WESTERN FAIR SURPLUS $4,000 EXHIBITION WAS BIG SUCCESS

The Directors Are Highly Pleased With Finances For the Week. TOTAL SURPLUS OF $16,000 About 7,000 People Saw Fair On Friday—A Great Jump By One of Beck's String.

The Western Fair closed its gates last night, and today practically everything has been moved out. Yesterday saw about 7,000 people present, the majority being city folks who could not attend earlier in the week.

It was a fitting wind-up of the Fair. The directors were well pleased with the exhibition, and they will finish on the right side financially.

Although $1,000 was added to the prize list, and the expenses were increased along certain lines, there will be a surplus of perhaps $4,000 this year. That is the minimum, and it will probably result in a surplus of greater proportions.

The board spent a considerable amount of money on the new cement building, new stalls, and in repairs, all of which must be met out of the general funds. Had this not been the case, the surplus would have been probably $10,000.

The Fair association has approved. Continued on Page Eleven.

CROWN-ATTORNEY RECALLS HISTORY

Judge Macbeth and Mr. McKillop Indulged in Some By Play Today.

A BICYCLE THIEF UP Found Guilty and Remanded Until Thursday Next for Sentence.

A juvenile, who was committed for trial at the court house yesterday by Squire Chittick on a charge of disposing of a bicycle which he had rented from F. J. Thomson, a dealer of Talbot street, to a bicycle with a name of 'Lipsett,' of Mount Brydges, appeared before Judge Macbeth at noon today, and was remanded until Thursday next for sentence.

The boy, who is said to be under 15 years of age, together with a companion several years older than himself, rented two bicycles from the dealer on the morning of Aug. 23. They were sold the same evening to the Mount Brydges man, who is also a dealer in bicycles, the price for both machines being $7.50. The bicycles were shortly after recovered by High Constable Hughes.

Prisoner's Story. According to the prisoner's story, he returned to London the same evening, and told his mother's father what had done. He said he needed one dollar to redeem the wheel, so that he could return it to its proper owner. His grandfather gave him the money, and a lady added another dollar on being told the same story.

The boys then started for Detroit, but were turned back at the border. They separated, and met again in Chatham, where the prisoner is accused of stealing a quantity of clothing.

Will Surrender. The other boy's name is known, and it is expected that he will arrive in this city in a couple of days. His mother claims that he will give himself up immediately.

Mr. W. G. R. Bartram defended the boy, and contended that the youth had been led into the trouble by his older companion.

Both Judge Macbeth and Mr. McKillop, the crown attorney, took occasion to remark that any person who would purchase goods at such ridiculously low prices should be prosecuted for accepting such property, which they should know had been stolen.

Some History. "I remember you prosecuting a man for purchasing a horse for $5," remarked the judge. "Yes," returned Mr. McKillop, "a horse, saddle and bridle, for $5, and your honor defended the man, and had the case thrown out by the jury." The court laughed heartily.

ASSAULTED CONDUCTOR DRAWS SIX MONTHS

Young Man Who Caused a Disturbance On the Traction Sent to Central.

St. Thomas, Sept. 17.—William Meredith, a young man who raised a disturbance on a traction car Friday evening, dislocating the motorman's shoulder and disfiguring the conductor, was today sentenced to six months in the Central Prison at hard labor. Meredith had a bad record, and had previously done time.

WINNIPEG CONSTABLE SHOOT HIMSELF

Desperate Act of a Police Officer On Train Near Toronto.

[Special to The Advertiser.] Toronto, Sept. 17.—Alf. Robertson, a sergeant of police at Winnipeg, and a former Toronto fireman, shot himself in the head on a train coming from Ottawa this morning. He had been acting strangely during the night looking for somebody, and had armed himself with a billy. He had a revolver in his suitcase, and this morning he took that, and entering a drawing-room berth, shot himself.

ONLY 12 CONDUCTORS HAVE BEEN REINSTATED

Many G. T. R. Men Who Struck Have Joined C. P. R. Or C. N. R.

[Special to The Advertiser.] Toronto, Sept. 17.—Twenty-two G. T. R. conductors, who went out on strike, have taken service with the C. P. R. and C. N. R. in the past few weeks. Despite all reports to the contrary, out of 100 passenger conductors employed on the G. T. R. who went out, only twelve have been reinstated. Those taken on are all placed below men who took their positions during the strike.

SCHWAB TO BUILD FLEET FOR CHINESE

U. S. Steel Corporation Said to Have Secured a Great Contract.

[Associated Press.] San Francisco, Cal., Sept. 17.—The Call this morning states that Chas. M. Schwab, former president of the United States Steel Corporation, is to meet Prince Tsai Hsun, uncle of the emperor of China, in this city next week "to close a deal" for the building of a fleet of warships for China.

In support of its assertion that American shipyards are likely to be given the work of building the warships, the Call quotes John A. McGregor, president of the Union Iron Works, as saying that he is informed that plans drawn by the Bethlehem Steel Company, through Schwab, have been favorably considered by the Chinese Government.

GAS STOVE EXPLOSION CAUSES WOMAN'S DEATH

Aged Widow, of St. Catharines Dies From Many Burns.

[Special to The Advertiser.] St. Catharines, Sept. 17.—Last evening about 6 o'clock, as Mrs. Tobin, a widow, aged 75, was lighting the gas stove to get supper for herself and daughter, there was an explosion and the old lady was enveloped in flames. Her daughter in the back yard heard a scream and rushed in to find her mother in a terrible condition. Neighbors came running in and the flames were put out finally by wrapping the woman in a rug. She was removed to the hospital and died about 10:30 last night. It is supposed she turned on the gas tap before lighting a match.

UNCLE SAM MOVES TO WIPE OUT SUGAR TRUST

Petition for Dissolution To Be Filed at New York Next Week.

[Associated Press.] Washington, Sept. 17.—A petition for the dissolution of the so-called sugar trust will be filed in the United States court in New York, probably next week. This is an action entirely independent of the indictments which were found some time ago against the American Sugar Refining Company and some of its officials. It was the subject of a conference in New York yesterday between Attorney-General Wickersham and United States Attorney Wise.

FINE FLYING. Bordeaux, Sept. 17.—Maubrun, flying a Bleriot monoplane, broke all records for 300 kilometers (186.3 miles) yesterday, covering the distance in 3 hours 33 minutes 7 seconds. His average time was about 55 miles an hour.

PRIMROSE AND WIFE SEPARATE

Former Londoner Has Troubles With Second Matrimonial Venture.

WELL-KNOWN MINSTREL

Was Once a Bell Boy in the Tecumseh House—Does Not Want His Presents Back.

George Primrose spent all his boyhood in London, residing with his parents in the neighborhood of Clark's bridge. He began life as a bell boy in the Tecumseh House, and is now worth over $1,000,000.

New York, Sept. 15.—George Primrose, veteran minstrel, whose first wife died in a tragic manner in Detroit in 1903, is now separated from his second wife, but believes they will become reconciled.

The first Mrs. Primrose went to Detroit to witness the debut of her husband in vaudeville. She was carrying a box at the performance, when she collapsed from illness, which proved fatal. Within a few months after the death of his first wife, Primrose married Miss Esther Nerney, his present wife, then about 28 years old. Miss Nerney was

GEORGE H. PRIMROSE, a concert singer in San Francisco, and exceedingly handsome.

Mr. Primrose had first met Miss Nerney at a concert in Yonkers fifteen years ago. Mr. Primrose prospered after his second marriage, and he bestowed fortune upon the woman from whom he is now estranged. However, he declares that his belief in the gospel of "This more blessed to give than to receive," has not been a Veteran Minstrel, Who is Separated From His Wife and His Acres, shaken, and that he has no intention of bringing action against Mrs. Primrose to recover the fortune in real estate he transferred to her.

Refused to Talk. Mr. Primrose refused to discuss the cause of the estrangement, but said he had not been living with his wife since the latter part of July. At that time they were planning to depart for Portland, Ore., where Mr. Primrose has had erected a bungalow on 85 acres of farm land he owns there.

So strong is Mr. Primrose's belief that a reconciliation with his wife will be effected that he has even stated the statement that their excursion to the Portland bungalow had not been cancelled. "It was only postponed," he said.

According to the minstrel, the dealing away of real estate has become a habit with him. He built a mansion at Fulton and East Lincoln avenues, Mount Vernon, and acquired other property in the exclusive Chester Hill section of that city. So extensive were his holdings that a section of the town was named Primrose Park. Mr. Primrose said last night that he was unable to estimate the value of his holdings in Mount Vernon. He declared he had deeded the property to his wife three years after their marriage, which took place several years ago. He said he took a similar course with his property when his first wife was alive.

No Presents Back. "I am not shooting any presents back," said the actor. "Mrs. Primrose and I are both well protected financially." Mr. Primrose, who is said to be more than 60 years old, received a fortune of $50,000 from his first wife. Real estate men say the value of the Primrose property in Mount Vernon is between $50,000 and $300,000.

J. W. JONES HASN'T MISSED A FAIR IN FORTY-TWO YEARS

Mr. J. W. Jones, of this city, has not missed the Western Fair in 42 years. He has been a director ever since the inception of the Fair. He is the last of the old guard, and is the last surviving member of the men who organized the Fair.

"I am the only one left of the lot, so far as I can recall at this moment," said Mr. Jones. "There may be one or two left, but their names have escaped me. I have not missed a fair in 42 years, and have been a director for nearly all that time. I have seen a lot of changes, but the Fair is growing, and it is bound to grow. I have every confidence in its future."

Hunt Club Run. The London Hunt Club had a fine run this morning, going in all fully 15 miles. The air was clear and crisp, and the hunters enjoyed it immensely. There were about 30 men in saddle. On their return, they were entertained at breakfast at the Kennels by Mr. J. I. A. Hunt.

MR. J. W. JONES.

ATTENDANCE WAS GREATER IS THE CLAIM OF DIRECTORS

It Is Figured Out That About 6,500 More People Saw Western Fair This Year Than in 1909—One Director Says Board Should Provide Better Amusements For Citizens.

From the standpoint of attendance, the Western Fair of 1910 was ahead of that of 1909 by about 6,500, according to information given out at the Fair Grounds.

Every day showed an increase over the same day in 1909, and the total was far in excess of the comparative figures are the following:

Table with 2 columns: Date and Attendance. Monday 14,000 vs 12,000; Tuesday 17,000 vs 16,500; Wednesday 45,000 vs 40,000; Thursday 40,000 vs 41,000; Friday 8,000 vs 7,000; Total 125,000 vs 116,500.

It will thus be seen that the attendance is about 6,500 more than last year, rather a good increase. The grandstand was well patronized this year, better than last, not a performance being lost whatever.

A Loss of Revenue. The association will suffer a loss of revenue from the fact that there was no Midway.

This has not only been a revenue-producing feature, but it was a decided attraction to the citizens, in fact, the main attraction.

"The Fair failed in the Midway," said one director. "After many years' close observation, I came to the conclusion that Western Ontario sent more people to London this year than is usually the case. Perhaps the weather during the Toronto Fair had something to do with it. In any event they were here. Consequently, they remained at home. The citizens should be considered in laying out the Fair."

TORPEDO HURLED A STONE PAST HEADS OF LONDONERS

Fog Signal Exploded On Dundas Street When a Lorrie Passed Over It—Several Citizens Had a Narrow Escape From Death Or Serious Injury.

A railroad fog signal, exploded by a C. P. R. lorrie on Dundas street, near the Majestic Theatre, at 11 o'clock this morning, caused a great deal of excitement when it hurled a large stone within a few inches of the heads of Mr. Harold Little, son of Col. J. W. Little, and Mr. Bert Wilcox, crashing through a plate glass window in the store of Messrs. Dambra & Walsh.

The signal was an ordinary one, but its presence on the city pavement is unaccounted for. It was evidently lying beneath the stone near the street railway rails, when a rear wheel of the lorrie passed over it.

Narrow Escapes. There was a terrific explosion, and a smashing of glass. The stone whirled past Mr. Wilcox so close that he could hear it.

Mr. Harold Little was just entering the door less than a foot from where the stone struck the plate. Mr. Joseph Dambra had just completed dressing the window and stepped out onto the floor as the crash came.

JOHN H. CHAPMAN NAMED FOR WATER COMMISSIONER BUT HAS NOT YET ACCEPTED

Well-Known Retail Merchant Says He Has Been Approached But He Is Not at All Willing to Accept the Responsibility—Friends Say Only On Unanimous Vote of the Council Will He Take the Position.

At a meeting of the committee of the whole council, held last night, it was decided to recommend to the council that Mr. John H. Chapman be named water commissioner to succeed the late Adam T. McMahen.

The session was a brief one, the business being transacted in five minutes. Prior to the session, there was a caucus of some of the members, and a certain line of action agreed upon. When the committee convened, Ald. Richter, the chairman, did not vote.

Ald. Jeffries brought the name of Mr. John M. Dillon before the meeting, and Ald. Tancook moved that the nominating be done by ballot.

The vote was taken, and Mr. Chapman had six votes, with two opposed. Ald. Richter, the chairman, did not vote. Ald. Jeffries stated that Mr. Chapman would likely accept the position if given a reasonable majority of the council.

The committee then adjourned. Ald. Stevens arrived just after the business had been transacted. It is more than certain that Mr. Chapman will be endorsed by the council on Monday night. Seven of the aldermen, Ald. Richter, Ald. Ashplant, Ald. Tancook, Ald. Underwood, Ald. Pockock, Ald. Fitzgerald and Ald. Jeffries, are practically pledged to support him. Ald. Morgan, too, may vote favorably.

It is not known what the other aldermen will do. In any event, there is a majority for Mr. Chapman. Those present were Ald. Richter (chairman), Ald. Ashplant, Ald. Jeffries, Ald. Underwood, Ald. Eckert, Ald. Fitzgerald, Ald. Tancook, Ald. Pockock and Mayor Beattie.

Mr. Chapman's Position. When seen by The Advertiser, Mr. Chapman stated that the action of the committee was news to him.

"I have been interviewed on the subject," said Mr. Chapman. "I gave no person any assurance that I would accept the position, and I have not yet decided to do so. My business is heavy, and requires a great deal of time. The year's work in the commission is important, and will require a very great amount of time. I would much prefer somebody else to take the position, and will gladly support a good man."

Close friends of Mr. Chapman stated to The Advertiser today, that he would not accept if there were any bickering or opposition. Only by the unanimous vote of the council will he consent to consider the water commissionership.

PANIC AT BULL FIGHT

Los Angeles, Cal., Sept. 17.—Panic reigned among thousands of spectators of a bull fight exhibition here last night when an enraged bull burst through the barrier of the ring and headed for the crowd. A deputy sheriff shot the animal in the head and it fell dead within six feet of the spectators.

ODDFELLOWS HAVE A SCHEME TO ERECT TEMPLE IN LONDON

Matter Is To Be Brought to the Attention of All City Lodges Shortly—Detroit Visitors Put New Ideas Into Minds of Local Members.

There is a move on at the present time to erect a fine new temple for the Oddfellows, and if the scheme, as it is being discussed, is carried through the building will be a very handsome one. The matter will likely be brought before the various lodges of the city very shortly and the members will be asked to give their views on it.

The matter has been in the air for some time, as there has been a feeling among many members that there ought to be a central meeting place, where Oddfellows from all over the city can gather. The facilities for entertaining out-of-town lodges and putting on various branches of the work could be improved, and if the new temple is built this will be amply provided for.

The Detroit Visitors. The visit of 135 Oddfellows from Riverside Lodge this week resulted in many good ideas being obtained. Riverside Lodge has a splendid new temple in Detroit, and since it was built the membership has boomed and there are now over 700 names on the roll. The temple is fitted up very completely, and is entirely self-sustaining, and the Riverside members look upon it as a most valuable asset. There is a feeling among many members that London Oddfellows can do what the Detroit brethren have done and that it will result in a boon for Oddfellows in this city.

COUNTY PATIENTS WILL BE ADMITTED UNTIL DECEMBER

Alexandra Sanatorium Board Will Look After Middlesex Consumptives on Humanitarian Grounds—London Health Association Met Today.

Tuberculosis patients from the county of Middlesex will be admitted to the Alexandra Sanatorium until the December session of the county council.

At a meeting of the London Health Association held this morning in the board of trade rooms, this decision was arrived at, and it will be carried out.

Hon. Adam Beck presented the case. He pointed out that there were six applications for admission to the Sanatorium.

Humanitarian grounds demanded that these people be given some at-ention, as the rapid spread of the disease, as well as its dangers, made it imperative that something be done at once, if they were to be saved.

It was also stated that the county council had not refused to make the grant.

Action was deferred on the matter until the winter session, when it will come up.

Claims of Humanity. "While it was our original determination not to admit any patients to the institution from the county of Middlesex until such a time as this

G. T. R. MEN MUCH PLEASED WITH MR. GRAHAM'S MOVE

Passenger Men Are Out of Work in London and They Feel They Are Not Being Fairly Treated by the Company.

Local Grand Trunk men are keenly interested in the report from Ottawa that Hon. George P. Graham, minister of railways, will see Mr. Charles H. Flays as quickly as possible and ask why the men are not being taken back.

At the present time there are 13 of the passenger men who have not been taken back, and some others, in all about 25, in London.

A prominent Grand Trunk official stated to The Advertiser recently that as long as the men who are at present operating the trains continued to give satisfaction and wanted to stay with the company there would be none of the old men taken back except those who were called at first. "All Will Go Back."

Asked regarding this, one of the strikers said he did not think there was anything in it, and that all the men will be taken back.

The G. T. R. official was asked regarding the 90-day arrangement, and said he had never heard of it officially and thought it was a newspaper story.

"He will find out that he doesn't know anything at all about it," was all the strikers asked regarding the matter would say.

WAGON WITH ASYLUM PATIENTS WENT OVER A 30-FOOT BANK

Narrow Escape From Death of Many Persons Near C. P. R. Overhead Bridge On Asylum Sideroad.

Several of the patients at the Asylum had a close call from being very seriously injured yesterday afternoon, when a wagon in which they were riding went over a 30-foot embankment near the C. P. R. overhead bridge on the Asylum sideroad, as a result of the horses drawing it being frightened by a passing auto.

The patients were somewhat badly shaken up, but escaped without being thrown out. It took some time to pull the wagon back on to the roadway again, and extra horses had to be secured.

Dr. Robinson, when asked regarding the matter, stated that it had not been reported to him.

MORE PUPILS ARE ALLOWED TO PASS ENTRANCE EXAMS.

Inspector Edwards has issued a supplementary list of candidates who have been granted high school entrance certificates.

It will be remembered that the entrance papers were somewhat difficult this summer, and the number of failures was large. The department issued instructions to the board of examiners to go over the papers, and recommend students whose papers showed ability, although they had not obtained the requisite number of marks.

The board, consisting of Inspector Edwards, Inspector Sullivan and Principal Theobald, did so, and today suits.

"That makes 66 per cent of students that we have passed," said the inspector. "It is the best record in the province. I am well pleased with the result of their deliberations was made known."

The successful candidates are as follows: May Brighton, William Buskard, Mabel Carfrae, Nellie Fitzpatrick, Jean Galbraith, Clifford Hornby, Marguerite H. Hurd, Edward Harrison, Lily Jacobs, Ith Kennedy, Verlyn Lewis, Elsie Matthevson, Elsie Morrison, Lizzie Mitchell, Harold Pingel, Willie Parker, Wilfred Rose, Marjorie Stinson, Lillian Sproule, Cyril Thomas and Eva Walker.

"That makes 66 per cent of students that we have passed," said the inspector. "It is the best record in the province. I am well pleased with the result of their deliberations was made known."

45,000 PEOPLE BROUGHT IN FOR THE WESTERN FAIR

Railway officials state that they are well satisfied with the returns of the Fair traffic, and that they are very good.

The Grand Trunk estimates that for the entire Fair they carried in more than 25,000 people.

The C. P. R. brought in about 5,000; the Traction Company carried between 8,000 and 9,000; the Pere Marquette about 3,000, and the Michigan Central about 2,000.

Altogether the railroads brought in close to 45,000 people.

PLUMBERS STRIKE

Four Hundred Employed at Montreal Have Gone Out.

[G. N. W. Dispatch.] Montreal, Sept. 17.—Four hundred plumbers and steam fitters went out on strike this morning, demanding a flat rate of 40 cents an hour and an eight-hour day. Twelve of the leading firms of the city holding contracts on many prominent structures in course of construction will be affected if the fight lasts long. The men claim they have been put off for a long time by their employers in their negotiations for improved working conditions, and that they are determined not to be put off any longer.

HUGE STONES USED IN PANAMA CANAL

7,500-Ton Cement Blocks Used in Building Great Waterway.

New York, Sept. 16.—Rear Admiral Harry Henslow, naval member of the Panama Canal Commission, who came up today from Colon, reported progress on the canal, and gave some concrete facts about lock building.

Everything is completed at the same time," said Admiral Henslow today. "In other words, every part of the canal will be ready to be opened on the date set. The labor situation is being furnished by West Indians, with the exception of about 5,000 Europeans, mostly Spaniards, there are about 30,000 ordinary laborers altogether. There are about 5,000 Americans working on the canal.

The first step in making the great Gatun lake has been taken, and they have started turning the water through the Gatun spillway. The lake now stands at a height of 19 feet. Its depth will be 85 feet, but it will not be filled all at once. As soon as it reaches a depth of 55 feet they will stop the flow of water into it and put the machinery for the operation of the spillway. The final filling, 30 feet higher, will take about six months.

"As for the new track of the Panama Railroad, this is in such shape that it could be used in an emergency. Only 35,000,000 cubic yards of earth remain to be taken out of Cutler cut of the original 85,000,000, and the dirt is flying there at the rate of 1,300,000 yards a month.

"Probably the most interesting part of the work just now is the concrete laying at Gatun and Pedro Miguel. At Gatun we are using overhead cableways for dumping the cement into the forms. The latter are enormous affairs of steel on the Atlantic side and wood on the Pacific. We are putting down concrete at the rate of over 3,000 yards a day at Gatun and over 2,000 at Pedro Miguel. According to the present rate of progress, the locks will be completed in two and one-half years. There will be about 2,000,000 yards of concrete in a lock."

Don't waste your money buying plasters when you can get a bottle of Chamberlain's Liniment for 25 cents. A piece of flannel dampened with this liniment is superior to any plaster for lame back, pains in the side and chest, and much cheaper. Sold by all dealers.

RUSSIAN PRINCE REPLACES CHANLER

MADE BOB GO TO WORK

Allowed American Husband Only $20 Monthly of His Own Money.

New York, Sept. 16.—The whole recital of the marriage and separation of "Sheriff Bob" Chanler and Lina Cavallieri, called "the most beautiful woman in the world," now has become known entire, and one of the most interesting chapters of the canal engineering and the Panama Canal project.

Chanler, whose fortune originally amounted to about $1,000,000, has signed over his entire income of $30,000 a year to the singer, and also the fortune itself, to be hers for life. He is practically penniless. Of the $30,000 a year income from the $1,000,000 the singer receives $30,000, the remaining $20,000 being held in trust as alimony for Chanler's divorced wife.

It is known that almost immediately after the wedding Cavallieri sent for Dolgorouki, and Chanler was relegated to the background. Only last Friday she was seen lunching with him in the midst of a merry party in a Paris cafe.

It was in the spring of 1909 that Chanler, not long before she sailed, after her grand opera season here, fell in love with Lina Cavallieri. Many an afternoon she would go to his studio on Fifth avenue and, while Chanler would pretend to work on his mural paintings, Cavallieri would sit at the piano, play and sing to him, or he would lie in an easy chair by his side, watching him work and slipping tea.

In the making of the match it is necessary to obtain the best grade of wood. No sap wood, no knotty or cross-grained timber is utilized by the hundreds of factories in this country that are busily engaged in turning out matches.

care not to decline him, but not wanting to accept him when there was a possibility that she would land the Russian, whom she is said to have loved as much as Chanler loved her. Then in March of this year, with other famous grand opera singers, Cavallieri sailed for Europe, having promised Chanler she would decide on April 15, whether she would marry him. On that day Chanler walked with his head in the clouds. He had received the following telegram: Robert Chanler, New York: I will accept your proposition of marriage on my return to New York next season. Much friendship and love. Answer by cable.

Chanler, beside himself with joy, sent the following in reply: Mme. Lina Cavallieri, Paris: I accept your proposition. It is a long wait, but wise. ROBERT W. CHANLER. That night Chanler gave a bachelor dinner at the Alps Restaurant, Sixth avenue, near Fifty-eighth street, to celebrate the engagement. Among his guests were Henry Lewis, Jun., Cameron and other New York friends. Peter Hewitt, F. B. Herzog, Robert MacTamer and Richard Le Gallienne.

Chanler got to work. At her behest he would go out into the parks of Paris and paint two by four pictures which Cavallieri thought would have some market value. Until recently he painted these pictures and sold them when he could. In the meantime he was telling his troubles to Henry Lewis, Jun., Robert Lee McCammon and other New York friends. Once married to Chanler, Cavallieri, it is said, communicated with Dolgorouki, and he rushed across Europe to her side, where he has been ever since.

Dolgorouki began to lavish jewels, flowers and the like on the singer. Then also began long automobile trips through the country surrounding Paris with Dolgorouki, while Chanler painted his pictures and sold them when he could. His friends took them when his pride would allow him to let them know he needed the money.

When Mme. Cavallieri became ill and there was an operation for appendicitis. At the hospital Chanler was only tolerated by the singer. It was Dolgorouki who was welcomed. When Cavallieri left the hospital she went to Cabourg, near Trouville. Her son, her brother Orestes, Prince Dolgorouki and several maids accompanied her. Chanler followed a few days later, and when he found Prince Dolgorouki there he gave up in disgust, and after a long conference with his brother, William Astor Chanler, started for America with Mrs. Ashley, the latter's mother.

Finally Wedded June 18. The story had to do with dinners, gifts of jewels, and of her boy of 16. Then came the arrangement that the child should be recognized by Chanler. Chanler was willing to do even this, it is said. But friends in Rome, whom Mme. Cavallieri consulted, advised against this, pointing out it might possibly affect the boy's right to inherit the enormous fortune his mother has accumulated.

Then on the third day before the wedding Chanler signed the documents. On June 18 of this year they were married in the little borough hall of the Eighth Arrondissement, the fashionable Elysee quarter of Paris. After performing the civil ceremony the mayor of the Arrondissement made an address of felicitation, and then the party drove to the Bois de Boulogne, and there, in the Pavillon d'Armenville, was served a splendid breakfast at which the usual toasts were drunk.

Two or three days later Chanler's gram was disturbed. He had been spending his time on enormous mural paintings. He did not sell many and Cavallieri thought this was energy wasted. One morning after Chanler had finished his coffee and rolls, his wife, who now controlled the purse strings, announced that thereafter Chanler would be allowed each month 100 francs, or $20.

She agreed to board and lodge him, but out of this $20 he was to pay his valet, was to buy his clothes, and meet those hundred and one little expenses he had always incurred. "It's time for you to get to work and earn your living, anyway," she told him.

Chanler got to work. At her behest he would go out into the parks of Paris and paint two by four pictures which Cavallieri thought would have some market value. Until recently he painted these pictures and sold them when he could. In the meantime he was telling his troubles to Henry Lewis, Jun., Robert Lee McCammon and other New York friends. HORNED MEN

Traces of Aborigines With Satan's Headgear Unearthed.

San Francisco, Cal., Sept. 16.—The "horned men of Topanga" have been discovered—that is, they are almost forgotten, and of a physiognomy so strange that the scientists who unearthed them are almost persuaded that the existence in the long ago of hitherto untraced race of aborigines has been demonstrated.

Professor J. R. Pendleton, of the geological department of Stanford University was just returned from the mountains near Santa Monica, in Southern California. In the Topanga canon in the heart of a district long known to have been the home of Indian tribes, now extinct, the excavators found on mound containing the homes of 34 aborigines. From little arrow heads imbedded in the skulls and from the crushed skull bones, that bore every evidence of having been beaten in by war clubs, Professor Pendleton says it is plain that the ancients died in battle.

But of more scientific interest is the amazing countenances conjured up by the skulls, found by the scientists. The brow is almost totally lacking, rising from the line of the eyebrows only "three-quarters of an inch, and the top of the head being almost flat. The nose projects horizontally, hornlike, and with no resemblance to the human nose.

DISCOVERY OF UNKNOWN PEOPLE

Strange Race Hidden in Snow Mountains of New Guinea.

LIVING IN STONE AGE

Terrible Experiences of First European Explorer Related for the First Time.

London, Sept. 16.—Reuter's representative forwarded from Arnhem on Friday details of an important interview with Dr. H. A. Lorentz, the Dutch explorer, who is the first white man to have penetrated the mysterious Central Snow Range of New Guinea, one of the peaks of which is the objective of the important British expedition now working in the country.

This portion of New Guinea is probably the largest unexplored part of the earth's surface, as little known as the Polar Circle, and the immense snow-capped range, with its knife-edged peaks, attains a height of nearly 18,000 feet.

The approach to the Snow Mountains was through a well-nigh impenetrable forest, over precipitous cliffs, in a foodless region of intense cold. But having conquered all these obstacles, and reached the base of the mountains, Dr. Lorentz built a big advance camp, and Capt. van Nounhuys and 25 coolies started up the mountains. Narrating an adventure which proved to be terrible, but of the greatest interest, the explorer said: "After eleven days of cutting our way through some of the densest forest I have ever seen, and in getting over cliffs which resembled nothing so much as sides of houses, we reached an altitude of 5,500 feet, pretty well exhausted.

"We now attempted the second section of our climb, and for two days ascended the mountains. Suddenly we came across a secluded valley some 5,600 feet deep running east and west, which, to our amazement, we found to be thickly populated. Since leaving the river there had not been a sign of human life, but now, to our surprise, we found native villages along the whole length of the valley.

Eccentricities of New Race. "Our first encounter with these unknown natives occurred early one morning. We were walking in single file through the twilight shades of the great forest when we heard mysterious calls, which we at once attributed to human beings. Suddenly a small band of savages, all armed with bows and arrows and stone axes, ran out from the jungle, and, to our surprise, approached us with hands outstretched, offering us sweet potatoes as a sign of friendship.

"On our arrival in their village the people performed a curious ceremony by which they made us blood brothers. They sacrificed a pig, and smeared each of us with the forehead with the creature's blood. This proved a somewhat awkward attention in the case of our Mohammedan soldiers, but, at my earnest request, they finally agreed to submit, provided that we allowed them immediately afterwards to undergo ceremonial washing.

"Those people lived in little huts, all of which were raised about ten feet from the ground, access being obtained by a narrow pole. These little huts we found to be divided into two, one-half being used for domestic animals—mostly pigs, who presumably also climbed the rough ladder—and the other half by the people themselves.

"We noticed that some of the women had the middle finger of the left hand cut off. We had no means of discovering the meaning of this, although it was clear that the mutilation was made in the past, and not in their quite early days, all the children have their hands intact.

"Many of the men, too, had the upper portion of one of their ears removed.

Terrors of the Mountains. "They were very anxious for us to remain with them, and tried to dissuade us from going further up the mountains, saying that we should surely be attacked by the people who lived there, but we were determined to ourselves away from these curious people, and proceed on our way.

"Two days further up the mountains, at an altitude of 10,000 feet, we came across four people, one woman and three men, but they were very frightened and ran away.

"After experiences which I find it extremely difficult to narrate we reached a point at an altitude of 15,500 feet. We had attained our goal, and had named the peak after Queen Wilhelmina, but it was on the return journey that our series of disasters began. We had not gone very far down the peak before I slipped, and, falling headlong for 100 feet, smashed my ribs and sustained serious injuries to my legs, hands, and head.

"That night was a terrible one, and in my periods of consciousness I suffered extreme pain. With no covering at all we were exposed for hours on a bare ledge. On the following day some of the Dyaks came up from the next camp and carried me thither in blankets, a journey of five hours which I am not likely to forget.

"And that night one of our Dyaks was frozen to death, and we had literally to beat the other coolies in order to prevent them from going into a never-ending sleep. I was not able to move. For thirteen days we stayed in this camp, until we were rescued to one ounce of rice daily per man, with absolutely nothing else. At the end of that time we all looked like living skeletons, and, in addition to other miseries, the feet of the coolies were in a frightful condition.

"As to remain longer would have meant certain starvation, we decided to make an attempt to reach camp lower down, but we were so exhausted that we could not travel for more than a couple of hours per day. At this stage another of our coolies died of exhaustion.

"Three days further down the mountains I found one of the soldiers who had formed one of the advance relief party. He had lost his way, and for fifteen days had lain where we found him without food. He was alive, but that was all, and we were reluctantly compelled to leave him where we found him, as none of us were able to carry him. He was afterwards discovered still alive, but died on being carried down.

"After an absence of 65 days in the snow mountains, we once more arrived at our base camp; but our casualties were not over, for on the day of our departure a European sergeant died at Bivouac Island, and later on another of our Dyaks succumbed to exhaustion."

1,500 LAMPS NEEDED TO LIGHT THE CITY

More Will Likely Be Added As the System Is Extended.

It will require 1,500 Tungsten lights to light the city on the present system with Niagara power.

This is by no means a finality, as the system is being extended, or, rather, extensions are being considered by the board. A large number of requests for lighting have been received, and will shortly be dealt with.

This number is independent of the down town ornamental system. "We will use 2,000 lights shortly," said Chairman Woodcock, who is getting the street lighting in good shape as soon as possible. We will light the city in a way it has never been lighted."

ASK COUNCIL AGAIN TO PRINT ROLLS

No. 1 Committee Anxious to Give Out Assessment Figures.

The council will be again asked to have the assessment roll printed. At the meeting of the finance committee yesterday afternoon it was decided to reaffirm the former recommendation.

Ald. Richter explained that he had taken exception to the meeting on Tuesday, Sept. 6, as being irregular, and consequently he had, with the consent of Mayor Beattie, removed the clause from the report. He did not wish the matter brought up at a meeting. In addition he would be out of the city on that occasion, and this was another reason why he did not wish it brought forward.

The motion of Ald. Underwood was recommended that the assessment rolls be printed, at a cost of not more than $90.

A by-law governing the admission of patients to the Alexandra Sanatorium will be prepared, Ald. Richter and Mayor Beattie acting with the city solicitor in its preparation.

Mayor Beattie announced that the question of Saturday excursions would be taken up soon by the Eastern Passenger Association. He expected to have a conference with officers in the near future.

Tenders for the year's printing were opened, and City Clerk Baker was instructed to tabulate them before Monday.

Those present were: Ald. Richter (chairman), Ald. Underwood, Ald. Eckert, Mayor Beattie and Secretary Baker.

LABOR PUTS THROUGH IMPORTANT RESOLUTIONS

Conclusion of Congress at Port Arthur Is Now in Sight.

Port Arthur, Sept. 17.—Resolutions were the order of business again yesterday at the Trades and Labor Congress, whose members, now that the great end of the convention will be reached tonight.

Motions having been given consideration in committee and whiped into one, a motion to adjourn was carried, and in most cases were passed with very little discussion; subjects which received most attention in the way of speeches, making being the order of the day.

Among the resolutions passed yesterday morning were: "To make arrangements for international peace conference of labor organizations." "To get Government pensions for the blind." "To get legislation requiring greater care in the erection of scaffolds and temporary floors upon which artisans are required to work."

Against the practice of using troops in labor disputes. "Approving of the principle of co-operative stores." "To require heating street car vestibules as well as its interiors for the protection of conductors and motormen in winter."

McLAUGHLIN HOUSE AFIRE. Uxbridge, Sept. 17.—The McLaughlin tragedy of last October was recalled to mind again, when about 8:30 last evening the house which the McLaughlin family resided in at the time of the tragedy was discovered on fire. The house had recently been repaired, and was now ready for occupancy. How the fire originated is at this time a mystery. The fire was mainly in the walls and the firemen had considerable difficulty in extinguishing it.

WEEKLY REVIEW OF BRADSTREET'S

Montreal, Toronto and Winnipeg Show Good Tone.

LITTLE CHANGE HERE

Local Industries All Busy and General Movement of Trade Satisfies.

Montreal reports to Bradstreet's say city trade has been quieter during the past week and affairs have generally returned to a normal state after the rush and hurry of Congress week. Country trade keeps good. Wholesalers report an excellent volume of general business for this time of the year. Fall trade seems to be opening out nicely in most parts of Canada. The volume of general orders so far has been fair, although considerable tendency has been shown in some parts of the country to await later developments before placing orders for requirements. Threatening of price changes in some lines has also been a factor in this connection. It is understood drygoods merchants in almost all directions ended the summer with well-cleared shelves, and this fact taken in conjunction with those previously stated would seem to point to an excellent sorting trade a little later on. The demand for general lines of merchandise continues good. Hardware lines move well. The demand for iron and steel is fairly brisk. Local foundries and machine shops are busy. The shipping trade is also active.

Toronto's Report.

Toronto reports to Bradstreet's say a healthy tone is noted to all lines of trade there. All travelers are again out on their routes and they are sending in good orders for general lines of merchandise. Country business has shown a better tone during the week. In most lines of trade collections are fair to good. Receipts of produce have been fairly large and prices have held about steady. Labor is well employed here, and there is still a scarcity of skilled operatives in some lines. Manufacturing jewellers report they are particularly affected in this regard. Values of commodities are generally steady.

Winnipeg reports say the grain movement is now well under way and inspections show the quality of the wheat yield to be generally excellent. From those districts where the drought damage was most marked the wheat has been pretty much affected, but from the northern parts of the three provinces the yield is of first-class quality. Fall business is beginning to move well in all districts. Wholesalers state they are receiving good supplementary orders for goods and the outlook is generally bright. Collections are showing improvement and will continue to do so as the crop gets marketed.

On the Coast.

Vancouver and Victoria reports say there continues a good volume of business both at coast cities and at all provincial points. The demand for general merchandise has kept up well, and prospects for future trade are considered distinctly good. Vancouver will this year ship more grain from the Prairie Provinces than she has ever done, and there is no doubt but that with the completion of the Panama Canal this port will be a big factor in the annual grain movement. Quebec reports to Bradstreet's are pretty much the same as the preceding week, although some wholesalers report having received fair orders for fall shipment; the volume, however, is not up to the average retail trade report. Sales are slow, which is attributed to the Eucharistic Congress; the latter was the means of drawing many people from town. No change is noted in the industrial situation, which is much about the same.

Hamilton reports say there has been rather a better tone to general trade here during the past week. Fall lines of clothing are moving well, and wholesalers in general lines report a good business moving for this time of the year. Country trade is good and collections show a rather better tone.

London reports say general conditions show little change from those of a week ago. A fair volume of retail trade is moving, and wholesalers are well satisfied with the movement and with prospects for the future. Local industries are also busy. Cigarmakers report a fair volume of business, as also do the boot and shoe men. Collections are generally satisfactory.

Ottawa reports say general conditions are about as reported last week. The demand for fall lines at wholesale is fair, but the sorting trade has not yet set in to any great extent. Retail trade in the retail trade in the surrounding district is generally good. The farmers have come through the year well, and storekeepers should be in a good position to meet liabilities.

SAYS RUSSIAN JAILS ARE NOT SO "AWFUL"

The Chief of Administration of Prisons Is in New York.

New York, Sept. 17.—One of the most interesting among the group of distinguished foreigners assembled in New York in preparation for the quinquennial session of the International Prison Congress to be held shortly in Washington is Etienne de Khrouteff, chief of the administration of prisons of the inmates of the 300 jails in Russia and Siberia. He is a tall man with a benevolent expression and courteous manner. He confesses to 50 years, 25 of which he has spent in the Government service.

"This is the first time, I suppose, that such a terrible person as the chief of the Russian prisons has ever been in the United States," he said. "I hope to gain much first-hand information over here. The prison system of America and her reformatories are only theoretically known in Russia, but now we shall be able to get at them in a practical way. We shall be able to learn much. We are trying to improve our own system."

"In Russia the criminal is considered not merely as an enemy to society, but as a sick man. Persons condemned to enforced labor have the right to see their parents once a month and often in the discretion of the chief of a prison. It can be said that the inmates of Russian prisons not only do not suffer hardships, but their comfort, food, clothing and so on make their position so far as these things are concerned no worse than that of a peasant or an ordinary city workman living in liberty. Part of the money derived from the work done by prisoners is put aside to be given to them upon their release."

ROOSEVELT AND BARNES IN A PUBLIC SPAT

Both Say What They Think of Each Other in Published Statements.

New York, Sept. 17.—There was a sharp exchange today between Col. Theodore Roosevelt and Wm. Barnes, Republican state committeeman and leader of the so-called Old Guard. In a published statement Mr. Barnes said:

"No amount of political manoeuvring, use of patronage, or personal abuse can in the slightest degree obscure the one issue which must be fought out to a finish at Saratoga. There will be determined the future of the Republic for some years to come. That party must determine in its platform whether it will be recognized as the conserving force which has been its history, or whether it will follow the radical policies of Mr. Roosevelt and lose the strategic position which it has held in the State of New York for many years as the party of sanity and the protector of industry on which the world of business and labor must depend."

"If it does not hold to its time-honored and successful principles, but seeks for new gods to worship, its mistakes will be taken advantage of by its adversary. No radical candidate has ever carried the State of New York. Progress in political life is essential to any party, but the state leadership which relies for its strength on inciting the mob can never, even if it seem the tide which it has created. The Republican party in the state has never faced a crisis so fundamental to its existence such as it must meet at this hour."

When Mr. Barnes' statement was shown to Col. Roosevelt, the latter dictated the following comment: "I am indeed blessed in my enemies. I am very genuinely grateful to Mr. Barnes for having unconsciously made the issue so clear between what he is pleased to call 'Rooseveltism' on the one side and on the other side the alliance of the boss with that element of big business which seeks to control politics in connection with business."

LIVED TO BE 147

Was Son of a Sea Captain and Led an Adventurous Life.

London, Sept. 16.—The existence of a Schleswig-Holsteiner who lived to the age of 147 is recorded by documentary evidence supplied by the Catholic priest of a charitable foundation in a Schleswig town. The evidence is contained in an inscription on the back of an oil painting discovered in the institution, and representing the half-figure of an old man of mummy-like appearance.

The man was named Christen Jacobson Drakenberg, and is stated in the inscription to have been born in November, 1626, and to have died in October, 1772. The son of a sea captain, he had chiefly led a sailor's life. He took part in several wars and among other adventures passed fifteen years as a slave among the pirates of Algeria.

In October, 1737, it is recorded that he married the widow of a shipmaster. She died the following year and Drakenberg seems subsequently to have looked around for another spouse, for at the age of 130 we find him making further matrimonial proposals. No woman, however, being daring enough to fall in with them. Drakenberg resigned himself to single blessedness for the remainder of his days, and is described as having thenceforward "led a quiet and retired life." Inquiries made by the priest have confirmed the statements of the inscription.

SELLING AT BUYING PRICE

The Selling Price for the cloth that goes into a Scotland Woolen Mills Suit is the other tailors' buying Price.

We would explain that very broad statement by saying that the Scotland Woolen Mills Company handles its cloth direct between the mill and the wearer of the clothes. There are no intermediate profits.

The fabrics that go into the Scotland Woolen Mills Suits and Overcoats are vastly different and superior to those sold elsewhere.

Let us explain that statement also by pointing out that these goods are Individual in patterns, made for our branches in the mills. They are based on the advance patterns selected for the season and only good wool is used on the looms. The texture is superior—the cloth comes in all weights.

TRIES BY PRAYER TO GET MILLION

"Elijah" Sandford Leads Flock in Appeal That Finally Brings $300.

Yarmouth, N. S., Sept. 15.—The Rev. Frank Sandford, leader of the Holy Ghosts and self-styled Elijah II, wants $1,000,000 with which to spread his faith and power. Sarah Josepha this morning said so. In the two weeks since Miss Josepha was rescued from Sandford's ship Kingdom, when that craft ran upon Mud Island, she has cut loose from the Holy Ghosts. "I am no longer afraid of him or his professed power," she said today. "Our food supply was very limited after we left Portland. For two weeks before we struck the rocks all we had to eat were the fish we caught and bread. Sandford told us we must raise $1,000,000 and that it could be accomplished through prayers. We foolishly followed his advice and prayed for 21 days. All we could raise was $300, which came from outside sources."

"One-half the people aboard do not believe in Sandford, but are really forced by circumstances to remain with his flock. One of Sandford's favorite moves was to ask if we believed he was the real Elijah II, and God's representative on earth. Naturally, we had to say yes; if we had not our lives would have been made unbearable. Although the Kingdom is likely to sail tomorrow the craft is leaking badly and is said to be unseaworthy. The repairs are only temporary, and water men assert that the ship is unfit to make the trip to Portland."

KAISER'S PERIL.
Berlin, Sept. 17.—A special dispatch to the Morgen Post, from Fuenfkirchen, Hungary, says that a formidable bomb was discovered yesterday lying on the railroad track in front of Emperor Williams' train, in which he was proceeding to the hunting lodge at Mohacs, 25 miles southeast of Fuenfkirchen.

SHOT IN THE ARM.
Smith's Falls, Sept. 16.—Allan McCollum, youngest son of Dr. McCollum, of Smith's Falls, was out in a boat shooting ducks in company with another youth named McCoun, when by the accidental discharge of his rifle he was shot in the left wrist, the bone being badly shattered. The doctor hopes to save the young man's arm.

BOY SHARES JOYS WITH GAMIN CREW
Son of Lady Brabazon Robs Mother To Cut Wild Pranks in Leghorn.

Florence, Sept. 16.—Society is buzzing over the extraordinary adventure of the 15-year-old son of Lady Brabazon, who occupies a sumptuous residence here, where she has a foremost position in society. The son coolly appropriated 20,000 lire from his mother and made off, escorted by three raggamuffins. The four arrived at Leghorn where they put up at the best hotel. During four days they led a hilarious life. They meanwhile increased their party to the extent of four females. The police became suspicious of them and watched the hotel where they were stopping.

Lady Brabazon eventually learned the whereabouts of her son. His companions, male and female, were arrested and placed in jail, having spent some 10,000 lire, while the scion of a noble house was hauled back to Florence. The ragpickers and the women were imprisoned on the charge of immorality and leading an English youth into temptation.

SIDEGLIMTS ON NOTABLE PEOPLE BY THE MARQUISE DE FONTENOY

In view of the fact that there are at the present moment in England two men known as Lord Gifford, it may be as well to explain that the Lord Gifford arriving from England in New York for an extended United States visit, is not the elderly peer of that name who won the Victoria Cross by a feat of exceptional heroism while serving under Lord Wolsley in the Ashanti war in 1817, and who has been acting governor of Western Australia, and also of Gibraltar, but the eldest son and heir of the tenth Marquis of Tweeddale—whose name should be pronounced as if it were spelled "Twiddle." The Victoria Cross Lord Gifford is a member of the House of Lords, in which he sits as a baronet; whereas the Lord Gifford visiting America is a commoner in the eyes of the law, and an earl merely by usage and courtesy, thanks to the custom, sanctioned by the crown, according to which the eldest sons of dukes, marquises and earls are allowed to make use of one of the minor titles of their father.

Young Lord Gifford is 26 years of age, unmarried, and has recently retired from his lieutenancy of the first regiment of Life Guards, on the reserve force of which, however, he is still carried. He is also one of the brightest particular stars of the Bachelors' Club in London, and although he may possibly find during his stay over here some American heiress willing to share his honors, he cannot be looked upon in the light of a fortune hunter, seeing that the entailed estates alone, which will come into his possession on the death of his octogenarian father, extend over 40,000 acres in England and Scotland, in addition to which the present marquis has acquired a considerable fortune by shrewd business ability.

Born as a younger son, the marquis was educated at Halesbury for the civil service in India, in which he served throughout the Indian mutiny with considerable distinction. Before returning home he achieved fame as an explorer of Tibet, which was, in those days, even more strictly closed to the outside world than it is today. What caused him to retire from the Indian service was the fact that his elder brother, the eldest son, was quite the shyest man in England, and met with sudden death.

Possessed of a very strong business sense, the marquis was, until a few years ago, president of nearly 50 corporations, including several railroads, banks, and the Anglo-American Telegraph, the Eastern Telegraph, the Australia and China Cable Company, and the Submarine Cable Trust, the latter, it is to say, the head of the combination which controls the greater part of the telegraph service of the world. The marchioness, the mother of the young Earl of Gifford, is an Italian by birth, though her mother was a Scotch woman. She was a Miss Candida Bartolucci, and many years her husband's junior, is still a very handsome woman, of the Juno type of beauty, tall, well developed, and richly colored, with a wealth of black hair, a magnificent contralto voice, and a stately manner and bearing. She is one of the few women who have tried their skill as an engineer, and accompanied the feat of driving the first locomotive across the great Firth of Forth bridge.

Yester, which will on the death of the aged marquis become the property and chief home of young Lord Gifford, is a wonderful old place, indeed, was already occupied by King Alexander III. of Scotland, in 1263, visited Sir Hugh de Gifford in his Castle of Yester, to take counsel with him how to overthrow the Norwegian invader. This historic interview bore fruit, in the disaster which overtook the Norwegian King Hakon and his army, and Sir Walter Scott has immortalized the interview between Alexander III. and Sir Hugh de Gifford in Yester Castle, in his poem "Marmion." This Sir Hugh, from whom Lord Gifford is descended, was celebrated as a necromancer, and is asserted to have created with one stroke of his magic wand, the so-called "Goblin Hall," the remainder of the castle, which, though into ivy-mantled ruin, still exists; a huge stone-vaulted and roomy chamber, with an immense fireplace at the further end, and a well of unimpaired depth in one corner of the chamber, a portion of which is apparently hewn out of the living rock. Sir Hugh, whom Sir Walter Scott describes in "Marmion" as the dreaded warlock of Gifford, is believed to have placed a spell upon it, to the effect that any man who dared to interfere with its symmetry in any way, should come to a violent end. No one ever dared to tamper with it, until the older brother of the present marquis ventured to do so. In the lifetime of his father, and while still known as the Earl of Gifford, he expressed his ridicule for the superstition, and cleared away a number of its steps which led down to the water. Within twelve months afterwards he met with his death in endeavoring to save the life of a laboring man who was about to be crushed by a tree which he was felling in the vicinity of the castle. The man escaped, but the tree killed Lord Gifford.

Another superstition of Yester pertains to one of those ancestral "lucks" which are occasionally to be found in the oldest families of Europe, like the glass goblet sung by Longfellow as "The Luck of Eden Hall," the "Nightingale cup" of the lords of Manchester, and the Lee Penny of the Lockharts, which Sir Walter Scott made the theme of one of his most popular novels, namely, "The Talsman." The Yester Luck is known as "The Colston Pear."

There were many alliances between the Giffords and the Hays, and when the necromancer, Sir Hugh's, granddaughter, Mrs. Hay, married George Brown of Colstoun, her grandfather plucked a pear from his orchard at Yester, and gave it to the young couple, with the assurance that as long as it was kept intact their descendants would prosper. In Charles I.'s reign, one of the women of Colstoun bit a piece out of the pear, with the result that her family got into terrible litigation, and had to sell all the best farms of the estate in order to pay the law expenses. The pear is now entirely fossilized, but, as related by Sir Walter Scott, who in his "Diary" describes having seen and handled the talisman at Dalhousie Castle in 1829, it still shows the marks of the lady's teeth.

IMPROVED IRELAND.

Perhaps the most notable improvement seen by the writer was in the dwellings of the farm laborers. In bygone days this class of the population was housed in miserable wood cabins, the like of which were to be found as human habitations nowhere in the civilized world. Today the farm laborer is housed in a well-built, comfortable cottage, a wise and lord of an acre of land on which to raise the vegetables needed for his own table, with some left over for sale. For this cottage and land, he pays to the urban of the district council a small sum in American money, and of these cheery-looking cottages throughout the country was a most pleasing feature of the landscape.

And if the condition of the farm laborer has improved, that of the farmer himself has been bettered also. In fact, the Irish farmer, as I saw him, was the most contented and independent man. The only grievance he had was the present dearth of labor. There is no doubt, however, as an stating what I heard from men on the spot, but that the land purchase act has been a great boon to the Irish farmer. Incidentally, it has done much to statesmanlike piece of legislation so far as Ireland's relation to England is concerned. With the settlement of this problem of land ownership Irish discontent is no longer so keen or so pressing as in the past. The Irish farmer has become a conservative. The land which guaranteed him the possession of his farm (after a certain number of years' purchase), he is no longer, as formerly, "agin the Government."—Boston Transcript.

ANGLICAN PRIMATE DISCUSSES SCIENCE AND RELIGION

Archbishop of York Addresses British Scientists—Sir Oliver Lodge on a Congenial Theme—The Soul of the Race.

On Sept. 4, the members of the British Association, many of them wearing their Academic gowns and hoods, together with the lord mayor, the mace bearer, and other civic dignitaries, walked in procession through the streets of the Parish Church, Sheffield, Eng., where the Gamaliels' science sat at the feet of the youthful Archbishop of York, Dr. Cosmo Gordon Lang.

The primate read a thoughtful and carefully phrased sermon, based on the words: "Wisdom in all ages entering into the holy souls maketh them friends of God." His subject was the friendship of religion and science. "Of late years," he said, "there has been a striking change in the relations between science and religion, and to-day it is only the camp followers on both sides who are apt to break out. The best men in science and religion are conscious of the need for a truce of God, in order that they may think out their positions more clearly and understand the position of those who differ from them with more sympathy. Science has become aware of its limitations. It no longer declares there is nothing outside its own boundaries. It is more impressed with the mystery that still enfold the life of the human spirit. A true Agnosticism, recognizing the limits of scientific knowledge, has taken the place of a false Agnosticism declaring that outside its limits nothing can be known."

"Moreover, religion has learned to reconsider its own conceptions of God in accordance with a conception that belongs to a far and more primitive religion than ours. God is dwelling in this world over all, and in all religions, and theology proclaims that He, and no mere blind energy, is the worker, and we wait for science to tell the way in which He works. Thus there is the chance of a true friendship between religion and science."

The True Unity. "The cause of the old quarrel was a desire for uniformity; the reconciliation is through the desire for union. The domains of science and faith are distinct. 'Woe to him who lets them trespass upon one another,' said Pas-ed to children than to adults. In childhood each individual passes rapidly through the history of the race. Whatever is suited to the childhood of the world is suited to individual childhood. You have not to argue children into a belief in God. It is there already. In like manner the Old Testament starts with God and feels on familiar terms with deity. Childish views are no term of reproach. Children are nearer to the kingdom of heaven than we are.

"In this age of science objective truth is the end and aim, but no formula can cover the whole truth. There is a truth of science and a truth of literature. They are parts of a large whole, and if there is to be a choice between them the advantage lies with literature. A great drama or a great poem may be a world of emotion in as what is true in scientific textbooks is what must pass out of date. Only the great landmarks remain. Poetry is the only thing every age will recognize. The greatest test your attitude to the ancients' science on one hand, with your attitude to their art and drama on the other. The one is curious; the other eternal. Beauty is how things are from the heart's spring. It is the apotheosis of truth. Materialistic, scepticism emphasizes only one side of things. Its assertions may be true. Its denials are often absurd. There may be a world of emotion in a thing capable of a simple physical explanation. The materialist may say to the lover of music:

"Why are you so moved listening to Wagner's 'Die Meistersinger'? You are only listening to horseshair scraping upon catgut."

The Soul of the Race. "The soul of music," Sir Oliver continued, "is the human soul. Imagine a dog in a picture gallery. He does not even recognize a portrait of his master. We are all of us in somewhat the same predicament in the universe. We see a few things, but are interested in a few things, but to an infinitude of things we are blind and deaf. The moon is a mass of inert volcanic rocks, without atmosphere, without light, and yet what has the moon been to poets? There is a soul in the moon, the things which makes clear the emotion aroused by music."

Human feelings are more ancient than any knowledge. Such a feeling may be worshipped, and it is in this spirit that the Old Testament must be interpreted and understood, for it is in this spirit that it was written. Inspiration is a reality, though its definition is vague. To inspire, a thing must be permeated with deity. If we had other senses the universe would look quite different. Our senses tell us of matter; if we had other senses they might tell us of ether, and ether would be true. To deny is more dangerous than to assert, and requires more knowledge. An enthusiastic assertion has almost always a mustard seed of truth in it. We have in the Old Testament the record of the development of the soul of a people, of the soul of the human race. In the mouths of the prophets it rose to a height no other nation can parallel. Imagine posterity 3,000 years hence reading our history, our newspapers, even our religious newspapers. They may prefer the history of the early Hebrews.

The essence of sin," Sir Oliver said in conclusion, "is error in the sight of knowledge. Revelation is as rapid as the race can receive it. If we are to approach it must be through some incarnation, through the saints and pinacles of the race. There is no problem of sin; it is a definite reality. There is a problem of evil, and that is a problem of theology. Christ is of our race, and has no theological subtleties rob us of that encouragement."

Let us pray," said the vicar, and he proceeded to pronounce the benediction, and while he did so the cameras clicked again. Then someone started the photography, and, as a last chance, the front of the lady, who had been sitting perfectly still, generally, with head bowed down, but now she pulled the brim of her hat over her face.

The procession reformed and wended its way back to the vicarage.

AMAZING SERVICE IN OLD LAND

An Inhibited Vicar Holds It in the Open Air.

Probably no more amazing spectacle has been witnessed in England since the Restoration period than that which was enacted at Sutton, Chney, England, on the 28th of August.

All roads in South Leicestershire and North Warwickshire seemed to lead to Sutton Cheney, shoemakers, caton hostlers, Barrow shoemakers, Leicester artisans, factory lasses and lads, agricultural laborers, all dressed in Sunday best, made for the parish of which Rev. E. C. Hudson is still vicar. He had been inhibited from preaching in the church because he had married a second time while his first wife—who deserted him for another man—was still living. Most people went on cycles, but there were also many traps and a few motor cars. Some of the young women present carried Prayer Books, for use at the announced "service." Scores of cameras were to be seen in use, one enterprising operator propping himself up in a tree. The couple of houses which serve the village did "roaring" trade during the prohibited hours of licensing act, for the customers were "bona fide travellers."

The parish church bell chimed for 11 a. m. service, and a small congregation trooped in for the morning prayers. The interest of the 3,000 stranger was not there, however, but in the appearance of Mr. Hudson, and particularly, perhaps, of the French lady, who, it is thought, will join him today, "if the state of her health permits." The promised bands of music did not come. When from the vicarage there emerged the vicar, his son, and the second Mrs. Hudson, there was some clapping of hands. Mr. Hudson again wore cassock, college cap, and gold metal on the London Orphan Asylum, where in his day he was top boy. The lady, a slim person, in large hat trimmed with roses and leaves, and wearing also a long, flowing, light-colored gown, and a Past the west, and into the church, and into the main road, the procession moved, and among the interested spectators was a legal gentleman understood to have an official position in the consistory court proceedings. But instead of turning into the path leading adjoining the churchyard, which was the scene of the previous Sunday's proceedings, the procession moved on through the village. The owner of the field on which the vicarage stood, the publican came to the aid of the demonstrators and offered his meadow. In the middle were two chairs. On one sat the lady; the other the vicar. He commented the proceedings by giving out the hymn, and the paper of Jesus's name, which the congregation sang with gusto. This was followed with "New every morning is the love." Next Mr. Hudson read a weekly notice, which was a notice of the marriage of our first parents, and on this he delivered a short address—listened to without interruption and with the most audible signs of approval. What he said was to the effect that liberty on the part of husband or wife when incompatibility of temperament has made the union no longer congenial to one or the other, and a criticism of the old view that the English and Roman Churches relating to the dissolubility of marriage. He read from Milton's "Treatise on Divorce," and later from an essay of Martin Bucer on the same subject.

"Let us pray," said the vicar, and he proceeded to pronounce the benediction, and while he did so the cameras clicked again. Then someone started the photography, and, as a last chance, the front of the lady, who had been sitting perfectly still, generally, with head bowed down, but now she pulled the brim of her hat over her face.

The procession reformed and wended its way back to the vicarage.

"I Honestly Believe 'Fruit-a-tives'"

The Greatest Cure for Rheumatism in the World"

Knowlton, Que., Oct. 12, 1909.
"For many years, I suffered from severe Rheumatism, and the attacks were very distressing and prevented me from doing my ordinary work. I tried many remedies and physicians' treatments, but nothing seemed to do me much good, and I was becoming very anxious for fear I would become a permanent cripple from the disease. I tried 'Fruit-a-tives' and this medicine has entirely cured me and I honestly believe it is the greatest Rheumatism cure in the world."
E. E. MILLS.

Such a statement could not be bought from a man like Mr. Mills. He thinks too much of his good name, to sell it or sign it to an untruth. Mr. Mills tried "Fruit-a-tives" after all other treatment failed—and "Fruit-a-tives" cured him of Rheumatism. In the goodness of his heart, he wrote the above letter in order that sufferers in all parts of Canada would know that there is one remedy that actually does cure Rheumatism. This testimonial was entirely unsolicited on our part. We did not know that Mr. Mills was taking "Fruit-a-tives" until we received the above letter. It is a case like Mr. Mills' that proves the marvellous powers of "Fruit-a-tives" in arresting and curing disease. It may be stated, without fear of contradiction, that "Fruit-a-tives" will positively cure Rheumatism when properly used.

"Fruit-a-tives" is the only medicine in the world made of fruit juices and is the greatest Rheumatism cure known to modern science. 50c a box, 6 for $2.50, or trial box, 25c. Sold by all dealers or sent, postpaid, on receipt of price by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

$12,000,000 IN PEANUTS

Raised in United States Every Year—Nothing Small About the Peanut Except Its Size.

There is nothing small about the peanut except its size. Production and consumption of the "goober" are now reckoned in millions of dollars and it is being put to many uses as a food product.

Peanuts now form an important ingredient in the vegetarian "meats," which are much more widely consumed than most of the meats. Some of these "meats" by the way, are made to imitate breaded lamb chops, with sticks of macaroni for bones. Peanuts are employed largely in the confectionery trade and enter into the composition of many fancy cakes, such as macaroons, as a substitute for almonds. Peanut butter, likewise much affected by the ton and put in neat packages, is greatly esteemed for automobile lunches.

Now that the pestiferous boll weevil is ruining the cotton over such wide areas in the south many planters are turning their attention to peanuts as a money crop. Although $12,000,000 worth of "goobers" was raised in the United States last year, the supply is not nearly equal to the demand, a condition sufficiently proved by the fact that we are importing great quantities of peanut oil from Europe. Most persons think of peanuts as they appear on fruit stands or in the little wagons of vendors, but as a matter of fact they are disposed of in a great variety of ways and for many other purposes. Thousands of bushels are shelled for use in the manufacture of confections and food products, the demand for which is constantly increasing. Great quantities are employed for making peanut candies and "brittle," as well as in combination with popcorn and puffed rice as "blanche" peas.

Peanut butter is put up in bottles or tins containing any quantity from a quarter of a pound to five pounds. It is very popular for camping, and yachting supplies. For making it the peas are first shelled and then roasted moderately, after which they are fanned and screened to remove the thin skin and germs. The next process consists in grinding them to a pulp by machinery. As the pulp comes from the grinder it is fed through a thin tube into the bottles or tins and tightly sealed.

With a little experience and the aid of a small meat grinder anybody can make good peanut butter for home use.

Peanuts give an average yield of 34 bushels to the acre, but it is believed by Government experts that the output can be increased to 50 or even 60 bushels by selecting superior seed from season to season. There are records of yields of 160 bushels of small podded peanuts to the acre, with two tons of forage, which latter alone will pay the cost of production.—Baltimore Sun.

Are Stranded in Europe

Many Americans Unable to Get Return Steamship Tickets Owing to the Rush—Rich People Take the Steerage.

The ordinary atmosphere of a London shipping office is of calm and aristocratic seclusion. Clustered close to the clubland of Pall Mall, these abodes of peace seem to have assimilated something of the dignity of the bishops of the Athenaeum and the statements of the Carlton and the Reform, but in the last few weeks they have lost their calm.

The spacious offices of Oceanic House, where the American, the White Star, the Atlantic Transport and other lines have their homes, are suggestive of bargain day at a drygoods store. It is just the same at the offices of the Cunard, the Hamburg-American, the Canadian Pacific, the North German Lloyd and every other line that carries passengers from Europe to America.

Telephone bells ring every minute, telegraph and messenger boys are in and out in a constant stream and a veritable bread line of would-be customers stands along the mahogany counters from the morning till the afternoon until they are closed. "Abandon hope all ye that enter here" might be inscribed above the portals.

Now and again someone departs with triumph gleaming in his eye, but for the most part, despair or resignation, according to their temperaments, is painted on the countenances of the unfortunate travellers who cannot go home. That is the trouble. In London, Paris and half a dozen other European centres there are thousands of Americans who can't go home.

Every day at least a couple of passenger boats are leaving Europe for America packed to the limit, but they do not suffice. Do they could do so round trip in three days they would be as busy for the next month as the London busses in the rush hours.

"We have no room here," said the end of September, and very little in October," said a clerk in the Cunard office.

Here, as in other offices, you hear of the same people coming every day and twice a day, in the hope of finding that someone has given up a berth at the last moment. Every year there is a rush at the end of the holiday season, but it never has been like this year.

"I am told there has been no German heard in Oberammergau this summer," said a clerk in one of the German offices, all the United States seems to have moved to Europe; and they expect to get back in one month, when it has taken three months of full steamers to bring them over."

Next door a story was told of a gentleman who for an hour tried to persuade the clerk to take a first-class fare and book his as a stoker. A certain day and this was the one steamer that would do it. There was no steamer, every officer's room was let, and he had to wait to be a stoker; but he had to wait.

In another office there was a certain amount of depreciation of the idea that people would not get berths.

"Why," said the clerk with much pride, "we have two vacancies for Sept. 16."

He confessed they had only just been given up on account of sickness, but boasted that last week, on only a few days notice, he had got a man and his wife moved, who were very anxious to get home by a certain date. Of course they could not go together. The wife got a second-class berth in one steamer, and the husband was able to follow, third-class, in the next.

Some of the British boats are taking as many as a hundred first and second class passengers in the steerage. The Lusitania and Mauretania, absolutely full these days, of course, have been practically full since January.

"I try to persuade ladies not to go third class"—epithetism for steerage—said one agent. "I tell them to wait and that I'll get them over; but, if they insist on going I don't lose them. Some of them, school teachers, say they just have to go, and can't wait—but I don't like to see them go third class."

"I try to persuade ladies not to go third class," said one clerk.

Then he explained that it was impossible to do any correspondence.

While you are writing a letter half a dozen people have to be attended to, and they don't go away easily; he went on. "Some of them are nice and good natured, but many get very angry. They seem to think that we say there is no room just to annoy them. However, we close the doors at 5:30 p. m. and then get to work, often remaining till 10 or 11."

In the North German Lloyd office, which has every berth booked till the end of October. The idea of hiring steamers from other lines for the rush season does not seem to have occurred to any of the transatlantic lines. "But they are busy with their eastern traffic," or "they would be too slow," were two of the objections raised to the suggestion. In the meanwhile anyway the stranded Americans have to get home, and in their own good time the transatlantic lines will get them there.

"People should book their return passage as soon as they can," said one clerk. "They often come in here and give up their return passages, and if the dates we can offer them at the time do not just suit them they say they'll leave it open. When they come around and want to go home in a hurry and find they have to wait two or three weeks?"

In an excursion around the shipping office it was said that in the last few years transatlantic passenger trade had developed notably in two directions. In the first place a great many more Europeans are visiting America than used to. More and more English people in particular are beginning to go across in the early spring and return for the summer. Secondly a younger lot of Americans are coming to Europe. More people are bringing quite young children, school boys and girls, and more young men and women are coming independently.

SERMON FROM SHAKESPEARE

Be great in act, as you have been in thought.—King John, Act V., Sc. 1.

The world is full of men who have "nothing done but great things undone." Imagination creates great poems, makes eloquent speeches, paints magnificent pictures, invents splendid instruments. Potential poets, orators, artists and inventors abound. Here and there a Shakespeare, or a Milton, a Raphael or a Titian, a Burke or a Webster or a Watt or an Edison, raises his head out of a crowd of dreamers and takes his place among the illustrious men of action.

Not infrequently some youth is described as a promising lad, a young genius. He is remarkably precocious in thought, far in advance of his years. When he reaches maturity his friends are amazed to find that some comrade of whom nothing was expected has passed him in the race for distinction. He may have had breadth of mind, predominant imagination; the other may have had narrowness of soul, but he was developed on the side of will, which so far as this practical world is concerned is infinitely better than imagination. The greatest men are those in whom penetrating imagination and strength of will are equally combined.

Shakespeare is supreme in literature. There is the clearest evidence that his dramas are not the product of mere imaginative genius. They are more largely the product of his genius for work. His series of eight historical dramas is, in many ways, his greatest achievement. Wherein lies his greatness? In the profound grasp of social and political questions, in an intimate knowledge of the facts and characters of each historical period. He conceived a great series of dramas, his imagination bodied them forth, and he at once went to work to prepare himself to give them tangible form. The very firstlings of his heart were the firstlings of his hand. He studied the history of his country; he reconstructed the characters of bygone ages; he made use of any historical studies he found at hand. Shakespeare's plays are all evidence that he was great in act as he was in thought. Milton for many years had been dreaming of producing a great epic. Opportunity was lacking, but when the fitting moment arrived, he acted, and produced an immortal poem. Epics and dramas have been said to be being dreamt out daily; the man of action is required to give them form.

Thousands have gazed upon noble statues, sublime paintings, and listened to inspiring music and have been impelled to create, in their imaginations, statues, paintings and music. But they fail to put their thoughts into action. Doubtless some of these dreamers are the imaginative equals of the great poets, painters and musicians under whose influence they have come, but they lack the patient industry, the power of taking indolence, the determination not to be overcome. In every great artist's career there have been times when he has felt that he could never approximate his ideal. If he were less than the greatest he allowed the difficulties to conquer him. If he were of the stuff that heroes and masters are made of, he braced himself and with renewed energy faced his difficulties and usually won.

Every great invention is an evidence that some man was as great in act as he was in thought. From the beginning of the nineteenth century occasional dreamers projected their ideas, sound might be carried to a distance over a wire and reproduced. Alexander Graham Bell, a Scotch lad, had his imagination stirred by this thought. He thought of the deaf and dumb, he longed to be able to give them a hearing. He was toiled to give material shape to his dream. It took years of experimenting, study and privation, but continuous action combined with buoyant imagination and faith in himself brought success. A thousand examples might be given from the modern world to prove that it is only by being as great in act as in thought that anything worth while is achieved. The failures are for the most part those who dream, but did not act. King Richard II. was a dreamer with a lofty conception of kingship, but he never got farther than the conception. Henry V. had an equally lofty ideal, but with him thought and action went hand in hand.

The greatness of the Elizabethan age lies in the fact that it was a time of action. England conceived it possible to take first place among the nations, her seamen promptly sailed forth to explore the ends of the earth. Often some individual is pointed out as a pronounced failure. He had great promise, but he lacked the energy to act. Many a tramp on the wayside has had the dreams of a Shakespeare or Wordsworth. It is often the case that men who can rise to the most sublime heights may, under other circumstances, sink to the lowest depths. It is action that saves. When the wheels of industry are whirling and the rattle of the reaper is heard in the fields, there is the most sublime heights; when the factories are silent and the fields uncultivated, there is sorrow. The greatness of nations and individuals can be measured by the action they display in working out their thoughts.

THE STORY OF A VILLAGE FOOL

In the Highlands—Quaint Characteristics of "Jimmy English."

Writing in T. P.'s Weekly, Ian Lindsay says:

A recent article in your exceedingly fine weekly on "Highland Fools" is reminiscent of McLeod's incomparable "Reminiscences of a Highland Parish," and also brings to my mind happy recollections of another delightful Highland fool who went by the name of Jimmy English (Gaelic, "Sheunans Galla"). He was the most welcome personality at all local gatherings, whether at tea-light or the orgaining of a minister. He never took any active part in purely business meetings, but he rarely missed them, and nothing escaped him. He could supply weeks ahead the minutest details of what transpired. He supplied the want of a newspaper in a sparsely populated and outlandish district. Addition and subtraction were matters in which he was no fool, and as for dates (figures) his memory was infallible. He had a date for everything, and could supply one with the date of Everything of note which had transpired in the parish since he first knew it. Running errands was a great delight. He was at the beck and call of everyone, but knew no master. He was free to go in and out of every house in the district, and not one but had a spare bed for Jimmy whenever he chose to claim it. In the village Jimmy was the first to greet him on the pier—ready to seize the luggage and trundle it to its destination in a wheelbarrow (later in life he attained the dignity of a donkey cart). Jimmy preferred the wheelbarrow—the donkey was stubborn and his exertion seemingly greater. His first words of greeting were always the same: "When are you going away?" so eager was he to be of further service. Weddings and funerals he gloried in, chiefly because of the biscuit and cheese and glass of whiskey which came, and I believe still, wind up such occasions. Unfortunately, Jimmy was too fond of the "water of life"; indeed, my first recollection of Jimmy is to have seen a by no means sober neighbor bringing him home in a wheelbarrow from the local hotel. The duty of taking round wedding invitations and funeral intimations on all occasions was allotted to Jimmy, and in a good season he earned a goodly number of coppers, but he never made a sound investment, because he would persist

In quenching his thirst at the tap-room instead of at the village pump. His charge for all errands, irrespective of distance traversed, was always the same—twopenny. Twopenny in his pocket of heaven were his favorite topics of conversation, and where new preachers were concerned he was no mean critic. A regular churchgoer, sleet, hail and snow were no obstacles to his determination to appear at church. (One day and once only did poor Jimmy seriously err, and that was when he placed a penny in the collection plate, and helped himself to half a crown—not a bad transaction for a fool.) When brought home to him he was truly penitent and never did it again, although his opportunities were many. Jimmy is now gone! He was a loved and loving fool.

LADY ERSKINE'S SAD FATE

Found Dead on the Mountainside in Scotland—The Cause a Mystery—A Broken-Off Engagement.

The discovery on the mountainside at Aviemore, Inverness, of the body of Lady Marjorie Erskine, second daughter of the Earl of Buchan, under circumstances of a distressing nature, occurred on Sept. 3. A watchman employed in connection with the golf course at Aviemore was on that night engaged in searching for white heather, and was returning home at the back of the Craigmochaile Loch when he saw the partly decomposed body of a woman lying on the ground. On examination a large sum of money in Bank of England notes and gold was found on the body, in addition to some papers. Among the documents was a receipted bill bearing the name of a Kingussie hotel, and from this it was surmised that the unfortunate woman was Lady Marjorie Erskine, whose whereabouts had been unknown for some time to her friends.

Lady Marjorie and her maid, it was ascertained, arrived at Kingussie on July 20, and took apartments at a local hotel for the night. On the following day she paid her bill, the receipt for which was found on the remains, and left for Aviemore. Before she departed she requested the hotel proprietor to keep any letters that might come addressed to her, as she intended to motor past Kingussie in a few days. Her maid remained at Kingussie a day longer than her mistress, and then proceeded to Perth.

A considerable amount of luggage, labelled "Lady M. Erskine," was left in the cloak room at Kingussie station and still remains there, and some luggage was also left at the Aviemore station. The circumstances connected with the discovery of the body are being investigated by the Inverness-shire police. There is no suspicion of foul play, and it is stated that the lady's death was caused by exposure. It is supposed that Lady Marjorie Erskine, who was 20 years of age, climbed the rugged mountain path at Aviemore for the purpose of admiring the scenery.

Lord Cardross arrived at Aviemore, and identified the remains as those of his sister, Lady Marjorie Gladys Stuart Erskine. The Inverness police, who have charge of the investigations, as there is only a village constable at Aviemore, hold the opinion that death was nearly caused by an accident. They are under the impression that the lady's ankle is broken, and that she fell on a part of the mountain that is very little traversed, and lay unable to move until death ensued. The weather in early August was wild and stormy, and she could not long have survived her desperate position. Her jewelry, some of which was of great value, was untouched. The body was lying deep and almost hidden in the heather.

A post-mortem examination of the remains was made by Dr. Miller on the spot, and he pronounced death to be due to exposure and privation. The body was sent to Uphall Parish Church, Inverness, for interment. It is stated that there was a mark of an injury on one of the ankles. The body was found lying face downwards, and the heather near it had been pulled about, as though she had been trying to crawl or drag herself away. She evidently left Aviemore on a short expedition, taking one of the lesser known paths. The anxiety of her family at her mysterious disappearance was only terminated by the lamentable news concerning the discovery.

Lady Marjorie left London with her maid as long ago as the end of July. No communication was received from her, and Lady Buchan became alarmed and proceeded north. The Earl of Buchan was travelling on the continent at the time of his daughter's departure for Scotland.

Lady Marjorie Erskine was a few years ago a probationer nurse at the Children's Hospital in Great Ormond street, and was attached to the Clarence ward in that institution. It is some inquiries as to whether she took from, and whether a regular supply could be had, and bought the lot. That was the beginning of modern chewing gum.

Practically all the crude chicle gum is shipped to Canada where it is refined in Toronto before being sent to the factories in the United States. The reason for this is that there is a high ad valorem duty on chicle, and as it is worth about 40 cents a pound, and loses 25 per cent of its weight in refining, the chicle companies must about $250,000 a year by refining it before shipment.—Health Culture.

Chewing gum has been called the mystery of confectionery, for, of all the millions of chewers, there are very few who have any idea of what it really is they are masticating. Chewing gum is nothing but chicle, mixed with sugar and flavoring; and chicle is the gum of a tree that grows plentifully in Mexico and Central America and that of recent years has been cultivated in Yucatan, where the American Chicle Company, commonly known as the chewing gum trust, owns several million acres of it.

The chicle tree is not unlike the India rubber tree, and the gum was first shipped to America by men who believed that in it they had a perfect substitute for rubber. In this, however, they were mistaken, as it was found that the chicle gum was insoluble in water, and that it contained acid or alkali, spirit of ether, been found that will dissolve it. It can be melted, yes, but dissolved, no. The consequence was that the first shipments of chicle gum lay unsold and unsalable on the pier of the docks in Brooklyn. It was a reddish, rubbery-looking substance, and at first aroused no little curiosity, but nobody was able to use it for any practical purpose, so there it lay for months.

One day a New Yorker happened to notice it. He picked up a piece and put it into his mouth and began chewing it. Its peculiar consistency struck him, and it occurred to him that if the stuff were only flavored it would make a nice chewing gum. Its insolvency being in its favor for this purpose. He experimented with some more of it, refined it and found that it would be easy to impregnate it with flavoring and sugar. He made some inquiries as to whether a regular supply could be had, and bought the lot. That was the beginning of modern chewing gum.

THE LARDER OF THE DEEP

A PLEA FOR FISH-EATING

Sir James Crichton Brown on Food and Fish Supply—Why More Fish Should Be Eaten—Marine Stock Farms.

The food value of fish was discussed recently by Sir James Crichton-Brown in his presidential address before the Sanitary Inspectors' Association at Fishmongers' Hall, London, England. The 300 delegates present were welcomed by Mr. Bryan Durand, in behalf of the Fishmongers' Company. Taking as his subject "Food and Fish Supply," Sir James Crichton-Brown said that during last year at Billingsgate out of 248,955 tons of fish delivered, 946 tons were seized by the officials of the Fishmongers' Company as unsound and unfit for human consumption, and much illness, and, perhaps, mortality, was thereby prevented. The inspectors of the company stood between the metropolitan and a large incursion of sickness.

"Larder of the Deep." Away from our coastal towns, Sir James continued, fish had been hitherto regarded too much as an accessory, or little as a staple article of diet. The traces on the coasts of Northern Europe and Asia nourished themselves on fish almost exclusively, but the Latin and Saxon races consumed a relatively small amount of it, and the people of this fish-bearing island had not yet availed themselves as fully as they might of the contents of the larder of the deep.

At one time fish had an universal vogue in England, the great majority of the people being in the habit of using fish diet one or two days a week, and of confining themselves to it in Lent. In the reign of Henry III. the price of soles was limited to 3d a dozen, turbot to 6d, the best pickled herrings 2s a penny, and oysters 2d per gallon. Among the affluent classes of the country fish still held its own, and figured regularly as a breakfast and dinner dish, and indeed by all classes fish was still habitually or occasionally consumed; but in recent years, notwithstanding increased facilities of distribution, the consumption of fresh fish, although progressive, has not kept pace with the increase of population.

The artisans in the large towns recognized the merits of fish, but bought chiefly the dried and salted kinds. Whoever could bring within their reach an increased supply of cheap food of a nourishing kind was doing a great hygienic work, and that was what the Fishmongers' Company was attempting. Fish was from a physiological point of view the next best thing to meat.

Mr. John Burns said some time ago that some trifling reduction in rates would enable the workman to have a kipper to his tea. He (the speaker) sincerely wished that every workman could have that hors d'oeuvre with his evening meal.

Fashions in Fish. It was amusing to reflect that with so many of our people short of food, enormous quantities of good, wholesome, nourishing fish had year by year been thrown back into the sea or converted into manure, because they would not pay to bring them to market. Sanitary inspectors would be doing a public service if they could persuade some of the poorest, whose food was at present totally inadequate, occasionally to substitute a little fish for the continuous round of bread, dripping and tea.

One encouraging fact in connection with the fish food question was the growth of the fried fish shops in our midst. The resort to these shops in our manufacturing towns was, in part, an indication of the lower standard of household comfort which the distinction of girls for domestic service involved, and they might be overdone; but still they did supply great numbers of our poorer people with wholesome and acceptable meals. Fried fish was, from the nutritive point of view, one of the best forms in which fish could be presented.

Crusade Against Consumption. He would like to raise the plane of living of our poorer classes, by an abundant supply of cheap fish, might prove a successful auxiliary in the crusade against tuberculosis which was now being actively renewed. The power of resistance to the disease was an important factor in its prevention, and that power of resistance was lowered by poverty in its many phases, conspicuously by poverty in food, and especially by nitrogen starvation, as it is called, or an insufficiency of protein in the nutrient supplied. The comparative immunity of the Jews from tuberculosis must be attributed, perhaps, to their adherence to ethnic qualities, and to several special features in their habits of life; but the large extent to which fish entered into their dietary, and especially into that of the children, must be noted in this connection.

In conclusion, Sir James said that the assistance of science must be invoked in the fishing industry. We had hitherto, as it were, lived on the wild life of the forest, and its rich and varied natural products were not secured as abundant supplies, but the time would surely come when on sea, as we had done on land long ago, we should exchange the chase in large measure for the ranch, and the fold, when we should have marine stock farms bordering all our coasts, and should pride ourselves on our prize turbot and pedigree cod. (Laughter.)

FORBES-ROBERTSON ON THE DRAMA

Returning to America to Resume Success of Last Season—English and American Contrasts.

London Daily News: As long as America confined its raids upon the art of Europe to old masters and German and Italian opera singers, England was more or less indifferent, but since she has begun to annex our best actors a growing feeling of dissatisfaction has taken possession of us. A loan we did not mind, but to have to cede the freehold in our stars was vexing. And it was with the wild idea of disputing the proprietary right the States seem to be establishing over Mr. Forbes-Robertson, that a member of the Daily News staff recently went down to Baskley Heath. He found the great actor in the dainty white Manor House of his sister-in-law, Mrs. Maxine Elliott, very eager and chafing at the loss of his long holiday, the fine asetic face a little whiter than when London knew it, but the gesture just as youthful and full of fire, the tender vibrant voice unbroken.

"When are you coming back to us?" asked our representative, opening with a broadside.

Mr. Robertson smiled and declined to commit himself. He was booked in America up to May with "The Passing of the Third Floor Back," and to start in London with a new drama was out of the question. Besides, he would want a little rest at home. Perhaps at some future time, when his American repertoire was fresh food for Londoners, perhaps then he would have a season here.

"That is a very desperate promise, Mr. Robertson. What would you? America asks for me with a much louder voice. Everyone where I went on my last tour I had to stop longer than I intended, and in New York, where I was down for one month, I stayed seven. And I have not nearly covered the States. This time my brother Ian is taking out a duplicate company to cover the smaller towns and the one-night territory, while I run from Toronto to New York and Brooklyn, and thence to Philadelphia, Washington and Baltimore. There will be sufficient of America untouched to last the term of my natural life. And then you ask me to come back to England?"

Americans, he added, went much more to the theatre than we do here. With them it is a habit, and theatres are larger. When Mr. Robertson closed the Alexandra Theatre for two days at the time of King Edward's death (the Alexandra, by the way, was the only theatre closed in America), he returned $5,000 of ticket money.

"Do you find it easy to play in such vast halls?"

"Well," answered Mr. Robertson, "the acoustics of American theatres are admirable. Maxine Elliott's theatre in New York is on a smaller scale—about as large as the St. James, and excellently appointed."

"What do you think of the state of drama in America?"

"Oh, the native-born drama grows by leaps and bounds. Progress in the last few years has been quite extraordinary. There is Eugene Walters' 'Paid in Full,' there is Winchell Smith's 'Fortune Hunter' (with by the way, a part just made for Cyril Maude), there is Augustus Thomas' 'Way Down East,' there is Percy McKay, (you know his 'Great Divide'), and, lastly, and the most promising of all, there is young Sheldon, the author of 'The Nigger,' quite a boy, and destined, I am sure, to make a great name for himself."

Our representative objected that American plays produced over here had not, as a rule, been so good. Mr. Robertson would not say that the public taste was more for crude sentimentality out there than here, and certainly the musical comedy did not so pre-eminently in the States as it did in England. In acting, too, America stands high.

THE ROYAL TRAIN

Twelve Cars Needed to Take King George and His Family to Scotland.

The special train in which King George, Queen Mary and their children journeyed from London to Balmoral Castle, Queen Victoria's favorite country place, is reputed to have been the heaviest and longest that ever has left London. It contained twelve cars, weighed 375 tons and was 692 feet long.

The train was made up of two baggage cars, the King's private car, originally built for King Edward; a new private boudoir car for the Queen, Queen Alexandra's boudoir car, two private cars for the Princess Mary, and her attendants, and the royal equeries, and four cars for the other servants and the railroad officials. The train was pulled by two locomotives.

The Queen's new boudoir car is the very latest thing in luxurious English railroad construction. All the rooms are in white enamel, blue being the predominant color, but the effect is lightened with brackets and a soft shade of pink to tone the electric lights. The bedroom is draped with soft pink, while the dressing room is decorated in similar style and contains Italian satinwood furniture.

At the end of the car is an observation platform. The attendants' quarters are fitted with electric plugs for connecting to heaters for providing hot and coffee. The Queen's car and that of the King are crisscrossed together, enabling anyone to pass from one end of the train to the other.

All the cars of the royal train are of the same dimensions. Each car is 61 feet long and 10 feet wide.

When the royal family travels the railroad officials are busy for weeks in advance arranging for the safety of the travellers. Despite the length of the journey from London to Balmoral, 583 miles, the royal train was passed towers, but by hand signals, an army of section-hands being stationed along the road so that throughout the journey the train passed through a lane of green lamps held by railroad officials.

The Dublin mail train was used as a pilot train for the royal special and no other trains were allowed to enter the line between the Irish mail and the royal train. At Crewe and Carlisle, where the royal train stopped for inspection, etc., all traffic was stopped so that the royal sleepers should not be disturbed.

WHAT THE EYE TELLS AN OPTICIAN

Diseases That Can Be Detected by the Ophthalmoscope.

George Eliot wrote "a suppressed resolve will betray itself in the eyes." Mr. G. E. Ellis, "father of the ophthalmoscope," informed a representative of the Morning Leader, that suppressed disease is also visible in the eyes to those who know how to look. The brain is connected with tobacco. There is a mark in the eye that he can distinguish at once, and the effect of alcohol is visible at a glance.

"Tobacco has a bad effect on the eyes if used too freely," said Mr. Ellis. "After a life's experience I should say that no man should smoke more than two ounces of tobacco a week if he wishes to avoid its dangers. Two ounces should do no harm, and some people could stand more and remain immune from its effects, but for the man who wishes to play for safety with his eyes that is the reasonable limit."

THE OLD MEN'S COMPLAINT.

There was no prodigal among the four Miller sons, now four rich old men who have met in reunion at Bridgeport, Conn. All of them prospered. And they are convinced that they should prosper even more if they were to begin their climb all over again in this present day and generation. "It says one of them, 'we were to start out today as we did, the four brothers of us with $700 apiece, the chances are that we would be worth in the same time considerably more than we are now today.'

Familiar saying! Sentences well worn! For who has not noted how in the last few years the complaints of the younger men have been drowned out by those of the older ones. The young man complained because the new times were not like the old, not so easy to get rich in. The old men complain because the old times were not so good as the new. They wish that they might begin at the point where they were compelled to leave off. And they have repeated their convictions so often and so earnestly that the young man is almost afraid to dwell upon his own sad prospect, if indeed he has not begun to doubt whether it is so sad after all.—New York Globe.

For Cleaning Greasy Overalls

For cleaning greasy overalls use half the quantity of laundry soap you've previously found necessary, but add a tablespoonful or two of Snowflake Powdered Ammonia to the water.

Snowflake Ammonia makes the soap work faster. It acts directly on the grease and loosens it.

Then rinse the overalls in Snowflake Ammonia and water; and all the grease will drop off and float in the water.

That's the easy way to clean greasy overalls. Just you try it.

In the Giant 5c. Package

Also try Snowflake Ammonia for all household cleaning purposes. Its use will cut down your soap-expense to one-tenth its former size.

Wright—Bell.
 A very pretty wedding took place on Wednesday, Sept. 14, at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Bell, Langbank, when their daughter, Lottie Mae, became the wife of Mr. Herbert Wright, of Oakdale. The ceremony was performed by Rev. W. Whaley, of Florence, in the presence of relatives and immediate friends. The bride was handsomely gowned in white wool taffeta with satin trimmings, and was unassisted. After a dainty wedding breakfast, the couple left for Paris, Brantford and Galt. The bride's going-away gown was of grey broadcloth, with black picture hat.
Cook—Noyes.
 A quiet but very pretty wedding was celebrated on Sept. 13 at 5 o'clock in St. Luke's Church, Hamilton, by Rev. Mr. Burns, when Miss Olive, eldest daughter of Mr. Albert E. Noyes, of Denfield, was united in marriage to Mr. William Cook, of Hamilton. The bride looked charming in white silk, with all-over lace, and a beautiful bouquet of bridal roses. She was attended by Miss Marguerite Moore, while Mr. Grey assisted the groom. Only the immediate relatives were present. Mr. and Mrs. Cook will reside in Hamilton.

PASSES CUT OFF.
 Chicago, Sept. 17.—Railroads in the Western Passenger Association, comprising the lines between Chicago and the Rocky Mountains, have adopted a recommendation that after Jan. 1, 1911, no complimentary annual passes be issued to the officers and agents of other railroads below the rank of assistant general passenger agent. This will cut off from the privilege thousands of general agents, district, division and local passenger agents, and local representatives of the roads in various cities accustomed to traveling free.
 The recommendation is contingent, however, on its adoption by the freight organizations. It is considered impracticable, however, to abolish the issuance of passes to the passenger officials unless the rule is extended to cover the officials below the rank of assistant general freight agents.

Melba in Ottawa. Sept. 15.—Mr. Cyril Dwight-Edwards, London, Ont.: Melba's appearance here tonight occasioned a scene of fervor and enthusiasm never before witnessed in Ottawa. Six thousand people packed the vast Arena from floor to ceiling. At the conclusion the audience rose en masse and cheered the diva. Hundreds were unable to gain admission. Waited outside the entire programme.—F. Shipman.
 A Capacity House. Another capacity house greeted the Leah Stoddart Company at the Grand Opera House last night, and thoroughly enjoyed the performance. Three capacity houses in a row is good business, and it was well deserved. Miss Stoddart herself made many more friends, and the company demonstrated once again that it is well balanced and clever.
 Favorite Irish Comedian. Fliske O'Hara, the Irish singing comedian, comes to the Grand Opera House on Wednesday, Sept. 21, in his latest success, "The Wearing of the Green."

It has been Mr. O'Hara's policy to present a new play each year, and since his advent on the stage he has followed the principle very faithfully. Last summer he began looking for a suitable play, and entered into correspondence with Mr. Sayre, the author of the present play, with the intention of securing another piece along similar lines; but ere the summer was half gone, letters and requests began pouring in, asking for dates and offering bonuses until finally Mr. O'Hara decided to retain "The Wearing of the Green" for the time being, and open in a new play next season.

LONDON HEALTH INSTITUTE
 Corner Maple and Talbot Streets—Phone 2565.

Today we have in America and Canada four great systems of drugless healing, and practice of the modern schools before minor points differing. The names of these modern schools are known as Naturopathy, Osteopathy, Chiropractic and Mechanotherapy. The basis of all four are for the purpose of adjusting the human body and rendering the same harmonious in its ramifications.
 The cause of their amazing growth and popularity is, in very plain English, because of the terrible amount of mental and physical suffering which humanity has endured for centuries, and the evolution of time has decreed that disease and suffering, mental and physical, can be mitigated, if not eliminated. All this past suffering has caused the people to pause and think, and the result of such perambulation of thought has been the organization and practice of the modern schools before enumerated. Therefore, the modern systems of drugless healing are now being utilized, and the results have been so exceedingly satisfactory that these schools of healing are now thoroughly pleasing to the general public. Noting one important factor, the huge army of chronics and incurables has alone been of sufficient importance to compel same recognition of the new systems of modern drugless healing. The liberal, broad exponent of these schools uses all and any curative agent to assist his suffering patient. The curative measures used embrace dietetics, hyotherapy, scientific manipulation, anatomical adjustments, vibration, electricity, curative physical culture, Swedish movements, suggestive therapeutics, relaxation and numerous other curative appliances, which the drugless physician may deem advisable for the complete recuperation of his patient.
 It might be further noted that the modern drugless physician is a teacher; his endeavor is to show the people how to live strong, sane lives, to duly and plainly explain how disease may be successfully guarded against, both mental and physical. Example, the appalling dietetic error; spinal derangements, mental and physical excesses, the value of hygiene and sanitation, to avoid spinal curvature, and poor lung capacity, the mad folly of contracting consumption and other non-essential diseases. Thus one sees the modern drugless physician is of paramount value to any community. His cures it would be superfluous to enumerate. From Maine to Oregon cures; yes, marvellous cures, have proved the value and efficacy of the Naturopath, Osteopath, Chiropractor and Mechanotherapist.

company in Western Ontario, if not in the entire Dominion. They are the sole proprietors of the Western Cap Factory, which is the oldest cap manufacturing concern in Canada.
 In their local factory at 68-70 Dundas and Carling streets, they employ some 30 expert and efficient workmen. Their offices and salesrooms are located at their city warehouse, 331 Richmond street. They manufacture all their furs in their own factory, and have a national reputation for the high quality and fine workmanship of their various lines. In addition to a large weekly output of furs, they manufacture between six and seven hundred dozen hats and caps per week. As is easily apparent from their fine display at the exhibition, their line includes the very latest models, the newest in Parisian and New York shapes and creations, being reproduced by their own designer, who has been thoroughly equipped for fine designing by an extensive experience in New York, previous to his connection with this company.

The John Marshall Company is at present composed of Messrs. S. Munro, Walter Simson and H. E. Buttry. Mr. Munro, the senior member of the firm, has been connected with the company for the past 27 years. Mr. Simson for 27 years, and Mr. Buttry for 10 years. Mr. Munro visits the British and continental markets of Europe twice yearly, principally to select skins and materials for the cap factory.

PHYSIOGNOMY OF THE SALESMAN.
 The nose of a travelling salesman generally bears the appearance of breadth just above the wings. This is the nose that indicates the ability to acquire property, make good sales, secure returns through bargains and fine talking, and get large orders even when persons have indicated that they did not wish to buy or make a bargain. The thickness of the nose above the wings is the true facial sign of acquisitiveness, and a travelling salesman and a good businessman have generally this characteristic strongly developed. We find it large in George Peabody, Andrew Carnegie and the Rothschilds, all of whom have made large fortunes.
 The lips of a good salesman are regular and fit appropriately together. The chin and jaw of a successful salesman are indicated by their squareness and roundness combined. The roundness gives the power of appeal, and the squareness gives the capacity to elicit the bargain.
 The lines that show in the forehead of a good and had salesman are, in the former, straight and perpendicular between the eyes; in the latter, or bad salesman, the lines are light and irregular.
 The voice of a successful salesman is bright, cheery, optimistic. Its intonations are hopeful and buoyant, but heavy and dull. The salesman possesses a silvery-toned voice which is so allied to its subject that it knows exactly what to say, and says it without hesitation.
 The handwriting of a good salesman is neat, regular, connected, but shows firmness, force in the lines that cross the 't's, and ambition is manifested in the tails of the 'g's and in the height of the 'h's, 's's, etc.
 The eyes of the honest businessman who is engaged as a salesman or a credit man are generally small, piercing and keen in expression.
 The ears of a good salesman are broad, and give to the person vitality, strength, good digestive power, and comradeship. Such a person generates life readily, and is social, genial and a good conversationalist.
