Local News.

The Waterloo Battalion will meet at Galt on the 29th inst. to receive a stand of colors as a present from the ladies of that town.

Salt was struck at Kincaidine on Tuesday last, at the depth of 895 feet below the surface, which is 100 feet less than it was found necessary to bore at Gerdich.

A man named Robert Bland was killed in London on Tuesday night, while attempting to pass under some cars that blocked the crossing. One of the wheels ran obliquely over his body and almost cut him in two.

RIFLE MATCH.—A match between some of the members of the Artillery Company and some of the members of the Rifle Association will be contested at the ranges to-morrow.

LACROSSE MATCH AT PARIS.—GUELPH WINS.—Yesterday the third match between the Guelph Club and the second twelve of the Toronto Club, ended in the Guelph team obtaining the mastery in two straight games of thirty-two and eighteen minutes.

DEATH OF THE BISHOP OF MONTREAL.—The Right Reverend Francis Fulford, D.D., Anglican Bishop of Montreal and Metropolitan of Canada, died on Wednesday evening, shortly after six o'clock in Montreal, aged 65 years. He was made Bishop in 1850, when he came out to Montreal. In 1859 he was appointed by Royal Letters Patent "Metropolitan Bishop of Canada." The Provincial Synod, which met on Wednesday morning, adjourned till the following day pending his severe illness. The late Bishop was noted for his learning, his high Christian character, and his administrative capacity; and his removal will be deeply felt by the Anglican Church in this country.

Frederick Macnider, of the bank of Montreal, at Hamilton, was drowned at Quebec on Friday.

We thank the Galt Reformer for the following notice:—"The Guelph Mercury is one of the most spirited dailies in the country. Its editorial management is excellent; and for typographical appearance it is not surpassed in Canada.

SABBATH SCHOOL PICNIC.—The children attending the Sabbath School of Chalmers Church will hold a picnic in the grove adjoining Mr. P. Gow's house on Friday first. All connected with the congregation and others interested in Sabbath Schools are invited to attend. Contributions and refreshments will be received at Mr. Andrew Armstrong's, Macdonnell-st., up to Friday at 1 o'clock. Conveyances will take the younger children to the grounds from the Market House at one o'clock.

EVANGELISTS FROM GREAT BRITAIN Messrs Douglas Russell and Charles Carroll, young men from Scotland who have been engaged in connection with revival movements in the old country, addressed various meetings in Hamilton last week.

The New York Tribune, alluding to the present state of the Southern States says, "emigration is arrested, capital shrinks from the cities and seaports, commerce seeks less genial but more secure climates, credit is dead, there is no industry, no enterprise, no national enterprise, no public spirit."

REMARKABLE CIRCUMSTANCE.—A correspondent says:—"On the 11th of August I was present at a remarkable funeral in the church yard of Kelton, when an aged couple were interred in the same grave. The husband, whose name was W. Cleanchan, was for many years carrier betwixt Glasgow and Castle Douglas, and latterly had the farm of Glenyarrick, from which he retired a few months ago, and came to spend his few remaining days in Castle Douglas. His age was 92 and that of his wife 64, and their married life extended over the long period of 67 years. This remarkable couple died on the same day within a few hours of each other, and one grave closed over their remains on the same day.

Walkerton Correspondence. The railway campaign in Normandy this week has resulted in the total rout of the narrow gauge men. Their By-law was advertised to be voted on to-day (5th Sept.) but some of the residents of Normandy, fully persuaded that the people would reject it, obtained signatures to a petition praying the Council to withdraw the By-law. They refused to do so, although the petition was signed by a majority of the ratepayers. At every meeting the narrow gauge party were defeated, and on Thursday evening the By-law was withdrawn. The narrow gaugers state that a compromise was made between them and the Wellington Co'y. but that was only to raise a smoke to cover their retreat. There was no compromise, and when the Reeve stated that as the result could easily be anticipated, it would save expense to the Township by withdrawing it, Mr. Adam Brown offered to pay the whole expense if they would let the By-law go on. A By-law is to be introduced shortly to grant a bonus to the Wellington, Grey & Bruce Company, which will undoubtedly receive a very different vote from that which the narrow gauge system must have obtained.

The result of the Hamilton vote has had a marked effect in raising the confidence of the friends of this road, and dispelling the doubts of very many as to the sincerity of the Hamilton men in pushing forward their enterprise. Toronto only promises, whilst plain evidence is given that Hamilton "will perform." The narrow gaugers cannot possibly overtake the Hamilton men, for before the Toronto men can get their scheme afloat, the W. G. & B. road will be under contract from Guelph to Fergus.

Presentation in Erin.

[From our Correspondent.] On Friday the 29th ult. a presentation was made to the Erin Company of a flag for their Drill Shed, and a suit of regimentals to Mr. John Walker, bugler to the Company. There was a large gathering of people and friends to witness this interesting ceremony. Long before the hour the Drill Shed was besieged with anxious faces, and when the time drew near the Company was marched up Main street to the tune of the "Girl I left behind me." The Company was under command of Captain Carbery. The men were marched into the Drill Shed. After a few preliminary military evolutions Wm Taylor, Esq., was unanimously called to the chair, and made a few loyal and patriotic remarks. Miss Kate McMillan then ascended the platform and read in a very clear manner the following address: "Officers and men of No. 7 Company of the 30th Wellington Battalion Volunteer Rifles:—

You have voluntarily enlisted as defenders of our hearths and of our homes; your sincerity has been tested by the arduous duties you have been called upon to perform, and also by the sacrifice and self-denial incidental to the strict rules of military discipline. The devotion you have manifested in this great cause, which has for its chief object the maintenance of peace, of law, and of order; the noble spirit of loyalty and patriotism displayed in coming forward as volunteer defenders of our beloved Queen and Country, alike command the admiration and gratitude of your fellow subjects. The Committee of the recent complimentary concert in connection with the inhabitants of this place desire to mark the sense of appreciation by the presentation of some small token as an acknowledgment of your services. I have much pleasure therefore in presenting to you on their behalf a Flag for your Drill Shed and a Suit of Regulation Clothing for your Bugler, with the hope that you may have much satisfaction in the use of them. On behalf of the Complimentary Volunteer Concert Committee, KATE McMILLAN. Erin Village, August 29, 1868.

Captain Carbery, on behalf of the Company, acknowledged in a very tasteful manner the presentation of these very handsome presents, which the ladies and gentlemen composing the party who sang at the late concert had been pleased to present to his men, and he hoped that the men would ever be ready when duty called to be first in the front, should necessity ever require them. Other patriotic and stirring speeches were delivered by the following gentlemen, who were on the platform: Rev'd J. Thompson, Alfred Hood, Esq., Henry Smith, Esq., S. H. Harvard, Esq.

This interesting ceremony was brought to a close by the whole of the Company and friends singing "God save the Queen." Three cheers were then given for our beloved Queen and three more for the Ladies of Erin.

The prisoner was remanded for trial.

The objects of the meeting and results obtained may be best summed up in the resolutions which were adopted to-day, and which were in substance as follows:—It is resolved that in the opinion of the Convention workmen cannot attain complete emancipation from the oppression of employers through the means merely of detection, and that all strikes should be subject to a code of uniform rules and regulations; that councils of arbitration be formed to settle differences between the employer and the employed, and finally that trade societies be organized in those countries where they do not now exist, and that all such societies be organized as a force able to assert cross connection and concert with one another for the general improvement of the status of the workmen throughout Europe.

Quarter Sessions.

TUESDAY, Sept. 9.

Denis Marrow and Martin Marrow, the two little boys who were put on trial for breaking into the store of Mr. Jno. Neal, were found not guilty.

Robert Palmer, alias Wm Henry Smith, was arraigned for stealing a grey mare from Capt. Thompson, of Hollis, in the summer of 1866. He was arrested in June, one of the Hollis volunteers having seen and recognized him in Guelph. The beast had been previously recovered from a farmer, on the Northern Railway, to whom she had been sold. Palmer pleaded guilty and was taken back to jail.

THE QUEEN vs. McALLISTER.—The prisoner was put on trial charged with stealing from the stable of Hewitt's hotel, Mount Forest, on the 17th of June last, a mare, the property of Andrew Robinson. Mr. Robinson had put the beast in the stable himself, and the ostler being very busy had paid little attention to him. When therefore McAllister came and paid the stable fees and took the mare away the ostler had no suspicion that anything was wrong. Probably neither had the prisoner, for he and Mr. Robinson and some others had been drinking a little until McAllister's faculties at least became slightly obfuscated. There was some bantering between him and Robinson about selling the mare, and the former appears to have gone to the stable and taken her away under the impression that he had bought her for some trifling sum. Verdict, not guilty.

SEPTEMBER 10th.

The Court opened at half past 9 o'clock. THE QUEEN vs. ALEX. MARTIN.—The prisoner was put upon trial charged with having stolen various articles in the way of clothing and dry goods from the store of Messrs. Hood, White & Co., Erin Village, in July last. He entered the dock with a jaunty air, and his face wore a look of stolid indifference, which appears to be natural to him, except when the bandying of jests between his counsel and the witness provoked him to an indolence in a laugh very distinctly audible, and somewhat unbecoming. Mr. Peterson, County Attorney, opened the case. He said that for some time previous to the date when the robbery came to light the prisoner had been unemployed; he was not in the service of Messrs. Hood, White & Co.; he boarded with Mr. Purdy, and at night he would enter the shop of the gentlemen above mentioned, take out goods and secret them in his boarding house. Some of these had been found in his room, and some in Mr. Purdy's, who the prisoner had shown some of them that he was wearing to a person who would be brought forward as a witness, and told him he had taken them from the store. He had made various admissions and also some threats, for he had avowed his determination as soon as he regained liberty to transact business on a larger scale, and to take much more than he had.

Geo. A. Reid, was the first witness examined. He said: "I live in Erin, know the prisoner, he once had a photograph gallery there, and afterwards for a while he was doing nothing; I had some conversation with him in July last, on that occasion I met him at Hood, White & Co.'s name store, they have two stores, one dry goods, the other groceries. I was going to my boarding house when I met him, asked him if he was going up the street, said he was, he asked me if I would go in for some sport, I told him I would, I was always ready for that, he said they were going to make a raid on that fabric (meaning as I afterwards discovered, the brick store); I said, I knew about that before you did, (meaning that Rainsford had told me). This was another place; prisoner asked me if Bill (meaning Rev. (abbot) had been telling me, I answered, yes, (meaning H.P.); prisoner held out his foot and showed a pair of garter boots which he said he had got there, then I saw his coat, and shirt and socks he put to in succession, and said he had got them; that he had $100 worth of goods besides, and that Rainsford had two suits. This was on Saturday, on Monday evening we went past the back of the store and he pointed out the ladder on the ground, by which they entered the store. I told the conversation I had with the prisoner on the Saturday to St. Elvine almost immediately after it occurred. Prisoner told me on Monday that he had been out till three o'clock on Sunday morning. Purdy had objected to his going out at night so frequently, but he had waited till Mr. and Mrs. Purdy were in bed, then threw his clothes from the window, and afterwards told me himself. On cross-examination witness said: Understood prisoner had sold some books to Mr. White, heard he had about £100 when he came to the village; the fabric I meant was the house where a woman, not of very good character, keeps a kind of a little grocery; it is a rough place, and it was supposed to be charivari her out if such conduct was observed a second time as had been noticed once.

Other witnesses were examined, and the jury returned their verdict, that the prisoner was guilty, and was sentenced to imprisonment for twelve months.

THE QUEEN vs. DANIEL HEPBURN. Defendant arraigned for an offence committed at Erin in violation of the act of the 11th of August last. The case is proceeding.

RAILWAY COMMISSIONERS.—It is reported in Ottawa that Mr. Aquilla Walsh, M. P., for South Norfolk, has been appointed Railway Commissioner for the Province of Ontario, and Mr. R. J. Reekie, of Montreal, has been appointed Railway Commissioner for the Province of Quebec. Mr. Reekie is a capitalist largely interested in the Northern Railway, and a speculator. He is said to be the nominee of the Grand Trunk. Both gentlemen have arrived in Ottawa.

IMMIGRATION RETURNS.—The following statement is obtained from the records of the immigration office, Toronto, since the 1st of January last. The large number of Germans and Scandinavians who pass here have, of course, only selected the Quebec route to reach their destination, which is arranged before starting on their journey from the old world. A large proportion of the last named were Mormons, on their way to Utah. The nationality of the immigrants was as follows:—English, 1,092; Irish 964; Scotch, 1,231; Germans, 1,945; Norwegians, 10,890; Danes, 1,635; Scandinavians 457.

THE MURDER OF MR. MCGEE

TRIAL OF WHELAN

THE INTEREST CONTINUES UNABATED—THE COURT-ROOM STILL CROWDED.

CASE CLOSED FOR THE CROWN.

OTTAWA, Sept. 9.

The following witnesses were examined after our report by telegraph was sent from Ottawa:

Eliza Tierney, servant at Starr's hotel, where Whelan boarded, was examined. Saw a pistol twice in Whelan's room; saw Whelan coming down stairs between 6 and 7 on the morning after the murder—Dillon told the other girl and Whelan that Mr. McGee was shot; Whelan did not say anything; Whelan went up stairs dressed, and came down in about fifteen minutes. He went out, but took no breakfast. Starr and Kelly were in the bar-room when Whelan entered; saw Whelan again at noon. The back door was not fastened that night; it was never fastened at night.

Joseph Falconier, a tailor, sworn, worked with Whelan in Montreal at the time of McGee's election; heard Whelan say commenting on a speech of Mr. McGee which he read from a paper in the shop "Mr. McGee is a traitor and ought to be shot;" this was about the time of the election; prisoner was very much opposed to Mr. McGee's political principles. One time when Whelan was standing with me showing the pistol, one of the men said he would shoot McGee with it like a rat. It was not Whelan who said this. He did not mind it or seem to hear it; Whelan did not do much work during the election; he was attending to the election.

James Inglis a collector in Montreal, sworn, I conversed with Whelan some time before the election in which Whelan said if McGee is elected he won't take his seat, or if he does he won't reign long, I asked who would touch him; Whelan said, "I would if no body else would; he called McGee a traitor to his country; he came into my room after the election at the end of September or first of October. He was cleaning his revolver; it was like this produced, but of course I can't swear if it is the same; he remarked 'I was up as far as McGee's house last night; he then went out of the room immediately after."

Leon De Gussy gave evidence that he had met Lacroix on the Sapper's bridge between two and three o'clock on the morning of the murder. He could not swear it was Lacroix.

Alex. J. Turner, who boarded at Whelan's in Montreal, sworn: After reading McGee's Fenian disclosures, a few nights before the election, and after being at the theatre, Whelan seemed terribly enraged and said he would go up to McGee's own house and blow his bloody brains out. I saw then the shape of a revolver in his pocket; Whelan left the house that night, went out all night and returned sometime next day. One night after the election he said it was a good job Mr. McGee's house was not in flames last night; saw him again two or three nights after in his own house between 7 and 8; he said, although McGee is elected, the bloody old pig won't reign long, and I will blow his bloody old brains out before the session is over. He gave no reason for saying this. Such was the bitterness of Whelan towards McGee that I warned Mr. McGee of it about a fortnight after the election; I said to him on Notre Dame street, there are parties accumulating at Mrs. Scarron's who certainly meant to take his life. I know Doyle well, he is a chum of Whelan's; I saw Doyle at Whelan's in Montreal frequently; great intimacy existed between them; Whelan came to the Russell house on several occasions to see Doyle; he went to Montreal and after his return had a conversation with Doyle several times; on one occasion Doyle asked Whelan if he had been up to D'Arcy McGee's? Whelan said yes; this was after New Year's day; Doyle said, "Did D'Arcy open the door?" Whelan answered, "No by Jesus, he did not or I would have shot the rascal like a dog;" he said McGee's brother opened the door; Whelan said McGee's brother told him to go up stairs; he added, "the bloody—locked the door before he would allow me to go up"; Whelan said he saw McGee, and gave him information that some one was going to set fire to his house on the following morning; he said McGee gave him a letter, and that they leaped the bloody letter and had a fire lynch over it before they took it to the Police Station; Doyle then saw me watching him and Whelan at the door, and they stopped talking and reddened up in the face; one night at Mrs. McLaughlin's in Montreal, Whelan said he loved a young girl dearly in Quebec, and burst into tears, and said he did not care for his life and would go and take McGee's life as drunk as a cup of tea; he said this openly; think he was under the influence of liquor when he spoke; when McGee was shot I said, "Good God, no body but Whelan has done that; if he had taken my warning he would have taken more care of himself."

Turner was subjected to a strict cross-examination, but stood it well.

Vaughan Bryce, a messenger in the House, was examined, but his evidence contained nothing of importance.

Reuben Wade, formerly a detective on the Great Western, sworn, was in Michael Duggan's on the 21st of December last, saw prisoner there. Two other persons were there with the prisoner and the landlord. They came into the sitting room where I was reading. There was some conversation between them and they were drinking. After some talk about the election prisoner said, "D'Arcy McGee had sold his friends and those who had done so much for him like a dog; and added, he must and should be put out of that and that what could not be done there must and should be done elsewhere; he must live to see the new year come in but not to pass out. One of the strangers immediately clapped him on the back, saying, "Smith, here is our man; he is sound on the goose; he is the man for the job and a better man could not be had." He called the prisoner Smith, and was sitting beside him when he spoke. They met again the next night. They were talking about the elections, and the landlord said, "My brother John thinks two to go in and two or three to stay outside would be sufficient." Some words then passed which I did not hear, and something was said about going in different directions. The next I remember to have heard was from the man with the extended nostrils. He said—"D'Arcy, poor devil, if he only knew the fate that awaits him he would fly, and it would not be the first time either." On the night of the 22nd they had some more conversation. One of the men present said—"Sullivan how was that job at the Orange hall done?" The landlord interrupted and said to this man—"Why sometimes call him Sullivan and sometimes Smith, when you know his name is Whelan?"

Andrew Cullen, detective in Montreal, sworn. On the evening of the 18th April last I overheard a conversation between the prisoner and Doyle in the Ottawa jail—I remained there from a quarter to half past eight o'clock, and a man named Hess was with me. During the time I was there I heard Doyle say, "James, I am sorry you done it." Whelan replied, "I don't care a damn; I am went away to penitentiary for life. I don't care a damn." Whelan continued, "except for one thing." He then made allusions to the old woman and said, "The bloody guts will fell out of her." Doyle said, "The whole world will know it." Whelan answered, "Yes, I am a great fellow. I shot that fellow. You are here, poor bugger, and so am I, and that makes three of us. I shot that fellow like a dog. I am here; you are here; I am a great fellow, my name will go down to posterity." Doyle then said, "James, I am sorry for you." I forgot at the time but was reminded by Hess, that he said, "I am sorry you did not tell me that night or I would not have let you do it." He whistled, danced and sung. They talked over different matters afterwards.

As soon as we went down stairs I made a note of the conversation, and both of us signed it. The first words Whelan said when the turnkeys went away were, "Are you there John?" I was nailed tight to-day. Do you know who was the informer? It was Alex. Turner. Doyle said "No," in a loud voice. Whelan said, "Yes, by Jesus Christ, I would not give much for his carcase after this. Another voice called out in a loud, slow tone, "Whelan, how did you get on to-day?" Whelan called out, "Bloody had the voice then made answer, 'I am sorry to hear it.' Whelan said to Doyle, "you and I must quit talking here about what we know. We must be as mute as a mouse, because these buggers might be round listening." Doyle again regretting what he had done, said, "I wonder what they will do with me?" Whelan said he "was all right. They could prove nothing. I wish I was as safe as you."

Robert Hess sworn—I was with Cullen in the corridor of the jail when we overheard the conversation between Whelan and Doyle. Whelan said, "Are you there, Jack?" Doyle replied "Yes." Whelan said, "They nailed me bloody tight to-day. That bugger, Turner, swore bloody broad against me." Doyle said, "You don't say?" Whelan replied, "Yes, by Christ, he swore we were a pack of thieves, and I did not care only for one thing—the old woman." He said, "You are here, and so am I. I shot that fellow." Doyle said—"What?" Whelan said, "Here I am and here you are, and I shot that fellow like a dog." On the 4th of May about 12 o'clock, I had a conversation with Whelan, and he asked me if the boys had come in. I said yes, there were some of 'em. He said, "that in the devil—if it had not been for that I never would have shot D'Arcy McGee."

John Little, turnkey of the gaol, sworn, I remember the conversation between Whelan and Doyle on the 19th April. Doyle asked Whelan if he was sleeping. Whelan said no he was thinking of his trial. He added—"There was three of us but I was alone when he was murdered." The other two shuddered and I had not been half tight I would have given home too."

Chief McNaughton swore that the letter Whelan had delivered to him from McGee had been tampered with. His name had been opened and then new mullage put upon the envelope.

Francis Kirby, sworn, said he was in Starr's when informed of the murder. He said the man who did it ought to be torn limb from limb. When I said that prisoner put his hand on the counter, wheeled round, and asked for something to drink. He had a peculiar expression of countenance—something between a smile and a grin.

This closed the case for the Crown.—The Court then adjourned till Thursday morning.

FROM OTTAWA.

This Day's Proceedings.

From our own Correspondent.

OTTAWA, Sept. 10th. In the Whelan trial, the case for prosecution closed last evening. It is very complete and the evidence against the prisoner appears to be conclusive.

The Court resumed its sitting at 10 today, a number of witnesses were brought forward by the defence to impeach the testimony of gaol witnesses, especially Lacroix and Turner. But so far with but little success.

This appears to be the principal line of defence, but it will also be attempted to prove that Whelan was in the Russell House at the time the murder was committed, and an appeal will be made from the Judge's decision respecting the right to challenge jurors for cause before peremptory challenge was exhausted, in hope of obtaining a new trial should the verdict be unfavourable to the prisoner.

THE WHELAN TRIAL.—It was stated last night that the defence will call two witnesses who will swear positively that Whelan made no admission to Doyle that he murdered McGee. The witnesses were confined in gaol at the time that Cullen alleges he overheard the conversation between Whelan and Doyle. The counsel are hard at work. Witnesses for the defence will arrive to-morrow, and some are not expected until Friday, so that it is quite probable the trial will not close until Saturday.

The Braes of Yarrow

An Historical Tale of the Sixteenth Century.

'What does all this noise mean?' demanded his Majesty looking bewilderedly at the man kneeling before him and the flushed faces of the guard. 'Sire, it is a madman,' responded Lindsay with his sternest expression. 'Sire, it is I, your servant,' said Gilbert looking up, and thrusting his long hair from his face. 'Master Elliot! Why, gentlemen, have you drawn swords upon him? Master Elliot is my friend. Rise, I am glad you have come, for I am weary and want somebody to play with me. 'Ah, sire, and I would have spent every drop of blood in my body to reach your Majesty. The King regarded him with a quick, old-fashioned look of cunning. 'Then you've got something to ask from me? You are like all the rest.' 'Not for myself, sire, not for myself.' 'What does that matter? I am weary; make me laugh and you shall have your wish. Come, let us have a game at bat and ball.— Can you play?' 'Anything, sire, anything to please you, if you will only listen to me,' answered Gilbert, wringing his hands. 'Catch,' cried the King, striking the ball he had picked up with a bat. Gilbert caught the ball and threw it back, moaning. 'And the life of the bravest, noblest man in Scotland hangs on the balance of a game with a child.' 'Catch,' cried the King again. Gilbert was too late this time; the ball struck him on the side of the head and rebounded, hitting the brave Captain Lindsay on the nose. The King dropped the bat, laughing with childish hilarity at the Captain's expression of confusion. 'You are laughing, sire; you will hear me now for you are laughing,' exclaimed Gilbert piteously. 'And you,' exclaimed the King, amazed, 'you are crying—I don't like to see a big man like you crying.' 'I am sad no more, sire, for I have won.' 'You were gambling, then?' 'Yes, sire, I gambled with your Majesty for the life of a comrade—a brother. It was a cruel game.' 'Well, you have won, Master Elliot; what is it you wish?' 'Your Majesty's pardon for my friend.' 'Is he guilty?' 'I do not know; but he loves your Majesty; and if he has erred in aught it is because he loves you, sire.' 'Then I do not wish him to die. Who is he?' 'Sir Walter Spens,' answered Gilbert joyfully; 'you have said that you do not wish him to die, and you, sire, (with deep reverence) are the King.' 'Yes I am the King, and he shall not die. My mother has married Douglas, and Douglas thinks he can do what he pleases with me; he has sent away everybody I like and left me here as if I were nobody. But he shall find that I am the King and that there are dungeons in the Castle. And his Majesty looked quite big as he thus delivered his determination. 'Holy Mother bless you, good little King,' ejaculated Gilbert. 'I am not little, and I am the King; and if everybody does not obey me everybody shall go to the dungeons.' 'The Earl of Angus attends your Majesty,' said an ordinary, entering the ante-chamber, 'accompanied by Lord Birnam.' The King's countenance fell and his air of authority faded. 'The Douglas,' he muttered as if somewhat afraid; then speaking aloud, 'admit them, Captain.' 'Your Majesty will remember,' said Gilbert, again trembling for the fate of his friend. The King nodded as he climbed upon a raised seat beside the table. 'I have a better idea than the dungeon, Master Elliot, you will see.' The Gentlemen of the Guard ranged themselves round the back of the King's chair, and Gilbert took his place amongst them as Angus followed by Barras, entered. 'Sire, I bring you good news,' said Angus, affecting an ease and pleasure which he did not feel; 'you will be able to ride out to-morrow.' 'And I will not be shut up in doors like a prisoner any more?' 'Never again will it be necessary, I trust.' 'Ah, that is good news. Thank you, Cousin Angus.' 'We are a long way from the dungeons,' moaned Gilbert to himself; 'and Spens is forgotten.'

ALBION HOTEL, MONTREAL, P. Q.

IN 1857 MR. DECKER purchased the "Albion," which then contained fifty rooms. In 1859 he added a new wing of forty rooms. The steady and rapid increase in the business compelled him, in 1862, to build a second new wing of fifty sleeping rooms, with large dining room, capable of seating two hundred guests. Notwithstanding all this additional accommodation, hundreds of merchants and others, patrons of the "Albion," have been obliged to seek accommodation elsewhere during the Spring and Fall business seasons. Encouraged by the liberal patronage extended to the "Albion," the proprietor has built a third edition of ninety sleeping rooms, large parlors, reading room, office, and bar—fronting on McGill Street. Fifty of the sleeping rooms will be furnished and ready for the Fall Trade. In the Spring of 1869 all the improvements will be completed, when the "Albion" will have an entrance on McGill Street instead of St. Paul Street. The charge will be $1.50 per day, as heretofore.
