Which Was The Heir?

CHAPTER IX. (Continued.) 'You're a liar,' he said in his smooth tone. 'But all boys lie. No matter; I shall soon find out for myself.' He was going, but he paused once more. 'Here, boy, what's your name?' he asked.

ACHING IN THE STOMACH. Indigestion and Stomach Disorders. Dr. Hamilton's Pills Cured.

'From using a cheap remedy recommended by an unscrupulous druggist my condition was made much worse,' writes Miss Minerva E. Michie, daughter of a well known citizen of Portland. 'I had suffered so terribly with indigestion and biliousness that the very sight of food made me shudder. It was two years ago my health began to fail. At first I had constipation, liver sluggishness and occasional headaches. My appetite was variable—I wanted too many sweets—then I lost all desire to eat and had constant aching in the stomach, attacks of dizziness, pains between the shoulders, stifling feeling after meals and felt I wasn't going to recover.'

some of the men may be passing down the valley and may hear the guns. Anyway, we'll sell our lives dearly, eh, Ronnie?' She pushed her short curls from her forehead, wet with sweat, and tried to toss her head and smile confidently, tried not to look alarmed; but her eyes would go to his arm in spite of herself. They stood side by side, comrades indeed, and waited. The silence grew almost intolerable, the suspense seemed to stifle them. It was just possible that the ruffians were approaching the hut by a detour. Geoffrey went into the inner room and looked through a crack; but no sign of the foe was to be seen; and he came to the conclusion that they had decided to wait till nightfall before renewing the attack. Cottie was watching through the hole in the shutter, and he went to the brandy bottle and poured out some of the spirit into the tin mug on the table. 'Here, take a sip of this, Ronnie,' he said. Her hand went to the mug, but she drew back with a shudder. 'Not in that, not in that!' she breathed, eyeing the mug with horror; for it was the one from which the man had drunk. Geoffrey got another mug and she took a little of the brandy, and it brought back a touch of colour to her white cheeks; but her slight form was quivering like a leaf, and setting his gun down for a moment, Geoffrey with an anxious face, took hold of her and passed his hand over her to see if she was hurt. She drew back from him with a pettishness which, at such a moment, seemed strange to him. 'I'm not hurt; I'm not—I'm not!' she said, pantingly. 'It's you—Oh, look at your arm! And there's no time to do anything! Hush! What's that?' It was the neighing of a horse, and it seemed to come from a distance and, as Geoffrey listened intently, it grew fainter. 'They've gone,' he said, 'or it may be a ruse,' he said, musingly. 'We'll try one on our side, Ronnie.' He stuck his cap on the handle of the pick, and opening the door slowly, just showed the mark believe head; but, though he stuck it out temptingly, no shot was fired at it. 'They must have gone,' he said. 'No ranger could resist such a chance. But he was too cautious to go out at once, and he closed the door and waited. 'Tell me what has happened?' he said. 'Oh, not now, not now!' she panted. 'I can't get my breath—there's a weight on my chest! Oh, your arm, Geoffrey!' Shuddering she bound a handkerchief round the wound, Geoffrey submitted with a mixture of indifference and impatience; but as she did it, his hand rested on her shoulder and patted it in a kind, encouraging caress. Then they fell to waiting again, and at last Geoffrey could endure the suspense no longer. 'I must do a little scouting, lad,' he said, opening the door slowly. 'They're not much of shots or they'd have winged me long before they did.' 'No, no, you shall not go!' she said, clinging to him with her disengaged hand, the other gripping her rifle tightly. 'That Awful Pain in the Back is a Sure Sign of Congestion of the Kidneys'

He looked down at her and smiled encouragingly. 'Why, lad, where's all your pluck? You're generally so cool and cheery. There's no danger; they're out of range, you bet your life; they've had enough of our guns; that is to say, yours, for it was you who hit that fellow in the bush; yes, and saved my life! Take your hand off me, Ronnie; I'm not made of the stuff to stay here and be butchered like a calf in a shippin. I'll come to no hurt; let me go, lad.'

number they were ignorant. Geoffrey saw their peril, and with his left arm literally swung her back into the hut, and, still covering her, was drawing in backwards, when a bullet struck his arm. With a cry of rage and agony Cottie raised her gun and fired; her cry was echoed by the unseen foe; but by this time Geoffrey and Cottie were inside the hut, with the door bolted. There they stood looking, not at each other, but at the door, and panting audibly; and there they stood with gun in hand, their hearts devoured by suspense. In a moment or two, which seemed hours, she turned her eyes upon his. His face was white and stern, his lips set tightly. 'Are you hurt, lad?' he asked, where in ambush, were covering Geoffrey as he approached, and that they would shoot him. She caught up the gun, and creeping to the half-open door, swept the bush before her with devouring eyes. She heard Geoffrey's light, firm step coming nearer every moment, and suddenly, unable to control herself any longer, she uttered a heartrending cry: 'Geoffrey! Geoffrey! Take care!' Her cry was followed by the report of a gun, and she saw a whiff of smoke rising from the bush in front of her. A wall rose from her white lips, but a sudden fury started up in her bosom like a flame, and she raised the gun and fired in the direction of the smoke. Almost at the same instant she heard Geoffrey fire, and so suddenly that his gun flew from his hand. Absolutely forgetful of herself, she sprang out, and a bullet whizzed past her head and buried itself in the logs behind her. Then, as if in answer to her cry, Geoffrey's 'Ronnie! Ronnie!' rang out, and he leaped to her side, and not only to her side, but in front of her, so that he shielded her. 'Go into the hut! Go into the hut!' he said, sharply. 'Go in at once! Leave them to me, lad.' For response she laughed a strange laugh, and slipping in a fresh cartridge, ranged herself by his side. It was a terrible position. They stood there a mark for hidden assailants of whose

The Evening Chit-Chat

By RUTH CAMERON

Suppose you and a comrade were caught and hemmed in by the tide on a rock-boulder shore, and your comrade should make you stand on his shoulder and should help you get your foot in a niche in the cliffs that would eventually bring you to safety.

Would you be apt to look down upon him as a failure because he chose to save your life instead of his own?

What an absolutely absurd question. I know everyone is thinking. But listen—

Is a man or woman who chooses to make another life instead of his own, less fine than the man or woman who saves another life instead of his own?

And yet haven't you known young men and women whose fathers and mothers have made them stand on their shoulders and get their feet into the niches in the cliff so that they might climb to success; haven't you known these young people after they had reached the top actually look down and be ashamed of the men and women at the bottom who chose to make their children's lives instead of their own?

And can you think of any more hateful sin? I can't.

I shall never forget the case of one girl who graduated from college the year before I did. She came from a distant city, and all through her college course none of her people had ever come to visit her.

She was a girl who always had nice clothes and never seemed stinted for spending money, and we had an idea that she was rather well off.

A few days before class day she told me that she felt very badly because she did not think any of her people would be able to come to see her graduate. Her father and mother were quite old, she said, and the long journey was rather more than they wanted to attempt.

I realized now that this reluctance was undoubtedly the result of an attempt on her part to dissuade them from coming.

But the little mother evidently wouldn't be dissuaded, for after all, she came.

And such a pathetic, shabby little mother I don't believe ever trod the campus before or since. A home trimmed straw bonnet with velvet strings from which the nap had long since worn off probably when they were attached to their second or third bonnet, a silk shabby with the dreadful shabbiness of worn out cheapness, white silk gloves that I am sure were a remnant of her wedding outfit, and shoes that no polishing, however painstaking, had been able to make half way decent.

Every pathetic detail of her costume stood, I suppose, for some luxury that Alice had enjoyed.

I should have thought the girl would have been aflame with shame and remorse for the story that pathetic little woman's appearance told.

I should have thought that her every energy would have been put in to the attempt to make those few days the proudest and happiest of her mother's life.

Instead the only shame she seemed to feel was that her girl friends should see her mother's poverty.

Instead her every energy went into the effort to keep her mother as much out of sight as possible.

She was looking down with scorn on the shoulders that had been willfully given as her stepping stone to education and happiness, and in the gulf had been stooped into ugliness.

Do you ever do things like that? You are indignant at the very thought?

Well, of course I don't mean anything quite so abominable. I know you couldn't.

But don't you ever for a moment maybe feel a passing impulse of shame or impatience when the father or mother does some queer, old-fashioned thing?

If you do, suppose the next time you are inclined that way, you think of my college acquaintance and I'm sure the shame for them will turn into a far deeper shame for yourself.

Ruth Cameron

Facts for Weak Women

Nine-tenths of all the sickness of women is due to some derangement or disease of the organs distinctly feminine. Such sickness can be cured—is cured every day by

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription

It Makes Weak Women Strong, Sick Women Well.

It acts directly on the organs affected and is at the same time a general restorative tonic for the whole system. It cures female complaint right in the privacy of home. It makes unnecessary the disagreeable questioning, examinations and local treatment so universally insisted upon by doctors, and so abhorrent to every modest woman.

We shall not particularize here as to the symptoms of those peculiar affections incident to women, but those wanting full information as to their symptoms and means of positive cure are referred to the People's Common Sense Medical Adviser—1008 pages, newly revised and up-to-date Edition, sent free on receipt of 31 one-cent stamps to cover cost of mailing only; or, in cloth binding for 50 stamps.

HOUSEHOLD NOTES.

An oily complexion can only be overcome by avoiding gravies, pastries, rich cake, etc. Water must be freely drunk between meals and plenty of fruit eaten.

One teaspoonful of flavoring extract is the proportion for one plain loaf of cake, and one-quarter of a pound of salt pork for a pint of Boston baked beans.

An old country cream for chapped hands, to be rubbed in at night is made of spermaceti, one ounce, almond oil, two ounces, orange flower water, two ounces.

When using valuable vases for table decorations, fill them with sand, for this makes them stand firmly and renders them less likely to be knocked over and broken.

Don't put the salt into cold milk when making a custard. Put the salt in after the milk has been scalded; otherwise the custard will separate as though curdled.

Old fashioned mutton tallow, which can be perfumed with a few drops of essences of rose, is very healing for chapped hands or lips or rough skin, made so from high winds or frosty air.

Varnished furniture should be rubbed with silk occasionally, when a little sweet oil may be used. If rubbed on and wiped off carefully, it will remove all spots and preserve the brightness of the veneer.

A few spoonfuls of left-over mashed potato can be used to form a foundation of rice soup. If mixed with cold chopped meat and rice and an egg and suitable seasoning, they make appetizing croquettes.

A careful laundress always uses a wooden spoon in preparing starch, and never makes starch in a tin utensil. These precautions taken, there is no danger of the starch imparting rust spots to the clothes.

Curtains, ottomans and sofas covered with worsteds can be cleaned with wheat bran, rubbed on with flannel. It is surprising how fresh and bright this process of cleaning will render such articles if done in the proper manner.

Some cooks always add a little potato to the mashed turnips, while others dredge in a little flour before seasoning. When the turnips are large, they will have a more delicate flavour if the water is changed at least once during boiling.

Sometimes it is quite impossible to make old glassware bright and clear. If strong ammonia is poured over it and it is then scrubbed well with a brush and rinsed in warm water it will, when dried, look quite as bright as one could wish.

A simple water icing for cakes is made by taking two cupsfuls of confectioners' sugar and adding enough water to make a thick paste. Then sprinkle in a pinch of cream of tartar. Beat well and if not stiff enough, add a little more sugar. Flavour with any extract.

The cleaning of saucepans is very imperfectly understood in many houses. Each time a saucepan is used it should be put over a fire, filled with clear, cold water to which has been added a little soda. Heat this, pour it off and scour the pan with soap and sand.

English Joan of Arc.

The Army Pageant, which will be held in the grounds of Fulham Palace from June 20 to July 2, has been fortunate in securing an ideal Joan of Arc in Mrs. Henry Hohler, of York.

This lady is the second daughter of Sir George Wombwell, Bart., the famous Yorkshire squire and Crimean veteran who rode with the 17th Lancers in the gallant charge of the Light Brigade and came unscathed out of the valley of death.

Mrs. Hohler is the sister of the Countess of Dartrey and niece of Lord Jersey. Ever since she could ride she has been known as a daring horsewoman and a member of the York and Ainsty Hunt, of which her father was for many years master.

In the York Pageant of 1909 Mrs. Hohler was a beautiful Queen Isabella. Riding astride on a magnificent grey, she was the embodiment of grace and dignity.

As the Maid of Orleans in the Army Pageant Mrs. Hohler will require all her nerve and skill as a horsewoman. Ridding a spirited white horse, clad in armour, and possibly bearing a standard, she must head a charge of French knights on the Field of Patay, scattering and overwhelming an opposing force of English Lancers who will be in front of her and lances behind her. The encounter will be one of the most thrilling in the pageant.

"The Maid's" Armour.

Mr. C. J. Houliques, of Oxford, armurer to the pageant, has settled the details of Joan of Arc's costume. Author of "Armour and Weapons," Mr. Houliques is one of the first authorities of the day on these subjects. For Joan's costume he has followed a tapestry in the museum at Orleans made about the middle of the fifteenth century, and therefore the earliest representation of the Maid. She is there shown wearing white plate armour under a "haque" or overall of silk, satin, or some rich fabric.

"It is certain," writes Mr. Houliques, "that she never wore chain mail, which was not in favour at that period and would have been far too heavy and cumbersome for a woman to wear."

Mrs. Hohler as the Maid of Orleans will wear

- Dark hair, cut short.
- Scarlet velvet jerkin.
- Bright brassards (armour for the arms with small coudes (elbow pieces)).
- Bright leg armour.
- A gorget (breastplate) of plate armour.
- White satin surcoat to the ankles, lined blue, "powdered" with fleur-de-lis, and edged with gold.
- Long jagged sleeves lined with blue, edged with gold.
- Scarlet sword-belt and scabbard.

Joan of Arc must ride a white horse, with high saddle and blue and gold trappings.

With an eye to the risks which the Maid of Orleans will encounter in her great ride to victory, Major Tudor Craig has already selected a second Joan of Arc, who will "understudy" Mrs. Hohler. This lady is Mrs. Reginald Glossop, of Hainthorpe.

Lecture by Mr. I. C. Morris.

The third weekly lecture of the F. A. Society was given last night to an audience which filled their spacious hall. Such an audience is proof of the popularity of free lectures, when the subject is interesting and the lecturer's style is attractive. The band of the society was present and rendered selections before and after the lecture, which was about "Old Ferryland." The lecturer opened by telling the story of Baltimore's first attempt at colonization in Ferryland, and his later and greater and more successful experiment in Maryland. He told of Kirk and Whitbourne and other worthies whose work brought them to the New Found Isles, and after he had given a short historical sketch of the Southern Shore, he gave a topographical description of its chief scenery and settlements. The lecture was full of witty remarks by the way, incidents told with humor and stories of human effort told with pathos and effect. Particularly was this so in the case of the Deserted Village at Chance Cove and the terrible wreck of the Anglo-Saxon at Clam Cove. Mr. Morris's talk, as he called it, held the attention of the audience an hour and a half, and was liberally interspersed with applause. Some six views of Ferryland and the vicinity thrown on the screen closed the lecture, for which the lecturer received the hearty thanks of the audience as moved by Mr. H. O'Brien and seconded by Mr. Geo. Coughlan.

On the vote being taken the affirmative side, that is those who were in favour of the measure won by a majority of seven. The principal speakers in favour of the measure were:—H. N. Burt, R. Maun-der, Ira Curtis, and those who took the other side were:—F. W. Pincock, C. Grimes and P. Curtis. They sought to prove that the Daylight Bill would not benefit the people of Newfoundland in general. Mr. G. Bradley occupied the chair and fulfilled his duties very satisfactorily. The attendances are generally increasing every debate night. Next Tuesday another debate will be held.

Wonderful. Isn't It?

VICTOR

Wonderful, isn't it, when you think of it, that you can sit comfortably in your own home and hear the world's greatest artistes sing the same grand opera selections they are singing to large audiences in opera houses thousands of miles away. The same arias, sung by the self-same artistes, and just as clear and sweet and natural as though you were at the opera yourself.

ONLY THE VICTOR DOES THAT.

Only the Victor—for the world's greatest artistes including Caruso, Calve, Eames, Farrar, Gadski, Homer, Melba, Plancon, Schumann-Heink, Scotti, Sembrich and Tetrazzina make records only for the Victor.

And Victor Records to day are better than ever before—the recent progress in the art of Victor recording has been so wonderful that practically every record in our list has been made over. Hear Caruso's new "Spirito Gentile" (Spirit so Fair) and "L. Africano"—O Paradise. Then you'll realize the great things accomplished by our new process and materials.

Historic Irish Prisons.

Kilmainham Has No Longer Any Guests.

Famous Irish Penitentiary Will Be Closed for Lack of Inmates—Its Known History Goes Back to the Troublesome Times of '98, But An Episode of 1880 Is Its Most Famous Story—Entertained Politicians.

Fortunate Ireland, with a prison on her hands more than she needs, writes Tighe Hopkins.

It is Kilmainham, in the outlying township of that name in the city of Dublin. Thirteen years ago in that tiny volume called "Kilmainham Memories" I wrote of it: "The place is not great, but it has a great air. Of its external features the lofty grey wall of Irish limestone about one third of a mile in circumference is the most imposing. It is evidence also of a certain antiquity, since walls of this height are not given to modern prisons. Except for its strength the small main gateway is quite unpretentious; over it are the Five Devils of Kilmainham—five writhing scorpions symbolical of no one knows what."

When next some polished Britisher has an ugly word for Ireland pray let him reflect before he gets it off that in the year of salvation, 1909, the General Prisons Board was obliged to close Kilmainham because there were not in Dublin or the neighboring counties criminals enough to keep the staff employed. It is a fact quite worth remembering. I am not, of course, suggesting that Dublin will henceforth be the one capital of Europe without a common jail. Mountjoy in another part of the town continues to receive felony, the huge establishment of Kilmainham is no longer necessary. Business has fallen; the shutters are going up.

What a sensation in London were the Times one morning to announce that the Prison Commissioners, having no further use for their solid and commodious premises at Wormwood Scrubs, were prepared to consider offers from promoters of garages or skating rinks. Something like this happens in Dublin and nobody takes any notice. And Dublin is probably the only city of its size in Europe in which such a thing could happen. Crime as we know it in England is practically non-existent in Ireland. Our great guilds of crime—the bands of professional burglars and robbers, the financial conspirators, adept forgers, trained thieves, habitual levers of blackmail, bogus noblemen, parsons, and the ladies of amily, longform practitioners, hotel and railway sharps, "magsmen,"

"hooks," and "bounces"—these are almost entirely unrepresented in Ireland. In a word, so far as habitual and professional crime is concerned, there is not another as decent country in Europe. Perhaps in a general way the reader may not perceive how and why the long days of Kilmainham bends at last towards its close.

The long day—well this a matter of degree; the story of Kilmainham is not that of a Newgate in London or a Conciergerie in Paris. But Kilmainham leads us back to the Irish Parliament and to the pikes of '98. With the earlier annals of the prison I have not the least acquaintance. Illuminative documents rest no doubt among the archives of Dublin Castle awaiting the scrutiny of somebody. No government of our day is concerned—at least, none need be concerned—to keep the secret of its prisons; for in the rule of to-day (its imperfections notwithstanding) the foolish cruelties of the past are fairly blotted out. Somebody will presently take his turn at the manuscripts of Kilmainham, and if we get nothing else from them we shall surely be the richer by a sheaf of stories that may perhaps recall some memories of the prisons of the French Revolutions.

In the modern history of Kilmainham one episode stands out peakwise. The political weather of 1880 and onwards was, in the simple but sufficing phrase, "rough, with wind." The Land League was to the fore. Great in those days were the names of Gladstone, Parnell, and "Bucksfoot" Forster, the Irish Secretary—each name a battle-word. The celebrated act for the Better Protection of Persons and Property of Ireland was the order of the day; under this act hundreds of persons of all kinds, orders, and qualities, became suddenly a suspect and into prison the suspects were kept in batches. Kilmainham entertained them. The crowd of common prisoners was emptied out somewhere into Mountjoy one may suppose and the old jail was cleaned up for the reception of the suspected leaguers, members of Parliament, priests, lawyers, doctors, newspaper men, farmers, cattle-dealers, horse-dealers, shop-keepers, and peasants from their ragged plots. Kilmainham, totally transformed, no longer recognized its self.

It is in no way incorrect to say that Kilmainham "entertained" this extraordinary assemblage of politicians. Loss of liberty is serious in varying degrees to all men, but to the dungeoned suspects their captivity was tempered. The Ladies' Land League saw to it. The "victims of British tyranny" were fed and wineed from without the walls; I might almost say that they were garlanded, for their board was decked with flowers. Arrests and detentions, unjust enough no doubt, there often were, but of the true and uncustomary pains of prison not one of these suspects ever had a taste. For some few light remarks I passed upon the subject (fresh from a tour of local and convict prisons in England—where the real thing was to be seen) I was mauled by one or two Dublin papers; but most of the quondam suspects, I fancy, had a relish of the joke. Certain among them had the time of their lives in the dungeons of Kilmainham. Had they been curious enough to know what it meant to breathe the real atmosphere of prison—not in Irish Kilmainham, but in English Portland—poor Michael Davitt could have turned the gas up for them.

"Typhoid Mary."

A Curious Menace to Public Health. New York, Feb. 21.—Typhoid Mary, whose real name is withheld at the request of the New York health authorities, is a free woman again, after having been confined in charity hospitals, off and on for three years, because physicians said that she was a living receptacle for typhoid germs and a menace to public health. She was formerly a cook, and considered particularly dangerous in that capacity as likely to transmit disease. With the understanding that she is to cook no more, Mr. Lederle, the health commissioner, announced to-day that the department had decided to release her.

"Typhoid Mary" had of late been confined in a charity hospital on an island in the East River. Her case is unique in medical records. After repeated cases of typhoid were discovered in families for which she had cooked, the authorities made an investigation, resulted in her detention on the theory that she was a walking reservoir for typhoid germs, harmless to herself, but easily communicated to those whose food she cooked.

More Protection Urged for Women.

BOSTON, Feb. 25.—The Massachusetts House heard many and various pleas to-day for new legislation for the moral protection of woman. The principal issue of the day on the part of the petitioners who appeared before the committee on legal affairs of the Chinese restaurant, in many of which it was alleged, that scandalous and disgraceful scenes were often enacted.

A Bill offered by Representative John L. Donovan would prohibit women under 21 years of age, and women above that age unless accompanied by a male escort from going into or patronizing a Chinese restaurant. The Bill had almost as many opponents as supporters, the arguments in its favour being that much of the accusation was unjust, and that the measure was unconstitutional.

Their Majesties' Servants.

What Work They Have to Do and Who They Are.

Servants in the royal establishment hold what, in a large number of instances, are almost hereditary positions.

The Doddses, Jacksons, Chandlers, Warrens and others now in the employment of Their Majesties are the children or grandchildren of those who lived and died in the royal employ. An outsider rarely has a chance of entering the royal service.

Quite 90 per cent. of the servants at Buckingham Palace, and other royal residences, are the sons or daughters of people employed in some capacity or other by royalty, or of tenants on the royal estates.

The whole staff of maidservants, of whom there are over 50 at Buckingham Palace, are under the control of Mrs. Rosalie Dodds, the head housekeeper. The maids rise at 6 a.m. in the winter and 5.30 a.m. in the summer. Breakfast is served in the large maidservants' hall at seven o'clock, and three of the maids are selected in turn each week to wait on the others at meals.

From eight to noon the maids are at work in the different sets of rooms allotted to their charge. Each room is then inspected by one of the assistant housekeepers, of whom there are six, to see that it has been put properly in order, and at half-past twelve a report is made to Mrs. Dodds by the assistant housekeepers that what is called the "morning walk" has been finished.

In the afternoon a certain number of the maids are allowed off duty between 3 and 6 p.m. The maids off duty have a large and extremely comfortable room to sit in, where they can read, write, or do their own work, and where, with the consent of the head housekeeper, they can see their friends.

The "outings" of the maidservants are arranged by the head housekeeper. Each maid is allowed out once a week from 6 to 10 p.m., and she can go off when off duty in the afternoon by permission of Mrs. Dodds. A whole day "outing" is given to each maid-servant, from noon to ten o'clock, once a month.

Each girl on entering service at Buckingham Palace is given a printed copy of the rules and regulations she will be required to obey, and with which she must make herself thoroughly acquainted.

For the first month a maid at Buckingham Palace is regarded as a probationer. If, at the end of that time she is not strong enough for the work, or does not like it, she is generally found employment at one of the other residences of royalty.

But as the maids who are promoted to the best paid positions in the royal service are usually selected from the staff at Buckingham Palace, a girl always does her best to qualify for service under Mrs. Dodds.

Six of the maids are on what is called the "travelling staff," and always travel with Queen Alexandra and attend to the packing and unpacking of the royal luggage. A travelling maid speaks French fluently, and most of them speak German as well.

A Large Funeral.

A large number of the friends of Rev. Canon Smith and family went to Portugal Cove yesterday to attend the funeral of his dear wife. Amongst them were the Lord Bishop, Rev. Canons White, Dunfield and Rev. G. H. Bolt. A service was first held in the church and afterwards in the cemetery. Rev. G. H. Bolt officiated. A large number attended the funeral not only from Portugal Cove but from Horse Cove and Broad Cove. Nearly all the residents came to pay their last tribute to one who was dearly beloved by them and to tender their sympathy to the bereaved pastor. It was the largest funeral ever seen in Portugal Cove by the present generation.

LAI TO REST.—The remains of the late Capt. J. R. Moss were interred yesterday afternoon. The funeral was a large one and showed the esteem in which the deceased captain was held.

The s.s. Rosalind left Halifax last night. She was 71 hours going from St. John's to the former port.

The Masons at Church.

Brethren of the F. & A. M., numbering about one hundred and twenty, attended Divine service at Queen's Road Congregational Church last evening when Bro. Rev. J. Thackeray, Chaplain of St. John's Lodge, 579 R.E., preached a sermon on behalf of the Tasker Educational Fund. The preacher took for his text 2nd Chronicles, 2nd chapter and 5th verse—"And the house which I build is great, for great is our God above all Gods."

No More Misery in the Stomach.

Indigestion, Gas, Heartburn or Dyspepsia vanish in five minutes. If what you just ate is souring on your stomach or lies like a lump of lead, refusing to digest, or you belch Gas and Eructate sour, undigested food or have a feeling of Dizziness, Heartburn, Fullness, Nausea, Bad taste in mouth and stomach headache this is Indigestion.

A full case of Pape's Diaprepain costs only fifty cents and will thoroughly cure your out-of-order stomach, and leave sufficient about the house in case someone else in the family may suffer from stomach trouble or Indigestion.

Ask your pharmacist to show you the formula plainly printed on these 50 cent cases, then you will understand why Dyspeptic trouble of all kinds must go, and why they usually relieve sour, out-of-order stomachs or Indigestion in five minutes. Diaprepain is harmless and tastes like candy, though each dose contains power sufficient to digest and prepare for assimilation into the blood all the food you eat; besides it makes you go to the table with a healthy appetite; but, what will please you most is that you will feel that your stomach and intestines are clean and fresh, and you will not need to resort to laxatives or liver pills for Bloatingness or Constipation.

This city will have many Diaprepain cranks, as some people will call them, but you will be cranky about this splendid stomach preparation, too, if you ever try a little for Indigestion or Gastritis or any other Stomach misery. Get some now, this minute, and forever rid yourself of Stomach Trouble and Indigestion.

S.S. Portia Back.

It is seldom that the western coast-boat is able to get to Bonne Bay the last week in February. This, however, has been done by Capt. Fitzpatrick this trip. The ship arrived here at 3:20 yesterday afternoon, having made all her usual ports. The weather was fine on the return trip and good time was made. The ship brought a small quantity of freight and the following passengers: Mrs. Cashin, Miss O'Leary; Messrs. Barker, Reddy, White, Power and 52 in all. A patient named P. White, who met with a shooting accident a few weeks ago at Biscayan Cove, came on from Trepassy to go to Hospital to have his wounds treated. Captain Fitzpatrick reports that the fishery about Rose Blanche has been indifferent, the past week. The weather has not been favorable.

C. E. I. DEBATE.—The debate set down for Friday night at the C. E. I. Rooms is the very interesting subject of Confederation.

Rev. Canon Dunfield Lectures to S.U.F.

A large number of members of St. John's Lodge, No. 5, S.U.F., were present last night, the chief item of interest being the lecture of Rev. Canon Dunfield. After the regular order of business was gone through, the Lodge's Worthy Master, Bro. A. E. Withycombe, introduced the rev. gentleman to the meeting in a very pleasing manner. A short story, entitled "The Parable," was read to the members by the Rev. Canon, after which he proceeded to tell his hearers the many good lessons to be derived from it, the principal one being "Unity," which he was glad to learn was not lost sight of by St. John's Lodge. He was gratified at the strides made by Lodge No. 5, and trusted it would continue its good work. There is generally a little looseness in every society, such as lack of attendance, etc. He urged upon all renewed interest in the Lodge and its proceedings, ever remembering that "Union is Strength." All should pull together and the society would continue to prosper in the good work it is now doing—for the progress and stability of every society depends on the interest displayed by its members. The rev. lecturer was proud to learn of the interest taken by the Lodge for the welfare of the widows and orphans of deceased members. The care of the widow and fatherless is a noble work, and the S. U. F. is to be congratulated on their efforts in that direction. For over an hour the rev. lecturer continued his discourse, which proved both interesting and instructive, and will be a great stimulus to all who had the pleasure of listening to it. He concluded by again urging all to "pull together," for there is a bright future in store for the S. U. F., of which he was proud to say he was a member. At the conclusion of the lecture Past Master J. C. Phillips in a very neat speech proposed a vote of thanks to the rev. gentleman. Being seconded by Past Master Goodland, the motion was carried by acclamation. Last night three candidates were initiated and five proposals were handed in. This year, under the guidance of Worthy Master A. E. Withycombe, bids fair to eclipse all previous ones. Well done, Allan!

A Narrow Escape.

Patrick Fleming, one of the s.s. Kite's crew, fell overboard between the wharf and the ship when going on board the Kite last evening. The watchman at Bowring's heard his cries and hastening to the spot pulled him out after considerable difficulty. He lay unconscious on the wharf, when taken up and it was feared that he would not come to. A sleigh was procured and the man was driven to the police station where the heat of the fire and the effect of stimulants administered by Dr. Rendell, who was called there, soon revived the patient. He was then driven to his home in a cab.

Man Breaks His Leg.

Mr. Thomas Walsh, of Ferryland, while boarding the Portia at that place yesterday morning fell and broke his leg. It is said he had secured a berth to the ice and was coming along to join his ship. Being in a hurry to catch the Portia, he was running along when he slipped on the road with the above result. The accident will prove serious for Walsh, as we understand he has a wife and family depending on him.

You Blame the Stomach

But chronic indigestion will disappear when the liver, kidneys and bowels are set right by DR. A. W. CHASE'S KIDNEY AND LIVER PILLS. You are skeptical. For you have tried many medicines and still suffer from indigestion with all its annoying symptoms. Take a new line. Leave the stomach alone, for the source of trouble is in the intestines and healthy digestion can be restored by the use of Dr. A. W. Chase's Kidney and Liver Pills.

How is a Cold to be Cured

When it has reached the chest, is developing into bronchitis and threatens to become pneumonia. So gradually and stealthily does a cold pass from its simpler form of a cold in the head into inflammation of the bronchial tubes and then on to the lungs that many do not realize their condition until pneumonia is upon them. Ordinarily, of course, the cold is thrown off, but with the system run down and weakened there is every reason to expect serious trouble. Why should not every cold be taken seriously and Dr. Chase's Syrup of Licorice and Turpentine, it is more thorough and far-reaching in its effects on the system than any mere cough medicine can possibly be. It keeps the cough loose and open, it aids expectoration and allays the inflammation. It does more than this. It cures the cold as well as the cough. It is direct, positive and reliable. Dr. Ingram on England's Drink Bill

The Bishop of London made a racy and characteristic speech at the annual meeting of the London United Temperance Council recently. The Bishop referred to the great increase in the strength of the temperance cause which had come from what he called "the conversion of the doctors." Mr. Pearce Gould, Sir Thomas Barlow, and Sir Frederick Treves were, said the Bishop, good enough for him. "People may not notice us temperance fanatics," he said, "but they do begin to take notice when medical men of European reputation tell us that alcohol is actually harmful, and prevents us doing our work as well as we can, or living as long as we might do."

Teetotalers, said Dr. Ingram, used to be called "bad lives" by the insurance companies. Now they were coming into their own, and the insurance companies were running after them, and bribing them on 10 per cent. better terms. "I am not going to talk politics," the Bishop went on, "but I would draw your attention to the fact that all this excitement about the Budget is over a matter of £17,000,000 a year while we are spending £160,000,000 a year in drink. I say that is a monstrous fact when you have this tremendous outcry about the Government spending another £17,000,000 a year."

Dr. Ingram referred to the fact that the drink bill had been decreased by £5,000,000 in two years, and he hoped it would not be long before it was reduced by another £10,000,000. Curtailment of the huge expenditure on drink was the first thing to be done in curing the moral mischief of the country. All the authorities agreed that the hospitals might close half their wards, that half the lunatic asylums might be closed and that magistrates and judges would have their duties considerably curtailed. "I speak with a wonderful feeling of hope," said the Bishop. "I do not think we can exaggerate the help that has been given us by the conversion of the doctors. In the universities there is a great change for the better. In the Army, too, there is a much more hopeful state of affairs. If we hold together I believe we are on the winning side. As for legislation, I shall continue to back up all temperance legislation in the House of Lords—if there is to be a House of Lords in the future—(laughter)—as I have done in the past. (Cheers and laughter.) I am sure you do not want to turn the temperance men out of the House of Lords. (Laughter and cheers.) But I do not want you to neglect the spade work. Let us go on with our hands of hope and our rescue work among the women and children. If we go on in that spirit we shall yet see the kingdom of God established."

To Start a Tight Screw

Lots of folks have tried to remove a stubborn screw from a piece of wood, a screw that won't budge at all and have in the end given it up as a bad job. Well, if such a thing occurs again don't give it up, don't lose your temper or exert yourself, but try this recipe for removing the screw:

Heat a poker red hot, and then hold it against the screw head for a little while, wait a few minutes for the screw to cool down, when it will be found that the screw can be removed quite easily with the same screw driver that just previously would not perform the work. The explanation is quite simple.

The red hot poker heats the screw, the screw expands and makes the hole it is in a wee bit bigger. The screw then cools down and resumes its original size, leaving the whole in the wood a size too large—and there you are.

Good Health.

Within Reach of Most, But Only Enjoyed by Few.

BY I. C. MORRIS.

Of the many blessings that fall to our lot one of the greatest is that of health. Good health very often implies good spirits, and both are the natural heritages of the average son or daughter of Adam. But though this be the case, not more than forty per cent of city people really enjoy perfect health. For this there must surely be a cause; since all creation tends to perfection; and man's natural environment is adapted to his well-being.

What, then, is the cause of this debility, and why is it that so many people look languid and care-worn? Of different answers which may be given these queries, there is one that includes nearly all the others. It is the matter of food and how we use it. This may appear a simple matter, but it holds the key to the solution of many of our ailments. We wear a good deal said about the cooking of food, and sometimes the cook comes in for a lot of blame. But cooking, though a very important feature of the question of health, is not all. There is a good deal to be said about how one eats food, and what amount of time is given to the proper mastication of our meals. As a rule most people eat too rapidly; they bolt their food, and rise from the table too hurriedly. They expect their digestive organs to accomplish what their teeth should do. They tax, and over-tax, the stomach, and then when they feel languid, or unable for the duties of life, they calmly and resignedly look upon themselves as suffering the will of God. Truly, a very good spirit with which to look upon, but certainly a mistaken view.

To more fully understand this phase of health and debility we cannot do better than state it in the form of a dialogue as follows:

"Good morning, John."

"Good morning, sir."

"How are you this morning?"

"Not very well, sir, to tell you the truth."

"Indeed; that's rather a pity. You look a fairly healthy body. What might be the trouble?"

"Well, I hardly know what is the matter, but I am feeling far from No. 1."

"Have you consulted any of the doctors?"

"Oh, yes; I have tried medicine until I am tired of it, and I don't seem to get any benefit from them."

"And what ailment does the doctor say you are suffering from?"

"Well, he thinks it is dyspepsia, and the missus thinks so, too."

"Well, you can't have much better counselors than the doctor and your wife; no doubt they are right. But judging from your physique, you should certainly be a robust man. What are your habits of life? Perhaps you do not just take proper care of yourself."

"O, that is exactly what the missus tells me, but I only laugh at her."

"Well, I think the missus is right, and all the trouble it at your own door. For instance, I can see at a glance that you overtax your digestive organs."

"How do you know that?"

"I know by the way you walk at ease, and by the hurried manner in which you go to your meals. You don't give yourself time enough to straighten your shoulders, and harden your time to breathe properly."

"But what has straightening up the shoulders to do with health, or meals, or breathing, or with my complaints?"

"It has all to do with it. In it lies the cause of your indigestion."

"Will you explain to me your meaning?"

"I will, indeed. Here it is all in a nut shell. You got up this morning not feeling well, and because you felt unwell, you slept till the last possible minute. You then hurried off to work. You did not even stop to wash yourself. At 8 o'clock when the bell rang, you left your work post haste, and clambered up this hill with your head down on your chest. When you got to the top of the hill you were quite out of breath, and felt more like sitting down on the road than continuing to your home. On arriving at home you at once began your breakfast and hurriedly ate it. You then lit your pipe and hid away off to work again. You continue this day after day, with the result that you feel unwell. Now under these conditions it is not possible that you feel any other than unwell. What say you, John? Do you see the point?"

"Well, now, I do; and I think there is something in what you have said, and that after all the missus is right."

This little dialogue will suit to illustrate what we mean when we say that much of the sickness, and many of the ailments, from which we suffer are simply self imposed, and can be easily avoided.

Horse Distemper.

Prince Edward Farmer Solemnly Declares Nerviline is a Specific.

"After fifty years' experience in raising horses I can safely testify that no remedy gives such good results for an all-round stable liniment as Nerviline." Thus opens the very earnest letter of J. J. Evanston, who lives near Wellington, P.E. "I had a very valuable horse that took 'distemper' a month ago, and was afraid I was going to lose him. His throat swelled and hard lumps developed. His nostrils ran and he had a terrible cough. I tried different remedies, but was unable to relieve my horse of his pain and suffering till I started a bottle of Nerviline. I mixed a bottle of Nerviline and sweet oil and rubbed the mixture on the throat and chest three times a day and you would scarcely believe the way that horse picked up. Nerviline cured him. I also have used Nerviline for colic in horses and cows, and earnestly recommend it to every man that is raising stock."

For strains, sprains, swellings, colic, distemper, coughs and colds, no liniment will prove so efficacious in the stable as "Nerviline"—it's good for man or beast, for internal or external use. Wherever there is pain, Nerviline will cure it. Refuse substitutes. Large bottles 25c., five for $1.00, at all dealers, or the Catarrh-ozone Co'y, Kingston, Ont.

Big Land Deals.

What Ground Space Costs Per Foot in Old London.

At the moment when there is so much discussion concerning the taxation of land values the following facts and figures concerning some amazing land deal in London, Eng., may not prove uninteresting. Probably many of them are already aware that the most valuable land in the world is that which comprises the square mile of the City of London. Twenty and thirty pounds per square foot is quite a common price, and there are instances where over double that amount has been paid.

Six years ago, for instance, some offices were sold at the junction of Old Broad Street and Threadneedle Street, the price for the freehold being $1,050,000, or nearly $800 per square foot. This is $15,246,000 per acre.

Just to the east of the Mansion House, in Lombard Street, is an area of nearly half an acre which—before the present buildings were erected on the site two years ago—was valued at a million sterling. The purchasers actually raised $3,000,000 on a mortgage.

Twelve years ago the freehold ground rent of a block in Cornhill was sold at a price which worked out at $12,260,115 per acre. Further west values are lower, and in 1901, in Cheapside, 500 feet fetched $65,000, or over $130 per square foot. In the same month some freehold land near Lincoln was sold at 3 cents per yard—with a cottage thrown in.

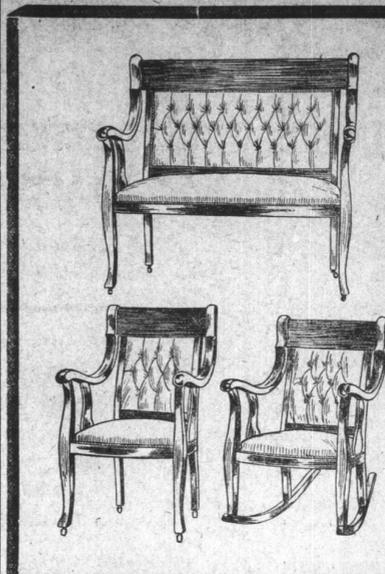

In March of this year the Corporation of London purchased a site which had long been occupied by a fruitstall in Ship Tavern Passage, Grace Church Street, at approximately $150 per square foot, while land in Lombard Street ranges anywhere from $185 to $250 the square foot.

One of the most notable sales in recent times was that of the splendid site in Cornhill on which the Commercial Union offices now stand. This contained an area of about 2,500 feet, and sold as vacant land for $225 a foot. About three years ago a site in Lombard Street, containing 1,600 feet, was let by auction at $15,000 per annum, which, calculated at twenty-five years' purchase, represents about $235 per foot for the freehold of the vacant site.

PREVENTION IS WORTH WHILE.

When you consider the risk to life, the expense, the anxiety, which is involved in an attack of appendicitis and a surgical operation, it is certainly worth while to avoid it by keeping the liver and bowels regular by using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. Doctors are now unanimously of the opinion that appendicitis comes from a neglect to keep the liver and bowels in healthful condition.

Meat Barons Are Indicted by Jury.

NEW YORK, Feb. 25.—The so-called Beef Trust in the United States, otherwise six great packing companies and twenty-one packers, several of them multi-millionaires socially and industrially prominent, were indicted by the Grand Jury in Hudson County, N. J., charged with conspiracy in limiting the supply of meat and poultry. The indictment is drawn under the laws of New Jersey, which provides for a thousand dollar fine or a maximum penalty of three years in the penitentiary upon conviction, or both. The offence is extradition which means that practically all the meat barons of this country must either successfully resist extradition or come to Jersey City for trial.

A second's reasoning will supply the answer. Beef and pork are dear and getting dearer all the time, and the cost is out of proportion with their food-value.

EAT MORE BREAD.

There is more nourishment in a shilling's worth of bread than a shilling's worth of beef or pork. But the problem is not done with yet. The shilling's worth of bread is not always the same value. Breadmade from contains more nourishment than any other, because it contains the greatest amount of gluten, the health-giving nutriment of wheat.
