THE BELLEVILLE SEED GRAIN SWINDLE.

Re Kelly v. Gould.—Field, (Colborne), for the defendants Gould, moved for prohibition to the Sixth Division Court in the county of Hastings, and also the First Division Court in the same county, on the ground that the cause of action arose in the jurisdiction of the Seventh Division Court in the united counties of Northumberland and Durham, and that the defendants do not reside in the county of Hastings. The judge below transferred the case from the sixth to the First Division Court in Hastings. C. R. Boulton, for the plaintiff, contra. The learned chief justice held that the case should be transferred to Seventh Division Court in the counties of Northumberland and Durham. Order made for prohibition. Costs in the cause.

The defendants, George and Lorenzo Gould, who are well known residents of Cramah Township, were induced to put their names to a note for $150 on the usual conditions of the fraudulent grain company of Belleville. A man named Kelly, of Madoc, subsequently got the note and sued it at Madoc. The Goulds, by their solicitors, Messrs Field & McColl, filed a defence and disputed the jurisdiction of the Madoc court on the ground that the note was made and payable within the limits of the Colborne Division Court and the defendants resided here. The Hastings county Judge changed the trial to Belleville as it appeared that one Robertson, who was sued as a defendant resided there. On Saturday, Mr. Field moved at Osgoode Hall, Toronto, before Chief Justice Galt to prohibit the trial at Belleville, and the order was made as per above report.

The case will likely be tried here on July 14th.

KEEP THE HEIFERS.

The time has come when every farmer and feeder in Canada should turn his attention to cattle, and consider how he can thereby increase the trade of the Dominion. Not every one is so situated that he can take advantage of the present prospects; but every one can give the subject careful thought, and in most cases it will be found that there is now an opportunity to help on a great and growing trade.—Cattle feeding is acknowledged to be far better for the land than grain growing, and the outlook is that it will prove much more profitable for the farmer. It has been so in the past, for proof of which one has only to look at sections of Ontario where good cattle are fed, and the financial condition of the farmers there is found to be much better than in the grain growing parts. This has taken place when prices for cattle were at times only middling; and at other times, were particularly bad; and when prices for grain were fair to good. Now the tide seems to have turned, and prices for stock are going up with bright prospects for the future.—Grain, too, is on the rise, especially coarse grains, carried up largely by the demand for well fed stock and the increased consumption for stock feeding. The shipments from Canada last year of cattle were fifty per cent. more than the previous year. Many of these were ~~scrag~~ cattle that would have paid well had they been fed more grain; others were poor scrubs that did not pay the breeder here, and could only be fattened in a land where the value of the manure bears a very high proportion to the cost of the food consumed. We want to ship out the scrub steers, get rid of them, and raise more good cattle. Keep the heifers; breed them to good thoroughbred bulls of any of the beef breeds, and they will produce animals that will pay to be well kept.—This is where there is a very large leak at present in the Canadian cattle trade.—Poor scrub bulls are used; they will never pay. Only good thoroughbred bulls of a beef breed will give good profits. They are cheap, considering their value, and abundant. In some good cattle sections there are hundreds of young heifers—well bred ones—that are being got ready for the butcher at two and three years old. It may be too late now to keep many of these in the country for breeding purpose, but they are the kind we want to keep, the ones that it will pay best to keep, that we may have a strong foundation of well bred cows to build up a trade in first class export stock. Do not part with these heifers. Those who are buying stock let them get as well bred animals as they can. Even pure bred animals have been low in price. Now is the time to get them before the sea of high prices returns. Get good blood and keep the heifers.—D. McCrae, in The Canadian Live Stock and Farm Journal for May.

THE TEN COMMANDMENTS.

The following are the cheesemaker's ten commandments:

I.—Thou shalt arise early in the morning and deliver thy milk unto the factory, for he that goeth late causeth the cheesemaker to use much profane language.

II.—Thou shalt slaughter thy calves not until the third day, and hearken unto me, take no more than one rennet from each carcass.

III.—Thou shalt take no cream from thy milk, even for thy tea or thy coffee, for when thou getteth thy dividends one shall say to another why taketh it more milk here for a pound of cheese than in other synagogues. Then shall the cheesemaker arise up in his might and smite thee to the earth.

IV.—Thou shalt put no water in thy milk, thou nor thy man servant or thy maid servant. When the dividend cometh not and thou goest forth to seek it thou cometh unto the committee, they shall say unto thee, doest thou see anything in our optics of an emerald color? Thou shalt get no shekel from thy milk not if the court knoweth itself, which she thinketh she doth; moreover if thou setteth this thing up, we will make it hot for thee.

V.—Thou shalt not kill thy deacon and leave the carcass to rot near the barn, for the stench thereof tainteth the milk.

VI.—Thou shalt not bring unto the factory any sour or tainted milk, nor the milk of a cow that is sick or nath but lately calved, for from such milk cometh lively cheese.

VII.—Thou shalt not carry off more than thy share of whey, lest one should say to another concerning thee, lo! a wonder; one hoth doth carry food for another.

VIII.—Thou shalt cause thy cans to be washed every day, the seams and covers thereof; for a filthy can is abominable in my sight, and I will visit my wrath on him who bringeth it.

IX.—Thou shalt not bother the cheesemaker, saying where and when shall I receive another dividend, for verily I say unto you, he knoweth not nor careth a continental about it.

X.—Thou shalt not say unto one another concerning me, lo! hath not this Philistine of a cheesemaker a soft snap, he getteth big wages and worketh not hard. For verily I say unto you, that is a whopper, he getteth up early in the morning and laboreth until late at night; moreover he worketh on the Sabbath day, for which the Lord hath no mercy on him.

AFTER THE FIRE.—The Colborne Photograph Gallery will open on the 1st Friday in June. 5 years established—everybody praises our work—no better can you get in the cities. Kindly patronize home and help us. Many thanks for the past. BROS. & Co., Trenton and Colborne

S. A. BOYCE vs ROBERT FENTON—Action for alleged conversion of chatties and rent of house; counter claim for wages as per due bill. The defence filed a plea disputing the jurisdiction and it appeared that the case should have been entered for trial at Grafton. Order made transferring case to Grafton Court. A jury was summoned on the case, but as the case failed to proceed for want of jurisdiction, the jury was not sworn in.

BIBBY vs SPENCER.—Action to revive judgment in name of deceased plaintiff's Administrator—Order made. J. W. Gordon for Plaintiff.

JOHN HANNAH vs B. ANDREWS.—Action for $5 balance due on mortgage. The action arose out of a mistake in the count of the money when the mortgage was discharged. H. P. Gould, who paid over the money, swore to the payment being $106 instead of $101 as claimed by Hannah. Judgment of non-suit. Field & McColl for Plaintiff, W. L. Payne for Defendant.

A long list of after judgment and default summonses occupied the time of the Court till about 2 p.m. It was the shortest court here for some years.

A Fish Story. Crows are commonly said to live for 100 years, and turtle are said to have even longer life, but the greatest amount of longevity is possessed by fishes. How His Mother "Managed." "You see how it is, my dear," he said, taking her soft hand, which had never done very hard work, and patting it reassuringly. "I'm poor—only a thousand a year, dear—and we shall have to struggle to get along at first."

"I don't mind that in the least," she interrupted, stoutly, rubbing her cheek softly against his hand.

"And," he paused, graciously having allowed her interruption, "we shall have to come down to strict economy. But if you can only manage as my mother does we shall pull through nicely."

"And how does your mother manage, dear?" she asked smiling—but not very happily—at the notion of the mother-in-law cropping out already.

"I don't know," replied the lover, radiantly; "but she always manages to have everything neat and cheerful, and something delicious to eat—and she does it all herself, you know! So that we always get along beautifully, and make both ends meet, and father and I still have plenty of spending money. You see when a woman is always hiring her laundry work done, and her scrubbing and stove-blackening done, and all that sort of thing—why it just walks into a man's income, and takes his breath away."

The young woman looked for a moment as if her breath was also inclined for a vacation; but she wisely concealed her dismay, and, being one of the stout-hearted of the earth, she determined to learn a few things of John's mother, and so went to her for a long visit the next day. Upon the termination of this visit on a fine morning John received, to his blank amazement, a little package containing his engagement ring, accompanied by the following letter:

"I have learned how your mother manages," and I am going to explain it to you, since you have confessed you didn't know. I find that she is a wife, a mother, a housekeeper, a business manager, a hired girl, a laundress, a seamstress, a mender and patcher, a dairy maid, a cook, a nurse, a kitchen gardener, and a general slave for the family of five. She works from five in the morning until ten at night; and I almost wept when I kissed her hand, it was so hard and wrinkled, and corded and knitted. When I saw her polishing the stoves, carrying big buckets of water and great armfuls of wood, often splitting the latter, I asked her why, John didn't do such things for her. 'John!' she repeated, 'John!'—and she sat down with a perfectly dazed look, as if I had asked why the angels didn't come down and scrub for her. 'Why—John'—she said, in a trembling, bewildered way—'he works in the office from nine until four o'clock, you know, and when he comes home he is very tired, or else—or else—he goes down town.' Now, I have become strongly imbued with the conviction that I do not care to be so good a 'manager' as your mother. If the wife must do all sorts of drudgery so must the husband. If she must scrub, he must carry the water; if she must make butter, he must also milk the cows. You have allowed your mother to do every thing, and all that you have to say for her is that she is an 'excellent manager.' I do not care for such a reputation, unless my husband earned the name also; and, judging from your lack of consideration for your mother, I am quite sure you are not the man I thought you were, nor one whom I should care to marry. As the son is the husband is, is a safe and happy rule to follow."

So the letter closed, and John pondered, and he is pondering yet.

Germany's Ruler. Continental Europe waits in a hushed expectancy of apprehension upon the results of Russia's huge financial and political operations. Nobody dares break the general silence except the young Kaiser, and his voice seems to an attentive listener to have a slight hysterical quaver. His remark in his Düsseldorf speech the other day about his regret that he was not the sole custodian of the peace of Europe has been much commented upon. It is universally construed to signify that the Czar was the one who holds the balance in his hands, but perhaps that merely testifies to the general nervousness.

Between seven and eight hundred petitions have already been presented to the House of Commons this session, and there are doubtless more to come. Whatever may be the cause of the extraordinary growth of this industry it is to be feared that its fruits will not be commensurate therewith. Petitions make an excellent stuffing for pigeon-holes, and that is all.

AGRICULTURAL.

The Mystery of Growth.

Who has ever seen anything grow? It must be that one who could keep vigil long enough might do so, for last night when I looked into this flower-pot there was nothing there but earth, and to-night there is a slender stem or blade of something half an inch long. There must have been a moment when the green point protruded through the soil, or perhaps it was a white point, and it would have been very possible for me to have remained in a position to watch it steadily for 24 hours. People have done things requiring more patience than that. But though I have been near this flower-pot most of the time, I only know that one sunset went down upon the mould, the next upon a green thing growing.

Shortly I shall see a thicker stalk, a broader blade. If no accident happens, there will be a plant of some sort before me in a few weeks. But, though I want to watch it, I shall not see it grow. I shall say at intervals, "How it has grown!" but never know when it took this new start or unfolded that new leaf, at what instant the bud appeared or at what moment it opened.

Has anyone actually seen a rosebud open? There is no record that I know of any such fact. The motion that is required is evident. We have seen flowers in every stage, and the process is brief. We almost fancy we have seen it performed, each one of us; but, as I think, I know I never have—have you? I believe that no mortal ever watched a mushroom take its shape. The thing is usually done in darkness and secrecy; yet, with a lantern, it would be possible to see what could be seen. And yet I am sure that if we should try the experiment, all that would happen would be that we should be aware at some moment that a mushroom had sprouted up—no more.

As to the large plants—the shrubs, the trees, the vines—botanists can tell you how every stage of growth is arrived at; but no one ever saw nature at work.

At what hour does the baby begin to grow? The mother who holds it in her arms for weeks is only conscious that it has changed. The wrinkles vanish, the red turns to pink and white, its eyes become intelligent, its ears curl up, its lips grow plump, its nose acquires a shape. With her arms about it, her eyes upon it, she would say every half hour:

"Why, of course, the baby looks exactly as it did when I began to put it to sleep."

But in eight weeks there is a smiling little creature in a cradle that could not be recognized as the hour-old child—pronounced a very fine boy by the nurse and the doctor, but to unaccustomed eyes, hideous enough to be horrifying.

That fair baby, too, how does it change to the boy, to the strong man? The baby never knows himself.

To almost everyone it has occurred to come suddenly to a realizing sense that he is grown up—without having the slightest idea how it has happened.—[New York Ledger.

Wash For Trees.

Take lime, slake, and prepare as for ordinary whitewash, in an old barrel or box, enough to make a bucket two-thirds full—proper consistency for the ordinary whitewash. Now add one pint of gas tar, one pound of whale oil soap, dissolved in hot water, or one pint of common soft soap, or one pound of potash, or one pint of strong lye from wood ashes, or box of concentrated lye, then add clay or loam enough to make the bucketful of wash of proper consistency to be applied with a brush. If the trees have had the earth banked up around them, take the earth away from around the collar, and apply the wash to the body of the trees from the limbs to the ground or down to the roots. Its advantages are: It will destroy the bark louse, or all scale insects; will give the trees a bright, clean, healthy appearance. This wash will drive out all borers that are in the trees, and the moth will not deposit eggs on or about the trees the same season the wash is applied. All who grow apples, peaches, dwarf pears, or quinces should not fail to use this wash; don't fail to use because not patented and sold at a high price. I have known cases where peach trees became healthy and vigorous with one application of this wash. Again mice and rabbits will not girdle trees where this wash is used. Apply in May for borers and general benefit to trees, and the late autumn as a preventive against mice and rabbits. Gas tar when applied pure will kill trees.

Poultry Notes.

The yearly importation of eggs in England amounts to the sum of $7,500,000.

Young chickens that are just beginning to run about should be fed regularly every day. If the eggs shells are fed to the poultry, care should always be taken to crush them thoroughly before feeding.

A hen pays in proportion to the number of eggs she produces; therefore it is an item to feed so as to secure plenty of eggs.

When desired to fatten rapidly there is nothing that will equal good corn meal. Fowls should be given all that they will eat up clean.

One can depend with close, careful plucking upon an average of one pound of feathers per bird from a flock of common geese per annum.

In shipping young poultry at this time see that they are well watered and fed before cooping, and do not crowd too many into the coops.

As a rule hens learn to eat eggs from having them broken in the nest. In arranging the nests have them convenient for the hens, so that in getting in and out there will be little if any risk of the eggs being broken.

Hens like seclusion. They do better when contented. It is best to darken the place selected for a nest. Even though secluded a dark nest gives her but little chance to see about her, hence she will remain more quiet. A nest made of soft cut hay or chaff is as good as any.

In hatching ducks' eggs under hens, the incubation differs from hens' eggs only in the fact that ducks' eggs pip at twenty-five to twenty-six days, instead of nineteen, as with chickens, and also that they generally pip from thirty-six to forty-eight hours before emerging from the shell.

It is stated that Mr. Carling, Minister of Agriculture, is adverse to the scheme of allowing American cattle to be slaughtered in bond at Three Rivers.

Where Does the Opium Go To?

It is said that enough opium is made in Vancouver and Victoria, B.C., in one week to satisfy the wants of British Columbia for two years. Where do the surplus ninety-nine hundredths go? The Montreal Pharmaceutical Journal says that they are smuggled across to the United States. "It comes in barrels, of beer, in women's bustles, in trunks, in satchels, under the loose shirts of sailors, in boat loads by night, in every conceivable way. By collusion with steamboat and steamship captains and through corrupt officials in our own country the greatest profits are made possible." The opium imported into Canada comes in the form of sap and the shape of balls that weigh about three pounds, and are encased in an envelope made by pressing leaves against the sticky substance. The Canadian revenue laws impose a duty of one dollar a pound upon this raw material, while the American impost upon finished opium is ten dollars a pound. The difference when the raw material is worked into the finished product is therefore very great, and the temptation to smuggle is in direct proportion to the profit. There are 30 or 40 firms of Chinamen manufacturing it constantly in Victoria and Vancouver. It was reported from Ottawa some time ago that the Government were inquiring into this matter. The industry of making opium is not one which should be encouraged.

The Humane Society.

According to the last report of the American Humane Association there are 250 societies in the United States and Canada. Statistics of the work done by 50 of these show that 18,393 complaints of cruelty to children were made, 4,303 prosecutions instituted, and 4,117 convictions obtained; while relief was given to 20,250 children. There were also 19,139 complaints of cruelty to animals, 1,291 prosecutions, and 1,189 convictions; and 38,542 animals were relieved. If the 200 societies that failed to report did nearly as well as these, the sum of the pain and misery of helpless creatures in this part of the world has been very greatly diminished, and the association is to be congratulated. On the cover of the report is the picture of a horse, with this bit of history:—"Nine years ago this horse was valued at over $200, and because he ran away, the owner, for revenge, shut him up in his barn and has never permitted him to leave his stall. Strangers were excluded from entering the barn. Mr. D. G. Whitehead, agent of the Milwaukee Humane Society, found this once beautiful sorrel horse, with fine bony head, large hazel eyes, and intelligence like a man, covered with bed-sores, reduced to nothing but skin and bones, and the hoofs grown long and rocker-shaped. When the animal was untied for the first time in nine years he hobbled out into the sunshine to nibble the green grass, and showed his gratitude by a low whinny. The owner of this cruelly treated animal was only fined $25 and costs."

Swift Justice.

A correspondent of the New York Herald having cited, as an example of the swiftness with which the wheels of justice move in Canada, the case of the Belleville murderer, Kane, who killed his wife on March 23, was tried, convicted, and sentenced on April 16, and will be hanged on May 21, that paper says:—"In this State a murderer is rarely executed within two years after the commission of his crime." According to District Attorney Nicoll there are now more than twenty-five homicide cases awaiting trial in this city alone. Months have elapsed since the murders were committed, and the offenders have not yet been brought to trial. Even conviction is but the starting point of proceedings which may be drawn out one, two, or three years, and when at last what is supposed to be the final sentence is passed there is no telling when the law will be enforced. There has been but one execution in this State since the new mode of inflicting the death penalty was adopted, and there is no certainty that there will be another in the next twelve months."

An American who four years ago was the driver of an express wagon in Springfield, Mass., is now one of the royal physicians in Bangkok, having just been appointed to the position by the King of Siam. He was educated for foreign medical missionary work by the Presbyterian Church, and went out to the East last fall. Now he is basking in the royal favour, but he does not propose to abandon Christian work, although he has resigned his position as Presbyterian missionary.

The revived proposal of the Bender Dead Meat Company, that the Dominion Government should allow American cattle to be slaughtered in bond at Three Rivers, is a matter in which the interests of a particular locality and of individuals may seriously conflict with those of the whole country. While the operations of the company would be of great benefit to Three Rivers they would inflict great injury upon the whole Canadian cattle trade, in case they led the British Government to schedule our cattle in British ports on the same terms as American cattle. It is, in fact, reported that the Minister of Agriculture has been officially advised from England that this would be done, in which case the duty of our Government is plain.

During a period of ten years ending last December the number of European immigrants who landed at American ports was 5,246,613, and if to this number were added the uncounted immigrants entering the Republic by way of Canada the total, it is believed, would be found to be between six and seven millions. The immigration from Italy and Russia has become heavy, it is learned, only within a short time. The year 1882 was that of the largest immigration, the record showing 788,992 arrivals. The New York Sun says, however, that there is reason to believe that the influx during the present year will be found to exceed that of any previous one.

According to the Rev. Dr. Arthur Pierson, Christendom is in no present danger of spending too much of its substance on missions. He says that the whole church membership in Protestant churches of the United States and Europe rises for this purpose $11,429,588—less than 30 cents a member per annum, and less than one-tenth of a cent per day—and that it takes nearly 6,000 Protestant church members to supply one missionary. At present the exact number of missionaries is said to be 5,994, with 35,343 native helpers. He estimates that if Protestants would give to missions one-tenth of the amount which they now spend on luxury and superfluity, the result would be an income of $400,000,000.

TIT-BITS.

The Thoughtful Widow.

Mrs. Sillysole lost her husband during a prolonged stay in France, and she discovered when opening the will that her deceased lord desired that his body should be cremated. The undertaker requested to know if she wished the French or the Milanese furnace to be used?

"Oh, the French one, of course," replied the widow, with a burst of tears. "My dear husband never could bear Italian cookery."

Died as He Lived.

Quester—"So your friend Lambly is dead, eh?"

Jester—"He is, and he died as he lived, too."

Quester—"How is that?"

Jester—"Why, all through his life he had a constitutional aversion to exerting himself in any way and he carried out this idea to the end, for his friends tell me he died without a struggle."

Not Well Acquainted With Sammy.

Teacher—"Willie, suppose you have five marbles. Sammy, there, says: 'I will give you seven more.' How many will you have then, altogether?"

Willie—"Just five, ma'am. He lies like a thunder. You don't know him as well as I do."

No Spare Hours.

Mr. Hayseed (arriving at city hotel)—"I suppose I kin hear the gong here when it rings for dinner, can't I?"

Clerk—"We have no gong. We have breakfast from 6 to 11, dinner from 12 to 6, supper from 6 to 11."

Mr. Hayseed—"Jehoshaphat! How am I to git time to see the city?"

Unfortunate Question.

"Boys and girls," said the nice old gentleman who had been invited to say a few words to the children, "I should like to see how many of you expect some time to go to a better, grander, more beautiful city than this. All of you who do will please arise."

Less than a dozen rose up.

"Most of the children of this Sunday school," explained the superintendent to the old gentleman in a whisper, "reside in the vicinity of the boys' playing grounds."

He Had Got a New Profession.

Young Mr. Inswim was hurrying blindly along the street toward a drug store, with a paregoric bottle in his hand, when young De Trop hailed him.

De Trop—"Hello, Inswim. I've scarcely seen you for a year. Where have you been keeping yourself since you were married?"

Inswim—"Oh, busy, busy all of the time."

De Trop—"I say, what you doing mostly?"

De Trop—"No."

Inswim—"Yep."

De Trop—"What is it?"

Inswim—"Humorist."

De Trop—"You don't say. I didn't think you were much in that line."

Inswim—"I ain't a very glittering success."

De Trop—"What—eh—what—sort of work are you in mostly?"

And then young Mr. Inswim leaned over and whispered softly in young De Trop's ear: "I'm spending most of my time trying to humor a baby that's engaged in tooth culture." And then he plunged madly on again toward the soothing syrup shop.

There seems to be no doubt that what our doctors and Health Departments have to do in these modern days is to destroy prejudicial bacteria. Dr. E. L. Shirley, of Detroit, has been reading a paper before the American Medical Association at Washington in which he enunciates the cheerful sentiment that "man is an artificial animal assailed by poisons on every side." He also says that 116 species of bacteria have already been enumerated.

THE price of sugar in Toronto and Buffalo differ slightly, as the following figures will show. Toronto—granulated 14 lbs for $1, while in Buffalo the same can be bought 20 lbs for $1.

A DECLINE of thirty-three per cent in the earnings of the Bank of Montreal is further evidence of that great era of prosperity which the Dominion is enjoying under a policy of trade restriction and high taxation.

IN 1877 the population of the city of St. Catharines was 13,143. This was the year before the defeat of the Mackenzie Government. Now, in 1891, the population is found to be 9,174.

PARNELL'S friends seem to be leaving him by degrees, the latest desertions are the two Harringtons, Timothy and Edward, who have decided to give in their adhesion to the Nationalist Party.

ACCORDING to the statements contained in the reports of the commissioner of mounted police and his subordinates the prohibitory liquor law is now a dead letter in the Northwest.

As will be seen by announcement, there is to be a vote taken on the 25th inst. to determine the continuance or otherwise of the electric light on the streets, at the expiration of the present contract on July 18th.

DIRECTLY AND INDIRECTLY. Kidney complaint, dropsy and similar troubles depend directly on wrong action of the kidneys and indirectly on bad blood.

THE LAKEPORT HARBOR JOB.

Mr. John Hargraft, the member for West Northumberland, has been heard from at Ottawa in reference to the construction at Lakeport of a harbor of refuge pursuant to the demonstrations on the ice that preceded Mr. Gulliett's majority on March 5th.

The notice paper containing the amendments that vigilant members of Parliament propound for the government to wrestle with, bore the following on May 12th:—

Mr. Hargraft—"Whether the Government or House of Commons ever received a petition asking that a harbor of refuge be constructed at the village of Lakeport, in the county of Northumberland, on Lake Ontario? Did the Government ever despatch officers or engineers to investigate the work referred to in such petition? If so, on what date were they sent, and at whose request; and if taken from the work, when were they so taken? For what reason? And is it the intention of the Government to go on with the work?"

"The Globe" of Friday contained the following reference to this matter:—"The Lakeport Job.—Mr. Hargraft, the new member for West Northumberland, has had an interesting question on the notice paper for the last two days, and had been asked to allow it to stand over. To-day he received an answer which revealed a barefaced and shameless trick on the part of the Government to influence voters in that constituency.

Sir Hector Langevin made answer that a petition was presented in favor of the work in 1889, that it was undertaken in 1891 on a promise that had been made to the predecessor of the hon. gentlemen that a survey would take place before the next session.

"Mr. Hargraft does not intend to let the Lakeport Harbor of Refuge matter drop and is moving for any documents in connection with it, as he expects to show that it was a little election kite."

Care of Horses. Next to feeding, and close to it also making a nice and well-kept team, comes the use of the brush and curry comb.

No matter how often a horse's body is washed when it is put in the stable the linens should be removed and the horse well rinsed. Ten Reasons

For the Wonderful Success of Hood's Sarsaparilla, the Most Popular and Most Extensively Sold Medicine in America.

- 1 Hood's Sarsaparilla possesses great medicinal merit, which it positively demonstrates when fairly tried. 2 It is most economical, being the only medicine of which 100 Doses One Dollar can truly be said. 3 It is prepared by a Combination, Proportion and Process Peculiar to itself, unknown to other preparations, and by which all the medicinal value of the various ingredients is secured. 4 It effects remarkable cures where other medicines have utterly failed to do any good whatever. 5 It is a modern medicine, originated by experienced pharmacists, and still carefully prepared under their personal supervision. 6 It is clean, clear and beautiful in appearance, pleasant to take, and always of equal strength. 7 It has proven itself to be positively the best remedy for scrofula and all blood disorders, and the best tonic for that tired feeling, loss of appetite and general debility. 8 It is unequalled for curing dyspepsia, sick headache, biliousness, catarrh, rheumatism and all diseases of the kidneys and liver. 9 It has a good name at home, there being more of Hood's Sarsaparilla sold in Lowell, Mass., where it is made, than of all other sarsaparillas and blood purifiers combined. 10 Its advertising is unique, original, honest, and thoroughly backed up by the medicine itself.

A Point for You. If you want a blood purifier or strengthening medicine, you should get the best. Ask for Hood's Sarsaparilla, and insist upon having it. Do not let any argument or persuasion influence you to buy what you do not want. Be sure to get the ideal medicine.

OH, WHAT A COUGH. Will you heed the warning. The signal perhaps of the sure approach of that more terrible disease Consumption. Ask yourselves if you can afford for the sake of saving 50c. to run the risk and do nothing for it. We know from experience that Shiloh's Cure will cure your cough. It never fails.

WHEN THE BREATH is tainted by catarrh it is an evidence that the disease has progressed to the throat, perhaps to the larynx and the bronchial tubes. These are only stations on the road to the lungs. When catarrh has progressed and attacked the lungs there can be only one result—consumption and death. Clark's Catarrh Cure will arrest the disease at any point before the lungs are seriously affected. It costs 50 cents of druggists, or sent to any address on receipt of price. Clark Chemical Co., Toronto, New York.

THE WORK OF A WOMAN.—While J. Carpenter and W. C. Spivey were fishing off the dock at the old wooden mill Gananoque, the former's hook caught on something very heavy, and on hauling it it was found to be a parcel securely tied, attached to which was a large stone. The parcel had two wrappers of paper, and inside, wrapped in linen was the body of an infant. The babe was wrapped in copies of the World of May 7 and Empire of May 6. A post mortem showed that the child was born alive and healthy, and had evidently been smothered. The manner in which the parcel was done up—first a covering of linen securely pinned, then newspapers and lastly a wrapper of coarse paper—pointed to it as the work of a woman.

A MINUTE A DAY devoted to taking a dose of Burdock Blood Bitters will cure any case of constipation, dyspepsia, biliousness, or bad blood, and may save weeks of sickness and dollars of loss. There is nothing better than B. B. B.

WORTHY OF CONFIDENCE. Those who have used it praise it! Mrs. Geo. Ward writes from Josephine, Ont., concerning Hagyard's Yellow Oil: "As a sure cure for chapped hands, swellings, sore throat, etc., I recommend Hagyard's Yellow Oil to all."

Fiso's Remedy for Catarrh is the Best, Easiest to Use and Cheapest. CATARRH Sold by druggists or sent by mail, 50c. E. T. Baseltine, War., Pa., U. S. A.

This is the first opportunity that has ever been offered breeders to secure the services of well bred sires at nominal figures, and as these stallions are descendants of the very best stock that was ever brought into this country, they should receive a large patronage. ADDITIONAL LOCALS.

There is danger in impure blood. There is safety in taking Hood's Sarsaparilla, the great blood purifier. 100 doses one dollar.

Harry Godsmark has just received a new stock of Crockery and Glassware to be sold at prices that will astonish the purchaser.

ROYAL BIRTH.—The Duchess of Fife, granddaughter of Queen Victoria, gave birth to a daughter on Sunday morning last. Mother and child are doing well.

Mr. D. L. Simmons and Mr. Mat. Smetinger have gone to Thornbury where they intend erecting a large fruit house to be in readiness for the coming apple season.

PARLOR CONCERT.—There will be a parlor concert given by the Ladies' Aid of the Methodist church, at the residence of Mrs. Greer, on Thursday, the 28th inst. Admission, 15c.

Mr. D. Robertson, of Warkworth, has secured the position of head master of the public school of that village and has, we understand, resigned his position as Bailiff. There are several applicants for the position.

MOBBED.—After delivering a lecture in Sheffield, England, on Friday evening last, Mr. H. M. Stanley was assailed by a mob of Socialists. He was protected by his friends and the police and hurriedly driven in a carriage to his hotel.

PROMENADE CONCERT.—A promenade concert, under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid of the Presbyterian church, Brighton, will be held in the Opera House, in that village, on Friday evening next, May 22. Proceeds for general purposes.

JULY FIEST.—A committee formed of the different societies in the village, met in the council chamber on Tuesday evening last to complete arrangements for the demonstration to be held in Colborne, on July 1st. A grand time is anticipated.

THE WEATHER.—Prof. Wiggins predicts a dry summer this year, and attributes it to the increased use of electricity in towns and the use of wire fences in the country thus keeping away the storms. Wonder if using binding twine in place of straw hands would help to bring about this result.

SNOW.—Twelve inches of snow fell at Sherman, 34 miles west of Cheyenne, Wyo., on Friday last. There was also a heavy fall of snow in Wales and the northern portions of England and London, Eng., was favored with a hail and sleet storm the same day, and Owen Sound had a heavy snowstorm on Saturday last which lasted two hours.

METHODIST CHURCH.—The fourth quarterly meeting of the Methodist Church, Colborne, for the past year was held on Sabbath last and was an exceedingly good one. At the business meeting on Monday evening following a very pleasing and healthy state of church work was reported. The membership, notwithstanding deaths and removals, showed a marked increase. The financial result was such as was never before known in the history of the church here. After all expenses were paid and all the funds sustained, there was still a surplus. A motion was carried expressing confidence in the pastor and requesting him to remain another year. Mr. Blumly who has so ably acted as finance manager for the year, was also complimented and received a hearty vote of thanks for the effective services rendered, and was re-appointed. Mr. Geo. Sanderson was appointed delegate to the General Conference.

HOT WATER AS A REMEDY.—Some of the benefits to be attained by the use of hot water are thus enumerated by Hall's Journal of Health. "A strip of flannel or napkin folded lengthwise and dipped in hot water and wrung out, and then applied around the neck of a child that has the croup, will usually bring relief in ten minutes. A towel folded several times and dipped in hot water and quickly wrung out and applied over the throat or neuralgia will generally afford relief. This treatment in colic works like magic, and there is nothing that so promptly cuts short a congestion of the lungs, sore throat or rheumatism as hot water, when applied promptly and thoroughly. Tepid water acts promptly as an emetic, and hot water taken freely half an hour before bed time is the best cathartic possible in the case of constipation, while it has a most soothing effect upon the stomach and bowels. This treatment, continued a few months, with proper attention to diet, will cure any curable case of dyspepsia. Headache almost always yields to the simultaneous application of hot water to the feet and back of the neck.

SUDDEN CHANGES.—A cold, or exposure, may cause the poisonous acids in the blood to clog its circulation. This is rheumatism. Clark's Lightning Liniment will stop the pain at once. It should be taken internally and externally if the attack is severe, and it affords instant relief. If the pain appears again, it should be met with the same treatment, until a cure is effected. This wonderful preparation has worked some remarkable cures among rheumatic sufferers. Where once tried, it is always used after. Sold by all druggists; price fifty cents. Clark Chemical Co., Toronto, New York.

FRUITS.—Mr. George M. Teasdale intends keeping on hand a supply of summer fruits in their season, such as lemons, oranges, pine apples, bananas etc.

O-BLOOKED.—In our report of the examinations of Victoria University, so far as related to parties resident in, or near to Colborne, in our issue of last week, we inadvertently overlooked Mr. C. H. Fowler, son of Mr. Harvey Fowler, of Colborne who passed his second year, and also Mr. W. J. Sykes, of Lakeport, who obtained 1st class honors and the gold medal in moderns, passed his final and received the degree of B. A.; Mr. E. S. Howard, son of Rev. E. E. Howard, Salem circuit, who passed his third year and received 1st class honors in English. We gladly make these corrections this week.

A TIMID BRIDEGROOM.—An anxious couple from Thorald, who put up at the Keating House, Niagara Falls, on Tuesday the 12th inst., experienced considerable difficulty in getting married. The young man, who claims to be a blood relation of the great Van Horne of Canadian Pacific fame, short y after arrival there, was taken sick and fainted in the hallway, and the blushing and expectant bride was almost frantic in anticipation of a postponement to such an extent that she threatened to throw her self over the river bank. Two physicians were called in who relieved the sufferings of the young man. Finally, supported by the doctors, backed up by friends, encouraged by the minister, the ceremony was concluded and the presiding physician claimed the first kiss of congratulation.

Gents.—Having used Minard's Liniment for several years in my stable, I attest to its being the best thing I know of for horse flesh. In the family we have used it for every purpose that a liniment is adapted for, it being recommended to us by the late Dr. J. L. R. Webster. Personally I find it the best allyer of neuralgic pain I have ever used.

MR. ESHOLT'S YOUNG WIFE.

BY T. W. SPEIGHT.

CHAPTER IV.

On the afternoon of the day following that of Peggy Myer's visit to Tydd Street, a cab stopped at the door of Mrs. Strake's house, and presently the landlady in person appeared before Miss Granby, holding a visiting-card gingerly by a thumb and finger and a corner of her apron, for she had been interrupted in the middle of her breadmaking. Miss Maria took the card wondering, and read the name, "Mr. Robert Esholt," aloud. "Gracious me!" she exclaimed, dropping the card as though it were red hot; "how has he found us out, I wonder, and what can he have come for? Dear, dear, and I with this shabby gown on!—Agnes, my love, not a syllable about the shirt-making." She was all in a flutter, arranging her curls and her lace collar before the dingy glass over the chimney-piece.—"Now, Mrs. Strake, I think you may show the gentleman in, please," she said with a little gasp.

Then was Mr. Esholt ushered into the dingy sitting-room, and coming forward, shook hands with Miss Maria. "My dear Miss Granby," he exclaimed, "how happy it makes me to see you again after so long a time. Just the same as of old, I see. It might have been only yesterday that I saw you last, instead of fourteen long years ago." Then turning to the white-faced invalid: "You do not remember me, Miss Agnes, I daresay; but I have by no means forgotten you. The last time I saw you was when you were not much higher than this table. It was when I accompanied my brother Richard on one of his visits to the vicarage. You are of course aware, Miss Granby, that I lost my brother some years ago. He was one of your father's oldest friends, Miss Agnes; they were at college together, for Richard was originally intended for the bar. Mr. Granby wrote me a most touching letter, after his death, which I have to this day, and shall always keep—But, as I was saying, my brother and I visited at the vicarage fourteen years ago. I was but a young fellow then, while Richard's hair was turning gray. Do you know, my dear young lady, that you were rather fond of me at that time, and many a romp we had together? I knew you again in a moment, for all you have grown up, and have not nearly so much colour in your cheeks as you had in those days."

He had kept on talking with a view of giving the ladies time to recover from the nervous perturbation into which his unexpected visit had evidently thrown them. He now drew up a chair, and sat down with the air of one who was determined to make himself at home.

"Pray, Mr. Esholt," said Miss Maria, "if I may venture to put such a question, by what means did you discover our humble retreat?"

"Oh, that's a secret," answered Mr. Esholt with a laugh, which I am bound under heavy pains and penalties not to divulge. And allow me, with all respect, to remark that I think it was due to the friendship which has existed for so many years between the two families to have informed me long ago that you were in Liverpool, instead of following me to make the discovery through another channel."

"Mr. Esholt, sir," replied the spinster, flushing painfully, "you must be aware that my niece and myself are no longer in the same position that we were in two years ago—that our worldly circumstances are now greatly narrowed. We thought it only due to ourselves not to press our indigence on the notice of those who had known us under happier circumstances."

"Fie! Miss Granby. I cannot agree with your philosophy at all. What is a friendship worth that will not help to ward off the strokes of ill-fortune? But I will lecture you on this subject some other day, and succeed in converting you, I trust, to a belief in a more charitable creed. For the present it is enough that I have found you, and you may rely upon it that I shall not readily lose sight of you again. I have been informed, how or by whom matters not, that Miss Agnes has been ordered to spend a month or two at New Brighton for the re-establishment of her health; and judging from her looks, I can well believe such to be the case. Now, listen, please. I have a cottage at New Brighton ready furnished, with a housekeeper in charge of it. It was bought and fitted up for the use of my sister, who generally passes some weeks there every summer. At present, however, she is in North Devon, and the cottage is empty. Now, if you and Miss Agnes will go and take up your abode there for so long a period as you choose to stay, you are truly and sincerely welcome to do so, and you will be obliging me very much into the bargain."

Miss Maria's fingers began to twitch and tremble, and for a moment or two she was unable to utter a word. Then she said: "Really, Mr. Esholt, while thanking you sincerely for your most generous offer, I am compelled to say that we shall be under the necessity of declining it. Neither my niece nor myself could think of putting ourselves under such an obligation to any one."

"Miss Granby," said Mr. Esholt more gravely than he had yet spoken, "it is absolutely necessary, so I am given to understand, that your niece should have the benefit of the sea-air. The means of obtaining what she requires are placed within your reach. Do you feel yourself justified, allow me to ask, in refusing those means, and thereby retarding your niece's recovery, and all for a slight question of obligation, as you choose to term it? Had your brother and mine been now alive, do you think that either of them would have hesitated to accept such a bagatelle at the hands of the other? While the memory of their friendship is with us, do not, I beg, stand on such trifling observances."

Miss Granby was silent, if not convinced. Her mental perturbation was great. At length she said: "I will leave my niece to decide the question for herself."

"Oh, as for me, no one but myself knows how I long to get out of these close stifling rooms," she replied, looking out wearily across the hot street. "I want to sit on the sands and watch the waves and to feel the cool sea-breeze. Were I to say otherwise, I should not be speaking the truth.—Don't be angry, Aunt Maria, but I feel as if I should never get well while I remain shut up here."

Mr. Esholt had won the day. So, before he went, it was agreed that the ladies should cross the river to New Brighton the next day but one. Meanwhile, he would arrange to have everything in readiness for their reception, and would come himself at the time appointed and see them safely to the end of their short journey.

Robert Esholt at this time was thirty-eight years old. He was tall and inclined to be thin, and had a very slight stoop of the shoulders. He had a long thin face and a prominent clear-cut nose. All the lines of his mouth and chin spoke of firmness and determination of will; but his eyes, of the darkest brown, rarely lost the kindly look which was natural to them, and lent a softness to his expression it would otherwise have lacked. His whole bearing was that of a keen clear-headed man of business, who knew his own mind and had the courage of his opinions. Few faces were better known on 'Change than that of Robert Esholt.

Mr. Esholt's visit passed like a freshening breeze over the parched lives of our two ladies. Next day, Agnes felt decidedly better than she had done since the beginning of her illness. She was in a pleasant flutter of spirits, and could talk of little else than Mr. Esholt's kindness and liberality and how she should enjoy herself at the seaside. Mr. Esholt was there to the minute, and saw them safely across the water and duly installed in Syringa Cottage. It was small, but tastefully furnished, and had a pleasant outlook across the mouth of the Mersey. The housekeeper and a girl were there to wait upon them; and by some magic of which they were not cognisant, they found their table furnished in a style to which they had been strangers since Mr. Granby's death, with all these little delicacies so tempting to an invalid's fastidious appetite, especially when coming unexpectedly. There, too, they found a well-filled bookcase, and what to Agnes was more precious than all else, a piano. Her own instrument had gone, one among so many other cherished objects, at the sale, and ever since her arrival in Liverpool she had felt like a stranger in a thirsty land for want of it. To-day, as she touched the keys caressingly with her fingers, she could scarcely restrain her tears. But for all that, he felt happier than she had felt for several months past.

Miss Esholt being still from home, the loneliness of his bachelor establishment seemed to strike Mr. Esholt in a way it had never done before during his sister's absence, so he asked permission to visit the ladies occasionally, a permission which they were only too happy to accord. So on Saturday afternoon he left his office earlier than usual and found himself at Syringa Cottage soon after two o'clock. The ladies were out somewhere on the sands, he was told, so he went in search of them. He saw them in the distance, Agnes seated in a donkey-chaise, and Miss Maria walking by her side. He stood for a moment or two to contemplate the picture, and then went forward to meet them. The crisp salt air and the sunshine, combined, it may be, with Mr. Esholt's sudden appearance, had called an evanescent wild-rose tint to Agnes's pallid cheeks. Mr. Esholt was struck with her loveliness—for loveliness rather than beauty was the term to apply to her—as he had not been struck before. The ladies received him with unaffected pleasure, and they all wandered about together till Miss Maria declared that Agnes had been out quite long enough. Then they went indoors and had a cosy cup of tea, after which Agnes played for a short time, and then Mr. Esholt rose to go. They pressed him to come again as soon as possible, and he was glad to promise that he would do so.

A month passed away, and found Mr. Esholt at the cottage two or three times a week. The fascination grew upon him, and he could not resist it—it may be that he made no effort to do so. It was something new to him, and he smiled when he thought of it, to find himself in the middle of the day longing for five o'clock to arrive; to find his thoughts, even when on 'Change, veering in the direction of the Cottage, while his eye would glance up unconsciously at the large clock visible thence and note the slow lapse of time. The ladies were quite as eager to see him as he was to hasten to them. He occupied their thoughts and monopolised their conversation in a way which could not but have flattered him had he been aware of it, while his more powerful mind dominated theirs and colored their lives far more than they suspected.

The autumn days grew shorter, and Christmas was within measurable distance, but still Mr. Esholt would not hear of the ladies leaving New Brighton. Whenever Miss Maria ventured to broach the subject, he put her down in a quick peremptory way which flattered her nerves for an hour afterwards, and made her afraid to hint at such a thing for at least a week to come. His visits were still as frequent as at first; neither wind nor weather kept him away. He was regarded by both ladies with a feeling of lively friendship—a feeling which his every word and action led them to believe was reciprocated. Nothing in his speech or manner betrayed anything beyond that; but all his life he had been trained to conceal whatever feelings it did not suit him to show on the surface. He wore a mask habitually in business, and it had become so far a second nature with him to do so that he often forgot, or did not care, to lay it aside in private.

One wet Sunday evening after his usual quiet farewell, Mr. Esholt held deeper communion than usual with himself on his way home. Standing near the funnel of the steamer, buttoned up in his waterproof and smoking his cigar, he pondered deeply a momentous question. "I am decidedly in love with this girl," he said to himself, "and have been from that first Saturday when I saw her on the sands." He was too sagacious and clear-headed to deceive himself in a matter about which so many men are self-deceived. "The question is, Shall I propose to her or shall I break the affair off?" He never for a moment doubted his ability to do the latter. "I have no reason to believe her heart is touched in the least, so that at present it is a question which concerns myself alone. I must go abroad shortly on business. Why not make that my wedding trip also? or else take the opportunity to break through this enchanted web as harmlessly as may be? But why not marry her, provided always that she would have me, which seems somewhat problematic! For one thing, there is a great disparity in our ages; but let me only succeed in touching her heart, be it ever so slightly, and that difficulty, if it be one, will quickly vanish.—But what would Janet think and say? That was the most awkward question of all—one which brought him, as it were, to a dead-lock.

He was still turning the point over in his mind, considering it from different points of view, when the steamer reached Liverpool. "Come what may," he said as he walked slowly across the landing-stage, "this day fortnight I will either propose to Agnes, or take the express train and break the neck of my passion by flying southward for a week or two after the swallows."

True to his self-made promise, Mr. Esholt let matters go as usual for another fortnight, showing neither by word nor sign that such things as love or marriage had any place in his thoughts. On the day fixed by himself he sought an interview with Miss Granby, and told her that he was desirous of marrying her niece, and wished to have her consent to mention the matter to Agnes. Miss Maria could hardly have been more surprised had the proposal been about to be made to herself. She held Mr. Esholt in the greatest respect, and stood somewhat in awe of him as well, so that her consent was readily given, though she could not help shedding a few tears as she gave it, while thinking of all that she and Agnes had gone through during the last two years, and of the bright prospect that had now revealed itself so unexpectedly before them.

Agnes sat like one spellbound when Mr. Esholt told her in a few brief impassioned words how deeply he loved her. Frost-bound, rigid as a statue, she sat, even after those words had ceased; while he stood before her, his elbow on the chimney-piece, waiting for her answer. Even in the midst of her surprise and dismay, it struck her as somewhat incongruous to hear this grave middle-aged man of the world discoursing in such wise to a girl like herself. It was as though some long extinct volcano had suddenly burst through the snows of centuries and revealed the fiery heart at work below; for to her youthful imagination Mr. Esholt seemed far older than he really was.

Mr. Esholt changed his balance from one foot to the other, and without thinking what he was doing, looked at his watch. He had not the slightest wish to hurry Agnes, but his business habits kept the upper hand of him even at a time like the present. The movement, slight as it was, brought Agnes back to actualities and helped to steady her thoughts. "I cannot answer you at once, Mr. Esholt," she faltered. "I must have time to think over what you have said. You have surprised me so much that I scarcely know how to express myself. My aunt shall write to you." And so, like a pale ghost, she fitted from the room. In her heart she thought she knew quite well what her decision would be, but just then she could not find courage to put it into words.

All the following week Mr. Esholt was more assiduous at business than usual, and more silent and self-absorbed in manner: only when his letters were brought in each morning he turned them slowly over one by one, as half hoping, half dreading to find that which seemed so long in coming. It came at last, a tiny billet in Miss Granby's crooked, angular hand, containing but three lines—an invitation to tea for the following afternoon.

Mr. Esholt's proposal to Agnes had opened the old wound afresh, which time was beginning to heal over. She was startled to find how dear to her heart the image of Wilmot Burrell still remained. It seemed like sacrilege to think of marrying another. The image was overthrown, never to be upheaved again; but in her eyes it was beautiful still. Mr. Esholt she respected, liked, looked up to with girlish reverence; but Wilmot, alas! she loved. Burning tears of love and shame watered her pillow again and again after Mr. Esholt's declaration. Whether she married him or not, the future lay bare and bleak before her, uncheered by hope, without one ray of sunlight to brighten the path which led onward into the dim and unknown future.

Supposing she were to refuse Mr. Esholt, she and her aunt could no longer continue to be the recipients of those kindnesses at his hands which had hitherto been put down to the score of the friendship which had existed between her father and the elder Mr. Esholt. Indeed, their long sojourn at the Cottage had of late, as she knew, been a source of silent worry to Miss Maria, and it was only for the sake of her, Agnes's, health that they had not brought their holiday to a close some time ago. Now they must perforce fall back into that hard-working, poverty-stricken life from which, by Mr. Esholt's kindness, they had been temporarily rescued.

Once Too Often.

A recent German paper tells the story of an elderly man who had for a wife one of those trying persons who, according to their own ideas, are always in the right, and who make it a point of conscience to prove every one else in the wrong.

The poor man was never allowed to make any statement without having it instantly disputed by his accurate but irritating spouse. She had acquired such a habit of correcting and contradicting him, that, according to the story, she one day made a mistake which gave her suffering husband a chance to laugh at her.

"Do you remember, my dear," he said in a retrospective mood, "the letter-case embroidered with pearl beads that you made for me with your own hands, when we became engaged? It was worn out years ago, but I can still see it very plainly. On one side there was embroidered a beautiful butterfly, and—"

And she always complained that Mr. Underfeld "was fond of telling stories without any point," whenever he referred to this conversation afterward.

The English census returns are showing the tendency of the time to leave the agricultural districts and flock into the cities and towns. In Northamptonshire there has been an average reduction of 20 per cent. in the population of the agricultural districts, and an increase in the manufacturing districts of from 30 to 50 per cent. Several of the larger villages have more than double. All the villages and small towns in South Lincolnshire show reduced populations as compared with 1881. Boston, however, keeps up, having been 18,330 in 1881, and 18,329 now. The agricultural districts in Norfolk also show decreases.

"August Flower"

I had been troubled five months with Dyspepsia. The doctors told me it was chronic. I had a fullness after eating and a heavy load in the pit of my stomach. I suffered frequently from a Water Brash of clear matter. Sometimes a deadly Sickness at the Stomach would overtake me. Then again I would have the terrible pains of Wind Colic. At such times I would try to belch and could not. I was working then for Thomas McHenry, Druggist, Cor. Irwin and Western Ave., Allegheny City, Pa., in whose employ I had been for seven years. Finally I used August Flower, and after using just one bottle for two weeks, was entirely relieved of all the trouble. I can now eat things I dared not touch before. I would like to refer you to Mr. McHenry, for whom I worked, who knows all about my condition, and from whom I bought the medicine. I live with my wife and family at 39 James St., Allegheny City, Pa. ALWAYS FIRST CLASS.—Peterson's Magazine continues to increase in popularity. Its June number is a capital specimen of its general excellence and the great improvements made at the beginning of the year. To the ladies "Peterson" is of special importance at this season when the thought necessarily uppermost in every woman's mind is "What to wear and how to wear it." These are questions which "Peterson" answers in the most simple and satisfactory manner. The beautiful double fashion plates give the newest Parisian toilettes, but give also designs of the freshest novelties in American costumes. Peterson evidently agrees with Mrs. Cleveland and other prominent society leaders in their determination to make American styles and fabrics dispute the palm with those of France. The magazine caters also in every possible way to the needs of housekeepers and home-makers. In point of literary attractions and illustrations it compares favorably with the highest priced periodicals. A new volume begins with the July number, try it for the next six months. Terms, $2.00 a year. $1.00 for six months. Address, PETERSON'S MAGAZINE, 306 Chestnut street, Philadelphia.
