is vested the beneficial interest therein. The Parliament of Canada has the right to enact that all actions only suits of a civil varyer of company laws. and suits of a civil nature, at common law or equity, in which the Crown, in right of the Dominion, is plaintiff or petitioner, may be brought in the exchequer court. Farwell v. The Queen, 22 S. C. R. 553.

Victoria-Chinese Act-Aliens.]-By s. 3 of the Victorian Chinese Act, 1881, a Chinese immigrant has no legal right to land in the colony until a sum of £10 has been paid for him. Where the master of a vessel had com-mitted an offence under the Act by bringing a greater number of Chinese immigrants into port of the colony than the Act allows: a port of the colony than the Held, that the collector of customs was under no legal obligation to accept payment tendered by the master on behalf of any such immigrants, nor when tendered either by or for any individual immigrant: — Held, further, that apart from the Act, an alien has not a legal right enforceable by action to enter British territory. Murgrove v. Chun Tecong Toy, [1891] A. C. 272, 5 Cart. 556.

CONTEMPT OF COURT.

Appeal.]—A rule nisi of the supreme court of New Brunswick calling upon E. to show cause why an attachment should not issue against him for contempt in publishing certain articles in a newspaper was made absolute and a writ of attachment was issued. By the practice in such cases in the said court it appeared that the attachment was issued merely in order to bring the party into court where he might be ordered to answer interrogations, and by his answers, if he could, purge his contempt. If unable to do so the court would pronounce sentence. E. appeaded from the judgment making the rule absolute:—Held, that the judgment appeaded from was not a final judgment from which an appeal would lie under the Supreme and Exchequer Counts Act. R. S. C. c. 135, s. 24 (a). Ellis v. Baird, 16 S. C. R. 147.

Appeal.]—The adjudication that the appellant, a solicitor and officer of the court, and moved against in that quality, has been guilty of a contempt, is by itself an appealable judgment. Although no sentence for the contempt has been pronounced by the court, when the party in contempt has been ordered to pay the costs of the application to commit, the court in effect inflicts a fine for the contempt. In re O'Brien, 16 8, C. R. 197.

Appeal.]—Contempt of court is a criminal proceeding and unless it comes within s, 68 of the Supreme Court Act an appeal does not lie to that court From a judgment in proceedings therefor. O'Shea v. O'Shea, 15 P. D. 59, followed; In re O'Brien, 16 S. C. R. 197, referred to. In proceedings for contempt of court by attachment until sentence is pronounced there is no "final judgment" from which an appeal could be brought. Ellis v. The Queen, 22 S. C. R. 7.

By-law Disregarding Judgment,]—By an order of the county Judge, upon the application of the plaintiff, after hearing numerous parties, including the defendants, a certain street on a registered plan was closed. Thereafter the defendant municipality passed a by-law declaring the street in question open. On a motion to quash the by-law—Held, that the by-law should be quashed, as having been passed in disregard and contempt of the order. Held, also, that as the order shewed jurisdiction on its face, the evidence upon which it had been made should not be looked at on this application. Waldie v. Burlington, 7 O. R. 182, 13 A. R. 104.

Certiorari—Notice to Magistrate.]—After the issue of a writ of certiforari for the removal of a conviction for the purpose of quashing it, the writ, though served on the clerk of the peace, did not come to the notice or knowledge of the magistrate, who enforced the conviction by the issue of a distress warrant:—Held, that the magistrate was not guilty of contempt. Regina v. Woodyatt, 27 O. K. 113.

Comment on Pending Proceedings— Court of Appeal—Election Cases.]—All the powers which the court of Queen's bench possessed with respect to controverted elections were transferred by 48 Vict. c. 3, s. 2 (0), to the court of appeal, which has therefore now the power to punish for contempt in election cases. Re Lincoln Election, 2 A. R. 353.

Pending an election scrutiny the publisher of a paper at St. Catharines, where the scrutiny was being carried on, copied a letter which purported to have been written by the respondent to the Mail newspaper of Toronto, commenting very severely on the character and evidence of the petitioner's witnesses, as well as the motives of those prosecuting the well as the motives of those prosecuting the petition. Upon a motion to commit the publisher for contempt of court, he filed an affidition that the letter in question was an answer to an editorial which had appeared in the Globe newspaper charging the respondent with having improperly interfered with the voters' lists before the elections, and reflecting on his conduct in such a manner as to do him serious injury in St. Catharines where he lived; and that he, deponent, had altered the address of the letter to his own paper and published the letter as a simple act of justice to, and without the knowledge or consent of, the respondent. He further denied any intention of giving offence to the court, or of interfering with the fair trial of the case :- Held, that the publication contained expressions which amounted to a contempt of court; but under the circumstances the court refused to make any order against the pub-

Remarks as to the liberty of comment allowed, and the duty of the court in such cases. Ib.

Comment on Pending Proceedings—Apology, I—While a criminal information for libel was pending against one W, defendant wrote a letter to a newspaper, reflecting upon one of the Judges who had delivered judgment on the application for such information, and stating that W, was "as certain to be convicted as a libelier ever was before his trial."—Held, that such letter was clearly a contempt of court, but the defendant, on an application to commit him therefor, having made a full and unreserved apology, the proceedings were stayed on payment of costs by him, and no fine was imposed. Regina v. Wilkinson, Re Houston, 41 U. C. R. 42.

Comment on Pending Proceedings— Procedure—Time.]—Where leave to file a criminal information for libel had been granted on the 29th June, and one B., on the 8th July, published an article tending to prejudice the fair trial of the person against whom such information was to issue: Per Harrison, C.J., there was a pending litization, though the information had not been filed, and such publication was a contempt of court. Regina v. Wilkinson, Re Brown, 41 U. C. R. 47.

The information was filed late in Trinity term, and the subpœna served on the applicant (the defendant in the information) on the last day of that term. Fer Harrison, C.J., an application in Michaelmas term to attach B. for the publication of the 8th July, was not too late. Quarre, whether the motion could have been made before the filing of the information. Ib.

Semble, that a Judge sitting out of term under the A. J. Act, does not represent the full court, so as to enable him to punish for contempt of such court. Ib.

B., in the article complained of, which appeared in a paper of large circulation and considerable influence, spoke of the applicant (the defendant) as the author not only of the lilels for which the information had been granted, but of scores of others against the same person. Per Harrison, C.J., this was calculated to prejudice the applicant in his trial. Ib.

calculated to prejudice the applicant in his trial. Ib.

The applicant had, in a newspaper published by him, spoken of the article in contemptuous terms, and as one which he felt certain would fail of its intention to prejudice his case in court in the least. Per Harrison, C.J., the applicant's belief as to the effect of the article was no answer to this application, the question being, whether it was calculated to have the effect of prejudic-ing his triul. Ib.

It was objected also, that the applicant himself had in his paper commented on the judgment of the court, and distorted its meaning, and had himself continually attacked and libelled B. Per Harrison, C.J., this was no answer to the application, for the article in question was one scandalizing the court, not the applicant only, and had been justified by B. in argument, and the defence was therefore not against the applicant, but against the court. Ib.

the court. Ib.

The article, which is set out in the report, was held to be clearly a reckless, intemperate, and unjustifiable attack upon a Judge of this court for a judgment pronounced by him with the other Judges, and a contempt therefore of the court. Morrison, J., was of opinion, 1, that the applicant himself, was too late; 2, that he had failed to sustain the constructive contempt founded on the allegation that the article was calculated to prejudice him on his trial; and, 3, that having so failed, he was not, under the circumstances, entitled to ask the court to punish the author, at his suggestion, for the direct contempt of the court, contained in the article published so long ago, and which the court itself had not deemed worthy of notice. Wilson, J., took no part in the judgment; and the court being equally divided the application dropped. Ib.

Comment on Pending Proceedings—Applicant in Fault.)—On an application on behalf of the respondent to an election petition, for an order nist calling on the defendant, his opponent at the election, to shew cause why he should not be committed for contempt of court for publishing articles in his newspaper, reflecting on and pre-judging the conduct of the respondent and the returning officer during the currency of an election petition:—Held, on the materials before the court, a primā facie case of contempt was made out; but as it appeared on the same materials that the respondent had attended and spoken at a meeting held for the purpose of approving of the conduct of the returning officer, and presenting him with a gold watch as a mark of such public approval, the applicant was also in fault, and the motion was refused. In re Bothwell Election Case, 4 O. R. 224.

Comment on Pending Proceedings.]

—The alleged contempt consisted in publishing in a newspaper comments on a judgment rendered by a master in chambers in a cause in which the writer was solicitor for the defendant. The motion to commit was made by the relator in such cause. Notice of appeal from said judgment had been given, but before the motion was made the notice was countermanded and the appeal abandoned:—

Held, reversing 11 O. R. 633, and 14 A. R. 184, that the proceedings in the cause before the master being at an end the relator in the cause could not be prejudiced, as a suitor, by the publication complained of; and as such prejudice was the only ground on which he could institute the proceedings for contempt he had no locus standi and his application should not have been entertained. In re O'Brien, 16 S. C. R. 197.

Committal — Discharge — Consent.] — Where a judgment debtor was imprisoned under an order directing his committal for three months for a contunacious refusal to answer questions put to him upon his examination as such judgment debtor: — Held, that an application to the indulgence and discretion of the court for his discharge from custody before the expiry of the term of imprisonment could not be granted, even upon the consent of the judgment creditor upon whose motion the order for committal had been made. Jones v. Macdonald, 15 P. R. 345.

Committal - Discharge - Conditions -Inability to Obey Judgment — Penalty — Terms.]—The defendant was arrested and imprisoned by a sheriff in obedience to a writ of attachment, issued pursuant to an order of the court made at the instance of the plaintiff, on notice to and in the presence of the defendant, which adjudged him guilty of con-tempt, and ordered that the sheriff should take him into custody and commit him to the common gaol for such contempt, there to be detained and imprisoned until he should have detained and imprisoned that for this pur-purged his contempt, and that for this purpose a writ of attachment should issue. The writ commanded the sheriff to attach the de-fendant so as to have him before the chan-cery division of the high court of justice, there to answer touching his contempt, &c., and further to perform and abide such order as the court should make. The contempt consisted in disobedience of a judgment, made consisted in disonedience of a judgment, made upon consent, ordering the defendant to cause a certain mortgage to be discharged save as to the plaintiff's life estate. Upon motion for the defendant's discharge, upon the return of a habeas corpus:—Held, that the arrest and imprisonment of the defendant under the order and writ were regular and in accordance with the proper practice; it was not necessary that the conditions of the release of the defendant from custody should be expressed in the writ. Owing to the character of the judgment, the plaintiff was entitled to the order and writ, and they could no more be denied to her than could a remedy by way of fi. fa. be denied to a judgment creditor, and the matter of the defendant's continuing in confinement was not a matter resting in the discretion of any court or Judge. Much time having elapsed since the consent judgment, and much having been done under it, it could not be vacated without consent, even if a petition to vacate it had not already been presented and dismissed. Upon a petition by the defendant for leave to withdraw his consent and to vacate the judgment entered thereon, the petitioner alleged that there was a mistake in the consent; that it was intended that the mortgage should be ordered to be dis-charged as to any interest which the plaintiff might have over and above a life estate; and he contended that the plaintiff had no such interest:—Held, that the petition could be dealt with on no other grounds than any other matter of practice, although the petitioner was in custody; and that the matters alleged were not sufficient to induce the court to vacate the judgment and allow the court to vacate the judgment and allow the case to be tried out, after the withdrawal of charges of fraud against the petitioner, the death of the original plaintift, the lapse of more than four years since the judgment, and the prior refusal of two similar applications. Elsas v. Williams, 54 L. J. Ch. 330, and Peed v. Gussen, 4 Dr. & War. 199, followed. A subsequent application by the defendant for a flat or order that he be brought before the court for the purpose of moving in person for his discharge from custody was re-fused. Ford v. Nassau, 9 M. & W. 733, and Ford v. Graham, 10 C. B. 309, followed. Semble, a habeas corpus for the purpose would be refused, and a fortiori a fiat or order; for the sheriff would not be bound to obey it, and if the party were removed from prison under it, he would not in the meantime be in proper and legal custody. The de-fendant, after he had been for more than three months in gaol, applied again for an order for his release, upon the ground that, being destitute of money, and having no means of procuring or earning it, he was unable to do what was required, and had already been sufficiently punished for his of-fence:—Held, that the imprisonment suffered by the defendant was not a penalty, but the remedy to which the plaintiff was entitled for execution of her judgment, and no case had been made out entitling the defendant to be discharged. After the enactment of s. 29 of 58 Vict. c. 13 (O.), which was assented to on the 16th April, 1895, and after the defendant had been nearly five months in gaol, an order was made for his release upon the terms of his consenting to a judgment against him for the sum required to pay off the mortgage and all costs for which he was liable to the plaintiff, and upon his undertaking not to of his arrest and imprisonment: such order to be without prejudice to any proceeding or the rights of the plaintiff against any other person. Roberts v. Donovan, 16 P. R. 456.

County Court — "Process"]—An order made by the Judge of a county court in chambers for the commitment to close custody of a party to an action in the fordefault of attendance to be re-examined ment debtor, pursuant to a former order, is "process" in an action within the meaning of the exception in s. 1 of the Habeas Corpus Act, R. S. O. 1887 c. 70; and where such a party was confined under such an order, a writ of habeas corpus granted upon his complaint was quashed as having been improvidently issued. Re Anderson v. Vanstone, 16 P. R. 243.

Enforcing Decree while in Contempt.]—It would seem that a plaintiff prosecuting his decree is entitled to do so, notwithstanding he may have been placed in contempt for disobedience to an order of the court for payment of money. In such a case the defendant must obtain an order staying proceedings until the contempt is purged. Hurd v. Robertson, 1 Ch. Ch. 3.

Evidence—Pending Motion—Default.] — Under rule 578 a party may require the attendance of the opposite party for examination as a witness upon a pending motion; and the consequence of default on the part of the party to be examined is to put him in contempt. And where, upon a motion by the plaintiff to set aside or vary an order staying proceedings until he should give security for costs, he required the attendance of the defendant for examination as a witness, and the defendant attended but refused to he examined, an order suspending the former order until he should submit to be examined, was affirmed. Clark v. Campbell, 15 P. R. 328.

Evidence-Destruction of Telegrams.] -Upon the trial of a petition under the Ontario Controverted Elections Act, a telegraph operator was examined as a witness, and was asked to produce the originals of certain telegrams alleged to have been sent by the re-spondent to certain voters the day before the election. The witness stated that he had election. The witness stated that he had burnt the telegrams in question with others after being subpenned, and while the trial was actually going on, upon instructions re-ceived by telegraph from the general manager of the telegraph company in whose service he was; that these telegrams, with others, should have been destroyed before, in accordance with a standing rule of the company, but that he had neglected to do so at the proper time. Upon the return of an order nisi to commit the general manager and the operator for contempt of court, it was objected that no original subpœna had been exhibited to the operator when he was served with what purported to be a copy, and that none was produced in court; and it was contended that the making away with the messages was not a contempt unless the witness was duly subponaed to produce them :-Held, that the question was not whether there had been a proper service of a subpœna, but whether there had been an interference with evidence, there had been an interference with evidence, which but for such interference would have been before the court. The documents were in existence at the beginning of the court; during the trial they were destroyed by the deliberate action of the general manager, whereby the court was hindered in the prosecution of an investigation of a public nature; and the manager and operator were guilty of a contempt of court. Re Dwight and Mack-lam, 15 O. R. 148.

Evidence - Production of Bank Books.] -Upon a motion by the plaintiff to commit the local manager of a chartered bank, who was subported to attend before a master upon a reference, and there to produce the books of the bank and give evidence, for his contempt in not complying with the subpena: —Held, that a subpæna may properly be is-sued to compel the attendance of a witness before a master, who has jurisdiction by rule 484. 2. That it was unreasonable to expect the witness to take from the bank the books that were in use and attend during banking hours for the purpose of an examination in a matter in which he had no interest except as a witness; and it would therefore be proper for the master to take the evidence at the banking offices after banking hours. 3. That where the head office of the bank is outside of the Province, the local manager is the person in charge and custody of the books, and is the proper person to subpona to produce them, and should be ordered to do so, more especially where it does not appear that in so doing he will be contravening any rule or so doing he will be contravening any rule or regulation of the bank, Re Dwight and Mack-lam, 15 O. R. 148, followed, Crowther v. Appleby, L. R. 9 C. P. 23, and Attorney-General v. Wilson, 9 Sim, 526, distinguished. 4. That the witness's objection to produce the books, because the bank was precluded by law from exhibiting to any one or permitting any one to inspect the account of any person dealing with the bank, was untenable, the evidence sought being as to entries made of inancial transactions in which a deceased person was engaged, his representatives desiring to know what moneys the bank received and what disposition was made of them, and all parties interested being willing that the evidence should be given. Hannum v., McRae, 17 P. R. 567, 18 P. R. 186.

Examination — Refusal to Withdraw from Examiner's Room.]—A refusal by a witness, who is also a party to the suit, to comply with the ruling of an examiner in new withdrawing from the room when ordered to do so, is a contempt of court. Sadlier v. Smith, 14 C. L. J. 30.

Examination—Refusal to be Sworn.]— Where a judgment debtor attends for examination, but refuses to be sworn, he will be ordered to attend and take the oath and submit to be examined at his own expense; if he makes default, process of contempt may issue on further proof. Uhriy v. Uhrig, 15 P. R. 53.

Habeas Corpus.]—An application to commit a person for contempt in disobeying a writ of labeas corpus will not be entertained unless a notice has been served upon him informing him of the consequences of failure to obey, nor unless the writ is signed by the person awarding it, as required by s, 3 of 16 Car. 1, c, 10. In re Hallock, 15 C. L. T. Oct. N. 9.

Inability to Obey.]—Attachment against the president of a company for disobedience of a writ of mandamus was refused because it appeared that he could not, by himself and without a majority of the board of directors, perform the act required by the writ, and the other directors had not been served. Demortes we will have been served. Demortes when the country of the directors had not been served. Demortes when the directors had not been served. Demortes when the directors had not been served. Demortes we will had the W. W. Oc., 10 P. R. 82.

Attachment not sequestration is the proper remedy for disobeying a mandamus. Ib.

Interior Court.]—Every court of record has the power to punish for contempt; but if the court is one of inferior jurisdiction, the superior court may intervene and prevent any usurpation of jurisdiction by it. Where, therefore, a barrister during the sittings of the county court of Carleton used words which might have been and were by the learned Judge considered to have been used to insult the court, on being told that unless he offered some apology he would be fined, replied that he had nothing to say, and he was then adjudged guilty of contempt and fined; upon motion for a certiorari to remove the order:—Held, that there was no excess of jurisdiction, and that this court could not interfere. Exparte Lees, 24 C. P. 214.

Inferior Court.]—An inferior court cannot at common law, nor unless by express legislative enactment, commit for any contempt except for a contempt committed in the face of the court. Re Pacquette, 11 P. R. 463.

Insulting Language to Opponent—Purying Contempt.]—If a solicitor, who is also a barrister, while in a master's office use improper and insulting language towards another solicitor while acting in the conduct of proceedings under a reference, he will be held guilty of contempt of court, and upon a certiheate of the facts from the master the court may preclude the offending party from again appearing before the court, or in the several offices of the several masters of the court. Upon the making of a suitable apology and upon payment of costs the offending party may be again allowed to appear before the court as if such order had not been made. Nicholls v, McDonald, 4 L. J. 259.

Judge Acting as Persona Designata.]—A Judge of a county court, acting under the authority of 48 Viet. c. 26, s. 6 (O.), removed an assignee for creditors and substituted another assignee. The first assignee, as alleged, refused to deliver over the keys of the place of business of the insolvent to the second assignee, and the Judge made an order for the issue of a writ of attachment against the first assignee for contempt:—Held, that the Judge in acting under the statute was not exercising the powers of the county court, but an independent statutory jurisdiction as persona designata, and had therefore no power to direct the issue of a writ of attachment; and prohibition was ordered. Re Pacquette, 11 P. R. 463.

Justice of the Peace-Power to Commit for Contempt.]-A barrister and solicitor while acting as counsel for certain persons charged with a misdemeanour before a justice of the peace, holding court under the Summary Convictions Act, was arrested by a constable by the order of the justice, without any formal adjudication or warrant, excluded from the court room, and imprisoned for an alleged contempt and for disorderly conduct in court. In an action by the counsel against the justice and the constable for assault and false arrest and imprisonment :- Held, that the justice had no power summarily to punish for contempt in facie curiæ, at any rate without a formal adjudication and a warrant setting out the contempt. Armour v. Boswell, 6 O. S. 153, 352, 450, followed. 2. That he had the power to remove persons who, by disord-erly conduct, obstructed or interfered with the business of the court; but, upon the evidence, business of the court; but, upon the evidence, that the plaintiff was not guilty of such con-duct, and had not exceeded his privilege as counsel for the accused; and the proper ex-ercise of such privilege could not constitute an interruption of the proceedings so as to warrant his extrusion. If the justice issued his warrant for the commitment of the plaintiff and had stated in it sufficient grounds for his commitment, the court could not have reviewed the facts alleged therein; but, there being no warrant, the justice was but, there being no warrant, the justice was bound to establish such facts upon the trial, as would justify his course. Young v. Saylor, 23 O. R. 513, 20 A. R. 645.

Obstructing Sheriff—Summary Conviction.]—The sheriff of Oxford, in executing a writ of replevin, was obstructed by the defendants, who rescued the goods. On complaint of the sheriff's officer, they were summarily tried before a police magistrate, and fined, under 32 & 33 Vict. c. 32, by which it is declared that any person discharged or convicted in such a case shall be released from all further or other criminal proceedings for the same cause. A motion afterwards made by the plaintiff to attach the same parties for contempt was discharged, but without costs. Hayvood v. Hay, 46 U. C. R. 502.

Payment of Money.]—A solicitor in an action had obtained an order for the payment out to him of certain moneys in court, and upon such order obtained the moneys. Subsequently an order was obtained rescinding the above order and directing the solicitor to forthwith repay the said moneys into court, and to pay the costs of the application. On his non-compliance therewith a motion was made for his committal:—Held, that the order for committal should go, for what was sought by the motion was the punishment of the solicitor for his contempt in disobeying the order of the court; and that Con. Rule 867 had no application. Pritchard v. Pritchard, 18 O. R. 173, 178.

Payment of Money.]—Section 6 of R. S. O. 1887 c. 67, which abolishes process of contempt for non-payment of any sum of money payable by a judgment or order, refers to payment of money as between debtor and creditor: and defendants who are, by judgment, directed to procure the discharge of an incumbrance wrongfully placed by them on the plaintiff's lands may be attached for failure to comply with the judgment, although payment of money may become necessary to effect what is required. Male v. Bouchier, 1 Ch. Ch. 359; 2 Ch. Ch. 254, overruled. But where the judgment directs the act to be done within a limited time the defendants can not be attached unless the judgment, with the proper notice of the penalty for default, has been served upon them in time to give them a reasonable opportunity of complying with its terms before the expiration of the prescribed period. Judgment below sub nom. Roberts v. Donovan, 21 O. R. 535, affirmed on other grounds. Berry v. Donovan, 21 A. R. 14.

Practice — Eridence of Refusal to Answer, |—In support of an application for an attachment of a party for contempt in refusing to answer certain questions on an examination under R S. O. 1877 c. 50, or for his attendance to be examined at his own expense:—Semble, that the copy produced of such examination should be certified under the hand of the examiner, and that a sworn copy is not sufficient. Clark v. Allen, 43 U. C. R. 242.

Practice—Motion for Attachment—Court or Chambers.—An application to attach a person for contempt of court in publishing in a newspaper while an action is pending, comments upon the matter in question therein, is to be dealt with as a criminal matter, not affected by the practice or procedure under the consolidated rules; and should be made to the court, not to a Judge in chambers. Southwick v. Hare, 15 P. R. 239, 331.

Practice — Motion to Quash Appeal.] —
The fact that a party to an action is in contempt is no bar to his proceeding with the action in the ordinary way; the contempt is only a bar to his asking the court for an indulgence. And where the defendants received certain moneys in disobedience to an interim injunction, which was made perpetual by the judgment at the trial, a motion by the plaintiff to quash the defendants' appeal from the judgment was refused. Ferguson v. County of Eligin, 15 P. R. 399.

Practice — Security for Costs.] — Where the plaintiff after the commencement of the action, left the Province to escape arrest under orders of committal for contempt of court in other actions, he was ordered to give security for costs. Codd v. Delap, 15 P. R. 374.

Proceedings in Chancery after Common Law Reference.]—Semble, that it is a contempt of a court of common law to proceed in the court of chancery after a reference to arbitration under an order of that court, which orders the parties to perform the award, Pomeroy v. Boszell, 7 Gr. 163.

Parging Contempt. — Where a party is in prison for contempt, and has apologized, but has not paid the costs of his committal, etc., the proper order to make upon a motion for his discharge is, that he be continued in prison for his contempt for a time certain, unless the costs of the proceedings against him are sooner paid. Campbell v. Martin, 11 P. R. 509.

Receiver—Default in Payment.]—Where an order is made upon a receiver for payment of a sum of money, the court, on default, will commit for a contempt of such order without requiring any further order to be served. Mo-Intosh v. Elliott, 2 Gr. 396.

Receiver - Default in Payment.] - An attachment lies against a receiver as an officer of the court for default in compliance with an order to pay into court money found to be in his hands as receiver. The powers of the court are not invoked nor its process issued for the purpose of recovering or enforcing payment of a civil debt or claim inter partes, but for punishing its offi-cer, who has disobeyed its order; and ss. 6 and 11 of R. S. O. 1887 c. 67 are inapplicable, An understanding between the receiver and the solicitor of one of the parties ought not to be accepted as an excuse for non-compliance with the order to pay in, more especially when the authority to waive the order is not admitted, but denied. Nor can the receiver be permitted to discharge himself by setting up claims upon the money which, had they been put forward in the first instance, would probably have prevented his appointment. Where, upon an application in such a case to rescind an order for an attachment, no objections are taken to the regularity of the proceedings, the court of appeal should not be astute to discover them or permit them to be raised for the first time on the argument of the appeal. In this case, a letter written by the receiver, before the order for his attachment was made, stating that he was ready to pay the money into court as soon as a specific order for that purpose was made, was regarded as an answer to his subsequent application for relief against it, as shewing that the grounds urged upon appeal were a mere afterthought. Semble, that a specific order to pay over the balance is the proper course in the first instance. Fawkes v. Griffin, 18 P. R. 48.

Recount by County Judge—Disobedience of Injunction 1—The House of Commons of Canada alone has the right to determine all matters not relegated to the courts concerning the election of its own members, and their right to sit and vote in Parliament. The preliminary recount provided for by R. S. C. c. S. s. 64, is a delegation pro tanto of parliamentary jurisdiction, and the county court Judge, as the presiding officer, is one designated by Parliament, and is responsible to the House for right performance of his duties. On an application to commit for contempt of court a barrister who had in argument, as agent of a candidate, urged a county court Judge to disregard an injunction staying proceedings granted by the high court of justice for Ontario and to proceed with the recount, and a returning officer who had, under the direction of the county Judge, produced the ballots for the purpose of the recount, notwithstanding that the injunction prohibited him from doing so:—Held, that the plaintiff, the defended candidate, had no particular specified legal right as applicant for a recount which entitled him to claim a specified legal remedy in the courts:—Held, also, that the high court had no jurisdiction to enjoin the prosecution of proceedings connected with controverted elections of the Dominion, such as a recount under s. 64, R. S. C. c. S.—Held, also, that a county court Judge having jurisdiction, and having issued his appointment for a recount, the procuring of an injunction from the high court was an unwarrantable attempt to interfere with the due course of the election:—Held, lastly, that the injunction, being one the court had no jurisdiction to grant, was extra-judicial and void, and might properly be disobeyed. MeLod v. Noble, 28 O. R. 328.

See, also, S. C., 24 A. 3. R. 459.

Reviewing Facts.]—While a power restates in any court or Judge to commit for contempt, it is the power or privilege of such court or Judge to determine on the facts, and it does not belong to any higher tribunal to examine into the truth of the case. In re Clarke and Heermans, 7 U. C. R. 223.

Scandalous Allegations in Factum.]
The plaintiffs' factum containing reflections on the Judge in equity and the full court of New Brunswick, was ordered to be taken off the files of court as scandalous and impertinent. Vernon v. Oliver, 11 S. C. R. 156.

Service of Affidavits.]—Where a motion to commit is made, it is not necessary to serve with the notice of motion copies of the affidavits on which it is based. Hannum v. Mettac, 17 P. R. 567, 18 P. R. 185.

Setting Aside Proceedings while in Contempt. 1—A writ of attachment for contempt in not obeying the original order of a Judge to deliver up the custody of children, under C. S. U. C. c. 14, was by order of a Judge issued from the court of Queen's bench; and the husband moved ngainst it for irregularity. It was objected that while in contempt for not having surrendered himself that he might nevertheless defend himself by objections to the process if irregular. In re Allen, 31 U. C. R. 458.

Sheriff's Disobedience.]—A deputy sheriff was arrested under a writ of attachment for default in obeying an order upon his better that the deliver up to the claimant, who had shered deliver up to the claimant, who had shered deliver up to the delimant, who had shered deliver the deliver that the concemplance with the order arose from a difficulty in which he found himself by reason of the claim of another person who had succeeded in an issue about the same goods, and not from any deliberate intention to disregard the order; and his discharge was ordered. Semble, that the motion should have been for leave to administer interrogatories to or for the examination of the person committed, and for a habens corpus. In re Maitland, Gunther v. Cooke, 9 P. R. 400.

Sheriff's Disobedience.] — Attachment against sheriff for disobedience of interpleader order. See Maclean v. Anthony, Slater v. Anthony, 6 O. R. 330.

Subpoena—Substituted Service.]—A witness is not liable to attachment for disobedience to a subpena served substitutionally pursuant to an order authorizing such service. Mills v. Mercer, 15 P. R. 281. applied and followed. Barber v. Adams, 16 P. R. 156.

Time Limit—Service of Order.]—Where an order limits a time to do an act, the order must be served before the time limited has expired, otherwise the party required to do the act will not be committed for disobedience. Wagner v. Mason, 6 P. R. 187.

Winding-up Proceedings — Failure of Receiver to give Security.]—See Re Dominion Provident, Benevolent, and Endowment Association, 24 O. R. 416.

Witness — Production of Bank Rooks — Disclosure of Bank Accounts.1 — The local manager of a branch in this Province of a chartered bank, when served with a subrelease duces tecum to attend as a wirness in on the court, or a my whether the bank is a party or not, to produce the bank hooks specified in the subpena, which are in his custody or control, containing any entry relevant to the matters, in question in the action, and to give evidence as to such entries; and inconvenience to the bank is no ground for refusing to produce the books, which prima facie are to be deemed in his custody and control and their production within the scope of his authority. Re Dwight and Macklam, 15 O. R. 148, approved and followed. Evidence as to a customer's account is not privileged at common law, and s. 45 of the Bank Act is no more than a prohibition against a bank voluntarily permitting any examination of customer's accounts save by a director. Discussion of the English Bankers' Books Evidence Act, 1879, Decision below, 17 P. R. 367, affirmed. Hanmur v. McRee, 18 P. R. 185.

1. In General.

Building Contract—Specifications.]—Plans and specifications drawn for the erection of buildings—the specifications being divided under the headings, "notes," "conditions" and "specifications,"—referred to in the contract, and initialled by the parties thereto, all bound up together and forming one document, must be read together as constituting one entire contract. Ryan v. Village of Carleton Place, 31 O. IR, 639.

Conditional Promise. —After negotintions had taken place for the sale of a farm at $9.500, the following contract was sized by the purchasers:—"We agree or our farm and pay you $9.000, and if we get along fairly well, we will give you the other $500 as soon as we are able "—Held, that the provision as to the $500 was a conditional promise which might be enforced on proof that the purchasers were of ability to pay, which the evidence in this case failed to shew. Sylucster v, Murray, 26 O. R. 599, 765.

Conditional Promise—Renewed of Contract.]—A written promise by a gas company to a customer that if satisfied with him as a customer they would favourably consider any application by him to renew a subsisting contract between them on its expiration does not impose a legal obligation to grant it. Montreal Gas Company v. Vascy, [1900] A. C. 505.

Execution by One Party—Revocation.]—A contract sealed and delivered by one party, which is subject to the approval of the other party, cannot be revoked by the former before the latter has had a reasonable time within which to signify his assent. Nominal damages only allowed against the defaulting party under the circumstances set out in the report. Waterous Engine Works Co. v. Pratt, 30 O. R. 538.

Mining Speculation — Successive Options. |—T., being in Newfoundland, discovered a mine of pyrites, and on returning to Nova Scotia he proposed to A. that they should buy it on speculation. A. agreed, and advanced money towards paying T.'s expenses in going to Newfoundland to secure the title. T. made the second journey and obtained an agreement of purchase from the owner of the mine for a limited time, but failing to effect a sale within that time the agreement lapsed. It was renewed, however, some two or three times, A. continuing to advance money for expenses. Finally T. effected a sale of the mine at a profit and had the necessary transfers made for the purpose, keeping the matter of the sale secret from A. On an action by A. for his share of the profit under the original agreement:—Held, that the sale related back, as between T, and A., to the date of the first agreement, and A. could recover. Twpper v. Annand, 16 S. C. R. 718.

Offer in Form of Agreement.]—A parcel of land having been placed by the plantiff in a land agent's hands for sale, the defendant offered to purchase it, and signed a form of agreement for sale and purchase, which was taken by the agent to the plaintiff and was signed by him, but before the defendant was notified thereof he gave notice to the agent withdrawing his offer:—Held, that the instrument, though in form an agreement, was in substance a mere offer, and as defendant had withdrawn before he was notified of its acceptance, there was no completed agreement. Larkin v. Gardiner, 27 O. R. 125.

Oral Acceptance of Written Offer.]
When a proposal is made in writing by one party and accepted ad idem by the other, either verbally or by acting upon it, the contract is a written one. Ellis v. Abell, 10 A. R. 226.

Ratification by Silence.]—See Re Monteith, Merchants' Bank v. Monteith, 12 P. R. 288.

Signature by One Party.]—Where an agreement contains the names of two contracting parties, the subject matter of the contract, and the promise, it is binding on the party signing it, although not signed by the other party. Bank of British North America v. Simpson, 24 C. P. 354.

Tenders.]—The defendants acting as a committee to superintend the reception of a large number of persons, and being desirous, in addition to providing commodation for them. On the providing commodation for them, or means the constraint of the providing commodation for them. On the providing commodation for them, or means to newspaper, in which it was stated that there would be a large number of persons present at the proposed assemblage for whom meals would be required, and tenderers were invited to submit a bill of fare which they would guarantee to furnish for $1 a day, and the tenders were to state what amount would be paid for such privilege. The plaintiff was applied to personally by M., one of the committee, to know whether he would tender, and certain statements as to the number of persons to be present, were then made to him, and other particulars of defendants' requirements were given to him, his attention being called to the above advertisement, which, however, he did not see. He subsequently saw one B. by whom the tenders were to be received, who had been sent to him by M., and who, in addition to the particulars already mentioned, stated that they would guarantee 1,500 persons a day, but would require the plaintiff to provide for 2,000. The plaintiff then wrote his tender by which he was to get seventy-five cents a day for every three meal tickets, and the committee were to charge one dollar, which tender was accepted in writing. Very few persons took their meals from the plaintiff, who, in consequence, lost a large amount by the contract. At the trial, the advertisement and requirements were put in as evidence for the plaintiff, subject to objection.

plaintiff's loss from the defendants:—Held, that the tender and acceptance constituted the whole contract; and there was nothing in them to render defendants liable. Betts v. Smith, 15 O. R. 413. Reversed, 16 A. R. 421.

Written Agreement to be Executed.]—Where the plaintiff declared in assumpsit on a special agreement for leasing land for ten years, and the agreement, it appeared from the declaration, was to be reduced into writing to make it effectual, and the plaintiff assigned as a breach that the defendant did not execute the agreement although requested, the declaration was held bad on general demurrer, because it did not appear that the agreement was reduced to writing. Lee v. Purdy, 2 U. C. R. 193.

2. Letters and Telegrams.

Acceptance—Requisites of—Inspection.]
In order to convert a proposal into a promise, the acceptance must be absolute and unqualified, and should be prompt and immediately given. Fulton Bros. v. Upper Canada Furnifure Co., 9 A. R. 211.

given. Fulton Bros. v. Upper Canada Furnius Co., 9 A. R. 211.

The plaintiffs having agreed to supply the defendants with 100,000 feet of lumber subject to inspection, the defendants in a subsequent letter assumed that this was to be "American inspection," and the plaintiffs answered "we do not know anything about American inspection, but will submit to any reasonable inspection." No formal waiver of the inspection claimed by the defendants was made by them, neither was there any agreement by the plaintiffs to submit to such inspection:—Held, reversing 32 C. P. 422, that there had not been shewn "a clear accession on both sides to one and the same set of terms," and that a concluded agreement had not been made out between the parties. Ib.

Acceptance Qualified.] — On the 26th January, 1882, McI. wrote to H. as follows: "A. McI. agrees to take $35,000 for property known as McM. block. Terms—one-third cash, balance in one year at eight per cent. per annum. Open until Saturday 28th, noon." On the same day H. accepted this offer in the following terms: "I beg to accept your offer made this morning. I will accept the property on M. street, for $35,000, payable the day of the property on M. street, for $35,000, payable will please to me year at eight per cent. You will please to be a submitted by your large years and alstract submitted by your large will please to be a submitted by your large will please to be a submitted by your large will please to be a submitted by your large mortgage. It I may get contributed to the offer of sale, and therefore no complete contract of sale between the parties. McIntyre v. Hood, 9 S. C. R. 556.

Ambiguous Acceptance. —After negotiations between B., defendants' managing director, and one H., a verbal agreement was arrived at, the result of which was embodied in a letter written to H. immediately thereafter, dated 21st April, 1876, as, follows: "The following I understand to be the arrangement we have made. The company will sell you 2970 tons of scrap consisting of," &c., setting out the particular descriptions; and that H., instead of cash, was to furnish the company with 540 tons of new steel rails, stating the quality and make, &c; and concluded by requesting an acknowledgment from H. In reply to this H., and the defendant, to whom H. had assigned or was to assign the contract, on 24th April, wrote: "We have the pleasure of acknowledging the receipt of your letter of the 21st inst., containing the terms of the agreement we have made for the sale of 540 tons of new steel rails." repeating as in B.'s letter the terms of the contract, and concluding with a description of the old iron to be delivered, differing in some respects from that contained in B.'s letter, and as plaintiff contended calling for a much better quality of old iron:—Held, that the only contract, if any, on which defendants could be held liable, was that contained in the letter of the 21st April, and that the letter of the 21st April, and that the letter of the 24th must be deemed to be, as defendants understood it, and as the ambiguous manner in which it was written would convey, merely a general acceptance thereof, or else no effect could be given to it, for if looked upon as adding a new term to the contract, then there never was any completed contract the ween the parties. Bickford v. Great Western R. W. Co., 28 C. P. 516.

Condition not Assented to.]—Plaintiff telegraphed to defendant, in answer to an inquiry above price and quantity of our price and quantity of the price and quantity of the price and quantity of the price and the price and the price and defendant replied he word take it if good. Plaintiff did not state, in reply, that it was good, or offer to guarantee that it was, but two days after he again telegraphed to come and ship the butter or send $1,500, to which defendant answered, that he would try and see him the following week. After the lapse of several days, plaintiff inquired whether defendant intended taking the butter or not. In an action by plaintiff against defendant:—Held, that there was no binding contract between the parties, and a nonsuit was therefore directed. McIntosh v. Brill, 20 C. P. 423.

Correspondence not Specifically Corneted—Parol Ecidence to Explain—Sale of Checae—Inspection.]—Where a contract is to be made out from letters and telegrams, it is not essential that each should refer in terms to the preceding one, but the connection may be made out even from the subject-matter of the correspondence, so long as it appear that all relate to the same contract. On 30th August, 1879, the plaintiff telegraphed the defendant: "Quote price for August cheese, and number of boxes," to which defendant replied, "six cents." The plaintiff then telegraphed: "You offer of August cheese, and rumber of boxes," to which defendant replied, "six cents." The plaintiff then telegraphed: "You fire you will be a subject to the plaintiff of the plaintiff of the plaintiff when will you in system of the plaintiff of the

(which would be) the 24th. The defendant afterwards refused to deliver the cheese, and this action was brought for non-delivery :-Held, that from the telegrams and letters, read in the light of the parol evidence, set out in the report, the surrounding circumstances, and the position of the parties, a valid contract was established for the sale 700 boxes of cheese at six cents per lb.; that the price mentioned was not indefinite, it being shewn that cheese was always put up in boxes, of an average weight, and sold so much per lb. Held, also, that even though inspection might be a term of the contract, this was chiefly for the plaintiff's protection, and he might waive it, as he did by his letter of the 19th September. Held, also, that in the absence of any joint contract by plaintiff with the several cheese factories, his proceeding against one of them for the amount they had to deliver, and settling with it, did not preclude him from now suing defendants for damages for the residue of the cheese not delivered. Ballantyne v. Watson, 30 C. P. 529.

Direction as to Shipping.]—Defendant, living at 8t, Marys, on the 24th September, 1873, telegraphed to the plaintiff at Forest, "Can you ship three cars Treadwell wheat this month at 81.20. Reply." On the same day plaintiff answered, "Will accept your offer, three cars Treadwell on the same day plaintiff answered, "Will accept your offer, three cars Treadwell on the wenty." On the 25th defendant inclosed a shipping bill to plaintiff, asking him to ship the wheat as soon as possible. This bill was a printed form in use on the Grand Trunk railway, filled up for the three cars, addressing them to the Royal Canadian bank, Montreal. On the next day, hearing that the railway company had been inserting the words, "at owner's risk for delay" in their shipping bills, defendant telegraphed on the 26th to the plaintiff that he could not take the wheat if the plaintiff allowed these words to be put in. The agent of the railway, however, insisted on inserting these words in the bill of lading, and the plaintiff sent the wheat forward, and drew upon defendant with the bill of lading attached to the draft, which defendant refused to accept, and the wheat was sold by the bank. The plaintiff therenpon sued for goods bargained and sold:—Held, that the two telegrams of the 24th September did not form a binding contract: that the terms of the shipping note were to be considered as part of the bargain, and that the plaintiff therefore could not recover. Willing v. Currie, 36 U. C. R. 46.

Direction as to Shipping-Car-loads.] -On 5th January, the defendant, at Toronto, wrote to plaintiff at Mount Forest: "Our advises me that you have a car or two of hogs. Please state by telegraph quantity and lowest price for 200 lbs. average and upwards." It did not appear whether them It did not appear whether there was any reply to this, but on the 19th P. telegraphed plaintiff from Harriston, "Name lowest price for one or two cars hogs. Give average." To which plaintiff immediately re-plied, "Will take seven ten here, average 200," when P. telegraphed in reply, "Will accept your offer, seven ten, $7.10; order cars, coming to-day:"—Held, that there was a complete contract sufficient to satisfy the Statute of Frauds, for the words, "order cars," merely referred to the utmost number of cars, namely two, mentioned in the first telegram; and did not mean "provided you order the cars." It appeared that there were two sizes It appeared that there were two sizes of cars, one double the capacity of the other:

—Held, that it would be a good contract for at least two cars of the smaller dimensions, capable of being extended by parol evidence to cars of the larger size. Murphy v. Thompson, 28 C. P. 233.

Direction as to Shipping —Duty to Provide Cars—Usage.]—Plaintiff, through his agent at Seaforth, early in September offered defendant ninety-four cents a bushel for his wheat f. o. b. at Clinton, where defendant lived, a station on the same line of railway as Seaforth. This was not then accepted, and on the 9th September defendant offered to take the 9th September detendant offered to take that price, but plaintiff did not then want the wheat. On the 11th September plaintiff tele-graphed defendant: "Will take your wheat at ninety-four cents, f. o. b. Answer," On the same day defendant answered: "Will the same day defendant answered. Will accept your offer, ninety-four. Send direc-tions about shipping:"—Held, that the words, "Send directions about shipping," did not qualify the previous unconditional acceptance, that there was a complete contract, Held, also, that under such a contract it was the duty of the buyer to provide the cars: that the defendant in this case not having done so within a reasonable time, could not recover for non-delivery of the wheat; and that there was no evidence of a usage or custom to the contrary, even if such usage could be received to vary the contract. Semble, that the explanation of the alleged usage was that the sellers, in providing cars at Clinton under such contracts, were acting as agents for the buyers, Marshall v. Jamieson, 42 U. C. R. 115.

Effect of Offer by Letter.]—In the construction of a contract arising out of letters and telegraphic communications, the party making the proposal must be considered as renewing his offer every moment, until the time at which the answer is to be sent, and then the contract is completed by the acceptance of the offer. Thorne v. Barvick, 16 C. P. 339. Plaintiff. on the 5th September, 1865, wore Plaintiff, on the 5th September, 1865, wrote to defendants, asking their price for a certain specified quantity of leather. On the 7th defendants replied through their mianager, acknowledging the receipt of plaintiff's letter, and adding, "We are now selling our leather for 22 cents cash, at the tannery. Trusting to receive your order, I remain, &c." On the 13th, plaintiff wrote, "I am in receipt of your favour, offering, &c., at 22 cents cash. In reply, &c., I will take 460 sides No. I, overweights, though I am paying you one cent more than what I have just purchased at. I will send over Mr. P. to look out what will be most suitable for my trade." On the 15th, one of the defendants telegraphed plaintiff thus; "Wednesday next will be most convenient to attend Mr. P. at tannery!"—Held, that the whole correspondence taken together constituted a binding contract between the parties, and that the plaintiff was therefore entitled to recover against defendants, on their refusal to deliver. Ib.

Semble, that the letter and telegram, of the 13th and 15th September, respectively, would of themselves have established a binding contract between plaintiff and defendant. Ib. Quare, whether it is a misdirection to tell Quere, whether it is a misdirection to tell the jury that a telegraphic communication is to be taken most strongly against the sender.

Implied Assent—Direction as to Shipping.)—In the construction of a contract by letters it is not necessary that there should be an express assent, but the requisite assent may be collected by implication from the whole terms of the correspondence. In reply to an offer by the defendant for the sale of to an other by the derendant for the safe of certain wheat, the plaintiff telegraphed:

"Will take your five cars at 85 cents per bashel," to which the defendant replied by postal card on the 25th of July: "Send instructions for the shipment of the five cars spring." On the 26th the plaintiff mailed a postal card with instructions, but this was never received by the defendant. A shipping note mailed on the 27th however reached the defendant on Monday the 20th, but he had sold the wheat on the 27th:—Held, that the postal card sent by defendant on the 25th of July amounted to an absolute acceptance, and not merely a conditional acceptance should the defendant be satisfied with the instructions he might receive as to the mode of shipment. Held, also, that even if the plaintiff did not send instructions till the 27th, the delay would not have enabled the defendant to treat the contract as cancelled. Held, also, that the plaintiff was entitled to recover as damages the amount which he had to pay for additional carriage on wheat which he was forced to buy in a more distant market in consequence of the defendant's breach of contract. Bruce v. Tolton, 4 A. R. 144.

Intention to Accept.]—M. offered to give J. $1,500 for a certain lot of land containing fifty feet frontage. J. replied that he would take $1,750 for the fifty feet, of $1,500 for thirty-five feet of the fifty feet. Before receiving any answer, J. telegraphed to M: "Coming Monday to accept $1,500. Waiting immediate reply." M. telegraphed back: "Come at once." M. now alleged that these telegrams constituted a contract for the sale of the fifty feet to him for $1,500, and claimed specific performance:—Held, that, the telegrams did not constitute any such contract, for it was ambiguous to which proposal of $1,500 J.'s telegram referred, and moreover the words "coming to accept "did not shew an actual acceptance, but were merely an expression of intention to do something in the future. McFarren v. Johnston, 6 O. R. 161.

Inquiry on Behalf of Third Person.]
—Plaintiff telegraphed to defendant at Lockport: "A party wants to buy wheat on 'Grace Greenwood!' what is your price?" Defendant answered by telegraph, "I will sell for two dollars per bushel." Plaintiff replied, "I will take wheat on 'Grace Greenwood,' at your offer, two dollars per bushel." The wheat was not delivered:—Held, that there was a valid contract. Bundy v. Johnson, 6 C. P. 221.

Material Terms not Agreed on.]—S., a grain merchant in Truro, N. S., telegraphed to C., a grain merchant in Toronto., "Quote bottom prices 20 to 25 cars, thousand bushels each, white outs delivered, basis Truro freight, logged in our bags even four bushels each." C. replied next day, "White oats 32 half. Truro, bags two cents bushel extra." S. wired same day, "How much less can you do mixed outs for? Might work white at thirty-two, lait not any more. Answer." C. answered. "Mixed outs scarce but odd cars obtainable half cent. less. Exporters bidding 23 for white. Hichest freight, Truro freight two half over Halifax. Ofer white 32 bulk, 34 half in four bushel bags, Truro." Next day S. wired, "I confirm purchase 20,000 bushels oats, white at thirty-two; mixed at thirty-one half, bagged even four bushels in my bags. Confirm. May yet order five cars more in bulk," and he confirmed it also by letter. C. answered telegram at once, "Cannot confirm bagged. Am asked half a cent for bagging. Bags extra." S. replied, "All right: Book order. Will have to pay for bagging." C. wired same day, "Too late to-day. Made too many sales already. Will try confirm to-morrow." On receipt of this S. wrote urging action, and next day wired, "Will you confirm onts? Completed sale receipt first telegram yesterday. Expect you to ship." C. answered next day, "Market advanced two cents here since yesterday noon. Had oats under offer expecting your order until noon yesterday. When you accepted bagged parties demanded half cent for bagging. They sold before your second wire yesterday. This is why I could not confirm. Think advance too sudden to last." He wrote to S. to the same effect that day. The oats were never delivered and S. brought an action for damages:—Held, that there was no completed contract between the parties, as they did not come to an understanding in respect to some of the material terms, and S. could not recover. Cole v. Suwner, 30 S. C. R. 379.

Ofter Aided by Previous Correspondence.]—The plaintiff was the lessee of an hotel, with a license, and the owner of the furniture, &c. In April, 1876; defendant examples of plaintiff, and the owner of the furniture, &c. In April, 1876; defendant examples of plaintiff, good-will license, &c. and furniture at a valuation; but nothing was settled, and defendant left promising to write. On 2nd May, he wrote offering plaintiff 8600 for his right, &c., and to take the stuff at a valuation, and pay $150 down, or, if plaintiff greatly desired it, $200. On 4th May, he again wrote, offering $700 for the right, including license, to pay $200 down and balance in October, when certain notes he held fell due. On 8th May, plaintiff telegraphed defendant that he would take $700 for his right, defendant to pay license: "$200 down. Time for balance." On the same day plaintiff telegraphed in reply, "Yours received, will take it. Will be upnext week." The defendant refused to carry out the agreement, when plaintiff sold out his right to others for $325, and sold the furniture at a valuation:—Held, that there was contract completed and sufficient within the Statute of Frauds: that there was no uncertainty in the expression 'time for balance,' for the previous correspondence shewed that October was intended; and that the meaning of the word "stuff" might be, and was explained by the parol evidence. The plaintiff was therefore held entitled to recover $375, the difference between the $700 and the price for which he afterwards sold the goods. Johnston v. Widson, 28 C. P. 432.

Offer Limited by Previous Conversation.]—R. wrote to O. "I have considered the matter of our conversation, and offer you $800 for the property." O. replied: "I have your favour offering $800 for the property (describing it). I have concluded to accept your offer." The evidence shewed that at the prior conversation referred to in R.'s letter, R. was seeking to buy the property in question on terms of five or seven years' credit:—Held, that as the acceptance by O. was as of a cash offer, while R. did not intend to make any such offer, the contract could not be specifically enforced, the parties differing in their understanding of it. Omnium Securities Co. v. Richardson, 7 O. R. 182.

Offer "Without Prejudice."]—A letter containing an offer written "without prejudice" means "I make you an offer: if you do not accept it this letter is not to be used against me," but when the offer is accepted the privilege is removed. Omnium Securities Co., v, Richardson, 7 O. R. 182.

Qualified Acceptance-Delay.]-In an action for non-delivery of 15 bales of hops, alleged to have been sold by defendant to plaintiffs, the evidence shewed that in conversation with one of the plaintiffs about the purchase of hops, defendant said he would sell at 20 cents per pound, and would keep the sell at 20 cents per pound, and would keep the offer open for a few days. Subsequently, on the 17th of August, plaintiffs telegraphied de-fendant, "Will take 15 to 20 bales good new hops at 20 cents cash." On the 21st defendhops at 20 cents cash." On the 21st defend-ant replied by telegram, "Your offer accepted. Have booked your order for 15 bales new hops for delivery when picked," On the 16th Sep-tember defendant telegraphed, "Hops picked ready for delivery. Answer, back," On the September plaintiffs telegraphed, "Our man will be there ready to receive hops early next week," and on the 26th of September, "Ship the 15 bales hops to us Galt to-day, and draw at three days' sight;" and on the 27th, "If hops not shipped will send team and on the same day defendant replied, "Cannot have hops." A tender of the price was subsehave hops." A tender of the price was subsequently made and refused:—Held, that there was no binding contract at any time between was no offended any time between the parties, for the defendant's answer of the 21st August was not a simple acceptance of the plaintiffs' offer of the 17th, but qualified it both as to quality (by leaving out the word good) and as to time of delivery; and assuming defendant's telegram of the 16th September to be a renewal of such acceptance, the plaintiffs' subsequent telegrams did not shew an assent to it. Carter v. Bingham, 32 U. C. R. 615.

Held, also, that if there had been a previous binding contract the plaintiffs' delay, while the market was rising, in not answering the telegram of the 16th September, until the 21st, justified the jury in finding, as they did, that the plaintiffs were not ready and willing to accept and pay for the hops within a reasonable time. Ib.

Quotation of Prices — Acceptance.] — The defendant, dealers in four, wrote to the plaintiffs, bakers, that they wished to secure their patronage as customers, and quoting prices and terms for specified kinds of flour, adding a suggestion that the plaintiffs should "use the wire to order." The plaintiffs answered by telegram that they would take two cars "at your offer of yesterday." The defendants did not deliver the flour, and the plaintiffs used for damages for non-delivery: —Held, that there was no contract. Harry v. Gooderham, 31 U. C. R. 18, distinguished. Johnston Brothers v. Rogers Brothers, 30 O Telegram not Delivered—Evidence.]—On the 1st September, the plaintif, living at Kingston, received a telegram from C., at Oswego: "Will give you eighty cents for rye," and on the next day he took to defendants office the following reply: "Do accept your offer: ship to-morrow fifteen or twenty hundred." He paid defendants slxty cents, namely, thirty cents for sending the message to Oglensburg, and thirty cents from theoe to Oswego. His answer was not received by C., who swore that if it had been the bargain would have been closed at eighty cents. but that, after waiting for two or three days, the party for whom he was acting would not take it. The price fell on the 5th or 6th, and it appeared the plaintiff might before that time have communicated with C. by letter. In an action for negligence in not transmitting the message:—Held, that no damages could be recovered, for even if it had been received by C., there would have been no complete contract binding him to take the rye. Quare, whether any and what damages could otherwise have been recovered from defendants. Kinghorne v. Montreal Telegraph Co, 18 U. C. R. 60.

When a contract is attempted to be made out through telegrams, if that can be done at all, the messages signed by the parties must be produced, not the transcript taken from the wire. !b.

Time for Acceptance—Change in Price.]
The plaintiff, on the 14th June, by telegraph, asked defendants their prices for high wines and whiskey. On the 16th, defendants wrote, specifying the prices for quantities not less than a car-load, and requesting an order, which they said should receive prompt attention. On the 17th, the plaintiff telegraphed, "Send three car-loads high-wines." Defendants answered that the price had advanced, and refused to deliver at the price first named. It was admitted that the order was reasonable in point of quantity, and that defendants had the goods on hand:—Held, that there was a complete contract, and that defendants were liable for not delivering. Harty v. Gooderham, 31 U. C. R. 18.

Withdrawal of Offer—Qualification.]
—One of the plaintiffs, W., of New York, and his agent, C., of Ingersoll, saw defendant at his cheese factory at Stratford, and talked of the price of cheese. W., in leaving, said any correspondence would be through C., from whom defendant would probably hear on plaintiffs' behalf, when the cheese was ready for sale. Subsequently, the plaintiffs authorized C. to buy cheese from defendant, and on the 20th August, at 4 p.m., C. telegraphed defendant. "Name lowest price for your cheese, stating the number of boxes," which defendant received on the 21st. On the evening of the 21st, defendant telegram, "Will sell 250 cheeses 10st. telegram, which C. received at 9.25 a.m., on graph, "I accept your ward offer word of the 21st, defendant for the 21st, defendant on the same day. On the evening of the 21st, defendant for the evening of the 21st, defendant had left a reierrant to be sent to C. on receipt at the telegraph office of C's answer to defendant's telegraph office of C's telegram accepting, and C. naswered at once that the plaintiffs was sent on the 22nd to C., on the receipt of C.'s telegram accepting, and C. naswered at once that the plaintiffs wall can be defendant in his evidence stated that he did not understand that C. was plaintiffs' agent when they came to his complete contract. Webb v. Sharman, 34 U. C. R. 410.

Held, also, that the plaintiffs, though foreign principals, might sue upon the contract, there being evidence to shew that C, was authorized by them to enter into it on their behalf, and that defendant dealt with him as plaintiffs' agent. Ib.

II. CONSIDERATION AND VALIDITY.

1. In General.

Account Stated.]—In support of an account stated as set out in the declaration, the following memorandum was put in evidence: "$390—Good to T. T. to the amount of $300, to be paid to him, or his order at E. C's mill, in the township of Elma, in the county of Perth, in lumber at cash price.—Signed, J. C. sen., J. C. :"—Held, a sufficient acknowledgment of debt or liability and a promise to pay, and that it imported a sufficient consideration to sustain the account stated in the declaration. Tyke v, Cosford, 14 C. P. 14

Agreement to Saw Logs—Use of Mill.]
—The third count of a declaration stated that plaintiff being possessed of a saw mill, &c., and of a large stock of logs on hand ready to be sawed and cut up, it was agreed between plaintiff and defendants that defendants should take and convert the logs into lumber and shingles at the mill; hire and employ the men required for the purpose, and advance and pay their wages, and the expenses of converting the logs, &c., and of forwarding them to market, and of disposing of the same; and that defendants should first be repaid out of the proceeds of such sale, and the residue be expended in payment of the moneys due to the workmen at the time of agreement, and of any debts then due by plaintiff to defendants; and that for the purpose aforesaid the mill should be run under defendants' direction with the moneys supplied by them, but under plaintiff's superintendence. The count then alleged, that in pursuance of such agreement the plaintiff allowed defendants to have possession of the mill and premises and they employed the workmen to work the mill, under plaintiff's superintendence, and commenced to perform and carry out the agreement; and all things happened, &c.; yet defendants neglected and refused to hire men, pay wages, or convert the logs, &c.; but, on the contrary, dismantied the mill, and kept plaintiff out of possession, whereby, &c.;—Held, declaration good, as it shewed a sufficient consideration for the performance of defendants promise, i. e., the use of the mill, in order to saw and convert the logs. *Dunn v. Iricin, 25 C. P. 111.

Bailiff's Scizure — Indemnity.] — The plaintiff declared on a special agreement, not under seal, that in consideration that the plaintiff, then a bailiff of a division court, would do his duty as the law directed in seizing and selling crops on the farm of one K., on account of a certain judgment obtained by defendant against one M., he, defendant, then promised the plaintiff to indemnify him against all risk that might arise in relation to his doing his said duty:—Held, that sufficient consideration appeared for the promise. Robertson v. Broadfoot, 11 U. C. R. 407.

Charitable Subscription.] — Defendant with others signed the following, his subscription being $100:—"We the undersigned do hereby severally promise and agree to pay to F. W. T., Esq.. (the plaintiff.) agent of the Bank of Montreal in Goderich, the sums set opposite our respective names, for the purpose of building an Episcopal Church and rectory in the town of Goderich." The declaration thereon alleged that in consideration that W. and others would promise defendant to pay the plaintiff certain specified sums for the purpose, &c., and that plaintiff would pay $100 for the same purpose, defendant promised to pay plaintiff. $100 therefor; that W. and others did promise and pay accordingly, and the plaintiff paid $100, yet defendant had not paid. At the trial the plaintiff paid $100 was not proved:—Held, that on this ground defendant was entitled to succeed. Held, also, that the instrument was the several promissory note of each subscriber; and as it seemed that the plaintiff was entitled to recover, though not upon these pleadings and evidence, a new trial was ordered on payment of costs. Thomas v. Grace, 15 C. P. 462.

Charitable Subscription.]—Action for subscription towards rebuilding church—Sufficiency of consideration. See Berkeley Street Church v. Stevens, 37 U. C. R. 9.

Consideration not Enforceable — "Value Received."]—The words, "value received," in a stock note import prima facie a consideration; and a consideration which cannot legally be enforced may be sufficient to sustain a promise. Waddel v. McCabe, 4 O. S. 191. See S. C., 3 O. S. 502.

Continuing Debt.]—A special assumpsit to pay in grain, or in any particular manner, or at a future time, a continuing debt in respect to which the law had raised an implied assumpsit to pay in money on request, is a binding promise supported by a good consideration. Belcher v. Cook, 4 U. C. R. 401.

Debt or Assumpsit.]—To support an action of debt on a simple contract it must appear that the contract has been entered into for a consideration moving to the debtor himself, and not, as in assumpsit, for a consideration moving from the plaintiff to a third party. MeLean v. Tinsley, 7 C. C. R. 40.

Debt Discharged by Insolvency.]—An antecedent debt in respect of which an insolvent has duly received his discharge under the Insolvent Acts of 1864 and 1869, is a continuing debt in conscience, and a sufficient consideration for a new promise to pay it. Austin v. Gordon, 32 U. C. R. 621.

Delaying Judgment — Deposit of Money.]—A deposit of money by the plaintiff with a third party for a limited time, during which defendants would ascertain facts:—Held, a sufficient consideration to support a promise by defendants to delay entering a judgment and issuing execution. Recd v. Carrall, 7 C. P. 283.

Evidence — "Value Received."] — The words "value received." In an agreement to the following effect:—"I promise to pay to A. or bearer 12-5, value received, to be paid in merchantable wheat at market price, important to the state of the st

Investing Money.]—Agreement to invest money—Sufficiency of consideration. See Holmes v. Thompson, 38 U. C. R. 292.

Married Woman's Promise.]—Where a married woman procured the plaintiff to indorse for her a bill of exchange, promising to indemnify him, and after her husband's death renewed the promise:—Held, that no action would lie, though it was averred that the bill was negotiated for the defendant's own use. Lee v. Muggeridge, 5 Taunt, 36, held to be in effect overruled. Dixie v. Worthy, 11 U. C. R. 328.

Mortgage without Covenant—Forbearing to Suc.]—Where the mortgage contains only a proviso for making it void on payment of the mortgage money, and a proviso to sell and eject on default, but no covenant to pay, no liability to pay is created by mere proof of the mortgage; there must be evidence given of a loan or debt, and a mere promise to pay such money in consideration of forbearance to sue would not be binding, though, if in consideration of forbearing to sell or eject, it would be. Jackson v. Yeomans, 28 U. C. R. 307.

Mutual Obligations.]-On 27th May, 1885, certain individuals forming a cigar manufacturers' association, amongst whom was the defendant, considering themselves aggrieved by the members of the cigar makers union, who refused to lower the price of making a particular kind of cigar, entered into an agreement in writing between them-selves of the first part and S. of the second part, as follows: "Whereas, for the mutual advantage and protection of the parties hereto * * it has been agreed that the parties of the first part shall become severally bound to S. in the sum of $500 liquidated damages in case any of them shall at any time during the continuance of this agreement, either directly or indirectly, buy or sell any cigars marked * * with the labels of the cigar makers' union, or shall use * * in connection with the manufacture of cigars by him any cigar makers' union label. or shall permit * * any cigar makers' union, or any union or set of men, to compel him to hire or employ union men only, or to dismiss any employee. Now, therefore, * * the parties hereto of the first part severally covenant with S. each for himself that he will, in case he shall at any time hereafter violate any of the foregoing stipulations (setting them out) immediately pay to S. the sum of $500; the intention being that in case of a violation of all or any of the stipulations * aforesaid by any of the parties hereto

of the first part, he, the said party so offending, shall immediately forfeit and pay to S. the full sum of $500, because of his so offending, as liquidated and ascertained damages (and not as a penalty), to be by S. applied, etc. * * The intention also being that the entire sum of $500 shall be the amount of the ascertained and liquidated damages of any violation or breach whatever of any of the stipulations * * aforesaid on the part of any one of the parties of the first part." The defendant having broken the above agreement in all respects, S. brought this action against him to recover $500 as liquidated damages:—Held, that the mutual obligations imposed by the contract constituted a sufficient consideration for it:tuted a sufficient consucration by Held, also, that the agreement was not in-valid, on grounds of public policy, and as in undue restraint of trade. Collins v. Locke, 6 App. Cas. 674; and Hornby v. Close, L. R. 2 Q. B. 153, distinguished. Schrader v. Lillis, 130 D. P. 250. 10 O. R. 358.

Original Consideration Supporting Substituted Agreement. | -While an agreement is open between the parties, and the time for performance has not arrived, a new agreement may be substituted for it, postponing the period for performance, and the original consideration will be regarded as imported into such new agreement, and will support it. Hurburt v. Thomas, 3 U. C. R. 258: O'honnell v. Hugill, 11 U. C. R. 441.

Past Consideration. |—Declaration, that it was amongst other things agreed that in consideration that the plaintiff had leased from the defendant certain land at 5s, per acre, defendant promised to build a house and barn on the premises, &c.:—Held, had, as shwing no legal consideration for the agreement, the whole promise being grounded upon a past consideration. Cunningham v. Richardson, 7 U. C. R. 163.

Past Consideration.]—Declaration, that in consideration that the plaintiff, at defend-and's request, land consigned and shipped central wave for the consideration of the conside

Past Consideration. |—Declaration, that in consideration that plaintiff, at defendant's request, had sold to defendant a certain portion of plaintiff's lot, defendant then promised the plaintiff', &c. —Held, had on general denurrer, for that the executed consideration, though laid with a request, would not support the promise. Recs v. Howcoutt, 4 C. P. 284.

Past Consideration.] - Covenant by lessee against lessor on a covenant to deliver possession of the demised premises to plaintiff possession of the definition of the definition of 20th March, 1864, assigning as a breach that defendant had not delivered possession to plaintiff and had deprived him of the use of the land and premises. Defendant pleaded, on equitable grounds, that plaintiff, by an agreement in writing, executed contemporaneously with the lease, in consideration that defendant had leased to him the premises mentioned in the declaration, which were then in the possession of one J. Y., who had agreed to surrender possession by the said 20th March, agreed not to bring any claim for damages against defendant if possible to the property of the control of the cont session could not be obtained on the day, as provided in the deed, averring that on the 20th March Y. was and continued in possession of the premises, and refused to deliver them up to defendant, who consequently could not obtain possession thereof on the said day, and could not by reason thereof deliver pos-session on 20th March to plaintiff. Plaintiff new assigned that he brought his action as well for the causes attempted to be justified as for not giving possession of the premises on 21st March:—Held, on demurrer to both plea and new assignment, that the plea was bad as a legal and equitable defence for want of a good consideration, alleging as it did a past consideration as that on which the agree-ment was based. Wilson v. Keys, 15 C. P.

Prepayment of Promissory Note— Usury.]—Defendant on the 12th March, 1835, gave his promissory note to the plaintiff for £265, payable in twelve months, and immediately after gave him the following letter:— "Sir.—I have this day received from you the sum of £265, and for whi-h sum I have given my promissory note to you, payable in twelve months from this date, the original sum being £250, and six per cent, interest makes up the amount to £265; and notwithstanding that you have accepted of my promissory note at the above date, it is perfectly understood between us that should you require the money before the expiry of the said period, I shall instantly repay the whole amount:"—Held, that no action would lie on this letter, I, from the want of consideration; 2, because the contract was usurious on the face of it. Stewart v. Rennie, 5 0, S. 151.

Purchase of Plaintiff's Goods under Ageomeet to Reconvey. —The plaintiff's goods being about to be sold under a distress for rent, it was agreed between the plaintiff and defendant that if defendant would go to the sale and purchase the goods, the plaintiff would at a future day repay bim the price and interest, when defendant was to give him the goods. Defendant went to the sale and purchased the goods; but, though some months afterwards the plaintiff tendered the amount and interest, defendant did not deliver the goods:—Held, that there was no contract on which the defendant could be held liable for damages; and that the plaintiff's remedy if any, was by an action for deceit, or by a proceeding in equity to have defendant declared a trustee for him. Timmins v. Surples, 26 C. P. 49.

Relinquishing Right to Cut Timber.]

—Defendant, by deed dated 26th September, 1870, agreed to sell to the plaintiff all the merchantable timber, &c., on defendant's land which the plaintiff could make by the 1st May, 1871, any timber or logs left, standing of the defendant. The plaintiff could make by the 1st May, 1871, any timber or logs left, standing of the defendant. The plaintiff will be property quantity of timber, and drew away so of the defendant the plaintiff of the country of the terms of the ter

Rent Payable to Third Person.]—The plaintiff declared that on the 12th December, 1857, one T. mortgaged certain lands to defendant for £300, and defendant by a memorandum in writing, signed by said T. and defendant, then agreed with T. to lease said land from him (T.) for two years at £40 a year, which said rent defendant and T. then agreed should be indorsed on and taken in part payment of the mortgage so soon as the two years should have elapsed; that afterwards, in April, 1858, defendant sold and assigned said mortgage to the plaintiff, and then promised the plaintiff to pay him the said £80 at the end of said two years, but did not pay the same:—Held, on demurrer, that the declaration was insufficient, for the agreement between the defendant and plaintiff would be without consideration, as they could not without T.'s, privity compromise his right to the rent. Murdiff v. Ware, 21 U C. R. e8.

Sale of Railway Ties-Excess Credited to another Contractor.]-The defendant, having delivered ties to a railway company in excess of his contract, as he alleged arranged that such ties should be returned as received by the company on a contract with the plaintiff. In anticipation of such returns, and of payment therefor, the plaintiff paid the defendant $1,000, and brought this action to recover the same, alleging that he never was able to procure returns or payment from the railway company and that the consideration for the $1,000 had therefore It was shewn in evidence that the plaintiff had, in a claim against the railway company for 19.883 ties, included 3.260 delivered by the defendant, and that, the railway company disputing such claim, a settlement had been effected, the plaintiff accepting $1,000 in full of his claim, and giving the company a formal release of all demands :-Held, that, to the extent to which the ties were delivered by the defendant on plaintiff's account, the latter could not, in view of the circumstances, allege failure of consideration; but that he was not bound by the settlement to pay for ties that were not delivered, and therefore that the determination of the action depended upon the result of the inquiry directed as to the number of ties delivered by defendant; and an appeal from the judgment directing such inquiry was accordingly dismissed. The objection, that the Judge at the trial should have himself decided the issue as to failure of consideration, instead of directing an inquiry before the master, is not one that the court will entertain. Featherstone v. VanAllen, 12 A. R. 133.

Sale to Third Person—Promise to Pay Mortgage. —Where defendant promised that if plaintiff would sell land to Mrs. A. B., and take a mortgage from her for payment of the purchase money by a certain day, the money should be paid on that day:—Held, that assumpsit would lie against the defendant on the non-payment of the mortgage, and that a plen of Mrs. A. B.'s coverture was a bad plen. Semble, however, that such a plen would be a good defence where a promise of the defendant is set up in the declaration, as founded on a consideration of the plaintiff's forbearance to sue a married woman for a debt alleged to be previously due by her. Nichols v. Metill, 7 U. C. R. 233.

Statutory Restrictions — Evasion of Statute. —The waterworks system of the city of Windsor is, by 3T vict. e. 79 (O.), placed under the management of a board of commissioners who are authorized to collect the revenue, paying to the city any surplus over expenditure for maintenance, and to initiate works for the improvement of the system, the necessary funds in that event to be supplied by the city. The total expenditure is limited to $300,000, to be provided from time to time by by-law of the council, and not more than $20,000 to be expended in any one year without the assent of the ratepayers. A majority of the commissioners wished to make certain improvements, but on finding that the cost would be over $40,000, decided to carry out at the time only one-half the proposed scheme, and they entered into a contract with the plaintiffs to do work of the value of $20,000. No by-law had been passed by the council, and at the time more than $280,000 had been expended by the city for waterworks purposes, and the plaintiffs knew these facts. After a small portion of the work had been done a rate-payer threat-ened litigation, and the commissioners instructed their engineer not to issue a progress certificate, and the plaintiffs brought this action to recover the value of the work done:

—Held, that the commissioners had in good faith divided the work; that there was, therefore, no illegal evasion of the statutory restrictions, and that the contract was not invalid on this ground. But held also that the commissioners were mere statutory agents of the city, and that as there was no by-law of the council, and the statutory limit of expenditure was to be exceeded, the contract was not binding. McDougalt v. Windsor Water Commissioners, 27 A. R. 500.

Suretyship — Indorsement of Note — Right to Commission for Indorsing.]—M., by agreement in writing, agreed to become surely for McD. & S. by indorsing their promissory note, and McD. & S. on their part agreed to transfer expected in property of the transfer expected in property of the content of the conte

Taking Over Forfeited Contract-Failure to Obtain Restoration.]—The defendants, who had had a contract with the Government of British Columbia for the performance of a public work, but had forfeited it after a part of the work had been done, agreed with the plaintiffs that the latter should do the remainder of the work under the contract, and should receive ninety per cent. of the amount of every estimate issued till the completion of the work. The written instrument embodying the agreement referred to the contract as an existing one, but the fact was, as was fully known by all the parties, that at the time of making the agreement the contract had been forfeited, and the Government had taken possession of the works. No advantage was taken by the defendants; the plain-tiffs had examined the contract with the Government, and understood as well as the de-fendants the exact position of affairs; but all trusted to the possession of certain influence by which they hoped to get back contract, and resume work upon it :- Held, that the failure to obtain a restoration of the contract destroyed the whole consideration for each party's agreement or undertaking. Cunningham v. Dunn, 8 C. P. D. 443, applied and followed. McKenna v. McNamee, 14 A. R. 339.

Value to Promisee the Test.]—If the plaintiff part with anything that is of value to himself, though it may be of no legal value in defendant's hands, to obtain defendant's promise, that forms a valid consideration for the promise. Bradford v. O'Brien, 6 U. C. R. 417.

2. Illegality,

Agreement not to Bid.]—An agreement to pay money on a party's not bidding at a sheriff's sale, is not void as being contrary to public policy, when the party making the agreement thereby insured the withdrawal of a claim from the land. Waddel v. McCabe, 4 O. S. 191.

Bond to Bailiff Making Seizure.]—Plaintiff declared on a special agreement not under seal, that in consideration that the plaintiff, then a bailiff of a division court, would do his duty as the law directed in self-ing and selling crops on the farm of one K, on second of a certain judgment obtained by the defendant against one M, he, defendant, then promised the plaintiff to indemnify him against all risk that might arise in relation to his doing his said duty: that he did afterwards sell, and that several persons claimed the goods, sued the plaintiff, and recovered a verdict of 250, which he had been obliged to pay, yet that defendant refused to indemnify. A verdict having been found for the plaintiff—Held, on motion to arrest judgment, that the declaration sufficiently shewel that the plaintiff was required to do something which might possibly turn out to be a legal execution of the process, and therefore that the agreement was not illegal. Robertson x. Broadfoot, 11 U. C. R. 407.

Bond to Magistrate by Supposed Owner of Stolen Goods.]—A party suspected of stealing a horse, was brought up on a warrant before a magistrate, who investigated and dismissed the charge. The suspected individual pretended no right to the horse, and the magistrate, after dismissing the charge, restored the horse to its supposed owner (the prosecutor), but before doing so took a bond of indemnity:—Held, that such hond was not necessarily void, as contrary to the general policy of the law. Ballard v. Pope, 3 U. C. R. 317.

Bond to Sheriff for Salary.]—A bond given to secure a sheriff a certain fixed salary or otherwise, to be paid by his deputy, is void. Foott v. Bullock, 4 U. C. R. 480.

Boundaries — Arbitration.] — See, as to law of Quebec, McGoey v. Leamy, 27 S. C. R. 545.

Combination to Regulate Sale.]—
Several incorporated companies and individuals, engaged in the manufacture and sale of the sale of successfully working the business of salt manufacturing and to develop and extend the same, and which provided that all the parties to it should sell all salt manufactured by them through the trustees of the association, and should sell none except through the trustees:—Held, on demurrer, that this agreement was not void as contrary to public policy, or as tending to a monopoly or being in undue restraint of trade; and that it was not ultra vires of such of the contracting parties as were incorporated companies, but was such in its nature as the court would enforce. Ontario Salt Co. v. Merchants' Salt Co., 18 Gr. 540.

Composition — Secret Benefit.] — See BANKRUPTCY AND INSOLVENCY, II., ante col. 499.

Conveyance to Qualify Bail.]—Held, that a conveyance made for the purpose of enabling an irresponsible person to justify as special bail was a transaction against good conscience and morality. Langlois v. Baby, 11 Gr. 21.

Costs of Science Proceedings.]—The plaintiffs having a judgment against B. & P., agreed with defendant that if such judgment, or any portion of it, should be realized from property to be pointed out by him, he, defendant, should have one-third of the amounts of the property of the prop

Fraudulent Sale of Oats — Public Policy.] — The plaintiff purchased from an alleged company fifteen bushels of hulless alleged company affect bushess of hulless oats paying therefor $10 a bushel and receiving the company's bond to sell for him thirty bushels of oats at the same price. The company found in the defendant a purchaser of thirty bushels of oats and the plaintiff's oats were sold to him and the de-fendant's notes for $300 were transferred to the plaintiff, the defendant getting the com-pany's bond to sell sixty bushels for him at the same price. This was but one of a very large number of similar transactions and both the plaintiff and the defendant were aware of this, and that these transactions could not be carried out without some one else being induced to enter into a similar transaction by which their own would be completed and a loss probably suffered by their successors. The oats were not worth more than ordinary oats and the transactions were in fact speculative and fraudulent:—Held, that the transaction could not be dealt with as an isolated one, but that the whole scheme must be looked at; that the tendency of that scheme looked at; that the tendency of that scheme was clearly contrary to the general well-being of the public and therefore that the trans-action in question forming part of that scheme was against public policy and illegal, and that the plaintiff could not recover the amount of the notes given by the defendant. Bonisteel v. Saylor, 17 A. R. 505.

Immoral Consideration.] — In ejectment the defendant set up a claim to the land under an agreement, which was based upon the immoral consideration of his marriage with the daughter of the plaintiff's testator, who, as a superfection of the plaintiff's testator, who, as a superfection of a conveyance praying specific special properties of the conveyance of the land, or for a lien for the improvements made by him on the faith of such agreement:—Held, the agreement could not be enforced, nor could there be any lien for the improvements so made. Moon v. Clarke, 30 C. P. 417.

Immoral Consideration.]—A contract for transfer of property with intent by the transferor, and for the purpose, that it shall be applied by the transferoe to the accomplishment of an illegal or immoral purpose is void and cannot be enforced; but mere knowledge of the transferoe for the intention of the transferoe so to apply it will not void the contract unless, from the particular nature of the property, and the character and occupation of the transferoe, a just inference can be drawn that the transferor must also have so intended. Judgment below, 20 A. R. 198, sub nom. Hager v. O'Neil, affirming 21 O. R. 27, affirmed. Clark v. Hagar, 22 S. C. R. 510.

Medical Practice—Purchase by Apothecory,1—The plaintiffs, S. and W.—S. being a licensed medical practitioner, and W. an apothecary — purchase is medical and defendant's practice as a medical man at the defendant's practice as a medical man at the defendant's practice as a medical man in eight miles of that place. In an action on this agreement:—Held, that there was nothing illegal in the plaintiffs entering into partnership; that no intention could be inferred that W. should practise physic contrary to the statute; and that the fact of his not being licensed could therefore form no defence. Sucan v. Scott, 23 U. C. R. 434.

No Notice of Illegality.]—Courts of equity cannot, any more than courts of law, on the footing of want of notice of the illegality, give effect to proceedings which on principles of the common law and under Acts of Parliament, are utterly void. Gardiner v. Juson, 2 E. & A. 188.

Partial Hlegality — Stiffing Proaccution.]—The manager of the business of an insolvent firm was arrested and imprisoned on a charge of having procured the firm, while in insolvent circumstances, to transfer certain of its property to another person with intent to defraud the creditors of the firm.
After he had been released on beil an offer was made in writing by his wife and her son to the creditors of the firm to pay a certain percentage of their claims, in addition to the dividend to be paid by the estate of the firm, and to withdraw certain actions and procure the abandonment of certain claims, upon conditions set out in the offer, one of which was that any creditor accepting the offer should not thereafter, directly or indirectly, institute or be a party to any action or proceeding against the husband in respect of any matter or thing in any wise connected with the affairs or business of the firm. This offer was accepted by the plaintiff and a number of the other creditors. After it was made, the husband was discharged from custody, the informant, one of the creditors, not appearing, and no evidence being offered in support of the charge. Promissory notes were afterwards made by the wife and her son in favour of the creditors for the stipulated percentage. In an action by one of the creditors upon some of the notes:—Held, that, although not stated in express terms, one object of the defendants in making thus disthough not stated in express terms, one object of the defendants in making thus diswas to procure the stiffing of the prosecution of the charge made against the husband; it was in accordance with the concluded agrament made by the defendants with the plaintiff and the other creditors that no evidence was offered on the pending charge, which was consequently dismissed; and that the notes sued upon, having been given on the illegal agreement thus entered into, could not be enforced. Rawlings v. Coal Consumers' Association, 43 L. J. M. C. 111; Windhill Local Board of Health v. Vint, 45 Ch. D. 351; and Jones v. Merionethshire Permanent Benefit Building Society, [1891] 2 Ch. 587, followed, Held, also, that as part of the consideration for the agreement was illegal, the whole was bad. Lound v. Grimwade, 39 Ch. D. at p. 613, followed. Legyatt v. Brown, 29 O. R. 530, 30 O. R. 225.

Partial Illegality.]—The rule now is, that if the legal part of the contract in question can be severed from that which is illegal, the former shall stand good whether the illegality exist by statute or common law, Kitching v. Hicks, 6 O. R. 739.

Railway Rates.]—Lowering rates by railways. See Oven Sound Steamship Co. v. Canadian Pacific R. W. Co., 17 O. R. 691; Langdon v. Robertson, 13 O. R. 497.

Sale of Franchies.]—The declaration represented the plaintiffs and one C. to have individually associated themselves together for the purpose of procuring an Act of incorporation as a gas company, which they succeeded in obtaining; that for this and other services rendered they had acquired a claim against the company to a certain amount; that they were individually possessed of certain the company to a certain amount; that they were individually possessed of certain books, &c., belonging to themselves relating to the company, and that, at the request of the defendant and one H., they agreed to surrender and dis surrender to defendant and H.: 1. All their said claim against the company; 2. the subscription lists; 3. the books, &c., of the plaintiffs; 4. as far as they lawfully could, their right to the interest in or control over the assets of the company and the charter of incorporation; for all of which defendant and H. Doby and the subscription which defendant and H. Doby and the subscription of the company but of the mere claims of the plaintiffs therein, and their personal rights and interests in the concern. Held, also, at the trial, that evidence was admissible to shew that the subject of the sale was not the franchise itself, but a mere claim against or right in the company capable of being legally sold, and that the plaintiffs, on the evidence set out in the report, were entitled to hold their verdict. Miller v. Thompson, 15 C. P. 188; 16 C. P. 513.

Sale of Liquors for Use in County where Canada Temperance Act in Force—Repeal of Act.]—In an action for the price of liquors supplied with the knowledge that they were for use in a county in which the Canada Temperance Act was in force, part of which were sold prior to a vote for the repeal of the Act, and the remainder subsequent to a successful vote for its repeal, latt before the order-in-council bringing the latt before the order-in-council bringing the Act into force had been revoked:—Held, that the price of the liquors sold before was not, but that of those sold after the successful vote was, recoverable. Pearce v. Brooks, L. R. 1 Ex. 217, followed. Smith v. Benton, 20 O. R. 24, 217, followed. Smith v. Benton, 20 O. R.

Securing Dower.]—A. being about to sell a certain property, in order to induce his wife, B., to bar her dower, entered into an agreement under seal, that all money to be received as purchase money for the same, as well as all rents received from a certain farm of A.'s should be invested in the ionit names of A. and one C., and the income paid over by C., who was authorized to draw the same, to B. "as she may require it for the maintenance of A. and B. and their family:"—Held, a valid agreement, and not opposed to public policy. Lavin, v. Lavin, 2 O. R. 187.

Stifling Prosecution.]—In an action on a bond executed by J., to secure an indebtedness of L. to plaintiff bank the evidence shewed that L., who had married an adopted daughter of J., was agent of the bank, and having embezzled the bank funds the bond was given in consideration of an agreement not to prosecute:—Held, that the consideration for said bond was illegal and J. was not liable thereon. People's Bank of Halifax v. Johnson, 20 S. C. R. 541.

3. Restraint of Trade,

Breach - Action-Parties.]-A covenant not to engage or be interested directly or in-directly either by himself, or with, by, or through any other person or persons whomsoever, either as principal or agent, or otherwise howsoever, in the business of a baker within a fixed radius for a certain time is broken by the covenantor assisting the owners of a similar business without remuneration. One of several joint covenantees, in a covenant in restraint of trade, or an incorporated company to whom the interests of the covenantees in the business has been transferred, may, if interested in the goodwill, maintain an action for an injunction against the covenantor for breach of the covenant, notwithstanding that the other covenantees have ceased to be interested in the business. Parnell v. Dean, 31 O. R. 517.

Breach—Assignment of Interest Pendente Lite—Right to Continue Action.]—Upon the plaintiffs becoming the holders of shares in an incorporated trading company, they made an agreement with the defendant, who had formerly been the owner of these shares, by which he was employed as manager of the business, and given a right to repurchase the shares, and by which he covenanted, among other things, that if the agreement should be terminated, he would not "become connected in any way in any similar business carried on by any person or persons, corporation or corporations," in the same municipality. The agreement was terminated about six months later, and about a year after its termination the defendant's son began to carry on a similar business in the same municipality. The defendant, without having any pecuniary interest in this business, and not being employed or paid by his son, but apparently moved solely by a desire to help his son's business, introduced him to customers of the company, and solicited orders for him from them:—Held, that, in order to establish a breach of the covenant, a legal contract of some sort between the defendant and his son must be shewn, and, failing such a contract, it could not be said that the defendant was "connected in any way," with his son's business within the meaning of the covenant. Pending this action, which was brought to restrain the defendant from committing breaches of his agreement, the plaintiffs sold their shares in the company and ceased to have any interest in its affairs, but verbally agreed with the vendees to continue the action, and accordingly brought it to trial:—Held, that from the time the plaintiffs sold their shares they ceased to have any right to relief under the covenant. Semble, that the benefit of the covenant would be assignable along with the shares. Roper v. Hopkins, 29 O. R. 580.

Certainty—Reasonableness.]—The male defendant sold his business of a wholesale and retail confectioner to the plaintiff, and covenanted that he would not during a limited period, either by himself alone or jointly with or as agent for any other person, carry on or be employed in carrying on the business a retail confectioner in the same city, which should in any way interfere with the business sold to the plaintiff, and that he would, to the utmost of his power, endeavour to promote the interest of the plaintiff amongst his (the defendant's) customers. This defendant had carried on his wholesale business in the basement of his premises, and his retail business in the shop above, of which latter his wife, the other defendant, had the management. The business carried on in the shop included the sale of cakes, candy, &c., and the serving of funches. In the sale to the plaintiff were included an assignment of the lease of these premises and all the chattels and fixtures, as well those used in the serving of lunches as in other ways. Dur-ing the period limited by the covenant, and ing the period limited by the covenant, and while the plaintiff was carrying on the business in the same way as the male defendant had previously carried it on and upon the same premises, the defendants began a precisely similar business in a shop in the same street, the shop being lensed and the retail business carried on in the name of the wife, and that branch of the business conducted by her as theretofore, while the husband carried on the wholesale business in the basement. The jury found that the retail business was in fact that of the husband: — Held, that the serving of lunches was part of the business of a retail confectioner according to the meaning a retail confectioner according to the meaning to be ascribed to those words in the cove-nant. 2. That the covenant was reasonable and sufficiently certain to be enforced by the court. 3. That general loss of custom after the commencement of the new business by the the commencement of the new business by the defendants could be shewn by the plaintiff as evidence to go to the jury of damages resulting to him from such business. Ratcliff v. Evans, [1892] 2 Q. B. 524, applied, and followed. 4. That damages were properly assessed up to the date of the judgment. Stalker v. Dunwich, 15 O. R. 342, followed. Turner v. Burns, 24 O. R. 28.

Consideration.]—The plaintiff sued defendant on a bond conditioned not to commence business as an hotelkeeper within three years in a certain township. At the assizes the cause and all matters in difference between the parties in connection with it were referred. A verdict was taken for the penalty, subject to a reference. An award having been made in favour of the plaintiff, defendant moved to arrest judgment, on the ground that the condition was void, being in restraint of trade. The application was refused, on the grounds that the arbitrator might for all that appeared have decided the point now raised, as he had power to do, or the award might have been upon some other matter connected with the contract; but held, that if the motion had been after verdict, without a reference, defendant must have succeeded, for the contract having been in restraint of trade it was necessary to shew a consideration, and none appeared in the declaration. Dawes v. Wilkinson, 19 U. C. R. 604.

General Restraint for Ten Years.]—
The defendant sold to the plaintiff the goodwill of the business of an innkeeper which he was carrying on in London, in this Province:—Held, that a covenant in the agreement that the vendor should pay $4,000 in the event of his carrying on business as an innkeeper within ten years, was void as an undue restraint of trade. Mossoy v. Masson, 18 Gr. 453. See S. C., 16 Gr. 302; 17 Gr.

Intending Shareholders — Right of Shareholders to Enforce after Incorporation.] A mutual covenant with each other by persons engaged in the same trade throughout Canada, not to carry on a certain branch of that trade for twenty years, or for such shorter time as an incorporated company which they were then uniting to form for the purpose of carrying on that particular branch of their common trade, should continue to carry it on, is good. Acting as agent or traveller for a firm dealing in clear plate glass in the Dominion of Canada is a breach of the covenant. Breach of such a covenant may be restrained by injunction in an action may be restrained by injunction in a action by one or more of the other parties thereto though no actual damage is proved to have resulted from the breach. An agreement by a company, incorporated under the Dominion Joint Stock Companies Letters Patent Act for the purpose of manufacturing, importing and dealing generally in mouldings, picture frames, mirrors, plate glass, sheet glass, &c., &c., for the sale of its stock of plate glass to a company to be formed with a covenant not to compete in the plate glass business with that company for twenty years, is valid and is not an ultra vires abandonment of its powers. One party to an agreement made between a number of dealers in plate glass for the formation of a company to take plate glass business of each of them, each dealer covenanting not to compete with the new company when formed, may be re-strained by the other parties to it from breach of the covenant, even after the formation of the new company, the parties complaining being at the time of the action shareholders in that company. McCausland v. Hill, 23 A.

Limited Time—Reasonableness—Public Policy, i—On the purchase of a manufacturing business by the plaintiff from the defendants, the latter entered into a covenant with the plaintiff which was part of the terms of sale, that they would not engage directly or indirectly in the manufacture or sale of "bamboo ware and fancy furniture, either as principal, agent, or employee, at any place in the Dominion of Canada for the term of ten years from the date hereof. This clause does not prevent" (defendants) "from engaging in the retail business of furniture and hambon ware selling. It covers wholesale or jobbing business: "—Held, that as the restraint of trade was partial only, being confined to manufacturing certain articles and to selling them by wholesale or by jobbing and for a limited time, and as there was no evidence on which it could be held to be unreasonable, and the interests of the public were not interfered with, the agreement was not contrary to public policy. Cook v. Shaue, 25 O. R. 124.

Purchasing Exclusively from Named Person. |-On sale of goods upon credit to a trader, the purchaser covenanted by deed with one E. F., a clerk of the vendors, to buy all his goods from them, and that E. F. should be at liberty, at any time while such business was carried on, to enter into the place of business and take possession of the goods and premises, and wind up the affairs. The business was carried on for two years and a half, during which time the vendors delivered goods to a large amount under the agreement :-Held, that the covenant not to purchase elsewhere was not binding on the purchaser; but that as he had received goods under the agreement, there was a sufficient consideration for the covenant, so as to entitle them to the remedies given by the deed; and that this was not such an agreement as required to be registered under the Chattel Mortgage Act, to enable the vendors to hold as against subsequent purchasers with notice. Fisken v. Rutherford, 8 Gr. 9.

Reference to Take Account.]-E., carrying on the trade or calling of a dealer in pictures and photographic business, sold out such business to W., and by the agreement covenanted "not to open or start a retail and photographic business of a similar character in the city of Toronto for five years. subsequent agreement the first was modified, subsequent agreement the first was not been so as to allow E. to sell in any manner to cersons residing out of Toronto, and to sell by retail in Toronto, on allowing W. a percentage on the prices realized. W. filed a bill alleging that E. had, prior to such second agreement, sold goods in contravention of the first agreement, and had subsequently sold to a large ment, and had subsequently sold to a large emount, and prayed an account and payment of his percentage. The court being of opinion that such second agreement had been executed for a valuable consideration, granted the de-cree as asked, and directed the account to be taken by the master, although the answer professed to state the actual amount of sales, and on the motion for decree the answer had been read as evidence by the plaintiff. Williamson v. Ewing, 27 Gr. 596,

Selling Agent.]—D., on entering the employment of W. as agent in the vending of tens and coffees, covenanted with W. not to engage in the sale or delivery of tens or coffees in the city of Toronto, either for himself or a gagnt for any other person, for at least two years after leaving W.'s employ. W. moved for an injunction to restrain D., who had left her employ, from violating the above covenant:—Held, that the covenant was binding upon D., notwithstanding that the consideration for it might have been inadequate:—Held, also, that the above covenant was not invalid on grounds of public policy. A covenant in restraint of trade is not invalid unless the restraint is larger and wider than the protection of the covenantee can possibly require. Wicher v. Darling, 9 O. R. 311.

4. Statute of Frauds.

General Rule.]—The position of a defendant resisting a claim is more favourably considered than that of a plaintiff endeavouring to enforce an agreement, the terms of which may not have been defined so as to clearly satisfy the requirements of the Statute of Frauds. Lawrence v. Errington, 21 Gr. 261.

Agreement for Settlement.]—Quere, whether a letter written by a third person, and signed by him, addressed to the intended wife, and delivered to her by the intended husband, with a knowledge on his part of its contents, evidencing an agreement for a settlement by him, would be a sufficient writing signed by the agent of the party to be charged, Gdllespie v. Grover, 3 Gr. 558.

Ante-Nuptial Contract—Signature by Notaries.]—An ante-nuptial contract not signed by the parties but by notaries in their own names, they having full authority to do so, was held sufficiently signed within the Statute of Frauds. Taillifer v. Taillifer, 21 O. R. 337.

Auction Sale — Subsequent Correspondence, 1—Mbree property was sold by auction, the particulars and conditions of sale not disclosing the vendor's name, and the contract was duly signed by the purchaser, but not by the vendor or the auctioneer acting in the matter of sale, and subsequently, in consequence of delays on the part of the purchaser, the attorneys for the vendor (one of whom was the vendor himself) wrote in the course of a correspondence which ensued: "Re S.'s purchase, we would like to close this." And referring to certain representations made in the advertisements of the sale: "They were not made part of the contract of sale, "Have the goodness to let us know whether the vendee will pay cash or give mortgage. If the latter we will prepare it at once and send you draft for approval: and on a subsequent occasion: "Re S.'s purchase, Herewith as the contract of the vender himself wrote "I shall take immediate steps to enforce the contract."—Held, affirming S A. R. 161, that the conditions of sale together with the correspondence were sufficient to constitute a complete and perfect contract between the vendor and purchaser within the Statute of Frauds. O'Dondove v. Stammers, 11 S. C. R. 358

Board for Life.]—An agreement to provide the plaintiff with board and lodging, during the term of his natural life:—Held, not within the statute, as it would not necessarily endure beyond a year. Stater v. Smith, 10 U. C. R. 630.

Book Canvasser—Territory Taking More Than a Year to Cover.]—The plaintiff entered into a verbal agreement with the defendants to canvass Canada for subscribers to a certain book, and on completing Canada to go to Liverpool and canvass for subscribers in England: the plaintiff to be paid 83 for each subscriber he should obtain in Canada, and 88 in England. In an action for terminating this agreement it was stated by the plaintiff in his evidence that the agreement as to Candana and England was all one; and that it would take from eight to twelve months to complete Canada and over two years to do the provide in the control of the control of the parties and apparent from the performed within a year, that being the intention of the parties and apparent from the nature of the employment; and that the plaintiff therefore could not recover;—Held, also, that the agreement was only to pay the plaintiff for every subscriber he should obtain, either party having the right to terminate the engagement, and the only claim the plaintiff could have against the defendants was for subscribers obtained before his dismissal, which the evidence here shewed that the plaintiff had been paid for. Davies v. Appleton, 25 C. P. 376.

Consideration Executed.]—The court will enforce a verbal agreement, although it is to do an act which is not to be performed within a year from the time of making the agreement, where the consideration therefor has been executed. Halleran v. Moon, 28 Gr. 319.

Delivery — Acceptance.]—The defendants agreed orally to buy from the plaintiff ten thousand bushels of No. 2 red wheat, at $1.12 per bushel, to be delivered f. o. b. a vessel to be provided by the defendants, who were to pay freight and insurance, and delivery was to be made to them on payment of a sight draft for the price. The captain of the vessel gave the plaintiff a bill of lading describing him as the consignor, and in it, under the heading "consignees," was written "Order of Bank of Montreal, advise Melady & McNairn" (defendants). A draft for the price, drawn by the plaintiff upon the defendants, was attached to the bill of lading and discounted, but the defendants refused to accept this draft:—Held, that there was, upon these facts, no final appropriation of the wheat or delivery thereof to the defendants, and that the property therein would not pass to them until acceptance of the draft, or payment or tender of the price:—Held, also, that neither the shipment in the vessel provided by the defendants, nor that taking by the defendants of samples of the cargo for inspection, constituted an acceptance within the statute. Scott v. Medaly, 27 A. R. 183.

Guarantee,]—As a written memorandum of an oral guarantee is required only for the purpose of evidence, a letter or other writing subsequently given by the guarantor sufficiently shewing the terms of his undertaking will suffice. A letter shewing the terms, written by the guarantor partly on his own behalf and partly on behalf of a firm of debtors, and signed by him in the firm name and in his own name for them per proc., is sufficient to bind him. Thomson v. Eede. 22 A. R. 105.

Guarantee of Quality for Five Years.]

Guarantee of Quality for Five Years.]

—Plaintiff agreed with defendant for the purchase of a piano at a certain price, and upon certain terms of payment, defendant agreeing to guarantee that the instrument was then free from defect, and should so continue for five years; and that in case of its becoming defective within that period defendant would, upon plaintiff's returning it within that time, refund the purchase money:—Held, a contract not to be performed within a year. Nicholla v. Nordheimer, 22 C. P. 48.

Hiring for Year from Future Date.]

—In an action on a verbal agreement made in November, for the hiring of plaintiff by defendant for a year from the 1st December then next:—Held, that there could be no recovery for wrongful dismissal, the agreement being one not to be performed within a year; and that there being an express agreement in fact, no other agreement for a monthly hiring could be implied. Harper v. Davies, 45 U. C. R. 442.

Hiring for Year or More.]—Held, that a contract for hiring for a year or more, defeasible within the year, is within is, 4 of the Statute of Frauds. The agreement, as alleged by the plaintiff, was made in February, 1880, whereby the defendant was to pay him for his services while he should remain in defendant's employment, at the rate of $500 a year, for one year, and thereafter at such salary as might be agreed upon; the plaintiff to enter upon his duties, and his salary to commence, on the 3rd March then next, and defendant was to be at liberty to determine the employment at the expiration of a month named, otherwise the agreement to remain in full force for a year, and for such longer period as might be agreed upon:—Held, clearly within the statute. Booth v. Prittie, 6 A. R. 680.

Marriage Engagement for a Year,]— To an action for a breach of promise of marriage, the plaintiff swore that "it was to be a year's engagement, and we were to be married in the following August?"—Held, that this was not an agreement not to be performed within a year and was, therefore, not void under the statute, although not in writing. Smith v. Janieson, 17 O. R. 62.

Memorandum in Writing.] — An acceptance in writing by the owner of land of a written offer therefor addressed to him but unsigned by any purchaser and without any purchaser being named or in any way described therein, is not a sufficient memorandum to satisfy the statute, and does not become binding upon him when a purchaser is subsequently found who signs the offer. McIntosh v. Maynihan, 18 A. R. 231.

Memorandum Repudiating Contract.)—A letter referring to the terms of a contract made by an agent, but denying the authority of the agent to make it, is a sufficient memorandum within the Statute of Frauds. Haubner v. Martin, 22 A. R. 468, 26 S. C. R. 142.

Mine—Agreement to Transfer Portion of Proceeds of Nale.]—An agreement by the owner of an interest in a gold mine to transfer to another, in consideration of services performed in working the mine, a portion of such owner's share in the proceeds when it was sold, is not a contract for sale of an interest in land within the Statute of Frauds. Staart v. Mott, 23 S. C. R. 384.

Partnership.]—A partnership may be formed by a parol agreement notwithstanding it is to deal in land, the Statute of Frauds not applying to such a case. Archibald v. McNerhanic, 29 S. C. R. 564.

Part Performance.] — Held, that the staying of an action relating to the land in question, was a sufficient part performance to take the case out of the Statute of Frauds. Coates v. Coates, 14 O. R. 195.

Performance on One Side within the Year.) — M. being owner of the equity of redemption, verbally assented to an arrange-ment that "In consideration of the said M. ment that I to consideration of the same at having promised to give his personal covenant for the payment of the said balance of £300 (due on the mortgage), in three years from 10th February last, with interest to be paid half yearly as a collateral security, I will procure him an extension of time, as aforesaid, on receiving said covenant from him," which was embodied in a memorandum signed by the solicitor of the mortgagee, but without his authority. Proceedings were accordingly delayed on the mortgage for three years, on the faith of this promise; and the mortgagee subsequently instituted proceedings in this court to obtain a sale of the premises, and that M. might be ordered to pay any deficiency arising on such sale. Quare, as part of the agreement (that as to giving the covenant) was to be performed within a year, but the mortgagee's part embraced a period of three years, (as did also M.'s in regard to the time for payment), whether the Statute of Frauds would stand in the way of the plaintiff's recovery. Had M. performed his part by de-livering his covenant, the mortgagee could have been compelled to execute his. Christie v. Dowker, 10 Gr. 199.

Performance on One Side within the Year. I—Plaintiff contracted with defendant for the sale to defendant of the goodwill of a business. Plaintiff's part of the agreement was to be performed within a year, though the execution of defendant's portion was to extend beyond that limit. In an action for non-payment of the purchase money:—Held, that the Statute of Frauds did not apply. Christic v. Clark, 27 U. C. R. 21; S. U., 16 C. P. 544.

Performance on One Side within the Year. |—The Statute of Frauds does not apply to a contract which has been entirely executed on one side within the year from the making so as to prevent an action being brought for the non-performance on the other side. And, therefore, where the plaintiff delivered sheep to the defendant within a year from the making of a verbal contract with the defendant under which the latter was to deliver double the number to the plaintiff at the expiration of three years:—Held, that the contract was not within the statute. Trimble v. Lanktree, 25 O. R. 109.

Performance Optional.]—Plaintiff contracted to clear 20 acres of defendant's land, receiving for his labour all the wood cut there, and he was to be allowed 14 months to perform his contract: — Held, not within the statute, as it might be performed within the year. Hamilton v. McDonell, 5 O. S. 720.

Printing Debentures — Work, Labour, and Materials. |— A contract to print debentures in a special form on paper supplied by the printers is a contract for the sale of goods and chattles, and not a contract for work, labour and materials, and is within the Statute of Frauds. Canada Bank Note Co. v. Toronto R. W. Co., 22 A. R. 462.

Sale by Sheriff Acting as Assignee for the Benent of Creditors.] — See Mc-Intyre v. Faubert, 26 O. R. 427.

Service for a Year from Future Date.] — The plaintiff, on the 29th July.

agreed with defendants verbally to enter their service as book-keeper on the 1st September following, for a year from that day:—Held, a contract not to be performed within a year from the making thereof. Dickson v. Jacques, 31 U. C. R. 141.

Special Facts.]—Semble, that under the facts of this case the objection that the agreement upon which the plaintiff claimed a right to the use of defendant's cattle was not to be performed within a year, was not tenable. Seculer v. Huley, S U. C. R. 255.

Timber-License to Cut.]-As a general rule a contract for the sale of standing timber which is not to be severed immediately is a sale of an interest in land. Upon a parol sale of timber for valuable consideration, with a parol license to enter upon the land during such time as should be necessary for the purpose of cutting and removing the timber, the defendant during the period allowed by the contract continued to cut and remove, notwithstanding he was notified not to do so :-Held, in an action of trespass and for damages for timber cut after the notice, that he was at liberty to shew the existence of the parol agreement in justification of what he had done, and under which no right of revocation existed, and to shew the part performance as an answer to the objection founded on the Statute of Frauds. Handy v. Car-ruthers, 25 O. R. 279.

Trust.]—L. signed a document by which he agreed to sell certain property to W. for $42,500, and W. signed an agreement to purchase the same. The same is property cannot signed by We stated that the property cannot signed by We stated that the property cannot signed by We stated that the property cannot be purchased with the seception the papers were, in black that the seception the papers were, including the state clause "terms and deeds, etc., to be arranged by the 1st May next." On the day that these papers were signed L., on request of W.'s solicitor to have the terms of sails put in writing, added to the one signed by him the following: "Terms, $500 cash this day, $500 on delivery of the deed of the Parker property, $800 with interest every three months until the six thousand five hundred dollars are paid, when the deed of the entire property will be executed." The property mentioned in these documents was, with other property of L., mortzaged for $36,000. W. paid two sums of $500 and demanded a deed of the Parker property, which was refused. In an action against L. for the specific performance of the above agreement, the defendant set up a verbal agreement that before a deed was given the other property of L. was to be released from the mortgage, and also pleaded the Statute of Frauds:—Held, that there was no completed agreement in writing to satisfy the Statute of Frauds. Williston v. Lausson, 19

Trust—Deed in Name of Third Party.]—
M. agreed by written contract to give to B. an absolute deed of property as security for the time the loan was to run. By B.'s directions the deed was made out in his daughter's name. The daughter having claimed that she purchased the property absolutely, and for her own benefit, an action was brought by M. against her and B. for specific performance of the contract with B. and for a declaration that the daughter was a trustee only subject to repayment of the loan. The defendants denied the allegation of collusion and conspiracy made in the statement of claim and pleaded the Statute of Frauds:—Held, that the evidence shewed that the daughter was aware of the agreement made with B, and the Statute of Frauds did not prevent parol evidence being given of such agreement, Barton v. McMillan, 20 S. C. R. 404.

III. Construction.

1. In General.

Advertisement-Price.]-S. & C., the proprietors of a weekly newspaper, seeing in another paper an advertisement of the defendanother paper an advertisement of the defend-ants inviting subscriptions for stock, and stat-ing that the share lists would close on the 10th December, 1874, on the 3rd November telegraphed H., the defendants' managing dir-ector, to ask if they might insert it in their paper, to which H. replied, "Yes. In the meantime send terms, must be low." The advertisement accordingly appeared in the paper on the 5th November, and was continued till 21st January, 1875, with an alteration made on the 26th November by B., defendants' agent at Toronto, being twelve insertions, for which plaintiff claimed at the rate of ten cents which paintiff claimed at the rate of well star-per line, or $22 for each insertion. On the 10th December S. & C. drew on defendants for $160, the sum then due at that rate, at 30 days, which was paid; and this action was brought to recover the balance, $224. There was no express contract to pay at such rate, but S. said that, in answer to H.'s telegram, he wrote to him that their charge was ten cents a line; and a notice to that effect also appeared in the paper. H. denied the receipt of the letter. In an action by plaintiff, as assignee of S. & C.:—Held, that the plaintiff could not recover, for that, even if the whole twelve insertions were allowed. the amount paid was, upon the evidence set out in the case, a fair remuneration therefor. Sinclair v. Ottawa Iron and Steel Mfg. Co., 27 C. P. 410.

Agreement—Subsequent Deed—Inconsistent Provisions.]—C., by agreement of 6th April, 1891, agreed to sell to the Eric County Gas Co. all his gas grants, leases and franchises, the company agreeing, among other things, to 'reserve gas enough to supply the plant now operated or to be operated by them on said property. On 20th April a deed was executed and delivered to the company transferred by them on said agreement but containing the second of the said agreement but containing the second of the said agreement but containing the said lagreement but containing the said lagreement of the said la

Agreement to Discontinue Business. —B., a manufacturer of glassware, entered into a contract with two companies in the same trade by which, in consideration of certain quarterly payments, he agreed to discontinue his business for five years. The contract provided that if at any time during the five years any furnace should be started by other parties for the said companies could, if it wished, by written notice to B., terminate the agreement "as on the first day on which glass has been made by the said furnace" and the payments to B. should then cease unless he could shew "that said furnace or furnaces at the time said notice was given could not have a production of more than $100 per day?" — Held, that under this agreement B. was only required to shew that any furnace so started did not have an actual output worth more than $100 per day or an average for a reasonable period and that the words "could not have a production of more than $100 per day" did not mean mere capacity to produce that quantity whether it was actually produced or not. North American Glass Co. v. Barsalou, 24 S. C. R. 490.

Agreement to Supply Goods — Property in Goods Supplied.]—By an agreement between H., of the one part, and W. and wife of the other, the latter were to provide and furnish a shop and H. to supply stock and replenish same when necessary; W. was to replenish same when necessary; W. was to devote his whole time to the business; W and wife were to make monthly returns of sales and cash balances, quarterly returns of stock, etc., on hand, and to remit weekly proceeds of sales with certain deductions. H. had a right at any time to examine the books and have an account of the stock, &c .: the net profits were to be shared between th parties : the agreement could be determined at any time by H. or by W. and wife on a month's notice:—Held, that the goods supplied by H. under this agreement as the stock of the business were not sold to W. and wife but remained the property of H. until sold in the ordinary course; such goods, therefore were not liable to seizure under execution against H. at the suit of a creditor. Ames-Ames-Holden Co. v. Hatfield, 29 S. C. R. 95.

Building Contract. — The contract, based upon the separate tenders by the different tradesmen signing it, was as follows: "We the undersigned hereby agree to build, erect, complete, and finish the dwelling house, &c., mentioned in the foregoing specifications, for the respective sums hereinafter specified, by the time mentioned in the condition of said specifications, and according to the following trades." The trades with the contract price for each were then set out, a space being left after each for the respective contractors to sign their names; and the plaintiff thus contracted for the carpenter and joiner's work: — Held, a several contract between each tradesman and the defendant, not a joint contract with all. Lee v. Bothwell, 24 C. P. 190.

Building Contract—Dismissal of Contractor—Right to Remove Material and Plant, 1—By a contract for the erection of certain buildings, the contractor was to supply all labour, material, apparatus, scaffolding, utensis and cartage of every description needful for the performance of the work; and was to deliver up to the owner the work in proper repair, &c., when complete, and was not to sub-let any part of the works without the architect's consent; and all work and material as delivered on the premises were to form part of the works and be considered the property of the owner, and not to be removed without his consent, the contractor to have the right to remove all surplus material after he had completed the works. Without the architect's consent the contractor entered into a sub-contract with the plaintiff for the excavation, brick, and masonry work, and the plaintiff commenced work under his sub-contract and continued to work for some time when he was ordered to discontinue by the architect:—Held, that the plaintiff was entilled to remove from the premises (premises meaning what the parties treated as such), material placed there after he was directed to discontinue, and also material delivered off the premises, as well as plant constituting the fixtures and the apparatus, &c., necessary for carrying on his business, or to recover from the owner the value of any material placed there before he was ordered to discontinue; and that no demand was necessary, it appearing that the owner was using the same, and thus committing an act of conversion. Asheld v. Edgell, 21 O. R. 195.

Building Hoist.]—On a contract to put up hoists to be "capable of raising a weight of 2,000 lbs, without risk:"—Held, that the contract required the hoists to be capable of working in the ordinary way with a weight of 2,000 lbs. Hamilton v. Myles, 23 C. P. 293.

But see S. C., in appeal, 24 C. P. 309.

Change in Plans and Specifications. The appellants entered into a contract with Dominion Government to construct a bridge for a specified sum. After the materials necessary for its construction according to the original plans and specifications had been procured, the Government altered the plans so much that an entirely new and more expensive structure became necessary. The appellants were then given new plans and specifications by the chief engineer of public works, the proper officer of the Government in that behalf, and were directed by him to build the bridge upon the altered plans, being at the same time informed that the prices for the work would be subsequently ascertained. They thereupon proceeded with the construction of the bridge. Under the provisions of the writ-ten contract, the chief engineer was required to make out and certify the final estimate of the contractors in respect of the work done upon the bridge; and upon the completion of the bridge, a final estimate was so made and certified, whereby the appellants were declared to be entitled to a certain amount. The appellants, however, claimed to be entitled to a much larger amount, and their claim was ultimately referred by the Government to the offimatery referred by the Government to the offi-cial arbitrators, who awarded them a sum slightly in excess of that certified to be due in the final estimate. On appeal from this award:—Held, (1) that s, 7 of 31 Vict. c. 12, which provides "that no deeds, contracts, documents or writings shall be deemed to be binding upon the department [of public binding upon the department for public works], or shall be held to be acts of the minister [of public works] unless signed and sealed by him or his deputy, and countersigned by the secretary," only refers to executory contracts, and does not affect the right of a party to recover for goods sold and delivered, or for work done and materials provided to and for another party and accepted by him.

(2) That the Crown, having referred the claim to arbitration, having raised no legal objection to the investigation of the claim before the arbitrators, and not having crossappealed from their award, must be assumed to have waived all right to object to the validity of the second contract put forward by the claimants. Starrs v. The Queen, 1 Ex. C. H. 301.

Charter of Tug—Demise or Hiring.] —
The defendant hired a tug from the plaintiff by a contract signed by both parties in these words, "I agree to charter tug " to tow two barges from " for which I agree to pay " owner to supply engineer and captain " . ". The tug on the voyage was run on a rock through the negligence of the captain:—Held, not a demise of the tug, but a contract of hiring, and that the defendant was not liable for the damage. Thompson v. Foucher, 23 O. R. 644.

Construction of a Public Work.]-It was a term in suppliant's contract with the Crown for the construction of a public work that certain timber required in such construction should be treated in a special man-ner, to the satisfaction of the proper officer in that behalf of the department of railways and canals. By another term of the contract it was declared that the express covenants and agreements contained therein should be the only ones upon which any rights against the Crown should be founded by the suppli-ant. The suppliant, immediately after enterant. The suppliant, immediately after entring upon the execution of his contract, notified A, the proper officer of the department in that behalf, that he intended to procure the timber at a certain place and have it treated there in the manner specified before shipment. A, approved of the suppliant's proposal, and promised to appoint a suitable person to inspect the timber at such place. The inspector was not appointed until a considerable time afterwards, and by reason of such delay the suppliant had to pay a higher rate of freight on the timber than he otherwise would have had to pay, and was compelled to carry on his work in more unfavourable weather and at greater cost, for which he claimed damages:—Held, that the Crown was not bound under the contract to have the inspection made at any particular place; and that in view of s. 98 of the Government Railways Act, 1881, and the express terms of the contract, A. had no power to vary or add to its terms, or to bind the Crown by any new promise. The suppliant's contract contained the following clause:—"The contractor shall not have or make any claim or demand, or bring any action, or suit, or petition against Her Majesty for any damage which he may sustain by reason of any delay in the progress of the work arising from the acts of any of Her Majesty's agents; and it is agreed that, in the event of any such delay, the contractor shall have such further time for the completion of the work as may be fixed in that be-half by the minister:"—Held, that the clause covered delay by the Government's engineer in causing an inspection to be made of certain material whereby the suppliant suffered loss. Mayes v. The Queen, 2 Ex. C. R. 403, 23 S. C. R. 454.

Cutting Ice.]—An agreement by which M. undertook to cut and store ice, provided that the ice houses and all implements were to be the property of P., who, after completion of the contract, was to convey same to M., and that M. was to deliver said ice to vessels to be sent by P., who was to be obliged to accept only good merchantable ice so delivered and stored:—Held, that the property in the ice was in M.: that it was the buildings and implements only which were to be the property of P. under the agreement, and not the ice, which was at M. 's risk and shipped by him. North British and Mercantile Insurance Co. v. McLellan, 21 S. C. R. 288.

Delivery of Lumber when Able.]—An agreement that A. shall saw certain logs, and deliver the lumber at his mill to B. as soon as he is able, such sawing to be paid for immediately on delivery, is not void for uncertainty. O'Donnell v. Hugill, 11 U. C. R. 441.

Employers' Liability Policy—Defence of Actions.]—In an action upon an employer's liability policy, whereby the defendants agreed to pay the plaintiff all sums up to a certain limit and full costs of suit, if any, in respect of which the plaintiff should become liable to his employees for injuries received whilst in his service, subject to the condition, amongst others, that "if any proceedings be taken to enforce any claim, the company shall have the absolute conduct and control of defending the same throughout, in the name and on behalf of the employer, retaining or employing their own solicitors and counsel their control of the condition of the condition of the employer content of a full control of the condition of the condit

Furnishing Material — Freight.] — Prelight.] — Plaintiff undertook to build for defendants all the bridges on a portion of the Grand Trunk Railway, and furnish the iron, "same to be shipped on board steamships from Great Britain to Montreal, the delendants paying the difference between the freight and insurance by steamships and first-class sailing ships:"—Held, that they were bound to pay such difference on all shipments, not merely on those made at a time when sailing vessels could be procured. Coulson v. Gzotski, 22 U. C. R. 33.

Inconsistent Conditions—Dismissal of Contractor—Architect's Powers.]—A contract for the construction of a public work contained the following clause: "In case the works are not carried on with such expedition and with such materials and workmanship as the architect or clerk of the works may deem proper the architect shall be at liberty to give the contractors ten days' notice in writing to supply such additional force or material as in the opinion of the said architect is necessary, and if the contractors fail to supply the same it shall then be lawful for the said architect to dismiss the said contractors and to employ other persons to finish the work." The contract also provided that "the general conditions are made part of this contract (except so far as inconsistent herewith), in which case the terms of this contract shall govern."
The first clause in the "general conditions" was as follows: In case the works from the want of sufficient or proper workmen or materials are not proceeding with all the necessary despatch, then the architect may give ten days notice to do what is necessary and upon the contractor of the proper at his discretion (with the consent in writing of the court house committee, or commission as the case may be), without process or suit at law, to take the work or any part thereof mentioned in such notice out of the hands of the contractor it—Held, that this last clause was inconsistent with the above clause of the contract and that the latter must govern. The architect therefore had power to dismiss the contractor without the consent in writing of the committee, Neclon v. City of Toronto, 25 S. C. R. 579.

Insurance—Agreement to Assign or Prosecute,)—beclaration on a fire policy for $1,000: plea, on equitable grounds, stated that by the policy whenever the defendants should pay any loss to the insured, he agreed to assign over all his right to recover satisfaction therefor from any other person, town, or other corporation, or to prosecute therefor at the charge and for the account of defendants if requested:—Semble, that defendants had not the right under such agreement to elect whether the plaintiff should assign or prosecute. Recsor v. Provincial Insurance Co., 33 U. C. R. 357. See also Provincial Insurance Co. v. Recsor, 21 Gr. 296.

Kingston Waterworks.] — Held, that under the agreement between the company and the corporation set out in this case, the company were not bound to supply water gratuitously to the city for any purpose at more than twenty hydrants. City of Kingston v, City of Kingston Water Works Co., 19 U. C. K. 490.

Lease—Assignment.]—Articles of agreement made on, &c., between O. of the first part, and S. of the second part, witnesseth that the said O, hath agreed to sell, and by these presents doth bargain and sell unto said S. all and singular that certain lease hold property and premies, being composed of, &c., for the price of £250, to be paid as follows: £50 down, and the emainder in four equal annual instalments. Then followed a covenant by O, that if S, should duly pay the said sums, and should pay and save harm-less said O, from the tent deep by the leases under which O, held, the of the said O, would assign and convey the after a foresaid leasehold, and the appurtenances thereof, by said S:—Held, an agreement to assign only, not an assignment of O. S interest. Taylor v. Sutton, 18 U. C. R. 615.

Maintenance—Place of Residence.]—The planniff conveyed his form to the defendant, his son, subject to the payment of an annuity of $80 a year; and the plaintiff some inhord, washing and keep out of the farm," or to "receive in cash an amount sufficient to pay for the same yearly." There was also a bond of same date where by defendant covenanted to furnish such maintenance, or pay such sum. The defendant sold the farm, and went to reside elsewhere. The plaintiff went and lived with him on the new farm for some years, receiving his maintenance. &c., but becoming dissatisfied left:—Held, that the plaintiff was not bound to reside with defendant wherever he might choose to go; and under the circumstances was entitled to be paid a reasonable sum for his maintenance, payable at the end of each year. At the trial, the defendant's coinsel raised the objection that the amount of the year and payable at the end of the year was only payable at the end of the year was only payable where the payable weekly. The defendant's counsel the navel was entitled to receive $2 a weekly. The defendant's counsel the navel to have the amount payable monthly on the payable weekly. The defendant's counsel the navel when the payable monthly of the payable weekly. The defendant for the payable monthly of the payable weekly. The defendant for the payable monthly of the payable p

Managing Vessel. | - Appellant, part owner of a vessel, brought an action against respondents, merchants and ship brokers in England, alleging in his declaration that while he had entire charge of said vessel as ship's husband, they, being his agents, re-fused to obey and follow his directions in regard to said vessel, and committed a breach of an agreement by which they undertook not to charter nor send the vessel on any voyage, except as ordered by appellant, or with his consent. On the trial it appeared that E. V., consent. On the trial it appeared that E. V.,

appellant a fourth share in the vessel, the purchase being effected by one of the respondents; and it was also shewn that the spondents; and it was also snewn that the agreement between the parties was as alleged in the declaration. On the arrival of the vessel at Liverpool, respondents went to a large expense in coppering her, contrary to directions, and sent her on a voyage to New Orleans, of which appellant disapproved. Appellant wrote to respondents, complaining of their conduct and protesting against the expense incurred. They replied that appellant could have no cause of complaint against them in their management of the vessel, and alleged they would not have purchased a fourth interest in the vessel, if they had not understood that they were to have the man-agement and control of the vessel when on the other side of the Atlantic. A correspondence ensued, and on the 17th November, 1869, appellant wrote to them, referring to the fact that respondents complained of the "eternal bickerings," and that it was not their fault. He then reasserted his right to control the vessel, stated in detail his grounds of complaint against them, and closed with the words: "To end the matter, if your with the words: To end the matter, it your brother will dispose of his quarter, I will purchase it, say for $4,200 in cash." This amount was about the same price for the share as appellant had sold it for some years Respondents accepted the offer, and the transfer was made to appellant:—Held, that the expression "to end the matter" that the expression to end the matter should be construed as applying to the bick-erings referred to, and there had not been an accord and satisfaction, the contract having been made between appellant and respondents only, and being a contract of agency ents only, and being a contract of agency apart from any question of ownership, the action was properly brought by appellant in his own name. Weldon v. Vaughan, 5 S. C.

Manufacturing Wheat into Flour.]
—Semble, that if in an action upon the case for not manufacturing 400 bushels of wheat into flour, the plaintiff recover the value of the wheat delivered to defendant, the latter cannot recover for goods sold for part of the wheat which had, in point of fact, been redelivered to the plaintiff; and that such re-delivery should have been proved in mitigation of damages; and that an action upon, the common counts could not at any rate be sustained. Andrus v. Burwell, Tay, 382.

Manufacturing Wheat into Flour.]—Inconsideration that the plaintiff would deliver to defendant 2,000 bushels of wheat; defendant promised to deliver to him, within a reasonable time therefrom, 500 barrels of flour.—Held, that "therefrom" must be construed thereafter, and not that the flour was to be made from the identical wheat delivered. It was therefore clearly no defence to plead that the defendant's mill, containing the wheat was burnt down without any negligence on his part; though he would have been excused in that case on the other construction of the agreement. Tilt v. Silverthorne, 11 T. C. R. 619.

Manufacturing Wheat into Flour.]
—The plaintiff, having purchased a quantity of wheat, defendant agreed that, on condition of the plaintiff delivering to defendant wheat of the same quality as the sample previously shewn to defendant, to be ground into flour, the defendant would manufacture the said wheat into flour, and for every four bushels and forty pounds of wheat, of the quality and according to the sample received, he would deliver one barrel of flour which should pass inspection as superfine at Montreal:—Held, that the contract was not a contract for the sale of the wheat but an agreement to manufacture for the plaintiff the identical wheat delivered into flour; that it was a condition precedent, on the plaintiff's part, that the wheat delivered should be of the same quality as the sample; that an acceptance of the wheat by defendant, and his manufacturing it into flour, did not cause the rules prevailing between vendor and vendee to apply with equal force in this case as in the case of an absolute sale, to conclude the defendant from afterwards disputing the correspondence of the wheat delivered with the sample. Stephenson V. Ranney, 2 C. P. 196,

Mercantile Contract—General Rule.]—
The construction of a mercantile contract is for the court, unless it contains words of a technical or conventional use in the trade to which the contract relates. Nordheimer v. Robinson, 2 A. R. 305.

Mining Agreement.]—The plaintiffs and defendant entered into a joint venture to form a company to work a mine in land forming part of a township road allowance, the defendant to form the company, and the plaintiffs to vest in the company the mineral right in the land. The plaintiffs accordingly procured a by-law to be passed by the municipality for the sale of the mineral rights, under s. 442 of the Municipal Act, which authorizes such sale, but with the proviso that the public travel should not be interfered with. A conveyance containing the above proviso was, with the defendant's consent, made to one R. B. J., who executed a formal declaration of trust of one-third interest to the plaintiffs, but not of the balance; but he stated that he held the whole land in trust for plaintiffs, and was willing to convey as they directed, and the plaintiff informed defendant that they were ready to convey to him. The defendant obtained an Act incorporating a company to work the mine and issued stock, which company proved a failure, but through no default of defendant, who was the heaviest loser of all the parties interested. The plaintiffs having sued the defendant for not forming the joint stock company, or carrying on mining operations, and having obtained a verdict for $4.00:—Held, that the verdict must be reduced to nominal damages. Johns v. Beck, 24 C. P. 219.

Held, also, that the conveyance by the

Held, also, that the conveyance by the municipality of the mineral rights, under s. 442. was sufficient, and that s. 441 for stopping of a road allowance did not apply. Ib.

Held, also, that although the conveyance of the mineral rights was to R. B. J., the defendant could not urge that he could not be compelled to convey, owing to the absence of any writing; and that the plaintiffs having control of the title, were in a position to aver and prove their readiness to perform the agreement, Ib.

Mineral Rights—Right to Possession.]

—By an agreement made on the 13th January, 1897, in consideration of one dollar, the owner of certain lands agreed "to lease and hereby does lease to the plaintiff) the following described premises," mentioning them, and "hereby leases and agrees to give and right on and premises, the right to quarry and remember of the property and consenses to the property of the property

B. who had published a newspaper as arther or joint owners engagement of the paper of the paper of the paper of the paper, binding himself to continue its publication, and, in case he wished to sell out, to give C. B. the preference, the agreement provided that: "3. Le dit Charles Bélanger devient, à partir de ce jour, directeur et rédacteur du dit journal, son nom devant paraitre comme directeur en tête du dit journal, est pour la comment provided that: "10 paraitre comme directeur en tête du dit journal, est pour ses services et son influence comme tel, le dit Arthur Bélanger lui alloue quatre cents piastres par année, tant par impressions, annonces, &c., qu'en argent jusqu' au montant de cette somme, et le dit Arthur Bélanger ne pourra mettre fin à cet engagement sans le consentement du dit Charles Bélanger." The paper was published for some time under this agreement as a supporter of the Liberal party, when C. B., without instructions from or permission of

A. B., wrote editorials violently opposing the candidate of that party at an election and was dismissed from his position on the paper. He then brought an action against A. B. to have it declared that he was "rédiacteur et directeur" of the newspaper and claiming gamages:—Held, that C. B. by the agreement had become the employee of A. B. the owner of the paper; that he had no right to change the political colour of the paper without the owner's consent and that he was rightly dismissed for so doing. Bélanger v. Bélanger, 24 S. C. R. 678.

Partnership—Business Sold—New Business by One.]—S. and H., trading as partners, sold out their business to E. under a written agreement, as follows:—"S. and H. do hereby bind themselves to E. under a penalty of $2.000, that they will not do business in Chesley in hardware for the term of five years." Within the five years S. commenced a hardware business in Chesley, in connection with M.:—Held, that this did not amount to a breach of the above agreement, though the matter was not free from doubt. Elliott v. Stanley, 7 O. R. 350.

Penalty.]—Upon a contract to do certain work within a specified time, with a penalty of £4 per week in case of default as rent of the premises:—Held, that an action would lie at the suit of the plaintiff to recover this sum from defendant, though by the agreement it was to be deducted from the last payment. Gaskin v. Walcs, 9 C P. 314.

"Plant" — "Horses."] — By one of the clauses of a railway contract for exenvation, "all machinery and other plant, materials and things what will be completed by the contract to the completion of the work to be the property of the company, when such as had not been used and converted into the works and remained undisposed of were to be delivered over to the contractor, but in other clauses the words "teams and horses" were respectively used as well as the word "plant!"—Held, under the contract, that horses were not included in the word "plant!" and that expert evidence was not admissible to explain its meaning. Middleton v. Planagon, 25 O. R. 417.

Printing Contract. |-On the 2nd July, 1869, the plaintiff contracted with one H. as clerk of the joint committee of both Houses of Parliament to do the printing, &c., for both Houses at scheduled prices. On the 7th of October, 1869, the plaintiff contracted with Her Majesty for all the printing required for the several departments, to be specified in requisitions to be made upon him by the departments respectively, including the post-mastergeneral's department, at scheduled prices; which were lower than under the first contract, and so tendered for as alleged by plaintiff, because he expected in cases where similar matter was required under both contracts, to use the type set to fulfil one for the other. When the contracts were entered into the custom was for the annual reports of the heads of departments to be printed on the order of and paid for by such departments, and the copies required for Parliament were ordered and paid for separately through the clerk of the joint committee on printing: but afterwards, by resolution of the committee, concurred in by the House, it was directed that the annual reports should be printed on the order of the committee, under the first contract, including a sufficient number for the use of the departments, with which the departments should be charged. The reports of the postmaster-general having been thus ordered and printed, the plaintiff claimed to charge for the extra number required for the department under the second contract, and for the composition as though re-set for the department:—Held, that he had no such right. Taylor v. Campbell, 33 U. C. R. 264.

Printing-Exclusive Right. 1 - Under 29 & 33 Vict. c. 7 (D.), which provides that the printing, binding, and other like work required for the several departments of the government shall be done and furnished under contracts to be entered into under authority of the Governor in Council after advertisement for tenders, the Under-Secretary of State advertised for tenders for the printing required by the several departments of the government. The suppliants tendered such printing, the specifications annexed to the tender, which were supplied by the government, containing various provisions as to the manner of performing the work and giving of security. The tenders were accepted by the Governor in Council, and an indenture was executed between the suppliants and Her Majesty, by which the suppliants agreed to perform and execute, &c., "all jobs or lots of printing for the several departments of the Government of Canada, of reports, &c., of every description and kind soever coming within the denomination of departmental printing, and all the work and services connected therewith and appertaining thereto, as set forth in the said specification hereunto annexed, in such numbers and quantities as may be specified in the several requisitions may be specified in the several requisitions which may be made upon them for that purpose from time to time by and on behalf of said several respective departments." Part of the departmental printing having been given to others, the suppliants, by their petition, claimed compensation by way of damages, contending that they were entitled to the whole of said printing:—Held, that having regard to the whole scope and nature of the transaction the statement of the transaction that the said of the contract, there was a clear intention shewn that tract, there was a clear intention shewn that the contractors should have all the printing that should be required by the several departments of the government, and that the contract was not an unilateral contract, but a binding mutual agreement. Regina v. Mac-Lean, S S. C. R. 210.

Raising Vessel.]—Declaration on a marine policy, setting out the issue of same by defendants, and of a similar one by another company; that the vessel was lost; that by the policy defendants were allowed in certain cases to interpose, recover and repair the vessel; that the vessel sank while towed by plaintiff's tug; that defendants and the other company, being desirous of recovering the vessel, by their respective duly authorized agents in that behalf entered into an agreement in writing with plaintiff, reciting the loss, and that plaintiff should raise the vessel for $3.000, and the plaintiff, defendants, and the other company should submit to the arbitrament of arbitrators, one to be chosen by the plaintiff, another by the defendants and the other company, and the third by the two so chosen, the question by whom said money and other expenses should be paid, &c.; that the plaintiff raised the vessel; had always been willing to appoint, and did appoint, an arbitrator, and was willing to submit such question, &c., of which the two companies had notice, and although the plaintiff requested them, &c., yet the defendants always since wrongfully refused, either in concert with the other company or otherwise, to appoint an arbitrator, and always wrongfully refused and continued to refuse to appoint or concur in appointing on their behalf and that of the other company, and by reason of such wrongful refusal, &c., &c.: — Held, on demurrer, good, and that an objection that the agreement was not shewn to have been under seal was premature, for that it might either arise as a matter of evidence at the trial, or be made the subject of a plea; and that in the face of the averment that the act done, by which it was sought to bind defendants, was by an agent duly authorized, it could not be assumed that the authority was not full and sufficient:—Held, also, that the contract dis-closed was joint; that defendants could have pleaded in abatement; that each was liable for the other, whether the joint non-performfor the other, whether the joint non-periors and that, there being no plea in abatement, the declaration was good against the demurrer. Calvin v. Provincial Insurance Co., 20 C.

Sale—Special Letter,]—Held, that the defendant by his letter set out in the case agreed to deliver to the plaintiff a billiard table made by the English maker mentioned in the letter, and having failed to do so he was liable to pay the full parts of the table obtained from the plaintiff in exchange. May v. McDougall, 18 S. C. R. 700.

Sale of Goods—Quantity—Description—"Car-load."]—The defendants agreed to buy from the plaintiff a car-load of hogs at a chipped a "double-decked" car-load, and the defendants refused to necept this, contending that a "single-decked" car-load, should have been shipped. There was conflicting evidence as to the meaning given in the trade to the term "car-load of hogs," and it was shewn that hogs were shipped sometimes in the one way and sometimes in the other:—Held, that the plaintiff had the option of loading the car in any way in which a car might be ordinarily or usually loaded, and that he having elected to ship a double-decked car-load, the defendants were bound to accept. Hanley v. Canadian Packing Co., 21 A. R. 119.

Sale of Iron Works—"Tools."]—On a sale of malleable iron works "and all machinery and tools in and about the said works connected therewith:"—Quarre, whether annealing pots used in the manufacture of iron would pass under the word "tools;" but held, that this was a question for the jury. Filschie v. Hogg, 35 U. C. R. 94.

Sale of Timber—Remoral.]—One of the conditions of sale was, that the timber was to be removed by T, within two years:—Held, that the effect of the condition was that T, was only to have the right to cut and remove the timber within two years from the date of the agreement. Steinhoff v. McRae, 13 O. 18, 540.

Sale of Timber—Time for Payment.]—
By agreement in writing I. agreed to sell and the V. H. L. Co. to purchase timber to be delivered "free of charge where they now lie within ten days from the time the pado.

ice is advised as clear out of the harbour so that the timber may be counted.

Settlement to be finally made inside of thirty days in cash less 2 per cent, for the dimension timber which is at John's Island:"—
Held, that the last clause did not give the purchaser thirty days after delivery for payment; that it provided for delivery by vendor and payment by purchasers within thirty days from the date of the contract; and that if purchasers accepted the timber after the expiration of thirty days from such date, an event not provided for in the contract, an action for the price could be brought immediately after the acceptance. Victoria Harbour Lumber Co. v. Irvain, 24 S. C. R. 607.

Sale—Security — Contre Lettre — Law of Quebec.]—See Hunt v. Taplin, 24 S. C. R. 36.

Service—Arbitrary Right of Dismissal.]

—By an agreement under seal between M., the inventor of a certain machine, and McR., proprietor of a certain machine, and McR., proprietor of patents therefor, M. agreed to obtain patents for improvements on said machine and assign the same to McR., who in consideration thereof agreed to employ M. for two years to place the patents on the market, paying him a certain sum for salary and expenses, and giving him a percentage on the profits made by the sales. M. agreed to devote his whole time to the business, the employer having the right, if it was not successful, to cancel the agreement at any time after the expiration of six months from its date of the agreement the employer bone clause of the agreement the employer bone clause of the agreement the employer date which the employer performed his duties, and was given the right to dismiss the employed at any time for incapacity or breach of duty, the latter in such case to have his salary up to the date of dismissal but to have no claim what-ever against his employer. M. was summarily dismissed within three months from the date of the agreement for alleged incapacity and disobelience to orders:—Held, reversing 17 A. R. 139, and 16 O. R. 495, that the agreement gave the employer the right at any time to dismiss M. for incapacity or breach of duty without notice, and without specifying any particular act calling for such dismissal, but that such dismissal did not deprive M. of his claim for a share of the profits of the business. McKae v. Markaul, 19 S. C. R. 10.

Sewer—Extension of Time—Power to Employ Labour to Harden Work.]—A contract for the construction of a sewer made between the corporation of a town and the plaintiff, payment for which was to be made by items according to schedule prices, provided for its completion within a limited time, which was extended by resolution of the council and again informally extended for a further period. The contract provided that if the contract of the provided that if the contract provided that if the contract of the engineer's satisfaction, the corporation might employ and place on the work such force of men and teams, and procure such materials, as might be deemed necessary to complete the work by the day named for completion, and charge the cost thereof to the plaintiff; and by the specifications, which were made part of the contract, the same powers were conferred without any restriction as to time. The work not having been proceeded with to the engineer's satisfaction, the corporation, before the expiration of the second extension of time, exercised the powers above conferred:—Held, that under the contract the power conferred could only be exercised during the time fixed for the completion of the work or the extension thereof, but under the specifications thereafter; and therefore, even if the corporation could not under the contract avail themselves of the second extension as granted informally, the powers were properly exercised under the specifications. Mangan v. Town of Windsor, 24 O. Rt. 675.

Special Award.]—Under the award and declaration, as given in the statement of this case, the court held that the amount of £500 awarded to be paid by quarterly instalments, was stated with sufficient certainty. Watson v. Sutherland, 1 U. C. R. 220.

Supply of Gas—Montreal Gas Company—Right to Stop Supply.]—See Montreal Gas Company v. Cadieux. [1899] A. C. 589, reversing 28 S. C. R. 382.

Telephone Company-Orders for Messengers. |-The defendants were a company carrying on a general telephone business with a central office to connect subscribers' telephones, and in addition carried on a messenger business for the purpose of delivering letters, messages, &c. By an agreement the defendants assigned their messenger business to the plaintiffs and covenanted that they would not transmit or give directly or indirectly any messenger order to any person, except the plaintiffs, and that they would cease to do such business. The G. N. W. Tele-graph Co., (one of the defendants' telephone subscribers), subsequently opened an office for a messenger business, and applied for a telephone in the usual way, which the defendants supplied them with, and by means of it the G. N. W. Telegraph Co. received orders for messengers, &c.:—Held, that the defendants did not transmit or give messenger orders when they placed a subscriber in communica-tion (through the central office) with the G. N. W. Telegraph Co., that they only afforded him a medium by which to transmit or give his own order, which was a case not provided for by the agreement, and the action for an injunction to restrain defendants was dismissed with costs. Electric Despatch Co. v. Bell Telephone Co., 17 O. R. 495, 501, 17 A. R. 292, 28 S. C. R. 83.

Timber—Removal of.]—The plaintiff was the owner of a farm of about a mile in breadth and five-sixths of a mile in length. About two-thirds of the farm was heavily wooded, and the rest of it was cleared and cultivated. The defendant became the purchaser of the trees and timber upon the land under an agreement which provided, among other things, that the purchaser should have "full liberty to enter into and upon the said lands for the purpose of removing the trees and timber at such times and in such manner as he may think proper," but reserved to the plaintiff the full enjoyment of the land, "save and in so far as may be necessary for the cutting and removing of the trees and timber." To have removed the timber through the wooded land at the time it was removed would have possibly amounted to a sacrifice of the greater portion of the timber:—Held, affirming 19 A. R. 176, that the defendants had a right to remove the timber by the most direct and available route, provided they acted in good faith and not unreasonably, and the reservation in favour of the plaintiff did not minimize or modify the defendants' right, under the general grant of the trees, to remove the trees across the cleared land. Stephens v. Gordon, 22 S. C. R. 61.

Timber Sides—Safe Passage.].—An express or implied contract for safe transport is not created with the Crown because an individual pays tolls, imposed by statute for the use of a public work, such as slide dues, for passing his logs through government sides, Regina v. McFarlane, 7 S. C. R. 216.

Time for Payment.]—"For value received I promise to pay J. M., and M., or their order, the sum of £102 15s. cy., to be paid in yearly proportions:"—Held, to give two years for payment. McQueen v. McQueen, 9 U. C. R. 536.

Time.]—Where under a building contract work was to be completed by "November 31st' under penalty of damages:—Held, that this must be construed to mean 30th November. McBean v. Kinnear, 23 O. R. 313.

Toronto Street Railway—Liability to Keep Pavements in Repair—Local Rates.]— See City of Toronto v. Toronto Street R. W. Co., 23 S. C. R. 198.

Waterworks-Extension of Works-Repairs.]—By a resolution of the council of the town of Chicoutimi, on 9th October, 1890, based upon an application previously made by him, L. obtained permission to construct waterworks in the town and to lay the neces-sary pipes in the streets wherever he thought proper, taking his water supply from the river Chicoutini at whatever point might be convenient for his purposes, upon condition that the works should be commenced within a certain time and completed in the year 1892. He constructed a system of waterworks and had it in operation within the time prescribed, but the system proving insufficient a company was formed in 1895 under the provisions of R. S. Q. art. 4485, and given authority by by-law to furnish a proper water supply to the town, whereupon L attempted to perfect his system, to alter the position of the pipes, to construct a reservoir, and to make new excavations in the streets for these purposes without receiving any further authority from the council :-Held, that these were not merely necessary repairs but new works, actually part of the system required to be completed during the year 1892 and which after that date could not be proceeded with except upon further permission obtained in the usual manner from the council of the town:—Held, further, that the resolution and the application upon which it was founded constituted a "contract in writing" and a "written agreement" within the meaning of article 1033a of the Code of Civil Procedure of Lower Canada, and violation of its conditions was a sufficient ground for injunction to restrain the construction of the new works, Ville de Chicoutimi v. Léthe new works. Ville garé, 27 S. C. R. 329.

2. Conditions.

Agreement Conditional on Verdict.]
—In trespass for mesne profits, before the verdict was taken, the plaintiff's attorney and the defendant signed a paper, by which it was agreed the costs in the suit should be left to be taxed by, &c., and the value of the mesne profits should be decided by, &c., in case a verdict should be given for the plaintiff:—Held, that the words, "in case a verdict shall be given for the plaintiff," left in open to defendant to contend against a verdict at the trial upon any grounds in law, or upon the merits, Patterson v. Prince, 7 U. C. R. 528.

Certificate of Engineer.]—O. D. & Co. contracted with the government to complete certain telegraph weeks, and M. aftewards contracted with the contract of the

By a third contract T. M. and G. M. contracted with both M. and O. D. & Co. to make advances to M., and to become security for M. s due completion of the work, it being agreed therein that "upon the completion of the contract O. D. & Co. should pay T. M. and G. M. the amount due them by M. for supplies, before paying M. anything:"—
Held, that there must be an amount owing by O. D. & Co. to M., for which M. could recover against them, before O. D. & Co. were liable under the above contract to pay T. M. and G. M. anything, and that the intention was only to enable T. M. and G. M. to intercept payment by O. D. & Co. to M. of money due from them to M. D.

Certificate of Engineer.]—In 1879 the respondent filed a petition of right for the sum of $608,000 for extra work and damages arising out of his contract for the construction of section 18 of the Intercolonial Railway without having obtained a final certificate from F., who held at the time the position of chief engineer. In 1880, F. having resigned, F. S. was appointed chief engineer of the Intercolonial Railway, and investigated, amoust others, the respondent's claim, and reported a balance in his favour of $120,371. Thereupon the respondent amended his petition and made a special claim for the $120,271. Alleging that F. S.'s report or certificate was a final closing certificate within the meaning of the contract, which question was submitted for the opinion of the court by special case. This report was never approved of by the Intercolonial Railway commissioners or by the minister of railways and canads under 31 Vict. c. 13, s. 18:—Held, resemble that the contract of the chief engineer which does or can entitle the contract cannot be construed to be a certificate of the chief engineer which does or can entitle the contractor to recover any sum as remaining due and payable to him under the terms of his contract, on any legal claim whatever against the government be founded thereon. (2) Per Ritchie, C.J., that the contractor was not entitled to be paid anything until the final certificate of the chief engineer was approved of by the commissioners or minister of railways and canals: 31 Vict. c. 13, s. 18: And 37 Vict. c. 15, Jones v. The Queen, 7 S. C. R. 570. (3) Per Patterson, J., that although F. S. was duly appointed chief engineer of the Intercolonial Railway, and his report may be held to be the final and closing certificate to which the suppliant was entitled under the eleventh clause of the contract, yet as it is provided by the fourth clause of the contract that any allowance for increased work is to be decided by the commissioners and not by the engineer, the suppliant is not entitled to recover on F. S.'s certificate. Per Strong, Taschereau, and Patterson, JJ., that the office of commissioners having been abolished by 37 Vict. c. 15, and their duties and powers transferred generally to the minister of railways and canals, the approval of the certificate was not a condition precedent to entitle the suppliant to claim the amount awarded to him by the final certificates of the chief engineer, The Queen v. McGreevey, 18 S. C. R. 371.

Certificate of Engineer.] - A sub-contract for the construction of a part of the North Shore Railway provided inter alia, that, "the said works shall, in all particulars, be made to conform to the plans, specifications and directions of the party of the second part, and of his engineer, by whose classifica-tions, measurements and calculations, the quantities and amounts of the several kinds of work performed under this contract shall be determined, and who shall have full power to reject and condemn all work or materials which in his opinion do not conform to the spirit of this agreement, and who shall decide very question which may or can arise between the parties relative to the execution thereof, and his decision shall be conclusive and binding upon both parties hereto. The aforesaid party of the second part hereby agrees, and binds himself, that upon the certificates of his engineer that the work contemplated to be done under this contract has been fully completed by the party of the first part, he will pay said party of the first part for the performance of the same in full, for materials and workmanship. It is further agreed, by the party of the second part, that estimates shall be made during the progress of the work on or about the first of each month, and that payments shall be made each month, and that payments shall be made by second party upon the estimate and certificate of his engineer, to the party of the first part, on or before the 20th day of each month, for the amount and value of work done, and materials furnished during the previous month, ten per cent, being deducted and retained by the party of the second part until the final completion of the work embraced in this contract, when all sums due the party of the first part shall be fully paid, and this contract considered cancelled." Upon completion of the contract the engineer made a final estimate fixing the value of the work done by the sub-contractor at $79,142.65, and after deducting the money paid to and re-ceived by the sub-contractor, and correcting a clerical error appearing on the face of the cer-tificate, a sum of $4,187.32 remained due to the sub-contractor. Held, that the estimate as given by the engineer was substantially such a certificate as the contract contemplated, but if not the plaintiff must fail as a final certificate of the engineer was a condition precedent to his right to recover. Greevy, 18 S. C. R. 609. Guilbault v. Mc-

Cortificate of Engineer — Bulk Sum Contract—Interest.]—In a bulk sum contract for various works and materials, executed, performed and furnished on the Quebec harbour works, the contractors were allowed by the final certificate of the engineers a balance of $52,011. The contract contained the ordinary powers given in such contracts to the to determine all points in dispute by their final certificate. The work was comby their mai certificate. The work was completed and accepted by the commissioners on the 11th October, 1882, but the certificate was only granted on the 4th February, 1886. In an action brought by the contractors (appellants) for $181, 241 for alleged balance of contract price and extra work:—Held, (1) that the certificate of the engineers was binding on the parties and could not be set aside as regards any matter coming within the jurisdiction of the engineers, but that the engineers had no right to deduct any sum from the bulk sum contract price on account of an alleged error in the calculation of the quanti-ties of dredging to be done stated in the specifications and the quantities actually specifications and the quantities actuary done, and, therefore, the certificate in this case should be corrected in that respect. (2) That interest could not be computed from an earlier date than from the date of the final certificate fixing the amount due to the contractors under the contract, viz., 4th February, 1886. Strong and Gwynne, JJ., were of opinion that the certificate could have been reformed as regards an item for removal of sand erroneously paid for to other con-tractors by the commissioners and charged to the plaintiffs. Peters v. Quebec Harbour Commissioners, 19 S. C. R. 685.

Certificate of Engineer - Extras.]-A contract entered into between Her Majesty the Queen, in right of the Province of Quebec, and S. X. Cimon for the construction of three of the departmental buildings at Quebec, contained the usual clauses that the balance of the contract price was not payable until a final certificate by the engineer in charge was delivered, shewing the total amount of work done, and materials furnished, and the cost of extras and the reduction in the contract price upon any alterations. There was a clause providing for the final decision by the commissioner of public works in matters in dispute upon the taking over or settling for the works. The commissioner of public works, after hearing the parties, gave his decision that nothing was due to the contractors, and the engineer in charge, by his final certificate declared that a balance of $31.36 was due upon the contract price and $42.84 on extras. The suppliants by their petition of right claimed, inter alia, $70,000, due on extras. The Crown pleaded general denial and payment. ment:-Held, that the suppliants were bound by the final certificate given by the en-gineer, under the terms of the contract. The Queen v. Cimon, 23 S. C. R. 62.

Certificate of Engineer.]—By g. JS of 31 Vict. c. 13 (The Intercolonial Railway Act, 1867), it was enacted that no money should be paid to any contractor until the chief engineer should have certified that at the work for or on account the should be should suppliants claimed certain extras under two contracts made in pursuance of the statute first mentioned for the construction of portions of the railway, but had never obtained any certificate as required by such statute from the chief engineer of the railway at the time of the execution of the work. After the resignation of F., the original chief engineer, S. was appointed to such office for the purpose of investigating "the unsettled claims which had arisen in connection with the undertaking, upon which no judicial decision had been given, and to report on each case to the department of railways and canals." S. investigated the suppliants' claims amongst others, and made a report thereon recommending the payment of a certain sum to the suppliants. This report was not approved by the minister of railways and canals, as representing the commissioners, nor was it ever acted upon by the government :-Held, following The Queen v. McGreevy, 18 S. C. R. 371, that the report of S. was not such a certificate as was contemplated by the statute and the contracts made thereunder. Ross v. The Queen, 4 Ex. C. R. 390.

Certificate of Engineer-Refusal to Give.]-By their contract with the Crown for the construction of certain works on the Galops Canal the claimants agreed, inter alia, that cash payments, equal to 90 per cent, of the work done, approximately made up from returns of progress measurements and computed at contract prices, should be made to them monthly on the written certificate of the engineer, stating that the work so certified by him had been executed to his satisfaction and amounted to a sum computed as above mentioned. This certificate was to be approved by the minister of railways and canals, and to constitute "a condition precedent to the right of the contractors to be paid the said 90 per cent. or any part there-of." It was further agreed that the remainof. It was turner agreed that the remaining 10 per cent, "should be retained until the final completion of the whole work to the satisfaction of the chief engineer for the time being having control over the work, and that within two months often such complete. that within two months after such comple-tion, the remaining 10 per cent, would be paid." It was also agreed that the written certificate of the engineer certifying to the final completion of said works to his satis-faction should be a condition precedent to the right of the contractors to be paid the remaining 10 per cent, or any part thereof:—Held, that as the parties had agreed to be bound by the judgment of the engineer, the court had no power to alter or correct any certificate given by him in pursuance of the terms of the contract. (2) That in the absence of fraud on the part of the engineer in declining to on the part of the engineer in declining to give a certificate for a claim put forward by the contractors, the court will not review his decision. Murray v. The Queen, 5 Ex. C. R. 19. See the next case.

Certificate of Engineer — Revision by Seceeding Engineer — Progress Estimate.] —A contract with the Crown for building locks and other work on a government canal provided for monthly payments to the contractors of 90 per cent, of the value of the work done at the prices named in a schedule annexed to the contract, such payments to be made on the certificate of the engineer, approved by the minister of railways and canals, that the work certified for had been executed to his satisfaction; the certificate so approved was to be a condition precedent to the right of the contractors to the monthly payments, and the remaining 10 per cent. of the whole of the work was to be retained until its final completion; gineer was to be the sole judge of the work and materials, and his decision on all questions with regard thereto, or as to the meaning and intention of the contract, was to be final; and he was to be at liberty to make any changes or alterations in the work which he should deem expedient:—Held, that though the value of the work certified to by the monthly certificates was only approximate and subject to revision on completion of the whole, yet where the engineer in charge had changed the character of a particular class of work, and when completed had classified it and fixed the value, his decision was final and could not be re-opened and revised by a succeeding engineer. Held, also, that the contractors could proceed by action if payment on a monthly certificate was withheld and were not obliged to wait the final completion of the work be-fore suing. Murray v. The Queen, 26 S. C. R. 203.

Certificate of Engineer - Amendment -Progress Estimates.]—The eighth and twenty-fifth clauses of the appellant's contract for the construction of certain public works were as follows:—"8. That the engineer shall be the sole judge of work and material in respect of both quantity and quality, and his decision on all questions in dispute with regard to work or material, or as to the meaning or intention of this contract, and the plans, specifications, and drawings, shall be final, and no works or extra or addi-tional works or charges shall be deemed to have been executed, nor shall the contractor be entitled to payment for the same, unless the same shall have been executed to the satisfaction of the engineer, as evidenced by his certificate in writing, which certificate shall be a condition precedent to the right of the contractor to be paid therefor;"—but, before the contract was signed by the parties, the words "as to the meaning or intention of this contract, and the plans, specifications and drawings" were struck out. "25. Cash payments to about ninety per cent, of the value of the work done, approximately made up from returns of progress measurements and computed at the prices agreed upon or determined under the provisions of the contract, will be made to the contractor monthly on the written certificate of the engineer that the work for, or on account of, which the certificate is granted has been duly executed to his satisfaction, and stating the value of such work computed as above mentioned and upon approval of such certificate by the minister for the time being, and the said certifi-cate and such approval thereof shall be a condition precedent to the right of the contractor to be paid the said ninety per cent. or any part thereof." A difference of opinion arose between the contractor and the engineers as to the quantity of earth in certain embankments which should be paid for at an increased rate as "water-tight" emtract and specifications relating to the works and the claim of the contractor was rejected and the claim of the contractor was rejected by the engineer, who afterwards, however, after the matter had been referred to the minister of justice by the minister of railways and canals, and an opinion favourable to the contention of the contractor given by the minister of justice, made a certificate upon a progress estimate for the amount thus in dispute in the usual form but added after his signature the following words:—"Certified as regards item 5 this item in dispute), in the contract with the letter of deputy minister of justice, dated 15th January, 1886." The estimate thus certified was forwarded for payment, but the auditor-general refused to issue a cheque therefore—Held, that, under the circumstances of the case, the certificate sufficiently copiled with the contract of the twenty-fifth section of the contract; that the decision by the sum of the contract adjudication of the contract of characteristic and dispute under said eighth section and did not a preclude him from subsection and the crifficate given in this case where that the certificate given in this case where the contract of receive payment of his claim, where the contract of the contract in the legal of the contract of the contract. Murray v. The Queen, 28 S. C. R. 263, distinguished, Judgment in 5 Ex. C. R. 263, reversed. Good-rion v. The Queen, 28 S. C. R. 273.

Certificate of Engineer.]—The rule that a contractor is bound by a condition in his contract making the employer's engineer the interpreter of the contract and the arbiter of all disputes arising under it, does not extend to a case where the named engineer, while in fact the engineer of the employer, is described in the contract as, and is supposed by the contractor to be, the engineer of a third person. Good v. Toronto, Hamilton and Buffulo R. W. Co., 26 A. R. 133. Affirmed 30 S. C. R. 114, sub nom. Dominion Construction Co, v. Good.

Certificate of Engineer — Possible Bins.]—Under a contract with a municipality for the laying of block pavements on certain streets with a provision that "the decision of the city engineer on all points coming within and conclusive whether as to the interpretation of the various clauses, the measurements, extra work, quantity, quality, and all other matters and things which may be in dispute, and from his decision there shall be no appeal," the city engineer is not disqualified, in the absence of fraud or bad faith, from deciding whether certain work is or is not extra work and does or does not fall within the plans and specifications. The possible bias of the engineer in favour of the plans and specifications drawn by him is not sufficient to disqualify him. Farquhar v. City of Hamilton, 20 A. R. Sô.

Certificate of Named Person—Effect of Part Payment, 1—Upon a contract extending over several years for work and labour to be paid for by instalments, the defendants admitted part performance of the contract upon which the action was brought, and pleaded general non-performance to the satisfaction of their officer named in the contract, and that thorough and complete performance was $\mu$ condition precedent to payment:—Held, that by payment in part they were not barred from claiming full performance, and to the satisfaction, &c., as a condition precedent, the contract being in consideration of performance, and not in consideration of performance, and not in consideration of Toronto, 10 C. P. 73.

Certificate of Superintendent.]—By a contract between plaintiff and a city municipality for additions and improvements to its system of waterworks, it was provided that all differences, &c., should be referred to the award, order, arbitrament, and final determination of H., the superintendent in charge of the said work:—Held, that the fact of H. being such superintendent id not disqualify him from acting as arbitrator; and on the evidence that no cause existed to restrain him from proceeding with the reference. McNamee v. City of Toronto, 24 O. R. 313.

Conditional Promise. —After negotiations had taken place for the sale of a farm at 89,500, the following contract was signed by the purchasers:—"We agree to take your farm and pay you 89,000, and if we get along fairly well we will give you the other $500 as soon as we are able: "—Held, that the provision as to the $500 was a conditional promise which might be enforced on proof that the purchasers were of ability to pay, which the evidence in this case failed to shew. Sylvester v. Murray, 26 O. R. 399, 765.

Extras.]—The contract provided that no extras were to be allowed unless expressly ordered, and payments for the same expressly agreed for in writing by the proprietors or architects:—Held, that extras could not be allowed unless a writing was proved. Wood v. Stringer, 20 O. R. 148.

Moneys Intrusted for Investment — Transfer — Préte-nom — Condition Precedent —Law of Quebec.]—See Moodie v. Jones, 19 S. C. R. 266.

Notes Payable in Work.]—Where an action was brought on notes payable in work:
—Held, that the plaintiff could recover without proving a demand and refusal to do some specific work, it being incumbent on the defendant to offer to perform work for the plaintiff. Teal v. Clarkson, 4 O. S. 372.

Payment.]—Where payment is to be a condition precedent or a concurrent act, and is to be made in a certain manner, the plaintiff must aver a readiness to pay in the precise manner stipulated. Tanner v. D'Everado, 3 U. C. R. 154.

Payment.]—Defendant agreed to saw for plaintiff a certain quantity of logs, which plaintiff was to deliver at his mill, at specified rates, which would have amounted in all to £500, and it was stipulated that the money should be paid "in cash, or by a negotiable note, at three months, at the end of each month's work." To an action for not sawing logs so delivered, defendant pleaded that he had sawn some of the logs, but the plaintiff refused to pay him therefor, and that he had recovered judgment for such default, which judgment was still unsatisfied:—Nemble, a good defence. Buchanan v. Anderson, 16 U. C. R. 331.

Payment.]—The declaration claimed damages for breach of a contract between plaintiff and defendant for sawing timber, containing an agreement by defendant to supply the plaintiff with such a portion of the price as would enable the plaintiff to carry out the contract, but did not aver any demand on or refusal by the defendant to supply such moneys:—Held, bad on demurrer, for the payments.

ment was not a condition precedent to plaintiff's performance. Tullock v. Wells, 7 C. P. 47.

Payment-Waiver.]-Defendant agreed to sell to plaintiff certain American currency or "greenbacks" in four specified sums, amounting in all to $57,000 of that currency, plaintiff giving him with each transaction his note in Canadian currency, the four notes being payable at different times and for different amounts, and also depositing with each of the first two notes a certain sum of the latter currency, while with the fourth he deposited $400 in American currency, as collateral security. Defendant then delivered to plaintiff four of the usual broker's notes, in this form, "Sold to * * deliverable on payment of his note due * * the sum of * * in American currency." After the maturity of American currency." After the maturity of the first note plaintiff asked defendant if it was necessary to renew it, when defendant if it was necessary to renew it, when defendant said not, as it drew interest; but, after the others had fallen due, defendant wrote to plaintiff that his notes being still unpaid, he could not carry the amount of American currency longer, and had therefore converted it at that day's rate of exchange, charging his account with the same. After this, plaintiff account with the same. After this, plaintiff applied to defendant and his solicitors for the notes, tendering in payment a certain sum. which was short by some $10 or more, and the cheque of one M.,; but the solicitors rethe cheque of one M.; but the solicitors re-fused to give up the notes, stating that they had been practically paid (by the conversion of the greenbacks). It further appeared that the plaintiff had drawn out of defendant's hands all his money but the $400 deposit in greenbacks. Plaintiff sped defendant on his agreement to deliver the American currency, alleging his readiness and willingness to pay the notes, but that defendant waived the pay ment on the days they became due, and that within a reasonable time afterwards, and be-fore action, he tendered their amount to defendant, who refused to accept it:-Held, that the payment of the notes was a condition precedent to delivery of the "greenbacks;" that in the absence of any justification for the non-payment, plaintiff could not recover; and that there was no evidence of plaintiff's readiness to pay the notes, or of the waiver.

Walsh v. Brown, 18 C. P. 60.

Period of Credit. — Plaintiff agreed to do certain work for defendant for which he was to be paid half in cash on completion of the work, and half by a bankable note at three months, defendant to pay the bank charges and interest, and the note to be renewed, if required, for two months longer. Plaintiff, on the 30th July, 1862, sued for the work done. The evidence shewed the work was not completed until 2nd May:—Held, that the action was brought too soon, and that the payment of the bank charges by defendant was not a condition precedent to his right to the credit. Fee v. Whyte, 13 C. P. S3.

Purchase Money in Instalments— Prior Mortyage(.)—W. entered into a contract for the purchase of property, the price being payable by instalments; and there being a mortgage on the property to the Trust and Loan Company which was not due, the vendor was to give the vendee W. a bond of indemnity in respect of the mortgage. A decree was made at the suit of the vendor for specific performance, on the undertaking of the plaintiff, recited in the decree, to procure a release or discharge of the mortgage; and the overdue instalments were ordered to be paid into the bars subject to the further order of the could be a subject to the further order of the could be a subject to the further order of the could be a subject of this undertaking, it as a lield, that the performance of the materiaking was not a condition precedent to the paying in of the money, but was a condition precedent to its being paid out. Robson v. Wride, 13 Gr. 419.

Railway—Bonus.]—Performance of conditions by railway company before receiving the debentures voted them by a municipality as a bonus. See Bickford v. Town of Chatham, 19 O. R. 257; 14 A. R. 32; 16 S. C. R. 255.

Sale of Hides—Quality—Inspection.]—
Upon a sale of hides by weight, of specified qualities according to inspection, i.e., "cured and inspected No. I hides," &c.:—Held, that the weight as ascertained and marked by the inspector, under 27 & 28 Vict. c. 21, and 29 & 30 Vict. c. 24, were binding upon the parties in the absence of anything in the agreement to the contrary. Macklem v. Thorne, 30 U.

Held, that the seller must pay the inspector's fees, the agreement not providing other-

Held, that upon the evidence set out in the report of this case the defendants were acting as principals, not as agents of the plaintiffs, the purchasers, and therefore could not charge commission. Ib.

Selling Agents - Failure to Account-Cross-claim.]—In an action on a judgment recovered in Scotland for breach of the defendant's agreement to deliver sewing ma-chines to the plaintiffs, the defendant pleaded that by virtue of the agreement made between the parties, the plaintiffs were to be the dethe parties, the plainting were to be the de-fendant's sole agent for the sale of his sew-ing machines in Great Britain, and the de-fendant was to be paid for all machines sent to the plaintiffs after the plaintiffs had sold and received payment for the same: that the defendant was to furnish a specified number of machines per month, and the plaintiffs were to furnish the defendant with a monthly statement of the machines sold by them, and to remit therewith the price of the machines so sold and paid for, at a certain rate, which the defendant guaranteed; and the defendant averred that he delivered the machines in accordance with the agreement, and in all things performed it, until the plaintiffs neglected and refused to furnish such statement and remit the moneys received by them as aforesaid; and that the defendant's refusal to send any further machines was caused solely by reason of the plaintiffs' said breach of the agreement:—Held, plea bad, as not shewing either that the performance of the plaintiffs' covenant was a condition precedent to per-mance by the defendant, or shewing any facts from which it might be inferred that the plaintiffs' breach entitled the defendant to consider the contract as abandoned and to rescind it; and that the defendant's remedy was by cross-action. There was no necessity was by cross-action. There was no necessity to aver in the plea that the defence was one which might have been set up to the original suit, so long as it formed a good defence according to our law. Auchterlonie v. Arms, 25 C. P. 403.

Written Condition on Policy.]-Held, that the condition clause written across the face of a marine policy of insurance must prevail over the printed parts of the policy which are at variance with it. Meagher v. Home Insurance Co., 11 C. P. 328; Meagher v. Ætna Insurance Co., 20 U. C. R. 607.

3. Implying Terms.

Agreement Not to Practise Medicine.]—By an agreement under seal the defendant sold to the plaintiff a house and the goodwill of his medical practice for $2,100, and the defendant "(bound) himself in the sum of $400, to be paid to the (plaintiff) in case the (defendant) shall set up or locate himself in the practice of medicine or surgery within the space of five years from the date hereof within a radius of five miles from the said village: "—Held, that there was an implied agreement by the vendor not to resume practice; that the sum of $400 was payable as liquidated damages on the breach of the agreement; and that the purchaser was entitled to that sum or to an injunction, but not to both. Judgment below, 31 O. R. 91, varied. Snuder v. McKeteey, 27 A. R. 339.

Agreement to Sell-Implied Covenent to Buy.]—An agreement in writing signed by the plaintiff and by the superintendent of the defendants' road, but not under seal, and not purporting to be made by the defendants, who were an incorporated road company, was in part as follows:—"I"—the plaintiff—"have this day agreed with" the defendants "to furnish good gravel and deliver the same in the centre of the road bed * and the the centre of the road bed * * and the company agree to pay me at the rate of $2.40 per cord. * * * And it is further agreed that my tolls * * * shall be free during the full term of this agreement. And it further agreed that in consideration of this agreement and for the sum of $1 * * discharge all claims I hold inst the company. * * And it is against the company. * * * And it is further agreed that this agreement for gravel to hold good as long as the company keep the road and as long as the company keep the road and as long as my gravel holds good.

* * * :"—Held, that an agreement on the part of the defendants that they would take from the plaintiff all the gravel they should require for the portion of their road seferated to in the serious company. referred to in the writing, as long as he was able and willing to supply it, was not to be implied from the terms of the writing; and the taking of gravel from another person was not a breach of the agreement:—Held, also, that to bind the corporation by an executory contract to purchase from the plaintiff all the gravel required for a portion of their road for an indefinite and protracted period, would require an agreement under their corporate seal. Hill v. Ingersoll and Port Burwell Gravel Road Co., 32 O. R. 194.

Agreement to Work—Implied Stipulation to Employ, I—Where the respondent contracted with the Government to execute for a term of years the printing and binding of certain public documents at stipulated prices, but the Government did not expressly contract to give to the respondent ail or any of the said work, it was held that a stipulation to that effect could not be implied, and that there was no breach of contract by reason of orders for work being withheld. The Queen v. Demers, [1900] A. C. 103.

Agreement to Work—Implied Stipulation to Employ.]—When one contracts to do work for another the preparation for which involves outlay and expense, a corresponding agreement, in the absence of any express preson with whom he contracts to furnish the work; but no such implication will be made where from circumstances known to, and in the contemplation of, both parties at the date of the agreement to do the work it was, and continued to be, beyond the power of the party to carry out such implied agreement. McKenne, V. McNemee, 15 S. C. R. 311.

Bill of Sale—Promise to Pay.]—The plaintiff gave to defendant a bill of sale of certain timber, in which was contained a provise for making the same void in case the defendant should pay to the plaintiff £300, and interest, on a day named, and it was added, "but if default be made in payment of said £300 in part or in whole, contrary to the manner and form aforesaid, then it" (the bill of sale) "shall remain and be in full force and virtue:"—Held, on demurrer, that debt would not lie, the deed not sufficiently importing a promise to pay. McLaughlin v. Brouze, 11 U. C. R. 609.

Building Contract—One Contractor Delayed by Another, I—The specifications for a dwelling house to be built stated the work to be done under different heads, mason, carpenter, &c.; and contained a condition that the building must be completed by the 15th June, under a penalty of $20 per week as liquidated damages:—Held, that there was an implied contract by defendant with each contractor that he should not be wrongfully or unreasonably delayed in carrying out his contract; but that where the brick work was necessarily delayed by reason of the frost, and the plaintiff's work was thereby impeded, defendant was not responsible. Lee v. Bothwell, 24 C. P. 109.

Contract to Carry Mails.)—The suppliant had a contract to carry Her Majesty's mails along a certain route. In the construction of a government railway the Crown obstructed a highway used by the suppliant in the carriage of such mails, and rendered it more difficult and expensive for him to execute his contract. After the contract had been fully performed by both parties, the suppliant sought to maintain an action by petition of right for breach thereof on the ground that there was an implied undertaking on the part of the Crown in making such contract that the minister of railways would not so exercise the powers vested in him by statute as to render the execution of the contract by the suppliant more onerous than it would otherwise have been:—Held, that such an undertaking could not be read into the contract by implication. Archibald v. The Queen, 2 Ex. C. R. 374.

Contract to Carry Rails—Employmore of Persons other than Contractor to do Work Covered by Contract.]—On the 9th August, 1875, the suppliant entered into a written contract with the Dominion Government to remove and carry in barges all the steel rails that were then actually landed, or that might thereafter be landed, from seagoing vessels upon the wharves in the harbour of Montreal during the season of navigation in that year, and to deliver them at a place called the Rock Cut on the Lachine Canal. Suppliant duly entered upon the execution of his contract, and no complaint was made on behalf of the Government that his performance of the work was not entirely satisfactory. Some time in the month of September, and when the suppliant had only carried a small quantity of rails, the Government without previous notice to the suppliant, cancelled the contract and employed other persons to do the work that he had agreed to perform. Thereupon the suppliant filed a petition of right claiming damages against the Government for breach of contract. It was alleged by suppliant that M., who had acted on behalf of the Government in making the contract with the suppliant, had represented to him that a very large quantity of rails, amounting to some 25,000 or 35,000 tons, would have to be carried by the suppliant as such contractor; and that it was upon this representation that he entered into the said contract and made a large outlay with a view to efficiently removing and carrying the rails and delivering them safely at their place of destination:—Held. (1.) The fact that no stipulation embodying such representation appeared in the written instrument was evidence that it formed no part of the contract. (2.) That although the suppliant could not import into the formal contract any representations made by M. prior to it being reduced to writing, yet under the terms of the written contract entitled to remove all the rails landed from ships in the port of Montreal during the year 1875 for the purpose mentioned in the con-tract, and should have damages for the loss of the profits that would have accrued to him if he had carried such portion of the rails as was carried by other persons during the continuance of his contract. Kenney v. The Queen, 1 Ex. C. R. 68.

Contract to Supply Printing paper.]—On the 1st December, 1879, B., to whose rights the suppliants had succeeded, entered into a contract with the Crown to supply, for a given time, "such quantities of paper, and of such varieties, as may be required or desired from time to time for the printing and publishing of the Canada gazette, of the stapers of the Canada gazette, of the stapers of the Canada gazette, of the stapers of the contract and other papers as may at any time be required to be printed and published, or as may be ordered from time to time by the proper authority therefor, according to the requirements of Her Majesty in that behalf." Attached to the contract, and made part thereof, was a schedule and specification shewing the paper to be supplied and the price to be paid therefor, but in which no mention was made of double demy.—the paper ordinarily, though not exclusively, used for departmental printing:—Held, that nowith-standing this omission, the contractor had agreed to supply the Crown and the Crown by implication had agreed to purchase of the contractor, among other paper, that required for departmental printing. Clarke v. The Queen, 2 Ex. C. R. 141.

Implied Authority to Pledge Credit.]

—On the maturity of a bill of exchange the drawers thereof, thinking the acceptor would be unable to meet it telegraphed him if unable to pay it to draw on them for the amount. The acceptor took the telegram to the manager of the plaintiff bank, who on the faith of it discounted a sight bill draw?

by the acceptor on the drawers with the proceeds of which he retired his acceptance which was held by another bank. The drawers refused to accept the bill so redrawn:—Held, that the telegram having been sent for the purpose of inducing persons to advance money on it, and to take the bill so drawn in pursuance of it, a privity was created between the plaintiffs and the defendants, senders of the telegram, entitling the former to maintain an action against the latter for the money so advanced:—Held, also, that no time being mentioned in the telegram an authority to draw at sight would be implied. Bank of Montreal v. Thomas, 16 O. R. 503.

Loan—Promise to Repay.]—Where there is evidence of a loan or debt, a promise to repay it will be implied. Hall v. Morley, 8 U. C. R. 584.

Sale of Goods—Inspection.]—Agreement to buy lumber by inspection of S.—Inspection held a condition precedent to the obligation to accept. See Aitcheson v. Cook, 37 U. C. R. 430.

Sale of Goods—Note of Third Person— No Implied Right to Sue.1—Defendant gave a note made by one K. to the plaintiffs in exchange for a buggs. The note was not paid at maturity, whereupon the plaintiffs sued the defendant on the common counts for the price, alleging that he had induced them to take the note by frauddilent representations: —Held, that the plaintiffs could not recover, for there beling an express contract to take in note for the buggy, no agreement to pay larged fraud. Auger v. Thompson, 3 A. R.

Sale on Commission—Absence of Express Contract to Manufacture,1—In a written contract of agency the principal agreed to pay to the agent a fixed commission on all sales of goods manufactured by the former effected by or through the latter. The contract was made terminable at the end of a year on a month's notice by either party; but it contained no express agreement by the principal to employ for any period or to manufacture any goods:—Held, that these terms could not be imported into the contract by implication. Morris v. Dinnick, 25 O. R. 291.

Sale by Sample—Objections to Invoice.] If a merchant receive an invoice and retain it for a considerable time without making any objection, there is a presumption against him that the price stated in the invoice was that agreed upon. Kearney v. Letellier, 27 S. C. II. 1.

Time of Essence—Intention.] — Time may be of the essence of a contract even without any express stipulation if it appears that such was the intention. Oldfield v. Dickson, 18 O. R. 188.

Time of Essence — Lease — Delivery of Possession. — The plantiff was lessee of certain premises, the lease having nearly a year to run, when he was on or about the 13th January applied to on behalf of the defendant, the executor of the lessor, to surrender the remainder of his term, which he consented to do in consideration of $250, agreeing to give up possession on the 1st February. In consequence of negotiations between the parties interested, the plaintiff did not actually give up possession until the end of February, he agreeing to deduct a month's rent as reserved in the lense. Possession was accepted by the defendant's agent, but the defendant refused to pay the consideration agreed upon, alleging as a principal ground for such refusal the nondelivery of possession on the day named:—Held, that time was not by the agreement made of the essence of the contract, and the delay formed no defence to an action for the sum agreed to be paid. Dainty v. Vidal, 11 A. R. 47.

Time of Essence—Timber.]—On a sale of timber limits. See Crossfield v. Gould, 9 A. R. 218.

Tramway Company-Use of Steam.]-The defendant company, who were empowered by statute to run a traction engine over certain highways in the county of York, and who by the charter were allowed to construct a tramway in the county to be worked by horses or steam power, upon such terms as might be agreed on with the municipalities through which the road might pass, entered into an agreement with the county, whereby it was agreed that the company should be at liberty to lay down a tramway along a certain road that the tolls to be collected should not exceed certain specified rates on one and two horse vehicles; that the company, if required, should run two passenger cars daily each way, if required, or in lieu thereof an omnibus or sleigh; that in case horses, carriages, teams, or other vehicles or animals met the horses, waggons, carriages, or other vehicles of the company the latter should have the right of way, and that "so soon as this agreement shall have been ratified by the said corporation, the said company shall forthwith withdraw their said traction engine from the public highways of the said county, and shall discontinue the use of the said traction engine, and of any other traction engine, upon or along such public highways." The company insisted that they were at liberty, under the agreement, to run a steam motor upon the said tramway. Thereupon an action was instituted by the corporation to restrain the use of steam power on tion to restrain the use of sceam powers the transway, which relief the court below, 3 O. R. 584, granted. Upon appeal, this court being equally divided, the appeal was dismissed, with costs. County of York v. Toronto Gravel Road and Concrete Co., 11 A. R. 765. Appeal to supreme court dismissed, 12 S. C. R. 517.

IV. PERFORMANCE.

1. In General.

Accident to Subject Matter.] — The suppliants entered into a contract with the Crown to "place a second-hand compound screw surface condensing engine" in a certain steamship belonging to the Dominion Government; and to convert the vessel from a paddle-steamer into a screw-propeller. By the specifications annexed to and forming part of the contract it was stipulated, inter alia, that the old engine and paddle-wheels were to be broken and taken out of the steamer at the contractors' expense, and that they should stop up all the holes both in the bottom and side of the vessel; that the contractors were to make new any part of the engine or machinery although not named in the specifications, which might be required by the minister, &c., the whole to be completed and ready for sea, on a full steam pressure of 95 lbs, per square inch, ready to com-mence running on a certain date,—the whole work to be of first class style to the entire satisfaction of the engineer appointed to superintend the work. It was further agreed that the steamer was to be put in perfect running order; that the alterations of any parts of the steamer, for the purpose of fitting up the new works, and any openings or cuttings or rebuilding, were to be executed and fur-nished at the cost of the contractors. It was also provided that the steamer was to have a satisfactory trial trip of at least four hours duration, steaming full speed, before being handed over to the department. The vessel was built of iron and very old. The suppliants had taken the old engine out of the hull, and had grounded her, preparatory to placing her in a dry dock in order to complete their work under the contract. Owing to the fact that the bottom of the vessel under the old engine seat had been eaten away by rust, it gave way and was broken in when she grounded. It was established that the accident did not occur through the negligence of the suppliants; but the Crown insisted that the suppliants were liable to repair this damage under the terms of the contract and specifications:—Held, that there was nothing to shew by the terms of the contract and specifications that either party at the time of entering into the contract contemplated that the portion of the steamship lying below and hidden by the engine seat would require renewing; and that the stipulation in the specifications that "the steamer was to be put in perfect running order" was intended put in perfect running order was intended to apply only to work the suppliants had ex-pressly agreed to do, and should not be ex-tended to other works or things which they did not agree to do or to repiace or renew (2) That in such a contract as this, neither by the law of England nor by that of the Province of Quebec is there any warranty to be implied on the part of the owner of the thing upon which the work is to be performed that the same shall continue in a state fit to receive the work contracted for. Lainé v. The Queen, 5 Ex. C. R. 103.

Advertising — Partial Performance.] — Agreement by plaintiffs, advertising agents, to place defendant's cards in railway stations, as specified—Incomplete performance—Right to recover on a quantum meruit. See Foster v. Wilson, 27 C. P. 543.

Agreement to Erect Factory—Abandoment of Business. —Declaration, that the plaintiff agreed to sell and defendant to buy certain land in Oshawa, adjoining the lass of the plaintiff, which would be thereby enhanced in value to the plaintiff, for 8255, upon the following terms; the money to be paid and the conveyances executed on demand, and that defendant should within eighteen montls put up a factory thereon, of the dimensions specified, and carry on there the manufacture of plated ware; and that in case he should not do this he would at the expiration of said eighteen months reconvey the land and receive back the purchase money; and all things happened and all times clapsed, &c. and plaintiff was ready to convey, yet defendant did not pay the plaintiff, nor complete the purchase, but notified the plaintiff that he abandoned and would not perform the agreement, &c. Plea, on equitable grounds, that defendant made the agreement on behalf of himself and others, who were about to associate themselves as a company to manufacture plated ware on the said lot, and with the intention of procuring said land as a site for their factory in case the company should decide to erect it thereon; that the plaintiff knew this when he made the agreement; and before any demand by the plaintiff for payment, and before any conveyance of said land, defendant and the others decided not to carry on said business, and gave notice thereof to the plaintiff and that they would not require said land, and that the plaintiff was released; and defendant did not otherwise abandon said agreement:—Held, following Hochster v, De La Tour, 2 E. & B. 678, that the declaration was good, and the plea no answer to it. Dullea v. Taylor, 34 U. C. R. 12.

Agreement to Make Flour — Mill Burnt.]—In consideration that the plaintiff would deliver to the defendant 2,000 bushels of wheat, the defendant promised to deliver to him, within a reasonable time thereform 500 barrels of flour:—Held, that the word "therefrom" must be construed to mean thereafter, and not that the flour was to be made from the identical wheat delivered. This being the proper construction of the agreement, it was clearly no defence to plead that the defendant's mill, containing the wheat, was burnt down without any negligence on his part; though he would have been excused in that case if the other construction of the agreement could have been adopted. Tilt v. Silexethorne, 11 U. C. R. 619.

Agreement to Remunerate by Legacy.]—Where services are rendered, not on a contract of hiring, nor gratuitously, but upon the faith of a promise to leave property by will, which the testator fails to perform, an action may be maintained against his representatives to recover compensation for the services in the shape of damages for breach of the previous promise. The plaintiff brought the action against the executors of her grandfather's estate, alleging that for several years she had worked for her grandfather in consideration of his agreement to leave her by his will as much as any of his daughters. left her by his will $400, while to his daughters he left $1,000 each, and she claimed speciters he left $1,000 each, and she claimed specific performance, or, in the alternative, wages:

—Held, per Hagarty, C.J.O. and Burton,
J.A.—That the plaintiff could not recover wages, but that the agreement being provel, she was entitled to recover damages for its breach, which would be, if the assets were sufficient, $600. Fer Osler, J.A.—That no sufficient, $600. Per Osler, J.A.—That no more specific agreement was proved, than that the plaintiff was to be remembered by the testator in his will, and therefore she was entitled to nothing beyond the sum left her by the will. Per Maclennan, J.A.—That the agreement was proved, and that the plaintiff was entitled to recover as damages for its breach a sum equal to the amount given to the least favoured daughter, to be ascertained in due course of administration. In the result the judgment below in the plaintiff's favour, was affirmed with a variation. Smith v. McGugan, 21 A. R. 542. See the next case.

Agreement to Remunerate by Legacy. |-X., a girl of fourteen, lived with her grandfather, who promised her that if she would remain with him until he died, or until she was married, he would provide for her by his will as amply as for his daughters. She lived with him until she was twenty-five, when she married. The grandfather died shortly after, leaving her by his will a much smaller sum than his daughters received, and she brought an action against the executors for specific performance of the agreement to provide for her as amply as for his daughters, or, in the alternative, for payment for her services during the eleven years. On the trial of the action it was proved that S., while living with her grandfather, had performed such services as tending cattle, doing field work, managing a reaping machine, and breaking in and driving wild and ungovernable horses:—Held, that the alleged agreement to provide for S. by will was not one of which the court could decree specific performance, but:—Held, further, that S. was entitled to remuneration for her services, and $1,000 was not too much to allow her, McGugan v. Smith, 21 S. C. R. 253.

Agreement to Bequeath Estate.]-Where a father enters into a contract where-by he parts with the custody and control of his child, with the bona fide intention of advancing the welfare of the child, there is nothing in such a contract illegal or contrary to public policy; and although where such a contract is executory on both sides the court cannot decree specific performance, by reason of the want of mutuality, yet where the contract has been faithfully performed so far as the father and child are concerned, so that their status has become altered, the court will, if possible, enforce in specie the performance of the contract by the other party to it. Where, therefore, the parents of the plaintiff agreed with H, and his wife to give up to them their daughter, the plaintiff, then six years old to bring up as their own, and make her sole heiress to their property at their death, and where it appeared that the agreement was bona fide intended by the agreement was bonn noe intended by the father for the ultimate benefit of the plain-tiff and that the plaintiff had remained with H. and his wife for twenty years, rendering them efficient service, and it appeared H. intended her to have his property, and regarded the agreement as binding, so that he considered it unnecessary to make a will:-Held, that the agreement could be enforced against H.'s representative. Held, also, that inasmuch as, if the parents of the plaintiff had brought a suit upon the agreement in this case and recovered, they would have been trustees of the proceeds for her, the plaintiff might maintain the suit in her own name. Roberts v. Hall, 1 O. R. 388.

Agreement to Bequeath Estate.]—Where a contract on the part of a testator founded upon a valuable and sufficient consideration, that he will leave by his will to the other contracting party a sum of money as a legacy, is clearly made out, the representatives of the testator may be compelled to make good his obligation. But where the testator the grauditather of the plaintiff promising to make the same provision for her by will as he should make for his own daughters, took her from the lome of her parents at the age of twelve, adopted her, and maintained her, while she worked for him, for nine years, but although he made his daughters residuary devisees, left the plaintiff nothing by his will and paid her nothing for her services, and she sued his executors for specific performance of the contract or promise and in the alternative for wages:—Held, that the case did not fall within the rule, the promise made and the consideration for it being both of too uncertain a character to entitle the plaintiff to come to the court for specific performance; but that the circumstances gave rise to an implied contract for the payment of wages, and took the case out of the ordinary rule that children are not to look for wages from their parents, or those in loco parentis, in the absence of special contract, whilst they form part of the household. Walker v. Houghner, 18 O. R. 448.

Agreement to Bequeath Estate. |-M., on his father's death, at the age of three years, went to live with his grandfather, W., who sent him to school until he was sixteen years old and then took him into his store where he continued as the sole clerk for eight or nine years, when W. died, and M. died a few days later. Both having died intestate the administratrix of M.'s estate brought an action against the representatives . for the value of such services rendered by M. and on the trial there was evidence of by M. and on the trial there was evidence of statements made by W. during the time of such service to the effect that if he (W.) died without having made a will, M. would have good wages, and if he made a will he would leave the business and some other property to M.:—Held, that there was sufficient evidence of an agreement between M. and W. that the services of the latter were not to be gratuitous but were to be remunerated by payment of wages or a gift by will to overcome the prewages or a girt by will to overcome the pre-sumption to the contrary arising from the fact that W, stood in loco parentis towards M. There having been no gift by will, the estate of W, was therefore liable for the value of the services as estimated by the jury. McGugan v. Smith, 21 S. C. R. 263, followed. Murdoch v. West, 24 S. C. R. 305.

Agreement to Bequeath Estate.] -The plaintiff sought to recover from the executors of the will of a deceased person the whole of his estate, upon the strength of a whole of his estate, upon the strength of a verbal agreement which she alleged was made between her and the deceased. Her evidence was that he said: "You give me a home as long as I live, and when I die you have what is left;" to which she answered "all right;" and he then said, "That is an agreement." The same story was repeated by the daughter and son-in-law of the plaintiff, who said they were present when the agreement was made. Two other witnesses swore that the deceased told them that he had agreed to leave the plaintiff his property when he died. He was maintained by her for eight years after the alleged agreement was made, but made his will in favour of other persons:—Held, that, apart from the Statute of Frauds, the evidence was not such as the court could act upon by decreeing specific performance of the upon by decreeing specific performance of the actual will of the deceased, duly executed, and admitted to probate without objection from the plaintiff or any one else. Such an agreement must be supported by evidence leaving upon the mind of the court as little doubt as if a properly executed will had been produced and proved before it. Held, however, that the plaintiff was entitled, under the circumstances, to remuneration for the board, lodging and care of the deceased for six years, as upon an implied promise to pay a years, as upon an impined promise to pay a reasonable sum per annum. Such a promise was not a special promise to pay at death, and did not give the plaintiff a right to recover more than six years' arrears. Cross v. Cleary, 29 O. R. 542. Bond for Delivery of Goods—Destruction of Goods by Fire.]—The plaintiff lent P. a sum of money, for securing the repayment of which P. gave a chattel morrgage on goods; which P. was to retain possession of, and the defendant executed a bond, conditioned that in default of payment the goods should be forthcoming for the purpose of seizure and sale under the mortgage. Before the day of payment arrived the goods were destroyed by fire, and an action having been commenced against the defendant on this bond, he pleaded the fact of such destruction without any default on his part:—Held, bad on demurre, for not negativing any default on the part of P. Bosscell v. Sutherland, 8 A. R. 253, 32 C. P. 131.

Boundaries—Running Lines.]—R., who held a license from the government of New Brunswick to cut timber vertain lands, claimed that S., license of the wind made, claimed that S., license of the wind lands, claimed that S., license of the wind lands, cutting timber on his grame 800 logs alleged to have been so cut by S. The replevin suit was settled by an agreement between the parties to leave the matter to surveyors to establish the line between the two lots, the agreement providing that the lines of the hand held under the said license (of R.) shall be surveyed and established by (naming the surveyors) and the stumps counted, &c.:—Held, reversing 26 N. B. Rep. 258, that under this agreement the surveyors were bound to make a formal survey, and could not take a line run by one of them at a former time as the said boundary line. Snowball v. Ritchie, 14 S. C. R. 741.

Building Contract—Change in Plans-Acceptance.]-Declaration on a contract by testator to build a marine boiler and steam engine for plaintiff, alleging partial com-pletion by testator before his death, and a promise by defendants as executors to com plete it for the balance due, but that they did not complete it in time, and delivered it unfinished, and not according to the specifica-tions, &c. Defendants pleaded, 3rdly, that testator, and defendants since his death, made all the variations from the plans and con-tracts in the declaration mentioned by the leave and license of plaintiff and his agent:— Held, bad, among other reasons, because leave and license cannot be pleaded to a breach of contract. Fifth plea, as to so much of the declaration referring to alleged imperfections of material and workmanship, that after the occurrence thereof, and before suit, said boiler and engine were taken by plaintiff from defendants, as executors, whereby, and by force of the contract set out in the declara-tion, defendants ceased to be liable in damages in respect of the causes of action to which the plea was pleaded:—Held, good. Leonard v. Northey, 22 C. P. 11.

Building Contract — Failure to Complete—Faulty Construction — Premature Action.]—See Bender v. Carrier, 15 S. C. R. 19.

Building Contract — Subsequent Bylaw.]—8. & Co., contractors for the erection of a building for the respondent in the city of St. John, N.B., brought an action claiming to have been prevented by respondent from carrying out their contract. The declaration also contained the common counts, part of the work having been performed. By the terms of the contract the building, when erected, would not have conformed to the provisions of a by-law of the city passed (under authority of an Act of New Brunswick, 41 Vict, c. 7) two days after the contract was signed:—Held, that the by-law of the city of St. John made the contract lilegal, and, therefore, the plaintiffs could not recover. Walker v. McMillan, 6 S. C. R. 241, followed. Spears v. Walker, 11 S. C. R. 113.

Declaration of Intention not to Complete.]—Where before the time for the completion of a contract for the sale of goods one party notifies the other that he does not intend to complete, that notification may be treated as a breach and at once acted on; but if, as he may, the other party waits till the time for completion and then brings his action he must shew that at this time he had himself fulfilled all conditions precedent on his part. Dalrymple v. Scott, 19 A. R. 477.

Declaration of Intention not to Perform.] — Where a party, before the time stipulated for performing his contract, declares that he will not perform it, the other party may treat this as a breach and sue, Dullea v. Taylor, 34 U. C. R. 12.

Defendant Preventing Performance. —Performance prevented by defendant, when a defence. See Steen v. Swalwell, 25 C. P. 356.

Defendant Putting it Out of His Power to Perform.]—By deed of the 18th June, 1847, defendant agreed to sell to plaintiff the net profits for two years from the date of the agreement of certain shares in a mining company for £375. On the 25th November, 1847, the company sold and assigned to the Montreal Mining Company certain tracts of land therein described, and all tools, engines, &c., for £33, £50, to which sale defendant assented:—Held, that the defendant having disposed of his stock, which represented his interest in the mines, before the time at which he was to sell the profits to the plaintiff, he had placed it out of his power to fulfil his agreement, and so broke his contract; and the plaintiff became immediately entitled to sue for the breach thereof, upon the ground that the contract was at an end, and that the consideration had failed. Sanders v. Baby, 5 C. P. 441.

Delivery of Conveyance.]—A promise to deliver a conveyance includes a promise to execute it. Whittier v. McLennan, 13 U. C. R. 638.

Delivery of Timber—Cutting Logs.]—Defendants were taken by the plaintiff to a quantity of timber already made upon the ground, and having seen it they contracted to draw it out and deliver it to the plaintiff on the bank of a river:—Held, that the timber cut in two by defendants to suit their convenience, without plaintiff's permission, and drawn out to the river in that altered state, was not a delivery within the contract. Reynolds v. Shuter, 3 U. C. R. 377.

Editing Magazine—Ceasing to Publish.]

- The first count alleged that the defendant agreed under seal with the plaintiff to edit a magazine owned by her, on certain terms specified, but that he refused to continue as such editor, whereby she was forced to discontinue the publication. Defendant pleaded that before any breach of his agreement the plaintiff, finding the magazine did not pay, gensed to publish it, whereby he was prevented from acting as editor, although he was ready to do so:—Held, clearly a good defence. Elmore v. Hind, 24 U. C. R. 136.

Executory Contract — Destruction of Subject Matter,]—Where an executory contract is entered into respecting property or goods, if the subject matter be destroyed by the act of God or vis major, over which neither party has any control, and without either party's default, the parties are releved. McKennay, McKamay, 14 A. R. 339.

Expropriation for Government Railway—Performance of Contract Rendered Impossible by Expropriation.]—The claimants sought to recover from the Crown the amount of damages they alleged they were obliged to pay to a contractor who was prevented by the expropriation from completing the construction of a wharf he had undertaken to build for them:—Held, that as the contractor had been prevented from completing the construction of the wharf by the exercise of powers conferred by Act of Parliament, the claimants were excused from any liability to him in respect of the breach of contract, and could not maintain any claim against the Crown in that behalf. Samson v. The Queen, 2 Ex. C. R. 30.

Half-breed's Claim.] — Action for not transferring to plaintiff a claim of a half-breed in Manitoba, or returning the price paid therefor. See Burns v. Young, 10 A. R. 215.

Hire of Ship—Plaintiff Resuming Possession.]—Where defendant had agreed to return a steamer chartered on a certain day in good repair, dangers of the lake excepted, a plea "that before the day arrived the plaintiff took the boat from defendant without his consent, and kept her." was held sufficient, though not in express terms confessing and avoiding the fact of not returning the boat. Larned v. McRae, 1 U. C. R. 99.

Illegality of Contract.]—The information aliged an agreement with Her Majesty whereby in consideration of the conveyance by the Intercolonial Railway of certain passengers between certain stations, the defendants agreed to pay Her Majesty, through the proper officers of that railway, the fares or passage money of such passengers at the rate therein mentioned as agreed to between the defendants admitting the agreement as alleged, sought to avoid it by setting up as a defence that such passengers were carried on bons in blank signed by one of the defendants only:—Held, to be no answer to the breach of contract alleged. The Queen v. Pouliot, 2 Ex. C. R. 49.

Imperfect Performance — Quantum Meruit.] — Imperfect performance — Knowledge thereof by defendant without notice to discontinue—Right to recover on a quantum meruit. See Foster v. Wilson, 27 C. P. 543.

Impossibility — Damages.] — No action lies for the non-performance of a term of a contract which term is on its face impossible of performance by any of the parties. Where, therefore, a contract was made by a company for the electric lighting of a city for a named number of nights before a fixed date at a fixed rate per light per night, there not being as many as the named number of namey and the named number of new particular terms.

ber of nights before that date, and the company did not supply lights the nights that there were, and were not prevented from doing so by the city, it was held that they were not entitled to recover at the contract rate for the named number or for more than the nights actually lighted. Stratford Gas Co. v. City of Stratford, 26 A. R. 109.

Lease—Covenant to Renew—Impossibility.)—To an action against a municipal corporation for not renewing a lease pursuant to their covenant contained in it, defendants pleaded that they had no authority to make the least, as defendant who was an inhabitand that before the term express of the was obtained against them in chancery, of which defendant had notice before this action, declaring that the land in question was dedicated for a market square only, and that this lease had been granted without authority, and should not be renewed:—Held, on demurrer, no defence. Wade v. Town of Brantford, 19 U. C. R. 207.

Master of Ship—Destruction of Ship by Fire.]—Where the plaintiff was engaged by the defendants for "the season," i.e., from early in May till some time in November, as master to manage the steamer Idyl-Wyid for S.1.000., and he continued so employed unfled, the steamer was burnt:—Idel, the steamer was subject to the continued existence of the vessel, and performance was excused by its destruction without the default of the defendant. Semble, that such a contract made verbally with the president of the defendant company might be binding; and that a nonsuit for want of the corporate seal was properly set aside. Ellis v. Midland R. W. Co., 7 A. R. 464.

Merger of Contract in Conveyance.]

—The defendant, an assignee for creditors, agreed with the plaintiff to exchange five houses, then in course of erection, for certain lands of the plaintiff. By the contract, which was dated March 24th, the houses were to be completed by May 30th, similar to certain houses on O. street. Mutual conveyances were to be exchanged between the parties within sixty days, i.e., by 24th May, but as a matter of fact they were executed and exchanged about 9th May. The plaintiff subsequently in the present action claimed damages for non-completion and defects in the finishing of the houses. The deed from the defendants contained no covenants covering the matters complained of:—Held, nevertheless, that the plaintiff was entitled to recover on the original contract. A contract to perform work or to do things for the other contracting party on a sale of lands at a period after the time fixed by the same contract for the execution and final delivery of the formal conveyance, does not become merged in the conveyance. Held, also, that the loss of rents which might have been obtained for the houses if completed at the proper time was a proper measure of damages, the contracting parties having known that the houses were intended to be rented. Smith v. Tennant, 20 C. R. 180.

Municipal Corporations—Disqualification of Councillor.]—The defendant, who was a municipal councillor, entered into a sub-contract with the plaintiff to do the brick and misson work under the plaintiff's contract with the municipality to build a town hall, that contract providing that the contractor should not sub-let the work or any part thereof without the consent in writing of the architect and municipality, and this consent the plaintiff was to obtain. The municipality refused to consent to the sub-contract on the ground that the defendant's services would be of value in the oversight of the contract:—Held, that there could not be imported into the defendant's sub-contract an agreement to resign is seat, as such an agreement to resign a public trust for private gain would be contrary to public policy and illegal, and that the defendant was not liable in damages because of the breach of an implied obligation to resign, though his resignation might, as the plaintiff contended, have enabled the plaintiff to fulfil the condition precedent on his part of obtaining the municipality's consent. Semble: If the sub-contract had taken effect the defendant would have been, under s. 80–11) of the Municipal Act, R. S. O. 1837 c. 223, disqualified. Judgment below, 30–0. R. 411, reversed. Ryan v. Willoughby, 27 A. R. 135.

Partial Performance—Quantum Merwit.]—Where there is a contract to do specified work for a fixed sum, with a proviso for payment of proportionate amounts, equal to eighty per cent, of this fixed sum, as the work is done and the balance of twenty per cent, in thirty days after completion and acceptance, completion is a condition precedent to the right to payment, and where the work is not completed there is no right to recover for the portion done as upon a quantum meruit. Shertock v. Powell, 26 A. R. 407.

Principal and Agent-Sale by Agent-Commission. |—The appellant company deal in electrical supplies at Halifax and have at times sold goods on commission for the defendant, a company manufacturing electric machinery in Montreal. In 1897 the appeltelegraphed the respondent as follows: "Windsor electric station completely burned. Fully insured. Send us quotations for new plant. Will look after your interest." The reply was :- " Can furnish Windsor 180 Killovatt Stanley two phase, complete ex-citer and switchboard, $4,900, including commission for you. Transformers, large size, 75 cents per light." * * * The manager of appellant company went to Windsor but could not effect a sale of this machinery, Shortly after a travelling agent of the defendant company came to Halifax and saw the manager and they worked together for a time trying to make a sale but the agent finally sold a smaller plant to the Windsor com-pany for $1,800. The appellants claimed a commission on this sale and on its being refused brought an action therefor :- Heid, that the appellants were not employed to effect the sale actually made; that the Montreal company offered the commission only on the sale of the specific plant mentioned in the answer to the request for quotations; and that there was no evidence of any course of dealing between the two companies which would entitle the appellants to such commis-sion. Starr v. Royal Electric Co., 30 S. C.

Purchase of Ship.]—Declaration on a bond conditioned to convey to the plaintiffs within three months a certain steamboat, and for quiet possession of the same from the making of the bond, assigning as breaches, I. not conveying within three months; 2. an eviction by one O. S. G. under the power in a mortgage derived from the defendants, Pleas, to the first breach, that said steamboat was mertgaged to J. H. C. at the time of the execution of the bond, for the same amount as plaintiffs had agreed to pay defendants, and that defendants had handed him the notes given by plaintiffs for the price; and the said J. H. C. held the mertgage only as security for due payment thereof, and plaintiffs thereupon discharged defendants from procuring such conveyance. Plea to second breach, after stating a similar agreement, alleged a transfer of the mortgage from J. H. C. to O. S. G., and that the plaintiffs made default in their agreement by non-payment of one of the notes, whereupon O. S. G. took possession, claiming an equitable interest by virtue of said agreement with defendant and his assignees. Both pleas held bad on demurrer, the plaintiffs engaging to apply their payments towards an incumbrance not amounting to a waiver of their right to a conveyance from the vendors. Corby v. Cotton, 7 C. P. 200.

Sale to Firm—Dissolution of Firm.]—
The defendants contracted to deliver lumber to a firm of three partners. Before delivery the firm was dissolved, and the defendants refused to carry out their contract. In an action brought in the individual names of the three partners, for damages for non-delivery:
—Held, that the dissolution of the firm was no justification in law for the defendants refusal to carry out their contract. McCraney
v. McCool, 19 O. R. 470. 18 A. R. 217.

Sale of Goods—Inspection.]—A contract for the sale of lumber was made wholly by correspondence, and the letter which completed the bargain contained the following provision: "The inspection of this lumber to be made after the same is landed here" (at Windsor) "by a competent inspector to be agreed upon between buyer and seller and his inspection to be final:"—Held, that it was not essential for the parties to agree upon an inspector before the inspection was begun; and a party chosen by the buyer having inspected the lumber and before his work was completed the seller having agreed to accept him as inspector, the contract was satisfied and the inspection final and binding on the parties. Thomson v. Matheson, 30 S. C. R. 357.

sale of Machine — Inspection.] — An agreement for the sale of a machine provided that the inventor should personally inspect the placing and setting of it in operation. The machine was delivered, but the inventor refusing to go, the vendors sent another competent person to set it up:—Held, that the vendors were nevertheless entitled to recover the price on the principle that the stipulation alleged did not go to the whole root and consideration of the contract, and, therefore, was not to be considered as a condition precedent but as a distinct covenant, the breach of which could be satisfied by damages. Covean, V. Fisher, 31 O. R. 426.

Towing—Tug Frozen in.]—Semble, that it is no defence to an action against the commander of a steamboat for not towing, &c., that he could not perform his contract by reason of his tow-boat being unavoidably frozen in the ice. Dorland v. Bonter, 5 U. C. |

Trade Combination.]—Several proprietors of salt wells entered into an undertaking the products through trustees, and their products through trustees, and their products through trustees, and the way; and a written agreement to this effect was executed by all the parties, except one, who was resident in England, and carried on his business here through an agent. The business was carried on under the agreement, notwithstanding his non-execution; and one of the other parties having subsequently attempted to act in contravention of the agreement, it was—Held, that the delay of the absent party to sign the contract, was no answer to a motion for an injunction restraining the contravention. Ontario Salt Co. v. Merchants Salt Co., 18 Gr. 551.

Work and Labour—Willingness to Perjorn, 1—16 norder to recover in an action for non-performance of a contract to do work, the plaintif must shew a willingness and readiness on his part to perform, and on the defendant's part a distinct and unequivocal absolute refusal, and that such refusal was treated and acted upon by the plaintiff; for, if after refusal, he continue to urge or demand compliance with the contract, he must be deemed as considering it as not at an end. McLellen v. Winston. 12 O. R. 431.

In this case the plaintiff set up a contract made with defendants, to cut and lay down on the defendants' limits a quantity of ties; that he was to ship his outfit to Port Arthur, where he was to receive instructions from defendants as to the means and way of forwarding same to the place where the work was to be performed. The plaintiff sent his outfit to Port Arthur, and claimed that defendants neglected and refused to give such instructions and refused to carry out the contract whereby the plaintiff was damnified:—Held, that the evidence disclosed that the plaintiff himself was not ready and willing to per-form the contract; and further, if a refusal to perform by defendants was proved, that it was not treated and acted upon by plaintiff as such, but thereafter he continued to treat the contract as still subsisting. Held, therefore, the action failed. Ib.

Sale of Patent-Future Improvements.] By contract under seal M. agreed to sell to B. and S. the patent for an acctylene gas machine for which he had applied and a caveat had been filed, and also all improvements and patents for such machine that he might thereafter make, and covenanted that he would procure patents in Canada and the United States and assign the same to B. and The latter received an assignment of the Canadian patent and paid a portion of the ent was issued it was found to contain a variation from the description of the machine in the caveat and they refused to pay the balance, and in an action by M. to recover the same, they demanded by counterclaim a re-turn of what had been paid on account:— Held, that the agreement was not satisfied by an assignment of any patent that M. might afterwards obtain: that he was bound to obtain and assign a patent for the machine described in the caveat referred to in the agreement; and that as the evidence showed the variation therefrom in the American patent to be most material, and to deprive purchasers of a feature in the machine which they deemed essential, M. was not entitled to recover:—Held, further, that as R, and S, accepted the Canadian patent and paid a portion of the purchase money in consideration thereof, and as they took the benefit of it, worked it for their own profit and sold rights under it, they were not entitled to recover back the money so paid as money had and received by M, to their use. Bingham v. McMurray, 30 S, C, R, 159.

2. Place and Time.

Acceleration Clause.]—Where, by virtue of an acceleration clause in a mortgage deed, the whole of the mortgage money has become due by default of payment of interest, and judgment has been recovered for the whole by the mortgagee against the mortgagor, in an action solely upon the covenant for payment contained in the mortgage deed, the defendant is not entitled, upon payment of interest and costs, to have the judgment and execution issued thereon set aside. The acceleration is not in the nature of a penalty, but is to be regarded as the contract of the parties. Rules 359, 390, and 361, and the long form of the acceleration issued the law. R. S. O. ISST c. 107, schedule B., s. 16, considered. Wilson v. Campbell, 15 P. R. 254.

Building Contract — Extras—Arbitration Clause.]—The Royal Electric Company having sued the city of Three Rivers for the contract price of the installation of a complete electric plant, which, under the terms of the contract, was to be put in operation for at least six weeks before payment of the price could be claimed, the court referred the case to experts on the question whether the contract had been substantially fulfilled, and they found that owing to certain defects the contract had not been satisfactorily completed:—Held, that it being found that the appellants had not fulfilled their contract within the delay specified, they could not recover. Held, also, that when a contract provides that no payment shall be due until the work has been satisfactorily completed a claim for extras, made under the contract, will not be exigible prior to the completion of the main contract. Quarre: Whether a right of action exists although a contract contains a clause that all matters in dispute between the parties shall be referred to arbitration. Quebec Street R. W. Co. v. City of Quebec, 10 Q. I. R. 205. referred to Royal Electric Co. v. City of Three Ricers, 23 S. C. R. 280.

Extension of Time-Necessity of Appliextension of time cation for, —Under a building contract, in writing, the contractor agreed that, subject to any extension of time by the architect, the building should be finished by a named day, and that in default he would pay $50 a week as liquidated damages. It was also provided that all extras. &c., should form part of the contract if authorized by the architect, who was first to fix the price, and grant such extension of time therefor as he thought necessary, and power was also given him to extend the time for completion in case of a strike. The building was not completed for over four months after the time fixed, and this action for the balance of the contract price was commenced within the time the final payment was made payable under the contract. Although some extras were done, and there was evidence as to delay by strikes, the architect was not asked for and he did not grant any extension of time:—Held, that the contract must govern, and that the defendants were entitled to recover, by way of counterclaim, the sum provided by the contract as liquidated damages. McNamara V. Skain, 23 O. R. 103.

Hiring.)—The defendants, resident in the Province of Quebec, there wrote and posted to the plaintiff in Ontario a letter putting an end to a contract of hiring entered into in Quebec between the parties:—Held, in an action for wrongful dismissal, that the breach of the contract occurred in Quebec, the receipt of the letter by the plaintiff not being the breach, but only evidence of it; and service of the writ of summons on the defendant in Quebec could not be allowed under Rule 271 (e). Cherry v. Thomson, L. R. 7 Q. B. 573, followed. Offord v. Bresse, 16 F. R. 332.

Hiring.]—Where a contract of hiring is made within the Province of Ontario, and the work thereunder is to be done there, the commission therefor will be payable there. Hoerler v. Hanover, &c., Works, 10 Times L. R. 22, and Robey v. Snaefell Mining Co., 20 Q. B. D. 152, referred to. If the contract is ended by a letter sent from another Province, quere whether this indicates that the breach complained of was out of the Province. And where, upon a motion to set aside service of a writ of summons on defendants resident out of the jurisdiction in an action for breach of such contract of hiring, there was conflicting evidence as to whether the discharge of the plaintiff from the defendants' service was by letter or by the act of an agent of the defendants within the Province, the plaintiff was allowed to proceed to trial upon his undertaking to prove at the trial a cause of action within Rule 271 (c). Bell v. Villeneuve, 16 P. R. 413.

Loan — Repayable when Able—Eridence.] —Where money is lent to be repaid when the borrower is able, his ability may be shewn by a slight amount of evidence, such as is open to public observation, of a flourishing condition of his affairs, and it is not necessary to shew that the borrower is in a position to discharge the debt without inconvenience. Re
Ross, 29 Gr. 385.

Sale of Goods—Inspection of Bulk.]—
The defendants in British Columbia by letter offered to sell the plaintiff in Ontario a carload of lumber, according to a sample previously furnished, at a certain price, free on board of the property of the parties of the property of

Sale of Goods.]—The plaintiff, in London, Ontario, wrote to the defendant in Quebec, offering to take a quantity of empty oil barrels. The defendant, by letter posted in Quebec, accepted the offer, saying best of ship them, but some time afterwards wrote again, refusing to do so:—Held, that this contract was made in Quebec, and, in the absence of an express agreement to the contrary, was to be performed there by delivery of the goods to carriers to be carried to London; and the cause of action was, therefore, not one in respect of which service of the writ of summons out of the jurisdiction could properly be allowed under Rule 271 (e). Empire Oil Company v. Vallerand, 17 P. R. 27.

Sale of Goods.]—The plaintif gave an order in Ontario for goods to the traveler of the defendants, wholesale merchants in Montreal, "Ship via G. T. R." at a certain named date. The goods were not so shipped, and a correspondence ensued, ending in the defendants refusing to supply the goods:—Held, that the breach was the non-shipment via Grand Trunk Railway at Montreal, and not the subsequent refusal by correspondence, and, as the whole cause of action did not arise where the order was given, a mandamus to a division court Judge to try the action was refused. Re Diamond v. Waldron, 28 O. R. 478.

Time not Limited — Request.]—Where no time is limited for the doing of an act, it must be done in a rensonable time, and a special request should be averred. Daily v. Stevenson, 5 O. S. 737.

3. Privity and Parties Liable.

Action en Garantie — Connexité—Law of Quebec.]—See Royal Electric Co. v. Leonard, 23 S. C. R. 298.

Agent of Incorporated Body.] — The plaintiff sued the defendant for lumber furnished on the occasion of the Provincial Agricultural Society's meeting at Hamilton. The defence was, that the society, which was an incorporated body, was liable, and not the defendant personally. The learned Judge at the trial left it to the jury to find upon the evidence whether the defendant had contracted with the plaintiff personally, or as one of a committee of gentlemen who undertook to superintend, in either of which events he held him to be personally liable; but the jury were told that if he contracted only as representing or on behalf of the corporation, then ne would not be personally liable: — Held, on motion for a new trial, the yerdict being for the plaintiff, that the ruling was correct. Simpson v. Carr, 5 U. C. R. 326.

Agent—Partnership—Election.]—The defendant D. after some correspondence with plaintiffs as to an advertising contract for the Union Medicine Co., had an interview with plaintiffs in sto entering into the same. A contract had been drawn up by plaintiffs in expectation that it would be made by the company, but on ascertaining that the company was not incorporated it was at plaintiffs' request signed by D., and the entry in plaintiffs' books was "G. A. Devlin, Toronto, Union Medicine Advertising Contract." The first and second payments were made by D., but on the third payment coming due, he stated his desire not to make it as it might prejudice a claim he had against G., his partner, with whom he had a dispute about the partnership affairs, whereupon plaintiffs saw G., and on his stating that it was D.'s business to pay this account, the plaintiffs sned D. and moved for judgment under Rule S0, stating in their affidavit in support of the motion that "the claim was under an agreement made between the parties," &c., and that "the defendant" D. "was and still is, justly and truly indebted to the plaintiffs in respect of the matters above set forth." D. put in an affidavit in answer, in consequence of which G. was made a party defendant, and the case proceeded to trial:—Held, that, on the evidence, the credit under the contract was given to D. alone; but even treating D. as an agent as one of the firm, and therefore that G. night be jointly liable with D., the plaintiffs were bound to elect whether they looked to D. or the firm, and that there was a binding election not to treat the firm as liable, but to rely on the individual liability of D. Mail Printigg Co. v. Declin, 17 O. R. 15.

Agreement Signed by Person not Mentioned in 1t.]—Where an agreement under seal, for the completion of certain work, and been entered into by one of two plaintiffs, and the other, who was not mentioned in it, signed and sealed it also, and afterwards assisted in the work, and was recognized and paid by defendant, for whose benefit the work was done, as a joint contractor with the plaintiff mentioned in the instrument:—Held, that assumpsit was maintainable by both for the value of the work, an implied parol agreement having been substituted for the instrument under seal. Ross v. Tait, H. T. 7, Will, IV.

Agreement Waiving Liability Negligence. | Declaration under C. S. U. C. c. (8), by the administrator of A., alleging that A. was lawfully on the platform of a station on defendants' railway, and the de-fendants so negligently managed and drove an engine and carriages loaded with timber along the line near said station that a piece of timber projecting from said carriages, struck and killed the said A. Plea, that A. was a news-bay in the employ of C. & Co., vending papers on defendance trains, under an agreement with C. & Co. and defendants, which agreeprovided that defendants should carry & Co., their newsboys and agents, on their trains, and should not be liable for any in-jury to the persons or property of said C. & Co., their newsboys or agents, whether occasioned by defendants' negligence or otherwise: Held, plea good, without alleging that A. was a party to, or aware of the agreement. Quære, if such contract is to be considered as made with the person carried, and if so, as to the effect of his being an infant. Alexander v. Toronto and Nipissing Railway Co., 33 U. C. R. 471; 34 U. C. R. 453.

Assignces of Lease Paying to Lessee Amount Due for Rent.]—Defendant had contracted to supply the Buffalo and Lake Huron R. W. Co. with wood. In 1858, by instrument under seal between them, in consideration of $22,000, defendant released the company from the contract, and the company covenanted to indemnify defendant against all contracts made by him with one M., among which was a contract to convey to M. two losts of land; one in South Easthope, which had been leased by plaintiffs to defendant, the other in Zorra, which had been leased by the plaintiffs to one J., who had assigned it to M.

In 1865 defendant wrote to the company stating that the plaintiffs had claimed from him rent in arrear on these two lots amounting to rent in arrear on these two loss amounting to $2,000, and offering, if the company would pay him that sum, and re-convey the leases, to assume them for the future. The company to assume them for the future. The company assented, paid him the $2,000, transferred to him his leases which he had transferred to them, and took a receipt under seal from defendant as in full of all claims for such leases, by which receipt defendant discharged the company of all further liability in respect of such leases under the indenture of 1858. The company had previously paid the rent of both these lots, and defendant after receiving this money paid the rent on the South Easthope lot. The plaintiffs having recovered from delot. The plaintiffs having recovered from de-fendant as for money received to their use:— Held, that the verdict was wrong, for though the settlement was made on the basis of the amount due to them on the leases, yet it was paid to defendant not as the plaintiffs' money. but as the price of the railway company's discharge, and there was no privity between plaintiffs and defendant. Canada Company plaintiffs and defendant. Co. McDonald, 25 U. C. R. 384.

Bullding Contract—Surety—Sub-contract.)—A, contracts with a company to make a highway, and B, becomes his security to them. A, then employs C, to cut out certain timber for him, and while C, is thus engaged A, fails in his contract with the company, B, the surety, tells C, to go on and he will see him paid. Upon completing his work C, sues A, and B, jointly:—Held, that there was no joint contract by A, and B, with C, but that A, was primarily liable on his contract, and B, as a guarantor. Nicholas v. King, 5 C, C, R, 324.

Canal Commissioners. — Assumpsit does not lie against the commissioners of the St. Lawrence canal, under 3 Will. IV. c. 17, for the work done on the canal on a contract made with them, unless it can be specially shewn that they made themselves personally liable, as they must be considered merely as agents of the government. Tait v. Hamilton, 6 O. 8, 80.

Cheese Factory—Sale of Cheese by Committee.]—Cheese factory—Agreement by the patrons to send milk and to receive cheese in return, or its price—Sale by managing committee to the plaintiff of cheese made during the season—Parties liable on such contract, Gill v. Morrison, 26 C. P. 124.

Churchwardens—Minister's Salary.]— Plaintiff sued defendants, as churchwardens, for his stipend as the incumbent or minister of a church. It appeared that several resolutions were adopted in vestry as to the salary of the clergyman, but only one subsequent to defendants' acceptance of office, which related to an old balance:—Held, that as plaintiff's claim rested on a voluntary undertaking of the vestry, not founded upon a consideration moving from plaintiff or upon any executed consideration of services rendered, and the evidence shewed no contract between plaintiff and defendants founded upon a consideration between them, defendants were entitled to judgment. Carry v. Wallacc, 12 C. P. 372.

Collective Description.] — Where four parties described, not by their own names and personal descriptions, but as a collective body not shewn to be corporate, signed and sealed a deed with their own names and seals:—

Held, that they were individually bound. Cullen v. Nickerson, 10 C. P. 549.

Committee of Church.]—The plaintiff sued five defendants, describing them as the committee of the Presbyerian Church at P., for his salary Minister of Presbyerian Church at P., for his salary Minister of Presbyerian Church at P., for his salary Minister of Presbyerian Church at P., for his salary Minister of Presbyerian Church at P., for his salary Minister of the congregation, that the committee usually consisted of eight persons chosen annually, and that a record of their proceedings was kept; that at a meeting of the congregation in 1836, it was agreed to give the plaintiff a call, and afterwards, at another meeting, that he should receive £100 a year, to be paid to him from the power pents, which it was customary for the committee to collect half-yearly. It was not shewn who composed the committee in 1856, or that all the defendants were members of it in 1857 or 1858;—Held, that the action could not be maintained. Stevart v. Martin, 18 U. C. R. 477.

Committee of Council. | - Defendants were a committee of the city council to inspect and superintend the building of a gaol. It was determined at a meeting of the committee that there should be a ceremony on the occasion of laying the corner stone, and a lunch-eon given in the St. Lawrence Hall; and one of the defendants, the chairman, gave an order addressed to the plaintiff as "commission merchant," for the supply of certain wines specified, to be sent to the St. Lawrence Hall, directing him to render his account to the board of gaol inspectors. The plaintiff sent his bill to the chamberlain's office, headed "K. T., chairman board of gaol inspectors, bought of G. Thomas, agent." The council, however, refused to sanction the expenditure, and he then sued the members of the commit-tee who were present at the meeting when the order was given :- Held, that they were personally liable, and that the plaintiff might sue in his own name. One of the defendants, the mayor, was present at the meeting referred to, and at first objected to the expense, but when told that it would be less than he had heard he did not persevere in his opposition. He afterwards wrote to the chairman to say that he would attend the ceremony, but would not be at the luncheon, because he was obliged to leave town on business, and because he disap-proved of so great and unsatisfactory an ex-penditure by the committee:—Held, not sufficient to exempt him from liability with the others. Thomas v. Wilson, 20 U. C. R. 331.

Contractor for Water — Liability for Loss by Fire.]—A contractor with a corporation to supply hydrants at certain points with water for public use, in the event of fires, is not liable for damages occasioned to the property of an individual ratepayer of the city by fire, owing to there not being a sufficient supply of water; there being no sufficient privity between such ratepayer and the contractor. Cunningham v, Furniss, 4 C. P. 514.

Contractor not Named.)—Two of three plaintiffs contracted under seal to do certain work, which was done by three, but not according to the agreement. The three having sued were nonsuited on production of the contract. The nonsuit was upheld, and an amendment by striking out the name of the third plaintiff, in order to save the Statute of Limitations, was refused. Bricker v. Ancell, 23 U. C. R. 48I.

Implied Assumpsit. |—A. contracts by deed with B. to sell him certain timber off his lot, to be puid by at certain fixed times. B. being in default, at certain fixed times. B. being in default, to have a joint interest in the timesumpsit, sues B. and C. on an implied assumpsit, yet 8. and C. on an implied assumpsit, yet that, being concluded by the deed as to the parties liable on the contract, he could not sue B. and C. jointly. Armstrong v. Anderson, 4 U. C. R. 113.

Joint Contracts.] — In an action for work and labour against the executors of Z, it appeared that the work was done under two sealed contracts, entered into originally by Z, with one R, who had sublet one of these contracts to the plaintiff and D. The plaintiff had, by subsequent agreement with M, and D., respectively, acquired the sole interest in each of these contracts: but after he had done so, on each contract between B. and his sub-contractors an agreement under seal was indorsed, by which B. assigned all his interest in these contracts respectively to Z.; and the sub-contractors (the plaintiff and M. in the one case, and the plaintiff and D. in the other) agreed to accept Z. in place of B., and Z. agreed to assume the contracts, as if originally made by him with the sub-contractors. The agreement indorsed on the contract between B. and the plaintiff and D. was not executed by D:—Held, that the plaintiff could not recover alone, the liability being to himself jointly with A. and D. respectively on the respective contracts. Zimmerman v. Woodruff, 17 U. C. R. 584.

Joint Agreement.]—Agreement with two plaintiffs; separate actions by each:—Held, not maintainable. Pew v. Buffalo and Lake Huron R. W. Co., 17 U. C. R. 282.

Joint Contractors.]—Judgment Against One.]—The plaintiff having sued one of two joint contractors, the other being out of the jurisdiction, and having recovered judgment against him, cannot afterwards sue the other. Harris v. Dunn, 18 U. C. R. 352.

Joint Liability — Separate Benefit.]— Contract to build two stores for defendants, one store being for each defendant. Defendants held jointly liable. See Herbert v. Park, 25 C. P. 57.

Joint Liability—Failure Against One.]—Held, that this action being on a joint promise against K. and M., and there being no evidence to bind K., and no application to strike out his name, which if asked might have been refused, the plaintiff must fail upon this ground. Macklin v. Kerr. 28 C. P. 90.

Leave—Corenant—Omission.]—An indenture of lease was made between three parties; plaintiff of the first part, one A. of second part, and defendant of third part. The party of the first part leased to the party of the second part a certain hotel, with certain goods and chattels; and the party of the second part covenanted, among other things, at the expiration or other sooner determination of the lease, to pay the party of the first part the difference between £550 and the value of such goods, which value should be ascertained by, &c. Then it proceeded as follows:—"The said party of the third part (defendant) covenants with the said party of the first part that the said party of the second part (lessee) shall pay the difference between the said sum of £550 and the value of such of said goods and chattels." &c., not containing the words, "to be ascertained as aforesaid:"—Held, that notwithstanding such omission, upon non-performance by the lessee, plaintiff could recover namet defendant. Hayes v. Addy, 3 °C. P.

Maintenance—Beneficiaries not Parties.]—In consideration of a conveyance to him of a certain farm, the petitioner agreed with his mother that he would, during her life, provide her with a house on the farm, and with necessaries, and support his brothers and sisters thereon, until they reached sixteen years of age, so long as they remained at home on the said farm, and assisted him so far as they were able in the management of it:—Held, that the mother had no right or power to release the petitioner from the obligations undertaken by him with reference to his brothers and sisters under the agreement, and if the children did their part they could hold their brother to his promise, though the agreement was not in terms made with them as parties. Re McMillan, 17 O. R. 344.

Married Woman as Co-Contractor.]

—A married woman having separate estate may enter into a contract along with others. Semble, if she having no separate estate is not liable under such a contract the other contractors are liable without her. Dingman v. Harris, 26 O. R. 84.

Misjoinder.]—Declaration by A., B., and C. paintiffs. First count, that A. and B. agreed to perform certain work on a railway for defendant, and having associated C. with them as co-partner commenced the same; that defendant became desirous of discontinuing and suspending said work, and it was then agreed between plaintiffs and defendant in writing that it should be suspended, and at the option of defendant entirely abandoned, and if abandoned, that the plaintiffs should receive from defendant another contract on a substituted line equally advantageous to them, and if the work should be resumed the plaintiffs should repay defendant as specified sum. The second count alleged an agreement with all the plaintiffs to do the work, and charged that defendant refused to allow them to go on with it:—Held, that the second count was good, and that there was clearly no misjoinder, both being on agreements with all the plaintiffs. Gould v. Grueski, 17 U. C. R. 52.

Officer of Company. — Assumpsit for work and labour. The plaintiff put in a paper headed, "Memorand of un agreement made and entered into the 23th of March 1854, between the directors 23th of March 1854, between the directors 23th part and James Johnson, (the plaintiff,) of, "&c. It contained an agreement by the plaintiff to do certain work for specified prices, which "the parties of the first part hereby agree to pay." &c. and was signed by defendant, describing bimself as "Pres. V. B." and by the plaintiff. It appeared that the company had been duly incorporated, and that the plaintiff had received 2350 from them on account of this work:—Held, that defendant was not personally liable. Johnson v. Hamilton, 13 U. C. R. 211.

Personal Promise to Pay. 1—Held, that the following receipt, "Received of B. & C. a note they held against A. L., on which there was a balance due, September 1st, 1842, of $400.33, which is to be paid to them in Michigan treasury warrants; also a balance of accounts of $50.17, which is to be paid in current money if enough is collected; if not, in warrants, D. O'B.," could not be considered on the face of it evidence of a promise by O'B. personally to pay these debts. Bradford v. O'Brien, 7 U. C. R. 562.

Plaintiff's Barn Removed to Defendant's Land. |—Plaintiff brought ejectment against D., and hearing that D. was about to remove a barn upon the lot in dispute to other land which he had leased from defendant, he went to defendant and told him that it was his. D. afterwards took the barn there, though defendant forbade him; and the plaintiff then sued defendant for it as goods sold and delivered:—Held, that even assuming the barn to be a chattel, he could not recover, for there was no contract or privity between them. Best v, Boice, 22 U. C. R. 439.

Railways — Successors in Title.] — The second count of the declaration alleged that the plaintiff was seised for his life of certain land, and one R. owned the reversion: and that by an agreement between them and the Buffalo, Brantfora, and Goderich Railway Co., they granted to the said company the two first ridges of gravel next the lake; and the company thereby agreed to leave the ground two and a half feet in depth above the level of the lake, and the surface even and level: that afterwards, and after the passing of the Act, 19 vict. c. 21, the said company, under that Act, delivered over their railway to defendants, and defendants completed the same under the agreement set forth in the statute; that defendants choose to enforce the said agreement with the plaintiffs, and removed the gravel, but dug pits below the stipulated depth, thereby injuring the land. R. brought a separate action as reversioner produced, appeared to be with the plaintiffs of the produced, appeared to be without plaintiffs plaintiffs. The produced of the defendants were not bound not recover, for defendants were not bound not recover, for defendants were not bound to with the plaintiffs jointly, they could not maintain separate actions. Prew v. Buffalo & Lake Huron R. W. Co., 17 U. C. R. 282.

Rent-charge—Debt.]—Debt does not lie by the grantee of a rent-charge to issue out of lands, where there is no express covenant to pay. Dougall v. Turnbull, 10 U. C. R. 121.

Sale of Land—Payment by Purchaser to Mortgagee, 1—8. having mortgaged certain land to F. agreed to sell it to the plaintiff, and went to the office of defendant, who acted as agent for F., where S. executed a bond to develop the plaintiff on payment of £200 down and the balance by instalments, and at the request of S. the plaintiff paid this £200 to decrendant for F. on account of the mortgage. Afterwards, at their joint request, defendant returned £50 to the plaintiff, and S. having released to F. his equity of redemption, the plaintiff sued defendant to recover back the £150 remaining, as money paid to his use. Some evidence was given at the trial to shew that the title was defective:—Held, that the plaintiff clearly could not recover, for the money was not paid to defendant on any contract between him and the plaintiff, but was a payment by S. of his debt due to F. Semble, that the evidence, set out in the case, was not sufficient to shew a failure of title, but that if it had been, F., under the circumstances, could at most have been liable only, on receiving payment of his mortgage, to convey to the plaintiff such title as he had derived from S. Branigan v. Carturight, 23 U. C. R. 264.

Sale of Logs—Purchaser's Promise to Pay Rafting Charges.]—Held, that where there was an express agreement between the owner of certain logs and the plaintiff, that he would sell the logs subject to plaintiff's charges thereon for rafting, which agreement was communicated to defendants, the purchasers, who promised the plaintiff, before the delivery by him to them of the whole of the logs, to pay said charges, the plaintiff was entitled to maintain an action against defendants for non-payment of the same. Jackson v. Evans, 21 C. P. 33.

Sale of Ship—Vendor's Coccumit not to Compete,—The owner of several stemmers, cryping on business as a forwarder, sold one of them to another forwarding firm, and upon the sale covenanted that he would not directly or indirectly have any interest in any vessel navigating the St. Lawrence below Ogdensburgh at any time thereafter: and also that he would not dispose of two other steamers then owned by him to any person or persons for the purpose of navigating the St. Lawrence below Ogdensburgh. Upon a bill filed for that purpose, the court held the owners bound by the covenant entered into by the original proprietors, and granted an injunction restraining them from navigating the river below Ogdensburgh with those vessels. Holcomb v. Nixon, 5 Gr. 278, 373.

School Trustees.]—School trustees acting under 9 Vict. c. 20 cannot be sued as individuals upon any contract made by them under the statute as trustees. Sheriff v. Patterson, 5 U. C. R. 620.

Sub-contractor Against Employer.]

—One T. contracted with defendants, a corporation, to construct certain work for them, and on the same day the plaintiff agreed with T. to do a portion of it for 8900, subject to the same conditions which bound T. in his contract with defendants. T. on the same day by letter authorized defendants to pay the plaintiff for his work to the amount of T.'s contract with him, and defendants in answer agreed to this. Defendants paid the plaintiff all but 20 per cent. as the work progressed, but their manager refused to certify as the contract required, complaining that it was improperly performed. He, however, had verbally agreed to pay the plaintiff's men $100 if they would discharge the company:—Held, that the plaintiff had no right of action against defendants, for there was no contract between them. Standing v. London Gas Co., 21 U. C. R. 209.

Substitution of Debts.]—A. being indebted to B., and C. to A., B. and C. without the assent or knowledge of A., agree that C. shall pay to B. the debt due to him by A., on condition that B. shall discharge A. from his debt:—Held, that such agreement is binding on C. and that B. may sue him for its non-performance. Tyrill v. Annis, 1 U. C. B. 299.

Superintendent of Schools.]—A county superintendent of common schools, signing, together with trustees, a contract with a teacher, will be considered to have signed the same only as approving of the appointment, and in pursuance of the direction of the statute, and not as a party contracting with the teacher. Campbell v. Elliott, 3 U. C. R. 241, Surety for Advances by Individual—Advances made Jointly.]—A, agrees to become surety to B, for all such advances as B, may make to C, during a limited period, B, makes no individual advances to C, at all, but during the period, B, with D, a stranger to A, make advances to C.:—Held, that B, individually could not recover from A, the amount of the advances so made. Stevenson v, McLean, 11 C. P. 208.

Surety in Fact Principal.]—A. contracted with defendants to perform work, and B. executed a bond as his surety. It appeared that B. was in fact the principal, and did the work, and that A. had tendered and taken the contract for him, and had in writing assigned to him all his interest in the proceeds:—Held, that B. could have no right of action against defendants. Ferris v. Township of Kingston, 12 U. C. R. 436.

Treasurer of Turf Club—Liability to Prize Winner, — Defendant being the treasurer of a turl club, by which horse races were conducted, received subscriptions from members and others to form a fund out of which the purses run for were to be paid. The plaintiff entered horses and won purses, but defendant refused to pay, alleging that the club was indebted to him for advances which he had previously made:—Held, that the plaintiff could not sue defendant for money had and received, there being no privity between them, and defendant being accountable only to the club. Simms v. Denison, 28 U. C. R. 323.

Trust Assignment — Personal Liability of Trustees.]—The declaration charged that the plaintiff, having recovered judgment against A. & Co., was about to sell their goods under a fi. fa., and in consideration that the plaintiff would withdraw his writ defendants promised to pay the amount. It appeared that A. & Co. made an assignment to the decendants of all their goods, in trust out the decendants of all their goods, in trust out the property of the certain executions, of which they are the control of the contr

4. PROCEDURE IN ACTIONS.

(a) In General.

Joint Liability—Proof.]—In assumpsit against joint contractors it is still necessary to prove a joint contract by all the defendants. Bochus v. Shaw, 8 C. P. 391.

Municipal Contract-Proof of By-law.] -An objection as to the want of proof of a of municipal buildings, raised for the first time at the close of a reference of the action to recover a balance alleged to be due, was overruled, where the existence of the contract was alleged in the statement of claim and defence, and the contract was identified by the mayor on the application for the reference by the defendants and made part of the defendants' material, and treated as the contract throughout the whole reference, and on which large sums of money had been paid under by-laws passed therefor. Leave to amend so as to set up such objection refused. Ryan v. Village of Carleton Place, 31 O. R.

Striking Out Name of Defendant.]-An action on contract having been referred at nisi prius, and the arbitrator having found that defendants were not co-partners, the court refused to strike out the name of one defendant, Tullock v. Wells, 8 C. P. 394. The statute, C. L. P. Act, 1856, was in-tended to meet the case of a defendant erroneously joined, not a case where he has been joined intentionally, to try and fix him with liability. 1b.

(b) Pleading.

In an action for the non-delivery of wood according to contract, the declaration was held bad on special demurrer, for not stating the price to be paid, nor that the wood was to be paid for either on delivery or on a certain day, nor that the plaintiff was ready and willing to pay for it. Maddock v. Stock, 4 U. C. R. 118.

Where defendant is sued upon a promise to continue a former agreement then about expiring, the declaration should state the pre cise terms of the former agreement, and aver that such terms composed the whole of it. Barnes v. McKay, 5 U. C. R. 246.

The plaintiff charged defendants upon a special agreement stated to have been made by them as trustees, to furnish with fuel, when required, the plaintiff, a school teacher, under 9 Vict. c. 29. Declaration held bad, because no request with time and place had been alleged to furnish fuel. Anderson v. lansittart, 5 U. C. R. 335.

Upon an agreement to deliver wheat for the Upon an agreement to deliver wheat for the plaintiff at the mill of a third party, naming him, the plaintiff averred "that he was always willing to accept the wheat at the place aforesaid, whereof defendant had notice:"—Held, on motion in arrest of judgment, declaration good. Wright v. Weed, 6 U. C. R.

An uncertainty in the statement of a part of the consideration for the defendant's promise, with respect to a part only of the plaintiff's demand, does not make the declaration bad on general demurrer. Bradford v. O'Brien, 6 U. C. R. 417.

In debt for goods found and provided for one M. at defendant's request, not alleging by plaintiff:—Held, declaration sufficient, on motion to arrest judgment. Kendrick v. Max-well, 7 U. C. R. 94.

An averment that in consideration that the plaintiff, at the defendant's request, "would agree" not to put the said A. B. to costs in agree not to put the sale A. B. to cook a respect of his debt, the defendant promised, &c., is a sufficient allegation of plaintiff's promise. Noad v. Brown, 8 U. C. R. 154.

Special assumpsit for not accepting a schooner, the consideration being that the plaintiff would send defendant the schooner "together with all and singular the apparel, tackle and furniture, boats, oars and appur-tenances to the said schooner belonging or appertaining, and convey and assure the same to the defendant by a good and sufficient deed of conveyance or bill of sale, free from all incumbrances." Upon special demurrer the declaration was held bad, for not alleging that the conveyance tendered embraced the "apparel, tackle and furniture," and because was not inconsistent with all the averneuts not inconsistent with all the averments that the "apparel, tackle and furniture" might not be free from incumbrances. Phillips v. Merritt, 2 C. P. 299.

Quære, whether when a contract is to pay at a particular place named in a declaration, the general averment that the defendant did not pay is not sufficient, and any statement as to the plaintiff not being at the place named to receive the money, or that the defendant was there ready to pay it, must not arise by way of defence. Becher v. Town of arise by way of defence. Be Amherstburgh, 23 C. P. 602.

Assumpsit against a miller for not delivering flour ground by him from wheat sent to him by plaintiff, on an agreement that he would grind and deliver the flour at one of two prices named, depending upon whether the barrels were furnished by him or the plaintiff:—Held, 1. That it was unnecessary to aver that there was any mark to distinguish the plaintiff's wheat, as required by 31 Geo. 111. c. 7, s. 3; 2. that readiness to pay either one price or the other, and notice to the defendant or a tender of payment must be averred, but that the former was sufficient. The agreement as set out in the third count, was to grind 10,000 bushels of wheat, alleged to have been delivered by the plaintiff. In the 4th count, it was averred that under the said agreement set out in the third count, the plaintiff delivered 10,000 other bushels:— Held, bad. Counter v. Jones, 6 O. S. 37.

Plaintiff sued on an agreement, and at the trial his witnesses failed to prove a part of it, which was struck out of the declaration. plaintiff was then called for the defence, and stated the agreement as at first set out. His counsel did not amend again, and the jury found for the plaintiff, adding that they believed the part struck out to be in the con-tract. The court in term allowed the declaration to be restored to its original form, and refused a new trial. Petrie v. Tannahill, 22 U. C. R. 608.

Declaration on special agreement, amended by averring excuse from performance, instead of performance, of contract. Clarke v. Mc-Kay, 32 U. C. R. 583.

Declaration upon the common counts. The defendant, after setting out an agreement, by which he was to build a mill for plaintiff, averred that he had built and finished the mill as he had contracted to do, and that the plaintiff was indebted to him in the price agreed upon to be paid. In reply, the plaintiff merely traversed that the defendant had so built and finished the mill, without shewing in what respect he had not performed the contract, and the replication was held bad. Brown v. Taggart, 10 U. C. R. 183.

Declaration upon an agreement, by which defendant undertook to commence certain work, "so soon after the opening of navigation this spring as he can remove a steam dredge and working apparatus to Port Burwell:"—Held, insufficient to allege only that the spring had elapsed; but that it was necessary to aver that since the opening of navigation defendant could have removed the dredge. Saxton v. Ridley, 13 U. C. R. 622.

Assumpsit on a contract to make and furnish a steam-engine and boiler. Breach, that the boiler furnished was not made of good and sufficient materials, and was not reasonably fit and proper for the said engine. Plea, that the said boiler was made of good and sufficient materials:—Held, bad, as not answering the whole breach. Abel v. Leonard, 12 U. C. R. 192.

Declaration charging the defendant with the non-performance of a certain contract. Plea, that the said contract was not duly performed by the said parties, to wit, the plaintiff and defendant, in manner, &c:—Held, bad, in leaving it uncertain by which of the said parties and in what particular it had not been performed. Jones v. Hamilton, 3 U. C. R. 170.

In declaring on a special agreement, quare, what must be averred in the declaration to have been done; or what may be left to be set up as matter of defence. Semble, that the intention of the parties, to be reasonably collected from the whole mistrument, must govern. Eneart v. Bonces, 5 U. C. R. 445.

Declaration by A., B., and C., plaintiffs. First count, that A. and B. agreed to perform certain work on a railway for defendant, and having associated C. with them as a co-partner, commenced the same: that defendant became desirous of discontinuing and suspend-ing said work, and it was then agreed between the plaintiffs and defendant in writing that it should be suspended, and at the option of defendant entirely abandoned, and if abandoned, that the plaintiffs should receive from defendant another contract on a substituted line equally advantageous to them, and if the work should be resumed the plaintiffs should repay defendant a specified sum. Breach, that defendant wholly refused to allow the plaintiffs to resume said work, and hindered and prevented them from so doing, and neglected to give the plaintiffs another contract, and took said work into his own hands, and gave it to other persons :- Held, on demurrer to the whole declaration, that the first count was bad, as not shewing a breach of the agreement declared upon, which was only to give a new contract if the first should be abandoned, and it was not abandoned, but gone on with. Gould v. Gzowski, 17 U. C. R. 52.

Declaration, that the plaintiff having an interpretable of a certain mill-privilege from A. B., defendant offered for the plaintiff's right to such privilege certain lands and notes, or the assignment of a mortgage for £500; and "that the plaintiff agreed to accept one of said offers on or before 18th March, 1851, and to pay the water rent of the said privilege up to the 1st January, 1851; and that it was further agreed that the lease should be made to defendant from the said A. B.; and that the plaintiff did, "afterwards, on the 18th March, 1851, accept an assignment of the said mortgage," yet defendant would not assign the mortgage:—Held, that as the onus of procuring a lease was assumed by the plaintiff, the payment of rent up to the 1st January, 1851, was of no consequence to defendant, and not material, if the plaintiff obtained the lease; and that therefore a traverse of such payment was an immaterial issue, Benns v. Raymond, 3 C. P. 126.

Quere, the materiality of a plea traversing the allegation of the acceptance of the assignment of mortgage, and the effect of that plea.

Declaration on a deed set out in it, by which plaintiff was to do all the work on an extension of defendants' railway. Clause 20 provided that the plaintiff would accept during the first five months defendants agreeing to place at the order of the plaintiff, till the notes were paid by them, defendants' bonds to the value of said notes, such bonds being estimated at 85 per cent. of their face value, and after the first five months defendants did not during the first five months' delivent to the plaintiff' their bonds to the value of the notes, &c:—Held, breach bad, for defendants' covenant was to place said bonds at the order of plaintiff, which was capable of a different meaning. Shanly v. Midland Railway of Canada, 33 U. C. R. 604.

The declaration stated an agreement to pay to three persons, and the agreement was to pay half to one and half to the two others:— Semble, no variance. Bens v. Stover, 12 U. C. R. 623.

The plaintiff declared in assumpsit on an agreement with defendant to make 100,000 bricks, and then averred that he had made 68,000 of them, and prepared in part 30,000 more, but that defendant would not allow him to complete them, but absolutely discharged, hindered and prevented him from doing so. Defendant pleaded, I. that the plaintiff en-tered upon defendant's close to complete the work there, and that defendant prevented him, as he lawfully might, which was the same hindering and preventing; and, 2, that the plaintiff was making the said bricks upon defendant's close, and had made 68,000 of them in so bad and unskilful a manner that they were wholly useless, and was proceeding to make the rest in the same way, and that therefore defendant did then forbid and prevent him from making the residue:-Held, that both pleas were bad, because pleaded to the whole declaration and not answering the discharge, and that a replication of leave and license to the first plea was good. Toleman v. Crew. 2 U. C. R. 186.

V. RESCISSION AND CANCELLATION.

Alteration of Contract.] — See Mason v. Burrows, 29 C. P. 138. Building Contract—Effect of Cancelling Signature. |—An injunction restraining a corporation from permitting certain buildings to be completed under a contract was dissolved, it appearing that the contract which had been entered into between the corporation and the contractor had been cancelled. On production of the contract in court, it appeared that the rescission referred to had been effected by cancelling the signatures to the document, which being objected to as not legally discharging the corporation from liability, the court, as a condition of discoving the injunction, required a formal cancellation of the contract to be made. Eduhargh Life Assurance Co, v. Town of St. Catharines, 10 Gr. 379.

Building Contract—Penalty—Release by Parol.]—Declaration, for work and materials in construction of a house for defendants. Flea, that by deed dated 31st July, 1871, plaintiff covenanted to finish the works before 31st October, 1871, under a forfeiture of $20 for every week the work was left unfinished after that day; that the plaintiff did not complete the works till 20 weeks after said date, and thereby $400 became due from plaintiff to defendants, which defendants are willing to set off. Replication, on equitable grounds, that after the breach in the plea alleged, the defendants for good and sufficient consideration by parol discharged the plaintiff from the performance of the covenant and damages for the breach thereof:— Held, good. Simpson v. Kerr, 33 U. C. R. 345.

Election to Reseind Where Other Party not Bound.)—The defendant alleged that the plaintiff agreed with defendant's wife, that defendant, with whom he had left some notes for collection, should keep the proceeds for himself and maintain the plaintiff free of charge for the remainder of his life. Quere, whether the plaintiff could reseind such agreement, and sue for the money collected, defendant not being bound. Bush v. Abd., 7 C. P. 490.

Employment for Term—Employer Dismissing, 1—Defendant hired plaintiff to make for him certain machines and superintend their use in his manufactory for five years, unless before terminated as thereinafter provided; and in case of failure of the plaintiff to perform fully the agreement, it might be terminated at defendant's option by written notice, and the plaintiff should be responsible to defendant in damages for such failure; and in case any dispute should arise as to the sufficiency of the machines, or plaintiff's performance of the agreement, the same should be referred to three arbitrators chosen in the manner stated, their decision to be final. To an action by the plaintiff for wronaful dismissal, defendant pleaded termination by him of the agreement by written totic, because of the plaintiff's failure to perform it in certain particulars specified:— Held, that defendant was bound to establish the ground mentioned in his notice for terminating his agreement. Griggs v. Billington, 27 U. C. R. 520.

Indefinite Repudiation.] — Defendant agreed with his son that if he would remain and work with him, so as to assist in paying for a lot of land which he had purchased, he should be paid for his services by the property being divided with him. The son remained, worked upon the land for several years, and died. After his death, defendant stated that he "had a conversation in his family, and he and his wife agreed to buy the land, keep the family together, and, when the land was paid for, divide the property among his sons:"—Held, that neither this conversation, nor a subsequent ofter on defendant's part to pay plaintiff, as administratival of the son, $800 in satisfaction of the action, amounted to a repudiation or rescission of the only bargain between the father and son, which was to divide the land; and that, therefore, indebitatus assumpsit for the son's work and labour would not lie. McClarty, McClarty, 19 C. P. 311.

Innocent Misrepresentation—Common Error, I—An executed contract for the sale of an interest in land will not be rescinded for mere innocent misrepresentation. But where, by error of both parties and without fraud or deceif, there has been a complete failure of consideration, a court of equity will rescind the contract and compel the vendor to return the purchase money. Thus where, on the sale of a mining claim, it turned out that the whole property sold was included in prior claims whereby the purchaser got nothing for his money the contract was rescinded though the vendor acted in good faith and the transaction was free from fraud. Cole v. Pope, 29 S. C. R. 291.

Manufacture and Sale of Chattels.]

—Five days after making a contract with the plaintiffs for the manufacture by them of a plaintiff of the manufacture by them of a period of the plaintiff of the manufacture by the plaintiffs that they would not carry out the contract. The plaintiffs had done nothing towards performing the contract, and had incurred no expense with reference to it—Held, that though the plaintiffs were entitled to bring an action at once to recover damages, they should not be allowed as damages the full amount of their expected profit, but that allowance should be made for the many contingencies which might have happened before the time for fulfilment. The court, after stating the general principles and pointing out some of the contingencies, reduced the amount of damages allowed. Ontario Lantern Company v. Hamilton Brass Manufacturing Company, 27 A. R. 346.

Pleading.]—Quære, as to the sufficiency of a plea to a written contract, that before breach it was rescinded, and a new contract substituted, not alleging the rescission to have been in writing. Such a plea was allowed to be pleaded, but leave given to plaintiff to reply, take issue and demur; the demurre, if any, to be first determined. Wingate v. Enniskillen Oil Co., 10 L. J. 216.

Purchase of Business—Default by Purchaser—Assets Aequired after Purchase.]—In June, 1872, J. B. and W. B. purchased a flour business from R. B., but J. B. soon after refused to have anything to do with it, and the business was carried on in the name of R. B., but for the benefit of W. B., J. B. having refused to carry out the purchase. In June, 1873, W. B. also purchased from J. B. his share in an express business carried on by both of them. Subsequently, W. B. being desirous of carrying on both businesses in his own name, an agreement was executed by R. B., J. B., and W. B., which recited that all the property, &c., book debts, notes, securities, and accounts of R. B. and J. B. were the property and effects of W. B., and held by him free from any interest of R. B., except the payment of any debts or liabilities which by reason of the manner of carrying on the business they or either of them might be made liable for, although in fact not liable. W. B. then agreed with R. B., that all moneys re-ceived or realized upon the said assets should be fully applied in payment of the liabilities as shewn in the ledgers and balance sheets of the said businesses, &c.; and that in the event of the foregoing clauses not being carried out of the foregoing chaoses not being states and R. B. should have full power to assume and collect all said assets, and pay off the liabili-ties herein assumed; and that W. B. would furnish R. B. with all the necessary books, documents, &c., relating to the accounts then remaining unpaid, and would furnish him with a list of the amounts received and paid, and relating thereto, at the end of each and every month, until all the liabilities were fully satisfied. Subsequently default was made in the payment:—Held, that under the agreement:—Held, that under the agreement of the liabilities mentioned in ment R. B. was only entitled to the assets existing at the time of the execution of the agreement, and not to those subsequently acquired. Kerr v. Bradford, 26 C. P. 318.

Rescission.)—Form of decree where mortgage rescinded after money advanced. See Superior Loan and Savings Co. v. Lucas. 15 A. R. 748, reversing S. C., 44 U. C. R. 106.

Sale of Goods—Refusal to Accept—Subsequent Reteation, —Defendant bought from plaintiff a quantity of oil at four months' credit. Plaintiff delivered the oil, but defendant refused to accept a four months' draft for the price, alleging that it was not according to sample. Plaintiff assented, and requested defendant to return the oil, which defendant promised, but failed to do within a reasonable time. Before the four months had expired plaintiff suel for goods sold and delivered:—Held, that the original contract had been rescinded, and that the plaintiff might sue upon a new contract arising out of the retention of the oil by defendant. Thompson v. Smith, 21 C. P. 1.

Sale of Goods — Insolvency.] — Sale of goods—Insolvency of parties—Right to rescind. See Bingham v. Mulholland, 25 C. P. 210.

Sale of Land — Parol Rescission.]—A argress to pay B. for a lot of land upon receiving a deed. B. offers a deed, when A. declares his inability to pay, and proposes new terms, which are accepted!—Held, that B. was thereby relieved from the necessity of tendering a deed to entitle him to sue A. or rescind the contract; that B. was at liberty to rescind the contract, and might do so by parol; and that an agreement in writing, under the Statute of Frauds, might be waived, discharged, and determined by a subsequent verbal agreement. Quere, whether before or after the breach of the agreement. Mulgreie v, Pringle, Dra. 220.

Sale of Shares—Conditions as to Retention in Office.]—The plaintiff agreed to purchase from the defendant seventy-six shares of stock in the Globe Printing Company, and
