door.
And Mr. Cheston, who had been wandering hopelessly among the marshes for some time, with a lively sense of the inconvenience of getting lost in those salt deserts, stood and stared at it as if it were a will-o'-the-wisp.

I'm sure it couldn't have been there five minutes ago," he pondered within himself.

"Evening, stranger!" said old Zadoc Peck, as he stood over the recovering patient, with hot towels and brandy flask.

"I've lost my way," said Cheston, plunging through the tall reeds, until at last he gained a secure footing by the cabin door.

"Well, I thought likely," commented Zadoc. "Aint many folks come here a purpose."

"Could I obtain a night's lodging and some supper?" hinted our weary sportsman.

"I guess so," serenely answered Mr. Peck, "if you don't mind sleeping up garret. As for supper, Perseverance has gone to dig clams for us. Like clams, eh?"

"His son" thought the major. "What a quaint couple they must be!"

But he sat down in the red light and looked at the morning-glory vines trained to the window, the busy fingers of the old man, the murmuring wilderness of reeds and rushes beyond.

"That's right," said Zadoc; set down and take it easy. Perseverance will be back pretty quick with the clams, and then you'll get some good, hot supper. Perseverance is a master hand to cook."

"Perseverance" came presently but, to Major Cheston's infinite surprise she was no lubberly boy, nor half civilized young man, but a tall, blooming maiden of sixteen with jetty black hair floating down her back—large, dark eyes, long lashed and almond shaped—and cheeks like roses. Her short, gipsy-like skirts revealed shapely brown ankles and pretty feet, yet bearing the impress of the wet sands where she had waded out to dig clams, and on one arm she carried a basket of clams, whose weight would have been no trifle to the stalwart muscles of this major of cavalry.

She was not at all embarrassed by the presence of a stranger, but came frankly up to him, setting down her basket to examine the contents of his game bag.

"You've had poor luck, stranger, haven't you?" she said playfully. "I could ha' done better myself, on them marshes at this time o' year."

"Perseverance is a first rate shot, chuckled the old man. "To now, girly, and cook us some supper."

The roast clams, coffee and corn bread were most palatable, and after supper, Major Cheston gave Perseverance a newspaper from his pocket.

"It is this morning's," said he. "Would you like to read it?"

But she motioned it away. "I can't read," she said indifferently. "You can not read!" echoed the amazed major. "Why, how old are you?"

"Sixteen," Perseverance answered, reddening.

"My sister Kate is only sixteen," said Major Cheston, speaking without due reflection, and "she reads and writes four different languages, plays the piano and guitar, draws and paints, and—"

"Pshaw!" said Perseverance, arching her slender neck. "Can she shoot black duck and curlews?"

"That is hardly one of the accomplishments prescribed for young ladies," said the Major, smiling.

"No, but—"

"Can she clip a blue heron on the wing? or tide in a haul of blue fish when the tide is strong and the wind due east? or fight a shark, hand to hand, with only a marlinpike for a weapon?

And once again Major Cheston was compelled to answer in the negative.

"Well," said Perseverance, complacently, "I can!"

And she rose and went out of the room, and Major Cheston saw no more of her that night.

She isn't offended, is she? he asked of old Zadoc Peck, who was smoking a pipe and staring hard at the file all the while.

"Offended? Our Perseverance offended?" echoed the old man. "You don't know her, stranger!"

"But, really," hazarded Cheston, "it is scarcely right to bring up a girl like that in such total ignorance, now is it?"

"Well, we haven't no schools nor academies herabouts," said the old man. "And if we had, Perseverance wouldn't go to 'em. I don't see but what she gets along first-rate!"

And Major Cheston wasted no more time in argument.

He slept well and soundly that night under the sloping roof of the little garret, through whose shrunken boards the quiet stars peeped down at him, and at day break he went down upon the shore.

The reeds were all effaced now—the tide was coming in with a rush and a roar, and occasional flying shower of spray. The fresh wind took off his hat, and whirled it into the water. He made an involuntary plunge after it, lost his footing on the slippery sands, and the next instant he was struggling for dear life with the surf, dragged constantly down, and still further out to sea by the treacherous undertow. In a last effort to regain himself, he struck his head against a jagged point of stone and knew nothing more.

"You needn't thank me, stranger," said old Zadoc Peck, as he stood over the recovering patient, with hot towels and brandy flask.

"I didn't know a thing about it till she ran up, as white and breathless as a snow flurry, to get me to help her in. She had swum out to sea, and dragged you back to land herself! She's a brave girl, is Perseverance, and there's nothing she can't do if once she sets herself about it."

Major Cheston thanked his young rescuer earnestly; but nothing would induce her to take the gold he offered her.

"It must be a poor creature that wants reward for saving a man's life," said she, with a short laugh.

And Cheston desisted.

"The girl is too pretty," he said to himself. "No one but the hero of a third-class romance ever marries a half-civilized young savage, because she has dark eyes and hair growing low on her forehead. I must get away from this place—and I must keep away!"

Physically, this was an easy thing to do; but mentally—what is there but the wild winds of heaven so uncontrollable as a man's thoughts?

At the end of the year he came back from Switzerland, and went straight to the Long Island Marshes.

"I must tell her that I love her. I must ask her to be my wife!"

But in the train which ran out to Ninereh, the nearest station, a tall, beautiful girl, in a cashmere dress, sparkling with jet, and a sassy black hat, came to him, holding out her hand.

"You are Major Cheston?" said she. "And you," he answered, as Perseverance Peck?

She smiled and nodded. How beautiful she had grown!

"I was going out to the old house," he said.

"I do not live there any more," said Perseverance. "Father's dead, and I'm being educated. You see," she added, "that your words, hard and cruel, as I then thought them, were not without their effect. I am staying with some friends, and I share the advantage of their governance. And Mr. Russell thinks I am not a scholar."

"Russell?"

"The name was very familiar to him. At Castle Point, a little way down the island," explained Perseverance.

"They know you very well. Hugh Russell and I often talk about you."

Hugh Russell! A dagger thrust of jealousy went through Major Cheston's heart. Hugh Russell, whom he remembered such a handsome, daring young fellow! Was he, then, too late in his decision? Had some other hand gathered this exquisite wild flower?

And then with the innocent hypocrisy of lovehood, he vowed that he had intended all along to visit the Russells, and accompanied Perseverance thither at once.

"Yes," said placid Mrs. Russell. "Is she not beautiful? She used to come to my Sunday school class, last summer, at the little Sand Point chapel, and when her poor old father died I took her to stay with me. And we are all so attached to her, and she is so lovely and winning. Quite like my own daughter."

Late that evening Major Cheston went out on the stone-paved terrace, where Perseverance was sitting on the rail, looking up at the million golden stars which spangled the violet sky. She welcomed him with her quiet, self-possessed smile.

"Perseverance," he said, "you are seventeen years old, now?"

"Yes," she assented. "I am seventeen years old."

"Almost a woman," said he.

"Quite a woman," she responded. "Oh, it seems as if I had grown so many, many years older since poor father died!"

"Has any one spoken to you of love?" he asked, abruptly.

"No," she answered, with gravity. "But they will—some time."

"I suppose so," said Perseverance. Evidently there was nothing of the coquette about her.

"Would you be very much surprised Perseverance, or displeased, he said, 'if I were to tell you that I loved you?'"

She started and colored to the very roots of her hair.

"Surprised?" she repeated. "Yes—oh, yes! For you despised me in those days."

"Or at least I fancied so," she faltered.

"But I love you now, Perseverance, sweetest, precious treasure of my soul!" he went on, realising some dim encouragement in the downward eyes, the red, quivering mouth. "I will not let you go until you promise to be my wife. You have saved my life once, and it is in your power to save it from further shipwreck now."

Hugh Russell had spoken the same words of love in her ear two hours before, and she had run away from him, half angry and wholly frightened. But this—this was different.

"Will you promise me, Perseverance?" he gently reiterated.

"Yes," she answered.

And that was the way in which Major Cheston, whose heart had been so long regarded by his lady friends as an invulnerable fortress, won the beautiful young wife who was as unlike the other belles of society as the tropical blossom of the scarlet pomegranate to the common-place red roses of the garden border.

It was a strange meeting, a still stranger wooing, but a most happy marriage. And perhaps this is the most satisfactory record that any love affair can leave.

The Feminine Foot.
HOW LIL-MADE GAITERS, DANCING AND ROPE-SKIPPING DESTROY THE ARCH OF THE INSTEP.

One of the oldest orthopedic surgeons in New York yesterday told a World reporter that the number of cases of played feet in this city was large and rapidly increasing.

"What in the world are 'played feet' asked the reporter.

"Why, a played foot is a flat foot, or one in which the arch of the instep has been broken down."

"Pray, why should people living in the city of New York break down in the arches of their insteps?"

"They do it by wearing high-heeled shoes. Of course, I am speaking of young girls and misses, and not of grown-up persons of either sex. Now, the misses, and young ladies of France wear heels that are even higher than we are accustomed to see in this country. But the heel of the French shoe is placed well forward, almost under the middle of the foot, so that the arch or instep is supported just as the span of a bridge is sustained by a tower or abutment under the middle of the span. Our shoe-makers place the heel further back. This lengthens the span and increases the strain."

"Do you often come across these cases of broken down insteps?"

"They are by no means uncommon. They are almost exclusively confined to females, and the weaker the general constitution, the more likely is the foot to suffer."

"What is the difference in the appearance of a pair of feet that are played and a pair that are not played?"

"All the difference in the world. The natural foot is beautifully arched at the centre, especially in females. A person who has a high instep has as good a right to be proud of it as a person with classic features has to be proud of when he looks at the mirror. Played foot is most common among the peasants of some of the European countries where the people are obliged to do hard work, such as carrying heavy burdens at a very early age. In such cases, especially if the child is poorly fed or naturally weak, the ligaments sustaining the arch of the foot are very apt to give way by degrees, and then we have a pair of feet as flat as the paws of a grizzly bear. And yet I should hardly make such a comparison, for a broken-down foot is worse than flat; it curves the other way, so that the toes are always pointing upward."

"And the cause of this deformity is entirely attributable to the defective construction of high-heeled shoes?"

"No, not entirely. I think it is sometimes produced by children beginning to dance almost as soon as they are able to walk, such as we see in some German communities. In dancing the little youngsters sometimes sustain the weight of the body on the tips of the toes a quarter of an hour at a stretch. The bones at that age are a little less than cartilage, and can be very easily deformed. As proof of this you have only to roilast the feet of young girls of tender constitution and also sometimes injured in "jumping the rope," especially in such trials of endurance where they pit themselves to see who can jump the greatest number of times without stopping."</

Hon. L. S. Huntington, Sir A. J. Smith, Hon. Alfred Jones, Hon. David Laird, and we may also mention the Hon. T. W. Anglin, who was the Speaker of the House during Mackenzie's term of office. This feature presents a marked contrast to the elections in 1878, at which time Sir John Macdonald was the only Conservative ex-Minister who lost his seat. Contrasted with the elections in 1882 and what we see—Sir John Macdonald elected for two constituencies by large majorities, Sir Charles Tupper, Sir Hector Langevin, Hon. Mr. Costigan and Hon. Mr. Mousselet elected by acclamation, and Hon. Messrs. Caron, Pope and McLellan returned by two-third majorities. And then we have in our own County the election of an ex-Minister—the Hon. P. Mitchell, by acclamation. With such evidence before us, there can be no doubt as to what the true feeling of the country is with reference to the two political parties.

The strength of the two parties in the new House is as follows, with the elections in Manitoba and British Columbia yet to be held, which will increase the Govt. majority. Ontario—Govt. 54, Opposition 37. Quebec—Govt. 53, Opp. 11. Nova Scotia—Govt. 16, Opp. 5. New Brunswick—Govt. 8, Opp. 3. P. E. Island—Govt. 3, Opp. 3.

The Conservatives lost 13 seats in Ontario, and gained five, winning only one of the six new constituencies created under the redistribution bill. In Quebec the Govt. lost three seats and gained five, reducing the small Liberal representation in the late House from 13 to 11. In Nova Scotia the Govt. lost Digby and Gushyboro, but gained Annapolis, Inverness, Kings, Richmond, Victoria, Yarmouth. In our own Province the Govt. have gained Northumberland, Gloucester, Restigouche and Westmorland, the three latter by large majorities proving how little influence the Advance has had in moulding public opinion in the North during its four years of Grit misrepresentation and abuse, and how vastly the results differ from the prophecies that paper indulged in when alluding editorially to the contest in Gloucester and Restigouche. In one respect it is a pity to see men of Mr. Anglin's ability left out, for the Liberal party can ill afford to lose the services of so able and effective a speaker as the gentleman referred to. In Mr. Burns, however, the constituency has a representative of good ability, — a gentleman who is thoroughly conversant with the general interests of the County. Restigouche has also made a change, and in Mr. Moffat has a representative of good abilities—one who is in political accord with the people whom he represents. That Northumberland will be well and ably represented by the Hon. Peter Mitchell, it is almost unnecessary to add. Born in the County, for years associated with its business interests, and for more than a quarter of a century foremost in political movements, he brings to the performance of his important duties an experience which cannot but be a benefit to the County, when matters relating to our interests are discussed at Ottawa. The successes in New Brunswick are most gratifying, redeeming it from the stigma of being the Banner Grit Province in the Dominion. The Grits have suffered a heavy defeat, which cannot be explained away, not even by showing that they have slightly gained ground in Ontario. As might be expected, wholesale bribery and corruption are charged against the Macdonald party, which may answer the purpose just now, as they have no other excuse to offer. The Hamilton Times, a Grit paper, takes the only sensible course to save the humiliation of being laughed at when it says:—"We are whipped. There is no use squealing, or explaining, or talking about 'moral victory.' The simple fact remains that we are whipped, and badly whipped. To think of Kilvert and Robertson getting in by majorities ranging between four and five hundred is most humiliating. We had not believed that Hamilton would do such a thing." The Mail closes an article on the Victory with the following:—"Let us congratulate the country on the firmness with which its position was maintained. Let us congratulate the friends all over the land who have been active in this righteous fight. Let us congratulate the Government which has been so nobly sustained. So great a support entitles the country to the best administration the Local Government can give them. He has given them all and more than he promised. His best will to maintain consistently the policy so wisely planned and so consistently pursued during these past four prosperous years."

Perhaps one of the most striking features of the elections is the number of ex-members of Mr. Mackenzie's administration who have suffered defeat, as follows:—Sir Richard Cartwright, Hon. D. A. Macdonald, Hon. Mr. Lafamme,

THE LOCAL ELECTIONS.

Northumberland, by a splendid vote endorses the Government.

The magnificent vote polled by Hon. M. Adams and W. A. Park Esq., the two Government candidates, is not only an evidence that this County is in accord with the present Local Administration, but is an outspoken answer to the venomous attacks which have been made upon Mr. Adams by the organ of the Grit party—the Miramichi Advance. These attacks have been systematically followed up, year in and year out, with so much regularity, that the paper was incomplete without its columns of vituperation, misrepresentation and abuse, with an occasional dash of slander against some friend or friends of the party; to be an outspoken supporter of either the Hon. M. Adams or the Hon. P. Mitchell was all that was necessary to raise the ire of its editor, whose happiest moments seemed to be when revelling in his "muck heap," and flinging his dirt with a Liberal hand. His assaults upon the Hon. Mr. Adams have been characterized by a vindictiveness unparalleled in the history of journalism in this section of the Province, for neither sickness nor death were sufficient to deter him from his unmanly course when once he had started, like a blood hound, upon his track. Possessed of neither feeling nor shame, he made his journal the vehicle of ridicule and abuse against some of the Liberal Conservatives in the County, in the supposed interests of the party for some time past by Mr. Snowball. But like many others, he has sown the wind and reaped the whirlwind, for the like of the castigations administered to him by two of the gentlemen he has done his utmost to injure have never before been witnessed in this County. But the most bitter reflections to him now must be that all his labour has been spent for naught, that those wonderful productions on the Valley Railway which were to accomplish so much had no effect whatever in influencing the vote against the Govt. candidates—that the Hon. Mr. Adams and Mr. Park have been returned by a grand vote in which shows that the County is not in sympathy with his political utterances, and evidences the fact that had the whole Govt. ticket of four been submitted to the people, not a single man of "the people's ticket" would have been returned. As it is, he has now only Mr. Burchill left back upon him, and he would not have been elected had two others been associated with the Govt. candidates. If this is not enough to humiliate him and drag him down from the pinnacle of self-importance to which he has raised himself, he must be constituted as no other man, whose case should be submitted to the people as one of their pity, if not their contempt.

The following are the successful candidates in the various constituencies:—
ALBERT—Turner, Lewis.
CARLETON—Leighton, White.
CHARLETON—McAdams, Lymbert.
DUNDAS—McAdams, Lymbert.
GLOUCESTER—Ryan, McManus.
KENT—Whiten, White.
KINGS—Crawford, Morton, Vail.
MADAWASKA—Lymbert.
NORTHUMBERLAND—Adams, Park, Gillespie, Burchill.
RESTIGOUCHE—Barber, LaBelle.
ST. JOHN COUNTY—McLeod, Ellis.
ST. JOHN CITY—McLellan, Ritchie, Elder, Quinton.
VICTORIA—Perley, Sterling.
WESTMORELAND—Landry, Hanington, Humphrey, Black.
YORK—Colter, Wetmore, Blair, Thompson.

At least eight majority, which is certainly large enough, for there is nothing like a goodly Opposition. We congratulate Messrs. Adams and Park on their return by such a handsome majority—which must indeed be a source of deep satisfaction to the gentleman first named, whose career as a departmental head has been such as to entitle him to the confidence of the people.

Declaration Day.

On Monday last at 12 o'clock noon, at the Court House in Newcastle, John Shirreff, Esq., High Sheriff of this County called those present to order and proceeded to close the election according to the proclamation issued. The various boxes were opened and the polling books examined, the following being the vote—

Mr. Elder had thought that after supporting the Govt. for the past four years to go against it. He was one of the most eloquent men in the house, but he would win his friend (Gillespie) to keep clear of him, and work with himself and Mr. Park, and if he would work in union with the Government they could have all the patronage of the county to dispense so far as he was concerned. His friend, (perhaps he could hardly call him friend) Mr. Smith had sent him a letter inviting him to attend a meeting in Chatham at a time when he Smith knew he was engaged to speak in other parts of the County. This man who had a skin on him like a rhinoceros had to take the platform to try and defend his honesty. He says I pledged myself to keep quiet in the Mitchell-Snowball election, which he (Adams) denies. This man—a public thief, a public liar, a renegade and pimpling spy as he says he wrote my card for me. The card I took him to write the last paragraph of was for the purpose of having him commit himself, and for the Govt. to get all the printing of the Govt. and to ride in a coach in a very short time. This man had referred to some of his friends as claqueurs, and had challenged his honor and word against his (Adams.) Your honor against mine: your word against mine, you—public thief that you are, it was only the consideration of Mr. Adams' claqueurs as you call your friends that saved you from receiving your just deserts. I would now bid you (Smith) good bye, for the future it was war to the death between him and this man. And now gentlemen just a word or two more. What did these men who formed the ticket do; why from the word go they abandoned Mr. Troy and left him out in the cold. Mr. Burchill, who was defeated his dear friend Smith said it served him right. But his (Smith's) usefulness—if he ever had any—is gone in this country, and the sooner he packs up his traps and leaves the better. Smith—I want the gentleman's name. Adams—He would give Mr. Hutchison the name, and he could also tell of a lady he (Smith) insulted. In reference to the Chatham meeting he thanked his friend Mr. Tweedie for his defence of him at that meeting. He had stated in his letter to Smith that he had still some shots in the locker for him, and referred to his dastardly remarks in reference to a conference at the meeting. Let him to-day raise a political monument and put it over the political monument of his own dastardly conduct to the occasion and his work would be done. He again thanked them for the honorable position which he had given him on the poll. Three cheers were then given for Mr. Adams. Mr. Park was then loudly called for. He said the election was now over, the battle had been fought and won, and he felt proud to stand in the position of second to the victor. He then read the most earnest thanks to his friends who used their votes and influence in his behalf, and he thanked Mr. Gillespie who had given him their support he thanked them. To that portion of the press he expressed his gratitude, and to the occasion and his work would be done. He again thanked them for the honorable position which he had given him on the poll. WILL YOU EXCHANGE a case of Dyspepsia or Biliousness for 75 cents?

It is a well known fact, and is a simple matter to convince, that a single dose of ZOPESA gives energy and vim to the Stomach, Liver, and Kidneys.

Cleansing, Correcting, Regulating, ZOPESA gives energy and vim to the Stomach, Liver, and Kidneys.

and muscle, simply by working wonders upon the Digestion, and giving activity to the Liver.

One this out, take it to any dealer in medicines, and get at least one 75 cent bottle of ZOPESA, and tell your neighbor how it acts. It is warranted to cure Dyspepsia and Biliousness.

with an absolute certainty of curing you.

ZOPESA (from Brazil) cures Dyspepsia and Biliousness. A single dose relieves a simple bottle convinces; 75 cent bottles cure.

It acts directly upon the Stomach, Liver, and Kidneys.
