If I this day have striven With thy bless'd Spirit, or have bow'd the knee To aught of earth in weak idolatry, I pray to be forgiven.

If in my heart has been An unforgiving thought, or word, or look, Though deep the malice which I scarce could brook, Wash me from the dark sin.

If I have turned away From grief or suffering, which I might relieve, Careless the cup of water e'en to give, Forgive me, Lord, I pray;

My sinful wanderings with a deeper smart, And more of mercy and of grace impart, My sinfulness to heal.

Not for myself alone. Would I those blessings of thy love implore; But for each penitent the wide world o'er, Whom thou has called thine own :

And for my heart's best friends Whose steadfast kindness o'er my painful years

Should o'er their path decline The light of gladness, or of hope, or health, Be thou their solace, and their joy, and wealth, As they have long been mine.

And now, O Father ! take The heart I cast with humble faith on thee. And cleanse its depths from each impurity, For my Redeemer's sake.

Through long years again. I have known one word hang star-like O'er a weary waste of years, And it only shone the brighter Looked at through a mist of tears; While a weary wanderer gathered Hope and heart on life's dark way. By its faithful promise shining Clearer day by day.

I have known a spirit calmer Than the calmest lake and clear As the heavens that gazed upon it, With no wave of hope or tear: But a storm had swept across it And its deepest depths were stirred. Never, never more to slumber,

I have known a word more gentle Than the breath of summer air, In a listening heart it nestled. And it lived forever there. Not the beating of its prison Stirred it ever, night or day; Only with the heart's last throbbing

Proclaim pardon through the shed blood of the incarnate Son of God. Insist upon the total ruin of mankind, and the supernatural grace of the Holy Spirit .-These are tough truths. Men fight against them at first. They call them old, crabbed, knotty doctrines. But when the natural man is slain, fairly brained and over with, it is by terrible blows from these hard knots. We have even a veneration for the knots in timber. They reveal a history in the grand old tree. Each tells of a limb that once sprang from that point, and is a scar made by the woodman's ax. It says, Here there was once beauty and strength, though there seems to be little of either now. Are scars always unsightly? What are those which the veteran soldier brings back from battle-fields which saved liberty to the nation and the world? So rough, gnerled characters, scarred all over with the conflicts of other days, call on us sometimes to stand before them with bared brews. Thus, Oliver Cromwell is a tough knot in English history, and the sentimental praters who call Charles I. a martyr 'think that Puritan name a sad blemish in the roll of British sovereigns. -But the world could ill spare that rough protuberance on the British Oak. A bough shot out there once which was its glory, and under the shadow of which liberty found shelter in the days of storm. Every knot in a tree is a chapter in its history .- The Advance.

The straight lines were crooked, and the crooked ones were so very crooked that they all seemed to be failing down and crawling away; but he tried ever so hard, and began to think he was doing wonders, when, just at the last, down fell a big drop of ink .-He tried to wipe it off, and that made it spread. Then he tried his tongue as he had seen the bigger boys do. Then he sat, feeling almost sick, and waited for something. What was it? A whipping! His sharp-nosed and sharpvoiced teacher had very little patience or judgment. Billy had blotted two pages just before, and she had premised him a whipping if he blotted this one. Soon he heard her walking up behind him.
