Deplores Lack of Frankness Matrimony.

Because Most of Us Hate to Face the Truth, We Are Guilty of Making Our Wives and Husbands and Children Deceive Us in a Thousand Little Ways.

A young man was telling me about what a wonderful wife he had, and he wound up his panegyric by saying:

"And the best thing about her is that I don't have to lie to her. I can tell her the plain. unvarnished truth; and don't know what a relief that is to a man, because most of us are poor, bungling, amateur liars, who can never put up a convincing lie, and we hate to do it. Makes us feel rotten. But most women wish the role of Ananias on their husbands and they can't get out of it, so you see why I am burning joss sticks to my luck in having a wife that I don't have to detead or naving to be continually placated by a thousand little deceits. It akes time, and ingenuity, and diplomacy, and finesse, and effort to work a husband or a wife, yet the peace of many households depends on this being done, and upon the commonest facts being presented dressed up in a fancy masked costume that disguises what they really are.

Men and women are always complaining that they are deceived by their husbands and wives. When they are, it is almost always their own fault. They will not endure the truth, and so they force their wives and husbands to lie to them.

It does not add to a man's pleasure when he is going to stay downtown and play poker with the boys to have to 'phone his wife that some extra work has come up at the office, or a man has come in from Kamschatka Her work lies chiefly in the prisons and among the people of the poorer districts of Tokio. > She has made a liar out of him because she has not the sense to realize that a man has a right to some personal liberty and that. no matter how much he loves his wife and his home, he likes to get off once in a while with men and enjoy men's fun in men's way. It would add immeasurably to his pleasure and to his respect and affection for her if he could frankly tell his wife just exactly what he was going to do and she would says "Fine. Have a good time. If he did, friend wife would have hysterics all over the place and vision an evening's harmless diversion as an unspeakable orgy. And husband lies to keep the peace.

> And just as wives make ligrs of their husbands, so do husbands make liars of their wives. Women don't like to deceive their husbands one bit better than men like to deceive their wives.

But she would like to be a truthful woman if only her husband would let her.

And parents make liars of their children by penalizing the truth. It doesn't do for any little embryo George Washington to tell that he did it with his little hatchet, for if he does he gets a spanking for it.
