The President's Wife

(By N. C. W. C. News Service.)
From the land of the midnight sun, where a few Ursuline Sisters are struggling to implant the true faith in the hearts of the spiritually-starved Eskimo children, to the portals of the White House, is a far cry, but through the Little Flower of the Child Jesus the two were linked last week.

Mrs. Woodrow Wilson's interest in the work being done by the Ursulines, who are endeavoring to build a hospital in Alaska for the Eskimo children, was manifested at the "white elephant" sale held in Washington under the auspices of the Little Flower of the Child Jesus, the patroness of Alaska, by the gift of a handsome vase, which netted a substantial sum at auction in the final day of the sale.

Notable among other gifts Minard's Liniment for sale every where.

Leprosy in Japan

The Director of Koyama Leper Hospital, Japan, has gotten out a booklet describing the institution and giving some important facts regarding the leper and his disease.

"Japan is no doubt" one of the countries most contaminated by leprosy. How many lepers are there in Japan? Official statistics give 23,000 for the year 1898, and this number is certainly far below the real one, and probably it ought to be doubled.

"In short, it seems difficult not to look upon leprosy as a national danger for Japan.

"The Koyama Leper Hospital was the first of its kind to be established in Japan in the year 1889 by Rev. Father Testewide, a Catholic missionary. It is five miles from Gotemba, at the foot of the famous volcano Fuji.

"The missionary has no stipends from the hospital, and there are no nurses. Two lepers chosen from the most intelligent are in charge of dealing out the drugs and of dressing the wounds; they discharge their duty as skillfully as trained nurses.

"Life in such a hospital would be unbearably monotonous if these unfortunate inmates were not now and then treated to some distractions and relaxations. One of their greatest pleasures is stage playing; they make it a rule to organize two or three theatrical shows every year.

"The plays are generally taken from the Old and New Testament. The scenes and costumes which they make out of any rags they can lay hands on keep them busy for several months during their leisure moments, and they have the honor and pleasure to play before a large audience, for on such occasions hundreds of people from the neighboring villages come flocking to attend the performance.

"Another occasion for pleasure, and which is a great feast for them, is the Christmas lottery, the prizes of which consist in general of old clothes, and some times even new ones, contributed by charitable persons. What a joy and what bursts of laughter when a male leper happens to get a lady's kimono, or a woman a jockey cap!

"We have found out by experience that working in the fields in the open air is the best remedy against leprosy. Those who work in this way have but few ulcers, whilst those who are too sick to work before long find themselves covered with wounds."

A Little Black Hero

A little Catholic negro boy was taking care of a flock of goats in the mountains. Before he was aware of it he had strayed with them far from his native village, and suddenly found himself in the territory of a neighboring Mohammedan tribe that was at war with his own people.

He was soon surrounded by hostile menacing faces. His enemies determined to make him apostatize.

"You are a Christian?" said one.

"Yes, I am a Christian," answered the child. "Don't you see the cross on my breast?"

"Yes, but, nevertheless, you are not a Christian," said another.

which helped to swell the hospital fund were two Rosaries sent by Bishop Crimoni from Alaska, the beads of which were made from the ivory tusks of a mastodon dug from the Alaskan sands by the Indians of the Ukularak mission. Other gifts included a set of ivory cigarette holders and novelties made from the ivory of walrus and presented by Mrs. Thomas Riggs, the wife of the governor of Alaska.

Mrs. F. A. Delano and Miss Elizabeth Davis of Washington were also liberal contributors to the "white elephant" tables. Mrs. Delano presenting a satin and cloth of gold dress embroidered with rhinestones, and Miss Davis giving a unique collection of Japanese curios.

Good Will

Did you ever pause to wonder why "good will" is usually valued on the balance sheet at one dollar? The reason is simply that "good will" is an asset, the worth of which cannot be estimated even approximately. It is the most valuable asset a business man has. Take away the "good will" of a house and it will summarily disappear into the oblivion of failure.

"Good will" is the result of satisfactory dealings extending over a period of time. The practical application of the principle of the "square deal" makes for "good will."

Some years ago the old Latin maxim, "caveat emptor" (let the buyer beware) was quite popular among a certain class of sellers. The merchant or manufacturer who was successful in deceiving his customers proudly boasted of his shrewdness—business ability. In those olden days the autocrat of the mart displayed his wares with the "take 'em or leave 'em" attitude.

Today, however, all that is changed. The exponent of the "caveat emptor" and "take 'em or leave 'em" policies is a curiosity, and the breed is fast dying out. Business for the most part is conducted along strictly honorable lines, and courtesy is universally practiced.

The progressive business house realizes that its customers are its friends. The mission of its sales force is to retain established friendship and create new ones. The basis of lasting friendship is confidence, and the "good will" of a house is the reflection of the confidence in which it is held by its customers.

"Never," cried the child.

"If you don't, we will cut off both your hands."

The child drew himself up proudly.

"You don't know what it is to be a Christian. Give me a sword."

A sword was handed to him, and without a moment's hesitation he lopped off his left hand and threw it at the feet of the chief, saying, "There is one! Take the other if you want it."

The African Missions' Organization, established at Lyons, during these past six months has opened in France seven new houses designed for the training of missionaries; a seminary of philosophy, three preparatory seminaries and three novitiates for the Brothers. All these various houses are well provided with their personnel, and studies are already begun. Very important information regarding the progress of evangelization in Africa and the needs of the apostleship is contained in the appeal published by the Missions for the recruiting of new missionaries. In the Benin many conversions are to be registered. Since 1917 twenty new churches and twenty-two secondary stations were built.

At The Federal Capital

The first division of this session in the House of Commons took place at an early hour on the morning of March 4th, and a splendid vindication of the Government's position. Ordinarily the debate on the adoption of the address in reply to the speech from the throne passes without division, but on this occasion the Leader of the Opposition was sufficiently vain and short-sighted to imagine that he might make considerable political capital out of the circumstances under which Parliament met. It is a fact that on the opening day of the present session quite a number of members, supporting the Government, were absent, some of them abroad, and consequently could not be here for any division that might eventuate at an early date in the session, but unfortunately a very considerable number were ill and unable to be in their places, on the opening day at least. Taking advantage of these circumstances, the Leader of the Opposition thought it advisable to move an amendment to the resolution for adopting the address in reply to the speech. The consequences of interjecting this amendment was the prolongation of the debate for almost three weeks, whereas, ordinarily the debate on the address is concluded within three or four days; but the delay in coming to a vote rebounded altogether in favor of the Government. The Government whips, as well as other members interested in the success of the division, exerted their energies to secure the attendance at an early date of as many as possible of those members who had been unable to be present at the opening. A number of those who were ill or convalescent took chances and made their way to the capital. All this time the debate was kept going vigorously by both sides of the House, until the point was reached when it was unnecessary for the Government to prolong the discussion any further. As a consequence, the talking for the last couple of days before the division was left almost entirely to members of the Opposition. Meantime, efforts were made by the Government whips to secure pairs for a number of members, some of whom could not possibly be present, and some others who were not in very good health, but were in the city prepared to be present at the division, if pairs could not be found for them. The Leader of the Opposition had emphatically declared at the beginning of the session that pairs would be refused. This was a very high-handed proceeding and almost absolutely unusual, but notwithstanding this arbitrary decision of Mr. King's some half dozen pairs were secured from members of the Agrarian party, who, while bound to vote for the amendment of the Leader of the Opposition were not extremely desirous of voting at all, if they could reasonably avoid it. Consequently, it was not so difficult to secure about all the pairs that were wanted from that wing of the Opposition in the House.

At the beginning of the session as already stated, the Leader of the Opposition and a number of his supporters were extremely arrogant and uncompromising in the attitude they assumed towards the Government. Taking advantage of the circumstances above referred to, they entertained the hope not of defeating the Government on the floor of the House, but of securing a division wherein the Government majority would be quite small. Then this circumstance would be made use of and heralded all over the country as an indication of want of confidence in the administration. The Government were quite aware of the bluff embodied in the attitude of the Opposition, and prepared to call that bluff. As noted above, the debate on the Government side was vigorously continued, as long as it was thought necessary, until all members supporting the Government, who could possibly be in Ottawa had arrived. Then they allowed the Opposition to carry on the debate by themselves. The nature of the talk presented by the Opposition was such that it would only be a loss of time to reply to it. One after another repeated the same inconsequential and illogical argument, if argument it could be called, and manifested and reiterated the untenableness of the position they assumed. The Opposition were very much taken aback at the result of the division. They had not any accurate conception of what the number of the Government forces was. A number of the Government supporters who had arrived from day to day, had scarcely appeared in the House at all, as some of them were not very well, and they rested quietly until the time came that their presence would be required. Certainly there was noticeable in the attitude of the Opposition, during the last days of the debate, a very considerable change. The arrogance and boldness manifested at the beginning of the debate had, to a very large degree disappeared, and they had become considerably more apologetic. Notwithstanding this, they were not at all prepared for the rebuff they were to receive when the members were called in at the end of the debate. Some of their best speakers were reserved by the Opposition for the very last day of the discussion, and among these, Mr. Fielding. He made a very vigorous and bitter attack upon the Government, but he added nothing new to the debate. It was as illogical and untenable as that of the humblest member who had addressed the House during the discussion. For two or three days the Government were prepared to take the division at any moment, but the Opposition kept up the fight until Thursday, when it was agreed between the whips on both sides that the division would be reached during the sitting commencing at 8 o'clock Thursday evening. That meant that the division might be taken any time during the night or any time during the following forenoon. It was definitely known that this was to be the last sitting before the vote. Consequently, there was a large attendance of members, and the galleries were crowded in expectation of such excitement as is generally attendant upon a division after a very long and critical debate. The night wore on, one after another, some in English, and some in French addressed Mr. Speaker. Midnight arrived and still the flood of talk proceeded. The galleries remained fully tenanted, and as is very frequently the case, the majority of those in the gallery were ladies, and they remained to the finish. Midnight passed and morning came, and still the talk went on. It is rather wearying to wait all night, especially when there is nothing to entertain you, to any great degree. In order that none might faint during the interval, the parliamentary restaurant was kept open, and those who desired refreshments repaired thither as time went on. One o'clock, two o'clock, three o'clock sounded, but still there was not a cessation of oratory, such as it was. Government members were moving in and out, and from their seats in the House, resting in the adjoining lobby, visiting the restaurant, or were in their private rooms, or in the smoking room; but in every case were not very far away, and with very few exceptions were within sound of the division bell, whenever that would start. Three o'clock passed, four o'clock was struck, and at last the "question" was called. During the course of the debate an amendment to the amendment had been moved by Mr. Campbell from Nelson, Manitoba. It was to the effect that redistribution take place before an election, and that to this end the Government should expedite the work of the census, and adjourn the session, and reassemble in the autumn to prepare the redistribution bill, and then appeal to the country. Of course, this amendment was, to say the least, silly. Whatever notions the mover had, he thought perhaps it would be something to his own advantage; but the fate of this sub-amendment manifested more clearly than anything else that on one waited it. When it was presented to the House, the mover himself sneaked out, and the seconder failed to support it, so that it was cast aside without any consideration at all.

As already stated, four o'clock had just struck when Mr. Speaker rose to put the question. The first vote, as is always the case, was to be on the amendment of Mr. King. When the yeas and nays were called for, as is usual on such occasions, there were loud claims from both sides of the House, but that was not sufficient to decide the question; so Mr. Speaker, in accordance with the usual custom, gave the order to "call to the members." Out went the whips, out went the Sergeant-at-Arms, and out went any member on either side, who may have had some other member under his special guidance and care for the occasion. During the time the House, of course, was in disorder, and ordinarily songs are started from one side or the other. There was some singing on this occasion, but not exceedingly strong. The Government members were in good humour. They were confident of coming out of the ordeal with flying colors, while the Opposition were in very serious doubt as to where they stood, and, as a consequence, their singing was not of a very hilarious nature. Finally, after an interval of some minutes, the Sergeant-at-Arms came in, and the whips came in one after another, constituting a procession of their own. They were loudly applauded, and when all took their seats, Mr. Speaker called for order. Then came the division. Yes on the amendment were of course first taken. All the official Opposition members, except those who were paired, voted for the amendment, and all the Agrarian members, except those who were paired, did likewise. Of those who occupied the section known as "No Man's Land," Mr. Gauthier, who recently left the Liberal party, and Major Andrews, of Winnipeg, did not vote for the amendment. On the contrary, when the yeas were taken, they rose in their places and supported the Government. Not one occupying a seat on the Government side voted for the amendment; everyone of them, without exception, voted. This showed the superiority of the tactics pursued by the Government in preparing for the division. Not one of their members who were in their seats was paired, while at least two of the regular Opposition and some six of the Agrarians were paired with Government members who were not present in the House, and some of whom were not in the city. In a few instances those voting for the Government were loudly applauded. This was the case, especially with the Prime Minister, with Mr. Gauthier, and Major Andrews, and also with regard to Mr. G. Porter of Hastings, who was very much indisposed with sciatica. As a matter of fact he was unable to walk, and had not been in the House for some days; but before the division was taken he came in leaning on the arms of two fellow members, and voted like a man, and received an ovation, which he deserved. When the votes had all been recorded, a few minutes of extreme intensity prevailed while the clerks were adding up the result. Finally, when the Clerk of the House turned to Mr. Speaker and made the announcement of the result, 116 for the Government to 91 for the Opposition, a majority of 25, a tremendous cheer went up from the Government benches, and the applauding and cheering continued for several minutes. On the contrary, gloom settled down on the countenance of Mr. King and his supporters on the opposite side of the House. A majority of 25, under all the circumstances, is a splendid vindication of the Prime Minister and of the Government, and surely will be of the greatest possible benefit to the administration throughout the country. It shows beyond question that the Government have the united and warm support of its members in the House, and it will have, as it cannot help having, a steady and clarifying effect all over the Dominion. People will now see that all the illogical and inconsequential and untenable things spoken and written by the Opposition are only the vapourings of vain and ambitious partisans, whose sole desire is to misrepresent and misdirect public opinion all over Canada.

It was felt from the first that the attitude assumed by the Leader of the Opposition in moving an amendment to the address was extremely far fetched, ill conceived and illogical, and it was manifest to everyone that the keeping up of the debate for almost three weeks was a tremendous loss of time and an unnecessary expenditure of public money. However, since the Opposition adopted this manner of manifesting to the world their brand of statesmanship, no fault can be found with the Government. The splendid result of the debate, as shown in the division, more than repays the loss of time and the expenditure of money involved in the long drawn out discussion, as it vindicates beyond peradventure the soundness and stability of the Government's position and policy. This clarification of the political atmosphere will enable the Government now to go on with a strong hand and firm conviction of their place in the estimation of the people, and carry out their programme of patriotic statesmanship.

FOR OUR
 January Carnival of Economy

The old year took away, forever, we hope, the old burden of war prices. For months conditions have been working toward the great climax that brought the remarkable merchandise that is here assembled for this our greatest January Carnival of Economy.

The results came in two ways: 1st. The drastic lowering of prices on our own stocks, down to the new low basis, and often far below it—to double your interest in January buying in our store.

2nd. We have combed the markets—taking utmost advantage of the opportunities created by far sighted manufacturers who were ready to co-operate with us in presenting to you now the lowest prices that will be possible, for the next six months, at least.

We can just see the delight of our Customers when they see the splendid assortment of goods, in every department of our store, and then realize that prices are away down to the bottom, where it is a pleasure to buy things.

Many Manufacturers have ACCEPTED LARGE LOSSES.

We shall forgo a large part of our profits on the new goods and accept large losses on our own mark-downs—to inaugurate this first New Year under the New Management and

THE MOST STIRRING JANUARY PRICE-UPSET THAT THIS COMMUNITY HAS EVER KNOWN.

No matter what you need or desire, now is the best time for months to come to buy it. Some of the reasons are told on this page; but scores of others are here that can get no mention today, even in this broad space.

Opening Of Legislature

The Provincial Legislature opened on Thursday afternoon last with the usual formalities.

The following is the Lieut. Governor's Speech:

Mr. Speaker and Gentlemen of the Legislative Assembly:—

I am pleased to welcome you on your return to your Legislative duties at this, the second session of the Thirty-ninth general assembly of this Province.

The Great War having terminated, our gallant returned soldiers are being rapidly and successfully re-established in civil life.

Famine has stalked abroad, but at home there has been an abundant harvest. Here we enjoy peace and plenty and national security. For all these blessings we should be profoundly grateful to Divine Providence.

During the year 1920 a satisfactory beginning was made in the improvements of the highways in accordance with a programme approved by the Federal Government for aid under "The Canada Highways Act."

The subject of Education is all important and all absorbing. It is the policy of my Government to give the people the benefit of more efficient schools.

During the past year the Government has increased the salaries of the teachers. The supplements from the school districts have been more generous than in former years.

Initial steps have been taken towards the medical examination of the pupils of the public schools. Elementary music and the art of singing are being taught in the Prince of Wales College, with a view to their introduction and practice in the common schools.

It is also the policy of my Government to stimulate and promote agriculture. Some of the features of the work undertaken by the Department of Agriculture during the past year include:—

The holding of a Provincial Horse Show for the encouragement of horse breeders.

The establishment of a limestone crushing plant at Mininash.

The importation of crushed limestone at reduced freight rates.

The purchasing of clover hulls for the encouragement of Island grown clover seed.

Increased grants to Exhibition Associations resulting in larger exhibits of live stock.

Grants to School Fairs—teachers and pupils encouraged to greater efforts.

Generous prizes to dairymen as inducements for greater effort in the production of milk.

Various bills on matters of general interest will be submitted for your consideration.

The Public Accounts for the past fiscal year will be placed before you.

You will be pleased to know that the expenditures have been well within the revenues, and also that a substantial reduction has been made in the debt of the Province.

The estimates of expenditure for the current year, based upon the requirements of the Province and with due regard to economy, will be submitted for your consideration and approval.

I feel assured that the various matters submitted to you will receive your careful and serious consideration, and that under the guidance of Divine Providence the results will be for the best interests of the Province.

Bucks, Despatcher

(By Frank H. Spearman.) (Concluded)

There they come—there are the runaway cars—do you hear? I'm going to open the switch, anyhow," Harvey shouted, starting up the track. "Save yourselves!" Headless of the warning, Banks struggled with the plate-bolts in silent fury. Suddenly he sprang to his feet. "Give me the man!" he cried.

Raising the heavy tool like a sack-hammer, he landed heavily on the bolt nuts; once, and again; and they flew like bullets over the bluff. The taller cowboy, bending close on his knees, raised a yell. The plates were loose. Springs to the other rail, Banks stripped the bolts even after the mad cars had shot into the gorge above them. The pick was driven under the loosened steel, and with a pry that bent the clawbar and a yell that reached Harvey, trembling at the switch, they tore away the stubborn contact and pointed the rails over the precipice.

The shriek of a locomotive whistle cut the wind. Looking east, Harvey had been watching 59's headlight. She was pulling in on the siding. He still held the switch open to send the runaway into the trap. Bucks had set, if the passenger train failed to get into the clear, but there was a minute—a bare sixty seconds—and Harvey had no idea of dumping ten thousand dollars worth of equipment into the river unless he had to.

Suddenly Harvey got the all right signal from the east end. The 101, was coughing noisily up the passing track—the line was clear. Banks and the cowboys, waiting breathless, saw him with a determined lurch throw the switch for the main track.

In the next breath the coolers, with the sweep of the gale in their frightful velocity, smashed over the switch and on. A rattling whirl of ballast and a dizzy clatter of noise, and before the frightened crew of 59 could see what was against them, the runaway train was passed—gone!

"I wasn't going to stop here tonight," muttered the engineer, as he stood with the conductor at the operator's desk a minute later and wiped the chill from his forehead with a piece of waste. "We'd have met them in the canyon."

Harvey as reporting to Bucks. Callahan heard it coming; "Rails cut, but 59 safe. Runways went by here fully 70 miles an hour." It was easy after that. Griffin is the foot of the grade; from there on the runaway cars had a hill to climb. Bucks had held 250, the local passenger, side-tracked at Davis, thirty miles farther east. Sped by the wind the runaways passed Davis, though not at half their highest speed. An instant after, 250's engine was cut loose and started after them like a scalded colt. Three miles east of Davis they were overhauled by the light engine. The fireman, Donahue, crawled out of the cab door along the footboard and down on the

After the first bottle I felt so much better that I continued to use it and six bottles made me a new man. When my little girl was a baby, she could not keep anything on her stomach, and we gave her Hood's Sarsaparilla which cured her." Mrs. Thomas Linn, Wallenburg, Ont.

pilot, caught the ladder of the last car, and, running up, went along to the leader and began setting brakes. Twenty minutes after they were brought back in triumph by Davis.

When the multitude of orders was out of the way, Bucks wired Ed, Banks to bring his cowboys down to McCloud on 60. Sixty was the eastbound passenger due at McCloud at 5.30 a.m. It turned out that the cowboys had been arrested for lassoing a Norwegian homesteader, who had cut their wire. It was not a heinous offence and after it was straightened out by the intervention of Bucks—who was the whole thing then—they were given jobs lassoing sugar barrels in the train service. One of them, the tall fellow, is a passenger conductor on the high line yet.

It was 3 o'clock that morning, the 25th of December in small letters, on the West End—before they got things decently straightened out; there was so much to do—orders to make and reports to take. Bucks, still on the key in his flowing robes and tumbling hair sent and took them all. Then he turned the seat over to Callahan, and getting up for the first time in two hours, dropped wearily into another chair.

The very first thing Callahan received was a personal from Pat Francis, at Ogilalla, conductor of 59. It was for Bucks: "Your mother was aboard 59. She was carried by McCloud in the Denver sleeper. Sending her back to you on 60. Merry Xmas."

It came off the wire fast. Callahan didn't think Bucks heard; though it's probable he did. Anyway, Callahan threw the clip over toward him with a laugh.

"Look there, old man. There's your mother coming after all your kicking—carried by on 59. As the boy turned he saw the big despatcher's head sink on the table. Callahan sprang to his side, but Bucks had fainted—Ambition.

WHOOPING COUGH

Her 3 Children Had It.

This disease begins like a simple cold in the head that rapidly goes to the chest. The cough is at first short and sharp, but gradually increases in severity and occurs in sudden spasms.

Often vomiting follows a severe attack of coughing, and sometimes there is noebled.

Mothers should never neglect the treatment of whooping cough, for it is much more serious than most people think, as it may be followed by some grave lung trouble, such as bronchitis, pneumonia or consumption, since the sufferer's power of resistance are often greatly weakened by the violent and exhausting cough.

On the first sign of a "whoop," Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup should be administered as it helps to clear the bronchial tubes of the collected mucus and phlegm.

Mrs. Burton Leopold, New Ross, N.S., writes: "My three children had the whooping cough so bad last winter, I thought they would choke. I tried many different remedies, but none of them seemed to help. At last I got a bottle of Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, and I was greatly surprised to see how quickly it helped them. I shall always recommend your wonderful remedy to others." Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup is 50c. and 60c. a bottle at all druggists and dealers. Put up only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

The Love of Mother

Occasionally we see manifestations of disrespect to mothers, and we cannot help but regard the miscreant as an ingrate. The sacrifice of a mother deserves an esteem for her on the part of a child almost like the honor and homage due to God.

Who paints a prettier picture of mother than Washington Irving in the following: "The love of a mother is never exhausted; it never changes; it never tires. A father may turn his back on his child; brothers and sisters may become inveterate enemies; husbands may desert their wives, wives their husbands, but a mother's love endures through all; in good repute, in bad repute, in the face of the world's condemnation, a mother still loves on and still hopes that her child may turn from his evil ways and repent; still she remembers the infant smiles that once filled her bosom with such rapture, the merry laugh, the joyful shout of his childhood, opening promise of his youth, and she can never be brought to think him unworthy."

FOR OUR January Carnival of Economy

The old year took away, forever, we hope, the old burden of war prices. For months conditions have been working toward the great climax that brought the remarkable merchandise that is here assembled for this our greatest January Carnival of Economy.

The results came in two ways: 1st. The drastic lowering of prices on our own stocks, down to the new low basis, and often far below it—to double your interest in January buying in our store.

2nd. We have combed the markets—taking utmost advantage of the opportunities created by far sighted manufacturers who were ready to co-operate with us in presenting to you, now the lowest prices that will be possible, for the next six months, at least.

We can just see the delight of our Customers when they see the splendid assortment of goods, in every department of our store, and then realize that prices are away down to the bottom, where it is a pleasure to buy things.

Many Manufacturers have ACCEPTED LARGE LOSSES. We shall forgo a large part of our profits on the new goods and accept large losses on our own mark-downs—to inaugurate this first New Year under the New Management and

THE MOST STIRRING JANUARY PRICE-UPSET THAT THIS COMMUNITY HAS EVER KNOWN.

No matter what you need or desire, now is the best time for months to come to buy it. Some of the reasons are told on this page; but scores of others are here that can get no mention today, even in this broad space.
