THE CONTEST TO-DAY.
 The political contest which is being decided to-day has been short and bitter. Most people will be glad that it has been short, but every right thinking elector must regret that it seems to have been necessary to import so much personal animosity into it. We have had far too much of this sort of thing in election contests in this county and elsewhere.

It is to be deplored that the popular opinion on the general administration of public affairs can not be recorded at the polls in a calm and judicial way—on the merits of public policy and on the record of public men, unclouded by the heat of political strife, and unbiased by political envy and rancor.

WHAT WILL YORK SAY?
 The electors of York are saying today that they shall represent them in the legislature for the next four years. They are saying more than that; they are saying that they shall lead the government of the province, and that the policy of the government shall be. York has spoken on this question more than once before, and she will not go back on her record today. For ten years past the government of the province has been led from York. Very able and intelligent men from other counties have held seats in the legislature, and in the executive council; but it is no disparagement to any of them to say, that the eminent qualifications of the leader of the government, have made him easily first among his peers. York has been honored through him, and has honored herself in supporting him so loyally, and in sending him to the legislature with a full contingent in hearty and thorough sympathy with him. Her interests have not suffered thereby. To some one of the constituencies the honor and the benefit of sending the premier to the legislature must fall, and it has been the good fortune of this county to hold this distinction, not only during the term of office of the present government, but of that which preceded it. When the honor and the distinction are taken away, it would not be surprising that York itself would do it; and yet there are those who think this possible. We do not agree with them; we believe that York today is saying that she desires that Andrew G. Blair shall lead the government of this province in the future, as in the past; and that he shall have his hands strengthened by having a full ticket with him, as an indication of the confidence which the county has in his ability, and in his worthiness to lead.

AND NOW FOR THE VERDICT.
 To-day in all the Constituencies of the Province, with the single exception of Madawaska, the people's verdict is being rendered. By the time this issue of THE HERALD reaches its readers, the issue now pending will have been practically decided. The politicians have had their say, and now the people are talking. We are soon to have the verdict of the final court of appeal.
 The government await it with the fullest confidence. They are assured from all quarters that the people will approve their administration of the affairs of the province since they were last entrusted to their hands, and will give an emphatic endorsement to their policy of wise and progressive legislation, of prudent and economical management of the provincial finances, of increased efficiency in all the public services, of maintaining intact the rights of the province, and of carrying out in spite of all obstacles, and in the face of opposition without and within the legislature the reforms to which they pledged themselves when they assumed the seals of office.
 To-day the people are pronouncing their opinion on the policy and the record of the government in the past, and declaring their will for the future. We must mistake public sentiment if the result will not be a most complete vindication of the executive and a well-merited rebuke to those who have so persistently and maliciously assailed their policy and misrepresented their acts.
 The government is thoroughly representative of the people, and in close touch with them—it is led by a statesman whose ability is everywhere acknowledged, and it appeals to the people on its record with a full assurance that it will be judged on its merits and will not be found unworthy to receive a renewal of their confidence.

The following is taken from a despatch sent to the Toronto Globe from St. John. Can it be possible there is truth in the report: "The visit of Sam. Hughes, M. P., to keep the Orangemen in line re the promotion of Sir John Thompson to the premiership was kept very quiet. Mr. Hughes arrived in St. John Wednesday afternoon and in the evening had a conference with several leading Orangemen. He told them if the company with the John Thompson and Mr. Meredith were carried out the Manitoba school matter would be dropped. If not, immediate legislation on the question would result. Mr. Hughes left the scene night for Nova Scotia to meet the Orangemen there. He is now in Prince Edward Island visiting Orangemen to bring them in line, and will return here again. Hon. George Foster is alleged to have approached grand master Fowler on the subject before he left for England."

MONUMENT.
 Oct. 17.—The farmers of this locality have finished storing the last of the season's crop. The crop in general has been an abundant one. Hay was a very heavy crop in this part of the country; oats are turning out well; and the sound of threshing machines is heard on every side; potatoes are a large crop, but have turned out sound and of extra quality; wheat is a poor crop. Ploughing is now the order of the day, and farmers are busy preparing the soil for next year's crop. There has been much ploughing done already and the fall work is well advanced.
 J. E. Murchie is one of our foremost farmers. He owns and works about three hundred acres of land, and raises large crops of hay, oats, wheat and potatoes. He keeps a large number of horses and cattle, and on his farm may be seen some fine colts of trotting stock. Mr. Murchie is also a successful lumberman, giving employment to a large number of men and teams every winter in the lumber woods.

The Orangemen of Wellington, L. O. L. No. 57, held their annual social and basket sale on the thirteenth instant. The evening being fine and the roads good, the crowd was large. After a few remarks by the stage manager, John Dixon, the following program was given through: Instrumental music, Miss Ada Slater; recitation, Caleb's Courtship, Miss May Chapman; dialogue, Peleg and Patience, by Miss Annie Stewart; Miss Jamie Dickson; Miss Jamie Edgar, Bobb. Mrs. M. Kennedy and J. Leslie Kennedy; song and music by Mrs. Thos. Slater; recitation, grandma's bean, by Miss Mary Kennedy; negro dialogue, the quack doctor, by Charlie Nicholson, John Dickson and J. Leslie Kennedy; song and music by Miss Annie Stewart; recitation, what Biddy said in the police court, by Miss Bella Carter; recitation by George Crawford. After the program the baskets were sold by Thomas Slater, auctioneer, after which the crowd enjoyed dancing until a late hour. Great credit is due to the entertainment committee for the able manner in which they discharged their duty. The receipts amounted to thirty-seven dollars for the Orange hall benefit fund.

The sons of temperance division have elected new officers, which are as follows: J. Leslie Kennedy, W. P.; Miss Mary Chapman, W. A.; David Dykeman, F. S.; John Greer, T.; Mr. Crawford, chap.; Miss Susie Kennedy, C.; Burns Edgar, A. G.; Fred Saunders, R. S.; Miss Jennie Kennedy, A. R. S.; David Lyons, O. S.; Mr. Anderson, I. S.; Thomas H. Kennedy, P. W. P.; Miss Christine Kennedy, organist. The members of this division would not have elected a more suitable member for W. P. than L. Kennedy, as he is a strong temperance man and attends very regularly. Your correspondent wishes him every success in his new office.

AVERY'S PORTAGE.
 Oct. 20.—As some of the farmers were returning from school meeting on the 18th inst., they saw smoke issuing from the roof of A. B. Avery's dwelling, and of course all hastened to the scene, but when they got there it was found to be useless to try and get the fire controlled. All went to work with a will and succeeded in saving all that was in the house, after that they turned their attention to the store and barn. In less than an hour the fire had done its work, and the buildings were burned to the ground. Fortunately for him he had sold his hay and grain, and his potatoes were not dug. We understand he is not going to build again, as the place is mortgaged for $500 and insured for $400, and is to be sold at auction next Monday. The fire caught in the roof of George Palmer's barn, but was put out before it had got under headway.

After the marriage ceremony was performed, about sixty guests repaired to the dining hall, where they partook of a sumptuous repast. The presents were numerous and costly. Mr. and Mrs. Boone's friends wish them all the happiness this world can afford.

A ROOF OF SALT.
 This remarkable lake may be seen at any time during the year, fully exposed, being even at its best when the sun is shining directly upon it. This wonderful body of water is one of the saltiest of the salt lakes, and is situated near Obdorsk, Siberia. The lake is nine miles wide and seventeen long, and within the thickness of the crust. In the long ago rapid evaporation of the lake's water left great salt crystals floating on the surface. In course of time these cakes together. Thus the waters were finally entirely covered. In 1878 the lake found an underground outlet into the river Ob, which lowered its surface about three feet. The salt crust was so thick, however that it retained its old level, and now presents the curious spectacle of a salt-roofed lake. The salt crust increases six inches in thickness every year. The many islands with which the lake is studded are said to act as braces and to help keep the arched salt crust in position.

It is reported the natives have made attacks on other European stations.
 The charges made against Rev. R. S. Crisp by Rev. D. D. Currie are to be investigated. The conference special committee met Wednesday afternoon and considered the matter. The general opinion was that an investigation should be held, even though Mr. Currie declined to assist the conference by formulating his charges and presenting them in the regular way. Some arrangements were made which will enable the committee to begin the enquiry and the whole matter will be probed to the bottom.
 Mr. Spence's crew were on their way to the woods, they stopped for the night at the house of one Mr. McCall, on the Woodstock road. One of the teams was made up of four horses and a large wagon, the wagon being heavily loaded with oats, quilts, and the men's clothes. The men went to bed leaving this wagon standing in the yard. When they arose in the morning nothing of the wagon or its load remained except the iron work. Both wagon and load had been burned during the night. The cause of the fire is unknown, but some think it caught from a spark dropped the night before from a pipe; others think the load was stolen and the cart burned to hide the theft. The loss is estimated at between $300 and $400.
 Thirty thousand pilgrims have started from the Kremlin for Trotza, Russia, to celebrate the five hundredth anniversary of the death of St. Sergius. They are accompanied by one thousand of the clergy bearing sacred symbols and images. The pilgrims passed last night in the village of Metshichij in the open air. Their kerseene lamps revealed a weird scene. For three miles along the road the pilgrims were huddled together in groups, sleeping on sacks of bracken bread. The whole distance is forty miles. It is expected one hundred thousand pilgrims will assemble at the Trotza monastery. Cosack regiments are leading and guarding the procession. St. Sergius was the chief actor in the fourteenth century struggle to throw off the Tartar yoke.

SELECT STORY.

COUNT OF MONTE-CRISTO;

REVENGE OF EDMUND DANTES.

CHAPTER VI.

THE SIGNAL TELEGRAPH.

"Yes," said Madame de Villefort; and it is still entirely within the power of my husband to cause the will, which is now in the hands of Valentine, to be altered in her favor.

"Do you think," said Madame de Villefort, "that Valentine is in league with him? She has always been opposed to this marriage, and I should not be at all surprised if what we have just seen and heard is nothing but the execution of a plan concerted between them."

"Madame," said Villefort, "believe me, a fortune of 900,000 francs is not so easily renounced."

"She could, nevertheless, make up her mind to renounce the world, sir, since it is only about a year ago that she herself proposed entering a convent."

"Never mind," replied Villefort; "I say that this marriage shall be consummated!"

"Notwithstanding your father's wishes to the contrary?" said Madame de Villefort, selecting a new point for attack, "that is a serious thing!"

"What!" said the count, the approbation of whose eyes Villefort had frequently solicited during this speech. "What do you say that M. Norrier disinherit Madoiselle de Villefort because she is going to marry M. le Baron Franz d'Epiny?"

contact. Although General d'Epiny served under Napoleon, did he not retain the royalist sentiments? And was he not the person who was assassinated one evening on leaving a Bonapartist meeting to which he had been invited on the supposition of his favoring the cause of the Emperor?"

"No, M. le Comte—I hope—I assure you I will do all I can," stammered Villefort.

"Oh," said Monte-Cristo, "I allow of no excuse. On Saturday, at six o'clock, I shall be expecting you, and if you fail to come, I shall think—far from shall I know to the contrary?—that this house, which has remained uninhabited for twenty years, must have some gloomy tradition or dreadful legend connected with it."

"I will come, M. le Comte, I will be sure to come," said Villefort, eagerly.

"Thank you," said Monte-Cristo; now you must permit me to take my leave of you to see a thing on which I have some time mused for hours together."

"What is it?"

"A telegraph. So now I have told my secret."

"A telegraph!" repeated Madame de Villefort.

"Yes, a telegraph! I had often seen one placed at the end of a road on a hill, and in the light of the sun its black arms, bending in every direction, always reminded one of the claws of an immense beetle; and I assure you it was never without emotion that I gazed upon it for I could not help thinking how wonderful it was that these various signs should be made to cleave the air with such precision as to convey to the distance of three hundred leagues the ideas and wishes of a man sitting at a table at one end of the line to another man similarly placed at the opposite extremity, and all this effected by the simple act of volition on the part of the individual communicating the intelligence. At length I experienced a desire to observe nearer this living chrysalis, and to endeavor to understand the secret part played by those insect adepts simply by means of successively pulling different pieces of string. I shall visit one in the open country, where I shall find a good-natured simpleton who knows no more than the machine he is employed to work."

"You are a singular man," said Villefort.

"What line would you advise me to study?"

"Indeed!" returned Monte-Cristo; "that is a prejudice on your part, M. de Villefort, for which I am quite at a loss to account."

"I do like Auteuil, sir," said the proctor, making an evident effort to appear calm.

"But I hope you will not carry your antipathy so far as to deprive me of the pleasure of your company, sir," said Monte-Cristo.

"No, M. le Comte—I hope—I assure you I will do all I can," stammered Villefort.

"Oh," said Monte-Cristo, "I allow of no excuse. On Saturday, at six o'clock, I shall be expecting you, and if you fail to come, I shall think—far from shall I know to the contrary?—that this house, which has remained uninhabited for twenty years, must have some gloomy tradition or dreadful legend connected with it."

"I will come, M. le Comte, I will be sure to come," said Villefort, eagerly.

I shall visit one in the open country, where I shall find a good-natured simpleton who knows no more than the machine he is employed to work."

thirteen, fourteen, fifteen, sixteen, seventeen, eighteen, Ah, I miss three! they were here last night, sir—I am sure they were here—I counted them. It must be the son of Merse Simon who has stolen them; I saw him strolling about here this morning. Ah! the young rascal, stealing in a garden, he does not know where that may lead him to!"

"Certainly, it is wrong," said Monte-Cristo, "but you should take into consideration the youth and greediness of the delinquent."

"Of course," said the gardener, "but that does not make it the less unpleasant. But, sir, once more I beg pardon; perhaps you are an official that I am detaining here?"

"I have read so," replied Monte-Cristo; "but I am not a doctor, and I do not eat them preserved as the Romans did."

"What did the Romans eat them?" said the gardener—"eat dormice?"

"I have read so," replied Monte-Cristo; "but I am not a doctor, and I do not eat them preserved as the Romans did."

"What did the Romans eat them?" said the gardener—"eat dormice?"

"I have read so," replied Monte-Cristo; "but I am not a doctor, and I do not eat them preserved as the Romans did."

THE KEY TO HEALTH.

BURDOCK BLOOD BITTERS.

For eight years I was troubled with a sore on my leg which resulted from having it broken. The doctors kept me in bed five months trying to heal it up, but all to no purpose. I tried all sorts of salves, liniments, ointments, pills and blood medicines but with no benefit. In 1885 it became so bad that I had to sit on one chair and keep my foot on another for four months. I could not put my foot on the ground or the blood would rush out in a stream and my leg swelled to twice its natural size. Eleven running sores developed on it which reduced me to a living skeleton (I lost 70 lbs. in four months). Friends advised me to go to the hospital; but I would not for I knew they would take my leg off. The doctor then wanted to split it open and scrape the bone, but I had never heard of Burdock Blood Bitters then, but I read of a minister, Rev. Mr. Stout, who had been cured of a severe abscess on the neck by B. B. B. I would try it. I washed the leg with the Bitters and took them according to directions. After using one bottle I could walk on crutches, after taking three, I threw away the crutches, took a scythe and went to work in the field. At the end of the sixth bottle my leg was entirely healed up; pieces of loose bone had worked out of it and the corals came back to their natural places again. That was nine years ago and it has never broken out since. I can walk five miles to-day as fast as any one, and all this I owe to B. B. B. It has certainly saved my leg if not my life. I cheerfully recommend it to all sufferers. Give B. B. B. a trial, and it will cure you as it did me.

Yours truly, Wm. McNeer, St. Ives P. O., Ont.

Mr. F. C. Sanderson, the druggist of St. Marys, Ont., certifies to the entire truthfulness of the remarkable statement made by Mr. McNeer, and says that several other wonderful cures have been made in the district by this unrivalled remedy for bad blood, dyspepsia, biliousness, constipation and all diseases of the stomach, liver, bowels and blood.

"Well, if that ain't mean!" exclaimed the prisoner. "Every one of the stories in this paper they've gimme to read is to be continued, an' me to be hung next week."

It is a singular fact that the cheapness of an article should even temporarily retard its sale, and yet that was the experience of Messrs. Tuckett & Son in the introduction of their now famous "Myrtle Navy" tobacco. People who had been in the habit of smoking the finest Virginia tobacco, could not for a time be made to believe that they were offered the same article at about one half the old price, and it was only by slow degrees that they were induced to put the question to the test of an actual trial. When they did adopt that test, however, it never failed to satisfy them.

Pointing at the caudal appendage of the hand organ monkey, Quibble remarked: "The tail of a wayside din."

Itch, mange and scratches of every kind, on human or animal, cured in 30 minutes by Woolford's Sanitary Lotion. Warranted by Davies, Staples & Co.

Dinling—"Why did you leave the lecture platform, Larkin?" Larkin—"Well, I was egged on to take that step."

"Universal household remedy," is the common people's name for Johnson's Anodyne Liniment.

Conductor—"Look here, my man; what under heaven are you ringing the bell at both ends for? O'Rafferty—Sure, an Oi want both inds of the car to stop."
