A Song of Long Ago.

A song of long ago
Sing it lightly, sing it low, Sing it softly—like the lisp of the lips we used to know—When our labor laughter spilled From our hearts forever filled With a music sweet as robin ever trilled.

Let the fragrant summer breeze,
And the leaves of locust trees, And the apple buds and blossoms and the wings of honey bees, All palpitate with glee Till the happy harmony Brings back each child joy to you and me.

Let the eyes of fancy turn Where the tumbled pippins burn Like amber in the orchard's lap of touse-led grass and fern;
And let the wayward wind, Still singing, plod behind The cider press—the good, old fashioned kind!

Blend in the song the moan
Of the dove that grieves alone And the wild whirr of the locust and the bumble's drowsy drone;
And the low of cows that call Through the pasture bars when all The landscape fades away at eventfall.

Then, far away and clear, Through the dusky atmosphere, Let the wailing of the kiltie be the only sound you hear.
Oh! sweet and sad and low
As the memory may know, Is the glad, pathetic song of long ago.

night and recommence her deprecations.

We had had three weeks of it. The night was thickish, and I was on duty on the main-top crow's nest. Not a sound broke the stillness of the night. Ever and anon the light of the moon broke forth fitfully, only to disappear again between the clouds. There was a sort of Scotch mist of rain which wetted to the bone and made me and the company of my watch (there was a couple of us left on deck) actually suffer from the cold, though it was a summer night.

"Pard," said my shipmate to me,

"what's that?"

We could see an indistinct something moving slowly through the mist towards the Columbia; we knew it was a boat of some sort by the slight phosphorescent trail it left upon the calm water; we guessed it must be a canoe, for the strokes were not synchronous. I hurried down and reported to the officer of the watch. When we had first sighted the canoe it must have been some half a mile off, and I need hardly say that it was absolutely invisible on deck.

But the officer of the watch came up into the top, and it was plain enough that the advancing object was a canoe paddled by a single man; and then the officer of the watch raised a rifle to his shoulder and let fly over the man's head; he didn't mean to hit him, you know, only to frighten him.

"For God's sake don't shoot!"

shouted the man; and he lighted a pine knob and held it above his head. "I've come to surrender!"

The officer ordered him to come aboard and report himself. We flung him a rope and he clambered up the side.

"A man white," evidently. He had on a pair of old tattered trousers, black with dirt and grime and grease; and a blue canvas shirt in the same condition, almost in rags. He bore the look of a hunted beast, and he seemed half-starved; his face was decorated with the most tremendous pair of black eyes I ever saw in my life—the lids were half closed—and the eyes were bloodshot. Somebody had evidently been knocking the fellow about; as he turned slightly, I noticed that his shirt was red with blood. The man had evidently been flogged; but though we could all tell that at a glance, none of us pitied him.

"Well, mister," said the officer, "what are you hanging about for. Are you a spy?"

"Worse than that," said the man,

"I've come to surrender and to split on my comrades yonder. I can tell you the Harbinger is if you'll make it worth my while. I was third streak aboard of her."

"Put him in irons," said the officer, coldly, "and set a sentry over him," and he turned on his heel.

I didn't bother myself about the deserter—I was too tired and too wet; and I turned into my hammock and slept like a top. When I came on deck next morning there was the deserter, the man who had come to us in a canoe through the fog, with a pair of handguns, standing on the bridge coming the ship, a quartermaster, revolver in hand, by his side.

By the bright light of the morning sun the man looked, if possible, uglier than ever. Somebody had given him an old jacket, which hid the signs of the flogging; but the fellow looked thoroughly miserable and thoroughly wicked.

We were running straight for the entrance of one of the innumerable bayous.

Suddenly a silent order was passed round to clear for action. It was a most puzzling order; there wasn't a sail in sight; but it was carried out rapidly enough, the discipline on board the Columbia being good.

In a few minutes every man was at his station. Our heavy guns were loaded and depressed. Suddenly the word was passed round among the men that the Confederate war steamer Harbinger was in the bayou, and that there would probably be a no-quarter fight in a few minutes. Uncle Sam's pay and Uncle Sam's rations, it was not for pay I fought, but for principles, and,

I suppose I must add, glory—you see School for the Blind.

We have before us the 20th annual report of the Board of Managers of the Halifax School for the Blind. The managers say they have reason to feel thankful to a kind providence for the continued welfare and prosperity of the Institution, and for the many blessings which they are now enabled to extend to the blind of the Maritime Provinces. The report refers to the increased accommodations added to the buildings for generous contributions to the cost of which thanks are due to the legislators and others. In concluding their report the managers say they cannot too strongly speak of the manner in which the Superintendent, Mr. C. F. Fraser, has performed not only the duties incumbent upon him, but also other duties and responsibilities for the good of the Institution. The friends of the blind throughout the Maritime Provinces can never repay the debt they owe to the Superintendent for the zeal, energy and enterprise exerted on behalf of that interesting class of young people for whom this Institution is conducted. The present prosperous condition of the School is mainly due to the untiring labors of Mr. Fraser. Directors consider it a pleasure to testify to their sense of the value of his services. The report of the Superintendent shows that 28 blind persons have been under instruction during the past year, 25 of whom were males and 13 females; 6 of these have since graduated or left the school, and one has been removed by death, making the total admitted Dec. 1st, 1890, 31, of whom 22 are males and 9 are females. Of these 19 are from the province of Nova Scotia, 9 from New Brunswick, 1 from Prince Edward Island, and 2 from Newfoundland.

An Efficient Improvement Society.

Some public spirited women in a winter resort in Florida have formed themselves into a society which call the Village Improvement Association, and have assumed the duty of keeping the streets clean. They employ a man to pick up every scrap of refuse which litters the pavement or gutter, and as this factum is practically in the employ and under the authority of every man in town whose vigilance is unnecessary, his work is thoroughly and efficiently accomplished. At intervals along the pavement they have caused to be placed neatly painted barrels, with a bit of vases binding the passer-by to utilize them by tossing into them the bits of paper, cigar stump or fruit skin which would otherwise be thrown down untidily. They have also organized the children into a society pledged not to throw any kind of litter into the public ways. That town is a model of Utopian cleanliness, and suggests the idea that "city mothers" instead of fathers might be successful. Such a society in Wolfville would be a great boon, and there is abundant work for it. We have been trying for a long time to get an improvement society organized, but have not been able. Will not the ladies take hold of the matter and see that our town is made the model of neatness and cleanliness that it should be.

For the past few years Wolfville has been steadily building up and every season has seen a greater "boom" in building operations than the season preceding. This year, we are told by builders, will see a greater amount of building done than any in the history of our town. A number of fine residences are to be erected, which will add much to the appearance of the place and make it more lively times for mechanics and others. We are glad to see these signs of prosperity and to know that our town is going ahead. Let us all strive to do our utmost to keep the ball rolling and our town will keep going to the front.

We have received the last two numbers of Canada, the new magazine recently started by Rev. M. B. Knight, at Boston, N. B. The numbers before us are well filled with good literature by the best of our Canadian writers, and the publication is a credit to its enterprising publisher and to Canada. What we want is a larger amount of such good, sound reading to crowd out the American literature that is flooding our homes and our land.

Next year, falls on March 29th, an unusually early date. The earliest date possible for Easter is March 23d, and this only in case the moon is full March 21st, when this date happens to fall on Saturday. This combination of circumstances is extremely rare. It occurred in 1693, 1761, 1817, and will happen again in 1900, 2076 and 2144, while during the three following centuries it is not once on the books at this early date.

After the Battle.

EDITOR OF THE ACADIAN:

Sir—From Atlantic to Pacific, through out the length and breadth of this broad fair land of ours, a great political battle has been fought, and victory has again happily perched on the banner of the Right. Sir John A. Macdonald, the "grand old man" whose magnificent statesmanship and wise and patriotic policy have made Canada what she is today—the envy of the great Republic and the pride and admiration of the British Empire. Now that the smoke has cleared away it is not so interesting to your readers to glance over the battle field. The majority for the Government exclusive of Manitoba, Ont., in doubt, and Algoma, Ont., Huntington, Q., and Carleton, B. C. yet to be heard from, is substantially as follows:

Table with 3 columns: Province, Lib., Con. Grit. Ontario: 46, 44; Quebec: 23, 21; Nova Scotia: 16, 5; New Brunswick: 13, 3; P. E. Island: 2, 4; Manitoba: 4, 1; British Columbia: 5, 0; N. W. Territories: 4, 0; Totals: 123, 88.

Majority for Government 35. This is a good working majority, and this is in the face of the most determined and persistent efforts of the Laurier-Longley-Cartwright-Winnipeg-Farriste-Hittle combination to catch the popular vote by the delusive and misleading cry of Unrestricted Reciprocity, and in spite of a bitterly hostile combination of all the Grit Local Governments in the Dominion to defeat the Federal Government and raid the treasury. This splendid and decisive victory, in conjunction with the famous "Blake letter," has killed U. H. as surely as the repeal of the election of '97. This U. H. was a hybrid from the beginning. It was hatched in Washington in Mr. Wiman's patent Yankee Canadian incubator, and was found to be a sort of mongrel bird, a monstrosity, with an Annexation head, a free-trade carcass, and legs and tail made up of discrimination against Great Britain and direct taxation. Sir John forced its numerous parents to bring it to Canada in the winter season, and in its pin-feather stage, and the hazing climate of this country was too much for the ghost at the situation, and it gave up the ghost at the polls on the 6th of March. Its death was sudden and the verdict returned was an inglorious and the verdict returned was "kill" by the votes of the Electors of Canada." R. I. P. say we.

The people's voice has spoken to the Annexationists on both sides of the line. "We will have none of it nor of you." The people have decided the trade policy of this Dominion for another quarter of a century. The U. H. was "understanding" this, and it is highly probable that the U. H. government will now be willing to negotiate a reciprocity party with the Canadian government which shall include a settlement of the vexed fisheries question, and be fair to both countries. Our member for King's in his campaign speeches characterized Sir John's proposals for a treaty as a "hollow mockery," but he seems to have changed his mind since the election as he told the people on Declaration Day that if Sir John brought down a bill for reciprocal trade relations with the U. S. he would vote for it. Just so; but it would have been better for his country if a member had been elected who would vote with the government on other measures as well. The opposition boasted that free trade would sweep the Maritime Provinces, but their boom swept the wrong way for them, and the Provinces by the sea have the honor of giving Sir John the larger half of his majority and occupy a commanding position with the government. The Nova Scotia ministers may well feel proud of the record of their Province in this election—10 to 5 for the government, and the largest majorities ever given in any election. Halifax, 1000; Colchester, 84; Cumberland, 881; Pictou, 840; Cape Breton, 491 and 691; Antigonish, 236, while the Grit members barely exceeded 100, except Pictou in Yarmouth, 584. New Brunswick tells the same story—13 to 3 with upwards of 1100 in St. John city and county; St. John city, 586; Westmorland, 1985; Kent, 700; Victoria, 803; Northumberland, 474; while the combined majorities of the three Grit members elected is only 423. In P. E. Island the government was two out of six. Liberal-Conservatives are proud of such a record, and Grits, especially the Local Government, the whole of which labored so hard and sacrificed so much in a vain attempt to defeat the "Old Man," would do well to ponder it carefully. When N. B. stands so well in the favor of the government of the day, it seems a pity that King's county is again left out in the cold. All who have the best interests of the county at heart must regret this, and I venture to say no one regrets it more than Dr. Borden and those who voted for him. The contest in King's was a sharp one. Dr. Borden kept the issue, U. H. before the people first, last and all the time. It was the supreme question, the most important question ever before the people. He defined it as absolute free trade between the two countries, each country making its own tariff, no direct taxation, no discrimination. Hon. Edward Blake in that suppressed letter states that Unrestricted Reciprocity of that kind is impracticable, an illusory dream, not acceptable to the U. S. In his view only Commercial Union is practicable, and that would lead to direct taxation, discrimination against Great Britain, means a common tariff, with that tariff controlled at Washington, and the ultimate result would be annexation when Canada was helpless to make a bargain.

Edward Blake was the ablest leader the Grit party ever had, and he is the ablest man and greatest statesman in the Liberal party in Canada today. Which is right, Dr. Borden or Edward Blake? The government was corrupt, and the most obnoxious to criticism of any government he ever knew. The N. P. was "legalized robbery." The people were overburdened with taxation. Every man who bought a barrel of flour paid 75 cents more for it because of the duty, whether he bought American or Canadian flour. We want free trade and must have it. Sir John's proposals for reciprocity were a "hollow mockery," etc., etc. The doctor presented his side of the question ably, strongly and most penetratingly, and he won his election; but his majority of 448 was cut down to 161, and such a victory is virtually a defeat. It is a hint to put his house in order for a move in '96. In Ward 9 the majority was cut down from 32 to 16; Grand Pre, 32 to 17; Gasperau, 70 to 52; In Wolfville Bill had a majority of 25; Canaan, 1; Kentville, 80. The Township of Horton gave Bill a majority of 15; so that Horton and Aylesford combined gave Bill a majority of six, and Cornwallis his honor of electing Dr. Borden and placing the cranny out in the cold shades of opposition once again. The majorities of opposition were as follows: The majorities were piled up right along the C. V. R. which a Dominion subsidy helped to build.—Sheffield, 61; Canning, 64; Kingsport, 63; Scott's Bay, 39; Canada, 32. Where will the subsidy come from for the extension? Sir R. Cartwright says money spent in N. S. for railways is thrown into rat holes. Sir John shouldn't throw any more to the rats. We will leave King's county politics now, hoping better things for the future, and ask what the elections have done for Canada. They have again placed in power the "grand old man," who for a quarter of a century has stood with his hand on the helm of the Canadian ship of state and safely guided her through all the tempests and breakers that have raged around her, and thereby assured her safety for another five years. They have placed in power the man who built the great Canadian Pacific railway whose steel rails link together the great Provinces of Canada and have brought British Columbia on "the Pacific within seven days journey of Halifax on the Atlantic. Who completed the thread two years before the time specified in which his opponents said it would take all the resources of the British Empire to build, the annual earnings of which new equal the revenues of this Dominion in central Canada, when completed it would not earn enough to pay for the grease on its axles. They have placed in power the man whose wise protective policy has built up manufactures all over the country, and increased the output of our coal mines so greatly that a million dollars of royalty have been paid into the treasury of the Local Government for the benefit of the people of N. S. in the last ten years; the man who has made the credit of Canada second to none in London; the man in a word who has made the mightiest colony in the greatest Empire the world has ever seen, and the man who is above all other men in Canada preeminently qualified to negotiate a treaty with the U. S. Government in the interests of this country. The elections have shown that the people of Canada are true to themselves, true to their country and true to the motherland. What if the U. S. still refuses us a fair trade treaty? We have lived and prospered without it since 1860, and we are infinitely better prepared to live without it now than we were then. We have nothing but friendly feelings for our neighbors and will be broader trade relations with them, but if they will not help us, then we ask them to let us alone. With the kind protection of England we can work out our own salvation none daring to make us afraid. We are the fortunate possessors of half the North American continent and not the poorer half either. This Canada of ours is a growing nation; too vast in territory; too distinctly independent in sentiment; too thoroughly British in origin, and too important ever to be surrendered to England. I believe the destiny of Canada is to go steadily onward taking in Province after province until her flag floats over all British North America, and still go steadily onward towards the realization of the idea of a Great Britain in America with the spirit of the motherland in laws and liberty and with the idea of love that binds us to her unbroken. King's Co., March 16, '91 N. P.

People come to New York to spend money and they also come here to get it, which they don't always accomplish. One of these enterprising Americans recently brought a lot of trotting horses here from California, thinking to realize well on them; but he is now sad and contemplative. His cattle though wanted to do 2.25, and even 2.22, sold for $200 each and even less, barely enough to pay freight, and he finds himself a heavy loser.

The celebrated Fayerweather will fight it over, the contesting heirs withdrawing and the immense estate left now go to the testator desired. This will divide some 5 millions of dollars among several deserving objects.

Politics in this country is more than a science; it is an art and a very fine art. Every move on the part of the ultra board is supposed to have some ulterior object in view, and so Blaine of Maine in his treatment with the South American States is charged with aiming at the presidency. You don't lay yourself on your country's altar here without an eye to the main chance.

The Niagara canal is still before the public, and a party leaves here today to inspect the big ditch and report upon its prospects.

If I may be allowed to revert to the "sales" I can tell you that Russel Sage, the banker, bought himself a trotter, and that the well known Robert Bonner paid $8,000, at Letticeville, for a sister to "Maude S." At the same sale, J. W. Ellsworth of Chicago paid $4,000 for a Gallop Indian Bible brought $1,050, and two letters written by Columbus were sold to Dodd, Mead & Co. for $4,300 and $1,600. Some friends of the Art Museum are trying to secure for $15,000, a collection of 98 Japanese swords for that institution. SCOTIA. New York, March 14th, 1891.

S. P. C. A. "AND THEY HAD A HELPER" "Observer" in your last issue, seems to have been but by seeing a pair of horses suffering from hunger and cold, by being fastened up at one of our village rum selling, drunkard-making inns. I am surprised at "Observer" to think he would spend all his time in taking in the situation of the owner of the suffering team, instead of informing the agent of the S. P. C. A. I am the agent of the S. P. C. A. and am always willing and ready to attend to any reliable complaint made to me or the committee of the S. P. C. A. I have had some experience with just such specimens of humanity as "Observer," who would lounge around a hotel and when summoned to give evidence against the rum-seller, would not give one straight answer. I am still prepared to attend to "Observer's" case if he will come out and give his correct name and also the name of the owner of the horses exposed. My business is situated in the centre of the town, so it is impossible for me to attend to the hotels. I am a friend to all domesticated animals, especially the horse, and would do all in my power to relieve him from suffering, especially when caused by rum, which is too often the case. But I must say, I do not like the way "Observer" stands behind the bush and shoots his cowardly arrows at our humane society, which is yet in its infancy, but is composed of some of our most respectable citizens, who are always willing and ready to assist in relieving the sufferings of either man or beast. Thanking you, Mr. Editor, for space for reply, I am yours very truly, J. J. BROWN, Agent, S. P. C. A.

After spending the evening very agreeably, they departed to their homes leaving $43.50, mostly cash, to cheer the heart of their pastor. Handbook Items. Politics is beginning to lose its interest here. It is fast losing its hold on the public mind. One or two other topics have been discussed in our town this week. At this rate in about a fortnight's time we would never know by walking through the streets of Handcock and mingling in conversation with its people that such a thing as a general election ever took place. It will soon be forgotten and will continue an unknown topic till a new election is announced. Political sentiment grows in fervor till it reaches white heat and then when the crisis is reached the temperature begins to fall and in an alarmingly short time is out of sight. If the political sentiment that has been manifested these weeks could be apporportioned throughout the whole five years between the elections, people would not forget themselves to such an extent during an election contest and would be able to vote more intelligently upon the questions of the nation.

It is astonishing what fool people will make of themselves during an election contest. It would seem that their lives depended upon the issues at stake by the way they throw into it. There are men in this place of opposite political views that during the past few weeks have scarcely recognized each other on the street. Politics has made them avowed enemies. People forget that everyone has a right to his own views and that because men differ politically that should not prevent their being friends. What we want is less excitement and more common sense in politics. People should learn to discuss matters with less agitation. There are two sides to all questions and it is no reason because one differs with another in politics or in religion that that should necessitate his being a rogue or a fool. JACK HYDE.

From India. BY SEA. No. 1.—LANDING.

As your ship stands in toward the west coast of the Bay of Bengal, the first sight of land is unlike anything about the coasts of the Maritime Provinces, or New England. You see land but it is the range of the Ghats, from ten to thirty miles inland, shooting up its jagged peaks in great profusion and also in great confusion. The real coast line, until you are within five miles of it, has the appearance of great patches of reefs growing out of a fog-bank. As the steamer draws near—the mist must get too near on account of the sand bars—you discover that the reefs are stately palms springing up in clumps, and whose roots are bashed by the ocean, so low is the land. Approaching Madras, the city look, as though one-third was submerged beneath the tide. It was very smooth when we landed, but there are times when cyclones and tornadoes are in a frisky mood, when the whole coast is a mass of foam. At Madras there is a breakwater formed by huge square blocks of conglomerate building material, being piled up in no particular order except that of a curved line, enclosing a good sized patch of the Bay, that answers for a dock. There are hundreds of fishermen all about the steamer, even when you are several miles out at sea, silyly dressed in a cod-line about the waist and a piece of rag the size of a pocket handkerchief, sitting or standing on their "cutters" as they fish. These cutters consist of two flattened log tied together and having the front end turned up, looking not unlike an ancient stone drag. You will not be forced to use this craft in landing though the mate may endeavor to convince you that such is the case. Your landing boat is a unique structure, hard to describe, but if you ever made boats of pea-pods by splitting the concave edge and propping the sides open with sticks across, there you have an exact model, sticks and all. The craft is about 30 feet long by 5 wide and 5 deep amidships, and either end will do for the head. The principal part of the car is a timber the size and length of an average fence-pole of the old school. To the outer end of this is attached a piece that looks like, and is about the size of the head of a half-barrel. There are from six to ten of each boat with two coolies on a side, besides the steersman, who wields an exceptionally long sweep at the end for the time being used as the stern. You may sit on the lambroo matting at the bottom if you are timid, or perch on one of the narrow cross-trees and let your feet hang—anywhere, if there is a dash of grit in your blood. If there is a swell on, and there always is at Simlipatam, the boat is allowed to go ashore side on, "sure death" to a Canadian model, but these are unique and you find yourself drawn into shoal water, out of reach of the big breakers, before you can catch your breath. Two men wade out with a real arm-chair between them on their shoulders; you can trust them for old Indian friends are with you. If you had happened to have been alone they might have held you over the water until the business was settled by the placing of a rufus in the nearest stretched palm or a dip into the nearest eye-Vizianagram, Feb. 4th, 1891.

WHY ARE SOME PEOPLE ALWAYS LATE? They never look ahead nor think. People have been known to wait till planting season, run to the grocery for their seeds, and then report over it for 24 months, rather than stop and think what they will want for the garden. VICKS SEEDS never disappoint. Is the verdict from the millions who have planted them. If it is Flower or Vegetable Seeds, Plants, Bulbs, or anything in this line, MAKE NO MISTAKE this year, but send to cents for Vicks' Floral Guide, deduct the 10 cents from first order, it costs nothing.
