Miscellaneous.

AN AUDIENCE OF ONE.

Emmett the actor, tells us the following story of how he once played to an audience of one in a theatre at Columbus, Ohio.

After two or three performances the posters announced a matinee. I went to the theatre at two o'clock that afternoon and found my company skylarking behind the curtain in their everyday suits. I looked out in the auditorium. There was just one man in the theatre. He sat clear back in the parquet. It was as much as I could do to outline him in the darkness. I went out to the box office. "Did that man pay for his ticket?" I asked. "Yes, fifty cents," the treasurer replied. "The manager told me to return him his money and close the theatre." "No you won't," I said. "I have never disappointed an audience when I am sober, and I do not propose to do so now. We'll play for him." I went to the parquet, introduced myself to the man and thanked him for his attendance. I told him that as he had thought enough of me to come and see me and pay fifty cents for the privilege, he should have as good a performance as though the house was packed. I then went behind the curtain and requested the company to dress. "Great Caesar, Joe, one of them said, 'you ain't a going to play to that one man, are you?' Yes, I am," I replied. "He's paid his money, and he shall have his money's worth." "Oh, these," broke in another member of the company. "I'll pay his fifty cents and you let him go." I told them that the performance must go on as usual, and warned each one that any attempt to gape the audience or any failure to play a part in full would be a signal for discharge.

Well, the orchestra played an overture and the curtain arose. I walked down to the foot lights. I invited the audience to come forward and take a front seat where he could see and be seen. He thanked me and settled himself in the front row. I suggested that a little generous applause thrown in when he thought the actors deserved it would serve to inspire them and warm them to their work. He seemed to appreciate the suggestion and agreed to give us all the encouragement he thought we deserved. The performance began. I don't think I ever played better. I threw myself into the character, and sang the "Lullaby" so tenderly that the entire audience was in tears. He called for an encore. I told him we rarely gave an encore, but as this was an extraordinary occasion he should have one. He applauded liberally at times where no applause was deserved. At such times I called his attention to the omission, and asked whether or not he had made a mistake. A hint was sufficient.

He would clap his hands as though perfectly enraptured and shout, "Bravo!" like an Italian over Salvini. The company paid no attention to him, but went on with the performance as regular as clock work. Between the acts, however, one or two of them evinced a disposition to go out in the auditorium and mingle with the audience. I set my face against it and they refrained. At the close of the second act the manager entered the theatre. He had been out for a walk. He seemed dumb-founded at seeing the house so faintly lighted, and the orchestra playing soberly to one man. But he was more astonished when the curtain arose and the performance was resumed with as much unconcern as though there was a thousand dollars in the house. But he had an eye to the business. He sent word to the newspaper reporters, and a half a dozen of them arrived in time for the last act. No actor ever received better newspaper criticism. Some of them wrote a column long. It turned out that the audience was the owner of a colliery in Michigan, and very wealthy. The following night he gave the whole company a banquet at the leading hotel. He entertained us as handsomely as we had entertained him, and we parted with mutual regrets. Just a year afterwards I announced another matinee at Columbus. It was well advertised and the house was packed to suffocation. I took in over $1,200. My sense of duty to that one man, who invested the small sum of a half a dollar and returned me a golden harvest.

Rioting in Rome.

The despatches from Rome the past few days have contained references to a disturbance in that city upon the occasion of the removal of the body of the late Pope Pious IX. The particulars of the affair are stated in the following special to the New York World:

The translation of the body of Pope Pius IX, from its resting place in the Basilica of St Peter to the tomb provided for it in the Church of San Lorenzo was accomplished last night and this morning, the removal beginning at midnight and the whole ceremony being ended before daylight. The ceremony was attended by some of the most shameful scenes ever seen in Rome. Immediately after his death and his obsequies, it will be remembered that the body of the late Pope, encased in several coffins, one within the other was elevated in a niche prepared for it high up on the walls of one of the Chapels of St. Peter's, where it remained until yesterday. Means were taken in accordance with the order given in his will, a simple and inexpensive tomb had been prepared as its last resting place, under the altar of the Church of San Lorenzo, which is some distance from the Vatican. The late Pope had certain tender reminiscences connected with this church and for this reason wished his body to repose there. Moreover it has been said that profound humility of spirit had induced him to mortify his pride in life by directing that his body should not have the honor of permanent sepulture in the grandest church of the world and near the remains of the apostles Peter and Paul.

The tomb of the Church of San Lorenzo has been completed for some time, but for reasons satisfactory to his executors the translation of the body was postponed until last night. A careful watch was preserved over it until all the arrangements were complete. At midnight the coffin was carried from the chapel, and surrounded by a large number of priests and laymen who carried lighted candles. The scene was solemn and sombre in the extreme, but scarcely had the procession left the steps of St. Peter's than an angry mob of the roughs of the city swarmed around it, hustling and intercepting the priests, endeavoring to extinguish the candles and to overturn the bier and shouting "Long live Italy! Down with the Pope! Away with the black gowns!" and so on. The disturbance became so great and the fear of a terrible scandal was so imminent that the city authorities were compelled to intervene. On arriving they dispersed the mob, order was restored, the procession moved on to the church and the ceremonies of placing the body in the tomb was completed.

The Daily News Rome correspondent, writes that the anti-clerical ferment continues, and no right passes with a demonstration. These are instantly suppressed by the police. Anti-clerical clubs are forming to promote the perpetual expulsion of Papacy from Rome.

FROM SCHOOL-ROOM TO PALACE.

A Female Teacher Suddenly Falls Heir to $2,500,000.

Wheeling, W. Va., is not a great city in any respect, except, perhaps in nails. It is a smoky, dirty little place, with solid industries and very little romance; yet recently there has come to light an event in which Wheeling, or a person formerly a resident of Wheeling, figures that puts to flight some of the most sensational imaginings of the novel writers of the day.

The Iveson family is well known in this vicinity, especially Miss Ida Iveson who for five years was a teacher in the First Ward School, leaving that position in June, 1880. During that time she was a general favorite with all, being a handsome, prepossessing young lady, with a genial manner and education far above that of the average. At the time mentioned she resigned and returned to her home in Chillicothe. Everyone supposed that she had been born in the humble walks of life, as she denied herself every luxury and devoted all her earnings to the support of a broken-down father three sisters and a boy brother. She is only 24 years old, and her entire life has been one of self-sacrifice and denial.

Now for the romantic part. Miss Ida is a member of one of the oldest families of Scotland, an heiress to about $2,500,000. Gittanockie Hall, Duffrynshire, Scotland, is one of the largest estates in that section of the country. For many long years it has belonged to a family named Armstrong, and at the time this story begins belonged to Sir Spencer Armstrong. He died about sixty years ago, and the heirs were his sons, William and John Christopher. Wm was the oldest, and, according to the laws of Great Britain, inherited the entire estate, but there was a clause in the will which left a portion to John. This William contested, and after a long legal fight, John lost Gittanockie and came to America. He landed without a cent in his pockets or any friends.

The early part of his career in this country is unknown, but about twenty five years ago he opened a small tailor shop in St. Clairsville, and there married a Miss Billings. For several years they lived there happily, having children born to them, and then removed to Coraeville. About two years ago two strangers called on Mr. Iveson and offered him $5,000 to sign a paper: the contents of which he was not to know. His suspicions were aroused, and, after a long struggle, he managed to scrape enough money together to go to Scotland, where he found that his brother William had died, and that a steward and a distant relative were endeavoring to prove in court that John Christopher Armstrong, alias Iveson (he having changed his name in coming to this country) was dead, and William, leaving no issue, the property reverted to them, the two schemers.

Upon the appearance of Mr. Iveson, he was duly declared the rightful owner, and the steward convicted and sentenced to thirteen years in prison. Mr. Iveson returned to Coraeville, but the excitement and fatigue was too much for him, and on the 7th inst. he suddenly died, leaving the magnificent estate to be enjoyed by his posterity. The property outside of a will, now reverts to the young man, a lad 15 years of age, now known as Sir William Armstrong. The family sailed from New York last Thursday. Miss Ida being followed by the well wishes of her numerous friends in this city.

This is surely a step from poverty to affluence, the young lady, by one of Fortune's fitful freaks, being transported from a school-room to a palace with all the luxuries of life, where she will move in the most aristocratic circles of her noble ancestors in grand old Scotland.

LONDON, July 22.—Several rumors of European combinations against England are in circulation this morning. It is reported that Prince Bismarck has offered to secure for France the entire supremacy of Egypt and a governing power along the Egyptian shores of the Mediterranean Sea. Another report is that a powerful intrigue is on foot to effect a Franco-German alliance with Austria and Italy.

HALIFAX, July 11.—The Chief Justice this morning, in the case of the Allan steamer Sardinian (v. s.) barque Sarah E. Fraser, of Portland, Me., which was sunk in collision by the Sardinian while on a voyage from Portland to Matanzas, gave judgment against the Sardinian with costs.

THE CARBONEAR HERALD

"Honest labor—our noblest heritage"
CARBONEAR, AUGUST 5.

Holloway's Pills.—Cure for Indigestion.—Indigestion, with torpidity of the liver, is the curse of thousands who spend each day with accumulated sufferings, all of which may be avoided by taking Holloway's Pills, according to their accompanying directions. They strengthen and invigorate every organ subservient to digestion. Their action is purifying, healing, and strengthening. They may be safely taken without interfering with ordinary pursuits, or requiring much restriction in diet. They quickly remove noise and giddiness in the head, and dispel low spirits and nervous fears. These balsamic Pills work the cure without debilitating or exhausting the system; on the contrary, they serve and support the vital principle by substituting pure for impure blood.

We take the following extracts from our several exchanges:—

The Land League fund is mounting up once more. The Treasurer acknowledges the receipt of $9,300, for the week ending July 2nd, and it is estimated that the amounts received since range from ten to twelve thousand dollars weekly. The sum of $4,612 was received by the Irish World alone last week. And it is all required.

The French are not to have such a walk over in North Africa as they at first supposed. The Arabs are rising in all directions, and, although scattered and beaten by the disciplined armics of the Republic it is only to appear in other places. The indignation in Spain over the French aggression is scarcely inferior to the intense feeling in Italy.

The Irish Land Bill has at last passed through the House of Commons and now awaits sanction, emaculation or rejection by the House of Lords. It is thought they will amend it slightly and return it to the manufacturer, but no one can safely reckon upon what the peers are capable of doing when their blue blood is in a state of effervescence.

Marshal Bazaine, who surrendered Metz to the Germans and an army of 174,000 with it, and who at the same time betrayed France, is now in Spain—having escaped from the Isle of Ste. Margurite, where he was imprisoned for life—and he modestly requests that he be allowed to cross the Pyrenees to look after some property in France. If this is not impudence it is the best name that can be found for it. Benedict Arnold was more modest than Bazaine.

One good Amendment to the Land Bill has passed the Committee of the Commons. This amendment provides that the Land Claims Court, the Commissioners of which have just been appointed, will have power to quash those leases forced upon the tenants by landlords against the spirit of the Act of 1870, and which they had to accept or leave the farms. The landlords took advantage of the wording of the Act to exercise unjust powers of which they will now be deprived by the Court, if it is worth anything, which is to be seen. It is now more than possible that the Lords will not reject the bill as it has been emasculated sufficiently to please them.

The English papers, desperate at seeing the sympathy extended to Ireland by the Vatican, are using every means to destroy it, but without success; The tactics they use are to issue false despatches, alleged to have come from Rome, which assert that the Vatican is angry at such and such a Church dignitary for his attitude towards Ireland. In some instances the dignitaries treat the despatches with contempt, in others they contradict them, but the cunning journals do not think fit to insert the contradiction. When Parnell came to America he visited Cardinal McClosky, at which, said the English and American jingo papers, the Vatican was angry. But the Vatican was not; it was only the English Whigs and Tories and their sympathizers on this continent. The latest trick is about Cardinal Manning. The Vatican is very much annoyed that he should give comfort to the Land League. But, in fact, they are inventing lies to little purpose, for the Land League is not a religious organization, and it would move on whether it was approved in Rome, or whether it was condemned. It is strange, at the same time, that not one of the London dailies, the Pall Mall Gazette excepted, has thought fit to give publication to the advice of Leo XIII. to the people of Ireland to assert their rights peaceably, and success would follow. His Holiness knows what their rights actually are, and he approves of the agitation for them.

It is not easy to obtain accurate returns of the religious persuasions of the people of the United States as yet, but it is estimated that Catholics number over seven millions. Judging from the increase in the Catholic clergy we should imagine that since 1871 the Catholics have increased 50 per cent. The following figures may be taken as accurate:—

Table with 3 columns: Year, Priests, Increase. Rows: 1872 (4,192), 1873 (4,412), 1874 (4,770), 1875 (4,870), 1876 (5,077), 1877 (5,297), 1878 (5,543), 1879 (5,770), 1880 (6,058), 1881 (6,433)

The Archbishop of Cashel finds that the revised version sustains his view of the Scriptural declaration that he who tills the earth should first partake of its fruits, and he directs the attention of some of his assailants to the new translation—for their benefit:—

THE PALACE, Thurles, June 14.
Sir,—Will you allow me to remind you of a short, but sharp, correspondence which appeared in your columns some months ago, between me and certain English Biblical scholars, in reference to the meaning of St Paul's words to Timothy, second epistle, second chapter, sixth verse:—"The husbandman that laboreth must first partake of the fruits?" The learned gentleman who undertook to lecture and enlighten me at that time will, I hope, do me now the favor of looking into the Revised Version of the New Testament just issued from the press, and read there the rendering of the Greek text in question. Here it is:—"The husbandman that laboreth must be the first to partake of the fruits." This fact speaks for itself. It speaks also in no uncertain way for me, inasmuch as it proves to be literally true what I said in a former letter, namely, that my so-called critics have displayed their own ignorance, while flattering themselves, no doubt, that they were exposing mine's.

I remain, sir,
Your faithful servant,
T. W. CROKE, Archbishop of Cashel.

AN ARCHITECTURAL VICTORY.

The Capitol at Albany, N. Y.
BY JOHN A. CLARK, STUDENT, RUTLAND, VT.

On a recent visit to New York city, and vicinity, accompanied by one of my fellow students, I had the pleasure of satisfying, by so doing, a long felt curiosity, that of witnessing life in the queen city of Young America. As space opposes to my depicting the many striking features which form the almost universally well known characteristics of this superb metropolis. I will pass on, gliding slowly up the beautiful Hudson, to stop before the ancient city of Albany and visit the already far-famed edifice which the Great Empire State has erected and can proudly call her own, as well as the grandest legislative building of modern times. Generations will come and go, ages will roll on, and this Capitol, this stately piece of workmanship will stand as a lasting memorial to monumental glory and the spirit in which it was established.

The 9th of December, 1867, saw the first spadeful of earth removed for the excavation, and from that to the present day the great work has progressed with giant strides. Five years more are counted as being necessary to its entire completion with an estimate cost of nothing less than $26,500,000. This magnificent pile of massive granite covering an area of three acres and seven feet with its walls 108 feet above the water table, may well be styled the pride of the 19th century. Standing, as it does, on a commanding eminence, nature rivaling with art in its surroundings, its majestic proportions loom up grand and glorious in all the beauties of architecture. To perfect this noble work no means were spared, and millions of money were cheerfully donated, and Albany, the beautiful capital of the Union, may feel a just pride in possessing the most magnificent legislative halls in the world. That she has this high honor, none will deny. Thoughtless persons will oftentimes ask "why such a waste of money? Cannot Albany legislate and amend laws as well in a building that costs three or four millions?" And why, if our aim is to economize, cannot we worship God in a shed as well as in a costly cathedral: for one is analogous to the other? But the object is not to economize, rather to build a monument to American enterprise and progress, a monument that is not for Albany alone, but for all the nation. Rome has its Cathedral, and, if we look at the impetus the arts and science have received, we could not say in justice that the money was wasted, and as we judge of Rome, so we also judge of Albany; for, as the great genius of Pitt often remarked, "there is nothing like a grand architectural undertaking." Yes, we may truly say in conclusion, that this gigantic work of persevering enterprise, with its implied accompaniment of sculpture and paintings, together with the surpassing splendor of its exterior proportions will in the long future create a love of art in all classes of society, and New York has alone the proud distinction of being first of the States of the Union to have lighted in her "Capitol" a beacon fire that shall call together all the arts and scientific industries, to set them at work in noble tasks for her behoof.

Mr Editor.—Dear Sir—This small sketch which I penned down and sent to your address, was composed at the repeated requests of a number of my young College friends some of whom reside in Carbonear and Harbor Grace and all, with myself, were, during the past three years, and are still constant readers of your worthy paper. Hoping its perusal will be a matter of interest and instruction to all who patronize your Herald, for the sake of those who caused me to compose it, I expect you will have the kindness to publish it in your next issue that any trouble may not be in vain.

I remain,
Respectfully yours, etc.,
J. A. C.

To the Editor of the Carbonear Herald,
Carbonear, August 4.

Dear Sir,—I noticed in your last issue a letter signed Qui non timet vocem occipitris in which the writer accused Ocoela of bad grammar &c. It is an odd and well tried saying that "those who live in glass houses should not throw stones." The writer of the letter in question was evidently unconscious of his own weaknesses in the matter of grammar or he would never have ventured to have given to the public such an effusion as that in which he has set himself to criticize and pass judgment on Ocoela.

Perhaps Ocoela is a small Hawk, but better be that than proclaim himself a great goose as Mr. Non timet has done by his affectation of a knowledge which he evidently does not possess.
But to Non timet's letter. He says, "I think if the real Ocoela were to be found he would, though an Indian Chief, write much better English than the Ocoela of Carbonear." I think he would have considered the word "being" in the foregoing, a redundancy, and have made his sentence run thus:—"I think that if the real Ocoela were found, he would, though an Indian Chief." &c. Of course, from Non timet, in the face of his strictness on others, we look for not only English, but elegant English. This writer next "thinks" that "such an attack on some and almost all, the young ladies should not be permitted to pass unheeded." Would not his sentence have been better expressed thus:—"I think that such an attack on some, nay, on almost all, the young ladies" &c? But now we pass from negligence to inaccuracy. Mr Non timet must inform Mr. Ocoela that, before he undertook newspaper correspondence he should be positive that he knew at least English construction and the tenses of English verbs. Might we not here transpose a little and say,—Mr. Ocoela must inform Mr Non timet that before he ventured on public strictures on others he should at least have been positive that he knew the sequence of tenses of English verbs. "Be" comes in very strangely after "undertook" and before "knew."

The concluding paragraph of the letter runs thus—"Perhaps the readers of the Herald may say that this letter has been written through any malicious motive." I don't think the English speaking readers of the Herald would say any such thing. If they spoke at all it would be to say that the letter was written from some malicious motive. But probably they would be more correct in assuming the whole to be the effusion of some empty-headed but self satisfied school boy home for the holidays, and seeking thus "to air his bumpousness," and, Mr. Editor, would they be far wrong? Thanking you for the space

I remain, sir,
Yours, &c.,

America was discovered by Lief Ericsson, the Icelandic, in the year 1000, and 856 years after, the Esterbrook Steel Pen Co., turned out their first pen.

For obvious reasons we have discontinued the publication of the "Wasp" column in this journal. It will be published on a sheet half the size of the Herald from this office every alternate Tuesday evening.

On Wednesday last, Mr. W. Walsh; of Brigus, narrowly escaped from what might have been a very serious accident. While going down over Saddle Hill his horse took flight and ran down the hill at full speed until he came to Connors' corner, where the wagon capsized, throwing its occupants, Mr. Walsh and two ladies on the road side. The ladies escaped unhurt we believe, but Mr. Walsh received several scrapes and bruises.

A large fleet of bankers and baiters are at present in our harbor waiting the arrival of squid which have been very scarce up to date, though some few hundred were offered for sale different days the past week.

Ten or twelve large stones were rolled out in the middle of the road at the head of Harbor-Rock Hill, on Thursday night last, by some person or persons unknown. We hope the sergeant and police will use every effort to have the offenders brought to justice.

We have been informed that Rev. Father Ryan, of the Jesuit order; has been invited to preach at the Consecration of the Bishop of Harbor Grace. The above Rev. gentleman is a native of this town where he received his early education at Mr. Mackey's Grammar School.

We have also been informed that Deacon Tarahan, son of Mr Tarahan of Brigus, may be expected to arrive from Rome on Wednesday next.

Rumor has it that the Very Rev. E. F. Walsh, Administrator, and the Rev. John Vaitch, P.P., King's Cove, will be present at the Consecration of the Bishop of Harbor Grace.

HALIFAX, July 29.

The Dominion revenue for the past quarter shows a surplus of three and a half million dollars. To-day has been fixed for the third reading of the Land Bill. The Amer of Afghanistan was totally defeated at Kurex yesterday. All his baggage and eighteen guns were taken. The Kelat regiment and Candahar horse deserted to Ayoub. Mr Gladstone has confirmed the report in the House of Commons that British influence and all the results of the late war have been swept away.

July 30.

It is expected that a monster meeting of Bradlaugh's supporters will be held in London on Tuesday. A constitutional crisis has occurred in Denmark, the Radicals having carried the elections. The Land Bill passed a third reading in the House of Commons last night by a vote of 220 to 14. The Bill was also read a first time in the House of Lords, and the second reading fixed for Monday.

Further intelligence of anti-Jewish riots has been received from Russia. The French elections will be held on the 21st August. The Chamber closed yesterday. It is understood that the Western Union Telegraph Company has secured a lease of the Canadian lines for ninety nine years. The latest bulletin issued states that President Garfield is better. The population of Canada, according to the census just taken, is 4,256,900, an increase of nearly nineteen per cent previous last census.

August 1.

The latest bulletin says the President steadily improves. The Conservative Lords will meet today at Salisbury's residence to consider amendments to the Land Bill. It is expected the Bill will pass the House of Lords on Friday. It is stated that the French Consul in Constantinople has discovered a vast Moslem conspiracy against the French in North Africa. France will send more troops to the threatened region.

August 2.

In the House of Lords last night Carlisle moved a second reading of the Land Bill, Salisbury severely criticised the Bill but agreed with it under the circumstances, with a few amendments. Other Lords strongly condemned the Bill. Lytton declared it to be revolutionary and tending to the separation of Ireland and civil war.

Painell has been suspended for violent language by a vote of 132 to 14. A convention between England and the Boers was signed on Saturday.

LITERARY.

THE SEA.

I love to watch the deep blue sea,
As it dances in the sun;
So bright, so free, so boundless,
As it sparkles gaily on,

I love to watch the dark lone sea,
When the stately queen of night,
Sheds o'er its tranquil bosom
A stream of rippling light.

But not for me, oh, not for me,
Is the sun or moon-lit scene;
No! give me the stormy tempest
And the lightning's flashing gleam.

The foaming, crested billows,
As they onward roar and dash,
The shrill cry of the sea bird
And the thunder's dreadful crash.

Yes, 'tis then I love the ocean
So boundless and so free,
When the spirit of the storm sings loud,
'Tis then I love the sea.

Love Begets Love.

Concluded.

'That I am tired of gardening and must go in for a rest,' concluded aunt Betha, and,
withdrawing her hand from his she picked up her basket
and went away.

And he? What did he do?
Why, in the first place, he went to the duck-pond and fished out the floweas, dirty,
green, and dripping wet; and,
in the second he went in search of Gift, but fruitlessly.

'Why, Giftie, you out here!'
sang out Paul, catching sight of her under the oak, as he passed. Throwing aside his fishing-tackle, he seated himself beside her, tilting his straw hat over his eyes, and looking anything but indifferent, matter-of-fact Paul He-mans.

With an irritable little shake of the shoulders, Gift brought her thoughts into every day order.

'What's the matter, Paul?'
she asked. 'Sport bad this-bright day?'

'Oh, bother!' muttered Paul.
'She must be told, I suppose.
How do women manage these matters? Then, quite aloud, and in an injured tone—'Matter? Well, Gift, I think you have seen before this.'

'Seen what, Paul? You look well enough. Come, don't be mysterious tell me.'

Down came Paul's hat still lower over his eyes; a little clump of daisies lying within reach of his hand was ruthlessly demolished; a big yellow dandelion shared the same fate; and all the while Gift watched him with puzzled face. At last he announced—

'Minnie is coming back to the farm in October—for good;
and aunt Betha has promised Bruce to go live at Eaton Hall
He wants some one to take care of him badly, poor fellow!'

'Oh, Paul, I never dreamt
you could be so secretive, or Minnie either!' cried Gift, with a merry laugh. 'You do not deserve it; but—here she kissed him—that is payment for giving me a sister—especially such a nice one as Minnie will be.'

With a relieved face Paul righted his hat.

'That's well,' he said. 'I hoped you would be pleased to hear, little one. You see,
you were ill—'

'Minnie's good qualities shone resplendently,' added she filling up the pause. 'Paul, I hope—I believe you will be very happy.'

'And you, little sister?'

'I? Oh, yes, quite! I shall go and take care of aunt Stanhope till you and Minnie are quite settled at the farm.'

'That reminds me, Gift.
They want you to go and stay
with them a while; to help Minnie in that joy of you women—shopping.'

There came such a delighted look, such a low, happy laugh from the girl, as she sprang to her feet that Paul looked at her in surprise.

'I'll start to-morrow!' she cried eagerly.

'There is no need for such desperate hurry,' he said.
'Oh, Paul, I want a change so badly! You don't know—I'm so tired! And in a passion of tears she laid her head upon his shoulder.

'Poor child!' he sympathized caressingly. 'Your illness has pulled you down sadly. You ought to go to the seaside for a time.'

No, no! This will be far nicer.
Long Eaton is so quiet; I shall like the London change best.'

'Then I will take you at once,' he said.

'Take me! Can you spare the time, Paul?'

'It will save writing a letter,' he replied, evasively. Gift laughed.

'I shall take Gift to London with me to-morrow,' was Paul's salutation
to their aunt, as they entered the parlor.

'I am very glad to hear it,' said Miss Hemans; but Mr Vernoy, who was standing by the open window,
knit his brows angrily, and walked off
without waiting for tea.

Thus it came to pass that in the sweet spring weather, when all the world looked fairest and best, Gift took flight, and settled herself for a time
amid the heat and dust of London.
But, when the first novelty of the change had worn off, and she had time to think, she discovered things were no better, no happier than in her quiet country home. She had been flying from herself. So the imaginary dream of peace ended abruptly.

A London square is dreary at the best of times; but viewing it on a chilly October evening, through rainsplashed panes, did not tend to improve the prospect. Gift's bad spirits their climax; she turned from the window, burying her face in her hands, in a passionate burst of tears.

Just at that moment Mrs Stanhope came in.

'Gift, Paul is come. Why, you are crying, my child! What is it? Come tell me dear. Paul most not see those red eyes or he will think you are fretting.'

Mrs Stanhope put her arms around the weeping girl, and drew her down to a low seat by her side.

'Now, dear, we are safe from interruption. Minnie is with Paul, and your uncle has not come home from the city. Make me your confessor for want of a better; perhaps I may smooth away the trouble.'

'It is nothing aunt. I shall be quite well in a few minutes. I am only foolish.'

'Is that quite the truth, Gift?'
asked her aunt gently.

For a few minutes there was silence, Mrs Stanhopes arm never relaxing its fond clasp, and then Gift burst into a passionate torrent of broken words, and phrases that told the mental struggle of the past year
far more eloquently than any set speech could have done. 'And now, she ended, 'I must work, aunt. I must have something to do to fill up the time and occupy my thoughts. I cannot live any longer this aimless, useless life. I can be useful; I am not happy. Oh, I wish I had some work—real work—to do!'

'Don't you think we are all very apt to look too far ahead—too far ahead to look for work abroad, when it is waiting to be done at home?'
asked Mrs Stanhope, with gentle earnestness.

'That cannot be so with me, aunt.
Minnie is going to take care of Paul,
and aunt Betha is going to Long Eaton
to live. I must look abroad.'

'suppose you came and took Min-nie's place with us, till other work was put into your hands, dear?'

'Do you mean it—really mean it?'
asked Gift in glad surprise.

'Really, my child. We shall be very lonely without our little daughter, and Bertie will be very glad of another sister. Now has the sky brightened?' said Mrs Stanhope with a kiss and a smile.

'It has—it ought, dear aunt Mary;
but, if I am not as bright at first as I should be, you will have patience with me while I learn my lesson, will you not?' supplanted Gift earnestly.

'My darling, we love you; that I am sure, will be a sufficient answer to all your doubts. Only remember, dear Gift—now, weakly indulged in, is deluded in, is no true sorrow, but selffishness. Now bathe your eyes and go down to Paul, or he will wonder where you have hidden yourself.'

There were no lights in the drawing-room when Gift went in, but the bright fire-light revealed a figure standing upon the rug which certainly was not Paul's.
She had not time to retreat, as she was led to a chair by the fire before a word was spoken, and even then the utterance was only, 'Oh Gift!' But the tone the look, the hand-clasp disclosed what words
could not have done.

Gift sat trembling.

'Have you nothing to say to me?'
asked Bruce eagerly. 'Wont you come and live at Long Eaton, Gift?
Is my coming here to be of no avail?'

'You have aunt Betha,' murmured
she.

'Aunt Betha! Is she my love? Nay, Gift, it is useless to pretend any longer. The happiness of two lives is in your keeping, for you do care for me,
dear. Speak—and this uncertainty—
be true to yourself.'

She was standing before him now
with contending emotions.

'It is true, Bruce,' he said, in a low,
choked voice. 'It is true—I do love
you!'

So the trouble ended at last, and in due time Bruce Vernoy's hopes were realized. Eaton Hall had its mistress
—a Gift, a-aunt Betha used to tell him, well worth the waiting for.

'Love begets love,' said the old lady one day, with a laughing nod of the head.

'You are quite wrong auntie—I never loved one but for Bruce till he began to disturb me so,' rejoined Gift.

'Dislike you? Oh, Bruce, with eleven or twelve eyes. I have never disliked you for one moment of my life!'

'Then you have behaved most decently,
laughingly pouted Gift.

'And aunt Betha smiled at the fulfillment of her prophecy. A.L.D.

THE END.
