R. and Wireless officials and places all graduates into positions. It will pay you to write them for full details at Cincinnati, O., or Philadelphia, Pa.

ADDRESS AND PRESENTATION.

The members of the Sewing Circle of the Sacred Heart Church assembled at the home of Mrs. George Herringer on Thursday evening, and presented her with a beautiful sick call outfit, and the following nicely worded address:—

Dear Mrs. Herringer.

With sincere regret we learned some months ago that you have decided to leave us and remove to Winnipeg.

It is always hard to part with a good neighbor and friend, but in your case many things have conspired to increase the genuine sorrow we feel at your departure. Not only because of your official position, the duties of which you so faithfully performed, but especially because of the example you have set us as a zealous member of our parish, whose interest you have always made your own, and your ever-ready kindness and spirit of helpfulness when any one among us needed sympathy and assistance, have we learned to appreciate your worth as a friend and counsellor.

"A friend in need is a friend indeed," says an old adage, and many here present will testify that such you proved yourself on many an occasion when sickness and death entered the precincts of their homes.

We do not forget the example of Christian fortitude and resignation to our heavenly Father's will which you gave us all, when called upon to bear these same visitations in your own family circle. Our hearts went out to you in loving sympathy on those trying occasions, and we pray that it may be many years before you will be asked again to part with any of your loved ones.

In this connection we beg you to accept, as a token of our grateful appreciation, a little souvenir from the friends you are leaving in Mildmay, a sick-call outfit. May it be far in the future before you shall be obliged to use it for yourself, dear friend, but may its treasures among your treasures be a reminder of the loving friends you made during the past years in this parish and vicinity, and may it inspire the hope that one day we may meet in the eternal Home where awaits you, we feel confident, the reward promised to the "Valiant Woman" who "hath looked well to the paths of her house and hath not eaten her bread idle."

May the new home to which you are bound bring you also many friends, and may all your undertakings be successful and blessed by the Giver of all good gifts.

But, while with all our hearts we say to you: "Go forth and proceed prosperously" on your way to your western field of labor, one thing we ask of you—do not forget the old friends while warming to the new.

Come back to us if fortune favors, at some future time to renew old friendships and acquaintances, and you will find the warm spot still in our hearts, and the hearty hand-clasps of welcome ever awaiting you.

Her Lover's Prowess;

Or, A Little Matrimonial Dream

"You have no business to say that Maude," exclaimed Charlie, who was wandering about the room in that state of not knowing what to do with himself, which there being neither anything to kill nor to pursue always produced in him. "I say what I think, and I say it said the other day," retorted Maude, turning round from her seat, "that you are hardly so ill to us as you might be."

"Excuse me," he replied pettishly and pausing in his walk, "I am always most deferential to ladies. You don't expect me to copy old Sir Phillip's by-gone manners—his priggish bows and courtly attitudes?"

"Don't talk nonsense, Charlie. Sir Phillip is no prig. A man who led the field as he did the other day scarce merits that appellation. If as you assert his manner is a little by-gone, I can only say, pity it is such manners should have gone by."

"You may say what you like," retorted her cousin, as he perched himself on the arm of an easy-chair. "but the Grandisonian era has departed—died with the minut, I suppose."

"And genuine courtesy to our sex is a thing of the past," said Maude, as her fingers wandered idly over the keys of the instrument.

"Libel rank libel!" cried Charlie, "but we haven't time now—days for all the bowing and scraping of the Grandison era. We live too fast. Only look at the posts. Why, we've two here. In London they have them all day long, and before a fellow has finished the morning papers the evening ones begin. Those Grandison men saw about a paper a week and only got letters occasionally."

"I like getting letters, don't you?" said Maude, as she rose and crossed over to the fireplace.

"Hum! I'm not quite sure," replied Mr. Williamson meditatively. "People who write to you, or at all events to me, generally want money or something I haven't got. Even when they don't they expect answers. Letter writing's an awful bore."

"What! answering letters from someone you care about?" exclaimed Maude with some slight elevation of her eyebrows.

"But I never get letters from anyone I care about; that is to say, very much. Of course I like to hear how Charlie Tottenham is getting on in Leicestershire, and what old Jack Boulton is doing amongst the pheasants in Norfolk; but—"

"Suppose you went away from here," interrupted Maude, "shouldn't you like to hear from me?"

"Of course I should."

"And you would not find those letters difficult to answer, would you?" and as she asked the question the girl looked steadfastly into her cousin's face.

"Oh, no!" he replied hesitatingly. "I should think not."

"What should you say, pray?" and a malicious sparkle flashed into Maude's eyes as she paused for an answer.

"What nonsense!" retorted Charlie, as he rose and commenced pacing the room. "How can I tell? Answer all the questions you asked, I suppose."

"And if I didn't ask any?"

"Oh! if you didn't want to know something you wouldn't write," said Charlie, with the air of a man who really had at last got to the bottom of a difficult problem.

"You'd want to know how I was getting on at all events."

"Can you not fancy a girl wanting to hear something more than that from the man who professes to love her?" replied his cousin in a low voice.

"By Jove, of course! I beg your pardon, my dear Maude, I didn't understand you," exclaimed the young man earnestly. "Naturally I should write you love-letters like—like—like—other fellows do, I suppose."

"And how dare you suppose anything of the kind, sir?" cried Maude, with affected indignation, sore put to it though she was to contain her laughter.

girlhood by my foolish scribbings." And as she concluded, Maude leant upon the mantelpiece and looked musingly into the fire.

"Of course!" retorted Charlie. "Parents and guardians always do that sort of thing. He's a capital old fellow. But you and I have always seen so much of each other, we've never had occasion to write. If you remember," continued Charlie, as he settled himself comfortably in an arm-chair. "I was most properly sympathetic when you wrote to me at Eton announcing the death of that bullfinch which afforded such an example to all Scotland—he never piped."

"Don't be absurd."

"Come! I like that. It was a specimen of English composition, that letter. I recollect it now. 'Dear Maude, I'm awfully sorry to hear of Bullie's death, and I got twenty-five runs at cricket yesterday, and Harris Senior says I shall be in the eleven some day if I look sharp.'—I was, you know, later on, and," added Charlie musingly, "what a licking Harrow gave us that year at Lord's!"

"Yes; you made no twenty-five runs on that occasion, I remember," rejoined Maude mockingly.

"No; run out for nothing the first innings, and bowled for precisely the same score the second—a shooter off my pad."

"A shooter off your pad?" cried Maude with a peal of laughter. "Incidents repeat themselves in your life—just what happened to you the other day, my poor Charlie."

"Don't be personal. It's not good taste," retorted her cousin.

"Ha, Sir Phillip!" he continued, as the baronet made his appearance, "a non-hunting day takes a deal of getting through, does it not?"

"Upon my word, Charlie," exclaimed Maude, "your gaucherie is getting past all bearing."

"I came to see if anyone felt inclined to walk to Hinchester," remarked Sir Phillip quietly. "I have got one or two little things I want to do there, and it is really not at all a bad day when you're out."

"I shall be charmed," cried Maude. "Give me five minutes to get my hat—I promise not to exceed that. It will do you good, Charlie; a little fresh air, I'm sure, will benefit your manners," and so saying Maude tripped out of the room.

"All right, Sir Phillip," said Charlie, as he leisurely emerged from his easy-chair. "It will do us sparring for the last hour. That's the worst of a fellow finding himself at home all day—he's safe to come to grief with the women. If I hadn't squabbled with Maude, I suppose I should have had a tiff with Aunt Margaret. The male creature requires strong exercise to keep him amiable, don't you think so?"

"I think he requires something to do; some work obligatory to him in this world, to prevent his becoming a curse to himself and those about him," rejoined Sir Phillip tartly.

"What an old prig it is!" mused Charlie. "How frightfully conceited and supercilious these men who have succeeded are to us young ones who haven't started! I wonder whether he got well snubbed in his youth. I should like uncommonly to see him undergo that operation now."

But now Maude entered the room in her hat and furs, and her presence was the signal for a start, or else cousin Charlie bade fair to show that it was not only the women he could not get on with on these non-hunting days.

CHAPTER VI.

Sir Phillip and Maude would doubtless have enjoyed their tramp into Hinchester very much had they been by themselves, but then, unfortunately, they were accompanied by Cousin Charlie, who was in a most irritable and captious frame of mind. He was a little angry at Maude's concluding remarks, but he was literally simmering with wrath against Sir Phillip's insolence, as he now termed it in his own mind. The baronet had spoken with intention; he thought it was getting time that it was sharply hinted to the young man that the destiny of man in this world was not altogether comprised in hunting three days a week, that fox-hunting prosecuted with ever so much energy and assiduity was not altogether a career, and he had arrived at the conclusion, moreover, that there never was a young gentleman who would be more improved by a little wholesome snub-

STOMACH MISERY

MR. ALCIDE HEBERT

"I have been completely cured of a frightful condition of my Stomach through the wonderful fruit medicine 'Fruit-a-tives'. I could not eat anything but what I suffered awful pain from indigestion. My head ached incessantly. I was told to try 'Fruit-a-tives' and sent for six boxes. Now I am entirely well, can eat any ordinary food and never have a headache."

bing than Mr. Charles Williamson. Charlie, wrapped in his theory that Sir Phillip was only a pleasant elderly gentleman, had yet to discover that he had a cutting tongue at need, and all that cool resolute determination which usually is part and parcel of a man's character who has made a name in active life. Mr. Williamson was at no pains to conceal his ill-humor, and indulged in a tirade against the road, the country, the neighborhood, and all topics conceivable till they reached Hinchester. The pained look on his cousin did not tend to improve matters, as it only mutely reminded him that he was making himself disagreeable, while one or two caustic remarks of Sir Phillip's, which, but for Maude's appealing glances, would have been considerably sharper, still further inflamed his wrath against the baronet. Arrived at Hinchester, Charlie announced his intention of looking into the clubrooms there; for the town, though it could hardly claim to possess a regular establishment of that sort, had a reading-room and billiard-room to which most of the gentlemen in the neighborhood belonged.

Sir Phillip and Maude made no opposition to this proposal. It is scarcely likely, when a man is making himself disagreeable to the best of his ability, that the company will contest his going; and it was arranged they should call for him on their way out.

"I'm sorry to see Charlie so peevish," remarked the baronet, as he and Maude wended their way down the High Street. "It's rather a contemptible infirmity that visiting your own ill-humor on your associates."

"You mustn't be hard on Charlie, Sir Phillip," replied the girl pleadingly. "He never does bear scolding patiently from anyone but me. You rather hurt him when you alluded to his having nothing to do; it's a sore point with Charlie that he cannot see his way in that respect."

"Don't think, Maude, he is quite so anxious on that question as he ought to be."

"Yes, indeed, he is," said the girl earnestly. "He can't quite make up his mind because he cannot see an opening of any sort. Once let him get an opportunity, and you will see him eager to avail himself of it."

"Well, I've my doubts, Maude," returned the baronet good humorously.

"But you will interest yourself in his behalf?"

"I have. I have written in two or three quarters to see what I could do for him, but, mind me, we all begin at the bottom of the ladder, and have to trust to ourselves for the rest. I can only secure his foot being placed upon the first step. Now come in here a moment; I want some stationery."

SCHOOLBOY'S SMART RETORT.

The children in a Scottish school were being examined in Scripture knowledge. "Can any boy or girl here tell me," asked the inspector, "how Noah would be likely to use his time while on the Ark?"

"Please, sir, he wad fish," said one boy.

"Well, yes, he might," admitted the inspector.

Presently another little fellow was seen to wave his hand excitedly, and on being asked to speak said: "Please, he couldna fish vera lang."

"What makes you think so?" asked the inspector.

"Because there were only two worms in the Ark."

MANY STRANGE TALES OF THE CANADIAN WEST.

One Member of Prospecting Party Predicted His Own Death by Drowning.

Many a curious tale has been told by adventurous travelers when in pre-settlement days they penetrated the vast solitudes of prairie, forest or mountain valley, writes W. J. Barclay, in Chambers' Journal. In the Summer of 1862 there was a great rush in the newly discovered gold mines of Cariboo. A party of over a hundred gold-seekers from Ontario and Quebec made the journey overland via St. Paul, Fort Garry, the prairies, and across the Rockies by the Leatherhead Pass. Descending the Fraser on rafts and in canoes, they found their greatest trials in its tumultuous waters, more than one life being lost in the rapids of the Grand Canon. The circumstances attending the death of a Torontonian named Carpenter were singular. His party consisted of three other men from the same city—Messrs. Fletcher, Hancock and Alexander. When they arrived at the rapids they explored the canon, it being agreed by lot that Fletcher and Hancock should portage the outfit while Carpenter and Alexander ran the rapids in the canoe. In midstream, the canoe struck a rock and upset. Alexander was a strong swimmer, and managed to reach the shore in safety, but Carpenter appeared stunned, and

SANK IMMEDIATELY.

While exploring the canon his companions had noticed Carpenter making some memoranda in his note-book, which he replaced in an inner pocket of his coat and left on the bank before entering the canoe. His sorrowing companions found the entry to be:—"Arrived at Grand Canon, ran the canon, and was drowned."

The phenomena of Nature sometimes took a tragical, sometimes a puzzling form. During a storm on the prairies near the south branch of the Saskatchewan a rain of fire suddenly descended upon a camp of Cree Indians and burned everything around them. Thirty-two Crees perished in the flames. The ground was burned deeply for a considerable distance, and only one or two sloughs were able to save themselves by jumping into the water. It was not a flash of lightning but a rain of fire that lasted for some moments.

There once lay on the lonely summit of a hill far out on the prairie between the North and South Saskatchewan, a huge block of metal. It was a medicine-stone of surpassing virtue among the Indians over a vast territory. No band of Crees, Blackfeet or Sarcees would pass in the vicinity without paying a visit to this great medicine stone to lay their offerings upon it to propitiate the mysterious powers dwelling therein. Strange stories were told in the lodges concerning this stone. Old men remembered having heard men say that they were only able to lift it, but yearly it had grown brought for the purpose, in which he purposed returning to the fort on the way. During the morning he made good headway down the river, only once having trouble at a rather nasty rapid, in the middle of which he stuck on a flat stone, and was upset in getting off. He got a thorough wetting before he caught his boat again. About noon the weather began to look threatening, heavy banks of clouds gathering in the north. The thunder storms along the mountains are usually of short duration, but very severe while they last. When the storm broke the captain sought shelter in a clump of timber on the south bank, and during a lull in his fury he plainly heard the drums beating in an Indian camp, and the accompanying "Hi-ya" mingling with the sound. Leaving his boat drawn up on the shore and safely tied, he made his way towards the sound. The storm came down worse than ever, and the lightning was blinding as he made his way through the timber. In an open glade the Indian camp of about 20 lodges lay before him plainly

A METEORITE.

In the year 1869 the missionary of Victoria, a small settlement north-east of Edmonton, caused the stone to be brought to the mission. When the Indians heard of the description they were loud in expression of their regret, while the old medicine men declared its removal would be followed by war, disease and the disappearance of the buffalo. It is curious as a coincidence that in the following year the plague of smallpox swept over the Saskatchewan country with fearful violence, leaving whole camps of victims to rot unburied on the plains. The plague was accompanied by the afflictions of tribal war, carried on, in spite of the disease, with unparalleled ferocity; while a few short years sufficed for the extermination of the countless buffalo-herds. The stone was afterwards shipped to Toronto, where the curious can now see it in the museum of Victoria University. It is also of interest to note that Iron Creek, Alberta, derives its name from this historic stone, for it was near its banks that it reposed so long as a manito of the red man.

A strange adventure befell Capt. Denny, of the North-West Mounted Police, in the Summer of 1875. From the fort on Old Man River he took a trip to the foot-hills of the mountains, about 40 miles distant, for the purpose of fishing and deer-hunting. He was accompanied by an Indian guide. The hunt was successful, both the captain and his guide killing a deer. He sent the Indians back to the fort with the horses loaded with the venison while he inflated visible, 20 yards away, with a band of horses grazing on the far side, the gleam of fires shining through the open entrances of the lodges. This was surprising, as the Indians do not move about in the wet if they can help it, and their lodges are kept closed through superstitious fear of the thunder. Capt. Denny stood for a few seconds watching the scene, considering which lodge to make for. He had made a step or two towards that nearest him, when he seemed to be surrounded with and the crash of thunder struck him and caused him to fall from the shock. A large tree was struck not far off; he could hear the rending of wood. It was several minutes before he was able to look around. But, to his utterable astonishment and terror, the camp had disappeared. Where a large Indian camp had stood in full view, the voices of its inhabitants distinctly audible, nothing remained in sight but an empty glade surrounded by storm-tossed trees. Little wonder that the captain, before he could gather his wits together, turned and ran, dropping his gun in his course. When lack of breath caused him to sit down on the bank of the river, a quarter of a mile away, he determined to leave his boat and walk to the fort rather than approach the spot again. The fifteen miles made a hard journey, but he arrived about midnight, dragged and worn out. The story told to his brother officers next morning at the breakfast table caused only laughter and chaff as a freak of the imagination. But the captain was firmly convinced of the reality of the experience. He was determined to proceed to the spot again and bring back his boat and gun. With an Indian and Blackfoot interpreter he returned that day, finding no difficulty in locating the place; but it was vacant, without sign of any recent camp. A few signs of stones overgrown with grass showed where an old camp had been many years before. The Indian related how the Blackfeet had surprised and slaughtered a camp of Crees at this spot, and two bleached skulls found among the grass were evident proof of the story.

Which is Your Choice?

Sloppy, leaky wooden troughs, or clean, durable Concrete?

Wooden drinking troughs are about as reliable as the weather. They are short-lived and require replacing every few years—not to mention continual patching to keep them in repair. The best of wood cannot withstand, for long, constant dampness and soaking. Its tendency to rapid decay soon shows itself in leaks and stagnant pools of water around trough.

Contrast with this the durability, cleanliness and well-ordered appearance of Concrete.

Which?

The dampness which destroys lumber only intensifies the strength and hardness of Concrete.

You can impair a wooden trough with comparatively little use; but it takes a powerful explosive to put a Concrete water tank out of business.

Which is your choice—expense-producing Wood, or money-saving Concrete?

MENULTY FOUND GUILTY

Jury Returned Conviction for Murder in a Most Repulsive Case.

A despatch from Barrie says: After deliberating for over three and one-half hours on Thursday the jury in the case of Thomas McNulty, charged with inducing Mary Dolan, whom he had betrayed, to kill her offspring, brought in a verdict of murder with a strong recommendation to mercy. The girl, who was one of the chief witnesses against McNulty, had previously been found guilty of murder.

A number of dramatic incidents marked the third and closing day of the trial. McNulty's wife sat throughout the proceedings, and nodded encouragement to her husband as the Dolan woman told of the manner in which she had been pursued and finally induced to do away with her infant at the suggestion of McNulty. BLAZE IN A THEATRE.

Fire Captain's Judgment Prevented a Panic.

A despatch from Montreal says: The presence of mind of Captain Taylor of the fire brigade alone prevented a panic at the Casino moving picture theatre here on Thursday afternoon. Taylor noticed smoke issuing from the walls of the theatre, and, after notifying the manager, went quietly out and sounded the alarm. Before the reels came clattering up the curtain was rung down, and the audience, unaware of the blaze, which was well up in the walls, dispersed quietly. The theatre was crowded with women and children, and any undue alarm must have resulted in an ugly panic. The damage was light.

FIGHT ON BERLIN STREET

Four Thousand Police Swept Through the Riotous Quarter.

A despatch from Berlin, Germany, says: Fighting between the police and strikers in the Moabit quarter was resumed early on Wednesday morning. The police had cleared the fighting section late at night, but trouble broke out in Restoker Street. There were no lights burning at the time and 4,000 police swept through the quarter in darkness. Many revolver shots were fired from the windows by strikers or their sympathizers. The police returned the fire and a regular fusillade followed. Over 100 policemen were injured during the fighting. The riotous quarter was cleared out in force to the district with some sidewalks were covered with pools of blood. The slightest remonstrance meant being cut down. The damage done in the strike district is roughly estimated at $150,000.

Smut in Wheat.

Mr. W. Welsh, of Kincardine, gives the following information on a subject of importance to Bruce farmers. His paper is taken from the Kincardine Review:

The most productive fall wheat in this section of Ontario, is undoubtedly "Dawson's Chaff."

One drawback of this kind of wheat is that it is very subject to smut, and some remarkable yields have been much lessened in value by this tendency.

It ought to be known by every farmer that smut is product that is sown, and if wheat free from smut spores is sown, no smut will appear in the crop.

Fifty-six year ago the "White Flint" fall wheat and the "Club" spring wheat were very subject to smut, and at this early date farmers knew the benefit of sprinkling a solution of blue stone on the seed green which always brought the desired result.

About 1858 the Scotch spring wheat was introduced and several kinds of fall wheat were practically smut proof, and really very little injury was done by smut for many years. By neglect of this simple precaution the Golden Chaff is sometimes unusable and to draw the attention of your readers I give the formula to destroy the smut germ.

One pound of blue stone is dissolved in from 5 to 10 gallons of rain water, sprinkle this over the wheat so that every kernel will be wet with the solution. The grain must be thoroughly dried before putting it into the drill or it will not flow freely.

In recent years formaldehyde is spoken very highly of. Put over the grain in the same way as the blue stone solution. Other recommend the following:

Have a box air tight and of a size to suit the quantity of grain needed. (To make the box air tight, old newspapers may be placed along the sides, bottom and ends.)

Fill a saucer or plate with formaldehyde and place it on the top of the grain in the box the cover with an old quilt to make air tight on top. The formaldehyde soon evaporates, and the gas being heavier than the air sinks through the wheat, killing all the smut germs. One advantage in the later process is that it leaves the grain dry. Peas may be treated in the same way to kill the pea weevil.

Oats and barley would be well to treat in the same way in spring seeding.

Fined The Railway.

The charge preferred by Constable Russell against the G. T. R. station agent at Eden Grove for not having a blackboard placed at the station, announcing the arrival and departure of trains, resulted in Magistrate Robb dismissing the charge against the agent, and recording a conviction against the company. A fine of $20.00 and costs was consequently levied on Monday against the G. T. R. for this neglect. The company, however, have given notice of appeal and the matter will come up for hearing before Judge Klein at the Division court here. The contention of the company is that the Eden Grove station does not come under the provisions of the statutes, which relate only to stations having telegraphic connections, and which are consequently able to ascertain the whereabouts at all times of the various trains. A G. N. W. wire, which runs into the station, is only used, the company claims, for the local agent to learn telegraphically, and is not used for commercial purposes. The magistrate, however, held that the G. N. W. wire was capable of being used for such purposes and that to all intents the company were liable for neglect.—Bruce Times.

Position Goes Abegging.

Having reduced the salary from $100 to $50, the Brant Township Council applied for a collector this year and met in Dunkeld on Monday last to open applications for the position. But when they got there the cupboard was bare so far as applications were concerned. None of the ratepayers coveted the job sufficient to apply for it. The plum was consequently tendered again to Mr. Malcolm McNiven, the old collector, and the probability is that he will accept. The duties are not so heavy as formerly, Mr. McNiven having introduced the idea of collecting the taxes through the banks thereby lessening the labor and reducing the pay of the collector, besides being more convenient to the people. Having taught the ratepayers how to abolish half the salary, Mr. McNiven so robbed the office of its attractions that he himself cared no longer to look upon it, and the position like the old maid has now much difficulty in getting a man.—Bruce Times.

Young Farmer Hanged Himself.

Teeswater, Ont., Sept. 30.—Donald Ross, a farmer, 34 years of age, living near the little village of Whitechurch, a few miles from here, committed suicide yesterday by hanging. Ross lived with his mother and two sisters on the farm, and yesterday morning left the house with the evident intention of attending a neighbor's threshing. A few hours later it was found that he was not there, and a search was instituted his dead body was found hanging by the neck from a beam in a outhouse, under the eaves. He appeared to have been dead several hours.

Coroner Dr. Gordon of Lucknow who was called, pronounced it a case of deliberate suicide. Judging by the surroundings, it appears that the deceased had fastened a rope to a couple of hooks in the beam, mounted an upturned pail, placed a noose in the rope around his neck, wound the end of the rope around his arms so that they could not be raised, and then kicked the pail away.

There appears no assignable motive for the terrible deed, as Ross was in comfortable circumstances, and apparently in the enjoyment of good health. He had, however, on several recent occasions complained of disagreeable sensations in his head.

An Enormous Turnover.

One of the marvellous developments in Canadian business life is the growth of the mail order business. In the United States there are departmental stores, and mail order houses, separate concerns, but in Canada both are carried on under one canvas as they were.

The gross sales of the Eaton business including the Toronto and Winnipeg stores, and the mail order business of both stores reached the enormous total of $47,000,000 and it is said that J. C. Eaton a share of the profits was $1,250,000, and his salary as manager was $50,000.

The only United States firm which is reported to be beating this record is Marshall Field & Co., Chicago, whose sales reached the enormous total of $51,000,000.

There are many men in the trade who can remember Timothy Eaton's early struggles, both in St. Mary's and in Toronto, and the ridicule his ideas created at that time. To these men as to many others the enormous growth of the Eaton business must be little less than a miracle. Buying for cash, selling for cash alone, persistent and extensive advertising, a real endeavor to please and satisfy all customers seem to be the elements from which the store has built its success.—Canadian Grocer.

WALKERTON.

Elroy Herrgott, a 12-year-old lad, was bitten by a dog, Mr. Sam Trotter's, in the yard, while delivering a parcel there for Bremner's Fair on Tuesday afternoon. The dog sank its teeth in the boy's leg a few inches above the knee, drawing blood and making a painful wound. The lad was taken to a physician's, where the injury was cauterized and otherwise treated. While no serious developments are anticipated, yet a close watch is being kept on the dog to see if it displays any symptoms of rabies.

Mr. Wm. Trotter Sr. was brought to the Hospital here, from Pinkerton on Saturday, suffering with a broken leg and many painful bruises. The old gentleman, who is in his 80th year, was standing on the edge of an embankment near the Pinkerton bridge on the night of the Fall Show there, when he stepped to one side to avoid a passing rig and fell over the 8 ft embankment into the river, striking his head on the stones beneath and breaking one of his legs below the knee. The water at this point was low, otherwise he would have been drowned, as it was some considerable time before he was discovered and removed. It is only three years ago since Mr. Trotter had the same leg broken by falling on the ice.

To Make Good Coffee.

Here is a recipe for coffee that never fails:—Use a tablespoonful of coffee for each cupful desired and one spoonful for the pot. Mix with a small quantity of cold water and bring to a boil. A little white of an egg mixed with the coffee and cold water or well washed eggshells added will help to make the coffee clear, but egg is not essential to good coffee. After the coffee has boiled for a few minutes add the quantity of boiling water desired. Let it sit for one minute, pour a little cold water into the pot and the coffee is ready to serve. Mix cream and sugar in a cup and pour the coffee into it. Always serve coffee and tea very hot.

What the Indians Say.

The Indians and old-timers of the Northwest say that the coming winter will be one of the coldest on record. They point to the fact that the fur-bearing animals are growing thicker and longer coats than customary, that muskrats are building their houses larger and higher than is their custom in mild winters, that the bears are starting to make their dens in the most protected places they can find, and the little chipmunks and gophers are also preparing for the siege. They say that these signs fail.

Race Question in South Africa.

While General Botha appears to be really anxious to weld the Dutch and British of South Africa into one nationality, he is still accused by his political opponents of doing that which is calculated to perpetuate racial division. When the confederation of the various South African colonies was arranged for a conference decided that the government should consist of ten members, the cabinet being made so large as this in order that there might be provision for full representation of both British and Dutch elements in the same. This number, was, however, not enough to satisfy the aspirants of one race and the statement of the Opposition is that the British element of the population is left without any real representation in the new government.

DELICIOUS JELLY.

One of the good points about a well regulated English household is the care that is bestowed upon the preparation of preserved fruits, notwithstanding their limitations, such as lack of cellar, canned fruit closet, or other proper storage room, whereas we take the abundance of choice fruit and conveniences almost as an unnoticed blessing.

The room in which the preparation of these mysterious delights in the way of jams, jellies, and other goodies sails under the peculiar name of "stillroom," presided over by the mistress and a stillroom maid, and in it not so long ago many hours were spent in the compounding of the artless and artificial beauty lotions, such as caused a moral panic in the dear old Vicar of Wakefield's guileless bosom.

And right here may be mentioned the substitute for water which is required in the case of fruit of a dry character to prevent its burning when first put in the steupan. A juice is prepared from rhubarb stalks, which are peeled and cut in two inch lengths, covered with sugar, and let stand overnight. In the morning place over the fire and heat slowly till the juice is well extracted. One cupful of the juice to every two pounds of the fruit is the rule.

In making jellies of the larger fruits, such as apples, pears, quinces, or crab apples, they do not need peeling or coring, for the skins and seeds improve both the quality and color of the jelly. Simply wipe the fruit, slice or quarter, put into the preserving kettle with enough water to nearly cover the fruit, and simmer until tender. Remove from the fire, strain, and proceed as in making jellies of the smaller fruits.

A clear day should always be chosen for the making of all jellies, and it improves it to set it in the sunlight to cool. Select sound and not overripe fruit, and it should be used as soon as possible after gathering, as most fruits lose quality by standing. Quinces and certain varieties of pears are the only exceptions.

Apple Jelly.—Remove any blemish from the apples; do not peel, but simply quarter them. Put them into the preserving kettle with several stalks of rhubarb already peeled and cut into two inch lengths. To every pound of apples put one cupful of rhubarb juice, made as directed above. Let simmer about twenty minutes, or until the apples are pulpy. Strain through a jelly bag without pressure. If pressure is used the jelly will not be as clear. To every pint of jelly allow one pound of sugar. Boil all together for about forty-five minutes, stirring well and removing all scum. When it jells put in tumblers and seal. For a change of flavor a little lemon peel may be boiled with the apples or lemon juice may be added just before the jelly is put in the glasses.

A Delicious Plum Dainty.—To every pound of plums, freed from stones, allow one pound of sugar. Scatter the fire and let simmer for one hour, stirring frequently. With a wooden spoon press through a coarse sieve and return to the steupan with equal parts of sugar and water. Simmer gently for two hours. Skim and boil briskly for half an hour, or until it adheres in a solid mass to the spoon. Some of the stones should be crushed and the kernels cooked with the fruit. While hot turn the jelly into glasses, but do not seal until perfectly cold.

PEACHES.

Chilled Peaches.—Chill thoroughly large free stone peaches. Peel carefully with silver knife, remove pits with a spoon, fill with cream seasoned, sweetened, and mixed with chopped nuts; place a candied cherry on top of each peach. Serve at once after prepared.

Peach Ice.—A delightful peach ice, economical in ingredients and expanding in quantity, proven many times, is as follows: One can of peaches with juice, one cupful of water, one cupful of sugar, three egg whites, well beaten. Run peaches through meat grinder. Add water and juice. Stir in sugar and beaten whites. When frozen will make a gallon. Tried and true.

Peach Omelet.—Peaches are lusciously ripe this month and a peach omelet is a most tempting breakfast dish. Beat five eggs just enough to mix the whites and yolks; season with salt, pepper, and a tablespoonful of sugar. Turn the mixture into a pan containing a tablespoonful of hot butter and with a fork stir well for two minutes; then place the pan in a brisk oven to cook the top of the omelet. Remove from the oven, spread with a layer of sliced and sugared peaches, fold once, and slip on a hot platter.

Hot Pudding.—Beat up four eggs, add two pints of milk, two tablespoons of melted butter, three cupfuls of flour, two teaspoonfuls of baking powder and a saltspoonful of salt. Then lay in a deep buttered dish twelve large, juicy peaches that have been peeled, stoned and quartered. Sprinkle with sugar, strain the batter over peaches and bake in a steady oven until done. Serve with hard sauce.

IN CANNING TIME.

Orange Marmalade.—Four oranges, one lemon, eleven cupfuls of water, 4 pounds sugar. Grind four oranges and one lemon, add eleven cupfuls of water and let stand twenty-four hours. Then boil for one hour with cover off, then stand twenty-four hours. Then add four pounds sugar and boil until it jellies—about an hour more. Make ten glasses.

Santaloupe Preserves.—Cut up cantaloupe rind into one inch pieces. Put on stove and let boil in salt water. Drain off the water and for each cup of rind use one cup of white sugar and cup of water. Let boil until the rind is transparent, then flavor with any flavor you choose. A few drops of rose extract is splendid.

Canned Beans.—Bread the beans, instead of cutting them, cover with hot water well salted and boil until tender. Drain off all the water, add sliced onions and vinegar, sugar and pepper to suit taste. Let come to a boil and seal in fruit jars.

To Can Wax Beans.—Cut beans in one inch pieces, wash clean, put in kettle, and cover with following: To one quart of water add one tablespoon vinegar and one tablespoon salt. Put on to boil. Let boil fifteen minutes from time they start boiling, put in airtight sealers. Will keep for years.

Grape Catsup.—Fully ripe grapes, four pounds; sugar, one and a half pounds; one tablespoonful ground cinnamon, one teaspoonful salt, pepper and ground cloves, one pint vinegar. Cook grapes and sugar until quite thick then add other ingredients and bottle for use.

LITTLE HELPS.

If you have hard apples with which to make pies, try grinding them in meat chopper after they are peeled and cored. Sweeten, flavor, and spread on pie like mince meat. Will be done when crust is baked.

Japanned trays should never be touched with hot water, for it will cause the varnish to crack and peel off. To cleanse these trays, rub a little olive oil on and then polish it off with a flannel.

A sick room, even if it is to be used a short time, should not be too fully furnished, and no superfluous boxes and baskets should be left about. It is best to avoid many ornaments that harbor dust and need dusting.

Do not put eggs in rice puddings, as they are really wasted. All that is required in addition to the rice and milk is a small piece of butter. These puddings, to be good, must be cooked quite three hours very slowly.

Clean iron holders are the exception rather than the rule. They need not be, for little washable cases, open at one end like a pillow slip, are easily made, and can be renewed as often as desirable with little trouble. Tie the cases on with tapes.

To whiten flannels made yellow by age, dissolve 1-1-2 pounds of white soap in about twelve gallons of soft water, adding two-thirds of an ounce of spirits of ammonia. Place the flannel articles in this solution, stir well for a short time, and then wash in ordinary.

Before using plates, pie dishes, etc., for cooking purposes it is a very wise plan to put them in a pan of cold water. Place over the fire and let the water come to the boil. By so doing you will find the heat of the oven will not crack the dishes so easily.

In laundering colored shirt waists or negligé shirts, use lukewarm water with plenty of salt in it, and a moderate application of pure white soap. Dry wrong side out in the shade, and remove from the line as soon as dried.

Many old gilt picture frames can be much improved by being enamelled white, or even in colors to match the paint work. For instance, black and white drawings hung on a brown wall-paper may be placed in scarlet frames.

To Sew in Sleeves.—After seams in waist have been sewed and arm-hole trimmed to suit, hold edges together beginning at shoulder seam. Measure carefully until you find the center, mark it with a thread. If waist is for a thin person place sleeve seam one inch forward of this mark. If for medium, one and one-fourth inches, and if stout, one and one-half inches. This is infallible if followed with exactness.

To keep oil from dripping on the sewing after oiling the machine, fasten a bit of absorbent cotton to the needle bar just above the needle. Many a nice dress has been spoiled by oil dripping on it, and this is a sure prevention.

An easy way to make French seams in one-half the time the old way takes: Baste seam toward the wrong side of materials and put in hemmer on machine. This makes a smaller and neater seam than you could possibly make the other way.

To Clean White Plumes.—First immerse in gasoline until thoroughly wet and cleaned; then shake out and roll over and over in flour. After the flour bath use cornstarch and your plumes will come out perfectly white and clean. This is the process used in millinery departments with excellent results. Any light colored plume will clean well in this bath.

To Hang Skirt.—Sew on belt and then put on skirt; use a yardstick and place the end on the floor and mark with chalk at the top of yardstick about every two inches all around the hips. This mark is just thirty-six inches from the floor and the extra hip length is already allowed. Lay skirt on table and subtract as many inches from this length as you want it from the floor; if two inches, mark the skirt thirty-four inches in length from the measure, and your skirt will be perfectly even, and one can do this nearly alone.

LASH FOR APACHES.

Strong and Growing Demand for This in Paris.

How to protect Paris, France, from the growing Apache evil is the subject occupying the minds of nearly all leading citizens.

Statistics of murders and attempted murders by the type of individual known as the "Apache" show that they have rapidly increased of late. In August crimes of this kind committed with the revolver were nearly seventeen per cent more numerous than were those in July.

M. Lepine, the Prefect of Police, says that the law, as it exists would suffice for the suppression of this evil if it were fully enforced. He blames the leniency of the Judges. Light imprisonment and lighter fines are the usual punishments for many dreadful crimes.

Strong and growing opinion demands that whipping for the Apache type of criminal be applied in French prisons as it is in English ones. M. Raynaud, a deputy from Charente, announces that he will take the initiative in favor of the lash as a legal means of punishment.

SENTENCE SERMONS.

A large part of the theory rises in the liver.

The soft places are always mucilaginous.

Your success is to be measured by your service.

Some have no faith except when they are feeding.

Saint's sighs may do more harm than sinner's smiles.

When a man makes his own halo he always gets tangled up in it.

Preachers would get nearer to hearts if they cared less for counting noses.

He cannot love his fellows who helps one man to hate another.

Casting your care on the Lord does not mean quitting your job.

An honest prayer for harvest always inspires a man to get out and hustle.

A good deal of our dignity is really but impudence in view of our large indebtedness to the world.

COMMENDABLE SELFISHNESS.

Mothers Should Insist on Rights Being Respected.

Selfishness to a certain point is not only allowable, but commendable. The mother who, meaning to be unselfish, allows her husband and children to ride over her roughshod is not only preparing trouble for herself but, still worse, trouble for those whom she is spoiling day by day. She would be doing her duty more truly by her family if she remembered that she, as well as they, had certain rights which must be honored.

THE S. S. LESSON.

INTERNATIONAL LESSON,
OCT. 9.

Lesson II. The Parable of the Talents, Matt. 25. 14-30. Golden Text, Matt. 25. 21.

Verse 14. A man—Christ, as a merchant, whose chief interest is to increase his possessions by careful investment.

Going into another country—Same word as in Matt. 21. 33. Not "a far country," as in Authorized Versions. Christ is never a great way off from his servants. All that is intended is that in visible presence he is removed from them for a time while they trade for him. Why he goes away is not indicated. In the parable of the pounds the nobleman goes to "receive for himself a kingdom."

His own servants—Indicating that they are on terms of intimacy with their master. This makes it possible for him to assign the talents according to their several abilities. It also gives them their knowledge of his will, so that he does not need to instruct them as to the use they are to make of the goods. They know without being told, that they are to trade till he returns (Luke 19. 13).

15. Talents—See Word Studies for July 31. Five talents would be something over $5,000, a large sum to entrust to a servant. Some servants of the kingdom are rarely endowed, God lavishing upon them his graces and advantages. But such also have heavier obligations than the man of two talents. The man of one talent, on the other hand, though less freely endowed, is not to despise the opportunity which he has in his own sphere. All are to remember that the talents are not gifts outright, but sacred trusts out of which each is to make the very utmost.

16. Straightway—Note the difference here between the two versions. The Revision gives better point to the story, and is grammatically correct. The merit of the first servant is, that he lost no time in doing with his money exactly what his lord had intended—traded, and made other five talents. The immediate end, and sole business of Christ's service, not to secure as large a return as possible.

17. Gained other two—That is, by dint of unreserved devotion to his master's interests, though he has less working capital, he does as well as his fellow of five talents, because he doubles what he has received.

18. Did his lord's money—He might at least have doubled it by careful investment. By depositing it in the earth, he not only keeps it from diminution, which seems like an innocent enough purpose, but prevents the legitimate increase it might have had in other hands.

19. After a long time the lord cometh—Suggesting that the slothful servant had plenty of time to profit by the example of his fellows. A man's probation is extended until the last grain of possibility of his turning is exhausted. None can say in the day of reckoning that his failure was due to a lack of opportunity.

21. Faithful over a few things, I will set thee over many—This throws light upon the life hereafter. Reward for fidelity is not to be an unemployed period of quiet, but an opportunity for continued service, and service on a larger scale. The endowment of five talents will seem small in comparison to the nobler heritage of heaven.

23. His lord said unto him, Well done—Just as he had said to the five-talent man. The commendation and reward are precisely the same, showing that what counts in the end is, not rich natural or spiritual endowment, but high devotion to Him whom we serve. Since both were equally zealous and achieved the same result, they were received with equal warmth.

24. I knew thee that thou art a hard man—This is an excuse rather than a reason. Long before his lord returned his heart must have smitten him with the conviction that he ought to dig up the talent and put it into the current of trade. But now, when all opportunity has fled, he tries to throw the responsibility upon the master: "Is he not a man of greed, who without conscience reaps dishonest riches from other men's toil?"

25. I was afraid—As a matter of fact, his sole, unpardonable fault was, that he was lazy. Fear lest he should fail to make a fair profit from his investment is simply feigned.

26. Thou knowest—He convicts the servant out of his own mouth; for, if the charge were true (and the master makes no attempt to justify himself from it), then this wicked servant, who now tries to deceive his lord, had not been shamefully slothful, would at least have taken this one talent and deposited it with the bankers, where it could draw interest. This only shows that it was his laziness, and not his false estimate of his lord's character, that led him to hide the money. If Christ's one-talent workers feel themselves unequal to any independent profitable investment of their meager gifts, they can at least associate themselves with the more richly dowered, and these will show them the method of increase.

28. Failure to use one's gifts will at last result in inability to use them. There is a spiritual as well as a physical atrophy. Christ at last dismisses from his service those who fritter away their opportunities in idleness. It cannot excuse us that only a little has been committed to our charge. The administration of the littles is not overlooked by our Lord and Master.

29. Unto every one that hath—This is a law of life. As disuse ends in final loss, so wise and faithful use results in increase. There was a Jewish saying, "He who increases not decreases." 30. Cast ye out the unprofitable servant—His terrible punishment is simply on account of uselessness. How much more severe ought the condemnation to have been if he had squandered away the money of his master! If we wish in the end to come in from the outer darkness and enjoy the friendly light of the banqueting hall, we must not shrink from risking our talents, however slight, in the service of Him who, though exacting to the last degree, trod the hard way for us, that we might escape the bitterness of the weeping and the gnashing.

Heads and Tails.

A well known astronomer and mathematician was on his way home one evening after having spent an hour or two in an observatory, looking through a telescope at a comet. Directly opposite him in the car sat a man with a loud voice, whose information concerning comets would have supplied the material for a library and who appeared to be talking for the benefit of all the passengers. The astronomer listened patiently for a time. Then he said in a low tone to the man sitting next to him:

"Our friend on the other side of the aisle reminds me somewhat of a comet himself."

"How so?"

"He is emptying his head to make a long tale."

Life of Air Leaks Away.

Air seems to spoil easily. Air traveling through shafts and special air chambers—in fact, air going through anything that cuts it off from the ocean of atmosphere—loses some of its indescribable vitalizing qualities and is liable to cause weariness and a feeling of depression to those who habitually breathe in artificially ventilated houses. Scientific examination may show such air absolutely pure, but all the same it is poor stuff to take into the lungs. This also explains the real rock bottom difference between town and country air. Highly artificial food and highly artificial air, no matter how good they seem, are not the real stuffs themselves.—New York Press.

Hugo and His Disciple.

A young man, an admirer of the great poet, attended one of Victor Hugo's recitations, became engaged in argument and lost his temper. Hugo solemnly rebuked him, and he subsided. Presently the guests retired. One of them, however, had forgotten his umbrella and returned to get it. Looking through an open door from the vestibule, he perceived the young man on his knees before the poet, sobbing out his apologies for his disrespect, while Victor Hugo, with almost regal dignity, extended his hand to him and bade him rise.

Superfluities.

A novelist once subscribed to a clipping bureau, but stipulated that only favorable notices of his books should be sent. As a natural consequence it soon began to be gossiped about that he was very vain and so sensitive that he could not stand criticism. When a friend twitted him about it he said:

"You are entirely mistaken. I do it merely as a matter of economy. Whenever one of my books gets roasted there is sure to be some kind friend to send me the notice."

Noisy Gratitude.

Mark Twain in an after dinner speech in Bermuda once talked of gratitude. He didn't much care, he said, for gratitude of the noisy, bolterous kind. "Why," he exclaimed, "when some men discharge an obligation you can hear the report for miles around."

Tobacco a Big Revenue.

Tobacco and snuff yield far more custom's revenue than any other substance paying duty on entrance to Great Britain, and sugar comes next.

OBEYING ORDERS.

Hogan—"Phwat makes ye swally all your dinner in two minutes, Grogan? Are yez atin' on a bet?"

Grogan—"It's for the good av me dyspepsy, Moike. Sure the docther told me to rist an hour after 'atin', and how else am Oi goin' to get the hour to rist in unless Oi ate like the devil?"

SURELY A BIRD.

Mrs. Hoyle—Covered with jewels, isn't she?

Mrs. Dokle—Yes, it is hard to tell, at first glance, whether she belongs to the mineral or animal kingdom.

PERVASIVE ODOR.

"What is the most expensive perfume you know of?"

And after a moment's thought Mr. Craggins replied, "Gasoline."

There's a world of difference between borrowing trouble and sharing it.

AN ORIENTAL GARDEN.

It Is Not Planted With Flowers, and It Has No Lawns.

A garden does not necessarily mean a collection of flowers arranged more or less symmetrically, with spaces of lawn, shelter of trees and paths hither and thither. There have been gardens that, beyond a terra cotta jar or two holding a rosebush or a flowering almond, have had no green thing within their gates.

I know of an oriental garden to be seen where white garmented Moors come in the cool of the evening to sit and listen to ancient stories that they know by heart, or to music that was old when the pyramids were new, or perhaps to look at a dancing girl or two taking soft steps while they smoke their nargiles, yet that garden is nothing more than a series of arches upholding walls beyond walls, toned a faint, mysterious yellow that is not yellow, but white, and yet not white, but rose. In the middle is a pool of water in a stone basin that looks blue because of the intense sky overhead and that strikers with gold in reflections from the walls. In the corner stands a mighty jar full of strange scarlet blossoms, and rugs of deep color and intricate pattern lie on the sun warmed flags. There is always the fairy music of dripping water, and wonderful shadows move among the arches.

This place is a garden for all that it is so builded of man. The word court will not do for it.—Century Magazine.

FIGHTING FATIGUE.

Jacking Up the Tired System Without Using Stimulants.

If efforts to keep at work are continued in spite of fatigue the quality of the work is poor and the exhaustion inordinate. Students constantly make this error and do all sorts of things to keep awake to burn the midnight oil when if they would go to bed and rest they could accomplish far more in half the time in the morning with little or no fatigue.

Yet there are times when sleepiness and fatigue must be overcome without resort to stimulants which injure the judgment. The tired physician with a critical case, for instance, must have his wits about him, and it will add him vastly to go to an open window every fifteen or thirty minutes to take a dozen or two deep inspirations of cold air. His exhaustion in the end will be great, but he can make it up later.

As a matter of fact, surgeons and others whose work requires the keenest perceptions instinctively choose the early morning for their best efforts, reserving the afternoon for "low pressure" tasks or recreation. That is, it is far better to so live that we do not need the stimulus of these extraordinary methods of respiration.—American Medicine.

A Dinner Matter Than Two Nickels.

A panhandler approached a man sitting at a table in a restaurant and demanded a dollar for a glass of beer.

"Surely, my dear sir," replied the panhandler unflinchingly. "And, by the way, while we are on the subject, I have no idea in my possession two nickels. Would you mind giving me a ten cent piece for them?"

"I will on one condition," said the man, whose curiosity was aroused. "What's the answer?"

"Well, you see, it's this way," explained the panhandler. "If I have a dime I go into a saloon and ask for beer. I have a nickel comeback, which enables me to amble over to the free lunch counter and fill up. Maybe you don't realize that getting change over the bar gives a man a certain tone that doesn't belong to him if he just coughs up a nickel."—New York Sun.

Rice in the Orient.

Rice is "wet," that grows for the most part in flooded land, or "dry," that raised on uplands. Its growth in those regions where civilization has penetrated least is pathetic. Parts of the east are still covered with virgin forest of tall trees. Underneath all is dark in heavy shade. Creepers twine up hundreds of feet and are all topped off with indescribable orchids, all hunting for air and sunshine. In the thick wood a suitable spot is chosen, for rice they must have or starve. Undergrowth is cut out and staked and hedged around to make a fence for the little rice farm.—Exchange.

Foxglove.

In some places in England the foxglove is regarded with awe as a "witches' flower," the peasants saying that the witches use the bells of the blossoms as rattles. In most parts, however, the "wee sma' folk that bode go ill" are the bells that "sweetly nestle in the foxglove bells," and in Ireland the plant is called the fairy cap.

A Rival.

"Why do you always say, 'As scarce as hen's teeth'?"

"Because they are about the scarcest things in the world."

"More scarce than men who enjoy hearing about the cleverness of other people's babies?"—Chicago Record-Herald.

Women's Lefts.

Miss Bikley—So you have given up advocating woman's rights?

Miss Passer—Yes, now go in for women's lefts.

"Women's lefts? What's that?"

"Widowers."

Our affections are our fire. We live by these. They supply our warmth.—Channing.

LIVE STOCK MARKETS: TORONTO.

The railways reported 99 carloads of live stock at the City Yards, consisting of 1675 cattle, 1034 hogs, 2306 sheep and lambs, 139 calves and two horses.

Trade was dull for the common, rough light eastern and western stockers, but good for choice stockers and feeders, as well as good butchers' cattle, of which there were few on sale. There was a large number of light, ill-bred eastern cattle on sale, of which several loads were reported as being unsold at the close of the market.

Prices for good cattle held steady, but the inferior and common sold from 10 c to 20c per cwt. lower.

Butchers—Geo. Rowatree bought for the Harris Abattoir Company 340 cattle, as follows: Steers and heifers, $5 to $5 75; cows, $3 50 to $4 60; bulls $3 10 to $4 50; feeders $5 to $5 50; canners, $2 to $2 40.

Stockers & Feeders—Harry Murby & Co. report a good trade for feeders of fair weights and good quality, but light common stockers are selling at lower prices. Mr. Murby reported sales today of 150 feeders, 800 to 950 lbs. each, at $4.50 to $5.20.

Milkers and Springers—A limited supply sold at strong prices ranging from $50 to $75, and more would have sold readily.

Veal Calves—About 140 veal calves sold at $3 50 to $3 per cwt.
Sheep and Lambs—Sheep sold at steady prices, ewes, $4 50 to $4 80; rams, $3 to $3 50; lambs were lower, at $5 75 to $6, the average price being $5 90.

Hogs—Mr. Harris quoted hogs at $8 85 for selects, fed and watered, and $8 50 to drovers for hogs f.o.b. cars at country points.

Would Give $2.

Mr. Olsen had a cow killed by a railroad train. In due season the claim agent for the railroad called.

"We understand, of course, that the deceased was a very docile and valuable animal," said the claim agent in his most persuasive claim-agently manner, "and we sympathize with you and your family in your loss. But, Mr. Olsen, you must remember this: Your cow had no business being upon our tracks. Those tracks are our private property and when she stepped upon them she became a trespasser. Technically speaking, you as her owner, became a trespasser also. But we have no desire to carry the issue into court, and possibly give you trouble. Now, then, what would you regard as a fair settlement between you and the railroad company?"

"Vall," said Mr. Olsen slowly, "Ay bane poor Swede farmer, but Ay shall give you two dollars."

A Western Farmers Excursion

There is both merit and novelty in the proposal to organize an excursion party of western agriculturalists to make a tour of the Canadian East during the coming winter, which is the farmer's leisure season. The western farmer comes East individually to visit his old home and see the survivors of his old friends, but he seldom makes a tour of inspection, and he is apt to cut his trip short on account of absolute tediousness and vacuity. The proposal made by George McCraney, M. P., is to organize an excursion that will include several trainloads, and will make a systematic round of visitation of great centres and other points of interest. The precedent set this year by the Manufacturers' Association has been so successful that it can hardly prove otherwise than encouraging.

Many of the farmers now in the West went thither from the East a few years ago. When they left here they had seen little of these provinces, and they have ever since been too busy to give up the time necessary to make the eastern trip. As they can see no practical advantage to set off against the time, trouble, and cost of the round tour so they naturally shrink from making it.

Thomas McNulty was found guilty at Barrie on the capital charge of inciting Mary Dolan to murder her infant. The verdict was coupled with a recommendation to mercy.

Pull Together.

One man can knock down a wood pile much faster than two can build it up, sagely remarks the Chronicle. To get the best results in piling up wood all should work together and work together in the same direction. To get results—paying results should be the aim of all. What's true about the building up and pulling down of wood piles is equally true of business. No business can succeed if one pulls it down as fast as another builds it up, and the pulling down process is the very thing that's going on wherever there is a lack of harmony in the operation. Church choirs, and town bands and orchestras and all kinds of sport are almost certain to have hot-headed members in them somewhere. These fellows want to have all their own way, or they won't pull in the right direction, and down goes the whole structure, quicker by far, than it was ever put into shape. Even the church is not free from cantankerous fire-brands that are sure to do more harm than good. The peace, harmony, prosperity and Christian influence of many a religious body have been sadly impaired through the hot-headed fanaticism of some idiotic self-constituted leader of society, who thinks he should do all the driving or clog the wheels of progress by working in the opposite direction. Town and township councils and even fraternal organizations are not free from obstructionists whose presence is an impediment to all healthful progress. What is true of the individual, the church choir, the local sporting organizations, and all other communities, and the same demoralizing and damaging influences are seen in towns, townships, states, and even in whole nations. Let us pull together in the right direction, and success will crown our efforts.

She didn't like being prayed at.

Because her husband, Scott Cowan, insisted on reading to her, preaching at her, preaching at her, and praying for her, young Mrs. Lottie Cowan said she and her husband, a middle-aged produce dealer of Palmerston, could not get along together.

The story of their domestic troubles was told by each to Judge Denton on Monday, during the trial of the man for abduction of their five-year-old child, Norman, Thomas Collins, a young timekeeper at the departmental store where Mrs. Cowan is employed in the city, was held as an accessory, he, it is alleged, having been instrumental in procuring the child from Mrs. Cowan's care.

Telling why she left her husband in 1909 and came to Toronto to make a living for herself and child, Mrs. Cowan said: "He got back at his old tricks. Every time I would go to tell the boy stories he would get out the Bible and read aloud and interrupt us. Then he would pick out texts, such as 'a soft answer turneth away wrath,' and would hand it to me to read. I told him to read them himself."

"Once he flung the Bible on the floor, when he flung himself on the floor, and behaved so crazy I had to go to the telephone and ring it so as to make him believe someone wanted to speak to him," she said with a reminiscent smile. Explaining the incident in his own evidence, Cowan said they had been quarrelling and he wanted her to pray over it. She called him a fool, and he prayed by himself. He was praying for her when she tricked him over the telephone.

He blamed most of their troubles on a Staff Captain in the Salvation Army at Palmerston, whom, he said, his wife seemed to be infatuated with.

"Where is he now?" inquired Mr. Robinette.

"Oh, he was thrown out for throwing over the girl he was engaged to and running away with another man's wife," said Cowan.

An agreement, drawn up by a Guelph lawyer, was produced by Mrs. Cowan, in which she promised to return to her husband, he agreeing to treat her kindly, and engaging to give her the complete custody of the child, if he failed in keeping the promises he made. The agreement, however, had never been acted upon.

How Apples are Selling.

The Oshawa Co-operative Shipping Association has made a sale of apples for Winnipeg at $4 for No. 1 Kings, $3.75 for No. 1 Spies, and $2.50 for No. 2, with other varieties at slightly lower figures, the general average for Nos. 1 and 2 on board cars being $2. At the same neighborhood, outside the Association, have gone at $1 per bbl on the tree, although some of the best growers in the Association were offered up to $1.80. The difference in the returns realized is partly due to the co-operative system of handling, but is also largely the result of the greater care which those in the association give to their orchards.
